TENTH REGIMENT.

BY REV. EDWIN M. HAYNES, D. D., CHAPLAIN TENTH REGIMENT.

THE Tenth regiment was recruited from all parts of the State. Gen. William Y. W. Ripley of Rutland, a most gallant officer and intelligent gentleman, who had won a high military reputation as Lieut.-Colonel of the First U. S. Sharpshooters, was appointed Colonel, but on account of wounds received at Malvern Hill, from which he was then suffering, he was compelled to decline the appointment. Col. A. B. Jewett, who had been appointed Lieut.-Colonel, was then made Colonel. Captain Eaton, of the Second regiment, was appointed Major, but sickness prevented his acceptance, and Gen. William W. Henry, 1st Lieutenant Co. D, also of the Second regiment, was commissioned Major. John H. Edson was Lieut.-Colonel.

Mustered into the U. S. service September 1, 1862, the regiment left Brattleboro on the 6th, reaching Washington on the 8th, and went into quarters at Camp Chase near Arlington Heights the next day. On the 17th the regiment was posted along the Maryland side of the Potomac River in little camps of companies from Muddy Branch to Edward's Ferry, and ordered to guard the fords.

Remaining in these scattered positions until the middle of October, the outposts of what were known as the Defences of Washington, the regiment was then ordered to assemble at the mouth of Seneca Creek, a low marshy spot, a place which proved to be a camp of fever and death. In this region, at Offut's Cross-Roads, Rockville, White's Ford, Conrad's Ferry, Mouth of the Monocacy, and Poolesville, the regiment remained until the 24th of June, 1863, having been in the meantime brigaded with the Thirty-ninth Massachusetts, Fourteenth New Hampshire and Twenty-third Maine regiments. To this brigade were added Sleeper's Tenth Massachusetts Battery, and a squadron of the Sixth Michigan Cavalry, commanded successively by Generals Stoneman and Grover, Colonels Davis and Jewett. The duties of these troops, during a period of nine months, were comparatively light, consisting of picket and guard duty at the fords of the Potomac and cross-roads a few miles into the country. Although there were a number of "scares" and reports of "The rebels are coming," still, during all these months, the regiment had no encounter with the enemy.

On the 22d of June the Tenth regiment received orders to march at once to Harper's Ferry; it was soon after incorporated with the Army of the Potomac, and assigned to the Third Corps, First Brigade, Third Division. Thence onward this regiment participated in the battles and marches of the Third Corps during the remainder of the military existence of that Corps, and in the destinies of the Army of the Potomac up to July 6, 1864.

At the time of the reorganization of the Potomac Army in March, 1864, when the Third and the First Corps were broken up, the veteran troops of their heroic brigades were absorbed in the Divisions of the Second, Fifth, and Sixth Corps, and the Tenth regiment was assigned to the First Brigade, Third Division of the Sixth Corps.

The first engagement of this regiment, which rose to the dignity of a battle, was the action at Locust, or Orange Grove, Va., on the 27th of November, 1863. Gen. W. H. Morris, its brigade commander, speaks of it in the following terms: "The enemy was holding a fence on the crest of a hill in our front. I ordered the Tenth Vermont to charge and take it, and the regiment advanced in gallant style and took the crest. I cannot speak of the conduct of the officers and men with too much praise; though the regiment had never before been under sharp fire, they behaved with the determined bravery and steadiness of veterans." Our losses were thirteen killed and fifty-seven wounded. Capt. H. W. Kingsley was severely wounded, and Maj. Edwin Dillingham on General Morris' staff was taken prisoner. Although this battle did not end the campaign, yet there was no more fighting in which this regiment was at all engaged.

In the Wilderness Campaign of 1864, the Tenth regiment was fortunate in its position, at least, in the first day's series of battles, being upon the extreme right of the Union Army, and therefore suffered next to nothing from the fierce assaults made and sustained on the left and center. Still, the regiment steadily advanced in line of battle from the Rapidan River to Orange Pike, which the men crossed under a terrific shelling of the enemy's batteries in plain sight, they springing over between discharges. The next morning, however, by a redistribution of the Union lines, these troops were crowded back to the north side of the pike, and to the rear of the main line. Here they remained undisturbed during most of the day; but about sunset they were suddenly called upon to meet a crisis. The enemy flanked the front line, and were pouring swiftly down upon the second line and swarming around its right when the order was instantly given to change front, and the Tenth Vermont and the One Hundred Sixth New York sprang to their feet and formed immediately across the line of our retreating troops and the pursuing rebels. Here the men fixed bayonets, and falling upon their knees, presented a barrier so formidable as to at once check the retreat, and cause the enemy to retire. The loss of the regiment was about a dozen men in killed and wounded.

In the bloody struggles around Spottsylvania Court House, the more strategic operations on the North and South Anna Rivers, Hanover Court House, and Totopotomoy Creek, the actions of the Tenth regiment may be partially summarized as follows: Many exhausting marches, eager watching face to face with the foe, skirmishing, fighting in a desultory or regular manner when practicable—all phases of warfare to occupy, but little by which any regimental command may be distinguished from another.

In the twelve days' operations at Cold Harbor, the Tenth regiment suffered more than it had in all of its previous engagements in this campaign. Captains Frost and Darrah, Lieutenants Stetson and Newton were killed. Colonel Henry, Captains Blodgett and Hunt were severely wounded, and Lieutenant Thompson was taken prisoner. The several engagements of the regiment from June 1st to the 12th, reduced its numbers to twelve officers and three hundred and fifty-two men. But their services were highly commended in orders. Capt. S. H. Lewis captured a rebel Major and a Lieutenant single handed. The Fifty-first North Carolina regiment were made prisoners, the commanding officer surrendering his sword, with great formality, to Capt. E. B. Frost.

When General Grant swung his army across the James River, instead of following the main force directly to the front of Petersburg, the Sixth Corps was sent to Bermuda Hundred to assist General Butler in a contemplated advance at that point, but aside from standing in the open field long enough to receive a vigorous shelling, which resulted in the loss of a few men, the regiment did nothing here, and soon returned with the Corps to the Army of the Potomac to join in the numerous engagements which finally completed the investment of Petersburg.

The Tenth remained in this vicinity seventeen days, moving from point to point, fighting, throwing up earthworks, tearing up railroads, and having a bad time generally, when, on the 6th of July it was ordered to Harper's Ferry with the whole of the Third Division, in order to meet a rebel advance into Maryland. But this Division, or rather the First Brigade with one regiment of the Second Brigade, were stopped at Frederick City about noon on the 8th, and reported to Gen. Lew Wallace. Near here lay a rebel army, fifteen thousand strong, under Gen. Jubal Early. General Wallace's forces consisted of the troops above mentioned, two thousand raw militia, one battery of six six-pound guns, and a small mountain howitzer, in all five thousand troops.

That night General Wallace withdrew his little force across the Monocacy River, and posted it so as to cover the Washington pike, three miles from the city. The next day it was utterly overwhelmed by the vastly numerical superiority of its adversary, after a most stubborn resistance of nine hours. The consequences of this heroic struggle, so long maintained and against such odds, were very great. Speaking of it in his "Personal Memoirs," General Grant says: "General Wallace contributed on this occasion by the defeat of the troops under him, a greater benefit to the cause than often falls to the lot of a commander of an equal force, to render by means of victory," and in referring to the retreat of Early from Fort Stephens on the 12th, three days later, he says: "There is no knowing how much this result was contributed to by Gen. Lew Wallace, leading what might well be called almost a forlorn hope. If Early had been but one day earlier, he might have entered the Capital before the arrival of the re-enforcements I had sent." General Wallace in his report of the battle says: "It would be difficult to say enough in praise of the veterans who made this fight." Early was detained at the Mono-cacy thirty-six hours by this engagement, severely punished, and utterly defeated in his purpose to capture Washington.

Moving to Washington by way of the Relay House, for the succeeding four weeks the regiment is occupied, with other troops, in marching up the Shenandoah River as far as Berryville, crossing the Potomac at Ball's Bluff, back to Washington through Snicker's Gap, and on over the same and different routes to Harper's Ferry, down to Frederick and the Monocacy, and again to Harper's Ferry. Here on the 8th of August was established the "Middle Military Department," with Maj.-Gen. P. H. Sheridan in command. The Tenth is now a part of General Sheridan's forces operating in the Shenandoah Valley, and continually engaged in that region between Harper's Ferry and Mount Crawford, sharing in all the operations of Sheridan's notable campaign in the valley.

At the battle of Winchester on the 19th of September the casualties in this regiment were ten killed and forty-six wounded. Among those mortally wounded were Maj. Edwin Dillingham, commanding the regiment, and Lieut. D. G. Hill. Lieut. L. A. Abbott was severely wounded, and Capt. George E. Davis slightly. Captain Davis did not leave his company.

At the battle of Fisher's Hill the 22d, the Tenth lost four men killed and five wounded. Capt. John A. Hicks was severely wounded.

At the battle of Cedar Creek the 19th of October, the Tenth lost in killed twenty-two. Two officers—Capt. L. D. Thompson and Lieut. B. B. Clark, were killed. Eight other officers were wounded—Adj. Wyllys Lyman, Captains Davis and Nye, Lieutenants White, Wheeler, Welch, Read, and Fuller.

Each of these battles is prominent and some of them are famous in history, and for the part taken in each the officers and men of the Tenth were complimented in general orders.

The regiment remained in the vicinity of Cedar Creek and beyond twenty days, then moving north to Kernstown, a little hamlet near Winchester, a little more desultory fighting took place; it was of small account, however, few troops only taking part in it.

Here on the 8th of November the Vermont troops held a Presidential election. On the 24th the army in the valley observed Thanksgiving Day. Each soldier was supplied with three-fourths of a pound of turkey or chicken, a gift of the loyal citizens of New York City.

On the 3d of December the regiment was ordered back to Petersburg, where it arrived on the 5th; actively engaged in the operations of the investing armies at Hatcher's Run and on the Weldon railroad until the 23d, when it went into winter quarters near the last named place south of Petersburg, until the 29th of March, 1865, doing little except extraordinary picket duty during these four months. There was, however, a notable exception to this heavy routine on the 25th. On that date General Lee made his famous demonstration on Forts Stedman and Haskell; ordered to assist in the defeat of this movement, the Tenth was so skilfully led by Lieut.-Col. George B. Damon as to capture one hundred and sixty prisoners on the enemy's entrenched picket line.

In the advance of the army on the 2d of April the position of the Tenth was in front of Fort Welch, and in the grand movement all along the line Lieutenant-Colonel Damon claims that this command was the first of the Division to plant its regimental colors inside of the enemy's fortified line. On the 3d, the regiment entered Petersburg with the victorious army.

In the subsequent six days' fighting and pursuit of the enemy, the Tenth was continuously occupied; but it would be impossible to designate the services of any particular regimental organization where all were whirled on to the supreme crisis reached on the 9th, where victory was shared alike by all.

On the 22d of June the officer in command, Maj. John A. Salisbury, transferred fourteen officers and one hundred thirty-six men to the Fifth regiment, and at Burlington on the 27th, the balance of the regiment, thirteen officers and four hundred fifty-one men, were mustered out of the U. S. service.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT.

(FIRST REGIMENT HEAVY ARTILLERY.)

BY JAMES M. WARNER, BRIGADIER AND BREVET MAJOR-GENERAL U. S. VOLS.,

And ALDACE F. WALKER, (Chairman Inter-State Commerce Railway Association,) LIEUTENANT-COLONEL AND BREVET COLONEL ELEVENTH REGIMENT.

THE First Artillery, Eleventh Vermont Volunteers, was the largest Vermont regiment. Its aggregate membership, officers and men, was 2,320. It was originally recruited as an infantry regiment in the summer of 1862. Being assigned to duty in the Northern Defences of Washington, it was soon changed from infantry to heavy artillery by order of the War Department, and its enlargement to the regular heavy artillery standard was authorized. Further recruiting followed, which resulted in giving it twelve companies (called batteries) of one hundred fifty men each, with three Majors, with four Lieutenants to each battery. The number of non-commissioned officers was also enlarged.

The service of the regiment at Washington embraced a period of a year and eight months, chiefly employed in constructing and garrisoning the three well-known fortifications named Fort Slocum, Fort Stevens, and Fort Totten. Four other forts were occupied by the regiment during the latter part of its artillery service, giving it a front of about seven miles, facing north, from East Creek to Rock Creek. These works mounted over two hundred heavy guns and mortars, and were connected by a continuous line of rifle pits. The line thus occupied was about four miles from the city, beyond the Soldiers' Home, and was afterwards ineffectually attacked by General Early. During its occupancy by the Eleventh Vermont the regiment became noted for its proficiency in drill and thorough discipline. It assumed the red chevrons and shoulder straps of the artillery arm, and added an artillery flag to its colors, crossed cannons on a yellow field. Its camps were well-built wooden structures, with a fine hospital. It was the daily resort of visitors from the city. No more pleasant or cheerful experiences were ever the lot of soldiers in actual war than those enjoyed by this regiment during the whole of the year 1863 and the first three months of 1864.

After the battle of the Wilderness, General Grant summoned all available troops to the re-enforcement of the Army of the Potomac, and this regiment with others was ordered to the front as infantry, though still bearing its yellow flag and wearing red trimmings upon its uniforms. It reported for duty near Spottsylvania Court House with 1,500 men in line, and at once became a member of the Old Vermont Brigade, whose five regiments had been reduced to scarce 1,200 muskets. In order to handle the Eleventh on the march and in battle it became necessary to divide it into three battalions, giving the Majors practically regimental commands. In this manner it fought to the end of the war in the Sixth Army Corps. Its active service was only eleven months. During this brief period 155 of its members were killed in action, or died of wounds received in action; 175 died in Confederate prisons, and 457 were wounded. These figures demonstrate the severity of the duty it was called upon to perform, and in the performance of which it never flinched for an instant. Being placed by the side of the veteran regiments of the Vermont Brigade, the Eleventh was on its mettle from the outset, and soon added to its discipline the experience of actual campaigning necessary to make it the equal of any command in the army. The list of its engagements appended shows that it was in every battle fought by the Sixth Corps from May, 1864, to April, 1865. The occasions most vividly remembered are, the heavy artillery fire to which it was subjected at Spottsylvania, May 18; the battle of Cold Harbor, where it suffered heavily; the bitter episode on the Weldon road, where almost an entire battalion was captured by General Mahone; the return to Washington and the repulse of General Early's attack on Fort Stevens; the sharp engagement on the skirmish line at Charlestown on August 21; the battle of the Opequan, when General Sheridan sent the rebels "whirling through Winchester;" the capture of Fisher's Hill; the battle of Cedar Creek, with the soul-stirring incident of Sheridan's ride when he drew rein on Rienzi in front of the Vermont Brigade, and at once announced to its officers that he would fight the battle out "on Getty's line;" the winter siege of Petersburg, culminating in the charge of April 2, when the Sixth Corps went through the rebel entrenchments in the early morning twilight, capturing what has been called the strongest line of works in America in fifteen minutes, during which 1,100 men were killed or wounded; and the pursuit of Lee's flying army to Appomattox Court House, followed by the final march to Danville of one hundred miles in four days, where the Sixth Corps remained until the last rebel had laid down his arms.

The regiment was fortunate in its officers. Its Colonel from enlistment until after the fighting was over, was Gen. James M. Warner of Middlebury, a West Point graduate, who had seen service on the plains in the regular army, a thorough soldier, and a universal favorite. He was shot through the neck in the regiment's first engagement at Spottsylvania, rejoined his command when it entered the Shenandoah Valley, commanded the brigade at the battle of Opequan, and was assigned the next day to command the First Brigade of Getty's Division, a detail of which continued until the close of the war, and in which he gained great credit, especially at Fisher's Hill, Cedar Creek, and the capture of Petersburg, being finally promoted to Brigadier-General of Volunteers, and Brevet Brigadier-General, U. S. A.

The first Lieutenant-Colonel was R. C. Benton, an experienced and capable officer, whose health broke down in the hard service of May, 1864, compelling his resignation. He was succeeded by George E. Chamberlin, previously Senior Major, an exceedingly gallant gentleman, who was killed at Charlestown. Maj. Charles Hunsdon then became lieutenant-colonel, commanding the regiment in the absence of General Warner most of the time thereafter, and finally promoted to the Colonelcy. Maj. Aldace F. Walker then became the last lieutenant-colonel. He was in command of the regiment at the battle of the Opequan. Other majors were George D. Sowles, Robert Templeton, and Darius J. Safford, the latter remaining in the service after the conclusion of the war as Lieutenant-Colonel in command of a battalion which was not mustered out until some time after the rest of the regiment. Maj. Charles Buxton was killed at the Opequan before his commission reached him. Surgeon C. B. Park and Chaplain Arthur Little deserve a special line of generous recognition.

Brevets for gallant and meritorious service were conferred upon Col. James M. Warner, Maj. Aldace F. Walker, Capt. James E. Eldredge, Lieut. Henry C. Baxter, Capt. George G. Tilden, Lieutenants Henry J. Nichols, George A. Bailey, John H. Macomber, and Charles H. Anson. Several officers succeeded in making their escape from rebel prisons to the Union lines. One, Lieut. Edward B. Parker, while endeavoring to escape, was seriously bitten by blood-hounds on his trail, and died of his injuries a few days later.

TWELFTH REGIMENT.

---

BY HON. GEORGE GRENVILLE BENEDICT, STATE MILITARY HISTORIAN, LIEUTENANT AND
A. D. C. ON THE STAFF OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL STANNARD, COMMANDING SECOND BRIGADE.

THE Twelfth regiment was the first of the five regiments of State militia furnished by Vermont in response to President Lincoln's call of August 4, 1862, for three hundred thousand militia for nine months' service. It comprised the first ten companies of Vermont volunteer militia which responded to the call. These were the West Windsor Guards (Co. A), Woodstock Light Infantry (Co. B), Howard Guard of Burlington (Co. C), Tunbridge Light Infantry (Co. D), Ransom Guards of St. Albans (Co. E), New England Guard of Northfield (Co. F), Allen Grays of Brandon (Co. G), Bradford Guards (Co. H), Saxton's River Light Infantry of Rockingham (Co. I), and Rutland Light Guard (Co. K). Seven of these, viz: B, C, E, F, G, H, and K companies had formed part of the First regiment, though under different company officers and with many different members. The regiment was organized in obedience to the State constitution, the privates electing the company officers, and these electing the field officers. Many of the officers had seen service. Colonel Blunt had been adjutant of the Third, and lieutenant-colonel of the Sixth regiment. Lieutenant-Colonel Farnham and Major Kingsley had held commissions in the First regiment, and a dozen or more of the company officers had served in the ranks of that regiment. The material of the regiment was of the best Vermont stock. Many citizens of property and standing and earnest loyalty, whose professional and business engagements forbade their enlisting for a longer term, carried muskets in the ranks, and no Vermont regiment in after years furnished more men of prominence in civil life, the names of two governors of Vermont, a quarter-master general, a railroad commissioner, a State librarian, a State historian, and a number of State senators and leading citizens, being found in its roll.

The regiment went into camp at Brattleboro September 25, 1862; was mustered into the United States service October 4, with nine hundred ninety-six officers and men; left for the field October 7, and went into camp on Capitol Hill, Washington, October 10, being attached for three weeks to Derron's Brigade of Casey's Division. October 30, the other four nine months regiments having arrived, the Second Vermont Brigade was organized, being the Second Brigade of Casey's Division of the Reserve Army Corps for the defense of Washington. The Brigade was commanded by Colonel Blunt as the ranking Colonel until December 7, when Brig.-Gen. E. H. Stoughton assumed the command. The Twelfth moved the same day across Long Bridge into Virginia, halting near Munson's Hill. It moved thence, November 1, with the Thirteenth regiment, followed a week later by the other regiments of the Brigade, to a spot two miles south of Alexandria on the Mt. Vernon road. Here, in "Camp Vermont," it remained for six weeks, doing picket and fatigue duty, three hundred men being detailed daily for work on the ramparts of Fort Lyon. On the 12th of December, it moved with the Brigade to Fairfax Court House, and for three months did picket duty along Bull Run and Cub Run. On the 28th of December the regiment took part in the repulse of Stuart's third raid. This was an attempt by Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, the Confederate cavalry leader, with his division of 1,800 sabres, to capture the supplies and garrisons at Dumfries, Fairfax Court House and Fairfax Station. Warned of his approach, General Stoughton, in the disposition of his command, stationed the Twelfth in rifle pits east of Fairfax Court House, across the Alexandria turnpike, along which Stuart was moving, and posted two companies, B and G, under Capt. Ora Paul, in some timber by the side of the turnpike, half a mile in advance. These companies received the head of Stuart's column, advancing in the moonlit evening of the 28th, with a volley which emptied a dozen saddles. Finding the troops defending Fairfax Court House and Station on the alert, Stuart returned to Culpeper with a loss of one man killed, thirteen wounded and fourteen missing.

January 20, 1863, the regiment moved to Wolf Run Shoals, Va., where, with the Thirteenth regiment, it was occupied for three months guarding the fords of the Occoquan River, and picketing the outer line of the defenses of Washington. On the 9th of March, the brigade commander, General Stoughton, having been captured at his headquarters by the guerilla Mosby, Colonel Blunt resumed command of the brigade, that of the regiment devolving on Lieutenant-Colonel Farnham, until April 20, when Brig.-Gen. George J. Stannard was assigned to the command of the brigade.

May 1, the Twelfth regiment was sent to Warrenton Junction, Va., to guard the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, which had been reopened to the Rappahannock, and on the 7th moved forward to Rappahannock Station, where it guarded the railroad bridge for nine days. It was then stationed, in detachments, at Bristoe's and Catlett's Stations, and at Manassas, for two weeks, when it was drawn back to Union Mills, Va., whence it marched, June 21, to near Wolf Run Shoals.

When the Gettysburg campaign began in June, 1863, the Second Vermont Brigade was attached to the Third Division of the First Army Corps of the Army of the Potomac, and formed the rear guard of the army in its northern march until it crossed the Potomac. The Twelfth marched with the brigade from Wolf Run Shoals, June 25; crossed the Potomac June 27, at Edwards Ferry, and moving by the way of Frederick City and Creagerstown, Md., was drawing near Gettysburg July 1, when it was detached from the Brigade, with the Fifteenth regiment, to guard the corps trains. It accompanied these to the vicinity of Rock Creek Church, near the battlefield. From that point, companies B and G, Captains Paul and Ormsbec, were sent forward as guard for a portion of the ammunition train, to a point on the Tancytown road, on the outskirts of the field, where they remained during the fighting of the third day of the battle. Other members of the regiment, on detached service, participated in the battle.

The term of service of the regiment expired July 4, and the next day the regiment left Westminster, Md., (whither it had marched from Gettysburg), by railroad for Baltimore, doing duty on the way thither as guard of a train of 2,500 Confederate prisoners. From Baltimore it went to Vermont, arriving at Brattleboro July 9. While in camp, waiting muster out, the field officers and two hundred of the regiment volunteered to return to New York to assist in suppressing the draft riots; but their services were not required. The regiment was mustered out of the United States service and disbanded at Brattleboro July 14, 1863.

The service of the Twelfth was such that it suffered no losses in battle; but it went where it was ordered, and no one who knew the character of the regiment ever doubted that it would have fought with as much courage and effect as any other Vermont regiment if it had had the opportunity. Its service was marked by good order, thorough discipline and prompt readiness to undertake any duty required of it. Its roll of a thousand and five members contains the names of but four deserters. Two officers—Second Lieuts. K. P. Howard and E. S. Chadwick, both of company F—and sixty-two men, died of disease. Of the eight hundred and sixty-three officers and men mustered out at the close of its term, a considerable proportion subsequently returned to the army in other organizations.

THIRTEENTH REGIMENT.

(NINE MONTHS.)

---

BY HON. ALBERT CLARKE, SECRETARY HOME MARKET CLUB, BOSTON, MASS., FIRST

IN the summer of 1862 ten companies were recruited in Washington, Chittenden, Lamoille and Franklin counties, which were organized into the Thirteenth regiment of infantry on the 24th day of September. All had been undergoing squad and company drill for several weeks, and on the 29th of September the companies went into barracks at Brattleboro, and were thus assembled as a regiment for the first time.

More than half of the men composing this regiment were young farmers, and there was a liberal sprinkling from all other callings common to the country. Not a few had left college and the learned professions, to serve, during what most of them believed would be the last year of the war, and the standard and culture throughout the regiment was unusually high. There were rivalries for office, as usual, but scores of men who were as well fitted to command as any others, scorned to seek commissions and went through their term of service as privates and non-commissioned officers, discharging every duty without the need of orders and relieving the tedium of camp-life by classical studies and learned discussions.

The regiment was most fortunate in most of its officers, and especially so in its colonel, Francis V. Randall, who had been a captain in the Second regiment, and previously had been a lawyer, state's attorney for Washington county, and a member of the Legislature. Being many years older than most of his men—he was thirty-eight, and the average of their ages was but twenty-four—having seen service while most of them had not, and being withal a man of fine military bearing, and possessed of popular ways, he enjoyed their confidence and even their affection, which neither faults nor antagonisms served to impair. Not only did he give the regiment good care and discipline, but when there was opportunity to meet the enemy, he distinguished himself for zeal and gallantry, and enabled his men to render a full measure of service and win for themselves imperishable renown. Another officer deserving special mention was the surgeon, George Nichols, M. D., of Northfield.

At Brattleboro the regiment was equipped with the latest pattern of Springfield rifles, muzzle loaders, to be sure, but the best infantry arm then in use. Mustered into the United States service, October 3, with nine hundred fifty-three officers and men, the regiment left for Washington on the 11th, where it arrived the 13th and went into camp on East Capitol Hill, whither it had been preceded by the Twelfth regiment, and was soon followed by the Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth, all of which were formed into the Second Vermont Brigade on the 27th.

They were reviewed one day by General Banks, and there were rumors that they were to be sent under his command to the lower Mississippi, but General Casey succeeded in holding them for service in Virginia, and on the 30th of October, the brigade marched down Pennsylvania Avenue to the tune of "The Girl I Left Behind Me," crossed Long Bridge and ascended Arlington Heights to the estate of General Lee, where it encamped one night. The next day the Twelfth and Thirteenth marched to the heights south of Alexandria, where they were joined a few days later by the rest of the brigade, and there, in what became known as "Camp Vermont," they were engaged for a month in camp and picket duty, drills, reviews and in fatigue work on Fort Lyon, near by.

Starting in the rain, about nine o'clock in the night of November 26, the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth, under command of Colonel Randall, marched through Alexandria and thence on the pike towards Fairfax Court House. Late in the night they bivouacked, and proceeded next day to Union Mills, where they remained nearly two weeks, guarding the railroad and maintaining a strong picket line along the Bull Run. Although they had tents, there was much suffering from severe cold and storms. They were in constant readiness for an expected encounter with Confederate cavalry. Being relieved, they returned to Camp Vermont, December 5th, making the journey to Alexandria on flat cars in a heavy, damp snow storm. When they reached camp in the evening it was still snowing, their tents had not arrived and they were without food, fuel or axes. A few found shelter in neighboring buildings, but the greater number were taken in by the other regiments of the brigade. Many, however, took colds and some of them never recovered. In a few days stockades were built and the camp was made comfortable for the severe winter that had set in. The old routine was resumed. December 12, the brigade marched to Fairfax Court House and encamped in a grove northwest of the village. There they remained five weeks, the regiment taking turns in going forward to Centreville for a few days, holding the fortifications there and picketing along the Bull Run in connection with other troops.

Early in the evening of December 27th, the long roll sounded at Fairfax and the regiments hastily formed in line. The outposts had reported that Stuart's cavalry was moving rapidly upon the village from the south and east. Colonel Randall was in attendance upon a court-martial at Alexandria, but Lieutenant-Colonel Brown led the regiment on a double quick through the village and into a rifle pit which crossed the Alexandria pike a quarter of a mile to the east. When the men became silent, the approach of the enemy over the frozen ground could be distinctly heard in the clear frosty air. Apparently they had reached the pike and were forming to charge from the east. A solitary horseman, having passed the Union picket, came dashing down the pike from that direction, paused a moment by General Stoughton and then passed in rear of the Thirteenth. When the voice of Colonel Randall was heard the anxious men experienced relief and reas-urance. He had heard of the raid and had ridden with all speed from Alexandria. It was only by strategy that he made his way through the foremost of the Confederates along the pike. A charge by the enemy's advance was soon repulsed by General Stoughton's skirmishers, and when our artillery opened, General Stuart moved away and flanked the town to the north. The Thirteenth was moved rapidly to intercept him, but only to become very warm and then nearly to freeze, before returning to camp in the morning.

On the 20th of January the regiment marched south twelve miles to Wolf Run Shoals, where, with the Twelfth and a battery which were joined later by the Fourteenth, it remained until April 2, when it moved five miles down the Occoquan, and established "Camp Carusi," a mile north of the stream. Detachments were sent thence to guard the ferry at Occoquan and several fords above, extending to the left of the Fourteenth. This was a delightful camp and as there was a fine parade ground, the regiment became very proficient in battalion drill. On the morning of May 14, a wagon train from the regiment, on its way to Fairfax Station for supplies, though more than a mile in rear of the picket line, was attacked by a small body of Mosby's men and the drivers, guards and mules were captured. The men, seven in all, were treated to a bare-back ride of twenty-seven miles on the mules and were then paroled and allowed to return on foot. News of the capture soon reached camp and the regiment started upon a run to intercept the captors at the nearest ford, but arrived a few minutes too late. One day, while Company G was at the ferry, a large number of escaping slaves approached from the South and were conducted to their freedom and sent on their way to Washington amid great rejoicing.

The regiment distinctly heard the cannonade at Chancellorsville and expected to start for the front at a moment's notice, but the order did not come. June 13, the advance of Hooker's army began to pass northward, crossing the Occoquan on a pontoon bridge, and on the 25th, after the entire army had marched, the Thirteenth moved to join the other regiments of the brigade. They met at Union Mills and proceeded together on the great seven day's march to Gettysburg, where they arrived at sunset, July 1, and took position in a field of clover at the left of Buford's cavalry, then drawn up in a square, guarding the left of the army, which had fallen back through the town and formed on Cemetery Hill and the ridges to the right and left.

The next morning the brigade moved a little to the right and supported batteries on Cemetery Hill. Here it was subjected several times during the day to a converging fire of shell from three directions and was a witness of the terrific fighting on Little Round Top, in the Wheat Field, Peach Orchard and along the Emmetsburg road. While in this position, Capt. Merritt B. Williams of Company G received a mortal wound from a spherical case shot and several men were injured. One or two regiments came rushing back panic stricken from the cemetery and were restored by the Vermont Brigade. Colonel Randall rendered his own men a good service by upbraiding the fugitives and citing to them, veterans though they were, the steadiness of the Vermonters, many of whom had never been under fire before. During the day five companies of the Thirteenth under Lieut.-Col. William D. Munson, were stationed to guard a battery in the front line on the west face of Cemetery Hill and this position they held until night. The other companies moved out with the brigade on a double quick to the left, after Sickles and Hancock had in turn been driven back from the Emmetsburg road and the shallow valley to the east, under orders from General Doubleday to hasten to Hancock's support. As General Stannard was leading towards the position where the First Minnesota had just been destroyed, General Hancock, who had directed the movement, asked Colonel Randall if he could recover a battery which had been lost in the valley below and which was being rapidly approached by a strong body of the enemy. Randall replied that he would do it or die trying, so this right wing of the brigade ceased moving to the left and dashed forward at a full run down the gentle descent, up which Pickett's men charged the next day. Randall's horse fell, shot, and for a moment the rider was partially underneath, but soon he was running, hatless, to overtake his line, and in a moment appeared in front of the colors, leading on to victory. The guns were reached and drawn back, where General Hancock and his men received them with thanks and cheers. Randall then quickly re-formed his line and pursued the enemy. He went as far as the Peter Rogers' house on the Emmetsburg road before halting. While crossing the valley, a Confederate, who had been supposed to be dead, arose from the ditch in which he lay and fired at Maj. Joseph J. Boynton from the rear. The bullet narrowly missed the Major's head. Three men of company C turned to bayonet the miscreant, but the Major stopped them and took him prisoner. The battalion halted near the Rogers' house and captured eighty-three prisoners, who had taken refuge there. Company

A was thrown around the house, and the Confederates surrendered mostly to Captain Lonergan and Adj. James S. Peck. The other companies were in front of the house, company G being nearest. Captain Coburn with company C was sent to the left and right to explore in the gathering darkness and thick smoke, but as no more rebels were in sight the battalion returned to the line, and as it approached with the prisoners it was cheered by twenty thousand men. The companies with Randall in these gallant dashes were: A, Capt. John Lonergan, G, Lieut. Albert Clarke, C, Capt. Lewis L. Coburn, E, Capt. Andrew J. Davis and B, Capt. Orcas C. Wilder. They sustained a smaller loss than might have been expected.

That night the other companies returned to the line and the regiment slept upon its arms in the front line of battle near the position which the brigade held the next day. During the ensuing forenoon a detail of ten men from each company, under General Stannard's orders, gathered some fence rails and placed them in line about forty-five yards in front of the regiment. The object was not then apparent, but it became so later. Though there was a sharp fire of sharpshooters, most of the men volunteered for this work, led by Sergt. George H. Scott of company G, and not one was injured. A similar detail buried some of the dead, so as to lessen the stench, and they also escaped unharmed. When Pickett's charge was well advanced, General Stannard ordered the Thirteenth, which held the right of his brigade, forward to the slight breastwork of rails. On arriving Randall ordered them to halt, lie down and hold their fire. At their left, the Fourteenth, which extended diagonally down into the valley, had opened upon the charging column and it was then moving rapidly by the flank or left oblique in front of the Thirteenth. No sooner had the men of the latter become prostrate than a volley passed over their heads which must have nearly annihilated them had they been standing. In a moment the Sixteenth, which had been deployed as skirmishers, fell back through the line and then the Thirteenth received the welcome order to fire. The men had a short range and deadly aim and as the smoke lifted, it was seen that they had done fearful execution. The fire was vigorously returned, but with little loss, and meanwhile the enemy continued to move to the right until the front of the Thirteenth was uncovered. General Stannard then directed the regiment to "change front forward on first company," that is, to advance to the right and form a line at right angles with its present position.

The din was so great that Colonel Randall could not make his orders understood, so he rushed along his line from left to right, shouting "By the right flank, follow me." After leading two hundred yards to the right and descending into a little depression, the new alignment was made upon the flank of the enemy, and so very near that there might easily have been hand-to-hand encounters. The Vermonters had loaded on the run and no sooner were they in line than they began firing. At the same time the line at their right and front from which they had advanced was pouring a deadly fire into the faces of the charging force, which had now become a mass, and very soon Pickett was assailed upon his left flank by Gen. Alexander Hayes' brigade. Within a minute or two, seemingly, after the Thirteenth opened upon them in this position, the Confederates began to throw down their rifles and wave their hands in token of surrender. Randall ordered his regiment to cease firing, but the order was not heard. Breaking through the line to the front and turning his back to the enemy, he waved his sword and hat and shouted his order until it was understood. Then, though still under fire from the enemy and from the Union line above and from our Batteries, he moved rapidly among the yielding host, directing them into his line, and there captured two hundred forty-three officers and men. Meanwhile the Sixteenth had come up and formed on his left and was firing upon those who were running away. It soon faced about and charged four hundred yards upon the left flank of Wilcox. Companies G and I of the Thirteenth, under command of Major Boynton, guarded the prisoners to the rear and the regiment returned to the point whence it started. The battle was soon over, but the enemy continued an artillery fire, from which the brigade suffered some loss.

The companies of the Thirteenth participating in this famous attack, stood in the following order from right to left: A, Capt. John Lonergan; G, Lieut. Albert Clarke; I, Lieut. Chester W. Searles; E, Capt. Andrew J. Davis; C, Capt. Lewis L. Coburn; H, Capt. Aro P. Slayton; K, Capt. George G. Blake; F, Lieut. Justin Naramore; D, Capt. George Bascom; B, Capt. Orcas C. Wilder.

The losses of the Thirteenth in this battle were eleven killed, eighty-one wounded and twenty-three missing. As previously stated, they must have been much greater but for careful management to save life and for the impetuosity of the onslaughts, by which the enemy was partially crippled before he could destroy.

Little remains to be recorded. With the rest of the brigade and the army, the Thirteenth marched on the 6th of July in pursuit of the retreating enemy. On the night of the 7th it crossed Catoctin Mountain in Maryland, over the worst possible road and under a heavy rain, and the next day bivouacked near Middletown, where it was passed and cheered by the Old Brigade, and where, its term of service having expired, it was ordered home. After a stay in barracks at Brattleboro, during which the regiment was reviewed and thanked by Governor Holbrook, it was mustered out on the 21st of July, about one year after most of the men had enlisted and in a few weeks many of its members re-entered the service in other organizations.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT.

---

BY REV. WILLIAM S. SMART, D. D., CHAPLAIN FOURTEENTH REGIMENT.

THE Fourteenth regiment was raised under President Lincoln's call of August 4, 1862, for three hundred thousand militia to serve for nine months. It consisted of companies recruited in Addison, Rutland and Bennington counties, and contained men from every town, except Brandon, which had furnished a company (G) under Capt. (Gov.) E. J. Ormsbee, to the Twelfth regiment. The headquarters of the various companies were as follows: A, Bennington; B, Wallingford; C, Manchester; D, Shoreham; E, Middlebury; F, Castleton; G, Bristol; H, Rutland; I, Vergennes; K, Danby.

The regiment went into camp at Brattleboro, October 6, 1862, and was mustered into the United States service, October 21, and left next day for Washington, D. C., nine hundred fifty-two strong. They were as fine a body of men as could be found in the State, representing every walk in life. Every one was a volunteer, and not one deserter is found on their roster. A draft had been ordered by Governor Holbrook for September 11 in case the quotas of the towns were not raised by that time, but no draft was needed. During the recruiting of the regiment, an incident occurred in Benson, which, while local, well illustrates the patriotic spirit which pervaded Vermont. By a mistake in the office of the Adjutant General, the quota of this town was five in excess of the real number. It was discovered too late to be remedied, and the intelligence reached the town on the evening of the 10th, that the selectmen must proceed with the draft if the quota was not full by the morning of the 11th. Messengers were dispatched, and the people of the town summoned to consider the emergency. By ten o'clock nearly every male inhabitant was present. The first thing to do was to raise $1,000 to pay the usual bounty. As this was not a legal meeting, it was promptly raised by subscription, and the five men needed stepped into the breach, and the dreaded stigma of a draft was averted.

The officers of the regiment were a fine and able body of men. Few changes were found necessary during their term of service, yet they could have been duplicated, twice over, from the ranks. Of those now living it is not needful to speak. Many of them are well known in the State, but of the dead the spirit of comradeship compels a word.

Col. William T. Nichols of Rutland, was a brave and efficient commander. His first service was as a volunteer in the Rutland company of the First regiment. On his return he was elected as representative in the Legislature, and again in 1862, but dropping all civil duties and legal practice, he devoted himself to the service of his country. He is remembered by his officers and men with affection and esteem, as a good soldier and a gentleman. He died in April, 1882.

Charles Field of Dorset, was a Quartermaster, whose energy and care for the wants of the regiment were as un failing as his native courtesy and gentle manners. Of this he gave signal proof, when, on the morning of July 2, he appeared on Cemetery Hill, with four wagon loads of coffee and hard tack. In doing this he took the risk of disobeying orders to go to the rear, with his train, and narrowly escaped capture, but his coming was welcomed by hungry men, and he saved the brigade from having to fight on empty stomachs.

Captain Munson of Manchester, company C, was a brave and capable officer in whose hands the colors never wavered on the line.

Capt. (Judge) Walter C. Dunton, company H, was as cool, careful and devoted to duty on the field, as he was afterwards distinguished for his ability and probity on the bench. He has gone over to the majority, mourned as a true patriot and good citizen.

The Fourteenth was attached to the defenses of Washington and did picket duty, first at Alexandria, after the 11th of December near Fairfax Court House, where it assisted in the repulse of Stuart's cavalry raid, and from March to June, 1863, at Wolf Run Shoals on the Occoquan river. This was the outer picket line of Washington. This duty was interspersed with the digging of rifle pits and the building of corduroy roads. The duty, while not particularly dangerous, was a duous and involved much exposure and hardship in winter weather. The health of the regiment, however, was good and the record remarkable. The entire loss by disease was only thirty-nine men, far less than the other regiments of the brigade. Some of this redounds to the credit of our excellent Surgeon, Dr. A. T. Woodward, and his assistant, Dr. L. D. Ross. Something is also to be attributed to the pluck and good spirit of the men, as is illustrated in the medical record of company A. It was called the "noisy company." There was always some sport on hand among the boys of company A. They did not lose a man by sickness, and Captain Gore had the satisfaction of bringing back to Brattleboro every man he took out. Not a man was hit during the battle, although they were in no better position, apparently, than the rest of the line. The company must have been out of the range of the terrible artillery fire from which the regiment sustained its heavy loss at Gettysburg.

On the 20th of April, Gen. George J. Stannard, was assigned to the command of the brigade and on June 25th, the brigade, having been attached to the Third Division of the First Corps, began the march to the North, which ended at Gettysburg. June 30 it had reached Emmettsburg, Maryland, having marched one hundred twenty miles in six days, gaining a day on the First Corps, which had proceeded in advance of the entire army.

The next day's march was made with quickened pace, for the sound of guns to the north told that a battle was going on and we were needed. The regiment reached the field too late to participate in the fighting of the first day, and bivouacked in a wheat field to the left of Cemetery Hill. At daylight of July 2 the brigade joined the First Corps, which was reduced by the casualties of the first day to two thousand four hundred men. This march was severe and fold heavily on our ranks. The seven hundred twenty-two men who left Wolf Run Shoals, June 25, were reduced to five hundred. Two hundred and twenty-two had been compelled to fall out, unable to bear the killing pace.

Late in the afternoon of the 2nd, the brigade was called into action on the left center, to repel the attack of Gen. A. P. Hill. A battery had already been captured and was re-taken by the Thirteenth Vermont. Another was in peril and was saved as the Fourteenth double-quickd to its rescue. The regiment remained in this position during the rest of the engagement. In the opening cannonade of the third day the Fourteenth had several non-commissioned officers and men killed by the explosion of a battery caisson, near which they were lying. Colonel Nichols obtained permission to move his regiment forward about ten rods from the main line, where they lay during the terrific cannonade of the third day. When the gray line of Pickett's massive charge, seventeen thousand strong, moved down upon the position of the Fourteenth, they lay concealed on the ground, until the line was within sixty yards. The men rose at command and gave a staggering and unexpected volley in the face of the charging column. The direction of the advancing charge was changed, and swung off to the north, until their right flank was beyond the right of the Fourteenth. It was at this time that General Stannard's quick eye saw his chance for a flank movement, and delivered it with such fatal effect upon Pickett. The Fourteenth moved a short distance by the flank to the north, and obliquely from the main line. The Thirteenth, followed by the Sixteenth, changed front on the first company and moved out at right angles from the line and charged forward. The Fourteenth kept up a rapid fire at close range and closed up the pen in which Pickett's right wing was caught and crushed.

After the main charge was repulsed, General Wilcox's Brigade was seen coming down in front of the position of the Fourteenth. The Sixteenth was coming back to get into line to receive the charge, but Colonel Veazey saw an opportunity to strike them on the front, which he did in splendid style. Four companies of the Fourteenth, A, F, D and I, under Lieutenant-Colonel Rose, formed on his left and assisted in capturing most of the Rebel Brigade. So it fell to the lot of the Fourteenth, with the other regiments, to uphold the honor of Vermont on this hotly contested field, and at this critical time in the battle.

It can with truth be said, that they

"Nothing common did, or mean,
Upon that memorable scene."

General Doubleday, in his official report, says of these troops, which had never been in action before : "These movements were executed in open field, under very heavy fire of shell, grape and musketry, and were performed with the promptness and decision of battalion drill." The losses sustained by the Fourteenth in this engagement, were the largest in the brigade. Nineteen were killed in action ; nine died from wounds received in action ; total, twenty-seven. The wounded numbered seventy-four.

The Fourteenth joined in the pursuit of Lee after the battle and made some hard marches, one, on the 7th of July, is recalled of thirty-five miles continuously, ending in rain, mud and darkness, on the top of the Catocin Mountain, after midnight. July 18 the regiment was released and started for home, and was mustered out at Brattleboro, July 30, 1863.

Vermont does well to preserve the names and deeds of her soldiers in the Civil War among her most precious archives, that the spirit of her sons, more immortal than their deeds, may be preserved to future generations. Such were the young men of Vermont in 1863. Such may they ever be when their country needs their service.

The average age of the regiment was a fraction over twenty-five years. Three hundred thirty two were from sixteen to twenty-one years of age.

All hail to the Vermont veterans, whose locks are growing gray, but who in youth's golden prime, held country dearest of all. May their generations never cease.

FIFTEENTH REGIMENT.

(NINE MONTHS.)

BY EX-GOVERNOR REDFIELD PROCTOR, United States Senator, COLONEL FIFTEENTH REGIMENT.

And HON. WILLIAM W. GROUT, Member of Congress, LIEUTENANT-COLONEL FIFTEENTH REGIMENT.

THE Fifteenth regiment was organized September 26, 1862; went into barracks at Brattleboro, October 8; was mustered into service October 22; started for Washington October 23, and arrived on the morning of the 26th, in a drenching rain. It remained at the "Soldiers' Rest" till next day, when it went into camp on Capitol Hill. An order constituting the Second Brigade of five Vermont regiments was issued October 27—Colonel Blunt commanding until December 7, when General Stoughton took command.

October 30, the brigade crossed into Virginia. The Twelfth and Thirteenth went November 1 to Hunting Creek. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth returned to Capitol Hill, and in three or four days, with the Sixteenth, joined the Twelfth and Thirteenth near Hunting Creek, establishing what was known as "Camp Vermont."

This camp was in a low malarial place, and the mortality of the brigade, especially the Fifteenth regiment, was very great for the six weeks it was there, and for sometime thereafter.

The time was spent in stockading tents, in drill duty, on the picket line, and in fatigue duty on Fort Lyon. November 25, on a dark, rainy night about ten o'clock, Colonel Randall, of the Thirteenth, with his own and the Fourteenth and Fifteenth regiments started for Bull Run, then the outer picket line in the defenses of Washington, for the purpose of more effectually guarding the Orange & Alexandria railroad.

They made a slow, weary march amid darkness and drizzling rain till about four o'clock A. M., when the rain had turned to snow and the command bivouacked on the left side of the turnpike about two miles short of Fairfax Court House.

The next night the Fifteenth bivouacked near Fairfax Station in a sapling pine grove, on old tobacco grounds, the camp fires lighting up in a weird way the dense growth of small but tall pine trees. Next day it went to Union Mills and took position about half a mile to the right of the station, relieving the Garabaldi Guards, Colonel D'Utassy. The regiment remained here till December 4, when Colonel Proctor received an order relieving it from this duty about three o'clock P. M. At four the regiment was in line for movement on "Camp Vermont." It halted a little after dark in a chestnut grove about one mile south of Fairfax Court House. After coffee and a brief rest the regiment completed the march to "Camp Vermont," of about thirty miles, before midnight.

December 12 the brigade left "Camp Vermont" for good and went to Fairfax Court House, the Fifteenth establishing itself in the chestnut grove above mentioned. Here fine stockades and officers' quarters were constructed from the large, straight grained chestnut trees which were easily split into planks and boards,

December 28 cannonading was heard at Wolf Run Shoals, and the Fifteenth was ordered to Centre ville, and at dark had a picket strung from near Blackburn's Ford up Bull Run past the Stone Bridge. The cannonading at Wolf Run Shoals was followed by Stuart's cavalry raid in rear of Fairfax Court House.

At about nine o'clock orders came from General Stoughton to fall back to the Court House. The picket was promptly withdrawn, and everything ready at about eleven o'clock to execute the order, when another order came from General Stoughton to "hold Centreville at all hazards." Thereupon pickets were again thrown out guarding every approach to the town, and the whole regiment kept ready for action the entire night. But Stuart did not come that way. The next morning he went out of the Union lines at Aldie, just north of Centreville.

In a few days the regiment returned to Chestnut Grove camp, and soon thereafter moved to Fairfax Station, where it remained till spring, engaged in drill, both battalion and brigade, and fatigue work on rifle pits southeast of station.

May 7, the Fifteenth regiment went to Bealeton Station, and on the next day General Stoneman's cavalry came out at that point from their extensive raid in rear of Lee's Army. Here the regiment and Stoneman's cavalry did picket duty together for several days, when the regiment returned to duty on Bull Run, camping at Union Mills.

General Stannard took command April 20. May 30, 25 men from the Fifteenth, upon a supply train, under Lieutenant Hartshorn, near Catlett's Station, were attacked and overpowered by two or three times that number under Mosby, with a piece of artillery, and the train was partially burned.

About June 10, the Fifteenth was ordered down the Orange & Alexandria railroad—four companies with Lieutenant-Colonel Grout at Catlett's, and the other six, under Colonel Proctor, at Bristoe. Late one night the four companies fell back to Bristoe under orders from General Buford, and in a day or two the whole regiment under orders from Stannard, returned to Union Mills, having improvised transportation for camp and garrison equipage from what was left of trains burned at Catlett's and Bristoe by Jackson the year before; while General Buford, just across Kettle Run, at Catlett's, burned his supplies and stores for want of transportation.

June 25, at three o'clock P. M., the whole brigade left Union Mills on a forced march to join the First Corps, Army of Potomac, to which it had been assigned, and which it overtook at Gettysburg on the first day of the fight.

The day before at Emmettsburg the Twelfth and Fifteenth had been detailed to guard the corps train, which they accompanied July 1, to within about two miles of Gettysburg, where, under an order from General Sickles, whose corps was moving rapidly to the relief of Howard, the Fifteenth went upon the field, and, a little after dark, joined the Thirteenth Fourteenth and Sixteenth in a wheat field to the left of Cemetery Hill. Next morning the four regiments were placed in support of the batteries on Cemetery Hill.

Just about 12 o'clock M., General Doubleday, commanding the First Corps, learning that the Fifteenth, to which had been assigned by Reynolds the day before guard the train, was on the field, and being disquieted also, by reported attacks upon the train by Stuart's cavalry, ordered the Fifteenth to overtake the train with the least possible delay and rejoin the Twelfth in guarding it.

Two companies of the Fifteenth, with two from the Twelfth, were left in charge of First Corps ammunition train near the field.

The regiment found the train at Westminster the next forenoon. From Westminster the regiment went with the train via Frederick City and South Mountain towards Hagerstown, and rejoined the brigade in front of Funkstown.

On Sunday, July 12, the army formed in line of battle in front of Hagerstown, the Vermont brigade taking position on the right of First Corps, and Lieutenant-Colonel Grout, of the Fifteenth, with 200 men from the Sixteenth, went upon the skirmish line.

Two days later Lee crossed the Potomac, and a few days after that at Berlin, Md., the regiment took the cars for home.

It reached New York in the midst of the draft riots.

Its term of service was then up, but at request of General Canby, commanding in New York, it remained till quiet was restored.

It was mustered out August 5, 1863, at Brattleboro, Vt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT.

BY CORPORAL CHANDLER M. RUSSELL, COMPANY F, And SERGEANT LYMAN S. EMERY, COMPANY A SIXTEENTH REGIMENT.

THE Sixteenth regiment of Vermont Volunteers was composed of companies which were recruited in the counties of Windsor and Windham. These companies met and organized at their respective places of rendezvous between the dates of August 26 and September 20, 1862, as follows :

Company A—at Bethel ; Henry A. Eaton, Captain.

Company B—at Brattleboro ; Robert B. Arms, Captain.

Company C—at Ludlow ; Asa G. Foster, Captain.

Company D—at Townshend ; David Ball, Captain.

Company E—at Springfield ; Alvin C. Mason, Captain.

Company F—at Wilmington ; Henry F. Dix, Captain.

Company G—at Barnard ; Harvey N. Bruce, Captain.

Company H—at Felchville ; Joseph C. Sawyer, Captain.

Company I—at Williamsville ; Lyman E. Knapp, Captain.

Company K—at Chester ; Samuel Hutchinson, Captain.

On the 27th of September, 1862, the officers of these companies met at Bellows Falls and elected the field officers of the regiment, as follows :

Wheelock G. Veazey of Springfield, Colonel ; Charles Cummings of Brattleboro, Lieutenant-Colonel ; William Rounds of Chester, Major ; Jabez D. Bridgman of Rockingham, Adjutant ; James G. Henry of Royalton, Quartermaster ; Dr. Castanus B. Park, Jr., of Grafton, Surgeon ; Dr. George Spafford of Windham, Assistant Surgeon ; Rev. Alonzo Webster of Windsor, Chaplain.

This regiment rendezvoused at Brattleboro on the 9th of October, 1862, and was mustered into the United States service on the 23d of October, 1862, by Major William Austine, with 949 officers and men, and a more intelligent and educated body of men, it is safe to say, was never mustered for any regiment.

The regiment left Brattleboro for the seat of war on the 24th of October, 1862, by way of New Haven, Connecticut, over the Sound Line of Steamers to New York, thence to Port Monmouth by boat, and then by rail the balance of the way to Washington, where it arrived on the morning of October 27. It went into camp on Capitol Hill near where the Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth regiments, which had just preceded it, were in camp, and with which it was brigaded, forming what was known as the Second Vermont Brigade.

On the 30th of October the regiment moved across the Potomac River and encamped with the rest of the brigade near Ball's Cross Roads in Virginia. This place was called "Camp Seward." The regiment remained at this camp until November 3, when it moved to a high ridge overlooking the Potomac River and near Hunting Creek, a distance of about nine miles. The whole brigade moved at the same time to the same place, and from that time on the place was called Camp Vermont. It was expected that the regiment would remain at this place during the winter as a part of the reserve force for the defense of Washington, and considerable pains were taken to stockade and make camp life comfortable, but on the 11th of December the brigade was ordered to move, and on the following day did move out farther to the front. The first night it encamped at Fairfax Court House and the next day moved on to a point near Centreville, where it remained, doing picket duty for several days, and then returned to Fairfax Court House and remained there until January 20, 1863.

The regiment then moved to Fairfax Station on the Orange and Alexandria railroad and remained there until the 24th of March, and then moved down the railroad about six miles on a high point near Union Mills. The principal service while here was picket duty on Bull Run, and at points farther down the railroad, which was being repaired and opened for transportation to the Rappahannock River. May 27 the regiment was ordered to guard the railroad, and companies A and G, in command of Captain Eaton, were stationed at Manassas Junction, and companies C, D, E and F, with Colonel Veazey and Major Rounds, were stationed at Bristoe Station, near Broad Rive, and companies B, I and K, with Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings in command, were stationed at Catlett's Station. May 30 a supply train was attacked by a party of raiders under Mosby and considerable damage done. A short skirmish occurred and the raiders were driven back.

On the 11th of June the regiment returned to Union Mills and resumed picket duty along Bull Run. On the 23d the brigade, which had been commanded since April 20 by General Stannard, became attached to the First Corps of the Army of the Potomac under General Reynolds. The Confederates had already started on their raid toward Pennsylvania and a heavy battle was imminent. On the 25th orders came to move and the pickets on duty were called in. Colonel Veazey called his officers and non-commissioned officers together and assured them that they might soon expect to meet the enemy in battle, and gave them good advice and instructions. At 3 o'clock of that day, the regiment started on its march, joining the great tide of the Army of the Potomac, which was moving northward to intercept the enemy in its advance on Washington, Baltimore, Harrisburg and Philadelphia. The Potomac was crossed at Edward's Ferry and the great army passed on through Adamstown, Frederick, Jeffersonville and other towns. On the 30th, after a forced march of six days in heavy marching order, the regiment reached Ennettsburg, and a rest was taken there for the night. About ten o'clock the next morning the sound of battle was heard in the direction of Gettysburg, and the regiment moved on at noon in that direction as rapidly as possible. The weather was intensely hot, the men were weary and foot-sore, but every man readily and quickly fell into line. The usual hilarity of a start did not prevail, but instead each man's face bore a grave, determined look. At 5 o'clock the regiment was in full view of the terrible scene. Shells bursting in the air, smoke of burning buildings, the roar of artillery, wounded men being borne to the rear, citizens of the town and vicinity fleeing for their lives, cast a gloom over the men, but the ranks gathered up closer and the sturdy men commenced nerving themselves for the emergency. As the regiment neared the battlefield, a halt was made, the guns and ammunition were inspected, bayonets fixed, and the regiment started at a rapid pace, sometimes at double-quick, and soon formed in the battle line upon the ridge, a little to the left of Cemetery Hill. The first day's fight was just over, and our troops had been forced back through the town upon this ridge and hill. About one-third of the Sixteenth regiment, under command of Major Rounds, was detailed for picket duty that night, and the remainder took position on the rear slope of Cemetery Hill and bivouacked for the night, which all with reason apprehended would be the last night on earth of more or less of our number.

In the morning, July 2, the pickets were recalled, but during the forenoon, company B, Captain Arms, was sent forward to re-enforce the skirmish line, and there rendered splendid service. This company was taken into position by Captain Foster of company C, who was then on General Stannard's staff, and was wounded in discharging this duty. The main battles of July 2 were fought on the right and left flanks of the Union line. Near the close of the battle on the left, which had been fought with the greatest severity and had finally involved several Corps of the Union Army, the Sixteenth, with the rest of the brigade, was moved about one-half mile to the left along Cemetery Ridge to re-enforce our badly shattered lines. In this movement it was under terrific artillery fire, one shell hitting two men and killing them instantly. The regiment was finally halted in support of a battery and just in season to receive and repel a heavy charge of infantry. Darkness soon came on and the battle ceased with the Sixteenth in the front line. Soon after this Colonel Veazey was detailed to take the regiment with others and establish a picket line across the battlefield of that afternoon. The battle had been fought back and forth over this ground and it was literally covered with dead and wounded men, among whom the Sixteenth were deployed to watch the enemy while our army was resting for a renewal of the awful conflict in the morning. No regiment ever had a more trying night on picket duty. It was not relieved in the morning, but the men held the same position as skirmishers throughout the forenoon and until the final assault. The position of the reserves, supporting the skirmish line, was twenty rods or more in advance of the main line of battle, and the skirmish line was considerably in advance of the reserves and extended a long distance to the right and left. The famous infantry charge of July 3 was preceded for two hours by the great artillery duel, participated in by some 250 guns, the regiment being in the depression between the two lines of cannon. This was followed by the charge of Longstreet's three divisions, Pickett's leading the same and striking first the skirmish line of the Sixteenth regiment. Pursuant to previous orders of our colonel, the skirmishers rallied on the reserves, except company G, which was so far to the right that it was obliged to retire to the main line of battle in another direction, where it opportunely met company B, which had not rejoined the regiment after it was detached the day before, as above explained, and these two companies under Captain Arms took position in support of a battery and there fought valiantly through the battle. There were, therefore, but eight companies occupying the advanced position of the reserves and towards which Pickett's division of the enemy seemed to be directed, but as they were approaching within rifle range the enemy changed its direction to its left and sufficiently to uncover our direct front and began to pass by our right flank. Our colonel then moved us to the right and changed our front so as to be at right angles with the main line, and we assaulted Pickett's right flank. During this movement we fired directly into the rebel flank and advanced a distance to the right of about a thousand yards, and continued the charge until Pickett's division had mainly disappeared, a great proportion being killed, wounded or captured.

At this moment, another rebel line appeared off to our left and was apparently aiming in the direction of the position we held before making this charge to the right. This new force turned out to be Perry's and Wilcox's brigades. Colonel Veazey immediately got the regiment into line, began a movement back over the same ground we had just passed, and again changed our front so as to be again at right angles with the main line of battle, but facing to the left instead of the right, and just as those two brigades reached the point from which we had started he ordered us to charge their flank, which we did with a cheer and followed it a long distance until that line had wholly disappeared, and this was the end of the battle of Gettysburg, with our regiment still holding its original extreme advanced position, having captured prisoners many times its own number and three stands of colors.

The regiment suffered considerable loss in killed and wounded, but much less than would be expected from its participation at the pivotal point of the battle far in advance of any other troops of the Union line, and where the collision of the fighting was probably as severe and stubborn as ever occurred in battle; but the comparatively small loss under the circumstances was due to the fact that the regiment was constantly on the move in charging flanks to the right and left and so was not exposed to the direct front fire of the enemy's infantry lines. The conspicuous part it took in this great battle, its size and bearing in the conflict at a trying and critical period, its skillful management by Colonel Veazey, won for it and its gallant and much beloved commander a conspicuous place in the annals of the war.

After the battle, Colonel Veazey being put in command of the brigade, it joined in the pursuit of Lee's forces until they had crossed the Potomac back into Virginia, and then, as the term of enlistment of the regiment had expired, it started toward home, arriving in New York City when the draft riot was at white heat, and it volunteered to remain there until order was restored. It camped upon the Battery, lying upon its arms and ready for any emergency. No disturbance, however, called it into action. From there it returned to Brattleboro, Vermont, and was mustered out August 10, 1863, with 831 officers and men.

The history of this regiment would hardly be complete without a brief reference to its commander. Col. Wheelock G. Veazey was born at Brentwood, New Hampshire, December 5, 1835. He graduated at Dartmouth College, and later at the Albany Law School, and had just commenced the practice of law at Springfield, Vermont, when the war commenced. He enlisted early in the war as a private in the Third Vermont regiment, was made captain of company A of that regiment, and soon promoted to Major and Lieutenant-Colonel. He was in the Peninsular Campaign under General McClellan, and participated in the many battles of that campaign. For a while he was on the staff of Gen. W. F. Smith, better known as Gen. "Baldy" Smith.

The Sixteenth regiment was therefore fortunate in having as its commanding officer one whose experience in the field had equipped him so thoroughly for this command. He succeeded well in winning the confidence of the officers and men and to an eminent degree won their universal love and respect.

After the war Colonel Veazey served conspicuously as lawyer, legislator, supreme court judge, and in many other positions of public trust, and resigned his office as Judge to accept an appointment by President Harrison as Interstate Commerce Commissioner, which position he now holds.

The veteran soldiers have honored him in many ways, and especially when the great order of the Grand Army of the Republic elected him Commander in Chief at Boston in 1890. His administration in that capacity was signally able and successful, and marked an era of prosperity in that noble order.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT.

BY HON. JOEL H. LUCIA, FIRST LIEUTENANT SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT.

THE history of this regiment is a peculiar one. Its birth was almost shrouded in mystery; its infancy and early life a continued struggle for existence. For many months its growth was so slow and precarious as to raise grave doubts whether it would ever attain the dignity of a regimental organization.

Its recruiting was authorized by the government July 2, 1863, and August 3, 1863, Gov. Frederick Holbrook directed that it be raised. The intention was to put into the field a regiment of veterans. Gettysburg had just been fought and won. The Second Vermont Brigade, composed of nine months men, having there won glory and renown and made an enviable record, had recently been mustered out, and it was expected that many of these men, flushed with their great victory and justly proud of the record made, would be eager to enlist in the new regiment. This did not prove to be the case, and recruiting was slow indeed.

October 17, 1863, President Lincoln issued a call for 300,000 men to fill up the regiments then in the field. It was just at that time that Gov. J. Gregory Smith came into office, and with the push, energy and persistency which characterized him in whatever he undertook, with eager patriotism and possibly with the pardonable pride of wishing to put a regiment into the field, he succeeded in getting the orders relating to recruits so modified as to allow them to be put into the regiment then being raised. Nearly every town in the State contributed to its ranks. So cosmopolitan was it that it would be difficult to name a locality from which any one company originated.

The following statement, giving the names of the Captains will be of some assistance perhaps:

Company A—Stephen F. Brown, Franklin and

Grand Isle counties, with a few from other parts of the State.

Company B—Andrew J. Davis, Chittenden and Addison counties, together with a few from Lamoille.

Company C—Frank Kenfield, Lamoille and Washington counties, with several from Addison and others.

Company D—Henry A. Eaton, Windsor county principally, but several from other counties.

Company E—George S. Robinson, Washington county mostly.

Company F—Lyman E. Knapp, Windham and Windsor counties, with some from nearly all the others.

Company G—Eldin J. Hartshorn, Caledonia, Essex and Windsor counties, with a few from the other counties.

Company H—Charles W. Corey, Addison county, with a sprinkling from the other counties.

Company I—Daniel Conway, mostly Orange and Rutland counties.

Company K—John L. Yale, Chittenden and Washington counties mostly.

Enlistments for the original organizations began as early as August 21, 1863, and ended September 22, 1864. The regiment was mustered into service from time to time, mostly in squads; nearly all of Company A, and more than half of B, on January 5, 1864, but it was almost nine months later when the last squad of company K was mustered and that company organized. Parts of companies C, D and E were mustered in March, 1864. April 12, 1864, most of F and G, with a squad of H; the balance of H in May, 1864; I, in April, May, July and August, and K in August and September, 1864.

February 10, 1864, a commission as Colonel was issued to Francis V. Randall, who had seen service as Captain in the Second Vermont regiment and had distinguished himself as Colonel of the Thirteenth Vermont at Gettysburg, but he could not be mustered until the ten companies of his regiment were organized and did not join the regiment at the front until October 27, and never had the opportunity of leading into battle the regiment he had worked so long to recruit.

The first detachment, a battalion of seven companies, left Burlington April 18, 1864, under Lieut.-Col. Charles Cummings, who had served with credit in the same rank in the Sixteenth regiment. The organization was further perfected by the appointment of William B. Reynolds, a captain of the Sixth Vermont as Major, James S. Peck, late adjutant of the Thirteenth Vermont as Adjutant, Buel J. Derby, late of the Twelfth Vermont as Quartermaster, P. O'Meara Edson, assistant surgeon of the Vermont Cavalry as Surgeon. No Chaplain was appointed, a fact which caused much conjecture. The regiment was fortunate in its officers, field, staff and line. They were men of tried bravery and discretion—brave, not rash—careful of their men, but sparing not when blows were needed. No regiment ever had a more capable, earnest and faithful surgeon than Dr. Edson. Made up as it was, the battalion had had no opportunity for drill and but little for discipline. Its third attempt at battalion drill was on the bloody field of the Wilderness to the sound of the enemy's guns. It reached Alexandria, Virginia, April 22, and three days later was assigned to the Second Brigade, Second Division, Ninth Corps. The brigade consisted of the Sixth, Ninth and Eleventh New Hampshire regiments, with the Thirty-first and Thirty-second Maine regiments and was commanded by Col. Simon G. Griffin of the Sixth New Hampshire. The division by Gen. R. B. Potter and the corps by General Burnside.

The regiment began at once its active service, going almost directly from its rendezvous to the field of battle. April 27, it marched with the brigade for Bristoe Station, stopping for the night near Fairfax Court House; on May 4, to Bealeton Station; on the 5th, crossed the Rappahannock at Rappahannock Station, and on the same day the Rapidan at Germanna Ford. The measles were breaking out in the regiment, which, with the hard marching new to most of the men, so reduced their numbers that only about 400 halted at night on the battlefield of the Wilderness near the Sixth Corps. Ignorant of the extent of the carnage of the first day's fight, as well as of what the morrow held in store, tired, foot-sore, exhausted, they threw themselves on the ground for rest and sleep. Soon after midnight they were awakened, and at 2 A. M. were off, leading the advance of the corps along the Germanna Plank Road, thence to the center of the Union lines, where the division was placed in readiness for a general assault to be made at dawn. The corps failed to get into position for the assault at the time fixed, though Griffin's brigade was in line of battle at sunrise, the Seventeenth having the right of the line, and advanced through woods and open fields until the skirmishers struck the enemy's line and were driven back to the woods. About 9 A. M., the Seventeenth advanced through the pine undergrowth, at times crawling on hands and knees, drove the enemy's line from behind a rail fence and occupied its position. This it held during the forenoon, although disconnected and without support on the right, and until after the regiment on its left had gone back. Here, alone and exposed, it repulsed an attack upon both flanks, holding its position until noon. Several were wounded here, among them Captain Brown of company A, who lost an arm. About noon the brigade moved some distance to the left. A little later, the regiment being on the right of the division line formed in the rear of Hancock's Corps which were holding the line without attempting to advance, was exposed to a sharp musketry fire, when Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings received a scalp wound and was taken to the rear, and the command devolved on Major Reynolds. Captain Kenfield of company C and Lieutenant Martin of company E were wounded at this time. About 2 P. M., Griffin's brigade was ordered to attack the enemy occupying some log breastworks in the wood beyond a swampy ravine. It moved out rapidly and passing over troops lying in front, charged and drove back the enemy's line. Two hundred prisoners, some of them officers, were taken by the brigade in this advance. The enemy attacked the brigade with re-enforcements and it fell back to near its former position, which it held during the remainder of the day and night, throwing up breastworks, and until withdrawn later, without being again actively engaged.

In this, its first battle, the regiment gave undoubted evidence of the possession of the same high qualities of courage, daring, coolness and persistency which had made the First Vermont Brigade so famous throughout the entire army, and had won so proud a name for the Second Brigade at Gettysburg. The official report says: "No colors were advanced beyond those of the Seventeenth in this charge." It is sufficient praise to say that the regiment did its full share of the brigade's fighting, and that its men acquitted themselves on that field in all respects like Vermont veterans. Its losses, ten killed, sixty-four wounded, ten of them mortally, and six missing, a total of eighty out of 313 men, much greater than those of any other regiment in the brigade, show the work to which it was put. On May 10 the regiment moved with the corps towards Spottsylvania Court House, crossing and re-crossing the Ny River. On the 11th, it took up position before the enemy's entrenchments north of the Court House. For three days some of the other corps had been engaged in severe fighting here without definite result or advantage. The space allotted to this sketch will not permit details of each engagement in which the regiment took part; yet it may truthfully be said that in the bloody work of this most unsatisfactory battle, to every call made upon it, whether to hold a position of great danger, to advance in skirmish line or in line of battle, to charge the enemy in open field or behind entrenchments, to repel a charge, to support an assaulting line or column, to silence a troublesome battery, to change position in open field under severe fire, or to check the retreat of a repulsed line, it gallantly and promptly responded, and by its soldierly conduct increased the admiration of its officers and the confidence of its associates. To all this the official reports bear testimony. The regiment's loss here was twelve killed, fifty-eight wounded and two missing, a total of seventy-two out of about 250. Captain Knapp of company F, Lieutenants Gilmore of company A and Kingsbury of company F were of the wounded.

The movement from the vicinity of Spottsylvania Court House to the North Anna began by the brigade on the evening of May 20; on the 23d, Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings resumed command; on the 24th, the regiment, with the brigade, crossed the North Anna and began at once to entrench the position, and were under fire on the 25th and 26th. On the 26th the river was re-crossed and the regiment marched easterly, then southerly until the night of the 28th, when it crossed the Pamunkey at Dabney's Ferry, near Hanover Town. On the 30th it advanced almost to Totopotomoy Creek, and on the afternoon of the next day advanced with the brigade, driving the enemy in front from their works and sending them some distance on the run, its loss being one killed and four mortally wounded. This position was occupied for two days, when the corps was withdrawn towards Cold Harbor. While this was in progress its rear was attacked by a strong force and was in great peril until the divisions of Potter and Wilcox got into position near Bethesda Church and held the enemy in check. Late in the afternoon the division was attacked in the rear, but the attack was met and warded off by Griffin's brigade chiefly. The next day, June 3, Griffin's brigade had the right of the corps and held the extreme right of the army near Bethesda Church, and took no active part in the general assault of the morning. In the afternoon, in a movement of Griffin's brigade to support the First Brigade in an assault on the enemy's works, the regiment was on the extreme right and came into open field at right angles with the brigade line and fully exposed to the sharp enfilading fire of the enemy's skirmishers. A part of the regiment was detached and sent to the right to assist our skirmishers and the annoying fire was soon silenced. In front of the line was found a strong rifle pit filled with the enemy, and a masked battery. The brigade, not receiving the support expected on the right, withdrew, keeping up, meanwhile, a rapid fire. The loss of the regiment was one killed, seventeen wounded—five mortally; of these were Captain Davis of company B and Lieutenant Gibson of company D. On the 7th and 8th the regiment participated in the fighting and had two men mortally wounded. Under date of June 8, Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings in his official report says: "During the last 15 days we have been under fire every day but 3, and 2 of these days we were on the march."

June 8 company H, Captain Corey, with fifty-seven men reported to the regiment, increasing its numbers to 235 muskets. On the 9th the corps was moved to a position near Cold Harbor, and here the regiment remained on the front line, constantly under the fire of the pickets and sharpshooters of the enemy, until the general move to Petersburg. After dark on the night of the 12th, the corps was withdrawn from its position and moved towards the James, which it reached, after a march of 48 hours, on the night of the 14th, with but four or five hours for rest and sleep. Here the regiment halted for 24 hours, waiting for the bridge to be laid and the wagon trains to come up, as rations had run short. At 9 p. m. of the 15th, the regiment once more took up the line of march, crossed the James some distance below Charles City, and pushed on toward Petersburg, making that night the most severe march of its entire service, over roads of deep sand and on short rations. So telling had been the pace kept up through the night that when the halt was ordered for breakfast, not a company of the regiment had more than eight men in line to stack arms, and some only four. A short rest and the march was resumed, and about noon, having covered 22 miles, marching the last few hours to the booming of guns, the regiment was in front of Petersburg. No time for rest here, for before night, the regiment having changed position several times, was in line of battle with the brigade to support a portion of the Second Corps about to make an assault on the enemy's entrenchments. The line advanced gallantly across the open field, and although fully exposed to the fire of the enemy's batteries, the regiment suffered no loss. That charge was only partially successful, resulting in the capture of two redans, so arrangements were made for Griffin to assault at daylight, with his and Curtin's brigade of the same division. The night was intensely dark and was wholly spent in getting the troops into position for the proposed assault, now crawling over felled timber and through underbrush, then moving a little this way and that, all through the night maintaining the deepest silence, but without sleep or rest. At the first sign of coming day orders were whispered along the line and the men spring to their feet, not a shot is to be fired, the bayonet the sole reliance, and rush forward up the hill, carrying the enemy's skirmish line before them, and are at and over the breastworks before the half awakened enemy is aware whether it is friend or foe that call with so little warning. The charge was successful and resulted in sweeping the line of the enemy for a mile or more and in the capture of 600 prisoners, 1500 stands of arms, a stand of colors, four pieces of artillery, caissons and horses. The colors, two of the guns and many of the prisoners were taken by the Seventeenth. A peculiar coincidence of the affair was that on June 17, the Seventeenth Vermont captured the colors, Adjutant and about 70 men of the Seventeenth Tennessee. The regiment lost six killed and twenty wounded, seven fatally, going into the charge with 135 men. Lieutenant Guyer of company C was one of the killed. The regiment advanced its lines on the 18th and 19th having four men wounded on the skirmish line on the 18th, two mortally, and on the 19th, in the trenches, three killed and two wounded, one of whom died. From that time until July 29 it occupied the advance line which it could only approach by a covered way, close up to the enemy's works and constantly exposed to his fire. The loss during that period in killed and wounded was about one each day. This was the most severe and trying time of its service. Some evidence of its exhausting nature is furnished by the fact that from June 25 to July 21 the number for duty was reduced from 250 to 150, by the loss above stated, by the wearing effect of the strain of being constantly under fire, with some sickness, in spite of the return of many who had been sick or wounded earlier in the season.

July 30 that most important affair, the explosion of the mine under Elliott's Salient occurred. The story of the mine has often been told, but seldom fairly. Great injustice has been done General Burnside in the recitals. The gallant corps that made the fight unaided and alone, losing more than 4000 of its men, deserves better treatment concerning that affair than historians have accorded it. General Burnside had fixed upon his plan of assault, his troops had been drilled with special reference to its execution, and all his arrangements had been made with that in view. On the evening before the assault he is compelled by his superior officers to change his plan in entirety and in detail and sent out to fight single handed, not his battle, but theirs. It seemed almost the irony of fate, not only that he should have been sent to make the fight contrary to his own better judgment, but that his associates, on the right and left, should have failed to fire even a single gun to attract the enemy's attention while he withdrew his poor broken, bleeding corps, when it became evident to spectator and participant that there was nothing to stay for longer except death. It is some consolation to find that General Grant, too great and just to be opinionated, admitted in his testimony before the committee on the conduct of the war, that he was then of the opinion that if Burnside had been permitted to carry out his own plan, the assault would probably have been successful, and that meant the capture of Petersburg in July, 1864, instead of April, 1865. General Meade does not go so far, but he admits that he may have been mistaken. Of the work of the Seventeenth in that affair little need be said, and no member of the regiment need blush for the part he played that day. Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings had been ill for some weeks and unfit for service, and Major Reynolds led the regiment, numbering eight officers and 120 men. All that men could do they did, but in vain, and when all was over,

"They that had fought so well
Came through the jaws of death,
Back from the mouth of hell,
All that was left of them."

The loss of the regiment was ten killed, forty six wounded, eighteen missing, total seventy-four. Major Reynolds, than whom no braver officer could be found in any regiment, was killed while encouraging his men to beat back the enemy. Of the other officers who were with the regiment, Lieutenants Martin of company E, Hicks of company F, Bingham of company G and Converse of company H were killed; Captain Kenfield of company C and Lieutenant Pierce of company D were captured, leaving only one, Lieutenant Needham of company H, to come back from the enemy's lines, and he died a week later from wounds received that day. The fragment of a regiment that remained was divided into two battalions under First Sergeants Judson and Lucia of companies A and H respectively, and Adjutant Peck, the only commissioned officer present except the Surgeon, assumed command, although sick. The regiment numbered hardly more than 100 now present and many of these were under the surgeon's care. It was a sorry time. Peck was soon succeeded in command by Captain Knapp, who was released from detached service that he might return to his regiment, and he in a short time by Captain Eaton, who was also allowed to return and soon after promoted to Major.

Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings soon after went to Vermont because of his health and Major Eaton continued in command. August 13, company I, Capt. Daniel Conway, with 87 men, joined the regiment. Officers and men began to return to the regiment and September 1 there were 233 present for duty. About the 18th of August the Fifth Corps, occupying the line next on our left was moved to the left to take the Weldon railroad, and our corps moved along to occupy the vacated position. On the 19th Potter's division, with two other divisions of the corps, went to the support of the Fifth Corps that had been attacked. With this aid the Fifth Corps held its position on the railroad and even gained some ground which was enclosed within the Union entrenchments. Two days later the enemy made a desperate attempt to drive the Fifth Corps from its position on the railroad. Potter's division took part in the fighting, the regiment was in line, but was not put in and sustained no loss. For a few days the regiment occupied Fort Sedgwick, commonly called Fort Hell, just opposite the rebel Fort Mahone, which usually was called Fort Damnation, appropriate names for the two.

During most of September the duties of the regiment were of a less dangerous nature, strengthening the works on the line to the left of the Jerusalem Plank Road. Late in the month it was proposed to force back the enemy's right and swing our left in towards Petersburg to get possession of certain roads, and perhaps ultimately to reach the Southside railroad. The junction of the roads aimed at was at Peebles farm five or six miles south and west of Petersburg. An advance line of Confederate works about a mile in front of this main line guarded the position. The movement was made by General Warren with two divisions of the Fifth Corps and

General Parke with the Second and Third divisions of the Ninth Corps. Early in the forenoon, Warren swung his line around, pushing before it the enemy's skirmishers and his advance line, which fell back reluctantly but without stubborn contest. The divisions of the Ninth Corps being in reserve at the right had to march some distance to reach the position assigned them at the left of the Fifth Corps. Shortly after noon the Seventeenth, with Griffin's brigade, had passed beyond the former line of the Fifth, across the field over which that corps had fought earlier in the day and was well around the left of the Fifth as then deployed, and facing north. Through someone's fault the brigade was sent much too far to the left, and after being partly deployed in some woods, was re-called, moved a mile or more to the right, then to the front passing close by the Peebles house, and along the road at the right of the woods. When the line was being formed for the advance, Surgeon Edson requested Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings to send with him a good man to take charge of the Stretcher Corps, who would see that they did not lag behind. Lieutenant Lucia, who had returned on the 28th from a few days stay in the hospital at City Point, and was awaiting the arrival of his commission sent out but recently, volunteered for the duty. It is said that on this occasion the Stretcher Corps and stretchers kept on the advance line steadily abreast with the colors, but were not needed. By one of those inexcusable mysteries, blunders really, so common during the war, a portion of the Fifth Corps failed to be in place, leaving a wide gap over low woodland between the right of Griffin's brigade and the left of the Fifth Corps. Through this gap a large force of the enemy made its way to our rear, and while the brigade was pressing the enemy in front it was savagely assaulted in flank and rear, and at the same time in its front. On the discovery of the force in our rear the order had been given to fall back, but its execution was another thing, and in doing so many of the brigade were killed, wounded and captured. It was here that Lieutenant Lucia, in trying to bring off his little command, lost his left arm. Griffin's brigade having the right of the line, with the Seventeenth its right regiment, was driven back in great disorder. The First Brigade shared a similar fate, as also one brigade of the Third Division. Potter's whole line was forced back more than a mile, losing heavily in prisoners. Near the Pegram house a final stand was made, the broken and disordered fragments of the Ninth Corps were halted, and with the aid of a division of the Fifth Corps, checked the advance of the enemy about dark and permanently held the line. The loss of the regiment was eight killed, three of them officers, forty wounded, two mortally, and twenty-seven missing, nine of whom died in the hands of the enemy, total seventy-five. Lieutenant-Colonel Cummings fell gallantly encouraging his men, and his last order was, "Look out for the colors." Major Eaton, conspicuous there as elsewhere for his coolness, was killed, as was also Lieutenant Tobin of company I. There was a woody swamp and stream to be crossed in falling back, and here, with the confusion into which the troops had already been thrown by the appearance of the enemy in their rear, they became inextricably mixed. Adjutant Peck on his way out, made several attempts to rally the scattered men around the colors. In this he met with some success, and at one point the temporary line so formed retarded the progress of the advancing enemy long enough to enable a section of a battery to withdraw and save its guns. Captain Knapp, after making his way out of the swamp and woods with such members of the regiment as he had been able to collect, found Adjutant Peck with the color-guard and colors and assumed command, and reported the regiment as on duty near the Peebles house, where it remained that night, and the next morning was ordered to a position in the new line which had been formed a half mile to the rear and near the Pegram house. A day or two later Adjutant Peck, with Captain Conway and Lieutenant Norton, were sent to the hospital, and Captain Knapp for nearly a month commanded the regiment, having at first but 84 men, Surgeon Edson being the only other commissioned officer present for duty. October 27, company K, Captain Yale, with 95 men and Colonel Randall joined the regiment. The losses of the regiment in killed and wounded up to this time exceeded by nearly one-third the number it took into its first fight.

October 27 the regiment participated in the movement made by the Second, Fifth and Ninth Corps on the enemy's works at Hatcher's Run. The burden of the fighting fell to the Second and Fifth Corps, and the regiment sustained no loss. The next day it returned to its position on the line. Sometime in November the corps was moved to the extreme right with its line extending from the river to the left as far as Jerusalem Plank Road. Griffin's brigade had the left of this line, and Colonel Randall was placed in command of Fort Davis situated on the brigade's line, with his, the Thirty-first Maine and Fifty-sixth Massachusetts regiments and two batteries, and there all remained until February 11, 1865, when the regiment was moved about a mile to the left where it occupied a position on the advance line until the final breaking up in April. During the winter the regiment took part in frequent skirmishes between pickets, varied with occasional artillery duels between Fort Davis and its neighbors across the field, and lost several men, but was in no pitched battle. In November, Seth W. Langdon was appointed Assistant Surgeon in place of Dr. Spohn, resigned. February 27, 1865, Surgeon Edson resigned and took with him the love and respect of every man in the regiment. In March, J. C. Rutherford, Assistant Surgeon of the Tenth Vermont, was appointed to the vacancy, and he proved a competent and efficient surgeon and worthy successor. In November, 1864, Captain Knapp had been promoted to Major, and in December to Lieutenant-Colonel, and several changes and promotions had also occurred in the line. Early in March Colonel Randall went to Vermont on a thirty days' leave, and he returned to the regiment at Burkesville on the day after Lee's surrender. In the final assault at Petersburg the regiment, as always, performed its part well; Lieutenant-Colonel Knapp had command. On the night of April 1, moving out after midnight, the regiment, with the Second Maryland, pierced the enemy's picket line between Forts Sedgwick and Davis and sweeping to the left took it entirely in to the point where the Ninth Corps line joined the Sixth, gathering in about 250 prisoners by the move. It then took position in the rear of Fort Davis ready to join in the assault to be made at daybreak. In the assault, the regiment and brigade, after some fighting and repulse, rallied and forcing the enemy back, then, being in turn forced back, finally obtained so firm a lodgment in the enemy's works that the attempt to drive them out was abandoned. Firing was kept up for some time, but the battle was already won. And thus in a manner worthy of the organization that had so bravely made its first fight, its last was ended. Its loss was ten killed and thirty-nine wounded, five fatally. Lieuts. J. Edson Henry of company K and C. W. Ellsworth of company B died a few days later of wounds received. The list of wounded included at least five officers; an equal number were brevetted for gallant conduct on that occasion. On the morning of the 3d the regiment passed through Petersburg and took up the march in pursuit of Lee, reaching Burkesville on the 8th. Complimentary orders for our conduct at the assault and now and then official announcements of captures by Sheridan's force or other parts of the pursuing army, assisted in the weary march. On the 9th we moved towards Farmville, but on the receipt of the official report of Lee's surrender, were ordered back to Burkesville. Here Colonel Randall joined the regiment and was put in command of the place. Guarding the town, the immense quantities of captured property and the numerous prisoners; kept the regiment on duty until the 20th, when it joined the brigade and marched to City Point, and thence by transports went to Alexandria, reaching that place about April 30. Going into camp about three miles southwest of the city, it remained, performing guard and patrol duty, taking part in the grand review at Washington, May 23, and having some of its officers and men on detached service at the city, until July 14, when it left for Vermont. Arriving at Burlington on the 18th, the men were welcomed back by the people, cheered with speeches and refreshed with a good breakfast, well served by the good ladies of the place, then marched to the Marine Hospital, where, on the 24th, they were paid off and went to their homes, and the Seventeenth passed into history.

General Griffin, and no one could so well know as he, says: "The Seventeenth Vermont bore an active and honorable part in Grant's Campaign through the Wilderness, in the siege of Petersburg, and in the capture of Lee. It was composed of the best material, and was one of the regiments upon which I could always rely with perfect confidence, however difficult or dangerous the duty to be performed. It was a regiment which reflected great credit upon the State, and one of which the people of Vermont have a right to be proud."

The logic of figures does a seeming injustice to the fair record of this regiment. In the final statement it is shown to have among its gains, "Recruits 232." Of this number, 120 were men who enlisted as substitutes or were drafted and never went to the front. They were never more than paper men, yet the regiment is charged with them and they swell its aggregate.

In officers, its death loss was fourteen, exceeding that of any other Vermont regiment. And its percentage of entire death loss in battle, even including in the aggregate of its men the 120 whose record stands, "Deserted, never joined company," is only exceeded by one Vermont regiment. Considering its period of service, it is a record which tells of duty faithfully performed and one of which any Vermonter may well be proud.

"When can their glory fade?"

COMPANY F. FIRST UNITED STATES SHARPSHOOTERS.

BY WILLIAM Y. W. RIPLEY, LIEUTENANT-COLONEL.

---

COMPANY F First U. S. Sharpshooters was organized in September, 1861, with Edmund Weston, Jr., of Randolph as captain and C. W. Seaton and M. V. Bronson as lieutenants. It joined the regiment at New York and went with it to Washington, where the men were mustered into the service of the United States. The company left Vermont with one hundred and thirteen enlisted men, but upon muster in thirteen were rejected, to reduce the number to the regulation limit of one hundred men.

In November of the same year William Y. W. Ripley was commissioned as lieutenant-colonel of the regiment, and commanded it in all the battles in which Company F took part, until he was disabled by wounds.

The sharpshooters remained in a camp of instruction near Washington, until the 22d of March, 1862, then they were assigned to the division of Maj.-Gen. Fitz John Porter, and embarked for the Peninsula, where a portion of the regiment served in every battle of the campaign, except Fair Oaks.

Company F took part in the battles in front of Yorktown, at Hanover Court House, Mechanicsville, Gaines's Mill and Malvern Hill, losing eleven men in killed and wounded. At Harrison's Landing at the close of the seven days' battles, Captain Weston resigned and C. W. Seaton was promoted to be captain. The company marched with Morell's division of the Fifth Corps to the second battle of Bull Run, where it was sharply engaged, losing several men. At Antietam the sharpshooters had the unusual experience, for them, of being merely on-lookers, as the Fifth Corps was not engaged as a whole; but at Black-ford's Ford, on the Potomac, the rebel rear was overtaken and Company F rendered brilliant service, capturing two guns and several prisoners.

At Fredericksburg the sharpshooters were not ordered into action, but crossed the river on the 14th of December, and on the night of the 15th picketed the extreme front, close under Marye's Heights. After Fredericksburg, the regiment remained in camp, doing the usual picket duty, until the Army moved out in the Chancellorsville campaign. In this disastrous battle the company was engaged every day at different points on the line, and lost six men, killed and wounded.

At Gettysburg the sharpshooters served with the Third Corps, to which they had been transferred prior to the battle of Chancellorsville, and Company F, with three other companies of the regiment, performed a very valuable service in checking Longstreet's march towards the Union left, on the morning of the second day of the battle. They were all engaged at other points on the line on that and succeeding days, losing several men. On the 7th of November, Company F led the advance of the Third Corps at the passage of the Rappahannock at Kelly's Ford, under Capt. C. D. Merriman, with such vigor as to completely surprise and compel the surrender of four hundred and six Confederates, well covered by rifle pits, the company losing only four men. At Locust Grove, in the Mine Run campaign, the company was heavily engaged and again lost heavily in good men.

March 28, 1864, the gallant Third Corps, reduced to almost a skeleton by its terrible losses at Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and Locust Grove, passed into history, being consolidated with the Second Corps. The sharpshooters became part of the Second Brigade, Third Division, Second Corps, and as such took part in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor and the various battles around Petersburg.

The company crossed the Rapidan on the 4th of May, 1864, with forty-three enlisted men, and was engaged in the hardest fighting of that bloody campaign; at the close of the battle of Cold Harbor only fifteen of the forty-three were left; twenty-eight men had fallen. In the operations about Petersburg Company F was frequently engaged and lost fourteen men, up to the time when the term of original enlistment expired, on the 12th of September, 1864. Of the original one hundred and thirteen men mustered into the service, there were only twenty-five left, present and absent; of these, nineteen elected to take their honorable discharge, and six re-enlisted.

The small remnant of the company kept up an organization until the 23d of December, 1864, when they were transferred to Company E, Second U. S. Sharpshooters. During this period they were frequently engaged, and lost five men, killed and wounded. The company was present at no less than thirty-seven battles and skirmishes of importance, beside numberless minor affairs.

It numbered, from first to last, including all recruits, one hundred seventy-seven men; of these no less than thirty-two were killed on the field, or died of wounds received in action. The wounded who recovered and again reported for duty numbered forty-five; thus eighteen per cent of the whole died of wounds, while the total number of casualties is seventy-seven, or forty-three and a half per cent of the whole.

The record shows the severe and dangerous nature of the service performed by these men, and on it they may safely rest, certain that a grateful country will honor their memories, even as it does those of their comrades, who fought in the ranks of other and larger organizations.

SECOND UNITED STATES SHARPSHOOTERS.

BY HOMER R. STOUGHTON, LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SECOND SHARPSHOOTERS.

---

ON the 23d of September, 1861, Governor Erasmus Fairbanks authorized and commissioned Capt. Homer R. Stoughton, of Randolph, to raise a company of picked men to join Col. Hiram Berdan's organization, which was authorized by the general government, consequently the recruiting of the Second company began, and Seymour F. Norton, of Winooski Falls, was the first man to enlist, and Henry H. Church of Randolph, was the second. In the course of a few days there was as fine a company of men in camp at West Randolph as ever went from any State to the defense of the country's honor. All these men were required to stand the special test of making ten consecutive shots with a rifle, placing each shot inside a ten-inch ring at a distance of three hundred yards, and must in every way stand the physical examination required of all recruits to the army at the time. Right here I must add that the special branch into which these men were enlisted had such attractions that it brought together a superior set of men, intellectually as well as physically, so after organizing and getting ready for muster during the early part of October, an unpleasant fact was made known that prevented the muster in; it occurred in this way, as the records will show. At the extra session of the Legislature, called in the summer to provide for raising and equipping the six regiments, the cavalry and one battery, if I am not mistaken, it was thought the same act had provided for the State allowance at seven dollars per month for the enlisted men, but upon the convening of the regular session of the Legislature, it was found that no provision was made beyond the troops specified, leaving out the battery being recruited by Captain Hebard, as well as the sharpshooters, consequently a delay was caused in the muster of the Second company, and not until the Legislature had passed the law providing for all enlisted men the State pay of seven dollars per month, was the company mustered, which was done by Lieut. W. W. Chamberlin, Fourteenth United States Infantry, on the 9th of November, 1861.

After waiting for instructions until about the 20th of November, the Second company sharpshooters, numbering officers and men, ninety-one, started for Washington, D. C., to join the Second regiment U. S. Sharpshooters, Col. H. A. V. Post commanding; when the company reached Washington it became Company E of the regiment. To go back to the trip to Washington. I must give the company as high a compliment as any they deserved during the war, and that is, upon arriving in New York City, on Peck Slip Pier, 25 East River, on the "Elm City," they marched up to Park Barracks, where every soldier from New England remembers having once been, where they got their first real army fare, and upon ascertaining they were to leave Jersey City at four o'clock in the afternoon, they with one accord desired a pass to go out into the city, none of them having been in New York. The Captain, much to the astonishment of the Regular Army Officer in command at the barracks, granted the passes with the promise that they should all return in time to march to the ferry. At the appointed time every officer and man was in line, which astonished the commander at the barracks as much as the granting the passes had done in the morning, and with a single exception, not a man was intoxicated, and he was able to march to the train. Every man was in line as we arrived at the Baltimore and Ohio depot in Washington, and all went into camp off Seventh Street, out of the city, the details of making the camp of instruction and the joining of other companies comprising the regiment, occupied the time until December, when the writer was detailed by order of Gen. G. B. McClellan, at the request of Gov. Frederick Holbrook, to go to Brattleboro, Vermont, and aid in organizing and taking on the Third Vermont Company, Capt. Gilbert Hart, which was another fine body of men, who were complimented both in New York and Philadelphia as they passed through those two cities. This Third company became Company H, in the Second Regiment United States Sharpshooters; they remained in camp of instruction, Washington, until the 19th of March, 1862, when they were moved across the Potomac and brigaded with the Fourteenth Brooklyn Zouaves, Twenty-second, Twenty-fourth and Thirtieth New York Volunteers, Gen. C. C. Augur commanding, and to which brigade was attached Battery B, Fourth U. S. Artillery, Capt. John Gibbon commanding; also two regiments of cavalry commanded by Colonel Bayard and Colonel Kilpatrick. All of these three last named officers were promoted to Brigadier-Generals before hardly a month had passed. I speak of these to show how the Vermont boys were surrounded at the outset.

There was nothing of special interest occurred until the First Army Corps under General McDowell was put on the move after General McClellan went to Yorktown; then the Corps moved on Fredericksburg, and on the 18th of April, 1862, the Second company sharpshooters was first called upon to skirmish against the retreating column of General Holney, who retired across the Rappahannock at Falmouth, and was followed by the brigade of General Augur, Battery B, Fourth U. S. Artillery, supported by Company E, Maryland U. S. S. S., who fired their first shots and first saw a dead soldier on that day. All the men behaved splendidly and deserved and got great credit for their behavior in the presence of the enemy. Company H did its part well in aiding the support of the skirmish line.

In the latter part of May the army advanced towards Hanover Court House, and the Vermont companies were called upon to do picket duty in front of the enemy, and were complimented on the occasion. Then came the movement of Gen. Stonewall Jackson in the Shenandoah Valley, calling our Corps to aid General Banks, and in attempting to do so two trains collided on June 1st, when several men of Company E were badly injured. This prevented the procedure of General Augur's troops any further than Rectortown, Va., so the troops were ordered back to camp on Falmouth Heights, Va., where the writer was taken ill with a fever and was unconscious for several days, and in an almost hopeless condition for weeks, taking him away from his command from early in June until the 23d of August, 1862, when he joined his company in the fight at Rappahannock Station, where the series of battles commenced which ended at Bull Run, number two.

Companies E and H were under fire every day from August 23, 1862, to the wind up at Chantilly, when Gen. Phil. Kearny was killed the 30th of August. No men ever bore themselves more gallantly than the Vermont sharpshooters. It is hard at this moment to enumerate the deeds of special daring performed by these men, often called upon to go and find troublesome Rebel sharpshooters, and invariably with a good account, the ranks were fearfully decimated, and the rolls showed few men for muster on pay sheet, that were made up on the march to Antietam. At Groveton, Company E was the first company to encounter the Rebels under Stonewall Jackson, and in each succeeding day of that terrible fight the Vermonters vied with the companies from Maine, New Hampshire, Minnesota and Michigan, to see who should do the best work, and on the very front line on the left of where Lee broke our line, Companies E and H stood their ground with their cannonade, until there was danger of being out-flanked and captured, and then only by the most strenuous effort did they get away.

After the retreat to Upton's Hill, and the short rest, the regiment was again put on the move, and reached South Mountain in time to be engaged freely with the Rebels September 14, and in which the companies were complimented, with the others, for the daring and bravery in dislodging the enemy and occupying the ground from which the enemy was driven by the sharpshooters. On the 15th of September, after passing over South Mountain, many prisoners were taken, Companies E and H taking their full quota. On the 16th the regiment was at Keedysville, near Sharpsburg, near Antietam Creek, and on that night marched around to the right of the army, Hooker occupying the ground on the Sharpsburg and Hagerstown Pike.

The troops remained on the Antietam battle field for several weeks, when they began the march into Virginia. The sharpshooters were at all times put into severe places. At Front Royal was a sharp skirmish.

In the early spring, the latter part of April and the first days of May, the Chancellorsville fight came. The Second regiment U. S. Sharpshooters was Whipple's Division of Sickles' Corps, as was the First regiment, in which was the First Vermont company U. S. Sharpshooters. On the 2d of May, at Hazel Run, the two regiments attacked and captured the largest part of the Twenty-third Georgia, who were the rear of Stonewall Jackson's force that attacked the Eleventh Corps. All the men did excellent service on this occasion, as they did throughout the entire Chancellorsville battle, being put into the most difficult places. On the 3d of May, while on skirmish line engaging the enemy, the Eleventh New Jersey fired a volley into their own skirmish line in front of them, causing some confusion and a retirement of the sharpshooters until the firing ceased.

From Chancellorsville we returned to camp at Stoneman's Switch. During this encampment the companies did regular picket duty and always performed every duty faithfully and promptly. On the march to Gettysburg, in the hot days of June, and all the time these two companies were on that march, no men ever tried to do better.

In the engagement on the 3d of July, when Longstreet attacked us, these two companies, E and H, were in the thickest of the fight, and when the Fifteenth Alabama struck us they stood their ground and entered into that fight with great zeal.

On the march back the men were zealous to get into a fight with the enemy, and at Williamsburg, while Lee was crossing, or rather delayed in crossing, the men of E were anxious to get into a fight, and begged to get up to the Rebel works.

This campaign was carried on until we reached Sulphur Springs, where we camped a long time with the usual routine, until, I think, November 6, when we made the crossing of Kelley's Ford. The Second regiment was detached and sent to General DeTrobriand, who put them in the post of honor, the front; they were the first to reach the river. E, with Company C from Maine, deployed right in front of the Rebel rifle pits, in open ground, which was done with great coolness. On the day following, the regiment was sent for, to drive the Rebel cavalry and a battery of artillery from our front, which was done to the satisfaction of Generals Mead, Birney and Ward. This gave us Brandy Station as our winter quarters.

November 26 or 28, the battle of Mine Run was fought; though little fighting took place, yet it was hazardous beyond degree. On the 30th was the sharp shooting, and it was done very well; all the Vermonters fit for duty were there. We then returned to camp in winter quarters, partially prepared by the rebels, who had to go away and leave them. This was near Brandy Station, Virginia.

In the spring of 1864, General Grant took command, and the campaign was carried on continuously from May 4, when we passed over the same ground to reach Todd's Tavern, as a year before to get to Chancellorsville. We were under fire the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th of May, when the writer was wounded.

On the evening of the 10th of May, 1864, at Spottsylvania, the Second Corps charged the Rebels and Lieut.-Col. Homer R. Stoughton, while leading the regiment, received a gun shot wound, breaking two ribs and receiving other injuries, which compelled his retirement from the field, and from that to the 21st of June, 1864, the writer was away from the command on account of wounds received. The two companies, E and H, passed through all that series of battles of 1864, from Spottsylvania, through Cold Harbor and on to Petersburg, where the writer joined the regiment and assumed command on the 21st day of June, 1864, early in the morning. On the same day the Second Corps made a left flank movement to cut the Weldon railroad, the Second regiment, in which E and H were, was put to the front to encounter the described squadron of Fitz Hugh Lee's cavalry. Colonel McDougal, who commanded the brigade, and to whom I reported, sent our regiment in and we soon found ourselves largely outnumbered, and reported to Colonel McDougal, when he replied, "go on, there is nothing in your front," so I pushed on. Presently report came from companies A and B both, that their line was being overlapped, and in danger of being captured. I directed them to break to the rear their respective flanks and the firing was beginning to be sharp. I heard what I supposed was support coming on my left and rear, and in attempting to adjust and join the line, fell into the hands of the Second N. C. cavalry, dismounted. At the same time the Colonel and Orderly of the Second N. C. cavalry were both captured by Lieutenant Sharp and some of the men. Five of our regiment were captured beside myself. The six months incarceration and parole deprives me from giving any further details. Captains Norton and Abbott of E and H would be better fitted to give the doings for the period from May 10 to June 21, and from that on to the end of the war.

The officers and men of companies E and H cannot receive too high praise for the efficient and valuable services during the entire period of the war after they entered the army.

At Fredericksburg, Orange Court House, Rappahannock, Sulphur Springs, Groveton, Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wapping Heights, Auburn Virginia, Kelley's Ford, Brandy Station, Orange Grove, Mine Run, Wilderness, Po River, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Totopotomoy, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, June 16, '64, Deep Bottom, Petersburg, Sept. 10, '64, Boydton Plank Road, Weldon railroad and Hatcher's Run, having forty killed and ninety wounded. The companies having been joined to the 4th Vermont, were mustered out July, 1865.

COMPANY E.

SECOND UNITED STATES SHARPSHOOTERS.

BY WILLIAM H. HUMPHREY, FIRST LIEUTENANT COMPANY E.

THE Second company of Vermont sharpshooters was recruited by Homer R. Stoughton, of West Randolph, Vermont. Before any man could be accepted, he must shoot his target—that is, he must put ten successive bullets into a five inch ring one hundred yards distant. November 9, 1861, one hundred officers and men were mustered into the United States service, the officers being Capt. Homer R. Stoughton, 1st Lieut. Frederick Spaulding, 2d Lieut. Henry M. Hall.

November 21, the company left Vermont for Washington, D. C., where we joined our regiment, and were known as company E, Second regiment, U. S. Sharpshooters; our camp was known as the camp of instruction. We remained here through the winter of 1861 and '62, and on January 15, 1862, we were paid for the first time by Major Old, who, turning to our Colonel, H. A. V. Post, said: "Colonel, you have one thing of which you should be proud; you have a regiment of almost eight hundred men, and every man steps up and signs the pay-roll himself. I do not believe such a thing ever happened before in the worlds history of wars."

March 18, 1862, we crossed the Potomac by way of Long Bridge, into Virginia, and joined Major-General McDowell's Corps, becoming the First Battalion, First Division, First Army Corps; April 18 we left for Falmouth, arriving there the morning of the 19th, when company E was deployed as skirmishers, and fired their first shot at the Rebels; June 1st, we marched towards Richmond, but were ordered to the Shenandoah Valley; we took the cars at Mannassas Junction, and when near Salem, met with an accident, company E having eighteen men injured, some of them severely. We were then ordered back to Falmouth, and found our Sharps breech loading rifles waiting for us; July 26 we made a reconnoissance in force to Orange Court House; August 5 to Thornton, Virginia, skirmishing with the rebels at both places; August 8 we marched to Slaughters Mountain, arriving in time to help the rebels across the Rapidan River; August 18 we were the rear guard to Major-General Pope's army across the Rappahannock River; August 21-22-23 we skirmished along the river banks; August 26 we had a sharp skirmish at White Sulphur Springs; August 27 we marched from Warrenton towards Bull Run, in the rear of Jackson's Rebels, and picked up quite a number of stragglers as prisoners; August 28 we were in action at Gainesville; August 29 and 30 at second Bull Run, and on the 29th the company had its first man killed in action.

Sept. 1, we were in line at Chantilly; Sept. 8 we crossed the Potomac at Long Bridge for Antietam; Sept. 14 we charged over South Mountain and captured two mountain howitzers and a number of prisoners. Back of the brush fence we counted twenty-seven dead Rebels from the Thirty-seventh North Carolina regiment. Sept. 15 and 16 we were picking up the stragglers; Sept. 17 we entered the historic corn field at Antietam and helped to fill the bloody lane, at the expense to our company of one killed and ten wounded. Our captain and four men were left for duty. We were left in camp without much duty to perform; October 1 we had thirteen men for duty in company E; October 17 we had thirty recruits join us, and with some of the slightly wounded and sick, returned to duty, we were again a company.

October 30 we crossed the Potomac at Harpers Ferry; November 15 we were in camp near Stoneman's Switch, Va. December 12 we crossed the Rappahannock to the field of Fredericksburg, where we captured a cavalry picket post, both men and horses; we lost one wounded. December 20 F. D. Sweetser was made Captain, S. F. Norton, First Lieutenant, John F. Law, Second Lieutenant. December 30 we joined the First regiment of sharpshooters, under Colonel Berdan. 1862 had been a hard year for company E. We had had on our rolls one hundred and forty-five officers and men, two had been killed in action, five died of disease, forty-three had been discharged for wounds and disability, six deserted, three transferred to Invalid Corps, and one promoted out of the company; sixty-one had gone, leaving eighty-four officers and men borne on the rolls of the company.

January 20, 1863, we marched through mud and rain to the river and picketed along its banks. We returned to camp January 24. April 28 we marched below Fredericksburg and saw Sedgwick's Sixth Corps across the river; May 1 we marched to a ford and to the plank road near the Chancellorsville House; May 2 we helped to capture the Twenty-third Georgia regiment, four hundred and eighty of Jackson's rear guard, for which Major General Sickles got off his horse and taking each man by the hand, thanked us for the work we had done, excusing us from duty for the next twenty-four hours. May 4 the company was again at work, and May 6 we crossed the river; we had lost three men prisoners, and one wounded; June 11 we were off for Gettysburg; June 12 at Rappanhanock Station; June 17 at Centreville; June 19 at Gum Springs; June 26 we crossed the Potomac at Edward's Ferry, and marched to Point of Rocks, making thirty-two miles of hard marching. July 1 we were at Gettysburg, where we did some hard fighting, though each day's loss of men was slight; one wounded; four prisoners. July 22-23-24 we were engaged at Manassas Gap and Wapping Heights; July 26 we were near Warrenton, remaining in the neighborhood of Warrenton and Culpeper, doing picket duty until October 9. As the rebels took the offensive we were driven back to Fairfax, where we skirmished with the enemy.

October 13 we were near Little Auburn, and had quite a sharp skirmish. November 7 we led the Third Corps to Kelley's Ford, and deployed along the river bank while the First regiment sharpshooters charged across the river and captured Col. G. Gleason's Twelfth Virginia regiment, one Surgeon, one Major, several Captains and Lieutenants, and about five hundred prisoners. November 8 we again met the Rebels at Culpeper. November 26 we crossed the Rapidan and met the enemy at Locust Grove and Mine Run, without the loss of a man. Soon after we returned to our camp near Brandy Station.

December 21 seventeen of the original one hundred men re-enlisted as veterans. Captain F. D. Sweetser had been cashiered, and S. F. Norton comes in Captain, John F. Law, First Lieutenant, Thomas J. Tarbell, Second Lieutenant. The year of 1863 had seen hard marching and bloody battles, yet our loss was small, as we had only one man die of disease, two were wounded, six taken prisoners, fifteen discharged for wounds and disability, and four transferred to Invalid Corps, leaving sixty-four officers and men on our company rolls.

January 7, 1864, we left for Vermont on our veteran furlough. February 23 we were again at Brandy Station, where we found forty-four recruits for the company; February 28 we marched to James City, but soon returned to camp, and on May 4 the company crossed the Rapidan at Ely Ford; May 5 we were again after the rebels in the Wilderness. We thought we had seen hard fighting and hardships before, but this was war twice told, every day at the front. May 5 to 7 we were in the Wilderness and around Chancellorsville; May 8 and 9 at Todd's Tavern; May 10 and 11 at Po River; May 12 at Spottsylvania and Hancock's great charge, where many thousand prisoners and thirty pieces of artillery were taken. May 13 to 18 we were skirmishing with the enemy; May 19 General Birney gave the company a day off. We were near his headquarters, when up the road in our rear we heard firing, "fall in sharpshooters"; we go on the double quick and drive back Ewell's Rebels — Company E having two wounded, and that is all the rest we got. May 23 found us at North Anna River, known as Taylor's Bridge, where we took part in the charge, and captured a redan with artillery and several hundred prisoners. Company E had one man killed, two mortally wounded. May 27 we were at Lady Grove Church; May 31 at Totopotomoy Creek, charging the enemy at that place.

It being necessary to relieve the Fifth Corps, we were told by General Grant, in person, to go across the creek, if we had to surrender when we got there, but we did not surrender; we took one hundred and thirty-seven of the Twenty-seventh North Carolina prisoners and held the works that night. We had one killed and four wounded, one being mortally wounded. June 1 we were at Bethesda Church; June 3, at Cold Harbor, where we had one mortally wounded; June 4 to 11 in a line of works along the Chickahominy River; June 12 we marched to Long Bridge and crossed the Chickahominy to Wilcox Wharf and across the James River. For forty-one days we had seen constant fighting, skirmishing and picket duty, without intermission and with the loss of many good men. June 16, 17 and 18 we were on the skirmish line and picket line; June 21 at the Weldon Railroad; July 27 we crossed the James River at the Crow's Nest, and marched towards Richmond all day. The 28th we skirmished with the enemy; July 29 we deployed along the line in front of where the mine was to explode, keeping the Rebels from firing their batteries; so well did we do our duty that not a piece was fired, for which our General highly complimented us

From this time until August 13 we did picket duty, marching then to City Point and going upon the transport down the river; just at dark the transport faced about, going to Deep Bottom; we then marched toward Richmond and flanked a four-gun battery, which we charged and took, with twenty-five or thirty prisoners and a quantity of ammunition. Just at dark we marched to Weldon Railroad, which we helped to take and hold. Again we did picket duty until September 10, when the pickets closed along the front of the Chimneys, the Twentieth Indiana and Second Sharpshooters. At one o'clock, A. M., we charged and captured three hundred to four hundred prisoners and held the ground taken, for which we were again complimented for duty well done. Again picket duty until October 27, when we crossed Hatcher's Run and marched towards the Southside railroad and sharply engaged, Company E losing two men killed and five wounded. We called it the battle of the Bull pen. December 8, with the Fifth Corps, General Mott's Division of the Second Corps, we marched towards the North Carolina line, tearing up one hundred and thirty miles of railroad, and back to Petersburg. December 23 we had thirty-two men from the First Company, (F), join us; our company quota was full, although we had a number absent, wounded or sick. Again we have picket duty until Feb. 5, when we again cross at Hatcher's Run, charge the Rebel works we had taken once before, and take a number of prisoners without loss to Company E. February 25 our regiment was badly reduced in numbers and we lost our regimental organization, being transferred to 4th Regiment Vermont Volunteers. As Company G our company was full. Sergt. W. H. Humphrey was, on Nov. 12, 1864, made First Lieutenant, and Sergt. W. F. Tilson, Second Lieutenant.

Captain Norton had been absent, having been wounded, since May 12, 1864. Lieutenant Law had resigned, Lieutenant Tarbell had died of wounds, we had lost eleven killed in action, ten died of wounds, three died in Rebel prisons, and ten of disease. When we left the Second Corps Brigade, General De Trobriand issued a highly complimentary order, acknowledging our long and efficient service and our glorious record made on many a bloody battle field.

After going into the 4th Vermont, Lieutenants Humphrey and Tilson each lost a right leg.

We have many others with an arm or leg gone, and many have ghastly wounds, showing plainly the hard and bloody fighting the company has done, yet we have had but a small part of the praise given to the Vermont troops, but we get praise from a source that but few get theirs from; ours comes from the enemy, they knew us well. Often the enemy has been heard to sing out, "Look out, there are those devils with big hats and short guns!" Colonel Oates writes that when fighting our little regiment at Gettysburg, with his brigade, he never got into such a hornets' nest in all his life. We all tried hard to do our duty, and whether we get our due praise or not, we can enjoy a united country, with its freedom and love, friendship, charity and loyalty.

COMPANY H.

SECOND UNITED STATES SHARPSHOOTERS.

BY CURTIS ABBOTT, FIRST LIEUTENANT SECOND SHARPSHOOTERS.

COMPANY H, the third and last company of this arm raised in Vermont was organized in December, 1861, at Brattleboro, where it was mustered in on the 31st of the same month, with Gilbert Hart, Captain, Henry Herbert and Albert Buxton, Lieutenants. It started the same day for Washington, leaving behind sick with measles one-fifth of its one hundred men and officers, who followed in February, 1862. Quartered in the camp of instruction near the city, as a part of the Second U. S. Sharpshooters under the command of Col. H. A. V. Post, it took lessons in the art of war and the duties of camp life till March 19, when the regiment crossed the Potomac, and as a part of McDowell's corps, began duty in the field. General Augur commanded their brigade and King their division. It had been settled at the camp of instruction, by negotiations, in which the men very actively participated, that their arm should be the recently invented breech-loading rifle of the Sharpe Manufacturing Co. Their uniform of dark green, leather leggings, hair knapsacks backed with bright tin kettles, and their rifles, distinguished them among the many regiments then leaving Washington, but the difference in appearance was less marked after a few bivouacs.

Remaining near Washington, south of the Potomac, till April 4, they then advanced toward the Rappahannock, and after camping at Bristoe Station from the 6th to the 15th, and at Catlett's till the 17th, made a forced march to Falmouth in McDowell's effort to surprise the small Confederate force stationed there, but which escaped through Fredericksburg, burning the bridges.

In camp and guarding supplies at Falmouth till May 25, then across the Rappahannock, and on the march toward Richmond, but turning back on the 29th they marched to Catlett's, where they took cars and went via Manassas Junction toward Front Royal, in the movement to intercept Stonewall Jackson's retreat up the Shenandoah.

They were detained with some injury and loss to the regiment and company by colliding trains at Rectortown Station, and after other marches and halts, on the 15th of June reoccupied their camp at Falmouth.

On duty at Spottsylvania Court House and vicinity from the 5th of August to the 9th, they began on the 10th a forced march to Cedar Mountain, passed Ellis's Ford, and on the evening of the 11th reached the scene of the late battle, and camping in that vicinity till the 19th, moved back with the Army of Virginia behind the Rappahannock.

From the 21st of August to the 3d of September they were engaged in the series of battles, marches, and counter marches, incident to Pope's campaign, after his retreat from Cedar Mountain. In their three days of battle and skirmish near Rappahannock Station, Company H lost one man killed, and another in their skirmish of the 26th of August at Sulphur Springs. On the 28th, in the attack on King near Groveton, their brigade (now Hatch's) taking an important part in the contest, the company was under fire, mostly of artillery, and met with no loss. On the 28th the same brigade, by the rapidly changing processes of war, was commanded by Colonel Sullivan, Hatch having succeeded King. Just at nightfall a battle began between this and Hood's division, which lasted till nine o'clock. Company H on the Warrenton Turnpike assisted in holding the enemy at bay till the night finally ended the battle; loss, two wounded, one captured. On the following day they were again engaged, but without loss to this company.

In the re-organization of the Army of the Potomac their brigade, now commanded by Colonel Phelps, with its division, became a part of the First Corps under Hooker. They marched through Maryland to the South Mountain range and were engaged September 13 at Turner's Gap, carried the ground to the summit, where, having routed the enemy and captured his Mountain howitzers, they rested on their arms and advanced at day-break, marching to Antietam. On the 16th they led the advance of Hooker's division on Lee's left, had a slight skirmish at the close of that day, and were in the thickest of the fight in the cornfields at about sunrise the following morning. Loss, five men wounded, one mortally. There was heavy loss throughout the regiment including its colonel wounded, and adjutant killed. Their ranks thinned by previous hard marches, their loss at this battle was fully twenty-five per cent of those present for duty, but they received thirteen recruits and some sick and wounded returned to duty in October. On the 30th they re-crossed the Potomac, and nearing Fredericksburg, Colonel Post recovering from his wound, returned but to resign, and Capt. Homer R. Stoughton of Company E was promoted to major and took command of the regiment. Captain Hart and Lieutenant Herbert resigning, Lieutenant Buxton and Q. M.-Sergt. William P. Shreve were promoted to captain and first lieutenant of Company H respectively, and First Sergt. William Newell to second lieutenant.

December 9 they marched on toward Fredericksburg amidst snow and ice, and crossed the river at the lower bridge on the 12th. For the next three days they were on the terrace above the river under the enemy's guns posted along the wooded ridge beyond, and subjected at intervals to their fire. On the 13th, as skirmishers, they captured a redoubt in the wood by the river with several prisoners and horses. This skirmish on the river terrace, from which the fog was then lifting, the line deploying as it advanced toward the wood, while our batteries north of the river raked the ground in its front, afforded one of the finest battle pictures of the war and was not especially bloody. Skirmishing on this and the two succeeding days carried them beyond the range of the great guns on the ridge in their front, to encounter a more to be dreaded danger from the rifles of their antagonists; yet their loss in the three days' encounter was but two slightly wounded.

January 14, 1863, by command of General Burnside the two regiments of sharpshooters were formed into a distinct arm of the service under the command of Colonel Berdan. This order led to much extra marching of the sharpshooters during the rainy season and till after the famous "Mud March," but finally on the 2d of February they went into winter quarters on a hillside, facing South, near Stoneman's Switch, where picket duty alone relieved the monotony till the opening of the Chancellorsville campaign. They took an active part in the maneuvers and auspicious opening of the Chancellorsville campaign, as well as in the battle. They were of the force marching to the river below Fredericksburg without actually crossing, and thence rapidly up the river to the U. S. Ford, where they crossed by pontoons on May 1. On this field their part in the capture of the Twenty-third Georgia regiment, their skirmish of the same day on Lewis Creek, and their bare escape from capture on that disastrous evening are noteworthy events; and of no less interest, their proximity to the scene of the wounding of the Confederate General Jackson. Their service on the following day, though in an exposed position, was not in the thickest of the fight, but their skirmishing on May 3 was hot and bloody, some of the casualties resulting sadly enough from the rash fire of their friends.

The two regiments received especial compliment after this battle from General Birney, commanding the division. The company's loss in this battle was three wounded.

June 24, Major Stoughton was promoted to the Lieut.-Colonelcy.

They reached the field of Gettysburg on the evening of July 1. On the 2d as skirmishers on the extreme left of the army they held back the charging columns of the enemy while Round Top was in danger. On the 3d they double-quickened to the scene of Pickett's charge, discharged a volley into the flying ranks of Wilcox's men, and sent forward a skirmish line on the heels of the retiring enemy. On the 4th they skirmished in the field to the front of this charge and lost heavily. Their loss was four wounded and two captured. In line of battle but not under fire at Williamstown, before Lee's crossing of the Potomac, in support of the First Sharpshooters at Wapping Heights, of the rear guard of the army during most of Mead's retreat from the Rapidan to Manassas, and as such engaged in several skirmishes on the march, supporting the First Sharpshooters at Kelly's Ford, in a manner bloodless to them, though not to their enemies; they were engaged on the following day, November 7, at Brandy Station, and quickly swept away the opposing force of cavalry without loss to the company, the regiment having one man mortally wounded. In the Mine Run campaign, November 27, at Locust Grove, they had four men injured by a pine tree felled upon the company by a shell bursting in its trunk.

The union lines being re-formed on Mine Run, Company H was engaged skirmishing on the days of Sunday and Monday, and picketed at night, a fact influencing their "sleepy march" on the night of the retreat. Their loss at the Run was two wounded. Among the regiment's wounded there, was Lorenzo Barker, their fighting chaplain.

December 21, the company, with its regiment, re-enlisted as an organization, and on January 7, 1864, these veterans having received furloughs started for home. February 23, returned to their camp near Culpeper with their bodies and their ranks both recruited, the company again numbering 100 men as when it first left Vermont.

By re-organization of the Army, March 28, the Third Corps was absorbed by the Second under the command of General Hancock, and the Second Sharpshooters became a part of the Third Division and First Brigade, commanded respectively by General's Birney and Ward, and the long campaign opened which began with the Wilderness battle and ended with Appomattox.

On May 5 Company H, having crossed the Rappahannock the morning of the day previous, was brought under fire as flankers on the Brock road, just south of its intersection with the Orange Plank, and, resting there through the night on their arms, they advanced in solid ranks to the latter road, at the opening of the battle in the morning and the contest is bloody, with varying success, till at the burning log breast-work in the evening, the enemy was repulsed. Loss of Company H: 8 killed, 16 wounded and 2 missing. Among the killed or mortally wounded, was Captain Buxton, their tried and faithful commander.

May 7 they skirmished to the front of the same field. May 8, leaving this bloody field in their rear, inspired by the tactics of their new commander-in-chief not to wait for the verdict, they marched to Todd's Tavern, [in the movement to Spottsylvania C. H.] skirmished there and again crossed the Potomac River. Returning, they next join Warren's assaulting column. Finally at daylight on the 12th, at the capture of the angle, the company gathered in several times its own numbers in prisoners. In this battle and their skirmish of the succeeding day, Company H lost 4 wounded. After several days more of alternate skirmish and rest at this field, they marched to the North Anna, there led the charge which captured the Telegraph road bridge, with the loss to Company H of one killed and two wounded, and in their next charge of Totopotomoy Creek, with their regiment, captured a number of prisoners and the enemy's intrenched skirmish line.

From June 2 to 13, during the operations and disastrous charge of the army at Cold Harbor, the loss of Company H, though not in the charging column, was one man killed and three wounded.

After the crossing of the James and during the attempts to carry Petersburg by direct assault their duty as skirmishers was almost incessant, and their loss correspondingly heavy, aggregating from the 6th to the 18th three men killed, not less than five wounded, and one captured. Further left on the 21st in the movement against the Weldon railroad, while leading Barlow's division, they captured a colonel in command of a brigade, with a lieutenant of his staff and other prisoners of the force forming there in the thicket to lacerate our moving flank. Loss, Lieutenant Newell wounded, one man killed. Colonel Stoughton was here captured. Sergt. Walter W. Smith took command of the company. Among the losses of the 22d inflicted by the Confederate flankers were two men captured from Company H.

Twice back across the James and Appomattox to skirmish and capture a battery in the vicinity of Deep Bottom. On duty as skirmishers at the episode of the Burnside Mine, picketing wherever their rifles may prove the most available; so the months of July and August pass, and September 10, under De Trobriand, now their brigade commander, they share in the capture of the rifle pits on the Jerusalem Plank Road, in front of Forts Hell and Sedgewick. Their service for the next two months in the rifle pits was irksome and dangerous, but resulted in the loss of only two men, wounded.

This service was varied by marches and battles to the left—October 1, on the ground where Fort Fisher afterwards rose and became familiar to the Vermont Brigade, and October 27, beyond Burgess' Hill in a movement against the Southside railroad.

William H. Churchill and Edgar A. Beach, recently commissioned as Captain and Lieutenant, were never mustered in as such by reason of wounds and capture at this battle, Churchill's wound being mortal. Five others of the company were here wounded.

They were of the rear guard in the night retreat from this field.

Thanksgiving day in the trenches with roast turkey from home.

Early in December they cross the Nottoway with the Fifth Corps and assist in wrecking the Weldon railroad.

During the winter, Sergeant Smith became Captain of the company, and Sergeants Abbott and Keeler, Lieutenants, Lieutenant Shreve being mustered out by reason of expiration of term of service, and the company is augmented by seventeen recruits, mostly from Company F, First U. S. Sharpshooters, whose organization had ended. Finally as identified with the Second U. S. Sharpshooters they deliver their last skirmish on the morning of February 5, 1865, at the Vaughn road crossing of Hatcher's Run, crossing the stream and capturing the works in the face of the enemy's fire with the loss of one man wounded.

By an order of the War Department, disbanding the regiment and sending its eight companies to troops of their respective States, Company H retaining its letter, became a part of the Fourth Vermont Volunteers on February 25, on which day, parting sadly with the regimental staff and the men of the other companies, they march to their new quarters on the line by Fort Fisher.

Well received by their comrades in arms of the Fourth, they participated with them in sundry skirmishes, and the capture of intrenched picket lines in front of the Fort in the advance upon, and capture of, the enemy's works, April 2, in the preparation near Amelia Court House, and battle at Sailors' Run, and the rapid march toward Appomattox Court House.

After Lee's surrender they marched to Danville and returned partly by cars, through Richmond and Fredericksburg to Washington. In sight of the dome of the Capitol, the business of war being done, a spirit of discontent prevailed like that which had possessed them in the camp of instruction, before they took the field, but it was not for long. In a few weeks they were welcomed to the then newly incorporated city of Burlington, where they were mustered out.

Expert marksmen and skirmishers, no disaster ever befell a flank of our army with these men deployed in its front. The companies of these regiments, being from many different States, brought together as one family, caused friendly relations to spring up and continue among men otherwise widely separated by space. And the States so contributing, composing the most of those then loyal, have thus set at least one small rivet more in the links which bind them with their sisters.

FIRST BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY.

---

BY EDWARD E. GREENLEAF, FIRST LIEUTENANT FIRST BATTERY.

---

THE First Vermont Battery of Light Artillery was recruited mainly by the exertions of George T. Hebard of Chelsea, who opened a recruiting station at Montpelier, in December, 1861, where he enlisted about one hundred men; a recruiting station was also opened at South Shaftsbury by George W. Duncan, where about fifty men were enlisted.

It formed part of the troops which were raised by the State of Vermont, as part of the New England Division being organized for service under Gen. Benjamin F. Butler, and was mustered into State service in January, 1862, George W. Duncan of South Shaftsbury being elected captain, George T. Hebard of Chelsea, senior first lieutenant, and Edward Rice of Shaftsbury, junior first lieutenant. Immediately after muster into State service the battery was, on January 21, 1862, ordered into camp at Camp Holbrook, Brattleboro, and attached to the Eighth Vermont regiment under command of Col. Stephen Thomas. It was mustered into the United States service February 18, 1862, and the organization completed by the election of S. B. Hebard of Chelsea, senior second lieutenant, and Henry N. Colburn of Rutland, as junior second lieutenant, and by the appointment of non-commissioned officers.

Leaving Brattleboro early in March, the battery went with the Eighth regiment to New York, where, with the right wing of the regiment in command of Lieut.-Col. E. M. Brown, it embarked on the transport ship "Wallace," en route for Ship Island, Mississippi, arriving at that place April 5, 1862. While at Ship Island the battery was detached from the Eighth regiment, and attached as an independent command to the brigade commanded by Gen. John W. Phelps.

Early in May, one section of the battery, in command of Capt. George W. Duncan, was detailed for garrison duty at Fort Pike, Louisiana, and soon after the other two sections, in command of Lieut. George T. Hebard, were ordered to accompany the Seventh Vermont regiment to New Orleans, going by way of the "Rigolets" and Lake Pontchartrain, to Lakeport, and from thence to Camp Parapet on the Mississippi River, some six miles above New Orleans, where they were soon after joined by the section from Fort Pike. While stationed at Camp Parapet, the battery was engaged in mounting heavy guns and in garrison duty, principally, until Gen. N. P. Banks assumed command of the Department of the Gulf. Very soon after this the battery received its equipment of 6 three inch steel rifles, and was made ready for active service in the field. It was assigned to the First Division, and under command of Gen. T. W. Sherman, being stationed at Metairie Ridge race course, between New Orleans and Lake Pontchartrain. On the 21st of January, soon after the battery had received its equipment, Capt. G. W. Duncan resigned, and Lieut. George T. Hebard was promoted to the command of the battery, and under his able management, strict discipline and skillful instruction, it soon took high rank for drill, discipline and efficiency, winning much praise from Division and Department Commanders, and although it had been equipped for active service less than three months, at the organization of the Port Hudson campaign, it was given a prominent position and took an active part in the several skirmishes that preceded the unsuccessful assault made by Gen. W. T. Sherman in May, as well as during the assault, leading in the artillery firing during the night previous, and also during the actual assault, only retiring from the action after having expended all the ammunition except six rounds of canister per gun. After this unsuccessful assault the battery was stationed during the remainder of the siege at "Battery No. 4," a small earthwork on the left of the centre, and within right range of the enemy's works. Several attempts were made by the enemy's artillery and sharpshooters to drive the battery from its position, but by the accuracy of their fire, the battery gunners soon dismounted or disabled every gun within range, and inspired their opponents with a wholesome respect for "The Gray Horse Battery."

After the surrender of Port Hudson, the battery was stationed at various points along the Mississippi River, but principally at Baton Rouge. It participated in the unsuccessful Sabine Pass expedition, starting from Baton Rouge on the transport steamer "Exact." It took no part in the engagement at the mouth of the Sabine River, except to be in readiness to land, to take part in the assault upon the earthworks that commanded the landing at the mouth of the river, as soon as the gunboats, "Clifton" and "Arizona" had driven back a large "Cotton Clad" at the mouth of the river; but as the gunboats were repulsed and disabled, the landing was not attempted, and the expedition returned to New Orleans. During the winter and spring of 1864, the battery was stationed at Brashear City, Louisiana, on the east shore of Berwick Bay, doing garrison duty, and serving on detached duty on steamers for the Quartermasters' department, until the Red River campaign was organized. In this campaign the battery took an active part, being engaged in nearly every skirmish, and in every engagement of any note, except the battle of Mansfield, April 8, 1864, in which it did not participate by reason of having led the column the day previous. It had gone to the rear of the division and given place to the "Chicago Mercantile Battery," which led the column, and when the tidings of the battle were brought to the rear, the crowded and well-nigh impassible roads rendered it impossible for the battery to get but a few miles, when it was met by Captain Neal, First Delaware Battery, with orders from Capt. H. W. Closson, chief of artillery for the First Division, Nineteenth Army Corps, to join General Cameron's Division, Thirteenth Army Corps, and proceed to Pleasant Hill, at which place the battery arrived April 9. At noon of that day, by order of Gen. Richard Arnold, chief of artillery, Department of the Gulf, Captain Hebard, with the right and left sections of the battery, under command of Lieutenants Rice and Greenleaf, took position on the right of the Third Brigade, First Division, Nineteenth Army Corps, near the Natchitoches road, Lieutenant Gould with the centre section being posted farther to the left.

At 3 P. M. fire was opened by the left section, under Lieutenant Greenleaf, on the enemy's artillery, and soon silenced it. At about 4 P. M. the enemy endeavored to drive the right and left sections from this position, by opening on it with musketry, followed by a charge, and such was its danger of capture that General Banks, who was near, ordered the guns to be spiked, and the men to retreat, but Captain Hebard's order "Spike your guns with canister and—quick, too," being obeyed, several volleys of canister broke the advancing line, and ended the action. At Cane River Crossing, the left section, under Captain Hebard, was the first artillery to ford the river, after having successfully engaged and driven off the enemy's artillery which commanded the ford.

At Yellow Bayou, Bayou de Glaise, and at the crossing of the Atchafalaya river the battery took a prominent part, also at above Alexandria, where the gunboats under Admiral Porter were detained at the rapids by low water, the battery was continuously on duty as guard during the building of the dam devised by Lieutenant-Colonel Bailey, to deepen the water in the channel and enable the gunboats to pass down the river.

At Yellow Bayou, May 18, 1864, two sections of the battery under command of Lieutenants Rice and Greenleaf were detailed to serve with General Mower's command of the Sixteenth Army Corps, and formed part of the rear guard of the expedition, during the remainder of the campaign, until after crossing the Atchafalaya river at Simmesport. The left section of the battery, under command of Lieutenant Greenleaf being the last troops to cross the river, the bridge which had been made by interlacing the bows of river steamers pointing alternately up and down stream, being broken up by withdrawing a steamer as soon as the battery had passed over it. After crossing, the battery returned to the original command and was highly commended by General Mower for the efficient service rendered.

This closed the active service of the battery, which, early in June, 1864, was stationed at Morganza Bend, Louisiana, being transferred early in July to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and stationed at Fort Williams, at which place, preparatory to being sent to Vermont to be mustered out, its equipment was turned over to the Thirteenth Wisconsin Battery, and on July 22, 1864, the men of the battery, whose term of service had expired, were, under command of Lieutenant Greenleaf, ordered to proceed via Cairo and Chicago to Brattleboro, Vermont, to be mustered out, by reason of expiration of term of service, and they were accordingly mustered out August 10, 1864.

The First Vermont Battery, though early separated from other Vermont organizations, and assigned to service with troops from other States and to duties that for a time kept it from active service, always upheld the honor of the Green Mountain State, and when at last placed in the field, by its drill and discipline, as well as by the prompt and efficient service it always rendered whenever called upon, it won the commendation of all with whom it had the honor to serve, and while its Guidons bear the honor-marks of but few battles as compared with the many of other Vermont organizations, it is not for want of bravery, but rather from the lack of opportunities to show it.

SECOND BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY.

---

BY JOHN W. CHASE, CAPTAIN SECOND BATTERY.

THE Second Vermont Battery was organized in Brandon, December 13, 1861, by choice of officers as follows: Captain, L. R. Sayles, First Lieuts., B. N. Dyer and C. D. Smith, Second Lieuts., John A. Quilty and John W. Chase. These officers and 89 men were mustered December 16 into the United States service for three years. On the 24th, 20 additional men were mustered and on the 25th the battery started for Camp Chase, Lowell, Massachusetts, where it arrived on the 26th. Here Captain Sayles resigned and Capt. P. E. Holcomb of the Seventeenth United States Infantry was appointed in his place. At Lowell, 14 more men were added by enlistment, raising the aggregate of the battery to 128 officers and men.

The battery was armed with four 6-pounder Sawyer rifled guns and two 20-pounder Parrotts. February 6, the battery embarked on board the ship "Idaho" at Boston, Massachusetts, with the First Maine and Fourth Massachusetts Batteries. After a long and stormy passage it landed on Ship Island, March 12, 1862, and was attached to Gen. John W. Phelps' brigade; here one man was discharged for disability. April 11, the second section embarked on the steamer "Matanzas," Lieutenant Smith in command. April 17, the first and second sections embarked on board an old hulk of a Mississippi steamer, the "Lewis." About forty miles from the mouth of the Mississippi one of the steam pipes burst, which left us nearly helpless. We were near a small island, where we anchored and sent a small sail boat for assistance. On the 20th a steamer came and towed us across the bar at the mouth of the river, where we repaired the machinery as best we could.

After the capture of Forts Jackson and St. Philip, we started up the river with the fleet to New Orleans, where we landed May 2, 1862, the first Union battery in the city. The "Lewis," eight hours after landing, sank at the Levee. We remained on the Levee until the 4th with our guns ready for business. The first and second sections were quartered in the United States Mint, the third at the St. Charles Hotel, General Butler's headquarters. While at the Mint, thirty prisoners captured at Fort Jackson, enlisted.

May 31 the battery was ordered to join Gen. J. W. Phelps' brigade at Camp Parapet about seven miles up the river. The morning of June 1 we landed there with five officers and 151 men, 149 for duty. July 28 the first section went on an expedition under Major Peck, of the Twelfth Connecticut, to Lake Pontchartrain, embarked on the steamer "Gray Cloud" to Pass Manchac, where we destroyed a railroad bridge; from thence to and up the Madison River about seven miles, where we were fired into by guerrillas, which were scattered by a few rounds of canister. After visiting St. Louis Bay and other points we returned to Camp Parapet. During the five months here we lost 16 men by disease, discharged for disability 22, Lieutenants Dyer and Smith were dismissed the service by sentence of a Court Martial and Lieut. John A. Quilty resigned.

October 31, moved to New Orleans, were quartered at Annunciation Square and Factor's Cotton Press. Here the battery was fully mounted for the first time. December 29 the battery embarked on the steamer "Cumbria" with a part of the Forty-second Massachusetts regiment for Galveston, Texas, where it arrived outside the bar the 31st. On the morning of January 1, 1863, finding that three companies of the Forty-second Massachusetts had been captured and the Rebels in possession of the city, steamed back to New Orleans to our old quarters.

January 25 the battery was ordered to Donaldsonville, 75 miles up the river, with the Second Louisiana regiment, and a company of Massachusetts cavalry under command of Colonel Holcomb. About February 24 the battery was ordered to Baton Rouge and was attached to General Augur's division. March 18 went on an expedition under General Banks near Port Hudson; after three days returned to Baton Rouge. May 18th was ordered to join Dudley's brigade on an expedition near Port Hudson; camped within seven miles. The 19th, the first section, with a squadron of Illinois cavalry, made a reconnaissance to within 2½ miles, sent two 15-pounder Sawyer shells inside the rebel works and returned to last night's camp. The evening of the 20th of May General Augur joined us with Chapin's brigade, and on the 21st we moved to within about 700 yards of Plain's Store, where a Rebel six gun battery was placed across the road. The Eighteenth New York battery was ordered up to drive them out, but after losing several horses was obliged to fall back and Battery G, Fifth United States Artillery, was ordered up and after some rapid firing was also forced to fall back. The Second Vermont was then ordered up (only four pieces) which was not a pleasant place to be in, but we soon got the range and after killing the officer in command, and as we learned, several men, we in turn drove the enemy out. The Second Vermont boys had come to stay. The enemy then retired behind their fortifications at Port Hudson, and the Union troops camped on the field. The 22d moved to the front of the enemy's works and on the 27th a general assault was made and was repulsed. June 13 the battery was moved to the front, 290 yards from the enemy's works, behind a small earthwork, and on June 14 another assault was made and again repulsed with heavy loss.

July 4, 1863, the battery celebrated, by the reading of the Declaration of Independence, music by the One Hundred Sixteenth New York regiment band, and after playing Yankee Doodle and other national airs, the exercises closed by firing a national salute, each shot sending a 15 pound shell into the enemy's works. From this time to the surrender, the battery was under fire most of the time.

July 8, Port Hudson surrendered. The Second Vermont battery being the most exposed of any light battery during the siege, had the honor of being the first battery inside.

August 2, the second section, Lieutenant Dyer, was ordered on an expedition to Jackson, Louisiana, under command of Major Hanham of the Twelfth regiment, Corps D'Afrique, and on the 3d it was attacked and Lieutenant Dyer with 15 men were captured, through the inefficiency of the Major in command, by Forest's Rebel cavalry. Lieutenant Dyer was wounded by a ball which passed through his leg killing his horse; he was paroled and the men taken to Andersonville, where five died.

July 28, 1864, the battery went on an expedition under General Herron to Clinton, Louisiana, a long and fatiguing march for nothing. The battery remained at Port Hudson, doing garrison duty until July 7, 1865, when it marched to Baton Rouge and was turned over to the Quartermaster and Ordnance Department, and on the 9th took steamer up the river via Cairo, Illinois, for Burlington, Vermont, where it arrived July 20, and was mustered out July 31, 1865.

ENGAGEMENTS.

THIRD BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY.

---

BY ROMEO H. START, CAPTAIN THIRD BATTERY.

THE Third Battery Light Artillery Vermont Volunteers was recruited by its commanding officer, Capt. Romeo H. Start, and was mustered into the United States service at Burlington on the first day of January, 1864. Under orders from the War Department it left Burlington, where it was in camp, January 15, 1864, for Washington, D. C., where it arrived on January 18, 1864, and at once went into winter quarters at Camp Barry, D. C., the artillery camp of instruction, a short distance northeast of the Capitol, and was attached to the Twenty-second Army Corps. On February 20 following, the battery was fully armed and equipped as a mounted battery of light artillery. April 2, 1864, it was assigned to the Ninth Army Corps and remained at Camp Barry for instruction until April 25, 1864, when it joined that corps at Washington, D. C., and immediately crossed the Potomac and encamped at Alexandria, Virginia, where it remained until April 27, when it marched for Bristoe Station on the Orange and Alexandria railroad, arriving there on the evening of the 28th of April. On the 29th of the same month it was ordered to, and returned to Manassas Junction, Virginia, for the purpose of guarding the railroad at that point, which was the line of transportation and communication with the Army of the Potomac. On the evening of May 4 following, it was ordered to join the main portion of the Ninth Corps, then moving toward the Rapidan, and on the afternoon of the 5th, it crossed the Rappahannock at Rappahannock Station, and on the morning of the 6th, the Rapidan at Germanna Ford and joined that corps in the Wilderness. From the Wilderness to the James River, with Battery D of the Pennsylvania artillery and a division of infantry and cavalry, it moved on the left flank and rear of the Army of the Potomac for the purpose of covering and protecting its base of supplies and the ammunition and provision trains, and on the 17th of June, 1864, crossed the James River at Wilcox Landing. On the 18th, it moved from the James and took up a position on the lines before Petersburg, Virginia, and remained upon the lines around Petersburg until October 25, 1864, when it was ordered to move to City Point, Virginia, for the defense of that important point on the James River, where it arrived on the morning of the 26th, and on the 29th it occupied Fort McKean, one of the principal defensive works, where it remained until the 15th of January, 1865.

While upon the lines before Petersburg, previous to its removal to City Point, it served in Fort Morton, Fort Hell, Fort Michael, Battery 27, Battery 16, Fort Phillips, and also participated in the movement of the Second Corps on Reams's Station on the Weldon railroad, and in the movement around our left flank for the purpose of cutting that railroad.

It remained in the defenses of City Point, Virginia, and occupying Fort Mc'Kean until the 15th of January, 1865, when it was ordered to, and moved to Warren Station, on the Weldon railroad, south of Petersburg, where it arrived on the evening of that day. February 6, following, it participated in the advance on the enemy's right towards Hatcher's Run. On February 9, it occupied Fort Fisher, some two miles from Hatcher's Run, toward Petersburg and near Patrick Station. While occupying Fort Fisher, one section for a time occupied Battery Lee, a short distance to the left of Fisher. It remained in Fort Fisher until the 2d of April following, when it left that work and participated, with the Sixth and Twenty-fourth Army Corps, in the attack upon the enemy's lines South and to the West of Petersburg, which resulted in the evacuation of the latter and Richmond, and the surrender of Lee. On the morning of the 3d of April, this battery, with the reserved artillery brigade of the Sixth Corps, was ordered to take charge of the captured artillery around Petersburg, and move to City Point, where it arrived on the same evening, and went into camp, remaining until May 3, when it broke camp and marched to Alexandria, Virginia. On the 3d of June following, its guns were turned over to the Ordnance Department at Washington, D. C., and on the 5th it embarked by rail for Burlington, Vermont, where it arrived on the 9th, and was mustered out of service on the 13th, and on the 16th the officers and men dispersed for their homes.

This battery was on the field and in position during the battle of the Wilderness, but was not actively engaged, as, owing to the character of the country, it was impracticable to use artillery. The first baptism of fire which it received, was after it had crossed the James River at Wilcox Landing on the 17th of June, 1864. After crossing the pontoon bridge at that place it moved up the bank of the river about a mile and went into camp for the night, after a long and wearisome march.

Shortly after going into camp on the bottom lands the enemy took possession of the high bluffs on the opposite side of the river, with its artillery and cavalry, and opened fire with several guns upon it. Owing to its position being so much lower than the enemy's batteries it could not reply, but was compelled to strike tents, hitch up and move out under a well directed fire of shot and shell, which it did without the loss of a man. After going into position on the lines before Petersburg, and from June 20 to July 30 the battery was almost daily and nightly engaged in artillery duels with the enemy's batteries, so that during that period it was almost one constant artillery engagement. On the 30th of July, 1864, when the great mine explosion took place in front of Petersburg, the battery was occupying Fort Morton directly opposite the mine and the enemy's redoubts which were blown up by its explosion. The battery was hotly engaged with the enemy's artillery from 3:50 A. M. until 10:30 A. M., during which time three hundred and ninety-five shot and shell were thrown upon the enemy's columns, which were within easy range. The battery, being protected by the heavy embankments of the forts, suffered no serious loss. During the time it occupied Fort Morton, which was some forty days first and last, a day or night without an engagement with the enemy's artillery was an exception; indeed the artillery fire was almost constant, and the mortar fire was a regular nightly occurrence.

The night of August 18, 1864, witnessed one of the most furious cannonades which occurred during the entire siege of Richmond and Petersburg. This battery was then occupying Fort Morton. The night was very light, with almost a full moon. About half-past nine o'clock in the evening, the enemy opened fire with all its batteries and mortars from the Appomattox to their extreme right. In the vicinity of Fort Morton they seemed to concentrate the fire of several batteries and redoubts upon that work. Their firing, although in the night, was very accurate. This tremendous cannonade lasted until nearly daylight of the following morning. During most of the time this battery was engaged in returning the fire as best it could, and several men in this fort, of other organizations, were killed, but none of this command. The battery was ordered to Reams's Station to assist the Sixth Corps during that fierce battle, but arrived on the field just at the conclusion of the principal engagement, but took part in covering with its guns the retirement of our forces. From August 30 to the 6th of September, 1864, the battery occupied the hottest place on the entire line before and around Petersburg, known to the artillery as "Fort Hell." The lines were the nearest together at this point, and the fire was more incessant and dangerous than at any other point. During this time the fire of the enemy's mortars and field guns was almost continuous, and much of the time the battery was engaged in replying, so that during these days it may be truthfully said, that it was one constant battle.

From September 19 to October 3, 1864, it occupied Fort Michael between Forts Morton and "Hell," and from October 3 to October 19, 1864, it occupied Battery 27. During the occupancy of Fort Michael the battery was engaged in several sharp artillery duels with the enemy's guns. From October 12 to October 25, 1864, this command occupied Battery 16, on the immediate right of Fort Morton, which was one of the points subject to the severest artillery and mortar fires of the enemy's batteries. During the time the battery occupied this re-doubt, the firing on it was terrific and very annoying, and during that time the men were usually engaged in returning the artillery fire. As the lines were but a short distance apart at this point, the firing was very accurate and destructive, and made night and day hideous. March 25, 1865, while the battery was occupying Fort Fisher, it was decided to advance our picket line on this front, which advance was stubbornly resisted by the enemy with artillery and musketry. One section of the battery was ordered out upon the skirmish line to assist in this movement, which was under the command of Lieut. William R. Rowell. As this section moved out to take position it met with a severe artillery fire from the enemy's batteries on the left of Fort Fisher, and from a battery in front. It took up its position within some six or seven hundred yards of the enemy's batteries in front, and at once opened fire, which was vigorously replied to by the enemy. After an engagement lasting some thirty minutes, the enemy's troublesome guns were silenced by Rowell's well directed fire, and our troops moved forward and occupied the desired position, after which the section returned to Fort Fisher. During this day the section occupying Fort Lee was also engaged under the command of Lieut. Eben Taplin and did good execution. On the night of April 1, 1865, this battery was ordered by the commanding officer of the Sixth Corps to fire a signal gun from Fort Fisher at four o'clock in the morning of April 2, as a signal for a general movement upon the enemy's works South of Petersburg. At the appointed time the signal gun was fired, but owing to some misunderstanding on the part of the division commanders, the infantry failed to advance, and at 4:15 A. M. it fired another signal gun, when the advance was made, carrying the first line of the enemy's works. At eight o'clock of that day the battery left Fort Fisher and moved out to the front on the line occupied by the infantry under Major-General Gibbon, to assist in the attack on the first line of the enemy's works defending the approaches to Petersburg on the West, and it accordingly moved and took up a position some three hundred yards in front of the Confederate batteries, Owen and Gregg. Owen was occupied by the enemy's sharpshooters, and Gregg by the artillery and infantry. the battery at once opened fire on Fort Gregg, which was returned by the enemy with great spirit. After an hour's severe and well directed firing, the Rebel guns were silenced, and the works were carried by assault.

The battery was then moved forward and took up a new position some two hundred yards in front and on the right of its first position, in order to attack the enemy's second line of works, and from which he opened a severe artillery fire on our infantry in the captured works. After half an hour's heavy firing from this position it again moved forward and occupied a position immediately in front of batteries Owen and Gregg, which protected it partially from the enflading firing of the enemy's guns on our left, and again opened fire on the works commanding the heights, their second and last line of works. This was about 11:30 A. M. The battery occupied this position during the remainder of the day, in the open field, and kept up a vigorous fire in reply to the enemy's artillery, which continued with but brief intervals, until night-fall put an end to the conflict. It remained in this position ready to renew the conflict at day-break on the following morning, but the dawn of April 3 found no enemy in the formidable works along our front, they having retired during the night, and at daylight we pushed forward and entered Petersburg without opposition.

The battery during its entire period of service was commanded by Romeo H. Start, its Captain, in person, except during the time of the skirmish in front of Fort Fisher, above referred to, and while it took no part in the great battles of Spottsylvania, North Anna, or Cold Harbor, it was almost within cannon shot of all those engagements; and while it escaped many of the trying scenes of battle, its hardships and exposures were none the less severe, its position and service being such that it was often compelled to make forced marches over roads rendered impassable by the march of the opposing armies. Marching and counter-marching, moving first to the front and then to the rear, then from right to left, and wherever the enemy's cavalry showed itself, ready for a dash or raid, protecting the line of communication and supplies, constitutes its history from the Rapidan to the James, and it never failed to promptly and effectually discharge any and all duties required of it.

Captain Start, the commanding officer, in whom the officers and men of his command had the fullest confidence as a brave, cool and discreet commander, and Lieutenants Rowell, Taplin, and Perrin, and Sergeants Parker, Thomas and Clay, and Corporals Kelly, Gillman, Libby and Private Washburn, received frequent special mention and commendation for conspicuous gallantry and coolness in action. Nearly all of the men of this organization were native born Vermonters, and a majority of them still are citizens of this State; and nearly all are in independent circumstances. But one of the number, so far as is known, has become an inmate of a soldier's home.

The total number of officers and men belonging to this organization was four hundred and sixty-six. Of this number forty-seven have died since their muster out. At the time of enlistment there were forty-seven over thirty, two hundred and nine under thirty, one hundred and forty-seven under twenty-two and seventy under nineteen years of age. With only half a dozen exceptions, the entire number are substantial and highly respected citizens in the community in which they reside, and many of them have attained to offices and posts of honor and responsibility at the hands of their fellow citizens.

FRONTIER CAVALRY.

BY HON. JOSIAH GROUT, MAJOR FRONTIER CAVALRY.

THE Frontier Cavalry was born of a frontier fear created by the St. Albans raid. This raid was perpetrated by a few daring Southern refugees, or, perhaps more properly speaking, spies who gathered in St. Albans from Montreal, and in open day appeared at points covering the banks and in the twinkling of an eye, robbed them of their contents, returning to Canada. They fled mounted, securing horses from the livery stables. The principal features accomplished by the raid, were bank booty, livery horses and fear.

The whole northern frontier was in a short time guarded by a provisional force raised and equipped hastily for temporary service, which was soon succeeded by troops from the invalid corps and a regiment of cavalry. The raid was in the fall of 1864, and the frontier cavalry was recruited early the following winter. This organization was composed of seven companies from New York, three companies from Massachusetts, and two from Vermont. The regiment was never in camp together, and rendered its service during the winter and early summer of 1865 in detachments stationed at points contiguous to Canada, in New York, and the two Vermont companies at Burlington and St. Albans.

These two companies were organized at Burlington by General Washburn early in January, 1865, where they remained quartered in barracks on the old fair ground until midwinter, when they moved to St. Albans into new barracks. They continued in these new quarters until the latter part of June, when, with the balance of the regiment, they were mustered out, the war having closed.

At Burlington they were occupied with daily drill on foot and the ordinary duties of camp life. On reaching St. Albans, they received horses and soon became quite proficient troopers. Picket duty was regularly observed and all the expedients, customary in such service, resorted to for occupying the soldiers, and upon the whole they were a well behaved command.

The regiment was called the Twenty-sixth New York Cavalry and the Governor of New York issued all the commissions above the line.

The two Vermont companies were denominated the First and Second Vermont Companies of Frontier Cavalry.

The Vermont soldiers on the frontier service did not encounter danger or hardship, yet they did promptly, patriotically and faithfully all they found to do, and being ready for any emergency, as in equipment and preparation they always were, would gladly have met the more earnest work of the war had not its happy termination prevented.

VERMONTERS

Who Served as Commissioned Officers in the U. S. Army, U. S. Navy, U. S. Colored Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, as General or Staff Officers, and in Organizations from Other States.

BY HERBERT SIDNEY FOSTER, CAPTAIN, TWENTIETH INFANTRY, U. S. ARMY.

THE following lists comprise the names of 591 sons of Vermont, who served as commissioned officers in the regiments and batteries of other States, or were officers of the regular army, or the United States navy, during the War of the Rebellion, being either natives of or appointed from Vermont ; or who were general officers, or received general staff appointments in the volunteer service, or became commissioned officers of colored troops, or of the Veteran Reserve Corps.

The town mentioned is generally the native place of the officer, though, in a few cases, the native place not being known, the town in which he resided, or from which he enlisted, is given. It is not supposed that the lists are complete, and as the information embodied in them has, in many cases, been obtained from unofficial sources, some inaccuracies may appear ; but they have been prepared with much labor, have been made as accurate as possible, and, so far as known, are the only lists of the kind in existence, or that have ever been prepared for any State.

The class first mentioned is divided among the different States as follows : Maine, 3 ; New Hampshire, 8 ; Massachusetts, 5 ; Rhode Island, 1 ; Connecticut, 4 ; New York, 14 ; New Jersey, 1 ; Pennsylvania, 4 ; Ohio, 2 ; Indiana, 1 ; Illinois, 34 ; Michigan, 7 ; Wisconsin, 11 ; Missouri, 3 ; Iowa, 30 ; Minnesota, 3 ; Kansas, 2 ; West Virginia, 1 ; North Carolina, 2 ; California, 1 ; Tennessee, 1 ; total, 138.

Those who served in the regular army number 103 ; in the navy, 109 ; as general officers, 39 ; in the general staff, 92 ; in the colored troops, 103 ; in the Veteran Reserve Corps, 6.

In the lists we find 7 Major-Generals, 7 Brevet Major-Generals, 9 Brigadier-Generals, 16 Brevet Brigadier-Generals, and such distinguished names as William Farrar Smith, Israel B. Richardson, Joseph A. Mower, Thomas E. G. Ransom, Truman Seymour, William B. Hazen, Sylvester Churchill, Theodore P. Greene, William G. Temple, George Dewey, Francis M. Lowrey, Benjamin S. Roberts, George C. Strong, George Wright, Benjamin Alvord, Jedediah H. Baxter, Ethan A. Hitchcock, Perley P. Pitkin, U. A. Woodbury, Rush C. Hawkins, Orville E. Babcock, Chas. E. Hovey, Hannibal Day, Justin Dimick, Amos Beckwith, H. S. Burton, Napoleon B. McLaughlin, Wm. Smith, Gustavus Loomis, Wm. Y. W. Ripley, E. Henry Powell, Edward R. Platt, Asa P. Blunt, Geo. W. Hooker, Merritt Barber, Ira H. Evans, Daniel D. Wheeler, Lucius J. Dixon, Samuel W. Thayer, Edward E. Phelps, Gardner S. Blodgett, Horatio L. Wait, Albert S. Kenney, Horatio B. Lowry, Edwin T. Woodward, Emerson H. Liscum, Nathan P. Bowman, and many others. Four of these have been at the head of important staff departments of the army, and one is the present Paymaster-General.

It will be seen that the Sons of Vermont held commands in the troops of nearly every loyal State in the Union ; that the State furnished a good proportion of officers for the regular army, the navy, the Veteran Reserve Corps, and the colored troops ; and that the superior business qualifications of her sons were recognized by the large number appointed to responsible positions in the Pay, Quartermasters' and Subsistence Departments. The standing of her surgeons for professional and executive ability is shown by the assignment of so many of them to positions of great trust, labor and responsibility.

Wherever and with whomever they served, these Sons of the Green Mountain State fully sustained the reputation of the Vermont organizations. They were represented in Fort Sumter in 1861 ; they helped make the glorious record of the Army of the Potomac ; they marched with Sherman from Atlanta to the sea ; and they campaigned with Grant and Banks in the Valley of the Mississippi. Their blood was spilled on every battle field of the war from the Susquehanna to the Rio Grande. They fought with Foote, Dupont, Porter and Farragut, on river and sea, and won undying fame at Donelson, Charleston, Vicksburg, Fort Fisher and Mobile. They made a record of which the State may well be proud, and the memory of their heroic achievements will be an inspiration to coming generations.

U. S. ARMY SERVICE.

Apptd. Asst. Medical Purveyor, U. S. A., July 20, '67; at Washington, D. C., compiling medical statistics of the Provost Marshal Gen.'s office from July, '67, to Oct., '73; Bvt. Col. July 25, '67, for faithful and meritorious services during the war; Apptd. Lieut.-Col. and Chief Medical Purveyor, U. S. A. Mch. 12, '72; on duty as Chief Medical Purveyor, U. S. A., and compiling medical statistics of the Provost Marshal Gen.'s office from Oct., '73, to Apr. '74, and in charge of the property division of the Surg. Gen.'s office, Apr., '74, to Aug. 16, '90; Prom. Col. and Chief Medical Purveyor, U. S. A. June 23, '74; Acting Surg.-Gen. Aug. 6 to Dec., '86; Apptd. Surg.-Gen., with rank of Brig.-Gen., Aug. 16, '90. Died Dec. 4, '90.

After some nine months' duty with the 12th Mass., Regt., Dr. Baxter was made Brigade Surg. U. S. Vols., and in the Peninsular campaign performed most efficient service. When the troops were in front of Yorktown, at the battles of Hanover Court House and Fair Oaks, and the rest of the seven days fighting, he was constantly in the field establishing field hospitals, and seeing that the ambulances and provisions were on hand ready for regimental surgeons. During most of this time he, with his comrades, was under fire. By his tireless energy, cheerful manner and rare executive ability in the Peninsular Campaign he did much to alleviate the sufferings of the wounded soldiers. Surgeon Baxter was in charge of the Campbell General Hospital at Washington, which was one of the largest hospitals in the United States, from the time it was opened until January 1864, when, at the request of General Fry, Provost Marshal General, he was detailed on the latter's staff, and assigned to duty as chief medical officer of his bureau. In this capacity Surgeon Baxter collected the records of the physical examinations of more than one million men who presented themselves for admission into the army, and compiled therefrom an extensive work on vital statistics. As chief medical purveyor of the U. S. Army and surgeon-general, he showed the same rare executive ability which had developed itself in the field, and had his life been spared there would no doubt have been many important changes and improvements made in the medical department of the U. S. Army.

UNITED STATES NAVY.

BY HORATIO LOOMIS WAIT, PAYMASTER U. S. NAVY.

AT the commencement of the Rebellion the nominal naval force consisted of ninety vessels of all descriptions. Most of these were so old as to be unfit for any service. Only nine were efficient war ships of the best type then known, and but one of these was at a northern port available for immediate service—most of the other vessels in commission had been designedly sent to distant foreign stations. Nearly three hundred officers who were in sympathy with the secession movement left the service, and there were less than three hundred seamen at the northern stations ready for immediate detail, so that the loyal officers of the navy found themselves confronted with a stupendous task. The President promptly declared a blockade of the entire coast of the insurgent States, and it became necessary to improvise a navy immediately. Vessels of all kinds were purchased and constructed. Officers and men from the merchant service volunteered for service in the navy, and as fast as vessels could be armed and equipped they were sent to sea. This was done so rapidly that, in 1864, the number of vessels in commission was over six hundred, and there were over fifty thousand men afloat. The first duty performed by the navy was the establishment of the blockade by stationing armed ships before all of the southern ports, from Hampton Roads to Galveston, as fast as the vessels could be procured to perform this duty.

The scenes of the operations of the naval forces were so widely separated that it became necessary, for proper organization, to create separate fleets and squadrons, which were designated respectively as the Potomac Flotilla, North Atlantic Squadron, South Atlantic Squadron, East Gulf Squadron, West Gulf Squadron, Mississippi Flotilla, and the Cruising Fleets.

POTOMAC FLOTILLA.

The Potomac Flotilla was organized early in May, 1861, to keep open the approach by water to Washington, and to restrict the communication of the Confederates along the Potomac River. On May 19, 1861, one of the vessels exchanged a few shots with the Sewall's Point battery, on the Virginia shore. The first naval engagement of the war was the attack on the Confederate batteries at Aquia Creek, by Commander J. H. Ward, in the steamer "Freeborn," and two other vessels, on May 31, 1861. On June 27, the little fleet attacked the batteries at Matthias Point. In this action Commander Ward and others were killed. Commander Craven succeeded him. The Confederates erected many batteries at favorable points along the river, but the Union flotilla was so active in destroying them that, in 1862, the Confederates abandoned the effort to maintain them. The work of the flotilla thereafter consisted mainly in keeping down the guerrilla warfare and the contraband trading. It also participated in all offensive operations in the other waterways of Virginia, and at all times co-operated with the army in its movements. It rendered a most important service in protecting transports and army supplies during the entire time. Commanders Wyman, Harwood and Parker were successively the commanders of the flotilla during the remaining years of the war.

NORTH ATLANTIC BLOCKADING SQUADRON.

The limits of this squadron were Cape Henry at Hampton Roads, on the north, thence south along the coast of Virginia and North Carolina. Numerous inlets exist along this coast line very favorable for the passage of vessels engaged in contraband trade. The principal port used by the blockade runners was Wilmington, N. C. The few vessels first assigned to duty in this squadron cruised along the coast until there were enough ships available to station one or more at each inlet. Flag-Officer Goldsborough was ordered to the command of this squadron on September 23, 1861. He was relieved by Rear-Admiral Lee, on September 5, 1862. Admiral Porter succeeded him in command October 12, 1864, August 29, 1861, Commodore Stringham, with a fleet of naval vessels, captured the forts and harbor at Hatteras Inlet, N. C. In February, 1862, Commodore Goldsborough, with his fleet, and an armed force under General Burnside, captured Roanoke Island, after which active operations against the numerous rebel batteries in the sounds of North Carolina were carried on during the entire war by Commodore Rowan and others. May 9, 1862, several vessels attacked the confederate batteries at Sewall's Point. March 8, the Confederate ram "Merrimack," attacked the fleet in Hampton Roads, destroyed the sloop of war, "Cumberland," and the frigate, "Congress." The next day the "Monitor" engaged the "Merrimack" and so disabled her that she retreated to the Elizabeth river, and was soon after blown up by her commander.

May, 1864, the Confederate ram, "Albemarle," attacked the fleet in the sounds of North Carolina, but was driven back, the wooden steamer "Sassacus" ramming the ironclad during the fight. October 27, the "Albemarle" was blown up by Lieutenant Cushing in an open boat, carrying a spar torpedo. December 25, Fort Fisher, at Wilmington, was bombarded. January 15, 1865, Fort Fisher was captured by the largest fleet that ever sailed under the American flag, co-operating with the army, and the port of Wilmington, N. C., was completely closed against blockade runners.

SOUTH ATLANTIC BLOCKADING SQUADRON.

The limits of this squadron were, Georgetown, N. C., on the north, to Cape Canaveral, on the Florida Coast. There were fifteen large inlets to be blockaded, besides numerous smaller passages used by the blockade runners. The principal ports to be guarded were Charleston and Savannah. After the fall of Fort Sumter a small fleet was stationed off Charleston, and all of the inlets were blockaded as fast as the vessels could be procured to perform this duty. The first large fleet collected for offensive naval operations was the expedition under Rear-Admiral S. F. Dupont, which sailed from Hampton Roads October, 1861, for Port Royal, South Carolina. The fleet was delayed by a violent storm. On November 7, after a brisk engagement, Fort Walker, Fort Beauregard, and the harbor of Port Royal were captured and held, the Confederate fleet having been dispersed.

A detachment from the fleet assisted in the capture of Fort Pulaski at Savannah River entrance, April 10, 1862, which prevented the further use of that entrance by blockade runners.

The most important port was Charleston, where, on January 31, 1863, the Confederate ram fleet attempted to raise the blockade. Two wooden blockaders were disabled, but the rams were driven back by the other vessels. On April 7 the fleet bombarded Fort Sumter. June 17, 1863, the Confederate ram, "Atlanta," from Savannah, attempted to raise the blockade. She was disabled and captured by the iron-clad, "Weehawken," after an action lasting just fifteen minutes.

July 6, 1863, Admiral John A. Dahlgren relieved Admiral Dupont in command of the Squadron. On the 10th, a combined army and navy attack commenced on the defenses of Charleston. August 17, the Confederate torpedo boat, "David," attacked the new "Ironsides," but was repulsed. September 7, the Confederates were driven out of Forts Wagner and Gregg, and all of Morris Island occupied. The siege of Fort Sumter by the Army and Navy was commenced. Two monitors, the "Weehawken" and "Patapsco," were lost. The steam sloop "Housatonic" was blown up by a submarine torpedo boat. December, 1864, the Army and Navy attacked the Confederate defenses upon Broad River, South Carolina, to create a diversion when Sherman's Army was approaching Savannah. Several attacks on Charleston were made by the Army and Navy, upon the Stono River. February 18, 1865, the fleet occupied the harbor of Charleston, while the Army took possession of the city.

EAST GULF SQUADRON.

In May, 1861, vessels commenced to blockade Mobile, Galveston, and the passes of the Mississippi. Commodore Mervine was the first flag officer. He was succeeded by Commodores McKean, Gardner, Bailey and Stribling. The fleet was divided into the East and West Squadrons, in February, 1862, when Admiral Farragut assumed command of the West Gulf Squadron, extending from Pensacola to Galveston, the East Gulf Squadron extending from Cape Canaveral, on the east coast of Florida, to Pensacola, on the west coast. Its duties were chiefly blockading the numerous inlets.

WEST GULF SQUADRON.

The West Gulf Squadron, under the command of Admiral Farragut, engaged and passed Forts Jackson and St. Phillip, on the Mississippi, April 24, 1862, destroyed the Confederate fleet, and occupied New Orleans on the next day. A portion of the fleet ascended the river, capturing Baton Rouge and Natchez. June 28, the fleet ran past the batteries at Vicksburg, and a few weeks later ran past them again. On the return to the Gulf, March 14, 1863, Farragut's fleet ran past the batteries at Port Hudson. July 7, Port Hudson surrendered. February 28, 1864, Fort Powell, in Mississippi Sound, was attacked by the fleet, to create a diversion. August 5, 1864, Farragut's fleet captured Fort Morgan, Fort Gaines, the Confederate ram, "Tennessee," also the fleet of wooden vessels, and occupied Mobile Bay.

MISSISSIPPI SQUADRON.

May, 1861, Commander John Rodgers commenced the formation of a flotilla on the Mississippi River, by purchasing the river steamers, "Tyler," "Lexington" and "Conestoga," which were hastily converted into gunboats. In the fall of the year J. B. Eads constructed seven gunboats for the river service, and the fleet was constantly increased by the purchase or construction of vessels for use on the river. On September 6 Commodore A. H. Foote relieved Rodgers in command of the flotilla. Soon after, brisk encounters took place between the fleet and the Confederate batteries on the Missouri shore.

November 7, the gunboats engaged the batteries at Belmont and Columbus, Kentucky. February 6, 1862, the fleet captured Fort Henry. February 16, participated in the capture of Fort Donelson. March 1, destroyed Confederate batteries at Pittsburg Landing. April 4, "Carondelet" ran the batteries at Island No. 10. April 6, "Tyler" and "Lexington" shelled Confederate Army at battle of Shiloh. April 7, fleet and army captured Island No. 10. May 10, defeated Confederate fleet at Fort Pillow. June 4, destroyed Confederate river defense fleet at Memphis and captured the city. June 17, destroyed Confederate batteries at St. Charles. July 15, Confederate ram, "Arkansas," engaged. August 5, ram "Arkansas" destroyed. November 21, Yazoo River expedition. January 10, 1863, engaged Vicksburg batteries. April 16, Porter's fleet ran past Vicksburg batteries. April 29, attacked Grand Gulf batteries. May 4, Red River expedition and capture of Alexandria. July 4, capture of Vicksburg. On same day, Confederates repulsed at Helena, Arkansas. July 6, action at Milliken's Bend. The flotilla was kept actively engaged upon the Mississippi and its tributaries during the remaining years of the war in destroying the batteries constructed by the Confederates, driving away the guerrilla bands, and protecting the vast fleet of transports needed in conducting the military operations in the Mississippi Valley.

THE CRUISERS.

The equipment of privateers by the Confederates was commenced soon after the beginning of the war; sailing vessels were used at first. June 18, 1861, the Confederate privateer "Sumter," a steamer commanded by Raphael Semmes, sailed from New Orleans. After destroying many merchant ships, she was abandoned at Gibraltar. A new fast cruiser was built and fitted out in England, called the "290" or "Alabama;" August 20, 1862, Semmes took command of her, and commenced the burning and sinking of American merchant vessels.

The "Oreto" or "Florida," the "Shenandoah," "Rappahannock," and many other vessels engaged in the work of destruction. So many merchant vessels were destroyed by these active enemies that the vessels of the American merchant marine were entirely driven from the ocean as commercial carriers, because shippers would not risk cargoes in American ships. Many Federal vessels were sent in pursuit of the privateers cruising in every ocean. In the efforts to find them, this pursuit continued during nearly the entire period covered by the war. The "Alabama" was destroyed by the "Kearsarge" near Cherbourg. The "Oreto" was captured by the "Wachusett" and afterwards destroyed. Many other small privateers were captured by the naval vessels.

In addition to the vessels engaged in blockading the ports and inlets along the coast of the Confederacy, a large number of Federal vessels were constantly cruising off shore, as well as in the vicinity of Bermuda, Nassau, Havana, and other resorts of the blockade runners, for the purpose of preventing the contraband trade as much as was possible. The blockaders and cruisers captured over 1500 blockade runners during the war, besides destroying many more, and causing the throwing overboard of many contraband cargoes in the efforts to escape made by the fugitive vessels.

THE UNITED STATES COLORED TROOPS.

BY IRA HOBART EVANS, PRIVATE 10th VERMONT, 1st LIEUTENANT 9th U. S. C. T., CAPTAIN 116th U. S. C. T., BVT. MAJOR U. S. VOLUNTEERS.

THE natural antagonism existing between free and slave institutions culminated in the slaveholders' rebellion inaugurated in 1861, when the National Government passed from the control of the friends of slavery to the control of the friends of human freedom.

Comparatively few men on either side comprehended the magnitude and far-reaching consequences of the great struggle so recklessly commenced by the South and so reluctantly taken up by the North.

While the general sentiment of the North was opposed to slavery, still the people of the Northern States were not disposed to assail, by unlawful methods, the institution of slavery in the Southern States, where it was protected by constitutional guarantees. So strong was this sentiment that for some months after the commencement of the war runaway slaves who had taken refuge in the camps of Union troops were frequently returned to their owners by the commanders of such troops. That shrewd Massachusetts lawyer, Gen. B. F. Butler, early solved for himself and his command the question of the proper disposition of these refugees, by declaring that inasmuch as negro slaves were regarded as human chattels by the laws of the States where they were held in bondage, and as such slaves were capable of being used in carrying on military operations, therefore the slaves of those in insurrection against the Government of the United States should be regarded as contraband of war, and should be confiscated when captured. Many thousands of fugitive slaves were thereafter employed for military purposes as cooks, teamsters and laborers on fortifications.

However, there was no uniformity of action in such matters until after the passage of an Act of Congress on March 13, 1862, forbidding the employment of military force to return fugitives to slavery, and also of another Act of Congress on July 17, 1862, providing for the confiscation of the property of rebels, including slaves. In the latter Act there was a provision as follows:

"That the President of the United States is authorized to employ as many persons of African descent as he may deem necessary and proper for the suppression of this rebellion, and for this purpose he may organize and use them in such manner as he may judge best for the public welfare."

In the summer of 1862, in Louisiana, that splendid Vermont soldier, Gen. J. W. Phelps, first began the work of organizing and drilling negroes as soldiers. His requisition on General Butler for arms for these troops was disallowed by that officer, who ordered him to desist from organizing such troops. The battle of Shiloh in the spring of 1862, and the grave disasters to the Union cause resulting from the Peninsular campaign of McClellan and the defeat of Pope in the summer of 1862, operated as a powerful educational force upon the President, Congress, the army and the loyal people of the country. They became convinced that the pending struggle was "to the death," and would only terminate with the utter exhaustion of one of the parties to it.

President Lincoln therefore decided to strike a death blow at the existence of the institution that had produced the war and caused so much bloodshed and sorrow, and on September 22, 1862, he issued a proclamation declaring that on January 1, 1863, all persons held as slaves within the territory then in rebellion, should forever after be free, and the Government of the United States would maintain their freedom.

The final proclamation of freedom was accordingly issued on January 1, 1863. In this proclamation notice was given that from among those thus set free suitable persons would be received into the armed service of the United States. The real issues of the war were now sharply defined, and all could see clearly that disunion and slavery must triumph or perish together.

In the meantime the organization of colored troops was proceeding at different points in the South. In South Carolina, Col. T. W. Higginson organized the first regiment of South Carolina Volunteers in the summer of 1862, which it is claimed was the first regiment of freedmen mustered into the service of the United States. Gen. B. F. Butler, in command at New Orleans, began to organize and arm colored troops, and on September 24, 1862, the first regiment of Louisiana Native Guards reported for duty to that gallant Vermont officer, Col. Stephen Thomas, and the first service of colored troops in the field during the rebellion was under his command. When General Butler was relieved of his command by General Banks on December 14, 1862, among the troops turned over by the former to the latter were three regiments and two batteries of colored troops.

That freeing the slaves and arming them for the maintenance of their own freedom and the preservation of the Union was a blow at the vitals of the rebellion, was evidenced by the transports of rage into which these steps threw the rebel leaders. The rebel general, John C. Breckenridge, writing under date of August 14, 1862, to the Union commander at Baton Rouge, La., said: "Information has reached these headquarters that negro slaves are being organized and armed to be employed against us;" and he added, "I am authorized by Major-General Van Dorn, commanding this department, to inform you that the above acts are regarded as in violation of the usages of civilized warfare, and that in future, upon any departure from these usages, he will raise the black flag and neither give nor ask quarter."

On August 21, 1862, the Confederate War Department issued a general order, "That Major General Hunter and Brigadier-General Phelps be no longer held and treated as public enemies of the Confederate States, but as outlaws; and that in the event of the capture of either of them, or that of any other commissioned officer employed in drilling, organizing or instructing slaves, with a view to their armed service in this war, he shall not be regarded as a prisoner of war, but held in close confinement for execution as a felon at such time and place as the President shall order."

On December 23, 1862, the President of the Confederacy issued a proclamation of outlawry against Gen. B. F. Butler and all commissioned officers in his command, in which he said: "African slaves have not only been incited to insurrection by every license and encouragement, but numbers of them have actually been armed for a servile war, a war in its nature far exceeding the horrors and most merciless atrocities of savages." He proceeded to order that "negro slaves captured in arms be at once delivered over to the executive authorities of the respective States to which they belong, to be dealt with according to the laws of said States;" and that General Butler and his commissioned officers, "robbers and criminals deserving death, be, whenever captured, reserved for execution."

The Confederate Congress passed a joint resolution, approved by Mr. Davis May 1, 1863, which provided that white officers of negro Union soldiers "shall, if captured, be put to death or be otherwise punished at the discretion of the court," the trial to take place "before the military court attached to the army or corps" making the capture, or such other court as the Confederate President might designate. To meet this condition of affairs, President Lincoln issued the following order on July 30, 1863:

"It is the duty of every government to give protection to its citizens of whatever class, color or condition, and especially to those who are duly organized as soldiers in the public service. The law of nations, and the usages and customs of war, as carried on by civilized powers, permits no distinction as to color in the treatment of prisoners of war as public enemies. To sell or enslave any captured person on account of his color, and for no offense against the laws of war, is a relapse into barbarism and a crime against the civilization of the age.

"The government of the United States will give the same protection to all its soldiers, and if the enemy shall sell or enslave any one because of his color, the offense shall be punished by retaliation upon the enemy's prisoners in our possession.

"It is therefore ordered that for every soldier of the United States killed in violation of the laws of war a rebel soldier shall be executed; and for every one enslaved by the enemy, or sold into slavery, a rebel soldier shall be placed at hard labor on the public works and continued at such labor until the other shall be released and receive the treatment due to a prisoner of war."

This order kept the rebel leaders from carrying into effect their barbarous purposes, as the Government of the United States never lacked for rebel prisoners upon whom reprisals could be made. It is true that captured negro soldiers and their white officers in the hands of the rebels were occasionally subjected to indignities and cruelties forbidden by the laws and usages of civilized warfare, but prompt retaliation, or threats thereof, by the Union commanders, usually put an immediate stop to such outrages.

In May and June, 1863, the colored troops, under General Banks, behaved so gallantly in the assaults upon Port Hudson, as to win the respect and cordial regard of their white comrades and to inspire general confidence in their soldierly qualities. In July, 1863, a combined force of white and colored troops under General Gilmore, made a desperate assault upon Fort Wagner, S. C., which was repulsed with great loss. In this assault the colored troops greatly distinguished themselves by their steadiness and courage.

During the summer of 1863, a board of officers was organized by order of the War Department, for the examination of applicants for commissions in colored troops. This board was composed of able officers, and its president was Major-General Silas Casey, an officer of the regular army, who was the author of the tactics used for the drilling of the Union troops during the war. The peculiar character of this service, and the unusual hazards attending it, owing to the terrible threats uttered by the Confederate leaders and Government against white officers engaging in it, served to attract to it men of strong convictions, courage, and a high order of intelligence. Of the colored regiments, whose officers were appointed on the recommendation of General Casey's board, it may be safely said that no volunteer troops of the Union army had better, braver, or more efficient officers.

The organization of colored troops progressed so rapidly in 1863, that in his annual message to Congress on December 8, 1863, President Lincoln was able to say :

"Of those who were slaves at the beginning of the rebellion, full one hundred thousand are now in the United States military service, about one-half of which number actually bear arms in the ranks; thus giving the double advantage of taking so much labor from the insurgent cause and supplying the places which otherwise must be filled with so many white men. So far as tested, it is difficult to say that they are not as good soldiers as any. No servile insurrection or tendency to violence or cruelty has marked the measures of emancipation and arming the blacks."

In their History of Abraham Lincoln, Messrs. Nicolay and Hay say :

"One point of doubt about employing negroes as soldiers was happily removed, almost imperceptibly, by the actual experiment. It had been a serious question with many thoughtful men whether the negro would fight, . . . Practical trial in skirmish and battle gave an immediate and successful refutation to this fear, and proved the gallantry and trustworthiness of the black soldier in the severest trials of devotion and heroism. Within half a year after Lincoln's order of enlistment the black regiments had furnished such examples of bravery on many fields that commanders gave them unstinted praise, and white officers and soldiers heartily accepted them as worthy companions-in-arms."

In February, 1864, at the battle of Olustee, Fla., the colored troops again distinguished themselves by their coolness and courage in action, and materially assisted in saving that defeat from being turned into a disastrous rout. On April 2, 1864, the Secretary of War reported that the number of negro soldiers then mustered into the service of the United States had increased to 71,976. These troops were employed over pretty nearly the whole field of operations against the rebellion. They garrisoned forts, guarded lines of communication, assisted in sieges, and were constantly engaged in skirmishes and battles, with steadily increasing credit to themselves and benefit to the Union cause. In a letter written by President Lincoln, on August 17, 1864, he said :

"Drive back to the support of the Rebellion the physical force which the colored people now give and promise us, and neither the present nor any coming Administration can save the Union. Take from us and give to the enemy the hundred and thirty, forty or fifty thousand colored persons now serving as soldiers, seamen and laborers, and we cannot longer maintain the contest."

On September 12, 1864, he said :

"Any different policy in regard to the colored man deprives us of his help, and this is more than we can bear. We cannot spare the hundred and forty or fifty thousand now serving us as soldiers, seamen and laborers. This is not a question of sentiment or taste, but one of physical force, which may be measured and estimated as horse-power and steam-power are measured and estimated. Keep it, and you can save the Union; throw it away, and the Union goes with it."

The largest bodies of colored troops engaged in field operations during the year 1864, belonged to the Army of the James, under the command of Gen. B. F. Butler. The infantry was organized into two divisions, designated as the Third Division of the Tenth Army Corps, and the Third Division of the Eighteenth Army Corps.

General Butler had also several regiments of colored cavalry in his command. The Ninth Army Corps became a part of the Army of the Potomac, in May, 1864, and one division of this corps was composed of colored troops. This division suffered severely in the attack on Petersburg at the explosion of the mine, July 30, 1864. In his Memoirs, General Grant says this disaster was "all due to inefficiency on the part of the corps commander and the incompetency of the division commander who was sent to lead the assault."

The Second U. S. C. Cavalry distinguished itself at the battle of Suffolk, Va., March 9, 1864. The First and Tenth U. S. C. Troops defeated the cavalry of Fitzhugh Lee at Wilson's Wharf, Va. On June 15, 1864, five regiments of colored infantry captured a line of rebel works and several pieces of artillery at Petersburg, Va.

The night of August 13, 1864, portions of the Armies of the Potomac and James crossed to the north side of the James River, and were constantly engaged in fighting and skirmishing with the enemy near Richmond, until they re-crossed that river a week later. The colored division of the Tenth Army Corps constituted a part of this command, and bravely performed its full share of the duties of that short but extremely arduous campaign. On August 14 it took part in the capture of the enemy's lines near New Market, and two days later, at Fussell's Mills, it carried by assault the enemy's works on its front, which were stoutly defended by some of the best troops of Lee's Army. The night of September 28, 1864, the Army of the James crossed the James River to the north side, and the morning of the 29th the colored division of the Eighteenth Corps carried by assault, with fixed bayonets, the enemy's strong works, protected by double lines of abatis, at Spring Hill, near Newmarket.

The afternoon of the same day, the Seventh and Ninth regiments, United States Colored Troops, separately made very gallant assaults on Fort Gilmer, which were repulsed with severe loss to these regiments. Fort Gilmer was a strong work mounted with artillery and well defended. Several companies of the Seventh United States Colored Troops were almost annihilated in their desperate efforts to capture this fort.

In his final report on July 22, 1865, of the operations of the armies of the United States under his command, General Grant, after speaking of the capture of the works at Fort Harrison and New Market, said: "This success was followed up by a gallant assault upon Fort Gilmer, immediately in front of Chaffin's Farm fortifications, in which we were repulsed with heavy loss." General Lee heavily re-inforced his troops on the north side of the James, and on September 30th attempted to re-capture Fort Harrison, but was repulsed with great loss. The colored troops assisted in repelling this attack.

On October 13, 1864, they took part in the engagement with the enemy on the Darbytown Road, and skirmished with the enemy in the same neighborhood on October 27, 1864. The active operations of the Army of the James for the year 1864 now ceased, and the troops settled down to the siege of Richmond.

On October 11, 1864, General Butler issued an order reviewing the operations of the Army of the James during the summer and fall of 1864, in which he said:

"Of the colored soldiers of the Third Divisions of the Eighteenth and Tenth Corps, and the officers who led them, the General commanding desires to make special mention.

"In the charge on the enemy's works by the colored division of the Eighteenth Corps at Spring Hill, Newmarket, better men were never better led, better officers never led better men. With hardly an exception, officers of colored troops have justified the care with which they have been selected. A few more such gallant charges and to command colored troops will be the post of honor in the American Armies. The colored soldiers, by coolness, steadiness and determined courage and dash have silenced every cavil of the doubters of their soldierly capacity, and drawn tokens of admiration from their enemies—have brought their late masters even to the consideration of the question whether they will not employ as soldiers the hitherto despised race. Be it so—the war is ended when a musket is in the hands of every able bodied negro who wishes to use one."

About December 1, 1864, the divisions of the colored troops in the Armies of the James and Potomac were consolidated into the Twenty-fifth Army Corps, and Maj.-Gen. Godfrey Weitzel, a brave and accomplished officer, was assigned to its command.

In the defeat of Hood's army at Nashville, Tenn., on December 15 and 16, 1864, the colored troops in the army of General Thomas exhibited steadiness and courage in action and rendered their country valuable service. On March 27, 1865, General Ord, commanding the Army of the James, with two divisions of the Twenty-fourth Corps and General Birney's Second Division of the Twenty-fifth Corps, started for the left of the Army of the Potomac near Hatcher's Run, where they arrived the morning of the 29th, to take part in the final operations against Petersburg. Birney's division of colored troops broke through the rebel lines the morning of April 2, and was among the earliest troops into Petersburg the morning of April 3, when it was captured. This division, under Ord, took part in the pursuit of Lee's army, and after marching all the night of April 8, it was part of the line of battle that met Lee's troops the morning of April 9 south of Appomattox Court House, and, after a sharp engagement, convinced General Lee of the impossibility of escape and the necessity for the immediate surrender of his army. The last battle of the war was fought near White's Ranch on the Rio Grande River, in Texas, on May 13, 1865, and the Sixty-second United States Colored Troops was among the troops engaged in it.

At the close of the war there were in the service of the United States, of colored troops, one hundred and twenty regiments of infantry, twelve regiments of heavy artillery, ten companies of light artillery, and seven regiments of cavalry; making an aggregate of one hundred twenty-three thousand one hundred fifty-six men. The entire number commissioned and enlisted in this branch of the service during the war was one hundred seventy-eight thousand nine hundred seventy-five men.

This sketch is necessarily very imperfect and incomplete as a record of the service of the colored troops in the War of the Rebellion. The service of these troops covered a period of two and a half years and extended over the whole theatre of military operations against the insurgent forces, and no historian has yet gathered up and put into permanent form a record of the great services rendered by these troops in the maintenance of the Union and the destruction of slavery.

No sketch of the service of these troops would be at all complete which failed to give some account of the effect upon the leaders of the rebellion of the successful employment of colored troops in the Union army. The explosions of rage on the part of these leaders on first hearing of the enlistment of colored troops in the Union service have already been noted; but the courage and good conduct of these troops, coupled with numerous disasters to the Confederate cause, prepared the minds of the rebel leaders for the consideration of the question of the employment of negro soldiers to sustain the waning fortunes of the Confederacy.

In his message to the Confederate Congress on November 7, 1864, Mr. Davis discussed the question of the employment of negroes in the military service of the Confederacy, and recommended that the twenty thousand slaves then employed in various capacities in the Confederate army should be increased to forty thousand, and should be drilled in "encamping, marching and parking trains," and should also be employed as pioneer and engineer laborers. He expressed himself as opposed to a "general levy and arming of the slaves for the duty of soldiers," but at the same time suggested that the Confederate Government might buy the slave from his master, and agree to liberate him as a reward for faithful military service, if there should occur what he termed "the improbable contingency of our need of resorting to this element of resistance." In this message he also said, "But should the alternative ever be presented of subjugation or the employment of the slave as a soldier, there seems to be no reason to doubt what should then be our decision."

This disagreeable subject was discussed in the Confederate Congress for several months, with the expression of much difference of opinion among the members. Some said, "if the negro was fit to be a soldier he was not fit to be a slave," while others said that "by a few strokes of the pen the Confederate Government had subscribed to the main tenet of the Abolition party in the North, and all its consequences, standing exposed and stultified before the world."

On January 11, 1865, General Lee wrote a letter to Hon. Andrew Hunter, in which he said:

"I think, therefore, we must decide whether slavery shall be extinguished by our enemies and the slaves be used against us, or use them ourselves at the risk of the effects which may be produced upon our social institutions. I believe that with proper regulations they can be made efficient soldiers. They possess the physical qualifications in an eminent degree. Long habits of obedience and subordination, coupled with the moral influence which in our country the white man possesses over the black, furnish an excellent foundation for the discipline which is the best guarantee of military efficiency. Our chief aim should be to secure their fidelity.

The reasons that induce me to recommend the employment of negro troops at all, render the effects of the measures I have suggested upon slavery immaterial, and in my opinion, the best means of securing the efficiency and fidelity of this auxiliary force would be to accompany the measure with a well digested plan of gradual and general emancipation. As that will be the result of the continuance of the war, and will certainly occur if the enemy succeed, it seems to me advisable to adopt it at once, and thereby secure all the benefits that will accrue to our cause.

The employment of negro troops under regulations similar in principle to those above indicated, would, in my opinion, greatly increase our military strength, and enable us to relieve our white population to some extent. I think we could dispense with our reserve forces except in cases of necessity.

It would disappoint the hopes which our enemies base upon our exhaustion, deprive them in a great measure of the aid they now derive from black troops, and thus throw the burden of the war upon their own people. In addition to the great political advantages that would result to our cause from the adoption of a system of emancipation, it would exercise a salutary influence upon our whole negro population, by rendering more secure the fidelity of those who become soldiers and diminishing the inducements to the rest to abscond.

"I can only say in conclusion, that whatever measures are to be adopted should be adopted at once. Every day's delay increases the difficulty. Much time will be required to organize and discipline the men, and action may be deferred until it is too late."

On February 18, 1865, General Lee wrote a letter to Hon. E. Barksdale, a member of the Confederate Congress, in which he said:

"I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, with reference to the employment of negroes as soldiers. I think the measure not only expedient but necessary. The enemy will certainly use them against us if he can get possession of them; and, as his present numerical superiority will enable him to penetrate many parts of the country, I cannot see the wisdom of the policy of holding them to await his arrival, when we may, by timely action and judicious management, use them to arrest his progress. I do not think that our white population can supply the necessities of a long war without overtaxing its capacity, and imposing great suffering upon our people; and I believe we should provide resources for a protracted struggle, not merely for a battle or a campaign.

"In answer to your second question, I can only say that, in my opinion, the negroes, under proper circumstances, will make efficient soldiers. I think we could at least do as well with them as the enemy, and he attaches great importance to their assistance. Under good officers and good instructions, I do not see why they should not become soldiers. They possess all the physical qualifications, and their habits of obedience constitute a good foundation for discipline. They furnish a more promising material than many armies of which we read in history, which owed their efficiency to discipline alone. I think those who are employed should be freed. It would be neither just nor wise, in my opinion, to require them to serve as slaves. The best course to pursue, it seems to me, would be to call for such as are willing to come with the consent of their owners. An impressment or draft would not be likely to bring out the best class, and the use of coercion would make the measure distasteful to them and to their owners."

General Lee continued to urge the organization of negro troops for the service of the Confederacy, but it was not until March, 1865, that the Confederate Congress passed an Act for the organization and arming of negro troops for the service of the Confederacy. General Lee and other prominent Confederate leaders recommended it as a patriotic duty for the best officers in the Confederate service to volunteer to organize and command negro troops. Evidently the time had passed for branding the white officers of colored troops as "outlaws" and "felons," and classing them as "robbers and criminals deserving death, to be whenever captured, reserved for execution."

The rebellion was about to collapse, but this was not to occur until after the organization of a few companies of Confederate negro soldiers, who marched through the streets of the rebel capital in their Confederate uniforms, as if the Almighty Himself had decreed that in this most signal manner the Confederate Government, which had slavery for its corner stone, should thus publicly acknowledge before the world the manhood of the negro slave, and consequently the wrongfulness of slavery; and should also confess the wisdom and justice of the action of Abraham Lincoln and his associates in freeing the slaves and sending them forth to fight for the freedom of their race and the preservation of the Union.

A. G. upon the staff of Brig.-Gen. Edwin H. Stoughton, commanding Second Vermont Brigade, at Fairfax Court House, Va.; when Brig.-Gen. George J. Stannard assumed command of this brigade, Lieut. Hooker was assigned to his staff; he served in this position through the three day's fighting at the battle of Gettysburg; for gallantry in action at Gettysburg he was recommended for prom. to Capt. and A. A. G., U. S. Vols.; in the campaign of '64, he was Asst. Adj.-Gen., First Brigade, Second Division, Eighteenth Army Corps, and led nine regiments into battle at Cold Harbor, June 3, '64, where he was severely wounded five times (first, across body; second, left leg; third, right leg; fourth, through body right side; fifth, through left shoulder, leaving the sub-clavium artery entirely bare and shattering the collar bone, which was mostly removed; the last two wounds were considered fatal by the surgeons; upon recovery, Capt. Hooker was assigned to duty as Asst. Adjt.-Gen., Third Division, Twenty-Fourth Corps, (Bvt. Maj.-Gen. Charles Devens, commanding,) and served in the trenches in front of Richmond, Va.; this Division, with its First Brigade, (Bvt. Brig.-Gen. E. H. JANES, HENRY, Waterbury, Vt.—Apptd. Surg. 3d Vt. June 24, '61; Must. into the United States service July 16, '61; Prom. Surg. U. S. Vols. Mch. 26, '63; Bvt. Lieut.-Col. U. S. Vols., Mch. 13, '65, for faithful and meritorious service during the war; Must. out of the United States service Jan. 4, '66. Served with the 3d Vt. from the time of his must. into the U. S. service, June, '61, and participated in the battles in which it was engaged from that time until after the battle of South Mountain, Md., Sept., '62; was in charge of hospitals at Burkettsville, Md., and Frederick, Md., after the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, in the fall and early winter of '62; rejoined the 3d Regt. in Jan., '63; during the second battle of Fredericksburg, was in charge of the Second Division, hospital of the Sixth Corps.

As an illustration of the efficiency of the ambulance service of the Army of the Potomac at that time so soon after its organization by Medical Director Letterman, and its establishment on an independent basis, it may be now stated that during the 48 hours including the time of the battle, owing to the changes of the position of the contending forces, it was necessary to move the hospital of the Second Division five times; the Rappanannock being twice crossed. After each removal, the hospital, operating, cooking and other tents were pitched, beds made up and everything put into regular running order. Notwithstanding this, all the wounded, five times as many as the whole number of the French wounded in Mexico, in '64, were picked up from the line of battle by the Ambulance Corps and brought, under fire, into the hospital during the progress of the battle, their wounds were dressed, all operations were done within 24 hours, they were properly fed and furnished with comfortable beds, and surgeons and attendants were allowed several hours sleep. This, which was accomplished with only the regular detail usual during engagements, would have been impossible under the old system, or rather want of system so obstinately insisted on and adhered to, against the protests of the Surg.-Gen. and other medical officers, by Gen-in-Chief Halleck, in the early part of the war. A system by which the ambulances and other transportations given to the different regimental hospitals were taken for the use of headquarters messes, and could only be obtained for their legitimate uses, temporarily, if at all, by the medical officers, by correspondence through the circumlocution office; a system which disorganized and threw into confusion the line of battle during a fight, which impeded the movements of the army, and which was the cause of untold and entirely useless suffering. After the operations were completed in this hospital, Surgeon Janes went with a flag of truce into the Confederate lines for the purpose of attending the wounded prisoners of the Sixth Corps, and bringing them back into the Union lines. After which, he was in charge of the Sixth Corps Hospital, containing 1,700 patients, at Potomac Creek, until it was closed and the army moved to Gettysburg.

During the battle of Gettysburg he was assigned to duty as Medical Director, First Corps, a considerable part of the medical officers of that corps having been taken prisoners. After the close of the battle, was in charge of the hospitals in and about Gettysburg, in which were placed upwards of 20,000 wounded Union and Confederate soldiers left on the field. The care of the government for its wounded soldiers, the unimportance of the various volunteer relief societies, the magnitude of our operation and the obstinacy with which the two parties contended, may be inferred by these facts: During the progress of the battle, lest there should be some deficiency, Surgeon Janes, by the direction of Medical Director Letterman, distributed to the different hospitals, 30,000 rations in excess of their requisitions and regular supplies. The wounded left on this one battlefield were more than six times as many as the German's had during the Schleswig-Holstein war of '64, and twice as many as the English had during the Crimean war of '54-'57; this, notwithstanding the fact that in the early part of the battle, a large part of the Confederate wounded were sent to the rear.

A special hospital of about 2000 beds was established on this field for the purpose of treating to termination the most dangerously wounded, especially those with gunshot fractures of the thigh, for the purpose of contrasting on a large scale the results of conservation and amputation under similar circumstances. In this hospital 495 cases of gunshot fracture of the lower extremities were treated conservatively, side by side with 449 amputations of the lower extremities. It is believed that never before or since have an equal number of injuries of this class been treated conservatively, and at the same time in one hospital, with better results.

Surgeon Janes remained in charge of the hospitals in and about Gettysburg until early in the winter of '63, when they were broken up.

In the winter and spring of '64, he was in charge of South U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia. On the opening of the campaign of '64, he was returned to duty in the field with the Army of the Potomac, at his own request. During the summer and fall of '64, he commanded the hospital steamer "State of Maine," in which many thousands of sick and wounded men were taken from the front to the general hospitals at Washington, Alexandria, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, etc.

In the fall of '64, at the solicitation of Gov. J. Gregory Smith, he was assigned to duty in charge of Sloan U. S. Gen. Hospital, at Montpelier, Vt., where he remained until the close of the war. His last duty was disposing of the government property at the General Hospital at Brattleboro, Vt. In all, between 49,000 and 50,000 men were treated during the war, in hospitals under his charge—one-tenth less than the total number of Germans wounded in the bloody Franco-Prussian war of '70-'71. Apptd. Surg.-Gen. of Vermont, with rank of Brig.-Gen., in '88, serving two years.

Pitkin was a member of the Legislature of Vermont when the war broke out, and after participating in the special war session of Apr., '61, he offered himself as a volunteer, and was apptd. Q. M. of the 2d Vt. Regt. His remarkable energy, tact and capacity as R. Q. M. soon attracted the attention of his superior officers, and he was prom. to the position of Capt. and A. Q. M., U. S. Vols., and became one of the most trusted assistants of Gen. Ingalls, Chief Q. M. of the Army of the Potomac. During the Antietam campaign, Capt. Pitkin was Depot Q. M. at Harper's Ferry, and later was Chief Depot Q. M. of the Army of the Potomac, and in charge of the bases of supply at Warrenton Junction, Falmouth, Belle Plain, and Aquia Creek. During the Gettysburg campaign Capt. Pitkin was Chief Depot Q. M. for the army at Alexandria. When the army started, under Grant, for the overland campaign of '64, Capt. Pitkin had charge of the army train of four thousand wagons, a duty as onerous and responsible as that of Corps Commander. When the base of supplies was established at Belle Plain he was placed in charge of it. In addition to the care of the enormous quantities of supplies for an army of 100,000 men, were added the duties of providing for many thousands of recruits and re-enforcements and prisoners, and for the armies of wounded and sick soldiers pouring back from the front. In Aug., '64, he was promoted to the rank of Col. and A. Q. M., the highest grade but one in that department; was Chief Depot Q. M. at Port Royal, White House and City Point, during the summer of '64. During the critical years of the war, Col. Pitkin commanded position second only to the highest in responsibility, and second to none in labor and care. He filled them with absolute fidelity and success, winning the high confidence and admiration of his superiors, as well as of the thousands of his subordinates. In Nov., '64, Col. Pitkin resigned his position in the army to accept the office of Q. M.-Gen. of the State of Vermont, at that time an office of great responsibility and care, to which he had been elected by the Legislature, and which office he held for six years by successive elections. Gen. Pitkin died at Montpelier, Vt., July 28, '91.

THE FIRST BRIGADE BAND.

BY NELSON ADAMS (U. S. General Land Office, Washington, D. C.), BAND MASTER FIRST VERMONT BRIGADE.

ON the 9th of August, 1862, under General Orders of the War Department, the Band of the Third Vermont regiment was disbanded at Harrison's Landing, Virginia, and returned to Vermont. In the following winter and spring I was in correspondence with Gen. (then Col.) Lewis A. Grant, commanding the First Vermont Brigade, relative to the organization of a band for his brigade. This resulted in the enlistment of the First Vermont Brigade Band. It was mustered into the United States service at Brattleboro, Vt., May 26, 1863. They immediately joined the brigade at White Oak Church (now Montrose, Va.), and after a few days in camp started on the Gettysburg campaign. The forced marches which followed during the summer left no time for practice, and as the members were not accustomed to that kind of life, the band became somewhat broken up. During the summer we accompanied the brigade to New York city after the draft riots, and here for a short time an opportunity for practice and recreation was allowed. Returning to the front we found the Sixth Army Corps at Stone Mountain, near Culpeper, Va., after a three days' march from Alexandria, and shortly after went into camp at Warrenton. Soon the battle of Rappahannock Station was fought, and afterwards we went into winter quarters near Brandy Station, after another battle at that place. During the winter of 1863-'64 we accompanied the brigade on the "Mine Run expedition," and in the spring was with it through the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor and Petersburg campaigns, as well as in the Shenandoah Valley under Sheridan. Late in the fall of 1864 we returned with the Sixth Army Corps to Petersburg, and were present at the battles of Petersburg and Sailor's Creek, the latter being the last engagement of the Old Vermont Brigade.

When Lee surrendered we were with the brigade at Farmville, Va. Subsequently we were in camp at Burkeville, Va., and here received information of the assassination of President Lincoln. At Burkeville, the Sixth Army Corps was ordered to Danville, Va., to form a junction with Sherman's Army, then moving north from Savannah. After a stay of about a month at Danville, the brigade was ordered to Richmond, and went by rail to Manchester, where, after a few days in camp, we marched to Washington via Fredericksburg.

At Washington we participated in the review of the Sixth Corps. On June 29, 1865, the Old Brigade Band was mustered out. Previous to leaving camp at Washington an agreement was made with the Second Vermont regiment to meet them at Burlington, Vt., on their return to that place, and in accordance with the same we met the regiment on their arrival and escorted them to the City Hall. The following night we gave a concert in the City Hall, and therefore the last piece the Old Brigade Band ever played was on that occasion.

In conclusion, I would say that from the time the band joined the brigade we were always present with them through all the battles and campaigns, and though at times badly broken up by sickness, the members were never in such a condition as to be absolutely unable to perform the duties devolving upon them, and I venture to say that the men of the Old Vermont Brigade will never forget how their band played "Old John Brown" when passing through Charleston during Sheridan's valley campaign.

GOVERNORS OF VERMONT,

Officers of the General Staff, and General Officers Appointed from Vermont, 1861-1865.

BY WILLIAM L. GREENLEAF AND THEODORE S. PECK.

---

VERMONT was peculiarly fortunate at the period immediately preceding, and during the War of the Rebellion, in having as Governors and commanders-in-chief of her forces men of great executive ability and unflinching patriotism, who could foresee the impending struggle between freedom and slavery with a clear appreciation of the magnitude of the conflict, men who could arouse public sentiment, and impress others with their own earnestness and determination to maintain both the honor of their State and the integrity of the Union. So much credit is due the men who safely guided the ship of State during that momentous period, that a record of the Vermont troops would be incomplete without the brief mention of her "War Governors," here given in the order of their terms of service.

ERASTUS FAIRBANKS.

Erastus Fairbanks, of St. Johnsbury, was chosen governor of Vermont for a second time in 1860, having previously served as its chief magistrate in 1852. His accession to office was during the incipient stages of the rebellion, when a man of great wisdom and experience was required for the position; and no man could have been selected better fitted for the trying and arduous work to be done. The firm of which he was senior member held large amounts of property in the South, and war would ensure its destruction, while peace would inure to his pecuniary benefit. But personal interests were not regarded by him when weighed against the cause of the Union, and the liberty and prosperity of the people; and he threw all his energies into the struggle for the preservation of the integrity and unity of the Nation. Day and night found him toiling ceaselessly to raise troops in a State where, three months previously, not even a knapsack could have been found. Success crowned his efforts, and regiment after regiment of "Green Mountain Boys" were sent forward to the seat of war.

No sooner had Fort Sumter been fired upon than he summoned his official advisers, and the best minds in the State, to his aid. The Legislature was convened in extra session and it placed a million dollars at his disposal for the preservation of the Government. No check was placed upon the expenditure of that sum, and his own prudent judgment was the only guide in its disbursement. Throughout his entire period of service Governor Fairbanks labored with untiring zeal, and with utter disregard of his private interests, for the welfare of his State and Nation. His services were given gratuitously, and the salary to which he was entitled as Governor was never drawn from the Treasury, but remains therein as a perpetual memento of his love to the Commonwealth whose interests were always placed before his own. During his term of office the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth regiments of Vermont Volunteers were organized and sent to the front.

FREDERICK HOLBROOK.

Governor Fairbanks was succeeded in the fall of 1861 by Frederick Holbrook, of Brattleboro. He assumed the duties of the office at the darkest and most momentous period of our National history. The fate of the Nation hung trembling in the balance, and timid croakers and sympathizers with disloyalty were doing their utmost to embarrass the situation. But the heart and hope of Governor Holbrook never failed. His words of cheer and prophetic utterances strengthened the soul of the heroic Lincoln, and bore true prophecy of defeat to the enemies of civil and religious liberty.

Inspired by his stirring words, over twenty thousand patriotic soldiers, including two of his own sons, went forth from the green hillsides of Vermont to cement the stones of our great temple of National unity with their blood. Under his administration the regiments already in the field were kept filled with recruits, and the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth regiments of infantry, the First regiment of cavalry, three batteries of light artillery and three companies of sharpshooters were added to their number.

It was at Governor Holbrook's suggestion, and upon a document prepared and signed by him, and subsequently signed or approved by most of the Governors of the other loyal States, that President Lincoln issued his memorable call for three hundred thousand men shortly after the seven days' battle.

JOHN GREGORY SMITH.

Governor Holbrook was succeeded in 1863 by John Gregory Smith, of St. Albans, who was excelled by none of the loyal War Governors in energy and executive force. He was frequently called to Washington to confer with President Lincoln and Secretary Stanton, by whom his counsel on matters pertaining to the war was highly esteemed. He often visited the troops at the front to look after the interests of the Vermont regiments, especially after great battles had been fought, and there were thousands of disabled men to be cared for. After the great battle of the Wilderness he went to Fredericksburg, Va., ordering thither, at the same time, a dozen of the best surgeons in Vermont, and personally superintended the care of hundreds of wounded Vermonters, who, thanks to his energy and devotion, received better treatment than most of the troops of other States. His kindly face and cheerful voice were familiar to the wounded soldiers who became inmates of Union hospitals in 1863 and 1864, and many were the messages he carried from the sick and dying to their loved ones in Vermont.

When the Northern frontier was in danger from Southern refugees in Canada, after the St. Albans raid, he was summoned to Washington by President Lincoln, and as a result of the conference then held, he immediately raised twelve regiments of militia which were armed by the general government for the defense of the frontier. This action was regarded at the time as most important to the Union cause, saving the withdrawal of troops from the armies in the field to perform the services rendered by the militia. During Governor Smith's administration, the old regiments, whose term of service had expired, were veteranized and kept filled up by new enlistments, and the Seventeenth regiment was organized and added to those already in the field.

At the close of the war, the Vermont troops were reviewed at Bailey's Cross Roads, Va., by Governor Smith. On this occasion the Division had between four and five thousand men under command of Bvt. Maj.-Gen. Lewis A. Grant, with Bvt. Brig.-Gen. George P. Foster, (Colonel Fourth Regiment), and Col. John B. Mead, (of the Eighth Regiment), commanding the Brigades, and Col. Josiah Hall, (First Vermont Cavalry), commanding the Cavalry. Governor Smith was accompanied by Adjutant-General Washburn, Quartermaster-General Pitkin, and Surgeon-General Thayer of his Staff, also by Bvt. Maj.-Gen. William Wells, Brig.-Gen. James M. Warner, with their Staffs, and prominent Vermonters and leading officials in Washington. The great business ability of Governor Smith enabled the Vermont soldiers to be speedily mustered out and returned to their homes, and the accounts of the State with the general government, promptly and satisfactorily adjusted.

CAPTAIN H. HENRY BAXTER,
of Rutland.

Elected Adjutant and Inspector-General of Vermont with rank of Brigadier-General, in 1859, which position he held at the breaking out of the war. On the 19th of April, 1861, he called a meeting of the officers of the State Militia, at Burlington, and designated ten companies of the same as the First Regiment of Vermont Volunteer Infantry, with instructions to enlist recruits at once, and discharge such men as were unwilling to leave home for the war. On April 27, he issued an order, directing the regiment to hold itself in readiness to march to the rendezvous on twenty-four hours notice. He put the regiment into camp at Rutland on the 2d day of May, and sent them to the field the 9th day of May, riding at the head of the regiment with its Colonel, John W. Phelps, through New York City. In addition to the First Regiment, the Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Regiments of Infantry were sent to the field under his efficient management. He was relieved in the fall of 1861 by Lieut.-Col. Peter T. Washburn.

PETER T. WASHBURN,
of Woodstock, Vt.

Commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel First Vermont regiment (three months); mustered into the United States service May 9, 1861; mustered out August 15, 1861. Commanded the First regiment during nearly all of its term of service at Fortress Monroe and Newport News, Va.

Lieutenant-Colonel Washburn left Newport News June 10, 1861, with a battalion of five companies of the First Vermont, and five companies of the Fourth Massachusetts, and was present in action at the first battle of the war at Big Bethel, Va.

While the result of the expedition was unsuccessful, the troops in command of Colonel Washburn made the only formidable assault upon the enemy's works, as they went to the top of the same and poured in so violent and continuous a fire of musketry for some twenty minutes that hardly a man of the enemy ventured to show his head above the works. Colonel Washburn did not retire from this position until he received orders to do so, and then performed the movement in a slow and deliberate manner, calling together his men and marching to his original position in line. Colonel Washburn continued in command of the First regiment until they were mustered out of the United States service.

In October, 1861, he was elected Adjutant and Inspector-General of Vermont, with rank of Brigadier-General, and continued in that office by consecutive annual elections until the close of the war. In this position he was equal to all the emergencies of the great war then in progress, and his efficient service to Vermont troops in the field, and to the people at home, will long be remembered.

During General Washburn's term of office the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth regiments of infantry, the First Vermont Cavalry, the First, Second and Third batteries of light artillery, and the First and Second companies of sharpshooters were sent to the field.

The details of his office were most carefully kept, and his annual reports were among the best of any State in the Union. General Washburn was elected governor of the State of Vermont in September, 1869 (turning over the office of Adjutant and Inspector-General to Brevet Major-General William Wells, who, after four years of gallant and faithful service in the field, proved a most efficient successor to General Washburn.) General Wells was succeeded by General James S. Peck, who had served through the war as adjutant of the Thirteenth and major of the Seventeenth regiments, and like his predecessor, was a most gallant and accomplished officer, thoroughly fitted for this position, the duties of which he performed with credit to himself and State until 1881, when he was succeeded by the present incumbent.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL.

of Cavendish, Vt.

Elected Quartermaster-General State of Vermont, in 1857, with rank of Brigadier-General, filling the office for seven years, during which time the War of the Rebellion broke out. General Davis equipped and sent into the field the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth Regiments, Vermont Volunteer Infantry.

It is a matter of record that the troops from no other State were sent into the field better armed and equipped or in better condition in every way than those from the Green Mountain State. During his administration General Davis frequently went to the front to look after and care for the sick and wounded, and to do anything in his power for their comfort. The Marine hospital at Burlington was turned over to the State and general government in May, 1862; the arrangement of which was in charge of General Davis, as were also the hospital buildings at Brattleboro. In 1864 he erected the hospital and other buildings at Montpelier. From the commencement to the end of his administration, Quartermaster-General Davis was a most patriotic and zealous officer, whose heart was thoroughly in accord with the government in putting down the rebellion. General

Davis was relieved from his duties as Quartermaster-General by Col. Perley P. Pitkin, Quartermaster U. S. Volunteers, then in charge of the Depot of Supplies for the Army of the Potomac, at City Point, Va. Colonel Pitkin was elected Quartermaster-General of the State of Vermont, with rank of Brigadier-General, in November, 1864, soon after the St. Albans raid. In this office he performed all the duties with fidelity and zeal, and his executive abilities found ample scope. He was busily engaged in the winter of 1864 in the equipment of a Division of twelve regiments of infantry, a battalion of cavalry, and three light batteries of Vermont militia, authorized by the General Assembly of Vermont, for service on the frontier, in case of emergency. In the fall of 1869, he was succeeded by Q. M.-Gen. William W. Lynde, (Captain 8th Vermont), of Marlboro, who in turn was succeeded in 1872 by Q. M.-Gen. Levi G. Kingsley, (Major 12th Vermont), who held the position for ten years, and was one of the most efficient officers the State has ever had: his interest in the welfare of the National Guard of Vermont will long be remembered. General Kingsley was succeeded by Quartermaster-General Horace K. Ide, (Bvt. Major 1st Vermont Cavalry), of St. Johnsbury, who in 1884, was succeeded by Quartermaster-General William H. Gilmore, (Quartermaster-Sergeant 8th Vermont), of Fairlee, under whose efficient management the duties of this office are at present in charge.

SURGEON-GENERAL.

of Burlington, Vt.

Prior to the breaking out of the Civil War the office of Surgeon-General had never existed in Vermont. In the absence of any law providing for such an officer, a State Board of Medical Examiners was established in 1861 by Governor Fairbanks, of which Dr. Samuel W. Thayer, of Burlington, was appointed chairman. One of the principal duties of the Board was the securing of competent medical officers for the Vermont regiments. To this was soon added that of properly caring for the hundreds of sick and wounded men who were sent home from the front for treatment. The execution of this most important work largely devolved upon Dr. Thayer, and brought into requisition his superior skill as an organizer, and exemplified his customary energy and industry. He established and brought into working order the military hospitals at Burlington, Brattleboro and Montpelier, and was for a considerable time in charge of the one at Burlington. In addition to the exacting and arduous duties performed by him within the State, he organized a corps of volunteer or emergency surgeons, with whom he went to the front on several occasions, after great battles had been fought, and the regular medical staff was inadequate to the prompt and proper care of the vast numbers of wounded. His efficient service in the field hospitals, where his skill as a surgeon was of great assistance, was highly appreciated. He was appointed an Assistant Surgeon in the United States Army by President Lincoln, and was brevetted Capt. U. S. Vols. The State Legislature having created the office of Surgeon-General, with the rank of Brigadier-General, Governor Smith at once appointed Dr. Thayer to the position as a partial recognition of his valuable services to the State. He was commissioned November 22, 1864, and again October 24, 1866.

GENERAL OFFICERS.

WILLIAM FARRAR SMITH,

Major-General United States Volunteers.

Commissioned Colonel Third Regiment Vermont Infantry Volunteers April 27, 1861; mustered into United States service July 16, 1861; appointed Brigadier-General United States Volunteers August 13, 1861; appointed Major-General United States Volunteers July 4, 1862; resigned March 21, 1867.

General Smith graduated with high honor from the United States Military Academy in 1845, and was appointed a lieutenant of topographical engineers. He received many brevets in the regular service for distinguished gallantry and meritorious services, the record of which may be found in the list of Vermonters serving in the regular army.

For several years after his graduation, he was engaged in military surveys of the Mexican boundary, and in locating a ship canal across the State of Florida. In September, 1855, he was appointed assistant professor of mathematics at the Military Academy, from which position he was relieved in June, 1856, on account of ill health, and assigned to duty in the Engineer Department of the Light House establishment. At the breaking out of the war he was on duty in Washington as Engineer Secretary of the Light House Board. In the spring of 1861 he was ordered to New York, and employed for a short time in mustering volunteers. He was then ordered to Fortress Monroe, where he served under Gen. B. F. Butler.

Soon after the attack on Fort Sumter General Smith, then a captain, informed Governor Fairbanks of his willingness to accept the command of a regiment from his native State, and after repeated refusals, the consent of the War Department was at last obtained by the assistance of General Scott, who took a particular interest in the Vermont troops, and particularly requested that Captain Smith be detailed to command the Third Vermont, retaining at the same time his commission in the regular army. His commission, which was dated back to April 27, was received in the latter part of July, and he at once proceeded to Washington and took command of his regiment. He was soon appointed Brigadier-General, and persuaded General McClellan, with whom he was well acquainted, to have the Vermont troops brigaded together and the command given to him. By this arrangement the Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth regiments were formed into a brigade, the first in the army composed exclusively of troops from a single State, which made for itself a reputation second to none in the whole history of the war. General Smith having been assigned to the command of a division, the brigade was given to Brigadier-General W. T. H. Brooks, another distinguished soldier of Vermont lineage, his father having been a native of Montpelier.

In the organization of the Army of the Potomac, in March, 1862, General Smith's Division, which included the "Vermont Brigade," became the Second Division, Fourth Corps, and was considered one of the best in the entire army. He commanded the division during the Peninsula, Antietam and Second Bull Run campaigns, and until the re-organization of the army under Burnside, when he was assigned to the command of the Sixth Corps, with which he participated in the battle of Fredericksburg. At the second re-organization, under General Hooker, he was relieved from duty with the Army of the Potomac, and ordered to his home.

At the opening of the Gettysburg campaign he volunteered for duty under General Couch, and served with the militia of Pennsylvania and New York; the troops under his command being engaged at Carlisle, Pa., and Hagerstown, Md. In September, 1863, he was ordered to the Army of the Cumberland, then at Chattanooga, and was assigned to duty as its chief engineer, in which capacity he planned and carried out the attack at Brown's Ferry, on the Tennessee River, by which the river and "short road" was gained, and the army saved from destruction.

In April, 1864, General Smith was assigned to the Eighteenth Corps, and participated in the campaign on the south side of the James River. He was subsequently sent with his corps to reinforce the army of the Potomac, and participated in the engagements of June 1st and 3d, at Cold Harbor. Returning to the south side of the James, on the 15th of June they assaulted the lines before Petersburg, carrying the enemy's outer work and capturing sixteen guns and several hundred prisoners.

On the 3d of July General Smith was placed in command of the Army of the James. A few days later he obtained leave of absence on account of ill health, and on the 19th was relieved from duty in the field. He was subsequently sent to New Orleans by President Lincoln, to examine into the administration of affairs in the Department of the Gulf. On his return north he resigned his commission in the volunteers, and on March 21, 1867, tendered his resignation as Major of Engineers in the regular army, having been in active service for twenty-two years.

LEWIS ADDISON GRANT,

Brevet Major-General U. S. Volunteers.

Lewis A. Grant was mustered into the service of the United States, September 16, 1861, at St. Albans, Vermont, as Major with the Field and Staff of Fifth Vermont Infantry Volunteers, to serve for three years; was mustered in as Lieutenant-Colonel, same regiment to date September 25, 1861; as Colonel, same regiment, to date September 16, 1862; and was honorably discharged as Colonel to date May 20, 1864, to enable him to accept an appointment as Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

He was appointed Brigadier-General U. S. Volunteers, April 27, 1864; accepted appointment May 21, 1864; was commissioned Brevet Major-General U. S. Volunteers, to date from October 19, 1864, "for gallant and meritorious services in the campaign before Richmond, Virginia, and in the Shenandoah Valley;" and was honorably discharged the service August 24, 1865. Under the provisions of the act of Congress approved June 3, 1884, and the acts amendatory thereof, he is considered by the War Department as commissioned to the grade of Major, Fifth Vermont Volunteers, to take effect from September 7, 1861, to fill an original vacancy.

He commanded the Second Brigade, Second Division, Sixth Army Corps, from February 21, 1863, to December 29, 1863, from February 2, 1864, to September 29, 1864, and from October 8, 1864, to December 2, 1864; the Second Division, Sixth Corps, from December 2, 1864, to February 11, 1865; the Second Brigade, same Division, from February 11, 1865, to February 20, 1865, and from Mch. 7, 1865, to June 28, 1865.

During his service with the Fifth Vermont Infantry Volunteers, that regiment took part in the following battles: Yorktown, Williamsburg, Goldings's Farm, Savage's Station, White Oak Swamp, Crampton's Gap, Antietam and Fredericksburg.

Following is a list of battles in which he participated as a Brigade or Division Commander: Fredericksburg and Salem Heights, Gettysburg, Fairfield, Rappahannock Station, Mine Run, Wilderness, Spottsylvania C. H., Cold Harbor, Siege of Petersburg, Charlestown, W. Va., Gilbert's Crossing, Cedar Creek, Siege of Petersburg, Assault on Petersburg, Va. and Sailor's Creek, Va.

He was recommended August 22, 1866, by General U. S. Grant, commanding the army of the United States, for appointment as a field officer in the Regular Army; was appointed August 29, 1866, Lieutenant-Colonel 36th Regiment, U. S. Infantry, to date from July 28, 1866, and declined the appointment November 6, 1866.

GEORGE JERRISON STANNARD,

Brevet Major-General U. S. Volunteers.

Vermont had no better soldier or more gallant fighter than George J. Stannard, who was the first citizen of his State to volunteer as a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, having tendered his services to Governor Fairbanks, April 15, 1861. He was mustered into the service of the United States at Burlington, June 21, 1861, as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Second Vermont Infantry Volunteers. Commissioned Colonel of the Ninth Vermont Infantry Volunteers, May 21, 1862. Appointed Brigadier-General U. S. Volunteers March 11, 1863, for bravery and distinguished valor at Harper's Ferry, Va. Commissioned Brevet Major-General U. S. Volunteers, to date from October 28, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services in the attack upon the enemy's works at Fort Harrison, Va., Sept. 29 and 30, 1864. Resigned from the United States service June 28, 1866. As Lieutenant-Colonel of the Second Vermont, he took part in the following battles: Bull Run, Yorktown, Golding's Farm, Lee's Mills and Williamsburg.

As Colonel of the Ninth Vermont he was present at Winchester and Harper's Ferry.

As Brigade and Division Commander he was present at the following: Gettysburg, Drewry's Bluff, Petersburg, Chapin's Farm, Bermuda Hundred, Cold Harbor, The Mine and Fort Harrison.

As Lieutenant-Colonel of the Second Vermont, General Stannard served in the Peninsula campaign until ordered to Vermont to organize the 9th Regiment, which was at that time in camp at Brattleboro. He commanded this regiment as Colonel at Winchester and Harper's Ferry, Va., where his troops, with others under the command of Col. Miles, of the U. S.

Army, were basely surrendered. Upon being paroled, Colonel Stannard took his command to Chicago, Ill., and was placed in charge of several regiments at Camp Tyler, and later at Camp Douglass. He was promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General for bravery and distinguished valor at Harper's Ferry, and assigned to the command of the Second Vermont Brigade, then on duty near Fairfax Court House, Va.

In the Gettysburg campaign, Gen. Stannard's brigade (composed of the 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th Vermont Volunteers,) was the Third Brigade, Third Division, First Army Corps. On the afternoon of July 3, 1863, Gen. Stannard distinguished himself and his brigade by an attack upon Pickett's flank, at which time he was severely wounded. Upon the muster out of this brigade, he was ordered to command of defenses in New York harbor, which duty he performed until assigned to a brigade in the Tenth Corps in the spring of 1864. Later he was transferred to the command of the First Brigade, Second Division, Eighteenth Army Corps, Gen. "Baldy" Smith commanding, and was present with it at Cold Harbor, where he was wounded. On the 14th of June, he led the advance of the Eighteenth Army Corps on Petersburg, with his brigade. He was ordered to the command of the First Division, Eighteenth Corps, while in front of Petersburg, a part of his line being within one hundred yards of the enemy's fortifications. Here he was again wounded, and became so weakened on account of this wound, and those received at Cold Harbor, that he was given a leave of absence, from which he returned in time to lead the advance of the Tenth and Eighteenth Corps to the north of the James River, on the 29th of September, 1864, which resulting in the storming of Fort Harrison. The next day Gen. Lee, in person, assaulted Fort Harrison, with Hoke's and Field's Division, Longstreet's Corps, but was unable to dislodge Stannard's Division. The fighting was terrible, and near the close of the engagement Gen. Stannard received a bullet which shattered his right arm, necessitating amputation near the shoulder. He was again sent home, and upon recovery, was placed in command of the Northern frontier, with headquarters at St. Albans. This was in December, 1864, shortly after the rebel raid from Canada into that town. He continued on duty in the Department of the East until February, 1866, when he was ordered to report to Maj.-Gen. O. O. Howard, U. S. Vols., and was assigned to service in the Freedmen's Bureau at Baltimore, Md., June 27, 1866. Gen. Stannard died at Washington, D. C., June 1, 1886, and is buried in Lake View Cemetery, at Burlington, where the State of Vermont and his comrades-in-arms have erected a monument to his memory, upon which the following words are inscribed.

In honor of General George Jerrison Stannard, whose mortal part rests beneath this stone. Born in Georgia, Vermont, October 20, 1820. Died at Washington, D. C., June 1, 1886. Volunteered for the war April 14, 1861. Lieut.-Col., 2d Vt. Vols., June 6, 1861. Col. 9th Vt. Vols., May 21, 1862. Brig.-Gen. of Vols., March 11, 1863. Bvt. Maj.-Gen. of Vols. Oct. 2, 1864. Mustered out June 28, 1866. At Gettysburg, July 3, 1863, commanding the Second Vermont Brigade in crises of the battle he made the flank attack which decided the fate of Pickett's charge and changed a doubtful struggle into victory. At Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864, he commanded the First Brigade, Second Division, Eighteenth Corps, and was twice wounded. September 29, 1864, commanding the First Division, Eighteenth Corps, he stormed Fort Harrison, in front of Richmond, and held the work against the enemy's utmost efforts to retake it the following day, losing his arm. In these and other battles he distinguished himself by his cool courage, clear insight, and genius of command; gallant, truthful, unselfish, patriotic, his fame is cherished as a priceless inheritance by his comrades and fellow citizens who have joined the State of Vermont in erecting this memorial.

"Sleep soldier sleep, Thy Battles all are O'er."

A heroic bronze statue of General Stannard surmounts the State Monument at Gettysburg, which faces the field upon which he and his brigade performed such gallant service.

WILLIAM WELLS,

Brevet Major-General U. S. Volunteers.

William Wells enlisted as a private soldier in company C., First Regiment Vermont Cavalry, September 9, 1861, was sworn into service in said company October 3, 1861, at the age of twenty-three years; was commissioned 1st Lieutenant company C, October 14, 1861, and Captain of the same company November 18, 1861; mustered November 19, 1861, with the Field and Staff of the First Regiment Vermont Cavalry, to serve for three years. He was commissioned Major, October 30, 1862; was mustered the same date. Commissioned Colonel June 4, 1864, and mustered July 2, 1864. Appointed Brevet Major-General of Volunteers, March 30, 1865, "for gallant and meritorious services." (He was in command of his company while Captain; as Major he was in command of the Second Battalion of his regiment.)

He was placed in command of the Seventh Regiment, Michigan Cavalry, Mch 2, 1864, by order of General Judson Kilpatrick, while near Richmond, Virginia, on what is known as Kilpatrick's Raid, and continued in command of the regiment for several weeks. He was in command of his regiment from June 3, 1864, as Major on Wilson's raid south of Richmond. He was in command of this regiment from date of muster as Colonel until September 19, 1864, at which date he assumed command of the Second Brigade, Third Division Cavalry Corps, Army of the Potomac. He commanded this brigade at the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, at Appomattox, Va., April 9, 1865, and until May 22, 1865, when he assumed command of the Third Cavalry Division. From September 19, 1864, to April 9, 1865, he was several times in command of the Third Cavalry Division. He was in command of the Cavalry Corps from June 1, to June 24, 1865, being its last commander.

He was in command of the First Separate Brigade, Twenty-Second Army Corps, from June 24, 1865, to July 24, 1865. He was mustered out of the service January 15, 1866, by General Order 168, War Department, Washington, D. C., dated December 28, 1865. He was twice wounded, at Boonsborough, Md., July 8, 1863, with a sabre thrust and cut, and at Culpeper Court House, Va., September 13, 1863; was a prisoner of war in Libby Prison, Richmond, Va., from March 17, 1863, to about May 6, 1863. His service in the field was continuous from this muster-in until the close of the war.

During his services with the first Regiment Cavalry he took part in the following battles and skirmishes: Middletown, Winchester, Luray Court House, Culpeper Court House, Orange Court House, Kelley's Ford, Waterloo Bridge, Bull Run, Warrenton, Hanover, Hunterstown, Gettysburg, Monterey, Leitersville, Hagerstown, Boonsborough, Hagerstown, Falling Waters, Port Conway, Port Conway, Culpeper Court House, Somerville Ford, Raccoon Ford, James City, Brandy Station, Gainesville, Buckland Mills, Falmouth, Morton's Ford, Mechanicsville, Piping Tree, Craig's Meeting House, Spottsylvania, Yellow Tavern, Meadow Bridge, Hanover Court House, Ashland, Hawes' Shop, Bottom Bridge, White Oak Swamp, Riddle's Shop, Malvern Hill, Reams's Station, Nottoway Court House, Roanoke Station, Stoney Creek, Reams's Station, Winchester, Summit Point, Charlestown, W. Va., Kearneysville and Opequan or Winchester.

As brigade and Division Commander he participated in the following battles and skirmishes: Opequan, Front Royal, Gooney Manor Grade, Milford, Waynesboro, Columbia Furnace, Tom's Brook, Cedar Creek, Cedar Creek, Middle Road, Middle and Back Road or Middletown, Lacy's Springs, Waynesboro, Five Forks, Scott's Corners, Namonzine Creek, Winticomack, Appomattox Station and Appomattox Court House.

At the Grand Review Washington, D. C., May 22, 1865, he commanded the Second Brigade, Third Division Cavalry Corps, which led the advance of the Army of the Potomac.

JOHN WOLCOTT PHELPS,

Brigadier-General United States Volunteers.

Commissioned Colonel First Regiment Vermont Infantry Volunteers, May 9, 1861; mustered into United States service May 9, 1861; commissioned Brigadier-General United States Volunteers May 17, 1861.

The First Vermont rendezvoused at Rutland, Vt., and left there for Fortress Monroe, Va., May 9, 1861, where it arrived on the 13th, and remained for about three weeks, drilling and assisting in mounting heavy guns on the fort. Major-General Benjamin F. Butler arrived May 22, and assumed command of the forces at that point.

May 27 Colonel Phelps and his command were transferred to Newport News, at the mouth of the James River, about ten miles from Fortress Monroe, which place he entrenched, and designated "Camp Butler." His command here consisted of the First Vermont, Fourth Massachusetts and Seventh New York regiments. In the fall of 1861 General Phelps was ordered to Ship Island in the Department of the Gulf, where he had a command under Major-General Butler. Among other regiments in that department were the Seventh and Eighth Vermont. During the summer of 1862 a misunderstanding arose between Gen. Phelps, Gen. Butler and the Government, which resulted in the resignation of General Phelps on August 21, 1862. General Phelps was appointed from the army, and his record as an officer may be found in the list of Vermonters who served in the regular army.

EDWIN H. STOUGHTON,

Brigadier-General United States Volunteers.

Appointed cadet at U. S. Military Academy, July 1, 1854; Bvt. Second Lieutenant 4th Infantry, U. S. A., July 1, 1859; Second Lieutenant 6th Infantry, September 5, 1859; resigned March 4, 1861; Colonel, Fourth Regiment, Vermont Infantry Volunteers, September 21, 1861. Appointed Brigadier-General U. S. Volunteers, November 5, 1862; prisoner of war March 9, 1863; appointment expired March 4, 1863.

Commanded the Second Vermont Brigade, (Second Brigade, Casey's Division, Twenty-Second Army Corps), November 5, 1862, to March 9, 1863.

JAMES MEECH WARNER,

Brigadier-General United States Volunteers.

Commissioned Colonel 11th Regiment, Vermont Volunteers, (First Regiment Heavy Artillery), August 15, 1862; mustered into United States service September 1, 1862; appointed Brigadier-General U. S. Volunteers, May 8, 1865; mustered out of service January 15, 1866. His regiment rendezvoused at Brattleboro, and left the State on the 7th of September, 1862. On arrival at Washington, it was distributed among the fortifications around the city, Col. Warner's headquarters being at Fort Lincoln. His command remained in the defenses of Washington until the opening of the campaign in 1864, when the regiment was ordered to join the Army of the Potomac, and was assigned to the Old Vermont Brigade, (Second Brigade, Second Division, Sixth Army Corps), and from this time forward served in the Army of the Potomac, participating in all the battles of the Sixth Corps. Col. Warner was severely wounded at the battle of Spottsylvania Court House, on the morning of May 18, 1864, but kept in the field throughout the day. As Colonel he commanded the First Brigade, Second Division, Sixth Corps, from the 21st of September, and later as Brig.-Gen. until May, 1865, when the corps was disorganized. General Warner received many brevets, Major, Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel, March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious service during the war. Bvt. Brig.-Gen. of Volunteers, August 1, 1864, for gallant and meritorious service in the battle of Spottsylvania Court House, and at the battles of Winchester, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek, Va.; Bvt. Brig.-Gen. U. S. Army, April 9th, 1865, for gallant and meritorious service in the field during the war. Resigned February 13, 1866. General Warner was appointed to command of the 11th Vt. Regiment from the United States Army, and his record as a regular officer will be found in the list of Vermonters who served in the regular army.

STEPHEN THOMAS,

Brigadier-General United States Volunteers.

Commissioned Colonel Eighth Vermont Infantry November 12, 1861; wounded May 27, 1863; appointed Brigadier-General of Volunteers February 1, 1865; mustered out of the United States service August 24, 1865. In April, 1861. Stephen Thomas represented the town of West Fairlee at the special session of the Legislature, which was called to consider what part the State would take in the War of the Rebellion, already begun. He was a member of the committee having under consideration a bill for raising half a million dollars toward the support of our troops in the field. He was the last man of the committee to speak, and urged that the bill be amended to read one million dollars, adding: "Until this rebellion shall be put down. I have no friends to reward and no enemies to punish, and I trust that the whole strength and power of Vermont, both of men and money, will be put into the field to sustain the government."

Stephen Thomas commenced recruiting the Eighth Regiment and two batteries of light artillery, at the expense of the United States Government, on January 21, 1862. When he had the organization filled to the maximum number the Government objected to mustering it into service until all the bills for recruiting, uniforming and equipping were paid. This, by the aid of Quartermaster Fred E. Smith, was done on February 19, 1862.

On March 4, 1862, the Eighth Vermont regiment and the First Vermont Light Battery left Brattleboro for the Department of the South, and reported to Brigadier-General Phelps at Ship Island, in the Gulf of Mexico, on April 5.

It is of historical value to note that the first regiment of colored troops raised for the United States service, and composed of the free colored men of New Orleans, reported for duty to Colonel Stephen Thomas of the Eighth Vermont, October 24, 1862, to go upon an expedition with his own regiment into Western Louisiana. After the capture of New Orleans, Colonel Thomas had command of all the troops on the west bank of the Mississippi.

Colonel Thomas was present in all the important engagements in which the Eighth Vermont participated. He performed signal service at the battle of the Cotton, January 14, 1863, where, with the Eighth, he crossed the Bayou Teche and cleaned the rifle pits of the enemy, saving the Union fleet.

At Bisland, La., April 12, 1863, he was with his regiment in the first line of battle, supporting the artillery and under a severe artillery fire. During the day he alone kept upon his horse, although frequently urged to dismount.

He commanded a brigade during the siege of Port Hudson, which lasted forty-four days. On May 27, in the first assault upon the enemy's works, the Union forces moved in three lines of battle, Colonel Thomas' brigade being the third. The two preceding brigades being broken up, Colonel Thomas took the advance, and with a brilliant charge drove the enemy inside the main works, and secured the position, which they held during the remainder of the siege. In this assault Colonel Thomas was wounded, and lost two of his four staff officers. He was also prominent in the night assault on June 10, 1863, in which his regiment suffered severely.

Colonel Thomas, at the battle of Opequan, Va., September 19, 1864, was commended in general orders for his services, he having, at a critical time in the battle, upon his own responsibility, ordered a charge which did much to break the enemy's center.

He was engaged in the battle of Fisher's Hill, September 22, 1864, and in the battle of Cedar Creek, October 19, 1864. When Early surprised the Union forces, his brigade was ordered to cross the pike and stem the rebel advance until our lines could be re-formed, and held the position until his brigade was nearly annihilated. He was also prominent in the advance during the afternoon, when Sheridan resumed command of the army and turned the defeat of the morning into a victory in the evening. In this engagement Colonel Thomas lost a horse, shot from under him. For his brave and valiant services Colonel Thomas was made Brigadier-General of Volunteers, and in the spring of 1865 was assigned to the command of a brigade of New York, Indiana and Ohio regiments, in General Hancock's corps.

UNASSIGNED RECRUITS.

THE three years Vermont regiments had sent them, late in the war, a large number of drafted or newly enlisted men who never reached them or joined any organization, and whose names do not appear on the muster rolls of any company. They were recruits, many of whom enlisted under assumed names for the sole purpose of receiving large town and government bounties, with no intention of joining any command, and who deserted on the first opportunity offered.

This list should not be confounded with that of the Unassigned Recruits on pages 670-675, whose records show death in the service or honorable discharge, these names having been dropped from that list, as they deserted almost immediately. The names of these deserters will not appear in the Index.

UNACCOUNTED FOR.

The following is the number of men still unaccounted for from each organization: Second regiment, 5; Third, 9; Fourth, 5; Fifth, 8; sixth, 6; Cavalry, 7; Seventh, 1; Ninth, 4; Tenth, 5; Eleventh, 4; Seventeenth, 6; Sharpshooters, 1; Unassigned, 20; total, 81.

The Adjutant-General's report for 1866 gives seventy-five men not finally accounted for; we account for seven of these. The increase in the number unaccounted for is due to the fact that some of the men who were captured by the enemy and never heard from, and who were reported by General Washburn as deserters, are recorded in this roster as unaccounted for. Careful scrutiny of the Confederate prison records shows that the latter is, in all probability, the proper designation. In several instances we have found that prisoners were paroled a day or two before they died; others who never have been heard from must have died, and the supposition is that they occupy unknown graves in national cemeteries near rebel prisons.
