CALEB BENJAMIN TILLINGHAST, A.M., Litt.D.

By EDWARD S. SEARS of Winthrop, Mass.

THE death on April 28, 1909, of Caleb Benjamin Tillinghast, at the age of 66 years and 25 days, removed from his many useful activities a public official of noteworthy efficiency and devotion to duty, a leading officer in this Society, a wise counsellor, a good citizen, and a faithful friend. A student of humanity as well as of books, his judgments of men and his estimates of literature were sound and just. Singularly free from self-seeking, he gave to every interest with which he was identified the best that was in him. He was tolerant of the opinions of others, kindly in his personal relations, staunch in his friendships, and of absolute integrity. Few men indeed have been better loved or more sincerely mourned.

Caleb Benjamin Tillinghast was born at West Greenwich, Rhode Island, April 3, 1843, the son of Pardon and Eunice Tillinghast, his mother's maiden name being also Tillinghast. Through both parents he was descended from the famous Baptist minister "Elder" Pardon Tillinghast, whose name is prominent in the early annals of Rhode Island. On his father's side the line of descent was through Pardon, Pardon, John, Charles, Pardon, Pardon, Thomas, Thomas, Thomas, Thomas, John, Benjamin, Eunice 1.

VOL. LXIV.

Removing at an early age with his family to Windham County, Connecticut, Mr Tillinghast entered the schools of that county and gained an unusually thorough education, partly in the schools, but chiefly, as he himself wrote in recent years, "through a natural love of books and access to a public library." He was particularly strong in mathematics and history, and so well did he improve his opportunities that while a very young man he became a teacher and an officer in the schools of Windham County. In the spring of 1870 he came to Boston to take a position as reporter on the Boston Journal, to which his wide reading and his taste for literature inclined him. During his nine years' connection with this newspaper, filling the position of city editor during the latter part of the time. he was an industrious and assiduous reporter, devoting himself not only to directing and revising the work of others, but to producing compact and accurate chronicles of many important events and movements of the day. His tastes led him into the company of authors, lecturers and public officials, and he gained not only a wide acquaintance with the men of mark in these various branches but an intimate familiarity with the affairs of the Commonwealth. Meanwhile he found time for much reading and began the collection of a private library, which he continued throughout his life. He frequented the libraries and the bookstores and publishing houses, making friends with the prominent writers and publishers of the period. He was a discriminating reader, as the several thousand volumes in his library attest. That his companionship was valued by many authors of note, autographed gifts of their books in his library are evidence.

But his newspaper career, useful and congenial as it was, served only as a preparation and a stepping-stone for his life work. In 1879 the late John W. Dickinson was Secretary of the State Board of Education and by the law in force at that time was ex-officio librarian of the State library, then comprising a few thousand books and pamphlets. In June of that year Mr. Dickinson offered Mr. Tillinghast the composite position of assistant librarian, clerk and treasurer of the Board of Education. From that time till his death the library and the educational system of the Commonwealth held foremost place in his thoughts. Acting as librarian from the first. he became State Librarian in 1893, by virtue of Section 3, Chapter 86, of the Acts of that year, which reads: - "The present assistant librarian of the state library shall be the librarian until a successor is appointed and qualified." As no successor ever was appointed during his life, he held the place till his death.

Although this law terminated the official connection between the library and the Board of Education, so valuable had Mr. Tillinghast become to the Board, and so strong were the ties that bound him to its members and its work, that every year he was re-elected clerk and treasurer, and he gave his services gladly. How arduous were those duties, and how indefatigably he labored to perform them, his intimate associates alone know. At two different times—notably during nearly a year covering the last illness and after the death of the late Frank A. Hill, secretary of the Board-Mr. Tillinghast performed the duties of secretary; and until an illness in 1907 confined him to the house, he never missed a meeting of the Board.

When the Free Public Library Commission was created in 1890, Mr. Tillinghast was appointed its chairman, and though this added to his labors and his cares, he gave to the work the same conscientious attention as to his other duties, so long as he lived. In the service, particularly, of the small town libraries, he was most helpful, and the development of the public library system of Massachusetts is largely due to his wise and generous policy. For all these services to the State he never received a penny beyond his modest salary as State Librarian.

In these various public stations, covering so many years, he made hosts of friends of all ranks and classes. His intimate knowledge of the legislation of the Commonwealth and of its public men, his thorough acquaintance with history and with books, aided by a phenomenal memory, made him a mine of information from which he gave freely to all who sought his aid. Governors, State officials. members of Congress and of the Legislature, frequently went to him for facts and for advice, which they often found most timely and valuable. Many a piece of bad legislation has been averted, many a beneficent measure has been carried through, as the result of "talking it over with Tillinghast." His knowledge of facts was accurate; his opinions, based on those facts and on common sense, were therefore worth the asking and the giving.

In his social relations Mr. Tillinghast was frank, generous and companionable. He delighted in the society of his friends, he was unwearied in advancing their interests, he rejoiced with them in their happiness and was tenderly solicitous for them in their illnesses and misfortunes. Though a man of few words, it was a pleasure to be with him, especially on the long rides into the country, on the electric cars, which gave him almost his only recreation during the later years of his life. For "society" so-called he cared nothing—indeed he had a distaste for it. He rarely could be induced to attend a public dinner or the like, and he seldom visited the theatre. For many years he had hardly ever taken a vacation, despite the urging of his friends, and on the few occasions when he did go away for a brief stay he was apt to cut short his, outing and hasten back to his desk.

He was pre-eminently the librarian. He loved the work, and he was proud of his library; justly so, for he had brought it up to rank with the foremost, both in number of volumes and in the nature of its contents. As a reference library, especially of the laws of all the States and of all civilized countries on earth, it is the most complete in this country, if, indeed, any in the world is its equal. He knew his books-knew what was in them and where to find it: he knew the needs of the men who used the library, and he made his selections accordingly. In a most appreciative tribute to Mr. Tillinghast soon after his death, Mr. Warren F. Spalding, secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association, wrote: "He knew more things accurately than any other man I ever saw. If he could not answer your question, he could tell you where to find the answer. He was part of his library. He might have gone elsewhere, at a much larger salary, to be the executive officer of a great library, to direct subordinates, but from choice he stayed where he knew his books and could make others acquainted with them. When he took the librarianship it was a place; he made it a profession."

Many years ago Mr. Tillinghast began the compilation of a record of the members of the Legislature from the adoption of the State constitution, and this record, collected from all sources, but chiefly by correspondence, he continued up to and including the General Court of 1909. The work was done at his home, often continuing until far into the night, and it involved the writing of more than 18,000 index cards—each a brief biography—and more than 75,000 letters, all in his own hand, at the expenditure of over $4000 in postage. This unique and priceless collection of succinct histories of nearly every man who ever sat in the Massachusetts Legislature is in itself a monument to his tireless industry and his love of biographical research. It is to be hoped that it will be secured by the Commonwealth for permanent preservation.

Of large frame and strong constitution, Mr. Tillinghast was indifferent to fatigue and careless of his health. His friends found it hard to make him admit that he was ill, or to induce him to rest, even for a day. But those most intimate with him had noticed with alarm during the past year or two that his physical condition was becoming impaired. He was prostrated by a painful malady on April 3, the day he completed his 66th year, and was removed to the Massachusetts Homœopathic Hospital on the following day. Operations failed to overcome the disease, and he died early on the morning of the 28th.

Mr. Tillinghast was elected a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in June, 1882; served on the Committee on Amendments to the By-Laws in 1893; on the Committee on Papers and Essays for 1894-5; on the Committee on Publications for 1896-7, and as its chairman from 1898 to 1909; as a member of the Council in 1897-8-9; and as Vice-President for Massachusetts from 1901 to his death. His interest in the Society was deep and warm; his services valuable and his counsels salutary. He was a member of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts and the American Antiquarian Society; corresponding member of the Worcester Society of Antiquity, the Chicago Historical Society, the Weymouth Historical Society; member of the Boston Art Club, Boston City Club, and Appalachian Mountain Club.

Though not a college graduate, Mr. Tillinghast's services to the cause of education and to literature were honored by Harvard University in 1897 by the degree of Master of Arts, and by Tufts college in 1905 by the degree of Doctor of Literature.

Mr. Tillinghast was married in Killingly, Connecticut. August 10, 1862, to Ardelia Martin Wood. Of this marriage, one son, Linwood Morton Tillinghast, was born in Killingly July 4, 1865. On June 30, 1886, in Boston, he married for his second wife, Mrs. Martha Ann (Lane) Wonson of Gloucester, who with his son survives him.

THE URANN FAMILY OF NEW ENGLAND

By CHARLES COLLYER WHITTIER of Boston, Mass.

1. WILLIAM¹ URIN, sometimes spelled Uran, Urann, Uren, Yuran, Youring and Yourin, was probably the ancestor of all bearing the name in New England. It has not been learned where he came from, but he was at the Isles of Shoals as early as 1653, for on 12 Sept. of that year he was granted a lot of land there, "between goodman Jacksone and William Cotton with convenient la[nding?]." At various times later he was given grants of land. He was one of the petitioners "that a Court might be held at the Isles of Shoals," also "that the inhabitants might be granted the privileges of a town." Like most of the inhabitants of the islands he was a fisherman. He died at the Isles of Shoals, and the inventory of his estate, filed 11 July 1664, amounted to £433. 12. 8.

His widow Eleanor married secondly, about 1672, Richard Woolcome or Willcomb, who purchased part of the estate of William Urin, deceased, 17 July 1672. She died in 1699, and in her will, dated 19 Sept. 1699, she leaves the balance of her estate to her "five children, son-in-law John Muchemore to take care of Joseph Youring to bring him up in the faith of God and to such Larning as is convenient for one of his degrees." Richard Gooss or Goss, her kinsman, was one of the overseers of the will.

Richard Woolcome and Eleanor had two children: Zacheus, and Anne who married John Muchemore. In a petition of John Urin, son of Eleanor, to have his brother-in-law John Muchemore administer upon his mother's estate, he states that John Muchemore's wife "was his sister on his mother's side." The will of John Muchemore, dated 11 Feb. 1717-8, mentions wife Anne and children John, Richard, Joseph, William, Sarah, Abigail Priest, and Rachel Downs. William Wilkins or Willcomb of Ipswich, grandson of Richard Woolcome of Star Island, was appointed administrator of the estate 11 Aug. 1719.

Children:

 ii. Edward.

4. iii. Francis.

2. John² Urin (William¹) was a cordwainer or tanner, and resided at Greenland, N. H. He was at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1689, when he signed a petition (Mass. Archives, vol. 35, p. 229). On 16 Mar. 1695-6 he received land in Portsmouth (eight acres) in confirmation of a grant given his father, William Urin, in 1653. In 1694 his name appears as on the jury list, and he held various minor offices in the town of Portsmouth from 1700 to 1709. His seat in the meeting-house was in the men's side gallery. He was received into covenant in the South Church of Portsmouth 9 Jan. 1715, and his children were baptized there the following September. He was one of the grantees of the town of Epsom, N. H., and his grand-children sold their interest in his estate there in 1771.

He had two wives; his first one, ABIGAIL, was probably daughter of John Westbrook of Portsmouth, who sold his son-in-law, John Urin of Portsmouth, land there 21 Mar. 1692 (N. H. Deeds, vol. £. p. 254). He married secondly, 12 Nov. 1686, REBECCA CAIE. daughter of James and Alice. John Urin, husband to Rebecca Cate, released his right and title to the estate of her father and mother, James and Alice Cate, 8 June 1702. John Urin died about 1734, and his widow died at Greenland Nov. or Dec. 1745.

Children, born at Portsmouth:

iii. William, bapt. 25 Sept. 1715: with his sisters sold his interest in his father's estate to James Brackett by deeds of 2 May 1734 and 13 Dec. 1735. His name does not appear on the tax lists of Greenland, N. H. He was probably that William Urin who was a private in the Snow Shoe Company, Capt. Domini Jordan, of Falmouth, Me., 14 Apr. 1744. vii. John, bapt. 25 Sept. 1715: probably d. young, as he is not mentioned in any of the family deeds.

3. EDWARD² URIN (William¹) had wife JANE. He purchased, 4 Mar. 1667-8, of the administrators of William Urin's estate, one-half of a dwelling house, fish house, boats, etc., at Star Island. On 6 Nov. 1668, with his wife, he conveyed the same premises to James Blagdon of the Isles of Shoals. He was taxed in Boston, Mass., as early as 1674, and the same year purchased of Daniel Henchman land at the north end of the town, "bounded southwesterly with the street leading to the north burvall place." On 2 June 1675 he sold the last mentioned estate to Christopher Saise of Charlestown, Mass.

He was part owner of the shallop Phillip, of which George Manning was skipper. Unfortunately his vessel was one of the several captured by Capt. Samuel Moseley in his expedition of 1674 against the pirates, who were brought into the port of Boston 2 Apr. 1675. Urin's vessel was returned to him, it being shown from his testimony (Mass. Archives) that he had taken no part in piracy, and he was discharged. Five of the pirates were convicted and condemned to death, others were acquitted, while some were pardoned to serve against the Indians.

Children, born at Boston:

- EDWARD.3 b. 2 June 1669. MATTHEW, b. 16 Nov. 1672.
- iii. BENJAMIN, b. 25 May 1676.
- 4. Francis² Urin (William¹) was at Ipswich, Mass., as early as 1681. and had wife ALICE, of whom no record has as yet been found. While there is no direct evidence that he was the son of William of the Isles of Shoals, still the names and dates of birth of his children, and his occupation of fisherman, should allow him a place in that family.

He died at Ipswich about 1713, and administration on his estate was granted to his eldest son, William, 9 Apr. 1713. Children, born at Ipswich:

5. RICHARD URIN (John, William). The earliest record found of him is his marriage at Haverhill, Mass. He was one of the first settlers of Penacook (Concord), N. H., and was admitted 5 Feb. 1725. The records show that he spent the winter of 1726 at Concord. In the division of land he drew lots Nos. 6, 8, and 42. He sold a portion of these lots to John Wainwright of Ipswich, Mass., 7 Apr. 1731. He was at Concord as late as 1742, when he married his second wife, who was of Newbury, Mass., and it may have been this fact · that induced him to return to Newbury. With Sarah Urin, who in the deed is called a spinster, both being of Newbury, he sold land and buildings in Ipswich 11 Apr. 1752 (Essex Deeds, vol. 119, p. 39).

He married first at Haverhill, Mass., 17 Oct. 1717, MEHITABLE Corliss, daughter of John and Mary (Milford), born there 15 May 1698; and secondly at Newbury, Mass., 22 Nov. 1742, SARAH FLOOD. He died at Newbury 13 Jan. 1776, aged 90 years. His children were baptized at Ipswich.

SARAH, bapt. 27 Feb. 1725.

JAMES. Neither the date of his birth or baptism has been found. It was probably this James who signed a petition to the Mason proprietors for a charter of Sutton, N. H. In the division of the land of that township he drew lot No. 78 in the first division. and lot No. 50 in the second division. The record states that he was from Haverhill, Mass. He probably never married. Administration on his estate was granted to his father, Richard Uran of Dasyfield [? Derryfield], N. H., 23 Apr. 1753.

vi. Jonathan.*

*The identity of this Jonathan is not fully established, but circumstances seem to indicate that he belonged to this family. He served, at various times during the French and Indian War, from 13 July 1756 to 20 Nov. 1758, as private from Haverhill, Mass. He m. in 1755, Abigath Hodekins, b. at Ipswich, Mass., 21 Sept. 1736, d. at Wirt, N. Y., 26 Feb. 1842, aged 105 years. Elisha Barrett of Pawlet. Descendants of this family resided in Vermont and New York State. York State.

6. James Urin (John, W. W. Ward) was baptized at Portsmouth, N. H., 25 Sept. 1715. He was a cordwainer or tanner, and resided in that part of the town which was set off as Greenland. On 9 Apr. 1734 he sold all his interest and title in the estate of his father. John Urin, to Joshua Brackett. He was taxed at Greenland from 1743 to 1761. The latter date may indicate the time of his death. The first volume of the Greenland records was burnt.

He had two wives: the first Rebecca: the second Hannah. whom he married previous to 1726, when she was admitted to the Church at Greenland.

- vi. Patt, resided at Greenland, N. H.. and was taxed there from 1763 to 1778. This would indicate that he was born about 1742. In 1771, with his brothers and sisters, he sold his interest in the estate of his father and grandfather, which consisted of land at Epsom. N. H., to his cousin George Urin. On 22 Oct. 1779, with wife Hannah, he sold land and buildings at Greenland. His business was that of tailor. In the census of 1790 he was located at Newmarket, N. It is not known how he came into possession of the land that he sold by the following deed, though it may have been his father's interest in the estate of William¹: William Urin of Ipswich, fisherman, sold Benjamin Damrill of the Isles of Shoals "a single dwelling house and a garden spot, situated and being upon Star Island in ye Isle of Shoals, bounded N.W. by Deacon Muchamore, N.E. by land formerly belonging to Mr. Fabins, S.E. by land of Dymond's garden and S.W. by the sea", dated 25 Feb. 1745-6.

His business was that of tanner and cordwainer. His house was built in 1753, as by the deed given for lot No. 9. He sold his estate at Phillipstown in 1758, and enlisted 31 Mar. 1759 for the French and Indian War, serving until 23 Oct. 1761 as a member of Capt. David Bean's company, under Brig.-Gen. In 1762 David Bean and others petitioned for a grant of land for services during the late war. A township of six miles square was given them, which was afterwards known as Sullivan, Me. John Urin does not appear to have been one of the grantees of the town, but he must have settled there previous to 1774, as a deed given 24 May of that year by John Urin to Samuel Bean and others mentions the land as situated at Urin's Point.

He married at Berwick, Me., 1 June 1752. Phebe Davis. He had two wives, but neither the date of marriage nor the name of his second wife has as yet been found. As late as 1798 his son John was called junior, which would indicate that he was living at that time.

On 15 Oct. 1771 Sarah Urin of Greenland, widow of Joseph, sold "my son George Urin, all my right, title and interest and right of dower or thirds in land in Epsom, which belonged to his [Joseph's] father John Urin." That year he purchased the interest of the family in the same property and removed to Epsom. On 2 June 1777 he sold land and buildings at Greenland, bounded "west by road leading to Rye, north by land of Joshua Stains, east by Clement Marsh, deceased. ABRAM ENGLISH BROWN

By Rev. George F. Piper of Dorchester, Mass.

ABRAM ENGLISH BROWN was born in Bedford, Massachusetts. January 21, 1849. His parents, Joseph and Rachel (Fitch) Brown, like most of his ancestors for several generations, were hardworking people, possessed of no large stock of this world's goods. His mother was somewhat better educated than most women of her time, and his paternal grandmother was a woman of more than average intellect and character who exerted over him an important influence, but there was apparently little either in his ancestry or early environment conducive to the knowledge and culture he acquired or the success he won. Before he was sixteen years of age his school days came to an end, and he entered a store in the neighboring town of Burlington. While he there had access to two small libraries, one in the store and another in his employer's home, and his frugal habits enabled him to have a thousand dollars in the bank at the end of a little more than four years, although his wages had at no time exceeded a dollar a day and board, these circumstances by no means compensated for the loss of school attendance at this susceptible period of his life. When he was twenty the death of an older brother made it needful that he should leave the store and drive a meat cart in the service of his father, an occupation in which he continued for a considerable time. School-keeping and storekeeping were afterwards his occupations for brief periods, but in a few years he became chiefly engaged in town affairs, antiquarian researches, and literary work. On October 11, 1877, he married Miss Sarah J. Flint of Shrewsbury, thereby gaining for the rest of his life a highly congenial and helpful companion. Bedford remained his home until his death, which occurred February 20, 1909.

Mr. Brown was a most faithful and efficient citizen, proud of his native town and an earnest defender of its reputation and promoter of its welfare. A few months after he entered the Burlington store an item appeared in the Lowell Weekly Journal to the effect that the town of Bedford had neither minister, doctor, nor lawyer, that its schools were all taught by women, and that it was a one-horse town at the best. His anger was kindled by this scandalous statement, and he appealed to one and another of the citizens of Bedford to refute it, but without success. Finally, on hearing the intimation that he had better refute it himself, he did it so effectively in a communication to the offending newspaper that its publisher recognized in him the correspondent for Bedford he was looking for and offered him the position. This he accepted, and held for many years; and until the last years of his life there was scarcely an occurrence of any importance in the town that was not reported by his ever ready pen in some of the many newspapers for which he was at one time or another the correspondent. He loved Bedford dearly, and was always eager to convey to those not so fortunate as to live within its limits, as well as its inhabitants, the impression that it was no "one-horse town."

At the age of twenty-three he was elected clerk of the Trinitarian Congregational Society, an office which, with the exception of one vear, he held until his death. He was a member of the church connected with this society, for many years an interested worker in the Sunday-school, and at the celebration of its seventieth anniversary. in 1888, delivered an elaborate address, which subsequently was pub-He showed his devotion to the town by his devotion to one of its churches. At the same age he was also elected a member of the school committee, an office to which he was re-elected for fifteen successive years; and to him, more than to anyone beside, it is due that during these years the introduction of a graded system of study, the consolidation of all the schools at the centre of the town, the conveyance to school of pupils living at a distance from the centre, and the opening of a high school—then an important step—took place. He was representative two years in the General Court for the Seventeenth Middlesex District, collector of taxes seven years, and town clerk for nine years, in each of these capacities proving himself a faithful public servant. He was an interested member of the Bedford Social Library, and when in place of it the Bedford Free Public Library Corporation was organized, in 1886, was elected its clerk, and served in that capacity to the end of his life. He was secretary of the Bedford Historical Society and its most enthusiastic member, an active and efficient member of the Village Improvement Society, and of the Law and Order League during the existence of these institutions in the town. He was especially efficient in preparing for and carrying out the observance of Patriots' Day and Soldiers' Memorial Day. He was the superintendent and one of the committee of the Shawsheen Cemetery, and by his watchful care, persevering efforts, and good taste did more than any other person to make it one of the most attractive burial places to be found in a country town. It was chiefly through his efforts that a highly appropriate gateway to it was erected, and it is not improbable that had he lived longer his influence would have secured the erection of a mortuary chapel.

But valuable as were the services he rendered in these capacities, he performed a service of no less value in his "History of Bedford," which extends from its earliest settlement to the year 1891. This carefully prepared work treats of the organization of the town, its troubles with the Indians, its churches and schools, the part it took in the Revolutionary and Civil wars, its cemeteries, its industries, its fire department, its town officers, its distinguished men—in short, of everything in the history of the town down to the time the volume was published. To it there is appended a genealogical and biographical account of the families of Bedford from its first settlement, as accurate and complete as diligent inquiry and pains-taking research enabled its author to make it. To this highly valuable work, which only with difficulty was made to pay the cost of publication, he gave much time which he could ill afford to spare from bread-winning pursuits. Seldom does a town have a more useful and devoted citizen, one more eager to promote by his time, labor and thought, its material, intellectual, social, and moral welfare. Many are interested in only one or, at the most, a few of the public needs, but here was a man who was interested in all churches, schools, libraries, roads, side-walks, shade trees, town records, vital statistics, anniversaries, burial grounds, things pertaining to the past and to the present, things secular and things sacred.

Mr. Brown was an enthusiastic patriot, and his patriotism manifested itself in untiring efforts to have suitable memorials erected to the heroes of the American Revolution. He was instrumental in having a stone with the following unique inscription in bronze set up in that part of the Old Burial Ground in Bedford reserved for members of the African race: "Cambridge Moore, Cæsar Prescott, Cæsar Jones, Negro slaves, Soldiers of the Revolution, 1775-1783." It was largely through his exertions that a boulder was placed in Willson Park in Bedford Village, having on it the words: "Rallying place of militia and minute men on April 19, 1775, before their march to Concord, where seventy-seven Bedford men were in the fight of that day, when their Captain, Jonathan Willson, was killed and Job Lane was wounded." He took particular pride in the old Colonial flag carried by the men of Bedford on that eventful day. Those who drilled in their respective towns that they might be better prepared to meet the foe were too much concerned about weightier matters to provide flags for their companies. But in the home of Nathaniel Page, Jr., in Bedford was an elegant and elaborate one of unknown age and origin which he bore in the company of that town to the Old North Bridge in Concord on the day of the bloody conflict there. It was then returned to the Page home where it remained until the centennial celebration on the 19th of April 1875, when it was again taken to Concord, carried in the procession by Abram English Brown, one of the Bedford delegation, unfurled again at the Old North Bridge, and returned again to the Page home, where it remained until the 19th of October, 1885, when it was presented to the town of Bedford by Capt. Cyrus Page, grandson of the Nathaniel Page who bore it in the Concord fight. is now in the custody of the Bedford Free Public Library Corporation and secure from accident and evil design in a fire-proof safe. To Mr. Brown's patriotic solicitude the present custody and safety of this precious relic are in no small measure due, as also the celebrity it has acquired.

His patriotism is seen in "Beneath Old Roof-trees" and "Beside Old Hearth-stones," in which he vividly portrays the valor and sufferings of the liberty-loving men of twenty Middlesex towns, and several beyond the limits of Middlesex, in the first years of armed resistance to British oppression. In the preparation of these volumes a great number of old Colonial houses were visited, the tales of Revolutionary patriots that had come down to their descendants were heard, the graves that contained their sacred dust were searched out, and the inscriptions on their monuments copied. Every school boy knows of Paul Revere's ride, and of the bloody encounters at Lexington, Concord, and Bunker Hill, but many well-informed men and women living in the very region in which the valiant deeds of 1775 were done are ignorant of the impressive details which these volumes give. The one hundred and forty-five illustrations which adorn them throw light on that time which tried men's souls, and the fifty-seven graphic chapters they contain may be read, even by the most learned, with interest and profit.

Another of his works, "John Hancock, his Book," while compiled largely from Hancock's letter-book, and not claiming to be a complete biography, presents to no small extent the public as well as business and social life of that distinguished patriot. The reader of it sees Boston as it was in the last half of the eighteenth century, the extensive trade and social eminence of the Hancocks, the first resistance to British tyranny, the outbreak of war, the declaration of independence, the stubborn conflict to gain it, its final achievement, and the conspicuous part John Hancock took in the decisive events of that stormy time.

Patriotism is often conceived to be chiefly concerned with war. It is thought by many that the best patriot is the one most ready to fight for his country right or wrong, or most valiant on the battle No idea could be more erroneous, and it is gratifying to find that the subject of this sketch, although his volumes are largely devoted to accounts of militant lives and deeds, regarded patriotism as a very inclusive virtue. In the opening chapter of "Beneath Old Roof-trees" he says: "Good citizenship is patriotism in action. is not necessary that one should face the bullets of the enemy on the field of battle in order to evince true patriotism. He who loves his home, his native town, and his country, and is ready to make sacrifices for their honor and welfare, is the good citizen. In him the germ of patriotism is well developed." These words express the idea that good citizenship, however manifested, is true patriotism. But that idea was better expressed in the life of him who penned them; for, as already shown, it was a life habitually devoted to the public good.

Mr. Brown was a zealous antiquarian as well as good citizen and enthusiastic patriot, and as the citizen and the patriot were blended in him to a remarkable degree, so were the patriot and the antiquarian. He had no great interest in the antiquities of Greece and Rome, but very great interest in the antiquities of Massachusetts, and especially in that part of Massachusetts in which the Revolution began, and in the time in which it occurred. He was interested in all old burial places, but in those that contained the ashes of Revolutionary heroes he was as deeply interested as Champollion was in the monuments of Egypt, or Layard in the ruins of Nineveh and Babylon. He was interested in old houses, and described with ardent love the old Barrett house in Concord, the old Fitch house in Bedford, the old Ward house in Shrewsbury, the old Page house in Danvers, the old Warner house in Portsmouth, and many others. Every part of an old house had its attractions for him, but chiefly the old garret, and if in the old garret he found an old chest in which was an old document that threw light on the life of a soldier of 1775, his joy was unbounded. He took delight in old, clocks which had ticked in Revolutionary days. Old meeting-houses in Boston, Hingham, Newburyport, Salisbury, Sandown and other places he reverently visited and described. Old ministers who had served a single parish fifty years or more, like Rev. Edmund Dowse of Sherborn, Rev. Edward T. Blodgett of Greenwich, and Rev. Charles Babbidge of Pepperell, were honored by him with faithful sketches of their lives and parishes. Nonogenarians and centenarians, no matter how humble their stations, and though they lived a hundred miles away, were almost sure to have their long earthly careers fully set forth in a daily newspaper. It is easy to imagine that his sleep was sweet and his dreams pleasant the night after a stone was set up in the Shawsheen Cemetery in memory of a worthy public servant who died in 1742, and whose grave is unknown: Samuel Fitch, the first town clerk and one of the first selectmen of Bedford.

Mr. Brown's best book from a literary point of view, the widest in its scope and perhaps the most readable and instructive, is "Faneuil Hall and Faneuil Hall Market." It was published in 1901, and shows a marked improvement in conception and style over "Legends of Old Bedford," published ten years before — a fact much to the credit of a man well along in middle life. Beginning with a brief but lucid account of the persecution of the Huguenots in France in the last half of the seventeenth century, it follows a company of them to New England where they first settled in Oxford, Mass., and after a few years, in Boston. The later arrival from France of the Fancuil family, and the extensive and successful commercial business of Andrew Faneuil, his spacious mansion and beautiful garden of seven acres on Tremont Street, opposite King's Chapel burial ground, are adequately portrayed. The life of Peter Faneuil, nephew of Andrew, heir to his estate and his successor in business, is dwelt on at length. His magnificent gift to the town of Boston of a muchneeded market with a commodious hall above it, first occupied in 1742, the destruction of the building by fire in 1761, the rebuilding of it in the two following years, the great enlargement of it in 1806, on plans submitted by that famous architect, Charles Bulfinch, and the great expenditure upon it of money and skill in 1898 to render it fire proof, are described in a way which leaves nothing more of importance to be said. The extensive annex opened in 1826, frequently called the Quincy market, is noticed at length. and so are the rules by which the marketmen are governed, and the extent of the business which has been done by them at different periods. account of the important meetings held in Faneuil Hall in the course of its long existence is given. The privileges in the building accorded to the Ancient and Honorable Artillery are mentioned, and a succinct history of that company, nearly as old as Boston itself, is related. In short, it may be said that starting with an account of a bloody religious persecution in France, more than two hundred years ago, and ending with an account of the cold storage of meat and produce in the year 1900 — an anti-climax which the author could not well avoid — it ranges through a wide and highly interesting variety of subjects.

Between the years 1892 and 1903, Mr. Brown contributed a good number of excellent articles to the New England Magazine. Among these may be mentioned "Governor Winthrop's Farm," a tract of land which included a large part of what is now the town of Bedford; "Oliver Holden, Composer of Coronation," which portrays in an attractive manner the life of a prominent musician and influential citizen of Charlestown in the early part of the nineteenth century: "The Ups and Downs of Christmas in New England," in which the views entertained here at different times in regard to this Christian festival are related in an edifying way; and "Beacon Hill," which gives a full account of the changes that famous eminence has undergone and the sightly objects which have rested upon it from the time a beacon was first placed there, in 1634, to that when the enlargement and renewal of the State House was completed in 1898. He gave a great amount of study to the existence of slavery in New England for two centuries from the first settlement here by white men, diligently searching old newspapers for advertisements of fugitive slaves and slaves for sale, and old records for evidence that they were owned here in Colonial days by most men of wealth and kept in most families by the better class. He loved poetry and wrote pleasing verses, yet had a more decided talent for dealing with material affairs. His articles on "The History of New England Manufactures," which appeared a few years ago in the Boston Daily Globe, afford evidence of a thorough study of the immense development of more than a dozen prominent industries in this section of the country since the beginning of the eighteenth century. In these articles we find carefully prepared accounts of the remarkable progress made in the manufacture of hats, clocks, paper, glass, ropes, bricks, matches, nails, stoves, carriages, buttons, gloves, boots and shoes, and cotton, woolen, and rubber goods. Why these interesting and instructive articles were not collected into a volume it is difficult for one not well versed in the ways of authors and the motives of publishers to understand.

There are those who by the diligent use of their powers and opportunities do much for themselves. They become rich, learned, or renowned, and have the satisfaction which comes from rising in the world and gaining the admiration of many of their fellow men. There are also those who by the diligent use of their powers and opportunities do much for others. They greatly help the Church. the State, or some worthy cause which their sense of duty or natural inclinations prompt them to labor for with untiring zeal. Abram English Brown not only did much for himself but much for others; starting with a good memory, laudable ambition, unwearying energy, and an industry which made the most of the passing hours, he acquired a large stock of knowledge, a good measure of literary taste, and a reputation as an author and a man which many having greater opportunities in early life fail to gain. What he did for others by his writings, public services, and personal kindnesses, though not easily estimated, certainly was much. While he was yet in his early teens a distant relative offered to take this promising boy and give him a liberal education, but the headaches to which he was then subject, and the reluctance of his father to have him leave home, prevented the acceptance of this generous offer. In after life Mr. Brown regretted that this offer was declined by his parents, and imagined that he would have accomplished far more if the advantages of a liberal education had been his. Undoubtedly his early life would have been more congenial to him, his outlook larger, his vision of the vast realm of knowledge clearer, had he gone through college and, after further preparation, entered one of the learned professions. He probably would have become a more prominent man, and perhaps would have accomplished more for himself and more for the world had this course been pursued. But it is by no means sure. By living a long while on another's beneficence he might have missed that sense of independence, constant ambition, and strength of character which are gained by surmounting obstacles in one's early years; and it is certain that had he been a hard working professional man. anxious to make his profession the most helpful to himself and to those he was called to serve, he would have been unable to write a creditable town history, to trace with watchful care the "footprints of patriots," to pursue antiquarian researches with ardent zeal, and to attend to the multitude of widely different details which absorbed so much of his time and which have given and continue to give so much pleasure and help to many souls. It is sure that he accomplished much for himself and for many beside. It is not sure that with a thorough education in early life, at no pecuniary cost to himself, he would have accomplished more.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF LISTS OF NEW ENGLAND SOLDIERS*

By MARY ELLEN BAKER, B.A.

THIS bibliography of lists of New England soldiers who have served in the regular and volunteer armies and navies of the United States, whether colonial or constitutional, is preceded by a bibliography of lists not confined to any one group of states.

General lists are arranged under "United States" or the individual state by wars, while definitely local matter is arranged under its state in one alphabet of county and town.

This bibliography is limited to printed books and pamphlets catalogued in the New York state library and, with one exception, to the English language, this exception being a list of French soldiers who served during the Revolution, first published in France but later issued as a U.S. document.

Almanacs have been omitted, so also directories and gazetteers, except such as in this library have been classified with local history. Year books and proceedings or reports of patriotic societies have been omitted, since they offer little new material in their annual lists of officers and members, but all special publications have been examined carefully.

A few periodicals known to contain lists have been noted, but no attempt has been made to collect all such titles or to analyze them.

923.57 H173

As a rule records containing other than items of military history have been held to be in the class of collective biography and hence are omitted.

Wherever possible the exact paging of the list quoted has been given, but frequently the inclusive paging means that various short lists are contained therein.

DR. COMFORT STARR, AND CRANBROOK, KENT

By Hosea Starr Ballou of Brookline, Mass.

In Dr. Comfort Starr's will, proved at Boston 2 February 1659, he disposes of certain real estate "at Eshitisford in Kent in Old England." Eshitisford is, of course, the modern Ashford, where Dr. Starr was a physician and surgeon prior to his embarkation for New England, with "Three children and Three servants" in March 1634-5.

Since the late Burgis Pratt Starr published his history of the Starr Family thirty years ago, research has disclosed certain important facts which were unknown to him. Among them are the ages of certain of Dr. Comfort Starr's children. We have learned that Dr. Thomas Starr was baptized at St. Mary's Church, Ashford, on 31 December 1615; so that he was only twenty-one years old when he was appointed "chirurgeon" in Stoughton's expedition against the Pequots, 17 May 1637. His sister Mary, who in 1640 married John Maynard, was baptized 16 April 1620. His brother John Starr was baptized 15 October 1626, so that he was a mere child of eight years when Dr. Comfort Starr bought William Peyntree's* homestead, between the Rev. Thomas Hooker's and James Olmstead's, at Newtown (Cambridge) in 1635.

Since 1879 the significant record has been found at Ashford that one Moregift Starr "of Cranebrooke" was buried at Ashford in 1617. The manuscript notes of Mr. Somerby seemed to prove that the clue was well taken, and the present Vicar of St. Dunstan's Church at Cranbrook, Kent, Dean Bell, verified Somerby's assertion that Comfort Starr was baptized there on 6 July 1589. In the record his father's name is not given, but from other sources we have discovered that it was Thomas Starr. In the records of Oxford University, 1571-1622 (vol. 20, p. 2), appears one Thomas Starr at Oriel College in 1605, also a Samuel Starr (Dr. Comfort named a son Samuel) in 1602, but whether they were near relatives is not known. They were apparently from Dorset.

^{*} At William Peyntree's death in Connecticut he left a large estate, inventoried 29 Nov. 1649, at £1001:10:00, to his widow Margaret, his son John, and his daughter Mary, wife of Richard Bryan of Milford, Conn.

Ancient Cranbrook was a town of considerable importance when Dr. Comfort Starr was baptized there in 1589. There Edward the Third introduced from Flanders the manufacture of broad cloths, which were long famous for their durability and fast colors. Situated in the so-called Weald of Kent, it is some forty-eight miles from London, thirty-nine from Canterbury, and twenty-four from Hastings. Nearby was the country home of Sir Thomas Boleyn, Earl of Wiltshire, the father of the ill-fated Anne Bolevn, whose daughter, Queen Elizabeth in 1574 laid at Cranbrook the corner-stone of a school (which still exists), fifteen years before Comfort Starr's birth, and in which, no doubt, in the language of his will, he was first "instructed in ye Toyngs, Artes and Sciences." But the centre of interest in Cranbrook is St. Dunstan's Church, which antedates 1550. It comprises a nave, side aisles, and chancel, with a square embattled tower at the west end of the church. A range of slender piers and wide arches give the building a light and airy appearance. The church is in an excellent state of preservation, and in regular use.

The vicar of St. Dunstan's in 1589 was Robert Roades, a former president of St. John's College, Cambridge, and his assistant curate was a University of Cambridge man, the Rev. William Eddye, the ancestor of the most generous of all the benefactors of the New England Historic Genealogical Society thus far, the late Robert Henry Eddy of Boston, who by his will (under which this Society received, between 9 February 1901 and 26 September 1906, the sum of $56,788*) gave £1000 for three memorial windows and a tablet, which were erected in Cranbrook Church in 1902.†

Near the Eddy memorial, on the south wall of the church, the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the presence of a distinguished company, and with imposing ceremonies, dedicated, 15 July 1909, a memorial to Dr. Comfort Starr. It is in the style of the Fletcher and Roberts family memorials, which were erected about the time of his birth. The tablet bears the following inscription:

A. M. D. G.

ERECTED BY HIS AMERICAN DESCENDANTS 1909

*Two other residuary legatees, Harvard College and the Massachusetts General Hospital, also received $56,788 each from Mr. Eddy's estate.

† In the language of this tablet Mr. Eddy dedicated the memorial "To the memory of his ancestor. Rev. William Eddye, M.A., Vicar of this Church from 1591 to 1616, whose sons, John and Samuel, and whose daughter Abigail, were among the Pilgrim settlers of New England, and there implanted for the benefit of a numerous posterity the religious principles here taught them."

Dr. Comfort Starr and his wife, Elizabeth, were buried in King's Chapel burial round, Boston, and there a memorial stone, of antique design, was dedicated 24 August 1905.

A report from the Council recommending a form of vote authorizing the sale of No. 16 Somerset Street was read and accepted. After discussion, in which Thomas Hills, Frank B. Sanborn, Anson Titus, Charles K. Bolton, Charles F. Read, and John Albree took part, by a rising vote, a quorum being present and voting, thirty voting affirmatively and one negatively, it was Voted,-That the President and Treasurer by and with the consent of the Council be, and they are hereby, authorized to negotiate a sale of premises No. 16 Somerset Street, on such terms (whether wholly or partly for credit) and with such collateral agreements (whether reserving options for repurchase or otherwise) as said Council may approve; and said President and said Treasurer are hereby authorized to execute, acknowledge and deliver any deed of said property approved by said Council, and any other instrument relating to the sale thereof, including collateral agreements concerning said premises of every name and nature and all releases, partial releases, discharges, extensions, modifications and the like of any mortgage-back of said premises which may come to said Society; and the execution of any such deed or other instrument by said President and Treasurer shall be sufficient evidence to any other party to any such instrument of the approval of the Council and of the due execution of every other formality necessary on the part of this Society to make such instrument valid and effectual.

On the report of the Council relative to the election of a Vice-President, it was voted to defer action until the next annual meeting.

On motion, it was Voted,—That the sympathy of the members of the Society be extended to the Recording Secretary, Captain Gordon, in his illness, and that the vote be reported

The meeting then dissolved.

NOTES

It having come to the attention of this Society that certain genealogists and publishers have used the name of the Society in connection with their own enterprises, the Society again desires to state that it has NO genealogical representatives in this country or in England, nor is it in any way connected with any publications other than those which it issues over its own name at 18 Somerset Street, Boston.

Francis Jewett Parker, a Correction.-In the memoir of Mr. Parker appearing in the July, 1909, REGISTER (vol. 63, p. 257), the line of descent from Abraham¹ Parker should read Moses², Aaron³, Samuel⁴, Abel⁵, Isaac⁶, Francis Jewett⁷, instead of that erroneously given.

SHEAFE.—In the genealogy of the Sheafe family published in the REGISTER, vol. 55, pp. 208-220, I suggested the probability (p. 215) that Dr. Thomas Sheafe, Dean of Windsor, had a second wife, Anne, by whom he had a son Edward. This is confirmed by the Visitation of Bucks, which shows her to have been the daughter of George Woodward, esquire, of Upton, Bucks, by his second wife, Elizabeth Honywood of Markeshall, Essex.

RICE.—The statement in Ward's "Genealogy of the Rice Family" (p. 6) that Edward's Rice's second wife, Anna, was the mother of all his children except the eldest is contradicted by an unrecorded deed in my possession from Edward to his son Jacob, signed by him and his wife Agnes with their marks, before Peter Rice, Benjamin Rice, and John Banister, and dated 27 Nov. 1701. Edward Rice acknowledged the deed 22 March 1703. before James Nuwel, Justice. As Edward's children were born before 1672, his first wife. Agnes, is proved to have been their mother. WITHERSPOON, KNOX.—In the "Witherspoon Memorial" and many other publications there has appeared during the last hundred years the statement that John Witherspoon, D. D., the "Signer", was a descendant of John Knox, the celebrated Scotch Reformer of the sixteenth century. That statement appears to rest entirely upon family tradition. In "A Vindication of the Discipline and Constitutions of the Church of Scotland," Rev. Thomas Walker, minister of Dundonald, Ayrshire, Scotland, and a brother to the mother of John Witherspoon, incidentally stated, on p. 379, that he was "one of the descendants" of John Knox. This statement was published in 1774, over two hundred years after the death of the great Reformer. Between 1572 and 1774 six generations lived, and at least three of those died before Rev. Thomas Walker published his statement of descent.

Briefly stated, the Reformer had a daughter Elizabeth Knox who married in 1594 Rev. John Welsh. a graduate of the University of Edinburgh in 1588, who was minister at Selkirk, Kirkcudbright, and Ayr, in Scotland, and who was exiled to Jonsac and St. Jean d'Angely in France from 1606 to 1622. Their daughter Louise (Luyse) Welsh was b. at Jonsac, France, May 13, 1613.

After the death of Rev. John Welsh his widow returned to Ayr in Scotland, and made her will Jan. 8. 1625, mentioning in it her daughter Louise. In Notes and Queries, 8th ser., vol. 7, p. 202, it is stated that Louise Welsh was living with her only surviving brother, Rev. Josias Welsh, at Templepatrick, Co. Antrim, Ireland. in 1632.

All trace of her from this time onward appears to be a matter of conjecture. Rogers, in his "Genealogical Memoirs of John Knox," pp. 147, 152, stated that Louise Welsh probably married. No evidence has been found that such was the case. He then stated that she probably lived in Fifeshire. There is no documentary evidence of such fact. He next says that she probably had a daughter.

The evidence of such a fact is wanting.

When the Rev. John Welsh, son of the Rev. Josias Welsh of Templepatrick, was making a preaching tour through Fifeshire in 1674, one John Blackader wrote in his MS. Memoirs that he was "acquainted with a young gentlewoman in Fife, a cousin of Mr. Welsh, and that she is an enthusiastic admirer of Mr. Welsh's preaching." At this time she "visited the parish of Kilconquhar, some distance from her home, to hear Mr. Welsh." If we knew that John Welsh had only one cousin and that that cousin was the daughter of Louise Welsh, his father's sister, we should have a basis for the assumptions which follow. But we have to assume further that the assumed daughter of Louise Welsh married a certain David Walker who was bapt. at Leslie in Fifeshire, Feb. 7, 1630, and that this "gentlewoman" "or her sister" became the mother of Rev. Thomas Walker and of his brother the Rev. David Walker, the latter of whom is reputed to have been the grandfather of John Witherspoon. Summarizing from a study of all the accessible data this Knox descent rest on the assumptions:

(1) that Louise Welsh married; (2) that she lived in Fifeshire; (3) that she had a daughter; (4) that that daughter married one David Walker of Leslie; (5) that the last-named woman had a son David Walker; (6) that her assumed son David Walker was the Rev. David Walker, whose brother Rev. Thomas Walker claimed to be a descendant of John Knox. Therefore, the alleged Knox descent of Rev. John Witherspoon rests upon six successive suppositions, no one of which has any documentary evidence nor original record to support it.

It is traditional and extending over a period of two hundred years.

BARNARD, TALCOTT, WADSWORTH .- On page 322 of the 1846 edition of Hinman's "Puritan Settlers of Connecticut" appears this statement: "Wadsworth, Capt. Joseph, of Hartford, son of Hon. William, sen'r., was born in He m. for his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Bartholomew Barnard, of Hartford; for his second wife he m. Mary, the widow of John Olcott. She maiden name was Mary Blackleach, daughter of John, jr. His wife Elizabeth, d. Oct. 26, 1710. His second wife Mary survived him. His children were all by his first wife."

The "Talcott Pedigree in England and America," compiled by S. V. Talcott, of Albany, was printed in 1876. On pages 35 and 36 of this work is a notice of Elizabeth, daughter of Lieut.-Col. John Talcott of Hartford, and wife of Joseph Wadsworth. In this notice the statement is made regarding Wadsworth: "He married for his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Bartholomew Barnard, who died Oct. 26, 1710. for his second. Elizabeth Talcott, and for his third Mary Blackleach, widow first of Thomas Wells, and second of John Olcott. His children were all by his first wife.'

In the "Memorial History of Hartford County, Connecticut," printed in 1886, is a chapter on the "Original Proprietors" of Hartford, "based on materials collected by J. Hammond Trumbull.". On page 265 of the first volume it is stated regarding Joseph Wadsworth, seventh child of William: "Joseph, b. ab. 1647; this was Capt. Joseph, the hero of the Charter, a man of prominence, and some turbulence of character; freeman, 1676; Lieut. in Philip's War, and afterward Capt. of the Hartford trainband. He m. Elizabeth dau. of Bartholomew Barnard, of Hartford; she d. Oct. 26, 1710, having been the mother of all his children; he m. (2) Elizabeth, dau. of Lt.-Col. John Talcott, and (3) Mary. dau. of John Blackleach of Wethersfield, who had been widow of Thomas Welles and John Olcott."

Was Joseph Wadsworth married more than twice and did he marry a daughter of Bartholomew Barnard?

Bartholomew Barnard made his will March 9, 1691, and in it bequeathed to his "daughters Eliza. Wadsworth, Sarah Steel and Mary Bunce." This will was presented to the Hartford County Court in April 1698, and is recorded in volume 6, reverse end, page 78 of the court records. Filed with the will, but not recorded, is the following affidavit:

"Thomas olcott Aged 28 years or ther Aboute testifieth as foloweth that in the time of my father Barnards last sicknes that I se Elizibeth wodsworth the wiffe Thomas wodworth goe to his bed side and I heard hir say to him I haue heard something of your will and I under stand its Lik to go uery hard with John for ther is A grat many Dets for him to pay and I hear you have given the cattell and the things to the girlls: And then my father Barnard Answered and said I thought of it before you spoke and it troubles me I wold have my will taken and that pertickler alltred and I will have my Dets payed and then the Rest tak it Amoungst you* and further I heard Elizabeth wodsworth speaking aboute the Corn and the meat and then my father Barnard said I will not have it taken from John and allso I heard him say that John shall have this bed I now lie upone: Elizabeth wodsworth Aged forty six years or ther aboute testifiet to the Aboue writen Sworne in Court Aprill the 15th. 1698 Attest Will Whiting Cler"

The records of the Hartford County Court, volume 3, page 166, show that Thomas Wadsworth and his wife Elizabeth were married before December 6. 1677.

One of the appraisers of Barnard's estate was Joseph Wadsworth. pected from this fact Hinman inferred that he was the one whom Barnard's daughter Elizabeth had married. A son-in-law would hardly have been appointed an appraiser, not being a disinterested party.

Document 47 in volume 4 of "Private Controversies" in the Connecticut

State Library reads as follows:

"May 15th 1691: To the Hone Genll Assembly now siting in Hartford The humble petition of Jos: Tallcott of Hartford in ther Majes Colony of Concecticut in N: England, sheweth. y where as Lift Coll: John Talcott, of fore s towne & Colony; y Honourd father of your poor petitioner, departed this life upon ye 23d day of July 1688 haueing made no writen will for ye setelment of his personall estate this Colony then being under ye Gouermt of his Excellency St Edmon Andross K[†]: aplycation was made to him by my brother in law lift Jos Wardsworth: * for leeters of Administration upon y^e s^d estate without which ther could be no legall desposall made, therof. upon which aplycation, his Excellency granted y^e same unto my Honrd Uncl Sam¹¹ Tallcott of wethersfeeld & Lift Jos Wardsworth of Hartford." The rest of the document relates to Talcott's claim to the whole of his father's real estate under the English law.

The records of baptisms of the First or Centre Church of Hartford, which begin in 1685, show that Joseph Wadsworth had a son Jonathan baptized Feb. 20, 1686-7. Capt. Joseph Wadsworth made his will July 6, 1723, which was probated March 2, 1730-1. By this will he gave to his son Joseph. besides other property, "The 4 acres of Land at Brother Talcott's upper lot which I have by agreement with Brother Talcott." He also gave property to his son Ichabod. (Hartford Probate Records, vol. 11, reverse end, page 166.)

The records of burials in Hartford in possession of the Connecticut Historical Society show that Ichabod Wadsworth, aged 90, was buried May 5, 1778, and that Joseph Wadsworth, aged 96, was buried August 25 of the same year, making them born about 1682 and 1688.

On page 33 of the reverse end of the first volume of Land records of the Town of Hartford, being the "Book of Distributions," is this entry: "Mrs. Elizabeth Wadsworth wife of Capt Jos Wadsworth dyed Octo 26, 1710." In his will before referred to Joseph Wadsworth says that "having given a jointure in full satisfaction to my wife Mary, I proceed to bequeath my estate to my children."

^{*} Not italicized in the original.

From the foregoing it will be seen that Elizabeth, daughter of Bartholomew Barnard, evidently became the wife of Thomas Wadsworth before December 6, 1677, and was still his wife in April 1698; that Joseph Wadsworth was married in 1682 or earlier, that in May 1691 he was a brother-in-law of Joseph Talcott, and that his wife Elizabeth, evidently Talcott's sister and the mother of his children, died in October 1710. Thus, for at least sixteen years from 1682 to 1698, both Thomas Wadsworth and Joseph Wadsworth were living in Hartford, each of them with a wife Elizabeth. The wife of the former being the daughter of Bartholomew Barnard, and the wife of the latter being the daughter of Lieut.-Col. John Talcott.

There is no evidence that Joseph Wadsworth was married more than twice, first, before 1683, to Elizabeth Talcott, who was the mother of his children and who died October 26, 1710; and secondly, between April 1712 and May 6, 1722, FRANK FARNSWORTH STARR. to Widow Mary Olcott.

GRANT, WEBB, WARNER, HOLMES.—Seth Grant (Zeth Graunt) emigrated to New England in June 1632. Among his fellow passengers were William Wads-worth, John Talcott, William Goodwin, and John White.* The following year all bnt Grant had become resident of Newtown, later called Cambridge, Mass. If Grant did not remove to Newtown when his fellow passengers did, he certainly was there in 1634.†

Among the residents of the town was also Richard Webb.

Grant and Webb were among the persons who, in 1636, went through the wilderness and made a settlement on the Connecticut River which they called Newtown and, in February 1636-7, Hartford. On page 359 of the first volume of the Hartford Land Records, which is known as the "Book of Distributions," is a record of the lands of Seth Grant under the date of February 1639.

Thus far no record has been discovered of his marriage or the births of any children, nor is there any record of his death. An inventory of his estate, dated "March the 4th 1646," is printed on pages 481 and 482 of the first volume of the "Colonial Records of Connecticut," but the records do not show any action on

On pages 313 and 507 of the "Book of Distributions" reference is made to "Seth Grant's children." On page 25 of Vital Records, in volume 1 of Land Records of the Town of Middletown, is entered the marriage, in February 1654, of Robert Warner and Elizabeth Grant, and the births of their children, the second of whom was named Seth, and the youngest Mehetable. March 31, 1687, Robert Warner sold 42 acres of land on the east side of the Connecticut River in Hartford which had been laid ont to Seth Grant, and March 1, 1702-3, Robert's son Seth sold land in the same town which had been recorded to Seth Grant's. These facts go to show that Warner's wife was a daughter of Seth Grant.

June 19, 1650, Nathaniel Ely and Richard Olmsted, of Hartford, for themselves and others of that town, one of whom was Richard Webb, entered into an agreement "for the settlinge and plantinge of Norwalke." §

An inventory of the estate of Richard Webb, who "deceased July last," was taken October 5, 1665, and was presented to the court at Fairfield, November 1 following, by the widow, who was appointed administrator. "Elissabeth webb widowe the rellique of Richard webb formerly of norwalke deceased the twentie fowre of January 1680." The Fairfield Probate Records show that in March 1681 several persons appeared in court and made claim to the estates of both Webb and his wife. Part of the entry read thus:

"Alsoe Richard Holmes Impleads right to a portion out of the estate of the said Elizabeth by vertu of his wives realation to her."  The court decreed that "Richard Holmes is to have Twenty pound part of it in the bed and its furniture as it was prized on the Inventory which is eight pounds the rest of the Richard Holmes of Norwalk, "aged 60 years and npwards," made his will October 31, 1704, in which he gave to his wife Sarah the life use of all his real estate "and at her death to her near kinswoman Mehetable Warner now living with me." †

The inventory of the estate of Sarah Holmes, widow of Richard, is among the files of the Fairfield Probate court. On the document is an indorsement which shows that Mehetable Warner, "now surviving," was nearly related to said Sarah Holmes "and was her owne sisters child", and that soon after the death of the child's mother "this sarah holmes the childs own aunt went up to Middletown and brought this child home to her husband." The court decreed that "Sundry children of Robert Warner dec'd of Middletown are the next of kin in equal degree to said Sarah," and ordered the estate divided among them equally.

The foregoing proves beyond question that Seth Grant had at least two children: Elizabeth wife of Robert Warner of Middletown, and Sarah wife of Richard Holmes of Norwalk.

The settlement of the estate of Webb and his wife shows that they had in their possession property which had belonged to the father of Sarah Holmes (Seth Grant), and that Holmes claimed part of the estate of Elizabeth Webb "by vertu of his wives realation to her." The inference is that Elizabeth, wife of Richard Webb, was the widow of Seth Grant and, at least, step-mother to Sarah Grant, FRANK FARNSWORTH STARR. wife of Richard Holmes of Norwalk.

The elder Andrews was one of the treasurers of ordnance, a commissioner of customs, and lord mayor of London in 1649, 1650, and 1651. In 1649 an act was presented in the House of Commons to authorize the Speaker "by laying on the sword" to create him a knight. In 1659 he was Governor of the East India Company. Another son, Nathaniel Andrews, in his will gave to his father the reversions in his lands, while his wife left £20 to her father, Alderman Andrews, and mentioned her sister Damaris Andrews (Waters's Gleanings, p. 1300). Of this family was also Peter Andrews, who married Rachel, daughter of John Vassal, ancester of the New England family of that name.

Thomas Andrews and Damaris Craddock had a daughter Damaris. This granddaughter of Gov. Craddock married Sir Edward Abney. "Edward Abney of Wilsley, Co. Cudworth Master of Christ's College, Cambridge, to be married at St Gregory's or St Dionys Backchurch London". This was under date of 20 July 1661. Dame Damaris (Andrews) Abney was buried at Willesley 9 June 1687. There also were buried her daughters Damaris 30 Oct. 1677, and Ann 1 Dec. 1692. Another daughter, Frances, aged 19, was licensed to marry, 5 July 1686. Sir John Parker, widower, aged about 31, of Formoyle, Longford, Ireland. Their son

Abney Parker was of Gray's Inn 1 May 1705.

A son was born to Rev. Ralph Cudworth at Aller in 1616, who was given the name of Ralph and who was the husband of Damaris Andrews. He became a philosopher and theologian of note, being "one of the most eminent of the Latitudinarian Divines." He was a Fellow of Emmanuel, Regis Professor of Hebrew, and wrote many works on religious subjects. In 1650 he was presented to the living of North Cadbury, Somerset, made vacant by the resignation of Rev. Benjamin Whichcote. In 1654 he became master of Christ College, and about this time married Damaris Andrews. He was intimate with Thurloe, secretary to Cromwell. He died at Cambridge in 1688, and is buried in Christ College. The widow, Damaris Cudworth, daughter of Matthew Craddock, was buried at High Lavers, Essex, in 1695. A very elaborate marble tablet bears this incription: "Damaris Cudworth Relict of Ralph Cudworth Dr of Divinitie, and Master of Christ's College Cambridge. Exemplarie for her pietie and virtue, for her studie of the scriptures, Charitie to the poore, and good will to all, and an excellent Wife, Mother, Mistress and friend, lies buried in the middle between this and the opposite wall. She was born the 23 Oct. 1623 and, after a life made easie to herselfe and others by the unalterable evenness of her temper, she died as one that goes to sleepe without disease or paine the 15 Nov. 1695, in full hope and expectation of a happy resurrection." The only daughter of Rev. Ralph and Damaris (Craddock) Cudworth was Damaris, born in Cambridge, Eng., 18 Jan. 1658. Damaris Cudworth, aged 21, of Cambridge, was married with the consent of her father, Rev. Ralph Cudworth, after 24 June 1685 at St. Andrews, Holborn, London, to Sir Francis Masham of Oates, in High Lavers, Essex, baronet and widower, then aged 36. She was his second wife. Lady Masham wrote many religious works, and was the friend of Locke, who lived with the family and of whose life she wrote an account in the "Great Historical Dictionary." Lady Masham died 20 Apr. 1703, and is buried in the middle aisle of Bath Abbey. Her son Francis Cudworth Masham. accountant general to the Court of Chancery, died 25 May 1731, the last of his branch. A life of Lady Masham is given in Ballard's "Lives of Ladies." Rev. Ralph Cudworth (1617-1688) had sons Charles, who died in 1684, and John. who died in 1726. He is also given as father of Ralph (circa 1650-1690). This last Ralph was father of William (1690-1763). The latter's younger son Benjamin married Marie Marple. Benjamin Cudworth's son Benjamin married Mary Sheppard, and had issue. A sister of the second Benjamin, Elizabeth, married William de Whitebrook. Their two sons were William Marie Aymer de Whitebrook and J. Cudworth de Whitebrook of London.

Rev. Samuel Craddock, a student at Emmanuel College at the date of Gov. Craddock's death, was afterward at North Cadbury, Somerset, and became a Non-conformist divine and writer, dying at Bishops Stortford, Herts, in 1706. During his life he inherited money from the estate of Walter Craddock of Wickhambrook, Suffolk, a branch of the family descended from an uncle of Gov. Craddock.

Richard Glover, who married Gov. Graddock's widow, was of Plashett, Essex, near Ham and not far from London. On the death of Glover his widow married Dr. Benjamin Whitchcote of Emmanuel College, sometime minister of St. Lawrence Jury, London, and son of Christopher Whichcote, of Stoke, Salop, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Fox of Grete, Salop. Dr. Whichcote died in May 1683, aged 74. His name, with that of John Harvard and others, is in a window of the chapel of Emmanuel College at Cambridge, Eug.

Nathaniel Higgins, of the Cape Cod family of that name, probably joined the Torbay when she was recruiting in Boston in 1740 for Admiral Vernon's expedition to the West Indies. She was then an eighty-gun ship with a complement of 600 men, and commanded by Gascoigne (Year Book Mass. Society of Colonial Wars, 1899, p. 114)

Higginson.—The parish register of St. Peter's, Nottingham, contains the following marriage record: "Franciscus Higginson duxit uxore Ana Herbert Octavo die Januarij 1615" (Phillimore, Nottingham Marriages, p. 19).

This appears to be the marriage record of Rev. Francis Higginson, minister of the First Church of Salem, and his wife Ann.

He was ordained deacon at Cawood Castle Sept. 25. 1614, by Tobey Mathew, Archbishop of York, when he was called curate of Scredingham, and was ordained priest at Bishopthorpe Dec. 8, 1614. He was collated (instituted) Apr. 20, 1615, by the Archbishop of York, the patron, to the rectory of Barton-in-fabis in the county of Nottingham, which he resigned Apr. 4. 1616 (Archiepiscopal Registry of York, Institutions Sandes, 1572 to 1619, ff. 431, 433, 437. 447; Rec-ISTER, 52: 348). Barton-in-fabis is six miles southwest of Nottingham, near the border of Leicestershire. From 1617, or thereabouts to 1629, the time of his emigration, he was connected with the parish of St. Nicholas, Leicester, when he styled himself "minister" and afterwards "lecturer" (REGISTER, 52:

There was a tradition that Ann. wife of Francis Higginson, was a sister of Gov. Theophilus Eaton, but Hannah, sister of Gov. Eaton, was unmarried when named in her father's will in 1616 (New Haven Hist. Colls., 4: 186, 7: 5), and married, Dec. 5, 1622, Joseph Denman, in the parish of St. Mary Woolchurch, Haw, London, where, on Dec. 3, 1622, Theophilus Eaton married his first wife, Grace Hiller (Parish Reg. St. Mary Woolchurch). The mention of "Coz" Hayler" in a letter of Col. John Higginson (3 Mass. Hist. Soc. Colls., 7: 219) and of "Tho: Hayler" (Higginson Letters, Ms.), and also the recurrence of the names Grace and Judith in the Hiller and Higginson families (REA) TER. 46:118) suggests that the connection between the Higginsons and Theop . Eaton may have been a relationship between Rev. Francis Higginson and t' illers of the parish of St. Mary Woolchurch. INIA HALL. Cambridge, Mass.

Giles Badger and his descendants. First four generations and a portion of the fifth, sixth, and seventh generations, by John Cogswell Badger. Manchester, N. H., printed by the John B. Clarke Company, 1909. 8° pp. 64, illus. Price $1.00, post paid. Address the author, 191 Sagamore Street, Manchester, N. H.

Sergeant John Badger, the only child of Giles, was born in Newbury, Mass., in 1643. His children and grandchildren are fully recorded, but beyond the fourth generation not all the lines are carried out. Among the descendants mentioned is the Rev. Edward Griffin Porter, late president of the New England Historic Genealogical Society. In his preface the author states that all corrections and additions are most welcome, and that if such data are not printed in a larger edition of this genealogy they will be deposited with the New Hampshire Historical Society, Concord, N. H.

Ball Family Records. Genealogical memoirs of some Ball families of Great Britain, Ireland, and America, compiled by Rev. WILLIAM BALL WRIGHT, M. A. Second edition, enlarged and revised. York [Eng.], printed for the author by the Yorkshire Printing Company, Ltd., 1908. 4° pp. 199+4+72, illus. Price 21s., net. Address the author, Osbaldwick Vicarage, York, Eng.

Although the greater part of this scholarly production concerning the Ball families relates to branches that belong in Co. Dublin, Ireland, several lines connected with Philadelphia and Virginia are also included, the latter setting forth the ancestry of Mary, daughter of Col. Joseph Ball and mother of George Washington. The appendix contains some valuable notes relating to the Standish family of Lancashire, Dublin, and Rathbeggan, Co. Meath, and mentions Capt. Myles Standish of Plymouth. The book is the result of careful, scientific research, and therefore of real worth and usefulness. The illustrations are chiefly portraits, well reproduced, and the book is printed on good paper. There is an index.

The Bates Bulletin. Vol. II, August, 1909. Special number. 8° pp. 12, illus. An account of the Bates Family Association, and sketches of some of its officers and prominent members, are the chief themes to which this special number is devoted. There are a dozen portraits, and a view of the house of Joshua Bates.

Beatty-Asfordby. The ancestry of John Beatty and Susanna Asfordby, with some of their descendants, by Mrs. Rudolph Samuel Turk. New York, Frank Allaben Genealogical Company, 1909. 12° pp. 184, illus. Price $4.00, postage 15 cents. Address the publishers, 3 West 42d Street, New York City.

William Asfordby of Stayne-in-the-Marsh, Co. Lincoln. Eng.. and Ulster Co., N. Y., brought to this country a "parchment containing twelve generations of his English ancestry, compiled by the then Herald of Arms, R. Chester" [sic]. The material in this parchment has been arranged in the form of text, and constitutes the first part of this volume. Susanna Asfordby, the daughter of William, married John Beatty of Ulster Co., N. Y., 7 November 1691. Their descendants are brought down to the seventh generation. As both female and male lines are recorded here, other names beside that of Beatty are found in the second part, and the name of Cary has many representatives. The book is printed on good paper and is indexed. An inartistic title-page opens the book rather inauspiciously by giving the name of the author incorrectly.

The John Cary Descendants. Rev. Seth Cary, President, Dorchester, Mass. Bulletin No. 8 New Series. September 1909. 8° pp. 49-56, part.

^{*} All the unsigned reviews are written by Miss ALICE LUCRETTA WESTGATE of Boston.

A brief notice of the late Rev. Otis Cary, D.D., missionary of the American Board in Japan, and one of his poems, form the principal items in this issue, which is illustrated with his portrait.

The Clark Genealogy in the United States, by Dr. A[LMON] W. CLARK. Stamford, N. Y., press of the Mirror-Recorder, 1907. 8° pp. 149, illus. Price, cloth $3.00; half-morrocco $4.00. Address the author, Jefferson, Schoharie Co., N. Y.

Randall Clark, the progenitor of that branch which settled at Blenheim Hill, N. Y., was born 28 October 1788, in Charleston, R. I., the son of Job Clark and Anna (Wilcox) Heron. A record of his descendants, including both male and female lines, occupies the first sixty pages. The second part, called "Ancient Clarke History from Providence, R. I.," is followed by a brief record of "Other Clark Families." Most of these families belong in New York. Obituary notices from newspapers are added to many of the biographical sketches, and numerous portraits and views of homesteads are used as illustrations. The quality of the paper leaves much to be desired. There are several indexes, and the volume is bound in cloth.

Greene Family of Plymouth Colony, by RICHARD HENRY GREENE, A.M., LL.B. New York, privately printed, 1909. 8° pp. 145, illus.

William Greene has finally been proved to be the ancestor of this family, to the satisfaction of the author, who gives a record of nine generations and a mention of the tenth. The articles appearing in the Register for January 1903 and in the thirty-ninth volume of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record are combined, with additional matter, in this book. Portraits and homesteads appear among the illustrations, and there is a good index. The print is clear, and the work is appropriately bound in green cloth.

Extracts from British Archives on the families of Halley, Hawley, Pyke, etc., by EUGENE F. McPike. (Second series). New York, reprinted from the Magazine of History, 1909. 8° pp. 31.

The Probate Registry at Lichfield, the parish registers of Alconbury, Somerset House, London, and Dublin are among sources from which these notes were gleaned.

Eleazer Hamlin and his descendants; their homes, by Myra Sawyer Hamlin. Bangor, Me., privately printed, 1909. 8° pp. 46, illus.

This delightful little book does not claim to be a comprehensive genealogy, but the author says in her brief foreword that its object is to trace the relationship of some closely allied families. Eleazer Hamlin married first Lydia Bonney and settled in Pembroke, where eleven children were born to them, four bearing the names Asia, Africa, Europe, and America. Later Eleazer lived in Harvard and Westford, Mass. Some of his sons settled in Maine, and among their descendants were Hannibal Hamlin, the statesman, and Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, missionary at Constantinople and founder of Robert College. The book is well illustrated with many views of the interesting homesteads of the family, which are also described in an entertaining manner.

Horton Family Year Book. Descendants of Isaac Horton, compiled by Byron Barnes Horton. New York, The Grafton Press, 1909. 16° pp. 35.

The ancestry of Isaac Horton is traced to Barnabas Horton of Southold. Long Island, as early as 1651. Following the account given here of his descendants there is a list of those who were living in June 1909. The "Horton Family Address List" closes this little handbook.

Richard Ingersoll of Salem, Mass., and some of his descendants, by Major-General A. W. Greely, U. S. A. Salem, Mass., Essex Institute, 1909. 8º pp. 22.

This genealogy of the first five generations of the descendants of Richard, who came from Bedfordshire, Eng., in 1629, is a valuable and useful addition to the records of the families of Essex County. It is well compiled, and excellent in arrangement and appearance. It is reprinted from the forty-fifth volume of the Historical Collections of the Essex Institute.

Descendants of Thomas Lake of Stratford, Conn., by David Minor Lake, Albert Edward Lake, Arthur Crawford Lake. Chicago [Fergus Printing Company], 1908. 8° pp. 14+[2]. Address Albert Edward Lake, 171 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

The preface states that "this record is complete only as to one branch of the family of the founder," and that the present generation of that branch is well given here. Scant attention is paid to the names that do not appear again as the line is carried forward, and there is no indication what names will be found further on in the genealogy. It is hoped that more biographical material may be given when this family is published in book form. The dates of birth, however, are well supplied, and there is an index.

The Lawrence Kin. [By Rev. Anson Titus.] 12º pp. 8.

This is a reprint from the Boston Evening Transcript for 16 January 1909, written at the time of the election of Abbott Lawrence Lowell to the presidency of Harvard University, and describing at some length the family of his mother.

Register of the Middlebrook Family, descendants of Joseph Middlebrook of Fairfield, Conn., by Louis F. Middlebrook. Hartford, Conn., 1909. 4° pp. 411, plan.

A limited edition has been issued of this admirable genealogy, which is unusually well-made and artistically bound in blue cloth and gray paper. It is clearly printed on good paper (an important point in a volume intended for service and durability), and is furnished with two indexes. Ten generations are recorded, and the author states in his preface that "no marked deviation, remote from the Middlebrook surname," will be encountered, as "the principle adopted has been not to diverge into collateral branches in female lines very much." An appendix of nearly one hundred pages contains wills, inventories, deeds, surveys, and letters.

. Moffatana Bulletin. Published by George West Maffet, editor and historian-in-chief. July 1909. Vol. I, No. 4 Lawrence, Kan. 4° pp. 17-28, illus.

The genealogy of this family is in preparation, and all members of the family are urgently requested to send their records to the editor. He emphasizes the fact that the book will preserve the history of each individual more permanently than even a gravestone, and that no fee is required in order to have the record printed, as is usual in the case of county histories. A view of Moffatdale and Moffat Water, Scotland, are among the illustrations.

The Descendants of John Mowry of Rhode Island, by WILLIAM A. MOWRY, Ph.D., LL.D. Providence, R. I., Preston and Rounds Company, 1909. 8° pp. 292, illus. Price $3.00. Address the author, Hyde Park, Mass.

Those who are familiar with the earlier books compiled by this writer—Nathaniel Mowry's Descendants, and Richard Mowry's Descendants—will be delighted to know that Mr. Mowry has here published his gleanings relating to the descendants of John Mowry, the brother of Nathaniel. About two thousand names are included in this account, which contains many family anecdotes, and is illustrated with twenty-nine full page half-tones and as many fac-simile autographs. A steel engraving of the venerable author appears as a frontispiece. The volume has an index and a substantial cloth binding.

Some descendants of John Norton of Bramford, 1622-1709, with notes of other emigrant Nortons, [by] WALTER WHITLESEY NORTON. Lakeville, Conn., The Journal Press, 1909. 8° pp. 67, illus.

The beginnings of a Norton genealogy are contained in this pamphlet, which gives a list of all the Norton emigrants, a brief bibliography of the books containing Norton genealogy, and short sketches of Nicholas of Martha's Vineyard and George of Salem, Mass. The preface states that this pamphlet was issued to stimulate interest in the family genealogy.

John Parish of Groton, Mass, and some of his descendants, by Roswell Parish, Jr. Boston, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 1909. 8° pp. 12. This is a reprint from the Register for October 1909.

The Patterson Family descended from James Patterson of Scotland, by D. WILLIAMS PATTERSON. With a few additions by Anna Patterson. [For private distribution.] Newark Valley, Tioga Co., N. Y.. 1906. 4° pp. 30, illus.

A Scotch prisoner, James Patterson, reached Boston in the John and Sarah in 1652. The misfortunes of war appear shortly to have been overcome by him, and he became a resident of Billerica in 1658. Six generations of descendants in the male lines are recorded in this account, with a brief mention of some of the seventh and eight generations. A pedigree chart shows the ancestry of D. Williams Patterson in female as well as male branches, and includes the names of some passengers in the Maydover.

Romance and history of Eltreed Pomeroy's ancestors in Normandy and England.
[Toledo, Ohio, The Franklin Printing and Engraving Company, 1909.] 80
pp. 81, illus. Price $1.00. Address Albert A. Pomeroy, Secretary of the Pomeroy Family Association. Sandusky, Ohio.

The recent discoveries concerning the ancestors of Eltweed Pomeroy and the Pomeroy family in early English history are contained in this pamphlet, which is published for the purpose of arousing the attention of the family in America to the importance of sending to the secretary of the Association all data in their possession. The modest sum asked for the pamphlet is not to refund its cost, but is to be used in verifying the material which is to go into the Pomeroy Genealogy. Extracts from such anthorities as Burke's Peerage, the Guide Book of Berry Pomeroy Castle, and the History of Devonshire follow the extracts from parish registers. The illustrations are good, and of special interest to the family.

A biographical history of Robert Randall and his descendants, 1608-1909, by WILLIAM L. CHAFFIN. New York, The Grafton Press, 1909. 8° pp. 247. Price $5.00. Address Rev. William L. Chaffin, North Easton, Mass.

Careful, accurate work has been put into this record of over eight hundred families descended from Robert Randall, who was born in England in 1608 and came here about 1635, settling in Weymonth, Mass. Some of the grandsons settled in Easton, Mass., and for many years the Randalls were the largest family in the town. An essay on the Randalls in general, by Aaron Ferry Randall, president of the family association, is contained in the preface. The genealogy is admirably arranged, and is printed on excellent paper. The members of the family are to be congratulated on the existence of such an admirable book.

Stephens-Stevens Genealogy. Lineage from Henry Stephens of Stonington, Conn., 1668, by Plowdon Stevens. New York, Frank Allaben Genealogical Company, 1909. 12° pp. 358, illus. Price, cloth, $5.00; three-quarters morocco, $6.50; full morocco, $7.00; postage 15 cents. Address the publisher, 3 West 42d Street, New York City.

Nine generations of descendants from Henry Stephens are recorded in this well-compiled genealogy, which is arranged on the Register plan. It is based on a brief work of a similar nature written by the author fifty years ago. One unique and useful feature is the plan of giving an account of the ancestors of the wife after the record of each family in the first two generations. It is carefully indexed. and is printed on good paper. An inartistic and almost unintelligible title-page by Georgia Cooper Washburn detracts from the appearance of this otherwise excellent publication.

The Richard Webber Family. [Compiled by Lucy A. Washburn.] Medina, Ohio, The A. I. Root Company. 1909. 8° pp. 21, illus.

John Webber, the son of James of London. Eng., settled in Rehoboth, Mass., in 1722. There is some mention of the first three generations, but beginning with the fourth generation entire attention is given to the descendants of the Rev. Richard Webber. who was a pioneer settler in Medina Co., Ohio. This well-compiled, clearly-arranged pamphlet is the outcome of family interest, and it is hoped that the reunions of the future will bring ont other publications.

William Wells and his descendants, 1755-1909, compiled by Frederick How-ARD Wells. Albany, N. Y. [1909.] 8° pp. 117. William Wells is supposed to have come to America from England shortly before the Revolution. His sympathies, however, were with the colonies, for, enlisting from Chesterfield, Mass., in 1775, he took part in the Battle of Bunker Hill, and was present at other engagements. The names of Pratt. Doty, and Eddy have many representatives, as they are carried out in some of the female lines. The book is well printed, indexed, and suitably bound.

Genealogy of the ancestors and descendants of John White of Wenham and Lancaster, Mass. 1574-1909. Volume IV. By Almira Larkin White. Haverhill, Mass., press of the Nichols Print, 1909. 8° pp. 210. illus., plan. Price $5.00. Address Myra L. White, 73 Broadway, Haverhill, Mass.

The branches in this volume are not connected with each other, the preface states, but each is connected with the earlier volumes. It contains the ancestry of John and Joane (West) White, and the appendix gives the ancestry of Mary Gawkroger, alias Platts, wife of John Prescott. The book will be especially welcome to those who wish to see the continuation of their line. There is a good index.

Colonel Joseph Belt. A paper read before the Society of Colonial Wars in the District of Columbia, 25 March, 1909, by Caleb Clarke Magrider, Jr., A.M., LL.B. Annapolis, Md., Advertiser-Republican Print. 1909. 8° pp. 36, illus.

Not only the biography of Colonel Belt (born in 1680 in Anne Arundel County, Md., died in 1761 in Prince George's County, Md.) but also some account of the genealogy of his family is given in this paper. He was a descendant of Humphrey Belt, who landed in Virginia in 1635. An extended account of his military and public services comprises the bulk of this pamphlet. which has as its frontispiece a photograph of Chevy Chase Manor, built by Col. Joseph Belt about 1722.

Capt. Samuel Flint and William Flint, by D. Webster King, with the Thirteenth annual report of the Peabody Historical Society, 1908-1909. Peabody [Mass.], press of C. H. Shepard, 27 Lowell Street, 1909. 8° pp. 22, illus.

This paper on Samuel and William Flint, who took part in the Revolutionary War, was read before the Peabody Historical Society on the nineteenth of April. A list of the Revolutionary soldiers, whose graves have been identified by markers, is also given with the usual report for the year.

John Foster, the earliest American engraver and first Boston printer, by SAMUEL ABBOTT GREEN. Published by The Massachusetts Historical Society at the charge of the Waterston Fund, No. 2. Boston, 1909. 4° pp. 149, illus.

The careful research of many years has gleaned the materials for this biography of John Foster, the earliest engraver in what is now the United States, and the first printer in Boston. Few facts concerning his life could be found, and much that has been discovered concerning him is recorded here by reproductions of his engraving, and photographic reprints of some of the title-pages of the pamphlets printed by him. The book, which is carefully finished in every detail, also includes a "Biographical list of titles printed by Foster," "Titles probably printed by Foster," and "Engravings by Foster."

John Johnston of New York, merchant, by EMILY JOHNSTON DEFOREST. New York, privately printed, 1909. 8° pp. 195, illus., chart.

Quaint and charming are many of the anecdotes related here of the life and travels of a prominent New York merchant in the early part of the nineteenth century. His trips to his boyhood home in Scotland, and his journey with his family, by carriage, through Europe, disclose many experiences hardly dreamed of in the days of modern railway and postal service. A delightful glimpse of the social life of 1830 is also afforded by the extracts from "the party book." The volume is illustrated with rare views of New York, some Scotch scenes, and several portraits. It is a pleasure to see a book so well made and so artistic.

George Leavens Lilley. Memorial proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Connecticut in joint convention. 27 May 1909. Hartford [Conn.], published by the State, 1909. 8° pp. 24. illus.

A portrait of the late Governor Lilley forms the frontispiece of this pamphlet, which contains the speeches that were delivered at this memorial service.

Facsimile of Pere Marquette's Illinois Prayer Book. Its History, by the owner, Col. J. L. Hubert Neilson, M.D. Published by the Quebec Literary and Historical Society in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Quebec, July 1608. Quebec, 1908. 16° pp. 12+[176].

Each page of this prayer book, written in the language of the Illinois Indians, and used for years by that famous Jcsuit missionary, Pere Marquette, is here reproduced with the utmost care, every print being so clear that the dialect can be studied from the photographic facsimile. When Marquette and Jolliet made the long journey in 1673 that resulted in their discovery of the Mississippi River, this prayer book, and the pewter bowl and spoon also photographed here, undoubtedly formed part of Marquette's travelling equipment. These three articles were given to the grandfather of the present owner by the last Jesuit in Canada, in gratitude for his kindness in sending to the missionaries for many years the Quebec Gazette, the official journal of the colony, of which he was the editor and printer. The Quebec Literary and Historical Society has issued a volume of unique value and interest.

Colonel John Quincy of Mount Wollaston, 1689-1767. An address delivered 23 February 1908 under the auspices of the Quincy Historical Society, by DANIEL MUNRO WILSON. prepared in collaboration with CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS. Boston. George H. Ellis Company, printers, 272 Congress Street, 1909. 8° pp. 80, illus.

Contemporaneous with the Provincial period of Massachusetts history, Col. John Quincy has shared the fate of oblivion that covers the epoch in which he lived and played his part, and it has been with difficulty that the incidents of his remarkable career have been rescued from the forgotten past. All the addresses that were delivered on this commemorative occasion are here reprinted in full, and many appropriate illustrations embellish the volume.

Rev. Timothy Foster Rogers, fourth pastor of the First Congregational Unitarian Society, Bernardston, Mass., by Lucy Cutler Kellogg. 1909. Greenfield, Mass., Press of E. A. Hall and Company. 8° pp. 14.

This memoir of one of the early ministers of Bernardston celebrates the one-hundredth anniversary of his ordination, which took place 20 September 1809. He was the son of Timothy Bogers and Hannah Foster, and was born 18 March 1781 in Tewksbury, Mass. A plan of the meeting-house shows the location of the pews, and gives the names of their respective owners.

Journal of an American prisoner at Fort Malden and Quebec in the War of 1812, edited by G. M. FARCHILD, Jr. Quebec, privately printed by Frank Carrel, Limited, 1909. fo pp. 32, illus.

Few personal records, if any, are available for the study of the War of 1812 on the frontiers. Although the name of the author of this straightforward daily chronicle of events on a prison ship is not given in the journal itself, the editor finds unmistakable evidence of its having been written by Surgeon's Mate James Reynolds, who was deputed by Surgeon-General Edwards of the American forces to take charge of the sick on the two vessels despatched from Maumee to Detroit, but which were captured by the British, 2 July 1812, at Fort Malden (Amherstburg). True appreciation of the value of personal records that relate to historical events is shown by the publication of this diary, which seems to be without a contemporaneous parallel.

Genealogy, heraldry, history, biography. New York, N. Y., Frank Allaben Genealogical Company. 3 West Forty-second Street. 12° pp. 135.

This finding list of the material published by this prolific genealogical company may be found a useful addition to the researcher's workshop. More restraint in the heading and title-page designs would be in keeping with good taste.

A history of Chatham, Mass., formerly Constablewick or Village of Monomoit, by WILLIAM C. SMITH. Part I. Hyannis, Mass., F. B. and F. P. Goss, publishers, 1909. 8° pp. 6+106, illus., maps. Price $1.00. Address the author, Chatham, Mass.

This history will delight the student by its scholarly presentation of facts. its disregard of myth and tradition, and the breadth of research, particularly in the records of early explorers, on which this narrative is based. Frequent use is made of maps, and the unusual number of foot-notes will be helpful to anyone wishing to make special study of any particular point. The full account of William Nickerson will be interesting to his descendants.

The genealogies of the families of Cohasset, Massachusetts, compiled under the direction of the Committee on Town History by George Lyman Davemport and Elizabeth Osgood Davenport, with other chapters supplementary to the history of Cohasset by Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, published in 1898. Published under the auspices of the Committee on Town History, 1909. [Boston, Mass., Stanhope Press, F. H. Gilson Company.] 8º pp. 12+631, illus

This excellent record of all the families of Cohasset, arranged in alphabetical sequence, covers nearly five hundred pages and will make a welcome and useful addition to the history of the town published in 1898, with which this record was first designed to appear. The delay in publication has been caused by the great amount of time and labor required in genealogical compilation.

Interesting supplementary historical chapters bring the town's record down to date. The deep-sea captains of the town, the wrecks that have occurred on its shores, and the life saving station, receive attention, as do the musical association and the officers of the town, many of whose portraits are among the illustrations, which also include views of town buildings. N. E. H. G. Standard paper is used, and the genealogical material is arranged on the REGISTER plan The printing and binding are unusually good.

The Bench and Bar of Litchfield County, Conn., 1709-1909, by DWIGHT C. Kilbourn. Litchfield, Conn., published by the author, 1909. 8° pp. 344+10,

The Lichfield Law School, "the first law school of this country," rightfully receives a large measure of attention in this volume. Views of the two little story-and-a-half buildings in which it was held, and portraits of prominent men who came from every state then in the union to study here, are among the illustrations. Preceding the alphabetically arranged sketches of members of the bar are reprints of some valuable and rare addresses relating to the Litchfield Bar, Among the Southern students the most prominent was John now out of print. C. Calhoun of South Carolina. Even the original of "Old Grimes is dead" (William Grimes, a runaway slave, who became general servant to the students of the Law School) is not overlooked. There is an index. It is regrettable that so good a book was not printed on better paper.

Genealogical and family history of the State of Maine, compiled under the editorial supervision of George Thomas Little, A.M., Litt. D., and including among other local contributors, Rev. Henry S. Burrage. D.D. and Albert ROSCOE STUBBS. Four volumes. New York, Lewis Historical Publishing Company. 1909. 4º pp. 29+2283.

To those who have seen the previous sets of county histories issued by this company, these four large, heavy volumes will present a familiar appearance, in their full leather binding. The illustrations are many, and are all well-reproduced portraits of men whose family history is sketched here. The publishers say they believe that the work includes "the main stem of every family tree of every family of any importance in Maine." It may be true, however, that there are some old families whose records are already in print, and who do not wish to incur the expense of being included in this publication, but doubtless they are few in comparison with the great number here included.

Early Records of the Town of Manchester, formerly Derryfield, N. H., 1801-1816. A complete and exact transcript of the Records of the Clerks as written in the Old Derryfield Book No. 2, pages 202 to 382, Vol. III, pages 1 to 177 inclusive, comprising Volume III of the printed records of the town. Volume X Manchester Historic Association Collections. Edited, with introduction, notes and index. by George Waldo Browne. Manchester, N. H. Published by authority of the City Council, under the auspices of the Manchester Historic Association. 1908. [Printed by the John B. Clarke Company, 1909.] 8° pp. 429. Price $2.00. Address Fred W. Lamb, 452 Merrimack Street, Manchester, N. H.

The work of printing the town records verbatim et literatim, begun so wisely and so well in the eighth volume of this Society's collections, is continued in the same careful manner in this publication. In the sixteen years' records here printed some of the most interesting topics that received the consideration of the voters of the town were the "securing females for teachers" (deemed inadvisable), the establishment of a singing school (approved, but no money raised), and the separation of church and town affairs. Industrial progress was advanced by the opening of the Blodget canal around Amoskeag Falls, and in 1810 the first manufacturing in the vicinity was started. In June of that year the name of the town was changed from Derryfield to Manchester. This book is clearly printed on good paper, is indexed, and bound similar to the other volumes in the series.

Collections of the New Brunswick Historical Society. No. 8. St. John, N. B., Barnes & Company, 1909. 8° pp. 113-297, illus. maps.

An account of Brigadier-General Monckton's expedition to the River St. John in September 1758, and the beginning of the first permanent settlement of the English on the shores of St. John harbor, opens this number of the magazine, which also contains valuable historical and geographical documents relating to New Brunswick (including many extracts from the journal of Benjamin Marston), a record of the founding of the Church of England in Shelburne, and a list of the disbanded soldiers at Shelburne.

Minutes of the Commissioners for detecting and defeating Conspiracies in the State of New York. Albany County Sessions, 1778-1781. Edited by Victor Hugo Paltsits, State Historian. Volume I, 1778-1779; volume II, 1780-1781. Albany, N. Y., published by the State of New York, J. B. Lyon Company, State Printers, 1909. 4° pp. 836, illus.

The careful and conscientious publication of any state archives is beneficial to all students of history, but when the matter selected for such publication has bearing on a historical crisis such a volume increases greatly in interest and range of nsefulness. The commissioners, whose minutes are contained in these two volumes, were appointed to suppress the disaffection in the State, and seek out and arrest the enemies of the State. The book is finely printed on excellent paper, and an analytical index is in preparation and will be printed in volume three.

Colonial Families of America, by Frances M. Smith. Vol. I. New York, Frank Allaben Genealogical Company, 1909. 12° pp. 358, illus. Price $2.00, postage 10 cents. Address the publishers, 3 West 42d Street, New York City.

This is the first volume in a series of seven, each of which will contain historical sketches of forty American families. The origin of the family name is accounted for in an entertaining, popular style, and the history of the family in Europe receives similar treatment. Mention is made of those who have given Colonial and Revolutionary service, although the exact record is not inserted. Each sketch is illustrated by at least one coat-of-arms, and it is to be feared that many will be misled by the juxtaposition of text and illustration. There is a resemblance in some of them to the heraldic frands of John Coles of Boston in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

The Magazine of History, with notes and queries. Extra Numbers 1, 3, 4, 5, 7. WILLIAM ABBATT. New York, 141 East 25th Street. 40 paged variously.

The extra numbers of this historical magazine are made up of reprints of rare articles, none of which are now in print. Of the ten titles contained in the five numbers above-mentioned four relate to Revolutionary characters or events—the journal of Elijah Fisher 1775-1784; a sketch of Rev. Israel Evans, Washington's chaplain; Negroes in the American Army of the Revolution; and George Washington as an angler. Two accounts of Capt. John Lovewell's expeditions, by Frederick Kidder and Samuel Penhallow, and a sketch of John Chamberlain, Indian fighter, are the reprints contained in Extra No. 3. Thomas Brown's "Plain Narrativ" of 1760, "The Burial of George Augustus Lord Viscount Howe, 1758," and "Never Caught—Personal adventures connected with twelve snccessful trips in Blockade-running during the American Civil War, 1863-64," by Capt Roberts, London, 1867, are other titles in this excellent series.

The Transitorial Period, 1787-1789, in the Government of the United States, by Frank Fletcher Stephens, Ph.M., Ph.D. The University of Missouri Studies, edited by W. G. Brown. Social Science Series, Volume II, November 4. July 1909. Published by the University of Missouri. 4°, pp. 126.

The different ways in which each of the thirteen original states elected its first representatives, senators, and presidential electors, and thus set the machinery of government in operation, receive careful scholarly analysis in this monograph. It also traces the relinquishment by the separate states into the hands of the federal government, of their right to coin money, raise armies, and levy import and export taxes, and then discusses the political and constitutional questions involved in consequence of this transfer of power. Some of the paragraphs from current newspapers illustrate certain points well, and also cause amusement by reference to the pleasing fiction that "The People" are the "Masters of Congress."

Amherst College, Class of Eighty-three. The record of a quarter century. WAL-TER TAYLOR FIELD, Chairman Editorial Board. Evaston—Chicago, The Kimball Press. Printed for the Class. 4° pp. 196.

Biographical sketches of the members, usually illustrated by two photographs (one of the man at the time of graduation and the other in recent times), comprise the greater part of this book and make it useful for reference, as well as entertaining for the Class.

Dartmouth College, sketches of the Class of 1862, by Horace Stuart Cummings, Washington, D. C., Geo. E. Howard Press, 1909. 8° pp. 145+[2], illus.

Just twenty-five years before the publication of this volume Mr. Cummings issued a collection of sketches which he had prepared for the Class, then twenty-two years out of college. This volume combines delightfully the earlier record with the present history of the Class. The old Class Day and Commencement programmes are reprinted, as well as the oration. Several appropriate and excellent illustrations adorn the volume.

Harvard College, Class of 1868. Fortieth anniversary. Secretary's report numbers. 1868-1908. [Boston, printed and published for the Class by E. O. Cockayne]. 8° pp. 261, illus.

The printed pages here numbered fill but half this stout volume, the second section being filled with portraits of the Class, in most cases the early photograph and the one of the present day being presented side by side, thus furnishing a most interesting study in individual development. Biographical sketches of the members, class day parts and poems, and similar matters are contained in this report which also contains a reproduction of a graphic vital statistics chart of Harvard classes from 1830 to 1904. The book is finely made in every detail, and sets a high standard for the reports of other classes to follow.

Second supplement to the history of the Yale Class of 1873, compiled by Frederick J. Shepard, Class Secretary. 8° pp. 366-485, illus.

This supplement is chiefly distinguished by the portraits of the members of the Class. An account of the 1903 reunion, and some additional information regarding the Class, is added to the account of the custody of the survivor's cup.

The usual reports and officers are given in this number, which also contains portraits of Capt. John Linzee, R.N., Maj.-Gen. Henry Clinton, K.B., and Gen. John Burgoyne. These three officers were in charge of the British forces on the day of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The story of the service of this western Massachusetts regiment is told in pathetic detail, beginning with its departure from Springfield and recording all the marches and battles it endured until its return to the warm welcome at home. The roster of the regiment is as complete as devoted effort and perseverance could make it. An unusual number of portraits will be found among the illustrations. The regiment is fortunate in having had so able and devoted an historian. There is an index, and the volume is bound in brown cloth.

The battle of Point Pleasant, a battle of the Berolution, October 10, 1774. Biographical sketches of the men who participated. By Mrs. Livia Nye Simpson-Poffenbarger. Point Pleasant, West Virginia, The State Gazette, 1909. 5° pp. 141, illus.

As early as 1656 there were considerable numbers of Jews in the Barbados, and this reprint from number eighteen of the Publications of the Jewish Historical Society contains several petitions regarding the treatment accorded them, in spite of their denization.

A century of population growth from the first census of the United States to the twelfth, 1790-1900. Department of Commerce and Labor, Bureau of the Census. S. N. D. NORTH, Director. Washington, Government Printing Office, 1909. 4° pp. 303, maps.

Among the interesting groups of statistics in this report, table one hundred and eleven will probably be the most useful to genealogists, for it contains all the names represented by at least one hundred white persons in the first census of 1790. Much amusement can be derived from the singular sources from which our names are derived, as well as from the list of ludicrous and grotesque combinations of given and surnames.

GEORGE SUMNER MAN

By MARQUIS FAYETTE DICKINSON, A.M., of Brookline, Mass.

By the death of George Sumner Mann, which occured at his home in Brookline, October 27, 1909, the New England Historic Genealogical Society has lost one of its most loyal and useful members. He joined the Society February 2, 1881, and up to the date of his death was a constant attendant upon all meetings, and was always actively concerned in the administration and advancement of its interests.

He was a descendant in the seventh generation from that Richard Manna who emigrated from England to Scituate, in Plymouth Colony, in the reign of Charles I, shortly prior to 1644. His nearest neighbor on the south was John Hoar, later of Concord, Mass., ancestor of the distinguished family of that name and town. The name of Richard Mann, planter, appears among the Conihassett Partners, so-called, who acquired lands in Scituate in 1646, of Timothy Hath-Mr. Mann was a personage of note and much respected in the community. With thirty-one others, he took the oath of fidelity January 15, 1644. His farm was located on a beautiful elevation called Mann Hill, in the northeastern part of that town, overlooking a wide expanse of ocean. The succession in the male line is Richard, 1 Thomas, 2 Ensign, 3 Ensign, 4 Ensign, 5 William, 6 and George Sumner. 7 The paternal great-grandfather, Ensign Mann, Jr., born on Mann Hill in 1740, removed with his father to Boston early in life, and was graduated from Harvard College in The College hall and library were burned during his collegiate course, and he lost many books in the fire. He removed to Lancaster, where he was a teacher for three years, and finally went to Petersham, where he also followed the profession of teaching. He took a prominent part in the controversies preceding the American Revolution, was an ardent patriot, and one of the Sons of Liberty. In 1773 he married Alice Whitney, daughter of Rev. Aarou Whitney, the minister of Petersham, and later in life bought a farm in the north part of the town where he was considerably employed in fitting young men for college. He was usually spoken of as "Master Mann." His grandson William of Petersham was born July 25, 1809, and married Abigail Cook, who was born in Guildhall, Vermont, later of New Salem, Massachusetts. When ten months old his father died, leaving him to the care of his mother, who married for her second husband one Sanderson. William was a speculator in real estate and cattle, who owned over a dozen farms within a radius of five miles of Petersham meeting-house, and in 1867 purchased the Capt. Joel Brooks Farm, where he resided for some years. He was a man of sound judgment and enjoyed the confidence of his fellow townsmen. In politics he was Jeffersonian, as were his sons, all being firm believers in the sovereignty of the states.

George Samner' Mann, the subject of this sketch, was born just over the Petersham line in New Salem, November 25, 1834. Sumner, the name by which he was commonly called, was given in honor of Rev. Joseph Sumner, D.D., of Shrewsbury, from which town his grandmother, Lydia Filmore, came. During his infancy his parents moved back to Petersham, where his youth was spent on his father's farm near the Athol line, now a part of the Harvard Forestry School. His education was obtained in the Bennett Hill district school up to his eighteenth year. Then he spent a year in Goodale Academy at Bernardston. His early training as a merchant began in 1853 at the age of eighteen in the well known Theodore Jones store at Athol, and continued four years. Following this came a few months' service as clerk in the Erving post office.

In 1858 he came to Boston, where, after a few months' work in a dry-goods store, he entered into partnership with others and prosecuted a very successful dry-goods business in Tremont Row, with branches in Hanover and Tremont Streets, under the successive names of Mann & Company, Barker, Mann & Company, and George S. Mann & Company. In 1863 he formed a strong intimacy with Justin Dewey of Great Barrington, then a law student in Boston, afterwards one of the justices of the Superior Court. Mr. Mann retired from mercantile business in 1878, devoting himself thereafter to the real estate business and care of trust estates. In these lines of effort he was very successful and accumulated a competency.

Early in life Mr. Mann became interested in historical and genealogical studies, and after his retirement from commercial life found time to indulge these inclinations. He had great patience in collecting historical and biographical facts, which he turned to good account in frequent communications to the Boston Transcript and other publications. His most important contribution was the "Mann Memorial," which appeared in 1884, and is a work of permanent value. Besides his membership in this Society he belonged to the Brookline Historical Society, the Bostonian Society, Sons of the American Revolution, Bunker Hill Monument Association, Essex Institute, and Brookline Thursday Club. During the last two years of his life he was secretary of the last named organization and devoted much time to its interests. He contributed several valuable papers at its meetings, notably one on Shay's Rebellion, and another on Early London Clubs.

It is pleasant to note that Mr. Mann's will sets aside a fund of $2,000 for the benefit of this Society, one-half the income to be used for the publication of memorial biographies of deceased members, the other half for general objects; also that the sum of $5,000 is provided, one-quarter of the income of which is to be set apart for the purchase of historical works for the Petersham Memorial Library. A provision of an unusual nature appears in the creation of a fund of $20,000 to be called the "Mann Fund," which is eventually to be given to the Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Virginia, for educational purposes, "in honor of the late General Robert E. Lee and others whose loyal adherence to the States' rights sustained them in the war between the States."

Mr. Mann is survived by a widow, Susan Alzea Stone, to whom he was married March 26, 1865, daughter of Jeremiah and Esther (Wildes) Stone of Provincetown, by two daughters, Carrie Wildes, wife of William A. Spalding of Newton, and Miss Gertrude Whitney Mann, by a younger brother, Horace Mann of Petersham, and two sisters, Mary Sanderson Wilder, wife of Charles K. Wilder, and Miss Lydia A. Mann, both of Petersham.

The minute presented by Anson M. Lyman, Esq., in the Brookline Thursday Club, shortly after his death, well expresses the esteem in which Mr. Mann was held by his associates, and may properly close this sketch: "In the Brookline Thursday Club, of which he had been an honored active member for eight years and most constant in his attendance, all who met him must have been impressed with the charm of his manner and his unfailing courtesy. He was a companion we loved and honored. Of recent years, particularly during the time that he was our secretary, his love and thought was centred upon the welfare of the club. His reports as secretary were painstaking, discriminating, and often scintillating with flashes of wit and humor which added much to our enjoyment. We shall miss his genial presence and his kindly fellowship."

Samuel Phillips, Leonard Jarvis, and John Read, Commissioners of Massachusetts, sold William Bingham one parcel of land in Hancock Co., containing 61,872 acres, deed dated 26 Jan. 1793. Perhaps it was to satisfy the claim of the Bingham heirs that a deed was given Thomas Urann by the trustees. Sudbury (Bury St. Edmunds), Harrold, 21.)

[I have printed these items regarding the Waterbury family of Suffolk because the name is so rare in England. Savage says that William Waterbury of Boston came in the fleet with Winthrop, and that John Waterbury was early in Watertown and moved to Stamford, Conn. I suggest that the first entry quoted above is the baptism of the emigrant to Boston. Sudbury and Groton, Governor Winthrop's home, are only six miles apart. May not the emigrant John have been son of the emigrant William and named for his grandfather Waterbury? Further search in the local records of Sudbury and vicinity might be profitable. E. F.]

THE GREAT ELM AND ITS SCION

Before its destruction on February 15, 1876, the Great Elm was one of the chief objects of interest in Boston. Though a giant in size and of great age, it was noted principally for the beauty of its proportions. Probably in existence "before the arrival of the first Colonists." it was of sufficient size to be noted upon the map of Boston engraved in 1722. From the largest branch tradition has it that some early executions took place. In later years hangings of a less serious nature occurred there for the exhibition of feeling against unpopular Tories. The tree was used by the Sons of Liberty as a meeting place, and from this it doubtless took its name of Liberty Tree. The Great Elm was nearly destroyed by a storm in 1832, and was further injured in 1860 and 1869, but the tree's final destruction was due to the gale of February, 1876.1

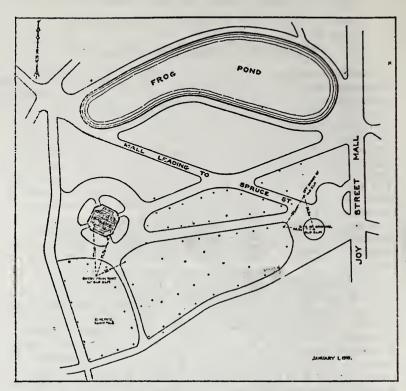

At the stated meeting of the New England Historic Genealogical Society held December 1, 1909, a committee² was appointed "to consider the location of the scion of the Old Elm and report thereon." Their report is as follows:

Rev. George Hodges, D.D., in his very interesting address before the Society on December 1, 1909, stated that he had "that day stood at the site of the Old Elm on the Common and was pleased to see the healthy tree growing there, which was a scion of the original tree." He expressed the belief of thousands who think as he did. At the close of his address, when remarks were in order, one of this committee publicly stated that to his personal knowledge the present tree was not a sucker or a scion of the famed elm, but the actual one was now on the spot to which it was removed fifty feet or so away, and should be properly marked. The appointment of this committee followed. They observed early in their investigations that the question was of much wider scope than was anticipated in the appointment. Having, as they think, discovered facts of interest to the general public, they have extended the report to cover the entire matter. This procedure was considerably strengthened by an article lately published in the Boston Evening Record by Courtenay Guild, Esq. He unceremoniously pricked the bubble when he remarked, "The newspapers of 1876 would quickly put an end to all discussion regarding the old elm on the Common, and show that the present elm is not even a sucker of the old tree. It simply illustrates how easy it is to falsify history concerning an event only thirty-three years ago.'

Before considering the question regarding the so-called scion, a few things can with propriety be said concerning the old tree. The investigation has been very thorough and in no instance has evidence been found that the present tree, occupying the site of the old elm, is not one procured by Mr. John Galvin, the then city Forester, at a nursery in Dorchester, and planted out under his immediate supervision as a "Centennial Tree."

² The committee consisted of Messrs. William Carver Bates, Thomas W. Silloway, and Charles F. Read.

It would be a pleasant work for this Committee to give the testimony of distinguished citizens who knew well the origin of the scion, or sucker on the old lot, and also of the new tree. It would also be interesting to speak of the many articles on the subject, published in the late daily papers. These give direct testimony and are more than interesting. But one of the lot, however, will be quoted from. That is by Alvah H. Peters, Esq., who for some years before the tree transaction and many after, was Boston's city Messenger who was particularly interested in planting the new tree. It was he who procured the granite blocks with a recess in one of them which was finally filled with documents and other things of interest, cemented up and placed under the trunk of the present tree. Mr. Peters was custodian of the box for a short time. The smaller of the two iron tablets now on the old tree-ground reads as follows:

³ See Shnrtleff, op. cit., p. 340, as follows: "When the Great Tree was measured in the spring of 1860, an offshoot was discovered, which had recently, in 1859, started from one of the roots on the westerly side of the main tree. This shoot is still alive, measuring over twelve feet in height, and about thirteen inches in circumference a short distance above the ground, and appears to have received due attention from those who have since that time had charge of the Common. Just where it emerges from the soil, there is a considerable cavity in the old tree; and it would not be surprising if the young tree, vampire-like, were to grow and flourish on the life-sap of its parent; and if care is continued to be given to it, it may hereafter succeed its parent and become noted in coming centuries as has its distinguished progenitor."

DESTROYED BY A
GALE FEB. 15, 1876
THIS ELM
PLANTED A. D. 1876

The committee, having uncontradicted and positive testimony of the two kinds named, do not hesitate to say that the tree now on the site of the Old Elm was new, and is in no way retated to the old tree.

In regard to the sucker of the old tree, the committee state that it grew inside the iron fence once around the old tree. It was about three and a half inches in diameter one foot above the ground, and was not far from two feet from the Old Elm. When the trunk was two inches in diameter a committee made an examination and reported that it grew from a small root of the original tree. Their report was published in the papers of the day. Mr. Thomas W. Silloway, a member of the present committee, was present at the planting of the new tree. It was Mr. John Galvin the city forester's opinion, as well as the judgment of others in authority, that to plant a new tree on the old site was a better work than to replant the sucker of the old one. A few weeks after the planting, Mr. Silloway was informed by Mr. Galvin that the sucker tree had been replanted, and he pointed out the place. It was north of the path leading to Charles Street, fifty-three feet from the site of the famed elm, on a line from the old tree to Walnut Street. Mr. Galvin went as superintendent of the city institution at Deer Island, and Mr. William Doogue was appointed in his stead. Mr. Silloway talked with Mr. Doogue in regard to the old tree, the new one, and the sucker in its new location, all of which Mr. Doogue was familiar with. He promised to put a proper tablet to mark the latter. The two at Mr. Doogue's request went to the old gingko tree on Beacon Street Mall, near the Joy Street steps. They decided that the child of the old tree should be marked as the gingko tree was, and now is, but it never was done. Mr. Silloway asked Mr. Doogue if there was anything peculiar and especially interesting about the young or sucker tree. Mr. Doogue replied "Indeed there is, and we'll go and see it." They went, and Mr. Doogue pointed out this peculiarity. On the northerly side, perhaps half way around, the bark was like that of all elm trees, the remainder or path side of it was of a very coarse texture and unlike that on the other side. That peculiarity exists to this day. On asking Mr. Doogue why this was so, he replied, "Why, this coarse bark was towards the old tree and not exposed to the sun as the other side was." The tree is somewhat inferior to the new one, and is in a sense vindication of Mr. Galvin's judgment. Another testimonial of importance is from Mr. Frank M. Cowles, published in the Boston Herald. Among other things stated in the article is the following:

"I can confirm Mr. Silloway's statement in every particular . . . the real shoot was planted a little west of the old tree where I used to point it out to my friends when they visited Boston as a real descendant of the old elm. There was much severe criticism as to the motive which caused the transplanting."

There is yet another question that may with propriety receive attention. For some years there was a policeman by the name of Thomas S. Adams, appointed 1855, left the force 1878, and died April 8, 1901. He was estecially interested in the cultivation of trees, and had many and in variety in his rear yard at 804 Tremont Street. He entertained especial interest in the Old Elm, and in 1873 took three cuttings from it to root. Only one lived, which was taken to the sanitary ground on Flagstaff Hill and was cultivated with care by Mr. Noble, custodian of the place. During his mayoralty Hon. Thomas N. Hart, with Mr. John W. Fraser, a member of the Common Council, in the presence of others did the initiatory work of planting the scion-tree as removed from the sanitary.

The location is on the south side of the hill near the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument. It is a healthy tree with the trunk eighteen inches in diameter. It is on a line from the monument to Park Square 70 feet from the former and 25 feet from the edge of the gravel path to the tree.

Miss Adelaide M. Adams, daughter of the policeman Adams, residing at the old homestead, testifies to having many times visited the tree with her father, who constantly cared for it to the day of his death.

Much testimony of like nature has been presented confirmatory of the statements herein made in relation to all four of the trees.

In consideration of the foregoing the committee believe the tree at present on the old site is an entirely new one, that the one on the hill is from a scion or cutting from the Old Elm, and the one fifty-three feet north of the old site grew direct from a small root of the famed elm or parent tree. They recommend that each of the two be suitably marked with a granite stone set firmly in the ground, and with substantially these inscriptions.

At the scion-tree:

"This tree grew from a cutting from the Old Elm, rooted by policeman Thomas S. Adams 1873, planted here under the supervision of Hon. Thomas N. Hart, Mayor, and John W. Fraser, Councilman."

At the sucker tree the following:

"This tree sprouted and grew from a root of the Old Elm. Was planted here by the city forester, John Galvin in 1876, soon after the parent tree was blown down."

¹This list, comprising over 1500 names, is to be found in the back of vols. 5 and 7 of the Records of the Corporation of Liverpool, deposited in the Town Clerk's Office, Leasing Department, Liverpool. The entries were originally arranged chronologically, but vol. 5 has been rebound and the pages bave been misplaced. The entries are apparently not official, and most of the writing can only be described as scribbling. The writer or writers—the entries seemingly being made by three different scribes—were evidently employed to draw up the indentures. The words "pd." and "delivered" in the margin appear to refer to the indentures, and there is one entry stating that twenty shillings was paid for four indentures.—E. F.

The use of apostrophes at the end of words has been rendered necessary to represent the signs of abbreviation in the original manuscript.

FIRST OWNERSHIP OF OHIO LANDS

By Albion Morris Dyer, A.M., of Cleveland, Ohio

At the end of the war of the American Revolution the Continental Congress came into possession of certain western lands, surrendered by the British Crown to the United States in the treaty signed at Paris on the 3d day of September, 1783. The "crown lands," as they were called, lay back of the heads of the Atlantic rivers and over the mountains, extending westward to the distant Father of Waters. They were known to the colonies as the "back lands" or "back country," and being waste and uncultivated, remote from the ships and barred by many hazards, were not especially desirable in the early settlements. Here wars had raged for unknown centuries, and war was to linger for many years. Two great savage nations had fought from the beginning for this vast wilderness, and three European powers had striven from its discovery to possess it. Finally it was won from the French by the united arms of the King and colonies and joined to Quebec to enter upon a new epoch. Afterwards the crown lands appear in the public councils of the colonies, and that part lying beyond the Ohio River is referred to in the early records as "The Western Territory," a term obviously too broad, since there was western territory on both sides of the river. Under this name it passed for many years, both in and out of Congress; but the official designation of the region was changed in the final action on the famous Ordinance of 1787, where, in the last reading, the title was extended to "The Territory of the United States North-West of the River Ohio." 1 Such is the orgin of the Northwest Territory, nursery of states, first extension in area of the United States, first grand resource of the nation, yielding the first considerable item of revenue in the public accounts.

The Northwest Territory passed to the United States indisputably, as part of the lands embraced within the boundary line established by Article III of the Treaty of Paris, reading: "through the middle of the lakes, and along the middle of the river Mississippi, until it shall intersect the northern-most part of the thirty-first degree of north latitude." The English right thus descending to the United States included the relinquished rights of Spain and France, and the King of France had confirmed the transfer by separate treaties giving up forever to the Americans all his claims west of the Mississippi. No other civilized power laid claim to these lands, yet no territory of state ever had more troublesome encumbrances. Four colonies had covered the property with overlapping titles based on vague royal grants and Indian treaties. The territorial land rights of these and other states were advocated by the commissioners of Congress in the negotiation of peace with England, as the basis of a demand for the territory, and the United States was further bound to respect the claims of the states by a specific clause of the articles of confederation. Many tribes of Indians occupied the territory as hereditary owners, and their right of habitation had been confirmed to them by royal proclamation. Relying upon this confirmation a part of the inhabitants had allied themselves with the British cause against the Americans for the retention of their homes and hunting grounds, while the other part of the Indians had remained neutral or assisted the colonies. The hostile Indians were not yet subdued; they were still in armed possession of the frontier, while the friendly tribes could not well be disturbed in their wigwams without serious consequences. Added to this were several minor complications: pledges of bounty land to the military; indeterminate grants within the territory to independent companies; squatter inroads into the bottoms of the Ohio; and British garrisons keeping guard at the outposts supposedly encouraging natives in hostilities, and furnishing aid and comfort to intruders. These conflicting elements were cleared away from the title by good management of Congress, and the United States was able to establish a hold on the Northwest Territory. With great nationce, exercising powers assumed but not granted, the American states solved their first political problem, the land issue, quieted the discordant states and gloriously concluded the confederacy. In the course of this business through the assembly, with wonderful enlightenment and in marvellous wisdom of counsels, the title of the Northwest Territory was cleared; the frontier was made safe and the Indians protected within their own property limits under permanent relations of ward-ship; a public domain was created, and a rational system of surveying devised to open it; a sinking fund was started, which in time extinguished the whole state and federal debt: and a mode was provided for the extension of settlements on the territory, and for the expansion of the American system of representative government under the flag.

It is not the present purpose of the writer to trace the factors of this first nationalizing movement in American history. The plan in this preliminary sketch is merely to link together events in the course of action which cleared the title to the Northwest Territory, and to follow with more detail the subsequent steps by which Congress established an open doorway into the West. That open door was Ohio. Between the meridians confining this great state, the problem of the preparation of a seat in the wilderness for civilization was worked out on heroic lines. These matters are of more than local interest, although the details may not be found in the larger histories.

Years before the crown lands had passed to the United States, four of the states "claiming to the Mississippi or South Sea," assumed sovereign rights of preëmption of soil and jurisdiction over the lands comprising the Northwest Territory. Massachusetts and Connecticut rested their title on royal charters, claiming parallel strips of land which cut off the northern part of the Territory. New York claimed by the historic deed of the Six Nations, and her title covered nearly the whole extent of the country south Virginia's proofs were in the royal grants and European treaties, supported by the subsequent military achievement of Clark, and her claims overspread everything from the Canadas far into the south. The claims of the Carolinas and of Georgia were of the same nature, but they fell below the Ohio River. The proofs upon which many if not all of these claims rested had never been tested by legal examination or comparison. In some instances the charters or treaties were of uncertain force and effect. The claims themselves were plainly conflicting. The delineations in the documentary proofs were vague and inaccurate, and the descriptions were based on erroneous geographical knowledge. It was obvious from the first that difficulties would arise in settling these claims, but it was no time in the midst of uncertain war for sister states to dispute over unconquered territory, nor to search for boundaries in a wilderness not yet rid of the savage allies of the King. Moreover the lands were still crown property, and there was no hope of possessing them save "through the common sword, purse and blood of all the colonies united in one common effort." Under the circumstances the claimant states were disposed to rest on their theoretical rights, awaiting the outcome of the Revolution. They worked together in the prosecution of the war without thought of their conflicting claims, and they even engaged to enter into a perpetual union with the lesser colonies, as into a "firm league of friendship," utterly unmindful of the trouble sure to come when boundaries were defined and the limits of jurisdiction determined.

This complacent policy of undisputed, undisturbed ownership of the crown lands by neighborly colonies might have continued unbroken throughout the period of war, but one of the claimants, more "ambitiously grasping for territories" than the others, made presumptions under her charters that destroyed amity and planted discord among the states. Virginia was the direct cause of the fear and distrust, and Maryland led the opposition. Presuming upon the validity of untried proofs of title, and confident of enforcing her indeterminate claims, the Old Dominion entered upon a course of action in the summer of 1776, which, if followed out to its conclusion, would not only exclude the smaller colonies from participation in the benefits of the property but would place all her neighbors, great and small, in position of trespassers. Unexpectedly, in the midst of general alarms of British invasion, with union still in the balance and independence not yet declared, the Virginians advanced pretensions to jurisdiction and actual possession of all lands and waters of the region between the Chesapeake frontage and the Mississippi river, warning off intruders, and announcing intentions of setting up dependent territorial governments westward of the Allegheny Mountains. Maryland spoke up boldly against these arrogant presumptions of her powerful trans-Potomac neighbor, and so started a controversy which increased the embarrassments of Congress in the conduct of the war, and placed the cause of independence in greatest Maryland held to the demand for complete neutralization of the public lands on principles of fairness, if not of right; and, by constant insistance, at the risk of wrecking the Union, she broke down the plans of Virginia and opened the way for the cessions of all the western country.

The origin of the controversy over the crown lands may be said to be in the adoption of the "Constitution and Form of Government" agreed to in general convention of the delegates and representatives of the several counties and corporations of Virginia, held at the capitol, in the city of Williamsburg, on the 6th of May, 1776. A paragraph of the constitution reads as follows:

The territories contained within the charters erecting the colonies of Maryland, Pennsylvania, North and South Carolina, are hereby ceded, released, and forever confirmed to the people of those colonies respectively, with all the rights of property, jurisdiction and government, and all other rights whatsoever, which might at any time hereafter have been claimed by Virginia, except the free navigation and use of the rivers Potomack and Pocomoke, with the property of the Virginia shore and strands bordering on either of the said rivers, and all improvements which have been or shall be made thereon. The western and northern extent of Virginia shall, in all other respects, stand as fixed by the charter of King James the First, in the year one thousand six hundred and nine, and by public Treaty of Peace between the courts of Great Britain and France in the year one thousand seven hundred and sixty-three; unless, by act of legislature, one or more territories shall hereafter be laid off, and governments established westward of the Allegeny mountains. And no purchase of lands shall be made of the Indian natives, but on behalf of the public, by authority of the general assembly.

Maryland unhesitatingly pronounced this claim in the constitution of Virginia as "injurious to the inhabitants of this state." At the convention of delegates of Maryland in session at Annapolis, October 29, 1776, it was ordered by a vote and resolve that this paragraph of the Virginia Constitution be read, and it was read and spread upon the minutes of the convention. Whereupon it was resolved "That this convention will on tomorrow resolve itself into a committee of the whole; to take the same into consideration." The following day, October 30, according to the order of the day, the objectionable paragraph was considered. After some time spent thereon the committee reported several resolutions by which the convention of the state of Maryland declared unanimously that Virginia had no title to any territory included in the charter granted to the baron of Baltimore, and that the waters of that part of the Chesapeake included in the charter ought to be considered as a common highway free for the people of the bordering states, and they further resolved unanimously:

That it is the opinion of this convention, that the very extensive claim of the state of Virginia to the back lands hath no foundation in justice, and that if the same or any like claim be admitted, the freedom of the smaller states and the liberties of America may be thereby greatly endangered; this convention being firmly persuaded, that if the dominion over these lands should be established by the blood and treasure of the United States, such lands ought to be considered as the common stock, to be parcelled out at proper times into convenient, free and independent governments.

It does not appear in the resolutions what means were contemplated by the convention of Maryland to bring this opinion to bear upon the "arrogance" of her neighbor, but within ten days of the passage of the resolutions, November 10th, to be exact, Maryland delegates were appointed in the convention to represent the state in Congress with expressed power "to concur with the other United States, or a majority of them, in forming a confederation, providing that such confederation, when formed, be not binding upon this state without the assent of the general assembly."

No one would be inclined to doubt that the Maryland delegation was sent to Congress charged with the responsibility of engrafting this principle of national disposition of the public territory upon the fundamental plan of confederacy then in process of formation at Philadelphia. There is no documentary commission to show this and the recorded proceedings of the state and congressional assemblies are so meagre and incomplete that inferences may not always be drawn from them with safety. But the steps taken by the Marylanders are so clear and distinct, both in the home assembly and in the general congress, that they indicate a settled plan to determine all matter of territorial ownership and boundaries before confederating with the claimant colonies.²

² The sentiments of Maryland thus vigorously expressed regarding the grasping disposition of Virginia, were inflamed at this time by misunderstanding of the offer of land for bounty in the raising of eighty-eight battalions of troops called for by the continental board of war in September, 1776. Considering this matter in October the convention formally resolved to raise the eight battalions assigned to Maryland, but, declining to countenance the promise of land where there was no land to give, substituted an offer of ten dollars cash for each enlistment in lien of the hundred acres pledged by Congress. This action evoked criticism in Congress, in the form of a resolution adopted October 30, the exact date of the Maryland resolves against the Virginia constitution, recommending a reconsideration of the cash bounty substitution, on the theory thus expressed:

It was not in the stated programme of Congress to introduce the land claims into the confederation debates. In fact it was the bounden duty of the leaders of Congress to exclude this subject from the discussion, as well as from the plan of confederacy, owing to primary considerations. No reference to the lands appears in the original Franklin sketch of a plan of government read in Congress, July 21, 1775. But in the committee's draft substituted a year later, a mode of treatment of indeterminate boundary lines and conflicting territorial land claims is provided. In this second draft there is a clause reading: "When the boundaries of any colony shall be ascertained by agreement all the other colonies shall guaranty to such colony the full and peaceable possession of, and the full and entire jurisdiction in, and over the territories included within such boundaries." And among the powers of Congress enumerated are the following:

Limiting the bounds of these colonies which, by charter or proclamation, or under any pretence, are said to extend to the south sea and ascertaining those bounds of any other colony that appear to be indeterminate: Assigning territories for new colonies, either in lands to be thus separated from colonies and hereafter purchased, or obtained by the crown of Great Britain from the Indians, or hereafter to be purchased or obtained from them: Disposing of all such lands for the general benefit of all the United Colonies: Ascertaining boundaries of such new colonies within which forms of government are to be estabhished on principles of liberty.

These clauses were not presented as a part of the committee's substitute. They were the ideas of Mr. Dickinson and were merely "submitted to congress," very likely on his own responsibility. They were probably not

That the said convention, by their said resolution, seem to apprehend that their state would be obliged, in their individual capacity, to make good the bounty of land hereafter to be given to the soldiery; whereas it was the intention of congress to provide the said land at the expense of the United States.

But this assurance served only to confuse Maryland. The convention took up the former resolution for raising the quota of troops, and "on a very deliberate and attentive consideration of the subject," came to certain resolutions, of the date of November 9, informing Congress of the precise opinion of Maryland on the offer of land, which are in part as follows:

If the hounty of iand should be offered as proposed to individuals of this quota, this state would be bound in good faith to see that bounty effectually granted, and therefore as this state has no lands belonging solely and exclusively to itself, with which to make good the bonnty, it is not only prodent, but necessary, before they do an act which will engage the faith of this state, to know what iand is to be applied, and on what terms, to the designated purpose.

That this convention are under the strongest impressions that the back lands claimed by the British Crown, if secured by the blood and treasure of all, ought in reason, justice, and policy, to be considered as common stock, to be parcelled out by congress into free, convenient, and independent governments, as the wisdom of that body shall hereafter direct; but if these (the only lands as this convention apprehend that can) should be provided by congress at the expense of the United States to make good the proferred bounties, every idea of their being a common stock must be therefore given up: some of the states may, by fixing their own price on the land, pay off what of their quots of the public debt they please, and have their extensive territory settled by the soldiery of the other states, whilst this state and a few others must be so weakened and impoverished, that they can hold their liberties only at the will of their powerful neighbors.

Under these impressions the Maryland convention issued instructions to the enlistment commissioners to repair to the camps and endeavor to enlist such troops and militia of the state as were willing to enter into the continental service on the terms proposed by Congress

... immediately on its being made known to them that the honourable congress will specify any land helonging to the United States as a common stock to be divided amongst the soldiery in their service... but if the honourable congress will not specify the lands as aforestid... they shall endeavour to effect the said enlistment on the bounty of twenty dollars allowed by congress; but they are not to engage the faith of this state to give or make good any bonuty of lands, or give any assurance whatsoever that they will have such bonuty.

Congress not being able to make such specification, and evidently wishing to avoid a discussion of the theory of land claims quieted the trouble of Maryland for the time being by an order dated November 13, instructing the president to inform the convention:

That if the inhabitants of that state will inlist to serve during the present war, they already have the faith of the United States of America pledged for the land.

considered by Congress and were promptly expunged from the draft. They do not appear again, nor anything like them anywhere in tentative or finished form. It was the settled policy of Congress to avoid the subject of the territories and this principle prevailed from first to last.

But the confederation discussions in Congress soon offered an opportunity for the Maryland delegation to interject the subject of western lands. The matter came up logically in the course of consideration of the draft of an article of the confederation relating to the powers of Congress. This discussion followed a prolonged debate on fixing a suitable criterion of taxation to meet the costs of war, a feature of the constitution that caused considerable trouble in the succeeding years. In the Franklin draft, framed in 1775, public money for war expenses was to be raised by a simple poll tax. But subsequent drafts elaborated the rule, enlarging its scope, and extending its application to cover back outlays for war expenses. When the article relating to taxation was taken up in its final discussion, October 9, 1777, further differences of opinion developed among the delegates; the population tax was dropped, and a general property tax was proposed. This was burning ground; expenditures of the individual colonies in the early stages of the war before Congress had introduced the general machinery of finance. This debate dragged along through four days' sessions and doubtless something was said that aroused the old grudge and stirred up the spirit of contention. The taxation debate terminated on the 14th of October in agreement on a form of Article VIII as it stands in the finished plan of confederacy, basing taxation on "the value of all land, within each state granted to or surveyed for any person, as such land the buildings and improvements thereon shall be estimated."8

In the next day's session, October 15, came the land question in the form of resolutions proposing national control of the western territory. The question may have come from the Maryland delegation, but this is not certain. Three resolutions were read in succession presenting the proposition in different forms. The authorship of the resolutions is not stated in the record, but it is probable that one, if not all, was the means adopted by the Marylanders for fulfilling their instructions from the convention issued the year before. The first resolution proposed:

That in order to render the present confederacy firm and perpetual, it is essential that the limits of each respective territorial jurisdiction should be ascertained by the articles of confederation, and therefore, it is recommended to the legislatures of every state to lay before Congress a description of the territorial lands of each of their respective states, and a summary of the grants, treaties and proofs upon which they are claimed or established.

It might be supposed that this reasonable proposition would have gained the support of the smaller colonies whose interests it especially favored, but on this occasion, as throughout the controversy, the smaller states were not united. New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and New Jersey opposed the resolution, while New York, Pennsylvania, and Maryland supported it.

²The rule of taxation provided for in Article VIII of the confederation proved to be inconvenient and uncertain, especially in its retrospective application. The states could not come to terms in regard to what early expenditures ought to be allowed by Congress and paid out of the public treasury. In consequence Article VIII was presented to Congress for amendment and a substitute was submitted to the states for ratification in April, 1783, by which the abandoned population tax was restored, but in a modified form. This was the first attempt to change the fundamental law of the Union, and in it may be found some interesting and suggestive traces of the color line and sectionalism.

Delaware and Georgia were not represented, and the vote stood eight to three. No division is given in the record of vote on the second amendment, and the third received the solitary support of Maryland, the vote of New Jersey being divided. Following are the second and third amendments:

The United States in Congress assembled shall have the sole and exclusive right and power to ascertain and fix the western boundary of such states as claim to the South Sea, and to dispose of all land beyond the boundary so ascertained, for the benefit of the United States.

The United States in Congress assembled shall have the sole and exclusive right and power to ascertain and fix the western boundary of such states as claim to the Mississippi or South Sea, and lay out the land beyond the boundary so ascertained into separate and independent states, from time to time, as the numbers and circumstances of the people thereof may require.

There is nothing in the record to show how these three resolutions were received by Congress, although it appears that they were handled without much "consideration" or discussion. Probably the three amendments were summarily rejected in succession with little or no debate. There was some complaint of this mode of Congressional procedure in the subsequent controversy, and it is recorded afterwards, relative to similar propositions, that "they involved questions, the discussion of which was declined on mature consideration when the articles of confederation were debated." Virginia pointed out the inconsistency of this doctrine with the principles upon which the boundaries of the United States were described in an ultimatum in the terms of peace soon afterwards placed in negotiation with England:

The United States could hold no territory but in right of some one individual state in the Union. Any argument fairly urged to prove that any particular tract of country, within the limits claimed by Congress on behalf of the United States, is not a part of the chartered territory of some one of them, must militate with equal force against the right of the United States in general; and tend to prove such tract of country (if northwest of the Ohio river) part of the British province of Canada.⁶

It would be idle to conjecture as to the effect of those resolutions had they gone into the plan of confederation. It might be that the confines of the United States would have been at the mountains, as Virginia suggested would be the case, and the region between the Great Lakes and the Ohio might have remained until now a part of the Dominion of Canada. The only appreciable effect of their introduction at this time was in the action

Herbert B. Adams, in his Maryland's Inflnence in Founding a National Commonwealth, a pamphlet published by the Maryland Historical Society, 1877, credits the third amendment of October 15, 1777, to Maryland. He states, in italics, by way of proof: "Only Maryland voted in the affirmative," but offers no other support of the assertion. Mr. Adams adds: "But in this motion was suggested that idea of political expansion under sovereign control of Congress, which ultimately prevailed and constituted upon grounds of necessity, a truly National Republic: Not only the suggestion of a firm lasting union upon the basis of a territorial commonwealth, but the chief influence in founding such a union, must be ascribed to Maryland.... The original proposition that Congress should exercise sovereign power over the western country was a pioneer thought, or, as the Germans say a bahnrechende Idee" (p. 28). This interesting suggestion might have been made with equal warrant respecting the earlier Maryland expression, the opinion of the Annapolis convention pronounced October 30, 1776; if not indeed of the Virginia Constitution of May, 1776, which carried the idea of ultra-montane territorial dependencies afterwards elaborated in the Ordinance of 1787.

which followed. The larger states took alarm from this attack upon their cherished rights, and they voted to insert in the draft a clause which does not appear in any earlier form, an addition to Article IX, reading: "No state shall be deprived of territory for the benefit of the United States." The claimant states placed this in the law of the confederacy on October 27, by which they alarmed others of the smaller colonies and laid the basis for subsequent loss of the territory they sought to safeguard.

The plan of confederation as finally agreed upon in Congress, Saturday, November 15, 1777, contained no reference to vacant land, or western boundaries except the saving clause introduced at the last to satisfy the larger states. No time was lost in placing the plan before the thirteen states for conclusion. The articles of confederation were revised and arranged, and three hundred copies were printed. A circular letter addressed to the states to accompany the articles of confederation was prepared by a committee appointed to the task. Thirteen copies of the letter were made out and signed by the president of Congress, and on Monday, November 17, these two documents were transmitted to the executive authorities of the several states. The letter of address is a dignified plea to hasten the conclusion of confederation. The articles were earnestly recommended to the immediate and dispassionate attention of the legislatures, with expressions of apology for expecting that any plan should exactly correspond with the maxims and political views of every particular state, regret at the time which had elapsed in preparing the plan for consideration, and solicitude as to the time which must be necessarily spent before it can be ratified. The legislatures were recommended "to invest their delegates with powers to subscribe articles of confederation, and to attend congress for that purpose on or before the 10th day of March next."

The states received the plan and address early in December, in ample time for the necessary action in the assemblies before the day set for ratification in Congress. But it does not seem that they were especially affected by the urgent plea for haste. Virginia alone made prompt reply. The general assembly of that state complied immediately with all recommendations of the address. Without stopping for debate, and without division, each house of the assembly approved the articles and ratified them with resolutions calling for speedy conclusion of confederation. The enabling act of Virginia bears date of December 16, 1777, scarce a month from the date of the address. Surely the Old Dominion was well satisfied with the plan. Other states were not so well pleased. They were all as anxious for confederacy and union as a means of ending the war, but they were not in a hurry to ratify. Most of the states found fault with the plan. They framed objections calling for amendments, and forwarded them to their delegates for presentation to Congress. Several states waited long for changes to be made. The responses of the legislatures show the extent and nature of the dissatisfaction with the terms proposed for confederaton.

The date set for ratification, March 10, 1778, was permitted to pass by without the ceremony called for in the programme. Not enough delegates had received the expected powers and instructions, called for in the letter of address, to justify an attempt to proceed with confederation, and so matters drifted along while the states deliberated. Information travelled slowly then and people were not so ready to spread news. Georgia, for example, took action on the plan of confederation in February, and the result of the action was not reported until the 23d of July. But it must have been known among the delegates that objections had been raised in many of the legislatures against the plan proposed, and no doubt much anxiety was felt as to the fate of confederacy.

Congress, then in session at Yorktown, was not disposed to begin the canvas of accumulating objections until forced into considering them by the sudden demands of the Maryland delegation. Fresh instructions just received from home called for immediate notice. The general assembly of Maryland on Saturday the 20th of June, 1778, resolved:

That the delegates from this state to Congress consider themselves bound by the instructions given in October session last, and that they endeavor to procure from Congress an explicit answer to the propositions therein contained; but that they do not at any time consider themselves at liberty to ratify or confirm any confederation of perpetual friendship and union, until they have communicated such answer to the general assembly of this state and shall receive their express authority to do so.

The next Monday, June 22, after the issue of these explicit instructions, Congress having proceeded to consider the objections to the articles of confederation, the delegates from Maryland read to Congress these instructions and moved "that the objections from the state of Maryland be immediately taken up and considered by congress, that the delegates from Maryland may transmit to that state, with all possible despatch, the determination of congress on those objections." The motion being put and resolved in the affirmative, three objections of Maryland were read and voted upon out of the regular order of roll call, which should have begun with New Hampshire.

The canvas of returns from the legislatures of the thirteen states as recorded in the Journals of Congress under dates of June 22 to 26, 1778, shows only three states approving of the articles "as they now stand," New Hampshire, New York and Virginia. A fourth had likewise approved, but the official report from North Carolina did not arrive until after the canvas was concluded. Objections had been received by delegates of eight states and Delaware was still to be heard from. South Carolina sent twenty-three alterations, and Rhode Island, "having had the articles repeatedly read, and having maturely weighed and most seriously deliberated upon them as their importance deserves," sent along three amendments, with powers to her delegates "to accede to and sign the articles provided they be acceded to by eight of the other states." The objections were numerous and scattering. They were mostly in the form of verbal changes of little, if any, interest to-day. The more important criticism came from four states in the form of a presentment against the land policy of the claimant states.

The method of consideration applied by Congress to these objections deserves a passing notice. According to the records in the Journals of Congress parts of three days in the midst of other business served to dispose of them all. Very little time was given to the separate objections. The roll was called geographically, except that Maryland came first, and the objections from the state called were read by the delegates. Sometimes there was debate, but debate was slow. One elaborate series of objections pertaining to widely different features of the confederation were grouped into one motion and cast out by a single division. Another set of belated objections were, apparently, disregarded entirely. In this fashion the business was rushed through, and on the third day Congress was able to report that the articles, "after mature deliberation, had been adopted, without amendment."

^{*}Massachusetts and Connecticut expressed their dissatisfaction with the article relating to taxation. The former proposed "That the rule of apportionment of taxation be varied from time to time, until experience shall have showed what rule of apportionment will be most equal and consequently just." Connecticut asked to change the basis of taxation from the lands to "the number of inhabitants in each state."

Two of the objections filed by the Maryland delegates do not concern this inquiry as they pertain to other matters, but the third brought up the contention on the land question in still another form. By this an explanation was called for of the obnoxious safety clause in Article 1x. The Maryland assembly expressed dissatisfaction with this clause and demanded the addition of the following:

The United States in Congress assembled shall have the power to appoint commissioners, who shall be fully authorized and empowered to ascertain and restrict the boundaries of such of the confederated states which claim to extend to the river Mississippi, or South Sea.

This amendment received attention during two sessions of Congress, and although it failed of passage the solitary vote of Maryland, recorded in the former division, was recruited by the support of Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware. Had New Hampshire stood by her weaker sisters on this occasion the amendment would have carried, as North Carolina was not then represented in Congress and New York's vote was divided.

Rhode Island and New Jersey both sent objection to the clause "no state shall be deprived of territory for the benefit of the United States," based on the theory that this inhibition might be construed as intending the crown lands, which indeed was the very purpose of the insertion. The legislature of Rhode Island asked for an explanatory addition to the clause to prevent such construction, in these words:

Provided, nevertheless, that all lands within those states, the property of which before the present war was vested in the crown of Great Britain, or ont of which revennes from quit-rents arise, payable to the said crown, shall be deemed, taken, and considered, as the property of the United States; and be disposed of and appropriated by Congress, for the benefit of the whole confederacy, reserving, however, to the states within whose limits such crown lands may be, the entire and complete jurisdiction thereof.

The New Jersey objections appear in a Representation of the Legislative Council and General Assembly of that state, an impressive document consisting of a series of remarks arranged in nine numbered paragraphs, each item a criticism of some point in the confederation, with an alteration suggested, and argument supporting the proposed changes. The New Jersey criticisms cover a wide range of ideas, but two of the paragraphs deal with land matters. The first suggests that the boundaries and limits of each state ought to be fully and finally fixed and made known as a means of preventing jealousies and controversies and promoting harmony and confidence among the states. If this could not be done before the proposal of confederation, the principles ought to be established beforehand upon which the determination might be conducted at an early period, not exceeding five years from the final ratification of the confederation. The New Jersey reference to the meaning of "territory" in the prohibitive clause inquires

Whether we are to understand that by territory is intended any land, the property of which was heretofore vested in the crown of Great Britain, or that no mention of such land is made in the confederation, we are constrained to observe, that the present war, as we always apprehended, was undertaken for the general defence and interest of the confederating colonies, now the United States. It was ever the confident expectation of this state, that the benefits derived from a successful contest were to be general and proportionate: and that the property of the common enemy, falling in consequence of a prosperous issue of the war, would belong to the United States, and be appropriated to their use. We are therefore greatly disappointed in finding no provision made in the confederation for empowering the Congress to dispose of such property, but especially the vacant and impatented lands, commonly called the crown lands, for defraying the expenses of the war, and for such other publick and general purposes. The jurisdiction ought in every instance to belong to the respective states within the charter or determined limits of which such lands may be seated; but reason and justice must decide, that the property which existed in the crown of Great Britain, previous to the present revolution, ought now to belong to the Congress, in trust for the use and benefit of the United States. They have fought and bled for it in proportion to their respective abilities; and therefore the reward ought not to be predilectionally distributed. Shall such states as are shut out by situation from availing themselves of the least advantage from this quarter, be left to sink under an enormous debt, while others are enabled, in a short period, to replace all their expenditures from the hard earnings of the whole confederacy?

The dignified form of the New Jersey objections, to say nothing of their serious import, deserved from Congress the most careful consideration of the several points raised against the articles of confederation; but the document, apparently, received even less attention than was accorded to others of much scantier significance. The representation was adopted at Trenton on the 16th of June. It was laid before Congress in the canvas of objections on Tuesday, June 23, and taken into consideration on Thursday. Upon the reading of the paper it was moved "that the several articles in the confederation referred to in the foregoing representation be so far reconsidered as to admit the purport and meaning of the additions, alterations and amendments proposed." There was no discussion of the motion nor of the merits of the separate items. They were not debated seriatim as in the case of other states. The entire set of nine objections was cast out by a single blanket motion to reconsider, on which the record stands: "Question put, Passed in the negative. Three ayes, six noes, one divided."

This rapid manner of disposing of objections brought the congressional canvas of returns from the thirteen states to a close by night of the third session, 10 but the confederation was not concluded with the expedition planned. Not one objection had been sustained. The plan as finished in November was enacted without change in June. All that remained was ratification by subscriptions in Congress to the Act of Confederation at the hands of the authorized delegates of the respective states. Preparations were made speedily for accomplishing this in a ceremonious manner. The 4th of July was approaching, and Congress had ordered adjournment to Philadelphia, where on the sabbath day they were to appear in a body in church, and participate in the celebration planned for the second anniversary of the birth of independence. Confederation might well be concluded on the natal day. But there were slips in the programme. The act of confederation and form of ratification agreed upon were elegantly engrossed on a roll of parchment, with spaces ruled in double column for signatures of states in geographical order. The parchment "was laid before congress Saturday, June 27, but the same upon examination being found incorrect, it was ordered that another copy be made, and laid before congress on or before the 4th of July next." In the confusion of adjournment, or for other reason, the day passed without the subscriptions, and the signatures were not called for until the 9th day of July, in the third year of inde-

But these were merely temporary interruptions, the serious difficulty developed at the ceremony of subscription. Eight states ratified the act of confederation, spaces for five state signatures remained vacant on the roll. Delegates of four states waived objections, disregarding specific instructions from their constituency, and signed the engrossment. North Carolina and Georgia, whose legislatures had voted to ratify, did not sign the roll as "they were not at this time represented in congress." When called upon to endorse the parchment as others had done "the delegates from the state of New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland informed congress that they had not yet received powers to ratify and sign." 11 So the ceremony failed, and confederation was doomed to wait while Congress took measures for persuading the refractory legislatures. A committee was ordered to prepare a circular letter to the backward states, "informing them how many and what states have already ratified, and desiring that they will authorize their delegates to ratify the confederation with all convenient despatch."

The second appeal of congress, issued under date of July 10, 1778, repeats the plea of immediate necessity of confederation, so earnestly employed "Influenced by considerations so powerful, in the November address. and duly weighing the difficulties . . . Congress have, after mature deliberation, agreed to adopt without amendments the confederation transmitted to the several states for their approbation. The states of New Hampshire. Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina12 and South Carolina, have ratified the same, and it remains only with your state to conclude the glorious compact . . . trusting to future deliberations to make such alterations and amendments, as experience may show to be expedient and just."

Two of the remaining states complied with this request, but not without considerable reluctance. New Jersey acted November 20, and Delaware on the 1st of February following. Coupled with the official instructions issued to the delegates of these states were resolutions of the respective legislatures, in almost the same words, disapproving of the articles of confederation "as unequal and disadvantageous to this state;" declaring "the objections lately stated and sent to the general congress are still viewed as just and reasonable, and sundry of them as of the most essential moment to the welfare and happiness of the good people of the state;" and protesting that they ratified "under the full conviction of the present necessity of acceding to the confederacy proposed, and of postponing every separate and detached state interest to the general good of the union, and, moreover, in firm reliance that the candour and justice of the several states, will in due time, remove as far as possible, the inequalities which now subsist." The objections mentioned in the Delaware protest were adopted by the legislature a few days previous to the passage of the powers of ratification. It was then rather late for objection, but Delaware had been slow in dealing with the plan, which was not taken up by the council at Dover until the 3d of December, 1778. At that time the second call for speedy ratification was also in hand. Still there was delay to accommodate the Senate which "was desirous of knowing the sentiments of the people on a subject so materially affecting their interests." Objections were formulated and adopted, and a few days later the resolutions of ratification were passed. Thus there were two sets of resolutions on confederation forwarded as credentials to the delegates of Delaware; first, the objections of January 28, which were directed against the land policy on the same basis as the Maryland objections, and second, the powers for ratification issued to the delegates with the protest of February 1. The presentation of the Delaware credentials caused a stir in Congress. The powers for ratification were lodged with the secretary February 16, 1779, and the roll was signed for Delaware on February 22d. The following day the delegate of Delaware laid before congress the objections to the articles of confederation declaring in favor of absolute national control of the western limits of the claimant states; and national disposition of the extensive tract of country which lies to the westward of the frontiers of the United States. On which it was

Resolved, That the paper laid before congress by the delegate of Delaware and read, be filed; provided, that it shall never be considered as admitting any claim by the same set up or intended to be set up.¹³

Meanwhile the signatory states waited with more or less impatience for the disaffected ones to close the circle of confederacy and put an end to the growing embarrassment of congress. The open discord among the states and the uncertainty of their confederating were regarded as the principal causes of the prolonging of the war. Most of the blame for the delay rested on Maryland, but Virginia, whose pretentions had excited the first criticism, did not escape censure. Agitation of the land question gave the Virginians much concern, as the delay in confederating interfered with certain plans of the commonwealth respecting the back lands. Already the Old Dominion had moved to occupy their ultra-montane claims. At this critical moment large grants of lands were being made by the Virginia Assembly to speculators, and wide areas in the disputed territory designated for distribution exclusively to the Virginia soldiery. Whilst the eleventh state was still pondering on this point of union, and without the slightest consideration for the rights of other claimants, Virginia assumed sole possession of everything westward of the Ohio River, and passed an act extending the dominion of the commonwealth, in setting up a sub-administration across the Ohio, to the uncertain limits of the Illinois. Further delay in the Union of states might imperil these ambitious enterprises. The time had come to force the obstructing members to the terms of confederation. Thus conceiving, the Virginia assembly issued instructions to their delegates. in Congress to propose a partial confederacy "of so many states as shall be willing." Such a scheme seemed certain to bring in the procrastinators, or it might, perchance, result in the dissolution of the last refractory state, and the possible distribution of the Calvert domain among the abutting colonies. This act passed the assembly, December 18, 1778, but it was not made public in Congress for several months. It was followed, April 7, after Delaware's ratification, by powers issued to the Connecticut delegates to accede to a confederation of twelve states, omitting Maryland. This action also was kept from the records, although known unofficially. Evidently it was the plan to bring these acts into operation at a favorable moment. But Maryland was prepared. Early in December she took action that turned public approval in her favor, shifted the burden of blame to Virginia, and made the first advance towards surrender of the territorial lands claim beyond the Ohio.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

By GEO. A. GORDON, A.M., Recording Secretary

Boston, Massachusetts, ¹ December, ¹⁹⁰⁹. A stated meeting of the New England Historic Genealogical Society was held at Pilgrim Hall, ¹⁴ Beacon Street, at 2.30 p. m., President Baxter presiding.

In the absence of Captain Gordon, John Albree was chosen Recording Secretary pro tempore.

The minutes of the November meeting were read and approved as records.

Rev. George Hodges, D.D., D.C.L., Dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, read a paper on The Hanging of Mary Dyer, in which he told the story of her life from the time when she openly expressed sympathy with Anne Hutchinson, then suffering under the displeasure of the authorities, to her death on Boston Common at the Old Elm, a death she sought as a protest against the law and against the spirit that prompted it.

Rev. Anson Titus spoke on the evidence as to the Quakers in the files of Suffolk County, though many of the papers through neglect have become illegible. Upon his motion a vote was passed tendering the thanks of the Society to Dean Hodges for reading his paper, including a request for a copy of it for the archives of the Society.

Rev. Thomas William Silloway stated that the tree now growing on the site of the Old Elm is not a scion of that tree, as the scion, which was growing before the Old Elm was blown down in 1876, was moved to another place, and the present tree planted.

An intermission was then taken and refreshments were served. On the resumption of business, Mr. Cunningham presided at the request of President Baxter.

The reports of the Librarian, the Historian and the Council were severally read, accepted, and ordered on file.

The list of candidates for membership was read, and a ballot ordered and taken, by which seven resident members were elected.

The report of the Nominating Committee was read and accepted.

On motion, it was Voted,—That the Chair appoint a committee of three in memoriam George Sumner Mann, and Charles French Read, Charles Sidney Ensign, and Charles Knowles Bolton were appointed.

The Chair under the By-laws appointed two auditors: Hosea Starr Ballou and Henry Edwards Scott, and the action was confirmed by vote.

On motion of William Carver Bates it was Voted,—That a committee be appointed to consider the location of the scion of the Old Elm and to report thereon. The Chair appointed William Carver Bates, Thomas William Silloway, and Charles French Read as the committee. The meeting then dissolved.

5 January, 1910. A stated meeting of the New England Historic Genealogical Society was held at Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon Street, at 2.30 P.M., President Baxter presiding.

In the absence of Captain Gordon, John Albree was chosen Recording Secretary pro tempore.

The minutes of the December meeting were read and approved as records.

Worthington Chauncey Ford, A.M., of Boston, read a paper entitled Massachusetts Bay and its foreign relations, 1630-1650, in which he showed that the first settlers were not isolated but in a centre of great activity. He analyzed the relations existing with other peoples and other nations and explained how essential is the understanding of the trade relations in studying the history of these early decades.

President Baxter told of finding among the English Records a petition, dated about 1640, asking that the exportation of wool cards to the colonies be prohibited. On this the law officer had made the endorsement that "Englishmen carry their rights with them," and that the petition was therefore denied.

On motion of William Carver Bates it was Voted.—That the thanks of the Society be extended to Mr. Ford for the enjoyment derived from his reading of this paper, and that if the paper be in print. a copy be requested for the use of the Society.

After an intermission for refreshments, on the resumption of business. Mr.

Cunningham presided at the request of President Baxter.

Reports of the Corresponding Secretary, Librarian, Historian, and Council were severally read, accepted, and ordered on file.

The list of candidates for membership was read, and a ballot ordered taken. - by which eight resident members were elected.

The committee in memoriam George Sumner Mann through its Chairman. Charles F. Read, offered the following report which was accepted, ordered spread upon the minutes, and a copy to be sent to the family of Mr. Mann:

The New England Historic Genealogical Society desires to enter on its records an appreciation of the life and services of George Sumner Mann, a member, who died at his home in Brookline, Mass., October 27, 1909, at the age of seventy-five years.

Mr. Mann was a Boston merchant for many years, and retired from business in 1878 to devote his time to the care of trust property and real estate.

Becoming interested in the study of genealogy, he compiled and published in 1884 the Mann Memorial, which is a record of the descendants of Richard Mann.

It was, therefore, natural that he should become interested in the New Eugland Historic Genealogical Society. He was elected a life member in 1881 and served on several important committees, and was a member of the Council of the Society from 1897 to 1899.

He was an interested and valued member, and by his excellent advice and counsel added much to the material welfare of the Society.

The report of the Committee on the Old Elm was read by William Carver Bates, the chairman, and on motion of Walter Kendall Watkins, it was Voted,—That the report be accepted, that a copy be sent to the City Council of Boston with a request that stone monuments be placed at the trees, as recommended, and that the report be sent to the Committee on Publications for publication in the REGISTER.

Rev. Thomas William Silloway read a letter from Hon. Thomas N. Hart, formerly Mayor of Boston, confirming the statements in the report.

A supplemental report of the Nominating Committee was accepted. The meeting then dissolved.

By JOHN ALBREE, Recording Secretary

26 January. The annual meeting of the Society was held this day, agreeable to article 1, chapter III, of the By-laws; for a report of which see the Supplement to the present number of the REGISTER.

2 February. A stated meeting of the Society was held at Pilgrim Hall, 14

Beacon Street, at 2.30 P. M., President Baxter presiding.

The minutes of the meeting of January 5th and of the annual meeting were read and approved.

Rev. Charles Edwards Park, minister of the First Church, Boston, read a paper entitled Two Ruling Elders of the First Church in Boston, Thomas Leverett and Thomas Oliver. After showing that the purpose of the founders of the Colony was to reproduce here the church of Apostolic times with the Book of Acts and the Pauline Epistles as the infallible rule, the speaker described its development in the manner adopted for the choice of church officials and for defining their duties. This was further illustrated in the lives of Leverett and Oliver.

On motion it was Voted,-That the thanks of the Society be extended to Rev. Mr. Park for the pleasure and the instruction derived from his paper, with a request that the historical material he had presented might be made available in permanent form.

After the usual intermission for refreshments, the meeting was again called to order and the reports of the Corresponding Secretary, the Librarian, the Historian and the Council were severally accepted.

The list of candidates for membership was read, and a ballot ordered taken, by which five resident members were elected.

There being no further business the meeting then dissolved.

NOTES

HALL, DAY.—At the foot of an "Acct. Current John Day & Wm. Hall," dated Marshfield, Apr. 3, 1805, is the following receipt: "then Recd. of John Day a Silver Watch, Pocket Book and 2 Dolars in full for the Property of my son the Late Wm Hall Who Dyed at Portsmouth Sept. 15, 1803 When belonging to the Barke Columbia of Boston, John Day master. Witness my hand," etc. Braintree, Mass. FRANK A. BATES.

TAYER (THAYER) FAMILY .- (REGISTER, vol. 60, pp. 290-1.) The "Gloucestershire Parish Registers," vol. xv, containing "Marriages at Thornbury," England, recently issued by Phillimore & Co. of London, show that Jane the mother of Margery Wheeller (who married Thomas Tayer and came to New England) was Jane Shepherd, and that she married Abel Whillar, or Wheeller, at Thornbury 15 Jan. 1588; also that William Mortimer's "late wife Margaret" was probably the Margaret Groome who married William Martimore, or Mortimer, at Thornbury 21 Apr. 1623, and consequently not the mother of his daughter Dorothy (who married Richard Tayer the emigrant to New England)

It is interesting to note, apropos of the mention of John Hemminge of the Globe Theatre Company (p. 282), that a John Hemminge and July Bearde were married at Thornbury 23 Nov. 1612. HENRY E. WOODS. Boston, Mass.

Hobbs, Page.—The following memoranda from the Register of St. Bartholomew's Parish Church, Crewkerne, co. Somerset, may be worth preserving. They were sent me by my friend, Sir Robert White-Thomson, of Broomford Manor, in Devon, who had the Crewkerne register examined for me; and, though not legally attested, are signed by John England, Parish Clerk. A comparison of them with the will of Col. Nicholas Paige of Rumney Marsh will show that beyond reasonable doubt, Richard and Elizabeth Hobbes of Crewkerne were the parents of Sarah Hobbes, second wife of Capt. John Gerrish of Boston, and of Martha Hobbes, wife of Nathaniel Oliver.

"Richard Hobbes & Elizabeth Page were married in the Parish Church, June 13th, 1671

"The following children of above Richard and Elizabeth Hobbes were Baptized:

John July 11th 1673 Margaret Oct 20 1674 [The Margaret Ferguson of Col. Paige's will. B. W.] [Mrs. John Jerrish, of Boston. Married, I think, at Rumney Marsh. The record of date is lost. B.W.] Sarah Nov. 14th 1676

Elizabeth Oct 4th, 1683." A subsequent note from Crewkerne, in the handwriting of the clerk, reads: "Have found the following entry: James Hatter and Late wife of Nicholas Paige married Sept 20 1567"

This clearly shows that the ancestors of Colonel Nicholas Paige of Rumney Marsh were resident in Crewkerne, Somerset, in the time of Queen Elizabeth. 358 Marlborough Street, Boston, Mass. BARRETT WENDELL.

BOWMAN, FORBUSH.—Attention is drawn to the fact that the Westborough, Mass., Vital Records give the marriage of James Bowman and Thankful Forbush on 16 Mar. 1731, and the births of all the children of James and Thankful.

In Bond's History of Watertown, this marriage and these children are credited to Joseph Bowman, the elder brother, both sons of Joseph, Francis, Nathaniel. Mr. F. C. Pierce in his Forbush Genealogy, 1892, page 25, copies Bond's state-

The following papers were found in the Worcester probate records:

1. Administration on estate of James Bowman of Westborough; bond dated Feb. 1762; his son Joseph appointed administrator; no mention of widow.
 Guardianship of Thankful, daughter of James Bowman, aged 11 years; bond is dated 28 April 1764; Solomon Mathis guardian.

These seem to corroborate the statement that it was James and not Joseph Bowman who married Thankful Forbush. Solomon Mathis married, in 1758, Lydia, the eldest daughter of James and Thankful (Forbush) Bowman. ful Forbush, daughter of James Bowman, was born in Westborough 17 April 1753, which would make her 11 years old in 1764. The administration papers show that both James and his wife died previous to 15 Feb. 1742.

HENRY D. WOODS. West Newton, Mass.

HALE, DOWSETT, KIRBY, CRANFIELD.—"This completes the record of the English origin and connections of the emigrant Thomas' Hale of Newbury, so far as known or likely ever to be known. . . . The maiden name, parentage and birth-place of Thomasine, wife of Thomas' Hale, are all undiscovered, and likely to remain so, unless by accidental discovery through some records of her own family." Thus wrote the historian of the Hale family, the late Hon. Robert S. Hale of Elizabethtown, N. Y., in 1881 (vide ante, vol. 35, p. 375).

The following item, which adds the maiden name and date of marriage of Thomasine, was brought to my attention a year or two ago by that veteran of Thomasine, was brought to my attention a year or two ago by that veteran or English research, Henry F. Waters:

"1632 Dec. 11 Thomas Hall of Watton, apud Stone, Co. Hertford, glover and Thomazin Dowsett, maiden; p. lycense" (Registers of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, London, Harl. Soc., p. 133, Marriages).
The conclusions of the family historian are still further upset by the following items taken from the marriage records of Watton as published in volume II of Phillimore's Hertfordshire Parish Registers marriages.

"Thomas Haille & Joane Kirbie 19 Oct. 1601" "John Kirbie & Joane Cranfeilde 23 Dec. 1576" (p. 85).

These records add the date of marriage of Thomas' Hale's parents, the date of marriage of his maternal grandparents, supply the Christian name of the maternal grandfather, and the maiden name of the maternal grandmother.

WEYMOUTH RECORD.—The following ancient record, found by me among the early records of Suffolk County, must be of interest to historians, especially to those who have given attention to the early history of the old town of Weymouth. DUNSTER.—On page 188 of the April, 1907, REGISTER, Elizabeth Dunster, seventh child of Henry³ Dunster (Henry, Robert¹), is mentioned as being baptized 15 July 1632, and married at Cambridge, 9 Dec. 1653, to Benanuel Bowers. In the copy of the letters or diary of Ann (Clay) Bolton, she says: "My grand mothers name was Elizabeth Dunster. She was born in Lancashire in Old England, but her Parents dying when she was young, her Unkle Dunster, who was himself at that time President of the College in New England, sent for her thither and discharged his duty to her not only in that of a kind Unkle, but a good Christian & tender Father. By all reports, he was a man of great wisdom, exemplary piety, and peculiar sweetness of temper."

"As for my much honored Grand-Mother I believe few if any merited more the character of a virtuous woman, according as she is described by the wise man, in Proverbs Chap. 37 from verse the 10th to the end. There be yet living some worthy persons who were well acquainted with her, and who can say, that nothwithstanding all the calamities that befel them from the tyranny of cruel persecutors, and other common accidents of life, she remained during her life, which was to the age of sixty a crown to her husband and the glory of him and his family to the day of her death. As to her person I well remember her she was of middle stature, comely aspect and something so graceful in her speech and behaviour, that at all times she commanded both love and awe. She was the wife only of one man. As she was in my Grandfathers life time so she remained after his death, well reported for good works."

This letter is dated 15 Nov. 1738. Ann Bolton the author, born 15 Nov. 1690, was the daughter of Winlock Curtis and Ann Bowers (daughter of Benanuel Bowers and wife Elizabeth Dunster). She married first, 16 Dec. 1710, Robert Clay who was lost at sea in 1716. She then married Robert Bolton, 19 Feb. 1721, and died 5 May, 1747. This letter of hers does not agree with the Register account in the following respects:

1. Mrs. Bolton well remembers her grandmother who, if she was baptized 15 July 1632, died about 1692, when Mrs. Bolton was about two years old.

2. Mrs. Bolton says her grandmother outlived her grandfather who is supposed to have died in May 1698.

3. President Dunster in his will caus ner consider that time often meaning other degrees of relationship.

Perhaps the author of the article in the REGISTER may be able to reconcile it

W. NELSON MAYHEW.

117 East Mt. Pleasant Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

[Note.—From the above diary it would seem that Elizabeth (Dunster) Bowers was a niece of President Dunster. As she married Bowers in 1653 it is extremely unlikely that niceo of President Dunster. As she married Bowers in 1653 it is extremely unlikely that she was born after 1637. The most likely chance would be that she was a daughter of Robert's Dunster (brother of the president) and born between the date of his second marriage, 27 Sept. 1636, and the date of baptism of his daughter Bethia, 9 Dec. 1638. If so she would have been a sister of Faith (Dunster) Page, also called "cousin" by the president. Of the other brothers of the president, Richard Dunster, bapt. 23 Mar. 1616-17, must have married at 19 to have been her father; and we infer from the letter of President Dunster's father in 1640 that the children of Thomas Dunster were then all dead all dead.

It does not appear certain at just what time between 1693 and 1698 Benanuel Bowers died. If he lived to May 1698 his wife must have attained to a greater age than 60 in order to have survived him.—J. G. BARTLETT.]

SMITHS OF CHATHAM, MASS.—The records of the Congregational Church at Chatham, Mass., were burned in 1861, when the parsonage was destroyed, and no copy of them is known to exist. The following extracts from these records, made many years ago and now in the possession of the undersigned, are therefore of value and worthy of preservation. REGISTER VAGARIES .-- In connection with the use of the Index of Persons in volume 1 to 50 of the REGISTER, the discovery was made of a second edition of the January 1850 number of the REGISTER (vol. 4), with results seriously affecting the indexing of pages 19 to 24, inclusive, The Index of Persons was based on the first edition—hence apparent errors of reference so far as the second edition is concerned. The addition of new material to Nash's "Records of Saybrook, Ct.," beginning on page 19, and inserted without any reference to the fact, is responsible for the trouble.

In the first edition the "Records of Saybrook, Ct.," and on page 21; in the second on page 22. In the first edition "First Ancestor of the Chipmans in N. England" begins on page 22; in the second on page 23. The "Letter of Henry Wolcott," bappearing on page 23 of the first edition, is omitted entirely from the second edition. The space left on page 24 of the first edition is occupied by "Additions and Corrections to the First Settlers of Barnstable," while in the second edition it is taken by the "Epitaph of Stephen Farrar."d

The following list of persons includes those additional names appearing in the second edition of the January 1850 REGISTER, pages 19 to 24, inclusive, and such names as occurred on a different page in the first edition:

In the earlier volumes of the REGISTER it was customary to stitch in or paste in any plate (or plates), to accompany the number, opposite the first page of the text, irrespective of the position it (or they) should occupy when bound up. When two plates were furnished they were usually placed face to face, with tissue paper between them, at the beginning of a number, and are frequently to be found in this position in bound volumes owing to the absence of any binding instructions. HISTORICAL INTELLIGENCE

ARCHIBALD, ARCHBALD, ARCHBOLD.—William Charles Archibald, 1 Myrtle St., Boston, Mass, is compiling a list of all of the name living in the United States and Canada, with a view of ultimately publishing historical and genealogical data of the family. He solicits correspondence.

EATON FAMILY ASSOCIATION .- Owing to deaths among its officers the association has become inactive. With the idea of reviving it Mr. Amos H. Eaton, Middleborough, Mass., desires to correspond with those interested in the association's existence.

BARTLETT.-Mrs. Sarah D. Cropley, Marblehead, Mass., is preparing a Bartlett Family Pedigree. This family shows descent from Capt. Robert Bartlett of Frampton, Eng., Dunstable and Marblehead, Mass. The pedigree will record notes of connected families of Adams, Andrews, Barker, Cruff (Craft), Deacon, Dennis, Diamond, Fetterplace, Gridler, Green, Hooper, Malcom, Nicholson, Parker, Pearce (Pierce), Pitman, Proctor, Read (Reade), Roals, Stevens, Trefry, Walton, White, Wooldbridge, and other alliances.

HISTORY OF KING'S COUNTY, N. S.—Rev. Arthur Wentworth Hamilton Eaton, D. C. L., is to publish "The History of King's Connty, Nova Scotia," this spring. The work, which will run to about 700 pages, will contain a large amount of genealogical information of interest to both Americans and Nova Scotians. For particulars address the anthor, care of the Salem Press Company, Salem, Mass.

ESSEX COUNTY COURT RECORDS.—The Essex Institute proposes to publish the records and files of the Quarterly Courts of Essex County, Massachusetts, provided a sufficient number of subscriptions be secured to warrant the undertaking. These records, and the accompanying files containing the abstracts of testimony, depositions, and other papers used in the original trials, date from 1634, and are of inestimable value to the historian, genealogist and sociologist. This collection of original manuscripts, so intimately picturing the manners and customs of New England life during the Colonial period. is by far the most extensive of its kind in existence and because of its inaccessibility, the absence of indexes, save for a short period, and the fact that it remains practically unknown, little use has been made of its wealth of material. The historian will find in the depositions and testimony a vivid picture of life and social conditions in the earliest times following the settlement, while the records of each successive Court illustrate the development of the Colony and the Province. The genealogist and biographer will soon appreciate the fact that nearly every person in the Colony at some time came before the various Courts as plaintiff, defendant, or witness. The depositions usually preserve the age and occupation of the deponents and oftentimes show family connections, while not infrequently the English origin appears. The lawyer will find interesting matter relating to the Court and its procedure, and also to the development of practice and testimony.

Court and its procedure, and also to the development of practice and testimony. It is proposed to publish these records in abstracted form in which every essential particular is retained. They will be issued, a volume a year, in octavo volumes, each containing over five hundred pages of text, with an exhaustive index of names, places, and subjects. For a prospectus, printed on the quality of paper to be used, and specimen pages showing the size of the printed page, the style of type, and the nature and arrangement of the subject matter, address The Essex Institute. Salem. Mass.

GENEALOGIES IN PREPARATION.—Persons of the several names are advised to furnish the compilers of these genealogies with records of their own families and other information which they think may be useful. We would suggest that all facts of interest illustrating family history or character be communicated, especially service under the U.S. Government, the holding of other offices, graduation from college or professional schools, occupation, with places and dates of birth, marriage, residence, and death. All names should be given in full if possible. No initials should be used when the full name is known.

South Bridgewater, and Greenwich, Mass., to Stafford, Conn., where this John was born. At the time he atained his majority he was living in Ashfield, Mass. The records of the daughters of the house are fully given, and, as the ancestry of the men they married is often printed, many surnames beside that of Alden are to be found in the index. The will of Joseph Alden of Bridgewater, lists of soldiers, and reprints of Mayflower documents are also to be found between the covers of this little book.

A Genealogy of Eber and Lydia (Smith) Baker of Marion, Ohio, and their descendants, revised to October, 1909. Arranged by ELWOOD T. BAKER of Brooklyn, N. Y. Published by Lydia Amanda Copeland of Chariton, Iowa. 8° pp. 87, illus. Price 50 cents. Apply to Elwood T. Baker, 1391 Dean Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hon. Eber Baker, one of the founders of Marion. Ohio, was born in 1780 in Bowdoin, Me., and married Lydia Smith of Mayflower ancestry. This record of their descendants was published for distribution among the family through the generosity of Mrs. Lydia Amanda (Baker) Copeland, who requests that the blank slips at the end of this little brochure be filled out and mailed to the compiler as a means of recording any family "event." Although designed for personal family use, this record will be useful to others, who will be pleased to find it indexed.

The Bates Bulletin. September 1909. Vol. III. Number 1. 8° pp. 12, illus. A portrait and sketch of the late William Clinton Bates is the initial article in this number, which contains among other family data a sketch of the Bates Family of Bellingham by Henry A. Whitney.

A record of the lands and past descendants of Henry and Anne Clark, who settled in New Jersey in 1728, collected by Henry Spencer Clark. Paterson, N. J., C. Kamer, Jr., 1909. 8° pp. [15], port.

This sketch of Henry Clark, a Scotchman who settled at the head branches of the Whippany River, Roxiticus, Old Hunterdon County, N. J., records the names of his descendants in the early generations, and gives a good description of the lands owned by him. A pencil sketch of the location of his property is to be found in this volume and adds to its usefulness.

Dorrance Inscriptions, Old Sterling Township Burying Ground, Oneco, Conn., copied by EMMA FINNEY WELCH. 1909. 49 pp. 24.

I., the Gallup cemetery on the road from Oneco to Portertown, Conn., and the cemetery at Brooklyn, Conn. John and George Dorrance, with their families and the Rev. Samuel Dorrance, all Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, emigrated from the north of Ireland before 1723. John and George settled in Foster, R. I. The Rev. Samuel married Elizabeth Smith in 1726 and settled in Sterling, Conn. The inscriptions are copied line for line in the order in which the stones are found in the yard.

Genealogy of the Fillebrown Family with biographical sketches, by CHARLES BOW-DOIN FILLEBROWN. Boston, Mass., published by the author, 1910. $\xi^0$ pp. 16 +377+15, illus.

^{*} All the unsigned reviews are written by Miss ALICE LUCRETIA WESTGATE of Boston.

All the information that the author has been able to collect concerning the family at large has been incorporated with his early biographical sketches of the family and is presented in this single volume. The remarkable collection of portraits and views of the homesteads of the family fills two hundred pages. The genealogy starts with Thomas, 1630-1713, of Charlestown and Cambridge, Mass., and through his sons Thomas and John the family is carried on and traced from Maine to Wisconsin, a record which indicates considerable labor and research, although the author modestly apologizes in the preface for the incompleteness of his work. The biographical sketches are unusually full, that of Mr. C. B. Fillebrown giving an extended account of his activities in the Single Tax League. The volume, printed on heavy paper, is indexed, and furnished with an appropriate binding in brown cloth.

The Frost family in England and America, with special reference to Edmund Frost and some of his descendants, by Thomas G. Frost, Ph.D., LL.D., and EDWARD L. FROST, M.D. Buffalo [N. Y.], Russell Printing Company, 1909. 8° pp. 165+12, illus.

The pedigrees of the Frost families found in Suffolk, Norfolk, and Yorkshire, England, are given in Part One of this genealogy, which received the direction of Thomas G. Frost. Part Two gives an account of nine generations of the descendants of Edmund Frost of Cambridge, in 1635, and was compiled by Dr. Edward L. Frost. Biographical sketches of interest to the families of John Edward Frost, Thomas Gold Frost, William George Frost, Dan Frost, and Edward L. Frost, comprise the third part of this genealogy. The book is indexed, contains an unusual number of portraits, and will be useful to many people, as this particular branch of the Frost family has seemed to receive but scant attention heretofore.

Ancestry and descendants of Josiah Hale, fifth in descent from Samuel Hale of Hartford, Conn., 1637; to which is added an appendix showing other lines of descent, compiled by Oscar Fitzalan Hale. Rutland, Vt., The Tuttle Company, Printers, 1909. 8° pp. 133, illus.

The work of collecting this record of the descendants of Samuel Hale, who settled in Hartford, Conn., in 1637, was begun, as the compiler states in the preface, with the intention of getting in closer touch with the various lines of descent. A "Relationship Chart," originated by Mr. Hale, is also added to the genealogy, with careful directions for finding the nearest common ancestor and thereby discovering the closest degree of consanguinity. The REGISTER plan is used in arranging the material. The volume is a good example of book-making, being clearly printed, indexed, and well bound in crimson cloth.

The Descendants of Rev. Thomas Hooker, Hartford, Conn., 1586-1908, by Edward Hooker, Commander, U. S. N. Edited by Margaret Huntington Hooker. [E. R. Andrews Company, Rochester, N. Y., 1909.] 8° pp. 558.

This large genealogy, recording more than five thousand descendants of this famous New England preacher, is a fine specimen of careful, accurate, painstaking labor, and the many who knew that material for such a publication was being collected by the late Commander Hooker (whose blindness compelled him to leave the work incompleted) will be glad indeed to see the finished product. The arrangement of the genealogy is very similar to the Register plan. The biographical sketches are concise paragraphs of well-condensed facts. The book is indexed, printed handsomely on heavy paper, and bound in half morocco, making a volume on which the editor is to be congratulated.

The Lakin Family of Groton, Mass., by WILLIAM H. MANNING. Boston, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 1909. 4° pp. 11.

This is a reprint from the REGISTER for October 1909.

Elijah Longley and his descendants, by ARTHUR WILLIS STANFORD. Kobe [Japan], Printed by the Fukuin Printing Company, Limited, 1909. 8° pp. 31, port.

John Longley, the great-grandfather of Elijah, whose descendants are here enumerated, was the son of William and Deliverance Longley, who, with five of their children, were killed by the Indians 27 July 1694 in Groton. Mass. John was one of the three children taken captive by the Indians, with whom he lived nearly five years before being ransomed. Elijah Longley was born in Shirley 15 July 1778. This pamphlet is described by the author as a contribution toward a Longley genealogy.

Family record of our line of descent from Maj. John Mason of Norwich, Conn., by Theodore West Mason. New York, The Grafton Press, 1909. 8° pp. 59+8, illus.

The military service performed by John Mason in the English army fitted him for his duties in New England, where he was a successful Indian fighter, the commandant of the fort at Saybrook, Conn., and Deputy-Governor and Assistant at Norwich. The line is traced through his youngest son, Daniel Mason, born in 1652 at Saybrook, and then through the latter's son, Daniel, who married Dorothy, daughter of Rev. Jeremiah Hobart of Haddam, Conn. The biographical sketches are very well filled out, and will be of especial interest to the family. The Illustration is a photographic reproduction of the statue erected in memory of Maj. John Mason at Pequot Hill, Mystic, Conn.

Peabody Genealogy, compiled by Selim Hobart Peabody, LL.D., edited by Charles Henry Pope. Boston, Mass., Charles H. Pope, publisher, Pope Building, 1909. 8° pp. 596, illus.

John Paybody, who came to Plymouth as early as 1636 but soon settled in Duxbury, mentioned three sons in his will, Thomas, Francis, and William. No record of Thomas has been found. Two-thirds of this work is devoted to the descendants of Francis Peabody of Ipswich, Mass., of whom the author says that though there is no documentary evidence for the theory that Francis of Ipswich was the son of John of Duxbury, that theory has been acted on in this work. The descendants of William of Duxbury occupy about one hundred pages, and there is some account of the Newport, Dartmouth, and New London families. The English research recently made by the editor is also reported. Among the illustrations is a portrait of George Peabody, the philanthropist, and the facsimile of a personal letter to him from Queen Victoria in her own handwriting.

The Reade Record. Number II. 1909. Reade Historical and Genealogical Association. 8º pp. 8, port.

Brief items of special interest to the family association make up this leaflet, which gives no unusual emphasis to any of the contributions.

Thomas-Remington of Suffield, Conn., and some of his descendants (supplement), by Louis Marinus Dewey, of Westfield, Mass. 8° pp. 2.

This is a reprint from the Register for January 1910.

James Rising of Suffield, Conn., and some of his descendants, by Louis Marinus Dewey. Boston, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 1909, 8° pp. 11. This is a reprint from the REGISTER for October 1909.

Donald Robertson and his wife Rachel Rogers of King and Queen County, Virginia; also a brief account of the ancestry of Commodore Richard Taylor of Orange County, Va., and his naval career, by WILLIAM KYLE ANDERSON. [Detroit, Mich., Winn and Hammond.] 8° pp. 263+26, illus.

Donald Robertson was born September 1717, in the Highlands of Scotland, and came in 1753 to Virginia, where he soon established a private school or academy of his own. Among his pupils were James Madison and George Rogers Clark. In 1764 he married Rachel Rogers whose ancestor Giles Rogers emigrated from Worcestershire, Eng., to Virginia in 1686. Five generations of their descendants are recorded here.

A brief account of the Taylor family of Virginia describes the ancestry of Commodore Richard Taylor, and also gives the record of his naval services in the Revolution. The book is printed on deckle-edge paper, the illustrations are half-tomes, and there is an index.

Luther Sisson of Easton, Mass., his ancestry and descendants, compiled and printed by ARTHUR A. WOOD. Slocum, R. I., 1909. 12° pp. 13. Price 50 cents. Apply to the compiler, Slocum, R. I.

A single line is carried from Richard Sisson, who was admitted freeman at Portsmouth, R. I., in 1653, down to Luther Sisson of Easton, whose children and grandchildren are here recorded. An annual reunion of the family is held on Labor Day at Easton.

A history of the American and Puritanical family of Sutliff or Sutliffe, and a genealogy of the descendants of Nathaniel Sutliff, Jr., by SAMUEL MILTON SUTLIFF, JR. Downers Grove, Ill., The Klemscott Press, 1909. 8° pp. 199, illus.

"First American Family connected with New England 1614-1909" is the subtitle found on the cover. This has reference to Dr. Sutcliffe, Dean of Exeter, who was associated with Sir Ferdinando Gorges and interested in Capt. John Smith's exploration of the New England coast, which Smith described in his letter of 1614 addressed to the "Adventurers for the country of New England," and containing direct mention of Dr. Sutcliffe. Abraham Sutliff, the emigrant ancestor, was of Plymouth and Scituate, Mass. The line is carried through Abraham, Jr., and Nathaniel, Sr., to Nathaniel, Jr., of Deerfield, Mass., and Durham, Coun., whose descendants are enumerated to the number of two thousand and more in this volume. A genealogy of the descendants of John, the brother of Nathaniel, Jr., has already been published by Bennett H. Sutliffe.

Peter Talbot of Dorchester, Mass., and some of his descendants, compiled by SOLOMON TALBOT of Sharon, Mass. Published by Eugene Solomon Talbot, M.D., Chicago. Columbus, Ohio, Old Northwest Genealogical Quarterly, 1909. 8° pp. 65-74. Price $1.25. Apply to Edward A. Claypool, 309 Rush Temple, Chicago, Ill.

The record of Peter Talbot and some of his descendants, by the late Newton Talbot, furnishes the data in this article down to Jabez Talbot, from which point all the lines are filled out to date, making a very useful record.

Genealogy of the Wickware Family, containing an account of the origin and early history of the name and family in England, and the record of John Wickware of New London, Conn., 1675, and his descendants in America, by ARTHUR MANLEY WICKWIRE. [New York and Meriden. The Curtiss-Way Company, 1900.] 8° pp. 283.

Attractive, well-compiled, and useful, this account of a family of early English origin is presented in a scholarly manner, and is clearly arranged in a style similar to the REGISTER plan. The statements made are the results of research among original records of good authority, and eight generations of the American descendants are given, which, although the emigrant ancestor settled in Connecticut, are found to be scattered throughout the United States and Canada. A view of the Wickwar Parish Church, built in Gloucestershire about 1300, heads the list of illustrations, which are good. Maps, facsimiles, and a family chart help complete this work, which is printed on excellent paper, indexed and suitably bound.

Bay State Historical League. Publication IV. Proceedings 1903-1907. Boston, Mass., Published by the League, 1909. 8° pp. 44.

The records of the sixth to the eighteenth meetings of this League are given here, and occasionally include a résumé of the papers read before the League, which was formed in order to bring together all the local historical societies in the state.

Clark's Boston Blue Book, 1910. Private address, carriage and club directory, visiting list and shopping guide for Boston, Jamaica Plain, Brookline, and Cambridge, alphabetically arranged. Boston, Mass., Sampson and Murdock Company, 1909. 16° pp. 864, illus.

A curious and interesting collection of miscellaneous information is to be found in this book, which is really a social register of the residential districts of Boston, Brookline, and Cambridge. The illustrations are typical of the districts with which this directory is most concerned.

Stage days in Brimfield, a century of mail and coach. [By] MARY ANN TARBELL. [Springfield, Mass., The E. A. Bassette Company, Printers, 1909.] 8° pp. [34], illus.

The electric railway and the old stage coach have met in Brimfield, to the vanquishing of the latter, which for nearly sixty years had transported the United States mails and carried passengers to and from Brimfield, east and west. The different routes which led through the town and the fascination of tracing the old abandoned roads, the stage driver, and the characteristics of some of the towns and villages through which the coach passed, are some of the topics treated here. The book is illustrated with many charming views.

Vital Records of Farmingdale, Maine, in the year 1892. Editor, HENRY SEWALL WEBSTER, A.M. Committee on publication, Asbury Cohe Stilphen. Published under authority of the Maine Historical Society. Gardiner [Me.], The Reporter-Journal Press, 1909. 8° pp. 96. Price $1.00, postpaid. Apply to the editor, Gardiner, Me.

Every volume of vital records from the State of Maine is a boon to genealogists and equally welcome to every son and daughter of that community. It is also gratifying to those who are interested in the preservation of such valuable records to see that a state sufficiently appreciates its treasures to assist in printing them, but it is to be regretted that a larger appropriation cannot be made under this act (which places the maximum at five hundred dollars). As the state takes five hundred copies of any volume of vital records at one cent per page, it would seem as if larger towns, whose records must amount to more than one hundred printed pages, would be deprived of the benefit of the act. The volume reflects great credit on its editor, who has added information found in church, grave, and private records.

Old Hallowell on the Kennebec, by EMMA HUNTINGTON NASON. Augusta, Me., 1909. 8° pp. 359, illus. Price $2.50. Apply to the author, 51 Green Street, Augusta, Me.

Charming as Mrs. Nason's books always are, a particularly rich and happy vein of pleasure seems to have been struck by her delving into the history of this remarkable town, of which the late John Ward Dean said that "There was here a state of society that can never be reproduced." The story of the progress of the town from the time of its earliest settlement to its incorporation as a city in 1852 is well described, and much attention is given to biographical sketches. There is a good collection of full-page half-tone illustrations, including portraits of the famous men and women that maintained the social and intellectual status for which the town was widely known, views of fine old houses and picturesque scenery. The volume, printed on good paper, is indexed, and attractive in appearance.

This address, which was delivered before the New Hampshire Society of Colonial Wars 2 September 1909, gives first a general outline of the struggle between England and France for possession on this continent, and leads up to a detailed account of the famous and successful expedition of 1745, which the author truly describes as "a strange mixture of religious enthusiasm, commercial greed, and national hatred."

History of Newburyport, Mass., 1764-1909, by John J. Currier. Volume II. Newburyport, Mass., printed for the author, 1909. 8° pp. 679, illus.

The first volume of the History of Newburyport was published in 1906, and gave the civil history of the town from 1764 to 1905. In this second volume such subjects as shipwrecks, fire and police protection, Revolutionary War soldiers, and literary and benevolent societies, are discussed, and many personal sketches appear of lawyers, doctors, authors, artists, engravers, philanthrophists, revivalists, foreign travellers, and eccentric characters. Of the last there is a motley crew, led by the most famous of all, Lord Timothy Dexter. The appendix contains considerable addends to previous works published by the same author, a list of the soldiers stationed at Plum Island, and members of the Massachusetts Senate elected from Newbury, Newburyport, and West Newbury. There is also an account of Henry Lunt and some of his descendants.

History of New York Ship Yards, by John H. Morrison. New York, Press of W[illia]m F. Sametz and Company [1909]. 8° pp. 165, illus.

Following his "History of American Steam Navigation," the author has brought out this collection of data regarding the development of shipbuilding, from the colonial period to the decline of wooden shipbuilding in 1860. The progress made in the colonial period is treated in a general manner only, as no records of advancement in this industrial pursuit in New York City were made until after 1783. The text is well illustrated by views of vessels of different periods, and a record is given of some of the prominent clipper ships that sailed from New York from 1841 to 1860.

It is not often that the purchaser of a historic old landmark spends the thought and effort displayed in this pamphlet to give to history an accurate, well-illustrated account of the building before it is demolished to make way for a structure more suited to present needs. Numismatists will be interested in the illustrations shown here of the coins discovered in and about the building.

Transactions of the Huguenot Society of South Carolina. No. 16. Published by order of the Society. Charleston, S. C., Press of Walker, Evans & Cogswell Co., 1909.

The publication of Huguenot wills is continued in this magazine, and an instructive address on the condition of French Protestants after 1685, by Charles E. Lart, is reprinted here from the proceedings of the Huguenot Society of London. In recording the transactions by which the Society recently became owner of the site of the French Huguenot Church of the Parish of St. James, Goose Creek, a brief but comprehensive account is given of the history of the church and those who probably were its early members. A list of the present members of the Society, at the end of the magazine contains the names of the original Huguenot families from which the member derives descent.

Harvard College. Record of the Class of 1894. Secretary's Report No. 5. For the Fifteenth Anniversary. Cambridge [Mass.], printed for the use of the Class, Caustic-Claffin Company [1909]. 8º pp. 3+406.

The sketches of the members of the Class are alphabetically arranged, and are to be praised especially for containing such clear statements of primitive facts. Too seldom in such reports does one find full names, parentage, and complete dates given. The omission of such essential data greatly impairs the usefulness of the volume for future reference.

The illustrations are good, the print and paper excellent, and the substantial brown cloth binding is most serviceable.

This collection of authentic data regarding all the events connected with the construction of the Stars and Stripes will certainly prove an authoritative reference in any further discussion of this subject. The truth of the essential features of the Betsey Ross story claims to have been established. Elizabeth Griscom was the daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (James) Griscom, and when the widow of John Ross, her first husband. made the flag. Subsequently she married Joseph Ashburn, and later John Claypoole. During her whole life, however, she was in the upholstering business.

Political capital was made of this controversy of which John Adams wrote, "The apprehension of Episcopacy contributed fifty years ago, as much as any other cause, to arouse the attention not only of the inquiring mind, but of the common people, and urge them to close thinking on the constitutional authority of parliament over the colonies." This is a careful bibliography, of which a limited edition has been printed. It is a finely made little volume, bound in full blue morocco.

Almon Danforth Hodges and his neighbors. An autobiographical sketch of a typical old New Englander. Edited by Almon D. Hodges, Jr. Presented by Amory G. Hodges and Almon D. Hodges, Jr. Boston, Mass., privately printed, 1909. 8° pp. 353, illus.

The reading of the diary and other personal documents belonging to this fine old New England gentleman furnished his son with the inspiration to put in permanent form the record of a truly exemplary life. The book also gives an intimate account of the domestic life of that generation whose traditions and customs have passed entirely away. It is to such faithful and sincere memorials that the historians of the future will turn to gain a true picture of one of the most formative stages in the development of American society. Technically the book gives keen pleasure, because of its make-up and the excellence of the illustrations. It will delight any reader, for the narrative is told simply and frankly, with a dignifled charm well in keeping with the upright, helpful, cheerful life which it portrays.

Memorial of Elder Ebenezer Lamson of Concord, Mass., his ancestry and descendants, 1635-1908. Originally compiled by Otis E. Lamson, Cleveland, Ohio; revised and extended by Frank B. Lamson, Buffalo, Minn. [Delano, Minn., press of The Eagle Printing Co.] 4° pp. 121, illus.

A surprising and unusual amount of frankness is displayed in the biographical sketches which enliven this well-compiled, useful genealogy. For a time many of the family lived in Mt. Washington, Mass., and a sketch of the natural beauty of the town, illustrated by a view of Mt. Everett, is found in the first part of the volume. The genealogy is well arranged and indexed. The illustrations are chiefly portraits, and the book is printed on heavy linen paper.

Abraham Lincoln. An American Migration. Family English not German. By Marion Dexter Learned. Philadelphia, William J. Campbell, 1909. 8° pp. 149, illus. Price, $3.00 net. Apply to the publishers, 1623 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Starting with the purpose of proving that Abraham Lincoln was not of German descent (a theory that had gained such general acceptance among the Germans of America as to give rise to German poetry on Lincoln the German President) this scholarly, documentary treatise not only establishes the English origin of the family unquestionably (also giving reference to the Ancestry of Abraham Lincoln. by J. Henry Lea, for a complete genealogy), but also makes a careful scientific study of the migrations of the Lincoln family. This family the author considers one of the most typical and significant in American history, as the motive prompting every new move reflects in each instance an important fact in the history of our early settlements. A map showing the progression of these pioneer settlers, numerous illustrations, and an index increase the usefulness of this volume which has real historical value.

Cyrus Hall McCormick, his life and work, by HERBERT N. Casson. Chicago, A. C. McClurg and Company, 1909. 8° pp. 264, illus.

To Russia. Roumania, Algeria, South America — to all parts of the world the McCormick reaper has made its way, a boon to the agriculturist and a benefit to mankind in reducing the cost of the production of bread. The writer of this history has brought unbounded enthusiasm to his task, sketching clearly the life of this Scotch-Presbyterian; and following closely the development of his invention in all its stages. The illustrations are unusually interesting, the print large, and the volume important to all who care to study the story of the commercial and industrial progress of the United States.

FRANCIS OLCOTT ALLEN

By JAMES ALLEN KIBBE of Warehouse Point, Conn.

Francis Olcott Allen was born in Hartford, Connecticut, 14 March 1840, and died in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 3 December 1909. He married in Chicago, Illinois, 7 October 1862, Isabelle C. Jones, who died in Philadelphia 21 December 1868. His second marriage, in Philadelphia 10 November 1870, was to Elizabeth Horner Dulles, who belonged to a prominent and wealthy family from Charleston, South Carolina. Six children were born to him, three by each marriage. These in the order of birth were Harris Hall, who died at the age of four months; Clarence Jones, born 7 June 1865, now in the insurance business in Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Bessie Cynthia, killed at the age of twenty-two years in a railroad accident at Quincy, Massachusetts, 19 August 1890, as was her father's mother; Margaret Dulles, born 14 May 1872, married Josiah H. Barton, a Philadelphia banker; Francis Olcott, born 15 October 1874, a graduate of Princeton, resident physician at the Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia; Joseph Heatly Dulles, born 11 February 1879, a graduate of Princeton, proprietor of the Enfield Stock Farm at Laverock, near Philadelphia, and designer and manufacturer of ornamental tiles.

Mr. Allen was in the eighth generation from Samuel' Allen of Windsor, Connecticut, through his son John² who was killed at the battle or massacre of Bloody Brook, South Deerfield, Massachusetts, 18 September 1675, leaving two sons, John³ and Samuel, both of whom settled in Enfield, Connecticut. From this John,3 who came to Enfield in 1696, the subject of this sketch is descended through Azariah, Moses, Moses, and Olcott. In that town Mr. Allen's father, Olcott Allen, was born, reared, and twice married. His mother, Lucy Ann (Parsons) Allen, was also of a pioneer Enfield family. Three or four years before the birth of Francis Olcott Allen, his father removed to Hartford, Connecticut, where he became a widely-known business man, and for many years treasurer of the Society for Savings, commonly known as the Pratt Street savings of 1862, but owing to ill health had to abandon his studies before graduating. In Hartford, under the care of his most excellent father, the son grew to manhood and began his business life. After several ventures in other directions he made insurance his principal business. His choice will not seem strange if we bear in mind that Hartford is pre-eminently an insurance city. He removed to Philadelphia in the early part of his business career, and there for many years was manager of the American and Foreign Fire Insurance Company, retiring from business in 1892 in somewhat impaired health. His active life did not make him notoriously rich, but enabled him to retire with a satisfactory competence, which could not have been placed in better hands. He had also gained and kept the respect and confidence of his fellow men.

The Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Allen was a member, honored him with the office of elder, and made him a director in its Board of Ministerial Relief, and in many other ways showed its trust in him. He was a member of the following societies, holding office in most of them: New England Historic Genealogical Society (life member), Connecticut Historical Society (life member), Pennsylvania Historical Society, New Hampshire Historical Society, Pennsylvania Genealogical Society, Society of Mayflower Descendants, Society of Sons of the Revolution, Society of Colonial Wars, and the New Hampshire Society of the Cincinnati.

Mr. Allen was an enthusiastic genealogist, but utterly refused to accept unsupported assertions and vain traditions, demanding chapter and verse from the record; or, failing that, he would only accept such evidence as seemed satisfactory to him, regardless of what others had asserted. This characteristic came out strongly in his long and expensive search for the facts as to Samuel Allen of Windsor, who died there and was buried 28 April 1648, and about whom many incorrect things had been stated and printed. The latest and best results of this search can be found in Orrin Peer Allen's "Descendants of Samuel Allen of Windsor, Conn.," published in 1907 and dedicated to the subject of this memoir.

His best gift to the genealogical world is his documentary "History of Enfield, Conn.," in three volumes. No other town, except Boston, has in print a record so extensive and complete. It is not a narrative history but a literal transcript of the records. He also inserted in this work, as an introduction, the crude effort of John C. Pease to write a history of Enfield. This history also contains fifty-eight pages on the almost forgotten Strict Congregational or Separate Church of New England, from documents that are rare and practically inaccessible, but which he collected or transcribed with much patient labor. It is perhaps the best account of the principles of this church to be found in print.

Mr. Allen's whole life was correct and honorable, and his death leaves a large place to be filled. He was a kind-hearted, public-spirited, Christian gentleman. The world has need of such.

THE ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF REV. OBADIAH HOLMES

Communicated by Col. J. T. Holmes, Columbus, Ohio, at the request of the Committee on English Research

THE principal facts known on this side of Rev. Obadiah Holmes's English career were that he was born in Lancashire, England, about 1607, that of his father's children three sons were "brought up at the University in Oxford." that his mother was dead, and that he married his wife Catherine before his emigration to New England in 1638 or 1639.

In an autobiography Holmes refers to a field called "the Twenty Acres," evidently in the neighborhood of his English home.

I had ascertained from Foster's "Alumni Oxoniensis" that Obadiah Holmes was not on record as a student of Oxford University, but that two brothers of the name of Hulme, born at Reddish, near Manchester, had matriculated there. In the face of a persistent tradition that Holmes came from the neighborhood of Preston, I could not safely draw any conclusions.

Mr. Axon also referred to Foster's "Alumni," followed the clue by obtaining wills from the Probate Registry of Chester, and supplemented the information given there by searching the Parish Registers of Manchester, Stockport, Didsbury, and other places. The following is a summary of the results that he obtained, and I think that there can be little doubt as to the identity of the Rev. Obadiah Holmes, the early Baptist Confessor, with Obadiah who is named in the will of Robert Hulme of Reddish (1640). It will be seen that the dates correspond pretty closely, that the mother died before the emigration, and that two sons were certainly at Oxford. The third son may have been Obadiah himself, it being well known that the admission registers of the University are not complete. Further it may be noted that the Robert Hulme of Reddish (d. 1697) attended Gorton Chapel, and that there was a locality called "Twenty Acres" in Gorton. A point not settled by the evidence is the connection with Preston, no mention of Obadiah having been found in the records there. Possibly he was there for a short time before his emigration, or he may have sailed from there. There really seems to be no room to doubt this latter fact.

Besides this family of Hulme of Reddish, who were not land owners, there were in succession two families of Hulme of Reddish who were owners of a considerable part of the township. One of these families flourished in the 15th and 16th centuries and sold the property early in the 17th century to Ralph Hulme of Manchester, gent., founder of the second family of ^{*}Ten years ago searches made on my behalf by Mr. Ernest Axon, of Manchester, England, resulted in the discovery of evidence bearing on the English ancestry of Rev. Obadiah Holmes. I was then working on the history of my family and still continue to do so. Professional engagements have prevented me from publishing my work, but the English ancestry is so interesting to Rev. Obadiah Holmes's descendants that I am glad to have an opportunity of placing on record the condensed result of the search.

Hulme of Reddish. The latter family became extinct by the death in 1691 of William Hulme, Esq., the munificent founder of the wealthy Hulme Charity in Manchester. The relationship of these two families with each other and with the family to which Obadiah Holmes belonged has not been satisfactorily settled. It may be mentioned that the family with which we are more intimately concerned held their lands not under their namesakes but under the Reddish and Coke families, the largest owners in Reddish township.

HULME OF REDDISH

ROBERT¹ HULME of Reddish in the Parish of Manchester. Probably the Robert Hulme mentioned as a tenant in the will of John Reddish, esq., 1569, and almost certainly the Robert Hulme who in 1598 witnessed the will of "Otiwell Hulme of Redytch, husbandman." He was buried at Stockport 14 Jan. 1604–5 as "Ould Robert Holme of Redich." His will, dated 11 Aug. 1602 and proved at Chester 28 Jan. 1604–5, bequeathed his lands to his eldest son Robert and his widow Alice. His widow was buried at the Collegiate Church (now cathedral), Manchester, 7 Sept. 1610 as "Alyce wydow to Robte Hulme of Reddiche."

Children:

i. ROBERT, see below.

ii. John, named in father's will, and an executor.

iii. Jane, named in father's will and then unm.

iv. A DAUGHTER, whose child George Hoyd is named in her father's will.

ROBERT² HULME of Reddish, husbandman, inherited his father's landsHe was buried at Stockport 12 Nov. 1640. His will, dated 20 Aug.
1640, was proved at Chester 24 Nov. 1649 by Robert Hulme, one of the executors, power being reserved to the other executor, Hugh Johnson, whom the testator styles "brother-in-law." By this will Robert Hulme bequeathed to his son Robert "my estate and interest," etc., "in the messuage in which I now dwell and which has been held," etc., "by my predecessors tyme out of mynd," hoping
"my right worshippfull master Edward Cooke esq. will dale mercifullie with him."

He married at Stockport, 8 Oct. 1605, Katherine Johnson, who was buried at Stockport 8 Sept. 1630.

Children:

John³, bapt. at Stockport 3 May 1607; matriculated at Brasenose College, Oxford, as son of "Robert Hulme of Reddish, pleb.," 18 Nov. 1625, aged 17. As he is not named in his father's will it is probable that he d. bef. 1640.

ii. Obadiah, the emigrant, bapt. at Didsbury 18 Mar. 1609-10 as "Obadiath s. of Robert Hulme": was living at Reddish in 1633, and is mentioned in his father's will, his legacy of £10 being dependent on the death, under age. of a younger brother. It is evident from this that he had already received his filial portion. In the Stockport register, under date 20 Dec. 1626, is recorded the burial of "Obadia son of Robert Hulme of Rediche." This cannot relate to our Obadiah as the will proves that Obadiah was living in 1640. Hulme was a very common name in the district. He m. at the Collegiate Church, Manchester, 20 Nov. 1630, KATHERINE HYDE.b Child: John, 4 "infant of Obadiah Hulmes of Redich," bur. at Stockport 27 June 1633.

^bThe statement is ventured that this is the first publication of the wife's maiden surname on this side of the ocean. A wide and somewhat careful search among the books, carried on since 1899, has found it printed with great uniformity, "Catherine

iii. Joan, dau. of Robert Hulme," bapt. at Didsbury 2 Feb. 1610-11. Not named in her father's will, and perhaps the infant of Robert Hulmes of Rediche bur. at Stockport 5 Nov. 1612. SAMUEL, "son of Robert Hulme of Rediche," bur. at Stockport 2

Nov. 1613.

SAMUEL, perhaps bapt. at Didsbury 23 Feb. 1616-17, but if so erroneously registered as "Robert s. of Robert Hulme." Matriculated at Brasenose College. Oxford, as "son of Robert of Rediche, pleb.," 15 Feb. 1632-3. aged 16; B.A. 17 May 1636. To him his father bequeathed "6s. 8d. and no more in regard of the former great charges I have been putt unto in and about his education."

vi. NATHANIEL, "s. of Robert Holme of Redich," bapt. at Didsbury

12 July 1618, bur. at Stockport 10 Sept. 1631.
vii. Robert, bapt. at Stockport 25 Mar. 1621 as "Robert s. of Robert Hulme of Rediche." Inherited his father's holding at Reddish, appears also to have been a tanner, with tan yards and tan pits at Meadowcroft in Middleton. and possibly also had a place of business in Manchester, for in his will he mentions "my great coffer in Manchester." He was a ruling elder of the church at Gorton during the Commonwealth, being approved 11 Dec. 1649; a member of the First Classis, 1651 to 1660; and several times a delegate to the Provincial Assembly at Preston. He was bur at Groton 17 Nov. 1697. His will, in which he is described as "of Reddish yeoman," was proved at Chester 11 Oct. 1698. He m. at the Collegiate Church, Manchester. 6 Nov. 1641, ANN THORPE, who was bur. at Gorton 16 Nov. 1672. He had sons John4 and Obadiah, and other children.

viii. Joseph, bur. at Stockport 13 June 1623, as "son of Robert Hulmes of Redich."

ix. Joseph, youngest son, named in father's will 1640, and then under twenty-one. To him his father left £40 and all his books.

FIRST OWNERSHIP OF OHIO LANDS

THE fears of Maryland respecting the use that might be made of the vacant land, if the claimant states were not restrained by provisions in the articles of confederation, apply directly to the plans of her neighbor state to seize and hold the whole extent of disputed territory. Virginia laid foundation for the broadest expansion of her dominion, in the beginning, at the moment of transition from the condition of a royal British colony to that of a free American commonwealth, in the assumption of the second charter of King James, issued to the "Virginia" of 1609, as the basis of her rights in America. A number of events in the latter history of the American colonies tend to establish the west boundary line of the claimants' territory at the "sources of the rivers which fall into the Atlantic ocean from the west to the northwest," but Virginia clung to the doctrine of the hinterland as the foundation of her domain, and steadfastly pushed her borders westward; first, over the greater mountains, upon the western waters, and thence across the river to the uttermost reaches of the Illinois, until, in the land cession of 1783, she was forced to drop the prize. The claims in the Virginia constitution, quoted on an earlier page as the initial cause of alarm in the colonies, made the extent of the newformed commonwealth to stand as fixed in this charter, modified by the more recent limitation of the French Treaty; comprehending

All that space and circuit of land lying from the sea-coast, two hun diles each way from the Point or Cape Comfort, up into the land throughout discusses to sea [Mississippi River], west and northwest.

Provisions were made in the constitutional paragraph releasing, for prudential reasons, the portions of territory on the eastern waters which were actually covered by her sister colonies, but there were no allowances on the western waters for the claims of other states whose charter limits fall within the area blocked out in the Stuart grant. Virginia had no intention of recognizing the right of any other colony in that direction. It was the latent purpose of Virginia to enter and occupy this reserved domain of the crown, and to have and to hold the soil exclusively until, peopled by her soldiery, one or more territories, by act of legislature, shall hereafter be laid off, and governments established, westward of the Allegany mountains. 14"

The objection heard in Congress respecting the territorial land claims was general and not particular, and no protest against individual state claims was made until towards the last. Maryland made her objections felt in the matter of controlling the Chesapeake waters by an early conference with Virginia and a joint commission, to consider of the most proper means to adjust and confirm the right of each, to the use and navigation of, and jurisdiction over the Bay of Chesapeake, and the rivers Potomac and Pocomoke.

But no state made local challenge of the proposed rule of the commonwealth of Virginia on the western waters.

The first mark of the purpose of Virginia to occupy the back country is in the prohibitive clause appendant to the description of the charter limits of the commonwealth enacted May 6, 1776:

No purchase of lands shall be made of the Indian nations, but in behalf of the public, by authority of the general assembly.

It was the well established policy of the British crown and colonies that the title of an Indian was not in itself sufficient to convey the right of property, 15 but occasion called for the early application of this principle in Virginia, with respect to the disputed lands, while the convention was still in session, in the following form:

Whereas, divers petitions from the inhabitants on the western frontiers have been presented to this convention, complaining of exorbitant demands made on them for lands claimed by persons pretending to derive title from Indian deeds and purchases.

Resolved. That all persons actually settled on any of the said lands ought to hold the same, without paying any pecuniary or other consideration whatever to any private person or persons, until the said petitions, as well as the validity of the titles under such Indian deeds and purchases, shall have been considered and determined on by the legislature of this country; and that all persons who are now actually settled on any unlocated or unappropriated lands in Virginia, to which there is no other just claim, shall have the pre-emption or preference, in the grant of such lands.

Resolved. That no purchases of lands within the chartered limits of Virginia, shall be made, under any pretense whatever, from any Indian tribe or nation, without the approbation of the Virginia legislature.

14 The assumption of Virginia respecting her chartered limits was never put to proof. The generous concession of a portion of the territory made in 1784 rendered proof of claims unnecessary, and Congress magnanimously accepted the cession on its face value without insisting on proofs of title. Proof was unnecessary also because the United States held by prior and higher claims the Iroquois deed of 1701, and the definitive treaty of 1783. Ex parte statements on the value of the Virginia title have not heen lacking from that time to this; the latest is "a communication from the governor of Virginia against the United States government on account of the claims of Virginia against the United States government on account of the Callins of Virginia against the United States government on account of the constant Territory" (Va. Sen. Doc. No. III, Jan. 24, 1910), wherein it is proposed to the legislature that a demand shall he made upon the United States for a refund of a share of $119,479,204 due Virginia as reserve interest in ceded lands misappropriated by the United States for education, public improvement, and other local henefits.

15 Chief Justice Marshall ruled "that a title to lands derived solely from a grant made by an Indian tribe northwest of the Ohio in 1773 and 1775 to private individuals cannot be recognized in the courts of the United States" (8 Wharton, p. 543).

The petitioners referred to in these resolutions are "inhabitants of that part of America called Transylvania," from whom one petition is recorded in the Journal of the Convention under date of May 18. They complain of the unjust and arbitrary proceedings of Richard Henderson and Company, the proprietors of that country in which the petitioners had made settlements under expectation of undoubted title. They doubt the validity of the purchase those proprietors have made of the Cherokees, "the only title they set up to the lands for which they demand such exorbitant sums of money," as it was in conflict with a deed which they had lately seen, executed at Fort Stanwix, in which the confederated Indians of the Six Nations "declared the Cherokee [Tennessee] river to be their true boundary with the southward Indians." As they had purchased from the Henderson Company they asked for relief from the convention of Virginia, or an espousal of their claim in Congress as the cause of the colony.

The proprietors of the Transylvania purchase answered these petitions in a memorial which appears at great length in the convention proceedings of June 15, in which they seek to clear themselves of the heavy charges of injustice, exorbitant, and arbitrary measures. They deny also certain insinuations "of setting themselves up as absolute proprietors of an independent province; and of attempting to dismember the colony by sending delegates or a memorial to Congress." They claim also priority of title to the convention and the commonwealth of Virginia, arguing that a declaration of independence cannot alter the tenure of estates, or a change of government interfere with the rights of private individuals to hold property; and they demand a hearing of the matters charged in the petitions. 16

The petitions and the memorial were in the hands of committees of the convention, and they passed over as impending business to corresponding committees of the general assembly when that body was organized under the commonwealth. The references to attempts to set up independent governments at different locations along the Ohio were transmitted to the delegates in Congress to forestall action there. The Henderson case called for an inquiry into the nature of the Iroquois claims to the Cherokee country, and commissions were assigned to take depositions of the Indian chiefs at Williamsburg and in the Washington district. Thus matters stood in the middle of the second session of the Virginia assembly when,

Other petitions of this nature are found running through the printed records of the final session of the convention of Virginia, and the succeeding sessions of the general assembly, and elsewhere in the published archives of Virginia. They tell the same story ... of the hardships that would result to the petitioners and others, from grants of large tracts of lands to private companies of gentlemen, which were to be sold out at a moderate prime for the encouragement and speedy settlement of the back country, but that agents to the company and their successors, instead of adhering to their first proposals, have demanded, and actually received enormous prices, and have, by various unfair practices, either sold, located or claimed nearly double their first grant.

Certain petitioners set forth that they had ... entered on the lands they occupied many years before and cultivated them with a lahor and expense, often at the peril of their lives from savages, in consequence of which they have they had obtained a just and equitable title to their possessions, without being obliged to contribute large sums of money for the separate emolument of individuals whose increanary views are incompatible with the real good of the community.

Petitions are recorded also from companies holding grants to take up and survey lands issued "by the governor and council under the former British government." The purchasers had made investments in explorations and surveys, in roadways and other improvements, and they had sold off much of their lands to actual settlers, but their contracts were impaired and their operations interrupted by the general feeling of unrest in the colonies, and by the uncertainty regarding titles, and all would be lost unless the titles were confirmed.

on the 3d of June, 1777, a memorial appeared from the proprietors of a tract of land on the Ohio, called Indiana.

The memorial of the Indiana Company, known in after proceedings in the land controversy in the Continental Congress, raised the direct point with the commonwealth of the right of title of the Six United Nations to practically all of the back country from the Wisconsin to the central ridges of the Alleghanies, upon which the claims of the New York colony had rested for almost a century. The memorialists claimed property as conveyed by the Six United Nations at a treaty held at Fort Stanwix in the year 1768, setting forth "That the grant was obtained of the grantors under the immediate superintendence of Sir William Johnson, and executed in the presence of the Governor of New Jersey, and others, among whom were the commissioners then attending in behalf of the colony of Virginia."

They conceive that by the convention resolve of the 24th of June last,

Virginia had laid a foundation for calling in question the title of the memorialists to the lands aforesaid; if the title of the memorialists should be called into discussion, conscious of the equity and validity of their right, they shall never hesitate to submit it to a proper judicature, nor to defend it in the ordinary course of justice; that, under these circumstances, they confide the legislature of Virginia will not, by any act or proceeding whatever, impeach or prejudice their title, so well established, on the principles of reason, equity, and sound policy.

The memorial, when read, was referred to the committee of the whole house upon the state of the commonwealth, the same committee that had charge of the Henderson case. The matter dragged along through the third session, during which the Henderson case was appointed to a hearing and postponed. It must not be supposed that the Virginia general assembly mistook the gravity of the situation. On the last day of the third session action came of a significant character. The record for January 24, 1778, reads:

"The clerk of the house was ordered to transmit a copy of the several papers filed in the office relating to the claim of Richard Henderson and Company and the Indiana Company, to George Mason and Thomas Jefferson, Esquires.".

This was done, no doubt, to fortify the assembly with opinions; and on the same day these resolutions were agreed to:

Whereas, it is of the greatest importance to this commonwealth, that the waste and unappropriated lands to which no person having just claim should be disposed of, for the purpose of creating a sinking fund, in aid of the taxes for discharging the public debt, and to the end that the claims to unpatented lands, under the former or present government, may not in the meantime be increased or strengthened.

Resolved, that every entry, with the survey hereafter made in the country upon the western waters under any pretense or title whatsoever, until the land office shall be established and the manner and terms of granting waste and unappropriated lands, shall be void and of no effect; and that no persons hereafter settling in the country upon the said western waters, shall be entitled to any land or pre-emption of land for such settlement, without paying the same such consideration as shall be hereafter ascertained by the general assembly, as no family be entitled to more than 400 acres.

as no family be entitled to more than 400 acres.

Resolved, That all persons claiming any unpatented lands on the said western waters by order of council, shall lay the same before the general assembly on or before the 20th day of their next session, and be at liberty in the mean time to take the depositions of any witnesses they may choose to examine such claims, giving reasonable notice thereof to the person appointed by the governor and council to attend such examination in the county, on behalf of the commonwealth, in case such person shall be appointed.

Finally, after two years, the Henderson case was heard in the Virginia assembly. The hearing was conducted with dignity, with "the Senate invited to take seats in the House, while the memorials and papers were read and arguments heard at the bar." Richard Henderson, chief promotor of Transylvania, appeared in person. He asked for a separate court of judicature, and proposed as the issue the simple question "whether the title obtained by the claimants from the Cherokees was sufficient to convey the right of property." They argued for the justice of the Cherokee claim as against the claim of the Six United Nations, citing the constant and perpetual occupancy by the Cherokees and the recognition by the Virginia colonial government in treaties and purchases made of the Cherokee nation. To Conclusion was reached in the case November 4, 1778. The Henderson purchase was declared void, and the doctrine of invalidity of Indian titles reaffirmed in this form:

Resolved, That all purchases of lands made or to be made of the Indians within the chartered boundaries of this commonwealth, as described by the constitution and form of Government, by any private person not authorized by public authority is void.

Compensation was to be allowed to the claimants "for their great expense in making the purchases and in settling the lands, by which this commonwealth are very like to receive great advantage, by increasing its inhabitants and establishing a barrier against the Indians"; and a commission was ordered, to consider "what compensation it may be just and reasonable to allow for the service rendered this commonwealth in quieting the minds of the Cherokee Indians, and in settling many families upon that tract of land in the back country, commonly called Transylvania."

The way was now clear for the inquiry called for in the memorial of the Indiana Company. A day was set in the May session for a hearing, and public notice was inserted in the Virginia Gazette for all concerned to attend. Meanwhile petitions and memorials were accumulating, and the minutes of the assembly were burdened with applications for confirmation of titles obtained in various ways: lands taken up for homesteads, purchases from the Indians, grants of the Dunmore government, army warrants, under the royal proclamation, or under orders of the governor and council. The claims antedate the Virginia constitution, but they are all illegal under the retroactive aspect of the constitution. They must be swept out of the chartered territory of Virginia and all unpatented lands reclaimed, from the boundaries of Pennsylvania southwest to the indeterminate lines of the Carolinas and Georgia. The finding of the Indiana Company case, after a ceremonious hearing June 9, 1779, marks the climax of activity in these expulsions:

Resolved, That the commonwealth of Virginia hath the exclusive right of pre-emption, from the Indians, of all lands within the limits of its own chartered territory, as declared by the act and constitution or form of vernment in 1776, that no person or persons whatsoever have, or ever had, a right chase any land within the same from any Indian nation except only persons duly authorized to make such purchases on the public account, formerly for the use and benefit of the colony, and lately of the commonwealth; and that such exclusive right or pre-emption will, and ought to be, maintained by this commonwealth to the ntmost of its power.

Resolved, That every purchase of land heretofore made by the King of Great Britain from any Indian nation or nations, within the before mentioned limits,

¹⁷ A second Henderson memorial is recorded Oct. 29, 1778, in the House journal Final agreement, November 30, allows 400,000 acres on Green River to Henderson and doth and ought to enure forever to and for the use and benefit of this commonwealth, and to and for no other use or purpose whatsoever.

Resolved, Therefore, That the deed from the six united nations of Indians, bearing date on the third day of November, 1768, for certain lands between the Alleghany mountains and the river Ohio, above the mouth of the little Kanawha creek, to and for the use and benefit of a certain William Trent, gentleman, in his own right, and as attorney for sundry persons in the said deed named, as well as all other deeds which have been or shall be made by any Indian or Indians, or by an Indian nation or nations, for lands within the limits of the charter and territory of Virginia as aforesaid, to or for the use or benefit of any private person or persons, shall be, and the same are hereby declared utterly void, and of no effect.

In order to remove and prevent all doubt concerning purchases of land from the Indian nations, the general assembly framed the first and second resolution into a bill and enacted the same on the 17th of June at this session, with the title: An act for declaring and asserting the rights of this commonwealth, concerning purchasing land from Indian nations.¹⁸

While the general assembly was thus striving to establish a jurisdiction over the disputed territory, and to set up a revenue for the benefit of the public exigencies by wholesale reclamations of the soil of the back lands. the Old Dominion unexpectedly gained the chance to expand the government of the commonwealth over the entire area of her claims. Clark had heard the call of conquest in the wilds of Kentucky, and hurrying to the capital secured a commission of secret invasion. He mustered his militiamen in Virginia for an overland crusade to Detroit, and having crossed the Ohio halted at the Kaskaskies, with the result well known to fame. Clark brought as his trophy to the commonwealth a fictitious estate for an empty treasury. When lands were lacking in every colony to satisfy overwhelming requirements of bounty obligations, he opened a way for Virginia to the fabulous wealth of an immeasurable wilderness. All other land claims were as nothing compared with these, and Virginia had secured all. These delusive prospects of profit in the sales of Ohio lands lay in the marvellous fertility of the soil, in the abundance of natural products, in salt springs known to abound, and in traditional mineral deposits of gold, silver, copper, and lead along the river. Here was land for ready sale, an imaginary asset, sufficient to indemnify Virginia for all the past expenditures of war, to pay off all bounty promises, to furnish a means for permanent reduction of taxation, and to leave vast areas untouched for future uses.

Virginia lost no time in securing this new property. It is recorded under date of the 19th of November, 1778, that "the speaker laid before the House, a letter from the governor, enclosing several letters and papers from Lieut. Col. Clarke and Captain Leonard Helm." The letters and papers, being read, were referred to a committee named, to whom leave was given to prepare and bring in a bill "for establishing a county, to include the inhabitants of this commonwealth, on the western side of the Ohio river, and for the better government of those inhabitants." This is the record of the act to establish the county of Illinois, the 'nd of Clark's triumph, and to provide a temporary form of government at otted to the circumstances of the new citizens of the commonwealth, French and Canadians, who had taken the oath of fidelity to Virginia "on the 'stward side of the Ohio, in the vicinity of the Mississippi." No other desc. ption is necessary! The legal bounds of the new county embrace all that remains of the expanse of the King James charter, up into the land through-

It was in this session of the general assembly, in which it was ordained to establish this distant dependency of the commonwealth on territory claimed by sister states and on lands still in controversy in the general congress, and while the tenure of land cases were actually depending on the decision of the assembly, that the Virginia house of delegates developed the plan of forcing immediate conclusion of the confederacy. The bill creating the county of Illinois became a law on the 30th of December, 1778. On the same day the plan was formulated in the house to bring the backward states quickly to the terms of a confederation so favorable to Virginia's hopes. The matter was under consideration until the 18th, when the house came to the following resolutions, which the next day were concurred in by the Senate:

Resolved, nemine contra dicente, That our delegates in Congress be instructed to propose to Congress, that they recommend to each of the states named as parties in the articles of confederation, heretofore laid before and ratified by the assembly, that they authorize their delegates in Congress to ratify the said articles, together with the delegates of so many other of the said states, as shall be willing, so that the same shall be forever binding on the states so ratifying, notwithstanding that a part of those named shall decline to ratify the same; allowing, nevertheless, to the said states so declining, either a given or an indefinite time, as to Congress shall seem best, for acceding to the said confedereration, and making themselves thereby members of the Union.

Resolved, nemine contra dicente, That our said delegates now in office, or hereafter to be appointed, be authorized and required, and they are hereby authorized and required to ratify the said articles of confederation on the part of this commonwealth, with so many of the other states, named in them as parties, as shall on their part ratify the same.

Resolved, nemine contra dicente, That it be an instruction to the Virginia delegates, to inform Congress of the resolutions of this general assembly, respecting purchases of lands from any Indian nation.

Entered next after this in the journal, in a form indicating that they are part of a single connected action, are these items:

And whereas the assembly hath come to believe that sundry citizens of some of the United States, were, and are, connected and concerned with some of the King of Great Britain's late governors in America, as well as with sundry noblemen and others, subjects of the said King, in the purchase of a very large tract of land from the Indians, on the northwest side of the Ohio river, within the territory of Virginia,

Resolved, Also, That the said delegates be instructed to use their endeavors in Congress, to cause an inquiry to be made, concerning the said purchase, and whether any, and what citizens of any of the United States, were or are, concerned therein.

The more effectually to enable Congress to comply with the promise of a bounty in lands to the officers and soldiers of the army, on continental establishment;

Resolved, That this commonwealth will, in conjunction with such other of the United States as have unappropriated back lands, furnish out of its territory, between the rivers Ohio and Mississippi, in such proportion as shall hereafter be adjusted and settled by Congress, its proper quota or proportion of such lands, without any purchase money, to the troops on continental estate shment of such of the United States, as already have acceded, or shall with such time, given or indefinite, as to Congress shall seem best, accede to the condition of the United States, and who have not within their own respective testory, unappropriated lands for that purpose; and that a copy of this resolve.

19 The indefinite limits of the county of Illinois as expressed in the act, although actually including the entire northwest, must be understood to mean the limited region defined by Thomas Hutchins in his topographical description of Virginia, issued in 1778, as "that part of my Map called Illinois Country, lying between the Mississippi westerly, the Illinois River northerly, the Wabash easterly, and the Ohio southerly." The act is in Hening's Statutes, vol. 9, p. 553.

forthwith transmitted to the Virginia delegates, to be by them communicated to Congress.

Not all of this volley of resolutions of the Virginia assembly reached the intended mark, as some of the items have not been located in the journals or papers of the Continental Congress; and not one of them produced the results desired. The edict of the commonwealth against Indian grants would serve as a "no trespass" notice to all the states until a land office route to the preserves was open. The warning of a British invasion by colonization fell short of the general congress. The proffer of land from her own abundance, for the bounty dues of landless states, seems like a a reward of merit for good behavior. It was read in Congress on the 26th of January and repeated, with protestations of sincerity, in the first land session proposition of 1781. The lands intended for this generosity were in Ohio territory; but as the lands were still claimed by New York and Connecticut, and as the general controversy respecting their ultimate disposition was still pending in Congress, the offer to distribute them to pay off the debts of a few states could not well be entertained in that body. The main resolution proposing confederation without Maryland did not reach the files of Congress at once. Doubtless it found the popular channel of publicity of that day, being privately printed as "broadsides" and distributed with signatures attached. It cannot be said that it influenced the action of Delaware, and its effect on Maryland was not quite what was expected by the authors of the resolution. One response may or may not be attributed to it: the issue at Hartford on the 7th of April of power to the Connecticut delegates to conclude confederation without the thirteenth

But Maryland had made ready for the assault. Fully anticipating the responsibility that must come upon the state as last obstinate objector in the confederation dispute, the general assembly had prepared a justification of past action and had taken counsel of the sense and deliberate judgment of the state for a future course. It was decided that the state should remain independent, continuing in loyalty to the original compact of colonies until liberty was won, but not confederating on the basis proposed.

The declaration of intentions respecting confederation, and the personal instructions to their six delegates in Congress for use of the same, were prepared by the Maryland assembly simultaneously with the Virginia se-The two instruments bear date of December 15, four ries of resolves. days ahead of the Virginia proposition. The Maryland declaration is a restatement of the series of resolves, remonstrance, and instructions 20 of the assembly in the course of the dispute, upon which the amendments and alterations proposed on behalf of the State from time to time were drawn, while the second instrument conveys assurances to the delegates of the sentiments of the state, and explicit directions for their final action on confederation.

The declaration of Maryland was laid before Congre by the delegates of that state on Wednesday, January 6, 1779, but it was 'ot then considered. It is not recorded as read in Congress, nor does it a 'ear anywhere

The instructions here referred to are in the action of the Maryland by neral assembly of the previous June, which had formed the basis of objections urged a Congress against confederation at that time:

Resolved, That the delegates from this state consider themselves bound by the instructions given in Octoher session last, and that they endeavour to procure from Congress an explicit answer to the propositions therein contained; but that they do not at any time consider themselves at liberty to ratify or confirm any confederation of perpetual friendship and anion, nutil they have communicated such answer to the general assembly of this state and shall receive their express authority to do so.

in the journals, 21 but it is not to be doubted that the sentiments it expressed respecting the confederacy were "made publicly known and explicitly and concisely declared," since the delegates were directed in the instruc-

. . . . to have it printed and to present signed copies thereof to each of the delegates of other states to the intent and purpose that copies may be communicated to our brethren in the United States, and the contents taken into their serious and candid consideration.

The old argument appears in the declaration of the injustice and unfairness in the exclusive use of the crown lands by individual states, but additional force and effect is secured by reference to certain preparations for immediate sales of the vacant lands. However, the most interesting feature of the paper is the fresh cry of alarm raised on account of newly discovered dangers in the proposed confederation.

Maryland apprehensions were aroused by the reading of Article III of the confederation, which seems to be merely an expression in fervent language of the "firm bond of friendship" which was to hold the sister states in perpetual amity. By this bond the assembly seemed to fear that Maryland might be "burthened with heavy expenses for the subduing and guaranteeing immense tracts of country, although having no share of the moneys arising from the sales of the lands within those tracts or be otherwise benefitted thereby." It is stated:

We declare that we mean not to subject ourselves to such guaranty nor will we be responsible for any part of such expense, unless the third article and proviso [of article ix] be explained so as to prevent their being hereafter construed in a manner injurious to this state.22

There are promises, also, that Maryland will accede to the confederation provided the desired amendments are made, expressly reserving or securing to the United States a right in common in, and to all the lands lying to the westward of the frontiers as aforesaid, not granted to, surveyed for, or purchased by individuals at the commencement of the present war, in such manner that the said lands be sold out, or otherwise disposed of for the common benefit of all the states; and that the money arising from the sale of those lands, or the quit rents reserved thereon, may be deemed and taken as part of the moneys belonging to the United States, and as such be appropriated by Congress towards defraying the expenses of the war, and the payment of interest on moneys borrowed or to be borrowed on the credit of the United States from France or any other European power, or for any other joint benefit of the United States.

The final paragraph of the declaration pledges Maryland's adherence to the cause of freedom until independence is firmly established, but shifts the responsibility for prolongation of the war upon those "who by refusing to comply with requisitions so just and reasonable have hitherto prevented the confederation from taking place, and are therefore justly chargeable with every evil which have flowed and may flow free such procrastination." 23

21 It is stated in the final act of ratification of the Maryland Assa bly, adopted February 2, 1781, and read in Congress February 12, that the declar ion "stands entered on the journals of Congress," but no such endorsement appear on the original ms. document, which is in the papers of the Continental Congress, No 70, p. 293.

22 Article III of the confederation reads as follows:

The said states hereby severally enter into a firm league of friendship with each other, for their common defence, the security of their liberties, and their mutual and general welfare; binding themselves to assist each other, against all force offered to, or attacks made upon them, or any of them on account of religion, sovereignty, trade or any other pretence whatever.

23 Printed in full in Hening's Statutes, vol. 10, p. 549.

No trace of the instructions appears in the January record of Congress. This document was not filed with the declaration, but was read in secret and held in reserve by the Maryland delegation to answer the call for further powers for ratification, should that be heard. The paper instructs the delegates respecting the use of the declaration, and directs them as to the votes they give and the opinions they deliver in Congress respecting confed-"We have spoken with freedom as becomes freemen, and wesincerely wish that our representations, may make such an impression on that assembly as to induce them to make such addition to the articles of confederation as may bring about a permanent union."

Maryland's course of opposition is explained at length, and the obstruction of the confederation is fully justified to the delegates on patriotic grounds. The private use of the crown lands, which were secured at common expense, is the main point. The instability of the proposed union, formed on so great an injustice, is argued on the theory that the states which have acceded to the present confederation contrary to their own interests and judgments will consider it no longer binding when the causes cease to operate, and will eagerly embrace the first occasion of asserting their just rights and securing their independence. The preparations of Virginia to sell the lands is cited as to what may be expected.

Suppose Virginia indisputably possessed of the extensive and fertile country to which she has set up a claim, what would be the consequences to Maryland? They cannot escape the least discerning. Virginia, by selling on the most moderate terms a small portion of the lands in question would draw into her treasury vast sums of money, and in proportion to the sums arising from such sales would be enabled to lessen her taxes. Lands comparatively cheap and taxes comparatively low with the lands and taxes of an adjacent state, would quickly drain the state thus disadvantageously circumstanced of its most useful inhabitants, its wealth, and its consequence in the scale of confederated states would sink of course.

The declared intention of Virginia to relinquish at some future period a portion of the country contended for is criticised "as made to lull suspicion asleep, and to cover the design of a secret ambition; or, if the thought were seriously entertained, the lands are now claimed to reap an immediate profit from the sales." The argument of nationalizing the crown lands follows, and then the words:

We have coally and dispassionately considered the subject; we have weighed probable inc veniences and hardships against the sacrifice of just and essential rights; ar do instruct you not to agree to the confederation unless an article or article be added thereto in conformity with our declaration. Should we succeed in lotaining such article or articles, then you are hereby fully empowered to acr de to the confederation.24 or reasons not disclosed in official records the Virginia resolutions proposing a confederacy of part of the states were not presented in Congress until the 20th of May. On that day the delegates of Virginia laid before Congress an attested copy of the two resolutions of the assembly pertaining to this subject, which had been in their care since the December previous, and the same were read and entered in the journals. In pursuance of the powers and instructions therein contained the delegates moved to carry the resolutions into immediate effect by recommending ratification on the basis proposed, on a fixed date to be determined in Congress. The delegates of Virginia then delivered a paper signed by them in the following words:

²⁴ The original ms. Instructions are in the papers of the Continental Congress, No. 70, p. 305. The paper is recorded in the journals of Congress under date of May 21, 1779, and may be found in Hening's Statutes, vol. 10, p. 553.

In consequence of the foregoing instructions and powers to us given we do hereby declare, that we are ready and willing to ratify the confederation with any one or more states named therein, so that the same shall be forever binding upon the state of Virginia.

Merewether Smith, Cyrus Griffin, Richard Henry Lee. William Fleming.

No action of Congress is recorded on the Virginia proposition. No discussion took place and, apparently, the motion of the Virginia delegates was not put to vote. The next day's business began with the delegates of Maryand "informing Congress, that they had received instructions respecting the articles of confederation, which they were directed to lay before Congress, and to have entered on their journals." The Maryland instructions were read by the secretary and were spread upon the pages of the journal. Following this the Connecticut delegation filed the further powers issued to them authorizing them to ratify the confederation with eleven states, omitting Maryland, "in the most full and ample manner. Always provided, that the state of Maryland be not thereby excluded from acceding to said confederation at anytime thereafter."

Confident in the security of her claims from local interference, and no longer fearing the interposition of Congress, the Virginia assembly now made haste with the legislation necessary for immediate disposition of the property to the best advantage of the commonwealth. The long deferred land office was provided for in a bill enacted soon after the close of the Indiana Company hearing. A second bill "for adjusting and settling the titles of claimers to unpatented lands under the present and former governments, previous to the establishment of the commonwealth's land office," was enacted at the same time to ease the anxiety in the settlements on the fron-

The land office was to open in October, the terms and manner of granting waste and unappropiated lands were fixed, and a register was appointed to take office immediately. A special order for record books of sales was made in the assembly so that no time would be lost in the remote counties of Monongahela, Yohogania, Ohio, and Kentucky, bordering upon the river. The lands were to be distributed according to the ancient custom to prospectors making entry and survey by county surveyors commissioned by the College of William and Mary, and warrants issued on proof. Officers and soldiers had tipreference, as provided by the several bounty laws, and actual settle on uncontested claims were also privileged to purchase the lands they occupied. All other waste and unappropriated lands on the eastern western waters, within the territory of the commonwealth, were for sale to any person in quantity desired at the rate of forty pounds per hundred acres. The laws were printed and distributed to the various counties, and extraordinary means were employed to spread abroad quickly the news of the opening of the land office. On the last day of the summer session of the Virginia assembly it was

Resolved, That the Governor be desired to transmit by the post one hundred copies of the act.... to the Virginia delegates in Congress, and desire them to take the most speedy and effectual measures for dispensing and publishing the same in the different states.²⁵

These laws were intended to apply, until further orders of the Virginia assembly, to lands only as far westward as the Ohio River, but it will not be doubted that it was the plan to extend as soon as practicable to the regions across the river. But the time never came for Virginia to sell off Ohio lands. Disapproval of the land office act arose to prevent it. These laws made actual trespassers of the speculators and settlers along the river, most of whom held title from the confederated Indians. As this was an issue of national magnitude the dispossessed memorialists took an appeal to Congress and secured the interposition of the United States to restrain Virginia.26

The memorials were presented and read in Congress on the 14th of September. George Morgan, petitioning for the Indiana Company, contends "that the tract of country claimed by the Indiana Company was separated by the King of Great Britain, before independence was declared, from the dominion, which, in the right of the crown. Virginia claimed over it, and cannot remain subject to the jurisdiction of Virginia, or any particular state, but of the whole United States in Congress, assembled."

Morgan prays for an order to stay Virginia in the sale of the land in question till the case can be heard in Congress, and "the whole rights of the owners of the tract of land called Vandalia, of which Indiana is a part, shall be ascertained in such a manner as may tend to support the sovereignty of the United States and the just rights of the individual therein." The same point was raised by William Trent in a second memorial in regard to the larger tract called Vandalia, and there were other appeals of minor importance.27

The delegates of Virginia made instant objection to the consideration of these Papers in Congress, raising for the first time in American politics an issue of state rights. The matter of Virginia's protest does not appear in the records, but from subsequent proceedings in Congress its purport may be known. The objections were based on the doctrine that Congress had no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the Morgan memorial since it was related to the internal affairs of a sovereign state. The question was put to vote and the reference was ordered. The committee of five delegates elected by vote of states was directed by order of Congress to enquire into the foundation of the objection formerly made by the Virginia delegates, upon the reading of the petition and the memorial, to the jurisdiction of Congress on the subject matter of the said papers, and first report the facts relating to that point.28

The committee took quick action on the protest, with results detrimental to Virginia, declaring

. that they have read over and considered the state of facts given in by the delegates of Virginia, and cannot find any such distinction between the question of jurisdiction of Congress, and the merits of the cause, as to recommend any decision upon the first separately from the last.

And in addition to this, they offer a preamble and a resolution reprobating the action of the commonwealth in opening a land office.

The delegates were in conflict in Congress for two days over this report. There was apparently no trouble in the decision on the point of jurisdiction, for the members seemed to agree with the committee; but on the wording of the preamble, and the substance of the resolution, there were several divisions. Maryland delegates offered a substitute of more drastic criticism of Virginia's land office programme. On this there was a sharp conflict.²⁹ The Maryland form carried at first, but on reconsideration a more reasonable resolution was adopted, in these words:

Whereas the appropriation of vacant lands by the several states during the continuance of the war, will, in the opinion of Congress, be attended with great mischiefs; therefore,

Resolved, that it be earnestly recommended to the state of Virginia to reconsider their late act of assembly for opening their land office; and that it be recommended to the said state, and all other states similarly circumstanced, to forbear settling or issuing warrants for unappropriated lands or granting the same during the continuance of the present war.

Report of this action first reached the Virginia assembly in a letter from the delegates of the commonwealth. The letter and proceedings were read in the house of delegates on the 13th of November and referred to a committee of the whole house on the state of the commonwealth. The committee took up the matter the same day and soon came to resolutions which were at once reported; and, all formalities being suspended in view of the importance of the subject, the resolutions were unanimously agreed to by both house and senate.

Resolved, nemine contra dicente, That a remonstrance be drawn up to the Honthe American Congress, firmly asserting the right of this commonwealth to its own territory, complaining of their having received petitions from certain persons, styling themselves the Indiana and Vandalia companies, upon claims which not only interfere with the laws and internal policy, but tend to subvert the government of this commonwealth, and introduce general confusion; and expressly excepting and protesting against the jurisdiction of Congress therein as unwarranted by the fundamental principles of the confederation.

Resolved, nemine contra dicente, That the Governor, with the advice of the council, be empowered and required to use the most effectual means for apprehending and securing any person or persons within this commonwealth. who shall attempt to subvert the government thereof, or set up any separate government within the same, that such person or persons may be brought to trial, according to due course of law.

A remonstrance to Congress was issued by Virginia in pursuance of this action, but not in the belligerent tones of the resolutions. The remonstrance bears date of its adoption in the assembly thirty days after the passage of the resolutions. It doubtless found its way directly to the congressional committee, which was still at work on the memorials. The remonstrance assures Congress that, "Although the general assembly of Virginia would make great sacrifices to the common interests of America... and be ready to listen to any just and reasonable propositions for removing the ostensible causes of the delay to the complete ratification of the confederation, they... expressly protest against any jurisdiction or right of adjudication in Congress, upon... any matter or thing subversive of the internal policy, civil government, or sovereignty of this or any other of the United American States." There are other interesting features of the remonstrance not anticipated in the resolutions: a warning against establishing dangerous precedents in seizing lands of states; a reminder of the effect of congressional interposition, upon the pending negotiations for peace, in which the charters of the states were to be urged as the basis of definition of the United States boundaries; so and a reference to the safety clause in the ninth article of the confederation by which "the rights of sovereignty and jurisdiction within her own territory were reserved and secured to Virginia when she acceded to the articles of confederation." There is information, also, of the offer of the general assembly of bounty lands "out of their territory on the northwest side of the Ohio river," and Congress is assured that "the offer when accepted will be most cheerfully made good." No word appears respecting reconsideration of the land office act, nor of a suspension of the distribution of the vacant lands; but in the first paragraph of the document it is announced that "the general assembly have enacted a law to prevent present settlement on the northwest side of the Ohio river."

²⁹ Mr. Paca of Maryland wished to censure Virginia for opening the land office, because it "has produced much uneasiness, dispute and controversy, and greatly weakened these United States by the emigration of their inhabitants to parts remote from defence against the common enemy." But as the land office had been open less than a month this language was scarcely justifiable.

The law to prevent present settlements on the northwest side of the Ohio River, referred to in the Virginia remonstrance, is easily identified as a paragraph inserted by the Virginia House as an amendment to a bill relating to the location of warrants on the military reservation, then in its final passage in the assembly. The circumstances of this enactment are interesting. Information was received in the House on the 8th of November, in a communication from the Governor, respecting "intrusions on Indian lands upon the Ohio." From reports received the same day in Congress it is learned that these intruders are some of the inhabitants from Yoghiagania and Ohio counties, Virginia, who had crossed the Ohio River and made small improvements on the Indian's lands, from the river Muskingum to Fort McIntosh, and 30 miles up the branches of the Ohio River.

The trespassers had been apprehended and their huts destroyed by the Continentals under Col. Broadhead. In consequence of this news from the frontiers the assembly made haste to enlarge the scope of the pending bill, adding the paragraph prohibiting settlements on the northwest side of the Ohio, and

. . desiring the Governor to issue a proclamation, requiring all persons settled on the said land immediately to remove therefrom, and forbidding others to settle in future, and moreover, with the advice of the council from time to time, to order such armed force as shall be thought necessary to remove from the said lands, such person or persons as shall remain on or settle contrary to the said proclamation.³²

New York, moved by this display of national spirit in Congress, made an immediate surrender of all claims upon the western country. The firm stand of Congress against Virginia, proudest of the claimants, inspired the legislature to relinquish the long standing rights of the state to the Iroquois lands. New York gave up this great property freely, with no thought of reservation, and without suggestion of personal indemnity for the expenses of a century of support of the historic contract with the Six United Na-

³⁰ Cf. Note 6, supra.

2 This act is printed in Hening's Statutes, vol. 10, p. 159, but there is no trace of the tions, from whom the state derived title. The New York cession of territory is in the form of "an act to facilitate the completion of the articles of confederation and perpetual union among the American States," passed by the legislature on the 19th of February, 1780. The act confers full power and authority upon their delegates in Congress, . . . to limit and restrict the boundaries of the state in the western parts thereof, either with respect to the jurisdiction or right of pre-emption of soil, or both, and to relinquish the territory to the north and westward of these boundaries, "to be and enure for the use and benefit of such of the United States as shall become members of the federal union."

The New York act of cession was read in Congress on the 7th of March following its passage, and was referred to a committee of three delegates chosen by a vote of the states to consider the matter. The New York act and the unfinished business of the former committee of five, the Maryland and Virginia papers, and the memorials of the Indian claimants, were reported upon six months later, and the famous recommendations of September 6, calling upon the claimant states to surrender a portion of their claims for the general good, is the report of this committee.⁸³

Congress took the report into consideration on that date, and it was agreed to as reported. This document is often printed in full in accounts of the land cessions. The committee conceived it to be unnecessary to take up the matters raised in the papers of Maryland and Virginia. They declared

That it appears more advisable to press upon those states which can remove the embarrassments respecting the western country, a liberal surrender of a portion of their territorial claims since they cannot be preserved entire without endangering the stability of the general confederacy.

It was advised to urge upon the legislatures the indispensable necessity of establishing the federal union. The example of the New York act was commended. The states were to be urged to pass the laws for the desired cessions, and the legislature of Maryland was to be earnestly requested to authorize its delegates in Congress to subscribe the articles.

Congress took the necessary measures to carry out the provisions of this resolution. But in order to reassure the states making land cessions, that the territory entrusted to Congress would be held only for the common use and benefit of the United States in the manner contended for from the beginning of the controversy, a pledge was issued October 10, in this form:

Resolved, That the unappropriated lands that may be ceded or relinquished to the United States, by any particular state, pursuant to the recommendation of Congress of the 6th day of September last, shall be disposed of for the common benefit of the United States, and be settled and formed into distinct republican states, which shall become members of the federal union, and have the same rights of sovereignty, freedom and independence as the other states; that each state which shall be so formed shall contain a suitable extent of territory, not less than 100 nor more than 150 miles square, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit; That the necessary and reasonable expenses which any particular state shall have incurred since the commencement of the present war, in subduing any British posts, or in maintaining forts or garrisons within and for the defence, or in acquiring any part of the territory that may be ceded or relinquished to the United States, shall be reimbursed.

The sequence of commitments of these papers is in a tangle on account of omissions in the journals of Congress. The original committee of October 8, John Witherspoon of New Jersey, chairman, seems to have been superseded by this committee of three, Messrs. Sherman of Connecticut, Burke of North Carolina, and Holton of Massachusetts Bay. Later a committee of seven was chosen with John Witherspoon again as chairman, and the final cessions report of November, 1781, was made by another committee of which Elias Boudinot was chairman.

That the said lands shall be granted or settled at such times and under such regulations as shall hereafter be agreed on by the United States in Congress assembled, or any nine or more of them.

Two days after the adoption of this resolution in Congress, October 12. 1780, the Connecticut legislature, without knowledge of the programme therein pledged for territorial disposition, resolved to make a proportionate cession of the land claims of the state in the western country. The Connecticut resolutions proposed to surrender a portion of lands westward of the Susquehanna purchase, in compliance with the earlier recommendation. reserving full jurisdiction of the lands ceded. This was unsatisfactory as compared with the unreserved cession authorized by New York, but the resolution was not officially returned to Congress until the last day of January, by which time the third state had reported a plan of cession even more objectionable.84

Virginia's response to the recommendations of Congress is in the form of a resolution of the general assembly bearing date of January 2, 1781. The resolution makes no cession of territory, and confers no authority on the delegates to cede. It is merely a resolve that the commonwealth "will yield all claims" to a portion of the crown lands, on conditions which Congress was compelled to decline, for reasons expressed in the after-report of the committee, "as inconsistent with the interests of the United States, the duty Congress owes to their constituents, or the rights necessarily vested in them as the sovereign power of the United States." By the terms of the act, the assembly pledges

That this commonwealth will yield to the Congress of the United States, for the benefit of the said United States, all right, title and claim that the said

The method of cession proposed by Connecticut was too clumsy to admit f acceptance. The lands were to be granted direct to settlers by Connecticut for the benefit of the confederated United States, in specified estates, on survey warrants issued by Congress to grantees, as agreed to by the delegates, or any three of them. There is an attested copy of the resolution of cession in the Papers of the Continental Congress, No. 66, vol. 2, pp. 178-9. Following is a copy of the record of the action in the ms. vol. ii, Records of the State of Connecticut, October, 1780:

the ms. vol. ii, Records of the State of Connecticut, October, 1780:

This Assembly taking into their Consideration a Resolution of Congress of the 6th of Septembriast recomending to the several States which have vacant nnappropriated Lands lying within the Limits of their respective Charters and Claims to adopt Measures which may effectually remove the Obstacle that prevents a Ratification of the Articles of confederation together with the Papers from the States of New York Maryland & Virginia, which accompanied the same and being anxions for the accomplishment of an Event most desirable and important to the Liberty and Independence of this rising Empire, will do every Thing in their power to facilitate the same, Notwithstanding the Objection which they have to several parts of it. Resolved by this Assembly, that they will Ceed and relinquish to the United States who shall be confederated for their Use and benefit their Right or preemption of Soil in or to so much of the vacant and unapropriated Lands Claimed by this State contained and comprehended within the extent and Limits of their Charter and Grant from King Charles the second, and which lies and extends within the Limits of the same Westward of the Snsquenanna Purchase so called and Eastward of the River Missiph, as shall be in Just proportion of what shall be Ceede and relinquished by the other States, Claiming and holding vacant Lands as aforesaid with Quantity of such their Claim unappropriated at the Time when the Congress of the United States was first convened and held at Philadelphia.

And it is further Resolved that all the Lands to be ceeded and relinquished hereby, for the wened and hield at Philadelphia.

And it is further Resolved that all the Lands to be ceded and relinquished hereby, for the benefit of the Confederated United States with respect to property, but which shall nevertheless remain nader the Jurisdiction of this State shall be disposed of and appropriated in such manner only as the Congress of the United states shall direct and that a Warrant under the Authority of Congress for surveying and laying ont any part thereof, shall entitle the Party in whose favour it shall issue, to cause the same to be laid out and returned according to the Directions of such Warrant, and thereupon the Interest and Title of This State shall pass and be confirmed to the Grantee for the Estate specified in the said Warrant for which no other fee or reward shall be demanded or received than such as shall be allowed by Congress always provided that said Lands to be granted as aforesaid, be laid out and surveyed in Townships in regular form to a suitable number of Settlers in such manner as will best promote the Settlement and cultivation of the same according to the true spirit and principles of a Republican State. And the Delegates of this State in Congress or any three of them are hereby Impowered & Authorized in helalf of this State to agree to the Location of such Warrants and surveys as shall be made by Congress according to and in pursuance of the Resolves aforesaid and whatever may be further necessary for the same being carried into full Execution.

commonwealth hath to the lands northwest of the river Ohio, upon the following conditions, to wit: . . .

The conditions enumerated in the resolutions aside from those expressed in the resolution of October 10, all of which are restated in the Virginia resolutions, include protection for the French and Canadian inhabitants of the Illinois; reservations of lands for the men of Clark's expedition and, if needed, for other soldiery of Virginia; invalidation of all Indian purchases or royal grants which are inconsistent with the chartered rights, laws, and customs of Virginia; and guaranty by the United States to the commonwealth of "all the remaining territory of Virginia included between the Atlantic ocean and the southeast side of the river Ohio, and the Maryland, Pennsylvania, and North Carolina boundaries." The "cession" was to be void and of no effect unless all the states in the American Union should ratify the articles of confederation, and it was expected in return "that every other state in the Union, under similar circumstances as to vacant territory, will make similar cessions of the same to the United States for the general emolument."

The three cessions of New York, Connecticut, and Virginia, covering practically the same lands and being so fundamentally different, required careful consideration, and Congress ordered a committee of seven to be elected to take them in charge.85 The whole business of land concessions was relegated to this committee, where it remained until the thorough, comprehensive, and exhaustive report, which was submitted to Congress on the 3d of November, 1781, was finally disposed of in Congress eighteen months later. But while the theory and principle upon which the cessions were to stand remained officially in this prolonged state of abeyance, there was no uncertainty as to the status of the Northwest Territory. Sovereign control of the crown lands of King George was forever secure in the United States, and it remained only for the subscriptions to the definitive Treaty at Paris to make it absolute.

Maryland was now ready to enter the confederation. The cessions were made in part only, and in form wholly unsatisfactory, but with no cessions Maryland would have closed the circle of the confederacy at this juncture. The ultimate surrender of the so-called claims of individual states was inevitable; the manner and form of surrender was immaterial. It was merely a matter of courtesy, from this time on, for Congress to negotiate with particular legislatures for terms of cessions. The natural unity of interests resulting from the near approach of peace, and the certitude of a liberal allowance from the British Commissioners for peace in the boundary settlements, would have given Congress the power of assertion of control over the claimed lands if that had been necessary. 86 Other consider-

The three papers named and the memorials from the earlier committee were all recommitted in July to a new committee of five, of which Elias Boudinot of New Jersey committed in July to a new committee of five, of which Elias Boudinot of New Jersey was chairman.

Congress had already made assertion of supremacy in a number of cases. In addition to the interposition in the Virginia land office matter, there is the example ations impelled the state at this time—considerations of sentimental or patriotic nature—and, disregarding the cessions, the Maryland assembly ordered the name of the state to be subscribed within the thirteenth space on the scroll of the Act of Confederation. It remained only for Maryland to await with complaisance for the assured congressional control of the National domain.

The act of the Maryland assembly authorizing the ratification of the articles of confederation is in the form of a preamble and a declaration, agreed to on the 2d of February, 1781. The paper was reported to Congress and spread upon the minutes under date of February 12. The preamble tells its own story of the apprehensions which had led Maryland to the act:

Whereas it hath been said that the common enemy is encouraged by this state not acceding to the confederation, to hope that the union of the sister states may be dissolved; and therefore prosecutes the war in expectation of an event so disgraceful to America; and our friends and illustrious ally are impressed with an idea that the common cause would be promoted by our formally acceding to the confederation; this general assembly conscious that this state hath, from the commencement of the war, strenuously exerted herself in the common cause, and fully satisfied that if no formal confederation was to take place, it is the fixed determination of this state to continue her exertions to the utmost, agreeably to the faith pledged to the Union; from an earnest desire to conciliate the affection of the sister states; to convince all the world of our unutterable resolution to support the independence of the United States, and to destroy forever any apprehensions of our friends, or hope in our enemies, of this state being again united to Great Britain.

And in order to guard the points of long contention the conditions of ratification are thus positively expressed:

And it is hereby declared, that, by acceding to the said confederation, this state doth not relinquish, nor intend to relinquish, any right or interest she hath, with the other united or confederated states to the back country; and claim the same as fully as was done by the legislature of this state, in their declaration, which stands entered on the journals of Congress; this state relying on the justice of the several states hereafter, as to the said claim made by this state. And it is further declared, that no article in the said confederation, can or ought to bind this or any other state, to guarantee any exclusive claim of any particular state, to the soil of the said back lands, or any such claim of jurisdiction over the said lands or the inhabitants thereof.

On this firm foundation Maryland would have placed the final ratification of the confederation. Had it remained on that basis no more would have been required to place Congress in absolute control of all vacant lands and indeterminate boundaries of every state. The back line of Virginia would then have fallen at the water ridge of the Alleghanies, and the states of Kentucky and West Virginia would have had an independent organization and a more general settlement. But a conditional ratification was an impossibility without amendments that would require ratification and subscription of thirteen states. The articles must stand as ratified in Congress; they could not be affected by the conditional action of any state legislature. Maryland's signature was yet to be placed on the form of ratification, and of the Pennsylvania-Virginia boundary disputes, wherein, on December 27, 1779, Congress resolved:

That it be recommended to the contending parties not to grant any part of the disputed land, or to disturb the possession of any persons living therein, and to avoid every appearance of force until the dispute can be amicably settled by both States, or brought to a just decision by the intervention of Congress; that possessions forcibly taken be restored to the original possessors, and things placed in the situation in which they were at the commencement of the present War, without prejudice to the claims of either party.

a day was set and a programme arranged for the ceremony-March 1, 1781, at twelve o'clock, in Congress, when the final ratification of the confederation of the United States of America was to be announced to the public. This ceremony was carried out as arranged, and the completed articles of confederation were entered on the minutes of Congress with the signatures transcribed. But before the act of confederation could be completed by such a ceremony it was necessary to perfect the record as to the action of New York. The act of cession of the legislature of that state was accordingly spread upon the minutes. The New York delegation then executed in Congress a declaration, which was likewise entered on the By this instrument the delegates declare that, being uninstructed on the subject of the Virginia guarantee by their constitutents, the cession of land and the restriction of boundary of the state of New York which they are about to make on behalf of the state, "shall not be absolute, but, on the contrary, shall be subject to ratification and disavowal by the people of the state," unless the reserved territorial rights of New York shall be guaranteed for her future jurisdiction by the United States in the same manner as stipulated by Virginia as a condition of the cession. Following this in the minutes comes the deed of restriction and absolute cession transcribed as executed in due form with legal seals and signatures all complete. The New York northern and western boundaries are given as they now exist, and the delegates:

.... cede, transfer, and forever relinquish to, and for the only use and benefit of such of the states as are or shall become parties to the articles of confederation, all the right, title, interest, jurisdiction and claim, of the state of New York, to all the lands and territories to the northward and westward of the boundaries.... to be branted and disposed of, and appropriated in such manner only, as the congress of the said United or Confederated States shall order or direct.²⁷

The interest now passes to the struggle of Virginia with the committee of Congress to whom was re-committed the acts of cession and the unfinished business of the Trent and Morgan memorials. The Virginia delegation resisted a notice to appear before the committee and confer with the memorialists on the subject of their memorials, conceiving that "it derogates from the sovereignty of a state to be drawn into a contest by an individual or individuals." They inquire if Congress "intended to authorize this committee to receive claims and hear evidence in behalf of the Indiana and Vandalia Companies adverse to the claims or cessions of the states, and requested the committee to forbear the conference until Congress could They appealed to Congress a second time for a ruling "on the authority of the committee to admit council or to hear documents, proofs, or evidence not among the records, nor on the files of Congress, which have not been specifically referred to them." Congress supported the committee on these rulings, and Virginia from this time on found herself deserted by her former friends in the north. Finally, in the last call of the committee for proofs, the delegates on the part of Virginia stood on their state's rights, "declining to make any elucidation of the claim, either to the lands ceded, or to the lands requested to be guaranteed to the state by Congress." The committee delayed no longer, and made final report to Congress on the 3d of November, 1781, on all matters recommitted to them.

The report of the committee of five appears in full in the journals of the Continental Congress for the first of May, 1782, when, after several postponements, it was on the order of the day for final discussion. It is an exhaustive report, covering all points under dispute of the right and title of the public domain, laying foundations for the land policy of the United States for all time to come. The report deals primarily with the cessions, but it does not bring the settlement of this vexatious matter. Many years must pass before all that was necessary was said and done in Congress on this subject. But while it seems to fail in securing concessions from the states in the form desired, it removed the subject from controversy, advanced the sovereignty of the United States, and fixed a modus operandi in territorial disposition and Indian control.

The report takes up the several cessions and claims on the basis of vouchers examined, 33 and information obtained as to the status of the lands mentioned in each; and gives the results of the findings in the form of recommendations, with reasons itemized. The findings are entirely adverse to Virginia on all points in controversy, and, according to the recommendations of the report the act of cession of the state of New York is to be accepted as based on claims of jurisdiction authentically derived from the Six United Nations of Indians. The claims of Massachusetts and Connecticut are disregarded entirely in the report, and these states are earnestly recommended "that they do without delay release all claims and pretensions of claim to the western country, without any conditions or restrictions whatever." As to Virginia, it is resolved that "Congress cannot accept of the cession proposed to be made, or guarantee the tract of country claimed by Virginia," for the reason that the lands are within the claims of other states and outside the bounds of the late colony of Virginia as it stood at the beginning of the war. It is proposed as a resolution,

That it be earnestly recommended to the state of Virginia, as they value the peace, welfare and increase of the United States, that they reconsider their said act of cession, and by a proper act for that purpose, cede to the United States all claims and pretensions of claim to the lands and country beyond a reasonable western boundary, consistent with their former acts while a colony under the power of Great Britain, and agreeable to their just rights of soil and jurisdiction at the commencement of the present war, and that free from any conditions and restrictions whatever.

Certain of the claims of the memorialists are sustained by the committee and confirmation of their purchases recommended, while others are condemned. The outline of a national Indian policy will be referred to later, as also the pledge of suitable method of opening up the territory for settlement by a new system of quadrilateral surveying based perhaps on the suggestion contained in the Connecticut resolution of cession, adopted at Hartford on the 12th of October, 1780, Always provided that the said lands to be granted be laid out and surveyed in Townships in regular form to a suitable number of settlers, in such manner as will best promote the settlement and cultivation of the same according to the true spirit and principles of a republican state.

There are, apparently, none of the vouchers referred to as submitted by the states in elucidation of their claims among the papers, nor can there be found "the written paper hereto annexed and numbered twenty" which the report states was delivered by the Virginia delegates on their final refusal to submit proof.

Curtis Guild, Jr., former Governor of Massachusetts, read a paper on Gustavus Adolphus and his Connection with the Puritan Uprising, in which he showed that the king was the advocate of freedom of thought, of conscience, and of government, and one who made war for civil and religious liberty, not for territory.

On motion of Hosea S. Ballou, it was voted that the thanks of the Society be given to Ex-Governor Guild for his address, which treated so exhaustively and interestingly the story of Gustavus Adolphus and the Thirty Years War.

The meeting then dissolved.

NOTES

It having come to the attention of this Society that certain genealogists and publishers have used the name of the Society in connection with their own enterprises, the Society again desires to state that it has NO genealogical representatives in this country or in England, nor is it in any way connected with any unbling tions of the these that it is any way connected with any publications other than those that it issues over its own name at 18 Somerset Street, Boston.

LAMBERT.—Miss Annie C. Miller of Roxbury owns a very old and imperfect primer, or catechism. on which appears the words: "Jesse Lambert brought from England in 1680. Milford, Conn." The handwriting is of the Colonial period. This confirms Savage's statement that Lambert was of Milford in the year mantioned. mentioned. C. K. BOLTON.

THWING, LEVERETT.—The following item may be of interest to the Leverett and allied families. In searching for the birthplace of my ancestor. Benjamin Thwing, I came across the wills of John Thwing of Kingston-upon-Hull, Yorkshire, Eng., and of his wife Helen, or Ellen. John Thwing speaks of his son-inlaw Ralph Hudson, and Helen Thwing names her danghter Marie and son-in-law Ralph Hudson. Ralph Hudson, wife Marie and three children, and Benjamin Thwing came in the Susan and Ellen in 1635. Their daughter Hannah married Gov. John Leverett, son of Elder Thomas Leverett. Their descendants, including John Leverett, President of Harvard College. are well known.

Snow.—In the REGISTER, vol. 49. p. 202, the author of the Snow Genealogy states that the wife of Joseph³ (Joseph², Nicholas¹) Snow was Sarah Smith, that they had several children, of whom one was Nathaniel and that Joseph the husband died 23 Jan. 1704-5 at Eastham. On the succeeding page mention is made of the marriage of Sarah Snow to Daniel Hamilton of Monomoit 9 Ang. 1708, but her identity is left in doubt. That she was the widow of Joseph³ Snow seems to be established by the following testimony: "Nathaniel Snow of Lawful Age Testifieth and Saith that on or abonte ye year 1709 I went to Chatham to Live with my Father in Law Daniel Hambleton Late of said Chatham Deceased and I saw my said Father, John Atkins, Theophilus Mayo, Thomas Mayo, John Smith and Joshna Higgins Mow and Carry of hay from Mounimoit Great Beach for seven years together without Molestation. Sworn in Court July 1753. Att. Sam'l Winthrop Clerk." Files, Superior Court of Indicature, No. 76,149. The first wife of Daniel Hamilton was Mary daughter of Samnel Smith of Eastham.

There is a probability that Isaac and Elisha Snow, sons of John² (Nicholas¹), may have removed to Duck Creek. Delaware, in 1711. Several families went may have removed to Duck Creek Delaware, in 1711. Solution of Monomoit there from Chatham in that year. SHERMAN: A CORRECTION.—In volume 3, pp. 1993-5. of "Genealogical and Personal Memoirs Relating to the Families of the State of Massachusetts," published by the Lewis Historical Publishing Company, New York, 1910, there is given a faulty record of one line from Hon. Philip¹ Sherman to his grandson, William³ (Eber,² Philip¹). It states that William³'s son. Jacob,⁴ b. Nov. 20. 1733, in N. Kingstown, R. I., married an Elizabeth Williams and had a family of layour of when the property of the p eleven children, of whom one was a son, Jacob, who married and became the father of Rev. Nathan Drury Sherman of Whitingham, Vt.

This is absolutely wrong. Jacob (William. Eber. Philip), born. Nov. 20, 1733, in N. Kingstown, R. I., married. Dec. 30, 1753, Susanna Bissell, of N.

Kingstown. They went to Scituate in 1766, and thence to Pownal, Vt., in 1779. I have Susanna (Bissell) Sherman's own record of her marriage and of her children and their marriages. They were never of Savoy, Mass., where the Rev.

Nathan's father is said to have lived, and they had no son Jacob.

Just what sort of editorial supervision the four volumes of this work enjoyed, it is difficult to imagine. Editors cannot, of course, be expected to be familiar with all the genealogical matter that comes before them; but it is to be expected of them that they should know something of the abilities of their contributors. WOODS, A CORRECTION.-In "Genealogical and Personal Memoirs Relating to the Families of Boston and Eastern Massachusetts," 4 vols., New York, Lewis Historical Publishing Company, 1908, there is a remarkable pedigree, pages 2114-15, of the Woods family. The line of Benjamin Woods of Unity, Me., who was born there 24 Jan. 1828, is given as follows: Samuel, Nathaniel,2 Jonathan,3 Joseph,4 Joseph5.

Of Jonathan, born at Groton, Mass., 4 June 1715, it is stated that he "probably was among the first of the Woods colony that went into the province of New Hampshire, although the year of his emigration and the place of his settlement in that region is not known"; but inasmuch as he never lived beyond the confines of Groton and its West Parish (Pepperell), and died at Pepperell (see Register, ante, p. 39), the statement is extraordinary. As for Jonathan's son Joseph, he died young, in 1751, 2s records show, and therefore was not "mentioned as one of the early settlers of Mason, New Hampshire, where during the period of his residence he appears to have been a person of considerable importance" and "eventually went into the adjoining province of Maine," and he did not marry "Mary Waugh," as related in the pedigree.

The Joseph Woods who married Mary Waugh (see Register, ante, p. 148) was born at Pepperell 3 Jan. 1754, son of Moses² (Nathaniel², Samuel¹), and he never moved from Mason, N. H., dying there 11 May 1830, aged 76 (see Hist. of Mason, p. 186)

The Joseph's of the pedigree, who "is believed to have been born in Standish, Maine," was not son of Joseph and Mary (Waugh) because their son Joseph was born in Mason, N. H., 27 Oct. 1782, and there married, 6 June 1804, Nancy Ditson.

The father of Benjamin⁶ of Unity, Me., was born 22 Sept. 1778, and died 13 Jan. 1872, according to information obtained from his grandson, and I am unable to place him in the Groton family of Woods.

HENRY E. WOODS.

LIBERTY TREE AND THE GREAT ELM.—Referring to the Great Elm, which formerly stood on Boston Common, the following statement is made on p. 141 of the REGISTER for April, 1910: "The tree was used by the Sons of Liberty as a meeting place, and from this it doubtless took its name of Liberty Tree." Is not this statement somewhat ambiguous, and calculated to give the impression that the Great Elm and the Liberty Tree were one and the same? We in Boston of course know that such was not the case, but those at a distance might easily be led astray. The famous Liberty Tree was not on the Common at all, but stood on the east side of Orange (now Washington) Street, just south of Essex Street and directly opposite Frog Lane (now Boylston Street). A representa-tion of the tree, with an inscription, is placed on the outside of the building numbered 630 Washington Street.

I am informed that the statement on p. 141 was based on the following passage in Shurtleff's "Topographical and Historical Description of Boston"

"Upon its largest limb, how gone, it has been supposed that some of the early executions in the colony took place, and it is certain that during the revolutionary struggles of America this tree [i. e. the Great Elm] was one of the places of constant resort of the Sons of Liberty, who frequently caused it to be illuminated with lanterns on evenings of rejoicing and on festal occasious. It also served the purpose of exhibitions of popular feeling and indignation, for many has been the tory who has theen hung in effigy from its branches. Perhaps on this account it acquired the name 'Liberty Tree,' which it bore in 1784 (the tree originally bearing the name having been taken down)" [p. 334).

Presumably Shurtleff refers to the map of Boston published in the Boston Magazine for October, 1784. It is worth while to trace the genesis of that map. Shurtleff says that "it is styled 'A New and Accurate Plan of the Town of Boston in New England,' and, like the London Magazine map, and Jeffery's maps, gives to the Great Elm on the Common the name of 'Liberty Tree'" (p. 96). Shurtleff further says:

Shurtleff further says:

"In the London Magazine for April, 1774, is published, engraved by J. Lodge, 'A Chart of the Coast of New England, from Beverly to Scituate Harbor, including the Ports of Boston and Salem,' the plate measuring 10 by 7½ inches. A neatly engraved 'Plan of the Town of Boston' occupies one corner of the plate.... On the twenty-ninth of November, 1774, Thomas Jefterys, 'Geographer to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales,' published according to Act 'A Map of the most Inhabited part of New England, containing the Provinces of Massachusetts Bay and New Hampshire, with the Colonies of Conecticut and Rhode Island. Divided into Counties and Townships. The whole composed from actual surveys, and its situation adjusted by astronomical observations.' This contains in one corner the London Magazine Map enlarged... The same plan was copied for 'The American Atlas' by Mr. Thomas Jefferys, Geographer to the King, and printed and sold in London by R. Sayer and J. Bennett, in 1778" (pp. 93, 94).

It thus appears that the map in the Boston Magazine for October, 1784, can be traced back directly to the map in the London Magazine for April, 1774 (xliii, 165). A map made in England is obviously not authoritative on the point under discussion.

It is extremely surprising, it may be remarked in conclusion, that Shurtleff, though careful to state that in 1784 the Liberty Tree had "been taken down," apparently mentions the Liberty Tree only in connection with the Great Elm on the Common, and nowhere indicates the precise spot where the Liberty Tree stood.

Messenger.—Extracts from an old account book belonging to the Messenger family, and now in the hands of Edgar Messenger of Jamestown, N. Y.

The first entry in this account book appears to be June 9, 1761, and is as follows: "Sheffield, June 9, 1761. Samuel Messenger. Dr. To a part of a kettle and a pair of cards and buckets, 0: 12: 2." It appears from this book that the fa.hily lived in Sheffield during 1761, and there is an account dated "Egerimont," February 8, 1762. Several memoranda are dated Great Barrington in 1763.

The book appears to have been owned by Daniel Messenger, who had accounts with Samuel Messenger in July, 1763; with Andrew Messenger in 1771, and with Roderick Messenger in 1763 and 1771, and appears to have settled with him at "Burlinton," Mar. 28, 1779. There is also an account with Roderick Messenger, dated "Ruport," August 21, 1776, where they both signed a settlement. Also an account dated "Lenix," Mar. 17, 1777, and another dated Lenox ye 14, 1779—evidently meant to be May 14, judging from other accounts on the same page. He appears to have been in Lenox in 1783, '84, '89, and there is a settlement with Lemuel Collins.

I find some accounts in this book dated Pompey, January and February, 1803, and it is presumed that this is Pompey, N. Y.. as the family afterwards lived in Onondaga County, N. Y. Mention is made of these dates and places, as possibly they may be of some assistance to those who have been looking up the history of the Messenger family.

The following are records which I find in this book:

Daniel Messenger and Dorcas Bronson married October ye 21 AD 1762.

Peter Messenger was born October ye 31 AD 1763. Leady Messenger was born March ye 17 AD 1765. Eliza Messenger was born December ye 27 AD 1766.

Sarah Doud was born the 12 of October 1774. Marah Doud was born the 17 of January 1777. Rebeccah born November 14, 1784. Stephen was born 30 of October 1786. Lucy was born 28 of August 1790.

I also note the following:

Aug. 5, 1784. Then Daniel went to live with Elijah Gates.

May 5, 1785. Then Daniel began with Elijah Gates for 6 months more at 18s

There was also an account with Cyrus Messenger, dated February 16, 1809. From the nature of the accounts Daniel Messenger appears to have been a farmer, and the account book has a great many names of people that he had accounts with in the different places where he lived.

Two Seth Chapins.—Up to the present time it has been accepted as a fact that there was but one Lieut. Seth Chapin in the American army during the Revolution, and that he was of Mendon1. My investigations show conclusively that there were two Lieut. Seth Chapins, one of Mendon, and one of Newport.

The following two items prove the existence of a Lieut. Seth Chapin of New-

(1) "Sheth Chapin, 28 years old, Enlisted 12 May 1775, born at Newport, R. I. Blacksmith. Capt. Topham's Co., Col. Churches Regt." (REGISTER, vol. 55, p. 82).

(2) "Seth Chapin, appointed July 19, 1777, Lieutenant, of Newport, Newport Co., family resides at Tiverton, Newport Co." Dated 1 Aug. 1779, Bristol (R. I.

Rolls, vol. 5, p. 19).

The fact that he was of Newport (which word occurs so often that it can not have been other than intentional), that he had a family living at Tiverton, and that he was a blacksmith, entirely destroys the theory of his identity with the Lieut. Seth of Mendon, who at this time was of Mendon, with a family living there, and who was a yeoman and not a blacksmith. The separate existence of Seth of Newport is further brought ont by a suit in the Washington County (R. I.) Court, in 1773 (H., p. 425).

That this Lieut. Seth Chapin of Newport, who was "appointed July 19 1777," was the Lieut. Seth Chapin of Col. Sherborn's regiment, the following clearly "Seth Chapin, 1st Lieut in 3rd Co., Capt. James Webb, Col. Henry Sherborn's Regt. from 1 June to 21 July 1778. Appointed 19 July 1777." Dated White Plains July 21 (R. I. Rolls, vol. 4, p. 114, also pp. 99, 119-120).

Furthermore it is much more likely that Seth of Newport should be lientenant in Sherborn's Rhode Island Regiment, than that Seth of Mendon, Mass.,

should be an officer in it.

Now it follows that it was Lieut. Chapin of Newport, who captured the English brig in Narragansett Bay in December of 1778, for the only authority we have for this, the Providence Gazette of Dec. 19, 1778, states that it was Lieut. Chapin of Col. Sherborn's regiment. Several other things point to its being Seth of Newport. In the first place there is no tradition in the family of Seth of Mendon that he performed such a feat, and tradition seizes upon less remarkable events to perpetuate where the excuse exists. Secondly, we know that Seth of Newport was in the army at the time (R. I. Rolls, vol. 4, pp. 98, 103, 116; and Pension Office, Washington), while we do not know that Seth of Mendon was then serving. Thirdly, as the scene of the capture was near Newport, where he doubtless knew his ground, it is more likely to have been Seth of Newport who was concerned, and not Seth of Mendon, who lived inland.

The next question that confronts us is, which Seth was spy in Rhode Island in 1778-9. Crowell's "Spirit of '76," p 181, states that it was Lieut. Chapin of Col. Sherborn's regiment. This seems the most probable, as it did in the preceding case, and for the same reasons, namely that the spy service was carried on near Newport where Seth of Newport had a chance to know the lay of the land; that it required a knowledge of boating, and that Seth of Newport probably was more proficient in this respect than the Mendon lieutenant; that we know that Seth of Newport was serving apparently continuously in the army during the spy service period of 1778-9 (R. I. Rolls, vol. 4, pp. 98, 103, 116, etc.), and that he was paid for being absent from his regiment in July, August and November, 1779 (R. I. Archives, Council of War, pp. 23, 30), while we have good reason to believe that Seth of Mendon was not continually in service (Mass. Rolls, vol. 26, p. 130; 28, p. 54). Besides, a Mr. Barker of Newport assisted the spy Chapin in his work, and if the spy was the Newport man he would doubtless have been acquainted with Barker before the war—a point which would have tended to induce the American general to pick him ont rather than a stranger from Massachusetts.

On the other hand we have the statement of the son of Lient. Seth Chapin of Mendon that his father was a spy in Rhode Island in 1778-9. when in 1840 this son applied to the United States Government for the pension due to his deceased father. The pension was not granted, because the other services were not of sufficient duration, and there were "no particulars" given concerning the spy service (Letter from Pension Office). Certainly the son would have given some "particulars" if he had known them, since by so doing he might have obtained the pension—the more as he paid his brothers and sisters quit claims amounting to $25.00 for their share of their father's pension. The question now arises how he came to have the idea that his father was a spy, if his father had not really been one. This, however, can easily be explained by the fact that in 1833, several years before he made his application. evidence had been submitted to the Pension Office from Providence (where the son of Seth Chapin of Mendon was then living) showing incidentally that a Lient. Chapin had been a spy in Rhode Island in 1778. It is more than probable that Seth Chapin's son heard of this and, knowing that his father served in Rhode Island in August 1778 (Mass. and, knowing that his lather served in knowle island in August 1778 (Mass. Rolls, vol. 26, p. 130), drew the conclusion, quite naturally that the spy must have been his father. This would explain why he could give "no particulars" of the spy service. That in the pension claim Seth of Mendon is not mentioned as being of Col. Sherborn's regiment adds weight to this hypothesis. Furthermore there is no tradition among the other branches of the family that Seth of Mendon served as a spy. A tradition, of course, proves nothing, but the absence of a tradition is, circumstantially, good negative evidence for snpposing that a remarkable occurrence did not happen; for the unusual is generally magnified and bnt rarely ignored.

If we should admit for the moment that Lient. Seth of Mendon was the spy we would be confronted with the fact that during the winter of 1778-9 there were two 1st Lieut. Seth Chapins acting as spies in command of a small boat and a half-dozen men cruising on the Sakonnet River. The possibility of this, considering the danger due to the season of the year and the condition of the war, is too slight to be considered, so that Seth of Newport must be accepted both as the hero of the brig and as the spy.

Having proved that Lient. Seth of Newport was accustomed to boats, it certainly seems more probable that he, a Rhode Islander too, would be commissioned lieutenant on board the ship Providence in 1776. At that time Seth of Newport was apparently not serving in the army, so that he would have been free to serve in the marines, while on the other hand we know that Seth of Mendon was then in the army (Mass. Rolls, vol. 43, p 222; vol. 28, pp. 25, 119; R. I. Ser., vol. 1, p 135). Furthermore the signature of Seth of Mendon differs materially from that of Seth of the Providence, while there is no tradition in the family that Seth of Mendon ever served on shipboard.

In 1780 a Seth Chapin was commissioned captain in Rhode Island. (R. I. Col. Rec., pr. vol. 9, p. 197). This was doubtless Seth of Newport. who as a Rhode Islander and a spy was certainly in line for advancement in Rhode Island. Lieut. Seth Chapin of Mendon was habitually so called throughout his life, which seems to show that it was not he who was commissioned captain.

We have in general outlined the military service of Seth of Newport, and as Seth of Mendon has many descendants 1 we subjoin a brief sketch of his mili-

He first enlisted as a corporal in Capt. John Albee's (1st) company of volunteers, which marched from Mendon to Roxbury on the Lexington alarm, 19 April 1775, serving 9 days (Mass. Arch, vol. 2, p. 181); as 2d lieutenant in Capt. Sam. Craggins' (1st) company. Col. Ezra Woods's (Worcester Co.) regiment, being commissioned July 9, 1776 (Mass. Arch., vol. 28, pp. 25, 119; vol. 43, p. 222). This company served under General Sullivan at the battle of Long Island. 27 Aug. 1776, and Seth Chapin was also paymaster (exinform. D. E. Fisk).

He was advanced to the office of 1st lieutenant and, enlisting Dec. 8, 1776, served in Rhode Island till January 21, 1777 (Mass. Arch., R. I. Ser., vol. 1. p. 135). It was probably at this time that he was quartered in University Hall, Brown University. He was in service 15 May 1778 (Rev. Res., vol. 202, p. 196). and again in July 1778, when he joined Gen. Sullivan's expedition against Newport (Mass. Arch., vol. 26, p. 130; and Pension Office, Washington). He served twice in 1779, once in August (Mass. Arch., vol. 28, p. 54), and once in September. His last service was in Rhode Island on the alarm of July 27, 1780, when he served 16 days (Mass. Rolls, vol. 1, pp. 2, 30).

The family of Best in America, of Holland descent, with copious biographical notes, 170?—1901, by Charles Best Benson. [New York, The Knickerbocker Press, 1909.] 8° pp. 189, illus.

Jacob Best was a volunteer from Annesburg, now Germantown, N.Y., for the expedition against Canada in 1711. This record of his descendants is brought down to the twentieth century, and adds to the list of genealogies of families of Dutch descent one that will be of interest and value to many genealogists. The work is clearly printed and well indexed.

A genealogy of the descendants of Thomas Carter of Reading and Weston, Mass. and Hebron and Warren, Conn., also some account of the descendants of his brothers Eleazer, Daniel, Ebenezer, and Ezra, sons of Thomas Carter and grandsons of Rev. Thomas Carter, first minister of Woburn, Mass., compiled by Howard Willston Carter. Norfolk, Conn., published by the author, 1909. 8° pp. 341, illus. Price $5.00. Address the author, Norfolk, Conn.

The title-page gives a careful description of the contents of this large and useful genealogy, which is arranged on the Register plan and also indexed. It will be very helpful in tracing this numerous family, although the author's regret is shared that a complete record of all the descendants of the Rev. Thomas Carter, first minister of Woburn, could not have been included in this work. (In 1887 was published a genealogy of two of the sons of Samuel, oldest son of the Rev. Thomas.) This volume is well illustrated, and the appendices contain some interesting facsimiles. It is the result of years of effort in collecting the data of the family, and proves to be a welcome publication.

The descendants of Elisha Cole who came from Cape Cod to what is now Putnam County, New York, about 1745, compiled by Joseph O. Curtis. New York, Tobias Wright, 1909. 8° pp. 237, illus.

From Daniel Cole of Yarmouth, Mass., in 1643, the line is carried down through William and Elisha to Elisha who was born in 1719 and settled in

* All the unsigned reviews are written by Miss ALICE LUCRETIA WESTGATE of Boston.

Dutchess, now Putnam, County, N. Y. His wife was Hannah Smalley, and the record of their descendants is here brought down to date. The arrangement is fairly simple, and there is an index. It will be a helpful genealogy for those interested in New York families. There is a brief account of the colonial families into which the early Coles married, e.g. Brewster, Prince, Freeman, Hopkins, Denison, and Leete.

The Conkling-Prosch Family, with some reference to the Dotter, Ros. Reynolds, Brooks, Mapes, Elder, McCarver, and other connections, by Thomas W. Prosch. Seattle [Wash.], Press of the General Lithographing and Printing Company, 1909. 8° pp. 141, illus.

Ananias Conkling and his brother John were interested in the glass works in Salem, Mass., as early as 1638. A son of Ananias is supposed to be the John Conkling who led the family west into the state of New York. The line is brought down to Susan Conkling, who married, in 1846. Charles Prosch, whose father William, of Hanoverian parentage, was born in Europe in 1786. William Prosch had married Christiana Dotter of Thuringen, and these two young Germans came to America in 1811. Charles Prosch was a painter by trade. He became one of the pioneer settlers of the Pacific coast, and the interesting details of his experiences during the early days form the most valuable feature of this narrative, which contains an unusual amount of information besides the genealogy of the family.

A genealogical history of the Dupuy family by Charles Medetith Dufuy, late of New York City, with additions by his son, Herrert Dufuy. Philadelphia, printed for private circulation by J. B. Lippincott Company, 1910. 4° pp. 165, illus. charts.

This Huguenot family is claimed anciently to have been of Italian origin—Del Poggio of Lucca. The American record begins with Dr. John Dupuy, who settled in New York in 1715, having lived previously in the island of Jamaica. He became a well-known physician and was a member of Trinity Church. The fully-written history of his descendants makes a large, handsome volume, clearly printed on excellent paper, with frequent illustrations, including portraits, silhouettes, facsimiles of deeds, maps, and several pedigree charts. The families of Haskins, Richards, Evans, Richardson, Loockermans, Hostetter, and Rickey receive co. siderable attention, and among other matters contained in the appendixes there is reprinted an excellent address on "St. Bartholomew's Day" by Charles M. Dupuy, vice-president from Pennsylvania of the Huguenot Society of America.

Universal International Genealogy and of the ancient Fernald Families with chronology from creation found in the discovered lost rolls, primitive Bible, squares Hebrew, Egyptian and other languages, by CHARLES AUGUSTUS FERNALD, M.D. fo pp. 432, illus. Price $5.00, $10.00, and $15.00, according to binding. Apply to the author, 1483 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

It is impossible in a brief notice to give an adequate description of this remarkable collection of universal information, which the author states was gleaned from a study of thirty-four languages, ancient and modern coins, monuments, mounds, Moabite genealogy stone, and other sources, and which traces the Fernald family back to Adam and Eve who, the author tells us, were created December 6 and 7, 4376 B.C. William Shakespeare's familiar autograph appears as the non-de-plume of Samuel Washington, who he really was, and George Washington's portrait and signature are often given. In George Washington's name the author finds the words Firnel and Ferntl, which he says the signature itself shows. Readers are sure to find similar unexpected and diverting statements throughout this unique work.

The Frost genealogy, by ALFRED A. DOANE. [Reprinted from the Yarmouth Herald. February 1910.] 8° pp. 8.

This is a record of some of the descendants of John and Jeremiah Frost, sons of James and Margaret (Goodwin) Frost of Kittery, Maine, who went from Kittery to Argyle, N. S., in 1761.

The Gimm Family history and genealogy, by Mrs. RALPH E. Johnson. Lincoln. Neb., published by Gillespie and Phillips [1909]. 8° pp. 45, illus.

If others, who are descendants of German stock of comparatively recent American adoption, would make as determined and persistent an effort as the author of this book shows to establish authentically the connection with the family in the Fatherland, and get accurate records from parish registers in doing so, they would be producing a work whose value and usefulness would be constantly increasing. Johann Christoph Voigt and his wife Johanna Elisabeth (Gimm) were both in America in 1848. One of their grand-daughters, Augusta Virginia (Voigt) Johnson, has succeeded in tracing the Gimm line back several generations in Germany, and is at work on the Voigt family. The book is artistically bound in limp green leather. It is to be hoped that Mrs. Johnson will continue to bring out the records of various branches of her family.

Genealogy of the descendants of Thomas Gleason of Watertown, Mass., 1607-1909, published by John Barber White, edited by Lillian May Wilson. Haverhill, Mass., press of the Nichols Print, 1909. 8° pp. 672, illus. Price $7.50. Apply to Mrs. J. B. White, 518 Wisconsin Avenue, Madison, Wis.

More than five thousand descendants of Thomas Gleason are recorded in this large volume, which includes the immense genealogical collections made by the late Daniel A. Gleason of Bostou, the late Joseph Meade Gleason of Cincinnati, and Albert H. Gleason of Chicago. The arrangement of the material is simple, and it is well indexed. Many extracts from wills and deeds are given in the biographical sketches, which are scholarly and concise presentations of facts. The first part of the book contains the report by J. Henry Lea of the research made by him in England. The edition is limited to two hundred and fifty copies.

A family history. [Hyder and Delaplaine.] Taneytown, Md., The Carroll Record Print, 1909. 8° pp. 44.

John Hyder of Uniontown, Carroll County, Md., was born in 1787, the son of John William Hyder who came from Anspach, Franconia, Germany. Catharine Delaplaine, the wife of John Hyder, was born in 1788. This reminiscent sketch consists chiefly of anecdotes concerning the children and their acquaintances. The accomplishments, costumes, and customs of the early part of the nineteenth century are depicted with a quaint, intimate, and unerring touch that makes the sketc. a delightful picture of the period. A considerable amount of genealogical data is scattered through the pamphlet which, however, is not indexed.

The Kendalls of Austrey, Twycross and Smithsby. [Entered at Stationers' Hall, London.] 4° pp. 64, illus. Price 3 guineas. Apply to the publishers, W. P. Griffith and Sons, Limited, Old Bailey, London, E. C.

The data gathered by Henry John Broughton Kendall is here printed by him especially that the immediate family may have the benefit of his years of research. This family settled on the borders of Lelcestershire, Warwickshire, and Derbyshire, and the connection is also shown with the branches of the family in Westmoreland and Hertfordshire. All the statements made are supported by documentary evidence, and the book is consequently reliable and valuable.

Lindsay Family Association of America, annual report for 1909, edited by Mrs. Margaret Lindsay Atkinson. 8° pp. 105-140.

The results of research made both in America and England are contained in this report, which gives the usual official lists.

A study of the origin and signification of the surname McAleer, and a contribution to a McAleer Genealogy, compiled by George McAleer, M.D. Worcester, Mass., published by the author, 1909. 8° pp. 103, port., chart.

Several articles from Irish journals, and letters from Irishmen on the original form of the name McAleer, are here reprinted by the author after a study of the changed conditions of Ireland. The genealogy is concerned with the descendants of Lawrence, son of Hugh McAleer and Catharine (Keenan), who emigrated to Canada in 1831. A chart published with the book will be found helpful.

Moffat genealogies: descent from Rev. John Moffat of Ulster County, New York, by Burnham Moffat. Privately printed [Press of L. Middleditch Co., New York], 1909. 8º pp. 158, map.

Beginning with some description of the early divisions of Ulster and Orange counties, N. Y., and following with a brief account of the early Moffats, this narrative soon reaches the history of Rev. John Moffat. A "Genealogical Table" of his descendants fills sixty pages at the end of the book, which also contains copious biographical sketches of some of the interesting members of the family. The book is attractive in appearance and has been printed the author states, that others may have the benefit of the information he has collected concerning Rev. John Moffat and his branch of the family. His example is worthy of being followed.

Eighteenth annual report of the Reynolds Family Association, held at Morris Cove, New Haven, Conn., 19 August 1909. Middletown, Conn.. Press of Pelton and King. 8º pp. 22.

An extract from the record of the Visitation of Warwickshire in 1619, and the necrology of the Association, furnish all the genealogical items in this number, which gives a brief notice of the reunion itself and the usual official lists.

Memorials of the family of Shelly of Great Yarmouth, their ancestors and descendants, compiled by John Shelly of Plymouth. London [Eng.]. printed for private circulation and issued by Phillimore and Co., 124 Chancery Lane, 1909. 4° pp. 47, illus. chart.

A brief account of the Shellys of Ely, with a pedigree chart, precedes the more complete record of the Shellys of Great Yarmouth, who settled in that place before 1651 and doubtless were direct descendants of the Ely branch. Some charming family portraits and a liberal amount of biographical material appear in this volume, which certainly should accomplish the author's mission in issuing it and reviving the family interest.

Genealogy of the Shumway Family in the United States of America, compiled by ASAHEL ADAMS SHUMWAY. New York, Tobias A. Wright. 1909. 8° pp. 478, Illus.

Peter Shumway, the son of Peter the emigrant, was born in 1678, and in 1750 presented for a second time a petition to the General Court wherein he recited that he was of Oxford, the son of Peter of Topsfield, and asked for some gratuity for the service rendered by his father during the Narragansett War. Although there is no absolute proof of the fact, the tradition that Peter Shumway was a French Huguenot is undoubtedly true. The genealogy is not grouped by generations, as is usually done in works of this size, but the preface states that the plan is "to run out the line of posterity through the oldest child in each successive family." There is a good index, however. The genealogy is a valuable and useful addition to any library, and of interest to genealogists and thousands of descendants.

A brief sketch of the ancestry of Alden Spooner, late of Brookline, L. I. with a record of his descendants to August 1909, compiled by Alden S. Huling. Topeka, Kan., 1909. 8° pp. [27], port.

This family of printers was allied with the Greens, a family well known in the printing trade. Alden Spooner was born in 1783 in Westminster. Vt., but moved with his family to Brooklyn in 1811. The record of the descendants, although brief, is brought down to date. There is no index. The book, which is bound in full morocco, seems to be designed especially for the use of the family.

Taft Family News. Volume 1, Number 1. May 1910. Buriington, Vt., published by Russell W. Taft. 8° pp. 16. Price $1.00 per year.

A sketch of Robert Taft of Mendou, Mass., was begun in this number. which also contains an unusually bright paragraph on the use of coats-of-arms by Americans. It is to be regretted that a "paster" slip has been added to this first number stating that lack of sufficient support compels its discontinuance.

Viele. Two hundred and fifty years with a Dutch family of New York. compiled by Kathlyne Knickerbocker Viele. New York, Tobias R. Wright. 1909. 8° pp. 149, illus. Price $5.00, address the author, 357 Park Avenue. Yonkers, N. Y.

This record of seven generations of a well-known New York family of Dutch stock is issued by Miss Viele primarily to replace the one made by her father, Gen. Egbert L. Viele, about 1875. In addition to the genealogy, which is well compiled and clearly arranged, there is a monograph on Aerhnout Cornelisen Viel, the interpreter, and also sketches of Gen. Viele and his two gifted sons—the late Herman Knickerbocker Viele, and Francis Viele-Griffin, editor of the Mercure de France and a French poet of distinction. The volume is a pleasing and valuable addition to Knickerbocker genealogy. The edition is limited.

Memoir of Philippe Maton Wiltsee and his descendants, with a historical introduction referring to the Wiltsee Nation and its colonies, by Jerome Wiltsee, Sr. [Printed by G. W. Myers, Atchison, Kan., 1908.] 8° pp. 294, illus. Price $5.00, postage 18 ccnts. Apply to the author, Falls City, Neb.

The great amount of material in this "genealogical and psychological" memoir makes the ordinary reader, who is unacquainted with the history of the family, regret that the book contains no index. The family is of Dutch descent, and the record is brought down to the present time. The author has shown indomitable energy and perseverance in collecting records of a family so scattered.

Materials for a history of the Withers Family, by the Rev. REGINALD F. BIGG-WITHER, M.A. Winchester [Eng.], Warren and Son, 85 High Street, 1907. 4° pp. 271, illus. Price £1:1:0, net. Apply to the publishers.

Extracts from ancient documents, wills, domestic state papers, historical manuscripts, as well as extensive entries from about twenty parish registers in the county of Hampshire, are contained in the appendices, and are but a slight indication of the valuable material here presented. Many pedigree charts illustrate the connections of different branches of the family, and a long chapter is devoted to a history of the principal estates held by the Withers and Biggs. Facsimiles of ancient papers and family portraits enrich the volume, although the chapter on the Withers of the United States will be the feature that will most attract the attention of the American student to this superior book.

Lowell vs. Faxon and Hawkes. A celebrated malpractice suit in Maine. By JAMES ALFRED SPALDING, M.D. Reprinted from the American Academy of Medicine, Vol. XI. No. 1. February 1910. 8° pp. 28, illus.

The states of Maine and Massachusetts were both roused by this lawsuit for malpractice in the treatment of a dislocation of the hip joint, which was fought stubbornly from 1821 to 1826, and drew into court medical opinions of men who stood highest in the profession. After much patient work the story of the case has finally been discovered, although an attempt to unearth it, made by the Maine Medical Association forty years ago, failed to disclose it.

The Meade Claim. by Frank Warren Hackett. Washington [D. C.], R. Beresford, Printer, 1910. 8° pp. 26.

As the sub-title of this pamphlet states, it contains a brief survey of the facts attending the ratification by Spain with the United States of the treaty of Ebruary 1819, and of the obligation assumed by the United States to pay the claim of Richard W. Meade against Spain as part consideration of the purchase of the Floridas. The subject is presented in a direct manner, chronologically, and shows a clear understanding of the case. It seems a good thing to have these facts in print.

An old American publisher [Abraham Shearman Jr.], by Frederic Fairchild Sherman. New York, privately printed, 1910. 8° pp. [10], illus.

Born in that part of Dartmouth, Mass., which is now called Fairhaven, this devoted, scholarly member of the New Bedford Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends was at one time the publisher of The Columbian Courier. a weekly journal. Ultimately he turned his attention to book-selling and book-making. A list of some of his publications may be found at the end of this pamphlet, of which but twenty-five copies have been made.

Memoir of Caleb Benjamin Tillinghast, by Charles Knowles Bolton. Reprinted from the Publications of The Colonial Society of Massachnsetts. Cambridge, John Wilson and Son, University Press, 1910. 8° pp. 359-362. port.

This sympathetic sketch of the late state librarian is drawn by one who knew him well and had often been associated with him in carrying forward projects that engaged their common interest. Although brief, it shows a true appreciation of Mr. Tillinghast's rare qualities, which made him a unique yet forceful figure among the men of the present day.

Sir Henry Vane, Jr., Governor of Massachusetts and friend of Roger Williams and Rhode Island, by HENRY MELVILLE KING. Providence, R. I., Preston and Ronnds Company, 1909. 12° pp. 207.

Of all the figures of Puritan times young Sir Henry Vane is generally held to be the most winning, the most gifted, and the most lovable recipient of unreserved admiration. He was one of the gravest and ablest of English statesment of unswerving rectitude, and an enthusiastic lover of liberty. Wendell Phillips pronounced him the noblest human being that ever walked the streets of Boston at the same time not forgetting Franklin, Washington, Garrison, or John Brown. This account of his life will help, perhaps, in attracting the attention of young students to his inspiring character.

Lives of the bishops of North Carolina from the establishment of the episcopate in that state down to the division of the diocese. by Marshall Delancey Haywood. Raleigh, N. C., published by Alfred Williams and Company, 1910. 8° pp. 270, illus. Price $1.50. Apply to the publisher, Raleigh, N. C.

Following a history of the foundation of the American episcopate, the lives of four bishops of North Carolina are given in the order of their service—John Stark Ravenscroft, Levi Stillman Ives, Thomas Atkinson. and Theodore Benedict Lyman. Portraits of all of them are added to the volume, which has a good index. The record of their labors is largely the same as the story of the growth of the diocese, and will therefore interest all Churchmen.

The Loyalists of Massachusetts and the other side of the American Revolution, by James H. Stark. Boston, James H. Stark, 17 Milk Street, 1910. 8° pp. 509, illus

The spirit in which this work has been projected is well shown in its dedication, which is addressed to the Loyalists of Massachusetts, "whose faithful services and memories are now forgotten by the nation they so well served." The discussion aroused by some of the general statements made here has been abated until their authenticity can be proved. More than two-thirds of the volume is filled with biographical sketches of some of the Loyalists, and the author states that he has yet enough material to fill another volume if he receives sufficient encouragement in the sale of this one. It is probable, however, that the student will continue to refer to Sabine's Biographical Sketches. The illustrations are chiefly portraits, but there are also some interesting views of old houses. The book is indexed, and bound in red cloth.

Fall River Indian Reservation, by Hugo A. Dubuque. Fall River, Mass., 1907. 4° pp. 100, illus.

In order to make proper provision for the water supply of Fall River certain interests in the Indian Reservation lands were required. In investigating the title various interesting documents came to light. They are here printed, and furnish some material regarding the Indians which has been but little known. Some of the papers from the Massachusetts Archives have never been published before. It is the most valuable monograph on the subject that has appeared, and is presented in a scholarly manner well suited to its dignified character.

The Old and the New. An occasional magazine devoted to the institutions and history of the town of Hartford, Vt. No. 3. Hartford, Vt., 1910. 8° pp. 60, illus

The last number of this magazine appeared in 1901, and the life of the community since that date is reflected in the articles here contained. A paper on the Second Congregational Society, by Kate M. Cone, which was read at the annual meeting of the church, 7 January 1909, is the most important contribution.

Annual report of the president of the Ipswich Historical Society for the year ending 1 December 1909. [No title-page.] 8° pp. 7.

This is a brief report of the work done by the Society in its different branches during the year.

Candlewood, an ancient neighborhood of Ipswich, with genealogies of John Brown, William Fellows, Robert Kinsman, by T. Frank Waters. Proceedings of the annual meeting of the Ipswich Historical Society, 1 December 1908. Publications of the Ipswich Historical Society, XVI. Salem, Mass., The Salem Press, 1909. 8° pp. 163, illus. maps.

A diagram showing the early division of the locality, sometimes called "Candlewood" and also known as "The South Eighth," precedes the abstracts of title for all the lots on the plan. Reliable information of unusual value is contained in this contribution, which shows exhaustive, painstaking labor. The Kinsman Genealogy (of twenty pages) brings down to the present time those branches of the family that lived in Ipswich, copying the earlier generations from the Kinsman Genealogy of 1876. A record of nine generations of the descendants of William Fellows is contained in the next seventeen pages. A few less than forty pages are filled with an account of the Ipswich descendants of John Brown, many of their homesteads being shown on the Candlewood plan. An exceptionally good index includes the whole pamphlet, which is also noteworthy for an artistic cover of appropriate design.

A brief history of the Middle Temple, by C. E. A. BEDWELL London [Eng.], Butterworth & Co., 11 and 12 Bell Yard, Temple Bar, 1909. 80 pp. 132.

Although the author modestly disclaims any pretense of offering a systematic history of the Inn to his readers, yet there will be found in this small volume a most valuable and interesting account of this venerable foundation. The references to the original authorities for many of the statements are given, and the chapter on the connection between the Middle Temple and Virginia is of special interest to the American student.

Lynn in the Revolution, compiled from notes gathered by Howard Kendall San-Derson. Two volumes. Boston [Mass.], W. B. Clarke Company, 26 and 28 Tremont Street, 1909. 8º pp. 504+25, illus.

The diary of Henry Hallowell, a Revolutionary soldier of Lynn whose services in the Continental Army began at Winter Hill after the Battle of Bunker Hill and ended in 1780, furnished the inspiration for gathering the material which was finally presented in these two well-illustrated useful volumes regarding Lynn and her soldiers in the Revolutionary War. The diary itself is here printed, and is an exceptionally instructive narrative, affording the reader a picture of the times as well as giving a contemporary's chronicle of events. More than three hundred pages are filled with an alphabetical list of sketches of the soldiers from Lynn, which contain much biographical data as well as military services. The illustrations are chiefly portraits and old houses. The book is printed in rather large type on heavy paper, is indexed, and bound in dark blue cloth.

Origin of the name of Maine, by Albert Matthews. Reprinted from the Publications of The Colonial Society of Massachusetts, Vol. XII. Cambridge [Mass.], John Wilson and Son, University Press. 1910. & pp. 366-382.

It is indeed a pleasure to have Mr. Matthews investigate the oft-occurring mistake about the origin of the name of Maine and give the benefit of his research and deductions to other scholars and historians. He proves conclusively that the word "main," in the sense of mainland, had been in common use among the early explorers along the New England coast long before the appearance in 1622 of the title Province of Maine.

The oldest paint shops in Massachusetts, by William E. Wall, Somerville, Mass., published by the author [1910]. 8° pp. 74. Price 25 cents.

This paper was read at the nineteenth annual convention of the Society of Master House Painters and Decorators of Massachusetts, held 13 January 1910 in Boston. It divides the subject into two parts, treating first those that have ceased to exist, and secondly those now in operation. The obituary notices of deceased master painters contains some biographical material.

The first century of the Merrimack Bible Society, its founders, workers, and early friends, with a glance at the wider field. 1810-1910. By Rev. HORACE C. HOVEY, D.D. Newburyport, Press of the Herald Publishing Co., 1910. 8° pp. 24.

To place the Bible within the reach of the common people and to distribute it to countries that were nearly destitute of a single copy, the first Bible Society was formed in 1804 in London, Eng. In 1810 a Bible Society was formed in Newburyport, and the record of the work done by it in canvassing the city at different times, and the names of its officers past and present, are published in this pamphlet.

Nantucket Lands and Land Owners, by Henry Barnard Worth. Nantucket Historical Association, Vol. 2, Bulletin 6. Published by Nantucket Historical Association, 1910. 8° pp. 285-335+24.

Chapters thirteen and fourteen are presented in this issue, the first giving some account of the Indian names of the region, and the second, abstracts of items relating to the estates of deceased persons as found in Book Two in the Registry of Deeds. Both these contributions are exceedingly valuable and useful, and continue the excellent work begun by this Association. This issue also contains the index.

Dictionary of American-Indian place and proper names in New England. by R. A. DOUGLAS-LITHGOW, M.D., LL.D. Salem, Mass., The Salem Press Co., 1909. 8° pp. 400, port.

Warm appreciation greets the arrival of this volume, which fills a long-felt want among students, librarians, and others interested in any way in the traces left by the Indians in New England. It is pleasant to note that the learned compiler states in his preface that he has in preparation, as a companion volume, an English-Indian dictionary, in which the existing localities are given in English followed by their American-Indian equivalent. The names in this present volume are grouped alphabetically under states.

Folk-lore sketches and reminiscence of New Hampshire life. Boston, published and arranged by the Folk-lore Committee, New Hampshire's Daughters. 8° pp. 47, port.

The folk-lore committee was inaugurated by Mrs. Eliza Nelson Blair while she was president of the New Hampshire's Daughters, in 1904. Many quaint old customs, traditions, and sayings are gathered into this little pamphlet, which also contains a memorial sketch of Mrs. Blair and her portrait. Some pages are devoted to the origin of place-names, and there is a brief account of Richard Potter, a son of Sir Charles Henry Frankland.

The law and practice of New Jersey from the earliest times concerning the probate of wills, the administration of estates, the protection of orphans and minors, and the control of their estates; the Prerogative Court. the Ordinary and the Surrogates, by William Nelson. Paterson, N. J., Paterson History Club, 1909. 8° pp. 113.

Few treatises contain more useful results of historical research than this scholarly little work, which not only deals with the probate customs in New Jersey but also touches the methods of procedure prevalent in early times in the New England and the Dutch settlements. The book is well indexed, and the illustrations show the forms of early legal documents and some of the seals used.

In discussing the value of the political structure of Rhode Island in advancing the democratic form of government, the author has chosen to quote frequently and extensively from many writers on this subject. The story of the daily life and customs of the early settlers has been drawn from inventories diaries, and other original sources. Full references to the authorities cited are given throughout the volume, which is also indexed, and bound in dark green cloth.

Some desiderata in the science of Eugenics and a bibliography of Historiometry, by Dr. Frederick Adams Woods. Reprinted from Vol. 5 of the American Breeders' Association. Bibliography of Historiometry reprinted from Science 19 Nov. 1909. 8° pp. 8.

"The inheritance of ability in American families has never been studied scientifically. Yet genealogies there are by the thousands, genealogical societies by the score, and plenty of biographical dictionaries and histories with the needed material." Considering the fact that Dr. Woods regrets that very little of what has been published on the subject of heredity is of real use to future investigators, it would seem that genealogical work has found a new sphere of usefulness in furnishing material for this infantile science.

This article continues the discussion of the relative importance of heredity and environment which has been carried on by Dr. Woods and Prof. Cattell in preceding numbers of Science, and shows that valuable deductions may be gleaned from genealogies and biographical dictionaries.

EDWARD HENRY WHORF

By WALTER FAXON of Lexington, Mass.

EDWARD HENRY WHORF, a member of this Society since the year 1903, died in Boston on the fifteenth of March, 1910. He was the only child of Sylvanus Henry and Henrietta (Faxon) Whorf, and was born at Winchester, Mass., on the sixth of May, 1851. He was a descendant, in the ninth generation, of John' Waffe or Whorf of Charlestown, Mass. (1645); later generations of his paternal ancestors were, I believe, seafaring people who had homes in Provincetown at the extremity of Cape Cod. Through his mother he was a descendant, in the ninth generation, of Thomas' Faxon who settled as a farmer in Braintree, Mass., before 1647.

After the death of her husband, in 1858, Mrs. Henrietta Whorf resided chiefly in the village of Jamaica Plain, Mass., the home of her nearest kindred, and there her son received such education as was furnished by the suburban public schools of that period. On leaving the high school in 1867 he was employed as clerk and salesman by Thomas E. Proctor, a leather merchant of Boston, remaining in his service until the year 1875, when he was appointed treasurer's clerk of the then newly-built Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad. His connection with this railway lasted till 1882. During this period he held in succession the offices of assistant treasurer, assistant superintendent, and (from 1877 to 1882) superintendent.

Mr. Whorf was married at Boston on the twelfth of December, 1877, to Eliza Frances Cutler. He then built himself a house on the heights of Revere, overlooking the sea, where he resided during the term of his connection with the Lynn railway.

In 1882 he was called to superintend the building of the Tampico division of the Mexican Central Railway. He lived in Tampico until 1886, and in San Luis Potosi from 1886 to 1889, when he removed to the City of Mexico as assistant manager of the whole Mexican Central Railway system. From 1895 to 1898 he served as general manager of the Mexican Industrial Railways, City of Mexico.

On the death of his maternal uncle Edwin Faxon, in 1898, Mr. Whorf returned to Boston, where he resided, in the Dorchester district, concerned with matters pertaining to real estate and trust, up to the time of his fatal illness toward the end of February, 1910.

It was during these later years in Boston that Mr. Whorf found the time and means to indulge his taste for historical and genealogical research. He brought together a valuable library composed of books and pamphlets relating to Mexico and the rest of Spanish North America. Many of these volumes he gave to the Cambridge Public Library during his lifetime, and he bequeathed the rest of them to the same library, together with money for keeping the collection up to date. He was active in furthering the work of the New England Historic Genealogical Society and the Society of Mayflower Descendants. In the former he served on the Committee on Collection of Records and on the Library, and in the latter he held the office of historian general.

He was of a calm and even temper, and exceedingly kind to those who had occasion to draw upon his stores of special knowledge. The only impatience he ever showed (and that was of a gentle sort) was called forth by cases of inexcusable superficiality and inaccuracy in research. He himself belonged to the tenax propositi type of man. His persistence in his chosen lines of investigation was extraordinary, and yet his mind quickly kindled in response to the intellectual interests of his friends, who found in most cases, to their amazement, that these transmitted interests were not superficial and transitory with him, but deep and abiding. To those who were closely bound to him by ties of friendship or of blood his loss is overwhelming and irreparable.

Mr. Whorf is survived by his widow, two sons, a daughter, a daughter-in-law, and a grandson.

Mr. Charles T. McCotter of Boston, who was associated with Mr. Whorf in Mexico, has kindly furnished me with the subjoined account of his career as a railway manager:

"It was in 1880, through the telephone, that the writer became acquainted with Edward H. Whorf. The lines of the telephone company, to the north, ran along the right of way of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad, with a testing station in the dispatcher's office. One wire was devoted to the service of the railroad, and Mr. Whorf was undoubtedly the first person to use the telephone in place of the telegraph to direct the movement of trains. It was in this service, as assistant to Mr. Whorf, that an official relationship began which lasted for ten years, during which time the writer was his immediate subordinate.

"Mr. Whorf's career as a railroad man began in April, 1875, as clerk to the treasurer of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad, which was then under construction, and which was opened for traffic on July 29, 1875. On November 1, 1876, he was appointed assistant superintendent, and on January 13, 1877, he became superintendent. He compiled the first book of rules and regulations for the railroad, and the systematizing of the service was his work.

"Although the 'Narrow Gauge,' as it is familiarly called (never without a protest from Mr. Whorf), is a short line, its operation is much more of a problem than that of some other railroads many times its length. At that time it had but a single track, limited rolling stock and motive power, and the successful operation of the road was further complicated by its ferry service. The great crowds on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays were handled successfully only by attention to every detail, and Mr. Whorf was a master of detail. He believed that efficient railroad service could best be obtained by discipline like that of an army with an absolute head. This responsibility he was willing and able to assume, and it used to be said that everything on the railroad, including shovels and spikes, had a string attached to it which ran to the superintendent's office.

"His successful management of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad attracted the attention of the president of the Mexican Central Railway Company, and on June 22, 1882, Mr. Whorf resigned his position to become superintendent of the Tampico division of the Mexican Central Railway. This division was about 275 miles in length, with 30 miles of a very rugged character. A great deal of money had been spent on its construction with very unsatisfactory results.

"Tampico is situated on the Panuco River a few miles from the Gulf of Mexico. The first twenty miles of the railroad lay through low swamp land with a rich soil, the upturning of which during the rainy season resulted in a great deal of sickness and many deaths. Labor was scarce, and the inhabitants of the higher altitudes could not be induced to come to the coast. Negroes from Jamaica were brought, but as a rule they were worthless as laborers. The result was that when Mr. Whorf took charge he found himself with a lot of tangled affairs which had its parallel in some degree in the early days of the Panama Canal construction.

"There had been a great lack of system, and Mr. Whorf discovered that his first task was to inaugurate an adequate one. Everything for the construction of the road had to be brought from Europe or the United States. A bar at the mouth of the river prevented vessels drawing over six feet from bringing in their cargoes. This necessitated the purchase of tugs and lighters. Steamers loaded with rails, drawing too much water to pass the bar, were collecting charges for damages almost equal to their freight charges. The vessels anchored in an open roadstead, and on the day the writer arrived in Tampico a sudden 'Norther' had blown two lighters down the coast where they were wrecked with their cargoes.

"The company's outfit consisted of thousands of head of live stock, carts, scrapers, ploughs, etc., employed in the construction of the

There could hardly have been a greater contrast than there was between the duties of Mr. Whorf's former position and those of his They brought him into contact at times with federal and state officials, men of the highest character; vet the next day he might be under the necessity of having intimate dealings with some man who would not hesitate to kill another for a hundred dollars if he thought it possible to escape detection. The company itself had in its employ many men who would hardly pass the requirements of a bonding company. Examples of this could be found in the company of guards employed by the railway company. All payments had to be made in silver which was brought by pack trains down the mountains from the interior. To protect these money trains, which carried on some trips very large sums, it was necessary to have a company guard. A man was secured for captain whose courage and honesty were undoubted, and he was allowed to pick his own men. He followed the principle which President Diaz is said to have followed in ridding the centre of the country of bandits and in forming his Rurales. He hired the desperadoes as members of the guard, and paid them to protect the company's money. the company the idea was a success, as not a dollar was lost. one occasion, however, when the captain was escorting the money train the lieutenant was left in charge of the storehouses, corrals, Being found asleep at his post he was discharged. A few days afterwards the money train delivered $18,000 to a contractor ten miles above the end of track. That night a band of robbers, with the lieutenant at its head, robbed the camp. They were all arrested, but the money was never recovered. The lieutenant served his term. and when the writer left Mexico was chief of police of one of the principal cities.

"Mr. Whorf's experience with the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad had been almost wholly in railroad operation, but in Mexico it included every phase of railroad construction from preliminary The variety of the work was much to his liksurvey to operation. Weeks of office work would be followed by a month on horseback, camping at night in tents. There were strenuous days of mountain climbing during which he followed the preliminary surveys Without detracting from the credit due to the of the engineers. engineers who laid out the line through the Tamasopo Cañon, it may be said that it was the work of many men, one replacing another, but almost from the first survey until the last spike was driven the final decisions were made by Mr. Whorf. Into all this out-ofdoor work he entered with zest. His horse was always in the lead. and in the climbs he was next to the guide. He took especial pleasure in exploring some of the Aztec mounds, and some of his 'finds' are now deposited in the Peabody Museum at Cambridge, Mass. He made several horse-back trips in search of coal and oil through the parts of Mexico rarely visited. One party of railroad men included the late Henry B. Stone, general manager of the Chicago,

Burlington and Quincy Railroad, who, after the trip, said that he would not have missed it for ten thousand dollars and would not make it again for one hundred thousand.

"During his first years in Mexico Mr. Whorf was in absolute control of the Tampico division, and reported directly to the Boston office. When Mr. Edward Jackson became general manager of the main line Mr. Whorf was made assistant general manager of the whole Mexican Central Railway system, 1700 miles in length, with headquarters in the City of Mexico, with the Tampico division still under his immediate supervision while in charge of the operation of the whole system. Here his remarkable capacity for details was again demonstrated, and if the spikes and shovels did not have strings attached to them there was little of value on the entire system about which direct information could not be obtained from the files in his office.

"While very exacting in his demands of service from his subordinates, he was a man of very even temper, and every employee was treated as an individual and not as part of a machine. In his endeavors to get the best service from his men he tried some strange experiments. On one occasion he notified the conductors that the company was going to discontinue all spotter service and depend upon the conductors as a body to see that the members were honest in their dealings with the company. They were members of the Order of Railway Conductors, and he thought they knew who were the dishonest ones. The Company was going to leave it to them as a body either to make the men honest or to oblige them to resign.

"A friend from the interior called on Mr. Whorf one day and was asked by him why he had not applied for a pass as usual. He replied that he had come very hurriedly and did not have the time even to buy a ticket, but had paid his fare on the train. The conductors report did not show any cash fare, and when he was questioned he admitted that he had kept the money. He said that he had never done so before, and Mr. Whorf told him that he would give him another chance. Some time afterwards Mr. Whorf had reason to think that another fare had not been turned in. He sent again for the conductor, who again admitted that he had kept the money. He handed in his keys, punch and badge, but Mr. Whorf handed them back to him and said: 'I think you can be honest if you try, and I am going to give you another chance, with the proviso that if you are tempted to steal again do not wait for me to find it outresign.' In a short time the conductor came into the office and turning in his company property, said, 'It's no use, Mr. Whorf, I can't do it.' It is hard to say what the moral is in this case, but Mr. Whorf thought he had brought out the manly part of the individual. He firmly believed that a man who had made a slip or mistake might be a more valuable man in the future because of it, ir he was dealt with in the right way.

"When Mr. Whorf severed his connection with the Mexican Central Railway, in 1894, he remained in Mexico for some time, and his last railroad work was on the Mexican Industrial Railway, which was promoted and built by him and Mr. S. W. Reynolds, the former president of the Mexican Central Railway Company, to which it was afterwards sold and of which it is now a part.

"Mr. Whorf was a man of great patience and persistency, with ideas of loyalty and fidelity to his employers that are not common. He followed them in the smallest matters. He thought no employee ought to call the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad the 'Narrow Gauge,' as it implied inferiority. One employee who, in a spirit of fun, made an elaborate pen and ink drawing, with a skull and crossbones at the head, showing the death rate of the principal cities of the world with that of Tampico leading all the rest, nearly lost his position. Mr. Whorf told him that if he did not like the conditions he could leave, but it was disloyal to call attention to anything that made the company's task more difficult.

"Opportunities for profitable investments in Mexico were frequent, but Mr. Whorf dealt with these opportunities as he did with an offer from the proprietor of one of the large plantations on the line of the road. This man, who was an intimate friend, offered him the opportunity to invest a small sum of money in raising corn, for which there was an active demand. Mr. Whorf replied that he had certain old fashioned ideas of which he could not divest himself, and one was that when a man received a salary for his services, if there was no proviso to the contrary, his employer was entitled to his whole time, and he ought not have an interest in anything that could in any way divide his attention. On another occasion, when a subordinate was made an offer to become a member of a contracting firm just finishing one contract with the company and about to take another, Mr. Whorf notified him that if he became a member of the firm a new contract would not be given to it. His reason was that the relations between him and his subordinate had been so intimate that the public might believe that he represented Mr. Whorf's interest.

"Mr. Whorf's aversion to anything that might be interpreted as self-advertising was such that he paid no attention to repeated requests for data about his life for a Who's Who directory. He turned over the request to the writer with instructions to limit himself to dates and facts, and to 'cut it short.' It was perhaps the same feeling that led him to speak but rarely of his official life in Mexico, and many of his intimate friends and relations have no idea of the importance of his work there. Among the builders of modern Mexico, however, his ability and worth are recognized and esteemed, and the influence of his character and example upon his subordinates will be reflected in the railroad service of Mexico long after his name is forgotten," linge." To my son Nicholas 1s. To my daughters Anne, Joane. Elizabeth, and Elinor, 1s. each. To my grandchild Anne Mathew £5 if my son Nicholas be dead or never return home again from the Sea. To all the rest of my grandchildren 1s. apiece. Also to my grandchild Mary. daughter of Richard Lea, £5 at the age of twenty-one. [Angeli Hollard and Katherine Richards were married 12 August 1634 (Registers of Beaminster, Co. Dorset). Angell Hollard, shoemaker, aged 21, with wife Katherine, aged 22, embarked from Weymouth, England, in 1635, in the Rev. Joseph Hull's company. He was granted land at Weymouth, but soon moved to Boston where his children's births are recorded. All the family except the three eldest children are said to have returned to England. If so, the father must have returned to New England, as he died in Boston 30 June 1670, and his wife and a daughter came back from England to settle the estate. The administration papers show that Hollard owed about £150 to Mr. Thomas Hollard in England, undoubtedly his brother. Hugh Hollard, the father of the emigrant, was probably born about 1590, as he claimed the executorship of his father's estate on coming of age in 1611. Beaminster, where Angel Hollard was married, is about a mile from Netherbury. For an account of the family of Angel Hollard see Register, vol. 63, pp. 381-3. E. F.]

To Thomas Sanders of Charlewood, who married the daughter of William Anscombe of Mestham, £10. To my godson Thomas Beeman, a lame fellow, 40s. To my servant Alice Burstowe £5. To William Anscombe 40s., and appoint him overseer of my will. Michell Anscombe, son of William Anscombe, I appoint my executor, he to pay 2s. 6d. quarterly out of the rest of my estate to my sister Prudence Ganton during her life. All the rest of my goods. chattels, and leases to my executor, provided that if my son Nicholas be dead before he hath the money that then the sum of £40 be divided between my son William and my son-in-law William Anscombe, my overseer. [Signed] The marke of Nicholas Elsey. Witnesses: William Buckner and Nicholas Eaton.

Proved 22 June 1649 by Michael Anscombe, the executor named in the will. (P. C. C., Fairfax, 92.)

[Nicholas Else, or Elsie, of New Haven, 1639, married as his second wife Harmah, widow of Robert Coe of Stratford, and had Samuel, born in 1666, who died in ten days. Nicholas at his death, 20 Dec. 1691, left all his property to his wife and her children. She died 2 Apr. 1702 (Savage, Gen. Diet.). E. F.]

The nuncupative Will of JOHN ARCHER, clerk, 17 Apr. 1639. I have £1500, whereof there is [in] Fr. Archer's hand £100. £50 of it I give to him, the other £50 to my mother, to be paid as my brother Theophilus knoweth. Of the other £1400, £1000 of it to my child to be paid him at his age of twenty-one. If he die before that age, I would have £150 to be equally divided between my brother Francis and my brother the scholar in [blank] and my brother in New England. There is £120 more due me. If it be paid I would have it equally divided between those three brothers. The rest of my estate between my two brothers the scholar and he in New England. All my Latin books to the scholar now at Rotterdam, my English books to my wife, my papers to be disposed of by the church, as I know my wife would be willing. This will was "wrott" in the lifetime of Mr. John Archer, deceased, by me, Phillip Nye, in the presence of the said deceased, according to his own mouth. Witness: Phillip Nye. Proved 3 Mar. 1648-9 by Susan, the relict of the deceased. (P. C. C., Fairfax, 29.)

Administration on the estate of John Archer, deceased in parts beyond the seas, granted to Susan, the relict (Probate Act Book, 1648-9).

[The brother in New England was Henry Archer of Roxbury and Ipswich, who married, in 1639, Elizabeth, daughter of John Stow of Roxbury. In 1650 he witnessed a bond given in favor of Francis Archer of Rotterdam. Henry had children Rachel, John, Isaac, Theophilus, and perhaps others. E. F.]

[John Archer, son of William of Blaseley, Cornwall, pleb., matric. Exeter Coll. 16 July 1625, aged 19; B.A. in 1627; rector of the Carhays St. Stephen's, Denys, Cornwall, 1644 (Alumni Oxoniensis, vol 1, p. 30).

The foregoing wills and register abstracts show the ancestry and connections of John Warren who came to New England in 1630 with his wife and children John, Mary, Daniel, and Elizabeth, and settled at Watertown, Mass. (For account of him and his descendants see Bond's "History of Watertown," pp. 619 et seq.) Wiston (or Wissington), Navland, and Stoke-Navland are adjoining parishes in Suffolk on the Essex border, and from these parishes came also Gregory Stone, Isaac Stearns, Ephraim Child, and other early settlers of Watertown. The foregoing materials give the following pedigree:

-1 WARREN was perhaps father of both

ROBERT² WARREN of Wiston, the testator of 1544. 2. i.

 - vi. WILLIAM, under age in 1544; perhaps the testator of 1600-1.
- 3. JOHN⁸ WARREN, born about 1525, was of "Corlie" in Navland. his will, dated 21 Apr. 1576, proved 5 June 1576, he made his brothers James and William executors. He was buried 23 Apr. 1576. The name of his first wife is unknown, but he married secondly, 5 Sept. 1563, AGNES (or ANNE) Howlet, who was buried 25 Nov. 1567; and probably married thirdly at Great Horkesley, 30 Jan. 1568-9, MARGARET FIRMETY, previously wife of one Cole. She was buried 19 Apr. 1576.

Children by first wife:

He married first, 4 Oct. 1584, ELIZA-BETH SCARLETT, probably the one baptized 30 Aug. 1561, daughter of John Scarlett. She was buried 27 Mar. 1602-3. He married secondly Rose —, who was buried 11 Aug. 1610; and thirdly, 23 Apr. 1611, Rose Riddlesdale.

Children by first wife:

Jону, 5 bapt. 1 Aug. 1585.

ii. Daniel, bapt. 13 Nov. 1586; bur. 13 Feb. 1596-7.

- MARY, bapt. 12 Sept. 1624.
- vi. Daniel, bapt. 25 Feb. 1620-1. vii. Elizabeth, bapt. 21 July 1629.

The connection with the above group of Thomas Warren, the testator of 1566, is not apparent; probably his son John was John Warren "the miller," who married, 8 Sept. 1588, Katherine Snowdon, buried 18 May J. G. BARTLETT.

[There was a John Warren, cardmaker, in Boston, Mass., who died in 1677, having sons Joshua, Nathaniel, John, and Thomas. That John Warren of Stoke Nayland, who died in 1613, was a cardmaker, and had sons with these names, suggests that John of Boston was, perhaps, his grandson, and so a nephew of John of Watertown. A Joshua Warren, with children, is called "brother" in the will in 1645 of Judith Morris of Dedham, Eng., who had relatives in New England also (see Waters's "Gleanings," pp. 818-19).

FIRST OWNERSHIP OF OHIO LANDS

THE settlement offered by the report on cessions and claims afforded the means to Congress, as the natural possessor of all the crown lands within the confines of the United States, to dispose of the same according to the pledges of the resolution of October 10, 1780. Provisions needful for such a course were contained in the report, and no determined opposition remained in Congress, save only the Virginians. In addition to the references to cessions and claims the report advises indemnification for the expenses of the Clark campaigns, recommends a policy of paternal handling of the Indians, and outlines a plan of extension of the settlements and expansion of government over the western territory. All that remained to be done, had this report endured, was for Congress, as the executive head of the United States in the exercise of right descending logically from the British crown, to proceed as convenient to carry out its provisions, to settle matters with the Indian tribes, and to dispose of all the lands from the greater mountains of the Alleghanies to Louisiana, and from Florida to Quebec, for the joint use and benefit of the United States. But Congress deliberately gave up this great advantage. The report was laid aside. No action was taken on it as a whole, and no separate part of it was ever submitted to vote. The end of the war approaching brought other mighty problems: the shifting of Congress from a martial to a civil base, and the "forming arrangements for the United States in time of peace." Examination of the minutes of Congress of this period seems to show that much of this business moved along on the theory that the land controversy was finally settled by this report.

But the Virginia delegation had never relaxed opposition to that portion of the report pertaining to their own cause. They demanded a rule requiring pledge of personal disinterest in the claims from each delegate voting, they moved for postponement whenever opportunity arose, and they constantly pressed the acceptance of the Virginia cession as a ready remedy for all the financial woes which developed in the stress of debate. For more than a year the fight kept up, and in the end the Virginians won. They secured the recommitment of that portion of the report and a final reconsideration of the question of accepting the conditional cession of the commonwealth. The New Jersey delegates filed a protest of the legislature against re-opening the question, and the Maryland delegation proposed a declaration for the immediate disposition of the lands. Congress disregarded these apparently just complaints and, choosing to hold a portion only of the disputed territory, and that on a federal and not a national basis, voted on the 13th of September, 1783, to accept the Virginia cession, with all conditions approved, except the guaranty of reserved lands 40 and the

The New Jersey protest is entered on the minutes of Congress under date of June 20, 1783, and the Maryland declaration September 13, 1783. Later, March 1, 1784, George Morgan, the memorialist of 1779, re-sppeared, demanding a hearing on his grievance "that the Commonwealth of Virginia still continued to claim the lands of the Indiana Company."

40 The reason offered for this decision as to the guaranty is thus expressed: Congress cannot agree to guarantee to the commonwealth of Virginia the land described in the said condition without entering into a discussion of the territorial rights of indivdual states, and only to recommend and accept a cession of their cisims, whatsoever they might be, to vacant territory.

invalidation of the Indian titles called for in the Virginia resolution of cession.

The action in Congress on the Virginia cession took the form of agreement to a report reviewing the eight conditions formerly named, and substantially restating them all except the guaranty and invalidation clauses, as conditions upon which the cession should be made, and recommending that "if the legislature of Virginia make a cession conformable to this report, Congress accept such cession." Quick response followed this proposal. The Virginia general assembly, October 20, 1783, "authorized their delegates to convey to the United States in Congress assembled, all the right of that commonwealth, to the territory north-westward of the river Ohio." And the delegates did so, on the 1st day of March following. by a proper deed of conveyance drawn on parchment in due form. 41 Meanwhile preparations to enter and occupy the hostile region across the Ohio were in active progress in Congress, and little attention was spared for further details of the cessions. Acts of cession followed in time from all the claimant states, but not without renewed pressure 42 on the legislatures and considerable anxiety as to the form of the cessions. But the extent and conditions of the various cessions are well known matters of history, and the dates and circumstances of each act are easy matters of reference. Weightier business was now pressing for attention in Congress. Enough had been done already respecting the title to justify immediate perfection of the programme of expansion of the government upon that part of the crown lands which had been relinquished to the United States by the cessions of New York and Virginia.

At the first signs of the coming of peace with Great Britain, Congress turned to consider the Indian preliminary to the formal occupation of his hunting grounds. The Indian policy outlined in the report on cessions and claims was ready at hand. This was merely a brief expression of the relations long subsisting in the colonies, and now recommended as a means of more clearly defining and establishing the jurisdiction of Congress regarding Indian affairs. It declares

That the sole right of superintending, protecting, treating with, and making purchases of the Indian nations outside the state lines, is necessarily vested in Congress for the benefit of the United States, that no person in separate capacity can, or ought to purchase any unappropriated lands belonging to the Indians, and that Congress has no claim in point of property of soil to lands belonging to the Indians unless the same has been bona fide purchased of them, or shall be purchased by Congress, and that at a public treaty to be held for that purpose.

But before such a policy could be applied to the extensive regions beyond the western frontiers matters had to be settled with the hostile nations, who. abandoned by their late allies, were left stranded on the conquered territory.⁴³

4 Resolutions of Congress agreed to April 18, 1783, and April 26, 1784.

4 The Indians complained that they had not been consulted in the negotiations for peace and declared they were not represented in the convention at Paris which had signed away "their Island." They professed that belts had been exchanged with the Red-coats on an agreement "never to surrender their lands to the Americans," and

"Letters from the Commander in Chief, and from the Generals" were read in Congress, while the measures for cessation of hostilities were being drawn, "informing of the sentiments of the Indians" in camp and on the British side. Agents were despatched at once to the northern and western frontiers to gather more news from the British posts. As soon as peace was announced a resolution was agreed to in Congress ordering

That the Secretary at War take the most effectual measures to inform the several Indian nations, on the frontiers of the United States, that preliminary articles of peace have been agreed on, and hostilities have ceased with Great Britain, and to communicate to them that the forts within the United States, and in possession of the British troops, will speedily be evacuated; intimating also that the United States are disposed to enter into friendly treaty with the different tribes; and to inform the hostile Indian nations that unless they immediately cease all hostilities against the citizens of these states, and accept of these friendly proffers of peace, Congress will take the most decided measures to compel them thereto.

A committee, of which James Duane of New York was chairman, was appointed to take the Indian situation into consideration and report thereon. Meantime, to save the territory from invasion of settlers and to shield the Indian from molestation until negotiations were concluded, an ordinance was passed, September 22, and a proclamation issued prohibiting the settlement and purchase of lands inhabited or claimed by the Indians. The Duane report was ready the following month. It reviews the sentiments of the Indians and considers the situation from their standpoint, refers to their resentment against their late allies, and the natural advantage to the Americans which might be made of this feeling as a protection on the Canadian frontiers. It estimates the effect of continuing hostilities with the Indians "until all are driven into the protection of the British posts," and recommends a peaceable settlement by friendly negotiations with all nations of Indians on the basis of a waiver by Congress of the rights of conquest of the Indian lands and "atonement made by the Indians of the enormities which they have perpetrated and a reasonable compensation for the expenses which the United States have incurred by their wanton barbarities." It was proposed to ascertain and fix lines of property for the Indians, by purchase if necessary, in which care ought to be taken neither to yield nor require too much; to accommodate the Indians as far as the public will admit and to give some compensation for claims rather than to hazard a war which will be much more expensive. Conventions for this purpose were suggested to be held at various posts, and an ordinance to regulate trade, with many items particularizing how trade should be carried on. The report further declares

That nothing can avert the complicated and impending mischiefs, or secure to the United States the just and important advantages which they ought to derive from those territories, but the speedy establishment of government and the regular administration of justice in such district thereof as shall be judged most convenient for immediate settlement and cultivation.

As may well be supposed, this enlightened report met with general acceptance in Congress. Difference of opinion developed on one point only. A resolution proposing a committee to report on the expediency of laying out a suitable district within the territory, and erecting it into a distinct government, etc., for settlement, gave way, after some debate, to a substitute offered by Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts, recommending prompt action in thus extending the government over the territory in advance of settlement without intervention of a committee to investigate its expediency. The main body of the report was agreed to, and the committee was continued to frame an ordinance to regulate the Indian trade, and to draw up details of instruction for the treaty conventions.⁴⁴ As soon as the Virginia cession was concluded, these measures, with some alterations, were put into operation. Five Commissioners were elected March 4, 1784, to negotiate with the Indians in the northern and western departments, who have taken up arms against the United States, for the purpose of receiving them into the favor and protection of the United States, and of establishing boundary lines of property for separating and dividing the settlements of the citizens from the Indian villages, and hunting grounds, and thereby extinguishing as far as possible all occasion for future animosities, disquiet and contention.

It was resolved that the negotiations should commence as soon as possible, and the commissioners were "desired to meet in New York, April 10, and fix upon times and places for holding the treaties with the different nations and tribes of Indians." All prior appointments were revoked, and a form of commission was ordered to be prepared and laid before Congress by the secretary, making any three of the commissioners competent to the business of their commission. Thus began the series of purchase treaties, starting at Fort Stanwix, whereby the United States fixed forever the legal status of the American Indian, set him up on reservations, under precarious conditions of intercourse with his neighbors, citizens of the republic. 45

Preparations for extending the settlements upon the new land were developing in Congress while the Indian matter was still under consideration. The recommendations of the Gerry resolution on this subject were expanded into a plan for a temporary government to apply to as much of the western territory as the cessions and Indian purchases would admit. This was in accordance with the pledge of October 10, 1780, and in conformity with the report on cessions and claims filed November 3, 1781, which provided for the erection "of a new state or states not exceeding 150 miles square, to be taken into the federal union, and the same to be laid out into townships of the quantity of about six miles square." All reasonable engagements for lands to the military were to be made good, and bona fide settlers were to be "confirmed in their title to their reasonable settlements, on the same terms as new settlements." This plan was taken up in Congress immediately after the Virginia cession, and recommitted for further consideration. A plan was reported by the committee April 19, 1784, and passed after four days debate and considerable amendment, providing for division of the territory into two distinct states by parallels of latitude and meridians of longitude. A number of forms of this ordinance, found among the papers of Congress, are of curious interest. No attempt was made to put the plan into practice. In fact, all these first efforts at providing a government for a fanciful state in the midst of an unbroken forest were abandoned as premature. The Indian treaties were not yet settled, and the actual purchase of soil had not been made. So all plans were dropped for another year, and when they appeared again the subject matter of the plan was divided, and there were two separate ordinances—one the land ordinance of 1785, and the other the famous Ordinance of 1787.

The land ordinance of May 20, 1785, made its preliminary appearance in Congress early in March and passed through several commitments until reported April 14 by a grand committee in a form "for ascertaining the mode of disposing of lands in the western territory." Thereafter the ordinance was the subject of continuous attention until its final passage in amended condition.46

This is the act which the states had long desired, to open the coveted lands of the Ohio. It defines a mode of subdividing the territory into small parcels for quick sale, and names for the first offer a most desirable section. The price is low per acre, to insure a ready market, and the terms easy, to fit the infirmities of the times. The act thus made favorable was passed to meet a public exigency, and its application was hastened to satisfy a suppositive demand, which never existed, and to supply a quick revenue, which The subdivision of the soil into small areas was made in the wilderness in heroic manner, as ordered, and the lands were offered at public vendue to save time and trouble for purchasers, but the sales were so few, and the returns in funds so inconsiderable, that the event itself is nearly forgotten and its traces in the records are almost entirely lost.

The land ordinance of 1785 inaugurated a system of surveying which was afterward perfected by practice and experience into that now in use in almost every civilized country on earth. It replaced the customary method of the ages, of locating by metes and bounds. The returns of homestead settlement by description referring to familiar objects of the landscapeso much frontage on a river or lake, including so many acres, by lines running to a tree or mountain as near as may be-would not apply in an unknown wilderness. An exact rule was needed of locating accurately, determinable by rod and chain, projected from an astronomical point whereby "the homesteader could locate his hut by the stars of heaven, no longer dependent on the whim or caprice of the overlord." The parcels were to be "squares" formed by parallels and meridians, the lines run by the compass and marked by chops on the trees as numbered towns and ranges, the whole presentable in a checkered plat, from which the purchaser might select his site. The first suggestion of the original ordinance made these squares "hundreds," ten miles on a side, with one hundred interior squares or lots of 640 acres each. The draft of April 26 reduces the township to seven miles, with forty-nine interior lots, and the final ordinance makes a further reduction to thirty-six lots, as now in use.47

^{*}The ordinance is entered on the minutes of Congress under date of April 26, and again with the alterations on the date of its passage, May 20, 1785.

This remarkable device of surveying, now known as the rectangular system, and called "one of America's greatest inventions" (W. R. H. S. Tract No. 61, p. 282), has not been traced to its origin. If the thread is ever picked up it will doubtless be found Immediate attention to the enforcement of the land ordinance follows its enactment. On the seventh day after passage, May 27, 1785, "The Geographer of the United States (Captain Thomas Hutchins) was continued in his office for a term of three years, at an allowance of six dollars a day for his services and expenses," and, according to order, Congress proceeded on the same day to the election of a surveyor for each state. 48 This action was taken in the reasonable expectation that the Indian programme settled upon would be carried out by the commissioners elected, the object being to obtain from the northern and western nations and tribes consent in writing to the extinguishment of their rights to the federal lands intended for settlement, and substantial engagements for the establishment of permanent relations of peace and friendship between the Indian and the settler. 49 The treaty at Fort Stanwix, October 27, 1784, settled matters on this basis with the northern Indians, and by a similar treaty at Fort McIntosh, January 21, 1785, the commissioners gained the consent of the western tribes 50 to the survey and settlement of the lands as far westward as the division line drawn between the portages of the Cuyahoga and the Great Miami rivers. These two great conventions, conducted running through the New England village of geometrically exact form. It has been said that Jefferson devised the scheme, but this would not explain the Connecticut suggestion of October 12, 1780, nor the recommendation in the report of November 3, 1780, and the scheme of November 3, 1780, and 1780 1781. Most likely it arose naturally from many sources to meet a general want. curious pamphlet of the 18th century seems to bear out this idea:

"Britania Major, the New Scheme, or Essay, for discharging the debts, improving the lands, and enlarging the trade, of the British Dominions in Europe and America," London, 1732.

The unknown author of this most remarkable book, in elaborating a plan for the exchange of the "useless and nnimproved lands of the British Isles and Northern America" with the creditors of the Nation, in the form of manors of 3000 plantation acres each to the nobility suitably graded, proposes, "a new division of each Province to be made into Counties of about 33 Square Miles, the County Town to be near the Centre, and each County to be divided into a proper number of Hundreds and Parishes, All the lands aforesaid to be measured out in Squares, and divided into Parishes as convenience of Habitation shall require." (p. 31.)

Albert Gallatin thus states the situation of the treaty nations:
Those tribes are in some respects considered as independent communities. They govern themselves without being subject to the laws of the United States; and their right to remain in possession of the lands they occupy, and to sell them only when they please is recognized. On the other hand the United States have the exclusive right of pre-emption, and all sales to foreign nations or to individuals, whether citizens or foreigners, are null by law; a provision as necessary for the protection of the Indians, as for that of the public domain. The principle is generally acknowledged by themselves and recognized in several of their treaties. Nor can it be disputed that even if their own right to sell is entire, the United States have that to forbid any one to purchase. The sales to the United States are however altogether voluntary and never made without a compensation more valuable to the Indians than the use of the land which they cede. with much show of dignity and considerable display of military protection. with great consumption of stores and exchanges of cash for wampum. were deemed sufficient to insure pacific conditions for the land surveys. But, "in order to give greater security to the frontier settlements, and establish a boundary line between the United States and the Potawatoma. Twightwees, Plankishaw and other western nations," Congress ordered a treaty, March 17, to be held with these Indians "at post Vincent on the Wabash river, on the 20th day of June or at such time or place as the commissioners may find most convenient." Even with these treaties there would still remain some uncertainty as to how the Shawnees would regard the transfer of their lands made at Fort Stanwix and Fort McIntosh, and a special treaty with these tribes was ordered by Congress. June 29, "to be held on the western bank of the Ohio, at the rapids, or at the mouth of the Great Miami," and arrangements were made for the commissioners and military to attend.51

Trusting that these accommodations would clear the frontiers of danger for the execution of the land ordinance, Captain Hutchins rendezvoused his men at Pittsburgh, the nearest point of approach to the scene of the surveys, where he arrived September 3, 1785. Accounts current there respecting the Indians were so very vague, uncertain, and unfavorable, that he took counsel with the commandant at Fort-McIntosh, who was of the opinion "that he might very safely repair with the surveyors to the intersection of the west line of Pennsylvania with the Ohio," where he was to begin the survey. Here, also, he met and counselled with General Butler en route to the Shawnee meeting, and despatched a courier to the Indian towns "requesting a chief from each of the Delaware and Wyandott nations for the purpose of constantly attending the surveyors during their being employed in the western territory;" and having written to the President of Congress of his intentions, Capt. Hutchins took the current of the Ohio, on September 22, for the place fixed by the land ordinance as the starting point of the survey.52

Arriving at Little Beaver Creek the geographer-general made camp at the "point on the River Ohio found to be due north from the western termination of a line, which has been run as the sonthern boundary of the state of Pennsylvania," there to await the return of his messengers and the arrival of the chiefs for his escort. During the intermediate time he took account of his equipment for the survey, "ascertained the variation of the different compasses belonging to the surveyors, and also the difference in the lengths of their Gunther's chains."68 He endeavored also "to find out the true variation of the needle and the latitude of the point of beginning the east and west line, and from a mean of a great number of observations both on the sun and north star made the latitude 40°: 38': 02" north, and the variation of the compass 54' east." Disquieting rumors of the Indians came to him from the neighborhood, but so great was his anxiety to carry the ordinance into execution that, on the 30th of September, he commenced running the first east and west line, notwithstanding disagreeable reports heard of "many prisoners and scalps taken into the Shawanoese towns by Indians unknown, and of a man and a part of his family killed and scalped a few miles below his encampment."

Captain Hutchins advanced less than four miles on the east and west line, purposely holding back in fear of the hovering Indians, and in anxiety for the return of the messenger with the protecting escort of chiefs. He remained on the line until October 9, when news of the threatening Indians brought in by one of the surveyors caused him to suspend operations and remove the camp to the southern side of the river.⁵⁴ There on the 15th of October he received the returning messenger laden with most unfriendly intelligence from the Indian towns. So far from meeting him at the appointed place, there were orders from the tribes who, at the Fort McIntosh convention, had "consented to the cessions and promised cooperation," for "Captain Hutchins and Brothers who sit at the thirteen fires . . . to desist from prosecuting the surveying business until the treaty to be held at the big Miami river." 55

Thus ended the first attempt of the United States to survey the federal The geographer removed his outfit to Pittsburgh, and later departed for New York. In a letter dated November 25 he communicated these facts to the President of Congress, enclosing all papers respecting

A few weeks after his return to New York, Captain Hutchins transmitted to Congress

a plan and Remarks of that part of the Western Territory through which an East and West Line has been run, agreeable to an ordinance of Cougress of the 20th of May last. The plan was copied from the original by Mr. William Morris Surveyor appointed by Congress from the State of New York. The justice I owe that Gentlemans merit and abilities, as well as for the active part which he took in forwarding of and assisting in the astronomical business of the Geographic Department when in the Western Territory, will I hope be admitted as a sufficient apology, for my having taken the liberty of mentioning his Name on the occasion.56

The letters of Captain Hutchins, and the papers accompanying them, give an explanation of the violation of the treaty by the Ohio Indians. In the letter sent to Congress from Pittsburgh, September 15, he declares:

This place is destitute of any accounts from De Troit or Niagara.--Permit me to assure your excellency, that, whilst the British possess those Posts, all Negociations with the Indian Nations on the part of the United States will fall far short of the end proposed to be attained, neither will Congress have that weight & Influence in the Councils of the Indian Nations, not even in those situated nearest to Pittsburgh, which the very great expence and trouble, that August Body have taken ought to insure to them ;-Indeed these circumstances together with the evil reports industriously propagated amongst the Indians by a number of persons who have in defiance of the Proclamation of Congress settled on the north side of the Ohio near to the Mingo Town 75 Miles below Pittsburgh, will greatly contribute to alienate the affections of the Indians, who, if freed from evil councellors, would be desirous of living peaceably and friendly with the Citizens of the United States. This is an Evil, allow me to say, which calls loudly for immediate redress, more especially as, in my opinion, the Surveyors have reason to apprehend much greater danger from those disorderly Persons, than from the Indians themselves.57

Information gathered at Little Beaver creek seems to support this theory. One witness reported:

Wyandots told the Delawares it was an open war; the British had sent tomahawks among them and that all the nations meant to strike. On the 1st of October they arrived, at which time, a grand council of the chiefs of the following nations was held at the Delaware town on the headwaters of the great Miami, vizt. the Wyandots, Delawares, Mingoes, Shawneese, Cherokees, Potutawatamies Miamies and Twightwees. The Kickapoos, Wauweaughtenies, Fox, Ottaway, Chepawa nations were not present but they sent their speeches with their wampum. That he was informed their intention at this meeting was to brighten the chain of friendship, and bind their union the firmer; ... that he saw a man who wishes his name to be kept secret, who told him the British were using their influence to prevent the Indians from attending the treaty at the mouth of the Great Miami.

It was reported also that the Wyandots and Delawares, after their return from Fort McIntosh, had received communications from Detroit in which the British denied having given their country away; they acknowledged they had made peace with the Americans and agreed to a boundary line between them, and had also given the Americans the laws or jurisdiction over the country, but they did not give them any right to the land.58

The initial point of the survey, fixed by the land ordinance, as a point that shall be found to be due north from the western termination of a line, which has been run as the southern boundary of the state of Pennsylvania, was easily located by the geographer, through observation of the markings made south of the Ohio river by commissioners of Pennsylvania then employed in running the west boundary line of the commonwealth. Captain Hutchins was himself engaged for this work, having been employed during the previous summer in determining the western extent of the southern boundary line of Pennsylvania, and he would have continued, but for his present labors, in running a north line from that point as far as the Ohio River. From this point he ran the East and West Line or, as it was later called, the Geographer's Line, westward for a distance of 3 miles, 66 chains and 78 links to the place where he heard the evil news. 53

When your Excellency compares all the above information and circumstances together with the repeated threats and solemu declarations of some hundreds of persons who have taken umbrage at that part of Ordinance relative to the mode of disposing of Lands in the Western Territory, and who in consequence thereof, have removed with their Families and Effects in the course of the last spring and summer to Detroit that they would irritate the Indians against the Surveyors appointed by Congress and actually go with the Indians to the War against them; permit me to hope that my conduct will appear to merit your Excellency's appropation more especially as I have made it my constant study to pursue every measure that to me appeared best calculated to enable me faithfully to discharge the trust reposed in me.—All the Indian information I could procure I have transmitted copies of to General Butler for the purpose of making his Negotiations with the Indians more successful.

The next year the geographer and his staff returned to the survey, intending to make up for lost time of the previous failure by completing thirteen ranges of townships ready for sale before the season closed. The return was ordered in Congress by a resolution of the 9th of May, 1786, with some opposition, and a proposition for alteration of the land ordinance. No alterations were made, however, except a provision that "the "urveyors do not proceed further northerly than the east and west line," 60 and a repeal of the clause requiring them "to pay the utmost attention to the variation of the magnetic needle and to run and note all lines by the true meridian." The treaty at the Big Miami, held on the 21st of January, had rendered everything secure—as Congress supposed.61 The geographer set out for the frontier May 23 and, arriving at Pittsburg June 25, despatched messengers for the chiefs of the Delawares, Wyandots, and Shawnees who, "agreeable to their promise to the Commissioners, were to give him protection." He informed Congress, in a letter dated July 8, that "troops may be necessary," and he proceeded at once, without waiting for either soldiers or Indians, to resume the surveys. But when he summoned the men, who had assembled at the former camp awaiting orders, they positively refused to proceed until a body of troops was provided to cover their operations.62

Thus the surveys were resumed. The east and west line was projected westerly to the ninth range, a distance of over fifty miles. From this line as a base, range lines six miles apart were run southerly to the river, a distance on the westerly ranges of ninety-five miles. Cross lines were run every six miles, working westerly from the river at right angles were run every six miles, working westerly from the river at right angles

58 No description has been found of his method of finding this point, but it may he supposed that he sighted across the river from the south shore. According to present geography the East and West Line forms the north line of the second tier of lots, or sections, of the township of Liverpool. Columbiana County, Ohio, passing directly north of the city of East Liverpool. It is not known how Capt. Hutchins marked the initial point, nor how it was situated with respect to the high- and low-water lines of the Ohio River. The original surveyor's plat of the northeasterly township of the Seven Ranges of Townships, in the General Land Office, Drafting Division, Washington, D. C., shows the point at the exact margin of the river as does also the published plat of the Seven Ranges of Townships made to advertise the sale of 1796. But maps of Ohio from that day to this show a bit of land between the line and the river, which may or may not he due to the recession of the river. Virginia has always claimed that her reserved territory extended to the high-water mark on the northerly side of Ohio River, but Chief Justice Marshall ruled (v. Wharton, 691) that low-water mark on the northwest side was the boundary of Ohio.

The Pennsylvania commissioners completed the west boundary line of Pennsylvania to Lake Erie in October, 1786, "by opening a Vista and planting stones marked P on the east side." Penn. Arch., vol. 10, pp. 440, 443, 452, 760; vol. 11, p. 69.

69 This alteration in the field of survey, which originally extended "from the River Ohio to the lake Erie," was made in Congress after the report of the geographer of the latitude of the east and west line, 40°: 38': 02", to accommodate the claims of Connecticut, which lay between 41° and 42°, 02;'' north latitude.

60 The Shawnee tribes had given their signatures to the prescribed division line, and the Wyandots had sent their hostage to Congress as a token of their repentance for the broken trea to the range lines, and every mile was marked by chops on trees standing on or near the line, as required by the ordinance. The geographer and his eight surveyors and many more chainbearers, axe men, and followers, and a battalion of military to escort them, were thus spread out over the triangular field of the survey, pushing the work steadily, "even Sundays not excepted," to finish the thirteen ranges—if possible, altogether making quite a stir in the wilderness east of the Muskingum and the Tuscarawas. The storm broke upon them in September. At his camp, "38 miles on the the East and West line," Hutchins received a message from the chief of the Wyandots, informing him that they could not comply with the request to assist in the surveying until they had brought the "back nations" 65 to terms. "I am just now between two fires," spoke Half King, "for I am afraid of you and likewise of the back nations." From other sources it was learned that a large body of Indians was collecting with hostile intentions, determined "that the Ohio river and the line being cut by Pennsylvania shall remain forever the boundary between them and the Big Knives." The Shawnees had five hundred warriors ready to move the "moment they hear Captain Hutchins is out." On October 1 the danger had become so threatening that the surveyors held to camp, absolutely refusing to continue.64 The men were in terror, and the geographer, "to his great mortification," was obliged to advise retirement to the back ranges. With great difficulty he kept enough men at work until four ranges were completed. Still the attacks continued, and in November, on advice of the military, the surveyors withdrew to a camp on the Virginia side. 65 Captain Hutchins informed Congress of the interruption of the survey in a letter dated at the Virginia camp, December 2, adding: "I shall be detained here until such time as the townships already surveyed are delineated on paper, which will probably take to the commencement of the ensuing year, when I shall lose no time in proceeding with them to New York."66 Captain Hutchins returned to New York in February, carrying with him

Congress has given authority to the geographer to appoint surveyors as vacancies occurred, which accounts for the last four names. The surveyors employed the first season were: Benjamin Tupper, William W. Morris, Alexander Parker, James Simpson, Robert Johnson, Isaac Sherman, Absalom Martin, and Edward Dowse. (Cf. 63 A letter dated October 27, 1786, informed Hutchins that "Joseph Brant with 56 of the Six Nations had gone to the Shawnees Towns. In a council he had with some of the Indians at Casheckton he expressed a wonder that the surveyors should proceed to survey the land that did not belong to them." 66 The ordinance required the surveyors "to mark the lines they had run on plats and to note thereon all mines, salt-springs, salt-licks, mill-sites, water-cour-es, mounand to note thereon all mines, salt-springs, salt-licks, mill-sites, water-cour-es, mountains, and other remarkable and permanent things over and near which the lines shall pass, and also the quality of the lands," and to return these plats to the Secretary at War, who was to cause a copy thereof to be made for the loan commissioner of each state for purposes of the sale. One set only of these plats was made, consisting of 77 townships, and they are still preserved in the United States General Land Office in charge of E. Mulkow, a veteran employee who rescned them some years ago from destruction by mildew when the General Land Office was removed from the Patent Office building to its present quarters. Each of these plats is signed by the surveyor. They are drawn ou a scale of 40 chains to the inch, and the interior lines forming 36 lors, which were not run by the surveyors are ruled on certain of the plats, to show the results of sales. There is also a book of exteriors of certain townships, with elaborate descriptions, which seem to belong to this survey. the visible and tangible evidence of his labors. "I have brought with me," he wrote to the President of Congress, "the plats and description of four ranges completely surveyed containing in the whole six hundred and seventy-five thousand four hundred and eighty acres." These he deposited with the board of treasury, according to the ordinance; and on the 18th of April he sent his own returns to Congress.

Captain Hutchins's returns were the subject of immediate action in Congress, in the consideration of "a plan for selling for public securities the townships surveyed in the western territory" reported by the board of treasury on the 19th of April. The report condemns the plan of proportional distribution by states through the Secretary at War and the local loan offices, fixed in the ordinance to take place "as soon as 7 ranges of townships shall have been surveyed," as too slow and expensive, and recommends a direct sale at public auction to the highest bidder regardless of his local habitation. Congress agreed to this report April 21, and ordered "the sale to be advertised to commence at the expiration of five months from date, in the place where Congress shall sit and continue from day to day until the same shall be sold." The advertisements appeared as directed. Twenty-seven separate townships or fractional townships are listed in a table by range and township numbers, to be exposed to sale, either entire or in lots (now called sections) of one mile square in alternate order, at not less than one dollar per acre, plus cost of surveying, payable one third down and the remaining two thirds in three months, in specie, or certificates, "excepting therefrom and reserving one third part of all gold, silver, lead and copper mines within the land sold."68 Proper maps and descriptions of the lands were to be exhibited at the time and place of sale, and the sales were to continue from day to day until the whole were "The admirable quality of these lands, and the favorable climate in which they are situated," the advertisements declare, "are too well known to need description."

The sale took place as advertised, in New York, September 21, 1787, continuing until October 9, when it ceased, with the greater part of the townships remaining unsold. During the sixteen days of sale 32 persons bought 148 parcels, aggregating 150,896 acres, 176,090 6/90th dollars, purchase money, of which 87,438 18/90th dollars was paid at the time of sale in public securities. The highest price bid was 22 dollars for a fractional lot of an acre and a half on the river, but most of the sales were at the minimum rate of a dollar per acre. During the summer of 1787, the surveyors again returned to the Ohio. Troubles with the Indians had not abated, but they finished closing in the townships of seven ranges. Hutchins probably did not attend this survey as he was in New York in October busy with his accounts. He made final report the following summer and turned in the finished plan of the Seven Ranges, which he transmitted to the board of treasury under date of July 26, 1788.

This clause was omitted from the act of 1796.

69 Albert Gallatin gives the results of the New York sale, in a summary printed in the Introduction to the Land Laws, p. xxii, previously referred to, as "72,974 acres at public sale at New York, in the year 1787, for 87,325 dollars, in evidence of the public debt," while Public Domain, p. 17, gives other figures.

VOL. XLIV.

The circumstances of the first survey and sale of the federal lands, from which so much had long been expected and so little realized, would be interesting and doubtless important if all were known, but scarcely anything remains of this period in the public prints or official records to tell the story. The sale itself was a failure and the survey a disappointment. The first returns of four ranges, after years of waiting, expense, and danger, were so meagre as to justify criticism in Congress of the mode of survey, and call for immediate revision of the ordinance, and a move in that direction is noted in the minutes of Congress at the time the sale was ordered. 70 At this very moment, also, memorials began to appear, praying Congress for grants of large areas for private adventure in settlement for which large sums of money were promised for immediate payments, offering quicker means of revenue than the auction sales.71 Hutchins's finished plan and description of the whole Seven Ranges came in during the summer of 1788,72 but there the business dropped. By that time several

To It was recommended in April, 1787, "that Congress adopt measures for disposing of the lands which may be, not only practicable, but speedy in their operation." An investigation of the working of the geographer's department under the ordinance followed, and a revision appeared of the old ordinance, providing, for private adventures in locating, surveying, and settling lands, conformable, in a fashion, to the six mile township system. The revision gained no standing in Congress, as it was deemed best not to interfere with sales depending, both public and private, hy new legislation of this nature. But after the sales were over the snhject was revived, and a supplemental ordinance was passed July 9, 1788, repealing parts deemed objectionable in the old ordinance, snspending the public sales at the option of the board of treasury, and anthorizing the private locations provided for in the former revision, with respect to the two military tracts westward of the Seven Ranges of Townships, which, on the 22d of October, 1787, were designated by act of Congress for apportionment as army lands. (The revised draft of April, 1787, is in the Papers of the Continental Congress, No. 30, p. 119.)

The first of these proposals is the Memorial of the Associators, in the handwriting and over the signature of their Agent, "Sam H. Parsons." Dated in New York the 8th of Max, 1787, read in Congress May 9, reported by the committee July 10, it was discussed and acted on July 23, when it was referred to the hoard of treasury to take orther. This was the earliest explicit offer of money for lands, but the contract was not closed. Dr. Manasseh Cutler, one of the Association, filed another memorial on July 6, which was acted on in the same way July 27, and this was made the basis of the contract with the Ohio Company of Associates. Next came the proposition of William Duer, agent for the Scioto Company, which, for prudential reasons, was combined with the contract of the Ohio Company, which, for prudential reasons, was combined with the 70 It was recommended in April, 1787, "that Congress adopt measures for disposing

Gentlemen:
You will receive herewith a Plan of the Seven Ranges containing 1.641.724 acres with the surveys and Descriptions appertaining thereto, also a calculation of the Townships and Fractional parts of Townships in the Fitch, Sixth and Seventh Ranges.

I am very Respectfully

The Honble Commissioners of the board of Treasury.

The plan is missing, but the descriptions and calculation were found with the letter.

large purchases had been successfully concluded by the board of treasury, beginning with the Ohio Company of Associates, which was closed a few weeks after the end of the New York sales. All dealings for lands ceased under the new constitution until, after the Greenville Treaty, the act of Congress of 1796 restored the system inaugurated by Captain Hutchins into full force and effect.⁷⁸

Official returns of the New York sale are found in the papers of the Continental Congress, entitled:

Schedule of Sales of Lands in the Western Territory of the United States, at Public Auction, from the 21st Septemr. to the 9t. October 1787—And the Amount of Public Securities received in payment for the Same.

This document, consisting of six large tabulated sheets, signed by M. Hillegas, U. S. Treasurer, and Wm. Duer, Secretary of the board of treasury, and dated September 13, 1788, gives names of each purchaser, township and lot number, acreage, amount paid etc. There is also in the land office in Washington the book of patents issued for the sale, in which the names and dates of the complete purchases are given. In addition are the surveyors plats, previously mentioned, on which are recorded the names and other data of sales. Finally there are the lands themselves entered in the several counties in Ohio, with records of the original purchasers. From all these sources it is possible to compile a list of the first owners of public lands of the United States.

It is possible also to give a correct list of the 1000 original proprietors and settlers of the Muskingum settlement of the Ohio Company from the official records of draughts and allotments of lands to each proprietor, kept by Col. John May, secretary of the Ohio Company, and recently found. The draughts took place at Providence, R. I., on Thursday, the 8th of May, 1787, and on the Muskingum in July, 1788. (Cf. Cutler's Journal, also the Journal of Col. John May.)⁷⁶

The board of treasury had authority to hold a public sale at any time or place of the land remaining unsold in the Seven Ranges of Townships after the New York sale, but no more lots were sold until 1796, when the Secretary of the Treasury held sales under the first land law of Congress (May 18, 1796), as follows: at Pittsburgh, where alternate townships were offered for sale in lots, or sections, and 43,446 acres were sold for 100,427 dollars; and at Philadelphia, where the alternate townships entire were offered, and one sale made, 5,200 acres at $2.00 per acre. No other sales were made of public lands until the establishment of the local land office system by the act of May 10, 1800. The latest larger histories are at fault on this matter of the early land sales. (Cf. act of May 18, 1796, and Introduction to the Land Laws, p. xxii.)

EDWARD DOWNES OF DORCHESTER, MASS., AND HIS DESCENDANTS

Compiled by W. E. D. Downes, Ph.D., of Farmington, Me.

EDWARD DOWNES is first found on the records of Dorchester in 1723. It is believed that he came from the British Isles, and he may have been connected with one of the Downes families earlier in New England, but no proof of such connection has been found. He lived, says Huntoon, under Blue Hill, and was on the first Stoughton tax list in 1727. He seems to have been an improvident and restless individual. On 5 Nov. 1724 Edward and his wife Ruth conveyed to John Shepard land and onequarter dwelling, well, and barn, being a part of James Puffer's estate (Suffolk Co. Deeds, vol. 40, p. 4). He was at sea 18 July 1736, and a collection was taken up for his wife and children. In 1740 he was on the company roll of Capt. Thomas Phillips to go to Carthagena. In 1744 Edward went to the eastward, and never returned, although family tradition says that he was killed in the Indian war in 1756.

He was married, 11 Mar. 1723, to RUTH PUFFER, daughter of James and Abigail (Newton), born 16 Mar. 1704, died 22 Apr. 1790. The estate of Ruth Downes, widow, deceased intestate, was administered by Edward Downes, gentleman, 11 Apr. 1791.

NOTES

ASHBURNHAM VITAL RECORDS .- Two errors in the Ashburnham Vital Records, printed under the Systematic History Fund, are as follows, p. 151, marriages: Shoof. Elisebeth, and Philip Chriger, July 30, 1767. Schoofe, Delahah, and Aaron Sampson, Nov. 9, 1768.

"16. Joel W. Harrington to Rebec. B. Melcher.

June 15. Nath! Benner to Mary Barstow

The first one of these marriages gets the name of the husband quite wrong. In the original ms. (which I have personally examined) the entry was very careless, being "Philip Chri. Ger.," which Stearns in his History of Ashburnham expands to "Philip Christian Ger."

This name should be Grapes. Jacob Schoff and his family, including these two married daughters, left Asiburnham in 1773 and moved to northern New Hampshire, and later to Maidstone, Vt. In the town and census records of Maidstone and Brunswick, Vt., may be found many entries as Grapes, and some as Graves. There are still numerous descendants in the vicinity. I believe the correct German version of the name was Delanah-shortened to Lena-and the man's Samson, without the p. These names also occur in the records of Guildhall, Maidstone, and Brunswick, Vt.

Stearns in his history says these families went to Haverhill, N. H., but he was mistaken. They went to Morristown, now Franconia; then to Northumberland; then to Maidstone; and some of the next generation settled in the adjoining towns of Guildhall, Stratford, and Brunswick. Stearns gives the date of removal as 1777, but he is wrong—it was 1773. They did not sell their Ashburnham land until 1777, but the New Hampshire census of 1775 has them down as living in Morristown.

I have copies of the deeds to the land in all the towns, with dates, also various vital records and family data, which fully prove the above statements.

WILFRED H. SCHOFF. Lynwyd, Pa.

HASKENS .- The history of Taunton gives Nicolas Haskens among the signers in 1708 to the petition to incorporate Taunton South Purchase as Dighton, and a writer in the REGISTER, vol. 56, p. 306. builds up from this that he was the same as the Portsmouth, N. H., schoolmaster and scrivner, Nicholas Heskins. There was at Dighton a Nicholas Stephens, the first of whose nine children was born in 1696. As tracings from the original petition made by two different people make the name look like Stephens, and as no Stephens appears in the printed list, I infer that an error was made.

I know nothing to show that Nicholas Heskins of Portsmouth, or Great Island, N. H., ever went to Dighton, or that he ever married. While Savage places him at Portsmouth in 1660, a Great Island tax list for 1677 shows his name immediately following that of William Haskins, who in July, 1672, was "lately arrived from Ireland" with wife and children. They could not have been father and son, as several depositions show Nicholas to have been born about 1637.

They were likely brothers.

This William Haskins in 1676 received a house lot from Nathaniel and Christian Fryer, and thereafter his wife was Christian, who outlived him and married Henry Williams. It may be that the wife he brought with him died, that on his second marriage his first family broke up, and that one of his children was "Richard Haskins of Portsmouth," whose marriage to Jane Feuster was recorded in Taunton in 1686. This, if true, would indicate a relationship between the Portsmouth and Taunton families of Haskins.

Benjamin Haskins from Scituate, son of John, was in Scarborough, Me., as early as 1719, and later bought a farm close by that of Benjamin Larrabee, whose wife was Sarah, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Haskins) Johnson, and whose marriage is on record in Hampton, N. H., in 1701. This Benjamin Haskins named his only child Sarah. A conjecture may be that John Haskins and Elizabeth Haskins were two of the scattered children of William of Portsmouth, who apparently was a ne'er-do-well. CHARLES THORNTON LIBBY.

GENEALOGIES IN PREPARATION .- Persons of the several names are advised to furnish the compilers of these genealogies with records of their own families and other information which they think may be useful. We would suggest that all facts of interest illustrating family history or character be communicated, especially service under the U.S. Government, the holding of other offices, gradnation from college or professional schools. occupation, with places and dates of birth, marriage, residence, and death. George Allen, Ralph Allen. One line of their descendants in New Jersey with some fragments of history, [by] David Allen Thompson. Albany, N. Y., Weed-Parsons Printing Company. 1910. 12° pp. 66.

The story of the persecutions of these Quakers, and the descendants of one branch of the family in New Jersey (which presents some difficult genealogical problems), receive first attention in this little volume. Several wills and letters are reprinted in full in the Appendix, which fills the second half of the volume and also contains a reprint of an article by Hon. Clifford S. Sims from the REGISTER, vol. 25, page 144. The book will be of interest to those who are connected with this branch of the family.

A partial record of the Bancker or Banker families of America, and in particular the descendants of Laurens Mattyse Bancker, compiled by Howard James Banker. [Rutland, Vt., The Tuttle Company, 1909.] 8° pp. 458, illus.

The earliest positive record of Laurens Mattyse Bancker is that of his appearance in New York City in 1673. A carefully compiled and conscientious record of his descendants is here presented in a well-made volume printed on "N. E. H. G. S. Standard" paper, which in itself shows that the author considers his work worthy of a long and useful life. Among the other families that receive some attention are the Cranckheyt, Boeckhout, Baker, Grant, Verity, Evert, and De Peyster families. This is an excellent addition to the constantly increasing number of genealogies of families of Dutch descent. Many of the records given here are from the Dutch Reformed Church of Sleepy Hollow, a photograph of which is among the illustrations.

Barber Genealogy. Section I. Descendants of Thomas Barber of Windsor, Conn., 1614-1909. Section II. Descendants of John Barber of Worcester, Mass., 1714-1909. Published by John Barber White, edited by Lilian May Wilson. Haverhill, Mass., The Nichols Press, 1909. 8° pp. 659 + 164, illus.

This huge genealogy will be welcomed by those whose lines are here included. The first section contains over thirty-five hundred names and has its own index. The second section, compiled by Edmund Dana Barbour of Boston, includes the descendants in the female lines as well as the male, and contains besides Barber names many others, among which the most notable are Bullard, Dodge, Honghton, and Smith. Great credit is due for bringing out such a mass of information in so scholarly a manner and making it so easily available for the use of those to whom it is of interest.

One branch of the Booth family, showing the lines of connection with one hundred Massachusetts Baycolonists, by Charles Edwin Booth. New York, privately printed. 1910. 8° pp. 259, illus. Price $5.00 postpaid. Address the author, National Arts Club. New York.

Each family from whom the author is descended is given a separate sketch, which is compiled in a scholarly style with valuable references for every important statement. Early military service receives very careful attention, and one whose line concides with any of the numerous descents given here will be greatly aided by this work. Extracts from the military journal of Capt. Joseph Booth, kept in 1767 at Oneida, which has never before been published, add to the historical value of the book, which is well indexed and suitably bound.

Family history of Jeremiah Fenton (1764-1841) of Adams County, Ohio, and descendants, by William B. Brown. Des Moines, Iowa, 1910. 80 pp. 206, illus.

This genealogy contains a large number of biographical sketches of a family scattered through the Middle West, and will essentially interest those who know the people whose lives are here recorded. A genealogical chart in the beginning of the book is very useful, as there is no attempt, except that of sequence, to connect fathers and children; nor is there an index. The illustrations are chiefly portraits of members of the family who have given special aid to the compiler of the genealogy.

A history of Welcome Garrett and his descendants, from his birth in 1758 down to a recent date: embracing data of the Martin, Puckett, Starbuck, Deatherage, and other families, and including some descendants of Benjamin Garrett of West Virginia. Bolter Garrett, Gibson Garrett, and Madison Garrett, [by] Samuel B. Garrett. Muncie, Indiana, copyrighted by the author, 1909. 80 pp. 141, illus. Price $5.00. Address the author, Muncie, Ind.

Welcome Garrett was a Qnaker. born in 1758, who lived in North Carolina and Indiana. The author states in his introduction that the "data collected embraced the progeny of Welcome Garrett of whatever name," and the number of individuals here recorded testify to the extent of the search. This must have been considerable in a family which had eighty-five first cousins. Most of them and their descendants reside in the Middle West. The illustrations are portraits, and there is an index.

Descendants of the Rev. Francis Higginson, first "Teacher" in the Massachusetts Bay Colony of Nalen, Mass., and author of "New-Englands Plantation," by THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON. Privately printed, 1910. 8° pp. 68, port.

This brief, concise genealogy of an eminent family begins with an account of the settlement of the first "Teacher" in Salem in 1629, and brings the direct lines down to date. The arrangement is simple and easily understood, and the book is indexed. The only illustration is a portrait of the Rev. Mr. Higginson, and the author, in a footnote, speaks of the doubt which exists as to which of the early Higginson clergymen it represents, and refers for further data to his book on the "Life of Francis Higginson." It is well that a genealogy of interest to so many people should have been published in the lifetime of one able to present it correctly.

A brief history of the Andrew Pulman, Christian Wyandt, and Adam Snyder of Washington County, Maryland, by E. Clayton Wyand, A.M. [Hagerstown, Md., Hagerstown Bookbinding and Printing Company, 1909.] 8° pp. 103, illus.

Andrew Putman, or Buttman, came to America from Germany and settled in Maryland, where he was joined somewhat later by Christian Wyandt, who came from Bavaria about the time of the Revolution. In order to collect the data regarding this family the anthor took a trip through Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and succeeded in gathering valuable material which otherwise would have been lost or could have been procured only with great difficulty. The illustrations represent members of the family and some of the early homesteads.

Stokes Records. Notes regarding the ancestry and lives of Anson Phelps Stokes and Helen Louisa (Phelps) Stokes, by Anson Phelps Stokes. In four volumes. Vol. I. Parts 1 and 2. New York, privately printed for the family, 1910. 4° pp. 275, illus.

These two very beautiful volumes, which are parts one and two of volume one, are but the beginning of an extensive account of the records of this family, prepared by the author especially for his children. Part one is devoted to the early life and ancestry of James Boulter Stokes, who was of English parentage, and of his wife Caroline Phelps. who was of New England descent. In part two the author gives a personal reminiscent record which contains many interesting and delightful experiences. Both books contain ancestral charts, numerous portraits, and views of earlier residences. Seldom does one see such exquisite illustrations as are given in these two parts, which are a delight to any lover of fine books.

The military record of John Green Ballance, Lt.-Col. U. S. A., Brig.-Gen. U. S. V., compiled for the Society of Sons of the Revolution in the State of California, by Holdridge Ozro Collins, LL.D. 1910. 4° pp. 143, port.

The hero of this interesting and honorable record was born in 1853 in Peoria, Ill., the ninth child of Charles and Julia Margaret (Schnebly) Ballance. He was graduated from West Point in 1875, and soon began his career in the West, where he performed valuable service in suppressing Indian insurrections. Later he was in the Philippines, where he was engaged in twenty-one fights and four important skirmishes, a detailed list of which is given. The Society deserves credit for bringing out this excellent record of one of its distinguished members, and for the care taken to procure from the War Department at Washington so many copies of important orders, many of which appear in the Appendix. Col. Ballance died Feb. 10, 1910, at Miami, Fla.

Julienno Provençalo, [by] Joseph François Baptistan Denis Julien. 16° pp. 39, illus.

The anthor of this Provençal poem was born in 1804 in Lourmarin, France. After some travel in Sonth America and along the coast of Africa he came to New York, between 1830 and 1835, and there he finally became proprietor of the Hotel Saint Denis. About 1860 he wrote this poem of which Mr. Thomas A. Janvier of New York has said: "As a Provençal poem written in America, it has a gennine literary interest; and the more because its author, writing in the decade of 1850-60, contemporaneously echoed in this country the then new-born Felibrien literary revival in Provence." A portrait of the author is given as a frontispiece, and the illustrations in the poem are reproduced from photographs made in Lourmarin in 1896 by Matthew Cantine Julien of New Bedford, Mass.

Memoir of George Sumner Mann, by Marquis Favette Dickinson. Boston, press of David Clapp & Son, 1910. 8° pp. 8, port.

This is a reprint from the REGISTER for April 1910. with the addition of the remarks made by Anson M. Lyman at a meeting of the Brookline Thursday Club.

A catalogue of the City Councils of Boston 1822-1908, Rexbury 1846-1867, Charlestown 1847-1873, and of the selectmen of Boston 1634-1822, and also of various other town and municipal officers. City of Boston, Printing Department, 1909. 8° pp. 402.

In addition to the contents of this book, which are enumerated on the title page, there is a description of the city wards and the boundaries that have been run at the six different divisions of the city; and also the mayorality vote as it has been polled since 1822.

Legislative history and souvenir of Connecticut. Vol. VII. 1909-1910. Pnt-nam. Conn., William Harrison Taylor. 1910. 80 pp. 368, illus.

Individual sketches of all the state officers, senators, representatives, clerks, and chaplains for this legislative year, with portraits, comprise the greater part of this volume, which also includes group cuts of committees and the memorial proceedings at the death of the late governor, George L. Lilley. The volume is printed on heavy paper and bound in red cloth.

State of Connecticut, Register and Manual, 1910. Hartford, published by the State, 1910. 12° pp. 635, illus., map.

This manual has been prepared pursuant to the General Statutes by the Secretary, and contains the usual information to be found in such an annual. The illustration is a view of the state capitol.

Soldiers buried in Lee. List of Six Wars in the three cemeteries, compiled by D. M. Wilcox. [No title-page.] 80 pp. 3.

The Center Cemetery, South Lee Cemetery, and Roman Catholic Cemetery are the three from which these names have been taken. Unfortunately no dates whatever are given, but the names are arranged alphabetically and grouped under the different wars.

Genealogical and personal memoirs relating to the families of the state of Massachusetts, prepared under the editorial supervision of William Richard Cutter A. M., assisted by William Frederick Adams. Four Volumes. New York, Lewis Publishing Company, 1910. 4° pp. 50 + 2770, illus.

Worcester County, Middlesex County, Boston and Eastern Massachusetts have been the three titles used to designate the previous sets of books of this kind relating to Massachnsetts which have been published by this company.

The great number of illustrations, chiefly portraits, the size, style, and binding of these four books make the volumes similar to those mentioned above, and it would seem that no one had been neglected who cared to have his history appear in a huge work of this sort. As usual, the index to the whole set is in the fourth volume. Doubtless the Lewis Publishing Company is without a rival in the quantity of miscellaneous genealogical composition it issues annually.

Three ancient cemeteries in New Hampshire near junction boundary lines of Lebanon, Plainfield and Grantham, by Thomas Hills. Boston, press of David Clapp and Son, 1910. 8° pp. 64.

These inscriptions were carefully and accurately copied, and later the families found were looked up genealogically, much material was added in each case, and the whole was then arranged in alphabetical order. Therefore, anyone consulting this pamphlet will find much more information than such collections of inscriptions usually afford. It is sincerely hoped that Mr. Hills will be interested to continue work of this kind.

The Fobes Memorial Library, Oakham, Mass., with the addresses at the laying of the corner-stone and at the dedication. Prepared at the request of the Library Building Committee, by Henry P. Wright. Oakham, Mass., 1909. 8° pp. 121, illus.

This library was presented to the town by Celia E. Fobes and Harriet Fobes Gifford in memory of Hiram Fobes and Hiram Nye Fobes, and by Charles A. Fobes in memory of his father, Peres Ames Fobes. The historical address by Henry P. Wright contains an unusual amount of information regarding the early settlement of the town, many of its pioneers coming from Bridgewater, as did Joseph Fobes. In the Addenda are a brief genealogy of the Oakham branch of the Fobes family, and documents relating to the Oakham Library. The volume is indexed, well made, and neatly bound in green cloth.

Scotch-Irish Pioneers in Ulster and America, by Charles Knowles Bolton, with maps and illustrations drawn by Ethel Stanwood Bolton. Boston, Bacon and Brown, 1910. 8° pp. 398, illus.

A new field of historical study in specialized subjects has been opened by Mr. Bolton in this initial work on the Scotch-Irish pioneers in America, and it also has a position in the van of present historical methods which, in making a study of the American people, consider the various elements that compose the nation and the physiological influence of each. Considerable attention is given to the life in Ulster, and numerous clever illustrations are also found throughout the volume. There is also some discussion of the settlements in South Carolina and Pennsylvania. The biographical information, which is to be found all through the volume, is made easily accessible by the excellent index, while several appendices will be found to contain valuable details.

Publications of The Colonial Society of Massachusetts. Vol. IV. Collections. Boston, published by the Society, 1910. 8° pp. 502.

It is only necessary to cite the table of contents in this volume in order to show that this well-known, scholarly Society is continuing to increase its already enviable reputation for serious historical effort. Papers relating to the Land Bank of 1740, prepared by Andrew McFarland Davis, receive the first position, and fill about two hundred pages. These are followed by a Bibliography of the Massachusetts House Journals, 1715–1776, by Worthington Chauncey Ford, and a Bibliography of the Laws of the Massachusetts Bay, 1641–1776, by Mr. Ford and Mr. Albert Matthews. The usual careful index is supplied.

Publications of The Colonial Society of Massachusetts. Vol. XI. Transactions, 1906-1907. Boston, published by the Society, 1910. 8º pp. 509, illus.

Beginning with the December meeting in 1906, and continuing to the December meeting in 1907, the records of this Society are here presented, and contain no small amount of valuable information, all of which is carefully indexed and easily accessible. Some of the longer communications are "Letters of Washington, 1789-1793," "Circulating Libraries in Boston, 1765-1865," "The Burgis-Price View of Boston," "Mr. Blackstone's 'Excellent Spring," "John Harvard in England," and these titles are but a suggestion of the interesting contents of the volume.

A Bibliographical Puzzle, by Andrew McFarland Davis. Reprinted from the publications of The Colonial Society of Massachusetts, Vol. XIII. Cambridge [Mass.], John Wilson and Son, University Press, 1910. 8° pp. 15.

The perplexing question of number fifteen of volume seven of the "Review of the State of the British Nation" is here most ably reviewed and all the facts are presented in Mr. Davis's thorough manner. Those interested in a study of the early political pamphlets of Massachusetts will welcome this article.

Two forgotten pamphleteers in the Massachusetts Currency Controversy. 1720-1740, by Andrew McFarland Davis. Cambridge [Mass.], John Wilson and Son, University Press, 1910. 8° pp. 22.

John Valentine of Boston, notary public, etc., and Hugh Vans of Boston, merchant, are the two men sketched in this article, which is reprinted from the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society for March, 1910.

A handlist to the Surnames represented by Inscriptions in the Hundred of Olsey in the county of Hertford, recorded in 1908. Compiled by W. B. GERRISH. Bishop's Stortford, 1909. 8° pp. 15. Price one shilling.

This list of names has been collected from seventeen parishes, and the author states that in addition to churches, churchyards, and cemeteries. all the inscriptions in nonconformist places of worship and burial grounds have been recorded. The names are arranged alphabetically and are followed by a letter which indicates the parish in which the name is found.

References to English Surnames in 1601. An index giving about 19,650 references to surnames contained in the printed registers of 778 English parishes during the first year of the XVII century. By F. K. and S. HITCHING. Walton-on-Thames, Eng., Chas. A. Bernau. 8° pp. 70.

The admirable arrangement of this work deserves especial mention. A letter, or simple combination of letters, is first used to designate each of the different counties of England. Under each county is a numbered list of the printed registers belonging to that county. This number, used with the letters, shows at a glance in what printed registers for the year 1601 the surname is to be found. The compilers state in the preface that, if this volume meets with a reception at all proportionate to its expense, it will be followed by similar volumes indixing 1602, 1603, and so on, until at least thirty years (one generation) have been indexed.

Bulletin of Yale University, Sixth series, Number 9, July 1910. Obituary record of Yale graduates. New Haven, Conn., published by Yale University, 1910. 8° pp. 1155-1404.

This pamphlet contains the obituary record of graduates of Yale University who deceased during the academical year ending June 1910, including the record of a few who died previously, and hitherto unreported. The arrangement is by classes.

Summary of class meetings and the biographical record of the Class of 1865, Yale Coolege. Whitehead C. Duyckinck, Class Secretary. New York, press of Tobias A. Wright, 1910. Spp. 163, illus.

The Class is to be congretulated on the excellent manner in which these sketches have been compiled. Other secretaries would do well in following the example of care given to one especial detail, that of printing names in full in every instance instead of using initials, and also in giving the mother's maiden name in the parentage. This immeasurably increases the value of the publication for future use as a work of reference.

Bulletin of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. Vol. I, No. 1. Boston, May 1919. 8° pp. 8, illus.

The laudable purpose for which this society was created is concisely described in its title. The disappearance of ancient landmarks has been so continuous that houses of the earliest period have become of the utmost rarity, and even later ones are rapidly vanishing. Views of the Royall, Hancock, Lee, Clark, Fairbanks, Bradford, Boardman, and Longfellow houses are among the illustrations of treasures that have disappeared or may be lost unless their preservation is made a matter of special concern to a particular Society. All who are interested to assist in this work should communicate with the secretary, William Summer Appleton, The Union Club, Boston. It is hoped that public spirit will be awakened and material support given this laudable enterprise.

One hundred and fourth anniversary celebration of the New England Society in the city of New York. 22 December, 1909. [New York, William Green.] 4th pp. 121.

This celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock was held at the Waldorf-Astoria. New York. Speeches were made by the president, Seth Low. Pres. Harry A. Garfield of Williams College, Rev. Lyman Abbott, John Coff Spooner, and Irving Bacheller. The list of members and guests present is given, and also the roll of membership.

Annual of the University Club. New York. Forty-sixth year, 1910-1911. [New York, The Knickerbocker Press, 1910.] 8° pp. 203.

The lists of resident, non-resident, army and navy, and deceased members, constitution, house-rules, and the report of the library are contained in this volume, a limited number of which were printed, primarily for the use of members.

The Federalist Party in Massachusetts to the year 1800, by Anson Ely Morse, Ph.D. Princeton, The University Library, 1909. 8° pp. 231.

The writer of this thesis, which was prepared to complete the requirements for the degree of doctor of philosophy at Princeton University, considers that the development of the Federalist Party in Massachusetts from 1775 to 1800 was largely due to the social and religious conditions. It is not new to discover that political parties are permally the outgrowth of social conditions (industrial, religious, commercial—all the phases that comprise the life of a community), but it is interesting to see what this writer undertakes to show—the connection between cause and effect. Contemporaneous newspapers and sermons proved the clearest mirrors of the temper and spirit of that time.

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT

FELLOW MEMBERS OF THE

Ladies and Gentlemen-

A few weeks ago we celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of this Society, and the addresses upon that interesting occasion. summarizing the splendid work which our predecessors have accomplished during the comparatively brief period of the Society's existence, were an inspiration to us who listened, and quickened in all of us ambition to greater effort in advancing the good work to which they so faithfully devoted themselves. To-day we enter upon the Society's sixty-sixth year, and realizing that it is our privilege to carry forward its work for another year, resolve to apply ourselves earnestly to the duties before us. The past year has not been marked by any unusual events, but you will see by the various reports that the year has been one of growth and prosperity. loss of Mr. Tillinghast was a sad one to all of us who knew and appreciated him. His loyal devotion to the interests of the Society never flagged. He was a wise counsellor, and his opinions were always received with careful attention. It will be no easy task to fill his place.

It is expected upon this occasion that I should briefly review the reports of the various committees, and make such recommendations as seem to me proper. The report of the Librarian makes more evident than ever the inadequacy of our present building to the needs of the Society. For several years past he has been obliged to place in storage a considerable number of books in order to make room for new accessions, and while he has selected for this purpose the less important ones, he has been seriously inconvenienced by demands made upon him for books which were difficult to reach. The pressing need of a new building is well set forth in the Report of the Council to which I call especial attention.

It is interesting to note the increase in the number of persons using the library, members and non-members. Of the latter, 5576 names have been registered the past year, fifty-seven persons have been made members, a small number seemingly when the large number of persons, not members, who use the library is concidered. The curious list of names presented in the Report of the Abrarian shows that others than descendants of early New England families are interested in genealogy, and his remarks relative to genealogies of families whose names are not found in Savage's invaluable work are interesting. The Librarian's suggestion that the Society should undertake the compilation of a guide to printed data relating to New England families should receive thoughtful attention.

The important work of gathering genealogies of American families as well as manuscript records has not been neglected. Three hundred and fifty printed works of this character, and fifty-three manuscripts have been added to our collections. The Committee on the Library are doing a good work in gathering genealogical items from newspapers and placing them in durable scrap-books. These books will become very useful to searchers in the future.

The Consolidated Index of place-names in the first fifty volumes of the REGISTER is so far advanced that the first part will be issued early in the coming summer. A considerable addition has been made to the list of subscribers to the Index. In addition to its regular publications, the Society has published the Vital Records of Scituate in two volumes of over nine hundred pages, and those of the towns of Tisbury, Wayland, and Weymouth have been prepared for publication, and will be published at an early day. It seems worthy of notice that forty sets of the Memorial Biographies have been sold during the year, netting the Society four hundred dollars.

The work in London of Miss French, who is employed by the English Research Committee, has no doubt been noticed by all who read the REGISTER. It is work worthy of the commendation which it has received, and it is hoped that the Society will be able to continue it during the coming year. The expense, as will be seen, has been moderate.

The Committee on Epitaphs has exercised during the year its usual commendable activity, and has gathered from Maine, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire a large number of records, notes and photographs of much interest. Some of the work accomplished has been done in small grounds which were found only after repeated inquiry, their very existence being forgotten in the community. Depressing work indeed it must have been to decipher the half obliterated stones hidden by the long, rank grass in these forgotten hamlets of the dead.

I desire to call the attention of members to the special rlea made to them by the Committee. They ask them to make plas of these small, neglected plots, indicating the location of sto es. whether inscribed or not, as well as transcribing names when they appear.

Passing to the Reports of the Treasurer and Finance Committee you will see that our financial condition is good. It is unnecessary for me to analyze the reports, they so plainly speak for themselves. The sale of No. 16 Somerset Street, and the purchase of No. 9 Ashburton Place, which have been recently accomplished, should improve the real estate investment of the Society.

The attendance at the monthly meetings has shown a gratifying increase. This might be accounted for by the character of the papers read, which have been fully up to the high standard of excellence so long maintained by the Society; but no doubt the more convenient place of meeting, as well as the very pleasant entertainment furnished to those present at the close of the literary exercises, with the opportunity afforded for social intercourse, have added to the interest of our meetings. I hope that these pleasant and, I believe, profitable entertainments may be continued. They not only add to the pleasure of our meetings, but by bringing our members together strengthen those bonds of friendship which are so vital to the growth and usefulness of our Society.

PROCEEDINGS

The sixty-sixth annual meeting of the New England Historic Genealogical Society was called to order in Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Wednesday, January 26, 1910, at 2.30 p.m. by JOHN ALBREE, a member of the Council, a quorum being present.

Voted, To dissolve the meeting.

JOHN ALBREE,
Recording Secretary pro tempore.

Presented by MES. IDA FARR MILLER

THE Society has had no remarkable events to chronicle in its annals during the calendar year just a shed. It has, however, experienced continued growth and increase usefulness in each division of its activities, and has made progress along the definite lines of purpose for which it was incorporated. Through the death of one of its most faithful and capable officers, Vice-President Tillinghast, who had served many years in various capacities, it has suffered a great loss. Its various officers and committees have shown the same devotion to its interests that has marked its course in recent years, giving their time and counsel freely to promote its welfare. Leaving to the officers and the committees to report in detail upon the work of the year, it may not be amiss at this time to consider for a moment what the Society is, what it is trying to do, what it ought to endeavor to accomplish, and what it needs for its present and its probable future growth.

The Society is a private institution, organized and incorporated for the specific purpose of "collecting, preserving, and occasionally publishing, genealogical and historical matter, relating to early New England families, and for the establishment and maintenance of a cabinet." For these objects it enjoys certain corporate privileges derived from several special acts of the General Court and from the general statutes of the Commonwealth. The corporation consists of the present members who are the legal successors of the original incorporators of sixty-odd years ago. It holds real and personal property, including its library, worth nearly a half million dollars.

The Society is trying to administer its affairs for the public good. To this end it maintains its library freely open to all, and it issues its publications (usually at less than cost) for the benefit of all who have an interest in the objects for which it was incorporated. It endeavors, with considerable success, to give a wide circulation to its publications, and thus facilitate and promote genealogical research. That its publications are much consulted is evident from their worn conditions wherever found in the larger libraries throughout the country. In its library the Society strives to meet the demand of all for books which come within the scope of the very broadest interpretation of its chartered purposes. This generous attitude of the Society towards the public is quite fully appreciated by almost all of those who are indebted to it for assistance. It is a fact, however, that there is an occasional instance of lack of gratitude for the full and free use of privileges which have cost several hundred thousand dollars to establish, and which cost a thousand dollars a month to maintain. The number of these cases is extremely small, perhaps amounting to one instance per thousand visitors—a fact which speaks well both for the people interested in genealogy and for the adminis-

In addition to what the Society is now doing it ought to make vigorous and systematic efforts to , her or publish, or to cause to be published, all available data relating to early New England families, whether it relates to the ancestries of these families before they came hither, or to their offspring who for a long time have been crossing the boundaries of New England and settling elsewhere. plete genealogy of an old New England family does not stop at the confines of New England; on the contrary it embraces the various branches of the family wherever found. No more should the Society stop at these narrow limits, but rather should it secure for the use of the New England family historian the materials needed for his work. And, now that the mass of printed materials has become so great, the Society ought to bring about the compilation and publication of better, more complete and scientific guides to the data in print relating to American families. Such a work is very much needed both for saving unnecessary wear and tear on books and for saving waste of time in consultation—matters of considerable importance to the Society as well as to those who use its library. The Society ought to face squarely the problem of giving its library safer quarters, before some untoward accident forever places beyond consultation the priceless collections which have taken so long and cost so much to gather. Larger quarters are also needed for the adequate administration of the Society's work and the proper display of its Library and Cabinet.

The Society needs for its present work and its future expansion a great deal of money. It needs enough to pay off the indebtedness on its land and to erect a first-class fireproof building large enough for many years of future growth. It needs enough additional endowment to provide for the increased cost of maintenance of a larger building, for the increased cost of the upkeep and maintenance of a larger and growing library, and for the increased expense of pushing its work with vigor up to the limits of its purpose as defined by its

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON FINANCE, by F. Apthorp Foster, Secretary of the Committee:

The Committee on Finance begs to report as follows for the year 1909:

A legacy of $10,000 has been received from the estate of John Harvey Treat, the income to be spent for the purchase of books. By the death of George Sumner Mann, a member, the Society will receive under his will the sum of $2,000. Miss Miriam S. Shattuck, daughter of one of the founders, has left a contingent legacy of $1,000 to the Society.

The following changes have been made in the investments of the Society:

By vote of the Committee the Treasurer was advised to purchase as an investment No. 9 Ashburton Place, at a price not to exceed $40,000.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON THE LIBRARY, by George Brown Knapp, A.M., Chairman:

During the past year the Society has been fortunate in obtaining a larger number than usual of genealogies of American families, some three hundred and fifty works of that character having been added to the library, thus increasing largely the material available for those interested in genealogical research.

A considerable amount of newspaper genealogical matter, including Notes in the Genealogical Department of the Boston Evening Transcript for several years, has been carefully mounted in books specially made of strong linen paper for the purpose.

Good progress on the card catalogue has also been made.

In order to make room for the addition to the library of books likely to be consulted frequently, it has been found necessary to remove to the storehouse many books that are seldom called for. Thus the question, What provision shall be made for the inevitable future growth of the library is each year becoming a more and more serious one.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATIONS, by Henry Winchester Cunningham, A. B., Chairman:

The Committee on Publications reports that during the year 1909 there was published by the Society the regular volume of the Register which, with the Proceedings at the Annual Meeting, made a volume of 544 pages, and also the Vital Records of the town of Scituate, a work of 909 pages, which appeared in two volumes. In addition the Vital Records of the towns of Tisbury, Wayland, and Weymouth were prepared for publication, and will appear soon. Beginnings were also made upon the records of other towns.

The custom, begun several years ago, of making reprints of articles in the REGISTER, beyond the number required by the author for his personal use, has been continued. This gives every one an opportunity to buy from the Society copies of such special articles as may interest him.

Report of the COMMITTEE ON PAPERS AND ESSAYS, by William Carver Bates, Chairman:

The Committee on Papers and Essays submits herewith a list of papers and speakers for the stated meetings of this Society during the year 1909:

January 6.—" Book-plates: their story and their charm," by Charles Edward Clark, M.D., of Lynn, Mass.

February 3.—" Harvard College fifty years ago," by Rev. Henry George Spaulding, B.A., of Brookline, Mass.

March 3.—"Some differences between Plymouth and Jamestown," by Morton Dexter, M.A., of Boston, Mass.

April 7.—"Inhabitancy and warning out in New England," by Josiah Henry Benton, LL.D., of Boston. Mass.

May 5.—"Governor Thomas Dudley," by Augustine Jones, A.M., of Newton Highlands, Mass.

October 6.— The Crisis and the Man," by Col. Francis Snow Hesseltine, A.M., of Melrose, Mass.

November 3.—"An old town in Massachusetts," by Rev. William Edwards Huntington, LL.D., of Newton Centre, Mass.

Ex December 1.—"The hanging of Mary Dyer." by Rev. George Hodges. D.D., of Cambridge, Mass.

Since October the stated meetings of the Society have been held in Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon Street, and the attendance of members and friends has more than doubled in consequence.

The sixty-fifth anniversary of the Society was observed at a meeting held in Ford Hall, the evening of October twenty-second, with an attendance of about four hundred persons.* The gathering was addressed by the President, the Corresponding Secretary, and the Treasurer of the Society, as well as by the following gentlemen: Messrs. Wilfred Harold Munro, A.M., President of the Rhode Island Historical Society, Henry Lefavour, Ph.D., LL.D., President of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, and Rev. James De Normandie, D.D. A letter was read from Charles Francis Adams, LL.D., President of the Massachusetts Historical Society, who was unable to attend. After the meeting supper was served.

The Report of the COMMITTEE TO ASSIST THE HISTORIAN, by Andrew Fiske, Ph.D., Chairman:

As Chairman of the Committee to assist the Historian, I beg to report that early in the year I wrote the Historian, Mr. William R. Cutter, offering him the services of the Committee. He replied that he saw no immediate need of calling the Committee together, but later might be very glad to ask for help. Acting on this suggestion, I have not called the Committee together and have been waiting for word from the Historian, but up to this time have received no request for assistance. I, therefore, have to report that your Committee has held no meetings and has done no work.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON ENGLISH RESEARCH, by Charles Sherburne Penhallow, A.B., Chairman:

The Committee on English Research begs to report that it has been able to continue its work in England with Miss French, under the agreement reported last January, sufficient funds having been contributed for that purpose, as will be seen by the appended report. There is a balance on hand sufficient only for a few months more, and it is hoped that further contributions will be sent in so that Miss French may be retained for a while longer, that the advantage of the work already done by her may not be lost. The importance of continuous work in this direction does not need to be emphasized.

The result of her gleanings the past year have been published in the REGISTER. It is hoped that they will appeal to the members of the Society as of sufficient value to give the Committee such additional funds as will enable it to continue the work.

^{*} A full report of this meeting is printed separately.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON HERALDRY, by Henry Ernest Woods, A. M., Chairman:

The Committee on Heraldry begs to report that no regular meetings have been held during the last year, but that individual members have given personal assistance to inquirers.

One book of importance on heraldry has come to the attention of the Committee in the past year: "The Complete Guide to Heraldry," by A. C. Fox-Davies, being a condensed form of the "Art of Heraldry" by the same author.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON EPITAPHS, by John Albree, Chairman:

There have been donated to the Society during the year 1909 copies of inscriptions as follows:

MAINE.—Hampden, The Old Settlers Graveyard; and Dedham, Cemetery on the Ellsworth Road, from Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstrom, Brewer, Me.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Salem, Old Parish; Salem Centre and Spear Hill Burying Grounds, from P. Hildreth Parker, Dracut, Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Dennis, Paddock Burying Ground; East Dennis; and Hall Burying Ground, Dennis, from Miss Hannah Hall Paddock.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Grafton Burying Ground at Farnumsville, from Charles A. Flagg, Washington, D. C.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Holbrook Union Cemetery, formerly in Randolph and then in Braintree; and Randolph, Central Cemetery, from Edward Evarts Jackson, Braintree.

The amount and character of the work required in transcribing the records at Holbrook and Randolph, Mass., and at Salem, N. H., is indicated by the large number of inscriptions. Thanks are due to those who have contributed so generously of their time and strength to insure the preservation of these records. Thanks are also due to those who have transcribed the inscriptions in the smaller grounds. Frequently these small grounds are to be found only after repeated inquiry, their very existence being forgotten in the community.

The special plea is made that members of the Society will copy these small isolated, neglected plots, making a plan at the same time to indicate in a general way the locations of the stones, for uncertainty as to kinship can often be determined by the relative position of graves. Such can be copied by those temporarily in the vicinity, and the results of the time spent will add much to the value of the Society's collections because facts of which no other record exists will be thus preserved.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON COLLECTION OF RECORDS, by John Bliss Brainerd, M. D., Chairman:

The year has been one of considerable activity on the part of the Society. There have been added to the Library fifty-three manuscripts (thirteen of these by purchase and forty by gift).

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON THE CONSOLIDATED INDEX, by F. Apthorp Foster, Chairman:

The Committee on the Consolidated Index begs to report that work on the Index of Places in volumes 1-50 of the REGISTER is well under way, and it is now hoped that the first part will be issued in the early summer of 1910, after a delay due to an unavoidable curtailment of the working force. In November, 1909, a special effort was made to obtain new subscribers to the Index, and with successful results.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON THE SALE OF PUBLICATIONS. by Henry Winchester Cunningham, A. B.

During the past year an effort has been made to increase the number of subscribers to the REGISTER, several hundred letters were sent out to non-subscribing libraries and societies. Special attention has also been given to securing volumes of the REGISTER towards completing sets of the magazine. One complete set with Index has been sold during the year.

Since the completion of the Memorial Biographies. vols. I-IX, an offer has been made of the complete set at $10, resulting in the sale of over forty sets.

The "Somerset Pedigree Forms" issued last year have met with satisfaction and a ready sale.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON INCREASE OF MEMBERSHIP, by Kate Haswell Wead, Chairman:

The Committee has held monthly meetings from October, 1908, to May, 1909. Four of the members have been at every meeting and one has not attended any.

Names of those who would make desirable members of the Society have been considered, many have been written to or interviewed personally, and ten new members have been added to the Society as the direct result of the Committee's work. By the courtesy of the Librarian other candidates have been referred to the Committee and approved by it.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN

Presented by WILLIAM PRESCOTT GREENLAW

Again the Librarian reports for the Library a year of uninterrupted activity and progress, with an increased use, and a continuation of the recent remarkable growth along genealogical lines. Again he calls attention to the lack of adequate protection against the danger of loss by fire, to the urgent need of more shelf room, and to the demand for a better index to the printed data relating to American families.

Members who do not visit the Society's House will find in the report of the Committee on the Library for the year 1905 a frank statement of the condition and fire risk of the building, made after a careful examination by competent architects. Those who frequent the Library can easily determine for themselves its perilous situation. While it is true that something was done in 1906 to lessen this danger, it is also true that much was not done, because the fault is fundamentally one of structure rather than detail. Consequently, it was not possible, without going to great expense, to convert the old mansion house, erected in 1805, into a first-class fireproof structure; and such renovation and expense were not deemed wise in view of the fact that the building was then too small for the Society's collections and its work.

Again, as in previous years, a considerable number of books and pamphlets have been placed in storage to make room for important accessions. In selecting these, care was taken to send out only those which were seldom used. Occasionally, however, judgment based on past experience was not a good guide, and serious inconvenience has been experienced sometimes, because a work formerly rarely consulted was no longer available to meet an urgent demand.

The use of the Library in 1909 by non-members, as shown by the registration of visitors, was more than ten per cent greater than in the previous year. The total registration of these visitors was 5576. No record is kept of the attendance of members, but careful estimates of the proportion of members to non-members indicate an even greater ratio of increase of consultation by members. The Visitors' Register shows not only a larger attendance but also a wider interest in genealogical pursuits. Where a few years ago the entry of a name unknown to Savage's Dictionary was a rare occurrence. one may now find in this Register a liberal sprinkling of names which are uncommon, if found at all, in the early annals of New England, as the following surnames selected from those registered in 1909 will show:—Ahlers, Ament, Bauer, Bogardus, Bréant, Callowhill, Canaga, Chenoweth, Christenson, Conquest, Cracknell, Cruger, D'Ancy, de Lamartinière, de Veer, De Wager, Diehl, Doremus, Dysart, Egge, Eshleman, Foraker, Forehand, Fritchie, Gallagher, Gallèe, Goodloe, Gozzaldi, Grebenstein, Guiot, Harbold, Hickerson, Hogarth, Humrichniser, Hurlin, Isenberg, Jorio, Jump, Kammerlee, Keenan, Kier, Kirschner, Kulkmann, Lesquereux, Lonergan, McGukin, Malott, Marak, Musselman, Neuhaus, Noera, Noleman, Oelrichs, Offenhauer, Ohler, Ottendorff, Paradise, Perot, Presho, Prigge, Regan, Ringwalt, Rosewarne, Rotan, Rubel, Sapp, Sheehan, Silliker, Silverthorn, Spanlove, Sprinsky, Steiner, Swartz, Thornbrugh, Thurkield, Ulrick, Vallerand, Van Meter, Van Schoock, Verge, Vogell, Weakley, Weis, Westfall, Wetel, Wilinsky and Yandell.

The growth of the Library is distinctly along genealogical lines, and properly so, for there are plenty of state and local historical societies whose special mission is to attend to historical and antiquarian interests, while a multitude of patriotic societies awaken and stimulate interest in kindred matters. The expansion of the Library in this direction is in response to the demands made upon it by those who use it, fully ninety-five per cent of its use being for information of a genealogical nature. Moreover, the genealogical field is sufficiently large to tax to the utmost the present and prospective resources of the Society. It is not to be inferred from this that the local history of New England is being neglected; on the contrary, the Library is very complete in this respect. It is conceivable that some captious critic might say that this policy of extension in this direction is being carried to the extreme; that the Library is getting many genealogies of families outside of New England; and to illustrate his criticism, select from the shelves genealogies of such families as Banta, Barclay, Beidler, Boehm, Bringhurst, DeVeaux, DuBois, Dunlevy, Eastburn, Funck, Gernhardt, Herr, Jaquett. Keim, Kemper, Kolb, Lundy, McClung, Maulsby, Meriwether, Molyneux, Navarre, Oberholtzer, Parshall, Penrose, Runkle, Rusling, Sanxay, Schermerhorn, Shoemaker, Shriver, Starin, Ten Broeck, Tiernan, Van Bunschoten, Van Voorhis, and Widener. To such a criticism the reply is that these books, in almost every instance, have information relating either to New England families or to their descendants who have settled elsewhere; that while these families settled outside of New England and apparently remained there until after the census of 1790, more recently descendants of some of them have come into New England, married and settled here—the Boston Directory of 1909, alone, shows more than half of the surnames mentioned above; that these books are called for and used by members of the Society, as well as visitors; and also that, as time goes on, these genealogies of families who settled in New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and other states will be more and more in demand by descendants of old New England families because of the mingling of the westward moving streams of population and the consequent intermarriage of the descendants of the settlers of widely separated colonies. With these older families are being blended more recent importations of European stock, and the Visitors' Register, by the surnames and by the residences entered, shows that the product of this amalgamation is already coming here in limited num-

Three hundred and sixty-two genealogies were added to the Library in 1909, a number exceeding by twenty-two the annual average of the previous seven years, which was a period of remarkable growth. The total accessions of the year number 661 volumes, 695 pamphlets and 266 miscellaneous articles. Of these, 257 volumes, 102 pamphlets and 37 miscellaneous articles were purchased; 345 volumes, 561 pamphlets and 229 miscellaneous articles were given; and 59 volumes and 32 pamphlets were received in exchange. These accessions added to the estimated number reported last year give 35,476 volumes and 35,436 pamphlets as the approximate number in the Library December 31, 1909.

In the last annual report attention was called to the need of a better guide to printed data relating to American families. The Librarian believes that this Society can now successfully undertake the compilation, and the publication at regular intervals, of adequate indexes; and also that it should start on this work before the field is

A recent book, The Expansion of New England, shows graphically, by the aid of colored maps, the westward movement of population from New England from 1620 to 1865. This book ought to be helpful to family historians, and is valuable as a guide in the selection of books for this Library. Those local histories, which the Society now owns, of places settled by emigrants from New England, are frequently consulted here, and many inquiries are received for other similar works which have not yet been acquired. Using this book then as a key, the Committee on Collection of Records could undoubtedly accomplish much for the Library by devoting some of its energy towards gathering manuscript data concerning the western branches of old New England families. To carry out this last suggestion, a suitable blank on tough linen paper, perforated for filing alphabetically in some loose leaf binder, could be designed, using a family (father, mother, and children) as a unit of the sys-Thus, by the use of as many units as there are known generations to record, a person could have filed here under the surname, for the use of the future genealogist of his family, the known data about his own family and his particular line of ancestry. The value of such an undertaking would be in proportion to the amount of material gathered. The Society might charge a small fee for filing such pedigrees in its Library. A cheaper grade of these blanks would be useful to genealogists for gathering information. Careful consideration of some such scheme for the registration of pedigrees of American families having New England antecedents is recommended.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

Prepared by WILLIAM RICHARD CUTTER, A.M., Historian

THE following pages contain obituary notices of members who died during the year 1909, with the addition of six deceased in preceding years. The notices are arranged in the order in which the deaths occurred.

REV. CANON JOHN JAMES RAVEN, M.A., D.D., F.S.A., of Harleston, Norfolk, England, a corresponding member, elected in 1884, died September 20, 1906. He had been Vicar of Fressing-field-with-Withersdale since 1885, and also Hon. Canon of Norwich Cathedral and Rural Dean of Hoxne.

He was born in Boston, Lincolnshire, England, June 25, 1833, and he was the son of John Hardy Raven, M.A., Rector of Worlington, Suffolk, and Jane Augusta (Richman). In 1860 he was married to Fanny, the youngest daughter of Robert Horner Harris of Botesdale, Suffolk. His education was acquired at home and at St. Catherine's and Emmanuel Colleges, Cambridge. From 1857 to 1885 he was master of several schools, and from 1881 to 1885 incumbent of St. George's Chapel, Yarmouth. His publications were: The Church Bells of Cambridgeshire, 1881; Notes on Isaiah VII-IX, 1872; The Church Bells of Suffolk, 1890; Mathematics Made Easy, 1894; Suffolk, in Popular County History Series, 1895; and others.^a Canon Raven was a frequent contributor to the REGISTER, and its pages contain reviews of his various works. One of the most extensive contributions from his pen, giving also a specimen of his interesting style, was that entitled "Excerpta from a Suffolk Parish Account Book," vol. 41, p. 151.

DAVID MASSON, M.A., Litt.D., LL.D., of Edinburgh, Scotland. elected a corresponding member in 1859, and an honorary member from 1890, Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in the University of Edinburgh, died at his home in that city October 6, 1907. From 1847, and for eighteen years afterwards, he resided in London. In 1865 he was appointed to the professorship mentioned above, and the list of his contributions to literature became a lengthy one.

He contributed numerous articles to the leading reviews and to the Encyclopædia Britannica, and in 1859 became editor of Macmillan's Magazine, which he conducted for many years. His "Essays, Biographical and Critical," his "Life of John Milton," in several volumes; his "British Novelists and their Styles;" his edition of Milton's Poetical Works, and his "DeQuincey," in the English Men of Letters series, are among the best known of his books. Mr. Williams traced his direct line of ancestry to Robert¹ and Marjory Williams, through Robert² Williams and Sarah Pierce—Robert³ Williams and Anne Boylston—Robert⁴ Williams and Bettina Pierce—Robert Pearce⁵ Williams and Nancy Bliss Whitney—Alexander⁵ Williams and Elizabeth Collier. He was educated at Chauncy Hall School, Boston, and at Leonard Walker's Private School, Foxborough, Mass.; was brought up in the wool business, and spent nearly twenty years in that occupation, sixteen as principal, until he retired in 1895, owing to a serious accident which incapacitated him from leading an active life.

Letter of ANNA L. P. WILLIAMS.

JUSTIN ALLEN, A.B., M.D., of Topsfield, Mass., elected in 1875, life member in 1883, died in Topsfield November 5, 1908. He was born in Hamilton, Mass., September 29, 1826, son of Ezekiel Allen, born in Manchester, Mass., March 21, 1780, and Sally Roberts, born in Hamilton, Mass., March 10, 1784. His paternal grandfather was Andrew Allen; his maternal grandfather Francis, son of David Roberts, both of whom did "honorable service, one or the other of them, in the campaigns of Bunker Hill, Rhode Island, Long Island, Saratoga and other fields in the Revolutionary war." He was fitted for college at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., Rockingham Academy, Hampton Falls, N. H., and at Hampton Academy, Hampton, N. H.; was graduated from Brown University in 1852, and from the Harvard Medical School in 1856. He had practised medicine in Topsfield, Mass., continuously since 1857.

Mr. George Francis Dow, in a printed tribute to Doctor Allen, says: "He died respected and beloved by every man, woman and child in this community, and the tidings of his death brought the tear or caught the heart beat of scores of friends and former patients living without the bounds of Topsfield. None of his blood stood at the bedside to close the weary eyelids, for he had lived alone and left no near relatives, but the hands of friends ministered to him in his sickness and soothed his dying moments and the whole town paid respect to the memory of a good man gone before.

"In June, 1857, Doctor Allen came to Topsfield and began the practice of medicine. . . . He had been preceded in town in the medical practice by others, yet from 1862 to 1892 this territory depended almost exclusively upon the professional skill of Doctor Allen. . . . In 1879, with the exception of a week at the Centennial Exposition in 1876 and a few hurried trips of not over two days absence each, he had been at his post daily for the space of twenty-two years. Fifteen years later he had relinquished the more laborious duties of his profession and had enjoyed to a fuller extent the pleasures of travel, but almost to the day of his death he gave friendly advice to those who had leaned upon him for nearly a half century."

"Public office attracted him but little, although he always retained a deep interest in public affairs and in state and national politics. Earnest convictions upon the temperance question led him to affiliate himself with the Prohibition Party, and on one occasion he accepted its nomination for State Senator from this district. In 1865 he served as superintendent of schools, and ten years later he served for one year as a member of the School Committee. To the Town Library, however, he gave most painstaking service. He helped to organize the Library in 1874 and served on the Board of Trustees from that time until the day of his death and for the greater part of the time was chairman of the Board. The duty of selecting the books to be added to the library also devolved largely upon him and the permanent worth and excellence of the volumes upon its shelves are a monument to his affectionate care. Through a bequest of one thousand dollars, the income to be applied to the purchase of historical or biographical works, his influence will continue to be exerted for the good of the community where he spent the best years of his life.

"In 1894 his interest in historical studies caused him to aid in organizing the Topsfield Historical Society. He was then elected its President and thereafter, until his death, annually reelected. He was always most constant in attendance and deeply interested in its welfare." "His personal qualities and private virtues, . . . his strict allegiance to duty, the uniform conscientiousness which regulated his conduct, and his thoughtful consideration for the rights and happiness of others, must serve ever as an example to those who knew him. Tranquil, content, philosophic, useful, his life flowed in a quiet current. His reticence was a rebuke to the general loquacity; and his reserve, to the popular love of display."

REV. CHARLES WELLS HAYES, M.A., D.D., of Geneva, N. Y., a resident member elected in 1876 (resigned and re-elected a corresponding member in 1881), died November 29, 1908. In an extract from a letter dated Phelps, N. Y., April 20, 1896, he says: "I have resided here since January 1, 1893, having in addition to the charge of St. John's Church in this village, the professorship of Sacred Languages and Liturgy, also the office of librarian, in the DeLancey Divinity School of Hobart College, Geneva."

Rev. Charles W. Hayes published "The Episcopate of Bishop DeLancey," and other historical and miscellaneous papers for the Church Monthly, 1866-7; edited the preface, etc., of the "Early Journal of the Diocese of Maine," 1875; "The Wells of Southold and Montague, a Genealogical Memoir," 1876; "A Long Journey, a Story of Pioneer Life in New England," 1876; "William Wells of Southold and the Descendants, A. HENRY REED STILES, M.A., M.D., a corresponding member, died at Hill View, Warren Co., N. Y., January 7, 1909. He was born in New York City March 10, 1832, and obtained his education at the grammar school of the University of the City of New York, where he was a freshman. At Williams College he was a sophomore, but ill health prevented his graduation there. However, he received the degree of M.A. from that institution in 1876. He studied medicine in the medical department of the University of the City of New York, graduating in 1855, as also, in the same year, from the New York Ophthalmic Hospital, and practised in New York City, Galena, Ill., Brooklyn, N. Y., and Woodbridge, N. J.

Dr. Stiles was eminent in five lines of distinction, that of the physician, the historian, the genealogist, and the biographer, and the founder of institutions. With his death ended a life of astonishing industry and variety, whose activity continued until within a comparatively recent date.

He accepted election as a Corresponding Member of this Society in 1859, and was, therefore, at the time of his death one of its oldest members. His prominent standing as an historical writer began with the publication of his "History and Genealogies of Ancient Windsor, Conn.," in 1859, followed by a supplement to it in 1861. His work on "Bundling in America," published in 1869, was next in the order of popular appreciation. He was connected with the publication of editions of old and new works, a certain number being issued by the Faust Club, an enterprise fostered by the formation, at Brooklyn in 1863, of the Long Island Historical Society, of which he was one of the originators, a director, and librarian until 1866. The 1870 edition of Allibone's Dictionary gives considerable space to a notice of his early publications, and quotes a contemporary opinion to the effect that his work was most creditable to our local history. He was a member of many historical societies and active in many political positions. From 1877 until December, 1881, he was a resident of Dundee, Scotland. At the time of the publication of the "History of Brooklyn," he was engaged in a consultation practice in New York City. For an extended notice of him, probably his own contribution, see his "History of King's County, including Brooklyn, N. Y.," 1884, vol. 2, pp. 1318-1319. In addition to what has been stated he had charge at different times of several hospitals and dispensaries, and in 1888 opened at Hill View an institution for the care of the insane.

in Cambridge. Became a member of the Brookline Baptist Church, 1888. While a member, with delegates from other churches, formed the Sunday School and Church known as the Centre Street Baptist Church of Boston. I was chosen a deacon of the Brookline Church in 1890, and am now holding that office. After serving in the Civil War described above, I returned to the same business I had left on enlistment. My two wounds were flesh wounds, and my recovery so speedy that I took my old position in March, 1865, five months after my last battle. Before the war for one year, and after the war for five years. I was acquiring the profession of a civil engineer in the office of Stephen P. Fuller and his son J. Franklin Fuller of Boston. In 1869-'70-'71, I was employed in the city engineer's office of Boston. I entered into a co-partnership with J. Franklin Fuller in 1872. In a few years I took the whole responsibility of the business under the old name, but in 1888 changing the style Fuller and Whitney to William H. Whitney. The business has been mostly local and largely in the improvement of the Back Bay lands. My office for twenty-two years was at 39 Court Square, Boston. In September, 1881, I received a bronze medal at the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association Exhibit for sun or blue prints. I developed a process from the French and used it in illustrating the growth of Back Bay lands. I issued to subscribers monthly schedules and maps showing the changes of owners, increase in value, improvement by filling and public works. I have voted uniformly with the Republican party, except one vote for President Cleveland. I was defeated once by forty votes in fourteen hundred (as last counted) as a candidate for Representative to the General Couft. I am a member of the Loyal Legion, G. A. R., Watertown Historical Society, Cambridge Club and Colonial Club."

His first pastorate was at Rindge, N. H., where he was installed June 3, 1873, and whence dismissed, at his request, December 31, 1878. Young Hale returned to the Boston Latin School, this time as teacher.

MEMOIRS lxi

His duties as pedagogue failed, however, to fill his moments, and he devoted his spare time to studying for the ministry and working on his father's paper. He learned to set type in his father's printing office, and worked on the Daily Advertiser in every capacity from reporter to editor.

He left journalism for the ministry, because of his views of the functions of the clergyman. He believed that he should have a fresher and broader inspiration as a preacher and an author than he could compass in the editorial harness. In 1846 he went to Worcester as pastor of the Unitarian Church of the Unity, where he remained for a decade, returning to Boston at the call of the South Congregational Church. To this congregation Doctor Hale gave the best that was in him, never permitting outside calls to attract him from his duty to his flock.

In the writing of short stories Dr. Hale excelled, combining vivid imagination with a fine conception of unique and grotesque situations. In this field he achieved signal distinction. They would constitute quite a library, and no American author wrote tales more clever or with more of Christian spirit. Besides "A Man Without a Country" and Ten Times One is Ten," Dr. Hale has written "Margaret Percival in America," "In His Name," "Mr. Tangier's Vacations," "Mrs. Merriam's Scholars," "His Level Best," "The Ingham Papers," "Ups and Downs," "Philip Nolan's Friends," "Fortunes of Rachel," "Four and Five," "Crusoe in New York," "Christmas Eve and Christmas Day," "Christmas in Narragansett," "Our Christmas in a Palace," "Sketches in Christian History," "Kansas and Nebraska," "What Career?" "Boy's Heroes," "The Story of Massachusetts," "Sybaris and Other Homes," "For Fifty Years," "A New England Boyhood," "Chautauquan History of the United States," "If Jesus Came to Boston," "Memories of a Hundred Years," "Ralph Waldo Emerson," "We, the People," "New England Ballads," "Prayers in the United States Senate," "Foundation of the Republic" and "Modern Achievements." Doctor Hale, in later life, was the source from which was drawn much of the history of early Boston and early New England. Upon many historical subjects he delivered lectures.

Since Phillips Brooks, the name of Dr. Hale stood pre-eminent among Boston's pulpit orators. Dr. Hale's sermons were heavy only in the quality of his voice. He did not deal with the abstruse or the complicated. His tones were those of a man addressing man,

While pastor at Worcester, Dr. Hale married Miss Emily B. Perkins of Hartford, on October 13, 1852. Coming to Boston, Dr. and Mrs. Hale lived in Worcester Street until 1869, when they removed to Highland Street, Roxbury.

Abridged, in part, from the Boston Daily Advertiser, June 11, 1909.

SAMUEL EDWARD WARREN, C. E., of Newton, a resident member, elected in 1880, died in Newton, July 8. 1909. The following account of himself is taken from his letter of acceptance. "Samuel Edward Warren, always signed S. Edward, because always called Edward at home, was born in West Newton, Mass, in a house now standing, opposite the present post-office, October 29, 1831. My legal residence is in Newton, Mass., on Washington Street, 'Brighton Hill.' My father, Samuel Warren, was born April 23, 1802, in Weston, Mass., and my mother, Anne Catharine Reed, was born at Charlestown. Mass., December 4, 1803. Ancestry: Samuel Warren. physician, farmer. student, studied at Rev. Mr. Train's Academy, Framingham, Phillips Academy, Andover, Yale College, beginning October 16, 1822, Harvard College Medical School. He was especially fond of botany and Bible study and languages, and taught himself Hebrew; Nathan, born February 5, 1761, large farmer in Weston, Mass., soldier in the Revolution; Elisha, born April 9, 1718, died September 18, 1795, a farmer on the existing Weston homestead; John Warren, farmer, living on the Cutting place, next north of the present Weston homestead, and presumed to be a son of John Warren, who lived in Watertown about 1630."

After elementary schooling in childhood, he was for two years, 1844-46, in the "Model School" of the State Normal School then at West Newton, Mass.; one year, 1846-7, in the English department, Phillips Academy, Andover, when under William H. Wells, and with excellent advantages in botany, chemistry and surveying; after a winter at home in which he learned vocal music at the village singing school, he was for two years at the Putnam Free School, Newburyport, Mass., again under Mr. Wells, where he had excellent advantages in mathematics, astronomy, and higher English studies, the three years, including Andover, forming an English collegiate course. He was then for two years, 1850-52 (last six months as resident graduate), at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y., with degree of Civil Engineer on graduating, August 29, 1851. He was professor of descriptive geometry and mathematics and drawing at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, 1854-1872; and professor of the same at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1872-1875 (one of three called at once under the policy of expansion in 1872, one of eight thrown out by policy of retrenchment since 1875); provisional lecturer (while training their own instructors) in Boston Normal Art School, 1873-75.

Mr. Warren withdrew from active life in 1875, and since then had devoted his life to the preparation of textbooks on technical subjects. He was the author of a number of standard works on geometry, drawing and kindred subjects, as follows: "Descriptive Geometry (Orthographic Projectives)," 1860; "Elementary Projectives," 1861; "Elementary Perspective," 1863; "Drafting Instruments and Operations," 1864; "Elementary Plane Problems," 1867; "Shades and Shadows," 1867; "Higher Perspective," 1867: "Machinery Construction and Drawing," 1870; "Elementary Free-Hand Geometrical Drawing," 1873; "Descriptive Geometry," 1874; "Problems in Stone-Cutting," 1875; "Elements of Descriptive Geometry, Shadows, Perspective and Minor Applications," 1877; "A Primary Geometry," 1887; "The Sunday Question," 1890; and "Descriptive Geometry," 1904; Pamphlets, Addresses, etc.: "Notes of Polytechnic Schools," Troy, 1866; "Required Adjustments in Scientific Education, with especial reference to Instrumental Drawing as one of its Elements," "National Educational Association," Baltimore, Science, July 12, 1876; "Questions and Suggestions Concerning Industrial Drawing as a Branch of Education." read to the University Convocation, Albany, N. Y., July 13, 1876; "The Better Organization of Scientific Education," read to University Convocation, Albany N. Y., July 9, 1878. He was also an . occasional contributor of articles or short communications, during the past twenty-five years to the Waltham Sentinel, Troy Times, Troy Whig, Boston Journal, Boston Daily Advertiser, The Churchman, Journal of the Franklin Institute, New England Journal of Education, Educational Weekly (Chicago), Newton Journal, Poultney Bulletin, and the annual pamphlets of the Pi Eta Scientific Society of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

"Childhood. 1-12 years characterized by love of in-door or home pleasures, drawing, joining with a school-mate in making a miniature autograph paper on Saturdays, and in the imitative stage of play, given to playing cars, having been born and reared close to a railroad. Drawings made of my own mind, not copies, were side elevations, not perspectives (pictures) but I sat side of a school-mate now an able designer and engraver, whose drawings were always pictures. So much for early bent. Remember seeing great comet of 1843 from a Boston house-top, on the part of Tremont Street by the Common. As an episode, to gratify city relatives, was sent to Mason Street public school in the winter of 1842-3. 2. Boyhood. Before fall of 1844, when I entered the "Model School" above mentioned, went to school because I was sent, and with no special study preferences. There I learned to love study and showed fondness for arithmetic, algebra, geometry, physiology, and natural philosophy. A composition of that period being a boyish calculation of the locomotive power necessary to draw Pompey's Pillar. Physiology liked for its own sake, and in behalf of a delicate, fatherless school-mate, of whom, till his death as a captain at Antietam, I was very fond. Living in Commons (English) at Andover, always warmly took sides against rum, tobacco and slavery, took a daily winter morning bath in a pail of ice water; joined my chum awhile in sweeping one of the school buildings to help pay our way; and kept a journal, which though largely trivial, is interesting as preserving the seeds of settled principles afterward. The theodolite possessed by the institution was of uncommon excellence, and I had more and better practice with it (being allowed to take it with my chum) than with any other since. At Newburyport, where I was one of the first set (80) of pupils of the school then first opened (April, 1848) the influences were more social. Being one of a few older boys and fond of befriending younger ones in matters of morals and physiology and mathematics (being so far a born teacher) I was generally chairman of almost everything, garden committee, anniversary committee, etc. I have seen no happier days since. Boarded during whole two years in one place, the family of a very kind Baptist clergyman, Rev. Nicholas Medbery-though while there and under influences begun in student prayer meetings at Andover, I united with the religious society of which then, as well as now (I believe) the Rev. Daniel Fiske was pastor. There also I sang in the choir. 3. Youth. On going to Troy I was thrown into a very different life. Almost the entire social elevation was that of moneyed "old families," while for the population generally, the streets were the sewers, and pigs the scavengers. In summer, screaming charcoal men, and bell ringing milkmen, who never left their carts, vied with birds in making sleep impossible after 4 A.M. In spring the unpaved clay streets were a level sea of watery mud from curb to curb, and school-houses were the meanest buildings to be found. This was in 1850. But an intelligent and enterprising middle class has long since quite transformed the place, and even then possessed and prized a vigorous lyceum, library, and reading room association. The above is thrown in as a lively picture of a New York inland city thirty years ago. Other dates and events of this period are given under other heads. 4. Manhood. After graduating at Troy in 1851, I wrote many letters of application for positions as engineering assistant, but the natural inditures pointing to teaching I was better pleased with an invitation to remain as assistant at Troy, than I should have been to have begun an engineer's roving life. The considerable expansion of the Institute curriculum in 1852 made an opening for me, as it was proposed to make graphics and the geometry of it a separate department. It was pioneer work for this country to do so. Hence I made my department (1854-1864) and then made my series of books to represent it and aid its substantial adoption elsewhere. 'Tuesday, November 2, 1852. For the first time in my life I voted for political officers, and I voted the "clean" freewill ticket, except on whig assemblyman; and I never from that day to this voted any other than a "clean' ticket on the side of Freedom. Friday, June 6, 1856. Was confirmed by Bishop Horatio Potter of New York, as the result of a change of views which had been gradually going on for three years.' Began also in 1856 to reduce to writing my plans for publication, though my first volume was not put to press till June, 1860. Became a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1868, at Chicago, and have always maintained my membership, but have prepared but one paper for it, accepted for the Detroit meeting, 1875. Received a call to the Stevens Institute of Technology at Hoboken in 1871, and but for long habit in living close to my work, and a dreary March day to visit the place, both which made me forget the possibility of living in pleasant country a few miles out. I might have accepted the call. Being an only child, after my tather's decease in October, 1867, I settled his estate and took care of my mother, with whom I spent the summer of 1868 at Williamstown; of 1869 at Poultney. Vermont; of 1870 at Princeton, Mass.; of 1871 in a rented cottage on high ground out of Troy; and in 1872 became a resident of Newton (where I still reside) in consequence of a call to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology."

Mr. Warren was married on November 18, 1884, to Margaret Miller of Paisley, Scotland, who survived him.

ALBERT AUGUSTUS POPE of North Cohasset, Mass., a life member since 1900, died in Cohasset, August 10, 1909. He was born in Boston, May 20, 1843, the son of Charles Pope, born in Dorchester, Mass., August 12, 1814, and wife Elizabeth Bogman, born in Providence, R. I., October 20, 1812, daughter of Capt. James Bogman and Parley Nelson.

His ancestry is traced through his father Charles Pope, son of Frederick, Jr., son of Colonel Frederick, Doctor Ralph, Ralph, to John Pope of Dorchester, who is believed to be a son of John Pope, senior, a pioneer of Dorchester before 1634. Of these ancestors Colonel Frederick was an officer in the Revolutionary war, and through that service Colonel Pope was admitted to the order of the Cincinnati. Doctor Ralph was an eminent physician in the town of Stoughton. In the maternal lines the descent was from Maj.-Gen. Humphrey Atherton, the Rev. William Tompson, Capt. Roger Clap, James Blake, the annalist, Rev. Stephen Bachiler, Mr. Thomas Nelson, Mr. Ralph Wheelock, Mr. Moses Paine, and other distinguished persons.

Mr. Pope married, September 20, 1871, Abby, daughter of George and Matilda (Smallwood) Linder. Children: Albert Linder, born July 14, 1872; Mary Linder, born March 9, died June 9, 1874; Margaret Roberts, born May 29, 1876, married; Harold Linder, born November 5, 1879; Charles Linder, born November

Colonel Pope was educated in the public schools of Brookline. He entered the 35th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry August 22, 1862, and was appointed 2d lieutenant, and promoted to be 1st lieutenant March 23, 1864, captain, April 1, 1864; was brevetted major "for gallant conduct" at the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., and lieutenant-colonel for gallant conduct in the battles of Knoxville, Poplar Springs Church, and in front of Petersburg, the latter promotion being given March 13, 1865. The following is an extract from a pamphlet already published:

Mr. Pope traced his descent through the well-known New England families of Pope, Pierce, Cole, Stubbs and Neale. Business reverses placed the family in decidedly straightened circumstances, so that young Pope, at the age of nine, was obliged to begin the struggle of life and learn the lessons of perseverance and independence, which proved an excellent foundation for his business career. The first work which he secured was done for a neighboring farmer in Brookline, where the family was then living. In this way he was employed afternoons, and during all of his vacations. Three years later he commenced buying fruit and vegetables from the farmers, and thus set up a little business for himself, hiring other boys to assist him, extending his line of trade, and in one summer reaping a profit of $100. At the age of fifteen he left the High School and secured employment in the Quincy Market, and later on took a position with a firm dealing in shoe findings. There he did all the work of a porter, carrying 100 pound bales, stirring varnish for hours in uncomfortable quarters under the sidewalk, and receiving $4.00 a week for the work, which to-day would not be put on a full-grown man. From boyhood up he practiced economy, and kept a careful account of his expenditures. The store was more than five miles from his home, yet he frequently walked to and from business, in order to save the car fare of sixteen cents. When the war broke out he joined Salignac's Zouaves, and was chosen captain of the Home Guard of Brookline. He was enthusiastic over military affairs and became thoroughly familiar with the military tactics of the day. He had hardly reached the age of nineteen when he joined the volunteer forces of the Union Army, and went to the front as 2d lieutenant of Co. I of the 35th Massachusetts Infantav, on August 22, 1862. He was one of the four original officers of the regiment to be mustered out at the close of the war. His chief battles were South Mountain, Antietam, Sulphur Springs, Fredericksburg, Vicksburg. Jackson, Miss., Knoxville, Petersburg, and Poplar Springs Church. He was wounded slightly in the leg at Knoxville. He was employed on important detached service, and acted as commander of his regiment on many occasions when the Colonel was absent or disabled. He was highly complimented by his superior officers for the ability and skill which he displayed in organizing within twelve hours a provisional regiment of artillery from the convalescent camp at Alexandria, with which force he advanced to the defense of Washington, assuming command of Fort Slocum and Fort Stevens with forty-seven pieces of artillery. He served in the principal Virginia campaign, with Burnside in Tennessee, Grant at Vicksburg, and under Sherman in Jackson, Miss. He commanded Fort Hell at Petersburg, and in the last attack led his regiment into the city when he was at the age of only twenty-one years.

After the war he returned to his former employer, but soon went into business for himself in the line of slipper decorations and shoeman's supplies. In 1876 and '77 he served as a member of the City Council of Newton, Mass. He first saw bicycles at the Centennial Exposition in 1876. The first bicycle with which he became familiar was one imported for his friend Mr. Alired D. Chandler of Brookline. He often used to chase Mr. Chandler with a good horse and buggy, but such races usually ended in the wheelman disappearing around some distant corner.

The Pope Manufacturing Company, for which Col. Pope supplied the capital, and of which he was from the outset President and active manager, was organized early in 1877 for the marketing of small patented articles. He paid a special visit to England and Europe in order to examine the wheeling prospects abroad, with the idea of manufacturing for the American market. In September, 1877, he placed the first order for an importation of English machines. The first order given for bicycles to be manufactured in the United States was in the spring of 1878. The Weed Sewing Machine Co. of Hartford, Conn., undertook this work, was soon controlled, and finally bought out by him. In the interests of cycling he founded the "Wheelman," and put upwards of $60,000 into that enterprise. It exists to-day under the name of "Outing." He took the lead and shouldered the expense of pushing to a successful issue the suits between wheelmen and various city governments, the result of which was the throwing open of the public parks for the use of wheelmen. Starting from the small beginning of manufacturing fifty machines in 1878, he built up a phenomenal business, employing a capital of over $2,000,000, utilizing four factories at Hartford, Conn., with some ten acres of floorage, giving employment to an army of mechanics, and having enrolled a list of over 2000 agents. In January, 1892, he began anew his campaign for highway improvement. Through his untiring efforts the United States Congress and Legislatures of many states have adopted measures which tend in the right direction. The press of the country has generously supported him in his endeavors and the result has been a thorough inauguration of a movement which it is confidently expected will result in our having good roads. Col. Pope was director of the American Loan and Trust Co.. Boston Five Cents Savings Bank, a member of the Massachusetts Society S. R.: has been commander of Mass. Commandery of the Military Order of the Loval Legion, was a member of Edward W. Kingsley Post 113. Algonquin Club, Boston Athletic Association, Country Club, and Art Club. Beacon Society, twice president and three times vice-president Society of the 35th Regiment of Mass. Volunteers, Boston Merchants Association. New Riding Club, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Society of the Cincinnati, New York Athletic Club, Engineers' Club, New York, and the Automobile Club of America. He has been vice-president of the Society of Army of the Potomac, a life member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, one of the executive committee of the American Association of Inventors and Manufacturers, Hartford Board of Trade, and has been a visitor of Wellesley College and Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard College. In addition he was an officer or director in more than twelve other corporations. He had for many years declined political honors.

It was necessary in the earlier stages of the business to exercise great care in the matter of patents. All who owned any patented devices on the bicycle as a whole, or on appliances used in its construction, rushed in upon the pioneer company and demanded recompense in the way of royalties. Col. Pope made it a point to buy outright all the patents which were considered valuable, and thus placed himself on a sound basis, at the same time greatly benefitting the general condition of the trade by licensing others to manufacture under the rights which he controlled.

See Dorchester Pope Family, pp. 255-6, for details of his life. For details of his ancestry see American Ancestry, vol. 3, p. 150.

THOMAS HENRY KNOWLES, A.B., a resident member, elected in 1895, died in New Bedford, Mass., September 2, 1909. He was born in New Bedford September 12, 1837, the son of Thomas Knowles, born in Eastham, Mass., December 31, 1803, and Mary Keith Eaton, his wife, born in Middleborough, Mass., January 4, 1809, daughter of Solomon Eaton and Mary Keith.

His ancestry is as follows: Richard' Knowles of Plymouth, 1638, of Eastham, 1653; John's of Eastham, "slain in the colony's service" April 3, 1675; John's of Eastham; Willard' of Eastham; Seth's of Eastham; Thomas's of Eastham; Thomas' of Eastham and New Bedford. Thomas H. Knowles's mother was a direct descendant of Francis Eaton, who came in the Mayflower in 1620, and of Rev. James Keith of Bridgewater. Mr. Knowles married first, October 16, 1872, Mary Howland, daughter of Franklin Kibbe and Cornelia (Howland) Swift; child, Henry Swift, born April 14, 1881, who survived him. ber 12, 1890, Anna Deblois, daughter of Rodolphus Nye and Sylvia Hathaway (Nye) Swift; child, Sylvia, born August 7, 1891, who also survived him.

Mr. Knowles was educated in the public and private schools of New Bedford, Friends' Academy, New Bedford, and Harvard College, from which he graduated in 1861. After graduation he was engaged with his father in shipping and mercantile business, until the latter's death in 1887, since which time he has been interested principally in cotton manufacturing. He was concerned in the organization of the City Manufacturing Corporation and the Bristol Manufacturing Corporation, both cotton mills of New Bedford, and in 1895 was president of both corporations.

He made no effort to secure public office. He was elected to the common council in 1867, and to the board of aldermen in 1881. He had been a trustee of the public library, and served as an overseer of the poor in 1889 and 1890. For twenty-six years, from 1884, he was a member of the New Bedford Protecting Society, and was appointed a trustee in 1907 of the Kempton Fund, the gift of Sarah H. Potter. He was also for a long period a member, and for a time the clerk, of the First Congregational (Unitarian) Society, and an officer of several charitable societies and associations. sides these has was a director and vice-president of the Massachusetts National Bank from 1876, a trustee of the Five Cent Savings Bank, a director of the Hathaway Manufacturing Company, the Acushnet Mills, the New Bedford Gas and Edison Light Company, and, in former years, of the Bristol County Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and for several years of the Mellin's Food Company. Knowles held the confidence and respect of all his associates as a business man and financier, being prudent in counsel, excellent in judgment, and possessed of keen foresight.

Joseph Franklin Wight of Wellesley (the part now Wellesley Farms), a resident member, elected in 1900, died September 10, 1909. He was born in Otisfield, Cumberland Co., Me., June 10, 1839, son of Eliphalet Wight, who was born in Otisfield February 16, 1802, and his wife Cordelia Cushman Dunham, born in Otisfield October 25, 1805. His mother was the daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth (Hapgood) Dunham. He traced his ancestry through Eliphalet, Nathan, Joseph, Jonathan, Jonathan, Henry, and Thomas Wight.

The subject of this sketch was married on June 25, 1867, to Martha Louise, daughter of Benjamin and Lydia (Thompson) Stanley. He was educated in the common schools of his native town, and at a private classical school of Harrison, Me., an adjoining town. He held no public offices, except some minor offices in his adopted town of Wellesley. From April, 1859, to November, 1869, he was a merchant in Portland, Me., and also in Boston, as a member of the firm of Wight Brothers, from November, 1869, to the date of his admission to the Society, the firm being importers and exporters of raw and dressed fur skins.

SARAH JANE EVERETT of Cambridge, Mass., a life member of this Society since 1903, was elected in 1901, and died in Cambridge December 2, 1909. She was born in Barton, Vt., April 13, 1844, the daughter of Justus Stevens and Mary (Fuller) Smith. Her father was born at Hardwick, Vt., March 20, 1809, and her mother, Mary Fuller, was born at Litchfield, Me., April 4, 1815, the daughter of William and Rachel (Cram) Fuller. She was twice married: first, January 1, 1862, to Capt. Samuel Parker, 106th Regiment, New York Volunteers; and secondly, January 9, 1870, to Lieut. Edward Franklin Everett, the son of Oliver Capen Everett and his wife, Betsey Williams (Weld). Child, by first marriage, Ezra Jesse Parker. Mrs. Everett was educated at public and private schools, and resided at 24 Mt. Vernon Street, North Cambridge, Mass.

From her letter of acceptance are gathered the following facts regarding her Fuller ancestry: Her Fuller ancestors are traced, as follows: John' Fuller, from England, settled in Ipswich, Mass., 1634; Nathaniel, died in Ipswich, 1719; Nathaniel, born in Ipswich, Feb. 18, 1682; Capt. Nathaniel, baptized Dec. 25, 1726, commander of the privateer General Stark, married, March 5, 1768, Mary Holland; William, baptized Feb. 12, 1775; and Mary Fuller, born April 4, 1815, the daughter of William and Rachel (Cram) Fuller, the wife of Justus Stevens Smith and the mother of Sarah Jane (Smith-Parker) Everett, the subject of this

FINANCIAL NEEDS OF THE SOCIETY

The attention of all persons interested in historical and genealogical research is called to the following estimate of the financial needs of the Society:

MEETING

OF THE

New England Historic Genealogical Society

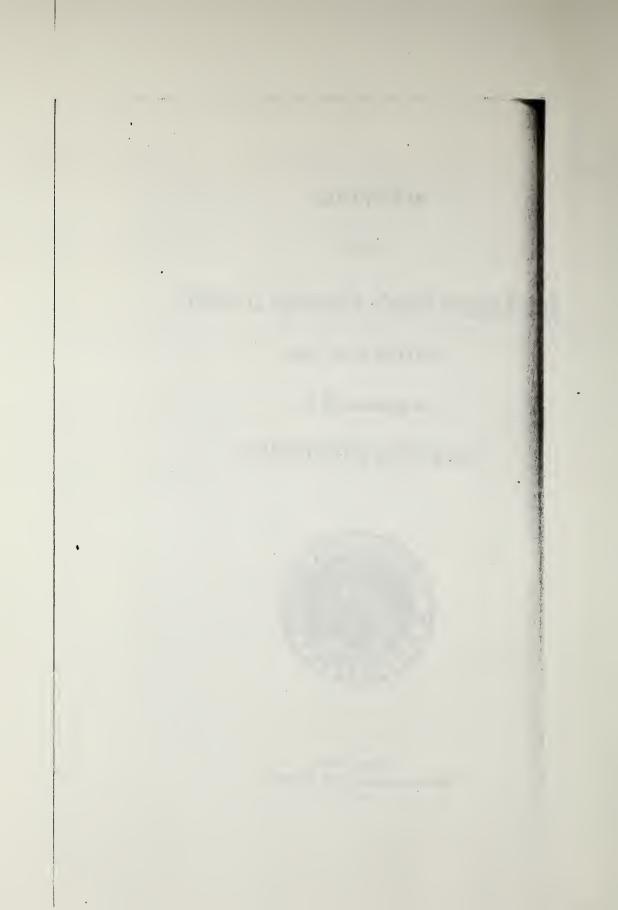

OCTOBER 22, 1909

TO COMMEMORATE ITS

SIXTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

BOSTON
PUBLISHED BY THE SOCIETY
1910

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MEETING

OCTOBER 22, 1909

THE observance of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Society was entrusted to the Committee on Papers and Essays, and arrangements were made for holding the meeting in Ford Hall, Ashburton Place, Boston, on the evening of October 22, 1909, at which an audience of about four hundred assembled. Music was furnished for the entertainment of those present, and after the addresses were finished supper was served.

At 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by the chairman of the Committee, William Carver Bates, who spoke as föllows:

Ladies and Gentlemen, Members and Guests:

In behalf of the Committee on arrangements I bid you a hearty welcome to this celebration of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the beginning of the Society. The limitations of the hour do not permit me to dwell upon the many ideas pertinent to the occasion. To other hands is committed the weaving of the historic tapestry whose brilliant coloring will typify the successful career of the Society for these sixty-five years of its existence. You will be addressed by members who for several years have been active in its management, and by others whose good-will and sympathy with its aims have been a constant encouragement. I have great pleasure in presenting to you the President of the Society, the Hon. James Phinney Baxter, of Portland, Maine.

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT HON. JAMES PHINNEY BAXTER, A.M., LITT.D.

This is the sixty-fifth anniversary of this Society, and we have met to commemorate it. It falls to me to welcome upon this pleasant occasion our members and, especially, our friends, whose interest in the objects of the Society has prompted them to confer upon it the honor of gracing this meeting with their presence. The more onerous duty of presenting to you the history of the Society during its life of nearly three score and ten years devolves upon others far better qualified than myself to illustrate it. I may be permitted to say, however, that my connection with this society has convinced me that its usefulness is not surpassed by any literary or historical body in the country with which I am acquainted, and that in point of devotion to its many interests its members are unexcelled. One of the things I particularly regret is that I was not born fifty years later than I was, that I might avail myself of the stores of historical knowledge which the Society is accumulating, and which those who are to follow me will find so helpful.

While this Society is, as its name implies, an historical as well as a genealogical society, it is recognized by the public at large as being more particularly interested in family history, a subject which sixty-five years ago had been almost unexplored, and which even now fails to interest very many who are deeply interested in general and even local history. Indeed, the objection is often urged that the study of genealogy tends to foster family pride and exclusiveness, which is thought to be undemocratic. This, however, is one of those popular fallacies which the light of experience disperses. There can be no doubt that a knowledge of one's ancestry, if some of its members have been reasonably useful in the world, is promotive of self-respect and the strengthening of family ties, which are important factors in the formation of character; indeed, they are deemed by many as essentials to true patriotism. The solidarity of the family is a theme which, of late, has particularly engaged the attention of students of sociology, and this depends upon the personal interest of its members in one another. The family in which such interest is cultivated, soon finds that it cannot be limited to its present members, but, to flourish in any satisfactory degree, must reach rootward if it would find stability, and so it inevitably seeks to become acquainted with its forbears who have in the past contributed to its character and standing in the world.

This is why the study of family history of late has commanded so much attention. As a rule, a New England family which can trace its line back to our early settlers will find ancestors who have distinguished themselves by useful and worthy lives, and the knowledge of such an ancestry furnishes a strong bond of family union. To promote the solidarity of our New England families is of the greatest importance at the present time, and in this work our Society is especially engaged.

A friend said to me the other day: "You are deeply interested I know in the preservation of what is often denominated the New England spirit, which was brought here by our English ancestors in the seventeenth century, but which, as I read the future, is doomed to extinction in a few more years."

"Look," he said. "at Puritan Massachusetts; in fact, any city of New England, and what do you see? Representatives galore of all the so-called Latin races, whose modes of thought and life so greatly differ from ours. Look at the Jews from every part of the world where they have been oppressed for centuries, with an omniverous appetite for land which it has never before been possible for them to gratify, overrunning whole districts in our cities and gobbling up real estate so rapidly that it begins to look as if they might crowd our our dwindling native population, and, besides this, a vast horde from every part of the known world, of various religions and imbued with race prejudices, who know nothing of our Christian institutions, and care less. It looks to me as though there was no help for that type of civilization which we once fondly thought would forever dominate New England."

I replied: "Your view seems to me a pessimistic one, and I cannot agree with you. A considerable portion of the people coming here have high ideals, and are making patriotic citizens of a high order. I have many personal friends among them, and know whereof I speak. Not all of our earliest colonists were up to the standard of our so-called Founders. I believe the men you speak of will develop a high type of American citizenship, and have confidence in the preservation of everything that is worth preserving in our New England type of

- भूगाव है. विक्री क्षेत्र

Our schools, colleges, universities, and innumerable literary and religious societies are a power, we may well believe, which will prevent any considerable deterioration of those principles which the descendants of the English Puritans have been taught to be the very foundations of social order and strength. Our institutions must always continue to teach, and men must learn by experience that industry, economy and justice, are essential to real success in life, which is what all are striving for. It may take a long time to karn this, but the lesson, I believe, will be learned eventually. Besides, those unpromising people from so many foreign lands are not to re-In a generation or two, with the opportunities for main stationary. acquiring education of heart and brain, may we not confidently count upon a type of citizenship which will do credit to our country, for the old New England leaven has in it a vital quality which cannot perish?

If our Society has any warrant for existence it is to be found in the preservation of our New England family history by those whose forefathers stood firmly for human liberty and equal opportunities for all. This Society is doing a most important work in drawing together the descendants of New England families, and uniting them in the common work of gathering and preserving the memory of noble men and women who cheerfully sacrificed so much for the upbuilding of those educational and religious institutions which have made our country foremost among the Christian nations of the world. For sixty-five years the New England Historic Genealogical Society has been engaged in this useful work, and its extensive publications of manuscript treasures, and the great library which it has accumulated, are a monument to its industry. Suppose for a moment that these publications had never been given to the world, that these manuscripts and books had never been gathered — would not the people of New England and the millions in this great country of New England ancestry have suffered an irreparable loss? I think all must admit that they would.

Of course we cannot and do not expect the public at large to realize as we do, who are intimately acquainted with the work of our society and who are working for its upbuilding, the great value of its work. This is a world of varied industries, and men must labor in those lines in which they find that which most interests them. It is our duty, however, as members, to make our work as widely known as possible, that those who might be interested in it may lend a hand in such manner as they may desire to. Every member should consider himself a committee of information ready to meet inquirers and invite them to use our library; and this leads me to say that people desiring to use our library are always welcome. Many who do not desire to join the Society are doing this, and have virtually the same privileges extended to them as our members enjoy. The field we cultivate is in no sense exclusive, but is broad enough for all who desire to cultivate it.

I have spoken of the great value of our literary property and of what its loss would mean to the world, and it seems my duty to lay particular stress upon this subject. The great need of the Society at the present time is protection of this property against loss. Our present building is, as we all know, unsafe, and common prudence dictates a fire-proof structure in its place. In view of this need we have acquired sufficient land to build upon, and our next step will be to secure a suitable building for our accommodation. To do this will require the hearty cooperation of all our members, and, without doubt, they will give it their attention. This Society is in no sense a begging institution, and in speaking of our present need I do not wish to be misunderstood. There are among our members many who are apt in the solution of financial problems, and the committee that is struggling with the question of providing ways and means would be glad to receive suggestions from them. In closing it is my duty and pleasure, Fellow Members, and Friends who have conferred upon the Society the honor of their presence, to extend to you, one and all, a hearty greeting.

ADDRESS OF THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY HENRY WINCHESTER CUNNINGHAM, A.B.

It is eminently fitting that a Society that is sixty-five years of age should celebrate its birthday, and when the Chairman of our Committee came to me a short time ago and said that he was inclined to confine the remarks to what he was pleased to term "home talent," I felt that this was to be a family party. But when he asked me to give in ten or fifteen minutes some statistics of the growth and work of the Society, I felt that my task was a difficult one to compress so much into so small a space, and I shall therefore merely touch upon some of the salient points without attempting to give a general history of our work. All of you know in a general way what the Society is and for what it stands, but many may not be familiar with its history and its accomplishments. People who are thinking of joining have often asked me why they should join or what they could get out of it, and I invariably begin my answer by telling them that by so doing they would exhibit a public spirit in helping to preserve the memorials of the founders of New England, that rare company of men and women whom old Governor Stoughton characterized by saying that "God sifted a whole nation that he might send choice grain over into this wilderness." And it was undoubtedly some such high spirit that animated the five men who founded this Society in 1844. Messrs. Ewer, Shattuck, Drake, Montague, and Thornton, who had had a kindred interest in studying the genealogies of the early New England families and were impressed with the need of permanently preserving these records, met in October, 1844, at the home of Mr. Montague, in Orange Street (now that part of Washington Street above Boylston Street), and took preliminary steps which were followed by a meeting on November 1st at the home of Mr. Shattuck, No. 79 Harrison Avenue, where the Society was organized. The following March it was incorporated by the Legislature.

Its beginnings were small: it had a room nearly twenty feet square in the third story of the building in Court Square that is now used for a police station, where there were one table, a few chairs, and a set of pine shelves without a back, but it held its business meetings in the attic room of the American Education Society on Cornhill, and as this was a dark room it was used chiefly for depositing the donations of the first few years. Even so, the Society received during its first year twenty-four bound volumes of books, ten manuscripts, six plans, an old lease, four bound volumes of the Independent Chronicle, one hundred and eighty-five miscellaneous pamphlets, and a wheelbarrow load of the manuscript sermons of the Rev.

Dr. Joseph Eckley of the Old South Church.

From such small beginnings sprang the magnificent library that our members are privileged to use today. The second habitation of the Society, to which it moved in October, 1847, was a room in Massachusetts Block, at No. 8 Court Square, a building that was later torn down and whose site is now covered by a portion of the City Hall. This was another small, dark room in a building filled with lawyers' offices, but it was an improvement on the former quarters, and its collection of filled bookcases had more the appearance of a library.

In January, 1851, the Society moved to its third location, No. 5 Tremont Row, where it lived for seven years till the quarters became so crowded that it was difficult to add another book.

In October, 1858, a large and well lighted hall was secured at No. 13 Bromfield Street over the bookstore of Samuel G. Drake, then president of the Society. The librarian of that day congratulated the members upon their spacious quarters, and the Society felt that it had reached a strong position.

During the twelve or thirteen years in Bromfield Street the library and work of the Society grew to such an extent that another move was imperative, and through the energy of its president, Marshall P. Wilder, subscriptions were collected from members and other public-spirited citizens that enabled the Society to purchase on March 12, 1870, its fifth and present location, No. 18 Somerset Street. The building, which was then a dwelling house, was remodelled, and when completed represented an expenditure of about $43,000. It was dedicated March 18, 1871.

By merely recounting these successive moves some idea is given of the growth of the Society, and those of us who remember our building as it was some fifteen years ago will recall how necessary was the splendid addition put on then, which now forms the back half of our present hall and library, and as I remember the progress of that work I can see plainly the familiar figure of Newton Talbot superintending the construction and giving the Society the benefit of his experience as a builder.

Today our library is outgrown and needs larger and better quarters, and it remains for the members of today to do all in their power to help us to a larger and newer home. Through all of these sixty-five years the greater part of the work done has been a labor of love, for nearly all the officers and committees have served without remuneration, and foremost upon that roll there is no name stands out brighter than that of Benjamin Barstow Torrey. He gave us freely of his time and served us faithfully as Treasurer for thirty-three years. During nearly all this time he was a busy man of the world, being Treasurer of the Boston & Providence and Old Colony Railroads, and often came to the Society's rooms for long hours of work after the business day had closed. When he first took office the Society had only about $11,000, and when he retired its library, real estate and securities were worth $300,000. It would be difficult to name all those who have in the past served the Society long and well, but we should surely recall the names of Samuel G. Drake, Almon D. Hodges, J. H. Sheppard, Frederic Kidder, Edmund F. Slafter, John T. Hassam, William S. Appleton, Edward G. Porter, Marshall P. Wilder, Winslow Lewis, Jeremiah Colburn, Thomas B. Wyman, Dorus Clarke, William H. Whitmore, and William Claffin, all of whom have passed on to a better land; of Henry F. Waters, Albert H. Hoyt, Henry H. Edes, James F. Hunnewell, and Abner C. Goodell, and two other names that are familiar to us all, those nestors among antiquarians, William B. Trask and John Ward Dean. The work that these two men did for the Society is worthy of a separate address. For long years they were so intimately associated with the Society that no antiquarian or genealogist came to the rooms without inquiring for them, and I think I am safe in saying that there was no worker in our field but gained some valuable piece of information from his conversation with them.

To me it has always seemed that the greatest value of this Society lay in its superb library and in its publications. We have today a larger and finer genealogical library than any other institution in the country, and many of our books are unique and could not be replaced if they were lost. This is due partly to the foresight of early members in getting these treasures while they were obtainable, and partly to our present efficient librarian in acquiring during the past ten years such rare items as appeared in auction sales or by gift from private collectors. Our library is known far and wide and is daily consulted, not only by large numbers of members but by visitors from all over our own country and even from abroad, particularly by those of New England origin who have a just pride in tracing the small beginnings of their sturdy pioneer ancestry. Especially in summer is our library filled with kindred from the West who have come East for their holiday, and are busy finding some trace of their forefathers, for "Ever to those of Eastern birth no matter where they roam, The dearest spot on earth to them is their old New England home."

Our membership of recent years has been largely recruited from this class, who have joined from a desire to help this institution, and it is for us who still live in the old home to do more than we have done to preserve the memorials of our ancestors and carry out the motto of our Society, In memoriam majorum. From the five original members of 1844 we have grown to a Society of over one thousand resident, and seventy-eight corresponding and honorary members, and every man and woman who values the history and traditions of early days can help us by joining, and thus contributing his or her part towards this good work.

In 1846, two years after the formation of the Society, it became apparent that some means must be taken for putting in more permanent form for general use the many records, manuscript genealogies, and stray bits of historical value that the Society was collecting, and so our magazine, the Register, was started, and has regularly appeared every quarter since. Its sixty-three volumes are a treasure-house to the genealogist, and no one can attempt to study the history of New England families without carefully consulting its pages. Its commercial value is now so great that complete sets have sold as high as $400, and the rarest volume has, I believe, brought $75—in fact so rare has this volume 16 become that a few years ago it was reprinted by a bookseller of this city. In order to make these volumes more accessible to the student, the Society began some few years ago the work of making a complete index of the names, subjects, and places in the first fifty volumes, and of this stupendous undertaking three octavo volumes have been finished and published.

Another work is the publication of brief memorial biographies of all deceased members from the beginning, and this has filled nine handsome volumes which take the list through the year 1897. Since then these biographies appear in the REGISTER. This work has been aided through the generosity of the late William B. Towne, an early treasurer of the Society, who gave a fund for this purpose. By this means every member is sure of a brief memorial sketch that will preserve his name and career for the future.

This Society was the pioneer in the movement to get the State to assist in the publication of the vital records of Massachusetts towns, and through the generous response of the State this Society has already published and preserved for future generations the fast decaying records of thirty-seven towns, besides having many more in preparation.

Another fine piece of work is the research done under our auspices among the archives of old England for traces of the founders of our New England, a work that has been carried on for many years at much expense through subscriptions given for that purpose. We were fortunate in having the services of that eminent antiquarian, Henry F. Waters, a master in searching English records, who regularly sent an instalment of his "finds" to the REGISTER. Many a prominent American family has thus been able to discover some trace of its English forbears through Mr. Waters's work. It is to him and his work through this Society that the world is indebted for its knowledge of the early days and ancestry of John Harvard. Previous to this the late James Savage, the author of that stupendous work, Savage's Genealogical Dictionary, had made a standing offer of $500 for five words of authentic record about the ancestry of Harvard, and no one had ever appeared to claim the reward. The result of Mr. Waters's Gleanings we published later in two large vol-Our associate, Mr. J. Henry Lea, who since then has been an active worker in the English archives, proposed to the Council to print in full all the wills in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury for certain years, instead of picking at random as Mr. Waters had done. The Council has published from Mr. Lea's manuscript those wills for the year 1620, but the sale of this volume has not been such as to warrant further issues. Here is a work that some generous per-

In fact, if one is anxious to learn the extent of our publications he has but to turn to the large Bibliography of Historical Societies, published in 1905 by the American Historical Association, and he will find that the list of our work covers one hundred and twelve pages of small type, a larger space than that filled by any other historical society. During the year 1908 we printed three thousand, three hundred and thirty-one pages, the high water mark of our work.

Since 1874 the paper used for our REGISTER and other publications has been made especially for us, in order that we might have one that would stand the test of time, and we have encouraged the use of such paper among all genealogists, as well as the use of a permanent ink for all such manuscripts as are to be preserved.

The Society has in its safe a number of valuable manuscripts, perhaps the most interesting being three or four of the account books of John Hull, the Treasurer of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. These books are filled with the accounts of moneys paid to the soldiers in King Philip's War, and proved to be of the greatest value to the historian of that war. Another treasure is the Knox Manuscripts. These letters and papers of General Henry Knox are arranged and bound in fifty-five volumes. They contain many items of interest and value during the Revolutionary period, and were given to the Society in 1873 by the general's grandson, Admiral

Henry Knox Thacher.

While we have spent our energies during recent years in enriching our library, by completing our collection of genealogies and town histories, yet many interesting and valuable relics are to be seen in our rooms. We have one portrait by Smibert, one by Copley, and a picture of Hon. Peter Bulkeley that is said to be by Sir Godfrey Kneller. We have some of the Pelham engravings and one of the four rare water-colors by Christian Remick, representing the British fleet in Boston Harbor in 1767; but perhaps the quaintest pictures on our walls are two very old portraits of Edward Rawson, the Colonial Secretary, and his daughter Rebecca. In the Council Room may be seen the large round table of Rev. John Pierpont and the Governors' chairs. These latter are six in number, each one having been the property of an old-time governor of one of the New England States, that of Massachusetts having belonged to John Hancock.

Such, Mr. President, are some of the possessions of our Society, and such have been some of its works, and it has served its purpose well; but I am confident that a larger field of usefulness is before it, and that it is destined to be of more service to the public and of more interest to its members.

ADDRESS OF THE TREASURER, CHARLES KNOWLES BOLTON, A.B.

In our many activities it behooves us not to forget that this Society stands for the study of genealogy. We live in a period and in a city crowded with diversified interests. If, therefore, we are to be effective, we must not forget to do one thing well. This one thing, I think you will all agree, is in our case the proper study of family history. To make genealogy worth while it must be respected of all men and must be allied in the world's work in which all men are engaged. This is not so difficult when we consider that genealogy touches life in its most momentous relations.

In looking back over our sixty-five years of successful effort there comes to us a feeling of satisfaction. We see evidences everywhere that our work has been useful in the community, yes, useful far beyond the bounds of New England. You have heard, and you will hear again this evening, the details of a society's struggle and growth. We are here to commemorate the self-sacrifice and the devotion of men whose memories are dear to this Society. But in commemorating the past we, while we linger here together, must not

I have said that genealogy touches life in its most momentous relations. Why, then, does not our subject appeal more strongly to scholars? Why is it not more often called a science? I think we can answer this by saying that genealogy, as it is customarily studied or developed, does not closely ally itself with other fields of serious research. In this, genealogy is weak. If it is to receive honor from the historian, the anthropologist, or the sociologist, it must contribute something to the sciences into which these men delve. For every true science does contribute to every other true science. Genealogy has done much to make people happy, a little perhaps to make people better. But in so far as it merely contributes to vanity and self-satisfaction, it is unworthy to rank as a science.

Our subject comes nearest to doing its duty worthily in its alliance with history. A few family books tell of political events contemporary with the lives depicted, although too often they give much space to descriptions of wars and to the parts played in them by the members of the family. Did these soldiers never have political views? Were their lives never influenced by current events, by an inflated currency, a shortage in the bread supply, a scarcity of maid servants, or if these events are not enough, by the acts, outrageous or otherwise, of the governor of a colony or of a king across the water? Does our genealogist never say that in such a year Thomson's Seasons or Addison's Spectator first was discussed at the village lyceum or sewing circle, and that his family led in the discussion? A large library frequently receives books and newspapers of early date which bear familiar names written on the fly leaf or margin. Our ancestors, therefore, did have their books and papers. Does a genealogy mention what books long-ago members of the family owned, or read as they sat about the hearth in the fitful light of evening? Here are subjects for research: "Titles of early books and by whom owned;" "Titles of early newspapers and their subscribers." Shall we not some day find a great-great-grandson who will take more pride in the fact that his log-cabin ancestor owned a copy of Paradise Lost than that he fought at Louisburg?

It would be of value to the student if he could find in a genealogy much about early customs and methods of work. Farming out the paupers, paying the minister in produce, co-operation in building and in reaping, the work of the middle man in buying and selling cattle—these are subjects on which family papers throw light. To the student of economics they are of value. If he finds his facts summarized in a family history and is not forced to search for them himself, genealogical study has become the handmaid of economics,

In very few of our volumes have I seen any statement in regard to the domestic life of the people who are recorded in the family book. The average reader to-day does not stop to think that Jeremiah and Samantha, Seaborn and Mindwell settled down to married life with corn-meal instead of white flour, pork instead of beef, cider instead of coffee, and the all-useful knife instead of a fork. Does a genealogy mention under the proper generation the coming into use of white sugar, the introduction of the Irish potato, the stove and the carriage, or the craze for the growing of flax and the founding of the Boston spinning school? These events influenced the lives of our ancestors. In short, are we genealogists writing the lives of people or are we copying records?

At a certain point in town records we find families naming their children Horatio or Horatio Nelson, and at another time George or Lafayette or Wellington. I wonder if any one has made a study of events as shadowed in the naming of children. This would ally genealogy with history. Perhaps it would show, also, that some among the old Puritans had their heroes of renown.

Genealogy again owes a debt to anthropology and to sociology. What is the effect of environment on life? It is said that the second generation on American soil suffered from the struggle to subsist. That is, it was weaker and less well educated. The historian of a famous New England stock wrote that the men of this second generation, living in hardship and privation, all died early from the excessive use of alcoholic liquor. That author at least was frank in his desire to picture the life of his ancestors. But most of our family histories expect us to assume that we are reading the lives of the saints.

Speaking of saints reminds me of the religious life of long ago when men were fined in court for absence from divine service. The people drove ten miles and remained all day. The horse-sheds were filled and the pews were crowded. Country life held young as well as old. How is it now? The horse-sheds are torn down and the pews are empty. Country life offers delight only to the city man with his Sunday paper and his automobile. Let the genealogist study his facts candidly, that he may decide what he thinks about the merits of the old days as compared with ours in their influence upon the life of the country.

But I must hurry on. The great contribution which we can make to science is along the line of heredity. Where so surely may the student expect to find his basic facts as in the family history? And yet the biographical dictionary is almost his sole reliance, although this source gives him a picked class only on which to base his conclusions. If he had half a dozen scientifically prepared genealogies, describing old stock, what a mine of information would be his! One good family, the Jonathan Edwards line, and several of a criminal bent, have been described in books, but not by a family historian. In order that we may write a pleasant genealogy are we are to omit all that might aid the student of heredity? If your family is composed of saints, add to the study of saints by writing a scientific genealogy of them. If it is not, spare your parents, if you must be filial to the point of canonizing them, but do not canonize the whole family.

In the study of factors which go to make up environment there is comfort in the conclusion reached by Mendel, the great Austrian monk whose researches are now the only sure foundations which we have for the study of heredity. His disciple Bateson says that "whereas our experience of what constitutes the extremes of unfitness is fairly reliable and definite, so that society may work to eliminate the unfit strains," any attempt to distinguish certain strains as superior and to give special encouragement to them would be unsafe, since we have as yet so little to guide us in estimating the qualities for which society has or may have a use. So elusive is the origin of

Few books of the kind we have under review speak much of physical inheritances. At every point I find that scientists differ as to the significance of the facts thus far made available, perhaps because so little evidence is to be had. Do you find long lines of descent bearing light hair and blue eves, with other lines of dark eyes and hair? In England the upper classes tend to light hair and eyes. Does it follow that as stock improves through several generations the color of hair and eyes tends to lighten? I fear no family history can tell us. Do certain diseases run in certain lines? The study of these presents a curious problem, since doctors of old had general expressions for troubles which we differentiate now by long Latin names. Is it not for us to furnish much of the material for which science calls in the furthur study of these problems?

In Bateson's work on Mendel's Principles of Heredity, published at Cambridge, England, this year, you will find a series of questions to be answered by a study of families. A man who is color-blind has, we will say, a normal sister who marries. It is said to be an even chance whether any of her children will be color-blind at all; but if they are, then the sons will be color-blind and normal in equal numbers, and her daughters will all be normal. Again, a colorblind man marries a normal woman and the children will show no trace of the defect. But if we reverse the conditions, and the man be normal and the wife color-blind, the sons will all be color-blind and the daughters, while all normal, will be capable of transmitting color-blindness to the next generation. When scientists are enunciating such theories is it not for us to apply them, to reaffirm what proves to be truth and to put a stop to error? The law of heredity laid down by Galton and partially confirmed by observation should interest every genealogist. He says that half of the sum of our inheritances is from our parents and one-fourth from our grandparents. Nevertheless, slight as the thread of descent becomes back of one's grandparents, a woolly head or a deformed hand may reappear in each generation for two centuries. This being true, we may with equal hope of success look for the persistence of a valuable inheritance through many generations. I have always felt that the Wolcott family, with its major-generals, its signer of the Declaration of Independence, its senators, and its governor in each generation, owes its success to one ancestral girl, Martha Pitkin, whose merits were so evident that her possible departure out of the Colony became, it is said, a matter of general concern.

This transmission of habits and mental endowments must prove of interest to every one of us. The Puritan is called sober-minded and hardy, the Scotchman witty and thrifty, the Irish emigrant adaptable and ambitious. These and other conceptions of race peculiarity seem sure. What, then, of the inheritance of the individual? It seems that the average family in England consists of about five children, although some statistics put the number as high as six. In families where there is abnormal ability the average number of children rises from six to seven. The same tendency to raise the average is observable in criminal stock also, showing that genius and degeneracy appear to be allied and that size of family may be significant. Has any genealogist ever found the average size of family in his book and then examined those children where the family group exceeds the normal to see whether the group tendency is

Again, the oldest child has a much greater likelihood of a distinguished career than his brothers and sisters. Next to him in importance comes the youngest child. Is this theory, which is deduced from lives in the great English Dictionary of National Biography, true in New England? Yet again, the father and mother are by some said to grow more alike in facial expression as they mature. This means approximation to a family type, tending it is said, toward the male characteristics. If so, should not the younger children, who are born of parents of converging type, carry on the family face more accurately than the older children? In other words, a composite of the faces of children born when their parents are mature will give the face that goes with the name. If this is true, we do not inherit equally from all the 16,000,000 ancestors of the Conquest period (presuming there were so many), and the family type like the race type is real and becomes of interest.

There are other interesting phases of genealogy. It is hardly customary to study closely the romantic side of marriage to ascertain evidence of social standing and family advance or decline. In the middle period of immigration where the foreign-born resident was so unusual that he had none of his kind in the neighborhood, marriage with a Yankee girl gave indication of the decline in the girl's family. Perhaps we may say to-day that she who marries a Portuguese or French Canadian emigrant is not of just the social station claimed for a farmer whose family have occupied the old mansion for several generations. Permanence of domicile, and to some extent the transmission of a trade from father to son, as President Eliot has pointed out, lead to a superior stock. And in confirmation of this we find that there is no lack of family pride in the make-up of the prosperous farmer.

Statistics seem to indicate that ability is democratic. It goes to the man who uses his hands almost as often as to the lawyer to bestow its laurels; oftener indeed to the farm than to the army or to the medical school. The two great sources of ability, says Havelock Ellis, have been the church and trade. What changes will our new environment bring forth? The church no longer seems to dominate the town, and trade, once the cherished vocation of the proud squire's younger son, is now less admired. Are the law and medicine to have their day in nurturing the world's leaders? We who are here this evening have a right to be interested in the distribution and inheritance of ability, for John Winthrop's company, with many others of our early ancestors, come from Norfolk and Suffolk, the cast-county land of England, which has produced more great men than any other part of the British Isles.

In trying to set for ourselves a higher standard of genealogical excellence we do not forget the splendid work that has been done. It makes for accuracy and order. It makes for sound reasoning. It has raised up in every city and frontier town an eager advocate for the preservation of records, so that volumes that once lay neglected arc now in good repair and secure against fire. The old house going to decay receives a new covering of shingles because a study of old records reveals its part in history. Genealogy brings back to the hill town the city daughter, reverencing the old surroundings and eager to save memorials of her ancestral days from destruction.

To know of right living in our ancestors encourages us to higher ideals. To learn of ancestral weakness or disease prepares us to work intelligently to overcome unfortunate inheritances. Genealogy as a science helps us, therefore, to help ourselves. But it must also aid workers in other fields of science to help the race to which we all belong.

LETTER FROM HON. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, LL.D. PRESIDENT OF THE MASSACHUSETTS HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Oct. 21, 1909.

As respects the meeting, tomorrow evening, to observe the 65th Anniversary of the founding of the N. E. Historic Genealogical Society, I very much regret to say I shall be unable to attend. Since my return from Europe I have not been well; and my physician, while reluctantly consenting to my coming to town in the day-time, absolutely inhibits my being out late at night. My trouble is only temporary; but, so far as the occasion referred to is concerned, in the language of Mercutio, "'t is enough! 't will serve."

I regret this the more, inasmuch as the N. E. Historic Genealogical Society is that one of all our home sister societies for which I have the kindest feeling, and to which I feel under the deepest obligation; and I speak now as President of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

On far too many occasions, and to an altogether uncalled for degree these societies historic, and otherwise—which have sprung into life so profusely during recent years,—infringe on each other's fields. In other words, they stimulate to a most unnecessary duplication of material and profuseness of printing, both of which are in my opinion undesirable.

There is not, however, and never will be, any trouble, or jealousy arising from these sources, between the Massachusetts Historical Society and the New England Historic Genealogical Society. Not only do the two organizations labor in different fields, but the Historic Genealogical Society has relieved the Massachusetts Historical Society of a work no less onerous than extensive and useful. In fact, I do not see how the Historical Society could have staggered along, and attended to its proper functions, had it been also encumbered with the great and growing labor of genealogical research and accumulation. The two societies thus move on, to the general advantage of the community, on continually diverging lines.

It is almost needless to say that, while the Historical Society has, within the limits assigned to it, ample field for usefulness, the field

one which excites a more lively interest.

As evidence of this, it is only necessary to refer to the amount of space in the public prints occupied by each. The facts in connection with the Historical Society are brought to the notice of the public in a paragraph perhaps half a column long, in the newspaper issues, once a month. The work of the Historic Genealogical Society, on the contrary, now fills two entire broadsides of the Boston Transcript each week, and the demand for greater space is continually making itself felt.

The obvious fact is that the interest felt in genealogy, though of comparatively recent date, is continually increasing, and now far exceeds the interest felt in any purely historical investigation.

Under these circumstances, there is no society in the Commonwealth to which, as President of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and so a worker in common fields, I would sooner extend the hand of fellowship in evidence of an earnest wish for future prosperity, than to the Historic Genealogical Society.

Though the Historical Society is far the older organization of the two, I think I speak within limits when I say that, under existing conditions, to one person, outside of its own somewhat exclusive membership, who visits the rooms of the Historical Society for the purpose of investigation, ten persons at least visit those of the Historic Genealogical Society.

If I am correct in this surmise,—and I think I have spoken within limits,—it is needless for me to say that the feeling I entertain towards the sister society,—of which, by the way, I have long been a Life Member,—is not only one of admiration for excellent work already done, but, also, one of sincere gratitude at its having relieved its older sister from long and exhaustive labor in a field which it was never designed to occupy. The two Societies have specialized and differentiated; to the great advantage of both, as well as to that of the community at large.

I regret my inability to be present, and to put these sentiments on public record tomorrow evening; but in view of the fact that, for reasons already stated, my presence is out of the question, I hope you will see to it that the above is brought to the attention of those met to observe the celebration of tomorrow, as a tribute from one whose place it would be to speak, if called upon to speak at all, as representing both a sister and a senior organization.

Messrs. WILFRED HAROLD MUNRO, A.M., President of the Rhode Island Historical Society, and HENRY LEFAVOUR, Ph.D., LL.D., President of The Colonial Society of Massachusetts, made brief extemporaneous addresses felicitating the Society upon its achievements for the last sixty-five years, and expressing the hearty congratulations of the bodies represented by them.

ADDRESS OF REV. JAMES DE NORMANDIE, D.D.

It is an interesting experience to take part in the meeting of a society which for sixty-five years has been devoted to two matters of such importance as history and genealogy.

History has generally been looked upon as a dry and tedious study. It has been the one for which most pupils have had the least interest, and history of the past has justified this indifference. It has been so much a story of wars and intrigues, of national and individual ambitions and tyrannies, of rulers who have been given to self aggrandizement, and peoples who have suffered every oppression. But within the period of your Society all this has been greatly changed, and historians like Buckle, Froude, Mommsen, Parkman, Prescott, Motley, and Bancroft have made the study of engrossing They have set before us in living colors the customs of the times, the eccentricities of the actors; they have made striking portraits of the leading characters; they have sought for the underlying reasons which have led nations to triumph or defeat; and they have marked, or leave us to mark, how there has been a gradual betterment of society. No one can study history without being a reasonable optimist.

New England has been particularly rich in events and rich in personalities which are of commanding attraction. The dangers and struggles and hardships endured in founding our nation we only too soon forget. There is not a town in New England whose early lives do not furnish examples of marked character, of great individuality, and of strong virtues. We may not look upon them now as persons of altogether agreeable traits for our companionship—I think a great many saints must have been rather trying to live with—but we cannot help admiring the work they did.

The local historical societies are gathering up all these incidents which belong to the past years of a community, and these form the material out of which, after a while, the historians form a calm survey, and a just picture of bygone periods—and nothing but comes into play. Old records, stained with the mold and damp of time, a torn leaf, an old almanac, a dim and disfigured manuscript, family letters, will often supply information we might seek for in vain elsewhere. Who has forgotten that important event in ecclesiastical history, the revision of the New Testament, and what was of most value to the translators, what threw the most light upon the text, was the manuscript of Tischendorf, now preserved in the Library of St. Petersburg, the leaves of which had been snatched from a waste basket and a stove in St. Catherine's Convent on Mount Sinai. We are just learning what the true historical method is. Most history has been of a partisan character in politics, or a sectarian character in religion. It has been written in the interest of one side or another. But as the naturalists have shown us what the scientific method is—just to learn the facts, laws, and processes of nature without regard to their preconceived theories—so the historian is simply to learn and tell the whole truth, to examine all sides of any event, or any period or any person.

When we come to genealogy we reach a subject which has not been supposed to have much place in a new land or in a democracy. Still, every one must have noticed what a growing desire there is everywhere to look up and cherish our ancestry. In old lands where an aristocracy has ruled—and aristocracy always should rule, only it should be an aristocracy of merit, and not of birth, or wealth, or power or station—this has been carried to a ridiculous extent. Everything went by inheritance. "What have you to substantiate your claim," it was asked of Moore, and he wittily replied, "Noah had three sons, Shem, Ham, and one more." Now we talk more about environment, upon what the man is, or has done for himself. It has been said that the man who has nothing to boast of but his ancestry, is like a potato, the only good belonging to him is underground. All other things being equal it is a good thing to have a long line of ancestors who, if they have not been famous, have been respectable, just, honorable, worthy members of a community. It is interesting to know about your ancestors, but the main question must still always be, "What are you?" and he who is not ashamed of himself need not be ashamed of his early ancestors.

My predecessor, John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, puts down in black and white what he thought of his parishioners, their virtues and their sins. He likes to speak of the worthy ones as leaving behind "a sweet savour of godliness." Here is the gentle way in which he describes a reprobate: "he went from us to the State of Connecticut, where he lived for several years without giving any satisfaction, to the consciences of the saints." I notice how this interest in ancestors grows by the number of persons, a steady stream from all parts of the country, coming to consult this most interesting of all parish records. A man from the Far West wanted to look up a certain name. I soon found it in the records as coming with the early settlers, but when we searched further he was not over-pleased to find the name again "excommunicated for notorious drunkenness."

It is a good thing to have had these sixty-five years of all these members who have shown their interest in these two subjects; all their researches into the past; all these studies of those honored ones who have planned a prominent or a faithful part in life—these studies which help us to a reasonable optimism, and to a better hope, and which give us the assurance that our society has surely made some progress, that may go on to an ever ascending path.

Johnson's Wonder-Working Providence of Sions Saviour in New England, 1628—1651

By Captain EDWARD JOHNSON

Edited by Dr. J. F. JAMESON

Director of the Department of Historical Research in Carnegie Institution of Washington;—a descendant of the writer

This famous old document is the first published history of New England, antedating as it does both Winthrop's Journal and Bradford's History of Plymouth Plantation. Captain Johnson, who came to this country in 1630, wrote it in reply to various defamatory reports in England of the situation in Massachusetts, both in the Church and politics.

He gives a stronger, clearer picture of New England life in those days than any later writer of fact or fiction.

The work is particularly valuable as being a first-hand account of the times, written by one of the rank and file of the colony, and not by a high official, as were Winthrop's Journal and Bradford's History; thus the writer presents conditions from the viewpoint of the colonists themselves.

IT IS ONE VOLUME OF Original Narratives of Early American History

A series that sets forth at first hand the settlement and development of this country. Other volumes already out: The Northmen, The Spanish Explorers in the Southern United States, Governor John Winthrop's Journal, etc. All edited by highest authorities. $3.00 net; postpaid $3.30 per volume.

"I feel like congratulating you heartily on the impression which, I am sure, the volumes already published of the 'Original Narratives of Early American History' must make on all who examine them. They seem to me admirably done, both from the editorial and publishing side, and likely to be of constantly increasing usefuluess to students, schools and libraries as time goes on."—George B. Adams, Ph.D., Litt.D., Professor of History in Yale University, and President of the American Historical Association.
