

Handwritten text in an ancient script, likely Burmese, inscribed on a long, narrow strip of palm-leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately three horizontal lines across the length of the leaf. The characters are finely etched into the surface of the dried leaf. The script appears to be a form of Pagan or early Burmese script, possibly related to the Mon or Khmer scripts. The leaf shows signs of age, including some discoloration and a small hole near the top left corner.

Handwritten text on a small, rectangular piece of paper or parchment attached to the right end of the palm-leaf manuscript. The text is also in an ancient script, matching the main leaf. The paper is slightly aged and has a small hole at the bottom right corner, which might have been used for binding or hanging. The text is written in a similar style to the main leaf, with clear, legible characters.
