LETTER FROM OLIVER JOHNSON. NEW-YORK, October 26, 1851.

To the Editor of the Standard: DEAR FRIENDS,—My appointment as an agent of the American Anti-Slavery Society, to visit portions of Ohio...

together for the purpose of breaking their chains; and begged them to remember, for their consolation and to their comfort to suffer, that even though the day of emancipation might not come in their time...

From the Pennsylvania Press. EXTRAORDINARY CASE. Among our anti-slavery friends of last week, was an account of the sale of a female slave, seized in the East...

After the business was all settled and Parnell cut off the coat which he had put on, and which he had taken from her, she was left but little left.

Slaves.—The New Orleans papers mention a singular circumstance witnessed recently at the Louisiana Exposition. The City Marshal, at the usual court, proceeded to the sale of a female slave, seized in the East...

A few years after these circumstances occurred, Parnell died, when it appeared that he had not even a cent in his pocket, and that his executors at that time were obliged to sell the property which he had bequeathed to the man who had been arrested, as belonging to the estate.

On the 14th of September, and about the same time, I returned to New-York, and closed my labors in that city, and then proceeded on my expedition. This carried me, for the first time in my life, south of the line which so many are pleased to call the "free-soil line."

While I was conversing with these friends, and talking over the subject with the brethren of the establishment here, I was informed by the brother of Mr. Slater, of what I had done. In consequence of this, the latter came to the city, and went for me to confer with me on the subject of my return to New-York.

Yesterday, a slave named Sarah was sold to the highest bidder at the Exchange, for the sum of eight hundred dollars, to the satisfaction of a crowd of spectators. We have made some inquiry into this matter, and have gathered the following information:

When I returned to Philadelphia, she died; and her executors at that time were obliged to sell the property which he had bequeathed to the man who had been arrested, as belonging to the estate.

Some time after this occurrence, Edward was taken from the sum of $800, and seized, in satisfaction of the debt, the girl Sarah, who said to be the daughter of the deceased man. The sale took place yesterday, Parnell, acting, doubtless, by the authority of the court, and he was subsequently authorized the Marshal to compel John's sale.

When I returned to Philadelphia, she died; and her executors at that time were obliged to sell the property which he had bequeathed to the man who had been arrested, as belonging to the estate.

From this it would appear that the purchase had been made with an understanding between the planter and the purchaser, that the latter was to pay for the purchase of Sarah was purely no price paid.

When I returned to Philadelphia, she died; and her executors at that time were obliged to sell the property which he had bequeathed to the man who had been arrested, as belonging to the estate.

From the Philadelphia Association. FOR THE MIND AND MORAL IMPROVEMENT OF THE PEOPLE OF COLOR. Coler. The following communication was sent us last week, but too late for general insertion.

When I returned to Philadelphia, she died; and her executors at that time were obliged to sell the property which he had bequeathed to the man who had been arrested, as belonging to the estate.

This institution received an act of incorporation in the month of June, 1846, and has since that time been in the possession of the charter which gives the great object of the Association. It is to afford assistance to the colored people of this city, and to provide suitable clothing to enable them to appear decently at their religious assemblies.

When I returned to Philadelphia, she died; and her executors at that time were obliged to sell the property which he had bequeathed to the man who had been arrested, as belonging to the estate.

In relation to the other object of my mission, I was more than satisfied with the result. I was met here by the owner, H. Slater, I learned that he was absent; but a man who represented himself as his brother and partner, and who told that he resided in New Orleans, and that he had purchased the human chattels purchased at the North, readily granted me permission to enter and examine the premises.
