Doth your Minister (if he be a Preacher, and thought fit by your Bishop) having any popish Recusant, or Recusants in his parish, labour diligently with them from time to time, thereby to reclaime them from their errorrs: And if he be no Preacher, or not such a Preacher, doth hee procure some that are Preachers so qualified, to take paines with them to that purpose?

Can. 114. 10. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, carefully informe himselfe every yeare, how many popish Recusants, men, woemen, and children above the age of thirteene yeares, or being otherwise popishly given, are inhabitants within their parish or parishes, or make their abode there, either as sojourners or common guests?

Can. 70. 11. Doth your Minister every Sunday weekly (if there be occasion) in the presence of you the Churchwardens, write and record in the Register-booke the names of all persons christened, together with the names and surnames of their parents, as also, the names and surnames of all persons married and buried in that parish the weeke before, and the day and yeare of every such Christening, Marriage, and Burial, and unto every page thereof when it is filed, do you and your said Minister subscribe your names: And is a true coppie of the said Christnings, Marriages, and Burials, subscribed with the names of your Minister and you the Churchwardens; transmitted yearly within one moneth after the 25 of March, unto the Bishop of the Diocese to be preserved in his Registry?

12. Doth your Minister in the parish Church or Chappell, where hee hath charge, reade the Canons, Orders, and Constitutions, (agreed on in the Synod held at London, Anno 1603.) once every yeare upon some Sundayes or Holydayes in the afternoone before Divine Service: and doth he so divide the same, as the one halfe may be read one day, and the other halfe the other day?

Whether hath your Minister, Churchwardens, and Sidenmen, presented unto the Lord Bishop of London, or his Chancelour, within fortie dayes after Easter, the names of all the Parishioners, as well men as women, which being above 16. yeares of age, received not the Communion, at or about Easter before according to the 112. Canon; If not, you shall present, whether that presentment should have bene brought in by your selves or your predecessors, and specifye the names of every one that should have made such presentment at Easter last past?*

Concerning Schoolemasters, Parish Clarkes, and Sextens.

Can. 77. Doth any man in your Parish teach either in publike School or private house, but such as be allowed by the Bishop of the Diocese, or other Ordinary of the place under his hand and Seale: And if there bee no publike Grammer-schoole founded in your parish, doth any other teach Schoole in your parish, than your Curate only, if he be willing so to doe?

Can. 78. 2. Doth your Schoolemaster teach in English or Latine, as the children are able to beare, the shorter or longer Catechisme set forth by Authority and no other: doth he on Sundayes and Holydayes when there is a Sermon cause his Schollers to come unto the Church, and there see them quietly and orderly behave themselves: And doth he traine them up at other times in sentences of holy Scripture: And doth he teach them any other Grammar than that which was set forth by King Henry VIII. and hath since continued?

Can. 91. 3. Have you belonging to your Church or Chappell a Parish Clarke aged 21. yeares at the least? Is he of honest conversation, sufficient for his reading, writing, and also for his competent skill in singing? Is your said Clarke chosen by any your Parson, Vicar, or other Minister. And doth your Clarke so chosen as before is said, receive his ancient usuall wages, without any fraud or diminution, as hath bene accustomed: Or who is it that denyeth to pay that wages?

Can. 67. 4. Doth your Sexten or your Parish Clarke (if there be no Sexton) when, and as often as any person is passing out of this life, cause a Bell to be tolled, that so his neighbours may be warned to recommend his soule to the grace of God? And after the said parties death (if it so fall out) doth he ring or cause one short peale to be forthwith rung, that so his neighbours may have notice that he is departed?

Whether do you the Churchwardens of every Parish within the Citie and suburbs of London (according to the Kings Majesties Letters Patents, under the great Seale of England in that behalfe granted) suffer your Parish Clarke to gather his wages himselfe, in as full and ample manner, as the same hath formerly bene gathered, in or by colour of his name, without diminution, upon pretence of pewage, or the like, and without any manner of disturbance or interruption or forbidding any one so to pay the same unto him, and whether doe you assist your Clarke in collecting his wages (if need be) according to his Majesties said Letters Patent: and whether doe you duly present all such persons of your Parish as refuse to pay the said Clarkes accustomed wages, as by his Majesties said grant, you are required and commanded?†

Concerning Parishioners.

Can. 109. Is there any in your Parish either Master or Servant, Sojourner or Inhabiter, that hath offended either by Adultery, Whoredome, Incest, or drunkennesse, or by swearing, ribaldry, (or filthy speaking) usury, or any other uncleannesse, or wickednesse of life? you shall faithfully present all and every the said offenders.

* This paragraph is in Roman type. See note, end of Tit. 2, supra.

Can. 110.

2. Doe you know of any in your Parish, or elsewhere, that is an hinderer of the word of God to be read, or sincerely preached, or of the execution of any Ecclesiasticall Canons, now by law in force? or a faoutour of any usurped or forraigne power, by the lawes of this Realme justly rejected and taken away, or a defendour of any popish and erroneous doctrine? you shall detect, and faithfully present, &c.

Can. 114.

3. Have you in your parish any popish Recusants, men, women, or children above the age of 13 yeares, whether inhabitants, or sojourners, and common guests, that refuse to come to Church, or comming to the Church, refuse to receive the Communion? you shall set downe their names in writing, if you know their names, or otherwise, those names by which they are called, and who they are that entertaine such guests or sojourners.

Q. Eliz. c. 1.

4. Have you any that disswade any of his Majesties subjects, from comming to the Divine Service in this Church established, or that have or doe practise with any of them to disswade them from taking the oath of Allegiance, or that have any wayes offended against the Canon lately made, for the suppressing of popish superstition?

1 Eliz. c. 2.

5. Doe all and every person or persons inhabiting or sojourning within your Parish, diligently and faithfully resort unto your parish Church, or Chappell accustomed, upon every Sunday, and other dayes appointed to be used and kept as Holydayes, doe they then and there abide orderly and soberly, during the time of common prayer, preaching, or other service of God there to be used, or ministred? Or, (which is contrary thereunto) have you any that come

Can. Anno 1571. ca. 5.

unto the preachings only, and not unto the common prayer, or comming to the common prayer, neither use to come at the beginning, nor tarry out unto the end? Or that being there doe rudely and disorderly behave themselves, or which by walking, talking, or any noise doe hinder

Can. 111.

the Minister or Preacher?

6. Have you any that upon the Sundayes or Holydaies, imploy themselves in their bodily and ordinary labour, or that permit their servants so to doe? Or that keepe open Shops in time of divine Service? Or any Vintners, Innkeepers, or other Victuallers, that permit any to lie tipling in their houses, or that doe tipples, dice, or play at cards, or any other game in time of divine Service on the aforesaid dayes? Or that use any plowing, carting, or workes of husbandry, on any of those Sundayes or holydayes, throughout the yeare, unlesse according to Law, or otherwise dispose themselves, then according to God's holy will and pleasure, and the orders of the Church of England prescribed in that behalfe, and by Law in force?

Can. 18.

7. Doth any manner of person cover his head in your Church or Chappell in time of divine Service or Sermon, or any part thereof, except he have some infirmitie; and in case of such infirmitie, doth he weare a coif or nightcap only, and not his hat? doe all and every person of your parish reverently kneele upon their knees, when the generall Confession, the Letany, the ten Commandements and other prayers are read, and also at the receiving the blessed Sacrament of the Lords Supper, doe they all say the Creed, and Lords prayer, next immediately following in a loud voice together with the Minister? doe they stand up at the saying of the Believe, and such other parts of divine Service as formerly they have bene used to stand up at, according to the Rules and ancient custome of this Church? And when and as often as in the time of divine Service the Lord Jesus shall be mentioned, is due and lowly reverence done by all persons present? have you any that offend in the neglect of these particulars, and what are there (sic) names?

Can. 18.

Can. 114. Rubr.

8. Have you any parishioner that being 16. yeares of age doth not receive the Communion, at the least thrice in the yeare, of which Easter to be one, or that doth not receive the Sacraments and other rites according to the order of the common prayer booke? Or that doth not reckon with his Parson, Vicar, or Curate, or his or their deputies at Easter, yearly paying such Ecclesiasticall duties as are accustomedly due then, and at that time to be paid?

Can. 122.

Rubr.

9. The Minister standing as he is appointed at the North side, or end of the Table, when hee prepares to celebrate the holy Communion, and calling on those who doe intend to communicate, to draw neare and take that holy Sacrament to their comfort, as it is in the words of the common prayer booke, have you any in your parish that keepe their seats, and sit still in their places, not drawing neare, as is commanded by the Church, but looking that the Minister should forsake the place of his station, by the Church appointed, to bring it to them?

Can. 58. 10. Is there any of your parish, who doth forsake his owne Church or Chappell to receive the Communion at the hands of any other than their owne Minister, or any strangers that usually repaire to your Church, or Chappell to the same intent, or any that refuse to receive the holy Communion at the hands of their owne Minister, because hee is no Preacher, or to have their children baptized by him in the same respect, or that for the same respects communicate, or cause their children to be baptized in other Parishes abroad? Or doth your Minister baptize any children presented unto him out of other Parishes? you shall present the names of all offenders in these particulars.

Rubr. of Bap. 11. Have you any that procure their children to be baptized at home in their houses without great cause and necessity, or by any other than their own lawfull Minister if he may be had? Or after any other form and manner than is prescribed by the Liturgie of the Church of England, or any that procure themselves to be married privately, or after any other manner than the Church prescribes?

Can. 59. 12. Do all and every housholder or your Parish, Fathers, Mothers, Masters and Mistresses, cause their children, seruants, and apprentices which have not learned their catechisme, come unto the Church on Sundayes and Holydayes in the afternoone, obediently to heare and to be ordered by the Minister till they have learnt the same?

Can. 91. 13. Have you any in your Parish that refuse to contribute, and pay the rate assessed upon him, for the repaire of your Church or Chappell, or the providing of any bookes, utensils or necessary ornaments to the same belonging? present the names of those which doe so refuse.

Can. 85. 14. Have you any that keepe company and hold society with such as are denounced and declared Excommunicate?

Can. 107. 15. Have you any living in your Parish, which have bene legally separated and divorced have afterwards bene married unto others, either men or women, during the life of each other, or that being so divorced as afore is said, keepe company with each other at bed and at board? Or any that being lawfully married, doe yet live asunder, without a separation in due course of law?

Can. 99. 16. Have you any persons in your Parish which are and have been married within the degrees prohibited by the Lawes of God, and expressed in a Table set forth by authority? And is the said Table publicly set up and fixed in your Church or Chappell at the Charge of the Parish?

Can. 92. 17. Are there in your Parish any Wills unprovved, or any goods unadministred by lawfull Authority? Did any dying in your Parish give any legacy unto your Church or Chappell, or to the use of the poore and needy? how have the said legacies so given been disposed of, by whom and by whose Authority? And have they otherwise been disposed of, then to the said pious and charitable uses?

Whether is there in your parish, a common fame and report of any which have committed Adulterie, Fornication, or Incest, or any Baudes, harbourers, or receivers of such persons, or vehemently suspected thereof, if yea, then specific their names; Whether have you any in your Parish, which are by common fame and report and vehement suspition, reputed and taken to be common Drunkards, blasphemers of God's holy Name, common and usuall swearers, filthy speakers, railers, sowers of discord among their neighbours, or speakers against Ministers Marriages, or Vsurers, contrary to the Statute made in the 37, yeare of King Henry the eighth? you shall not faile to present their names.*

ing his Benefice and presenting to the same for gaine, for or receiving money, or promise of the Lease of the whole or part, or by reserving his owne tithes, or any pension to himselfe or any other?

What Almshouses, Hospitals, Free-schools have you in your Parish, that are not of the Foundation or Patronage of the King, and who was the Patron or Founder thereof, and whether the saide Almshouses, Hospitals, or Free-schools in your Parish, being under the Rule and Government of the Lord Bishop of London, be well and godly used, according to the ancient Foundations and Ordinances of the same.

Whether any Persons within your Parish, either for the offences aforesaid, or for any other contumacy or crime, doe remaine excommunicated, what be their names, and for what cause, and how long have they stood excommunicated?

Concerning Church-wardens and Sidemen.

Can. 89. Are you the Churchwardens chosen by the ioynt consent of your Minister and Parishioners, or one of you by the Minister, and the other by the Parishioners: Have the last Churchwardens given up their accounts, delivering up to the Parishioners the money remaining in their hands, and other things of right belonging to your Church or Chappell, and is the same delivered to you by bill indented?

Can. 90. 2. Do you the Churchwardens and Sidemen diligently see that all your parishioners resort duly to your Church or Chappell, upon Sundayes and Holydayes, and there continue the whole time of Divine Service? doe you suffer any to walke or stand idle or talk in the Church or in the Church-yard, or Church-porch, during that time, to the disturbance of the Minister and scandall of the congregation? You must present the names of such as offend herein?

Can. 19. 90. 3. Do you against the time of every Communion, at the charge of the Parish provide a sufficient quantitie of fine white bread, and of good and wholesome wine, for the number of the Communicants? And doe you doe the same with the advice and direction of your Minister? And the wine so provided, do you bring to the Communion Table in a cleane and sweet standing pot or flaggon?

Can. 52. 4. Doe you the Churchwardens and Sidemen see, that the names of all Preachers which come to your Church from other places, be noted in a booke provided for that purpose? And doth every such Preacher subscribe his name in the said booke the day when he preached, and the name of the Bishop of whom he had licence to preach?

Can. 53. 5. If there be any publike dissension and contradicting in your Pulpit betweene the Minister of your Church or Chappell, and any other Preacher or Preachers, whereby disquietnesse and offence may grow among the people, doe you forthwith signifie the same unto the Bishop, and not suffer the partie to enjoy the place so by him abused, untill the Bishop hath taken further order in it?

Can. 115. 6. Doe any person or persons, trouble or molest you the Churchwardens, for presenting all or any of those persons, which do offend in any of the premisses, who are they that doe so molest or trouble you, and before whom, and in what Court doe they so molest you?

1 Eliz. c. 2. Can. 157. 7. Doe you the Churchwardens leuie by way of distresse, on the goods Lands and Tenements of every person in your Parish, that doth not resort unto your Parish Church or Chappell on every Sunday and Holyday throughout the yeare, (having no reasonable excuse to bee absent) the summe of xii. pence, for every Sunday or Holydaye that he is so absent? And doe you distribute the severall summes so levied as before is said, among the poore of the parish, according to the Law in that case provided?

Can. 119. 8. Have you had time sufficient for drawing up of your presentments? how long is it since this booke of Articles was sent unto you? have you perused and considered as well the Oath you are to take, as the Articles whereon to ground your presentments, and every branch and clause thereof, and have you framed your presentments punctually, according to the severall branches and clauses of those Articles? For know assuredly that as well the discharging of your Office, is the chiefe meanes whereby publike sinnes and offences may be reformed and punished, so if you wil-

Can. 26. fully omit to present such crimes as either you know to be committed, or otherwise have heard by publike fame, that in such cases your Ordinaries are to proceed against you, as in causes of wilfull perjurie, in their Ecclesiasticall Courts?

Concerning Chancellors, Registers, Proctors, Apparators, and other Ecclesiasticall Officers.

Is the Chancellor, Commissarie, or Official, that exerciseth Ecclesiasticall Jurisdiction according as you know or have heard in holy Orders of the Ministerie, or if he be not, is he well affected and zealously bent towards Religion, and such a man touching whose life no evill example is had?

2. Doe they or any of them substitute any in their absence to keepe Court for them, that is not either a grave Minister, and a Graduate, or a licensed publike Preacher, and a Beneficed man neare the place where the Courts are kept, or a Batchellour of Law, or a Master of Arts at the least, who hath some skill in the Civill and Ecclesiasticall Lawes? Is he or they so substituted, a favourer of true Religion, and a man of modest and honest conversation? Declare the truth according to your knowledge or best information in these particulars.

3. Do they or any of them (not being themselves in holy Orders) pronounce the sentence of Excommunication, or leave it only to the Bishop, and is the same pronounced only by the Bishop, or by some grave man of his appointment, which is in the Ministry? Or do they or any of them absolve any that are Excommunicated at his or their owne house or houses, or otherwise in private houses, or only openly and in the Consistorie? declare your knowledge in this point.

4. Doth your Chancellor, Archdeacon, Commissarie or Officiall, take upon him, or them to alter any penance enjoyned without leave of the Bishop? Have they or either or any of them, commuted any penance with any dwelling in your Parish? What summe of monie hath bene taken for the said commutation? Is the said summe made knowne unto you in the congregation either by the penitent himselfe, or by the Minister of your Parish, As by the Canons of the yeare 1597. it ought to be: And being so made knowne, hath the same summe or summes of monie, bene distributed on the poore of your Parish, or otherwise bestowed upon pious uses? And on what pious uses, as you have bene credibly informed, was the same bestowed?

5. Doth your Chancellor, Archdeacon, Officiall, or other Ecclesiasticall Judge, suffer any generall Processe of Quorum Nomina to be sent out of the Court, except the names of all such as be cited, are first expresse entered by the hand of the Register or his Deputie, and the said processes and names be subscribed by the Judge or his Deputie, and his seale of Office thereto affixed?

6. Doth the Chancellor, or any Commissarie within your Diocesse, cite any of your Parish for any crime into his court, that hath bene formerly detected or presented to the Archdeacon? Or doth your Archdeacon cite any dwelling in your Parish, to appeare before him for any crime presented to the Chancellor in his Visitation? by which of the two aforesaid Jurisdictions was the partie offending cited last?

7. Doth your Chancellor, Commissarie, Archdeacon, Officiall, or any other using Ecclesiasticall Jurisdiction, speede any Judiciall Act except he have the Ordinary Register of the court, or his lawfull Deputy, or else such persons to write and speed the same, as are by Law allowed in that behalfe? Or have they, or either, or any of them, without the Bishops consent any more seales then one, for the sealing of all matters incident to his or their Office? And doth the said Seale remaine in the custodie of the Judge himselfe, or of the lawfull substitute by him appointed? And is the same kept in the Citie or principall Towne in the Countie as the Law requireth?

8. Doth your Chancellor, Commissarie, Archdeacon, Officiall or others exercising any Ecclesiasticall Jurisdiction, or either or any of them, appoint such place or places for the keeping of their Courts, as are convenient for the entertainment of those that are to make their appearance there, and most-indifferent for travell? And doe they end in their Courts in such convenient time or times, as every man may returne homewards in as due season as may be?

9. Hath any Register unto your knowledge, or as you have credibly bene informed, received wittingly any certificate without the knowledge of the Judge? Or willingly omitted to call any persons cited to appeare upon any Court day? Or that hath unduely put off, and deferred the Examination of witnesses to be examined by a day, set and assigned by the Judge? Or that hath set downe or enacted any thing false, or conceited by himselfe, as decreed by the Judge, or not so ordered or decreed by the Judge? Or that hath received any reward in any Causes whatsoever in favour of any partie, or that is of counsell directly or indirectly with either of the parties in suit? declare your knowledge in these particulars.

10. Doth any Register or any other Minister of Ecclesiasticall Courts or any of the Judges of the said Courts take or receive any other or greater fees, then such as were ratified and approved by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Anno 1597. and contained in the Tables of fees, for that purpose made: And are two Tables, containing the severall rates and summes of the said fees, set up according to the Law in that case provided? That is to say, one of them in the usuall place or Consistorie where the Court is kept, and the other of them in the Registry, or Registers Office? And are they set up in such sort that every man whom it concerneth may without difficultie come to the view thereof and take a copie of them if they so desire? And doth any Register or other Ecclesiasticall Officer take more for shewing Letters of Orders, then is appointed in the 137. Canon?

11. Doth any Proctor take upon him to appeare in any Cause or pretend to be entertained in the same, unlesse hee be constituted and appointed by the party himselfe either before the Judge and in open Court, or by sufficient Proxie confirmed by some authenticall Seale, the parties ratification therewithall concurring? If you know any such present him, that so he may be punished as the law provides? Or doth any Proctor take the oath in Animam Domini, in any cause whatever, contrary to the ordinance of holy Church?

12. How many Apparators have you in your Diocesse or Archdeaconrie, as you either know or doe conjecture? Doe they or any of them execute their Office by themselves or by their Deputies? And if by their Deputies, then is the cause of such their deputation and employment made knowne and approved of by the Ordinary of the place? Doe they take upon them the Office of Promotors or Informers for the Court, or exact more or greater fees then are prescribed in the Tables before remembred? What other abuses and aggrievances can you complaine of justly in the said Apparators?

Whether any Archdeacon or Officiall within the Diocesse of London hath or doth commute or change any penance or corporall punishment, in whole or in part, and what money such Archdeacon or Officiall hath received, what the offence was for which any summe of money was received, or appointed to be paid? set downe the particulars of the premisses.*

Whether any Archdeacon or Officiall, or his Surrogate, have within these three yeares last past, granted any Licences for the Marriage of any parties in your parish Church, or elsewhere, whether hath your Minister by vertue of the said Licences, so married them, and by whom the said Licences were so granted, and you are likewise required by vertue of your corporall oath to make diligent search in the Register booke of marriages kept within your parish, what parties have bene married by the said authoritie, and if you know any such, present their names, and places where they dwell.

Whether have you in your Parish any Curats, Schoole-masters, Chirurghions, Parish Clarkes, or Mid-wives, licensed by any other authority, than of the Lord-bishop of this Diocesse, or his Chancellor, and whether any fees have bene demanded or received by any other besides the Lord Bishop of this Diocesse, or his Chancellor, in the Lord Bishops Visitation, for exhibiting the said licences?

Whether any Commissarie, Archdeacon, or Officiall, have at any time, especially within these three yeares last past, intermeddled in the placing or displacing of any persons in pewes, in your Parish Churches, or have granted any confirmation of seates, under his seale of office, or by his authority hath caused to be removed the Pulpit, or Font, or reading Deske from their ancient and accustomed place, or given way to making of doores or windows in Churches or Chappels, or erecting of Galleries?

Whether any Commissarie, Archdeacon, or Officiall have proved the Wils, or granted Administration of the goods of any beneficed man or Curat dying within his Jurisdiction, or of any other person being in holy Orders?

The Charge of the Church-wardens and Sworn-men set downe for the better performance of their duties, and discharge of their Oaths.

They are not to bring in any Bills into the Archdeacons Court upon the Articles to be enquired of in their Visitation, by reason of my Lords Visitation, but only now during the said Visitation, to make their presentments upon these Articles. They are therefore charged, that after their Oath taken, and their returne home, they doe require their Minister to reade over both the Book of Canons or Constitutions, set forth by his Majestie, in the Convocation holden in the year of our God, 1604. and also these Articles unto them, and to consider of every particular Article, and of the offences by them to be presented, as also of such persons in their Parish as shall bee noted to offend in the same: and so the Church-wardens and Side-men assembling themselves together within some convenient time, are to make their Bill, answering every Article, by it selfe, before the time hereafter appointed them, which Bill shall be signed with the hands of all the Church-wardens and Side-men, with conference had with their Minister upon the said bill of presentment, who, according to the 26. Canon; is to see that the said Church-wardens doe their duties in presenting, upon the penaltie in the 26. Canon prescribed. These Bills shall be brought by both the Church-wardens.

* This paragraph and the four which follow, together with the Churchwardens' Charge, are in Roman type.

At the delivery of your Bill of presentment, at the time and place before set downe, you the Church-wardens are likewise in the said Bill, to set downe the names of all such as have died within your parish at any time since the day of July last past being Men, Maides, or Widowes: and what person or persons have beene married since the said time, and by what Licence or authority: and likewise you the Minister, Church-wardens and Side-men of every Parish, must in the end of the said Bill of presentment, set downe the number of all Recusants, and non-Communicants as followeth

Recusants men	}
Recusants women
Non-Communicants of both sex.
Communicants of both sex in the Parish

So setting downe the number of every one, you the Minister, Church-wardens and Side-men, must put your hand to the said Note.

FINIS.

BOSTOCK, ARCHDEACON OF SUFFOLK, 1640

ARTICLES to be enquired of in the ordinary visitation of the right worshipfull Mr. Doctor Bostock, Arch-Deacon of Suffolk, Anno Domini 1640.

London,

Imprinted by Thomas Paine. 1640.

[Short form of Churchwardens' Oath, similar to that in some of the previous Articles.]

CHAP. I.

1. First, Whether there be any abiding in, or resorting to your Parish, that have, or doe maintaine or defend any heresies, Errors, or false Opinions, contrary to the Faith of Christ, and the holy Scripture?

2. Item, Whether doe any in your Parish, being sixteene yeeres of age and upwards, or others lodging, or commonly resorting to any house in your Parish; absent themselves from the Parish Church, Chappell, or Oratory, upon Sundayes or Holidayes, and other dayes appointed, at Morning and Evening Prayer? Or what person doth usually come late to Church, or depart from thence before Divine Service and Sermon be ended? And is the Declaration which the Kings Majestie prefixed before those 39. Articles concerning the setting of the questions late in difference, duly observed by all in your Parish, according to his Majesties commandement?

8. Item, Is there any in your Parish, or resorting to it, that hath, or doth sell, publish, or disperse any superstitious, seditious, or schismaticall Bookes, Libels, or writings, touching the Religion, State, or Ecclesiasticall government (sic) of this Kingdome, present their names, qualities, and conditions, if you know, or have heard of any?

CHAP. II.

Concerning publique Prayer, and administration of the holy Sacraments.

1. First, Whether any of your Parish hath spoken or declared anything in dereogation (sic) or depraving of the forme of Gods worship in the Church of England, and administration of the Sacraments, rites and ceremonies set forth and prescribed in the booke of common Prayer, by the Kings Majestie, authorized, and confirmed? doe any preach, speake, or declare, that it containeth anything which is not agreeable to the holy Scriptures?

2. Item, Whether hath any in your Parish caused, procured, or maintained, any Minister to say any common or publique prayer, or to administer either of the Sacraments of Baptisme, and the Lord's Supper, otherwise or in any other manner and forme, then is mentioned in the said booke of common prayer? or whether hath any interrupted, hindered, letted, or disturbed the Minister to reade divine service, and administer the Sacraments, in such manner and forme as is mentioned in the said booke, or interrupted him in his Sermon?

3. Item, Whether is the Sacrament of Baptisme rightly and duely administred according to the forme prescribed in the booke of common Prayer, with due observation of all rites and ceremonies prescribed to be used in the same, without adding or altering any part of any prayer, or interrogatories? is the signe of the Crosse every time used, and the Surplice alwaies worne in the administring of it?

4. Item, Whether is the administration of the Sacrament of Baptisme deferred longer then the next Sunday or holy day immediately following the birth of the child?

5. Item, Whether is the Sacrament of Baptisme refused to bee administred to any child borne in or out of Wedlocke, their birth being made knowne to the Minister of the Parish, and offered to him to be baptised, or have any such children dyed unbaptized? And whether be the Parents of any Child to be Baptized, admitted to be Godfathers and Godmothers to the same?

6. Item, Whether hath there any child beene baptized in private houses, by any lay person, or Midwife, or Popish Priest, or by any other Minister, without urgent occasion, when the child was in danger of death, and in case any such child was baptised privately, was the same brought afterwards to Church to the intents prescribed in the Rubrick of the Liturgie in that case provided?

7. Item, Whether hath the blessed Sacrament of the Lords Supper beene duely and reverently administred within your Parish church every moneth, or so often as that all the Parishioners above the age of sixteene yeeres, may communicate thrice every yeere at least, whereof once to be at Easter?

8. Item, Whether hath the said blessed Sacrament beene delivered unto any, or received by any the Communicants within your Parish, that did unreverently (sic) either sit, or stand, or leane, or that did not devoutly and humbly kneele upon their knees, in plaine and open view without collusion or hypocrisie?

9. Item, Whether have you any excommunicate persons or Schismatickes, common and notorious depravers of the Religion and Government of this Realme, without unfaigned sorrow shewed for their impiety and wickednesse, beene admitted to receive the holy Communion within your Parish, present their names?

10. Item, Whether hath any in your Parish beene debarred from receiving the said holy Communion, without just cause, and without intimation presently given to the Ordinary, viz. the Bishop of the Diocesse, Chancellor, or Commissary, and by whose default?

11. Item, Whether have the children which have been borne to any Popish Recusants, or begotten by them, beene publicly baptised in your Parish Church, or where were they else baptised, and by whom were they so baptised as you know, or have credibly heard?

CHAP. III.

1. First, have you in your Church, or Chappell, the whole Bible in the largest volume, and of the last translation, the booke of Common Prayer, the two bookes of Homilies, and Bishop Jewels Apology, all well and fairely bound? and have you also in your Church the forme of the Divine Service, for the fift day of November, and for the twenty-seventh day of March, and the booke of constitutions or Cannons Ecclesiasticall?

2. Item, Whether have you in your Church or Chappell, a Font of stone set up in the ancient usuall place, whole and cleane, and fit to hold water? a convenient and decent Communion Table with a Carpet of silke, or some other decent stufte continually laid upon the Table, at the time of Divine Service, and a faire linnen cloath thereon laid at the time of administring the holy Communion, and is the same Table placed conveniently, so as the Minister may best be heard in his administration, and the greatest number may reverently communicate? to that end, doth it ordinarily stand up at the East end of the Chancell, is it at any time used unreverently, by leaning or sitting on it, throwing hats or anything else upon it, or writing on it; or is it abused to any other prophane or common use? and are the tenne Commandements set up in your Church or Chappell, where the people may see and reade them, and other chosen sentences also written upon the walles of your Church or Chappell, in places convenient for the same purpose?

3. Item, Whether have you in your said Church or Chappell a convenient seate for your minister to reade divine service in, where doth it stand, how farre from the Chancell, and which way doth the standing thereof cause the Minister to turne his face when hee kneeleth therein at prayers? Have you also a comely Pulpit, set up in a convenient place, with a decent cloth or Cushion for the same, a comely large Surplice, a faire Communion Cuppe of silver, and a cover agreeable to the same; a flagon of silver or pewter, with all other things and ornaments, fit for the celebration of divine service, and administration of the Sacraments? and have you a Chest, wherein to put the Almes for the poore, with all three lockes and keys unto it, and another for the keeping of the Bookes, the Communion vessels and ornaments of the Church, or where are they kept, and who keepeth the keys of the said Chests?

4. Item, whether in the said Chest have you a Register booke of parchment, wherein to register the Christnings, Weddings, and Burialls, and is the same booke written and kept in all points according to the Cannon? is the christen name of the Mother as well as of the Father, therein duely registred, and is a transcript thereof transmitted every yeare into the Bishops principall Registry? have you a faire paper booke, wherein every Preacher which is a stranger, is to subscribe his name, the day hee preached, and by whose authority hee is licenced? and have you also a Table set up in your Church, of the degrees wherein by law men are prohibited to marry?

5. Item, Whether in your Church or Chappell with the Chancell thereof, and your Parsonage house, or Vicarage house, and all other houses thereto belonging, your Parish almshouse, and Church house, in good reparations? and are they employed to godly and their right holy uses? and if any of them be ruined, and wasted in whom is the default? and is your Church, Chancell and Chappell decently and comely kept, as well within, as without, and are the seates in them well maintained, the windowes in no part stopped up, but well glazed, the rooffe and walles cleane, the whole floore kept paved, plaine and even, and all things there in orderly and decent sort, without dust, straw, or litter, or any thing that may be either noysome, or unseemely for the house of God?

6. Item, Whether is your Churchyard or Chappelyard well fenced and kept, without abuse, and if not, whose is the default? hath any person within your memory, or that you have credibly heard of, encroached upon the Churchyard; by setting up any kind of building or fence upon it, or by opening any doore, gate, or stile into it? hath any used that place (consecrated to any holy use) prophanely, or wickedly? hath any quarrelled or stricken one another, either in the Church or Churchyard; hath any person behaved himselfe rudely or disorderly in either, or used any filthy or prophane talke, or any other rude and immodest behaviour in them? have any Playes, Feasts, Banquets, Suppers, Church-ales, Drinkings, temporall Courts, or Leets, Lay-juries, Musters, exercise of Dauncing, Stooleball, Football, or the like, or any other prophane usage been suffered to be kept in your Church, Chapell, or Churchyard? have any annoyed your Churchyard, or the fences thereof, by putting in of cattell, by hanging up of cloathes, or by laying any dust, dung, or any other filthinesse there? when graves are digged, are the bones of the dead piously used, and decently interred againe, or laid up in some fit place as beseemeth Christians? and is the whole consecrate ground, kept free from swine and all other nastinesse?

7. Item, Whether are your Churchwardens carefull to take speciall order that no dogges be at any time suffered to come into the Church, to the disturbance of the Divine Service, and the polluting of that holy place of the Christian Congregation? and doe any of the inhabitants of what condition soever, or of their company, bring their Hawkes into the Church, or usually suffer their dogges of any kind to come with them thither, to the prophanation of the house of God, and his holy worship?

8. Item, What Legacies have bene given to the use and benefit of your Church? how have they bene bestowed? who receiveth them and detaineth them without due employment? doth any detaine, or imbezell any of the Church goods, or any other gifts given to charitable uses?

9. Item, Whether hath any private man or men (of his or their owne authority, for ought you know) erected any Pewes, or builded any new Seates in your Church, and what pewes or seates have bene of late yeeres new built, by whose procurement, and by whose authority? and are all the Pewes and seates so ordered in the Church, that they which are in them may all conveniently kneele downe in the time of prayer? Is the Middle Alley of the Church, or any other of the Alleyes or Isles, or the body of the Chancell, built upon any part thereof, for the setting up of pewes or seates, or for the enlarging of any there adjoining? are there also any kinde of seates at the East end of the Chancell above the Communion Table, or on either side up even with it?

10. Item, Whether is there any other cure annexed to your Parish, or any Chappell of ease belonging to the same, how are they served, by whom, and upon what allowance? or have you in your Parish any dwelling house with a Chappell therein, or in which any other roome is ordinarily used for any Preaching or saying the Divine Service, and administring the holy Sacraments?

CHAP. IIII.

Concerning the Steeple.

1. First, Have you a Steeple belonging to your Church, and is it well covered with leade, or some other good and sufficient tecture, and are the wales (sic) thereof in sufficient reparations?

2. Item, How many Bells have you in your Steeple, and of what weight are they? And are they all well hanged up in frames in the steeple? Have they good ropes belonging to them, wherewith to ring them, and are they tunable?

3. Item, Are the frames and wheelles of the said bells, sound and strong, and are the planchers of your steeple good and not broken, and are there a good paire of stayres, or good ladders wherewith to goe up readily into the said steeple?

4. Item, Whether hath any of your Bels within this twenty yeares or more last past, been alienated or sold? If yea, by whom and to whom? And of what weight was the said bell or bells so sold? and of what value by common estimation?

5. Item, Have your bells or any of them been made lesse upon the last yosting of them? If yea, by whose default, and what is become of the mettall that was so saved out of them?

CHAP. V.

Concerning the Ministers, Preachers, and Lecturers.

1. First, Whether is your Minister, Parson, Vicar, or Curate, a Graduate in either of the Universities? yea or no, and if he be a Graduate, then of what degree is he, and what kind of hood doth he use to weare in the Church?

2. Item, Whether is your Minister a licenced Preacher, yea or no, and if hee be licenced, then by whom? doth he Preach usually in his owne cure, or in some other Church or Chappell neere adjoining, where there is no Preacher, once every Sunday, and how often hath he bene negligent in so doing? Doth he alwaies Preach standing, and in his Cassocke, and Gowne, not in a Cloake, and his Surplice on, and also his hood (if he be a Graduate) and with his head uncovered? And if he be not a licenced Preacher, doth hee take upon him in his owne cure, or else-where, to expound any Scripture or matter of Doctrine, or doth hee keepe himselfe wholly to the reading of Homilies, published by authority, and besides procure Sermons to be Preached amongst you once every moneth at least, by such as are lawfully licenced, and doth he or his Curate upon every Sunday when there is no Sermon, reade some one of the Homilies prescribed by authority, and before the said Homily use that forme of Prayer which is prescribed in the fifty fifth Cannon?

3. Item, Whether doth your Minister, Preacher, or Lecturer begin his sermon at any time, or part of the Divine Service, but immediately after the Believe called the Nicen Creede? doth he before his Sermon or Homily (if he reade one) use any forme of prayer which is of his owne private conceiving or collecting, and of his owne inventing or choosing, or doth he containe himselfe within that briefe forme, which is prescribed by the Church, in the fifty-fifth Cannon, thereby to move the People to joyne with him in Prayer for Christs Holy Catholique Church, and for the Kings most excellent Majestie, naming Him and his royall titles: for the Queene, the Prince, and the royall issue, for the Archbishops, and also the Bishops, for the Councell, the Nobility, the Magistracie and Commons of the Land, and to give thanks to God for the faithfull departed out of this life, and doth he alwaies conclude it with the Lords prayer? doth the Preacher or Minister also after his Sermon wholly forbear to use any kinde or forme of Prayer, not being prescribed, as also to pronounce the blessing out of the Pulpit, wherewith the Church useth to dismisse the people, and doth he conclude there, with glory to God the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, &c. and then coming from the Pulpit, (if the Sermon were made within the Church or Chancell,) doth he, (or whosoever then officiates) in the same place where he left before the Sermon, proceede to read the remainder of the divine service, and at the close of all to give the blessing?

4. Item, Whether doth every Priest and Deacon in your Parish daily, say the morning and evening prayer, either privately or openly, unlesse hee bee upon lawfull cause hindred? doth your Curate say the same daily in your Church or Chappell with the tolling of a bell before he begin, especially doth your Minister or Curate doe it on every Sunday and holiday, and their eves, and on the day of the conversion of Saint Paul, Saint Barnabies day, & every day of the holy weeke next before Easter, as also on all the Wednes-dayes and Fridayes at fit and usual times, according to the forme prescribed in the booke of common prayer in a reverent manner, and as audibly and distinctly as he useth to preach? doth hee also reade all those Psalmes and lessons and no other, with the Collect, Epistle and Gospel, which are appointed for the day, and at the end of every Psalme, doth the Minister and the whole Congregation stand and say, Glory be to the Father, &c. doth he leave out the contents of the chapters after the lessons? doth hee use any other Psalme or Hymne, but those which the booke of common prayer hath appointed? doth he reade the Creede of Saint Athanasius, (called the Quincunze vult) on all those dayes for which it is appointed, and the Commination on Ashwednesday, and the Letany on every Wednesday and Friday?

5. Item, Whether doth your Minister and Curate, at all times as well in Preaching or Reading the Homilies, as in reading the prayers and the Letany, and administering the holy Sacraments, solemnization of marriage, burying of the dead, churching of women, and all other offices of the Church, duely observe the Orders and rites prescribed without omission, alteration, or addition of any thing? and doth he in performing all and every of these, weare the Surplice duely, and never omit the wearing of the same, nor of his hood if hee bee a Graduate?

6. Item, Whether doth your Minister goe to the Administration of holy Baptism ever immediately after the second lesson? doth he alwaies at first aske whether the child be baptized or no? afterwards doth he ever use and never omit both to take the child in his hands, and also to make the sign of the Crosse so, as to touch the childs forehead in making the same? doth he at any time Baptize, but in the Font, or with any Bason or paille or other vessell set in the Font? hath he ever deferred, or willingly neglected or refused to Baptize any Infant within the Parish, being in danger of death, notice thereof having been given to him, and hath any child dyed without baptisme by his default?

7. Item, Whether doth your Minister every Sunday and Holiday before evening prayer, (where no sermon was wont to be) halfe an houre or more Catechise and instruct the youth and ignorant persons of your Parish in the ten Commandements, the Articles of Believe, and the Lords Prayer, and doth he use for that purpose the Catechisme set forth in the booke of Common prayer, and diligently heare, instruct, and teach them in the said Catechisme, or what other Catechisme doth he use either in publique or private? and be the youth and ignorant persons of your Parish sent in due time unto your Church, by them that ought to send them, to bee catechised and instructed by the Minister, and if not, you are to present the names of those that make default in sending them, and of all those that use not to come?

8. Item, Whether doth your Minister alwaies when he administred the Holy communion, first receive the same himselfe kneeling, and doth hee alwaies use the words of institution according to the Booke, of common prayer, without alteration, and at every time that the bread and wine is renewed? Doth he also use to deliver the bread and wine to every communicant severally, and with his owne hand, repeating to every one all the words appointed to be said at the distribution of the Holy body and blood of our LORD IESUS; and upon no pretence omitting any part of the words, or saying them all but now and then to many at once? And is there warning given by him to the Parishioners publicly in the Church at Morning prayer, the Sunday before every time of his administering of the Holy Communion, for their better preparation thereunto?

9. Item, Whether hath your Minister solemnized the marriage of any Person under the age of Twenty one yeares, without the consent of their Parents, or Governours? And hath he married any which doe not audibly say and answer in all things appointed by the Liturgie, or any without a Ring, or in times prohibited, or without the banes first published three severall Sundayes or holidayes in time of divine service in the severall Churches, or Chappells of their severall abodes, without a special Licence from the Archbishop or Bishop of the Diocesse, or his Chancellor, or the Commissary, first had and obtained, and doth he begin in the body of the Church, and then goe up to the holy Table as is appointed? Also doth your Minister so oft as there is any marriage appoint to have a Communion; after the Gospell, doth he say a Sermon, if hee be licenced to preach, wherein to declare the office of man and wife, according to the holy Scriptures, else doth hee reade that which the Church hath appointed to be read at matrimony?

10. Item, Whether doth your Minister use the forme of thanksgiving for Women after Child-birth immediately before the Communion Service, or hath hee admitted thereunto any Woman begotten with Child in adultery or fornication without licence of his Ordinary?

11. Item, Whether (if any being sieke doe desire the Prayers of the Congregation) is it done according to the forme in the Liturgie at the time of divine service, or is it done only by giving their names to the Preacher, and mentioning them in the Pulpit before or after Sermon?

12. Item, Whether doth your Minister upon Sundayes at morning Prayer, declare unto the Parishioners, what Fasting dayes or Holy dayes are to be kept the Weeke following?

13. Item, Whether doth your Minister in the Rogation dayes goe the Perambulation of the circuit of your Parish, saying and using the prayers, suffrages and thanksgiving unto God appointed by the Law according to his duty, thanking God for his blessings, and praying for his grace (sic) and favour?

14. Item, Whether is your Minister studious in Holy Scripture, and absteineth from mechanicall Trades, bodily labour, soliciting of causes in Law, Common buying and selling of Horses, or other Cattell, and all other employments not befitting his calling and Holy function? Doth he usually weare a Gowne with a standing collar, and sleeves straight at the hands, and a square Cap? Doth he in his journeying use a Cloake with sleeves, commonly called a Priests Cloake, without guards, buttons, cuts? doth he at any time in publique, weare a Coyfe or wrought night-cap, but onely a plaine cap of blacke silke, satten, or velvet? doth he at any time goe abroad in his doublet and hose, without a coate or cassocke, or weare any light coloured stockings; or is in any way excessive in his apparrell, either himselfe, or his wife?

15. Item, Whether hath your Minister publicly in your Parish Church or Chappell, once every yeere, reade over the constitutions and Cannos (sic) Ecclesiasticall, agreed upon by the Clergy of both Provinces, Anno Dom. 1603. in such manner as the same is commanded to be done?

16. Item, Whether are any admitted to Preach in your Church, who doe not before the Churchwardens subscribe their names in your Booke provided for that purpose, and the day when he or they Preached, and the name of the Bishop or Bishops of whom they had license to Preach?

17. Item, Whether doth the Lecturer whosoever hee bee reade the Divine Service, according to the Liturgie appointed by Authoritie in his Surplice and Hood before every Lecture?

18. Item, Whether doth your Minister (being learned and sufficient) confere with the Popish Recusants of your Parish (if there be any) and endeavour to reclaim them from their errors, and present them being obstinate for their recusancy?

19. Item, Hath your Minister or any other Preacher or person whatsoever within your Parish, made any Sermons in any private house? hath he also administred the Sacraments or Churched women in any private house, otherwise then by Law allowed?

20. Item, What Preachers and Curates doe reade prayers, or administer the Sacraments within your Parish, without lawfull license from the Bishop of the Diocesse, his Chancellor or Commissary? Or doth any not having Holy orders presume to reade publique prayers in the Church?

21. Item, Whether is your Parson, Vicar, Curate or Preacher given to Drunkenesse or idlenesse of life, a hunter of Taverns, Innes, Ale-houses, or suspected places, a Dicer, Carder, Tabler, or Swearer, or otherwise giveth any ill example of Life?

22. Item, Whether is the Parson, Vicar, Curate or Preacher of any other Parish known to be a frequenter of Taverns, Innes, or Ale-houses, which are situate within your owne or any other Parish: or is he publikely defamed of such resorting and frequenting, as is aforesaid?

23. Item, Whether have your Preachers and Readers of Divinity Lectures declared foure times at the least every yeere in their Sermons, or other Collations and Lectures, that all usurped and forraigne power is (for most just causes) taken away and abolished, and that therefore no manner of obedience or subjection within his Majesties Realme is due unto any forraigne power.

24. Item, Whether hath your Minister after that he had received any Letters of Excommunication under the seale of an Ecclesiasticall Judge, suffered the party excommunicated to abide in the Church or Chancell, in the time of Divine Service?

25. Item, Whether hath your Minister in any of his Sermons or Lectures, preached against any of the Ceremonies commanded to be used by the Church of England; or hath so preached against Ceremonies in generall that by common acceptation (at the least of the weaker) his words might be taken to tend to the depraving of the Ceremonies established by the Church of England?

26. Item, Whether hath any one in his Sermon or Lecture, declared, limited or bounded out by way of positive doctrine, the power, prerogative, authority, and duties of Sovereigne Princes, or otherwise intermeddled with matters of State?

27. Item, Whether hath any Preacher in his Preaching used any unbecoming rayling speeches, or bitter invectives against the person of either Papist or Puritane or any other?

28. Item, Whether hath your Minister Churched any Woman but when hee himselfe stood by the Communion Table, and shee kneeled downe by the said Table or neere unto it?

2. ARE the Roofs thereof well leaded or slated without? well cieled within? the windows well glazed? the walls well plaistered? the tables of the Ten Commandments and other sentences of Scripture well placed? the floors well paved? the seats well framed? and all things so decently ordered, as may best beseem the House of God?
3. How many Bells are there in the Tower or Steeple of your Church or Chappel? have any of them that formerly belonged to it, or any lead of the roofs of the Church or Chancel, been imbezelled and sold away? and if any such thing hath been done, who did it? and who consented to it? and what was the value of the thing sold or imbezelled?
4. Is there a Font of Marble, or other stone decently wrought and covered, set up at the lower part of your Church, for the administration of the Sacrament of Baptisme? Is there a partition between your Church and your Chancel, a comely fair Table there, placed at the upper part of it, for the administration of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper? Are there two fair and large coverings for it, one of silk-stuffe, or fine cloth, another of fine linen with a Plate or Paten, and a Cup or Chalice of silver, and two fair flagons of pewter or purer metall belonging to it? Have none of all these things been purloined, destroyed or made away by any person whom you can name? and if they have been taken away, are they again restored, or other such provided in their place?
5. HAVE you in your Church or in your Chancel a convenient seat erected for your Minister wherein to read the dayly Morning and Evening Service, a Desk whereat to say the Litany in the midst of the Church, according to the Injunctions set forth in the time of 2. Eliz. and a Pulpit for Sermons with a comely cloth before it? Are you provided of a Bible in the largest volume, and of the last approved Translation, and in what year was it printed? have you two books of Common-Prayer set forth by publick authority, and are they both also of the largest volume, one for the Minister and another for the Clerk to use at the celebration of all divine offices? Have you likewise a book of the Sermons or Homilies that were set forth in the time of King Edward the Sixth, and in the Reign of Queen Eliz. together with the works of Bishop Jewel in defence of the Church of England, which King James commanded to be had in all Churches, and a book of the Constitutions or Canons Ecclesiastical, the books or forms of divine Service for the Fifth of November, the Thirtieth of January, and of the Twenty ninth of May, and a Table of marriages prohibited by the Law of God?
6. HAVE you a large and decent Surplice (one or more) for the Minister to wear at all times of his publick ministration in the Church, and another for the Clerk, if he hath heretofore been accustomed to wear it, when he assisteth the Minister? Are not either of their Surplices now grown old and torn? and what are they at this time worth? or if new have been lately bought, how much did they cost by the yard?
7. HAVE you in your Vestry a Hood or Tippet for the Minister to wear over his Surplice, if he be a Graduate? a book of Parchment wherein to register the Christnings, Marriages and Burials of your Parish? another book of paper, wherein to record the licences of strange Ministers that are admitted at any time to preach in your Church or Chappel? and a third book wherein to write down the accompts of the Church-wardens, and to keep an Inventory of all things provided and belonging to your Church? Have you a strong Chest with Locks and Keys, wherein to keep all these Books, and other Furniture for divine services in safe custody? And lastly, have you a Box, wherein to put and keep Alms for the Poor, and a Bier with a black Herse-cloth for the burial of the Dead?

TITUL. II.

Concerning the Church-yard, Parsonage-house, Alms-house, Glebe, and Tithes.

1. Is your Churchyard well and sufficiently fenced? Is it decently kept, without sufferance of any beasts to enter in and annoy it? Hath any person ineroached upon it, or made a new Door into it out of their own habitation or ground about it?
2. Is The House of your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, well built and kept up (with all out-houses thereunto belonging) in good and sufficient Repair?
3. HAVE you a true note of Terror of all the Glebelands, Gardens, Orchards, Tenements, and portions of Tithes appertaining to your Parsonage or Vicaridge? Is it kept in your Vestry, and a Copy of it delivered into the Bishops Registry?
4. Is there any Alms-house, Hospital or Free-School in your Parish? Who was the Founder, or is now the Patron thereof?

TITUL. III.

Concerning Ministers, Preachers, and Lecturers.

1. Is your Minister, Parson or Vicar a Deacon or a Priest ordained by a Bishop, according to the Lawes of the Church of England?
2. WAS he without any Simoniacal Compact, promise or payment freely presented, instituted and inducted, into his benefice? and did he within two moneths after his Induction publicly read in your Church upon some Sunday or Holy-day, in the time of Divine Service, and in the Audience of his Parishioners, all the 39. Articles of Religion set forth and established in the Church of England by Authority? And did he then profess and publish his assent unto them all, subscribing his name thereunto in the presence of the Church-wardens, and other persons of your Parish, who can bear witness of the same? Do you not know, or have you not heard, that in his reading, or pretending to read these 39. Articles of Religion, he omitted, or skipped over some one or more of them? what Article was it, or what part thereof, that he left unread?
3. DOTH he use any other words or form then what is prescribed in the Book of Common prayer in the publick reading of the daily Morning and Evening Service, and in the Litany which is to be added to the Morning-Service upon Sundaies, Wednesdaies, and Frydaies weekly, and at all other times when it is appointed by the Bishop; as likewise at the reading of the Communion-Service, and the Administration of the two Sacraments (Baptism and the Lords Supper) at the Celebration of Matrimony, Churching of Women after Child-birth, burying the Dead, and pronouncing Gods Commination against impenitent Sinners? And doth he all these without omission, addition, or alteration of any of them, using all the Rites and Ceremonies appointed in that Book?
4. DOTH he alwaies at the reading or Celebrating any divine Office in your Church or Chappel, constantly wear the Surplice, and other his Ecclesiastical Habit according to his Degree? And doth he never omit it?
5. DOTH he diligently instruct the youth of your Parish in their Catechism, and visit the Sick, as he is directed for the performance of both those Offices in the Book of Common-Prayer?
6. DOTH he bid and observe the Holy-daies and Fast-ing-daies as they occurre from time to time in the whole year?
7. Is he a Graduate in either of the Vniversities of this Realm, and to what degree hath he been there admitted?
8. HATH he been Licenced by the Bishop or by one of those Vniversities to Preach? And doth he constantly Preach in your Church or Chappel, or (when he is hindered by sickness or some other urgent cause) doth he procure a Sermon to be preached by a discreet, able and approved Substitute, every Sunday, besides the Anniversary daies of Christs Nativity and his Passion at the least? And if there be no such Sermon preach'd, doth he, his Substitute or Curate read one of his Sermons or Homilies appointed by publick authority for such several times and occasions.
9. DOTH he or his Curate observe the Three Rogation-daies before the Feast of our Lords Ascension, saying the Litany, the Cii. and the Ciii. Psalm, with the Church-Wardens, and other that accompany him, in the perambulation of your Parish? and when the perambulation is ended, doth he go into the Church with them, and read unto them one of the Sermons set forth and appointed for that purpose?

10. Doth he or his Substitute use any other Form of Prayer before his Sermon or Homily, but what he is directed and enjoyned to do by the Constitutions of the Church?

11. Doth he preach unfeigned faith and obedience to Gods holy Commandments, Submission and Loyalty to the King and his Laws, together with true Christian Piety and Charity among the people? And hath he not at any time (to your own knowledge, or as you have been told by others that do know it,) preached any False, Heretical, Seditious, or Schismatical Doctrine in his Sermons, whereby the people may be led into any Sect or Faction, against the peace and unity of the Church?

12. (sic) Is there any Lecture preached in your Parish? Is he who preacheth it (one or more) allowed so to do by the Bishop? Doth he before his Lecture read the Publick Service of the Church appointed for that day by the Book of Common-Prayer? At the reading thereof doth he wear a Surplice? when he Lectureth, doth he use the Ecclesiastical habit appointed for all Ministers of the Church? Doth he administer the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lords Supper twice in the year at least, according to the prescript form of the publick Liturgy? And lastly doth he before the preaching of his Lecture constantly observe the Form of Prayer, which is enjoyned him in the 55th. Canon of the Ecclesiastical Law Constitutions?

13. Doth your Minister endeavour to reclaim all Popish Recusants and other Sectaries, (if there be any such inhabiting within your Parish) to the unity, obedience and true Religion established in the Church of England? Doth he prepare and present the youth of your Parish to be Confirmed by the Bishop? Doth he admit any of them to the holy Communion, or to be Contracted in Marriage, or to be Godfather or Godmother in the administration of Baptism, before they can give an Account of their Faith and Religion according to the Questions and Answers contained in the Church Catechism? Hath he admitted any woman to her thanksgiving after Child-birth before she hath done her Penance, if her Child was born or begotten out of lawful Matrimony? Doth he presume to marry any persons in private houses, or, such as being under the age of 21 years have not the Consent of their Parents, or without the Bannes first published on three several Sundaies or Holydaies in your Church, or at any other hours then between 8 and 12 in the forenoon, unless he hath a License or dispensation to the contrary?

14. Hath your Parson or Vicar any other Ecclesiastical Benefice, Prebend or Dignity? Doth he reside upon his Living among you or how long in the year is he absent from it? Hath he a Curate to assist him in his Ministry, and what Stipend doth he allow him? Is that Curate an able, learned, and discreet person, admitted by the Bishop to serve in your Church or Chappel? And doth he serve any other Church but yours?

15. Is your Parson, Vicar, Curate or Lecturer a man studious of innocency and Sanctity in his life? of a sober, chaste, unblamable and religious conversation? Doth he refrain the Company of ungodly and vitious persons, such especially as be excommunicated for their disobedience or pravity and loosness of life? Is he noted to be a frequenter of Taverns or Ale-houses? to be an ordinary Gamster, or Hunter, or a common Swearer, or intemperate drinker? a riotous or disorderly person in any kind whatsoever? Doth he wear his Hair of a moderate and comely length? Is his Apparel grave and decent, in fashion and in colour such as is enjoyned by the Canons of the Church? Doth he not employ himself in any Mechanical Trade, or servile labour unbefitting his sacred Office and Ministry? And is there any other in your Parish, who having been heretofore ordained a Deacon or Minister, hath relinquished the exercise of his holy Orders, and now in the course of his life beareth himself as one of the Laity, and not as a Minister of God and the Church?

16. Doth your Minister or Curate wilfully refuse or delay the time to Baptize any Infant that is in danger of death? and if the Child be Baptized in private and doth afterward recover, is it brought into the Church, and the Baptism of it there certified to the Congregation, according to the Form prescribed in the Book of Common-Prayer, and the Administration of the Sacraments? Is there any Child past his Infancy, or other person of more years, through your Ministers default, yet remaining unbaptized among you? And doth he in the Administration of that Sacrament, admit any Parent to be Godfather or Godmother to their own Children?

17. Doth he in the presence of your Church-wardens write and record in your Register-Book the names of all persons baptized, married and buried within your Parish from time to time, together with the names of their Parents? and doth he subscribe his own and the Church-wardens or Overseers names to every Page of that Book, yearly transmitting the copy of those christnings, marriages and burials so subscribed into the Bishops Registry?

TITUL. IV.

Concerning the Parishioners.

1. Is there in your Parish any person who is commonly known or reputed to be an Heretick or Schismatick? any Papist, Presbyterian, Familist, Anabaptist, Independent, Quaker or other Sectary that refuse to come unto the publick assemblies, prayers or services of the Church, or that make profession of any other Religion than what is established in the Church of England? and if there be any such what are their names?

2. Is there any person in your Parish who by common fame, report or vehement suspicion hath committed adultery, fornication or incest, or any receiver and harbourer of such incontinent lewd persons in their houses? are there any common drunkards within your Parish, any that be usual swearers, or blasphemers of Gods name, or any that are noted to be railers, unclean and filthy talkers, or any sowers of sedition, faction, and discord amongst their neighbours?

3. Do any of your Parish imploy themselves upon the Sundays or Holy-dayes in their bodily and ordinary labour? or do they permit their servants so to do? are any shops kept open or wares sold? or do any Vintners, Inne-keepers, or other victuallers and sellers of Bear or Ale suffer any persons to tipple or game in their houses upon those dayes?

4. Doth every person inhabiting or sojourning within your Parish duly resort unto your Church or Chappel, upon every Sunday and Holyday appointed for divine service? Do they then and there abide quietly with reverence, order and decency, during the whole time of Common-Prayer, Preaching, or other service of God there used? And are there any among you that come only to the Preaching, and not to the Common-Prayers of the Church?

5. Doth every person at his entrance into the Church reverently uncover his head, and so continue all the time of Divine Service and Sermon, untill his departure thence? Do they all reverently kneel at the Prayers, and stand up when the Creed is said, and when the Gospel is read, making due reverence when the name of our Lord Jesus is mentioned? Do they joyn with the Clerk of the Church in answering at the Psalms, Hymns and other parts of the Service as is appointed for them?

6. Are there any in your Parish that refuse to send their Infant-children unto the Sacrament of Christian Baptisme in your Church, there to be baptized publickly, unless in case of urgent necessity and danger, when the child may be baptized at home by your own lawful Minister, after the form and rites appointed in the Liturgy? Or do they send their children to be baptized in any other Parishes, or after any other form, or by any other Minister abroad? Or do they keep them unbaptized any longer time after they be born, then the Church alloweth in the rules prescribed for the administration of that Sacrament? And are there any Infants or more aged Children in your Parish that be yet unbaptized?

7. Doth every housholder in your Parish cause their children and servants duly to learn their Catechisme, and to give an account thereof unto your Minister, as he shall require it of them openly in the Church upon Sundayes and Holydayes, as in the Book of Common-Prayer is appointed? And when they are well instructed in that Catechisme, are they sent or brought to the Bishop at fit and convenient times to be confirmed?

8. Is there any person in your Parish who being 16. years of age and well instructed in Religion doth not frequently receive the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, or at least three times in the year, of which Easter is always to be one? Do they leave their common seats and draw near to the Communion Table when they are to receive that Sacrament, all decently behaving themselves, and humbly kneeling upon their knees in honour of our blessed Saviour, whose pretious death and passion is then set forth and remembered by the Church?

9. Doth any in your Parish refuse to receive that holy Sacrament from the hands of your own Minister, or repair for it to other Parishes and Ministers abroad? Or are there any strangers not being of your Parish, that forsake their own Churches, and usually repair to yours for it?

10. Have you any among you that be denounced and declared excommunicate for any disobedience or crime committed by them? How long have they been so excommunicated? And do any others of your parish keep society with them before they be reconciled to God and the Church?

11. ARE there any living in your Parish who have been unlawfully married contrary to the laws of God? Or any that being lawfully separated and divorced have been married again, the former husband or wife still living? Or any that being lawfully married, and not separated or divorced by course of law do yet live asunder, and cohabit not together?

12. ARE there any married-women in your Parish who refuse after their safe delivery from the peril of Child-birth, to come and make their publick thanksgiving to God in your Church, as they are required to do by the Book of Common-Prayer? And when they come so to do, do they come decently veiled and make their offerings according to custome?

13. ARE there any belonging to your Parish who refuse to pay their duty for Easter offerings to your Minister? Or any that refuse to contribute, and pay the rate assessed upon them, for the repair of your Church or Chappel, and for the providing of such books, furniture and ornaments, as be requisite for the performance of all divine offices there?

14. Do any refuse to bury their dead according to the Rites of the Church of England? And are there any Wills or Testaments of persons dead in your parish that be yet unproved before lawful authority? Or any Goods administered without a due grant from the Ordinary? Did any dying in your Parish or elsewhere leave any legacy to your Church or Chappel, or to the use of poor and needy persons among you, or to any other pious and charitable purposes? What were those legacies, and how have they been bestowed?

15. Is there any Hospital, Almshouse or free-School founded in your Parish? And is the same well governed and used, according to the foundation and ordinances thereof?

16. Do you know or have you heard of any Patron or other person in your Parish, having the presentation or gift of any Ecclesiastical benefice, who hath made gain thereof by presenting a Clerk or Minister to it upon any bargain, either for money or pension, or lease, reserve of Tithes or Glebe, or any part thereof, or upon other Simoniack compact whatsoever?

17. Is there no strife and contention among any of your Parish for their Pews or Seats in your Church? And whether have they erected any Pews in your Chancel, or elsewhere in the body of your Church or Chappel without leave and licence from the Ordinary?

18. Know you any person or persons that have presumed to brawle, fight or strike one another in your Church, or in your Church-yard? And if any such be, what are their names?

TITUL. V.

Concerning Parish Clerks and Sextons.

1. HAVE you belonging to your Church or Chappelry a Parish Clerk aged 21 years at the least? Is he of honest life and Conversation? and sufficient or able to perform his duty in reading, writing and singing? Is he chosen by your Minister? and doth he duly attend him in all divine Services at the Church? Doth he wear a Gown when he so attendeth, and a Surplice over it, if heretofore the Custome hath been such among you? Are his wages duly paid unto him? or who with-holdeth the same from him?

2. DOth he or your Sexton (if there be any such appointed in your Parish) diligently look to the doors of your Church, that they be locked and opened at due time? And doth he keep your Church or Chappel clean from noysome dust, cobwebs, litter, straw, or any other annoyance? Doth he toll or ring the Bells at the due accustomed hours before the beginning of divine Service Morning and evening, that the people may be warned to come unto the Church? And when any person is passing out of this life, doth he upon notice given him thereof, go and toll a Bell, as hath been accustomed, that the neighbours may thereby be warned to recommend the dying person to the grace and favour of God?

TITUL. VI.

Concerning Curates, School-masters, Physicians, Chirurgeons and Midwives.

1. Is there any Curate or Minister employed under the Parson or Vicar of your Parish? Is he admitted and licensed to serve in that office by the Bishop of the Diocess? Doth he demean himself soberly, gravely and religiously in his place? Doth he instruct the Youth of your Parish in the Catechism appointed them? Is he diligent in visiting sick persons, examining them in their Christian Faith, exhorting them to works of Charity, if they be able to do them; to make restitution where they have done any wrong, to remit all injuries that they have received, and to ask forgiveness of God, and all others whom they have offended?

2. DOth any man in your Parish practise Physick, or Chirurgery, or any woman the office of a Midwife without approbation and lawful License of the Ordinary?

3. DOth any man keep a publick or private School in your Parish, but such as be allowed thereunto by the Bishop or his Chancellor? Doth he teach his Scholars the Catechism of Religion, set forth by Authority? Doth he cause them upon Sundaies and Holy-daies orderly to repair to your Church or Chappel? and see that they behave themselves there quietly and humbly, during the time of divine Service and Sermon?

TITUL. VII.

Concerning Church-Wardens and Side-men.

1. ARE the Church-wardens of your Parish yearly and duly chosen by the joynt consent of your Minister and Parishioners, or one of them by your Minister, and the other by the Parishioners?

2. HAVE the former and last Church-wardens given up their due Accompts to the Parish, and delivered up to the succeeding Church-wardens the moneys remaining in their hands, together with all other things belonging to your Church or Chappel, by Bill indented?

3. Do you the Church-wardens and Side-men take diligent care, and see who of your Parishioners be absent from the divine Service and Sermon in your Church or Chappel, upon Sundaies and Holydaies? And if you find any to have absented themselves without a sufficient cause, do you by Warrant from some of the Justices of Peace levy of them by way of distress upon their goods, the sum of 12 pence for every such day of their absence according to the Act of Parliament in that case provided? And do you distribute the several sums so levied, among the poor of your Parish, according to the law?

4. Do you note them that come late to Church after divine Service is begun, or depart before it be ended? Do you suffer none to stand idle or talk together in the Church-porch, or to walk in the Church or Church-yard, during the time of Prayers, Preaching, or other Sacred Offices?

5. Do you suffer no mis-behaviour or disorder to be done by men, women, or servants, or children in your Church or Chappel? Are you careful that none of them sit, lean, or lay their Hats upon the Communion-Table? Do you permit no Minstrels, no Morris-dancers, no Dogs, Hawks, or Hounds to be brought or come into your Church, but set your Sexton to keep them out, that the Congregation and the Minister performing divine Service, or Preaching his Sermon, may not be disturbed by them?

6. Do you against the time of every holy Communion appointed in your Church or Chappel, provide a sufficient quantity of fine white Bread, and of good Wine, according to the advice and direction given you by your Minister for the number of Communicants?

7. Do you cause all Preachers (coming from other places to make Sermons in your Church or Chappel) to subscribe their names the same day they preach in a Book provided for that purpose, together with the name of the Bishop that licensed them to preach in this Diocess? And do you permit no other to preach.

8. HAVE you (the Church-wardens and Side-men) now sworn to give in a true answer unto all these Articles of Inquiry in all their several Titles, had a sufficient time to draw up your presentments, and therein consulted or intreated your Minister for his faithful assistance?

For know you assuredly, that as the true discharging of your Office is the chief means whereby publick Disorders, Sins, and Offences in your Parish may be reformed and punished: So if you wilfully refuse to present such crimes and faults as either you know to have been committed, or otherwise have heard of them by publick fame; That in such cases, the Bishop and his Officers are to proceed against you, in their Ecclesiastical Courts, as in Cases of wilful omission and Perjury.

JOH. DUNELM.

[EARLE?] BISHOP OF WORCESTER, 1662.

¶¶ In Lincoln, 1674, Articles X. XI. are as follows:—

X. Are there any in your Parish, who are known or suspected to be unlawfully Married, contrary to the Laws of God and this Church? Are there any (who being lawfully Married and never Divorced) do yet live asunder? Or any who being lawfully Divorced, do live together again? Or being separated for Adultery, have afterwards intermarried with any other, during the life of their first Consort?

XI. Are there any Married Women in your Parish, who after their safe Delivery from Child-birth, neglect to make their humble and publick Thanksgivings to God, decently apparelled, according to the appointment of the Church? or refuse to pay the offerings according to Custom.

*** who have—God] as man and wife, who are within the degrees prohibited. Oxford, 1666, Winch. 1674, Bath & Wells, 1676 & 1679, Exeter, 1677, Peterb. 1683.

††† in such manner, as by the Law and Book of Common Prayer is required? Added in Bath & Wells, 1676 & 1679, where the last clause of the Art. is omitted.

And when they come so to do, do they come decently apparelled, and make their offerings according to custom.

XII. Are there any belonging to your Parish, who refuse to pay their duty for Easter offerings to your Minister? Or any that refuse to contribute, and* pay the rate assessed upon them, for the repair of your Church or Chappel, and for the providing of such books, furniture and ornaments, as be requisite for the performance of all Divine offices there?†

XIII. Do any refuse to bury their dead according to the Rites of the Church of England: And are there any Wills or Testaments, of persons dead in your Parish, that be yet unproved? Or any goods administred, without a due grant from the Ordinary? Did any dying in your Parish or else where, leave any Legacy to your Church or Chappel, or to the use of the poor, or to any other pious and charitable purposes?‡ What were those Legacies, and how have they been bestowed?

XIV. §Do you know, or have you heard, of any Patron or other|| person in your Parish, having the presentation or gift of any Ecclesiastical Benefice, who hath made gain thereof by presenting a Clerk or Minister (sic) to it upon any bargain,¶ either for money or pension, or lease, reserve of Tithes or Glebe, or any part thereof, or upon** other Simoniacal compact whatsoever?

XV. ††Is there any strife and contention among any of your Parish for their Pews or Seats in your Church? Have any new Pews been erected in your Chancel, or in the Body of your Church or Chappel without leave from the Ordinary?†† of them by way of distress upon their goods, the sum of 12 pence for everie such day of their absence, according [to] the Act of Parliament in that case provided: And do you distribute the several sums so levied, among the Poor of your Parish, according to the Law?

IV. Do you note them* that come late to Church after Divine Service is begun, or depart before it be ended? Do you suffer none to stand idle, or talk together in the Church-porch, or to walk in the Church, or Church-yard, during the time of Praiers, Preaching, or other Sacred Offices?†

V. Do you suffer no mis-behaviour or disorder to be done by men, women, or servants,‡ or children, in your Church or Chappel? Are you carefull that none of them sit, lean, or lay their Hats upon the Communion-Table? Do you permit no Minstrels, no Morris-dancers, no Dogs, Hawks, or Hounds,§ to be brought or come into your Church, to the disturbance of the Congregation?

VI. Do you against every Communion appointed in your Church or Chappel, provide a sufficient quantity of fine white Bread, and of good Wine, according to the number of Communicants?

VII. Do you cause all Strangers that preach in your Church or Chappel, to subscribe their names the same day in a Book provided for that purpose, together with the name of the Bishop that licensed them to preach in this Diocese, and do you permit no other to preach?

VIII. HAVE you (the Churchwardens and Side-men) now sworn to give in a true answer unto all these Articles of Inquiry in all their several Titles, taken sufficient time to draw up your Presentment, and therein consulted with your Minister for his faithfull assistance?

¶FOR know you assuredly, That as the true discharging of your Office is the chief means whereby publick Disorders, Sins, and Offences in your Parish may be reformed and punished: So if you wilfully refuse to present such crimes and faults as either you know to have been committed, or otherwise have heard of by publick fame; That in such cases, the Bishop¶ and his Officers are to proceed against you, in their Ecclesiastical Courts, as in Cases of wilful Omission and Perjury.

GEO. WINTON.

THE Ministers** of every Parish are desired to give in the Names of such of the younger sort, in their several Parishes, as they judge fit to receive Confirmation from the Bishop, and to present them to be confirmed; especially such as having competently learned their Catechism, have not yet received the Holy Communion.††

* Do you note them] Do they present them. Oxf. 1666, Winch. 1674, Exeter. 1677, Peterb. 1683.

† Do they take care, and see that all Persons Excommunicated, and so denounced, be kept out of the Church? Added, Oxf. 1666.

‡ or servants]. Omitted, Bath & Wells, 1676 & 1679.

§ no minstrels—hounds] any Dogs or Hawks. Bath & Wells, 1676 & 1679.

¶ You the Church-Wardens are duely to consider these Articles and well and faithfully to perform your duty in all the premisses, and to consult with your Minister (as the case requires) for his assistance to you in making your Presentments thereupon. Added Bath & Wells 1676 & 1679.

The Minister of every Parish, or the Curate in his absence, may join in Presentments with the Church-Wardens and Sides-men, and if they will not present, then the Ministers (being the persons that have the chief care upon them for the Suppressing of Sin and Impiety in their Parishes) may present the crimes aforesaid, and such things as shall want due Reformation. Added Peterb. 1683.

¶ Bishop] Ordinary. Bath & Wells, 1676 & 1679, Exeter, 1677.

** Ministers] Curates. Peterborough, 1662.

†† as they judge—Communion] as by examination in the Catechism they find capable of confirmation, and to present them to the Bishop to be confirmed, as there shall be opportunity. Peterborough, 1662. And to present them to the Bishop to be confirmed, as there shall be opportunity. Added, Exeter, 1677, Peterb., 1683. And every Person that is to be confirmed, is to have a Godfather, or Godmother as a witness at their Confirmation, as is appointed by the Book of Common Prayer. Added, Oxf. 1666.

The following paragraph is subjoined in Peterb. 1662:—

Whereas in the late Act of Uniformity of publique Prayers, it is provided, That all Benefices now in the possession of any person who is not or before the feast of St. Bartholomew shall not be in holy Orders: (sic) The Bishop not willing to be wanting to the necessity of such whom it may concern, hath appointed an Ordination to be held the Sunday before the said Feast of St. Bartholomew at the Cathedral Church. Where such as shall at the Visitation give in their Names, and at a convenient time, before the day of Ordination, present themselves to the Bishop to be examined, concerning their learning and other qualities requir'd by the Laws and Canons of the Church, and bringing with them a Testimonial of their honest, sober and peaceable Conversation, then (God willing) being approved, may be admitted into holy Orders.

The two last paragraphs in the text are omitted in St. David's & Llandaff, 1662, Lincoln, 1666, St. Dav. 1671.

The following paragraph is added in Hereford and Lincoln, 1662.

Also the Clergy within the County of [Hereford] [Lincoln] are desired to bring with them in Writing a Note of all such Coats of Arms as are in the Church-windows, and of all such Monuments, Gravestones, and Inscriptions, whether of ancient or later times, as are yet remaining in their several respective Churches or Chappels, or the Chancels thereof.

The following paragraph is added in Lincoln, 1674.

The Minister and Churchwardens are desired to give in an account of what Moneys have been paid from their respective Parishes towards the Redemption of the Captives in Algiers, and to whom? And likewise if there be any Money remaining in their hands upon that account to bring it in at this Visitation.

Directions for making Terriers are added in Winton, 1685, which are almost verbally the same as those to be found in the Articles of Bishop Strafford, of Chester, in 1701.

REYNOLDS, BISHOP OF NORWICH, 1662.

ARTICLES to be Enquired of in the Diocese of Norwich in the First Visitation of the Right Reverend Father in God; Edward Lord Bishop of Norwich.

London, Printed by T. R. for G. T. 1662.

The Tenor of the Oath, to be tendred to the Church-wardens and Sidemen.

You shall, upon due consideration of these Articles given you in Charge, diligently Enquire, and true Presentment make of such defaults and offences against the same, as are Enquirable by the Laws Ecclesiastical of this Land: So help you God.

ARTICLES of Visitation and Enquiry within the Diocess of Norwich.

Concerning Churches or Chappels, with the Ornaments and Furniture belonging to them.

I. Is your Parish Church or Chappel with the Chancel thereof, the Steeple, or Tower, the Roofs, Walls, Pavements, Windows, Seats, and all things thereunto belonging, kept in good and sufficient Repair, as becometh the House dedicated to Gods Publick Worship.

II. Is there a Font of Stone standing in the ancient usual place for the Administration of Baptism?

III. Is there a comely Table conveniently placed for the Administration of the Lords Supper with a Carpet of Silk, or other decent stuffe to cover it in time of divine Service, and a fair Linnen Cloth to spread on it at the time of Administration? What Cup, Chalice, Patten, or Flagons, have you belonging to that service?

IV. HAVE you a convenient Seat for the Minister to read divine service in? and a comely Pulpit with a fair Cushion or Pulpit-Cloth seemly kept for the Preaching of Gods Word? Have you a Bible of the largest Volume; and of the last Translation, with the Book of Common Prayer now established, the Books of Homilies allowed by Authority, and the Book of Canons or Constitutions Ecclesiastical? And have you the works of Bishop Jewel, in defence of the Church of England, and a printed Table of the Degrees, wherein by Law men are prohibited to marry?

V. HAVE you a Register-book of Parchment, wherein to set down the names and sir-names of all that are Baptized, Married, and Buried within your Parish? Is there a Book wherein to keep the Church-Wardens Accompts? and another book, wherein to enter the name of any stranger that preacheth in your Parish, and of the Bishop that gave him a License to preach?

VI. HAVE you a large Surplice for the use of the Minister in his publick Administrations?

VII. HAVE you a Box wherein to keep the Alms for the poor? and have you a strong Chest with locks and keys, wherein may be safely kept the plate, vessels, books, carpets, vestments, belonging to the Church? and have you a Bier with a Herse-cloth for the decent burial of the Dead?

Concerning the Church-yard, Houses, Glebe, and Tythes belonging to the Church.

I. Is your Church-yard sufficiently fenced and maintained with Walls, Railes, or Pales as hath been accustomed, and so as it may be kept from all Annoyance? Hath any person encroached upon the same? Have any Trees there growing been cut down, by whom, and for what use?

II. ARE all the Houses and out-houses belonging to your Minister kept in good and sufficient repair? Have any encroached upon the Gardens, Orchards, or Closes belonging to the same? or cut up any trees growing thereon? Are there any other Houses belonging to the Church; and are they likewise kept in good repair?

III. ARE there any Glebe-lands belonging to your Parsonage or Vicaridge, and have you a true and perfect Terrier kept of the same? and a Copy thereof delivered into the Bishops Register? And have you a note of such Pensions, Rate-Tythes, and portions of Tythes as do belong thereunto? Are any of these taken away, or withheld from your Minister? or hath the just value of your Parsonage or Vicaridge by any undue means been diminished?

IV. Is there any Hospital, Alms-House, or free-School (being not of the Kings foundation) in your Parish? and are they and their Endowments preserved and employed to their right use?

Concerning Ministers.

I. HATH your Minister been freely presented, and legally instituted, and inducted into his Benefice? Did he within two moneths after his Induction read upon some Sunday or Holy-day publickly in the Church in the time of divine service, the thirty nine Articles of Religion, and declare his Assent thereunto?

II. Is your Minister constantly Resident upon his Benefice? or hath he any other Benefice or Dignity, and is he qualified to hold the same? How many weeks in a year hath he been Absent without urgent necessity?

III. HATH your Minister a Curate to assist him? and is he a Man of able parts, and of a pious and discreet conversation, and allowed by the Bishop to serve in your Church?

V. Is your Minister a person of a Godly, sober, and peaceable conversation? Doth he so frame his own Life, and the Lives of such as are of his Family, that he and they may be Examples to the Flock of Christ? Or on the contrary, is he a frequenter of Taverns and Alehouses, a common Gamester, a profane or obscene person, a Swearer, Curser, Blasphemer, Railer, Scoffer, Quarreller, Fomenter of Suits, and contention, among Neighbours, an ordinary Companion of Drunkards and Riotous persons in such their wicked Courses: a Resorter unto suspected and infamous Houses? Is his carriage and course of Life in any kind scandalous, and such as becometh not a Minister of Jesus Christ? Doth he exercise himself in any such secular Employments, or sordid Labour, as is unbefitting the Duty and Dignity of his Office? Is he grave and comely in his Hair and Apparel? and doth he in all his behaviour, so carry himself, as that he may adorn the Gospel, whereof he is a Minister?

V. Doth he with all diligence attend upon his Ministry, and discharge all the duties belonging thereunto? Doth he read the publick Prayers, Psalms and Lessons out of the Old and New Testament, and other parts of divine service, and celebrate every divine Office, in such form, manner, and habit as is prescribed?

VI. Doth he rightly and duly administer the holy Sacraments, of Baptism and the Supper of the Lord? Doth he take care that Godfathers and Godmothers present Infants unto Baptism, and undertake for them? and doth he being thereunto desired baptize Infants at home in case of weakness or danger? Doth he frequently, or at the least thrice every year whereof Easter to be one, administer the Lords Supper? and doth he give warning thereof the Lords day before at Morning-prayer, and exhort the people duly to prepare for the same? Is he careful not to admit thereunto any strangers, or any that live in any atrocious or grievous Crime, or in open Malice and Hatred, to the offence and scandal of the Church? and doth he, having upon just Reasons not admitted them, give within a fortnight notice thereof unto the Bishop? or doth he admit any before they have been first Catechised and instructed in the Principles of Religion, and are able to give an accompt of the same, and before they have been Confirmed, and are ready and desirous to be Confirmed?

VII. Doth he give notice of Holydays, and of the Ember-weeks, that the people may be minded to pray for such as are to be solemnly called to the work of the Ministry? Doth he give notice of the yearly Perambulation in Rogation week for preserving the Bounds of the Parish, and for desiring Gods blessing upon the fruits of the Earth? Doth he observe the 5th of November, the 30th of January, and the 29th of May?

VIII. Is he a Licensed Preacher? Doth he, if not hindered by some necessary Impediment, constantly Preach in your Church every Lords day; or being hindered, doth he take care that it be done by another? and doth he diligently instruct children and servants, and Ignorant persons of the Parish in the principles of Religion, contained in the Creed, ten Commandments, Lords prayer, and doctrine of the Sacraments, according to the Church-catechism, that so they may be brought to understand and take upon themselves their Baptismal Covenant, and be Confirmed and admitted Communicants? Doth he in his Sermons preach only sound and wholesome doctrine, tending to Peace, Holinesse, and Edification; consonant to the Holy Word of God, and the doctrine contained in the Articles of the Church of England? And doth he four times in the year teach the doctrine of the Kings Supremacy, and put the people in mind to be subject to Principalities and Powers, and to obey Magistrates; or doth he at any time preach any false, Heretical, seditious, dangerous doctrine, tending to publick disturbance, and to alienate the Hearts of the people from their Loyalty and obedience?

IX. Doth he endeavour to reclaim Popish Recusants, or any other Persons of corrupt Judgements, from such their Errours to the acknowledgement of the Truth.

X. HATH he celebrated Matrimony between any persons (without faculty granted by such as have Authority to grant it) except the Banes of Matrimony have been first published three severall Sundayes or Holy-dayes in the time of divine Service, in the Parish Churches, or Chappels where the said parties dwell? or doth he Marry Persons, though Licensed, at any unseasonable times, and not between the hours of eight and twelve in the forenoon? Or, doth he Marry them in any private place, and not in the Church or Chappel? Or doth he, after the banes are thrice asked, Marry any under the age of one and twenty years before the Parents or Governours of the said Parties have either personally, or by sufficient testimony, signified their consent to the said marriage?

XI. Doth he, when any Persons are dangerously sick having notice thereof, resort unto them to pray with them, to instruct, to comfort, to exhort them to faith, repentance, brotherly love, and works of charity?

XII. Doth he refuse, having had convenient warning given him, to bury any Corpse that is brought to the Church or Church-yard, the dead Person being such as is not denied Christian burial?

XIII. Doth he and the Church-Wardens cause the names of all that have been baptized, married, and buried, to be entered into the Register-Book, and a transcript from thence yearly sent into the Bishop's Office? If not, you are to send in such transcripts for the several years past as have not been hitherto sent in.

XIV. HAVE you a weekly Lecture in your Parish, is it preached by the Parson or Vicar himself, or by a combination of neighbour-Ministers? or by one single Lecturer? if so, is he in holy Orders, of good learning, of a godly and peaceable life? is he Licensed to preach your Lecture, and doth the herein behave himself as by the Lawes and Constitutions of this Church is required?

Concerning Parishioners.

I. ARE there any in your Parish that come not to the Publick Assemblies and services of the Church, or that make profession of any other than the true Reformed Religion which is professed and established in the Church of England, or do any wayes reproach the same Religion, or seduce others from it?

II. HAVE you any in your Parish that oppugne or gain-say his Majesties Supremacy over all persons, and in all causes Ecclesiastical and Civil, within any of his Dominions?

III. Do any in your Parish profane the Lords day by working in their ordinary callings, by loytring, tipling, or any other unlawful practices? and do they observe all the holy days appointed by the Church, according to the orders of the Church prescribed in that behalf? Or, do any Vintners, Inne-keepers, or any other Victuallers or sellers of Beer or Ale; suffer any persons to tittle and game in their houses upon those days in the time of divine service?

IV. Do all in your Parish resorting unto your Church or Chappel, upon every Lords day, and holy day appointed for divine service, in their carriage and gesture there behave themselves with such reverence, order, decency and attention, during the time of common Prayer, preaching, and other service of God there used, as the nature of such holy duties, and the order of the Church doth require; none neglecting or disturbing the publick service by sleeping, talking, walking, laughing, removing, going out, or any other profane, rude or offensive behaviours? or do any interrupt the Minister in any of his Administrations?

V. ARE there any in your Parish that keep their Infant-children unbaptised, or are there any persons of riper years in your Parish unbaptised?

VI. Do all Governours of Families instruct their children and servants in the Catechism, and send them to the Minister to give an account thereof openly in the Church upon the Lords days and holy days, as is appointed?

VII. Do all Communicants thrice at the least every year, whereof Easter to be one, in that meek and reverent manner which is required, partake of the Lords Supper: and do such signifie their names, and purpose to communicate unto the Minister, at least the day before the celebration of the said holy Sacrament?

VIII. Do any persons that are open and notorious evil doers, who live in malice and hatred, with whom for such their wickedness the Congregation is justly offended, presume to come to the Lords Table, not having first declared their repentance that the Congregation may thereby be satisfied?

IX. Do all Communicants pay their Easter dues to your Minister, and do they pay all other Rates assessed upon them for relief of the poor, repairs of the Church, and providing all things required of them to provide in order to divine Offices?

X. ARE there any in your Parish that have married within the forbidden degrees of affinity or consanguinity? Have any been clancularly married in private houses? Do any lawfully married and not separated by due course of Law, yet live asunder, and not co-habit together? Do married women after they have been safely delivered, come in due time to the Church to offer thanksgiving unto God for so great a mercy, and pay their accustomed duties?

XI. ARE such as dye in your Parish decently buried according to the order of this Church?

XII. ARE there any Wills or Testaments of persons dead in your Parish that be not yet proved, or are any goods administred without a due grant from the Ordinary? Have any left Legacies to pious uses in your Parish, and how are those Legacies bestowed?

XIII. ARE there in your Parish any that are common swearers, or blasphemers of Gods holy Name, drunkards, adulterers, fornicators, concealers or harbourers of fornicators and adulterers, incestuous persons, railers, unclean and filthy talkers, sowers of sedition, faction, and discord amongst their Neighbours? and who are they?

XIV. Is there any person in your Parish, who having the gift of any Ecclesiastical Benefice, hath made gain thereof by presenting a Clerk or Minister to it by any bargain or symoniackal compact? or is suspected thereof?

Concerning Parish Clerks and Sextons.

I. HAVE you a Parish Clerk chosen by your Minister, Aged twenty years at the least, of honest conversation, and sufficient for the executing of his place by skill in reading, writing, and singing?

II. DOth he diligently attend the Minister in all divine services at the Church, and are the antient wages belonging unto him duly paid without fraud or diminution? Doth he or the Sexton (if you have any) keep your Church or Chappel clean, and free from all annoyance, in due time ring or Toll the Bells before the beginning of divine Service; open and lock the Church-doors, and carefully preserve all the things belonging unto the Church, that are committed unto his custody?

Concerning School-masters.

I. HAVE you any Publick or Private School in your Parish, is your School-master of sober, honest, and religious conversation? And is he allowed by the Bishop or his Chancellor? doth he instruct his Schollars in the Church-catechism, and take care to train them up, not onely in Learning, but in Religion, and in the Fear of God, framing their manners unto Modesty and Vertue? Doth he upon holy and Festival dayes cause his Schollars orderly to repair to your Church or Chappel, and there to behave themselves attentively and reverently, during the whole time of service and Sermon? and doth he enquire after their proficiency in the things which they have there learned, by examining them at convenient times what they have remembred of such Sermons?

Concerning Physitians, Chirurgions and Midwives.

I. Do any practise Physick or Chirurgery in your Parish without due License; Or doth any woman take upon her to exercise the Office of a Midwife there, without approbation and License from the Ordinary?

Concerning Church-Wardens.

I. ARE the Church-Wardens of your Parish, chosen every year in Easter week by the joint consent of the Minister and Parishioners, or one by the Minister, and the other by the Parishioners? And are Side-men likewise chosen by the Minister and Parishioners;

II. HAVE the last Church-Wardens within a moneth after the end of their year, given before the Minister and Parishioners, a just account of the moneys they have received, and what they have expended for reparations and other uses in the Church? And have they truly delivered up to the Parishioners whatsoever money or other things are of right belonging to the Church or Parish?

You the Church-wardens and sidemen are to take diligent care to see the Parishioners duly resort on the Lords dayes and holy dayes to their Church and there continue the whole time of Publick Worship in due attendance thereupon; You are not to suffer any to Walk, or Talk, or play, or stand Idle, or any way to behave themselves unseemly in the Church, Church-porch, or Church-yard, during the time of the publick Worship to the disturbance and offence of the Congregation: if any so do, you are to present them; as also all such, as at any time Strike, Quarrel or Brawle in the Church or Church-yard.

HAVE any Ecclesiastical Judge or Officer any Advocate, Register, Procter, Clerk, Aparitor, or Summoner, any way offended in their Offices, Ministeries, or Services, contrary to the Laws and Canons Ecclesiastical in that behalf provided.

FINIS.

LAYFIELD, ARCHDEACON OF ESSEX, 1662.

The tenor of the Oath ministred to the Church-wardens and Sworne-men.

Ye shall sweare, that all affections, favor, hatred, hope of reward or gain, or feare of displeasure or malice set a side, you shall upon due consideration of the Articles given you in charge, present all and every such person, of, or within your Parish, as hath committed any offence or fault, or made any default mentioned in any of these Articles, or which are vehemently suspected, or otherwise defamed of any such offence, fault or default, wherein you shall deale uprightly and according to equity: neither of malice presenting any contrary to Truth, nor of corrupt affection sparing to present any, and so conceale the Truth, having in this action God before your eyes, with an earnest zeale to maintaine Truth, and to suppress Vice: So help you God and his faithfull promisses in Christ Jesus.

ARTICLES to be enquired of within the Archdeaconry of Essex, for this present yeer of Our Lord God 1662.

Articles concerning the Clergy.

Whether hath your Minister since his Majesties returne to the Crowne read the Constitutions set forth by his late Majesty, once in the yeer, upon some Sunday or Holiday, in the afternoon, before divine service: according as by the Canons he is bound.

2. Whether doth your Minister use to pray for the Kings most Excellent Majesty our gracious Queen Catharine, Mary the Queen Mother, the Duke of York, and all the Royall Progeny, giving unto him such stile and title of Supreme Governour in all causes, and over all persons, as well Ecclesiasticall as Temporall, as by law are due unto him, exhorting their parishioners to yield him obedience according to the same, and also in their said Sermons, doe pray for all Arch-bishops, Bishops, and other Ecclesiasticall persons, according to the 55 Canon.

3. Whether since the time aforesaid is the prescript forme of divine service used by your Minister upon Sundayes, Holidayes, Wednesdayes, and Fridayes, according to the book of Common-Prayer. And whether doth your Minister duly observe all the orders, rites, and ceremonies prescribed in the said book of Common Prayer: as well in reading publick prayers, the Letanie, as also in administering the Sacraments in such manner and forme, as by the book of Common Prayer by law now established is enjoined.

4. Whether doth your Minister administer the holy Communion so often, and at such time, as that every Parishioner may receive the same, at the least thrice in every yeer, whereof once at Easter, as by the book of Common Prayer is appointed. And whether doth your Minister receive the same himself on every day that he administreth it to others, kneeling at the same, and administreth it to none but to such as doe kneele at the receiving thereof, and use the words of the Institution according to the book, at every time that the Bread and Wine is Consecrated, in such manner and forme as by the proviso of the 21. Canon is directed, or wherein is he faulty, and whether is warning given by him before hand for the Communion as the Canon requireth.

5. Whether hath your Minister admitted any notorious offenders, or schismatickes to the Communion: without satisfaction, by due course of law before enjoined them; or rejected any from the Communion, who were not by publick presentment or other open scandall infamous, and detected of some notorious crime by common fame published in the parish.

6. Whether the Minister, together with the Church-wardens and Questmen, doe take diligent heed and care, that not all and every of your own Parishioners do receive thrice in every yeer, as aforesaid; but also that no strangers of any other parish do forsake their own Minister and parish, to receive with you contrary to the 28 Canon.

7. Whether doth your Minister use to sign the children with the sign of the crosse when they are baptized, according to the booke of Common Prayar, (sic) and whether he hath deferred, or wilfully refused to baptize any infant in his parish being in danger, having been duly informed of the weaknes thereof, and whether the child hath died by his default without baptisme, contrary to the 68. and 69. canons.

8. Whether is your Minister continually resident with you upon his benefice: or for how long time hath he been absent, and where is he resident for the most part, and what other benefice hath he.

9. Whether doth your Minister, being a Preacher, preach usually according to the constitutions, either in his own cure with you once every Sunday, or else in some other Church or Chappell near adjoining, where no Preacher is, or how hath he been negligent in that behalfe.

10. Whether is your Minister a Preacher allowed: if so, then by whom: if no, whether doth he procure Sermons to be preached among you once in every month at the least by such as are lawfully licensed, or doth contribute toward a licensed Preacher, if his living will beare it.

11. Whether hath your Minister another benefice: and whether doth he supply his absence by a Curate, that is sufficiently licensed to preach in that cure of his, whereone he himself is not resident: or otherwise in case he do not find a preaching Minister there, by reason of the smallnesse thereof whether doth he preach at both his benefices usually himself.

12. Whether is your Curate licensed to serve by the Bishop of this Diocess or by any other, and by whom: whether doth your Minister or Curate serve more cures then one, contrary to the 48. Canon. If so, then what other cure doth he also serve.

13. If your Minister be not licensed to preach as aforesaid, whether doth he read homilies, or take upon him to expound the Scriptures either in his own cure or elsewhere, contrary to the 49. Canon: If so, then you are to present him, and specific the place where he so hath preached.

14. Whether hath any person been admitted to preach within your Church or Chappell within these two yers past but such as you have well-known to be sufficiently licensed: whom have you so admitted? you shall present their names, and how often have any such been admitted to preach, and by whose procurement: if he were licensed, then by whom he was licensed: And whether have they, or any other preacher (sic) in your Church, not being soberly and decently apparralled according to the 74 Canon.

15. Whether doth your Lecturer and Preacher read divine Service, and administer the Sacraments in his own person twice every yeer, observing all the ceremonies in the book of Common Prayer established, according to the 56 canon.

16. Whether doth your Minister every Sunday and Holyday, before evening prayer, for halfe an houre or more examin and instruct the youth, and ignorant persons of his parish, in the ten Commandements, the Articles of beliefe, and the Lords Prayer, as also in the Catechisme set forth in the book of Common prayer, whereby the Children of the parish may be prepared for confirmation, according to the 90 Canon.

17. Whether hath your Minister without licence from the Archbishop the Bishop of the Diocess, his Chancellor, or from this Court solemnized marriage betwixt any parties, the Banes being three severall Sundaies or Holidais first published, in time of divine service, in the severall Churches or Chappells of their severall abode, according to the book of Common prayer, and the 62 canon: and that also betwixt the houres of eight and twelve in the forenoon, contrary unto the 112 Canon.

18. Whether doth your Minister upon Sundaies at morning prayer, declare unto the Parishioners what holidays and fasting dayes are appointed to be kept the weeke following, according to the 64 Canon, whereby they may be put in mind to prepare themselves accordingly, and to repaire to Church to publick prayer, as by law they are bound.

19. Whether doth any Minister in the Rogation dayes, use the perambulation of the circuit of the Parish appointed by law, and in the same perambulation, move the people to give thanks to God for his benefits, using such Psalmes, Praiers, Homilies, as are to that end set forth.

20. Whether doth any man (being neither Minister nor Deacon) read Common prayer openly in your Church or Chappell, or administer the Sacrament of Baptisme, or solemnize Matrimony, or take upon him to practise any other ministeriall duty in the Church, then is prescribed to be executed particularly by such, as are either Ministers, or Deacons, and what is his name that so doth.

21. Whether doth your Minister being a Preacher, endeavour and labour diligently with mildnesse and temperance to conferre with, and there by to reclaim the popish Recusants in his Parish from their errors, if there be any such: and whether is he painfull in visitation of the sicke, according to the book of Common prayer, and the Canons in that case provided.

22. Whether is your Parson, Vicar, Lecturer, or Curate too much conversant with, or a favourer of Recusants, whereby he may be suspected not to be sincere in religion.

23. Whether hath your Minister, or any other taken upon him the place of a Minister, preached, baptized children (unlesse in case of necessity) solemnized marriage, churched any woman, or ministred the holy Communion in any private house or houses: if so, then where, whom, and how often hath he so offended in any of the premises.

24. Whether hath your Minister taken upon him to, appoint any publick or private fasts or prophecies, not approved and established by law or publick authority: contrary unto the 72. Canon.

25. Whether hath your Minister since his said Majesties returne or any other person or persons within your parish used to meet in any private house or other place, and to hold private conventicles, contrary to the 73. Canon: if so, then you shall present them all or every one of them, or at least as many as you know.

26. Whether doth your Minister use such decency and comliness in his apparel, as by the 74 constitution is enjoined him, as well at home as when he goeth abroad.

27. Whether do you know in your parish, any that having heretofore taken upon him or them, the order of Priesthood or of a Deacon, hath since relinquished the same, and betaken himself in the course of his life as a Lay-man, If so, then you shall present his name and the place of his aboad.

28. Whether is your Minister noted or defamed to have obtained his Benefice by Simonie, or reputed to be an incontinent person, or doth keep any man or woman in his house, that are suspected either to be of euill religion or bad life, himself to be a common drunkard, or to be a common hunter of Taverns, Alehouses, or other suspected places, a common gamster or player at dice, or other unlawfull games, a common swearer or notorious person, or faulty in any other crime punishable by Ecclesiasticall censures, whereby he is offensiuue, and scandalous to his function or ministry.

29. Whether doth your Minister use the form of thanksgiving to women after their childbirth, and whether hath he admitted any thereunto that was begotten with child in adultery or fornication, without licence of his Ordinary, and whether have any married wives refused to come to Church, according to the book of Common prayer, to give God thanks, after child birth; If any be faulty herein, you shall present their names.

ROB. PORY, ARCHDEACON OF MIDDLESEX, 1662.

ARTICLES to be enquired of within the Archdeaconry of Middlesex, in the Visitation of the Right Worshipful Dr. Robert Pory, Archdeacon of the said Archdeaconry of Middlesex.

Holden in the year of our Lord God, 1662.

London. Printed for Timothy Garthwait at the Kings-head in St. Paul's Church-yard, 1662.

The Oath to be administred to the Churchwardens and Sworn-men.

You shall swear that you and every of you shall diligently enquire of the Articles given you in charge; and without affection, favour, hatred, hope of reward and gain, or fear of displeasure, or malice of any person, you shall present all and every such person and persons that now is, or of late was within your Parish, as hath committed any incest, adultery, fornication, or simony, and any misdemeanour or disturbances committed or made in any Church or Chappel, in time of Common Prayer, Preaching, or Divine Service there used, to the disturbance thereof: and also that have committed or done any other offence, fault or default, presentable in the Ecclesiasticall Court, according to the Articles now delivered to you. Wherein you shall deal uprightly, fully, and according to truth, neither of malice presenting any contrary to truth, nor of corrupt affection sparing to present any, and so conceal the truth: having in this action God before your eyes, with an earnest zeal to maintain the truth, and suppress vice. So help you God, and the Contents of this Book.

Concerning Religion, and the true worship of God, in this Realm established.

Can. 5. Is there any who doth affirm and teach that the 39 Articles agreed upon by the Archbishops and Bishops in both Provinces, and the whole Clergy in the Convocation holden at London, Anno 1562. are in any part superstitious or erroneous, or such as he may not with a good conscience subscribe unto? Who is that so teacheth or affirmeth, and what is his name?

Can. 4. 2. Is there any who doth affirm and teach, that the form of Gods worship in the Church of England, established by the Law, and contained in the Book of Common Prayer and administration of the Sacraments, is a corrupt, superstitious, or unlawful worship of God, or containeth any thing in it that is repugnant to the Scriptures, who is it that so teacheth, &c.

Can. 6. 3. Is there any who doth affirm and teach, that the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church of England by Law established, are wicked, antichristian, or superstitious, or such as being commanded by lawful Authority, may not with good conscience be approved, used, or subscribed unto, by men who are zealously and godly affected, who is it, &c.

Can. 9. 4. Is there any that separateth himself from the Communion of Saints, as it is approved by the Apostles Rules in the Church of England, and combine themselves together in a new brotherhood, accounting the Christians who are conformable to the Doctrine, Government, Rites, and Ceremonies of the Church of England, to be profane or unmeet for him to join with in Christian profession, who are they that so separate themselves, and what are their names?

Concerning the Church, the Government, Authority, and Discipline thereof.

Can. 3. 1. Is there any who doth affirm and teach, that the Church of England by Law established under the Kings Majesty, is not a true and Apostolical Church, teaching and maintaining the Doctrine of the Apostles. Who is it that doth so affirm and teach, &c.

Can. 7. 2. Is there any who doth affirm and teach, that the Government of the Church of England under his Majesty by Archbishops, Bishops, Deans, Archdeacons, and the rest that bear office in the same, is antichristian and repugnant to the Word of God. Who is it that doth, &c.

Can. 8. 3. Is there any who doth affirm and teach, that the forms or manner of Making and Consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, containeth any thing in it, that is repugnant to the Word of God: or that they who are made Bishops, Priests, and Deacons in that form, are not lawfully made, nor ought to be accounted either by themselves or others, to be truly either Bishops, Priests, or Deacons, untill they have some other calling unto those Divine Offices, Who is it, &c.

Art. 20, 34. 4. Is there any who doth affirm or teach, that the Church hath no power to decree Rites or Ceremonies, nor any authority in controversies of Faith, or in the changing and abolishing of Ceremonies and Rites of the Church, ordained only by man's authority, contrary to the 20. and 34. Articles of the Church of England. Who is it, &c.

Can. 2. & 1. 5. Is there any who doth affirm or teach, that the Kings Majesty hath not the same Authority in causes Ecclesiastical, that the godly Kings had among the Jewes, and Christian Emperours in the Primitive Church. Or that the Kings Majesty within his Realmes of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and all other his Dominions and Countries, is not the highest Power under God, to whom all men, as well Inhabitants as born within the same, do by Gods law owe most loyalty and obedience. Or that impeach any part his Royal Supremacy in the said causes restored to the Crown; and by the Lawes of the Realm therein established. Who is it, &c.

Can. 140. 6. Is there any who doth affirm or teach, that no manner of person either of the Clergy or Laity are to be subject to the Decrees and Constitutions of the Church in causes Ecclesiastical, made and ratified by the Kings Supream authority, other then such as are particularly assembled in the sacred Synods of the Church for the making of the said Decrees, and Constitutions, and have given their voices to the same. Who is it, &c.

Can. 12. 7. Is there any that doth affirm or teach, that it is lawful for any sort of Ministers and lay persons, or either of them to joyn together, and make rules, orders, and Constitutions in Causes Ecclesiastical without the Kings Authority, or any that submit themselves to be ruled and Governed by the same. Who is it, &c.

Can. 10. 8. Is there any who doth affirm, teach, maintain or publish, that such Ministers who refuse to subscribe to the form and manner of Gods worship in the Church of England, and their adherents may truly take unto them the name of another Church: or that there are within this Realm, other meetings, assemblies, or congregations of the Kings born Subjects, then such as by the lawes of this Land are held and allowed, which may rightly challenge to themselves the name of a true and lawful Church. Who is it that doth so affirm, &c.

Can. 27. 9. Doth any Minister or Ministers, without the Licence and direction of the Bishop of the Diocess first obtained, appoint or keep any solemne Fasts publicly, or in any private houses, other then such as are or shall be appointed by lawful authority, or not being Licensed as afore is said, presumes to appoint or hold any meeting for Sermons, Sermon-lectures, Prophecies, or exercises in Market Towns or other places, or doth attempt without such Licence upon any pretence whatsoever, either of possession or obsession, to cast out any Divil or Divels. Who is it that offendeth in the premisses, &c.

Can. 73. 10. Do any Priests or Ministers of the Word of God, or any other persons meet together in any private house or elsewhere, to consult upon any matter or course to be taken by them or by any other, upon their motion and direction, which may any way tend to the impeaching or depraving of the Church of England, or of the book of Common Prayer, or of any part of the Government or Discipline in the Church of England now established, and who are they?

Concerning Churches, the Ornaments, Vtensils, and other necessities to the same belonging.

Can. 85. 1. Is your Parish Church or Chappel well and sufficiently repaired, and so from time to time maintained and kept? Are the windows well glazed, the floor kept paved, plain and even, and all things there in such an orderly and decent sort, without dust, or any thing that may be either noysome or unseemly, as best becommeth the house of God.

Can. 82. 2. Are the ten Commandments set upon the East end of your Church or Chappel, where the people may best see and read the same, and other chosen sentences written upon the wals of your said Church or Chappel, in convenient places?

Rubr. before Morning Prayer. 3. Do the Chancels remain as they have done in times past, that is to say, in the convenient situation of the Seates, and in the ascent or steps unto the place appointed anciently for the standing of the holy Table? Is the Chancel of your Church or Chappel clean kept, and repaired within and without, in the windowes and other-where as appertaineth? And is there a comely partition betwixt your Chancel and the body of the Church or Chappel, as is required by the law?

Orders of Queen Elizabeth, An. 1561. 4. Is the Church-yard of your Church or Chappel well and sufficiently fenced, maintained and kept with walls, rails or pales, as hath been heretofore accustomed: And if not, then by whose negligence or default is it, that the fences of the same are grown into decay?

Can. 88. 5. Are there any Playes, Feasts, Banquets, Suppers, Church-Ales, Drinkings, Temporal Courts or Leets, Lay juries or Musters: or is there any other prophane usage kept in your Church, Chappel, or Church-yards, of what sort soever. By whom are your said Church or Chappel, or Church-yard so prophaned as afore is said, and by whose permission?

Injunct. of Q. Eliz. 6. Have you in the Chancel of your Church or Chappel a decent and convenient table for the celebration of the Holy Communion? Is it so set as is directed in the Queens Injunctions, and appointed by the Canon made in the Synod held at London, Anno 1640. Have you a carpet of silk or other decent stuffe, appointed by the Ordinary, to lay upon the Table in the time of Divine Service, and a fair linen cloth to lay upon the same in the time of the Communion? And is the said Carpet and linen cloth laid constantly upon the Table, at the times aforesaid?

Com. Book. 7. Have you a fair Communion Cup, or Chalice of silver, with a cover of the the same, and a decent standing pot or flagon of pewter, if not of purer metal, in which the wine for the Communion is to be brought unto the holy Table: Is the said Table, Carpet, Linencloth, Cup, or Flagon or either of them any wayes prophaned, or otherwise employed, then to their own proper and right holy uses?

Can. 81. 8. Have you in your Church or Chappel a Font of stone where Baptism is to be administred, decently made, and kept as it ought to be? Is the same set in the Ancient usual place appointed for it, and doth your Minister publicly baptize in the same Font only?

Can. 82. 9. Have you in your Church or Chappel, a convenient Seat made for the Minister to read Service in, as also a comely and decent Pulpit set in a convenient place within the same for the preaching of Gods word, and there seemly kept?

Can. 84. 10. Have you in your Church or Chappel a strong Chest with a hole in the upper part thereof, for the Alms of the poor? Hath the same chest three several keyes, and is the one of them in the custody of the Parson, Vicar, or Curate? Is the same so set and fastned in the most convenient place, to the intent the parishioners may put into it their Almes, for their poor neighbours?

Can. 87. 11. Have you a true note and Terrar of all the Glebes, Lands, Meadowes, Gardens, Orchards, Houses, stocks, implements, Tenements and portions of tythes lying out of your Parish, which belong unto your Parsonage, or Vicarage; And is the same, or a true Copy of the same layed up in the Bishops Registry for a perpetual memory thereof;

Can. 58. 12. Have you a comely decent Surplisse with sleeves for the use of your Minister in saying the publick prayers, or ministering the Sacraments, and other rites of the Church: together with an University hood, according to the degree of your said Minister? And doth the Parson, Vicar, or Curate use the same, as oft as he officiates Gods publick Service, administred the Sacraments, or dischargeth any publick duty in the Congregation?

Can. 80. 13. Have you a Bible of the largest volume, allowed by Authority, the book of Common Prayer, and the booke of Homilies, all very well, and fairly bound? As also a book of the Canons and Constitutions, made in the Synod held at London, Anno 1603 and ratified by the Kings Authority? A book of prayers for the 5 of November, and for the 30th of January, and the 29th of May?

Can. 70. Have you a parchment Register booke, wherein to keep upon record, the several Christenings, Weddings, and Burials which happen weekly, quarterly, or yearly, in your Parish? Have you also a Register book wherein to write the names of all Preachers, which come and Preach in your Church from other places? And have you one sure Coffe with three locks and keyes, for keeping of the books aforesaid? And doth one of your keyes remain alwayes in the hand of the Minister?

Can. 52. Whether is your Parsonage-house or Vicarage-house, Barnes, Stables, and other out houses thereto belonging, in good and sufficient repair.

Can. 70. Whether hath any person inroached upon the ground of your Church-yard, or other consecrated ground; if any hath, then you shall present him, and set out what quantity of grounds is so inroached upon, and whether any new door or window hath been lately made into your Church or Church-yard, and by what authority?

Whether hath any person inroached upon the ground of your Church-yard, or other consecrated ground; if any hath, then you shall present him, and set out what quantity of grounds is so inroached upon, and whether any new door or window hath been lately made into your Church or Church-yard, and by what authority?

Concerning the Celebration of Divine Service, the administration of the Sacraments, &c.

Rubrick after the Preface. Doth your Minister or Curate that ministreth in your Parish Church or Chappel, say dayly the Morning and Evening Prayer, in the same Parish or Chappel where he ministreth, unlesse he be lawfully hindred? And doth he cause a Bell to be tolled thereunto, a convenient time before he begin, that such as be disposed may come to hear Gods Word, and to pray with him? Especially,

Can. 14. Is the Common Prayer said or sung distinctly and reverently upon such dayes as are appointed to be kept holy, and upon their Eves? Is the same said or sung at convenient and usual times of those dayes, and in such place of every Church as the people may be most edified thereby? And doth the Parson, Vicar or Curate, observe the Orders, Rites, and Ceremonies prescribed in the book of Common Prayer, as well in reading the holy Scripture, and saying of prayers, as in administration of the Sacraments: without either diminishing in regard of Preaching, or in any other respect, or adding any thing, in the matter and form thereof;

2. Doth the Minister read the Psalms, and Lessons appointed in the Kalendar for Morning and Evening Prayer? And at the end of every Psalm throughout the year, and likewise at the end of the Benedictus, Benedicite, Magnificat, and Nunc demittis (sic), doth he repeat, Glory be to the Father, &c. And at the reading of the lessons, doth he stand and turn him so, as he may best be heard of all such as be present? And is the Creed called Athanasius Creed, beginning with (Whosoever will be saved) said by your Minister constantly at the times appointed in the Common Prayer booke, and doth your Minister sing or say any other Psalms or Hymns then aforesaid in the place of those, contrary to Law?

Can. 15. 3. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate say the Litany on every Sunday duely throughout the year, as also upon all Wednesdayes and Fridayes weekly, though they be not holy-dayes? In what convenient Place of your Church or Chappel doth he say the same, and by whom was that place appointed? Doth he say the same at the accustomed houres of Service, and is there warning given to the people by the tolling of a Bell? And doth every house-holder dwelling within halfe a mile of the Church, come, or send one at the least of his household to joyn with the Minister?

Rubric after the Communion. 4. Doth your Minister read the Communion Service, or the second Service on every Sunday or Holy day throughout the year, though there be no Communion, according as it is appointed in the Book of Common Prayer?

Can. 46. 5. Doth your Minister reside upon his Benefice or not. If yea, then, being a licensed Preacher, doth he preach one Sermon every Sunday in the year in his own Cure, or in some Church or Chappel neer adjoining, having no lawful impediment?

Can. 49, 46. And being not a licensed Preacher, doth he offer at any time to preach or expound the Scriptures, or rather doth he procure Sermons to be Preached in his Cure once every moneth at the least by Preachers which be lawfully licensed? If he be licensed by the Lawes of this Realm not to reside upon his Benefice, then in that Case doth he supply his cure by one that is a sufficient and

Can. 47.

Licensed Preacher? And is your Curate allowed to serve there by the Bishop of the Diocese, or by the Ordinary of the place having Episcopal jurisdiction and by no other?

Can. 48. Rubr. 6. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate upon every Sunday and holy-day throughout the year when there is no Sermon, read one of the Homilies set forth by publick Authority? Doth he use to read the same in the Pulpit only, according as he is required in the Canons of the year 1571.

Cap. 4. And doth your Minister as well before the Homilies as before his Sermon move and exhort the people to joyn with him in Prayer according to the form laid down in the book of Canons, and doth he use any other form then is there prescribed?

Can. 55. 7. Have you in your Parish, besides your Parson, Vicar, and Curate, any Lecturer or Lecturers not having cure of souls therein? Doth your Lecturer use before his Lectures, the form of prayer before remembred, and no other form? and doth he twice at the least every year read the Divine Service on two several Sundays both in the fore-noon and afternoon, publickly and at the usual times, and doth he as oft in every year administer the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lords Supper, in such manner and form, and with the observation of such Rites and Ceremonies as are prescribed in the book of Common Prayer?

8. Do your Lecturer or Lecturers preach in their Gowns and not in their Cloaks, according to his Majesties Instructions, An. 1629. Doth he professe his willingness to take upon him a Living with cure of souls, in that place or Parish, in the which he Lectures or elsewhere? And doth he actually take such Cure or Benefice if any hath been offered to him?

Can. 53. 9. Is your Lecturer licensed by the Bishop of the Diocese? And doth your Lecturer or any other Preacher that Lectureth or preacheth in your Church or Chappel, impugne or confute any Doctrine formerly delivered in the same, or in any Church neer adjoining, before he hath acquainted the Bishop of the Diocese therewith, and received order from him what to do in that case for the avoiding of dissention;

Can. 54. 10. Doth your Lecturer conform himself to the Lawes, Ordinances, and Rites Ecclesiastical established in the Church of England? If not, you are to certifie the same unto the Bishop of the Diocese, or other Ordinary of the place, to the end that if the said Lecturer do not conform himself after admonition, his License may be voided, and himself removed:

Can. 21. 11. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, administer the Communion in your Church or Chappel so often, and at such time, as every parishioner may communicate at least thrice in the year, whereof the Feast of Easter to be one? And doth he give warning to his parishioners publickly in the Church at Morning prayer the Sunday before, for the better preparation of themselves; And do such as purpose to communicate signifie their minds unto the Curate over night or the Morning early?

Can. 22. 12. Doth your Minister admit to the receiving of the holy Communion, such of his Cure which be openly known to live in sin notorious without repentance, or any who have openly or maliciously contended with their neighbours, and will not be induced by him to a reconciliation? Or any Church-wardens or Sidemen, who having taken oath to present to their Ordinaries every such publick offence, as they are particularly charged to enquire of in their several parishes, shall wittingly incur the horrible crime of perjury?

Can. 26. 13. Doth he wittingly administer the same to any but such as kneel, or to any that refuse to be present at the publick prayers, or to any that be common and notorious depravers of the book of Common-prayer, or of any thing contained in the Book of Articles agreed upon in the Convocation, Anno 1562. Or in the book of Ordering Priests and Bishops, or to any that hath spoken against, and depraved his Majesties Sovereign Authority in causes Ecclesiastical, except such persons do first acknowledge to the Minister before you the Church-wardens that he is sorry for the same, and promise either by word of mouth, or under his hand to do so no more?

Can. 27. 14. Is the bread provided for the Holy Sacrament of the Lords Supper, of the best and purest white-bread that may conveniently be gotten? Doth the Minister take the same into his hands to blesse and consecrate it to that holy use as oft as he administreth the Communion? Doth he so likewise with

Rubr. 14. Is the bread provided for the Holy Sacrament of the Lords Supper, of the best and purest white-bread that may conveniently be gotten? Doth the Minister take the same into his hands to blesse and consecrate it to that holy use as oft as he administreth the Communion? Doth he so likewise with the wine provided? And if any bread or wine be newly brought, doth he first use the words of the Institution before it be distributed to the Communicants?

Can. 22. 15. Doth your Minister as oft as he celebrateth the Communion receive the Sacrament first in both kinds himself, and having so received the same, loth he severally deliver the bread and wine to every Communicant in their hands kneeling? And at his delivery of the same doth he rehearse the whole forme mentioned in the Communion Book saying (The body of our Lord Jesus Christ, &c.) or doth he only use some part thereof as he list himself?

Rubr. Can. 21. 16. Doth your Parson, Vicar or Curate administer the Communion at any time publickly in the congregation except there be four or three (at the least) to communicate with him? Doth he administer the same to any strangers, which come often and commonly from their own Parish Churches? And do you the Church-wardens give notice to your Minister of such strangers, that so he may remit them home to their own Parish Churches, there to Communicate with their own Minister and neighbours?

Can. 23, 57. 17. Doth your Minister, except it be in times or cases of necessity, Preach or administer the holy Communion in any private house in which there is no Chappel dedicated and allowed by the Ecclesiastical lawes of this Kingdom? Doth any Chaplain living within your Parish, preach or administer the Communion in any other place then in the Chappel of the said houses? Doth the Lords and Masters of such Chaplains, or houses, at other times resort to their own Parish Churches, and there receive the holy Communion, at least once in the year? And do any under Noble men, and men qualified by law keep any private Chaplain in their house or houses?

Can. 68. Rubr. of Bap. 18. Doth your Minister refuse or delay to Christen any child that is brought to him to the Church on Sundays or Holydays, knowledge thereof being given to him over night or in the morning before Morning prayer? Doth he proceed therein in all things according to the form of publick Baptisme in the Common prayer Book doth he neglect, refuse, or premit at any time to sign the child baptized with the sign of the crosse, or doth he admit the parent of a child to answer as a Godfather to his own child, or any other person to be a Godfather or Godmother, before the said person so undertaking hath received the holy Communion?

Can. 29. 19. Doth your Minister being duly informed of the weaknesse and danger of death of any infant unbaptized in his Parish, and being thereupon desired to go unto the place and baptize the same, either willfully refuse to do it, or negligently delay the time, so that the child departeth without Baptism through his default: if the child so baptized do recover afterwards, is it brought into the Church by the Godfathers and Godmothers, to the intent the congregation may be certified of the Baptising thereof, according to the form prescribed in the Common prayer Book?

Can. 69. 20. Doth your Minister having Cure and charge of souls do his best endeavour to prepare children, and make them ready for confirmation? And to that end, doth he on every Sunday and Holy day before Evening prayer for the space of half an hour and more instruct the youth and ignorant persons of the parish, according to the Catechism set forth in the Common prayer book? And are the afternoon Sermons in your parish (if you had any formerly) turned into Catechising by way of questions and answers according to the Kings Instructions?

Can. 61. Can. 59. Rubr. of Confir. 21. Doth your Minister either bring, or send in writing to the Bishop of the Diocese the names of all those Children of his parish which can answer to the questions contained in the Catechism, that by the imposition of hands and prayer they may receive strength and defence against temptation? And doth he admit any person or persons to the holy Communion, untill such time as he or they can orderly say the catechism and be confirmed?

Can. 62. 22. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate celebrate Matrimony betwixt any persons, without a faculty or licence granted by authority Lawful, or without the Banes of Matrimony first published on three several Sundayes or Holydays in the parish Church or Chappel where the said parties dwell, or at the times by Law prohibited without special License? Or doth he celebrate the same in any other place then in the Church, or in the Church at any other time then between the hours of eight and twelve in the forenoon, and at that time betwixt such persons as are under the age of twenty one years, without the consent of their parents signified unto him, or a Licence granted to him so to do?

Rubr. of Matrimony. 23. Doth your Minister in the solemnizing of holy Matrimony keep himself to the form and Ceremonies prescribed in the Common Prayer book? Doth he at any time marry any without a Ring, or without going to the Lords Table as it is appointed? Doth he in case there be no Sermon read those Texts of Scripture, wherein the offices of man and wife are declared, according as it is prescribed? And do the new married persons the same day of their marriage receive the holy Communion, as by Law they ought?

Can. 87. 24. Doth your Minister or Curate resort to such of your parish as are dangerously sick (if the disease be not probably suspected to be infectious) to instruct and comfort them in that distresse, doth he exhort the sick party to be in charity with all the world, and to dispose of his goods, and declare his debts, and doth he move him, and that most earnestly to liberality towards the poor, and to unburden his conscience?

Rubr. of Visitation. 25. If any sick person find his conscience troubled with any weighty matter, and doth unburden the same to his Priest or Minister, doth the said Priest or Minister give him absolution according to the form prescribed? And have you ever heard that the said Priest or Minister hath revealed and made known at any time to any person whatsoever, any crime or offence committed to his trust and secrecy, either in case of such extremity, or any other case whatsoever (except they be such crimes as by the laws of this Realm, the life of the said Priest or Minister may be called in question for concealing of it) declare the name of the offender, when and by whom you hear the same?

Can. 130. Rubr. of Com. 26. Doth the Curate that ministrETH in your parish, upon convenient notice given him, administer the Communion unto such as be dangerously sick, and not able to come unto the Church, and yet are desirous to receive the same in their houses, and are unquiet for the lack thereof: Or doth he obstinately and wilfully refuse so to do being thereunto required, and finding all things necessary for the doing of it?

Can. 68. 27. Doth your Minister refuse or delay to bury any corps that is brought into the Church or Church-yard, convenient warning being given him before, except the party deceased were denounced excommunicate for some grievous crime, Majori Excommunicatione, and no man able to testifie of his repentance: And doth he do it decently and gravely not swerving from the form prescribed by the Church in the Common prayer book?

Can. 68. 28. Doth any woman in your parish after her delivery from the pains and peril of Childbirth refuse to come into the Church to render thanks to God for so great a mercy: Doth she go thither covered with a decent veil according to the laudable and ancient custome: And being come doth she go neer unto the place where the Table standeth, and offereth her accustomed offerings:

Rubr. And doth your minister do his duty in churching the said woman according to the form prescribed: And doth the woman that cometh to give her thanks, receive the holy Communion if there be any?

39 (sic). Doth your Minister at and upon seasonable times, especially on the first day of Lent, cause the people, to be called together and assembled in the Church by the ringing of a Bell? And being drawn together doth he read unto them the Commination against sinners, with the other prayers appointed?

Can. 1. Doth your Parson, Vicar, Curate, or Lecturer, (if you have any) purely and sincerely teach, manifest and declare four times every year at the least in his Sermons and other Collations and Lectures, that all usurped and forraign power is for most just causes taken away and abolished, and that therefore no obedience or subjection within his Majesties Realms and Dominions, is due unto any such forraign power. And doth he preach the Doctrine of obedience, and the Kings authority according to the Canens published, and set out by the late holy Synod, Anno 1640.

Can. 64 and Rubr. of Com. 2. Doth your Minister declare to the parishioners, every Sunday at the time appointed in the Communion book whether there be any Holy dayes or fasting days in the following week: And doth he call upon them to observe the same, according to the Laws of the Land, and of holy Church?

Injunctions and Advertisements of Q. Eliz. 3. Doth your Minister or Curate in the Rogation dayes go in perambulation about your parish saying and using the Psalms and suffrages, by Law appointed, as viz, Psalm 103 and 104: the Litany and suffrages, together with the Homily set out for that end and purpose: (sic.) Doth he admonish the people to give thanks to God if they see any likely hopes of plenty, and to call upon him for his mercy, if there be any fear of scarcity: And do you the Churchwardens assist him in it?

Can. 48. 4. Doth your Curate serve more than one Church or Chappel upon one day, except the said Chappel be a member of the parish Church or united thereto: How far distant are the said Churches or Chappels which he serveth from one another? What wages hath he for his pains?

Can. An. 1571. Cap. ult.

Can. 65. 5. Doth your Minister if he be commanded by the Ordinary, openly on some Sunday denounce and declare for excommunicate, all those, who either for refusing to frequent the divine service of the Church, or for notorious contumacy, or other notable crimes stand lawfully excommunicated by the laws of the Church, that others thereby may be admonished to refrain their Companies: And doth your Minister himself refrain the company of persons excommunicated and so denounced?

Can. 74. 6. Doth your Parson, Vicar or Curate usually wear such apparel as is prescribed by the Canon, that is to say, a gown with a standing collar and wide sleeves strait at the hands, and a square cap: Or doth he go at any time abroad in his doublet and hose without coat or cassock, or doth he use to wear any light coloured stockings, doth he wear any coife, and wrought nightcaps, or only plain nightcaps of silk, sattin, or velvet: And in his journeying, doth he usually wear a cloak with sleeves, commonly called the Priests cloak, without guards, welts, long buttons or cuts?

Can. 75. 7. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate resort at any time, other then for his honest necessities to any Taverns, or Alehouses, or doth your Curate lodge or board in any such places: Do they or either of them give themselves to any base or servile labour, or to drinking or Riot, or to play at dice, cards or Tables, or to any other unlawful game or games: or do they otherwise spend their time idly by day or by night?

Can. 76. 8. Is there any in your Parish, who having been a Deacon or Minister hath voluntarily relinquished his calling, and doth use himself in the course of his life as a lay man, what are their names that have forsaken their said callings?

Can. 66. 9. Doth your Minister (if he be a Preacher, and thought fit by your Bishop) having any popish Recusant, or Recusants in his parish, labour diligently with them from time to time thereby to reclaim them from their errors: And if he be no Preacher, or not such a Preacher, doth he procure some that are Preachers so qualified, to take pains with them to that purpose?

Can. 114. 10. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate carefully inform himself every year how many popish Recusants, men, women, and children above the age of thirteen years, or being otherwise popishly given, are inhabitants within their parish or parishes, or make their abode there, either as sojourners, or common guests?

Can. 70. 11. Doth your Minister every Sunday weekly (if there be occasion) in the presence of you the Churchwardens write and record in the Register-book the names of all persons christned, together with the names and surnames of their parents, as also, the names and surnames of all persons married and buried in that parish the week before, and the day and year of every such Christening, Marriage, and Burials, and unto every page thereof when it is filled, do you and your said Minister subscribe your names: And is a true coppie of the said Christnings, Marriages, and Burials subscribed with the names of your Minister and you the Churchwardens, transmitted yearly within one moneth after the 25 of March, unto the Bishop of the Diocese to be preserved in his Registry.

12. Doth your Minister in the parish Church or Chappel, where he hath charge, read the Canons, Orders, and Constitutions, (agreed on in the Synod held at London, Anno 1603,) once every year upon some Sundayes or Holydayes in the afternoon before Divine Service: and doth he so divide the same, as the one half may be read one day, and the other half the other day?

Whether hath your Minister, Churchwardens, and Sidersmen presented unto the Lord Bishop of London, or his Chancellour, within fortie dayes after Easter, the names of all the Parishioners, all well men as women, which being above 16 years of age, received not the Communion, at or about Easter before according to the 112 Canon; If not, you shall present, whether that presentment should have been brought in by your selves or your predecessors, and specifie the names of every one that should have made such presentment at Easter last past.

Concerning Schoolemasters, Parish-Clarks, and Sextons.

Can. 77. Doth any man in your Parish teach either in publike School or private house, but such as be allowed by the Bishop of the Diocese, or other Ordinary of the place under his hand and Seal: and if there be no publike Gram-

Can. 78. mar school founded in your parish, doth any other teach Schoole in your parish, than your Curate onely, if he be willing so to do?

Can. 79. 2. Doth your Schoolmaster teach in English or Latine, as the children are able to bear, the shorter or longer Catechisme set forth by Authority and no other? doth he on Sundayes and Holydayes when there is a Sermon cause his Scholars to come unto the Church, and there see them quietly and orderly behave themselves? And doth he train them up at other times in sentences of holy Scripture: And doth he teach them any other Grammar than that which was set forth by King Henry VIII. and hath since continued?

Can. 91. 3. Have you belonging to your Church or Chappel a parish Clarke aged 21 years at the least? Is he of honest conversation, sufficient for his reading, writing, and also for his competent skill in singing? Is your said Clarke chosen by any, your Parson, Vicar, or other Minister? And doth your Clark so chosen as before is said, receive his ancient usual wages, without any fraud or diminution, as hath been accustomed: Or who is it that denieth to pay that wages?

Can. 67. 4. Doth your Sexton or your parish Clark (if there be no Sexton) when, and as often as any person is passing out of this life, cause a Bell to be tolled, that so his neighbours may be warned to recommend his soul to the grace of God? And after the said parties death (if it so fall out) doth he ring or cause one short peal to be forthwith rung, that so his neighbours may have notice that he is departed?

Whether do you the Churchwardens of every Parish within the City and Suburbs of London (according to the Kings Majesties Letters Patents, under the great Seal of England in that behalf granted) suffer your Parish Clark to gather his wages himself, in as full and ample manner as the same hath formerly been gathered, in or by colour of his name without diminution upon pretence of pewage, or the like, and without any manner of disturbance or interruption or forbidding any one so to pay the same unto him; and whether do you assist your Clark in collecting his wages (if need be) according to his Majesties said Letters Patent: and whether do you duly present all such persons of your Parish as refuse to pay the said Clarks accustomed wages, as by his Majesties said grant, you are required and commanded?

Can. 100. Is there any in your Parish either Master or servant, Sojourner or Inhabiter, that hath offended either by Adultery, Whordom, Incest, or drunkennesse, or by swearing, ribaldry, or filthy speaking extortion, or any other uncleannesse, or wickednesse of life? you shall faithfully present all and every the said offenders.

Can. 110. 2. Do you know of any in your Parish, or elsewhere, that is an hinderer of the word of God to be read, or syncerely preached, or of the execution o (sic) any Ecclesiastical Canons, now by law in force? or a fautour of any usurped or forraign power, by the laws of this Realm justly rejected and taken away, or a defendour of any popish and erroneous doctrine? you shall detect, and faithfully present &c.

Can. 114. 3. Have you in your parish any popish Recusants, men, women, or children, above the age of 13 years, whither inhabitants, or sojourners, and common guests, that refuse to come to Church, or coming to the Church refuse to receive the communion? you shall set down their names in writing, if you know their names, or otherwise, those names by which they are called, and who they are that entertain such guests as sojourners.

Q. Eliz. c. 1. 4. Have you any that diswade any of his Majesties subjects from coming to the Divine service in this Church established, or that have or do practice with any of them to diswade them from taking the oath of Allegiance, or that have any wayes offended against the Canon lately made for the suppressing of popish superstition?

1. Eliz. c. 2. 5. Do all and every person or persons inhabiting or sojourning within your Parish, diligently and faithfully resort unto your parish

Church, or Chappel accustomed, upon every Sunday, and other dayes appointed to be used and kept as Holydayes; do they then and there abide orderly and soberly, during the time of Common prayer, preaching, or other service of God there to be used, or ministred? Or (which is contrary thereunto) have you any that come unto the preachings onely, and not unto the common prayer, or coming to the common prayer, neither use to come at the beginning, nor tarry out unto the end? Or that being there do rudely and disorderly behave themselves, or which by walking, talking or any other noise do hinder the Minister or Preacher.

Can. Anno. 1571. 6. Have you any that upon the Sundayes or Holydaies imploy themselves in their bodily and ordinary labour, or that permit their servants so to do? Or that keep open Shops in time of divine Service? Or any Vintners, Inn keepers, or other Victuallers, that permit any to lie tipling in their houses, or that do tipple, dice, or play at cards, or any other game in time of divine Service on the aforesaid dayes? Or that use any plowing, carting, or works of husbandry, on any of those Sundayes or Holydayes throughout the year, unless according to Law, or otherwise dispose themselves then according to Gods holy will and pleasure, and the orders of the Church of England prescribed in that behalf, and by Law in force?

Can. 18. 7. Doth any manner of person cover his head in your Church or Chappel in time of divine Service or Sermon, or any part thereof, except he have some infirmity, and in case of such infirmity, doth he wear a coif or nightcap only, and not his hat? do all and every person of your parish reverently kneel upon their knees when the general Confession, the Litany, the ten Commandmens (sic) and other prayers are read, and also at the receiving the blessed Sacrament of the Lords Supper, do they all say the Creed, and the Lords prayer, next immediately following in a loud voice together with the Minister? do they stand up at the saying of the Belief, and such other parts of divine Service as formerly they have been used to stand up at, according to the Rules and ancient custome of this Church? And when and as often as in the time of diuine Service the Lord Jesus shall be mentioned, is due and lowly reverence done by all persons present? have you any that offend in the neglect of these particulars, and what are their names?

Can. 114, Rubr. 8. Have you any parishioner that being 16 years of age doth not receive the Communion, at the least thrice in the year, of which Easter to be one, or that doth not receive the Sacraments, and other rights [sic] according to the order of the common prayer book? Or that doth not reckon with his Parson, Vicar, or Curate, or his or their deputies at Easter, yearly paying such Ecclesiastical duties as are accustomed due then, and at that time to be paid.

Rubr. 9. The Minister standing as he is appointed at the North side, or end of the Table, when he prepares to celebrate the holy Communion, and calling on those who do intend to communicate, to draw near and take that holy Sacrament to their comfort, as it is in the words of the Common prayer book, have you any in your Parish that keep their seats, and sit still in their places not drawing near as is commanded by the Church, but looking that the Minister should forsake the place of his station, by the Church appointed, to bring it to them?

Can. 58. 10. Is there any of your parish, who doth forsake his own Church or Chappel to receive the Communion at the hand of any other then their own Minister, or any strangers that usually repair to your Church or Chappel to the same intent, or any that refuse to receive the holy Communion at the hands of their own Minister, because he is no Preacher, or to have their children baptized by him in the same respect, or that in the same respects communicate, or cause their children to be baptized in other Parishes abroad? Or doth your Minister baptize any children presented unto him out of other Parishes? you shall present the names of all offenders in these particulars.

Rubr. of Bap. 11. Have you any that procure their children to be baptized at home in their houses without great cause and necessity, or by any other then their own lawful Minister if he may be had? Or after any other form and manner then is prescribed by the Liturgy of the Church of England, or any that procure themselves to be married privately or after any other manner then the Church prescribes?

Can. 59. 12. Do all and every housholder of your Parish, Fathers, Mothers, Masters and Mistresses cause their children, servants, and apprentices, which have not learned their catechism, come unto the Church on Sundayes and Holydays in the afternoon, obediently to hear and to be ordered by the Minister till they have learnt the same?

Can. 91. Can. 85. 13. Have you any in your Parish that refuse to contribute, and pay the rate assessed upon him, for the repair of your Church or Chappel, or the providing of any books utensils or necessary ornaments to the same belonging? present the names of those which do refuse.

Can. 65. 14. Have you any that keep company and hold society with such as are denounced and declared excommunicate?

Can. 107. 15. Have you any living in your Parish, which have been legally separated and divorced, and have afterwards been married unto others, either men or women, during the life of each other, or that being so divorced as afore is said, keep company with each other at bed and at board? Or any that being lawfully married, do yet live asunder, without a separation in due course of law.

Can. 99. 16. Have you any persons in your Parish, which are and have been married within the degrees prohibited by Lawes of God, and expressed in a Table set forth by authority: And is the said Table publickly set up and fixed in your Church or Chappel at the Charge of the Parish?

Can. 92. 17. Are there in your Parish any Wills unproved, or any goods unadministred by lawful Authority? Did any dying in your Parish give any legacy unto your Church or Chappel, or to the use of the poor and needy? how have the said legacies so given been disposed of, by whom and whose Authority? And have they otherwise been disposed of, then to the said pious and charitable uses?

Whether is there in your parish a common fame and report of any which have committed Adultery, Fornication, or Incest, or any Baudes, harbourers, or receivers of such persons, or vehemently suspected thereof. If yea, then specifie their names; Whether have you any in your Parish, which are by common fame and report and vehement suspition reputed and taken to be common Drunkards, blasphemers of Gods holy Name, common and usual swearers, filthy speakers, railers, sowers of discord among their neighbours, or speakers against Ministers Marriages, or Vsurers contrary to the Statute made in the 37. year of King Henry the Eighth? you shall not fail to present their names.

Whether have any in your Parish received or harboured any woman with child, suspected to be of an incontinent life, or have had any such woman delivered of child in his or her house, or have suffered such women to depart without penance first inflicted upon them by the Ordinary: if yea, you shall present as well the party harbouring, as harboured, and all that help to convey them away, and the parties suspected to have committed adultery or fornication with them.

Whether do you know, or have heard of any Patron, or any having an Advowson in your Parish, that have made gain by any colour, deceit, or Symoniacal pact in bestowing his Benefice; and presenting to the same for gain, or for receiving money, or promise of the Lease of the whole or part, or by reserving his own tithes, or any pension to himself, or any other?

What Almes-houses, Hospitals, Free-schools have you in your Parish, that are not of the Foundation or Patronage of the King, and who was the Patron or Founder thereof, and whether the said Almes-houses, Hospitals, or Free-schools in your Parish being under the Rule and Government of the Lord Bishop of London, be well and godly used, according to the ancient Foundations and Ordinances of the same.

Whether any Persons within your Parish, either for the offences aforesaid, or for any other contumacy or crime, do remain excommunicated; what be their names, and for what cause, and how long have they stood excommunicated.

Concerning Church-Wardens and Sidemen.

Can. 89. Are you the Churchwardens chosen by the joynt consent of your Minister and Parishioners, or one of you by the Minister, and the other by the Parishioners? Have the last Churchwardens given up their accounts, delivering up the Parishioners the money remaining in their hands, and other things of right belonging to your Church or Chappel, and is the same delivered to you by bill indented?

- Can. 90. 2. Do you the Churchwardens and Sidemen diligently see that all your Parishioners resort duly to your Church or Chappel upon Sundayes and Holydayes, and there continue the whole time of Divine Service? do you suffer any to walk or stand idle or talk in the Church or in the Church-yard, or Church-porch, during that time, to the disturbance of the Minister and scandal of the congregation? You must present the names of such as offend herein.
- Can. 87, 90. 3. Do you against the time of every Communion, at the charge of the Parish provide a sufficient quantity of fine white bread, and of good and wholesome wine, for the number of the Communicants? And do you do the same with the advice and direction of your Minister? And the wine so provided, do you bring to the Communion Table in a clean and sweet standing pot or flaggon?
- Can. 52. 4. Do you the Churchwardens and Sidemen see, that the names of all Preachers which come to your Church from other places, be noted in a book provided for that purpose? And doth every such Preacher subscribe his name in the said book, the day when he preacheth, and the name of the Bishop of whom he had licence to preach?
- Can. 53. 5. If there be any publike dissention and contradicting in your Pulpit, between the Minister of your Church or Chappel, or any other Preacher or Preachers, whereby disquietnesse and offence may grow among the people, do you forthwith signifie the same unto the Bishop, and not suffer the party to enjoy the place so by him abused, until the Bishop hath taken further order in it?
- Can. 115. 6. Do any person or persons trouble or molest you the Churchwardens for presenting all or any of those persons, which do offend in any of the premisses; who are they that do so molest or trouble you, and before whom, and in what Court do they so molest you?
- 1 Eliz. c. 2. 7. Do you the Churchwardens levie by way of distresse on the goods, Lands and Tenements of every person in your parish, that doth not resort unto your Parish Church or Chappel on every Sunday and Holyday throughout the year, (having no reasonable excuse to be absent) the sum of xii pence for every Sunday or Holyday that he be so absent? And do you distribute the several sums so levied, as before is said, among the poor of the Parish, according to the Law in that case provided?
- Can. 119. 8. Have you had time sufficient for drawing up your presentments? how long is it since this book of Articles was sent unto you? have you perused and considered as well the Oath you are to take, as the Articles whereon to ground your presentments, and every branch, and clause thereof, and have you framed your presentments punctually, according to the several branches and clauses of those Articles? For know assuredly that as well the discharging of your Office, is the chief means whereby publick sinners and offences may be reformed and punished, so if you wilfully omit to present such crimes as either you know to be committed, or otherwise have heard by publick fame, that in such cases your Ordinaries are to proceed against you, as in causes of wilful perjury, in their Ecclesiastical Courts.

Concerning Ecclesiastical Magistrates and Officers.

1. What reward or fee hath any of the Apparators taken and received, or what acquittance or discharge have they given or promised any for not appearance before the [blank] . . . . . whom have they so compounded with, when, and upon what occasion?
2. If you know of any other default or crime of Ecclesiastical Conscience, you are to present the same by vertue of your Oathes.
3. The Minister of every Parish may and ought to enquire of these printed Articles, and to joyn in presentment with the Church-wardens, and Side-men, and if they will not present, the Minister may and ought himself present the defaults and crimes aforesaid: and there must be several presentments made to every several Article: and the Minister, Church-wardens, and Sworn-men are to meet and confere about the said presentments, and answering of every of the afore-said Articles.

II. Have any Apparitors taken any reward for the concealing of any Offence, or the avoiding of the punishment of the Offenders? And do they summon any without a Citation first had?

If you know of any other Default or Crime of Ecclesiastical Cognizance, you are to present the same.

"The Minister of every Parish may joyn in Presentments with the Church-wardens and Sidemen, and if they will not Present, then the Ministers themselves (being the persons that have the chief care of the suppressing of Sin and Impiety in their Parishes) may Present the Crimes aforesaid, and such things as shall want due Reformation." Can. 113.

HUMFRY LONDON.

FINIS.

FULLER, BISHOP OF LINCOLN, 1668.

ARTICLES to be Enquired of Within the Diocese of Lincoln. In the Primary Visitation of the Right Reverend Father in God William Lord Bishop of that Diocese, Anno Dom. 1668. Et Translationis suæ Anno Primo.

In the Savoy, Printed by Tho. Newcomb 1668.

The Advertisement.

The Minister of every Parish both may and ought to joyn with the Churchwardens, or other sworn Men for the Presenting of Offences; and if they be so irreligious as not to do it, the Minister of himself may and ought to present either the Offences, or the Church-wardens and Questmen, for not presenting the same; and is required in his Canonical Obedience so to do. And if (their Oath and all this punctual Direction and Advertisement notwithstanding) any Church-wardens or other sworn Men shall follow the Customary manner, and be careless in inquiring and presenting as they ought, then shall they not be able hereafter to say, that they had not fair warning to the contrary given them in the spirit of Meekness, or to complain they are hardly dealt with, if (upon information and proof otherwise had) they be called to answer their wilful Perjury, in some other Court, or Court of Justice, for neglecting to enquire and present to all the particulars herein proposed.

Lastly, with their Bill of Presentment they are to certifie the names of all Persons which have been married in their Parish since the 28th day of May last, by any Licence or Dispensation, and what Ecclesiastical Judge granted the same? And also the Names and Surnames of all Persons which since the same day have died possessed of any Goods in their Parish, and who do now possesse the same, and by what Right? And this will be particularly required of all Church-wardens.

The Oath ministred to the Church-wardens and sworn Men.

You shall duly Enquire, and true Presentment make of all Offences or Defaults mentioned in the Articles given You in Charge, or otherwise against the Ecclesiastical Laws; together with the Names of the several Offenders therein. So help you God.

Canon 1, &amp; 2.

1. Is there any who doth affirm or teach that the Kings Majesty hath not the same Authority in causes Ecclesiastical that the Godly Kings had among the Jews, and Christian Emperours in the Prinitive Church? Or that the Kings Majesty within his Realms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and all other his Dominions and Countries, is not the Highest Power under God? Or that doth impeach any part of his Royal Supremacy? Who is it, declare your knowledge herein, &c?

Canon 12.

2. Is there any that doth affirm or teach, That it is lawful for any sort of Ministers and Lay Persons, or either of them, to joyn together and to make Rules, Orders, and Constitutions in Causes Ecclesiastical, without the Kings Authority? Or any that submit themselves to be ruled and governed by the same?

Canon 85.

3. Is your Parish Church or Chappel well and sufficiently repaired? Are the Windows well glazed, the Floor kept paved plain and even, and all things therein in such an orderly and decent sort without dust, or any thing that may be either noisome or unseemly?

Canon 85.

Can. 113.

in case of such extremity, or any other case whatsoever; except they be such Crimes as by the Laws of this Realm the life of the said Priest or Minister may be called in question for concealing of it? Declare the name of the Offender, when and by whom you have heard the same?

24. Doth the Curate that ministrerth in your Parish, upon convenient notice given him, administer the Communion unto such as be dangerously sick, and not able to come into the Church, and yet are desirous to receive the same in their Houses, and are unquiet for the lack thereof? Or doth he obstinately and wilfully refuse so to do, being thereunto so required, and finding all things necessary for the doing of it?

25. Doth your Minister refuse or delay to bury any Corps that is brought into the Church or Church yard, convenient warning being given him before; except the party deceased were denounced Excommunicate (Majori Excommunicatione) for some grievous Crime, and no man able to testifie of his repentance? And doth he do it decently and gravely, not swerving from the Form prescribed by the Church in the Common-Prayer-Book?

26. Doth your Curate serve more than one Church or Chappel upon one day, except the said Chappel be a member of the Parish Church, or united thereto; how far distant are the said Churches or Chappels he serveth from one another, and what Wages or salary hath he for his pains?

27. Doth your Minister if he be commanded by the Ordinary, openly on some Sunday denounce and declare for Excommunicate, all those, who either for refusing to frequent the Divine Service of the Church, or for notorious contumacy, or other notable crimes, stand lawfully Excommunicated by the Laws of the Church; that others thereby may be admonished to refrain their companies? And doth your Minister himself refrain the company of persons excommunicated and so denounced?

28. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, frequently resort to any Taverns or Ale-houses, or doth your Curate lodge or board in any such places? Do they or either of them give themselves to any base or servile labour, or to drinking or riot; or to play at Cards, or Tables, or to any other unlawfull Game or Games? Or do they otherwise spend the time idely by day or by night?

29. Doth your Minister every Sunday weekly, if there be occasion, in the presence of you the Church-wardens, write and record in the Register-Book the Names of all persons christned, together with the Names and Surnames of their Parents; and also the Names and Surnames of all persons married and buried in that Parish the Week before, and the day and year of every such Christning, Marriage, and Burial; and to every Page thereof when it is filled, have the former Churchwardens, and your said Minister subscribed their Names? And is a true Copy of the said Christnings, Marriages, and Burials subscribed with the Names of your Minister and the Church-wardens, transmitted yearly within one moneth after the 25th of March, unto the Bishop of the Diocese, to be preserved in the Registry; and is the said Certificate received into the Registry without Fee?

30. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, use any undecent apparel, or improper for his quality and degree, or in the habit of his hair, or other Ornaments of his Body, or new-fangled Attire; rendring himself unfit to receive the Honour and Estimation due to a messenger or Minister of God?

31. Do you know that any Ecclesiastical Judge, or any of the Registrars or Apparators, or other Officer belonging to the Ecclesiastical Courts, hath taken Rewards or Gifts for perverting Justice, or denied Justice to any man who lawfully required the same?

32. Do you know or have heard that any of the said Judges or Registers, or any belonging to the said Courts, do favour any Popish or other Recusants, or do forbear to enquire, cite, denounce and censure them?

33. Have the said Ecclesiastical Judges appointed and constituted certain and determined Surrogates and Substitutes, such as are Persons of Gravity, favourers of true Religion, and men of modest and honest Conversation? or otherwise have they appointed persons scandalous for being addicted to Intemperance, Incontinence, or any kind of vice, or Persons that are favourers, promoters, or assisters of Clandestine Marriages, or such as care not to preserve the necessary Discipline, and honour of the Church?

34. Whether hath the Chancellour, Commissaries, or any using Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction upon the Presentment or Information given unto him, of any foul offences or scandals in your Parish, not punished the persons defected, so that the Congregation hath not been satisfied both of Justice done, and of the amendment of the Party, and who were the parties committing the said offences, as Incest, Adultery, Fornication, Drunkenness, Blasphemy, Heresie, Clandestine Marriage, profaning of the Church, or such like?

35. Whither hath any Ordinary in the Diocess commuted the Penance of any Delinquent convicted? What persons have so commuted, and how hath the money been disposed of to Charitable uses as far as you know or have heard?

36. Whither do the Ecclesiastical Judges suffer any persons detected for Crimes to sue and molest Churchwardens who detected them for the same?

37. Whither do you know or have heard that any of the said Judges, when the deceased died without a Will, hath assigned any part of the Goods to charitable uses, and how have you known them to have been so employed?

38. Whether in such cases of dying without a Will, doth the Ecclesiastical Judg send out Intimation to summon the Creditors, Wife, Children, and Kindred to come and take Administration, and commit the same as far as the Law permits, not to needy persons, but to able men, and such as enter sufficient Bond, to preserve the Estate, and to answer all that is due, and save the Lord Bishop harmless?

39. Whether doth the said Judg Ecclesiastical when a Benefice is vacant, commit Sequestration to able men that do answer and account truly for the mean Profits? And whether are the Parishes during the vacancy well served with able Ministers?

40. Whether do you know or have credibly heard, that the said Judges Ecclesiastical, Registers, or Apparators do take any extraordinary or more Fees than Probate of Wills; Administrations, Assignations of Portions or Citations, or for any other Act or thing done or sped by them then are allowed by the Statutes of the Land, or any Fees greater then heretofore have been accustomed in other Businesses belonging to their Courts?

41. Whether do you know, or have heard that any Register of the said Courts hath sped any Act, or dismissed any Person detected without the knowledg and actual consent of the Judg?

42. profane swearing, and cursing, according as it is enacted 12. Jac. cap. 20?

4. Doth he at reading or celebrating any Divine Office in your Church or Chappel constantly wear the Surplice, together with such other Scholastical Habit as is suitable to his degree? and in Preaching doth he wear a Gown?

5. Hath he at any time, that you know of, publickly or otherwise spoken against the Order or Government of the Church of England as is now by Law established?

6. Doth he administer the Sacraments in private houses otherwise than is by law allowed?

7. Doth he permit any strange Minister to Preach in your Church or Chappel who is not sufficiently authorized thereunto?

8. Doth he serve more than one Church or Chappel in distinct Parishes upon one day? If so, how far distant are those Churches or Chappels which he so serveth, and what Wages and Salary hath he for his pains?

9. Is your Minister a man of a godly, sober and peaceable conversation? or on the contrary, Is he a frequenter of Taverns or Alehouses, or doth he board therein? Is he a common Gamester, a profane Swearer, an obscene Jester, or an intemperate Drinker? Is he vehemently suspected of Incontinency? Is he a fomenter of suits and contention among Neighbours? Doth he give himself to any base or servile labour, or secular trade, unbefitting the duty and Dignity of his Office? Is his apparel grave and decent, both for fashion and colour, as the Canons of the Church require? Or is his carriage and conversation in any kind disorderly, scandalous, or unbeseeming a Minister of Jesus Christ?

TIT. III.

1. Do any of your Parish make profession of any other Religion than what is professed and established in the Church of England? Do any reproach the same Religion, or seduce others from it? Or endeavour to alienate the hearts of the people from their Loyalty and Obedience to the King?

2. Do any absent themselves from the publick Assemblies and Service of the Church, or not come in due time, as well to Service as Sermons, or not behave themselves, when they are there, with such reverence, order, decency and attention as is required; or depart thence before the Service and Sermon be ended, and the blessing pronounced?

3. Do any refuse so send their Infant-children to be Baptized in your Church or Chappel, unless in case of extreme danger? Or are any children kept unbaptized longer than is allowed? Or are there any more aged persons yet unbaptized? Or are any children not Communicants admitted to be Godfathers or Godmothers in Baptism?

4. Doth every House-holder in your Parish cause their children and servants to come to Church, to learn their Catechism, and to give an account thereof unto your Minister, that so they may be brought to understand and take upon them their Baptismal covenant, and be confirmed, and admitted Communicants?

5. Do all Communicants in your Parish, upon timely notice given by the Minister, thrice at the least every year (once whereof at Easter) in that meek and reverend manner which is required, partake of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper? and do such signifie their names and purpose to Communicate unto the Minister at least the day before the celebration thereof?

6. Do any of your Parish repair to other Parishes or Ministers, of them to receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper? Or are there any strangers, not of your Parish, who forsake their own Churches, and usually repair to yours for it?

7. Are there any living in your Parish, who have been unlawfully married contrary to the laws of God? or any who being lawfully divorced have married again? or any who being lawfully married, and not separated or divorced by due course of law, do not cohabit together?

8. Have any been clancularly married in private houses, or in the Church without licence, the Banns not being thrice published; or by licence or without, neither of the persons so married dwelling at that time in your Town?

9. Do any married Women in your Parish after their delivery from the danger of Child-birth, refuse in due time to make their publick thanksgiving in your Church for so great a mercy, or to pay their accustomed duties as is required?

10. Do any profane the Lord's day, by working in their ordinary callings, by tipling, gaming, or any unlawful exercises or pastimes?

11. Do any walk, talk, or stand idle in the Church-yard, or Church-porch, during the time of Divine Service or Sermon; Or at any other time quarrel, brail, smite, or lay violent hands upon one another either in the Church or Church-yard?

12. Have any irreverently used your Minister, or spoken slanderous or reproachful words against him to the scandal of his vocation, or interrupted him in his administrations?

13. Do any refuse to pay the Rates assessed upon them for the repair of the Church or Chappel, and the providing of Books, Utensils, and other necessary Ornaments for the same?

14. Are there any in your Parish Blasphemers of Gods Holy Name, any common Drunkards or Swearers, any commonly known or suspected to be guilty of fornication, adultery, incest, or any other notorious crime of Ecclesiastical cognizance? Declare who they are, that they may be punished according to their deserts.

TIT. IV.

Concerning Church-wardens.

1. Are the Church-wardens of your Parish yearly and duly chosen? Have the former and last Church-wardens given up their accounts to the Minister and Parishioners, and also delivered up to their Successors the moneys remaining in their hands, together with all things else belonging to your Church or Chappel?

2. Do they against every Communion appointed in your Church or Chappel provide a sufficient quantity of fine white Bread, and of good Wine, according to the number of Communicants?

TIT. V.

Concerning Parish-Clerks.

Have you a Parish-Clerk chosen by your Minister aged twenty years at least? Is he of ability to perform his duty? and doth he perform the same in all respects as is required of him? Are his accustomed Wages duly paid unto him? or do any withhold the same from him?

If you know any other default or crime of Ecclesiastical Cognizance not exprest in these Articles, you are likewise to present the same, and therein to take the assistance of your Minister.

The Minister of every Parish may joyn in Presentment with the Church-wardens and Side-men: And if they will not present such enormities as require reformation, the Minister himself, (being the Person that should have the chief care for the suppressing of sin and impiety in the Parish) may present the same.

FINIS.

FULLER, BISHOP OF LINCOLN, 1671.

6. Whether do the Ecclesiastical Judges suffer any persons detected for Crimes, to sue and molest Church-wardens who detected them for the same?

Plowden An. 7. Eliz.
fol. 278.

7. Whether do you know or have heard that any of the said Judges, when the deceased died without a Will, hath assigned any part of the Goods to Charitable Uses, and how have you known them to have been employed?

Stat. 21. H. 8.

8. Whether in such Cases of dying without a Will, doth the Ecclesiastical Judge send out Intimation to summon the Creditors, Wife, Children, and Kindred to come and take Administration, and commit the same as far as the Law permits, not to needy persons, but to able men, and such as enter sufficient Bond, to preserve the Estate, and to answer all that is due, and save the Lord Bishop harmless?

9. Whether doth the said Judge Ecclesiastical when a Benefice is vacant, commit Sequestration to able men, that do answer and account truly for the mean profits? And whether are the Parishes during the vacancy well served with able Ministers?

Can. 135.

10. Whether do you know, or have credibly heard, that the said Judges Ecclesiastical, Registers, or Apparators, do take any extraordinary or more Fees for Probate of Wills, Administrations, Accounts, Assignations, of Portions or Citations, or for any other Act or thing done or sped by them, then are allowed by the Statutes of the Land, or any Fees greater then heretofore have been accustomed, in other Businesses belonging to their Courts.

Can. 134.

11. Whether do you know, or have heard, that any Registrar of the said Courts hath sped any Acts, or dismissed any Person detected, without the knowledg and actual consent of the Judge?

Can. 103 & Constitu-1597, Tit de moderandis Indulgen-
tiis.

12. Doth the Chancellor, Commissary or Official, or any of their Surrogates, carelessly, or for hope of gain disperse or grant Licenses for the Celebration of Matrimony, until it do appear to the person himself who is Judge in these Cases, by the Oaths of two sufficient Witnesses, one of them known to the Judge, or to some person whom the Judge dares trust in this particular, That the express consent of the Parents or Parent (if one be dead) or Guardians or Guardian of the Parties, is thereunto had and obtained, and until one of the Parties to be married have personally sworn that he believeth there is no let or impediment of Precontract, Kindred, or Alliance, nor any other lawful Cause, nor any Suit commenced in any Ecclesiastical Court, to bar or hinder the proceedings of the said Matrimony?

Can. 136.

13. Whether is there in every place where Ecclesiastical Courts are kept, and also in the Registry of every such Office or Court a Table of Fees set up, that every one may read the same, containing all the Fees that every Officer of the Court ought to take, according to the Canon made at the Convocation under Archbishop Whitgift An Dom. 1597.

Can. 138.

14. Whether are there more Apparators belonging to the Courts, than the Law alloweth, or heretofore were accustomed? Whether do any of the Apparators buy or take to farm their Offices, or the execution of the same? Or do intrench upon the office of the Judge?

15. Whether doth any person to your knowledge, or as you have heard, take upon him to execute both the places of judg and Register, directly or indirectly?

TIT. VI.

Concerning Parish-Clerks and Sextons.

Can. 91.

1. Have you belonging to your Church or Chappelry a Parish-Clerk, aged 21 years at least? Is he of honest life and conversation? and sufficient or able to perform his duty, reading, writing, or singing? Is he chosen by your Minister, and doth he duly attend him in all Divine Services at the Church? Are his Wages duly paid unto him? and who withholdeth the same from him?

2. Doth he or the Sexton (if there be any such appointed in your Parish) diligently look to the Doors of the Church, that they be locked and opened at due time; and doth he keep the Church or Chappel clean from dust, cobwebs, and other annoyances? Doth he toll or ring the Bells at the due accustomed hours before the beginning of Divine Service, Morning and Evening, that the people may be warned to come unto the Church? And when any person is passing out of this life, doth he upon notice given him thereof, toll a Bell, as hath been accustomed, that the Neighbours may thereby be warned to recommend the dying person to the grace and favour of God?

Can. 67.

TIT. VII.

Concerning Hospitals, Schools, School-Masters, School-Mistresses, Physicians, Chyrurgeons, and Midwives.

Hen. 5. 1.

1. Is there in your Parish any Hospital, Alms-house, or Free-School, not of the Kings Foundation or Patronage?

Eliz. A.

Who was the Founder, or is now the Patron thereof? Or what is the yearly Revenue or Stipend, belonging to the Governours or Masters of the same? Is the same ordered and governed in every respect as it ought to be? And are the Revenues thereof rightly employed, according to the intention of the Founder, and of such Grants or Ordinances as have been made concerning the same?

Can. 77.

2. Doth any man keep a publick or private School in your Parish, who is not allowed thereunto by the Bishop? Doth your School-Master or Usher teach his Scholars the Catechisme of the Church? Doth he teach any other Catechism or any other Grammar, than what are set forth by Authority? Doth he cause them upon Sundays and Holydays orderly to repair to your Church or Chappel; and see that they behave themselves there quietly and reverently, during the time of Divine Service and Sermon?

Can. 79.

3. Doth any Woman keep a School in your Parish, who is not allowed thereunto by the Bishop? Is she modest, of good report, and conformable to the Church of England? Doth she teach them the Catechism of the Church, and doth she with them repair to the Church upon Sundayes and Holydays, and there demean themselves reverently the whole time of Divine Service and Sermon? And doth she bring her Scholars to the Minister of the Parish, to be prepared for Confirmation by the Bishop?

3. Hen. 8 11.

4. Doth any man in your Parish practise Physick, or Chyrurgery, or any Woman take upon her to exercise the Office of Midwife, without Approbation and Licence from the Ordinary?

TIT. VIII.

Queries to be put to the Ministers, concerning the Church-Wardens and Side-men.

Can. 89.

1. Are the Church-wardens of your Parish yearly and duly chosen by the joynt consent of the Minister and Parishioners; or one of them by the Minister, and the other by the Parishioners? And are there Side-men appointed to assist them for the due ordering of the Church?

Can. 89.

2. Have the former and last Church-wardens given up their due Accounts to the Parish, and delivered up to the succeeding Church-wardens the moneys remaining in their hands, together with all other things belonging to your Church or Chappel?

Can. 90.

3. Do the Church-wardens and Side-men take diligent care, and see who of the Parishioners be absent from the Divine Service and Sermon in your Church or Chappel, upon Sundayes or Holy-days? And if they find any of them to have absented themselves without a sufficient cause? Do they by Warrant levy of them by way of Distress upon their Goods, the sum of 12*d.* for every such day of their absence, according to the Act of Parliament in that case provided? And do they, the several sums so levied, distribute among the Poor of the Parish, according to the Law?

1. Q. Eliz. 2.

Can. 18.

4. Do they present them that come late to Church, after Divine Service is begun, or depart before it be ended? Do they suffer none to stand idle, or talk together in the

Can. 19.

Church-Porch, or to walk in the Church or Church-yard, during the time of Prayers, Preaching, or other Sacred Offices? Do they about the midst of Divine Service usually walk forth and make search for such as are then abroad in the Streets or in Taverns or Ale-houses, suspected to harbour ill company?

Can. 18.

5. Do they suffer no misbehaviour or disorder to be done by Men, or Women, Servants or Children, in your Church or Chappel? Are they careful that none of them sit, lean, or lay their Hats

Can. 88. upon the Communion Table? Do they permit no Minstrels, no Morrice-Dancers, no Dogs, Hawks, or Hounds, to be brought into your Church, to the disturbance of the Congregation?

Can. 20. 6. Do they against every Communion appointed in your Church or Chappel, provide a sufficient quantity of fine White-Bread, and of good Wine, according to the number of Communicants?

Can. 52. 7. Do they cause all Strangers, that preach in your Church or Chappel, to subscribe their Names the same day in a Book provided for that purpose, together with the Name of the Bishop that licenced them to preach in this Diocess? And do they permit no other to preach?

8. Were there any Presentments made upon any of the Articles before rehearsed at my Primary Visitation, Anno Dom. 1668, by the Church-wardens of your Parish? were the Presentments prosecuted, and Delinquents punished, if not, by whose fault or neglect was the same omitted, declare your knowledge, and what you have heard herein?

Can. 119. 9. Have they (the Churchwardens and Side-men) now sworn to give in a true Answer unto all these Articles of Inquiry in all their several Titles, taken sufficient time to draw up their Presentments, and therein consulted with you their Minister, for your faithful assistance?

For know you assuredly, that as the true discharging of your Office is the chief means whereby publick Disorders, Sins, and Offences in your Parish may be reformed and punished; the Bishop however willing, not being able to punish, till due Presentments are made; so if you wilfully refuse to present such Crimes and Faults as either you know to have been committed, or otherwise to have heard of by publick fame; that, in such Cases the Bishop and his Officers are to proceed against you, in their Ecclesiastical Courts, as in Cases of Wilful Omission and Perjury.

The Ministers of every Parish are desired to prepare and give in the Names of such of the younger sort of their several Parishes, as they judge fit to receive Confirmation from the Bishop, and to present them to be confirmed; especially such as having competently learned their Catechisme, have not yet received the Holy Communion; and to present them to the Bishop to be confirm'd, as there shall be opportunity.

FINIS.

1. Is your Church-yard sufficiently fenced and preserved from anioance, encrochments, and wast?

2. Is the dwelling-house, and all the out-houses of your Parson, Vicar, or Curate kept in good re- pare; and are the Glebe-lands, Orchards, Gardens, and other easements belonging to them, preserv'd from being embezel'd, or endammag'd? And have you a perfect Terror (sic) of such Glebe-lands, Orchards, &c. and also of Pensions, Tiths, and compositions as belong unto them?

TIT. III.

1. Have you a Parson, Vicar, or Curate legally settled among you?

2. Is he constantly resident? or how long and on what occasion is he absent? has he a Curate? how is he licensed, and how maintain'd? During his absence, what care is taken for hospitality, and charity to the poor?

3. Do's your Parson, Vicar, or Curate constantly, reverently, and regularly officiate on the Lords daies, Holidiaies, and the Lives of them; as also read the Letany upon all wenesdaies; and fridaies weekly; and observe Rogation and Emberdaies according to the order of the Church; and so perform all offices, without addition or diminution?

3. (Sic) Do's your Minister diligently instruct the youth of your Parish in the Church Catechisme? and do's he endeavor to reclame all profane persons, Papists, and Sectaries; and press the great duties of piety, justice, temperance, charity, allegiance, and conformity? And is he diligent in visiting the sick, and satisfying the doubts of troubled consciences? Lastly, is he peaceable, sober, and exemplary in his conversation, and grave in his demeanor, company, hair, and apparel?

TIT. IV.

1. Are there in your Parish any persons known or reputed to be Jews, Heretics, or Schismatics, whether Papists, or Fanatics? what are the numbers of each particular Sect of them? and are they studious to pervert the Orthodox; or insolent towards them for doing their duty?

2. Are any of your Parish known or suspected to be guilty of Incest, Adultery, Fornication, or any other enormous crimes? Do any profane the Lords day, or the Name of God, or are irreverent in the Church, or neglect the respective duties incumbent on them in reference to the Sacraments of Baptism, and the Lords Supper, and other Rites; as of Catechizing, Confirmation, Mariage, thanksgiving after Child-birth, burial of the dead, or the censures of the Church?

3. Are the Wills and Testaments of the dead in your Parish, or the administration of their Goods duly taken out and executed? Have any Lands, Legacies, or charitable gifts bestowed on your Parish, or any other good uses; bin embezel'd, or unduly dispos'd of?

TIT. V.

Concerning Parish Clerks, and Sextons.

Have you belonging to your Parish or Chapelry a sufficient Clerk or Sexton, and do's he faithfully and diligently execute his office?

TIT. VI.

Concerning Hospitals, Scholes, Scholemasters, Physicians, Chirurgions, and Midwives.

1. Is there in your Parish any Hospital, Almes-house, or Free-schole? How are they endowed, ordered, and governed? Do's any one keep Schole without licence from the Bishop; or if licensed, neglect to teach the Youth committed to him the Catechism of the Church, and Grammar set forth by authority; and to bring them to the Service of the Church?

2. Do's any in your Parish practice Physic, or Chirurgery or do the Office of a Midwife, without approbation and licence from the Ordinary?

1. Have any Officers that exercise Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction in this Diocess; taken, or exacted any excessive Fees for any Cause or Act; or any Bribe, or Reward for the concelement or impunity of delinquents; or sped any Act privately, and not in the presence of a public Notary?

2. Is the number of the Apparitors in this Diocess excessive; have they summon'd any person unlawfully; or taken reward for concelements; or threatned prosecutions where they had no reward, or otherwise misbehaved themselves in their office?

Advertisements.

I. The Minister of every parish may joyn in presentment with the Churchwardens and Sidemen; and if they fail to present, the Ministers themselves (who have the highest obligation to endeavour the suppressing of impiety and disorder) may do it.

II. The Minister, Churchwardens and Sidemen, at the delivery of their bill of presentment, are required to draw up in writing and attest under their hands, a particular account of the number of Recusants, whether Popish or other; and also the number of the Orthodox and conformable in their Parish, as follows.

1. What number of Persons is there in com/non estimation in your Parish?

2. What number of Popish Recusants, or persons thereof suspected, is there?

3. What number of other Dissenters is there, who relinquish the Communion of the Church.

III. The Ministers are to take notice, that the Bishop at his Visitation will be ready to confirm the youth that shall be fitted and brought before him: and therefore are desir'd by diligent Catechizing to prepare those under their charge, and to bring them, at the time appointed, unto the Bishop.

Have those Children which have been Baptized in private Houses by the Minister of the Parish, afterward been brought into the Church? and did the Minister there certify the Congregation, That the true Form of Baptism was by him privately before used? Or if any Children in the Parish have been Baptized privately by any other lawful Minister, have those Children been brought to your Church? And hath the Minister of the Parish there examined, whether such Children were lawfully Baptized, or not? Doth your Minister refuse to give the Sacrament to any in the Parish, and for what cause? Or doth he give to such as are Scandalous, or notorious sinners, or to any Excommunicate persons? Doth he duly Administer the Blessed Sacrament three times every year at the least, whereof Easter to be one?

VIII. Doth your Minister Marry any Persons in Private Houses, or such as are under age, not having the consent of their Parents and Guardians? Doth he Marry any without Banes first published three Sundays or Holydays in the Church? or at prohibited times or hours, without Licence so to do? Or with the Licence of any other than the Archbishop, Bishop of this Diocess, or his Chancellor?

IX. Doth your Minister duly bid and observe Holydays, and Fasting-dayes, as is appointed? And doth he then use the Forms of Prayer prescribed by the Church? Hath he taken upon him to appoint any private Fasts, or Religious Exercises, without Lawful Authority? Doth he, or any other (Minister or Lay person) in your Parish, hold any Conventicles, or Religious meetings for people of several Families to resort unto, contrary to the Laws in that case provided?

X. Is your Minister constantly resident among you, and how many weeks in the year hath he been absent from his Benefice? Hath he a Curate to assist him in his absence or presence? Is that Curate in Holy Orders, and hath he a Licence from the Bishop, to serve the said Cure? Doth he carry himself in all things as an able and discreet Minister and conformable to the Church of England? Doth he serve any more Cures beside that of your Parish, and at what distance? And doth any Lay-man, not being in Holy Orders, presume to read Publick Prayers in the Church?

XI. Is there in your Parish any Lecturer? Is he in Orders, and duly Licenced? Doth he read Divine Service before his Lecture? And is he conformable to the Discipline of the Church of England?

XII. Doth your Minister every six months publickly denounce all such as persevere in the Sentence of Excommunication, not seeking to be Absolved? Have any Excommunicate Persons been received into the Church, without a Certificate from the Ordinary of their Absolution? Or any so dying, buried with Christian Burial?

TIT. III.

Concerning Parishioners.

GUNNING, BISHOP OF ELY, 1679.

ARTICLES of Visitation and Enquiry within the Diocess of Ely: in the Second Episcopal Visitation of the Right Reverend Father in God, Peter, by Divine Permission Lord Bishop of Ely. In the fifth year of his translation.

London, printed by S. Roycroft, 1679.

The Tenour of the Oath to be administred to the Church-wardens and Side-men.

You shall Swear, diligently to Enquire, and true Presentment make, of every person now or lately of your Parish, which hath made any default or offence enquirable by the King's Laws Ecclesiastical, and become known unto you. So help you God, and the Contents of his Holy Gospel.

ARTICLES of instruction and direction to the Church-wardens and Side-men, of what they are to take more especial notice in their presentments.

Concerning Religion, and the Government of the Church established in this Realm.

Artic. 1, 2, 3. Imprimis. Is there any in your Parish who are guilty of Atheistical or blasphemous Speeches against the Majesty of Almighty God, or Scoffers at Religion, and the Soul's future immortal state?

Is there any guilty of Speeches of Infidelity against the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ? Any who in their communication, or otherwise, defend the Socinian or Arrian Heresie, denying the Artic. 2. Eternal Godhead of the Lord Jesus, or Pelagian, denying the necessity of his Grace, and of Baptism for the washing away of Original Sin?

2. Is there any one that doth affirm or teach (and who is he) that the holy Scripture doth not contain all things necessary to Salvation? or, that what is contained in the 3 Creeds ought not thoroughly to be received and believed, or that the Church hath not Authority in Controversies of faith?

Artic. 6.
Artic. 8.
Artic. 20.

3. Is there any that doth affirm and teach that the Church of England by law established, is not a true and Apostolical Church, and a true member of the Catholic Church, having in her all things necessary to Salvation? Or is there any that doth affirm and teach that the XXXIX Articles agreed upon by the Arch-bishops and Bishops of both

Can. 5. Provinces, and the whole Clergy in the Convocation holden at London, A.D. 1562. are in any part erroneous or superstitious, or such as may not with a good conscience be subscribed unto?

Can. 4.

4. Is there any in your Parish that doth affirm and teach that the form of God's Worship in the Church of England established by law, and contained in the Book of Common Prayer, And Administration of Sacraments, is a corrupt, Popish, or any way superstitious or unlawful Worship of God, or containeth any thing in it that is repugnant to Scripture; or to the Doctrine and Worship in the Catholick or Primitive Church?

5. Is there any that doth affirm or teach (and who is he) that Baptism of Infants according as is practised in the Church of England, is unlawful or unnecessary, or better to be delayed, or not appointed for the Remission of Sins, or that it may be repeated, or that Infants duly baptized according to the Churches Order, and dying before they commit actual sin, are not saved everlastingly through God's grace given them in Baptism?

Rubrick after Baptism.

6. Is there any who doth affirm or teach, that the King's Majesty hath not the same Authority in Causes Ecclesiastical which we see hath been given always to all godly Princes by God himself, both among the Jews, and in the Christian Church? Or that doth any way deny or impugn the King's Majesties Royal Authority or Supremacy in Causes Ecclesiastical in this Realm? Or who denies that within his Majesties Realms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and all other his Dominions and Countries, our Lord the King is the highest Power under God, to whom the chief Government of all Estates, whether they be Ecclesiastical or Civil, in all Causes doth appertain, without any subjection due from Him or his Subjects to any foreign Jurisdiction?

Can. 1 & 2.

Artic. 37.

7. Is there any who doth affirm and teach (and who is he) that the Government of the Church of England under his Majesty by Arch-bishops, Bishops, Deans, Arch-Deacons, or other chief Ministers bearing office in the same, or that the forms or manner of Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons, established by law, contains any thing that is Antichristian, or repugnant to the Word of God, or to the practice of the Catholick Church? Or that persons so ordained

Can. 7.

Can. 8.

Bishops, Priests, or Deacons, have not sufficient external calling, or that they ought not to be accounted truly Bishops, Priests, or Deacons till they have some other external calling unto those divine Offices? or that teaches that those three holy Orders above-said have not been ever in Christ's Church even from the Apostles time?

8. Is there any in your Parish (and who is he) that separating himself from this Church, and from the Communion of Saints therein, and joyning himself to Conventicles, breaks the Communion of the Church of England, and so the Communion of the Catholick Church, of whose Communion hers is a part; or accounts of others as prophane, and none of the godly, for their orderly conforming themselves to the Church of England as established by law? Or that any combining themselves in Assemblies or Congregations of the King's born Subjects within this Land, other then such as by the Laws of this Land are held and allowed, may truly take unto themselves the name of another purer Church, or of the Church of England?

Can. 9.

Can. 6.

9. Is there any who doth affirm and teach (and who is he) that the Rites and Ceremonies, and the Rules of the Church of England by law established, are Antichristian, Superstitious, or frivolous; or any way unlawful, or such as may not be sub-

Concerning the Clergy, their Duty and Office.

1. Is your Parson, Vicar, (or also Curate) in holy Orders by Episcopal Ordination, a Priest ordained according to the laws of the Church of England? hath he been legally instituted and inducted into his Benefice? or is he known or suspected to have obtained his Parsonage or Vicarage by any Symoniackal Contract?

Ibid.

2. Did he within two Months after his Induction publicly in your Church or Chappel upon some Sunday or Holy-day in the time of Divine Service, openly read the XXXIX Articles established by Authority in this Church, A.D. 1562. and then profess and publish his assent, and subscribe his name thereto in the presence of the Church-wardens?

Do you not know, or have you not heard, that in his reading, or pretending to read those XXXIX Articles, he passed over some one or more of them, or some part of one or more, and what part of the Articles was it that he left unread? Did your Parson, Vicar or Curate, upon some Lord's-day within two Months after his Induction, solemnly read in your Church or Chappel both the Morning and Evening Prayer, as it is appointed in the Book of Common-Prayer by law established? And did he after such reading, publicly before the Congregation, declare his unfeigned assent and consent to the use of all things in the said Book contained, as is prescribed in the Act of Parliament made for the Uniformity of publick Prayers? And did he within three months after his Induction, in your Church or Chappel, in publick upon some Lord's day read a Certificate under the hand and seal of the Arch-bishop or Bishop, Ordinary of the Dioces, that he the said Parson, Vicar or Curate, did before his admission to be Incumbent, subscribe a declaration of the unlawfulness to take up arms against the King, and of his conforming to the Liturgy of this Church, and of his disavowing the unlawful Oath commonly called, The Solemn League and Covenant, according as is prescribed in the aforesaid Act for Uniformity?

3. Or after his lawful Entrance, is your Parson or Vicar resident upon his benefice? or if his residence be legally dispensed with, is his place supplied by a Curate allowed by the Bishop, and a licensed Preacher, and constantly resident among you? and what yearly stipend doth your Minister allow him? And if your Parson or Vicar be both resident himself, and keep a Curate also, doth he notwithstanding himself at least once a Month, openly read Common Prayer in your Church or Chappel, and (if there be occasion) administer each Sacrament in such order, manner and form, as is prescribed in the Liturgy and Canons of this Church?

- Rubrick. 6. Doth your Minister reverently and publickly, at the Font only, and that without the use of a Basin, Administer the holy Sacrament of Baptism? Or doth he refuse, or delay to Christen any Child that is brought to him to Church on any Sunday or Holy-day, knowledge thereof being given to him over night, or in the Morning before Morning Prayer; or neglect to persuade all those who have the use of Reason, and are still unbaptiz'd (having been seduced by Anabaptists) to come to holy Baptism, and doth he take care for their Baptism as in the Common-Prayer Book is prescribed? In the solemn Publick Baptism doth he baptize any without God-fathers or God-mothers? Or doth he then refuse or neglect to sign the Child baptized with the sign of the Cross? Or doth he admit such to be a God-father or God-mother, who are either one of the Parents of the Child, or who have not themselves received the holy Communion?
- Can. 68. Rubrick of Baptism. Can. 81.
- Can. 29, 30.
- Rubrick. 7. Doth your Minister duly and reverently Administer the Holy Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ our Lord, so often, at least, and at such times, as every Parishioner may communicate, at the least three times in every year in publick, whereof the Feast of Easter to be one? And doth he reverently and carefully in all things observe all the Churches Order in the Celebration? Doth he give warning publickly in the Church at Morning-Prayer, the Sunday before, for the better preparation of his Parishioners? And do such as purpose to Communicate, signifie their Names at least some time the day before? and when he seeth the People negligent to come to the Communion, doth he use the Churches second Exhortation? and when there is no Communion, doth your Minister every Sunday and Holy-day throughout the year, read so much of the Communion Service, as is appointed to be read by the Book of Common-Prayer, and at the place appointed, (if he can thence be well heard of all) thereby professing his and the Churches readiness to the more frequent Celebration of the Holy Eucharist, if Communicants were not wanting?
- Can. 22.
- Rubrick. 8. Doth your Minister wittingly admit to the receiving the Holy Communion, any one such who is known to live in open and notorious sin without Repentance? or that has wronged his Neighbour by word or deed, so as that the Congregation is thereby offended, or any such betwixt whom he perceives malice or hatred to reign, and will not be reduced by him to a reconciliation, or to any who refuse to be present at the other publick Prayers of the Church, or to any that be common or notorious depravers of the Book of Common-Prayer, or of any thing contained in the XXXIX Articles, or in the Book of Ordaining Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, or to any that has spoken against His Majesties Supreme Authority in Causes Ecclesiastical, except such persons do first acknowledge to the Minister, before you the Church-Wardens, his Repentance for the same, and promise under his hand (if he can write) or otherwise by word of mouth, that he will do so no more? Or lastly, to any that refuse to receive the said Holy Communion kneeling? And of all such persons by him put for Communion, doth he give an account to his Ordinary according to law?
- Can. 26.
- Can. 26, 27, 28.
- Rubrick. 9. Doth he at the Celebration of the Holy Communion in the due places appointed by the Liturgy, take the Paten into his hands, and break the bread, and lay his hand upon all the Bread, and after likewise take the Cup into his hand, and lay his hand upon it, and every Vessel in which there is any wine to be Consecrated? and when that which was Consecrated is spent, doth he communicate to any persons without Consecrating more according to the form prescribed, and doth he severally deliver the Bread and Wine to every Communicant; and at his delivering the same, doth he rehearse the whole form prescribed in the Communion-Book, saying, The Body of our Lord Jesus Christ &c. And The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ which was shed, &c. Or doth he use only some part thereof as he listeth himself? And when all have communicated, doth he cover what remaineth of the consecrated Elements with a fair Linnen-cloth? and what remains is it reverently eaten and drunken by some of the Communicants within your Church?
- Rubrick. Can. 21.
10. If any person sick or in health (especially before the Receiving the holy Communion,) finding his conscience troubled with any weighty matters, doth I. Exhortation to the Communion. for the quieting thereof, and for further comfort and counsel, unburden his conscience to his Priest or Minister; doth then the said Priest or Minister upon special confession of his sins made, together with fruits meet for repentance having been perform'd (to both which also he is by the Minister to be moved) upon his Repentance administer unto him Absolution, together with Ghostly counsel and advice? And have you ever heard that the said Priest or Minister hath revealed or made known at any time to any person whatsoever directly or indirectly any crime or offence confessed to him in secret by any such Penitents whatsoever (except they be such crimes as by the Laws of this Realm for the publick concern, the Life of the said Priest may and ought to be called in question for concealing of them?)
- Rubrick. Visitation of the sick. Can. 113.
11. Is your Minister a licensed Preacher, by the Bishop, or either of the two Universities? and if so, doth he then constantly (unless in case of sickness, necessary absence, or other reasonable impediment) himself preach in your Church or Chappel, or in some other near adjoining, where no Preacher is, one Sermon every Lords-day? or in such cases of impediment, or himself not being licensed, doth he procure some lawful Minister and licensed Preacher to preach one Sermon and to perform other Ministerial Duties each such day, (besides the days of Christ's Nativity, Passion, and Ascension at the least) or if no sermon be, take care that one of the Homilies set forth by Authority, be there read by a Priest or Deacon lawfully ordained on every Sunday and Holy-day in the Year? hath he in his own Sermons at any time, or in other Discourse (as you know or have heard of) preached or maintained any unsound, Heretical, Seditious, or Schismatical Doctrine so far as you can judge? or spoken ought privately in contempt of Religion, or that Religion, or any part of it, which he by his office in this Church professeth?
- Can. 45, 46, 47, 49.
12. Doth he or any other admitted to preach in your Church, omit before his sermon or Homily briefly to move and exhort the people in the form laid down in the 55. Canon, or to the same effect, (declaring for whom, and for what mercies they are to pray, and to give God thanks) to joyn with him finally in Prayer for all those mercies in that most holy and comprehensive Prayer of our Lord?
- Can. 55.
13. Doth your Minister diligently Catechize the Youth of your Parish every Sunday and Holy-day by way of Question and Answer, according to the Churches publick Catechism, or also further instruct them in the sense thereof, as he shall think fit, and this after the second Lesson at Evening Service, openly in the Church? Doth he by this and all other good means and admonitions, prepare and procure them (as occasion is offered) devoutly to come and seek to be confirmed by the Bishop; and himself either bring or send in writing under his hand the names of all such persons in his Parish, as he shall find by his Examination fit to be presented to the Bishop, humbly to seek and ask that benefit of Confirmation?
- Rubrick. Can. 59, 61.
14. Doth your Minister (if he be thought fit by his Ordinary) endeavour privately to reclaim and reduce all Popish Recusants, and all Sectaries in your Parish, to the Communion in the publick and established Worship of God in this Church? Is he also ready without delay to visit the sick? And doth he call upon them to receive the holy Sacrament in their sickness? And doth he administer it to them? And is he also ready being called, without delay to baptize Infants in danger of death? Is any Infant or more aged person in the Parish yet unbaptized by his default? And those Children that have been baptized in private houses, have they been so baptized by any Popish Priest on pretended necessity? or if at home for true case of necessity, have they been by your Minister or other lawful Minister, baptized and afterward brought into the Church and the Order of the Church concerning them, there duly observed?
- Can. 66. Can. 67. Rubrick.
- Rubrick. 15. Hath your Minister, or any other, baptized Children, church'd any woman, or ministr'd the holy Communion in any private house, (where they have any Church or Chappel in the Parish) otherwise then by Law is allowed in cases of necessity?
- Can. 71.
16. Doth your Minister on the three Rogation days before the Feast of the Holy Ascension, go in perambulation of the Circuit of the Parish? And when he so goeth, doth he exhort the people to give thanks to God, in the beholding of his benefits, for the increase and abundance of his fruits upon the face of the Earth? And when there appears any fear of scarcity, doth he move them to pray unto God for his mercy and favour unto the Land, going into the

- Can. 22. 17. Doth he bid and observe the Holy-dayes, and Fasting-dayes, and days of Abstinence, and other solemn days for which particular Services are appointed, as they occur or return from time to time, giving notice to the Parishioners of every of the same in the Church, in the time of the Morning Service the Sunday next before?
- Can. 58. 18. Doth your Minister always at the reading or celebrating any Divine Office, constantly wear the Surplice and other Scholastical Habit, according to his degree if he be a Graduate, and without a Hood (only instead thereof a Tipet of black Stuff, (not silk) being permitted him) if he be no Graduate? And doth he wear his hair of a moderate and comly length? Is his usual Apparel decent in fashion and colour, such as is enjoyned him by the Canons of the church?
- Can. 70. 19. Doth he in the presence of the Church-wardens, write and record in your Register Book, the Names and Surnames of all persons baptized, married, and buried in your Parish from time to time, yearly transmitting a copy of those Christenings, Marryings, and Buryings, subscribed with his own, the Church-wardens or Overseers hands, into the Bishops Registry?
- Can. 50. 20. Doth your Minister permit any strange Minister to preach in your Church, who is not sufficiently licensed and Authorized thereto, or that doth not subscribe his name in your book provided for that purpose, and by whom he was so licensed to Preach, and the day of his Preaching?
- Can. 52. 21. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate celebrate Matrimony betwixt any persons, without the Banns of Matrimony first published on three several Sundays or Holy-days in the Parish-Church or Chappel where the said Parties dwell, or at any times by Law prohibited, without special Faculty or License, in either case, granted by lawful Authority; Or doth he celebrate the same in any other place than in the Church? and in such Church or Chappel only, where both or one of the parties dwell (though he have License granted by the Ordinary) or in the Church at any other time, then between the hours of eight and twelve in the forenoon? Or betwixt such persons as are prohibited by the Laws of God, and are within those Degrees of Consanguinity or Affinity which are expressed in the table of Marriage; or under the Age of One and twenty years compleat, without the consent of their Parents or of their Guardians and Governours (if their Parents be dead) first signified unto him?
- Can. 62. 22. Or have any such Licenses as above-mentioned, that you know of, been granted by any under the Jurisdiction of this Diocess, for the celebration of Matrimony, until it do appear to the person himself, who is judge in these cases by the Oaths of two sufficient witnesses, one of them being known to the Judge, or to some person whom the Judge may reasonably trust in this particular, That the express consent of the Parents or Parent (if one be dead) or Guardian or Guardians of the Parties (except they both were in the state of Widowhood) is thereunto had and obtained, and until one of the parties to be Married have personally Sworn, that he believeth there is no let or impediment of Precontract, Kindred or Alliance, or any other lawful cause, nor any suit commenced in any Ecclesiastical Court to bar or hinder the proceeding of the said Matrimony?
- Can. 102, 103, 104. and Constitut. 1597. Tit. de Moderandis, &c. 23. Hath your Minister admitted any Woman delivered of any Child begotten in Adultery or Fornication, to be churched without License from the Ordinary?
- Can. 48. 24. Doth your Minister serve more than one Church or Chappel in distinct Parishes on one day? if so, how far distant are those Churches or Chappels which he so serveth?
- Can. 65. 25. Doth your Parson, Vicar or Curate (if commanded by the Ordinary) openly some Sunday denounce and declare for Excommunicate all such as stand Excommunicate by the Law of the Church, to the end that others may be admonished to refrain their Company? hath he said Divine Service whilst he knew such Excommunicate persons to have been in the Church? or admitted such to the Communion whilst they stood so excommunicate?
- Can. 68. 26. Doth your Parson, Vicar, or Curate (having convenient notice given) delay or refuse to bury any that are brought to the Church or Church-yard according to the form prescribed in the Book of Common-Prayer, except such as die either unbaptized, or Excommunicate Majori Excommunicatione, and no man able to testifie their Repentance, or have laid violent hands upon themselves?
- Can. 2. direct. to Preachers, 1662. An. 27. Doth your Minister in the Parish Church or Chappel where he hath charge, read the Book of Canons and Constitutions agreed on at the Synod holden at London, A.D. 1603 once every year upon some Sundays or Holy-days, in the Afternoon before Divine Service, and doth he so divide the same, as the one half may be read one day, and the other half the other day?
- Can. 53, 54. 28. Doth your Minister publickly read the whole XXXIX Articles unto the people twice every year, so that they may the better understand the same, and be made more throughly acquainted with the Doctrine of the Church of England, and not be so easily drawn away from the same (as formerly) before they know what it is?
- Can. 76. 29. Is any Lecture preached in your Church? is he or are they who preach it, Licensed so to do by the Bishop? Doth every such one, before his Lecture either read the whole publick Service himself appointed for that day by the Church in his Surplice, or at least be present at the whole reading thereof? And is he in all respects conformable to the Laws and Orders of the Church of England? Or doth he any way endeavour to bring the Parson or Vicar of the place nto disrepute with his Parishioners.
- Can. 76. 30. Doth every one abide in his own Calling whereunto he is called? viz. Doth any Lay-man that is not duly ordained openly read Common Prayer, or execute any Ministerial duty in your Church? Or is there any Clergy-man, viz. any in Holy Orders, who doth voluntarily relinquish those his Orders, and use himself as a Lay man only without taking any care of the Church of God?

Concerning the Parishioners.

Or do any in time of Divine Service, or Sermon, or Homily, behave themselves rudely by walking, talking, whispering, laughing, or sleeping.

6. Do any persons excommunicate intrude into your Church in time of Divine Service, or doth any other person disturb your Minister doing any part of his Ministerial Office? or do any brawl, quarrel, challenge one another, fight or strike in the Church or Church-yard? Or are any Plays, Feasts, Drinkings, or Church-Ales kept in your Church or Church-yard?

7. Do any Housholders, Fathers, Masters, Mothers, Mistresses in your Parish neglect to cause their Children and Servants, Apprentices, or other Persons living in their House, which have not yet learnt the Churches Catechism, to learn the same, and to come to Church on Sundays and Holy-days in the Afternoon, there to be examined by their Minister, and instructed therein.

8. Is there any in your Parish, Master or Servant, Sojourner or Inhabiter, Man or Woman, that lieth under a common fame or suspicion or notoriety of Adultery, Fornication, or Incest or other Incontinency, (having married within the degrees prohibited by God, and expressed in a Table set forth by authority, A.D. 1563.) Or have you any that live together in your Parish as a man and wife, who refuse to make known when, where, or by whom they were married? Or any that being lawfully married do yet live asunder without separation in due form of law? Or have you any Bawds, Entertainers or Concealers of incontinent persons, or any common Drunkards, Extortioners, Swearers, or Blasphemers of God's name, and sowers of Sedition, Faction, or Discord among their Neighbours, any Railers, Revilers, common Slanderers of their Neighbours, filthy and lascivious talkers, or which have solicited any person to unchastity? or any which have used any Charms, Inchantments, or consultations of those called Wizards, Witches, or cunning men or any Sorceries, (not including here such as are made Felony by the Laws of this Realm) or which have committed perjury in any Ecclesiastical Court and Cause.

9. Are there any Recusants in your Parish, or other Schismatically affected, who refuse communion with the Church in her Prayers and Sacraments, who keep in their houses any that take upon them to be spiritual guides and instructors, or any School-master in their Family, which come not to Church to hear Divine Service, and to receive the holy Communion? or that labour to seduce and withdraw others within or without the Family, from the Religion in this Church established? or any in your Parish that retain, sell, or disperse any Popish books or writings, or other books or writings of any Sectaries touching the Religion, State, or Government Ecclesiastical of this kingdom of England, or Books of Heresie.

10. Have you any in your Parish that are suspected to be Antinomians, Anabaptists, Famalists, Libertines, Brownists, Quakers, Muggletonians, Independents, or Presbyterian opposers of Episcopal Government.

11. Did any dying in your Parish or elsewhere, leave any legacy to your Church or Chappel, or to the Poor, or to any other pious or charitable purposes? What were the legacies, and how have they been bestowed? Are there any in your Parish living that do to your knowledge, or as you have heard, withhold any part of the stock, goods or legacies, given to any Church or Pious and Charitable use, any provision for free Schools, Alms-houses, or Hospitals, (not including here such as are of his Majesty's foundation or Patronage) or that employ them otherwise then according to the intent of their several foundations, and the allowance of the Laws? Are there any Testaments or Wills by any concealed or unproved, or any Goods unadministred or administred without a due grant from the Ordinary?

12. Have you any in your Parish that refuse to pay their duty for Easter offerings to your Ministers, or to reckon with him then, or that refuse to contribute and pay the Rate cessed upon them for the repair of your Church or Chappel, or for the providing of such Books, Furniture, or necessary Ornaments as are requisite for the performance of any of the Divine Offices there?

13. Do you know of any person in your Parish having the presentation or gift of any Ecclesiastical Benefice, who hath presented a Minister to it upon any Bargain, either for Money, or Pension, or Lease, or reserve of Tythes, or Glebe, or any part thereof, or upon any other Symonical contract whatsoever?

1. Are the Church-wardens of your Parish yearly and duly chosen by the joint consent of your Minister and Parishioners? or one of them by your Minister, and the other by the Parishioners? and are they sworn? Have the last Churchwardens given up their Accounts before the Minister and Parishioners, delivering up also the money remaining into your hands, and other things of right belonging to your Church or Chappel? and is the same delivered to you by bill indented.

2. Doth any person or persons trouble or molest you the Church-wardens for presenting any offenders in any of the premises, or for performing the duty that lies upon you in executing any part of your office, and who are they that do so molest and trouble you?

3. Do you the Church-wardens against every Communion provide a sufficient quantity of fine white Bread, and good and wholesome Wine according to the number of the Communicants? and do you bring the Wine so provided in a clean and sweet standing Flagon of Pewter, or other purer Metal kept for that use?

4. Do you suffer the Table for the holy Communion to be applied at any time, to any prophane or common use, as of writing, setting dead Corps upon it at Funerals, or others in the Church to sit upon it, or irreverently make it a place to lay their arms or hats upon it?

5. Do you the Church-wardens note them that come late to Church after Divine Service is begun, or depart before it be ended? and do you take diligent notice of the absent? And if upon your Complaint you receive Warrant from some of the Justices of Peace, any sums of money be thereupon levied according as by law it is directed, do you distribute the several sums so levied to the poor of your Parish according to the law in that case provided? and before you at any time present any for such default in the Spiritual Court, do you first seriously admonish them once and again?

6. Do you suffer none in time of Divine Service to stand idle, or talk together in the Church-porch, or to walk in the Church or Church-yard, nor children playing or crying in or about the Church? nor suffer any to bring Dogs, Hawks, or Hounds into the Church to the disturbance of the Congregation.

7. Are the Side-men duly chosen? do they assist the Church-wardens in the executing their Office? and do they joyn with them in framing Presentments?

8. Have you a Parish-Clerk aged 20 years at the least, chosen by your Minister, of honest life and conversation, and sufficiently able to perform his duty in reading, writing, and singing? and doth he daily attend the Minister in all Divine Offices at the Church? doth he keep clean the Church, and carefully look to it, and to the Books? and is he payed the ancient and usual wages as hath been accustomed?

9. Doth your Clerk, or your Sexton (if there be any such in your Parish) diligently look to the doors of the Church, that they be locked and opened at due times, and that the Bells be toll'd and rung at the due and accustomed hours before the beginning of Morning and Evening Service, that the people may be warned and invited to come to the Church? and when any person is passing out of this life, doth he upon notice given thereof toll a Bell as hath been accustomed, that devout and charitable persons may thereby be warned to recommend the Soul of the dying person to the grace, mercy, and peace of God Almighty?

10. Do they at the instance of any, make any grave in any part of the Church (except in such Isles where some person hath propriety) without the express consent of your Minister?

Concerning Churches, and their Possessions, Ornaments, Utensils, and other Necessaries to the same belonging.

Can. 85.

1. Is your Church or Chappel in good repair? are the Roofs, the Walls, the Floors, Windows, Seats (if you have them) and Doors well maintained? and all things there in such a decent sort, without dust or any thing that may be either noisom or unseemly, as becometh the House of God? And is your Porch and Steeple in good repair, and Bells kept in good order by the care and oversight of the Church-wardens at the charge of all persons occupying any Lands or Tenements within your Parish, as well out-dwellers as inhabitants, rating all proportionably for the Lands and Tenements they occupy therein? And is your Church or Chappel-yard sufficiently fenced with walls, rails, or pales, as hath been accustomed, and that by the moneys cessed upon Lands and Tenements in your Parish as aforesaid, except you have a special custom otherwise directing you?

you likewise another Book of Paper, wherein are duly Recorded the Names and Licences of all such Strangers as are admitted at any time to preach in your Church or Chappel? As also a third Book, wherein are Entred the Churchwardens Accompts for every year?

7. HAVE you a strong Chest or Coffe, wherein to keep the aforesaid Books, and all the afore mentioned Furniture in safe custody? And another with an Hole in the upper part thereof, placed in the most convenient part of the Church, that the Parishioners may put their Alms into it? And are both the said Chests secured with three several Locks and Keys; One Key remaining with the Minister, and the other with the Churchwardens severally?

8. AND lastly, have you a Bier, and a Black Hearse-Cloth, for the more decent Burial of the Dead?

TIT. II.

Concerning the Church-yard; the Houses and Glebes; the Tithes, and other Dues belonging to the Church.

1. Is your Church-yard sufficiently Fenced, and decently kept from all Profanation and Encroachment? Hath any person made any Door into it out of his own House or Ground? Have any Trees there growing been cut down? How long since? By whom? And to whose Use and Benefit?

2. Is there a House belonging to your Parson, Vicar, or Curate? And is the same, with all the Out-houses thereunto belonging, kept in good and sufficient repair? Have any of the said Houses, or Out-houses, been pull'd down, or defaced? and by whom? Hath any encroached upon any Garden, Yard, or Close belonging to your Parsonage, or Vicarage-House? Or cut up any Trees growing thereon? or changed, or removed the ancient Marks, and Bounds of the same?*

3. HAVE you a true and perfect Terrier of all the Glebe-Lands, Gardens, Orchards, Tenements, or Cottages, Stocks, or Implements belonging to your Parsonage, or Vicarage? As also a Note of such Pensions, Rate-Tithes, and Portions of Tithes, or other yearly profits (either within, or without your Parish) as belong thereunto? And is there a Copy of the said Terrier and Note deliver'd in, to be laid up in the Register's Office? Have any of these been withheld from your Minister? and when, or by whom?

4. HAVE any of the ancient Glebe-lands belonging to your Parsonage, or Vicarage, been alienated, taken away, or exchanged for others, without the free consent of the Incumbent, and Licence of the Ordinary? And by whom, and when hath the same been done? And how much is your Parsonage or Vicarage damnified thereby, in the yearly value thereof, as you know, believe, or have heard?

TIT. III.

1. Is your Minister (so far as you know, or believe) in Holy Orders, according to the Rules of the Church of England? And is he a Licens'd Preacher, and by whom?

2. Is he Lawfully admitted to the Cure of Souls in your Parish, as you believe, or have heard? Or is he reported, or suspected to have obtained either his Orders, or Benefice, by any Simoniackal, or undue practice?

3. DID he within two months after his Induction, publickly in the Church upon some Sunday, or Holy-Day, in the time of Divine Service, Read the 39 Articles of the Church of England, Established by Authority, and there publickly declare his Assent thereunto? Did he within the said time, upon some Lords-Day, publickly read the Morning and Evening-Prayers; and thereafter declare his unfeigned Assent and Consent to the use of all things in the Book of Common-Prayer, contained† in the Form prescribed by the late Act of Uniformity? And did he within three months after his Induction, upon some Lords-Day, and in the time of Divine Service, publickly and openly read the Declaration or Acknowledgement required in the same Act; together with the Ordinaries Certificate of his Subscription to the same?

4.‡ Is there any Chapel, or Chapels of Ease, or parochial belonging to your Mother Church? If so, at what Distance are they? And how are they serv'd and provided for?

5. HATH your Minister any other Ecclesiastical Benefice with Cure, or without? and how far distant from you, and in what Diocess? Is he constantly Resident among you? Or how many weeks in any one year hath he been absent from you? And when he is resident, doth he constantly live in his incumbent House?*

6. HATH he a Curate to assist him, able, and sufficient, and conformable to the Laws, and Orders of the Church of England, and duly Licensed by the Bishop?† Doth he, or his Curate serve in any other Church beside? What yearly Stipend doth your Minister allow his Curate?‡

7. DOTH your Parson, Vicar, or Curate read Divine Service on all Sundays, and Holy-Days; and the Litany (at least) on every Wednesday and Friday;§ and publickly administer the Holy Sacraments of Baptism, and the Eucharist, and perform all other Ministerial Offices, and Duties, in such manner and form, as is directed by the Book of Common-Prayer, lately Established, and the Act of Uniformity therewith published, and the three Offices before mention'd,|| without addition, diminution, or alteration? And doth he in those his Ministrations wear the Surplice, with a Hood or Tippet¶ befitting his Degree?

8. DOTH he administer the Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist publickly in the Church on the three great Festivals; and so often besides, that every Communicant may have Opportunity to receive it at least thrice every year,** whereof once at Easter, giving solemn Notice thereof before-hand, by reading the Exhortation appointed for that purpose? And doth he endeavor to his utmost, both in his publick Sermons, and private Conferences, to prevail with his Parishioners to receive it oftner? Doth he take Care, that so many as intend to be partakers of the Holy Communion, do signify their Names to him at least some time the Day before?†† And when the Holy Communion is administered amongst you, are the Alms and Oblations of devout persons duly collected, or received? Are they constantly dispos'd of to pious, and charitable Uses, by the Consent of the Minister, and Churchwardens; or if they disagree, by the Appointment of the Ordinary? Is there an exact Accompt taken, and kept in Writing of all such Sums, as are given, and receiv'd at the Offertory, or upon other Occasions put into the Chest for Alms?

9. DOTH he on the Lords-Day give Notice of the Holy-Days, and Fasting-Days in the week following, that the people may be put in mind, and incited to resort to publick Prayers in the Church upon those solemn Occasions? And do your Minister, and Parishioners observe the yearly Perambulation in Rogation-week, for preserving the Bounds of the Parish, and desiring God's Blessing upon the Fruits of the Earth? or an Afternoon Sermon, doth he explain some part of the Church-Catechism; or preach upon some such Text of Scripture, as leads properly, and naturally to the handling of something contain'd in it; or may conduce to the Exposition of the Liturgy, and Prayers of the Church; the only Cause, why they grew into Contempt with the people, being this, that they were not understood?*

12. DOTH he your Minister diligently examine and instruct the Youth of your Parish in the Church-Catechism, as in the Rubrick at the end of the said Catechism is directed? And being thus prepared, and of convenient Age, doth he take care to present them to the Bishop to be confirmed?

13. DOTH he endeavour to reclaim all Popish, and other Recusants, and Sectaries, (if any such be inhabiting within your parish) to the profession, and practice of the true Religion, Established in the Church of England, and to their bounden Duty, in obeying the Law, and submitting to the Government of the Realm?

14. DOTH he refuse, or neglect to visit, comfort, and pray with the Sick, or to bury the Dead? Doth he delay the Baptism of any Infant that is in danger of death? Or baptize them in any other place than the Church, when there is no such danger? And when they are (in case of necessity) thus privately Baptized, doth he cause them afterwards, if they live, to be brought into the Church; and certifie the Congregation of the Form of Baptism used in private, and proceed thereupon in all points, as in the Office of private Baptism is directed? Is there any Child past Infancy, or other person of riper years, through the default of your Minister, or others, yet remaining unbaptized in your Parish? Doth he use to baptize any without Godfathers and Godmothers; or admit either of the Parents to be Godfather or Godmother to their own Children?

15. HATH he at any time (to your knowledge, or as you have heard) preached any False, Heretical, Schismatical, or Seditious Doctrine, which may seduce the people into Parties and Factions, to the disturbance of the publick Peace and Unity, either of Church or State?

16. HATH he presumed to marry any persons in private Houses? Or such, as being under Age, have not the consent of their Parents, or without the Banes first published on three Sundays or Holy-days in the Church? Or at any other hours, than between Eight and Twelve in the morning: unless he had a Licence or Dispensation so to do, granted by such Authority, and in such Form, as the Canons direct?†

17. DOTH any person preach in your Parish as a Lecturer? Hath he Licence from the Bishop so to do? Doth he before his Lecture, read the Divine Service, as the late Act of Uniformity requires? And is he in all respects conformable to the Laws and Orders of the Church of England?

18. DOTH your Minister, or any other, (either Minister or Lay-person) hold any Conventicle or Meeting within any private house or place within your Parish, to which persons of several Families, above the number of Five, do resort, under any pretence of Preaching, Praying, Thanksgiving, or Humiliation, contrary to the Laws and Canons in that case provided?

19. Is your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, and your Lecturer (if you have any) of a sober, unblamable and exemplary life; given to Hospitality, and Alms-deeds? in his Apparel, and his whole outward Garb, and Dress, ‡ grave and decent, as the Canons of the Church require? Or, on the other side, is his carriage and conversation in any kind whatsoever disorderly, or scandalous, and unbeseeming a Minister of Jesus Christ? Doth he familiarly converse with vicious, ungodly, or excommunicate persons? Is he a Frequenter of Taverns, Alehouses, or other Houses of ill Fame? A common Gamester, or User of unlawful, or undecent Sports? A Swearer, Railer, or Quarreller? Doth he set Neighbors at variance one with another? Or encourage them to Suits and Contentions? Is he noted to be an intemperate Drinker? Or vehemently suspected of Incontinency with any person, either within your Parish, or without? Doth he use any Trade, Occupation, Traffique, or Merchandizing, for Filthy Lucre sake?

20. Is there within your Parish dwelling or residing any one, who being in the Holy Orders, hath quitted his Profession, and turn'd Lay-man? Or any Stranger, or Unlicens'd Minister or Preacher, that hath been deprived, ejected, or suspended for false Doctrine, Inconformity, or other evil Manners? If so, how do they now behave themselves? And what profession, or course of Life do they follow?

TIT. IV.

1. Is there in your Parish any known or reputed Heretick, Schismatick, or Separatist? Any person Notoriously known, or vehemently suspected to be of Atheistical Principles, or Opinions? Any Libertine, or profane person? Any Depravers, Disturbers, or Contemners of the publick Service of God, and the Doctrine and Discipline of the Church of England by Law established? Or any* that refuse or neglect to come unto the publick Assemblies, and to join in the Prayers, and Service of God in the Church, or that makes profession of any other Religion, or Way of Worship, than what is established in the Church of England?

2. Is there any person in your Parish, that lieth under a common Fame, or vehement suspicion of Adultery, Fornication, or Incest? Any common Drunkards, or common Swearers, or Blasphemers of God's Holy Name? Or any that are noted to be Railers, unclean or filthy Talkers, Sowers or Maintainers of Seditious Faction, or Discord among their Neighbors? Or, in sum, any whose Life and Manners are contrary to Godliness, Peace, and Honesty?

3. † Do any of your Parish upon the Sunday-days, or Holy-dayes, follow their bodily, or ordinary Labor? or compel, or permit their Servants so to do? Are any Shops ‡ kept open, or Wares sold at such times? Or do any Vintners, Inn-keepers, or other Victuallers, and Sellers of Beer and Ale, suffer any persons to Tittle or Game in their Houses upon those dayes?

4. DOTH every person inhabiting or sojourning within your Parish, duly resort unto your Church or Chappel, upon every Sunday and Holy-day appointed for Divine Service? Do they then and there abide quietly with Reverence, Order and Decency, during the whole time of Common prayer, Preaching, or other Service of God there used? Or are there any among you that come only to the Preaching, and not to the Common-prayers of the Church?

5. ARE there any in your Parish that refuse to send their Infant-Children to be Baptized publickly in the Church, unless in case of urgent danger? Or do they send them from their own Minister, to be Baptized in any other place, or after other form than is appointed? Or do they keep them unbaptized any longer time, than the Church alloweth? And are there any Infants or persons of riper years in your Parish, who as yet remain unbaptized?

6. Do all the Housholders in your Parish cause their Children, and Servants, to learn their Catechism, and to give an account thereof to your Minister (when he doth require it of them) openly in the Church upon Sundays, and Holy-days, as in the Book of Common prayer is appointed; that when they are well instructed in the same, they may be confirmed by the Bishop?

7. Is there in your Parish any person, who being Sixteen years of age, doth not receive the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, at least three times in the year; of which Easter is always to be one? Doth any in your Parish refuse to receive the same kneeling, or from the hands of your own Minister; repairing for it to other Parishes, and Ministers abroad? Or are there any Strangers not of your parish, that forsake their own Churches, and usually repair to yours for it?

8. HAVE you any among you, that be denounced, and declared Excommunicate for any crime committed? How long have they been so? And do any of your Parish keep society with them, before they be reconciled to the Church, and absolved?

9. ARE there any living in your Parish, as Man and Wife, who are within the Degrees prohibited? Or any that being lawfully Divorced have Married again? Or any that being lawfully Married, and not separated, or Divorced by course of Law, do not cohabit together?

10. ARE there any Married Women in your Parish, who, after their Delivery from the peril of Childbirth, refuse to make their publick Thanksgiving to God in the Church? And when they come so to do, do they come decently apparelled, and make their Offerings according to Custom?

11. ARE there any belonging to your Parish, who refuse to pay their Easter Offerings, or Duties to your Minister? Or any that refuse to contribute, and pay the Rate assessed upon them for the Repaire of your Church or Chapel, and for the providing of such Books, Furniture, and Ornaments, as be requisite for the performance of all Divine Offices there?

12. Do any refuse to Bury their Dead according to the Rites of the Church of England? Are there any Wills or Testaments of persons dead in your Parish, that be yet unproved? Or any Goods Administred, without a due Grant from the Ordinary?

13. Is there any Strife or Contention among any of your Parish for their Pews, or Seats in your Church? Or have any of them erected new Pews in your Chancel, or in the Body of your Church or Chapel, without leave from the Ordinary?

TIT. V.

Concerning Parish Clerks and Sextons.

I. HAVE you belonging to your Church or Chappel, a fit Parish Clerk, aged 21 years at the least, of honest Life and Conversation, and sufficiently able to perform his duty in Reading, Writing, and Singing? Is he duly chosen by your Minister? And doth he diligently attend him in all Divine Offices; audibly making, and repeating the Responses and Suffrages, as in the Liturgy he is directed? Are his Wages duly paid unto him? Or who withholdeth the same?

2. DOth he, or your Sexton (if there be any such appointed in your Parish) diligently look to the Doors of your Church, that they be Locked, and Opened at due times? Doth he keep your Church or Chapel clean from Dirt, Dust, Cobwebs, and other Annoyance? Doth he Ring, and Toll the Bells at the due and* accustomed hours, before Morning and Evening Service, that the people may be warned to come unto the Church? And when any person is passing out of this Life, doth he upon notice given him thereof, Toll a Bell, as hath been accustomed, that the Neighbors may thereby be put in mind to recommend the dying person to the Grace and Favour of God, and to meditate upon their own death?

TIT. VI.

Concerning Hospitals, Schools, Schoolmasters, Physicians, Chirurgeons and Midwives.

I. Is there in your Parish any Hospital, Alms-house, or Free-School? Who was the Founder? Who is now the Patron thereof? And what is the yearly Revenue? What Stipends belong to the Governors, or Masters of the same; Is the same ordered, and governed in every respect, as it ought to be? And are the Revenues thereof rightly employed according to the intention of the Founder, and the tenor of such Statutes and Ordinances, as have been made in pursuance of the same?

2. HAVE any living or dying in your Parish, or elsewhere, given any Gift, or Legacy by Will, or otherwise to the use of your Church or poor, or of the parishioners in general? How is it settled, and in whose hands? and is it, or hath it been misemployed, or disposed of to other Uses?

3. DOth any Man keep a publick or private School in your Parish? Is he allowed so to do by the Ordinary? Is he of sober Life, and honest Conversation, and conformable to the Doctrine and Discipline Established? Doth he teach his Scholars the Catechism of Religion set forth by Authority? Doth he upon Sundays, and Holy-days, and all good Occasions, repair to your Church, or Chapel, and cause his Scholars to do so too, and see that they behave themselves there quietly, orderly, and reverently, during the time of Divine Service and Sermon? And doth he teach them good Manners, Sobriety, Modesty, and Obedience, as well as other Learning?

4. DOth any Man or Woman in your Parish take upon them to practise Physick, or Chirurgery? or any Woman to exercise the office of a Midwife, without being first examined, and approved, and thereupon Licensed by the Ordinary? or doth any Woman take upon her to keep a School, and to teach Girls, or young Women, not being duly allowed so to do?†

TIT. VII.

I. HAVE any abuses, or offences, presented by the Churchwardens, or others, been suppressed, or left unpunished by any Officers exercising Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction within this Diocess? Do they unnecessarily delay, or protract any Causes brought before them? Do they vexatiously cite any into their Courts for greediness of Gain, or other undue Ends? Do they demand, exact, or take unlawful, or extraordinary Fees? or in any kind grieve, or oppress His Majesties good Subjects?

2. Is there a Table of Fees publickly fastned, and set up in the Consistory, or Ecclesiastical Court, to which you are called to appear, and make your Presentments; that so every one may know what Fees he ought to pay, as the Canons enjoin?

3. HAVE any Apparitors taken any reward for the concealing any offence, or the avoiding the punishment or reformation of offenders? And do they summon any to appear at the Consistory without Citation first had, and granted from the Ecclesiastical Judge?

4. HATH* any Sum of Money been lately, or heretofore paid to any Ecclesiastical officer for Commutation of Pennance? What was the Sum? Unto whom was it paid, and to what Use appointed, or employed?

5. If you know of any other default, or crime of Ecclesiastical Cognizance, you are to present the same.

TIT. VIII.

Queries to be put to the Minister, concerning the Churchwardens and Sidemen.

1. ARE the Churchwardens of your Parish duly chosen by the joint consent of the Minister, and Parishioners? or one of them by the Minister, and the other by the Parishioners? or as the custom of the Parish is?

2. HAVE the former and last Churchwardens given up their due Accompts to the Parish, and deliver'd up to the succeeding Churchwardens the Monies remaining in their hands, together with all other things belonging to your Church, or Chapel?

3. Do your Churchwardens and Side-men take diligent care to see, and observe, who of the Parishioners are absent from Divine Service, and Sermon in your Church or Chapel every Sunday and Holy-day? and when they find any to have absented themselves without a sufficient cause, do they by Warrant of some Justice of the Peace, levy of them by way of distress upon their Goods, the Sum of 12 pence for every such day of their absence, according to the Act of Parliament in that case provided? And do they distribute the several Sums so Levied, among the Poor of your Parish, according to Law?

4. Do they present all them that come late to Church, after Divine Service is begun, or depart before it be ended? Do they take care, that none stand idle, or talk together in the Church-porch, or walk in the Church, or Church-yard, during the time of Prayers, Preaching, or other Sacred Offices?

5. Do they take care, that no Misbehavior or Disorder be done by Men, Women, Servants, or Children, in your Church or Chapel? That none of them sit, lean, or lay their Hats upon the Communion Table? That no Minstrels, nor Morris-Dancers, no Dogs, Hawks, or Hounds be brought or come into your Church or Chapel, to the disturbance of the Congregation?

6. Do they against every Communion appointed in your Church or Chapel, provide a sufficient quantity of fine white Bread, and of good Wine, according to the number of Communicants, at the Parish-charge?

7. Do they cause all Strangers that preach in your Church or Chapel, to enter their Names the same day in a Book provided for that purpose; together with the Name of the Bishop that Licenc'd them to preach in this Diocess? And do they permit no other to preach?

8. HAVE they (the Churchwardens and Side-men, now sworn to give in a true Answer unto all these Articles of Enquiry in all their several Titles) taken sufficient time to draw up their Presentments, and therein consulted with you their Minister for your faithful assistance?

WE do not by Vertue of this Oath require or expect that the Parson, Vicar, or Curate, or any one of the Churchwardens, or Side-men of any Parish, should detect, impeach or accuse himself of any Fault enquir'd of in these Articles: Nevertheless the Faults of any one of them may and ought to be presented by the rest. And if the Churchwardens, or Side-men will not do their Duty herein; yet the Minister of every Parish, (or in his absence the Curate) may, and ought to present such Persons, and Things as want due Reformation; for upon them is the chief Care incumbent of sup-

To the Parsons, Vicars, and Curates, Church wardens, and Side-men of the Parishes respectively within the whole Diocese of Lincoln.

My Brethren and Friends;

Intending ere long (by God's Permission) a Metropolitan Visitation of your whole Diocese, for the Reformation of what shall be found amiss amongst you; and being Credibly inform'd, That many of the Churches, Chancels, and Chapels there, with the Walls, and Fences of the Church, or Chapel-yards; and many of the Parsonage, and Vicarage-Houses, with the Barns, and other Out-houses to them belonging, (or at least some of each kind) are in a very decaying, if not ruinous Condition; to the great Dishonour of God, and his holy Religion; and to the great Damage, and Inconvenience of those, who are, or shall be admitted to be Incumbents there; In tender Regard to the preservation of the Honour of God's House, and of the Patrimony of the Church, We do hereby earnestly desire, and (as far as We may) Require you, that in every Parish, where such Decays, and Defects are found, you do forthwith take to your Assistance two able, and skilful Workmen (a Carpenter, and a Mason;) and that upon a joint, and heedful View, you set down in Writing under your Hands, and theirs, a particular Account of all such Decays, and Dilapidations, as you shall find in the Premises; together with the probable Charge of amending them, and the Names of the Persons on whom (as you think) that Charge ought to lie; according to the best of your skill, and as becomes honest and conscientious Men; And lastly, That you tender this Account to our Commissioners at the Visitation in a Paper by it self fairly written, separate from your other Presentments. And so not doubting of your ready, and chearful Compliance in a Matter so manifestly tending to the Honour of God, and the decent performance of his holy Worship, and to the comfortable Subsistence, and Residence of those amongst you, who now are, or shall be hereafter employ'd to officiate there in Holy things, I commend you All to God's Grace, and Blessing; and rest,

Your very loving Friend,

The Charge of the Churchwardens and Sidemen.

Having receiv'd a Copy of this Book, you are requir'd to repair to your Minister; to hear all these Articles deliberately read over to you; duly, and diligently to consider of them; and by his Advice, (and if need be, with his Concurrence) to Present all, and every such person or persons of your Parish, as have committed any Offence, or made any Default, mention'd in these Articles, or any of them; or which are vehemently suspected for the same; Wherein you are to deal uprightly, and impartially, all Affection, and Favour, all Hatred, and Malice, all Hope of Reward, or Advantage, and Fear of Displeasure set aside; signing such your Presentments with your Hands.

The Form of their Oath.

You shall Swear, Truly, and Faithfully, according to the Best of your Skill, and Knowledge, to Present such Things, and Persons, (Enquir'd of in these Articles) as to your knowledge are Presentable by the Laws Ecclesiastical of this Realm. So help you God, and the Holy Contents of this Book.

The Ministers of the respective Parishes are requir'd to give in a List of the Names of all such as they have Catechiz'd, and prepar'd, and do judge fit to receive Confirmation, and to Present it to the Bishop, together with the Persons to be confirm'd, before the Action begins.

SANCROFT, ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY,

THE ARTICLES Recommended by the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury To all the Bishops within his Metropolitan Jurisdiction, the 26th of July, 1688.

Sir

Yesterday the Archbishop of Canterbury delivered the Articles which I send you inclosed, to those Bishops who are present in this place; and ordered Copies of them to be likewise sent in his name to the absent Bishops. By the Contents of them, you will see that the Storm in which he is, does not frighten him from doing his Duty; but rather awakens him to do it with so much the more vigour: and indeed, the Zeal that he expresses in these Articles, both against the Corruptions of the Church of Rome on the one hand, and the unhappy Differences that are among Protestants on the other, are such Apostolical Things, that all good Men rejoyce to see so great a Prelate at the Head of our Church, who in this Critical Time has had the Courage to do his Duty in so signal a manner. I am,

Sir,

Yours.

London, July 27, 1688.

Some Heads of things to be more fully insisted upon by the Bishops in their Addresses to the Clergy and People of their respective Diocesses.

I. That the Clergy often read over the Forms of their Ordination; and seriously consider what Solemn Vows and Professions they made therein to God and his Church, together with the several Oaths and Subscriptions they have taken and made upon divers Occasions?

II. That in Compliance with those and other Obligations, they be active and zealous in all the Parts and Instances of their Duty, and especially strict and exact in all Holy Conversation, that so they may become Examples to the Flock?

III. To this end, that they be constantly Resident upon their Cures in their Incumbent Houses; and keep sober Hospitality there according to their Ability.

IV. That they diligently Catechise the Children and Youth of their Parishes (as the Rubrick of the Common-Prayer-Book, and the 59th Canon injoyn) and so prepare them to be brought in due time to Confirmation, when there shall be Opportunity; and that they also at the same time expound the Grounds of Religion and the Common Christianity, in the Method of the Catechism, for the Instruction and Benefit of the whole Parish, teaching them what they are to believe, and what they are to do, and what to pray for; and particularly often and earnestly inculcating upon the Importance and Obligation of their Baptismal Vows.

V. That they perform the Daily Office publickly (with all Decency, Affection and Gravity) in all Market and other Great Towns, and even in Villages, and less populous Places, bring People to Publick Prayers as frequently as may be; especially on such Days and at such Times as the Rubrick and Canons appointed on Holy Days, and their Eves, on Ember and Rogation Days, on Wednesdays and Fridays in each Week, and especially in Advent and Lent.

VI. That they use their utmost Endeavour, both in their Sermons and by private Applications, to prevail with such of their Flock as are of competent Age, to receive frequently the Holy Communion: and to this end, that they administer it in the greater Towns once in every Month, and even in the lesser too, if Communicants may be procured, or how-ever as often as they may: and that they take all due Care, both by Preaching and otherwise, to prepare all for the worthy receiving of it.

VII. That in their Sermons they teach and inform their People (four times a Year at the least what the Canon requires) that all Usurp'd and Foreign Jurisdiction is for most Just Causes taken away and abolish'd in this Realm, and no manner of Obedience or Subjection due to the same, or to any that pretend to act by virtue of it; but that the King's Power being in his Dominions highest under God, they upon all occasions perswade the People to Loyalty and Obedience to his Majesty in all things Lawful, and to patient Submission in the rest; promoting (as far as in them lies) the publick Peace and Quiet of the World.

VIII. That they maintain fair Correspondence (full of the kindest Respects of all sorts) with the Gentry and Persons of Quality in their Neighbourhood, as being deeply sensible what reasonable Assistance and Countenance this poor Church hath received from them in her Necessities.

IX. That they often exhort all those of our Communion, to continue steadfast to the end in their most Holy Faith, and constant to their Profession; and to that end, to take heed of all Seducers, and especially of Popish Emissaries, who are now in great numbers gone forth amongst them, and more busie and active than ever. And that they take all occasions to convince our own Flock, that 'tis not enough for them to be Members of an Excellent Church, rightly and duly Reformed, both in Faith and Worship, unless they do also reform and amend their own Lives, and so order their Conversation in all things as becomes the Gospel of Christ.

X. And forasmuch as those Romish Emissaries, like the Old Serpent, Insidiantur Calcaneo, are wont to be most busie and troublesome to our People at the end of their Lives, labouring to unsettle and perplex them in time of Sickness, and at the hour of Death; that therefore all who have the Cure of Souls, be more especially vigilant over them at that dangerous Season; that they stay not till they be sent for, but enquire out the Sick in their respective Parishes, and visit them frequently: that they examine them particularly concerning the state of their Souls, and instruct them in their Duties, and settle them in their Doubts, and comfort them in their Sorrows and Sufferings, and pray often with them and for them; and by all the Methods which our Church prescribes, prepare them for the due and worthy receiving of the Holy Eucharist, the Pledge of their happy Resurrection: thus with their utmost Diligence, watching over every Sheep within their Fold (especially in that critical Moment) lest those Evening Wolves devour them.

XI. That they also walk in Wisdom towards those that are not of Our Communion: and if there be in their Parishes any such, that they neglect not frequently to confer with them in the Spirit of Meekness, seeking by all good Ways and Means to gain and win them over to our Communion: More especially that they have a very tender Regard to our Brethren the Protestant Dissenters; that upon occasion offered, they visit them at their Houses, and receive them kindly at their own, and treat them fairly wherever they meet them, discoursing calmly and civilly with them; perswading them (if it may be) to a full Compliance with our Church, or at least, that whereto we have already attained, we may all walk by the same Rule, and mind the same thing. And in order hereunto that they take all Opportunities of assuring and convincing them, that the Bishops of this Church are really and sincerely irreconcilable Enemies to the Errors, Superstitions, Idolatries and Tyrannies of the Church of Rome; and that the very unkind Jealousies, which some have had of us to the contrary, were altogether groundless.

And in the last place, that they warmly and most affectionately exhort them, to joyn with us in daily fervent Prayer to the God of Peace, for an Universal Blessed Union of all Reformed Churches, both at Home and Abroad, against our common Enemies, and that all they who do confess the Holy Name of our dear Lord, and do agree in the Truth of his Holy Word, may also meet in one Holy Communion, and live in perfect Unity and Godly Love.

Is there any Child past Infancy or other Person grown up, through your Ministers default, yet remaining unbaptized in your Parish? Doth he use to Baptize any without Godfathers or Godmothers?

Can. 62, 63. Can. An. 1579. 8. Hath he presumed to Marry any Persons in private Houses; or such as being under Age have not the Consent of their Parents or Guardians; or without Banns first published on three Sundays or Holy-days in the Church, unless he had a Licence so to do; or at any other hours than between Eight and Twelve in the Morning?

Can. 64. 9. Doth your Minister declare to the People every Sunday, the several Holy-days and Fasting days in the week following? And doth he read Divine Service appointed to be read on those days?

K. Wm's Injunct. 1694. 10. Doth he use his utmost Endeavours that the Lord's Day be religiously observ'd? Doth he set a good Example to his people, and exhort them frequently to their Duty herein?

His Majesty's Letter of Feb. 13. 11. Doth he preach frequently against those Sins and Vices which are most prevailing; as namely against Swearing and Cursing, against Perjury, against Drunkenness and Profanation of the Lord's-Day? And on those Sundays in which such Sermon is preached, doth he read to the People such Statute of this Realm, as is provided against that Vice which is the Subject on that day? Particularly, doth he read the late Act for the more effectual suppressing profane Cursing and Swearing, four times in the Year, immediately after Morning-Prayer, on four Sundays; that is to say, the Sunday next after the twenty fourth day of June, the twenty ninth day of September, the twenty fifth day of March and the twenty fifth day of December, as is required by the said Act? And doth he after Morning Prayer or preaching on the fifth day of November, read publicly and plainly, the Act for a publick Thanksgiving to Almighty God, for our Deliverance from the Powder-Plot? And doth he read or cause to be read in his Church or Chapel, at least four times in every year immediately after Divine Service, the Kings Proclamation for preventing and punishing Immorality and Profaneness.

12. Is your Minister, or Curate, a man of an unblameable and exemplary Life? Or is he a frequenter of Taverns or Ale-Houses, a Common Gamester, a swearer Railer or Quarreller? Is he noted to be an intemperate Drinker, or vehemently suspected of Incontinency with any Person? Is his Apparel grave and decent, as the Canons of the Church require? And doth he in all his Behaviour so carry himself, as that he may adorn the Gospel, whereof he is a Minister?

TIT. IV.

1. Is there any Person in your Parish that is an Adulterer, Fornicator, or Incestuous; or that lieth under a common Fame or Suspicion of any of these Crimes? Are there any Common Drunkards within your Parish, or Common Swearers, or Blasphemers of God's Name, or any that are noted to be Railers or Filthy Talkers; or Sowers of Sedition, Faction and Discord amongst their Neighbours? Are there any who scoff at Religion, or deny the Divine Authority of the Holy Scriptures?

2. Do any of your Parish profane the Lord's Day by working in their ordinary Callings, by opening their Shops, or by setting forth, and exposing to Sale any Wares, Fruits, Herbs or Goods, on that Day, or by loitering in the Church-porch or Church-yard? Or do any Inn-Keepers or other Victuallers, Sellers of Beer or Ale, suffer any Person to Tipple or Game in their Houses on the said Day?

3. Do your Parishioners demean themselves reverently in your Church or Chapel during Divine Service, and preaching the Word of God?

4. Are there any in your Parish, that refuse to pay their Duty for Easter-Offerings; or refuse to contribute to the Rates legally made for the Repair of your Church or Chapel, or anything thereunto belonging?

5. Have any by their last Wills or Testaments left any Legacy to your Church or Chapel or to the use of the Poor, or to any other Pious and Charitable Purposes which hath been mispent and imbezzelled? And by whom?

6. Are there any Wills of Testators dead in your Parish or Chapelry not yet proved, what are the Names of such Testators, and the Executors of such Wills? And do any Persons intermeddle with the Estates of the said Testators, or of Persons dying without Wills in your Parish or Chapelry, having not proved the Wills or taken Administration? Insert the Names of such Persons dying without Wills, And of such rash Administrators.

7. Are there any persons living in your Parish who, under pretence of Liberty of Conscience, wholly neglect all Publick Worship of God; neither going to the Church, nor to any Assembly that meet together, according to the late Act?

8. Is there any Publick Chapel in your Parish for which your Minister hath provided no supply? Hath any such publick Chapel been lately usurped by any sort of Dissenters?

9. Are there any who profess to live in the Communion of the Church of England, who neglect to come to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, being of Age fit to receive?

10. Doth every Householder who lives in Communion with the Church of England cause their Children and Servants to come to the Church to learn their Catechism, and to give an account thereof to their Minister?

11. Are there any living in your Parish as Man and Wife, who are within the degrees prohibited? Or that are reputed to have a Husband or Wife elsewhere? Or are there any who live as Husband and Wife, that are known or suspected not to be married?

12. Do you know or have you heard of any in your Parish, who having the Presentation of an Ecclesiastical Living hath made any Simoniack Compact or gain thereby; either in Money, or by reserve of any part of the Tithes, or Glebe belonging to the Benefice?

13. Have any Pews or Seats been erected in your Church or Chapel without leave from the Ordinary?

TIT. V.

Concerning Parish-Clerks and Sextons.

1. Have you a Parish-Clerk, aged twenty years at the least? Is he of honest Life and Conversation? And able to perform his Duty, in Reading, Writing, and Singing? Doth he duly attend your Minister in all Divine Services in the Church? Are his Wages duly paid unto him? Or who withholdeth the same from him?

2. Doth your Sexton (if there be any such) or Clerk diligently do his Duty, in opening and locking the Doors of the Church at due times, in keeping the Church clean and decent; in tolling and ringing the Bells, Morning and Evening, before Divine Service at the due accustomed hours?

TIT. VI.

Concerning Hospitals, School-masters, and Schools.

1. What Hospital, Alms-houses, or Free-School have been founded in your Parish? Are they so ordered in their Revenue and Life, as the Founders appointed, and the Law of the Land allows?

2. What school-master private or publick is there in your Parish? Is he Licensed by the Bishop? Is he of sober and honest Conversation? Doth he teach his scholars the Church Catechism?

And doth he cause them upon Sundays and Holy-days to repair orderly to your Church or Chappel; and there see that they quietly and reverently behave themselves during the time of Divine Service and Sermon? And doth he at other times train them up with such Sentences of Holy Scriptures, as shall be most expedient to induce them to all Godliness?

3. Do any in your Parish practise Physick, Chyrurgery or Midwifery without Licence from the Ordinary.

TIT. VII.

Queries to be put to the Minister concerning Church-Wardens and Side-men, and Ecclesiastical Officers.

1. Are the Church-Wardens of your Parish yearly and duly chosen by the joint Consent of your Minister and Parishioners? Or one of them by your Minister, and the other by the Parishioners?

2. Have the former and last Church-wardens given up their accounts to the Parish, and delivered up to the succeeding Church-Wardens the money remaining in their hands; together with all other things belonging to your Church or Chapel?

3. Do they provide against every Communion appointed in your Church or Chapel a sufficient quantity of fine white Bread, and good Wine, at the Charges of the Parish?

4. Do they suffer none to walk, or to stand Idle, or talking in the Church, the Church-yard, or the Church-porch, during the time of Divine Service?

TIT. VIII.

Concerning the Officers in the Ecclesiastical Courts.

1. Doth the Commissary substitute any person in his absence to keep Courts for him, who is not either a grave Minister, and a Graduate, or a Licensed publick Preacher, and a Beneficed Man near the place where the Courts are kept; or a Bachelor of Law, or a Master of Arts at the least, who hath some Skill in the Civil and Ecclesiastical Law?

2. Doth the Commissary (not being in Holy Orders) pronounce the Sentence of Excommunication? Or is the same pronounced by some grave man of his appointment, which is in the Ministry?

3. Do you know, or have you heard of any payment, Composition or Promise made to any Ecclesiastical Officer for conniving at any Fault committed? Hath the Registrer received any Reward in any Cause whatsoever, in favour of any Party? Or hath he been of Counsel directly or indirectly with either of the Parties in Suit?

4. Hath any Registrer, or any other Ecclesiastical Officer, or any Clerk under them, exacted or taken extraordinary, or greater Fees, than those contained in the Table of Fees, for that purpose made?

5. Are there two Tables containing the several rates of Fees due to each Officer; the one publickly proposed in the Consistory, the other in the Registry, that every Person whom it concerneth may without difficulty come to the view and perusal thereof?

4 X

Can. An. 1571 & 1597. 6. What money hath been given for commutation of Penance? By whom? To whom? For what offence? How hath it been employed?

Can. 133. 7. Is there any Proctor who doth not behave himself modestly in the Court, and is not presently silent when the Judge or Advocate speaks?

Can. An. 1597. 8. Is there any Apparitor who executes his Office by a Deputy? Doth any Apparitor exact more or greater Fees than are prescribed? Let these and all other Abuses and Offences, which any Officer belonging to the Ecclesiastical Courts is chargeable with, be carefully presented to the Bishop.

The Church-Wardens and Side-men are required conscientiously to discharge their Office duly considering the Obligation of their Oath and the danger of Perjury, and that those Sins and Offences will lye at their Doors, which through their Unfaithfulness in not presenting them, remain unreformed in their Parishes.

And if there be any Enormities apparent in the Parish which the Church-Wardens and Side-men will not present, then the Ministers themselves (being the Persons that have the chief Care of the Suppressing of Sin and Impiety in their Parishes) may present them.

To my Brethren of the Clergy.

You are desired to prepare the Young People of your Parish for Confirmation. And to the end it may be administred to the greater Edification of those who shall receive it. I desire you to take notice, that I intend to confirm none but those who are of the age of Fourteen Years, and whose Names shall be delivered to me, by the Ministers of the respective Parishes from which they come, with a Certificate under their Hands that they have examined them (unless they be Persons of Ripe age) and find them not only capable of repeating the words of the Catechism but that they understand the meaning of that Solemn Vow, that was made in their Name at their Baptism, and declare themselves resolved by the Grace of God, to live answerable to it.

For the better regulating of Ordinations I desire you to observe;

I. That a Curacy under a Parson or Vicar is not to be accounted a Title, unless such Parson or Vicar doth under his Hand and Seal, oblige himself to the Bishop, both to accept that Person bona fide (when he shall be Ordained and Licensed by the Bishop) to serve under him, and allow him such a Salary as the Bishop shall approve off (sic), so long as he shall continue to do his duty there?

II. I desire you to signifie to all those whom you find desirous to enter into Holy Orders; that I require them to send to me in Writing a month before Ordination-Sunday, their Names, and the Places of their Abode, that I may order Notice to be given of their Intentions at the Parish Churches where they live; that if any Persons who are acquainted with their Conversation have any thing to object, why they ought not to be Ordain'd, by reason of any Vice they are addicted to, or any Scandal given by them, they may signifie it to me some time before the Day of Ordination? And I expect, that they all personally repair to me on Thursday in Ember-Week, and bring with them such Testimonial of their Lives and Manners, for the three years last past, as the 34th Canon requires; together with a Certificate of their Age, if it can be, out of the Parish Register, or at least a Certificate very well attested.

Instructions to the Ministers and Church-wardens concerning the making the Terriers.

Forasmuch as by sad Experience it is found that the Rights and Revenues of the Clergy are Invaded and much Lessened (from what was anciently enjoyed) by the Intervention of many unjust Customs, and pretended Compositions, that have crept in unawares, by the negligence, inadvertency, or easiness of their Predecessors; and that there are very few Terriers of their Glebe-Land and Tithes Exhibited into the Bishop Registry, as the Law requires, that might give light for the understanding of their Dues, which may prove in tract of time, of dangerous consequence to the Church, if not timely prevented, I do require and admonish, that the Rectors, Vicars, and Church-Wardens of each Parish do meet together to make Terriers according to the Directions following, and to deliver them so made at my next Visitation.

1. Imprimis, You are to express, what houses belong to the Rector, Vicar or Minister. How many Bays of Building, what Out-houses, Barns, or Stables; what Orchards and Gardens, and the quantities thereof?

2. What Glebe-Lands belong to your Rector, Vicar or Minister, how butted and bounded, of what quantity? Whether Arable, Meadow or Pasture? Whether any have been changed, and for what?

3. What Lands or Estates are Tithes-free, and upon what Account as you have heard? What Compositions are there in your Parish, and what is paid thereupon in lieu of Tithes.

4. What are the Customs of your Parish for Tithes for After-math, Agistment, for Mortuaries, Oblations, Obventions, Herbage, Milk, Calves, Lamb, Wool, and the like; What Beast-pastures, or right of Common are due to your Rector, Vicar, or Minister?

5. What Tithes belong to the Impropiator, what to the Vicar? What portion of Tithes are due to, or from your Church?

6. What Augmentations have been added to your Church? How are they continued, and by whom paid, according to the Act of Parliament 29 Car. 2. for the Confirming and Perpetuating Augmentations made to Ecclesiastical Persons, to small Vicarages and Curacies.

A Terrier thus made, one Copy is to be laid in the Parish-Chest, and the other in the Bishops Registry, there to remain for perpetual memory? And the Rectors, Vicars and Ministers, are required to take care that it be exact and compleat, and delivered in as aforesaid, under their, and the Church-Wardens Hands.

ARTICLES of Visitation and Enquiry Within the Deanery of the Arches London‡.

TIT. I.

Concerning Churches, Chappels, the Ornaments and Furniture thereunto belonging.

1. Is your Church, or Chappel, with the Chancel in good Repair, and decently kept, as becometh the House of God?

2. Is the Furniture of your Church or Chappel, as Font, Bells, Communion-Plate and Cloths, Minister's Surplice, Pulpit-Cloth, with other usual Ornaments, duly provided and looked after?

3. Have you a Bible of the last Translation in a large Volume, and a Book of Common Prayer, and a Register-Book of Parchment, for the Registering of Christnings, Burials, and Marriages?

4. Have you a Book of Canons, and a Book of Homilies, and a Printed Table of the Degrees wherein Marriage is prohibited? How are the said Books kept?

TIT. II.

Concerning the Church-Yard, the Houses, Glebes, and Tythes belonging to the Church.

1. Is your Church-yard sufficiently Fenced and preserved from Annoyance, Encroachments, and Waste?

2. Is the Dwelling House, and all the Out-houses of your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, kept continually as need requires, in good, and sufficient Repair? If there want Repairs, what part of the Houses or Out-houses are out of Repair? how long have they been so? And what may it cost sufficiently to Repair them? Are the Ancient Glebe-Lands, Orchards and Gardens belonging to them preserved, and not Alienated or Endamaged?

3. Has there been any Wood or Timber cut down upon the Glebe or Church-yard, and by whom, and when, and to what uses employed?

* The words in Italics are inserted in MS.

† The 3 in the date is inserted in MS

‡ Filled up in MS.

4. Have you any Terrier of such Glebe Lands, Orchards, &c. and also of any Pensions, Tythes, and Compositions belonging thereto?

TIT. III.

1. Have you a Parson, Vicar, or Curate Legally settled among you? Is he Resident? or how long, or on what occasion is he absent?

2. Has your Minister any other Ecclesiastical Benefice with Cure? How far distant is such Benefice? And in what Diocese? Has he a Licensed Curate? What Allowance does he give his Curate?

3. Does your Parson, Vicar, or Curate, Constantly, Reverently, and Regularly Officiate, by Reading the Divine Service on the Lord's Days, and Holy-days, in the Forenoons and After-noons? Doth he constantly Preach a Sermon on every Lord's-Day? How often usually doth he Administer the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in your Church in a Year?

4. Doth your Minister diligently instruct the Youth of his Parish in the Church-Catechism? And does he endeavour to Reclaim all profane, and Irreligious Persons? Is he diligent in Visiting and Praying with the Sick, and ready, and willing to satisfy the Doubts of Troubled Consciences? Is he Peaceable, Sober, and Exemplary in his Conversation, and Grave in his Demeanour, Company, outward Garb and Apparel?

5. Do you know, or have heard, That your Minister has obtained his Benefice by any Unlawful or Simoniacal means?

TIT. IV.

Concerning Parishioners.

1. Are any of your Parish known, or vehemently suspected to be guilty of Incest, Adultery, Fornication, or any other Enormous Crimes?

2. Do any of your Parish profane the Lord's-Day by following their bodily or ordinary Labour therein, or compel, or permit their Servants so to do? Are any Shops kept open, or Wares sold on that day?

3. If there be any Assemblies for Religious Worship in your Parish, besides the Parish Church or Chappel, have the Places of such Meetings been certified according to the Statute? Do any upon that pretence, and who, wholly abstain on Sundays from coming to any publick place where there are Prayers or Sermons, but spend their Time in Alehouses, or in the Works of their ordinary Calling?

4. Are the Wills and Testaments of the dead in your Parish duly Proved, or the Administrations of their Goods duly committed? Have any Lands, Legacies or Charitable Gifts bestowed on your Parish, or any other good uses, been diverted to any other, and what other uses?

TIT. V.

Concerning Parish Clerks and Sextons.

Have you belonging to your Parish or Chappelry, a sufficient Clerk and Sexton, and do they faithfully and diligently perform their Office?

TIT. VI.

Concerning Hospitals, Schools, Schoolmasters, Physicians, Chyrurgeons, and Midwives.

1. Is there in your Parish any Hospital, Almshouse or Free-School? How are they endowed, ordered and governed? Doth any keep School without License duly obtained? or if licensed, neglect to teach the Youth committed to him, the Catechism of the Church, and to bring them duly to Church to hear Divine Service?

2. Doth any in your Parish practise Physick or Chyrurgery, or do the Office of a Midwife, without due Approbation and License?

TIT. VII.

1. Have any Persons whatsoever that exercise Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction in this Deanery taken or exacted any excessive Fees for any Collation, Institution, Induction, or for any other Cause or Act; or any Bribe or Reward for the Concealment or Impunity of Delinquents; or done any Act privately, and not in the presence of a Notary? Hath any Ecclesiastical Officer commuted any Penance of any Delinquent Convicted? And how hath the Money been disposed of?

2. Is the number of Apparitors in this Deanery excessive? Have they summon'd any Person unlawfully, or made false Returns of any Citations, or taken Rewards for Concealments, or threatened Prosecutions where they had no Reward, or any other ways misbehaved themselves in their Office?

FLEETWOOD, BISHOP OF ST. ASAPH. 1710.

ARTICLES of Enquiry, Exhibited by the Right Reverend Father in God, William, by Divine Permission Lord Bishop of St. Asaph, to the Church-wardens and Side-men of every Parish within his Diocese, at his Primary Visitation. With some Remarks and Observations on the Particulars.

Printed in the Year MDCCX.

The Tenour of the Oath to be Administred to the Church-wardens and Side-men.

You shall Swear, That you will diligently Enquire, and true Presentment make, of all Defaults and Offences committed in your Parish, against the Ecclesiastical Laws of this Realm, to the best of your skill and knowledge. So help you God.

Articles of Enquiry, &amp;c.

To the Clergy of the Diocese of St. Asaph.

Intending, if it please God, to visit my Diocese this Summer ensuing, I have spent a little time in considering how to make such Visitation easiest to my self and Clergy, and best to answer the Purposes and Ends of it. The Bishop's Charge, I have observ'd, has usually been a tiresome thing to him himself, and taken up much more time than could be well allowed on such Occasions. This Trouble I have spared both my self and you, by sending to you before-hand, what I should have most insisted on, had I tarried till the time of delivering it by word of mouth. By this Method, I shall also avoid the frequent Repetition of the same things, in several places, which is truly tedious and uneasy: and shall not run the hazard of saying many things unseasonably, by saying them everywhere, which would be only pertinent and proper, in this or that particular Deanry. Thus, you see, I have consulted my own Ease; but not, I hope, without your Convenience also. I have saved my self the trouble of connecting the particular Observations I have made, which in a general Discourse I must have done; but then I have also made it easy for you to apply what I have said, to the right place; and given you more time to consider and digest, with your Church-wardens, the Presentments proper to be made. In a word, the Method I have taken, I judg'd would be most convenient for our Common Service, without considering how it would be received, as singular, and unusual. And yet (that I may not be thought to have chalked out a Way peculiar to my self, and to affect unbeaten Paths) the antientest Form of an Episcopal Visitation, that, I believe, is extant, and which Baluzius hath printed, at the end of his Notes upon Regino, pag. 602. manifestly shews, that the Bishop did not always read his Charge (which is there call'd his Admonitio) himself, but delivered it to a Deacon to read it aloud, in the Bishop's Name and Stead, to the Clergy that were then and there assembled. 'Tis above 900 Years old, and therefore it may be worth the while, to give you the Title, and the Beginning of it — the Title is, — Admonitio Synodalis antiqua, à Diacono post Evangelium legenda: Episcopo, & ceteris in ordine sedentibus. They had no Sermon then, but Prayers, Psalms, Epistle, and Gospel. And then followed the Admonition, of which this is the Beginning. Fratres Presbyteri, et Sacerdotes Domini, Cooperatores Ordinis nostri estis. Nos quidem, quamvis indigni, locum Aaron tenemus, Vos autem locum Eleazari, et Ithamaris. Nos vice duodecim Apostolorum fungimur, Vos ad fornem Septuaginta Discipulorum estis. Nos vero Pastores Vestri sumus, Vos autem Pastores animarum vobis Commissarum. Nos de Vobis Rationem reddaturi sumus, Pastori Domino nostro Jesu Christo. Vos de Plebibus vobis commissis: et ideo, Carissimi, videte periculum vestrum. Ammonemus itaque, et obsecramus Fraternitatem vestram, ut quae vobis suggerimus, memoriae commendetis, et opere exercere studeatis. And then follow the particular Injunctions he lays upon them, which are too long for this place. I only transcribe thus much, to justify the Method I take: for I think it full as good, for every Clergy-man to read my Charge at home beforehand, as to hear a Deacon read it, or Myself, at our Meeting; especially since by these Means, he may read it again and again at his Leisure, as I hope, and ought to hope, he will. The Articles of Enquiry (which the Antients also called Inquisitio) are, generally, the same with those of my Honoured Predecessor, Dr. Beveridge, excepting that some new Occurrences have occasioned some few Additions, and some little Alterations. They will be, on that score, as more familiar, so more acceptable to you; and I am truly glad to find the Memory of so excellent a Man, both for his Piety and Learning, so precious with you. May we, all of us, profit our selves of his good Example!

TITLE I.

Concerning the Clergy.

1. Doth your Minister reside upon his Benefice?

1. The Residence of a Clergyman upon his Benefice, appears so reasonable and fit, that whensoever it is, for any considerable time, interrupted, a good Man does not (I believe) so often recur to the Dispensation of his lawful Superiors, for the Satisfaction of his Mind therein, as to his own Conscience, to know whether that Dispensation be duly and rightly applied. He doubts not of the Reasonableness and Justice of such a Power, to make such Laws, and to distribute such Indulgencies, where needful, but he will make himself the Judge, whether he is himself a proper Subject of such favour; and if he find not his Necessities of Absence and Non-Residence, to be just and true, and very pressing, his Heart reproaches him, even when he has his Seals and Licence in his Closet: He knows the Law is there ill used, the Judge mistaken, and himself faulty, and accountable to his great Lord and Master, tho' dispens'd with here on Earth, and freed from Punishment. The very nature of his Undertaking shews him this; the Obligations he has laid himself under, with such solemnity, to God in his Ordination, and to his Bishop at his Institution, have strictly bound it on his Soul: And from this Burthen, nothing but good Reasons, and true Necessities can disengage him.

A Clergyman's Parish is, in some sort, his House and Home; there is his Business, there his Family; there all his Time, his Care, his Pains and Diligence should be expended: And I call every Man's Heart to witness, whether, the more Months he lives in his Parish, the more Duty he performs in it, the more care he takes of it, he does not think himself the more approved of God and of all good Men, and of his own Conscience, and does not think he shall give a more joyful account of his Charge in the Day of Judgment. I would therefore intreat all those, with whom I am concern'd, to consider seriously, what Profit, or what Pleasure, can balance the Satisfaction of approving themselves to God, their own Consciences, and all good Men, by living among their People, as much as possibly they can, and doing them what good lies in their Power, both by their Doctrine and Example. And I hope no Body, for the future, will either, without my leave, absent themselves from their Cures, for any long time; or obtain my leave, by false Excuses, and such Pretences, as they know are groundless, tho' I cannot see through them; And I, the rather say this, because, I doubt, there are some Rectors who think themselves at liberty to absent themselves, because not tied, by Oath, to Continual Residence, as Vicars are. I assure them, this is but an Imaginary Liberty; and the 21 H. VIII. cap. 13. may instruct them better.

2. Doth he dwell in his Parsonage or Vicarage-House?

2. Residence, doth ordinarily suppose the Minister to live in his proper House: But this Enquiry supposes it may be otherwise. I am sorry to hear that some of the Clergy of this Diocese, have no House at all of their own to live in; and that Others have such as cannot possibly receive their Families, and are therefore constrain'd to live in hired Ones. I can think of applying no other Remedy to these Evils past, but warning those who are concern'd, to take more care for the future of their Houses; that they suffer them not, for want of a little charge and care at present, to grow daily worse and worse, till at last they come to such a pass that they despair of mending them; and the next Successor finds them on the ground, and is neither able to build them himself, nor to recover anything towards the doing it, from a poor helpless Widow, or insolvent Executor. By these ways, a tolerable House becomes a mean one, and a mean one falls into Ruine. Wherever therefore the proper House is not sufficient to receive the Incumbent and his Family, I shall expect, and will exact with more than usual strictness, that the House be kept in very good Repairs. But where it is possible, I hope to find every Incumbent in his proper House, and taking all due care both to sustain it and amend it. This is what the Clergy owe in Justice to their Successors, because they either received it from their Predecessors, or thought themselves injured in not receiving it.

3. If he be not there himself, hath he a Curate allowed of by the Bishop, always residing among you?

3. The Residence of a Minister on his Benefice is so necessary, that whenever his Business calls and keeps him from it, his Absence is to be supplied with a Curate, who is in all Respects to discharge the Office of the Incumbent, and is to be allowed of by the Bishop, i.e. he is not to be Curate, unless allowed of by the Bishop. There are some Reasons for which a Bishop may, with safety, reject a Clerk presented to him, by the Patron; but there are many other Reasons for which a Bishop would reject a Clerk, if he could do it without trouble and danger of the Law. But a Curate is so absolutely within the Bishop's Power, that none can be admitted as such, or entertain'd, without his Approbation and Allowance; not his Connivance or Permission only, but his Examination and his Licence; And therefore when the Laws allow of Pluralities and Non-Residence, for fear of what Miscarriages and Mischiefs might ensue from thence, they leave it in the Bishop's Power to prevent all damage to the Church, and to supply all defects of absence, by putting in such Curates as they shall judge Faithful and able to discharge the Office of Incumbents, and also have empowered them to appoint those Curates their Rewards.

4. Doth he Read the whole Prayers of the Church distinctly and devoutly every Sunday, and every time the People are assembled for that purpose?

4. A Minister is not at liberty to use, or to refuse, what Prayers he pleases, in the Publick Service, but must be govern'd by the Rubrick; Men may, and must, be left to their Discretion, in things doubtful; but where there is a Rule, a modest Man will not be wise above it, and much less against it. But there are few, I hope, that want this Caution. I would to God, there were as few concern'd in the next part of this Enquiry, which is, Whether they read the Prayers distinctly and devoutly? I have often wondered, how it should come to pass, that so great a part of the Ministerial Office, as Reading Prayers in publick is, should take up so little of our Care and Study as it seems to do, and be so little considered by Us, which, were it well performed, would tend as much to our own, and to the edification of our Audience, as any thing we can do; which is, I dare say, the Desire and Aim of every good Clergyman. I own, that a good Voice, sweet Cadence, and a graceful manner, in reading, fall not to every Bodies share; nor are they to be acquired by Art and Study; they are rather Gifts of Nature, and improvable by Care and Observation; but many who have them, either totally neglect them, or misuse them strangely by an excess of Affectation. But they who have them not, can yet read Prayers distinctly and devoutly; in this we ask nothing but what is in every One's Power to do, with a little Care and Attention; and I am sure it is their Duty. The Minister, in the Publick Service, is, as it were, the Mouth of the Congregation. His Voice is to reach the Ears, and to direct the Hearts of all his Audience, to their proper Object, at that time; and I will venture to affirm, that much of their Devotion will depend upon the way and manner of his uttering forth his Prayers and Praises. The Psalms, and Hymns, and Chapters, are clearly other things, when read distinctly and devoutly, from what they are when read in haste and unattentively. Much of their Efficacy will, I know, depend upon the Temper and good Disposition that Men bring along with them to Church, on these Occasions; but still, I say, the People will not fail of being more or less affected, with this Service, as it is more or less distinctly and devoutly uttered and performed by the Minister. And therefore all their Care will be well employed, in studying to do it in the best manner that is possible. To read too loud, is to disturb the Devotion of the Audience, and draws them only to guessing what's the matter, and what is the occasion of exerting above what is needful: Men, in great Noises, cannot think at all, but are unfix'd, and in much confusion. To read too low, is to lose the end of Reading, which is to be heard and understood; it strains the attention too much, and when Men have long listned to little purpose, they presently give themselves up to think of other matters. To read too fast, is to lose one's own Attention, and to outrun all other Peoples; the Mind has not leisure to consider and dwell on what is said; the Ear does only take in Words and Sound, but nothing is communicated to the Heart; there is not time for it; and then, you may be sure there is no Devotion; for Devotion is, in this case, the Assenting of the Heart to what is heard by the Ears, and the being pleasingly moved with it. It is as if a Messenger should deliver his Errand whilst he is riding Post by you. You hear him say something, but what it is, you know not, and so it is as if he had said nothing at all. This quick dispatch of Prayers gives great Offence, in many kinds. It makes those, who dislike our Forms, continue on their prejudice against them; they fancy there is no Devotion in the Speaker, and they are sure the Hearers cannot edify by them, not being able to attend to them duely, and go along with them in the grave manner that they should. It looks like Disrespect to the Congregation, as well as to the Service it self, to see Men hastning to an End of it, in so unseemly a manner, as if they longed to have it over, and had something better to do afterwards. The reading Prayers too fast, is the fault that is most generally charged upon the Clergy, and therefore I insist upon it most, in order to its being mended, because it cannot, in truth, be done either with Distinction, or Devotion. But there is also something amiss in reading too slow, which is the other Extream, but which not many, in comparison, fall into. The Attention, if it is not duly fed, and entertained, is lost; when People know beforehand what you are to say, they are impatient till it is deliver'd; and if you stay beyond your time, their Expectation becomes uneasy; they run before you in their Minds; but their Devotion is hereby disturb'd, and scattered. You may utter your Sermons, with what degree of Slowness and Deliberation, you shall think fit, because, not knowing what you have to say, Men will expect with Patience. But in reading Prayers, with which they are well acquainted, you must, generally speaking, keep that decent middle Pace to which they are mostly accustomed, or else you will be in danger of having your Audience either overrun you, or not overtake you; either of which quite spoils the end of Publick Prayer. I would not multiply Rules, and Observations of this kind; most People will do best in following Nature in their Voice and Utterance; consulting Reason in Accents and in Cadence; and Common Custom in the Quantities of proper Names, and Words that are of doubtful pronunciation. But then a Clergyman will read the Prayers best when he perceives he reads himself and his Audience, into a serious and devout Attention to the good things delivered by him.

5. Doth he Preach every Sunday, either in the English or British Tongue?

5. Custom, I hear, has, in some places of this Diocese, prevail'd, to the Disuse of Weekly Sermons, so that they have Preaching but once in a Fortnight, or Three Weeks. Such Custom, I am sure, must have proceeded from the Faultiness or Negligence of former Incumbents; and I hope the present ones will not indulge it any longer. I do utterly disclaim the encouraging any such ill Practice; nay, I require it at the hands of all that are concern'd, to change it quickly, as they esteem my Favour, or regard my Authority. I must leave it to the Minister's Discretion, whether this Sermon shall be in the English, or the British Tongue; but a Sermon there must be in one of them, on every Lords-Day, in every Parish-Church throughout the Diocese, unless there be great Cause to the contrary, Can. 45. I will not so far distrust the Reasonableness of this Injunction, as to add any Arguments in favour of it, because I can foresee nothing material to be objected to it. But let me take this Opportunity of advising the Ministers so to divide their English and their British Sermons, as may most tend to the general Edification of their People. In some places I understand there is now and then an English Sermon preached for the sake of one or two of the best Families in the Parish, although the rest of the Parish understand little or nothing of English, and those few Families understand the British perfectly well, as being their native Tongue: I cannot possibly approve of this Respect and Complaisance to a few, that makes the Minister so useless to the rest, and much the greatest number of his People. I should be very glad (for my own sake) that there were but one language common to us all, and that one were English: but till that Wish can be accomplished, I heartily desire the Language of the Minister may be always such, as will best instruct and edify his People most; and that no Civility should come in competition with his Duty, much less take place of it. I know that the Religion and Good-breeding of the Gentry will easily part with a respectful Custom when it is prejudicial to their poor Neighbours. What is it for a Minister to be a Barbarian, and to speak in an unknown Tongue, but to preach in a Language that is not understood by those who hear him? And if I were to give you Rules of Preaching, whatever the Language were, English or British, the first should be, to speak to the Greatest-part of your Congregation, i.e. to those who make up the Body of your People. Consider their Necessities and Manners, and suit the Matter of your Sermons to them; consider their Capacities and Understandings, and suit your Language and Expression to them, and I dare warrant you will best discharge the Office of a Preacher. I do not mean, that you should use the Market-Phrase, and fall into the Expression of the lowest of the Vulgar; but such a plainness of Speech as is suited to the Capacity of all Men in general, which yet is clean, and pure, and such as the most elegant and well-bred People may and do use: all manner of Words and Expressions, that have any thing base and vile in them, that excite any sordid or impure Images in the Mind, or that are, by use, become ambiguous, and of double-meaning, are to be carefully avoided in our Compositions for the Pulpit: That place is Sacred to severity, and will admit no sort of Levities in Language. Let but your Words be plain and proper, and they will be received, and understood, and approv'd by all the Congregation, tho' made up of great variety of People. A Preacher cannot answer it to his Audience, if what he says be proper only to a few, or intelligible to here and there a Man. Would that be thought a Civil Entertainment, where more than half the Guests must rise from the Table, and go away with nothing? The Case is not unlike, where many Controversial Points are handled, new Notions started, and new Books confuted, and Authors call'd upon, in places where the People (Nine of Ten) have never so much as heard of such an Error, such a Person, such a Book, or Name, or Thing: They profit nothing by such means: Discourses of this kind are wholly lost upon them: And so, indeed, are many others, made on odd and antiquated Subjects; Things that are true perhaps, but so much out of the common way, that they signify but little, and edify less, tho' handled very learnedly, and very well understood. In a word, I ask no more, under this head, than that every Preacher would, whilst he is designing and composing his Sermon, consider the Nature and Condition of his Audience, their spiritual Wants, and the Reach of their Understanding; and treat them in such a manner, as shall most probably affect the greatest part of them. He should (and would if he could) instruct and affect them all; but the diversity of Age and Capacity making that impossible, his next best Aim must be, to instruct and affect the most, which is certainly best done by plain Sense in plain Expression.

6. Is he, and his Curate, of an unblemish'd Life?

6. I have been making some Observations upon Reading Prayers, and Preaching in such manner as may tend most to the Edification of the People; but neither will be done as it ought to be, unless the Answer to this Enquiry be in the Affirmative. If a sober and unblemish'd Life do not adorn the Minister, he will not be able either to Pray or Preach to any great purpose: The People will not fail, in the midst of his best Performances, to remember his Disorders and Irregularities: they will be evermore applying to him what the Psalmist says — in the Name of God — Why dost thou preach my Laws, and takest my Covenant in thy mouth? whereas thou hatest to be reformed, and hast cast my words behind thee? 'Tis a dreadful Objection People make to all that we can say, in behalf of Virtue and Religion, if we live loosely and disorderly — Why does this man confute his Doctrine by his Practice? Why does he heap up Arguments to stir us to Sobriety and Temperance, that have no Power upon himself? I own these Reasonings are not good; nor does it follow, that the Minister believes not what he says is true, because he lives in Contradiction to it. The Rule is the same to both the Minister and People, and each shall answer for themselves for the breach of it: but the Minister is obliged to show the People that the Rule is practicable. He is to go before them, by Example, in the ways of Righteousness, and shew the People, those ways are passable, and safe, and easier than they apprehend them to be. He is not only to preach up Temperance, and Sobriety, and Chastity, and Justice, and Mercy, and every thing that is praise-worthy — but also to let them see, that the Arguments and Motives by which he persuades his People to the Exercise of all these Graces and Virtues, are such, as thoroughly convince and persuade himself; so that they see his Practice correspond to his Instructions.

I know not (as I said) of one Precept in all the Scriptures, commanding any thing good, or prohibiting any thing evil, that does not as much oblige every Man and Woman living, as it does the Priest or Minister of the Parish: but yet I see his Condemnation for Offences of the same kind, must needs be greater than theirs. Whence can this be, but from the Nature of his Office and holy Calling, which is to teach all Truth, and to live in the Exercise of it? From the Solemnity of his own Engagements, when he was separated from the World to God's Service, by which he willingly bound himself, to go before his People, both in Doctrine and Example? From the Expectation of all the World, which is, has been, and will for ever be, that the Priest should live a Life according to his Rules, and in most exemplary manner? And from the mighty Scandal that he gives, when he walks contrary to these Engagements, Obligations, and Expectations; no bodies. Crimes exciting more Abhorrence, Rage, and Detestation, in the Hearts of all Men, than theirs who are devoted to the Service of the Altar: nor do any one's Offences equally wound Religion with theirs: not when Men reason well, and judge impartially; but when Men of corrupt Minds and wicked Practice reason and judge, as they have always done, and will, I doubt not, always do. They conclude against the Truths of Revelation, from the little Effect they see they have upon the practice of the Priests, its domestick Servants, Votaries, and Defenders. Vain Men, it is not so! You want more solid Arguments against the Truths that trouble you, than any you can find: You want Objections to the Precepts of the Gospel, that enjoin you Holiness of Life, and Virtues of all kinds; and you expect to find them sooner, and more plentifully, from the Practice of weak imperfect Men, and subject to the same Passions, Inclinations, and Affections with your selves, than any your Wit and Invention can furnish you with, or any you can fetch from the defect of Reason in those Rules and Precepts, or of Authority in those who gave them and enjoin'd them. But how can you be strengthened in Infidelity, or settled in wicked Practice, from the corrupt and depraved Manners of the Priests, when the Question is about the Truth and Reasonableness of the Rules and Precepts you are to walk by, and their Authority, and not about the Effect and Influence they have? when even those Priests, as well as you, are obliged to walk by Rule, and will be judg'd by Rule, and certainly condemn'd for their Transgressing it? Let us desire these gentlemen, not to defere so much to our Example, unless they will conclude as well in favour of Truth and Virtue, from the Practice of such among us as walk honestly and carefully, as they do against them, from the Practice of those who walk contrary to both.

But with how much Reason and Strength soever I think I could argue against those Men who slight and discredit Virtue and Religion for the Wickedness-sake of some bad Ministers—yet does my Heart fail me, when I consider how it is in fact, and to what degree those good things suffer in the World, from any of our notorious Failings; then have I little Joy in thinking that Men make false Conclusions in these cases, when I remember they have made, and will, to the End of the World, make just the same Conclusions. Then have I little regard to all that can be offered to these Gainsayers of the Truth; and rather turn my self to you, my Brethren, and my Friends, with the most serious Exhortation of St. Paul to Titus 2. 7, 8. that you would in all things shew your selves Patterns of good works, that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you; and giving no offence in any thing, that the Ministry may not be blamed, 2 Cor. 6. 3. You see how early Men began to take Exceptions to the Sacred Office, for the sake of some who behaved themselves ill in that Character.

7. Doth he diligently upon Sundays, openly in the Church, instruct and Examine so many Children of his Parish, sent unto him, as he thinks convenient in some part of the Church-Catechism?

7. The Excellence and Usefulness of Catechising young People, and instructing them in the Principles of their Religion, is so manifestly great, that I know not what to say in its Defence: things that are plain, do neither want, nor bear any Illustration. Religion is, in this, like all other Arts and Sciences; it must be learn'd whilst People are young, and susceptible of good Impressions, or very little Proficiency will be made therein: and I see most Clergy-men are of this Opinion, by the innumerable multitude of Catechisms that have been, and are dayly put out by them, for the Use of young Beginners in the Knowledge of Religion; not that they differ in their Principles, or Exposition of great Truths each from the other, but that each of them has Regard to some particular Sett<sup>e</sup> of People, to which they have, or have had, Relation, to whose Necessities, and Capacities, they suit their Instructions: This is the true Cause of their Variety; for they all of them comment on the same Text, namely, the Church Catechism, which is, in truth, such a Summary of the Christian Faith and Duty, delivered with such Brevity, and yet such Perspicuity, that, as far as I can judge, no Church of any Age or Place hath ever produced its Equal; and you shall in vain seek for the like, in the Works of any one, either Greek or Latin, Writer. And as this Variety of Catechisms demonstrates the Concurrence of the Common Judgment in the Use and Necessity of Catechising, so it has made it very easy for others to do the same good Work after them; and therefore I hope you will every one of you attend to it, and breed up a generation that will shame the present one, both in its knowledge and sincere Practice of Christian Duties.

And that which should the rather invite you to discharge this part of your Duty to your Parishes, is this, That the Elder People, who have either never learn'd, or quite forgotten the Principles of their Religion, will be hereby instructed, or reminded of them: I never yet heard Catechising in a Church, where I did not see the Oldest and the Gravest People attend as seriously as any else; and I dare say they were as much edified, and more pleas'd to be so, than the Younger. I was once in a Church (which I have ever since remembered with some pleasure) where I heard Men and Women, some 50, some 60, and others upwards of those Years, repeating their Catechism before the Congregation, as Children commonly do, in other places. A good Christian had, it seems, left so many Loaves, to be disposed of to such poor People (of what Age soever) as should publicly submit to be instructed in the Church Catechism, and publicly rehearse the several parts of it; which they did, very readily, without any Shame, or Shiness. Who knows but these poor people would, without this Motive and Encouragement, have lived and died in utter ignorance of the Faith and Duty of a Christian? And was ever any Bread distributed with more Charity, that fed the Soul (as it were) as well as Body? But tho' Old People will not (without the Loaves) be brought to rehearse their Catechism among you, yet I dare say the Oldest will not be ashamed to learn it, and remember it, from what they hear the Young-ones say, and what is said to them.

8. Doth he administer the Sacrament of Baptism publicly at the Font in the Church, and not elsewhere, except in case of necessity, when there is cause to fear the Child may otherwise die without it?

9. Doth he, in that case, use only the Office for Private Baptism; and afterwards, if the Child recover, receive it Publickly into the Church, as the Law requires?

8, 9. These two articles are Points of Discipline; and in all such Cases, the Rubrick is the Guide. The Font was usually placed at the Entry of the Church, to signify that no body could be a Member of Christ's Church but he who was initiated into it by Water-Baptism, and the bringing Children to publick Baptism, in Churches, was, among other Reasons, required, to the intent, that every one of the Congregation, hearing the Stipulations and Engagements made for the present Infant, might be put in mind of their own, and accordingly endeavour to reform their own Defects, and faulty Negligences. The Injunctions of the Antient Christians of this kind, had more and other Reasons to proceed upon than the late or modern ones had, or can have. But the Church of England had, and hath Authority enough, and Reasons enow, to enjoin what she enjoins of this nature; and I must also add, that she hath Goodness enough to connive at the Relaxation of such Rules of Discipline as cannot strictly be observ'd without great Danger, or extream Inconvenience, upon some Occasions, and in some Places; not to schismatical, or careless, or presumptuous Heads, regardless of all Rule and Order, but to such modest, prudent, and considerate Men, as finding themselves in great Straits, do rather venture an Irregularity of their own, than an apparent Mischief, to the Church.

10. Doth he Administer the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper so often, that all his Parishioners may Receive at least three times in the Year?

11. Is he always ready to Administer it when there is a sufficient Number of his Parishioners duly prepared and desirous to Communicate with him?

12. Doth he on Sunday or Holy-day before the Communion, give Notice thereof in the Church, and Read One of the Exhortations fitted to that Purpose in the Common-Prayer-Book?

10, 11, 12. Both Laws and Custom have so secur'd this Point, that I do not expect to hear of one Parish, in the Diocese, where the People have not the Opportunity of communicating, three times at least in every Year; but oftner, if they signify any Disposition to do so, and have sufficient Numbers to joyn with them. I doubt not but the Ministers will be so far from neglecting the Opportunities required by Authority, that they will seriously and earnestly invite their People to communicate more frequently than they are commanded to do: And will dispose them to it by such Discourses as will shew them, that the Duty they are called to, is none of those they think the Burthens of Religion, but rather a great Privilege, an Honour, and Advantage; a Feast of Love, and Joy, and Thanksgiving for the Deliverance of our Souls from Death, for the forgiveness of our Sins, and for the Satisfaction made to God by the most meritorious Sacrifice of Christ upon the Cross, which we then and there commemorate. They will endeavour to abate the Horror, and most dreadful Apprehensions which some of St. Paul's Expressions (used also by our Church in its Exhortations) ill applied and understood, are apt to excite in many Peoples Minds: By shewing them what St. Paul meant by them, in the particular Case of the Corinthians; and what the Church now means in the general application of them to all her Children; which surely cannot be the same, where there is not the like Occasion given, the same Abuses not to be committed, nor any Circumstances appear common with theirs, which first occasioned that Discourse, and which can best instruct us in its sense and meaning. They will insist upon a penitent Heart, a lively Faith, and a forgiving Temper; and that will scatter all their Fears, and fill them with good hope when they approach to the Lord's Table, and bring them home again with Peace and Satisfaction. See if the whole Communion Service tends not to this purpose; if it supposes any other preparation to the coming to the Sacrament, to the eating and drinking Worthily, and to the avoiding that Damnation that it threatens to the Unworthy Receiver, whatever it means by these Expressions.

13. Is he careful to Visit the Sick, and to prepare them for the Holy Communion, and for their departure into the other World.

13. This is so tender a part of the Office of a Parish Priest, that even good Nature and Compassion are so ready to excite him to the due discharge of it, as the sense of Duty, and the Injunctions of Authority can be: But when they joyn, no Considerations can be wanting to enforce the carefullest Attention to this good part of Visiting the Sick. Surely, men are never more in earnest, never more truly sensible of their everlasting Concern, than when they lie upon the Bed of Sickness, and believe they are going to give an account to God of all their past Life. Then therefore is the time when they will gladliest hear your Prayers, attentively consider your Advice, bear your Reproofs, and hearken to your Admonitions, Exhortations and Instructions; then are they readiest to confess their Sins, promise Amendment, and Submission to the Laws of Christ. Then therefore is the Season of applying to them, with most success, in such Discourses as you find most proper to their State and Condition; whether it be to bring them to a Sense and Acknowledgment of their past Offences, to work in them such Shame and Sorrow as befits them; such Purposes of Satisfaction and Amends, (where it can possibly be done) as will testify they have brought forth Fruits meet for Repentance, and such firm Resolutions of Amendment, for the future, that they and you may have great Comfort in them, whether they live or die: Or whether it be to strengthen them in their Faith, clear up their Doubts, and encourage them against all causeless fear, distrust of their Condition, and Dependancy.

I would not have the Clergy to be Busy Bodies, nor Meddlers with other Peoples Matters, especially their Temporal and Domestick Concerns, because it gives Men great distast, and does disservice to them in the main: But yet, unless they be most diligent and heedful Observers of the Lives and Manners of their People, they will neither preach pertinently to them in their Churches, nor discourse properly in their Houses, nor rightly apply to them, on their Sick Beds. To do these Patients the best Service, one must thoroughly know, and be well acquainted, with their Condition. If Shame, or Pride, or Vanity, or other Reason should cause them to conceal their State, and talk in generals only (as the Case too often happens) yet your Acquaintance with their practice will help you to speak plainly to them, and your Duty will oblige you to be particular, in all points that are necessary. Whereas if the Sick be silent, or conceal himself, and the Minister be ignorant how things have pass'd, the Visit will be meer formality and useless to them both. I would not therefore have the practice of sending for a strange, or neighbour Minister, on these Occasions, encouraged beyond what is necessary. The Parish-Priest is much the fittest Person to be used in this Service, because he is presum'd to know the Parties best, and consequently can best fit his Exhortations to the present necessities. In cases indeed, where the Sick have something secret to impart, and would unburthen their Conscience, and receive either Satisfaction of some Doubts, or Absolution. I cannot but believe they are at liberty to send for whom they please, and the Clergy at liberty to go, and serve them to their utmost. But in all other Cases, which are ordinary, where neither Secrecy, nor greater Skill, are required, I should be glad the People would always send for their own Ministers, and that the Clergy should make some scruple of invading their Brother's Office, on these Occasions, when they know he is in the way, and within Reach, and ready to do his Duty. They will, I hope, be ever tender of each other's Credit, and will contribute nothing (which they can avoid) to the bringing any disrespect on any one; nor should the People be encourag'd in the Opinion, that One Man's Service is so preferable to Another's, in matters of this Nature, where all depends upon the Grace of God, and the good Disposition of the Recipients, or the Parties administred to; and nothing at all upon the goodness of the Minister, tho' he were holy as John the Baptist. But can I slip this Opportunity of saying, that, tho' I know this is an Error of the People, and wish the Prejudice were wholly rooted up out of their minds, yet I believe it never was, nor ever will be otherwise? The Clergy who live best, will not only evermore be best esteemed of by all Men (that is their due, and always will be paid) but Men will always think their Ministerial Service to be much more efficacious, than that of Others, and will be always more desirous of it; and in the times of Sickness more than any other. I know not how to rectify this Error, but I know how it may be turn'd to good, and made subservient to the best of Purposes, and that will be by living holily; for then the People will desire our Prayers, and covet earnestly our Spiritual Service, and believe us more effectually when we apply to them; and tho' they should be mistaken, yet we shall be the better, and reap the Fruits and Rewards of being so. But where will those unhappy Ministers appear, who, by their wicked and licentious Lives, have given such Scandal and Offence to their Congregations, that they abhor the Sacrifice of the Lord; and know not how to send for them, or ask their Prayers; who have themselves lived, as it were, without God in the World? What a discouragement must it needs be, to poor People from calling for the Minister to dispose them for Death, when they have known him live, as if there were no after-reckoning to be made? But with what Face, what Heart, can he prepare them for the Sacrament, by exhorting them to a lively Faith, and most sincere Repentance, who seems, to them, to have no sense of either? The People are, in truth, too slack in calling for the Assistance of their Pastors, upon these Occasions, even when they are Sober, Virtuous, Godly Men, and every way qualified to do them Service: But who can bear the Burthen of that Guilt, that makes it seem so reasonable for People not to send for, or admit that Service? Some few there are, I doubt, of this bad Class; God, of his Goodness, shorten every Day, their Number, by giving them the Grace of true Repentance, that they may save themselves and those that hear them. But where the People are slack and negligent, there I advise the Minister to find his Opportunity, and visit without being sent for, for fear he should not be sent for at all, or sent for, as the manner often is, when 'tis too late. The Friends and Relations of the Sick are indeed obliged to give the Minister notice, when it is most convenient he should come; when are the intervals of greater ease, from Pain or Sickness; when they are most awake and sensible; and when the Operations of Medicines best permit; want of this Information may make a Visit troublesome, if not entirely useless; besides the loss of Time and Pains, which in some cases, is not inconsiderable. I do not therefore judge a Minister to be always in fault, when some of his Parishioners have died without his visiting them; it may be he has had no notice of their Illness, or was not called by those who should have done that good Office for their Friend or Relation. He must be always ready and disposed to go; and he must do it freely, without asking and without expecting any manner of Reward; for fear that Consideration should hinder poor People from requiring his Prayers and Assistance in their last Extremities, which they want, and would be glad to have, but cannot bear the Charge of. This is an Age of such Corruption, that tho' I hope, nothing like it has reached so far as Wales, yet I cannot choose but give warning of it, to all with whom I have any thing to do. As to the Business of Absolution, in this Office, as it is a matter of great moment, so it is also thought of some Difficulty to know when it is to be applied. The Conditions of it, are the truly Repenting, and unfeignedly believing the Gospel. The Difficulty of applying it arises from the Difficulty of knowing when Men truly Repent, and when they unfeignedly believe. And I must needs say, that it is not in any Man's power to know, with any certainty, when this is truly done: We must take Mens Word for it, and depend upon the Professions they make; and tho' we may pass a wrong Judgment, and pronounce a Sentence that will not stand, before the great Judge; yet we shall do it without hazard to our selves, provided the Sick Penitent make, at that time, a special Confession of his Sins, and humbly and heartily desire the Priest or Minister to give him Absolution. These are the Directions the Church gives in the Rubricks of this Office, which if carefully read and well observed, I know not what great Difficulty the Priest will find about pronouncing the Absolution. I will end this Article with remarking, That the Performance of this Office, with such a serious, grave, and compassionate Concern, as the Sick Person's Case requires, does usually draw with it a greater degree of Esteem and Love, from those who behold and hear it, than the Performance of other Offices is wont to do: And I have known it engage Men in a very Serviceable Friendship to their Minister for ever after. Under this Head, I think it proper to say, That the Minister remind such People as have in their Sickness desired the Prayers of the Congregation, to return their Thanks as publickly to God, for his restoring them to their Health.

14. Doth he ever Celebrate Matrimony without Banns being first Publish'd Three several Sundays, or Holy-days in the Parish Church where the Parties dwell, unless he have a special Licence to do it?

14. To prevent Incestuous, Shameful, and Unequal Matches, the Church has all along been careful to ordain that none should be clandestinely Married, without Banns being first published, or without Special Licence obtain'd, and within the Hours of 8 and 12 in the Morning. To this purpose it has been made highly penal by the Canons, for any Clergyman to Marry otherwise than was allowed and publickly approved. The 62d Canon made in 1603, ordains Suspension ipso facto for three Years, to any one offending in this kind. We must indeed own, that all the Evils and Mischiefs of Clandestine Marriages, how great and many soever they be, are justly chargeable upon the Clergy, since, without their concurrence, there could be no such things; and therefore no Severities can be too great, to be inflicted on those wicked Men, who for the sake of a little Profit more than ordinary, bring so much Shame, and Sorrow and Substantial Misery, upon whole Families; undo young thoughtless Creatures; dissolve the Ties of Childrens Duty and Obedience to their Parents; and of Parents Care and Affection to their Children; nothing being more apt to alienate their Hearts, and provoke them to many rash and hard Resolutions, than the strange and unaccountable Choices their Children often make; which yet they could not compass, without the Assistance of some Mercenary Wretch abusing his good Office. Ought not a Clergyman, above all others, to consider, the strength of Parents Love to their Children; their constant care and thoughtfulness to do them good; their Charges in their Education; the Toils they are at, the Pains and Labours they undergo continually, to make Provision for them; the Designs they have laid to make them happy; the hopes they have treasured up in them, and the pleasure they have already conceived in having them well bestowed? These things are all so natural, that they come within the compass of every Bodies thought: and how can any Clergyman forbear to put himself in such a Parents Case, and see how he could endure the Disappointment of all such Love, such Hope, such Expectations, and Desire; and, in their stead, to find himself covered with Confusion and Disgrace, by the most disagreeable, unequal, if not shameful Match of his extravagant and disobedient Child? And all this, by the means of a Man who must transgress all the Rules of Reason, and Commands of God and his Superiors to bring it to pass. I know not how a Man can make himself more justly hated, than a Clergyman does, by these clandestine and forbidden Marriages; nor draw more Execrations, if not Vengeance, on his Head, from Families so provoked and injured. I doubt the Laws themselves tho' executed carefully by all the Clergy, would not be able to prevent all manner of Miscarriages of this Nature. The business of Licenses is subject to much abuse, but this is what the Clergy cannot help, and therefore are not to answer for; what they can help, I hope they will; and to this purpose, I can think of nothing better than that they should consider what the Penalty is now by the Laws of the Land, upon Offenders in this kind, and acquaint the Churchwardens, and their Parishioners with it. In the 7 and 8 of William III. pag. 734. it is enacted—That every Parson, Vicar, or Curate, who shall himself marry, or who shall substitute, or employ, or knowingly and wittingly shall suffer and permit any other Minister to marry any Persons in any Church or Chappel, to such Parson, Vicar, or Curate belonging, or appertaining, without Publication of Banns, or Licenses of Marriage first had and obtained, shall, for every such Offence forfeit the Sum of One hundred Pounds. Of this the Informer who shall sue for the same, is to have Fifty; the Queen the other half. This is the Penalty of the Clergyman besides Suspension for three Years. Moreover it is enacted—That every Man that is so Married without License or Publication of Banns aforesaid shall forfeit the Sum of Ten Pounds to be recovered with Costs of Suit, by any Person who shall inform or sue for the same. So that here is an Encouragement for the Churchwardens, or Others, to look after such People as are thus clandestinely Married. Nay, the Parish Clerk, or Sexton, or other Person, acting as the Sexton or Parish Clerk, who shall aid, promote or assist such Marriage without License, shall forfeit the Sum of Five Pounds, to be recovered as above is said. You see what Care the Laws both of Church and State have taken to prevent Clandestine Marriages. Let them be put in execution, and see what will come of it. Let us make a most severe Example of the first Clergyman, the first Married Man, and the first Clark or Sexton we can take offending in this kind, and try what effect it will have upon Others. Let none of Our Eyes spare them; it may be they are all so poor, that nothing can be got from any of them; no matter; let us pursue them into Prisons, and there let them lie unpitied, unrelieved, till they have suffered as much Want and Misery as they have brought upon the Heads of other People that were innocent. I should not be ashamed to be my self an Informer to the Magistrate against such People. Make but a poor Man lie in Prison, till he has paid Ten Pounds, and I believe his Neighbours will take heed of being married without Banns, or License, for the future. I do for my own part, promise to pursue with all the warrantable Zeal I can, whoever shall be found offending in this point, within my Jurisdiction. And if the Churchwardens shall present these People (as by their Duty they are bound) we shall, amongst us, be able, I hope, to bring them before the Secular Judge, who will deal with them according to Law.

Thus I have gone through all the several Articles contained under the First Title, which relate to the Clergy in particular, and tho' the Enquiry is made to, and the Answer expected from the Churchwardens; yet I conceived it best, to direct the Consideration of all these things to you, My Brethren, who are indeed the most concerned in them, and whose Practice is to furnish the Churchwardens with proper Answers to the several Questions. I hope you will, all of you, seriously read, and think upon them; and if any thing is, or hath been amiss, that you will set it right again, that I may come and meet you (as both my Wish and Inclination is) in Love and with the Spirit of Meekness.

TITLE II.

Concerning the Parishioners.

It will not be amiss, I believe, that the Churchwardens should remember, and be told. 1. That they are Officers of the Parish, in Ecclesiastical Affairs. 2. That when they enter on their Office, they take an Oath to discharge that Office, well and truly. 3. That by Virtue of this Oath, they are obliged, at Visitations, to make Presentments of such things as are amiss in their Parishes, according to the Articles delivered to them. 4. That if they knowingly neglect, or refuse to make such Presentments, the Ordinary has Power to proceed against them, as wilful Breakers of their Oath. These things it is fit they should understand; and, I doubt, the Education, way of Living, and Capacity of most of them, will make it needful for the Minister to instruct them in their Duty, and remind them of their Obligations, and help them to make their Presentments, in such manner as shall best answer to the end and purpose of their appearing at Visitations, which is, in truth, to be aiding and assisting to the Ordinary, in the exercise of what Church-Discipline is left within his power. And I hope the short Remarks I shall make upon each Head, as I go along, will convince Men of the Reasonableness of making Presentments of Offenders in these particulars.

1. Are there any in your Parish who commonly Absent themselves from Morning or Evening Prayer, upon the Lord's Day?

1. As it was God alone who sanctified this Day, and separated it to a holy Rest, in Commemoration of his Benefits and Mercies. So it is He alone who can excuse a Man, absenting himself entirely on this Day, from performing his Devotion in publick with the Congregation, i.e. A man must needs be disabled from coming to Church, by Age, or Pain, or Sickness, or Indisposition, or extremely bad Ways and Weather (all which are Excuses of God's own making) who ordinarily and commonly absents himself, Morning and Evening from the Church, or Congregation, where he pretends to worship God. I have ever thought it a great disservice to Religion to carry the Common Duties of it, beyond the Common Powers of those who are to practise them; or stretch Commands to an unreasonable extent. And upon this Score, have wondered much, and not without much dissatisfaction, to see so many worthy People in the Days of our Fathers, press the Observation of the Sabbath (as they call'd it, by which the Christian Church for 1500 Years did ever mean Saturday;) in so rigorous and precise a manner, as would have been a Burthen even to Jews. But I would not, for all that, have their mistakes so rectified, as to run us into the contrary extream, of a loose and negligent Observance of that Day. That Day still is, and ever must be, holy to the Lord: and when it ceases to be so, there will be an end of our Religion: Observe the People that neglect the serving God upon that Day, and I believe, you will find them good for nothing; they serve him very carelessly at all times else; nay, we may well suspect they serve him not at all; for wherever Christianity has got any footing, it has been allowed, that the Lord's Day should be the Day of Publick Worship for all sorts of People, and they who have neglected it, have generally been reckoned Men of no Religion: Or if they are not so by Principles, they will soon become so, by this practice of absenting ordinarily from Church on the Lord's Day. 'Tis the frequent Return of this Day, and what is said and done thereon, that keeps Religion alive in Peoples Hearts. They would forget the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments, if they came not to Church, to hear and repeat them there on Sundays. It is on these Occasions, that even good and serious Christians are glad to be put in mind of many useful Truths, and important Duties, which they had, in a manner, forgotten or neglected: All People do not come to Church to learn what they never heard or knew before, but to be exhorted to put in practice what they knew, and to be reminded of what they understood, but had not well enough attended to. And I question not, but most of us owe what share of Virtue, and Religion we have, to the Improvements we make, by the Grace of God, of these Weekly Opportunities of meeting together and serving him in Publick. Let the Churchwardens therefore look about, and see who they are, that commonly (not seldom, or now and then, for most People have occasions so to do, and must not be call'd upon for that) absent themselves from Morning and Evening Service on the Lord's Day: and present them at the Visitation, that care may be taken, to admonish and instruct them better, or, if there be good Reason, to punish them and make them Examples. As to Dissenters who are known to resort to their own Assemblies, and to have qualified themselves as the Toleration-Act requires (i.e. who have taken the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy and subscribed the Declaration mentioned in a Statute made 30 Car. II.) such Dissenters, I say, are not to be presented. But if you know of any such, as under pretence of being Dissenters, abstain from going either to Church, or to separate Assemblies, you may well present them, and put it upon them to prove that they have qualified themselves, as is required. And this, without Offence even to Dissenters, if they are good and serious People: For the Law was not made to encourage Irreligion, but for the Ease of Tender Consciences; not to tolerate Men that would not worship God at all, but such as could not be brought (Unhappy People they!) to worship Him, in the way of the Church of England. I cannot choose but thank God, that I have not many Dissenters, within my Diocese; And yet I should be glad to hear their Numbers were increased, by the Addition of all such, as constantly pass away the Lord's Day, either in doing nothing, or in doing their private and domestick Affairs, or in walking about their Grounds, or in what they call good fellowship: that is, I had rather they were of some, than of no Religion; and would worship God in any Congregation, by Law permitted if they will not do it, in our good way, by Law establish'd.

2. Are there any who follow their Callings, or other worldly Employment, upon the Lords-Day?

2. If the Covetousness of Gain, and the Hardheartedness of many Men, were not strangely great, such an Enquiry as this, could not, in a Christian Country, be, in any degree, necessary. The Mercy of the Fourth Commandment was to extend, we know, to all the Family, even to the Servants, and the Cattel without doors, for fear they should be over-wrought. And because the Servants were, heretofore, much in their Masters Power, it was ordain'd (in the days of our Saxon Ancestors) that if a Master commanded his Slave to work on Sunday, the Slave was to be set at Liberty, and the Master punish'd by Fine: and if he wrought upon that Day, without Command, he was to be publicly scourged. And, that there might be no pretence of Necessity for doing any other worldly Business on this Day but what was charitable, or needful for the Life and Ease of Man, not even for killing and providing Victuals for the Family, it was ordain'd, that Saturday should generally be the Market-Day for all Christians; and it has, accordingly, been so, in most Countries, for upwards of 900 Years, as appears from our Books: tho' other Days are also Market-Days in many places, for some particular Reasons. Now if the Laws, both of God, and of the Land, prohibit Men the following their Callings, and other worldly Employments on the Lords-Day, not only for the Servants and the Cattles sake, that they might rest from their Labours; but also to distinguish it from other Days, and to give all People Opportunities and Leisure of serving God, and looking after the Concerns of Religion, and securing their eternal Interest, by offering up their Prayers and Praises, by hearing, and attending to, God's Word, and taking their Lives into Examination: if these, and the like, are proper Exercises for the Lords-Day — it is to be hoped, that the People will be brought to think, that not their worldly Labours, and the following their proper Callings only, will be Hindrances and Impediments to these good Sunday-Works; but all such rude and boisterous Playings, Games, and Exercises, as quite transport the Mind, from serious sober Considerations; consume abundance of their Time; tempt them to Swear and Curse; and either end in Quarrels, or in drunken Associations, and loose Appointments. These, and the like ungodly Works of Riot and Excess, are of much worse consequence, and more profane the Lords-Day by a great deal, than the following lawful Callings and Employments would; and, certainly, the Ways that naturally lead to them, should be most carefully avoided. The Book of Sports it self, (which was but a Declaration put out by James I. and afterwards unhappily reviv'd in the Days of K. Charles, his Son) as odious, and licentious as it was esteem'd, did yet prescribe such Rules, as I should be glad were now observ'd, in some places, in Honour of the Lords-Day. No Liberties were allowed (by that Proclamation, or Declaration) but with these Conditions and Restrictions: 1. That the Men and Women should have been at Divine Service. 2. At their own Parish Churches. 3. To have no Liberty till after Evening Service was ended. 4. The People that belong'd to One Parish were not to join in Recreation with the People of Another Parish, but each to keep to their own Company.

I confess, I cannot see, but, if innocent, modest, and moderate Recreations, are to be allowed upon the Lord's Day, that any better Limitations, and Conditions can be set to Peoples Liberties, than these. And therefore till the People can be brought to consider things better, and betake themselves to wiser Counsels, let care be taken, that these idle Hours be pass'd with as little offence as can be, to Virtue and Religion: and that if any thing be done, at such Times, as the Laws and Canons will take hold of; let the Offenders be certainly taken notice of, and pursued to Extremity. The Laws forbid all Swearing, Cursing, Drunkenness, and Reveling: it will be hard for those who meet (to take their Pastimes) on these Occasions, to avoid the falling into some of these Offences. Let not a Man of them be spared; make the severest Examples of them, that the Laws will allow; make it a shameful, or a painful, or a chargeable thing, to swear an Oath, to utter a Curse, or to be Drunk, or to use any wanton Dalliance, on these Occasions, and you will quickly see an End of these Assemblings: it will be so uneasy a thing, to be upon the guard, so long, in a suspected Company, that they will either refuse to meet at all, or will soon break the Meeting up; and, either way, be inoffensive; I think the Laws that punish these Offences, may, by this means, be made as useful, as if they did directly threaten and forbid such Meetings, which are the Occasions of them, and Incitements to them. And those will be to be blamed, who shall not contribute to put them in Execution, when there is good Reason.

There is another innocent and artful way of cutting short at least, if not preventing, these unseasonable Recreations. And that is, of not going so soon to Evening Prayer, as ordinarily is done, and lengthening out the Time, when there, by Catechizing the young People. A prudent Man, may, by these means, steal an Hour from these disorderly Folks, and give it them again, in something better for them. But how much happier would it be, both for the Minister, and for themselves, if these young People, would be brought to consider seriously, that these their idle Hours (as they account them) are, generally speaking, the only Hours they have, of all their Life, to spend in good Reflexions and Religious Meditations; to bethink themselves of what is past, and to resolve upon Amendment for the future. The Excuse they make, is, that they have no other time for Recreations, but the Sunday Evenings. I doubt it is not true; I have not heard, the People of our Countries, are so famed for diligence, and painful Labours, all the Week long. But, if we take them at their Word, let us also ask them what time they have, besides the Sunday Evenings, for attending to their Spiritual Concerns? When else they recollect their past Miscarriages? When they consider to what purpose they were sent into this World? In what manner they have led their Life in it? And whither they are hastning every Day? And what account they shall be able to give to God, when he shall summon them, by Death, to appear before him? They are, daily, call'd up early in the Morning by their Labours; and they return late from them, in the Evening; and very weary we may well presume. The rest of their Time is spent in Eating, Drinking, and Refreshing of themselves; after which, as soon as their Fathers, or their Masters, will permit, they hasten them to Bed, and fall to Sleep immediately. Hear, O Father of unbounded Mercies, and incline thine Ear to all who pray for those that pray not for themselves; who let the Sun rise every Day, and set upon their Heads, without remembering their Creator, their Redeemer, and their Judge! And is not this the daily and the weekly course, of most Uneducated, Poor, and Labouring People? And how much ought they, then to value Sunday, which gives them easy Opportunities of praying to God, and praising him, of hearing and attending to his Word, of confessing their Sins, imploring his forgiveness, and of asking every thing they stand in need of? How little a part of such a Day, can they afford to lose, who have taken so little care, the six foregoing Ones? I am not, I must own, for pressing a precise and rigorous Observation of this Day, nor for filling Peoples Heads with false and Jewish Notions of its Sanctification. But I would have it carefully observed; the Time allotted for the Church, with Gravity, with Seriousness, and all Devotion; part of the rest, in sober Recollections, good Instructions of our Families, and reading some good Book; the other part, in such Discourse, Visit, or Friendly Entertainment, as is consistent with Sobriety, and Vertue, and Religion. Christianity is a most sweet, good-natur'd Institution, and will allow all easy, inoffensive Freedoms, even upon its highest Festivals, or its most Solemn Fasts. But let all Rude and Riotous Assemblings; all Clamorous Sports, and boistrous Exercises, and all undecent Liberties both of the Hand and Tongue, be banish'd from this Day of Rest, and Holiness. The Article forbids a Man, to work his own Works, on this Day, much more the Works that lead so easily to Sin, and most of all, the acknowledged Works of Darkness.

3. Are there any who refuse or neglect to send their Children and Servants to be Instructed in the Principles of the Christian Religion, by the Minister of your Parish, every Lord's-Day, at Evening Prayer?

3. It is the Duty of Parents, and of Masters, to send their Children, and Servants, to be instructed in the Principles of the Christian Religion; nor can they do either them, or themselves, any greater Service, than in so doing. They make them thereby wise to Salvation; and put them in the way of being useful here, and happy hereafter. The Children that are best instructed, are like to be most dutiful and obedient to their Parents; and the Servants that are best taught, are like to be most just and honest to their Masters. Why should they not therefore, take all care, to have them well instructed in the Christian Duties? Children and Servants are very apt to give false Answers, to conceal Truths, and invent Lies, to save themselves from Blame and Punishment. They are apt to take what is none of theirs, to gratify some present longing they have; very apt to mispend their Time, either in Idleness or Vicious Pleasures, to feed which, they often defraud their Superiors, either by selling their Goods underhand, or by keeping back part of the Price they have received, or by buying too dearly for them; and by many other ways making advantage of their Ignorance. Now there is no way so likely to keep Children and Servants, from falling into these Offences, and to make them Just, and True, Honest, Faithful, and Conscientious, as the instructing them, and causing them to be instructed in the Principles of the Christian Religion, which forbids all these wicked Practices, and secures to all Parents, the Duty and Obedience of their Children; to all Masters, the just Gains of their Servants Time and Labour; and to all People, the Truth and Honesty and Justice of each other. And nothing but Religious Principles can make Men truly honest, at all Times, and in all Cases. And if People are not taught these Principles when young, they hardly ever learn them to good purpose. This is the Reason the Church insists so much upon the sending Children and Servants to be Catechised; 'tis for the Publick Good, as well as for their own; the whole Parish is the better for dutiful Children and honest Servants; and much the worse for Disobedient, False, Lying, and Theevish Ones. Such therefore as neglect, or refuse to send their Children and Servants to be Catechis'd are very fit to be presented, in order to their Reproof and Punishment.

4. Have you any in your Parish not yet Baptized?

5. Are there any who have been Baptiz'd, and likewise Instructed in the Church-Catechism, and yet have not been Confirmed by the Bishop?

6. Are there any Confir'm'd, and above Sixteen Years of Age, who do not receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, at least three times in the Year, and particularly at Easter?

4, 5, 6. I suspect none can come under this 4th Article, but the Children of Quakers, and Anabaptists (if their Parents died whilst they were young) but if there be any others not Baptized, they ought to be discovered, that due care may be taken to have them instructed, and then Christened. After this, when they come to Years of Understanding, they are to be Confirmed by the Bishop, and if above Sixteen Years of Age, are obliged to communicate three times in the Year at least. The Children of Believers enter into Covenant with God, by Christ, in Baptism, before indeed they understand what any Covenant means, or what is required of those who are to be Baptized; and they are made, thereby, Members of Christ, Children of God, and Inheritors of the Kingdom of Heaven, without knowing there are any such Persons, Things, or Place. This is a Wonder of Mercy upon God's part; for the Church assures us that—It is certain by God's Word, that Children, which are Baptized, dying before they commit actual Sin, are undoubtedly saved; In lieu of this, the Children, promise on their parts, but promise by their Sureties, without knowing it, to renounce the Devil and all his Works, to believe in God, and to serve him, (i.e. they promise Faith, Repentance, and Obedience) which promise, when they come to Age, themselves are bound to perform. This coming to Age, is coming to Years of Discretion and Understanding; as soon as they come to discern between Right and Wrong, Good and Evil, and know what is commanded and what forbidden. A Child's Knowledge and his Duty grow together. His understanding is not to be measured by his Years, nor by his Memory, but by his sense of things, and apprehension: And some young ones, we see, will sooner by much than Others, find out their Obligations to God and Man, and set about discharging them. It is then the apprehending what Vows and Promises of Faith, Repentance, and Obedience, their Sureties have laid them under, that is indeed the coming to Age, which binds these young People to perform them: i.e. as soon as they understand their Christian Duties, they must needs engage to discharge them. Now the business of Confirmation on the Childrens part, is the renewing and confirming with their own Mouth, the Promise and Vow which was made by their Godfathers, in Baptism; and acknowledging themselves bound to believe and perform, what was then undertaken for them. I should therefore, be glad that none were brought to Confirmation, but such as may be well supposed to have some Sense and Understanding of what they undertake, and not be able barely to answer to the Questions of the Catechism. I hope that no Body will think himself not bound to perform his Baptismal Vows, because he has not solemnly undertaken to do so, by being confirm'd: Whether People are confirm'd or no, they are under the same Obligations to perform those Vows. Confirmation is by no means necessary or essential to Baptism; nor compleive of it. 'Tis an excellent Institution of the Church, and serves to very good purposes, but it is no Sacrament; and therefore those who have not slighted, and neglected it, but wanted it, either through Ignorance, or lack of Opportunity, need not be much concern'd, altho' they have receiv'd the Lord's Supper, without being Confirm'd. It is sufficient (in the want of Opportunity) that Men be ready for it, and desirous of it, where and when it may be had. And for such as have received the Lord's Supper without it, they are presumed to have done already all that Confirmation supposes, they should do, and therefore are not proper Subjects of it. Such therefore as have received the Lord's Supper, should not come to Confirmations. But when things go Regularly, the Children that have been Baptiz'd, are to be brought to Church and there Catechiz'd, and instructed in the Principles of the Christian Religion, and when they have a Reasonable Sense and Understanding of them, are to be brought to the Bishop and Confirm'd, and, after that, are, at convenient Opportunities, to receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The Church supposes them capable of this, at 16 Years of Age; some are so, before, and others not, even Years after that Age: But a certain time is to be named, and 16 is as likely an Age as any other. And they are call'd upon at that Age, because if they enter not, whilst Young, they put it off for many Years, and sometimes, do it not at all, till they come to die; whereas by entring early on this Duty, they engage betimes in a Course of Virtue and Religion, which strengthens them against the Temptations to which that warm Age is most liable, and secures them all their Lives after. This supposes also, that all young People should receive the Communion (the first time at least) from the Hands of their proper Minister, in their own Parish Church, which is a thing I would have observ'd; he is indeed the best Judge of their Capacity, and of their due Preparation.

7. Is any Part of the Stock of the Church, or any Legacy Bequeathed to Pious or Charitable Uses, perverted, or concealed, or otherwise employed than was intended by the Donor, and is it in such Hands as are esteemed Responsible? And do you know of any Augmentations of Vicarages or Curacies? When were they made, and by whom are they Registered, and made as Records, as the Law requires?

7. A Man cannot falsify his Trust, with more Injustice and Wickedness in any Instance, than in perverting and concealing the Legacies bequeath'd by good People, to the Benefit of Parishes, and Charitable Uses; nor does any thing so discourage the Living, from designing and performing these good Works, like the seeing the Charitable Benefactions of the Dead, abused or misemployed, if not converted to private Use. No Man can therefore exercise his Zeal, or take Pains on a better Occasion, than in seeing all such Gifts and Legacies employed and put to the Uses intended by the Donors; and in detecting all such Works of Darkness, as would frustrate and make void the good Intentions of those Pious Benefactors. The Church-wardens must therefore bestir themselves, and see that in every Parish, there be a good Book, wherein the Names of their Benefactors are enrolled: The Time when they died; the Clauses or Parts of their Wills, by which they bequeathed either Money, Land, or Houses, carefully transcribed, and well attested; together with a full Account where those Houses and Lands lie; and what they are truly worth; how bounded, and in whose Hands they are, and were. But they must take especial care of Money (which is more perishable, and liable to loss than either Land or Houses) that it be put into such Hands, as are secure and most responsible; they must trust no Man's Word or Promise, but must have Bond: they must let it continue in no Man's Hand, for fear, or Friendship, without such Security as the Laws allow, and require. All these things should be fairly written, that they may be known to all that are concern'd, and be Instructions to the succeeding Trustees, and indeed to all Posterity. These things are to be well look'd after, and the Church-wardens must present according to the particular Branches of this Article: And, if they should be negligent, the Clergy will, I hope, discover what they know of these Particulars; that we may, all of us, use our best Endeavours, to discountenance all Unrighteous Dealings, and secure the Benefactions of those who are gone before, according to their good Intentions, and encourage Others to do the like.

8. Are there any Wills of Persons Deceas'd, Concealed, or Unproved?

9. Are any Goods, of Persons Dying Intestate, Administred without lawful Authority?

8, 9. The Concealing, and not proving of Wills, will always make it suspicious, that some Injury is intended to be done to some Parties, that are concern'd: For he who intends honestly, cometh to the Light; and what he does will bear the Light. The Deceased had a Right to dispose of what was theirs, to what Persons, and in what manner they saw fit. 'Tis therefore a piece of great Injustice to deprive them of this Right, and 'tis downright stealing from those to whom the Deceased had left anything, to deprive them of that advantage, by concealing a Will, and to transfer it to other People who have no Right to it; this is robbing both the Dead and Living. The not proving a Will, does not always intend or do the same Mischief as concealing it, for the Parties concern'd, may have the Advantages intended them in the Will, tho' the Will is not proved, to save Charges. But tho' this may sometimes happen, yet the Law would leave no place for fraud and underhand dealing, and therefore knows no difference betwixt concealing a Will, and not proving it: And how shall any one come to know, whether he is, or is not concern'd in such a Man's Goods or Estate, but by the Probate of his Will, which is a Publick Act, and done by a Publick Officer, to which all People may recur, without enquiring of an Heir or Executor, whose interest it may be to keep them ignorant? There is also room for great Injustice to be done, by Persons taking upon them to Administer the Goods of such as die without Wills, who have no Authority to do so; this the Law would remedy, by putting it into the Hands of the Ordinary and his Officers to give out Letters of Administration, to such as have most right to them, and who are likeliest to administer with most Justice and Honesty. And the Laws making these Officers accountable for their Male-administration, there is a great deal of Reason, that no Body else should take upon them, to do their Work, without Authority. To do all Right therefore, both to the Living and the Dead, the Church-wardens are to present all such, as they know, or hear, by common fame, have either conceal'd any Will, or have not proved any Will, or have administred the Goods of any one who died without a Will, without lawful Authority, empowering them to do it.

10. Are there any who refuse to Pay their Rates to the Repair of the Church and providing Books and other Necessaries for the Service of Almighty God?

10. There is no need of shewing the Reasonableness of all Peoples contributing to the bearing a Common Burthen, it is of it self, so plain; there should not therefore be so much trouble given to the Officers, as I hear there is in collecting these Duties: But since nothing else will make these People wiser, Presentments must.

11. Are there any in your Parish, whom you know to be common Swearers, Cursers, or Drunkards, or to live in Fornication, Adultery, or Incest, or to lie under the common Fame of such horrid Crimes?

11. Few or no People want to be convinced, that these are great and odious Sins, and fit to be punish'd, as Job says, by the Judge. The Guilty do not, that I hear of, defend their own Practices; nor is there any Advocate appears on their behalf; the Judges, I believe, Ecclesiastical and Secular, are ready and inclin'd to punish, and the Laws have taken all care imaginable to give them Power. From whence, then, can proceed the Impunity of these Offenders? Why, only, from the want of Accusers. This is part of the Church-wardens Office, and I know not how they will acquit themselves of a great deal of Guilt, and of partaking of other Peoples Sins, but by presenting such as they know are guilty of these provoking Offences; or such as by common Fame lie under such Imputations. Great indeed is the Envy and Malice of some People; and great is the Carelessness of others, in their Behaviour; and others are of weak Judgment, and over Credulous, and apt to take up things by halves, and to misconstrue many others, and willing to find out faults. And from these Springs arise a great many Calumnies and Slanders, that spread an evil fame, on many People that are innocent: and therefore care is to be taken that Credit be not given to loose and idle Reports, nor every thing that is said to Peoples prejudice be look'd upon as common Fame, or a ground of Accusation: But when there is so much Reason, as moves good and honest People to believe and report such things of their Neighbours, who are not otherwise apt to take up Slanders, and ill Speeches against them, there is then Reason enough to present upon Common Fame. For, Scandal and Offence are apt to arise where such Reports go current, without Control or Notice taken, by such as are concern'd to look after such Offences. And after all, as bad as the World is, there are but few, who are reputed Common Swearers, Cursers, or Drunkards, or who are said to live in Fornication, Adultery, or Incest, that are altogether wrong'd by Common Fame: The Conduct of such People must be very faulty indeed, that gives occasion to such Reports, when there is no true Cause for them; and even for that, they are Responsible.

TITLE III.

Concerning Church-wardens and Parish-Clerks.

1. Are your Church-wardens Chosen every Year, according to the Law and Custom of the Parish?

1. The Office of a Church-warden, if well discharged, is not only of great use, but carries a considerable deal of trouble with it; and therefore, except some few Priviledg'd Persons, no one is, ordinarily, exempted from bearing it. They are chosen every Year, that no one should be too long burthened with it; and tho' some Men hold it two, or three, or more Years, yet they are to be sworn anew into it, every Year, and if they are not so, are not legal Church-wardens. They must be chosen every Year in Easter-week, by the Minister and Parishioners; but if they cannot agree, or if the Custom has been otherwise, the Minister chooses one, and the Parish another, and in some Places, both are chosen by the Parish.

2. Have the former Church-wardens given up their Accounts, and delivered the Money, or what else they had belonging to the Church, into the Hands of the present Church-wardens?

2. That the Old Church-wardens should give up their Accounts, and deliver what Money and Church-Utensils they have, into the Hands of their Successors, is very Reasonable, not only to shew they have been honest and faithful Stewards for the Parish, but that the Parishioners may see how the Rates and Sums of Money gathered from them, have been expended and laid out; and know, either what they still owe, or what is left over and above for the New Church-wardens. These Accounts are for the Satisfaction of the Parish, for the Credit and Discharge of the Old Officers, and for help and information to the New: And where they are neglected to be given up, the People will have great Reason to think themselves cheated and ill used.

3. Is fine White-Bread, and wholesome Wine provided against every Communion, according to the Number of the Communicants, by the Curate and Church-Wardens, at the Charges of the Parish?

3. I understand that in some places of this Diocese, there hath been a Custom, that the Minister should be put to provide Bread and Wine for all the Communicants at Easter, which are probably more, than communicate all the Year besides, to his very great Expence. I am sure there could be no Reason good enough to introduce such a Custom at first, nor is there any good enough to continue it on; and therefore I resolve to have it alter'd, as being expressly against the Rubrick, and the Laws of the Land. I have reason to think the Custom is not of long date or standing; but be it of what date it will, it is, and always was Oppression; why must the Clergy of those Places, be so ill distinguish'd from the rest of their Brethren throughout Her Majesties Dominions? For such a Custom prevails no where else. I wonder how the Clergy came to suffer, or submit to it, at first, and did not use the Remedy that God had put into their Hands, namely the Law, to repel such an Injustice: But it must be suffered no longer; the last Law is not yet fifty Years old, that (by confirming the Rubrick) expressly says, The Bread and Wine for the Communion, shall be provided by the Curate, and the Church-wardens, at the Charges of the Parish. And the Rubrick just before supposes the same thing—And if any of the Bread and Wine remain unconsecrated, the Curate shall have it to his own Use. If the Curate (which in all these places is the Rector, or Vicar to whom the Cure of the Parish is committed) were supposed to find the Bread and Wine at his own Charges, how improper had it been, to have given him what no one else could have any Right to? Whereas 'tis now given him, altho' it was indeed the Parishes, who paid for it. And if it be affirmed, that this Custom only relates to the finding the Bread and Wine at Easter, let it be answered, that the Law makes no difference betwixt Easter and Whitsontide, or any other time: For, the very next Rubrick that follows says—And Note, That every Parishioner shall communicate, at the least, three times in the Year, of which, Easter to be one; and therefore commands the Bread and Wine to be furnish'd at the Charges of the Parish, at Easter as much as at any other time. The Church-wardens therefore, will, I hope, be quickly convinced, how unrighteous such a Practice is, and how directly contrary to the Law of the Land; and do herein as they ought to do, and as all the Parishes in England do, and always have done: And, if they will not, must expect to be proceeded against, according to Law, with all severity.

4. Have you a Parish-Clerk of the Age of 21 Years, of Sober Life, and well Qualified for his Office?

5. Is he Paid his accustomed Salary, Dues, and Perquisites, belonging to his Place?

6. Doth he keep the Church clean, and carefully look to the Books, and all Things committed to his Charge?

7. Doth he Open and Shut the Church Doors at due Times, and Toll the Bell, or Bells, at the usual Hours before Prayers, that People may have sufficient warning to come to Church?

4, 5, 6, 7. 'Tis very fit that all who any ways relate to the Church, be of sober Life, and rightly qualified for their Office. The Parish-Clerks were heretofore in some low sort of Orders, and had their part in assisting at the Divine Service, and they still keep the Name of Clerici, and ought to be of exemplary and good Behaviour. And if they discharge their Office well, especially that part of it of keeping the Church clean, they will deserve, and ought to have their Salary duly paid, and none of their accustomed Perquisites withheld. But if they are negligent, or slovenly in their Churches, or live not soberly, they are to be presented, and if they are found incorrigible, they are to be removed from their Places, to make room for those who will live, and do their Business better.

TIT. IV

Concerning the Churches and Chappels, with their Possessions and Utensils.

1. Is your Church or Chapel, with the Chancel, and Tower, or Steeple in good Repair and decently kept within and without?

2. Is the Roof well covered, the windows well glaz'd, and the Floor kept well Pav'd, plain, and even?

1, 2. The Building, Repairing and Adorning Churches, was heretofore esteemed so meritorious a part of Religion, that our Forefathers had but little need of being constrain'd to look after it, by Laws and Injunctions. I do believe they sometimes placed too much Confidence in such Works, and look'd upon them as Attonements for great Offences. But what then? Is it not still an indication of an excellent Devotion, and of a Mind that truly honours God, and intends to promote his Service, to lay out Money upon such Occasions? There is nothing draws so near to Superstition, as an unreasonable dread of it. When the Rulers of the Jews would move our Saviour, in behalf of the Centurion's Servant, they come to him and tell him—He loveth our Nation, and hath built us a Synagogue, Luke 7. 5. And any one may foretel, without the Gift of Prophecy, that unless this bountiful good publick Spirit, prevail a great deal more among us, and be more encouraged; an hundred Years will bring to the Ground a large Number both of our Temples and of our Synagogues. In the mean time, all care imaginable must be taken, to keep them up in good Repair; that Men may serve God with Security, with Decency, and Cleanliness, and in the best Order; which things contribute, more than people think of, to the raising and maintaining their Devotion:—There is one thing, I observe, in the Churches I have seen among you, that wants to be amended; and that is, the great Unevenness of the Floors, occasion'd by the frequent Burials in the Churches. The way to remedy this, is to make it more chargeable, to break up Ground in Churches, than it now is; let such a Rate be set upon it, as will be sure to pay for the work of making the Ground even; and this, in time, may repress the Vanity and Pride (for such it undoubtedly is, in mean People) of burying the Dead within the Churches; a thing the Ancient Christians forbore to do, for more than 600 years, not only out of Reverence to those Places that were sacred to the Service of God; but out of Prudence also, that the Dead might not annoy the Living. However, till inconvenient Customs can be broken, let us make it as hard as we can to keep them.

3. Is your Church-yard sufficiently Fenced?

4. Hath any one encroached upon it, or cut down any Trees that were growing therein?

5. Have any Bells, Lead, Timber, or other Materials of your Church, or Chapel been embezzel'd, and by whom?

3, 4, 5. The Church-yard was first inclosed, and consecrated, to be the Common Burial-place of the Dead, and therefore is to be carefully fenced and look'd after, that no Indecencies may be committed in it, by such Beasts as are apt to root up the Earth, and sometimes uncover Dead Bodies. It is the Freehold of the Incumbent, and therefore must not be incroached upon: The Trees are planted there for Ornament, and Shelter, and for Repairing of the Chancel, and therefore are not to be cut down for any other use. The embezzelling of any Church-Materials, is just as much mischief and damage to the Parish, as they must be put to purchase the like, and therefore such Injustice, ought in all Reason, to be presented, in order to be prosecuted.

6. Have you a decent Font of Stone in your Church, for the Administration of the Sacrament of Baptism?

6. People were at first (especially if there was any great number of them) baptized in Rivers, Brooks, Ponds, or other Waters that they met with accidentally. But if single Persons, or private Families were to be Baptized, 'tis very likely it was done in private Houses, in some convenient Place or Vessel. St. Paul seems to have been so Baptiz'd himself, Acts 9. 17. and so to have Baptiz'd the Converted Jailor and his Houshold, Acts (sic) 16. 33. and in all likelihood, it was generally so in times of Persecution; the Christians (tho' bold to Death, when there was any necessary Call, and just Occasion) never causelessly provoking their Adversaries, either Jews or Gentiles, by publicly performing their Offices, when they could do it privately, with safety and the same advantage. But when God had turn'd the Hearts of the Governors towards them, and the Empire was in the Hands of Christians, they had liberty to do as they would, and they built great and costly Bap*tisteries* (or places to baptize in) sometimes adjoining to, sometimes near, the great Churches; and by degrees came to set up Founts in the manner we now have them, within the Church Doors; they were usually made of Marble, or the hardest Stone they could get, as well for Cleanliness, and Preservation, as that the Consecrated Water should not be sucked up by a Spongy, or less solid Vessel.

7. Have you a decent Table, commodiously placed in the Chancel, for the Celebration of the Holy Communion, with a decent Carpet always over it, and a fair Linen Cloth to cover it when there is a Communion?

8. Have you a Silver Chalice, with a Cover, and a Flaggon of Pewter, or purer Metal for the Wine, and also a Silver Plate for the Bread, with a fair Linen Cloth to cover the Consecrated Bread and Wine?

7, 8. All People who are seriously affected with the matters of Religion, do immediately fall into this Reckoning, that the greatest and most mysterious Duties of it, are to be performed, not only with the greatest Veneration and Aw of Mind, but with the greatest outward Honour and Solemnity. This Conclusion is, in it self, but reasonable and just; and yet, unless it be restrain'd, with great Prudence, it will grow into great Extravagance, and wonderful excess. The indulging to this thought had (in the Days of our Forefathers) loaded the Altars of the Churches with Silver, Gold, and Precious Stones, clothed the Priests with the finest and most costly Linnen, and embroidered Vestments; and fill'd their Wardrobes with such Wealth, that, probably, the very hope of spoiling them, was a Temptation to their Adversaries. In a word, the Blessed Sacrament was attended with so many gorgeous and surprizingly glittering Circumstances, that the good, plain, simple Duty, seem'd to be lost and smother'd with its own Pomp, and Ornaments. The Reformation set these Matters right again; restored Religion to its liberty, and free breathing, and ordained the Celebration of these holy Mysteries, in such a serious sober manner, so void of all unnecessary Pomp, and Ostentation, that a Man must have but little sense of decency and fitness, that is offended at it, on the score of Ceremony. Nothing but decency, and cleanliness is here injoyn'd; and I am throughly ashamed to think this cannot be obtain'd in many Places. What shall we say, when the Vessels of the Lord's House are of so course a Metall, that many People of the Parish could not eat and drink out of the like, at home? Let David speak to them, as he did to Nathan, 2 Sam. 7. 2. See now, I dwell in an House of Cedar, but the Ark of God dwelleth within Curtains. He was ashamed of it, and presently resolved to build a Temple. Some such Religious Ingenuity, will, I hope, at one time or another, provide becoming Receptacles for the Sacred Symbols, in places where that care is not already taken. But, what is wanting in Cost, let it be made up in Cleanliness. If the Paten, and the Chalice be not Silver, let them be bright, and sweet, however. Let the Table be decent; it is, on these Occasions, the Lord's Table. Let it be always covered with a decent Carpet: and when there is a Sacrament, with a fair Linen Cloath, with a fine Napkin also to cover the consecrated Elements; not to conceal them from the Peoples Eyes, or make these things mysterious; but to beget Respect, and a degree of Seriousness in their Minds on these Occasions, and to prevent some inconvenient Accidents. It is not, I think, enough, to say, that People are to approach this Holy Table, with clean Hands, and pure Hearts.—But there is all the need imaginable of raising up their Minds, quickning their Devotion, kindling their Affection, and fixing their Attention, at these solemn times, by all the innocent and artful Methods we can think on; to which I know of nothing that contributes more, than the performance of these Rites, in grave serious manner, in decent order, and with all the care and cleanliness that can be used.

9. Is there a convenient Reading-Desk and Pulpit?

10. Is there a comely Surplice provided and Washed at the Charge of the Parish?

11. Have you a large Bible of the last Translation, with Two Common-Prayer-Books, both in English and Welsh?

9, 10, 11. As to the reading Prayers in English, or Welsh, I refer you to what I have said concerning Preaching, Tit. I. A. 5. The Edification of the most is ever to be first in the Minister's Consideration.

12. Have you a Register-Book in Parchment?

13. Are all Persons who are Christened, Married or Buried in your Parish duly Registered therein from time to time?

12, 13. The Registering Peoples Christnings, Marriages, and Burials, hath often proved of great and useful Consequence. It hath help'd to determine Peoples Age; the Legitimacy of their Birth; and certainty of their Marriage, which otherwise might have been disputed; it hath intitled People to certain Benefits, that were appropriated to such and such Places, Towns, Hundreds or Counties; and it is, if kept with Care, and according to the Injunctions of the Canons, admitted for good Evidence, in Law; And moreover the Minister knows, by this Book, when People are Old enough to be call'd upon to prepare for the Communion. It is in truth of so much Use, that 'tis some wonder how it came not to be publickly injoyn'd till 1538 or thereabouts. They must have had something or other like it, before that time: for, many and notable Matters could not possibly be decided, without such Certificates.

14. Is the House of your Rector or Vicar, with the Barns, Stables, and all the Out-Houses kept in good Repair?

14. I have already spoken to the keeping the Incumbent's House in good Repairs Tit. I. A. 2. But I can pass by no Opportunity of insisting again upon it: it is so fit, so reasonable, so just, and necessary a Tie upon all Clergymen, that if they have any Sense of Honesty, or Gratitude to their Religious Founders and Benefactors, they will carefully discharge their Obligation; and have the same Regard to their Successors, which their Predecessors had, or should have had, to Them. By our Ecclesiastical Law the Bishops are required—To put the Clergy in mind of keeping their Houses in sufficient Reparations. But what if they neglect to do as they are bid? Why, if they do it not in two months time, the Bishop is to take care (by Sequestration of their Benefices) that it be done out of their Profits. Othob. f. 55. 2. But to save the Bishop and the Incumbent this trouble, it were much better, the Clergy would follow the Injunctions of King Edw. VI. in 1547, and the same repeated in 1559 by Queen Elizabeth, and set aside the fifth part of their clear Revenue for this Purpose, till all were finished, and afterwards to maintain them in good Condition, which a much less proportion would do. It has been resolved by the Judges in the Kings-Bench, 12 Jac. 1, that Dilapidation is a sufficient cause of Deprivation. I should be loath to find a Man fit to be made an Example, of this kind; but truly, I intend to look with much less pity on this Fault, than on many others; because I see that Pity to the present Incumbent, may very easily become Cruelty to his Widow, if she be sued by his Successor, and he recovers Damages of her; or great hardship to that Successor, if he recovers none, and finds his House in a ruinous Condition.

15. Has any Money been left or paid by any one, to repair the Incumbent's House, which has not been employed to that Use and Purpose?

15. A Man would be unpardonable, who should sue for Dilapidation-Costs, and should not expend, upon the Premises, what he recovered on that Score: He has two Years time allowed to do it in; but, after that, he forfeits to the Queen double to what was recovered but not applied to the proper use: If any such Fraud or Negligence be known, the Party guilty of it, is to be presented.

16. Have you a perfect Terrier in Parchment, specifying all Lands, Meadows, Orchards, Gardens Tenements and Cottages belonging to your Parsonage or Vicarage and shewing what Tithes, Portions of Tithes, or other Profits within and without your Parish, do belong unto the same?

17. Is one Copy of such a Register kept by the Minister of your Parish, and another delivered into the Bishop's Registry?

16, 17. The decay of Houses, Barns and Stables is a thing that falls under the Eye and Observation of all People that pass by them, and is therefore easily complained of, and may be prevented, or be made amends for; but the Incroachment upon Lands, Orchards and Gardens, may be done so insensibly, and by degrees that even the Party injured may not be immediately aware of it; or an Incumbent may by Compact or at least Connivance, take no notice of it; and so it passes from his Successors, without Recompence, and without Remedy, if it be not timely discovered. To prevent these Damages, and Diminutions of the Churches Revenue (whether they be occasioned by the Incumbent's Negligence or Naughtiness) it is required that an exact and well attested Terrier, be made of all Lands, Meadows, Orchards, &c., belonging to the Parsonage or Vicarage; and shewing what Tithes, Portions of Tithes, or other Profits within and without the Parish, do belong to the same. One Copy of this is to be put into the Hands of the Register of the Diocese, and another to be kept by the Incumbent of the Parish, and delivered to his Successors, for their continual Use and Information. I will take this Occasion to advise the Clergy of this Diocese, to write down all the Observations they shall make, in the course of their Ministry, concerning their Houses, Glebs, Tythes, Modus's, or whatever else they think useful and fitting to be known, and transmit them in a Book, to those who are to follow them; that they may give them all the Light they can, and prepare them against the Practices of a Set of Men, that are always apt and ready to impose on their New Minister. This I only say by way of Advice; but for the Terrier, I require it without fail, and will not be satisfy'd, till it be delivered to the Register; that all who shall hereafter have occasion to consult that Office, may be sure to find their Satisfaction, in these Matters; that the Clergy may run into no inconvenience by making New unusual Claims themselves, nor suffer the Church to be despoiled of what appears to have been formerly its Right, by others. And I hope the Ignorance in which abundance of Incumbents live of these matters, will convince them how needful it is, to have a Terrier to inform them, and to which they may appeal.

TIT. V.

Concerning Hospitals, School-masters, Physicians, Chirurgeons, and Midwives.

1. Is there in your Parish any Hospital, Almshouse, or Free-School?
2. What Revenue belongs to each of them?
3. Are they Governed, and the Revenue employed according to the Will of the Donors?

1, 2, 3. Something I have said already on this Head, under Tit. II. A. 7. But that related chiefly to private Legacies. These Articles refer to Publick Charities, such as Hospitals, Alms-houses and Free schools. The Enquiries are, what is the Revenue belonging to them? And, how it is employed? The way in many Places of England, is, to have the Names of all their Benefactors written in fine large and fair Hand, and set up in handsome Frames, in such a part of the Parish Church, as is most conspicuous, and easiest to come at, where all may read—In what year, such a Person died, and left such a Sum of Money to such and such Uses: or, so much Land, or Houses to this or that Purpose. By this means, all the Parish come to know their publick Benefactors, commemorate them with praise, and glorify God for them: and by these means they come to understand, who are qualified for Hospitals and Alms houses and what their Allowance is to be, and whence it is to come. I think such a Custom as this might be followed very usefully, in Wales, it being naturally fitted to prevent the Misapplication, Abuse or perverting of Publick Charity. But, whatever other Courses may be taken to secure the employing these Benefactions according to the Donor's Will, the Bishop, as the general Overseer of all good Works within his Jurisdiction, is to enquire, whether they are indeed employed, and used, as they ought? And to that purpose, every honest good Churchwarden, will contribute all he can, by making honest, true and faithful Answers to these Articles: And should they fail, in this their Duty, I question not but the Incumbents will do all Justice to themselves, and me; and indeed to all the Dead and Living, that are concern'd in these Benefactions.

4. Doth any one in your Parish Teach School publicly or privately, without License from the Ordinary?
5. Doth the School-master come to Church himself, and cause his Scholars also to come duly at the Times of Divine Service?
6. Doth he diligently instruct his Scholars in the Church-Catechism?
7. Do any in your Parish practice Physick, or Chyrurgery, or undertake the Office of a Midwife, without License?

4, 5, 6, 7. 'Tis of great Consequence, both to the Parents, and the Children (not to mention here the Commonwealth) what sort of Men are trusted with the Education of young People. And therefore the Laws of the Land, which acknowledge, own, and encourage no Other Church-Government, but what is Episcopal (tho' they both tolerate, and defend from Penalties, all that dissent from it, and call themselves Protestants) will have no School-master, either publick or private, but what shall be allowed and licens'd by the Bishop, 23 Eliz. c. 1. §. 6. and 1 Jam. l. c. 4 and 14 Ch. 11. c. 4 and Canon 77. 79 and altho' these Laws are of much elder Date than the Act of Toleration: yet whoever shall read it carefully, will find they are not, in this particular, voided and annull'd by it. Statutes are not removed by Construction, Consequences, or imagined Inferences, but by express and positive Revocation and

Repeal of them. And therefore no Body has yet leave to teach Scholars, but such as shall be licens'd thereto, by the Bishop, all Others are, and ought to be presented, and are as liable to Penalties as formerly they were.

TIT. VI.

Concerning Church Officers.

1. HATH any Church-Officer, Register, Proctor, or Apparitor exacted more than their ordinary and legal Fees?
2. Have any of them for any Reward, excused, or unduly Dismissed any Offender that hath been Presented?
3. Hath any Apparitor Cited any Person unlawfully, without a Citation first had from the Court?
4. Hath any taken a Reward for concealing any Offence, or avoiding the Punishment of the Offender?
5. What Commutations have you heard have been paid by Offenders, and to whom, since the last Act of Grace, in 1709?

1, 2, 3, 4, 5. The Corruption and Exaction of Ecclesiastical Officers is very carefully to be looked after, presented, and pursued to Punishment. That those who are employed in correcting the Abuses, and Enormities of Others, may by no means escape themselves, if guilty. And, to this end, if any one be afraid to make a publick Presentment of their Offences, let them take care to give me notice in as private manner as they will (but with all truth and certainty) wherein they are aggrieved; that Order may be taken for their Redress, and the Removal of such Offenders.

HAVING gone through these Articles in the plainest and most useful manner I could think on, I have now a few things to say to you distinctly, my Brethren of the Clergy; they have not, indeed, any Relation to the Articles foregoing, but I fasten them to them, for the better conveyance of them, and that you might have them always by you. I have had (and shall again have, when it pleases God) occasion to Ordain Priests and Deacons, and to Collate, and Institute, to Benefices when they shall be vacant, in my Diocese, such as I shall judge to be duly qualified: But I must, in a great measure, depend upon the Testimonials of the Clergy, for the Virtue and good Behaviour of such as come either to be Ordain'd or Instituted by me; because I cannot be presumed to know them personally myself. My Request is therefore to you all, that before you give your Hands to any one's Letters Testimonial, you would seriously consider these few following Particulars.

First, Whether you are personally acquainted with the Party to be recommended by you; or only Subscribe upon the Credit of those you write under; and think with yourselves, if this last part, be fit to offer to your Bishop, either in Conscience, or good Breeding?

Secondly, Whether, if you are personally acquainted with the Party, you are truly perswaded that he is indeed what you have represented him, in your Certificate; I do not mean in the most rigorous and exact Interpretation of Words, according to the Letter, but in such a fair and equitable Sense, as wise and honest People take them, and use them in their Intercourse with one another?

Thirdly, Altho' the Party may be honestly recommended by you, as a Person both of good Learning, and good Manners, yet whether you truly think him fitly qualified for the Order of Priesthood, or of a Deacon, or for such a Benefice, or Cure, as the Letters Testimonial are design'd to recommend him to. For, certainly, a Man may be a good Scholar, and a good Man, and yet not fit to be ordain'd a Priest or Deacon, by reason of some Imperfections. And a Man may be a good Priest, and yet not fit for such or such a Cure, or Benefice, as it may happen, upon many Accounts. I think you cannot but see the Reasonableness of considering these few things, when you are sought to, for subscribing Testimonials. And I would have you (if you please) imagine I am by, and wanting to be satisfied in those Demands; and that you give by your Subscription the same account, you would to me in Person. But, it were better still, if you would seriously reflect upon the Mischief you may do, and on the guilt you may contract your selves, by leading me into Mistakes, and causing me, by giving Credit to your Names, to put unworthy People into the Ministry, or to prefer unworthy Ones to Benefices, Cures, or Schools. How will you answer this, to God, to Me, or to the Places where these People must officiate, who may be greatly injured by these means, and that for many Years? I intreat you therefore, by the Power of these Considerations, not to suffer your selves to be corrupted, by the facility of your Temper, your Easiness and good Nature, by Importunity, by Friendship, or the Fear of any Man, nor by the hopes of receiving the like favour, to give your Name to any one's Certificate or Letters Testimonial, unless you secretly, and in your Heart, approve of what you say therein. I cannot ask less (nor do I ask any more) than that you would not induce Me to believe of Men, what you do not your selves truly believe of them. It may be, that some of you will think these Terms are hard, and hinder you from paying Acts of Friendship and Civility to one another, by making it so difficult to subscribe your Names, upon Occasion. In answer to this, I say, let Truth and Justice go along with Friendship and Civility, and then the more of them the better. But where those things are separated, Civility to Men is Rudeness, Injury, and Mischief to Religion; and such a Friendship of the World is, as S. James tells us, Enmity to God. One of my Aims is indeed, hereby to have the Clergy live in Friendly awe, and Respect of one another; that they may so behave themselves both to their Brethren, and their People, that when there is occasion for a Character, it may be both unreasonable and unjust, to refuse a good one, to each other. There will be always room enough (in spite of all the care that can be taken) for the Partialities of Acquaintance, Neighbourhood, and Inclination, to take place, in Letters Testimonial: and therefore I have no apprehension of creating any misunderstanding among the Clergy, by requiring this Exactness at their Hands. I only hope to stir up such a jealousy among them, that, unless they live virtuously and studiously, they shall despair of getting their Neighbours Hand and Approbation, when they stand in need of it; without which, they will, in vain, attempt to make their way to any Favours I can shew them. I will always pay, you may be sure, that Deference that is due, to the Characters the Gentlemen of the Laity think fit to give the Clerks they now and then Recommend to me. But I, who am convinced that the Clergy know each other much better, and in another manner, than most Gentlemen can do, shall never be content to take a Clerk on trust, without the Testimonials of his Neighbouring Brethren of the Ministry. And therefore let it be a Rule among you, that you make your selves as valuable as you can, each to the Other; for, certainly, the Esteem you shall derive from thence, will be of greatest use and service to you.

I press this matter of an honest, true, and Conscientious Subscription of Letters-Testimonial, with a more than common Zeal and Fervency, not only because I am obliged to do it, by the Canons, and Injunctions of my Superiour Metropolitan, but from a little Indignation I have also had, to find myself presented with some Certificates, well sign'd and seal'd indeed, but which I thought, had little Regard to truth in them. I have forgotten, and shall to all Intent and Purposes forget, those Names, if they do not refresh my Memory by coming again in my way upon the like false Errand: I promise my self they never will; and hope that when ever you subscribe your Names to Letters-Testimonial, you will not fail to make some Conscience (as we say) of imposing on your Bishop; who has it in his Heart (and bows his Knees, in Thanks, to Him that put it there) to do you all the good he can, according to the measure of his Skill and Power.

Another thing, wherein I would require your Care and Caution, is in the matter of Titles. A Bishop is not allowed by the Canons, to ordain any One, without a Title, i.e. unless he has a Right to some means of Livelihood and Subsistence either by an Estate in his own Hands, or by way of Recompence for doing Duty. If He neglect this Rule, he is, it seems obliged to provide the Party so ordain'd some Place in the Church, and to furnish him with all Necessaries till he has done it, Can. 33. The Wisdom of this Rule may appear, in part, by the Infamy and Scandal which those few miserable Men bring upon the Church, who stroll about the World like Impudent and Vagrant Beggars; and shew their Orders for a Pass, to license them as it were, to do their Sacred Function all the dishonour they can; this Canon would prevent these Scandals, in great measure, by forbidding such to be ordain'd, who have no present settled maintenance, nor are in any near and reasonable prospect of one. You know the Bishop of this Diocese is so great a Patron, that you can hardly bring a Title, for Ordination, but it must be the certainty of some Curacy, within his Patronage. Now I am very well assured, that not one Third part of the Benefices (I would I could not say Half) within my Jurisdiction, can bear the Charge of keeping a Curate: I would not therefore have the Rectors, or the Vicars of such poor Benefices pretend to give a Title of Curate, when every Body knows they have much to do to live themselves, upon their Profits. Age and Infirmities, and long continued Absence must indeed be evermore considered, as Reasons for the keeping Curates, even in small and poor Parishes; but those are Cases that cannot lie concealed from me. Where nothing of this happens, I intend not to admit such Promises of Curacies, for Titles. In a word, whatever Titles are offered me for Orders, shall be Real Titles. They, who certify to me, that they admit such or such a One, to be their Curate, shall certainly have him for their Curate, and shall pay him as their Curate, and that, not for the present turn, a Week or Month, or Quarter, but as long as I shall judge convenient. For since 'tis this Collusion that helps, above all other ways, to overstock the Church with Labourers, I think we cannot guard too much against it, where they are so little wanted. I desire, therefore, all that are concern'd, as well Rectors and Vicars, as those who shall come to be Ordain'd, to take this Intimation for a timely warning, what Certificates they send or bring to me; for I have told them what I will accept, and what shall find no place with me; and after this, they will owe their Disappointments to themselves, if they come not rightly qualified. I do also require them to give me a Fortnight's notice before the Ordination Sunday, that I may have time to enquire about them; and together with this Notice, to send me their Age, Country, College, Degree, and the Place where they have last lived, together with Letters Dimissory, if they belong to any other Diocese.

Another thing I have to mention to you, is, That all who are not discharged by Act of Parliament, from paying Tenths, should do it punctually, every Year, at the Time appointed. It was, before, an Act of Justice, and to be paid like other stated Taxes: But now it is become (through the unexampled Goodness of the Queen) an Act of Charity also to our poor Brethren of the Clergy, to whose Relief and Comfort it is designed and given. That Royal Bounty is, every Day, preparing, by wise Methods, to be made most useful and extensive. And I gladly take this Opportunity, of acquainting you, in short, how that Affair stands; that you may no longer wonder, nor causelessly complain, that the Fruits of so excellent a Design have hitherto appear'd so small. It is, I assure you, through no ones Fault, or Negligence: There is neither want of good Will, nor of Application, in the Parties concern'd, to whom these Matters are entrusted; but a most Noble and Religious Zeal appears, to answer the good Purposes for which they are incorporated. The yearly Revenue of the First-fruits and Tenths, did usually (at a Medium of 20 Years) amount to about 17000*l.* per Annum. But this was charged with Grants, and Pensions (and many of them for Life) to the amount of about 11000*l.* per Annum, besides an Arrear of upwards of 20000*l.* which was to be discharged, and has for some Years last past been, and is still discharging. From this Revenue there has been a Deduction made of something more than 3000*l.* per Annum, by discharging the Tenths of as many Small Livings (under 50*l.* per Annum) as amounted to that Sum. So that the 17000 is reduced to 14000, out of which the Grants and Pensions must be paid, which, by Death, and other prudent Methods of the Governours, are now also reduced to between 9 and 10000*l.* per Annum. So that, allowing a Decrease of First-fruits, by the foresaid Discharge of Small Livings, the Governours will not have (according to the best Computation I can make) above 3000*l.* per Annum to dispose of, till it pleases God to order otherwise. This is the State of the Revenue, when I have added, that there is a Debt of some Thousand Pounds to be Recovered, by the Governours, in some Reasonable Time. Now, whoever can consider the Incumbrances that lay, and yet do lie, upon this Revenue, and can conceive how intricate and perplex, Accounts of so many Years standing must needs be, and how difficult a thing it is, to settle great Designs of Charity in such a Method, at first, as shall not quickly call for Repentance and Alteration—Whoever can put these things together, will easily account for the Time that has already been spent, and for the little effect this gracious Benefaction of the Queen may seem as yet to have taken. Assure your selves, my Brethren, that where so many different Rules, and Methods, are, and must have been offered, and so many particular things of weight to be considered, before a Settlement can possibly be made to any purpose, the more time it takes in doing, the better it will certainly be done, when done. Delays, in this case, are not dangerous, but tend to more security. But, methinks, I need not make an Excuse, for the little that has been done; the Discharge of as many Livings from paying Tenths, as amounts to more than 3000*l.* per annum, is the having already given (at 20 years Purchase) upwards of Sixty thousand Pounds to the Poor Clergy. God of his Goodness, return it, into her Royal Bosom, Sixty thousand fold! This I have observ'd to you, a little (as it were) out of my way. The thing I at first intended was, to advise you to be punctual in your Annual Payments of Tenths, because this great and good Design will depend very much upon the ready payment of our Dues at the appointed time. And also because I intend, neither my Self, nor my Executors, shall run any hazard, by your Delays, or Nonsolvency. Whoever shall not punctually discharge his Tenths shall very punctually be return'd Nonsolvent to the Exchequer, and take his Fortune there. I have known such ill Effects of Pity, wrong placed, on these Occasions, that I will not venture them. And I hope this warning will suffice to prevent all such Miscarriages.

There is another thing, which I am going to desire of you, in which, I will own, my Curiosity has a great share; but which, I hope, may, some time or other, tend also to the Benefit of some Parishes. I desire to know the true Names of your Parishes, and if there be more Names than One. The Saints to whose Memory they were dedicated, and what Day the Wakes (if there be any) are kept. What Superstitious Usages are still observed by the Common People, under the Name of Antient Customs. How many Families there may be in the Parish, and what the Number of Communicants at Easter (in these things, I look not for exactness, but according to a reasonable way of reckoning, and general guess). How many Townships, what their Names, and to whom the Tithes of them are paid, and their reputed Valuation per Annum. And if you have any remarkable Monuments in your Churches, I should be glad you would transcribe them for me, at your leisure. These things, I hope, will not put you to much pains, to write in a Sheet of Paper, and offer them to me, at the Visitation; as also what ever you shall think fit to communicate to me, which you would not publickly present or complain of; if you Seal them up, I will take care they shall be still Seal'd to all besides my self, till it be fit to make them manifest, and, even then, it shall be to no one's prejudice.

I have now a few things to say to you, in general, and shall then put an end to these Papers, And,

First, I cannot choose but hope, that you do, every Day, either at Church or at your Houses offer to God, the continual Sacrifice of Prayer and Thanksgiving, as well for the long Life, and Health, and Preservation, and Prosperity of the Queen, as also for the manifold good Gifts, Virtues, and Graces, that we see Her exercise continually, and daily improving in. This we should, all of us, do, did Conscience of our Duty, only move us; but Her Deservings towards Us, are such, that Gratitude and Sense of Justice will constrain us to add all zeal and Fervour possible to our Devotions. God has, indeed, made Her a Nursing-Mother to the whole Nation, and given Her the Hearts of all Her People, in a fuller measure, than He has to any Prince, within our Memory; But yet her Birth, her Education, her Reason, Inclination and true Interest, must needs have fill'd her Heart, with all the favourable Prepossessions to the Church of England (above all) that even that Church could want, or wish for. And therefore, sure the Clergy of that Church will evermore be trying to distinguish it self, by Acts of Love, and Duty, and Obedience to her, if it be possible, above all other Subjects. Not in exalting Her Prerogative above what our Constitution allows; nor in asserting a Power, to which the Laws of the Land are Strangers, and know nothing of, (for that, my Brethren, is as well a Suare to Princes, as an Entanglement to Subjects), but in pressing, upon all Men, a dutiful and conscientious Obedience to Her Laws; by which the Honour and the Safety of Her Person and Government are best preserv'd. It is not for Princes to side with any Party, but to make use of all. They are the Common Parents of their Country, and will dispense their Justice with an equal hand to all; but they who best deserve, will share their Graces and their Favours in the greatest Plenty; And that, I hope, will ever be the Church of England, properly so called.

You do, in the next place, pray as constantly, in course, for the Princess Sophia, and you know the meaning of that is, for the Succession of the Protestant Line, in the Illustrious House of Hannover. There our Laws, have placed the Crown, and there our Prayers and our Endeavours, will, I hope, for ever keep it. We have had but two Popish Reigns, since the blessed Reformation of Religion; and both of them, were, God be thanked, of very short continuance: But what Alarms, what Disturbance and Distraction did they give, what mighty Mischiefs did they do this Kingdom? The first of them did cheaply pour, like Water on the Ground, the Blood of a World of innocent and harmless People, for no other Cause, but they could not against their Conscience, comply with Poperly. The Laws of the Land were then upon the side of that Cruel false Religion, and authorized the kindling those devouring Fires, that consumed so many Protestants. Inasmuch that if God, in his Mercy, had not shortened those Days, the Name of the Reformation had been no more in Remembrance. For 'tis in the Nature, 'tis interwoven in the frame and make of that furious Superstition, never to spare, what it calls Heresy, when it has the Power of destroying it: And I challenge all the World, to give an unexceptionable Instance to the contrary. Shall we ever run this Risk again? Will you not, all of you, say with me, God forbid that we should ever try again the Mercy of a Popish Govern- ment! I say the less of the other Popish Reign, because I trust to the Remembrance, and the Senses, of all Reasonable observing People. And I should despair of being much heeded, should I give any Caution for the future, by those who have so soon forgotten the past Fears and Dangers, they were in. But tho' we should incline to spare the Name of a Prince, to whom we once both owed, and payed the Obedience of good Subjects and who, moreover, was the Father of two such Queens, yet let us never so forget those Days, as not to thank God heartily, that they pass'd away so soon: and that the Legislative Power hath done what it could to prevent the like, for the time to come, by enacting (as by the 14th of Elizabeth, it appears they might) that no Papist shall hereafter be King or Queen of England; and settling the Succession in the Protestant Line. God grant it may be very long, before that Act of Parliament take place, but God forbid that anything should ever interrupt the Protestant Succession. This is the Royal Family that we are understood to pray for.

You do, in the last place, pray, for Bishops, and Curates, and all Congregations committed to their Charge: And as I always try to put my own Clergy, in a more particular View, when I either repeat, or hear this Prayer; so I do seriously desire, that they would always have Me in their Minds, on the like Occasions. And since the Providence of God hath placed Me, through the Favour of the Queen, in the highest Order of Church-Ministers, I am sure I have thought myself the better, for being, in a more immediate manner, the Subject of so many good Peoples Prayers, as are daily offered up to God, in our Excellent Publick Service. We do, indeed, stand in need of all our Peoples Prayers, and all the Assistance of the Grace of God, and all that our Reason, Observation, and Experience can afford, to direct us in our Ways; for we are, methinks, encompass'd with unusual, unexpected Difficulties. Whence comes it that the Times seem so much more unequal to some Men of this Sacred Order, than they are to Others? From what infected Quarter does this Mischiefe rise? Are they not full as Learned, Virtuous, and Religious, as their Brethren, or their Predecessors? Shew they not equal Zeal for the Glory of God, the Honour of Christ's Revelation, and for the Souls of Men, the Purchase of his Blood? Walk they not prudently and circumspectly, shewing themselves Patterns in all good things? What part of Duty is it, that they are defective in? Is Malice so restrain'd, as not to tell them of their Faults? Or are their Enemies so tender of their Credit and good Name? And yet if you should trace these Clamours to a Head, you will find they end in this poor Senseless, Accusation, that they are not good Churchmen. Great God! that Men of the most valuable Abilities, and learned in all kinds; beloved of all that know them, for their Candor and good Nature; famed for their Prudence, and venerable for their Piety and Goodness; of exemplary Charity; assiduous Preachers; constant Frequenters of the Common Prayers; and, in a Word, who whilst they were Parish Priests, did every way adorn their holy Calling— That these Men, when they came to be advanced, should cease, immediately, to be good Churchmen? My heart, I own it, is too full of Indignation and Disdain, to give a serious Answer to such Calumnies. I rather humbly beseech God, to forgive those Men, their great Trespass, who have either invented, spread, or cherish'd them. But be not you, my Brethren, Partakers of their Sin, by harbouring such ill Thoughts, or countenancing such Reports. Speak not evil of these Dignities. I know I am the unworthiest of them; but yet I bind it on your Consciences, to entertain a good Opinion of me, till you find cause to do otherwise. I shall not else be able to do any good among you. I speak not this, from any Reason or Suspicion I have that I am not esteemed by all of you, as I desire to be. But what can I expect? What have I not to fear, when Men of so much greater Caution, Prudence, Virtue, and Religion, fare so ill? Had Papists been the Spreaders of these Slanders, I should not much have wondered, because they are such hearty Lovers of whatever may discredit us, or weaken our Influence, with our People, that, I account, we are obliged to them, if they only report, and are not the Authors of them. But these are not the wounds of Enemies, but of Companions, Friends, and Children. But after all, what is the ground and occasion of this Outcry? If I can guess aright, 'tis this. The Bishops, for these 20 years last past, have behaved themselves, with that good Temper, Moderation, and Paternal gentleness, that they have gain'd more ground upon the Hearts of the Dissenters, than had been done for an hundred Years before, by all their Predecessors: And yet, they have not parted, (that I know of) with one point of Doctrine; one Point of Discipline; one Church or Chappel; one Line of the Common Prayer; nor one external Ceremony. But it may be they would if they could. 'Tis time enough to answer those Suspicions, when better proof of their Inclination appears. I have as much Reason to say, and I do say it, that whenever they do part with anything, belonging to the Church, my Life for yours, they will have something equal to it, in Exchange. They have, as yet, parted with nothing; made no Advances, no Proposals, no Concessions. They have only purchased the Reconciliation, and Benevolence of those People who dissent from our Church, by a Management that is truly Wise, and truly Christian. And I am verily perswaded, that the best and wisest of their Predecessors would have taken the same Courses, had the Situation of Affairs been the same, and the like Seasons and Opportunities concurr'd.

But how does it appear, that the Dissenters have been gain'd upon, by this good Treatment? Allow them to be Men, and you will see something of what I say; for all men love Humanity, and all Mens Hearts are won upon by gentle Treatment. But does it not appear by plainer Tokens? Have they not (many of them) manifestly changed their Stile, and way of Expression? Have they not changed their Manners and Behaviour towards Church, and Churchmen? Do their Writings seem to proceed from such a furious bitter Spirit as they used to do? Do they insist upon such rigorous Terms of Church-Communion as they formerly did? Do they treat our Service, or our Ceremonies, with the antient Scorn and Contempt? Have they not spoken decently, and respectfully of Bishops? I may not insist on all Particulars—I affirm, that since the Days of Queen Elizabeth, the Bishops of the Church of England, were never held in that Esteem and Value by the Dissenters, as they now are, and have been for these 20 years; and that for doing nothing but what did always become Wise Men, and good Christians to do, so circumstantiated as they are. And is it not astonishing, that that which is, in Truth, matter of Praise and Honour, should be turn'd into an Accusation? For, (to come to the Point I am upon) I have never seen a better Cause assign'd, why some Bishops should not be thought good Churchmen, than that they have treated the Dissenters with more Condescension and less Acrimony, and have been treated by Them, with more Civility, Respect, and Honour, than was heretofore the Custom to do, on either side. And I leave it to all the World to judge, whether the Bishops are to change their Conduct, or those who blame them, their Opinion I meant not, by what I have said, to make an Apology for any of my Brethren, and Most honoured Collegues, Dead or Living; their good Example wants not to be justified, but followed by Me. And herein I should but do, as They have done, viz. pursue the Advice given to the Clergy of his Province by Archbishop Sandcroft in 1688—"More especially, that They have a very tender Regard, to our Brethren the Protestant Dissenters: That, upon Occasion offered, They visit them at their Houses, and receive them kindly at their own; and treat them fairly where-ever they meet Them; persuading Them, if it may be, to a full compliance, with our Church, or at the least, that whereunto we have already attained, we may all walk by the same Rule. and mind the same Thing—And that They warmly and most affectionately exhort Them to joyn with us in daily fervent Prayer to the God of Peace, for an Universal Blessed Union of all Reformed Churches, both at Home and Abroad, against our Common Enemies."

But I have said these things, to shew upon what poor Occasions, many People, who love the Order, have yet parted with their Respect for the Persons of their Bishops: And to caution you (for whom I am most concern'd) against the falling in, with such unreasonable Suspicions. Take heed of every thing that may lessen the Respect you owe to your Superiors; for when that Band is broken, who can tell but Hatred or Contempt will follow? And then you know how little good can possibly be done, by any one. You may make it your own Case, with Respect to your private Parishes, and think how ineffectual all your best Labours would be, if your People were either prejudiced against your Person, or suspected you of any ill Designs.

I see I have exceeded the Bounds I had set my self; but my Zeal for so much injured worth, hath occasioned it, and must excuse the length. I neither am, nor have at any time been concern'd, my self, in any of those Affairs, or Controversies, that have occasion'd the Divisions, and Distinctions, that have so long troubled Us. But I have not been an Unconcern'd Spectator of the Mischiefs they have done; nor can I help the apprehending, with pain, the Mischiefs that they will go on doing to the End. And in that View, I could not refrain from warning every one of you, from having any Hand in cherishing and keeping these Divisions up, amongst us.

God of his infinite Goodness, grant, that you and I, and every one of us, may every Day we live, remember the Relation we bear to each other, and to the Flocks committed to our Care, and so attend to the Discharge of our good Office, that when the Shepherd and the Bishop of our Souls shall call us to account, each for the Other, we may do it with Joy, and not with Grief.

and humble Servant,

TIT. II.

Concerning MINISTERS.

I. Is your Minister, so far as you know or believe, Episcopally ordained Deacon and Priest, according to the Laws of this Realm: Hath he been legally instituted and inducted; and read the 39 Articles within the Time by Law appointed, and declared his Assent to them, and to the Book of Common-Prayer: Is he defamed or suspected to have obtained either his Benefice or Orders by any Symoniacal Compact.

II. Is your Minister constantly resident among you, and doth he preach every Lord's Day, unless hindered by Sickness, or reasonable Absence: How long in any one Year has he been absent from his Cure?

III. Hath your Minister any Curate to assist him, or is your Benefice a bare Curacy: Is such Curate an able, discreet, and sober Person, conformable to the Laws and Orders of the Church of England: Is he Licensed by the Ordinary: And is there a sufficient Salary or Stipend allowed him by your Minister, or the Impropriator: And how much?

IV. Hath your Parson, Vicar or Curate, any other Ecclesiastical Benefices, or doth he serve any other Cure, besides: And at what Distance?

V. Doth your Parson, Vicar or Curate, in Reading the daily Morning and Evening Service, Administration of the Holy Sacraments, Celebration of Marriage, Churching of Women after Child-birth, Visitation of the Sick, and Burial of the Dead, use the Form and Words prescribed in the Book of Common-Prayer, and all such Rites and Ceremonies as are appointed in that Book, so far as you have observed: And doth he read the Service with an audible and distinct Voice: Doth he add to, or omit any Part of the Office appointed to be read?

VI. Doth your Minister at the Reading and Celebrating Divine Offices in your Church or Chapel wear the Surplice, together with such other Habit as is usual to his Degree?

VII. Doth he celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper so often, that every Parishioner may receive it Thrice at least in every Year: And doth he keep back such as ought not to be admitted, giving an Account of them to the Bishop?

VIII. Doth your Minister diligently instruct the Youth of your Parish in the Church Catechism: And doth he prepare and present them, being so instructed, to be confirmed by the Bishop?

IX. Doth he refuse or neglect to visit the Sick, or delay the Baptism of any Infant in Danger of Death: Is there any Child past Infancy, or other Persons grown up, who through your Minister's Default yet remain unbaptized in your Parish?

X. Hath he married any Persons without Banns first published in the Church on three Sundays or Holy-days unless he had a License so to do: Hath he married any Persons in private Houses, or such as being under Age have not the Consent of their Parents or Guardians, or at any other Hours than between Eight and Twelve in the Morning; or at any Hour Persons that are prohibited to marry, according to the Table of Marriage?

XI. Doth your Minister declare to the People every Sunday the several Holy-days and Fasting-days in the Week following, and doth he observe them?

XII. Is he a man of a sober, studious, peaceable, and exemplary Life: Is he grave, modest, and regular in his outward Demeanour and Apparel: Doth he use any Trade, Gaming, Farming, or Merchandising for filthy Lucre's sake: Is he in any kind disorderly and scandalous?

XIII. Doth your Minister with the Churchwardens and Chief Men of the Parish make a Perambulation upon some of the Rogation-days, to view the Limits and Bounds of the Parish, and to desire God's Blessing on the Fruits of the Earth: How long since was the last Perambulation?

XIV. Have you any Person within your Parish who being Ordain'd Priest or Deacon hath voluntarily relinquish'd his Calling, and does behave himself in the Course of his Life as a Layman: Or is there any Person not Ordained according to the Form of making Priests and Deacons in the Book of Common-Prayer that does openly read Divine Service, preach, or execute any Ministerial Duty in your Church or Chapel?

TIT. III.

Concerning the PARISHIONERS.

I. Is there in your Parish any Person that denies the Being of a God, or or (sic) any one of the Persons in the Holy Trinity to be God, or that denies the Christian Religion to be true, or the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be of Divine Authority, or that maintains any Atheistical or Immoral Principles and Opinions?

II. Is there any Person in your Parish who lieth under a common Fame or Suspicion of Adultery, Fornication, or Incest; wilful Violation of Oath in an Ecclesiastical Court, or Falsifying any Ecclesiastical Instruments: Are there any common Drunkards, Swearers, or Blasphemers of God's Name, or any that are noted to be filthy Talkers, Railers, Sowers of Sedition, Faction or Discord among their Neighbours: Or any that by Sorcery, Charms, or Astrology pretend to tell Fortunes and discover lost Goods, or any that consult with such Persons?

III. Are there any Persons within your Parish that have committed Incontinency together before Marriage: Hath any Woman unmarried being with Child, been harboured or delivered in your Parish, and departed thence before she had done Penance or been censured by the Ordinary; and in whose House has she been harboured or delivered: Or hath any Woman unlawfully begotten with Child in your Parish removed or been conveyed from thence: By whom have such Persons been removed or conveyed: Who are suspected to be the Fathers of such Children?

IV. Are there any that refuse to pay their Easter Offerings, and other Dues belonging to your Minister; or to contribute to the Rate made for Repair of your Church or Chapel, or any thing thereunto belonging.

V. Doth every Parishioner demean himself Reverently in your Church or Chapel, during Divine Service and Preaching the Word of God, continuing all the Time with his Head uncovered, kneeling at the Prayers and Sacrament; standing up when the Creed and Gospel are read; saying audibly with the Minister the Confession, Lord's Prayer and Creed; and making such other Answers to the Publick Prayers as are appointed in the Book of Common-Prayer: Are there any that by Walking, Talking, or other Noise, hinder the Minister or Preacher?

VI. Are there any in your Parish who under Pretence of Liberty of Conscience wholly neglect all publick Worship of God, neither going to Church, nor to any Assembly that meet together according to the late Act for Exempting

Their Majesties Protestant Subjects dissenting from the Church of England from the Penalties of certain Laws; Have you any such Assembly of Dissenters in your Parish: Have they certified the Place of their Meeting to the Bishop, or such others as that Act appoints: Do they meet with their Doors locked, barred or bolted during the Time of their Meeting: Have their Preachers subscribed the Articles of our Religion (except those excepted in the Act) and taken the Oaths, and subscribed the Declaration therein required?

Can. 114. VII. Have you any Popish Recusants in your Parish, Men, Women, or Children, above the Age of Thirteen-years: If so, what are their Names?

Can. 112. VIII. Are there any professing to live in the Communion of the Church of England who neglect to come to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, being of Age fit to receive it: Or any that refuse to send their Children or Servants to be catechised. Or do any Children or Servants refuse to come, What Age are they of?

Can. 13. IX. Do any of your Parish profane the Lord's-day, by neglecting the Publick Service, by following their bodily Labour or ordinary Callings, or using unlawful Recreations, or permitting their Servants or Children so to do: Are any Wares sold, or do any Vintners or Alehouse-keepers suffer any Persons to Tipple or Game in their Houses on those Days?

Can. 97, 107. X. Are there any living within your Parish as Man and Wife, who are within the Degrees prohibited: Or any that being divorced have married again to other Persons: Or that being lawfully married, and not separated or divorced by due Course of Law, do not cohabit together?

Can. 40. XI. Do you know, or have you heard of any in your Parish, who having the Presentation of an Ecclesiastical Living, hath made any Simoniacal Compact or Gain thereby; either in Money, or by Reserve of any Part of the Tithes or Glebe belonging to the Benefice: Or by any other corrupt Method?

XII. Hath any Gallery, Pews, Seats, or large Monuments been erected or pulled down in your Church or Chapel, without Leave from the Ordinary: Is there any Strife or Contention about Seats in the Church: Are there any Seats of an extraordinary or indecent Height, so as to hide the Reverend Behaviour of those that sit in them from the rest of the Congregation, or to hinder their neighbours in hearing Divine Service?

5 & 6 Ed. vi. c. 4. XIII. Is there any Person that hath
Ar. Cl. c. fought, quarrelled, or brawled in your Church or Church-yard, Or any that hath quarrelled with, stricken or used any Violence to, libelled or spoken any slanderous Words against any Minister in contempt of his Person and Office?

Can. 65, 3. XIV. Have you any in your Parish that be denounced Excommunicate. How long have they been so: Do they presume notwithstanding to come to Church: Do any keep familiar Society with them?

21 H. viij. c. 5. XV. Are there any Wills or Testaments of any Persons dead within your Parish concealed, suppressed, and not yet proved: Hath any Person administered or intermeddled with the Goods of any Persons dying intestate within your Parish, before Administration granted to him by the Ordinary?

TIT. IV.

Concerning PARISH-CLERKS and SEXTONS.

Can. 91. I. Have you a Parish-Clerk aged Twenty One Years at least: Is he of an Honest Life and Conversation, able to perform his Duty in Reading, Writing, and Singing: Is he chosen by your Minister and obedient to him: Doth he duly attend him in all Divine Services in the Church: Are his Wages duly paid him, or who with-holds the same from him?

II. Doth he or your Sexton keep the Church and the Ornaments belonging to the same clean and decent, and toll or ring the Bells before Divine Service, and perform all other Parts of their Duties diligently and faithfully?

TIT. V.

Concerning Ecclesiastical Officers.

Hath any Ecclesiastical Judge or Officer within this Diocese, any Advocate, Register, Proctor, Clerk, or Appanitor, any way offended in their Offices or Services contrary to the Canons and Laws Ecclesiastical; and in what manner?

TIT. VI.

Concerning School-masters, Schools and Hospitals.

I. What School-master, private or publick, is there in your Parish: Is he Licensed by the Bishop: Does he teach his Scholars the Church Catechism: Doth he cause them to repair orderly to the Church or Chapel on Sundays and Holy-days, and there see that they behave themselves quietly and reverently, during the Time of Divine Service and Sermon?

2. Hen. V. c. 1. II. What Hospital or Free-School is there (not of Royal Foundation or Patronage) in your Parish: Are they in good Repair, and so ordered in their Revenue and Use as the Founders appointed, and the Law of the Land allows?

3. Hen. VIII. c. 11. III. What Persons are there in your Parish that practice Physick, Chyrurgery, or Midwifery: Have they License from the Ordinary?

TIT. VII.

Concerning CHURCH-WARDENS.

I. Are the Church-wardens of your Parish yearly and duly chosen:

II. Have the former and last Church-wardens given up a just Account of the Money they have received and laid out for the Use of the Church: And have they delivered up the Money remaining in their Hands to the succeeding Church-wardens, together with all other Things belonging to your Church or Chapel:

III. Do they provide against every Rubrick after Communion appointed in your Church or Chapel, a sufficient Quantity of fine White Bread and good Wine, according to the Number of the Communicants, at the Charge of the Parish:

It is expected that the Minister and Church-wardens of every Parish take great Care in making, renewing, and giving in [fairly ingrossed] Terriers, with new Abuttals of the Glebe, &c. and in Vicarages particularly specifying what Tithes by Composition or Prescription belong to the Vicar.

It is further required, That they annex a true Account of all Houses, Lands, Summs of Money, &c. given by any last Will and Testament, or otherwise, to the Reparation of their Church Maintenance of the Poor, or other pious or Charitable Use within their Parishes, with the Abuttals, Quantity, yearly Value and present Occupiers of the same.

They are also to give in Writing a true, plain, and perfect Note of all the Bells, Books, and other Ornaments and Goods belonging to their several Churches and Chapels.

At the Bottom or on the Back of the Bills indented of Births, Marriages and Burials they are to set down the Number of all the Persons of both Sexes, within their respective Parishes, above the Age of Sixteen Years, how many of them are Popish Recusants, and how many Protestant Dissenters, and of what Perswasion. In the Bills when the Parties married or buried or the Parents of Children Christened are not Parishioners they are to put down the Places of the Habitation of such Parties and <sup>and</sup> (sic) Parents: In the Burials they are to distinguish Men and Women from Children; and married Women from Widows and in the Marriages to certify whether the Parties were married by Banns or License, and these Bills are to be continued to the Day of the Visitation.

“TIT. I.”

Concerning Ministers, their Duty and Office.

“Section 1.

“IS your Minister conformable in his Life and Doctrine to the holy Rule and great Example of our Lord JESUS

* “In a MS. Note on the Title-page they are called ‘Articles of Inquiry in the Archdeaconry of Durham, A.D. 1663. vid. Pam. 42, p. 2.’ The reference seems to be to some Collection of Pamphlets with which these Articles had been bound up by their possessor. There appears, however, to be some error in this date, for no record occurs of any Archdeacon of Durham of that name before 1691: Le Neve, in his List, mentions ‘Robert Boothe, S. T. B., succeeded 15th May, 1691: void by the deprivation of Grenville (Reg. Dunelm). Died 7th Aug. 1730, and buried at Bristol, of which Cathedral he was dean.’—Fæst. Beck. Ang. vol. III. p. 305. Oxford, 1854. So too among the ‘Archdeacons of Northumberland,’ he names ‘Robert Booth, 15 May, 1691.’—Ibid. p. 308. The coincidence of Dates seems to prove that it was the same person who held both offices, and the different spelling of the name, without an e in this latter case, suggests him to have been the Archdeacon of Durham to whom the Articles are attributed. In any case, however, the Articles are subsequent to the last Revision of the Book of Common Prayer, which is the reason for here quoting them: and as one of them (not heret given) refers to ‘Stat. Will. III. chap 4,’ and to ‘An Act Anno. 6 and 7 Guil. 3,’ both of which were made in 1695, it seems most probable that the date of these Articles is between 1710 and 1720, the last figure after ‘171’ having apparently dropped out.”—Perry’s Lawful Church Ornaments, Lond. 1857, p. 459.

"8. WHAT Augmentations have been added to your Church? How are they continued, and by whom paid, according to the Act of Parliament 29. Car. II. for the Confirming and Perpetuating Augmentations made by Ecclesiastical Persons to small Vicarages and Curacies.

"A Terrier thus made, one Copy is to be laid in the Parish-Church, and the other in the Arch-Deacons Registry, there to remain for perpetual Memory, and the Ministers are required to take care that it be very exact, and delivered in attested by themselves and the Church-Wardens.

STATEMENT of what took place in the LOWER HOUSE of the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, upon the subject of the TABLE OF LESSONS.

Sir,

The Prebendal, Aylesbury,
2 September 1870.

IN answer to your letter of the 31st ult., I have to state that the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury appointed a Joint Committee in February last to consider the Report of the Royal Commission on the Lectionary (Table of Lessons) of the Church, and that the said Committee reported as follows :

“ That this Committee having considered the Third Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Rubrics, Orders, and Directions for regulating the course and conduct of Public Worship, and having respect to the care and pains that have been bestowed upon the work by the Commissioners, and also to the fact that the Schedule of Lessons was submitted to the Archbishops and Bishops of England and Ireland, to the Deans of Cathedral Churches, and to the Theological Professors of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham, and again considered by the Commissioners before making their Report, recommend the adoption of the aforesaid Schedule.”

“ (signed) . . . J. London, Chairman.”

“ 24 March 1870.”

This Report having been unanimously adopted by the Upper House, 3rd May 1870, was sent down to the Lower House the same day, together with a form of Address to Her Majesty, and a request for the concurrence of the Lower House therein.

The following is a copy of the said Address :—

“ To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty :

“ We, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the Archbishop, Bishops, and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, in Convocation assembled, approach your Majesty with the expression of our loyal affection and duty to your Majesty's person and Crown.

“ We humbly represent to your Majesty that there has been laid before us the Report of a Royal Commission appointed by your Majesty to consider, amongst other things, the Table of Appointed Lessons contained in the Book of Common

PAPERS RELATING TO THE

Prayer ; and that we, having taken the said Report into our consideration, have resolved to pray your Majesty to direct that the measures necessary to give legal effect to the said Report should be taken thereupon."

Their Lordships' message having been read to the Lower House, it was thereupon moved, "That this Lower House do concur in the proposed Address to the Queen"; and, after debate, the resolution of concurrence was carried by a majority of 41 to 17.

COPY of RESOLUTION of Convocation of York, appointing Committee, and Copy of REPORT of Committee.

CONVOCATION of York.—In full Session, Feast of St. Matthias, 1870
(24th February 1870).

Motion made and Question put,

THAT this House, though prepared to receive with respect the new Lectionary recommended by the Royal Commission on Ritual, yet thinks it right to refer the same to a Committee of its own, prior to giving it a definitive sanction. That his Grace the President be accordingly requested to grant a Committee to examine and report on the proposed Lectionary, with power to confer with the Committee of the Province of Canterbury; and that a copy of the letter of the Home Secretary, in which he declines to lay before the Convocations the new Lectionary, be given to the Committee for their guidance—(Archdeacon of Richmond).

Agreed to, nem. con.

REPORT of a Committee of both Houses of the Convocation of York on the New LECTIONARY drawn up by the Ritual Commission.

THE Committee to consider and report upon the Lectionary have been unable to exclude the consideration that the new Lectionary has received a good deal of attention and approval, and that some steps have been taken to give it the force of law during the present year. They have considered that, in this position of affairs, it would be a source of embarrassment to attempt the criticism of details, and the suggestion of minute alterations.

The Committee have to thank the Bishop of Carlisle for an explanation of the principles which guided the Ritual Commission in drawing up the Lectionary. They desire to give a general approval of the result at which that body have arrived.

If it should happen that more time should be given for consideration, the Committee would be prepared to suggest some alterations in detail, which are not, however, of sufficient moment to cause them to recommend Convocation to withhold its consent.

It should be noticed that the Ritual Commission has been empowered to "suggest any alterations, improvements, or amendments" in regard to "Rubrics, Orders, and Directions contained in the Book of Common Prayer." We understand that this Commission has nearly completed its labours, which have extended over several years. It may be a question whether any alteration should be made this year in the Prayer Book, if it is considered likely that fresh changes will soon be proposed in consequence of recommendations from the Ritual Commission.

The Committee think that there exists a general desire for a change in the Lectionary, such as the Report of the Ritual Commission has recommended.

The subject of a change in the Lectionary was before the Convocation of York in 1865, upon the Report of a Committee, and the present Committee observe with satisfaction that many of the suggestions then made have been adopted in the present proposal.

COPY of RESOLUTION of the Upper House of the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury.

ON the 3rd of May 1870, the Lord Bishop of London, as Chairman of the Joint Committee of both Houses of Convocation, on the subject of the Lectionary, presented the following Report of such Committee:—

“That this Committee having considered the third Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Rubrics, Orders, and Directions for regulating the course and conduct of public worship, and having respect to the great care and pains that have been bestowed on the work by the Commission, and also to the fact that the Schedule of Lessons was submitted to the Archbishops and Bishops of England and Ireland, to the Deans of Cathedral Churches, and to the Theological Professors of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and Durham, and again considered by the Commission before making their Report, recommends the adoption of the aforesaid Schedule.”

R E P O R T.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE appointed to inquire into the State of the LAW respecting CONVENTUAL and MONASTIC INSTITUTIONS or Societies in Great Britain, and into the terms upon which Income, Property, and Estates belonging to such Institutions or Societies, or to Members thereof, are respectively received, held, or possessed ;—HAVE considered the Matters to them referred, and have agreed to the following REPORT :—

YOUR Committee have inquired into the state of the law as it affects Conventual and Monastic Institutions, including Anglican and other religious institutions of a conventual or monastic character.

There is no law applicable to those institutions or specially affecting them in any way, unless they are in connection with the Church of Rome. Members of the Church of England, of the Greek Church, or of any Church other than the Church of Rome, are perfectly free to take monastic vows, to enrol themselves in communities of a conventual or monastic character, and to found or endow institutions of that kind, without any restriction, and subject only to the general rules which govern the disposition of private property in the hands of individuals. Roman Catholics stand in an exceptional position. Although previously to the Reformation, monasteries and convents were perfectly legal by the common law of England, and in most cases were incorporated and empowered to hold property, yet after the Reformation, by reason of the universal illegality which attached to the profession of the Roman Catholic religion, these institutions became illegal, and when not previously dissolved by express enactment, they became extinct and their members dispersed. By the Emancipation Act (10 Geo. 4, c. 7, ss. 27–37), religious orders, communities, or societies of men belonging to the Church of Rome, and bound by monastic or religious vows, are prohibited. It is a misdemeanor, punishable by banishment for life, for any man to be admitted into any such religious order or community in any part of the United Kingdom. It is also a misdemeanor, subject to the same penalty, to admit any man to be a member of a religious order, or to administer vows to him, in any part of the United Kingdom. The same penalty applies to any member of a religious order coming into the realm after the Emancipation Act passed, except only in the case where a Secretary of State gives him a license so to do, which license cannot extend to a period of more than six months.

The consequence of these enactments, as developed by judicial decisions, has been to render invalid all endowments of such Roman Catholic communities. A gift or bequest of lands or of personalty for the benefit of any Roman Catholic monastery (being a religious community of men), or for the benefit of individuals in their capacity of monks, or for the benefit of a church to be served by monks, has been decided in the Irish Court of Chancery to be illegal. If the object of the gift or bequest were charitable in its nature (as, for example, if it were in favour of a school or a church), and were rendered illegal only so far as its administration was confided to monks, or its distribution required their interposition, the proceeds of the gift would probably be applied by the Court of Chancery to a like charitable purpose free from the illegal taint of connection with a monastic order. If the gift or bequest were not charitable, but simply for the benefit of a monastery, or if, although charitable, it were for the benefit of some specific monastic charity, the property would revert to the heirs or next of kin of the donor.

There is another branch of the law which has also some bearing on Roman Catholic monasteries. A long course of decisions, founded upon what is called the policy of the 1 Edw. 6, c. 14, and the 37 Hen. 8, c. 4, have established that Roman Catholic prayers or masses for the repose of the soul of the dead are superstitious; and that money given to procure such prayers or masses is devoted to an illegal use, and reverts to the next of kin of the donor. It follows, that if money be left on condition of masses being said, or prayers offered for the soul of the testator, such a bequest is void.

With regard to convents or communities of women belonging to the Church of Rome, the clauses of the Emancipation Act do not apply to them (10 Geo. 4, c. 7, s. 37). We are not aware of any subsisting enactment which prohibits a Roman Catholic woman from taking vows, or joining an order or community of the Church of Rome. There was in the 27 Eliz. c. 2, a clause (s. 2) which prohibited "any religious or ecclesiastical person whatsoever" (see the Record Commissioners' edition of the Statutes) "made, ordained, or professed" by any authority from the See of Rome, from coming into or being or remaining in the realm under the penalties of high treason. This statute would have rendered the existence of Roman Catholic nuns in this country illegal; but it was repealed by the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 102.

The 2nd (vulgo 1st) Jac. I, c. 4, s. 1, re-enacts all Queen Elizabeth's statutes against Jesuits, seminary priests, and other priests, deacons, "religious and ecclesiastical persons whatsoever"; but this statute is repealed by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59.

Notwithstanding the repeal of the enactments just referred to, some of the witnesses called before us expressed an opinion that a gift, or a conveyance by deed or will in trust, for a community of nuns was of doubtful legality. We are not aware of any case in which this question has been decided by judicial authority either in this country or in Ireland.

The doubt expressed before us as to the legality of trusts created in favour of convents was partly based upon the 17th section of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 32, which provides that "nothing in that Act shall make it lawful to found, endow, or establish any religious order or society of persons bound by monastic or religious vows;" and that "all uses, trusts, and dispositions, whether of real or personal property, which immediately before the 24th June 1791 shall be deemed to be superstitious and unlawful, shall continue to be so deemed and taken, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding."

The 12th, 15th, and 16th sections of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 32, were repealed by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, but the 17th section is left unrepealed.

The result of the evidence given before us is, that monasteries and convents are not directly affected by the law relating to charitable uses. A monastery or a convent is not, per se, a "charity" in the technical sense which that word has acquired in our law. The members of several monastic and conventual institutions in this country appear to devote themselves to education, to the care of the sick, or the relief of the poor, or to other purposes which are "charitable" in the technical sense. An endowment in favour of a school, or a reformatory, or an hospital, entrusted to the care of monks or nuns, would of course be a charitable use, not by reason of its connection with a monastery or a convent, but because its purpose brings it within the legal definition of a charitable use. And, on the other hand, a disposition of property for the benefit of a monastery or convent would not be a charitable use merely because the inmates of that monastery or convent usually devoted themselves to some charitable purpose, nor unless the charitable purpose were made a condition upon which the property was given.

Hence it is, that the Roman Catholic Charities Act of 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 134), has little or no application to property enjoyed by monasteries and convents. That statute was intended to cure one defect which had inevitably attached to the title of all Roman Catholic charitable endowments.

It is well known that the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, required all charitable endowments in lands to be constituted by deed, executed twelve months before the death of the grantor, and enrolled in Chancery. This statute applies to Roman Catholic Catholic as well as to Protestant charities. At the same time, it was hardly to be expected that the founders of Roman Catholic charities should comply with its provisions, because enrolment of the deed of foundation involved some amount of publicity given to it; and a founder who disclosed or made public a Roman Catholic charitable use, exposed it to the risk of being defeated or set aside; inasmuch as down to the year 1832, Roman Catholic charitable uses were treated by our law as superstitious and void. In the year 1832, partial relief was given to Roman Catholics by the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, which enacted that Roman Catholics should in respect of their "schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes," be subject to the same laws as the Protestant dissenters were subject to in England. It is well known that the Toleration Act and subsequent statutes had given validity to the charitable trusts of Protestant dissenters. Consequently, since the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, Roman Catholics were enabled to give lands for the building of churches and chapels, for schools, and for the maintenance of bishops or secular priests, without the fear of seeing those gifts defeated by the courts; and they could therefore safely comply with the provisions of the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, as to enrolment of the conveyance. But the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, did not cure the defect which had attached to the title of all Roman Catholic charities created before that statute passed, by reason of non-compliance with the provisions of the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. When, therefore, by the Charitable Uses Act of 1853, more efficient means were devised of inspecting, controlling, and remodelling charities, through the machinery of the Charity Commissioners, the Legislature excepted Roman Catholic charities out of that Act; because in their case inspection and inquiry would have defeated the whole purpose of the charities, since it must have discovered the defect of title just mentioned. This exception was continued from time to time down to the year 1860. In that year was passed the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, by which a period of 12 months was given to all Roman Catholic charities then existing to come in and enrol their deeds, and thereby to cure the defect of non-enrolment under the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. The Act provided that if any property included in a Roman Catholic charitable foundation was in part applicable to a superstitious use (in which case the Courts would formerly have held the whole foundation void), the property should be apportioned by the Court; so that one part should be devoted to the lawful charitable trusts declared by the settlor; while the part which the Court deemed applicable to the superstitious or unlawful trusts was to be devoted to some other lawful Roman Catholic charitable purpose selected by the Court, in lieu of the superstitious purpose selected by the settlor (23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, s. 1).

After the passing of this Act, a considerable number (some 400) of Roman Catholic charities were enrolled. This number appears to have included the greater part of the Roman Catholic charities then in existence under foundations of an earlier date. The deeds enrolled contained, for the most part, no declaration of trust. This was due to the fact, that where any declaration of trust in favour of a Roman Catholic charity was made at all in the time prior to 1832, when toleration was first extended to Roman Catholic charities, it was, for the purpose of the secrecy then necessary, made in a deed separate from the deed of conveyance, while the latter deed was the only one which was required to be enrolled under the Act of 1860. Since the passing of this Act of 1860, Roman Catholic charities have been governed by precisely the same law as Protestant charities, and are equally subject to the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners in all respects. The Act of 1860 had, so far as enrolment is concerned, only a temporary operation, which is now spent by the lapse of the 12 months mentioned in the Act. Roman Catholic charities created since then have been enrolled under the provisions of the Act of Geo. 2, and in all cases which come within the protection of the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115; that is, in all endowments for the benefit of bishops and priests, of churches, schools, and colleges, unconnected with monasteries or convents, the practice of Roman Catholics is to enrol their charitable foundations; and no objection is felt by them to the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners.

But in the case of an endowment for the benefit of a monastery or a convent, no enrolment does or can take place, because, as already explained, such an endowment is not for a charitable use in the sense of the English law; and in case of an endowment of a church to be served by monks, or of a school, college, or hospital, to be conducted and managed by monks (which would be charities in the sense of the English law), no enrolment of such a trust could prudently be made by Roman Catholic founders, because the penal clauses of the Emancipation Act might operate to render the trust void, and to defeat the founder's intention. Endowments of this sort, although they are charities of the class intended to be regulated and protected by the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners, and although they come within the description of endowments for "worship and education," to which toleration was extended by the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, are vitiated and rendered illegal by the fact that they are enjoyed or administered by members of a monastic order. The doubt felt and expressed before us by legal practitioners as to the legality of convents (or communities of women) has also operated, and would operate, to prevent, for similar reasons, the enrolment of an endowment given to a school or other institution which was to belong to nuns and to be managed by them.

The law in Scotland applicable to monastic and conventual institutions varies somewhat from the law of England, as above stated. The penal clauses of the Emancipation Act apply to Scotland. There is, however, in Scotland no enactment similar to the 17th section of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 32. Moreover, the statutes of charitable uses do not apply to Scotland. It was stated to us by an advocate practising at the Scotch bar, that the Scotch law allows a perpetuity to be freely created in favour of a charitable purpose without any special restrictions or provisions as to enrolment, such as are contained in English statutes; that the doctrine of superstitious uses had never been pronounced by judicial decision in Scotland; and that no decided case in the Scotch Courts had raised or settled the question how far endowments of monasteries or convents were legal.

This state of the law affecting conventual and monastic institutions has necessarily had considerable influence on the terms on which income, property, and estates are received, held, or possessed by those institutions, or the members thereof respectively.

The following is a summary of the evidence given before us on this head:—

Persons who are about to join a regular order undergo a period of probation, or novitiate, varying from one to nine years in length, during which the rules of the regular orders leave to them the possession and free disposition of any property they may be entitled to. When that period of probation is over, a person intending to join a regular order is "professed"; that is, takes the solemn vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience, common to all the regular orders. The vow of poverty being inconsistent, conscientiously speaking, with the retention of any property, the intended religious must, before profession, divest himself by legal means of all that he possesses. A portion is commonly reserved to the community which he is about to join, and which is thenceforth to maintain him. The rest is disposed of by him in any manner he may think best. If any property should come by inheritance to a religious person after profession, the rules of the regular Orders require him to dispose of that property in favour of those persons who would have succeeded to it if he had been dead. If, on the other hand, property is left by will to a member of a regular order by name, he is entitled under the rules of the order to retain it, not for his own benefit, but for that of the community to which he belongs. It may be taken as a common feature of all the regular orders that the members of them, once professed, do not hold or retain any income or property for their own benefit. If any property devolves upon them by gift, or operation of law, they are bound by their vows to divest themselves of it by some legal means; these legal means are determined by the law of this country, which of course regards their capacity and power of disposition as wholly unaffected by their religious vows. These observations apply equally to the members of the male and female orders.

With regard to the institutions themselves, as they are not corporations, they cannot receive, hold, or possess any property except by the aid of trustees. And as a trust in favour of a monastic institution is illegal, and the validity of trusts in favour of conventual institutions has been doubted, as already explained, a universal practice appears to have grown up of conveying to several individuals Individuals as joint tenants all property which is meant to be enjoyed in common by such institutions.

The absolute ownership, both at law and in equity, is vested in these joint tenants; and care is taken to declare no trusts whatever, either openly or secretly.

The enjoyment and possession of the property by the community depends absolutely, so far as the law is concerned, upon the goodwill and honourable feeling of the joint tenants; if any of the joint tenants should become bankrupt, his undivided share in the property would pass away from the community to his creditors. As each joint tenant dies, his share survives to the others, subject to the payment of succession duty. On the death of the survivor, the property passes to his heirs, next of kin, devisees, or legatees, according to circumstances, and in obedience to the ordinary rules of English law, without the possibility of any claim being effectually made by the community. Generally speaking, however, the practice is to substitute a fresh joint tenant for any one who is likely to die. This substitution is made by the ordinary legal conveyance, subject to the ordinary stamp duties. This precarious mode of enjoying property, at the pleasure of persons who have not the responsibilities of trustees, is only to be accounted for by the fact that these institutions were subject to penal enactments and unable to make better provision for their needs.

It did not, however, appear upon the evidence that these institutions had suffered any special grievance from this mode of dealing with the property, except, perhaps, in cases in which the property was sold either voluntarily or compulsorily, and in which, therefore, it became necessary to satisfy the purchasers that there were no trusts. Such sales of the property enjoyed by these institutions frequently take place. It is clear that if the joint tenants of the property now under discussion chose to appropriate it to their own uses, or to expel the community from the enjoyment of it, a community of men, at least, would have no remedy whatever; for even assuming that, in spite of the care taken to leave the legal owners of the property absolutely unfettered by trusts, they were able to satisfy a court, by evidence of usage, that a trust, in fact, existed, still that trust would not be enforced for their benefit, so long as they remain liable to the penal and prohibitory clauses of the Emancipation Act.

We had before us numerous witnesses representing both the religious orders, and the Roman Catholic laity, who all concurred in complaining of the law as above stated, and of the tenure of property produced by that state of the law, as a grievance. It was represented to us as inconsistent with the principles of religious liberty to prohibit and make penal the taking of monastic vows in conformity with the religious belief, and with the conscientious vocation of Her Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects. So long as the law gave no binding force to those vows, so long as they remained mere voluntary engagements binding only on the conscience, and undertaken from a sense of religious duty, it was contended by these witnesses that the law should not treat them as criminal acts. In like manner, the law which prohibits as "superstitious uses" the saying of masses or prayers for the dead was represented as a grievance to Roman Catholics. They attach great importance to such intercessory prayers. The 1st clause of the Roman Catholic Charities Act of 1860 enables the Court of Chancery, when property is given both to superstitious and to charitable uses, to apportion it, and to declare new uses in lieu of the superstitious use, leaving the rest of the foundation valid; but this section does not satisfy the wishes of Roman Catholic founders of charities, who often set the greatest store precisely on those superstitious uses which the Court under that section is enabled to set aside.

It was stated before us that the religious orders discharge important functions in the religious and educational system of the Roman Catholic community, inasmuch as the orders of men supply parish priests for 121 missions or parishes, which are dependent on their ministrations, the number of secular priests in the country being insufficient for the requirements of the Roman Catholic body. They exercise, in this way, cure of souls for 278,850 persons. They also educate and supply missionaries for India and the Colonies. They educate in England 1,192 students of the higher and middle classes, at 10 colleges, and 92,260 poor children at various schools. They assist various poor missions out of the resources at their command. The orders of women educate in England 65,321 children, and in Scotland 3,710 children. They house and provide for 379 penitent women in England, and 102 in Scotland. They visit and relieve many thousands of the sick and indigent. It was represented to us as a grievance that the persons by whom this spiritual and educational machinery was worked, to the satisfaction of their co-religionists, should be treated by the law as criminals, or should be in a position of doubtful legality.

It was urged that respect for the law was likely to be weakened in the minds of those who received education from teachers whose very existence was in violation of a law regarded by Roman Catholics as trenching upon the rights of conscience. It was further urged that the law against perpetuities, the Law of Mortmain, the law against undue influence, and the laws protecting personal liberty, none of which were objected to by the Roman Catholic witnesses, were amply sufficient to check all abuses in conventual and monastic institutions, and to prevent all improper and excessive acquisition of property by them, without having recourse to penal clauses which never had been put into operation, or to such a doctrine as that which condemned articles of Roman Catholic belief under the name of superstition. It was argued that public policy would be better assisted by allowing monasteries and convents to hold property under trusts ascertained and declared in the usual way, capable of being enforced by the ordinary tribunals, and assisted by the inspection of the Charity Commissioners, instead of driving them to rely upon that system of holding property which we have above described.

We believe that the penalties of the Emancipation Act have not been enforced in any one case since the Act passed. But the consequences of those penal clauses, and of the doctrine of superstitious uses, upon dispositions of property, which are thereby annulled and defeated, have sometimes been enforced by the courts of England and Ireland.

Besides the regular orders, there are societies connected with the Roman Catholic Church of a quasi-monastic character—such, for instance, as the Oratorians—whose members are secular priests not bound by monastic vows; and, with respect to these, they appear to your Committee to be in the position of legal voluntary associations not incorporated.

With regard to Anglican Institutions, no evidence has been laid before us as to the existence of any institutions of a monastic or quasi-monastic character; and with respect to institutions of a conventual character, that is to say, institutions consisting of women, none of them appear to be bound by religious vows, and they therefore appear to be in the same position, as far as the law is concerned, as the Oratorians above referred to.

The observations contained in this Report will probably suggest some alterations in important branches of the law, and those alterations would be of a very different kind, according to the point of view from which the subject is surveyed. A complete discussion of the position, if any, which Conventual and Monastic Institutions ought to have in our law, and of the means by which their existence and action might be adjusted, so as to bring them into harmony with recognised doctrines of law as to mortmain and perpetuities, would lead to much difference of opinion, and might exceed the limits of our inquiry, and we have therefore abstained from recommending any such alterations.

DRAFT REPORT proposed by Mr. Pemberton, read the first time, as follows:—

“ 1. WE think it may be assumed that previously to the Reformation, monasteries and convents were perfectly legal by the common law of England, and in most cases they were incorporated and empowered to hold property.

“ 2. After the Reformation, by reason of the universal illegality which attached to the profession of the Roman Catholic religion, these institutions became illegal, and when not previously dissolved by express enactment, they became extinct and their members dispersed.

“ 3. In course of time the legal restrictions on the profession of the Roman Catholic religion were gradually removed, but with respect to these institutions, the first Roman Catholic Relief Act (31st Geo. 3, c. 32), while removing certain disabilities, contains an express provision (sect. 17) that nothing therein contained should ‘make it lawful to establish any religious order or society of persons bound by monastic or religious laws;’ a provision extending apparently to males and females. The 10th Geo. 4, c. 7, contains a provision (sect. 28) for the suppression of ‘Jesuits and members of other religious orders, communities, or societies of the Church of Rome, bound by monastic or religious vows;’ and sect. 29 enacts, ‘that if any member of any such religious order, community, or society, shall come into this realm, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and liable to be banished for his life;’ and sect 33 makes it illegal for any ‘member of such religious order, community or society, within any part of the United Kingdom, to admit any person to such order, community, or society; or to administer any vow, oath, or engagement intended to bind the person taking the same to the rules, ordinances, or ceremonies thereof.’

“ 4. The 37th section of the same Act provides that nothing contained in the Act shall be construed to extend in any manner to affect any religious order, community, or establishment, consisting of females bound by religious or monastic vows.’

PROCEEDINGS OF SELECT COMMITTEE

“ 5. Since the passing of this Act, the test of the illegality of any religious institution composed of men would appear to be the fact of its members being bound by vows; and as it has been proved before us that, practically, all monasteries consist of members so bound, and that the taking of vows is of the essence of a monk, it seems that all monasteries properly so called, are absolutely illegal, and consequently they cannot legally hold any property, and any trust declared for their benefit would be absolutely void.

“ 6. There are, however, societies connected with the Roman Catholic Church of a quasi-monastic character—such, for instance, as the Oratorians—whose members are not bound by the vows, and whose discipline is purely voluntary; and, with respect to these, they appear to your Committee to be in a position, so far as the law is concerned, precisely similar to an ordinary London club or other private institution.

“ 7. With regard to convents (using the word in its modern acceptation as establishments for females only), it appears that, having regard to the other Acts for the relief of Roman Catholics, as well as the two Acts above referred to, and especially to the exemption contained in the 37th section of 10 Geo. 4, c. 7, doubts are entertained whether convents are not illegal, especially if their members are bound by such vows or laws as above mentioned, and apprehensions are entertained that if trusts are declared in their favour they would also be void.

“ 8. With regard to the terms upon which income, property, and estates belonging to such institutions are received, held, or possessed, it has been proved that property to a considerable extent is held by private individuals upon secret trusts for them.

“ 9. In consequence of the absolute illegality of some, and the doubtful legality of others, of such institutions, no property can be given avowedly to or openly held by them; and the law is evaded by vesting property intended for their benefit in two or three private individuals, who hold it as joint tenants, and apply it for such benefit, not by virtue of any express trust, which of course could not be enforced in any court of law, but in consequence of the secret understanding or arrangement that it should be so applied when the property is vested in them. Such understanding appears usually to be acted upon, but occasional breaches of it have occurred, and are considered as cases of hardship by the Roman Catholics.

“ 10. The precise terms upon which such property is held and applied varies, of course, according to the arrangement made in each particular case; but for all purposes connected with taxation, rating, or public purposes of a like nature, it is received, held, and possessed by the individuals in whom it is vested, as their own private property.

“ 11. With regard to such of these institutions as are established for any object connected with the promotion of religion, education, relief of the poor, or any other object which comes under the meaning of the word charitable as interpreted by the Courts of Law, they are, and have been since the year 1860, in precisely the same position, so far as concerns any property they possess, as all other charitable institutions in England, and are, in respect of such property, subject to the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners, in the same way as all other charities, there being now no existing exemptions of Roman Catholics from the provisions of the Charity Commissioners Acts.

“ 12. It is, however, submitted by the Roman Catholics, that they do not enjoy the same liberty with respect to the practice of their religion and the education of their children as other religious communities do; and it appears to your Committee that the restrictions to which they are subject afford additional inducements for the evasion of the law.

“ 13. A statute of Edward VI. declares ‘ the keeping of obits, prayers for the dead, and the maintaining of lamps, to be superstitious and illegal, and all gifts for these purposes, are void.’ As these practices are considered necessary for the proper celebration of their services by the Roman Catholics, property to be applied for their maintenance is no doubt also vested in private individuals in the same manner as before pointed out; and inasmuch as the education of children is to a great extent conducted by priests who have taken illegal vows, it is said to be a great disadvantage that the instructors of their children should be subject to penal disabilities, and should, to the knowledge of such children, be continually infringing the law.

“ 14. With regard to Anglican institutions, no evidence has been laid before us as to the existence of any establishments of a monastic or quasi-monastic character; and with respect to institutions of a conventual character, that is to say, institutions consisting of females, none of them appear to be bound by religious vows or laws, and they therefore appear to be in the same position as the Oratorians and others above referred to.”

DRAFT REPORT proposed by Mr. Matthews, read the first time, as follows:—

“ 1. YOUR Committee have inquired into the state of the law as it affects Conventual and Monastic Institutions.

“ 2. There is no law applicable to those institutions or specially affecting them in any way, unless they are in connection with the Church of Rome. Members of the Church of England, of the Greek Church, or of any Church other than the Church of Rome, are perfectly free to take monastic vows, to enrol themselves in communities of a conventual or monastic character, and to found or endow institutions of that kind, without any restriction, and subject only to the general rules which govern the disposition of private property in the hands of individuals. Roman Catholics stand in an exceptional position. By the Emancipation Act (10 Geo. 4, c. 7, ss. 27–37), religious orders, communities, or societies of men belonging to the Church of Rome, and bound by monastic or religious vows, are prohibited. It is a misdemeanor, punishable by banishment for life, for any man to be admitted into any such religious order or community in any part of the United Kingdom. It is also a misdemeanor, subject to the same penalty, to admit any man to be a member of a religious order, or to administer vows to him, in any part of the United Kingdom. The same penalty applies to any member of a religious order coming into the realm after the Emancipation Act passed, except only in the case where a Secretary of State gives him a license so to do, which license cannot extend to a period of more than six months.

“ 3. The consequence of these enactments, as developed by judicial decisions, has been to render illegal all endowments of Roman Catholic communities of men. A gift or bequest of lands, or of personalty, for the benefit of any Roman Catholic monastery (being a religious community of men), or for the benefit of individuals in their capacity of monks, or for the benefit of a church to be served by monks, or of a college or school or other charity to be conducted by monks, has been decided in the Irish Court of Chancery to be illegal. If the object of the gift or bequest were charitable in its nature (as, for example, if it were in favour of a school or a church), and were rendered illegal only because its administration was confided to monks, or its distribution required their interposition, the proceeds of the gift would be applied by the Court of Chancery to some other charitable purpose of a similar kind free from the illegal taint of connection with a monastic order. If the gift or bequest were not charitable, but simply for the benefit of a monastery, or if it were for the benefit of some specific monastic charity, the Court of Chancery would restore the property to the heirs or next of kin of the donor.

“ 4. There is another branch of the law which has also some bearing on Roman Catholic monasteries. A long course of decisions, founded upon what is called the policy of the 1 Edw. 6, c. 14, and the 37 Hen. 8, c. 4, have established that Roman Catholic prayers or masses for the repose of the soul of the dead are superstitious; and that money given to procure such prayers or masses is devoted to an illegal superstitious use, and reverts to the next of kin of the donor. It follows, that if money be left to a monk on condition of his saying masses or offering prayers for the soul of the testator, such a bequest is void.

“ 5. With regard to convents or communities of women belonging to the Church of Rome, the clauses of the Emancipation Act do not apply to them (10 Geo. 4, c. 7, s. 37). We are not aware of any subsisting enactment which prohibits a Roman Catholic lady from taking vows or joining an order or community of the Church of Rome.

“ 6. There was in the 27 Eliz. c. 2, a clause (s. 2) which prohibited ‘any religious or ecclesiastical person whatsoever’ (see the Record Commissioners’ edition of the Statutes) ‘made, ordained, or professed’ by any authority from the See of Rome, from coming into or being or remaining in the realm under the penalties of high treason. This statute would have rendered the existence of Roman Catholic nuns in this country illegal; but it was repealed by the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 102.

“ 7. The 2nd (vulgo 1st) Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 1, re-enacts all Queen Elizabeth’s statutes against Jesuits, seminary priests, and other priests, deacons, ‘religious and ecclesiastical persons whatsoever;’ but this statute is repealed by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59.

“ 8. Notwithstanding the repeal of the enactments just referred to, some of the witnesses called before us expressed an opinion that a gift, or a conveyance by deed or will in trust, for a community of nuns was of doubtful legality. This opinion was grounded partly upon apprehension that the courts of law, which had shown no favour to such institution in the past, would be likely to consider them contrary to public policy in the future. We are aware of no case in which this question has been decided by judicial authority either in this country or in Ireland.

“ 9. The doubt expressed before us as to the legality of trusts created in favour of convents was also based upon the 17th section of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 32, which provides that ‘nothing in that Act shall make it lawful to found, endow, or establish any religious order or society of persons bound by monastic or religious vows;’ and that ‘all uses, trusts, and dispositions whether of real or personal property, which immediately before the 24th June 1791 shall be deemed to be superstitious and unlawful, shall continue to be so deemed and taken, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

“ 10. The 12th, 15th, and 16th sections of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 32, were repealed by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, but the 17th section is left unrepealed. Although we do not share these doubts, we do not think it necessary to anticipate what decision might be given on this subject if the question were to be raised in a court of justice.

“ 11. The result of the evidence given before us is, that monasteries and convents are not directly affected by the law relating to charitable uses. A monastery or a convent is not, per se, a ‘charity’ in the technical sense which that word has acquired in our law. The members of several monastic and conventual institutions in this country appear to devote themselves to education, to the care of the sick, or the relief of the poor, or to other purposes which are ‘charitable’ in the technical sense. An endowment in favour of a school, or a reformatory, or an hospital, entrusted to the care of monks or nuns, would of course be a charitable use, not by reason of its connection with a monastery or a convent, but because its purpose brings it within the legal definition of a charitable use. And, on the other hand, a disposition of property for the benefit of a monastery or convent would not be a charitable use merely because the inmates of that monastery or convent usually devoted themselves to some charitable purpose, nor unless the charitable purpose were made a condition upon which the property was given.

“ 12. Hence it is, that the Roman Catholic Charities Act of 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 134), has little or no application to property enjoyed by monasteries and convents. That statute was intended to cure one defect which had inevitably attached to the title of all Roman Catholic charitable endowments.

“ 13. It is well known that the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, required all charitable endowments in lands to be constituted by deed, executed 12 months before the death of the grantor, and enrolled in Chancery. - This statute applies to Roman Catholic as well as to Protestant charities. On the other hand, it was hardly to be expected that the founders of Roman Catholic charities should comply with its provisions, because enrolment of the deed of foundation involved some amount of publicity given to it; and a founder who disclosed or made public a Roman Catholic charitable use, exposed it to the risk of being defeated or set aside; inasmuch as down to the year 1832, Roman Catholic charitable uses were treated by our law as superstitious and void. In the year 1832, partial relief was given to Roman Catholics by the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, which enacted that Roman Catholics should in respect of their ‘schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes,’ be subject to the same laws as the Protestant Dissenters were subject to in England. It is well known that the Toleration Act, and subsequent statutes, had given validity to the charitable trusts of Protestant Dissenters. Consequently since the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, Roman Catholics were enabled to give lands for the building of churches and chapels, for schools, and for the maintenance of bishops or secular priests, without the fear of seeing those gifts defeated by the courts; and they could therefore safely comply with the provisions of the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, as to enrolment of the conveyance. But the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, did not cure the defect which had attached to the title of all Roman Catholic charities created before that statute passed, by reason of non-compliance with the provisions of the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. When, therefore, by the Charitable Uses Act of 1853, more efficient means were devised of inspecting, controlling, and remodelling charities, through the machinery of the Charity Commissioners, the Legislature excepted Roman Catholic charities out of that Act; because in their case inspection and inquiry would have defeated the whole purposes of the charities, since it must have discovered the defect of title just mentioned. This exception was continued, from time to time, down to the year 1860. In that year was passed the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, by which a period of 12 months was given to all Roman Catholic charities then existing to come in and enrol their deeds, and thereby to cure the defect of non-enrolment under the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. The Act provided that if any property, included in a Roman Catholic charitable foundation, was in part applicable to a superstitious use (in which case the Courts would formerly have held the whole foundation void), the property should be apportioned by the Court; so that one part should be devoted to the lawful charitable trusts declared by the settlor; while the part which the Court deemed applicable to the superstitious, or unlawful trusts, was to be devoted to some other lawful Roman Catholic charitable purpose selected by the Court, in lieu of the superstitious purpose selected by the settlor (23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, s. 1).

“ 14. After the passing of this Act, a considerable number (some 400) of Roman Catholic charities were enrolled. This number appears to have included the greater part of the Roman Catholic charities then in existence under foundations of an earlier date. The deeds enrolled contained, for the most part, no declaration of trust. This was due to the fact, that where any declaration of trust in favour of a Roman Catholic charity was made at all in the time prior to 1832, when toleration was first extended to Roman Catholic charities, it was, for the purpose of the secrecy then necessary, made in a deed separate from the deed of conveyance, while the latter deed was the only one which was required to be enrolled under the Act of 1860. Since the passing of this Act of 1860, Roman Catholic charities have been governed by precisely the same law as Protestant charities, and are equally subject to the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners in all respects.

respects. The Act of 1860 had, so far as enrolment is concerned, only operation, which is now spent by the lapse of the 12 months mentioned in the Roman Catholic charities created since then have been enrolled under the provisions of the Act of Geo. 2, and in all cases which come within the protection of the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115; that is, in all endowments for the benefit of bishops and priests, of church schools, and colleges unconnected with monasteries or convents, the practice of Roman Catholics is to enrol their charitable foundations; and no objection is felt by them, the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners.

"15. But in the case of an endowment for the benefit of a monastery or a convent, no enrolment does or can take place, because, as already explained, such an endowment is not for a charitable use in the sense of the English law; and in case of an endowment of a church to be served by monks, or of a school, college, or hospital, to be conducted and managed by monks (which would be charities in the sense of the English law), no enrolment of such a trust could prudently be made by Roman Catholic founders, because the penal clauses of the Emancipation Act might operate to render the trust void, and to defeat the founder's intention. Endowments of this sort, although they are charities of the class intended to be regulated and protected by the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners, and although they come within the description of endowments for "worship and education," to which toleration was extended by the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, are vitiated and rendered illegal by the fact that they are enjoyed or administered by members of a monastic order. The doubt felt and expressed before us by legal practitioners as to the legality of convents (or communities of women) has also operated, and would operate, to prevent, for similar reasons, the enrolment of an endowment given to a school or other institution which was to belong to nuns and to be managed by them.

"16. The law in Scotland applicable to monastic and conventual institutions varies somewhat from the law of England, as above stated. The penal clauses of the Emancipation Act apply to Scotland. *There is, however, in Scotland no enactment similar to the 17th section of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 32. Moreover the statutes of charitable uses do not apply to Scotland, where the law allows a perpetuity to be freely created in favour of a charitable purpose without any special restrictions or provisions as to enrolment, such as are contained in English statutes. It was stated to us that the doctrine of superstitious uses had never been pronounced by judicial decision in Scotland; and that no decided case in the Scotch Courts had raised or settled the question how far endowments of Monasteries or Convents were legal.

"17. This state of the law affecting monastic and conventual institutions has necessarily had considerable influence on the terms on which income, property, and estates are received, held, or possessed by those institutions, or the members thereof respectively.

"18. The following is a summary of the facts established by the evidence given before us on this head:—

"Persons who are about to join a religious order undergo a period of probation, or novitiate, varying from one to nine years in length, during which the rules of the religious orders leave to them the possession and free disposition of any property they may be entitled to. When that period of probation is over, a person intending to join a religious order is 'professed;' that is, takes the solemn vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience, common to all the regular orders. The vow of poverty being inconsistent, conscientiously speaking, with the retention of any property, the intended religious must, before profession, divest himself by legal means of all that he possesses. Some portion is commonly reserved to the community which he is about to join, and which is thenceforth to maintain him. The rest is given by him to his relatives, or to other objects, in whatever manner he may think best. If any property should come by inheritance to a religious person after profession, the rules of the regular Orders require him to dispose of that property in favour of those persons who would have succeeded to it if he had been dead. If, on the other hand, property is left by will to a member of a religious Order by name, he is entitled under the rules of the Order to retain it, not for his own benefit, but for that of the community to which he belongs. It may be taken as a common feature of all the religious Orders that the members of them, once professed, do not hold or retain any income or property for their own benefit. If any property devolves upon them by gift, or operation of law, they are conscientiously bound to divest themselves of it by some legal means; these legal means are determined by the law of the country, which of course regards their capacity and power of disposition as wholly unaffected by their religious vows.

"19. It is not uncommon for persons joining a religious order to make, at or before the time of profession, a will, by which any property that may accrue to them afterwards is devised or bequeathed to such persons as they may wish to benefit, and whom they are free to select at pleasure. These observations apply equally to the members of the male and female orders.

"20. With regard to the institutions or societies themselves, it is clear that, not being corporations or legal persons, they cannot receive, hold, or possess, any property except by the aid of trustees. On the other hand, it is clear that a trust in favour of a monastic institution is illegal, and the validity of trusts in favour of conventual institutions has been already explained. The universal practice, therefore, appears to have grown up of conveying to several individuals as joint tenants all property which is meant to be enjoyed in common by such institutions.

“ 21. The absolute ownership, both at law and in equity, is vested in these joint tenants; and care is taken to declare no trusts whatever, either openly or secretly.

“ 22. The enjoyment and possession of the property by the community depends absolutely; so far as the law is concerned, upon the goodwill and honourable feeling of the joint tenants; if any of the joint tenants become bankrupt, his undivided share in the property would pass away from the community to his creditors. As each joint tenant dies, his share survives to the others, subject to succession duty which is paid by them. On the death of the survivor, the property passes to his heirs, next of kin, devisees, or legatees, according to circumstances, and in obedience to the ordinary rules of English law, without the possibility of any claim being effectually made by the community. Generally speaking, however, the practice is to substitute a fresh joint tenant for any who are likely to die. This substitution is made by the ordinary legal conveyance, subject to the ordinary stamp duties. This precarious mode of enjoying property, at the pleasure of persons who have neither the responsibilities nor the advantages of trustees, is only to be accounted for by the fact that these institutions were subject to penal enactments, and unable to make better provision for their needs.

“ 23. It did not, however, appear upon the evidence that these institutions had suffered any special grievance from this mode of dealing with the property, except, perhaps, in cases in which the property was sold either voluntarily or compulsorily, and in which, therefore, it became necessary to satisfy the purchasers that there were no trusts. Such sales of the property enjoyed by these institutions frequently take place. It is clear that if the joint tenants of the property now under discussion chose to appropriate it to their own uses, or to expel the community from the enjoyment of it, a community of men, at least, would have no remedy whatever; for even assuming that, in spite of the care taken to leave the legal owners of the property absolutely unfettered by trusts, they were able to satisfy a court, by evidence of usage, that a trust, in fact, existed; still that trust would not be enforced for their benefit, so long as they remain liable to the penal and prohibitory clauses of the Emancipation Act.

“ 24. A great many extracts from rate-books in different parts of the United Kingdom were proved before us, containing assessments of properties which, it was suggested, might belong to religious orders, or to members of them. No reliable evidence of ownership was given in most of these cases; but assuming that the suggestion above mentioned was well founded, the inference to be drawn from these extracts is, that property enjoyed by these orders contributes its full share to the local taxation of the country. In like manner we had brought to our notice extracts from enrolled deeds creating charitable uses, and extracts from deeds registered in Scotland under the system which there prevails. The greater part, if not the whole, of the property to which these deeds relate, appears not to belong, or at any rate was not proved to belong, to Monastic Orders, or to members thereof.

“ 25. We had before us numerous witnesses representing both the religious orders, and the Roman Catholic laity, who all concurred in complaining of the law as above stated, and of the tenure of property produced by that state of the law, as a grievance. It was represented to us as inconsistent with the principles of religious liberty to prohibit and make penal the taking of monastic vows in conformity with the religious belief, and with the conscientious vocation of Her Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects. So long as the law gave no binding force to those vows, so long as they remained mere voluntary engagements binding only on the conscience, and undertaken from a sense of religious duty, it was contended by these witnesses that the law should not treat them as criminal acts. In like manner, the law which prohibits as “superstitious uses” the saying of masses or prayers for the dead was represented as a grievance to Roman Catholics. They attach great importance, founded on the principles of their faith, to such intercessory prayers. The 1st clause of the Roman Catholic Charities Act of 1860 enables the Court of Chancery, when property is given both to superstitious and to charitable uses, to apportion it, and to declare new uses in lieu of the superstitious use, leaving the rest of the foundation valid; but this section does not satisfy the wishes of Roman Catholic founders of charities, who often set the greatest store precisely on those superstitious uses which the Court under that section is enabled to set aside. Again, it was proved before us that the religious orders play an important part in the religious and educational system of the Roman Catholic community. The orders of men supply parish priests for 121 missions or parishes, which are dependent on their ministrations, the number of secular priests in the country being insufficient for the requirements of the Catholic body. They exercise, in this way, cure of souls for 278,850 persons. They also educate and supply missionaries for Demerara, Jamaica, Honduras, India, and other Colonies. They educate 1,192 students of the higher and middle classes, at 10 colleges, and 92,260 poor children at various schools. They assist various poor missions out of the resources at their command. The orders of women educate in England 65,321 children, and in Scotland 3,710 children. They house and provide for 379 penitent women in England, and 102 in Scotland. They visit and relieve many thousands of the sick and indigent. It was represented to us as a grievance grievance that the persons by whom this spiritual and educational machinery was wrought to the satisfaction of their co-religionists, should be treated by the law as criminals, should be in a position of doubtful legality. It was urged that respect for the law is likely to be weakened in the minds of those who received education from teachers whose very existence was in violation of a law regarded by Roman Catholics as trenching upon the rights of conscience. It was further urged that the law against perpetuities, the Law of Mortmain, the law against undue influence, and the laws protecting personal liberty, none of which were objected to by the Roman Catholic witnesses, were amply sufficient to check all abuses in monastic and conventual institutions, and to prevent all improper and excessive acquisition of property by them, without having recourse to penal clauses which never had been put into operation, or to such a doctrine as that which condemned articles of Roman Catholic belief under the name of superstition. It was argued that public policy would be better assisted by allowing monasteries and convents to hold property under trusts ascertained and declared in the usual way, capable of being enforced by the ordinary tribunals, and assisted by the inspection of the Charity Commissioners, instead of driving them to rely upon that system of holding property which we have above described.

“ 26. The evidence given before us failed to point out any public advantage which has been secured by the exceptional and penal legislation applicable to monasteries and convents. The Protestant witnesses from England and Scotland adduced no complaint in any manner in which their functions were fulfilled, or in which their property was diminished.”

“ 27. We believe that the penalties of the Emancipation Act have not been enforced in any one case since the Act passed. But the consequences of those penal clauses, and of the doctrine of superstitious uses, upon dispositions of property, which are thereby annulled and defeated, have sometimes been enforced by the courts of England and Ireland.”

“ 28. We also took evidence with respect to one sisterhood or community belonging to the Church of England, which calls for no special remark. That community is regulated by statutes which the members undertake to obey, under the rule of a superior, and subject to the inspection of an elected visitor. Their common property is held by trustees for the benefit of the community. An outgoing member has by the statutes no claim to any share of the common property. The deeds relating to their landed property are enrolled under the Statutes of Mortmain. The trusts are not enrolled, but they are declared by the statutes; there being no reason for secrecy, or for avoiding declarations of trusts, as in the case of Roman Catholic communities. The members of this community are not under any conscientious obligation, by reason of their statutes, to denude themselves of their private property, over which they retain full control according to law. This community has never had the occasion or the wish to come under the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners. In relation to the property, both of the community and of its members, it appears to stand very much in the position of a club, the members of which undertake or agree to devote themselves to religious and charitable objects.”

“ 29. The observations contained in this Report will probably suggest some alterations in important branches of the law, and those alterations would probably be of a very different kind, according to the point of view from which the subject is surveyed. A complete discussion of the right position which Monastic and Conventual Institutions ought to have in our law, and of the means by which their existence and action might be adjusted, so as to bring them into useful harmony with recognised doctrines of our law as to mortmain and perpetuities, would probably lead to much difference of opinion, and might seem to go beyond the limits of our inquiry.”

“ 30. We content ourselves with suggesting to Parliament the expediency of removing from our statute book the penal clauses of the Emancipation Act, the unrepealed clauses of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 32, and the statutes against superstitious uses, or from which the doctrine against superstitious uses is inferred. These different enactments appeared to have served no useful purpose.”

REPORT RELATING TO ### NEW LAW COURTS.

1.—REPORT of the COMMITTEE appointed by the COURTS of JUSTICE COMMISSION “to examine all the PLANS submitted to the Commission, with a view to ascertain the Dimensions and Measurements.”

R E P O R T.

(1.) WE have examined the Plans submitted to the Commission at their last meeting, with a view to ascertain the dimensions and measurements; and in doing so we have had the valuable assistance of Mr. Street and Mr. Burnet, between whom, as might be expected, no material difference has arisen with respect to such dimensions and measurements.

(2.) These Plans were as follow :—

1. Mr. Street's Howard-street Plan ;
2. Mr. Street's Reduced Plan for Carey-street, as published by the Office of Works in May 1869 ;
3. Plan founded upon the scheme approved by the Commission, but reduced and adapted by Mr. Burnet to the Carey-street Site without the purchase of further land ;
4. Map of the two sites and surrounding streets prepared under the direction of the Incorporated Law Society.

(3.) The three first Plans may, we think, so far as regards dimensions and measurements, be conveniently considered together and in connexion with the comparative statement relating thereto prepared by Mr. Burnet, and also submitted to the Commission at their last meeting.

(4.) The figures in this Statement have been in some particulars corrected, and some changes in the arrangement have been made for the purpose of facilitating a fair comparison between the three Plans to which it relates ; and the measurements and dimensions as now stated have been agreed between Mr. Street and Mr. Burnet, and, as so agreed, adopted by us. A copy of the Statement as amended, marked A, accompanies this, our Report.

(5.) We have not thought it within our province, having regard to the terms of the resolution by which we were appointed, to express any opinion as to the comparative merits of the several plans before us, and we wish it therefore to be understood that we have not considered, and are therefore not responsible for any of the statements in Paper A, except such as relate to measurements and dimensions.

(6.) As to No. 4, viz., the Law Society's Map :

This map is, in the main, a reproduction of a map laid by the late Sir Charles Barry before a Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed in 1845 “to consider the expediency of erecting a building in the neighbourhood of the Inns of Court for the Courts of Law and Equity in lieu of the present Courts adjoining Westminster Hall, with a view to the more speedy, convenient, and effectual administration of justice,” and which is alluded to in the Report of the Committee, and ordered by the House to be printed in August 1845.

(7.) That

(7.) That original map (1845) did not, of course, represent the boundaries of the now purchased site in Carey-street, or of the proposed site in Howard-street; and such sites appear to have been inaccurately delineated on the new or reproduced map; for instance, although every one agrees, and it is so stated on the map itself, that the purchased site in Carey-street contains  $7\frac{1}{2}$  acres, the dimensions of the site, as delineated on the map when measured by the scale upon it, do not produce that result; the map therefore cannot be relied upon as an accurate representation of the shape and dimensions of the proposed sites; it appears, however, to us to represent, with general accuracy, by the black blocks upon it, the buildings used by the legal profession, although we have not thought it worth while to enter into minute inquiries for the purpose of testing its accuracy in this respect.

R. Paul Amphlett, Chairman.
W. H. Walton.
John Young.

Mr. H. A. Hunt approved of the foregoing Report, subject to the following addition and alteration, but in which the other members of the Committee do not concur, viz. :—

Par. (6.) After the word “reproduction” add “and not a copy as it purports to be.”

Par. (7.) Instead of the last clause, substitute “Nor does it, as it appears to me, represent, with proper accuracy, by the black blocks upon it, the buildings used by the legal profession, as I have caused an investigation to be made by a competent person, and it has been ascertained that about one-fifth of the buildings thus indicated are not so used. The Map of the Incorporated Law Society is therefore, in my opinion, neither a copy of the Map of 1845, nor an accurate representation of the buildings now used by the legal profession.”

ENGINEERS' REPORT for the Quarter ending 30th June 1868.

Sir,
23, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W.,
11 July 1868.

THE contractors have made fair progress with the foundations of the Pier during the past quarter, having extended the foundation course to an average distance of 1,885 feet from the commencement, being an advance of 52 lineal feet since the last Report.

The walls have been raised to an average height of 8 feet above the foundations.

The staging has been extended a distance of 1,917 feet ; 3,463 cubic yards of concrete blocks have been made at Rye, and 4,089 cubic yards have been barged from Rye to Dover.

The average number of men employed during the quarter has been 142.

Dover.

23, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W.,
13 October 1868.

Sir,

THE foundations of the pier have been extended to an average distance of 1,913 feet on the centre line of the pier, being an advance of 33 feet during the past quarter; a length of 75 feet of the walls has been raised an average height of 9 feet.

Preparations are being made for an extension of the staging so as to have as great a length as possible of the foundations prepared during the winter for the next summer's work.

1,436 cubic yards of concrete blocks have been made at Rye during the past quarter, and 4,165 cubic yards have been barged to Dover. There have been some interruptions in the block making department owing to the unusual heat having affected the cement.

The average number of men employed at Dover and Rye has been 135.

The permanent way of the railways on the pier has been repaired by turning the rails where required, and is in good working order.

ENGINEERS' REPORT for the Quarter ending 31st December 1868.

23, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W.,
14 January 1869.

Sir,

NOTWITHSTANDING the very unfavourable weather of the autumn and winter, the foundations of the pier have made some progress, having been extended an average length of 16 feet, which is to a distance of 1,929 feet on the centre line of the pier.

The whole of the underwater work above the foundations has been raised an average height of 9 feet.

No opportunity has offered itself for putting out further staging, but everything is ready for more moderate weather.

3,859 cubic yards of concrete blocks have been made at Rye, and 2,116 cubic yards of blocks have been barged to the works at Dover:

All the timber required for the new staging has also been delivered.

The average number of men employed at Dover and Rye has been 142.

The permanent way on the pier, signals, &c. have been maintained in working order.

ENGINEERS' REPORT for the Quarter ending 31st March 1869.

23, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W.,
14 April 1869.

Sir,

THE continuance of very bad weather during the autumn and winter has prevented the contractors erecting their staging till a much later period than was intended.

The total length of the foundation course is now 1,944 feet on the centre line.

A length of 69 feet of new staging has been completed, and the divers are again at work in the foundations.

The general work under water has been extended an average length of 24 feet during the quarter.

Some damage was done to the jetties, cranes, and signals on the occasion of the loss of Her Majesty's gun brig "Ferret" on the 29th March. This is being repaired.

The average number of men employed daily has been 136.

Certificates amounting to 3,013 l. have been granted to Messrs. Lee the contractors, during the past quarter, making the total sum certified under the several contracts for the pier, and the junction wall, 634,294 l.

11 July 1868.

Sir,

THE total quantity of stone deposited in the base and foreshores of the Western Breakwater, during the last quarter, has been 15,172 tons; of this, 619 tons have been taken to the base from sunken rocks in the harbour.

During the quarter, 299 lineal yards of coping and pitching have been laid on the quay level from 1,250 yards from the shore to the head at 1,549 yards from the shore. This completes the quay level of the breakwater.

The damage caused by the storm of 22nd January, at 1,333 yards from the shore has been repaired.

The daily average number of men employed during the quarter has been 203, and 10 horses.

The amount of certificates granted to Messrs. Jackson & Bean, the contractors, during the past quarter, has been 6,500*l.*, making a total of 1,184,013*l.* since the commencement of the works.

THE total quantity of stone deposited in the base and foreshores of the Western Breakwater, during the last quarter, has been 19,706 tons.

During the quarter, 60 lineal yards of coping have been set on the sea wall, and an equal length of coping on the promenade wall, from 906 yards to 966 yards from the shore. The granite paving of the promenade has been laid for the same length of 60 yards. This, with 85 lineal yards of copings and paving set near the shore in April 1867, completes 145 lineal yards of the promenade level.

The daily average number of men employed during the quarter has been 208, and 10 horses.

The amount of certificates granted to Messrs. Jackson & Bean, the contractors, during the quarter, has been 8,500 l., making a total of 1,192,513 l. since the commencement of the works.

ENGINEERS' REPORT for the Quarter ending 31st December 1868.

23, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W.,
14 January 1869.

Sir,

THE total quantity of stone deposited in the base and foreshores of the Western Breakwater, during the last quarter, has been 9,957 tons; of this, 65 tons have been taken to the base from sunken rocks in the harbour.

During the quarter, 348 lineal yards of coping have been set on the sea wall, and an equal length of coping on the promenade wall. The granite paving of the promenade has been laid for the same length. This completes 493 lineal yards of the promenade level.

On the 28th December some damage by sea to the breakwater walls occurred at 1,393 yards from the shore. The amount of damage, it is believed, can be repaired in a few days, as soon as the weather moderates.

The daily average number of men employed during the quarter has been 176, and 8 horses.

The amount of certificates granted to Messrs. Jackson & Bean, the contractors, during the quarter, has been 6,500 l., making a total of 1,199,013 l. since the commencement of the works.

Summary of the Year.

Since the beginning of the year, 57,946 tons of stone have been deposited in the base and foreshores of the Breakwater, including 684 tons taken up from sunken rocks in the harbour.

Three hundred and thirty-three lineal yards of coping and pitching have been laid on the quay level, completing the quay level from the shore to the head.

Four hundred and eight lineal yards of copings and paving have been laid on the promenade level. This, with 85 lineal yards finished near the shore last year, completes 493 lineal yards.

Alderney.

23, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W.,
14 April 1869.

Sir,

THE quantity of stone deposited in the base and foreshores of the Western Breakwater, during the last quarter, has been 13,893 tons.

During the quarter 158 lineal yards of coping have been set on the sea wall, and an equal length of coping on the promenade wall, extending from 400 yards to 558 yards from the shore. The granite paving of the promenade has been laid for the same length of 158 yards. This completes 651 lineal yards of the promenade level.

The damage to the Breakwater walls referred to in last Report, at 1,393 yards from the shore, has increased by the storms of the last three months, which have exceeded in violence and duration those of any previous winter remembered on this island. There is now a breach through the walls at that place 34 yards in length, on the average, from low water to the top, but the masonry below low water is uninjured. The walls have also been damaged at several other points, and the weather has not yet admitted of any repairs.

The daily average number of men employed during the quarter has been 171, and 8 horses.

The amount of certificates granted to Messrs. Jackson & Bean, the contractors, during the quarter, has been 27,200 l., making a total of 1,226,213 l. since the commencement of the works.

The Inner or Harbour Wall is now built for its whole length; viz., 6,090 feet. In the head of the North Breakwater no progress has been made during the past quarter owing to the boisterous weather and the exposed position of this part of the work. The number of vessels that have sought the shelter of the New Harbour during the past quarter is 1,028; and in the year ending 31st March 1869, 3,117. The accompanying plan shows the extent to which the Works have been carried.
The formation of a Beaching Ground on the south shore of the harbour, suitable for carting.
The lengthening of the North Breakwater, as designed in 1845, by 2,000 feet, for sheltering that portion of the bay lying between the New and Old Harbour, and making it a safe and commodious roadstead of upwards of 370 acres of deep water. The lengthening of the North Breakwater by an additional 500 feet, which will increase the roadstead to 400 acres of deep water.
The construction of a Wooden Pier, commencing near the end of the North Pier of the Old Harbour, for the temporary accommodation of the proposed new mail packets, &c.
The extension, in a westerly direction, of the Wooden Pier, and for raising and altering of a portion of the North Pier in the Old Harbour.
The strengthening of the Wooden Pier in the Old Harbour, and for erecting a shed covering thereon.
The work in Old Harbour for postal accommodation.

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed,
22 July 1869.

Friday, 9th July 1869.

Resolution, THAT, in the case of the Telegraph Bill, the Standing Orders ought to be dispensed with; that the Bill be permitted to proceed on a clause being inserted securing to all existing Telegraph Companies, not having yet arranged with the Government, a right of arbitration (failing agreement) as to the value of their present rights and privileges.

---

Telegraph Bill read a second time, and committed to a Select Committee.

---

Monday, 19th July 1869.

Ordered, THAT the Committee do consist of the Marquis of Hartington, Mr. Hunt, and Five Members to be nominated by the Committee of Selection.

Ordered, THAT the Committee have power to send for Persons, Papers, and Records.

Ordered, THAT Three be the Quorum of the Committee.

Ordered, THAT the Committee have leave to sit and proceed on Thursday.

Tuesday, 20th July 1869.

Ordered, THAT the Petitions presented to this House respecting the Telegraph Bill be referred to the Select Committee on the Bill; and that such Petitioners as shall have prayed to be heard by themselves, their Counsel, Agents, and Witnesses upon their Petitions, be so heard, if they think fit, and Counsel heard in favour of the Bill against such Petitions.

Committee of Selection.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMITTEE.

Thursday, 22nd July 1869.

MEMBERS PRESENT :

The Marquis of Hartington.	Mr. Laird.
Mr. Ward Hunt.	Mr. Weguelin.
Mr. Baines.	Sir Smith Child.

The Marquis of Hartington was called to the Chair.

Preamble read the first time.

Counsel:—Mr. Denison, Q.C., and Mr. Simpson.

Agents:—Messrs. Wyatt & Co.

The following Petitions were read :

1. Henry Wilde.

Counsel:—Mr. Webster, Q.C.

Agents:—Messrs. Sherwood & Co.

2. Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta Telegraph Company, and British Indian Submarine Telegraph Companies (Limited).

No Counsel appeared in support of this Petition.

Agents:—Messrs. Dyson & Co.

3. Submarine Telegraph Company between Great Britain and the Continent, and the Submarine Telegraph Company between Great Britain and France.

No Counsel appeared in support of this Petition.

Agents:—Messrs. Darlington & Co.

4. H. H. Nicholls.

No person appeared in support thereof.

Mr. Denison was heard to open the case in support of the Preamble.

Mr. Frank Ives Seudamore examined.

On the question, "What chance has any private individual, if the Government are going to carry private messages, of competing with them for private messages?" being put in cross-examination,—

Mr. Denison objected to the question being put.

Mr. Webster was heard in support of his right to put the question.

Mr. Denison was heard in reply.

Room cleared.—The Committee deliberated.

The Committee determined that this question might be put.

Mr. Richard Spelman Culley examined.

Mr. Webster was heard to address the Committee in support of the Petition of H. Wilde, and called—

Mr. Henry Wilde, examined.

Mr. Frank Ives Seudamore recalled, and examined by the Committee.

Preamble read a second time.—Amendment proposed in line 22, to leave out from the word "order" to the word "to," in line 23—(Mr. Hunt).—Question, That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the preamble—put, and negatived.—Another Amendment proposed, in line 26, after the word "should," to insert the words "within the limits limits hereinafter named"—(Mr. Hunt).—Question put, That those words be there inserted.

ON THE TELEGRAPH BILL.

—The Committee divided:

Ayes, 4.
Mr. Hunt.
Mr. Baines.
Mr. Laird.
Sir Smith Child.

Noe, 1.
Mr. Weguelin,

Question, That the Preamble, as amended, is proved—put, and agreed to.

The Committee went through the Bill, Clause by Clause, and made Amendments.

Several new Clauses added.

Schedule considered, and agreed to.

Ordered, To Report the Bill, as amended, together with the Minutes of Evidence, to the House.

LIST OF WITNESSES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

Thursday, 22nd July 1869.

MEMBERS PRESENT:

Mr. Baines.
Sir Smith Child.
Marquis of Hartington.

Mr. Hunt.
Mr. Laird.
Mr. Weguelin.

THE RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. FRANK IVES SCUDAMORE, Examined by Mr. Denison.

1. YOU are the representative of the Post Office in this matter?—Yes.

2. Last year when the Bill was before the Committee there was no intention of obtaining a monopoly of the telegraphs such as is now proposed?—No.

3. The question was not raised by any of the opponents?—The question was discussed in the Committee, but it was not raised by any of the petitions.

Chairman.] It was not raised by the opponents, because it was not proposed by the Bill to take the monopoly.

4-5. Mr. Denison.] Just so; it was discussed in the evidence; you, I remember, gave some evidence upon the subject, and stated that it was not proposed to take a monopoly?—I did.

6. This year, whether from a change of masters or something else, I do not know, it is proposed to take a monopoly?—Yes.

7. That being a public question, I do not know that I ought to ask you any questions about it; I ought to take that as part of the principle of the Bill which the House of Commons has affirmed, at any rate till we hear what Mr. Webster says about it; now, with regard to what Mr. Wilde's own claim, you have read his petition?—I have.

8. Does it appear to you that the introduction of the monopoly clause will affect Mr. Wilde's interests?—No.

9-10. Will the Post Office be as good a customer for Mr. Wilde as he could have had if this Bill were not passed?—Yes.

11. I must put these questions in the dark, because I do not know his arrangements, but we will assume that he has reserved something to himself after 1870; have you gone into the question as to subterranean telegraphs against aerial?—I have endeavoured to ascertain whether his patent could be used by us, and I have been informed it could not.

12. You have already made an arrangement with the three great companies?—Yes.

13. Therefore you had the advantage of such assistance as their engineers could give you?—Yes.

14. Have you consulted them upon the subject?—I have consulted the engineer of the Electric and International Telegraph Company.

15. Have you been advised by the engineer of the Electric and International Company that this question of subterranean telegraph against aerial telegraphs has occupied their attention for a long time?—I have.

16. What conclusion have you come to upon consulting with the Electric and International Telegraph Company's engineer?—I have come to the conclusion that there would be no practical advantage in the adoption of Mr. Wilde's system.

17. Do you believe that the reservation of Mr. Wilde's rights in the patent of December 1863 is of any practical value at all?—I do not.

18. Is it a thing which you conceive to be capable of being arbitrated on at all?—I do not see how the arbiters could attach any value to it.

19. Was I right in saying that the Post Office would object, in the public interest, strongly to have any recognition of, I will call it an imaginary right of that kind, inasmuch as it is only a right to a patent, which has been for six years unworked by anybody?—Yes, we should strongly object to that.

20. It would bring upon you a great number of claims, which would expose you to great cost in trying them, and might possibly expose you to great cost in arbitration?—I can see no limit to the number of claims which would be brought upon us.

A

21. Every

Mr. F. I.
Scudamore.

1869.

21. Every single patentee, whose patent was unexpired, might make a similar claim upon you?—Yes.

22. Some of Mr. Wilde's patents are worked by the Globe Company?—Yes.

23. The Globe Company have already made a claim upon you, under the Act of last year, to purchase their undertaking?—They have.

24. That arbitration will, in the common course of things, go on?—Yes.

25. Will the railway companies still remain in existence with the power of telegraphing under the Act of 1868?—By the Act of last Session a separate system is to be set apart for railway business which will be worked by the railways.

26. If it should turn out that Mr. Wilde's patent after 1870 is anything that he can legally part with, he will be able to make an arrangement with the railway companies for the use of it during the remaining seven years?—Yes.

27. When I say railways, I mean canals also?—Yes, and every individual who wishes to set up a private telegraph.

28. This Bill only prohibits the working of telegraphs for profit?—Yes, the transmission of public messages.

29. Mr. Wilde states in his own petition or in one of the letters, I think in both, that his system is to lease to persons and companies the power of telegraphing from public offices to other public offices; that would not be carried on for a profit by them, so that he would still be able to do that consistently with the passing of your Bill?—Yes.

30. So that if his system is worth anything, putting aside the subterranean one if the other is worth anything, he would have an ample number of persons to deal with besides the Post Office from 1870 to 1877?—Undoubtedly.

31. The three great companies have made no arrangements with him?—No.

32. From information you have had from them, they were not at all likely to make arrangements?—No.

33. Therefore he will still have the same parties to deal with; the railway companies and canal companies, and he will have you as a substitute for the Globe Company?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Webster.

34. Do you think Mr. Wilde or any single inventor would have much chance, after this monopoly Bill passed, of getting his invention introduced except through you?—If his instrument were of value, I think he would have a fair chance of getting it introduced.

35. You are probably aware of the enormous difficulties which every inventor has in getting an improvement introduced?—No doubt there are difficulties.

36. The difficulty of getting an invention introduced is the greater, the greater the improvement, frequently?—I am not prepared to admit that.

37. I presume a great improvement displaces a great amount of existing capital and machinery, or may do?—It may do; it does not always do that.

38. Has your attention been sufficiently directed to the subject of the difficulties that inventors have to deal with, to know that it very rarely happens that a useful invention can be introduced till nearly towards the end of the term of the patent?—That is not within my knowledge at all.

39. Do you mean to say that you know of no such cases?—I call to mind no such cases.

40-41. I think Sir Charles Wheatstone may be generally looked on as the father of the present system; he had a good deal to do with it?—Undoubtedly.

42. Probably companies have been a good deal advised by him, or by those brought up in his school?—I cannot say whether they have or not.

43. He was called as witness, was he not, on the Bill last year?—Yes.

44. Did not he, on that occasion, express his opinion, at Question 1084, that he had not the least faith in telegraphy without wires and poles?—I do not recollect his saying so; you have the book before you.

45. Q. 1084. "You have no faith whatever in telegraphy without wires and poles? A. Not the least"?—Yes; I believe he said that with reference to a proposition to transmit messages without any conducting medium whatever.

46. I believe the general system (of course there are exceptions) is wires on poles?—Yes.

47. That was the system first introduced, and that is the system which has been mainly adhered to?—I do not know whether it was the system first introduced. I know they tried subterranean communication at a very early date.

48-49. The subterranean communication which was tried consisted of wires insulated in gutta percha and asphalte, and things of that kind?—I cannot answer that question.

50. At all events, whatever was the system then tried, the system of wires on posts has been substantially adhered to?—Undoubtedly.

51. I think Mr. Wilde's system is placing wires, such as are now placed on posts, in a certain combination sustained on porphyry or earthenware sections of cylinders, as shown in that tube?—That Mr. Wilde has explained to me as his system.

52. In fact it is a system for transferring the wires now on posts on to proper insulators in tubes?—Yes.

52*. I think, in the evidence of last year, you yourself were opposed to any legal monopoly?—I gave certain reasons for thinking that we did not require a legal monopoly.

53. But you not only thought that you did not require a legal monopoly, but you thought that a legal monopoly was a bad thing; at Question 127?—Yes, I remember saying that I thought a legal monopoly might lead us into some difficulties.

54. You said this: "In fact, on the whole, I am inclined to think that a legal monopoly would be a disadvantage instead of an advantage to us. If we had it, inventors and patentees of improvements, or so-called improvements, in telegraphic instruments and apparatus, would have to look to us, and to us only, for the use of their inventions, and even if those inventions were worthless, they would be able to make a strong appeal to us to try them, because there would be nobody else who could try them; but, on the other hand, if we had not the legal monopoly, and we declined to try inventions of real merit, the inventors would have some chance of finding others to carry them out. Q. With regard to improvements, do you think that the Government would be less likely to take up any known and and real improvements in telegraphic instruments than the companies would? A. On the whole, I think that the Government would be more likely to take up new improvements. In one respect we should be on nearly the same footing as the telegraphic companies have been with regard to improvements. When a telegraph company has had a large amount of capital locked up in any particular kind of instrument, it has naturally hesitated to employ another instrument, even although it might have great superiority over the existing one; and the Government, to a certain extent, would have the same disinclination, but the disinclination would not be quite so strong, because the companies have to find a dividend, and a good dividend, for their shareholders, whereas the Government need only make its system self-supporting. But there is another reason why I think that the Government would be more likely to take up new improvements, and that is, that no pressure whatever can be put upon a commercial company to adopt any particular instrument, however good it may be. They have always this answer: 'We do not want it, and we will not take it.' But any amount of pressure could be put upon the Post Office, through Parliament, to use a new instrument, if it is one of acknowledged merit." Probably you adhere to that opinion now?—Entirely, subject to a slight modification of my first answer; in my first answer I said, we should be the only people who could use these inventions. I ought to have remembered at that time that the railway companies would have the facilities which they now have.

Mr. Denison.] No; that was altered afterwards.

Witness.] However, I must make that alteration now.

55. Mr. Webster.] There is that alteration in the state of things that existed last year; railways are to work their own messages?—It was arranged last year that railways were to work their own messages, but as Mr. Denison says, not exactly at the time I gave that evidence.

56. Under the present system, you will have the railways working their own messages, and the Post Office working public messages?—Yes.

57. It was recommended last year that there should be a division between public messages and railway messages?—Yes; the railway messages are messages on the business of their trains; it is the railway signalling which it is necessary to carry on to secure the safety of the passengers who travel; but it is carried on in the same way as the public telegraphy.

58. I will call your attention to Question 1030, to Sir Charles Wheatstone, "Will you give us your opinion as to the desirability of the telegraphy for the railway and the telegraphy for the public being conducted upon the same wires, or upon different wires? A. My opinion is, that the railway system and the telegraphic system generally should never be mingled together. It has been necessary, perhaps, in the present state of imperfect development of the telegraph, to do so now and then; but in my opinion, the telegraphic system will never be complete until there is a total separation between the two interests, and the only agreement which should hereafter exist between the Government and the railway companies should be for way-leaves for the right of placing wires upon their lines"?—Yes; that is the arrangement that has been carried out.

59. On this question of monopoly, you are asked this question (2470), "You thought that the public would have more confidence if it were not a monopoly? A. Yes; I think that the public would always be able to say to themselves, 'The Post Office has got no monopoly; but if it does not do its work well, it is in our power, at all events, to get up something.' And, again, if we had a legal monopoly, we should shut every door but one, that is, our own door, to all inventors; and every inventor then, even the gentleman who proposes to carry messages without any wires at all, would be perpetually coming to us, and saying, 'You must try our system, because you are the only people who can try it.' Q. On the other hand, the stimulus would be removed, to a certain extent, for entertaining discoveries, or, if you had no legal monopoly, you would have the answer ready for everybody, 'Go and try elsewhere'? A. You may be quite sure that we should always be ready to try any good invention, because we should always save money by doing it." Then Question 2476: "So that you will have in this way the advantage of monopoly without its responsibility? A. We think that there would be another disadvantage in a legal monopoly; if we had it, and if anybody attempted to infringe it, we should be bound by law to prosecute, and I think that that is an extremely disagreeable duty to be imposed upon a public department, and one that I should be very sorry to have the responsibility of." Those were your reasons then; you probably adhere to those reasons now?—Yes, I do.

60. The present Bill, in fact, would give you that monopoly, which you thought last year you might do well without?—Yes.

61. You have purchased, I think, what was called Wheatstone's Company; the Universal Private Company; the A B C Company, as it was called?—Yes.

62. Are you aware that they have telegraphs at Manchester?—Yes.

63. And, I think, strictly private telegraphs; that company was introduced with the view to carry out the private system?—Yes; but they have a small public trade in the West Highlands.

64. But so far as Manchester was concerned, it was essentially a private company?—Essentially.

65. At Question 1147, you are asked this: "The Universal Telegraph Company is a company formed for commercial purposes, and expecting dividends? A. Yes; the principal object is to furnish public offices and private establishments with private telegraphs." That, I think, was so?—Yes; the only public trade they had was in the West Highlands, in Cantyre.

66. At Question 2529, you are asked, "Have you arranged with the Universal Private Telegraph? A. Yes. Q. Are you aware that they afford facilities to private individuals and manufacturers to have telegraphs? A. Yes; and we should do so as well. Q. There would be no diminution of those facilities? A. No. Q. So that any private individual along a line of railway would be able to obtain permission from you to connect a wire with his own manufactory or house? A. Undoubtedly; we should continue to carry on precisely the trade that they do. Q. You would be able to carry on the trade much cheaper than they do, having your wires everywhere, whilst they have not wires in every direction?

A. Yes;

A 2

Mr. F. J. Scudamore

22 July 1869.

Mr. F. I. Scudamore. 22 July 1869. A. Yes; and we should also be able to carry it on much cheaper, for this reason: they employ Professor Wheatstone's A B C instrument, and the price is rather high, because, of course, they only have a small number of them; but we know that, taking the instruments in the quantities in which we should want them, we should get them at a considerably lower rate. Q. You would still be able to make use of that instrument? A. Undoubtedly." Probably you adhere to that opinion now?—Yes.

67. This is the class of instruments (pointing to an instrument), the A B C instrument?—Yes.

68. You produce the magneto-electricity by the foot, and work these letters by it?—In Sir Charles Wheatstone's instrument it is not produced by the foot, but by the hand.

69. In Sir Charles Wheatstone's instrument you produce the magneto-electricity by turning with the hand, and work the keys with the fingers?—Yes.

70. In this instrument of Mr. Wilde's you produce the electricity by a treadle, and you have both the hands to work the instrument?—Yes; but you require both your hands; you do not in Wheatstone's.

71. In this you use one foot and two hands; whereas in Wheatstone's you use two hands?—You use one hand to turn the handle, and one to work the keys; but here you want two hands to work the keys, and the feet to turn the treadle.

72. So far as regards the A B C system, that meaning one which anybody could read, the two are in that respect the same?—Yes, as far as the indicators and the dials are concerned.

73. The title "A B C" was given to it as against the symbolical system, where you have symbols indicated by a number of vibrations, as described in the evidence of 1868?—Yes.

74. To go back to Manchester; are you aware that at Manchester the wires are carried over the houses, and that Sir Charles Wheatstone's system was introduced there by the renting of instruments?—Yes, renting the instruments, and, I presume, paying a rent for the wire also,

75. The basis of that operation was rental?—Yes.

76. Are you aware that the basis of the Globe Company's operations was not rental, but selling itself out and out?—I am not aware.

77. Generally, do you know that, that so far as there was a contest between the two systems commercially, the Universal Company's system was rental, and the Globe Company's system was sale out and out?—I know that the Universal Telegraph Company's system was rental; I do not know what the Globe Company's system was.

78. You do not know that the general system of the Globe Company was sale out and out?—No, I do not.

79. Are you aware that there was a great deal of competition in Manchester between those companies?—I cannot say really.

80. Do you know to what extent the instruments were sold and adopted in Manchester and the neighbourhood of Manchester?—I know the Universal Private Company has a considerable business in Manchester; I do not know what business the Globe Company does.

81. Do you concur in the opinion expressed by Sir Charles Wheatstone that it would be almost hopeless for any company to work against the Government?—It would depend entirely on the nature of the tools the company worked with. If they were superior to those of the Government, I think they would beat the Government.

82. Looking at the difficulty there always is in introducing new inventions, do you really seriously think that there would be any chance for a company to get on, or for a private individual to live against the Government starting de novo now?—In the case of instruments adapted for such a trade as the Globe Company were carrying on, I think a company might compete against the Government if it had superior instruments.

83. Mr. Denison.] You mean for private purposes?—Yes.

84. Mr. Webster.] You think that could be done under what we call the monopoly system, which you are introducing by this Bill?—Yes, because we do not ask for a monopoly of private telegraphs.

85. But you are going to carry private messages?—Undoubtedly.

86. Therefore, the Government would be doing exactly what was done by the Universal Private Telegraph Company as regards private messages.

Mr. Denison stated that this Bill was only complained of as a monopoly Bill, and submitted that the question of competition having been settled last year, Mr. Webster could not re-open that question.

87. Mr. Webster.] Under the Act of last year, in point of law, there might have been competition for public messages?—Yes, for public messages.

88. And private messages also?—Yes; and there may be competition for private messages still.

89-90. But not for public messages?—No.

91-2. The Wheatstone Company at Manchester, for instance, carried both public and private messages?—Not at Manchester; their only public trade was in the West Highlands.

93. Do you think, supposing this Bill should pass, a company would have a trade which would compete successfully with the Government for private messages, unless they could also have private messages?—Yes; I do not think the possession of the public trade gives the Government any additional facilities for carrying on the private trade.

94. What right would an individual have for the carrying of private messages to attach his instrument to the Government wires?—None whatever, unless the Government gave him permission.

95. A person, who was sending private messages in competition with the Government to the same place, must make his own terms with the Post Office for attaching his instruments to their wires?—He need not use our wires; in fact, it is extremely improbable that he would; for private business of this sort the wires must be distinct; there must be distinct wires between each man's house and his office; the instrument connected with that can work no other wire; he would have just the same facilities after the Government had commenced private business as he had before.

96. The Post Office would have distinct wires for the private business, distinct from the public business?—Necessarily they must have it so.

97. In

97. In that respect, the two systems would be identical?—Yes.

98. Have you experienced increasing difficulty in getting wires over towns?—I have never begun the work yet; what my difficulties may be I have yet to learn.

99. Do you happen to know what is the state of things in the suburban districts, as regards getting wires across in the air?—I believe there is very little difficulty indeed.

100. Private gentlemen do not object?—I believe not.

101. You do not know the state of things in Manchester, for instance?—I know that the way-leaves paid by the Universal Private Company are extremely small, therefore I apprehend the difficulty is very little.

102. By way-leaves, you mean air-leaves, or leaves for going over the tops of houses?—Yes, over the house tops: house-leaves.

103. Last year you expressed this opinion: at Question 2461, you were asked whether there were any other companies to come against you, and you said there was one called the Globe, but you thought their powers had expired?—I was under that impression at the time.

104. At that time you knew of no other but the Globe, and you thought that their powers had expired?—I knew of two others, but I thought they were all dead.

105. Have any others turned up since?—Yes, two others, with which we are in communication.

106. Which are those?—Bonelli's and the Economical.

107. Those are the only three, so far as you know, before you?—The only companies incorporated by special Act.

108. Did you understand that the Globe Company had only power to send private messages and not public?—That was my impression.

109. That is not the fact, is it; under the Act of Parliament they have general powers, have not they?—I was under the impression that they were incorporated for private business only.

110. The Articles of Association might have limited them to private business?—They got the Act of 1863 incorporated with their Act; I suppose that opens to them public business.

111. Having the Act of 1863 incorporated with their special Act gave them powers for public messages?—Yes.

Mr. Coates stated, that he proposed to cross-examine the witness on behalf of the Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta Company, and the British Indian Company.

Cross-examined by Mr. Coates,

112. I believe we are nearly agreed, and, certainly, I am not going to weary the Committee needlessly, but this Bill gives you the monopoly of transmitting messages within the United Kingdom, does it not?—Yes, it gives us the monopoly of messages transmitted from one place in the United Kingdom to another place in the United Kingdom.

113. I wish it were so, but it is not so; if you intend that, I daresay you will amend your Bill to that extent; are you prepared to make any provision for this case. A foreign telegraph company, for instance my clients, lay their cable to the shores of Great Britain; the monopoly will prevent them from transmitting those messages within the United Kingdom; are you prepared to make such arrangements on the part of the Post Office as would enable those messages to be transmitted?—I think the Postmaster General would be bound to make arrangements for the collection and transmission to the starting point of any such cable, of any messages which the public may desire to send over his wires to that cable.

114. Mr. Hunt.] What you want is this: that when your messages arrive on the shores of the United Kingdom, they shall be punctually transmitted?—

Mr. Coates.] Just so.

Witness.] That is fully intended.

114*. Mr. Coates.] Without favour or affection?—Certainly without favour or affection. We shall throw upon the public the favour or affection. They must say by which route, if there are alternative routes, they wish their messages to go.

115-16. I mean that the terms which the Post Office will make with the foreign companies shall, in like circumstances, be the same?—Certainly.

Re-examined by Mr. Denison.

117. My learned friend, Mr. Webster, began about Professor Wheatstone advising most of the companies. The Globe Company have not been advised by Professor Wheatstone?—No.

118. They have been rather his antagonists?—Yes.

119. And you, having bought up Wheatstone's Company, the Universal Private Company, you have now a demand to buy up the Globe Company, which demand you are acceding to?—Yes.

120. Does not that seem to solve the question as between the Globe Company and Wheatstone's Company?—I think it does.

121. I will not read the questions referred to in the evidence of last year, but have you altered your opinion upon any of those points. For instance, there was Question 128, which my learned friend read to you. Perhaps without quite seeing where he was going, you said the Government would be more likely to take up any improvements than the existing companies; you probably still think so?—My opinion is stronger now than it was then. I think the public would compel us to do so.

122. One word more about the Globe. I do not know what the Act of Parliament authorises them to do, but, in point of fact, are they doing any public telegraphy?—None.

123. There is no mistake about that?—No.

124. They are, in point of fact, a private telegraph company?—Yes.

125. And as such they would be arbitrated upon with reference to what they are doing, and have been doing; that is so, is it not?—Yes, that is so.

126. Under the Act of last year private people, the Globe Company, or Mr. Wilde, would have had no more and no less power to connect with your wires than they have at present?—Not in the least.

127. As to giving licenses, the power and motive, and interest, would be just the same under

Mr. F. I. Scudamore.

22 July 1869.

Mr. F. I. Scudamore. under the Act of last year as under the Act of this year, as regards private messages?—Undoubtedly.

1869.

128. Sir Smith Child.] Have you seen the claim which the Globe Company have made?—I have.

129. I presume that includes the value of all their property, and their prospective privileges?—It does.

130. Have they not practically a monopoly of Mr. Wilde's patent?—They have a monopoly of it till the year 1870, and then they have a right to acquire a further monopoly for seven years, upon arbitration terms.

131. Then up to the end of 1870, they have the exclusive right to claim the use of Mr. Wilde's patent for the remainder of his patent?—Yes.

132. They have a right of refusal, in fact?—Yes.

133. Mr. Hunt.] Under the Act of last year, you will step into the shoes of that company, as far as regards Mr. Wilde's patent?—Yes; when we buy their rights, we shall buy such privileges as they have from Mr. Wilde.

134-5. Sir Smith Child.] That being so, has Mr. Wilde the right to sell that which the Globe Company have the refusal of now?—I do not think Mr. Wilde has anything to sell.

136-7. I asked whether the Globe Company had not the actual refusal, and whether they could not claim up to the end of 1870 the right to buy the remainder of Mr. Wilde's patent?—I believe that is so.

138-9. If so, that will give them the exclusive right to that which Mr. Wilde had got to dispose of?—Yes.

Mr. RICHARD SPELMAN CULLEY, called; Examined by Mr. Denison.

Mr. R. S.
Culley.

140. I BELIEVE you are Electrician to the Electric Telegraph Company?—I am the Engineer.

141. Have your company been directing their attention to the question of subterranean telegraphy for a long time?—Yes.

142. Are they thoroughly acquainted with Mr. Wilde's patent, as disclosed by the specification?—No; as far as I know, it has never been before our company; I am not aware that it has.

143. Surely you know it, because you reported upon it; you know the nature of it, do not you?—Yes, I have seen it.

144. You made a report to the Post Office upon it?—Yes.

145. Are you at all surprised at his patent having been left now, ever since 1863, without being made any use of, even by the Globe Company?—Not in the least surprised.

146. I will take your opinion, subject to my learned friend's attempt to shake it; do you believe that any such system can be practically worked as against the aerial one?—I think not.

Cross-examined by Mr. Webster.

147. The subterranean systems that have been tried hitherto have been systems in which the wires were insulated in gutta percha, and such things?—Yes; the system which has been hitherto tried has been that of continuous insulation, as contrasted with insulation only at certain points.

148. The wires have been insulated wires, that is, wires insulated in gutta percha, or some other insulating substance, laid in the ground in ropes, or in tubes, or otherwise?—Yes.

149. You were examined before the Committee last year?—Yes.

150. At No. 934 you are asked this question: "I take it from what you have said, that it is your opinion that no system is likely to come into use within a comparatively short time that would dispense with the use of posts and wires?—A. I do not think it is possible; in fact, I know it is impossible?"—Yes.

151. And you adhere to that opinion now?—Yes; but may I explain what that means, for I think there is a little confusion about it. That answer was given in reference to a proposition of Mr.

Haworth's, who patented a system of working without any electrical conductor at all; working without any wires, whether aerial or subterranean. It is not a question of posts and wires, against wires buried in the ground, but a question between working with wires and without any wires at all.

152. Sir Smith Child.] Merely by earth current?—Not by earth current, or by any method known to electricians. He professes to have discovered a plan which amounted to this, I think; you had a galvanic battery placed in this room; you got the exact direction of New York; you placed this apparatus so as exactly to face New York; you had another apparatus at New York, placed so as exactly to fix this room, and the message would go from here to New York. It seemed to be almost equivalent to telling the message where to go; it was quite as absurd a plan as that. It was with reference to a plan of that sort, that I gave the answer the learned counsel has just read.

153. It was mere theory?—I can hardly tell what it was, without it was a scheme to get up a company.

154. Mr. Denison.] It went so far as a patent?—It was patented; I could not understand what it meant.

155. Mr. Webster.] I believe for small distances it succeeded?—Certainly not.

156. Not for small distances?—Certainly not, not for any distances.

157. Not across the Serpentine?—Not this plan of Mr. Haworth's.

158. I will not limit myself to Mr. Haworth's; but for small distances, have they not been able, by laying a certain amount of wire on the earth, to send messages across the water without any wire at all?—That is perfectly true; but a wire was used there.

159. Not across the Serpentine?—But a wire was used from one point on the shore of the Serpentine, to another point on the shore of the Serpentine.

160. Without going into this visionary matter of Mr. Haworth's, or any other person, according to your experience no subterranean system has answered hitherto as against the aerial?—I have not said so; and I do not think so; my answer there had no reference to the subterranean system system versus the aerial system; but to a system with wires, as against a system without wires.

161. I ask you now, having reference to the subterranean systems that have been tried, are you of opinion that the aerial system will live against the subterranean still?—Not if a cheap system of subterranean wires can be found. It is merely a question of expense; there are a few other points; but a subterranean system would be excessively useful.

162. I may take it that a subterranean system would be excessively useful?—Yes.

163. Do you know of any subterranean system like Mr. Wilde's, as shown in that model, having been tried?—I do not know that that has ever been tried. I am not aware of its having been tried.

164. Of course, a trial of that system would involve considerable expense; a trial on a large scale would involve considerable expense?—Am I to take that as the system you mean; that model there?

165. Yes?—Yes, it would.

166. And probably would not be likely to be resorted to, so long as the existing posts and wires of the aerial system were in a workable condition?—I am sure if there were any value in it, it would have been tried long since; we are constantly using subterranean wires in London. It is not more than two years since I put down two miles of 40 wires, and I should have been very glad to have used a cheaper system, if I had had it.

167. Those were insulated wires?—Those were insulated wires; we want a cheap system of subterranean wires.

168. A cheap system of subterranean wires is a great desideratum?—Yes.

169. Have you had any experience of the difficulty of getting across Manchester or other towns with posts on houses?—We never use posts on houses if we can use subterranean wires, except where we have only one wire, and there it would not pay to lay a subterranean wire.

170. There is an increasing difficulty, is there not, in dealing with towns; in getting across towns?—Over houses?

171. Yes?—Yes; and there will be more and more difficulty as the wires increase, of course.

172. The constant reparations, and so on, that are necessary, are very objectionable to the persons in the houses?—I have less experience almost than any engineer upon that; we have never used them; we have preferred the underground wires; we do not use the others; we have never liked them.

Re-examined by Mr. Denison.

173. Although you have a large experience of underground wires, do you think that this system would be a cheaper system than that which you use?—I do not think it would work for our purpose for anything like a long distance; it might work for a quarter, or half a mile, or even more than that. I have not been acquainted with that system (pointing to the model) for more than two days; I saw it only two days ago, but the system of discontinuous insulation, that is to say, threading wires through insulators like those, has been familiar to me for I do not know how long; I have no recollection of the time when the idea was new to me.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MR. HENRY WILDE, Examined by Mr. Webster.

174. I BELIEVE you are the Petitioner in this case?—I am.

175. Have you spent many years on the subject of electric telegraphs?—I have.

176. And I believe you have taken out several patents?—Yes.

177. When did you first turn your attention to introducing your telegraphs into use?—About nine years ago.

178. What was the first step you took?—I took out several patents in connection with telegraphs, and I took some steps towards the formation of a company for working the patents.

179. Did you find considerable difficulty in introducing the inventions?—Very considerable.

180. Where did you commence business?—In Manchester.

181. Was there any other company then carrying on business, in either public or private messages in Manchester?—There was the Universal Private Telegraph Company.

182. What was the system they adopted?—That company worked Professor Wheatstone's patents.

183. Did they rent or sell the instruments?—The instruments, I believe, were generally rented.

184. What system did you adopt?—We executed contracts for a specific sum, generally.

Mr. Denison submitted that the agreement should be produced.

348.—

185-6. Mr. Webster.] I will ask the witness to produce it, if you like. (To the Witness.) Before you made the agreement with the Globe Company did you introduce any system for telegraphs in Manchester?—Yes.

187. What was that?—We began to erect telegraphs a little before the company was formed.

188. Did you adopt the system of rental, or the system of selling out and out?—The system of selling out and out.

189. Was that a different system to that which you then found to be in existence?—Somewhat.

190. How did you manage to get over the houses?—We had very great difficulties in getting over the houses; the owners objected very strongly to the men going on their premises; damage was done to the roofs, and in the suburbs of Manchester we found it almost impossible to take the wires over the houses.

191. How did you get the wires up at all?—We had to apply for an Act of Parliament.

192. Previously to applying for an Act of Parliament, did you come to an agreement with the Globe Company?—Yes.

193. Will you produce that agreement; I think a resolution was passed by the Globe Company?—Yes.

194. Had you any agreement with them in point of form?—Not in point of form; we have been working under the agreement.

195. Was it a resolution by the Globe Company?—A resolution by the Globe Company.

A 4

196. Mr.

Mr. R. S. Culley.

22 July 1869.

Mr. H. Wise.

Mr.
H. Wilde.
1869.

196. Mr. Denison.] Where is that resolution ; have you got it here?—I believe my solicitor has it.

197. You have not the books of the Globe Company?—I think we have the book of the company.

198. Mr. Webster.] Is that the resolution under which you are working (handing a paper to the Witness)?—It is.

199. “Resolved,—That the directors be recommended to acquire exclusive licenses for a term of seven years, for the manufacture and sale of instruments constructed according to the several patents held by Mr. Wilde, and numbered and dated respectively as follows: No. 858, 8th April 1851; No. 1,994, 10th August 1861; No. 3,240, 3rd December 1862; No. 1,200, 13th May 1863, and also an exclusive license for the patent No. 516, 25th February 1863, so far as such patent can be applied for working alphabetical dial telegraphs for the purposes of the company; also a general license for the residue of the term during which such patents are in force, for the sum of thirteen thousand pounds sterling; one half of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, and the other half in shares, acknowledged to be fully paid up; the company being at liberty to purchase, for the remainder of the term, the exclusive use of the above-mentioned patents upon such terms as may be mutually agreed upon by Mr. Wilde and a gentleman appointed by the directors, and, in case of disagreement, an umpire to be appointed, whose decision shall be final.” That is the resolution under which you are working?—Yes.

200. You never had any other agreement?—Those are matters which I have left in the hands of my solicitor.

201. Mr. Denison.] You know whether there is an agreement or not, surely?—That resolution has been acted upon.

202. Surely there has been something else in writing?—Only by resolution.

203. Another resolution?—There has been a resolution confirming that.

Mr. Denison.] We must have the whole of it; the title seems to be in a very hazy state.

203*. Mr. Webster.] As regards this payment in money, have you received any of that?—I have not.

204. Have you had any shares allotted to you?—Yes.

205. The Globe Company obtained an Act of Parliament, and you have been putting up instruments since?—Yes.

206. Have you found great difficulties in competing in Manchester with the telegraphs?—As I mentioned before, we have experienced considerable difficulty.

207. For instance, you have had to compete with the Universal Company?—Yes.

208. Do you think you would be able to carry on private business, the Government carrying both public and private messages?—There is no doubt that, with the Government competition, we should find it very difficult.

209. As regards this underground system, which you have sought to introduce, assuming the Government should have this monopoly, what field would you have for introducing the underground system which was the subject of your further patent?—It would rest entirely with the Government to adopt it. Of course I should have no other field if the Government acquired the monopoly.

210. Is there extreme difficulty in introducing an invention of that kind, which interferes materially with an established system?—Very considerable difficulty.

211. We have been told that six years is a sufficient period to have got it introduced; what is your experience of that?—My experience of inventions of that character is very different.

212. What is about the cost of the posts system?—The posts system will range from 30 l. to 40 l. per mile for a single wire.

213. How many wires can you put on a post under ordinary circumstances?—About six wires I should think.

214. What would be the extra cost of a wire and post telegraph?—About 8 l. or 10 l. per mile.

215. What may we take as the average cost of a post telegraph carrying six wires?—About 80 l. per mile.

216. What is about the average duration of the posts?—Perhaps 10 years.

217. In your system, I understand, you propose to insulate the wires in insulators in tubes?—In tubes; in pipes similar to those that convey gas and water.

218. What would be the cost of that per mile?—It would depend on the number of wires in the pipe; with about 60 wires, the cost would be about 26 l. per mile per wire.

219. What would be the relative cost of the two systems?—That would be much more expensive; I am not prepared to give you that at once.

220. As regards durability, how would it be?—As regards durability, when that system was laid the maintenance would be nominal.

221. Do you agree with the last witness that the subterranean system is a great desideratum?—I do; I think it indispensable, if telegraphic communication is to be extended in the suburbs, and in rural districts, outlying districts, and between the great centres as well.

222. From your experience in Manchester, do you know that the aerial system is subject to increasing difficulties?—Very great difficulties; in fact I do not think there has been any increase in the number of wires over Manchester for three or four years.

223. In how many places have you introduced your instruments?—Perhaps 40 or 50.

224. Have you introduced them, at Oldham, at the works of Messrs. Platt Brothers?—I have.

225. At Strutt's, at Belper?—Yes.

226. In Sheffield and in Huddersfield?—Yes.

227. And in various other places besides Manchester?—I have.

228. For the next seven years we are told, as appears, in fact, from that resolution, the Globe Company will have the exclusive license?—Yes.

229. And they have the option of taking the exclusive license for the remainder of the time?—They have.

230. Have they as yet come to any agreement with you respecting this other patent?—Not yet.

231. The introduction of the Bill of last year rather suspended operations in telegraphy?—Not the introduction of the Bill of last year; that, that, of course, induced us to suspend operations in some respects, but we were not doing a large business, and it cannot be said to have affected materially the amount of business we did.

232. If this Bill should pass in its present form, what do you conceive will be its effect on yourself personally, as regards your reversionary interest in this patent?—If the Government do not make a satisfactory arrangement with the Globe Company, my reserved rights in the patent will be very considerably diminished.

233. Looking at the difficulty of an independent inventor in introducing these things, do you believe you would be able to make them available to any extent in the face of a monopoly in the Government?—Not unless the Government adopt them.

234. Government having, as in the case of the Private Telegraph Company, both public and private telegraphs in its hands, should you think that you would have any chance of introducing private telegraphs as against them, or in competition with them?—I think not.

Cross-examined by Mr. Denison.

235. I should like a little more information about this Globe Company; meanwhile has the book appeared yet?—(Mr. Wood.) It has been sent for.

236. Mr. Denison.] You mean that there is nothing between you and the Globe Company except this resolution and another?—That is as we stand at present; they have been acted on.

237. I say that there is nothing between you and the Globe Company except this resolution and another?—Not beyond that.

238. You say that you have received no money at present from the Globe Company?—None.

239. You had a lot of shares assigned to you which are reckoned as paid up?—Yes.

240. How many, or representing what amount?—About 6,500 l.

241. Has any dividend been received on them?—No.

242. Probably the shares are not quoted in the market at all?—They are not.

243. Who manages the Globe Company?—Myself and my partner, Mr. Low.

244. Yourself and Mr. Low managing the company have not taken any steps to bring into use this patent of December 1863?—Not yet; not so far as relates to the subterranean system; there is one portion of that patent which we have introduced.

245. Which is that?—For an electric light for lighthouses.

246. That does not touch this question?—No; it is not in connection with telegraphy.

247. How long has that electric light portion of the patent been introduced?—Comparatively recently.

248. You had better give us the date?—Our experiments began with the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses in 1866, and they are just about completing.

249. Under which patent is this machine?—That is 1863; the early patent of 1863.

250. How long has that been in use?—It has been in use since 1864.

251. That did not take long to get into use, then?—No, because it was available at once.

252. Are any of your other earlier patents in use?—There are three patents connected with this instrument.

253. All in use?—All in use.

254. And they all come into use soon?—Tolerably soon.

255. You have told my learned friend that there are 40 or 50 places at which you have put down these telegraphs; how many actual telegraphs have you put down for anybody?—About 40.

256. When you said 40 or 50 places, you did not mean 40 or 50 towns?—No, 40 or 50 works.

257-8. And they are between different private persons' houses and their other establishments?—Not between the houses, between works generally.

259. Your wires are over-ground wires at present, I suppose?—Yes.

260. How are the Universal Private Company's wires carried?—They are carried over-ground.

261. They carry a great lot in one cable, do not they?—That system has been adopted to a very limited extent.

262. I happen to have been concerned in their arbitration, so that I know more about it than you think; that is their way of doing business, is not it?—Not generally.

263. Do you mean that the great bulk of their business is not done in that way, that is to say, 60 wires within one cable?—The great bulk of their business is not done by cables.

264. How is it done?—By open wires.

265. Over-ground?—Yes.

266. In the air?—In the air.

267. Have they found any difficulty in carrying that out?—I should think very considerable difficulty.

268. Have they been formidable competitors with you?—They have.

269. They have a much larger business than yours?—They have a much larger business than ours.

270. The figure given by arbitration as contained in this Bill, is 183,000 l.?—Yes.

271. You have no objection to tell us, indeed it must be registered somewhere, how much of your capital, I mean the Globe, is paid up?—From 1,200 l. to 1,500 l.

272. How long has that been all paid up?—That has been paid up for several years, perhaps.

273. Most things have been paid up for several years, perhaps?—Four years.

274. I see first it was registered at 700 l.?—That was a mere form; so far we have not differed in that respect from other joint stock companies.

275. Your Act of Parliament of 1864 cost you something?—It did.

276. How much?—Nearly on 1,000 l.

277. And there is 1,500 l. paid up altogether?—Yes.

278. One thousand pounds of that has gone away for the Act?—Yes, about 1,000 l.

279. You say that the subterranean mode of telegraphy is a desideratum; if I did not misunderstand Mr. Culley, there is a very large amount of subterranean wires at present?—Yes.

280. What do you mean by saying that it is a desideratum?—Subterranean wires in London, of course, are very peculiar. The system of subterranean wires which I propose to lay down

Mr.
H. Wilde.

Mr.
H. Wilde.

is not only for towns, but to connect between one town and another.

281. That is not an answer to my question. I ask you what you mean by saying that a subterranean mode of telegraphy is a desideratum, when we hear from another witness that it is commonly used?—I mean a good system.

282. You mean Mr. Culley's system is not a good one?—It is a good one as far as it goes, but it will not answer for long distances on account of the induction.

283. Is yours used for long distances?—It has not been used at all.

284. Has it not been tried for long distances?—Only experimentally.

285. For what length of distance has it been tried experimentally?—When I say experimentally, I have made experiments with wires under most unfavourable conditions.

286. What length of actual mileage has it been tried on?—It has not been tried on any.

287. Not even by your own company, the Globe?—No.

288. Between no two towns, for instance?—No.

289. You say if Government do not make a satisfactory arrangement with the Globe Company, your rights will be prejudiced; what do you mean by "making a satisfactory arrangement with the Globe Company"?—If the Government do not purchase my rights in my patents connected with the company.

290. Do you mean yourself or the Globe?—The Globe Company have a valuable property in my instruments; in my patents.

291. You know they have given the Government notice to purchase their concern, and the Government must purchase it?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Webster.

292. As regards the Globe, they have the option; you cannot compel them to purchase your rights?—No, not my reserved rights.

293. If they chose to do that, then it may become matter of arbitration; but if they do not, then you will be without compensation?—Yes.

293*. Sir Smith Child.] How many shareholders are there in the Globe Company?—I think about 20.

294. Mr. Weguelin.] What is the total subscribed capital?—From 1,200*l.* to 1,500*l.*

295. At whose cost have you laid down these various private telegraphs?—My partner and myself have found the money for the company; I may explain, that we were obliged to work these telegraphs as a company, because we had no power to carry wires over towns as private individuals.

Mr. Denison was heard in opposition to the clause proposed by Mr. Webster, on behalf of Mr. Wilde.

The Chairman stated that the Committee were unanimously of opinion that no case had been made out for the clause proposed by Mr. Webster.

Mr. FRANK IVES SCUDAMORE, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. F. I.
Scudamore.

296. Mr. Hunt.] THE Bill of last year, proposed no monopoly in the hands of the Postmaster General?—It did not.

297. You were examined last year on that subject?—Yes.

298. And you stated at Question 126, "So long as we do the work well, with such an organisation as we have, we can defy competition." Are you of that opinion still, or have you modified it?—I still think the Post Office can keep its own against competition, but I have seen reason to think, if we have not the monopoly, we might be subject from time to time to very considerable annoyance, annoyance which would not in the long run prevail over us, but which might for a time subject us to some slight loss.

299. At Question 2464, Mr. Goschen asked you, "With regard to the question of legal monopoly, have you given your attention to that?" You say "Yes; and my opinion still is, that the Post Office does not want a legal monopoly. They need not fear competition even in lucrative districts." Are you still of that opinion?—Since the passing of the Bill of last year, I have heard of one or two schemes that were set on foot to pass over most lucrative districts; I do not say those schemes would have succeeded, but probably they would have given us annoyance for some little time; I have heard, for instance, of a scheme to connect the Stock Exchanges of London, Liverpool, Manchester, and one or two other towns in the north by wires, for the transmission of Stock Exchange telegrams only. Supposing such a scheme to have been tried, it might certainly have drawn away for a time, a portion of our most lucrative business, but I still believe that in the long run, our superior mode of doing business, and the greater sense of security which the Stock Exchanges would have had in Government management, would have enabled us to beat the promoters of the other scheme; I believe, however, that the scheme would have been an annoyance.

300. You think occasions might have arisen in which you might have had to buy off companies who were getting up schemes for the purpose of competing with you?—At least we should have been continually subjected to applications to buy off companies.

301. That is as regards the Post Office themselves, and the protection of the public revenue; now, as regards the public, I wish to direct your attention to Question 2477, and a question or two following, in the evidence of last year:— "With regard to monopoly, the fact of there being no legal monopoly will tend to keep the Post Office up to its work, will it not? A. I think it will. Q. Supposing that there was a manifest improvement in the mode of transmitting telegraph messages, and the Post Office would not adopt such an improvement as would greatly increase the cost of sending messages, it would then be open to any private person or company to start such a thing, if the Post Office was dogged, and refused? A. Yes. Q. And so far, there being no legal monopoly, is the advantage to the public? A. Yes." Are you still of that opinion?—I think that the public would have have a slight advantage if we had no legal monopoly, but I do not know that it would be a very material addition to the pressure they can put upon us, when we have a monopoly, through the press and through Parliament. I believe the Post Office to be so much under the pressure of public opinion that it must use any great improvement that is brought out from time to time.

302. Have you seen the notice that I have placed on the paper providing for monopoly for a limited period?—Yes.

303. My proposal is that the Bill should provide for a monopoly in the Post Office for a limited period, say seven years, so that the Post Office would have the opportunity of coming to Parliament and asking for an extension of that term during the term, by which means you would be protected during the term from being asked to buy off companies that might be got up, and at the same time there would be an inducement to you to give the public every accommodation in regard to telegraphic communication; have you considered that?—We should be undoubtedly protected through the term, but we ought not only to be protected through the term, but to be protected against any person claiming compensation when we came for a renewal of the monopoly at the end of that term; that ought to be secured, undoubtedly.

304. Supposing it were provided, first of all, that the monopoly should be for the period of seven years, and it was provided that, in the event of any Bill being introduced into Parliament during such term providing for the extension of the period of enjoyment of, or for the perpetuation of, such exclusive privileges, no person or company should have any locus standi to be heard against such extension or perpetuation; would not that be a complete protection to you?—It would be a complete protection to us against any speculator, but I still doubt whether the onus ought to be thrown on the Government of getting a renewal of its monopoly; I am inclined to think the onus ought to be thrown on the public, of taking away the monopoly from the Government, which they could do hereafter even if Parliament were now to give a perpetual monopoly.

305. Sir Smith Child.] Parliament could not, in fact, give a perpetual monopoly?—It would be a monopoly during good behaviour, and any succeeding Parliament could take it away, or the present Parliament could take it away.

306. Mr. Hunt.] Supposing you had a monopoly for a term, renewable from time to time, at the option of Parliament, it would give the public that advantage which you said they would have supposing there was no legal monopoly, or nearly that advantage?—Yes, undoubtedly it would.

307. Practically you would have protection from speculators?—Yes.

308. So if the public, and Parliament as representing the public, were satisfied that the Post Office was doing its duty, there would be no question about renewing the monopoly?—The Post Office would have one little rod in addition held over its head, but it would be such a small rod in addition to the pressure of public opinion which it already has over its head, that it would not be very much.

309. Are you aware that there is a strong opinion in many quarters against giving Government a monopoly?—I have heard that opinion expressed.

310. Do you know the grounds of that opinion?—The general ground is, that a Government entrusted with a monopoly become lazy; but I do not allow that that holds good with reference to the Post Office; it does its work under the eye of the public; it does a work from day to day before the public which is extremely acceptable when well done, and which is perfectly intolerable when badly done; and the result is, that every shortcoming on the part of the Post Office is discovered at once and complained of; we are always working under pressure.

311. Chairman.] What is about the sum which will have to be paid by the Government for the purchase of the telegraphs?—About six millions and three quarters; rather less, probably.

312. That sum includes, does it not, something in the nature of goodwill?—Yes.

313. You cannot state exactly how much, probably?—I should think as nearly as possible two-thirds would be in the nature of goodwill; perhaps I am overstating that; it may be something rather less.

313*. Mr. Denison.] But you cannot tell that, because it depends upon the arbitrators, and the agreements of last year?—When I answered the question, I was thinking what proportion of the whole scheme was represented by plant which we had actually got.

314. Chairman.] At all events, a considerable proportion is in the nature of payment for goodwill?—Certainly.

315. Would it be possible to establish an entirely new system of telegraphic communication over the whole kingdom, for a less sum than that six millions and three quarters?—Certainly.

316. Very considerably less?—Certainly; we could establish the whole system for at least what it has cost the companies to establish it.

317. Between certain large towns, or within large towns, a system might be established at a very considerably smaller expense?—Yes.

318. If the Government did not get the monopoly, a company might be set up to establish such communication which would expend less money than we have done in the purchase of the existing telegraphs?—Undoubtedly.

319. And they would have nothing to pay for goodwill?—They would have nothing to pay for goodwill; they would have much greater difficulty than the existing companies have had in establishing a system of telegraphs, because they would be entirely excluded from the railways; you must remember that we have, by the Act of last Session, the exclusive way-leave over railways, so that no other company can come upon those lines which are the most favourable lines for telegraph companies.

320. They would have the roads to fall back on?—They must go on the common roads, and they can only do that by consent; there again they would probably have a greater difficulty in getting consent after the Government system was established than before.

321. Which would be the most remunerative part of the telegraph business?—Up to the present time I suppose the business between the Stock Exchanges of the large towns of the kingdom and the business between this company and foreign parts has been the most remunerative

Mr. F. I. Scudamore.

Scudamore:

part of the whole; domestic messages have formed comparatively a small proportion of the whole number of messages, and they have not been so remunerative as the other.

322. Is the business between large towns or in large towns more remunerative than between large towns and country districts?—There is very little business in large towns; that business is very insignificant at present.

323. What is the extent of the business between large towns in proportion to the other business?—The business between large towns is the very cream of the business; there is no question about that.

324. You have told Mr. Hunt that it is possible in your opinion that a company might be established to carry on telegraph communication between two or three large towns, which might take from us, for a time, the cream of the business?—I have been told that a company was on the verge of establishment for that purpose.

325. When the Government are going to undertake this business all over the country, do you think there is any injustice in asking for a monopoly?—No, no injustice certainly, so long as we continue to do the work properly.

326. Do you think there is any hardship upon the inhabitants of large towns, who might fancy that under the system of companies competing with each other they might get their messages conveyed more cheaply than under the proposed system?—No; the inhabitants of large towns will get a very considerable advantage out of our system, even though they do not get it in the reduction of the rate for town messages. The inhabitants of large towns are not engaged solely in telegraphing to each other, they telegraph to all parts of the kingdom, and they will get in return for the uniform rate which we impose upon them in the towns themselves a very large reduction of rate on the messages they send to distant parts of the country, of which they send quite as large a proportion, if not a larger proportion, than they do of messages within the towns.

327. The Government proposes to extend the system very much more widely than it has ever yet been extended?—Yes; there is at present one telegraph office for about 13,000 of the population; under our system there will be at starting one for every 6,000 of the population, so that we shall give at least twice the accommodation, at the outset even, in the greater contiguity of offices to the people.

328. That you consider to be a great public advantage, which probably the country would never have obtained, or probably not for some years, under the system of open competition?—Undoubtedly the country would not have obtained such an advantage for many years to come.

329. When the Government are about to invest a large sum of money in securing this great public advantage, do you think it just that they should be protected against private individuals taking from them the most lucrative part of the business they look to to recoup their expenses?—Yes; I do think they should be protected.

330. Then, if it is assumed that the monopoly is just in principle, is it not more reasonable that it should be given permanently, subject to the revocation of Parliament, than that it should be given for a limited period?—I think it is; I do not think the Post Office ought to be obliged to go periodically and ask for its renewal; there would be practical difficulties in the Post Office going to Parliament, Session after Session, and asking for a renewal of the monopoly of carrying letters, though nobody disputes that they should have the monopoly of carrying letters.

331. Would not a limited monopoly look rather as if it were a concession or a loan granted by Government to which it was not in justice entitled?—Possibly it might have that appearance.

332. You think it would be an inconvenience if the Post Office had to come every seven years and ask for a renewal of this monopoly?—I think so.

333. Mr. Weguelin.] If the Government were to be exposed to competition at any time, now or hereafter, would it not have been very much more economical to the Government themselves, to have established their own telegraphs in competition with private companies, instead of buying up the telegraph companies?—Undoubtedly it would have been much more economical for the Government to have started in competition with the telegraph companies, supposing the House of Commons would have admitted such competition.

334. There is nothing in the present Acts affecting telegraph companies that would prevent the Government establishing their own telegraphs all over the kingdom?—I think, under the Telegraphs Act of 1863, the Government could not, without the consent of Parliament, have set up a telegraph system, because they must have come to Parliament for the funds.

335. Irrespective of that, the Post Office could establish a telegraph system of its own?—Irrespective of that, the Government, like any other person might, under the Telegraphs Act of 1863, have set up a telegraph system, but it must have got the funds.

336. The essential part of the agreement with the telegraph companies was the buying up of their goodwill, the understanding, therefore, being that the Post Office should have a monopoly of the telegraph system?—At least there was this understanding, that those whose property and goodwill we bought, never should go into business again; though not expressed, that clearly was understood.

337. That is as regards the companies whose undertakings you bought; but as regards other people, if the Government pay a large sum for the business, they must see that that business is not interfered with?—Yes.

338. And the effect of competition would be to destroy that business?—No; I do not think the effect of competition would be to destroy the business in the long run, but it would certainly annoy the Government, and perhaps lessen its profits for a time. I think we could hold our own against any competitors; that was my reason for not advocating the monopoly before; but I never doubted the right of the Government to ask for a monopoly, after the expenditure of so much money. I have seen reason to think, since the passing of the Bill last year, that we might be annoyed, though not beaten by competitors.

339. Do not you think, if a limited monopoly were given to the Post Office, there would be, as the time approached when that monopoly would cease, a great variety of schemes got up in order to compete with the Government when the monopoly nopoly should cease?—I think that might be prevented, if it were provided that no scheme should have a right to claim compensation when the Government came for a renewal of its monopoly. I think you might guard against such claims in the way Mr. Hunt proposes.

340. Mr. Baines.] Did I rightly understand you to say that there is at present one telegraphic office for every 13,000 of the population, and that you would increase the number to one for every 6,000 of the population?—Yes, as nearly as possible.

341. Sir Smith Child.] But there are very few towns with a population of 6,000 which have not got telegraphic communication at present, are there?—I mean not only towns but country districts.

342. Would you provide telegraphic communication for all country districts having a population of 6,000?—I did not quite mean that; my meaning was this: taking the population of the whole country together and dividing the number of telegraphic offices into it, that gives at present one telegraphic office for every 13,000 of the population; but taking the number of telegraph offices we shall have, and dividing it into the population, that gives one office for every 6,000 people. I do not say that any particular district would have a telegraph office or be without it.

343. There is a very material difference between those two things?—Yes, but that is the only way open to me, unless I had a large map, of showing you how much closer we shall get to the population.

344. You propose to give telegraphic communication to every money-order office?—Yes, to every money-order office.

345. Mr. Laird.] You say you propose to reduce the rate of charge?—Yes, we propose to have a uniform charge of 1 s. throughout the country.

346. Will it be the same in towns?—It will be the same in towns; but I fully expect that in the course of two or three years, we shall have a uniform charge of 6 d.; I have very little doubt that we could afford, if that were the only question, to commence with a 6 d. rate at first; but that rate would bring an enormous increase in the number of messages, and until we know accurately what number of messages we can carry, and what business we can do with the staff, we think we ought not to bring that increase of work upon us; that really is the only reason for not charging a lower rate than a shilling.

347. At starting, you will charge an increased price for town messages as compared to what they at present pay, will you not?—It is an apparent increase but not a real increase; because, though the town messages are conveyed by telegraph over only a small distance, the transmitting and receiving of them between the telegraph offices and the addresses, amounts practically to a considerable increase of the charge; the offices are so far from the senders and receivers of messages, that the charge for portage places the whole charge above 1 s.; but in future our 1 s. will cover the whole charge in consequence of our offices being near to the senders and receivers of messages; I can show you that the 6 d. messages are not to be much thought of, when I tell you that now, out of six millions of messages carried annually, only

160,000 are carried over the whole kingdom at a 6 d. rate. We will say we impose an additional charge upon these 160,000 messages of 6 d. each; but there are still two-and-a-half millions of messages carried at rates of 1 s. 6 d. and upwards, and on all those messages there will be a reduction. Now 160,000 is to two-and-a-half millions, about as 1 to 15, therefore, for every message on which we impose an additional charge of 6 d., we are going to take off a charge of 7 s. 6 d.

348. Sir Smith Child.] But that does not console the senders of the 6 d. messages?—There comes in my other statement, that the sender, or rather the receiver, of the 6 d. message has to pay so much for portage, that that brings the total charge to him above 1 s.; and from the greater proximity of our offices to the public, the result will follow, that in the greater majority of cases the 1 s. will include the portage.

349. Does not the 6 d. charge generally include portage at present?—Only within a short distance of a telegraph office.

350. Within a mile, I think?—Yes, I believe so, but the greater number of the receivers are beyond a mile.

351. Mr. Weguelin.] Are these 160,000 6 d. messages of which you have spoken, principally commercial messages, or social messages?—I can hardly tell you; I am not able to say.

352. You made an analysis, from which it appeared that the greater portion of the messages sent off are commercial messages?—Yes, but I have not made an analysis of the 6 d. messages specially; I think the probability is, that they are chiefly social messages.

353. Chairman.] Under the Act of last year, the rate is to be uniform, is it not?—Yes.

354. So that the Government will not have the same means of meeting competition which a powerful company would have?—Undoubtedly a competitor might come in in a large town with a 3 d. or a 6 d. rate, and we could not take the same means as a private company would have taken, namely, lowering the rate, because if the rate was lowered in one large town, we should have to lower it elsewhere.

355. If you lowered the rate in London under the Act of last year you would have to lower it also between London and Ireland?—Yes, because the Act prescribes a uniform rate.

356. Mr. Hunt.] When the Bill was under discussion last year there was a great pressure put upon the then Government to reduce the rate in the Bill to 6 d., was there not?—Yes, there were two questions raised; one was that we should have a uniform rate of 6 d. for all messages, and I have already given the answer to that, "We shall be glad to have a uniform rate of 6 d. when we know that we can do the work;" the other was that there should be a uniform rate of 1 s. for general transmission, with a 6 d. rate in towns. We contended that that would be giving an undue advantage to towns over the country, because if there were a 6 d. local rate, every townsman would be able to send his message, say, from Manchester to John of Groat's house for 1 s., and a message from Manchester to Preston Wick for 6 d.; whereas a man in the country would only have the 1 s. rate, and no local rate for himself; therefore we thought it only fair and logical to have a uniform rate throughout the country. I am told that the distance of free delivery in the case of the 6 d. messages is only half a mile.

357. But supposing the Post Office, against public opinion, was keeping up the rate for messages, their having to come to Parliament for a renewal of this monopoly would give the public the advantage of an opportunity of insisting upon the rate being lowered, would it not?—I think, even without that, the public always has an opportunity of enforcing its wishes.

358. Still the public would be able to put that pressure upon the Post Office at the time they came for a renewal of their monopoly?—Yes; but under the Bill as it now stands, there will be an annual period for putting on that pressure.

359. How so?—The Bill, as it now stands, provides that an account shall be laid before Parliament every year, of the revenue received, the expenses incurred, and the surplus of revenue over expenditure; and that we shall also show what portion of that surplus is required to pay the interest on the capital; and that then if there be any residue, it shall be applied to cancel debt: no doubt, when that annual account comes before Parliament, if it shows a very considerable surplus, the public would have an opportunity of endeavouring to obtain a reduction of the rate.

360. Still, their leverage would be much less than if they had the power of resisting a Bill for the renewal of the monopoly, would it not?—I do not know: in the Post Office we are in the habit of looking upon the leverage of the public as something which we cannot overcome under any circumstances.

361. Chairman.] The expenses under the Act will have to be voted annually, will they not?—Yes, annually.

362. Mr. Weguelin.] You think that it would not be desirable to have the Post Office monopoly made terminable at a certain date?—No, I think it would be very inconvenient, and would give rise to a great many troublesome questions from time to time.

363. Mr. Hunt.] Do you not think that you would cater more for the public if it were so?—No, I think we do all we possibly can for the public.

364. The public do not always believe it?—I cannot admit that we could do more.

365. Why should not these words come out of the preamble: “Whereas in order to ensure the charge for the transmission of telegraphic messages being as small as possible,” it is expedient that exclusive privileges with respect to conveying telegraphic messages, should be conferred upon the Postmaster General; some people might think that that would not ensure it?—It is in order to ensure the uniform charge being as small as possible.

366. Mr. Baines.] You could not charge such low terms to the public without a monopoly as you could with a monopoly?—No.

367. That is the reason therefore why it is expedient that these privileges should be conferred upon the Postmaster General?—Yes.

RETURN to an Order of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 28 May 1869;—for,

COPY "of PLANS for the NEW LAW COURTS on the EMBANKMENT SITE, with a LETTER from the ARCHITECT."

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE FIRST COMMISSIONER OF WORKS,
&c., &c.

5a, Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields,
24 May 1869.

Sir,

IN compliance with your request I have prepared two sets of plans, which I have the honour to send you herewith.

Three of these plans show how the proposed New Courts of Justice may be placed on the site selected for the purpose by you, and lying between the Embankment roadway on the south, Howard-street on the north, King's College on the west, and the Temple on the east.

The other two plans show how a building of similar contents might be planned so as to occupy the site already purchased on the north side of the Strand, without any additional purchases of land whatever.

The adoption of the new site on the Embankment, or of the old site on the north side of the Strand (without any purchase of additional lands), would equally involve an entire alteration of the plan which I prepared under the direction, and which received the approval, of the Courts of Justice Commission. That plan depended entirely on my being able to widen Carey-street on the north side, and to alter the boundaries of Clement's Inn and Bell-yard. Without this power, for which additional purchases of land were absolutely required, my scheme was impossible.

In the case of both sites, I may observe, that as the area to be covered with building is so much smaller than was originally proposed, it will be necessary to omit many departments which were included in my former plans. On neither site would there be any possibility of finding space for all the offices of the Probate and Divorce department; and probably the Appellate Court, the Bankruptcy Department, the Admiralty Offices, the Land Registry and Middlesex Registry, or some of them, might also have to be omitted. It does not come within my province to suggest which of these departments should be included, and which omitted, but they would be about the same on either site. I propose also to reduce the number of Courts to eighteen in all, with the addition, if required, of a large spare Court. The Court of Appeal would then have to remain in Downing-street, and there would be no provision for a Bankruptcy Court.

With these prefatory remarks, I proceed to report upon the advantages which the two sites offer, and to explain the principal features of my plans, and, for convenience, I shall take the scheme for either site under the same heads, seriatim.

These heads will be—

- (A.) Approaches to, and roads round, the building, and character of surrounding buildings.
- (B.) Light, quiet, and air.
- (C.) Arrangement of building involved by the nature of the site, and its surroundings and levels.
- (D.) Advantages or the contrary afforded by levels of ground.
- (E.) Advantages or the contrary from an architectural point of view.

LETTER RELATING TO THE ### PLAN FOR PLACING THE NEW COURTS ON THE THAMES EMBANKMENT.

EMBANKMENT
PLAN.
Approaches.

(A.) THE APPROACHES to the building are shown on the accompanying block plan. They are many, and in every respect admirable. They possess the merit, which cannot be too much dwelt upon in the case of such a building, of being not only ample for the purpose, but also of being such as would for the most part be free from all noisy traffic, except that which is coming to the building itself. The Embankment roadway will probably never be a very great thoroughfare for carriages; but, if it were, the space between the road and the front of the buildings, and the vast open space on the river side of it, would prevent the traffic ever being an inconvenience in the way of noise. The Metropolitan District Railway appeared at first to present a very serious difficulty, the station authorised by the Act of Parliament being opposite the centre of Norfolk-street, with a long opening above it for the purpose of ventilation and light. I am glad to be able to report, however, that all difficulty on this point seems to be capable of easy remedy. I have gone into the matter with the engineer of the railway, Mr. Fowler, who, at my suggestion, has prepared a plan showing how the railway station might be moved to the bottom of New Essex-street, whilst the ventilation and light are provided for by two moderate openings in front of the south-east angle of the New Courts of Justice, and a third in the angle of the Middle Temple garden. I have ascertained that there would be no objection on the part of the Benchers of the Middle Temple to this concession of an opening in their garden; and I am of opinion, that with these alterations the neighbourhood of the railway will do no great damage to the proposed building, whilst the convenience of having a station so close to it cannot be exaggerated. The station will also be more convenient for the public, being at the end of a fine new street, and close to the steamboat pier, which again will be most usefully placed as affording excellent access by water to the new Courts.

On the east side of the building, it is proposed to form a new street, following to some extent the line of Essex-street; this will involve the purchase of the whole of Essex-street, and will enable me to deal with the gradients of the new street in the most convenient manner. A continuation of this street across the land already cleared on the north of the Strand would join Carey-street just opposite the end of Serle-street, and so form a junction with Lincoln's-inn Fields.

On the north side of the building an entirely new street would be formed. Howard-street would be widened by the purchase and alteration of the houses on its north side, and would be lengthened so as to be the whole length of the new building from King's College to Essex-street.

Finally, a street would be left on the west side of the building, opening under an archway to the Embankment, and continued as far only northward as Howard-street.

These streets would afford on every side admirable accesses to all parts of the building for the general and professional public. But, besides these, it would be possible to make use of two other modes of approach which might be most useful.

The first of these is the Terrace carriage-road, which already exists in front of Somerset House. By a few trifling alterations this may be opened to the Waterloo-bridge-road, and continued on to the angle of the new building, so as to give carriage access for the use of the Judges very nearly to the level of their own rooms; and an entrance from the same terrace would give access, by a few steps down, to the attorneys' rooms and corridor below the Judges' floor.

The other mode of access is not one which I can do more than throw out a suggestion for, but it seems to be worth mention, as indicating a mode in which the complaints of the separation of the Courts from Lincoln's Inn, by the Strand, may, at any rate, to some extent, be met. You will have to resell the land purchased in Essex-street, and to pull down the houses for rebuilding; and it appears to me that in doing this it might be possible to set back part of the fronts of the houses behind open arcades, so as to afford communication with the north side of the Strand by a bridge on the east side of St. Clement's-churchyard, and, if thought desirable, by a tunnel at the same point. A passage might be carried at a level from the base of the north-east angle of the building, and as the difference of level between the Strand and Essex-street at this point is 14 feet, it might pass under the Strand roadway, and rise with steps to the level of the ground on the north side of the Strand. This passage would occupy the area in front of the lowest floor of the new houses east of Essex-street. At the same point, a bridge rising about 25 feet above the Strand, would give access on the same level to the rooms and offices above the Judges' rooms in the new building, so as to make them, in fact, very much more accessible than they would otherwise be. I make these suggestions in order to show that the position of the new building on the south side of that great thoroughfare, the Strand, may, if proper steps are taken, be so manipulated as to prevent any inconvenience arising to the vast number of lawyers and lawyers' clerks who will daily have to come to the new building from the other side of the Strand. The passage from the Strand-bridge to the second floor of the new offices would be treated somewhat like one of the well-known "rows" at Chester, whilst the passage to the tunnel would be an open one, and the tunnel itself might have an opening opposite the end of St. Clement's Church, for light and ventilation, without interference with the Strand traffic. It is important to observe that these means of communication with the new building would be really useful, without involving any ascending of staircases on one side of the Strand for the sake of descending on the other. All experience shows that people will not make unnecessary ascents of this kind; but if you can provide passages without such drawbacks, then they will use them, and so avoid the inconvenience or danger of the Strand crossing.

EMBANKMENT
PLAN.
Approaches.

It may be as well here to say that the exact distance from the south-east angle of Lincoln's-inn Fields to the north-east angle of the proposed building will be two furlongs and 47 yards, whilst the distance from King's Bench-walk, in the Inner Temple, to the same part of the building will be one-and-a-half furlongs. This north-east angle of the new building will be the natural entrance for barristers, and, if it is desired, it will be easy to make a bridge across Essex-street at this point, communicating with Fountain-court, Middle Temple. It may also be as well to observe that the distance from the south-east angle of the new building to the existing offices of the Probate and Divorce Court, in Doctors' Commons, along the Embankment roadway and the new road to the Mansion House, will be as nearly as possible half-a-mile.

I say nothing as to the more distant approaches to the building. It is obvious that where so many good and distinct modes of access exist, the more distant approaches will never be crowded by reason of the existence of this new building. The traffic will distribute itself, or filter, so to speak, into the Strand, and from thence, through no less than four practicable streets—Surrey, Norfolk, Arundel, and Essex-streets, to the Courts; whilst the Embankment road, the railroad, the river, and the approach in front of Somerset House, will very largely assist in distributing the traffic equally to the various entrances all round the building. Distant alterations of approaches on the north side of Carey-street would not, therefore, be properly chargeable to the New Courts; they would be metropolitan improvements in the strict sense, and not a necessary consequence of the new building, which would, in fact, be only very slightly benefited by them.

I have always laid great stress on having the surroundings of such a building as the New Courts of Justice of good and harmonious character, and such as could not in any way affect the proper and convenient use of every part of it; and on this site they will be singularly good. On the south, we shall have the outlook on the finest river, I suppose, of which any capital in Europe can boast. On the east, almost the whole buildings will have the benefit of the Temple-gardens, and the distant sweep of the river to Blackfriars, and you will provide, no doubt, that the new buildings which will replace the existing Essex-street houses will be erected with strict conditions that they shall be in harmony with the new building, and confined entirely to the use of barristers or solicitors. So, again, on the north side of Howard-street, and its prolongation, the whole property will pass through the hands of Government, and whether the opportunity is taken to provide here for refreshment rooms, for law stationers and booksellers, or for chambers, it will equally be certain that the buildings need be in no way an inconvenience, or an eyesore to the occupants of the New Courts. On the east side, the prospect will not be so cheerful, owing to the singularly lugubrious character of the King's College buildings. But there will be nothing otherwise objectionable in it; the light will be good, and from the whole of the three upper ranges of windows it will be possible to see across the river to the Surrey side of Waterloo-bridge. To conclude, it is difficult therefore to conceive a public building being erected on any site in London with greater advantages in its surroundings than this site affords.

PLAN.
Approaches.

(B.) Light, quiet,

(B.) WHAT I have already said as to the surroundings of the new building bears to a great extent also on the quality of the light, quiet, and air which it will enjoy. But I may say that I have always maintained that, if the admirable light and air afforded by the river are to be made the most of, it must be by making some considerable opening into the heart of the building from the Embankment. With this view I propose to arrange the bulk of the offices to the east of the Courts round a spacious quadrangle, which will be open on its southern side to the river, so that all the rooms which surround it will partake of the vast advantages which the river side of the site affords. So, again, on the eastern and western sides of the site, owing to the position of existing buildings, the light and air will leave nothing to desire. On the northern side they will be the same as in all other London streets of good width, neither better nor worse. The whole of the site will have unusual advantages as regards quiet. There will be foreign traffic on one side only, viz., down Essex-street; but I suppose this would never be very great in quantity. And there would, no doubt, be some annoyance to the south-east angle of the offices from the passage of trains. This annoyance I have endeavoured to reduce as much as is possible, and it will not affect any other part of the building.

(C.) Arrangement

(C.) THE SHAPE of the ground is so completely different from that which I had to deal with in making the previous plans, that I have had to re-arrange my whole scheme. My principle was, from the first, to separate the Courts from the offices by internal streets and quadrangles; and, in the plan approved by the Courts of Justice Commission, this principle was carried out as completely as possible. If it can in any way be accomplished, I am persuaded that this is the arrangement which will secure the greatest simplicity and ease in the use of the building, and cause the least confusion; and though I think it will be impossible to secure it completely on the Embankment site, I have still kept the same principle in view, and have adhered to it as closely as I could.

The broad feature of my plan now is, that I put the Courts, central hall, and all the rooms for juries, witnesses, and the public, to the western side of the site, and the great group of offices round a quadrangle to the east of it. But, as the upper and lower portion of the buildings which surround the central hall and Courts would not be required for their use, I propose to provide some of the offices, as, e. g., the Vice-Chancellors' chambers—above and below the Judges' rooms. They are so planned as to staircases and mode of access as, I believe, to minimize any confusion which might otherwise arise from their neighbourhood to the Courts, and their position will no doubt be felt by the Judges to be better than it would have been in my former plan.

The arrangement of the Courts and rooms connected with them is substantially the same that it was in the plan approved by the Commission. In that plan I was always pinched for space between the Strand and Carey-street, and I was compelled therefore to make the small internal areas for lighting the rooms below the Courts themselves smaller than I would have wished. I am able, in the new plan, to give a few more feet to each of these areas, and so to make a great improvement by putting the jury rooms immediately under the Courts, whilst I also improve the jury staircases, and provide lobbies at the back of the bench to all the Courts, as well as improve the light to a number of rooms and corridors.

I propose to give the public an entrance to the central hall in Howard-street, opposite Norfolk-street, and other entrances at its eastern and western ends. In this way every facility will be given for access to the Courts which surround this hall, whilst it will not form a natural line of thoroughfare for people who have have no business to transact in it. The public coming from the railway, the steamboats, or the Embankment, will all enter by the eastern quadrangle. But, to prevent the annoyance which would be caused if this were used as a public carriage thoroughfare, I propose to make its pavement at two levels, divided by a terrace or flight of steps across the centre. Carriages then will be able to enter the quadrangle either from the north or from the south, but will have to return by the way they came.

EMBANKMENT
PLAN.
Arrangement.

A good deal has been said as to the access for the Judges; and as it has been held to be important that they should not have a great height to mount to their rooms, I propose to avail myself of the roadway already existing on Somerset House-terrace for their benefit. They will probably always come to the Courts from the Embankment roadway, and I assume that some carriage access will be contrived from thence to the western side of Waterloo Bridge, so that they will be able to drive or walk to an entrance only some 10 or 12 steps below the level of their own rooms. Here they will have, as in my previous plans, a continuous corridor, entirely without disturbance by the professional or general public, whose staircases will not open into it. I can also provide a Judges' entrance in Howard-street, or on the Embankment, if it is thought desirable to have either of them.

The Bar rooms will, I think, be best placed to the north-east of the central hall, where they will be most easy of access from both the Temple and Lincoln's Inn.

The detailed arrangement of the offices, to which I have devoted some months of continuous and earnest labour, and which had received the assent, not only of the Courts of Justice Commission, but also of almost all the heads of departments, will all require re-consideration and re-arrangement. The knowledge which I have of the requirements of the various offices, and the plans already approved, will, of course be of great assistance to me in making fresh plans. How far the amount of accommodation asked for is to be granted or curtailed will probably require some reconsideration, if the cost of the building is to be strictly limited to a fixed sum. But it is not out of place here to say that soon after my appointment as architect to the New Courts, I applied for the appointment of a sub-committee to go through all the provisions for rooms contained in the "Instructions to Architects" issued by the Commission, and that, with their assistance, the requirements were reduced by nearly 40,000 superficial feet. I believe that still further reductions may be made in some of the offices, and that it might be well to have accurate plans made of all the offices in which the business is transacted at present, so as to be able to judge fairly of the amount of enlargement which may properly be asked for and granted, with a view to facilitating the progress of business, and meeting the just requirements of the officials.

(D.) THE SLOPE of the ground from the Embankment up to Howard-street is rapid, and, at first sight, presented considerable difficulties, there being a rise of no less than 23 feet from the Embankment to the highest point of Howard-street. I have bestowed considerable pains on this part of the subject; and I think I see my way to using these levels so as to make them rather an advantage than the contrary to the convenience of the building. In the first place, I have found it necessary, on various grounds, to give up the idea (which was propounded by the first promoters of the Embankment site) of raising the whole building upon an artificial substructure to the level of the Strand. The expense of such a substructure would be counted by hundreds of thousands of pounds, whilst there could be no compensating increase of convenience, but rather a great deal of inconvenience.

of site.

I have preferred to adopt the more common-sense plan of taking the levels of the ground as they are, and building to suit them. And the advantage of this course is, that I am able to make entrances at various levels, and so to give many offices the practical effect of being on the ground floor, which, on a level site, would have to use flights of steps up or down. Thus I have ground floor entrances on the Embankment, and at higher levels in Essex-street, and still higher in Howard-street, and from Somerset House-terrace. And, if my suggestion of a bridge across the Strand is ever adopted, there will be the still further advantage of enabling people to go from the Strand to the upper part of the building, with an extremely moderate ascent of steps. I have marked the levels of the various streets and rooms on my block plans with the levels above the Ordnance datum line;* and I think a little study of these will explain better than words can the levels of the principal parts of the building. The floor of the central hall would be 4 feet below the Howard-street entrance, and about 15 feet below the Strand. The Courts would be arranged, as to their level in relation to the hall, precisely as they were in the plans approved by the Courts of Justice Commission; and their floor would be 11 feet 6 inches above Howard-street (i.e. exactly on a level with the Strand). The Attorneys' corridor would be 1 foot 6 inches above the Howard-street entrance; and the Judges' corridor 8 feet 6 inches above the Terrace entrance, and 15 feet 6 inches above Howard-street, supposing it is thought desirable to give the Judges an entrance on this side as well as at the south-west angle.

EMBANKMENT
PLAN.
Levels.

(E.) BEFORE I thoroughly went into the question of a design for the Embankment site, I had not realized some of the advantages which it affords. It is true that I allowed, in the discussion on the subject at the Society of Arts Rooms, that the Embankment site was preferable to that on the north side of the Strand; but I protested against the unfair disparagement of the latter site, as it was proposed to be formed by means of additional purchases, and I pointed out how these had enabled me to design a building, which would not only be very convenient and very conveniently placed, but which would also, I hoped, be an ornament to London. At that time I had thought of the Embankment building as raised on a terrace like that in front of Somerset House. I foresaw that my building would then rise far higher than Somerset House, and that the suggestion made by some one to add a storey to Sir W. Chambers' building was not one which I could ever endorse. I foresaw also considerable difficulty in planting my building on the curved line of the Embankment, without danger of producing an unpleasant result. But in working out the plan to suit the site, I think, as is so often the case in architectural designs, that the very difficulties of the case have proved to be in the end its greatest gains. It is so difficult to do more than express an opinion in a Report on such a point as this, that I have thought it best to make a rather careful drawing, showing what the effect of the building would be from a possible point of view. This drawing (which, as regards architectural detail, must of course be regarded as only a rapid preliminary sketch) is now before you, and, I think, shows how very great an opportunity the site offers for a very grand architectural composition, without the slightest sacrifice of the usefulness of the building. The somewhat irregular frontage of the Embankment is met by advancing the eastern end of the building as near as the railway will allow to the roadway. In this way I have contrived to make the general line of frontage of the new building very nearly parallel with the line of the Embankment wall. In front of my great quadrangle I have introduced what would, I think, be a striking feature—a grand circular colonnade. This circular arrangement is most convenient, as giving a regular termination to the internal quadrangle, and also a regular line when viewed from the outside in connection with the curve of the Embankment wall and road. The irregularity of the frontage gives opportunity for extremely good effects of light and shade, on which, above everything, I lay great stress in a building of such long frontage; and it involves also a necessity for contrast with the front of Somerset House, which I cannot but think is a fortunate necessity. In architecture nothing is more effective than contrast naturally obtained. And I can conceive no less satisfactory mode of dealing with a building on this Embankment site, than any attempt to repeat the somewhat monotonous lines of Somerset House in a building which, if it were designed and planned on the same system, could not be either in a line with it, or parallel with the Embankment wall, and must therefore offend the eye in every point of view.

One very great advantage which the building will have consists in the various points of view from which it can be seen. From Waterloo Bridge (from the farther end of which my drawing is taken) I find the view will be most admirable, because not only will the whole front be seen, but owing to the height of the bridge above the Embankment, the central hall rising above and behind will also be well seen, and will have the most important effect in binding together together and combining the general features of the composition. Again, any one who goes to Hungerford or Westminster Bridges, and notices the gap between Somerset House and the Temple, will see at once how much such a space will be beautified by the occurrence of a succession of bold vertical lines, forming a varied sky-line, an effect which I think the disposition of my plan will give very completely.

It is important also to say here that in the drawing I have made I have taken no liberties whatever with existing buildings. The space between Somerset House and the New Courts will be exactly as I have shown it, and an even better space for seeing the eastern side of the building will exist between it and the Temple Library.

The top of the parapets of my building will be as nearly as possible level with those of Somerset House, and the raised portions of my design—the central hall and the towers—will be so far removed from Somerset House as not to affect it. On the other hand, by omitting a terrace in front of my building, I not only am able to utilize the whole of it, but at the same time my building gains enormously in apparent height.

The general line of frontage is advanced as far as the front of the terrace of Somerset House. This is, of course, a great advantage to my plan, and does no harm, in my opinion, to Somerset House. If the building were set back to a line with Somerset House, it would be hardly at all seen by any one coming from the westward, whereas, as I have planned it, one of the very best views would be obtained from this direction, and Somerset House Terrace is so large an erection that it may properly be taken as the building line for anything which is built on this part of the Embankment.

PLAN FOR PLACING THE NEW COURTS ON THE SITE BETWEEN THE STRAND AND CAREY STREET.

I proceed now to give a similar explanation of the plan which I have prepared to show how the already purchased land between Carey-street and the Strand may be used for the New Courts of Justice, without the purchase of any additional land whatever. In the instructions which I received from you to prepare this reduced sketch plan, you requested me to bear in mind that the ascent to the court level by staircases from the street must be of no greater height than would be the case on the Embankment site, and that the same facilities for carriage access, &c., must be provided on the one site as on the other. The plan I have prepared fulfils these conditions as far as possible, I believe, and may be considered under the same heads as that for the Embankment site.

CAREY-STREET
PLAN.

(A) THE OBLIGATION to confine such a building within the land already purchased is one which puts the greatest difficulties in the way of a satisfactory arrangement of the plan. It is perfectly obvious that no one can have sanctioned the purchase of such a site with the impression that the purchases were to terminate with those which have been already completed. Nothing, as will be seen by my plans (where the boundary of the land already purchased is marked by a red line), could well be less convenient than the outline of the site, and no provision is made for the amendment of any of the buildings surrounding the site, or of the approaches to it. The difficulties connected with this subject were made apparent as soon as the competing architects were first of all consulted, and, after some discussion, they were finally informed that they might all assume that they were to deal with a site measuring 510 feet from north to south, and that they might make a give-and-take arrangement with the property on the western side of the site, so as to make its general outline rectangular. These directions turned out to be so vague and elastic that no two of the competitors dealt with exactly the same ground, though all of them without exception assumed that additional land would be purchased or obtained by exchange.

(A.) Approaches
building, and character of

In order to provide approaches of some kind to a building on this site, it will be necessary to convert Bell-yard and Carey-street into wide streets, and to make entrances to the office quadrangles from Bell-yard and from Pickett-street. The Pickett-street entrance will be used by all vehicles coming from the west; Bell-yard by those coming from the east; and Carey-street by those which come from the north. The Embankment road and railway will send all their passengers up by Norfolk, Surrey, and Arundel streets to the Strand, and so on by Pickett-street to the Courts. But I apprehend that the Embankment roadway would not be very much used for a building on this site, and that most vehicles would come to the Courts from the City by Fleet-street, and from the west-end by the Strand. Some alteration of the block of houses between Holywell-street and the Strand, near St. Clement Danes, might be required, in order to make this access convenient; and no doubt the removal of Temple Bar would also be felt to be a very great gain, if it could be accomplished. On the north side there is more difficulty. Every vehicle coming to the Courts from this side would of necessity come by Chancery-lane, by Serle-street, or by Portugal-street and Carey-street. All these are very bad streets. The narrowest part of Serle-street is 16 feet 6 inches between the foot pavements, and 26 feet 10 inches between the houses. The narrowest part of Portugal-street is only 18 feet between the houses and 15 feet between the pavements, and at the junction of Portugal and Carey streets there is a width of road of 15 feet, and a total width of 26 feet.

CAREY-STREET
PLAN.
Approaches, &c.

These dimensions are all such as to make some alteration imperative, if any additional traffic is to be brought into these streets, as it certainly would be by the erection of the New Courts on this site. Either Serle-street must be widened, or the road on the western side of Lincoln's-inn Fields must be prolonged southward until it meets Portugal-street, and the latter must be improved and widened until it joins Carey-street. This is not a metropolitan improvement so much as a necessary consequence of the erection of the Courts of Law on this site. So also, an opening from Holborn to Lincoln's-inn Fields, if not such an absolute necessity, is still a necessity; for the building, if it is on the north side of the Strand, ought to intercept the northern traffic, and bring it by way of the open roads of Lincoln's-inn Fields to its northern side, without allowing any of it to find its way unnecessarily into the Strand. On the diminished site no space could be sacrificed for a road from the Strand northward, and any such improvement must be made in connection with the streets which lead from the south-west of Lincoln's-inn Fields towards the Strand—such as Houghton-street and Newcastle-street. The plan put out by the Incorporated Law Society is entirely misleading. It shows a site, coloured yellow, which measures 500 feet by 465 feet (contents, 5 acres, 1 rood, 433 yards), and a 60-foot road, going from the north side of St. Clement Danes Church to the narrowest part of Carey-street. Such a scheme is absurd on the face of it, and if the Carey-street site is used, it must be in its integrity (such as that is), and without any such destruction of its usefulness as such a bisection of its area would involve. And again, if such a street is to be made, it cannot stop short at Carey-street, but must be carried on to Lincoln's-inn Fields, and thence again, by an opening, into Holborn. This latter opening, however, and any improvement of the thoroughfare on the north side of Holborn, would be metropolitan improvements, and not, it appears to me, fairly chargeable to the Courts of Justice building.

Unfortunately, I have discovered that this map is worse than misleading; it is extremely incorrect. The object of the map is obtained by altering the eastern boundaries of the ground already purchased, and bringing them considerably nearer to Chancery-lane than they really are. And in order to do this, the whole block of houses from the Law Institution on the north to those which front the Strand on the south, is drawn of much smaller dimensions than it ought to be, e.g., from the eastern side of Chancery-lane to the western face of the Law Institution the Law Society's plan gives 135 feet. In reality, it is 180 feet. So again, the distance from the south-east angle of Chancery-lane to the south-east angle of the purchased site is shown 105 feet, whereas, in reality, it measures on the Ordnance Map 145 feet. Again, the clear dimension from east to west between the houses in Bell-yard and the houses in Clement's Inn is shown 630 feet, out of which two 60-foot roads being taken, would leave an area 510 feet in length for building on. In reality, the exact length on the Ordnance Map between the two points is only 560 feet, which, if the proposed roads are deducted, leaves a building area of not more than 440 feet. Anyone may see that this alteration has been really made on this map by comparing it with my plan of the building on this site, or with the Parliamentary Map of

August

August 1st 1845, from which it professes to be, but is not, accurately copied. It will be seen that whilst the south-east angle of my building only projects about 10 feet to the east of Temple Bar, the yellow (or building) site on the Law Society's map projects 50 feet east of Temple Bar. The result of this examination of the actual dimensions of the ground is, that allowing the same depth from north to south that I have shown on my plan, viz., 470 feet, and allowing for the two roads east and west of the building, the site coloured yellow on the Law Society's plan, and described as containing six acres, would, in truth, only contain 4 acres, 2 roods, and 1175 yards. As I have felt obliged to show the inaccuracy of this plan in regard to this site, it may not be out of place to say here that it is similarly inaccurate as regards the Embankment site; and that, curiously enough, the inaccuracy in this case makes the distance from the north side of Howard-street to the line of Somerset House Terrace about 40 feet less than it ought to be, and so diminishes the apparent value and size of this site, in the same way that it increases those of the other site.

CAREY STREET
PLAN.
Approaches, &c.

The surroundings of the building on this site were all of them provided for amply in the plan approved by the Commission, but every portion of them, except on the Strand site, depended upon the power to make additional purchases of land. If these purchases are not made under compulsory powers, I do not see how a public building can properly be placed on this site. The surroundings are, to a large extent, not merely poor, but of a very bad kind indeed. In Bell-yard the frontage is very irregular, and many of the houses appear to need rebuilding; but they are so shallow, having another court or alley behind them, that it would hardly be worth while to rebuild them, unless the whole block from Chancery-lane to Bell-yard could be purchased at one time. Higher up in Bell-yard is the Law Institution, which is now in course of being added to and raised a storey in height. Its front is not parallel with the New Courts, and I regret that the Law Society have not seen their way to making alterations in their building of such a kind as would make it harmonise with the New Law Courts, if they are built opposite to it. On the north side of Carey-street, east of Serle-street, the houses are not quite so irregular as they are in Bell-yard. They consist of shabby, low buildings at the back of the houses in New-square. It seems that these houses are each of them divided among so many different owners, that it would be next to impossible to purchase them with any view to their improvement except by the compulsory powers of an Act of Parliament, and it may be assumed, therefore, in the absence of such powers, that these houses would remain very much in their present condition, facing the new buildings. The case is very much the same as regards the houses west of Serle-street. Here a large number has been bought by a Company with a view to rebuilding the whole block as offices, but many of the houses have not been, and cannot, I believe, be bought by any private company, and so, here again, the houses will, I presume, of necessity, remain in somewhat the same condition as at present.

On the north-west side, the buildings remaining formed one side of Yeates'-court. They are poor, squalid houses, and ought undoubtedly to be purchased and rebuilt, or removed. On the south-west the property all belongs to Clement's Inn, and there is an agreeable opening to the gardens of that Inn and New Inn. Probably if the Courts were built here, the authorities of Clement's Inn would build chambers facing the new building, and so give no reason for complaint on this side. But on the other sides I feel bound to say, that unless in the exercise of a wise economy, Parliament would authorise the purchase of most of the property I have described, with a view, not necessarily to building on it, but to its resale, under strict conditions, as to rebuilding, it would not be wise to erect a public building on such a site; for I am quite certain that, owing to its inferior character, if the building were placed here, it would, after all, have to be purchased when it would have much increased in value, and after the arrangement of the building had been interfered with to its detriment on account of it.

The Judges' approach to this building would be from the north-west, vid Portugal-street or Serle-street. They could then drive to a door very nearly at the level of their own floor. The barristers from the Temple and Lincoln's Inn could not have the bridges originally proposed for their use, inasmuch as I have had to lower the floor of the central hall, and with it the floors of the Courts and other rooms. They would, however, all enter the bar rooms in Bell-yard. This entrance would be rather more convenient, of course, to Lincoln's Inn than to the Temple.

(B.) Light and air and quiet.

(B) IN RESPECT of light, air, and quiet, this site would not be so good as that on the Embankment. The Strand is so noisy as not only to affect all rooms looking towards it, but to make it impossible to allow of large openings in the south front for architectural effect or entrances. Carey-street and Bell-yard, also, will not be so quiet as I should wish to make them. In my former plan, approved by the Commission, I had not allowed Bell-yard to be a through thoroughfare for carriages, and heavy traffic in Carey-street would have been, to some extent, diverted by means of the bridge which it was proposed to make to New-square, Lincoln's Inn. In the absence of these precautions both these streets might be noisy. If it could be done without interfering with the rights of the old houses on the east side of Bell-yard, I should still wish to put a bar across to stop traffic through it, but I doubt whether this could be done. The rest of the site looking towards Clement's Inn and Yeates'-court will be perfectly good as regards quiet, but it may be doubted how far the air coming from the poor neighbourhood of Clare-market and King's College Hospital will be good unless some steps are taken to effect a clearance round the site.

(C.) Arrangement

(C) THE INSTRUCTIONS I have received require me to provide as good an arrangement of plan, in regard to levels, light, &c., as that which I have provided on the Embankment site. This requirement would have involved a complete alteration of some portions of my plan, even if the reduced and irregular shape of the site had not made it absolutely necessary. It will be seen, by referring to my block plan, that in order to get length of ground for the group of Courts, central hall, and rooms attached, it is necessary to move them all up to the northwards to that part of the site which possesses sufficient length to receive them. And in any case if the shape of the site had admitted of the Courts, &c., occupying the centre, as they did in my approved plan, there would have been a great objection to their doing so, on account of the reduced width of the site, which would have made it necessary to reduce the internal areas so much in width as very much to interfere with the amount of light throughout. And I thought, also, that if on the Embankment site I provided an open quadrangle for the offices, I was bound to show how a nearly equally good arrangement might be provided on this site. My plan also provides the same increased width from north to south of the block containing the Courts which I have provided on the Embankment plan, and, consequently, for the improved lighting and arrangement of many of the witness and jury rooms, &c. The entrances to the central hall and Courts will be at the east end in Bell-yard, and at the west end under a raised courtyard. The floor of the hall will be raised very little above the natural level of the ground, so that there will be as few steps as possible up to the Courts from the Strand side. The bar-room will be at the east end of the hall. The Judges will be able to drive to their entrance at the west end, which will be as convenient in point of height as their entrance to the building on the other site. I have managed this by the construction of a raised courtyard at the end of the building, with a road rising very easily from the west angle of Carey-street. This entrance involves the necessity for the Judges to arrive from the north. If they come from the south, which they probably would not usually do, they would have to ascend about 22 feet 6 inches from the entrance to the floor of their rooms.

The irregular shape of the western portion of the site makes it very difficult to use it satisfactorily. I have shown on my block plan how it might be used so as to make the most of the land, and at the same time to admit of fairly good architectural arrangement, both for convenience and for effect. But even this arrangement brings the building into most inconvenient proximity to existing buildings.

In this plan it would be necessary to put offices above the Judges' rooms. There would be a somewhat greater area occupied by offices, but, as far as I can judge at present, there would not be much difference in the available office room between this plan and that for the Embankment, owing to the greater height of building on the latter to which it would be possible to get convenient and easy access.

ground.

(D) IF NO MORE LAND is purchased, of course no alteration of any kind can be be made in the levels of any of the streets surrounding the building. I think the levels may, however, be managed very well, though it will be impossible here to contrive any such scheme for facilitating the rise to the upper floors, as I have suggested on the southern side of the Strand; in most other respects the levels will be equally good. It will be impossible, now that the floor of the Courts is lowered, to contrive any passage to them across the Strand, and a tunnel under it would involve the purchase of a considerable amount of property (which might of course be partly sold again) on the southern side of the Strand.

CAREY-STREET
PLAN.
Levels of ground.

(E) THIS SITE PRESENTS some æsthetical advantages which it would be very wrong to ignore. The elevation above the river is considerable. The entrances to the central hall would be exactly on the same level as the court yard in front of St. Paul's Cathedral; and the floor of the central hall here would be 22 feet higher than it would be on the Embankment. To this extent, therefore, it would, in all distant views, rise higher and be better seen than on the lower site. And I think, also, that the position would be an important one, crowning the hill opposite St. Paul's, and supplying what the views of London want, some very marked architectural feature in the long expanse of buildings between St. Paul's and Westminster.

(E.) Advantages
tectural point of

On the other hand, no near view could ever be obtained which would at all equal the view which would be had of a building on the Embankment site. The buildings facing the streets would all be so high as to shut in and completely conceal from sight the whole of the central hall and a great part of the towers, and it would only be at a great distance that these would ever be seen rising above the rest of the buildings. Again, it would be impossible in the Strand front to gain anything like the fine effects of light and shade which could easily be obtained on the Embankment, and which are indeed a necessity there, if the ground is to be made the most of. In previous expressions of my opinion on this subject, I have spoken strongly of the effect of a great building crowning this eminence. I had in my mind when I did so the vast extent of my plan as approved by the Courts of Justice Commission, including not only the central hall and Courts, but the great Probate Department, with its towers for the reception of wills, which, grouping with the other towers and lofty roofs of the building, would have given scope for great architectural effect. The reduction of the scale of the building, the omission of the towers for wills, and the apparent certainty that the surrounding buildings will all be mean and unworthy of their position, if no more land is purchased, seem to me to make a vast difference in the view I am compelled to take, and to deprive this site of the claims I considered it had to be very nearly on a par with the other, in regard to the opportunities it afforded for erecting a building which should be a great architectural success and an ornament to the Capital.

I have now gone through the reasons which, it appears to me, are to be given for and against the two sites, endeavouring, I hope successfully, to treat the question in the most impartial and dispassionate manner.

On the whole it appears to me that the Embankment site affords by far the best opportunity for a great work, now that the reduced scale of the building is accepted by the opponents to your scheme. I have found, I am bound to confess, that the more I worked at the plan for the building on the Embankment, the more it seemed to be possible to make the work one with which men of taste might be satisfied from an architectural point of view; and I have good hopes that, if the building is in the end placed on this site, it would be possible, in the way I have indicated, to make it so really convenient to all those whose business lies in it, as to involve no very serious sacrifice, if any, of the present use or associations of the great Inns of Court or other centres of legal business.

Conclusion.

LOANS.

Loans.

The advances made during the past year under the Public Works and Land Improvement Loan Acts, as will be seen by the statements in the Appendix, amount to £116,075. This sum has been applied under the Board's general control to the following purposes, viz. :—

Public Works' Loans—	£
For River Drainage Works, 26 and 27 Vic., c. 88, . . . . .	22,095
"    "    Maintenance, . . . . .	824

Land Improvement—

Detailed reports of most of these services appear in the subsequent pages of this report. Applications have been latterly made to us by the Grand Juries of several Counties, for loans for making roads and bridges and other useful public works. Since the passing of the Act 16 and 17 Vic., cap. 136, in the year 1853 (which enabled counties, for the first time, with the approval of this Board, to borrow from private sources), we have discontinued, by your lordships' instructions, to make any advances to Grand Juries. Seeing however, the obstructions thrown in the way of useful public works by a rigid adherence to this rule, we represented the difficulties Grand Juries had to contend with in procuring, from private parties, the funds for those works that were too costly to be charged and levied on the cesspayers in one or two years; and your lordships have been pleased to authorize us to resume the practice of making loans to counties on Grand Jury Presentments, under the 1 and 2 Wm. IV., cap. 33, when it shall be shown to our satisfaction that the work is of such a permanent character as that the cost may fairly be extended over a number of years not exceeding ten.

The Re-payments for the year ended 31st March, 1869, on the various Loan Acts intrusted to the Board's management, amount to £179,172. This sum is generally collected by half-yearly instalments, and considering that it involves upwards of 6,000 applications to proprietors of land and others, resident in all parts of the country, it is satisfactory to be able to state, as indicating to some extent the prosperity of the country, that the repayments as a whole are made with great punctuality, viz.—

*Public

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The usual works of ordinary repairs and maintenance have been executed to the different public buildings in charge of the Commissioners. These include in Dublin—The Viceregal Residences in Dublin Castle and the Phoenix Park; the Chief Secretary's, Under Secretary's, and Private Secretary's Lodges. All Official Residences and Public Offices in Dublin Castle, and all Government Offices in Dublin, whether in buildings belonging to the Crown, or in rented houses. The institutions of the Royal Hospital, Kilmainham, and the Royal Hibernian Military School, Phoenix Park; the buildings of the Royal Dublin Society, the Royal College of Science, Stephen's-green, the National Gallery, and the Royal Irish Academy.

Four Courts.

Considerable progress has been made with the works of constructing a new Court and Offices for the Vice-Chancellor, and the re-arrangement of the several Offices connected with the Court of Chancery. The re-arrangement of the other Offices is held over pending the decision of the Government.

Police Courts, &c.

The new Central Police Courts are now occupied, and the premises formerly used as Courts for the Divisional Magistrates, are now available for the accommodation of the Police Force, and are about to be adapted for that purpose. The several Stations, Offices, and Barracks within the Metropolitan Police District have been duly maintained. The building known as the Old Sheriff's Prison, in Green-street, has been fitted up as a Barrack for the Police now quartered in rented houses in Beresford-place, and a saving will result to Government of the rent now paid for these premises.

Constabulary Buildings.

The necessary repairs and maintenance of the Depôt in the Phoenix Park, and the several Barracks, the property of the Crown, throughout the country have been duly attended to. The works connected with the enlargement of the Barracks at William-street, Limerick, have been completed, and the building is now occupied by the Force.

Contracts have been entered into for erecting new barracks at Ballyduff, county Waterford, and Errismore, county Galway; and it is expected that they will be available within the present year. At Clonakilty, county Cork, Killarney, county Kerry, Duggannon, county Armagh, and Skibbereen, county Cork, new Barracks are also to be provided; the plans for the two former have been approved by the Lord Lieutenant, and tenders for the works will be invited as soon as practicable. The plans for the two latter are delayed pending the obtaining sites.

Government Prisons.

The Convict Prisons at Mountjoy and Smithfield, in Dublin, and Spike Island, county Cork, and the Central Criminal Lunatic Asylum, at Dundrum, county Dublin, have been duly maintained. At the latter a new boundary wall has been built during the past year, which effectually prevents all means of trespass by the patients on the grounds of the adjoining proprietors, a practice which had been the cause of much complaint. Arrangements are at present under consideration for extending the Convict Establishment at Lusk, by which the prison at Smithfield may be dispensed with and the building disposed of.

Custom Houses and Inland Revenue Buildings.

The repairs and maintenance of the several buildings connected with the Customs and Inland Revenue Departments, which are the property of the Crown, have been duly attended to.

Post Offices.

The offices at Cork, Dublin, and Limerick have been duly maintained.

Royal Dublin Society, Kildare-street.

Several works for completing the fittings and arrangements of the Natural History Museum have been effected and are being still continued.

Extensive additions have been made to the large Conservatories in the Society's Gardens at Glasnevin. The work is just completed, and will afford the required increased accommodation.

Phoenix Park.

No new works have been undertaken during the past year. The People's Garden and the Plantations in the Park have been carefully maintained.

Public Buildings.Vartry Water Supply to the Park.

The works connected with the supply of Vartry Water to the various buildings in the Park have been satisfactorily completed, and in addition to the advantages arising from the supply being ample and at high pressure, a considerable expenditure in labour is saved which was formerly necessary in pumping the supply.

Queen's Colleges.

Belfast College.—The new Library at this building, and for which a re-vote of £950 was taken last year, has now been completed, and is at present in occupation.

Cork College.—The heating apparatus for the Library, &c., and the exterior of the Anatomical School, has been completed.

Galway College.—No particular works of improvement or of a special character have been undertaken at this building during the year beyond the customary works of maintenance.

District Registry Offices under Court of Probate.

The new District Registry Office in Kilkenny will, it is expected, be completed and fit for occupation in a few weeks; and the necessary works of maintenance and repair at the District Registries of Belfast, Armagh, Londonderry, Cork, and Waterford have been duly attended to.

National Education Buildings.

Sixteen new ordinary Literary National School-houses have been built in the past year, at a total cost of £5,295, towards which the Board paid the sum of £3,530, being two-thirds of the cost, the remaining one-third of the expense being contributed by local persons interested in the schools. Various additions and improvements, such as providing timber, flooring, erecting porches, building enclosing walls and gates, wainscoting, tablet rails, and other works have been effected at twenty-four ordinary Literary National Schools, at a total cost of £735 6s. 4d. Towards this sum the Board contributed two-thirds, viz., £490 4s. 3d., and the remaining one-third was borne by local persons interested. Besides this expenditure the Board have expended in repairing and maintaining the Metropolitan (or Central) Model School Buildings, the District Model, Minor Model, and Model Agricultural Schools, a sum of £5,469 8s. 11d., and a further sum of £1,086 14s. 5d. for furniture for these buildings, and on the ordinary Literary National Schools in charge of the Board a sum of £2,927 1s. 5d. has been also expended on maintenance and repair. Since the date of the Board's last Annual Report, the duty of supplying domestic furniture and utensils for the use of the resident officials in the various Model Schools of the Board of Education usually supplied with such, and of sundries for housekeeping and other purposes hitherto paid for out of office contingencies has been transferred to this Board; and this service, which involves a large total outlay, requires great care and attention in carrying into effect.

Coast-Guard Stations.

The following new Stations have been completed during the past year, and are now occupied by the officers and men:—

Bangor, county Down, for 1 Chief Officer, 1 Chief Boatman, and 5 men.

Bonmahon, county Waterford, for 1 Chief Officer and 6 men.

Castletownsend, county Cork, for 1 Chief Officer, 1 Chief Boatman, and 4 men.

Cromane Point, county Kerry, for 1 Chief Boatman and 5 men.

Knockadoon, county Cork, for 1 Chief Boatman and 5 men.

Extensive additions and alterations have been made at Claggan, Fenit, and Cahirciveen, and are in progress at Oyster Haven.

The works are in progress at the following new Stations:—

Ardmore, county Waterford, 1 Chief Officer and 4 men.

Ballygeary, county Wexford, 1 Chief Officer and 7 men.

Ballyheige, county Kerry, 1 Chief Officer, 1 Chief Boatman, and 5 men.

Ballydavid, county Kerry, 1 Chief Boatman and 6 men.

Ballycastle, county Antrim, 1 Chief Officer and 6 men.

Public Buildings.

Steps have been taken for proceeding with the new buildings at Malin Head, county Donegal; Courtnacsherry, county Cork; Skull, county Cork; Sheephaven, county Donegal; Elly Bay, county Mayo; and Ballyglass, county Mayo.

Arrangements have also been made for new works and alterations at Ballycotton, Cork; Castletownsend, Cork (boat-house and slip); Castletown, Bearhaven, Cork; Old Head, Kinsale, Cork; Mill Cove, Cork; Roche's Point, Cork; Robert's Cove, Cork; Upper Cove, Cork; Portrane, Dublin; Portmagee, Kerry; Soldier's Point, Kerry; Bray, Wicklow (boat-house); Wicklow (boat-house).

Works of repair and maintenance have been executed at various stations during the past year, at a cost of £3,738 19s. 3d.

Fuel and Light, &c.

Until 31st March, 1868, the above service had been limited to the supply of coals and firewood to the several public departments in the Dublin District. But in accordance with the Treasury minute of the 23rd December following, the service was extended from 1st April, 1868, so as to embrace the supply of fuel and light, and other incidents to all public departments throughout the kingdom; and the change appears to be very convenient to all parties concerned, and is calculated to produce economical results.

The service for the twelve months ended 31st March, 1869, embraced the supply to about 250 establishments, of coals, coke, turf, gas, chandlery, &c., to the aggregate amount of £16,432.

Land Improvement.

LAND IMPROVEMENT.

In submitting our Report on this subject we subjoin as usual a Table showing the number of applications, and the amounts issued in each year, from the commencement of operations under the Land Improvement Acts in 1847 to the close of the financial year, 1868-69:—

	No. of Applications.	Amount Issued.
1847, June to December (inclusive),	1,354	£72,790
1848, . . . . .	571	356,160
1849, . . . . .	643	379,836
1850, . . . . .	436	250,324
1851, . . . . .	280	145,653
1852, . . . . .	164	88,542
1853, . . . . .	154	53,454
1854, . . . . .	123	49,293
1855, . . . . .	98	35,180
1856, . . . . .	108	32,510
1857, . . . . .	114	31,674
1858, . . . . .	112	35,524
1859, . . . . .	111	29,334
1860, . . . . .	135	26,902
1861, . . . . .	154	36,656
1862, . . . . .	184	61,375
1863, . . . . .	138	58,830
1864, . . . . .	132	58,430
1865, . . . . .	90	46,215
1866, . . . . .	98	26,290
1867, . . . . .	145	39,185
1868-9, . . . . .	179	64,973

It will be seen that the year just closed shows a considerable increase, the applications being thirty-four over those received in 1867-8, and the excess of issues, £25,788. This renewed activity in land improvement operations is to be attributed to the increased facilities afforded by the Act 29 & 30 Vic., c. 40, and to information relative to those facilities which has been given by the circulation of printed instructions and designs for the different classes of work.

The results of the operations carried on under these Acts have been very satisfactory; and the proprietors who have obtained loans fully admit the benefits which have resulted from them. It is also satisfactory to observe that similar works executed from private funds have been attended with the same beneficial results, the proprietors in many cases availing themselves of the knowledge derived from the operations under these Acts, and frequently acting on the advice of our Inspectors.

As the period approaches when the loans made immediately after the passing of the Act 10 Vic., c. 32, will be fully repaid, it may be expected that the proprietors who are still liable to rentcharge in respect thereof, will avail themselves of the release of their lands to enter into arrangements for further loans with a view to improving their estates.

As a general rule, the borrowers to whom instalments have been advanced furnish Land Im accounts of expenditure within a reasonable time, but when there is any unnecessary proven nt. delay in expending the sums issued, we call for returns of work executed. However, the cases are very rare in which we have found it necessary either to threaten or institute law proceedings.

Up to the 31st March, 1869, 4,542 loans were sanctioned by your lordships, but the whole of the loans so sanctioned have not been issued; as many of them, or portions of them, have been either relinquished by the borrowers or cancelled by the Board by virtue of the power given in the Act 13 & 14 Vic., c. 31.

At the close of the financial year ended 31st March, 1869, there remained unappropriated, out of the funds of £3,000,000 provided for the Land Improvement service by the Acts quoted in the margin, the sum of £902,720.

The total amount issued on account of works up to the 31st March, 1869, was £1,981,130.

These totals comprise 399 loans, amounting to £148,975, which have been sanctioned to proprietors for the erection and improvement of farm buildings; 104 loans, amounting to £51,240, for labourers' dwellings; and 7 loans, £1,940, for the erection of scutch mills for flax.

The following is a tabular statement according to districts and counties, showing the number of applications for loans, and the amounts issued for all classes of work under the several Land Improvement Acts, up to the 31st March, 1869:—

THOROUGH DRAINAGE.

From the commencement of operations under the Land Improvement Acts, up to the 31st March in this year, 235,909 acres have been thorough drained at an average cost of £5 7s. 6d. an acre. Of this quantity, 3,142 acres have been drained during the period from 1st April, 1868, to 31st March, 1869.

PLANTING FOR SHELTER.

Five loans amounting to £2,825, have been made for this description of improvement; and of 10 other loans, planting for shelter forms part of the work estimated for.

FARM BUILDINGS.

Since the passing of the Act 13 & 14 Vic., c. 31, 399 loans, amounting to £148,975, have been sanctioned by your Lordships for the erection of farm buildings, and the operations under 289 of these loans, amounting to £106,285, have been completed.

The following schedule shows the number of loans for farm buildings completed in each county in Ireland, with the sums sanctioned and issued:—

Fifty loans for farm buildings, amounting to £28,725, are in progress, under which sums amounting to £16,078, have been issued, and 60 loans, amounting to £13,965, have not been proceeded with.

SCUTCH MILLS.

During the past financial year, one additional loan has been made under this head, making the total number of loans sanctioned for such buildings since the passing of the Act, 7, amounting to £1,940, of which £1,400 has been issued.

LABOURERS' DWELLINGS.

Since the passing of the Act 23 Vic., c. 19, 104 loans, amounting to £51,240, have been sanctioned by your Lordships.

The following table shows the loans for labourers' dwellings which have been closed:—

We give as usual in Appendix B extracts from the Reports of our Inspectors, and in Appendix C a statement of the loans under which works are in progress, with the amounts and the dates of the last orders for issue.

ARTERIAL DRAINAGE.

*Arterial
Drainage.*

With Improvements of Navigation and Water-power, under the Acts 5 & 6 Vic., cap. 89; 8 & 9 Vic., cap. 69; 9 Vic., cap. 4; 10 & 11 Vic., cap. 79; 16 & 17 Vic., cap. 130; 18 & 19 Vic., cap. 110; 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 62; 20 & 21 Vic., cap. 23; and 21 & 22 Vic., cap. 41.

The Board's duties in connexion with the works of Arterial Drainage under the above-named Acts, have been confined during the past year, as they have been since 1861, to determining, on the application of proprietors, the amount of increased rent to be paid by tenants holding under leases in respect of the benefit derived by them from improvements in their holdings, resulting from the Drainage operations, and to giving information, assistance, and advice to the Trustees of Districts, on such points connected with their trusts as they might request, and which we have felt it within our province to give, all executive operations having been long since brought to a close.

No change has taken place in regard to the Board's responsibility in respect of the Clonakilty Slob-lands.

The whole expenditure charged against the different undertakings commenced under the Arterial Drainage Acts, including £70,201 for works chargeable to counties, amounted at the end of March, 1869, to £2,390,613; and the repayments in respect thereof amounted to £971,022.

Drainage and Improvement of Lands Acts (Ireland).

26 & 27 Vic., c. 88; 27 & 28 Vic., c. 72; and 28 & 29 Vic., c. 52.

Three new Drainage districts have been submitted for our consideration since our last Annual Report, namely:—

- The Ward, near Swords, counties of Dublin and Meath.
- The Frankford River, King's county.
- The Mulkear, near Castleconnell, county Limerick.

The total number of districts brought before the Board since the passing of these Acts is 23. They are as follow:—

1. Athboy, county of Meath.
2. Ballynacarrig, King's and Queen's counties.
3. Thurles, county of Tipperary.
4. Rathdowney, Queen's county.
5. Six-mile-bridge, county of Clare.
6. Kilmastulla, county of Tipperary.
7. Silver River, King's county and county of Westmeath.
8. Parsonstown, King's county and county of Tipperary.
9. Camoge, county of Limerick.
10. Elphin, county of Roscommon.
11. The Connell, county of Kildare.
12. Brickey, county of Waterford.
13. Upper Inny, counties of Cavan, Longford, Meath, and Westmeath.
14. The Quinagh, county of Carlow.
15. The Clodiagh, county of Tipperary.
16. The Island Lakes and Glore River, county of Mayo.
17. Lough Oughter and River Erne, county of Cavan.
18. Buncam Lake and Ballyhean River, county of Mayo.
19. The Gully, Queen's county.
20. The Doochyle, county of Limerick.
21. The Ward, counties of Dublin and Meath.
22. Frankford River, King's county.
23. The Mulkear, county of Limerick.

Lateral Drainage.

Acts have been passed confirming the provisional orders of the Board constituting fourteen of these districts, viz., Athboy, Ballynacarrig, Rathdowney, Six-mile-bridge, Kilmastulla, the Silver River, the Connell, the Brickey, the Quinagh, the Parsonstown, Elphin, Clodiagh, Camoge, and the Upper Inny.

The works of the Athboy, Kilmastulla, Rathdowney, Silver River, Ballynacarrig, and Connell districts have been completed. The final awards have been made in the Athboy, Rathdowney, and Ballynacarrig districts. The works of the following districts are in course of execution:—Six-mile-bridge, Parsonstown, Brickey, and Quinagh; and those of the Camoge, Elphin, Upper Inny, and Clodiagh are about to be commenced.

With regard to the nine remaining districts, the Thurles was abandoned by the petitioners; the Doohyle is before Parliament for an Act; and the other seven districts are passing through the stages required by the Acts previous to provisional orders constituting them being made.

The Loans sanctioned by your Lordships under these Acts are as follow:—

Kilmastulla, county Tipperary, . . . . .	£9,364
Six-mile-bridge, county Clare, . . . . .	16,000
Rathdowney, Queen's county, . . . . .	2,450
Athboy, county Meath, . . . . .	10,400
Silver River, county Westmeath and King's county, . . . . .	3,233
Ballynacarrig, King's and Queen's counties, . . . . .	5,600
The Connell, county Kildare, . . . . .	2,100
Parsonstown, county Tipperary and King's county, . . . . .	9,140
The Quinagh, county Carlow, . . . . .	2,600
Elphin, county Roscommon, . . . . .	14,000
Brickey, county Waterford, . . . . .	4,142

The total area of land to be improved in the Twenty-two districts which are being proceeded with is 46,370½A., and the estimated cost of the works £189,862.

Drainage Maintenance Act, 1866.

29 & 30 Vic., cap. 49.

Under the provisions of this Act the necessary works of maintenance have been executed in the Balla and Lough Dalla districts, and the charging orders made.

Harbours.

HARBOURS.

Kingstown Harbour, County Dublin.

During the past year the surface of all the Roads and Footpaths were maintained, cleaned, watered, and lighted. The Piers, Jetties, Wharfs, Buildings, Fences, Roads, and Sewers, and all works connected with the Harbour, have been maintained in an efficient state of repair.

The repairs of the Mail Packet Pier have been proceeded with, and are nearly completed.

The following is a return of the Vessels that have used the Harbour during the last year, 1868—Mail and Passenger Steamers and Yachts excepted:—

	Number.	Tonnage.

Total, . . . . . 1,769 229,800

In the previous year the numbers were, . . . . . 1,827 212,950

Donaghadee Harbour, County Down.

The injury done to the sea slope by the storms in the spring of 1868 have been substantially repaired, and the works of the Harbour have been maintained in good order.—See Appendix D.

Dunmore Harbour, County Waterford.Harbours.

The repair of the damage which the Harbour sustained from the severe storms in the year 1867 is almost complete, and has been well and substantially executed. A considerable outlay will shortly be required for dredging out the Harbour, the silting up of which, mentioned in our former reports, continues to increase.—See Appendix D.

Howth Harbour, County Dublin.

All the works of this Harbour have been maintained in good repair. The Cannon and Murr Rocks, which were a serious obstruction in the Harbour, have been blasted and removed by divers, and the removal of other rocks is in progress. A further length of fifty feet of the West Pier has been let for fish-curing purposes, and thirty feet for the erection of a ship smith's forge. The Roadways and other works have been kept in good repair.—See Appendix D.

FISHERY PIERS AND HARBOURS.

*Fishery

29 & 30 Vic., c. 45.

KILKEEL PIER, COUNTY DOWN.

The works of this Pier, which were completed early in the spring of 1868, were very seriously damaged by the extraordinary flood in the Kilkeel River, which occurred on the 22nd of August, 1868. The damage has been repaired as far as the funds available would admit.—See Appendix D.

LEENAUN, county Galway.
BARNADERG, county Galway.
CARRIGAHOLT, county Clare.

The Piers at Leenaun and Barnaderg, which were completed last year, have been handed over to the county Galway; and the Pier at Carrigaholt, which is also finished, will be immediately handed over to the county Clare.

The following Piers are in course of construction; the first-named by a Contractor, the others by the Board's Officers:—

BANTRY, county Cork.
LADY ELIZABETH'S COVE, county Waterford.
SPIDDLE, county Galway.
CLIFDEN, county Galway.

Those at Lady Elizabeth's Cove and at Clifden are nearly completed.

A contract has been let for a small Pier or Boat Slip at Arranmore, county Donegal.

At Passage East the design of the works has been modified to meet the wishes of the Waterford Harbour Commissioners, who subscribed a considerable sum towards the cost of the work, which will be commenced immediately.

Applications for Grants in aid of Piers at—

ERRISLANNON, county Galway; BALLYCASTLE, county Down; and BUNCRANA and PORT SALON, in Lough Swilly, county Donegal; have been received, and recommended for sanction.

The works are about to be commenced at Ballycastle and Errislannon; and steps are being taken to make the final declarations in the cases of Bunrana and Port Salon.

INLAND NAVIGATIONS.

*Inland

Tyrone Navigation, Coalisland Canal.

Shannon Navigation.

No expenditure has been incurred on this navigation during the past year beyond what was necessary for its proper maintenance; all the works have been kept in good order.—See Appendix D.

Ulster Canal.

The works of this navigation have been put in good repair. Plans have been prepared for increasing the area of the Storage Reservoir at Quiglough so as to provide for a sufficient water supply for the Canal. The necessary steps are being taken for purchasing the land required for this purpose.—See Appendix D.

On the several navigations the expense and inconvenience caused by the weed "anacharis alsinastrum" is increasing.

*The Sewage Utilization

THE SEWAGE UTILIZATION ACT, 1865.

28 & 29 Vic., cap. 75.

Under the provisions of this Act, since our last Annual Report, applications have been made to the Board to recommend the Public Works Loan Commissioners to make Loans for Works of Sewerage in the towns of—Moville, county Donegal.

Kingstown, county Dublin.

Having examined the plans, estimates, &c., of the proposed works, and having had the necessary local examinations made, we have recommended these cases to the favourable consideration of the Public Works Loan Commissioners.

BRIDGES.

Wellesley Bridge, Limerick.

This Bridge, which was vested in the Commissioners of Public Works by the Act 30 & 31 Vic., cap 53—"The Limerick Harbour (Composition of Debt) Act, 1867"—was taken over from the former lessees on the 20th of May, 1868, and has since been under the entire management of this Board; and the tolls collected between that period and the 31st of March last amounted to £786.

New Ross Bridge—Counties of Wexford and Kilkenny.

Under the provisions of "The Bridges (Ireland) Act," 30 & 31 Vic., cap. 50, dated 15th July, 1867, the Joint Committee of the Grand Juries of the Counties of Wexford and Kilkenny, are building a new Free Bridge over the River Barrow, at New Ross, to connect the counties of Wexford and Kilkenny, in place of a bridge—the property of the Commissioners for building a Bridge over the River of Ross—which bridge was partly carried away in the month of January, 1867. The tolls, and the right of ferry, &c., have been purchased, and the new free bridge is being built with funds borrowed from this Board with the consent of the Treasury, on the security of presentments made by the counties of Wexford and Kilkenny. The estimated cost of the works, including £11,700 for purchase of property, amounts to £50,137.

Post Roads.

POST ROADS.

Act 6 & 7 Wm. IV., cap. 116.

On the application of the Postmaster-General, under the 61st section of the above-named Act, repairs have been executed during the past year on post roads situated in the following counties—

Donegal.

Down.

These repairs have been executed under the superintendence of the respective County Surveyors, at a cost of £876 7s. 6d. repayable by Grand Jury Presentment at subsequent Assizes.

We have the honour to be

APPENDIX B.

LANDED PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT.—INSPECTORS' ANNUAL REPORTS, 1868-9.

In the above-named district of the north-west of Ireland the applications for new loans have not been numerous, but are of a useful, practical kind, and are mostly from proprietors, who have expended former loans in such a manner as to give satisfaction to all concerned; thus proving by experience that the objects of the Land Improvement Acts were attained, so far as the provisions of the Acts were tested, and rendering it a matter of regret that the money has not been more extensively used. In the county Fermanagh Major J. Gerard Irvine has continued drainage, farm road making, fencing, and clearing with the same care and success that attended his first undertakings, reported on about twenty years ago; and he has also added a storehouse for flax to the scutch-mill which he erected at Lack for the use of his tenants, and which has proved of great advantage to the neighbourhood. In the county Cavan Mr. Tatlow has executed some thorough drainage on Mr. Nesbitt's estate with great care and accuracy of detail, using tiles from Florence-court; and Lord Headfort has also completed some good drainage for his Cavan tenants. In the same county Sir John Young, who had a drainage loan twenty years ago, has applied for another to drain and make roads through his estate near Bailieborough; and in Leitrim Colonel Whyte and Mr. Montgomery have continued steadily the same course of improvement they adopted in 1848. In Tyrone the Duke of Abercorn has continued drainage, &c., as in 1848, and has proceeded vigorously with planting the sides of the cold pasture ground on the hills between Omagh, Drumquin, and Newtownstewart. He has already expended above £2,000 of the loan granted for the purpose, and has a first-rate Scotch superintendent, with a party of well trained men, kept constantly at the special work of fencing and planting, so that it goes on rapidly and well. The fencing is done in the strongest manner round these plantations (chiefly clay banks, faced with stone); and as the same set of able-bodied men are so long at the same kind of work, their experience enables them to execute it better and cheaper than ordinary labourers. The Duke of Abercorn intends to apply also for a loan to build a moderate-sized farm-house and offices for a tenant, who came from Scotland above twenty years ago, and has permanently settled here, near Newtownstewart, and proposes also to erect some new cottages.

Miss Rose, of the county Monaghan, has begun to build and repair labourers' dwellings, and Mr. O'Beirne in Leitrim has added to his feeding-sheds in a substantial manner. The number of new cottages built under the provisions of the Land Improvement Acts is as yet comparatively small; but as the use of straw for thatching becomes each year more costly and more objected to, the power of obtaining loans for putting slated roofs on old houses with strong walls, as well as for building new ones, ought to be recognised as a great advantage; and the facilities for obtaining the timber, all ready cut and fit for immediate use, from steam saw mills in Dublin, Sligo, Londonderry, &c., now enable proprietors to do with speed and convenience, as well as correctness, what was formerly so tedious and troublesome that many would not undertake the task, even when money was provided for it.

Rents have been well paid through this district, and the farmers and labourers are in better condition than in previous years, so that it is to be hoped the improvement of their dwellings may speedily make the advance that has been so marked in their clothing.

WM. P. PRENDERGAST.

Counties of Donegal, Londonderry, Antrim, Down, Armagh, and Tyrone.

I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th January last, requesting me to furnish, as soon as I conveniently could, my annual report on the working of the Land Improvement Act for 1866, which I beg to submit as follows, viz. :—

During the past year I have inspected in the county Donegal farm-buildings erected by Mr. James Sinclair, of Bonnyglen, now just completed, of a most permanent nature, designed for every convenience. Mr. Wray, of Ardamona, Lough Eske, has also completed offices of the same kind. In the county Down Mr. James Agnew, of Redhills, has erected good permanent farm buildings, with modern fittings. In the county Tyrone Captain Denn Mann has built a series of labourers' dwellings at Dunmoyle, which (particularly up in that wild mountain locality) will add great comfort to his labouring class.

I consider, from the increased facilities of this Act for procuring loans without unnecessary delay, that many proprietors will take advantage of the provisions.

In all cases where I have inspected for thorough drainage, the works have been carefully carried out, and extra to the loans expended; and I can safely state in every instance a large increase in the value of the properties so drained will accrue to the owners, all of whom appear perfectly satisfied with their outlay. Some new loans have been applied for during the year 1868.

THOMAS S. IRWIN.

Counties of Carlow, Kildare, Kilkenny, Meath, Queen's, Waterford, Wexford, and Wicklow.

During the past year 1868, and the current year up to this day, I have inspected and reported on forty-nine cases of loans, under the Land Improvement Acts, which may be divided under the following heads :—

1st. Improvement of lands by drainage, fencing and reclaiming, . . . . .	37
2nd. Buildings, labourers' dwellings, . . . . .	4
3rd. Erection and improvement of farm dwellings, and planting, . . . . .	7
4th. Farm buildings, . . . . .	1
Total, . . . . .	49

Under the first heading. Works have been remarkably well carried out generally, and the result very satisfactory, the benefits arising therefrom, have caused the execution of similar works by proprietors and tenants, with their own funds, in many cases near to works executed under loans.

Under the second head, viz., erection of labourers' dwellings. I have inspected works executed in four cases, and it is to be regretted that proprietors do not take advantage of the facilities afforded as they are a means of bettering the condition and habits of the labouring population.

Under the third head. Few have availed themselves of money placed at their disposal on easy and liberal terms. This may to some extent be attributed to the fact that few are aware of the terms on which loans are now granted, for the erection and improvement of farm dwellings, building, and planting. It is to be hoped that when the provisions of the Acts, and the facilities now given become generally known, that proprietors will avail themselves of them, and obtain loans which will obviously enable them to improve their properties on most advantageous terms.

Farmers and their families have acquired a taste for better living and improved dwellings, which if encouraged by proprietors will greatly benefit their estates and the country generally.

The price of labour has increased and is every day increasing, men are better fed and paid, skilled labour is appreciated where it can be procured, farmers pay good wages to good men.

J. FISHBOURNE.

County of Tipperary, and parts of Limerick, Galway, Clare, and King's County.

In submitting this my annual report of the operation of the Land Improvement Act, during the past year, in the district which has been intrusted to my superintendence, I have to observe that I have inspected in nineteen cases, viz., in the county of Tipperary, twelve; Limerick, three; Galway, two; King's county, two; and Clare, one; of which five were cases of farm buildings; twelve of thorough and main drainage, one in the county of Limerick, of embankment, and one in Tipperary, for a farm road; and I have still in hands two cases in which progress inspections have been ordered, but delayed for some short time on the application of the proprietors, and one case that of (Mr. Roe) for preliminary examination deferred in consequence of the flooded state of the lands proposed to be improved.

There has not been any application for loan for planting for shelter, or for flax scutching mills in this district.

The works have been carried on with very few exceptions, in a satisfactory manner, and with considerable benefit to the proprietors. I do not anticipate at present any increase in the number of applications for loans for thorough drainage, so much having been already done in this way, but there is room for still more to follow on arterial drainage, when executed.

I regret to say that the want of unanimity among the landed proprietors prevents many very useful and not very expensive projects for arterial drainage being proceeded with.

The works on the estate of Sir Capel Molyneux in the county of Limerick, and those on the estate of Captain Power Lalor, in the county of Tipperary, are the most extensive in the district, and from the very satisfactory way in which the former have been executed, I have suggested that Sir Capel should apply for permission to compete for the Royal Agricultural Society's medal.

JAMES J. POE.

County of Roscommon, parts of Mayo, Sligo, and Galway, as also of some of the Eastern Counties of Leinster.

In compliance with the request of the Board, that I should furnish my annual report on the working of the Acts relating to the improvement of landed property in those portions of Ireland to which I have the honour of being sent as inspector, I now beg leave to submit the following statement of the facts which have come under my notice during the past twelve months, as also a brief notice of the several inspections which I have made during that period.

Upon reviewing, therefore, my experiences of the year 1868, I cannot help participating in the pleasure which I know must be felt by every one interested in the welfare of our country when I find the great improvement that has taken place in it, and which in this instance is shown by the large number of new cases which I have had referred to me, and which convince me that notwithstanding the difficulties which may exist in the way thereof, the spirit of improvement and the desire to better the condition of our peasantry and working classes is steadily on the increase.

Although this satisfactory state of affairs is in itself an undeniable proof of the success which attends the efforts of our Board, I think I can adduce a further one when I assert that, since my report of last February I inspected works in progress for upwards of thirty different proprietors who, without a single exception, gave me voluntary assurances (either personally or through their agents) of their complete satisfaction and of their just appreciation of the benefits they had derived from the expenditure of their loans.

Having thus, I hope, shown that the working of the Acts relating to the improvement of property continues to be satisfactory—as far at least as my districts are concerned, I will now, without further preamble, proceed to enumerate and comment upon the various improvements which are either proposed or in progress in the several counties named at the head of this report.

In Roscommon, therefore, I find that, during the past year I made preliminary inspections and reported on the memorials of the O'Connor Don, M.P., Lieutenant-Colonel Chichester, the Rev. Sir Henry Gunning, Bart., and Hercules B. Brabazon, esq. The case of Colonel Chichester comprised two distinct memorials upon each of which large loans have been granted, the one for drainage and "planting for shelter," &c., the other for an extensive system of farm buildings.

Besides the above cases I inspected (in Roscommon) works in progress upon the estates of Lord de Freyne, Lady Jane Johnson, Captain Balfe, Pakenham Mahon, (in which instance there is extensive "planting for shelter,") and Messrs. P. Hugh O'Connor, Connolly T. M'Causland, William D. Kelly, J. H. Dillon, William R. Tredennick, and John W. Flanagan. Some excellent farm-buildings have been completed in the same county for Lord Crofton and Captain George W. Drought, together with the repairs and re-roofing of a dwelling-house, which is the property of Lord Crofton.

In Mayo some good and effective works continue in progress for Captain J. C. Sheffield and for Messrs. George Orme Malley, q.c., J. Wingfield Stratford, Robert Staples, and Nicholas M. Handy. Of these "planting for shelter" and the additions to a farm-dwelling-house constitute a portion of the improvements of Mr. George Orme Malley, while both he and Mr. Staples have been expending large sums in the erection of offices and farm-buildings.

In Sligo, a new loan has been granted to Mr. Robert Orme, the present High Sheriff of the county, in which I have also had the pleasure of inspecting some excellent works of improvement for Sir Malby Crofton, Bart., and for the Sisters of Charity at Banada (Helena M'Carthy and others).

It is now some months since I have inspected for any of the Galway proprietors, but I may mention that some good and remunerative works are in progress on the estates of Messrs. Daniel O'Connell French, John Lloyd Bagot, and St. George Cranfield, for the latter of whom I made the preliminary inspection towards the close of the past year. The same gentleman has also had additions and alterations made to a dwelling-house in the barony of Ballymoe, not far from the site of his other works.

In the "home district," or eastern counties of Leinster, I have had the honour of reporting on the memorial of several influential proprietors during the past twelve months. In Meath, for instance, loans for drainage and fencing, &c., have been applied for by Lord Athlumney and by Messrs. Robert G. Daniell, R. C. Wade, and W. E. Smyth, whilst Mr. George C. Smyth solicits one for the improvement of property situated partly in Meath and partly in Louth. In Kildare, too, a new loan for drainage has been granted to the Messrs. Aylmer of that county.

Amongst the works in progress which have come under my notice in this district may be mentioned those of Lord Dunsany (now completed) and Messrs. C. B. Caldwell and William Murphy, in Meath, as also the buildings of Lord Athlumney and of Messrs. N. H. Dyas and J. L. W. Naper, in the same county, the latter case being a loan for additions to a dwelling-house. In Kildare, some good and effective works are in progress on the estates of the Earl of Mayo and of Messrs. Edward Hornidge, George T. Hanks, N. J. Gannon, and Richard W. Hartley. In Louth are situated the excellent drainage works of the Messrs. Supple, and the labourers' dwellings of Mr. William D. Dunlop, which have just been completed. In the county Dublin

Some extensive drainage is in progress for the Honorable St. John Butler and for Mrs. C. E. Roper, while similar works have been completed by the representative of the late James Brennan. Lord Talbot de Malahide has some good fencing and other works of improvement on the island of Lambay (co. of Dublin) which were completed during the past year.

In Cavan, the only other county of the eastern district in which I have as yet had the privilege of inspecting, I saw some valuable and extensive thorough drainage which I much admired on the estate of Mr. Mervyn Pratt, and with the allusion to this case I beg leave to close my report for the year.

RICHARD I. J. IRWIN.

County of Galway and part of Mayo.

In compliance with your instructions I now beg to submit my report on the working of the Land Improvement Act in my district for the period extending from the first of January, 1868, to this date.

During that period I have made inspections and reports and have certified for expenditure on the following works:

	£	s.	d.
No. 16.—Land improvement works,	4,847	6	1
„ 6.—Farm-buildings, . . .	1,350	8	10
„ 4.—Labourers' dwellings, . . .	884	16	8
	£7,082	11	7

Among the works of "Land Improvement" those which have been carried out on the estate of Lord Oranmore near Ballindine in the county of Mayo, comprising main and thorough drainage, deserve special notice, both as to their extent, the skilful manner in which they have been executed and the profitable return obtained from the improvement.

Captain Sheffield has also executed some similar works in a very effective manner and with equally good result.

On the estate of Mr. W. H. Gregory, M.P., near Gort, a large extent of cut-out bog has been drained and reclaimed. The work has been executed in a very creditable manner and has been attended with the most satisfactory results.

On the estate of the National Building and Land Investment Co., near Ballinrobe, in the county of Mayo, works of main drainage and fencing have been carried out with great advantage.

Mr. George E. Burke, of Danesfield, near Moycullen, has executed some very remunerative work in clearing land of rocks and scrub and then subsoiling it. Portion of this work has cost £14 per acre, and the result has been to increase the permanent letting value of the land £1 2s. 6d. an acre.

In the class of "farm buildings" the works executed by Mr. Andrew Conyn, of Ballinderry, Mr. Henry Hodgson, of Curraghbrevagh, Mr. Villiers, of Beechhill, and Mr. Hartigan, near Kinvarra, deserve notice both as to the judicious arrangement of the offices and the workmanlike and economical manner in which the works have been performed. The expenditure in the erection of "labourers' dwellings" has been more limited than that on the other class of building improvements referred to.

Mr. J. A. Daly, of Raford, has built three double and two single dwellings.

Mr. W. H. Gregory, of Coole, is building two single dwellings, and the National Building and Land Investment Company have several in progress. The anxiety to provide better accommodation for the labouring classes is increasing, and many proprietors in this district contemplate availing themselves of the facilities afforded by the Act for the erection of suitable dwellings.

Several applications have been made for loans for planting for shelter, and some work of this class has been executed this spring but has not yet been inspected; and I am aware that two applications are now about being made for the erection of farm-dwellings under the Act of 1866.

In reviewing the advantages derived from the facility of obtaining loans for the execution of works for the improvement of land under the Acts referred to, I believe I am correct in stating that but a very limited portion of the works upon which I have now reported would have been carried out had not the proprietors (who are, generally speaking, tenants for life) the power of obtaining loans chargeable on their estates, for the execution of such works, and when it is considered that works of land improvement such as I have referred to will, on an average, yield a return of ten per cent., and that farm-buildings and labourers' dwellings will increase the value of the property by at least five per cent. on the expenditure, it is evident that the promotion of such works under proper and skilful direction must be attended with advantage to the country generally, as well as to the proprietors and occupiers of land.

SAMUEL U. ROBERTS.

County of Cork.

In compliance with your letter of the fifteenth instant I beg to submit the following remarks on the general working of the Land Improvement Acts in my district for the past year. The advantages to be derived are becoming more generally known and for the past year I have made preliminary inspections for five fresh loans, some of which are very extensive. The proposed works are chiefly drainage, fencing, and planting for shelter, but I had no case of building farm offices or any dwellings.

The works in progress of which there are a good many, and some extensive, with few exceptions, were executed in a most satisfactory manner.

In many places the proprietors complain of the scarcity and consequent dearness of labour, so that some have had to pay a good deal over the sums originally estimated for, and I am certain that if there was now the same supply of labour for executing extensive improvements that existed at the commencement of the grant it would be speedily exhausted. Many now regret not having availed themselves of it, while drainage could be done on reasonable terms.

J. T. CORNWALL.

County of Kerry and part of Cork.

In obedience to your instructions of the 14th instant, I have to make an annual report on the working of the Land Improvement Acts for the year 1868, and up to this date, from the 19th February last, for the information of the Board of Public Works.

It is satisfactory to be able to state that the disposition to carry on improvements under these Acts appear to be still on the increase as may be seen by a comparison of the amounts of the certified progress bills for the last three years, viz. :—

Of the last year's amounts, the sum of £2,354 11s. 9d. was allowed on eleven loans for building labourers' houses and farm offices, and £2,659 for land works on ten loans in Kerry, and only £539 9s. 3d. for one of Sir George Colthurst's loans in Cork.

It is hard to expect any further very great development of the operations under those loans with the present supply of labourers, always on the decrease while their reluctance to give a good return of work, is on the increase, thereby discouraging proprietors and large farmers from land improvements, and I have no doubt that this is the principal reason for the increase of pasture and decrease of tillage land in Ireland.

I have not been furnished with any information as to the loans made under the 29 & 30 Vic., cap. 40.

Mr. Thomas Sandes has just finished a very good specimen of a farm dwelling-house adjoining his new farm-yard at Coolnanonagh near Tarbert, and the Knight of Kerry has a loan of £4,000 for farm dwellings for small tenants, on Valentia Island, not yet acted on I believe. Mr. R. C. Hickson and Mr. Samuel M. Hussey, and Sir George Colthurst, have put up very economical buildings of that class, which may be taken as patterns.

There are no others in progress. There have been only two bills filled for labourers' houses in 1868, with my report, viz.—£250 for four houses finished by Lord Castlerosse, and £100 4s. on account of sixteen houses built by Mr. James Butler who will be able to complete twelve in progress for £40 a piece, using clay mortar dashed outside, and plastered inside with lime mortar, the cost of lime in the barony of Iveragh being nearly 4s. per barrel of thirty-two gallons. In Cork Sir George Colthurst built four houses.

I have heard of but one application for a loan for APPENDIX planting. Major Crosbie of Ballyhigue got from me the required forms for a memorial for his estate near Bally- Landed longford, including eight acres of planting for shelter Property at Rusheen, which he intended to lay before the Board Improvement this month. Inspectors'

If there be cause for despondency at the small amount Annual of work done where so much might be done, there is Reports. some pleasure in seeing the good results of those improvements (so few and far between) and the care and attention bestowed on them in the execution by proprietors and tenants.

INLAND NAVIGATIONS AND HARBOURS.

Report of Mr.
Robt. Adams,
Inspector.

REPORT of Mr. ROBERT ADAMS, Inspector, on the STATE of the TYRONE NAVIGATION.
For the year 1868.

Coalisland, 12th January, 1869.

SIR,—The works executed on this navigation, during the past year, have been exclusively confined to the usual repairs incidental to the maintenance of the navigation, viz., the repairs of the towing-path (which is also a turnpike-road) and the canal banks. One new heel-post and rail put in breast-gate of No. 5 Lock. The surface of the wharf and quay has been kept in good repair with broken lime-stone. The slating of the lock-keepers' houses has been pointed and the houses lime-whitened. Several leaks in the canal bank, seventh-level, were securely stanchd.

The removal of weeds from the canal still continues a source of considerable expense.

Although the lock-gates are a good deal worn the navigation generally is in good working order.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

ROBERT ADAMS.

The Secretary, Board of Public Works.

Report of Mr.
Edward H.
Alcock, Harbour Master.

EXTRACT from REPORT of Mr. EDWARD H. ALCOCK, Harbour Master, on the STATE of DUNMORE HARBOUR.
For the year 1868.

Harbour House, Dunmore, East,
11th March, 1869.

SIR,—The old jetty at the S.W. angle of the pier has been very much shaken by the storms of the recent winter, and, as I have before reported, it would be most desirable to have this useless obstruction entirely removed, and a slip made in its place, for the fishermen haul their boats up on.

The usual repairs were given to the harbour-house and premises last spring, all the outside wood-work was painted, the roof repaired and coated, chimneys swept, sewers cleaned, and the road leading to the house put in good order; and the entire is now, considering the season of the year, in fair condition.

I am, your ever obedient servant,

EDWARD H. ALCOCK,
Harbour Master, Dunmore, East.

To Edward Hornsby, esq., Secretary,
Office of Public Works, Custom House, Dublin.

Report of Mr.
James Bellew, Superintendent.

REPORT of Mr. JAMES BELLEW, Superintendent, on the STATE of the WORKS of the BOYNE NAVIGATION.
For the year 1868.

Oldbridge, Drogheda,
16th January, 1869.

SIR,—In compliance with your letter of the 5th inst. I beg to forward report of the state of works on this navigation for the past year.

River Wall, Ball's Grove Trackway.

There has been no breach on this wall during the past year. The late heavy floods have caused some stones to be displaced, and gravel washed off the tow-path, but these injuries can be repaired at a trifling cost.

Oldbridge Station.

The lock-gates at this station are in excellent working order. The chimney of the lock-keeper's house has been rebuilt, and some alterations made in the house to render it more comfortable. The guard lock-gates are old, but as they are used only in time of flood, I am of opinion they will last some time longer.

Stalleen Station.

The sill of this lock has been repaired and the water-fall on the breast newly sheeted. The deep-gates will require to be raised and newly sheeted, when the proper time arrives for the execution of such work. A new iron-gate with hammered-stone piers has been erected at the end of this trackway, to prevent the trespass of cattle from the public road.

Broe Station.

There has been a new deep-gate erected at this station. A new flight of dogged-stairs has been put in the lock-keeper's house from the kitchen to the bedroom, with partition at top and door on landing; the upper room has been ceiled, which was very necessary, it having previously been cold and uncomfortable.

Rosnaree Station.

The lock-gates at this station are in excellent order. The wing-wall, at the entrance to this lock on the land side, has been repaired and elevated, so as to enable boatmen to get their horses on and off the boats, as it is necessary for them to cross the river near this place, and the elevation of the wall obviates the necessity for a landing stage.

Castle Lock.

The works at this station are in perfect order. The weed anacharis alsinastrum caused great annoyance owing to the extreme dryness and heat of the past summer.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. BELLEW, Superintendent.

The Secretary, Board of Public Works, Dublin.

REPORTS of Mr. JAMES J. BOYLAN, Assistant Engineer, of WORKS executed between 1st January, 1868, and 31st March, 1869.

APPENDIX D.

Report of Mr.

Assistant
Engineer.

ROYAL HARBOURS.

Kingstown Harbour, County Dublin.

During the past fifteen months the ordinary works of maintenance were closely attended to. These consisted of the repairing, cleaning, watering, and lighting the roads, quays, wharves, footpaths, &c.; repairing and cleaning the tramways, fences, gates, &c., on the harbour property; repairing, painting, and whitening the offices, stores, workshops, and residences of the harbour officers and boatmen; repairing, painting, &c., the cranes, lamps, fence-chains and gates about the harbour; repairing the sea-slopes and inner-face walls of the East and West Piers; repairing and cleaning the female free bathing place; repairing, painting, and maintaining the harbour boats, barges, buoys, moorings, warps, piles, fenders, gangways, &c., and supplying ballast to the depots on the East Pier, Traders' Wharf and Coal Quay for the use of the shipping.

The repairs of the Mail Packet Pier and shed have been in progress during the last twelve months, and are now just complete. In carrying out this work with as little inconvenience to the conduct of the mail service and passenger traffic as possible, it was necessary to provide a new berth for the mail steamers at the inner end on the east side of the pier; this entailed the necessity of removing a number of large boulder stones from the bottom to make sufficient water, the facing of the pier with whole baulk wall fenders, and the construction of a temporary platform for the landing of the passengers, mails, &c., as well as the construction of a temporary line of rails to be used by the railway trains in lieu of the turn-table at the pier head. These preparations being complete the steamers took up this new berth on the 14th of May last, and the works on the west face of the pier were commenced. A line of double piles were driven at 7 feet apart parallel to and at 12 feet from the face of the pier, these were braced from the pier and secured to it, and were sheeted on the outside by half-baulk timbers, which were again plated with half-round iron bars 5-inch by 1-inch. The entire of the stone platforms at either side were taken up and reset, and needles introduced through the pier under the platforms and railway at every 9 feet. The base stones of the shed were taken up and reset, the columns adjusted, and new ones inserted in place of those broken. The face wall of the pier was underpinned with dressed stones by divers, and after the piles were driven a buttress of stonework was formed round them and up against the wall. This work, which was necessarily a very tedious one, was carried out with the utmost energy; it was frequently interrupted by the mail packets coming down on the works during its progress, but every possible concession was made to facilitate the transit of the mails and passengers at this important packet station. The work has been so far completed without any accident or serious delay to the mails.

A temporary pavilion was erected on the Victoria Wharf on the occasion of the visit of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales on the 15th April, 1868.

A steam dredging vessel and barges have been purchased, and arrangements are being made for dredging out the deposit of sand and mud that has been accumulating in the harbour since its construction.

Howth Harbour, County Dublin.

The works of maintenance executed during the last fifteen months consist of the repairing and cleaning of the surface of the roadways of the east and west piers and road to Kilrock Quarry, all of which have been thoroughly coated with broken stones; on the west pier a footpath 6 feet in width was formed from the railway station to the Mariners' Church; on the east pier a length of 460 feet of the quay wall was raised about 3 feet with solid masonry, and coped on top, paved at back, and a flight of cut stone steps built into the wall, and a portion of the sea-slope that had been injured was repaired.

The fish-curing sheds on the east pier, which were nearly all unroofed by the storm in January, 1868, and otherwise injured, have been newly roofed with louvers in top that has prevented their being disturbed since.

The Cannon and Murr Rocks, which were situated in the harbour near the west pier, have been blasted and removed by divers, and the removal of the adjoining rocks is in progress.

A further length of 60 feet of the west pier has been let for fish-curing purposes, and a length of 30 feet for a shipsmith's forge adjoining the ship carpenter's shop.

Donaghadee Harbour, County Down.

The toe of the sea-slopes of the south pier was displaced by the storms in the spring of 1868; this has been efficiently repaired, and some small breaches in the upper portion of the sea pavement have also been repaired, as well as the parapet at Lemon's Wharf.

The surface of the roadway of the piers, &c., were repaired and cleaned, and the cranes, stores, workshops, &c., were painted and repaired.

During the summer of 1868 a small steamer was started in the passenger traffic between this port and Portpatrick, making two trips each way daily, and was much used by persons going from the North of Ireland to Scotland and the North of England—the passage occupied about 1½ hours.

Dunmore Harbour, County Waterford.

The repairs of the sea pavement of the pier were continued during the last fifteen months and are now all but completed, the work was several times interrupted by storms, which are frequent at this very exposed situation.

The Ashlar stones in the sea pavement that were displaced have been reset, and a large quantity of heavy rubble stone has been tipped in over the toe to protect it from further damage.

The flagging on the top of the stores has been completed, and withstood the heavy seas of the last winter washing over it.

A length of 30 perches of new road was formed from the hotel approaching the harbour, which will be a great improvement and leave better sites for building purposes.

The following is the quantity of work done:—

1,140	square yards flagging set on stones.
50	lineal feet cut-stone steps.
16	perches fence wall built.
120	square yards ashlar pavement reset.
2,500	cubic yards rubble filling at toe of sea slope.
1,200	excavation offbearing in quarry.

FISHERY PIERS AND HARBOURS.

Kilkeel Pier, County Down.

This pier was constructed under the Board by daily labour, under a resident clerk of works, and was completed in accordance with the original design and within the original estimate, on the 1st June last.

Pending the consideration of the proposition from the promoters of the pier for further works, it was unfortunately visited on the 12th August last by a most extraordinary mountain flood, which washed over the entire surface of the upper work, tore away the weir, the greater portion of the north retaining wall, and undercut the quay wall of the pier in two places, and at the same time depositing a very large quantity of gravel and stones in the harbour; since then the injury to the pier has been repaired, and the greater portion of the gravel deposited by the mountain flood removed; but the small amount available for this purpose being expended the works were suspended on the 1st March last.

Newcastle Pier, County Down.

There were no works executed at this pier under the Board during the last fifteen months. It has been seriously injured by the storms of last winter.

APPENDIX D.

Report of Mr.
James J.
Boylan,
Assistant
Engineer.

Spiddle Pier, County Galway.

During the last fifteen months considerable progress has been made with this work, which received little injury until the storm on the 31st January last, when the outer and unfinished portion was thrown down for a length of 100 feet and 6 feet in depth, but it is now rebuilt, and the entire of the works are in a favourable state.

During the spring of each year these works are nearly suspended for want of labourers, those usually employed being the local farmers, who are obliged to attend to their little holdings to get in the crops during the months of March and April.

Quantity of work done during last 15 months:—

370 lineal feet of pier, nearly finished.
180 " " " in progress.
1,434 cubic yards masonry in mortar.
2,058 " " " set dry.
2,836 superficial yards sea paving.
3,006 cubic feet ashlar in coping steps.
24,595 cubic yards filling in pier.

Clifden Quay, County Galway.

The extension of the quay, pitching, and half-tide barriers were completed by the end of last summer, the removal of some rocks at the entrance of the channel was then commenced, but in consequence of the roughness of the weather the work was suspended for the winter. It was resumed last February, and if the weather continues fine will be completed in two months.

Quantity of work executed:—

185 cubic yards masonry in mortar.
1,121 " " " set dry.
579 cubic feet ashlar in coping steps, &c.
1,181 cubic yards, filling.
45 " " rock excavated.

Barnadery Pier, County Galway.

This work was completed on the 1st of March, 1868, that done during the preceding two months being little more than finishing off. The entire work was done within the estimate.

Quantity of work executed:—

12 cubic yards masonry in mortar.
16 " " " set dry.
90 cubic feet coping.
120 cubic yards rock excavation.
80 " " gravel " for filling.

Leenaua Pier, County Galway.

This work was completed in December, 1867 (as stated in my last report), but it was found necessary to form a small slip or pathway from the road at the end of the West Pier to the shore for the convenience of bringing up seaweed, &c., the original passage having been closed by the construction of the pier. This slip was formed in the month of March, 1868, and the entire work completed within the estimate.

Lady Elizabeth's Cove Pier, County Waterford.

This work was commenced in the autumn of 1867, but little was done further than excavation in the site of the pier and harbour and preparing material, until the spring of 1868. It was then pushed on with vigour. The approach road or wharf wall was completed for its entire length of 180 feet, and the pier run out for its whole length of 230 feet, and raised to within 2 feet of finished height or level of bottom of coping by 28th September, when a severe storm set in, and acting on the work threw down on an average 9 feet in height of the work; considering it useless to attempt to reconstruct it at such an advanced season, the works were suspended for the winter; some heavy stones were placed on the structure to protect it from further damage, and a few men employed quarrying stones necessary for its completion during the winter. Arrangements are now made to push on the work with vigour, and it is expected to have it complete early in the ensuing summer.

Quantity of work done:—

20 cubic yards masonry in mortar.
1,420 " " " set dry.
540 cubic feet ashlar in coping steps, &c.
2,660 cubic yards, filling.
560 " " stones quarried and part hammered.

Bantry Pier, County Cork.

This work is being done by contract. It was commenced in May, 1867, and has been proceeded with slowly up to the present. There is 230 feet in length nearly finished; a further length of 45 feet to level of coping, and 60 feet more in progress.

The removal of the rock at the inner face of the pier is completed to low water level.

Quantity of work executed:—

955 cubic yards masonry in mortar.
360 " " " set dry.
31,240 cubic feet ashlar in face parapet and coping.
4,192 cubic yards filling rock.
240 " " excavation in clay.

DRAINAGE MAINTENANCE ACT, 1866.

Lough Dalla District, County Mayo.

The repairs of the works executed for the drainage of this district have been executed by contract at an amount slightly in excess of the estimate. They were commenced 20th June, 1868, and completed by 8th September, after which they were maintained by the contractor until 9th December, 1868, when they were finally taken off his hands. The works consisted in the scouring up of 1,717 perches of main channel and 2,064 perches of drains, principally through bog. The land was much improved by the execution of the works.

Balla District, County Mayo.

The repairs of the works in this district were executed by daily labour. They were commenced 20th March, 1868, and completed 8th December, 1868. They consisted in the scouring up of 3,600 perches of main channels, and 2,340 perches of tributary drains as also the reconstruction of an accommodation bridge. These works had been very much neglected, and the efficient repairs now executed, if properly maintained by the proprietors and occupiers, will ensure very great benefit to a large tract of valuable land.

PIERS AND HARBOURS MAINTENANCE.

Belmullet Canal, County Mayo.

The Swivel Bridge at Belmullet having become useless from decay and neglect of the county authorities, its reconstruction by the Board was ordered by the Treasury.

The work was commenced in December last. In the first instance a temporary bridge was erected, the old structure was then removed, and is now in progress of reconstruction, and it is expected will be completed by the end of this month.

JAMES J. BOYLAN, C.E., Assistant Engineer,
Office of Public Works,
5th April, 1869.

The Secretary Board of Works.

REPORT of Mr. JOHN S. MASON, C.E., Engineer in charge of ULSTER CANAL.
For the year 1868.

APPENDIX D.

Report of Mr.
J. S. Mason,
Engineer.

Monaghan, 10th April, 1869.

Monaghan to Smithboro'—8 miles.

SIR,—I beg to furnish the annual report on the works of repair and maintenance on the Ulster Canal during the past year.

The works of repair, chiefly on the Clones and Lough Erne levels, remaining from the previous year to be done, have been finished, and the entire length of navigation (46 miles) is now in good order as regards locks, embankments, and towing-paths; but the supply of water has to be provided, and the works in connection with the extension of the reservoir, and necessary alteration in the head feeder, will occupy this summer to complete. The maintenance of the several works along the canal has been attended to—puddling the slopes where leakages were observed, and keeping the towing-paths and fences in good order.

The principal works finished during the year are detailed in the following divisions:—

Charlemont to Caledon—14 miles.

The works in this division are in general good order, and traffic was allowed on part of it throughout the year. Some puddling was done in the short reaches between the third and sixth locks, where an open-jointed roof underlies and leakages are liable. In the month of December last an extensive slip, 50 yards in length, occurred in one of the high embankments near Battlefore-bridge, adjoining the river Blackwater, carrying about half the width of the embankment into the river; but being observed in time, the injury did not extend further. The slip was repaired by building a wall to support the embankment, and reforming the slope and towing-path. The level has since been kept at the usual height of water, and the new work stands well without any settlement. During the summer the Caledon level was run dry, and the bottom cleared of weeds and mud, of which there were large accumulations at the places where two feeders enter the canal. A large slip from a sidelong cutting, near Battiford, was also removed, and this reach—10 miles long—is now in good order, carrying occasionally lighters with traffic to Caledon. Two overflows on this level were repaired and regulated to keep the height of water at 4 feet 6 inches on the lock-sills; and the lock sluices were refitted and repaired where any leakage was observed, with other minor works of maintenance.

Advantage was taken of the very dry summer to clear out the mud in the bottom of the canal for nearly the entire length of this division, and removing several slips in sidelong cuttings, two of which, situate near the ninth and seventeenth locks, have for years past required constant clearing. Sewers were made at the former, and a retaining wall was built at the latter, and both have stood well during the winter. On the Caledon reach the bottom of the canal was above the level of the lock-sills in a few places, and the shoals have been removed, enabling trade lighters in the latter part of the year to pass with full loads to Monaghan. A lifting timber-bridge at Tynar was repaired by renewing the sheeting of the roadway, and making an approach with clay, supported with walls in place of the timber planking, which was removed. A small stream tunnel, passing under the canal near the tenth lock, was found leaking, and the puddle was renewed; also a large leakage was found passing under the upper wing walls of the tenth lock. The holes were carefully closed, made staunch, and the joints of the masonry cemented. The sluices of the lock were refitted and repaired, as also the other locks and sluices in this division. A small portion of fencing at Killeef, erected at the top of a deep cutting, slipped, and a new fence was made further back from the edge. Near Martin's Bridge the embankments were puddled, and leakages were stopped in several places on the Tyhollan level, together with the repairs of towing-paths and other works of maintenance.

The embankments at Monaghan, formed on a swampy ground, having settled down, required further raising and puddling. The embankment next Spark's Lake has a soft boggy foundation, and will perhaps require to be raised again; but at present the works are in safe good order. A stream passes under the canal near the lake, but the tunnel was not sufficient to pass an extraordinary flood last February, which, rising on the lands on the upstream side, flowed into the canal, endangering the embankment with the risk, if a breach occurred, of flooding the town. To prevent this, the banks were cut on both sides of the canal in firm places, and the flood passed in and out at the opposite side without injury to the works. At Drummacannon a larger stream joins, and, rising above the embankment which separates it from the canal, made a breach, carrying about twelve yards of the bank into the canal, and it was necessary to cut the banks of the canal where there was sufficient outfall to let off the large quantity of water that overflowed into the canal. The breach was immediately repaired, and the top of the shoal formed by the breach has been removed. Part of the canal was cleared of mud at the swamp near the nineteenth lock, and between the twentieth and twenty-second locks the embankments were puddled where leakages were observed; and, with the exception of the shoal at Drummacannon, which cannot be removed at present, the works in this division are in good order. The lock sluices were refitted, and the joints of the masonry cemented. The feeder between Quig Lough and the canal was deepened and cleared of mud, and the fences are now being made, with other works of maintenance in repairing the towing-paths and fences along the canal; also a metal pipe passing under the canal for supplying the covert at Monaghan with water, and rebuilding a wall at Stores which was blown down.

Smithboro' to Clones—6 miles.

The work done in this division was chiefly near Clones, where the embankments were raised and puddled, requiring a large quantity of clay to be boated for the repairs, and the towing-paths were formed and metalled. The Franshaw level, about four miles in length, was laid dry during the summer and cleared of weeds and mud, and the slopes of the canal were in several places puddled to stop leakages. Some of the embankments may require more puddling, but the works are otherwise in good repair, including the locks, lock-gates, sluices, and timber bridge, and the maintenance of the works has been attended to in keeping the fences and towing-paths in good order.

Clones to Lough Erne—7 miles.

The works of puddling and raising embankments, forming and metalling towing-paths, were continued from last year, and have been finished. A large quantity of clay and materials were boated for the purpose. On the Clones level a dip in one of the embankments between Murwillly and Clongowna bridges occurred in the early part of the year, and it was necessary to remake the embankment. The Lough Erne level was laid dry in the summer, and some high portions in the bottom, together with the weeds and mud, were removed. The slopes also near and adjoining lough and bog were very leaky, and required to be puddled. The Clones level is now being cleared of mud, which only in a few places has accumulated in heaps, caused by decayed woods, and mud brought into the canal by drains and water-courses. The works at this end of the canal, which were in a ruined useless state before the repairs were commenced, are now in good order; but as works of maintenance, some further puddling may be necessary when the levels are again filled, and additional metalling of towing-paths after the new work has settled. The lock-gates sluices were refitted and made staunch, and consequently without inconvenience to the trade. The wharf and roadway between Clara-street and the canal stores, have been repaired with 95 cubic yards of broken stones, the cast iron pillars erected thereon the previous year, have been cleaned and painted in oil paint, the collector's and inspector's offices painted inside two coats. The woodwork of the several lock-gates, twenty-two in number have been scraped, cleaned, and coated with Stockholm tar, the ironwork painted in oil, and the usual necessary repairs executed. There has been one pair of gates made and erected at Park lock, 18 feet 6 inches deep, and one half gate made and erected at Monaskea lock, 17 feet deep; eight new foot boards of native elm, 12 feet long, 18 inches wide, and  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches thick, plated on edge with half-round iron, two uprights and brackets, two oak loggerheads mounted, one new sluice, and five balance beams have been put on the several gates. The lock-houses, stores &c. twenty-one in number, have been lime-whitened, the roofs repaired, four window sashes glazed and put in, with one new floor laid on  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches by 2 inches joist, covered with  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch boards, in Moyes lock-house. The towing-paths, banks, and slopes have been repaired with 320 tons of strong gravel, 100 yards superficial of stone pitching, and 125 yards of sodding, 1,450 lineal perches of boundary drains cleaned and deepened, 510 tons of gravel dredged with spoon bag and removed from the canal at Moyes. The weed (Utricularia albastrum) has not given so much trouble this year as heretofore, as it appears to decrease in the canal, while it seems to increase on the sides of the river, 640 lineal perches of the canal cleared of weeds which were obstructing the trade boats. One wooden bridge over the mill-race at Plassey renewed, with two oak girders 12 feet long, 8 inches by 6 inches, covered with 3-inch deals.

Report of Mr.

Ardeelony River.

The various floods in this river during the past year have brought down large quantities of gravel and shingle from the Clare mountains, which were trapped above the towing-path and prevented from being driven into the navigation course. 1,751 cubic yards of this gravel have been removed by horses and carts to the Spoil bank, a distance of 309 yards.

Killaloe.

A slip in the retaining wall, towing-path, and parapet of road wall had occurred after the floods in January, 1868, which were necessarily attended to. 226 cubic yards of earth had to be excavated. Retaining wall, 50 feet long, 9 feet high, and 3 feet 6 inches thick, built; the parapet on road wall, 50 feet long, 3 feet 6 inches high, and 18 inches thick, built in mortar; the Quay wall in the boat slip yard, 48 feet long, 7 feet high, and 18 inches thick, underpinned; the roofs of the stores repaired, and all the premises lime-whitened; the O dredger varnished outside, and painted in oil inside; the wharf repaired with 10 cubic yards of broken stones.

Scarriff and Tomgravy.

The harbour and quays at both stations are in good repair. No expenditure incurred during the past year.

Mount Shannon Pier.

In good repair. No expenditure incurred during the past year.

Portumna.

The wharf has been repaired with 10 cubic yards of broken stones; the old wooden jetty on the north side of the canal being very defective had to be rebuilt on 34 piles of native timber, 82 joists of red pine 10 feet long, 12 inches deep, and 4 inches in thickness, covered with 1,040 feet superficial of 3-inch pine sheeting.

Meelick.

The lock-gates repaired with 22 feet superficial of  $2\frac{1}{2}$ -inch red pine; the gangways repaired with 82 feet superficial of 1-inch elm sheeting. Several leakages having appeared in the canal banks were attended to and stopped; 292 lineal perches of drain cleaned up; the lock-house and offices lime-whitened.

Clognaheenogue Canal.

The lock-house lime-whitened. Killyscarriff swivel bridge repaired with 36 feet superficial of ballast sheeting 3-inch thick, and 460 lineal perches of boundary drain scoured and deepened.

Ennaghier.

The roof of the store suffered some injury by the late storms, which has been repaired; the collector's house lime-whitened, and a new floor in one of the upper rooms 11 feet 6 inches by 7 feet, laid on  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch white deal; the office and wooden gate on the Leinster side of the river repaired.

Shannon Harbour.

The superstructure of the wooden bridge at the ferry, which is 260 lineal feet, became very defective—the chief part of it quite rotten and unsafe for horses to pass over—it has been all taken down and renewed, with two thorough girders of best red pine, each girder 202 feet long, 14 inches deep, and 7 inches thick; 38 flooring joists 9 feet long, 7 inches deep, and 6 inches thick; 190 lineal feet of roadway sheeting, 6 feet 6 inches wide and  $3\frac{1}{4}$  inches thick of best red pine; 74  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch square bolts and nuts 15 inches long; the whole properly secured and coated with well-boiled Stockholm tar. The approaches at both ends of the bridge have been raised 18 inches, the sides sodded, and 27 yards superficial of stone pitching on slopes made good. The landings for the ferry-boat on both sides of the river have been deepened, the approaches repaired, 10 strong piles of native timber driven, and 40 feet of walting put on for the protection of the ferry-boat; the ferry-house lime-whitened, the doors and windows painted in oil.

General Navigation.

The necessary guide piles, buoys, and beacons for defining the sailing course have been attended to, viz. six piles of native timber driven between Ennaghier and Portumna, six iron buoys replaced, which shifted from their position, nine buoys taken up, painted, chains renewed, and replaced on shoals on Longh Derg; one stone beacon built on Castle Farrel shoal Goose bay, the beacons on the Benjamin Goat's road and Clare island, have been underpinned and lime-whitened.

RIVER MAIDUE NAVIGATION.

The works on this navigation are in a very good state of repair. The swivel bridge has been thoroughly scraped, cleaned, and painted, three coats in oil paint. The accumulation of silt in the harbour, 667 cubic yards, has been removed. The collector's house lime-whitened, the doors and windows painted in oil.

CARRIGAHOLT PIER, COUNTY OF CLARE.

The construction of this pier, which has been in hands for the past two years, is now fully completed and proves to be one of the best and most useful works in the west of Ireland, as it affords shelter and a safety harbour for all vessels entering therein in the roughest weather. The storms and almost unprecedented high tides which we have had during and since the erection of this pier have done no injury whatever to the works, which is a strong proof of its stability.

The quantity of work executed, viz. 3,026 yards cubic of excavation, 3,570 yards cubic of filling between walls, 1,171 yards cubic of squared punched masonry in face of wall set in mortar, 75 yards cubic hammered masonry pinning in face of wall, 340 yards cubic hammered ditto in parapet, 974 yards superficial squared hammered pavement, 670 yards superficial top pavement on wharf, 850 lineal feet of punched and drafted coping, 6 wrought iron mooring rings, 12 inches diameter, sunk and leaded into heavy large stone blocks.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

WILLIAM MOLLOY.

Board of Public Works,
Custom House, Dublin.
