
NEW CARNATION Belle Washburn

A Beautiful Brilliant Red

Winner of the Silver Medal at the last Exhibition of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., January 27th and 28th, First Prize at the Illinois State Fair at Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22nd and 23rd.

It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts and best of all it is a constant bloomer giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Eucharist family. It has a very spicy odor much greater than the average carnation. It comes in full flower by the first of December and then continues steadily the balance of the season.

The present sharp competition in business requires the grower to plant a variety that always produces high-grade flowers, never bursts the calyx, has strong, long stems, is steady and continuous bloomer, no cropper. The color is the most brilliant red of any carnation now in market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18,000 devoted to rooted cuttings.

We will have 100,000 strong, well-rooted cuttings guaranteed all first-class ready for delivery during December. The price of the rooted cuttings will be $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.—The Southern Nurserymen's Association will hold its annual meeting next year at Atlanta, Ga.

NILES, MICH.—G. O. Youngstrand, proprietor of the Chicago Nurseries, Golf, Ill., has moved his establishment to this city.

AURORA, ILL.—James A. Young, president of the Aurora Nursery Co., who sustained a severe injury when he fell on a sharp knife while trimming a tree, is recovering.

MCKINNEY, TEX.—The McKinney Nursery Co. reports trade in all branches of its business better than any previous year. They are sold out of a number of varieties of trees.

BULLETIN No. 21 of the Iowa Experiment Station at Ames is entitled "Hardiness in the Apple as Correlated with Structure and Composition," by S. A. Beach and F. W. Allen, Jr.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—T. A. Monroe, manager of the nursery at the Panama-Pacific exposition, will have charge of the sale of the stock which will be disposed of after the closing.

WOOSTER, O.—The results of the orchard fertilization on the agricultural experiment station test farm are quite marked; the sod-mulched-fertilized rows are by far the best, the sod-fertilized rows next and the cultivated-fertilized rows third.

TOPEKA, KAN.—That Kansas horticulturists have harvested approximately four million bushels of apples this year is indicated in the reports received by O. F. Whitney, secretary of the Kansas State Horticultural Society.

LINCOLN, NEB.—Farmers and fruit growers of Nebraska will make a fight to prevent what they consider a state-wide disaster to the orchard and vegetable industries of this section of the country. They will oppose the proposed order sought by the Burlington and Union Pacific railroads to prevent fruit, vegetables and produce from being sold or distributed direct to the consumer from cars.

New Jersey Plants.

Specimens recently sent us by a correspondent from the New Jersey coast are Hudsonia tomentosa, which should have small yellow flowers in early spring and is more common on the seacoast. The other species, H. ericoides, is said to be much the best of the two unless one wants that glaucous appearance of the foliage, as the flowers seem to be more numerous if not brighter. It is unfortunate H. ericoides can not be handled more easily, as it is one of the brightest native plants, the flowers having the bright golden color of the genistas.

The Cedar of Lebanon.

The Cedar of Lebanon (Cedrus Libani) in the arboretum shows the importance of careful selection of the seeds from which to raise trees for any particular climate. One of the fir trees of Asia Minor, Abies cilicica, has been growing for many years in New England, where it has proved to be one of the best of all conifers of its class to cultivate here as an ornamental tree. With this fir the Cedar of Lebanon grows in Asia Minor on the Anti-Taurus, far north of the Lebanon Range in Palestine and in a much colder climate. As the Palestine cedar is not hardy here in New England, the arboretum had seeds of this tree collected on the Anti-Taurus with the view of attempting to introduce a hardy race of cedars into New England. The seeds were sown here in the spring of 1902 and a large number of plants were raised. They all proved perfectly hardy, not one having suffered from drought or cold. Some, however, have been lost in attempts at transplanting, for no other tree here has proved so difficult to move. The average height of all these young cedars in the arboretum is now about 13 feet. The tallest is 21 feet high and there is another specimen 20 feet high. It is doubtful if any other conifer can be grown in New England from seed to the height of 21 feet in 13 years.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

THANKSGIVING SALES SATISFACTORY.

Business for Thanksgiving was good and the local trade are well satisfied, and hopeful that it is a forerunner for the rest of the season. The local market conditions were favorable, with prices good and stock plentiful. Roses of all kinds brought from $3 to $15 per 100, American Beauties being priced at from $10 to $35. Orchids were scarce and were easily disposed of at $1 each. Bouvardias were extra fine and sweet peas of good quality were also to be had.

NOTES.

The Noyes-Ewing wedding, a brilliant social event in the official life of the capital, called for elaborate floral decorations, both at the house and the church. George C. Shaffer arranged the home decoration, the walls being decorated with smilax, while the mantels were banked with Adiantum Farleyense with large bunches of American Beauties. Large baskets of begonias, arranged with Adiantum Farleyense covered the tops of the book cases. At one end of the reception room where the bridal couple received, was a large bank of Cibotium ferns, with large bunches of American Beauties and rubrum lilies. The table decoration consisted of garlands of lily of the valley, sweet peas and small roses. At the church the decorations, arranged by Gude Bros. Co., were also elaborate. The walls to the ceiling were sprayed with southern smilax as were the gallery railing and supporting pillars. The family pews were marked by tall standards wound with smilax and rose garlands. The green around the gallery face was studded with white roses arranged in sprays, the ends being twined in a garland below. Cibotium ferns were also used in profusion.

E. Golerman, one of the Gude Bros. Co.'s salesmen, is recovering from an operation at the Sibley hospital.

Sam Mastin, salesman and decorator for the Dupont Floral Co., has resigned his position.

Next annual convention will be held September, 1916.

THE third national conference on Marketing and Farm Credits is in progress at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, this week, November 29-December 2, with an elaborate programme, the speakers including Frank L. McVey, Hon. Sir Horace Plunkett, Millard R. Myers and Charles J. Brand.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, November 30.—Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 40c to 45 cents per carton; lettuce, cases 10 cents; radishes, 75 cents to $1.00 per 100 bunches; asparagus, 50 cents per dozen bunches; celery, 10 to 20 cents per bunch; tomatoes, four baskets, $1.25 to $1.50; cucumbers, dozen, $1.25.

New York, November 30.—Celery, per bunch of 12 stalks, 10 to 40 cents; cucumbers, 85 cents to $1.00 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, $1.00 to $2.00 per 10-pound basket; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to $1.00.

Nitrate of Soda Under Glass.

Nitrate of soda continues to be an unknown agent to many growers, a disappointment to others, and a real benefit to a few. The reasons for these conditions are easily found, resting on the one ground that too many are not thoroughly posted on fertilization principles. In a general way it may be said that plant-growth depends upon the formation of nitrates in the soil, and that under ordinary circumstances this proceeds very slowly. This is a wise provision of nature, as an excessive supply of available nitrogen would unbalance plant growth and much of such nitrogen would be lost by drainage. We can learn from nature in regard to the use of nitrate of soda. We must confine ourselves to small applications; we must repeat at regular intervals; we cannot expect permanent results from one application. This is very similar to the use of liquid manure. Experts can tell us that such use depends upon a weak mixture used frequently and regularly and not by one excessive dose.

Under glass we have not the same conditions as out-of-doors, hence, we must often modify methods. For this reason, we have for years experimented by spraying nitrate solution directly upon our greenhouse crops, diluting such solutions to a safe point. For a beginner, it may be said that one ounce per gallon of water is safe on most any foliage, and that this used twice a week will materially assist such crops as are in need of nitrogen. We have used this method on young lettuce, radishes, beets, spinach, celery plants, etc., under glass, and also on carnations and chrysanthemums for cut flowers. The idea is to so uniformly distribute the application, and so mild the application, that the plant really is not excited, but helped gradually into solid growth. We have used an ordinary knapsack sprayer and Bordeaux nozzle with excellent results.

Hand in hand must go other principles; namely, an adequate supply of potash and phosphates in the soil. It is generally best to mix these into the soil before planting so they are more permanent; however, in the absence of a good supply top dressing can be made.

MARKETMAN.

SUPPLY LIMITED WITH GOOD DEMAND.

Stock shortened up somewhat during the past week, and with the increased demand there was some difficulty in filling all orders. The chrysanthemums were rushed to the market early and before Thanksgiving day there was considerable shortage in this line. Roses are still scarce, but the quality is good and they bring high prices. Carnations are short in supply and lily of the valley and lilies are both good sellers. Funeral work has been very good, and the trade generally seemed to enjoy a prosperous Thanksgiving business.

NOTES.

Samuel Murray had the decorations for the E. C. Smith ball which was held at the Muehlebach hotel. The floral arrangement was very pretty, over 1,200 chrysanthemums in addition to other flowers being used. He has some excellent plants in his window which attract much attention, and Begonia Lorraine sales for Thanksgiving were heavy.

W. L. Rock Flower Co. are receiving a generous supply of good stock from its greenhouses but not enough to supply the demand. They have some fine carnations and roses, but these are not plentiful. A good wedding decoration last week called for a quantity of choice stock.

T. J. Noll & Co. report more business than stock. They had a very heavy supply for Thanksgiving day but cleaned up to the last flower. The shipping trade has been good and supplies are moving fast.

Henry Kusk & Co. report exceptionally good trade with supplies moving fast. Their supply of chrysanthemums, roses and carnations is short of the demand, but the quality is excellent.

R. S. Brown & Son say trade is A-1, with Thanksgiving business very good. They have closed out their chrysanthemums and are getting everything in readiness for the spring trade.

Miss J. E. Murray reports the Thanksgiving trade was very good at her establishment, resulting in a sell out. Funeral work has also been good.

A. F. Barbee reports the Thanksgiving trade the best he ever had. He had a good supply of chrysanthemums, which were readily disposed of.

Ed. Ellsworth, of the Rosery, had a heavy call for pot plants for Thanksgiving day. He had some fine cyclamens and poinsettias and sold completely out.

Arthur Newell reports stock as being good, but not enough of it. Thanksgiving business was better this year than in 1914.

Visitors: Sam Seligman ("Sprinkle-proof"), New York; John D. Arentshorst, representing Baartman & Koning, Sassenheim, Holland; P. M. Koontz, Springfield, O.; G. T. Freeman, Fall River, Mass.; E. V. Myers, St. Joseph, Mo. E. J. B.

Providence, R. I.

THANKSGIVING TRADE BEST IN YEARS.

The 1915 Thanksgiving trade was one of the best experienced here in years, and from all reports this year's sales were 25 per cent better than a year ago. Chrysanthemums were the best seller and the demand was very heavy as they were of excellent quality, and sold almost on sight. Pompons also had a good call and lily of the valley also sold well. Roses, carnations and violets were not very popular. There was also an ample supply of other stock in variety offering a wide choice.

NOTES.

J. H. Cushing, of Quidnick, had some very good chrysanthemums this year and cleaned out everything. His carnations are also good.

Albert Holcher is still cutting very good Mrs. Jones chrysanthemums, both pink and white. He also has some very good Chadwicks.

The Thanksgiving windows showed nothing out of the ordinary but were all well-stocked with a variety of flowers.

Most of the growers cleaned up on chrysanthemums and are getting the houses ready for sweet peas.

Olney Williams has about cleaned out his chrysanthemums, but is still cutting some pompons. H. A. T.

The Christmas Tree.

A modest tenant of the northland wood, Undecked with flowers, unmarked by bud or bloom,
Through all the joyous summertime it stood,
A simple pattern from Dame Nature's loom.

Around it blossomed pink and purple things,
Gny figures in a wild embroidery,
Sweet honey-wells attracting whirring wings
That never paused to rest on modest tree.

Then came the chilling snows of winter-time,
The flowers that bloomed so gayly drooped and died.
The birds departed to a warmer clime,
'Mid other gaudes gorgeous to abide.

But still the tree preserved its emerald,
More faithful than the transitory bloom,
And that which once no whirring bird enthralled
Was now the fairest object in the gloom.

Then came regard for all its faithfulness;
The tree that had no golden fruit or flower,
Transplanted with the children's soft enress,
Became the center of our gayest hour.

The Christmas Tree within a single night
Bore fruit more bountiful than all the rest,
With shining candles brilliantly alight
And silver stars a-glitter on its breast.

No prond young stalk such blossoms ever bore
As these that flowered on its branches now;
No plint or-hush such glories ever wore
As these appearing on each spreading bough.

The modest tree, unnoticed and unseem,
Became the dearest treasure of the earth
To scatter joy from ev'ry sprig of green
And wake the soul to gladness and to mirth

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOLIDAY TRADE.

Christmas Preparations.

One of the biggest trade battles of the year is to be fought out in a few weeks. For those who have not, ere this, made some preparation, there is an immense amount of work to be done, and it behooves them to go at it at once with system and dispatch. For the systematic business man this column will contain nothing new; he has but to reach into the safe and get his plan of campaign, laid out last year as soon as the results of the Christmas trade was determined. All the choice and scarce stock has been ordered long ago. He goes over the resume or history of last year's holiday business made at the time when it was fresh in his mind; he has noted the things that sold well and what was most in demand. An inventory of the stock left over is interesting; all the details of delivery, the extra help, the additional wagons or cars, the buying, the plants and cut flowers, where the stock came from, the greens, holly wreaths and mistletoe; in fact, all the details are there in black and white and are of inestimable help for the coming event.

In the average retail store trade, there are certain features that stand out and are essential to the business. First, there is the demand for gifts, divided between plants and cut flowers, most of which are purchased and sent as gifts. Then the greens and wreaths for house and church decoration, and last the wreaths for the cemetery. Much of the preparatory work, particularly that of the wreaths, can be done in the summer or spare time during the early fall. The Japanese red chenille has largely taken the place of the immortelle, as it is very lasting and easy of manipulation, requiring no stemming; in all kinds of badge or emblem work the design is much better carried out and in one third the time of the stemmed flowers. Wreaths of chenille in imitation of the wrapped red immortelle can be made at any time to be laid away and decorated with holly or other trimming and ribboned when placed on sale.

For the cemetery, the magnolia wreath has the galax on the run; they can be made at any time and are good until sold, while the galax must be made at the last. Boxwood wreaths are good for both house and cemetery and they will keep made up quite a while if properly cared for. Some tie the material on a wire form while others wire the sprays with stout wire or on tooth picks and use a mossed wire frame. The tied wreath is best for the house, while the heavier form is the choice for the cemetery.

While quite a number of the progressive growers make up baskets of foliage and flowering plants, also poinsettias in pans, which are ready for sale on delivery, the up-to-date retailer will be able to give a finish that adds considerably to their appearance.

Pans of poinsettias are best when bordered with maidenhair ferns, yet very few growers use the adiantum, seeming to prefer asparagus or other sorts of ferns. Making up plant baskets in the store in the last day or two, together with all the work incident to the rush time, is very laborious and trying; it is best done the week before in the greenhouse of one of the growers from whom much of the stock is bought. When properly filled, they will improve, look better and last longer on delivery. It is best to run a distinctive line of baskets with not much variety, different in form or color from that likely to be seen elsewhere and all should have zinc linings. No plant or cut flower basket is complete without this lining. While the fancy plant baskets show the skill of the house, and add tone and variety to the stock, there is nothing so profitable as the well grown foliage plants, such as bright colored dracanas, pandanus, crotons, rubbers, palms and the best of the varieties of the Boston fern. All these ready for sale plants are good stock at Christmas and show a handsome profit. In addition are the blooming plants, azaleas, cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias, primulas and heather, all of which are good sellers. In the berried section the English hollies, ardisias, skimmias, Jerusalem cherries and peppers, complete a varied stock, that if well displayed, should bring fame and profit to the house.

Holiday greens are always in demand and form an important part of the Christmas business. Boxwood wreaths for house decoration and the cemetery are leaders, their glossy, green foliage, together with the many variations in added touches of color in holly berries, statice, ruscus, etc., make them doubly attractive. Well made holly wreaths are always in demand. Red ruscus and solid wreaths are made of the Japanese red chenille, with trimmings of holly and ribbon bows are also very showy and saleable. The miniature red chenille wreaths, called automobile wreaths, which jumped into instant favor last year, are very profitable, as is the small basket of Christmas greens and berries. A red, green or gilt tumbler or similar basket, filled with a few ends of bright evergreens, some holly, red ruscus and a little statice with a red bow, brings readily from $1.00 to $1.50.

Loose holly is one of the essentials. It should be kept in a cool place in the closed cases with but one open at a time. It is a great time saver, if on arrival, a number of the cases are made into bundles to sell from 50 cents to $1.00 and then carefully re-packed. Orders are much more quickly gotten together in the rush time with these prepared quantities. Mistletoe is difficult to handle; all choice pieces should be boxed separately when received, and in this way it does not dry up and is easily handled.

Wreaths.

With the cheaper grades of Christmas wreaths it is much better to purchase them of the dealers than to attempt to manufacture them, for they are made where the material is plenty and by cheap labor that learn to handle them very rapidly, but the better wreaths the dealer can arrange himself and make a finer article and also introduce features that are not found elsewhere. A few sprays of holly or bunches of winterberries and red immortelles will often brighten up a green wreath and make it attractive. The wreaths of pine, with the cones worked into them, are particularly pleasing and always attract attention when shown. A good supply of holly-ribbon is a necessity at this season, and the wreaths displayed should have a nice bow of this tied on them to show the customer how these Christmas offerings are to be used. These small details are all of great assistance to the sale at this time and are all carefully attended to by up-to-date dealers.

Miniature Wreath.

The miniature Christmas, or automobile wreath as they are called by some, they being used for the purpose of decorating the interior of limousines, made quite a hit last year, meeting with instant favor wherever offered for sale. They are best made with Japanese red chenille wrapped tightly around a small wire ring, 6 inches in diameter, of about No. 10 wire. At the bottom is placed a small cluster or sprig of holly or a spray or two of red ruscus and statice tied with a narrow red ribbon. A slender, red cord, with tassels by which to suspend it, adds a finishing touch. This little novelty sells on sight at a very good profit. The illustrations show several variations of this miniature wreath.

Plant Baskets.

The presentation to the prospective buyer of plants in baskets or boxes has become a prominent feature of the trade at both Christmas and Easter and a great many of these are arranged and sold by the large stores. Occasionally the report is made that the call for these is not so large as formerly, but invariably this is caused by the dealer not accurately feeling the demands of his trade. It is not every store that will have a trade that purchases the high cost assortments, but baskets of all sizes and shapes can be obtained and small boxes are easily and cheaply made, and these covered with bark are nicely adapted to this work and are really inexpensive. The baskets of willow can be purchased at a moderate price, and these can be filled with cheaper plants for those that do not want to make expensive presents. With a trade that ordinarily does not pay more than two or three dollars for a plant, a ten or fifteen-dollar basket is altogether too expensive to offer them at first. This trade must be educated to these nice gifts by first inducing them to buy some at not so high a figure. They will greatly admire these more costly arrangements, but will have to be shown that plants in this form are satisfactory, and will first buy something cheaper. Nice boxes and baskets can be put up at the same prices that they have been in the custom of paying, and when they prove satisfactory larger and more expensive offerings will be purchased.

Many growers and dealers use their specimen plants for their boxes and baskets, which makes them expensive, but this is unnecessary. There are always in every grower's collection many plants that are one-sided in their growth, lose many of their leaves, or in some other way are far from being plants that can be called specimens and would not find sale, and these can be put in the baskets with the best side out or with a few small ferns to cover up the blemishes and sold. By so doing what would in all probability be thrown away, or at any rate be a loss, can be made to turn the balance in the right way. The plants in these arrangements are always set very close and this helps to cover up any deficiency that the plant has.

Baskets are now offered by the manufacturers with tins to conform to the baskets, and in these the plants can be set, and with proper care they will make a splendid ornament for the home that will last a long time. The arrangement of the plants, especially in regard to the colors, should be carefully studied. The reds will, of course, be the most in demand. Poinsettias make a nice basket offering in themselves, but with the exception of those who have wealthy customers the basket or box should not be made too expensive, for these plants do not last any great length of time. A beautiful effect in red can be obtained by filling the basket with decorative plants and placing among them nicely berried sprays of winterberries. In the arrangements containing the different plants bearing pink flowers, it is necessary to use judgment in the selection of colors or they may clash. The cerise neither harmonizes nor contrasts well with any of the bright colors, white only being permissible with this shade. The plants with variegated foliage should also be used with care. It is not well to use too many in one basket, but to have plenty of green decorative plants to set them off.

Many beautiful effects may be produced by the proper assembling of the Christmas plants in these offerings to the trade. While these are made up in most cases of the more expensive plants and intended for the wealthier class of people, yet by the application of good judgment very beautiful arrangements can be put up with the cheaper plants.

Festooning.

It always pays to have festooning artistically hung in the store or office. It is part of the Christmas trade, but the customer will never know that the dealer has it unless it is shown in the best possible shape. To leave in the original coils does not attract the purchaser, so it is better to festoon the salesroom and show the public how these ropes of foliage can be made attractive. The festooning of laurel is by far the best, and does not have the cheap look that the festoon of bouquet green has, and this year the latter being so scarce is at nearly the same price as the laurel. Large halls and churches are invariably hung with the laurel festooning, but if these are lofty and the festoons do not come down to the level of the eye coarser greens can be used. Arbor-vita for such locations makes very suitable festooning.

Prepared Flowers.

Baskets of dried and prepared flowers make very decorative features for the holidays. The prepared branches of beech and the highly colored fern fronds make up beautifully. The red ruscus is also very bright and showy and just the right color for Christmas. The sprays of dried static work in nicely with the highly colored foliage, as do the spikes of eulalia or pampas grass. All these prepared flowers and leaves arrange beautifully in handle baskets and if adorned with bright ribbons that are in harmony with the colors used, make fine offerings for the Christmas trade and they will be ornamental throughout the winter.

Miniature Christmas Trees.

The miniature spruce tree for table decoration at the holidays is becoming more popular every year. Large numbers are sold mostly for home decoration, some favoring these small trees for their gift tables in preference to the larger size. They should be perfect in shape, but not too compact, so that there is room for decorative articles on the ends of the limbs. They should be planted in green cedar tubs of the proper size. Much of the root can be removed, as they are soon relegated to the rubbish heap after the holidays. They can be decorated with small wired bunches of red immortelles, attached to the ends of the limbs; these with a red or holly ribbon around the tub give the tree a very Christmasy appearance and is well worth while, as many a tree that is priced $2 will bring $4 to $5 with this ornamentation.

Cemetery Preparations for Christmas.

The holiday business in connection with the cemetery greenhouses is growing rapidly from year to year. A few years ago only the wealthy lot owners made a practice of placing a wreath on their lots at Christmas, but now it is the custom for all classes to place a wreath or a bunch of holly or flowers on their lots for this occasion, so that it is a busy period for those who have these details to attend to.

Beginning with the first real cold weather, about the middle of November, the orders for covering the graves are carried out. This covering means placing short branches of evergreen or spruce over the grave to form a green mound. The evergreen is laid on, starting from one end of the grave, then working back from the other end, at the same time fitting in the sides; then some short pieces are taken and worked throughout the whole with the object of making a mound with a flat top the size of the grave. The shears are then used to trim off the long boughs that stick out more than they should, and these clippings are worked into the other to make a graceful appearance. When the work is carefully done it adds greatly to the appearance of the lot, doing away with the bare look at this season of the year, as well as being very satisfying to the lot owners and it is surprising the extent to which the custom has grown.

Boxwood wreaths are called for more than any others and are in demand throughout the winter months. A spray of red ruscus is worked in on one side of the wreath for Christmas, but at other times the plain wreath of boxwood is most popular. These boxwood wreaths are sold at prices of $1 up, according to their size, and while a wreath for $1.50 and $2 is called for mostly, there is a good demand for the more expensive ones. Wreaths made of brown magnolia leaves and red ruscus are also good sellers. The smallest wreaths of this character are sold for $2, and when finished up with boxwood, along with the magnolia leaves and red ruscus, much higher prices are obtained for them.

Large quantities of holly are now used at the cemeteries. It is chiefly made up into wreaths that sell for 50 cents and $1 each, the demand for anything cheaper than this being satisfied by selling the loose holly, or tied up bunches, which can be sold for 25 or 35 cents.

Large numbers of bronze galax wreaths of medium price are sold, but since the boxwood wreath has been used so extensively, the galax wreaths are not being called for as much as formerly. There is also a big call for bunches of red ruscus to place at the head of the evergreen graves, and it is the same with this as all other parts of the business; there are those who go to the extreme and instead of beautifying their lots make them look like a grotesque mass.

Those connected with a cemetery think there is not any place like a cemetery, where one meets so many different kinds of people, everyone with an idea of their own, one wanting this and another that, without any regard for the rules of the place or the rights of others, and the only way to keep harmony and make the thing go is to have a good supply of wreaths as near as possible to suit the customers' desires, yet conforming to the rules and not monstrosities.

VAN WERT, O.—Fire originating in the business office, which with the packing room and work shed, was practically destroyed, swept the east section of Scharff Bros.' greenhouses, November 30, entailing a loss of about $2,000. The damaged houses were immediately inclosed with canvas and business continued under usual conditions. The damage to growing stock was small and the firm is prepared to meet all demands for the Christmas season.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Winter Care.

With stronger fire-heat, as will naturally be required from this time forward with the progress of the winter season, it becomes the more necessary to watch over the watering and syringing, keeping in view the fact that there are dry corners in almost every greenhouse, and that these particular spots may require attention every day. These local troubles, so to speak, are particularly noticeable in houses that are heated with steam, the intense heat from the steampipes drying out the plants very rapidly in those places where the pipes happen to be placed near to the benches, or where a main is carried along under the bench. This makes an observation tour in the morning a necessary portion of the day's duties, for the welfare of the plants demands that they receive water at any time they need it, rather than to allow any of them to remain dry until the usual time for watering or syringing, a time that is often set at about ten o'clock in the morning where palms are grown. Spraying the walks and beneath the benches is also a good practice to follow in the palm houses at least once a day, whenever it is necessary to use strong fire heat, this measure doing much toward keeping a growing atmosphere in the houses.

As the sun gets further south, less ventilation is required, none being needed before the temperature reaches 80 degrees on a sunny day, and it should be taken off again before the houses become chilly, the time for closing naturally depending upon the outdoor temperature to a great extent, but at this season being usually about 3 o'clock. Little or no shading is needed now, there seldom being any danger of the foliage suffering from the sun between November 1 and February 1, but after the latter date a light shade may be required, especially in those houses in which a high grade of glass has not been used for glazing, and it may be added that the majority of greenhouses belong in the latter class, from the fact that second quality glass is much the most common in greenhouse glazing.

It is not yet too late to continue re-potting among young stock that is much pot-bound, though root action is less rapid as the days grow shorter, and stock that is intended for sale before spring would better remain in the old pots, it being a well known fact that pot-bound plants will endure more hardship and give better service to the customer than those that have recently been given a shift. Seedlings should be potted off as soon as they are in a fit condition for that operation, regardless of the season, for these tender young plants will establish themselves more readily when handled before the roots get too long, the latter being very likely to get bruised or broken in the effort to confine them in a small pot.

Shapely young kentias in 2½-inch to 3-inch pots are always useful stock to the retail florist, he finding a place for such plants in the center of ferneries, where they divide the honors with the long-time favorite Cocos Weddelliana. And in this connection it is well to remember that gem of the phoenix tribe, P. Roebelinii, for this palm shows character in such small plants that they, too, are being used in considerable numbers for ferneries, and with very good effect. But to have these same shapely small plants, one must look to it that they have space enough and light enough to keep them in form, and also that they be kept free from insects, for a table fernery is exposed to close examination on the part of the purchaser, and an imperfect center plant is sure to attract attention.

When plants are given much fire heat, as in the case of palms at this season, the best conditions are provided for the propagation of noxious insects, such as those of the various scale groups, to say nothing of thrips and red spiders, and it is no easy fight to get rid of them. Spraying and dipping with various soap solutions are the most common methods used to combat the scale insects, though frequently causing more or less injury to the plants, particularly when the soap solution is permitted to drain down into the heart of the plant. Thrips is a tough customer, and requires nicotine solution to "get him," while red spiders submit to thorough syringing with pure water, but the best time to perform these operations is before the insects have gained a firm foothold on the plants, thus avoiding the damaged foliage that detracts so much from the beauty and value of the stock.

Special fertilizers are seldom needed in order to keep the palm stock in condition, the most reliable being a reasonable quantity of good stable manure in the compost, but to those given to using liquid manure on plants in general, and many admirable growers are found in this class, it may be said that liquid manure is not needed in the palm house during the winter, too much nitrogen producing soft foliage and brittle stems, and thus causing much dissatisfaction to the decorator who may use the stock in question.

WREATH OF PINE BRANCHES AND CONES.

Chrysanthemum Show in London.

The National Chrysanthemum Society of England held its thirty-second annual show of autumn blooms November 11-12 in Royal Horticultural hall, Westminster, London, and notwithstanding the war, it was an exhibition of undoubted excellence. Perhaps not so large as the previous displays held at the Crystal Palace, it was certainly more compact, and from a spectacular point of view it was very effective. The schedule contained 37 classes, and most of these were well filled and excited keen competition—more especially in the open classes. For the best miscellaneous exhibit in the show, a large gold medal was awarded to Philip Ladds & Sons, Swanley, Kent, this being the first time this well-known market-growing firm has made such a floral victory over such renowned competitors as Norman Davis, W. Wells and H. J. Jones. The Holmes' memorial cup for 36 Japanese blooms, distinct, was won by T. Stevenson, gardener to Mr. Mocatta, Adlestone, Surrey. The same exhibitor carried off the president's prize of a five-guinea cup for 24 Japanese blooms. He was also successful as the first prize-winner in most of the open Japanese classes, and there was no question as to the excellency of the blooms put up by him. For the Holmes' memorial challenge cup for 24 incurved blooms, distinct, E. Dove, gardener to H. Bennett, Bickley, Kent, was the successful competitor. In the table decoration class, Mrs. A. Robinson, Carshalton, took the prize rose bowl offered by the ex-president, Chas. E. Shea. The winning confection was a mixture of gold and bronze, tastefully set up. Among the affiliated societies, the trophy of a big shield offered, was won by the Finchley Horticultural Society, North London, a testimony to the fact that London, with all its buildings, fogs and smoke, is still capable of producing fine blooms in its much maligned atmosphere.

Of late years it is worthy of note that single-flowered varieties of chrysanthemums are becoming more conspicuous at all exhibitions throughout the country, and this year there were some very fine specimens on view. In Norman Davis' gold medal group, the following were specially noteworthy: Democrat, a fine golden bronze, which, although not so large as some of the others, was highly attractive; James Beats, a fine rose terra cotta; Gloriosus, a good bright yellow counterpart to the well known white Mensa; Crim-son Velvet is most appropriately named on account of its bright, deep crimson blooms, with a conspicuous yellow center, and Monica Mitchell, somewhat similar, but not quite so brilliant in color. In Wells & Company's group, which also received a gold medal, were Max, a fine terra cotta orange; Miss W. Hemus, deep velvety crimson, and Miss Nellie Wigg, a new variety, having beautiful soft heliotrope-pink ray florets, shading to white at the base round the yellow disc. In Philip Ladds' group the most notable singles were Bronze Beauty, a fine vivid reddish-brown; Ethel Mortimer, an attractive yellow, and Sand-down Radiance, a wonderfully fine deep and bright crimson, perhaps the very best of its kind with blooms over six inches across. H. J. Jones, Lewisham, obtained a small gold medal for his group, which had already been standing four days from a previous show of the Royal Horticultural Society, and contained Jessica, a fine large starry bronze flushed with red; Buttercup, rich yellow; and T. Barnes, a deep crimson, with a conspicuous white ring encircling the disc.

Cragg, Harrison & Cragg, of Heston, Middlesex, displayed Molly Godfrey, a fine rich purple pink, and Aphrodite, an anemone-flowered variety, with rich heliotrope hlooms. Godfrey & Son, Exmouth, Devon, had a choice group consisting of all single varieties, considered to be novelties. Among these the most conspicuous was Princess Mary, a really good rich pink. Many of the others appeared to be similar to those already mentioned. The Misses Price & Fyfe, Birch Grove, Sussex, put up a nice group as lady gardeners, the most attractive varieties being Excelsior, rich orange terra cotta, and L. Lawrence, crimson, with a yellow center.

Among the huge mop-headed Japanese varieties there was the usual excellence and purity of coloring in the whites, yellows, bronzes and pinks, the same being shown by many exhibitors. Among the finest whites were Wm. Turner, Mrs. Gilbert Drabble and Queen Mary, varieties that one came across time after time as standing out pre-eminently for their size and purity of color. Perhaps the most noteworthy yellows were Mrs. R. C. Pulling, Mrs. G. L. Wiggs, Miss A. E. Roope, Wm. Rigby, Frank Ladds, Mrs. Iggulden and F. S. Vallis. One of the features of the show, with a somewhat pathetic interest, was a new Japanese variety named Edith Cavell, after the English nurse who was recently shot in Belgium. This is a fine bright rose terra cotta, with a bright golden reverse, and was staged by Wells & Co., Merstham, Surrey. It is a very attractive form, and one likely to stay as a good acquisition, quite apart from the memories it recalls.

W.

THE ROSE.

Preparing to Market the Christmas Crop.

Only a few days more to get things in good shape for the Christmas business, and "here's hoping" that it will be banner holiday business for all. The cut for the holidays should now be showing color strongly, and if there is going to be heavy cutting, there will be quite a lot of good stock hanging over the walks. These flowers should be tied back, tying a few inches below the buds; this will make slow cutting perhaps, but at the same time the stems will be straight—and no buds will be snapped off. If they are tied lower down at this time the plants will be bunched too much, which will smother out a lot of good foliage, and bring on a dose of black spot and spider, as the water won't get at the foliage properly.

Speaking of spider, one should syringe with a great deal of force, now that the heavy firing has commenced, getting well under the foliage, and where the syringing is done or finished up as late as 11 a. m., even on a bright day, the plants should be gone over and topped at the base with a short piece of hose to remove the surplus moisture. It is absolutely necessary to have the foliage dry before dark at this season. Increasing the amount of air, and turning on an extra coil or two, will aid greatly in drying off the foliage, when it clouds up right after syringing. Great care should be exercised in watering at this time; do not let the beds become dry, especially the raised benches. Very often the heating coils are under the benches, and sometimes the soil becomes bone dry at the bottom, when the soil at the top is too wet. Nothing but a good soaking will remedy this condition. Water until the water runs through the cracks at the bottom. The plants in the solid borders, if in vigorous growth, will require copious watering at least twice a week when the weather is fair, providing there is good drainage, and the surface of the soil in the solid borders should never get anywhere near the dry point when there is a crop of blooms coming in. If too dry, the buds will lack color, substance and size, and the petals will come frilled. Very often the water is withheld where the foliage becomes streaked. We have often noticed the same condition where dryness was the cause. This is often the case when grafted stock is used. As for the watering, it will be rather hard to over-water, where there is good drainage and vigorous growing plants to handle. Do not water with strong liquid manure when the buds are showing color; substitute with a sprinkling of soot over the beds, well watered in, but do not use the soot when there are flowers being cut in any quantity daily, unless used in liquid form or unless the soot is handled very carefully. The soot will settle on the blooms and foliage. Where the buds are just showing color, it will do no harm, as soot will often add color to both flowers and foliage, and has a slightly stimulating effect on the plants.

One should look after the supplies in the shipping department, having a supply of tasty cardboard boxes of various sizes made up and lined with wax paper and arranged near at hand; also labels, paste and brush, box of assorted nails, twine in several sizes, etc., and examine the wooden shipping boxes to see that they are well roped and the corners firmly fastened, and prepare to pack safely against zero weather by using plenty of newspapers and sheet cotton. Have sufficient jars to hold the cut without crowding, and do not guess at the amount of roses you may cut, but go over each bed and do a little careful counting and averaging, so as to be able to let the commission man have something definite to go by. We admit this is quite a problem, but if the grower goes about it carefully his figures will be approximately correct. This will also enable the grower to avoid disappointing his retail customers, as is sometimes done, where there has been no inventory of the cut attempted.

Last, but not least by any means, do not hold back the stock too long—cut out any semblance of the "pickling stunt"; give the store man and your customers good, fresh stock, always. If your cut will be light, well and good, let it go at that; you will have them on a good market a few weeks later perhaps, so let it go in good condition at any cost. This is "good business." and it won't lose you a single good customer. Remember! It is far better to go out and buy good stock to fill orders than to "put across the embalmed variety." E.

CHRISTMAS BASKET BY GEO. M. STUMPP, NEW YORK.

Cypripedium, Primroses and Willows.

THE CARNATION.

Midwinter Requirements.

The carnation plants are now at their best; the clear, cool weather of the past month has given strength to the plants and added substance to the flowers, so that we now have a fine crop of high grade flowers with long, stiff stems, and it now behooves the grower to attend closely to the requirements of the plants and watch carefully the changing conditions of the weather and temperature, being especially particular as regards the watering of the beds. Now that the conditions make it necessary to furnish steam heat regularly, the plants must not be subjected to very dry conditions at their roots; neither must an overabundance of water be given. To allow the plants to dry out severely at the roots quickly causes the flowers to lose size and substance in addition to giving the red spider a foothold. Overwatering on the other hand results in weak stems and flowers of poor quality, consequently, it should be borne in mind that careful attention to the watering of the plants is one of the principal parts of the culture of carnations.

There are two very important features connected with the carnation grower's business that confront him for the next two months—one is the crop of flowers for Christmas, and the other is preparing the propagating house and starting in on the propagation of the cuttings for next season's stock. Referring to the Christmas crop, the foundation of this crop must have been laid months ago, when the work of building up the plants was in progress and the plants that were encouraged to make a sturdy, vigorous growth before being allowed to bloom are now heavily laden with buds and flower growths, and do not need any extra coaxing to produce a fine crop of flowers for the holidays. The main purpose should be to give the plants careful attention in every detail, guarding against any extremes of temperature in the houses. Ventilate at every favorable opportunity, being particular not to allow any draughts to blow directly on the plants, and cut and market the flowers as soon as they are ready. Do not attempt any holding back or "pickling" of the flowers, the Christmas business of the past few years having shown the mistake of holding flowers of any kind until their freshness has gone. There is such a wide range of material, which figures in the holiday trade, such as ruscus, boxwood, holly, etc., together with the many varieties of pot plants so that the retailer and his customers are not satisfied with anything but the very best in cut flowers.

One of the most important things the grower should look out for is to keep his plants clean of fly by attending to the fumigating regularly. There is nothing that reflects more on the grower's care, than to find his plants full of fly, as well as taking into consideration the damage done to the plants. The proper way is to set apart certain periods for doing this work and attend to it on time, not waiting till the young shoots are all gummed up from the effects of fly. With the many nicotine preparations on the market there is no excuse for the plants to be affected by fly.

CHRISTMAS PLANTS.

Poinsettias, Statice and Boxwood, with Raffia Matting.

While figuring on the Christmas crop, and attending to the flowering plants' requirements, is of the greatest importance, we must not neglect the preparations for the propagation of the young stock for next season. The growers who make it a part of their business to grow large quantities of rooted cuttings to sell, have already followed up their empty chrysanthemum benches with carnation cuttings. These growers grow large numbers of plants with the main object of furnishing a good supply of cuttings and have a good supply of material most of the time. But the grower who depends on getting his stock from the plants in bloom that he has on hand, should be prepared to start his cutting beds directly after the holidays so as to be able to make a good selection of cuttings. Selecting the cuttings is one of the surest ways of bringing success in the growing of carnations and is one of the secrets why some growers are noted for the same high-grade of the flowers they turn out year after year. While the weather is good the sand should be provided for, and as soon as the house has been put in order by the usual cleaning out, bring it in to be in readiness for the propagating to go forward.

Dahlia Troubles.

A paper by Professor J. B. S. Norton, state pathologist, Maryland Agricultural College and Experiment Station, College Park, Md., read at the first annual exhibition of the American Dahlia Society at New York, September 25, 1915.

Few ornamental plants are more vigorous and free from disease than the dahlia, but like all others, dahlias have their failings, and the more familiar we get with them, the greater the variety of difficulties encountered. Fortunately experience brings also the knowledge how to counteract them.

In going over the list of things which interfere with dahlia perfection, I may not bring much knowledge to the expert grower, but I may give some warnings to beginners. Scarcely any of the dahlia diseases have been investigated by scientists, though the occurrence of a number are on record in works on plant diseases. I would be pleased to hear of any additional dahlia difficulties, and especially to call up from the old masters of dahlia culture valuable experiences in controlling or preventing them. The natural requirements of the dahlia are an open situation with abundant light and air, a constant medium temperature and water supply, and an easily drained, but water retaining soil of moderate fertility. The horticulturist's art may enable us to improve on these, but the beginner will do best to keep as near them as possible. Probably the worst dahlia disease is a constitutional trouble, something like the "curly dwarf" disease of potatoes. The plants are dwarf, bushy and subject to sunburn, and with poor flowers or none. I first reported this disease in 1909. Stone published a note on it in Massachusetts in 1911 and others have discussed it since. The cause is obscure. It seems to be carried over in the roots, and there is some indication that there is less of it on plants grown from cuttings. It has been abundant in both wet and dry seasons.

Root rots due to various causes are frequent. A species of botrytis is the most common root rot fungus. It is most severe on stored roots in moist, warm conditions with poor ventilation. The fungus enters through breaks or cuts in the surface, but does not attack perfect roots according to Dr. Cook of New Jersey, who has investigated it. On the other hand, we have the common case of the shrivelling up and death of roots from too dry storage conditions. Several other kinds of fungi and bacteria may attack dahlia roots that have been injured by too much water in the soil, exposure to freezing or other causes, and cause rots. Another root trouble, which in some varieties is a natural characteristic, is the failure to make fleshy roots. Many claim that plants grown from cuttings do not form normal roots, but it is certainly true that plants from both cuttings and seeds often do make full-sized roots. If some one can find a way to develop buds from roots, as is done so easily with sweet potatoes, it will be a great advance in dahlia propagation, but so far the stem seems to be the only part that will produce new stems, as some beginner every year learns to his sorrow. Wind is the main enemy of the stem. The brittle stem is the most vulnerable part of the dahlia, but this has been greatly improved by selection, the better modern varieties having much stronger and dwarfer stems, and also by cultural and pruning methods. But the "no stakes" goal has not yet been reached.

Powdery mildew is about the only parasitic leaf trouble, and it rarely does much damage except to the lower leaves in late summer. Many varieties are not injured at all by the mildew, while others along side them may be covered with it, sometimes so badly as to interfere with blooming. Halstead found that spraying with fungicides easily checked it. Wilting of the leaves is a symptom of too hot sun or of too little water in the soil, but I have seen wilt due to root injury from too much water in the soil.

Two fungi interfering with the flowers are known. A phoma sometimes attacks the flower stems, making the flowers small or causing them to drop before opening. In 1909 I found a fungus blight of the petals, but have made no further investigation of it. The main flower failures are from climatic conditions. The hot sun of our summer is disastrous. The petals wither up, or are badly colored, or the flowers open one-sided, or the growth is so soft that the flowers have no endurance when cut. Sometimes the tips of petals and leaves are even dried up and killed. Choice exhibition flowers can be protected by a cloth cover overhead. This is a good precaution, too, when there is danger from early frost. For the average dahlia garden, however, we must depend on keeping back flowering till the hot weather is over or cutting back the earlier growth to get new, vigorous flowering stems in the fall. The variation in flower color from deep shade to strong sun is often much greater than between two similar varieties. Too much shade not only gives lighter flowers, but may almost suppress flowering, as will also too rich soil or too deep cultivation in the blooming period; but too little water and plant food may produce the same result. Both color and doubleness vary so with the season that two or three years' observation is necessary before one can know the character of a new variety. A heavy frost is usually the end of the flowering season, but frost seems to injure the buds least of all and they sometimes open after the stems and leaves are killed.

Singleness or poor centers is said to be induced by excessive forcing and taking cuttings from weak shoots. Double varieties are also said to degenerate into single in more southern climates; but I am inclined to think that the appearance of open centers under certain conditions in normally full double flowers is more a varietal peculiarity. Varieties with bad centers, or that open so slowly that the outer rays wither before the center is expanded, can best be remedied by substituting better ones for them. There are also a number of troubles due to insects which cannot be fully discussed here. Borers, which destroy the inside of the stem or cause it to swell, grasshoppers, spotted cucumber beetles and aster beetles that eat the leaves and flowers, aphids, and, not least in injury, if smallest in size, the red spider.

The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.

In the past we have from time to time had occasion to mention the activities of the Julius Roehrs Company, but it would be a large undertaking to completely cover the subject. Further, they being people who do not let the world pass them, there is always something new and interesting to be found at their extensive range.

While they have always grown fine stock, we think that their offerings for this Christmas will be a little finer and more extensive than usual. We may instance the begonia, Mrs. Peterson; they have several houses filled with it, and while their stock of the other types is also very fine, the Mrs. Peterson, by contrast, shows its superiority, both in bloom and foliage. The flowers are larger, and the foliage approaching a bronze shade, is very attractive. Taken in its entirety, their begonia stock is the finest we have ever seen.

Then there are the camellias. It would delight the hearts of some of the fathers in the business, of blessed memory, if they were in the flesh and could see the houses of beautiful camellias that this company now has ready for the market. There will be a great stock of azaleas, ardisias and poinsettias in for Christmas. A very attractive feature is a fine stock of euphorbias, now coming into bloom. To many, these plants are a novelty, and they are also graceful and beautiful. Another attractive feature is a large stock of Otahite oranges. There is also a great stock of cyclumens in the finest condition.

In ferns and other foliage plants there is a very fine exhibit, particularly noteworthy being a large stock of Adiantum Farleyense. There are dracenas, marantas, pineapple plants and many other fine foliage features. No sketch of this range would be complete if the orchids were omitted. We have not heard them say so, but from our own experience we believe they grow more orchids than any other range in this country. Lily of the valley is also extensively grown and they are now sending very fine stock to market. A. F. F.

Forcing Digitalis and Campanula.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Can I force digitalis and campanula for Easter? If so, at what temperature?

Missouri.

L. LEC.

Digitalis and campanula can be grown to flower in pots in the spring, but they will not stand severe forcing. I conclude that the inquirer refers to Campanula Medium, or Canterbury bells. Strong one-year-old plants, lifted and potted in the fall and held in cold frames over winter, then taken in about 10 weeks before needed to bloom and allowed to come along gradually in cool temperature, will bloom nicely several weeks before those outside, but the writer has never tried to get them as early as Easter. The same treatment is advised for digitalis. Only strong two- to three-year-old clumps should be used.

Miniature Christmas Baskets.

The little holiday basket, with its bright sprigs of evergreens and well-berried holly, together with some statice and red ruscus, finished with a red or holly ribbon bow, is as Christmasy as it can be. It may be sent in lieu of a Christmas card or is acceptable as a small gift. Shop worn small baskets and hampers may be gilded or painted and made to look like new and worked off in this manner to very good advantage. New small tumbler baskets that cost but from $1 to $1.50 per dozen will readily sell for from $1 to $1.50 each, when filled as above described. The accompanying illustrations give examples of these baskets, the cost of which is trifling.

Trees and Shrubs for Home Grounds.

Abstract of a paper by A. K. Harrison, Massachusetts Agricultural College, delivered at Horticultural Hall, Boston, Mass.

There has been a great development in the appearance and care of home grounds in the last few decades, which has been brought about largely by a better knowledge and use of hardy plants. This wider appreciation of hardy and especially of native plants is a result of the teaching and practice of Frederick Law Olmsted and his disciples. His extensive use of our native flora, which before his time had been very little, and that use more abroad than in this country, was really an epoch-making departure in American horticulture. It was, however, a perfectly natural and logical thing, both from the standpoint of business economy and of artistic effect, and the value of the idea being apparent, it met with general approval and popularity.

There have been great changes in our modes and conditions of life in recent years, which have had a wide influence on homes and surroundings. The peace and prosperity of these years have produced an increasing number of well-to-do families, who have more or less time and means at their disposal for attention to artistic surroundings and the enjoyment of outdoor life. A great advance in all lines of artistic and allied endeavor has resulted, architecture has taken on new life, transportation has been revolutionized, dress has changed, agriculture has become a new thing and horticulture has wonderfully advanced. A far-reaching body of horticultural, agricultural and architectural periodicals developed, which have widened the desire for better home surroundings. In spite of all this, however, in spite of all that has been said and written and done, there yet remains much room for improvement.

The extension of suburban districts has brought its problems, some of which are not yet satisfactorily solved. These problems are mostly of the larger kind, involving community life and welfare; smaller problems affecting the individual homes are, however, constantly recurring. The development of real estate subdivisions has made it necessary often to locate dwellings on lands heretofore thought too steep, too rugged or too low for such uses, and it has been necessary to plan for such development, not only in grading, drainage and road construction, but also for successful planting in varying soils and exposures. So much has been written on these subjects, the field has been so well gone over, that perhaps I shall have nothing new to bring to you.

Taken as a whole there is a marked difference between the present home surroundings in country or country village, and in residential suburbs. Many of the country homes have been long established, and their character and surroundings largely fixed before the recent advance of which I have spoken, while many of the suburban homes are of recent construction and have profited by present architecture and planting. Moreover, there are a greater number of persons at leisure in suburban districts and areas are limited, so that more can be done in planting and maintenance. There is also considerable difference in the mental attitude of the country and the suburban dweller, particularly of the masculine gender, toward ornamental gardening and garden materials.

The country home lacks shrubs, because the country man appreciates the sturdy things; he loves a tree, he tolerates the flowers in his front yard—but he has very little use for shrubs, and then only for a few specimen plants; masses or borders of shrubs, he despises. The man of the suburbs has less of this ingrained love of trees, because he has not lived with them so intimately; he does have a greater appreciation of flowers and flowering shrubs, for his experiences do not include so many years of uprooting and clearing hedges, and his opportunities of seeing and enjoying lawns and planted places have been greater. The feelings of the women of the country and the suburb do not, perhaps, vary so much, for their experiences with the different plant forms have usually been so intimate, and their appreciation of the artistic and decorative values, if not keener, are at least more responsive and unbiased. Partly as a result of these divergent views, and partly because there is a greater opportunity for house location on the farm than on the suburban lot, the usual condition is that the country or village home has plenty of trees, while the suburban home has few trees and plenty of shrub growth, and the trees of recent planting have developed but little. The lack of trees at the suburban home is perhaps not so great, because there are often trees along the street or streets bordering the lot—but it is a lack nevertheless.

When we come to a choice of trees for planting on our home grounds, we can then consider kinds and forms, and it is at once apparent that there are at least three great groups from which we may select, and the choice of the selected group will be governed by the use or end for which we are planting. The groups run into each other somewhat, but still it is quite possible to recognize a group especially useful for shade, another having particular beauty of form or outline, but less value for shade, and a third bearing showy flowers. The maples have been perhaps the most generally planted of shade trees, and deservedly so, as they have many points of excellence; comparatively rapid growth, clean and free from litter, few enemies, easily moved, considerable variation in leaf character and density of shade, wide adaptability to soil conditions, and particularly good fall coloring. They have long been popularly considered the most useful lawn and street tree. In the early days the maple was much planted because it was easily obtained from the woods or fields, and was not at all difficult to move even in good size, but it was planted for a double purpose; not only was it attractive and useful as a shade tree in home grounds, but it also gave an annual revenue of sugar, so that the early settler was independent of the market source of supply. Acer sacherum, sacharium and rubrum are our native species, the two latter especially useful in moist soils, while A. platanoides is the most useful European species.

Next to the maples in popular approval and probably even more valuable are the oaks; trees which are characterized by a thrifty, if not a rapid growth, broad spreading habit, good shade without being so dense as to prevent air circulation, and especially long-lived, sturdy character. They have not been so much planted as the maples because they lack the sugar making qualities, and because they are not so easily transplanted in good size from the wild, though nursery stock is readily handled. The best species for ordinary soils are Quercus palustris, Q. alba and Q. rubra, while Q. bicolor and the first named, Q. palustris, are good for moist soils.

Some of the poplars and willows, which are much planted where quick effects are needed, are decidedly good; the poplars, of large leaf and rapid growth, serve very well for shade while the other kinds are coming to effective size, but for the most part they are not as good for permanent trees and should be replaced by other species. The Lombardy poplar certainly has a place in suburban planting where narrow, high screens are needed, and if dilapidated or injured by age, is easily replaced. The ordinary white willow, which however is not a native, is a decidedly useful and beautiful tree. It will succeed almost anywhere, and it is altogether different in foliage character from any other of our other large trees. The different species of ash and beech give good shade, but the ash is not as graceful in twig growth and its leaves fall quite early. The beech is slow in growth and impatient of injury to its roots.

Of the kinds remarkable for their beauty, but less useful for shade, the elm easily stands first, but its usual form of open top on a tall trunk, makes it unsatisfactory where dense shade is desired at a given point. The elm, however, should always be planted, especially where it has room to develop and where it can be seen from a distance, so that its graceful form may be appreciated. Chestnuts and hickories are well worth preserving when already established, but they litter the lawn with burs and shucks. Also, the slow growth of the hickory, and the liability of the chestnut to rapidly spreading bark diseases, together with its unpleasant odor at flowering time make them unsatisfactory for lawn planting. Among the showy flowering trees, the most commonly planted is the horse chestnut, which, coming to us from Asia, has proved entirely hardy, though rarely reproducing itself. It is the most widely planted of any flowering tree, and gives good shade, but is not so broad spreading as the oak, or so long lived. Somewhat less common, because less hardy, especially when young, is the catalpa, whose broad leaves and large flowers are especially attractive in early summer. The southern species, C. bignonioides, is the best, but the western C. speciosa is usually more hardy. The foreign varieties are smaller and well suited to limited areas.

The most showy flowered of our northern trees of large size, is the tulip or white wood. Related to the magnolia, though not especially resembling them, it is a fine, clean, thrifty sort which well deserves planting, not so much for its large, cup-shaped flowers of orange and pale yellowish green, as for the clean, healthy foliage and general shade value. Another native tree of value for shade and flowers is the basswood or linden of rather rapid growth. It is larger and more ovate in form than its European relatives, which are useful in positions too small for the larger sorts. The locust, which was frequently planted about old country homes, has an abundance of very fragrant flowers, but is of little value for shade on account of the small size of its foliage and the extreme lateness of leafing and therefore is not to be recommended.

Of the small-sized flowering trees, none is more showy than the flowering dogwood. From its size, flowering date and general character, it is rather to be classed with the magnolias, though not in any way related to them. One group of flowering trees most neglected in lawn planting are the useful fruits. The whole growth and character of the apple fits it admirably for such use. It is ornamental in flower and fruit and its economic value is no small item to the lot owner. Other kinds of fruit trees are almost as ornamental and well worth planting. The quince, especially, would lend decided attraction to larger shrub borders.

Trees planted for particular beauty in color, form or gracefulness of branching, require careful study. The graceful bending of a birch is best shown by the well developed specimens, so placed that they can be seen from a distance sufficiently for the eye to take in the whole form. The same may be said of the larch. The coarser, rigid branching forms like the sassafras, coffee tree and pepperidge show best when seen against the sky. Another form of contrast is the dark color of evergreens, and evergreens should be used either as single, well-developed specimens in remote parts of the lawn, or in groups for mass effects or dark backgrounds for other shrubs or trees.

Natural shrubbery is characteristically informal, and home ground planting should be the same. Formality in shrub planting may be had by careful selection of special kinds, supplemented by repeated use of the shears, in a misdirected effort to improve on nature. In border plantations we have a great degree of variety and beauty; variety in position, form, flowers, shades of foliage, height, etc. The two chief lines of beauty in the irregular border, are the sinuous lines where the foliage meets the lawn, and the varying height and form of sky line. In close clipped hedges, however, beauty depends entirely upon one thing—perfection. The shade of green must be the same throughout, all plants must be equally tall and sturdy, all well branched, and each a repetition of the next, just because the point of beauty depends on the whole, and the eye will unintentionally seek out the blemishes; and any departure from perfection or lack of best development, shows up glaringly. Irregular shrub borders give fine opportunities for the use of kinds of varying size, so that in the broader parts of the border, tall sorts may be used in the rear or on prominent points along the front, and by the use of such points and bays, and occasional islands in front of bays, hidden effects may be provided, which come upon unawares, add new interest. A shrub border always looks better with a foreground of turf, and for this reason shrubbery should, where possible, be kept back four or five feet from roads and paths.

In grouping shrubs, we should learn from nature, where we find the hedges and water sides with considerable groups of a single kind, rather than a confused mass of many kinds. In nature also, the shrub groups are edged down to the turf and are clustered about ledges, fences and other objects, keeping the center of the picture open, and framing the sides. Next to position and size, perhaps the important things to consider in associating shrubs, are general texture and method of branching. For kinds, there is a wide choice, almost any of the hardy species being useful in some position or another; some are better in moist places, others for dry exposed banks, some for direct sunlight, others for shade. The descriptions and hints given in the nursery catalogues are usually a safe guide in selection.

Fourth National Flower Show.

PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 25-APRIL 2, 1916.

With a view to adding to the attraction of some of the display classes, the schedule committee last week decided to increase the prizes in the class covering rose gardens to $1,000, offering $500 as first, $300 as second, and $200 as third prizes. The prizes in the class for the best display of rose plants to cover 200 square feet of space have been increased from $125 and $75 to $200 and $100.

The second preliminary schedule has just been mailed. It comprises 44 pages and the prizes offered approximate $20,000. It is the largest schedule ever put out for a flower show in America.

Many of the prizes offered by outside interests appear in the new edition. Quite a number of classes are underwritten by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Henry F. Mitchell Co., Inc., Hosea Waterer, W. Atlee Burpee & Co., all of Philadelphia, Pa., and Zandberger Bros., Valkenburg, Holland. Other donors of special prizes noted are Philip Breitmeyer and Harry Balsley, Detroit, Mich.; H. G. Berning, St. Louis, Mo.; Hugh B. Barclay, Marion, Pa.; Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.; John Cook, Baltimore, Md.; Eugene Dailedouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass.; A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.; Geo. B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, Neb.; Benj. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.; A. H. Hews, Inc., Cambridge, Mass.; Wm. F. Kastling, Buffalo, N. Y.; Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich.; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O.; S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; M. Rice Company, Philadelphia; Max Schling, New York; United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y.; Mrs. Chas. Wheeler, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Anton C.

Zvolanek, Lompoc, Calif. Other special prizes have been received and will find places in the final schedule.

Exhibitors of roses, in both commercial and private classes, are reminded that under a new rule of the American Rose Society, all roses with more than two growths (one pinch) will be disqualified, excepting in the classes calling for displays, and for 100 or more blooms in a vase, when two pinches will be allowed. The rose section, as prepared by the American Rose Society, contains an unusually liberal list of premiums, which aggregate considerably over $4,000. Almost all the varieties of roses used commercially as cut flowers are classed, and new varieties are provided for; while perpetuals, teas, wichurianas, polyanthas, and their hybrids, grown in pots and tubs, are amply provided for.

There is a liberal schedule prepared by the American Carnation Society covering carnations. The prizes for the best display covering 150 square feet are $200, $150 and $100. There are also prizes of $50, $35 and $15 offered for the best vase of carnations, not to exceed 300 blooms, one or more varieties, greens and ribbons allowed. The retail classes in the carnation section are somewhat novel. In the class for table decorations, $50 will be awarded to each table scoring not less than 90 points, $40 to each table scoring not less than 80 points, and $30 to each table scoring not less than 70 points. Another class covers basket arrangements, and the same idea prevails as to awards; $25 will be awarded to each arrangement scoring not less than 90 points, $20 to each arrangement scoring not less than 80 points, and $15 to each arrangement scoring not less than 70 points. But only six entries will be accepted in either of these classes. Immediately following the judging, the secretary will remove the entry cards from all the exhibits in these classes, and only the regulation display cards as prescribed by the management will be permitted on the displays. The reason for this ruling is obvious to retailers. The carnation display will really form the "Jubilee Exhibition" of the American Carnation Society, celebrating the society's twenty-fifth anniversary, and in commemoration of it, the society offers its special "Silver Jubilee Medal" for award to each winner of one or more first premiums in the vase classes.

The American Sweet Pea Society includes a schedule covering winter orchid flowerings, standard winter orchid flowering and varieties and 1915 novelties. Notable in this section of the schedule are the classes covering the W. Atlee Burpee Co.'s prizes for the largest display of sweet peas, winter or summer flowering, or both, and the Anton C. Zvolanek prizes for the best and largest collection of winter flowering grandiflora and orchid sweet peas, all correctly named, varieties introduced prior to 1916. Liberal prizes are offered for retailers' exhibits.

The American Gladiolus Society aims for a display of forced blooms at this show, and has prepared a section of the schedule calling for about $300 in prizes. In the plant sections very little change has been made, the provisions made therein having been considered ample. Copies of the second preliminary schedule may be had on application to State Florists' Association of Indiana.

The December meeting of the State Florists's Association of Indiana was held at Fort Wayne, December 7, President W. J. Vesey, Jr., in the chair. A short business session was held at the Anthony hotel, and one of the important resolutions adopted was one providing for the acceptance of associate members, allowing those not residents of the state to have the privilege of associate membership. Indianapolis was decided upon as the place of the next meeting, January 11, at which time officers for the ensuing year will be elected. Elaborate preparations are being made for this event by the Indianapolis florists, and nothing will be left undone to royally entertain the visiting members of the association during their stay in the capital city. The Indiana rose and carnation trophy will be competed for at that time.

All of the establishments of the Fort Wayne members were visited during the day. At the range of W. S. & M. J. Vesey, the orchids were found to be of especial interest. Several of the important cattleya varieties, including labiata, Trianae, Schrederae, Mossia and gigas, looked to be very promising. The orchid house is under the supervision of W. J. Stewart, formerly a grower for the Duke of Connaught, Sussex, Eng. In carnations, all the standard sorts are grown, including Champion, Enchantress Supreme, Gloriosa, White Wonder and Philadelphia. Rose Mrs. George Sawyer will be in full crop for Christmas. Lily of the valley for the Detroit market is a specialty at the Vesey establishment, and a wholesale cut flower store is maintained in that city.

Mrs. Charles Russell roses are a specialty with F. J. Knecht & Co. This firm grows only for the wholesale market. A general line of plants and flowers all in good condition were noted at the greenhouses of A. J. Lanternier, who grows to meet the needs of his retail store. He was also busy with holly and greens. The Flick Floral Co. was also visited both at the greenhouse and the up-town store, the party being escorted through the plant by Aaron Shive, the superintendent.

Following the inspection of the various ranges, the members of the party, which included the following, were guests at a luncheon at the palatial home of Judge Vesey: E. G. Hill and John Evans, Richmond; O. E. Stein-kamp and Herman Junge, Indianapolis; R. G. Kircher, Fairmount; Wm. H. Johnson, Kendallville; F. H. Freese, New Haven; J. D. Conner, Wabash; C. B. Henley, Hartford City; Harry White, North Manchester; Geo. Pastor, Huntington; E. G. Baker, Muncie; A. J. Wagoner, Columbia City; Theo. Dorner, Lafayette; Fred King, Winona Lake; Chas. Treffenger, Van Wert; O.; F. A. Trevinger, Bluffton; C. J. Lanternier, F. J. Knecht, Wm. Markey, Aaron Shive and W. J. Vesey, Jr., all of Fort Wayne, and C. O. Wilcox, Chicago. C. O. W.

CUT FLOWER TRADE AT STANDSTILL.

Trade during the past week has been very dull. Plants were practically the only line of stock for which there was any demand. The business in cut flowers fell far below normal, compared with other years. Roses suffered a drop in prices, varying from $2 to $8 per 100 as best prices. Chrysanthemums also went slowly; in fact, many salesmen said they never remember of having had to sell them at such ridiculously low prices, many first-class flowers being cleaned out at $3 per 100. Of course, there were some exceptions, where steady trading commanded good prices, but on the whole the bottom seems to have dropped out of the chrysanthemum business. Carnations also suffered a decline in price. Many fine flowers had to be sacrificed at very low figures, but the last of the week the market showed some improvement, and, consequently, prices advanced. It is anticipated that there will be a sudden rise in prices due to dark weather shortening the supply and owing to the fact that the Thanksgiving glut is over. A brisk trade Monday, December 6, seems to offer hope that the worst is over—at least for a few months.

NOTES.

Some of the best Nelrose snapdragons in the market are grown by Fred L. Sly, of South Stoughton. He also is picking from a good crop of violets and expects to have a good supply for Christmas.

Penn, the Florist, expects to open his new store in ample time to take care of the holiday trade. There have been extensive alterations made in the interior, and when completed it will be one of the most modern and best equipped stores in the city.

A. O. P. Rohlf, of Randolph, is marketing some very nice stevia at present. It is an interesting fact that he has taken enough money to pay for his winter's supply of coal from bayberries, which grow profusely about his estate.

Edward Skahan, well-known market gardener, died at his home in Belmont, December 1. He was well known to the trade as a violet grower years ago, but of late had devoted his entire plant to produce.

George McAlpine, Samuel Wax and Alfred Walsh, are very proud of having shot a 300-pound buck at Exeter, N. H., December 5. Just who shot it seems to be a mystery, as all three fired simultaneously and brought down their quarry.

J. K. Chandler & Sons, of Tewksbury, are cutting a heavy crop of violets, the bulk of which they consign to New York. They are cleaning up the last of their chrysanthemums and planting yellow marguerites for the spring trade.

Patrick Welch reports a bright outlook for the holiday trade with prospects favorable for good supplies of stock in all leading lines, the crop of American Beauty roses being especially promising.

The Halifax Garden Company, of Halifax, Mass., are cutting a fine lot of roses, of which Ophelia and Ward are especially worthy of note. They also have a nice line of carnations, their consignment being about 2,000 flowers daily.

The bowling league met December 2 for the first time in two weeks. The highest string was bowled by Jacobs of the Boston Flower Exchange, with 132 pins. Bresnahan, of the "Pansies," rolled the highest 3 strings, with 102, 113, 110. The standing is as follows:

ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW.

The annual flower show of the floriculture department of Massachusetts Agricultural College, was held November 7-9. On Sunday an attendance of 1,400 was recorded by actual count, and on the other days the attendance was very gratifying to those in charge. The lower floor of French hall, one of the largest of the college buildings, was utilized for the exhibition. The walls of the hall were lightly decorated with southern smilax and oak leaves, which, with the natural grain of the woodwork and the light walls, made a very pleasing contrast.

Prizes were competed for by the members of the senior and junior classes in floriculture. The senior competition was won by E. J. Cardarelli with a large basket of yellow chrysanthemums and oak leaves. C. E. Wildon won second with a basket of pink and white single chrysanthemums and S. W. Hall won third with a fine basket of Sawyer roses.

In the junior competition there were 14 entries for table decoration, and the judges experienced difficulty in reaching a decision. J. C. Campbell won first honors with a table of Peter Pan chrysanthemums; E. S. Duffil was second with a table of Golden Climax pompons and John T. Dizer won third with a table of Hadley and White Killarney roses.

The judges of the competitive exhibits were R. S. Carey, South Hadley Falls; D. J. Gallivan and Geo. H. Sinclair, Holyoke. In the competitive commercial classes, which were judged by the senior students, the principal winners were Geo. H. Sinclair, Gallivan Bros. and George Strugnel, of Holyoke; Butler & Ullman of Northampton; R. S. Carey, South Hadley Falls, and Keyes & Son, Florence, Mass.

Features of the show were the careful attention given to correct labeling of the exhibits, attendants to explain wherever information was necessary; the efforts made to keep the exhibition in perfect freshness until the last hour of the last day and every detail given attention to make the exhibition of value to student or professional florist. In size, finish and quality of the displays this was the best exhibition ever held at the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Tuesday evening of the show the Holyoke and Northampton Florists and Gardeners' Club and the Gardeners' Club of the Massachusetts Agricultural College held a joint meeting at the college, when the subject of "The Value of Flower Shows" was discussed, which brought out many suggestions as to how exhibitions could be made more attractive to flower lovers and as a stimulant for trade.

VERY SATISFACTORY THANKSGIVING TRADE.

Thanksgiving day has come and gone, leaving a very satisfied feeling among the florists that it certainly did pay. There was a superabundance of the finest of flowers, in both the yellow and the white chrysanthemums, almost amounting to a glut, which was only prevented by the more than extraordinary demand. While there were so many flowers brought into bloom at the desired time, still all the florists say they had a better trade and sold more flowers than ever before. In fact there is an ever increasing demand, which grows greater every year. The holiday trade is the next interesting proposition with the florists here, as elsewhere, and all parties say that there is a finer prospect than ever before. The supply coming in at present is the very best of all kinds that are in the market usually at this season, and in the greatest abundance. Trade is very good and keeps this supply well used up, day by day, and there is little or no surplus. The social season is on to the fullest, and this with the weddings and funeral work, keeps the florists busy, and, what is better still, uses up their daily cut. Violets have been very plentiful, quantities of them being used for Thanksgiving day and since. Chrysanthemums are about gone, having served their purpose and glorified many a home for some weeks past. Roses of all kinds are well to the fore and promise to be in fine shape for the holidays. The stock for the holidays will consist of carnations, roses of all kinds, poinsettias, Begonia Lorraine, lilies, and all kinds of bulbous stock, now just beginning to come on, and azaleas as well as other varieties of flowers.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. had a fine supply of chrysanthemums, numbering fully 2,000 blooms for the Thanksgiving day trade. They are more than pleased with the outlook for a splendid holiday business. Their lilies, roses, carnations, hyacinths and narcissi are blooming beautifully, and they will be in a position to supply their trade with quality stock.

The McIntyre Floral Co. reports excellent business and good prospects for the holiday trade. Thanksgiving business was very satisfactory with them and stock sold out well. Conforming to an annual custom, this firm a short time before Thanksgiving sent bountiful supplies of roses, carnations and other beautiful flowers to local charities in this city.

The Joy Floral Company's greenhouses are in the best possible shape for a fine holiday supply. Their American Beauty will be of the finest, and their other roses and carnations are at their best. They will be able to fill any and all demands.

L. H. Haury had a fine Thanksgiving trade and is preparing for big Christmas business.

All of the local florists are looking forward to an exceptionally good holiday business. M. C. D.

SHORT SUPPLY BRINGS PRICE ADVANCE.

The supply of stock in the market has shortened considerably and as a result prices have advanced. Green goods have made their appearance. Holly is fine and is selling at from $4.50 to $6 per case. Lycopodium of good bright green is quoted at $6 per case of 100 pounds. Trees are plentiful but meet with a light demand.

NOTES.

Rice Bros. bowling team and the L. S. Donaldson floral department team rolled a series of three games on the Elks' alleys, December 2, the Donaldson team capturing two games out of the three. High scores were made by W. D. Desmond, John Roevick and Art. Johnson. Both teams will meet on the same alleys again, December 9.

The flower show staged at the West hotel under the auspices of the Minnesota State Florists' Association and the Minnesota State Horticultural Society is very fine. There is an extensive exhibit of flowers, fruits and vegetables. Many of the local florists made displays that were noteworthy.

Mrs. Hugh Will has sufficiently recovered from the injury to her arm, which was broken in a fall recently, to be about again, but her arm is still in splints. Her many friends wish her a speedy and complete recovery.

The Danish Seed Import Co. is the name of a new concern of which Chr. Mosberg is manager. A specialty will be made of imported seeds.

Oscar Amundson had a large decoration at the Andrews hotel, which called for plants and cut flowers in large numbers.

Max Kaiser, of Merriam Park, has some extra fine poinsettias in pans that will be just right for Christmas.

C. Claussen of Albert Lea had a large display of fruit at the show at the West hotel.

Rice Bros. are receiving some fancy wild smilax that meets with ready sale.

T. C. Rogers is with the L. S. Donaldson Co.'s force during the holidays.

TRADE GOOD BUT SUPPLY LIMITED.

Business has been very good during the past week, with plenty of funeral and decorative work, but stock very limited in supply, especially in roses and carnations. Roses have been very good in quality with good, long stems. American Beauties have been scarce, but violets, sweet peas, lilies and Paper Whites are more plentiful and find a ready sale. Pot plants of good quality sell on sight, and a number of Begonia Lorraine, cyclamens, bouvardias and poinsettia plants are seen.

NOTES.

Henry Kusik & Co. are receiving stock of good quality, but the quantity is limited, especially in roses and carnations. Lily of the valley, violets and lilies are plentiful, however. The shipping trade shows marked activity with the approach of Christmas, and the supply department is also a very busy place.

W. J. Barnes is cutting some very fine carnations and the prospects for a good Christmas crop are excellent. Yellow and white narcissi are coming in good. He is still cutting some fine chrysanthemums. Quality stock in Begonia Lorraine, cyclamen and poinsettia plants are a feature.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a big week. Stock, while limited in supply, has been of excellent quality and cleans up daily. Shipping trade has been good and supplies for Christmas are going fast. Some excellent stock in violets and lilies are being received by this firm.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports business good; in fact, demand greater than the supply. Christmas preparations are keeping the entire force busy. Brisk sales are reported in pot plants, especially cyclamens, begonias and poinsettias.

Genial Philip Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Chicago, was in town this week visiting his many friends. If we had been advised of his coming in advance, several of the florists would have enlarged doorways for his benefit.

S. Bryson Ayres, who was sued recently by Wm. Stevenson for damages received while trying to run the Ayers automobile, has had his greenhouses attached to satisfy a judgment given Stevenson, the amount being $2,500.

Arthur Newell has been handling some very good azaleas, cyclamens and begonia plants, all of which find a quick sale. He reports business good with plenty of funeral work.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. have received their new Autocar, a much larger vehicle than the old one, which will be added to their delivery service.

J. Austin has a good line of pot plants for the Christmas trade.

Visitors: G. Wilcox and wife, Council Bluffs, Ia.; Chas. F. Meyer, of New York; H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

CLUB MEETING.

At the meeting to be held on the evening of January 6, the florists' club will install the following officers: Thomas F. Tracey, president; Charles Sanders, vice president; Robert Davidson, secretary-treasurer; Earl Shaw, James H. Snyder, and Samuel Hanson, trustees for two years. The ceremonies will be followed by the annual banquet, which will be an affair the members will not care to miss. Arrangements are in the hands of the entertainment committee, of which Louis H. Schaefer is chairman. The annual election took place at the December meeting. One new member, Philip Ulrich, of Johnstown, was elected.

The question box brought forth an interesting series of queries which were discussed interestingly by several of the members who through such means are becoming accustomed to think and talk on their feet. The questions included: "What Causes Light Browning on the Tips and Edges of Hadley Roses?" "What are the Three Best Pompons in Yellow, Pink and White Chrysanthemums?" "How Far Should Imported Baby Ramblers on Grafted Stock be Cut Back for Forcing?" "In Watering Poinsettias Will It do Harm to Spray the Bracts?" The answers were varied. Only one man had any experience with Hadley roses, and as he had placed the question in the box his query could not be answered. As to baby ramblers, the consensus of opinion was in favor of not cutting them back for the reason that it encourages the stock to put forth shoots and, generally, the bushes do not need to be cut back anyway. The views on watering poinsettias seemed to favor spraying, provided there be no sediment in the water. The stains are believed to come from dirt in solution. Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, wanted to know why orchids are so scarce. He was answered by a retailer who said this is not the season for them, but that there will be plenty by Christmas. Julius Berg, who travels for Lion & Co., New York, was asked to tell about business. He replied that he has lately been in many places in the state as far west as Buffalo and found that the retailers had an excellent business through Thanksgiving and that the outlook for the holidays is encouraging. A social hour with light refreshments brought the meeting to a close.

STOCK IN LIMITED SUPPLY.

The general supply of stock in the market is not very large, and if there is any good strong steady demand at all the receipts clean up in a hurry each day. Shipping business is very good while the market for Christmas green and novelties is very active. Roses are not as plentiful as they were. They are having an active market. Carnations, at the time of this writing, are cleaning up very readily. Easter lilies are good sellers again, while callas are having a better market than they have had at any time this season. Chrysanthemum offerings include practically only the very late varieties. Double violets are beginning to come in heavy, while the quantities of singles available are about the same as during the past several weeks. Lily of the valley enjoy a steady call. Orchids and the limited amount of sweet peas sell pretty well. Other offerings include stevias, Paper White narcissi, snapdragons and baby primroses. The supply of greens is adequate for present needs.

NOTES.

Mrs. C. E. Critchell's popularity was well attested by the large number of elaborate tributes that were sent to the beautiful new Critchell home in Rose Hill. These tributes in number and quantity, as well as beauty, easily surpassed anything similar ever seen before in this locality. Besides these, many expressions of sympathy in telegrams and letters came to the bereaved family. At the services "Crossing the Bar" and "Abide With Me" were sung.

The E. G. Hill Floral Co. have some large decorations this week, among them being one for a local department store.

The regular meeting of the florists' society will be held Monday evening, December 13.

P. J. Olinger visited his greenhouses at New Castle December 7.

C. E. Critchell has been having excellent narcissi.

BOOM TIMES HAVE RETURNED.

This industrial city fairly teems with iron foundry men and steel workers who seem to have plenty of money and spend it with an amazing abandon. The congestion at the main street crossings is typical of Broadway at its busiest hours, the shops are thronged with men and women eager to spend money, and when it is known that the whole city is practically engaged in the manufacture of war material in its different raw shapes it is easily understood why everyone's pockets seem to fairly bulge with Uncle Sam's currency; but what impresses me most are the up-to-the-minute flower shops with which I do business. Strange as it may seem to the Yankee, this city, which undoubtedly possesses a population over the 200,000 mark, has but five very small greenhouse establishments and only five flower shops or retail stores. Writing on Thanksgiving day the flower shops are simply crowded with eager buyers and I was amazed to learn that most of the stock being sold came from the Chicago market. Particularly was this true when it came to lily of the valley, sweet peas, orchids and the choicest stock of roses, such as American Beauty, Richmond, Killarney, Russell, Ward, Sunburst, etc. Chrysanthemums were in great supply from pompons to the fanciest large sorts, all home grown. In addition the magnificent display of pot plants were all local grown. These included begonias, primroses, coleus, plumbago, solanums, poinsettias, heliotrope, rubrum lilies, chrysanthemums and others.

NOTES.

The Elmwood Cemetery Corporation has turned its greenhouse business over to a new corporation, the Elmwood Floral & Nursery Co., who operate no store but who do a splendid business in the growing line.

The John L. Parker business is an active concern, both in the growing and their retail store, which is now in charge of a new florist to this city in the person of John Slack from St. Louis, Mo.

T. G. Owen, the well known grower of Columbus, Miss., has opened up a retail shop on Second avenue, with his son in charge, the style of the place being T. G. Owen & Son.

The McVay Seed & Floral Co. handles practically the entire cut of the Elmwood Floral & Nursery Co. This company operates a retail seed and flower shop at 2018 First avenue.

John A. Lambert is out of the business traveling on the road for a seed house, being succeeded by McDonald & Horst.

A. J. Koenig, who owns a nice greenhouse plant at Woodlawn, is looking after his retail store on Twenty-first street.

Hugh Seals, the well known greenhouse man, is now looking after his retail store in the city hall.

INDICATIONS OF GOOD CHRISTMAS TRADE.

Trade during the past week has only been what might be termed fair. There were a few weddings and some funeral work, but no great amount of business generally. Roses of all kinds are plentiful, with the exception of the red varieties, Milady, Francis Scott Key and Hadley continuing somewhat scarce. Killarney Brilliant and Ophelia are especially good and Maryland, Ward and Shawyer are also of excellent quality. American Beauties are also good and the supply is plentiful. Carnations are much improved, being larger and with longer stems. Benora, Beacon and Enchantress Supreme are among the favorites. Chrysanthemums are beginning to wane and the quality of this stock is only passable. Pompons are scarce and only a few have arrived since Thanksgiving. The quality of lily of the valley received here is fine and good Lillium Harrisii are plentiful. Laurel roping and Christmas greens have made their appearance. All indications point to a very profitable holiday trade.

NOTES.

Pearl Becker Wilson, wife of Ramsford W. Wilson, passed away at her home on Hudson avenue, November 29. Her death was unexpected and came as a sad shock to her relatives and many friends. A baby was born at the Wilson home two weeks ago and Mrs. Wilson seemed to be progressing nicely, when death suddenly claimed her. She was 36 years of age. Many beautiful floral tributes sent by the employes of the three Wilson establishments and local florists accompanied the remains to the last resting place. The trade extends its deepest sympathy to Mr. Wilson in his bereavement.

J. B. Keller's Sons executed a very handsome blanket of violets and cattleyas for the funeral of the late Isaac Teall. He was a prominent man and nearly all of the local trade had commissions for funeral designs.

H. E. Wilson has added a six-foot counter refrigerator of the McCray type to his equipment, which adds to the attractiveness of the interior of his store.

A new McCray refrigerator of handsome design has been installed in the new store of E. R. Fry, West Main street. Business at this establishment has been highly satisfactory.

Geo. T. Boucher will soon install a new McCray refrigerator in his establishment. It is to be unusually attractive and will be 15 feet in length.

Geo. Kramer is doing special work for S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, during December.

Philadelphia Florists' Club.

The December meeting of the florists' club was graced with an exhibit of several of the new roses. Champ Welland, Mrs. T. Hilles, Géorgous and Prima Donna, vases of fine flowers of each, were much admired; also some splendid double bouvardia. The Michell silver cut for most new members secured in the next three months was also on view. The feature of the meeting was the debate directed by Chas. Grakelow, in the affirmative and W. F. Therkildson, in the negative, the question being, "Is it Wise for the Producer to Depend Entirely on the Enterprise of the Retailer for Marketing His Products?" The negative side won, it being the consensus of opinion that the producer should, and could, help considerably by scientific methods in growing, preparing, and shipping his stock, thus putting it in a class above the average and securing at the same time the best returns for his labor. Six new members were elected and 10 proposed for membership.

St. Louis.

The wholesale houses report a fairly good Thanksgiving trade with prices moderate. There were many beautiful window decorations for Thanksgiving in the retail line, two of the most notable being Schoenle Floral Co. and the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. of South Grand avenue.

Calling on the Kirkwood growers recently the writer found Christmas crops coming along nicely. W. A. Rowe has some especially fine carnations. At W. J. Pilcher's, American Beauty roses are in good shape for the holiday season.

A. Hoffman, one of the oldest employes of Shaw's Garden, died November 23. He had been connected with this establishment and Tower Grove park for the past 25 years.

The market the past week has been good. Stock has not been overplentiful and prices generally have been firm on all lines. American Beauties are bringing a better price and stock, especially in the long and medium grades, is very good. Carnations are less plentiful than the previous week and cleaned up early every day. Stevia and Paper White narcissi are now a factor in everyday sales. A few pompons and smaller yellow and pink chrysanthemums still arrive, but the demand is only good on the pompons; the others do not seem to be much sought after. Calla lilies are becoming more numerous and the demand good, also the same in Easter lilies and lily of the valley is equal to the demand and the quality is of the best. A few sweet peas arrive but are usually sold before being unpacked. Violets are moving nicely. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

The Elks' memorial, which was held December 5, created quite a demand for white carnations and white roses, the market being entirely cleaned up early on Saturday morning.

Geo. Bate, Al Barber and Geo. Nixon, of the Park Flower Shop, went hunting rabbits near Mentor, Ohio, on Wednesday of this week and bagged 20 of the furry "bunnies."

Chas. F. Bastian, of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, visited the greenhouses of The Lamborn Floral Co. at Alliance, Ohio, Thursday, December 2.

BUSINESS NORMAL AFTER RUSH.

Thanksgiving trade was very good, showing a little increase over that of last year, and was in keeping generally with the business during November, which was very satisfactory. The ceremonies attending the laying of the cornerstone of the new state capitol, Nov. 16, following an immense parade and the presence of many thousands of visitors in the city, kept the florists especially busy putting up party decorations and supplying flowers for dinner tables, corsages, etc. The convention of the schoolteachers of the state, 6,000 in number, which was also a November event, also caused a demand for quantities of cut flowers. Since the beginning of December business has steadied down considerably; especially is this noticed in the number of social functions for which there had been a really brisk demand for flowers and decorations during the latter part of November. The florists are energetic advertisers, however, and what, with the space they use in the daily papers, and their efforts in keeping elaborate window displays continually, they manage to draw some business all the time, so that it can hardly be said that business is really dull even though we are in the first part of the last month of the year, a period which is usually a dull one with all florists.

NOTES.

The Stiles Co. reports that their business is showing a nice increase over last season, and they are looking forward to a very heavy trade for the coming holidays. This firm is also handling special bunches of mistletoe, not in a retail way, but in the way of supplying it to northern and eastern florists. The crop seems to be well berried this year and of good quality generally.

Furrow & Co. say that the amount of business being done is showing an excess over the same months last year. This firm will commence building a range of glass about the beginning of January on their land in the north-west part of the city. The houses to be built will be of iron construction and up-to-date in every particular.

"December Work in the Flower Garden" is the title of an essay on the program of the State Civic Improvement Association, which will be read by Lon Foster of Furrow & Co. at the December meeting of the association.

Clyde Batten, a member of the Stiles Co.'s staff, and also secretary of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association, together with Mrs. Batten, are rejoicing in the arrival of a nine-pound daughter at their home.

Some of the local florists made up a hunting party and spent December 5 in the country with guns and ammunition. We are expecting an invitation to a banquet of big game.

MARKET SHOWS CONTINUED IMPROVEMENT.

With stock not overplentiful and prices good, the market continues to improve. Chrysanthemums are getting very scarce, and what few are to be had bring from $1 to $2.50 per dozen. Orchids are a little more plentiful and are more reasonable in price. Gardenias are still scarce, those arriving being small and are quoted at from $2 to $3 per dozen. Roses of all kinds are selling at prices varying from $4 to $15 per 100. Carnations and sweet peas are also scarce and the demand far in excess of the receipts.

NOTES.

The opening of congress called for extra work at a number of the florists' establishments. J. H. Small & Sons arranged a number of very elaborate baskets and large bunches. Gude Bros. Co., Geo. H. Cooke, Z. D. Blackistone, Marche & Co., Geo. C. Shaffer, and a number of others had their share of the orders.

The suffrage parade called for quantities of yellow stock, both in chrysanthemums and roses, several of the florists having orders for the decorations of the small cars carrying the leading suffragists.

Theo. Diederich is sending in some extra fine snapdragons, and is still sending in some bunch chrysanthemums.

Joe Merritt is showing some fine boxwood wreaths; also displays of ground pine and hemlock, which find ready sale.

O. A. C. Oehmler has a miniature peace steamship in his pond which attracts considerable attention.

Spice berries in this section are very scarce and what are being received are of poor quality.

M. Gordon, formerly with F. H. Kramer, is now with the DuPont Floral Co.

W. Clarke & Son are cutting poinsettias, but the quantity is limited.

THANKSGIVING TRADE BEATS 1914 RECORD.

Thanksgiving day's business seems to have given a nice margin above last year's figures. Added to this was the comfortable feature of an adequate supply of really good chrysanthemum stock produced locally. While roses, carnations and American Beauties moved fairly well, the heavy demand was for chrysanthemums, with yellow as the favorite by a few points. There was no advance over the usual everyday prices, chrysanthemums bringing from $2 to $5 per dozen retail, with pompons and shorts from pot grown stock filling in the demand for goods at prices below these figures. Weather conditions were favorable and doubtless had much to do with transient buying.

NOTES.

W. H. Culp and Co. are much pleased with the way the trade found them in their new store—they were splendidly stocked with fine chrysanthemums and a block of Harvard seemed to find special favor among the rooters for the winning football team of one of the local colleges.

Mr. McCabe, representing A. L. Randall Co., was a visitor Wednesday; he found plenty doing among the florists, and in at least one instance, helped materially in the doing. He reports business as good among the southwestern florists.

C. A. Rose states that his Thanksgiving day trade was very good. Mr. Rose has put in a nice line of gold fish, globes and accessories.

Harry Mueller has joined the ranks of the married men and is receiving the best wishes and congratulations of his many friends.

Floyd Arrington, with W. H. Culp & Co., surprised a few of his friends (others suspected him) by getting married last week.

Chas. P. Mueller plans the erection of two new houses, each 30x150 feet, to be completed by early spring.

F. Kuechenmeister has added a Ford delivery car, with specially constructed body, to his equipment.

Frank Cluff disposed of a nice little surplus of chrysanthemums at wholesale.

GOOD SALES AT SATISFACTORY PRICES.

With the majority of the chrysanthemums out of the way for this season, and with a noticeable increase in demand, conditions were very favorable the past week. The supply of roses has increased considerably, but with the good demand all cut flowers were moved at satisfactory prices. Nothing had to be sacrificed as job lots. After reviewing the Thanksgiving trade, the wholesalers are very optimistic regarding conditions for the Christmas trade. There will be plenty of good pot plants and cut flowers if the unforeseen does not happen.

CLUB MEETING.

The florists' club meeting, which was held December 2, was the best from the standpoint of attendance held during the year 1915. It was annual election night and announcement of Wm. Kennedy giving an illustrated talk on his western trip, undoubtedly was the cause of the large attendance. Archie McDonald and Leon B. Thorpe were taken in as new members. Treasurer Livingstone's report showed that the club's financial standing is still a healthy one. C. C. Pollworth, in making a report on the Cleveland flower show, had only words of praise for the way the show was managed, and what, in his opinion, was the best feature, was the co-operation among the retailers, which he thinks did its share to make the show what it was. Wm. Kennedy, as one of the judges at the Chicago floral festival, gave a brief report, in which he claimed that it was the best flower show, considering quality, that was ever staged in that city. He then, with the aid of a stereopticon, explained and showed views of the cities visited and the wonderful vegetation as it looms up in its various colors and huge masses in the state of California. The collection also contained many views of the Panama-Pacific exposition. The following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: Wm. R. Schroeder, president; Henry W. Kummer, vice-president; James Livingstone, treasurer; Eugene Oestreicher, secretary; C. C. Pollworth, trustee for three years.

NOTES.

The decorations at the charity ball, December 2, consisted of four large baskets, with a spread of 35 feet each, made mainly of wild smilax and berry flowers for the ceiling part. The balcony was festooned with evergreen baskets, while on the main floor many white chrysanthemum trees about four feet high gave the whole an artistic appearance. The work was executed by Mrs. A. F. Kellner Co. for the J. M. Fox & Son store.

At the A. F. Kellner Co.'s establishment, one of the teamsters, known to all as Cony, had the misfortune to fall from a shed November 28. Besides a deep gash in the head, his back was so badly hurt that even at this time it is a strain for him to be about with a cane. They do not expect him to return to work before the new year.

Gust Rusch of G. Rusch & Co., reports, Thanksgiving sales ahead of last year as to dollars and cents. Gust left December 7 for St. Paul and Minneapolis, to attend the fall meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Society and the Minnesota Horticultural Society. He took some of the famous Cudahy roses with him.

At the C. C. Pollworth Co.'s store the demand for Christmas supplies is very brisk. At their greenhouses they have an unusually large lot of fine azaleas and poinsettias coming along among their supply of other blooming and ornamental pot plants.

The Fox Point Floral Co., noted heretofore for the exceptionally fine cyclamen they grew, have comparatively few this season; a little insect mite, which they could not combat, is the cause.

Not having quite enough regular work, A. Reinhardt, of North Milwaukee, got busy and is now putting up three new houses, each 27x126 feet, to be used to increase his cut of carnations.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports everything coming along in fine shape for the holidays. Ferns, palms and blooming plants never were in finer shape.

Chas. Koch, of the Wauwatosa Floral Co., is coming into crop with a nice lot of sweet peas. He is also cutting some fancy carnations.

At the Greenwood Carnation Co., North Milwaukee, they report prospects for a heavy cut in carnations for the Christmas trade.

The Late Mrs. Gertrude Brinton.

Mrs. Gertrude Brinton, wife of Maurice J. Brinton, one of the best known florists of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, residing at Christiana, died as the result of a complication of diseases and after an illness of several months. She was the daughter of the late Henry Rakestraw, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, a graduate of the West Chester normal school, a member of the Friends' church and a woman who will be deeply missed in her community, having been active in all matters pertaining to the welfare of her home town.

She was a devoted wife, a loving mother, a woman who was of incalculable help to her husband in his business, and the florists of Lancaster county all extend their heartfelt sympathy to Mr. Brinton and his two children, Grace and Maurice, Jr. Her mother, Mrs. Jennie Rakestraw and two married sisters also survive her. The funeral services were held December 6, and the quantities of the flowers she loved so well, tributes of her many friends, showed the esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. A. M. H.

It is said a California grower will try the cultivation of azaleas and other plants on the Belgian plan.

NATIONAL Flower Show posterettes are now available and supplies may be had on application to W. F. Therkildson, 475 North Fifth street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A FLORIDA concern is now growing fancy-leaved caladiums for their leaves which are sold through the New York wholesalers at prices ranging from five to ten cents each.

American Gladiolus Society.

The American Gladiolus Society will hold its seventh annual meeting and exhibition in Boston, Mass., in August, 1916, the selection resulting from the following vote of the members: Boston, 56; Cleveland, 12; Rochester, 9. Many would have voted for Rochester had an earlier date been available.

Gas Poisoning From Bulbs.

With reference to the case of alleged gas poisoning from bulbs in steamers' hold, reported in our issue of September 18, page 484, Prof. John M. Coulter, the well known botanist, writes: "We have no knowledge of any such possibility as is suggested by this story. Our inclination would be to doubt that the lily bulbs had anything to do with the catastrophe. Of course, carbon dioxide is given off in respiration, and at rather high temperature it might be escaping from the lily bulbs. At the same time, in a confined place the oxygen supply might be exhausted. This situation might give one a choke-damp sensation, until fresh air was admitted. As to poisonous gases, given off by such bulbs, we have no knowledge, and doubt it to the point of disbelief."

New York Flower Show.

What will be something of an innovation at flower shows will be the class added to the premium schedule for the forthcoming show to be held April 5-12, 1916, in the Grand Central Palace, New York, covering a window box of wood, to contain flowering plants of a nature to last through summer, outdoors. The first prize, $25, is offered by Miss Georgie Wayne Day of New York. Louis Sherry, the well known restaurateur, has offered, through A. L. Miller, a $100 cup, to be awarded at the discretion of the committee. The Hotel Astor, also through Mr. Miller, offers a $50 cup. Emile W. Savoy, of Seacaus, N. J., offers $25 for the best specimen bougainvillea exhibited at the show. There is still a good supply of copies of the preliminary schedule on hand. Any one interested, not in possession of a copy, should make application for one to

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

The First Convention Garden.

All visitors to the Minneapolis convention of the Society of American Florists, and many others who read of this initial commemorative scheme, will wonder how it has been worked out since, and what are the plans for the future. It was a great privilege, some few weeks ago, to see the garden at its best and to find that planting has gone on with a view to making it a still more attractive place where even the passerby will feel compelled to turn in. The large beds are now partly filled with hardy perennial plants and this will be extended in time to include many such subjects as will thrive there, which, while being a thing of beauty will still have great educational value. Additions are being made to the collections of peonies and phlox as occasion comes, and the number of other plants already secured for the garden, many of them uncommon, make this one of the most interesting places in the city of parks and lakes. Fine beds of gladioli, cannas and other summer-flowering plants were still in good form, including the finer decorative grasses, and these may in part always be planted to get the best effects the whole summer. The famous rose garden was still bright with flowers. After a summer of surpassing beauty of bloom it was a surprise to see the health and vigor of the hybrid teas, so far north, and goes to prove that skill and care will overcome great climatic difficulties. A day spent with Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks and founder of the first convention garden, is one to be remembered, and the feeling was ever with us that he may be spared to complete the work already under way, leaving for himself a monument more beautiful and enduring than those of the ancient Greeks and Romans.

E. O. ORPET.

Missouri Botanical Garden Alumni Ass'n.

The first annual meeting of the above association was held in the graduate lecture room of the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, November 19. Following the roll call by the secretary, Dr. George T. Moore delivered an address of welcome, to which Arthur R. Gross responded with a review of the year's work of the association. Interesting papers were read by John Noyes and L. P. Jensen, the former taking for his subject "The Pursuit of Beauty," while the latter's topic was "The Use of Native Material for Ornamental Planting," illustrated by lantern slides. Both papers were followed by animated discussions. In the evening those in attendance at the meeting were guests at the annual banquet provided for under the will of Mr. Shaw.

For Twenty-five years Vaughan's XXX Holly has represented the highest standard for selected, dark foliated, well berried Holly branches in all the territory west of Pittsburgh.

The Vaughan organization instituted the special inspection of this stock at the sources of supply and our present packers are men trained in this service for more than a dozen years.

We have never handled a car of Atlantic Coast rough stock.

Firms envious of the standard created by us yearly imitate our advertising and our descriptions, and each season while claiming "fancy" stock always try to secure some of our trade by cutting the case prices a few cents.

We agree that at the prices these competitors average to pay on their contracts they should be able to cut prices a dollar a case.

Why don't they do so?

We'll tell you why: It is because our customers know that Holly selected, packed and handled as is Vaughan's XXX Brand cannot be sold any cheaper. If therefore these gentlemen were to put the TRUE VALUE on their product the price would give away the real quality.

SPECIALTIES

New Begonia "Melior"
Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati"
Begonia "Gloire de Lorraine"
Pandanus Veitchii
Adiantum Farleyense
Hydrangeas in Specimens
Bird's Nest Fern

CINCINNATI, December, 1915.

For immediate and the Holiday Trade we have the following choice plants to offer:

New Begonia "Mrs. J. A. Peterson;" we take pleasure in introducing for the first time this splendid novelty; the flowers are of a deep cerise, changing to a dark red as the flowers grow older; the foliage is of a dark reddish bronze shading into green. It has been awarded a Silver Medal at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1915; Certificates of merit by New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh Florists' Clubs.

We offer good strong plants full of bloom, 6 inch pots, at $2.00 and $2.50 each.

Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati," Begonia "Melior" (new in 1914). No flowering plants of recent introduction have given better satisfaction, or more flowers for the money; they last longer in bloom than any other class of flowering plants (if properly grown and taken care of). We have a splendid lot in bloom (now ready), full of flowers, strong plants at 25c, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 each.

Cyclamen Persicum Giganteum; this strain is our own personally selected strain and we do not believe it can be had better anywhere. Strong plants, 4 inch, 5 inch, 6 inch and 7 inch pots, at 20c, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 each. Choice plants, fine flowers, full of bloom; let us select your order early.

Pandanus Veitchii; only large plants left; $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 each.

Asplenium Nidus Avis (Bird's Nest Fern); we have a splendid lot of strong 4 inch plants to offer, at 50c each (only size).

Dracaena Massangeana; 5 inch and 6 inch, good value, 75c, $1.00 and $1.50 each.

Adiantum Farleyense, 3 inch, 20c; 4 inch, 50c.

We make a specialty of the above mentioned plants and give them every attention needed; so we feel sure that we can give you entire satisfaction. Let us ship your wants early in December, so as to avoid the rush.

We aim to send out only such plants as we feel sure will give you entire satisfaction.

Yours very truly,

J. A. PETERSON & SONS.

Buffalo.

TRADE UNUSUALLY ACTIVE.

The past two weeks has been one of unusual activity from a floral standpoint. Thanksgiving, owing to the unusual fine weather, was exceptional, not so much for the sale of chrysanthemums, that show effects due entirely to warm weather, but to the sale of other flowers, which one could use in September. Chrysanthemums were plentiful and of the quality expected of the season. Roses were good and equal to all demands, as were carnations. Violets were good, but people do not want them when it is warm, and Buffalo had almost an August day. Carnations were equal to all demands, with quality good. Other flowers, such as are called for, were plentiful. Society held its unusual sway; several receptions and weddings for these days gave several florists extra work.

NOTES.

Newspaper advertisements, encouraging early shopping for Christmas, has got all in a "fury." Consequently all stores want laurel and holly decorations even before the holly has arrived. In place of "evergreens" for the holidays, the stores will have "Eva Brown," which will not enhance the beauty of their stores if placed too early, but if they demand it, the orders must be filled, and the only delay is in getting holly in. Reichert Bros., of Genesee street, have about the largest trade in decorating stock, and they are taxed to their limit to get holly in by December 1 and give satisfaction. Charles Schoenhut, of William street, is one who can laugh at all the others. His work is normal, with his usual trade the same, he does not cater to holly and laurel. "My store work is always good," would be his answer, if questioned. William street is a good street for business.

The week following Thanksgiving was an unusual one for weddings and debutantes. S. A. Anderson was busy with several, as were also W. J. Palmer & Son, and the Wm. Scott Co., the former having one for each day following Thanksgiving. This week is also unusually active.

Genesee street has more stores by far than William street, with a trade that is in close proximity to Main street, which will in time demonstrate the survival of the fittest. Let us hope that all will be there at the reckoning.

Schwert & Berner, C. F. Guenther, C. Forback, C. Christiansen, and all the growers in the vicinity of Buffalo, are optimistic and say our stock will be good, so we all hope.

Stock for Christmas is looking good and all are confident of having fine plants.

Louisville, Ky.

The chrysanthemum season is about over. There was a good sale for the earlier sorts and the varieties that came in about Thanksgiving time. The midseason sold fairly well, but were in excess of the demand and some went to waste. Patty, Golden Wedding, and Well's Light Pink all sold up close, and while Wm. Tutner sold well there was an over supply while they lasted and did not bring the price they did last year. Orchids, lily of the valley and Ward roses for corsages sold well and while there has been some call for violets, they are not really a factor. Sweet peas of good quality are selling fairly well.

NOTES.

Some of the florists are having a discussion in the matter of "cut prices" and "low price sales." Some of the trade hold to the opinion that sales of this class injure the business, many customers not caring to send flowers to friends from an establishment that might from such special sales give the impression that the flowers sent on any occasion were bought at a bargain sale or from one of the "cheap Johnnies."

The F. Walker Co. recently had an order to furnish vases and arrange flowers for a decoration, and instead of sending all vases sent a number of handsome baskets, with liners. After the affair was over the patron took all of the baskets home with him, thinking they were included in the floral presents, but left the vases behind. Some explaining was necessary to get the baskets back again.

The Electrical Show at the Armory caused a demand for southern smilax and plants in the decorations. August Baumer had a booth outside of the electrical display section, which was artistically decorated and proved to be one of the most attractive in the place.

The Celebrated Briarcliff American Beauty Roses and the leading varieties of Tea Roses from the F. R. Pierson Co. and A. Farenwald Ranges as follows:

Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Sunburst, Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, Killarney Queen, Mignon and many others.

The Cottage Gardens Co.'s Carnations, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Matchless, Cottage Maid and other fine new productions.

Kingsley Walker, manager of the Preston street greenhouses and nursery of the F. Walker Co., surprised his friends by getting married Thanksgiving evening to Miss Grace Garnet Funk, a talented and attractive young lady of West Point, Ky.

A number of the local growers have turned their attention to lettuce, tomatoes, etc., between crops in their houses.

Nanz & Neuner Co., Inc., have removed to an attractive new store a few doors from their old location and Manager Weller looks happy and prosperous.

Mrs. M. D. Reimers has an attractive new store with a conservatory attached.

Azaleas have been in bloom here for several weeks.

The Best Red Carnation Is Our New Seedling Belle Washburn.

The winner of the Silver Medal at the last exhibition of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., January 27th and 28th. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower from 3 to 3½ inches, stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx.

This is a seedling from Enchantress and has all the good traits of the Enchantress family—easy to grow and productive. This is one of our own seedlings which we have grown for the past five years. It is the leading red in the Chicago markets.

Price of the rooted cuttings is $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We will bill 500 at the thousand rate price.

Every cutting guaranteed strong and well rooted.

MAMMOTH SUPPLY

Mrs. Chas.

Killarney

FOR CHRISTMAS

Most magnificent stock obtainable anywhere in all grades, Medium, Long and Specials. These are the two best buys in Roses for Christmas, and will please your most discriminating customers. The flowers are unusually rich in color; heads are perfect, and are carried on strong, straight stems, well laden with luxuriant foliage. This stock carried off the honors at the big Chicago Show, November 9-14, 1915, and is unequalled for quality in this or any other market. Place your orders with us and get the pick of the cream at prices that will meet with your approval.

COMPLETE SUPPLY OF OTHER STOCK

Bigger than ever for the holidays. If the glass areas of all our growers were added together, or all their ranges were placed alongside of each other, the size would be surprisingly large and greater than the largest plant in existence.

Write Today for Special Christmas Price List.

Our quotations for Christmas are the most remarkable in years, disregarding the superior quality of our stock. You cannot afford to place your order until you have received our prices. Write for them today. A postal will do.

Chicago Market.

STOCK CLEANS UP WELL EACH DAY.

Business continues to be very good and stock of all kinds is cleaning up nicely each day at satisfactory prices. American Beauty roses especially are in good demand and fancy stock is bringing as high as $5 and $6 per dozen. Roses in general are in good demand and of fine quality, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst, Ophelia, Milady and Richmond. Some fine Killarney and White Killarney are also seen, but clean up at an early hour. Carnations are in better demand than they have been and some very choice stock is obtainable. Chrysanthemums are about done and what few are arriving do not cut much figure in the market. Orchids are still scarce and command good prices. Violets are selling unusually well and the same holds good for sweet peas and lily of the valley. Snapdragons, gardenias, Paper Whites, pansies, calendulas, stevia, callas, mignonette and gladioli are among the offerings, but not in any great supply. Boxwood is in good demand with the prices holding firm. Other greens are plentiful and some especially fine smilax is being offered. Red winter berries are being offered in large quantities and are selling well. Taken all in all, business has been very good since Thanksgiving and stock of all kinds, especially roses, is cleaning up quickly each day. The supply houses are having a brisk season and the outlook for a banner holiday trade is bright. The wholesale plantmen report a good season and expect to clean up what little surplus is left in another week or two. The outlook for a large supply of cut flowers for Christmas is very bright and the prices quoted in this week's issue are the most reasonable in years and if business is at all brisk the market should clean up completely before the rush is over. Everyone would do well to place their orders as early as possible, for the prices quoted are reasonable and are not very likely to be any lower, and may possibly advance. Many orders have been booked the past week and each day new ones arrive and from present indications the Christmas trade this year will be much better than last.

PLANT BASKETS

Our Plant Baskets have been so well received that they are now a very important feature of our Christmas business. Last year we offered only one style in three sizes. This year we have about twenty-five different numbers. All are first-class, both as to style of basket and filling. Nothing but highly-colored, well-grown stock is used, such as Dracaenas in variety, Crotons, Pandanus, Ferns, etc. On account of being filled early and becoming established, they are bound to give you and your customer satisfaction. We cannot recommend them too highly. Many of the baskets and window boxes are in two-tone effect. All baskets have zinc (not tin) liners.

Window box shape, 18 inches long, 6 inches wide, 6 inches deep, $3.50 and $4.00 each.

Window box shape, 12 inches long, 6 inches wide, 6 inches deep, $2.50 and $2.75 each.

Handle baskets in variety, $3.50, $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 each.

CYCLAMEN (30,000)

This has been one of our specialties for over twenty years. This year we grew upwards of 125,000 plants. At this time our stock is better than ever before and sure to be a money-maker for anyone buying now. Plants in all sizes, exceptionally well flowered.

4-inch pots, heavy, $4.50 and $5.00 per 100.

5-inch pots, very heavy, $9.00 and $12.00 per doz.

6-inch pots, very heavy, $12.00, $15.00, $18.00 and $24.00 per doz.

BEGONIA LONSDALE

We have a large stock of this light sport at the same prices as quoted for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This variety is considered far superior to the original type, making a finer shaped plant and holding the flowers much better. The color is a little lighter than the original Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

BEGONIA GLORY OF CINCINNATI

This variety is endorsed by all the leading retail florists. It will hold the flowers much better than the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. We are particularly strong on sizes to be used in baskets and hamper.

4-inch, heavy, $50.00 per 100

5-inch, heavy, 75.00 per 100

6-inch, heavy, $12.00 per doz.

"CRAIG'S CROTONS ARE BEST KNOWN AND KNOWN TO BE BEST"

Special Croton Combinations made up in very attractive birch bark boxes, with handles, $7.50 and $10.00 each.

The Croton, with its highly colored foliage, is indispensable during fall and winter. We have the largest and most complete collection of Crotons in the world, carrying at the present time for Christmas sales over 50,000 plants in over 400 varieties, all of the very highest quality and brilliantly colored.

2 1/2-inch pots, strong plants, $20.00 per 100; $175.00 per 1000.

3-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.

12 and 14-inch tubs, made up beautiful plants, $19.00, $15.00, $20.00 and $25.00.

Every retail store and grower should feature Crotons this fall and winter. We know our stock will please you and your customers.

NEW SEEDLING VARIETIES

Our new Seedling Crotons, some of which we disseminated in June, 1911, are varieties that should be in every grower's and private person's collection. They are far superior to many of the older varieties of Crotons and the types range from narrow to very large leaf. We particularly call your attention to our set of thirteen, named after the "Thirteen Original States," which have won highest honors wherever shown.

4-inch pots, strong plants, $3.00 each; $30.00 per doz.; $200.00 per 100.

6-inch and 7-inch pots, larger plants, $3.50, $4.00 and $5.00 each.

CROTON LEAVES AND SPRAYS

Cut Croton leaves and sprays have been supplied by us in the past few years to some of the leading retail florists, who have featured them in mantel, table and funeral work. They are also especially attractive to use with Chrysanthemums. Cut Crotons will last in a cool place from three to four weeks. We can supply them every day in the year.

Very highly colored sprays at 25c, 35c and 50c. Cut leaves, $3.00 and $5.00 per 100.

When you have orders for funeral or table work out of the ordinary, order "Craig's Cut Crotons."

DRACAENAS

There is no variety of foliage plants as attractive as the highly-colored Dracaena. The small and medium sizes can be used to great advantage in making up the popular Christmas baskets, while the large specimens have always been in great demand for decorative purposes. We are now growing more Dracaenas, in greater variety, than any firm in this country.

DRACAENA LORD WOLSELEY

One of the very finest varieties for Christmas, being bright red in color.

150,000 NEPHROLEPIS (In Variety)

We are the largest growers of Nephrolepis Ferns in the country in the following varieties; in fact, we are the headquarters for them. The demand increases each year, and it is our aim to have every variety of Nephrolepis, in every size, every day in the year.

NEPHROLEPIS

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzei, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzei and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:
 2½-inch pots, strong plants, $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
 4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.
 6-inch pots, strong plants, $50.00 per 100.
 8-inch pots, strong plants, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
 Large specimens, $2.50, $3.00 and $4.00 each.

NEPHROLEPIS TODEAOIDES

London Fern. A good, strong grower and one we think of very highly.
 2½-inch pots.....$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....$20.00 per 100; $180.00 per 1000
 6-inch pots.....$6.00 per doz.
 8-inch pots.....$12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
 9-inch and 10-inch tubs, $24.00, $30.00 and $36.00 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS ELEGANTISSIMA IMPROVED

This variety is a greatly improved Elegantissima and shows a tendency to revert to the Boston. This will prove a valuable addition to the crested varieties.
 2½-inch pots.....$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....$20.00 per 100
 6-inch pots.....$6.00 per doz.
 8-inch pots.....$12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
 Larger plants, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50 each

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

This is an ideal crested Fern, holding the same relation to all other crested varieties that the Scottii holds to the old Boston.
 2½-inch pots.....$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000
 4-in. pots, heavy, $20.00 per 100; $180.00 per 1000
 6-inch pots, heavy, $6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100
 6-inch pots, heavy, $9.00 per doz.; $70.00 per 100
 8-inch three-quarter pots, $12.00 per doz.; $90.00 per 100.
 11-inch tubs.....$24.00 and $30.00 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS ELEGANTISSIMA COMPACTA

A dwarf compact form of Nephrolepis Elegantissima, each plant making an ideal shape.
 2½-inch pots.....$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....$20.00 per 100
 6-inch pots.....$6.00 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS ROBUSTA (New)

Place orders at once for Nephrolepis Robusta. The Silver Medal Fern at the National Flower Show, winning over all competition. We claim this variety to be the finest of all crested Nephrolepis, being exceptionally fine in large sizes. It is the strongest grower of all the Nephrolepis Ferns, never reverts and every plant is symmetrical and suitable in all sizes.
 2½-inch pots, strong plants, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
 4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000.
 6-inch pots, strong plants, $50.00 and $75.00 per 100.
 8-inch Azalea pots, heavy plants, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
 11-inch tubs, heavy plants, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each.

"TEDDY JUNIOR"

A Grand New Dwarf Fern. The best fern of its type.
 Fine, young plants from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.
 4-inch pots, heavy, $20.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000.
 6-inch pots, heavy.....$50.00 per 100
 6-inch pots, very heavy.....75.00 per 100
 8-inch pots, very heavy.....$15.00 per doz.
 11-inch tubs.....$2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each

NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII

Our stock is in superb condition.
 2½-inch pots.....$5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....$20.00 per 100; $180.00 per 1000
 6-inch pots.....$6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100
 6-inch pots, heavy, 9.00 per doz.; 70.00 per 100
 8-inch three-quarter pots, $12.00 per doz.; $90.00 per 1000.
 10-inch three-quarter pots.....$18.00 per doz.
 11-inch tubs.....$2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each

NEPHROLEPIS SMITHII

The greatly improved Amerpoblii. It is a compact form much finer than Amerpoblii and does not break down in the center. The fronds are carried on wiry stems. This variety will have a wonderful sale up to a 6-inch pot, being particularly showy for basket work.
 2½-inch pots.....$8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....$25.00 per 100
 6-inch pots.....$ 6.00 and $ 9.00 per doz.
 8-inch pots.....12.00 and 15.00 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS TUBEROSA

PLUMOSA

This beautiful fern is quite distinct from all of the other varieties of the Boston Fern, inasmuch as it has been raised from the Japan species Nephrolepis Tuberosa, which type is much harder than the Exaltata. The fronds are long and narrow, the pinnales beautiful plumose, which are of light color, giving the fronds a beautiful effect on account of the two distinct shades, as well as its graceful waviness, and will be found a great and distinct addition to collection ferns.
 2½-inch pots....$10.00 per 100; $ 90.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....25.00 per 100; 225.00 per 1000
 6-inch pots.....$50.00 per 100

NEPHROLEPIS BOSTONIENSIS

Wm. K. Harris

The finest variety for large plants, being a great improvement over the old Boston.
 2½-inch pots.....$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....$20.00 per 100; $180.00 per 1000
 6-inch pots.....$6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100
 6-inch pots, heavy, 9.00 per doz.; 70.00 per 100
 8-inch pots.....$12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
 11-inch tubs.....$2.00, $2.50 and $4.00 each

NEPHROLEPIS BOSTONIENSIS HARRISII

A dwarf type of the Nephrolepis Harrisii and excellent in all sizes from 4-inch plants up.
 2½-inch pots.....$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000
 4-inch pots.....$20.00 per 100; $180.00 per 1000
 6-inch pots.....$6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100
 7-inch pots, heavy, 9.00 per doz.; 70.00 per 100
 8-inch pots.....$12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
 11-inch tubs.....$2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each

ADIANTUM HYBRIDUM

The best variety for either a pot plant or for cut fronds.
 3-inch pots, heavy, $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
 6-inch pots, heavy, $6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100
 8-inch pots.....$12.00 per doz.; 90.00 per 100
 11-inch tubs.....$24.00 per doz.

Chicago Notes.

Philip C. Schupp reports business as very good at J. A. Budlong's store, with a brisk demand for roses. His firm is cutting a fine supply of Sunburst, Richmond, Killarney Brilliant and American Beauty roses, and it is surprising how well they clean up, for there is no surplus when the day's sales are over. The outlook for their Christmas supply is bright, and the Richmond crop promises to be unusually large this season.

Felix Reichling entertained Peter Reinberg's store force at dinner November 5 after an inspection of the firm's greenhouses, and it is needless to add that everyone had a most enjoyable time, for Mrs. Reichling is some cook. Everything at the greenhouses is in splendid condition under the able supervision of Emil Reichling; the crops of Richmond and American Beauty roses will be the largest in years.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, visited the greenhouses of several of the firm's growers this week, and is well pleased with the outlook for a large supply of stock for Christmas, especially as far as roses and carnations are concerned. Fred Ottenbacher, who looks after the roses at the houses, is nursing a boil on his neck which he figures that he could get along without just as well as not.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are enjoying a brisk shipping as well as local trade, and Mr. Pyfer is pleased with the outlook for Christmas; and while he expects that stock in general will be plentiful, he is of the opinion that carnations will clean up quickly and will be a little on the short side instead of plentiful, as some are inclined to believe.

The John Kruchten Co. has installed a switchboard and will be better equipped than ever to handle all incoming telephone calls. This firm will be strong on both cut flowers and plants for the holidays and are looking forward to the best Christmas in the history of the firm.

A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., is attending the Minneapolis flower show this week.

Wietor Bros.' crops were never in better condition at this time of the year than they are now, which means that they have a large supply of stock for the holidays. The American Beauty roses especially are in fine condition, and the same hold good for Richmond, Sunburst, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Killarney and Killarney Brilliant. White Killarney will be in good crop also, and they should be cutting a steady supply well into January. The carnations are just right and there will be heavy cuts of Victory, Washington, Champion, Bonfire, Estell, Ward, Enchantress, White Enchantress, Philadelphia, White Wonder, Matchless and Rosette. The latter especially attract much attention, for they are unusually fine and should bring good prices. N. J. Wietor is well pleased with the outlook for a banner supply for Christmas, and he has every reason to be, for they will have plenty of stock compared with former years, and the indications are that business is going to be good.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association will spend its first Christmas in its new home in the Le Moyne building, where they are better equipped to handle the ever-increasing business. Manager Klingsporn is well pleased with the change of location, which has proven to be quite an asset as far as their city trade is concerned.

Erne & Klingel are handling large quantities of choice smilax and have built up quite a trade on this one item, not to mention the other stock. Mr. Erne does not think that carnations will be any too plentiful for Christmas, even though his growers report good crops.

Hoerber Bros. are pleasing their customers with a fancy grade of Mrs. Chas. Russell and Richmond roses, and the outlook for good crop of roses in general for Christmas is very bright.

Bassett & Washburn are booking a large number of orders for rooted cuttings of their new seedling carnation, Belle Washburn, and new ones are continually arriving. Many growers have visited their greenhouses for the purpose of seeing this variety growing in the houses, and in nearly every instance have left an order. C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens Co., Inc., Queens, N. Y., was the guest of Mr. Washburn at Hinsdale, December 3, and left the following day for a visit at New Orleans, La.

Victor Young & Company will open a new store at 1239 North Clark street, Saturday, December 11. Buchbinder Bros. are supplying the entire set of fixtures, including the refrigerator, and when everything is completed the store will present a most inviting appearance.

A. L. Vaughan, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., has returned from a business trip to St. Louis, Mo., and is now busy making preparations to handle a large Christmas business. His growers advise him that stock will be plentiful, especially roses and carnations.

Percy Jones received another large shipment of boxwood this week and will have more than enough to supply his many customers with during the holidays. Green goods are a specialty at this house, and their line is complete in every respect.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is gradually building up a fine shipping business as well as a splendid local trade. This firm will have a complete line of stocks to offer for Christmas, and the outlook for a good holiday business never was more encouraging.

Joseph Ziska & Sons have a good supply of statice on hand, but are limiting their customers to a certain amount so that they can accommodate as many as possible.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has had a very good call for plants for the holidays, and August Poehlmann is confident that everything will clean up before the rush is over. Cyclamen, begonias and azaleas especially are selling quickly, and they are already out of certain sizes. The outlook for a large crop of cut flowers for Christmas is very bright, with heavy cuts of roses and carnations in sight. This firm will grow their own rubber plants in the future, and it would not be at all surprising if several houses were added to the plant department in the near future, for they are crowded for room and could use more space to good advantage.

The E. C. Amling Co. is showing a fancy grade of Mrs. Chas. Russell and Killarney Brilliant roses, which will be their leader for Christmas, according to John Michelsen, who visited the greenhouse of Meyer & Dramm and French & Salm this week. Meyer & Dramm grow Killarney Brilliant on a large scale, and French & Salm's entire range is devoted exclusively to Mrs. Chas. Russell roses.

D. S. Musser, of Miller & Musser, was struck in the right eye with a small piece of steel December 4, and for a time it was feared that he would lose his eye. An operation was immediately performed and the attending physician is now in hopes that all danger from that source is over and expects to remove the bandage in a few days.

The Fleischman Floral Co.'s store was closed November 7 owing to the death of the proprietor's mother, Mrs. Frances Rubel.

E. W. Siebrecht, manager of the Rosery, 6972 North Clark street, reports business as good and is making preparations to handle what he has every reason to believe will be a large Christmas business.

Frank Oechslin reports a brisk demand for plants for the holidays and expects to clean up in all lines before the rush is over. Azaleas are plentiful with him but are selling unusually well.

Dominick E. Freres is handling a fine grade of roses, particularly Sunburst and Ophelia, and is going to make a strong bid for the out-of-town business in the future.

Bernard J. Schmierer, 849 Irving Park boulevard, says that a $70,000 hospital will be built directly across the street from his store, which should help business some.

E. F. Winterson calls attention to the splendid quality of boxwood this year at the E. F. Winterson Co.'s store, which is in brisk demand, with prices holding firm.

J. Swenson, formerly with the George Witthold Co., has accepted a position with Ronsley, the Westminster building florist.

Sullivan Bros., 871 East Sixty-third street, have opened another store at Ninety-second street and Commercial avenue.

M. C. Gunterberg says that violets are in unusually good demand and are cleaning up nicely each day at good prices.

Louis Eiseman, formerly with the Bohannon Floral Co., is the latest addition to the Alpha Floral Co.'s store force.

The Atlas Floral Co. has a very beautiful window display at its East Randolph street store this week.

Mrs. J. W. Ensweiler, 5329 South Morgan street, has returned from a pleasant visit in the east.

Vaughan's Seed Store is moving several carloads of fancy holly this week.

Visitors: Frank Farney, representing M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; E. Juerjens, Peoria; Samuel Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros. Co., New York; Hugo Rudolph, Manitowoc, Wis.; Clarence Watson, with Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. Roy Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.

MARKET BARE FOLLOWING COLD SNAP.

There has been the usual lull after the holiday, Monday and Tuesday being very quiet. Trade picked up later in the week, however, and this demand, together with a shortening of the supply due to the cold weather, swept the market bare and clean, so that on Saturday there was nothing left to carry over. Stock in all lines continues to improve. Roses are noticeably better; splendid Russell, Hadley and Ophelia are offered and sell readily at increased prices. American Beauties are fine and meeting with a good demand at 20 to 30 per cent advance in price. There are still quite a quantity of chrysanthemums about, the Chadwicks and Nonan, with good Eaton are the principal sorts. Carnations are nearly up to their winter standard, some very good stock being seen. Lily of the valley has been scarce. Cattle-vas are a trifle more plentiful, but nothing worth having is quoted at less than 75 cents. The calendula has jumped into popularity; quite large quantities are coming in and find a good demand. They are seen in several shades of yellow and bright orange. There are plenty of violets, but few gardenias.

NOTES.

At the rate the orchid sweet peas so far sent in are improving, there should be an abundant supply of choice stock for the holidays; they may be said to be out of season, but so is lily of the valley, yet it is in demand the year round and has made a market for itself. This, we believe, will be the case with the sweet peas, which will soon be called a flower for all the year around.

The stores seem to be featuring the low bowls or rose floats; they are seen in a number of colors from clear glass and white to greens and light and dark lavender and blue. Pierced Japanna-like holders in colors to match the varying shades of the bowls are sold with them. Individual flower vases are also given attention, meeting with much favor by the buying public.

A trip to the Robert Craig Co.'s Norwood establishment cannot fail to reward the visitor at this time. Crotons, dracaenas and other foliage plants are seen here in great variety, all splendidly colored. Cyclamens, the best ever seen in this city, together with flowering begonias, which are a mass of color, are all wonderfully perfect.

GOOD CHRISTMAS BUSINESS IN SIGHT.

The past week has been quiet in the cut-flower trade. There has been a falling off in the supply of stock, but no scarcity. The good Thanksgiving business has encouraged everybody in the trade, particularly the retailers, to anticipate a good Christmas. If the volume of business reaching the supply men at present is an indication, there are good times ahead, for they are all very busy. There are indications that there will be a fair supply of Christmas stock. Orchids and gardenias seem to be a little more plentiful and the crops will doubtless be in for Christmas, and with reasonably fair weather, there is likely to be an ample supply of roses, carnations and violets. The plant trade, as in late years, will loom large; azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens and heathers will be in good flower.

December 6.—There is no great surplus of stock, arrivals being rather light, but enough to supply the demand. Lily of the valley is much more plentiful and $3 per 100 is about the top price. As will be seen from our import notes, in another column, pips have been arriving quite freely from Denmark. Special Hoosier Beauty and Hadley roses are bringing $15 per 100. There is little change in other roses.

NOTES.

On the evening of December 4, Chas. Schenck, of Traendly & Schenck, on the invitation of Edward Sceery for the Paterson, N. J., Rotary Club, attended a demonstration of the trans-continental service of the American Telegraph and Telephone Co. It took place in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and about 400 of the leading citizens of Paterson were present. There was connection with San Francisco, as the exposition closed on that day, and Pres. Wilson was heard at Paterson as well as San Francisco. Judge Wm. P. Lawler, of the California supreme court, who is a personal friend of Edward Sceery, talked to Paterson and Alma Gluck sang from San Francisco. There were speeches and music by leading people of Paterson and the affair was a great success. Frank Traendly was at the store December 6 and now promises to be a regular fellow.

The Nippon Garden, 259 Fifth avenue, arranged a fine Japanese landscape decoration, December 1, at the Lotus Club, for a dinner given by Dr. Jokichi Takamine, in honor of Baron Ei-ichi Shibusawas, the leading financier of Japan, who is visiting this country. He is spoken of as the "J. P. Morgan of Japan." The Baron is evidently a notable, as such men as Seth Low, J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Judge E. H. Gary and Jacob H. Schiff attended the dinner. The reproduction was made unusually real by the generous use of pine and cedar trees standing along the banks of sparkling streams where goldfish swam. There were bridges over the little streams and graveled walks beneath the boughs of the small trees. The baron said the sight of Fujiyama made him feel at home. S. Nishijima, of the Nippon Garden, was the clever decorator.

Peter Wagner of Troy avenue, Brooklyn, has a great stock of plants for Christmas. Within the past year he has greatly enlarged his range and has been very successful with plants. He makes a specialty of ferns and has many varieties, Boston, Scotti, Wagneri, Elegantissima furcata compacta, Scholzei, Harrisii and Magnifica being noteworthy. His dracenas, palms, pandanus and other plants are also very fine. Peter Rehm, formerly salesman for the John Scott range, is now with Mr. Wagner.

THE MONTREAL FLORAL EXCHANGE, Ltd.

140 Manfield Street - Montreal

The Wholesale Commission House of Canada, Featuring the Products of its Best Growers

Charles H. Brown, 2366 Broadway, has in his large show window one of the finest cibotium ferns we have ever seen. Some of the stems are 10 to 12 feet in length and it about fills the window. Newcomers in that section of the city make it a landmark, when they get to the "big fern" they know where they are. In the six years it has been in the store it has been cared for by Anthony Pomper, one of Mr. Brown's designers, who is a graduate of an Austrian horticultural school.

The attention of visitors to the wholesale district is called to the store of H. E. Froment, 148 West 28th street. It is the last wholesale store in the row, so to speak, but by no means the least. With a great stock of all the best varieties of roses from the Coddington range he is well equipped to serve the retail trade. He also handles a variety of other stock and employs an efficient force of salesmen.

The Brooklyn Cut Flower Market, Inc., which is managed by Joseph Levy, have in addition to their store at 356 Fulton street, opened another at 408 Fulton street, in the centre of the department store district, and will be well stocked with cut flowers and other seasonable goods for the Christmas trade. Mr. Levy is a very active man and this shows that his business is rapidly increasing.

Writing of the flowers of his time—1626—Lawson wrote: "The violet, nothing behind the best for smelling sweetly, and a thousand more will provoke your content." We would be sorry to believe that after nearly 300 years of cultivation, the violet is deteriorating, but Lawson, if he were alive today, could not write that about some that are offered for sale in this district.

Philip F. Kessler, of the Cut Flower Exchange, is receiving very fine carnations of the varieties Mrs. Ward and Enchantress from Wm. W. Matthews, Great Neck, L. I. Mr. Kessler, who is chairman of the house committee of the club, advises us that at the next meeting he will serve roast beef and young pig that will be finer than possum.

We have recently noticed at the store of George C. Siebrecht, 109 West 28th street, very fine gardenias from the range of Frank J. Dolansky, Lynn, Mass. We understand he will have a good supply for the Christmas trade. He is also strong on lily of the valley and other good stock.

The flower department of the great Wanamaker stores has recently been much improved and enlarged and a fine new icebox installed. John Solner, who for a number of years was with Esch, the Florist, 3279 Third avenue,

J. Grulich & Son, of Hoboken, N. J., have secured the concession for the sale of flowers in the department store of Lord & Taylor, Fifth avenue and 38th street. W. R. Francis, formerly with F. Fleischman, Inc., is in charge.

Wm. B. Nugent, who for many years has been in the retail business in this city, but has not had a store for the past year, has opened a flower shop on Lexington avenue, between 73d and 74th streets.

We have recently noted at the range of G. Messeberg, Flatbush, Brooklyn, a fine stock of carnations, callas and also many pot plants. He has just finished cutting a large stock of chrysanthemums.

Joseph A. Millang, of the New York Cut Flower Co., will have his usual large supply of roses from the Pierson ranges and carnations from the Cottage Gardens Co., for Christmas.

Badgley & Bishop, Inc., are now handling a fine line of roses, lilies and lily of the valley. W. G. Badgley, who underwent an operation some time ago, has completely recovered.

At the new store of E. J. Hession, Madison avenue and 76th street, business is very active. The greenhouses in the rear are now well stocked with a fine variety of plants.
 A new retail store has been opened at 933 Park avenue near 81st street by two young Greek florists. This is a good locality and they are likely to secure business.
 The House of Ferns, 41 West 28th street, is now keeping up a good stock of Florida asparagus and Manager Rankin reports that business is improving.
 M. Frank & Sons, 1361 Third avenue, stated that they had good Thanksgiving business and expect still better Christmas business, and are preparing for it.
 Robert Craig, Jr., of Philadelphia, was in this city December 1. He said that his house was very strong on "Craig Quality Plants" for Christmas.

IT IS reported that fertilizer concerns are co-operating.

ALBERT DICKINSON with Mrs. Dickinson is spending the winter at Orange City, Fla.

SEEDS grown in California for German dealers are reported as having gone forward.

THE first of the new season's calendars comes from Geo. R. Pedrick & Son, Pedricktown, N. J.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 8, were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.75 per 100 pounds.

CHINESE narcissus, Paper Whites and Von Sions have been scarce items the past few weeks and are now out of the market.

A. J. BROWN, of Grand Rapids, Mich., celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday anniversary December 5, but says he feels only forty-five.

CALIFORNIA seed growers report three inches of rain during the past week and admit the onion outlook is now less gloomy.

THE United States Department of Agriculture is asking for the congressional seed distribution bids, to be opened January 11, 1916, at two p. m.

ONION SET growers at Chicago say they will not pay $1.50 per pound for onion seed next spring. Dealers say they will pay that or more, or go without.

ST. REMY, FRANCE, November 20.—There is no further news as to the dates of trial of seed growers in prison for sales of seeds contrary to war regulations.

PORTSMOUTH, VA.—Vernon A. Brooks is president and W. J. Guille, secretary of the Hubert Bulb Co., which has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000.

ENKUIZEN, HOLLAND.—Sluis & Groot have changed their business to a limited liability company under the style of Sluis & Groot's, dating from November 16.

KELWAY & SON, Langport, Somerset, Eng., who employ about 130 people, had 60 men of military age in their service at the outbreak of the war, 45 of whom are now on military duty.

CINCINNATI, O.—J. Chas. McCullough returned last week from a southern fishing and hunting trip, landing two six-pound tarpon in Florida and a fair share of the Virginia black mallards.

VISITED CHICAGO: Edward Dungan, of the Wm. Henry Maule Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; J. W. Edmundson, representing the California Seed Growers' Assn., San Jose, Calif.; Chas. R. Kimberlin, of the Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, Calif.

EUGENE SCHAETTEL, representative of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, who has been calling on the American trade, on December 6 received the sad news of the death of his mother. Mr. Schaettel sails for home December 11.

CHRISTMAS GREENS.—At Chicago holiday of inferior grade is already offered by commission houses at low prices. Bulk bouquet green is practically sold out, a few crates being sold, December 7, at $10. Boxwood and mistletoe are in the market.

THE late W. Atlee Burpee was a most successful advertiser, and his slogan of later years, "Burpee's Seeds Grow," has become familiar throughout the horticultural world. While his efforts during the past quarter century mainly centered on garden flowers and vegetables, the older generation of seedsmen will recall that Welcome Oats was the principal subject of his highly effective advertising campaign in the agricultural press during the early eighties.

The Burpee Estate.

By the will of the late W. Atlee Burpee, who died at Fordhook farm, November 26, an estate of from $500,000 to $700,000 was disposed of. The figures given are approximate. The will, executed May 27, 1913, names as executors the testator's wife, Mrs. Blanche Simons Burpee; his brother-in-law, Alexander Buchanan Scott; ex-Judge Harman Yerkes, of Doylestown, and David Burpee, his oldest son. It is plainly the intention of Mr. Burpee, as expressed in the will, that the seed business he established and conducted so successfully should be continued by his sons, David Burpee and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr. One-half interest in the business is left to the sons, one-third to Mrs. Burpee, one-sixth to the testator's sister, Mrs. Sarah Coburn Burpee Scott, and, until the estate is settled by the executors, one-sixth of the profits from the business is to go to Howard M. Earl, who has been Mr. Burpee's business manager for many years. The Burpee property at Fifth and York streets, Philadelphia, containing the seed establishment, is given to David Burpee and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr. Fordhook Farm, Doylestown, and Floradale, in the Lompoc, California, are bequeathed to David Burpee. Sunnybrook Farm, near Swedesboro, N. J., goes to W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., but Mrs. Burpee retains a one-third life right in all these properties in lieu of dower. Mrs. Burpee is bequeathed all the personal effects and household articles of her husband and $5,000 immediately. Her one-third interest in the seed business must remain invested there unless she should remarry, when it may be withdrawn if she so desires.

Other bequests to relatives are as follows: Belinda Beatrice Kennedy, a cousin of Mrs. Burpee, $10,000 in trust; Helen Burpee, L. Kate Burpee and Charles L. Atlee, cousins, $5,000 each. Full power to will the principal sums is given in these bequests.

Government Bulbs.

The greatest year's planting ever known at the government bulbs farm in Bellingham, Wash., has just been completed by Henry Juenemann, superintendent. Altogether more than 4,000,000 bulbs have been placed in the ground since planting began in September, and about an acre more has been utilized than last year. The limit of the garden's planting capacity has been reached and it would be impossible to plant as many bulbs as has been done this fall had they not been placed closer together than heretofore. This year's planting is about 1,500,000 bulbs greater than that of 1914, and approximately consists of the following: tulips, 2,097,000; hyacinths, 1,226,000; narcissi, 667,000; crocuses, 90,000; scillas, 92,000; total, 4,172,000. This is the last complete planting that can be made with the expectation of getting a full crop from all the bulbs because the lease on the farm will expire before all of another year's planting would mature or could be harvested. As yet nothing has been done by the government definitely determining where the new gardens will be located, so far as is known in Bellingham, but hope is entertained by local business men that the favorable impression made upon Dr. David Fairchild, chief of the division of foreign plant introduction, when he visited Bellingham, will bear fruit in persuading him to favor their retention in Whatcom county, Washington, where at least one good site has been offered the government.

National Potato Growers' Association.

The annual convention of the National Potato Growers' Association, in conjunction with the Michigan State Potato Growers' Association and an attendance of a number of prominent members of the Wisconsin Potato Growers' Association, opened at Grand Rapids, Mich., December 1, the meeting continuing three days. Standardization was the keynote of the addresses and discussions, among the speakers being J. W. Hicks, president of the Wisconsin association; A. L. Hopkins, head of the Michigan organization; W. A. Martin, president of the national association; Dr. H. B. Wheeler, of Boston, Mass.; Carl Schurz Vrooman, assistant secretary of the United States department of agriculture; Dr. W. A. Orton, Washington, D. C.; E. R. Smith, president of the New York State Potato Growers' Association.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Forty Years of Burpee Service

FOR forty years we have aimed to render faithful service. For forty years we have tried to make each year's service more nearly ideal. This untiring effort has built for us, not only the world's largest mail order seed business, but a world wide reputation for efficient service and undisputed leadership.

More opportune than anything we ourselves may say about Burpee Quality Seeds are the many remarkable things our thousands of customers and friends have said and continue to say about them. These customers return to us year after year, not because seeds cannot be found elsewhere, but because of our superior quality and service.

The House of Burpee

Has introduced more distinct new varieties of vegetable and flower seeds that are now in general cultivation than have any three other American firms, but never have we catalogued any one of these varieties until it had passed all the exacting requirement of the Burpee-Standard. This Burpee-Standard is maintained by rigid tests at Fordhook Farms, America's largest and most complete trial grounds. These tests are made each year for the purpose of strengthening this Bond of Confidence between our customers and ourselves.

The Fortieth Anniversary Edition of Burpee's Annual

The Leading American Seed Catalog is unlike any other. The front cover illustrates the greatest novelty in Sweet Peas, "Fiery Cross," and the back cover the two famous Burpee Bantams, Golden Bantam Corn and Blue Bantam Peas. It is a safe guide to success, and of real value to every one who plants seeds either for pleasure or profit. Florists and Market Growers should have our Blue List, the Market Growers' Handbook. This is the wholesale price list for planters. Write for these catalogs today. A post card will bring them.

Onions for Winter.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Having a demand for green bunch onions during winter would you give advice as to variety, temperature, etc.? We raised several acres of Egyptian onion the past summer, also a quantity of other small onions. Our greenhouses are kept at carnation and lettuce temperatures. We also have a rhubarb forcing house without light. Is it practicable to dig Egyptian onion up in the fall to force through the winter as wanted and how should they be stored?

Ontario, Canada. ONTARIO.

When there is a good demand at fair prices, green bunch onions can be made quite a valuable crop in winter. A great deal depends upon the labor available, as the trimming, bunching and washing for market is a big item. It takes painstaking labor to put up nice green onions. On the other hand, the crop hardly knows a set-back, as there is practically no insect or disease to bother with, and temperatures are not as exacting as with many other crops. As to varieties, the Egyptian Winter is probably the best for northern localities, and it is best in the second year; then the plants have stooled out and made nice clumps. They should have clean cultivation in summer and a mulch of old manure, invaluable to lengthen the white part and partly bleach the onions. We have had good results by digging before hard winter and packing them upright in Cummer basket crates. These were placed in deep cold frames, sash put on, and covered lightly with litter or corn stalks. To force, simply bring in a lot every week and plant in the greenhouse; lettuce or carnation temperature will do. To get nice onions they need the full light, and under benches will not do. Under benches they come long and soft and crooked. When growth is under way nitrate of soda in water is a big help and also improves quality. We have also used cold storage rooms at 32° and piled the crates from floor to ceiling to hold them. This year there should be no trouble to obtain large sprouted onions from dealers and commission men and these will also make excellent green onions under glass. The heaviest demand always comes forward in spring, say a few weeks before the outside crop comes in. At that time of the year they force rapidly and space can be turned over several times.

MARKETMAN.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

A meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held Saturday, December 4. The special committee on the award of the George Robert White medal of honor for the year 1915 reported the name of Ernest Henry Wilson. The committee stated that Mr. Wilson was worthy of this award for no one in recent years had done more for the advancement of horticulture than he, for he had introduced to cultivation a greater number of desirable garden plants than had ever before been accomplished by any one man. It was voted, with acclamation, to award the George Robert White medal of honor for the year 1915 to Ernest Henry Wilson.

The following standing committees of the society for the ensuing year were appointed:

Finance—Walter Hunnewell, chairman; Arthur F. Eastabrook, Stephen M. Weld.

Membership—R. M. Saltonstall, chairman; Thomas Allen, Thomas Roland.

Prizes and exhibitions—James Wheeler, chairman; John K. M. L. Farquhar, Duncan Finlayson, T. D. Hatfield, A. H. Wingett.

Plants and flowers—William Anderson, chairman; Arthur H. Fewkes, S. J. Goddard, Donald McKenzie, William Sim.

Fruits—Edward B. Wilder, chairman; William Downs, Ralph W. Rees.

Vegetables—John L. Smith, chairman; Henry M. Howard, William C. Rust.

Gardens—Richard M. Saltonstall, chairman; David R. Craig, Jackson T. Dawson, William Nicholson, Charles Sander.

Library—Charles S. Sargent, chairman; Ernest B. Dane, Nathan T. Kidder.

Lectures—Wilfrid Wheeler, chairman; John K. M. L. Farquhar, F. C. Sears, Fred A. Wilson.

Children's gardens—Henry S. Adams, chairman; Wm. N. Craig, Dr. Harris Kennedy, Mrs. W. Rodman Peabody, Miss Margaret A. Rand.

Schwab Saves Trees.

Charles M. Schwab is having his old homestead, "Immergrun," near Loretto, Pa., moved over tops of trees because he did not wish to have trees cut down nor house destroyed. He recently decided to build a $1,000,000 summer residence on site of old home. "I would not think of cutting down those trees," said Mr. Schwab. "All you have to do," he told his engineers, "is to jack the house over the trees."

Perennials for Spring Sales.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please give me some suggestions about how best to keep hardy perennials, etc., through the winter for early spring sales, such as phlox, gypsophila, Shasta daisy, achillea, hollyhock, sweet william, etc. If I pot them up this fall and place them in cold frames would the pots stand the freezing, or would it be preferable to place them down in the roothouse through the winter? I would like to have same in good condition for early spring sales. If the plants are left in the ground through the winter I can not take them up before the middle of April and would not be able to get them into good condition for planting time. A. P. Manitoba.

By banking up around frames with fresh horse manure and firming down in early winter the frost will not cause serious trouble in getting out perennials on mild days in early spring. If the roothouse is kept well ventilated some of those mentioned will keep in good condition. However, they will need close attention either in frames or roothouse not to get too wet, too dry nor too warm. I believe a shaded greenhouse kept near freezing is the best place to store perennials so as to get them out in good condition in early spring. K.

Chinese Trees Do Well In Eastern No. Am.

That the climate of eastern China is similar to that of eastern North America seems to be the reason for the success which has attended the introduction of many Chinese plants into this country; at least this is the opinion of the specialists in the United States department of agriculture's office of foreign seed and plant introduction. In a new publication of this office which lists seeds and plants imported during the fall of 1912 a definite report is given on the growth of 79 different importations from China, most of which may be termed successful. Plant introductions from foreign countries are distributed by the office until sufficient time has elapsed to give some indication of their possibilities in this country.

A maple which grows 70 feet high, whose leaves turn a golden yellow in autumn, is one of the ornamental trees introduced from China of which something may be expected. A Chinese elm particularly adapted for dry sections for wind-break purposes has proven very satisfactory, and will be more generally introduced. A pine tree and a Chinese butternut also have grown well here. It is hoped that these all may prove as ornamental and useful as the ginkgo tree (also known as the maiden-hair fern tree), which has grown so well along a number of the streets of our capital.

A peach which bears an edible fruit containing a smooth stone (something quite unknown heretofore among peaches), has been brought from China, and may be used to improve our commercial peach. A tree that grows in roadside thickets in parts of China bears a fine variety of quince, golden on one side and reddish on the other. This also has done well in its new environment. So have a new hazelnut bush bearing large nuts, and three new varieties of holly.

The adaptability of the Chinese wood-oil tree for cultivation in northern Florida seems to have been proven by recent experiments. A tree at Tallahassee, Florida, bore two bushels of the fruit last season. In addition to being an economically important tree, it is a decidedly ornamental one. It bears clusters of white flowers with reddish-yellow centers, and in full bloom resembles a catalpa.

Chinese plants are not the only ones that have been doing well in the department of agriculture's garden for foreign plants. Others from the West Indies, Australia, Spain, South America, Hawaii and the Philippines are showing interesting possibilities. Interested experimenters may receive further information about these trees and plants by addressing the office of Foreign Plant and Seed Introduction, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Worcester County Hort. Society.

The annual meeting of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall, Worcester, December 1. The reports of the retiring officers showed that the society is in a prosperous condition. During the past year 17 members have died and 13 new members have been enrolled, making the membership total 650. During the year, $4,338 was expended for exhibitions and meetings. Appropriations of $5,500 for the coming year were made.

Edward W. Breed, Clinton, and Leonard C. Midgley, Worcester, who have been respectively president and secretary of the society for the last five years, declined re-election. For their services during this period they were given a sincere vote of thanks. The following officers were elected: Arthur E. Hartshorn, president; Charles Greenwood, Leonard C. Midgley and F. H. Chamberlain, vice-presidents; Herbert R. Kinney, secretary; Burt W. Greenwood, treasurer; Miss Lucy M. Coulson, librarian. Fifteen trustees were also appointed.

FOLEY GREENHOUSES

We have the ideal construction in any type of house, Iron Frame, Semi-Iron Frame or Wood.

During the past year it has been our pleasure to furnish houses for many prominent and successful growers throughout the country—men who know real value when they see it.

If you want it right, have it done the "Foley Way." - We know how.

The Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co.
3100 S. Spaulding Ave., CHICAGO

Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Winter weather has followed Thanksgiving and trade is excellent. Chrysanthemums are practically over, most of them having been cleaned up at Thanksgiving. Roses are more plentiful, of good quality, and sell readily, especially in short and medium lengths. Shawyers are the best sellers in the pink varieties and command good prices. Carnations in pink and white are plentiful, but the reds are scarce, as are sweet peas. Violets are plentiful and of good size and bring $2 per 100. There is a good call for flowering plants and a splendid variety to choose from. A few azaleas are in and Lorraine begonias, primroses, Jerusalem cherries and cyclamens are to be seen. Trade during the past week was mostly in funeral work, augmented by a few weddings and the demand for flowers for social events.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. executed a handsome casket cover of Shawyer roses and lily of the valley, together with several large magnolia wreaths with clusters of Richmond roses for the funeral of a prominent business man of this city, which occasioned a demand for a quantity of flowers.

Miss Rhoda Doswell is displaying some handsome poinsettia plants at the Doswell Floral Co.'s branch on South Calhoun street. Many novelties for Christmas in the way of baskets, wreaths, etc., are also effectively displayed here.

The Bradley Flower Shop, in the Jefferson theater building has discontinued business and is offering the fixtures for sale.

An improved "species" in florists' hose—

Just as you are perfecting your colors, or are growing larger blooms, so have we been at work improving florists' hose. The new Goodrich "species" far outwears ordinary hose—it is cheaper in the end because it lasts for months longer.

"GREENHOUSE"
HOSE

Extra thick, extra heavy cover. Withstands wear from dragging over rough floors, around posts, doors, etc. "Tough as Whit Leather."

Withstands kinks, bends, twists. Constructed so that it springs back into shape when released. Doesn't leak, crack, split apart or break like other hose.

Strong, durable inner tube. Lasts a long time. Withstands high pressure if necessary.

Flexible, easy to handle. Resists "snarling"—saves time.

Built by the world's largest rubber factory—the makers of such famous products as Goodrich Safety Tread Tires, Goodrich Silvertown Tires, etc.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOLIDAY TRADE.

Selling the Stock.

The plants and flowers for the holiday sales have been raised or procured and upon their being properly sold and delivered depends the success of all the labor which has been expended. Every dealer during the three days before Christmas will do as much business as is ordinarily done in a month. It is therefore necessary that this should be done in a systematic manner in order that the business may be successful. Poor business methods at this time will often result in the loss of some steady customers or prospective business on account of the dissatisfaction that will result unless the smallest details are looked after. The question of help is one of the first matters. It may be possible in some places to procure extra efficient help, but in the majority of cases the entire selling will fall upon the regular force. Where extra help is employed, every plant and other article possible should have a tag with the price plainly marked, so that the salesman can immediately tell the customers the price, or much time will be lost by running back and forth and interrupting the proprietor with questions regarding the value. The booking and filing of orders must be strictly and accurately attended to. The handling of stock should receive the most careful attention, and the manner of placing it before the customers is often the making or losing of a sale. Many salesmen will complete the sale of a plant by properly showing it to the customers. There is always a better side to a plant and the salesman who knows how will always keep this side toward the customer's view, and a plant always looks larger when placed alone, so that taking it from the bench or collection and setting by itself will show it off much more advantageously. When a plant is sold it should be immediately marked and set aside, for it is poor business to allow the customer to think that he will not get the plant he has bought or that the same plant may be sold to another. The proprietor must keep a watchful eye all the time upon the salesmen and other employes and see that every customer is properly served. Many customers prefer to buy of the one with whom they have always dealt, and in this case extra help will sometimes become insistent to wait upon them. This should be guarded against, for if the customer is willing to wait for the one they prefer to have serve them it is good business policy to see that their wishes are gratified.

Packing and Wrapping.

So many of the flowers and plants sold at Christmas are presents made by one person to another that it is necessary that great care should be taken in having them packed and done up safely and in a proper manner. Nice boxes, well lined with paraffine paper, are the first necessity in all up-to-date stores. The arranging of the cut flowers in the box should be done in an artistic manner, for the first impression on opening the box is very lasting, and a well arranged box, even of poorer stock, is preferable to one containing the highest grade carelessly put up. Under no circumstances forget the card. This has caused more trouble and lost more good customers than any one small detail, for it is a piece of carelessness that cannot be explained and is not easily forgiven. A sprig of mistletoe or a spray of holly placed on the top of the flowers is always appreciated, and a pansy or one or two violets or other small flowers tied on the card with a gold cord or baby ribbon is very attractive and made a great feature by many progressive dealers. The box should be wrapped in enough thicknesses of paper to insure its delivery safe from frost. There is nothing more unsatisfactory than to receive a box of cut flowers in a frozen condition or to hear that the present arrived in that shape. This is easily guarded against and a thing that should never occur. Above all things, do not ship any flowers that are not fresh. As a rule, the customers have paid good prices and are entitled to first-class stock, and it is nothing short of robbery to take their money and send them worthless goods.

The plants should be wrapped neatly and with paper enough to be sure that they will not be touched by frost. A little practice, with care, will soon teach one how to do this and make a neat package. Too often plants are so carelessly wrapped that they make a disgraceful package when left at the door. Six to eight thicknesses of newspaper, with a clean, plain paper outside, are none too much during the cool weather and more if the temperature is at all low. The dealer must remember that most of the plants brought into flower for the holidays are grown in a very warm temperature and chill easily. Plants with flowers that are easily bruised should be first wrapped with a sheet of cotton batting before being wrapped with paper. The delivery boys should be cautioned not to place the plants on the frozen ground or snow. Many fine plants are ruined by this thoughtless act of the men or boys delivering them. These small details are necessary and should be carefully watched during the holiday trade.

Business Systems.

During the holiday rush it is necessary that some system should be adopted that will be sure to fulfill the wants of the customer. While the business in small places may be carried on during much of the year depending a great deal on the memory of those in charge, at this time this should not be attempted, but everything written down and so placed that any one of the force can immediately find it. One of the best methods that has come to our attention is adopted by many stores, the details being changed more or less to suit the proprietor's fancy. A supply of large envelopes is secured, and when an order is received and properly written on the order blank, it is passed to one who has charge of this work, and the order copied in the order book. It is best to have a book for each day. The order is then placed in one of the envelopes, with the tag with the address written thereon, and if there is a card or a ribbon to be used with the order this is also placed in the envelope. These envelopes are then placed in a pigeon-hole or hung on a hook that is labeled for the day of delivery. Any order that is to be delivered at a special hour should have a distinguishing mark that will surely attract the attention of the one that is to put the order up or the one who has charge of the delivery. This system can be so modified as to be applied to a small or large business and will result in rectifying many mistakes that are often made during this busy season. These envelopes can be handed to those who put up the flowers or wrap the plants. The matter of delivery should also be systematized, and one should be placed in charge of this important part. Unless this is done the delivery will be very expensive. The placing together of all packages going in the same direction when wrapped will save many journeys and facilitate the work.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Coles' Flower Shop, Kokomo, Ind.

The Coles Flower Shop, Kokomo, Ind., conducted by Miss A. E. Coles, daughter of W. W. Coles, the well-known grower, has the distinction of being one of the most attractive stores in that city. The accompanying illustration shows this handsome establishment as it appeared November 8, 1915, the occasion being a flower show, the shop being thronged by hundreds of admiring visitors. While chrysanthemums were the feature of the show, the establishment was radiant throughout, palms, ferns and the choicest cut blooms in splendid arrangement forming a truly beautiful picture. The windows and doors were curtained with southern smilax, while from the chandeliers trailing vines fell gracefully. French baskets filled with choice roses and vases of carnations banked with greens were used effectively as a mantel decoration, while around the sides of the two large windows, both splendidly decorated, were crystal wall pockets filled with violets, marigolds and other small flowers.

Table Christmas Tree.
Decorated With Red Immortelles.

The Mantel.

There is perhaps no place in the dwelling where decorations may be more advantageously arranged than on the mantel and about the mirror that nearly always rises above it. The old way was to prepare a shelf or mossed board which was filled with cut flowers and put in place at the last minute. This had the advantage that it could be prepared before and saved valuable time when it was scarce, for the clock has a way of swinging round the circle very fast on a busy day.

With the aid of vases a very good effect can be made without disturbing the regular ornaments that belong in such a space. One side should be made more effective than the other, arranging a large vase of long-stemmed flowers with plenty of drooping greens made full and showy is placed on one side, and from this a spray to the top of the mirror extending over to the other side. Several smaller vases on the mantel are filled and graduated to a spray falling a short distance below the shelf at the far end. If a large mirror, the center may be decorated with a gilt heart or half basket, which lying flat against the glass, is added to by the reflection in the mirror. A bushy fern in the grate below and a tall palm or two, high on the full side and low on the other add considerably to the finish.

Farleyense ferns make a splendid mantel decoration, and these with the addition of a few well-placed vases of choice flowers are sure to be admired. By means of special hangers the plants can be carried up the side of the mirror and even over the top, and give a finished appearance that is most effective.

Where there are several mantels each can be made a separate color combination. Ward and Sunburst roses with plenty of green, make a beautiful decoration. The addition of two-toned ribbon in these colors is an addition. When Beauty roses are a bit plentiful they bring forth the words of admiration. They should be open to be at their best, and fewer flowers will give a better effect. In fact, all flowers for work of this kind should be selected and put away the day before, depending on the time of year, but the point is that they should be at their best for the entertainment and not for the day after. When chrysanthemums are in season splendid results are obtained in color effects with these gorgeous flowers and autumn leaves. Branches of these brilliant colored leaves, and they are very beautiful at times, are a great feature of fall decorations, being especially useful for all kinds of mantel work, over doorways and the like.

At some home weddings the ceremony is performed before the mantel, and in this case the mirror has sometimes to be almost completely hidden as the bride must not see her reflection in the mirror, it being considered unlucky. A canopy can be thrown out from the top of the mirror and with a high banking of the shelf a pretty effect is produced and the mirror is forgotten.

How Flower Shows Benefit Retailers.

John Young, manager of the New York flower show, has secured some opinions as to the value of flower shows to retail florists, which we take pleasure in reproducing herewith, more especially as retailers in general appear to regard flower shows as helpful only to growers:—

FROM G. E. M. STUMPP, NEW YORK.

"The question of whether it pays a retail florist to make an artistic exhibit at our great flower shows has, I am happy to say, been solved by me through my experience with such an exhibit, at the last two New York International shows.

"Although I took up a liberal amount of space on both occasions, I have for the next show reserved a space considerably larger, and I would hardly do this were I not quite convinced that it was a profitable business undertaking, the returns both immediate and lasting.

"I am glad that such shows are possible, and you may quote me as authority for the statement that they afford an opportunity for the retail florist to bring his business to the notice of the flower buying public, such as could not be obtained in any other way, no matter with what expenditure of money."

FROM MAX SCHLING, NEW YORK.

"If you will remember, I was the first retail florist in New York to recognize the opportunity for publicity afforded through our big shows, and I have made large exhibits at them all. My lead was followed by others, until now the exhibits in the retail section at the New York show form one of its chief attractions.

"I have found the publicity so obtained to be of a very profitable nature, and I am quite satisfied that there is no better way to get in touch with the class of people who consider flowers an every-day necessity in their homes, and to inculcate in others a desire to have around them continually the beautiful gifts which nature dispenses through the medium of the florist."

FROM A. KOTTMILLER, NEW YORK.

"The publicity obtained by me through my exhibits at the shows of the Horticultural Society of New York, and the American Dahlia Society, at the American Museum of Natural History in this city, have convinced me that I can not afford to allow the opportunity of exhibiting at such shows to pass as long as they are under the careful and capable management which now characterizes them.

"I may say, too, that my reservation of space in the forthcoming International flower show, in New York, has been influenced by my experience at the other shows, and I have no doubt whatever that I shall derive an immense amount of benefit through this opportunity to come in contact with the very people I am making every effort to meet."

FROM A. T. BUNYARD.

"Replying to your inquiry as to what benefit retail florists receive from exhibits made at flower shows, you will remember that at the last big New York show you were unable to give me the large block of space that I required to make the display I had in mind. Consequently I found myself debarred from exhibiting, which was a great disappointment to me. As you know, I have contracted for 200 feet of space in the next New York show, at a cost of $300, something I would not do unless I realized the advantage to be found in making exhibits at such shows.

"These great flower shows attract thousands of people interested in flowers and the various ways in which they may be used for decorative effects, and any retail florist may find in them a means for bringing his particular talent to the attention of more flower lovers during a show week than he possibly could in years in the ordinary way; and the advantage thus gained could hardly be figured in dollars and cents."

Wm. F. Gude Honored.

In appreciation of faithful and efficient work performed by William F. Gude as chairman of the executive committee of the recent reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic at Washington, D. C., Mr. Gude was presented December 10, with a handsome chest of silver by the members of the reunion committee. The presentation took place in the red parlor at the New Willard Hotel, and was attended by about a hundred of Washington's representative business men. Simon Wolf made the presentation on behalf of the committee in a happy address in which he paid tribute to Mr. Gude and his work and said:

"The highest development of patriotism is by no means confined to the army and navy. There are achievements in the walks of peace that reach the highest altitude of true civic virtue and patriotism. It is the work done by individuals unselfishly, ungrudgingly and cheerfully, on and in behalf of humanity. We are fortunate in the nation's capital to have had from time to time, when occasion demanded, such exhibitions of unselfishness, coupled with splendid executive ability and power to grasp the situation, and to discharge the duties incident thereto with signal ability.

"The recent Grand Army reunion demanded a presiding officer who could administer the affairs of the reunion, and we were most fortunate in having found in William F. Gude such a representative as has stamped the city of Washington as the leading center of hospitality and good cheer. Such labors cannot be compensated, except in the sincere appreciation of his fellow citizens, coupled with a slight token of their esteem, which, while by no means measuring up to the work accomplished, at least reflects the feeling back of the gift.

"Mr. Gude, as the humble representative of the members of your committee, I deem it a privilege and an honor to tender to you this token of their esteem, hoping and trusting that it will always be regarded by you and the members of your family with loyalty and affection, and that good health, happiness and prosperity may attend your future labors. Life has many chapters of useful endeavors. May your life be filled to the brim with that spirit of friendship and goodwill with which this token is tendered."

Mr. Gude, in accepting the testimonial from his friends, paid the highest tribute to the members of the executive committee, whose individual efforts, he said, made the reunion the success it was. He concluded by saying:

"This manifestation brings to me not only pleasure but happiness. What I have done to merit your esteem and goodwill has been cheerfully and willingly rendered not only because it was right but manifestly because it evidenced on the part of our citizenship the high regard we entertain for the soldiers of the Union, and also to bring to the attention of all men that the nation's capital is ever ready to give proof of that hospitality which brings the citizens of our common country into closer kinship.

"The gift will be treasured not only by me but by those who will live after I shall have gone to the bourne from which it is said no one ever returned, and I am sure that the example will be inspiring to others who in the future may be honored as I have been by the confidence of my fellowmen."

The chest of silver is one of the most ample and among the handsomest ever seen in the city. In addition to about fourteen dozen knives, forks, spoons and other articles, it contains a carving knife and fork, ice breaker and other things that make up a complete silver set.

After the presentation Mr. Gude also received the individual congratulations of his many friends present.

Robt. Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

With each succeeding season the public looks for something new—it may be a new variety, or an old favorite so improved that it appears new. While the old was good enough when first presented, in a year or so it becomes ordinary and something else is demanded.

The Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., has for years made a specialty of holiday plants; always on the alert, they are first in the market with novelties or new ways of presenting old favorites to continue their popularity. This feature is seen in their combination baskets, which, skillfully arranged, give a number of plants an artistic finish and importance that individually they do not possess. This is one way, and another is to finish and flower the plants, such as cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias, etc., so well that they take on an added importance and sell readily at advanced figures. They call it "quality stock" because it has quality and is good enough for any house in the land.

The cyclamens seen here are particularly fine—a splendid strain, wonderful in their vigor and quantity of bloom. Begonias and poinsettias are also specialties. Mr. Craig should round out his life with a book or treatise on crotons and dracaenas, two plants which have reached perfection under his care. The importance of these plants in decorative work has long been recognized and Mr. Craig has brought them to a state of excellence that is well nigh perfection.

Ferns have always been favorites here, all the new ones being given a chance to develop. The John Wanamaker nephrolepis is one of their own sports and is meeting with favor wherever introduced. Ficus are grown in quantity and are especially fine; in fact, all the useful decorative foliage and flowering plants are seen here in quantity, and of a quality and finish that is a credit to the house and its skilled co-workers.

Baur & Steinkamp's Begonia Chate aine.

The writer had the pleasure of calling on Baur & Steinkamp at Indianapolis recently to see their carnations, having been informed that their stock was in the finest shape in the history of the establishment. This statement was well founded, for every bench of carnations was producing a good crop of first quality blooms. Several promising seedlings were in sight, and no doubt will be heard from later. However, the finest sight on this place was Begonia Chatelaine in 5-inch pots. Several thousand plants filled a bench 150 feet long. These plants were a mass of bloom from the pot to the top of plant and were in the pink of condition for the Christmas holidays. When the merits of this begonia are better known, I feel sure it will be almost as popular as the Lorraine types. To get them in this shape for Christmas, the plants should have plenty of room and the buds removed up to November 20.

Minneapolis Flower Show.

The flower show staged at the West hotel, December 7-10 by the Minnesota State Florists' Association, the Minnesota State Horticultural Society and the gardeners' associations of St. Paul and Minneapolis, was a splendid exhibition both in number of displays and quality of the blooms. W. H. Bofferding acted in the capacity of exhibition manager and the arrangement of the numerous exhibits showed his usual good judgment. Rose Champ Weiland, exhibited by Weiland & Risch, Chicago, made a splendid showing with its rich cherry pink color, and attracted a lot of attention, as did some fine Ophelia and Ruskell roses sent by the Holton & Hunkle Co., of Milwaukee, and American Beauties and other roses in variety, staged by Gust. Rusch & Co., also of that city. The E. C. Amling Co., Chicago, also staged excellent rose stock. In the carnation classes a vase of Superb and another of Aviator, entered by the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., both showed class, and Carnation Belle Washburn, exhibited by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, made an exceptionally fine appearance and was in fine condition at the end of the exhibition as proof of its lasting qualities. The Windmiller Co., of Mankato, had a vase of poinsettias, the flowers being 20 inches across and carried on seven foot stems. H. N. Bruns, of Chicago, had an excellent display of lily of the valley and the Minneapolis Floral Co.'s collection of 12 specimen palms attracted much attention. The palm exhibit of the L. S. Donaldson Co., was also of a very high grade. The awards in the principal competitive classes are as follows:

Twelve specimen ferns—Merriam Park Floral Co., Merriam Park, Minn., 1st; L. S. Donaldson Co., Minneapolis, 2nd; Minneapolis Floral Co., 3rd.

Twelve roses, red—N. Neilson, Mankato, 1st; Hans Rosacker, Minneapolis, 2nd; Minneapolis Floral Co., 3rd.

Twelve roses, pink—N. Neilson, 1st; Hans Rosacker, 2nd; Minneapolis Floral Co., 3rd.

Twenty-five white carnations—Hans Rosacker, 1st; L. S. Donaldson, 2nd; Minneapolis Floral Co., 3rd.

In the classes for plant baskets arranged for effect, bridal bouquets and corsages, first honors were awarded to the Minneapolis Floral Co., W. H. Bofferding capturing second prize in the bridal bouquet class. T. C. R.

New York Florists' Club.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the evening of December 13, President Bunyard in the chair. Though a violent storm of snow and wind was raging, there was a good attendance. Election of officers was the principal business. Philip F. Kessler and President Bunyard having declined to enter the race for president, Henry Weston was elected without opposition. Alex. Hogg nominated for vice-president had declined to run; J. Harrison Dick declined to run for secretary; Roman J. Irwin declined to run for treasurer and W. R. Pierson and Joseph Fenrich declined to run for trustees. The ballot for vice-president resulted in the election of G. E. M. Stumpp over Charles Knight. As intimated John Young was re-elected secretary and Wm. C. Rickards, Jr., re-elected treasurer without opposition. Charles Schenck, Max Schling and Robert G. Wilson were elected trustees to serve two years.

Appropriate resolutions on the death of Mrs. Dorval were adopted. H. F. Winter, 64 Wall street, New York, and C. H. Allender, 131 Hudson street, New York, were elected members of the club.

The committee for the spring flower show to be held in the Grand Central Palace, this city, reported progress. A meeting of the committee which was well attended, had been held in the Hotel Breslin in the afternoon. A. L. Miller, for the committee, reported the donation of a number of cups. A cash prize from Emil Savoy of Secaucus, N. J., of $25.00, and a prize from the Harry A. Bunyard Co., Inc., of this city. A. L. Miller spoke on the national flower show to be held at Philadelphia in the spring of Pittsburgh.

ALARMING SHORTAGE OF STOCK.

With a prevailing good demand for flowers, and the supply curtailed to a great extent on account of the darker days, the florists are "up against it" at present in trying to fill their daily orders. It has been quite some time since stock was so scarce as it is at present, and with the on-coming pre-Christmas shortage, conditions promise to be still worse. Naturally, the outlook for Christmas is poor indeed compared with the same season of last year, when most lines of stock

NOTES.

Earl Tipton, for many years buyer for the A. W. Smith Co., caused quite a surprise last week when he announced that he would change his residence to Boston, Mass., where he will take up his new duties in the same capacity with Penn, the Florist. Our best wishes go along with Earl, and we certainly hate to see him leave. Carl Voelker, until recently with the same firm, will also leave town shortly to accept a position with the Jones-Russell Co., of Cleveland, O.

Kauffmann's department store has opened a floral department on their first floor, with Ray Daschbach in charge, having also purchased Mr. Daschbach's greenhouses on Paulson avenue, East End.

The Blind Floral Co. has added an improvement to their Liberty avenue window, in the way of a lattice-work partition, which divides the window from the sales room in a neat and pleasing manner.

The McCallum Co. has won great merit all over the country with their new chrysanthemum, Mrs. M. R. Morgan, and are booking many large orders daily for spring delivery.

J. M. Johnston has opened his new retail store in Duquesne, and is expecting a good business for his initial Christmas there.

Joe Feinberg has established temporary headquarters in the Camera-phone building, from where he will do his Christmas business.

George Bros. & Co. have opened a retail store on Stanton avenue, New Kensington. G. M.

Five wholesale florist establishments in this city have combined as an association, will meet semi-monthly, and each firm has posted a guarantee of $100 to abide by the rules of the organization for one year.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., president of the American Dahlia Society, was present and made an urgent appeal for the club's support of the dahlia society.

Guttman & Raynor, Inc., exhibited the rose Mme. Paul Euler, which had previously been exhibited and sold by them as Prima Donna. There was a discussion over the name Prima Donna, and that name was ruled out. The exhibit received a vote of thanks. It may here be stated that this rose was sent out in France some years ago under the name of Mme. Paul Euler. It was taken to California, tried out and found satisfactory for that climate as a forcing rose. Henry W. Turner of Montibello, Calif., is now advertising the rose as Prima Donna, but we are not certain that it was he who gave it that name. We have been reliably informed that the name Prima Donna was provisionally attached until the sale of the stock had been made in that section of the country. The Guttman & Raynor stock comes from the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa. Since this matter has come up, it is but right that the facts be generally known. Guttman & Raynor, Inc., also exhibited the carnation Gorgeous, grown by B. Willig, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; also, a new seedling chrysanthemum, named Emma, grown by Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y. Philip F. Kessler exhibited the Chrysanthemum Mistletoe and a pink single chrysanthemum, both grown by Charles Smith's Son, Woodside, L. I., N. Y. Roman J. Irwin exhibited a new pompon chrysanthemum. All the exhibits received a vote of thanks.

were almost given away. The greatest shortage is on lilies and carnations, with roses running a close third. Fancy sweet peas have been arriving in quantities daily and find an excellent market. There are large quantities of stevias offered, and this is the only item of stock that may be termed plentiful. Many large and elaborate social affairs have enabled the florists to book some good decorations for the holiday week. Large consignments of boxwood and other Christmas supplies are being shipped daily, which is the big factor in keeping the wholesale men busy, a condition of affairs that is eminently satisfactory.

CHRISTMAS TRADE PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

At the time of this writing nearly all kinds of stock in the market are short as far as supply is concerned. Prospects for Christmas are bright, but the supply will have to be much heavier than at present in order to have anything like an adequate supply of cut flowers. Roses and carnations are not very plentiful. Easter lilies are in supply large enough to take care of all present wants. The first poinsettias have made their appearance and are very good. Some good chrysanthemums may still be had up to this time. Narcissi have not been very plentiful. Lily of the valley, violets, orchids and sweet peas are in a fair supply and have an active market. The stevia cut is large. Callas may be had.

NOTES.

The December meeting of the florists' society was held December 13 at the Hotel Gibson, President Max Rudolph in the chair. A committee consisting of Wm. Schumann, Alex Ostendarp and Chas. H. Hoffmeister, was appointed. This committee is to arrange for "eats, etc." for the January meeting.

Henry Lodder and wife, of Hamilton, O., have just returned from a six weeks' visit to Cuba.

Chas. H. Hoffmeister went to Hamilton, O., on business the early part of the week.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some very fine poinsettias.

Visitors: Miss Federle, Karl Heiser, Wm. Lodder and Walker Gray, all of Hamilton, O.; H. V. Thomas, Augusta, Ky.; Fred Rupp, Laurenceburg, Ind.; Jos. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. B. A. Durham, Ashland, Ky.; Mr. Bradford and C. P. Brunner, Springfield, O., and H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. H.

PRE-CHRISTMAS DEMAND BRISK.

Business has been good during the past week, a brisk demand for pre-Christmas decorations adding to the volume of sales. Stock has been rather scarce, roses cleaning up each day and the carnation receipts were far short of the demand. Paper Whites are plentiful, but the price is firm. Cut poinsettias are beginning to come in, but the demand for them is light. Harrisii lilies are fine in quality, but they move slowly. Lily of the valley, cypripediums and cattleyas are selling now. Good plants, including ardisias, cyclamens, poinsettias and azaleas are to be seen, and Christmas greens—holly, pine and laurel—are plentiful.

NOTES.

The Rochester Floral Co. arranged a very effective telegraph delivery window last week. A huge placard showing location of principal cities was hung in map form in the center, and streamers of red baby ribbon connected these cities with the Rochester Floral Co.'s location, representing telegraphic code orders.

J. B. Keller's Sons did a great deal of the decorating at the leading department stores and other business establishments for the holiday season, the work being mostly in exterior arrangements. This firm has also been quite busy with funeral work of late.

Geo. T. Boucher has booked the order for the decorations of the automobile show to be held in January; also, the decorations for the junior "prom" of the University of Rochester.

Geo. B. Hart is having a big run on red thistles for Christmas. They are very attractive and find a ready sale.

A son was born to Cecil Lester, of the Geo. B. Hart commission house, and Mrs. Lester, December 9.

Harry P. Neun is still cutting some very good lavender and yellow chrysanthemums. CHESTER.

STRONG DEMAND AT ADVANCED PRICES.

Owing to a shortage of stock business has been very good during the past week. Flowers of every variety seemed to be in demand and prices have advanced accordingly. Chrysanthemums are practically finished, the flowers are of poor quality and the call light, although the prices on the white varieties hold firm. Carnations have shortened in supply, the price now being about $4 per hundred. Roses have advanced in price, the favorites, Russell, Hadley, Ophelia and Richmond bringing from $6 to $25 per hundred. Violets are selling well at from $1 to $1.25 per hundred and it looks as if there would be a shortage for the holiday trade. The plant demand is good and orders are coming in well for Christmas.

NOTES.

A recent visit to the establishment of Peter Fisher at Ellis, Mass., showed his place in fine condition. He has three and one-half houses devoted entirely to Carnation Alice, two and one-half of which have been cut back for stock. Reports from all parts of the country show that Alice has been a great success, both from growers' and retailers' standpoint, consequently Mr. Fisher is preparing for the large demand from the growers who have watched this variety so successfully tried out. He has a few more promising seedlings under way, among which is a very fine scarlet and a beautiful salmon pink, both of which are profuse growers.

J. C. Koppelman, the well known Providence, R. I., wholesale florist, is growing a very high grade of stock this year. He handles nearly every kind of flower for his extensive trade, but has gained a reputation on plumosus and Sprengeri, some of which he sends to each of the Boston markets. He has as a novelty a fine lot of bouvardia at present, which finds a very good market.

Wm. R. Nicholson, of Framingham, has in addition to carnations and snapdragons, a house of special strain wallflower, the flowers of which are nearly as large as pansies; in fact, everyone who has seen them say they are the best ever shown in this city. He is also cutting his special mignonette in quantity.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, has a very fine looking house of cyclamens for the Christmas trade. He also has a nice lot of poinsettia pans. His chrysanthemums are practically over for this season, and he is preparing for a crop of sweet peas which are to follow.

George Arnold, the well-known florist of Winchester, Mass., is confined to his home with a bad attack of grippe. His son, Ralph, is taking charge of the business during his absence.

The bowling league met Thursday evening, December 9, at the Boston alleys. V. Hartford, of Robinson's, won the high three-string total, as well as the high string, with 312 and 118 respectively. The team standings are as follows:

The increase in the number of flowering and decorative plants in the flower stores reminds one that Christmas is near. Christmas trees and mistletoe are also in evidence, and even the weather has taken on a sharp and frosty feeling, though this may change considerably before the holidays arrive, as our cold spells are usually of very short duration. Store men say that business is keeping up very nicely. This week there has been quite a demand for funeral flowers, which has helped materially to strengthen trade conditions during this ordinarily dull period.

CLUB MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Oklahoma State Florists' Association was held December 6, with the election of officers and the adoption of a new constitution and by-laws as the principal business done at the meeting. Officers elected were: A. S. Gray, president; J. N. Horn, vice-president; W. K. Cheatham, secretary and treasurer. Board of directors was elected as follows: Chas. Stiles and Mrs. Ora Hornaday, to serve two years; Mrs. Eager and H. S. McClenahan to serve one year. The next meeting will be at the call of the board of directors and it is expected that it will be a two day meeting and something in the nature of a convention with a view of getting every florist in the state interested in the society. Nassau County (N. Y.) Hort. Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, December 8, President Westlake in the chair. George Wilson, of Jericho, L. I., was elected to active membership. The president appointed as judges of the exhibits, James Holloway, George Wilson and James McCarthy, and they made the following awards: For the best plant of Gloire de Lorraine, Frederick Hitchman, first; for the best vase of 25 carnations, Robert Jones, first. Mr. Jones also exhibited a splendid vase of Chrysanthemum Odessa, for which he was awarded a cultural certificate.

This being the annual meeting, Treasurer Ernest Brown read his financial report for the year just closed, showing that the society was in first-class condition financially. He received a very hearty vote of thanks from the society for the very efficient manner in which he carried out the duties of his office. The election of officers being in order, President Westlake, after cordially thanking his fellow members for the harmonious cooperation he had received from them during his term of office, appointed James Duthie as chairman to conduct the election. The following officers were elected: James McDonald, president; Joseph Adler, vice-president; Ernest Brown, treasurer; Harry Jones, secretary; James McCarthy, corresponding secretary; Ernest Westlake, trustee; executive committee, Robert Jones, John Johnstone, Arthur Cook, James Gladstone, August Fournier, Walter McKinley and Thomas Twigg. The newly elected officers were installed by Mr. Duthie and Mr. McDonald then took the chair and conducted the remainder of the meeting. It was decided to hold the annual dinner January 25, and a committee, composed of Ernest Brown, Joseph Adler and James Duthie, was appointed by President McDonald to make full arrangements for same.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Morrison, Thursday evening, December 9. There was a good attendance, President Keimel in the chair. The principal business of the meeting was the election of officers for the ensuing year which resulted as follows: Alex. Henderson, president; Wm. E. Tricker, vice-president; Guy W. French, secretary, Paul R. Klingsporn, treasurer; H. N. Bruns, trustee. The election was unanimous, Wm. H. Amling for president and Allie Zech for secretary, resigning in favor of the other candidates. The holdover trustees are C. L. Washburn and Geo. Asmus.

Secretary Miller of the Floral Festival committee presented a report on the recent flower show and the transportation committee was instructed to make arrangements for the trip to the annual convention of the American Carnation Society, which will be held at St. Louis, Mo., January 26-27.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—At the annual meeting of the Michigan State Horticultural Society, December 7, the following officers were unanimously re-elected: Chas. A. Pratt, Benton Harbor, president; C. A. Bingham, Birmingham, vice-president; Robt. A. Smythe, Benton Harbor, secretary; Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, treasurer. The directors are C. A. Bingham and E. O. Ladd.

Montreal.NORMAL HOLIDAY BUSINESS ANTICIPATED.

Christmas business for 1915 will be about on a par with that of last year—at least that is the consensus of opinion among the trade here. There will be numerous sales of moderate price but few elaborate orders. The growers are well supplied with plants, and as it was known early that azaleas were not sure to arrive, they have prepared an extra large supply of seasonable varieties and all are of good quality. Cut flowers are very good this year, having benefited by the bright, sunny weather, and they will command much better prices than they did a year ago.

CLUB MEETING.

The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its annual meeting December 6 and the following officers were elected for 1916: Wm. Cotter, president; R. Scott, first vice-president; J. Trevis, second vice-president; W. H. Horobin, secretary-treasurer; J. Luck, assistant. The executive committee consists of E. J. Hayward, D. McDonald, F. Harris, H. Parre, G. W. Pascoe, H. J. Eddy, J. Bennett, of Lachine, exhibited a vase of his new rose, Tipperary, a sport of Killarney, and the judges, through their chairman, G. A. Robinson, awarded it a certificate of merit, the club's highest honor. Mr. Robinson stated that as he had seen this rose grown through all stages, he felt no hesitancy in making this award. The color is a shade lighter than Killarney Brilliant, with a much stronger growth and a larger bud; it is not a cropper but a constant bloomer. Mr. Bennett has quite a stock of this rose, but does not intend to distribute it for some time.

The annual dinner, which took place on December 9 at the Edinburgh cafe, was quite a successful affair. About 50 were present to do justice to a carefully chosen menu. There was a fair sprinkling of ladies present. The decorations arranged by Wm. C. Hall and W. Cotter, were splendid, good enough for royalty. Retiring President A. C. Smith acted as toastmaster. The following toasts were given and responded to: "Our Country," by Jas. McKenna; "Incoming Officers," by W. Cotter; "Sister Societies," by A. J. Bowles for the Montreal Horticultural Society; W. Otter, for the Montreal West Horticultural Society; H. J. Eddy, for the Canadian Horticultural Association. "The Trade" was responded to by Wm. C. Hall for the florists; J. Walsh, for the private gardeners. F. W. Baker, H. Parre, M. Milady and H. Martin responded for the seed trade. Well selected talent helped with patriotic and other songs to make the evening enjoyable. R. Burrows, gardener to R. B. Angus, brought down a splendid vase of Killarney Brilliant roses for decoration. J. L.

Kansas City.GOOD BUSINESS AND BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

Everyone in the local market enjoyed a good week's business and the outlook for a prosperous holiday trade is bright. Nearly all of the florists have booked many orders for Christmas delivery. Stock was scarce during the past week, roses and carnations arriving in small numbers. The quality of the former were good, however, and were disposed of at prices of $2.50 and up. Lilies, lily of the valley, narcissi, both white and yellow, violets and stevia are more plentiful, but there are not enough to go around and clean up daily. Pot plants of all the novelties sell well and are used in place of cut blooms for many occasions.

NOTES.

Henry Kusik & Co. report stock scarce, but quality is of the best, the home-grown carnations being especially worthy of mention. American Beauties are coming in better and prices range from $4 per dozen up. Lilies, lily of the valley, violets and stevia are also in better supply. Mr. Kusik returned from Council Bluffs, Ia., December 10, and left the following day for Chicago and other points.

A. F. Barbee thinks his son may develop into a better foot ball player than a florist, but it will take some time to determine this fully even though his father says he is strong with the kick, almost too much so for his age when you consider that the stork only left him at the Barbee home December 10. Weight, seven pounds. Congratulations.

T. J. Noll & Co. report trade as being A-1, their stock cleaning up every day. This firm is handling some very good roses and carnations, but the supply is short of the demand. Shipping trade is the best ever, the advance orders for Christmas supplies being exceptionally good.

Miss J. E. Murray continues to be busy with many funeral orders among other commissions, and a shortage of stock makes it difficult to take care of all the business. Activity in preparing for the Christmas trade is noticeable at this establishment.

Mrs. T. A. Moseley, of Kansas, is recovering from her recent accident and is able to be at her store each day. Her many friends hope that she will continue to improve and enjoy a prosperous holiday business.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. says business in general is good. Their stock of pot plants is in fine shape for the holiday trade, and roses and carnations are coming in better, both in quality and quantity.

Arthur Newell reports a heavy sale on pot plants, together with a very satisfactory demand for stock in other lines. A good holiday trade is looked for and he will be fully prepared to take care of it.

W. J. Barnes reports a good week's business, funeral work being especially in demand. He is busy getting his stock in shape for Christmas and anticipates the best holiday business he has ever had.

Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is looking forward to a very good Christmas trade. Stock is reported as very scarce, much of it being called for in funeral work which has been very good.

Adolph Mohr has as good a showing of poinsettias, azaleas and Begonia Lorraine as one would wish for. He has a steady call for this stock of quality and is about sold out.

Orders for funeral work has been good at the Patrick Larkin establishment, and trade in general is very satisfactory. Prospects for the holiday trade are good.

Chas. Biederman & Son are very busy with preparations for a holiday rush. Business has been very satisfactory with them.

E. D. Ellsworth has a fine stock of plants for his Christmas trade.

Tri-City Florists' Club.

The December meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the Patten home in Rock Island, Ill., December 8, with Ed. Patten, Mrs. Patten and James Haussen as hosts. There was a good attendance. President Harry Bills called the meeting to order and the question of holding a fall flower show was discussed but was defeated. The topic of discussion for the evening was "Care of Trees and Shrubs in Winter", led by C. O. E. Boehm, and covered details of fertilizing, protection, pruning, etc., the members of the society taking part. Following the business session refreshments were served, and after a hearty vote of thanks to hosts and hostess, the meeting adjourned to meet at the residence of John Staack, Moline, January 13.

Chicago Bowling.

John Huebner, Fred Price, Wm. Lorman, Allie Zech and Peter Olsem represented the trade in the city tournament and rolled in the five-man events at Bensinger's Randolph street alleys on Allie Zech's thirty-first birthday, Thursday, December 9. The boys made a good showing and if they had rolled anywhere near their usual form they would have carried off some of the prizes. Wm. Lorman and Fred Price, Joe Einweck and Jack Beyers, A. Huebner and John Huebner, Allie Zech and Peter Olsen participated in the two-man events, December 10, and also in the individual contest later in the evening. It appears as if Peter Olsem will come in for a share of the prize money for he rolled 218 in the first, 215 in the second and 196 in the last game, an average of nearly 210 pins for each game rolled.

IOWA AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE GREENHOUSES AT AMES.

Built by the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago.

Minneapolis.TOP NOTCH PRICES PREVAIL.

Business has been especially good during the past week. Stock has shortened in supply and prices have advanced to the top notch, and the market cleans up daily. Chrysanthemums in this market are about done for and the season has proved to be a very satisfactory one for the growers. Poinsettias are now making their bow and are exceedingly fine in quality. The growers report that practically all of the blooming plant stock is already sold on advance orders. Green is not over-plentiful. Holly is fine and well berried and wild smilax of fine quality is here for the holidays.

CLUB MEETING.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association held its meeting December 7, several new members being admitted. W. D. Desmond spoke of his impressions of the Chicago and Cleveland shows and expressed regret that more of the local craft did not attend. H. E. Philpott also spoke of flower shows and the increased demand for flowers that result. Wm. Vasatka spoke of the duties and responsibilities of the men in charge of the greenhouse, covering many points that are generally overlooked.

NOTES.

Rice Bros. received a car of wild smilax this week.

Visitors: A. Miller, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; M. Johnson, Crookston, Minn.; A. C. Kohlbrand of the E. C. Amling Co., and A. F. Longren, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; Miss Pauline Windmiller, of the Windmiller Co., and N. Nielsen, Mankato, Minn.; H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg, Man.; T. B. Sargeant, Osage, Ia.; E. M. Sherman, Charles City, Ia.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

To All Members:

At the meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, held at Cleveland, O., it was decided by officers and members present that bills not paid within 30 days from member to member the discount of 20 per cent shall be forfeited. This would help to do away with a lot of unpleasant feeling and also would help us find out people who are negligent in paying their bills. If we wish to have any further success in the F. T. D. we must have prompt paying members on our list. The responsibility of the F. T. D. through this act becomes a much greater value than it has been heretofore, so please do not let bills to F. T. D. members hang fire but settle them as quickly as possible. When you make out your statement on January 1, send the secretary list of all bills over due and owed you by members of F. T. D. These bills will have to be settled immediately and members refusing to do so will lose the 20 per cent and their names are liable to be taken off our list. The tone of this letter may seem harsh but it is the only way to uphold the prestige of the F. T. D.

Sioux City School Gardens.

In a recent issue the Sioux City Sunday Journal devoted an entire page to illustrations and results of the first year's work in developing interest in the soil by the formation of school gardening clubs in that city. It was the only large movement of this kind in the state of Iowa and several hundred children are closing their first year's experiences which have proven both interesting and profitable, earnings varying from $1 to $100.

The Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., through Manager Cummins, supplied the seeds at very low prices, and the state college at Ames, co-operating with the federal government, through the Smith-Lever's appropriation bill, was able to assist in a financial way, in addition to sending Prof. E. C. Bishop to Sioux City to organize the work. Home canning of fruits and vegetables was also a feature of the work, June Gunter, a 13-year-old miss, winning first prize at the inter-state fair for the best individual exhibit of canned products, of which she displayed 26 varieties. The fair association offered numerous other prizes in the school gardens competition, which was represented by over 100 exhibits.

National Association of Gardeners.

The National Association of Gardeners opened their annual convention in Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., December 9, Mayor Curley and John H. Dillon, chairman of the Boston Park commission, both welcoming the members of the organization with interesting addresses. Following the order of preliminary business came the election of officers, which resulted in the unanimous selection of W. N. Craig of Brookline, Mass., for president and the re-election of M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., as secretary. The meeting was followed by a banquet, covers being laid for 110 persons, and speeches were made by more than a score of the association's members and invited guests. On Friday, December 10, the visitors enjoyed an auto tour, the first point of interest visited being the home of Prof. Sargent in Brookline, and from there the party went to Mrs. Larz Anderson's, where refreshments were served. Faulkner farm was next visited and then followed a trip to Arnold Arboretum, and here much interest was shown in the extensive library, in which there are more than 30,000 volumes, relating to trees and shrubs. The party was then conducted through Franklin park and the Blue Hill reservation, the next objective point being the establishment of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. at Dedham. Here a splendid luncheon was served and the afternoon was spent inspecting this extensive plant.

Women in Horticulture.

The Woman's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association is organizing a chapter in Chicago and the vicinity. It is in the field to help women who make a living on farms, in orchards and gardens. It has 50 members in the middle West, and the president, Mrs. Francis King, lives at Alma, Mich. The larger membership lives in New England, New York and Pennsylvania, but interest is shown by increasing numbers in New Orleans, Kansas City, Grand Rapids, Mich., No. Dakota, California and Oregon. Recent years have developed expert woman farmers, fruit, vegetable and flower growers. The state universities recognize them in their agricultural courses and in landscape gardening, and the trained young women entering the profession discover many others who have risen on practical ability and have succeeded through experiments. Until the present time the woman farmer has been isolated in her profession and had to meet the prejudices of her neighbors and solve social problems alone. Hence the Woman's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association finds the way prepared for co-operative educational campaigns and it knows that it may be of service in raising the social status of the woman rural worker as well as act as a clearing-house of information.

Houston Convention Garden Plans.

Superintendent C. L. Brock has been at work on the plans for S. A. F. convention garden at Houston, Tex., in 1916, and it is expected they will be ready for publication in the near future. All those who contemplate making displays should communicate with him at the earliest possible moment so that desired space can be allotted.

EXCELLENT HOLIDAY OUTLOOK.

There is a general feeling of optimism among the dealers just now, and, without exception, all are looking for a big holiday trade in cut flowers as well as plants. There is an excellent stock of cyclamens in sight and they are going at fairly good prices. There is not going to be any great stock of chrysanthemums for the Christmas trade, but probably enough to satisfy all and at fair prices. The weather has been ideal up to the present time, but a change may be looked for. There are plenty of carnations from the lath houses and they are showing up well, too.

NOTES.

F. Lichtenberg, 324 West Sixth street, reports good business in roses with about the usual supply and demand in American Beauties. Chrysanthemums are about cleaned up, but there will be a fair stock for Christmas. Mr. Lichtenberg reports considerable funeral work.

The Broadway Florists have been doing a nice business lately in wedding decorations. Mr. Stathatos is proprietor of this firm. They are handling the cut flower business formerly carried on by the H. N. Gage Co.

The California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co., is preparing for a big holiday trade. They have a big stock of cyclamens on hand and expect to close them all out at good prices.

Cecile Brunner roses are beginning to make a showing on the market; also, an occasional sweet pea is seen. The usual stands are showing up, where Christmas greenery is sold.

T. M. Lilley of Columbus, Ohio, is spending the winter in Los Angeles. Mr. Lilley was a former partner of Mr. Knopf in the east.

The Los Angeles Floral Co. is busy with shipments as usual and, like the rest, is preparing for a big Christmas trade.

The Redondo Floral Co. is busy with Eastern Star work, having a number of chapters to supply. G. H. H.

MARKET SUFFERS FROM SHORT SUPPLY.

Another week of short stock receipts, and so far no relief in sight. The problem of the wholesalers is to find enough stock to fill orders. Particularly is this true of carnations, while roses do not fare much better. American Beauties only, arrive in quantities sufficient for the demand, and the quality, especially the better grades, is very good. Lily of the valley has been plentiful and the demand good. Paper White narcissi and stevia are very welcome to everyone, and arrive in good supply. A few sweet peas are arriving, as are snapdragons in limited quantities. Violets are moving better than formerly. Callas and Easter lilies are short of the demand. There is a good call for boxwood, laurel wreathing and other Christmas goods. Holly will be in this week. Greens of all kinds remain plentiful.

At a meeting of the Women Florists' Club, December 6, the following officers were elected: Mrs. Sam Pentecost, president; Mrs. John Henninger, vice-president; Miss Elvira Schmitt, secretary; Mrs. Frank Friedley, treasurer. C. F. B.

MONTREAL, QUE.—While the outlook for a prosperous Christmas trade is excellent, there may be a shortage in high-grade plants, and judging from present conditions the cut flower supply will be insufficient to care for the demand unless some are brought from outside points.

CLOUDY WEATHER SHORTENS SUPPLY.

Cloudy skies and a lively demand have made cut flowers scarce, but florists' stores are gay with pot plants and Christmas decorative stock. That staple of the trade, carnations, reached the famine stage with some florists last week. Roses are fairly abundant. Very few American Beauties are grown here now, and the shipped-in stock is bringing $6 a dozen. Sweet peas and violets continue to be good stock. The local trade can see nothing else to it but that the holiday business is going to be a big one. This is foreshadowed by unusually early buying of cyclamens, Cincinnati begonias, junipers and other pot plants, which each year are becoming increasingly popular as gifts. This feature is largely helped by displaying the plants in a variety of artistic baskets. Norway spruce in pots is also a better seller this year than ever before. Azaleas are being obtained freely. The Columbus consumption is estimated at about 3,000 plants.

On December 10, the Livingston Seed Company enjoyed a distinction which does not often come to a Columbus florist, that of furnishing the decorations for a function in honor of the president of the United States. Incident to President Wilson's visit to the city, to address the national convention on the Church and Country Life, a dinner was tendered him in the Masonic temple by the Chamber of Commerce, which 1,100 people attended. The decorations consisted of American flags throughout the hall, at the president's table three large centerpieces of poinsettias and asparagus ferns, red carnations at the plate of each guest, and incidental trimming of poinsettias and asparagus fern on the tables as a whole. The demand upon carnations was perhaps the largest ever made here by a single event.

A large force of society young women sold flowers on the down-town street corners December 11 for the benefit of St. Francis hospital. Stock was donated by local florists upon solicitation. The receipts for the cause were $600.

Some 12 or 15 florists will run large co-operative advertisements in the Columbus newspapers next week. This plan has been tried out successfully heretofore for St. Valentine's day but this is the first trial at the Christmas season.

A feature of the Munk Floral Company's Christmas trim in their new front are two Christmas trees, lighted electrically, and demonstrating the decorative effects of Japanese friezing. J.

FOR CHRISTMAS

We Will Have a Fine Crop of the Following Roses:

RICHMONDS
RUSSELL
SUNBURST

AMERICAN BEAUTIES
PINK KILLARNEYS

KILLARNEY BRILLIANT
MILADY
DOUBLE WHITE KILLARNEYS

Our Richmonds this year are exceptionally fine; large flowers, carried on long stiff stems, and will in a measure answer the purpose of medium Beauties, giving better satisfaction for the reason that they come more perfect and better than Beauties, as this time of the year finds Beauties more or less crippled, blue and imperfect.

You will need some of our Killarney Brilliants, as they are of the cherry bright color that gives life and cheerfulness to the surroundings. Besides, you cannot do without Ophelia and Sunburst, for with their delicate colors they are always acceptable as a Xmas gift. As for a white rose, nothing will give you more satisfaction than Double White Killarney. 'Nough said. Will also have a nice cut of Mrs. Chas. Russell Roses for the occasion, which will likewise be a splendid substitute for American Beauties.

A HEAVY SUPPLY of CARNATIONS of HIGHEST QUALITY
 RED, PINK, WHITE AND LIGHT PINK IN ALL THE BEST VARIETIES

You cannot find better Carnations for Xmas Boxes than ours. They have been leaders on this market since early fall, and they continue to lead the field for color, size of bloom and length of stem. They are sure to please—they cost no more—why not have the best for your trade?

LARGE SUPPLY OF BLUE RIBBON VALLEY

CARNATIONS ARE VERY SCARCE.

Business has been very brisk this week and stock of all kinds continues to clean up well each day at good prices. Carnations especially, are selling well, but are in short supply and the best grades are bringing as high as $4 and $5 per 100. American Beauty roses are having a good call and fancy stock is selling nicely at prices ranging from $4 to $6 per dozen. Roses in general are in good demand, and there is no surplus to speak of when the day's sales are over, with the possible exception of White Killarney, which appear to be more plentiful. Ophelia roses seem to be very scarce and in brisk demand. Short roses are selling at as good prices now as they did last Christmas and the longer stemmed stock is also bringing satisfactory prices. Orchids are a trifle more plentiful, but still command fancy prices and the same holds good for gardenias. Violets are having a good call and there are just about enough to go around. Sweet peas are none too plentiful, and the same applies to lily of the valley. Snapdragons are in good supply, but are moving nicely. Stevia and Paper White narcissi are a little more plentiful, but are selling well at good prices. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and choice boxwood is seen at several of the stores in large supply. Red winter berries are very scarce at this writing. Cut poinsettias are to be had in quantity and so are gladioli. The wholesale plantsmen are having a good season and expect to clean up completely before the rush is over and are already well sold out in certain lines. The supply houses are receiving enough orders to keep the force working overtime, and from present indications it appears in all lines as if the Christmas trade will be the best in years. It is a question whether cut flowers will be plentiful or not for the holidays, for it appears at present as if American Beauty roses and carnations are going to be scarce, for many of the dealers are already refusing orders for same. A few out-of-town wholesale florists were in the city this week looking for stock for the holidays, and one wholesaler refused an order from one of the large eastern wholesale houses for American Beauty roses for Christmas, which means that there will not be as many eastern American Beauties handled in this market this year as was the case last season, and judging from the many inquiries that are being received from all sections of the country, everyone is either anti-

The Best Red Carnation Is Our New Seedling Belle Washburn.

The winner of the Silver Medal at the last exhibition of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., January 27th and 28th. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower from 3 to 3½ inches, stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx.

This is a seedling from Enchantress and has all the good traits of the Enchantress family—easy to grow and productive. This is one of our own seedlings which we have grown for the past five years. It is the leading red in the Chicago markets.

Price of the rooted cuttings is $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We will bill 500 at the thousand rate price.

Every cutting guaranteed strong and well rooted.

pating a brisk trade or stock is scarce, and they are looking to this market to supply their needs. There may be plenty of roses to go around, but taken all in all it would not be at all surprising if the market cleaned up completely in all lines before the big rush is over. About three inches of snow fell on December 11-12, but the weather on Monday was very favorable for growing purposes and with a few more bright days stock should be in splendid condition and growers should be careful not to hold the stock too long for the buyers now insist upon having strictly fresh flowers and will not handle pickled stock under any condition if they can possibly get along without it.

NOTES.

Frank H. Timmihoff, who has been in the employ of the A. L. Randall Co. for the past five years as cashier in the cut flower department, died at his home at 2527 Ballou street, last Sunday, December 12, at 10 a. m., after being sick for only 11 days. The funeral was held from the residence at one o'clock the following Wednesday and the remains were laid to rest in Waldheim cemetery. A. L. Randall, Frank Johnson and Eric Johnson of the A. L. Randall Co., and several others in the trade attended the funeral, and the floral offerings from the wholesale houses and retail florists were many and beautiful. The late Mr. Timmihoff was 29 years of age and had a host of friends in the city, for he was very obliging and pleasant and will be greatly missed at the store by his employers, the employes and customers, with whom he was on very intimate terms. He is survived by his wife, a bride of four months.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of the E. C. Ameling Co., has returned from Minneapolis, Minn., where he attended the flower show held last week under the auspices of the Minnesota State Florists' Association and the Minnesota State Horticultural Society.

E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., is in the city and will remain until after the holidays. He is making his headquarters at the store when he is not escorting any of his out-of-town customers through the greenhouses at Morton Grove.

Percy Jones unloaded a large shipment of red winter berries December 14 and expects to have plenty to supply all of his customers with during the holidays. Boxwood is the chief offering at this store and the quality is exceptionally fine.

Chas. Erne, of Erne & Klingel, is suffering with a severe cold, but is on the job early and late making preparations to handle the Christmas trade.

M. C. Gunterberg is handling a good supply of violets and red winter berries.

F. O. Franzen's store at 5319 North Clark street is now well advertised after dark by a new electric sign.

ERNE & KLINGEL

30 E. Randolph Street, L. D. Phone, Randolph 6578. CHICAGO, ILL.

Peter Reinberg will have a splendid crop of Richmond roses for Christmas, for the stock in 13 large houses is in splendid shape and just right for the holidays. Ophelia, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and White Killarney will also be plentiful as will My Maryland, which are still being grown on a large scale and are showing better color than Killarney at present. The supply of Milady and Sunburst will be larger than was at first expected and the cut of American Beauties will be the heaviest in years, which Superintendent Reichling attributes to the fact that the heating system was changed this spring and the plants do better with overhead heating than they did under the old plan. Milady, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Killarney Brilliant have given splendid satisfaction this season and will be grown on a larger scale next season. American Beauty roses will not be grown as heavily as in the past, for Mrs. Chas. Russell is proving to be a splendid substitute and is a better paying proposition. Mr. Reichling is busy propagating roses and carnations and had several benches well rooted which he will be ready to offer in another week. Mr. Reinberg is very enthusiastic over the Christmas business, for trade in all lines is brisk and he expects that his Christmas business will be the best in years, for the outlook was never so bright and everything points to a clean-up in all lines.

Weiland & Risch are cutting a good supply of their new rose, Champ Weiland, which continues to attract much favorable attention at the store as well as in the greenhouses. This rose has a remarkable color, which at present is superior to that of the Mrs. Chas. Russell. Several of the local growers have placed their orders for this variety for March delivery and in nearly every instance those who have done so have watched its growing very closely.

A. L. Vaughan is well pleased with the outlook for orders for Christmas at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store, for inquiries are numerous, and while many orders have already been booked, the greater portion are now being received and with a large supply of stock to offer the sales should run much ahead of last year.

George C. Weiland, proprietor of the store conducted under the name of M. Weiland, 602 Davis street, Evanston, is making preparations for a brisk Christmas trade, but is inclined to believe that stock in general is going to be somewhat scarce.

Fred Dietsch says that inquiries for greenhouse materials are numerous at the A. Dietsch Co.'s factory at 2642 Sheffield avenue and that the outlook for next season is most encouraging.

Hoerber Bros. never had a better grade of White Killarney roses to supply their customers with than they are cutting now, for they are exceptionally well grown and in good demand.

Wietor Bros. are well satisfied with the outlook for Christmas for orders are numerous for both roses and carnations and while they will have a large supply for the holidays, they expect to clean up in all lines. This firm is cutting a large supply of choice American Beauty, Richmond and Killarney roses and receipts of White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Sunburst and Ophelia are steadily increasing. N. J. Wietor in speaking of carnations is well pleased with Matchless, the best white on the place, and also with Rossette, which is doing remarkably well with them.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, arrived here this week from Minneapolis, Minn., where he attended the flower show held last week, and will spend several weeks at Pyfer & Olsem's range at Wilmette, in which he is interested, and also at A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s wholesale store, of which firm he is president. He placed an order with the John C. Moninger Co. for two new greenhouses while he was in the city, but is not ready to state just where the new range will be located.

C. L. Washburn says that Christmas orders are arriving in large numbers at Bassett & Washburn's store and that it looks now as if American Beauty roses and carnations are going to be real scarce before the rush is over. The home of Art Pasternik, who is employed at this house, was robbed one day this week, when the thieves secured a beautiful diamond ring that the other boys at the store claim he was going to give to a young lady for a Christmas present.

H. Kusik, of H. Kusik & Co., Kansas City, Mo., was here this week buying stock for the holidays. He reports trade as good and says that everything points to a scarcity of cut flowers for Christmas, especially carnations. He visited his old employer, C. C. Pollworth, at Milwaukee, Wis., December 12, and reports the market in about the same condition as it is here.

Zech & Mann's wholesale store was robbed last Monday evening, December 13, when the cash drawer was broken into and the thieves secured about $10 in change. This firm has received a pretty calendar from Williams & Co., South Bend, Ind., and a useful calendar pad from Robert Grover, the Adams, Mass., fern dealer.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is handling a large supply of roses, particularly Killarney Brilliant, which are unusually fine and will be one of their leaders for Christmas. Boxwood is being handled on a large scale, and is in good demand, owing to the fine quality of the stock offered.

The John Kruchten Co.'s telephone numbers have been changed to Central 8016 and Central 8017, which they will be pleased to have their customers bear in mind when ordering in the future. This firm reports that their DEMAND LACKS SNAP.

The past week has been rather quiet—there were a few teas and other functions of fair importance, but the demand lacked snap and was easily satisfied. The market, however, kept in good balance, the supply showing a perceptible falling off, as is usual at this season. Dull, cloudy, cold weather is said to be holding the stock back, and perhaps the saline atmosphere in some of the cold cellars may have something to do with it. The stock that does get through is fine and all the indications point to a full supply of very good quality. Russell roses have been very fine the past week, some excellent stock being offered. Richmond has made its appearance and the usual fine Christmas crop is promised. All the other standards and fancies are all that could be desired. Prima Donna is making a name for itself, the vase-full exhibited at the florists' club last week almost equaling American Beauty in its good points. Carnations have shortened up very much, there not being enough coming in for half the demand; in consequence, prices advanced 25 to 50 per cent. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful, very excellent flowers of the Spencer type being seen daily in increasing quantities and growers promise a goodly cut for the holidays. Violets are scarce, lily of the valley is about normal, while cattleyas are two to one of a week ago. Some good, long snapdragon is on with a few growers. Stevia is in full crop and mignonette, the best for the season ever seen in this market, can be had in quantity.

NOTES.

Two events of importance came through the past week. One was the opening of the Forrest Flower Shop by Max Niesche, chief artist of the Habermehl force at the Bellevue-Stratford. Mr. Niesche's location is 131 South Broad street, next door to the entrance of the Forrest Theatre. This is a very busy neighborhood and a fine transient trade will no doubt be built up. The other event was the resignation of William Grafani from the Habermehls', where he has had charge of their decorative work. He goes west to be chief of the Fleischmann store in Chicago. The craft are loath to part with Mr. Graham, than whom there is no better floral artist in this country. His particular forte is large decorative work, his creations when the purse strings are loosed being sensational in their originality, magnitude and beauty.

That Philadelphia is gaining as the center of the florists' supply business is seen in the continuous enlargement of the warehouses and storerooms of the large firms which seem to be out-grown almost before they are completed. The M. Rice Co. is now building a new warehouse at 1220-24 Spring Garden street, which will give them three times the capacity of their present location. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have recently added a large storehouse to their establishment, which give them temporary relief, but as they will have to move in the near future, something sensational in the magnitude of the new location may be looked for.

Richard Umfried has purchased the business of Chas. Fox, Sr., at Broad and Thompson streets, a shop he 20 years ago entered as a boy to learn the business. Mr. Umfried should make a successful retailer, as he has energy and a most pleasing personality. Mr. Fox retires on his laurels to round out his life of usefulness. He has been a great factor in the business and carries in his retirement the best wishes of the craft.

Christmas is in the air and preparations for this important event by all branches of the trade are being pushed with vigor. Out-of-town members of the craft from every direction are seen visiting the growers, commission men and supply houses; all branches say they are having a record-breaking business and feel sure it will be the best holiday business ever experienced.

At the last meeting of the local committees of the fourth national flower show, much enthusiasm was shown; it is working out on a grand scale, there being many features that only lack the details and which are being worked out to make them great features, real innovations, all floral, that should or will be sure to draw the crowds.

Special roses, white lilac and cypripediums are features of the Leo Nielsen Co.'s stock. Boxwood and lycopodium are also handled in quantity. A great Christmas trade is predicted.

The Berger Bros.' Central Market is a busy place these days. Christmas greens are handled in quantity and special roses and carnations are features for the holidays.

Edward Reid's new Vim auto truck was seen on the street last Saturday just in time for the holiday rush. It is a good looking car.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is much pleased with the outlook for Christmas. Violets are leaders here.

PRICES ADVANCE.

An advance in prices was a feature of the past week. While the demand was not heavy the supply was light in roses and carnations. The demand for short roses was heavier, in proportion, than for special stock. On December 11, No. 2 roses wholesaled for $3 and $4 per 100; No. 1 for $6 per 100. Special stock ran from $8 to $15 per 100, with selected red stock going as high as $40 and $50. On December 11, carnations wholesaled for $5 and $6 per 100, with some fancy stock going at $8. There was no unusual movement in violets, 75 cents per 100 being an average price for good stock. The orchids, which have been scarce and high for some time, are now in crop and prices have fallen. C. Trianae and C. Percivaliana are now arriving in quantity. There is no longer any fear of a scarcity of lily of the valley; the supply is abundant and prices are normal. There are plenty of lilies to supply the demand, and the same may be said of sweet peas. The supply of gardenias is light and prices remain firm. We yet believe that there will be a very fair supply of flowers for the Christmas trade, though carnations in some localities seem to be a little off. However, there is nothing in the situation, so far as we can learn, to warrant that ancient and hoary breed of picklers to take to their dark rooms or cellars, and begin to mix medicine—or pickle. Neither is it a good time to try to jump prices to prohibitive figures, for there is a good supply of plants in sight. We have heard and read much about the educative influence of flower shows on the public. The public is getting educated good and plenty, and in more than one way. There is a considerable portion of the public that does not have to be hit on the head with a brick to have an idea penetrate. When they go to shows and see flowers in great abundance, and then want to buy some for Christmas, and then find that the price has gone up from 500 to 1,000 per cent, then they get sore and some of them get fighting mad.

December 13.—A fall of snow in the early morning hours turned to pouring rain and travel is very disagreeable. Prices remain firm and the supply of stock continues light. With a continuance of dark weather, the outlook for cut flowers will not be reassuring.

NOTES.

The Grand Central Palace, the scene of several successful flower shows, staged a poultry and pet stock show during the past week. We suppose that this may be classed with the "allied trades," as our friends, the seedsmen, are interested in poultry and some of them, notably the Albert Dickinson Co. and Stumpp & Walter Co., had exhibits. The parrots, canaries and other birds and the aquariums were of interest to florists. The Harrison Nurseries, Berlin, Md., had a carload of nursery stock on exhibition and for sale. Lady Eglantine, the famous hen that laid 314 eggs in a year, was on exhibition. In fact, we believe that for the past week, New Yorkers have taken more interest in Lady Eglantine than in "Hen-ery" Ford and his peace party.

Alfred Kottmiller, the retailer of 426 Madison avenue, and the Vanderbilt hotel, has been very busy throughout the autumn and is now making extensive preparations for the Christmas business, which he feels sure is coming. He started a few years ago in a small way and has been so successful that he took a larger store. His work in designs and table decorations has won a number of first prizes in the shows that have been held in this city and he is well entitled to be called a leading florist. In Mrs. Kottmiller he has a faithful aid and counsellor.

C. A. Ladiges, the retailer of Amsterdam avenue, recently received a cablegram announcing the death, in Hamburg, Germany, of his father, J. H. Ladiges, at the advanced age of 92 years. The elder Ladiges was in this country in 1849, being one of the noted band of "49ers" who went to California during the excitement incident to the discovery of gold. He made a competence and returned to Hamburg, where he has since lived in retirement.

Joseph Trepel, who has six retail stores in Brooklyn, is sending to his customers a handsome indexed telephone guide for ready reference. On the first leaf there is a picture of his little daughter at the telephone, and she says: "For flowers, phone to Daddy, please." We have received an invitation to the annual ball of his employes, to be held at Arion hall, Arion Place, Brooklyn, on the evening of January 16, 1916.

In the show window of Thos. F. Galvin, Inc., Fifth avenue and 46th street, there is a model in silver of an old-time sailing ship, the value of which is said to be $2,500. It rests on a pedestal draped with the stars and stripes, which is flanked by a collection of choice cut flowers and plant combinations. The exhibit has been a constant source of interest to the public.

Lest you forget, the old reliable Cut Flower Exchange, fourth floor of the Coogan building, Sixth avenue and 26th street, opens every morning at 6 o'clock. Manager Thomas Jackson has been there for quite a number of

At the store of Alexander McConnell, Fifth avenue and 49th street, we have recently noticed active preparations for Christmas. This store is always well stocked with the finest of cut flowers, and there is now a great exhibit of fine plants.

At the store of W. A. Blaedel's Sons, 402 West 23d street, we have recently noticed active preparations for Christmas business. This is a finely equipped store, having a conservatory well stocked with plants, in the rear.

John Young & Co. are receiving a constant supply of sprays of the fern, Polypodium Mandaianum, from W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; also a new pink carnation, which is meeting with considerable favor.

James Blauvelt, well known in the retail trade of this city, but who has been in Worcester and Springfield, Mass., for several years, is now with C. C. Trepel, in his store at Broadway and 147th street.

440 S. Dearborn St., CHICAGO.

At this season, it would be an omission not to mention the activities of the Kervan Company, dealers in green, 119 West 28th street. Their store is the busiest in the cut flower district. They have the goods, and their store is crowded with customers throughout business hours. Everything in the line of green, holly, hardy ferns, princess pine, mistletoe, spruce and pine boughs and cones and a variety of other stock is on hand in quantity. The front of their building is handsomely decorated with roping, wreaths and stars. While prices are subject to change, holly is now selling at $4.50 and $5 per case.

Atwood L. Decosta, referee in bankruptcy for the United States district court, sitting at Newark, N. J., has notified the creditors of Samuel Lum, a bankrupt grower of Chatham, N. J., that the Lord & Burnham Company, greenhouse builders of this city and Irvington, have offered $14,750 for the range and $22,500 for the range and land adjoining.

A frequent visitor in the wholesale district is Herman Bowman, proprietor of the White Plains Nurseries, and also of a retail store in the city of White Plains. Outside residents will please note the word "City," for White Plains has recently assumed that dignity, and it's a good American city at that.

At the wholesale store of J. J. Coan, we have recently noticed very fine stock of L. rubrum. Walter Singleman, formerly with the Grovers' Cut Flower Co., is now a clever salesman in this store.

C. A. Ladiges, of Amsterdam avenue and 149th street, has recently been very busy with funeral work. One order filled was a casket cover of violets.

William Hanft, of Young & Nugent's staff, who was recently reported as in Shipping Boxes For Cut Flowers

You want a light, convenient box that won't crush.

H & D Corrugated Fibre Boxes are light, stiff and strong. Their double wall, dead-air space construction keep your flowers fresh.

H & D Boxes can be shipped completely knocked down, saving freight and storage. Only a moment's work to set them up. Metal cover-corners snap together, giving you the stoutest florist's box ever made.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., President; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., First Vice-President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer. Thirty-fourth annual convention, June, 1916.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, who was on the sick list early this week, is at his desk again.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The Cumberland Seed Co. is now in its new location, 318-320 Second avenue, north.

CANTON, O.—The Holmes-Letherman Seed Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA.—The Oklahoma Seed Co. has moved to more commodious quarters at 112 North Main street.

FARGO, N. D.—The Olsen Seed Co.'s establishment was damaged by fire to the extent of about $5,000, December 5.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 15, were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.75 per 100 pounds.

THE 1916 catalogues received this week include those of Oscar H. Will & Co., Bismarck, N. D., and I. N. Simon & Son, Philadelphia, Pa.

W. W. BARNARD, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago who has been seriously ill for some weeks, is now able to leave his bedroom, but is still confined to the hospital.

L. W. WHEELER, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., on his regular eastern trip was suddenly called to western New York last week by the death of his father.

BELLEFONTAINE, O.—John F. Dickinson has purchased the interest of his brother, R. P. Dickinson, in the firm of R. P. Dickinson & Co., and is planning to incorporate under the name of the Dickinson Seed Co.

ASTER seed growers in New York state report very disappointing results in thrashing, probably not more than 25 per cent of a crop, mostly due to October weather conditions, which were very unfavorable to harvesting.

A EUROPEAN seed house is making offers under the conditions named below: "We will deliver at the usual time, unless war, blockade, revolution, prohibition of export, riot or civil commotion or force majeure prevent us being able to do so, and in such a case this order, or any unfulfilled part to be canceled and no claim to be made."

Christmas Greens.

Bouquet Green has been a scarce article, both west and east, this week, selling at $8 to $10 per 100-pound crate on a market practically bare. Wreathing prices stiffened in sympathy with the price of bulk stock.

Holly trade started in sluggish, with a lot of rubbish in commission hands, light packed and off color. Seedsmen's special packed stock has gone well and the Christmas snowstorm the first of the week helped holiday trade generally.

J. Chas. McCullough's Tarpon Catch.

The photographs reproduced below show a few of the many fish landed by J. Chas. McCullough, of Cincinnati, O., while at Sanibel Island, Fla., the past few weeks. All these fish were landed by Mr. McCullough personally in one day on an ordinary tarpon rod and reel and small No. 24 line. The smallest fish weighed over six pounds while the largest one, the "silver king tarpon", measured six feet three inches and weighed about 140 pounds. It is said to be rare for one to land two of these fish the same day, but this great catch was made November 16 by Mr. McCullough, who was accompanied by A. E. Reynolds, of Crawfordsville, Ind., and Albert McCullough, of Cincinnati, O.

Association of Official Seed Analysts.

A cordial invitation has been extended to the members of the American Seed Trade Association, in behalf of the Association of Official Seed Analysts, through Secretary John P. Helyar, to attend the programme session of the annual meeting to be held at Columbus, O., December 28, 1915, in Townsend hall. The program follows:

Variations Observed in Germination and Purity Tests.—C. P. Smith, Maryland.

Variations in Germination and Purity Tests.—O. A. Stevens, No. Dakota.

Temperature Conditions for the Germination of Certain Flower Seeds.—G. T. Harrington, Washington, D. C.

The Germination of Blue Grass Seed.—J. R. Fryer, Calgary, Alta.

Hard Seed Investigations.—H. D. Hughes, Iowa.

The Effect of Incubation at Cool Temperature upon the Subsequent Germination of Hard Clover Seed.—G. T. Harrington.

A Study of Oat Impurities in Iowa.—L. H. Pammel, Iowa.

Spinach Seed.

As the result of the representations made by the state department at Washington, the Dutch government has expressed a willingness to permit the exportation of a certain quantity of round spinach seed on which, as is well known, an embargo had been placed. To obtain the actual permits of exportation, it will be necessary for the Dutch growers to apply to the Dutch minister of agriculture.

Prohibits Importation of Impure Seeds.

Senator Gronna of North Dakota filed on December 7, 1915, a bill (S. 578) "To prohibit the Interstate Shipment of Impure Seeds."

This is identically the same bill filed by Mr. Gronna in the sixty-second congress (February 5, 1913) S. 832 and in the sixty-second congress (April 8, 1913) S. 480, the former being unacted upon, the latter unfavorably reported by the senate committee on agriculture and forestry.

The present bill is thoroughly unwise, impracticable and would if enacted wholly prohibit the shipment in interstate commerce of certain seeds. It applies to all field, vegetable and flower seeds, arbitrarily defining adulterations which no expert can detect, and making all seeds unfit for sale which are under 90 per cent germination.

That all terms of a proposal, contract or estimate should be referred to or contained in the body of the agreement is the substance of a decision handed down recently by the New York Court of Appeals in the suit brought by B. F. Sturtevent Company against the Fire Proof Film Company. The decision says, in part:

"When a contract between the parties is expressed in clear terms on a letter sheet of office stationery, which also contained at the bottom thereof, and printed in small type, certain conditions and exceptions not otherwise referred to, such conditions and exceptions may not be considered a part of the contract."

Nebraska Corn.

J. C. Robinson, of Waterloo, writes as follows: "Opinions here differ somewhat as to the condition of corn. An occasional farmer seems to think that corn is in pretty good shape, but a field inspection of various crops grown under contract indicates that corn is probably in as backward condition, for the season, as it was ever known to be here. A few farmers are husking, being three to four weeks late in commencing, and even the best fields seem to have a good many green ears. A cold winter would destroy a large portion of the corn for seed purposes. Flint corns are, of course, in better shape. The later varieties of sweet corn are in much the same condition as the dent varieties. Believe there will be a shrinkage of fully 25 per cent in sorting, owing to wet ears, and even then the later varieties of sweet corn will require artificial drying to put them in safe condition."

LUDINGTON, MICH.—A boys' potato club in Osceola county raised 14,898 bushels of potatoes on five acres of land in 1915.

ONE Chicago grower has been very successful with Brussels chicory, or whitloof, an article which is usually imported from Belgium, but very scarce this year on account of the war. The grower in question is marketing a considerable quantity at 50 cents per pound.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chicago, had on inspection last week, from one of the firm's customers, a splendid sample mushroom, measuring five inches in diameter, the crown and stem being of like proportions. The specimen was produced from Pure Culture spawn, Type No. 11, supplied by this firm.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, December 14.—Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 25 to 30 cents per carton; lettuce, cases 30 cents; radishes, $1.00 to $1.25 per 100 bunches; asparagus, 50 cents per dozen bunches; celery, 10 to 20 cents per bunch; tomatoes, four baskets, $1.25 to $1.65; cucumbers, dozen, $1.25.

New York, December 14.—Celery, per bunch of 12 stalks, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.40 to $1.60 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 7½ cents to 30 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to $1.00.

Fumigating Greenhouses.

The proper fumigation of greenhouses has been a problem for many years. If expense did not enter, the matter could be easily solved by using some of the modern nicotine extracts, which certainly do the business with the least danger. We have seen such serious damage done to crops by smoking with tobacco stems, that the one loss exceeded the probable cost of nicotine for ten years; hence, first cost is not always the greatest consideration. There is, however, no question about tobacco stems being efficient, cheap and safe if carefully used. When going around among the growers we find many crude methods in use at this day. We have repeatedly handled this subject in these columns, as it is a most important one, and will stand repeating.

In the first place, much depends upon the stems. They should be fresh, protected against weather and strong air currents and used regularly. A moderate smoke of long duration and frequent repetition will do the work much better and safer than a violent application at long intervals. It is generally best to establish safe formulas for each house or set of houses, and compel employes to adhere strictly to instructions. We have used a method that is both simple and safe, and not common in practice—namely, the inverted vessel. The principle of this method is slow burning, long duration and a cool smoke. To proceed, we decide upon the size of one container, either a 3-gallon or 5-gallon iron vessel. We pack it full of the fresh stems, and by adding a little oil or excelsior start a fire on top of the stems. As soon as well under way we place vessel upside down at the desired spot and regulate the air supply by propping some piece of iron, stone or crock under one side. It is impossible for the tobacco to blaze, hence, the smoke will be cool and lay low in the house. This is the secret of successful smoking—have the smoke low down to penetrate the foliage masses. A hot smoke upon the roof is wasted and always dangerous to tender plants.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President; John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
 Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

GENESE0, N. Y.—Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Samuel Fraser Nursery. The capital stock is $75,000.

HURON, S. D.—The South Dakota State Horticultural Society will hold its annual convention in this city, January 18-20.

LEWISTOWN, MONT.—M. L. Dean, state horticulturist, estimates that Montana growers have this year marketed 200 cars of apples—from 130,000 to 140,000 boxes—for which they received about $140,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The MacRorie-McLaren Co. will plant 25,000 pine and cypress trees in San Mateo county as soon as weather conditions permit, for an eastern capitalist interested in forestry in that section.

LINCOLN, NEB.—Under the leadership of prominent horticulturists the Nebraska State Horticultural Society will make at the mid-winter apple show to be held here January 17-23, a complete exposition of the horticultural resources of the state.

PROVO, UTAH.—The annual convention of the Utah State Horticultural Society will be held in two places this year, the first time in the history of the organization that the programme has been divided. The meeting in this city will be held December 14-15 and at Ogden, December 16-17.

Western Association of Nurserymen.

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen was held at the Coates House, Kansas City, Mo., December 8-9, 1915. Following the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, appointments of committees and other routine business the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Floyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., president; W. A. Harrison, York, Neb., vice-president; Geo. W. Holsinger, Rosedale, Kan., secretary; E. J. Holman, Leavenworth, Kan., financial secretary and treasurer. The executive committee is composed of the following: Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.; D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.; H. D. Simpson, Vincennes, Ind.; J. H. Skinner, Topeka, Kan., and Geo. H. Johnston, Kansas City, Mo. A resolution was offered providing for honorary membership in the association for those who have distinguished themselves as nurserymen, and those whose fellowship and assistance have promoted the interests of the association. A resolution was also offered proposing the changing of the date of the annual meeting. Reports were made by W. P. Stark on the conference with the seedsmen's convention, the committee on tariff and the committee on trade terms.

The committee on program had enlisted a very able aggregation of lecturers, their papers, the titles of which are as follows, being listened to with much interest: "The Effect of the Tendency of Eastern Nurserymen to Grade No. 1 Cherry, Plum and Pear, 11/16 instead of 3/4," by J. H. Skinner; "How Can the Wholesale Nurseryman Avoid Loss from So-Called Poor Collections," by Peter Youngers; "Over-Production and the Relation of the Apple Seedling Grower Thereto," by C. W. Carman; "The Policy of Giving Away Nursery Stock at the End of the Season"—Negative, E. H. Balco; affirmative, Geo. Holsinger; "Should the Wholesale and the Retail Nurserymen Confine Their Operations Strictly to Their Respective Spheres?" by J. W. Schuette; "Benefits of the Reorganized American Association and our Relation Thereto," by J. R. Mayhew; "The Influence of the War on Nursery Stock—Can a Better Demand Be Expected After the Conflict Is Over?" by L. C. Stark; "The Benefits of Parcel Post and the Advisability of Requesting an Adoption of Containers That Will Not Damage Stock While in Transit," by Carl Sondereggar; "Ways and Means of Providing the Nurseryman with Reliable Statistics on the Supply of Growing Nursery Stock," by E. J. Holman; "The Condition of the Nursery Business in the East," by Wm. Pitkin; "Maintenance of Wholesale Prices and the Immediate Loss of Business Thereby," by Henry Chase; "Who Are Entitled to Receive Trade Lists and the Effect on Wholesale and Retail Prices When Used Indiscriminately," by J. H. Dayton; "Transportation," by Chase Sizemore; "Is There an Increased Demand for a Higher Class of Ornamentals? Should Ornamentals Be Grown Chiefly by Specialists? Is There Danger of Over-Production in the Ornamental Line?" by Frank Weber; "The Hardy Pecan and Extent of Latitude in Which It May Be Profitably Grown," by W. C. Reed; "The New Oklahoma State Law Pertaining to the Nursery Business," by Jas. Parker. The address of Curtis Nye Smith, counsel for the American Association of Nurserymen, who spoke on the subject, "The State Nursery Stock Laws and Interstate Commerce," was especially interesting and instructive, being right to the point. One thousand copies of this article will be printed and sent to members of the association throughout the United States.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Cleaning Up After Christmas.

The Christmas sales will give the plantsman an opportunity to give the houses a thorough overhauling and begin preparations for the Easter stock, and also more room for the plants that are to produce flowers during the winter. The probabilities are that the best plants have been disposed of, and the demand for the balance will slacken up considerably for the next two or three weeks. Any plants that will not be salable in the middle of the next month, especially if they are not of the best quality, had better be thrown away, and not allowed to remain taking up valuable space for a month or more, only to be discarded later. The stock plants should all be selected and preparations for next season's propagation begun. The old favorite Begonia incarnata is still grown by many. The old plants never make good stock for another year, so select enough to produce all the stock wanted, and discard the balance. It will be busy times where many plants are grown, but the quicker and earlier the work is done the better will be the resultant crops. The bulb stock is now ready to be brought in and all the room should be immediately filled up with stock that can be grown into plants that will find ready sale. It sometimes takes courage to throw away plants that look as if they would bring in something, but it is far better to do this, even if a plant is thrown out that might be sold, than to carry along a lot of stock that never turns in a cent to the money drawer.

Poinsettias.

This is a Christmas plant pure and simple. It is to the midwinter holidays what the lily is to Easter and the sale of plants or flowers after the new year is very small and hardly remunerative. The plants that are left should at once be treated for stock plants. It is the custom of some growers to immediately place the pots under a bench and water them no longer. It is much better, however, to block them up closely in a warm house and gradually dry them off until the wood ripens and then store them away where they will be kept dry. When the plants are treated by the former method the green wood often dies down more than half the length, but by a slower ripening off many more and much better cuttings can be obtained. They can be laid down on their sides under a carnation bench where they will not receive any water, or if the pots are needed they can be heeled-in in such a location, and here they can remain until April, when they should be started for propagation, using either the old growth or starting the plants into growth and making the cuttings from the young shoots as they break from the old wood. With these it is better to make the cuttings with a heel and in a warm location they root quite easily.

Tulips and Narcissi.

The Dutch bulbs are now in condition to bring into the houses, for they should be well rooted, and will force readily, and from the first of the year on the grower should regulate the culture of these so that there will be a continuous supply. The best way to accomplish this is to have one day in the week which is bulb day, that is, on this day the succeeding lots will be brought from where they are stored and placed in the greenhouses. The demand will, of course, fluctuate to some extent, but by looking back two or three years it will be found that the call for this stock is about in the same proportion every year, and a basis on which to figure about how many pots or boxes should be brought up can be obtained. If it is found that the stock is accumulating at any time, those that are not quite in bloom can be removed to a cooler house and retarded, and those that are almost in bloom, if moved into a shed where it is dark and quite cool, will last in splendid condition for a week or 10 days longer. For the present it will be necessary to put the pans and pots in a shaded position in order to get the proper length of stem. Those forced early if allowed to stand in a warm house in full sunlight, will open their flowers before they have attained good height, so it is well to place them under a bench or provide a place where they can be kept rather dark for a week. In cutting the flowers endeavor to cut them from the pans or boxes that have been in the houses the longest. A thoughtless man will cut into a box that is just opening and which would be good for a week or more, when there are plenty that could be cut that will not last nearly so long. There is always a great waste in growing bulbs and everything that is possible should be done to prevent it. On bulb day when the fresh lot is put on the bench those that were brought up three or four weeks before and are in full flower will be ready to be thrown out. Any flowers that may be on these boxes, if they are well in bloom, should be cut and placed in water. They will last much longer if cut and kept cool than they will if left on the bulbs in the greenhouses.

Vinca Rosea.

A plant that is often lost sight of by many for summer bedding is Vinca rosea, and it makes a most beautiful plant, being covered with flowers all through the summer until frost. The great cause of there not being much stock of these is that the seed is not sown early enough. December or early January is the time to plant the seeds of these plants to have them in fine shape for bedding out in June. Plants started early and grown in a warm house will be in flower at the time of planting and continue a mass of bloom throughout the season. The seed should be sown in flats which should be placed in a house having a temperature 65° to 70°. When the second leaf forms they should be pricked out into other flats about an inch apart and when they have five or six leaves potted in 2-inch pots, later being shifted into the 3-inch size. The soil should be of a sandy nature both in the potting and in the bed, if possible, but they will grow well outside in a heavy loam. They can be had in white, rose pink and pink with white eye, and come very true to color from seed.

President Wilson's Wedding Flowers.

ORCHIDS AND ROSES FAVORITES.

The floral decorations for the wedding of President Wilson and Mrs. Galt, December 18, are described as being very elaborate. The work was in charge of J. H. Small & Sons, the well known Washington florists. Roses and orchids were extensively employed, the latter being the bride's favorites. The press dispatches describe the work as follows:

"The decorations for the wedding were most effective and artistic. Orchids and American Beauty roses formed the motive of the general scheme, which was planned by Mrs. Galt herself.

"More than 1,200 orchids in six varieties, shading from deep lavender to the palest pink, and ranging from the large Cattleya Trianae to the more graceful and delicate sprays of Dendrobium Phalaenopsis were used. Besides these there were 10 dozen American Beauty roses and six bunches of Lady Stanley roses, white heather, with a profusion of adiantum, including A. Farleyense. A large wedding bower occupied the space about the mantel. A mirror arranged so as to reflect the entire bridal party and framed in orchids was placed in the center of a background of A. Farleyense and other ferns, which extended from the ceiling to the floor.

"A shell-shaped canopy of ferns, lined with pearly white heather, was caught at the four corners with sprays of Dendrobium Phalaenopsis, Vanda coerulea, Laelia anceps alba, with sheaves of long-stemmed American Beauty roses and cibotium at the sides of the canopy.

"The white satin prie dieu placed on the white vicuna rug was decorated on both sides with clusters of pink orchids and a large spray of the same orchids was tied at the back of the bower, high above the orchid-framed mirror. The vicuna rug was the gift of the Peruvian government to Miss Jessie Wilson, and was used at both the Wilson White House weddings.

"The second of the salon drawing rooms was also decorated with orchids and Adiantum Farleyense.

"The entrance hall and stairway, which, of course, played an important part in this wedding, were decorated with ferns and American Beauty roses. Banks of ferns and American Beauty roses and Asparagus plumosus were placed before the large antique mirror, and were twined about it.

"The staircase down which Mrs. Galt came to meet the president, was decorated with ferns, vines and American Beauty roses. Large bouquets of American Beauty roses and ferns decorated the posts. The decorative scheme in the dining room was entirely pink. At one end a mass of pink roses nestled amid a mass of ferns. The old-fashioned buffets, brought from Virginia, were banked with growing ferns and pink roses. The round dining table was decorated with banks of Lady Stanley roses and Adiantum Farleyense, at each end of the table.

"The white-frosted, pink orchid trimmed wedding cake formed the center decoration."

BEFORE THE WAR.

During the week preceding Christmas at least $2,000,000 was spent for Christmas trees in Germany—probably the sum was much more, even double that figure, says the American consul at Nuremberg. In Nuremberg, a city of 360,000 people, 78,000 Christmas trees were offered for sale by 238 dealers, and more than 70,000 of them were sold. This means that practically every household in the city had a Christmas tree. The prices ranged from 12 cents to $1.25, the average being not less than 35 cents. The people of Nuremberg thus spent for their Christmas trees about $25,000.

The custom of raising a Christmas tree is universal in Germany. I have never known a German home without one. In every city in the Empire a week before Christmas the public squares are given over to the Christmas-tree markets and become veritable forests of symmetrical little fir and pines which have been cut from near-by forest reserves. About 60 per cent of the population of Germany dwells in cities, and there are thus 8,000,000 or more families who certainly buy Christmas trees at these markets. Twenty-five cents each is a very low estimate for the average price. Nor does the rural population—the dwellers in villages of less than 2,000 population—go without Christmas trees. While to a large extent they go to the neighboring forests and cut their own trees, they may not do so without paying therefor, and the 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 trees needed to supply them do not cost less than 10 to 12 cents each.

Every Christmas tree must also be decorated. Five or ten cents' worth of candles and 25 cents' worth of new gilt balls, artificial snow, etc., is the minimum each year, even when the decorations are saved from year to year. Expenditures for decorations often run into much higher figures, but, taking the lowest figures, $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 are spent annually for decorations alone. It is safe to say that Christmas trees and their decorations cost the German people not less than $6,000,000 to $7,000,000 every year.

HENRY WESTON, PRESIDENT.

Henry Weston was born in Enfield, London, Eng., in 1866. He worked for H. B. May, a florist of Edmonton, near London, and came to New York in 1888, and was for a time foreman at the range of W. C. Wilson, Astoria, L. I. For two years he was on the Lorillard estate, Newport, R. I., and later with the late Herman Dreyer, Woodside, L. I. Twenty-two years ago he started in business for himself at Hempstead and now has a range of 85,000 square feet devoted to carnations, sweet peas, chrysanthemums and a variety of other stock. He was president of the Growers' Cut Flower Co. of New York for seven years. He is now president of the school board in the district in which he resides, has served as state grand master of the Shield of Honor, a fraternal insurance organization, and is at present its grand treasurer for the state of New York. He is a member of the Society of American Florists, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and several other organizations. He is married and has one son.

GEORGE E. M. STUMPP, VICE-PRESIDENT.

George E. M. Stumpp was born in New York City in 1881, the son of George M. and Mrs. Stumpp. His mother is now dead. His father, who for many years was one of the leading florists of the city, retired from business about two years ago. George E. M. received his early education in his native city, later spending two years in Germany with an uncle who was a florist. During his stay in Germany, he spent much of his time mastering the details of his uncle's business, also attending a school, where instructions in horticulture were given. After returning home, being of an adventurous turn of mind, he spent three years in traveling throughout the United States, visiting all the leading cities and working in many leading florist establishments. He eventually returned to New York and joined his father's staff. When his father, as has been noted, retired, he took over the business, located at Fifth avenue and 58th street, New York, and has since continued it with increasing success. He is a natural genius with a wonderful capacity for detail. Many of the artistic and mechanical features of his large store are the work of his own hands. He has a keen sense of humor and can not only put over a joke on "ye scribe," but take one on himself, which is a pleasing treat. He is a member and director of the Horticultural Society of New York; a member and director of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery; a life member of the Society of American Florists and vice-president elect of the New York Florists' Club. He is happily married.

MAX SCHLING, TRUSTEE.

Max Schling was born on the country place of his father, in Bohemia, his father being one of an old family of merchants of Vienna, Austria. He studied sculpture, but on account of weak eyes, he gave it up and took up gardening. He started with the noted botanists, Barone Van Huegel and Daniel Van Hovibrenk. At the age of 16 years, he was placed in charge of a section in which the most valued stove plants were grown. He also studied at the Horticultural High School in Vienna. He was of an inquiring mind and a talker, traits which yet follow him, and in debating clubs, which he attended, he always chose flowers for his theme. While yet an apprentice, he won prizes for the excellence of his exhibits. He came to America in 1900, and one year later started in business in a small shop. In combinations of bouvardias, pansies, cornflowers and many simple annuals, he made a hit with the public by his sometimes daring color schemes. He deserves much credit for a revival of many of the old fashioned flowers. His business expanded and he has now a fine retail store on 59th street, near the Plaza hotel, New York. It is needless to add that he is an expert landscape gardener.

CHARLES SCHENCK, TRUSTEE.

Charles Schenck was born in New York City and educated in the public schools. In 1887 he began his career as a florist, selling at wholesale. In 1894 he formed a partnership with Frank Traendly, under the firm name of Traendly & Schenck, to carry on a wholesale business. The history and success of this firm is very well known to many in the trade throughout the country. Their business prospered from the start. They handle good stock and are noted for fair dealings. Personally, Charles Schenck is intelligent, industrious, clever and obliging. He is a thirty-second degree Mason and served as a member of the grand lodge of the state of New York. He is a life member of the Society of American Florists; has been a member of the New York Florists' Club for 20 years, and in that time has only missed two meetings. He is married and has two children, the youngest a daughter two weeks old.

ROBERT G. WILSON, TRUSTEE.

Though Robert G. Wilson is a comparatively young man, he has for a number of years been well known in the florists' trade of New York and New Jersey. He has been always interested in growing, quite recently with a brother, in the old Pitcher & Manda range at Short Hills, New Jersey. He is best known through his activities in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he has been located for quite a number of years. He has a fine store and business at 3 Green avenue, near Fulton street, and another store with a considerable glass area at 341 Green avenue. He is a Mason, a Forester and a member of the Society of American Florists. Personally, Mr. Wilson is clever and genial and makes friends. He is married and has two daughters. The other officers, John Young, and Wm. C. Rickards, Jr., are already well known to the trade.

Improving the Lawn.

The improvement of an old lawn is a very much more difficult problem than establishing a new one. In many cases it is impracticable to attempt the improvement of an old lawn that is in bad condition, say the specialists of the United States department of agriculture. However, if a reasonably good turf obtains, it is possible to better it materially by reseeding, fertilizing, and watering.

The management of the lawn after it is once established is an extremely important matter, and there are a few general practices that should be followed carefully. Beginning in the early spring, the first thing to do is to remove with a rake the top dressing that has been applied the fall before. After removing this it is usually advisable to apply some fertilizer, even though the soil is already reasonably fertile. Bone meal is probably the best commercial fertilizer to use on a lawn, considering the danger from the misuse of nitrate of soda. Bone meal can be used without taking any special caution in its application, as it is in no way injurious to the grass. Eight pounds to 1,000 square feet is a liberal application. Any commercial fertilizer that is used should be applied early in the spring, when the grass begins to grow.

There are probably more mistakes made in connection with the watering of the lawn than in any other phase of its management. The practice of sprinkling as it is almost universally followed is fundamentally wrong, not that the sprinkler does not furnish enough water to the grass during the season, but that it does not furnish it in properly distributed quantities. Except in rare cases, the lawn should not be watered oftener than two or three times a week, provided watering is done properly. A thorough soaking is necessary and should be given in the late afternoon or early morning. The point to be borne in mind is that the ground should be thoroughly saturated at each application to at least three inches in depth.

There are many weeds that are troublesome in the lawn, not only in the spring but also in the summer and autumn. Among the most important ones are dandelion, plantain, chickweed, oxeye daisy and yarrow. While chemical sprays are more effective in the eradication of these weeds than in the case of crab-grass, the best method of preventing their development is to remove them with a spud or similar implement.

The weed problem can perhaps best be solved by making the conditions as favorable as possible for the lawn grasses and to maintain a strict watch at all times to check the growth of the troublesome weeds at the beginning.

Farmers' Bulletin 494 on "Lawn Soils and Lawns" may be procured on application to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Sibley's Marguerites at Athol, Mass.

The accompanying illustration shows an attractive bed of marguerites and maidenhair ferns planted around a walnut tree, April 19, by Chas. W. Sibley, florist, Athol, Mass. The picture was taken July 4. The bed attracted much attention from auto parties, it being on a road which is a direct line from Boston to North Adams, Mass. Mr. Sibley has recently moved to 133 School street, his new location offering more room.

THE ROSE.

Butte Floral Company's Roses.

The accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph taken about November 15 in a section of the rose houses of the Butte Floral Co., Butte, Mont., shows some exceptionally fine plants of Richmond, Killarney, pink and white, Shawyer, Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia. Charles Adams, the rose grower at this establishment, is very much interested in his work and is proud of the fact that he has not a single sick plant on the place. He believes these are the finest lot of plants, and that they are producing the finest flowers in Montana, and he does not believe it possible for stock to do any better than it is doing at this firm's range. The company's retail store was opened in the fall of 1900 and this will be the first year that it will not be necessary to ship in roses for its Christmas trade. It is anticipated that about 7,500 blooms will be cut from 5,000 plants, which will take care of the requirements at that time. Business is reported very good at present, with prospects very bright for the holiday trade.

Rose Prima Donna.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Reading in your esteemed paper of the controversy over the rose, Prima Donna, at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, December 13, we trust we will not transgress on your valuable space by answering some of the points made.

In the first place, we wish to say that three years ago we bought a number of plants of Prima Donna that were sold to us and billed to us as Prima Donna. In addition to this, it was advertised all over the west and is so done today as Prima Donna. In our circular which we are sending to the trade, we have printed in addition to Prima Donna the words, Mme. Euler, Guillot, 1908, without knowing from our own experience that Euler and Prima Donna are one and the same.

The strain which we are selling under the name of The Florex Gardens, has been produced after careful selection, experimentation and thorough cultivation, and the success we now have in producing this beautiful rose is by no means the same as it was when we began to grow it. The fact that the judges at the New York Florists' Club gave the exhibitor of Prima Donna a vote of thanks and awarded the rose 87 points of merit, show the value of the rose, with which the name had nothing whatever to do. In addition, we think the name, Prima Donna, is much more attractive to the general public, whom we all want to serve. The French name would have been contorted in all manner of ways. If the Euler and Prima Donna are one and the same rose, that would be nothing unusual in rose nomenclature. From the action of Wallace R. Pierson, at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, one would infer that he was strongly opposed to this matter of change in rose nomenclature. Accidentally opening one of the latest catalogues of A. N. Pierson, Inc., we find Prince of Bulgaria advertised as Mrs. Taft and Mme. Ferdinand Jamain listed as American Beauty. No doubt there are many others in the same class.

It is not our intention to exhibit this rose for awards of merit, which, of course, are always acceptable, but it is done to show the grower what this beautiful rose can do. And, it is our intention to exhibit at the meetings during the dark months, as an impression has gone abroad that it will not do well in the winter season. We have never shown the Prima Donna as a "new rose," and if it has been called such in newspaper reports, it was done without our knowledge and authority.

THE FLOREX GARDENS.

Propagating Young Stock.

There are many important things that require prompt attention immediately after the holidays, and one of the most important is the propagating of the young rose stock, either by grafting or cuttings. As most all of the leading forcing roses seem to do far better grafted, it becomes a necessity to do considerable grafting on almost any range, great or small. All of the Killarney strains do well grafted; also Russell, Ward, Ophelia, Arenberg, Richmond and others. Sunburst is a variety that does better on own roots; in fact, it seems to be the only way to handle Sunburst, as it forms a heavy callous at the union that breaks it apart at this point as the Perle des Jardins used to do. We do not mean to state that the above varieties will not do well on own roots, but including the different soils light, heavy and medium, the grafted plants will be found the most satisfactory in every way. If an ideal soil is at hand any variety that breaks freely at the roots can be grown successfully on own roots, but the soil must be a good stiff clay with a heavy soil (virgin soil) well drained in the solid borders, mixed well with the proper amount of good cow manure and thoroughly composted. If this doesn't produce good roses, look for some other excuse than the soil.

We will not go into many details in reference to the propagating house or grafting case, other than to state that cleanliness counts a good many points in a successful strike; a strongly constructed bench that will hold three inches of medium sharp sand, (bank sand preferred) carefully screened and firmly packed, will be about right. There should be sufficient bottom heat enclosed to bring the sand up to a temperature of 70°. The overhead temperature should be 58° to 60° or about the same temperature of the rose houses. If the house is located so as to be shaded by a wall or another house, no other shading will be necessary; otherwise, one will have to arrange a set of cloth-covered screens in some practical way that will suggest itself according to the requirements of the house.

While these preparations are taking place, we should look over the range carefully and try to decide what to grow for the coming year. Without a doubt there are still too many Killarneys grown, although this grand old rose with its several splendid sports will never be forgotten and the Double White is still the best white we know of at the present time. Ophelia one finds good almost everywhere it is seen growing, which we think means that one should consider the point carefully before increasing their stock of Ophelia, as we fear this variety will be somewhat overgrown. Russell, to those who can grow it successfully, is sure some rose. We must admit, that after seeing perhaps 50,000 of the two reds, Hoosier Beauty and Hadley, that they both lack something as a profitable commercial variety, and the writer has seen them both growing where all other stock was in excellent condition. Some of the growers claim that both varieties produced good summer blooms, yet the call for red roses in summer is rather limited. So to our way of thinking there is still room for a good white rose and a good or better red than what we have to choose from now, one that will truly be an all the year around variety. Prima Donna shows promise, and we hear many nice things about the new rose, Champ Weiland. The color of both these roses is exquisite and one should always give any new variety of merit a trial. We firmly advocate do well with your neighbor, it may do with you and "vice versa."

Just a few words about grafting preparations. If you have not ordered your manetti stocks, do so at once. Try to get the best stock obtainable—strong English or Irish stocks, about the size of a lead pencil, is preferable. Pot them in a good rose soil, using 2½-inch pots and trim the roots slightly at the tips, place in a cool house under a bench or in a cool shed, and keep them at a temperature of about 40° to 45°, just enough to start the and allowed to dry thoroughly before placing the sash in position. The sash should fit snugly at the joints; also, at top and bottom, 12 inches of headroom at the lower edge and 16 inches at the back or ridge (if the case is a double one) will be about right. For further details look for our next supplement on propagating. E.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting in New York City, December 13. It was reported that the rose garden premiums for the Philadelphia flower show, March 25-April 2, had been increased so that the first prize would be $500 in cash, second prize, $400 in cash, and third prize, $300 in cash. H. F. Michell Co., Inc., offers a gold medal for the best vase of 25 cut blooms of American Beauty roses; a gold medal for the best vase of 25 cut blooms Mrs. Charles Russell roses; a gold medal for the best vase of 25 cut blooms of red roses. Special prizes as follows have been received:

A. Doemling, Lansdowne, Pa., $25.00.
Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., $25.00.
C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., $25.00.
S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., $10.00.
S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I., $25.00.
Lord & Burnham Co., New York, $25.00.
Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., $25.00.
Pulverized Manure Co., Chicago, $25.00.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, $25.00.
Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., $25.00.

These prizes are all at the disposition of the American Rose Society to place where they will be most useful.

Upon motion duly made it was moved that the secretary be directed to notify all affiliated societies that beginning January, 1916, they will be required to pay 25 cents for each member instead of 10 cents as heretofore. The reason for this action is, that the furnishing of medals and annuals as now proposed makes it an looking into the merits of any new rose; take a trip and see them growing, then plunge if necessary, you are then buying with your eyes open. If this isn't possible, at least send for a few flowers and study the color, form and foliage, stem, etc. A grower with some experience should get a fairly good line on the rose by this means. At the same time owing to certain conditions, the new varieties may prove a disappointment the first season only to prove a winner the second year. I could cite several instances where this has been the experience with the writer. One in particular was Killarney Brilliant. We planted good stock of this rose in June, about the first of the month, in same house with Killarney and White Killarney. By January 1 of the same year the pink and white Killarney were twice the size and blooming profusely, whereas, Brilliant was carrying hardly any foliage, was stunted in growth and was black spotting fearfully. By March 1 they were as fine a lot of plants as one would desire, and from then on they have been equally as good as the other Killarneys, which are unusually strong at this writing. This house had the same soil and same treatment, and there was little or no difference in the size and condition of the plants when housed. So I will repeat—do not be in too great a hurry to condemn or discard a new variety. Shawyer, though condemned by some, is making money for others, as are lots of other varieties. I recently received a letter from a grower, stating that the red rose, Francis Scott Key, paid better than any rose he was growing. The year round again, it is Prince d' Arenberg, and so on along the line. Try them out, give them all a place, and try to do them justice. If it doesn't slightest root action, which will take two or three weeks.

Spray the tops daily, and see to it that the soil is kept fairly wet in the pots; never on the dry side. While the stocks are coming on a case can be made to hold the grafts. All that is required is a shaded case with sash top fitted as nearly air tight as possible and with inclosed bottom heat so that with a one-inch layer of screened ashes over a layer of moss in the bottom, the temperature can be held at 75° in zero weather. The case should receive a good coating of lime wash impracticable arrangement when based upon 10 cents for the American Rose Society to carry out.

The committee appointed at the last annual meeting to report upon the standardization of stems of various cut flowers for commercial sale reported progress. The committee was composed of S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.; Patrick Welsh, Boston, Mass.; Frank H. Traendly, New York. The arranging of suitable lengths of stem was brought up by Ex-President W. H. Elliott, and from time to time has been requested by commercial florists in various parts of the country. A matter was referred to the executive committee asking if something could not be done in regard to preventing the re-naming of roses different from the name under which they were first disseminated; action was referred to the committee to be presented at the coming annual meeting relative to the same.

There are 114 members of the American Rose Society who stand in good and regular form with the Society of American Florists, and this entitles the president of the American Rose Society, who is S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, Pa., to membership on the board of directors of the S. A. F. for 1916.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The following roses were registered by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and publication of the same directed according to the rules and regulations of the S. A. F.:

Mrs. Wm. R. Hearst—A sport from My Maryland with the same productive habit of growth and freedom of flowering. In color, a clear, dark pink, a shade resembling Bridesmaid, and a decided improvement on the parent.

Red Radiance—A sport from Radiance. Similar in habit and growth, but a clear, even shade of red in color and of equal merit to its parent as a forcing and garden rose.

Little Sunshine—Seedling from Rosa multiflora nana x Soleil d'Or. Color, creamy yellow varying to deep golden yellow occasionally flecked or splashed with crimson. Double flowers one and one-half to two inches in diameter, carried in large panicles throughout the season. Habit, dwarf, spreading and vigorous similar to Multiflora nana. Very hardy and valuable for garden planting, but of special value for pot culture. BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Postal Receipts Show Improvement.

Marked improvement in business conditions is reflected in the November revenues of the 50 largest post offices of the country, producing approximately half of all the postal receipts. Postmaster General Burleson announced this December 5 in a statement showing an increase of $2,033,138 or 17.96 per cent. for those offices over November a year ago.

Total receipts of the 50 cities were $13,349,459 in November this year.

New York, with $2,836,761, led the list, showing $525,691 more revenue than November, 1914, an increase of 22.74 per cent, against a decrease of 8.19 per cent in November last year from November, 1913.

Chicago was second, with $2,407,618, an increase of $443,812, or 22.60 per cent, compared with a decrease of 12.34 per cent last year.—Chicago Tribune, December 6, 1915.

Los Angeles.

CLUB MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held December 7, and following the preliminary business, the nomination of officers was held, resulting as follows: W. W. Folgate, president; James Taylor and Jacob Dieterich, for vice-president; Hal S. Kruckeberg, for secretary; Mrs. Miller and Jas. MacGillivray, for treasurer. Henry W. Turner, R. M. Teague, H. L. McMinn and Sydney Batho were proposed for membership and favorably acted upon. Upon motion, duly seconded, the secretary was instructed to request the county horticultural commission to make an appropriation for the printing of the paper read at the meeting by P. A. Eduart, county horticultural commissioner, the speaker of the evening, who told in brief of many years of careful study and observation as regards the history of injurious insects, their habits and methods of control. The society desires that this valuable paper be distributed through the society to all interested, nurserymen, seedsmen and florists.

L. P. Edlefsen, who has been studying ways and means to benefit the society and create wider interest in its work, suggested saving the papers presented at the various meetings, having them printed in pamphlet form and distributed gratis to members. The question box and monthly excursions to points of interest nearby, where the wild flora as well as cultivated plants could be studied, were also urged by him. He also recommended that the society buy an acre of ground in Montebello, which is now a center of the florist and nursery industries, and erect a building suitable for the holding of meetings and flower shows, each member to subscribe for shares at $10 each.

Geo. C. Roeding, prominent in horticultural circles in the west, a resident of Fresno, Calif., was present, and in a short but interesting talk praised the work being done by the society. Henry W. Turner was appointed by the chair to deliver a paper at the next meeting. The secretary was instructed to draft a letter of condolence to be sent to the widow of the late W. Atlee Burpee.

NOTES.

Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., who has been spending the past two weeks attending to matters concerning the New York state exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition, made a flying trip to southern California. While his time was very limited owing to the demands on his time at home, due to the holiday season, he visited several of the local florists and nurserymen, including Henry W. Turner, Howard & Smith and the Busch Gardens. He also visited a number of the private estates, studying California plants and their habits. At the close of the exposition his purpose was to dispose of all plants and shrubs used in the New York state exhibit. The entire collection consisted of 114 varieties of elegant specimens of boxwoods and bay trees, Kentia palms and a magnificent group of conservatory plants were sold to Miss Anita Baldwin of Pasadena.

The Newberry-Sherlock Avacado Nursery of Pasadena, reports business good. They have sent out announcements that owing to the steadily increasing demand for the better varieties of avacadoes, some will soon be off the market and the planter will have to take what is left.

Henry W. Turner, of Montebello, anticipates a large holiday trade. His rose propagations, Prima Donna and September Morn, are making great strides, both in the east and the west. He has issued an attractive catalogue of the varieties he grows.

Paul J. Howard, well-known landscape architect, has moved into a very attractive office in the Marsh-Strong building, 1521 West Seventh street.

A. E. Hansen, formerly with Theo. Payne, is now with Paul J. Howard, where he is attending to some of the outside business.

The fine catalogue of the Armstrong Nurseries of Ontario, Calif., is just off the press. H. S. K.

OBITUARY.

George Pedrick.

George Pedrick, pioneer florist of Windsor, Ont., died at his late residence in that city, December 16, after an illness of about two months. He was 63 years of age. The deceased was born in Devonshire, Eng., and has been a resident of Canada for 35 years, and for the past 22 years conducted a retail florist establishment near his residence. He was a member of the Detroit Florists' Club, and was well informed in all lines of floriculture. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Kate Pedrick, and one daughter, Miss Kate Pedrick. The funeral was held December 19, and was attended by a large number of friends, including members of the Independent Order of Foresters, of which the deceased was a member. Many handsome floral tributes, among them a floral emblem sent by the Detroit Florists' Club, accompanied him to his last resting place. J. F. S.

Henry Blume.

Henry Blume, a salesman for P. J. Smith, the wholesaler, 131 West 28th street, New York, died suddenly on the morning of December 20. Acute indigestion is believed to have been the cause of his death. He worked Saturday, December 18, and did not leave the store till 7 p. m. He was born in New York, 42 years ago. At an early age he went to work for the late Adolph Le Madt, on the Bowery, and was with him a number of years. He was for 13 years with V. F. Lichtenhan, who formerly held the concession for selling flowers in the Grand Central station. He had been with P. J. Smith about two years. He was genial and kindly and well liked by his employer and customers. A. F. F.

George C. Beckwith.

The death is announced of George C. Beckwith, the well known horticulturist and head of the firm of G. Beckwith & Son, Hoddesdon, Herts, Eng., at his home, Roydon Lodge, Roydon, Essex, November 30.

MARSHALL, MINN.—The Windmill Floral Co. of Mankato will open a branch store in this city.

HARTFORD, CONN.—J. A. Brodrib has completed extensive improvements at his store on Windsor avenue.

HOUSTON, TEX.—The Brazos Greenhouses have opened a retail store at Main street and Rusk avenue.

FRESNO, CALIF.—A dainty flower shop, known as Rose Maur, has been opened in this city by Miss Pearson.

BROCKVILLE, ONT.—The Hay Floral & Seed Co. anticipates a heavy holiday demand, with a possible shortage of good stock.

TRINIDAD, COLO.—The Park Floral Co.'s establishment has been leased by W. P. Woolridge, who will take possession January 1.

Potash From Feldspar.

Several new methods of increasing the supply of American potash have recently been brought to the attention of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, of the United States department of commerce. One of the most promising of these efforts to find a substitute for German fertilizers is a patent taken out a few weeks ago by a Canadian for a method of using the potash in ordinary feldspar.

The process is a simple one, consisting of heating the feldspar with limestone and iron oxide at a temperature of about 2,200 degrees Fahrenheit, which produces a partly fused mass that is easily decomposed by a weak acid. From this product the potash salts can readily be extracted for further purification. The inventor has been in consultation with Dr. Norton, the expert who has been looking after the potash and dyestuff situations for the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, and it seems very possible that a greatly simplified method of transforming feldspar into fertilizer will soon be available.

A practical try-out for another method of obtaining potash fertilizer will soon take place at a New Orleans distillery, where molasses is used in large quantities. It is a fact that 106 tons of potash are wasted daily by the 25 or more distilleries in this country that subject molasses to processes of fermentation. The New Orleans company is planning to install the process of saving the potash in distillery waste recently brought to the attention of the public by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. It should be possible to make fertilizer from this otherwise worthless material at a price that will meet competition even after the war is over.

American Preservatives Not Necessary.

Fruits and vegetables can be kept indefinitely if they are sterilized by heat and properly sealed, and there is no excuse, in the opinion of the experts of the United States department of agriculture, for running any risk by using preserving powders, which may be injurious to health. The use of such powders in addition to the possible injury to health encourages uncleanly or careless work in canning. Reliance is placed in the efficacy of the preserving compound instead of upon cleanliness and heat.

The department has issued bulletins that give specific directions for the preserving and canning of fruits and vegetables without the use of preserving powders or canning compounds. These bulletins may be obtained without cost from the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C. Application should be made for Farmers' Bulletin, No. 203 on canned fruit, preserves, and jellies, and No. 521 on canning tomatoes at home and in club work. Also Forms N. R. 22, N. R. 23, N. R. 24, N. R. 34 and N. R. 37, of the Office of Extension Work, North and West, States Relations Service.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that, as no objection has been filed, the following registrations become complete: Cannas Lafayette and Wyoming, by Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.
JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

American Carnation Society.

In making up the forms for printing the premium schedule, the printers inadvertently omitted Class 6, section "A." This class calls for vase of 100 blooms, any red or scarlet, to include all varieties generally included in those colors. Same prizes as offered in other classes in Section "A." Special notice will be sent to all members about January 1.

A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

Death Caused By Spraying Solution.

John N. Ledenbach, 66 years old, 1632 Hollywood avenue, Chicago, a laborer, died at his home December 15 of general paresis, which the physicians believe is the result of occupational or industrial poisoning. The Summerdale police say he was employed at the Rosehill cemetery and handled a poisonous solution used to spray plants and shrubs. He had been ill for several weeks.

Business Outlook.

Dun's weekly review of the Chicago trade, published December 18 by R. G. Dun & Co., says: "Favorable conditions in commerce and finance were fully sustained on the week's activities, the approach to the year end being most gratifying in the outlook for the future. With the augmented purchasing power there is not only heavy absorption of supplies of all kinds, but greater freedom in commitments for requirements and stimulation in investment and new enterprise. Expanding payments through the banks again are attested by notable increase over previous years, trading defaults are normal in number and lower as to liabilities, and the discount market has assumed a firmer tone. New demands have lost none of their recent force in the prominent industries, bookings in iron and steel and allied branches entering farther into 1915. Additional specifications and inquiries from the railroads, construction concerns, and other consuming interests promise much further business."

Bradstreet's report published at New York December 18, says: "Sustained activity in a majority of lines with prospects of still greater growth, typifying current trade and industrial conditions. Industrial activity is especially noteworthy, labor is well employed at good wages, collections are good, bank clearings heavily exceed those of this time in 1913, money is in better demand, and railway traffic is heavy."

National Association of Gardeners.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, that a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation from the members of the National Association of Gardeners be tendered to Hon. Mayor James A. Curley, of Boston; Capt. John H. Dillon, chairman of the park commission of Boston; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, president of Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and Patrick Welch, president of Society of American Florists, for the cordial welcome extended to those attending the annual convention held in that city, December 9-10; also to the following: To the Massachusetts Horticultural Society which so generously provided the facilities within its building for holding the convention.

To the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, and the horticultural interests of Boston, for the excellent repast and entertainment tendered the members.

To the park department and Superintendent James B. Shea, for the automobile trip through the parks of Boston, the Arnold Arboretum and private estates.

To R. & J. Farquhar & Company for the excellent luncheon served to the automobile party at their Dedham Nurseries.

To our local committee on arrangements, W. N. Craig, Duncan Finlayson and William J. Kennedy, which so ably arranged the affairs of the convention.

The End.

There on the darkened deathbed dies the brain That flared three several times in seventy years.

It can not lift the silly hand again, Nor speak, nor sing; it neither sees nor hears. And muffled mourners put it in the ground. And then go home, and in the earth it lies Too dark for vision and too deep for sound,

The million cells that made a good man wise. Yet for a few short years an influence stirs, A sense or wraith or essence of him dead, Which makes insensate things its ministers

To those beloved, his spirit's daily bread. Then that, too, fades; in hook or deed a spark Lingers; then that, too, fades; then all is dark.

—John Masefield.

EARLY CHRISTMAS DEMAND IS BRISK.

The early Christmas demand is brisk and business the opening of the present week is very encouraging and everything points to a very satisfactory holiday business. Carnations are in exceptionally brisk demand, but are in short supply and many of the dealers have refused orders for select pink and red at $8 and $10 per 100. Red carnations brought as high as $8 and $10 per 100 for extra select blooms Monday, December 20, with very little stock available. No one doubts but what carnations will clean up at an early hour, but some of the dealers are inclined to think that roses will be plentiful and that there will be more than enough to go around, but to the writer it seems as if they will clean up also and that before the rush is really over there will be very little stock left in general unless some of the dealers have resorted to pickling and there is no question but what the Christmas business will be at least 25 per cent and even better than that of last year. American Beauty roses are selling well and will probably be in short supply before Christmas. Roses in general are in good demand, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell, Richmond, Milady and Rhea Reid. Sweet peas are somewhat scarce at $1.50 and $2 per 100 and violets do not appear to be any too plentiful. The receipts of violets from the east last week were limited, owing to the severe snow storm, but are more plentiful now and are cleaning up rapidly. Red winter berries are scarce, but a large consignment of California holly has relieved the situation somewhat and is a splendid substitute for the stock offered is unusually fine and in good demand. Miscellaneous stock is none too plentiful and Paper White narcissi in the better grades are bringing as high as $4 and $5 per 100. Cut poinsettias are none too plentiful and taken all in all the outlook for a grand clean-up for Christmas was never more encouraging. The wholesale plantmen are pretty well sold out in all lines and the supply houses are still busy filling late orders. Business last week was surprisingly good and in some instances the sales were equal to those of Christmas week last year.

NOTES.

Paul Weiss, A. F. Amling and W. H. Amling of Maywood attended the funeral of Mr. Weiss' brother William, at Milwaukee, Wis., Thursday, December 16. The party visited the Holton & Hunkel Co.'s greenhouses at Brown Deer while they were in the Badger state and found everything in tip-top condition, especially the Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, which were grown on a large scale at this establishment long before many growers realized the true worth of this variety. A. F. Amling was accompanied home by his son Clarence, who is a student at Concordia College and will spend the holidays with his parents. Sinner Bros. are cutting a good supply of roses and carnations which are cleaning up nicely each day at very satisfactory prices. John Sinner, who looks after the store, is well pleased with business and has no cause whatever to complain, for the outlook was never better for a banner Christmas trade.

THE SIGN OF QUALITY

The A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., 1302-1308 West Division street, has had an unusually good year and C. B. Arnold, secretary of the firm, says that a new press which cuts, creases and prints two colors in one operation is being installed and can turn out 1,400 sheets in one hour. This firm is having a good demand for their special parcel post and express boxes, which are just what the trade has needed for some time and have plenty on hand to fill eleventh hour orders. One would think that the firm would have plenty of room in their fine new factory building, which they moved into this year, but this does not seem to be the case, for it is heard from good authority that a new addition will be made in the near future on the lot adjoining their present site, which is 52x150 feet. Joe Marks, superintendent of the sales department, is busy as a bee drumming up new customers and will start out again right after the first of the year to call on the out-of-town trade.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. received a large shipment of California holly this week on which the express charges amounted to something like $160. This holly is a splendid substitute for the red winter berries and is being given the preference by the leading local florists, who claim that it can be used to better advantage and makes a better showing in basket work. Wm. Timme is giving Wm. Johnson and his assistants a lift in the shipping department again this week as he always does during the holidays or when business gets so brisk that the regular force cannot handle it.

Wietor Bros. report business as very good with an unusually heavy demand for carnations, particularly red, for which many orders were refused and checks returned. American Beauty roses of fine quality are seen in large supply here and are in good demand, but there will be plenty to fill all late orders. Peter Fischer's carnation Alice is making new friends each day at this store and compares most favorably with all the other pink varieties offered in this market at present.

H. Van Gelder says that trade at Percy Jones' establishment is splendid and that the sales last week were equal to those of Christmas week in 1914. H. B. Rine, of Humboldt, Ia., was a visitor at this establishment December 20 and was escorted through the market by Morris Grossberg. Mr. Rine has a store at Forest City and Eagle Grove, Ia. He brought five carloads of cattle to this city and returned the same evening to attend to his Christmas business.

Felix Reichling is well pleased with the early Christmas demand at Peter Reinberg's establishment and reports the shipping trade as exceptionally brisk. The store force is making its headquarters at the Windsor Clifton hotel this week, for they are working overtime until late and are obliged to be on the job early in the morning so that all orders can be gotten out on time.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is offering the first pussy willows of the season which are good property and none too plentiful, though their receipts are heavy. Manager Klingsporn visited several of the firm's growers early this week to get a line on the Christmas supply and is of the opinion that he will have plenty of stock to fill all orders.

Victor Young & Company are more than pleased with their opening at 1239 North Clark street last week and enjoyed more business than they expected to. They have a very pretty retail store which was fitted out by Buchbinder Bros. and are looking forward to a brisk holiday trade.

Gene Launey, who was formerly employed in this city, is back from an extended visit in California and will remain here for some time. He spent several months in Kansas City, Mo., and is now representing one of the retail stores of that city in the local wholesale market as buyer.

J. J. Kolar & Son, of Cicero, have added a Ford to their delivery service, which makes Raymond Ziska, superintendent of the delivery system at Joseph Ziska & Sons' store, smile, for he was the first to have nerve enough to buy one of Henry's little toys for delivery purposes.

Mrs. J. A. Evans, who was recently operated upon for appendicitis at the Mercy hospital, is progressing favorably. Mr. Evans will remain in the city until Mrs. Evans is able to return home, which is likely to be several more weeks.

Gust P. Constantino, proprietor of the Chicago Floral House, 41 West Randolph street, who has been in poor health for some time, is feeling considerably better and expects to be able to soon take charge of the store again.

Erne & Klingel had a good supply of mistletoe for Christmas this year which was unusually well berried and one lot in particular attracted much attention and was sold almost as soon as the case was opened.

Frank X. Gorly, with Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., was in the city December 17 buying stock for the holidays. He reports business as good, with the outlook very favorable for a brisk Christmas trade.

Mrs. F. Ennis, Milwaukee, Wis., was in the city December 16 buying stock for the holidays.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a fine supply of roses, especially Killarney and Killarney Brilliant, which are possessed of unusually fine color. With the exception of carnations, this firm will probably have enough stock to go around, for they are in splendid crop. The supply department never had a better season and the plant department is completely sold out in all lines for Christmas. John Poehlmann, Sr., has been on the sick list all this week, but is expected to be able to be at the store soon, which his many friends are pleased to hear.

Bassett & Washburn report business much better than last year, with the early Christmas sales surprisingly large and considerably ahead of 1914. Orders were received from all sections of the country with a heavy demand for carnations and American Beauty roses. Mr. Washburn expects to see a clean-up in all lines before the rush is over, and is well pleased with the number of orders already booked. Considerable trouble has been experienced in securing enough boxes, owing, no doubt, to the heavy demand in all other lines.

Lawrence W. Tonner, a brother of O. A. Tonner, will spend Christmas at home this year with his folks after an absence of nearly 25 years. He is acting as special representative for Francis Grierson, the celebrated English lecturer and musician, who is now filling engagements in this vicinity and has traveled extensively in the European countries, particularly those now engaged in war.

M. C. Gunterberg has had a good call for rustic art baskets, which she is featuring as a leader and has made special arrangements with the manufacturers to furnish them with gold letters in the basket itself, with any word or words desired, such as "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Year," etc.

Miss Gunterberg celebrated a birthday December 15.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are having a heavy Christmas trade, with a brisk demand for carnations and roses. The shipping trade has been very satisfactory so far and the outlook at this establishment points to the best Christmas ever.

V. Bezdek says Grosse Point has passed an ordinance prohibiting the building of greenhouses within the village limits unless the builder secures the written consent of all the property owners within a radius of one-half mile.

Fred Price is back on the job at J. A. Budlong's store after a short illness and is helping out with the Christmas rush. The shipping trade at this house is brisk and the sales will run considerably ahead of last season.

At Weiland & Risch's store the new rose Champ Weiland is holding the attention of the buyers, for it is fully a shade and a half darker in color than Mrs. Chas. Russell, which is an Chris. Muno, who was formerly engaged in the florist business in this vicinity many years ago, died at his home at Ridge and Howard avenues, Monday, December 20.

J. A. Sikuta, 3947 West Twelfth street, expects to do a much larger business this Christmas than he did last year and the outlook so far is most encouraging.

Miss Greeley, of the John Kruchten Co., is suffering with a severe cold and was unable to attend to her duties this week.

George Reinberg had a fine cut of Richmond roses for Christmas.

Martin Goerger, of Goerger Bros., Arlington Heights, has received word from his brother Albert, who is a member of the firm, but is now serving in the German army, that he was wounded and is now in the hospital. His brother Andrew has received the iron cross and his brother-in-law was killed in battle.

Henry M. Hirsch, who withdrew from the firm of Zalinger & Hirsch, December 10, will open a new retail store at 37 East Van Buren street about February 1. The people he is renting from will fix up the place in fine shape. When all the new fixtures are installed he will have a store which anyone might well be proud of.

Zech & Mann have added several growers to their list this week and report a brisk demand for stock in all lines. Allie Zech made a call on all the firm's growers the past week and expects to fill all Christmas orders in full with the exception of carnations.

The branch office of the Peterson Nursery was robbed of about $75 in cash, Saturday, December 18.

At Dominick E. Freres' wholesale store a fine line of roses and carnations are the principal offerings.

Vaughan's Seed Store is receiving German grown lily of the valley this week.

At the recent wedding of Miss Frances Fleming, daughter of one of this city's most prominent citizens, to Harrold Kerrigan of London, Ont., the floral decorations arranged by Miss L. J. Beuford of the Windsor Flower Shop and her capable assistants were very tasty. Orchids played a prominent part in the floral arrangements, and orange blossoms sent to the bride from California were much admired.

Geo. Pedrick, 63 years of age, pioneer florist of this city, died at his home December 18, after an illness of two months. He was born in Devonshire, Eng., and came to this country 50 years ago. He worked as a gardener for about 10 years, but for the past 20 years has conducted a flower shop on Sandwich street.

HOLIDAY SHORTAGE THREATENED.

If the supply of cut flowers was limited last week, it was even more so this week; the dark, rainy, cloudy weather certainly has not helped to increase the supply, and unless "Old Sol" looks in on us for several days between now and Christmas, old "St. Nick" will not see as many blooms as usual, and stock will be far short of the demand on this the greatest holiday of the year. At the beginning of the week it snowed and was quite cold, which turned to rain and cloudy weather by the middle of the week and at this writing, December 18, it is again snowing and blowing, and has turned much colder again; also, stock will lack color and the quality will not be up to the standard. The heavy snows in the east delayed trains, violets were uncertain for several days and they are not yet arriving on scheduled time. There is very little short stock arriving, such as is wanted for funeral work, and much long and higher priced stock is put in. Paper Whites and stevia are the only flowers at all plentiful, Lily of the valley has been equal to the demand. Callas and Easter lilies are in short supply. Cut poinsettias and poinsettia plants are plentiful and of excellent quality. Advance Christmas orders are coming in and indicate a big day if the supply is at all equal to the call. Boxwood has had an unusually good demand this year, with a limited supply of good stock. Japanese red frieze roping is becoming more popular each year, nearly all the available supply being exhausted. Artificial paper cut flowers too were in good demand. Laurel and ground pine roping is selling well; so is holly and winter berries. Greens of all kinds are in good supply.

NOTES.

Burglars entered the store of the J. M. Gasser Co. on Huron road one night this week, but outside of a little small change, left in the cash drawer, they took nothing of value, but they did damage the safe considerably, knocking off the combination knobs and handle, and part of the hinges, also damaged the cash drawer to open it. This burglar, who seems to take a liking to burglarizing wholesale cut flower stores, has now made a complete round, and we hope he is caught before he gets around the second time.

Mrs. Geo. N. Smith, who has been at Fort Collins, Colorado, for her health since last August, arrived home Sunday morning, December 19, for the holidays. She expects to return after the first of the year to complete the cure. She has gained in weight and strength and says she feels very much better.

Miss Christine Cliff, who conducts a retail flower store on Hough avenue, has opened a down town branch for the Christmas holidays on East 6th street.

TRADE ABOVE THE AVERAGE.

Business during the past week has been better than usual for this time of the year, there being much funeral and decorative work. Stock was more plentiful in most lines, with pot plants taking the lead. Roses were more plentiful and of good quality, but are high in price, especially American Beauties, which sell from $4 up per dozen. Good carnations are still scarce. Stevia, lilies, violets and lily of the valley are extra good and sell readily. The poinsettias, cyclamens and Lorraine begonias being received are the best seen in this city for some time, being of good quality and good, clean stock. Offerings in holly, roping, Christmas trees, red berries, etc., make a good showing.

NOTES.

Arthur Newell has pulled off a deal in the Texas "Panhandle" that is a little out of his regular line of business. He and Samuel Murray have owned jointly some valuable ranch land, and a deal for this land was closed last week for cash at a very handsome profit over the original cost. A trip to the Orient is not being planned by Messrs. Newell and Murray.

H. Kusik & Co. report the supply of stock insufficient to care for their trade, but it is of exceptionally good quality. They are receiving very fine roses, lilies, violets and stevia. Carnations are scarce, but of good quality. Shipping trade is good and the demand for holiday supplies exceptionally good.

An extra heavy rush of business is keeping the T. J. Noll & Co.'s force on the jump. They are receiving some very good roses, lilies, violets and stevia, but report carnations scarce. The shipping trade has been the best ever and the demand for holiday supplies has been surprisingly good.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports trade very good in the funeral and decorating line. Pot plants are also selling well and cut stock cleans up well each day. A lot of new Christmas novelties are being shown and attract much attention.

W. J. Barnes had a very good week, the demand for funeral designs being very heavy and stock cleaned up every day. His stock of pot plants for the Christmas trade is in splendid shape. His cut of flowers for the holidays will also be heavy.

At the Alpha Floral Co. the demand for the holiday trade is far beyond expectations. The demand started early and continues at a lively rate. Funeral orders and decorations have also been much in demand with this firm.

A. F. Barbee reports trade all and is fully prepared for a heavy Christmas demand, having a good line of pot plants. He expects to cut carnations, narcissi and stevia in quantity.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower and Plant Co. is kept busy with funeral work, and the call for pot plants is also very heavy. Business in cut stock is also picking up.

Ed Humfeld is doing a splendid holiday business. The demand for pot plants has been very good, and in addition he has been busy with orders for funeral work.

As the Kansas City representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, I extend to all in the trade my best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

Miss Lou E. Boggess reports a heavy demand for funeral work, stock cleaning up each day. The scarcity of cut stock makes it hard to fill orders.

Chas. Biederman & Son are making a big leader with pot plants. The demand for funeral work has also been very heavy at their establishment.

Adolph Mohr has been very busy making delivery of his plants this week. The stock is of the usual high quality, and meets with ready sale.

Patrick Larkin reports business good, especially in funeral orders and corsages. E. J. B.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.

EVERYBODY BUSY AND HAPPY.

The holiday trade is in full swing. The sales and work forces have been doubled, pot stock is moving briskly and cut flower orders booked in goodly numbers, and the florists are busy and happy. The supply of cut flowers has been limited especially in short-stemmed roses of Richmond and Rhea Reid, and also in some of the white varieties. Carnations of excellent quality are also scarce, reds especially, and a pronounced shortage for Christmas orders would not be surprising. Magnolia wreaths and green and bronze galax have been in heavy demand for funerals and cemetery decorations. Pot plants are displayed in great profusion. Poinsettias are very fine this year. Cyclamens are selling well; in fact, almost supplanting the azaleas which are scarce and under size this year. Christmas wreaths and baskets are meeting with an exceptionally heavy demand.

NOTES.

Some fine Scotch heather and French heather plants in grey and pink are being displayed by the Flick Floral Co. This establishment also has a very attractive window decoration of Christmas novelties in plant baskets, wreaths, etc. An attractive booklet, entitled "Christmas Flowers," has been sent out in great numbers.

Several of the merchants have made attractive store decorations for the holidays, evergreen roping, holly and laurel being draped from the tops of the building to red and green ornamental lights on the sidewalk. The effect is very good.

Miss Katherine Vesey is home from college at Delaware, O., and will spend the holidays with her relatives. H. K.

Boston:

CHRISTMAS TRADE OUTLOOK GOOD.

There has been a shortage of flowers during the past week, consequently prices have held up on every line. The trade, however, was by no means brisk, and the scarcity was the only thing that saved prices from declining. Roses were the poorest selling cut flowers, prices dropping to $3 per 100 on the short stemmed stock; however, it being so near the Christmas season, the effects of the decline are not depressing as a whole. Carnations are very scarce and prices are advancing. Monday, December 20, $5 and $6 per 100 was received. A few chrysanthemums continue to come in, but there is not much call for them and prices are about the same as last week. The plant growers are finding an excellent market for their product and are working hard to keep up to orders. The outlook for Christmas at the time of writing is very good; in fact, it is expected that the supply will by no means meet the big demand.

NOTES.

Penn, the Florist, opened his new store to the public, December 18. It is, without doubt, one of the highest class retail florist stores in New England. The opening day, the windows were a treat to all lovers of artistic simplicity in the arrangement of flowers. One window was very effective with cattleyas, arranged with bark and moss, while the other was made up of yellow roses tastefully arranged in rich vases. One of the modern improvements is the freezing plant for refrigeration. No detail has been overlooked throughout the entire shop and its service, and all who have seen it declare it to be a model florist establishment. Mr. Penn received many beautiful expressions of good wishes, both in floral tributes and letters and telegrams.

Among the large consignors of carnations to the Boston Flower Exchange are P. & W. O. Jahn of Bridge-water, Mass. They have a fine lot of Enchantress Supreme, Pink Delight, Matchless, White Enchantress and Beacon. Their shipments for the week ending December 18 were over 15,000 flowers.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, Mass., are shipping Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths. They expect to be cutting a supply of jonquils within two weeks. For the Christmas trade they have holly trees, cyclamens, Skimmia Japonica, solanum and ferneries.

E. A. Stickel is with the Boston Rose Co., to assist during their Christmas rush. This company is handling a good supply of American Beauties, as well as some very fine Hadley, Ophelia and Russell, from the Montgomery Bros. at Hadley, Mass.

Some of the finest snapdragons seen in the city are from P. S. Brown of Scituate. He has pink, yellow, red and white seedling varieties with three foot stems. His calendulas are also of excellent quality.

Bert Sloan, of the New England Florist Supply Co., has announced his engagement to Miss Frances Grisaver of Winthrop, Mass. The wedding will take place January 25, 1916.

CHRISTMAS PREPARATIONS COMPLETE.

On the eve of the "day of days," Nashville florists find themselves in a state of elegant preparedness. There will be an abundance of stock of the very best quality, and the prospects are for a fine trade. Already orders are being booked with a most satisfactory outlook. The florists' windows are decorated with the bright red and green of the season, varying as to individual taste, or the abundance any special stock may dictate. In some of the windows are immortelle wreaths, attractively arranged with palms and ferns and even ribbons. Others have gorgeous vases of long stem American Beauty or Richmond roses, supplemented by all other dainty beauties of the season. The poinsettias play no small part, and those blooming in pots are easy favorites. Lorraine begonia is another favorite. Azaleas, cyclamens, hyacinths, narcissi, lilies and innumerable smaller and less distinguished blossoms, make up a complete array to suit any and all pockets and any and all tastes. Well berried and beautiful holly has been on sale for some time past on the streets and the social realm has made use of it abundantly to give the holiday idea to their entertainments. Mistletoe, while not so plentiful may be found by those desiring the mystic plant. The rural population, both black and white, has hastened to the city with wagon loads of finely shaped and comely cedar trees, which may be had for the asking and the cutting on any of the fine pikes leading from the city. Indeed, it was not an uncommon sight any time in the days preceding Christmas to see a merry party in a fine automobile carrying as huge a tree as they could handle attached to the running board of the machine. But this was done more in the nature of a frolic than to save the price, for the trees sold at a remarkably small figure. Pretty, small trees sold for 25 cents and ranged on up until a price as high as $5.00 was reached. At these prices most of the stores of the city were decorated with cedar, holly or southern smilax. The enterprising dealers in the cedar have learned to make very creditable wreaths, and they sell like hot cakes, ranging in price from 25 cents to $1.50 and even higher. Those for 25 cents were rather "skimpy" but they sold. There will be no abnormal advance in the price of cut flowers, but prices have been good all along and very satisfactory to the dealers. There are many pretty and seasonable novelties to be seen in the way of baskets, pot-holders, mats and things of that sort, of which there is a good sale. Roses in general have been and are selling at from $2 to $2.50 per dozen; American Beauty, $8, $10 to $12 per dozen; poinsettias, $4 per dozen. There is a fine supply of the very best stock, and the flower lover and Christmas shopper never had a finer stock to select from.

M. C. D.

Providence, R. I.

STOCK UP TO STANDARD.

Business during the past week has been very good, floral work holding out well. All stock is up to standard. Carnations have been scarce and have taken a jump in price, the best grades selling at from $4 to $7 per 100. Roses are good, with no advance except on the red varieties, which have advanced to $8 per 100 on the cheaper grades. Lilies were never better and lily of the valley is perfect. Paper Whites are now having a very good call and are selling at a slight advance in price. The stores are all prepared for the Christmas business, the stocks of plants and novelties are in and many attractive displays of the different lines are to be seen. The small red auto wreath is being featured, and is making a hit, being seen here for the first time. The stores all have good stocks of begonias, panduratas, azaleas, cyclamens, cibotiums, pandanus, ardisias, Adiantum Farleyense and other small plants; also, poinsettias. Some of the shops are selling the Partridge berry bowls again this year and the sales have been good.

NOTES.

The evergreen men are now at the "bridge" and seem to be doing a rushing business. The stock at this writing is very poor and the prices very high—the quality seems to be worse than it was last year. These men seem to take the money away from the public, but when the latter go to the florist, they want better stock for less money than they would pay for poor stock from these vendors.

Hopkins, the florist at the Reservoir avenue greenhouses, has some of the finest Liliun giganteum that has been seen here for some time. He will carry a stock of plants all the year round.

Hoffman, of Pawtucket, has a fine stock of azaleas for the Christmas trade.

TRADE GOOD AND STOCK PLENTIFUL.

Business during the past week has been exceptionally good with stock plentiful, except in carnations, which it seems are being held back in all colors, and stock this week brought from $5 to $8 per 100. While roses were plentiful, prices on good stock ranged from $8 to $25 per 100 and American Beauties sold at prices varying from $5 to $7.50 per dozen. Orchids found ready sale at from $75 to $90 per 100. Extra fine sweet peas of the Spencer type are selling at from $2.50 to $3 per 100, with the demand greater than the supply. Flowering plants are not overly plentiful at this writing, but the growers in this vicinity promise enough to meet the demand. Azaleas and begonias are extra fine in quality, but poinsettias are nothing to brag about.

NOTES.

The Washington Florists Co. is having an extra heavy cut of Sunburst, Richmond and Shawyer roses. This company also has some very fine azaleas, which find ready sale, being disposed of as fast as they are received from the greenhouses.

The windows of the florists' shops were all prettily decorated with Christmas stock, some being very attractive with baskets and combinations, and all the stores look forward to a very heavy business.

CHRISTMAS SUPPLY BELOW NORMAL.

The demand for flowers last week was steady, while receipts were very limited. From present indications the supply for Christmas will hardly be as large as it was for the last few years. The cut of roses has increased in size and is now almost back to normal. American Beauties are in a good supply up to this time, but they have met with a rather weak call; however, heavy orders are booked for Christmas and during the holidays. Carnation receipts are short as far as quantity is concerned. Poinsettias are in their usual good holiday supply. Orchids, lily of the valley and violets are fairly plentiful and we should have enough for actual needs. Other offerings include Easter lilies, Magnificum lilies,

INDICATIONS OF HEAVY HOLIDAY TRADE.

The business the past week has been satisfactory, there being sufficient demand to keep the market about even. The supply coming in has been very limited, due partly to the cold, stormy weather; a snow storm of almost blizzard proportions stretched itself over two days, greatly interfering with traffic. The quality all along the line is very satisfactory, being quite up to the standard, if not a little ahead of former years. In roses, Ophelia, Sunburst, Shawyer, Killarney, white and pink and Brilliant, Maryland, Russell, and the several reds are all in splendid shape, particularly Russell, which is seen in length of stem and size of flower quite the equal of the American Beauty. This latter, it is said, will be in full crop with most growers for the holidays. Carnations appear scarce; it is presumed that a look into the houses would show masses of color at this time. Snapdragon has been very shy the past two weeks—it will probably blossom out about December 23. Easter lilies are a bit scarce. Lily of the valley is equal to the demand, but violets are holding off. There are still a few chrysanthemums and plenty of stevia. Some very good poinsettias are being offered, a full supply being promised for Christmas. The condition of the market for the holidays promises to be much better than last season—prices are better now than last year, and the overproduction of last year is not looked for. There is more glass area filled with plants than last winter, but for some reason the market now cleans up much better and at higher prices. Narcissi are good stock this year; they went a begging at from $1 to $2 a hundred a year ago, while now they sell readily at $3 to $4. Christmas plant stock is in splendid shape. Azaleas, which were the subject of much discussion in the early fall, arrived in quantity after many delays, which, however, does not seem to have affected their flowering qualities, as they are seen in splendid form and color. Cyclamens are wonderfully well flowered, as are begonias. Poinsettia, the great Christmas flower, was never finer. Well fruited oranges and ardisias are specials, while the imported acubas are loaded with brilliant red berries, which have colored splendidly this season. There are also quantities of handsomely colored foliage plants and ferns in variety, all of which will hold their own in competition with the great variety of cut flowers.

NOTES.

The miniature, or auto wreaths, of red chenille with trimmings, are having a great run. They are seen in great variety. Wm. Thompson, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., makes them out of the small boxwood clippings and they have made quite a hit. In Pennock Bros.' window were seen miniature wreaths of statice, which were very attractive. The small basket of greens and holly berries is also very popular; the cost for material is trifling, but they sell readily at from $1 to $1.50 each.

Myers & Samptman, of Chestnut Hill, are erecting another large house, 75x600, to their already extensive place. American Beauties are a specialty here, where they are grown to perfection. The whole country is their market. A recent large shipment to the Chicago market made very satisfactory returns, showing that with good stock and careful packing it is possible to do business with such perishable stock in almost any part of Uncle Sam's domain.

The Godfrey Aschmann collection of choice Christmas stock is moving off at a great rate. Araucarias, always a specialty here, are seen in splendid form, as are a special lot of the Boston, Scotti, Whitmani and Teddy, Jr., ferns.

Burton's American Beauties are to the front, along with the three Killarneys and Richmond in the Leo Nielsen Co.'s Christmas stock. Mr. Nielsen says they are prepared in all lines for a record business.

The Whilldin Pottery Company had a great run on azalea pots and fern pans to supply the retail trade, who use them extensively for combination foliage and poinsettia center pieces for table decorations.

Edward Reid wears a contented look these days; stock cleans up well at better prices than for several years past. His new Vim delivery car is found to be a great convenience.

Carl Cortis, chief of Jas. Heacock Co.'s cut-flower force, reports last week to have been the best of the season so far. Ophelia and the Killarneys are leaders here.

At the Central market of the Berger Bros., cattleyas are to the fore and are promised in quantity for the holidays. Poinsettias and boxwood are also leaders.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange are featuring cattleyas and choice roses, especially Russell, SNOWSTORM DEMORALIZES BUSINESS.

With a number of years of experience in the wholesale district and plenty of expert testimony to sustain us, we cannot recall a storm that caused a greater demoralization of business than that of December 13. The Pennsylvania railroad seemed to be the only line that was able to run trains with anything like regularity. The electric system of the New Haven railroad, which extends for some miles out of this city, practically broke down on the night of December 13. Trains on the New York Central were snowbound and what little stock from the north and east came in December 14 was hours late. In fact, up to the night of December 17, there was no regularity in the arrival of stock even from Rhode Island and Connecticut points. These conditions were paralleled in city traffic. Six inches of snow doesn't look bad when spread out on a farm, but when it is shoveled off the sidewalk into the street and pushed back from the street car tracks and piled up in great mounds, it is no joke. The snow was of the slippery, oozy sort and it has been no uncommon sight to see the wheels of an auto revolving at a great rate without the machine making an inch of progress. The week before Christmas week is usually dull, but this storm made it much worse as the weather was bad throughout, there being sleet and rain on December 17, which made the sidewalks a terror to pedestrians. As a matter of course, the retailers have to keep up a stock and what came in was soon taken, but if business had been good there would have been a dearth. Prices have remained firm. American Beauties, special, run from $40 to $50 per 100 or at that rate. Special stock of other roses from $12 to $15 with higher prices for some varieties. There has been little change from our quotations of December 15, in other stocks. Notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions above recited, we look for a reasonably fair supply of stock for Christmas. The roses seem to be generally in crop and while in some localities the carnations seem to be a little off, this city draws stock from so wide a territory that we do not predict a scarcity, considering that there will be many plants on the market.

December 20.—After continuous rain throughout December 17-18, the weather cleared on the evening of the 18th. The rain and a moderate temperature did much toward clearing the streets of snow and traffic conditions are improved. December 19 was a fine day, relating to weather. It continues fair at this writing, and the outlook for good "Christmas weather" is encouraging. There is no unusual movement in cut flowers at this writing, nor is there likely to be before December 23. Indications point to an ample supply for Christmas.

NOTES.

We have recently had occasion to notice the activities of Wernz & Koehne, 61 Fifth avenue. Both these young men are past masters, so to speak, in the retail business. Though the retail stores have of late years been moving up town, this firm yet does a good business, being located near Washington Square and within the parish of Grace Church. Wernz is the buyer and a very shrewd one. Robert Koehne is a past vice-president and a life member of the New York Florist's Club; a life member of the Horticultural Society of New York and also of the Society of American Florists.

On December 15, J. H. Small & Sons made an exceptionally fine arrangement of flowers in two casket covers, the caskets containing the remains of Mr. and Mrs. George Westinghouse, which have been in a vault since their deaths, and were being removed to Washington, D. C., for final interment. A very large number of fine cattleya orchids and violets were used, being arranged with Asparagus plumosus nanus and smilax.

Calling recently on a number of the Eighth Avenue florists we found them making active preparations for the Christmas trade. The St. Nicholas Florist Co., A. Pappes and C. Valas, proprietors, 2322 8th avenue, have a good store and keep it well stocked with cut flowers and plants and have a good business.

Louis Kuebler, one of the noted trio of Kuebler Brothers of Willoughby street, Brooklyn, is specializing in florists' supplies and all kinds of Christmas decorations. He also finds time to assist his brothers, William H. and Charles, in the wholesale cut flower business.

On December 11, Alexander Donaldson and family, of Elmhurst, L. I., went to Patchogue, L. I., to visit their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson. During their absence their home was burglarized and several hundred dollars worth of jewelry and cut glass stolen.

A storm has no terrors for that fine young fellow, Richard Vincent, Jr. He was on time for the club meeting, December 13, attended a meeting of the American Dablia Society, and lectured before the Garden Club of Bartow, N. Y., during the past week.

Young & Nugent, 42 West 28th street, will have a great stock of plants and cut flowers for the Christmas trade and are booking many orders and have taken on additional help.

G. J. Carjanes, the "King Model Florist," has a good store at 2594 8th avenue and a branch store at 2634 8th avenue. He is well stocked with plants and cut flowers and is well prepared for the Christmas trade.

John V. Phillips, who has for many years been in business at 272 Fulton street and 7 Clinton street, Brooklyn, has for the convenience of his uptown customers, opened another store at 362 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn.

Frank Traendly, of Traendly & Schenck, who was sick for several weeks, is all right again, is at the store every day and looks fine. His firm will have a good supply of stock for the Christmas trade.

Dr. Arthur R. Addy has recently erected a neat greenhouse in the rear of his residence, 808 Lenox road, Brooklyn, and is growing sweet peas and other stock for the market.

Louis C. Pajan, 2424 8th avenue, has a very attractive display of Christmas wreaths, bells and other decorations, as well as flowering and foliage plants and cut flowers.

J. K. Allen, the wholesaler of 118 West 28th street, has been somewhat indisposed during the past week and HEAVY DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

Trade has been exceedingly brisk during the past week, cold weather and six inches of snow have shortened the supply, and there has been a good demand for everything in the line of flowers. Holly is plentiful, but there is a shortage of green. The former has been a good seller this season as most of the stores are decorated for the holiday season. Roses are quoted at from six cents to 20 cents, carnations bring from four cents to ten cents, lily of the valley sells at five cents and violets, home grown singles, are offered at $1.50 per 100. Small flowering plants are scarce.

NOTES.

Several of the local florists have been laid up during the past week with the grippe, of which there is an epidemic in this city at present.

Rice Bros.' bowling team was defeated by the L. S. Donaldson Co.'s team, the latter winning two games out of three at the Elks' alleys, December 16. The feature of the game was the phenomenal rolling of Arthur Rice. High individual scores each game were rolled by Arthur Rice, Walter Mountain, of Rice Bros.' team, and Nick Jennings, of the Donaldson "pin smashers." T. C. R.

Bowling at New York.

The scores of New York Florists' Bowling Club for December 16 were as follows:

Miesem	189	189	228
Scott	145	182	160
Siebrecht	125	141	160
Ford	157	170	150
Jacobson	148	153	167
Ferrieh	150	170	170

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—City commissioners have under consideration plans for a public garden to cost $150,000.

STREATOR, ILL.—The Thornton Floral Co. has succeeded the Hill Floral Co., and will do a retail and wholesale business.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—P. J. Howard, landscape architect, announces the removal of his offices from the Marsh-Strong building to 1521 West Seventh street, between Union and Valencia.

AUBURNDALE, MASS.—F. W. Fletcher & Co., Inc., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000, and takes on the business and real estate of F. W. Fletcher and Lizzie Fletcher.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. P. Stubbs, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.

VISITED NEW YORK: L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif.

SCARCITY of garden beans, both wax and green pod, becomes more apparent every day.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Philadelphia Seed Co. has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

ALBERT LEA, MINN.—Robert H. Black and Miss Carol H. Pankhurst were married at Rochester, Minn., December 18.

LIVINGSTON, MONT.—The Montana Seed Growers' Association will hold its third annual meeting and exhibition in this city January 18-20.

THE C. Herbert Coy Seed Co., Inc., of Valley, Neb., is mailing to its friends and customers a handsome calendar, showing a reproduction of one of Paul de Longprie's pictures of roses.

F. W. BRUGGERHOF, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, though past the fourscore mark, is still active and alert, at the store every day, and can keep pace with any of the younger men.

THE seed growers think Uncle Sam will have to take the floor-sweepings this year. Why wouldn't this be a good time to abandon the free seed farce in the interest of the already heavily burdened taxpayers?

CHRISTMAS GREENS.—The Chicago bouquet green market closed bare with the price at $10. Good florists' grade of holly sold out well, although there was considerable inferior stock in the hands of commission men December 22.

H. ROUMANILLE & FILS of St. Remy de Provence, France, mailed their wholesale catalog for seedsmen and dealers for the season 1915-16 on December 6. This would indicate that this firm is going on with its business, about which there has been some doubt during the recent months.

ILLUSTRATING the scarcity of popular varieties of beans, a grower who recently offered three bushels of Burpee's Stringless received 13 telegrams written on the day his offer reached the trade and five later ones, and 26 firms ordered them by mail, making a total of 41 orders for the three bushels of beans.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 22, were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $8.00 per 100 pounds.—A. Henderson & Co. are moving this week from River street to their new location at 211 North State street.—W. W. Barnard continues to improve and expects to leave the hospital this week, going to southern California for the winter.

Parcel Post Trouble Revived.

Chairman Therkildson, of the postal laws committee, of the American Seed Trade Association, advises that Representative Anderson has introduced house bill H. R. 636, which purposes to subject seeds, plants, etc., to the same rate of postage as other merchandise. Mr. Therkildson adds:

"It was by considerable effort we were able to keep seeds at the old rate of postage, two ounces for one cent up to and including eight ounces. It would be a mistake to let this bill slip through at this time after so much effort. It will be readily understood that the matter of having to zone over four ounces is going to add a very considerable burden."

Seedsmen and others interested are urged to write their representatives in congress and take such other steps as they may consider necessary to prevent this bill becoming law. Copies of their letters to senators, representatives, etc., should be addressed to W. F. Therkildson, 475 North Fifth street, Philadelphia, Pa.

David Burpee.

When changes of any character are made in the personnel of the official and governing boards of local banks and trust companies it seems to be always the evident aim and desire of the active management to select men who have proven their worth and ability in some special line of commercial, financial or industrial pursuit, and it naturally follows therefore that the directorates of Philadelphia financial institutions constitute a representation of business training and experience that is not surpassed by any other city in the United States.

An instance of this kind has been the recent election of David Burpee as a member of the board of directors of the Market Street national bank, this action having taken place at a meeting held December 7, and having been made to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of his father, the late W. Atlee Burpee, November 26. It is interesting to note in this connection that David Burpee, under the will of his father, becomes the active head of the well-known seed firm of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., the business of which was established in 1878; and his election as his father's successor in the directorate of the Market Street national bank has been a wise and judicious step. While comparatively young in years, he is yet a man of sound business training and experience, with a ready grasp and mastery of executive and financial detail, and he will undoubtedly prove a factor of strength in the future management of the bank's business.

David Burpee, like his father, is a man of winning qualities of personal character, and he has inherited those foundation traits of firmness, thrift and industry for which the late W. Atlee Burpee was so widely known and so highly esteemed in business and private walks of life. David Burpee is a member of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain, Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, American Genetic Association and the American Sweet Pea Society. He is a member of the Union League of Philadelphia, Canadian Society, Harris club, City club, Merion Cricket club, Golf club and the Lansdowne country club. He is also a director of the Bucks County Trust Company. His wide circle of warm personal friends and acquaintances are delighted with the announcement of his election as a member of the board of directors of the Market Street national bank, and all who know him hope that this will be the stepping stone to still higher honors in the future.—Philadelphia Journal of Commerce.

New York Seed Trade.

At the store of Kennedy & Hunter, 156 West Thirty-fourth street, we have noticed evidence of activity. A. R. Kenney, the head of this firm was out on a trip among customers when we called, but Jos. M. Brown, his clever assistant, stated that fall business has exceeded their expectations.

Wm Elliott has so far recovered from the accident, having been struck by an automobile, that he can make visits to the store. Though no bones

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, December 21.—Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 25 to 30 cents per carton; lettuce, cases 30 cents; radishes, $1.00 to $1.25 per 100 bunches; celery, 10 to 20 cents per bunch; tomatoes, four baskets, $1.25 to $1.65; cucumbers, dozen, $1.00 to $1.50.

New York, December 21.—Celery, per bunch of 12 stalks, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.20 to $1.50 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 30 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $3.00; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to $1.00.

Chinese Cabbage.

Considerable interest has recently developed among greenhouse men in regard to the new Chinese cabbage; it is also known as celery cabbage, and we have even come across a newspaper article stating it to be a cross between celery and cabbage. This latter description is of course ridiculous, and is in line with some other news items we get occasionally, some writers believing that anything can be "crossed" with wonderful results. The plant resembles a turnip more than anything else, but instead of developing the root, it heads into a hard, long and finely bleached head. This is esteemed for salad dishes by a few who have become familiar with the plant, and the chances are good that with more general distribution, the demand may grow to a point where this plant can be added to our greenhouse crops. In most sections of our country it will have to be grown under glass, as the plant is extremely sensitive to heat, and adverse weather in general. Also, it succumbs readily to the cabbage maggot, which reduces its chances for an outdoor crop. We are trying it out under glass this season in a lettuce temperature, and so far they have done well, having produced some fine heads. The first lot were started outdoors in cold frame and planted inside early in October, 18x18 inches, and they are now headed. The next were started indoors entirely and we reduced the distance to 15x15 inches. It will take some time to determine upon the cultural methods, but so far we have noticed that they are sensitive to heat, excessive moisture, to aphids attack and tobacco smoke. To produce them means careful culture. We will report results later on.

MARKETMAN.

Peppermint and Spearmint as Crops.

The annual production of peppermint and spearmint oil in the United States is estimated by the United States department of agriculture at about 250,000 pounds out of a total production throughout the world of about 600,000 pounds. Practically all of this oil is produced in Michigan, Indiana, and New York, a little less than 25,000 acres being planted to mint in these states. It is said, however, that there are other localities in which the industry could be profitably developed if there were a greater demand for the oil, but as the price of peppermint and spearmint fluctuates widely, the industry would be likely to suffer from overproduction if the acreage were rapidly extended. On the muck lands of southern Michigan and northern Indiana the cost of establishing and caring for an acre of mint during the first season is about $30. In subsequent years the cost would be about $15. In Wayne county, New York, where mint is cultivated on uplands, the cost of preparing the land is less, but the tillage costs, on the other hand, are higher because of the greater quantity of labor required. In Michigan and Indiana many growers have invested considerable capital and have provided equipments which enable them to handle the product in an economical manner.

The yield of oil per acre varies, ranging from almost nothing to 100 pounds. About 325 pounds of peppermint and 340 pounds of spearmint are required to produce a pound of oil in commercial practice. For peppermint oil, the average trade price for the last 40 years has been $2.50 a pound, although it has fallen as low as 75 cents. Spearmint oil, which used to be cheaper than peppermint, has averaged for the past five years, $3.55 a pound.

In Michigan and Indiana the large plantations have of late years installed their own distilling plants. For growers who do not have their own distilling plants, the customary charge for distilling oil has been fixed at 25 cents a pound.

Both peppermint and spearmint thrive best in deep soils, rich in humus and retentive of moisture, but fairly open in texture and well drained. They may also be grown successfully in well prepared upland soils, such as those suitable for corn or potatoes. The area selected should be summer fallowed for one or two years before the mint is set out, or else it should be cropped with some plant that requires clean and frequent tillage. The tillage is also continued as long as possible during the growth of the crop, for successful mint growing implies clean culture at all stages of progress.

On suitable soil and with proper cultivation, yields of from two to three tons of mint herb per acre may be expected. As has already been said, however, the yield of oil is extremely variable and large yields can only be expected from fields that are in the best possible condition. A fair average for well managed commercial plantings may be said to be 30 pounds of oil per acre. Since the oil is the chief marketable product, adequate distilling facilities and a market for the oil are essential to success in the industry and the prospective mint grower should assure himself on these points before investing capital in plantations.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President; John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary. Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—The Kelsey Nursery Co. has leased 180 acres of land which now makes about 300 acres, which will be used for growing nursery stock.

MICHIGAN is rapidly becoming free from insect pests which threatened the horticultural interests of the state a few years ago according to Prof. L. R. Taft, East Lansing, state inspector of orchards.

Alaskan National Forest Cut in Half.

The area of the Chugach National Forest, Alaska, which is to be crossed by the railroad that the government is building from Seward to Fairbanks, is reduced nearly one-half by a proclamation, signed by President Wilson, returning approximately 5,802,000 acres to the public domain. The boundaries of the forest, as redrawn by the President's proclamation, now contain approximately 5,818,000 acres, supporting about eight billion feet of merchantable timber. On the area thrown out of the forest there is in the aggregate a large amount of timber, but it is so sparse and scattered as to be of little or no commercial value. The land remaining within the forest, however, contains the largest and most accessible supply of timber for the development of the great mineral fields to the north of Bering river, and is the region in which the Alaskan engineering commission has been authorized to cut 85 million feet of timber for use in constructing the government's new railroad. On account of the time required for cutting and seasoning construction timber, the commission has had to purchase some lumber from Washington and Oregon, but as cutting has already commenced on the Chugach, it is expected that the Alaskan timber will soon be serving the needs of the railroad builders.

"Cherries of New York"

The fourth in the splendid series of monographs on the fruits of temperate North America has been issued by the New York Agricultural Experiment Station. This book of 370 pages by Y. P. Hedrick compares favorably with the preceding volumes and contains an historical account of cultivated cherries, the botany of this fruit, a statement of its present economic status in America, descriptions of all known varieties of cherries, the synonymy and bibliography of the species and varieties and biographical sketches of the persons who have contributed materially to cherry culture in America. The most important varieties are illustrated in colors, and the frontispiece is an excellent portrait of the late Charles Downing.

In his preface to this monograph Mr. Hedrick continues: "Everything that was thought would be helpful in breeding cherries has been included, and special search has been made for such material. So, too, whatever was thought to be of interest to students of ecology and of plant distribution has been added. In the monographs on grapes and plums it was necessary to devote much space to the botanical relationship of these fruits since each contains more than a score of species under cultivation, some of which are scarcely known and most of which are extremely variable. The botany of cultivated cherries is comparatively simple and has been made plain by botanical writers. Yet the contemplation of the several species from a horticultural standpoint adds something, we believe, to the botany of cherries, especially as concerns the forms of the sweet cherry and the sour cherry which have been variously treated by botanists. As compared with their congeners, especially the plums, the economic species of cherries are remarkably well delimited, showing far less responsiveness to environment and having seemingly less inherent variation, so that there need be little confusion in botanical classification. On the other hand varieties are so similar that it is only with the greatest difficulty that closely related sorts are distinguished and there is great confusion in the synonymy, the chief task of the present work being to distinguish the true names from the synonyms of the varieties described. In The Cherries of New York, as in the preceding fruit books from this station, effort has been made to give as accurately as possible the region in which the species and varieties grow best and to set forth fully the local prejudices of the fruits. Such knowledge can not but be of value in determining the factors which govern the distribution of plants. The establishment of community relationships and description of plant communities now constitute an important part of botany on the one side and of geography on the other. No phenomena give better expression of the climate and the soil of a region than plant communities. When monographs of several of the fruits of temperate North America shall have been completed, with statements of likes and dislikes of the fruits and their varieties as to climate and soil, material should be available to establish plant communities from which can be drawn valuable generalizations."

The earlier monographs in this series were on apples, grapes and plums.

Market and 49th Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

New Orleans.

A regular meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was held Thursday, December 16, at 8 p. m., with H. Scheuermann, presiding, and C. R. Panter, secretary. After routine business had been disposed of, the special order of business, the flower show, was taken up. P. A. Chopin on behalf of the committee appointed to secure a suitable hall, reported that he had taken up the matter of securing space in one of the large department stores so that we could give a free show, but had met with no success, due to the fact that the Maison Blanche store, which first made the suggestion would not have their plans perfected by April, but that we could obtain the Athenaeum at very reasonable terms for this particular purpose. The committee was instructed to obtain the Athenaeum for four days in the second week in April. The matter of price of admission is to be fixed by the committee. The committee was also instructed to fix prices per square foot for space for exhibitors. It was also decided that exhibitors from other states would be allowed to exhibit under such terms and regulations as would be arranged by the committee. This latter clause is an innovation for this society and we expect that those who have been doing business in this city for many years will take advantage of this concession. The committee of arrangements consists of all exhibitors with P. A. Chopin as chairman and C. R. Panter, 2320 Calhoun street, as secretary-treasurer.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

December 16 is getting pretty close to Christmas, but in spite of this we had a representative crowd on our trip to Lititz to see our compatriots, Mr. Spinner, who has a very neat little place devoted principally to vegetables and from which he makes quite as much as the average florist would from the same amount of glass, the houses being used early for chrysanthemums, and C. F. Loeffler, who, during the past summer added two King houses and now has a good sized range complete in every particular and a general assortment of cut flower stock. Enos Kohr's being along the same car line, a stop was made to see this model place, which is a model, Mr. Kohr having the business insight to keep everything right up to the top notch of productiveness, utilizing all available space, and recognizing cleanliness as next to Godliness. He has some 45,000 Paper White coming in and his carnations, of which he has house after house, are exceptionally uniform and good in quality; in fact the most of Lancaster county carnations are higher in quality than just "good" this season. Mr. Kohr likes White Perfection better than Matchless and has a very fine bench of Alice of which he thinks considerable and with good reason. Bench after bench of Mrs. C. W. Ward were a sight worth the whole trip.

At 6:30 p. m., 32 were ready for their "oyster feed," among whom were as guests our ever present fellow members, D. Connor of the Lord and Burnham Co., and T. J. Nolan of the King Construction Co., and a new one from Pittsburgh in the shape and form of Edward J. McCallum, but we soon made him feel that he was among friends, and from a few remarks that he made before leaving he will be a booster for the club, and then a hasty glance at a crossroad sign out in the country, saying three miles to Petersburg made him feel close to home, as he read it Pittsburgh. A short meeting was held before the "feed" and H. A. Schroyer was nominated for president; E. J. Weaver, for vice-president; Harry K. Rohrer, for treasurer, and Frank Kohr for secretary, Lemon Landis, our secretary since organization, insisting on being relieved. Adjourning to the tables we found a real oyster supper awaiting us and the committee. Frank Kohr, David Rose and John Shreiner, certainly gave us full value for the money expended. After the "feed" exercise being in order several bowling teams rolled under the leadership of Messrs. Connor and Nolan and some heavy scores were made. The singing and playing of Alphonso Peters was a feature of the evening, and billiards and pool, and several hotly contested card games kept every one busy until 11:30, when we broke up a jolly party,

CLUB MEETING.

The Newport Horticultural Society held its annual election of officers for the ensuing year at its regular meeting, December 14, the result being as follows: John B. Urquhart, president; James Bond and Frederic Carter, vice-presidents; Fred P. Webber, recording secretary; William Gray, financial secretary; Andrew K. McMahon, treasurer. The executive committee consists of Jas. Robertson, Wm. MacKay, Bruce Butterson, Andrew S. Meikle, Daniel Hay, Andrew L. Dorward, Arthur W. Potter, Jr., Wm. F. Smith and Andrew MacLellan. The outgoing officers were given a vote of thanks for the efficient service rendered by them during the past year and for the successful manner in which several large exhibitions were conducted, among which were the shows of the American Sweet Pea Society and the American Gladiolus Society. Altogether the society feels justly proud of the past year's work, which will go on record as one of brilliant accomplishments.

The matter of encouraging more interest in shows was discussed and is now being given serious consideration. President William Grey, of the American Sweet Pea Society, is the father of an idea that seems to have some weight—that the society and garden clubs embody in their constitutions an information bureau to be open to the public to answer questions for their enlightenment on all matters of horticulture; for instance, should Mr. or Mrs. _____ write a secretary for information as to the best method of growing sweet peas, the secretary in turn would turn the question over to a local sweet pea expert, who would answer the question in the most read daily paper. In addition, it is also suggested that members raise a surplus stock and distribute same among school children and to people showing a lively interest, to be accompanied with a schedule of prizes (easily comprehended) of such value that it would awaken the interest of amateurs to the extent that "it was worth while," and in the meantime throughout the year the information bureau, with the aid of the press, would hand out information easily understood, which, it is thought, would in time bear fruit and be a good advertisement.

The veteran florist, James C. McLeish, received a handsome majority when elected as alderman at a recent election. He has held the office before, was street commissioner for a term, and is now a member of the park commission. Many florists and gardeners are prominently identified here in both state and city affairs, among them being Postmaster John B. Sullivan, License Commissioners John Mahan and John T. Allan, Assistant Tax Assessor James G. Blake, Park Commissioners Richard Gardner, James C. McLeish, Patrick Costello, and in the council they are strongly represented. The Newport Horticultural Society receives from the state treasurer each year $1,000, which is placed in their hands to be used for the advancement of horticulture in Rhode Island. This endowment originated through the influence brought to bear by the society on the state legislature and it was made a law. J. J. B.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The Johnson Greenhouses will build an addition in the near future.

WEST HARTFORD, CONN.—The erection of a public garage adjoining the greenhouse of Mrs. Louisa K. Goodwin, which cut off the light and filled the house with gas, has resulted in the house being torn down and sold.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS

Next Annual Convention, Houston, Tex., August 15-17, 1916.

The President's Message.

There is no day in all the year that brings more expectant joy to the heart of every man than the advent of a New Year. The privilege, as president of the S. A. F. & O. H. of extending to its members and to their families the sincere wish for a happy and prosperous New Year, gives me extreme pleas-ure.

There is no doubt whatever in my mind, but that it will be a prosperous year, and inasmuch as prosperity and happiness go hand in hand, I can readily assume that it will be a happy one. Trade conditions throughout the country are very healthy. We have harvested the largest crops in our history, and this is the back-bone of prosperity in any country. We have more to hope for in the year 1916 than we have ever had before. Our country has been saved from the horrible calamity which has overwhelmed Europe and we are hopeful that we will be spared from such a fate, not only this year, but for all years to come.

It is with great personal gratification that I can look upon the S. A. F. & O. H. as more truly a national body than it has ever been. The convention held in San Francisco, in 1915, was in my opinion, a step forward. Its convening in Houston, Texas, in 1916, will be another step toward making it a really national organization in every sense of the word. By extending our conventions to the west and south, we not only benefit those sections, but the society itself gains much by securing large numbers of recruits from the new territory which has thereby become attached to it. Every section of the country is benefited, and the members are already drawn closer together than ever before, forming a universal brotherhood for the promotion of all that is beneficial to the individual and to the society as a whole.

As the president of this worthy organization I am proud to be able to send a kind greeting to all the craftsmen of the society. Our membership is increasing steadily and I know that it will continue to do so. This larger membership will make it possible for us to undertake in the future many things that would be otherwise impossible. I am particularly desirous that every man associated with our profession should have the opportunities which our society affords and as a slight stimulant toward increasing our membership, I am offering $150.00 in gold, the same as was done by my predecessor, Patrick Welch. This I will hand to John Young, secretary, as an award to the member who will bring in the largest number of new members between the period January 1, and July 31, 1916. The only stipulation being that the winner must bring at least thirty new members.

I hope that the vice-president in every state, as well as every member of the board of directors, and that every permanent committee will co-operate with me in pushing forward this endeavor to increase our membership. In order that these heads may attain the required success it will be necessary for every individual who is fortunate enough to be a member of the S. A. F. & O. H. to give forth his best efforts, for "In Unity There is Strength," and if these efforts are put forth untiringly, we will beyond a doubt soon have a membership list three times what it is today. It is the sincere desire of this society to build up a permanent institution founded on a pillar of fairness and good-will, and I hope every member will lend his efforts to this end. Again extending a message of hearty good wishes and unbounded blessings for the New Year, I am,

D. MACROBIE.

Theodore Wirth Honored.

"To meet the demand for neighborhood parks and playgrounds is the great part of the work of the park commission of Minneapolis; we have now nearly all the land required," was the summary of the park situation delivered by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, at a dinner given in his honor by 200 citizens of Minneapolis, December 22, at the Minneapolis club. The occasion was to mark the tenth anniversary of assuming his position in January, 1906.

Among those who expressed their appreciation of Mr. Wirth's work were Fendall G. Winston, Fred B. Snyder, Dr. Cyrus Northrop, the Rev. M. D. Shutter and Hovey C. Clarke. The achievements of the park superintendent in bringing the city of Minneapolis to the foremost place in the world in the beauty and art of its park system were detailed in the addresses. Following the toasts a silver service was presented to Mr. Wirth.

"In Theodore Wirth's education as a horticulturist and landscape gardener within the view of the mountains of his native Switzerland, he was unconsciously fitted for his work in developing the latent beauties of cities of America," said Fred B. Snyder. "When he came to Minneapolis from Hartford, Conn., 10 years ago, our parks extended over 1,800 acres and the annual expenditure for maintenance was $141,000; now the system covers 3,800 acres and has a current appropriation of $520,000. The cost of the system is $7,500,000, compared with $3,500,000."

Illness prevented the presence of Charles M. Loring, who was to have spoken. Mr. Loring was styled the father of the Minneapolis park system by Mr. Clarke, who read a letter from him.

"Mr. Wirth has builded the superstructure on the foundation laid by William M. Berry, our first superintendent," the letter stated. "His accomplishments here have merited well this indorsement of the leader of his profession. He has put our outdoor attractions in the front rank of cities."

That $200,000 a year for 10 years be expended to finish the improvement of parks was recommended in the communication.

In his response, Mr. Wirth showered praise on the founders of the park system and on his fellow workers, and detailed the history of the park system.

"Three main features of our parks appealing to us," Mr. Wirth said, "are the strong support of the citizens in the upbuilding of the recreation grounds, the harmonious spirit of our executive boards, and completeness of the plan and its execution. Our parks are not detached, but connected in a chain of drives, lakes, gardens and groves. That is largely because few changes have been made in the personnel of the board of commissioners and the officers, and because of the absence of politics in the work."

"We will need but little more land, and our main work is to provide for play spaces. We must be willing to pay as we go, by assessments, for we can get little more by bond issues."

Dr. G. E. Vincent, expected as a speaker, was unable to attend. Mr. Winston was chairman and Mr. Snyder, toastmaster. Each program carried a photograph of Mr. Wirth.

CASPER, WYO.—L. M. Buxton has completed a new greenhouse.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—F. L. Drake & Co. have opened a flower shop in the American House block. The fixtures, which are very attractive, were supplied by the McCray Refrigerator Co., Kendallville, Ind.

COLLINGWOOD, N. J.—The Collingwood Horticultural Society has been organized with the following officers: H. R. Lippincott, president; Miss Kathryn Brown, vice-president; Myrton A. Bryant, secretary; John L. Root, treasurer.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—The following officers were elected at the sixtieth annual meeting of the Illinois State Horticultural Society: W. S. Perrine, Centralia, president; A. W. Brayton, Mt. Morris, vice-president; A. M. Augustine, Normal, secretary; J. W. Stanton, Richview, treasurer.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Louisville Florists' Christmas Advertising.

Louisville, Ky., florists, under a cooperative publicity plan to stimulate Christmas business, used page advertisements in the local papers in that city. Both text and illustrations brought out the appropriateness of flowers and plants for Christmas gifts and the results were without doubt gratifying. The names of the following appeared in the advertisements: August R. Baumer, M. D. Reimers, Fred Haupt Co., S. E. Thompson, Jacob Schultz Co., the New Nanz & Neuner Co., Inc., F. Walker & Co., C. B. Thompson & Co., and E. G. Reimers & Sons Co.

Christmas Plants in the New York Stores.

The New York retailers, as usual, were well prepared for the Christmas trade. As Christmas week opened with fine weather, it may be stated that the sale of plants began December 20 and increased in volume, day by day. The quality of the stock was excellent, and while it does not appear that there was any surplus worthy of note, there was, as a rule, enough to supply the demand. The azaleas, heathers, poinsettias, camellias, begonias, ardisias and other berried plants were in fine condition, and both singly and in combinations, sold well. In a number of stores, there were not as many of the large and expensive combinations as have been noticed in former years. In heather, there were many large and beautiful plants, and along that line the exhibits could not have been finer. Though early in the fall, there was something of a scare about azaleas, they arrived all right and many of them were brought into fine bloom for Christmas. Only a limited number of retailers handled the camellias to any extent. There was not a large supply available, and as it is well known that they take careful handling, some dealers think that they are a risky proposition. However, there was fine stocks of camellias in a number of stores and so far as we could observe, they turned out well. The begonias of the Lorraine type were prominent factors in the trade. The variety Mrs. Peterson was seen in most of the leading stores and made a fine impression. The poinsettias were leading factors in the trade. It may be added that the poinsettias show to better advantage in combination with other flowering or foliage plants. Much has already been accomplished along this line, but there is yet, in some cases, room for improvement. Excellent use was made of the dracenas, both by combining different varieties and by combination with other plants. Acubas, solanums, sprays of the red winter berries and pussy willows were used with good effect in many combinations. Acacias, euphorbias and some other plants, not usually plentiful at Christmas, were noticed. In several stores there were good exhibits of cattleya orchid plants in flower. In the various combinations, primulas and a great variety of the smaller ferns were noteworthy.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons, Broadway and 75th street, many fine features were noticed. About all the best things in plants were to be seen at this store. Heather, Otaheite oranges, azaleas and begonias, singly and in combinations, were very noteworthy.

It would be hard to find a more complete display of Christmas plants than those of Henry Hart, 1000 Madison avenue. Nearly every plant on the market was represented, including particularly fine poinsettias, crotons, Otaheite oranges and many fine combinations.

At the store of J. H. Small & Sons, 1153 Broadway, many excellent features in plants and plant combinations were noted, the finest of stock being on hand. A feature for which this firm is justly noted, is their boxwood wreaths, decorated with the red berries and red ribbon. Along this line nothing can be finer than their work.

Alexander McConnell, Fifth avenue and 49th street, made a very fine display of plants and plant combinations. Of course it is easy for him to do it, as he is one of the living fathers in the business and long ago acquired the habit of doing things right. This year, his heathers, azaleas, begonias, camellias and crotons were exceptionally fine.

Wadley & Smythe, 491 Fifth avenue, made an unusually fine display. The dictionary defines a novelty as "something new," but we believe that something old can be arranged in a new way and justly classed as a novelty. And here is where the novel features came in. They had a collection of plants of geraniums and heliotrope, grown to standards and finely flowered. Their show window was filled with plants of this kind and they attracted much attention. Acacias were another feature, and all the other seasonable plants were well represented.

At the stores of Chas. A. Dards, Madison avenue and 44th street and 114 West 72nd street, there were very fine displays of all the best seasonable plants. Fine azaleas, heathers, crotons, cyclamens, dracenas and imported holly trees were very noteworthy. There was also a fine display of wreaths and similar goods.

G. E. M. Stumpp, Fifth avenue and 58th street, made his usual fine exhibit of all the leading plants. A noteworthy feature at this store was many small combinations, very tastefully arranged, which were popular with the public.

Ralph Armstrong, Madison avenue and 47th street, made a fine display of hanging baskets of begonias of the Lorraine type. Camellias, cyclamens, ardisias and Otaheite oranges were also noteworthy.

Ferdinand Fleischman, Inc., made a fine window display of cattleya orchid plants in flower, all suitably decorated. Among other good features were handsomely decorated cages with canaries in them.

Thorley, Fifth avenue and 46th street, made an exceptionally fine display of camellias, hougainvilleas, crotons, azaleas and all other seasonable plants.

At the store of W. P. Sears, 729 Sixth avenue, a very fine display of plant combinations was noted.

At Thos. F. Galvin's, Inc., 561 Fifth avenue, there was a very handsome store decoration. Beneath a large electric lamp there was a large glass globe, and the lamp shaded with red and decorations of a similar shade were prominent, the evening effect being fine. The usual stock of fine plants were noted.

At the store of Wm. C. Mansfield, 1184 Lexington avenue, many fine features in plants and plant combinations were noted.

A. Warendorff, 1193 Broadway, had many fine features in plants, plant combinations and decorative effects. This was one of the most popular down-town stores.

Herman Kuhn, 896 Sixth avenue, occupying two floors with fine show windows in both, made a great display of plants and plant combinations.

All reports agree that there were record-breaking sales of plants. A number of retailers were out of plants before the evening of December 24.

At the store of Alexander McConnell a very large stock of plants was laid in but they were all gone by Christmas. The shortage of plants to some extent helped cut flowers, as when plants ran low the retailers had to have something.

Max Schling was sold out of plants on the afternoon of December 24 and closed his store that evening to enable him to get his stock out.

Alfred Van Pragg, 4 West 40th street, had a great business and was sold out of plants December 24.

John B. Nugent, of Young & Nugent, stated that if he could have secured them he could have sold many more plants.

Chas. Albert Small, of J. H. Small & Sons, 1153 Broadway, stated that they had a very fine business. This store had an exceptionally fine stock of plants and were cleaned out.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons, Broadway and 75th street, business was exceptionally good, both in plants and cut flowers.

Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, stated that it was the best business he ever had. He has recently had a good offer for his property at that corner and may sell out and retire.

Miss Alura M. Beardsley, the Onaway florist, 903 Seventh avenue, reported an excellent business in plants.

J. G. Leikens, Inc., Madison avenue and 55th street, stated that it was the best Christmas business he ever had.

J. W. Hauser, 571 Madison avenue, was well pleased with the volume of business. A. F. F.

Christmas in Retail Stores.

The retail trade in Chicago during Christmas week was exceptionally good, and in most instances the sales ran considerably ahead of those of last year. Everyone had all the orders that could be conveniently handled and the regular force and the extra help that was employed to lend a hand during the rush worked until late so that all orders could be delivered on time. The weather was ideal for delivery purposes and very few complaints were received on account of freezing. Fleischman, A. Lange, Mangel, Geo. Wittbold Co. and Samuelson advertised extensively in the daily papers during Christmas week and several other leading florists sent out special holiday circulars and folders. Plants were handled on a large scale, especially azaleas, begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias, and made up baskets and boxes of blooming and foliage plants again played an important part in the Christmas sales as they did last year and nearly everyone was completely sold out in this line long before the rush was over. Blooming plants in pots sold from $1 up, and basket arrangements of blooming and foliage plants sold at prices ranging from $3 to $25 each. Cut flowers were handled on a large scale also, but were none too plentiful, especially carnations, violets and sweet peas. Eastern American Beauty roses were handled by a few of the stores again this year and one dealer claims that he sold something like 2,000 fancy, long stemmed flowers at $12 per dozen, which were sold chiefly to those who placed their orders before December 18. Home grown violets sold at $1.50 per bunch and double violets at $1.25. Orchids sold for $1 and $1.50 and gardenias at 75 cents to $1 each. The best home grown American Beauty roses brought $15 to $18 per dozen and the medium grades $10 and $12 per dozen. Killarney roses sold for $2, $3, $4 and $5 per dozen; Killarney Brilliant, $3, $4 and $5; Mrs. Chas. Russell, $4, $6, $8 and $10; Ophelia, $3, $4 and $5; Hadley, $6 and $8; Richmond, $3, $4 and $5; Hoosier Beauty, $5 and $7 and Mrs. Aaron Ward and Sunburst at $3 and $4 per dozen. Lily of the valley in pots was offered in large quantities and sold well. California holly and red winter berries were used extensively in basket work and were in short supply. Ruscus, red frieze, statice and artificial flowers had a good call and taken all in all business was surprisingly good and the 1915 Christmas trade will go down on record as one of the best in years. The stores never made a better showing as far as decorations were concerned and probably never made a bid for the Christmas business as early as they did this year, which, no doubt, had much to do with the splendid results obtained.

Conrad Frauenfelder had a splendid Christmas trade at his West Madison street store with a brisk demand for both cut flowers and plants. Plants were handled on an extensive scale, especially azaleas, cyclamens and poinsettias. Everything sold well and cleaned up nicely and several extra delivery cars were pressed into service so that all orders could be delivered promptly. Very few complaints were received on account of freezing for the weather was ideal for delivery purposes and taking everything into consideration his 1915 Christmas trade was the most satisfactory in years.

George Perdikas never had a better Christmas trade and sold an unusually large number of plants, chiefly azaleas, poinsettias and cyclamens. Cut flowers were also handled in large quantities at his store and he was on the market nearly every day buying stock to fill his many orders. Small baskets of red winter berries and boxwood proved to be a grand seller, as did the usual line of holiday wreaths, especially ruscus, holly and red frieze.

Ronsley, the Westminster building florist, sold out completely in plants and cut flowers, and his Christmas sales were nearly doubled compared with 1914. His store was handsomely decorated for the occasion, and while plants were handled in large quantities, he sold a large supply of cut flowers, with a good demand for roses and American Beauties.

A. Lange's store was filled with customers at all times and he handled both cut flowers and plants on a large scale. Combination baskets of blooming and foliage plants were splendid sellers, and it is a question whether any other store sold as many poinsettias during Christmas week as this one did. His special Christmas box of flowers containing one dozen long stemmed red roses, one dozen carnations, one dozen stevia, one dozen Cecile Brunner roses, bouquet of violets, bouquet of pansies, holly and mistletoe, beautifully packed in a handsome Christmas box for $5, sold like hot cakes. Mr. Lange is well pleased with his Christmas trade, which exceeded all expectations.

The Fleischman Floral Co. had a magnificent showing of azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens and combination baskets of blooming and foliage plants. Cut flowers were also handled on a large scale and the sales were surprisingly good and much larger than last year. This firm had a two-colored full page advertisement in the Chicago Herald, December 23 and another full page in the Chicago Tribune the following day, which helped to increase its sales considerably.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, had his new conservatory and store completely filled with blooming and foliage plants of all kinds, with azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens and begonias the leaders. Business was never better at Christmas is the report at this store, and while plants were handled on a large scale, so were cut flowers and a grand clean-up is reported in both lines.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports a banner Christmas trade with a heavy demand for both cut flowers and plants. Azaleas, poinsettias and cyclamens were the best sellers in plants, and the demand for cut flowers was principally for roses, which sold exceptionally well. Several salesmen were added to the regular force so that all the orders could be delivered on time. Thursday and Friday were the busiest days and many sales were made Christmas morning.

The Bohannon Floral Co. never had such a large supply of plants to offer at Christmas as it did this year, and the principal offerings in this line were azaleas, begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias. Cut flowers were handled extensively, particularly American Beauty, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ophelia and Sunburst roses. In speaking of the Christmas trade, Mr. Bohannon said that he never saw anything like it, and that the sales will be away ahead of 1914.

H. N. Bruns had all the business that he could possibly handle at his beautiful West Madison street store and was sold out completely in all lines at an early hour. Mr. Bruns says that the individual sales were much larger than last year and that he could have sold more plants had they been obtainable. He had an unusually large supply of lily of the valley to offer for the holidays and cut over 22,000 in one day, which his hooks show to be the largest cut on record.

George Wienhoeber had a brisk call for American Beauty roses and had orders booked on the evening of December 18 for 2,000 at $12 per dozen, which was a special offer to induce his customers to place their orders before that date. Mr. Wienhoeber was more than pleased with his Christmas trade for the sales in both cut flowers and plants exceeded all expectations. Lily of the valley in pots sold well, and there was a heavy demand for poinsettias, azaleas and cyclamens.

O. J. Friedman says that counting the actual Christmas orders, his sales were almost fifty per cent better than in 1914. Six thousand feet of floor space was rented in the Ohio building for the week and was used to good advantage in arranging the stock. Large azaleas, ardisias and Scotch heather were handled on a large scale and sold quickly. Cut flowers also sold well but plants were featured mostly at this store.

The George Wittbold Co. had a brisk Christmas trade according to Louis Wittbold and while the retail department did not spend as much money for advertising as last year, the sales were larger with the demand principally for combination baskets and boxes of foliage and blooming plants, cut flowers and holly wreaths. This firm handled a tremendous supply of Christmas trees and sold out completely.

The Ernst Wienhoeber Floral Co. reports the Christmas trade as fine and dandy with plants and cut flowers both in brisk demand. This firm handles a fine line of holiday stock and it is always a pleasure to inspect their neatly arranged baskets of blooming and foliage plants around the holiday time.

W. J. Smyth had a splendid Christmas trade with the call mostly for different combination baskets of blooming and foliage plants. Cut flowers were a good seller with American Beauty roses and orchids in best demand.

Raske's Flower Shop enjoyed a splendid holiday trade with a heavy demand for American Beauty roses in the longer stemmed grades. Plants were also handled extensively and cleaned up completely.

Chas. A. Samuelson carried a complete line of holiday plants and cut flowers and ran a special price list in his advertisement in the daily papers. Combination baskets and azaleas sold best in the plant line with American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell and other high priced roses having the call in cut flowers.

Schiller had a splendid business at each of his three stores and while the sales have not all been checked over, it is safe to say that they will be much larger than last year. The north side store did a larger business than last Christmas and the loop store had all the orders that could be properly attended to. The west side store did a tremendous business and something like 10,000 parcels were delivered safely with only one comeback and that was on account of a mistake in the address. Manager Asmus has a pretty fine system in working order at the west side store and how the force handles all the Christmas orders that it does in so short a time is something that several have tried to figure out for some time. Mr. Asmus says that quality stock was in best demand this year which applies to both cut flowers and plants and is just the reverse of last Christmas when a cheaper grade was desired.

W. H. Kidwell & Son did a fine business at Christmas and sold large quantities of cut flowers, principally roses, which cleaned up completely. Plants never sold better, especially azaleas, poinsettias and cyclamens than they did this year.

Paul Blome & Co. have no complaint to make in regard to their Christmas trade which was very satisfactory as far as plants were concerned which sold well. Cut flowers did not move as well as they might have owing to the high prices, but sales in general compare most favorably with those of 1914.

Stollery Bros. had a very good Christmas business and sold a large number of red baskets of winter berries and boxwood at prices ranging from $1 to $3 each which was a leader with them. Plants also sold well with azaleas in best demand. The sales will run ahead of last year, but very few cut flowers were handled on account of the high prices and plants were pushed instead.

John T. Muir had a better Christmas trade than last year with plants selling best. His conservatories were completely filled with stock, but at Christmas noon everything was pretty well disposed of. Cut flowers also sold well but azaleas, poinsettias and other Christmas plants sold out first.

H. C. Rowe had a good Christmas trade at his new store on South Wash-ash avenue, with a brisk demand for plants. Fancy baskets of azaleas and poinsettias sold nicely and cleaned up quickly at very satisfactory prices. Mr. Rowe is always on the job at Christmas and one cannot help but admire the plucky fight he is making against odds, but he will come out on top some day for it is a tough proposition to keep a good man down.

J. F. Kidwell Co. had the best Christmas trade since they were in business and did twice as much as they expected to. Azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens and begonias artistically arranged in baskets were featured and sold best. Poinsettias especially sold well and this firm had one of the finest lines to offer in plants in the city. Cut flowers sold good but more attention was paid to pushing the plants which came from the firm's own greenhouses.

Heating Small Greenhouse.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What is the most economical way of heating a small greenhouse, 16 x 32 feet, to grow carnations, geraniums, etc., in zero weather?

To heat a greenhouse, 16 x 32 feet, we would install a hot water heater rated for about 225 to 250 square feet of radiation, locating it so that it will stand below the level of the greenhouse floor. We would use either one 2½-inch or two 2-inch flow pipes. If the latter are used run one on each of the wall plates, while if a 2½-inch main is used it may run to the farther end of the house, just below the ridge, or after it enters the house, it may divide and supply two 2-inch flow pipes on the plates as suggested above.

For 50 to 55 degrees there should be a return coil containing four 1½-inch pipes on each wall or under each of the side benches. All pipes should be given a downhill slope and the expansion tank, which should have a capacity of five gallons of water, should be connected with the highest part of the system, thus doing away with any occasion for using air-valves.

In order to control the temperature, there should be gate valves on two pipes in each coil. If it is not feasible to sink the heater as suggested above, it will be necessary to run the system under pressure, which may be done by installing a mercury generator, in which case we would use one 2½-inch flow under the ridge. L. R. T.

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J.—Herrick & Ross, both well known to the New York wholesale trade, have purchased the Hart range and will grow flowers for that market.

CHRISTMAS TRADE.

A wonderful 1915 Christmas trade is reported from all sections of the United States. Indications early in the season pointed to good holiday business and the majority of the trade made what they considered ample preparations to take care of all demands, but the results in nearly every instance exceeded all expectations. Prices were higher, but the quality of the stock was exceptionally good and the supply was in nearly every case equal to the demand, the principal exception being noted in carnations, which in some localities were short of supply due to cloudy weather. Both local and out-of-town deliveries were made with little difficulty as the weather conditions were ideal, no reports of freezing being heard. While cut flower stock sold well, high prices in some instances influenced the sale of flowering plants, and the sales of pot plants showed a substantial gain over those of last year. It is also true that there was a call for higher priced stock than usual, and the demand for baskets and hampers, arranged with the better grade of flowers, was noteworthy. Poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, azaleas and berried plants were especially popular. In the cut flower class, roses were the leaders, with carnations, where the supply was not affected, a good second, and there was as usual a good demand for violets and lily of the valley. From some of the condensed reports which follow, it will be seen that the increase in the volume of sales, as compared with last year, is from five per cent to 30 per cent higher.

SEDALIA, Mo.—With prices ranging from 10 to 25 per cent better than last year and advance orders and F. T. D. business showing an increase, the Archias Floral Co. reports increased sales for the holiday trade of 1915. Everything in the way of cut flowers sold out completely. The weather was good up to Christmas eve and early shopping induced by advertising aided in getting out orders in splendid shape. Stock was of fine quality and in cut flowers there was an increase in the demand for American Beauties, Richmond roses, poinsettias and red carnations. In plant sales, Begonias Cincinnati and Luminosa, poinsettias, cyclamens and bouvardias led in popularity. Funeral work of late has been the heaviest in the history of this firm.

DAYTON, O.—Matthews, the Florist, estimates the Christmas sales this year, 30 per cent better than the corresponding period of 1914. Prices were higher, but stock was of good quality and better prices were easier to get. Carnations were scarce, but as a rule stock was plentiful. All flowers were in good demand, especially sweet peas, violets and Richmond roses. All blooming plants sold well and the number of medium-priced small baskets and hampers disposed of shows they are gaining in popularity. Cyclamens and poinsettias were in great demand and azaleas cleaned up entirely at high prices. There was a tremendous call for southern smilax for home decorations.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—With 1915 prices about on a par with those of the Christmas period of a year ago, and a liberal supply of stock, with the exception of carnations, holiday sales showed a slight increase, according to Samuel Murray. The quality of the stock was fully as good as last year and there was an increased demand for orchids, American Beauty roses, violets, which were especially fine stock, and lily of the valley, for which the demand was very good. There was a lively demand for all plants and sales of basket arrangements, especially in the better grade, were good. Orchid baskets sold better than ever this year.

IOWA CITY, IA.—An increase in the sale of blooming plants and a special demand for small plant baskets were features of the Christmas trade with Jas. Aldous & Son. Prices were a little higher than a year ago, but the quality of the stock was good and an increase of about 20 per cent in the gross sales resulted. Carnations and roses were scarce and narcissi took their places in many orders. Among the best sellers in the plant section were cinerarias, Primula obconica, cyclamens, Begonias Lorraine and Cincinnati, azaleas, Christmas peppers and Roman hyacinths.

ROCHESTER, MINN.—Notwithstanding the fact that prices were higher than a year ago, stock moved more freely, sales were larger, with the result that the 1915 business was about one-third above normal at the establishment of the R. Bragg Co., Inc. The quality of stock compared very favorably with last year, especially in azaleas. The demand was strong, and the price of cut flowers caused pot stock to move most actively, resulting in a clean-up in azaleas, primroses, cyclamens and berried plants. Artificial decorations sold better than ever before.

FREMONT, NEB.—Green's Greenhouses report an increase of about 15 per cent in Christmas sales over a year ago, with prices practically the same. There was no real demand for bulbous stock, and sales had to be forced. Clear, bright weather brought the stock in in excellent condition and the supply was plentiful with the exception of roses, carnations and violets. Flowering plants sold especially well, with a heavy call for begonias, cyclamens and azaleas. Anything and everything that was bright colored found a ready buyer.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—George Rye, "Some Florist," writes: "This has been the greatest clean-up Christmas I have ever had. By Christmas morning all plants were sold and I had the largest stock I ever carried. The cut flowers were sold as fast as they could be shown, and on top of that Christmas day and Sunday I had three funerals that cleaned up all stock of any description. I have been in the business for myself four years, and it is the best I ever had, and nearly two-thirds of it was cash."

CANAL DOVER, O.—Greater by a liberal per cent with prices about the same as a year ago, is the report of C. Betscher, in comparing this season's Christmas sales with the corresponding period of 1914. More carnations could have been disposed of if they could have been secured. Plant sales were much larger than in former years, all flowering varieties being popular and ferns had a good sale. Prices on cut flowers were high and to an extent forced the sale of pot plants.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—With retail prices about the same as a year ago and a good increase in the demand for the more expensive plants, the Christmas trade of 1915 showed a splendid increase, probably 25 per cent above last year, with cash sales more than ever before, is the report of Tipton & Hurst. The supply was plentiful, with the exception of long stemmed Russells and the quality of the stock was excellent. A good demand was noted for bulbous flowers.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—S. A. Anderson, in summing up this year's business during the Christmas period, estimates an increase of 30 per cent over that of a year ago. Prices were about the same, the quality of the stock was good and the supply plentiful, except in roses and carnations. There was a special demand for high grade flowers and plant baskets priced from $5 to $15 also sold well. Artificial flowers were in less demand than in former years.

NEWARK, O.—With a shortage of stock in some lines, especially roses and carnations, and with prices about the same as a year ago, Chas. A. Duerr reports an increase in Christmas sales for 1915. The quality of the stock was as good if not better than in former years and a decided increase was noted in the demand for plants. All kinds of wreaths and Christmas green sold well and there was a good demand for bulbous flowers.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—According to the Joy Floral Co., sales this year were about 15 per cent greater than during the 1914 Christmas period. Prices were better than last year and the supply was adequate, with the exception of violets which were short. The quality of the stock was about on a par with that of a year ago. In bulbous flowers there was a good call for Paper Whites. The call for plants was very good.

ROCKVILLE, IND.—The trade is inclining toward a better line of cut flowers and plants, reports H. B. Brubeck, and as a result holiday business this year showed an increase of 15 per cent, although there was no increase in prices. Carnations were in scant supply due to dark weather, but other stocks were plentiful and of about the same quality as last year. Azaleas and all good stock in pot plants sold well.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Henry Smith reports splendid Christmas business in both cut flowers and plants. Prices were better and an increase in Christmas sales over 1914 of about 15 per cent is estimated. The supply in all lines was adequate and the quality uniformly good. Poinsettias, cyclamens and azaleas were most in demand and there were many calls for cherries and berried plants.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—Manager W. G. Peacock, of the Dale estate, estimates the 1915 Christmas business as nearly 30 per cent better than a year ago. Prices were slightly higher and the supply was plentiful, with the exception of carnations. Stock was of better quality than usual. There was an exceptionally good demand for orchids for shipment to cities in the United States.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—L. L. May & Co. report an increase of about five per cent over last year's Christmas sales with prices somewhat better and an adequate supply of stock. The quality was good, with the exception of carnations, which were not up to standard. More of the masses bought flowers this year and there was an increase in plant sales, especially cyclamens.

MERIDIAN, MISS.—The 1915 Christmas business was at least 15 per cent better than that of a year ago, according to Mrs. N. G. McKinney. Retail prices were higher this year, but the quality of the stock was not up to standard. Red roses and carnations led the demand in cut flowers and the call for pot plants was greater than ever before.

GREELEY, COLO.—Gardner Floral Co. reports that 30 per cent more stock could have been sold this year than last had the flowers been procurable, but with prices about the same as a year ago, the volume of business was about equal with that of the Christmas period of 1914. There was an increase in pot plant sales, cyclamens taking the lead.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—According to Gust. Rusch & Co., Christmas business this year was greater and prices were much better than in 1914. The supply of cut flowers was hardly equal to the demand, and white flowers sold well as compared with other years on this account. All varieties of blooming plants sold well.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Price seemed to cut no figure where quality and service were considered and the Christmas sales this year were at least 20 per cent better than those of 1914 at Gude Bros. Co. The quality of the stock was better and the prices were better and everything in plants and flowers met with ready sale.

SALINA, KAN.—Edward Tatro reports Christmas sales of about the same volume as a year ago. The shipped in stock was of very poor quality and the prices were "sky high."

WEHAWKEN, N. J.—Peter Reis says he did not bother with cut flowers because they were too high, but he had an excellent business in plants and was completely cleaned out.

NEWARK, N. J.—Begerow, Phillips Brothers and John Crossley all report excellent Christmas business. The latter, states that he was completely sold out in plants.

EAST ORANGE, N. J.—Henry Hornecker, a veteran in the business, states that he sold an immense amount of stock and is well satisfied with results.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—May F. Kendall, the leading florist of this city, reports excellent business, in fact, the best Christmas in her remembrance.

MICHIGAN CITY, IND.—A. C. Reichert reports his Christmas trade as very good with a 15 per cent increase over 1914.

ELIZABETH, N. J.—The Misses Hutchison, the leading florists of this city, report excellent business.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J.—J. Rassbach reports the best Christmas business he ever had.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Douglas E. Smith, formerly of Nashville, Tenn., is now with C. B. Thompson & Co.

FRANKLINVILLE, N. J.—A new house, to be devoted to palms, ferns and lilies, is to be erected at the range of J. A. Godfrey.

VIRGINIA, ILL.—Andrew Reiter, proprietor of the Virginia Greenhouses, has gone to Houston, Tex., where he will spend the winter.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.—A campaign has been started here to secure the summer meeting of the Michigan State Horticultural Society.

NORFOLK, VA.—The Art Floral Co., recently incorporated, with a capital stock of $15,000, has opened a flower store at the city market.

CALGARY, ALBERTA.—The business of the Kerrison Floral Co. is being liquidated. No information has been given as to the probable outcome.

CLINTON, MASS.—Frank P. Sawyer has secured additional store room and has doubled the capacity of his establishment in the Pierce block.

CHRISTMAS TRADE CLEANS UP MARKET.

The feature of the holiday week was the weather; it was ideal from Monday morning until Saturday night, there was no danger from frost at any time, the last two days being as balmy and spring-like as one would expect at Easter. Sunday morning following, however, was ushered in with a very violent wind and rain storm, which later turned to snow. This would have been a great handicap had it occurred on Saturday. It had a very nasty look for a couple of hours, but cleared up at noon. The Christmas business was a record-breaker in all lines and a gain of from ten to twenty per cent in value of trade is reported. Everybody—growers, wholesalers, retailers, supply men—were all doing overtime with the orders and work pushing them to the limit to keep from getting hopelessly behind. There was a splendid demand for everything of merit and never before was there so much good stock and in such variety. American Beauty roses were in grand condition; in fact, all the rose crops seemed timed to the very day. There were quantities of glorious Russells and Richmond were in splendid shape as were all the teas. The only sorts to hang fire were the White and Double Pink Killarney. There was some pickled stock as there probably always will be.

NOTES.

In the retail section everybody appeared to be well satisfied with their business, it was all they could do to keep up with or handle the increasing business, which, toward the last, compelled some stores to refuse orders except from old customers. All had made great preparations, so that the business can be said to have been most satisfactory. Prices obtained were good, while of course moderately priced plants sold well, there was noticed splendidly flowered cyclamen, marked $10 per, which cost $36 per dozen plants. As compared with other $10 articles they held their own. Made up baskets of foliage and flowering plants were popular and sold well. Splendidly flowered azaleas were in all the stocks, as was fine heather. Poinsettias in pans were in great demand and sold out long before Christmas eve. All kinds of wreaths for window and cemetery decorations were in great demand.

Albert Jones, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., says that growers make a very great mistake in holding stock, as the market was cleaning up and much better returns would have resulted had they sent the stock in as soon as ready and let the trade sell it to the best advantage. Mr. Jones believes the volume of business was at least 10 per cent better than last season, with the same percentage of increase in prices. The carnation men did not hit Christmas very well and what stock there was sold up clean at good prices. Cattleyas, particularly Percivilliana, were a little too plentiful toward the last. Mixed orchids were scarce. Poinsettias sold out clean.

Christmas business all right, prices better, a good clean up and everything most satisfactory, is Edward Reid's good word. He seemed more than pleased and predicted a splendid business for the balance of the season.

The general consensus of opinion is that the business was most gratifying and will encourage everybody to use their best efforts towards getting a continuation of the trade for the balance of the season.

The Leo Niessen Co. did a wonderful business—it was all right from every standpoint. There were quantities of high quality stock and demand enough to clean it all up. American Beauties were handled by the thousands and there were splendid Russells and all the other standard sorts in quantity. A generous supply of gardenias was a welcome addition to the stock, as was splendid lily of the valley by the thousands. The volume of business was much better than last year with a considerable increase in prices.

"Fine! fine!" is the report of Carl Korts of the Jos. Heacock Co. "Never had finer stock or a better demand, everything sold out clean by Christmas eve—prices about 20 per cent better than last year. Not nearly enough of the shorter grades of roses. Cattleyas sold well at from 60 cents to 75 cents until Friday p. m., when they came in rather too plentifully and dropped in price. Altogether it was a splendid Christmas."

John C. Gracey had an increased demand for boxes of roses by the dozen, rather than assorted cut flowers. Poinsettias and all kinds of cemetery wreaths sold very well with him.

Berger Brothers reported a large increase in their Christmas trade. They could have handled much more stock in several lines. They are much pleased with the outlook.

The Robert Craig Co. reports an increase of 25 per cent over business of last season. All lines of their stock sold well, particularly cyclamens, which they had remarkably fine, many of the choice plants having from 30 to 40 expanded flowers. They supply many growers with young stock and now have orders booked for spring delivery for 128,000 plants.

Pennock Brothers and H. H. Battles were very strong with a large assortment of wreaths, and although great preparations had been made could have sold more. The miniature fancy "auto" wreaths and baskets of Christmas greens were very popular and brought splendid prices.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Cut Flower Co. had a fine business for their first Christmas. Splendid Russells and violets were specialties.

The made up pots of variegated plants and ardisias of H. A. Dreer, Inc., sold well in the stores. They were very well arranged.

The W. K. Harris bird's nest ferns were seen in all the stores. They were the best plants of this striking fern ever offered in this market and sold well.

Godfrey Aschman's araucarias were used to touch up many of the stocks in the stores and sold well with their red ribbon decorations. K.

BEST BUSINESS IN HISTORY.

Christmas trade was the best ever experienced in this city; no one disents from this idea of it, because everyone who was at all in line for business, had all he could possibly do to care for it, and despite the most careful and extensive previous preparations made by many, they failed dismally to equal the great demand made. This refers chiefly to the proper delivery of the purchases and the large force of clerks nearly everyone had engaged for the week was unable to properly serve the great crowds who sought floral effects, either artificial or natural, to send as gifts or to ornament their own homes. Early in the week it was clearly indicated that the demand would be heavy. This was shown by the free purchases of artificial effects and inquiries made for plants and cut flowers. Plants of all kinds were popular and this might well be called a plant Christmas and the call for these was not confined, as in former years to the early days of the week, but continued up to the very last. The high prices of roses probably was responsible for driving many of the cut flower patrons to the plants and as the stock of the latter was large and complete in variety, the result was advantageous to both florist and his patrons. Frantic efforts were made on Thursday to reach outside markets for roses, as it was plain the local supply was totally inadequate. Some relief was found by the final arrival of belated shipments from Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, but in many cases they came too late for the proper filling of orders.

Carnations were fairly plentiful and the quality good, and most of the stock found sale at a good figure. Lily of the valley, that many thought would be of short supply, was easily available and popular. Violets were good and sold well. Poinsettias came in early this season and Christmas week found a short supply on hand and the result was a clean up on this item. Stevia was not much of a factor in the list, though much of it was sold. Plant baskets were again very popular and many more could have been sold. Holly was good, but little of it was sold by florists except in wreaths, which were as popular as ever. The weather was favorable for deliveries, except on Friday, when a heavy soft snow made it hard for autos, though this impediment was preferable to intense cold.

CHRISTMAS MARKET CLEANS UP WELL.

Christmas business proved to be very good. The supply was larger than was expected, while prices were good and most everything in the market cleaned up nicely. Roses are in a heavy supply and except American Beauties are meeting with a good call. The American Beauties are not having a very active market. Carnations are still on the short side and there are no prospects of an immediate substantial increase in the supply. Easter lilies are plentiful and have a fair sale. Neither orchids, violets nor lily of the valley, all of which are in excellent supply, are having a very strong and active call. Double stevia sells well. The receipts in narcissi are large enough to take care of present needs. Other offerings include callas, poinsettias and magnificum lilies.

NOTES.

Gus Brunner has the sympathy of his friends in his bereavement in the death of his father-in-law, Wm. Burger.

The delivery autos of Fred Gear and Miss Edith F. Kyrk, clashed on Christmas morning.

P. J. Olinger had a very fine lot of red roses and Killarney for his Christmas business.

POPULAR DEMAND FOR PLANTS.

"The best ever!" is what most local florists have to say of their Christmas trade. Cut flowers were scarce and high. Carnations sold for $1.50 to $2 a dozen, miscellaneous roses $2 to $6, American Beauties, $6 to $20, violets, $1.50 per bunch. These prices turned popular attention to pot plants, and to made-up effects in fancy baskets, either flowers or artificial foliage. A fine business prevailed, however, among the best offerings of florists' shops. It is claimed that the 1915 holiday buying period showed a marked advance in favor of flowers and plants as gifts. Some shops sold up almost clean. In such goods as wreaths, holly and Christmas trees the demand was in greater volume than at any previous season. While more prosperous times comes in for a share of the credit, florists took extra pains this year with window displays, making large use of baskets, fancy pots and other articles that would attract the attention of shoppers. Early in the present week, considerable buying was in evidence from persons in haste to reciprocate unexpected gifts, but stocks offered rather poor selection. Some florists were completely sold out on azaleas and other popular Christmas flowers.

NOTES.

Within the past two weeks four Columbus florists have added new motor delivery service, S. F. Stephens with an Overland, and T. J. Ludwig, Underwood Brothers and the Franklin Park Floral Company with Ford machines.

Norman E. Shaw, state nursery inspector, estimates that Ohio spent $200,000 on Christmas trees this season. He states that four trains of 50 cars each, would be required to haul Ohio's purchases of New England trees, and that a caravan of automobile trucks more than a mile long would have been needed to carry the trees out within the state. Of 200 car loads with 600 trees to a car which approximately made up Ohio's consumption, 40 went to Cleveland, 30 to Cincinnati, and 20 each to Columbus and Toledo, the other 90 cars having been distributed throughout the state to points other than the cities mentioned. Pittsburgh.

MARKET CLEANS UP EARLY.

The Christmas rush is now a thing of the past and we must now turn our attention to New Year's day, which usually proves to return a fair holiday business. Christmas flowers were not so plentiful this year, with the exceptions of roses and violets. The latter were expected to be rather scarce, but, contrary to predictions, swamped the market and Monday morning, December 27, finds a great many of them unsold. The demand, however, did not seem to include violets. There was a better call for novelty roses, sweet peas and daisies. Richmond roses and American Beauties were in good supply, especially in the fancy grades. There was not much left to sell in the way of short roses, carnations, lilies and narcissi after Wednesday. Pittsburgh experienced probably the worst traffic congestion in the history of the flower business during the latter part of the week. It was next to impossible to get deliveries of flowers from the express companies in due time, with the result that many shipments from out of town growers arrived on Christmas day and Sunday, too late for good sales.

NOTES.

Neil McCallum, president of the Florists' & Gardeners' Club wishes to announce that at the Ft. Pitt hotel (the next regular meeting, Tuesday January 4), W. C. Todd "The Bird Man" of Carnegie museum, will give his celebrated lantern lecture entitled "Travels and Adventures in the Hudson Bay Country." Mr. Todd has spent several seasons collecting in these regions and as he is an exceedingly observant man, his lecture will be both entertaining and instructive. Our Carnegie museum, through Mr. Todd's efforts, contains the best collection of northern fanner on this continent. Bring all your friends and take advantage of this treat.

Randolph & McClements report their "best Christmas business ever" for 1915, both in plants and cut flowers. Some of their plant combinations and artificial pieces were worth going farther than East Liberty to see. G. P. Weaklen Co., and The Zieger Co., also report a banner year, both stores executing some exceptionally beautiful and tempting pieces of work, cleverly displayed in their large show windows.

Two visits to the store of Mrs. E. A. Williams, Wednesday and Saturday evenings presented a striking contrast in their plant business. Hundreds of plant arrangements were being displayed Wednesday, but Mr. Sheaf reports that every single plant was sold and delivered by Friday.

The trade received quite a shock Friday afternoon when it was learned that the oldest son of Joseph Thomas had shot himself at his home in Greensburg. The exact nature has not been learned, but our deep sympathy is with Mr. Thomas in his unfortunate loss, especially at this season of the year.

The down-town people all report a grand clean-up in everything, especially baskets and made-up wreaths. Harris Bros., Gallagher & Franks and the several market stands were sold out at a comparatively early hour Friday evening in all lines of stock.

Arthur James of Wilkinsburg was the "poinsettia king" this season, and furnished many of the local trade with fancy blooms in pots and in cut stock.

There was a marked scarcity of holly, laurel and boxwood in the local market this season. M.

EXCELLENT CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

The 1915 Christmas sales were much better than those of a year ago, and perhaps better than any preceding year in the history of the trade in this city. The weather was ideal and enabled the florists to deliver orders rapidly and with no fear of freezing. There was a good demand for Christmas baskets filled with holly, winter berries and ruscus arranged with flowers. Plants sold well, as did the better grade of cut flowers, such as orchids, American Beauty roses, etc., and a great many corsage bouquets of violets, orchids, Ward roses and lily of the valley were sold. There was a shortage of good holly—not a case to be had at wholesale December 24.

NOTES.

John Foster, a florist employed at the greenhouses of the F. Walker Co. at New Albany, Ind., was assaulted by several negroes December 24, following an altercation, and died of a fractured skull the following day. Additional details are given in another column of this issue.

The new Nanz & Neuner Co., Inc., had unusually fine quality carnations this year, but owing to the cloudy weather, did not have a very heavy cut to meet the Christmas requirements.

The Christmas decoration for the Stewart Dry Goods Co.'s store consisted of a large number of holly wreaths five feet in diameter tied with large bows of red ribbon.

The E. G. Reimers Sons Co. made a special feature of the plant business for Christmas, and did not push the cut flower end of the business.

The Kunzman Floral Co. had fine stock of Lorraine begonias and cyclamens for the Christmas demand and cleaned up entirely.

H. G. Walker of the F. Walker Co., had an acute attack of indigestion which kept him confined to his home Christmas day.

A. Rasmussen of New Albany had a fine crop of roses in variety, but was short on carnations.

Jacob Schultz had a fine lot of azaleas and poinsettias for the Christmas trade.

Wm. Walker Co. added a new Ford car to their delivery system for Christmas. W.

Montreal.

HEAVY CHRISTMAS PLANT DEMAND.

Christmas trade this year was very good. Everything was sold out with prices in plants about the same as last year; that means lower than two and three years ago. Cut flowers sold considerably higher. Roses sold from $3 up, with best American Beauties $24 per dozen; carnations, $2 to $3 per dozen; lily of the valley and violets, $1 per bunch; narcissi, $1 and daffodills, $1.50 per dozen. These prices frightened many prospective buyers away, and the florists found it very difficult to explain why prices increased within 10 days from 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen to $2 and $3 per dozen for carnations and many other inflated prices like the above. Of course the growers and wholesalers were accused as the victim. However, cut flowers were all sold out before the demand was satisfied. This shows again that flowers are a necessity and people must have them regardless of the cost. The quality was better than ever before and no complaints were heard about sleepy carnations or pickled stock. The supply and quality of the plants was excellent. Azaleas were perhaps scarce, but what there was, was of superior quality. Poinsettias for the first time in history were in sufficient quantity to go around. Cyclamens took the place of azaleas. Never before were there displayed such specimens by the hundreds, all plants with from 50 to 100 flowers and buds, and from one foot to two feet in diameter. There were less begonias, but more Jerusalem cherries. Very little bulbus stock was ready. Holly and laurel wreathing sold well; also boxwood made up baskets. The delivery was aided by very mild weather—always above freezing, and good roads. J. L.

Wichita, Kan.

SOLID WEEK OF BIG BUSINESS.

Christmas week was a solid week of good business with each day's volume increased over that of last year, and probably set a new record for the total amount of business done. Plant sales were decidedly heavier, and also the average amount of sales made was probably higher, showing an increased demand for the better class of goods. Made-up basket arrangements sold well, likewise well-trimmed pots easily brought an additional profit for the extra trimming. Azaleas, poinsettias, Lorraines and cyclamens were the "big four", with other blooming plants and ferns filling the demand for something different or cheaper. Stocks of cut flowers were of course augmented by supplies from the wholesale markets and were fairly adequate except for carnations, which were practically out of the market for sales over the counter, it taking all that could be secured to fill orders already booked. Retail prices were about as usual for the season. Weather was fine all week, except that Friday showed up with a snowy slush that bothered rapid transit. Christmas day was fine; temperature above freezing by 10 a. m. and delivery problems much simplified in comparison with last year.

NOTES.

W. H. Culp & Co. were especially fortunate with their azaleas, getting them in just right and selling out clean at good prices. Their new store proved its advantages in handling the crowd and the goods.

F. Kuechenmeister says, "Fine, fine, the best ever." Their new delivery car is about the niftiest of its kind on the streets and surely made good during the rush.

Chas. P. Mueller was especially well fixed with poinsettias, which sold out completely.

C. A. Rose reports business the best yet with not even a Christmas tree left. C.

Providence, R. I.

SALES 25 PER CENT BETTER THAN 1914.

The 1915 Christmas business was better than for many years past. The weather was not of the true Christmas kind, the preceding Thursday being warm and a heavy rainstorm put a damper on business for that day, but the public made up for it Friday when trade was very heavy. Carnations sold better this year than ever before, and seemed to be favorites with all flower buyers and baskets of plants and fancy grasses also enjoyed a good call. Roses did not move as well as last year and while sweet peas were very good in quality the demand for them was not very heavy. Lily of the valley sold well, as did orchids, and corsages of white and yellow marguerites were popular. The stores were well stocked with all kinds of pot plants, such as cyclamens, ardisias, cithotiums, araucarias, begonias, primulas, maidenhair ferns, Boston and Whitmani Ferns, heaths, pepper plants, Jerusalem cherries, crotons, azaleas, rubber plants and other small stock. Partridge herry bowls had a very good call as did the small auto wreaths that were new in this city this year. All evergreen stock sold very good, the prices were much better than in former years, that is, better prices were paid than formerly. Taking the business from beginning to end this year, it seemed that the Christmas business was 25 per cent better than last year.

NOTES.

Red carnations this year sold as high as $12 per 100, and the call for them was very good at the wholesale markets.

H. A. Burlingame's violets were the best that have been seen for some time. He sold out early.

John Marshall, of the Fruit Hill Greenhouses, cut fine sweet peas for the Christmas trade.

Fred Hoffman, of Pawtucket, had excellent azaleas this year that sold very well. H. A. T.

The Late John Foster.

John Foster, a former resident of Glasgow, Ky., but for the past 14 years an employe of the F. Walker Co., Louisville, Ky., at the firm's greenhouses at New Albany, Ind., died at his home near that city, December 25, following an assault by several negroes, with whom he had an altercation, his skull being fractured from the effect of blows with a club. Mr. Foster was on the way to his home, accompanied by his sons, when five assailants, three of whom were since captured, attacked him. He died without regaining consciousness. His wife died a number of years ago and he is survived by three sons and two daughters. Funeral services were held from his late residence December 27, with interment at Fairview cemetery, New Albany.

St. LOUIS, Mo.—Leonard G. Townsend, of the Townsend Floral Co., 4248 Olive street, died December 12, aged 54 years.

I have finished another year, said God,
In grey, green, white and brown.
I've strewed the leaf upon the sod,
Sealed up the worm within the clod,
And let the last sun down.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR to you.

HENRY WARD BEECHER said: "Flowers are the sweetest things God ever made and forgot to put a soul into."

RAMBLER ROSES, within a comparatively few years, have taken an important place in the Easter plant trade and now rank close to the lily in popular favor.

THE two greatest inventions of the human mind are writing and money—the common language of intelligence and the common language of self interest.—Mirabeau.

Vaughan's Gold Medal Gladioli.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York, have been awarded gold medals for each of their displays of the following gladioli at the Panama-Pacific exposition: Rainbow Mixture, Mrs. Francis King, Chicago Salmon and Rose Gouchault, also silver medal for Chicago White.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., offer for registration the cattleya mentioned below. Any person objecting to the use of the proposed name or registration is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Cattleya Percivalliana "Roeblingiana," sepals and petals pure white, lip rose and crimson purple with a broad white border; discovered December, 1915. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

American Sweet Pea Society.

A meeting of the executive committee was held at the Hotel Belmont, New York, December 4, 1915, the following being in attendance: William Gray, W. C. Kerr, Lester L. Morse, A. N. Kirby, A. J. Sperling, Arthur T. Boddington, Harry A. Bunyard and J. Harrison Dick, who was elected to the executive committee to fill the vacancy occurring through the death of W. Atlee Burpee. The following resolution was passed on the death of Mr. Burpee, it being further resolved that a copy of same be sent to the bereaved family, spread upon the minutes of the society and a copy sent to the trade press:

Resolved, that the executive committee of the American Sweet Pea Society at a meeting held in New York, December 4, 1915, speaking for its members, desires to express in this feeble manner its sense of immeasurable loss sustained by the passing away of its most devoted charter member, W. Atlee Burpee. The society has lost its best friend, and the flower we all love so well has lost its most ardent lover. Wherever the sweet pea is grown, it will always be known as an emblem of pure devotion to the memory of our devoted friend.

W. C. KERR,
LESTER L. MORSE,
A. N. KIRBY,
A. J. SPERLING,
J. HARRISON DICK,
A. T. BODDINGTON,
HARRY A. BUNYARD.

A letter was read from the Bar Harbor Horticultural Society, stating that the schedule was being prepared for its 1916 summer exhibition, and it was resolved that in view of the fact that the Bar Harbor exhibition was to be held three weeks later than any date in which growers of New York and vicinity could possibly exhibit, that the society hold an exhibition and convention in New York City, contingent upon a sufficient sum for premiums being assured and a suitable hall for the exhibition secured, the matter to be at the discretion of the exhibition committee. Several members present volunteered premiums should the committee decide upon the exhibition.

"The Sweet Pea Oracle" is the title of a Year book to be issued by the society, J. Harrison Dick, as chairman, W. A. Sperling and Harry A. Bunyard being appointed a committee to take the matter in hand and proceed at once. The book will be sent to members of the society gratis and to others upon receipt of 25 cents. Firms desiring these books in quantities will be supplied with them at cost.

A resolution was passed allowing horticultural societies to become associate members of the American Sweet Pea Society upon the payment of $10 annual dues. Such affiliated societies will have the privilege of receiving and awarding one each of the American Sweet Pea Society's medals, namely: One silver medal and one bronze medal at their local exhibitions; also the privilege of sending one delegate with power to vote at the annual conventions. The secretary was instructed to notify all horticultural societies to this effect.

Lester L. Morse was authorized to hold an exhibition at San Francisco in 1916 under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society. He was given full power to act and Frank G. Cuthbertson was appointed assistant secretary to act at the exhibition. President Gray appointed the following to act as a general committee on exhibitions: W. C. Kerr, William Duckham, J. Harrison Dick, A. N. Kirby and W. A. Sperling.

HARRY A. BUNYARD, Sec'y.

Wire Prices Advanced.

Cleveland, O., December 22.—The Daily Iron Trade says: "Both Birmingham and Ironton foundry pig irons show stronger tendency to rise and scarcity of silvery iron for first quarter makes it sell at premium. American Steel and Wire Company today advances quotations $2 per ton on all wire products except galvanized nails to highest price level since early 1901, showing gain of $12 per ton since year ago. Hundreds of thousands of large steel rounds for delivery in latter part of next year have been placed before American mills by European representatives, while Italy and France both inquire for good tonnage of rails and track fastenings."

CHRISTMAS TRADE VERY GOOD.

The Christmas trade was much better than last year and stock of all kinds cleaned up nicely each day. Prices in general were higher than a year ago especially on carnations which were in short supply and sold quickly at the advertised quotations. There were plenty of roses to go around but there was no great surplus when the stores closed at Christmas noon. Violets were scarce and sold at prices ranging from $1.00 to $2.00 per 100. Sweet peas easily brought $1.50 to $2.00 per 100 with very little stock offered. American Beauty roses were in large supply but sold at good prices, notwithstanding the fact that a large quantity of eastern stock was shipped into this market again which had a tendency to hold down prices on the local grown stock which was of exceptionally fine quality. Many orders were filled for American Beauty roses in the east in almost the immediate vicinity where some of the eastern flowers were shipped from. Gardenias and orchids sold well and were none too plentiful. The shipping trade was very good but the local demand, while fair, was nothing to speak of, but the market in general held firm and taken all in all the Christmas sales in almost every instance exceeded all expectations and were much better than in 1914. Very few gladioli were offered this Christmas, but some very fine stevia and mignonette was seen. Red winter berries and California holly sold well and cleaned up splendidly. The wholesale plantmen had a good holiday trade and sold out completely in all lines many days before Christmas. The supply houses were well satisfied with their Christmas business and were kept on the jump until the last minute filling the late orders that continued to arrive. The out-of-town florists must have enjoyed a brisk Christmas trade and sold out well in all lines for shipping orders were numerous December 27 and the local demand was also fairly good. Stock is in good supply at this writing with the exception of carnations, which are not arriving in any great quantities yet.

The department stores handled a large number of plants at Christmas again this year, principally azaleas, cyclamens, poinsettias and begonias. Azaleas sold for 69c each but no delivery was made and no orders over telephone were recognized. Poinsettias in 5 and 6 inch pots sold for 49 cents retail and cyclamens in 4½, 5 and 6-inch pots at 39 cents. Begonias sold for 49 cents each, but the quality of the stock offered, while good, was not up to that one usually sees in an up-to-date florist's store around the holidays. One dealer says that he had an agreement with one of the large department stores to take all of his surplus, which he was glad to dispose of. The stores sold the plants at less than cost and cleaned up early. Hillman's, The Fair and the Boston store were the heaviest buyers but several others handled a limited supply, which they disposed of early. Marshall Field & Co. handled florists' supplies and sold a large number of made up wreaths of ruscus, red frieze, etc., at ridiculously low prices.

NOTES.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. had a better Christmas trade than last year with the sales running $1,300 ahead of 1914. Sammy Nemerovsky, one of the employes at this house, is confined to St. Mary's Hospital with a severe cut in his right foot which happened while he was chopping up some of the large holly cases during the rush. Mr. Vaughan is seeing that he is receiving the best medical attention possible and from last reports he was doing as nicely as could be expected.

Miss Paradise's brother is quite sick with pneumonia and is reported to be in a serious condition.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. cleaned up completely in all lines for Christmas and are more than pleased with the holiday trade. V. Bezdek is shipping a good supply of fancy sweet peas to this firm of which he is a member and had a fairly good cut for Christmas which easily brought $1.50 and $2 per 100.

THE SIGN OF QUALITY

J. A. Budlong shipped out a box of carnations, December 23, which was addressed wrong and consequently did not reach its intended destination. The shipment landed in one of the western cities and the express messenger instead of wiring that there was no such party there to whom the shipment was addressed mailed a postal instead. Upon receipt of the postal Manager Schupp wired to express the box back, which reached here December 23. Naturally one would think that the shipment would be a total loss but it was not for when the box was unpacked the stock consisting of Enchantress, White Enchantress and Ward carnations was found to be in good condition and the flowers were sold a few minutes later to a local buyer at five cents each. Mr. Schupp thinks that the keeping quality of the stock was unusually fine and while his son Roswell, the packer, admits this he adds that preparing the boxes for shipment had much to do with it.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s Christmas trade in the wholesale cut flower department was much better than last year according to Otto W. Frese and very satisfactory from every standpoint. The supply department had all the orders that it could conveniently handle and the plant department at Morton Grove sold out in Christmas stock at an early hour. John Poehlmann, Sr., is still confined to his home with stomach trouble, but is getting along as nicely as can be expected and will be able to be back at the store again in the near future. John Poehlmann, Jr. is on the job every day at the store and is devoting all of his time to the cut flower department.

Miss O'Neil, who keeps the George Reinberg books has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of her father whose death occurred last week. The funeral was held December 24 and it is needless to add that it was a most unpleasant Christmas for her. Frank Hagen of the Reinberg force has been on the sick list for several days and Manager Northam's eleven-year-old daughter Evelyn has been quarantined with scarlet fever for over a month. Notwithstanding the misfortunes at this house the Christmas trade was splendid and Mr. Reinberg's daughter Clara proved to be of much assistance in the office during the week.

Wieter Bros. never had a better Christmas trade than they did this year and the sales were surprisingly large. In addition to a large quantity of roses and carnations this firm had a tremendous cut of fancy American Beauties which brought very satisfactory prices notwithstanding the large supply of eastern stock that was handled in this market again this year. The shipping trade was heavy and the orders were pretty well distributed throughout the country.

Erne & Klingel experienced the best Christmas trade this year that they ever had and the proprietors are more than pleased with their sales compared to those of 1914. Chas. Erne says that no complaints were heard from their out-of-town customers in regard to the quality of the stock shipped out for the holidays. Judging from the many orders that were received since Sunday it appears as if everyone must have disposed of all the stock that they had to offer for Christmas.

Hoerber Bros. had a splendid cut of roses for the holidays, particularly Killarney, White Killarney, Ophelia and Richmond which were of such good quality that they were sold almost as soon as they were graded. Their Christmas trade in both the city and out-of-town points was very brisk and a clean-up in all lines was experienced.

J. Poulsen, 6951 Western avenue, who has seven houses devoted to carnations is one of the grovers who does not believe in pickling his stock even though he knows there will be a shortage, consequently what stock he did ship to the market for the holidays was strictly fresh and could be used safely in long distance shipping orders.

Michael Fink, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association is having his share of troubles these days, for his wife and daughter are sick in bed and his mother is not expected to live. To cap the climax, his brother John called him up Christmas day and notified him that his father-in-law had just died.

H. Van Gelder, in speaking of the Christmas business at Percy Jones' store, says that the sales were twice as large as last year. He believes that his firm handled more boxwood during Christmas week than any other house in the country and cleaned up almost completely in this line.

The E. C. Amling Co. reports a fine Christmas trade with the sales on Thursday, December 23, the largest in the history of their firm. John Michelsen was well pleased with the demand for violets and sold out all the stock early, there was to offer at unusually good prices.

N. P. Miller, of Miller & Musser, reports that his wife is still on the sick list but is recovering as rapidly as can be expected. The Christmas trade at this house was splendid and the proprietors are well satisfied with the amount of business done.

The John Kruchten Co. cleaned up completely in all lines for Christmas and report a great increase in sales over last year. Gardenias were in unusually brisk demand and no trouble was experienced in moving what stock they had to offer at top-notch prices.

Kyle & Foerster were busy as bees Christmas week and had a large stock of fancy carnations to supply their customers with. The fact that they sold out entirely leads one to believe that their holiday trade was a record breaker.

The Atlas Floral Co. had a dandy Christmas business and sold out almost completely in all lines, thanks to Herbert Stone, the able storeman, who spent a great number of years in several of the leading loop stores.

John Sinner is inclined to believe that Sinner Bros.' splendid location on the main floor of the Atlas building had much to do with their Christmas trade being so very satisfactory.

A. Henderson & Co. are now comfortably located in their new store at 211 North State street, which is a much better location than the old one.

O. A. Tonner sold all the stock that she had to offer for Christmas at an early hour and reports a big increase in the sales over last year.

C. O. Wilcox, of the W. W. Earnard Co., started out on his western trip this week and expects to be away about three months.

The A. L. Randall Co. handled a large quantity of eastern grown American Beauty roses again this year in addition to their regular offerings.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Morrison Hotel, next Thursday, January 6, 1916, at 8 p. m.

Peter Reinberg's Christmas trade exceeded all expectations and was the best in many years according to Felix Reichling, who is in charge at the store. Everything cleaned up nicely at good prices and the cut this year was unusually large, thanks to Emil Reichling who looks after the greenhouses. This firm is cutting a splendid grade of stock now with American Beauty roses in large supply and the demand since the holidays has been remarkably good with no signs of a let up.

Schofield the North State street florist had a very satisfactory Christmas trade and featured a large quantity of azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens and begonias, which cleaned up nicely. He also had several large decorations for Christmas week, the largest order being that of Righheimer's restaurant, which was a very pretty job when completed. Henry Dunn is still on the job at their place and looks after the store while Alderman Bill takes care of the decorations.

H. C. Rowe's store at 125 North Wabash avenue was completely destroyed by fire Wednesday morning, December 29, as was the entire building with an estimated loss of $150,000. Bassett & Washburn occupied the second floor of this building for many years up to the time they moved into their quarters in the new Le Moyné building at Lake street and North Wabash avenue.

Allie Zech says that this year's Christmas trade was the best ever at Zech & Mann's store and that the total sales Thursday, December 23, were the largest in the history of the firm. The sales on Wednesday, December 22, were the next best and that the total sales for the week were surprisingly large.

J. C. Craig had a dandy Christmas business at his store which is one of the oldest stands in the city and reports a brisk demand for azaleas, cyclamens, begonias and poinsettias. Holly wreaths sold fine and quite a number of Boston ferns from the Hillside Greenhouses were disposed of.

Weiland & Risch had a large cut of choice poinsettias for Christmas and supplied all their regular customers as well as many of the wholesalers for the holidays. This firm also had a large supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses for Christmas which cleaned up quickly at good prices.

At Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store the report is that the Christmas trade was fine and that the stock cleaned up completely in all lines before the rush was over. The shipping trade was very heavy and covered a wide stretch of territory.

C. Clemensen, 7801 South Shore avenue used his new Studebaker panel top delivery car to good advantage during the Christmas business which was the best in years and is more than pleased with his selection.

U S E Budlong's

M. C. Gunterberg is well pleased with the Christmas sales and reports a brisk demand for violets which were never so scarce or probably never before sold at such satisfactory prices during the holidays as was the case this year.

Joseph Ziska & Sons report the sale of a pound of statice for Christmas for $4 which is the highest price known and of course, was an exception at this house for the customer insisted upon having it and gladly paid the price.

Bassett & Washburn had a record breaking Christmas trade and cleaned up completely in all lines but it was impossible to anywhere near fill the demand for red roses and carnations. This firm's new red seedling carnation was in heavy demand for the holiday and brought unusually high prices. Mr. Washburn says that trade continues to be brisk and that stock has cleaned up very nicely each day since Christmas.

Paul Klingsporn says that the Chicago Flower Growers' Association had the best Christmas trade in the history of the firm and the sales during December were far ahead of any other month. This firm handled a large quantity of boxwood in addition to its regular line of cut flowers, greens and plants.

Rudolph Kurowski says that the outlook for next year for greenhouse manufacturers is bright, for inquiries are very numerous at present at the John C. Moninger Co.'s office, which is rather unusual at this time, when one does not look for anything exciting in the building line.

Dominick E. Freres had a splendid Christmas trade and reports a good demand for roses, which cleaned up nicely.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Fred, Wiedeman has opened another branch flower shop, his fourth store, in the Swetland building.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The Daisy Decorating Shop, under the management of Honig & Patterson, is the name of a new florist establishment at 306 West Saratoga street.

AUBURN, N. Y.—George Dobbs, senior member of the firm of Dobbs & Son, florists, and one of the best known members of the craft in central New York, died at his home here, December 19.

NORWOOD, PA.—At a meeting of the Norwood Horticultural Society, December 6, the following officers were elected: Dr. John A. Borneman, president; John S. High, vice-president; Dr. H. A. Ickes, secretary; Harry L. Deppen, treasurer.

CHRISTMAS TRADE BEST IN YEARS.

The Christmas trade in this city showed an increase of from 15 to 60 per cent over previous years. Everything cleaned up well, but with cut flowers high in price the demand for plants was especially brisk. Carnations sold at prices varying from $1.50 to $3 per dozen, roses were quoted at from $2 to $10 per dozen, while American Beauties were scarce and long stemmed stock brought as high as $35. The weather was ideal with six inches of snow on the ground and the thermometer registering 15 degrees above zero. Trees did not seem to go as well as in former years and prices were low. In the vacant corners where most of them are sold, there was a surplus to be seen on Sunday. Holly sold well as did lycopodium and boxwood. Poinsettias were easily the favorites in the plant class, followed by cyclamens and azaleas, while a few primroses were also to be seen. Boston ferns also had a large run, one local firm retailing 400 during the week.

NOTES.

Manager W. D. Desmond of the L. S. Donaldson Co. says this was the best Christmas business in the history of the firm. Everything cleaned up, including 3,000 cyclamens from the company's own greenhouses.

C. L. Lindskoog had his store filled with the best of stock the market afforded. He says that business was so much better than other years he is going to take a day off and figure the percentage.

Thomas Lynes had it all to himself in the northeastern section of the city. With his force, he worked all night December 24, in order to make all deliveries on time.

The Eldridge Floral Co.'s store is very attractive since the front has been remodeled. The new electric light over the sidewalk is also a splendid feature.

Hans Rosacker was in full crop with excellent roses for Christmas. He reports that he could have sold twice as many had they been available.

Oscar Amundson had his usual attractive store decorations. He reports a substantial increase in volume of business over previous years.

The Whitted Floral Co. kept three autos running all night to make prompt deliveries of the orders from both stores.

Wessling's Lakewood greenhouses had a heavy call for poinsettias. The quality of the stock was fine and they sold rapidly.

Rice Bros. had to use extra help to get out their orders during the week. Their shipping trade was especially heavy.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. reports a banner year. Their force had to work night and day to keep up with the orders.

Hiawatha Gardens had a fine lot of roses and ferns for the Christmas trade but not enough to fill all orders in full.

O. H. Carlson had the "smile that won't come off" all day Christmas.

Merriam Park Floral Co. cleaned up on cyclamens and poinsettias.

Will Bros. had their usual fine crop of carnations and violets.

S. S. Cargill had a full crop of carnations and Boston ferns. T. C. R.

SHORTAGE OF CHRISTMAS STOCK.

"The best business we ever had," and, "Couldn't be beat," were only two of the many good reports received from local and out-of-town florists. Stock this year for Christmas was perhaps as limited in supply as could be possible, particularly was this true of carnations. Last year the market was in good supply in this staple flower, but this year orders could only be filled in part, and rather a small fractional part at that. Violets cleaned up early and the quality was exceptionally good, special bunches of 100 each being exceedingly fine stock. Lily of the valley was short of the demand, and sweet peas were also very limited in supply, flowers that at this time of the year are always in excellent demand. Cut poinsettias were in good demand as usual, but very limited in supply. American Beauties were in good supply only in the extra long and special stock, and cleaned up on advance orders, while medium and shorter grades were almost an impossibility. Pink and White Killarney were in better supply and sold well, although some showed the effects of the dark, cloudy weather. Red and yellow roses were short in supply and of course cleaned up early. Of stevia there was a plentiful supply, and although it sold well, considerable was left on the counters. Paper White narcissi were in good demand, and cleaned up at good prices. Orchids were exceptionally good quality and sold well. In fact, everything sold well, the supply in all cases falling short of the demand, and there was no stock to speak of carried over. Plants of every description sold well, most retailers having stocked up very liberally, and all report good trade in plants. One feature this Christmas was the clean-up in supplies of all kinds—boxwood, chenille (red), holly, laurel and pine wreathing and static. Paper capes, crepe paper, mats and baskets were sold in larger quantities than any previous year. While cut flowers were limited in supply, the market was pretty well cleaned up, and sales averaged at a rough estimate from 15 to 20 per cent over last year's figures, which, under existing conditions, was a still greater increase in proportion. It was indeed a "Merry Christmas" and the outlook for a "Happy New Year" is the best ever. C. F. B.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.—Charles A. Ludwig, one of the oldest and best known florists in this section, and who conducted a flower shop in this city for more than 40 years, died at his home here, December 17, at the age of 75 years.

CHRISTMAS SALES SHOW BIG INCREASE.

With splendid weather and excellent stocks of both plants and cut flowers in good supply, this year's Christmas business shows a nice gain in volume over that of a year ago. Plants, especially those of medium price, were in great demand, and several social functions caused an extra heavy call for cut flowers and corsages. Roses were favorites in the cut flower class, especially Russell, there being few American Beauties sold owing to high prices. Christmas greens and wreaths were very popular and several shipments of the miniature auto wreaths were easily disposed of. Poinsettias and cyclamens were most in demand in the plant section, although azaleas had a fairly good call. Jerusalem cherries, hyacinths, narcissi and Scotch heather plants also sold well.

NOTES.

The big downtown store of the Flick Floral Co. was thronged during the days preceding Christmas. The display of pot plants and basket arrangements here was especially attractive and the demand was enormous. The call for cut flowers was heavier than ever before and smaller flowers for corsages were much in demand.

Over 1,000 orchids were shipped to various markets from the greenhouses of W. J. & M. S. Vesey. They also had a record rose crop in Shawyer, Sunburst and Richmond. Their retail trade was very brisk and many handsome pot plants were disposed of.

The Doswell Floral Co. reports excellent business at both stores. This firm had a very heavy demand for plants and disposed of cyclamens and begonias by the hundred.

Some handsome Mrs. Chas. Russell roses which appeared in this market during Christmas week came from the greenhouses of Frank Knecht & Co., of this city.

A. J. Lanternier reports a record Christmas business, with pot plant sales in the ascendancy.

BIG INCREASE OVER 1914 TRADE.

The local trade in general enjoyed the best Christmas trade in history, and the demand for plants was especially noticeable, a feature somewhat different from former years, quality stock meeting with ready sale, while the cheaper lines moved rather slowly. Cut flowers were more plentiful than was expected and the quality was excellent and while prices were high there was not enough of this stock to meet requirements. There was also a shortage of Christmas trees several large shipments failing to reach the city in time. A heavy fall of snow, accompanied by falling temperature, came the night before Christmas, hindering delivery somewhat, but practically everything went off in first-class shape.

NOTES.

T. J. Noll & Co. report the trade the best they ever had, both local and shipping keeping the force at work day and night. The report at the close of business was, "Stock all sold out, and the help 'all in.'" Extra fine roses, carnations, lily of the valley, violets, stevia and chrysanthemums were features at this establishment.

Samuel Murray was right on the spot as usual with splendid basket arrangements of the kind of stock they call "quality" and finished to perfection the "Murray way" as usual. These met with a rapid fire demand and his splendid showing of pot plants in variety sold exceedingly well.

W. J. Barnes was agreeably surprised when he estimated the increase in his sales over the Christmas season of 1914. Practically everything in his stock cleaned up. He sold a world of Lorraine begonias and cyclamens and his supply of azaleas was far short of the call.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. sold out completely. The demand for plants was very heavy and stock of the better quality moved out fast. A good demand for funeral work is also reported.

H. Kusik & Co. report the biggest business ever, with the shipping trade twice as heavy as a year ago. Stock was higher in price but the quality was far above the average.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had an especially good demand and a sell-out resulted. There has also been a good amount of funeral work.

Miss J. E. Murray reports it was surprising how stock sold, and she is well pleased with the result of the Christmas business. She has also been kept busy with funeral work.

A. Newell says everybody must have had the "shop early" spirit. Trade was much better than he expected and he was sold out of plants and cut flower stock completely.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports a big increase over last year's Christmas business. Cut flowers sold well, but there was a very heavy demand for pot plants of the better grade.

A. F. Barbee was well satisfied with the way business went at his establishment. Pot plants sold well and his cut of 2,000 carnations helped out wonderfully.

Chas. Beiderman & Son say they never remember of having such a trade before. Plants and cut flowers both sold well.

The Rosery had a surprising trade in the number of pot plants, novelties and cut flowers, plants taking the lead.

Mrs. T. A. Mosely says the Christmas trade was beyond her expectations. Her stock cleaned up well.

Ed. Humfeld made a feature of plants and cleaned up early as a result.

CHRISTMAS STOCKS BRING TOP PRICES.

The Christmas business in Boston this season was the best we have had for some years. Every line of flowers found a good market at top notch prices and the retail trade reports an exceptionally heavy demand. There was not a very heavy supply of flowers, as most growers were off crop. Roses were in the best crop of any line, but growers sold out completely at Christmas prices. Carnations were scarce, and sold readily at from $6 to $15 per 100. Violets also were in heavy demand and brought from $1.50 to $2 per 100. A few chrysanthemums were seen, but the average was of very poor quality and although they cleaned up nicely, the price was nothing special. Lily of the valley sold readily at $4 and $5 per 100. The prices on bulbous stock reached abnormal figures. French trumpets were sold for $8 per 100 in some cases and Paper White narcissi brought $4 per 100. Plant growers cleaned out their stock at very satisfactory figures. On Monday, December 27, the market was rather bare of flowers and prices on most lines held up to the holiday figures. The outlook for the next few months is very good as the trade is steadily increasing, and there are no signs as yet of any extra heavy crops.

NOTES.

The heavy wind and snowstorm that swept New England, December 26, caused much damage among the greenhouse men. The heaviest damage reported as yet took place at the establishment of Paul Brigham, at Westboro, the place formerly run by L. C. Midgley. The ventilators blew out and in all between 700 and 800 lights of glass. The Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., also lost quite a number of lights, but these were quickly replaced and caused no damage to their stock. Robt. Montgomery, of Natick, lost the chimney off his dwelling house, but the greenhouses stood the gale fairly well. J. K. Chandler & Son, of Tewkesbury, had the purloins slip off the split tees on one of the houses and narrowly escaped losing one house. A similar occurrence happened at Jas. Wheeler's house at Natick, and it was only by using temporary ropes and wire twisters that the house stood the gale. Nearly every grower lost a few lights of glass.

The Boston Rose Co. had an extra fine crop for their Christmas trade; they had about 2,000 American Beauties from Paul Pierson and a heavy crop from the Montgomery Bros., among which were some exceptionally fine Hadley and Russells.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, are cutting a good supply of French trumpets and Paper White narcissi. They had a nice crop for the holiday trade and cleaned out their entire out.

Wm. Riggs, of Auburndale, reports a rushing Christmas business, both at his greenhouse and store. He is shipping some very fine freesias to the Boston Flower Exchange.

James Delay, who recently retired from business in Dorchester, is now employed at Penn's Bromfield street store.

EXCELLENT CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

A local cartoonist portrays "Santa Claus," reposing in deep slumber, his empty pack hangs from the bed-post, his fur-lined coat, boots and gloves are variously distributed about the room, just as a very tired man is apt to distribute his clothes on retiring. "All In" is the title the clever cartoonist has given to the picture, and it is appropriate. It has been a great Christmas celebration, but it is "all in." There may be sounds of revelry by night, but they do not penetrate the precinct of the wholesale cut flower district, where our "den" is located. The wholesalers and their assistants have gone and so have the flowers. Without making extravagant claims, it can be stated that business was excellent, and so far as we can learn, gave general satisfaction. A number, both wholesalers and retailers, have stated that business was better than they expected it to be. There are people who, when confronted with figures showing great increase in wealth, are prone to ask that disagreeable question: "Who has it?" It is not within our scope to furnish an answer or an analysis, but to state facts as we see them. The weather of the week ending with Christmas day was fine throughout, which was favorable alike to all concerned in the business, as well as to the public. The continued bad weather of the previous week had caused some anxiety relative to an adequate supply of stock, which was happily dispelled. While there was no surplus, there was enough to supply the demand. If any stock was left over, it was on account of a miscalculation on the part of the dealer in fixing too high a price. Prices were high and were expected to be, but there was a limit, beyond which some of the buyers would not go. Red roses and red carnations, particularly the latter, were the scarcest in quantities. Red roses, depending on variety, wholesaled at the rate of $40 to $75 per 100, red carnations at from $12 to $15 per 100. Special roses such as Ward, Stanley and Ophelia, brought from $20 to $25 per 100. American Beauties brought $100 per 100 and more was asked but we believe that but few went above that figure. There were American Beauties on the market of inferior quality that went at lower prices. It may be added that on Christmas eve, the stock of red carnations was completely sold out. White carnations brought, if good, $6 per 100. Enchantress, $8; Ward and fancies, $8 and $10. These are conservative quotations for fresh stock; there were carnations that sold for $4 per 100. Good single violets were not plentiful and went readily at $1.50 per 100 and upward. Some dealers started double violets at $1.50 and $1.75 per 100, but the demand was not sufficient to warrant those figures and prices dropped to $1 and $1.25 and even lower, as violets were being sold on the streets on Christmas day. Good cattleya orchids brought $60 and $75 per 100 at the start, ranging down to $30 and $35 for small and inferior blooms. In the whole range of prices, considering how they sold a short time ago, orchids were about the cheapest things on the market. There was an abundance of lilies and lily of the valley, and considering the complaints that came out early in the fall about a scarcity of Paper White bulbs, there was a considerable stock of it on the market. The price was $2.75 per 100 and upward. Lilies brought about $10 per 100; lily of the valley, $4 to $5. Gardenias, as they have been throughout the fall, were rather scarce and brought $5 and $6 per dozen. Good cut pansies are factors in this market and brought $2 per 100. Of poinsettias, there was a considerable stock, but there seems to be room for an inventor to devise some means for getting them to market in more presentable shape. They ranged from $2 to $4 per dozen. Buying in the wholesale district became really active on the morning of December 24, and continued throughout the day and night, buyers from all the big retail stores and many of the smaller ones, being seen in the street after midnight, as all the wholesale stores were open. By Christmas morning there was little of anything that was good left in the wholesale district. As will be elsewhere noted, the retail stores were well stocked with plants and had fine business. Though many of them had good business in cut flowers, it was but natural that they should push plants while they lasted. A number of retailers were completely sold out of plants before the evening of December 24, and could get no relief by telephoning to the growers as they were in the same boat. Some retailers were helped out by neighbors in the business and it is pleasing to note that in this great city being neighborly is not one of the lost arts.

December 27.—While buying was rather light today, so were arrivals of stock. Prices were firm, but it is difficult to forecast conditions for the remainder of the week. There is a scarcity of short roses, for these are what 75 per cent of the buyers want. It is no secret that some of the wholesalers were "stuck" with special or long stemmed roses. The plain people, whom God loves, because he made so many of them, could not buy roses at 20 and 25 cents per flower. The outlook for the remainder of the week is uncertain. If one may judge by former years, at the corresponding period, business will be dull.

NOTES.

A man who is now out of the business (perhaps this is one of the reasons he got out) once told the writer that he did not consider it news that a man sold good stock. Well, it should be to a man who wants to buy. It would be impossible to mention all the good stock seen during Christmas week, but some of it is here recalled. Traendly & Schenck, 436 Fifth avenue, were particularly strong on such roses as Alice Stanley, Ward, Ophelia, Sunburst and others. They also had a fine stock of orchids. In the Coogan building, Sixth avenue and 26th street, much good stock was noticed. Paul Meconi, who has a store on the ground floor, had a fine stock of roses, orchids, carnations and other flowers and sold out well.

sonable decorations were noteworthy in the large hotels. Of these, the work at the Knickerbocker, Broadway and 42d street, deserves special mention. F. F. Salinger is the clever florist at this hotel, and his work was much admired.

William P. Ford, 107 West 28th street, had a very fine stock of red roses. In sweet peas, bouvardias and various other features, he came out strong and had a fine business.

Peter Beauerlin, of Elmhurst, L. I., a well known grower, had the misfortune December 24, to have a fire in his range, which destroyed two houses, filled with valuable stock.

In addition to a great sale of plants, M. A. Bowe, 6 East 33d street, had a fine business in cut flowers. He has also recently been filling large orders for funeral work.

In the New York Cut Flower Company's rooms, Moore, Hentz & Nash were well supplied with American Beauties and other good roses.

A. A. ARNOLD PAPER BOX CO., 1302-1308 W. Division Street, CHICAGO

H. E. Froment, 148 West 28th street, had his usual fine stock of roses and good business. To show that his roses were in demand, it may be stated that long after the wholesale stores closed on Christmas day, a buyer was inquiring of a man on the street, where Froment lived. He was told that as Mr. Froment was a sedate bachelor, he would probably be found at dinner at the home of his sister.

In Thumm's alleys, on the night of December 23, there was bowling by members of the club team for a turkey, generously donated by C. W. Scott. Joseph S. Fenrich, a truthful wholesaler, said he won the turkey but was disqualified on a foul, or the fowl. The matter being too complicated for our understanding, it is enough to state that Peter Jacobson got the turkey and took it home with him.

One of the humors of the trade is the annual turkey raffle held in the Cut Flower Exchange for the benefit of the elevator boys. This year the turkey was won by one of Phil Kessler's salesmen. It was sent out to a restaurant and cooked and taken back to give all the boys a bite.

Guttman & Raynor, Inc., 101 West 28th street, had a fine general stock, including—if the solons of the New York Florists' Club will excuse us—the rose Prima Donna, but if that doesn't please them, a rose smells as sweet by any other name.

In handling the stock from the ranges of F. R. and P. M. Pierson, the Cottage Gardens and Adolph Farenwald, Joseph A. Millang of the Coogan building, had many fine roses and carnations which were sought by the buyers.

Walter T. Lee, formerly with W. S. Lee, has accepted the position of manager for M. L. Vlachos, the Astoria florist, 2188 Broadway, at 77th street. Mr. Lee is a clever and capable young man.

Retta E. Rankin, manager of the House of Ferns, 41 West 28th street, stated that they had excellent business. This house had a fine stock of Asparagus plumosus nanus.

At the retail store of Geo. Hanges, 546 Columbus avenue, fine Christmas combinations and decorations were noted. John Manolos is the clever manager of this store.

One of the busiest buyers in the wholesale district on Christmas eve was John G. Phillips, of Brooklyn. He now has two stores and was kept busy supplying them.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, of which Percy W. Richter is manager, handled good stock and had satisfactory business.

Fred Stewig, 940 Sixth avenue, had a fine lot of Christmas plants and sold out well. He has recently been very busy with funeral work.

William Kessler, 113 West 28th street, in addition to a nice stock of cut flowers, had a stock of fine plants and sold them all.

Badgley & Bishop, Inc., 34 West 28th street, in addition to much other fine stock, had a good supply of gardenias which went fast.

George C. Siebrecht, 109 West 28th street, had a good supply of stock, orchids, lilies and lily of the valley being noteworthy.

W. R. Siebrecht, Inc., 114 West 28th street, had a fine stock of gardenias and orchids and sold out well.

Frank Lorraine, the Hotel Seville florist, stated that his business was much better than he expected.

The Seed Trade

SINGLE asters are coming into favor and dealers now offer them in white, pink, scarlet and mauve.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 29, were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $8.00 per 100 pounds.

THE 1916 catalogues received this week include those of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

PETER HENDERSON & Co., New York, are entering upon their seventieth year, the business having been started by the late Peter Henderson, in 1847.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—John C. Bodger, of John Bodger & Sons Co., does not expect to make an eastern trip this season on account of illness in his family.

THE nomenclature committees of the American Seed Trade Association and the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, held a meeting at Columbus, O., December 30, with a view to regulating the names of vegetables.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Fred H. Hunter, of the Hunter Seed Co., and wife have been called to Spokane, Wash., by the illness of Mr. Hunter's mother. Mr. Hunter, who only recently recovered from an attack of pneumonia, expects to call on the eastern trade in January.

THE Christmas greens industry at Chicago closed with a general clean-up. This market never saw a December 24 with the dealers so empty-handed of bouquet green and holly. Jobbers were obliged to turn down considerable out of town business the last three days.

VISITED CHICAGO.—A. E. McKenzie and family, of Brandon, Man., were here for the Christmas holidays. Mrs. M. W. Johansen, of the Victor Johansen Seed Co., Los Angeles, Calif.; J. B. Deamud, of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York; L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif.

LOUIS VILMORIN, of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, who is now in military service, on a Christmas card sent to a friend in the United States, December 15, says: "I'm in good shape and condition and as fit as a rabbit. Hope this war is going to last, as it is giving us a most fascinating time."

TRAVELING conditions in France for foreigners are much more stringent than a year ago, so reports C. M. Jackman, of Vaughan's Seed Store, in a letter from Paris dated December 8, and adds: "I have been five times to the police station this week and it is quite a waste of time. I must personally notify the authorities of my presence in each city and can not leave without a 'sanf conduit' from the chief of police of each city."

GERMAN catalogues coming to hand show the prices in American dollars and cents instead of the time-honored English terms, pounds, shillings and pence. A German ascribes the change to patriotism while an Englishman says it is prompted by the condition of the money market.

OWING to a shortage of planting offsets for the past two seasons the tuberose crop has been reduced over 60 per cent. There will be no more than needed for the American, English, Italian and Dutch demand. Steamer storage is scarce for export. Prices are 10 per cent higher. The caladium and canna supply is about normal.

Cental System.

H. A. Johns, president, and Mel L. Webster, secretary of the Western Seedsmen's Association, in a recent communication to the members, say: "D. M. Ferry & Co. are sending out letters to many of the seedsmen announcing the fact that they, D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa., and the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., have adopted the cental system and will quote beans, peas and sweet corn by the pound in their 1916 catalogues, urging all other seedsmen of America to do likewise. The members of the Western Seedsmen's Association have been leaders in this thought and it is gratifying to see such important houses taking the initiative to induce eastern seedsmen join in this reform. They further recommend that a table showing the number of pounds to the bushel should be sent out with the catalogue. The president of our association takes exception to this, and advised Kirby B. White, spokesman of the above firms, the sooner we can forget there ever was a bushel the better it will be for all concerned; simply remembering that it takes 16 ounces to make a pound. We hope every member of our association will continue to promote the cental system for all commodities."

Foreign Potato Quarantine Removed.

The federal quarantine against shipments from foreign countries of Irish potatoes affected with powdery scab is removed by an order of the department of agriculture, effective January 1, 1916. This permits a number of potato-producing countries to resume shipment of potatoes to the United States. In the case of Canada, the new order in addition to removing the quarantine provides that potatoes may be shipped in without certification by Canadian officials, under an arrangement with the Canadian Minister of Agriculture that Canada will offer for export to the United States only potatoes free from injurious diseases and insect pests. Although this quarantine is removed, the regulations governing the entry of potatoes and providing for inspection at ports of entry are continued in force. These regulations provide for an adequate field inspection by recognized experts in the countries where shipments originate. The quarantine against certain countries on account of the potato wart disease, promulgated September 12, 1912, remains in full force and effect. Special regulations covering the export of potatoes from the States of Chihuahua and Sonora, Mexico, and from the Island of Santo Domingo, provide that shipments will be permitted entry only through certain designated ports in the United States.

Seed Peas in Washington.

It is known in the trade that garden peas have been grown to some extent in the state of Washington for seed, and one who has been over the ground writes as follows regarding the industry there:

"In my judgment the southeastern part of Spokane county, or all of that portion that is favored with typical palouse soil, and the eastern two-thirds of Whitman county, is splendidly adapted for the growing of seed peas. Theoretically, I should expect that portion of Walla Walla, Columbia and Garfield counties, lying between the 18-inch rainfall line, and the upper edge of the tillable lands, to be equally well adapted for growing seed peas, but for some reason the growing of seed peas has not been taken hold of as much in that section as in Whitman and Spokane counties.

"Field peas also seem to do well in all parts of western Washington, and I believe would make a profitable crop on nearly all of the better soils except those that are poorly drained. This would include practically all of the well drained river bottom lands in western Washington and all of the uplands where the soil would class as loam or heavier.

"At present the chief seed pea center in eastern Washington is at Fairfield, about 2000 acres of seed peas having been grown in that vicinity on contract with eastern seedsmen. Inness thus far seems to have been confined to a region which might be said to center at Bellingham, the pea growers being scattered about Whatcom, Skagit and San Juan counties.

"The business of growing peas for seed has not, in my judgment, been developed anywhere nearly to the extent that is justified by the results secured in the regions mentioned."

Free Seeds.

Walt Mason devotes one of his effusions to free seeds. He says: "Our congressmen should make an effort to get wise to what we're really wanting. I'd like to have a chug-chug cart to ease my corns and bunions, and oh! it breaks my world worn heart to get a pack of onions! I'd like to see my daughters wear swell lds and silken dresses, and here I get, to my despair, some wilted watercresses. Our congressman, who sheds his blood when perils brood and trouble, has got a head piece full of mud—he ought to take a tumble."

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, December 28.—Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 25 to 30 cents per carton; lettuce, cases 30 cents; radishes, 30 cents to 40 cents per dozen bunches; celery, 10 to 20 cents per bunch; tomatoes, six baskets, $3.00 to $4.25; cucumbers, dozen, $1.25 to $1.50.

New York, December 28.—Celery, per bunch of 12 stalks, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.25 to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 30 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $3.00; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to $1.00.

Soil Tests at Ohio State University.

Recently there were carried out some interesting fertility tests in the new greenhouses of Ohio State University. It has long been an established fact that most of the loose, black soils found in this vicinity are inferior for lettuce growing under glass. These tests were made to determine the relative value of the black soil types as compared with the common gray clay-loam type. Accordingly the black soil was obtained from a corn-field that has produced good crops of corn; while the loam was taken from an old orchard which has never had manure nor fertilizer, but plenty of cover crops plowed under. The black soil used was soft, loose and intensely black, while the loam was quite sandy and inclined to be stiff, owing to lack of humus. The plots were alternated side by side and checks provided; and the main fertilizing elements were used singly to determine if any one element would complete the black soils. Finally, a coat of decayed cow manure was spaded under a section of both black and gray, to determine the effect of manure as compared with fertilizers. The fertilizers used were: Acid phosphate, bone meal, muriate potash, lime, nitrate soda, and a complete mixture of bone, tankage and ashes. The result was a remarkable demonstration of the value of manure, as both types of soil produced a fine commercial lettuce with manure alone, while manure and complete fertilizer produced the best plot on the loam; second best on the black soil. Nitrate of soda alone on the loam produced fine lettuce and nitrate of soda alone on the black soil produced only fair lettuce. Neither bone meal, acid phosphate, lime nor potash produced a marketable lettuce on the black soil. This result is exactly in line with commercial results elsewhere in this locality. The value of manure is again strongly emphasized. These trials will be repeated in the near future to determine if complete mixtures of fertilizers can be made to do the work of manure, and also to determine the best amount of fertilizers. MARKETMAN.

Potato Varieties.

With the close of the potato harvest season for 1915 the time seems opportune to call to the attention of both the grower and the seedsman the desirability of considering seriously a very material reduction in the number of varieties grown in any given community or section of the country.

In a recent publication by the United States department of agriculture, Bulletin No. 176, a system of classification of potatoes is presented in which the leading commercial types are referred to 11 groups, and a list of the varieties studied which are thought to belong to each group is furnished. In many cases the varieties listed in each group are so nearly identical that in the opinion of the author of this bulletin there is no justification for the retention of more than 10 per cent of them. The commercial grower should determine what group or class of potatoes is best adapted to his climatic and soil conditions, and then confine his efforts to not more than one or two varieties within that group.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President;
John Watson, Newark, N. Y., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—The board of park commissioners has appointed Chas. Goodwin, florist, superintendent of Krug park.

NURSERY, MO.—Thieves who robbed the postoffice here December 13, also ransacked the office of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The Keystone State Nurseries have been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000. The incorporators are M. L. Sweeney, J. M., F. R., and D. G. George.

It is estimated that $1,000,000 worth of trees have been cut in the Adirondacks for the Christmas trade. Lumbermen say the cutting of the small trees will benefit standing timber.

AUGUSTA, GA.—Stulbs' Nursery has opened an up-town office in the business section, where a stock of cut flowers and plants will be handled. The new shop is in charge of Miss Josie Stark.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Henry Mehl, landscape architect, and formerly head gardener at the Louisiana Purchase exposition, has purchased 4,000 acres of land in Marion county, Miss., and will immediately proceed to cultivate fruit, pecans and grapes.

American Association of Nurserymen.

The forty-first annual convention of the above association will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 28-30, 1916. The Hotel Wisconsin has been chosen as convention headquarters and T. J. Ferguson, Wauwatosa, Wis., is the local representative of the association in charge of arrangements, entertainments, etc. Secretary John Hall, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y., will promptly answer all questions asked of him. It is the hope of the executive committee that every reputable nurseryman in the United States shall catch the spirit of co-operation and seek membership in the association.

Franklin Newhall, Apple King, Dead.

Glencoe, Ill.—Franklin Newhall, of Glencoe, 92 years old, died December 21. He had insisted he expected to live to be at least 100 years old. Mr. Newhall was known as the "apple king," as he owned extensive orchards about Glencoe, and 6,000 acres of cherry and apple orchards on Manitou Island, Michigan. His estate is estimated at over $750,000. Last winter his eldest son, Simeon Frank Newhall, petitioned the courts for a conservator for the estate of his father, averring that his parent was not mentally competent to handle it. The other two sons sided with their father. At the trial the judge was surprised at the alert mind and memory displayed by the aged man and the petition was denied. Mr. Newhall was born at Conway, Mass., Sept. 28, 1823.

Fighting Moths With Parasites.

Over 12,000,000 specimens of two parasites which prey on the gipsy moth and brown-tail moth were released in 201 towns in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island during the fall of 1914 and spring of 1915, according to the annual report of the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture. As a result of the successful establishment of colonies of these and other parasites which feed on the gipsy and brown-tail moths, marked progress is being made in reducing these pests. Effective co-operation is being afforded by the states which carry on as much work as possible within the infested areas, thus allowing the federal authorities to carry on field work along the outer border of infestation, so as to retard the gipsy moth's spread.

As a result of scouting work carried on by the entomologists in 223 towns in New England, the gipsy moth was found in four towns in Maine, 23 in New Hampshire, three in Vermont, 10 in Massachusetts, and 10 in Connecticut, making a total of 50 towns where the insect has not been previously reported. This scouting consists in an examination of all roadsides, residential sections, orchards and woodlands. Where colonies are found the egg clusters are treated with creosote and the trees are banded with tree tanglefoot and sprayed with arsenate of lead.

The spread of the brown-tail moth during the past year has been considerable, the indications being that this pest has not infested any territory other than that already reported. In co-operation with the United States lighthouse service, the work of collecting moths at night along the coast of Connecticut and Long Island has been continued. Other activities of the bureau in relation to the gipsy moth include the inspection of forest products, nursery stock, and stone and quarry products shipped from gipsy-moth territory, as well as extended investigations along other lines.

The Greatest Handicap.

American Florist Co.,
Chicago,
Gentlemen:—The greatest handicap I know of is for a Nurseryman or Florist to try to do business without the American Florist Co.'s Trade Directory. I haven't one. Send me a copy.

Yours truly,
JOHN WATSON.

THE NEW ROSE

MRS. BAYARD THAYER

that we are offering this season, will make a fine addition to a class of large flowered roses which is rapidly coming to the front, since we introduced Mrs. Chas. Russell of which the new claimant is a sport. The color is a most beautiful clear rose pink, inside of petals a shade lighter. The foliage heavy and smooth and carried on strong stems. It won the American Rose Society Medal, over a strong class of competitors, at the Cleveland Show, scoring 90 points.

SPLENDID CHRISTMAS DEMAND.

Christmas trade was very satisfactory indeed—the store people say that everything went out much better than was expected. The “shopping early” movement, so much advocated by newspapers, seemed to have an effect on flower buyers, with the result that orders were placed earlier for this Christmas than has ever been known before, all of which made the holiday task for the florists easier than has been the rule hitherto. Cut flowers and arranged baskets of flowers were easily the best sellers. The prices for cut stock did not vary materially from the prices of other years. Tea roses sold at from $3 to $6 per dozen, the red ones only bringing the higher mentioned figure. American Beauties ranged from $15 to $24 per dozen, and there was quite a good demand for this variety. Pink and white carnations brought $2 per dozen; red carnations, $3 per dozen; violets brought from $1 to $5 per bunch according to the manner in which they were arranged. There was a full supply of everything needed in flowers and, kept-over stock was conspicuous by its absence. In plants, the $1.50 and $2.50 sizes were the most popular; anything more expensive than that sold very slowly. The best selling plant was the little Pedrick azalea; next to these was Begonia Cincinnati. Where this variety was available, the old Lorraine type could scarcely be moved. Cyclamens sold fairly well, as also did primulas of the obconica type. Basket arrangements of mixed plants also sold very well. The weather was all that could be desired for easy delivery. On the day before Christmas the morning started in very stormy, with wind and rain, and it looked as though the florists were going to have an unfavorable day for their deliveries; fortunately, however, before 10 a. m. the wind and rain ceased and the sun came out, and from then the weather was fine and balmy, much to the delight of the trade. So far as florists are concerned, the trade in evergreens was very slim. As has been experienced in other cities, this trade is getting more and more into the hands of grocers, hucksters and peddlers; these people, with their smaller expenses, can handle this material at a smaller cost to the final customer than can the florist, consequently they get the bulk of that kind of business. It is a fact, however, that more evergreen was used in this city than ever before. S. S. B.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—At the annual meeting of the Holyoke & Northampton Florists' & Gardeners' Club, December 14, the following officers were elected: Aubrey Butler, Northampton, president; Geo. Strugnell, vice-president; James Whiting, Amherst, secretary-treasurer.

CHRISTMAS SALES PHENOMENAL.

The holiday trade in this city proved eminently satisfactory, the business being really phenomenal both as to quality, quantity and demand. The weather was all that could be desired, and a great improvement over the blizzard of last year. Although threatening, Jupiter Pluvius was most kind, and withheld his downpour until a late hour on the evening of December 24. On Christmas morning it tried to snow, but only succeeded in a little flurry that did not greatly interfere with the business, and only a few scattering flakes succeeded in falling. Delivery was good, and the temperature not such as to hurt the plants, of which there were wagon loads being delivered. There was a tremendous trade in Christmas trees and quantities of holly were taken home in large and small bunches. A fine trade in wholesale was had by some of the florists. American Beauties were none too abundant and easily brought $12 a dozen. Richmond roses commanded $4 and poinsettias sold for $4. There were violets, lily of the valley, orchids, carnations in abundance, and roses of all kinds. Pot plants in narcissi, hyacinths, begonias, poinsettias, azaleas, primulas, and other plants were in great profusion and met with ready sale. All the florists say that prices were much better than last year, and the supply even better. The florists' windows were things of beauty and each one vied with the other as to the variety and artistic merit of the display.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Company, brought in a most magnificent stock, and had unprecedented sales. They did a large shipping business to many southern cities by wholesale. Their windows were decorated with poinsettias, one window containing a vase with hundreds of blossoms, with stems two to six feet in length. They had a large supply of American Beauty roses and sold them all; in fact, they had a full clean up and their business was something over that of last year.

The McIntyre Bros., ever in the forefront, had a most gorgeous display at their store, in the greenhouse adjoining, and in the pergola above. Their place was thronged throughout the day, and they had a good clean up. In fact, the season's business was altogether satisfactory and the entire floral fraternity met the occasion with a broad grin of contentment.

Geny Brothers had a lively window with a fringe of pot hyacinths packed with a great variety of poinsettias, azaleas and narcissi. They had to double their force in the store and each one was kept busy waiting on the trade. They had fine American Beauties, plenty of violets and a splendid supply of all kinds of stock and sold out.

The Christmas savings accounts enabled the banks to turn loose something like half a million dollars and all merchants were benefited by it and the florist had his share.

Haury & Sons had a fine supply of flowers, both cut flowers and plants, and had a fine trade.

The End.

Alexander MacLellan, the well known horticulturist of Newport, R. I., considers John Masefield's lines entitled, "The End," in our last issue of the old year rather dismal and submits the following:

If death be obliteration
Of mankind quitting this sphere
Why bother about temptation?
Just enjoy yourselves while here.
If mem'ry be all that's to it
As life goes—goes the mem'ry too
With never a thought of Spirit
When death's portals we pass through.
Friends to keep—but brief remembrance
Much of that mixed up with pain.
Books are of greater endurance
A mem'ry may longer retain,
If life has no better ending,
After years by discord torn,
With nothing better portending
It were better, had we never been born.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Fuchsias.

It is a good time now to start the old stock plants of fuchsias, for there is plenty of room in the propagating bench and it is the early struck cuttings that make the fine plants for vases and boxes, and if cuttings are taken in spring they immediately produce a flower and it is difficult to get a good growth, the plant often remaining short with a stunted appearance yet bearing flowers. If the old plants have been thoroughly ripened, shake the soil off and pot in a good new loam, cut back the wood and place them in a warm house and syringe plentifully. The young growths will shortly appear and should be made into cuttings as soon as they have attained a length of an inch and a half or two inches. As soon as rooted pot in 2-inch pots and give the young stock a warm temperature. When growth commences the top can be taken off and another cutting made, and the plants shifted to 3-inch pots. Another stopping will be necessary in late winter to make nice, bushy plants that will be full of bloom in early spring. Keep them clean from mealy bug by constant spraying.

Lilies.

The lilies for Easter should be brought into warm temperature right after the first of the year. A house of 60° at night should bring them into perfect condition for Easter when it occurs at the time it does this year. Those that are in 4-inch pots should be potted in 6-inch, and we have found the best way to do this was to first place a crock in the bottom of the pot and cover with about an inch of soil, then place the 4-inch plant on this, filling in around the stem above the old ball. The lily always throws out roots at the base of the stem when the buds form, and if potted in this manner these roots will be in soil and materially aid the plant in perfecting the bloom. With these roots covered with soil the plant also makes a much better appearance. The soil in which they are potted should be a rich compost of about the same composition as is used in rose culture, and the plant should be firmly potted and well watered and placed in good light location where the plants will not get drawn. A plant 18 to 24 inches high when in bloom with the foliage thickly studded along the stem is the one most desired at Easter. Keep the aphids down all the time by constant fumigation. These little insects are the worst plague to the lily grower, for if they once get established on lilies they are very difficult to dislodge, so it is much better to give the plants a fumigation every week and thus guard against them than to wait until their presence is manifest and try to kill them. This is one of the most pronounced cases where "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Rambler Roses.

Of all the exhibits made at the flower show in Boston a year ago last spring, the Rambler roses attracted the most attention. The varieties of these beautiful plants have increased rapidly and they can now be had in all the shades of red and pink and also white. The single varieties have also been greatly improved and many of these make most beautiful plants. Every grower should have a few of these for Easter, and even if they do not sell they can be grown on for next year when a finer and larger plant will be had and the wood grown this year can be propagated and if planted outside will make nice plants. Plants grown in the field and lifted this fall will have to be started the first of the year to have them in bloom for Easter; pot-grown plants can be started two weeks later. They should be firmly potted in good rose soil, and placed in a cool house, one not running higher than 45° at night, and syringed often to soften the wood. Before the eyes start into growth the plants should be tied out into the shape they are to be grown. These plants can by a little ingenuity and care be trained into any shape desired.

Many fancy as well as grotesque forms are now seen every year. To the inexperienced the round spreading plant should be the first attempted. Five or six stakes at the edge of the pot with the stems wound around and two or three arching over the center is the simplest form. Experienced growers have them in the shape of umbrellas, large balls, ships, and any form they desire. When the growths have got well started the plants should be moved into a temperature of 55° at night, and the syringing on bright days should be kept up to prevent insects from getting a foothold. By the middle of March the flowers should begin to show color and if they do not a little warmer temperature will be required to have them well in bloom for the first week in April. A regular rose temperature of 60° at night will be necessary, but the flowers are not of as good color nor do they last as well if they are unduly forced. A fine assortment of these includes Crimson Rambler, Philadelphia Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, White Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Lady Gay, Hiawatha and American Pillar, and in the Baby Ramblers, Crimson Baby, Jessie, Phyllis or Orleans.

Geraniums.

After the holiday trade there will be room enough to space out the geraniums and other bedding stock. The cuttings that were placed in flats, and the young stock in 2-inch pots, should be shifted to the 3-inch size and spaced on the benches so that a good growth is encouraged. As soon as well established in these pots the top can be cut off and another cutting obtained. All the young stock possible should be taken from the plants selected in the fall for propagating purposes, for all the cuttings from which it is expected to produce good sized plants should be in the propagating bench by February 1. Any rooted after March 1 will make small plants for bedding purposes. The best stock for late May and early June planting should be in 4-inch pots by April, that they may be well enough established by the middle of May to begin to flower, and should have at that time three or four good branches so that a succession of bloom is assured.

Rose Border Edging.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I have 150 varieties of roses, growing in border along wall with about nine inches of space in front. What kind of low plants would be most suitable for edging to flower through the summer after the roses?

Canada.

J. D.

Pansies should do well, to be followed by an edging of sweet alyssum for the hot weather in summer and autumn. Myosotis semperflorens is also good, but enjoys more shade than the roses. The space being narrow, the first two named are most suitable. Another year, spring flowering bulbs should be used with the pansies, letting them remain in the ground and planting alyssum between them when the pansies finish, as they do in very hot weather.

The Shallow Flower Bowl.

One idea leads to another. Years ago there were few long stemmed flowers, that is greenhouse grown, mainly because of the demand; every bud in the cluster was allowed to grow and the flowers pinched off without stems. These were wired to matting straws and tied into tight bouquets. As flowers became more plentiful quality was looked for, disbudding began and finally single, long stemmed flowers became the rule. From Japan were imported some unique holders for the support of single flower stems with foliage in shallow bowls. These took the form of turtles, fishes, etc., perforated with holes. Later an American lady perfected the Japanna holder, a glass block with a number of holes for the flower stems. This was very practical and met with great success. Then came the English flower block, with a rounded contour and large flaring holes that would support large fleshy stems. This also had a large sale. Various receptacles were tried for these holders, the best being that offered by the Japanese in their shallow bowl, an inch to an inch and a half in depth. These, when filled with any of the long stemmed flowers or with daffodils, are very attractive.

The flower block is placed to one side, filled high at the back, tapering to shorter stems in front, with some of the flowers floating on the surface of the water. Other bowls are decorated with the block in the center and filled to present a more or less symmetrical appearance all around. We know of nothing more graceful than one of these bowls tastefully filled. They are now made in a variety of colors, of porcelain, of clear glass and terra cotta, with flat or glazed finish. They can also be used as bulb dishes for Chinese lilies or are very pretty with a few pebbles and small plants of the water hyacinth. To these latter tiny gold fish and miniature turtles give animated life and variety.

The Christmas of 1916.

The holiday business just past has been of unusual volume all over the country; it has exceeded all expectations and given great confidence for the future expansion of the trade. New life has been instilled into every department, so that with the certainty of a growing demand, men with push and energy will go ahead working out plans which have been held for just such evidence of appreciation—a demand from the public.

The Christmas trade from the retailers' point of view is like a battle royal; there is, or should be, great preparation as the time approaches, then the grand three days' engagement night and day, often without rest, then the final survey of the field showing results more or less satisfactory, depending on the degree of preparedness and skillful management of the campaign. It is this survey of the 1915 Campaign that is so important at this time. Right now, while everything can be verified, when the figures are all at hand and the various experiences fresh in the memory, is the time to indelibly fix them for the work of next year.

In the first place did the business come up to your expectations, was the profit sufficient for the amount done, was there a gross profit of 100% or more on the goods purchased for the Christmas trade? How about the perishable stock left over? If any, make an inventory. To sell up to the last plant is almost impossible, but everything left cuts into the profit just that much. Were the plant baskets just right, did they sell well; was there waste from stock bought for their filling and not used? Make a note of how a few of the best were filled. Were the poinsettia pans satisfactory? These, when just right, are splendid sellers. Make a list of the plant stock you will require for next year—you now have a better idea of what is required than you will have December 1, 1916. Make a note of the extra help and when they came on. As you look over the business, do you see where your system can be improved? Many men do things in the same old way year after year, when by giving the matter thought, much greater efficiency might be obtained.

In the matter of the cemetery wreaths and those for house decorations, was the stock ready on time? By a little crowding and early additional help, much of the slavish night work of the last few days may be avoided. A great deal of the preliminary mousing and stemming can be done in the late summer and early fall. Wreaths can be quickly thrown together if the material is properly stemmed.

The handling of expensive cut flowers at this season is very important and is worthy of the most careful thought. The record of the past season will show if the buying was just right for the demand—the varieties and colors that were most in demand should be noted. The arrangement of flowers in the box is not given the attention by many that it should receive. To get the best results the boxes in all sizes should be rather wide and of good length, so that one layer of flowers may be placed next and not on top of another. Tissue paper should separate each layer.

A good delivery system is a vital feature. Was this year's satisfactory—on time with all deliveries? Even with all the extra business this is possible if the force is properly organized. Note the number of new charge accounts. Were your announcements satisfactory and out on time and did they pull? Was there any newspaper advertising and were the results such as to warrant extension? Your window decorations with comments on their efficiency and any improvements that suggest themselves are important.

With all the above details of the business and others that will occur to the up-to-date storekeeper, a most valuable record will have been made that will prove of the greatest value in preparing the Christmas campaign of 1916.

Holiday Foliage Plants.

From year to year the usefulness of a greater variety of foliage plants becomes more evident to the trade, and an increased demand for stock of this character is noted with the return of the holiday season. In regard to quantity, the palms and ferns naturally head the list, for, apart from the great numbers of these plants that are used for decorating at the many social functions of the season, there are tens of thousands in both palms and ferns that are turned into most acceptable gifts in remembrance of this joyous season, and in a multitude of sizes from those in 3-inch or 4-inch pots, to fine specimens in 8 to 12-inch tubs. A well-grown kentia in a 7 or 8-inch tub, or a Phoenix Roebelinii (and the latter is shapely from a 4-inch pot upwards) are among the palms that are particularly acceptable to those whose space and purse are not of the most elastic character; and both are plants that may be safely recommended by the dealer for house decoration.

If a choice, but small specimen is the need of the customer, then Cocos Weddelliana or Livistona rotundifolia may be suggested, the first named being the best house plant of the two. A nicely grown Latania Borbonica, not the leggy kind, but those that have been kept to their naturally compact and rounded outline, is also a good ornament for the house, and will stand comparatively low temperatures without serious injury; but in selling either of these palms it is well to impress on the purchaser that they all enjoy thorough watering at intervals of not more than two days, and that none of them will endure stagnant water in the bottom of the jardiniere between times.

Among the ferns, the nephrolepis takes first place as the specimen ferns for the general class of buyers, those in pots or pans from 5 inches to 8 inches in diameter being the most popular sizes, while Scottii, the original Boston, and the Harris variety are among the most popular of the plain-leaved forms of this fern, and elegantissima is one of the many fine sorts that are more or less cut-leaved or crested. Those having space for such a plant can get nothing better among the ferns for household use than Cibotium Schiedeii, this magnificent dwarf tree fern now being found in the stock of most of the progressive florists, in either 6-inch pots or larger sizes. If a novelty in the fern line is among the inquiries, the birdnest fern, Asplenium nidus, will surely please, for the shining green foliage and trim habit of this fern is so distinct from the average fern that the amateur can scarcely believe it to be correctly classed in the fern family. The improved holly fern, Cyrtomium Rochfordianum, is another admirable variety for the house, and one that proves most useful in the many attractive combination tubs or boxes or baskets that are so widely used at the present season.

Then there is Adiantum Farleyense, still the "Queen of Maidenhairs," and that harder form known as the "Glory Fern" or A. gloriosa, both these lovely ferns being in good demand in those stores whose clientele is of a critical character. The ordinary table ferns, such as are grown and sold by the million, are among the regular stock the season through, but are also in extra demand at the holidays, for a nice fern dish or pan is a very pleasing form of Christmas remembrance to many plant lovers.

Numerous foliage plants come into extended demand for those combination arrangements to which reference has already been made, araucarias, dracaenas, variegated euonymus, aspidistras, ivies, asparagus, ardisias, solanums, aucubas, skimmia Japonica, farfugiums and numerous other plants being used in greater or less numbers. Dracaena terminalis is still one of the most satisfactory of this group, its bright coloring being particularly pleasing in midwinter, while among the dwarfs of this section Dracaena Sanderiana and D. Godseffiana, the first with its white and silvery variegation, and the second with leathery and glossy foliage profusely spotted with yellow, are especially popular. The white variegated form of Euonymus Japonica is an excellent plant in these mixed groupings, and Aglaonema costata is a low-growing tropical plant with dark green foliage with white markings, that is also used to advantage in such arrangements. Marantas are also found useful in this class of work, for some of the species and varieties will bear exposure to the conditions of a dwelling for a reasonable period, provided that they are not exposed to direct draughts. Among the most satisfactory marantas may be mentioned M. vittata, M. rosea-lineata, and M. insignis.

Pandanus Veitchii in all sizes from 3-inch pots to 7-inch pots, are in demand at this season, the distinct variegation of this fine decorative plant being most effective, whether it be in a single specimen or in a combination. In fact, the list of available plants for Christmas sales is extending from year to year, and is still a promising field for further extension.

Lilium Formosum Forcing.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

When bulbs of Lilium Formosum are received in the fall can they be potted in 4-inch pots until they are rooted, then placed in a night temperature of 55 degrees, transplanted in solid beds and bloomed successfully for January and February cutting, or should they be flowered in 6-inch pots?

P.

Lilies placed in 5-inch pots early in the fall can be had in bloom in February. It is not necessary to repot them. A temperature of 60 degrees would be right.

THE CARNATION.

Care of the Plants After Christmas.

Now that the Christmas holidays are over, any carnation plants that have been treated to a few more degrees of heat to open up the flowers, so as to reap the benefit of a big holiday demand, should have the temperature gradually reduced to normal conditions again and the general routine care of the plants be given the closest attention to encourage them to continue in a healthy producing condition. Figuring on the reports from the different sections of the country regarding the supply and demand, indications are that first class carnations will bring good prices for several weeks yet. The results obtained from the plants during the month of December must demonstrate to the grower that selected plants and constant care are the important things that lead to the best returns. The grower who selected his plants at time of planting and followed it up with close attention to the details in the plants' care, has his plants in fine condition, producing a good crop of flowers to meet the demand at good prices, but the grower who has subjected his plants to haphazard culture conditions, cannot have a very good record to show for his plants during the month of December.

Another important work that can be done at this time to good advantage while the flowers are cut off close, is to fumigate the houses; even though there is not any sign of fly, a fumigation now, thoroughly done, will rid the plants of any insects not discernible to the eye and helps to keep them clean for the rest of the winter.

Disbudding is one of the big jobs when the plants are heavily loaded with shoots and buds, but it must not be neglected and should be done on time so that the flower will get the fullest benefit from it; also, do not allow the growing shoots that are coming up to get crooked before placing them in the wire rings. As advised in my last carnation notes, the work connected with the propagating of the young stock for next season should be pushed along. First of all, have the propagating house and beds put into shape to carry on the work. After the propagating house has been made ready, the next work in order is the selection of the cuttings. This is of the greatest importance, because a great deal of the success of the plant throughout the season depends on the kind of a cutting the start is made with. Cuttings should not be taken from plants that show the least sign of yellows, branch-rot, or any other ailment; neither should cuttings be taken from plants that are not true to variety as regards color. This includes most particularly to the deep pink colors. Some plants will throw flowers that are streaked and poor in color. Cuttings taken from such plants means several additional plants producing poor colored flowers next season, while a selection of the cuttings from plants that grow away freely and produce flowers true to color and variety will result in benches of fine plants and flowers, and many times improvements over the original varieties are obtained this way. When the stock of a variety will permit it, enough stock for the season's growing requirements should be taken in one batch. The reason for this is the flowering plants on the benches will be even and each bench producing its maximum of flowers, but when one batch of cuttings is taken several weeks after the other, and planted together in the field or on the bench, there are bound to be a number of the plants that fail to catch up and result in an uneven lot of plants. Do not allow the cuttings to wilt between the time they are taken from the plants and put into the sand. The best way is to take off small lots of cuttings, trim them, placing them in a pail of water to stiffen up, allowing them to remain an hour or two before running them into the sand. Water the cuttings well at time of putting into the sand, but be careful to allow the sand to dry out moderately before applying water again. The cuttings can be kept firm and fresh by light spraying each day.

Moving Large Trees.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I will move some elm trees this winter. They are about 2½ feet in circumference. How far from the trunks must I leave the earth and roots on the trees in digging them up? Any other information you can give on this subject will be appreciated.

SUBSCRIBER.

A tree one foot in diameter will require a ball of about eight feet diameter. For trees of heavy spreading tops the size of the balls may be increased. In THE AMERICAN FLORIST of February 20, 1914, E. O. Orpet gives some details on this work as follows, which no doubt will be found of general interest at this time:

"Many people are unwilling to wait for trees to grow to large size in these days of immediate results, and are willing to pay for them ready made, if of good height, habit and shape. There is as much diversity in trees as there is in white folks. The planter of small trees cannot tell how they will develop in later years, and if an avenue or parkway is to be planted, and look well in the time to come, uniformity is essential.

"The writer has in mind a very fine park system in an eastern city, where all the elms used are of the English type, and it was always thought that trimming or pruning brought the uniformity always seen there. It was a revelation, therefore, some few years ago to find that for many years this city had bought all the trees, grafted annually by an English grower from one fine specimen tree. These were nursed along for years until needed in the park nursery, and then planted along newly created boulevards and streets. This is now being done in Illinois, perhaps for the first time, and the prominent planters buy the elms as fast as they can be grown. All are grafted on seedling elms, below the level of the ground, and in two years trees the size of a broom handle can be supplied, all warranted to grow alike in time to come, and be uniform in habit. It may be said in passing that to plant the English or Scotch types of elm in the middle west is a mistake; they grow for a few years, and when valuable specimens might be expected, decadence begins. There is no elm like the American variety, ready to hand, vigorous, hardy and having the added advantage of being at home.

"When a tree attains the age of perhaps 20 years its contour can be easily seen and specimens can be selected that will match and make uniform lines in time to come. These can be moved in winter with surety of their living, and this is being done by many with a guarantee. It is often advised that the tree should be trenched round a year before, and good soil be placed around it to induce the formation of young fibrous roots. There could not be a greater fallacy and more losses will ensue from this treatment than when they are dug, frozen up sufficiently to hold the ball of soil, and then moved to the new location at once, putting good soil around about them, in a hole already made large enough to receive both. There is then only one operation, a major one, it is true, but not so severe a check as the digging up the second time, and the consequent injury to the young roots already made when these should be becoming established in the new soil of the new location.

"As to the freezing, enough is sufficient. A maple can be easily killed, as we found to our sorrow one severe winter, when the frost went down through the ball of soil containing the tree. An elm, however, will stand more without injury, but does not enjoy it, so when a tree is frozen sufficiently to hold the soil at the roots, if it is not possible to move same at once, put plenty of snow over all, or lacking in this, as in some years, put on straw manure to hold it as it was until ready to move. All evergreens can be moved safely in this way, choosing a day when the branches are not frozen, without loss of many roots, but transportation for long distances is not advised, as the freight would be high; however, for moving from one place to another near by, it is the safest way. Only surface rooting trees can be moved, such as elm, maple, ash, or such as make no tap-roots. An oak is difficult unless nursery grown.

"In sections where there is lots of snow, trees are easily loaded on sleds, and travel best this way; there is less liability of the trees being dumped in transit than when on wheels, as often happens when we have plenty of snow with no frost under it in the ground. This is the case now, and the moving of large specimens weighing 10 or more tons could not be accomplished when they have to be moved from the woods and across open fields. We had a hard experience last winter in moving a fine specimen elm, one that had been sought for two years. It rolled off the wagon five times and had to be reloaded. It took eight horses to draw it on wheels, and all the difficulties were due to the snow keeping the ground soft below.

"In digging trees for removal, it is only necessary to go to the depth of the roots, eighteen inches being usually enough. Then, when frozen enough, cover up to keep from more frost than is necessary, or it will be very hard to pull the tree over with blocks and tackle, and when pulled over, the surplus frozen soil will have to be cut off with axes before loading. This, as before said, will be fatal to a maple, and not good for an elm."

Omaha.

Miss Svoboda, for many years with Hess & Swoboda, has quit the florist business. Lorain Wagner, also connected with this firm, will have to be operated upon and will probably be laid up for a long time. Gretchen Swoboda, daughter of G. Swoboda, is spending the winter in California. John J. Hess received a cablegram, December 23, announcing the death of his brother, Carl, in Switzerland.

Miss Parker, formerly with A. Donaghue, has opened a very attractive flower shop on Sixteenth street and is doing a nice business. She is a hard worker and has the best wishes of the trade. Twenty-five or more years ago Mrs. T. N. Parker was one of the leading florists of this city.

J. W. and E. E. Arnold moved into their new store at Sixteenth and Douglas streets and report good business from the start.

Lewis Henderson is now located in his new establishment at 1517 Farnam street. He says business is most satisfactory.

All local florists report good holiday business. With many, a number of orders had to be turned down.

CHRISTMAS TRADE.

As announced in these columns last week, the sales during the Christmas season of 1915 were highly gratifying, as shown by reports from all sections of the country. With few exceptions the volume of business surpassed that of a year previous and in many instances the high sales mark of many years was reached. The condensed reports which follow tell of the holiday season's sales in various sections of the country.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—With usual prices for the season prevailing the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports business during December, 1915, as being one-third better than for the corresponding period of 1914. Carnations were very scarce. The Christmas spirit seemed to be strong, and the trade which started the first day of Christmas week was good every day. Corsages sold well as did wreaths and there was a good demand for cyclamens and azaleas at good prices. Poinsettias were poor and sold slowly. This firm had 18 extra clerks and helpers in addition to the large regular force. The weather on Friday preceding Christmas was bad and kept part of the shoppers at home, otherwise even with the augmented force in all departments they could not have handled the trade.

FREDERICTON, N. B.—J. Bebbington & Son report the demand for plants during the holiday season of 1915 as far below normal, plants selling at 35 cents and 50 cents having the call and few sales being made over the $1 mark. The demand for cut flowers, however, was excellent and held the volume of business up to last year's total. Carnations were short of supply and in fact, much of the cut flower stock came from the Boston markets. In bulbous flowers Paper Whites and lily of the valley were the favorites. The weather was unusually mild for the holiday season and stock as a rule was of good quality, although some of the roses showed the effects of travel. In the plant division, azaleas, cyclamens, cherries and primroses were good sellers. The call for palms and ferns was light.

TAMPA, FLA.—Christmas trade did not reach the volume of business of a year ago and the prices were lower is the report of the Tampa Floral Co.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—A fine demand for high-priced plants and basket arrangements and a good sale in cut flowers brought an increase of 20 per cent over last year's figures to Edward Lorentz. Prices were the same as a year previous and the quality of the stock was good. Azaleas arrived too late to have them in on time for Christmas, and this caused an increase in the demand for poinsettias. Christmas trees were scarce, a snow fall of 36 inches in 18 hours making it impossible to bring the cut to market.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—The increase in the demand for flowering plants and a strong, well-divided demand for cut flowers, which were better in quality than a year ago, were features of the 1915 Christmas trade at the establishment of the Pikes Peak Floral Co. Roses, carnations and violets were in short supply and there was no excess in the bulbous flower line, the quality of which was good. Prices were about the same as last season, and the increase in the volume of business is estimated at about 10 per cent.

LINCOLN, NEB.—More cash, quick sales and ideal weather that was a boon to packing and delivering as well as bringing in the crops, was the way C. H. Frey summed up the Christmas business for 1915. Prices were about the same as last year but the volume of business was 20 per cent greater. Roses, carnations and violets were in short supply. Blooming plants were in heavy demand, an increase of 20 per cent being noted in the retail trade, while the wholesale department sold 50 per cent more than a year ago.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Twenty-five per cent more business with prices about the same as a year ago, with an increased demand for flowering plants and handle baskets arranged with plants, both flowering and decorative, is the summary of John Coombs on the Christmas trade for 1915. Carnations were scarce, as were flowers of the bulbous variety, but there was little call for the latter. The quality of stock was about the same as that offered during the corresponding period of 1914.

DENVER, COLO.—The Park Floral Co. reports an increase in Christmas sales of 30 per cent over similar business in 1914. Prices were about the same and there seemed less disposition among purchasers to argue about prices. Blooming plants in large sizes sold out early but decorative stock moved slowly. American Beauties and carnations were in short supply, and in bulbous flowers there was little call for anything but lily of the valley. There was an increased demand for orchids.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Furrow & Co. report that Christmas business this year was 50 per cent greater than during the corresponding period of 1914. Prices were much better and stock was just plentiful enough to clean up nicely, and the quality was higher by far than is usual at this time of the year. In plants the call for azaleas and cyclamens was 50 per cent greater than in former years. In roses, the red varieties and Ophelia led in popularity.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—G. C. Dalglish reports prices about the same as last year, with cut flowers more than equal to the demand and the volume of Christmas business about the same as in 1914. Roses were extra fine in quality and other stocks fair. Violets were in a glut and were sold on the streets at 25 cents per bunch. Cut flowers did not sell as well as in former years, and the increased demand for flowering plants was noticeable.

DALLAS, TEX.—Christmas sales this year exceeded the expectations of the Lang Floral & Nursery Co. People bought early and late and in consequence the buying extended over a full week and the volume of trade was one-third greater than during the corresponding period in 1914. Azaleas and cyclamens ran short and late orders were unfilled, but more poinsettia plants were disposed of than at any time in the past five years. The quality of the stock was extra fine and better prices were gladly paid both in cut flowers and plants. Stock was plentiful with the exception of violets and orchids. American Beauties were very popular and more were sold than at any Christmas period for several years, and at fancy prices.

KOKOMO, IND.—Miss A. E. Coles, of Coles Flower Shop, could have sold much more cut flower stock had it been available, but with prices about the same as last year the volume of business at her establishment was greater. As to quality, the stock, with the exception of carnations, which were not quite up to standard, was about the same as during the corresponding period last year, while the quality of bulbous flowers was very good. There was an especially lively call for Paper Whites and sweet peas. All small flowers, such as lily of the valley, violets, etc., sold well. There was an increase in the demand for flowering plants. Red ruscus and boxwood, in small bunches, or by the pound moved freely.

PEORIA, ILL.—The conditions of the 1915 Christmas trade as reported by B. Juerjens of the Springdale Cemetery, varied little from those of a year ago. Prices and the volume of business were about the same, and while there was a shortage in some lines of cut flowers the demand for flowering plants was exceptionally good. Business has been very good all during the fall and up to the present time. Chrysanthemums never had a better sale and roses and carnations cleaned up daily.—Cole Bros., the veteran florists of this city, rented an overflow store to display their Christmas plants and sold out. Better azaleas than those they sold could not be found in the United States.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Christmas sales in the period just passed were fully up to expectations, although no records were broken, according to Clark Bros. Prices compared favorably with those of other years, but due to cloudy weather stock was not as good as usual and was short in supply. High priced plants suffered for lack of buyers, medium priced articles having the call. Cut flowers of all kinds sold out clean. There was an abundance of everything in the plant line with the exception of azaleas. A large stock of Maud Dean chrysanthemums helped materially to increase the volume of the sales and Freesia Purity in pots sold readily.

NEW YORK.—Prices and the volume of sales were both better this season as compared with the Christmas trade of 1914, according to Charles A. Dards, Madison avenue and Forty-fourth street. Cut flowers were plentiful and the quality better. American Beauties, orchids and red roses were in increased demand and in the plant section there was a heavy call for the berried and red flowered sorts.

MISSOULA, MONT.—A 50 per cent increase is reported on the Christmas trade this year by the R. & S. Flower Store. Prices were better. The quality of roses received was the best ever seen, but a carload of "pickled" stock which came from Seattle was virtually a total loss.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—T. F. Taylor reports 1915 Christmas business greater than a year ago by 20 per cent. Retail prices for cut flowers were about the same, but plants sold a little higher than usual. Individual sales ran higher and many of the shops pushed the sale of made up baskets and realized better prices than would have been the case with single plants. The stock was equal to that offered a year ago, and a decided increase in demand for flowering plants was noted, azaleas and cyclamens selling particularly well. By reason of the heavy demand for plants the supply of cut flowers was adequate.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Geo. H. Blackman, of Wm. Blackman Floral Co., reports Christmas trade for 1915 as being 15 per cent greater than for the corresponding period a year previous. The quality of stock was higher than a year ago and brought better prices. The cut flower supply was short in some lines, especially roses and carnations. The demand for flowering plants was better than usual. Good holly sold well, as did boxwood wreaths for cemetery use. The demand in general seemed to be for something good, and customers seemed willing to pay for quality stock.

COLUMBUS, O.—John R. Hellenthal reports the biggest and best Christmas trade in the history of his establishment. Prices were much better than a year ago and the quality of the stock was about the same. In cut flowers there was a shortage of carnations, roses and violets, with an increased demand for sweet peas. The call for cut poinsettias was very heavy; in fact this flower was the leader in popularity. All plants of good quality sold well at better prices than ever before. Extra large azaleas and poinsettias were in heavy demand and fancy plant baskets found ready sale.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A very good Christmas trade—what might be called a good cleanup, was reported by the Salford Flower Shop. Prices were about the same as a year ago with the exception of violets which sold a little higher, although they were plentiful, as were roses. Carnations, owing to unfavorable weather were scarce. Quality of the cut flower stock could not have been better. Cut poinsettias has a remarkable sale. Baskets of plants and corsage bouquets were in greater demand than ever before and anything in the flowering plant line sold well at good prices.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—Prices were on a par with those of the 1914 Christmas season, but this year's sales were greater, is the report of E. E. Brown. The demand for flowering plants was about the same as a year ago, but there was a decrease in the sales of palms, ferns, made-up pans and basket arrangements. The quality of the stock was better than last year and fully one-third more cut flowers than were on hand could have been sold had they been available. There were more calls for carnations than all other cut flowers combined.

POMONA, CALIF.—Prices for Christmas, 1915, were a little better than a year ago and there was an improvement of about 15 per cent in the volume of business. The quality of stock also showed some improvement. Plants showed a little improvement in demand over last year.

CLEVELAND, O.—A Graham & Son report a 25 per cent increase in Christmas business as compared with a year ago. Stock was of good quality and the supply was ample to meet all requirements. There was an increased demand for flowering plants.

BANGOR, ME.—Adam Sekinger reports Christmas business for 1915 better than a year ago by 20 per cent, prices being better and the demand for flowering plants nearly double. The supply was adequate and the quality much better than last year, with a marked increase in the call for roses. In plants, anything with a bright blossom sold at good prices, with azaleas first in popularity and begonias next.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—According to Washburn & Sons, there was an increased demand for flowering plants this year as compared with the Christmas trade of 1914, but the volume of business was about the same and there was little variance in prices. Carnations were short of supply, but there were plenty of yellow and white narcissi. There was no marked increase in the demand for any special flower.

PORTLAND, ME.—L. C. Goddard says that 1915 Christmas business was fully as good as that of a year ago, with plenty of good stock with the exception of carnations and violets and prices about 5 to 10 per cent better. There was a slight falling off in the demand for basket arrangements, but this was offset by an increased call for flowering plants, and on the whole business was satisfactory.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—D. E. Law reports a 10 to 15 per cent increase over last year's Christmas business with prices about the same. Roses and carnations were in short supply; in fact several thousand more could have been sold. There was a greater call for flowering plants than ever before at the Christmas season, with begonias far in the lead in popularity.

PETERSBURG, VA.—Christmas business for 1915 was 100 per cent better than a year ago. Prices were advanced 25 per cent and the increase in cash sales was noticeable. The quality of stock showed improvement over the Christmas season of 1914. Cyclamens were especially popular and all flowering plants sold much faster than before, according to Wm. S. Young.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—N. B. & C. E. Stover report trade at their establishment one half larger during the 1915 Christmas period than last year, with prices about the same except in the case of carnations, which were a trifle higher. The demand for flowering plants showed an increase and cut flowers, which were of better quality than a year ago, sold up well.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—MacNair reports that buying commenced early this year, with usual prices, except in the case of carnations which were higher and at the close of business the day before Christmas the sales were 25 per cent better than a year ago. Cut flower stock of good quality was plentiful and there was an increase in the demand for flowering plants.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Mills, the Florist, reports an increase in sales during the holiday season of 1915 as compared with that of a year ago. Prices were higher and the quality of the stock was good. There was an increased demand for white carnations and white roses, white, pink and yellow seeming to be the colors preferred both in cut stock and plants.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—With prices ranging from 10 to 20 per cent better than a year ago, the Alpha Floral Co. reports an increase in Christmas sales as compared with the trade of last year. Stock of fine quality was in good supply, with the exception of carnations. There was an increased demand for plants, especially azaleas, cyclamens and poinsettias.

WORCESTER, MASS.—M. W. Reid reports 1915 Christmas business 25 per cent greater than last year, with prices 25 per cent higher. Stock was of about the same quality as that supplied last year. Roses were short in supply and there was an unusually heavy call for the Russell variety. There was an increased demand for flowering plants.

RALEIGH, N. C.—J. L. O'Quinn & Co. report that their 1915 Christmas was double that of a year ago. Roses were higher in price but all other flowers sold at usual figures. All blooming plants were in heavy demand and the supply of azaleas was short of the requirements. The quality of the stock as compared with that of last year was better.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—H. P. Potter reports a 20 per cent increase in the Christmas business over that of a year ago. There was a marked increase in the call for carnations, and these, together with roses and violets, were short of supply. The sale of flowering plants was greater than in former years. Prices were about the same as a year ago.

EAST SANTA CRUZ, CALIF.—A heavy demand for green goods was noticeable in the Christmas trade in this city, more of this stock being shipped from this vicinity to all parts of the country than is usual. Cut flower and plant sales both fell short of the demand that was recorded in 1914. The quality was not quite as good as a year ago.

OGDEN, UTAH.—Higher prices prevailed and stock was poorer in quality than a year ago, but notwithstanding the Christmas trade for 1915 was 25 per cent better than the corresponding period of 1914, according to F. J. Hendershot & Son. There was an increase in the demand for plants and more cyclamens and ferns were disposed of.

PUEBLO, COLO.—G. Fleischer reports a moderate increase in Christmas sales as compared with 1914, with prices advanced about 10 per cent. Flowering plants showed an increase in popularity with cyclamens and small pans of poinsettias in the lead. Holly and greens are on the wane as decorations, being forced out by artificial stock.

ATLANTIC, IA.—Better prices, plenty of stock of good quality and a complete sellout in plants made 1915 Christmas business 15 per cent better than for the corresponding period a year ago. There was a big demand for plant baskets in the smaller sizes and holly wreaths sold well, according to the Atlantic Greenhouses.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—An increase in the demand for flowering plants and a shortage in cut flower stock were noticeable in the Christmas sales for 1915. Carnations were the most in demand. Prices were about the same as a year ago and the volume of business was about equal to other years, according to A. Whitcomb & Son.

TACOMA, WASH.—With a shortage of carnations and roses and prices about the same as last year, the 1915 Christmas sales at the establishment of California Florists, showed an increase of about 25 per cent over the corresponding period last year. The quality of the stock was good and poinsettias and azaleas were favorites.

CINCINNATI, O.—Christmas trade at the establishment of O. H. Hoffmeister was slightly better and prices about the same as last year. Stock was of better quality, with the exception of carnations, which were also in limited supply. There was an increased demand for flowering plants, cyclamens selling especially well.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—A good call for plants and active trade in baskets were features of the 1915 Christmas trade at the establishment of Fred E. Avery. The sales in cut flowers were satisfactory but there was shortage of roses and carnations. Prices were the same as a year ago but the volume of business was greater.

SPOKANE, WASH.—The volume of Christmas business for 1915 was possibly a little greater than the corresponding period last year is the report of the Hoyt Bros. Co. Stock was of good quality, prices were about the same, the supply was equal to all requirements and there was an increase in plant sales.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—While prices were higher than a year ago and there was an increase in the demand for flowering plants and the volume of business this year was about normal, according to W. F. Abrams. The quality of stock was better than usual and the supply of roses, carnations and violets was limited.

CENTRALIA, ILL.—J. W. Ross Co. reports better prices and a 40 per cent increase in the volume of business during the Christmas season of 1915 compared with that of a year ago. The quality of stock was good and there was a good demand for fancy roses. There was also an increased demand for plants.

SAVANNAH, GA.—Prices and volume of business were on a par with those of the Christmas season a year ago, according to A. C. Oelschig. Roses were in fine crop, but carnations were not so good. There was a good demand for made-up baskets, poinsettias being the leaders in popularity.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Abele Bros. report a 25 per cent increase over the 1914 Christmas trade, with an ample supply of good stock at prices about the same as last year, and a good demand for flowering plants. A quantity of pickled stock was noted in the market.

The Late Major Frank Holsinger.

Major Frank Holsinger, Kansas pioneer, an authority on horticulture, one of the organizers of the Kansas State Horticultural Society, and who also served as president and treasurer of that organization, died at his home in Rosedale, a suburb of Kansas City, January 2, aged 80 years.

Major Holsinger was born in Pennsylvania, went to Kansas before the Civil war and located at Lawrence, but at the outbreak of hostilities he returned to his native state and entered the Pennsylvania reserves, being promoted to rank of major during the campaign in Virginia. In 1868, he returned to Kansas and settled on a 160-acre farm at Rosedale, where he lived until recently. He was a candidate for governor in 1900, also a candidate for state senator, and was one of the men who obtained prohibition for Kansas.

Major Holsinger is survived by a widow and six children: Mrs. George Rose, Gerald Holsinger, C. V. Holsinger, George Holsinger, Mrs. Maude Wilson and Miss Edna Holsinger.

EUREKA, CALIF.—C. W. Ward is considering plans for a range of greenhouses to be built here for carnation culture.

DANVILLE, ILL.—Two greenhouses of the Danville Floral Co., each 200 feet long, collapsed under the weight of snow on the glass December 29. The damage to the houses is estimated at $4,000 aside from the loss of growing stock. Work of rebuilding will begin as soon as the weather permits.

A small ship launched upon an unknown sea,
 A small seed planted from an unknown tree,
 Such is this strange new year to you and me.
 Whither the vessel goeth
 And how the seed upgrowth
 God only knoweth.
 But sail the ship and plant the seed,
 What's done in faith is done in deed.

CARNATION AKEHURST, as grown by Rolf Zetlitz, Lima, O., is a fine variety with deep pink blooms of large size and excellent stems.

A REPORT has it that Hugh Dickson, of the Belmont Nurseries, Belfast, Ireland, has been awarded the thousand-dollar prize at the Panama-Pacific exposition for the best new rose.

GLASS manufacturers advanced the price 10 per cent January 1 and it is said that the figures in quotations on other lines of greenhouse building materials, iron, lumber, etc., are moving upward.

National Association of Gardeners.

The national cooperative committee of the National Association of Gardeners has issued a communication to local horticultural societies to supply a series of papers on horticultural subjects for discussion at their monthly meetings during the year 1916. The committee announces that this offer is also extended to any other horticultural organization or educational institution and it will be glad to hear from those that would be interested to receive the papers, which will be provided as outlined in its letter. If any of the horticultural societies or clubs have been overlooked and not received a letter, but desire to obtain this service, the committee asks them to communicate with it. The communication follows:

"At the convention of the National Association of Gardeners, held in Boston recently, a number of papers were read which elicited the comment that they were among the best essays ever presented in Horticultural hall of that city. The subjects related to the profession of gardening, country estate management and the young gardener's opportunity in this country. It was proposed that some provision be made to give general publicity in gardeners' circles to the contents of these papers, so, in order to carry out this suggestion, the national cooperative committee has decided to supply a copy of the first of these papers, entitled 'Is Gardening a Profession?' by W. W. Ohlweiler, of Missouri, to the different local societies and clubs, that it may be presented at the January meetings. To all societies sufficiently interested to receive the remaining papers for their succeeding meetings and a paper devoted to a horticultural subject for discussion, if opportunity offers, for each successive meeting following, during 1916, the national cooperative committee of the National Association of Gardeners will be pleased to supply them. This service will be free of any expense to the local societies, the motive for this offer being solely to arouse a greater interest in horticulture and to develop a greater co-operative spirit among those engaged in the profession of gardening. If the offer is accepted, kindly advise M. C. Ebel, secretary, Madison, N. J., at your early convenience, that the name of your organization may be properly recorded to regularly receive the papers."

APPOINTMENTS.

President William N. Craig has appointed the following directors to serve for three years: John W. Everett, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Thomas W. Logan, Jenkintown, Pa.; Robert Cameron, Cambridge, Mass.; James MacMachan, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; A. Bauer, Deal Beach, N. J.; David Fraser, Pittsburgh, Pa.; George W. Hess, Washington, D. C. To fill the unexpired term of W. N. Craig, to serve until 1918, William J. Kennedy, Chestnut Hill, Mass. To fill the unexpired term of A. J. Smith, to serve until 1917, Thomas W. Head, Lake Forest, Ill. To fill the unexpired term of Theodore Wirth, to serve until 1917, L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo.

The following committees have been appointed by President Craig to serve for the year 1916.

National co-operative committee: W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Martin C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.

Committee on essays and horticultural instruction: William H. Waite, Rumson, N. J.; Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; Arthur Smith, Reading, Pa.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; William Downs, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Holland Packing Charges.

We have received the following from the Dutch Bulb Exporters' Association, dated Haarlem, Holland, December 17: "The board of the Dutch Bulb Exporters' Association informs us that it has been resolved, subject to penalty, to invoice in future in wholesale trade charges for cases and packing at cost prices, so that it is no longer allowed to sell 'packing free.' As this was already a general method of business to which sometimes exceptions were made, owing to which ungrounded differences in price occurred, this resolution no doubt will contribute to increase fair trade."

Philadelphia Hotel Rates.

The following is a list of Philadelphia hotels and rates per day issued by the committee on information of the Fourth National Flower Show to be held in that city, March 25-April 2. Fred Cowperthwaite, chairman of the committee, Room 1205 Widener building, Juniper and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, Pa., will be pleased to give any further information desired upon request.

Washington.EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD BUSINESS.

Business after the holidays is generally a little quiet, but trade the past week has been exceptionally good, with plenty of good stock which moved at Christmas prices. Everything seemed to meet with ready sale, especially orchids, American Beauties, violets and gardenias. Flowering plants sold well, but the supply was limited and they were small or medium in size.

NOTES.

From remarks made by several managers of local stores the 1915 Christmas business was not the best in years, but prospects for business for the coming season are promising. Everybody in the local trade seems to have orders for luncheons, dances and other social events to be held in the near future.

The Dupont Floral Co., although one of the youngest firms in the trade in this city, has an efficient manager who is always on the job in Elmer Maybury, and is getting its share of the business.

Gude Bros. at present are cutting some extra fine American Beauties; also Radiance, Richmond and Mock roses with stems varying from three and one-half to four and one-half feet in length.

George H. Cook, the Connecticut avenue florist, reports good business with plenty of orders for decorations for dinners and dances, of which he makes a specialty.

J. H. Small & Sons have been kept busy with decorations for the Pan-American delegation which has been in session for the last few weeks.

Wm. Clark & Sons are sending in some extra fine cut poinsettias; in fact, they are keeping the local trade supplied. They are also cutting good Kaiserin roses.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. is still receiving a few chrysanthemums, which find sale before they are taken from the boxes.

Mrs. George C. Shaffer is confined to her home with a severe cold which she contracted Christmas week.

Miss Ballinger, manager for Z. D. Blackstone, has been laid up with the grippe for the past week.

G. C. D.

Detroit.TRADE HOLDS CHRISTMAS PACE.

New Year's trade easily maintained the high tide proportions that Christmas established, and like the latter event far exceeded the business of a year ago. A marked characteristic of the unusual business that everyone enjoyed was its sudden development during the latter part of Friday and which continued up to nearly midnight in the stores that were kept open till that hour. The scarcity of flowers that was felt the whole week was accentuated to a serious degree on Friday—great demand developed and the wires were kept warm in all directions in an effort to obtain a supply, even approaching the demand, which was incessant up to and including Saturday. The stock that was available, however, was of good quality and commanded stiff prices. Carnations were much improved in quality during the whole week, but were painfully short of the call. Violets were perhaps more popular for this event than ever before and the shortage of the supply was embarrassing to all the florists. Plants were quite as popular as at Christmas and all that were available sold readily. Some of the florists had extensive orders for decorating for New Year parties, which increased, for them, the trials shared by so many to serve an unprecedented demand as the year rounded out. Many employes in the trade were taken down during the holidays with illness, which was an added hardship to those on duty. The weather, like that of the week previous, was devoid of intense cold and was a most favorable factor in making the successful result to all.

J. F. S.

Kansas City.THE CLOSE OF A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

The local florists are well satisfied with the business of the past week, the sales of the last week of the year proving highly gratifying. In some of the stores the force had to work day and night, preparing decorations and making corsages for social functions, as well as looking after the regular line of business which was more active than was anticipated. A scarcity of stock was feared, but such was not the case although nearly everything in the market cleaned up from day to day. Roses were of extra good quality, American Beauties taking the high mark with other varieties ranging from 10 to 35 cents each. Carnations, stevias, narcissi, lilies, violets, orchids and lily of the valley were of good quality and found ready sale. Pot plants, made up plants and baskets sold well all week.

NOTES.

T. J. Noll & Co. closed the year with a big week's business. Shipping trade as well as local business was very brisk. They handled fine stock in roses, carnations, orchids, lily of the valley, violets, lilies and stevias which sold out daily.

W. J. Barnes had a heavy week's business in funeral work and many orders for New Year's decorations. Pot plants continued to sell and large quantities of cut stock was disposed of. A brisk call for corsages used up

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a prosperous year. The closing week was a busy one, with a brisk demand for decorations, funeral work and corsages. Both pot plants and cut flowers sold well.

Samuel Murray's holiday trade was splendid. A big demand for his pot plants was noted and his baskets and artistic corsage arrangements for New Year's entertainments were fast sellers.

Henry Kusik & Co. report a good week, stock cleaning up each day. Business, both local and out-of-town, was very satisfactory. Some splendid stock was noted at their establishment.

A. Newell reports a fine holiday business, and says prospects for business in 1916 look very promising. He had a big demand for plants for New Year's gifts.

Many of the florists pushed the sale of pot plants in place of cut flowers where the latter were high in price, and in this way made good sales and also made a satisfied customer.

Mrs. Juvenal, who was seriously burned by a fire which started in a show window at the Juvenal store, is improving nicely.

James A. Biggour, formerly conducting the florist stand at the Coates House, has filed a petition in bankruptcy.

The Peterson Floral Co. had a brisk trade during the holiday season, plants and corsages selling especially well. A large number of his own grown orchids.

Patrick Larkin had excellent holiday business with a big run on corsages.

E. J. B.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—J. T. Brown reports a nice business at his flower store, 916 North Illinois street, opened December 4.

Cleveland.SUPPLY LIMITED BUT MARKET ACTIVE.

Receipts continue light on all grades and varieties of stock and the New Year begins with stock very limited, and the demand good. Business between Christmas and New Years was good, the market at all times being active. Orchids sold well both for Christmas and New Years, as did violets, lily of the valley and sweet peas. American Beauties were good stock and cleaned up entirely; in fact, everything in cut flowers was short of the demand. Pink and White Killarney are improving in color and size. Greens were plentiful all the time. Callas and Easter lilies are scarce. Paper White narcissi and stevia are most plentiful but in very good demand. Carnations are still scarce and are bringing top notch prices. A few days of good sunshine, however, will see things entirely reversed, as growers report the plants are full of buds, but the lack of sunshine is the cause of most of the shortage. There has been considerable funeral work lately and the scarcity of short roses and other stock suitable for such work has been keenly felt by those retailers who do most of that class of work.

There will be a banquet and jollification at the Hollenden hotel, Wednesday, January 12, at 7:30 p. m., given by the florists' club for members, florists and their friends. At this banquet all guarantors of the flower show will receive their checks, including dividends. Everybody interested should try and come. Plates, $1.50 each. Good music, speakers and other entertainment will be furnished.

C. F. B.

State Florists' Association of Indiana.

The annual meeting and exhibition of State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held at the Chamber of Commerce, 28 South Meridian street, Indianapolis, Ind., January 11, at 2:30 p. m. The usual 6 o'clock dinner will be served and through the courtesy of the Indianapolis members of the society the committee in charge of entertainment have arranged for a theater party to follow at Keith's to which visiting members and their ladies will be invited guests. Members are requested to notify H. L. Wiegand, 1610 North Illinois street, Indianapolis, Ind., at least a day before the meeting if they will be present so that proper reservations can be made.

A feature of this meeting will be the competition for the Indiana rose trophy and the Indiana carnation trophy. Entries must be in the hands of the secretary two days before the meeting. The rules governing the competition are ready for distribution. Albert Pettitt is the member in charge. For any further information address or telephone O. E. Steinkamp, secretary, 3800 Rockwood avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.—The annual meeting of the Virginia State Horticultural Society will be held in this city, January 12-13.

KENTFIELD, CALIF.—The Richard Diener Co. has filed articles of incorporation with a capital stock of $25,000 and will grow gladioli, carnations, petunias and pansies on a large tract near here.

CHATHAM, N. J.—The realty holdings of Samuel Lum, florist, were sold December 20 to Elmer King, attorney representing a combination of creditors, by Corra N. Williams, trustee in bankruptcy. The consideration was $26,050.

Belle Washburn

The Best Red Carnation

Winner of the Silver Medal at the last Exhibition of the American Carnation Society, Buffalo, N. Y., January 27th and 28th, First Prize at the Illinois State Fair at Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22nd and 23rd.

It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts: and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family. It has a spicy odor, much greater than the average Carnation. It comes in full flower by the first of December and then continues steadily throughout the balance of the season.

During the present holiday season the Belle Washburn was shipped everywhere from Texas to Winnipeg and from Denver as far east as Pennsylvania. It sold at the highest price of any red Carnation and the most in demand being the premier red of any variety that was in the Chicago market.

The color is the most brilliant red of any Carnation now in the market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18 000 devoted to rooted cuttings.

Rooted cuttings now ready for delivery. Price of the rooted cuttings is $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate price. Every cutting guaranteed strong and well rooted.

DEMAND EXCEEDS SUPPLY.

Business during the past week has been exceptionally good from every point of view. The demand was far ahead of the supply and high prices prevailed. The dark, stormy weather has shortened the shipment of flowers and New Year's business was exceptionally good. Carnations sold readily during the whole week at from $5 to $8 per 100. Roses also were in heavy demand, prices running from $6 per 100 to $3 per dozen on good commercial grades. Violets also were scarce and sold well at $1.50 per 100. Freesia has made its appearance as a staple flower and there is a good call for it at $6 to $8 per 100. Yellow marguerites and bulbous stock also are in short supply and prices good. The plant trade is brisk, cyclamens, begonias and azaleas being the mainstays.

NOTES.

Some of the finest mignonette seen in the market is grown by Wm. Sim of Cliftondale. The flowers are exceptionally clean and their sturdy growth makes them find a ready market. He is a little off crop on the violets as yet, but those that are coming to the market are of exceptional high quality. Pansies of excellent color and size are also being shipped. His sweet peas, for which he is well known, will be in crop about February 1.

At the December meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, the following officers were elected: James Methven, Readville, president; W. J. Patterson, Wollaston, vice-president; W. N. Craig, Brookline, secretary; Peter Fisher, Ellis, treasurer. The executive committee is composed of Peter Miller, W. J. Kennedy, H. H. Bartsch, W. C. Rust and Andrew Rogers.

The inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the year 1916 will be held at 11 o'clock a. m., Saturday, January 8, at Horticultural hall. The business of the meeting will be the hearing of an inaugural address by the president, the report of the board of trustees, the reports of officers, and the reports of the chairmen of the various committees.

C. E. Field, of Montello, is cutting some very fine yellow snapdragon. The flowers are extra large and are borne on spikes three feet in length. He is also cutting some nice yellow marguerites and calla lilies.

McAlpine & McDonald are receiving some fine iris and anemones from Frank P. Putnam, North Tewksbury. Mr. Putnam has been cutting this iris for the past three weeks in large quantities.

M. Penn will move his store directly across the street at number 6 Bromfield street, where he will have more room and better accommodations.

Tennessee State Floral Association.

The annual convention of the Tennessee State Floral Association, which meets in conjunction with the state fruit growers, nurserymen and beekeepers, will be held in Nashville, Tenn., January 24. Morning, afternoon and night sessions will be held. On January 25 the State Fruit Growers' Association will convene, on January 26 the state nurserymen, and on January 27 the state beekeepers.

G. M. BENTLEY, Sec'y.

RALEIGH, N. C.—The retail department of J. L. O'Quinn & Co., which was burned November 6, is now located at 230 Fayetteville street, in the busiest section of the city.

TRADE GOOD DESPITE BAD WEATHER.

The weather on New Year's day—drenching rain and heavy fog, in addition to a heavy fall of snow which was fast thawing—made delivery an almost unsolvable problem, but notwithstanding these conditions, business was exceptionally good. Pot plants were in good demand and boxes of cut flowers met with ready sale. The demand for corsages was also unusually heavy for this holiday and occasioned a stiff call for orchids, sweet peas, violets, lily of the valley and the miniature roses. Several elaborate social functions created a demand for decorations, and these with orders for funeral designs used up stock in considerable quantities.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. reports a record week in sales of flowers, decorative work and orders for funeral designs. This firm is showing some very handsome rhododendrons in pink and white and some large azaleas seen here are a feature. Charles X lilacs, the first to appear in this locality this season are also to be seen at this establishment.

A new flower shop will be opened in the near future by Shelly Aurenty in conjunction with the Aurenty candy shop. Cut flowers and plants will be supplied by the New Haven Floral Co., New Haven, Ind.

Miss Katherine Vesey, after a vacation holiday spent with her father, Judge W. J. Vesey, and relatives, has returned to her studies at Ohio Wesleyan College, Delaware, O.

BEST BUSINESS IN FIVE YEARS.

Several important society events provided lots of work for the florists on the eve of the new year and this, together with the fact that there had been quite a little doing in funeral work immediately following the Christmas trade has tended to make the last week of the year a very busy one. The members of the trade say that business is very satisfactory indeed. Trade conditions in general are better now than they have been at any time during the last five years. Following the usual course of boom towns, this town has for some time been suffering from the results of too much boosting and wild speculating in land values—things got too high and toppled over; everything seemed to fall flat and a dull and quiet period followed. Now however, a sufficient period of time has elapsed for recovery and things are on the move in every direction—money seems easier and much more plentiful, all of which points to a much better year for the florists during 1916, than has ever before been experienced; at least, that is how it looks to the writer. DORNER'S NOVELTY FOR 1916

New Salmon Pink Carnation NANCY

Color, light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. Blooms are good commercial size, three inches and over, nicely formed and have never shown a bursted calyx. Stems always hold the flower upright. The habit is a quick productive growth and as a producer it stands highest among commercial varieties. Color does not fade. Fragrance is very noticeable. Having an excellent cerise pink and an improved yellow to offer in 1917, we have decided to disseminate the variety NANCY this year (1916). For a light pink that will produce quantities of bloom and is commercially good in every respect, plant NANCY. The stock is limited and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Price, rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

GOOD BUSINESS CONTINUES.

The market continues to be good after the holidays. New Year's business was very good and in some lines, notably American Beauties, orchids, lily of the valley and violets, was much better than Christmas. Shipping business is good. Roses are in good supply and are selling well. American Beauties do not have a very active demand. Carnations, though still scarce, are in a heavier supply than at the last writing. Easter lilies, lily of the valley, violets and orchids are plentiful. Daffodils, narcissi, freesias and Roman hyacinths now comprise the list of small bulbous offerings. Other offerings include stevias, poinsettias, callas, magnificum lilies and pussy willows. Greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

Harry Baer has the sympathy of his many friends in his bereavement over the untimely death of his wife, Katherine. She was asphyxiated by natural gas fumes New Year's eve, while Mr. Baer was busy at Julius Baer's store.

The installations of city officials and municipal and superior court judges called for many flowers, when friends of the officials and judges sent them many floral offerings.

The regular meeting of the florists' society will be held Monday evening at Labold & Newburgh's, 8 West Third street. Refreshments.

C. E. Critchell was the first wholesaler in the market to offer daffodils, freesias and Roman hyacinths this winter. H.

STOCK STILL SCARCE.

Stock of all kinds is still scarce and cleans up at an early hour each day at good prices. Business has been very brisk since Christmas and the New Year demand was surprisingly good. Usually one expects dull times and cheap prices right after the holidays, but this does not seem to be the case this year for there has been a steady demand and a brisk market for all the stock that the growers could cut. Carnations especially are scarce and command very good prices. Roses are none too plentiful, and what stock is arriving, is of fine quality and is disposed of early. American Beauty roses are selling well and Mrs. Chas. Russell is also in good demand. Some exceptionally fine Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and White Killarney are seen, but there is no surplus when the day's sales are over. The weather has been ideal for growing purposes the past few days and stock should be more plentiful before the week is over. Sweet peas are arriving in larger quantities, but clean up nicely each day at prices ranging from $1.50 to $2 and in some instances as high as $2.50 per 100. Eastern violets are more plentiful and are selling good at prices from 50 cents to $1 per 100. California violets are seen in large supply at some of the stores and reached here in good shape, but are not moving any too well. Orchids are in good supply. A few jonquils, freesias and tulips are arriving, but are sold early at good prices, owing to the scarcity of other stocks. Stevias, mignonette, calendulas, larkspurs, daisies, snapdragons, pansies, bouvardias and Romans are among the offerings, but like all the other stock is selling readily. Paper White narcissi have been selling unusually well during the scarcity of carnations at $3 and $4 per 100. Lily of the valley is none too plentiful and the same holds good for lilies and callas. The retail florists have been very busy with funeral work the past week and taken all in all business has kept up splendidly and what stock is being offered is quickly sold. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

Roy Wilcox, with J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Inc., Council Bluffs, Ia., was in the city January 3. He reports a splendid holiday business with a grand clean-up in all lines. His firm is growing the new red carnation Belle Washburn on a large scale and he thinks that it is one of the best varieties introduced in recent years.

Peter Reinberg has placed an order with Weiland & Reisch for 4,000 own root plants of their new rose Champ Weiland, which will be sent out next March. Superintendent Reichling thinks that Champ Weiland is a most promising rose and is particularly impressed with the splendid color, stem and foliage. He had the opportunity to inspect it growing in the Weiland & Risch greenhouses and thought so well of it that he will devote an entire house to it next season. Orders for carnation cuttings are numerous, according to Felix Reichling, who says that the demand is starting in earlier.

Herman Rogers of the Weiland & Risch store force has returned from Detroit, Mich., where he attended the funeral of an aunt who died last week and left him considerable property in the Wolverine city. Mr. Rogers is well pleased with Detroit and thinks that it is an ideal flower city.

George Perdikas entertained the employes of his two retail stores with a dinner at the Kuntz-Remmler restaurant on New Year's eve, when every one present had a most enjoyable time. After the feast was over they were all conveyed to their home in a large automobile engaged especially for the occasion. John Propps, who was invited, did not show up, but was excused when it was heard later that he was kidnapped on his way down.

A. Vanderpoel, 4013 Colorado avenue, attended the funeral of Mrs. Annie Vanderpoel, January 4, a relative, who was burned to death December 31, when she dropped a match on some picture frames which she had just painted with banana oil, and instantly caught fire. She suffered great agony for almost 24 hours and the only part of her body that was not scorched was her face, which was not scarred in the least.

John Enders, with Poehlmann Bros. Co., has been obliged to lay off for a few days this week, owing to blood poisoning which set in as a result of handling roses, so Otto W. Frese, who looks after the office end, is giving the boys a lift on the floor during his absence. John Poehlmann, Sr., is still confined to his home and it will be several weeks yet before he will be able to return to the store.

Reinhold Schiller, who is in charge at Schiller's down-town store, is well pleased with the holiday business which exceeded all expectations and which was handled by all new help. Everything went along without a hitch under his able management and a grand clean-up was experienced.

Bassett & Washburn are in good crop with roses and are starting to cut a fair supply of fancy sweet peas. Mr. Washburn is well pleased with the way business is keeping up and there is no question but what the sales in January will run considerably ahead of those of the same month last year.

Peter Olsem of Pyfer & Olsem reports a splendid holiday trade at their Wilmette retail store, which kept eight salesmen on the jump filling the many orders that were received. A temporary store was opened to handle the trade and most of the stock sold came from their own greenhouses.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. received a shipment of 20,000 California violets this week which reached here in exceptionally good condition. Trade continues to be very brisk at this establishment, and a good supply of freesias is now included in the daily shipments.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a good supply of roses which are in brisk demand and clean up early. Manager Schupp expects to see a scarcity of stock for several weeks to come, especially as far as roses and carnations are concerned.

A 250-H. P. Kroeschell fire and water tube steam boiler is being installed for the new range of greenhouses to be erected for the L. A. Budlong Co. These houses, it is said, will be 600 feet in length and used to produce cut flowers.

Paul Klingsporn is back on duty at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association store after being laid up for several days with a severe cold. He says that their sales for last December show an increase of 100 per cent over 1914.

George Ball of Glen Ellyn is cutting a fair amount of fancy sweet peas which he is consigning to Kyle & Foerster. Mr. Ball has placed an order for a new Studebaker Six, which will be delivered about April.

Chas. Rogers, manager of the Washington Flower Market, says that his Christmas trade was very good, notwithstanding the high prices of cut flowers which were his principal sellers.

The regular meeting of the florists' club will be held at the Hotel Morrison, Thursday evening, January 6, at eight p. m. Installation of officers will take place at this meeting.

George Pandell, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., was a visitor to the market this week. He says that his holiday trade was the best ever, with roses the principal sellers.

The George Wittbold Co. will close its North Clark street store, after which all the business will be handled at the Buckingham place establishment.

A. J. Stahelin, of Redford, Mich., visited the Weiland & Risch greenhouses January 2 for the purpose of inspecting their new pink rose, Champ Weiland.

Stielow Bros. of Niles Center have placed an order with Kroeschell Bros. Co. for a new fire and water tube high pressure steam boiler.

George Wienhoeber has added a new Studebaker car to his delivery system.

Mrs. Kindler and son Curtis, of the Raedlein Basket Co. have been on the sick list for several days, having contracted a severe cold during the holiday business, which was a record-breaker as far as sales were concerned. Gustav Raedlein managed to weather the gale and kept shop during their absence.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a good supply of fancy White Killarney roses, which are cleaning up quickly each day owing to the large amount of funeral work there is throughout the country. This firm has a large quantity of carnation cuttings in the sand and will, as usual, have a large supply to offer this season.

H. C. Wullbrandt, 5315 West Madison street, had a splendid Christmas and New Year business with a satisfactory increase in sales over 1914. Mr. Wullbrandt has been doing a good part of his own delivery during the illness of his regular assistant, who is on the sick list.

Wm. Kotsonis, proprietor of the store known as the White House Florist, 140 South Wabash avenue, is enthusiastic over his holiday business, which was the best ever. He is ably assisted at the store by Mrs. Kotsonis, who is a very clever saleslady and designer.

William Homburg has joined the Percy Jones store force, starting Monday, January 3. This house is going to make 1916 the best year in the history of the firm and is losing no time or effort in starting to do so.

Stewart & Berls, 3323 West North avenue, filled an order January 1 for the Justice Chapter of the Eastern Star for 21 artistically arranged baskets of cut flowers, principally roses and carnations.

U S E Budlong's Blue Ribbon Valley.

Miss Grages of the Zech & Mann office force attended the funeral of both of her grandfathers this week, one, January 1, and the other, January 3.

Rudolph Kurowski says that the John C. Moninger Co. booked three local orders for greenhouses as the result of the flower show held in the Coliseum in November.

Will Graham, of Philadelphia, Pa., has accepted a position with the Fleischman Floral Co.

THE SIGN OF QUALITY

Weiland & Risch are more than satisfied with the number of orders that they have booked for their new pink rose Champ Weiland for March delivery and if the demand keeps up the way it has been the past month they will soon be hanging out the sold out sign.

Graff & Dresel, 2135 Clybourn avenue, who are operating the old Sam Pearce place, report a brisk demand for funeral work. They are doing a splendid business at their temporary quarters where they expect to be located at least another year.

Robert Northam, George Reinberg's manager, says that he never saw such a tight market after Christmas as there was last week when all available stock sold quickly at whatever prices the dealer was inclined to ask.

Henry Hilmers, 1117 East Forty-seventh street, reports a very satisfactory holiday business. Mr. Hilmers, whose family is in Germany, says he wishes the war was over as he is anxious to joint them there.

Chris Pederson, 58 East Randolph street, reports a splendid Christmas and New Year trade. He is well pleased with his present location and has been quite busy with funeral work of late.

Buchbinder Bros. will furnish the entire set of fixtures including the refrigerator for the new store that Henry M. Hirsch will open at 37 East Van Buren street, February 1.

Harry C. Rowe, whose store was destroyed in the Wabash avenue fire last week, was fully covered by insurance and expects to open up in a new location soon.

Joseph Kohout grows roses exclusively at his range in Libertyville and is now in splendid crop with Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Ophelia.

The George Wittbold Co. had an unusually brisk day in their retail department, January 2, when orders were filled for 20 different funerals.

C. W. Johnson, of the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, says his carnations, including all colors, averaged nine cents Christmas week.

E. C. Pruner, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., has disappeared again, which means that he has started out after the 1916 orders.

George Manos, the Union Depot florist, reports the best Christmas and New Year trade he ever had with a satisfactory cleanup in all lines.

Mrs. J. A. Evans, of Richmond, Ind., who has been at the Mercy hospital for an appendicitis operation, returned to her home this week.

George Mohn, who has been with George Wienhoeber the past year, returned to his old position at Vaughan's Seed Store this week.

Frank Hagen is back on the job at George Reinberg's store after a nine-day illness, during which time he lost 14 pounds in weight.

Robert C. Dunkelberger, representing C. A. Boyle, red winter berry dealer at Galien, Mich., called on the trade here this week.

The E. C. Amling Co. offered the first tulips of the season this week, which came from the new Sam Pearce greenhouses.

George Walther, 6310 Normal avenue, says that his three best sellers in roses are Ophelia, Sunburst and Killarney.

Daniel Branch, 313 East Fifty-first street, has returned from Minneapolis, where he attended the funeral of a sister.

S. Malcher, 310 West Division street, has had a good season with a splendid holiday demand for plants.

Miller & Musser are handling a good supply of choice sweet peas from the Frank Felke greenhouses.

R. P. Atwell, of Fort Dodge, Ia., was in the city on business December 31.

MARKET CLEANS OF DAILY.

The market during the past week has been cleaning up daily and prices were no object if the stock was in sight. Dark weather and the large cut at Christmas caused a shortage in all stocks and even Paper Whites took a jump to four cents with a complete cleanup on New Year's eve. Roses sold at from eight to 20 cents, carnations went as high as 10 cents, and single home grown violets at $2.50 per 100 were short of the demand.

NOTES.

Oscar Amundson has installed two telephones which can only be used for incoming calls, and finds them a paying proposition, as anyone calling is not told that the wire is "busy" as is often the case in a flower shop where the ladies like to visit over the wire with their friends, especially if it is a "free phone."

Hugh Will regrets that he could not manufacture stock fast enough to satisfy his trade. He says he feeds his plants enough and even talks to them, but next year will have more of them.

The next meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association will be held at the store of Holm & Olson, St. Paul, Tuesday, January 11, at 8 p. m.

Rice Bros. were sold out before the doors opened with the largest amount of orders to fill in the history of their business.

Funerals of several persons of prominence caused a demand for much choice stock during the last few days. Oscar Swanson, it is reported, closed early December 31, being unable to secure any more choice stock.

The L. S. Donaldson Co. had a general clean up. Not a flower was left. All florists report an exceptionally heavy New Year trade.

HALF SUPPLY AND TOP PRICES.

The feature of the business of the past week was the scarcity of flowers. Although great preparations had been made to have a full supply for Christmas, there were none too many, even for the great demand, and with everything cut clean, the meager shipments that followed were very small indeed and did not begin to meet the demands of this holiday week. There was not a great deal doing, even at that, but the usual extra demand developed for the New Year, and the way in which it was supplied was very unsatisfactory. There is not much heard about the surplus, of late. The greenhouse construction men are burning the midnight oil; there are rumors of some large orders booked or about to be, for extensive glass coverings of certain acreages of sunny soil, that next winter will be blossoming out in the effort to keep the market supplied. Much of the stock seen the past week was not fit to cut—just sent in in answer to the appeals for something. Bad business this—better cut when ready, not before. Poinsettias were in great demand the past week; the stock grown this season was about 25% shy of the requirements. Already there is a scurrying for the plants cut off for stock for next season. A rose that has shown up well the past week is the Killarney Brilliant. It has substance and a splendid color. Russell has also been at her best. Some superb Hadley, that sold as high as 40 cents each, were a feature of this shy market. Carnations were scarce, as were violets; in fact, nearly everything was only in half supply and brought top prices.

CLUB MEETING.

The January meeting of the florists' club was fairly well attended, the attraction being the debate, "Is the Grower or His Agent Entitled to Sell at Wholesale and Retail?" W. H. Taplin was for and Arthur A. Niessen against such practices. Mr. Taplin believed that the grower or dealer was entitled to all there was to be gotten out of the business, every avenue of trade being legitimate, and success depending only on capacity. Mr. Niessen thought a wholesaler or grower who catered for the wholesale market was much better off to confine his efforts to that market; the wholesale commission man had brought the business up to its present high level and he felt sure that if wholesalers would make a bid or try to do a retail business the results would be chaos. The members did not get enthused about the subject, and after the debate, with very few voting, decided in the affirmative. Six new members were elected and 11 proposed for action in February. Posters and display cards for advertising the national flower show were displayed by Mr. Therikildson. They are very effective and beautiful.

NOTES.

Myers & Samtman are making a run on the Polyantha roses. They find a good demand for flowers of this miniature type. Over 50 sorts are having a tryout with them. A very pretty pink of the baby rambler type looks good and is in demand in the stores.

Another good man is going west. Albert Cartledge, late buyer for the firm of Pennock Bros., has resigned his position and will try the Chicago atmosphere for a while. Here is an opportunity for a retail establishment to secure a competent assistant.

Joseph Heacock is very much pleased with the business done by his company, stating that the volume of trade since things started up in the fall has been much greater than they have ever experienced.

John McIntyre, when he sold his wholesale business to Walter Davis, had the western bee buzzing in his bonnet, but has managed to shake it off and is now buyer for the Habermehl force.

NORMAL BUSINESS FOLLOWS CHRISTMAS.

While there was considerable New Year's business in both plants and cut flowers, we cannot say that it was much above the ordinary for a good Saturday. Some of the retailers had a fair business in plants, due largely to the scarcity and high prices of cut flowers, for cut flowers are both scarce and high, and prevailing weather conditions give little promise of immediate improvement. However, we are not finding fault, as a wise man once remarked: "It's a condition, not a theory, that confronts us." In roses, the shorter grades of stock are much in demand and it is a real hardship to some of the retailers that they are so scarce and high. We write this to dispel the idea that everybody in the business is getting rich. There are disappointments, just as there always have been and always will be.

January 3.—The supply of stock is light, and it is no secret that some of the buyers are a little sore on the prices they are paying. However, we comfort them by the assurance that "Old Sol" is coming around and that flowers will be more plentiful in a short time. As a final word, we are pleased to state, that regardless of what may come from other quarters, the growers who ship to this city, and the wholesalers who handle their stock, seemed to us to do the best they could under prevailing conditions. As a rule, the stock arrived in good condition. If prices were high it was because stock was not plentiful. It is a fallacy to blame a grower or a wholesaler for weather conditions. It is also a fallacy to blame an American citizen of German descent for the torpedoing of steamers in the Mediterranean Sea.

NOTES.

A calendar, particularly the first one that arrives, is very welcome and useful. Now comes Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., with the first calendar for 1916. Beside being a first rate calendar, it carries on its face some very interesting and useful information about Hammond's Paint and Slug Shot Works, but that is not all. Mr. Hammond quotes General Sherman's famous saying: "War is Hell." That saying may be old, but it is as true today as when it was first uttered. He adds: "The cry of Christianity was, 'On earth peace and good will toward men.'"

Chairman Phil Kessler of the house committee of the New York Florists' Club, gives us this final word. For the meeting on January 10 there will be an array of entertainers that might put Proctor's or Daly's to blush. Look at the program: Wm. Johnson, banjo and guitar; Phil Fisher, guitar; David Manning, violin; Harris Beauchere, mandolin, assisted by Walter Robinson, buck and wing dancer, and W. Schiowsky, baritone. There will also be some tempting eatables and drinkables.

N. Christatos, Sixth avenue and 58th street, who has been in business for 25 years, reports that the past was the best Christmas he has had in all that time. As his store is always well stocked, he is sure to have business.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the Grand Opera House building, Eighth avenue and 23d street, on the evening of January 10. As this will be inauguration night, there will doubtless be a large attendance.

Relating to a fire in the range of Peter Beuerline, Elmhurst, L. I., mentioned in our last issue, we were slightly in error. The facts are that the ends of two houses were burned out and the heat and smoke practically destroyed about 15,000 paper whites and other narcissi. He had a fine stock of carnations that were not injured. He has a large stock of a cerise pink sport of Enchantress that looks promising.

At the range of John Miesem, Elmhurst, we have noticed a great stock of lilies coming on. He is one of the leading lily growers who ships to this market.

One of our able writers is in error as to the location of C. W. Scott. He is not in Chambers street, but occupies luxurious quarters in the Woolworth building, Broadway and Barclay street.

William P. Ford, who always has something original, is now handling fine stocks of white lilac and Spanish iris.

UNUSUALLY BUSY HOLIDAY SEASON.

The past two weeks have been of unusual activity with the florists. The entire month of December from our side has been a very busy one. Social functions for debutantes and brides kept many working extra hours to do the necessary work, and then Christmas business, which it is safe to say was never before as good as it was this year. Trade, it is believed, was fully 20 per cent better than last year. The wave of prosperity being enjoyed by all in this country seemed to let the coin of the realm fall the florists' way, and all who purchased seemed imbued with the spirit of generosity this year. The supply of flowers was equal to all demands, with the exception of carnations, red roses (American Beauties excepted) and snapdragons. All varieties of roses were plentiful and of very good quality. Ophelia, Shawyer, Stanley and Killarney were fine. American Beauties never sold as well as this year, and at from $12 to $18 per dozen. The other varieties brought from $3 to $6 per dozen. Violets, orchids, gardenias and freesias in different arrangements, such as corsages and other bouquets sold well. Sweetheart roses were also in great demand. Good plants sold well and Buffalo had a fine lot of poinsettias, single and in pans. Azaleas, begonias, fine heather, ardisias, cyclamens and primrose basket arrangements and all plants handsomely trimmed were great sellers this year and exceeded last year.

NOTES.

The plant proposition is now a great factor in the flower business, more so with those who have greenhouses in the city and near the residence section. The Wm. Scott Co., Inc., L. H. Neu-beck and S. A. Anderson are very much favored by being in those locations. The display of plants in baskets, which is quite a feature with S. A. Anderson, was more beautiful this year than ever before. The trimming of the basket, the plant, and its general effect was more artistic than in other years. Ardisias and azaleas, with mats and ribbons, were just right and not over done. His immense stock was completely sold out by Christmas eve.

The changing of the municipal affairs in Buffalo to a commission form of government ushered in the New Year with an abundance of orders for the new councilmen, about 9:30 on New Year's day. The city hall looked like a flower store and the outside was lined with the automobiles of the Wm. Scott Co., Inc., Chas. Schoenhut, W. J. Palmer & Son, S. A. Anderson and L. H. Neubeck, showing that all were getting a share of the orders going to the new city officials.

20 Years' Experience.

Buffalo this year bid the old year a lively adieu and ushered in the new in a royal way. The Iroquois, Lafayette and Statler hotels were elaborately trimmed and every table decorated with choice flowers, which also helped the florists. Many private tables were very elaborately decorated. The clubs were also used by several parties, which called for decorations this year as never before. Taking it from all points of view the florists had their share and Buffalo did herself proud.
 Two or three receptions between Tuesday and Friday preceding Christmas kept W. J. Palmer & Son and S.
 A. Anderson very busy in addition to their usual holiday trade.
 Following the last Christmas order was funeral work. The death of three prominent people, with funerals on Sunday, kept all busy after the Christmas rush.

As predicted the Christmas trade was brisk, to say the least. Many of the florists while hoping for good business, were doubtful, yet there were others who were optimistic. The resulting trade exceeded their expectations. The stock of azaleas was low, but there were plenty of cyclamens, which cleaned up nicely. Poinsettias were much in evidence as were carnations. Roses were plentiful and everything went at good prices. The best of it is, it looks as if business was going to continue good.

NOTES.

Albert Knopf of the Redondo Floral Co. was laid up with la grippe during Christmas week, making extra work for the balance of the force. This company will soon be located at 218 West Seventh street, in the heart of the shopping district, where they expect to build up a still larger trade.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldensen are showing some especially fine Lady Roses. They are among the finest reds on the market. This firm reports a big Christmas trade.

At this writing the nearby mountains are white with snow, giving strong evidence that out-door roses and other flowers will soon receive a setback.

F. Lichtenburg, 324 West Sixth street had a big holiday trade, and since Christmas is keeping a large force working on funeral designs.

O. C. Saake is showing some fine

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., President; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., First Vice-President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer, Thirty-fourth annual convention, June, 1916.

TRADE flower seed business is quite active.

CALIFORNIA was favored with liberal rains last week.

ONION SEED demand from truckers is starting briskly.

AN asking price of $14 per bushel for Refugee wax beans is reported.

THERE has been a sharp advance in the last week on potatoes and big onions.

VISITED CHICAGO: Richard C. McGill, of the McGill Seed Growers' Co., San Francisco, Calif.

THE mild weather, January thaw, of the past week has been bad for onion sets in storage at Chicago.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, January 5, were as follows: Timothy, $6 to $8 per 100 pounds.

THE 1916 catalogue of Galloway Bros. & Co., Waterloo, Ia., is notable for two and three color process work on many pages of the book.

GAFFNEY, S. C.—The Kirby Seed Co. has been organized with a capital stock of $10,000. The directors are A. B. Kirby, D. C. Ross and Maynard Smyth.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The partnership between John H. W. Field and E. Milton Tononi of the Bay Counties Seed Co. has been dissolved, the former retiring from the firm.

THE first batch of seed catalogues show a great diversity of opinion as to the value of bean and onion seed. Some onion prices are found to be far below the present wholesale values.

ATLANTIC, IA.—The Nishna Valley Seed Co. has incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are D. W. Thayer and F. E. Tharn of Shenandoah and J. W. Cuykendall of Atlantic.

KEOKUK, IA.—The office, elevator and warehouse of the Gate City Seed Co. were totally destroyed by fire December 28. The loss is estimated at $26,700 by A. M. Davidson, president of the company.

W. W. BARNARD, president of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, who has been confined to the hospital for some time, is said to be improving so that he expects to be able to leave for California about the middle of the month.

SNOW is reported as having fallen December 29 at San Bernardino, Riverside, Redlands and other California points for the first time in 10 years, the depth varying from one to five inches. No serious damage is expected to result from this cold wave, however.

Vegetable Nomenclature.

A meeting of the joint committee on vegetable nomenclature of the American Seed Trade Association and the Vegetable Growers' Association of America was held at the horticultural building of the Ohio State University, Columbus, O., December 30. There were present C. N. Keeney, H. G. Hastings, L. H. Vaughan, of the American Seed Trade Association; Prof. Durst of the University of Illinois, Prof. Johnson of the Virginia Experiment Station, and Prof. Shumacher, of the United States Department of Agriculture. The question of reducing the immense number of varieties of vegetable synonyms was discussed and recommendations on methods of procedure were suggested, to be reported to the various organizations. Some 24 experiment stations have offered their services in testing varieties of vegetables to standardize and reduce confusion resulting from the present multiplicity of names.

European Conditions.

A well informed European seedsman in a letter to an American friend, referring to conditions in Europe, dated November 23, has the following:

"From what information I can obtain from southern France trade conditions are very bad there. Several growers are arrested and their books confiscated by the authorities. Much of the work has to be done by women and children who naturally have no experience whatever and you can imagine yourself that seeds which come from there under such conditions can not be reliable. Our firm contracts annually among other items for a large quantity of onion in southern France and furnishes the stock-seed. The man down there, who controls our growers is also in the war and I do not know yet, if I can get a single grain of seed out of that country, but I doubt it. Conditions are very trying here and one hardly knows what to do. On top of these troubles we have to contend with or steer around all sorts of export regulations, which practically seem to be inaugurated to bring trade over here to a standstill. We surely get our share of the war. With regard to prices in flower seeds I hardly know what to quote. Our stock is very much reduced and I can not guarantee delivery from one day to another."

Cunningham Acquires Seed Store.

J. H. Cunningham, the well known florist, of Delaware, O. has purchased the J. C. Cox seed business, the deal becoming effective the first of the new year. Mr. Cunningham will continue the seed business in the same place on West Winter street and in addition will add a line of cut flowers. Miss Jennie Cox will later open at her residence, 100 North Sandusky street, with her line of cards and small gifts. For the present she will take a much needed rest. With this transfer the name of another of the long-established business enterprises of the city will be changed. The J. C. Cox Seed Store has been known to residents of Delaware and Delaware county for over a quarter of a century. Mr. Cox established the business 26 years ago and at his death 10 years later, his daughter, Miss Jennie Cox, continued the business with great success, and at this time she desires to express her appreciation of the splendid patronage she has received, and bespeaks for Mr. Cunningham its continuance with him.

Burbank Difficulties.

Luther Burbank, December 29, filed an action against the Luther Burbank Company, of San Francisco, for the collection of two notes aggregating $9,775 and has notified the concern that he has canceled the contract by the terms of which it was given the exclusive right to sell his products; also that it must not use his name in connection with its transactions. The company has been doing business from its offices at 301 Market street. W. F. Pitts, newly selected manager of the firm, says unless Burbank accepts new terms that will be offered the company will be forced into liquidation, but he hopes to be able to arrange a settlement. Stockholders have been assessed $2.50 a share for the purpose of raising the money with which to pay Burbank. According to Otto Irving Wise, attorney for Burbank, the latter is the victim of stock pirates. Burbank has no interest in the concern and holds no stock. According to terms of an agreement detailed by Wise the company agreed to pay Burbank $300,000, of which $30,000 was to be paid down and the remainder at $15,000 a year in exchange for the exclusive right to sell his productions. They paid him, says Wise, $30,000, but no more, and after waiting a year he has brought an action and is preparing another for $15,000 which will be filed soon.

Directors of the Luther Burbank Company are W. F. Pitts, J. R. Edwards, George U. Hind, of Hind, Rolph & Co.; Harrison B. Harrison, an attorney of Oakland; Dr. E. J. Everand, of Oakland; Dr. J. H. McLeod, of Santa Rosa; R. J. Tyson, of the Seaboard National bank; M. J. Brandenstein and I. W. Hellman are stockholders.

Garner Smith, one of the stockholders, said he had put all his earnings from selling stock back into the concern and $15,000 additional. Smith says Burbank received $25,000 in cash and $75,000 in stock, some of which he used in paying debts. He says the trouble is due to mismanagement.

Pitts says last year's business totaled $98,000 and that he had planned by strict economy to straighten things out and had just begun to see his way clear.

Louis Vilmorin.

Louis L. de Vilmorin, senior midshipman of the French navy, has just been appointed Chevalier of the Legion of Honour. He has been at the French front since the beginning of the war, commanding a section of auto-guns, and was awarded the war cross in December, 1914. The French official journal says that he has repeatedly and particularly drawn the attention of his superior officers and contributed largely to the success of various military operations. L. L. de Vilmorin is the third of the five Vilmorin brothers now at the front.—Horticultural Advertiser.

Northrup, King & Co. Employes' Dinner.

A New Year's dinner was given at the Minneapolis Athletic Club, Tuesday evening, December 28, by Northrup, King & Co., to their sales force and to heads of departments. The principal event of the evening was the awarding of substantial cash prizes in a contest which has been conducted among the salesmen the last six months. First prize was won by Harold O'Brien, second prize by E. F. Wright, third prize by W. C. Bracken. Twenty-six were present. C. C. Massie was toastmaster and several spoke informally.

California Versus Teneriffe Onion.

New York, June 4.—Ever since Bermuda adopted the use of onion seed from the island of Teneriffe, that little island has furnished the bulk of the seed not only for Bermuda, but for the big crops grown in Texas. Half a century ago Bermuda experimented for years on onion seed from every section to find that which could be depended upon each year and finally adopted that from Teneriffe. That little island, which is one of the Canaries, just off the west coast of Africa, has done little else but grow onion seed, especially for the last 10 years. When the first early onions were grown in Texas, the seed came from Teneriffe. Upon the selection of Roy Campbell, as sales manager for the Southern Truck Growers' Association, he went to Teneriffe and contracted for seed for the association for a number of years. It now looks as though the onion growers of the country would not be compelled to depend upon Teneriffe for their seed, as California has demonstrated that it can grow an onion seed which is as true to name and production as that from Teneriffe. In former years, before the contract of the Southern Truck Growers' Association was made with onion seed growers in Teneriffe, the price ran as high as $6 to $8 per lb. This made a big expense for the grower, especially those who planted extensively. With Campbell's contracts for the association, the average price was but a little over $1.50 per lb.

In the Coachella valley of California, all of which is below sea level, experiments were begun over five years ago to produce onion seed for local use. Aggeler & Musser, one of the largest seed houses on the coast, at Los Angeles in 1910 purchased a lot of onions for seed purposes, from which they selected bulbs, discarding all that was off color, and that year grew 1,000 pounds of good seed. All this was sold to California growers, who were aware that this firm had grown the seed and that it was of pure quality. Ever since then, this firm has caused to be grown in the Coachella valley sufficient seed to supply the California trade. For some reason it was at first averse to sending seed into Texas, because it was not sure that it would produce as it did in California. However, a year ago a representative of the firm went to the Texas onion fields and sold direct to the growers. John R. Davis, former president of the Southern Texas Truck Growers' Association, and one of the largest individual growers in the Laredo districts, purchased 600 pounds of the California seed, refusing, however, to pay for the seed until it was proven that it would produce as well as the Teneriffe seed.

Mr Davis promised to let The News know how the seed produced, but thus far has failed to make a direct report. However, Aggeler & Musser report to The News that the bill has been paid, and that in addition to Mr. Davis, the firm had orders from nearly every grower in Texas who had used the California seed. One grower took 1,500 pounds and others from 25 to 50 pounds each. Others promised to place orders for this seed, but the firm informs The News all of them have not done so. The seed firm grows both crystal wax and the yellows. This year it has more onion seed than it ever had before and it is now placing them with onion growers. In addition to this it is asking the onion growers for orders for the following year, so that the firm can supply itself with sufficient bulbs. This they found impossible to do last year, as the extent of their business was much greater than was expected at the time the bulbs were purchased for seed. The onions for seed purposes must be selected carefully, and for that reason they cost much above the ordinary run.

If onion seed can be grown in California that will produce as good as the Teneriffe seed, it will be a great saving to the growers of the United States. A number of orders for the California seed have been placed for the Imperial valley for 1916, as the yield in that valley this year from the California seed was good. John R. Davis told a representative of The News that if California seed proved what was claimed, he would plant it exclusively for next year's crop. Evidently Mr. Davis has made such a purchase.—The Produce News, June 5, 1915.

HELENA, MONT.—The Bitter Root Valley Irrigation Co., a Montana corporation, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the federal district court here January 3. The failure is said to be the largest in the history of the state with liabilities at $5,326,448.94 and assets $2,392,603.57.

The Chinese Buddleias.

The flowers are still in good condition on the different forms of Buddleia Davidii or, to use its more common name, B. variabilis. This plant has one-sided, pointed, many-flowered clusters which curve downward from arching stems and are thickly covered with small, blue-purple, fragrant flowers. In some of the forms of this plant are found perhaps the most beautiful of all summer and autumn flowering shrubs, and although only recently brought to the United States and Europe by Wilson, they are already largely planted in this country where they have received the name of summer lilacs. Here at the north, Buddleia Davidii is not perfectly hardy, and the stems are killed to the ground by cold, but new stems spring up and as the flower-clusters are produced at the ends of branches of the year this severe pruning improves the flowers. Few plants in their season are better suited to supply cut flowers, and for this purpose as well as for garden decoration this buddleia in its various forms has proved one of the most useful shrubs of recent discovery.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Pot Pourri Rose Garden.

The pot pourri rose garden, one of the features of the San Diego exposition, was created for two purposes—a hospitality for all rose hungry persons, and the making of pot pourri. Thousands of persons have visited the garden and to each was given a rose. To the majority of the visitors roses were evidently seldom seen outside of greenhouses and florists' shops and the perfection of the rose blooms growing in this garden in such profusion all the year round was a delight and a memory not soon to be forgotten. Then the fragrant pot pourri in the making was interesting, made from fresh blooms of the roses, with a little blend of orange flowers, lemon verbena and other sweet smelling flowers and herbs of California. Many messages of appreciation came back to Mrs. Jessie C. Knox, originator of the pot pourri rose garden and the competitive rose exhibit at the San Diego, Calif., exposition, from visitors who had returned to their homes, but who had not forgotten the "lady of the rose garden" and her hospitality.

Mrs. Knox came from Minneapolis, Minn., a year before the opening of the exposition with the plans for the rose garden and the president and directors of the exposition heartily approved the idea and five acres of ground within the exposition and free water was offered her. Unfortunately there has been but a fraction of the money expended that was needed for such a garden, but California sunshine and San Diego climate have been abundant, so the roses have been plentiful and the garden now faces a brighter prospect during the continuance of the exposition in 1916. Mrs. Knox is seeking with renewed efforts, the means to make the pot pourri rose garden not only the joy of the masses but one that will merit the approval of rose connoisseurs as well.

In the competitive rose exhibit in the garden the first prize was awarded to the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., who staged a magnificent display of 250 hybrid tea roses in five varieties.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO., 452 W. ERIE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Rochester, N. Y.

Christmas trade was excellent and very much better than last year. There was an abundance of good stock, with the exception of roses and carnations which ran short the last day. Roses were much in demand and American Beauties were very popular. There was a big call for orchids and lily of the valley. Red carnations were especially scarce and the best ones brought $8 per 100. There were large quantities of Harrisii lilies on the market. Violets retailed at $1.50 per 100, but the demand was light. Poinsettias, begonias, primulas and cyclamens were plentiful and sold well. Jerusalem cherries, ardisias and zinnias also sold out clean. All of the retail shops had some artificial stock such as poppies, cyclamens, statice, etc., and disposed of most of it. Most of the demand, however, was for natural flowers. Asparagus, hardy ferns and galax were all plentiful.

NOTES.

The Rochester Floral Co. has a very attractive window display consisting of 12 stairs representing the months of the year, arranged with miniature French bouquets of flowers in season during the respective months. Miniature signs also call attention to events taking place during the year, such as Christmas, Easter, June weddings, Mothers' day, etc. It is a very clever idea and attracts much attention.

Miss Lillian Wheeler, who has been confined to her home by primrose poisoning, is much improved.

H. E. Wilson reports an excellent Christmas trade. CHESTER.

Lincoln, Neb.

The Griswold Seed Co. is in the hands of a receiver and it is reported that the business will probably be closed in the near future. The C. H. Frey Co. has quite a planting of Carnation Nebraska at the Griswold greenhouses which will have to be saved and it is understood that the greenhouses and retail store may be taken over by the C. H. Frey Co.

C. H. Frey Co. is busy shipping Carnation Nebraska rotted cuttings, many thousands having been shipped to date, and they are going as fast as they can be rooted.

Chapin Bros., Frey & Frey, C. B. Keller and the C. H. Frey Co. had large stocks of blooming plants of high quality and all report the best trade ever.

Business has been the best ever this fall and winter and prospects look very bright for the future. C. H. F.

FRANKLIN, PA.—The Bell Floral Co. has applied for a charter of incorporation.

The 1915 Christmas demand will go down in history of the trade here as one of the best ever. The weather was fine until noon on Christmas day, when it started snowing, which later turned to rain, stopping sales to a certain extent and making delivery very difficult, but all orders were handled by 2 p. m., when all the florists closed for the day.

NOTES.

The Terre Haute Rose & Carnation
Co. had fine crops of roses and carnations which found ready sale.

Cowan Bros. & Co. kept the delivery wagons busy for three days and report a cleanup in all lines.

Heinl & Weber sold 1,100 cut poinsettias and report Christmas business as very satisfactory.

Fred Wunker & Sons had a fine line of wreaths and baskets and sold out completely.

John G. Heinl & Son report the best Christmas trade in the history of the firm.

Henry Graham says business at his establishment was excellent.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY

St. Louis Meeting, January 26-27.

The twenty-fifth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society will be held at St. Louis, Mo., January 26-27, 1916. Since the organization of the American Carnation Society its annual meetings and exhibitions have been looked forward to, not only by carnation growers, but by others not so directly interested in the culture of the carnation, as the big event of the year, particularly from the standpoint of getting together and exchanging each other's cultural experiences. The St. Louis meeting will be no exception to this rule. Everyone wishing to get in touch with the live wires of the trade will do well to be on hand in St. Louis at the opening of the meeting, January 26.

It is expected that all the novelties in carnations being sent out this year will be on exhibition. We note in the schedule of premiums, a page advertisement devoted to each of six novelties making strong claims and giving glowing descriptions of every one of them. Carnation growers will want to see these varieties on exhibition at their best. Some of them are already well known in their native localities, having been shown at the local shows, but they will need the endorsement of the A. C. S. members at their annual exhibition to give them national favor. Some of the varieties received the endorsement of the judges at the last annual exhibition, the variety, Belle Washburn, being awarded the S. A. F. medal at Buffalo. Those who have seen this variety many times know it to be a fine acquisition to the red carnations and it was the top notch variety in Chicago at Christmas, 1915. It is being sent out by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago.

Aviator is another fine red variety claimed by its disseminators to be a wonder in productiveness; the color is exceptionally fine, and those who have seen it growing speak highly of its possibilities as a commercial variety. It is being sent out by the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.

Nebraska, another promising red variety, which has received the endorsement of several different sets of judges, after being shipped a long way from home to the exhibition. It is being disseminated by the C. H. Frey Co., Lincoln, Neb.

Red Wing is a fine, bright red or scarlet variety of good form. The judges at the Buffalo exhibition of the American Carnation Society scored it high enough to be awarded a certificate of merit. Its sponsor claims it to be a variety of great productiveness. It is being sent out by William A. Dawson, Willimantic, Conn.

Morning Glow, awarded a certificate at the American Carnation Society's exhibition, Buffalo, 1915, is a novelty in color among pink carnations, very pleasing and decorative, and a great favorite in Boston. It is being sent out by Edward Winkler, Wakefield, Mass.

Miss Theo, another Massachusetts variety, is described as true rose pink of good form. This variety the writer has not had the pleasure of seeing, but the disseminators claim it is a commercial acquisition. It is being sent out by Littlefield & Wyman, North Abington, Mass.

Alice Coombs, one of the leading light pink carnations shown at Buffalo, undoubtedly will be in fine form at St. Louis. It is being grown by The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., as well as in the east.

Nancy is F. Dorner & Sons Co.'s novelty for 1916. The color is described as a light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. We recognize this as one of the varieties Dorner & Sons Co. have shown under number on different occasions. At the novelty night exhibition of the Chicago Florists' Club, January, 1915, it was thought a great deal of by those present. It is being sent out by F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind.

Cottage Maid, a sport of the variety Mrs. C. W. Ward, is a beautiful flesh pink, and the growers who have been successful with the variety Mrs. C. W. Ward will want to add its light pink sport to their list, especially when we consider that it comes from one of the best keeping varieties among carnations. It is to be sent out in 1917 by the Cottage Gardens Co., Inc., Queens, N. Y.

Laura Weber, a large flower of salmon pink, was shown in fine shape at the Cleveland show. It is a big, bold flower on long stiff stem, and a very promising high grade variety. The disseminators are Guttman & Raynor, Inc., New York.

There are a number of other novelties ready for dissemination which have not been so extensively exploited that will be seen at this exhibition and anyone having a seedling carnation should enter it and attend the meeting. Even if it be only to make a comparison between the stock on exhibition and one's own efforts it is certainly worth while.

Pink Sensation, Good Cheer, Alice and Mrs. C. E. Akehurst were the prominent novelties disseminated in 1915. They will be on exhibition at St. Louis for the visitors to pass further judgment on. The varieties Alice and Good Cheer appear to be doing extra well in many places and are making friends among the growers, owing to their commercial qualities, consequently they will be planted in larger numbers another season.

Every grower of carnations who possibly can should make an effort to go to St. Louis, take along a bunch of carnations, become a member of the American Carnation Society and help make it a success.

A few pointers on preparing the flowers for exhibition may be of some help to intending exhibitors. It should be borne in mind that while size of flower counts for a great deal according to the scale of points, it is not the only requisite—size must be accompanied by quality of color and freshness or substance, hence over-ripe or over-fed flowers do not stand much of a show. The essential qualities needed to carry a vase of flowers to the top are—good color, form, substance and size, together with strong stiff stems to carry the flowers erect. To insure substance and fine color an even temperature must be maintained in the greenhouses while the flowers are developing. Flowers that are forced in any manner, either by high temperature, close conditions, or the application of fertilizers, may appear to be wonders on the plants, but they quickly deteriorate after being cut, and by the time they are staged the sleepy look begins to show on them. A little pains in selecting the flowers counts for a great deal. Aim to have every flower as near alike in color as is possible; even though there may be only a few off-colored flowers in a vase of 100, they seem to stick out away beyond the perfect ones, and are the first to attract the judges' attention. Before packing the flowers for shipment they should be cut 24 hours before time of shipping and placed in water and set in a cool dry basement cellar, where an even temperature of 50 degrees can be kept up at all times, but no draughts or strong odors should be allowed to come in contact with them.

Packing the flowers ready for shipment is of the utmost importance and is a part of the work that requires a great deal of study, owing to the fact that so many shipments to the A. C. S. exhibitions have been spoiled from overheating by being placed near the steampipes or from the effect of the car being held too hot rather than from getting cold. It is well to remember that what keeps out the cold also keeps out the heat. There are no better boxes for shipping the blooms than the corrugated cardboard shipping boxes now so widely used for shipping flowers. Boxes deep enough to carry one layer of flowers are the best; then two boxes can be tied together in one package. The inside lining should be enough to properly protect the flowers, but the outside covering should be the main protection against cold or heat. Be sure that each package is securely roped and tied to guard against the paper being torn off en-route.

Chrysanthemum Emma.
Pale Pink Pompon-Anemone.

Chrysanthemum Emma.

Seedling pompon-anemone Emma, shown in the accompanying illustration, originated with Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, N. Y., and is being distributed by Guttman & Raynor, Inc., New York. It is described as being of the Garza type, double, solid and full of bloom. It comes before the middle of November and finishes about December 10. It averaged over eight cents on the sale of about 8,000 sprays. The color is pale pink at the edge with a still paler pink center. It is said to be a splendid shipper and keeper.

BERKELEY, CALIF.—J. A. Carbone reports 1915 Christmas trade about on a par with the corresponding period the previous year. Cut flowers were plentiful and the quality fine. Carnations were very plentiful and retailed at prices lower than ever before. Araucarias and palms were much in demand.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Valentine's Day.

In its importance as a floral holiday, February 14 is running a close race with Thanksgiving day. Some dealers claim it ranks ahead, as there is so much sentiment about this latter day affecting all the younger element of society, the young men particularly, who feel it incumbent upon them to send flowers partly in answer to sentiment or because it has become the custom.

It is this question of custom that should engage the best attention of every retail florist. It is to his interest that this buying of flowers for Valentine's day should become much more popular than it is, and the sales can be doubled, tripled or quadrupled if florists as a body would take the matter up and give it the proper publicity. There is no community too small or city too large, in which the trade in flowers cannot be increased by the right kind of publicity. There are certain trade jealousies that have to be overcome in order to get the necessary co-operation that will lead to the best results. Troubles like these are not unsurmountable, however, as witness the general co-operation of the retail trade in Cleveland, Detroit and other western cities, where very good business has resulted, particularly in their exploitation of Mothers' day, all agreeing that the demand created by the publicity work was much in excess of their expectation on the comparatively small amount expended. It is often said that this or that city is a great flower buying town, their prosperous flower shops are pointed out as proofs that this is the case.

Whatever is effectively presented to any community is sure to attract attention. Well managed and aggressively conducted flower shops will be sure to pick up business and help create a demand that appeared non-existent before. This success invites competition—a new store appears which, in turn with up-to-date methods necessary to keep to the front, gets a clientele of new people, and so the sale and love of flowers goes on until the city becomes famous as a flower buying community. It is this love for flowers that does so much to create a demand that can be fostered and increased in every community, at all times, by individual interests or men who are alive to their opportunities, and also by the action of all branches of the trade working together. The approach of Valentine's day is a very propitious time to try out this collective work and there are now in a number of successful instances records of advertising matter that has pulled (and such experiences are to be had free for the asking) that point out the way to get new business along these lines.

Advertising for any special event should be commenced at least two or three weeks before, so that there is time for it to sink in and germinate and awaken the desire to remember the day with a purchase of flowers. While the demand for Valentine's day and its acceptance as a floral holiday is fairly well established, it should have the best thought of the florist in every stage of the work of preparedness. In the first place a nicely worded circular or folder calling attention to the spirit and significance of the day, stating the kinds of flowers that are appropriate and their effectiveness when made into baskets, corsage bouquets, or sent loose in artistically arranged boxes.

In nearly all the large cities box-makers who cater to the florists' trade prepare fancy covered heart-shaped boxes, which are very appropriate for corsages, bunches of violets, etc. The suppliers are also alive, and each season come along with something new in heart-shaped hampers or fancy baskets that are appropriate for the business of the day. Not only cut flowers, but plants as well, when decorated with appropriate ribbons and heart-shaped motto cards giving then a Valentine's flavor, make acceptable gifts and the most lasting and satisfactory for the purpose.

For two weeks at least or from the first of the month on, all the novelties should be displayed in and about the store, and particularly in the windows, which should receive the very best thought and attention of the decorator. The fact that February 14 is a floral holiday of importance should be kept to the front. A vigorous campaign started early, and pushed with vigor and intelligence, will be sure to produce good results.

There are many flowers that can be especially featured for valentines. Sweet peas will then be in their prime and they are especially suited for corsages and baskets. Ward and Sweet-heart roses, violets, lilies of the valley, gardenias, cattleyas, pansies and forget-me-nots are all appropriate. Daffodils and pussy willows are good. How best to arrange any or all of these, so as to present new ideas, is worth considerable thought by the up-to-date man—people appreciate good work, and anything novel and artistic in arrangement or color scheme, redounds greatly to the credit of the house sending it out.

The boxes, plants and packages should all be given a Valentine touch with appropriate heart-shaped tags or red seals of like pattern. Red tape for wrapping cord may now be had from all the supply houses and is well worth the small additional cost for the week. There are many who observe the day with dinners and teas at some of which quite elaborate decorations are planned. Heart-shaped, flat plateau baskets, made solid with red carnations, make a good table center piece, as does a single or double outline heart, filled with green or red carnations, from the center of which rises a slender vase of red carnations. Favors can be corsages of red carnations or bunches of violets, with small gilt hearts pinned to the ribbons.

The Bud or Single Rose Vase.

When Philip L. Carbone, of Boston, Mass., introduced the individual flower tube, or vase, from Italy, some few years ago, it took some time to get people to consider it seriously, it being thought too trifling. After a time, however, its usefulness became apparent, for as long as the water held out, the flower lasted quite as well as when crowded with others in a larger receptacle. There are many places such as on milady's writing desk or bureau, etc., where just one beautiful rose, with the luxurious green foliage placed in a bud vase, makes a very pretty ornament. In addition to the straight tubes there are now a number of vases in quite a variety of form and material. The glass tubes are now etched and some are cut while tubes of hammered copper are antique looking, and fit in nicely with some desk furnishings.

The pottery men are offering some very pretty pressed and hand-made vases in various colors with good foundations that will not topple over, which is an objection to the lighter glass tubes that are easily upset when containing a rather large rose. Artistic wooden receptacles made of mahogany with a glass tube center, looking something like a slender candlestick, have recently been introduced; also, some of wood with the new black and white striped effects. The accompanying illustration shows but a few of these vases, which are good stock to carry, as every vase sold generally results in the purchase of a choice rose to fill it. Other patterns are offered of several tubes joined together, which are more elaborate, but lack the exclusiveness of the individual vase.

Hendberg's Prize Window Display.

M. Hendberg, one of the representative florists of Hoboken, N. J., was awarded first honors in a recent window trimming contest held in that city. The displays were all of such uniform excellence that the work of the judges was no small task. The Hendberg display was a dinner table arrangement set in a bower of southern smilax, with basket bouquets of hyacinths, Hadley, Ophelia and Killarney roses and lily of the valley. The center piece on the table was a handsome vase of lilies while around the base was a splendid display of Killarney roses and at each plate was a corsage bouquet in which Killarneys were also used.

MOBILE, ALA.—C. O. Wilcox, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is calling on the trade here.

WACO, TEX.—The mid-winter meeting of the Texas State Horticultural Society was held in this city, January 4-6, with an elaborate programme.

Warncke's Venison³ ast.

Members of the Detroit Florists' Club were royally entertained Tuesday evening, December 28, at Harmonic Hall in that city, the occasion being the annual venison feast given by John H. Warncke, well-known Detroit florist, to his fellow club members and his colleagues on the board of education, of which body he has been a member for several years. The mayor, members of the library commission, and other prominent officials, as well as a number of out-of-town guests, were also in attendance. To accept an invitation to a venison feast with reluctance is an unusual occurrence, but many of Mine Host Warncke's brother florists accepted their's with trepidation, the invitation which was in every sense of the word "formal," being in the form of a court subpoena, bearing the seal of the City of Detroit, signed by the clerk of the recorder's court and served by police officers at all hours of the day and night, demanding "In the name of the People of the State of Michigan" appearance of the person named therein "to appear at Harmonic Hall December 28 at 8:00 p. m. and there give evidence in the case of John Buck and Rosie Doe." Visions of being "pinched" for obstructing the sidewalk with cases of holly at Christmas time was the first thought that came to Robert Rahaley of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, while Jerome Stock had it all figured out that he was going to be separated from some of his Christmas trade profits because his chauffeur had been "nabbed" for speeding again. Superintendent Basinger of Woodmere cemetery said he knew John Buck (a local undertaker) but knew nothing of his having any trouble with any "Rosie Doe."

The arrival at the hall dispelled all gloom, however, as the result of Mr. Warncke's annual hunting trip was in evidence—venison prepared in three different ways, with appropriate "trimmin's." At each place at the table was an American Beauty rose from the greenhouses of the host, while the hall was artistically decorated with American Beauties and ferns. Following the repast short speeches were made by those present, in which tribute was paid to Mr. Warncke's marksmanship and genial "Phil" Foley of Chicago, also regularly summoned and who feared a fine for exceeding the "weight limit," made an instantaneous hit with his "Shoot the Bear First" story. In a short acknowledgment of the well wishes of his guests the host promised to "bring home the venison" again next year.

New York Florists' Club Meeting.

The club's first meeting of the new year was held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the night of January 10. It being the night for inaugurating the new officers there was a good attendance and much interest was manifested. Philip F. Kessler and his associates on the retiring house committee had handsomely decorated the hall with the national colors, which had a very happy effect. Retiring President Bunyard called the meeting to order and in an eloquent address, thanked the committees and members for the support and assistance he had received during his term of office. He was given an ovation.

He then called President Weston to the platform and handed him the gavel.

PRESIDENT WESTON'S ADDRESS.

Fellow Members of the New York Florists' Club:

In taking the chair as your presiding officer for 1916, let me again express my grateful appreciation of the honor you have done me in electing me to this high office, the duties of which it shall be my endeavor to discharge in a manner satisfactory to you, and in the best interests of the club.

The work of our organization is well and favorably known not only throughout our own country, but abroad. It is known for the business like features which characterize its management, and insure a continuous growth of its membership. It is known for the great harmony and good fellowship which exists within it, making its motto "all one," truly a descriptive one. And it is known for the excellent work it has done and is doing for the uplift of floriculture and the welfare of all connected with it. It is an organization to which all of us are proud to belong, and with whose work we feel honored to be connected.

The club's work has been so well organized and conducted, so well thought out, and opportunities for action so well conceived that little, if anything, can be suggested at the present time as likely to increase the usefulness of the club, or work out to our advantage. Our greatest work at this time is, of course, to be found in the preparations for our forthcoming spring flower show in New York, and this work, I am glad to say, is in most capable hands, and the indications are that we shall score another great success, thereby enhancing the reputation of our club among our fellow workers the world over.

Last year we invited the S. A. F. and O. H. to hold its 32d annual convention in our city this year, but unfortunately, prior claims made by the southern city of Houston prevailed, and our invitation failed of acceptance. The desirability of making an effort to induce the national society to hold its 1917 convention here is a matter which should early be discussed. I understand that the society will at the Houston convention also decide upon the city in which to hold its 1918 convention, in order that more time may be available for the establishment of the convention garden. This being the case, our chance for securing at least one of these conventions should be good.

In appointing our standing committees for the year, I have deemed it advisable to return to the custom of the years preceeding last year, observing the same as regards the numerical strength of the committees. Ample trial was made last year of large committees, but they were not found conducive to the best interests of the club.

We have entered upon a year which it is fervently hoped will prove to be a good one for our trade, and there is every reason to believe that our hopes may materialize. Indications of a condition of prosperity among our great industries are not wanting, and when prosperity reigns the florist trade is sufficiently active to insure good business. From the bottom of my heart I wish you all a most happy and prosperous year, and I trust that at its close I shall take into retirement with me a remembrance of your loyal and unstinted help in the administration of the office you have reposed in me, and the assurance that we together have added another to the many successful years of our club's existence.

President Weston's address made a fine impression and was loudly applauded.

Vice-president Stumpp was called on but was not present. Secretary Young made a clever speech, punctuated with humor. He spoke of the approaching flower show and expects it to be a great success. Treasurer Richards spoke briefly but to the point. Trustees Chas. Schenck and Robert G. Wilson were absent. Trustee Max Schling made an appropriate address, saying he would always be ready and willing to do his best for the club. A. L. Miller for the flower show committee, which had held a meeting in the afternoon at the Hotel Breslin, reported progress. Committee on New York day at National Flower show reported progress.

On Awards.—P. W. Popp, Marine Matherson, L. J. Reuter, C. H. Totty, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Julius Roehrs, Chas. Weber.

Exhibition.—Robert Koehne, Roman J. Irwin, Chas. C. Knight, Peter Beuerlein, Percy B. Rigby.

House.—George Hildenbrand, Joseph Vocke, A. N. Kinney.

Annual Dinner.—C. B. Weathered, John B. Nugent, Jos. A. Mandia, Walter F. Sheridan, Emil Schloss, Alfred Kottmiller, Thos. B. De Forest.

Committee on Legislation.—Walter F. Sheridan, W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., James McHutchison.

Essay.—John H. Pepper, Austin F. Faulkner, J. R. Lewis.

Edward C. Vick read the resolution which was adopted on the death of W. Atlee Burpee of Philadelphia, which follows:

At a meeting of the committee appointed to take action on the death of W. Atlee Burpee, the committee, speaking for the members of the New York Florists' Club, desires to express in this humble manner its appreciation of the life-long and untiring efforts of W. Atlee Burpee in the interest of horticulture. Gardening activities everywhere had his attention and support. His high standard of honorable business methods all may well strive to follow. Florists the world over have sustained an inexpressible loss in the death of W. Atlee Burpee. Those of us who knew him personally knew him as a cherished friend, those who knew him only through business dealings, felt the kindly influence of his nature, in his business methods. In his death the members of the New York Florists' Club deeply feel the loss of their esteemed fellow horticulturist.

York Florists' Club and a copy sent to the family."

Andrew Scott, manager for Alexander McConnell, was called to the platform and made a neat speech. John H. Stafford of Bar Harbor, Maine, a life member of the Society of American Florists, was present and made an interesting address. Like every true son, or adopted son of the Pine Tree state, he extolled its climate and soil and the hospitality of its people, and promised a warm welcome for all who attend the meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society at Bar Harbor next June. A. E. Thatcher of the Mt. Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, was also present and spoke interestingly and along the same line as the previous speaker.

J. Harrison Dick notified the club of the death of a brother of W. E. Marshall, a member and former officer of the club. A committee was appointed to prepare suitable resolutions. Max Schling suggested that young gardeners out of work be looked after and assisted in securing employment.

A letter was read from Wm. Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa., urging co-operation relating to the national flower show at Philadelphia and the New York show at the Grand Central Palace.

Dr. John S. Adriance of Williamstown, Mass., gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on the preparation of soil to yield the "maximum of money value." In a series of stereopticon views the lecturer showed the great results achieved in growing timothy, clover, corn and other crops by the use of lime, phosphate and other chemicals. These were very marked in the case of wet and sour lands. We regret that a more extended report of his lecture cannot here be given.

EXHIBITS.

Philip F. Kessler exhibited freesias grown by John Lappe, Maspeth, L. I., N. Y. Peter Beuerlein, Elmhurst, N. Y., exhibited a vase of a sport of Enchantress carnations cerise pink in color and another sport of Enchantress of the Enchantress shade, but a deeper pink. W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. Y., exhibited a cerise pink seedling carnation.

Guttman & Raynor, Inc., New York, exhibited the rose Mme. Paul Euler or Prima Donna, grown by the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa.; also the white carnation, Peace, grown by Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y., and the carnation Laura Weber, grown by Chas. Weber, Lynbrook, N. Y.

James Duthie, Oyster Bay, L. I., N. Y., exhibited six pots of new malacoides, named Malacoides Townsendi. It originated in the winter of 1913-1914 in a batch of ordinary malacoides, was grown on and seeds selected from the best products. These plants are very attractive. Chairman Kessler and Myer Othille, of the retiring house committee, did themselves proud with their lavish distribution of turkey sandwiches and other things.

Chairman Kessler had also this list of entertainers who made a hit: Wm. Johnson, banjo and guitar; Phil Fisher, guitar; David Manning, violin; Harris Beaulere, mandolin, assisted by Walter Robinson, buck and wing dancer, and W. Schiowsky, baritone.

State Florists' Association of Indiana.

The annual meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana was held in Indianapolis, January 11, at the Chamber of Commerce. Nearly all of the Indiana growers and many manufacturers of florists' supplies and equipment were present. The meeting was called to order by President W. J. Vesey, Jr., of Ft. Wayne. The report of the secretary showed an increase in membership, while the treasurer's report gave the financial condition as being better than ever before.

There was keen competition for the Indiana rose and carnation trophies. The rose trophy was awarded to W. Frank & Sons, Portland, and the carnation trophy was again won by Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis. The vase showed very fine culture.

Excellent vases of Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, and a fine basket of Tipperary, a fine clear yellow rose of small size, were exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond. This rose is highly commended for basket or corsage work.

A dark sport of Russell exhibited by the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., attracted much attention and Mrs. Bayard Thayer traveled in fine shape. This is a beautiful clear pink, evidently a sport of Mrs. Russell. It scored 89 points and was awarded a certificate of merit.

Tip Top, a miniature rose shown by the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, has the appearance of being an excellent rose for corsage work.

Prima Donna, recently brought out by the Floreux Gardens, North Wales, Pa., traveled well and looks like "a winner."

In the carnation section, the display of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., showed Aviator in its usual splendid form. John Eitel, Greencastle, showed a scarlet seedling.

F. Dorner & Sons Co.'s novelty for 1916, Nancy, a light pink, has the appearance of being a good commercial variety. This was given a certificate of merit for a score of 87 points. A fine collection of seedlings were noted. Carnation Rosalie, cerise, scored 87 points and a certificate of merit was awarded to No. 125-11 for excellence. Old Gold, which will be disseminated in 1917, was also shown.

Rose colored Primula malacoides were shown by Fred H. Lemon & Co., Richmond. These are considered superior to the old type and will become a standard when better known.

A sport of Geranium Beaute Poitevine, staged by Morris & Son, Bloomington, the color a flesh tint, was well grown. Well grown cyclamen displayed by the Roepke Floral Co. were highly commended.

The display of plants arranged by Bertermann Bros. Co., was one of the features of the exhibition.

Following a visit to the range of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, earlier in the day, where some well rooted and healthy stock was seen, the party was guests of the proprietors at luncheon.

The society hopes to land the 1917 convention of the American Carnation Society and a special party will be formed to boost for Indianapolis and "Hoosierdom." The society hopes to send a large delegation to St. Louis.

The following officers were elected to serve in 1916: W. J. Vesey, Jr., Ft. Wayne, president; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, first vice-president; Theo. A. Dorner, Lafayette, second vice-president; O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis, secretary; H. H. Wiegand, Indianapolis, treasurer.

After the annual dinner, the members were entertained at Keith's Vaudeville theater, the stage and boxes being decorated with the flowers from the exhibition, and the blooms given to the performers who responded graciously to encores, with the result that the performance lasted an hour longer than usual.

The February meeting will be held at Lafayette, and an April meeting at Terre Haute.

The out-of-town visitors included the following:

L. Barnaby, Columbus.
W. A. Bitter, Kokomo.
L. A. Coles, Kokomo.

Kellogg's Santa Claus Delivery Car.

The accompanying illustration shows the new delivery automobile of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., Kansas City, Mo., as it appeared on the streets of that city during the Christmas season just past. The car was decorated with frieze, Christmas roping and wreaths, an employe dressed as Santa Claus making all deliveries. The novel turnout attracted much attention and many customers in making purchases stated that they bought just in order to have Santa Claus deliver plants and cut flowers at their homes to please the children. This firm reports trade especially heavy this season, rounding out, by far, the biggest year's business in its history.

Geo. E. Kessler, Landscape Architect.

George E. Kessler, of St. Louis, Mo., landscape architect, is acting in an advisory capacity for the S. A. F. convention garden at Houston, Texas, this year. Vice-president R. C. Kerr of the Society of American Florists, referring to Mr. Kessler, writes: "We are very fortunate in having secured Mr. Kessler's services in this work.

He has supervised the construction of some of the largest park systems in this country and has acted as consulting landscape architect at Indianapolis, Ind., St. Louis, Mo., Ft. Wayne, Ind., Dallas, Tex., Cincinnati, O., Kansas City, Mo., Memphis, Tenn., and Houston, Kansas City is famous for its parking system. Mr. Kessler laid out and carried to completion the parks and parking system of Kansas City, so we feel that our convention garden is an assured success; with the advice of Mr. Kessler and the competent and efficient work of Mr. Brock, superintendent of Houston parks, it makes us feel we are making a record-breaker."

NEW YEAR MAKES GOOD BEGINNING.

Business has made an excellent start for 1916. Social affairs have been the principal source of demand, but there has been an active call for decorations and bouquets and funeral work has been exceedingly good. Prices on all flowers are back to normal. Roses are of good quality though not plentiful. Flowering plants continue to sell well. The first jonquils of the season have arrived.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. furnished the decorations for the luncheon of the Equal Suffrage League, January 8, when covers were laid for nearly 200 guests. Pink Killarney roses in attractive vases were a feature. This firm also had the decoration for a Dolly Varden party, the table arrangement being a charming combination of spring flowers, while the rooms were decorated with lilac plants and roses. Twenty-four corsages were presented to the guests.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey executed a large decoration January 6 for the banquet of the Pacemakers Club. Palms and ferns were used in profusion with vases of Shawyer and Killarney roses. An aeroplane filled with flowers was an interesting novelty.

The South Side branch store of the Doswell Flower Co. closed January 1, it having been decided to devote all their time to the business at the Main street store.

brings from $4 to $6 per 100. Bulbous stock is in good demand, French trumpets and Paper White narcissus being the mainstays, although a few tulips are beginning to come in. The prospects are that the market will hold up well for some time to come, as the retail stores are doing a good business and there are no signs of a heavy crop of flowers coming in.

NOTES.

John Gale, of Tewksbury, is shipping about 25,000 violets per week, all of very fine quality. He has about 9,000 square feet of glass devoted to marguerites and violets and is already cutting some nice marguerites. He has a house of Easter lilies that are coming along nicely and will have them for the Easter trade.

A. Aronson, formerly proprietor of the Crawford House Flower Store, is now employed as salesman for the East Sudbury Flower Co., of East Sudbury, Mass., at the Boston Co-Operative Flower Market. He is receiving from them a nice lot of carnations and Sprengerii. Their Beacon carnations are especially worthy of note.

The J. A. Budlong Co. is shipping to the Boston Co-Operative Flower Market salesroom about 65,000 roses per week. They are cutting a nice supply of their dark yellow sport of Sunburst, as well as very fine Prince E. C. d'Arenberg, Stanley, Ophelia, Sawyer and Indiana.

Robert Montgomery and family, of Natick, had a narrow escape from injury at Wellesley, January 9, when his automobile skidded and ran into a tree. Luckily, no one was hurt, but the machine was quite badly damaged.

Miss R. A. Washington, of Stoughton, is cutting a supply of nice stevia at present. She also has as a novelty some pink cactus blossoms.

The bowling league met at the Boston alleys Thursday evening, January 7. Jacobs, bowling for the flower exchange, rolled the highest individual string of the season with 132. Prizes have been donated for the league by Thos. J. Grey Co., B. F. Letson, H. M. Robinson Co., P. Carbone, Boston Plate & Window Glass Co. and J. M. Cohan. The silver cups and cut glass prizes will be awarded at the end of the season. The standing for the week is as follows:

to the demand. Prices are about the same as last week. California violets are plentiful but there is no demand for them.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the florists' club was held at the Nicollet hotel, January 4, about 40 members being in attendance. A notice having been sent out by the Lakewood Cemetery Association prohibiting the planting of graves by the florists, a committee of five, consisting of C. G. Anderson, Carl Lindskoog, Theo. Nagle, O. E. Amundson and Thos. Hall, was appointed to see the cemetery superintendent and report at the next meeting. Refreshments were served by the hotel management, after which the meeting adjourned to convene again the first Tuesday in February.

NOTES.

The Lady Florists' Club had a card party and dance at the West Side Commercial Club, January 6. R. Wessling and Mrs. W. D. Desmond won first prize at the card tables. A splendid supper was served which was enjoyed by all present.

The gardener's house at the Loring place, Zumbra Heights, Lake Minnetonka, burned to the ground December 30. The ends of the greenhouses adjoining were burned out and a freeze that followed destroyed some very choice plants.

W. D. Desmond, Wm. Topel, Wm. Vasatka and Cal Vasatka visited several of the private estates at Lake Minnetonka last week and also enjoyed a day fishing through the ice.

Through an error we reported that H. B. Whitted used two autos making Christmas deliveries. Five cars were used continuously by this firm in rendering its usual prompt service.

Rice Bros. clean up early every day, dividing up stock that is scarce, and in that way receive few complaints from their customers.

J. A. Weber at the Goodrich estate, Zumbra Heights, is cutting some very fine flowers and also has a full crop of fine tomatoes.

Boston:

SUPPLY THIRD BELOW NORMAL.

The supply of flowers coming to this city is very short; in fact, about one-third less than normal and consequently high prices prevail in nearly every line. On Friday and Saturday, January 7-8, prices slackened a trifle, and business was not as brisk, but Monday, January 10, the market seemed to come back to its high-price standard again. Roses sold well all week at from $4 to $16 per 100 on the average, commercial grades, all varieties cleaning up well. Carnations also were in demand, the price being from $4 to $6 per 100. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful, and there is a good call for them at $1.50 to $2 per 100. Violets sell well at 75 cents to $1 per 100. Stevia is not plentiful and finds a good market, 25 cents and 35 cents per bunch being realized. Freesia also is scarce and

FAIR SUPPLY AND ACTIVE DEMAND.

Business as a whole is very good; now and then there are slow days, but taken as a whole, the demand is steady and active, while the supply of stock is fair. Shipping business is very good. Rose receipts are large and excellent and among others include some excellent American Beauties, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney and Ophelia. The cut of carnations, though a little heavier than it was, and far from the normal cut for this time of the year is apparently sufficient for needs. Lilies are plentiful and have a fair market. Narcissi and daffodils, as well as callas and rubrums, sell pretty well. Lily of the valley is scarce and in demand. Sweet pea receipts are a little larger than they were. Both double violets and orchids are plentiful. Other offerings include stevias, baby primroses, marguerites, callas and rubrums.

CLUB MEETING.

The florists' society's January meeting was well attended. Joseph Hill, Roy Rudolph, Henry Shepperd, Richard Koots and Otto Geiser were elected to membership. A preliminary flower show committee, consisting of C. E. Critchell, chairman, Jos. Hill, J. A. Peterson, W. Ray Murphy and Henry Shepperd, was appointed by President Max Rudolph. W. Ray Murphy gave the final report of the relief committee. After the meeting the club sat down to a fine luncheon.

NOTES.

At the recent organization of the William Murphy Company, W. Ray Murphy was elected president, Mrs. Luna Murphy, vice-president, and L. L. Murphy, secretary and treasurer. W. Ray Murphy was appointed manager and Miss Cora Pherson, who for a long time was assistant to the late Wm. Murphy, assistant manager.

Gus Adrian and wife and others recently successfully reduced an excessive street assessment on their property. Chas. H. Hoffmeister represented them as counsel in the suit.

Albert McCullough, president of the J. M. McCullough Sons Co., was operated upon last week.

C. E. Critchell has been having very large lots of fine American Beauties.

BUSINESS HOLDS UP WELL.

Business is keeping up well since the holidays, much to the surprise of everybody. The cold rains and frost have cut down outdoor flowers, reducing stock to inside roses and carnations. About the only exception is some Paper White narcissus that is coming in with some Chinese lilies. Azaleas, which should have been here for the holidays, have at last arrived, and are selling well, even though late.

NOTES.

At a meeting January 4, the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: W. W. Felgate, president; J. Taylor, vice-president; Hal Kruckeburg, secretary; J. McGillivray, treasurer. A very interesting paper on roses was read by Henry W. Turner. The regular quarterly smoker was held at the Bristol cafe, January 5th.

One of the most important business changes of the new year is the change in the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. by taking into the business W. Garbett, who has been connected with Darling's Flower Shop for several years. They intend to handle a full line of florists' supplies, making a specialty of everything usually handled by the wholesaler.

Mr. Garland of Wright's Flower Store, is the proud father of a new eight and one-half pound baby boy. They seem to be doing a good business at Wright's. A late shipment of azaleas has arrived, but they are selling all right.

Paul J. Howard, the landscape artist, has located at 1521 West Seventh street, where he has offices. He is also showing a fine line of plants and shrubbery from his Los Nietos nursery which will be used in his landscape work.

The Germain Seed Co. is now making use of their new greenhouse on Whittier road, which will be much to their advantage. They have just received a large shipment of imported plants from Holland and Japan.

Mrs. J. C. Vaughan of Chicago, has gone to San Diego for a few days visit, after which she will return to Pasadena for a more lengthy stay.

The friends of George Watson will be pained to learn of the death of his mother, who died recently in London. She was 74 years of age.

The Redondo Floral Co. reports a good business in Enchantress and Fair Maid carnations, but a general scarcity in other lines.

CLUB MEETING.

Unusual interest and a large attendance marked the January meeting of the florists' club, which was called to order in the rooms of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, by Frank R. Bilson, retiring president, who appointed Fred. Henkes and Morris M. Cohen of New York, a committee to escort the new president, Thomas F. Tracey, to the chair. The report of the secretary showed that the club, January 1, had members in good standing, 61; on delinquent list for dues, 28; new members added, 11; died during the year, three; amount in treasury, $175.49. The name of Ray C. Cooper, of Cohoes, was balloted upon and he was unanimously elected. A letter was read from James Snyder, of Rhinebeck, a violet grower and member of the club, announcing his inability to be present and informing the members that on Christmas eve, fire destroyed his barn, wagons, equipment, and a pet black horse. To save the horse Mr. Snyder went out of the house in his bare feet and had a narrow escape from pneumonia. Violets for the holidays, he reported, were only half a crop. The secretary was instructed to answer the letter expressing the condolences of the club.

ANNUAL BANQUET.

Louis H. Schaefer of the entertainment committee reported arrangements for the annual banquet to be held after the meeting complete. Not much time was lost in making a motion for adjournment and the members marched to Keeler's on State street where a room in the grill had been reserved and tastefully decorated. Forty men sat around the tables and enjoyed the good things that the busy waiters brought forward. President Tracey named Fred A. Danker toastmaster. Responses were made by Stephen Green, Philadelphia, Pa.; Morris M. Cohen, New York; Henry Hansen, Catskill; John E. Sambrook, Troy, and nearly all the local members. A telegram was read by the toastmaster from Roman J. Irwin, of New York, who expressed his regret at not being able to be present. Louis H. Schaefer in behalf of the members presented to Frank R. Bilson, the retiring president, a leather traveling bag. Mr. Bilson thanked the members in a few words.

Reports from the trade covering the holidays show that business was satisfactory. Some of the retailers have not yet figured out all their accounts, but they agree that their business was at least as good as a year ago. Violets for some reason did not take well this season. For the past two weeks the weather has been cloudy and greenhouse stock has not been coming in. The result of this is high prices for nearly all lines.

1916 GETS FLYING START.

The local florists during the past week have enjoyed a splendid trade and have made an excellent start in the new year. Funeral work has been extra heavy, and the deaths of several prominent persons called for quantities of good stock. Bouquets for hospitals and pot plants were much in demand, and this being Implement Show week, many decorations added to the volume of business. Cut stock was in good supply but at times a shortage was seen, and not enough could be secured to fill all orders. A cleanup at night was the invariable rule. Roses were good and mostly of long stem and high in price, ranging from eight cents up at wholesale. Carnations showed improvement both in stem and flower, and the supply is more plentiful. Other stock seen on the market includes stevias, white and yellow narcissi, lilies, orchids, violets, sweet peas and lily of the valley.

NOTES.

Funeral work, hospital orders and a heavy demand for pot plants were incidents in a big week's business reported by W. J. Barnes. Decorations for the Implement Show also featured in the rush, one arrangement requiring two and one-half days to put in place.

H. Kusik & Co. featured fine roses, carnations and sweet peas among other excellent stock. Trade has been very heavy with this firm.

The window display of the Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. attracted much attention this week. Funeral work was the leader here.

A. Newell reports a surprisingly good trade. Hospital orders calling for bouquets and baskets were in big demand.

T. J. Noll & Co. report brisk business, both local and shipping. Their rose stock is disposed of as fast as it arrives.

Will Murray has joined the Samuel Murray staff. Trade has been very good at this establishment.

Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. report a heavy funeral demand, both local and out-of-town.

E. J. B.

St. Paul, Minn.

Stock of all kinds is very scarce and everything that arrives in the market finds ready sale. Plants have sold well all season and this has helped business and the shortage of cut flower stock.

NOTES.

Holm & Olson have had a very heavy run of business following the holiday trade, which was the best in the history of this firm. They have been busy with funeral work, one of the largest orders being that for the funeral of Gov. Hammond. Orders for wedding decorations are numerous and everybody is busy at this establishment.

Robert R. Topel reports everything in the line of cut flowers and blooming plants cleaned up with sales 30 per cent better than a year ago. He will add a new auto to his delivery system.

Tom Commandros of the Golden Rule department store reports business 50 per cent better than a year ago, but could only secure half enough stock for his holiday requirements.

O. R. Eckhardt had the best season's business in his experience. His sales were 50 per cent better than last year, and continue to increase as the new year opens.

John Rovatsos of the Emporium had an extra fine trade for his first season in this city, with results far beyond his expectations.

L. L. May & Co. say business continues brisk since the holidays in plants, cut flowers and funeral work.

NEW YEAR BUSINESS STARTS WELL.

Very good business is the report from all in the trade for Christmas, but during the week between holidays, business took a great slump—practically nothing doing during that period. New Year's business starts out better, however, with better encouragement than for the past three years. Here we have good times or bad, depending on how the lumber industry thrives for that industry leads in volume, and when big shipments are going all other business keeps pace.

Plenty of cut flowers were in supply for the call, but our leading stores tell of lack of pot plants—generally of the cheaper and medium prices. More chrysanthemums than ever were on hand and prices ruled slightly lower. Only a few azaleas were on sale and few pot bulbs. Carnations were quite plentiful and lower in price for good stock. Of roses there were none too many, and a large percentage of medium and poorer grades. Fewer violets were sold than for many years and they were all the outdoor California grown. Very favorable weather for handling all kinds of stock blessed the business all 'round, so that prompt and safe delivery could be made and very materially aided on the profit side. Taken as a whole, business about balanced that of last year—profits a little higher because the growers got less all 'round. As to cash sales and credit accounts the cash business may foot up to be about 20 per cent less than last year's holiday trade showed, which seems rather unfavorable. It seems to be a fact that entirely too much credit is given and in the main will prove to be a bad education for the flower-buying public in general. Somehow it has, always seemed to the writer that the floral business should show by far the greater percentage as cash business, but when a leading store tells of getting in about 10 per cent cash, we begin to wonder where we are at and how long until the grower will get his money. Taken as a whole, the sunshine and weather conditions have been a little more favorable to the grower than usual so we see a smaller percentage of split and off color carnations than we generally have at this time of year. Not quite so many red carnations as usual and larger per cent of Light Pink Enchantress. Practically none of the late sorts are ever on sale here either of carnations or chrysanthemums, but everything now in the way of a rose may be seen. For the first time in this city, a large per cent of the roses sold are from local production, but it causes wonder when the best of the newer roses are quoted at four to eight cents each wholesale, and a peep at market quotations tells of six to 35 cents all over the east. For the first time in history of our city the supply of local English holly was plentiful enough to meet all local demands, with prices considerably lower than in former years. The quality was very fine, with plenty of well colored berries.

Fewer wreaths were sold than before, however, and less in price, but increased sales of cheaper wreaths of mahonia and evergreens. This climate is specially favorable to all sorts of greens and they are to be had every day in the year and much of it is beautiful for decorative work. Our state began state wide prohibition the first of January and we hope that may be some benefit to florists' business.

Business continues extra good but stock is not plentiful and prices continue high. Roses, with the exception of American Beauties, are bringing from $6 to $20. American Beauties are quoted from $12 to $40 and carnations bring from $3 to $6 per 100. There are plenty of the latter to go around.

NOTES.

Jake Richards, who has been connected with the trade in this city for a number of years, has gone into business for himself. His establishment, known as the Corcoran Flower Shop, is located on Fourteenth street. He has the best wishes of the trade for a full measure of success.

Geo. C. Schaffer has been exceptionally busy the past week with decorations for receptions, dinners and luncheons.

O. A. C. Oehmler, the G street florist, is making a specialty of small baskets and reports business as very good.

Miss Ballinger, we are glad to note, is back at the helm after a week's illness.

ENCOURAGING BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Trade the past week has been very good; funeral work holds out well, the cut flower trade has been good and business all around seems to be booming. Carnations the past few weeks have been scarce, and the prices high. There seems to be at present a shortage of roses and everyone is having a hard time filling orders. There were several coming out parties the past week which called for a good many bouquets and baskets. Paper Whites are still coming in good and the demand for them is normal. Sweet peas are having some very good sales, and violets have started to drop in price.

As the demand for this flower is not very heavy, some of the growers have trouble getting rid of them.

NOTES.

John Marshall of the Fruit Hill Greenhouses is cutting some good buddeias now, and this flower sells well.

The Lapham Floral Company of Pawtucket is cutting some very good Paper Whites.

J. Kopleman & Co. are moving their greenhouses at Oaklawn to their larger place at Riverside.

Azaleas this year are having a very good call, and the stock is good.

OBITUARY.

William Henry Bowker.

William Henry Bowker, founder of the Bowker Fertilizer Co., Boston, Mass., and president of that company continuously since its organization, died January 4, after a long and useful life. The deceased was born in Natick, Mass., July 3, 1850, and 43 years ago was the first graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, of which institution he had been a trustee up to the time of his death. His passing is a great loss to the fertilizer industry, to which he gave liberally of his time and energy, and to the Soil Improvement Committee of the National Fertilizer Association, in particular, which, since the beginning of the work five years ago, has benefited greatly by his advice and active assistance. He was one of the pioneers and staunchest friends of horticultural education, a loyal friend and counselor of agricultural colleges, a valued contributor to many horticultural papers and his years were spent in a sincere effort to show the way to prosperity through greater production of better quality crops.

With the conservatism of his New England ancestors, he combined broad and progressive ideas, optimistic views of current affairs, foresight and keen business acumen cultivated through cosmopolitan associations and reading. In business and private life he will be missed by a host of friends to whom his high ideals, whimsical good nature and counsel endeared him.

Hagbarth F. Halle.

Hagbarth F. Halle, well known florist of Chicago, died suddenly at his store, at 801 Sheridan road, Thursday evening, January 6, aged 56 years. He was born in Denmark and for a time was employed in Germany, coming to this country at an early age. He worked for the Ernst Wienhoeber Floral Co. when Emil Buetener was a member of the firm and about twenty-eight years ago purchased the Klimmer greenhouses at the old number 540 West Madison street. Eight years later he was the leading florist of the city and was a heavy buyer in the Chicago market. The last few years he has been located in Sheridan road and was up and around almost until the day of his death. A widow, a sister of Mrs. H. N. Bruns, survives him. He was a member of Garfield Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and the Oriental Consistory. The funeral services were held from the home of H. N. Bruns, 3023 Warren avenue, Sunday, January 9, at 2 p. m., under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge and at Graceland chapel, Reverend Bailey, of Oak Park, son-in-law of E. C. Amling, officiating. The remains were laid to rest in Graceland cemetery. Quite a number of prominent men in the trade attended and the floral offerings from the retail and wholesale florists and friends were many and beautiful.

THE date of Easter this year is April 23, nineteen days later than in 1915.

HUGH DICKSON'S new rose, awarded the Panama-Pacific Exposition thousand-dollar prize, according to E. G. Hill, who has seen the blooms, is a variety of great beauty.

Chicago Novelty Show.

The annual novelty exhibition of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at the next regular meeting, February 10. Growers are invited to send exhibits of such novelties as they wish to show the trade and shipments may be addressed to A. T. Pyfer, 30 East Randolph street, Chicago, all charges prepaid.

THE new rose Mrs. Bayard Thayer is an excellent addition to the florist's all too limited assortment, judging from the shipment of fine blooms just received from the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass. This variety is a sport of Mrs. Chas. Russell with clear rose pink flowers, good stems and foliage.

The Carnation Convention.

CHICAGO TO ST. LOUIS.

The Chicago Florists' Club has selected the Wabash railroad for the trip between Chicago and St. Louis, Mo., both going and returning, on the occasion of the annual convention of the American Carnation Society, to be held in the latter city, January 26-27.

Special cars will be attached to the Banner Midnight Flyer, leaving the Dearborn station, Chicago (Polk and Dearborn streets), January 25, at 11:55 p. m., arriving at St. Louis (Union station), at 7:53 a. m.

The one way rate, Chicago to St. Louis, is $5.80 if there is a party of 10 or more on the train for this meeting. The Pullman rates, Chicago to St. Louis are: Double lower berths, $2, upper berth, $1.60, drawing-room, $7. Berths will be ready for passengers at 10 p. m. For berth reservations and transportation, address H. L. Purdy, Wabash railroad, 68 West Adams street, Chicago. Telephone, Harrison 4500.

Eastern delegations for the convention are invited to join the Chicago contingent and on request the special cars of parties going to St. Louis by way of Chicago can be switched to the Banner Midnight Flyer without change of baggage or extra charge. A representative of the Wabash railroad will be on hand in convention hall, St. Louis, to arrange for the return trip.

Chairman Transportation Committee,
Chicago Florists' Club.

Ocean Traffic.

McHutchison & Co., New York, write as follows, January 4: "Shipments continue to arrive from Europe in large volume. We expect to have no trouble as the steamers must come here to get munitions for Europe and they bring our shipments with them, but shipments from Madagascar, Sumatra, Java, Australia and such out of the way places are very uncertain, because most of the steamers have been taken off the route and it is very difficult to get shipping space on the few steamers which remain. We have large shipments held up at each of these places waiting for room. All raffia shipments have to come through by way of the Mediterranean and Suez canal, and run the risk of the submarine activity which prevails in those waters. We fortunately stacked up with raffia when we had a chance and now have a considerable supply on hand, but future arrivals will be more and more uncertain. Prosperity is general throughout the country. Nurserymen as a whole are doing a good spring business though trade is bad in spots. The florists have in general had the best Christmas business in their history and any live man now has an excellent chance to extend his business. Success consists largely of grasping the opportunities which pass before us."

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., offer for registration the orchids mentioned below. Any person objecting to the use of the proposed names or registration is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration the same will be made three weeks from this date:

Cattleya Percivaliana Aurora: Flowers very large and of fine shape, sepals and petals rosy lavender, lip large and flat of same color as sepals and petals with a small dark purple blotch in the centre surrounded with orange yellow and purple veins radiating from the throat and extending well forward toward the edges.

Cattleya Percivaliana spectabile: Flowers handsome and well proportioned, five and one-half to six inches across, with purplish lilac sepals and petals. Lip large and showy, with the middle-lobe of darkest purple bordered by a broad band of purplish lilac.

Cattleya Percivaliana resplendens: Flowers six inches and more across, sepals and petals purple lilac, lip of intense purple margined with rosy lilac.

Cattleya Percivaliana Stanley Ranger: A very large and finely shaped variety with flowers measuring over six inches across, sepals and petals purplish lilac, lip very broad and flat, rose and dark purple with a broad fringe of lilac.

Cattleya Percivaliana Superba: Flowers five inches to five and one-half inches across, of good shape, sepals and petals rosy purple, lip dark purple rose and crimson blended with orange yellow, crimson and purple toward the throat.

Cattleya Percivaliana grandiflora: Flowers six inches across, sepals and petals rose purple, lip large rose and dark purple with orange yellow throat suffused with crimson.

Cattleya Percivaliana gigantea: Flowers over six inches across, of fine shape, sepals and petals reddish lilac, lip dark purple with rose purple, margined with rosy lilac.

Cattleya Percivaliana Expanse: Flowers six inches and more across, sepals and petals of a pleasing light, rosy lilac, lip rather flat and spreading two inches across, purple and rose purple with a broad margin of rosy lilac.

Cattleya Percivaliana antropurpurea: Flowers reddish purple all over except the lip, which is deep purple.

Cattleya Percivaliana Oreol: Flowers of fine shape, five inches across, sepals and petals rose purple. The greater part of the lip is orange yellow, veined with crimson, with a blotch of crimson purple in the centre.

Note: In completing the registration of one of the new cannas registered by the Conard & Jones Company, one of the varieties was mentioned as Wyoming. The correct name should be Windmar.

THE NEW ROSE MRS. BAYARD THAYER

that we are offering this season, will make a fine addition to a class of large flowered roses which is rapidly coming to the front, since we introduced Mrs. Chas. Russell of which the new claimant is a sport. The color is a most beautiful clear rose pink, inside of petals a shade lighter. The foliage heavy and smooth and carried on strong stems. It won the American Rose Society Medal, over a strong class of competitors, at the Cleveland Show, scoring 90 points.

SHORT SUPPLY AND HEAVY DEMAND.

There is not a great deal to be said about the market conditions this week that has not been told over and over again for the past two months, and that is about the limited amount of stock receipts. The shortage we are now experiencing is one of the worst and longest drawn out affairs that we have ever contended with and coupled with this is a demand for stock that is unprecedented and mostly for shorter grades of roses and carnations suitable for funeral work. A very few Freesia Purity and snapdragons are beginning to arrive. Stevia is about done for and Paper White narcissi arrive in ever diminishing quantities. A few daffodills arrive; also a few tulips are seen. Orchids have been in good demand and the quality of stock arriving is of the best. Roses, carnations and sweet peas are far short of the requirements. A few callas help for funeral work. Many wax roses are being used, and one retailer reports selling many Christmas wreaths that were left over, and almost anything that looks like a flower is being used.

NOTES.

The council chamber and various offices in the city hall were profusely decorated with flowers presented to the incoming administration by their friends on Monday of the past week.

DORNER'S NOVELTY FOR 1916

New Salmon Pink Carnation NANCY

Color, light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. Blooms are good commercial size, three inches and over, nicely formed and have never shown a burst d calyx. Stems always hold the flower upright. The habit is a quick productive growth and as a producer it stands highest among commercial varieties. Color does not fade. Fragrance is very noticeable. Having an excellent cerise pink and an improved yellow to offer in 1917, we have decided to disseminate the variety NANCY this year (1916). For a light pink that will produce quantities of bloom and is commercially good in every respect, plant NANCY. The stock is limited and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Price, rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PLANT A LIVE ONE

Best Scarlet Carnation Ever Offered

AVIATOR is an unusually productive carnation and will produce 30 blooms per plant per season, with a heavy crop for Christmas. We have already cut on an average of over 14 blooms per plant from stock benched September 5, 1915, and are still cutting heavily every day. Our records show that AVIATOR is the best money maker on our place and is a variety that every grower should buy if interested in greater profits. Color is an intense scarlet and the flower has a fine full center. Stem is thin, wiry and stiff, and the calyx non-bursting. Every break develops into a perfect flower in a remarkably short time. Place your order right now for AVIATOR and get on the band wagon so that when the music starts up next season you will be among the successful ones to gather in the coin.

ROOTED CUTTINGS, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

For list and prices of other varieties see our advertisement in the Ready Reference Department of this paper.

STOCK MORE SCARCE THAN EVER.

Stock is more scarce than ever this week and is bringing regular Christmas prices. Carnations especially are in brisk demand and in short supply, cleaning up quickly each day at prices ranging from $4.00 to $6.00 per 100. Roses are also selling well and there is a particularly heavy demand for short stock for funeral work at $5.00 and $6.00 per 100. Usually white and pink roses were specified but owing to the general scarcity of stock the buyer is willing to take any color at these figures and considers himself lucky if his order is accepted. There is a good supply of longer stemmed roses arriving but there is no surplus when the stores close at night. American Beauty roses are selling well at good prices, but could bring more money considering the general market conditions. Sweet peas are a trifle more plentiful but sell readily at prices ranging from $1.50 to $3.00 per 100. Lilies are moving quickly and several shipments from the east have been received this week. Lily of the valley is none too plentiful, and while orchids and gardenias appear to be plentiful, they clean up well each day at satisfactory prices. Several shipments were received from the south this week and brought almost as good prices as the local grown stock. Violets have not been any too plentiful at times during the week and several shipments from California which arrived at the right time brought good figures. Paper White narcissi are in brisk demand and the same holds good for freesias, which are arriving in larger quantities. Mignonne is in fair supply, but the receipts of stevia are gradually falling off. Jonquils, Romans, tulips, callas, snapdragons, pansies, bouvardia, daisies, calendulas and larkspur are among the offerings and clean up at an early hour like all the other stock at good prices. Stock never was so scarce or brought such high prices at this time of the year as it is this season, and if business continues to be at all good there will be no great surplus to speak of until well along in March. Collections are none too good and never were so poor for the past five years, but whether this is due to the fact that everyone has been so busy since the holidays remains to be seen, but everyone is inclined to believe that checks will be more numerous the coming week, at least all of the dealers hope so, for they could be used to good advantage right now. Owing to the general scarcity of stock and the large amount of funeral work throughout the country green goods have been in good demand and while at times there is a scarcity in one or two items, there is most always plenty of stock to go around. Boxwood appears to be in unusually good demand.

NOTES.

August Lange, who decorated the funeral car when the remains of the late governor of Minnesota reached Chicago, has received a highly complimentary letter, every member of the delegation commenting on the beauty and appropriateness of the entire plan.

Chairman Asmus of the National Flower Show Committee, is attending a meeting of that body in Philadelphia, this week.

The death of H. F. Halle, one of the old-time florists, is recorded in our obituary column this week.

Niles Center is making a strong effort to stop Du Pont de Nemours or anyone else from storing powder in the hastily constructed corrugated iron warehouses in the heart of the village where the Du Pont Powder Mills have acquired title to a ten-acre plot. The town board and others held a meeting last week when they resurrected the state laws that no powder is to be stored within a half mile of the village limits and passed an ordinance prohibiting the transportation of explosives through the village streets. Meanwhile two cars of powder are being held up outside the town limits. The residents probably remember the explosion at Prairie View, Wis., not long ago when there was a hole made big enough to put all of Niles Center in, and at which time some of the show windows in the large department stores in this city were destroyed from the shock. The people are doing everything to protect the buildings, churches and greenhouses, and claim they are going to keep the powder out if they have to fight. There are a large number of greenhouses in that vicinity, including the Stielow Range and Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove are not so very many miles away.

There were a large number of floral pieces seen at the funeral of Miss Catherine Goggin, which was held at the Holy Name Cathedral, Saturday, January 8, and also at the Council Chamber of the City Hall, where the body laid in state for 24 hours. Miss Goggin was the best friend the school teachers in this city ever had. Over 15,000 persons filed silently past the coffin just before it was closed to the public and preparations were made for the funeral cortege to move to the cathedral, where solemn requiem mass was celebrated at 10 o'clock. The largest floral piece was made by A. Vanderpoel, 4013 Colorado avenue, and was a five-foot representation of the seal of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Twelve hundred roses and carnations composed the wreath, which attracted most attention. Other large floral pieces were sent by the Chicago Federation of Labor, Illinois Federation of Labor, American Federation of Labor, Catholic Order of Foresters, Peter Reinberg and by many other societies and individuals. The orders were pretty well distributed amongst the retailers and called for an unusually large supply of stock.

W. J. Keimel started out January 10 to secure new members for the Society of American Florists and up to four o'clock had enrolled 11. Everyone who can possibly afford it ought to be a member of the national society and should remember when joining that there is no better person to give their application to than Mr. Keimel, who is always ready to devote a good share of his time to a worthy cause whenever the occasion presents itself.

Joseph C. Craig, 120 South Wabash avenue, says that he has never known a time when funeral orders were so plentiful as last week, when the sales broke all records for the past 15 years. He has experienced no trouble in securing stock, for he is a cash buyer and the lady on the dollar is as welcome as the flowers in January right now. His son, Arthur, has been confined to his home several days with a severe cold.

The A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., 1302 West Division street, has a nice line of red heart-shaped boxes to offer for St. Valentine's day, in addition to the one with a white glazed top printed in two colors with a red heart and gold arrow design that attracted so much attention in former years. Their supply is limited and all orders will be filled in rotation.

Zech & Mann are showing a large supply of fancy freesias of the variety Purity, which are in brisk demand at present. Allie Zech and Matt Mann will attend the annual convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society at St. Louis, Mo., January 27-28.

The Chicago Floral House, 41 West Randolph street, has opened a temporary store at 144 North State street. Gust P. Constantino is looking after the new place and his brother, George, is in charge at the old headquarters.

E. W. Siebrecht, of Winona, Minn., was in the city January 8 on business connected with the rebuilding of his range. He is a brother of Ed. Siebrecht, manager of the Rosery, North Clark street.

Percy Jones is having a special sale on magnolia leaves this week which he finds in good demand for funeral work owing to the general scarcity of flowers. Greens of all kinds are always a leader here.

The directors of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association held a meeting at their store on North Wabash avenue, Tuesday, January 11.

Mrs. Arthur Schutz, of Hammond, Ind., underwent a serious operation last week and is getting along as nicely as can be expected.

Word was received here this week that Henry Kusik, of H. Kusik & Co., Kansas City, Mo., was married Tuesday, January 11.

Louis Bauscher, of Freeport, has accepted a position as manager at Adolph Malchow's North Clark street store.

Clarence Bowen is now associated with his brother Eugene in the retail business at 108 East Fifty-first street.

Chas. C. Young, with C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, Mo., was seen in the market, buying stock January 10.

Nick Thinnas, 7446 North Western avenue, will grow the new scarlet carnation Aviator next season.

Paul M. Palez, of Little Rock, Ark., was a visitor in the wholesale market January 11.

H. N. Bruns received a car of German lily of the valley pips this week.

An examination will be held by the Illinois State Civil Service Commission at Anna, Carbondale, Charleston, Chicago, DeKalb, East St. Louis, Elgin, Jacksonville, Kankakee, Lincoln, Macomb, Mt. Vernon, Normal, Peoria, Pontiac, Quincy, Rockford, Springfield, Urbana and Watertown for the position of florist on Saturday, February 5, 1916. The position pays a starting salary of $55 a month with full maintenance with possibility of an increase to $75 with full maintenance. The examination was previously announced for January 8, but has been postponed until February 5, 1916, owing to lack of applicants. Duties involve the cultivation of flowers and plants, preparation and care of flower beds and lawns, supervision of persons assisting in this work. Several years' experience either in outdoor or indoor cultivation of flowers is required for this position. The examination will consist of the following parts: Training and experience, 4; technical knowledge of flower growing and greenhouse methods, 6; total 10. Applications for this position must be on file at Springfield before 5 p. m., January 29, 1916. Applications may be secured from the State Civil Service Commission at Springfield, or at room 904, 130 North Fifth avenue.

The following have signified their intention of joining the local delegation to the St. Louis convention of the American Carnation Society, leaving Tuesday, January 25 on the Wabash Railroad at 11:55 p. m.: C. L. Washburn, E. Reichling, Wm. E. Tricker, C. W. Johnson, Geo. Asmus, W. N. Rudd, P. W. Peterson, Anton Then, A. T. Pyfer, Allie Zech, John Then, J. E. Pollworth, Fred Lautenschlager, James Morton, Matt Mann, P. J. Foley, E. F. Kurovski, D. B. Dulwage and P. McKee. Others wishing to take advantage of the party rate and secure accommodation should telephone the Wabash Railroad as early as possible, Harrison 4500.

Bassett & Washburn have had an unusually large number of long distance telephone calls this week for stock, besides an additional number of telegraph and mail orders, but there is not enough to go around, even though they are cutting quite heavily in all lines. E. B. Washburn is acting as representative for the Pacific Coast states and all orders for plants from that section should be sent direct to him at 252 South Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena, Calif.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will grow the carnations C. Edw. Akehurst and Matchless on a large scale next season for both varieties have made good and deserve more bench space. Alice is another variety that is showing up remarkably well and was quite a factor in the pink class in the market last Christmas. In the plant department everything is going along nicely and the force is busy propagating for the spring supply of bedding stock.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report that Pyfer & Olsem are coming in crop with roses and quite a supply in the longer stemmed grades is now reaching the store each day. In carnations the principal offering is Herald which is arriving in splendid condition and is bringing top notch prices.

A. E. Hunt & Co., who dispose of their stock at D. E. Freres' wholesale store, reports a brisk demand for daisies at $2 per 100. They grow the varieties Chicago White, Etoile d'Or and Boston Yellow in large quantities, and have a nice supply of plants in these kinds to offer.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report business as brisk in both the shipping and local demand, the heaviest call being principally for funeral flowers. Freesias are handled in large quantities each day but the demand is so heavy for them that there are not enough to go around.

Felix Reichling says that trade is keeping up surprisingly good at Peter Reinberg's establishment and that the sales so far this month are considerably ahead of January of last year. The shipping trade especially is good and the demand is chiefly for short roses.

Weiland & Risch like the rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey more and more every day and the entire store force believe that the time is not far distant when several other varieties will be discarded to make room for the rose that has already proven its true worth.

Wieter Bros. are cutting a good supply of roses and carnations, but there is such a heavy demand that everything cleans up quickly at very satisfactory prices. American Beauty roses of fine quality are included in the daily shipments.

Philip C. Schupp has been with J. A. Budlong for 14 years, but he has never experienced such a shortage of stock and brisk demand after the holidays as this January. This house is receiving a good supply of orchids.

Ed. Hauswirth, with Archie Spencer, is director of an orchestra which is open for engagements evenings and Sundays.

Joe Erringer, with Zech & Mann, celebrated his twenty-first birthday, January 11.

Ed. Reynolds is now with J. H. McNeilly, the East Sixty-third street florist.

A prominent local wholesaler, who keeps close tab on his collections, says that in January, 1913, his collections for the first ten days of the month were three times better than this year. In 1914 they were two and one-half times as good and last year about two times better. This is surprising when one reads everywhere that the 1915 Christmas trade was the best in years and the only explanation that appears reasonable is that the majority of the florists have been unusually busy since the holidays and have delayed in getting out their statements. No doubt in another week or ten days one will hear that there is a great improvement and that money is more plentiful.

John Poehlmann, Sr., was operated upon for stomach trouble at the German Hospital, 551 Grant place, last Friday, January 7, and is doing splendidly, considering what he has gone through. His many friends throughout the country sincerely hope for a speedy recovery.

Vaughan's Seed Store is mailing its usual seasonable catalogues for spring 1916, consisting of its general descriptive and its special book for florists as well as market gardeners' and truckers' price list.

Kyle & Foerster are handling a good supply of stock notwithstanding the general shortage and particularly noticeable are some very choice sweet peas.

Visitors: Rolf Zetlitz, Lima, O.; Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York; P. Clausen, Albert Lea, Minn.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. Theodore Meyer, Waukegan; C. E. De Wever, Olivette, Mo.

HURON, S. D.—The South Dakota State Horticultural Society will hold its twenty-seventh annual meeting in this city, January 18-20.

TOLEDO, O.—The Western Avenue Greenhouse Company, with a capital stock of $10,000, has been incorporated by Arthur G. and E. M. Im Oberstag and Myrtle A. Schroeder.

BRISTOL, TENN.—“The 1915 Christmas trade was the best in the history of our business,” writes Fairmount Gardens. “The demand for plants was heavy and cut flower trade was splendid. All stock cleaned up well. Collections are not up to standard but are improving.”

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Morrison, January 6, President Keimel in the chair. The principal business of the meeting was the installation of officers for the year 1916 as follows: A. Henderson, president; Wm. E. Tricker, vice-president; Guy W. French, secretary, and Paul Klingsporn, treasurer. The new members elected included E. G. Hill and Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; W. W. Randall, Michael Staclonik and J. E. Pollworth.

The transportation committee presented report on the trip to St. Louis for the annual convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society to be held in that city, January 26-27 and was instructed to arrange with the Wabash railroad for the journey. Special cars will be attached to the Banner Midnight Flyer, leaving the Dearborn station, Chicago (Polk and Dearborn streets), January 25, at 11:55 p. m., arriving at St. Louis (Union station), at 7:53 a. m. The one way rate, Chicago to St. Louis, is $5.80 if there is a party of 10 or more on the train for this meeting. The Pullman rates, Chicago to St. Louis, are: Double lower berths, $2; upper berth, $1.60; drawing-room, $7. Berths will be ready for passengers at 10 p. m. For berth reservations and transportation, address H. L. Purdy, Wabash railroad, 68 West Adams street, Chicago. Telephone Harrison 4500. Eastern delegations for the convention are invited to join the Chicago contingent and on request the special cars of parties going to St. Louis by way of Chicago can be switched to the Banner Midnight Flyer without change of baggage or extra charge. A representative of the Wabash railroad will be on hand in convention hall, St. Louis, to arrange for the return trip.

The February meeting was set as the time for the club's annual novelty show. W. J. Keimel was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Mr. Keimel announced as his co-workers on the committee A. T. Pyfer, E. G. Hill, Wm. E. Tricker, H. O. S. Nichols, A. Miller and E. A. Ollinger. Exhibits intended for the novelty show should be addressed to A. T. Pyfer, 30 East Randolph street, Chicago, all charges prepaid. February 10 is the date of the meeting.

On motion of E. G. Hill, seconded by M. Barker, the chairman was instructed to tender the sincere sympathy of his fellow members to John Poehlmann in the serious illness which rendered an operation necessary.

E. G. Hill in response to a call from the chair gave an interesting talk on novelties and flower shows and promised to consider a more extended address for the February meeting.

The club by vote recommended that steps be taken to hold another flower show next fall and the trustees were instructed to raffle a valuable trophy for which there was no contest at the recent exhibition, the proceeds to go to the treasury.

Retiring-President W. J. Keimel announced that he is making a special effort to secure a big list of new names for the Society of American Florists and insure representation for the club on its board of directors as well as win President MacRorie's prize of $150 for the person sending in the largest number of new members, the money if won, to be turned over to the club treasury.

Chairman Asmus of the National Flower Show, spoke of the coming exhibition at Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, saying this would be the greatest show yet held by the society and urged that where possible everyone in the trade should arrange to attend.

President Henderson announced the following as chairmen of standing committees with power to add to the committees: W. J. Keimel, good of the club committee; Allie Zech, sports committee; M. Barker, transportation committee.

SUPPLY MEAGER AND PRICES JUMP.

Heavy funeral work is giving leading florists their worries over finding flowers with which to take care of orders. This condition follows a big New Year's trade, in which stock was well cleaned up. Scarcely within the experience of the trade have flowers been so scarce and high at this time of year. Carnations sell for $1 a dozen and better, and some varieties of standard roses bring a price of $5. The weather has been against local propagation, and stock from the outside is hard to procure. One prominent dealer has quit handling American Beauties for the time being because the poor quality of the blooms being shipped in are so disappointing to the consumer. The outlook is for plentiful cuttings for carnations later in the month. Social events are not a large factor in the trade just at present, but an unusual proportion of the demand is for funeral purposes. One florist delivered work of this nature to the value of $350 in one day last week. The first freesias have been received and are selling at 75 cents a dozen. In pot plants, primroses are the favorite. Sweet peas are scarce, but there is a good supply of violets.

BAD WEATHER CAUSES FLOWER FAMINE.

This writing finds the local market "hard hit" for stock. The general inclemency of the weather is largely responsible for the shortage. The days have been dark and rainy since the Christmas season and carnations and roses are suffering badly. Some say that they never saw flowers so scarce as at the present time, and truly it could hardly be much worse. Many are using artificial flowers on all their door bunches and all other work where they can possibly be substituted. The wholesale men have their share of the troubles as all the retail consumers would be willing to take about 10 times their daily allotments of stock, were it possible to supply them. With a little more sunshine, we hope to have a more favorable report for next week.

NOTES.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.'s plant at Gibsonia was the scene of a tragedy Sunday afternoon, January 9. A crowd of young people were skating on the company's pond when the ice gave way. One young man was drowned, but the rest of the party were rescued with some difficulty.

H. V. Pierce of Detroit, the steam-trap man, was in town last week installing a trap at the McCallum Company's greenhouses at Allison Park.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. is booking a large number of orders for the new scarlet carnation, Aviator, and both Manager Fisk and Superintendent Peterson are well pleased with the way the orders continue to arrive. An inspection of the greenhouses right now will find Aviator in good crop, when almost every other variety is off and a glance in the packing room will show that they are cutting heavily in this variety at present. Aviator is a heavy producer, and so far an average of over 14 blooms per plant has been cut from the stock benched September 5, 1915. The color is unusually fine and the stem is thin, wiry and stiff. Not a split carnation can be found in the entire place and Superintendent Peterson can truthfully say that Aviator is one of the best money makers that has been introduced in recent years. More bench space will be given to this variety next season for it was in exceptionally good demand for Christmas and brought unusually high prices. Akehurst is another variety that is proving to be unusually good and will be given more bench space in the future and the same holds good for Matchless and Enchantress Supreme. So far this firm has over 700,000 cuttings, all told, including the newer standard varieties, in the sand, which is more than last season and is due somewhat to the fact that they are operating the old Chicago Carnation Co.'s greenhouses in addition to their own place. Superb, another new variety which will be disseminated next season, is attracting much favorable attention and looks very promising. The stock in both the firm's ranges is in splendid condition and they expect to have a large crop for St. Valentine's day.

Labo's had the best holiday trade in years, the demand being principally for plants, although a large quantity of cut flowers were also sold. This firm expects to build at least two new greenhouses in the spring and will ask for bids from the greenhouse manufacturers in the near future.

The Sterling Floral Co. is well pleased with business and say that their holiday trade exceeded all expectations. The stock in their new Dietsch houses is in splendid shape and the outlook for the coming season is very bright.

Mrs. A. C. Rott had a very good holiday trade and is busy now with funeral work. She is ably assisted by Miss Watkins, who was formerly employed in several of the leading retail stores in England.

The Carter Floral Co. is having a good run on funeral work and experienced a very satisfactory holiday trade with a good demand for both cut flowers and plants.

Smith Brothers have everything in tip top shape at their greenhouses, especially their carnations, which are in the pink of condition.

Larson & Goranson report good business with a splendid Christmas and New Year trade.

Oklahoma City.

Business steadied down considerably on two or three days this week. Conditions did not reach the point where they could be termed real dull, however, for there has been a little something doing all the time. Bargain day sales of carnations are being featured for Saturdays and they prove good trade bringers, thousands of blooms being disposed of at these sales.

NOTES.

Almon Hall, who has a nursery near the Santa Fe right of way on Fourteenth street, contemplates putting in a line of flowering shrubs and summer flowering bulbs. He should do well, as there is a good demand here for such stock.

SUPPLY CONTINUES LIMITED.

The past week opened with a great scarcity of flowers all along the line; there was not one flower that came anywhere near filling the demand. Things began to ease up a trifle towards the end of the week, but there was little if anything to carry over. The growers say that in a week or 10 days the situation will be greatly relieved. Roses have not been up to the mark on account of their being cut too soon—poor policy this. While many of them will open later, the color is then gone and the flowers in poor shape. Some fair Richmonds and Ophelias have been seen. The Killarney family were about the most plentiful and there was a fair sprinkling of American Beauties. Lily of the valley is now quoted regularly at $5 for the special, and growers say that it may go to $8, as the pips are running poor, many coming without flowers. Callas have been in great demand as have Easter lilies; in fact, on account of the great scarcity of standard stocks, everything in blossoms has found a market. Even the supply men have profited, as many artificial flowers, such as wax roses, carnations and the like have been largely used in the cheaper grades of funeral work. Two large horseshoes made of metal porcelain covered flowers, and presented to councilmen on taking their seats last week is about the limit. To think that such monstrosities were possible in this flower loving city! Chairman Geo. C. Watson should have the club look into this. Some very choice orchid peas are seen in small quantities, and in a week or two a number of new crops will be in, when these lovely flowers will dominate the market as never before. Violets are more plentiful, the price having dropped in consequence about one-third. Daffodils are in and are in good demand.

LOCAL FLOWER SHOW COMMITTEES MEET.

As the time for the great show approaches, there is increased activity and progress all along the line. The meeting of the local committees last week was largely attended and the various reports are very encouraging. The national committee will be in this city January 12 to meet the various local committees and receive their reports. From the enthusiastic Mr. Therkildson comes the word that the great publicity the show is to obtain is to exceed by far that of any other exhibition of any character ever held in this city. This will be the greatest boost the flower business has ever received and everybody in any way connected with it should help it along in every possible way so that they in turn will be benefited.

NOTES.

The M. Rice Co. has completed all arrangements for the construction of their new warehouse and factory at 1220-24 Spring Garden street. It will exceed in size by far any building used exclusively for manufacturing florists' supplies. It is a sure indication that the florists' business is forging ahead, when supply men make such preparations to meet the increasing demand.

The new two-ton car of H. A. Dreer, Inc., is a very practical machine. Except for cases where the brain of the horse is a factor, as in bread and milk delivery over daily routes where his intelligence counts, this useful animal is fast being superseded by the swift moving and commodious car. The florist that does not now have one or more cars is surely not up to date.

Gardenias, double pink bouvardias and American Beauty roses are the headliners with the Leo Niessen Co. Cattleyas, in quantity, are a feature. The advance guard of the daffodils are in and it will be a merry race with the freesia, the sweet pea and the short-stemmed roses, all of which are popular and will help to broaden the market.

SUPPLIES AND EVERYTHING IN SEASON ALWAYS ON HAND.

There has been a large amount of funeral work the past two weeks, due to so many people dying from the grippe. Furnishing flowers for funerals is a much larger factor in the business than many of the trade realize. Preparedness for quick action in this line of work is well worth the best thought of the retailer.

An entire new floor has been laid in Convention Hall for the Auto Show now on. Other improvements have been made which if they can be held over for the spring exhibition will be of great assistance. Every effort will be made to retain them.

Edward Reid is satisfied with the business; the trouble is to get stock to meet the demand. Shawyer and Mock roses are a feature here.

At the Berger Bros. Market, freesias, orchid sweet peas and violets lead, while carnations are handled in quantity. K.

New York.

GOOD BUSINESS AND FAIR PRICES.

Business was very good in the wholesale district during the past week, nearly every stock cleaning up well at good prices. Orchids and violets remain rather cheap and are slow sellers. A heavy supply accounts for the low price of orchids, but as one dealer has remarked of violets: "It's because the people are not buying them." It has been previously pointed out in these columns that a plentiful supply of orchids at reasonable prices, cuts in on the violet market. The single violets of the best quality look better and sell better than the doubles. While it has never been our policy to "knock" anything that was passably good, a word here about the violet, Governor Herrick, may be of benefit to prospective growers. As seen in this market, it is not popular and never will be, and we advise growers to get rid of it. In roses, there is plenty of long-stemmed special stock, including American Beauties, to supply the demand, but there is a dearth of short roses, and these are what many of the buyers want. No. 2's, when they can be had, wholesale at the rate of $4 to $6 per 100. Carnations are a little more plentiful and indications point to a decline in prices, at this writing. Good stock is holding up to $6 per 100. There is also an increase in the supply of sweet peas. A limited supply of trumpet majors, tulips and freesias is now on the market. The trumpet majors and freesias bring $6 per 100 and upward. Most of the tulips are rather short, but they bring about $4 per 100. There is a fair supply of lilies and lily of the valley with little change in prices from our quotation of the past week. The weather, which was very moderate in the early days of the week, turned cold, January 7, the mercury falling that night to 10 above zero, but there was good sunshine January 8.

January 10.—The board of health and the department of police, having failed, even with their high power microscopes to discover the grippe microbe, decided that a good freeze would kill the "pesky critter" no matter where he was hiding. Now, we again have pouring rain and sloppy streets, and the investigators will have to keep busy. The market opened quiet with a light supply of roses, but enough to care for the demand. Rose prices remain firm, but carnations show a tendency to be cheaper. Orchids and violets continue cheap and slow. The narcissi, tulips and freesias are selling well as the supply is limited. Gardenias are much more plentiful and the price has fallen. There is little change in prices of green stock.

NOTES.

The Golden Flower Shop, 59 Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, celebrated Christmas by putting on a fine new auto delivery car. It is painted white and is decorated with a large bunch of single violets, this feature being done in a very natural and artistic manner. Thomas F. Reilly is now the efficient manager of this store. They had a fine holiday business.

Charles H. Mitter, who was with Young & Nugent, 42 West 28th street, during the Christmas business, left for Los Angeles, Calif., January 6, to resume his former position with the Beverley Hill hotel, where we understand acres of flowers are grown. Previous to his last eastern trip, he had been three years in Los Angeles, and while there laid out the grounds of the estate of P. Maier, the wealthy brewer. Previous to his first visit to Los Angeles, he had been 35 years in this city and conducted retail stores on Columbus and Madison avenues. He was at one time associated with E. J. and the late Henry Hession.

Charles R. Jaeger, the popular retailer of 7th avenue and 126th street, states that he had an excellent holiday business in plants. He adds that the wholesale prices on cut flowers were too high for a retailer to make much money. In Frederick Zahn, an old timer in the business, this store has an excellent designer and decorator.

Max Schling has been so busy to date that he has not had time to read the excellent biographies of him that have recently been written, but expects to be able to take a day off soon and do so. It is a fact that his store is a very busy place.

A. A. Young of Jewett City, Conn., is shipping to the Growers' Cut Flower Co. a very fine quality of carnations. They have not only large blooms and good stems, but also are great keepers. Manager Van Reyper of the Growers' Cut Flower Co. says they will keep from 8 to 10 days. The varieties comprise Enchantress and Enchantress Supreme, Alice, White Wonder and White Enchantress.

Professor E. A. White of the horticultural department of Cornell University, accompanied by about a dozen of his pupils, visited this city, January 7. The party made the rounds of a number of leading retail stores and horticultural establishments, and we believe were well pleased with their visit. Among the boys was a son of J. H. Dunlop of Toronto, Ont.

Edwin Ancker, a well known salesman for Traendly & Schenck, who has been with them 10 years, will be married, January 19, to Miss Elizabeth Bappler, a charming young lady of this city. The ceremony will take place at Holy Cross Church. Many friends will wish this fine young couple God speed and a happy voyage through life.

Guttman & Raynor, Inc., are showing good stock of the new white carnation, Peace, grown by Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, L. I.; also, of the scarlet carnation, Olive Whitman.

Angelo Dentale, the popular salesman for Young & Nugent, 42 West 28th street, is the proud father of another son. He now has two and a girl—a nice little family.

John Young & Co. are receiving fine carnations and sweet peas from Henry Weston, Hempstead, L. I.; also good roses from S. J. Reuter & Son, West-erly, R. I.

Weddings, dinners and other social events are helping G. E. M. Stumpff and his force is very busy.

James Mallon's Sons, one of the oldest retail firms of Brooklyn, report the best holiday business in their history.

Craig Muir, the retailer of 62 West 40th street, advises us that he had good holiday business and that it is keeping up.

The Horticultural Society of New York.

There will be an exhibition of plants and flowers given by the above society at the American Museum of Natural History, Wednesday, January 19. Schedules are now ready and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City. Premiums are offered for orchids, carnations, sweet peas, schizanthus, and snapdragons. One of the uses of these monthly exhibitions is to furnish opportunity to gardeners to exhibit whatever they may have in fine condition at that time, and for this reason the exhibition committee is empowered to award special prizes for things not provided for in the schedule. Gardeners are therefore invited to bring in plants or flowers of unusual interest or of unusual excellence in cultivation. The medals of the society may also be awarded to the best vases of new varieties of carnations.

A meeting of the society will be held in the afternoon, followed by a lecture by W. N. Craig, superintendent at Faulkner Farm, Brookline, Mass., on "The Home Flower Garden." This announcement insures an interesting and practical talk on a subject of much interest at the present time.

Morris Co. Gardeners' and Florists' Society

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will hold its twentieth annual dinner in Piper's hotel, Morristown, N. J., Thursday evening, January 27, 1916, at 6:30 p. m. Wm. H. Duckham, Arthur Herrington, and Chas. H. Totty, were on the committee of the first dinner the society ever held. They are the dinner committee this year. They are three lusty youngsters, still, with keen appetites, and we are looking for them to give us one of the best dinners we ever had, if only for their own sake.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., President; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., First Vice-President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer, Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20-22, 1916.

CHICAGO has been selected for the next seedsmen's convention, June 20-22.

A. E. MCKENZIE, of Brandon, Man., and family are in Chicago for a few weeks.

THE weather at Chicago does not average as steadily cold as is needed for onion sets in storage.

A. T. FERRELL and wife, Saginaw, Mich., passed through Chicago last week on their way to Hot Springs, Ariz.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, January 12, were as follows: Timothy, $6 to $8 per 100 pounds.

CARL CROPP of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, has been confined to his home this week with the epidemic lagrippe.

CHINESE NARCISSUS, it is stated by an American importing house, will be in short supply next season at advanced prices.

CHAS. M. JACKMAN, with Vaughan's Seed Store, who has been in Europe for this firm since last June, is due in New York on his return trip January 16.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH's many friends will regret to learn of his serious illness at a Cincinnati hospital where he had to undergo an operation for trouble of the intestines.

W. W. BARNARD, president of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, continues to make satisfactory progress toward recovery and expects to leave for California January 16.

FOUR thousand tons of onions and 5,000 tons of carrots have been purchased on Puget Sound for shipment to Ladner, B. C., where they will be canned for shipment to Europe for use of British and French armies.

LESTER L. MORSE, who attended the executive committee meeting of the American Seed Trade Association at New York, January 7, returned to Philadelphia, where he and Mrs. Morse have been stopping for some time.

MADISON, WIS.—The L. L. Olds Seed Co. reports a substantial increase in its business both in the wholesale and retail departments, the total increase in the seven years the company has been in business here being about 400 per cent.

HARRISBURG, PA.—At the annual meeting of the Holmes Seed Co., the following officers were elected: B. F. Myers, president; Geo. A. Gorgas, vice-president; Frank R. Leib, secretary; H. W. Hill, treasurer; H. L. Holmes, general manager.

LATEST advices from southern France seed districts indicate that some seed crops are coming forward from those St. Remy concerns some of which have been in trouble with the military authorities over unauthorized shipments to Germany.

California Crops.

Gilroy, January 8.—L. W. Wheeler, manager of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., who has just returned from his eastern trip, writes that seed crops in California are mostly planted under favorable conditions. Heavy rains the past week have stopped all operations but so far have done little damage. At this date the outlook is favorable. Last season's surplus has been well cleaned up with the possible exception of some sorts of lettuce. The 1916 contracts are reported as showing a decided increase with all growers.

American Seed Trade Association.

The executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association met in New York January 7 with the following in attendance: President J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, N. Y.; Secretary C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Ex-President Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; and Herman Simmers, Toronto, all members of the committee, and on invitation Henry Nungesser, M. H. Duryea and J. B. Deamud, representing the New York members. It was voted to hold the next convention June 20-22, 1916, in Chicago, headquarters to be announced later. A tentative program was arranged and the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association in annual meeting assembled recommends to the association that beginning January 1, 1917, that this association and its members use the cental system exclusively by offering all grass, clover, garden and field seeds, potatoes and onion sets by the pound and hundred pounds and abolishing the listing or trading in quarts, pecks and bushels.

C. E. KENDEL, Sec'y.

Ferrell Increases Capital.

Incorporation articles were filed December 27, with the county clerk by A. T. Ferrell & Co., manufacturers of seed-cleaning and canning machinery, Saginaw, Mich., fixing the capitalization at $500,000, issued two-fifths and three-fifths respectively in preferred and common stock. A. T. Ferrell holds 4,700 shares of stock, 200 of common are in the possession of Frederick M. Marks, and Samuel E. Nimmons has 100 shares preferred. The company's assets are placed at $482,347.73. There will be no change in the management of the business. The company incorporated to be better able to care for its increasing business.

The preferred stock of the new company is an eight per cent stock, payable semi-annually. President Ferrell in speaking of the business said that the "outlook for next year was exceedingly good."

This company has been one of the most successful institutions in this city. Established by Mr. Ferrell more than a quarter of a century ago with a very limited capital it has grown steadily year after year and for many years has been recognized as one of the leading institutions of its kind in the country. Much of its phenomenal success has been due to the mechanical genius and business acumen of Mr. Ferrell, who has led the way in perfecting new devices and machinery and developed the sales in an extraordinary manner.

It is announced that about ten of the leading mechanics in the factory will take stock in the new company. Two of its officers, Messers Marks and Nimmons, have been associated with Mr. Ferrell many years and have contributed largely to the up-building and development of the business.

The stockholders organized December 28, with the following officers: A. T. Ferrell, president and general manager; Arnold Boutell, vice-president; Frederick M. Marks, secretary; Samuel E. Nimmons, treasurer. These officers with Clarence H. Brand comprise the board of directors.

Burpee's Fortieth Anniversary Supplement

"Forty Years of Burpee Service" is the title of the fortieth anniversary supplement being distributed by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., commemorative of two score years of wonderful business success. The cover of the book is especially attractive, and reflects great credit upon W. F. Therkildson, advertising manager of the company, as well as the 80 bright, well illustrated pages arranged under his supervision. The text is interesting and cleverly tells the history of the firm and its founder in a number of articles by well-known writers which have appeared in many periodicals of prominence in the United States and Europe. The Burpee Buildings at Philadelphia, the business offices, and the various other departments are shown in pictures and the story of the routine and system employed in caring for the enormous volume of business is interestingly told. Fordhook Farms, Doylestown, Pa., Sunnybrook Farm, Swedesboro, N. J., and Floradale Farms, Lompoc, Calif., are also described and the accompanying illustrations are not only attractive, but help much in the telling of a story well worth the reading.

Another anniversary souvenir that is being presented by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. to their friends and customers is a booklet of 40 pages entitled, "Best Ways to Cook Fresh Vegetables," by Mrs. Anna B. Scott, nationally famed as a cooking expert and an authority on household economics. Various ways of preparing about 30 varieties of vegetables are given in the recipes.

Bids for Government Seed Contracts.

The 61 bids for government seed contracts were opened at the office of seed distribution, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., January 11. This is the first time in many years European growers failed almost entirely to bid, only two English and two French firms making offers. In former years the foreign bidders were almost as numerous as those of the United States. The concerns tendering bids were as follows:

- Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, Calif.
- Arkansas Valley Seed House, Lakin, Kans.
- J. K. Armsby Co., San Francisco, Calif.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, January 11. — Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 20 to 25 cents per carton; lettuce, cases 30 cents; radishes, 30 cents to 40 cents per dozen bunches; celery, 10 to 20 cents per bunch; tomatoes, six baskets, $2.00 to $3.25; cucumbers, dozen $1.00 to $1.75.

New York, January 11.—Celery, per bunch of 12 stalks, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $1.25 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 30 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $3.50; lettuce, per dozen, 15 cents to 60 cents.

Cold Storage for Vegetables.

Vegetable growers are slowly beginning to realize the benefits and advantages to be derived from cold storage. There are a number of factors responsible for this condition. The main one is no doubt the labor problem. It is a much more simple process to run a crop of celery into cold storage and out again than to trench the celery. Further, cold storage gives us more assurance of success than the natural method as conditions are under control. We have before us records showing that any given date may vary enormously from year to year as regards weather conditions; for instance, January 15, in the run of ten years, has given us variations from 65° in the shade to 20° below zero. Coupled with these extremes we may have bare ground or several feet of snow, or our land covered with water. It is readily seen that under such varying conditions storage outdoors is a hazard at best, and coupled with a great deal of labor, often of the most undesirable nature. Further, we must consider the ability to reach our market at a given time.

Next to the above may be mentioned the capricious customer, who is sure to demand the very things that are out of season. We have experimented considerably with cold storage for a number of years, and our subjects have ranged from green lima beans to cabbage; especially have we put pressure on head lettuce to prolong the season in early summer and late fall. The rules for cold storage are now fairly well established, and by paying strict attention to them losses can be avoided. To begin with, it only pays to store practically first-class stock in first-class condition. By first-class we mean produce that will command a high market price; by first-class condition we mean many factors, such as mature, yet not over-ripe; not damaged by rough handling; not packed in large bulk to induce heating; not exposed to warm influences after packing; neither wet from rain, or dew, and not damaged by freezing in the field. If we can control all these, we must see to it that our goods are quickly cooled after packing. To this end they should not be piled high or deep in the cold room; much better results are obtained by precooling the packages either in a separate room or in the regular room by complete exposure on all sides.

Next we may consider ideal cold storage. This means a temperature low enough to arrest the development of decay germs, yet not so low as to hurt our goods; this temperature must be constant, as a fluctuation is generally disastrous. Our goods contain moisture; in operation as soon as our goods are cooled to the temperature of the storage room, there is no appreciable loss of moisture so long as the temperature remains constant. An increase in temperature means expanded air, which will hold more moisture, which is immediately extracted from our goods, causing wilting. On the other hand, any lowering of the temperature has the opposite tendency—shrinking the air and squeezing out the excess moisture, thus depositing moisture on our goods, causing mold and discoloring. Therefore, when contracting for cold storage we must arrange for these points. If our goods are moved from room to room, as they often are to suit the convenience of the operators, we will surely suffer. Also will we suffer if a large amount of new goods are introduced into our room unless these new goods have been precooled to our temperature before admittance. Another factor may be undesirable odors; thus our goods may be stored in the same room with fish, oranges, onions or other strong-smelling subjects, rendering our goods unsalable owing to absorbed flavors. Last, we must consider freezing temperatures. Thus, apples do not freeze as readily as lettuce, nor will dry onions; and any freezing of green vegetables in storage is surely ruinous. It will be seen that the road to success is not so easy, and here, as elsewhere, eternal vigilance brings its reward.

American Association of Nurserymen.

E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., President;

dent; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
Forty-first annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., June, 1916

LAFAYETTE, ILL.—George A. White has sold his nursery to George Vansickle of West Jersey and will remove to Kewanee, Ill.

DANSVILLE, N. Y.—A petition was filed January 3, by G. Walter Williams individually and as surviving partner in the firm of Denton, Williams & Denton, nurserymen, of this city. Liabilities are $5,546.49 and assets $5,026.50.

Torreya Nucifera.

Of the genus Torreya, which is related to the Yews, there are four species found in Florida, California, Japan and China. The Japanese species, T. nucifera, is well established in the arboretum, and one of the trees produced a few of its green olive-like fruits this year. In Japan this Torreya is a magnificent tree sometimes 90 feet high, with a massive trunk and a dense crown of dark green shining leaves. It should be better known in this climate, where it is apparently one of the rarest of exotic trees. The best specimen, probably, in the United States is in the Hunnewell Pinetum at Wellesley in this state. The peculiarity of this tree is that it does not begin to grow until July. In spite, however, of its short growing season it makes long annual shoots and increases rapidly in height. There is a group of this tree among the laurels at the base of Hemlock Hill; there is a plant of Torreya californica among the exotic conifers near the top of Hemlock Hill, where it has been kept alive for several years by careful winter protection. As an ornamental tree it has no value in this climate.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

The Crime of Being a Nurseryman.

A paper by W. D. Somerville, Los Angeles, Calif., read at the fifth annual meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen, San Francisco, Calif., August 12-14, 1915.

If he sells plants that do not grow after being allowed to dry out, go unpruned, not cultivated, etc., he should be tarred and feathered. If he substitutes even in the interest of the purchaser, he is to be damned.

If flies buzz on his premises, bugs crawl on his land, worms inhabit his soil, if mold is found in his greenhouse, fungus on his plants and heraudamit in his system, bugologists, inspectors and horticultural commissioners usually throw him out on the firing line and proceed to shoot him full of regulations and quarantine his business, because God allowed crawling things on his goods and bacteria and microbes to wander over the surface of the earth.

If he is ambitious to advance in his chosen vocation and puts something new on the market, he is stigmatized as a charlatan and pretender—others have done better and are more scientific; if he is docile and plods along the even tenor of his way he is an ass of the purest ray serene.

If he gets a living price for his goods, he is elevated to the position of a robber baron; if he sells at a low price, so the dear peepul can buy freely, he is a menace to the profession. If he advertises liberally and issues a good catalogue, there are those of his kind who dub him a high-brow; if he don't advertise, the fourth estate dubs him a damphool.

If he presumes to use parcels post he must be fumigated, his goods sent to the purchaser, diagnosed, and if found fretted or lousy, sent to an embalming establishment to be renovated, repaired, scrubbed, pickled, disinfected, or else take their place with the empty tomato can on the dump. If passed by the censor, they may be returned to purchaser, if postage is forthcoming. Of course by this time the plant will be like the Irishman's horse fed on saw dust: viz., dead.

Nature, the eternal energy, the unknown and unknowable, may have designed the nurseryman for a benefactor to mankind, and one who woos nature close to her children, a condition leading to haloes, laurels, fellowship and kindness of thought and action; continual harassment, restright, negative legislation, drastic regulation, Pooch-Bah orders and restraining influences have made of him the champion criminal not only of California but of the continent and of the planet—the earth. And yet, my friends, he is a decent sort of a fellow—a God-fearing man, who wants to do right, is constantly striving for the attainment of an ideal. Don't you think the helping hand is better than the smashing ax? Don't you think that he has been somewhat misjudged; that outside regulation and restraining measures have singled him out of the mass for the doing of things that are God's rather than man's? If you want to do away with bugs and molds, or worms and injurious germs, why not go to first causes, or if that is not possible, why not grapple with the universe instead of an individual? In other words, allow nothing to be transported without inspection. Why should soap, the home of certain vermin, go free, while trees and plants must be infected? Man made the former, God made the latter. Why not hold him to account?

ATHENS, GA.—The annual meeting of the Georgia State Horticultural Society will be held here January 17-19.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The Missouri State Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting in this city, January 12-14.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—Carillo & Co., florists and nurserymen, have incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The stockholders are Benj. B. Jacobs, Walter R. Siebrecht and Louis T. Carillo.

LINCOLN, NEB.—The annual meeting of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society will be held in this city January 18-20, with a fruit and flower show. A large attendance of the florists of the state is expected.

GREENHOUSE MATERIALS

Rafters, Bars, Gutters and Ventilators of Heart Red Cypress. For small work or large installations. Pecky Cypress and Common Cypress for bench material.

Single Glass Hotbed Sash Made extra strong of Red Cypress. All tenons are made extra large and then saturated in creosote—the long-life wood preservative. A round oak crossbar securely fastened to center and outside bars makes better sash. Try a few of these sash, compare them with others, and you will want more.

Better quality—low price. The standard of excellence in under-glass growing is found in Callahan products.
