Dear Mr. Griffel, I was referred to you by Joseph L. Bennett, the author of Boilermaker Music Makers published in 1986. I wrote to Mr. Bennett to ask permission to use some of the images in his book for a Wikipedia article that I am writing about Albert P. Stewart. Joseph said that I needed to ask you about this. I wanted to use 5-6 of the images from the book.

I have written a rough draft of the article, and I can provide a link for you to look it over if you would like.

I am tangentially related to Al Stewart. My aunt Joanna was his daughter. I came across Al Stewart's name when I wrote a Wikipedia article about the Ouabache sculpture in Lafayette. Stewart was in charge of the board that commissioned the sculpture and my uncle Richard McNeely was the artist. I was surprised that such an accomplished figure as Al Stewart lacked a Wikipedia page, and I decided to try to write one.

Please let me know if use of the images is okay. Thanks!

Michael McNeely
