He is present by Espartera, with four thousand men, by Jaureguy, so the Jarge force, and Carrera, who has advanced to Salvaterra, while Rodil, with ten thousand men endeavors to draw the Carlists into the plain. Don Carlos has precipitately quitted his head quarters at Salmias de Oro. Our troops are drawing nearer and nearer to the frontiers. It is reported that the Army of Observation is to be changed into a sanitary cordon. The spirit of the Queen's troops is excellent. The army look with more contempt than anger upon the arrival of Don Carlos or of the person who personifies him.

LONDON, July, 29-The only news concerning France is a assigns as the probable canse, the necessity the Government may be under of employing his fleet nearer home. In fact, the French Journals, like some of our own journals, contemplate the interference of France with the affairs of Spein, and the report goes that should Rodit sustain a defeat, the French army will immediately enter Spein. We leave the probability of that to the judgment of our readers. leave the probability of that to the judgment of our renders.

Pass, July 27.—All the accounts lead one to believe the messing between the contending forces will be dreadfully sanguinary. Letters from Eayonne of the 22d, describe Rodil to be at the head of a deposable force of 16,000 infantry, 10,000 eavalry, and revel pieces of artillery, besides the troops be has been obliged to detach in order to prevent the passage of the Royalists in other quarters.

attempt to torce the passage would not only be attended with great danger and loss, but that it might be entirely defeated if the defease were ably conducted. However mean an opinion may be entertained of the Turkisa soldiers, every body knows that they show uncommon bravery and persurverance behind the slightest defensive works. It must, however, be assumed, that if a hossile atacquainted with the political relations of Europe can be loive—it must be directed, not against the Port alone, but also against Russia which would naturally impose on that power the duty of hastening to assist the Porte, and take part in the defence of the Durdanelles. Under such circumstances skilful and brave officers would be given to the Torkish trupps, who might prove that it is not for easy, as it was on a furmer occasion, to force an entrance into the chamel. However, no such experiment will be made, for whatever the journals may say of the intentions of the two may powers, they are two present to expose themselves to the dangerous chances for general war, by straggression which poshing has been done to provoke. rhich nothing has been done to provoke.
