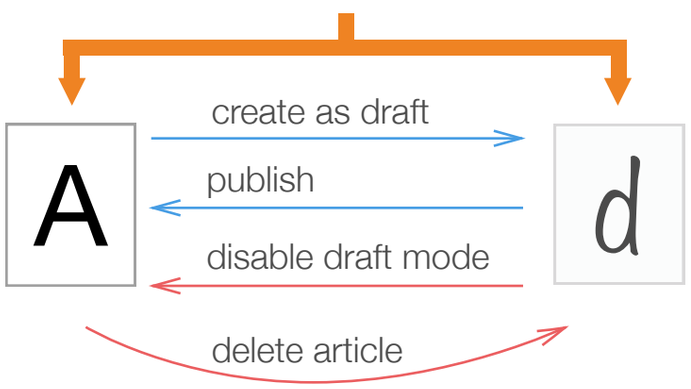
Draft creation

Switching between modes

The default entry point for content creation will depend on the user expertise and preferences (based on previous choices).

At any point, the user will be able to switch beteen article and draft creation modes.



Editing simplified

Talk and history get integrated into the editing experience without adding aditional choice (tabs). The designs assume that auto-saving is not possible, but would be ideal in this context.

Guidance and help

Aids and options for the user to ask for help are provided closeby.

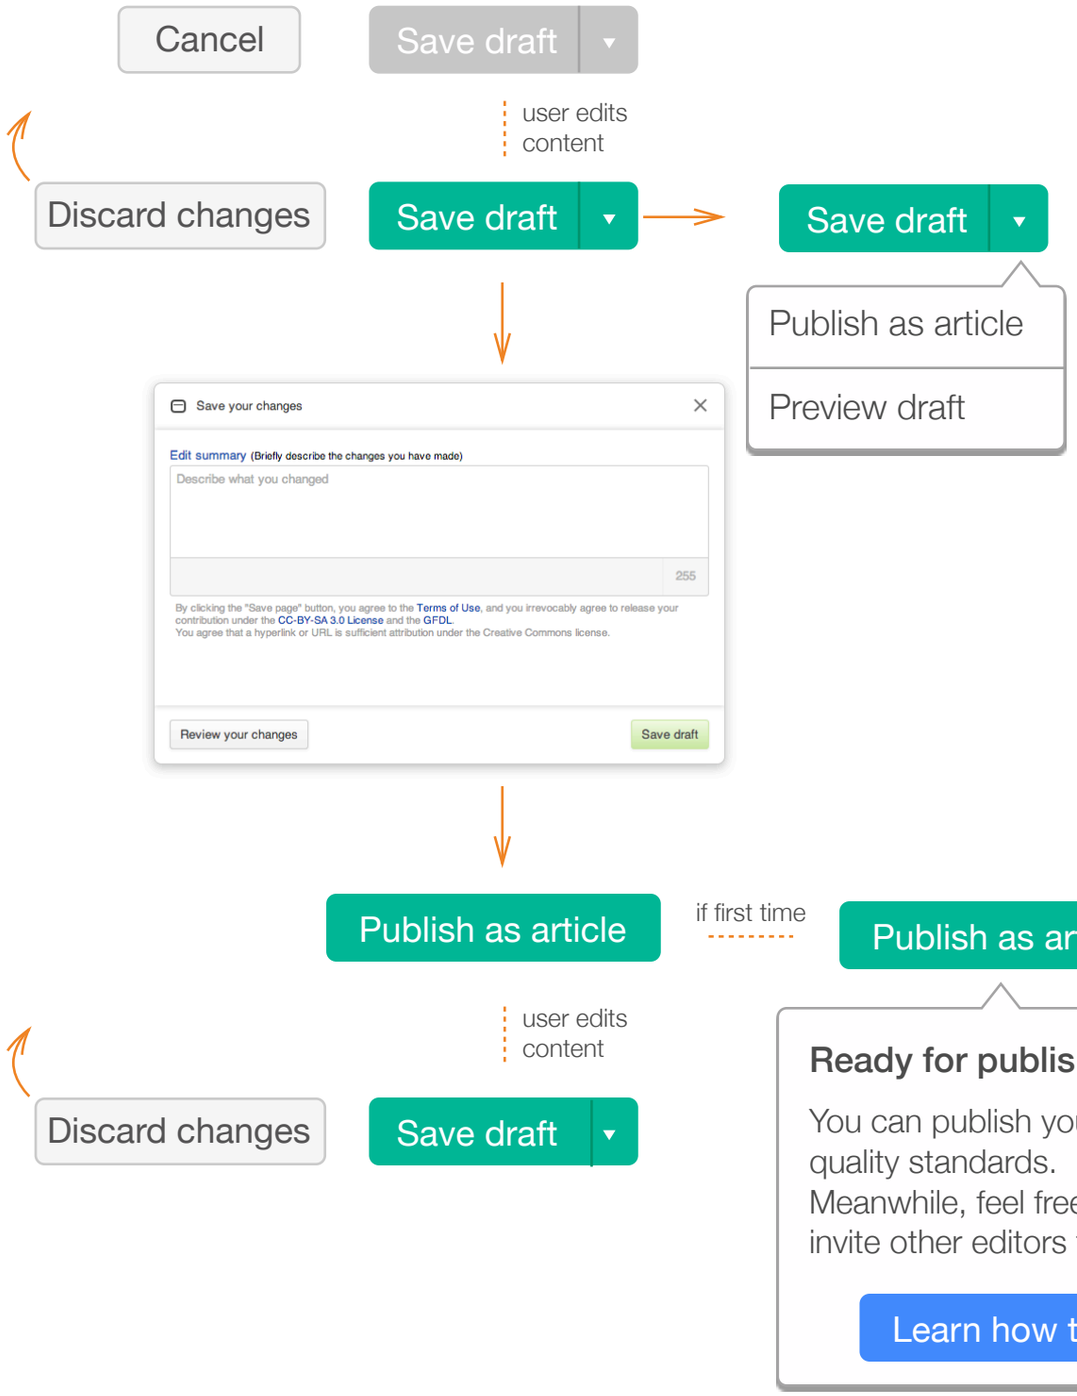
Saving & publishing actions

Only one primary action will be shown at a time. When the draft is edited, "saving" will be the default action. When the draft is saved, "Publish as an article" will be the most prominent action.



Initially, saving is disabled until the user adds some content

When there is unsaved content, the default action is to save it. A shortcut is provided for publising (that will also save) and other possible options (e.g., preview) if they apply.

Saving happens as usual. It would be great to simplify the interaction so that users could specify the edit summary afterwards, but that is probably out of scope.
After saving a draft, it goes back to editing state.

When the draft contains saved content, the main action is to publish it. If it is the first time, a guider can be shown to better explain the process. After publishing, clarifications are provided.

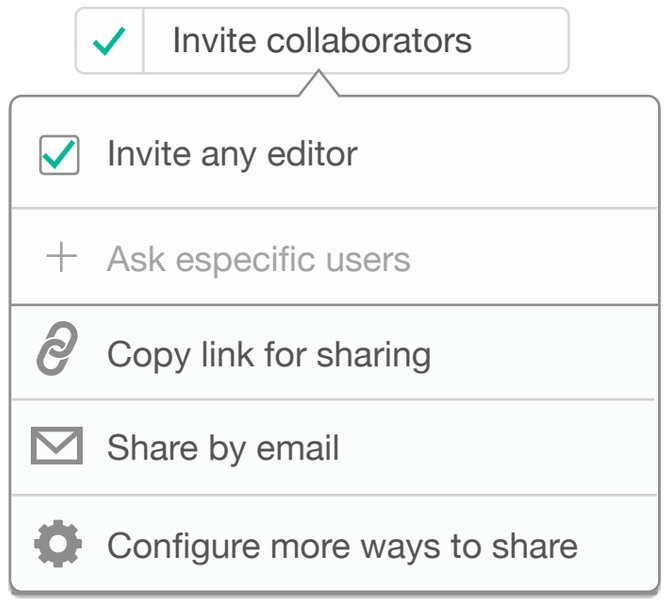
Discover and switch modes

Users can abandon the current draft or disable draft mode to access regular article creation.

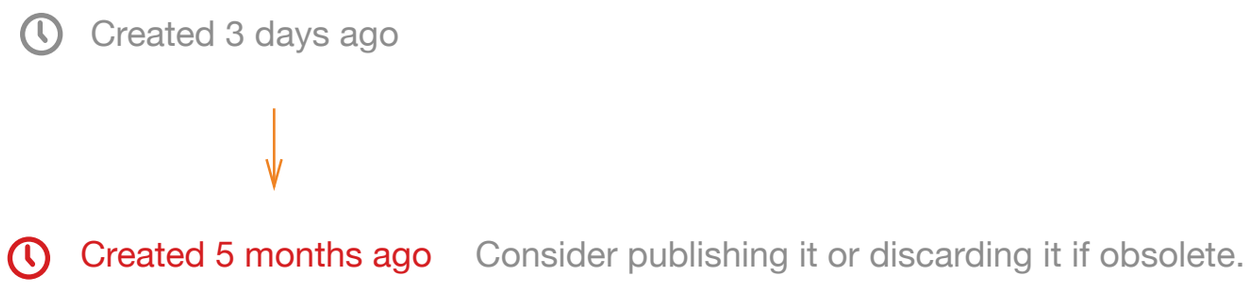
Ask for help

Users can request help for their drafts to be improved. They can target any user or send invitations to specific Wikipedia users. they can also use other mechanisms for sharing the invitation.



Avoid drafts to last forever

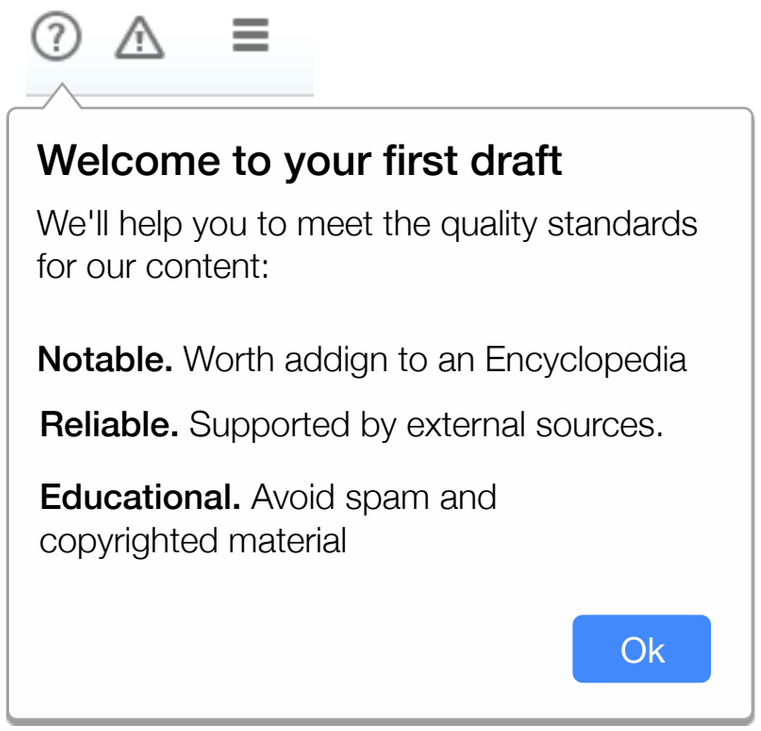
When users are workign on a draft for too long, we can indicate that it may be tiem for publishing in the UI (and even send a notification)



More details

First time use

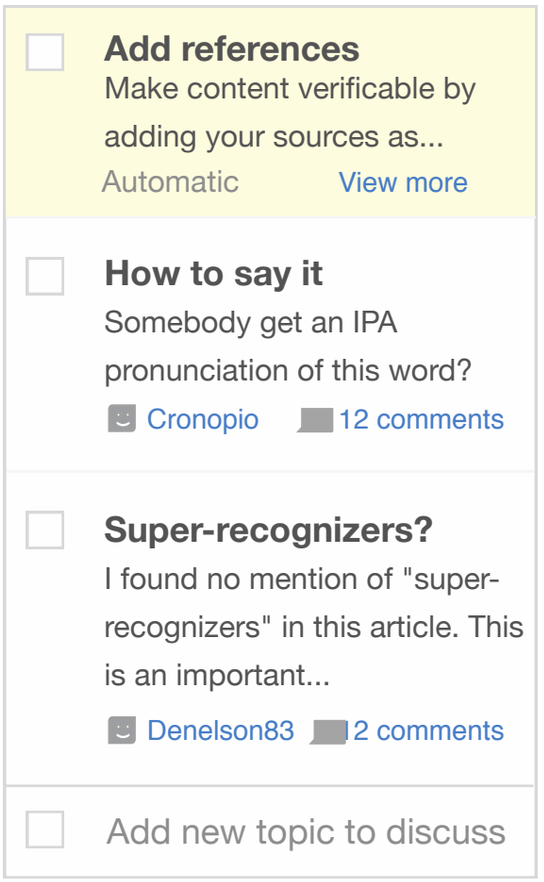
A guider can introduce the basic concepts an purpose of the draft concept.



What to improve

The talk namespace for drafts is presented as a list of discussions where the user can participate. It makes more visible ongoing discussions about the topic.

Both, the system and editors can add tasks to complete for the draft to be considered ready.



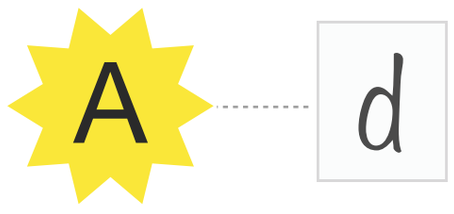
Article-draft integration

Articles and drafts on the same topic are related, we need to make sure that the UI enforces such relationship. Otherwise, a manual effort would led to inconsistencies and duplication of work.

An article is created by publishing a draft

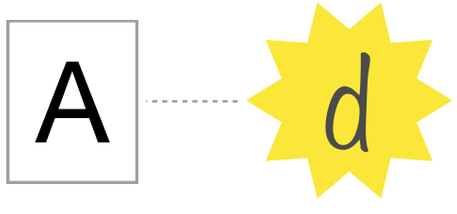
- A — Users accessing the article will no get info about the draft.
- d — Users accessing the draft will be infromed that the article exist, and the draft content will be shown as disabled (not able to edit).

An user tries to create an article for which a draft exists



- A — Users accessing the "create page" view will be informed that a draft exists, and required to publish/discard.

An user tries to create a draft for which an article exists



- d — Users are not allowed to create drafts for existing articles.

Prosopagnosia

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Prosopagnosia (Greek: "prosopon" = "face", "agnosia" = "not knowing"), also called face blindness, is a disorder of face perception where the ability to recognize faces is impaired, while other aspects of visual processing (e.g., object discrimination) and intellectual functioning (e.g., decision making) remain intact.

An unpublished draft for this article already exists. You need to publish or discard the draft before you can edit it as a regular article.
