Tokio Paper Says Cabinet Approves American List in Principle; Home Problems Keep Lloyd George Busy

BRITISHERS TO BE CHOSEN

Tokio, Oct. 1.—The Japanese Cabinet, after lengthy deliberation yesterday, decided in principle, according to The Asahi Shimbun, to accept the American suggestions as to the agenda for the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and Far Eastern questions.

London, Oct. 1.—Premier Lloyd George will return to London October 5 to attend a Cabinet meeting the following day at which the question of the British representation at the Washington conference on limitation of armaments will be considered.

A semi-official statement to-day says the Premier has all along been anxious to go to Washington, but that the problems of Ireland and unemployment make it exceedingly doubtful whether he will be able to go. In any case, the statement says, it is unlikely that he could leave for some time to come and that at the utmost his absence from Great Britain would be comparatively short.

Reports Asked. Geneva, Oct. 1.—The report of the committee of the League of Nations on reduction of armaments was presented to the Assembly of the League this afternoon, by Lord Robert Cecil. The report recommends that the various governments be asked to furnish statistics of their armaments and appropriations for war materials, military, naval and aerial, for the years from 1912 to 1921, with a compilation of their laws and parliamentary debates relating to armaments.

URGENT CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES IN INDIA

Views Expressed by Members of Assembly Wider Powers of Self-government Desired

London, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press Cable)—A Reuter dispatch from Simla, where the Indian Legislature is now meeting, says that the completed Assembly Bill, says there is eagerness on the part of a section of the population to secure full dominion self-government. The bill advanced by the Assembly devoting a full day to discussion of a motion by a non-official Bengal member favoring complete provincial autonomy, early extension of responsibility by the Central Government and conferring of full dominion self-government beginning with the fourth term of the Legislative Assembly in 1925.

An amendment to the motion moved by a Bombay member referring the matter to a committee was rejected after a long debate in which Government members pointed out that any further measure of political advance must be decided by the Secretary of State for India and Parliament.

Poor Argument. Hon. W. M. Bailey, finance member of the Governor-General's Council, referred to insinuations that had been made during the debate and declared that the threat that India would become a second Ireland was a poor argument for constitutional advance.

Eventually the Government undertook to request the Viceroy, Earl Reading, to convey to the Secretary of State for India the view of the Legislative Assembly that the political progress of India warranted a re-examination and revision of the constitution earlier than 1925, the date laid down by the Government of India Act.

This New Year is a Day of Memorial of a "Day of Reckoning," on which the Jew is reminded of his duty and responsibility as a citizen and a member of the human family.

HOPE GROWS FOR IRISH SETTLEMENT

British Await Outcome of Oct. 11 Conference Comments on Situation Made by Papers

London, Oct. 1.—Great Britain was to-day filled with the hope that a settlement of the Irish problem would follow the meeting of British Cabinet members and the representatives of the Sinn Fein in this city on October 11. The prompt reply of Eamonn De Valera accepting Premier Lloyd George's invitation to the conference and the conciliatory tone of the latest exchanges between London and Dublin seemed to promise that out of the conference would come an agreement which would solve a problem which has proved a stumbling block to the ablest statesmen of the British nation.

Premier Praised. London newspapers to-day did not assume that a settlement was certain and they recognized the way to peace might be long and difficult but hope abounded, even if complete confidence was lacking. Premier Lloyd George received praise in some quarters for his skill and patience in handling the troublesome preliminaries, but there was hope expressed that his ability in negotiations would be equal to the task of reconciliation.

Discussing the difficulties ahead, The London Times deprecated the "dominion" formula as a formula to which the agreement must conform. Membership. Belfast, Oct. 1.—Dealing with the Irish problem in London, The Northern Whig, Unionist, scouts the idea that Britain will give way on the question of an Irish republic. It says: "The only way to peace is by acceptance of membership in the Empire. Here we find a barrier in explicit statements that the demand for complete independence must be insisted upon. 'Voluntary' assent to the inclusion of Ireland in the British Empire means the end of Sinn Feinism. We may hope this road will be the one that will be followed. It is rational to denounce everyone who ventures to hint a doubt regarding the possibility of its realization."

Give and Take

Cork, Oct. 1.—Concessions by both sides at the conference to be held in London October 11 will do much to facilitate the reaching of an agreement making for peace in Ireland, The Cork Examiner said this morning in commenting upon the latest exchange of notes between London and Dublin. "The Irish people," the newspaper added, "are genuinely sincere in their desire for accommodation of the differences which must be fairly adjusted if conflict is to be ended and honorable peace achieved. They are confident in the belief that the conference will supply a means by which the desired end may be attained, and while aware there are grave difficulties, they are convinced that with the aid of the various quarters with these difficulties, a give-and-take policy will smooth the way and dissolve them."

NO SELECTION FOR NAAMMO

Liberals Will Choose Candidate Later

Duncan, Oct. 1.—It is not probable that the Liberal convention in session here to-day will select a candidate for the Naammo riding, the consensus of opinion being that it will be wisest to give the various districts in the constituency ample time in which to take into consideration the various possibilities in the field. Seventy-five delegates attended and as this is the first meeting held by the Liberals since July, 1919, to discuss the choice of a candidate for a Federal riding, a convention assumed the character of a reorganization meeting.

LEAGUE DEALS WITH ARTICLE TEN

Doherty Wishes Clause Dropped From Covenant Brings Subject Before Committee Again To-day

Geneva, Oct. 1.—C. J. Doherty, Canadian representative in the League of Nations Assembly, has reduced to a minimum the chances of final rejection at this session of the Assembly of his amendment which would eliminate Article 10 from the covenant of the League of Nations. The substitute committee which had this matter in hand had decided upon rejection and adopted an interpretative resolution to the effect that Article 10 was never intended to perpetuate geographical and political divisions as they now exist, but merely as a safeguard against external aggression.

Strong Reasons. Not satisfied with this position, Mr. Doherty, at a hearing before the full committee yesterday afternoon, gave an exhaustive argument that greatly impressed the committee. It was then suggested that the interpretative resolution be dropped, that Mr. Doherty's amendment stand on the programme and that the Assembly be asked again to refer the matter for investigation, with a report to the next Assembly.

Mr. Doherty was not ready to agree to this procedure and asked permission to think it over until to-day, when the committee would again consider the question.

RUSSIAN RELIEF WAS DEBATED

World League Assembly Heard Spirited Speeches

Geneva, Sept. 30.—Charges that Bolshevism is responsible for the Russian famine, and counter-charges that political considerations are the cause of the hesitation on the part of the governments to provide for the feeding of the starving Russians, were the outstanding features of a violent debate in the League of Nations Assembly to-day.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, High Commissioner of the International Committee for Russian Relief, who made the counter-charges, was upheld in his efforts, however, and a paragraph was introduced into the committee report expressing confidence in him and in the prospect of his success. As adopted, the committee's report leaves the governmental action with reference to Russian relief to be decided by the Brussels conference, while appealing to private charity and welfare organizations generally for aid in Russia.

Nansen, keeping his word that he would carry the fight for an appeal by the Assembly to the governments from the committee to the floor of the Assembly, repeated his charges that the present war in league with the campaign of falsehood to prevent the success of his work. He defended his agreement with the Bolsheviks, declaring that Herbert Hoover, also had been obliged to accept the co-operation of the Soviets.

FIRE LOSSES IN CANADA DISCUSSED

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—Canada's fire losses were three times as heavy per head as Great Britain's, and premiums here cost five times as much as in the Old Land. The cost of these premiums would come down in Canada in the exact ratio that the society was successful in its work, Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance, told the members of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association at a luncheon here yesterday.

There were several very bad fallacies existing to-day, Sir Henry said, one was that if fire was caused by insurance, there was consequently no loss. Everything destroyed by fire was a loss. Another fallacy was that insurance companies had hoards of wealth to meet losses. Fire losses in Canada last year were some $30,000,000, or $3 per head. There had been far too many forests destroyed, Canada would have been much wealthier if these fires, many of them started through carelessness, had not been caused.

Among the resolutions adopted was one declaring that it was expedient to set up an impartial committee to be appointed by the chairman and secretary to examine, test and report upon the various kinds of roof-coverings ordinarily sold in Canada.

FIRE EXPLOSION CAUSE OF DEATH

Ericksdale, Man., Oct. 1.—Frank Adams, a returned soldier, was killed here yesterday when a soda water tank, which exploded in a drug store destroyed by fire, was hurled across the street into the shop where Adams was working, tearing open his side. The fire destroyed the Travelers' Hotel and the drug store and poolroom adjoining it.

CANTEEN MONEY TO BUILD CLUBS IS SUGGESTION

Winnipeg, Oct. 1.—Distribution of canteen funds among Canadian municipalities to finance the erection of clubrooms for all ex-service men irrespective of the organization to which they belong is recommended in a resolution passed by the St. James Branch of the G. W. V. A. In order to perpetuate these clubs, it is also suggested in the resolution that descendants of all ex-service men would be eligible for membership. The Manitoba command will be asked to take action on the resolution at an early date.

ROBBERS FAILED.

Smithville, Ont., Oct. 1.—An unsuccessful attempt was made yesterday morning to blow up the safe of the Royal Bank here. All the robbers got was sixty cents in American silver from the cash drawer.

TWO PROVINCES GAINED POPULATION

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—During the last ten years the population of New Brunswick has increased by 10.29 per cent, and that of Nova Scotia by 6.55 per cent; that of Prince Edward Island has decreased in the same period by 5.54 per cent. The figures for the three provinces as announced by the Census Branch yesterday afternoon are:

New Brunswick, 1921, 388,992; 1911, 351,859.
Nova Scotia, 1921, 524,579; 1911, 492,338.
Prince Edward Island, 1921, 89,536; 1911, 94,722.

The above are the first provincial results of the census yet announced.

AGED MANITOBA FARMER MURDERED

Winnipeg, Oct. 1.—George Martindale, an old settler living alone on his homestead, a mile east of Sprague, was found dead yesterday by neighbors in front of his stable with a gash in the top of his head. Martindale was known to have carried a large sum of money on his person, and when the body was discovered it was found the money was missing, the pockets of his clothes having been ripped away. Provincial police are working on the case, but have no clue as yet.

SUPPORT MEIGHEN.

Regina, Oct. 1.—Supporters of the Meighen Government created a Provincial political organization under the name of the National Liberal and Conservative Party of Saskatchewan at a convention attended by some 250 to 300 people here yesterday.

It was announced that candidates would be placed in the field in every constituency in the Province. The next executive meeting is to be held in Saskatoon October 15, when details of the organization will be completed.

SHARP FIGHTING IN MOROCCO

Moorish Tribesmen Defeated by Spanish Troops

Mellilla, Sept. 30.—An aviation squadron dropped 200 bombs on the positions of the Moors during the fighting at Tizna. Spanish artillery caused enormous damage, the greater part of the enemy's positions being destroyed.

The Mellilla batteries continued their bombardment of the positions of the Moors. The fighting at Tizna is regarded as the fiercest in which the Spanish expeditionary force has yet been engaged.

The Spaniards were compelled to put 15,000 men into the line. These resolutely fought their way through Tizna, preventing an attempt by the Moors to surround the town.

The Spanish losses admittedly were severe, but the Moors must have been badly defeated, as they failed to harass the Spanish retreat, which they invariably do.

CAPE BRETON COAL MINERS NEED MORE WORK

Sydney, N. S., Sept. 30.—That conditions in the Cape Breton coal fields are the worst in years and likely to remain so for some time, was the statement of J. B. McLachlan, the District 25, addressing miners of Jubilee Colliery, Sydney Mines, last night.

Jubilee men lately have been working only one or two days a week. McLachlan assured them that the condition is general and due to the light demand for coal.

SAY $240,000,000 COULD BE SAVED

New York, Oct. 1.—Annual savings of forty per cent, or about $240,000,000, could be made in the men's ready-made clothing industry of the United States, declared a report issued by the American Engineering Council's committee on elimination of waste in industry, made public yesterday. Seasonal shutdowns, industrial discord, the "sell-then-make" policy, lack of standardization of appliances, conditions and methods and inefficient planning were given as the chief sources of waste.

What seems to be needed, asserted the committee, is that each manufacturer limit the number of models and clothes styles, bridge the slack and adopt vigorous, positive selling methods backed up by effective national advertising.

After providing for all expenses and for income tax, the net profits transferred to surplus are shown to have been $2,121,501.11, in addition to which must be added the sum of $231,127.36, representing a balance remaining in the 1920 business profits tax reserve, making a total addition to surplus account for the year of $2,352,628.47.

The output during the year was 46,832 motor cars and 3,063 tractors, compared with 55,616 motor cars and 2,355 tractors during the previous year.

HEAVY TRADING LOSSES DISCLOSED

English and Scottish Co-operative Groups Suffer

London, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Sensational disclosures have been made regarding the Co-operative Wholesale Societies' heavy trading losses. A loss of approximately £1,000,000 is shown to have been incurred in connection with a subsidiary company financed jointly by the English and Scottish societies for the purpose of cultivating tea and rubber in India and Ceylon. The first rubber yielded a profit, but lately values have fallen considerably.

Whatever the ultimate loss, the English Society bears three-fourths and the Scottish society one-fourth.

The only exception made was the Irish relief committee, whose drive for funds was practically closed.

PRINCESS

"Potash and Perlmutter" is a really wonderful comedy full of human interest, and so well written it is bound to appeal to all. The capable Mildred Page Players are handling it in the same excellent manner that has characterized all their offerings since their first appearance here well over a year ago. Byron Aldenn and Harry Leeland are "Potash and Perlmutter," and are going the full limit in clever characterization and the able handling of their difficult parts is another proof of the ability of both.
Miss Page is Ruth Goldman, the designer for "Potash and Perlmutter," and appears in some dainty gowns. Miss Moore, Miss Dean and Miss Dumbleton are all doing good work, and Miss Dooley is as usual charming. The rest of the cast is splendid, and all together the whole offering is decidedly good.
Next week will be an concoction entitled, "As We Are," with a regular vaudeville show as the feature of the production. "As We Are" will open next Wednesday night.
"Potash and Perlmutter" will be presented at 8 to-night.

COLUMBIA

Jalousy, gossip, ingratitude and selfishness of fair-weather friends combine their evil forces to build up starting situations in "Poor Dear Margaret Kirby"—the Selznick feature, which is at the Columbia Theatre. Elaine Hammerstein is starred in this picture, and the role is one which is peculiarly suited to her talents. A remarkably strong cast appears in "Poor Dear Margaret Kirby." Among others are William Davidson, playing the leading male role, and who recently completed a similar role in "You Can't Kill Love," a Selznick special; Ellen Cassidy, former beauty of the famous Follies; Helen Lindroth, one of the best

LAWRENCE D'ORSAY

HERE ON MONDAY

Popular Actor Will Appear Here Two Days

It is not what is said, but how one says it, applied with special force in the case of Lawrence D'Orsay, that whimsical painter of British lords as the burlesque sees them, who is coming here in his newest and funniest comedy, which will open at the Royal Victoria Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, October 3 and 4. Give Mr. D'Orsay the ordinary, every-day things to say, and you will laugh at his natural self, and make him himself fantastic. There is a good story told which emphasizes this point. When

VARIETY

Dorothy Dalton is back in the role of a daughter of the great Northwest, the type of character that suited her so well in her greatest success, "The Flame of the Yukon," in which she starred three years ago. In her return she says she is happier than she has been for some time. As Colette Brisson, daughter of a French-Canadian miner, in "The Idol of the North," a story of the Canadian Northwest, Miss Dalton gives a character delineation which is bound to make this super-picture one of the best things she has done for Paramount. It will be shown at the Variety Theatre to-day for the last time. "It is like returning home after a long journey," exclaimed Miss Dalton recently. "I always have liked western pictures which give you so much freedom, and I am glad to be able to do a story like 'The Idol of the North.' It is the first of its kind I have done since 'The Flame of the Yukon.'"

ROYAL VICTORIA

To-night marks the conclusion of the sensational run of "Peck's Bad Boy," starring Jackie Coogan, at the Royal Victoria Theatre, where this delightful First National attraction has been playing all week to enormous crowds. The popularity enjoyed by this splendid comedy of boyhood days, with the six-year-old screen favorite in the title role and with the sparkling subtleties of Irvin Cobb, has seldom if ever been equaled by any other production shown here. Certainly Jackie has been given a worthy vehicle in "Peck's Bad Boy" as a successor to "The Kid," and to judge from the attendance the youngster has gained many new followers.
Three good short subjects are also shown on the same programme, "Springland in Zoeland," a Bray Pictograph; "Lonesome Pup," a Bruce Scenic, and a two reel special Christie comedy entitled "Red Hot Love." Master Nesbitt, Victoria's boy singer, has been given a special engagement and will no doubt please in the songs that he renders.

DOMINION

Unique in the annals of screen entertainment is Cecil B. DeMille's production "The Affairs of Anatol," a Paramount picture which comes to the Dominion Theatre next Monday. Unique from the point of view of cast, story, treatment and magnificence, Jennie Macpherson wrote the photoplay, which was suggested by Arthur Schnitzler's play. Alvin Wyckoff and Karl Struss, two photographic experts, did the camera work. The cast is extraordinary. Here is

PREPARE FOR MUSICAL SEASON

Some Celebrated Artists Will Come to Victoria

(By George J. Dyke.)

Now that the Summer is past with the fall of the leaf attention turns in the direction of the coming Winter evenings, and what we are going to do with them. We begin to think perhaps, whether or not we are to be favored with a visit of some of the greatest singers and instrumentalists on the world's platform, or whether it will be our lot to hear some at least of the best known musical "attractions." All these are equally important to both teacher and student, and entertainingly interesting to the average man or woman living in the same place under the same conditions.

Students' thoughts for their progress and pocket ought at all times to be made desirous of obtaining proficiency in some instrument or are thinking of engaging themselves in the realm of song, have already begun to look about for competent teachers and in this respect he it said that in Victoria there is to be found as gifted a group of musicians as are located in any city in the west. This city, too, has now arrived at the point where it can rank as a musical centre, and can proudly point to the eminent musical traditions of the past.

Some celebrated artists now on tour, are coming this way, and while not possessing the privileges of a closer relationship, with the larger cities, there will be enough to engage the interest, and satisfy the wishes of a music loving community.

Band Concerts.

The activities of the Ladies' Musical Club already announced will be many, and a series of twenty evening band concerts have been promulgated and arranged for by the G. W. V. A. band. The new Victoria Orchestral Society is meeting rapid and splendid headway, and as said on more than one occasion much excellent material is here with enthusiasm

CHANGES MADE IN AUSTRALIA HOUSE

Economy Measures at Commonwealth's London Office

London, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press Cable)—A dispatch from Melbourne to Reuter's Agency here says: Premier Hughes, in addressing a crowd gathered at the Town Hall to welcome him on his return from the Empire conference in London, referred to Australia House, the Commonwealth's London office located on the Strand. He said that he had been able to effect economies amounting to thousands of pounds in wages alone.
"The Premier said he had found included in the staff at Australia House many Australians who had been in London so long that they were more English than the English themselves. The atmosphere of the place, he said, was wrong. In the future no Australian staff commissioner would remain in England for a term longer than three years."

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES

If you have roaring, buzzing noises in your ears, are getting hard of hearing and fear Catarrh of the Deafness, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmit (double strength), and add to it 1 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should be open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrh trouble of the ears, is hard of hearing or has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

BRIDGE WORKERS' CLOTHING BURNED, AND HE LOST LIFE

Montreal, Oct. 1.—While Osood Method was working on the Victoria Bridge yesterday he stumbled over a 2,500-volt wire, which caused his clothing to catch fire. Method's garments happened to be saturated with oil and burned so fiercely that the fire was seen from the shore, and the Lambert brigade, thinking that the bridge was on fire, rushed to the scene in a body. When Method's clothes had been extinguished, he was taken to a hospital, where he died an hour later.

HOPES FOR PEACE.

After practically three months of an interesting interchange of political documents in which both parties to the controversy have succeeded in saying the same thing over and over again in different language the Sinn Fein leaders have agreed to meet the British Cabinet to explore the possibility of settling a question which has baffled the brains of British statescraft for more than a century.

EVENTS IN MALABAR.

It goes without saying that news from India which deals with the turbulent state of affairs in the Malabar district loses nothing of its color before it reaches the European distributing agencies and it is quite likely that Anglo-Indian experts are not so alarmed about the possibility of more serious consequences as we are at this distance from the scene of disorder.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Among the ambitious plans for developing aerial transportation is a project that will permit of an encirclement of the globe in seventeen days.

It is reported that the famous American aviator who established an altitude record the other day is ready to try the fifty thousand feet mark. These are the feats which bring the conquest of the air appreciably nearer.

Was man's ancestor a codfish? This is the intriguing theory that was suggested at the recent conference of the British Association at Edinburgh. Those who appreciate the verdict that life arose in the sea are at liberty to work out the answer.

In these days of uncertainty it is good to learn from an eminent British scientist that a "moderate multiple of 1,000,000,000 years is the possible and probable duration of the earth's crust as suitable for the habitation of human beings."

POLITICS Where Liberals Hit Hard. Friends Smart From Taxes. Ontario Great Battlefield. Farmers Have Bit in Teeth. Claim Fifty Ontario Seats. Campaign Funds—How Progressives Handle Them.

How the campaign issues appear to financial interests is summarized by The Financial Post of Toronto:

A close following of speeches and interviews, covering the last few months, by Mackenzie King and his lieutenants show that there is, happily, no radical difference between the Government and the Liberals on the tariff.

This has left the Liberals free to concentrate on the main weakness of the Government—high taxation due to mismanagement, extravagance, incapacity and a refusal to cut down what they had the chance to do so.

The Farmers have hastened to assure the country they are not Free Traders and Mr. Crerar is undoubtedly sincere in this but herein there is an element of danger, The Post also says.

The real farmers and workers are the backbone of conservatism in this country; but to the Farm-Labor Party have flocked, and will flock, all the worst elements in the community—skilled in agitation, smart sayings and misrepresentation—with ample funds.

It is quite possible that under this banner a very influential number may be elected.

"Everyone knows that the Meighen Government will make Ontario its central fighting grounds; its own forecasters admit that it will save only a remnant in the Eastern and Prairie Provinces," says a Toronto correspondent of The Manitoba Free Press.

The best strategists of the party hope for is that it will have a group in the next house sufficiently large to make a Farmer-Liberal Government impossible by a Conservative alliance with Liberal protectionists. Unless it can win a majority or plurality in Ontario it will have no cards to play.

The Government's plan of campaign in Ontario is indicated by the flying echoes of 1911. Frequent references to "Wood of Missouri" by its newspapers and candidates are a prelude to the anti-American chorus.

The loyalty cry in the townships and the protectionist cry in volume and vigor, but they will not succeed a second time.

The Free Press writer is backing the chances of the Farmer to sweep rural Ontario. He says: Members of Parliament, candidates and quinquages are dropping into the headquarters of the old parties from all sections of the Province with the same story: "The Farmers have the bit in their teeth."

The Farmers of Ontario in this election will pay little attention even to the serious arguments of Grits and Tories. Almost en masse they have gone over to the U. F. O. and will vote for its candidates.

How National Progressives are dealing with the campaign fund problem is told by The Saskatoon Star: The Progressives of each constituency will provide, in small individual subscriptions, the amount necessary to carry on the campaign, with a percentage for central organization work. They figure that if the supporters of the party are sufficiently interested to pay the expenses of a candidate they will be sufficiently interested to see that he is elected.

The result is that when the election is over no one has any strings on the successful candidate but the people of his constituency, whom he is elected to represent.

The Star says that the cost of conducting elections is usually beyond the means of a private member. To his assistance comes the central party organization, which in all past elections at least has been plentifully supplied with funds.

It does not mean much at the time, only the party effort to get all its candidates elected, but later the candidate finds that his independence was taken away from him before his election.

When he arrives at Ottawa, can he break away from a party that came to his aid in the election possible? the newspaper asks. He was elected to represent the people of his constituency, but the financial aid came from the party organization, and to that organization he is tied.

The better way, the infinitely better way from the standpoint of democratic government, is the way the Progressives have chosen, The Star declares.

A moving picture has been taken of the Meighen cabinet. And why not? It is a moving sight. And already "on its way"—Toronto Star.

THE HARBOR WORK. To the Editor.—It seems remarkable that in this era of enlightenment a few should still remain to whom the word knowledge means but little.

In your issue of yesterday you printed a letter from E. Coleman with reference to the local harbor improvements, in which this correspondent made "much ado about nothing" or, to be more exact, said a great deal about something of which he knew nothing.

The engineers in charge of this work for the Dominion Department of Public Works are conceded to be practical men, and it is to them the Foreman must hold himself responsible for the quantity and quality of work produced on this undertaking.

Does it not seem practical to suppose these men would take action were the work other than satisfactory. It is too bad that Mr. Coleman was not heard of before the work was started. Just stop and consider the amount of money which could have been saved by his efficient methods, which, according to himself, must be far superior to those of the trained engineers in charge of the work for the Public Works Department at the present time.

I have no reason to disbelieve the fact that "the rock plant foreman" was a "laborer" on his fact farm in England, but he must have been only a boy at the time. No doubt if we go back still further we may discover that at one time he was a babe in arms.

It so happens that the writer has known Mr. Fagg, the foreman, for some time, and also had the pleasure of working alongside him for quite a while and found him to be not only a thoroughly practical man in all his undertakings, but also a gentleman of the highest order.

In addition to this it may be well to state that the writer has also personally seen and read a number of copies of the reference which Mr. Fagg has received from engineers with whom he has been engaged on work of a submarine nature.

One would presume that by the "gas engine for blowing out the boiler tubes," your correspondent refers to the gas engine of the compressor plant used for operating two of the three drills on the plant. This may enlighten Mr. Coleman as to why he has been able to discern steam escaping from one drill, the steam one, as compressed air does not condense like steam when it strikes the atmosphere. Does he not know that steam boiler equipment cannot be operated in the Province without a certified engineer in charge. It is the usual practice also, I believe, to clean tubes once a week on steam boilers used on regular shift. Where a boiler is used twenty-four hours a day, does it not seem reasonable to clean tubes twice a week?

With reference to the statement, "why does a diver need to go down for a last look?" I presume your correspondent has seen a diver the

ASKS NON-CHURCH GOING PEOPLE TO EXPLAIN REASONS In the course of an open letter to the "non-church folks" of Nanaimo, Rev. W. P. Ewing, pastor of Wallace Street Methodist Church, said: "The writer, who has recently come to take charge of one of Nanaimo's churches, feel keenly the need of what he would call the misunderstanding that causes the breach between the church and the masses of men, who are either indifferent or hostile to the church. "In order that we may understand one another better I am going to invite some of those who do not go to church, to put their reasons on paper and send them to 399 Franklin Street, and the writer will endeavor to deal with them at some public service in the near future. No names will be mentioned where letters are signed. IS LITTLE KNOWN PART OF PROVINCE

Visitor Has Interests in the Stikine District

Those residents of Northern British Columbia who recently supported the separation of the North from the South of this vast province probably are unaware that nearly sixty years ago there was a separate territory created by the Imperial authorities which would comprise roughly the area proposed to be withdrawn from the present limits of the province.

The territory of Stikine, as constituted in the sixties, comprised the area bounded by the Finlay branch of the Peace River, and the boundary of British Columbia on the south, the first parallel of latitude on the north (which would take in part of what is now the Yukon), the Russian possessions on the West, and the 125th meridian of longitude on the east.

"A Neglected District." Little or no attention has ever been paid to the Stikine district, yet all around progress and civilization are crowding in and ever narrowing its circle. In this district lies the hitherto unexplored West with its mineralized mountains on a proven contact belt with rivers easy to ascend intersecting hills, giving the prospector every advantage and encouragement.

As is now generally admitted, a line drawn from the head of Port-river boats have gone up on high water and can do so again. From here on moose trails are used and one goes over flat lava beds covered with bull pine and further up very good well worn moose trails. There are four streams coming in on the left hand side, on the side of the Takut River, and there are two large streams emptying on the right hand side—in the distance, from the mouth to the head of this can-

Chunks of Copper Here. All these stream beds are literally covered with "float," in fact, on one stream the experiment was tried of trying to walk across without stepping on "float," and it was found impossible. Huge chunks of chalcocite and all of its associate minerals were found, while traces of silver ore were met with often. Owing to the shortness in length of these streams and the steep hillsides, portant and opened up that a break through to the coast simply must take place, and then this natural pass from the coast to the inside will come into its own and will then fully reimburse those that may have the fortune and courage to stay with this new unexplored district.

A Good Grade. Nowhere along the coast is there such a grade to the inside as can be found here, and from where the prospector will leave his river boat to the bottom end of the first canyon to the canyon's upper end there are only two or three gravel banks that one could call a steep trail for horses. All the rest of the valley is composed of a flat lava flow filling the valley from side to side.

This district is reached by flat-bottomed river polling boats, generally twenty or so feet long, or a small light draught boat with a twelve horse power engine will make the journey to the canyon's mouth with ease and no trouble to a fairly experienced river man. Stikine their ledges are not difficult to locate and should draw more attention than is at present given them. The Takut Canyon is a long, boxed affair, having cut its own way down deep on the western edge of the lava valley adjacent to the country rock of the mountains. The canyon has many short angle turns, and at high water it is a most fascinating and hellish sight. Water power here is in excess of the utmost uses to which same could ever be applied. The trail now used, which is simply a moose trail, and requires swamping and straightening out, runs along the foothills on the eastern edge of the valley, owing to the impossibility of following the canyon's sides, which would be both dangerous and difficult, and which is a very good place to keep away from.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy. Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get such real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes. Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either the plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

Heavy Copper Stocks. Surplus copper stocks in the United States are estimated by experts of the U. S. Geological Survey at between 750,000,000 and 1,250,000,000 pounds. The survey gives little credence to reports that the great surplus remaining after the war has been entirely disposed of. An appreciable reduction in stock of blister copper has been noted recently, but only a comparatively slight reduction in refined copper, it is said, and the surplus is estimated to be sufficient to supply domestic consumption at the present rate for at least six months, and possibly a year.

Oil Shale in the West. Recent investigations by the United States Geological Survey are held by its experts to indicate that in the Rocky mountain states there are enormous quantities of oil shales which can be made to yield hydrocarbon oils to a much greater extent than we can hope to obtain from our oil wells. "The oil shales of our country," says the report, "contain enormous quantities of oil, but large amounts of money will have to be invested before the oil-shale industry becomes of commercial importance. Estimates by various engineers of the value of a complete retorting plant, handling 1,000 tons daily, are between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000."

THE TORTURE OF INDIGESTION

Thousands Made Miserable By This Trouble

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Relieves It

What is indigestion and what causes it? As you know, solid food must be changed into a liquid by the stomach before it can be taken up as nourishment by the blood. The stomach acts as a churn. It is covered by a strong, muscular coat and lined with a soft, delicate membrane which secretes the Gastric Juice which digests or dissolves solid food.

When food enters the stomach, the muscular coat squeezes and presses the food from end to end, or churns it, with the gastric juice to dissolve or digest it. But—if the stomach muscles are weak—or if the dissolving fluid is poor or insufficient—then food cannot be digested properly and you have indigestion.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the most wonderful medicine in the world for strengthening the stomach muscles and providing an abundance of pure, full-strength dissolving fluid to completely digest every meal.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" does this because it keeps the kidneys active, the bowels regular and the blood pure, which insures pure Gastric Juice.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" will correct your Indigestion or Dyspepsia and enable you to enjoy every meal. Try it.

On the way to the office of his publishers one crisp Fall morning James Whitcomb Riley met an unusually large number of acquaintances who commented on his appearance and ally upon the fine weather. This unremitting applause amused him. When greeted at the office with "Nice day, Mr. Riley," he smiled broadly. "Yes," he agreed. "Yes, I've heard it very highly spoken of."

Nanaimo News.

Nanaimo, B. C., Sept. 30.—Percy H. Fraser and E. J. Lewis, representatives of the Vancouver Magnette Iron and Steel Smelting Company, of Vancouver, appeared before the Board of Trade members of the City Council and a number of the city's leading business men last night and informed the meeting of the possibility of their company installing a steel plant in Nanaimo in the near future. They stated that the ever-increasing demand on the market for such material necessitated the operation of a plant on the East Coast of the Island, they having in view the Departure Bay. The meeting, however, came to a close by the forming of an investigation committee who are to make investigations into the project and report at a meeting which is to be arranged in the near future.

A Nasty Accident.

Duncan, Sept. 30.—Dan Chapman, son of Davenport Chapman, Quamichan Lake, was the victim of a very nasty accident yesterday morning. He was at L. Solly's farm working the ensilage feeder and got his right hand caught in the cogs of the wheels. It was terribly mangled and was only saved from being torn right off by part of the machinery breaking. He was rushed to the King's Daughter's Hospital, Duncan, where Dr. Dykes attended him, but the hand is in a very serious condition at present.

Advisory Committee.

At the meeting held at Sahtlan last evening by Kenneth Duncan, M. P., for the purpose of electing two members from that district to his advisory committee, Mr. Boyer and T. Pauli were the representatives chosen. N. Evans acted as chairman and Mr. Duncan addressed the meeting, outlining the functions of the committee, and dealt with expected legislation. A delightful concert followed, those taking part were: Mrs. W. Dobson, Miss Daisy Savage, Miss C. Peterson and Messrs. Dick and Martinich. Miss Monk kindly gave pianoforte selections and, acted as accompanist at the conclusion of the concert, delicious refreshments were served. The Woman Hater
By RUBY M. AYRES

Author of "The One Who Forgot," "The Phantom Lover," "A Bachelor Husband," etc.

CHAPTER X.

"One likes to show the truth for the truth; that the woman was light is very true; but suppose she says—never mind that youth—What wrong have I done to you?"

Faversham reached London in the early hours of a pouring wet morning. He was tired and irritable, and as there was not a taxicab to be had he was forced to walk to his rooms. Greysen was up and a cheerful fire was burning.

"How did you know I should be on this train?" Faversham asked irritably. "I knew it was the only one, sir, as you did not come in the afternoon," the man answered.

He busied himself bringing coffee and breakfast. Miles kicked off his boots and sat down by the fire.

"Well, and now I'm here, what's the news?" he asked. "What's happened to Mr. Tranter?"

He asked the question casually, but his heart was heavy with dread. "Tranter had always been an excitable fool. He was just the sort of man to put a bullet through his brain."

Greysen began to pour out the coffee. "Mr. Tranter went down to Devonshire yesterday morning, sir," he said complacently.

"What?" Miles sat up stiffly, his hands grasping the chair-arms. "What the hell are you talking about?" he asked hoarsely.

Greysen changed color in puzzled confusion. "Mr. Tranter called in early yesterday morning, sir," he said, "very upset, he seemed. He said that he knew where you were. You and Mrs. Dundas, he said, begging your pardon."

"Well—go on!" "He talked a lot of nonsense, sir, about shooting you, and things like that. Very strange he seemed in his manner, and so I thought the best thing I could do was to wire you to come back. I was afraid what might happen if you and him were to meet, sir."

Faversham got to his feet slowly. His face was the color of ashes. "You damned fool! You've brought me back here, to save my precious skin, when all the time..." His self-control gave way. He cursed Greysen passionately from the depths of the despair that was clutching at his heart.

Tranter was down there in Devonshire with Lallie—Tranter in the frantic condition that Greysen had described.

For a moment Faversham went mad. How much did Tranter know? How much by the time had he told to Mrs. Dundas?

Faversham thought of his last glimpse of her. Of those tragic brown eyes above those red-lipped smiling lips, and he struck his forehead with his clenched hand.

"I've got a feeling that something horrid will happen if you go—that I shall never see you again..." That was what she had said, and all the time perhaps she had been right. Perhaps they had said their good bye... and she had not even kissed him.

"Oh, my God!" said Faversham dully. The own helplessness appalled him. What could he do, all these miles away, separated from her by a seven-hour journey. He could have killed Greysen in his rage, and despair. For he knew as he stood staring at that man's white, dumfounded face, that Fate had turned the tables on him once again with bitter irony, and that now it was too late to love Lallie Dundas with all his soul.

There was a chill wind blowing, and a grey, angry sea lashing the shore when Faversham got out of the train at the little Devonshire village late that afternoon. He looked haggard and unkempt. He had not eaten anything for twenty-four hours in spite of Greysen's frantic appeals. He had not once closed his eyes during the interminable journey back from London.

Greysen was with him. He had not the remotest idea in what way he had failed in his duty, but in spite of his master's savage wrath he had refused to be left behind in London. He followed close at his heels now as Miles almost ran up the street from the station.

The sunshine of the past week had gone; the little village looked entirely changed. Even the cottages seemed to have assumed a deserted aspect as Faversham strode up the tiny path and hammered at the door.

Nobody came, and after a moment of fevered impatience he beat on his wooden panel with his clenched fist.

In the next cottage a curtain was drawn curiously aside and a woman peered out. After staring for a moment, she came to the door and called which divided the low paling which divided the two houses.

"There's summat strange there," she said suspiciously. "But the maid's inside all right, if she chooses to open to you."

WITH A "Y.M. BLOKE" IN NORTHERN FRANCE

Rev. T. McConnell Will Give Lecture on Tuesday

Rev. T. A. McConnell, pastor of St. Columba Presbyterian Church, Oak Bay, Victoria, was one of the foremost figures in Y. M. C. A. work during the recent war.

Mr. McConnell left his pastorate in Ireland in June, 1917, to assume charge of the Y. M. C. A. at Pavreuil, France. Some months later he was appointed corps leader, in charge of all Y. M. C. A. work in the Fourth and Sixth Army Corps of the third army, commanded by the present Lord Byng, of Vimy, now Governor-General of Canada. Mr. McConnell, whose headquarters were at Bapaume, had charge of twenty-four huts. The Bapaume headquarters was terribly destroyed in the memorable retreat of March and April, 1918, when the Fifth Army suffered so terribly, and when every Y. M. C. A. hut in the Third and Fourth Armies was either destroyed or captured by the enemy.

Mr. McConnell is, therefore, well qualified to speak of "The experience of a Y. M. Bloke in France," which is the title he gives to his forthcoming lecture, Tuesday evening next, at St. Columba Church, Mitchell and Granite Streets, Oak Bay. He possesses a forceful and magnetic personality, and is an eloquent speaker. The lecture will be vividly illustrated by lantern slides, and an appropriate musical programme will be furnished.

234 MEMBERS TO BE ELECTED

How House of Commons is Made Up

Discussions of the coming Federal general elections are replete with references to redistribution and the Quebec "unit of representation" and points relating thereto. How is redistribution so-called Quebec unit of representation, and how does it affect representation from the other provinces?

First, let it be explained that representation in the House of Commons is based under the British North America Act on the population of the Province of Quebec. It is provided that Quebec shall have an unchanging representation of sixty-two members, and that each of the five members, and that each of the other provinces shall have a membership in the House bearing the same proportion as does its population to that of the Province of Quebec. With the taking of each decennial census the law requires that there be a redistribution of seats, and had the forthcoming general election been held until, say next Summer, that course would have been followed.

The unit of representation in the last Parliament, based on the Quebec 1911 population of 2,063,232, was roughly 234. Estimates made thus far as to the 1921 census have indicated that the unit of representation will be nearer the 40,000 mark. The Redistribution Act based on the 1911 census was passed in 1914. Previous to that time the House of Commons had consisted of 221 members. The 1914 act brought the number up to 234, distributed by provinces as follows: Alberta 12; British Columbia 13; Manitoba 15; New Brunswick 11; Nova Scotia 16; Ontario 82; Prince Edward Island 3; Quebec 65; Saskatchewan 16; and Yukon 1.

West Will Gain

The effect of the next Redistribution Bill, when passed, will be, it is expected, to decrease the Ontario and Maritime Province representation and add seats in the western provinces. No accurate forecast of the effects of redistribution can be made, however, until the census returns are officially completed and the population by province issued by the Census Commission.

Changes made by the 1914 Redistribution Act were: Nova Scotia: Antigonish absorbed into Guysborough; Richmond by Cape Breton and Digby by Antigonish.

New Brunswick: Restigouche and Madawaska united; Victoria, previously with Madawaska, joined to Carleton; Sunbury, which used to be with Queens, joined to York; King's and Queen's united to form a new constituency known as Royal; Albert which had been united with King's was united to St. John County. There is member for St. John City and one for "The City and Counties of St. John and Albert."

Quebec: Three new constituencies, Cartier, Outremont and St. Denis, created in Montreal district. Hull, Matane and Quebec South created separate constituencies. Charlevoix absorbed Montmorency; Montcalm absorbed L'Assomption; Two Mount-Ains absorbed Leval; St. Hyacinthe absorbed Rouville; Yaudreuil absorbed Soulanges; and Chateaugay and Huntingdon were united.

Ontario: East Grey, West Huron, East Kent, North Lanark, North Middlesex and Brockville disappeared. The two Northumberland were united. New constituencies were created known as Parkdale, West York and East York in Toronto district; Temiskaming and Port Arthur and Kenora.

Manitoba—Neepawa, Nelson and Springfield, new seats, were created and Winnipeg was given three seats instead of one.

Saskatchewan—New seats known as Kindersley, Last Mountain, Maple Creek, North Battleford, Swift Current and Weyburn were created. Alberta: Calgary and Edmonton each given two members instead of one. Two divisions known as Bow River and Battle River were created. British Columbia: New seats were created, known as Burrard, Skeena, Alberni and East Kootenay. Vancouver was given two members instead of one.

WEATHER MAN MAY GIVE YANKS FLAG

If Three Interferes With One of New York's Game They Win Pennant

Cleveland Admits Chances Slim, But Will Not Give Up Hope of Winning

Chicago, Oct. 1.—There was a possibility to-day that the weather will decide the American League pennant race.

Cleveland's Indians play the third of a four-game series with the White Sox after breaking even in the first two.

To win the pennant Cleveland must win both remaining games from the Sox, while New York must lose three remaining games. If rain interferes with one of the Yankees' games the New York club still wins the pennant even if it loses the other two.

Chances Slim. While admitting that their chances were slim, the Indians, 1920 world champions, to-day refused to give up hope of participating in another world series.

MAYOR DISCOURAGES CITY TO HAVE NO PRIVATE BILL AT COMING SESSION

Not Practicable for Unemployment Relief, He Thinks

"We can put our money into work which bring us greater value next winter."

That was what Mayor Porter had to say yesterday about the scheme to develop Elk Lake watershed area into an amusement centre and so relieve unemployment this winter.

"We all agree that we should make Elk Lake one of the great attractions of the Island," the Mayor stated, "but in the present situation, when we are so pressed financially, I feel that we could put our money into something more productive than this work as a measure to relieve unemployment."

"Again, the idea that we could go ahead with wood cutting at Elk Lake is not feasible, in my opinion. There is not sufficient wood on the Elk Lake area to make such a plan practicable."

"It is proposed, I understand, that individual citizens, desirous of doing their share to solve the unemployment situation, should send idle men out to Elk Lake to work on its development for a few days. This would hardly be satisfactory, I think. It would be found, I am sure, that few people would send men out there. The city itself would have to take hold of the project."

So far the civic authorities had made no definite preparations for coping with unemployment next winter, the Mayor said. Some form of wood cutting scheme, such as that adopted last winter, was contemplated, he explained.

CITY TO HAVE NO PRIVATE BILL AT COMING SESSION

But Will Urge Municipal Act Changes

Unless unexpected developments take place before the Provincial Legislature commences its Fall session October 18, the city will not bring a private bill before the House this year, it was made known at the City Hall to-day.

The only matters which the city will bring before the Legislature at its forthcoming session, it was explained to-day, are questions of province-wide effect. On this account they involve amendments to the Municipal Act and could not be introduced in the form of a private bill from any one city.

The two most important matters which City Solicitor H. S. Pringle will lay before the Legislature are the proposed amalgamation of City Council, School Board, Police Commission and Library Commission and the advisability of allowing British Columbia cities to tax church sites. These proposals will be brought before the Municipal Committee of the House because, if they were adopted, they would lead to amendments to the Municipal Act under which all municipalities, except Vancouver, are governed.

In proposing the taxation of church sites Victoria will have the other municipalities of the Province solidly behind it, the recent convention of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities having emphatically endorsed the city's stand against church site exemption.

While the amalgamation of all city spending bodies undoubtedly is favored by most municipal leaders in British Columbia, no definite opinion on the matter has been expressed by the municipalities as a whole.

SOLICITOR FILES DEFENCE IN CITY FLOODING ACTION

City Solicitor H. S. Pringle has filed his statement of defence in the damage suit brought against the corporation by Councillor E. G. Kingwell, of Saanich, who blames the city for the flooding of his Royal Oak farm. It is expected that the case will proceed soon.

During the last few weeks the Kingwell case has kept Mr. Pringle and City Engineer E. M. Preston busy during a great part of their time. The case involves complicated engineering evidence, so that Mr. Preston has been obliged to ascertain levels and other facts on land lying about Mr. Kingwell's farm and adjacent to Elk Lake. This has required much work and time.

POLLING PROCEEDS IN SAANICH TO-DAY

Good Turn Out of Voters Expected With Bright Weather

Polling in the municipality of Saanich to authorize the Council to borrow $150,000 for the Gordon Head water scheme is proceeding quietly to-day in all wards.

Early reports from the polling stations indicated a light vote, both of residents and city freeholders, but it is expected with the beautiful weather prevailing to-day a record poll for a money-by-law will be registered.

Victoria families who have several votes plan to exercise the franchise during the afternoon.

While many applications have been received for the use of the cars at the headquarters of the Gordon Head Water Committee, 659 Cormorant Street, the committee is glad to notice that many persons are walking to the polls, and so relieving the pressure, as well as securing a representative expression of opinion.

The first car was driven by Alexander Kersey, Kirkwood P. O., who was proceeding south on Quadra, while the latter was driven by G. E. Heal, North Saanich, and was going west on North Park Street. The Heal car capized after the crash.

CAPT. JANNEY WAS SENTENCED

Lethbridge, Oct. 1.—Captain E. L. Janney, whose forty-three day hunger strike in the Provincial jail here created a national sensation, was convicted yesterday on a charge of false pretences, namely, the cashing of a worthless cheque for $100, by Mr. Justice Ives, and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary at Prince Albert.

The judge stated that provided Janney's conduct in the penitentiary was exemplary, he would recommend parole.

Janney's defence was that discounted notes to his credit in the Marquis Street branch of the Union Bank, Ottawa, on which the cheque in question was drawn, had not been honored, thus depleting his account, and that he was without guilty intent.

Captain Janney was brought to the courthouse from the hospital in an ambulance and occupied a stretcher in the courtroom while the trial was in progress. He broke down after the sentence was pronounced. He was taken to Prince Albert yesterday afternoon, an officer of the Provincial Police and nurse accompanying him.

COMMISSION TO SIT IN OTTAWA

To Finish Money Exchange Investigation

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—It was announced to-day that the Clarkson Commission investigating alleged frauds in the Militia Department in connection with the exchanging of British money at par, will sit again in Ottawa early in October. From present appearances it is expected that that will be the final sitting of the Commission.

While in the West the Commission held hearings in Victoria and Vancouver. It is understood that the Commission's work on the Coast has tended to show that the alleged frauds have not reached anything like the extent which was originally feared.

Sale of British Made Goods—Commences Monday

Never in the history of merchandising have conditions called for more ability than during the past year. Our organization is ever ready with new ideas and new methods of store management which helps to keep our store an interesting place for the buying public.

Our success with the Canadian Manufacturers' Sale led us to the European markets, with the object of planning a similar one for the early Fall season, provided that enough goods could be purchased at low enough prices.

Our customers will be pleased to know of our success. One of the largest merchants and manufacturers in England, Rylands & Co., is reported to have reduced their stock, which is valued at £3,000,000 sterling, by £1,000,000 sterling. This is only one example of what has been going on in the United Kingdom for the past six months, and our representatives in England have taken advantage of these conditions and the result will be shown by the extraordinary bargains which will be offered during the month of October.

Your co-operation with us in making the Canadian Manufacturers' Unloading Sale a success has given us confidence in making these large preparations for Fall and we again ask you to assist us in our latest endeavor in placing new Fall goods before you at the lowest possible prices.

CONDITIONS IN CANADA

Manufacturing conditions in Canada are improving.

We lately have had wires from many of the leading manufacturers cancelling their prices of to-day on account of the advance in raw materials and a greater demand for goods.

We have, however, on account of conditions in England been able to purchase clothing at prices that will astonish you. This has been made possible only by Canadian manufacturers purchasing serges and woollens at very low prices in England and manufacturing them in Canada.

NOTICE—This Sale will commence on Monday, October 3rd, and will continue during the entire month.

SALE OF BRITISH MADE GOODS

COMMENCES MONDAY

ORCHESTRA

Never in the history of merchandising have conditions called for more ability than during the past year. Our organization is ever ready with new ideas and new methods of store management which helps to keep our store an interesting place for the buying public.

Our success with the Canadian Manufacturers' Sale led us to the European markets, with the object of planning a similar one for the early Fall season, provided that enough goods could be purchased at low enough prices.

Our customers will be pleased to know of our success. One of the largest merchants and manufacturers in England, Rylands & Co., is reported to have reduced their stock, which is valued at £3,000,000 sterling, by £1,000,000 sterling. This is only one example of what has been going on in the United Kingdom for the past six months, and our representatives in England have taken advantage of these conditions and the result will be shown by the extraordinary bargains which will be offered during the month of October.

Your co-operation with us in making the Canadian Manufacturers' Unloading Sale a success has given us confidence in making these large preparations for Fall and we again ask you to assist us in our latest endeavor in placing new Fall goods before you at the lowest possible prices.

CONDITIONS IN CANADA

Manufacturing conditions in Canada are improving.

We lately have had wires from many of the leading manufacturers cancelling their prices of to-day on account of the advance in raw materials and a greater demand for goods.

We have, however, on account of conditions in England been able to purchase clothing at prices that will astonish you. This has been made possible only by Canadian manufacturers purchasing serges and woollens at very low prices in England and manufacturing them in Canada.

NOTICE—This Sale will commence on Monday, October 3rd, and will continue during the entire month.

Bobby's Adventures In Swan-Land

By Geoffrey T. Butler—Copyright Applied for

S Bobby lay in his little bed that that night, his mind was on Swan-Land, and the more he thought of it the more he was determined to try and reach it.

"If the ice were only out of the river," he thought, "I could take a boat and sail away to the north and soon be there."

Next morning Bobby was up with the sun, and hastily eating his breakfast of bread and milk; he ran to the river bank as fast as his little legs could carry him; but the ice was still holding fast.

"Oh, bother!" cried Bobby, "I do wish the ice would go."

The words were scarcely spoken, when he heard a great rumbling sound and the ice began to move.

"Oh, goody, goody!" shouted the boy, as he clapped his hands and jumped for joy. "Now, I will soon be in Swan-Land."

Soon the river was running free of ice, with the exception of a stray cake or two that would float lazily by now and again. As Bobby stood on the shore and watched; a huge cake of ice came down the river. It was so large, in fact, that one might almost call it an iceberg. At this moment, a thought entered the boy's head. "If I could only get on that ice, I would soon be in Swan-Land." So stepping back a few paces, as the ice swung in towards the shore; Bobby ran and with a mighty jump landed safely upon the cake of ice. Away down the river he was carried, riding along on his icy boat. It was a glorious morning and the sun shone down from a clear sky. The little birds, who were just back from the south—for the little birds always go south to spend the winter—were singing in the bushes that lined the river. On the grassy slopes could be seen the little blue faces of the Pasque flower, or Arctic Crocus; that dear little flower that pops up its head as soon as the snow is off. Altogether, it was one of those mornings that make boys and girls feel glad that they are living.

For a few moments Bobby was frightened and began to wish that he had not been so foolish; but as the ice drifted swiftly down the river, he soon felt more at ease. He was sitting down to enjoy the scenery, when coming around a bend—What do you suppose he saw? Why, he saw Bunny, his little rabbit friend, scampering down the river bank as fast as his little legs could carry him, and close at his heels was a bad old fox.

"Run, Bunny, run! Shoo, fox, shoo!" shouted Bobby, standing up and waving his hands. This so frightened the fox that he stopped short to see where the sound was coming from, but the rabbit kept on running and on reaching the river he jumped for Bobbie's boat of ice; but being out of breath from his long run, he came short of his mark and fell into the water. Reaching out and catching hold of one long ear, Bobby pulled him onto his icy boat.

"You think you are smart," howled the fox from the bank.

"Just a little bit smarter than you," returned the boy.

"Well, I'll get that rabbit yet," snarled the fox, as he disappeared into the bushes.

"We will see about that," Bobby replied.

For a few minutes the rabbit and the boy rode along in silence. Bobby gazed in amazement at the dripping rabbit, who looked somewhat like a half drowned rat.

"Well," said the Bunny, after he had recovered sufficiently to get his breath, "where do you think you are going on this cake of ice?"

"Oh, I'm going to Swan-Land," Bobby replied.

"I can't see how you ever expect to get to Swan-Land in this way."

"Well," laughed Bobby, "don't the swans always fly to the north and does not this river flow to the north?"

"Yes, but because the river flows to the north, that does not necessarily mean that it goes to Swan-Land"; perhaps it will take us away out to the ocean, and then we will never get back home; or perhaps we may drift over some big falls and be lost."

"Oh, I hope not," said Bobby, "that would be terrible."

"However," replied the rabbit, "since you saved my life this morning, when I didn't obey my mother and the fox almost got me, I will stay with you, and let us hope that every thing will come out all right in the end."

"I am sure that it will," replied Bobby. On and on floated the great cake of ice; on and on carried Bobby and his rabbit friend, now around a bend, now over some rapids, then around another bend, for this river was a very crooked river, just like hundreds of giant S's placed one after the other, and for this reason it was called the river of many bends or Bend River.

The sun was no high up in the heavens and Bobby began to long for his dinner. "I wish I had something to eat," he said.

"So do I," replied the rabbit, "but what is the use of wishing, we are not likely to get any thing here, and besides you know the old saying, if wishes were horses beggars would ride."

"Well, if I don't get something soon, I will starve," sighed Bobby.

They were floating peacefully along now, the river being very broad at this point; but soon their ice boat seemed to quicken its pace and began to bob up and down like a cork. The banks began to narrow and steep cliffs appeared on either side, soon they were in a very narrow channel with perpendicular bluffs on both sides. The water rushed and roared, and the little ice boat bobbed and pitched; but may be some kind fairy watched over the little wanderers for they came safely through the canyon.

"That made me feel quite seasick," said the rabbit.

"The only thing that worries me," replied Bobby, "is that I want something to eat, and the only thing I can see is ice and water, and that is not very satisfying."

Just then the current carried the ice boat quite close to the shore, where the trees almost dipped their branches in the running water, and there—what do you think?—sat a little squirrel, eating his noonday meal of nuts. As the ice boat floated beneath him, he dropped a handful of nuts down to the two little voyagers, and Bobby caught them in his cap.

"Thank you, dear little squirrel," he called, as they floated on.

"Wasn't that nice of him?" he said to the Bunny; "but how are we going to crack them without any nut crackers?"

"I know," cried the Bunny, "I will crack them with my sharp teeth."

Story Lady Is Making Many Friends

AN innovation that is proving decidedly popular has been inaugurated on the fifth floor of Messrs. David Spencer, Ltd., where every Saturday afternoon the Story Lady gathers a flock of little ones around her and entertains them to a series of delightful tales. The idea is distinctly new and has proved, since its inception, one of the most popular features imaginable. Every Saturday afternoon bright and early many little ones gather and wait for the Story Lady to open the doors of the magic wonderland of adventures in Fairyland.

The narrator begins her tales at 3.30 p.m. and for two hours one could hear a pin drop among the excited assembly of little ones. Last Saturday the Story Lady read a portion of "The Times Children's Page" to the fair listeners and followed this up with some charming tales of Empire lore. The Story Lady has won all hearts by her understanding and her knowledge of what appeals to the little ones, and in addition is featuring all British stories, a very welcome antidote to the class of literature that is all too prone to be read on this continent.

That parents, too, are but children grown appeared last Saturday, for more than one parent remained behind to hear what the Story Lady had to say, and stayed as long as the child with evidently as keen an interest in the lore of Storyland. Parents are advised to interest themselves in this innovation, for Saturday afternoon is a very busy time, and here the children are left at a form of amusement that is as delightful as it is novel. The Story Lady has already endeared herself to the hearts of many, and is weekly adding to the coterie of her eager listeners.

Little Jean and His Grandmere

Here, on this continent, during the terrible days of the late war little was heard save the dry word of victories and losses, of valor and of death, but in France the whole country was very close to the actual fighting and many little French and Belgian boys and girls have been under fire. The following story is a true narrative of one little boy, who came through the war in one of the biggest battle-swept portions of the country.

Jean Locoite was a little lad of some eleven years, and lived with his grandmere in a little cottage just outside the city of Ypres, which, as you know was the scene of very heavy bombardments and much heavy fighting for a period of nearly four years. Jean and his grandmere had moved to that vicinity just before the city of Lille fell into the hands of the Germans, and was the sole survivor of his own family, for his mother and two sisters had been killed by shell fire in the siege of Lille, and his daddy had been shot on the second day of the war while in the French artillery.

Jean in spite of his terrible surroundings was a merry little fellow, and used to carry water from a nearby well and run all the errands for his grandmere. He soon became known to the soldiers who garrisoned the outskirts of the city, and was universally popular with these men. His grandmere was a lady of a fine old French family, and even now that their circumstances were reduced to penury, carried herself erect and with the distinguished air of a grand old patriot. Jean's grandmere loved the British soldiers and it was a poor night that she did not have many of the Tommies in for a cup of coffee and a warm meal, and no one ever thought of offering money to Jean's grandmere, for clearly that would be the worst insult that could have been offered.

In return for this many kindnesses the Tommies would carry water and cut wood for the old lady, and would sit, when off duty, by the hour telling stories to a wide-awake Jean. It so happened that Jean and his grandmere, and the authorities, fearing lest they be hurt, advised them to move again. So it happened that one morning bright and early Jean and his grandmere set off again to seek a house in Cassel, a long way back from the line.

Students' Exhibits Aroused Great Interest at Fair

HOSE of our little readers, who visited the Fall Fair and failed to see the school exhibits, missed a treat that will not be accorded to them for another year to come. They also missed a very clearly drawn contrast that, fraught with a touch of pathos, was there revealed. In one corner of the top floor of the Home Products Building was the Red Cross Workshop exhibit, where some of the most beautiful handicraft work in basket and raffia work and wood inlays were displayed. These products were made by men who had lost the power of one or more of their limbs while fighting for their country overseas, and who are now happy in a livelihood through this medium.

Not ten feet away was the manual training exhibit, made by boys in the city and district schools. The exhibit of the students was very fine indeed, and it supplied a very vivid connection between what was the hobby of a boy and the means of livelihood of many gallant men who now face life as cripples, maimed in the service of their country. The boys' exhibit was neat, accurate and the very expression of strength and clean-cut workmanship, but it was distinct from the work of the returned men.

The returned men, working in the Red Cross workshops worked with the same accuracy and care, but they put a little bit of their hearts into their work, and perhaps a hint of tears, anyhow their work lived and had an appeal that was beyond the power of wood and straw to convey, a touch of sadness that all the laughter in the world could not quite hide. The contrast that was struck by these two exhibits, side by side, was vivid and left a lasting impression on all who saw matters in just that light, but it left, too, a more obvious lesson, and one that may be easily

To leave the salient the pair had to walk many miles and some of the first miles were over shell-swept ground and across very hard country indeed. While about one mile on their way Jean and his grandmere sat down to rest, and there was much shelling on the road ahead. "Les Obus" were "plunking" down on the road in regular series, bang, bang, bang, and that would be repeated, while bricks and limbs of trees would be hurled in every direction.

While seated thus, resting and waiting for the shelling to cease Jean heard a shot, followed by the scream of a bullet as it tore its way through the air, hurrying to some ill destiny. The shot was followed by a commotion in a field some two hundred yards away where Jean saw a man lying on the ground and evidently seriously wounded. Jean ran to the wounded man and helped him bind up a wound in his side, and then raced to the nearest post, a battery in the field beyond, and there told the officer of the occurrence.

Jean also told the officer that the shot had come from behind the lines, and repeated that in spite of the disinclination of the officer to believe the story. After seeing that the boy was really serious the officer took a party of men who were led by Jean to where he had been sitting and then told the direction from whence the shot had sounded. Not quite three hundred yards away was a culvert under the main road, and from the culvert a clear view of the field beyond could be gained. The party investigated and found a spy, dressed in the habiliments of an old farmer peasant, who, with a clear view of the battery, had a telephone set to transmit the result of his spying to the enemy. Beside the spy was a German rifle, and in the chamber of the rifle one cartridge was found to have been exploded.

In course of time the spy was taken away and sent back to be dealt with by higher authorities, and the party began to realize that but for little Jean other lives would have been lost and the operation of the spy left unmoled. Jean was made the centre of a happy throng of men, who saw the little lad and his aged grandmere safely on their way past the danger zone before resuming their work on watch with their battery. So you see, life for your little contemporaries in France and Belgium during the war was a life of excitement and of danger, and the courage of our little Jean stood out as a shining example of the bravery of the unfortunate inhabitants during the four years of bombardment which they suffered. All honor to little Jean and to his grandmere who would walk along three miles of badly shelled road, brave and unafraid.

Theatre Essay Contest Created Much Interest

PRIZE WINNERS

1. Harry Bell, aged 12, 2385 Whittier Avenue.
2. Bertha Ross, aged 14, Fort Street.
3. Wynne Sheldon Williams, aged 9, 1037 Yates Street.
2. Bertha Ross, aged 14, 1202 Fort Street.

There are tales and tales, in storyland. Some appeal to all, and some to but a few, others again appeal to old and young alike, and will bear repeating many times. "Peck's Bad Boy" is such a tale, and the more often it is told the more delightful it seems to become. Witnessing the film presentation of the irresponsible Henry Peck was like seeing one of our most loved heroes come to life and charm us with the power of their own actions.

It was a merry throng of girls and boys, who last Monday and all this week thronged the auditorium of the Royal Victoria Theatre for the film story of "Peck's Bad Boy," wherein Jackie Coogan added another delightful role to his junior repertoire. The various pranks of the bad Henry were greeted with howls of delight, and it was a happy faced throng that left the theatre at the conclusion of the performance. Indeed it would be fairly safe to guess that more than one daddy in this city at all events has had his clothes subjected to unheralded onslaught of ants, or maybe the ants will not appear until to-morrow, Sunday, when Henry's father had his bad day in church.

Be that, as it may, the film version of "Peck's Bad Boy" was a delight in many ways, and lent much realism to the age-old story. In the essay contest kindly arranged by the management of the Royal Victoria Theatre, many charming stories were received for judgment by the Editor of this page.

The first prize in the contest has been awarded to Harry Bell, aged twelve, of 3385 Whittier Avenue. Bertha Ross, aged fourteen, 1202 Fort Street, was successful in taking second place. Wynne Sheldon Williams, aged nine years, of 1037 Yates Street, has been awarded the third place. The prizes will be given to the successful essayists by the management of the Royal Victoria Theatre.

Elsie Eccles, 2421 Chambers Street; Cyril Wallace, no address; Donald Watson, 1540 Amphion Street, all sent essays deserving special mention, but were not fortunate enough to get within the three places carrying prizes.

A first prize of five dollars, a second of three dollars and a third of two dollars will be awarded in the manner stated to the successful contributors. The essay contest was arranged through the kindness of the management of the Royal Victoria Theatre, and the Editor of The Times Children's Page is acting in the capacity of a judge in this contest.

The leading essay follows:

"Peck's Bad Boy"—First Prize Essay.

To begin the story we must first introduce Henry Peck, Buddy and Tar-Baby. Henry Peck, the hero of this story, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Peck; Mr. Peck being a real estate agent, Buddy, the son of a grocer, was Henry's two-legged pal, and Tar-Baby, a dog, was his four-legged pal.

It was circus day and the three pals were in the circus grounds, when Henry led a lion loose. When Henry's father heard this he said he would give him and Buddy no circus money. However, they wrote a note saying, "Dear Mr. Peck, meet me in the candy store at once.—Daisy M."

With Buddy dressed as Daisy M. the pair proceeded to the store. Henry following. When Henry went to see the fun at the store his father gave him fifty cents, to keep him quiet. Henry's mother, who heard about the lion affair, came to the candy store. Buddy made an attempt to escape but Mrs. Peck succeeded in getting the wig and hat from his head.

"Dr. Martin came on Sunday to visit them. Henry had a bottle full of ants, and put some in Pop's lumpago pad; also wrapped a pack of playing cards in his handkerchief. In Church Pop kept itching from ant bites, and when he took out his hanky the cards flew all over. Henry ran home to avoid a 'licking,' and Pop ran home with shame.

"When an inventor gave Dad a very important drawing, Henry slipped it into Dr. Martin's pocket, unfortunately a thief entered and the drawing was missed. Dr. Martin was accused, but Henry explained it all away. To escape Pa, Henry made off on a hand-car and had a narrow escape from death. Dr. Martin saving him just in the nick of time. Henry's mother was overjoyed and everything ended very happily."

"Peck's Bad Boy"—Second Prize Essay.

"Henry Peck, and his dog, Tar-Baby, also his pal, Buddy were known all over town for their mischievous pranks. One of their tricks was to let a lion loose, and it was only by Henry's strategy they escaped uninjured. Then came the trouble of getting money to go to the circus, so Henry played another trick upon his father, and as usual, was successful. They next got into trouble with a policeman, but the 'Peck Company' were more than a match for him and they escaped."

"One Sunday, Henry played a trick upon his father by putting cards in his handkerchief, and ants in his 'lumbago pad.' Henry once more escaped a good spanking by hiding until the danger had blown over. That night, Henry comes down stairs for something to eat, and scares a burglar out of the house. Next day, Henry had a narrow escape from death by an express train. However, his sister's 'beau,' Jack Martin, saves him in time and once again he escapes punishment. Jack escapes punishment, too, for the day previous Henry had hidden valuable papers on Jack's person, and if Henry had not told, Jack would have been arrested and punished. Henry decided to be good (!) after that."

"Peck's Bad Boy"—Third Prize Essay.

"Peck's Bad Boy is a hero of the screen and story-books. His daring pranks were a trial to his poor parents, and always struck terror in the hearts of his companions. His uses for ants and grocer's shops would make the moodiest person laugh his loudest. His affection for his dog Tar-Baby was touching. The disguise of his chum showed that Henry had a quick mind. His bravery and ingenuity showed a different spirit from that of his pal, who without Henry's leadership would have led a very dull life. It would be nice if all boys got out of their lickings as easily as Henry did. Henry was lucky to have such a good protector as the Doctor."—By Wynne Sheldon Williams.

Naval Brigade Pleased With Valuable Gift

AN expression of the high opinion held of the work of the local division of the Boys' Naval Brigade, that unit has just been presented with two full-sized lifeboats of the regulation pattern by the Canadian Robert Dollar Company. The boats, through the courtesy of the C.P.O.S., were brought to Victoria from Vancouver by the C.P.O.S. liner Montague when that ship touched here last. The boats are the regulation standard lifeboat of the British merchant marine the world over, and are an invaluable asset to the training of the boys of the local division.

One boat will be dispatched to the Sooke subdivision, which, under Mr. Miller Higgs, has achieved notable work, and will be a great boon to that unit. The other boat has been kept for the use of the local division, and will make three craft in possession of the city brigade. In the Summer just past the boys of the Naval Brigade spent many hours in practice at boat pulling, and, as a result, are fully alive to the value of the generous gift of the Canadian Robert Dollar Company, through its Vancouver offices, as well as pleased with the expression of regard which the gift symbolized.

The Naval Brigade has now over fifty boys at sea, some on the Canadian Robert Dollar ships, others on the C.G.M.M. craft, and still others on the C.P.O.S. and the B.C. Coast Service lines. In spite of two disasters at sea the boys are all safe, and on every occasion have given a good account of themselves. P. W. Tribe, second in command of the local division, stated that there are still a few vacancies for boys between fourteen and sixteen years of age, for training in the British Merchant Service, one of the most useful and indispensable services of the Empire.

For some years now the Naval Brigade has been training boys for their calling at sea, and in many cases where the lads did not wish to follow out that calling they have benefitted in every case from the practical training they received at the hands of capable instructors, and have been the better for that training in every way. The Ship's Office, the term used to apply to the local training centre in the basement of the Pemberton Building, is open all day long and there full details may be obtained as to the work of the Brigade and the vacancies now existing.

MISLEADING THE WORMS.

A correspondent to a farm paper asked the Editor what was the best remedy to get rid of cut worms. The reply sent was as follows: "Our method is very efficacious, we take them to a vacant lot, turn them around three times and let them go. They get so confused that they never find their way back."—Boston Transcript.

Part IV.

With youth and happiness gilding every hour, the days passed merrily enough. And each day hinged upon Lord Melbourne. Her diary shows us, with undiminished clarity, the life of the young sovereign during the early months of her reign—a life satisfactorily regular, full of delightful business, a life of simple pleasures, mostly physical—riding, eating, dancing—a quick, easy, highly unsophisticated life, sufficient unto itself. The light of the morning is upon it; and, in the rosy radiance, the figure of "Lord M." emerges, glorified and supreme. If she is the heroine of the story, he is the hero; but indeed they are more than hero and heroine, for there are no other characters at all. Lehzen, the Baron, Uncle Leopold, are unsubstantial shadows—the incidental supers of the piece. Her paradise was peopled by two persons, and surely that was enough. One sees them together still, a curious couple, strangely united in those artless pages, under the magical illumination of the dawn of eighty years ago: the polished high fine gentleman with the whitening hair and whiskers and the thick dark eyebrows and the mobile lips and the big expressive eyes; and beside him the tiny Queen—fair, slim, elegant, active, in her plain girl's dress and little tippet, looking up at him earnestly, adoringly, with eyes blue and projecting, and half-open mouth. So they appear upon every page of the Journal; upon every page Lord M. is present, Lord M. is speaking, Lord M. is being amusing, instructive, delightful, and affectionate at once, while Victoria drinks in the honied words, laughs till she shows her gums, tries hard to remember, and runs off, as soon as she is left alone, to put it all down. Their long conversation touched upon a multitude of topics. Lord M. would criticize books, throw out a remark or two on the British Constitution, make some passing reflections on human life, and tell story after story of the great people of the eighteenth century. Then there would be business—a dispatch perhaps from Lord Durham in Canada, which Lord M. would read. But first he must explain a little. "He said that I must know that Canada originally belonged to the French, and was only ceded to the English in 1760, when it was taken in an expedition under Wolfe: 'a very daring enterprise,' he said. Canada was then entirely French, and the British only came afterwards. . . . Lord M. explained this very clearly (and much better than I have done) and said a good deal more about it. He then read me Durham's despatch, which is a very long one and took him more than half an hour to read. Lord M. read it beautifully, with that fine soft voice of his, and with so much expression, so that it is needless to say I am much interested by it." And then the talk would take a more personal turn. Lord M. would describe his boyhood, and she would learn that "he wore his hair long, as all boys then did, till he was 17, (how handsome he must have looked!)" Or she would find out about his queer tastes and habits—how he never carried a watch, which seemed quite extraordinary. "I always ask the servant what o'clock it is, and then he tells me what he likes," said Lord M. "Or, as the rooks wheeled about round the trees, 'in a manner which indicated rain,' he would say that he could sit looking at them for an hour, and 'was quite surprised at my disliking them. . . . Lord M. said, 'The rooks are my delight.'"

The day's routine, whether in London or at Windsor, was almost invariable. The morning was devoted to business and Lord M. In the afternoon the whole Court went out riding. The Queen, in her velvet riding-habit and a top-hat with a veil draped about the brim, headed the cavalcade; and Lord M. rode beside her. The lively troupe went fast and far, to the extreme exhilaration of Her Majesty. Back in the Palace again, there was still time for a little more fun before dinner—a game of battledore and shuttlecock perhaps, or a romp along the galleries with some children. Dinner came, and the ceremonial decidedly tightened. The gentleman of highest rank sat on the right of the Queen; on her left—it soon became an established rule—sat Lord Melbourne. After the ladies had left the dining room, the gentlemen were not permitted to remain behind for very long; indeed, the short time allowed them for their wine drinking formed the subject—so it was rumored—of one of the very few disputes between the Queen and her Prime Minister; but her determination carried the day, and from that moment after-dinner drunkenness began to go out of fashion. When the company was reassembled in the drawing room the etiquette was stiff. For a few moments the Queen spoke in turn to each one of her guests; and during these short uneasy colloquies the aridity of royalty was apt to become painfully evident. One night Mr. Greville, the Clerk of the Privy Council, was present; his turn soon came; the middle-aged, hard-faced viveur was addressed by his young hostess. "Have you been riding to-day, Mr. Greville?" asked the Queen. "No, Madam, I have not," replied Mr. Greville. "It was a fine day," continued the Queen. "Yes, Madam, a very fine day," said Mr. Greville. "It was rather cold, though," said the Queen. "It was rather cold, Madam," said Mr. Greville. "Your sister, Lady Frances Edgerton, rides, I think, doesn't she?" said the Queen. "She does ride sometimes, Madam," said Mr. Greville. There was a pause, after which Mr. Greville ventured to take the lead, though he did not venture to change the subject. "Has your Majesty been riding to-day?" asked Mr. Greville. "Oh, yes, a very long ride," answered the Queen with animation. "Has your Majesty got a nice horse?" said Mr. Greville. "Oh, a very nice horse," said the Queen. It was over. Her Majesty gave a smile and an inclination of the head. Mr. Greville a profound bow, and the next conversation began with the next gentleman. When all the guests had been disposed of, the Duchess of Kent sat down to her whist, while everybody else was ranged about the round table. Lord Melbourne sat beside the Queen, and talked pertinaciously—very often a propos to the contents of one of the large albums of engravings with which the round table was covered—until it was half-past eleven and time to go to bed.

Occasionally, there were little diversions: the evening might be spent at the opera or at the play. Next morning the royal critic was careful to note down her impressions. "It was Shakespeare's tragedy of Hamlet, and we came in at the beginning of it. Mr. Charles Kean (son of old Kean) acted the part of Hamlet, and I must say beautifully. His conception of this very difficult, and I may almost say incomprehensible, character is admirable; his delivery of all the fine long speeches quite beautiful; he is excessively graceful and all his actions and attitudes are good, though not at all good-looking in face. . . . I came away just as Hamlet was over." Later on, she went to see Macready in King Lear. The story was new to her; she knew nothing about it, and at first she took very little interest in what was passing on the stage; she preferred to chatter and laugh with the Lord Chamberlain. But, as the play went on, her mood changed; her attention was fixed, and then she laughed no more. Yet she was puzzled; it seemed a strange, a horrible business. What did Lord M. think? Lord M. thought it was a very fine play, bit to be sure, "a rough, coarse play, written for those times, with exaggerated characters." "I'm glad you've seen it," he added. But undoubtedly, the evenings which she enjoyed most were those on which there was dancing. She was always ready enough to seize any excuse—the arrival of cousins—a birthday—a gathering of young people—to give the command for that. Then, when the band played, and the figures of the dancers swayed to the music, and she felt her own figure awaying too, with youthful spirits so close on every side—then her happiness reached its height, her eyes sparkled, she must go on and on into the small hours of the morning. For a moment Lord M. himself was forgotten.

The months flew past. The Summer was over: "the pleasantest Summer I ever passed in my life, and I shall never forget this first Summer of my reign." With surprising rapidity, another Summer was upon her. The coronation came and went—a curious dream. The antique, intricate, endless ceremonial worked itself out as best it could, like some machine of gigantic complexity which was a little out of order. The small central figure went through her gyrations. She sat; she walked; she prayed; she carried about an orb that was almost too heavy to hold; the Archbishop of Canterbury came and crushed a ring upon the wrong finger, so that she was ready to cry out with the pain; old Lord Rolle tripped up in his mantle and fell down the steps as he was doing homage; she was taken into a side chapel, where the altar was covered with a table cloth, sand-wiches, and bottles of wine; she perceived Lehzen in an upper box and exchanged a smile with her as she sat, robed and crowned, on the Confessor's throne. "I shall ever remember this day as the proudest of my life," she noted. But the pride was soon merged once more in youth and simplicity. When she returned to Buckingham Palace at last she was not tired; she ran up to her private rooms, doffed her splendors, and gave her dog Dash its evening bath.

Life flowed on again with its accustomed smoothness—though, of course, the smoothness was occasionally disturbed. For one thing, there was the distressing behavior of Uncle Leopold. The King of the Belgians had not been able to resist attempting to make use of his family position to further his diplomatic ends. But, indeed, why should there be any question of resisting? Was not such a course of conduct, far from being a temptation, simply selon les regles? What were royal marriages for, if they did not enable sovereigns, in spite of the hindrances of constitutions, to control foreign politics? For the highest purposes, of course; that was understood. The Queen of England was his niece—more than that—almost his daughter; his confidential agent was living, in a position of intimate favor, at her court. Surely, in such circumstances, it would be preposterous, it would be positively incorrect, to lose the opportunity of bending to his wishes by means of personal influence, behind the backs of the English Ministers, the foreign policy of England.

He set about the task with becoming precautions. He continued in his letters his admirable advice. Within a few days of her accession, he recommended the young Queen to lay emphasis on pliations were made to her, rarely gave an immediate answer. Even with Lord Melbourne, it was the same; when he asked for her opinion upon any subject, she would reply that she would think it over, and tell him her conclusions next day.

King Leopold's counsels continued. The Princess de Lieven, he said, was a dangerous woman; there was reason to think that she would make attempts to pry into what did not concern her; let Victoria beware. "A rule which I cannot sufficiently recommend is never to permit people to speak on subjects concerning yourself or your affairs, without you having yourself desired them to do so." Should such a thing occur, "change the conversation, and make the individual feel that he has made a mistake." This piece of advice was also taken; for it fell out as the King had predicted. Madame de Lieven sought an audience, and appeared to be verging towards confidential topics; whereupon the Queen, becoming slightly embarrassed, talked of nothing but commonplaces. The individual felt that she had made a mistake.

The King's next warning was every possible occasion, upon her English birth; to praise the English nation; "the Established Church I also recommend strongly; you cannot, without pledging yourself to anything particular, say too much on the subject." And then "before you decide on anything important I should be glad if you would consult me; this would also have the advantage of giving you time"; nothing was more injurious than to be hurried into wrong decisions unawares. His niece replied at once with all the accustomed warmth of her affection; but she wrote hurriedly—and, perhaps, a trifle vaguely too. "Your advice is always of the greatest importance to me," she said.

Had he, possibly, gone too far? He could not be certain; perhaps Victoria had been hurried. In any case, he would be careful; he would draw back—pour mieux sauter, he added to himself with a smile. In his next letters he made no reference to his suggestion of consultations with himself; he merely pointed out the wisdom, in general, of refusing to decide upon important questions off-hand. So far, his advice was taken; and it was noticed that the Queen, when approached by post, the Prussians are sure to read it, and to learn in this way what we wish them to hear." Analogous circumstances might very probably occur in England. "I tell you the trick," wrote His Majesty, "that you should be able to guard against it." Such were the subtleties of constitutional sovereignty.

It seemed that the time had come for another step. The King's next letter was full of foreign politics—the situation in Spain and Portugal, the character of Louis Philippe; and he received a favorable answer. Victoria, it is true, began by saying that she had shown the political part of his letter to Lord Melbourne; but she proceeded to a discussion of foreign affairs. It appeared that she was not unwilling to exchange observations on such matters with her uncle. So far so good. But King Leopold was still cautious; though a crisis was impending in his diplomacy, he still hung back; at last, however, he could keep silence no longer. It was of the utmost importance to him that, in his manoeuvrings with France and Holland, he should have, or at any rate appear to have, English support. But the English particularly to good Lord Melbourne, that, as far as it is compatible with the interests of your own dominions, you do not wish that your Government should take the lead in such measures as might in a short time bring on the destruction of this country, as well as that of your uncle and his family." The result of this appeal was unexpected; there was dead silence for more than a week. When Victoria at last wrote, she was prodigal of her affection—"it would, indeed, my dearest Uncle, be very wrong of you, if you thought my feelings of warm and devoted attachment to you, and of great affection of you, could be changed—nothing can ever change them"—but her references to foreign politics, though they were lengthy and elaborate, were non-committal in the extreme; they were almost cast in an official and diplomatic form. Her Ministers, she said, entirely shared her views upon the subject; she understood and sympathized with the difficulties of her beloved uncle's position; and he might rest assured "that both Lord Melbourne and Lord Palmerston are most anxious at all times for the prosperity and welfare of Belgium." That was

King Leopold was obliged to recognize the facts. His next letter contained no reference at all to politics. "I am glad," he wrote, "to find that you like Brighton better than last year. I think Brighton very agreeable at this time of the year, till the east winds set in. The pavilion, besides, is comfortable; that cannot be denied. Before my marriage, it was there that I met the Regent, Charlotte afterwards came with old Queen Charlotte. How distant all this already, but still how present to one's memory." Like poor Madame de Lieven, His Majesty felt that he had made a mistake.

Nevertheless, he could not quite give up all hope. Another opportunity offered, and he made another effort—but there was not very much conviction in it, and it was immediately crushed. "My dear Uncle," the Queen wrote, "I have to thank you for your last letter which I received on Sunday. Though you seem not to dislike my political sparks, I think it is better not to increase them, as they might finally take fire, particularly as I see with regret that upon this one subject we cannot agree. I shall, therefore, limit myself to my expressions of very sincere wishes for the welfare and prosperity of Belgium." After that, it was clear that there was no more to be said. Henceforward there is audible in the King's letters a curiously elegiac note. "My dearest Victoria, your delightful little letter has just arrived and went like an arrow to my heart. Yes, my beloved Victoria! I do love you tenderly. . . . I love you for yourself, and I love in you the dear child whose welfare I tenderly watched." He had gone through much; yet, if life had its disappointments, it had its satisfactions too. "I have all the honors that can be given, and I am, politically speaking, very solidly established." But there were other things besides politics; there were romantic yearnings in his heart. "The only longing I still have is for the Orient, where I perhaps shall once end my life, rising in the west and setting in the east." As for his devotion to his niece, that could never end. "I never press my services on you, nor my counsels, though I may say with some truth that from the extraordinary fate which the higher powers had ordained for me, my experience, both political and of private life, is great. I am always ready to be useful to you when and where it may be, and I repeat it, all I want in return is some little sincere affection from you."

MUSIC PRINTING IN DANTE'S TIME

There was held at the British Museum in London, England, recently, in connection with the sixth centenary of the death of Dante, an exhibition of music scores which proved of great interest to musicians and to the music printer. Although not designed to show the development of the music printer's art, it could not fail to do so, for the printer followed closely on the heels of the advancing musicians.

It should be remembered that in Dante's time the music-printer did his work by hand, and the folios shown at the Museum were beautiful examples of hand work. With the diffusion of knowledge came the necessity of putting into the hands of church-singers and instrumental performers copies of the music, and large folios were neither available nor suitable. Recourse was made to wood blocks, on which the lines and notes were first drawn by hand and then the background cut away, leaving in relief the medium for printing.

But the cost of wood blocks for music-printing must have been very great, and the result not very satisfactory; so the ingenious old printer tried his hand at the work. First he used cast-metal note-heads. Specimens of this partial music-printing were shown at the Museum.

The various stages of music-printing from Dante's time were shown in the exhibits on display during the time of the exposition.

The little daughter of a congressman was sitting one evening on her father's knee. She had a new little brother, whom she regarded with wonder, as children do regard the latest usurper before they have learned to love him. "To-day," said her father, "a man offered to give me a whole roomful of gold for my little brother. Shall I sell him?" The child shook her head. "But," said the father, "think how many nice things a roomful of gold would buy! Don't you think I had better let the man have him?" "No," answered the girl, thoughtfully, "let's keep him till he's older; he'll be worth more then."

Engine Troubles.
 Miss Fire—This may be caused by several defects of which the following are the most prominent:
 1. Improper adjustment of carburetor.
 2. Defective spark plugs—a cracked porcelain, too wide a gap between the points, or sooted points.
 3. A broken or disconnected wire, which should be easily located.
 4. Dirt in carburetor. While in this condition the engine will backfire through carburetor. The instrument should be removed, and thoroughly cleaned out.
 5. Loss of compression in any cylinder. This may be caused by the valve sticking, or dirt becoming lodged under them.
 6. Loss of cylinder compression is due either to worn piston rings, cylinders, or improperly seated valves. This requires the attention of a mechanic.
 7. Water in gasoline. When engine starts and then stops, and without apparent cause starts again, there is a chance of the gasoline containing a certain portion of water. Strain some of the gasoline from the bottom of the tank through chamois. The gasoline will pass through and the water remain. Under these circumstances the gasoline tank should be drained and refilled with a good grade of gasoline, strained through chamois.

 7. To locate a missing cylinder open each pet cock or priming cup separately while the engine is running at fairly good speed. A blue flame accompanied by a sharp report, will indicate the cylinders which are firing properly.
 8. Overheating—This is indicated by excessive evaporation of water in the radiator, smell of burnt oil, etc. The cause may be found in one or more of the following:
 1. Lack of water or oil are the common causes. Make it a rule to examine the oil and water supply every day before you take the car out of the garage. We invariably advise Day-Elder owners to make it not only a rule, but a habit.

 2. Radiator connections leaking or plugged up.
 3. Ignition too late. An engine running under these conditions may get extremely hot. When the defect of knocking is inherent in an engine, one is inclined to diminish the advance, whereupon the risk is incurred of the engine getting hot. It is better to leave the advance alone and close the throttle a little.
 4. Fan belt stretched. Fan running too slowly, thus not cooling the water circulating through radiator core, and not forcing hot air from inside of the hood.
 5. Mixture too rich.
 6. Carbon deposit in the cylinders.
 7. Wrong valve timing.
 8. Continued driving on low gear. An engine does not generally get hot when running at high speed, the circulating pump or fan being most efficient under these conditions. Conversely, when the engine slows down in going uphill with full admission, the fan or pump is working more slowly and therefore less efficiently.
 9. Dragging brakes.
 10. In summer open cold air ports to carburetor.
 Examine these different features and correct them if necessary.
 Loss of Power—When the engine will run but lack of power is in evidence on grades and under heavy pulls, look for the following causes:
 1. Carburetor not being properly adjusted.
 2. Loss of compression. Piston rings are worn.
 3. Carburetor flooding causing too rich a mixture.
 4. Valves not seating properly and not holding compression. Weak or broken valve springs.
 5. Engine becoming overheated from lack of water or oil.
 6. If there is a stoppage in gasoline pipes, the engine will spit back through the carburetor when throttle is open.
 7. Dragging brakes.
 8. Scored cylinders.
 9. Weak the subject of engine troubles will be continued.

Motor Industry Situation Shows Improvement in The Last Few Months

There is no gainsaying the fact that the automobile situation to-day is immeasurably better than it has been during recent months, and that the improvement is firm and steady.
 Several companies that were completely shut down are now on part time while others that were working only part time three months ago are working full time to-day. Factories are charged once more with the responsibility of production. Employment lines are dwindling and many have disappeared altogether. Best of all, retail display rooms are again the centres of lively business. No matter from what angle the situation is considered, it presents sure signs of recovery.
 Figures which have been furnished by various companies indicate clearly the trend and force of the improvement.
 The automobile industry, along with the wool, copper, rubber, lumber, steel and other industries, has Cheesecloth will bring the lustre back. The wax polish may be used for the body, fenders, hood and such other polished surfaces as may be found. It is also a good idea to thoroughly clean the under sides of the fenders and apply the wax polish, after which mud and dirt will not adhere there as rapidly as before.

 The other type of body polish, which is, comparatively speaking, a recent development, is that which is sprayed on the surface with a big syringe-like affair. In the use of this sprayed polish also the body must first be thoroughly cleaned with water. If the surfaces to be treated are merely dusty, the polish may be sprayed on, and the excess be wiped off with clean cheesecloth. In fact, this is the accepted method of using sprayed polishes, the spraying and the removal of the excess with cheesecloth. No vigorous rubbing is necessary with this type of polish.
 And after we get through with all the polishes we must return to the fundamental fact that plain water is still the prime essential in cleaning the car. Washing the car is not the casual job that too many owners seem to assume. The lustrous finish of the modern motor car is a delicate thing; it can be damaged irreparably by careless or ignorant handling.
 To keep with the car should be washed as soon as possible after it has become muddy or dirty. If mud is allowed to dry on the surface its removal is likely to leave traces behind. In washing the car plain water should be used at a temperature of about 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Water either too hot or too cold is likely to damage the finish. Never turn a stream of water on the body surface. The water is quite likely to carry grains of sand or grit into the enamel and scratch it. Perhaps the best way "to dry" the car is to use a large sponge, which should be sopped in the water and then squeezed out at the top of the panel. The water flows down over the surface in a gentle stream and rinses off the mud, which is the proper method.
 It is unwise to use soap about the body of the car, except possibly to eradicate grease or oil spots. In that case a cloth soaked in castile soap suds may be used to remove the offending spots. The hood must never be washed while it is being a run, as the wind will scour the surface.
 To clear the radiator, turn a stream of water through it from rear so that water passes out in front instead of getting into the engine and mechanism.
 In drying the body a chamois skin, which is really a split sheepskin, is the best weapon to use. Rub in a straight line and never in circles. Tar spots or dabs of road oil may be removed by covering them with salt butter, which softens them so that they may be gently wiped off with a cloth. Finally let us call the attention of the average car owner to the condition of the running gear of his car. It is usually encrusted with dirt inches deep. This should be removed with a stout splinter of wood and then the parts should be scrubbed with a soft brush, plentifully supplied with soap and water.

CAREFUL WASHING RETAINS LUSTRE

Many Preparations Make It Easy to Keep Car Looking New

If proper care is given to an automobile from the first, it will retain its first lustre for a long time, and, in fact, never need reach the stage of being "shabby." The last few years have produced a number of preparations designed to make it easy for the car owner to maintain the original appearance of his car. In fact, there is no excuse for shabbiness except ignorance or laziness.
 One of the new ideas in preserving the finish of the car is the so-called wax polish, which gives admirable results when it is properly applied. In the use of wax polish the first step is to give the body of the car a thorough cleaning. Then the polish is applied with a piece of cheesecloth and another similar cloth is used to distribute the wax evenly all over the surface. The common mistake on the part of the car owner is to assume that the more wax used the better. As a matter of fact, the thinnest possible film of wax is needed. After the wax has been applied, the finish so imparted will last anywhere from five days to a week, and when it begins to get a trifle dull again a new rubbing with clean

HABIT OF RUNNING ON CAR TRACKS IS RUINOUS TO TIRES
 Drivers Should Examine Tires Regularly; Excessive Use of Chains Bad
 Rough pavements and crosspicks tempt the motorist to drive on street car tracks. While it is admittedly true the occasional use of car tracks where road conditions are almost impassable is justified, it is also true the strain on certain parts of the tire due to continuous running on car tracks will not only quickly wear a depression in the tread rubber, all around the tire, but the sharp bending action and overload on the fabric directly under this depression will produce eventually an inside fabric break. Running on car tracks is an expensive habit and should be done only in extreme necessity.
 Surface Cuts Heal Easily.
 A barefoot boy appreciates the need of quick attention to his surface cuts and bruises, which, given temporary protection, are self-healing. Tire tread cuts are also self-healing; if promptly treated with heal-a-cut material. If not thus treated, the elasticity of the rubber allows the cut to expand under load compression with every turn of the wheel. Dirt, glass, sand and pebbles wear and tear away the rubber until the cut has reached the first layer of tire fabric, where the foreign material creeps along and piles up between the tread-rubber and carcass, forming sand lumps.
 Most cuts are avoidable and the result of tire contact with sharp edges of railway tracks and crossings, with worn horseshoes, broken glass, wheels spinning on wet pavements and in mud holes, and by skidding the tire by sudden brake application.
 The remedy is to examine the tires at regular intervals, with the object of removing the protruding objects, such as nails and tacks, to wash out the holes and cuts and close them by properly prepared healing preparations. If not thus treated, the tire does not end with the original purchase. To the first payment should be added a relatively smaller, but important, investment of time.
 Use of Anti-Skid Devices.
 The use of chains or other anti-skid devices is advisable under certain conditions. While a well designed non-skid tread is, where care in driving is exercised, generally sufficient insurance against slipping on wet pavements and hard surfaced roads, yet there are conditions of ice, mud or deep snow when chains are a necessity and for such occasions they should be carried as regular equipment.
 Anti-skid devices that are station-

ST. JAMES WILL HOLD A RALLY

Interesting Church Affair Arranged for Tuesday

A congregational rally which will take the form of a reception to the new rector, Rev. A. E. Gledhill, will be held by members and friends of St. James's Anglican Church, Quebec Street, at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Connaught Seamen's Institute, Superior Street. Everyone in James Bay interested in the work of the church in James Bay is invited.

Mr. Gledhill, during the brief period he has been in charge of St. James's has been very active in making a systematic canvass of the parish in an appeal for support by way of attendance. "We are not so much interested in financial support as we are in moral support. One will follow the other and the burden of responsibility will be lightened if all the Anglican adherents in James Bay would attend their parish church fairly regularly," says Mr. Gledhill.

Particularly popular with the children are the young people and adults alike, Mr. Gledhill is very anxious to promote an active programme of combined work and pleasure during the winter months. For this reason emphasis is laid on the fact that members of both sexes of all ages will be given a hearty welcome Tuesday evening and all are asked to make a reservation of that evening for this affair.

The gathering will be entirely informal and various features of entertainment will be provided. There will be music and refreshments.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES AT ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN

Sunday evening has a spiritual treat in store for the children of the Sunday School of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Princess Avenue and Chambers Street, as well as for the parents and friends of the congregation.

With Mrs. Louis Schmelz at the organ the prelude, "Sonnets" (Borntal), will be rendered at 7.30 sharp. Then will follow the Introit and Gloria Patri with a scripture lesson and prayer. After a hymn by the congregation, the children of the Sunday School, under the direction of Mrs. Norman Hess, will render a most interesting and inspiring missionary programme. Violin selections will be furnished by Miss Muriel Podger and Paul Schmelz. The pastor, Rev. R. F. Kibler, will favor the audience with a vocal selection.

After a brief address by the pastor on Christ's words, "Compel them to come in!" which is the theme of the entire programme, an offering will be taken for missions. The service will conclude with the Lord's Prayer and the New Testament benediction.

The morning before an attack was made upon a village occupied by German troops, George Washington Johnson, of the Mississippi colored troops, took his place in line with a large and somewhat battered pan attached to his equipment. # FAVOR AMALGAMATION WITH RESERVATIONS

British Campaigners' Association Passes on Issue

The principle of amalgamation of all ex-servicemen's bodies was heartily endorsed at a meeting of the British Campaigners' Association, held last night in their clubrooms, with W. C. Warren presiding.
W. C. Warren, R. W. Cornell and Captain Lincoln Smith were appointed to act on the permanent committee on amalgamation. The delegates, however, were asked to report back, and not given executive powers.

W. C. Winkel made a plea for amalgamation, holding that the time was ripe for the union of all ex-servicemen's bodies. The meeting finally endorsed the amalgamation principle, but should Federal amalgamation take place the Campaigners wish to preserve their identity.
The meeting decided to accept an invitation from the Chamber of Commerce to attend the Memorial Avenue rally on Sunday. Cars are being asked for by the committee in charge of transportation to take the elder veterans to the scene of the function. Decorations are to be worn.
E. W. Maynard, 245 Langford Street, will be pleased to hear from any owners who would give the services of themselves and their cars for the day mentioned.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The Fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next cold and wet and unless the mother is on her guard, the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mother's best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent colds, or if it does come on suddenly their prompt use will relieve the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ACTED SAMARITAN BUT GOES TO JAIL

Premier Oliver, However, Gets Sentence Remitted for Good Cook

To make food more attractive to the boys in the Alert Bay logging camp for whom he was cooking, and keep them in a state of contentment, A. S. Freeman, "bull" chef, had arrangements under which he always kept on hand a good stock of the goods which the Liquor Control Board only is allowed to sell in this part of the world.

About a month ago, a stranger who said he was deathly sick and looked like it, found his way to the cookhouse. He said the only thing which could revive him was some good stiff liquor. Freeman pulled out a bottle of one of his strongest brands and gave in invalid several jolts which set him up properly.

The invalid celebrated the new life he had gained from the cookhouse by talking about it. Next day police arrested Freeman. He was found guilty in court and sentenced to six months in jail for disobeying the Liquor Control Act.

Premier Oliver to-day after looking into the case, remitted Freeman's sentence, through an order-in-council as it was found that the cook had a good character, was a straightforward and had helped the poor stranger only out of the goodness of his heart.

QUITTING BUSINESS RISKY LUXURY

Work Means Longer Life; Degeneration Follows Retiring, Doctor Warns

A warning somewhat surprising has been publicly issued in England by a physician who says that to retire from business is a dangerous luxury and is apt to be followed by degeneration of both mind and body. He gives striking examples to illustrate the truth of his contention. While in conviction from the text of a dissertation addressed to Englishmen, it is obvious that the doctor's conclusions are applicable to men of the world over. In this city during the last year several instances of men of very advanced years who are still in the harness have been brought to public attention—indeed, it is commonly believed that the activity and interest of these men is due to the fact that they are able to prolong their lives far beyond the expected span.

The doctor who now voices his conclusions is the medical correspondent of The London Times. There comes, he says, sooner or later, to every man of business the question: "Shall I retire and have a quiet life, or shall I carry on?"
It is not an easy question to answer he concedes. As a rule the difficulty is made greater by friends and relatives who, with the best intentions, urge that a strenuous life should give place to a life of comparative leisure. The business man is told that he has "earned" his rest; that the time has come to make way for younger men, and that he deserves the long holiday which he has so often proposed, but never taken.
It is suggested that he should travel, or go and live in the country, or play golf. Pretty pictures of a ripe old age, among apple orchards or rose gardens are painted. Sometimes the social joys of a large house and sport are held out as additional allurements.

This is all very well, says the physician, but speaking, of course, for himself alone, he deliberately urges the business man to meet all these blandishments with a firm "No." In giving this advice he assumes that the business man is fairly healthy.
But is it to say, that he has no severe intensity of body or mind. He assumes further that there does not exist any absorbing outside interest, a hobby which has always really held first place, and which has only been put aside into the second place because absolute necessity dictated the second course.

not entirely founded on medical knowledge. It is founded rather on personal experience of a somewhat exceptional kind.
Misery of Enforced Inactivity.
It happened that one of the physician's relatives was a business man connected with the industry in a large provincial city. The industry was of a very flourishing kind and most of those engaged in it were rich men. Some of them were very rich men. As time went on a number of them retired to the country and changed their manner of life. All of these speedily died. Not only that, the doctor says, but their ends were rather miserable. They pined away for want of something to do. The new soil was unattractive to the old trees.
Then, as it happened, the industry fell on evil days and to retire from it became more or less impossible. The men who had been looking forward to a "quiet old age" were forced to get to work again and employ all their energies in seeing what they could do of their business from ruin. They thought no more of ease in the country or almost travel abroad.
And almost without exception they are still alive—and working. One of them is 84. He goes regularly to his business, travels forty miles by train rises every morning at 7.30. Another is about 75, another just over 70. They are remarkable men, hale and well, able to enjoy life and to take a keen interest in all its manifestations.
This, it may be said, is a special case. No doubt, adds the writer, but a professional life of many years has not in the least degree altered the view which this instance first called into being. The truth, as a doctor sees it, is that you cannot transplant men after they have shaped their careers. There is no more melancholy spectacle in a West End consulting room than the countryman whose wife and family have persuaded him to come and live in town. He misses everything; he finds nothing to take the place of his accustomed joys. He grows flabby and weak from want of exercise, and to which his body is accustomed to react, and so he goes down the hill to death in a few years.
No Pleasure in Them.
It is the same thing with the business man who loses his life's occupation. He may not realize it, but all his mind is given to his daily work. It meets him at every turn. He is shaped to fit it, so to speak. Pleasure and interest and a business are bound up in it. Just as the countryman finds the buffeting of his winds and the tang of changing seasons, so does the city man draw his renewed energies from familiar sights and sounds and faces. Take these away and life becomes "weary, flat, stale and unprofitable."
There is a physical as well as a
