No Top or Bottom Rail. Won't Sag or Bag.

Costs Less.

This cut showing the "Old" and the "New" poultry fence emphasizes the beauty, simplicity and economical points in TRIMESH. Note that in the latter, there are no top or base rail boards, no overhead netting and that but two posts (16 feet apart) are used.

FARMERS UNION BRANCH

- Some of the precautions we take in producing "Quality" Milk.
1. Our herd is tuberculin tested and the animals are kept in a healthy condition.
 2. We keep the hind quarters and udders of our cows clipped, thus eliminating the hair from the milk.
 3. The milker wears a clean white suit when milking and handling the milk.
 4. The cows are thoroughly brushed and the udders washed before each milking.
 5. We use the Gurler Sanitary Milking pail, thus doing away with any dirt that might "get past" our other precautions.
 6. The milk is bottled in sterilized bottles and delivered in a closed wagon.

Grange Anniversary

Orchard City Grange observed the twelfth anniversary of its organization at its regular bi-monthly meeting on the evening of the thirteenth inst by tendering a reception to the surviving charter members and Past Masters of this local grange, at their hall.

About one hundred members and visitors were present to participate in the enjoyable proceedings and the sumptuous banquet at the close of the evening's exercises.

A short business meeting preceded the literary and musical entertainment. The following program was then given:

- 1 Song "The Dear Old Farm," by the grange.
- 2 Address of Welcome by E. K. Clendenning, Master.
- 3 Song by the Keesling quartette, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Keesling and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Keesling, with Miss Mildred Keesling as Accompanist.
- 4 Responses by F. E. Mitchell and Dr. Abbott, first and second Masters of the grange.
- 5 Instrumental Duet, Violin and Piano, Mrs. Scholz and Robert Scholz.
- 6 Responses by A. C. Keesling and Joseph Bohnett, third and fourth masters of the grange.
- 7 Chalk Talks by E. E. Lanphear.
- 8 Responses by H. G. Keesling and J. E. Weisendanger, fifth and sixth masters of the grange.
- 9 Vocal Solo, Mrs. H. A. Butts.

This part of the program closed by short addresses by E. T. Pettitt, master of San Jose grange and Prof. Anderson also of San Jose grange. The grangers then formed in procession led by F. E. Mitchell, the first master of the grange and marched down stairs to the banquet room and enjoyed the feast of good things prepared under the direction of Mrs. E. K. Clendenning and Mrs. Mabel Henry. At the close of the feed quite a number of the charter members present responded to their names in short speeches.

Orchard City Grange was organized in April, 1903 with a charter membership of one hundred and twenty-five and is today one of the live, flourishing granges of California. It has done much good work in these twelve years for Campbell, the surrounding community, and also helped in both county and state work. During this time six masters have passed through the chair. All of whom were present to enjoy this happy occasion. They are F. E. Mitchell, Dr. Abbott, A. C. Keesling, Joseph Bohnett, H. G. Keesling, J. E. Weisendanger, E. K. Clendenning is the present Master.

Friends Entertained

Messrs. and Mesdames D. H. Cramer and H. C. Smith entertained a number of their friends at the new D. H. Cramer home on Santa Clara road Tuesday evening.

The rooms were very tastily decorated with several varieties of roses which were much admired.

The guests came decorated with various signs and symbols representing geographical features and places. After an exciting time spent in guessing the various representations, in which Mrs. F. G. Wells carried off the honors, the guests seated themselves at tables and played six-handed rummae-rook. Mrs. E. R. Kennedy won the ladies' high score, and Mr. J. C. Ainsley the gentlemen's. The consolation prizes were the results of Mrs. W. B. Kammerer, and Dr. Merrill's prowess.

At an early hour dainty refreshments were served after which the party was favored by sals, Messrs. Ernest Barron and C. P. Herrington.

FATHER WAS ONE EXCEPTION

Characteristic Story of Make-Up of English Militants—Mrs. Blanc Was Easy on Everything.

Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, the noted English suffragette, said the other day to a New York reporter.

"Your idea of militants is that we are vixens, tartars, man-haters. But, as a matter of fact, we have in our ranks some of the most elegant and fascinating women in London society.

"No, the militant is not like Mrs. Blanc, who said to her daughter one day:

"I am certainly easy on shoes. Look at this pair of elastic sides. I've worn them three years, and they're still as good as new. I'm easy on clothes, too. There's my tweed—just as fresh as the day I bought it, seven years ago. And hats, gloves, stockings—in fact, I'm easy on everything."

"Except father, eh?" said the daughter, without looking up from her book.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Fortunes of War.

"Wasn't your daughter engaged to a penniless duke?"

"She would have been, but he went to the front very suddenly."

"Well?"

"And he's made a hero of himself, and saved a flag, and been wounded, and got a medal—and now there isn't a girl in the kingdom who wouldn't be glad to marry him."

"And that leaves Laura very little chance?"

"No chance at all."

NATURALLY.

She—I think your brother has such a courtly bearing.

He—No wonder. He's been a lawyer for nearly twenty years.

A Limit to Friendship.

"Say, Brinson, you'll take Smithers home, won't you? You see he's in no condition to get there alone. You live just around the corner. Lean him up against his door and ring the bell."

"Not me. You'll have to find somebody else."

"What's the matter with you? You know Smithers."

"Yes, I know Smithers. And you bet your life I know his wife!"

Old Enough.

"I understand Miss Whytonmaycall is going to have a birthday party this evening," the fat plumber observed.

"Yep," answered the thin carpenter, "I've been invited."

"Did she keep her last birthday?"

"Yes, and I'll tell you in confidence, I don't believe she ever intends to let go of it."

Cause of the Chill.

"But, Captain Hawley," said the handsome Miss Plute coquettishly, "will you love me when I grow old and ugly?"

"My dear Miss Plute," answered the captain gallantly, "you may grow older, but you will never grow uglier."

And he wondered why their friendship ceased so suddenly.

Sensible View.

"I say, Pat, why don't you go on a strike for more wages?" asked the inquisitive man of an Irish laborer.

"Faith," replied the son of Erin, "an' ef I ever do go on a stroik, I'll be whin O'm ave a job an hove nothin' lise ter do."

Of Course.

"Wombat complains that people don't keep the money in circulation."

"I don't see how he can substantiate that claim. Doesn't every man, as soon as he can raise sufficient money, put it into an automobile?"

Some System.

"He's a great man for system, isn't he?"

"I should say so. He even carries the ashes out of his cellar three times a week, instead of letting them accumulate."

Cause for Thanks.

"I'll be hanged if that cheeky plumber hasn't charged me car fare for his men."

"Well, that's cheap enough; they might have come in taxis."

Diversified Humanity.

Some men are hammers; others anvils, but most of us are mere bellows.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Charming Porto Rico

COLON PLAZA, SAN JUAN

THE patriotic American who wears of the rigors of his home climate in winter wishes to seek solace farther south, it is not necessary for him to abandon the protection of his own flag. Let him pick out Porto Rico for his holiday, and he will simply be transporting himself from one section of the republic to another. Four and one-half day's sail from New York will land him at the quaint old capital city of San Juan, girdled by ancient walls, and boasting a combination of Spanish-tropical and modern American civilization of surpassing interest.

Porto Rico has been called "square as a brick," and this is literally so. It is a parallelogram in shape, 100 miles long and 36 miles broad, and on its 3,600 square miles it supports a population of 1,000,000 souls, 600,000 of them whites of Spanish extraction, 60,000 negroes, and the remainder colored people. It is one of the most densely populated islands of the West Indies, and under American rule it has progressed noticeably, both commercially and socially.

To the traveler its chief attractions, of course, are its picturesque scenery, old world customs, and luxuriant tropical vegetation. From far out at sea the voyaging American sights the towering mass of El Yunque, or "The Anvil," the crowning pinnacle of the rounded range of hills forming the island's backbone, which soars 3,600 feet above the sea. Then presently one perceives the bulk of old Morro—every fortified Spanish town in the Caribbees had its Morro, as one soon discovers—with the multi-colored house roofs of the city shelving up behind it, tier on tier, and stretching away along the seaward face the crenellated wall built by Spanish Conquistadors, which connects with the fortress of San Cristobal.

City of Enchantment.

San Juan is a city of infinite enchantment. Here one finds bewildering, but delectable, labyrinths of narrow, canyonlike streets, over which jut old world balconies, latticed and mysterious, through which jangle up-to-date American trolley cars, shouldering aside the bullock carts of the natives. There is the great gray pile of the cathedral, which contains the ashes of Ponce de Leon, "first Adelantado of Florida, first Conquistador and governor of this Island of Juan," and many another famous don. There is the famous Casa Blanca, or Castle of Ponce de Leon, which he built for himself, hundreds of years ago, on a point projecting out into the ocean, still complete and every bit as medieval as when he left to venture on his last quest for the "Fountain of Youth." There is the vast mass of the Cuertal de la Ballaja, the barracks erected for the Spanish garrison, a ponderous pile of masonry, three stories in height, covering, with its patio, a space of 77,000 square meters, and now housing the Porto Rican regiment of our army.

It is hopeless to try to enumerate the out-of-the-way attractions of San Juan, a city which is utterly unlike anything the stay-at-home American has ever seen. It is Europe—and yet it possesses an abundance of charms that European cities lack. It is Spanish, Moorish, tropical, and, above all, Caribbean. Just fancy a city, for instance, which is inclosed by walls, and to enter which you must pass through massive gateways—and an American city at that. But there is a modern side of San Juan, a very modern side. It has all the facilities of business and comfort to which Americans are used. Here are fine banks, office buildings, hotels, restaurants and clubs. And after one has seen San Juan there is the rest of Porto Rico to discover, every mile of it containing fascinating memories, new and absorbing.

Forty Rivers in the Island.

All travelers, as a matter of course, follow the route of the splendid Military road, most conspicuous monument left by the Spaniards, a highway 84 miles in length over the central mountain range from San Juan on the northern coast to Ponce on the southern coast. A line of motor vehicles traverses this highway. The only railroad on the island makes two-thirds of its circuit, and some day will be completed so as to link all of the principal towns, which are situated on the coast. The fare for the motor ride is eight dollars, and it gives a first rate opportunity of seeing the inland vegetation of Porto Rico.

There are forty rivers in Porto Rico, not counting smaller streams, and its well-watered soil is tremendously prolific. On every hand one sees sugar plantations, tobacco fields and coffee growing on a wholesale scale. Indeed there is very little unoccupied land on the island. Even the poor people cling to their holdings, realizing the wealth and the benefits constantly accruing to them in the way of increased production from the educational efforts of the agriculture station at Mayaguez.

The United States government, however, has set aside 65,000 acres in the rugged mountainous region of the eastern section as a forest preserve. This tropical wilderness is densely clothed with verdure, bits of it having never been explored, it is said, and embraces in its extent the cloud-topped cone of El Yunque, previously alluded to.

Ascents of this mountain are more difficult than might be supposed owing to the virgin condition of its forests, but they are well worth while especially if the day be clear. Upon such occasions one may view the entire island, and glimpse the neighboring islands of Culebra and Vieques. Another point of interest, famed for its magnificent view, is the Albonito pass the summit of mountains crossed by the Military road. One pauses here for a few moments to view through the narrow gap the Caribbean on one hand and the Atlantic on the other.

READY WITH AN EXPLANATION

Guide a Little Short on Ancient History, but Proved a Hard Man to Corner.

The unformed guide at an English provincial art gallery deeply impressed a party of excursionists by the ease with which he reeled off the names of the bronze and marble busts.

This is Dante, and this is Lycurgus, and that one in the corner is Calligula," he explained. "The marble bust with the shaggy beard is Virgil."

"Pardon me," an elderly bystander interrupted, "but you are giving our friends from the country misleading information. The gentleman with the beard is not Virgil, but Homer. This other one is Virgil."

The guide recognized that his reputation was at stake, and turned on the daring bystander.

"See here, Mr. Clever, you think you know it all, but you've backed the wrong horse this time," he retorted. "I was here when the busts was made, and the sculptor—a clever man, but rather fond of his glass—got drunk one day, and chiseled Omer's whiskers on poor old Virgil's chin!"

Then the bystanders gasped, and the guide went up with a bound in the general estimation.

Battle of Blenheim.

The Nibel river where it falls into the Danube is divided into several branches, with marshy ground between, and the French at the battle of Blenheim made it their left flank. The attack on the village had failed and Marlborough risked the crossing of this marshy stream, although the withering fire of the French artillery and the assaults mowed down his men like corn. But he not only succeeded in getting his own infantry and cavalry across, but routed the enemy when he had done so. It is recorded that the river literally ran blood.

Autos and Schools.

One farmer with a cheap automobile has more invested in that one piece of mechanism than the average rural community as a whole has in its school plant; and the owner of the auto frequently spends as much on the upkeep of his one car as the community spends for the total maintenance of the school, including the teacher's salary.—Exchange.

RUNAWAY KATHERINE

In Her Wanderings She Meets Cupid, Well Disguised but Efficient.

By DAN LA GRANGE.

It was on a spring morning that Miss Katherine Beloit suddenly went crazy.

She had reached the age of nineteen without anybody having suspected her of a weak brain. On the contrary, those who knew her best said she would make her mark in the world, girl though she was.

Her parents had planned to go away for a week, and Miss Katherine was to boss the manor house during their absence. A good-by and then the folks were gone. The girl dumped down into the hammock and did some thinking and musing preparatory to going crazy.

"They get ready and go right off as if I didn't count for shucks!" she pouted. "Then go and be hanged, but I shan't always be here to be snubbed. Everybody has a good time but me. Does any one call except on mother? Has ever a young man driving past in an auto stopped and asked what time it was? Of course not! I don't amount to pumpkins, I don't!"

It is generally believed that people go crazy with a whoopee, and make a bee line for the kitchen and the butcher-knife, but there are exceptions to the rule. Miss Katherine raised up on her elbow and gave the hammock pillow a swat with her fist.

"I'll run away—that's what I will do!"

And she didn't put the matter off until next Christmas, but walked right upstairs and looked for the oldest planned in her wardrobe. She hadn't planned where she was to go nor what she should do, but a sort of instinct told her that she should have old clothes on when she did it.

The cook was singing in the kitchen and the gardener loafing, and neither one of them saw the crazy girl as she passed out of the gate into the road and down the highway forty rods until she got the shelter of a bit of woods. There was an auto coming, but it was yet a quarter of a mile away when she was sheltered.

So far so good. She had gone crazy and had made a fair start toward running away and having adventures galore. Where should she run to? With no money in her purse and a very simple role. Suppose it was that of a hired girl? She'd hire for a week and then skip back home, and there would be incidents enough to keep her relating for a month.

Miss Katherine was about to approach the highway and sit down. This cut her off from the road, and she went farther into the woods. She thought there was another highway back of the woodland, but she did not come across it in half a mile's walk.

She was wondering if she should not suddenly regain her senses and return to the house when a man stepped from behind a tree and gave her an awful fright.

He was a bent and withered old man, with hands more like claws, and he eyed her in a malevolent way as they stood for a moment.

"I'm looking for the road over here," she almost whispered.

"You are a liar!" he croaked.

"But there—there is a road?"

"You have come to spy on old John!" he shouted.

"I didn't know you were here."

"You are lying to me. There's a reward of a hundred dollars for me, dead or alive."

"But I don't want it," said the girl in a voice she tried to make wheedling. "All I want is to find the road and go home."

"You can't go!"

She sprang away from him and ran at her best pace, but he had her before she had gone 100 feet. She screamed once, but he raised his fist to strike her, and she was silent. When he took her by the arm to lead her along she realized that he had a fierce grip, and though she tried her hardest to break away he could easily handle her. A few rods from where she encountered him was a brush shanty with a small fire smoldering near by.

"Sit down!" exclaimed the old man.

Miss Katherine drew in her breath to scream.

"If you do, I'll hit you!" warned the old man.

The girl had always heard that insane people must be humored, and finding herself in his power and in danger of violence if she provoked him, she forced a smile and a half-laugh and said:

"Oh, well, I don't want to go home yet anyway, so we won't care about the road."

"Isn't that a pretty good house for an old man to build?" he asked after a grumpy silence.

"Indeed, but it is real cute," was answered.

"And I built it in a day."

"Then you are smarter than most men half your age."

"Do you know my name?"

"No, I never heard it."

"It's Cupid!"

The words came out so pat, and the situation was so incongruous, that Miss Katherine burst into a laugh.

"I've brung about over a hundred matches between couples, and that's why they call me Cupid."

"Are you out in the woods to hunt up a match for someone?"

"No. I came out here to sleep and dream and listen to the whispers, but as soon as I saw you I knew who I should marry you to."

"Well, who is it?"

"It's Will Irwin. Nicest man in this state. He comes to my son David's, where I live, and he brings me candy. I told him I'd find him a wife, and I have."

It looked as if the old man was going to be easy to get away from, and Miss Katherine also lost her fear of him. She saw that flattery was the thing to use, and she said:

"Mr. Cupid, I think you have a good voice for singing."

"I know I have," he replied. "I was singing a song just before you came. It is called the 'Seven Black Crows.' It goes like this."

And in a voice that was cracked and bent and twisted and full of shingle nails he sang two lines of verse over and over again about seven crows, each with a nose. Then his drawl was stopped by a fit of coughing.

"That was surely a beautiful song, and as a reward if you will come down to the house with me, I will hunt you a better suit of clothes than that," said the girl.

"I knew you'd like the song, and I will go with you. Come." How easy they headed for the highway, chattering as they went, but were not yet half-way there when the old man clutched her arm with a grip of iron and dragged her back.

"You can't fool Cupid! You are trying to run away from Mr. Irwin. Don't you scream! Don't you dare do it!"

As he pulled her back to the hut he seized a long strip of bark he had been using as a rope, and passed it around under her arms, and then forced her to sit down and made her fast to a small tree. The girl neither struggled nor protested. The old man's mood had changed once and might again.

"I don't mean to burn you at the stake," he said as he stood back and looked at her, "but I mean to keep you from running away. Suppose I tell Mr. Irwin that I have a wife for him here, and he comes here to see and you are gone! Oh, no, you won't get away! I shall be back in about an hour."

With that he started off at a brisk pace, and was soon lost to sight and hearing. Miss Katherine waited ten minutes and then set out to release herself. She couldn't accomplish it. The bark strip was as strong as a rope, and being made fast behind her the knot was too much for her. Would the old crazy man ever come back?

It was high noon before the cook at Beloit's discovered that Miss Katherine had changed her clothes and gone away somewhere, but it was four o'clock in the afternoon before any real alarm was felt. Then the cook didn't know what should be done, and the gardener replied that he didn't. It was finally decided that she had walked to the village and was taking her time about getting home.

At twilight both servants were standing in the middle of the highway in a nervous state when a young man came along in an auto.

"Are you in any sort of trouble?" he asked.

"Did you overtake a young lady in coming from the village?" was asked.

"No."

"Then she's been carried off by the Black Handers," wailed the cook.

What story there was to tell was told, and the young man said:

"I am Mr. Will Irwin. I passed along here this morning about ten o'clock, going the other way. Down there by the woods I saw a young lady turn off the road and go in among the trees."

"It must have been her," wailed the cook.

"And she'd never stay there as long as this if she wasn't hurt or dead," added the gardener.

He was ordered to get two lanterns and then assist in the search. The woods were entered and beaten back and forth. There was shouting and whistling, and just when they were ready to abandon the search they ran upon the captive. She looked up at them in an anxious way.

"I think you are Mr. Will Irwin, and I think you have come for me."

He looked into her face for a few seconds, and then, as he began to free her, he said:

"Sure, I have. This must be Cupid's work."

And it turned out to be. As they drove from the church after the marriage they passed a crazy old man sitting on the fence and singing about Seven Black Crows.

Wealth and Responsibility.

Just before the late Albert A. Sprague died he had the pleasure of seeing a pension system for old employees—long a cherished project—put into effect. Three employees who had served the concern long and faithfully were made the first beneficiaries. January 1, 1914, a large sum, subsequently increased, was set aside as the nucleus of the pension fund. It was determined that the beneficiaries should not be required to contribute. The only requirement is that the beneficiaries should have a service record of at least twenty years and be sixty years of age. The plan not only affords encouragement to the sober and deserving employee, but also illustrates in a striking way that sense of responsibility for wealth and the welfare of those who help create it, which is the best characteristic of the best type of American business man. It is a noble monument to the public spirit of one who was, in so many other ways, one of Chicago's most public-spirited citizens.—Chicago Herald.

SAVED BY THEIR DEAD

INCIDENT IN THE SERVICE OF FRENCH FOREIGN LEGION.

Soldier Tells How Company of Twelve Men Held a Blockhouse Against the Enemy, and of the Ruin They Employed.

In "Life in the Legion," a soldier's story of his five years' service in the French Foreign Legion by Frederick Martyn (Charles Scribner's Sons), a soldier tells the writer how the theft of a general's clothing caused him to win a medal. He had been on guard and as punishment for his negligence was sent to a small outpost on the desert, a blockhouse guarded by twelve men.

It wasn't long before the Oulad-Seghir Arabs made us busy as we wanted to be.

We had a goodly supply of wine Christmas day. I got four or five liters myself, and when I went to sleep I wanted to sleep a long time. But I didn't get a chance, because in the middle of the night the sergeant, who was a poor man at drink, came and shook us until we were roused up. We had no sooner opened our eyes than we heard the bugler on the roof cracking his lungs with the "rouse," the "alarm" and the "regimental call."

We bounded up to the roof with our rifles in our hands, but no trousers on our legs, and lined up at the "ready."

"Good," said the sergeant, "I was afraid that you were all too drunk. I came up here to smoke a pipe and found the sentry had gone to bed with the rest of you. It would have been a bad job for us if I hadn't wanted that pipe. Look there!" and he pointed to the borders of the oasis where we saw moving figures and plenty of them. "I had the alarm sounded just to remind those monkeys that they can't catch the Legion asleep, and the regimental call was blown on the off chance that it would be heard in Ras-el-Chel, telling the company that there is business going on here."

It was nearly seven o'clock before they came. It was good that they didn't start earlier, for there were several hundreds of them with modern rifles. They climbed up into the palm trees and shot down at us, but that gave us a better chance at them for we couldn't miss birds of that size. Every shot we fired brought one down.

"Our bugler was the first to lose his number. He was shot through the head, and he stood in the angle of the parapet and remained standing as if he were effective.

That gave us an idea, and as each man fell afterwards we propped him up with a bayonet behind and stood him against the parapet. When the sergeant went out we stuck his pipe in his mouth and he looked regular lifelike, only more determined. Soon there was a row of dead men guarding the blockhouse, and they looked so calm and confident that the Oulad-Seghir evidently thought it would be too risky to come to close quarters with us. They gave up the fight in disgust, so when our company came to our rescue at the double there was nothing for them to do.

"Brave fellows, you have saved the post," said our captain, as he embraced the corporal and myself, the only two left standing. But the worthy man was mistaken. It wasn't us that saved the post. It was those others that he didn't embrace.

The company marched past that line of dead defenders and saluted them.

That's how I got this bit of tin, comrades.

Camphor in the Philippines.

The bureau of science of the Philippine government is making a study of the plant known as Blumea balsamifera, known by the natives in the Philippines as "sambon" or "gabuen," which produces camphor. The shrub is one of the most common weeds in the Philippines. It grows from five to eighty feet high, with a stem almost woody in texture, and has long been used by the natives of the Philippines as well as by natives of China for medicinal purposes. The Chinese in parts of Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces already distill considerable camphor from the plant, the chief drawback to the more extensive use of it being the amount of labor required to secure the gum. The bureau of forestry at Manila is introducing the ordinary camphor tree of China and Japan into the mountain districts of Luzon in large numbers for the purpose of building up future camphor production in the islands.

Mr. Museum's Office.

A senate page was whiling away the time in the statehouse corridors when he was approached by a sightseer who asked where the museum was. The accommodating page said he didn't know, but he would find out, and he led the sightseer in to a nearby office.

"Where's Mr. Museum's office?" the page asked.

The attaché of the office finally got the matter straightened out and the sightseer was put on the right track.—Indianapolis News.

"I guess your teacher has the dope right," replied old man Henpeck with a deep sigh. "As I understand it, all is peace and quiet there."

Not Encouraging. Mr. Taft, ex-president of the United States, is a gifted writer, and at one time he had a high reputation as a poet, says London Tit-Bits. On one occasion, however, when he was a very young man, he received a nasty shock from an esteemed relative of his.

This was an aunt who lived in the country, and the future president went to dine with her one Sunday evening. Proudly he carried with him some cuttings from a newspaper—nothing less, in fact, than his own published verses. After the meal he took them exultantly from his pocket and gave them to his aunt to read.

Adjusting her spectacles, she went through them carefully, while her poetical nephew watched her anxiously. Presently she put down the cuttings and glanced over her spectacles at the poet.

"William," she asked, innocently, "do they print those things 'for nothin' if you send them in?"

Useful Cement.

To make cement for stopping leaks and holes in iron pipe, etc., secure about two pounds of iron shavings or borings from a foundry; add one ounce of powdered salamoniac and one ounce of sulphur. Mix with water to a paste and use at once, as it hardens very fast. This will resist heat and water and will be found useful for many purposes. Steel wool or shavings may be secured from any paint or drug store.

Example of Superstition in Eighteenth Century.

When the Science of Medicine Was Emerging From a State of Ignorance Doctors Had to Adjust Selves to Circumstances.

The idea that a horse chestnut in your pocket will cure rheumatism or that the wearing of a red string on the finger will stop nose bleed, and many other foolish beliefs which still persist are part of our heritage from the days when what is now the science of medicine was only a curious mass of superstition.

For centuries mankind had little or no accurate knowledge of the nature of disease and its causes. Among all races, at some time or other, the belief prevailed that illness was the result of evil spirits and that a cure could be effected by frightening them away.

A good example of the long struggle which science had to make to overthrow suspicion is shown in the curious costume worn by French physicians in the early eighteenth century when treating sufferers from the plague.

The garb represents sound scientific knowledge in the protection it gives the body against infection, and is quite similar in this respect to that worn by physicians in plague-stricken districts today. But the big, staring glass eyes and the huge artificial nose, which served no useful purpose, were survivals of the idea that disease was caused by evil spirits which could be frightened away if the physician's appearance was sufficiently terrifying.—New York American.

Made Queer Mistake.

A Pittsburger who passed through Washington on his way to New York is wondering what kind of specimens of humanity blow into the national capital. He says he had taken a Pennsylvania avenue car going up town from the station, and he sat next to a mild-looking old gentleman who seemed to be wrestling with some secret sorrow. When the car turned the corner of Fifteenth street the shake-up brought the old fellow out of his reverie and he looked up to see the monument towering over the adjacent vicinity. "Pardon me," he said to the Pittsburger, "may I ask what that lofty structure over there is?" "That's the monument," said the Steel City man, who spoke of it as Washingtonians do. "What monument?" inquired the old gentleman. "The monument to Washington, of course." The old gentleman gazed at it abstractedly until it was hid from view. "That's the first time I ever heard of a town erecting a monument to itself," he said "lowly and to nobody in particular.

Dignity.

War at last became very costly, so costly that the plain people who paid the bills were about to take upon themselves the responsibility of abolishing it.

But the politicians and others came forward with an expedient. "Let us," suggested these, "sell the moving picture rights."

"Wouldn't that be in derogation of the nation's dignity?" asked the plain people dubiously. "Not at all. You don't quite understand about the nation's dignity. The nation's dignity is all right where you want to start something, but where it stands in the way of its own vindication it becomes very absurd," the politicians and others made haste to explain.

Endless Anticipation.

"It is well that the pleasures of anticipation mean much to us," remarked the Plunkville philosopher.

"For instance?"

"Now I love grand opera and whenever I see a grand opera company billed for Plunkville I anticipate its arrival with keen delight."

"Well?"

"But before the date scheduled the company usually busts."

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadful rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. MINES IN THE AIR

American's Idea of Combating the Zeppelins.

Philadelphia Has Designed Project Which He Believes Will Be Effective If Air Raids Should Be Put into Operation.

Picture a monster Zeppelin, as long as an ocean liner, laden with tons of death-dealing explosives, creeping through the murky mist of a winter night toward London. Picture, again, if you can, the skies turned to flame and the heavens shattered as the hundreds of thousands of cubic feet of hydrogen gas explodes, scattering the sinister craft in tiny pieces over the streets and housetops of the city.

That is the graphic sketch of what is likely to occur if the Zeppelins attempt a serious raid on London, as given by Joseph A. Steinmetz of Philadelphia. Mr. Steinmetz is the originator of the first serious considered scheme of mining the air and the inventor of the trailing bombs for the destruction of dirigibles.

In a few words, the plan devised by Mr. Steinmetz is to install on all the buildings in a threatened area a large number of hydrogen balloons. They are held ready for instant use, and each is attached to a fine wire two miles long, wound on a windlass. The wire is so small that a mile of it weighs but four pounds, while it has a tensile strength of 120 pounds.

The Zeppelin, sighted by the look out, would be permitted to proceed until almost over the objective point. Then, simultaneously, scores of the balloons, to each of which is attached a highly explosive, inflammable bomb, would be released.

Each bomb is surrounded with a ring of hair triggers, and the slightest touch would cause an explosion which would unquestionably ignite the gas in the dirigible. The plan is to send a certain number of the mines to a given altitude, while others will be anchored at different heights, thus allowing the Zeppelin no chance to escape.

The other method of destroying the German craft is along similar lines, but differs in that it is conducted through the use of aeroplanes. Each machine is equipped with bombs such as are used in the air mines. The trailing wire is wound on a spool, which can be operated by the pressure of the aviator's thumb and stopped at will.

The aeroplanes being swifter, would be sent against the dirigible in flocks of three or four. The aviators would depend on their speed and the great altitude to which they can ascend to keep out of range. At the proper time the bombs would be released on the wires and a dash made at the enemy.

In addition to the triggers, which can be locked until the bomb is ready for use, the bombs are fitted with sharp grappling hooks. As the wire is drawn across the big gas bag the hooks will catch and draw the triggers into contact with the envelope. The explosion will follow.

Basis for Exchange.

He had a drove of spirited steeds and paused to give them a much needed rest. The storekeeper came out and looked them over casually.

"Want a horse?"

"Guess not."

The Airship's Wireless.

The newer German naval and military airships of the Zeppelin and Parseval models are equipped with wireless apparatus of much greater power than ever before. The wireless impulses are diffused and received by an aerial made of a three-millimeter phosphor bronze wire that as the airship rises is unwound from a spool to its full length of 750 feet, and that when the airship is aloft floats freely in the air. The apparatus itself is very compact; with its small dynamo it weighs 270 pounds. It has a minimum range of 120 miles and can produce wireless waves from one to four thousand feet long. According to the Wireless World, every large aerodrome in Germany has its wireless station; those at important centers like Johannisthal, Cologne, Friedrichshafen, Frankfurt and Mannheim are very powerful. Taken together, they form a continuous ring round the borders of Germany, and keep German airships in constant touch with a German base. They also serve as a sort of wireless compass, for they enable the navigating officers when out of sight of land to fix their position with more than a fair degree of accuracy.—Youth's Companion.

Icebergs and Sea Water.

That the temperature of sea water rises slightly near an iceberg, as one man of science has asserted, is a conclusion not borne out by the investigations of the bureau of standards. During the summer patrol of the United States steamships Chester and Birmingham in the North Atlantic, members of the staff of the bureau took automatic records of the temperature of the water. The records show that changes of temperature in the sea far from icebergs are at least as great and sudden as the changes near them, and that they do not point to the presence of icebergs. They find also that an iceberg more often lowers than raises the temperature of the water near it. These conclusions are identical with those arrived at by the observers on the Scotia, which was sent out to the Newfoundland banks by the British Board of Trade in the summer of 1913, except that they more often observed small rises of temperature in the neighborhood of icebergs.—Youth's Companion.

Wonderful Blood Remedy That Works in the Tissues

The Very Latest Theory About How and Why the Blood is Disordered.

S. S. S. Means Pure Blood Which Insures Long Life and Health.

The great experts in Chemistry and Physiology now declare what has all along been contended by the Swift Laboratory that the germs of blood disorders find lodgment in the interstices of the tissues.

And herein is where S. S. S. goes to work rapidly, effectively and with wonderfully noticeable results.

This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the nutritive elements of wheat, roast beef, and fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment.

That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, loss of weight, thin pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced by all sufferers with poisoned blood.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright, and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life.

S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of the Swift Specific Co., 231 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice.

S. S. S. is sold everywhere by all drug stores.

Beware of all attempts to sell you something "Just as good." Insist upon S. S. S.

ALL CALIFORNIA INVITED TO ATTEND MONSTER FESTIVITIES. LOW RAILROAD RATES; PARADES AND PAGEANTS UNPARALLELED; MARVELOUS ILLUMINATION FEATURES AND MANY SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS ON THE ZONE WILL DELIGHT MULTITUDES.

Mammoth Fraternal and Peace Day Arranged during Jubilee Week.

Loyal California will Commemorate its Wonderful Rebuilt Metropolis and the Completion of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, the Crowning Achievement of California and the World.

San Francisco and California, the city and the state which occupy such a prominent position among the great cities and states of the Union, are preparing to outdo themselves on April 17 and 18 with a celebration certain to be the greatest in their history. That the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, the greatest universal exposition of all times, should be the center of this celebration is proper and fitting, and it has been so ordered by those in charge of the stupendous affair, arranged to celebrate the rebuilding of the great city, nine years ago destroyed by fire, which left its streets a mass of blackened ruins and wiped out home after home in the path of the flames. San Francisco, proud of her Portola days, her Midwinter Fair and hundreds of other fetes which have been heralded all over the world, will eclipse all of these celebrations in a manner hard to believe, so great is the scope of the plans now under way.

San Francisco's glories are two—the first her amazing recovery from the great disaster of April 18, the second the construction of the most wonderful exposition the world has ever known. The coming celebration will commemorate both of these events. The inclusion of April 17 is made because of the fact that the same date nine years ago saw the last of the "Old San Francisco," so dear to the hearts of Californians and to those who had made their pilgrimage to the metropolis of the Golden State. Therefore, April 17 and 18 will be the greattemplated, San Franciscans will march side by side with Californians, who while not residents of the metropolis, are yet proud of its achievement and the great Exposition which has placed it head and shoulders above any city in the world in that respect. The program will consist of the most spectacular events possible. Competitive athletic events and drills are already scheduled for the daylight hours, while the night will be one continuous round of joy for the thousands who will participate. The sinking of the sun will see the beginning of a carnival such as no city has ever arranged in the past. The present beautiful illumination of the Exposition grounds will be enhanced a thousand fold by additional features while the pyrotechnic display will be on a monster scale, including the burning of an oil-soaked barge off the Marina with the fire-fighters of the city's marine corps battling with the flames. A free-for-all carnival on the Zone lasting until midnight and incorporating as the festival features for which San Francisco is famous, with many new ones especially arranged for the great occasion. In brief, the Exposition officials are determined to make the afternoon and evening memorable in the life of the great fair. All these events will be scheduled for Saturday, April 17, while Sunday will be set aside as a day of thanksgiving. There will be a great chorus of 1,000 voices in Festival Hall, a night of thanksgiving in the Court of the Universe, conducted along non-sectarian lines by the clergy of the bay cities. Constant organ recitals, band concerts, dancing, huge bonfires and parades will fill in the hours between the bigger events, so that not a moment will be left for DULL CARE.

Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, President American Peace Society, Member International Peace Committee, World's Insurance Congress, Who Will Be One of the Principal Speakers.

San Francisco has attempted many great fetes in the years gone by and all of them have been wonderfully successful. The festival of the city has ever contemplated, and it is to be a state-wide one. Every Californian is invited to participate, making it not only a San Francisco pageant, but a California one as well. San Francisco extends its arms to her sister cities of the State and asks that all join with her in celebrating the Greater San Francisco and the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. No Californian can afford to miss this wonderful celebration and it is a certainty that no Californian, knowing San Francisco's way of doing things, will fail to be on hand when the thousands already assured begin their wonderful procession to the grounds of the greatest international exposition in the history of the world.

Another great event being arranged for the jubilee week, which begins with the celebration on the 17th, is Fraternal Day, set for April 22. Judging from the elaborate arrangements that are being made, Fraternal Day will go down in the history of the Exposition as one of the biggest days of all and one of the most brilliant of all those which have been planned. A committee composed of representatives of about thirty of the leading fraternal organizations in the United States have been working diligently for weeks past to make the day a grand success, and from reports piling in daily have succeeded beyond their fondest imagination.

The idea of a Fraternal Day at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition was adopted unanimously at a regular session of the National Fraternal Congress, composed of the supreme officers of over a hundred of the leading fraternal insurance organizations in America. Eighteen committees were appointed and headquarters were opened in the Exposition City, with Charles W. Dempster as chairman. All the leading fraternal papers took up the subject with enthusiasm, and the great circulation of these organs should make the day the greatest of its kind in history. Secretary of State Bryan wired Mr. Dempster acceptance of the chairmanship of the Fraternal Day Peace Committee and his presence at the Exposition will add wonderful interest to the present schedule. The supreme officers of many fraternal organizations from various parts of the country have made known their intentions to be present, and Governor Johnson will be asked to declare Fraternal Day a legal holiday, inasmuch as a great World's Peace Demonstration will be held on the same day. Special rates will be in force on all railroads in California, and the following program, which will be added to from day to day, has already been arranged:

A mammoth fraternal parade, headed by a large platoon of mounted police, divested of firearms, clubs and all implements of hostilities (emblematic of peace), followed by many bands, floats, drum corps and military drill teams, as well as thousands of decorated automobiles, will start at 9:30 a. m. from the Civic Center to the Exposition grounds, through the gates and down the Zone to other parts of the Jewel City. The program on the Exposition grounds during the afternoon will consist of speeches by Secretary of State Bryan and other famous speakers. There will be fancy exhibition drills and contests between military drill teams of different societies for handsome prizes, as well as other appropriate features, including day and night fireworks.

In the evening there is to be a grand reception and ball in the California Building, to which anyone wearing the official Fraternal Day admission and souvenir badge will be admitted. To miss Fraternal Day and the great Peace Demonstration at the Exposition on April 22 would be an oversight to be regretted for years, and the committee in charge of arrangements are planning for the reception of thousands upon thousands of fraternal brothers and sisters on that date.

Did It Pay?

At the earnest solicitation of friends, one of our public-spirited citizens left his oranges on the trees for the benefit of the tourists who might pass that way. Only a short time after, some of the boys of this community, who ought to have been at home or engaged in some more gentlemanly performance, literally stripped the trees of their golden fruit and even broke some of the branches. The question arises, "did it pay?" Possibly a few tourists were delighted with the sight of those gold laden trees, but the grower lost his fruit and had his trees injured. Temptation, too strong, was placed before the boys who do not think of the wrong or damage. Whether it paid or not, it is our guess that Mr. Man will pick his own fruit another time and protect his property.

ONE of the unique and most pleasing exhibits of the Fair is the one in the Southern Pacific building whose air is permeated with the odor of redwoods and ferns. Probably the part of this exhibit that elicits the most complimentary remarks is the exhibit of Santa Clara valley. You should see it before leaving the grounds. You can't forget it after you have seen it.

Local and Personal

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.
