INTRODUCTION

I.—SOURCES OF INFORMATION.

NO official authority whatever attaches to this work, or to any statement in it. The Editor has received the most kind and valuable assistance from all those Indian officials who have charge of matters relating to Dignities and Titles; but he is alone responsible for the contents of The Golden Book of India. Much of the information has been derived from the Princes, Noblemen, and Gentlemen whose names are included herein. To each one has been sent, so far as it has been found possible, a prospectus of this work, with a request for information, and with specimens of the form in which that information is desired; and in every case in which that appeal has been responded to, the fullest consideration has been given to the particulars submitted for insertion. It is hoped that, now the work in its experimental form is once before the Indian public, all those who are interested in its accuracy will send their suggestions, whether for additions, or for alterations or corrections, direct to the Editor, care of Messrs. Macmillan and Co., 29 Bedford Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C. It will readily be understood that in a work of such magnitude, involving reference to some thousands of persons, individual correspondence must be impossible; and consequently the Editor, while assuring those who favour him with their communications that these shall receive the most careful attention, hopes that he will be forgiven if he is unable to reply separately to each one.

The task of compiling this much-needed work has been of far greater difficulty than was expected. Some of the difficulty has been due to its novelty; for among those who have sent information regarding themselves and their families, there has naturally been little uniformity in method or scale. This difficulty will, it is anticipated, soon disappear. But the chief difficulty has been owing to the fact that India stands alone among civilised nations in possessing no special Department, College, or Chancery, charged with the duty—a very necessary duty from the point of view alike of expediency and of national dignity—of recording and certifying national honours and titles, of regulating their conferment, and of controlling their devolution where hereditary. The Foreign Department of the Government of India, being that Department which has charge of the relations of the Paramount Power with the Feudatory States and their Rulers, naturally and properly directs so much of this business of State as cannot by any possibility be shirked. But the question of the very necessary establishment of a Heralds' College, or a Chancery of Dignities, has only once (in 1877) been seriously faced—and then its solution was postponed.

The results of this neglect are already deplorable, and must ere long receive the attention of the Government of India. Indian titles are officially defined to be, either by grant from Government, i.e. a new creation by Her Imperial Majesty the Queen Empress through her representative; or "by descent, or by well-established usage." The Government alone can be the judge of the validity of claims, and of their relative strength, in the case of titles acquired by "descent" or by "well-established usage." And it is clear that this Royal Prerogative, to be properly used, ought to be exercised openly and publicly through the medium of a regular College or Chancery. It is, of course, true that the Foreign Department possesses a mass of more or less confidential information, and thoroughly efficient machinery, for deciding all questions of the kind, when such questions are submitted to, or pressed upon, the notice of Government. But when that is not the case, there seems to be no public authority or accessible record for any of the ordinary Indian titles, or for the genealogy of the families holding hereditary titles. Much confusion has already arisen from this, and more is likely to arise. In the Lower Provinces of Bengal alone, there are at this moment some hundreds of families possessing, and not uncommonly using, titles derived from extinct dynasties or from common repute, yet not hitherto recognised formally by the British Government; and these, sometimes justly, but more frequently perhaps unjustly, are in this way placed in a false and invidious position. The State regulation of all these matters, in a plain and straightforward manner, would undoubtedly be hailed with pleasure in India by princes and people alike.

In equal uncertainty is left, in many cases, the position of the descendants of ancient Indian royal and noble families; as also that of the Nobles of Feudatory States, the subjects of ruling and mediatised princes.

Then, too, there is endless confusion in the banners, badges, and devices that are borne, either by the custom of the country or by personal assumption, by various families and individuals. Tod's learned work on *The Annals of Rājsthān*¹ taught us long ago that badges and family emblems were as characteristic of Rájput chivalry as of the feudalism of Europe—appealing to similar sentiments, and similarly useful for historical and genealogical purposes. To this day hundreds of Chiefs and country gentlemen in Rájputána, in Central India, in Káthiáwár, and in many other parts, use their ancestral devices in their seals or accompanying their signature. Thus every petty Thákur (as well as Chiefs of higher degree), from Oudh in the East to the Western Sea, who can trace his descent from the proud Chauhán clan of Rájputs that gave the last Hindu Emperors to Delhi and Ajmir, still claims his ancestral right to the Chauhán santak, or device on seal and for signature, called the “Chakra” (see the drawing at p. 100). Figures of Hanumán (the Monkey God), of the Sacred Peacock, and of the Sacred Garur or Eagle, take the place, in the heraldry of the East, of the lions, the leopards, and the fleur-de-lys of the more elaborate and artificial coat-armour of the West. The kulcha, or “lucky chapáti” (biscuit), with the silver quatrefoils, on the green flag of the Nizám, the red oriflamme of the “Sun of the Hindus” (the Maharáná of Udaipur), the falcon of Márwár, the Gangetic dolphin of Darbhanga, the white and green stripes of the late Sir Salar Jang, and many other hereditary devices and emblems, have long been and still are familiar in India. But there seems to be no authority by whom the use of such emblems is directed or controlled; nor has the Government of India ever had the prudence to avail itself of the rich store of revenue that might easily, and indeed (from the historical and genealogical point of view) usefully, be raised from the fees and duties to be derived from the extended use of armorial bearings. It is hoped that the publication of this work may have some influence in inducing the Government of India to establish that very necessary institution, a Heralds’ College or Chancery of Dignities, in connection with its Political Department—or, perhaps better, to petition Her Majesty to attach a duly-constituted Indian Department to the College of Arms in London under the Garter King of Arms.

In the existing circumstances—it may be hoped only temporarily existing—described above, the Editor has felt constrained, very reluctantly in many cases, to decline to insert the particulars of any titles that have not been more or less formally recognised by the Government of India, except in about half a dozen very special cases, where there could not by any possibility be any doubt of the authenticity of the claims. For instance, in the case of the Raikat of Baikanthpur, in the district of Jalpaiguri, Bengal, the title appears to be unique in India—and there can be no doubt whatever that it has been borne by something like twenty generations of hereditary kinsmen of the Rájás of Kuch Behar; some account of this singularly interesting title has been inserted, though there is some reason to doubt whether it appears in any the Rajpoot tribes can be traced to a period anterior to the war of Troy. In the Mahá-bharat, or Great War, twelve hundred years before Christ, we find the hero Bheesama exulting over his trophy, the banner of Arjoona, its field adorned with the figure of the Indian Hanumán. These emblems had a religious reference amongst the Hindus, and were taken from their mythology, the origin of all devices.”—Annals of Rájásthán, vol. i. pp. 123, official list. And so, too, with a few well-known courtesy titles (see § 8 of this Introduction).

2.—METHOD OF ARRANGEMENT.

After much thought and deliberation, it has been determined that, at least for this first edition of The Golden Book—which in many respects must necessarily have something of the nature of an experiment—the arrangement of the work shall be simply alphabetical. In future editions it is possible that the volume may be divided into separate parts, distinguishing between Ruling Princes on the one hand, and Dignitaries and Titled Personages of British India on the other—or possibly distinguishing between Territorial Titles and others. But the difficulties of classification would be exceedingly great in a large number of cases, and any attempt in that direction would certainly greatly delay the appearance of the work. And, after all, even the most careful and accurate classification would, for practical purposes, be of very little use; for, as the next section of this Introduction will show, there is at present no strict gradation of titles—and of some titles the relative values, strange as this may seem, are different in different parts of India.

In India itself, the relative social importance of the various Dignitaries included in this work is well known, and any attempt further closely to define precedence would be an invidious as well as unnecessary task.

For European readers it may perhaps be sufficient to give very rough and general analogies from the European system. For instance, the relative position of such potentates as the Nizám of the Deccan or the Mahárájá of Mysore to the Indian Empire may not unfitly be compared with that of the King of Saxony to the German Empire. The hereditary Mahárájás, Rájás, and Nawábs of British India occupy a position very similar to that of the British Peerage at home; while the holders of the lower titles may be compared with our Knights Bachelors, and the Knights and Companions of the Military Orders. Among the ruling chiefs, their comparative position and importance may also be estimated by observing the area and population of their respective States, as compared with the smaller Kingdoms and Principalities of Central Europe.

3.—INDIAN TITLES: GENERAL.

A list of one hundred and ninety-six different titles known to the Government of India has been compiled in the Indian Foreign Office. Even this long list can hardly be regarded as exhaustive, for it does not include many dynastic appellations which have come to be regarded in the light of titles, such as Gaekwád, the dynastic name of the Mahárájás of Baroda; Sindhia, that of the Mahárájás of Gwalior; Holkar, that of the Mahárájás of Indore. Nor does it include such titles as that of Yuvaráj or Jubaráj (Youthful Rájá), often applied (as lately in Manipur) to the heir to the Ráj. And it is of course exclusive of the Military Orders of Knighthood.

The majority of these titles are Hindu (derived chiefly from the Sanskrit language), or Muhammadan (derived chiefly from the Persian). The Burmese titles, though lengthy, are few in number; while still fewer are Arakanese (or Magh), Thibetan, Afghan, Baluch, Somáli, etc. Two distinguished Parsi families have received the English title of Baronet; while one Madras family, the descendants of the old Nawábs of the Carnatic, has the English title of "Prince of Arcot," called also "Amir-i-Arcot." The title of Prince is also often given by courtesy as the English rendering of the title of "Sháh-záda," conferred by Her Majesty the Empress on certain descendants of the Tippu dynasty of Mysore, of the old kings of Oudh, and of former Amirs of Afghanistan.

Some Indian titles are personal; others have been recognised by Her Majesty as hereditary. It is intended in this work to distinguish those which are hereditary from those which are personal.

In the list of one hundred and ninety-six titles mentioned above (which is given below, in section II of this Introduction, with a glossary of their meanings where known), some are specific titles, analogous to the English "Duke," "Earl," etc.; such are Mahárájá, Rájá, Nawáb. Some are descriptive titles, somewhat analogous to the "Defender of the Faith" borne by our Gracious Sovereign; such are Shamsher Jang ("The Sword of War"), a title borne by His Highness the Mahárájá of Travancore, and Fath Jang, one of the many titles borne by His Highness the Nizám of the Deccan. Titles of the latter form are generally confined to a single personage or dynasty; but a few are common to more than one State, as Lokendra ("Protector of the World"), borne by the Chiefs of Dholpur and Dattia.

4.—INDIAN TITLES: RULING CHIEFS.

The normal or typical title of Chiefs or Nobles of Hindu descent is Rájá (in the feminine Ráni), or some of its numerous kindred forms. Some of the latter are Rání, Rao, Ráwal, Ráwat, Rai, Raikwár, Raikbár, Raiyat. To these is added, to indicate excess of rank, the prefix Mahá ("Great"), as in Mahárájá, Mahárání, Maháráo, Maháráj-Rání, etc. The affix Bahádúr ("Brave," "The Hero") is very commonly added (as an extra honorific) to all Indian titles, Muhammadan as well as Hindu, and is placed at the end of the name, much like the English "Esquire." Saheb is a somewhat similar affix, and is very commonly used as a courteous form of address; when used as the supplement of a title it indicates a rank somewhat less than Bahádúr;—thus Rao Bahádúr and Khán Bahádúr are titles usually of rather more consideration than Rao Saheb or Khán Saheb. Thákúr is also a frequently-used Hindu title. Some important feudatory Chiefs bear no other title, but it usually is of less consideration than Rájá.

Díván and Sardár are titles very similar in character to that of Thákúr; but they are common to Hindus and Muhammadans.

The normal or typical title of a Chief or Noble of Muhammadan descent is Nawáb (with Begam as its feminine form); usually with the honorific suffix of Bahádur, and in forms of courteous address with that of Sahib. The title of Sháhzáda ("King's Son") is given to some descendants of the Tippu dynasty of Mysore, to some descendants of former Amirs of Kábul, and to some descendants of the old Kings of Oudh. Other Muhammadan titles—sometimes equivalent in consideration to Nawáb, but not always—are Wali, Sultán, Amir, Mir, Mirza, Mián, Khán; also Sardár and Diwán, which are common to Hindus and Muhammadans.

Among the Ruling Chiefs there are some exceptional titles, due sometimes to differences of language, sometimes to other known causes, and sometimes of unknown origin. The first and greatest of all the Princes of the Empire is always known as the Nizám of the Deccan—a relic of the time when His Highness's ancestors were mediatised kings under the Emperor of Delhi. The title, though implying in itself fealty to an Imperial authority, is one of the highest dignity, and can hardly be translated by any European title less august than "king"; it is therefore a suitable title for the first mediatised prince under the Indian Empire, charged with the absolute rule over an area more than twice as large as that of Bavaria and Saxony combined, and a population greater than that of the two kingdoms named.

Holkar and Sindhia are rather of the nature of dynastic names than of titles; and the Gaekwár (the title of one of the greatest of the Ruling Chiefs) is of a similar nature, having been originally a caste name; and all these three are relics of the Mahratta Empire.

Among the exceptional titles due to difference of language may be noticed that of Jám, which is of Sindhi or Baluch origin; there are two Jáms of ruling rank in Káthiáwár, and one in Baluchistán. The Ruler of Spiti, an outlying Himalayan principality in the Punjab, is known as the Nono of Spiti—"Nono" being a Thibetan form. One of the Assamese Rájás is known as "the Bohmong"; another simply as "the Mong Rájá." Some of the Madras Chiefs have peculiar titles of local origin. Thus, the Mahárájá of Calicut bears the historic title of "the Zamorin"—probably a local corruption of the Malayalam Samundri, or "sea-king." The Mahárájá of Pudukotta is known as "the Tondiman"; and some other Madras Rájás are called "the Valiya Rájá." Nine Feudatories (eight in the Bombay Presidency and one at Muscat in Arabia) bear the title of Sultán. The descendants of the ancient chiefs of Sind are called Mirs; the Chief of Afghanistan is called Amir. The Chief of Kalát in Baluchistán is both a Mir and a Wali, and has been created (like the Amir of Afghanistan) a Grand Commander of the Star of India. In the Aden territory, which is subordinate to the Bombay Government, some of the chiefs bear the title of Giráf, which is of Somáli origin; others are known by the Arabic titles of Sultán, Amir, and Shaikh. Some of the heads of Hindu religious bodies are hereditary feudal chiefs; and their title is Mahant.

All, or most of the titles mentioned above, though recognised by the British Government, have come down to us from earlier times. Her Majesty has, in a few very special cases, authorised a change of title among the Feudatories; as, for instance, when a Thákur Saheb has been authorised to use the higher title of Mahárájá Bahádur. But, generally speaking, when it is wished to confer honour on a ruling prince, it is conferred, not by a change in the ancient title of chiefship, but by appointment to one or other of the classes of the Orders of the Star of India or the Indian Empire—by the addition of descriptive titles—by an increase in the number of guns authorised for the salute, such increase being usually a personal one—or by the conferment of Honorary military rank in the Imperial army.

5.—TITLES RECOGNISED, AND REGULARLY CONFERRED BY HER MAJESTY THROUGH THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

In British India there is now a well-established order and gradation of nobility; in which creations and promotions are made by Her Gracious Majesty's representative, the Viceroy, just as similar creations and promotions are made in England. In the higher ranks of this nobility, an additional step or grade in each rank is made by the custom, unknown as yet in England, of making the creation or promotion in some cases personal, in others hereditary. But no rank below that of Rájá for Hindus, or Nawáb for Muhammadans, is now created hereditary.

Rai (or Rao in Southern and Western India) for Hindus, and Khán for Muhammadans, are the first or least considerable titles conferred by the British Government. These, with or without the affix of Saheb, which adds to the dignity, are very commonly ex officio titles, held by the subordinate officers of civil departments. Next above Rai Saheb, Rao Saheb, or Khán Saheb comes the title Rai Bahádur, Rao Bahádur, or Khán Bahádur; and this is the title—though it has sometimes also been made simply an ex officio title—which is usually first conferred on Indian gentlemen who have distinguished themselves by their munificence, by their patriotism, or in any other way. Rai Bahádur is commonly used as the Hindu title in the Bengal Presidency, Rao Bahádur as that in the west and south of India, and Khán Bahádur for Muhammadans and Parsis; and this rank seems exactly analogous to that of Knight Bachelor in England.

Above this rank is the title of Rájá (with the feminine Ráni) for Hindus, Nawáb (with the feminine Begam) for Muhammadans; and this may be hereditary or personal—a remark which applies to all the higher ranks. Next higher is a Rájá Bahádur, or a Nawáb Bahádur. Higher again, for Hindus, is the title of Mahárájá, and above that is Mahárájá Bahádur. It is one of the many anomalies of the Indian system as at present existing, that there do not seem to be any Muhammadan analogies to these last two highest Hindu titles, so that a Nawáb Bahádur may be the equal either of a Rájá Bahádur, or of a Mahárájá Bahádur, according to circumstance. These seem to be very analogous to the various steps in the British Peerage.

Parsis share with Muhammadans their lower titles. But where they have attained to higher rank than Khán Bahádur, it has been indicated by appointment to one of the Military Orders, or by the conferment of British Knighthood, or (in two cases) by a British Baronetcy.

The ordinary sequence of rank, then, in the aristocracy of British India, is indicated by the subjoined tables:—

Hindus.	Muhammadans.
Maharájá Bahádur.	Nawáb Bahádur.
Maharájá.	Nawáb.
Rájá Bahádur.	Khán Bahádur.
Rájá.	Khán Saheb.
Rai (or Rao) Bahádur.	Khán.
Rai (or Rao) Saheb.
Rai (or Rao).

The eldest son of a Maharájá or Rájá is called a Maharájkumár (or Maharájkunwár), or Rájkumár (or Rájkunwár), or simply Kumár (or Kunwár); and these titles have in some cases been formally conferred by the Government. Nawábzâda, or Mián, is the title given to the sons of Nawábs.

Among the Barons of the Punjab there is a remarkable uniformity of title; they are nearly all styled Sardár or Sardár Bahádur—and their sons are often styled Mián, though this is also an independent title, as is Diván also, in the Punjab. In Oudh and in the Central Provinces, on the other hand, there is the greatest diversity in the form of the territorial titles—Thákur being the commonest title, but Rai is also frequent (and of far higher dignity than it seems to bear in some other Provinces), and so are Rájá, Diván, and Rao.

6.—BURMESE TITLES.

The chiefs of the Shan and other tribes on the frontiers of Burma have the titles (equivalent to Rájá or Thákur, or other Indian titles) either of Sawbwa, or Myosa, or Ngwegunhmu.

But the regular Burmese titles ordinarily conferred by the British Government are these:—

(1) Ahmúdan gaung Tazeik-ya Min (meaning “Recipient of a Medal for Good Service”), indicated by the letters A.T.M. after the name—much as the Companionship of the Bath in England is indicated by the letters C.B.

(2) Kyet Thaye zaung shwe Salwe ya Min (meaning “Recipient of the Gold Chain of Honour”), indicated by the letters K.S.M. after the name.

(3) Thuye-gaung Ngweda ya Min (meaning “Recipient of the Silver Sword for Bravery”), indicated by the letters T.D.M. after the name.

7.—TITLES AS REWARDS FOR LEARNING.

It remains to notice two Imperial titles of ancient origin, as indicating exceptional distinction in learning, that were revived on the auspicious occasion of Her Majesty's Jubilee. These are Mahámahopádhyáya for Hindus, and Shams-ul-Ulama for Muhammadans. It is noteworthy, as showing a wise regard for that reverence which great erudition has always commanded in the East, that holders of these titles, ranking equally among themselves according to date of creation, take rank directly after titular Rájás and Nawábs; and thus the dignity is rendered somewhat analogous to the high dignity of a Privy Councillor in the United Kingdom.

8.—COURTESY TITLES.

There are many titles habitually used in India—and a few have been admitted into this work—that are not substantive titles in the strictest sense of the term, but may best be described as courtesy titles. Of this nature is the title of "Prince" in most cases—though not in the case of the Prince of Arcot, who enjoys a title specially conferred by the Sovereign. The title of "His Highness," conferred or recognised by the Queen Empress, belongs as of right only to a limited number of the Feudatory Chiefs, and to a few of the Nobles of British India; but it is very generally conceded, as a matter of courtesy, to most of the Feudatory Chiefs and the greater Territorial Nobles. The title of "His Excellency" has been specially granted to one or two Chiefs; it is also commonly used, as a matter of courtesy, in addressing the responsible Ministers of the chief Feudatory States.

The owners of some great Zamindáris or estates, especially in Madras, are sometimes styled Rájá in common parlance, even when they have not received that title from the Sovereign. But there seems to be no authority for this; nor—so far as is known to the Editor, and with the few exceptions above noted—is any name inserted in this work as that of a Rájá, or as holding a similar title, unless recognised by the Government of India.

Immemorial usage throughout India has conferred well-recognised courtesy titles on the heirs-apparent of the greater titles; and in some cases on the second, third, fourth, and younger sons. There is at least one Rájá whose eldest son bears the courtesy title of Kunwár, the second son that of Díván, the third that of Thákur, the fourth that of Lál, and the fifth and younger sons that of Bábu. It may here be noted that, in common use in Bengal, the title of Bábu has degenerated—like the French Monsieur and the English Esquire—into a mere form of address; but it belongs of right only to a very limited class—and particularly to the sons, not otherwise titled, of the greater titled personages. In Orissa, Chota Nágpur, and Central India, the eldest son of a Rájá or Thákur frequently bears the title of Tikait or Tikaildo; and sometimes (but rarely) the second son bears the title of Pothait or Pothaildo, and the third that of Lál. But in most, probably in all, cases, the younger sons are styled Bábu. In some of the Orissa Tributary Maháls, and in Manipur and in Hill Tipperah and elsewhere, the heir-apparent is styled Jubaráj or Yuvaráj. In some other parts he is called Diwán; while in the Punjab the heir-apparent of a territorial Sardár is sometimes also called Sardár, but more commonly he bears the title of Mián.

The curious Marumakkatayam law of inheritance which prevails in Malabar and the extreme south of India—under which the succession is to the offspring of the female members of the family, among whom the next eldest to the Rájá is the heir-apparent—makes it very fitting that the rank of an heir-apparent, in those parts of India, should be marked by special titles. The heir-apparent to His Highness the Mahárájá of Travancore is often called by Europeans the First Prince of Travancore; but his proper courtesy title is “the Elaya Rájá.” The same title is borne by the heir-apparent to His Highness the Mahárájá of Cochín. The heir-apparent to the Zamorin of Calicut bears, by courtesy, the interesting title of “The Eralpad.” It will be seen that, under the Marumakkatayam law, no son of a Rájá can ever be in the line of succession; these receive the courtesy title of Achchhan.

The colloquial use of the dynastic titles of Sindhia and Holkar may be illustrated by a somewhat similar Scottish usage, by which the actual Chief or Laird is colloquially known by the name of his estate. Mr. Cameron becomes “Lochiel” the moment he succeeds to the estate of that name; so one of these young Princes becomes “Sindhia” the moment he succeeds to the Gwalior Ráj, and the other becomes “Holkar” the moment he succeeds to the Indore Ráj—the junior members of these ruling Houses using the title as their family name.

9.—ARMORIAL BEARINGS.

The Editor has already pointed out, in an earlier section of this Introduction, the need that exists for the services of an Indian King of Arms and an Indian Herald's College. Such an institution, provided due regard were paid to Indian sentiments and prejudices, would be immensely popular among the Chiefs and notables of India; and a very considerable revenue might yearly be raised, with the greatest goodwill on the part of those who would pay it, from a moderate duty, similar to the one levied in the United Kingdom, on the authorised use of hereditary cognisances or armorial bearings. At present an Indian noble is justly proud of a cognisance that has been honourably borne for centuries by his ancestors, and would prefer to use it with full legal authority; but it is doubtful whether he can do so at all, except by a most difficult and most unusual application to the Earl Marshal of England and the Garter King of Arms in London, for an authorised grant. So, too, with more modern adoptions of coat-armour; these have been authorised by the College of Arms in London for the two Indian Baronets, and perhaps for a few more—but as a rule the modus operandi is unknown.

Wherever the Editor has been able to obtain a sketch of the cognisance or device usually used by any Chief—or that has been emblazoned on his banner, on such public occasions as the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India—a copy has been given in this work in the actual form used, without regard to the question of its being duly authorised by the College of Arms, or of its being in accordance with the laws of European heraldry. It is hoped that in a future edition this laxity will not be necessary, and that steps will in the meantime have been taken to regulate the devolution of ancient cognisances, and the assumption of new ones. It is stated that some of the Feudatory States have placed coats of arms on the postage stamps in use within their limits; and it is quite clear that the use of such emblems is rapidly becoming common.

In the case of all those Chiefs whose banners were displayed at the Imperial Assemblage of 1st January 1877, i.e. all the Chiefs of highest rank—the emblems then used were used “by authority”; and copies of some of them have been obtained for this work. The editor will be glad to be favoured with copies of others, sent through Messrs. Macmillan and Co.; and will give his best consideration to them, though he must not be taken to pledge himself to the insertion of any.

10.—CEREMONIES OBSERVED ON THE INSTALLATION OF AN INDIAN NOBLE.

The Warrant conferring (or authorising the hereditary succession to) a title is called a sanad—sometimes spelt “sunnud.” It is signed, on behalf of Her Majesty the Empress, by His Excellency the Viceroy; and bears the Official Seal of the Empire.

It is usual—though there appears to be no invariable rule—for the local representative of Her Majesty, on the occasion of the installation or succession of a Chief or Noble, to present him with a khilat, and receive from him a nazar in return. “Khilat” literally means “a Dress of Honour.” It usually consists of pieces of cloth not made up; but sometimes it consists of arms, jewels, or other valuables, without any article of attire, although in most cases a turban and shawl form part of the gift. Indeed, a complete khilat may include arms, or a horse, or an elephant, or all of these together. The nazar (sometimes spelt nuzzur) must be of corresponding value to the khilat.

In the case of a Mahārājā Bahādur, or other noble of that rank, the khilat and sanad are presented, in full Darbār, by the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or other Chief Civil Officer of the Province; or if they are unable to be present, by the Commissioner of the Division at the sudder-station (or capital).

To the Darbār are invited all the civil and military officers available, also all the Indian notables and gentry of the neighbourhood.

The chair of the Presiding Officer is placed in the middle, and that of the nobleman to be installed on his right. The brother, son, and any of the relatives of the nobleman who may be present, occupy places, according to their station, in the right-hand line.

The chairs for all the public functionaries are placed, according to their rank, on the left hand of the Presiding Officer's chair.

The local notables and gentry occupy chairs, also according to their rank, on the right hand of the Presiding Officer.

A company of soldiers is drawn up in front of the stairs, as a Guard of Honour.

On the arrival of the noble near the stairs, the Sarishtadar or Munshi of the Presiding Officer leads him to the audience. All functionaries, out of respect to him, rise from their chairs on the Chief's reaching the Presiding Officer; who then asks him to take his seat. All functionaries and Darbáris must have assembled and taken their seats before the Chief's arrival.

After a short conversation, the Presiding Officer orders his Munshi to take the Chief to an adjoining room, prepared previously for the purpose, where he is robed with the different parchas of the khilat except the pearl necklace. After this, he is again brought into the Darbár room, and stands in front of the Presiding Officer. The latter, rising from his seat with all the functionaries present, then ties the pearl necklace round the neck of the Chief.

The Presiding Officer then orders the Munshi to read out the sanad. During the reading of the sanad the Presiding Officer and the functionaries resume their seats, while the Chief and the local notables and gentry rise.

The Chief presents the usual nazarána of gold mohurs, and then all resume their seats.

After a short pause, the Presiding Officer orders atr and pán to be brought; and standing up, serves out the same, first to the newly-installed Chief, and then to all the Indian notables and gentry present—the Munshi bringing up each one in turn to receive the atr and pán.

They all then take their leave, and the ceremony is at an end.

The ceremony of the Installation of a Rájá Bahádur, or titled personage of lower rank than a Maharájá Bahádur, is very similar to the one described above. But the Guard of Honour is not so large, and it is not necessary that the Chief Civil Officer of the Province should be present. Also, the sarpech, pearl necklace, or whatever may compose the khilat, is handed by the Commissioner to the Collector or Assistant Collector of the district in which the Chief's estates are situated, and he requests him to invest the Chief with it.

A ceremonial similar to those described above is observed when a Knight Grand Commander, or a Knight Commander, or a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, or of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, is invested with the insignia of the Order by the representative of the Empress.

The Khán Bahádúr is a large landed proprietor in the district of Meerut, North-Western Provinces; and has been created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 21st May 1890.

Residence.—Meerut, North-Western Provinces.

ABDUL LATIF, C.I.E., Nawáb Bahádúr.

The Nawáb Bahádúr was born in March 1828. He traces his descent from the celebrated Generalissimo of Islam, Khalid Ibn Walid, entitled the "Sword of God," who died in the twenty-first year of the Hijrah. Sháh Ain-ud-din of Baghdad was the first member of the family to settle in India. His descendant, Kazi Abdur Rasul, was made Kazi by the Emperor of Delhi, and sent to Faridpur in Bengal, where the family settled. A descendant, Kazi Fakir Muhammad, was a leading pleader of the Sadar Dáwání and Nizámat Adálat at Calcutta; and was a great oriental scholar, being the author of several works, of which the chief was the Persian Jámi-ut-Tawárikh or "Universal History." He was the father of the subject of the present notice; who entered the Government service in 1846, and after some service in the Educational Department in the Dacca College and the Calcutta Madrasa, became a Deputy Magistrate of the 24-Parganáas in 1849. Was appointed J.P. for Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, 1852. Acted for a short time as Police Magistrate of Calcutta, and has served three times as a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council. Has been a Member of the Board of Examiners since 1860; has also been Member of the Central Examination Committee. One of the Income-Tax Commissioners for Calcutta, 1861-65. Fellow of the Calcutta University, 1863. In 1867 received from Government a gold medal, and a set of the new edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica, with an autograph inscription by the Viceroy: "In recognition of his services in promoting native education, especially the education of those who like himself belong to the Muhammadan religion." In 1869 appointed one of the Commissioners to enquire into the state of the Calcutta and Hughli Madrasas, and received the thanks of Government for this work. Is a J.P. and Municipal Commissioner for Calcutta, and also for the suburbs; Member of the Board of Management of the Reformatory, and of the District School Committee, 24-Parganáas. ABUL KHAIR MUHAMMAD ABDUS-SUBHAN, MAULAVI,
*Khán Bahádur.

Son of Nawáb Abdul Latif Khán Bahádur, C.I.E., of Calcutta. Born 27th September 1857. Traces his descent from the celebrated Generalissimo of Islam, Khalid Ibn Walid, entitled the "Sword of God," who died in the twenty-first year of the Hijrah. Sháh Ain-ud-din of Baghdad, a most learned saint, came to India first. Kazi Abdur Rasul was made Kazi by the Court of Delhi and sent to Bengal, and the family settled in the Faridpur district. Kazi Fakir Muhammad, one of his descendants, was a leading pleader of the Sadar Diwáni and Nizámat Adálat at Calcutta, and was a great oriental scholar, being the author of several works, chief among which was an universal history in Persian, called the Jámi-ut-Tawárikh. His son is the Nawáb Abdul Latif Bahádur (q.v.), the father of the subject of the present notice. The Khán Bahádur was educated at the Calcutta Madrasa and the Presidency College, Calcutta, where he was a scholar, prizeman, and medallist. Received the title of "Khán Bahádur" with his appointment as a Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, on the 10th September 1884. Vested with first-class Magisterial powers, 1888; appointed Secretary of the District Committee of Public Instruction at Arrah (Sháhabad), 1886; a Member and Vice-Chairman of the District Board, Champarun, 1887; and a Municipal Commissioner of Patna, 1891. ACHAL SINGH (of Kaimahra), Rájá.

Born 15th June 1880, and succeeded Rájá Narpát Singh in 1886. The title is hereditary. The Rájá of Kaimahra represents the elder branch of the Janwar family, the Rájá of Oel representing the junior branch. They were originally Chauhán Kshatriyas in the service of the Sayyids of Piháni, having migrated from Rájputána in the 16th century. In the time of Sayyid Khurd, in 1553, their ancestor Jamni Khán obtained the post of Chaudhri of Kheri, with the right to levy a cess on all the lands in that Parganá. At a later period, when Than Singh was head of the family, he lived at Oel, with the title of Rai. Ajab Singh, who was the uncle and predecessor of the grandfather of the present Rájá, in 1837 was acknowledged as Rájá by the tribe, and the title was confirmed as hereditary in 1864. Sleeman states that the Rájá of Oel attempted to seize the estates of his kinsman, Jodha Singh of Kaimahra, grandfather of the present Rájá. The mother of the latter is the Ráni Ranikunwar.

Residence.—Kheri, Oudh.

The family originally came from Teherán; its founder, Sayyid Ikrám-ud-din Ahmad, accompanied the Emperor Humáyun on his return from Persia, took service under the Delhi emperors, and was appointed a mansabdár by the great Akbar. His great-grandson, Muhammad Taki, was in office under the Emperor Alamgir, and was succeeded by his son Sháh Kuli Khán. The grandson of the latter, Nawáb Zain-ul-Abdín Khán, came to Oudh, was appointed chakladár of Sarkárs Kora and Kara under the Oudh Government, and obtained extensive jágirs in the district of Fatehpur from the Nawáb Asaf-ud-daulá. He was succeeded by his son, Nawáb Bákar Ali Khán, who transferred his headquarters from Kora Jahánábád to Fatehpur. He was succeeded by his brother, Nawáb Sayyid Muhammad Khán, the father of the present Nawáb. The Nawáb has two sons—Ali Husain Khán and Bákar Husain Khán.

Residence.—Bákarganj, Fatehpur, North-Western Provinces.

AHMAD HUSAIN KHAN (of Pariáwan), SHAIKH,
*Khán Bahádur.

Born 1865; succeeded 1877. The title is hereditary, and was conferred 4th December 1877, on Dost Muhammad of Pariáwan, on account of his services in the Mutiny. The founder of the family is said to have been Háji Abdul Rauf, who migrated from Mecca to Ghazni, accompanied Shaháb-ud-din Ghorí when he invaded India, and obtained the estate of Pariáwan, consisting of eight villages, revenue free, for services rendered. Revenue was, however, assessed in the time of Nawáb Saádat Ali Khán. Shaikh Gulam added to the estate by purchases, and was succeeded by his son, Haji Shaikh Dost Muhammad (see above), who did good service in the Mutiny, went on pilgrimage to Mecca, and died at Medina. Succeeded by his son, the present Khán Bahádur, who is an Honorary Magistrate. He has issue, two daughters.

AHMAD SHAH SAYYID (of Sardhana), Nawáb.

Born 1st January 1835; succeeded in 1882. The family are Muswi or Mashadi Sayyids, descended from Hayat Ali Musa Raza, and originally residing at Paghman near Kábul. On account of services rendered to Alexander Barnes in his Kábul mission, and subsequently to the English in their retreat from Kábul, they were expelled from Kábul and settled at Sardhana. At the time of the Mutiny, the head of the family, Sayyid Muhammad Ján Fishan, Khán Saheb, took the side of the Government at once. When the Mutiny occurred at Meerut, he raised a body of horse, consisting of his followers and dependents, and officered by himself and his relatives; accompanied General Wilson's force to the Hindan; was present in both actions, and thence to Delhi, where he remained with the headquarters camp till the city was taken, when his men were employed to keep order in Delhi. For these eminent services the title of Nawáb, with a suitable khilat, was conferred on him. And each of his successors have received the title of Nawáb for life on succeeding to the estates.

Residence.—Sardhana, North-Western Provinces.

AHMAD-ULLA KHAN, Nawáb.

Born 16th December 1827. The title was conferred on 26th February 1885. The family claims descent from the Nawáb Dádan Khán, a Governor of the Punjab. One of its most illustrious ancestors was Nawáb Muhammad Khán, who, on account of his loyal services, received the title of Khairandesh Khán from the Emperor Alamgir. The Nawáb Ahmad-ulla Khán served the British Government for twenty-eight years as a Patrol in the Customs Department, and retired on pension in 1877—having distinguished himself for his fidelity during the Mutiny, when he was wounded and twice robbed by the rebels. He is an Honorary Magistrate of the first class, and Vice-President of the Meerut Municipal and District Boards; in which capacity he has been distinguished for his public spirit.

Residence.—Meerut, North-Western Provinces.

AHMAD-UN-NISA BEGAM SAHIBA, Nawáb.

AKALKOT, SHAHAJI MALOJI, alias BABA SAHEB RAJE BHONSLE, Rájá of
A Ruling Chief.

Rao Saheb Mehrbán Sháhaji Maloji Raje Bhonsle, alias Baba Saheb, is the son of Maloji Raje; born 1867. Is a descendant of the Bhonsle family. Educated at Rájárám College, Kolhápur. Married, 1881, Laxumbai Saheb, daughter of Dhaibar Killedar of Baroda, and grand-daughter of His Highness the late Mahárájá Khanderao Bahádur Gaekwár of Baroda. Has two daughters, Guzra Raje and Putala Raje, aged six and three respectively. His accession took place in 1870; but being a minor the management of the State was in the hands of the British Government till 1891, when the administration of the State was made over to him. His step-grandmother is the Lady Kamaljabai Saheb, widow of Sháhaji Raje II., alias Appa Saheb. His nearest relation is his second cousin, Tulaji Raje Bhonsle, son of the late Futtahsing, uncle to the late Maloji Rájá. Sháhaji Maloji, Sambhaji Tulzaji, and Bhavanji Raje of Kurla are the great-grandsons of the late Tulzaji, brother of Futtahsing II. The founder of the family was Ranoji, a son of Sayaji Lokhanday Patel of Parud in the Sewari Parganá of the province of Aurangabad, who, without being formally adopted, was taken by Sivaji, better known as Shao Rájá (the son of Sambhaji and grandson of the great Sivaji), into his family, and had the family surname of Bhonsle of the Rájás of Satara conferred upon him under the following circumstances: After the death of the Emperor Aurangzeb, Shao Rájá was released from captivity by the Emperor Bahádur Shah. He was on his return to the Deccan, and had encamped at Parud, when he was attacked by Sayaji Patel, who appears to have been a partisan of the famous Tarabai (widow of Rajaram, who had assumed the reins of government). Sayaji was defeated and was killed in the fight. His widow took her three little boys and threw herself at the feet of the Rájá, imploring his forgiveness and his protection. The Rájá was moved with compassion, and being naturally of a kind-hearted disposition conceived the idea of taking care of the eldest of the children. He told the mother that if she would give up the boy, who was under ten years of age, he would provide for him, and she gladly gave her consent. Ranoji was a good-looking lad, and gained the favour of the Rájá. It happened that as the Rájá continued his march towards Satara some resistance was offered by the Bhils on the road, and it was necessary to disperse them. The nominal command of the detachment employed on this occasion was given to the boy. The Bhils were defeated and dispersed, and the Rájá was so well pleased with this fortunate omen of the child's future career that he changed his name to Futtahsing. Futtahsing grew in favour and remained with the Rájá at his Court at Satara. In 1710 the Rájá took him into his family and gave him the family surname of Bhonsle, and later conferred on him the Akalkot State as an hereditary jágir. Futtahsing died in the year 1760, and was succeeded by his adopted son Sháhaji Raje I., alias Baba Saheb, who in turn was succeeded by his elder son, Futtahsing II., alias Aba Saheb (the younger was Tulaji, who was granted the village of Kurla for maintenance). Futtahsing II. died in 1822, and was succeeded by his son Maloji Rájá I., alias Baba Saheb, who was succeeded by his son Sháhaji Raje II., alias Appa Saheb, born 1821, died 1857 (his younger brother was Futtahsing). Sháhaji Raje II. was succeeded by his son Maloji Rájá II., alias Buwa Saheb, born 1838, died 1870; succeeded by his son Sháhaji Raje III., alias Baba Saheb, the present chief. The area of the State is about 498 square miles, and its population is about 58,040, chiefly Hindus, though there are nearly 8000 Muhammadans. The Chief maintains a military force of 46 men and 7 guns.

Prime Minister of the Deccan.

Born in 1839. Is great-grandson of Mir Nizám-ud-din Khán, the second Nizám of the Deccan; and one of the three Premier Nobles of the Hyderabad State, known as the illustrious Shamsiya family. His Excellency's family name is Muhammad Mazahr-ud-din Khán, and his full titles are Rafath Jang, Bashir-ud-daulá, Umdat-ul-Mulk, Azam-ul-Umara, Amir-i-Akbar, Asmán Jáh Bahádur. The Begam Bashir-un-Nissa Sahiba, daughter of the second Nizám, was married to the Nawáb Tej Jang, Shams-ul-Umara, Amir-i-Kabir; and the sons of this royal marriage were the Nawáb Muhammad Sultán-ud-din Khán Sabkat Jang, Bashir-ul-Mulk (father of His Excellency), and the Nawáb Muhammad Rafi-ud-din Khán Umdat-ul-Mulk. The former died before his father. The latter succeeded to the titles of Shams-ul-Umara, Amir-i-Kabir; and in 1869, on the death of His Highness the Nizám Afzul-ud-daulá, became Co-Regent of Hyderabad with the late Sir Salar Jang, in consequence of the minority of His Highness the present Nizám. Under the Regency the present Prime Minister held the important office of Minister of Justice, as it was considered essential that at such a time that post should be occupied by one of the highest nobles of the State; and in 1875, when the late Sir Salar Jang was absent in Europe, His Excellency, in conjunction with another nobleman, acted as Prime Minister and Regent, and received the thanks of the Government of India for the skill and ability displayed in this exalted capacity. On subsequent occasions also he occasionally acted for the late Prime Minister during the absence of the latter from Hyderabad. With his brother he acted as the representative of his uncle, the then Co-Regent, on the occasion of the reception of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at Bombay; and he also accompanied His Highness the Nizám to the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in 1877, and received the Delhi Medal. In 1877 the Amir-i-Kabir died, and in 1883, on the death of Sir Salar Jang, the Nawáb became a member of the Council of Regency, and acted as administrator of the State during the visit to Calcutta of His Highness the Nizám and the two administrators later in the same year. In 1887 he was deputed by His Highness as his representative in London on the auspicious occasion of the Jubilee of Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign, and maintained the dignity of his illustrious kinsman's position, as First Prince of the Empire, with an ability and liberality that left nothing to be desired. His Excellency had the honour of being personally presented to Her Majesty the Empress at Windsor Castle. Before his return to the Deccan he was chosen by His Highness for the highest post in the State, that of Prime Minister; and in this great and arduous office, his conspicuous success has gained the hearty approval of His Highness, and the congratulations of the whole world. With the loyal and brotherly co-operation of his distinguished kinsman, His Excellency the Vikár-ul-Umara (also one of the three Premier Nobles of the State), and all the most able statesmen of Hyderabad, he has raised the government of His Highness the Nizám's territories to the highest state of efficiency and enlightenment. On the auspicious occasion of the celebration of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Majesty the Queen Empress in 1887, he was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire; and the speech of the British Resident, when investing him with the insignia on that occasion, bore ample testimony to the appreciation of the Imperial Government. Similar sentiments were expressed by the late Viceroy of India, Lord Dufferin, on the occasion of Sir Asmán Jáh's visit to Calcutta in 1888.

Sir Asmán Jáh, like his noble kinsman, the Vikár-ul-Umara, is famous for his unbounded hospitality, for his proficiency as a sportsman, and in other accomplishments of social life ; and both these noblemen, like their kinsman Sir Khurshid Jáh, K.C.I.E., have shared the fortune of their ancestor the Nawáb Tej Jang, Shams-ul-Umara, Amir-i-Kabir, in allying themselves by marriage with Princesses of the Royal House of Hyderabad.

Residences.—Bashir Bagh, Hyderabad ; Sarurnagar, Hyderabad ; Johánnuma, Hyderabad.

Married the daughter of His late Highness the Nawáb Muntazim-ul-Mulk, Mohsin-ud-daulá Faridun Jáh Sayyid Mansur Ali Khán Bahádur Nasrat Jang Nazim of Murshidabad; and has issue Mahi-ud-din Husain, born 1885; and Main-ud-din Husain, born 1887. Is descended from Sayyid Khán Dastur, a Persian follower of the Emperor Humáyun, distinguished for his bravery, who became Zamindár of Surjyapur, Purniah, in the Subah of Bengal. Succeeded by his son-in-law Sayyid Rai Khán, who obtained a farmán from the great Akbar Sháh, Emperor of Delhi; and Sayyid Rai Khán's son, Rájá Sayyid Rájá, obtained the title of Rájá from Sháh Shujá, Nazim of Bengal, in the year of the Hijrah 1052. After several generations one of his descendants, Rájá Sayyid Muhammad Jalál of Surjyapur, was defeated by the Nawáb Saulat Jang at his fort of Jalálgarh, as recorded in the Siyár-ul-Mutakharin. His grandson, Rájá Sayyid Faqr-ud-din Husain, was a distinguished Zamindár; he took the decennial settlement from the British Government. Succeeded by his son, Rájá Sayyid Dedar Husain; and the latter by his son, Rájá Sayyid Ináyat Husain (father of the present Nawáb), who rendered good service to Government both during the Mutinies and in the Bhutan war of 1864. The Nawáb Sayyid Ata Husain is an Honorary Magistrate of the Krishnaganj subdivision, a Member of the Central Committee of the Imperial Institute in India, and a Life-Member of Lady Dufferin's Fund.

Residence.—Khagra, Parganá Surjyapur, Purniah, Bengal.

ATA MUHAMMAD KHAN, KHAGWANI, Nawáb.

Is a descendant of the Khagwáni (Afghán) family, and was created a Nawáb in 1875. His father, a distinguished soldier named Gholám Sarwar Khán, accompanied Major Lumsden to Kandahár, and on his death the Nawáb Ata Muhammad Khán succeeded to the command of his troop. Was selected by General Nicholson, who summoned him from Bannu in 1857, to join his movable column; greatly distinguished himself in the subsequent campaigns, and on one occasion bravely saved the life of a British officer, Lieutenant Humphrey. The Nawáb was selected to succeed Nawáb Gholám Hasan Khán as the British representative at the Court of the Amir of Kábul. He has five sons—Ahmad Khán, Muhammad Khán, Muhammad Nawáz Khán, Mahmud Khán, and Hamid Khán.

Residence.—Dera Ismail Khán, Punjab.

ATHGARH, RAJA SRI KARAN BHAGIRATHI BIWARTA PATNAIK, *Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Rájá, who is a Hindu of Kayasth descent, was born about the year 1844, and succeeded to the gadi on the 8th February 1869. Descended from the Rájá Niladri Deo Barman, who founded this State in very early times by conquest; and twenty-seven generations have intervened between him and the present Rájá. The State is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, Bengal; its area is about 168 square miles, and its population (chiefly Hindus) is about 31,000. The Rájá maintains a military force of 341 men.

Residence.—Athgarh, Orissa, Bengal.

ATHMALIK, MAHARAJA MAHENDRA DEO SAWANT,

Mahārājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Mahārājā, who is a Hindu of Kshatriya descent, was born about the year 1848, and succeeded to the gadi on the 4th February 1877. This State is said to have been founded by one Pratáp Deo, who, with seven other brothers of the Rájá of Jaipur, came with their families on a pilgrimage to Puri. For some reason or other they had a quarrel with the Rájá of Puri, by whom two of the brothers were put to death. The remaining five brothers fled for their lives to the hills, and settled at Bonai, of which they took possession, and of which one of the brothers was made Rájá. The sister of this Rájá of Bonai married Balbhadra Bhanj, a brother of the Keunjhar Rájá, who, having plotted to dethrone his brother, was put to death by him. Balbhadra's wife fled to Bonai, and although the Rájá of Keunjhar sent ambassadors there to bring her back, Pratáp Deo refused to allow her to return, and went with her to Rámganj in Bod, where she gave birth to a son. At that time a Bráhman named Gobardhan Deo was Rájá of Bod, and as his only son was dead, he adopted Pratáp Deo's nephew as his son and heir. At this time a Rájá who was a Dom by caste was ruling on the north of the Mahánadi. Pratáp Deo defeated him, and becoming ruler of his dominions, founded a village and named it Pratáp-pur after himself. The elevated plain across the Handpagarh is, to the present day, renowned as the garh of the Dom Rájá; and a village called Pratáp-pur still exists near it. Pratáp Deo found a handa (metal top) in a tank which he was excavating there, and gave the place and the State the name of Handpa. In course of time one of the Chiefs who ruled after Pratáp Deo divided the State into eight subdivisions, and placed a Chief over each, with a view of bringing the aborigines into subjection. Hence the State changed its name from Handpa to Athmalik ("eight chiefs"). The State (which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals) has an area of 730 square miles. Its population, 21,774, is chiefly Hindu; but there are more than 5000 aboriginal hill-men. The Mahārājā has a military force of 360 men and 1 gun.

Residence.—Athmalik, Orissa, Bengal.

BACHITTAR SINGH (of Sháhahabá), Sardár.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Ambála, Punjab.

BADAN SINGH (of Malaudh), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardárs of Malaudh (like those of Bhadaur) being descendants of Phul, and therefore of the same stock with the Phulkian Chiefs of Patiála, Jind, and Nábhá. The family is Jat Sidhu, and conquered the district of Malaudh from the Afgháns of Maler Kotla in 1754. Sardár Badan Singh's father was Sardár Mit Singh, who, with his brother Fateh Singh, did good service during the war of 1845-46, supplying fifty horse-men, and himself fighting in person at the battles of Mudki and Firuzshahr. In 1857 he showed conspicuous loyalty, being always ready with men and money to assist the Government; he received as a reward the remission of a year's commutation money, while one-sixteenth of the whole sum was excused in perpetuity. In 1872, when Malaudh was attacked by the Kukas, Sardár Badan Singh was badly wounded by the rebels.

Residence.—Malaudh, Ludhiána, Punjab.

Born 4th October 1830. The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. The Rai Bahádur's ancestor held the office of Minister of Kumaon in the time of the Chand and Gurkhá Ráj.

Residence.—Kumaon, North-Western Provinces.

BAGHAL, RAJA DHYAN SINGH, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born about 1841; succeeded to the gadi 26th July 1878. Belongs to a Puar Rájput (Hindu) family, descended from Ujjab De, who came from Ujjain, and conquered Baghal at an unknown date. The State was overrun by the Gurkhas from Nepál between 1803 and 1815; but after their expulsion in the latter year, the Puar chief (about twenty-fifth in descent from Ujjab De) was recognised by Government. Kishan Singh, who had been raised to the rank of Rájá in 1875, died on 23rd July 1877, and was succeeded by his infant son, Rájá Moti Singh; but the latter also died on 12th October 1877, when the present Rájá, a collateral descendant of Ujjab De, succeeded. The area of the State (which is one of the Simla Hill States) is about 124 square miles; its population 20,633, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 150 infantry and 1 gun.

Residence.—Baghal, Punjab.

BAGHAL SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 24th May 1883.

Residence.—Sialkot, Punjab.

BAGHAT, RANA DALIP SINGH, Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1860; succeeded to the gadí on the 31st January 1862. Belongs to a Rájput family, the ancestor of whom came from Dorar Nagri in the Deccan, and acquired possession of the State by conquest. During the Gurkha wars (1803-15) the conduct of the then chief, Ráná Mohindar Singh, had been unfriendly; so on the expulsion of the Gurkhas, three-fourths of the Baghat State was sold to Patiála for Rs. 1,30,000 and the remaining fourth was granted to Ráná Mohindar Singh and his heirs. He died without issue on 11th July 1839, and the State was at first treated as lapsed; but in 1842 Lord Ellenborough restored it to Ráná Bije Singh, brother of Mohindar Singh. He died in January 1849, leaving no direct heir, and the State was at first again treated as lapsed; but in 1861 Lord Canning restored it, for good and loyal conduct, to Umaid Singh, a cousin of the late Ráná. But before the sanad conferring the grant could be prepared, Umaid Singh died, and his last request was that his son Dalip Singh might succeed him. In January 1862 a sanad was granted to Ráná Dalip Singh. The area of the State (which is one of the Simla Hill States) is about 60 square miles; its population 8339, chiefly Hindus. The Ráná maintains a military force of 25 soldiers.

Residence.—Baghat, Punjab.

BAGLI, THAKUR RAGHUNATH SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Thákur is descended from a Ráhtor Rájput family (Hindu). He was born 1860; and succeeded to the gadí in January 1869. The State is enclosed within that of Gwalior, so that its exact area is not known. Its population is 14,645, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Bagli, Indore, Central India.

BAHADUR ALI KHAN, Nawáb Bahádúr.

The Nawáb Bahádúr is the son of the Nawáb Amir Ali Khán, who was the grandson of His late Majesty Shujá-ud-daulá, King of Oudh.

The title was conferred on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

Residence.—Merwara.

BAHAWALPUR, HIS HIGHNESS RUKN-UD-DAULA NASRAT
JANG HAFIZ-UL-MULK MUKHLIS-UD-DAULA NAWAB
SIR SADIK MUHAMMAD KHAN BAHADUR, G.C.S.I.,
*Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born in 1862; succeeded to the gadi in 1866. Belongs to a Daudputra (Muhammadan) family, whose ancestor came from Sind about the middle of the 18th century. Muhammad Sadik Khán was Governor of Baháwalpur under the Sikh Government; and the chiefs of his clan retained virtual independence till his second son, the Nawáb Baháwal Khán I., reduced the whole tribe, and consolidated his power. By the treaties of Lahore between the British Government and the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, the latter was confined to the right bank of the Satlej; and thereby Baháwalpur was protected from the Sikhs. The Nawáb rendered faithful assistance to the Government in the first Afghan war; and during the siege of Multán the troops of Baháwal Khán III. co-operated with Sir Herbert Edwardes. Baháwal Khán III. was succeeded by his younger son, Saádat Yar Khán; but the latter was subsequently deposed by his elder brother, Háji Khán, who after his victory assumed the name of Fateh Muhammad Khán. He died in 1858, and was succeeded by his son, who assumed the name of Baháwal Khán IV. He had to face some serious rebellions, and died suddenly in 1866, leaving his son, the present Nawáb, a boy of only four years old, in a difficult and dangerous position. It was resolved, however, by the Paramount Power, that the young Nawáb should be supported; and during his minority the administration was placed in British hands, native officers being appointed, so that there might be no break in continuity of system on the Nawáb's coming of age. Since then vast improvements have been made in the irrigation system of the country, which depends upon inundation canals for the greater part of its cultivation. Existing works have been entirely remodelled, and new canals constructed in several parts of the territory, the result of which is that the revenues have nearly doubled. Courts of Justice have been established, under the general control of a Chief Court, presided over by three native gentlemen, and are highly popular. A system of Public Instruction, comprising primary, middle, and superior education, has been set on foot; a central jail has been built, and the prison system greatly improved. Three new towns have been founded. A stud farm for improving the breed of horses has been started, and the extensive jungles have been placed under the scientific supervision of a trained Forest Conservator. The area of the State is 17,285 square miles; its population is 573,494, chiefly Muhammadans, with 91,272 Hindus. His Highness the Nawáb Bahádur maintains a military force of 443 cavalry, 1352 infantry, and 11 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns. He was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, 16th November 1880.

Residences.—The Palace, Baháwalpur, Punjab; Baháwalpur House, Lahore.

BAI (INDORE), THAKUR MANRUP SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Thákur is descended from a Rájput (Hindu) family, and succeeded to the gadi in 1880.

Residence.—Bai, Indore, Central India.

BAIDYANATH PANDIT, Rájá.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1889.

Residence.—Cuttack, Bengal.

BAIKANTHA NATH DE, Kumár, Rájá Bahádúr.

The title was conferred on 1st January 1889.

Residence.—Balasor, Bengal.

BAIKANTHPUR, RAIKAT FANINDRA DEB, Raikat of.

This is one of those customary titles (of which there are many, especially in Bengal) which have never been officially recognised by Government, and which consequently must, for the present, be regarded as only courtesy titles. The family is said to be descended from a brother of the founder of the Kuch Behar Ráj; and the title "Raikat," which is of high antiquity, has been held to indicate that the early Raikats of Baikantipur were Prime Ministers and Commanders-in-Chief of the Kámrup kingdom, of which Kuch Behar was an important part. The present Raikat is stated to be the twentieth in succession who has inherited the title; and during the last Bhutan war the family rendered good service to Government.

Residence.—Baikantipur, Jalpaiguri, Bengal.

BAIKUNTA NARAYAN SINGH, Rájá.

This is one of the titles that appear never to have been formally recognised by Government. The Rájá is the Zamindár of Tundi in Mánbhum. The family claims to be of Surya Vansa Rájput descent, and to have come from Ajudhya. They have the following system of titles for the various members of the family of the Zamindár or proprietor of the Ráj. For the head of the family, Rájá; for his wife, Ráni.

1st son	Tikait.	1st son's 1st son	Thákur.
2nd son	Kumár.	„ „ 2nd son	Kumár.
3rd son	Thákur.	„ „ 3rd son	Nunu.
4th son	Nunu.
5th and younger sons	Bábu.

For a similar system prevailing in the Nawágarh family, see under Banwári Lál Singh, Rájá.

Residence.—Tundi, Mánbhum, Bengal.

BAISNI (of Khimsipur), Thakurani.

The title of Rao is hereditary in this lady's family.

Residence.—Farrukhabad, North-Western Provinces.

BAJANA, MALEK NASIB KHANJI DARIYA KHANJI,

Talukdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 14th May 1820; succeeded to the gadi 23rd April 1841. Descended from a family of Jat Musalmáns; is usually styled "Malek Shri." His son is named Jiwán Khán. The area of the State is 183 square miles; its population 15,877, partly Hindu, partly Muhammadan. The Malek Shri maintains a military force of 60 cavalry and 230 infantry.

Residence.—Bájána, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

BAKAR ALI KHAN, SAYYID, C.I.E.

Was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1883.

Residence.—

BAKAR MIRZA, Mirza Bahádur.

The Mirza Bahádur is a son of the Nawáb Muntáz-ud-daulá, who was a grandson of His late Majesty Muhammad Ali Sháh, King of Oudh.

Residence.—Oudh.

BAKASREI, Diwán, Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 21st June 1872.

Residence.—Hyderabad, Sind.

BAKSHI KHOMAN SINGH (of Indore), C.S.I.

Was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

Residence.—Indore, Central India.

BAKSHISH SINGH, SINDHANWALIA, Sardár.

The Sardár succeeded Sardár Shamsher Singh (who had adopted him as a scion of the same family, with the consent of Government) on the death of the latter in 1873. The Sindhánwália family, Jats of the Sánsi tribe, is the acknowledged head of all Sikh families between the Biás and the Indus; and is descended from the same stock as the late Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. The common ancestor, Budh Singh, had two sons, Chanda Singh and Jodh Singh; the latter was the forefather of the late Royal family of Lahore, while from the former descended Sardár Shamsher Singh and the Sindhánwália family. On the occasion of the rebellion of Diwán Mul Ráj, Sardár Shamsheer Singh remained faithful to the British Government, and in December 1846 he was appointed a member of the Council of Regency. On the final annexation of the Punjab his jágirs were continued to him for life, and in 1862 he was appointed an Honorary Magistrate, and was permitted to adopt the present Sardár, a large portion of his jágirs to descend in perpetuity, and the title to be hereditary.

Residence.—Rájá Sánsi, Amritsar, Punjab.

BAKSHISH SINGH, Kunwár.

The title is personal.

Residence.—Lahore, Punjab.

BAKHTAWAR SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

Is a Court Official of the Mewár State (Udaipur), Rájputána. Received the title as a personal distinction on 25th May 1892.

Residence.—Udaipur, Rájputána.

BAKHTGARH (Bhopáwar), THAKUR PARTAB SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Thákur was born in 1863, and succeeded to the gadi in 1869. He is descended from a Rájput (Hindu) family. The population of the State is 8258, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Bakhtgarh, Bhopáwar, Central India.

BAKHTIYAR SHAH, Prince.

The title is a courtesy one. His father, Prince Anwar Sháh, was a member of the Tippu family of Mysore, and grandson of Tippu Sultán.

Residence.—Calcutta.

BAL MUKAND, RAI, Rai Bahádur.

Born 5th November 1834. The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, the Rai Bahádur having received a Certificate of Honour at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in 1877. His ancestors (who were Khattris) came from the Punjab about 300 years ago, and became merchants at Agra. He did good service in the Mutiny of 1857, by saving some of the records of the Agra Board of Revenue; and in 1866 was appointed a permanent Deputy Collector.

Residence.—Agra, North-Western Provinces.

BAL PARUSHURAM PANDIT, Rao Saheb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 30th March 1870.

Residence.—Satara, Bombay.

BALA PARSHAD, PANDIT, Rai Bahádúr.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Empress. The Rai Bahádúr had done good service in the Rájputána-Málwá Railway Police, and retired on pension on 1st November 1891. He has no son; his brothers are Pandit Manik Parshád of Indore, born 1851; and Pandit Kalika Parshád of the Bombay Police (retired in 1891), born 1857.

Residence.—Rájputána-Málwá Railway Police.

BALA SHASTRI AGASE, Mahámahopádhya.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Empress, in recognition of eminence in oriental scholarship. It entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Rájás.

Residence.—Ratnagiri, Bombay.

BALAJI KRISHNA BENDIGERI, Rao Bahádúr.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 29th May 1886.

Residence.—Belgaum, Bombay.

BALASINOR, NAWAB MUNAWAR KHANJI, Bábi of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1844; succeeded his father, Nawáb Jorawar Khánji Bábi, in November 1882. This family is Pathán (Muhammadan), claiming descent from Sher Khánji Bábi, son of Bahádúr Khánji Bábi, a distinguished officer in the Imperial Service of Delhi. The area of the State is 189 square miles; its population 46,328, chiefly Hindus. The Nawáb Bábi maintains a military force of 60 cavalry, 177 infantry, and 5 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Balasinor, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

BALAVADRA PRASAD DAS, Rájkumár Bairiganjon Bhuyan Mahápatra.

This is one of the titles that seem never to have been formally recognised by the Government. The family belongs to the Ganga Vansa, the ancient race of the Gajapati kings of Orissa, from whom the title was derived. The Ráj-kumár has done good service by providing elephants for Government in time of war. His eldest son, whose name is Umákánta Dás Mahápatra, bears the title of Tikait Bábu; the younger sons—Bisambhar Dás, Nityananda Dás, Sachidananda Dás, Achutananda Dás—are all styled Bábu.

Residence.—Balason, Orissa.

BALBAHADUR SINGH, Rájá.

The title is hereditary, and was conferred on 1st January 1886.

Residence.—Raigarh, Central India.

BALBIR SINGH (of Kattahr), Rájá.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Kángra, Punjab.

BALDEO SINGH (of Awa), Rájá.

Born 10th July 1850. The title is hereditary, the tradition being that it was originally conferred by the Maharáná of Udaipur. Belongs to a family of Jadon Rájputs, descended from Thákur Chatarbhuja, a Zamindár of Nari in the Chhata Parganá, who, in the time of Muhammad Sháh (1719-48), settled at Jalesar. His grandson, Bakht Singh, gave military service to the Maharájá of Bharatpur and the Thákur of Amargarh, and gradually established himself as an independent Chief. Finally he obtained a sanad from the Mahrattas, authorising him to build a fort at Awa; and his successor, Hira Singh, built the existing fort. In the Mahratta war Hira Singh was able to render some service to the British Power; and consequently in 1803 obtained from General Lake a sanad confirming him in possession. He was succeeded by his son, Pitambar Singh, who is said to have been recognised as a Rájá by Lord Auckland in 1838. Pitambar Singh adopted from the descendants of the younger brother of Bakht Singh, Rájá Prithvi Singh. The latter did excellent service during the Mutiny; he raised horse and foot, attacked the insurgent villages, restored the whole of the neighbourhood to order, collected the revenue, and remitted it to Agra. "In fact," to quote the Report of the District Officer, "he held the country till the taking of Delhi, and the arrival of our own troops enabled us to resume possession." He died in 1876, leaving one son, Rájá Chatarpal Singh, a minor. The latter died in 1884, and was succeeded by his cousin, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Awa, Etah, North-Western Provinces.

BALIKRAM, Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st April 1881.

Residence.—Buldána, Berar.

BALKISHAN AMAR SINGH, Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 25th June 1884.

Residence.—Násik, Bombay.

BALLABH DAS, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 3rd February 1883.

Residence.—Jabalpur, Central Provinces.

BALSAN, RANA BIR SINGH, Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1860; succeeded to the gadí 17th November 1884. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, his ancestor, Alak Singh, the founder of the family, having been a scion of the ruling House of Sirmur. The Chiefs of Balsan were feudatories of Sirmur till 1815, when a sanad was granted by the British Government. Bhup Singh, the grandfather and predecessor of the present Chief, did good service in the Mutiny of 1857, and was rewarded with the title of Ráná. His son, the Kunwar Govardhan Singh, predeceased him; so he was succeeded by his grandson, the present Ráná. The area of the State (which is one of the Simla Hill States) is 51 miles; its population is 5190, chiefly Hindus. The Ráná maintains a military force of 50 infantry.

Residence.—Balsan, Punjab.

BALUCH KHAN, Sardár.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Baluchistan.

BALWANT RAO (of Karwi), Rao.

Born 1828. The title is hereditary. Is a Mahratta Bráhmaṇ, the grandson by adoption of Venaik Rao, who was the son of Amrit Rao, brother of the last Peshwá, Baji Rao. His two uncles joined in the rebellion of 1857, and their estates were confiscated, and themselves deported. But Balwant Rao proved his loyalty, and is now the head of the family at Karwi. He has adopted a son, Moreshwar Rao, born 17th August 1872.

Residence.—Karwi, North-Western Provinces.

BALWANT RAO BHUSKUTE, Rao Sahéb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 20th May 1890.

Residence.—Nimár, Central Provinces.

BALWANT RAO GOPAL JAVDEKAR, Rao Baháddur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 31st January 1883.

Residence.—Poona, Bombay.

BALWANT SINGH (of Bir Chima), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being the head of the younger branch of the Phulkian family of Malaudh (see Badan Singh, Sardár), descended from Phul, the common ancestor of the Houses of Patiála, Jind, Nábha, and Bhadaur. He is the son of the late Sardár Hakikat Singh of Bir. On the death of his brother, Ranjit Singh, he succeeded to the Bir estate, having before held that of Chima only. He is an Honorary Magistrate, and did excellent service in the troubled times of 1857.

Residence.—Ludhiána, Punjab.

BALWANT SINGH (of Botala), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being a descendant of Dhanna Singh, who was an associate of Sardár Jodh Singh, great-grandfather of Mahárájá Ranjít Singh.

Residence.—Gujránwála, Punjab.

BALWANT SINGH (of Rangarh Nangal), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being descended from a Rájput family whose ancestor came originally from Bikanir, and founded Rangarh Nangal in the Gurdáspur district, Punjab. Sardár Karam Singh was the head of the family in the time of the Mahárájá Ranjít Singh; and when the latter seized Lahore and Amritsar, Karam Singh gave in his allegiance. His grandson, Sardár Argan Singh, served in the battle of Sobraon. During the rebellion of 1848 he joined the rebels, and his estates were confiscated. A considerable pension was subsequently granted to him. The late Rájá of Nábha was a second cousin of Sardár Balwant Singh, as Sardár Argan Singh's sister married Rájá Devindra Singh, Chief of Nábha.

Residence.—Gurdáspur, Punjab.

BALWANT SINGH (of Barehta), Thákur.

Born 1836. The title is hereditary, the ancestors of the Thákur having been in the Narsinghpur district from time immemorial, and long known for their loyalty; it was originally conferred by one of the ancient Gond Rájás of Mandla. Belongs to a Ráj Gond family; his son is named Barilol Singh.

Residence.—Barehta, Narsinghpur, Central Provinces.

BALWANT SINGH (of Piprasur), Rájá.

The title is hereditary, the Rájá being the son of the Rájá Anrudh Singh, and descended from Debi Singh, Rájá of Orchha.

Residence.—Ságar, Central Provinces.

BAMANBOR, The Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

The area of the State is 12 square miles, with a population of 987.

Residence.—Bamanbor, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

BAMBO KHAN, Jám. See Bhambo Khán, Jám.

BAMRA, RAJA SUDHAL DEO, C.I.E., Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born about 1849; succeeded to the gadi on 12th May 1869. Is descended from a Gangabansi Rájput family, from the same stock as that of the Gajpati Rájás of Puri in Orissa, which acquired the Bamra territory by conquest in early times. He was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1889. The Rájá's son, Sachidanand, bears the courtesy title of Tikait Bábu. The area of the State is 1988 square miles; and its population is 81,286, many Hindus, but with over 50,000 belonging to Abor (aboriginal) tribes.

Residence.—Bamra, Central Provinces.

BANGANAPALE, NAWAB SAYYID FATH ALI KHAN BAHADUR, C.S.I., *Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 10th July 1848; succeeded to the gadi in 1868. Is a Shiah Muhammadan, and a Sayyid (or descendant of the Prophet). He was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. The family held an ancient title, Jágirdár of Banganapale; the title of Nawáb was conferred in 1876. His son is named Sayyid Gulam Ali Khán. The area of the State is 166 square miles; its population 30,754, chiefly Hindus, the Muhammadans being 5952. The Chief has a salute of 6 guns.

Residence.—Banganapale, Madras.

BANSDA, MAHARAWAL SHRI PRATAPSINGHJI GULABSINGHJI, *Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 6th December 1863; succeeded to the gadi on the 6th March 1876. The family is Solanki Rájput (Hindu), and is styled "Vansdia"; it is descended from a chieftain of ancient times named Muldeoji. The area of the State is 215 square miles; its population is 34,908, chiefly Hindus. The Maháráwal maintains a military force of 24 cavalry, 111 infantry, and 1 gun, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Bansda, Surat, Bombay.

BANSPAT SINGH (of Barah), Rájá.

Born 1834. The title was conferred as a personal distinction on 30th November 1858, for eminent services rendered during the Mutiny, the Rájá having loyally supported the police, escorted the revenue-collections during the disturbances, and proceeded in December 1857 with 1000 followers to rid Parganá Khairagarh of a formidable band of rebels who had gathered there. Is descended from the same ancestry as His Highness the Mahárájá of Rewah, and belongs to a Baghel Rájput family.

Residence.—Barah, Allahabad, North-Western Provinces.

BANSWARA, HIS HIGHNESS RAI-I-RAYAN MAHARAWAL SRI LACHMAN SINGH BAHADUR, *Maháráwal of.

Born 30th January 1838; succeeded to the gadi in 1842. Is a descendant (through the Maháráwal Udai Singh of Dungarpur, q.v.) of the Maháránás of Udaipur ("Children of the Sun"), and consequently a Sisodiya Rájput. Udai Singh, Maháráwal of Dungarpur, gave the territory of Bánswára to his younger son Jagmal Singh, with the title of Maháráwal. The area of the State (including that of its feudatory Kusalgarh) is about 1500 square miles; its population 175,145, chiefly Hindus, but with about 50,000 Bhils (aboriginal). The Maháráwal maintains a military force of 640 cavalry, 783 infantry, and 14 guns. His Highness is entitled to a salute of 15 guns. His son is the Maháráj-Kunwar Sambhu Singh Bahádur.

Residence.—Bánswára, Rájputána.

BANTWA (GIDAR), SAMAT KHAN BABI, Khán of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1854; descended from a Pathán (Muhammadan) family.

Residence.—Gidar, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

BANTWA (MANAWADAR), KHAN SHRI FATHEH-UD-DIN KHANJI, *Khán of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1835; succeeded to the gadi 28th March 1888. There are now four divisions of the Bantwa State; the united area is 221 square miles, the united population 38,517, chiefly Hindus. The Chief of Bantwa has the title of Khán Shri; his family name is Bábi.

Residence.—Manawadar, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

BANWARI ANANDA DEB, Maháráj Kumár.

The title is personal, and was conferred on the Maháráj Kumár as the adopted son of the late Mahárájá Jagatindra Banwári Govinda Bahádur of Banwáribád, who rendered good service during the famine of 1866-67. The Mahárájá Jagatindra's father, Nityananda, received from the old Mughal Government the title of "Azimat-ullah Amir-ul-Mulk Jagatindra Danishnanda Sipahdár Jang Bahádur."

Residence.—Murshidabad, Bengal.

BANWARI LAL SINGH, Rájá.

This is one of the titles that appear never to have been formally recognised by Government. The family claims that its ancestor came from Baghelkhand, and set up the Ráj of Pálganj in Hazáribagh; and that a branch of this family obtained the Zamindári of Nawágarh in Mánbhum, part of which is held by the present Rájá, part by Thákur Giridhári Singh, and part by the Thakuráni, widow of Thákur Bholá Prasád Singh. In Rájá Banwári Lál Singh's branch of the family the following titles are held:—by the head, Rájá; by his wife, Ráni; by the eldest son, Tikait; by the second son, Kumár; by the third son, Thákur; by the fourth son, Nonu; by the fifth and younger sons, Bábu.

Residence.—Nawágarh, Mánbhum, Bengal.

BANYIN, KUN SAW, Myoza of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Myoza is one of the Shan Chiefs, and rules over a State of about 230 square miles.

Residence.—Banyin, Shan States, Burma.

BAONI, His Highness the Nawáb Bahádur of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Nawáb was born in 1863; and succeeded to the gadí on the 5th October 1883. He is descended from a Pathán (Muhammadan) family of Bundelkhand; and his full titles are—“His Highness Azam-ul-Umara, Fakhr-ud-daulá, Main-ul-Mulk, Saheb-i-Jah, Mihin Sardár, Nawáb Muhammad Hasan Khán Bahádur, Zafar Jang.” His ancestor, the Nawáb Gházi-ud-din Khán, at one time Minister at the Imperial Court of the Mughals, was grandson of Asaf Jah, Nizám of Hyderabad, and was also connected with the family of the Nawáb Vazir of Oudh. He obtained a grant of fifty-two villages from the Peshwá in Bundelkhand. His son, the Nawáb Vazir-ud-daulá Khán, was recognised as Chief by the British Government. The grandson of the latter was the Nawáb Muhammad Mehdi Hasan Khán, the father of the present Nawáb.

The family banner was displayed at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in 1877, with the motto, “The authority is God's, and the country is God's.” The area of the State is about 117 square miles; its population is 17,055, chiefly Hindus, but with 2342 Muhammadans. The Nawáb Bahádur maintains a military force of 9 cavalry, 185 infantry, and 2 guns. He is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Baoni, Bundelkhand, Central India.

BAPU DEVA SHASTRI, C.I.E., Mahámahopádhyáya.

Born 1st November 1821. The title is personal. It was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Empress, in consideration of eminence as an oriental scholar; and it entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Rájás. Belongs to a Mahratta Bráhman family, long settled, in a good position as bankers and men learned in Hindi theology, at Tonka on the Godávari in the Ahmadabad district. Educated at Nágpur; became Professor of Mathematics in the Benares College in 1842. In 1852, received a reward of Rs.2000 from Government for a Hindi treatise on algebra, and in 1869 a khilat of Rs.1000 and two shawls. Is a Fellow of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, of the Royal Asiatic Society, and of the Calcutta and Allahabad Universities. Is the author of many works on Sanskrit literature and mathematics; and in 1878 was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

Residence.—Benares, North-Western Provinces.

BAPU RAO PATWARDHAN, PANDIT, Rao Saheb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st June 1888.

Residence.—Nágpur, Central Provinces.

BAPUBHAI DAYASHANKAR, Rao Saheb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 17th July 1867.

Residence.—Ahmadabad, Bombay.

BARAMBA, RAJA BISAMBHAR BIRBAR MANGRAJ MAHAPATTAR, *Rájá of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1880; succeeded to the gadí 15th July 1881, and is still a minor. The Rájá is descended from a Kshatriya (Hindu) family. The history of the Baramba State commences from the year 1305 A.D., with Hatakeswar Raut, a famous wrestler, who served Kishori Narsingh, the ruler of Orissa, and in recognition of his valour was presented with two villages (by name Sonkha and Mohuri) on the north bank of the Mahánadi river, three miles south of the present Baramba headquarters. These two villages were then owned and inhabited by Kandhs. Hatakeswar drove them away to about four miles north and settled in Baramba, which has since been the residence of all his successors up to the present time. The two villages, Sonkha and Mohuri, which were close to one another, have since been amalgamated into one, and are known by the name of Sonkhameri. It is difficult to ascertain what was the area of the two villages when they were presented by the Orissa ruler, but in all probability it never exceeded four square miles. The founder, however, extended the limit of his possession to about eight square miles before he died, leaving his younger brother, Malakeswar Raut, to succeed him.

The second Chief, Malakeswar Raut, who reigned eighteen years, extended the limit of the State to Ogalpore, about three miles west of Sonkhameri, and five miles south-west of Baramba. He discovered the temple of the goddess Votaika or Bruhadamba or Bodama at Ogalpore, and out of respect for this goddess named the State after her. Jambeshwar Raut, the fourth Chief, who reigned from 1375 A.D. to 1416, conquered the Kandh Chief of Kharod, eight miles north-west of Baramba, and annexed his possession (about twenty square miles), thus raising the area of the State to about thirty-six square miles. The fifth Chief, Bholeswar Raut, conquered the Khandayat or Chief of Amatia, six miles west of Baramba, and extended the limit of the State to Ratapat, eight miles west of the headquarters, and the present boundary between the Baramba and Narsinghpur States. It was during the reign of this Chief, who reigned for forty-three years (from 1416 A.D. to 1459), that the farthest western limit of the State was reached. His successors increased their possessions to the east of the headquarters, but made no attempt to extend the State farther on the west. Kanhu Raut, the sixth Chief, reigned for fifty-five years (from 1459 A.D. to 1514), and extended the limit of the State to Mohulia, about five miles east of Baramba. Nabin Raut, the ninth Chief, reigned for twenty-three years (from 1537 A.D. to 1560). During his reign the State attained its largest limit, from Ratapat in the west to Bidharpur in the east, eighteen miles, and from the range of hills separating Hindol from Baramba to the banks of the Mahánadi, about eight and a half miles, and this is the present limit of the State. In the reign of the twelfth Chief, Krishna Chandra Mangráj, who ruled from 1635 A.D. to 1650, the Mahrattas invaded the country, but the Chief acknowledged their supremacy, and was required to pay a tribute of 6335 kahans of cowries per annum. Padmanava Birbar Mangráj Mahapatra, the seventeenth Chief of the State, was a very weak ruler, who reigned from 1748 A.D. to 1793. During the first part of his reign the Rájá of Khandpara invaded the State, drove out the Chief, and remained in possession of it for nearly thirteen months. Rájá Padmanava sought for and obtained the assistance of the Rájá of Khurda, and recovered possession of the State. During the latter part of his reign, in the year 1775, the Rájá of Narsinghpur invaded the State, and took possession of two of its important forts, Kharad and Ratapat. The Rájá was powerless to expel the invaders, so he appealed to the Mahrattas, and with their assistance and intercession was able to regain possession of the forts. It seems that the Mughals never exercised direct supremacy over the Chiefs of this State. The Mahrattas, however, did so, and there are letters extant which show that they fixed the annual tribute of the State from the year 1183 to 1185 Amlí, and collected the same directly from the Chiefs. There are also three other old letters of interest in the records. In one of these the Mahrattas intimate their having recovered the Ratapat Gur from the Narsinghpur Rájá; in another they required the presence of the Baramba Rájá to settle a boundary dispute between Baramba and Narsinghpur; the third is addressed to the Rájá of Narsinghpur, and contains the decision of the Mahratta Government regarding the possession of Kharad and Ratapat. The area of the State (which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals) is about 134 square miles; its population 29,772, chiefly Hindus, but with over 3000 belonging to aboriginal tribes. The Rájá maintains a military force of 709 infantry and 3 guns. The family emblem is a leopard.

Residence.—Baramba, Orissa.

BARAUNDHA, RAJA THAKUR PRASAD SINGH, Rájá Bahádur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born in 1847; succeeded to the gadi on the 18th August 1886. Is a Raghubansi Rájput, descended from a family of the highest antiquity in Central India. Thirty-four generations are said to have ruled at Rusin in the Banda district; then four more at Birgarh in the territory still belonging to the family; four more at Murfa, partly in Banda and partly in this territory. Then the Rájá Mohan Singh came to Baraundha, and ruled there, and obtained a sanad from the British Government in 1807. His son ruled at Paturkuchar, and two more generations. Then the Rájá Ragbirdayál, father of the present Rájá, ruled partly at Paturkuchar, partly at Baraundha, and received the additional title of "Bahádur" on the occasion of the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in 1877. The area of the State is 239 square miles; its population is 17,283, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá Bahádur maintains a military force of 15 cavalry, 75 infantry, and 6 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Baraundha, Bundelkhand, Central India.

BARDIA, Rao of. See Barra.

BARIYA, MAHARAWAL SHRI MANSINGHJI, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 4th October 1855; succeeded to the gadi 5th March 1864. Descended (like the Chiefs of Chhota Udaipur) from a Chauhán Rájput (Hindu) family, sprung from Patai Ráwal, the last Chauhán Chief of Champanir. The area of the State is 873 square miles; its population is 66,822, chiefly Hindus. The Maháráwal maintains a military force of 38 cavalry, 250 infantry, and 3 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Bariya, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

BARJORJI DORABJI PATEL, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 24th May 1889.

Residence.—Quetta, Baluchistan.

BARJORJI RUSTAMJI, MISTRY, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 20th May 1890.

Residence.—Bombay.

BARODA, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA SAYAJI RAO III., G.C.S.I., Mahārājā Gaekwār of.

A Ruling Chief, and one of the Premier Princes of the Empire.

Born 17th March 1863; succeeded to the gadi on the 27th May 1875. The Gaekwār's full titles are—His Highness Farzand-i-Khas-i-Daulat-i-Inglishia Mahārājā Sayaji Rao Gaekwār Sena Khas Khel Shamshe Bahádur, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He is the descendant of the famous Mahratta leader, Damaji Gaekwār, who obtained from the Shahu Rájá of Sátára the title of Shamshe Bahádur for his bravery at the battle of Ballapur, fought against the Imperial forces of Delhi at the close of the 17th century. Damaji Gaekwār died in 1721, and was succeeded by his nephew and adopted son Pilaji Gaekwār, who obtained from the Shahu Rájá the additional title of Sená Khas Khel (see Introduction, § 11) on the conclusion of the wars with the Peshwá. Pilaji was assassinated in 1731, and was succeeded by his son Damaji II.; who, during a period of about forty years of almost incessant warfare, played a most prominent part in the history of India, and firmly established the Gaekwári power throughout Gujarát and the neighbouring districts of Western India. In 1732, the same year in which his father was murdered by a Mughal emissary, he reconquered the capital of Gujarát, Baroda, from the Mughal Viceroy; and that city has been the capital of the Gaekwárs ever since. He commanded a division at the great and decisive battle of Pánipat in 1761. He invaded Káthiáwár, and forced many of its princes to pay him tribute; he conquered the ancient city of Anhalwára Patan, and also Ahmadabad, the old capital of Gujarát. After his death, his two sons Govind Rao and Fatheh Singh became Gaekwárs in succession; and the latter was succeeded by Ananda Rao, a son of Govind Rao Gaekwár. In 1803 a Treaty was concluded with the British Power, under which a British Resident was appointed to the Court of Baroda, and provision was made for the maintenance of a strong subsidiary force. Ananda Rao was succeeded by Sayaji Rao I., whose reign was long and on the whole prosperous; and he was followed by three of his sons in turn, Ganpat Rao Gaekwár, Khande Rao Gaekwár, and Mulhar Rao Gaekwár. His Highness Khande Rao Gaekwár rendered loyal service to the Government at the time of the Mutiny. But the rule of his successor was disgraced by misgovernment; and it terminated in his deposition under painful circumstances. After these misfortunes, the Paramount Power exercised the greatest care and diligence in seeking out, from among the scions of the Gaekwári family and the descendants of Pilaji, a successor to the gadi, who should be in every way well fitted to discharge the duties of that exalted station. Their care has been amply rewarded; for, by the consent of the whole world, it would be impossible to find a ruler more devoted to the welfare of his subjects, or one better qualified to do credit to the Imperial choice, than His Highness the present Mahārājā Gaekwár, who was adopted by Her Highness the Mahārání Jamná Báí, the widowed consort of Khande Rao Gaekwár—and installed by the Agent of the Governor-General, who invested him with a State Dress of Honour on the 27th May 1875.

The reign of the Mahārājā Gaekwár Sayaji III. has been one of amazing progress and prosperity. For His Highness himself, it has not been without the deep shadows of domestic bereavement; for in April 1885 he lost his first wife, Her Highness the Mahārāni Chimnabāi, niece of the Princess of Tanjore, whom he had married in 1880, and who had borne him three children—two daughters, who had died during the lifetime of their mother, and a son and heir named Fatteh Singh Rao, who has happily survived. In December 1885 His Highness took as his second wife a Princess of the House of Dewas in Central India, Her Highness Chimnabāi, the present Mahārāni, who was invested by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress with the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India in 1892. Of this marriage there has been issue two sons, named Jaisingh Rao and Sivaji Rao respectively, and a Princess named Indira Rājā.

The young Gaekwār had for several years the advantage of the co-operation, as Minister of Baroda, of one of the ablest Indian statesmen of modern times, the Rājā Sir Mādhava Rao, K.C.S.I. The colleagues and successors of Sir Mādhava—the Khān Bahādur Kāzi Shahāb-ud-dīn, C.I.E., the Diwān Bahādur Laxuman Jagannāth, the Khān Bahādur Pestanji Jahangirji, C.I.E., the Rao Bahādur Vināyak Janārdhan Kirtane, the Khān Bahādur Khurshidji Rustamji, and the present Prime Minister, His Excellency the Diwān Bahādur Manibhai Jashbhai—have also been statesmen of great ability and devotion. And many other names might be mentioned of distinguished officers of the Baroda Government during the present reign. The early years of His Highness were guided by the judicious care of an extremely able and sympathetic English gentleman, Mr. F. A. H. Elliot, C.I.E., who still retains high office in the Baroda State. In 1875 the Gaekwār, attended by Sir Mādhava Rao and the chief officers of the State, went to Bombay to meet His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; and shortly afterwards was honoured by a visit of His Royal Highness to the capital of Baroda, where the auspicious event was celebrated by the most magnificent hospitalities. On the 1st of January 1877 His Highness, on the invitation of H.E. the Viceroy, attended the Imperial Assembly at Delhi to celebrate the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen as Empress of India, and on that occasion was invested with the title of Farzand-i-Khās-i-Daulat-i-Englishia (see Introduction, § 11) by Lord Lytton as the representative of the Empress.

In May 1887 His Highness, accompanied by the Mahārāni, set out on an extended tour to the continent of Europe. After passing several months in Italy, Switzerland, and France, His Highness arrived in England in the following November. On the 5th of December the Mahārājā proceeded to Windsor, and had the honour of being most cordially received by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress. His Highness, having previously received the honour of Knighthood, was on this occasion invested by the Queen Empress with the insignia of a Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. A second visit was paid to Europe by His Highness in 1889, which also greatly restored his health and vigour. But the hot climate of Gujarāt, and excessive mental exertion, made it imperative on him in the spring of 1892 to visit Europe once more: and accordingly His Highness left India a third time on 7th May 1892. With the Mahārāni he has again been graciously received by Her Majesty, who honoured the Mahārāni by personally conferring on her the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. These visits of His Highness to England have been fruitful of the most valuable results to the Baroda State, and are in themselves evidence of the interest he takes in the social and material progress of his people. Both in 1887 and again in 1892, he has been attended by one of his ablest officials, the Rájáshri Vasudeo Mádhava Samarth, who now holds the position of Chief Officer with His Highness.

By the direction of His Highness scientific land-revenue survey has been introduced throughout the State, the existing revenue laws have been revised, new ones framed, and various restrictions and petty imposts, as well as transit duties, which entailed much hardship on the ryots, have been gradually abolished. By these and various other means, the cultivators have been greatly encouraged to increase their holdings and improve their condition. The existing local regulations are being codified for securing a speedy and efficient administration of civil and criminal justice, in which work he has allowed the people to take part. His Highness has issued certain rules for the better working of the Police, and has brought up the military forces to a state of efficiency. But the greatest attention of the Mahárájá Gaekwár has been given to matters of education. He has given a strong impetus to primary and higher education, as well as to technical training in industrial arts and handicrafts. There is an Arts College at Baroda, which is affiliated to the Bombay University, and teaches up to the B.A. and B.Sc. standards. The vernacular schools have received a large accession to their number, and are still to be further multiplied by the establishment of thirty new schools every year. A recent rule to recognise by Government grants-in-aid every school which has not less than sixteen scholars on its roll has called into existence hundreds of village schools for the instruction of the masses, hitherto untouched. Schools have also been opened for people of low castes, and boarding schools for the lowest and hitherto utterly neglected classes.

Classes for teaching native music and scientific agriculture have been opened, whilst the establishment of a technical school for imparting a knowledge of modern industries, and for improving the various handicrafts of the people, testifies to the anxiety His Highness entertains for the industrial progress of his State. Nor has the Mahárájá Gaekwár forgotten the claims of female education, for in the various schools in his dominions not only are girls given a sound mental training, but the physical training and the homely arts of sewing, embroidery, and cookery are not neglected. Hospitals and dispensaries have been provided in almost all the principal towns of the State ; and it has been lately decided to appoint a lady-doctor for administering to the medical needs of the female population. The magnificent new Palace, and various handsome buildings for schools, colleges, and hospitals, evince the keen desire of His Highness for the promotion of public works. Railways have been extended in the territory of Baroda, and at present the State owns no less than 178 miles of railway. One of the most important recent engineering undertakings is the construction of extensive works at Ajwa for supplying the city of Baroda with pure water at the cost of about thirty lacs of rupees.

The effects of the good and enlightened government of the present Gaekwár, and the consequent progress and prosperity of his State and people, were well summed up in a speech made by the late Viceroy of India, Lord Dufferin, on the occasion of His Excellency's visit to Baroda in November 1886, from which may be quoted the following words :—

“Although your Highness, with characteristic modesty, has passed very lightly over the many excellent works of a like nature which have been constructed under your auspices, all who are inhabitants of this place know that, thanks to the intelligent energy which has been exhibited by their ruler, few cities and few States have ever made greater progress in everything which tends to improve the social condition of their inhabitants than the State and city over which your Highness so auspiciously and benevolently rules. The air of universal prosperity which characterises your capital and district which surrounds it, the happy and contented appearance of your people, are all marks of conscientious and intelligent administration, which have met my eye on every side; the noble buildings which are rising in all directions under your Highness's auspices, and amply generous provision which you have made both for the needs and gratification of your people, have confirmed me in the opinion which I had already reason to entertain, that in your Highness India possesses one of the most promising, high-minded, and wise rulers with which she has been ever blessed. It is difficult to convey in words the satisfaction which a Viceroy experiences at being able to arrive at such a conclusion in regard to one of the most influential and important of Her Majesty's feudatory Princes. In your Highness I feel the Queen Empress possesses indeed the noble arkan-i-dawlat, a firm and trusted pillar of State, and that the Indian Government is entitled to regard you as a sympathetic and worthy coadjutor in its great work of advancing the general happiness and prosperity of the inhabitants of Hindustan. Believe me, Mahárájá, there is no object dearer to my heart than to acquire the confidence and goodwill of the Princes of India, to make them feel with what kindly feelings I regard them, how anxious I am in respect to their rights, to maintain their dignity, to add to their consideration and izzat; but it becomes ten times easier to do this, and is a more perfect labour of love, when the conduct of a native ruler is so worthy of praise and admiration as your own."

The State is one of the largest, richest, most populous, and most advanced in India. It contains an area of 8570 square miles. Its population is about 2,185,005, chiefly Hindus; but there are 174,980 Muhammadans, 46,718 Jains, and 8118 Parsis. The revenue of the State is about Rs.1,53,00,000 per annum (at par £1,530,000). In area the State of Baroda is considerably larger than either Saxony or Würtemberg; its population is greater than that of Greece, and not much less than that of Switzerland. The Mahárájá Gackwár maintains a military force of 3562 cavalry and 4988 infantry, with 38 guns. His Highness is entitled to a salute of 21 guns. The family colour is that red which is called Bhagwá, the colour of the red earth of the Mahabaleshwar hills.

BASITNAGAR, AMANAT FATIMA, Begum of.

Born 1832. Is the widow of the Nawáb Dost Ali Khán of Básitnagar, who was succeeded on his death in 1864 by the Nawáb Husain Ali Khán. On the death of the latter in 1871 the Begum succeeded to the title and estates. The family is of Pathán origin, and is descended from Dildar Khán, third son of the Nawáb Diler Khán of Sháhábád. The latter was a distinguished Afghán officer under the Emperor Aurangzeb, who sent him to Sháhábád to punish the Pande Panwar Brahmans, who had plundered a convoy of Imperial treasure on its way from Khairabad to Delhi. He slew all the bandits, and was granted their extensive possessions in jágir, with the titles of Nawáb and Haft Hazári or commander of seven thousand. He founded the city of Sháhábád, and built the great fort known as the Bari Deohri; and his descendants held the grants rent free till Saádat Ali Khán resumed them. The title of Nawáb was recognised by Government as hereditary in 1864.

Residence.—Sháhábád, Hardoi, Oudh.

BASODA (BHOPAL), NAWAB AMAR ALI KHAN, Nawáb of.

BECHARDAS VEHARIDAS, DESAI, Sardár, Rao Bahádur.

Born 26th February 1844. Third son of the Rao Bahádur Desai Veháridás Ajubháí, whose eldest son, Desai Haridás Veháridás, is now Diwán (Prime Minister) of the Junágarh State in Káthiáwár. Educated at Nadiád and Ahmadabad. Appointed Member of the Local Board of Taluká Anand, Zillá Kairá in 1867. Was the chief promoter of the "Agricultural Committee" appointed at Nadiád in 1878, and of the exhibitions of agricultural products of the district held at Nadiád since the year 1883. President of the Municipal Committee, Nadiád, from 1886 to 1889; received the title of "Rao Bahádur" from Government in 1887; elected a Member of the Legislative Council, Bombay, in 1888; and granted the title of "Sardár" in the same year. The family claims descent from the Kshatriya family reigning in the Punjab in the time of Alexander the Great; subsequently migrating to Málwá, its leading member is said to have been appointed there Diwán.

Twelve hundred years later part of the family is said to have migrated to Adálaj, near Ahmadabad, in the time of Siddhráj Jayasingh, and a branch ultimately settled at Nadiád. The founder of this branch having rendered good service to the then Mughal Emperor, was invited to the Imperial presence, and received the title of Desái with estates and pálkhi from the Emperor. Vághjibháí, the fourth in lineal descent from the founder, rendered valuable services both to the Peshwá and to the Gaekwár; and also played an important part in bringing about a compromise after the battle of Adás in 1775. For this he received in *iná*m the village of Bilodrá, which the family enjoyed up to 1816. Prabhudás, the grandson of Vághjibháí, assisted Colonel Walker in settling the terms of the treaties made by the British Government with the Mehwási Thákurs in the Máhi Kántha, and received a pálkhi in *iná*m from the British Government in 1806. Desái Prabhudás's grandson was Desái Veháridás Ajubháí (the first mentioned above), who was a member of the Vatan Commission, and Honorary Second Class Magistrate. He was invited by Government to the Imperial Delhi Assemblage in 1877, where he received the title of "Rao Bahádur."

Residence.—Kaira, Bombay.

BED SARAN KUNWAR (of Agori Barhar), Ráni.

Born 1851. The title is hereditary, the Chandel Rájás of Barhar being descended, it is said, from Pari Mal and Bári Mal of Mahoba in Bundelkhand, who some hundreds of years ago took service with Rájá Madan of the Báland family of the Kharwár tribe, and after killing him, divided his country and founded the three principalities of Barhar, Bijaigarh, and Bardí, in Rewah. About a century later, near the year 1290, the exiled Bálands collected a force, surprised the fort and palace of Agori, and killed every male of the Chandel race. But one of the queens of the fallen Chandel Rájá, who had fled to the forest, shortly afterwards gave birth to a prince, who was named Orandeo, from the shield (oran) on which he was cradled. When he grew up, his merits attracted the notice of the Rájá of Kantit; who gave him his daughter in marriage, and helped him to recover the Barhar Ráj, about the year 1310. In 1745 Sambhu Sáh was Rájá, and he was conquered and expelled by Rájá Balwant Singh; but in 1781 Warren Hastings, as Governor-General, ordered the restoration of Adil Sáh, the grandson of Rájá Sambhu Sáh. The estates continued in the possession of the family till 1852, when Rájá Raghunáth Sáh died, and they came under the Court of Wards. His son, Rájá Kesho Saran Sáh, attained his majority in 1868; but died without issue in 1871, leaving his widow, the present Ráni, in possession of the estates for her life. Her heir is Bábu Jagannáth Prasád Singh of Jamgaon, who is descended from Bábu Rachpál Singh (brother of Rájá Adil Sáh, mentioned above), and is about 35 years of age.

Residence.—Rájpur, Mirzapur, North-Western Provinces.

BEHRAMJI DADABHAI, Khán Bahádur.

Born 23rd October 1831. The Khán Bahádur's name is also sometimes spelt Byranjee Dadabhoy. The title was conferred on 3rd April 1880, as a personal distinction, in recognition of highly meritorious service in many important and responsible public offices. The Khán Bahádúr is the eldest son of the late Khán Saheb Dádábháí Shápúrjī, an eminent public servant, who had received a sherpao (or "Dress of Honour") from the Bombay Government in 1837, and the title of Khán Saheb in 1847. Educated at Thanna, and Surat, and Elphinstone College, Bombay. Entered the Government Service in 1853; and having distinguished himself in various civil capacities, was specially selected in 1865 to succeed Colonel Dunsterville as Deputy Registrar-General and Registrar of Bombay—being the first gentleman of Indian birth ever appointed to fill that high office. Appointed J.P. in 1869; in 1872 a Delegate of the Parsi Chief Matrimonial Court in Bombay; in 1879 acted as Inspector-General of Registration; in 1878, and again in 1880, elected a Member of the Municipal Corporation of the City of Bombay; and served in many other public offices "with credit to himself and advantage to the public," as testified by the Bombay Government when in 1880 he was recommended for the title of Khán Bahádúr. He was married, 28th February 1848, to Baie Sonabaie, eldest daughter of Khán Saheb Cowashaw Sorabshaw Taleiyarkhan of Surat; and has issue. His sons are—(1) Jehangeer Byramjee Dadabhoy, born 1864, married 1885 to Khorsetbanu Hormusjee Pestonjee Cama; and (2) Manikji Behramji Dádábháí, born 1865, barrister-at-law of the Middle Temple 1887, J.P. for Bombay 1888, Municipal Councillor for Bombay 1889; married 1884 to Jerbanu Dádábháí Pálanji Bhedwár. His daughters are—(1) Awabaie, born 1851, married 1865 to Ardasir Cursetji Ghandie, who died in 1874; (2) Dhanbaiji, born 1859, married 1877 to Dhanjibhoy Nasirwánji Ghista; (3) Pherozebaie, born 1861, married 1877 to Framji Cursetji Rustamji Thánáwálá. His brothers are—(1) Cowashaw Dadabhoy, born 1845, married 1865 to Jerbaie Bargarji Hadda; (2) Cursetjee Dadabhoy, born 1850, married 1886 to Gulbaie Jamsetjee Seenáwálá.

Residence.—Foras Road, Byculla, Bombay.

BEHRAMJI JEHANGIRJI RAJ KOTWALA, Khán Bahádúr.

The title is personal, and was conferred 24th May 1889, in recognition of his public services. The Khán Bahádúr's name is also sometimes spelt Byramjee (or Byramji) Jehanghirji Rajkotwála. Is a Delegate of the Parsi Matrimonial Court at Karáchi, and Member of the Sindh Sabha; was Honorary Special Magistrate at Násik and Karáchi from 1869 to 1890; acted as Chairman of the Násik Municipality in 1880 and 1883.

Residence.—Karáchi, Sind.

BELASAR PARIDA, Sámant Rai.

Granted the title, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1893, for eminent services in the Lahore Medical College. Is an Assistant Surgeon.

Residence.—Lahore, Punjab.

BENARES, HIS HIGHNESS SIR PRABHU NARAYAN SINGH, K.C.I.E., Mahārājā Bahādur of.

Born 26th November 1855; succeeded 13th June 1889; has issue—Kunwar Aditya Narāyan Singh, born 6th November 1875. The family are Brāhmans of the Bhuinhār clan; and their traditions go back to the year 1000, when a Brāhman ascetic of Utaria, a village near Benares, foretold the succession of his posterity to the dominions then governed by a Hindu Rājā. Some centuries later, in the decay of the Mughal Empire, some of the family who attempted to assert a turbulent independence were severely chastised by one of the lieutenants of the Emperor Farrukhsiyar. In the succeeding reign Mausa Rām, the eldest brother of the branch occupying the ancient seat of the family in Utaria, rose to great favour with the Governor of Benares under the Nawāb Vazir of Oudh. On the death of Mausa Rām in 1739 his son Balwant Singh sent an offering to Delhi, and received from the Emperor his confirmation in the government of the Jaunpur, Benares, and Chunār districts, with the possession in his own right of four Parganās, and the title of Rājā Bahādur, which the family has held as an hereditary title ever since. In 1763, when the Emperor and the Nawāb Vazir of Oudh marched eastward to expel the British from Bengal, Rājā Balwant Singh was compelled to join them, but his troops took no part in the battle of Baksār, being stationed on the other side of the Ganges, and when he fled to one of his hill fortresses he was called back to receive confirmation of his possessions under the British Power. On the death of Balwant Singh in 1770 the Nawāb Vazir of Oudh desired to seize the Benares territory, but the British Government compelled him to recognise Chait Singh, the son of Balwant Singh, as Rājā under the British suzerainty, and by the treaty of 1775 the territory was finally declared British. The differences between Rājā Chait Singh and the Calcutta Government under Warren Hastings are historically famous, as they became the subject of one of the articles of the impeachment that was framed against the great Governor-General. The Rājā was deprived of his government, which was given on conditions to his nephew, Rājā Mahip Narāyan, son of Balwant Singh's daughter, and he died in exile at Mahalior under the protection of the Mahārājā Sindhia. Rājā Mahip Narāyan died in 1795, and was succeeded by his son Udit Narāyan Singh; and the latter in 1835 by his nephew and adopted son, Rājā Ishri Parshād Narāyan Singh Bahādur, who, for his loyal services at the time of the Mutiny, received in 1859 the title of Mahārājā Bahādur as a personal distinction. On the 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, the Mahārājā Bahādur was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; and on his death in 1889 he was succeeded by his nephew and adopted son, the present Rājā. On the 8th February 1889 the late Mahārājā Bahādur had been granted the privilege, as a personal distinction, of being addressed as "His Highness," and in September of that year the present Rājā was granted the same privilege, with the title of Mahārājā Bahādur, also as personal distinctions. The Mahārājā has been exempted from personal appearance in the Civil Courts, and has been assured by sanad that, in the case of failure of natural heirs, the Government will permit and confirm any adoption of a successor made by himself or any future Rājā that may be in accordance with Hindu law and the customs of his family. He is entitled to a salute of 13 guns.

Residences.—Rāmnagar, Benares; Chakya, Mirzapur.

BENKAT RAO. See Vyankat RaoBERI (BUNDELKHAND), RAO BIJAI SINGH, Jágirdár of
A Ruling Chief.

Born 14th February 1848; succeeded to the gadi 18th March 1862. Is a Puar Rájput, descended from Acharjya, who married a daughter of the Mahárájá Jagat Ráj, son of the Mahárájá Chhatarsal of Jaitpur, and received the jágir of Beri. He was succeeded by his son, Khuman Singh, whose son, Jugal Prasád, received a sanad from the British Government. His grandson, Bishnath Singh, adopted the present Jágirdár, who is a descendant from the Mahárájá Jagat Ráj by a collateral line. The title is hereditary; the Jágirdárs have sometimes been styled Sawai Rao, from their ancestor Jagat Ráj. The present Rao's son is Kunwar Bahádur Noni Raghuráj Singh. The State has an area of about 28 square miles, and a population of about 5000, chiefly Hindus. The Rao maintains a military force of 10 cavalry, 66 infantry, and 2 guns.

Residence.—Beri, Bundelkhand, Central India.

BETTIAH, MAHARAJA SIR HARENDRA KISHOR SINGH,
K.C.I.E., Mahárájá Bahádur of.

Born in March 1854; succeeded his father, the late Mahárájá Rájendra Kishor Singh Bahádur, in 1883, and in 1884 received the title of Mahárájá Bahádur as a personal distinction, with a khilat and sanad from the hands of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire on 1st March 1889. Belongs to a Jaitharia Bráhman (Hindu) family, descended from Gangeshwar Deo, who settled at Jaithar in Sárán, Bengal, about the year 1244 A.D. One of his descendants, Agar Sen, having possessed himself by force of arms (during the later years of the reign of the Emperor Jahángir) of a considerable territory in Champáran, declared himself a Rájá, and ultimately obtained a confirmation of that title from the Emperor Sháh Jahán. In 1659 he was succeeded by his son, Rájá Guj Singh, who built the palace of the family at Bettiah. He incurred the anger of the Emperor of Delhi by the annexation of many surrounding districts, and after successfully resisting one party of Imperial troops sent against him, was captured by a second party, and carried a prisoner to Delhi. He was subsequently released, and confirmed in his possession, on his undertaking to send an annual offering of jungle and other produce to Delhi. He died in 1694 A.D., leaving six sons, of whom three died without issue. The eldest, Rájá Dalip Singh, succeeded his father at Bettiah, the second was the ancestor of Rájá Sheoráj Nandan Singh of Seohar in Muzaffarpur (q.v.), and the third was the ancestor of the Zamindárs of Madhubani in Darbhanga. Dalip Singh's son and successor, Rájá Dhruv Singh, received a firmán from the Emperor Farrukhsiyár. In 1760 he was summoned to help the Emperor Sháh Alam in his expedition to Bengal; and subsequently, to escape the exactions of the Nawáb Mir Kásim of Patna, he poisoned himself, and was succeeded by his daughter's son, Rájá Jugalkishor Singh. The latter, after many vicissitudes of fortune, seems to have been recognised by the British Government ; and his grandson, Rájá Anandakishor, received the title of Mahárájá Bahádur, with a khilat, as a personal distinction from Lord William Bentinck for good services rendered during the Nepalese war. He was followed by his brother and his nephew successively ; and the latter, the Mahárájá Rajendrakishor Singh, who succeeded in 1855, rendered good service in the time of the Mutiny, and also during the great famine. He was succeeded in 1883 by his only son, the present head of the family, who was appointed a Member of the Legislative Council of Bengal in January 1891. The Mahárájá was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 28th June 1888.

Residence.—Bettiah, Champáran, Bengal.

The Sardár was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1890.

Residence.—Kapurthalá.

BHAGWAN BAKHSH (of Pokhra Ansari), Rájá.

Born 1st September 1872. The title is hereditary, and was recognised as such, 4th December 1877, when the Rájá succeeded his father, Rájá Umrao Singh, as a minor. The family is a younger branch of the Amethia Chattris (see Rameshwar Bakhsh Singh, Rájá of Amethi), descended from Prithvi Chand, Rájá of Kálinjar. His descendant, Jamdhor Singh, had three sons, of whom the third was Rám Singh, who, on the division of the estates, took Pokhra Ansari, with the title of Rao. It is said that his great-grandson, Rao Kalián Singh, saluted a celebrated fakir with the respectful address of Bandagi Mián, and the grateful saint responded with a blessing on the "Rájá," whence the title was ever afterwards borne by this branch, who are known as the "Bandagi Mián Amethias." A descendant, Rao Amar Singh, endeavoured to assert his independence in the time of Shujá-ud-daulá, after the latter had been defeated by the English; but he was subsequently defeated and slain by the Nawáb's forces. His son, Madho Singh, ultimately regained most of his possessions. After his death, the property saw many changes, and at last fell into the hands of Rájá Sahajram Bakhsh. He was followed by Rájá Umrao Singh, the father of the present Rájá.

Residence.—Rowni, Haidargarh, Bara Banki, Oudh.

BHAGWAN DAS, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 29th May 1886.

Residence.—Rangoon, Burma.

BHAGWAN SINGH, Sardár Bahádur.

Born 1834. Belongs to a Jat family, whose founder, Sardár Rám Singh, acquired the territory of Buner and other districts in 1751 A.D. The family appear to have done good service during the Gurkha Campaign, the first Sikh war, and lastly during the Mutiny in 1857. For the latter service they received as a reward the remission of a year's commutation tax, and one-sixteenth of the whole has been excused in perpetuity. The Sardár Bhagwan Singh, whose title of Sardár is hereditary, is an Honorary Magistrate in the Ambála district; and on 1st January 1890 received the title of Sardár Bahádur as a personal distinction. His son is named Brijandar Singh.

Residence.—Sohana Bedwan, Ambála, Punjab.

BHAGWANT DAYAL, THAKURAI, Rai Bahádur.

Granted the title of Rai Bahádur, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1803. The present Thákurai, who has done good service on several occasions, received the thanks of Government for his measures of famine relief. He claims descent from Rájá Dushasan Singh of Dadand, of a very old Rájput family in Rájputána. One of his ancestors took service under Rájá Mansingh, Rájá of Pálámau, whose throne afterwards he contrived to seize. Thákurai Rámban Singh, an ancestor of the present Thákurai, rendered good service when the English first took Pálámau; and Thákurai Chhatardhári Singh, great-grandfather of the present Thákurai, obtained from Government many rewards, including a jágir, the title of Rai Bahádur, a khilat and sarpech, etc., for his services at the time of the Kol rebellion. The father also of the present Thákurai did good service at the time of the famine in 1873, and received a sanad at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in 1877.

Residence.—Chainpur, Pálámau, Lohárdagá, Bengal.

BHAGWAT MAHANTI, Rai Bahádur.

Born 3rd March 1821; son of Jugal Mahanti, belonging to a family of Karan or Utkal Kayasthas. Entered the service of the Government of Bengal in the year 1839, and served for more than fifty years in a large number of offices with ability and fidelity, retiring on pension in 1891. In 1870 he received a gold watch and chain from the Bengal Government, in recognition of "his long and valuable services," as well as in consideration of "his successful exertions during the famine of 1866"; and in 1886 the title of Rai Bahádur was conferred upon him as a personal distinction. The Rai Bahádur has seven sons—Ramkrishna Mahanti, Jaikrishna Mahanti, Bhuvaneshwar Mahanti, Nandakishor Mahanti, Govindacharan Mahanti, Paramanand Mahanti, and Sadanand Mahanti.

Residence.—Pompalo, Kothdesh, Puri, Orissa.

BHAIRON SINGH (of Maslai), Rao.

Born 22nd March 1855. The title is hereditary; and is said to have been originally received from Gori Sháh, Badshah. In 1820 the then Rao received a sanad from Sir John Malcolm. The Rao has a son, named Omar Singh.

Residence.—Nimár, Central Provinces.

BHAISAKHO, Bhumia of. See Ghari.BHAISAUNDA (Bundelkhand), CHAUBE CHHATARSAL PRASAD, Jágirdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Jágirdár is of a Chaubé Bráhmaṇ (Hindu) family, descended from Rám Krishna Chaubé, Killádár of Kálinjar (see Paldeo), and was born about the year 1878. He succeeded to the gadí on the 16th January 1886. The area of the State is 12 square miles; its population over 4000, chiefly Hindus. The Jágirdár's great-grandfather, Newal Kisor, was third son of Rám Krishna Chaubé, referred to above; and received a sanad from the British Government. The Jágirdár maintains a force of 52 soldiers.

Residence.—Bhaisaunda, Bundelkhand, Central India.

BHAISOLA or DOTRIA (BHOPAWAR), THAKUR BHIM SINGH, Thákur of.

BHAMBO KHAN, Jám.

Born 1835. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred on the Jám's ancestor, Saispál, when converted to Muhammadanism by Sayyid Jalál-ud-din. The Jám has two sons—Khán Muhammad Alam Khán and Gulám Ali Khán; they bear the titles of Mián and Khán respectively. The Jám is a considerable Jágirdár in the district of Shikárpur.

Residence.—Shikárpur, Sind.

BHAN PARTAB (of Imjhira), Rájá Bahádur.

The title is hereditary; and was conferred on 18th July 1858 on Rájá Surat Singh Bahádur (cousin of the present Rájá), who was conspicuous for his loyalty, and for the brave resistance he and his followers offered to the rebels, in the Mutiny of 1857. Belongs to a Lodhi family, whose ancestors had in early times the title of Thákur, and have been settled in the Narsinghpur district from time immemorial. In 1835 the title of Rao was conferred on Surat Singh (afterwards Rájá Bahádur) by the Rájá of Delehri. When Rájá Surat Singh died in 1870, the succession of his uncle, Rájá Manbodh Singh Bahádur, was recognised by the Government. He was appointed an Honorary Magistrate; and on his death was succeeded by his only son, the present Rájá Bahádur.

Residence.—Narsinghpur, Central Provinces.

BHAO MUNSARAM, Rao Bahádur.

Granted the title, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1893, for eminent services in municipal work. Is a Commissioner of the Poona Municipality.

BHAUNAGAR, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA SIR TAKHT-SINGHJI JASWATSINGHJI, G.C.S.I., Mahārājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 6th January 1858; succeeded to the gadi on the death of his father, Jaswatsinghji, K.C.S.I., in April 1870.

Educated first at Bhaunagar, he was one of the first Princes who joined the Keatinge Rāj Kumār College at Rājkot, where he studied for three years, and was distinguished for his diligence and docile and amiable disposition—a favourite with both schoolfellows and masters. On leaving the Rāj Kumār College in 1874 his studies were continued under a specially selected tutor, Captain (now Colonel) H. L. Nutt, of the Bombay Staff Corps. During his minority the State was jointly administered by an European officer of Government associated with a native Minister of State; but in March 1877 His Highness took the place of the native Minister, and so continued until within nine months of attaining his majority, when (5th April 1878) he was placed in sole charge. On the 24th May 1881 Her Majesty the Empress of India conferred the honour of a Knight Commander of the Star of India on His Highness, in which exalted Order he was advanced to Grand Commander on the 1st January 1886; and His Excellency the Viceroy five years later conferred as a personal distinction the high title of Mahārājā. His Highness has married six wives, five of whom are alive—their Highnesses Rāni Shri Nāhnibā, Rāni Shri Haribā, and Rāni Shri Bājirājbā, married 1874; Rāni Shri Bāirājba, married 1879; and Rāni Shri Keserbā, married 1888, and has issue. His sons are—

Kumār Shri Bhausinghji, born 26th April 1875.

Kumār Shri Mangalsinghji, born 3rd June 1881.

His Highness's daughters are—

Kumāri Shri Rāmbā.

Kumāri Shri Kesābā.

Kumāri Shri Rupalibā.

Any account of the predecessors of His Highness would cover the history of the illustrious tribe or clan of the Gohel Rājputs of Kāthiāwār, of whom he is the Chief, and after whom the eastern part of the province of Kāthiāwār is called Gohelwad. The Gohels claim to be descended from the celebrated Pāndavs, who belonged to the lunar or Chandravansi race, and so trace their line from the celebrated Shalivahan, the founder of the Shaka era, while Colonel Tod and others assert that the Gohels belong to the Solar race. The old family title of "Rāwal" was earned (as appears at page 258 of Tod's Western India) at the memorable battle of Chitor, fought with Alā-ud-din Khilji in 1303 A.D. There are evidences going as far back as 812 A.D. which show that the Gohels ruled in Saurashtra (Káthiáwár) from a very remote period. On the fall of the Delhi Empire, when the Mahratta power gradually rose into importance, the capital of the State was at Sihor, with Bhausingji as ruler, at which time (1722-23 A.D.) an encounter with the Mahratta army took place near Sihor, and resulted in the defeat of the Mahrattas. The struggle showed the weakness of the position of the capital, and Bhausingji chose the present site and founded the city of Bhanagar, which he considered more secure. He died in 1764 A.D., and was succeeded by his son Akherajji. Akherajji assisted the Mahrattas against the Mughal Viceroy Mominkhan, and in 1771 assisted the British Government in reducing the pirate stronghold of Talaji. It was this ruler, too, who, at the request of the Resident at Baroda, gave shelter to Raghunáth Rao Peshwá, then a refugee, sending him to Bombay in one of his own vessels. Akherajji died in 1772, and was succeeded by his son Wakhatsinghji. Wakhatsinghji largely extended his dominions, was a wise ruler and intrepid soldier, and during his lifetime cultivated the friendship of the British then trading in Surat. He died in 1816, and was succeeded by his son Wajesinghji, who after a prosperous reign, extending over a period of thirty-six years, died in 1852, and was succeeded by his grandson Akherajji III., his son Bhausingji having died during his lifetime. Akherajji III. died in 1854, and having no male issue was succeeded by his brother Jaswatsinghji, who died in 1870, and was succeeded by his son Takhtsinghji, the present ruler. The latter has effected great and rapid improvements in his dominions. Liberal in his charities, generous in his grants for the public good, he has constructed over 120 miles of railway at an expense of over eighty lacs of rupees, intersected his State with roads, studded the country with important public works, beautified his capital with permanent buildings of a most ornamental character, instituted a State Council, and revised the State laws, civil and criminal. At his capital he has from time to time received special visits from their Excellencies the Governors of Bombay; and in 1890 was honoured by a visit of His Royal Highness the late Duke of Clarence and Avondale, who, journeying to a new port founded by His Highness in the South Coast, and now known as Port Albert Victor, there laid the foundation-stone of the new harbour works. His loyalty to the British Crown is second to none in India, and he has recently, at a cost of over five lacs of rupees, formed for Imperial service a regiment of Lancers—350 strong—of men chiefly of his own clan, of which corps he is Honorary Colonel.

The area of his State is 2860 square miles; the population 464,671, and the annual gross revenue Rs.41,00,000.

Arms.—Gules, an eagle or displayed; in chief on a canton of the second, a lion statant of the first. Crest.—An Eastern galley argent profile in full sail. Supporters.—Two bulls argent rampant, service with bezant. Motto.—मनुष्य यत्न ईश्वर कृपा ("Man proposes but God disposes") on a label azure.

Residence.—The Motibagh Palace, Bhanagar. Club.—The Indian Northbrook, 3 Whitehall Gardens, London.

BHOPAL, HER HIGHNESS NAWAB SHAH JAHAN
BEGUM, G.C.S.I., C.I., Begum of

A Ruling Princess.

Her Highness the Nawáb Sháh Jahán Begum is the seventh in lineal descent from the famous Dost Muhammad Khán, founder of the Bhopál dynasty; was born 3rd July 1838, and succeeded to the gadí on the 16th November 1868. Dost Muhammad was an Afghán officer in the service of Aurangzeb, who took advantage of the weakness of the Mughals after the death of that Emperor to establish his independent authority in Bhopál and the neighbouring districts. The State of Bhopál has usually been on the friendliest terms with the British authorities. In 1778, on the occasion of General Goddard's march across India; in 1809, at the time of General Close's expedition; and again in 1817, at the commencement of the Pindári war, Bhopál did good service to the British Power. An interesting feature in Bhopál history has been the fact that the Princesses of the ruling family have very frequently taken the most prominent part in the administration of the State. Kudsíá Begum was succeeded in 1837 by her son-in-law, the Nawáb Jahángir Muhammad; and the latter, on his death in 1844, was succeeded by his widow, Her late Highness Sikandar Begum, mother of the ruling Princess, who was succeeded by the latter in 1868. The first husband of Her Highness the Nawáb Sháh Jahán Begum died in 1867, leaving one daughter, the Nawáb Sultán Jahán Begum; the latter has been acknowledged as Her Highness's heir-apparent. Her Highness was created in 1872, in recognition of her high administrative qualities, a Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; and has subsequently been appointed by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Empress to the Order of the Crown of India. In 1871 she contracted a second marriage with the Maulavi Muhammad Sádik Husain, Nawáb Consort, a descendant of a noble family of Bokhára. The heir-apparent, the Nawáb Sultán Jahán Begum, was married in 1874 to Ahmad Ali Khán, a member of the Afghán clan, the Mirázái Khel, from which the Bhopál family is descended.

The area of the State is 6872 square miles; its population is nearly a million, chiefly Hindus, but including over 80,000 Muhammadans, 6000 Jains, and about 120,000 belonging to aboriginal tribes. Her Highness the Nawáb Begum maintains a military force of 803 cavalry, 2030 infantry, and 69 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 19 guns, with 2 guns more within the limits of the Bhopál territory.

Arms.—Vert, a tower or within twelve musk blossoms proper in bordure. Crest.—A sheaf of arrows charged with a lily argent. Supporters.—Mahsir (fish), proper. Motto.—Nasr Minullah.

Residence.—Bhopál, Central India.

BHOPAL SINGH (of Urni Piparia), Thákur.

Born 1827. The title is hereditary, having been originally derived from the Gond Rájás of Mandla. Is descended from a Rájput family of the Kshatriya tribe, clan Chandra-Bansi-Tomar (or Tomar of the Lunar race). This family claims to be descended from Rájá Anang Pál, who reigned at Delhi in 1193 A.D. After the subversion of the Tomar dynasty, the family is said to have migrated to the Gwalior and Jhansi territories, where some of its branches remain. Two brothers of this family, Bistrám Singh and Narwar Singh, were called in by the Gond Rájá of Mandla, and provided with military appointments. They captured the fort of Ajaigarh and subdued the country round Mandla and Kurai; and were rewarded with the táluka Sainkhera. In 1842 the Thákur Bhopál Singh, with his father and brother, captured a rebel, and were rewarded by Government with the village of Pat Ras. Rendered good service in the time of the Mutiny, and was rewarded with a money grant and a parwána. In 1867 the Thákur was made an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Piparia, Narsinghpur, Central Provinces.

BHOR, SANKAR RAO CHIMNAJI, Pant Sachiv of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1854. Succeeded to the gadi 12th February 1871. Is a Bráhman (Hindu); the Pant Sachiv was one of the eight hereditary Ministers of the old Mahratta Empire. The present Pant Sachiv is the natural heir of Chimmaji Pandit, the late Pant Sachiv; who was adopted by Raghunáthrao on payment of nazars to the Rájá of Sátára and to the British Government. The area of the State is 1491 square miles, and its population 145,876, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Bhor, Poona, Bombay.

BHOTE KHAN LALKHAN, Khán Saheb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st June 1888.

Residence.—Khámgaon, Berar.

BHUBAN MOHAN, Kumár.

The title is personal, and was conferred 18th July 1861. The Kumár is the son and successor of the late Rájá Haris Chandra, who was the Chief of the Chakma clan in the Chittagong Hill Tracts, and who rendered good service in the Lushai Expedition of 1871-72, by supplying coolies, boats, etc.

Residence.—Chittagong Hill Tracts, Bengal.

BHUGANGA BHUSAN RAI, Rájá Rai.

This is one of the titles that appear never to have been formally recognised by Government. It was conferred by the Emperor of Delhi for approved service, the earliest Rájás being Rájá Pratápáditya Rai and Rájá Basanta Kumár Rai.

Residence.—Khulna, Bengal.

BHUP INDRA BAHADUR SINGH (of Kantit), Rájá.See Kantit.BHUP INDRA BIKRAMA SINGH (of Piyágpur), Rájá.See Piyágpur.BHUP SINGH, Rao.

Born 1851. The title is hereditary. Is descended from Dalip Singh, Bais Thákur; who, 300 years ago, came at the head of his tribe, and took possession of the Parganá of Kot Salbahan. Dalip Singh had two sons, Rao Singh and Karam Singh; and the descendants of Rao Singh, one of whom was Baldeo Singh, father of Bhup Singh, have always borne the title of Rao. Rao Baldeo Singh did excellent service in the time of the Mutiny, and received a commendatory parwána in reward. He also received a Certificate of Honour at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi in 1877; and was appointed an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Bhanpur, Budaon, North-Western Provinces.BHUP SINGH, BAGGA (of Dabanwala), Sardár.

Born 1836. The title is hereditary. Belongs to the Bagga (Jat) family, formerly of great wealth and power in the Gurdáspur district. Descended from Sardár Amar Singh, who overran the greater part of the district. His son and successor, Sardár Bhag Singh, survived his father only three years; and on his death his cousin Budh Singh took possession of the estates, to the exclusion of Bhag Singh's son, Hari Singh. But Budh Singh was deprived of his possessions by the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh. Subsequently the Lahore Darbár assigned a jágir to Hari Singh, who was the father of the present Sardár.

Residence.—Gurdáspur, Punjab.BHUPENDRA NARAYAN RAI (of Madhavapassa), Rájá.

This is one of the titles that appear not to have been formally recognised by Government. The family at one time possessed three farmáns of the time of the Emperor Muhammad Sháh, bearing the seal of the Nawáb Murshid Kuli Khán, confirming Udai Naráyan Rai in the Zamindári of Chandradip, Bákarganj.

Residence.—Madhavapassa, Bákarganj, Bengal.BHUPENDRADEB RAI, Rájá Rai and Mahásai.

This is a title that appears not to have been formally recognised by Government. The family claims to have received it from the Emperor Aurangzeb in the year 1090 Hijrah; and states that the original sanad was in their possession up to the time of the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, in 1877.

Residence.—Bansberia, Hooghly, Bengal.

BHUTAN, HIS HIGHNESS SANGAY DORJI, Deb Rájá of.

Residence.—Bihora, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

BIJA, THAKUR UDE CHAND, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1829. Succeeded to the gadí 1841. Belongs to a Rájput family (Hindu), whose founder, Garab Chánd, came from Ujjain in early times and conquered this territory. It was overrun by the Gurkhas between 1803 and 1815; but when they were expelled by the British in the latter year, the Thákur was confirmed in possession by a sanad, on conditions of feudal service. The State (which is one of the Simla Hill States) has an area of 4 square miles, and a population of 1158, chiefly Hindus. The Thákur maintains a military force of 10 men.

Residence.—Bija, Punjab.

BIJAI BAHADUR (of Chichli), Rájá.

Born 1849. Succeeded his father, Rájá Nizám Singh, in 1871. The title is hereditary; and was originally conferred by the Gond Rájá of Mandla, dating so far back, it is said, as 921 A.D. The sanad has been destroyed by age. In 1808 a flag, a staff, a belt, and a drum were bestowed on Rájá Sangram Sháh by the late Nawáb Sidak Ali, Subahdár of the Nágpur Rájá, for the capture of a famous rebel named Mir Khán. The family were settled at Fatehpur in Hoshangabad until 1227; when Pahár Singh, the younger son of Rájá Bariya Singh of Fatehpur, came to Chichli and Sangal. The present Rájá's father, Rájá Nizám Singh, rendered good service to Government in the time of the Mutiny in 1857; and received, in consideration thereof, a sanad of loyalty, dated 19th September 1859, together with a sword of honour and a money grant. He was also made an Honorary Magistrate. The Rájá Bijai Bahádur has a son whose name is Lál Saheb. The family banner is a yellow flag or pitambar, with chauri and staff; the motto on the Rájá's seal is Sado Sahai Narsingh, Nizam Singh Sut Bijai Bahádur Singh, which is "May the god Narsingh always help Bijai Bahádur Singh, son of Nizam Singh."

Residence.—Narsinghpur, Central Provinces.

See Venkatasveta Chala-pathi Ranga Rao, Ravu, Rájá.

BOD, RAJA JOGINDRA DEO, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born about 1857; succeeded to the gadi on 5th October 1879. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Hindu) family, founded by Ganda Mardan Deo, seventy generations back. The title of Rájá has been enjoyed since the time of the Mahratta rule; it was formally recognised by the British Government on 21st May 1874, in the lifetime of the late Rájá Pitambar Deo, father of the present Rájá. The eldest son of the ruling Rájá is called the Jubaráj; the younger sons Bábús. It is said that the Rájás of Bod have always been famous for their loyalty to the Emperors of India who were in power from time to time. Formerly there was a main route through this State to the Central and Western Provinces, and whenever any persons duly credited by the Muhammadan or Mahratta rulers passed over it the Rájás of Bod used to render them every assistance, and thus earned their favour. When Rájá Pratáp Deb was the ruler, certain officers of the Muhammadan Emperor were passing through this State with troops en route to Puri. Some of the troops having caught fever it was necessary for them to halt there for about a month, during which time the Rájá treated them very hospitably, and gained their good opinion. On their reporting the facts to the Emperor, the title of "Swasti Sri Derlakhya Dumbadhipati Jharkhund Mandaleswar" was conferred upon the then Rájá. This title continued till the time of Rájá Banamali Deb, when certain Mahratta officers went to Sonpur to realise peshkash, and committed much violence. The people of Sonpur formed a conspiracy to kill the officers, who fled to Bod for refuge. The Sonpur people continued their pursuit up to Bod, where the Rájá took them prisoners and sent them to Nágpur. This conduct of the Chief very much pleased the Mahratta ruler, who conferred the title of "Swasti Sri Prabala-pratapaditya Parutapa Danasampanna Jharkhand Badshah" on the Rájá. This title was subsequently abbreviated to "Jharkhand Paichha"; and in consideration of the above, the Rájá was once for all exempted from paying peshkash to the Mughal and Mahratta rulers. The area of the State (which is one of those known as the Orissa Tributary Mahals) is about 2064 square miles; its population 130,103, chiefly Hindus, but over 37,000 belonging to aboriginal tribes. The Rájá maintains a military force of 592 infantry and 2 guns.

Residence.—Bod, Orissa.

A Ruling Chief.

Born about 1836; succeeded to the gadi on the 12th September 1876. Rendered good service to the Government during the Keonjhar disturbances in 1867-68. Is descended from a Kshatriya (Hindu) family, who call themselves Kodam Bangsa, because the progenitor of the race was born under a kodam tree. The infant, it is said, was abandoned, and was in danger of falling into the hands of an enemy, when a peacock swallowed it, and kept it in his craw until the danger was over; and in gratitude the family adopted the peacock as its crest. The title of Tikait is the courtesy title of the heir-apparent; that of Potait is borne by the second son, that of Lál by the third son, and Bábu by the younger sons, if any. The Rájá Bahádur has the following sons—Tikait Nilambar Deo, Potait Bishambar Deo, Lál Hari Krishna Deo. The area of the State (which is one of the Chota Nágpur Tributary Mahals) is about 1297 square miles; its population 24,026, chiefly Hindus.

BURDWAN, MAHARAJ-KUMAR BIJAI CHAND MAHTAB, Maháráj-Kumár of.

Born 19th October 1881. Succeeded the late Mahárájá Aftab Chand Mahtab Bahádur, Mahárájá of Burdwan. Belongs to a Kapur Kshatriya family of Kotli in Lahore, Punjab, whence Abu Rai, the founder of the Burdwan Ráj family, migrated to Bengal. Was adopted by the late Mahárájá, and is the son of Rájá Bun Behari Kapur of Burdwan (q.v.), a scion of the same family, who is also the guardian and manager of the large estates of the young Maháráj-Kumár. Abu Rai Kapur settled in district Burdwan; and in 1657 A.D. was appointed Chaudhri and Kotwál of Rekabi Bazár, etc., under the Fauzdár of Chaklá Burdwan. He was succeeded by Bábu Rai, who owned Parganá Burdwan and three other estates, and also succeeded his father as Chaudhri. Then followed in succession his son Gyaneshyam Rai, and his grandson Krishna Ráma Rai; the latter received a farmán from the Emperor Aurangzeb, dated 24th

Rabiwal Akhir, in the thirty-eighth year of his reign (1695 A.D.), confirming him as Zamindár and Chaudhri of Burdwan. Succeeded by his son Jagat Ráma Rai, who received a similar farmán from the Emperor Aurangzeb, dated 5th Jamadiwal Awol, in the forty-third year of his reign (1700 A.D.); and again his son, Kirti Chandra Rai, who succeeded, received a similar farmán from the same Emperor, dated 20th Sawab, in the forty-eighth year of his reign (1705 A.D.), mentioning him as Zamindár and Chaudhri of forty-nine Mahals in Parganá Burdwan. Kirti Chandra Rai received a second farmán from the Emperor Muhammad Sháh, adding some Mahals, in the year 1736 A.D. He was succeeded by his son Chitra Sen Rai; who, in the twenty-first year of the reign of the Emperor Muhammad Sháh (1740 A.D.), received a farmán recognising him as Zamindár of Chaklá Burdwan, and giving him the title of Rájá. He was succeeded by his cousin, the nephew of Kirti Chandra, Rájá Tilak Chandra Rai; who received a sanad from the Emperor Ahmad Sháh, dated 7th Rajab, in the seventh year of his reign (1753 A.D.), confirming him as Rájá of Burdwan, etc. In 1765 he received another sanad from the Emperor Sháh Alam, granting an increase of the Zamindari, and the additional title of Bahádur; and about the same time the same Emperor wrote him a friendly letter, intimating his creation as Rájá Bahádur, and also as a Commander of 4000 infantry. To this, in the official farmán that followed, was added also the command of 2000 cavalry; and lastly, in the ninth year of the Emperor Sháh Alam (1768 A.D.), he received from the Commander-in-Chief, by order of the Emperor, a sanad conferring the title of Mahárájá Adhiráj, and making him a Commander of 5000 infantry and 3000 cavalry, with authority for guns, bands, nakara, etc. He was succeeded by his son, the Mahárájá Tej Chandra Rai, who, in 1771 A.D., received a similar sanad to the last-named. He was succeeded by his adopted son, Mahárájá Mahtab Chand, who, in 1833 A.D., received a farmán from Lord William Bentinck, Governor-General, confirming him in the title of Mahárájá Adhiráj Bahádur. In 1868 he obtained for himself and his descendants the license of Her Majesty to bear the arms and supporters described below; and at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, he was granted, as a personal distinction, the right to receive a salute of 13 guns. He managed his great estates with so much success that they became some of the most prosperous in Bengal; and at the time of the Santál Rebellion in 1855, and again during the troubles of the Mutiny, the Mahárájá did everything in his power to strengthen the hands of the Government, by placing elephants and bullock-carts at the disposal of the authorities, and by keeping open the communications in the neighbouring districts. On his death in 1879 he was succeeded by his adopted son, the late Mahárájá Aftab Chand Mahtab, who, on attaining his majority in 1881, was installed at the Palace, Burdwan, in all his father's honours and possessions. He died prematurely in 1888, and was succeeded by his adopted son, the present Maháráj-Kumár, who is still a minor. The family colour is dark-blue with scarlet facings. The arms are azure, an ancient Hindustani shield proper, between in chief a crescent argent and in base two swords in saltire, points downwards, also proper. The crest is an iron-gray horse's head, couped, around the neck a riband azure, and pendent therefrom an escutcheon of the last, charged with a lotus-flower proper. The supporters are, on either side an iron-gray horse regardant, around the neck a riband gules, and pendent therefrom an escutcheon of the last, charged with a lotus-flower proper.

CALICUT, MAHARAJA SIR MANA VIKRAMA BAHADUR, K.C.S.I., Zamorin of.

Born 19th March 1820; succeeded to the gadi 26th March 1868. The present Zamorin is believed to be the 119th in descent from the founder of the family, who derived his title from Cheramán Perumal, the last Emperor of Malabar. The tradition is that there were two youths of the Eradi caste from Pumthura, near Erode, who rendered Cheramán Perumal, the last Emperor of Malabar, signal service in subduing the stronghold of an eastern invader, the Chola King of Choladesh. When Cheramán Perumal became a Buddhist in 352 A.D., and retired from political life, dividing his empire of Malabar among his eighteen feudatories, it chanced that these two youths were absent on a pilgrimage to Benares, so they were overlooked in the distribution of territory. At the last moment they returned, and were presented by the Emperor with his Imperial sword, and a small piece of land called Kokorikot—whence the modern Calicut—Cheramán Perumal bidding them win what more they wanted with the sword. Accordingly, when Vasco da Gama arrived at Calicut in 1498, he found the descendant of one of these youths, the Zamorin of Calicut, ruling over the greater part of South Malabar. From that time the Zamorins were mainly engaged in wars with the Rájás of Cochin and their allies, the Portuguese. The family follows the well-known Marmakkatayam law of inheritance, by which the succession is always to the offspring of its female members only; among these the next eldest male to the Zamorin is the heir apparent. In 1766 the then Zamorin, being beleaguered by Haidar Ali of Mysore, set fire to his palace, and voluntarily perished in the flames. Thenceforward the Zamorins were (with short intervals of attempts at rebellion) the subjects of Haidar and Tippu, until the Calicut territory was ceded to the English by the treaty with Tippu in 1792. The present Zamorin was appointed a Fellow of the Madras University in 1882, created a Mahárájá Bahádur in 1878, and a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India on 25th May 1892. His heir-apparent under the Marumakkatayam law is Mana Vikrama Rájá, born 1832, who bears the courtesy title of "The Eralpad."

Residence.—Calicut, Malabar District, Madras.

CHAMBA, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA SHAM SINGH, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born in 1866; succeeded to the gadi as a minor in 1873. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, descended from the Rájá Sail, who in very early times came from Marwár to Chamba. In 1846 the State came into the possession of the British Government after the first Sikh war, and a part of it was made over to the Mahárájá Goláb Singh of Jammu and Kashmir. Subsequently, however, by an arrangement made with the latter in 1847, Chamba came again entirely under British control, and it was assigned to the then Rájá, Rájá Sri Singh, and his heirs. On his death in 1870 he was succeeded by his brother, Rájá Gopál Singh, who abdicated in 1873, and was succeeded by the present Rájá. In 1854 the sanitarium of Dalhousie was surrendered to the Government by the Rájá of Chamba, in consideration of the remission of part of the yearly tribute, and in 1867 the cantonments of Bakloh and Balun. The area of the State, which is very mountainous, being situated in the Himalayas, on the frontiers of Kashmir, is about 3092 square miles; its population 115,773, chiefly Hindus, but including 6859 Muhammadans. The Rájá maintains a military force of 12 cavalry, 200 infantry, and 3 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

CHARKHARI, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJ-ADHIRAJ
SIPADAR-UL-MULK MULKHAN SINGH BAHADUR,

Mahārājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born January 1872; succeeded to the gadi 10th July 1880. Belongs to the famous Bundela Rájput family founded by Bir Singh in the 13th century, who first took the clan name of Bundela, and from whom are descended a very large number of celebrities in Central Indian history, including the royal families of Orchha, Panna, Dattia, Ajaigarh, Charkhári, Bijáwar, Sarila, Jigni, Jaso, Lughási. One of these descendants, the Mahārājá Chhatarsal, acquired the sovereignty of Eastern and Northern Bundelkhand. Being hard pressed by the Mahrattas, he adopted the Peshwá as one of his sons, who thus obtained one-third of his dominions, including Ságar, Kalpi, etc. His eldest son inherited Panna, while from the second son, Jagat Ráj, descended the Chiefs of Ajaigarh, Charkhári, Bijáwar, and Sarila. The son of Jagat Ráj was Kirat Singh; and the grandson of the latter, the Mahārājá Vikramáditya of Charkhári, received a sanad from the British Government in 1804. His grandson was the Mahārājá Jai Singh, who attended the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in January 1877, and in celebration of the Proclamation of Her Gracious Majesty as Empress of India received the additional title of Sipádár-ul-Mulk. His son is the present Mahārājá, who succeeded as a minor in 1880, attained his majority in January 1892, and assumed the Government of his State at a grand Darbár held at Charkhári on 10th November 1892. At this Darbár were present, besides the Mahārājá and the young Rájá of Sarila, all the principal jágirdárs, thákurs, and officials of the State, numbering more than a hundred. The area of the State is 788 square miles; its population about 143,000, chiefly Hindus, with 6000 Muham-madans. The motto of the family is Singhasanesho van Vījayi ("The Master of the Throne is the Victorious in War"). The Mahārājá maintains a military force of 188 cavalry, 1552 infantry, and 42 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Charkhári, Central India.

CHIRAKAL, KERALA VARMA RAJA, Valiya Rájá of.

Born 1849. Is the head of one of the branches of the Kolattiri House, the Rájá of Kolattiri having been one of those chieftains among whom Cherman Perumal, Emperor of Malabar, divided his dominions when he became a Buddhist and retired from the world in 352 A.D. In 1734 the Chirakal Rájá was acknowledged by all the members of the Kolattiri House as the head of the family, and was entrusted with the administration. The Rájá at the time of Tippu's invasion in 1789 was named Ráma Varma, and he committed suicide to avoid falling into the hands of the conqueror. A prince, who took refuge in the jungles until the English obtained possession of the country, was recognised by them in 1795 as Rájá. The family, like that of the Zamorin of Calicut and other Chiefs of Malabar, follows the Marumakkatayam law of inheritance; by which the succession is to the offspring of its female members, among whom the next eldest male after the Rájá is his heir-apparent. The late Valiya Rájá of Chirakal was called Rajaha Rájá; and he was succeeded by the present Valiya Rájá under the Marumakkatayam law. He receives an allowance from Government, in compensation for the estate that belonged to his ancestors.

DAL CHAND (of Sahanpur), Rai.

Born October 1827. The title is hereditary. Is the representative of a Jat family of ancient origin, who came from Jind in the middle of the 16th century. A scion of this family, named Muchh Padarath, founded the town of Nagal on the Ganges; and rising to high favour with Prince Salim (afterwards the Emperor Jahángir) in the Court of the Emperor Akbar, obtained a Dress of Honour, the title of Rai, and the grant of the territory between Nagal and Barhapura. The Rai Tapráj Singh, grandfather of the present Rai, was a man of great influence. The Rai has four sons—Partáb Singh, Harbans Singh, Jagat Singh, and Bharat Singh.

Residence.—Sahanpur, Bijnaur, North-Western Provinces.

DAL SINGH (of Náhil), Rao.

Born 1842; succeeded his father, Rao Jetsingh, in 1884. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a family of Katchria Rájputs, claiming descent from Rao Hari Singh, who, in the 16th century, settled in Gola Raipur on the river Khanant. A farmán of the Emperor Sháh Jahán, dated 1645, conferred the Zamindári of Gola on Vikráma Singh, a descendant of Rao Hari Singh, and subsequently the family removed to Náhil. They had many struggles with the Patháns during the 17th and 18th centuries, in the course of which, on one occasion, the Rao Gopál Singh, Katchria Thákur of Náhil, was slain in an engagement, leaving only a widow and two infant sons as the sole representatives of the family. Rao Jetsingh, father of the present Rao, did good service in the Mutiny, defending the town of Pawáyan when the Maulavi Ahmadullah Sháh besieged it in 1857; and he also supplied provisions to the British forces on their arrival in the district. The Rao Dal Singh has three sons—Bechu Singh, Jagannáth Singh, and Sardán Singh.

Residence.—Náhil, Sháhjahánpur, North-Western Provinces.

DALIP SINGH, G.C.S.I., His Highness the Mahárájá.

The title is personal. His Highness the Mahárájá, who lives in Europe, is the representative of the "Lion of the Punjab," the famous Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore, under whom the Sikh power rose to its highest point.

Residence.—Europe.

DALIP SINGH (of Kulu), Rai.

Born 1862. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a family whose founder, Sudh Singh, emigrated from Mayapuri to Kulu in the beginning of the 14th century, and established himself there, assuming the title of Rájá. His son, Rájá Bahádur Singh, succeeded him, and greatly extended his dominions by conquest. The family enjoyed independence up to the time of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore, who wrested the country from the Rai Jitsingh, the last independent Rájá of Kulu, but bestowed the Wazir-i-Rupi estate in Kulu on Rai Thákur Singh, a relative of Jitsingh's. This grant, with the hereditary title of Rai, was confirmed by the British Government by a sanad dated 24th October 1846. On his death Rai Thákur Singh was succeeded by his son, Rai Gayan Singh, who was the father of the present Rai.

Residence.—Kángra, Punjab.

DANTA, MAHARANA JASWANTSINGHJI HARISINGHJI, Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 14th October 1850; succeeded to the gadi 1st December 1876. Is tributary to the Gaekwár and to Idar. Belongs to a very ancient family of Pramara Rájputs, who are said to have come from Ujjain, and to have settled in Sind in the year 809 A.D. The area of the State is 2300 square miles; its population about 18,000. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 70 cavalry and 67 infantry.

Residence.—Danta, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

DARBHANGA, MAHARAJA SIR LACHHMESWAR SINGH
BAHADUR, K.C.I.E., Mahárájá of.

One of the Premier Nobles of British India.

Born 1856; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 20th October 1860. In the great Bengal famine of 1873-74, the Mahárájá expended nearly £300,000 in charitable relief; and has since then always taken the foremost part in every public philanthropic work in Bengal, and indeed in every part of the Empire—to which his vast revenues have been largely devoted.

Belongs to an ancient Rájput family, whose ancestor, Mahesh Thákur, obtained the title of Rájá, and the grant of the Darbhanga Ráj, from the Mughal Emperor of Delhi, Akbar the Great, early in the 16th century. Mahesh Thákur died in the year 1558 A.D., leaving five sons—Rám Chandra Thákur, Gopal Thákur, Achit Thákur, Parmanand Thákur, and Subhankar Thákur. Some of the elder sons succeeded in turn to the Ráj, but they all died without issue, and the family was continued in the line of the youngest son, the Rájá Subhankar Thákur. He died in 1607, leaving six sons. Of these the eldest, Purushottam, succeeded to the Ráj; and on his death in 1642 was succeeded by his brother, Sundar Thákur. He held the Ráj for twenty years, and dying in 1662 was succeeded by his eldest son, Mahináth Thákur. The latter died in 1684 without issue, and was succeeded by his brother, Nirpat Thákur, who ruled till 1700 A.D., when he died, and was succeeded by his son, the great Rájá Raghu Singh. He obtained the confirmation of the hereditary title of Rájá through the Nawáb Mahábat Jang, who was at that time Mughal Subahdár of Behar. He also obtained from the Mughal Government the grant of the lease of the whole of the Sarkár Tirhut—including the modern districts of Muzaffarpur and Darbhanga—on the payment to Government of an annual revenue of Rs.1,00,000. The enormous value, in those early times, of this grant may be gathered from the fact that in 1685 A.D. the revenue of Sarkár Tirhut was officially returned at Rs.7,69,287. At one time, during the administration of the Rájá Raghu Singh, the Nawáb Subahdár, jealous of the vast wealth accumulated by the Rájá, seized his property and carried off his family as prisoners to Patna, the Rájá himself only preserving his liberty by prompt flight. Subsequently, however, he was restored to favour, and received large grants from the Mughal Government, on condition that he should “do justice, relieve distress, and put the country in a flourishing condition.” These stipulations have been liberally fulfilled by Rájá Raghu’s descendants and successors in the Ráj. This Rájá built a large mud fort at Bhawará, near Madhubani, the ruins of which still remain there, and the family resided there for the next half-century. He died in 1736, and was succeeded by his son, the Rájá Bishnu Singh. The latter died without issue in 1740, and was succeeded by his brother, the Rájá Narendra Singh, who received large grants from the Nawáb Subahdár Ali Vardi Khán, on condition of his engaging for the revenue, and supporting the interests of the Mughal Government. The Rájá Narendra Singh died without issue in 1760; but he adopted Pratáp Singh, the great-great-grandson of Naráyan Thákur, younger brother of the Rájá Sundar Thákur, and son of the Rájá Subhankar Thákur mentioned above. Rájá Pratáp Singh determed to remove the family residence from the fort of Bhawará; and he built a new Rájbari at Darbhanga, to which he removed in 1762, and it has been the seat of the family ever since. Rájá Pratáp Singh died in 1776, and was succeeded by his brother, the Rájá Madhu Singh. In that year the Rájá received from Sháh Alam, the Mughal Emperor of Delhi, the grant of Dharmpur, in the district of Purniah. The Rájá Mádhú Singh, during a long administration of thirty-two years, had frequent disputes with the Calcutta Government in regard to the revenue payments and the extent of his rights over the land. These disputes at one time became so acute that the settlement was made with others; but ultimately he obtained from the Board of Revenue the restoration of his estates. The Rájá Mádhú Singh died in 1808, leaving five sons—Kishan Singh, who died without issue; Chhatar Singh, who succeeded him, and three others. Chhatar Singh is the first of the Darbhanga Rájás who is recorded to have held the higher title of Mahárájá Bahádur, though it is probable that it had also been held by some at least of his ancestors. The Mahárájá Chhatar Singh, who succeeded to the gadi in 1808, lived till 1839; when, on the ground of old age, he made over his estates and the title to his elder son, Rudra Singh—giving to his younger son, Bisdeo Singh, for maintenance, the Ráj villages in Jarail, four houses, two elephants, and apartments in the Darbhanga Palace. He asked to have Rudra Singh's name entered in the Bengal Revenue Roll, and died a few days afterwards. These arrangements led to extensive litigation, as the younger son claimed a larger share of the estates. Ultimately the High Court decided that the law of inheritance in this family must follow the family custom, and not the ordinary Hindu law; and by the family custom (or Kuláchar) the eldest son succeeds to the Ráj, the younger obtaining sufficient properties in land for their maintenance, which lands (as under feudal tenure) revert to the Ráj on failure of male issue. The Mahárájá Rudra Singh died in 1850, leaving four sons—Maheshwar Singh (who succeeded him), Ganeshwar Singh, Nitreshwar Singh, and Gopeshwar Singh. For ten years the Mahárájá Maheshwar Singh held the Ráj. He died on 20th October 1860, leaving two sons—Lachhmeswar Singh (who succeeded him, and is the present Mahárájá Bahádur) and Rámeshwar Singh (who is now the Rájá Rámeshwar Singh Bahádur, q.v.)

The Mahárájá Lachhmeswar Singh Bahádur of Darbhanga was under the guardianship of the Court of Wards during his minority; and had the great advantage of having, as tutor, a very able and sympathetic English gentleman, Mr. Chester Macnaghten, whose capacity for this work was so marked that he was afterwards selected by the Government for the Principalship of the Rájkumár College at Rájkot, in Káthiáwár, for the Princes and Chiefs of Western India. Since the Mahárájá attained his majority he has entirely devoted himself to the public duties of his position as one of the greatest Nobles of British India. He has long served as a Member of the Legislative Council of the Viceroy, and taken a leading part in the debates of that body. During the lengthened discussions on the important Bengal Tenancy Bill, he acted (in conjunction at first with the lamented patriot, Kristodas Pál, and subsequently with the Rájá Pítri Mohan Mukharji, C.S.I.) as the representative of the landowners of Bengal and Behar; and received the warm recognition of the ability and moderation he brought to bear on this and other questions from successive Viceroys. To the public at large he is best known as one of the most munificent of living philanthropists. In addition to the £300,000 expended in charitable relief during the Bengal famine of 1873-74, in every time of scarcity the Mahárájá's arrangements for meeting it have been on a splendid scale, and have been in many cases the models for the Government measures. He has built, and entirely supports, a first-class Dispensary at Darbhanga, which cost £3400; a similar one at Kharakpur, which cost £3500; and largely contributes to many others. He has built an Anglo-vernacular school at a cost of £1490, which he maintains, as well as nearly thirty vernacular schools of different grades; and subsidises a much larger number of educational institutions. He has constructed hundreds of miles of roads in various parts of the Ráj, planting them with tens of thousands of trees for the comfort of travellers. He has constructed iron bridges over all the navigable rivers of the Ráj, and completed an elaborate system of irrigation-works, for prevention of famine. In carrying out his duties as one of the largest landowners of India he has had the advantage of the assistance of several very able English managers in succession, specially selected with the approval of the Government—including Colonel Money of the Staff Corps, Mr. G. W. Lewhellin and Mr. Henry Bell, formerly of the Bengal Civil Service. With the aid of these gentlemen and others, the Darbhanga Ráj has attained the proud position of being regarded as the model for good and benevolent management. The Mahárájá has devoted special attention to all agricultural improvements, and especially to improvements in the breeds of horses and cattle in Behar. He is a liberal patron of the turf, and has been the owner of the largest and most valuable racing-stud in India, under experienced English trainers; and he is also a keen sportsman and a first-rate whip, his jungles on the Nepál frontier affording some of the best sport in the country. The new Palace at Darbhanga, with its immense stables, its botanical and zoological gardens, and its many beautiful surroundings, is well known in England by the sketches that have appeared in the London illustrated papers.

Most of the Mahárájá of Darbhanga's munificence has been devoted to objects of charity pure and simple, such as famine-relief, medical aid, and the like. But he has also contributed very largely to objects of general public utility—as, for instance, in the gift of Rs.50,000 to the funds of the Imperial Institute. In celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee he remitted a large portion of the rents of all his tenants for the year 1887. It has been computed that since his succession to the Ráj an aggregate sum of something like two millions sterling has been expended on charities, works of public utility, and charitable remissions of rent.

On the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Mahárájá Bahádúr was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. The family cognisance is the Gangetic dolphin or sacred fish of the Hindus. The Darbhanga Ráj comprises large portions of the modern districts of Darbhanga, Muzaffarpur, Monghyr, Purniah, and Bhágalpur. The capital, Darbhanga, is the civil station of the district of the same name; it is a large and thriving town, with a population (by the census of 1881) of 65,955, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Darbhanga, Tirhut, Bengal.

DATTIA, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA LOKINDAR BHAWANI SINGH BAHADUR, *Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 13th August 1854; succeeded to the gadi 20th November 1857. Belongs to the great Bundela Rájput family descended from Bir Singh, who took the clan name of Bundela, and settled in Bundelkhand in the 13th century; and from whom are descended the ruling families of Orchha, Dattia, Panna, Ajaigarh, Charkhári, Bijáwar, Sarila, etc. In the time of the Emperors Akbar and Jahángir, the Mahárájá Bir Singh Deo was ruler of Orchha; and his second son, Bhagwan Rai, became ruler of Dattia. The State came under British control, with other territories in Bundelkhand, by the Treaty of Bassein, concluded with the Peshwá in 1802. The Rájá Parichhat of Dattia, whose first treaty with the British Government is dated 1804, sided with the British throughout the subsequent wars with the Mahrattas; and was rewarded in 1817, on the deposition of the Peshwá, by a new treaty and enlarged territories. His adopted son was the Rájá Bijai Bahádur of Dattia; and the adopted son of the latter is the present Chief, whose succession was disputed by Arjun Singh (an illegitimate son of the Rájá Bijai Bahádur), but was enforced by British troops. The ancient title of the family was Mahárájá Rao Rájá. In 1865 the Government recognised the title of Mahárájá as hereditary; and on 1st January 1877, at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, in honour of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, the title of Lokindar was added. The motto of the family is Wír dalap Sharandah ("Lord of the Brave Army, Giver of Refuge"). The area of the State is about 836 square miles; its population about 183,000, chiefly Hindus, but including some 9000 Muhammadans. His Highness the Mahárájá maintains a military force of 945 cavalry, 5203 infantry, and 124 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Residence.—Dattia, Bundelkhand, Central India.

DAULAT RAM, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1883.

Residence.—Jálandhar, Punjab.

DAULAT SINGH (of Kaksis), Rájá.

Born 2nd October 1830. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a family which is a branch of the Kachhwáhá Rájput clan from Lahar, of Surajbansi origin, claiming descent from Rájá Dula Rai of Narwar. His son Indarpál in the year 1033 A.D. came to Indarki and Lahar, and established a branch of the family there, dispossessing the Meo clan. The eldest son of Rájá Indarpál was Rájá Bawan Pál, who seized Rámpur in 1241, and reigned there. The fifth in descent from Bawan Pál was the Rájá Aman Deo, who seized Kaksis and all the neighbouring territory. His descendants suffered much from the Bundela invasion in 1558; and subsequently from the exactions of the Peshwá and Sindhia. The head of the family was confirmed in possession of the estates that remained to him when the country came under British control in 1841. The Rájá has a son and heir, Raghunáth Singh, aged about thirty-four years.

Residence.—Sikri, Parganá Madhogarh, Jalaun, North-Western Provinces.

DAULATRAI SAMPATRAI, MUNSHI, Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty.

Residence.—Surat, Bombay.

DAYA KISHAN, Rai.

Born 5th December 1842. The title is hereditary. Is the son of Rai Hingan Lal, Kayasth, formerly Tahsildár of Dehra Dun; who had a jdgir and the honorary title of Deputy Magistrate and Collector conferred on him on 4th August 1858, for special services rendered to the Government during the Mutiny in the Jaunpur district. The Rai has a son and heir named Madan Makund, born 25th February 1865.

Residence.—Jaunpur, North-Western Provinces.

DAYAL SINGH (of Majithia), Sardár.

Born in 1848 A.D. The title is hereditary, derived originally from the Sikh Government, and confirmed by the British Government. The family is of the Shergil Jat tribe. The great-grandfather of Sardár Dayal Singh, who was named Jodh Singh, was a feudal retainer of Sardár Amar Singh Baggah, who possessed a large territory in the district now called Gurdáspur, and held a considerable jágir. He died in 1788. His only son, Sardár Desa Singh, remained in the service of the Baggah Sardárs till 1809. He entered the service of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh on the reduction of the Baggah Sardárs, and accompanied the Mahárájá in his famous expedition to Kángra. After the expulsion of the Gurkhas he was appointed Governor of the Hill States. He continued to perform valuable service; and with his son, Sardár Lahna Singh, received extensive grants from Ranjit Singh. He died in 1832, and was succeeded in all his estates and honours by Sardár Lahna Singh, father of the present Sardár, who received charge of the hill territory between the Rávi and the Sutlej. He proved a most capable Governor; but on the rise of Rájá Hira Singh to power, he left the Punjab for a pilgrimage, to avoid the enmity of Pandit Jalla. After the close of the Sutlej Campaign he returned to Lahore at the invitation of the Council and the Resident, and consented to join the Council. Subsequently, however, foreseeing further troubles, he determined to leave the Punjab; and in January 1848 he left for Benares, where he died. He was a skilful mechanist and an original inventor; and greatly improved the Sikh ordnance.

Residence.—Majithia, Amritsar, Punjab.

DEO, RAJA BHIKAM NARAYAN SINGH BAHADUR, Rájá of.

Succeeded his father, the late Mahárájá Sir Joy Prakásh Singh Bahádur of Deo, K.C.S.I., in 1881. Belongs to a Sesodiya Rájput family, and claims to be descended from the ancestors of His Highness the Maháráná of Udaipur, through Rájá Rai Bhan Singh Bahádur. The Rájá Fatteh Naráyan Singh, in 1782, and again in 1804, was rewarded by Government for his services with a grant of land and other honours. He was succeeded by his son, Ganesam Singh, who in 1816 was similarly rewarded with the grant of a Zamindari; and the son of the latter, Bábu Manti Bhan Singh, rendered excellent service in the Kol insurrection of 1831. Manti Bhan Singh was succeeded by his son, Joy Prakásh Singh, who was conspicuous for his loyalty and faithful services during the Mutiny in 1857; and for his laudable exertions in keeping this part of the district in order, and in quelling the insurrection in the Chutia Nágpur division, he was at first honoured with the title of Mahárájá Bahádur, and then in 1866 created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. His only son is the present Rájá Bahádur.

DEVALIA, Thákur of. See Agar.

DEVENDRA NATH MALLIK, Kumár.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 18th July 1861; the Kumár being the eldest son of the late Rájá Rajendra Náth Mallik. The family name is Sil; but the hereditary title of Mallik having been granted by the old Mughal Emperors, has been adopted as a family name. The family is very ancient; its pedigree for twenty generations is in existence, and its head has long been reckoned the Dalapati or Chief of the Shuvarnavanik caste, and of the Bráhmans of that clan. The crest of the family is an oval star enclosing a lion.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

DEVENDRA NATH SAHAI DEO, Thákur.

The title is hereditary, and was originally conferred by the Maharájá of Chota Nágpur, and confirmed on 23rd December 1872. The family is a younger branch of that of the Rájás of Chota Nágpur, and is said to be descended from the pandrik nág or sacred Serpent; its cognisance or crest is a cobra with a human face under the expanded hood.

Residence.—Lohárdaga, Bengal.

DEWA SINGH (of Bahram), Sardár.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Jálandhar, Punjab.

DEWAS, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA KRISHNAJI RAO PUAR,
Rájá of (Senior Branch).

“Bábá Saheb.”

A Ruling Chief.

Born November 1849; succeeded to the gadí 18th March 1861. Belongs, with His Highness the Rájá of Dewás of the Junior Branch (who is called the “Dádá Saheb”), to a Puar Rájput family, descended from a common ancestor with the Rájá of Dhár. The Rájá Káluji had two sons, Tukaji and Jiwaji, and these sons received from Bájí Rao Peshwá the grant of the Dewás State in common—the descendants of Rájá Tukaji being known as the Senior Branch or “Bábá Saheb.” Tukaji was succeeded by Krishnaji, and the latter by Tukaji II., who adopted Rukmangad Rao, commonly known as Khási Saheb. He succeeded Tukaji II. in 1824; and, dying in 1860, was succeeded by his adopted son, the present Chief.

The two Rájás of Dewás, Senior Branch and Junior Branch (or Bábá Saheb and Dádá Saheb), reside in different palaces in the same town of Dewás; but the rule of each Chief is distinct within his own limits. Both Chiefs rendered good service during the Mutiny.

The area of the territories under the rule of the Bábá Saheb is 155 square miles; population about 73,940, chiefly Hindus, but including nearly 8000 Muhammadans. His Highness the Rájá maintains a military force of 70 cavalry, 594 infantry, and 14 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Residence.—Dewás, Indore, Central India.

DEWAS, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA NARAYAN RAO PUAR, Rájá of (Junior Branch).

“Dádá Saheb.”

A Ruling Chief.

Born 20th December 1860; succeeded to the gadi 8th August 1864. Belongs, with His Highness the Rájá of Dewás of the Senior Branch (who is called the “Bábá Saheb”), to a Puar Rájput family, descended from a common ancestor with the Rájá of Dhár. The Rájá Káluji had two sons, Tukaji and Jiwaji, and these sons received from Bájí Rao Peshwá the grant of the Dewás State in common—the descendants of Rájá Jiwaji being known as the Junior Branch or “Dádá Saheb.” Jiwaji adopted Anand Rao Puár, who, in 1837, adopted Haibat Rao, who succeeded him. The latter died in 1864 and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá.

The two Rájás of Dewás, Senior Branch and Junior Branch (or Bábá Saheb and Dádá Saheb), reside in different palaces in the same town of Dewás, but the rule of each Chief is distinct within his own limits. Both Chiefs rendered good service during the Mutiny.

The area of the territories under the rule of the Dádá Saheb is 134 square miles; population 68,222, chiefly Hindus, but including nearly 7000 Muhammadans. His Highness the Rájá maintains a military force of 79 cavalry, 166 infantry, and 6 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Residence.—Dewás, Indore, Central India.

Residence.—Dhamasia, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

DHAMI, RANA FATEH SINGH, Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1855; succeeded to the gadí 26th January 1870. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, whose founder, on the invasion of India by Shaháb-ud-din Ghori in the 14th century, fled from Rájputra in the Ambála district, and conquered the territory of Dhami. The State was formerly a feudatory of Biláspur, but was made directly dependent on the British Power on the expulsion of the Gurkhas by the latter in 1815. The sanád recognising the Ráná is dated 4th September 1815. The present Ráná succeeded the Ráná Govardhan Singh in 1870. The area of the State is 29 square miles; its population about 3300, chiefly Hindus. The Ráná maintains a military force of 60 infantry.

Residence.—Pesháwar, Punjab.

DHANPAT SINGH DUGAR (of Baluchar), Rai Bahádur.

Born 1841. The title is personal, and was conferred on 13th December 1866. The Rai Bahádur, son of the late Pratáp Singh Dugar of the Oswal caste, is a leading man among the Jains, and has founded many Dharmshálas for the use of his co-religionists in various parts of India, and published and distributed the Jain sacred books. He is a banker and manufacturer, having houses in most of the great cities of Bengal, and has been distinguished for his liberality and public spirit. He has been twice married, and has three sons—Bábu Ganpat Singh and Bábu Narpát Singh by the first wife, and Bábu Maháráj Bahádur Singh by the second. Is an Honorary Magistrate. The family emigrated about 150 years ago from Kishengarh in Rájputána, and settled at Baluchar and Azimganj, in the district of Murshidabad, Bengal.

Residence.—Azimganj and Baluchar, Murshidabad, Bengal.

DHAR, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA SIR ANAND RAO
PUAR, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 8th April 1844; succeeded to the gadi 21st November 1864. Belongs (with their Highnesses the Rájás of Dewás, Senior and Junior Branch) to the great Puár Rájput (Hindu) family, said to be descended from the famous Hindu legendary heroes, King Vikramáditya and Rájá Bhoj. Rájá Bhoj is said to have been the first Puár to come to Dhár. About the year 1730 Anand Rao Puár, Rájá of Dhár, was acknowledged by the Peshwá, Báji Rao, to be the head of the Puárs. One of the great historical Princesses of India, celebrated for her courage and abilities, and the determination with which she resisted the attacks of Sindhia and Holkár, was the Ráni Miná Bai, widow of Anand Rao II., who was the great-grandson of his namesake. The Ráni was succeeded by her adopted son, Rájá Rámchandra Puár, who adopted Jeswant Rao, the half-brother of the present Rájá. Rájá Jeswant Rao died in 1857, and the State was confiscated for rebellion during the Mutiny, but it was restored in 1864 to the present Rájá, who was then a minor. The title of Viswas Rao ("Faithful") is said to have been conferred on this family by the Mahárájas of Sátára, as the descendants of Sivaji and the heads of the Mahratta Empire, but it has not been recognised in recent years. The area of the State is about 1740 square miles, and it has many feudatories. The population is about 148,000, chiefly Hindus, but including about 12,000 Muhammadans and about 19,000 aborigines. The present Rájá has been granted the title of Maháráj as a personal distinction, and created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1883; he had been created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. His Highness maintains a military force of 367 cavalry, 1249 infantry, and 5 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Residence.—Dhár, Bhopáwar, Central India.

DHARAM NARAYAN, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 2nd January 1888.

Residence.—Ambála, Punjab.

DHARAM NARAYAN PANDIT, C.I.E., Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 15th February 1860.

Residence.—Indore, Central India.

DHARAM SINGH (of Bichuri), Sardár.

Born 1857. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Jat family, of Manjha, Punjab. Sardár Dargáha Singh acquired considerable territory by conquest in 1759 A.D., but his descendants were deprived of the largest portion of their estates by the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh. The grandson of the Sardár Dargáha Singh was Sardár Dewa Singh, who was the father of the present Sardár.

Residence.—Bichuri, Jálandhar, Punjab.

DHARAMPUR, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARANA SHRI NARAYANDEVJI RAMDEVJI, Rájá of.

Born 3rd September 1840; succeeded to the gadí 20th January 1860. Belongs to the Solar race of Udaipur, and is consequently a Sesodiya Rájput. His Highness's ancestors have borne the title of Maháráná from time immemorial. They were the Rájás of the Surat district when the British first came to the country, and have always been recognised by the Paramount Power. His Highness has four sons—Shri Dharamdevji, Shri Mohandevji, Shri Haridevji, and Shri Baldevji. His banner bears a golden-yellow sun in the centre of the field, in virtue of his descent from "the Sun of the Hindus," the Udaipur Chief. Has two grandsons, also several daughters and granddaughters; and has received a sanad guaranteeing him the privilege of adoption. The area of the State is 794 square miles; its population about 102,000, chiefly Hindus. His Highness maintains a military force of 40 cavalry, 171 infantry, and 4 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Dharampur, Surat, Bombay.

DHARMA RAO NAYADU, R., Rao Bahádur.

Born 1857; appointed Deputy Collector in 1869; Assistant Commissioner of Salt Revenue in 1880; granted the personal title of Rao Bahádur in 1890.

Residence.—Cocanada, Godávari District, Madras.

DHARMRAJ KUNWAR (of Parhat and Rájábazár), Ráni.

Born 1854; succeeded her late husband, the Rájá Mahesh Naráyan of Rájábazár, on 11th October 1878. The family are Raghubansi Rájputs, whose founder came from Kaliangarh Sawain, and acquired the territories of Rájábazár. The neighbouring Rájás conferred the title of Rájá by tilak some 200 or 300 years ago, and the late Rájá was the seventh who had borne the title. He was Rájá of Parhat, in the district of Partabgarh, Oudh, as well as of Rájábazár; and was an Honorary Magistrate both in Oudh and in the North-Western Provinces.

Residence.—Rájábazár, Garwára, Jaunpur District, North-Western Provinces.

The Santak of the Chauhán Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature.

(A circle with four Trisulas or Tridents as radii at the cardinal points.)

DHARNANDA, THAKUR BHIM SINGH,

Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1859; succeeded to the gadi in December 1887. Belongs to a Chauhán Rájput (Hindu) family, descended from Thákur Chhatar Sal, who was recognised by the British Government in 1843. The population of the State is about 5000, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Dharnanda, Gwalior, Central India.

DHARUP SINGH, Rao Saheb.

The title is hereditary. The ancestor of this family, Rao Kehári Singh, did good service with Sultán Muhammad, Nawáb of Rahatgarh, in return for which he received the title and considerable grants. The father of the present Rao Saheb was the Rao Jag Ráj Singh.

Residence.—Ságar, Central Provinces.

DHAUKAL PARSHAD, MUNSHI, Rai Bahádur.

Born 27th February 1828. The title is personal, and was conferred on 2nd January 1888. Belongs to a Kanungo family of Parganá Karsoli, and rendered good service to Government during the Mutiny. Is an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Mainpuri, North-Western Provinces.

DHENKANAL, RAJA SURA PRATAP MAHINDRA

BAHADUR, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1884; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 29th August 1885. The family are Kshatriya Hindus, and were anciently feudatories of the old Rájás of Orissa; said to have been founded by Harihar Samant Singhar, who established himself in Dhenkanal after killing the aboriginal Rájá Dhenka, from whom the State derives its modern name. The titles of Samant, Singhar, Brahmarbar were conferred on the family by the old Rájás of Orissa. Subsequently the title of Mahindra Bahádur was conferred by the Mahrattas, who also recognised the title of Rájá, which finally was conferred on the predecessor of the present Chief by the Government of India in 1874. The family crest and seal is the minaketana, a flag bearing the emblem of the sacred fish. The area of the State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, is 1463 square miles; its population about 208,316, chiefly Hindus, but including about 80,000 Savars and other aboriginal tribesmen. The Rájá maintains a military force of 343 infantry and 8 guns.

Residence.—Dhenkanal, Orissa, Bengal.

DHIRAJ KARAN, Rai Bahádur.

Granted the title of Rai Bahádur, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1893.

Residence.—Monghyr, Bengal.

DHOLPUR, His Highness the Maháráj Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1862; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 9th February 1873. The full titles of this Chief are—Major His Highness Rais-ud-daulá Sipahdár-ul-Mulk, Maháráj-Adhiráj Sri Sawai Maháráj Ráná Nihal Singh, Lokindar Bahádur, Diler Jang, Jai Deo. Belongs to a Jat (Hindu) family, which traces its pedigree back to the 11th century, when it held lands under the Puár Kings of Delhi. In later times it acquired territory on the banks of the Chambal, and was powerful in the 18th century, when the Ráná of Gohad, ancestor of the present Maháráj Ráná, joined the British troops in the Mahratta war in 1779. The title of Ráná had been recognised by the Emperor Sikandar Lodí of Delhi, but in 1779 the British recognised the Ráná as Maháráj Ráná. In 1805 Lord Cornwallis granted Gohad to Sindhia, and in exchange granted to the Maháráj Ráná Kirat Singh (ancestor of the present Chief) the territories of Dholpur, Bári, and Rájákhera. Kirat Singh was succeeded by Bhagwant Singh, who showed great loyalty during the Mutiny of 1857, and was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. His son married a daughter of the late Rájá of Patiala, but died before his father, leaving a son and heir, the present Maháráj Ráná, who succeeded his grandfather in 1873. The area of the State is 1200 square miles; its population about 250,000, chiefly Hindus, but including 18,000 Muhammadans and 2500 Jains. The Maháráj Ráná maintains a military force of 139 cavalry, 1588 infantry, and 32 guns. His Highness is an Honorary Major in the British army, and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns. The family colour was azure, but in an encounter towards the end of the last century the then Chief captured from the Thákurs of Bamraoli a golden-yellow flag, with a figure of Hanumán (the monkey-god) in the centre of the field, and this has been subsequently adopted as the family cognisance.

Arms.—Or, a “Hanumán” gules, on a chief azure a sword between two towers or. Supporters.—Two Rájput warriors in full armour. Crest.—A “Narsinghji” (man-lion) proper. Motto.—Mitra Mitra, Amitra Amitra (“Sure friend, sure foe.”)

Residence.—Dholpur, Rájputána.

DHRANGADRA, HIS HIGHNESS SIR MANSINGHJI RANMALSINGHJI, K.C.S.I., Ráj Saheb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 11th January 1837; succeeded to the gadi on the death of his father, His late Highness the Ráj Saheb Ranmalsinghji, K.C.S.I., on 28th October 1869. Is the head of the Jhála Rájputs, and the Chief of this family has consequently long held the title of Ráj Saheb, while the title of "Maharáná" is commonly used by the Jhála clansmen of their chief, and it is also commonly used as the vernacular equivalent of "His Highness," the title conferred by the Queen Empress. The Jhála Rájputs are said to have entered Káthiáwár from Sind in the 8th century A.D., and the founder of this dynasty is stated to have been Harapál Devji, who obtained from the Solankhi Rájput Chief of Patan the grant of the district subsequently known as Jháláwár in Káthiáwár. It may be noted that the State of Jháláwár in Rájputána was founded in the beginning of the 18th century A.D. by Jhála emigrants from Káthiáwár. His Highness's ancestors—from whom also descend the Chiefs of Wánkáner, Limri, Wadhván, Chura, Sáyla, and Thán-Lakhtár—were settled first at Patri in Ahmadabad; then at Halwad in Káthiáwár; and finally at Dhrángadra. Sir Mansinghji has been distinguished for the enlightened character of his administration, especially in the matters of public instruction and internal communications. He has established an efficient girls' school at Dhrángadra, and many good schools throughout the State; and has constructed many good roads, and other public works. To commemorate the visit of His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh to Bombay in 1870 His Highness contributed a large sum towards the erection of a Dharmśála at Rájkot; and his loyalty was still more conspicuously displayed on the occasion of the landing of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at Bombay in 1875, which was celebrated by the erection and endowment of the Albert Edward Hospital at Dhrángadra. His Highness was prevented by serious illness from attending the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi on the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, but he was on that occasion created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, and received the addition of four guns to his salute as a personal distinction. When he was presented with the insignia of the Star of India, at the same time as His Highness the Jám of Nauanagar, the Political Agent, speaking for the Government, said: "His Highness the Ráj Saheb of Dhrángadra commands respect as the head, both of the Jhála tribe and of a ruling house second to none in domestic virtue. He now accedes to the honours enjoyed by his father, Sir Ranmalsinghji, the worthy son of a worthy sire. The decorations granted to these princes are the natural ornaments of exalted hereditary rank." Much sympathy was felt for His Highness when, in 1879, he lost his eldest son and heir, the late Rájkumár Jaswantsinghji, whose son (the grandson of the present Chief) is now the heir-apparent to the gadi. The area of the State is 1156 square miles; its population about 100,000, chiefly Hindus, but including about 6000 Muhammadans. The Ráj Saheb maintains a military force of 103 cavalry, 470 infantry, and 9 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Residence.—Dhrángadra, Káthiáwár.

DHROL, THAKUR SAHEB HARISINGHJI JAISINGHJI, Thákur Saheb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1846; succeeded his father, the late Thákur Saheb Jesinghji, 26th October 1886. Is a Jareja Rájput, descended from a brother of Jám Ráwal, the first Jám of Nauanagar, who founded that State in 1542 A.D.; and the family is also the same as that of His Highness the Mahárao Rájá of Kutch. The area of the State is about 283 square miles; its population is about 22,000, chiefly Hindus, but including nearly 3000 Muhammadans. The Thákur Saheb maintains a military force of 25 cavalry, 285 infantry, and 6 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Dhrol, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

DINSHA DOSABHAI KHAMBATTA, Khán Saheb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 18th August 1881.

Residence.—Disa, Bombay.

DIWAN CHAND, Rai.

Born 1835. The only son of Diwán Ganpat Rai; who was in favour with the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, appointed by him tutor of his grandson, and rewarded by the grant of a jágir and the appointment of Hazurnavis. Descended from a family whose ancestor, Gaggan Mal, was distinguished, in the time of the Emperor Akbar, as the founder of Ghartal in Siálkot, and obtained the title of Malik. His grandsons, Diwán Rámji Mal and Shámji Mal, earned the title of Diwán in the time of the Emperor Aurangzeb; Rámji Mal was appointed Hazurnavis, and Shámji obtained a command in the Kabul army. The family left Ghartal for Jammu, and subsequently for Dera Nának; but Diwán Nand Gopál, the grandfather of Rai Diwán Chand, returned to the ancestral home. His son was Diwán Ganpat Rai mentioned above, who was appointed by the Mahárájá Sher Singh officer in charge of the magazines. He was a brave soldier, and fought in the battles of Pesháwar, Multán, and Dera Ismail Khán; and throughout the rebellions of 1847 and 1848 attached himself to the British Resident. The Rai Diwán Chand was for some time Tahsildár of Roras in Wazirábád; has subsequently been an able and successful journalist and author, as well as distinguished in municipal and university work, and is Vice-President of the Punjab Press Association. Received the title on 24th May 1889. Has two sons, Munshi Brij Lal and Munshi Gayan Chand.

DUMRAON, MAHARAJA SIR RADHA PRASAD SINGH BAHADUR, K.C.I.E., Mahárájá of.

Born 14th August 1841. Belongs to an ancient Kshatriya (Hindu) family, claiming descent from the Rájá Vikramáditya of Málwá, through the Rájá Bhoj Singh, who founded the ancient Hindu city of Bhojpur, the ruins of which are distant about one mile from Dumraon, in the district of Sháh-abad. One of the descendants of Rájá Bhoj Singh was Naráyan Mal, on whom it is said that the Mughal Emperor Jahángir conferred the title of Rájá in the year 1604 A.D.; and his son, grandson, and great-grandson in turn received the same title. The last-named was the Rájá Haril Singh, who in the year 1720 A.D. received from the Emperor Muhammad Sháh the title of Rájá, extensive grants of land, and the command of 1000 infantry and 800 cavalry. His son was the Rájá Chhatardhári Singh, who also obtained the same title and further grants from the Emperor Muhammad Sháh in 1746 A.D. Chhatardhári's son was the Rájá Vikramáditya Singh, who received his title in 1771 A.D. from the Emperor Sháh Alam, and subsequently obtained a confirmation thereof and sundry grants from the British Government. His son, Jai Prakás Singh, seems to have obtained the title of Mahárájá from the Marquess of Hastings in 1816. He was succeeded by his grandson, Janaki Prasád Singh, who died whilst a minor; and the latter in turn was followed by his uncle, the late Mahárájá Maheshwar Bakhsh Singh (father of the present Mahárájá), who was a younger son of the Rájá Jai Prakás Singh, born 20th October 1803, and succeeded to the Ráj in 1844. The Mahárájá Maheshwar Bakhsh Singh took a leading part in the reception of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; and was honoured with the gift of a portrait-medal from His Royal Highness, and a letter of acknowledgment of his services. He was reported to stand conspicuous for his loyalty and liberality on all occasions, and was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. Dying in 1881, he was succeeded by his son, the present Mahárájá Rádhá Prasád Singh Bahádur. The latter had been created a Rájá during the lifetime of his father, for good service rendered during the great famine of 1873-74; and he had also been honoured by receiving a portrait-medal from His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and a letter of acknowledgment for services rendered in the reception of His Royal Highness. On succeeding his father he received the title of Mahárájá Bahádur as a personal distinction, 13th January 1882.

Residence.—Dumraon, Sháhabad, Bengal.

DUN, MAUNG, Thuye-gaung Ngweda ya Min.

DUNJ SHETAN (of Spiti), Nono of Spiti.

The title is hereditary, the Nono being the descendant of the Tibetan Chiefs, formerly feudatories of Ladákh in Tibet. Since the conclusion of the first Sikh war in 1846, Spiti has been an outlying subdivision of the Himalayan district of Kángra, Punjab; and is administered by British officials with the aid of the Nono, who is an Honorary Magistrate. The population of the valley—which is covered by deep snow every year from December to April—is hardly 3000, almost entirely Tibetan in race.

Residence.—Spiti, Kángra, Punjab.

DUNGARPUR, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAWAL UDAI SINGH BAHADUR, Maháráwal of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 22nd May 1839 ; succeeded to the gadi 28th September 1846. Is a Sesodia Rájput, descended from a branch of the ruling family of Udaipur, the "Sun of the Hindus." The Maháráwals of Dungarpur were tributary, from time to time, to the Mughal Emperors of Delhi and to the Mahrattas ; from whom they were finally rescued by the British Power, a treaty being concluded in 1818. The Bhils were reduced to submission ; and in 1825 the Maháráwal Jaswant Singh, being found incompetent, was deposed by the Government, and his adopted son Dalpat Singh, second son of the Chief of Partábgarh, appointed to succeed. Subsequently the Maháráwal Dalpat Singh succeeded to the gadi of Partábgarh ; so the British Government permitted him to adopt the present Maháráwal (then a minor) to succeed him in Dungarpur. The Maháráwal has a son and heir, the Maháráj Kunwar Khuman Singh. The distinctive family colour is red. The area of the State is about 1000 square miles ; its population about 154,000, chiefly Hindus, but including 3609 Muhammadans and 67,000 Bhils (aborigines). His Highness the Maháráwal maintains a military force of 251 cavalry, 535 infantry, and 8 guns ; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

FARIDKOT, His Highness the Rájá Bahádur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1842; succeeded to the gadi 22nd April 1874. His full titles are—His Highness Farzand-i-Saádat-i-Nishán-i-Hazrat-i-Kaisar-i-Hind Barár Bans Rájá Bikrám Singh Bahádur, Rájá Bahádur of Faridkot. Is the head of the Barár Jat tribe of Sikhs, the family tracing their origin from Barár, seventeenth in descent from Jesal, the founder of the Jesalmir State, and the ancestor of the Sidhu and other illustrious Jat clans. A descendant of Barár's, named Ballan, rose to eminence in the time of the Emperor Akbar. His nephew built Kot-Kapura, a fort about six miles south of the town of Faridkot; and a descendant named Sardár Hamir Singh became independent Chief of Faridkot in 1782. In 1808 Faridkot submitted to the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, and the territory was granted to Diwán Mokam Chand, the Lahore General. But when in 1808-9 the British Government demanded from the Mahárájá the surrender of his conquests on the left bank of the Sutlej, Faridkot was given back to its ancient possessors; and in 1845, when the first Sikh war broke out, the Sardár Pahár Singh of Faridkot attached himself to the English, using his utmost exertions to collect supplies and carriage, and furnishing guides for the army. Pahár Singh received as his reward the title of Rájá, together with half the territory confiscated from the Rájá of Nábha, and in this obtained possession once more of Kot-Kapura, the ancestral seat of his family. He was succeeded by his son, the Rájá Wazir Singh, who joined the English in the second Sikh war, and greatly distinguished himself during the Mutiny of 1857 by seizing mutineers, guarding the ferries over the Sutlej, and attacking a notorious rebel named Shám Dás, whose village he destroyed. His troops served with credit under General Van Cortlandt in Sirsa and elsewhere. For these services Rájá Wazir Singh received the additional titles of "Barár Bans Rájá Saheb Bahádur," a khilat of increased value, and a salute of 11 guns. He was also exempted from the service of ten horsemen, which he had previously had to provide; and in 1862 he received a sanad conferring the right of adoption. The present Rájá has given up excise and transit duties in exchange for compensation. The area of the State is 612 square miles; its population 97,034, of whom 40,182 are Sikhs, 27,463 are Hindus, and 29,035 are Muhammadans. His Highness maintains a military force of 70 cavalry, 300 infantry, and 6 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

The title was conferred on 31st January 1860 as a personal distinction. Belongs to an ancient Rájput family, the Tiwánas of Mitha Tiwána, who claim common descent with the Sials of Jhang and the Ghebas of Pindigheb, all in the division of Ráwalpindi, Punjab. Amir Ali Khán was the founder of the family; and his son, Mir Ahmad Khán, built Mitha Tiwána, which became a flourishing town under his successors, Dádu Khán and Sher Khán. Dádu Khán was killed in a skirmish with his own son Sher Khán, who then became Chief. His grandson, Ahmad Yar Khán, submitted to the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, and the nephew of Ahmad Yar Khán, Fateh Khán, held a command under Sardár Hari Singh Nalwa till the death of that General in 1837. Subsequently he was placed in charge of the Bannu territory by Rájá Dhyán Singh, Prime Minister at Lahore. On the outbreak of the rebellion in 1848 Fateh Singh, on the recommendation of Lieutenant Edwardes, was appointed Governor of Bannu. He did good service, but his fort of Dalipnagar was besieged by the mutineers, and he was shot down in the gateway. He was succeeded by his son, Fateh Sher Khán, the present Mallik, who served as one of Major Edwardes's chief officers. In the Mutiny of 1857 he rendered excellent service in the Hissar and Jhajjar territories, and was rewarded with an extensive jágir, as well as the title of Khán Bahádúr.

Residence.—Sháhpur, Punjab.

FATEH SINGH (of Pawayan), Rájá.

Born 10th October 1858. The title is hereditary, and the present Rájá succeeded his adoptive father on the 17th May 1889. Belongs to a family of Gaur Rájputs, who first came into the district of Sháhjahánpur to help the Ráni of Náhil against the Patháns. Udhai Singh, the leader of the second expedition, founded the town of Pawayan. At the time of the cession in 1802 the great-grandson of Udhai Singh, named Rájá Raghunáth Singh, was Rájá of Pawayan, and he was confirmed in his possessions by Mr. Wellesley, the Deputy Governor. He was succeeded in 1825 by his widow the Ráni; and the latter, having adopted Rájá Jagannath Singh (the uncle and adoptive father of the present Rájá), died in 1850. The Rájá is an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Sháhjahánpur, North-Western Provinces.

FATEH SINGH (of Thehpur), Sardár.

Born 1823. The title is hereditary. Descended from Sardár Milka Singh, who was one of the most powerful of the Sikh Chiefs during the latter half of the last century. He died in 1804, and his son, Sardár Jiwan Singh, died the next year. The Mahárájá Ranjit Singh then seized the largest portion of the estate, giving Sardár Anand Singh, the son and heir of Jiwan Singh, jágirs in Firozpur district. Sardár Anand Singh died in 1831, leaving his only son, the present Sardár, a minor of eight years of age. On the annexation of the Punjab the Sardár's personal jágir was confirmed to him for life—one quarter to descend to his son, who is named Shamsheer Singh, born in 1843.

Born 2nd December 1828. Is a scion of the ancient Goday family of Vizagapatam in the Northern Circars, Madras Presidency, and Zamindár of Ankapalle and other estates. Educated in the Hindu College, Calcutta. Was a Member of the Madras Legislative Council from 1868 to 1884; and a Fellow of the University of Madras. The title of Rájá was conferred upon him in 1881; and the Companionship of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire in 1892. Has established and maintains several schools; presented the statue of Her Majesty the Queen Empress of India to the city of Madras in honour of Her Majesty's Jubilee in 1887; and has given large donations to many public objects. Has received from His Holiness the Pope Leo XIII., through His Delegate Apostolic in East Indies, in 1891, a mosaic picture as a mark of appreciation of his kindness shown to the Catholics of Vizagapatam. The Rájá's grandfather, Sri Goday Jaga Rao, distinguished himself in the service of Government about the middle of the 18th century. It was of him that the Honourable Court of Directors in a communication to the Government of Fort Saint George, dated 17th April 1789, wrote: "We concur in the acknowledgment your Government have rendered of the zeal for our interests manifested on various occasions by Goday Jugga Row." Sri Jaga Rao was succeeded by his son Sri Goday Soorya Naráyan Rao, father of the Rájá; born 1792, died 1853. Lord Connemara, when publicly complimenting the Rájá on his presentation of the statue of the Queen Empress to the city of Madras, said of this gentleman: "The Rájá's father, Goday Soorya Naráyan Rao, followed in the footsteps of his father, founded various charitable institutions, and during the famine of 1833 fed a large number of poor in the neighbourhood of Nellore. He also contributed largely to various public works." The Rájá's crest is a rising sun over a Hindu device, with the motto, "I desire the Light," in Sanskrit and Latin.

GONDAL, HIS HIGHNESS THAKUR SAHEB SIR BHAG-WATSINGHJI SAGRAMJI, K.C.I.E., Thákur Saheb of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 24th October 1865; succeeded to the gadi 14th December 1869 as a minor. Belongs to a Járejá Rájput (Hindu) family, tracing its origin to the renowned Krishna; descended from the Nawánagar-Rájkot family; is a Kumbháni, being a descendant of Kumbhoji I., founder of the Gondal dynasty; was only four years old when he succeeded his father, who died in 1869, when on a visit to Bombay. The following is a brief summary of the history of this ruling family: (1) Kumbhoji I., founder of the Gondal dynasty; 1634-49 A.D. Succeeded by his son (2) Sagramji I., 1649-1714 A.D. Succeeded by his son (3) Háloji, 1714-53. Succeeded by his son (4) Kumbhoji II., 1753-90 A.D., was a most powerful chief; was both a warrior and a statesman, and aggrandised his possessions by conquest and statecraft. Succeeded by his grandson (5) Muluji, 1790-92 A.D. Succeeded by his son (6) Dájibhai, 1792-1800 A.D., was a patron of letters, and was especially fond of poetry. Succeeded by his uncle (7) Deváji, 1800-12 A.D., was a brave soldier and a wise ruler. Succeeded by his four sons one after another—(8) Nathuji, 1812-14 A.D.; (9) Kanuji, 1814-21 A.D.; (10) Chandra Sinhji, 1820-41 A.D.; (11) Bhanábhái, 1841-51 A.D.; (12) Sagramji II., 1851-79 A.D., was a very quiet and pious Chief. Succeeded by his son, the present Thákur Saheb. During his minority the State was at first administered direct by the British Government, but afterwards a Joint-Administration was introduced. He was educated at the Rájkot Rájkumár College and also at the Edinburgh University. His College career has been reported to be eminently successful; in order to give the finishing touch to his education, he undertook a voyage to Europe in 1883, in the company of Major (now Colonel) Hancock; returned after six months; published an account of his tour under the title "Journal of a Visit to England in 1883"; was associated with Major (now Colonel) Nutt in the administrative business of his State, and assumed sole charge on the 24th August 1884. The reply made by him on the occasion of his installation to the address of the Political Agent, Colonel West, was pronounced by Government to be highly creditable to him, both as regards the tone and the matter of it, showing "good feeling and good taste, and his description of his duties as a ruler evinces a sound and clear judgment." Three years after his installation the Thákur Saheb was publicly complimented by the Governor, Lord Reay, in the following words: "Thákur Saheb, though you have only been three years on the gadi, I believe you have acted up to the pledges you then gave." Nominated a Fellow of the Bombay University; and a Vice-President of the Deccan Education Society at Poona. Having been imbued with a love of science, he again proceeded to Scotland in 1886, to reside for a time at the Edinburgh University; which, in appreciation of his "exemplary quest of knowledge," conferred on him the honorary degree of LL.D. in 1887. The same year he was requested to be a member of the deputation from the Káthiáwár Chiefs that waited on Her Majesty the Queen Empress at the time of the celebration of Her Most Gracious Majesty's Jubilee; and on that occasion was made a K.C.I.E. Returned to India in August 1887. Takes a keen interest in the administrative business of the State, and is a joint-proprietor of the "Bhaunagar-Gondal" and "Gondal-Porbandar" railways, in which concerns he has invested about £500,000. Is taking steps to connect his capital with the main line of railway. Besides railways, the territory has many macadamised roads, schools, hospitals, municipalities, rest-houses, infirmary, post and telegraph offices, courts of justice, and other appliances of an improved administration. Owing to the excellence of his administration, the British Government was pleased to raise Gondal from the rank of a second-class to that of a first-class State in Káthiáwár. In 1889 his wife—daughter of His Highness the Maharána of Dharampur—being taken very ill, the doctors advised her to go to England for a change, and His Highness was obliged to take her there for the benefit of her health. This is the first instance of a Rájput consort of a Ruling Chief ever venturing to overcome her caste prejudices. Her Highness was received by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress, and personally invested with the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. The Thákur Saheb has contributed numerous donations to deserving public institutions; has relieved his subjects of the burden of many obnoxious taxes, and remitted a vast amount of debt which his people owed him. His subjects, in return, have voted him a statue by public subscription.

GONDAL

Arms.—A belt and sword with the word "Gondal" at the top. Motto.—(Sanskrit) Sajyam cha Satyam, in Devanagari character, meaning "Ready and True." His Highness's sons are—Kumár Shri Bhojraj, heir-apparent, born 1883; is being educated in Edinburgh. Kumár Shri Bhupat Sinhje, born 1888; is in England with his parents.

Residence.—Gondal, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

GWALIOR, His Highness the Mahārājā Sindhia of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1877; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 3rd July 1886. Is the head of the great Mahratta House of Sindhia. Full title is—"His Highness Mukhtār-ul-Mulk, Azim-ul-Iktidār Rafi-ush-Shān Wālā Shikoh Muhtashaim-i-Daurān, Umdat-ul-Umara, Mahārāj-Adhirāj Alijāh Hisām-us-Saltanat Mahārājā Madho Rao Sindhia Bahādur Srināth Mansur-i-Zamān, Fidwi-i-Hazrat-i-Malika-i-Muaz-zama-i-Rafi-ud-Darjā-i-Inglistān" (see Introduction, § 11). His Highness, who rules over an area about equal to that of Holland, Belgium, and Saxony combined, and over a population more numerous than that of Switzerland or of Greece, is descended from the famous Ranoji Sindhia, the son of a Dekhani pātel, who became a member of the household of the Peshwā Bālaji Rao, and subsequently a successful commander of the Peshwā's cavalry. Ranoji Sindhia was succeeded by his second son, Mahādaji Sindhia, who was one of the greatest soldiers and cleverest statesmen ever produced by India. He greatly distinguished himself at the battle of Pānipat in 1761; and, taught by that disaster, he disciplined and strongly organised his army, chiefly under French officers, and in this way, though nominally still a servant of the Peshwā, he became in 1764 really the ruler of Hindustan. He died in 1794, and was succeeded by his grand-nephew, Daulat Rao Sindhia, whose reign of over thirty years is part of the history of India. The battles of Assaye, won by Sir Arthur Wellesley (afterwards Duke of Wellington) in 1803, and of Laswāri, won by General Lord Lake, in 1804, the Treaty of Sarji Anjangāon in 1805, and the Pindāri war in 1817 are important landmarks in the career of Daulat Rao Sindhia. On his death he commended his State and his younger widow, the famous Baiza Bāi, to the care of the British Government. Jhankuji Sindhia subsequently succeeded to the gadi by adoption, marrying the grand-daughter of Baiza Bāi, who was at first regent of the State. Family dissension, however, ensued; Baiza Bāi had to leave Gwalior in 1833, and Jhankuji Sindhia died without issue in 1843. His widow adopted a young scion of the Sindhia family, who succeeded under the title of Jaijī Rao Sindhia. He displayed great courage and loyalty during the Mutiny of 1857, when his army revolted to the mutineers, and he himself and his Minister, Sir Dinkar Rao, were compelled to flee to Agra. He was restored and brought back to Gwalior by Sir Hugh Rose on 19th June 1858, and received many great and well-deserved honours during the rest of his long reign. He obtained the right of adoption, numerous titles, extensive grants of additional territory, and an increase to his army; and became successively an Honorary General in the British army, a Knight Grand Cross of the Bath, a Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India, and a Companion of the Indian Empire. The present Mahārājā, Madho Rao Sindhia Bahādur, succeeded as a minor in 1886. The family colour, famous on so many battle-fields, is bhagwā, orange or brick-red, the flag of that colour bearing on its field the representation of a serpent holding the sun and moon in its coils—referring to a legend that Ranoji Sindhia, when an infant, was sheltered from the heat of the sun by the expanded hood of a cobra. The area of the State is 29,046 square miles; its population 3,030,743, chiefly Hindus, but including more than 160,000 Muhammadans, 12,000 Jains, and 167,000 aborigines of various tribes. The Mahārājā Sindhia maintains a military force of 5504 cavalry, 11,040 infantry, and 48 guns. His Highness is entitled to a salute of 19 guns, and within the limits of Gwalior territory to a salute of 21 guns.

HARBANS RAI (of Hatri), Rájá.

Born 7th April 1835. The title is hereditary, and is said to have been first conferred by a Muhammadan King, in 1494-95, on the Rájá Sáhal Sháh of Bakhtiyargarh. Succeeded the late Rájá on 8th May 1848. Rendered good service to Government during the Mutiny of 1857. Has two sons, of whom the elder enjoys the title of Diwán—Diwán Kishori Singh and Bhan Partáb Singh.

Residence.—Damoh, Central Provinces.

HARBANS SINGH, Rájá.

Born 1846. The title is hereditary, the Rájá being the brother and the adopted son of the famous Sardár Tej Singh, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Sikhs in the first Sikh war, subsequently appointed President of the Council of Regency, and on 7th August 1847 created Rájá of Siálkot. Throughout the rebellion of 1848-49 the Rájá Tej Singh remained faithful to the Government, and on the annexation of the Punjab the jágirs of himself and his cousin, Sardár Bhagwan Singh, son of Jamádár Khushal Singh, were confirmed for life. Rájá Tej Singh rendered excellent service by raising horsemen during the Mutiny of 1857, and as a reward, in 1862, two-thirds of his jágir was granted in perpetuity, and he received a sanad authorising him to adopt an heir. He died in December 1862, having adopted his brother, the Rájá Harbans Singh, who now enjoys the title and estate.

HARI RAJ SINGH (of Kashipur), Rájá.

Born 1857. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a family connected with that of the Chand Rájás of Kumaun, being descended from Pahár Singh, a younger son of Rájá Baz Bahádur Singh, Rájá of Kumaun from 1638 to 1678. In the time of Rájá Dip Chand of Kumaun (1748-77), Mohan Singh, grandson of Pahár Singh, became Bakshi or head of the army. He eventually seized and imprisoned Rájá Dip Chand, and, on the death of the latter in prison in 1777, proclaimed himself Rájá under the title of Mohan Chand. He himself was killed in 1788 by Harak Deb Toshi, who again was driven out by Lal Singh, brother of Mohan Singh, with the aid of Faiz-ullah Khán of Rámpur. Mahendra Singh, son of Mohan Singh, was installed as Rájá by Lal Singh, who claimed for him the protection of the Nawáb of Oudh, as recognised owner of the Tarái. In 1790, however, the Gurkhális from Kathmandu invaded Kumaun and defeated the forces of Mahendra Singh, who fled with his uncle, Lal Singh, to Kota, and fixed upon Kilpuri as his headquarters, where he endeavoured to enlist troops for an attack upon Kumaun. Hearing this, the Gurkháli general, Amar Singh Thapa, marched on Kilpuri and thus deprived the Kumaunis of their only rallying-point. Mahendra Singh and his partisans, deprived of every acre that they could lay claim to, fled to the Oudh Subahdár, and representing that the tract from which the Gurkháli had ousted them formed a part of the Tarái, which of right belonged to the Nawáb, requested his aid in recovering it from the Gurkhális. A war with Nepál would probably have resulted had not the good offices of Mr. Cherry promoted an understanding, by which the Gurkhális agreed to yield up all pretensions to the low country. At the same time provision was made for the retention by the exiled family of some doubtful tenure of a portion of the Tarái for their subsistence. Mahendra Singh retired first to Rudrapur and then to Kilpuri; but, owing to bad management, this Parganá was reduced to a swamp, and was rendered so unhealthy that on the petition of the representatives of the family to the British Government, it was exchanged for the confirmation of possession in taluqa Chachait in the Pilibhit district. Kunwár Partáb Singh, son of Mahendra Singh, sued his uncle, Lal Singh, for a share in Chachait, but his claim was dismissed. He then petitioned the Government, who gave him Rs.250 per mensem in 1820. Partáb Singh's claim to Bazpur was also negatived. Lal Singh had held possession as head of the family and retained it. Guman Singh, son of Rájá Lal Singh, received a sanad from the British Government in 1828, as Rájá. His son, Rájá Shiuráj Singh, C.S.I., rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857; and was rewarded with the Order of the Star of India, and with an increased grant. He died in October 1886; and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, who married a daughter of Kupendra Bikram Singh of Nepál, and has a son named Kunwár Udai Ráj Singh. The Rájá is an Honorary Magistrate.

HATWA, MAHARAJA SIR KRISHNA PARTAB SAHI
BAHADUR, K.C.I.E., Mahārājā Bahādur of.

Born October 1857. Belongs to a Baghochhia Bráhmaṇ family, that claims to have been settled as Rájás in the district of Sárán for 102 generations. The patronymic of the earlier Rájás was "Sen," this in the sixteenth descent was changed to "Singh," in the eighty-third to "Mal," and in the eighty-seventh to "Sahi." The traditions of the family state that the title of Mahārājā was conferred on the eighty-sixth in this line, the Mahārājā Kalyan Mal, and that of Mahārājā Bahádur on the eighty-seventh, the Mahārājā Isham Karan Sahi Bahádur, both by the Emperor of Delhi. In the time of Akbar it is said that the Mahārājā Jubráj Sahi Bahádur obtained possession of Parganá Sipa by killing the Muhammadan Chief Kabul Muhammad, probably one of those Muhammadan Chiefs who had rebelled against the Imperial authority in Southern Behar. Four generations later the Mahārājā Sardár Sahi invaded the Majauli Ráj, and destroyed their garh or fort, and imposed as terms of peace on the Chief of Majauli the condition that he and his descendants were not to display their nishans and dunkas (flags and drums) till these should be re-taken from the Hasipur (or Hatwá) Rájás. The eldest son of the Mahārājā Sardár Sahi died before his father; he was succeeded by the second son, the Mahārājā Fateh Sahi Bahádur, who was a rebel against the British Government in 1767, in the time of Warren Hastings, and ultimately fled to the Gorákhpur jungles. His cousin, Bábu Bassant Sahi, displayed his loyalty by assisting the Government with his retainers, and doing all in his power to arrest Fateh Sahi. But in 1775 he was surprised by the rebel and killed, and his widow ascended the funeral pyre, and was burnt with her husband's head on her lap. Bassant Sahi's son, Bábu Mahes Datt Sahi, followed in his father's footsteps, and the Government was about to proclaim him the rightful successor of the rebel Fateh Sahi when he died, leaving a son, Bábu—afterwards Mahārājā—Chhatardhári Sahi. In 1790, when the Decennial Settlement was in contemplation, Lord Cornwallis, after inquiring into all the facts and the usages of the family, granted to the latter the estates of Fateh Sahi; and in 1837 the title of Mahārājā Bahádur was conferred upon him. This title was renewed in October 1858 in favour of the Mahārājā Rajendar Partáb Sahi, and by the sanad of 31st August 1874 in favour of the present Mahārājā Bahádur. At the time of the Santál insurrection, and again during the Mutiny of 1857, the Mahārājā Chhatardhári Sahi Bahádur rendered most valuable services to the Government, and was rewarded at the close of the Mutiny with the grant of a portion of the confiscated estates of the rebel Kunwár Singh. He was succeeded by his great-grandson, the late Mahārājā Rajendra Partáb Sahi Bahádur, who died in 1871, leaving a minor son, the present Mahārājā. The latter attained his majority and was installed on the gadi on 31st August 1874. He received a medal of distinction at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, and in 1889 he was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. Has long been a distinguished political officer on the frontier of Baluchistan and Afghanistan, having entered the service in 1859, when he received a reward for preparing a "History of Dera Gházi Khán District and Frontier." Appointed to special duty for Kalát in 1875; accompanied Sir Robert Sandeman on two missions to Kalát, and received a khilat in 1877 for his services thereon, also the title of Rai. Appointed Extra Assistant Commissioner of the Punjab in 1879; and in same year received a khilat at the Kalát Darbár, and was placed in charge of Sibi district. Received the title of Rai Bahádur as a personal distinction, 20th April 1881, having served in the Political Department throughout the Afghan war of 1880-81, with medal. In the same year he received a jágir, and in 1882 was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. Was in charge of arrangements for supplies, etc., for the Afghan Boundary Commission, 1884, across the Baluch Desert; and received thanks of Government for the same. Was on special duty in the Bolan Pass, in the military preparations for the expected outbreak of hostilities between England and Russia, March 1884 to November 1885. Deputed to hold charge of Las Bela State on the death of the Jám in 1889, pending installation of successor; and was on special duty with Sir R. Sandeman in 1889-91, and specially commended.

Residence.—Sibi, Baluchistan.

HLAING, MAUNG (Shwedabo of Baw), Thuye-gaung Ngweda ya Min.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st June 1888. It means "Recipient of the Silver Sword for Bravery," and is indicated by the letters T.D.M. after the name.

Residence.—Shan State of Baw, Burma.

HLE, MAUNG, Ahmúdan gaung Tazek-ya Min.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1889. It means "Recipient of the Medal of Honour for Good Service," and is indicated by the letters A.T.M. after the name.

Residence.—Maulmein, Burma.

HME, MAUNG, Kyet Thaye zaung shwe Salwe ya Min.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign. It means "Recipient of the Gold Chain of Honour," and is indicated by the letters K.S.M. after the name.

Residence.—Prome, Burma.

HOLKAR, His Highness the Mahārājā Bahādur (of Indore). See Indore.

HOPON, KUN WARA, Myoza of.

A Ruling Chief.

The area of the State, which is one of the Shan States on the frontier of Burma, is about 400 square miles.

Residence.—Hopon, Burma.

HORMASJI ADARJI PATEL, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st June 1888.

Residence.—Surat, Bombay.

HOSHANGJI JAMASPJI, DASTUR, Khán Bahádur, Shams-ul-Ulama.

These titles are personal; the first was conferred on 1st January 1878, and the second on 1st January 1890. The title of Shams-ul-Ulama entitles the Khán Bahádur—who is also a "Dastur" or High Priest of the Parsis of the Deccan—to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Nawábs. The Dastur Jamaspasa family are descended from Assaji. The last Dastur of that family, the Dastur Nasarwánji Jamaspji, Khán Bahádur, rendered valuable services to Government during the time of the Mutiny; and received the title of Khán Bahádur as a reward for them in 1868. The title of Shams-ul-Ulama was conferred on Dastur Hoshangji Jamaspji in recognition of his eminence in oriental learning.

Residence.—Poona, Bombay.

HUSAIN walad SHAIKH MADAR, SHAIKH, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st June 1888.

Residence.—Belgaum, Bombay.

HUSAIN BAKHSH walad GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being a representative of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation.

Residence.—Sind.

HYDERABAD (or, The Deccan), His Highness the Nizám of, G.C.S.I.

A Ruling Chief, and the Premier Prince of the Indian Empire.

Born 18th August 1866; succeeded to the masnad as a minor, on the death of his father, His late Highness the Nizám Afzul-ud-daulá, 26th February 1869.

The Nizám's full titles are—His Highness Asaf Jah, Muzaffar-ul-Mamálik, Rustam-i-Daurán, Arastu-i-Zamán, Nizám-ul-Mulk, Nizám-ud-daulá, Nawáb Mir Sir Mahbub Ali Khán Bahádur, Fath Jang, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

Belongs to a family of the highest antiquity and importance among Muhammadan rulers, being lineally descended from the first Khalif, Abu Bakr, the successor of the Prophet. His descendant, after a long line of intervening generations, was the Turkomán Chief named Ghazi-ud-din, one of the greatest of the Generals of the Emperor Aurangzeb, who was the hero of the capture of Bijápur in 1686 A.D.; he was largely concerned in the overthrow both of that kingdom and of the Golkonda dynasty, and in the establishment of the Mughal power in the Deccan, which then became a subah (or province) of the Mughal Empire of Delhi. His son and successor was Chin Kulij Khán,¹ better known as the great Asaf Jah, the real founder of the Hyderabad dynasty. He was born in 1644; and in 1713 was appointed Subahdár or Viceroy of the Deccan by the Emperor Farukh Siyar, with the title of Nizám-ul-Mulk (Administrator of the Country), which has ever since been retained by his descendants. He reigned till 1748, attaining the great age of 104; and throughout this lengthened career, with occasional vicissitudes of fortune,

¹ Kulij or Qulij—sometimes spelt Chillich—is the Turki word for sword; and Kulij Khán, as a title, bears the same meaning as the Persian Shamsher Khán. On the title of Asaf Jah, subsequently borne by the Nawáb Chin Kulij Khán and his descendants, the learned Professor Blochmann gives this note: "Asaf was the name of the Vazir of Solomon, who like his master is proverbial in the East for wisdom. During the reign of Akbar three grandees received this title. Badaoni, to avoid confusion, numbers them Asaf Khán I., II., and III. . . . Jahángir conferred the title of Asaf Khán (IV.) on Abul Hasan, elder brother of the Empress Nur Jahán, and father of the Empress Mumtáz Mahal (or Táji Bibi, Sháh-jahán's wife), whose mother was a daughter of Asaf Khán II. During the reign of Sháh-jahán, when titles containing the word Daulá were revived, Asaf Khán was changed to Asaf-ud-daulá; and this title was conferred on Asaf-ud-daulá Jumlat-ul-Mulk Asad Jang, a relation of Asaf Khán IV. Under Ahmad Sháh, lastly, we find Asaf-ud-daulá Amir-ul-Mamálik, whose name, like that of his father, Nizám-ul-Mulk Asaf Jah, occurs so often in later Indian history."

As the ancient titles of the Mughal Empire are retained among the nobles of the Deccan, and are still conferred by His Highness the Nizám, it may here be noted that in ascending order they contain the words Jang, Daulá, Mulk, and Umara or Jah. Titles containing the words Jah or Umara may be compared with English Dukes or Marquesses; those containing Mulk with English Earls; those containing Daulá with Viscounts; and those containing Jang with Barons.

he continually increased his power during the days of the declining vigour of the Mughal Empire.

The dynasty, thus established as the greatest native Power in the Indian Peninsula, has been almost uniformly closely attached to the British Power in India, and has consequently obtained from English writers the style of "Our faithfully ally the Nizám." At all the most critical periods in the history of the Indian Empire—in the Mysore wars, in the Mahratta wars, during the Mutiny of 1857, and recently when Russian invasion seemed probable—the Nizám of the day has always rendered invaluable help.

Of Asaf Jah, the founder of the dynasty, an English writer thus speaks:—

"Content, however, with actual sovereignty, he never assumed its title and insignia. The family, indeed, to the last professed subordination to the Court of Delhi, and the Nizam's successors continued to be formally confirmed by mandates from the Mogul Emperors. The immunity enjoyed by Nizam-ool-Moolk, in a practical surrender of the Deccan to his rule, appears to have been merely due to his essential importance as the only available check to the growing power and harassing incursions of the Mahrattas—a constant source of disturbance and alarm to his titular master. The evening of his eventful life, whose span is said to have exceeded a century, was spent by the first Nizam with singular retention of extraordinary physical and mental faculties, in his so strangely gained principality, when death closed in 1748 a career remarkable and prominent in a stirring and productive time. Impartial estimates of his character can hardly begrudge his descendants a pride in the founder of their name and renown, for his politic compass and tenacious hold of independent power were unstained by treachery or cruelty, and the later annals of the family are similarly clear of the grosser incidents of conquests. He left them, too, an example of equanimity undaunted in adversity and superior to elation by success."¹

After the death of the aged Nizám-ul-Mulk the throne of the Deccan was long and fiercely contended for, with varying fortunes, by his grandson Muzaffar Jang, and his sons (uncles of Muzaffar Jang), known as Ghazi-ud-din, Násir Jang, Salábat Jang, and Nizám Ali. Involved in these wars were also the English and French forces in the Carnatic, and the armies of the Mahrattas and of the Nawábs of Arcot. It was the Nizám Salábat Jang who finally adopted the city of Hyderabad, on the river Musi, as his capital; its ancient name was Bhágnagar, and it had been founded in 1585 by Muhammad Kutb Sháh, King of Golkonda. In 1761 Salábat Jang was dethroned by his brother Nizám Ali, who put him to death in 1763, and reigned till 1803—playing a prominent part during the whole of that period in the incessant wars with the English, the Mahrattas, and the Sultáns of Mysore, Haidar and Tippu. The first treaty between the British Power and the Nizám was concluded in 1766, followed by great and permanent treaties in 1798 and 1800. In accordance with these engagements, after the defeats of the Mahrattas at Láswári and Assaye, the Nizám received large accessions of territory, including the great and rich province of Berar; and similarly after the conquest of Tippu the Nizám shared in the division of territory. Nizám Ali died in 1803, and was succeeded by his son, the Nizám Sikandar Jah, who was served in turn by three famous Prime Ministers, Mir Alam, Munir-ul-Mulk, and the Rájá Chandu Lál. In 1829 Sikandar Jah was succeeded by his son, the Nízám Násir-ud-daulá, who reigned till 1857. He had no great liking for affairs of State, which he left largely to the care of his Prime Minister, the Nawáb Suraj-ul-Mulk, who died in 1853, when the Nízám appointed his nephew, the well-known Sir Sálár Jang, to succeed him in the office of Minister. Násir-ud-daulá is described as having "a gracious disposition to private charity, and with much bountiful kindness to his dependants." He died in May 1857, just before the outbreak of the Mutiny, and was succeeded by His late Highness the Nízám Afzul-ud-daulá, father of the present Nízám.

The loyalty of the late Nízám and his troops during the crisis of 1857 has been well commemorated by an English writer in the following words:—

"When, on the 17th of July in that memorable year, after a frantic promulgation of Jihád or Holy War on the part of the indigenous Muhammadans of both Southern and Northern India, the Rohillas attacked the Residency, and were repulsed by troops under the command of the late Colonel Briggs, had the Nizam, untried as he then was, aided the movement, or even openly avowed sympathy with the mutineers, there can be no doubt that any success at Hyderabad would have proved a signal for revolt to the bigoted and fanatic Muhammadan population, not only there, but in all Central, Western, and Southern India, and that our terrible straits elsewhere would have been multiplied and sorely aggravated. For we had at the time but one European corps at Secunderabad, the military station, and camped at Trimulgherry, about two miles from the central arsenal, which must have been left in the charge of native soldiers if attacked from the capital. . . . But the Nizam was firm in his alliance, attracting to our side all that was respectable in his Court and capital. The traditions of the family also, and old memories of rescue from the Mahrattas, were with us, and not inefficacious in our hour of need.

"And now for the behaviour of the Hyderabad contingent. In this force, recollect, are thousands of the same caste as those whose relatives elsewhere were murdering their officers, or marching towards the Mogul standard at Delhi. From these came emissaries, not only to their brethren of the contingent, with letters and personal entreaties to join, but to the Court itself. The greater portion of the contingent was presently ordered into the field, and a brigade of all arms was pushed into Central India, where they fought, under Sir Hugh Rose, with bravery and endurance unsurpassed by any corps in the Service. With only eighteen hours' warning, i.e. receiving their orders at seven in the morning, and starting at midnight of the same day, these troops took the field, and were absent from their homes for fifteen months, remaining the whole of that time under canvas, leaving their own fertile plain of the Deccan behind them, until, after fighting their way inch by inch, they bathed in the holy river at Calpee, after a signal victory obtained over the rebels at that place. Instancing a few of their exploits, I may mention that at Mehidpoor, the seat of former triumph to the contingent, when they formed a part of Sir John Malcolm's army in 1817, they arrived, after a forced march of sixty miles, in time to rescue an English lady; and finding that the enemy, consisting of the Mehidpoor contingent and the escaped garrison of Dhar, had made away with the Mehidpoor battery and arsenal stores, they immediately, after despatching Mrs. Timmins to the camp of the Bombay column, rattled off in pursuit, the enemy having got several hours' start of them. They overtook the rascals late in the afternoon, about twelve miles distant from Mehidpoor, charged, and captured both battery and stores, cutting up a large number of mutineers, and severing at a blow, from the enemy, most important means of offence and defence, which a week later would assuredly have been in position and used against us when the great battle, which lasted throughout four days, was fought at Mundessoor. The troops, especially the native portion, lived almost entirely on parched grain collected from the fields in the neighbourhood, and immediately submitted to the process of hand manipulation over the fire. It is not my intention to trace here the further exploits of the Hyderabad contingent troops, beyond noticing the fact of their rapid journeys in advance of the main columns they accompanied, returning only to headquarters when a general action was to be fought. On the thousands of miles marched by the cavalry of this force, accompanied often by the infantry and artillery, I need not dwell. Sir Hugh Rose termed these troops 'the wings of my army.' With the restoration of peace came full time for recognising the Nizam's fidelity and active aid. Presents to the value of £10,000 were made to His Highness, and the Star of India was conferred on him. The territory transferred in '53 to our management was now yielding more than the requisite revenue, and a new arrangement was accordingly proposed, under which, in 1860, districts of the value of 13 lacs were restored to the Nizam, together with a transfer of the principality of Shorapoor, whose Rajah had been seduced into the rebellion of the Southern Mahratta country. This acquisition affords an annual surplus of £15,000. We also remitted the entire debt."

The Nizám Afzul-ud-daulá, G.C.S.I., died in 1869, and was succeeded by his son, the present Nizám, who has followed all the best traditions of his ancestors, and has demonstrated his attachment to the Empire in even more striking fashion. In 1885 he offered to send troops to aid the Government in Egypt; and in the same year, when there was a menace of Russian aggression on the Afghan frontier, he repeated the generous offer. But it was in 1887, in the year of the Jubilee of Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign, that His Highness gave the most signal proof of his princely loyalty. In August of that year His Highness wrote the following most remarkable and patriotic letter to the Viceroy of India:—

"HYDERABAD, August 26.

"MY FRIEND,—No inhabitant can be indifferent to the persistent advance of another great military power towards India; to the necessity that exists for putting the frontier in a proper state of defence; and to the burden it imposes on those charged with its safety and the care of the Empire. All who have the welfare of India at heart are bound to consider what should be done, and to show they are heartily in sympathy with those who are endeavouring to place the frontier in a proper state of defence, so as to ward off all danger from our hearths and homes. The Princes of India have not been blind to the movement of events. We realise the financial responsibility the present state of affairs imposes on the Indian Exchequer. It seems to me that the time has arrived for showing in some open manner that India is united on this question, and for that reason I write now to spontaneously offer to the Imperial Government a contribution from the Hyderabad State of twenty lakhs annually for three years, for the exclusive purpose of Indian frontier defence. This is my offer in time of peace. At a later stage you can count upon my sword.—Your sincere friend,

"MIR MAHBUB ALI KHAN."

The effect of this letter on public opinion throughout the world was very great. Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress was pleased to express her warm appreciation of the loyal action of His Highness in the following letter, by His Excellency the Viceroy's hand:—

“SIMLA, October 7.

“MY FRIEND,—I have received from Colonel Marshall your letter of the 26th of August, and send this reply by his hands. It is difficult for me to express in fitting terms my sense of the ready loyalty and goodwill which have prompted your Highness to come forward at this time with so generous an offer, emanating as its does from the head of one of the largest and most important States in India. It is indeed a striking proof of the friendly feelings entertained towards Her Majesty and the British Government by the Princes of the Empire ; and I had the greatest satisfaction in acquainting the Queen Empress with the contents of your Highness's kharita. There is no doubt that the advance of a great military power towards the borders of India has imposed on the Government the obligation of taking those precautions for the defence of our frontier which are adopted by all nations on becoming conterminous with each other, no matter how friendly their existing relations. This duty undoubtedly has considerably added, and will continue to add for some time, to the expenditure of the Government of India ; and it is a convincing proof both of your Highness's statesmanlike capacity as well as of your generosity that you should have been the first among the Princes of India to recognise the principle that the Native States are as much interested as the rest of the Indian population in assisting the Government to take whatever measures may be necessary to preserve the borders of the Empire from any dangers which may arise from external complications. Again thanking your Highness in the name of my Government, as well as in the name of Her Majesty and the Government of England, for the noble example which you have set,—I remain, my friend, yours sincerely,

“DUFFERIN.”

And the appreciation of the people of England of the friendly action of the First Prince of the Indian Empire was aptly expressed in the following leading article in the Times :—

“This is an intimation, which no one can misinterpret, that the great Native Courts, who are outside the red line of British administration, have been alive to the incessant encroachments of Russia in the direction of India, and now perceive that this advance constitutes a danger for them as well as for us. We believe that feeling is shared by every potentate, great or small, from Travancore to Cashmere, yet it has remained voiceless, not for want of will, but rather of knowledge as to how and when to speak. With remarkable acumen the Nizam has not only seen that the time has come, but he has chosen the very best and the most original mode of giving vent to the pent-up feeling of a large section of the Indian population. In time of war and invasion, or, indeed, of any military operations beyond the frontier, the rulers of the Native States would be compelled to play a certain part, and we should receive, as we have received before, the offer of their military contingents. But we are fortunately not in any imminent risk of war or invasion, although we have sanctioned an expenditure of some ten millions sterling on frontier defence, and it is this which makes the Nizam's princely gift all the more gratifying and significant. There is absolutely no precedent in Indian history for the Nizam taking this step in time of peace, nor, indeed, for any Native Court admitting the least responsibility in regard to the financial embarrassments of the Central Government, even if caused by expenditure on objects from which that Court derives a direct benefit. The action of the Nizam, magnificent in itself, is enhanced by all the attendant circumstances. It is quite unexpected, the step having been taken by the Nizam entirely on his own initiative. . . . We can assure His Highness that his generous friendship will wake a responsive feeling in the breasts of the British people, not merely for the noble proportions of his contribution to frontier defence, but for the loyal feelings which inspired him to place on unmistakable record before the world the unanimity of opinion in India on the subjects of English rule and Russian aggression. The Nizam's act cannot fail to arouse our enthusiasm at the same time that it furnishes a unique compliment to our authority and power.

"The impression produced by the Nizam's letter will not be limited to India or this country, although its full effect will be felt most in the Peninsula of Hindostan, where the ruler of Hyderabad speaks as the great political chief among the fifty million Mahomedans of the Empire. The great service which he has rendered our Government and cause is that, at a moment when even the suspicion of compulsion could not exist, he has come forward with the frank declaration that in his opinion every ruler and native of India has a common interest in the security of the country against external attack. In doing this he has not only committed his own person and dynasty to a policy of implacable hostility to a foreign invader, but he has set all the feudatories of the Indian Empire a splendid example. If any other Indian chief had taken this step the deed would have been in a personal sense quite as gratifying, but it would not have possessed the same political significance. When an Indian Mahomedan talks of the secular power of Islam, his expressed thought may be for the Sultan as Caliph, but his real conviction is that for him personally the Nizam is quite as important a personage. The Nizam has spoken not only 'as the oldest ally of the English in India,' but as the foremost Mahomedan potentate in our quarter of Asia. He is an infinitely greater prince, tested by his revenue, the number of his subjects, and his own personal enlightenment and that of his Government, than the Ameer of Bokhara, who is termed the Head of Islam in Central Asia. . . . The silly stories which those adventurers who wish to make a livelihood out of Russian credulity have been circulating about English oppression in India, and especially at the expense of Mahomedans, have now received the clearest possible refutations at the hands of the most representative Mahomedan prince in the Peninsula. The Nizam's letter is also important as putting an end to all possible ambiguity as to the cordial relations and good understanding subsisting between the Central Government and the chief feudatories of India. A great deal too much notice has been paid to alleged disaffection at native courts and capitals, instigated by outside intriguers; and the armies and the social state of Native States, kept up in conformity with written treaty, may perhaps have been scanned with too closely critical an eye under the sudden perception of what might be a concealed danger. The Nizam's letter annihilates such petty and personal criticism. It is impossible after this to suspect Hyderabad of being less staunch in the cause of defending India than ourselves; and when the greatest and most powerful of Indian States is thus outspoken we may feel sure that the rest will not lag far behind. The Nizam has been good enough to take the most effectual steps to shatter the pleasing belief of Russian commanders and some Continental critics, that when the Czar's armies move towards the Indus the discontented princes and peoples, alienated by the greed and tyranny of England, will rise to welcome them as deliverers, so that the contest will be virtually over before the first shot is fired. . . . The present Nizam has bettered his predecessor's example. He has anticipated the crisis which may be before that country, and he declares in the most emphatic and unequivocal manner that if the fatal hour comes he will be with us, and that 'England can count on his sword.' This we never doubted, but what is as surprising as it is welcome is that he has discovered the very best way to convince the world that his words are sincere, and not mere lip service. It would be futile to talk of making the Nizam some adequate return, for there is no repaying such generosity and cordiality as he has shown. But we cannot do less than admit that he acquires an additional claim on our confidence and consideration by conferring an inestimable service on the whole of the Empire, and one which no one but he, as the first of Indian princes, and the greatest magnate in alliance with the Crown, could have rendered with the same effect. British politicians can learn from his action the moral that British authority in India is both popular and useful, and at the same time that the menace from Russia is regarded by the responsible representatives of the Peninsula as a real and growing danger. In the union of those who will suffer from it is to be found absolute security, both now and in the future, and the Nizam has shown that this union exists."

In November 1892 the Marquess of Lansdowne visited His Highness's capital in State, as Viceroy of India; and was entertained at dinner by the Nizam, who took the opportunity, when proposing the health of his distinguished guest, to reiterate his sentiments of loyalty and friendliness in the following words:—

"The historical friendship that has existed between my State and the British Government has not been confined to mere mellifluous words, but has been tested by deeds—deeds in which the best blood of Hyderabad was shed in defence of British interests, deeds in which British blood was spilt in defending the throne of a faithful ally. This friendship is a most precious legacy left to me by my ancestors, which I am not only most anxious to maintain but to increase by continuous deeds of loyal amity."

And the speech of the Viceroy reciprocated these sentiments; the following is an extract from it:—

"His Highness the Nizam rules over an area of 100,000 square miles and a population of over eleven millions of human beings. It is perhaps instructive, in order to give a correct idea of the importance of the State, to recall the fact that its population is about five times that of Denmark, considerably more than double the population of the Netherlands, of Norway, Sweden, and of Turkey in Europe, while it is also considerably more than double that of the great island Continent of Australia and of that vast Dominion of Canada in which I had for some years the honour of representing Her Majesty. His Highness's territories comprise some of the richest in natural resources of any in India, and it is not too much to say that given a Government founded upon justice and personal security, there is no reason why the State should not be what His Highness, I am sure, desires it to be, an example to the rest. And I may add that there is no ruler whom, upon personal grounds, the Government of India is more desirous of supporting and encouraging in the discharge of his onerous duties than His Highness the Nizam.

"I have had the advantage of meeting several of those who have had official relations with him, and they are all agreed in bearing witness to the personal qualities which have attracted to him the sympathy and goodwill of those with whom he has been brought into contact. It is satisfactory to know that he has on more than one occasion shown by his acts that he is sincerely anxious to do his duty as the ruler of this important State. I may refer in illustration of my meaning to the liberality with which the support of the State has been given to such useful measures as the improvement of the water-supply of Secunderabad, and to the public spirit shown by His Highness in connection with the appointment of the Chloroform Commission, ably presided over by Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel Lawrie—an enquiry which has already produced scientific results of importance, and which shows that His Highness is prepared to recognise the claims of a philanthropy transcending the limits of his own possessions."

The progress of the State of Hyderabad under the rule of this brave and patriotic Prince has been most surprising, and is evident in every department of public affairs. In communication and means of locomotion, in education, in sanitation, in the administration of justice, police, and prisons, in finance, in revenue-administration and surveys, and in every other department, the most thorough reforms have been attempted with marked success. The recent increase in trade and manufactures—cotton-spinning, cloth and silk weaving, shawl-making and the like—has been most marked. It is not too much to say that the Nizám is idolised by his people; on the occasion of his serious illness in 1884, the prayers in all the mosques, and the public anxiety throughout the State, reminded every one of the feeling evoked in England by the illness of the Prince of Wales. The Nizám has had the advantage of being served by many of the ablest and most experienced and successful Statesmen that India has produced, among whom the most prominent have been the late Sir Salar Jang, the late Shams-ul-Umara, and the living members of the great Shamsiya family—Sir Asman Jah, Sir Khurshid Jah, and the Vikár-ul-Umara. And to these may be added the Nawáb Safdar Jang, Mushir-ud-daulá, Fakhr-ul-Mulk Bahádur, Minister of Justice; the Nawáb Shaháb Jang, Mukhtar-ud-daulá Bahádur, Minister of Police; the Nawáb Nizám Yar Jang, Hasim-ul-Mulk, Khán-i-Khánán, Minister of the Miscellaneous Department; and the Nawáb Asaf Yar-ud-daulá, Asaf Yar-ul-Mulk Bahádur, Member of Council. And among the Ministers who have successfully administered the important Departments of State under the Council may be mentioned the Nawáb Mehdi Ali (Mohsin-ul-Mulk), the Nawáb Mushtak Husain (Vikár-ul-Mulk), the Nawáb Mehdi Hasan (Fateh Nawáz Jang), the Nawáb Sayyid Husain Ali Bilgrámi (Imád-ul-Mulk), the Nawáb Chiragh Ali (Azam Yar Jang), and the Sardár Diler Jang (Diler-ud-daulá). By the aid of these Ministers His Highness has developed his State by a great railway—which he opened in person on the 3rd of April 1886; he has established an extensive system of public instruction, based on the most perfect models, both for elementary and for secondary education; he has purified the administration of justice, and put it on a par with that in British India; he has repaired the neglect of centuries in the maintenance and construction of tanks and wells, and in the sanitation of the great cities of the State, and especially in the capital. He has introduced and largely carried out a scientific system of Revenue Survey, and safeguarded the rights of the poorer cultivators. The great central jail of Hyderabad, although it contains some of the most desperate criminals in India, is admirably arranged and administered, and is becoming a valuable centre for jail-manufactures. His Highness has cared for the medical wants of his female subjects by employing lady-doctors, establishing schools for the training of nurses, and by many similar benefactions. Some of the sons of the Hyderabad nobles are sent to England, at the cost of the State, to be educated. The Nizám has also established a system of famine-relief, for use in time of famine, based on the Report of Sir James Caird's Famine Commission, that may be compared with that of British India. In every way the progress attained, especially of late, has been most remarkable and gratifying.

His Highness's personal staff is at present constituted as follows: Private Secretary, the Nawáb Imád-ul-Mulk Bahádur; Military Secretary and Aides-de-Camp, the Nawáb Mahbub Yar Jang Bahádur, Major the Nawáb Afsar Jang Bahádur, and the Nawáb Dawar-ul-Mulk Bahádur; Surgeon-in-attendance, the Nawáb Sultán-ul-Hukama.

The family banner of the Nizám is coloured yellow, and it bears in its centre a disc, which represents the "Lucky Chapáti" of the first Nizám. This family cognisance took its origin in the following incident. When the first Nizám was departing to the wars in the Deccan, a holy man came forward to give his benediction to the hero of the faith, and presented him with a chapáti as an emblem of good fortune; this chapáti the warrior carried with him as an amulet through all his successful campaigns, and his descendants have ever since borne the device called the kulcha on their banner.

The Nizám rules his State in a constitutional manner, through the medium of a Prime Minister—His Excellency Sir Asman Jah, K.C.I.E.—with a Council of State, whose chief member is the Vikár-ul-Umara. His Highness has fixed days in the week when he transacts public business with the Council; and thrice a week the Prime Minister attends at the Palace, with all reports, financial statements, and other documents, thereby keeping the Nizám fully informed of the state of public affairs. His Highness is said to take a personal interest in all that goes on; and indeed, for some time before the appointment of the present Prime Minister, he acted as his own Minister, with the aid of an English officer lent him by the Viceroy. He is a keen sportsman, and a proficient in all manly exercises, especially in that of tent-pegging, which is his great amusement, and in which he is very expert.

The area of the Nizám's dominions—including the Berars or Hyderabad Assigned Districts, which are temporarily administered by the British Government in trust for him—is about 98,000 square miles; its population is nearly 13,000,000, chiefly Hindus, but with over a million Muhammadans. It is by far the largest, richest, and most populous of the feudatory States of India; it is three times as large as Bavaria, and more than twice as populous. The Nizám maintains a military force of 6228 cavalry, 24,068 infantry, and 35 guns; exclusive of the Paigah or Household Troops. His Highness is entitled to a salute of 21 guns.

IDAR, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA SRI SIR KESRISINGHJI JAWANSINGHJI, K.C.S.I., Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1864; succeeded to the gadí 26th December 1868. Belongs to the great Ráhtor Rájput (Hindu) family, said to spring from the second son of the legendary hero Ráma, and therefore of the Solar race; of whom the principal Chief is His Highness the Mahárájá of Jodhpur, and to which also belong the Chiefs of Bikanir and Kishangarh in Rájputána, and other important Princes. In 1729, when the famous Abhai Singh, Ráhtor Rájá of Jodhpur, was Subahdár of Gujarát under the Emperor Muhammad Sháh, and his brother Bakht Singh Ráhtor was the conqueror of Nagar, two other brothers, named Anand Singh Ráhtor and Rai Singh Ráhtor, established themselves at Idar by force of arms. The Peshwá and the Gackwár soon despoiled the young State; and the Rájá Sheo Singh Ráhtor, son of Anand Singh, who died in 1791, was compelled to lose part of his territories, and to pay tribute to the Gaekwár. This tribute is still paid by the Chief of Idar, who in return receives tribute from some other minor States. Sheo Singh was succeeded by his son Bhawán Singh, who died shortly afterwards, leaving the gadí to a minor son, the Rájá Gambhirsinghji. The latter was succeeded by the Mahárájá Jawánsinghji, K.C.S.I., who was a Member of the Legislative Council of Bombay, and died in 1888, leaving his son, the present Mahárájá, as a minor. His Highness was educated at the Rájkumár College at Indore. His State has an area of 2500 square miles; and a population of 258,429, chiefly Hindus, but including 8700 Muhammadans and 6266 Jains. The Mahárájá has obtained a sanad of adoption; and was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India on 15th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. His Highness maintains a military force of 54 cavalry, 100 infantry, and 21 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Residence.—Idar, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

IJPURA, THAKUR GOBARSINGHJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1850. Belongs to a Koli (aboriginal) family. His State has a population of about 392, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Hyderabad, Sind.

IMAM BAKHSH (of Raikot), Rai.

Belongs to a Rájput Muhammadan family, that claims descent from the same stock as that of the ruling house of Jaisalmir. Its founder, Tulsí Rám, second son of Rájá Dulchí Rám of Jaisalmir, is said to have become a convert to Islám in the year 1833. His descendants occupied Raikot till the death of Ráni Bhagbari in 1852, when the territory lapsed to the British Government. Rai Imám Bakhsh is a distant relative of the late Ráni, and has succeeded to her private estate. He has three sons—Amir Khán, Fateh Khán, and Faizulla Khán.

Residence.—Raikot, Ludhiána, Punjab.

IMAM BAKHSH KHAN, BOZDAR, Khán Bahádur.

Born 1834. The title was conferred on 10th April 1884 as a personal distinction, in recognition of his eminent services in the Survey Department as an explorer of unknown tracts on the Frontier. He has done especially valuable work as an explorer in the Gilgit country, also in Zhob and the Ghumal country, and in the Shiráni Hills. He has taken part also in exploring expeditions to the Vaziri country, to Buner, to Agror, Kandahár, and Kábul. He is a Member of the Municipal Committee of Dera Gházi Khán; and has received a khilat and a chair in Darbár from the Government.

Residence.—Dera Gházi Khán, Punjab.

IMAM BAKHSH KHAN, MAZARI, SIR, K.C.I.E., Mir, Nawáb.

The first title (of Mir) is hereditary, the second (of Nawáb) is personal, and was conferred on 23rd February 1877, in recognition of his loyal and zealous services in Sir R. Sandeman's mission to Kalát. Belongs to a Mazari Baluch family that claims descent from Amir Hamza, the uncle of the Prophet, whose son, Kul Charag, emigrated from Persia to Kalát, and settled in Kach and Makrán. A descendant, Batil Khán, received the title of "Mazar," meaning a lion in the Baluch language, on account of his gallantry in the battles with the Lashiris, and hence the name of this Baluchi clan. Bahrám Khán, the father of Sir Imám Bakhsh, received a sanad from the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. During the Mutiny of 1857 Sir Imám Bakhsh gave conspicuous aid to the Government; and was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 24th May 1888. He is an Honorary Magistrate of the first class, and one of the most influential and loyal Chiefs on the Baluch frontier. His eldest son, named Bahrám Khán, was born in 1857, and has married the daughter and only child of his cousin, Sher Muhammad, which marriage ensures the Tamandárship, or headship of the clan, to Sir Imám Bakhsh's descendants.

Residence.—Dera Gházi Khán, Punjab.

IMAM SHARIF, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887.

Residence.—Gwalior, Central India.

INDAR DEO (of Akhrota), Rájá.

The title is hereditary. The family is of ancient Rájput origin. Its founder was Rájá Ranjit Deo, Rájá of Jammu, the son of Rájá Darab Deo, who was the ancestor of the Mahárájás of Jammu and Kashmir. Rájá Indar Deo's grandfather was the ruling Chief at Jammu, who was ejected by the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore when he conquered that territory. He is the son of the late Rájá Raghbir Deo.

Residence.—Akhrota, Pathánkot, Gurdaspur, Punjab.

INDAR KUNWAR (of Balrámpur), Maháráni.

The Maháráni, being the widow of the late Mahárájá Sir Digbijai Singh, K.C.S.I., of Balrámpur, is the largest landowner in Oudh, and the guardian of the heir to the Chiefship of Balrámpur, adopted by her. The hereditary title of Rájá dates from the 16th century. The family is a younger branch of the Janwar family of Ikauna, in the Bahraich district (see Narpát Singh, Rájá of Gangwal). Madho Singh, the younger brother of Rájá Ganesh Singh of that family, made some conquests between the Rápti and Kuána rivers; and his son, Balráam Singh, founded the town of Balrámpur. Some of his successors, the Rájás of Balrámpur, successfully resisted the exactions of the Nawábs Vazirs of Oudh. Rájá Newal Singh, who ascended the gadí in 1777, is one of the most famous warriors of the line. In 1836 the late Sir Digbijai Singh, K.C.S.I., then a boy of eighteen, became Rájá. Throughout the Mutiny of 1857 he took the most active and conspicuous part on the side of the Government from first to last, and in the final campaign aided in driving the rebel leaders across the frontier into the Nepál Tardi. He was one of the five loyal Tálukdárs specially mentioned in Lord Canning's Proclamation of 1858: and in 1866 was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He was for some time a Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, and enjoyed a personal salute of 9 guns, with many other honours and dignities. He died on the 27th May 1882. The Maháráni adopted, as son and heir, Udit Naráyan Singh, a child nearly related to the late Mahárájá; and in 1883 this adoption was ratified by the Government.

Arms.—Argent, on a fesse azure between in chief a sword in bend surmounted by a matchlock in bend sinister, and in base on a mount a tiger couchant, all proper, an Eastern crown between two stars of six points of the first. Crest.—On a wreath of the colours, upon a trunk of a tree eradicated fessewise and sprouting to the dexter, a falcon surmounted by a rainbow, all proper. Motto.—Fide et Justitia.

Residence.—Balrámpur, Gonda, Oudh.

INDAR NARAYAN, Rai.

Born 1850. The title is hereditary, and was conferred on 5th June 1858. Belongs to a Bráhmaṇ family of Kashmir. The late Pandit Rai Kishan Naráyan was Settlement Deputy Collector of Ságar in the Central Provinces at the time of the Mutiny of 1857, and greatly distinguished himself by his courage and fidelity, which were of the greatest value to the local authorities throughout the time of the disturbances. As a reward he received the hereditary title of Rai, with a grant of lands. On his death his son, the present Rai, who is a Subordinate Judge in the North-Western Provinces, inherited the title and estates. He was educated at Agra, and has two sons—Brij Naráyan and Iqbál Naráyan.

Residence.—Cawnpur, North-Western Provinces.

INDAR NARAYAN SINGH, Maháráj-Kumár.

The title is personal. The Maháráj-Kumár is the son of the late Mahárájá Gopál Chandra Singh, who obtained the title in 1867, “on account of his many acts of public liberality.” The Mahárájá was the husband of the Ráni Janaki Kumári, eleventh in descent from Rájá Banha Singh, and owner of Parganá Sultánabad in the Santál Parganá.

Residence.—Maheshpur, Santál Parganá, Bengal.

INDORE, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJ-ADHIRAJ SHIVAJI
RAO HOLKAR, BAHADUR, G.C.S.I., Mahārājá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1860; succeeded to the gadi on 12th July 1886. His Highness's full titles are—His Highness Mahārāj-Adhirāj Rāj Rájeshwar Sawai Sir Shivaji Rao Holkar Bahádur, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. Holkar is the dynastic name of the Princes of this great Mahratta family, who have occupied a very conspicuous place in the history of India since the first half of the 18th century. It is derived from Hol, the name of the village on the Nira river in the Deccan, where, in 1693, was born Malhár Rao, the founder of the dynasty. It is an interesting fact in connection with the history of this Principality, that its administration has twice, at important periods, been in the hands of ladies of the family—once, most successfully, in those of the famous Ahalya Báí (1765-95), and once (less happily) in those of Tulsi Báí (1811-17). Malhár Rao adopted a military life in his early youth, and in the year 1724 entered the service of the Peshwá, from which time his rise was very rapid. Eight years later he had become the Commander-in-Chief of the Peshwá's armies, had conquered the Imperial Subahdár of Málwá, and had received, from the gratitude of the Peshwá, the territory of Indore, with most of the conquered territory. He continued to strengthen his position, and at the great battle of Pánipat, in conjunction with Sindhia (see Gwalior, Mahārājá of), he commanded one division of the Mahratta hosts. After that disaster he retired to Indore, and devoted himself to the development of this great Principality, which he left in 1765 to his grandson, a minor named Malí Rao Holkar, in a state of prosperity. The latter died in a few months; and the administration was then assumed by his mother, Ahalya Báí, the daughter-in-law of the first Holkar. Aided by her Commander-in-Chief, Tukaji Rao Holkar, this clever and courageous lady ruled for thirty years, and left Indore, at her death in 1795, in a well-ordered and prosperous condition. Thereon much disorder ensued. At last Jeswant Rao Holkar, an illegitimate son of Tukaji, amid many vicissitudes of fortune, managed to maintain the position of the family. He defeated the combined armies of Sindhia and the Peshwá in 1802, and took possession of the Peshwá's capital of Poona; which, however, reverted to the Peshwá by British intervention after the Treaty of Bassein in the same year. Again, after the Treaty of Sarji Anjengaon, war ensued between Jeswant Rao Holkar and the Paramount Power, with varying fortune, till at length, in 1805, Holkar was forced to surrender to Lord Lake, and sign a treaty on the banks of the river Biás in the Punjab. He died in 1811, leaving a minor son, Malhár Rao Holkar; and the administration was carried on by Tulsi Báí, one of the concubines of the late Mahārājá, as Queen Regent. She was murdered in 1817 by her own officers; but the Indore army was defeated by the British forces at the battle of Mehidpur, and the Treaty of Mandesar followed in 1818, by which Malhár Rao Holkar became a feudatory Prince of the British Empire. He died in 1833 without issue. Mártand Rao Holkar was adopted as his successor, but was speedily deposed by his cousin, Hari Rao Holkar. The latter, dying in 1843 without issue, was succeeded by his adopted son, Khandí Rao, who died in 1844, and was succeeded by adoption by His late Highness the Mahārāj-

Adhiráj Tukaji Rao Holkar, father of the present Chief. Tukaji Rao was only eleven years old at the date of his accession, and was the second son of Bhao Holkar. In 1852 he attained his majority, and was invested with the full management of the State. In 1857 the Indore army mutinied, and besieged the British Resident, Sir Henry Durand, at Indore, who was exposed to much difficulty and danger in taking off the women and children to a place of safety at Bhopál. The Mahárájá, however, remained loyal, and his rebellious troops soon after were forced to lay down their arms. The Mahárájá subsequently received a sanad of adoption, an increased personal salute, and the rank of a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He died in 1886, and was succeeded by the present Maháráj-Adhiráj Bahádur. His Highness has visited England, and is known as a Prince of great enlightenment and ability. Like his illustrious father, he has received the rank of a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. The area of his State is 8,400 square miles; its population about 1,055,000, chiefly Hindus, but including about 73,000 Muhammadans, and 86,000 belonging to various aboriginal tribes. In size the State of Indore may be compared with the kingdoms of Saxony or Würtemberg, but is larger than either. In population it may be compared with the Grand Duchies of Hesse or Baden, being more populous than the former, and less so than the latter. His Highness maintains a military force of 3231 cavalry, 6128 infantry, and 65 guns. He is entitled to a salute of 21 guns within the limits of Indore territory, and 19 guns elsewhere.

Residence.—Indore, Central India.

INDRA BIKRAMA SINGH (of Raipur Ikdaria, Itaunja), Rájá.

Born 24th November 1864. The title is hereditary, having been assumed by Rai Dingar Deo, ancestor of the Rájá, and having been recognised as hereditary by the Government in 1877. Belongs to a Puar Rájput (Hindu) family, of the Vasishtha Gotra or clan; tracing their descent from Deo Ridh Rai, eighth son of Rájá Rudra Sah of Dharanagar or Deogarh, who took service under the King of Delhi, and obtained from him important commands. The Rájás have before their residence a large square stone, which they hold in almost sacred reverence. They say that they brought it from Delhi, and that it is the symbol of their right to the estates granted to them by the Emperors of Delhi. The late Rájá Jagmohan Singh died in 1881, four months after attaining his majority, and was succeeded by his brother, the present Rájá, then sixteen years old, as a minor under the Court of Wards. Educated at Canning College, Lucknow; attained his majority, and received possession of his estate 2nd January 1886.

Residence.—Itaunja, Mahona, Lucknow, Oudh.

Is the son of the late Rájá Padmalabh Deo of Aul, who was born in 1830, succeeded to the gadi in 1840, and has recently died. Is descended from the ancient Royal family of Orissa. The Mahárájá Makund Deo, the last Mahárájá of Orissa, was conquered by the Rájá Mán Singh (see Jodhpur) as Viceroy of the Mughal Emperor towards the close of the 16th century. When subsequently Rám Chandra Deo, belonging to another family, was proclaimed Mahárájá of Orissa by the headmen of the country, his title was disputed by the two surviving sons of Makund Deo, of whom the elder was also called Rám Chandra Deo, and the disputes were finally settled by Rájá Mán Singh in 1580 A.D., who appointed Rám Chandra Deo, the son of Mahárájá Makund Deo, to be Rájá of Aul, and his brother to be Rájá of Sarungar of Patiya, while the other Rám Chandra Deo was made Rájá of Khurdá. In 1803 the Rájá of Aul acknowledged fealty to the British Government.

Residence.—Aul, Orissa, Bengal.

JADUNATH HALDAR, Rai Bahádur.

Born 5th April 1832. The title is personal, and was conferred on 24th May 1889. His great-grandfather was in the service of the Nawáb of Murshidabad in Bengal, and was granted by him the appellation of Haldar, which his descendants retain as their family name. After the British conquest of Bengal he was appointed Tahsildár of Khas Mahál in Barrackpore. During the Mutiny the Rai Bahádur was a prisoner in the hands of the rebels for five months, and has subsequently rendered excellent service in the Police of the North-Western Provinces.

Residence.—Allahabad, North-Western Provinces.

JAGNISHAN SINGH, C.I.E. (of Atra Chandapur), Rájá.

Born 21st August 1841; succeeded 1864. The title is hereditary. Belongs to the great Kanhpuria (Rájput) family (see Surpál Singh Bahádur, Rájá of Tiloi), being descended from Rájá Madan Singh of Simrauta, third son of Prasád Singh, who was seventh in descent from Kanh, the Kshatriya founder of Kanhpur in the time of the great Mánik Chand. The seventh in descent from Madan Singh was the Rájá Mandhata Singh, who was in possession of Chandapur at the time of the conquest of Oudh by Saádat Khán. The Rájá Shiudarshan Singh had half the estate confiscated at the time of the Mutiny in 1857. His grandson, the present Rájá, is an Honorary Magistrate, and received a Medal of Honour at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India; and subsequently for good services he has been created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

Residence.—Chandapur, Rai Bareli, Oudh.

JAHAN KADR MIRZA MUHAMMAD WAHID ALI BAHADUR, *Prince.

The title is personal—a courtesy title of the Prince, as a son of the late King of Oudh.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

JAHANDAD KHAN (of Khanpur), Rájá, Khán Bahádur.

The first title (Rájá) is hereditary, and the second (Khán Bahádur) is personal, and was conferred on 24th May 1881. Belongs to a family of the Gakkar tribe, who overran Kashmir in early times, and were formidable opponents of the Emperor Bábar. Is the son of Rájá Haidar Bakhsh Khán; has acted as Extra Assistant Commissioner of the Punjab. His son and heir is named Fazaldad.

Residence.—Hazára, Punjab.

JAI CHAND (of Lambagraon), Rájá.

Born 1870. The title is hereditary, and was conferred on 12th December 1851. Belongs to the Katoch family of Rájputs, and is head of the Kángra family. Rájá Parmad Chand died childless in exile at Almora, and was succeeded by his relative, Rájá Partáb Chand, the father of the present Rájá.

Residence.—Kángra, Punjab.

JAI SINGH (of Guler), Rájá.

The title is hereditary, and was conferred on 28th February 1878, the Rájá being the brother of the late Rájá Shamsher Singh of Guler, and having previously enjoyed the hereditary title of Mián. His son and heir is named Rughnáth Singh. The family is connected with that of His Highness the Mahárájá of Jammu and Kashmir by marriage. It is an offshoot of the families of Kángra and Lambagraon.

Residence.—Guler, Kángra, Punjab.

JAI SINGH (of Siba), Rájá.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 7th August 1878. The Siba family is an offshoot of the Guler family (see Jai Singh, of Guler, Rájá), which itself was an offshoot of that of Kángra. Is descended from Sibarú Chand, a younger son of the Rájá of Guler, who conquered the Siba territory, calling it Siba after his own name. Rájá Ram Singh, the last of the old hereditary Rájás of Siba, died without male issue in 1875. The territory lapsed to the Paramount Power, but as an act of favour to His Highness the Mahárájá of Jammu and Kashmir, who is related to the family by marriage, the territory and title was continued to a scion of the family named Rájá Bije Singh. He died in 1878, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Siba, Kángra, Punjab.

JAIBANS KUNWAR (of Kaithola), Ráni.

Born 1849. The title is hereditary. The Chief of Kaithola is the head of the great Kanhpuria family (see Surpál Singh and Jagnishan Singh), being the representative of Sábhas, the eldest son of Kanh. From him a line of twenty descents from father to son ends in the late Rájá Mahesh Bakhsh of Kaithola, who died without male issue in 1881. The estates were under Government management for some time, and were then handed over to the present Ráni, the widow of the late Rájá.

Residence.—Partágarh, Oudh.

JAIKISHAN DAS, C.S.I., Rája Bahádur.

Born 24th November 1832. The title is personal, and was conferred on 18th January 1860. Belongs to a family of Chaubé Bráhmans, who fled to Etah from Muttra in the reign of Alá-ud-din Ghori, because they had slain the Kázi of Muttra. Chaubé Ghansham Dás, having long been in Government service, and having retired on pension, in 1857 rendered most valuable aid to the Government, although blind and infirm; and ultimately was surprised and slain by the rebels at Kásganj. His brother, the present Rájá Jai Kishan Dás Bahádur, had loyally supported him, and was rewarded with the title and a grant of lands and other honours in 1860. He was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India in 1870. Is a Fellow of the Allahabad University, and Deputy Collector of Bareilly.

Residence.—Moradabad, North-Western Provinces.

JAIMAL SINGH (of Thalla), Sardár.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Jálandhar, Punjab.

JAIPRAKASH LAL, C.I.E., Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal; and was conferred on 31st August 1881. The Rai Bahádur was for many years the Diwán of the Dumraon Ráj, and rendered excellent service in that capacity. On 25th May 1892 he was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

Residence.—Dumraon, Bengal.

JAIPUR, HIS HIGHNESS SIR MADHO SINGH
BAHADUR, G.C.S.I., Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1861; ascended the gadi as a minor 18th September 1880, and was invested with full governing powers on attaining his majority in September 1882.

Is the Chief of the famous Kachhwáha tribe of Rájputs, descended from the legendary hero Ráma, and therefore of the Suryavansi or Solar race. Tod devotes a large part of his learned Annals of Rájásthán to the history of this family, which, indeed, is no unimportant part of the history of India. Tod says of the ruling family of Jaipur (otherwise called Amber or Dhundar): "A family which traces its lineage from Rama of Koshala, Nala of Nishida, and Dola the lover of Maroni, may be allowed 'the boast of heraldry'; and in remembrance of this descent, the Cushites [Kachhwáha] of India celebrate with great solemnity the annual feast of the sun, on which a stately car, called the Chariot of the Sun, Surya ratha, drawn by eight horses, is brought from the temple, and the descendant of Rámesa, ascending therein, perambulates his capital."

The full title of the Mahárájá is—His Highness Sárámad-i-Rájahá-i-Hindustán Ráj Rajendra Sri Maháráj-Adhiráj Sawái Sir Madho Singh Bahádur, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India (see Introduction, § 11).

From Ráma, the hero of the Rámáyana, the greatest of the legendary heroes of India, to Dhola Rao, the founder of the Jaipur State in 967 A.D., there are enumerated 34 generations; and from Dhola Rao to the present Mahárájá, 106 generations. Early in the 11th century a descendant of Dhola Rao named Hamaji conquered Amber from the Minas, and fixed his court there; and Amber remained the capital of the dynasty until the time of Jai Singh II., who transferred it to Jaipur in 1728. In the time of the Great Mughal, the Emperor Akbar, Rájá Bhagwán Dás of Jaipur was one of the first Princes of the Empire. Overcoming Rájput pride of race, he gave his daughter in marriage to the Emperor's son and heir, Prince Salim, afterwards the Emperor Jahángir, and was himself one of the greatest Imperial commanders. But his adopted son and successor, the Rájá Mán Singh, was the most famous of all the Imperial generals. He and his Rájputs carried the arms of the Empire successfully into Orissa, Bengal, Assam, and Kabul; the chronicles of the age are full of the exploits of the brother-in-law of the Emperor, and he was successively Governor of Kabul, Bengal, Behar, and the Deccan. His nephew, the Rájá Jai Singh, known as the Mirza Rájá, was equally famous throughout the wars of Aurangzeb in the Deccan; he it was who effected the capture of the famous Sivaji, founder of the Mahratta Power; and he is said to have fallen a victim to the jealousy of the Emperor, who caused his death by poison. Some generations later, in the time of the Emperor Muhammad Sháh, the second Jai Singh was famous, not only as a warrior, but also as an astronomer. He built observatories at Jaipur (to which place he removed his capital from the hills of Amber, five miles off), Delhi, Benares, Muttra, and Ujjain. After the death of the Rájá Jai Singh II, the subsequent history of the family is much occupied with leagues with Udaipur and Jodhpur against the Imperial Power, with contests with Jodhpur for the honour of marrying a Princess of Udaipur, with Rájput rivalries and defections, and with Mahratta raids. In order to regain the privilege of marrying Princesses of the House of Udaipur—which honour they had forfeited by marrying a daughter to the Mughal Emperor—the Rájás of Jaipur agreed that the issue of a marriage with an Udaipur Princess should succeed to the Ráj even before an elder brother by another Ráni; and this promise, coupled with the rivalry of the Rájás of Jodhpur for the same privilege, produced endless troubles and disasters. In the time of the Rájá Jagat Singh, Amir Khán, the notorious Pindári leader (afterwards Nawáb of Tonk), sided first with the Rájá of Jaipur against Jodhpur, and then with the Rájá of Jodhpur against Jaipur; and devastated each country in turn. At last, in 1818, the British Government intervened; took the Jaipur State under its protection, and the Rájá became one of the great feudatories.

The late Mahárájá Sawai Rám Singh succeeded to the gadí in 1835. He rendered excellent service throughout the Mutiny of 1857, and again in the famine of 1868. As a reward, he twice received an increase to his salute; he was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; and on the occasion of the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, he was appointed a Councillor of the Empire, and received a suitable addition to his titles and territory. The banner of His Highness that was unfurled at Delhi on that auspicious occasion was exceedingly interesting, as showing the close approximation of Rájput and European heraldic devices; for the Rájput Pancharanga was properly rendered as "A Barry of 5—gules, vert, argent, azure, or"; and the solar lineage of the Kachhwáha Prince was indicated by the device "In chief a Sun in its splendour." The late Mahárájá died in 1880; and was succeeded by his adopted son, a scion of the Kachhwáha race, the present Mahárájá.

The area of the State is 14,465 square miles; and its population 2,534,357, chiefly Hindus, but including more than 170,000 Muhammadans and nearly 50,000 Jains. Jaipur is therefore larger than either Holland or Belgium, and more populous than Greece. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 3578 cavalry, 16,099 infantry, and 281 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 19 guns (including 2 guns personal). There are many Rájput Chiefs who are feudatories of His Highness.

Arms.—Barry of 5, gules, vert, argent, azure, or; in chief a Sun in its splendour. Crest.—A kuchnar tree proper, bearing cinquefoils argent. Supporters.—A tiger and a white horse. Motto.—"Jato Dharma Stato Jayo."

Residence.—Jaipur, Rájputána.

JAISALMIR, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAWAL SALIVAHAN
BAHADUR, Maháráwal of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1886; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 12th April 1891. Is the Chief of the Jadu Bhatti Rájputs, claiming direct descent from the divine Krishna, and undoubtedly boasting a lineage hardly less ancient than that of the great Maháráná of Udaipur himself. The tribe takes its name from Bhati, who was its leader in very remote ages, when settled in the Punjab; whence it appears to have been driven by conquerors from Ghazni, and to have gone to the oasis of the Great Indian Desert, which it has ever since inhabited. Deoráj, born in 836 A.D., was the first to take the title of Ráwal, and he founded the city of Deoráwal. One of his descendants, the Ráwal Jaisal, founded the city of Jaisalmir, and built a strong fort there, about the year 1156 A.D. More than a century later, when Mulráj II. was Ráwal, Jaisalmir was captured and sacked by the Moslem troops of the Emperor Alá-ud-din, in 1294 A.D., after a siege that had lasted eight years; and this was the occasion of one of the great Sakas so famous in Rájput history—when Mulráj and his warriors, having slain all their women and children, cased themselves in armour, put on the saffron robe, bound the mor or nuptial crown on their heads, and then sword in hand sallied forth to die amid the slaughtered heaps of the foe. Again a similar disaster befell the city in 1306 A.D., not long after it had been repaired by the Ráwal Dudu. Finally, in the reign of the Ráwal Sabal Singh, the brave Bhattis were compelled to become feudatories of the Emperor Sháh Jahán. Outlying provinces were subsequently wrested from them by the neighbouring States of Jodhpur and Bikanir; till at length in 1818, under the rule of the Ráwal Mulráj, the State came under the protection and control of the British Power, and has enjoyed the blessings of peace. On the death of the Ráwal Ranjit Singh, his younger brother, the late Maháráwal Bairi SáI, succeeded to the gadi in 1864; and he was succeeded in 1891 by the present Maháráwal.

The area of Jaisalmir is 16,447 square miles; its population about 109,000, chiefly Hindus, but including about 28,000 Muhammadans. In extent it may be compared with Switzerland or Holland; but is larger than either. His Highness maintains a military force of 140 cavalry, 353 infantry, and 25 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Residence.—Jaisalmir, Rájputána.

JAISINGH RAO ANGRIA, Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 24th May 1889.

Residence.—Baroda.

JALAL-UD-DIN, KAZI, Khán Bahádur.

An Extra Assistant Commissioner in Baluchistán. Granted the title of Khán Bahádur, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1893.

Residence.—Quetta, Baluchistán.

JALAL-UD-DIN, SHAIKH, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign.

Residence.—Karnál, Punjab.

JALAM SINGH (of Amoda), Ráwat.

The title is hereditary; and the present Ráwat succeeded to the title and estates on the death of his father, the late Ráwat Lakshmi Singh of Amoda. Belongs to a Tuár Rájput family, descended from Jet Singh.

Residence.—Amoda, Nimár, Central Provinces.

JALIA DEVANI, JAREJA MANSINGHJI, Tilukdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1852; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 31st December 1868. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The area of the State is about 36 square miles; its population 2383, chiefly Hindus. The Tálukdár maintains a military force of 4 cavalry and 35 infantry.

Residence.—Jália Deváni, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

JAM KHAN walad MUHAMMAD KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being a representative of one of the Mirs who were Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation.

Residence.—Hyderabad, Sind.

JAMIAT SINGH (of Ghoriwaha), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being of a Jat family, descended from Sardár Sukha Singh, who in 1759 established his power at Ghoriwaha in the Hoshiárpur district. The family subsequently fell under the power of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. Sukha Singh's grandson was the Sardár Partáb Singh, father of the present Sardár.

Residence.—Hoshiárpur, Punjab.

JAMKHANDI, RAM CHANDRA RAO GOPAL, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Chief of Jamkhandi also bears the name of Appa Sahib Patwardhan. Born 1834; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 18th November 1840. Belongs to a Bráhmaṇ (Hindu) family. The area of his State is 492 square miles; its population is 83,917, chiefly Hindus, but including 7628 Muham-madans. The Chief maintains a military force of 52 cavalry, 943 infantry, and 1 gun.

Residence.—Jamkhandi, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

JAMMU AND KASHMIR, COLONEL HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA PARTAB SINGH INDAR MAHINDAR BAHADUR SIPAR-I-SALTANAT, G.C.S.I., Mahárájá of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1850; succeeded to the gadí 12th September 1885. Is the son of the late Mahárájá Ranbhir Singh, G.C.S.I.; and grandson of the late Mahárájá Ghuláb Singh, the founder of the dynasty, who was constituted Feudatory Chief of the hill-territories east of the Indus and west of the Ravi (with certain specified exceptions) by the treaty of March 1846, concluded after the close of the first Sikh war. Belongs to a Dogra or Jamwal Rájput family (Hindu) of ancient lineage, claiming descent from that of the former Rájás of Jammu. The Mahárájá Ghuláb Singh was the great-grandson of the Rájá Dharabdeo; and a grandson of the Mián Joráwar Singh, who was a brother of Rájá Ranjit Deo. He began life as a cavalry soldier, and became a trusted officer under Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore, who conferred on him the principality of Jammu. At the outbreak of the first Sikh war he had been elected Minister of the Khálsá, and was one of the most conspicuous Sikh leaders; and after the battle of Sobraon he negotiated a separate treaty with the British Power, by which he acquired the Feudal Chiefship of Jammu and Kashmir on payment of a sum of 75 lakhs of rupees. In the Mutiny of 1857 he rendered excellent service, and sent a contingent to Delhi. He died in August 1857, and was succeeded by his third and only surviving son, the late Mahárájá Ranbhir Singh, G.C.S.I., who was a munificent patron of learning, and did good service in connection with the British Mission to Yárkand. He had the distinguished honour of receiving His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at Jammu in 1876; he also had his salute raised to 21 guns, by the addition of 2 guns as a personal distinction. In January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India, he was gazetted a General in the Army, and created a Councillor of the Empress. The Mahárájá died on 12th September 1885, and was succeeded by his eldest son, the present Mahárájá, who was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India on 25th May 1892. The area of his State is 79,784 square miles; and its population is about 1,500,000, including nearly a million Muhammadans, about half-a-million Hindus, and over 20,000 Buddhists. In point of area, the State is more than double the combined area of Bavaria and Saxony, and equal to that of any three or four of the smaller European kingdoms put together. His Highness maintains a military force of about 8000 cavalry and infantry, and 288 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 21 guns within the limits of the State, and to one of 19 guns in the rest of India.

Residence.—Srinagar, Kashmir; and Jammu, Punjab.

JAMNIA, BHUMIA HAMIR SINGH, Bhumia of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1855; succeeded to the gadi in 1863 as a minor. Belongs to a Bhilala family—the Bhilalas being reputed to spring from the intermarriage of Rájputs and Bhils. The founder of the family was Nádír Singh, a famous Bhumia of Jámnia.

Residence.—Kunjrod, Jámnia, Bhopáwar, Central India.

JAMSHEDJI DHANJIBHAI WADIA, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being a representative of one of the Mirs who were Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation.

Residence.—Sind.

JANAK PRIYA, Ráni.

The title is hereditary, the Ráni being the last surviving Ráni of the late Rájá Naráyan Singh of Sambalpur. The Rájás of Sambalpur were Chauhán Rájputs of very ancient lineage. Balrám Das Chauhán conquered Sambalpur about the year 1445; and left it to his elder son Rájá Hirda Naráyan, while his younger son became Rájá of Sonpur (q.v.) The Chauhán device is the chakra—a circle with four tridents (trisul) as radii, pointing north, east, south, and west, as shown in the margin. The Ráni uses this device on her seal, and for signature.

Residence.—Sambalpur, Central Provinces.

The Santak of the Chauhán Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature.

(A circle with four Trisulas or Tridents as radii at the cardinal points.)

JANAKI BALLABH SEN (of Dimla), Rájá.

The title was conferred "for liberality and public spirit," on 1st January 1891.

Residence.—Dimla, Rangpur, Bengal.

JANG BAHADUR KHAN, C.I.E. (of Nanpara), Rájá.

Born 1845. The title is hereditary; and the Rájá succeeded his father, the late Rájá Munáwar Ali Khán, in 1847. Belongs to a Pathán family, descended from Rasul Khán, Togh Pathán, a Risaldár in the service of the Emperor Sháh Jahán, who in 1632 sent him to Salonábád to coerce the Banjáras who had overrun the jágir of Saloná Begam, the wife of Prince Dára. For his performance of this duty he received the grant of Nanpara. In 1763 his descendant Karam Khán of Nanpara obtained the title of Rájá from the Nawáb Shujá-ud-daulá. The present Rájá was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire in 1886. He is an Honorary Magistrate; and has a son and heir named Muhammad Sádiq Khán, born 1870.

Residence.—Bahraich, Oudh.

JANI BIHARI LAL, DIWAN, Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign.

Residence.—Bhartpur, Rájputána.

JANJIRA, NAWAB SIDI AHMAD KHAN, Nawáb of

A Ruling Prince.

Born 1863; succeeded to the gadí 28th January 1879. Belongs to an Abyssinian family of Sunni Muhammadans, claiming descent from Sidi Sarul Khán. The family were Abyssinian admirals of the fleet of the Muhammadan kings of Bijápur, who in 1670 transferred their allegiance to the Emperor of Delhi, Aurangzeb. The Mahrattas often tried to conquer the island of Janjira; but were always successfully resisted. The Nawáb is also Chief of Jáfarábád, a small State in Káthiáwár. The area of the State is 324 square miles; its population is 76,361, chiefly Hindus, but including 13,912 Muhammadans. The Nawáb maintains a military force of 310 infantry and 179 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

JANKI (of Pamakheri), Thákur.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Ságar, Central Provinces.

JANKI KUNWAR (of Paraspur), Ráni.

Born 1839. The title is hereditary; the Ráni succeeded her late husband, Rájá Randhir Singh, on 16th June 1878. The head of the family is the chief of the six Thákurs of Chhedwara, famous for their turbulence in the times before the annexation of Oudh. They claim descent from the Kalhans Rájás of Khurása, through Maháráj Singh, second son of Achal Naráyan Singh. A descendant, named Newal Singh, obtained the title of Rájá while on a visit to the Court at Delhi; and it was recognised as hereditary in favour of the late Rájá, Randhir Singh. The Ráni's son and heir is Bikramájit Singh.

Residence.—Paraspur, Gonda, Oudh.

JAORA, MAJOR HIS HIGHNESS IHTISHAM-UD-DAULA
NAWAB MUHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN BAHADUR FIROZ JANG, Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1855; succeeded to the gadi 30th April 1865 as a minor. Belongs to a Pathán (Muhammadan) family, descended from Nawáb Ghafur Khán, an Afghan of the Swáti tribe, brother-in-law of the famous Amir Khán of Tonk, whom he represented at Holkar's Court. After the battle of Mehidpur, Nawáb Ghafur Khán, being in possession of this territory as a grant from Holkar, was confirmed by the British Government. The present Nawáb has been appointed an Honorary Major in the British Army. The State, which is feudatory to Indore, has an area of 581 square miles; and a population of 119,945, chiefly Hindus, but including 13,318 Muhammadans and over 2000 Jains. His Highness maintains a military force of 63 cavalry, 177 infantry, and 15 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 13 guns. Jaora, the capital of the State, is a station on the Rájputána-Málwá railway. The Nawáb has a son and heir named Muhammad Sher Ali Khán.

Residence.—Jaora, Málwá, Central India.

BAHADUR, C.I.E., *Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1822 ; succeeded to the gadi 24th October 1845. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Rájput) family, formerly feudatories of the Mahrattas of Nágpur, that came under British control in 1818. Rendered good service in the military operations in 1857 against the mutineers and rebels in Udaipur and Pálámau. Was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 21st May 1890. The area of the State is 1947 square miles ; its population is 90,240, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá has a military force of 2 guns.

Residence.—Jashpur, Chota Nágpur, Bengal.

JASMER SINGH, Sardár.

Born 1848. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Jat family, descended from Sardár Gurbaksh Singh, who acquired the territory of Thol Thangor, in the Ambála district of the Punjab, by conquest in 1759 A.D. During the Sikh rebellion of 1848-49, and again in the Mutiny of 1857, this family rendered good service to Government, and were rewarded for the latter service. On the death of Sardár Jawahir Singh, he was succeeded by his two sons, the present Sardárs—Kishan Singh and Jasmer Singh of Thol Thangor. The Sardár Jasmer Singh has two sons—Rám Naráyan Singh (born 1863) and Sheo Naráyan Singh.

Residence.—Thol Thangor, Ambála, Punjab.

JASO, DIWAN JAGATRAJ, JAGIRDAR, Diwán of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1860 ; succeeded to the gadi 7th July 1889. Belongs to the great Bundela Rájput family, descended from the founder of the Orchha State that has given ruling families to Panna, Dattia, Ajaigarh, Charkhári, and most of the other States of Bundelkhand. Bhartichand, the founder of the Jaso State, was the fourth son of the Mahárájá Chhatrasal ; and his great-grandson, Diwán Murat Singh, received a sanad from the British Government in 1816. The Diwán Bhopál Singh received the additional title of Bahádur as a personal distinction, at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. JASWANT SINGH (of Nurpur), Rájá.

Born 1836. The title is hereditary. Nurpur is a hill principality to the west of Guler. The Rájá belongs to a Rájput family, descended from Jit Pal, who came from Delhi about 700 years ago, and established himself at Pathámkot. Subsequently the family removed to the hills; and Nurpur became their capital in the time of Rájá Basu, about the year 1640 A.D. At the time of the conquests of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore, Rájá Bir, father of the present Rájá, was Rájá of Nurpur. He endeavoured to resist Ranjit Singh; but being compelled to take refuge in Chamba, was given up by the Rájá of Chamba, and imprisoned in the fortress of Gobindgarh. Subsequently he was ransomed by his brother-in-law, Sardár Charat Singh, for Rs.85,000; and in 1846 raised the standard of revolt, besieged Nurpur, and died before its walls. He was succeeded by the present Rájá, who has received a large grant from the British Government.

Residence.—Nurpur, Kángra, Punjab.

JATH, AMRITRAO RAO SAHEB DAPHLE, Jágirdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1835; succeeded to the gadí 28th July 1841 as a minor. Belongs to a Mahratta (Hindu) family. The late Jágirdár, Rámrao, died in 1841 without issue; whereon his widow, Bhagirthibai, adopted Amritrao, the present Jágirdár. The Daphle is also Chief of Karásgi; and the jágir of Daphlápúr (or Daflápúr) is also really a part of this State, and will revert to it on the demise of the three widows of the late Chief. The founder of the Jath State was the hereditary pátel, or headman, of Daflápúr village. The area of the State is 884 square miles; its population is 49,491, chiefly Hindus, but including 2842 Muhammadans.

JEJEEBHOY, SIR JAMSETJEE, Baronet, C.S.I.

Born 3rd March 1851; succeeded his father, the late Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoj, second Baronet, in 1877; when (in accordance with the special Act of the Indian Legislature of 1860) he assumed the name of Jamsetjee Jejeebhoj in lieu of Manekjee Cursetjee. Is the third Baronet; and has been created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. Is a merchant of the city of Bombay, a Magistrate, and Member of the Legislative Council of Bombay. Belongs to a family that has long been regarded as the leaders of the Parsi community of Western India. The first Baronet, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoj, K.C.B., of Bombay, was so created in 1857, in recognition of his unbounded munificence and public spirit, and of his undoubted loyalty. His very great wealth was used in promoting the good of others; and the second Baronet, who died in 1877, also earned a similar reputation for benevolence and liberality. In 1860, the special Act of the Indian Legislature, referred to above, was passed with the sanction of Her Most Gracious Majesty, enacting that all future holders of the title, on succeeding to it, shall relinquish their own names and assume those of the first Baronet. The present Baronet, in 1869, married Jerbai, daughter of Shapurji Dhanjibhai, Esq.; and has a son and heir, Cursetjee, born 11th November 1878. Sir Jamsetjee's brothers are: (1) Cowasjee Cursetjee, born 25th November 1852, married, in 1869, Gulbai Rustanji Wadia; and (2) Jamsetjee Cursetjee, born 1860, married, 1882, Awabai Shapurji Dhanjibhai. The family arms are azure, a sun rising above a representation of the Gháts (mountains near Bombay) in base, and in chief two bees volant, all proper. The crest is a mount vert, thereon a peacock amidst wheat, and in the beak an ear of wheat, all proper.

Residence.—Mazagon Castle, Bombay.

JHALARIA, Thákur of. See Jhalera.

JHALAWAR, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJ RANA ZALIM SINGH, BAHADUR, Maháráj Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1864; succeeded to the gadi 24th June 1876 as a minor. Is a Chief of the Jhála Rájputs, whose ancestors came from Jháláwár in Káthiáwár. In 1709 A.D. Bhao Singh, a younger son of the Chief of Halwad in Káthiáwár, took some retainers with him and went to Delhi. His son Madhu Singh rose to high favour and rank in the service of the Mahárájá of Kotah; his sister was married to the heir, and his descendants thus acquired the title of Mámá ("maternal uncle") in Kotah. Ultimately, in 1838, a portion of the State of Kotah was cut off, with the consent of the Mahárájá and of the British Government, and erected into the State of Jháláwár, under one of Madhu Singh's descendants, Madan Singh, son of Zalim Singh, who had long been the successful administrator of Kotah. Madan Singh received the title of Maháráj Ráná. His son, Prithi Singh, did good service during the Mutiny; and was succeeded in 1876 by his adopted son, the present Maháráj Ráná, as a minor. His Highness was educated at Mayo College, Ajmir; and was invested with full powers of government on attaining his majority in 1884. The State has an area of 2694 square miles; and a population of 340,488, chiefly Hindus, but including 20,863 Muhammadans. His Highness maintains a military force of 403 cavalry, 3873 infantry, and 94 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

JIGNI, RAO LAKSHMAN SINGH BAHADUR, Rao of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1860; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 16th September 1871. Belongs to the great Bundela Rájput family, descended from the founder of the Orchha State, which has given ruling families to Panna, Dattia, Ajaigarh, Charkhári, Jaso, and most of the States of Bundelkhand. The founder of Jigui was the Rao Padam Singh, one of the sons of the great Maharájá Chhatarsal. His great-grandson was the Rao Prithi Singh, who received a sanad from the British Government in 1810. His grandson by adoption (being adopted from the kindred ruling family of Panna) is the present Rao, who received the additional title of Bahádur at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. The area of the State is 22 square miles: its population is 3427, chiefly Hindus. The Rao Bahádur maintains a military force of 47 infantry and 3 guns.

JIND, HIS HIGHNESS FARZAND-I-DILBAND RASIKH-UL-ITIKAD DAULAT-I-INGLISHIA RAJA-I-RAJAGAN RAJA RANBHIR SINGH BAHADUR, Rájá Bahádur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1878; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 7th March 1887. Belongs to the famous Phulkian family of Sidhu Jats, descended from Phul, the common ancestor of the ruling families of Patiála, Jind, Nábha, and other Punjab States. Phul was twenty-ninth in descent from the Ráwal Jaisal Singh, the head of the Jadu Bhati Rájputs, who founded Jaisalmir in 1156 A.D. A great-grandson of Phul, named Gajpat Singh, obtained the title of Rájá of Jind from Sháh Alam, Emperor of Delhi in 1772. His son, Rájá Bhag Singh, aided Lord Lake in his pursuit of Holkar in 1805, and was accordingly confirmed by the British Government in his possessions. In 1857 Rájá Sarup Singh of Jind was the first to march against the mutineers of Delhi; and he and his troops took a prominent part in the siege and capture of the city, for which services he received large extensions of his territory. He died in 1864, and was succeeded by his son, the Rájá Ragbir Singh, who was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; and at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, he was appointed a Councillor of the Empress. The present Rájá succeeded in 1887. The area of his State is 1259 square miles; and its population is 249,862, chiefly Hindus, but including 34,247 Muhammadans and 4335 Sikhs. His Highness maintains a military force of 379 cavalry, 1571 infantry, and 12 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Jind, Punjab.

JIND WADO walad AMIR ALI KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being a representative of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation.

Residence.—Shikárpur, Sind.

JIT SINGH (of Maheru), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Jat family, descended from Sardár Rámdás Singh and Sardár Gurdás Singh, two brothers, who took possession of Maheru at the time of the decline of the Mughal Power. In 1799 A.D., when the Maharájá Ranjit Singh became all-powerful in the Punjab, Sardár Charat Singh of Maheru made his submission to him, and retained his possessions. His son, Sardár Jawáhir Singh, succeeded, and was confirmed in eleven villages. But on his death, and the succession of Sardár Jaimal Singh, these were resumed with the exception of Maheru. The Sardár Jaimal Singh did good service in the time of the Mutiny in 1857, and on his death was succeeded by the present Sardár.

Residence.—Maheru, Jálandhar, Punjab.

JIWAN SINGH, C.I.E. (of Buruja), Sardár.

Born 1842. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Jat family, descended from Sardár Nánu Singh, who came from Jhawál Mandan, in the Manjha or central tract of the Punjab, in 1759 A.D., and took possession of Buruja and the surrounding territory. The present Sardár did good service, both in the war of 1845-46, when he was a minor, and also in the Mutiny of 1857. For the latter he received a considerable reward. He has a son and heir, named Gajindar Singh.

Residence.—Ambála, Punjab.

JIWAN SINGH, C.S.I. (of Sháhzádpur), Sardár.

Born 1860. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Jat (Sindhu) family, descended from Sardár Dip Singh, who was the Mahant of the "Damdama Sahab," or resting-place, which was the retreat of the Guru Govind Singh, the tenth and last Sikh Guru, after his defeat by the Imperial army of Delhi. A large number of Sikhs assembled around Dip Singh, who was ultimately slain in a battle with the Governor of Lahore. Dip Singh was succeeded by Sudha Singh, who fell in a battle with the Governor of Jálandhar, and has always been known among Sikhs as "Shahid," or the Martyr, which became a family name. His successor was Sardár Karam Singh, who took possession of some territory in the Singhpura district, which, with the other Cis-Sutlej territories, came under British control in 1808-9. Sardár Sheo Kirpál Singh, Shahid, did good service in the time of the Mutiny of 1857, and was rewarded by Government; and his son is the present Sardár, who was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India on 1st January 1891.

Residence.—Sháhzádpur, Ambála, Punjab.

JIWAN SINGH (of Atari), Sardár.

Born 1835. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Sidhu Jat (Rájput) family, descended from Kanh Chand. His great-grandson was the famous Sardár Shám Singh, whose daughter was betrothed to the Prince Nau Nihál Singh, grandson of the Maharájá Ranjit Singh. When the Sikh army invaded the Cis-Sutlej territory, Sardár Shám Singh disapproved of the war, but being reproached with his inaction he joined the camp, and fell in battle in 1846. His sons were Sardár Thákur Singh and Sardár Kanh Singh, and after the annexation much of the family estate was confirmed to the latter. He died without issue in 1872, and his estates were allowed to devolve on Sardár Ajit Singh, son of Sardár Thákur Singh, and a younger brother of the Sardár Jiwan Singh. The latter is the eldest son of the late Sardár Thákur Singh. He has two sons, named Partáb Singh and Changa Singh.

Residence.—Atári, Amritsar, Punjab.

JIWAN SINGH, THAKUR (of Jakhnoda), Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 20th May 1890.

Residence.—Alirájpur, Central India.

JOBAT, RANA SARUP SINGH, Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1866; succeeded to the gadi in 1874 as a minor. Belongs to the Ráhtor tribe of Rájputs (Hindu); occupies a fort picturesquely situated on the summit of a steep rocky hill, shut in on three sides by forest-clad mountains, and overlooking the town of Jobat. The area of the State is 132 square miles; its population 9387, chiefly Hindus, but including 3916 belonging to Bhil and other aboriginal tribes. The Ráná maintains a military force of 5 cavalry and 44 infantry.

Residence.—Jobat, Bhopáwar, Central India.

JODH SINGH (of Chapa), Sardár.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Amritsar, Punjab.

Residence.—Kakhauta, Etáwah, North-Western Provinces.

JODHPUR, HIS HIGHNESS SIR JASWANT SINGH BAHADUR, G.C.S.I., Mahārājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1837; succeeded to the gadi 13th February 1873. Is the Chief of the great Ráhtor tribe or clan of the Rájputs, claiming direct descent from the legendary hero Ráma, and, like the Sesodias of Udaipur and the Kachhwáhas of Jaipur, representing the royal line of the Surya Vansa or Solar race. His full titles are—His Highness Ráj Rájeshwar Maháráj-Adhiráj Sir Jaswant Singh, Bahádur, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. The proper name of the State, the capital of which is Jodhpur (from the name of its founder), is Márwár—anciently Marusthán, “the land of death,” a term applied formerly not only to the country of Márwár, but to the whole of the Great Indian Desert from the Sutlej to the Indian Ocean. Tod, in his learned Annals of Rájsthán, says of the family of the

Jodhpur Mahárájá—“It requires neither Bhat nor Bard to illustrate its nobility; a series of splendid deeds which time cannot obliterate has emblazoned the Ráhtor name on the historical tablet. Where all these races have gained a place in the Temple of Fame it is almost invidious to select, but truth compels me to place the Ráhtor with the Chauhán on the very pinnacle.” In Tod’s work the Annals of Márwár occupy a place only second to those of Mewár (or Udaipur), and present a most interesting view of feudalism in India. Even to the present day the feudal Thákurs of Rájputána—feudatories of their Highnesses the Maháráná of Udaipur, the Mahárájás of Jodhpur and Jaipur, and the other Princes of this territory—are nobles of high account and great local power. Up to 1194 A.D. the Ráhtor family were rulers of the vast Empire of Kanauj. The famous Jai Chand was the last King of Kanauj, and his grandson, Sivaji, migrated westward to Márwár. Scions of the family became rulers of Bikanir and Kishangarh in Rájputána, of Idar and Ahmadnagar in Gujarát, and elsewhere. Mandor, the ancient capital of Márwár, was conquered by Rao Chánda, who was tenth in descent from Sivaji, about the year 1382 A.D. His grandson Jodh, the eldest of twenty-four sons of Rinnal, moved the capital from Mandor to Jodhpur in 1459 A.D. After resisting the Emperor Bábar and the Afghan Sher Sháh, Jodh ultimately had to submit to the Great Mughal, Akbar, and sent his son Udai Singh to take service at Delhi; and ultimately Udai Singh’s sister, the famous Jodh Báí, became the consort of the Mughal monarch. When Udai Singh’s son, Rájá Sur Singh, succeeded to the gadi of Jodhpur, he rose to high favour with his Imperial uncle, and was the general of Akbar’s troops who added Gujarát and the Deccan to the Mughal Empire. His son, Rájá Jaswant Singh, was the general whom the Emperor Sháh Jahán sent against his rebellious son Aurangzeb, and was defeated by the latter. The successor of Jaswant Singh was a posthumous son, the famous Ajit Singh. In his time Aurangzeb in person attacked Rájputána, sacked Jodhpur, and ordered the conversion of the Rájputs to Muhammadanism. But Ajit Singh formed a league with Udaipur and Jaipur, and the combined forces of the three great Rájput States held in check the armies of Aurangzeb. One stipulation of this league is famous, and was disastrous to Jodhpur and Jaipur by reason of the domestic feuds it caused. It was to the effect that the Jodhpur and Jaipur families, who had lost the privilege of marrying Princesses of Udaipur because they had given their own daughters to the Mughal Emperors, should recover this privilege, on condition that the issue of any marriage with an Udaipur Princess should succeed to the Ráj before all other children. Ajit Singh was murdered by his son Bakht Singh, and heavy troubles thereafter befell the Ráhtor family. There was a long war between the Rájás of Jaipur and Jodhpur, who were rival suitors for the hand of a Princess of Udaipur. Amir Khán, the great Pindári leader (afterwards Nawáb of Tonk), took sides, first with Jaipur, then with Jodhpur, and plundered and utterly exhausted both States in turn. At last the British Government intervened, and by a treaty in 1818 Jodhpur became a feudatory of the Paramount Power. Rájá Man Singh died in 1843, leaving no son, and the nobles and Court officials, with the consent of the British Government, elected Takht Singh, Rájá of Ahmadnagar, a descendant of Ajit Singh, to the vacant gadí. The Rájá Takht Singh did good service during the Mutiny of 1857. He died in 1873, and was succeeded by the present Mahárájá. His Highness has been created a Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. The area of his State is 37,000 square miles; its population is 1,750,403, chiefly Hindus, but including about 155,000 Muhammadans and about 172,000 Jains. In point of extent the Jodhpur State is larger than any of the smaller European States, and is somewhat larger than Bavaria and Saxony combined; in population it surpasses the Grand Duchy of Baden. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 3162 cavalry, 3653 infantry, and 121 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 21 guns (including 4 guns personal). The family cognisance is the falcon, the sacred garur of the Solar Rájputs. The arms of His Highness, as displayed on the banner presented to him by the Empress of India at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi in January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress, are shown in the margin.

Residence.—Jodhpur, Rájputána.

JUBBAL, RANA PADAM CHAND, Ráná of.
A Ruling Chief.

Born 1861; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 17th March 1877. Belongs to a Ráhtor Rájput family (see Jodhpur), claiming descent from the ruling family of Sirmur, which preceded the present dynasty. Originally tributary to Sirmur, this State (which is one of the Simla Hill States) was freed by the British after the conclusion of the Gurkha war, and the Ráná, Puran Singh, received a sanad from Lord Lake in 1815. After great vicissitudes of fortune, Puran Singh (who had given up his State to the British Government) died in 1849, and it was then resolved to restore the State to his son, Ráná Karm Chand. The latter died in 1877, and was succeeded by his son, the present Ráná. The area of the State is 257 square miles; its population is 19,196, chiefly Hindus. The Ráná maintains a military force of 50 infantry.

Residence.—Jubbal, Simla Hills, Punjab.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 7th January 1876.

Residence.—Ujjain, Central India.

JWALA SINGH (of Jharauli), Sardár.

Born 1846. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Sindhu Jat (Rájput) family, descended from Dip Singh, the Mahant of the "Damdama Saheb," or resting-place of the Guru Govind Singh (see Jiwan Singh, Shahid, Sardár). His successor, Sudha Singh, falling in battle with the Governor of Jálándhar, the family have since been known by the name of Shahid ("Martyr"). Sardár Jwála Singh, son of Sardár Jit Singh of Jharauli, is the present head of the Jharauli Shahids. He has two sons—Devindar Singh and Mohindar Singh.

Residence.—Jharauli, Ambála, Punjab.

JWALA SINGH (of Wazirabad), Sardár.

Born 1822. The title is hereditary. The Sardár is the youngest son of the Sardár Ganda Singh, who was in attendance on the Maharájá Sher Singh when that prince was assassinated, and was severely wounded in the endeavour to defend him. Sardár Ganda Singh was killed at the battle of Firuzshahr. Sardár Jwála Singh is an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Gujránwála, Punjab.

JYOTI PRASAD GARGA (of Maisadal), Rájá.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1890, for his "liberality and public spirit." The Rájá is the present representative of the Maisadal family. Their title of Rájá is said to have been conferred by the old Nawábs of Bengal. The first Rájá was the Rájá Janárdhan Upadhyaya. Two ladies of this family at different periods—the Ráni Janaki Devi and the Ráni Mathurá Devi—have been in charge of the Ráj. The late Rájá, Lakshman Prasád Garga of Maisadal, is recorded to have rendered good service during the Orissa famine of 1866.

Residence.—Maisadal, Midnapur, Bengal.

Residence.—Kachi Baroda, Bhopáwar, Central India.

KADATTANAD, MANA VARMA RAJA, Valiya Rájá of.

Born 1820. The title is hereditary, the present Rájá being the twenty-sixth in descent. Belongs to a Samanda family, which originally held the rule over a district named Vatakumpuram. One of his ancestors was driven out of Vatakumpuram by the Zamorin of Calicut, and thenceforward the family ruled a district on the Malabar coast, extending originally from Mahe to Badagara, where the Rájá now lives. This territory is said to have been granted by the Cherakal Rájá of Kolathiri. In 1766 Haidar Ali of Mysore invaded the country, and the Rájá took refuge with the East India Company's officers in Tellicheri; and again, when the Sultán Tippu invaded the country, the Rájá and his family took refuge with the Mahárája of Travancore. In 1792 the Rájá entered into an agreement with the British Government to receive an annuity as compensation for the estates of his ancestors. Like the other Malabar Rájás, the family follows the Marumakkatayam law of inheritance, by which the succession is with the offspring of its female members, the next eldest male to the Rájá being always his heir. The late Rájá Udaya Varma was born in 1811, and succeeded to the title on 23rd June 1858. He died recently, and was succeeded by his heir under the Marumakkatayam law, the present Rájá.

KAHLUR, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA BIJE CHAND, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1872; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 3rd February 1889. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, claiming descent from Argok, a Rájá whose territory was situated in the Deccan. Harihar Chand, a descendant of Argok in the fourteenth generation, came on a pilgrimage to Jwálámukhi, a sacred place in the Kángra district of the Punjab; he saw Jhandbhari, in the Hoshiárpur district, and, attracted by the place, conquered it and settled down there. One of Harihar Chand's sons conquered and took possession of the Chamba State (q.v.); another carved out a principality for himself in Kanidon; while a third son, Bir Chand, founded the State of Kahlur or Biláspur. From 1803 to 1815 the State was overrun by the Gurkhas, and after their expulsion it was confirmed to the then Rájá by a sanád from the British Government, dated 6th March 1815. The Rájá Hira Singh, predecessor of the present Rájá, rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857, and was rewarded with a salute of 11 guns. The area of the State (which is one of the Simla Hill States) is 448 square miles; its population is 86,546, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 40 cavalry, 620 infantry, and 11 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Kahlur, Simla Hills, Punjab.

KAKKU MAL, Rai Bahádur.

Born 28th February 1849. The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her Majesty's reign. Belongs to a family that migrated from the Punjab in 1751, and settled at Ajudhya. His father was Treasurer under the Kings of Oudh, and was subsequently appointed Peshkar by the British Government. He has rendered loyal and meritorious service as Chairman of the Fyzabad Municipal Board.

Residence.—Fyzabad, Oudh.

KALAHANDI, Rájá of. See Karond.

KALAHASTI, KUMARA MADDU VENKATAPPA, Rájá of.

Born 1850; succeeded recently to the gadi on the death of his father, the Rájá Damarakumara Maddu Venkatappa Nayudu Bahádur Garu, C.S.I. Belongs to an ancient family, that acquired importance in the 15th century under the Government of the Rájás of Vijayanagar, and increased in consequence of the decline of that dynasty. Under the Muhammadan Government the head of the family held the position of a Mansabdár of 5000 foot; and a sana'd granted by the Emperor Aurangzeb of Delhi made the family directly subordinate to the Nawáb of Arcot. An ancestor of the Rájá was the local Naik who procured for the English from the Rájá of Chandragiri the privilege of settling at Madras and of building a fort there; and his father's name being Chenappa, he stipulated that the place should be called Chenappa-patnam. The late Rájá received the Companionship of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India from His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, at the Darbár held at Calcutta on 1st January 1876. The family banner is the "Hanumadwajam," or flag bearing the device of Hanumán (the sacred monkey) in five colours. The Rájá owns large estates in Nellore and North Arcot districts, Madras.

Residence.—Kálahasti, Nellore, Madras.

KALAT, HIS HIGHNESS BEGLAR BEGI MIR SIR MUHAMMAD KHODADAD KHAN, G.C.S.I., Wali of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1838; succeeded to the gadi in 1857. The title of Beglar Begi was conferred on one of His Highness's ancestors, named Nasir Khán, by the great Persian invader Nádír Sháh in 1739. Nasir Khán subsequently was embroiled in wars with the King of Kábul, Ahmad Sháh Abdáli, and later on became a trusted leader of that monarch's troops. Nasir Khán died in extreme old age in 1795, and was succeeded by his son Máhmud Khán. In 1839, at the time of the first Afghán war, Mehráb Khán was the Wali of Kalát and ruler of Baluchistan; on account of his supposed treachery (which was afterwards discovered to have been falsely attributed to him by his Wazir), the town and fort of Kalát were stormed by General Willshire, and the unfortunate Mehráb Khán was among the slain. In 1841, however, his son Nasir Khán was reinstated by the British, whose army thereon evacuated the country; and in 1854 a treaty was concluded, stipulating for the protection of the State by the British Power. Nasir Khán died in 1856, and was succeeded by his brother, the present Wali. His Highness had an interview with the Viceroy of India (Lord Lytton) in 1876 at Jacobabad, when the treaty of 1854 was renewed and extended; and, with his great vassals, he attended the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi in 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India, and was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. Throughout the Afghán war of 1878-79 the Wali rendered the most valuable aid to the Government—placing all the resources of his country at its disposal, and sending his son and heir-apparent to accompany the General in command of the army passing through his territory. The area of the State is about 91,000 square miles; its population is about 150,000, chiefly Muhammadans. His Highness maintains a military force of 300 cavalry, 1500 infantry, and 6 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 21 guns (including 2 guns personal).

Residence.—Kalát, Baluchistan.

KALB ALI KHAN, MIRZA, Khán Bahádur.

Born 22nd June 1828. The title is personal, and was conferred on 24th May 1889, for his "distinguished loyalty in the Mutiny and his good services." The Khán Bahádur was formerly Sub-Judge of Unao, and has had a long and distinguished service in the Judicial Department.

Residence.—Unao, Oudh.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1881; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 28th August 1886. Belongs to a Ját (Sikh) family, originally of Kalsia in the Lahore district, whose founder, Sardár Gurbakhsh Singh, conquered this territory in the last century. His son, Jodh Singh, was a brave and able man, who made considerable conquests in the neighbourhood of Ambála towards the close of the century. When the Cis-Sutlej States came under British protection, Sardár Jodh Singh followed the general example. His grandson, Sardár Lahna Singh, was the grandfather of the present Sardár. The area of the State is 169 square miles; its population is 67,708, chiefly Hindus, but including 19,930 Muhammadans and 5923 Sikhs. The Sardár maintains a military force of 48 cavalry, 181 infantry, and 3 guns.

Residence.—Kalsia, Punjab.

KALU KHAN (of Kuláchi), Khán Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 11th March 1859. The Khán Bahádur belongs to the family of the Chief of the Gandapur clan of the Kuláchi country in the Dera Ismail Khán district of the Punjab, and belongs to the Bira Khel (Afghán) tribe. In the Multán campaign of 1848-49 Kalu Khán and his father Ali Khán raised a force of several hundred men of the Bira Khel tribe of Afgháns, and rendered excellent service throughout the second Sikh war, for which Kalu Khán received a large pension from Government. When the Mutiny of 1857 broke out, he immediately raised a force of 200 horse and 400 foot, and leaving 200 foot with the Deputy-Commissioner of Dera Ismail Khán for the posts on the Sulaimáni border, he joined Sir Herbert Edwardes with the remaining 200 horse and 200 foot at Pesháwar, where he served throughout the crisis with distinguished loyalty. For this he received a valuable khilat, a perpetual jágir, and the title of Khán Bahádur.

Residence.—Dera Ismail Khán, Punjab.

This Chief rules over one of the Shan States on the frontier of Burma. Its population consists almost entirely of Shans.

Residence.—Kantigyí, Shan States, Burma.

KANTIT, RAJA BHUP INDRA BAHADUR SINGH, Rájá of.

Born 1863; as a minor succeeded his father, Rájá Rajendra Bahádur Singh, in the year of his birth. Belongs to an ancient family of Gaharwár Rájputs, said to be a branch of that of the Ráhtors of Kanauj, and descended from Gudan Deo. In ancient times, for a long series of years it appears that there was a Gaharwár Ráj of the Kantit family, settled at Benares, and owning domains in Mirzapur district, south of the Ganges. In 1758 the Rájá Vikramáditya Singh of Kantit was driven out by Balwant Singh, the first Rájá of Benares (q.v.); but after the flight of Rájá Chet Singh of Benares in 1781, Rájá Govinda Singh, son of Rájá Vikramáditya, recovered his possessions. He was succeeded by his nephew and adopted son, Rám Ghulám Singh, whose son was Rájá Mahipál Singh; and the latter in turn was succeeded by his son, Jagat Bahádur Singh. He died in 1850, leaving two minor sons, of whom the elder, Rájá Rajendra Bahádur Singh, succeeded his father, but hardly lived to attain his majority. On his death he was succeeded by the present Rájá.

Residence.—Bijaipur, Mirzapur, North-Western Provinces.

KAPILAS KUMARI (of Phulghar), Ráni.

The title is hereditary. The Ráni belongs to a very ancient Gond family, descended from the Chanda stock of Gond Rájás, 800 years ago. It is said that the title of Rájá was conferred on an ancestor by one of the ancient Kings of Delhi, before the family left Chanda. Until recently the Phulghar Zamindári was classed as a Gurjhat feudatory State; but the late Rájá Jagsai died without legitimate heirs in 1867, and the State lapsed into the form of a Zamindári, in the hands of the late Ráni Ságan Kumári of Phulghar, who was the lawful wife of the Rájá Prithi Singh. The Ráni Ságan Kumári was more than seventy years of age when she succeeded to the estate, as she was born before the commencement of the present century; she was succeeded by the present Ráni.

Residence.—Phulghar, Sambalpur, Central Provinces.

KAPURTHALA, His Highness the Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born September 1872; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 5th September 1877. The Rájá's full title is—His Highness Farzand-i-Dilband Rasikhul-Iti-kád Daulat-i-Inglishia Rájá-i-Rájagán Rájá Jagatjit Singh Bahádúr. Belongs to a Ját Kalal (Sikh) family, well known under the distinguished name of Ahluwalia, from the village of Ahlu near Lahore. The Sardár Jassa Singh was one of the most conspicuous of the leaders who consolidated the Sikh Power during the disorders and weakness of the Mughals, consequent on the invasions of Nádír Sháh and Ahmad Sháh Duráni. He died without issue, and was succeeded by Sardár Bág Singh, a descendant of his uncle. The Chiefs of Kapurthala largely extended their territories and power; and the name of Sardar Bág Singh's successor, Sardár Fateh Singh, was associated with that of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh in the first Sikh treaty concluded with the British Government. In 1826 Sardár Fateh Singh sought the protection of the British Power against Ranjit Singh; but in the first Sikh war his troops fought against the British at the battle of Aliwál, and on this account his Cis-Sutlej territories were confiscated. In the second Sikh war his son Sardár Nihál Singh rendered good service; and in recognition of it he was created a Rájá in 1849. On the outbreak of the Mutiny in 1857, the Rájá Sir Randhir Singh, G.C.S.I., of Kapurthala, volunteered the services of himself and all his followers. He strengthened the hold of Government in the Jálándhar Doáb, and then volunteered to aid in the subjugation of the rebellious Province of Oudh. His offer was accepted; and accompanied by his brother, the brave Sardár Bikráma Singh Bahádúr, C.S.I., he marched to Oudh at the head of 2000 horse and foot and four guns. This force fought no less than six actions with the rebels, with conspicuous valour on the part alike of the Chief, his brother, and his followers. They held most important positions—first at Bani to protect the Lucknow and Cawnpur road, and afterwards at Daryabad; and captured ten guns from the rebels. The Kapurthala troops remained in Oudh for a whole year; and the Rájá Sir Randhir Singh received as a reward for his loyalty and bravery large estates there, confiscated from the rebellious Rájás of Bhitauli, Baundi, and Ikauna, as well as a khilat of Rs.10,000, and many other honours. In 1870 he set out to visit England, but unfortunately died at Aden on the way. He was succeeded by his son, the Rájá Kharak Singh, father of the present Rájá; leaving also a younger son, the Kunwár Harnám Singh, C.I.E. (q.v.), and a daughter married to the Sardár Buta Singh of Sirnanwa. The area of the State is 598 square miles; its population is 252,617, chiefly Muhammadans, but including 82,900 Hindus and 26,493 Sikhs. In addition to this, the Oudh estates of His Highness have an area of 700 square miles, and a population of 253,000. The Rájá maintains a military force of 197 cavalry, 829 infantry, and 13 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residences. — Kapurthala, Punjab; and Bhitauli, Baundi, and Ikauna, Oudh.

KARAM KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being a descendant of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation (see Khairpur).

Residence.—Shikárpur, Sind.

KARAMDAD KHAN (of Pharwála), Rájá.

The title is hereditary, and the Rájá succeeded his father in March 1865, as the foremost of the Gakkar Chiefs of the Punjab. The Gakkars trace their descent from Kai Gohar, of Ispahan in Persia, whose son, Sultán Kaid, is said to have conquered Badakshán and a part of Tibet. For many hundreds of years the Gakkars were undoubtedly possessed of great power and a wide extent of territory; they overran Kashmir in very early times, and traces of their occupation are still to be found in the north and west of that country. They are usually of the Shia sect of Muhammadans. When the Emperor Bábar invaded India, Hati Khán was the Chief of the Gakkars; and in the Emperor's Autobiography there is a notice of his contest with that Chief. Bábar marched against Pharwála—then, as now, the capital of the Gakkars—in 1526 A.D., and captured it after a gallant resistance, Hati Khán making his escape from one gate of the town as Bábar's troops entered by another. Sultán Mukarrab Khán was the last independent Gakkar Chief, and in his day the power of the Gakkars was very great. He defeated the Yusufzai Afgháns and the Chief of the Khattaks, and captured Gujrát, overrunning the Chib country as far north as Bhimbar. He joined Ahmad Sháh Durani on his several invasions of India, and was treated by that monarch with the greatest consideration, being confirmed in the possession of his large territories, which extended from the Chinab to the Indus. Mukarrab Khán was at last defeated by the powerful Sikh Chief, Sardár Gujar Singh, Bhangí, and compelled to retire across the Jhelum, giving up his possessions in the Chaj Doáb. His power being thus broken, the rival Chiefs of his own tribe declared against him, and he was treacherously put to death. He left four sons, of whom the youngest was Sultán Shadman Khán, grandfather of the present Rájá. The family were greatly impoverished, weakened, and stripped of most of their possessions, by the attacks first of Sardár Gujar Singh, and subsequently of Anand Singh, Thipuria, grandson of the famous Sardár Milkha Singh of Ráwalpindi. In 1826 the family was conceded some proprietary rights in Pharwála, the ancient cradle and home of their race. Shadman Khán's eldest son was Háyat-ulla-Khán, who became Rájá; he rendered excellent service under Captain Abbott in 1848-49, and again during the Mutiny of 1857. He was succeeded by the present Rájá in 1865.

KARASGI, Chief of. See Jath.KARAULI, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA BONWAR PAL DEO BAHADUR YADUKUL CHANDRA BHAL, Mahārājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1862; succeeded to the gadi 14th August 1886. Is the head of the great Jadun clan of Rájputs, who claim descent from Krishna, and are called the Chandravansi or Children of the Moon. The title of Mahārājā has descended to them from the remotest antiquity. Probably the first historical personage in the pedigree is Bijai Pál, who built the fort of Biána in 995 A.D. Arjan Deo, in 1348 A.D., established the State, and founded the capital of Karauli in Rájputána. The Mahārājā Dharm Pál became Mahārājā of Karauli in 1644 A.D.; and the present Mahārājā Bahádur is ninth in succession from Dharm Pál. The Mahārājā Madan Pál rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857, sending a body of his troops against the Kotah mutineers; and for these services he received an addition of two guns to his salute as a personal distinction, and was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. The area of the State is 1208 square miles; its population is 148,670, chiefly Hindus, but including 8836 Muhammadans. His Highness maintains a military force of 281 cavalry, 1640 infantry, and 56 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns. The family banner is coloured yellow.

KEHAR SINGH (of Khiva), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Sikh family descended from the Sardár Rai Maha Singh; who, with his son, Sardár Laha Singh, fell in battle in the service of Sardár Charat Singh, head of the Sikh misl or confederacy known as Sukarchakia, and grandfather of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. Sardár Amar Singh, son of Laha Singh, was taken into the service of Sardár Charat Singh, received a jágir, and served with distinction under Charat Singh's son, Sardár Dayál Singh, and under his grandson the Mahárájá. After his death his three sons, Sardárs Fateh Singh, Dayál Singh, and Mohar Singh, rose into favour with the Mahárájá; and the last especially distinguished himself in an action with the Afgháns at Khiva in the Gujrát district. Mohar Singh subsequently retired to Benares, and the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh confiscated his jágers. His brother, Sardár Dayál Singh (grandfather of the present Sardár), fought in the battle of Attock, 1813, where he was severely wounded; and he was again wounded in the expedition to Kashmir, for which he received some valuable jágers. He died in 1832; and his son, Sardár Bishan Singh, died two years afterwards, leaving Kishan, a child of two years of age. Sardár Kishan Singh was loyal in the time of the Multán rebellion of 1848-49; and later, in the time of the Mutiny of 1857, he rendered good service to Government, and was rewarded for it. He died in 1860, and Sardár Kehar Singh is the surviving member of the family. He is also known as the Sardár Nand Singh.

KESHAB KANTA SINGH, Rájá.

Born November 1852. The title is personal, and was conferred on 2nd February 1861, the Rájá being the grandson and representative of the late Rájá Chandra Kánta Singh, the last reigning Rájá of Assam. Belongs to the historical Ahom dynasty, who were rulers in Assam for many centuries, and are said to have been originally Shans from Burma. The first Rájá of the dynasty who adopted Hinduism is stated to have been Chuhum-Pha, who succeeded to the gadi in 1497 A.D. From him the fourth in succession, Rájá Chutum-Hla, adopted the Hindu name of Jayadhajiya Singh; and he was reigning at the time of the Mughal invasion by Mir Jumla under the orders of the Emperor Aurangzeb. The invasion was unsuccessful, and the Ahom Rájá extended his frontier to Goálpára. The greatest of the dynasty was Rájá Rudra Singh, who succeeded to the gadi in 1695; and in the next century their power decayed. Rájá Gaurináth Singh was the titular Rájá when the British first sent a force into Assam in 1792 to restore him after his expulsion by the Koch Rájá of Darrang. Then followed an invasion of the Burmese, who ruled the country till the first Burmese war; at the close of which Assam was ceded by Burma to the British Power. Rájá Gaurináth Singh had been succeeded in title by his brother, Rájá Chandra Kánta Singh; and the grandson of the latter is the present Rájá. The family cognisance is an Arowan (Royal Umbrella) and Sripus Kalki (Golden Head-dress).

Residence.—Gauháti, Assam.

KEUNJHAR, MAHARAJA DHANURJAI NARAYAN BHANJ DEO, Rájd of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 27th July 1849; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 4th September 1861. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, claiming descent from Joti

Bhanj, a brother of Adi Bhanj, the founder of the Moharbhanj State (q.v.), thirty-four generations back. The following is the local tradition as to the way in which the Keunjhar Rájás got the patronymic of Bhanj, in which the State got the name of Keunjhar, and in which its borders were enlarged :— Jai Singh, a son of Man Singh, the Mahárájá of Jaipur in Rájputána, came to visit the shrine of Jagannath in Puri. He married Padmavati, the daughter of the Gajapati King of Puri, Pratápendra Deb, and received as her dowry the State of Hariharpur, which then comprised the two States of Moharbhanj and Keunjhar. Two sons were born to him, the elder of whom was named Adi Singh and the younger Joti Singh. In mauza Rarua in killa Hariharpur there was a petty Zamindár named Mayura Dhwaja in possession of five pirs. He was conquered by Prince Adi Singh, and deprived of his Zamindári. The Gajapati King of Puri, hearing of the success of Prince Adi Singh, conferred on him the title of Bhanj. Since that time the above title has been hereditary in the Moharbhanj and Keunjhar Ráj families. Adi Singh on his accession to the gadi changed the name of Hariharpur into Moharbhanj, and in commemoration of his conquest of the territory of Mayura Dhwaja, called it and the villages comprised in it Adipur Pir, after his own name. Prior to his death, Jai Singh separated from his killa a portion of land which at present goes by the name of Nijgarh zillah, and left it in possession of his younger son, Joti Bhanj. Thereupon the latter left Moharbhanj, and established a garh (fort) at Jotipur, where he dwelt. Subsequently he removed his headquarters to a place where there was a spring (jhar) in an ebony (kendu) forest; and since then the headquarters and the killa itself are called Kendu-Jhar or Keunjhar. Jotipur Garh, with its adjoining villages, was annexed to killa Keunjhar and called Jotipur Pir. The boundaries of killa Keunjhar since its foundation by Joti Bhanj up to the reign of Govind Bhanj are laid down in the topographical maps which were prepared by Government between 1850 and 1862. Govind Bhanj being offended for some reason or other with his father, Trilochan Bhanj, retired to Puri and lived there. He was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the army of the Gajapati King of Puri, and gained a victory for him in the battle of Kanchi-Cavery in the Madras Presidency. Soon after, being informed of his father's death, he got the permission of the Puri Rájá to return home. Before his departure he obtained as a reward from the Rájá the Zamindári of Athgarh, which adjoined the eastern border of the Keunjhar State, and on his return from Puri he was installed on the Keunjhar gadi. Since that date the zillah of Athgarh has remained annexed to killa Keunjhar. It is commonly known as Anandpur. In 1794 A.D. Janárdan Bhanj married Krishnapriya, the daughter or Manipál and grand-daughter of Arnapura, the Ráni of Pál Lahera, and received as dowry the Zamindári of Pál Lahera. On the death of Krishnapriya in 1825, the petty Zamindárs of Pál Lahera combined with the ryots of that State and opposed Janárdan Bhanj's possession of Pál Lahera. From 1794 to 1825 the Rájá of Keunjhar had full authority over Pál Lahera; and though the latter was subsequently made independent, it still pays its tribute through the former. The title of Rájá is hereditary in this family, and dates from the period of the Mahratta dominion in Orissa; it was formally conferred by the British Government in 1874. The title of Mahárájá was conferred on the present Chief as a personal distinction, 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. The cognisance of the family is a peacock with the tail spread. The area of the State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, is 3096 square miles; its population is 215,612, chiefly Hindus, but including nearly 20,000 belonging to various aboriginal tribes. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 2949 infantry and 32 guns.

Residence.—Khairagarh, Raipur, Central Provinces.

KHAIRPUR, HIS HIGHNESS MIR SIR ALI MURAD KHAN, G.C.I.E., Mir of
A Ruling Chief.

Born 28th June 1815; succeeded to the gadi 20th December 1842. Is the representative of the historical Baluch family called Talpur, that conquered Sind in 1783 A.D. In that year Mir Fateh Ali Khán Talpur established himself as Rais of Sind; and subsequently his nephew, Mir Sohráb Khán Talpur, with his two sons, named respectively Mir Rustam and Ali Murád—the last-named being the present Mir of Khairpur—founded the Khairpur branch of the Talpur rulers of Sind. Mir Sohráb Khán gradually extended his dominions until they extended from the Jaisalmer Desert on the east to Kachh Gandáva in Baluchistán on the west. In 1813 he ceased to pay tribute to Afghanistán; and in 1832 Khairpur was recognised as a separate State from the rest of Sind, in a treaty with the British Power. During the first Afghan war, when most of the Sind Mirs were believed to be hostile, the Mir Ali Murád Khán cordially supported the British policy. Consequently, when, after the close of that war, the victory of Miáni (Meeanee) effected the conquest of Sind, and the rest of Sind was annexed and incorporated in the British territory, the State of Khairpur retained its political existence as a feudatory of the Empire. In 1866 a sanad was granted to His Highness, guaranteeing the succession according to Muhammadan law; and he has recently been created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. His Highness's sons are Mir Faiz Muhammad Khán, Mir Ján Muhammad Khán, and Mir Ghulám Haidar. The area of the State is 6109 square miles; its population is 129,153, chiefly Muhammadans, but including more than 26,000 Hindus. His Highness maintains a military force of 700 cavalry, 774 infantry, and 32 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 19 guns (including 4 guns personal).

Residence.—Khairpur, Sind, Bombay.

KHANDERAO VISHWANATH RASTE, Rao Bahádur.

Born 1845. The title of Rao Bahádur is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1877, at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India—when he also received a Medal of Honour. Is also a First Class Sardár of the Deccan ; and claims the hereditary rank of Sardár. Belongs to a Konkanasth Bráhma family, resident from early times in Velneshwar, in the district of Ratnagiri ; originally the family name was “Gokhle,” changed at a later date for “Raste.” The founder of the family was named Balláh. His descendant, Shamji Naik, had three sons, who entered the service of the Shahu Rájá of Sátára, in which they acquired important positions. The second of these, named Bhikaji, had a daughter married to the Peshwá Naráyan Rao ; the eldest, named Haribaji Naik, was the ancestor of this family. His great-grandson, Khanderao Nilkant Raste, was appointed to a military command by the celebrated Nana Farnavis under the Peshwá Mahadeo Rao Naráyan ; he served with great success in many campaigns, and rose to high honours, with considerable grants of land. His son, Vishwasrao Khanderao, was a Sardár of the Deccan of the second class ; he was granted a pension by the Government in 1819, and was succeeded by his son, the present title-holder. The Rao Bahádur was educated at the Poona College ; was a Member of the Bombay Legislative Council, 1884-86 ; is a Magistrate for Poona, and also for Kolába, and a Justice of the Peace for the town and island of Bombay.

Residence.—Poona, Bombay.

KHANDPARA, RAJA NATOBAR SINGH MARDRAJ BHRAMARBAR RAI, *Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1837 ; succeeded to the gadí 28th February 1867. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, claiming descent from a younger son of the Nayagarh family, seventy-one generations ago. The Rájá Raghunáth Singh of Nayagarh had two sons. The elder son, Harihar Singh, became Rájá of Nayagarh, and the younger, Jadunáth Singh Mangráj, retained possession of four Garhs, or forts, as his share, viz. Kadua, Ghuntsahi, Sardhapur, and Khedpada, all in Nayagarh. There was at that time a Chief ruling over a tract from Ogalpur to Harichandanpur in Khandpára. Him the said Mangráj defeated, and took possession of his territory. Gradually in course of time and by dint of arms, his son Pitabas Singh, his grandson Naráyan Singh, and his great-grandson Balunkeswar Singh extended their dominions, and strengthened the State of Khandpára. The petty chiefs who ruled within the jurisdiction of this State during these times, and their subjects, were savage aborigines. The Rájás of Khandpára defeated these petty Chiefs, gave education to the savages, cleared the jungles, formed villages, and civilised the country. Up to the reign of Rájá Naráyan Singh Mangráj, Khandpára extended on the east up to Banki, on the west to Balarámprasád in Daspalla, on the north to Kantilo, and on the south up to Jogiapali in Nayagarh. During the reign of Banamáli Singh Mardráj Bhramarbár Rai, son of Rájá Balunkeswar Singh Mangráj, the Rájá of Bod did not give the State to his adopted son Makund Deb Bhanj, whom he had brought from Moharbhanj, but gave it to another person whom he subsequently adopted as his son. This gave offence to Makund Deb Bhanj, and he consequently sought help from the Rájá of Khandpára, Banamáli Singh Mardráj Bhramarbár Rai. This Banamáli was a brave and powerful Rájá, and expert in war. He engaged the Rájá of Bod, and after defeating him made the said Makund Deb Bhanj Rájá over a part of Bod territory, and gave the new State the name of Daspalla. Rájá Jadunáth Singh Mangráj, the founder of the Khandpára State, got the title of Mangráj from the Mahárájá of Orissa, and it was enjoyed from his time down to Balunkeswar Singh. Banamáli Singh, the son of Balunkeswar Singh, was a very powerful Chief, and defended the Mahárájá of Orissa from the attacks of his enemies. The latter gave him as a reward the title of Bhai Mardráj Bhramarbár Rai, which has been enjoyed by successive Chiefs to the present day. During the reign of Rájá Niládrí Singh Mardráj Bhramarbár Rai, Raghuji Bhonslé, the Mahárájá of Nágpur, gave the Rájá a flag, which is still used. When Orissa was first conquered by the British Government, Rájá Narsingha Singh Mardráj Bhramarbár Rai gave assistance to the chief military officers of the British Government, and received an elephant and a cannon in recognition thereof. The present Rájá is a son of the late Rájá Krishna Chandra Singh Mardráj Bhramarbár Rai : and succeeded his brother, the late Kunja Vihári Singh Mardráj Bhramarbár Rai, who died without issue in 1867. The title of Rájá is hereditary in the family, and dates from the period of the Mahratta dominion in Orissa; it was formally recognised by the British Government in 1874. The cognisance of the family is a tiger's head. The State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, has an area of 244 square miles, and a population of 66,296, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 1085 infantry and 12 guns.

Residence.—Khandpára, Orissa, Bengal.

KHANIADHANA, RAJA CHHATAR SINGH, Jágirdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1863; succeeded to the gadi 13th December 1869. Belongs to the great Bundela (Rájput) family of Orchha, that has given ruling families to Panna, Datia, Ajaigarh, and most of the States of Bundelkhand. Amresh was a younger son of the Mahárájá Udit Singh of Orchha, and received the territory of Khaniádhána as his portion. Much of this territory was taken away by the Mahrattas. Fourth in descent from Amresh was the Rájá Gumán Singh, who received a sanad from the British Government in 1863. Gumán Singh died in 1869, and was succeeded by the present Jágirdár; who on 1st January 1877, at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India, received the title of Rájá as a personal distinction. The area of the State is 84 square miles; its population is 13,494, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 5 cavalry, 65 infantry, and 2 guns.

KHITABAT KHAN. See Muhammad Ghaus, Shaikh.

KHITISH (KSHITISH) CHANDAR RAI (of Nadiyá), Mahárájá Bahádur.

Born 16th April 1868. The title was conferred on 1st January 1890, as a personal distinction, when the Mahárájá Bahádur came of age after a long minority; and it has been enjoyed by the Rájás of Nadiyá (or Nuddea) for many generations, having been first conferred by the Emperor of Delhi on the Mahárájá Rudra ten generations ago. Belongs to a Kulin Bráhman family of the highest caste, claiming descent from the famous Bhatta Naráyan, one of the five Bráhman apostles whom King Adisur brought to Bengal from Kanauj. A farmán bearing the seal and signature of the Emperor Alamgir is extant, in which the Rájá Rudra is addressed as Rájá. His great-grandson, the Mahárájá Krishna Chandra Rai, received two farmáns from the Emperor Sháh Alam, conferring on him the title of Mahárájá. Since the establishment of British rule in Bengal each Rájá of Nadiyá in succession has been created a Mahárájá Bahádur. The late Mahárájá Satis Chandra Rai Bahádur, Rájá of Nadiyá, was eminently loyal to the Government, and exceedingly liberal, especially to his tenants and to educational institutions. He presented a beautiful park as the site for the Krishnagar State College of the Calcutta University, at the town of Krishnagar, which is the capital of Nadiyá; and he subscribed largely to the funds, both for the building and for the endowment of that important institution. The present Mahárájá Bahádur was his son by adoption, and has only recently (1890) attained his majority.

Residence.—Krishnagar, Nadiyá, Bengal.

KHURSHID JAH, BAHADUR, K.C.I.E., SIR,
Nawáb, Shams-ul-Umara, Amir-i-Kabir.

One of the Premier Nobles of the Hyderabad State.

The Nawáb Bahádur, who was born about the year 1838, is the present representative (with his brother, the Vikár-ul-Umara, q.v., and his cousin, Sir Asmán Jáh, q.v.) of the great and powerful Shamsiya family, the first among the noble families of Hyderabad, which has been frequently connected by marriage with the Ruling House, and entrusted with the hereditary command of the Paigah or Household Troops of the Nizám. Descended from the famous captain, Shaikh Abul Khair Khán, Imám Jang, Shamsher Bahádur, who was a Mansabdár in Málwá under the Emperor Aurangzeb. He attached himself to the fortunes of the great Asaf Jáh, the founder of the Hyderabad dynasty, under whose banner he rose to the highest commands. In 1745 he defeated a Mahratta force, and under the successors of Asaf Jáh, the Nizáms Násir Jang and Salábat Jang, he continued his successful career. In 1752 he died at Burhánpur; and was succeeded by his son, Abul Fateh Khán Teg Jang, who became the first Noble of the Nizám Ali, obtaining the command of the Paigah or Household Troops, immense territorial possessions, and the titles of Shams-ud-daulá, Shams-ul-Mulk, and Shams-ul-Umara. He died in 1786, when campaigning in Panghul; and was succeeded by his son, who at the early age of four had received from the Nizám the titles of Ba-ud-din Khán, Imám Jang, Khurshid-ud-daulá, and Khurshid-ul-Mulk. He succeeded to all the honours of his father, and became a famous scholar and savant, receiving at various times the titles of Teg Jang, Shams-ud-daulá, Shams-ul-Mulk, Shams-ul-Umara Bahádur, and in 1827 the title of Amir-i-Kabir. In 1849 he became for a short time Prime Minister of Hyderabad. He died in 1862, leaving two sons, Umdat-ul-Mulk (who became Amir-i-Kabir) and Ikhtidár-ul-Mulk (who became Vikár-ul-Umará). The former died in 1877, when the latter succeeded him in the family honours, and as Co-Regent of the State, adding the title of Amir-i-Kabir to that of Vikár-ul-Umará. He died in 1881, leaving two sons, the Nawáb Sir Khurshid Jah Bahádur and the Nawáb Vikár-ul-Umará (Ikbál-ud-daulá, Bahádur). Sir Khurshid was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire on 16th February 1877, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty; and he has held the offices of Member of the Council of Regency, and Member of the Council of State. The Nawáb is a fine Persian and Urdu scholar, and has travelled in many parts of India. Like their noble kinsman Sir Asman Jáh, both Sir Khurshid Jáh and his brother the Vikár-ul-Umará have shared the fortune of their ancestor, in allying themselves in marriage with Princesses of the Royal House of Hyderabad. In his palace at Hyderabad are to be seen the sword and armour of his ancestor, Abul Fateh Khán Teg Jang, a warrior of great size and height.

Residences.—Hyderabad; Shams-ul-Umará's Baradari, Hyderabad.

KHUSHAL SINGH (of Rajaur), Rájá.

Born 1846. The title is hereditary; the Rájá being one of the Chiefs of the Chauhán Rájputs, and boasting a direct descent from Prithiráj, the last Chauhán Rájput Emperor of Delhi, whose romantic history is sung by every Hindu bard, and whose fall virtually transferred the sovereignty of India from the Hindus to the Muhammadans. Prithiráj perished in battle with Shaháb-ud-din Ghori in 1193 A.D. Eighth in descent from him was the famous Bhoj Ráj of Hansi, who reconquered Ajmir, the old home of the Chauhán Rájputs—Prithiráj having been the son of a Chauhán Rájá of Ajmir by a daughter of the Tomára Rájput Rájá of Delhi, Anang Pál, and having been adopted by his maternal grandfather at Delhi. Fifth in descent from Bhoj Ráj was Dhira Ráj, who migrated from Hansi to Bilráam; and fourth in descent from him was Sakit Deo, who founded Sakit, and whose descendants were the Chauhán Rájás of Sakit and Rajaur. His grandson, Bhupál Deo, had two sons, Yaháni Sahai and Udaicharan; the latter founded the family of the Chauhán Rájás of Mainpuri, the former remained as Rájá of Sakit and Rajaur. Seven generations later Rájá Sawant Sen was driven out of these ancestral possessions by the army of Ibrahim Sháh Lodi, Sultán of Delhi; but after the subversion of the Lodi dynasty by the invasion of Bábar and his Mughals, Sawant Sen's grandson, named Chakra Sen, was enabled to return to Sakit and Rajaur as a feudatory of the Mughal Emperor. Eight generations followed each other in peaceful possession of the Ráj under the strong arm of the Mughals; and Rájá Hari Singh in the time of Aurangzeb was famous for his prowess, won many battles, and was high in the favour both of that Emperor and of his successors, the Emperors Farukhsiyar and Muhammad Sháh. But in the time of Hari Singh's son, Ráj Singh, the country was given up to anarchy; and during this disturbed period Sakit was seized by the Nawáb of Farukhabad, and was lost for ever to the Chauhán Rájás of Rajaur. Ráj Singh's grandson was Rájá Datta Singh; and the grandson of the latter was the late Rájá Drigpál Singh, father of the present Rájá. Rájá Khushál Singh has two sons, Kunwár Lál Jagmohan Singh, born 1873; and Kunwár Lál Dharm Singh, born 1883.

Residence.—Rajaur, Etah, North-Western Provinces.

Born 1861; succeeded to the gadi 1st November 1886. Belongs to a Bhil (aboriginal) family. The State (which is one of the Dáng States of Khándesh) has an area of 12 square miles; and a population of 1671, chiefly Bhils.

Residence.—Kiralí, Khándesh, Bombay.

KIRAT CHAND (of Lambagraon), Mián.

The title is hereditary, the Mián being the brother of the late Rájá Partáb Chand of Lambagraon, and the uncle of the present Rájá, Jai Chand (q.v.) of Lambagraon, who is the head of the great Katoch Rájput family of Kángra. The Mián is the younger son of Mián Rudra Chand of Lambagraon, who was the grandson of the Rájá Tegh Chand of Kángra, and who became the head of the Kángra family on the failure of the elder branch.

Residence.—Lambagraon, Kángra, Punjab.

KIRPAL SINGH (of Dhin), Sardár.

Born 1836. The title is hereditary. The Sardár is the head of a Jat family of Sikhs, descended from Sardár Parsa Singh. The latter was the nephew and heir of Sardár Shám Singh, who at the time of the decline of the Mughal Empire came from the district of Amritsar, conquered the territory of Dhin in the Ambála district of the Punjab, and settled there. Parsa Singh's grandson was the Sardár Ranjit Singh, who was slain by Kanh Singh, and who was succeeded by his son, the present Sardár.

Residence.—Ambála, Punjab.

KIRPAL SINGH, KUNJAHIA (of Botala), Sardár.

Born 1832. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Kshatriya family of Sikhs, descended from Sardár Dhanna Singh. The latter was an associate of Sardár Nodh Singh, the great-grandfather of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, and he and his descendants followed the fortunes of the ancestors of Ranjit Singh. Sardár Kirpál Singh's father, Sardár Ganda Singh, was in attendance on the Mahárájá Sher Singh when that prince was assassinated, and was severely wounded in the endeavour to defend him, and was subsequently killed at the battle of Firuzshahr, where Sardár Kirpál Singh was also wounded. But at the time of the outbreak at Multán, Sardár Kirpál Singh was at Hazára, and remained faithful to the British Government, and was subsequently confirmed in his jágirs. His brother, Sardár Partáb Singh (q.v.) of Botála, is an Extra Assistant Commissioner of the Punjab.

Residence.—Gujránwála, Punjab.

KIRPAL SINGH, Sardár, Rai Bahádur.

These titles are personal. The first (Sardár) was conferred on 2nd January 1888, and the second (Rai Bahádur) on 24th May 1889.

KISHAN. See Krishan and Krishna.KISHAN DATT SINGH (of Oel), Rájá.

Born 1861; succeeded his father, the late Rájá of Oel, on the 18th of October 1879. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred by the late King of Oudh in 1849, and recognised by the British Government on December 1877. Belongs to the Janwar family of Kheri, Oudh, of which the elder branch is represented by the Rájá Achal Singh (q.v.) of Kaimahra. But the late Rájá of Oel, Rájá Anrudh Singh, was recognised as the head of the Kheri Janwars on account of his great wealth and ability. The family were originally Chauhán Rájputs in the service of the Sayyids of Piháni, having migrated from Rájputána in the 16th century. In the time of Sayyid Khurd, Jamni Khán Janwar became Chaudhri of Kheri in 1553 A.D., with the right to levy a cess on all the lands in that Parganá. His descendants gradually increased their possessions, the Chaudhri Parbal Singh Janwar owning Oel, Kaimahra, and Khogi; and his descendant, the Rai Thán Singh, of Oel, owning many more villages. In 1838 Rai Umrao Singh was the head of the family. The Rai Bakht Singh, grandfather of the late Rájá Anrudh Singh, built a large and handsome temple at Oel. The Rájá has a son and heir, named Kunwár Baldeo Singh.

Residence.—Oel, Kheri, Oudh.

KISHAN KUMAR, RAI (of Sahaspur), Rájá.

Born 25th December 1848. The title of Rájá is personal, and was conferred on 24th May 1882, the family title being Rai. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Rájput) family, said to have come from the Punjab, and settled in the district of Morádabad, in the reign of the Emperor Muhammad Sháh, by whom the title of Rai was conferred on its then head. On the cession of Rohilkhand, Rai Atmá Rám, great-grandfather of the present Rájá, was chakladár of Bijnor, and subsequently he entered the service of the British Government. His grandson, the late Rai Pardaman Kishan, rendered good services during the Mutiny of 1857-58, assisting the British officers who had taken refuge at Naini Tal by sending them money and information. For these services he was rewarded with a grant of estates. The present Rájá received a Medal of Honour at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India; and a khilat at the Agra Darbár of 10th February 1879. He is an Honorary Magistrate. He has a son and heir, Kunwár Ráj Kumár.

Residence.—Sahaspur, Morádabad, North-Western Provinces.

KISHAN KUNWAR (of Rámpur), Ráni.

Born September 1857. The title is hereditary, the Rájá of Rámpur being the acknowledged head of the Ráhtor Rájputs in Northern India, and boasting direct descent from the famous Jaichandra, the last Ráhtor Rájá of Kanauj, who was slain in 1191 A.D., when the Empire of Kanauj was subverted by Shaháb-ud-din Ghorí. Their Highnesses the Mahárájás of Jodhpur and Bikanir (q.v.) are descended from the eldest son of Jaichandra, the former being the head of the whole Ráhtor clan; and the Rájá of Rámpur is descended from his second son, who was named Jaipál. Prajanpál, the fifth in descent from Jaipál, left Kanauj, and established himself at Khor, where the family remained for many generations. There Jaideo, fourteenth in descent from Jaipál, was attacked by Altamsh, and driven out after a siege of twelve years. Eight generations later Karan Singh settled in the district of Budaun. His great-grandson, Rájá Pratáp Rudra, received a grant of territory from the Nawáb of Farukhabad for assisting him against the Rohillas; and subsequently the Rájá Rámsahai, twenty-eighth in descent from Jaipál, established the family residence at Rámpur in Etah, where it still remains. At the time of the cession of the territories of the Nawáb to the British, Nawál Singh was the Rájá of Rámpur, and his grandson, the late Rájá Rám Chandra Singh, was the husband of the present Ráni. He died on 20th May 1883, and was succeeded by his widow. The Ráni has a grandson and heir, named Lál Jagmohan Singh, born in 1877.

Residence.—Azamnagar, Etah, North-Western Provinces.

KISHAN PARTAB BAHADUR SAHAI (of Tamkuhi), Rájá.

Born 1848. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Bhuinhár Rájput family, claiming descent from Mayur Bhát, more than a hundred generations back. A descendant, named Rájá Fateh Sahai, Bhuinhár Rájá of Hoshiárpur in Sáran, after the battle of Baksar in 1764, was driven from his Ráj by the troops of the East India Company, and settled on the Tamkuhi estates, previously purchased by him, in Gorakhpur. Rájá Fateh Sahai's grandson was the father of the present Rájá, and obtained from the British Government the recognition of his title as hereditary. The Rájá has a son and heir, named Kunwár Satrajit Partáb Bahádur Sahai, born 27th July 1864.

Residence.—Tamkuhi, Gorakhpur, North-Western Provinces.

KISHAN SINGH (of Rai), Mián.

The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Rájput family, descended from Rájá Indar Singh, who ruled in Sháhpur in the Kángra district. He married a daughter of the Katoch Rájá of Kángra (see Jai Chand, Rájá of Lambagraon, Kángra), whither he fled when driven out of his own territory by Rájá Pirthi Singh; and his grandson, Mián Ishri Singh, father of the present Mián, obtained a considerable jágir from the Rájá Sansar Chand of Kángra, son of Rájá Tegh Chand. Ishri Singh's sister was married to the Jammu Rájá, Dhian Singh.

Residence.—Rai, Kángra, Punjab.

KISHAN SINGH, Sardár.

Born 1847. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Jat (Sikh) family, descended from the Sardár Gurbakhsh Singh, who acquired some territory in the Ambála district by conquest in 1759 A.D. The representatives of the family rendered good service during the first Sikh war of 1845-46, and also at the time of the Mutiny in 1857.

Residence.—Ambála, Punjab.

KISHAN SINGH, MILMYAL, Rai Bahádur.

Born 13th August 1850. The title was conferred on 12th December 1884, in recognition of his remarkable services to the State, and to science, as an explorer in Nepál, Great Tibet, Mongolia, and elsewhere. Belongs to a Rájburah family of Rájputs long settled in Kumáun, who, during the rule of the Chands and Gurkhas there, held lease of the Parganá of Johár and Dhánpur. In 1812 his father, Deo Singh, procured the release of two British subjects from Tibet. The Rai Bahádur has been deputed on exploration duty four times; and has received honours from the Royal Geographical Society, and the Geographical Society of France, as well as substantial rewards from the Government.

Residence.—Kumáun, North-Western Provinces.

KISHANGARH, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJ-ADHIRAJ SARDUL SINGH BAHADUR, G.C.I.E., *Mahārājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 10th December 1857; succeeded to the gadi 25th December 1879. Is one of the Chiefs of the great Ráhtor clan of Rájputs (see Jodhpur), and belongs to the Kishansinghot sept or sub-clan, so-called from Kishan Singh, who was the founder of this State and city, and was the second of the twelve sons of Rájá Udai Singh of Jodhpur, nicknamed Mota Rájá (the Fat Rájá) by the Emperor Akbar. His Highness is a Hindu of the Ballabhkul Vaishnava sect, and was the son and successor of the late Mahārājá Pirthi Singh. He was married in 1870 A.D. to the eldest daughter of the Maháráo Umed Singhji of Sirohi, and on 1st January 1892 was created a Knight Grand

Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. His Highness has only one son, the Mahārāj-Kunwár Madan Singh, born 2nd November 1884, who is now the heir-apparent, as in March 1880 the Mahārájá had the sorrow of losing an elder son when only five years old. The Mahārájá has two younger brothers—Mahārāj Jawán Singhji, and Mahārāj Raghunáth Singhji. The families most nearly related to His Highness are the Rájwán (or royal) family groups of Fatehgarh and Ralaota, which are, however, connected with him only in the seventh and eighth degree of relationship respectively. As descendant of the Mota Rájá, Udai Singh of Jodhpur, the Mahārájá has sub-clan relationship with the Chiefs of Jodhpur and Bikaner in Rájputána; Ratlám, Jhabua, Sailána, Sitamau, and other Ráhtor chiefs in Central India; and Idar in Gujarát. By marriage His Highness is related to all the other great Rájput Houses, being himself the head of one of the greatest and most illustrious; viz., with the Sesodias of Udaipur and Partábgarh, with the Kachhwáhas of Jaipur and Alwar, the Hara houses of Bundi and Kotah, the Bhátis of Jaisalmir, and the Jhálás and Shekháwats. Among the more important of these matrimonial connections, which are interesting as illustrating the inter-marriages of the most illustrious Rájput Houses, may be mentioned the following:—

With the Sesodias of Udaipur (the family of "The Sun of the Hindus").

1. His Highness's grandmother (widow of the Mahārájá Mokham Singh of Kishangarh) is a daughter of the Maháráná Amar Singhji of Udaipur.
2. His Highness's eldest sister is Dowager Maháráni of Udaipur, being a widow of the late Maháráná Sajan Singhji.
3. His Highness's son and heir-apparent, the Mahārāj-Kunwár Madan Singh, has been recently betrothed to the fourth daughter of His Highness the present Maháráná Fateh Singhji.

The Kachhwáhas of Jaipur.

His Highness's third sister is married to the present Mahārájá Sawai Madho Singhji, Chief of Jaipur, and is the Maháráni of Jaipur.

The Kachhwáhas of Alwar.

His Highness's second sister was married to the late lamented Mahárájá Mangal Singhji, late Chief of Alwar, and was the (Pát) head Maháráni of Alwar.

The Haras of Bundi.

1. The late Mahárájá Ramsingh of Bundi's mother was a Kishangarh Princess.

2. His Highness's niece, a daughter of Maháráj Jawán Singhji, has been recently betrothed to the younger brother of the present Mahárájá of Bundi.

The Jhálás of Jháláwár.

His Highness's fourth and youngest sister is married to the Maháráj Ráná Zalim Singhji, present Chief of Jháláwár, and is the (Pát) head Maháráni of Jháláwár.

To the above may be added that His Highness's mother was a Princess of the "Ránáwat" (Sesodia) clan, being a daughter of the late Rájá Dhiráj Madho Singhji of Sháhpara. In addition to the titles given above, formally recognised by the Government as belonging to the Mahárájá of Kishangarh. His Highness also bears those of Umdai Rajhai and Buland Makan. The area of the State is 724 square miles; its population is 112,633, chiefly Hindus, but including 8492 Muhammadans and 6295 Jains. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 499 cavalry, 2000 infantry, and 51 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

Arms.—Argent, three towers proper, two and one; in chief a Barry of 5—gules, vert, argent, azure, or. [This is the Rájput Pancharanga, see Jaipur.] Supporters.—Two horses. Crest.—A falcon rising, proper. [This is the sacred Garur, the cognisance of the Ráhtor Rájputs, see Jodhpur.] Motto.—The Hindi words Niti Riti, meaning "Law and Usage."

Residence.—Kishangarh, Rájputána.

KISHOR SINGH (of Fatehpur), Rájá.

Born 1st August 1834; succeeded his father 16th March 1861. The title is hereditary, having been originally granted by the Rájá Kamal Nain, Ráj Gond Rájá of Mandla. Belongs to an ancient Ráj Gond family, that claims an antiquity of more than 900 years in their present jágir of Fatehpur. The tradition in the family is that the jágir was granted to them in 939 A.D. An ancient sanad in the possession of the Rájá records the grant (or possibly the confirmation) of the jágir to the family by the Ráj Gond Rájá of Mandla in 1500 A.D. The Rájá is an Honorary Magistrate, and has two sons—Lál Thákur Singh and Lál Mahip Singh.

Residence.—Fatehpur, Hoshangabad, Central Provinces.

KISHOR SINGH (of Chamari), Rao.

Born 1840. The title is hereditary, and the Raos of Chamári formerly held great possessions in the Ságár district. The title was originally conferred by the Rájá Mori Pahludh of Chánderi, and has been recognised by the British Government. The Rao has two sons, the elder (who has the courtesy title of Diwán) being Diwán Parichhat Singh Jangjit, and the younger being Jujhar Singh.

Residence.—Chamári, Ságár, Central Provinces.

KODE NARAYANASWAMI NAYUDU, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1846. The title is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. Entered the Government service in 1874; has rendered good service both in the Central Provinces and in Madras. During the Rumpa and Gudiem disturbances, 1879-86, served with much distinction in the Madras Police, and again in the Golugonda Hill disturbances of 1891.

Residence.—Vizianagram, Vizagapatam, Madras.

KOLHAPUR, HIS HIGHNESS SHAHU CHHATRAPATI MAHARAJ, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1875; succeeded to the gadi as a minor on 17th March 1884. Is a descendant of the Mahratta family of Sivaji the Great, the founder of the Mahratta Empire, being descended from Rájá Rám, his second son, and husband of the famous Tára Báí. Sivaji's elder son Sambhaji was taken prisoner by the Emperor Aurangzeb, and ultimately executed; and his son Shahu was long detained in prison by the Mughals, but obtained his liberty in 1707, fixed his capital at Sátára, and asserted his rights as the heir of his grandfather Sivaji. Meanwhile Rájá Rám had died, and his widow, Tára Báí, a woman of great ability and courage, assumed the administration of Kolhápúr in the name of her elder son Sivaji II., who was an idiot child of ten years, and proclaimed him Rájá of the Mahrattas. The latter died in 1712, when his half-brother Sambhaji (son of Rájá Rám by another wife) succeeded him, and removed Tára Báí from the administration. The contending claims of Shahu, Rájá of Sátára, and Sambhaji, Rájá of Kolhápúr, were at length settled in 1731, when precedence was surrendered to Sátára, and the independence of Kolhápúr acknowledged. In 1811 a treaty with the British Power was concluded, by which Kolhápúr became a feudatory; and as the Rájá remained faithful to the British cause in the war against the Peshwá in 1817, he received some additional territory. A descendant, Sivaji III., died in 1866, and on his deathbed was allowed to adopt his sister's son, Rájá Rám. In 1870 Rájá Rám visited Europe, and died at Florence on his return journey. His adopted son was Sivaji Mahárájá Chhatrapati IV., who was made a Knight of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He became insane, and the Government appointed a relative, the Chief of Kágál, as Regent. Sivaji IV. died in December 1883, and was succeeded, by adoption, by His Highness the present Rájá, who was the eldest son of the Regent. The area of the State is 2816 square miles; and its population is 800,189, chiefly Hindus, but including 33,022 Muhammadans and 46,732 Jains. The Rájá has eleven feudatory Chiefs subordinate to him, of whom the most important are those of Vithálgarh, Bávda, Kapshi, Kágál, Ichalkaranji Torgal, and Datva. His Highness, with his feudatories, maintains a military force of 255 cavalry, 1902 infantry, and 67 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 19 guns.

Residence.—Kolhápúr, Bombay.

KONDKA, MAHANT SHAM KISHOR DAS, Mahant of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1838; succeeded to the gadi 13th December 1887. Belongs to a Bairági (Hindu) family of Mahants, or Chief Priests, the regulations of his order permitting marriage. The area of the State is 174 square miles; its population is 32,979, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Kondka, Raipur, Central Provinces.

KOREA, RAJA PRAN SINGH DEO, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1857; succeeded to the gadi 4th April 1864 as a minor. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, claiming descent from a Chauhán Rájput Chief named Dháwal Singh, who came to Korea from Rájputána about 600 years ago, and conquered the country. The title of Rájá is hereditary in the family from early times, and was formally conferred by the British Government in 1875. The area of the State (which is one of the Chota Nágpur Tributary Mahals) is 1631 square miles; and its population is 29,846, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Korea, Mánbhum, Chota Nágpur, Bengal.

KOTAH, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAO UMED SINGH BAHADUR, Mahárao of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1873; succeeded to the gadi 11th June 1889. Like His Highness the Mahárao Rájá of Bundi, the Mahárao is one of the chiefs of the Hára sept of the great Chauhán clan of Rájputs—Kotah forming with Bundi the tract known for centuries as Háraoti, after the name of that sept. Is descended from Madhu Singh, the second son of the Rao Ratan of Bundi, who about the year 1625 A.D. was granted the feudatory Chiefship of Kotah and its dependencies, for his services to the Emperor Jahángir against his rebellious son, who afterwards became the Emperor Sháh Jahán. Similar services to the latter Emperor were rendered by Madhu Singh's son and successor, Mokand Singh; who, with three of his brothers, fell in a battle at Ujjain against Sháh Jahán's rebellious son, who afterwards became the Emperor Aurangzeb. Mokand Singh was succeeded by his son Jagat Singh. Early in the present century, Kotah, greatly weakened by intestine dissensions, was attacked by Jaipur and by the Mahrattas, to whom it became tributary. It was only saved from ruin by the extraordinary abilities of its great Minister, Zalim Singh, to whom the Mahárao gave up the active task of ruling the State. During a Ministry of forty-five years Zalim Singh raised the State of Kotah to great prosperity. Ultimately, in 1838, it was arranged that Zalim Singh's descendants should receive independent charge of a part of the State, as feudatories of the Empire; and this part became a separate Principality, under the name of Jháláwár (q.v.) The late Mahárao, Chhatra Sal Singh, succeeded his father in 1866; and on his death in 1889 was succeeded by his adopted son, the present Mahárao, as a minor. His Highness is at present a student in the Mayo College, Ajmir; he is as yet unmarried, but is betrothed to a daughter of His Highness the Maháráná of Udaipur, which is the most illustrious marriage that can be made by a Hindu Prince. The area of the State is 3797 square miles; its population is 517,275, chiefly Hindus, but including 32,866 Muhammadans and 4750 Jains. His Highness maintains a military force of 949 cavalry, 5756 infantry, and 148 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns. The family banner is orange in colour, displaying a figure of the Garur or sacred falcon of the Hára Rájputs.

Residence.—Kotah, Rájputána.

KOTHARIA, JAREJA JETHIJI, Tálukdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1828; succeeded to the gadi 8th January 1857. The State, which is tributary to the Nawáb of Junágarh, has an area of 6 square miles, and a population of 2366, chiefly Hindus. The Chief maintains a military force of 4 cavalry and 38 infantry.

Residence.—Kothária, Káthiáwár.

KOTHI, RAJA BAHADUR BHAGWAT BAHADUR SINGH,Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1852; succeeded to the gadi 5th June 1887. Belongs to a Baghel Rájput family (Hindu); his father was Rájá Ran Bahádur Singh; and the family have been seated in Kothi for a great many years, and were confirmed in possession by the British Government. The area of the State is 90 square miles; its population is 18,386, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 35 cavalry, 210 infantry, and 4 guns.

Residence.—Kothi, Baghelkhand, Central India.

KOTHIDE, BHUMIA MOTI SINGH, Bhumia of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1850; succeeded to the gadi in 1860. Belongs to a Bhilála family. The population of the State is about 500.

Residence.—Kothide, Bhopáwar, Central India.

Is a feudatory of the Rájá of Keonthal (q.v.), and rules over one of the Simla Hill States.

KOTRA SANGANI, THAKUR MULVAJI TOGAJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1873; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 23rd November 1887. Belongs to a Jareja Rájput family. The area of his State is 74 square miles; its population is 8642, chiefly Hindus. The Thákur maintains a military force of 8 cavalry, 142 infantry, and 4 guns.

Residence.—Kotra Sangani, Káthiáwár.

KOTTAYAM, KERALA VARMA RAJA, Valiya Rájá of.

Born 1842. Belongs to a family that claims to be of Kshatriya origin, and to have come from the east and acquired sovereignty in Wainád. Subsequently they appear to have acquired some territory from the Rájá of Chitrakal in Malabar, either by a gift or in war. On Haidar's invasion of Malabar the Rájá and all his family fled to Travancore; returned in 1782, but fled to Travancore a second time on Tipu's invasion in 1789, and died there. The family, like that of the Zamorin of Calicut and other Chiefs of Malabar, follows the Marumakkatayam law of inheritance, by which the succession is to the offspring of its female members, among whom the next eldest male after the Rájá is his heir-apparent. The late Valiya Rájá of Kottayam was called Shangara Varma Rájá; and he was succeeded by the present Valiya Rájá under the Marumakkatayam law. He receives an allowance from Government in compensation for the estate that belonged to his ancestors.

Residence.—Malabar, Madras.

KUCH BEHAR, LIEUT.-COLONEL HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA SIR NRIPENDRA NARAYAN BHUP BAHADUR, G.C.I.E., Mahārājā of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 4th October 1862; succeeded his father, the late Mahārājā Narendra Narāyan Bhup Bahádur, in August 1863. Belongs to a Kochi family that has held uninterrupted sovereignty for the last 382 years in this territory, since their first settlement in the plains; from which family also descend the Bijni and Darung Houses of Assam, the Raikats of Baikantapur (q.v.) in Jalpaiguri, and the Panga family in Rangpur. His Highness was educated, first, in the Wards Institute at Benares; secondly, under the guardianship of Mr. H. St. J. Kneller, in the Bankipur College, Patna, and next as a Law Student in the Presidency College, Calcutta. During his minority the State rendered good service in the Bhután war 1863-65, for which two guns were presented to His Highness by the British Government. Was presented with medal and sword in 1877 at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. Married, in March 1878, the eldest daughter of the famous Reformer, Kesub Chander Sen. Was sent to England the same year to complete his education, under the joint guardianship of Surgeon-Major (now Sir) Benjamin Simpson and Mr. Kneller. Returned to India in the spring of 1879, and was formally installed on his ancestral gadi on the 8th November 1883, by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. The titles of Mahārājā Bhup Bahádur were recognised as hereditary by the Government of India in 1885. His Highness was appointed Honorary Major in the British Army in the same year. He visited England in the Jubilee year 1887, to take part in the rejoicings on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, with the Mahārāni and children, and was invested with the Insignia of Grand Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress herself, the Mahārāni being invested with the Imperial Order of the Crown of India in the same year. Was made Honorary Aide-de-camp to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in the British Army. The Mahārājā in 1888 established the Brahma Somaj or the Reformed Church in the State of Kuch Behar. He founded the Victoria College for higher education therein, and granted a long term settlement of revenue to his subjects for thirty years, assessments being made on the most approved principles. His Highness established the India Club at Calcutta in 1882, founded Nripendra Narāyan Hall at Jalpaiguri in 1883, and presented house and lands at Darjiling, wherewith the Lowis Jubilee Sanitarium was started at that station in 1887, and established the "Anandamayi Dharmasála" (almshouse) in 1889. The Mahārājā's age is now thirty, and he has issue, four sons and two daughters. While in England in 1887 he received the distinguished masonic honour of Past Grand Senior Warden of England at the hands of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, made District Grand Master of Bengal in 1890, installed District Grand Mark Master of Bengal, 1891.

The title is hereditary, having been in the family from early times, and confirmed by the British Government in 1802. Is the son of the late Rájá of Kárvetnagar, Rájá Kumara Bomma Raz. Belongs to a family that was called the Bomma Raz (or "Bomrauze") family, that rose to power in the district of North Arcot about 200 years ago, in consequence of the decline of the Vijáyanagar dynasty. The family cognisance is a white flag with the device of a boar on its field; the family motto, borne on its seal, is Kárvetnagar Venugopálaswámi Saháyam, meaning "May Venugopálaswámi—the deity of Kárvetnagar—assist."

Residence.—Kárvetnagar, North Arcot, Madras.

KUMHARSAIN, RANA HIRA SINGH, Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1851; succeeded to the gadí 12th November 1874. Belongs to a Rájput family, whose founder, Kirat Singh, came from Gayá about 1000 A.D., and acquired possession of the State by conquest. The State, formerly a feudatory of Bashahr, was taken under direct British protection after the expulsion of the Gurkhas in 1815, by a sanad dated February 1816. Ráná Kehr Singh died without issue in 1839, and in consideration of his early attachment to British interests during the Gurkha war, the Government confirmed the State to a collateral heir of the family named Ráná Pritam Singh. His successor was the Ráná Bhawáni Singh, who was succeeded in 1874 by the present Ráná. The area of the State, which is one of the Simla Hill States, is 94 square miles; its population is 9515, chiefly Hindus. The Ráná maintains a military force of 45 infantry and 1 gun.

KUNHIAR, THAKUR TEGH SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1836; succeeded to the gadi in 1867. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family; descended from Bhoj Deo, who in early times came from Jammu, and conquered this territory. The State was overrun by the Gurkhas at the beginning of the century; but on their expulsion by the British in 1815, it was confirmed to Rao Puran Deo, the then Thákur, by a sanad dated 4th September 1815. The present Thákur succeeded Rao Kishan Singh on the death of the latter in 1867. The area of the State is 9 square miles; its population is 1923, chiefly Hindus. The Thákur has a son named Shib Singh, and maintains a military force of 20 infantry.

Residence.—Kunhiar, Simla Hills, Punjab.

KUNJAL SINGH (of Bhátgaon), Rájá.

The title is hereditary. Belongs to a family descended from Jogi Rai, who was the Diwán of Kalyan Sai, Rájá of Ratnapur.

KURANDWAD (Senior Branch), CHINTAMAN RAO RAGHUNATH, alias BALA SAHEB PATWARDHAN, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 14th February 1850; succeeded to the gadi 25th January 1876. Belongs to a Konkanasth Bráhmaṇ (Hindu) family, claiming descent from Hari Rath, of Kotwadi. His descendant, Trimbak Rao of Kotwadi in the Konkan, obtained Kurandwád in inám, and was succeeded by his son, Nilkanta Rao, who received the saranjam and the title of Sardár from the Peshwá. The Chief has a son and heir named Bhalchandra Rao, with the title of "Anna Saheb." The area of the State, which is in the Southern Mahratta country, is 182 square miles; its population is 35,187, chiefly Hindus, but including 3,409 Muhammadans. The Chief maintains a military force of 10 cavalry, 164 infantry, and 2 guns.

There are three chiefs of Kurandwád, all of the Patwardhan family, the Bala Saheb Patwardhan being the Chief of that division of the State that is known as "Kurandwád (senior branch),"—being rather a larger part; while the Bápu Saheb Patwardhan and the Daji Saheb Patwardhan are jointly the Chiefs of that part that is known as "Kurandwád (junior branch)."

Residence.—Kurandwád, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

KURANDWAD (Junior Branch), GANPAT RAO HARIHAR, alias BAPU SAHEB PATWARDHAN, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1839; succeeded to the gadi 5th April 1854. Belongs to a Konkanasth Bráhmaṇ family (see Kurandwád, senior branch). Shares the Chiefship of this State with the Daji Saheb Patwardhan. The State has an area of 114 square miles, and a population of 25,811, chiefly Hindus, but including 2548 Muhammadans. The Chiefs maintain a military force of 12 cavalry, 306 infantry, and 1 gun.

Residence.—Kurandwád, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

KURANDWAD (Junior Branch), HARIHAR RAO VINAYAK, alias DAJI SAHEB PATWARDHAN, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1852; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 5th April 1854. Belongs to a Konkanasth Bráhmaṇ (Hindu) family (see Kurandwád, senior branch). Shares the Chiefship of this State with the Bápu Saheb Patwardhan (vide supra).

Residence.—Kurandwád, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

KURWAI, NAWAB MUNAWAR ALI KHAN, Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1869; succeeded to the gadi 15th January 1887. Belongs to a Pathán (Muhammadan) family, descended from Nawáb Dalel Khán, an Afghán leader. His descendant, the Nawáb Muhammad Nazaf Khán, succeeded to the gadi in 1858. Having rendered good service to Government, and being without male issue, he was permitted to adopt his grandson, the son of his eldest daughter, who is the present Nawáb. The family banner is green, bearing on its field a crescent. The area of the State is about 140 square miles; its population is 24,631, chiefly Hindus, but including 3609 Muhammadans. The Náwáb maintains a military force of 12 cavalry, 190 infantry, and 9 guns.

Residence.—Kurwai, Bhopál, Central India.

KUSALPURA, Thákur of. See Kassalpura.

KUTCH, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAO SHRI MIRZA RAJA SAWAI SIR KHENGARJI BAHADUR, G.C.I.E., Rao of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 16th August 1867; succeeded to the gadi 19th December 1875. Is Chief of the Járeja Rájputs, who came to Kutch from Sind early in the

KUTCH

14th century, under the leadership of his ancestor, the Jám Lákha Phulani, son of Jára, from whom the clan takes its name. Lákha is said to have completed the conquest of Kutch in the year 1320 A.D. His descendant, Khengár, when only a lad of fourteen, slew a lion with his sword at a hunting party with the King of Ahmadabad, who was so much pleased with this feat that he conferred on the young prince the territory of Morvi, in the north of Káthiáwár, with the title of Rao. After this the Rao Khengár succeeded in making himself the master of the whole of Kutch, with the city of Bhuj for his capital, in 1548 A.D. Khengár's uncle, the Jám Ráwal, fled to

Káthiáwár, and founded the State of Nawánagar, the rulers of which are still called Jáms. The Rao Khengár I. was succeeded by Rao Bharmal I., during whose reign, from 1585 to 1631 A.D., the government of Gujarát passed from the Kings of Ahmadabad to the Mughal Emperors. Bharmal, who was at the head of a large military force, visited the Emperor Jahángir in 1617, and received from him most costly presents, including his own horse, elephants, dagger, and a sword with diamond-mounted hilt. A descendant, Rao Lakhpatji, who reigned from 1741 to 1760 A.D., set up a cannon-foundry, and introduced other manufactures from Europe by the aid of an adventurer named Rámsingh; and the mechanical skill and working in metals, for which the craftsmen of Kutch are still famous, date from this reign. In 1809 the rulers of Kutch sought British help; the Rao Raidhan II. being on the gadi, but the administration of the State being carried on by a very powerful and ambitious Prime Minister named Fatheh Muhammad. A treaty was signed in that year, and again another in 1812. In 1813 both Fatheh Muhammad and the Rao died. The latter was succeeded by his son, Rao Bharmal II.; but there was so much disorder in the State that the British Power was compelled to intervene, and to send troops into the Principality in 1816, and again in 1818-19. On the latter occasion the Rao was deposed, and his son, the Rao Desalji II., succeeded as a minor, and ruled happily for more than forty years, till 1860. He took vigorous measures to suppress infanticide, sati (or the burning of widows on the funeral pile of their deceased husbands), and the trade in slaves. On the death of Rao Desalji in 1860, the Government of Bombay thus recorded the official appreciation of his career: "Marked by a love of truth and plain dealing, Rao Desalji was probably more than any one else in Kutch learned in the traditions and customs of the Province. He was a careful and painstaking judge, and a staunch and devoted ally of the British Government. With the help of a few Chiefs and Court servants he managed the whole business of the country, and by his knowledge of their character, friendly intercourse, and timely concessions, avoided any struggle with the Járeja chiefs." The "Járeja chiefs" referred to are the Bháyat—brotherhood or frèrage of the ruling family, being all descendants of the first Rao. The Rao Desalji II. was succeeded by his late Highness the Mahárajá Pragmalji, father of the present Rao. During the fifteen years of his rule, 1860 to 1875, he showed himself anxious to improve the management of the State. He framed codes for the guidance of his officers in matters of civil and criminal justice, he undertook works of public usefulness, and introduced State systems of public instruction and of vaccination. In recognition of his excellent administration he was in 1871 honoured with the title of Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India. Unlike his forefathers, none of whom left Kutch, he thrice visited Bombay—in 1870 to meet His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, in 1871 to take part in a Chapter of the Star of India, and in October 1875 to meet His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. These happy visits are marked by important public works dedicated to their Royal Highnesses—the Albert Edward Breakwater and Harbour Works at Mandvi, which have cost over 12 lacs of rupees, and the Alfred High School at Bhuj, the provincial centre of education; and the establishment of two "Rao Shri Pragmalji Scholarships" in the Elphinstone College, and two in Sir Janisetji Jijibhai's School of Art, Bombay. His Highness Rao Pragmalji was described by the British authorities as "most enlightened and liberal," as well as a "loyal, consistent, and devoted friend" of the British Government. Rao Pragmalji built a palace at Bhuj at a cost of about Rs.20,00,000; constructed the Pragsar Tank, which is an immense reservoir of rain water in the Chadwa range of hills, and a causeway in the large Hamirsar tank; he also built the Jail (Rs.79,509), the Hospital, the Horse and Elephant Stables (Rs.1,84,303), and the Schools at Bhuj and Mandvi; remitted transit duties, and occasionally remitted import duties in times of scarcity or deficient rainfall. He ordered out cotton gins, and introduced screw presses, and finished the Bhuj-Mandvi road. He was a great sportsman, and killed many wild animals, including a number of panthers. The total expenditure on public works started during His Highness Rao Pragmalji's reign amounted to Rs.32,41,435. He was succeeded in 1876 by His Highness the present Mahárajá, Rao Khengarji, who was described at that time by the British Political Agent as "a most promising boy of ten." In 1877 Sir Richard Temple, as Governor of Bombay, visited the State, and complimented the young Prince on his general progress, and on the accuracy and ease with which he could converse in English—his education having been mainly in the hands of M. Chhotálál Tewakram and Captain J. W. Wray of the Staff Corps. He was admitted into the Council of Administration, at an unusually early age, in 1882; and on 11th August 1884, having attained his majority of eighteen years of age, he was invested with full powers of State. On 14th November of that year Sir James Fergusson, as Governor of Bombay, visited Bhuj, and held a grand Darbár for the purpose of formally installing His Highness, in the name of the Queen Empress, as Rao of Kutch. In the course of his speech on that occasion Sir James Fergusson said: "I venture to augur very favourably of His Highness's reign. His natural intelligence has been well developed, his mind has been instructed by a liberal education, he possesses a complete knowledge of the circumstances and wants of his country and people, but more hopeful still are his disposition and character. The frequent opportunities which I have had of judging of them, as well as the unanimous testimony of those who have known him from childhood, convince me that he possesses a kind heart as well as a clear judgment, and cherishes a resolute adherence to the call of duty. These qualities are not unknown to his subjects, and they cannot fail to deepen their hereditary attachment to his family and person, which is so remarkable. It may indeed actuate him to deserve and reciprocate it. I doubt not that it will. I shall deem myself very ignorant of character if His Highness does not realise our best anticipations."

On the 2nd March 1885 a Darbár was held at the Bhuj Palace for the investiture of His Highness with the hereditary distinction of "Sawai Bahádúr," conferred on the rulers of Kutch by the British Government. In 1887 His Highness proceeded to England to represent the Princes of the Bombay Presidency on the occasion of the celebration of the Jubilee of the Queen Empress, and during his absence he entrusted his State to his Diwán, Rao Bahádúr Motilál Lálbháí.

Whilst in England His Highness was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Indian Empire. He takes a deep interest in education, and especially in the education of women. He founded a Sanskrit school or Páthshálá, at a cost of Rs.25,000, and named it after his mother. He also founded the Fergusson Museum and Library at Bhuj, an institution erected as a memorial of the Governorship of Sir James Fergusson. This last cost Rs.32,000. To encourage learning he has founded various scholarships of more or less importance, and has also inaugurated a fund from which deserving scholars desirous to study in England or America can obtain their expenses. Among the scholarships for females may be mentioned the one to Kutch females attending the Grant Medical College in Bombay, the "Kutch Barton Scholarship" to Kutch females attending the Training College at Ahmadabad or Rájkot, scholarships for female assistant-teachers at Bhuj, the Rao Shri Khengárji scholarships, and one for girls attending the High School at Puna. For males the Rao has founded scholarships for Kutchis receiving scientific and technical education in England, for students receiving agricultural or other scientific education in India, for Kutchis attending the Veterinary College at Bombay, the Veterinary School at Puna and the College of Science at Puna; also scholarships open to any citizen of Bombay attending the Ripon Technical School, Bombay; and further gives annual prizes for qualifying for any professional function in connection with a mill, and for the work of a captain of a steamer. It should be mentioned that the scholarships for Kutchis resident in Bombay alone were established at a total cost of Rs.25,000. As a further stimulus to education, and especially with the object of encouraging native talent and spreading knowledge amongst the people, the Darbár annually commissions competent persons to write essays on various subjects, and to translate standard English works into the Gujaráti language.

In the matter of public works considerable improvements have been effected within recent years in connection with the extension of roads, the pier and reclamation works, and the erection of new buildings. Since the accession of His Highness to the gadi the expenditure incurred by the Darbár on works of public utility has amounted to Rs.66,24,672.

Great attention is paid by His Highness to well-irrigation, which has been found by experience to be most suited to the peculiar requirements of the Province, the rainfall being limited and precarious. Other means of irrigation have also been adopted. Under his guidance strenuous efforts have also been made in the direction of reclamation of waste land. In the course of the last fifteen years the number of acres of waste land brought under the plough amount to 83,890, and fifteen new villages have been established.

His Highness is a thorough sportsman, fond of pig-sticking, shooting, and all manly exercises. He is, moreover, a firm though conciliatory ruler, and is regarded by his subjects with a deep and ardent attachment. He married the daughters of the Thákur Saheb of Sayla, and of the Ráná Jalamsinghji, cousins of His Highness the Raj Saheb of Dhrángadra, in Káthiáwár (q.v.), on 19th February 1884. The occasion of this marriage was remarkable for the substitution for the old custom of giving Fulekas (grand dinners and a nightly procession, according to old practice) of a small Darbár, at which nazars were paid, which His Highness touched, and remitted to be utilised in furthering the cause of female education. His sons are named—Madhubhá, otherwise called Vijáyaráji, born 2nd September 1885; and Manubhá, born 12th September 1888.

His Highness's brother is named Karansinghji, born in 1870, and educated at the Ráj Kumár College, Rájkot; he visited England on the occasion of Her Majesty's Jubilee in 1887, and was then created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, and married a daughter of the House of Aramda, in Okha, Káthiáwár, in March 1889. His Highness's sister was married to His Highness the Mahárájá of Bikanir (q.v.), in Rájputána.

The State has an area of 6500 square miles, exclusive of the Runn of Kutch, which is about 9000 square miles; its population is 512,084, chiefly Hindus, but including 118,797 Muhammadans and 66,663 Jains. His Highness maintains a military force of 354 cavalry, 1412 infantry, and 164 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns.

Arms.—The coat of arms adopted by His Highness's family is most interesting, as illustrating Oriental heraldry. The sketch given in the margin is taken from a document kindly supplied by the Kutch Darbár, and was described by His Excellency the Diwán of Kutch in 1876 in the following words:—

“(1) The Fort of Bhujá, which overlooks the capital of Bhuj. (2) The Moon, showing that the reigning family belongs to the Lunar dynasty. (3) The Crown, and the Jari Patka flag (with representations of the sun and the moon), emblematic of royalty. (4) The Mahí Muratab, a flag with a gold-fish at the top, presented to a former Rao of Kutch by an Emperor of Delhi. This is considered a valued present, and is carried in State in all ceremonials by sowaris on the back of an elephant. (5) The Trident of the family goddess, and old weapons of the family. (6) A Boat, showing that Kutch is a maritime Power. (7) Two Horsemen, representing Kutch as a horse-producing country, and showing specimens of her military retainers. (8) A Cow, representing the customary title of a native potentate. (9) A killed Tiger, indicating the great historical event from which the title of Rao was derived. (10) The Motto adopted by the family, showing the attributes by which the first Rao Khengár succeeded in regaining his lost patrimony.”

Residence.—The Palace, Bhuj, Kutch, Western India.

LACHHMAN PARSHAD SINGH (of Asothar), Rájá.

Born 1847. The title is hereditary. The Rájá is descended from Deogaj Singh, who came from Khichhidára or Raghugarh in Central India in 1543, and married the daughter of the Rájá of Aijhi, and subsequently succeeded to the possessions of his father-in-law. About 150 years later Araru Singh was in possession of the Asothar Zamindári, with two co-sharers; but owing to the oppression of the latter he became reduced to the position of a cultivator. A curious tradition is told of him, that he was once sleeping under a mahua tree, overcome with the fatigue of his laborious occupation, when an Ahir named Bidhotar, who was at work in the neighbouring field, observed a large cobra approach the sleeping man, endeavouring to screen his head from the rays of the sun with its expanded hood; and when Araru resumed his ploughing, he presently found a great golden treasure, with which he repurchased all his ancestral estates, and became both rich and powerful. His son, Bhagwant Rai, built the fort at Gházipur, and defied the Imperial troops for a long time; but in 1760 A.D. he was captured by treachery and slain. He was succeeded by his son, Rup Rai, who died in 1780, leaving the Ráj of Asothar to his son Bariyar Singh. Subsequently most of the family possessions were resumed by the Nawáb Vazir, Asaf-ud-daulá, and only a pension left to the Rájá. Bariyar Singh's son, Duniapat, obtained a confirmation of his father's pension from the British Government in 1805. Duniapat's adopted son, Raghubár Singh, died in the former's lifetime; and Duniapat was succeeded in 1850 by Raghubár's adopted son, the Rájá Lachhman Parshád Singh. The Rájá is an Honorary Magistrate; and has issue two sons—Kunwár Narpát Singh and Kunwár Chandra Bhukhan Singh.

Residence.—Asothar, Fatchpur, North-Western Provinces.

LACHHMAN RAO, Rao Saheb.

Born 8th May 1845. The title is hereditary, the Rao Saheb being descended from Rao Vinayek Rao, who was the Diwán or Prime Minister of the late Mahratta ruler of Ságar. Vinayek Rao came originally from the Deccan, and was appointed by the Mahratta Government first to be Mámlatdár. On the cession to the British Government the family received hereditary pensions. The Rao Saheb is an Honorary Magistrate. He has a son—Rao Ganpat Rao Saheb Subahdár.

Residence.—Ságar, Central Provinces.

LACHHMAN SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 24th May 1882. The Rai Bahádur belongs to a family from Cawnpur, North-Western Provinces.

Residence.—Bombay.

LACHHMAN SINGH (of Wazirpur), Rájá.

Born 19th October 1826. The title was conferred on 1st January 1877, as a personal distinction, at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. Belongs to a Rájput family of the Jadon clan, originally resident at Karemna in Rájputána. About 130 years ago Karemna was burnt by the troops of the Rájá of Macheri (Alwar) in his war with the Rájá of Bhartpur; and Kalyán Singh, the ancestor of Lachhman Singh, took refuge in Bhartpur. His eldest son was appointed Fotehdár of Parganá Ruphas by the Rájá of Bhartpur, but was subsequently poisoned; and the younger son, Lachhman Singh's grandfather, took service in Sindhia's army. He died at Aligarh a few months before the capture of that fortress by the British, and his sons removed to Agra. His grandson, the present Rájá, entered the Government service in 1847; and for his services during the time of the Mutiny, and generally to the cause of education, he has received the title of Rájá, a khilat, and various grants.

Residence.—Bulandshahr, North-Western Provinces.

LACHHMESHWAR SINGH, SIR, K.C.I.E., Mahárájá Bahádur.

See Darbhanga.

LACHHMINARAYAN SINGH, DEO (of Kera), Thákur.

Majesty's reign. Belongs to a Chandraseniya Káyastha Prabhu family; second son of Jagannáth Baji Rao, Mámlatdár in Khándesh. Prior to his appointment as Prime Minister of the Baroda State he had rendered long and meritorious services to the Bombay Government; and while Deputy Collector of Sholápur endeared himself to the people to such an extent that they called their market after his name, "Lakshmanpet." In 1874 he became Assistant Revenue Commissioner of the Northern Division of the Bombay Presidency; and shortly afterwards was invited to aid Mr. Dádábhai Naoroji (subsequently M.P. for Central Finsbury) in the administration of Baroda. He became, first, Subahdár of the Naosári district, then head of the Revenue Department in 1883, and finally in 1886 Diwán or Prime Minister of the State. He retired in 1890 with a pension from the British Government, and handsome allowances from the Gaekwár. He married Báí Sitábái, and has issue six daughters—Gujabái, Chandrabái, Chingubái, Dhakubái, Naobái, and Sundrabái.

LAL MADHAVA MUKARJI, Rai Bahádur.

Born in 1841. Belongs to a Kulin Bráhmaṇ family, and is the son of Ishwar Chandra Mukarji, an old and much respected merchant of Calcutta. Educated at the Free Church College of the Calcutta University; and subsequently graduated at the Calcutta Medical College. During the great Orissa famine of 1866 he was appointed Medical Officer in charge of the famine hospitals that were opened at Chitpore and Sealdah for the relief of the famine-stricken. His good services there were duly acknowledged by the Government of Bengal. He then successively held the appointments of House Surgeon of the Calcutta Ophthalmic Hospital for thirteen years, and teacher of Ophthalmic Medicine and Surgery in the Campbell School for three years. He has taken a very prominent place among the great oculists of the world, and was deputed by the Government of India to Rájputána, to attend upon His Highness the Mahárájá of Jaipur, whose eyesight he successfully restored. He translated into Bengáli the English text-book on the Diseases of the Eye, by Dr. Macnamara, which has been highly eulogised by the most competent authorities. In 1879 he was elected a Municipal Commissioner for the town of Calcutta; and has been re-elected in three subsequent successive elections. Has been several times Member of the Town Council of Calcutta. Was appointed a Fellow of the Calcutta University in 1881; and in 1890 became a Member of the Syndicate. He is an elected Member of the Council of the Calcutta Bethune Society; of the Calcutta Health Society; and of the India Club. He is a Justice of the Peace for the town of Calcutta. He is the first native gentleman who has been honoured with the Presidentship of the Calcutta Medical Society. He is also the President and Honorary Lecturer of Ophthalmic Medicine and Surgery in the Calcutta Medical School. When Her Majesty the Empress, in recognition of his distinguished medical services, was pleased to confer upon him the title of Rai Bahádur, the Government of India also presented him with a handsome sword and a richly-embroidered sword-belt.

Residence.—Calcutta.

LAL MADHUB MOOKERJEE, Rai Bahádur.

See Lál Mádhava Mukarji.

LAL RAGHURAJ SINGH (of Pandaria), Thákur.

The title is hereditary. The founder of the family was Sham Chand; and the late Thákur Gajapál Singh was thirteenth in succession. He was the younger brother of the Thákur Rájpal Singh, feudatory Chief of Kawardha (q.v.) Thákur Gajapál Singh has been recently succeeded, at Pandária, by Thákur Lál Raghuráj Singh.

Residence.—Pandária, Biláspur, Central Provinces.

LAL SINGH, Rao.

Born 1844. The title is hereditary. The Rao belongs to a Chandel family; descended from the Rájá Sheoráj Deo, who in the year 1393 of the Samvat era came from Kanauj to Shiurájpur in Cawnpur district, and established his rule over the neighbouring country. He conferred on Sirghu Deo the title of Rao, and allowed him to settle in mausa Sipai, and ever since the Chandels of this house have been recognised as holding the title of Rao. The Rao has a son named Dharmrāj Singh.

Residence.—Sipai, Cawnpur, North-Western Provinces.

LAL SINGH (of Bheri), Sardār.

The title is hereditary. The Sardār is the cousin of Sardār Bishan Singh (q.v.) of Bheri, in the district of Ludhiána, Punjáb. Belongs to a Jat (Sikh) family, descended from Sardār Mahtáb Singh, Miran Kotia, a Sikh Chief, well known for his prowess, who flourished about the year 1761 A.D. His son, Sardār Rai Singh, acquired by conquest some territory in the Ambála district more than a century ago. The family came under British protection, with the other Cis-Sutlej Chiefs, after the first Sikh war. Sardār Ratan Singh succeeded his father, Rai Singh; and his grandsons are the Sardárs Bishan Singh (son of Sardār Sarmukh Singh) and Lál Singh (son of Sardār Gurmukh Singh) of Bheri.

Residence.—Bheri, Ludhiána, Punjab.

LAL SINGH (of Talwandi), Sardār.

Born 1822. The title is hereditary. The Sardār is the grandson of the Sardār Dal Singh Naharna, who was adopted by the widow of the great Sardār Fateh Singh, Káliánwála, and inherited his large possessions. He died in 1823, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Sardār Atar Singh, who, about the year 1846, received a seat in the Council of Regency, which he retained until the annexation of the Punjab. On the occasion of the outbreak at Multán, Sardār Atar Singh joined the British under Major Edwardes. His son, the present Sardār Lal Singh, was at first carried off by the troops; but afterwards escaped, and joined the same side. Sardār Atar Singh died in 1851, and was succeeded by the present Sardār.

Residence.—Talwandi, Amritsar, Punjab.

LALA SAHEB (of Imlai), Rájá.

Born 1862. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Ráj Gond (aboriginal) family, whose ancestors came from Dhamda to Mandla, and obtained some jágírs from Sheo Ráj Rai, the Gond Rájá of Mandla, because they were caste-fellows of the Rájá. This was in 1624 A.D., and the family have been settled at Imlai in the Jabalpur district ever since. One of their ancestors married a daughter of the Rájput house of Ratanpur.

Residence.—Jabalpur, Central Provinces.

LATHI, THAKUR SURSINGHJI TAKHTSINGHJI, Thákur of
A Ruling Chief.

Born 1875; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 4th November 1878. Belongs to a Gohel Rájput (Hindu) family, which claim to be Suryavansi (of the Solar race), as descendants of the legendary hero Ráma. The Gohel sept of Rájputs are said to have occupied a part of Márwár for twenty generations, until they were expelled by the Ráhtors (see Jodhpur) at the end of the 12th century. Thence, under their Chief, Sejak, they migrated to Káthiáwár, about the year 1260, and are at present represented in Káthiáwár by the ruling families of Bhaunagar, Rájpipla, Pálitána, and Láthi. The founder of the Láthi State was Sárangji, second son of Sejak, whose eldest son became the ancestor of the Chiefs of Bhaunagar, whilst the third son was the ancestor of the Chiefs of Pálitána. One of the Thákurs of Láwa married his daughter to Damaji Gaekwár, the great ancestor of the Gaekwárs of Baroda; and gave the estate of Dámnnagar as a dowry, being in return exempted personally from tribute. The State is tributary both to Baroda and to Junágarh; and in addition to the tribute the Chief of Láwa annually offers a horse to the Gaekwár of Baroda, probably in commemoration of the relationship between the families. The town of Láthi, which is the capital, is now a station on the Bhaunagar-Gondal railway; it has the palace of the Thákur, a Dharmśála, a good Dispensary, Post and Telegraph Office, and the Láthi Anglo-Vernacular School. The area of the State is 42 square miles; its population 6804, chiefly Hindus. The Chief maintains a military force of 12 cavalry, 25 infantry, and 10 guns.

Residence.—Láthi, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

LAWA, THAKUR DHIRAT SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

The Thákur belongs to the Kachhwáha Rájput family—that is, the ruling family of Jaipur (q.v.), the State having originally belonged to Jaipur, and having been granted by the Mahárájá of Jaipur to one of the scions of his family. It was conquered by the Pindári leader, Amir Khán, in the course of his Jaipur and Jodhpur campaigns; and the Thákur of Láwa then became a feudatory of Amir Khán's State of Tonk. In 1867, however, this connection was terminated, and Láwa came under the direct protection of the British Government. The area of the State is 18 square miles; its population is 2682, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Láwa, Rájputána.

LAXAMAN. See Lakshman.

The Sawbwa is Chief of one of the Shan States on the Burma frontier, the area of which is about 1000 square miles. The population consists almost entirely of Shans.

Residence.—Legya, Burma.

LEHNA SINGH (of Manasawal), Rána.

Born 1801. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a very ancient Rájput family, that claims to be descended from the legendary hero Krishna, through Basu Chand, who is said to have taken possession of Garhmuktesar, and to have reigned there about 2000 years ago. His descendant, Jodh Chand, with three brothers, is said to have visited Jwálamukh on a pilgrimage, and on that occasion to have taken possession of Manasawal and the surrounding territory in the Hoshiárpur district. Rána Chigar Chand, thirty-third in descent from Basu Chand, made his submission to the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, and is said to have been confirmed by him in some of his lands. The Rána has four sons—Opindar Singh, Madho Singh, Janárdhan, and another.

Residence.—Manasawal, Hoshiárpur, Punjab.

LEHNA SINGH, CHIMNI, Sardár.

The title is hereditary.

LIMRI, THAKUR SAHEB SIR JASWANTSINGHJI, FATEHSINGHJI, K.C.I.E., Thákur Saheb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 23rd May 1859; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 30th January 1862. Belongs to a Jhála Rájput (Hindu) family; claiming a common descent with the Chief of Dhrángadra from Harpáldev, who came from the north in very early times, and established himself in that part of Káthiáwár called Jháláwár from the name of his sept. The present Chief, who succeeded his father, the Thákur Saheb Fatehsinghji, was educated at the Rájkumár College, Rájkot, and finished his education by visiting England in company with the Principal of that College. He attained his majority in 1877; and on 1st August of that year was installed as ruler. In 1884 the Government of Bombay, in recognition of the ability and industry with which he conducted the administration of his State, appointed him a Member of the Legislative Council of Bombay. In 1887 he was selected as one of the representatives of the Princes of Western India to present their loyal congratulations to the Queen Empress on the auspicious occasion of the Jubilee of Her Majesty's reign; and on that occasion he had the honour of receiving from the Empress in person the insignia of a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. He extended his tour to all the chief places of interest in the United Kingdom, in Canada, and in the United States; and was the guest successively of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, of the Viceroy of the Canadian Dominion, and of the President of the United States. He has the reputation of being a most able and painstaking ruler, and has received high acknowledgment of his ability and success from successive Governors of Bombay. The area of the State is 344 square miles; its population is about 43,000, chiefly Hindus, but including more than 4600 Muhammadans. The Thákur Saheb maintains a military force of 35 cavalry, 174 infantry, and 28 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Limri (or Limbdi), Káthiáwár, Bombay.

LOGHASSI, Rao Bahádur of. See Lughási.

LOHARU, NAWAB AMIR-UD-DIN AHMAD KHAN
BAHADUR, FAKHAR-UD-DAULA, C.I.E., Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1859; succeeded to the gadi 31st October 1884. Belongs to an Afghán (Muhammadan) family, descended from Ahmad Bakhsh Khán, who was employed by the Rájá of Alwar in the negotiations with Lord Lake in 1806. In recognition of his services he received Loháru from the Rájá, and the feudal possession of Firuzpur from the British Government. His son, Shams-ud-din Khán, succeeded him, but was executed at Delhi in 1835 for compassing the murder of the British Resident at Delhi. In consequence of this Firuzpur was confiscated; but Loháru was subsequently restored to the brothers of the Chief, who had no share in his guilt, Amin-ud-din Khán and Zia-ud-din Khán; and Amin-ud-din was the great-grandfather of the present Nawáb. The title of Nawáb was restored to the family, in 1866, as a personal distinction; and in 1874 it was conferred on the Chief in recognition of good administration. Created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 2nd January 1893. The area of the State is 226 square miles; its population 13,754, chiefly Hindus, but including 1517 Muhammadans. The Nawáb maintains a military force of 94 men.

LUGHASI, RAO BAHADUR KHET SINGH, Rao Bahádur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 21st July 1856; succeeded to the gadi 3rd January 1872. Belongs to the great Bundela Rájput (Hindu) family of the Orchha House, from which are descended the ruling families of Panna, Datia, Ajaigarh, and most of the other States of Bundelkhand; all tracing their lineage from the same eponymous hero, Bir Singh, who first adopted the clan name of Bundela. His descendant, the Mahárájá Chhatrasal, possessed large territories in Bundelkhand; and is famous for having called in the aid of the Mahrattas against the Mughal Power, and having adopted the Peshwá as one of his sons, who thereby acquired a third of his dominions, and a footing in Bundelkhand.

Chhatrasal's eldest son, Hardi Sáh, succeeded him at Panna; and he had two sons, the elder of whom became Rájá of Panna, while the younger, Salim Singh, became Diwán of Lughási. His son, the Diwán Dhiráj Singh, received a sanad from the British Government in 1808. Three generations have intervened between Dhiráj Singh and the present Chief. In 1857 the Diwán Sardár Singh of Lughási was loyal to the Government during the time of the Mutiny, though half the villages of the State were laid waste by the rebels in consequence of his fidelity. As a reward for these services, the Diwán received the hereditary title of Rao Bahádur at the Cawnpur Darbár of 1859, together with a khilat, a valuable jágir, and a sanad authorising the privilege of adoption. The present Rao Bahádur is grandson of Sardár Singh. The area of the State is 47 square miles; its population 6159, chiefly Hindus. The Rao Bahádur maintains a military force of 6 cavalry, 78 infantry, and 7 guns.

Residence.—Lughási, Bundelkhand, Central India.

K.C.I.E., Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 11th August 1860; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 7th October 1867. Belongs to the family of the great Solanki clan of Rájputs, claiming descent from Sidráj Jaisingh, the ruler of Anhalwára Patan and Gujarát. The Maháráná's ancestors are said to have established themselves as Chiefs of Virpur in 1225 A.D.; and in 1434 A.D. Ráná Bhimsinghji removed to Lunáwára across the Máhi. The State was tributary both to Baroda and to Gwalior; but the rights of the latter were transferred to the British Government in 1861. The Maháráná was educated at the Rájkumár College, Rájkot; and was installed as ruler in August 1880 on attaining his majority. He was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 25th May 1889. The area of the State is 388 square miles; its population about 76,000, chiefly Hindus, but including over 3000 Muhammadans. MADHO PRASAD SINGH (of Adharganj), Rai.

Born 11th October 1847. The title is hereditary, the Rai being the representative of the great Bachgoti sept of Rájputs, sprung from the ancient and illustrious family of the Chauhán Rájputs of Mainpuri (q.v.) The sept having incurred the excessive wrath of the Emperor Alá-ud-din of Delhi, who vowed its extermination, the survivors emigrated, and for safety's sake adopted the name of Vasishtagoti (contracted into Batasgoti, and ultimately Bachgoti), from the saint who called forth their ancestor (the Agnikula) from the fire to defend the Munis of Mount Abu against the demons. The Chief, Bariar Singh, descendant of Cháhir Deo, Prithvi Raj's brother, left Sambhalgarh, and wandering eastward, settled about 1248 A.D. in Sultánpur, Oudh. He married the daughter of Rájá Rám Deo, Bhilkaria, Chief of Patti, became chief military officer under the Rájá, and ultimately dispossessed his brother-in-law, and seized the territory. His descendant, Bodh Singh, received the title of Rai from the Hasanpur Rájá of Sultánpur, and aiding the Nawáb Shujá-ud-daulá in his war against the British, was defeated with him at the battle of Baksar in 1775 A.D. His grandson, Rai Mihrban Singh, was driven into exile by the Nawáb, and his fort of Kot Bhilkar was sacked by the latter about the year 1780. His three sons, who in turn succeeded, gradually reacquired much of the family property. The youngest, Rai Sitla Bakhsh, was succeeded by his elder son, Rai Kálka Bakhsh Singh; and the latter by his brother, the present Rai, on 23rd November 1857. He is an Honorary Magistrate and an Assistant Collector.

Residence.—Dalippur, Partábgarh, Oudh.

MADHO RAO, Rao and Potdár.

Born 31st January 1832. The title is hereditary, having being originally conferred by the old Mahratta Government of Ságár. The Rao's grandfather was an important officer of that Government; and he was succeeded by his son, the Rao Lachman Rao, who was appointed Mámlatdár of Narsinghpur, and received a political pension from the British Government on the cession. He was succeeded by his widow, the Mussamat Parvati Báí, who still enjoys a pension; and the Mussamat adopted the present Rao.

Residence.—Ságár, Central Provinces.

MADHO SINGH (of Amethi), Rájá.

Born 29th November 1823. The title is hereditary, having been in the family from early times. Is the Chief of the Bandhalgoti sept of Rájputs, claiming descent from Sudá Rai, a scion of the Kachhwáha (Surajvansi) dynasty of Jaipur (q.v.), who is said to have migrated from Narwárgarh, conquered the Bhars of Amethi, and built a fort at Raipur. The sixth in descent from him was Mandhata Singh, who was childless; but with the aid of a saint's prayers a son was born to him, who was called Bandhu, in memory of the circumstances of his birth—whence the clan name of Bandhugoti or Bandhalgoti. Rájá Gurdat Singh in 1743 was besieged at Raipur by the Nawáb Safdar Jang; Raipur was taken and destroyed, and the Rájá escaped to Rámnagar, which thenceforward became his headquarters. His grandson was the Rájá Hara Chand Singh, who was the grandfather of the late Rájá Bisheswar Singh, and also of the present Rájá. On Bisheswar Singh's dying childless in 1842, he was succeeded by his cousin, the present Rájá. In the time of the Mutiny in 1857 the Rájá at first distinguished himself by protecting the refugees from Sultánpur, whom he safely conducted to Allahabad. Later, however, he joined the rebels; but in August 1858 he surrendered his fort at Amethi, and was ultimately pardoned. In 1860 he was made a Magistrate. He has a son and heir, Lal Lachhman Singh.

Residence.—Amethi, Sultánpur, Oudh.

MADHO SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1821. The title was conferred on 24th May 1883, as a personal distinction. Belongs to a Kshatriya family of the Bais clan, whose ancestors nine generations ago came from Baiswára in Oudh, and settled in the Jaunpur district. The Rai Bahádur rendered valuable service during the time of the Mutiny in 1857, and from the first boldly took the side of the Government. He rendered every assistance to Government, and protected the lives and property of several indigo-planters; for these services he received a sanad and a grant of land, and subsequently the title of Rai Bahádur.

Residence.—Jaunpur, North-Western Provinces.

MADHO SINGH, THAKUR, Rao Saheb.

The title was conferred on 1st January 1877, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1st March 1832; succeeded to the gadi as a minor on the death of his father, the late Thákur Fatehsinghji, 2nd February 1835. The Thákur belongs to the illustrious family of the Chiefs of the Ráhtor clan of Rájputs, claiming descent from the legendary hero Ráma, and the ancient Ráhtor Emperors of Kanauj of the Suryavansi or Solar race, through the House of Idar; the founder of the Magori family, Ratansinghji, having been a younger son of a Ráwal of Malpur (q.v.), who was descended from a younger son of one of the ancient Raos of Idar (q.v.), who in turn was descended from the second son of the last Ráhtor sovereign of Kanauj. Certain payments called kichri are made annually by this State to Idar. The Thákur has two sons, Kunwárs Mokhamsinghji and Daulatsinghji. The area of the State is 75 square miles; its population 3076, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Magori, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

MAHA SINGH (of Kharsal), Sardár.

Born 1849. The title is hereditary. The Sardár Maha Singh belongs to a Gond (aboriginal) family, claiming descent from Urdhabo Gond, a soldier of fortune who came from Garha-Mandla, and settled in Sambalpur, acquiring a jágir for military services from the reigning Rájá of Sambalpur. The head of this family uses the Gond device as a signature.

Residence.—Kharsal, Sambalpur, Central Provinces.

MAHAB ALI walad ABBAS ALI KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being a representative of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation (see Khairpur).

Residence.—Sind.

MAHABIR PRASHAD SAH, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 10th September 1875, for his liberality during the famine of 1873-74, and in recognition of the good services of his family to the Government.

Residence.—Sáran, Bengal.

MAHADAJI BALLAL LAGHATE, Rao Saheb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1890.

Residence.—Bombay.

MAHADEO GOVIND RANADE, C.I.E., Rao Bahádur.

Was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire 15th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty.

Residence.—Bombay.

MAHADEV WASUDEV BARVE, C.I.E., Rai Bahádur.

The title of Rai Bahádur is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. The Rai Bahádur has been created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

Residence.—Ratnagiri, Bombay.

MAHARAJ SINGH (of Haldaur), Ráji Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1878.

Residence.—Bijnaur, North-Western Provinces.

MAHARAJ SINGH (of Patan), Rao.

The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred by the Mughal Emperor of Delhi, through the Subahdár Ghairát Khán, for good services in capturing the fortress of Dhamoni. Belongs to the same family as that of the Rao Bhopál Singh of Sehora, in Ságar district. The Rao Maháráj Singh is the son of the late Rao Khumán Singh of Patan, whom he succeeded.

Residence.—Patan, Ságar, Central Provinces.

MAHARAJ SINGH, THAKUR, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 20th May 1890.

Residence.—Ságar, Central Provinces.

MAHARAM, KISON SINGH, Scim of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1859; succeeded to the gadi 15th December 1877. The Seim is the Chief of one of the Khási and Jaintia Hill States, under the Chief Commissioner of Assam; its population is 7591, consisting chiefly of Khásis and Christians.

Residence.—Maharam, Khási Hills, Assam.

MAHBUB BAKHSH, Khán Bahádur.

MAHENDRA LAL KHAN, Rájá. See Midnapur, *Rájá of.MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR, C.I.E.

Was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1883.

MAHENDRA MAHENDRA SINGH, RAJA (of Bhadáwar),
C.I.E., Mahárájá.

Born 26th September 1835. The title of Mahárájá is personal, and was conferred on 25th July 1881; but the title of Rájá of Bhadáwar is hereditary, and the Mahárájá is the present head and representative of one of the greatest and most powerful historical families of the North-Western Provinces. He is the Chief of the Bhadauriya sept of the illustrious Chauhán clan of Rájputs; has married a sister of the Rájá of Mainpuri, who is the Chief of all the Chauháns, and has a son and heir, Maharájkumár Mahendra Sumrat Singh, born 11th October 1875. The Mahárájá has been exempted from personal appearance in the Civil Courts, and (together with his retainers) from the operation of certain provisions of the Arms Act. He was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 30th May 1891.

The Santak of the Chauhán Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature.
(A circle with four Trisulas or Tridents as radii at the cardinal points.)

Achal Deo was the ancestor of the Bhadáwar family at the time of Timur's invasion, and he appears to have given the name of Bhadauriya to his sept of Rájputs, from the village of Bhadaura, on the right bank of the Jumna, in the Agra district. In the time of the Emperor Akbar, Rajao Ráwat, then the head of the family, slew a famous Meo freebooter named Haitu, and obtained great honours and rewards from the Great Mughal, including the title of "Mahendra," Lord of the Earth. In the Ain-i-Akbari of Abul Fazl, the grandson of Rajao Ráwat is entered as a mansabdár of 500, with the title of Rájá. At the Court of the Emperor Sháh Jahán, the Rájá Padam Singh, Bhadauriya, was a mansabdár of 1500. Azam Shah, the son of Aurangzeb, and the Emperor Muhammad Sháh, granted sanads to the family, copies of which are in existence. During the palmy days of the Mughal Empire the Rájá of Bhadáwar was reckoned, with the Rájás of Jaipur, Jodhpur, and Bundi, as one of the four Hindu "Pillars of the Empire"; and the history of the family is full and interesting. In the time of Lord Lake's campaigns against the Mahrattas, and subsequently, the Rájás of Bhadáwar rendered valuable aid to the British arms. The late Rájá Samait Singh, who died without issue in 1840, was the son of Rájá Partáb Singh; and the present Mahárájá was the adopted son of Rájá Samait Singh, and succeeded him. The Mahárájá "showed conspicuous zeal and loyalty" during the period of the Mutiny of 1857; his levies barred the way of the mutineers through his territories, and successfully guarded the gháts of the Chambal and Jumna.

Residence.—Naugaon, Agra District, North-Western Provinces.

MAHESH CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTTI, Rai Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 29th May 1886.

Residence.—Jessore, Bengal.

MAHESH CHANDRA NYAYARATNA, C.I.E.,

Mahámahopádhya.

The title of Mahámahopádhya was conferred as a personal distinction on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, for eminence in oriental learning. It entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Rájás. The Mahámahopádhya, who is one of the most distinguished Sanskrit scholars in India, belongs to a Kulin Bráhma family of the highest rank, the Bhattácháryya family of Nárit, which has long been distinguished for the zealous cultivation of Sanskrit learning, and the number of learned Pandits it has produced. His father, Harináráyana Tarkasiddhánta, and his two uncles, Guruprasáda Tarkapanchánana and Thákurdása Chúrámáni, were eminent Pandits. He married, in the year 1848, the daughter of Pandit Rám Chánd Tarkabágis of Sonágachí, in the Jehanabad subdivision of the district of Hugli. He has a brother, Pandit Máhabhachandra Sárbabhauma, Sabhá Pandit of Moisésdal Raj. He has a daughter and three sons—Manmathanáth Vidyáratna, M.A. (of the Financial Department of the Government of India), born April 1863; Munindranáth Bhattácháryya, M.A., B.L. (Vakil of the High Court of Calcutta), born February 1868; and Mahimanáth Bhattácháryya, B.A., born April 1870. He was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 24th May 1881; and the estimation in which he is held by Indian scholars is marked by his title of “Nyáyaratna.” He succeeded, after an interval, Professor E.B. Cowell (now Professor of Sanskrit in the University of Cambridge) as Principal of the Sanskrit College of Calcutta. During the tenure of the Principalship he has taken the initiative in the institution, by the Government of Bengal, of an examination, called the Sanskrit Title Examination, for the conferment of titles on meritorious students of special departments of Sanskrit learning. To this examination are admitted students from indigenous institutions (called Chatuspathis or Tols) as well as from the special classes that have been organised in connection with the Sanskrit College. The Title Examination has been the means of stimulating in some measure, all over Bengal, the rather waning zeal for the cultivation of Sanskrit learning. The titles given—Nyáyaratna, Vidyáratna, etc.—are those of the ancient Sanskrit Pandits in the Universities of Nadiyá, Benares, and elsewhere. He has edited, with copious Notes, the Kávyá Prakás; also the Mimánsá Darsana, and the Black Yajur Veda. He has written many pamphlets, such as Remarks on Dayánanda Sarasvatí's Veda-Bháshya, Tulasidhárana Mimánsá, The Authorship of Mrichchhakatika, Lupta Samvatsara. He has done much for the general encouragement of Sanskrit learning; and also, by pecuniary help and otherwise, in furtherance of famine-relief, the promotion of education, and the opening out of means of communication. He maintains a secondary school (a High Anglo-Sanskrit School) at his native village of Nárit; and he has not only greatly improved the roads in and near about this village, but has taken a leading part in the opening out of good roads and tramways in his native District. The Mahámahopádhya is a Member of the Bengal Asiatic Society, the Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science, the Calcutta University, the Board of Examiners, the Central Text Book Committee of Bengal, the Behar Sanskrit Samáj and the Anthropological Society of Bombay; and he has lately been elected a Foreign Member of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences at Buda-Pesth. He is also Joint-Secretary of the Hindu Hostel Committee, a Member of the Bethune (Girls') College Committee, and a Visitor of the Government Engineering College at Sibpur in the neighbourhood of Calcutta.

Residences.—Calcutta; and Nárit, Amta, Howrah.

MAHESH SITLA BAKHSH SINGH (of Basti), Rájá.

Born 1848. The title is hereditary, the Rájás of Basti belonging to a Kshatriya family claiming descent from a scion of the ancient Rájás of Kalhans. The founder of the latter family was Sej, who, with Tej his brother, in the 14th century came to Oudh and conquered the territories of the Dom Rájá of Gonda. Tenth in descent from Sej was Rájá Achal Singh, who granted Basti to his cousin, ancestor of the present Rájá. The Rájá has two sons—Lál Patesir Partáb Naráyan Singh, born 8th August 1870; and Babu Bhavaneshwari Partáb Naráyan Singh, born 23rd February 1873.

Residence.—Basti, North-Western Provinces.

MAHESHWAR PRASAD SINGH, Maharáj-kumár Rao.

Is the brother of the Maharájá Bahádur of Gidhaur in Bengal. Educated in Sanskrit, Persian, Hindi, and English.

Residence.—Gidhaur, Bengal.

MAHIMA RANJAN RAI CHAUDHRI, Rájá.

Born 3rd February 1854. The title was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. The Rájá is the son of the late Bábu Sambhu Chandra Rai Chaudhri. Belongs to the Chaudhri family of Kakina, Rangpur, whose ancestors first settled in the district in the reign of Charles I., at which period Ráma Náth Chaki was in the service of the Rájá of Kuch Behar. His son, Raghu Rám, became the Senápati or Commander-in-Chief of the Kuch Behar forces. His son, Rám Naráyan, became the first Zamindár of Kakina under the Mughals when they gained possession of Rangpur in 1687, and obtained the title of Chaudhri; he died in 1710. His son, Rájá Rai Chaudhri, and his grandson, Rudra Rai Chaudhri, followed in succession; the latter died in 1768, shortly after the passing of Rangpur into British possession. His son, Rasik Rai Chaudhri, died in 1770, leaving a minor son and heir; his widow, Alaknanda Chaudhurani, successfully administered the Zamindári until her son, Rám Rudra Rai Chaudhri, succeeded in 1784. The latter, who was distinguished as a philanthropist and scholar, died in 1820, and was succeeded in turn by his eldest son and grandson; the latter dying without issue in 1850 was followed by his cousin Sambhu Chandra Rai Chaudhri (son of Rám Rudra's younger son), mentioned above as the father of the present Rájá. He was renowned as a Vedanta scholar, and a friend to Sanskrit learning; he founded a Bengali press, and kept a number of Pandits engaged in translating Sanskrit works into Persian, and vice versa. His son, the present Rájá, educated at Rangpur School, succeeded to the estate as a minor; attained his majority in 1871. Has founded several schools and charitable institutions; is a poet, author, and speaker on religious and political subjects, and a composer of many national songs. He married in 1868 Man Mohini Rai Chaudhurani, and has issue, a son, Kumár Mahendra Ranjan Rai Chaudhri, born 19th September 1874. The family crest is an angel, volant, proper; the motto—Nisi Dominus frustra.

Residences.—Rájábári, Kakina; Rangpur, Benares.

MAHIP SINGH (of Saliyá), Rájá.

The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred by the Rájá Hindi Shah, Gond Rájá of Garha-Mandla. Belongs to a family claiming descent from Tej Singh, of Tejgarh, in the Damoh district of the Central Provinces. Rájá Chandra Hans received the title of Rájá, and some lands in the Jabalpur district, from Rájá Hindi Sháh of Garha-Mandla, for services rendered in demolishing Nánágarh, a fort in the Biláspur district. Rájá Chandra Hans was succeeded by his son, who was the father of the present Rájá.

Residence.—Saliyá, Jabalpur, Central Provinces.

MAHIPATRAM RUPRAM NILKANTH, C.I.E., Rao Saheb.

The title of Rao Saheb is personal, and was conferred on the 26th March 1861. The Rao Saheb has also been created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

Residence.—Ahmadabad, Bombay.

MAHLOG, THAKUR RAGHNATH CHAND, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1861; succeeded to the gadi 16th May 1880. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, claiming descent from the Rájput Chief Ráná Hari Chand, who in early times came on a pilgrimage, conquered the country, and founded the State of Mahlog. The Gurkhas overran the district between 1803 and 1815; and on their expulsion in the latter year by the British Power, the Thákur was confirmed in the possession of his State by a sanad from the British Government, dated 4th September 1815. Thirty-four generations of chiefs intervened between Ráná Hari Chand and the late Thákur Dalip Chand, who succeeded to the gadi in 1849, and died in 1880. Mahlog is one of the Simla Hill States, and its area is 53 square miles; its population about 9169, chiefly Hindus. The Thákur maintains a military force of 30 men.

Residence.—Mahlog, Simla Hills, Punjab.

MAHMUD JILANI, SHAIKH, Shams-ul-Ulama.

This title is a personal one, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, for eminence in oriental learning. It entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Nawábs.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

MAHTAB KUNWAR (of Katiári), Ráni.

The title of Rájá was conferred, as a personal distinction, on the late Rájá Tilak Singh of Katiári, in the district of Hardoi, Oudh, on the 23rd of April 1878. The Rájá has recently died, and his widow, the Ráni, has succeeded him.

Residence.—Katiári, Hardoi, Oudh.

MAHTAB SINGH (of Lidhrán), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being a descendant of Sardár Jai Singh, who joined the Nishanwála misl or confederacy which opposed Zain Khán, the Governor of Sirhind, who was slain in battle. Sardár Jai Singh obtained considerable territories in Lidhrán, Ludhiána, and in Kharar, Ambála, about 1759 A.D. On the invasion of Ahmad Sháh Durani he fled to the hills, and lost some of his Ambála possessions, which before his return had fallen into the hands of the Maharájá of Patiála. He was succeeded by his only son, Sardár Charat Singh, who had three wives, by each of whom he had children, who succeeded to his estate in accordance with the rule of Chanda Vanda, which is the custom of this family. Sardár Mahtáb Singh is the son of the Sardár Budh Singh, who was born in 1812, and rendered excellent service to Government during the Mutiny of 1857, for which he received a suitable reward.

Residence.—Lidhrán, Ludhiána, Punjab.

MAIHAR, RAJA RAGHBIR SINGH, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1843; succeeded to the gadi as a minor in 1852. Belongs to a Jogi (mendicant ascetic) family of Hindus; descended from Beni Hazuri, who was in the service of the Bundela Rájá of Panna, and ultimately obtained from his master the jágir of Maihar, with the title of Rais. When Baghelkhand became British territory by the Treaty of Bassein in 1802, Durjan Singh, the youngest son of Beni Hazuri, was in possession of Maihar, and he was confirmed by the British Government. The grandfather of the present Rájá was the grandson of Durjan Singh. The Rájá Raghbir Singh obtained the title of Rájá, in place of the older title of Rais, on 14th February 1869; he has a son and heir, named Jadbir Singh. The area of the State is 400 square miles; its population is 71,709, chiefly Hindus, but including more than 10,000 belonging to aboriginal tribes. The Rájá maintains a military force of 8 cavalry, 227 infantry, and 7 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

MALER KOTLA, HIS HIGHNESS NAWAB MUHAMMAD
IBRAHIM ALI KHAN BAHADUR, Nawáb Bahádur of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1858; succeeded to the gadi 16th July 1871. Belongs to an Afghán family, whose ancestor, Shaikh Sadr-ud-din, came from Kábul about the end of the 15th century, and obtained in marriage a daughter of the Afghán Emperor of Delhi, with a territory in the province of Sirhind as her dowry. Fifth in descent from him was Bazid Khán, who obtained the title of Nawáb from the Emperor Alamgir, and founded the town of Máler Kotla in 1657 A.D. The State gradually became independent during the decay of the Imperial power of Delhi in the 18th century, but being under Afghán and Muhammadan rulers, it was frequently involved in feuds with its Sikh neighbours, and especially with the powerful Chiefs of Patiála. In 1732 the Nawáb Jamál Khán aided the Imperialist troops against Rájá Alá Singh of Patiála; and again in 1761 the same Nawáb aided the forces of Ahmad Sháh Duráni against the Sikhs. Jamál Khán's son, however, the Nawáb Bhikan Khán, experienced the vengeance of the Sikhs; and being hard pressed by the forces of the Rájá Amar Singh of Patiála, was forced to sign a treaty, under which peace ensued for many years. In 1787 the Rájá of Patiála aided the Nawáb of Máler Kotla against the Sikh Sardár of Bhadaur. In 1794 a combination of Sikh Sardárs attacked Máler Kotla under the Bedi Saheb Singh, a descendant of the great Sikh Guru, Bábá Nának. The Nawáb was besieged in Máler Kotla, and reduced to extremities, when he was saved from destruction by the intervention of the Rájá of Patiála. In General Lake's campaigns against the Mahrattas, the Nawáb of Máler Kotla joined the British army with all his followers; and in 1809 was taken under British protection, and guaranteed against the encroachments of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. The late Nawáb, Sikandar Ali Khán, in 1862, obtained the assurance of the British Government that any succession in accordance with Muhammadan law would be respected; and accordingly, when he died without issue in 1871, he was succeeded by the present Nawáb, the heir of a collateral branch of the family. The area of the State is 164 square miles; its population is about 71,000, of whom the Sikhs number about 28,000, the Muhammadans about 24,000, and the Hindus about 16,000. The Nawáb enjoys the title of "His Highness" as a personal distinction. He maintains a military force of 60 cavalry, 228 infantry, and 6 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns, including 2 guns which were added to the salute as a personal distinction on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India.

Residence.—Máler Kotla, Punjab.

MALHAR RAO, INGLI, Rao.

Born 1827. The title is hereditary, the family having been the rulers of Jabalpur district during the time of the Mahratta Government. The Rao possesses a sanad of the time of the Emperor Sháh Alam, which styles his ancestor Rájá Ambaji Bahádur Ingli, and shows that at a Darbár held by the Emperor Sháh Alam a very high position was conferred on this family, and the management of several tálukas entrusted to them. Rao Gangádhar Ingli, father of the present Rao, was ruler of Jabalpur under the Mahratta Government.

Residence.—Jabalpur, Central Provinces.

MALIA, THAKUR MODHJI MULVAJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1st July 1846; succeeded to the gadi 23rd June 1875. Belongs to the great Jareja Rájput (Hindu) family which has given ruling Houses to Kutch, Nawanagar, and Morvi; the Malia family being an offshoot of the Morvi branch. The Thákur has a son and heir named Raisinghji. The area of the State is 102 square miles; its population 11,224, chiefly Hindus. The Thákur maintains a military force of 25 cavalry, 49 infantry, and 1 gun.

Residence.—Malia, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

MALLIEM, HAIN MANIK, Seim of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1843; succeeded to the gadi 16th December 1868. The Seim is Chief of one of the Khási and Jaintia Hill States, under the Chief Commissioner of Assam; its population is 12,338, consisting chiefly of Khásis and Christian converts.

Residence.—Malliem (or Myllem), Khási Hills, Assam.

MALPUR, RAWAL DIPSINGHJI SHEOSINGHJI, Ráwal of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1863; succeeded to the gadi 12th April 1882, on the death of his father, the late Ráwal Sheosinghji Khumánsinghji. The Ráwal belongs to the illustrious family of the Chiefs of the Ráhtor clan of Rájputs, claiming descent from the legendary hero Ráma and the ancient Ráhtor Emperors of Kanauj of the Suryavansi or Solar race, through the ancient Raos of Idar. The Ráwal is the direct descendant of Ráwal Virajmal, the founder of the Malpur State, who was a younger son of Kirathsinghji, eighth Rao of Idar. The area of the State, which is tributary to Baroda, and pays kichri to Idar, is 324 square miles; its population 14,009, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Málpur, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

MAN, MAUNG, Thuye-gaung Ngweda ya Min.

The title (which is indicated by the letters T.D.M. after the name) is personal, and was conferred on 20th May 1890. It means "Recipient of the Silver Sword for Bravery."

Residence.—Promé, Burma.

MAN SINGH, C.I.E., Sardár Bahádúr.

Was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1886.

Residence.—Sukpur, Bhágalpur, Bengal.

MANA SINGH (of Mokal), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár is the head of the Mokal family of Sindhu Jats, whose ancestors rose to considerable power and importance during the reign of the Maharájá Ranjit Singh. Sardár Bela Singh (cousin of Sardár Káhan Singh, Mána Singh's father), with his son Surjan Singh, fought on the Sikh side at the battles of Mudki, Firuzshahr, and Sobráon; and Bela Singh, severely wounded at Sobráon, was drowned in the Sutlej in the vain attempt to ford the river after the bridge-of-boats had been broken down. In 1858 Sardár Mána Singh was appointed an officer of the 5th Banda Military Police; and in September he greatly distinguished himself by the gallantry with which he led his troop against very superior numbers of the enemy—when he was wounded in the head, and his horse was wounded under him. On his retirement in 1861 he was made Honorary Police Magistrate of twenty-eight villages in the neighbourhood of his ancestral seat of Mokal; and in 1862 received a considerable grant of land. He has three sons—(1) Naráyan Singh, born 1849; (2) Partáb Singh, born 1852; (3) Lál Singh, born 1855.

Residence.—Mokal, Lahore, Punjab.

MANDAWAL, RAWAT KESRI SINGH, Ráwat of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1858; succeeded to the gadí as a minor in 1861. Belongs to a Doria Rájput (Hindu) family. The population of the State is about 2000.

Residence.—Mandáwal, Western Málwá, Central India.

MANDI, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA BIJE SAIN BAHADUR,

Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1846; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 26th January 1851. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family of the Chandravansi or Lunar race; whose successive Rájás ruled from the earliest ages over the combined States of Suket and Mandi, until the year 1200 A.D. About that time the reigning Chief of Suket, named Sahu Sain, quarrelled with his younger brother; the latter left Suket to seek his fortunes elsewhere, and his descendant, Ajbar Sain, founded the town of Mandi, and was the first Rájá of this State. At the time of the Gurkha invasion in 1803, Isri Sain was the Rájá of Mandi; he submitted to the invaders on condition of being left unmolested. After the expulsion of the Gurkhas by the British Power in 1815, Mandi came under the control of the Superintendent of the Hill States appointed by the Sikh Government of Lahore; and it suffered greatly from the turbulence of the Sikh army after the death of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh in 1839. General Ventura, the Sikh commander, invaded the State, and reduced the celebrated fort of Kamlagarh, and the Rájá in vain besought the aid of the British. But at last, about the time of the first Sikh war, the British Government consented to intervene. In February 1846 the Rájá Balbir Sain formally tendered his allegiance. By the treaty of March 1846 with the Sikhs, Mandi with the whole of the Jálándhar Doab was ceded to the British Government; and Rájá Balbir Sain in October of the same year received a sanad, confirming him in his possessions under conditions of feudal service. Balbir Sain died in 1851, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, then a minor. According to the traditions of the country there were at one time no fewer than 300 fortresses in this State; but of these only about ten now exist in any preservation—the most famous being the hill-fort of Kamlagarh mentioned above. The area of the State is 1125 square miles; its population is about 140,000, chiefly Hindus, but including more than 2000 Muhammadans. The Rájá Bahádur maintains a military force of 25 cavalry, 1600 infantry, and 10 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Mandi, Punjab.

MANDVA, RANA JITSINGHJI, Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1877; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 13th September 1890. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The area of the State is 7 square miles.

Residence.—Mandva, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

MANESHWAR BAKHSH SINGH (of Mallanpur), Rájá.

Born 1850. The title of the family having been originally Rao, that of Rájá was recognised as hereditary in 1864, when the present Rájá succeeded to it as a minor. Belongs to a Raikwár family, descended from the Raikwárs of Baundi (see Sarabjit Singh, Rájá). The founder of this branch of the family was Ratan Singh. About the year 1580 A.D. the family acquired considerable possessions in the Sitápur district; and subsequently extended their territory into the districts of Kheri and Bahraich. Rájá Maneshwar Bakhsh Singh, Raikwár, was educated at Benares and Lucknow under the Court of Wards, by whom his estates were managed for many years. He is an Honorary Magistrate; and has a son and heir, Kunwár Debi Bakhsh Singh.

Residence.—Mallanpur, Kheri, Oudh.

MANGAL, RANA JIT SINGH, Ráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1830; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 9th November 1844. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The State was anciently a feudatory of Kahlur (q.v.); but after the expulsion of the Gurkhas, who had overrun it from 1803 to 1815, by the British Power, the latter declared Mangal to be dependent only on the British Government. The sanad of the latter is dated 20th December 1815. The Ráná has a son and heir, named Tilok Singh. The area of the State, which is one of the Simla Hill States, is 13 square miles; its population is 1060, chiefly Hindus. The Ráná maintains a military force of 25 men.

Residence.—Mangal, Simla Hills, Punjab.

MANGAL SINGH, C.I.E. (of Bhinai), Rájá Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 1st January 1877, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

Residence.—Ajmir.

MANGAL SINGH, THAKUR (of Garhi), Rai Bahádur.

The title of Rai Bahádur is a personal one, and was conferred on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

Residence.—Alwar, Rájputána.

Prime Minister of Baroda.

Born 1844. The title of Diwán Bahádúr was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 30th October 1884. His Excellency has rendered valuable service to His Highness the Gaekwár, to His Highness the Rao of Kutch, and in other States of Western India. Belongs to a Vahnagra Nagar Bráhmaṇ family of Nariad in Gujarát. In 1870 he was invited by His Highness the Nawáb of Junágadh to a seat in his Council; and becoming Chief Justice of that State, he introduced important reforms in the Judicial and Police Departments. Between 1872 and 1876 he rendered admirable service as native assistant to the Resident, first at Pálanpur, and then at Baroda; and on 25th September 1875, at a public Darbár held at Baroda, the title of Rao Bahádúr was conferred on him, together with a valuable khilat. In May 1876 Mr. Manibhai was appointed Diwán of Kutch, at the express desire of His late Highness the Mahárájá Pragmalji, then Rao of Kutch. Here he introduced great and most beneficial reforms in all departments, especially in the collection of the revenue, and in education and sanitation; and his tact and judgment largely contributed to the settlement of a long-standing dispute as to jurisdiction between the Rao and his feudatories of the Royal House, the Bhayad. In 1884 he obtained the title of Diwán Bahádúr, with a valuable khilat. With a short interval, during which he returned to the Baroda Service, he administered the government of Kutch until the close of 1885; and on again returning to Baroda, he received very substantial recognition of the value of his services from His Highness the present Rao of Kutch. For more than four years he was at the head of various departments in Baroda; and in May 1890 the Mahárájá Gaekwár appointed him Diwán or Prime Minister of that great State. In Baroda his administration has been thoroughly successful, and he has also published some important works in Gujaráti and English. He has issue, three daughters and two sons—Motibhai (of the University of Bombay), aged about twenty-four; and Hirabhai, aged about fifteen.

Residence.—Petlad, Baroda State.

MANIKJI KAWASJI DOTIVALA, Khán Bahádúr.

Granted the title of Khán Bahádúr, as a personal distinction, in recognition of eminent services rendered to the Public Works Department of Bombay, 2nd January 1893.

Residence.—Bombay.

MANIPUR, RAJA CHURA CHAND, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1886; succeeded to the gadi 18th September 1891. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Hindu) family, descended from Rájá Churai Romba, who obtained the Ráj about the beginning of the 18th century. His adopted son (formerly named Pamheiba) was the Rájá Gharib Nawáz, who made several successful invasions of Burma. In the time of his grandson, the Rájá Jai Singh (alias Ching Tung Romba), the Burmese invaded Manipur; the Rájá was compelled to seek British aid, and a treaty was concluded in 1762. Again in 1824, in the reign of the Rájá Gambhir Singh, the State was overrun by the Burmese; but the latter were at length expelled by the aid of British levies, and when peace was concluded in 1826 Gambhir Singh was able to extend his boundaries by the inclusion of the Kubo valley. The latter territory was, however, restored to Burma in 1834. In that year the Rájá Gambhir Singh died, and the State subsequently has suffered much from internal dissensions and frequent changes of rulers. These disorders at length became unendurable, and in 1890 the Government of India resolved to put an end to them. The first attempt to intervene was disastrous, as it was attended by the massacre of a considerable British force, including some high officers of State. The outrage was immediately followed by condign punishment, and all those who were responsible for the massacre were either hanged or otherwise rigorously dealt with. In this State the Prince next in succession to the gadi has the courtesy title of Yuvaráj or Jubaráj, and the next in dignity to him is called the Senápati (sometimes spelt "Senaputty"). On the deposition of the late Rájá—who had enjoyed the title of Mahárájá as a personal distinction—these persons were found to have been implicated in the recent outrages, and were punished accordingly. The State had technically lapsed, on account of the rebellion; but it was resolved to select a youthful Rájá from among the descendants of the ruling family, and to continue the political existence of Manipur as a feudatory State, and thereupon the present Rájá was placed on the gadi. The State has an area of about 8000 square miles, and a population estimated at about 220,000, chiefly Hindus, but including about 4881 Muhammadans, and 85,288 belonging to various Hill tribes.

Residence.—Manipur, Assam.

MANOHAR SINGH (of Pathrála), Sardár.

Born 1839. The title is hereditary. Sardár Diwán Singh, grandfather of the present Sardár, and son of Sardár Sohel Singh, about the year 1759 A.D. conquered certain territory in the Jálándhar district. His brother-in-law, Sardár Baghel Singh, was also a celebrated Sikh leader of those days. When the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh conquered the Jálándhar Doáb, he deprived the family of much of their possessions. One of the sons of Sardár Diwán Singh was the late Sardár Fateh Singh, father of the present Sardár. Sardár Manohar Singh has two sons—Sardár Sundar Singh and Sardár Dasaundha Singh.

Residence.—Pathrála, Jálándhar, Punjab.

MANSA, RAWAL SHRI TAKHTSINGHJI, Ráwal of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1877; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 18th May 1889. Belongs to a Chaura Rájput (Hindu) family, whose founder, Ráwal Sursinghji, a scion of the ancient Chaura Rájput dynasty that reigned at Anhilwára Patan, 746 to 942 A.D., appears to have obtained an assignment of territory at Mansa on the downfall of the Anhilwára Patan dynasty. The late Ráwal of Mansa, Rájsinghji Bhimsinghji, was fourteenth in descent from Sursinghji. The area of the State is 73 square miles; its population is 13,299, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Mánsa, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

MEWAR, His Highness the Mahárájá of. See Udaipur.

MIDNAPUR, RAJA MAHENDRA LAL KHAN, Rájá of.

Born 1st September 1843. The title of Rájá was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, in recognition of his "public spirit and liberality on many occasions." Belongs to the family of the Zamindárs of Nárájol, descended from Udaya Naráyan Ghosh, which family has held possession (with one interruption) of the Midnapur Ráj since the time of the Rájá Ananda Lál Khán (June 1800), who was the elder brother of the grandfather of the present Rájá. Just before the close of the last century, Trilochan Khán of Nárájol was called in to aid the Ránis—widows of the Rájá Ajit Singh, the last of the older line of Midnapur Rájás. Trilochan Khán was the first cousin, on the mother's side, of the Rájá Jeswant Singh, father of Rájá Ajit Singh. He was succeeded by his nephew Sitárám Khán, who in turn was succeeded by his sons, Ananda Lál Khán, Nanda Lál Khán, and Mohan Lál, Khán. Ananda Lál Khán at length succeeded to the whole of the Midnapur Ráj. The family has had the misfortune of being involved in frequent and heavy litigation. Rájá Mohan Lál Khán was succeeded by his son Rájá Ajudhya Rám Khán, father of the present Rájá, in 1830. In January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress, he received a Certificate of Honour. He died in 1879, and was succeeded by the present Rájá, who is a distinguished musician, and the composer of several Hindu musical works. When the Rájá in 1887 was invested with the title, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, after addressing him in terms of eulogy, added: "I take pleasure in investing you with the well-earned dignity which the Viceroy has bestowed on you; the representative of a very ancient family in Midnapur, which received its honours from the Mughal Government, you have devoted your wealth and influence, as your father did before you, to the service of your fellow-countrymen. In endowments and donations to schools, libraries, and hospitals, in the construction of the Nárájol embankment, and above all in the remission of rents to your tenantry in bad years, you have set a noble example." The Rájá has a son and heir, named Narendra Lál Khán, born 17th September 1867.

Residence.—Midnapur, Bengal.

BALA SAHEB PATWARDHAN, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1866; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 6th June 1875. Belongs to the Patwardhan (Bráhman) family, to whose ancestor, Govind Hari Patwardhan, the grant of the Miráj State, with the title of Sardár, was made by the Peshwá Mádhava Rao in 1764 A.D. In 1820 the State was divided into four shares, of which two lapsed in 1842 and 1845 respectively. Of the two that remain as feudatory States, the present Chief of the senior branch was educated at the Rájikumár College, Indore, and ranks as a First Class Sardár in the Southern Mahratta country. The area of the State is 320 square miles; its population is 69,732, chiefly Hindus, but including 7473 Muhammadans. The Chief maintains a military force of 51 cavalry, 494 infantry, and 7 guns.

Residence.—Miráj, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

MIRAJ (Junior Branch), LAKSHMAN RAO HARIHAR, alias ANNA SAHEB PATWARDHAN, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Is a minor, being the son of the late Harihar Rao Dádá Saheb, who was born in 1833, and succeeded to the gadi 5th February 1876. Belongs to the Patwardhan (Bráhman) family, to whose ancestor, Govind Hari Patwardhan, the Peshwá Mádhava Rao in 1764 A.D. granted the Miráj State with the title of Sardár. In 1820 the State was divided into four shares, of which two lapsed in 1842 and 1845 respectively. Of the two that remain as feudatory States, the present Chief of the junior branch is the grandson of the late Lakshman Rao Anna Saheb, who was the grandson of Gangádhara Rao Govind, son of the above-mentioned Govind Hari Patwardhan, founder of the State. The family banner is known as bhagwaj-henda, and is an ensign of a red colour; and the Chief is entitled to be attended by danka (kettledrums), pálki (State palanquin), lagi (flags), and other marks of dignity. The area of the State is 207 square miles; its population is 30,541, chiefly Hindus, but including 1667 Muhammadans. The Chief maintains a military force of 25 cavalry, 253 infantry, and 5 guns.

Residence.—Miráj, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

MOHARBHANJ, RAJA SRIRAM CHANDRA BHANJ DEO,

Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1872; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 29th May 1882. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Hindu) family, claiming descent from Adhi Bhanj, said to have been a Kachhwáha Rájput, and a connection of the then Rájá of Jaipur. Adhi Bhanj is believed to have come from Rájputána into Orissa about 2000 years ago, and gradually to have established his authority over the country between the Subarnarekha river and the borders of Dhenkanal. Subsequently a member of the Moharbhanj family named Joti Bhanj established himself in the southern part of this territory as Rájá of Keunjhar, and Adhi Bhanj retained the country between the Subarnarekha and Baitarani rivers, which is Moharbhanj proper. Thirty-nine generations of Rájás intervened between Adhi Bhanj and the late Rájá, Krishna Chandra Bhanj Deo, who was granted the title of Mahárájá, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India—as also his grandfather, the Rájá Jadunáth Bhanj Deo, had many years before been granted the same personal distinction for his service in quelling a rebellion in the Kolhan. The eldest son and heir-apparent of the Rájá in this State is entitled to the courtesy title of “Tikait Bábu”; and the family cognisance is the sacred peacock with tail spread. The area of the State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, is 4243 square miles; its population is 385,737, nearly equally divided between Hindus and aboriginal tribesmen. The Rájá maintains a military force of 512 infantry and 11 guns.

Residence.—Moharbhanj, Orissa, Bengal.

MOHI-UD-DIN SHARIF, Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1878, for distinguished medical services. The Khán Bahádur has been made an Honorary Surgeon.

Residence.—Madras.

MOHKAM SINGH (of Partápner), Rájá.

Born 20th January 1864. The title is hereditary, dating from a time before the Muhammadan Empire. The Rájá is one of the Chiefs of the illustrious Chauhán clan of Rájputs, boasting a lineal descent from Prithvi Rájá, Chauhán Rájá of Ajmir and Delhi, the last Hindu Emperor. In the 13th or early in the 14th century the Rájá Sumar Sáh (grandson of Karan Singh, son of Prithvi Rájá) conquered the Meos in Etáwah, Cawnpore, and the surrounding districts, and established himself as Rájá in the western part of the Etáwah district. His descendants built the great fort of Etáwah; but when that was captured by the Mahrattas under Hari Pant, the Rájá Partáb Singh, the then Chief, built the existing fort of Partápner. The late Rájá, Lokindra Singh, succeeded as a minor; his uncle and guardian, Zohár Singh, rendered good service to the Government during the Mutiny of 1857. The present Rájá succeeded on the death of his father, Rájá Lokindra Singh.

Residence.—Partápner, Etáwah, North-Western Provinces.

MUDHOL, VYANKAT RAO BALWANT RAO RAJE GHORPARE, alias BALA SAHEB, *Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 9th April 1861; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 27th March 1862. Belongs to the Bhonsle-Ghorpare family; which, though Mahratta, claims descent from Chob Rao, said to have been a son of the Mahárána of Udaipur, who came to the Deccan in very early times, and obtained from the King of Bijápur the territory of Mudhol with the title of Rájá. The family is also said to have a common ancestor with Sivaji the Great, the founder of the Mahratta Empire. The second family name of Ghorpare is said to have been given because one of its ancestors managed to scale a fort previously deemed impregnable, by attaching a cord to the body of a ghorpad or iguana, and thereby drawing himself up. The family banner is called the "Bahuta"; and is a triangular flag or ensign of three colours—white, black, and green. The Chiefs of Mudhol fought against Sivaji, but ultimately took military service under the Peshwás. Vyankat Rao I., the grandfather of the present Chief, became a feudatory of the British Power. He died in 1854, and was succeeded by his son, Balwant Rao; who died in 1862, and was succeeded by his son, the present Chief. He holds the rank of a First Class Sardár of the Southern Mahratta Country. His State has an area of 362 square miles; and a population of 52,163, chiefly Hindus, but including 3710 Muhammadans. MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN (of Hasanpur), Rájá.

Born 24th May 1857. The title is hereditary. The Rájá is the head of the Musalmán branch of the great Bachgoti sept of the illustrious Chauhán clan of Rájputs,—for an account of the Hindu branch of this family see the accounts of Madho Prasád Singh, Rai of Adharganj, and Partáb Bahádur Singh, Rájá of Kurwár. Of the two grandsons of Bariar Singh, one, Chahar Sen, was the ancestor of the Adharganj Rais; the other, Rup Singh, had three grandsons, of whom the second, Prithipat Singh, was the ancestor of the Kurwár Rájás, while the eldest, Jai Chand, was the ancestor of this Hasanpur family. His son, Tilok Chand, fell a prisoner into the hands of the Emperor Bábar, and to regain his liberty adopted the Muhammadan faith, his name being changed to Tátár Khán. He also received from the Emperor the title of Khán-i-Azam, whence his family have the name of Khánzádas. His grandson, Hasan Khán, was a favourite of the Emperor Sher Sháh, who visited his capital of Hasanpur (previously called Narwál), and gave him the right of creating Rájás in Eastern Oudh. The Rájá Husain Ali took an active part against the Government in the Mutiny of 1857, and commanded the rebel infantry at the battle of Sultánpur in 1858, in which his only son was killed. Under the terms of the general amnesty he recovered his estates; but died in 1860, and was succeeded by his brother the Rájá Khairat Ali, father of the present Rájá. The latter succeeded in 1869; and is an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Hasanpur, Sultánpur, Oudh.

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN, Nawáb Bahádur.

The Nawáb Bahádur bears this courtesy title as the grandson of the late Amjad Ali Sháh, fourth King of Oudh. The Nawáb Bahádur's father was the Nizám-ud-daulá, who married the daughter of that monarch.

Residence.—Oudh.

MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN (of Kunjpurá), Nawáb.

The title is hereditary, the Nawáb being the descendant of a Pathán family founded by the Nawáb Nijábat Khán about the close of the last century. He came from Kándahár with a following of free lances, and ultimately established himself at Kunjpurá. He aided the invader Nádir Sháh, and obtained from that Emperor the title of Nawáb. In 1808-9 the Chief of Kunjpurá, with the other Cis-Sutlej States, came under British protection. In the rearrangements after the second Sikh war, in 1849, Kunjpurá became British territory, and its Chief was invested with Magisterial power. The Nawáb Muhammad Rahmat Khán, great-grandson of the Nawáb Muhammad Nijábat Khán, left four sons, of whom the eldest died without issue; and the second, the Nawáb Gholám Ali Khán, who succeeded him, was the father of the present Nawáb. The latter has a son and heir named Muhammad Ahmad Ali Khán.

Residence.—Kunjpurá, Karnál, Punjab.

MUHAMMAD ALLAHDAD KHAN, Sardár Bahádur,
*Khán Bahádur.

Born 1825. The title of Sardár Bahádur was conferred on 24th June 1859, as a personal distinction, for his eminent services during the Mutiny; and the additional title of Khán Bahádur, also as a personal distinction, was conferred in 1878. The Sardár Bahádur comes of a Pathán family, distinguished on both sides for their military services; his maternal grandfather was Commander-in-Chief of the forces of Háfiz Rahmat Khán of Rohilkhand, whilst his paternal grandfather was an officer of high rank in the army of the King of Oudh. He is a retired Risaldár of the First Punjab Cavalry; and distinguished himself so much by his valour and loyalty during the Mutiny of 1857 that he was created a Member of the Order of British India of the First Class, with the title of Sardár Bahádur, and a grant of some land. He has several sons.

MUHAMMAD AMIR HASAN KHAN, SIR, K.C.I.E.
(of Mahmudabad), *Rájá, Khán Bahádur.

Born 1849; succeeded his father, the Rájá Nawáb Ali Khán, in 1858. These titles are hereditary, and were conferred by the British Government on 4th December 1877, 24th May 1883, and 5th March 1884, having been originally derived, with other honours, from the Mughal Emperors of Delhi and from the Kings of Oudh. The Rájá of Mahmudabad is also entitled to be addressed as “Amir-ud-daulá, Sayyid-ul-Mulk, Mumtaz Jang,” a distinction proposed for him by Sir Henry Davies when Chief Commissioner of Oudh, as a special mark of recognition of his public services. The Rájá is the first cousin of the Rájá of Paintepur; and though belonging by birth to the younger branch of the family, is the head of the elder branch by adoption. The family is Shaikh Sadiki; but they are usually called Khánzádas, because at some remote period the title of Khán was bestowed on one of their ancestors. The founder of the family was Shaikh Náthu, who about 1360 A.D. was employed by the King of Delhi against the Bhars, and was rewarded for his services by the grant of large estates in Fatehpur. His descendant, Daud Khán, being a General in the Delhi army, was created a Nawáb; and Daud's grandson, the Nawáb Bazid Khán, obtained the additional titles of Bahádur, Muzaffar Jang, and some others. The Nawáb Daud Khán's son, Mahmud, founded the town of Mahmudabad about 1677, and it has ever since remained the seat of the family. He was Imperial Governor of Jaunpur, and died at that place. A descendant, the Nawáb Muhammad Imám Khán, divided his estates between his two sons; the elder, the Nawáb Muhammad Ikrám Khán, retained Mahmudabad, while the younger, Maghar Ali Khán, obtained Belahra, and became the ancestor of the Rájás of Paintepur and Belahra. Muhammad Ikrám Khán's two sons, Sarfaráz Ali Khán and Musahib Ali Khan, both died without issue; the widow of the latter, who succeeded him in 1810, was at the head of the Mahmudabad estate till 1838, when she died, having adopted a cousin from the Belahra side, named Nawáb Ali. The latter was an able man, who greatly increased the estate; he was also a distinguished scholar and poet.

He died in 1858; and was succeeded by his only son, the present Rájá, who was a minor under the Court of Wards till 1867. Educated at Sitápur School, Benares College, and Canning College, Lucknow. In 1871 he was elected Vice-President of the British Indian Association, and has since been President of that important body. At the great Darbár held by the late Lord Lawrence in Lucknow, he was presented with a Sword of Honour; and on 2nd January 1893, was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. He is an Honorary Magistrate, and has the powers of an Assistant Collector. He has a son and heir, named Ali Muhammad Khán, born 1881.

MUHAMMAD ASLAM KHAN, KAZI, C.M.G.

Has been created a Companion of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George.

MUHAMMAD AZIM (of Kakrali), Chaudhri.

Born 1853; succeeded his father, the late Rájá Khaslat Husain, in 1882. The title of Chaudhri is hereditary, having been so under the old Government of Oudh, and so recognised by the British Government in 1877. The head of the family was, before the annexation of Oudh, Chakladár or Chaudhri of Sandila. The present Chaudhri's grandfather, Chaudhri Hashmat Ali, was well spoken of by Sir William Sleeman in his account of Oudh. He at first took part against the Government in the Mutiny of 1857, and was a noted and active rebel leader, frequently engaged with the British troops, and acting as Názim of Hardoi and the neighbouring districts. He had, however, the reputation of being an honourable enemy, never guilty of any cruelties; and early in 1858 he tendered his submission, and became as active on the side of the Government, being engaged in many actions against the rebels. For these services he received a khilat and a grant of land. He was succeeded by his son, Chaudhri Khaslat Husain, who was an Honorary Magistrate and Assistant Collector, Secretary to the Aujumán-i-Hind of Oudh, and, shortly before his death, was given the rank of Rájá as a personal distinction. The present Chaudhri is an Honorary Magistrate; he has a son and heir, named Muhammad Jan, born 1867.

Residence.—Hardoi, Oudh.

MUHAMMAD AZMAT ALI KHAN. See Azmat Ali Khán.

MUHAMMAD BABAR MIRZA BAHADUR, Prince.

The title is personal, being the courtesy title enjoyed by the Prince as the sixth son of the late King of Oudh.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

MUHAMMAD BAHRAM SHAH (of Rassapagla), Sháhzáda.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 11th June 1860, in recognition of the Sháhzáda's position as a lineal descendant of Tippu, Sultán of Mysore.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

MUHAMMAD BAKAR walad AHMAD KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being the representative of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation (see Khairpur).

Residence.—Shikárpur, Sind.

MUHAMMAD BAKAR ALI (of Kotaha), Mir.

The title is hereditary; the Mir belonging to a Sayyid (Muhammadan) family, claiming descent from Kásim Ali Khán, who was the Physician to the Imperial Court at Delhi, and acquired the Kotaha territory in the last century in the following circumstances. The ruler of Kotaha was a Rájput Rájá named Dup Chand, a feudatory of the Rájá of Sirmur. Being expelled by the Sirmur Rájá, he repaired to Delhi to get assistance from the Emperor; and having given one of his daughters to the Imperial zandána, and forced his son to embrace Islám, he obtained some troops to reinstate him. The force was accompanied by the Imperial Physician, Kásim Ali Khán, as Political Agent. Both the Rájá Dup Chand and his son, Fil Murád, died without issue; so Kásim Ali Khán then established himself in their place at Kotaha. His grandson, Mir Muhammad Jáfar Ali Khán, obtained from General Ochterlony, after the expulsion of the Gurkhas in 1815, the grant of the jágir of Kotaha. During the Mutiny of 1857 the Mir Muhammad Akbar Ali Khán was suspected of sympathising with the rebels, and his fort at Kotaha was destroyed. Again, in 1864, the fort was rebuilt, contrary to the orders of Government; it was again destroyed, and the Mir banished. He died in exile, and his grandson, the present Mir, was reinstated in his estates. He has two sons—Sayyid Muhammad and Muhammad Jáfar Ali.

Residence.—Kotaha, Ambála, Punjab.

MUHAMMAD BAKAR ALI KHAN (of Kunwa Khera),

Nawáb.

Born 1851; succeeded his father, the late Nawáb Amjad Ali Khán, in 1875. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred by the King of Oudh, Muhammad Ali Sháh, on an ancestor of the present Nawáb, and recognised by the British Government in 1877. The Nawáb is descended from Khwája Safi, a Kashmiri noble who took service with Asaf-ud-daulá, fifth King of Oudh. Khwája Safi's son, Hákim Mehndi, was Názim of Muhamdi and Khairabad from 1799 to 1819; Prime Minister to Nasir-ud-din Haidar from 1830 to 1832, and to Muhammad Ali Sháh in 1837. As Chakladár he made the district a garden, constructed numerous public works, and gained the universal respect and affection of the people. He died 24th December 1837, and left a portion of his vast property to his brother's son, Ahmad

Ali, Nawáb Munáwar-ud-daulá, who was the Prime Minister of the King Muhammad Ali Sháh, and himself connected by marriage with the King's family. The latter was succeeded by his son, Nawáb Ashraf-ud-daulá, Amjad Ali Khán, who was a General in the army of the King of Oudh. He was succeeded by his son, the present Nawáb, in 1875.

Residence.—Kunwa Khera, Sitápur, Oudh.

MUHAMMAD BARKAT ALI KHAN, Khán Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 29th May 1868, for distinguished military and police services. Belongs to a Pathán family; descended from Muhammad Sahab Khán, who followed the Nawáb Bahádur Khán from Pesháwar into India. The Khán Bahádur's father, Muhammad Arif Khán, was the son of Abdulla Khán, alias Buddu Khán; he entered the service of the British Government, and on retirement on pension received a grant of land. The Khán Bahádur entered the service of the British Government in 1847, and rendered good service as a police officer in the Hoshiárpur district. In 1848 he was severely wounded in the fight at the Amb Bágh in the Jashwan Dan; where, under the orders of Lord Lawrence, then Commissioner of the Trans-Sutlej States, he gallantly showed the way up the hill to attack the insurgents posted on the top. Subsequently he became Risaldár of the Mounted Police at Amritsar, and assisted in the capture of the 26th Native Infantry mutineers. In 1860 he was appointed Tahsildár of Lahore, and distinguished himself by his exertions in the cholera epidemic at Lahore in 1867; and subsequently in raising mules and muleteers for service in Abyssinia. Appointed Extra Assistant Commissioner of Lahore; and has received the thanks of the Government of India and of the Punjab for his valuable political services. He is a Member of the Senate of the Punjab University; and has a son and heir, named Bashir Ali Khán.

Residence.—Lahore, Punjab.

MUHAMMAD FAIZ ALI KHAN, SIR, K.C.S.I. (of Pahásu), Mumtaz-ud-daulá, Nawáb.

The titles are hereditary, and were conferred on 9th September 1870 and 12th July 1881. Created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, 28th January 1876. Belongs to an ancient Musalmán Rájput family, whose ancestors were Badgujars who settled in the Bulandshahr district about 1185 A.D. Partáb Singh was invited by Prithviráj, the last Chauhán Emperor of Delhi, to assist him against the Chandels; and he subsequently settled at Pahásu, where the family have ever since been seated. He received a large territory as the dowry of his wife, the daughter of the Dor Rájá of Kol. Eleventh in descent from him was Lál Singh, a favourite of the Emperor Akbar, who received from the Emperor the title of Lál Khán; hence this branch of the family is called Lálkháni. During the reign of Aurangzeb, the family became Musalmáns; and in 1774 the Emperor Sháh Alam granted a large estate to Nahar Ali Khán. He and his nephew, Dundi Khán, opposed the British in the Mahratta war in 1803, and lost their estates. Dundi Khán was pardoned; but again rebelling, his estates were given to Mardán Ali Khán, another nephew of Nahar Ali Khán, who had been faithful to the British cause. His large territories were divided among his five sons ; one of them, the late Murád Ali Khán, was the father of the present Nawáb of Pahásu. Murád Ali and his son, Sir Faiz Ali, behaved with conspicuous loyalty and bravery throughout the Mutiny of 1857. The latter was Commander-in-Chief of the Jaipur troops, and rendered most valuable services, and was rewarded with a khilat, an extensive grant of lands, and the various honours already noted. He has distinguished himself as the Prime Minister of the State of Jaipur, and also as the Superintendent of the State of Kotah. Is a Fellow of the Allahabad University, and has been exempted from personal appearance in the Civil Courts. He has a son and heir, named Muhammad Fayáz Ali Khán, born 1856.

Residence.—Pahásu, Bulandshahr, North-Western Provinces.

MUHAMMAD FARRUKH SHAH, Sháhzáda (Prince).

Born 1850. The title of Sháhzáda was conferred on 18th May 1881, as a personal distinction, in recognition of the Prince's position as grandson of the late Prince Gholám Muhammad, and great-grandson of the late Tippu, Sultán of Mysore, the English equivalents of that title being indicated by the courtesy titles of His Highness or Prince. The Prince also bears the title of "Honourable" as a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, to which he was appointed in 1887, and reappointed in 1889. Was Sheriff of Calcutta for the year 1891. Is an Honorary Magistrate, President of the Central National Muhammadan Association, and one of the leading Muhammadan nobles of Bengal. His grandfather, the late revered Prince Gholám Muhammad, was well known both in India and in England. He twice visited England, and had the honour of being received by Her Majesty the Queen and the late Prince Consort, from whom he received some valuable presents. Some letters written to him by the late Prince Consort are preserved by Prince Farrukh Sháh as the most valued heirlooms of the family. Prince Farrukh Sháh's father was the late Prince Ahmad Halim-uz-Zamán, who died in 1884.

Residence.—Taliganj, Calcutta, Bengal.

MUHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN, SIAL (of Jhang), Khán Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 31st January 1860, for great and conspicuous services to Government. The Sials of Jhang are a Muhammadan clan (originally Rájputs, but long ago converted to Islam) of great antiquity, claiming descent from Rashid Khán, and until the time of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh they possessed great power in the country bordering on the Chenáb. After the Mahárájá had unsuccessfully attacked Multán in 1810, he carried off Ahmad Khán, then Chief of Jhang (whom he suspected of favouring Muzaffar Khán, the Nawáb of Multán), as a prisoner to Lahore. Subsequently Ahmad Khán received a considerable jágir in the Amritsar district; and on his death it was continued to his elder son, Máyat Khán (the elder brother of the present Chief). Máyat Khán was killed, fighting on the side of Diwán Sawan Mal against the Rájá Goláb Singh of Jammu. Muhammad Ismail Khán, the present Chief, in 1848, at the request of Major (afterwards Sir) Herbert Edwardes, raised a force, and used his influence, which was great in the district, on the side of the Government. During the Mutiny his services to the Government were conspicuous. He has a son and heir named Kabir Khán.

Born 1870. The title is personal, and was conferred on 8th October 1875, in recognition of his position as a son of His late Highness Zahir-ud-daulá, the second of the titular Princes of Arcot.

Residence.—Madras.

MUHAMMAD KARIM, MUNSHI, Khán Bahádur.

Born January 1835. The title was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, in recognition of eminent services to the State. Belongs to a very ancient Muhammadan family, claiming descent from Omar, the second Khalif of the Prophet, and from Jamál-ud-din Husain, whose doctrines are followed by the majority of Sunni Muhammadans. An ancestor came to India in the reign of the Emperor Muhammad Tughlak, and having received certain grants of land, settled in Kalimpur. His descendants removed to Muhammadabad, when that town was founded by Muhammad Ibrahim Surkhi. During the time of the Mutiny of 1857 the Khán Bahádur rendered good service by sheltering refugees, by procuring supplies and information, and by helping to place a bridge of boats across the Rápti. For these services he was made a Deputy Collector, and received, as a khilat, a Sword of Honour bearing a suitable inscription. In 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, he received a Medal of Honour and a Certificate of Honour; and in 1887 the title he now holds.

Residence.—Azimgarh, North-Western Provinces.

MUHAMMAD KARIM-ULLA, Khán Bahádur.

MUHAMMAD KASIM ALI, Mirza Bahádur.

The title is personal, being the courtesy title of a grandson of the late Muhammad Ali Sháh, third King of Oudh. The Mirza Bahádur is the son of Rafi-u-Shán Mirza Muhammad Naki Ali Bahádur, one of the surviving sons of that monarch.

Residence.—Oudh.

MUHAMMAD KASIM HUSAIN KHURSHED JAH, MIRZA BAHADUR, Prince.

The title is personal, being the courtesy title of the eighteenth son of the late King of Oudh.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

MUHAMMAD KAZIM HUSAIN KHAN (of Paintipur), Rájá.

Born 1852; succeeded his father Rájá Ibad Ali Khán in 1870. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred on Ibad Ali Khán in 1853 by the King of Oudh, and subsequently recognised by the British Government in 1877. Belongs to the Shaikh Sadiki family known as Khánzádas, and is the first cousin of the Rájá of Mahmudabad. For the family history down to the time of Muhammad Imám Khán, see the account given of this family under the heading "Muhammad Amir Hasan Khán, Rájá of Mahmudabad." When Muhammad Imám Khán divided his estates, the younger son, Mazhar Ali Khán, received Belahra in Bara Banki as his portion; and his grandson, the late Rájá Ibad Ali Khán (father of the present Rájá of Paintipur), also acquired Paintipur, and became Rájá of Paintipur as well as Belahra. The Rájá has a son and heir, born in 1889.

Residence.—Paintipur, Sitápur, Oudh.

MUHAMMAD KHAN walad GHULAM HAIDAR KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being a representative of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation (see Khairpur).

Residence.—Sind.

MUHAMMAD KHAN (of Kot Sarang), Rájá.

The title is hereditary, the Rájá being the head of the Janjoah Rájput family of Kot Sarang. The Janjoah tribe of Rájputs were in early ages very powerful. They were settled near the Salt Range, but having become divided among themselves, they were dispossessed of much of their territory by the Gakkars (see Karamdád Khán Gakkar, Rájá of Pharwála) and by the Awans. Rájá Sarang was the founder of the Kot Sarang family. He built the fort called Kot Sarang after his name, and was celebrated for his valour; and was ultimately slain in a fight with the Afgháns near Makhad. The sixth in descent from him was Rájá Fateh Khán, father of the present Rájá, who was also a distinguished Chief. The family were dispossessed by the Awans, but were subsequently granted some land by the Sardár Dhanna Singh Malwai, a General of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. Rájá Muhammad Khán has three sons—Ahmad Khán, Sardár Khán, and Aziz Khán.

Residence.—Jhelum, Punjab.

MUHAMMAD KHAN, Sardár Bahádur.

The title was conferred in 1857, as a personal distinction, in recognition of his services during the Mutiny campaigns, and his conspicuous bravery as an officer of the distinguished Corps of Guides. He retired as a Risaldár-Major on a special pension 1871, and received a grant of lands in the district of Pesháwar. He is an Honorary Magistrate of Pesháwar. The Sardár Bahádur has three sons—Yusaf Ali, Sabz Ali, and a third (still a minor).

Residence.—Pesháwar, Punjab.

MUHAMMAD KHAN (SIKANDAR KHAN), DEHLVI, Khán Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty.

Residence.—Thána, Bombay.

MUHAMMAD KHAN, HAJI, Nawáb.

The title was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty.

Residence.—Dera Gházi Khan, Punjab.

MUHAMMAD KHAN, LAGHARI, Sardár, Nawáb.

Born 1819. The title having been originally conferred by the Mir Nur Muhammad of Sind on the Nawáb's father, Wali Muhammad, in consideration of his services and of his having been wounded several times in battle, it has been recognised as hereditary by the British Government. Belongs to the Laghari clan of Baluchis, and claims descent from Hot Khán Laghari, who came to Sind from Kohistan with his son, Ghulám Muhammad Khán, and remained in the service of the Mirs of Sind. Has rendered good service to Government as an Extra Assistant Collector of Sind, for which he enjoys a pension; and he also holds some jágírs in the districts of Hyderabad and Shikárpur, Sind. The Nawáb has a son and heir named Fateh Muhammad Khán.

Residence.—Hala, Sind.

MUHAMMAD KUDRAT AZIZ, Khán Bahádur.

MUHAMMAD MAHMUD, Khán Bahádur.

Born 1845. The title is personal, and was conferred on 20th January 1883, in recognition of his position as son of the Nawáb Ahmad-un-Nisá Begam, the daughter of Nawáb Azim-un-Nisá Begam, and grand-daughter of His late Highness Nawáb Azim-ud-daulá, penultimate Nawáb of the Carnatic.

Residence.—Madras.

MUHAMMAD MAHMUD ALI KHAN (of Chitari), Nawáb, Khán Bahádur.

Born 9th October 1826. The Nawáb belongs to the same Musalmán Rájput family as the Nawáb Sir Muhammad Faiz Ali Khán, K.C.S.I., of Pahásu, who is his nephew; and the family history down to the time of the Nawáb Mardán Ali Khán, father of this Nawáb, is given under that heading. When the estates of the Nawáb Mardán Ali Khán were divided among his sons, Chitari came to Muhammad Mahmud Ali Khán. He rendered good services during the Mutiny of 1857, and as a reward, on 16th September 1859, he received the title of Khán Bahádur as a personal distinction, with a khilat and a grant of lands in Bulandshahr district. At the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, the title of Nawáb was conferred on him, as a personal distinction, for life; and declared hereditary, 2nd January 1893.

Residence.—Bulandshahr, North-Western Provinces.

MUHAMMAD MAJID MIRZA, Mirza.

The title is personal, being the courtesy title of a grandson of the late Amjad Ali Sháh, fourth King of Oudh. The Mirza is the son of the Mirza Muhammad Hasan Ali, Sulaimán Kadr (q.v.), who is the surviving son of that monarch.

Residence.—Oudh.

MUHAMMAD MOHSIN, MUNSHI, Khán Bahádúr.

Born 23rd April 1831. The title was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, in recognition of his long and faithful services to Government. He is a nephew of the Chaudhri Muhammad Ashraf, Chaudhri of Asifpur (q.v.), in the Hardoi district. He rendered excellent service during the Mutiny of 1857, and has been appointed a Deputy Collector in Oudh.

Residence.—Bilgrám, Hardoi, Oudh.

MUHAMMAD MOHSIN, SAYYID, Khán Bahádúr, Zul-Kadr.

Born 1832. The title is hereditary, and was conferred on 10th September 1861, on the father of the present Khán Bahádúr, the Sayyid Muhammad Násir Ali Khán. He was the Deputy Collector of Allahabad at the time of the Mutiny in 1857, and rendered loyal services to the Government. He separated himself from the rebels, and assisted the garrison in the Allahabad Fort by communicating information, furnishing supplies, and offering money. In recognition of these services he received a khi'at, the grant of some confiscated estates, and the hereditary title of Khán Bahádúr, Zul-Kadr. His son, the present Khán Bahádúr, Zul-Kadr, succeeded on the death of Násir Ali Khán, and has been appointed a Deputy Collector of the North-Western Provinces. He has a son and heir, the Sayyid Muhammad Ahsan, born 22nd August 1869.

Residence.—Jaunpur, North-Western Provinces.

MUHAMMAD MUNAWWAR ALI, Khán Bahádúr, Prince of Arcot.

Born 1859; succeeded the late Amir-i-Arcot (Prince of Arcot) in 1889, and ranks as the first noble of the Carnatic. Is the representative of the former Musalmán dynasty of the Nawábs of the Carnatic, descendants of the famous Anwár-ud-din, who was created Nawáb of the Carnatic by the Nizám of the Deccan. His son was the Nawáb Muhammad Ali Khán, Wálájáh Nawáb of the Carnatic, who was supported on the masnad of Arcot by the exploits of Clive against the French under Dupleix. His grandson was the Nawáb Azim-ud-daulá, titular Nawáb of the Carnatic, whose son was His late Highness Prince Azim Jah, first Prince of Arcot, who was granted the latter title by Her Majesty's letters patent, dated 2nd August 1870. He was succeeded by His late Highness Zahir-ud-daulá, second Prince of Arcot, whose full titles, according to local usage, may here be recited—His Highness

Azim Jah Umdat-ul-Umara, Amir-ul-Umara, Siráj-ul-Umara, Madar-ul-Mulk, Umdat-ul-Mulk, Azim-ud-daulá, Asad-ud-daulá-al-Ingiliz Zahir-ud-daulá, Muhammad Ali Khán, Muhammad Badi-ullah Khán Bahádur, Zulfikar Jang, Fitrat Jang, Sipahsalar, Prince of Arcot. The present Prince of Arcot is the son of Muazzaz-ud-daulá Khán Bahádur, and grandson of His late Highness Azim Jah, first Prince of Arcot. He was granted the title of Khán Bahádur, 3rd March 1876, and succeeded as Prince of Arcot in 1889. His son and heir is named Muhammad Ali, born 1882.

Residence.—Amir-Mahál, Madras.

MUHAMMAD RABNAWAZ KHAN, ALIZAI, Nawáb.

The title is hereditary. The father of the present Nawáb was the Nawáb Faujdár Khán, who rendered good services during the Multán Campaign of 1848 under Lieutenant (subsequently Sir Herbert) Edwardes. For these services he received the title of Khán Bahádur, as a personal distinction, and a valuable jágir. He also rendered good service during the Sheoráni and Kasráni expeditions. In 1854 he was deputed as Envoy to the Court of Kábul; and in 1856, after the conclusion of the treaty with the Amir of Kábul, Lord Dalhousie conferred on him the personal title of Nawáb. In 1857 the Nawáb went to Kábul again, where he remained till March 1859. He received various further honours and rewards for his remarkable services; and in 1875 the title of Nawáb was made hereditary, and all his jágirs were made perpetual jágirs. He died in 1875, and was succeeded by his son, the present Nawáb. The Nawáb Muhammad Rabnawáz Khán has three sons—Mahmud Khán, born 1857; Aladád Khán, born 1862; Hakdád Khán, born 1876.

Residence.—Dera Ismail Khán, Punjab.

Residence.—Lucknow, Oudh.

MUHAMMAD SALAMAT KHAN, Rájá.

Born 1835. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a family descended from Chandra Singh, Gautam, of Mehnagar in Nizámabad. He had two sons, Ságar and Abhiman. The latter became a Muhammadan and an eunuch; took the name of Daulat, entered the Imperial service of Delhi, rose to be Wazir of the Household, and in 1612 A.D. was appointed Faujdar of Jaunpur. His nephew Harbans, son of Ságar, assumed the title of Rájá. The grandson of Harbans, named Bikramajit, married a Muhammadan wife, and had two sons, named Azam and Azmat. Azam founded the town of Azamgarh in 1665, and built the fort there, which became the residence of the family. Azmat was killed by the Imperial troops about 1688 for failure to pay revenue, and was succeeded by his two sons in turn, Ikrám and Mahábat. The latter was imprisoned by the Nawáb Vazir for refusing to pay revenue, and died in confinement about the year 1731. His son Irádat, alias Akbar Sháh, was succeeded in 1756 by his son, Jahán Khán, who was slain in 1761 in a quarrel with the Nawáb Vazir's agent. After the defeat of the Nawáb Vazir by the British forces at Baksar, a cousin of Jahán Khán, named Azam Khán, established himself in the Ráj, and retained it till his death in 1771. His widow adopted a son named Nádir Khán, who appears to have been a claimant of the Ráj. He died in 1826, and was succeeded as claimant by his eldest son, Mubárák. The latter died in 1858, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, whose claim to the Ráj was at last allowed by the Government in 1866. The Rájá is an Honorary Magistrate. His heir-presumptive is his brother, Bábu Muhammad Khalik Khán, born in February 1849.

Residence.—Azamgarh, North-Western Provinces.

MUHAMMAD SALAM-ULLA KHAN, Khán Bahádur, Nawáb.

Born 9th February 1859. The title of Khán Bahádur was conferred on 1st June 1888, and that of Nawáb on 29th May 1891, as personal distinctions, in recognition of his services and those of his family to the Government. Belongs to a Shirani Pathán family of Dewálghát, Buldána district, Berar. His grandfather, Muhammad Rahim Khán, received a jágir for his services rendered to General Sir Arthur Wellesley (afterwards Duke of Wellington) in the campaign of Assai (Assaye), 1803 A.D. Muhammad Rahim Khán's son was Muhammad Bismillah Khán, father of the present Nawáb, who is the jágirdár and Magistrate of Dewálghát. The Nawáb has two sons—Muhammad Nur-ulla Khán and Muhammad Aziz-ulla Khán; and three daughters, Mohr-un-Nisá, Budr-un-Nisá, and Shams-un-Nisá.

MULI, PARMAR SARTANSINGHJI RAMABHAI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 12th April 1834; succeeded to the gadi 29th June 1870. Belongs to a family claiming descent from the great Pramara (Parmar) clan of Rájputs, the Thákur being, it is said, the only Pramara Chief in Western India, and almost the only surviving Chief of that great clan. The Pramaras were one of the four divisions of the Agnikulas, or "Sons of Fire," of the heroic ages in India—the other three being the Solanki, the Chauhán, and the Purihara. Tod says of them in his learned Annals of Rájásthán: "Though the Pramara family never equalled in wealth the famed Solanki princes of Anhilwára, or shone with such lustre as the Chauhán [of Ajmir and Delhi], it attained a wider range and an earlier consolidation of power than either." The great Chandragupta, the Sandracottus of the Greeks, was probably a Pramara Rájput, and the last Pramara King of Chitor was conquered by the Gehlots, probably in 714 A.D. The Thákur is known in Káthiáwár by the title of "Parmar Shri." The area of his State is 133 square miles; its population is 19,832, chiefly Hindus. He maintains a military force of 79 cavalry and 230 infantry.

Born 1838; succeeded to the gadi as a minor in 1849. The Thákur belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The population of his State is about 9000, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Multhán, Bhopáwar, Central India.

MUMTAZ ALI KHAN (of Bilaspur, Atraula), Rājā.

Born 6th October 1865. The title is hereditary; the original title of Málík was exchanged for that of Rājā by Adam Khán about the year 1650, and the latter title was recognised by the British Government as hereditary in 1879. Belongs to a very ancient Pathán family, claiming descent from Khálid, son of Wálid, the uncle of the Prophet. Its founder in Atraula was Ali Khán of Manota, in the district of Muzaffarnagar. He accompanied the Emperor Humáyun in his expedition to Gujarát, where he incurred the Emperor's displeasure by conniving at the escape of the Rājā of Bikanir from a beleaguered fort. Threatened with death, he openly rebelled, and joined the old Afghán party of Sher Sháh, by whom Humáyun was for a time driven into exile. Ali Khán then seized the Ráj of Nagar in Basti; from which, after ten years, he was driven by a rising of the Hindus under the son of the former Rājā. He then encamped before Atraula; and after two years' siege he slew the Rájput Prince of that place, and in the year 1552 established the Ráj, which is still held by his descendants. He refused to submit to the restored Emperor Humáyun, or to his son, Akbar the Great. But in 1571 his only son, Shekhan Khán, tendered his submission to Akbar's Viceroy in Oudh, and promised to bring in his father's head if he were furnished with a sufficient number of troops. The unnatural battle was fought at Sarai in Parganá Saadullanagar; the son was victorious, and kept his word by having his father's head cut off and embalmed, and he presented it in person at Delhi, where it was placed as a trophy on the Ajmir Gate. As his reward he received the title of Shri Khán Azam Masnad Ali, which is still used in their signatures by the chieftains of this family. Shekhan Khán was allowed to return to Atraula with his father's head and a grant of the Zamindári; he raised a handsome tomb over the remains of his parent, and ruled in Atraula for twenty years. His son, Daud Khán, engaged in a feud with the Janwar Rājā of Bhingá (q.v.); and it is said that he was such a powerful archer that an arrow shot by him into the gateway of the Bhingá fort was so deeply buried that it was never extracted till the time of the Mutiny of 1857, when it was dug out by Mendu Khán, a General of the rebellious Begam of Oudh. Daud Khan's son, Adam Khán, was the first Chief of the family to exchange the title of Málík for that of Rājā. His descendants in later generations have been engaged in frequent bloody feuds with their neighbours, the Rájās of Balrámpur (q.v.) and Bánsi. The late Rājā, Umrao Khán, who died in 1858, had been engaged for many years in a desultory border warfare with the Chief of Balrámpur, before the establishment of the British rule in Oudh. His son, who succeeded as a minor, was induced to join the rebels, and the rebel Begam of Oudh promised him a share of the possessions of the loyal Chief of Balrámpur. He died, however, in 1865, leaving no male issue; but the present Rājā was born as a posthumous son on 6th October of that year. The Government decided that he should succeed to his father's estates, which were under the management of the Court of Wards from 1865 to 1886. The Rājā has married a daughter of the Rājā Jang Bahádur Khán of Nanpara (q.v.)

The Nawáb Bahádur's full titles are—Ihtisham-ul-Mulk, Rais-ud-Daulá, Amir-ul-Umará, Nawáb Sir Sayyid Hussain Ali Khán Bahádur, Muhábat Jang, G.C.I.E., Nawáb Bahádur of Murshidabad. Is the eldest son of the late Muntazim-ul-Mulk, Mohsin-ud-Daulá, Faridun Jáh, Nawáb Sayyid Mansur Ali Khán Bahádur, Nussat Jang, last titular Nawáb Názim and Subahdár of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa. The late Nawáb Názim resigned his position and titles on 1st November 1880. His eldest son, the present Nawáb, received the hereditary title of Nawáb Bahádur of Murshidabad by a sanad, dated 17th February 1882. In February 1887 he received the dignity of Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire; and was promoted to be a Knight Grand Commander of the same Most Eminent Order in May 1890. In May 1887 he was granted the khilat or style of Ihtisham-ul-Mulk, Rais-ud-Daulá, Amir-ul-Umará, Nawáb Sir Sayyid Hasan Ali Khán Bahádur, Muhábat Jang. On 12th March 1891, by an Indenture entered into between the Secretary of State for India in Council and himself, the Nawáb Bahádur confirmed the act of his father of 1st November 1880; and received in return a fixed hereditary position, with a settled income, and with the family estates in the districts of Murshidabad, Calcutta, Midnapur, Dacca, Maldah, Purneah, Patna, Rangpur, Hughli, Rájsháhi, Birbhum, and the Santál-Parganá attached to the title of Nawáb Bahádur in tail male. This arrangement was confirmed and validated by the Council of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General, by Act XV. of 1891, passed on 21st March 1891. This arrangement confirmed to the Nawáb Bahádur the rank and dignity of Premier Noble of the Provinces under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, with the hereditary title, in addition to that of Nawáb Bahádur of Murshidabad, of Amir-ul-Umará.

The Nawáb Bahádur has five sons—(1) Asaf Kadr Sayyid Wasif Ali Mirza, born 7th January 1875; (2) Iskandar Kadr Sayyid Nasir Ali Mirza, born 15th March 1876; (3) Sayyid Asaf Ali Mirza, born 26th April 1881; (4) Sayyid Yákub Ali Mirza, born 9th June 1883; (5) Sayyid Mohsin Ali Mirza, born 18th November 1885. The family arms adopted by the Nawáb are—argent, a dolphin proper above a cheval regardant, also proper. Below the shield the monogram N.B.M. The supporters are the lion and the unicorn. The crest is a Zulfikár (sword of the Khálif Ali) proper. The motto is "Nil Desperandum."

The Nawáb Bahádur is descended both from the Prophet and also from Ali, the cousin and successor of the Prophet, who was married to Fatima, the Prophet's daughter. Hasan, eldest son of Ali, left a son, Hasan Massanna, who married Fatima Soghra, daughter of Hussain Ali's youngest son. One branch of the descendants of this marriage has held for several centuries, and still holds, the office of Grand Sharif of Mecca. A grandson of Hasan Massanna and Fatima Soghra was called Ibrahim Taha-Tahaie ("the pure," "the unsullied"); and from this Ibrahim are derived the Murshidabad family. His descendants were for some time rulers of the province of Yemen in Arabia. Subsequently a descendant, Sayyid Husain Najafi, was key-holder to the tomb of Ali at Najaf; and his grandson was Mir Jáfár, who became, on the fall of Nawáb Suráj-ud-Daulá, Nawáb Názim of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa. The grandfather of Mir Jáfár had married a niece of the Emperor Aurangzeb. One of his uncles, Najaf Khán, was Governor of the fortress of Gwalior; and another, Najaf Khán, was Subahdár of Cuttack. Mir Jáfár himself was at first Commander-in-Chief to the Nawáb Názim Ali Vardi Khán, whose sister, the Nawáb Sháh Khánúm, he married. The Nawáb Ali Vardi Khán became Subahdár in 1740, and was succeeded by his grandson Nawáb Suraj-ud-Daulá in 1756. He was succeeded by Mir Jáfár, brother-in-law of Ali Vardi Khán, after the victory at Plassey in 1757. In 1760 he was set aside for a short time in favour of his son-in-law, Mir Kasim; but again came into power after a few months, and continued on the Masnad till 1765, when he was succeeded by his son, Najm-ud-Daulá. Mir Najm was succeeded in 1766 by his brother, Nawáb Saif-ud-Daulá, and he by another brother, Mubárák-ud-Daulá, a minor son of Mir Jáfár, in 1770. Mubárák-ud-Daulá was succeeded by his son, Nasir-ul-Mulk, in 1793, and this Nawáb by his son, Ali Jáh, in 1810. Ali Jáh was followed by his brother, Wálá Jáh, in 1821; and Wálá Jáh by his son, Humáyun Jáh, in 1825. This Prince was succeeded in 1838 by his son, the late Faridun Jáh Sayyid Mansur Ali, the father of the present Nawáb, who was the last Nawáb Názim of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa. The grandfather of the present Nawáb Bahádur received from His Majesty King William IV. a full-length portrait of His Majesty in original, and the dignity of the Grand Cross of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order with the Insignia. The portrait of His Majesty is one of the chief ornaments at the Palace at Murshidabad.

Residence.—The Palace, Murshidabad, Bengal.

MURTAZA HUSAIN (of Bhilwal). See Mustafa Husain.

MUSA, ALI RAJA, SULTAN (of Cannanore), Rájá.

Born 1830. The title is hereditary, the Rájá of Cannanore being the representative of the old Moplah Ali Rájás or Sea-Kings of Malabar and the adjacent islands. Belongs to a Moplah (Muhammadan) family, said to have been founded by Mamali Kidavu, a Musalmán Minister of the Kolathiri Rájá of Malabar, who was appointed the "Ali Rájá"—or Sea-King of the Laccadives and adjacent islands—by the Cherakal Rájá, who assigned him a residence at Cannanore. It is remarkable that the family, though Muhammadans, follow the Marumakkatayam law of inheritance general among the Hindu Rájás of Malabar, under which the succession is with the offspring of its female members, amongst whom the next eldest male is always the heir-apparent. The present Sultán Ali Rájá succeeded his predecessor under this law on 15th November 1870. The agreement of 1796, by which the family came under British control, was signed by the Bibi, a female member of the family.

Residence.—Malabar, Madras.

MUSTAFA HUSAIN (of Bhilwal), Chaudhri.

Born 31st October 1849. The title is hereditary, having been so since the time of the Emperor Sháh Jahán in 1616 A.D., and recognised by the British Government in 1877. Belongs to a Musalmán family whose ancestors, Khwája Bahrám and Khwája Nizám, accompanied the Sayyid Sálár to Oudh, and settled at Subeha. In 1616 A.D. Shaikh Násir was appointed Chaudhri of Subeha by the Empress Sháh Jahám. In 1792 Chaudhri Imám Bakhsh largely increased the possessions of the family. During the earlier period of the Mutiny of 1857 Chaudhri Sarfaráz Ahmad, who had succeeded his father-in-law Chaudhri Lutf-ulla, took part in the rebellion; but early in 1858 he made his submission, and rendered valuable services by opening communications with other rebel leaders and detaching them from the rebel cause. In 1860 he was invested with the special powers of an Assistant Collector. On his death there was protracted litigation as to the succession; ultimately the estates were divided between the widow of Sarfaráz Ahmad, Mussamat Bichan-un-Nisá, and the present Chaudhri, who is the younger brother of the late Chaudhri. He has a son and heir named Mujtaba Husain, born in 1874.

Residence.—Subeha, Bara Banki, Oudh.

MUSTAMID KHAN BAHADUR. See Muhammad Zakir Ali.

MUTHUSWAMI, C., Rao Saheb.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1890.

Residence.—Madras.

MUTHUSWAMI AIYAR, T., C.I.E.

Born 1832. Created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1878, in recognition of his distinguished services in the Judicial Service. Was appointed a Deputy Collector in 1859; Principal Sadr Amin, 1865; Police Magistrate, 1868; Judge of the Court of Small Causes, 1871; Fellow of the Madras University, 1872; Puisne Judge of the Madras High Court of Judicature, 1883. Is a B.L. of Madras University.

Residence.—Madras.

MUZAFFAR ALI KHAN, SAYYID (of Bahadurnagar), Rájá.

Born 1867. The title is hereditary, the Rájá being the representative of the great and powerful Muhamdi Ráj which was founded by Sayyids from Kanauj, who settled first at Piháni, and subsequently owned Barwar, Bhurwára, and Kheri. This Musalmán family is descended from a Sonbansi Rájput named Badar Singh, the offspring of a daughter of the Ahbans Chief of Badiagaon in Hardoi by a Sonbansi Rájput. The Sayyid Kurram of Muhamdi attacked the village of Badiagaon at a time when Badar Singh and his brother, as boys, were staying there with their mother as guests of their grandfather Dan Singh; he slew every one in the village except the two boys, whom he carried off as prisoners to Aurangabad. Badar Singh became a convert to Islam under the name of Ibad-ulla Khán, married the daughter of the Sayyid Kurram, and in 1734 ousted his brothers-in-law and seized the great Muhamdi Ráj. Ibad-ulla Khán was succeeded by his son Mahbub Ali in 1737, having received the titles of Rájá and Khán from the Emperor of Delhi in 1730. The family went through many vicissitudes. In 1837 Rájá Aman Ali Khán on his death was succeeded by his son, Rájá Ashraf Ali, and in 1864 his title of Rájá was recognised as hereditary by the British Government. He was succeeded in 1867 by his son, Rájá Musharraf Ali Khán, who died in 1881, and was followed by his son the present Rájá, as a minor. Educated at the Benares Wards' Institute and Aligarh College. Married to a daughter of the Rájá of Nánpara. His heir-presumptive is his step-brother, Ashfak Ali Khán.

Residence.—Muhamdi, Kheri, Oudh.

MUZAFFAR BAKHT, Mirza.

The title is personal, as the courtesy title of one of the great-grandsons of the Prince Mirza Jahándár Sháh, the heir-apparent of the Emperor Sháh Alam, the last independent Mughal Emperor of Delhi. For the family history, see the account under the heading "Muhammad Sayyid Bakht, Mirza." The Mirza Muzaffar Bakht is a first cousin of Mirza Muhammad Sayyid Bakht, being the elder son of Zafar Bakht, who was the brother of Mahmud Jan.

Residence.—Benares, North-Western Provinces.

MUZAFFAR HUSAIN KHAN walad IMAM BAKHSH
KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being the representative of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation (see Khairpur).

Residence.—Shikárpur, Sind.

MUZAFFAR KHAN, C.I.E.

Was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire for distinguished military services. Holds the rank of Risaldar-Major in Her Majesty's Army.

Residence.—

Residence.—Rangoon, Burma.

MYSORE, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA SIR CHAMA
RAJENDRA WADIAR BAHADUR, G.C.S.I., Mahārājā of

A Ruling Chief, and one of the Premier Princes of the Empire.

Born 22nd February 1863; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 23rd September 1868. Belongs to a Rājput (Kshatriya Hindu) family, whose ancestors came to the south in very early times from Dwārka in Káthiáwár. Of these, two brothers, named Vijayarāj and Krishnarāj, appear to have settled in the Ashtagrām division of the Mysore dominions towards the close of the 14th century; and one of them married the daughter of the local palegár or Baron of the village of Hadanáru, and by this means established his rule in those parts. One of his descendants, named Yedu Raya, ruled over Mysore from 1399 A.D. to 1422, and was then succeeded by his son, Here Bettud Chamraj. The grandson of the latter was a Rájá named Here (or Arberal) Chamraj—arberal meaning six-fingered, in allusion to a physical peculiarity; and the six-fingered Rájá's son was Here Bettud Chamraj II., in whose time the fort of Mysore was built on the site of a village formerly called Puragere, and was given the name of Mahesh-uru, Buffalo-town, from Mahesh-asura, the buffalo-headed demon destroyed by the goddess Káli.

These Rájás were called Wadiárs or Wodeyárs of Mysore—Wodeyár being a plural or honorific form of Odeya, Kánaresé for "lord."

Here Bettud Chamraj was succeeded by his two sons in turn. The younger, Bolé Chamraj, is said to have been named Bole, or The Bald, because he had been made bald by a stroke of lightning. His grandson, Ráj Wadiár, ninth Rájá of Mysore, was the greatest and most successful of all these early Wadiárs. He reigned from 1578 to 1616; and in the year 1609-10 he seized the strong fortress of Seringapatam, formerly held by a lieutenant of the Kings of Vijayanagar. The great Hindu kingdom of Vijayanagar on the Tungabhadra had previously, in 1588, been subverted by the alliance of the Muhammadan Chiefs of the Deccan, and the descendants of the Vijayanagar dynasty had taken refuge at Penuakonda, where the family ultimately became extinct; so that Ráj Wadiár of Mysore and his descendants, having obtained possession of the important strategical position of Seringapatam, rapidly increased their power and extended their dominions. This process of aggrandisement continued down to the time of the Rájá Dodda Krishnarāj, who reigned from 1713 to 1730. His adopted son was Hadinente Tingal Chamraj, who died in 1733, and was succeeded by his adopted son, Chikka Krishnarāj—Chikka means "Junior," or "The Less." The long reign of Chikka Krishnarāj, from 1734 to 1765, was hardly more than nominal, for during this period the famous Muhammadan Haidar Ali rose to power, and ultimately became the sovereign of Mysore, retaining the Mahárájá as a puppet-prince. Haidar's splendid military powers, and those of his even more famous son, Tippu Sultán, immensely increased the Mysore dominions, and made the State the greatest in Southern India, and its rulers the most formidable potentates in the whole country. Of the Mahárájá Chikka Krishnaráj's two sons, who nominally succeeded him, one was strangled by orders of the Sultán, and the other died childless. Haidar then, in order to retain the shadow of a Hindu dynasty, permitted the third wife of Chikka Krishnaráj to adopt a young kinsman named Chamraj. Not long before the fall of Tippu and the conquest of Seringapatam by the British in 1799, Chamraj had died in captivity; and when the British Government resolved that Mysore should revert to the control of the family of its ancient rulers, an infant son of Chamraj, by name Krishnaráj, was placed on the gadi. During the minority of the Mahárájá Krishnaráj, from 1799 to 1810, the State was successfully administered by a Diwán or Prime Minister, the famous Purnaiya, a Bráhman statesman of great ability. The affairs of the State, however, fell into disorder after the retirement of Purnaiya; and the misgovernment of the Mahárájá Krishnaráj terminated by the British Government assuming the direct administration of the country in 1831, retaining the Mahárájá as the titular sovereign. On the 18th June 1865 the late Mahárájá adopted as his son and successor the young prince, now the Mahárájá Cháma Rajendra Wadiár, who was the third son of Chikka Krishna Arasu, a scion of the Bettada Kote branch of the royal house. The adoption was sanctioned by the Government of India in April 1867; and on the death of the Mahárájá Krishnaráj in 1868 the present Mahárájá was duly installed in his place as titular sovereign. The young Mahárájá proved himself in every way so deserving of the position that in 1881 it was resolved that the sovereign power should be restored to the sovereign title: and on the 25th March in that year the "Rendition"—the term has become historical—was carried out by the installation of the Mahárájá as a Ruling Chief, when the British Chief Commissioner handed over his office to the Diwán or Prime Minister of His Highness.

The subsequent history of the Mahárájá's rule has abundantly justified the "Rendition." The good administration of the country, which had been firmly established under the rule of Sir Mark Cubbon and his successors as Chief Commissioners of Mysore, has been maintained and improved. Notwithstanding that the State has been devastated by one of the most terrible famines ever known—that of 1877-78—and by several very serious droughts, its general advance in prosperity under the Mahárájá's rule has been marvellous. His Highness has had the advantage of being assisted by several Indian statesmen of the first rank and the highest abilities; the place of the late Diwán, Mr. Rangacharlu—who was himself an administrator of no mean power—having been taken, very fortunately, by His Excellency the present Prime Minister, Sir K. Sheshadri Iyer, K.C.S.I. (q.v.), by whose aid the Mahárájá has attained an administrative success not surpassed in any part of the Indian Empire, British as well as feudatory.

In all the ordinary duties of an Indian Government—in the administration of justice, in the collection and expenditure of the revenue, in the protection afforded to life and property, in public instruction, in sanitation, in public works—it is admitted that the Government of the Mahárájá can compare not unfavourably with that of the Provinces under direct British rule. In some highly important respects—in the development of communications, in female education, in precautions against famine, in the encouragement of mining and other industries, and in the fostering of habits of local self-government among the people—it is held by many (and apparently with some reason) that the State of Mysore is ahead of most of the rest of India. The famous school at Mysore City that is known as “Her Highness the Mahārání’s High-Caste Girls’ School”—in which 400 girls belonging to the families of highest caste in Mysore receive a liberal education, largely from Professors of their own sex and rank in life—undoubtedly represents by far the most successful attempt that India has seen to put the ladies of India on the same intellectual level with their husbands and brothers. The success of the gold-mining of Kolár is perhaps due as much to the wise and liberal laws which regulate it as to the richness of the district in the precious metal; while the Principality is being opened out in every direction by railways under State control or with State encouragement. The expenditure on railways in this State in the year 1891 was nearly 3 million rupees. In regard to local self-government, the “Representative Assembly of Mysore,” with which the Diwán every year takes counsel, which was instituted some years ago as a body nominated by the Mahárájá, was in 1890 made elective; and the Prime Minister, in his Address to the Assembly in 1891, thus commented on the results of the change:—

“By command of His Highness the Mahárájá, I have much pleasure in welcoming you to this Assembly, which meets here to-day for the first time under the election system sanctioned last year. You come here as the duly elected Representatives of the Agricultural, the Industrial, and the Commercial interests of the State. Last year, when His Highness was pleased to grant the valued privilege of election, he was not without some misgiving as to how the experiment would succeed; but it is most gratifying to His Highness that, though unused to the system, the electoral body has been able, in the very first year of its existence, to exercise the privilege with so much judgment and sense of responsibility as to send to this Assembly men in every way qualified to speak on their behalf. That men representing the capital, the industry, and the intellect of the country should have already taken so much interest in the working of the scheme augurs well for the future of the Institution. His Highness asks me to take this opportunity publicly to acknowledge the expressions of warm gratitude which have reached him from all sides for the privilege of election granted last year.”

But it is in its measures for the prevention and the relief of famines that the Government of Mysore has earned its best and most enduring laurels, in a reputation for prudent and far-sighted philanthropy. Those measures were described fairly and minutely by the Prime Minister in his Address to the Representative Assembly on the 4th October 1892 in the following words:—

“Before I proceed to take up the various departments of the State, you will naturally expect me to say a few words regarding the severe drought through which the whole of the Province, with the small exception of our Malnad Taluks, has recently passed. In the Maidan parts of the Mysore and Hassan districts the south-west monsoon was so scanty and precarious that the early dry crops were completely lost, except in a few scattered favourable situations. The northern and eastern districts did not get any of the early rains, and had in consequence to defer the preparation of land for cultivation much beyond the usual season. A few showers which came later on permitted of the sowing of nearly the usual extent of land with the ordinary dry crops in most taluks. These soon began to fade from insufficient moisture. The rain which fell towards the end of September raised hopes of a favourable change in the season. But by November it was evident that the north-east monsoon too had failed, and that the general out-turn of dry crops would not be much above a four-anna average in most taluks. The tanks had received no water, and wet cultivation under them could not be attempted. The failure of fodder was widespread, and altogether there was every indication of an impending distress of a very aggravated type, and towards the end of November the price of food grains began to rise rapidly, owing both to the local failure of crops and to large exports to neighbouring Madras districts. In the beginning of December, by command of His Highness the Mahárájá, I started on a tour through the worst taluks of the districts of Mysore, Tumkur, Chitaldroog, Kolár, and Bangalore. My immediate object was not only to ascertain by personal observation the actual condition of the country and the requirements of the people, but also to organise the relief measures required for the different tracts, and chiefly to inspire the people with confidence alike in the famine policy of the Government and in the method proposed for carrying it out. One of the first things to attract my attention was the insufficient supply of food grains at the various local markets. It was evident that owners were holding back their stocks, partly in expectation of a further rise in price and partly from fear of thefts and robberies,—so fruitful a source of waste and loss during the previous famine. I accordingly lost no time in arranging for due police protection of grain in transit and at places of storage, and for their safe and ready consignment by the railway. Local merchants were duly apprised of the preparedness of the Government to meet any local insufficiency by import of grain from outside the Province, while at the same time the prices of food grains obtaining at the several weekly santés or markets in the interior were ascertained and regularly published as a stimulus to local trade. These measures tended to make prices more uniform and steady throughout the Province, and there was heard afterwards no complaint of insufficient supply at any local market. Another matter which I found necessary to impress upon local officers early in my tour was the need of the greatest economy in the use of the available supply of water in tanks. With the object of raising quick-growing dry crops likely to yield an early supply of food and fodder, tank-beds which were fast becoming dry were ordered to be leased for cultivation on very favourable terms. About 10,500 acres of tank-bed were thus brought under cultivation. The crops raised were generally Bengal-gram and jolam. In the Tumkur district, where the cultivation was timely and extensive, the aggregate value of the crops thus raised is estimated over Rs.90,000. In the other districts this class of cultivation was not nearly so successful. To meet the serious want of fodder which was apprehended, all State forests and plantations, as well as a large number of Amrut Mahal Káváls, were thrown open for the free use of the raiyats' cattle, without any restriction as to the taluks or districts from which they might come. The total area of grazing land thus made available to the public was 1600 square miles, and it is reported to have been used for grazing nearly 519,000 head of cattle. Raiyats were also further permitted to cut and remove tender date-leaves for use as fodder, a privilege which was eagerly availed of in most taluks of Tumkur and Chitaldroog. In devising our scheme of Relief Works my chief aim was to afford the poorer agriculturists, the landless field labourers, the Holiyars, the Mádigars, etc., the means of earning a sufficient livelihood near their own homes. It was believed they and their families could live upon comparatively small wages if these could be earned near their own villages, for in such a case they would be able to return to their homes at the end of each day's work, take care of the infirm and young dependent upon them, look after their cattle and other property, and receive from their neighbours any additional help they might require. With this object in view, every affected taluk was divided into a number of small circles, and for execution within each such circle some suitable work or works were selected, so as to leave no inhabited village without the means of earning fair wages, within a radius of three or four miles. The works thus selected were 'minor tanks,' whether yielding revenue or not. The improvement of such tanks was of such vital importance to the villagers as a body that there was every guarantee that the grants given for it would be properly applied, and some good return shown for the money spent. To meet the rare cases in which such minor tanks were not available, as also to provide work near villages after completion of the tanks taken up, a programme of works of a supplementary character was got ready. These works were also of special local utility, such as improvement of village sanitation, planting of topes in villages and round the fringe of the waterspread of the bigger tanks, etc. Such, in brief outline, was the scheme of relief upon which His Highness's Government chiefly relied. Its execution was entrusted to the hereditary village Patel, for it was deemed safer to rely upon the autonomy of the village than upon paid agency from outside. A system of periodical inspection and general control by the Shekdar and Amildar was established, and wide discretion given to district officers as regards the details of execution, with due regard to local circumstances. I am able to bear testimony to the fact that the entire Executive, from the Patel to the District Officer, showed themselves fully equal to the high responsibility thus placed upon them, and that the scheme of relief planned was carried out with complete success in every affected part. Besides the regular relief works, but under the same agency and serving the same object as those works, were the drinking-water wells, for which a total grant of Rs.1,38,000 (chiefly from local funds) had been sanctioned. There were in hand 850 such wells, principally new wells undertaken wherever most needed, besides a number of old wells which required deepening. They were all works of permanent utility, but were of special immediate value, owing to the scarcity of good drinking water which existed in most places. In addition to works under direct Government agency, the employment of local labour on private works on a large scale was established by the grant of Government loans to landholders for special permanent improvement of their lands. The most important of this class of works were the irrigation wells under the scheme I described to you last year. The working of the scheme in each of the districts of Kolar, Tumkur, Chitaldroog, and Bangalore was entrusted to a special officer in subordination to the Deputy Commissioner, and the distrust which raiyats at first evinced towards a new measure of this kind soon gave place to an eager desire to secure the loans. The number of applications received was so numerous that the grants had to be confined to localities where provision for employment of labour was most needed. The loans sanctioned aggregated Rs.2,80,000 for 917 kapile and 530 yatam wells, calculated to irrigate 5252 acres. Another important class of works for which Government loans were given was the construction and repair of Saguvali kattes. The restriction placed upon the construction and improvement of these kattes by an order of 1873 was felt as a great hardship, especially in the Chitaldroog district, where much of the dry cultivation depends upon the retention of moisture under these kattes. That order was accordingly withdrawn, and special encouragement afforded for the construction and improvement of these most useful private works by a system of Government loans. During the past season loans to the extent of Rs.21,175 were sanctioned for 251 such works, which when completed will benefit 5069 acres. A few loans were granted also to enable Inamdars to repair their tanks. Of works referred to above, both Government and private, about 2900 were in actual execution in the affected tracts. They had the effect of keeping the people employed near their own homes, and their sufficiency for purposes of relief is proved by the fact that nearly 2,400 of them could not be completed during the past season. We have found them far more effective for real relief than large central works under professional agency. Our main anxiety was to avoid the necessity for concentrating large numbers upon distant works, for previous experience had shown that in the earlier stages of famine the people can never be induced to leave their homes in quest of employment on distant works, not because they are not in need of employment, but because they are bound to their homes by ties they are unable to sever. It is well known that before their cattle are lost, and the weaker members have died, and themselves reduced to a famished condition, the people do not quit their homes, and when eventually compelled to take this step they are so demoralised that they are more likely to wander about aimlessly than to settle down on distant works under a strange agency. We had, however, ready at hand a programme of D.P.W. Relief Works for possible resort in the event of the distress being unusually prolonged. But happily we had no occasion to do more in this direction than expand the ordinary Public Works in some of the affected tracts. Besides placing the means of earning wages within the ready reach of the general population, we adopted several measures for the relief of special classes. The most important among them were the weavers, the demand for whose manufactures had all but disappeared owing to the high prices of grain which prevailed. After much consideration of alternative measures, the Government eventually adopted the system of purchase proposed by Mr. Madhava Rao for the Bangalore district. Under this system the Government made advances of money to local Sahukars of standing for purchasing on behalf of Government the entire produce of the looms at the market value, to be resold when the demand became re-established. The Sahukars were paid a small commission, and in return they guaranteed the full recoupment of the advances made. This system was the means of affording efficient relief to the industrious weaving class, always the first to suffer on every occasion of widespread scarcity and high prices. It was in operation at Bangalore, Dodballapur, Anekal, Kolar, Melkote, Molkalmuru, and other weaving centres. The advances made amounted to Rs.85,300, including commission and other charges. A sum of Rs.34,580 has already been recovered by the resale of cloths purchased, and the balance is under process of realisation. The final net expenditure is expected to be trifling compared with the large numbers relieved. In Bangalore City alone the relief thus given extended to 4,000 looms with 10,000 weavers. Another class for whom special relief was found necessary were the minor village servants—the Mádiga, the Toti, the Talavar, etc. The contributions from villagers on which they generally subsist cease during every season of a general failure of crops. 851 of them, employed in watching Ukkads or Police outposts and doing quasi Police duties, were paid a monthly salary of Rs.3 each as a temporary measure, which has to be continued till the next harvest. Others not so employed were paid wages as work-overseers, gangmen, etc., on relief works under execution. A number of Holéyars and Mádigars were given employment in the collection of Tangadi bark in the Kolar district, and of bamboos for the Government depôts in that and the Mysore district. Compensation for dearness of gram had to be given to the Silledars, amounting up to the end of June to over Rs.8,000. It will probably have to be continued till the next gram harvest. A moiety of the Potgi allowances of village officers was ordered to be paid on application before the date on which they were payable. With the arrangements made for the relief of general and special classes, gratuitous relief was found to be unnecessary, except to a very insignificant extent. Further relief was given by the remission of one-half of the assessment on all wet lands under tanks which lay waste or could only be cultivated with dry crops, and one-half of the quit-rent on all Service Inam lands of the minor village servants, and the Mohatarfa house-tax of the poorer landless classes. The total of remissions thus given amounts to about four lakhs. Besides this, six lakhs of revenue had to be postponed, and much of this will have to be remitted eventually."

The area of the State is 24,709 square miles, which is more than double the combined area of Switzerland and Saxony. Its population is 4,186,188, chiefly Hindus, but including 200,484 Muhammadans and 29,249 Christians, which is more than double the population of Norway, and about equal to that of Portugal. His Highness the Mahárájá, who was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India on 23rd May 1884, maintains a military force of 1173 cavalry, 3425 infantry, and 10 guns, besides an Imperial Service Corps for the special service of frontier defence. His Highness has issue several sons and daughters; both Princes and Princesses being highly educated under capable instructors, both English and Indian. He is entitled to a salute of 21 guns.

NABHA, HIS HIGHNESS FARZAND-I-ARJUMAND AKIDAT
PAIWAND DAULAT-I-INGLISHIA BARAR BANS SAR-MUR RAJA SIR HIRA SINGH, MAIWANDAR BAHADUR,
G.C.S.I., Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1843; succeeded to the gadí 9th June 1871. Belongs to the great Sidhu Jat family, known as the Phulkian family, from its founder Phul; which has given ruling families to Patiala, Jind, Nábha, Bhadaur, and other Punjab States. The Rájá of Nábha is descended from Tiloka, the eldest son of Phul; whose great-grandson, Hamir Singh, founded the town of Nábha in 1755 A.D. He joined the Sikh Chiefs in the great battle of Sirhind, when Zain Khán, the Muhammadan Viceroy, was slain; and established a mint at Nábha, as a mark of independence. In 1808-9 the State came under British control, in the time of Rájá Jaswant Singh; but his son, Rájá Devendra Singh, neglected to furnish supplies to the British troops during the first Sikh war in 1845, and was consequently deposed, pensioned, and his son, Rájá Bharpur Singh, installed in his place. During the Mutiny of 1857 Rájá Bharpur Singh rendered most valuable services, and was rewarded with a large increase of territories. He was succeeded by his brother, Rájá Bhagwán Singh, who died without issue in 1871. By the sanad of 5th May 1860 it had been provided that if either of the three great Phulkian Princes (Patiala, Jind, Nábha) died without heirs, a successor to his Ráj should be chosen by the other two Chiefs from among the descendants of Phul; consequently, on the death of Rájá Bhagwán Singh in 1871, the present Rájá, Hira Singh (then a jágirdár of Jind, but a scion of the family of Tiloka), was selected and placed on the gadí. He has been created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, and granted the privilege of adoption. On the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India in 1877, he was granted an addition to his titles, and an increase of his salute from 11 to 13 guns, as a personal distinction. The area of the State is 928 square miles; its population 261,824, chiefly Hindus, but including 77,682 Sikhs and 50,178 Muhammadans. His Highness maintains a military force of 366 cavalry, 1253 infantry, and 18 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 13 guns (including 2 personal guns).

Born 22nd December 1858; succeeded his father, Rájá Indu Bhusan Deb Rai, ninth Rájá of Naldanga, in 1871, as a minor. Belongs to a family claiming descent from Vishnu Das Hazra, who was settled in Jessore district, Bengal, in the beginning of the 16th century. His son, Srimanta Rai, is said to have distinguished himself by slaying a rebel Pathán Chief, and to have obtained for this service from the Subahdár of Bengal a jadgir and the title of "Ranabir Khán." Three generations later Chandi Charan Deb Rai, who died in 1656 A.D., slew the Rájá Kedaeswar, and consequently obtained the title of Rájá from the Emperor Sháh Jahán. His successor, Indra Naráyan, second Rájá, built a great many Hindu temples, which are still in existence. The third Rájá, Surya Naráyan Deb Rai, died in 1698 A.D.; the fourth, Rain Deb Rai, in 1746 A.D.; and the fifth, Krishna Deb Rai, in 1788 A.D. The late Rájá, Indu Bhusan Deb Rai, was born in 1836, and enjoyed the estate as ninth Rájá from 1854 to 1871. The present Rájá came of age in December 1879, and received the title, as a personal distinction, on 26th June 1885. He has established scholarships for Sanskrit learning, and medals for female education, for which he has received the thanks of Government. He also founded and maintained a "Higher Class English School," and a Dispensary. Has been appointed Member of the District Board, Jessore; and elected a Member of the British Indian Association. NARENDRA KRISHNA (DEB), SIR, K.C.I.E., Mahárájá Bahádur.

Born 10th October 1822. Belongs to the Sobha Bazár family of Calcutta, whose ancestors are said to have enjoyed honours conferred by the Mughal Emperors and the Nawábs of Bengal, Behár, and Orissa. The founder of the family was the Mahárájá Nava Krishna, who obtained a medal from Lord Clive, and the title of Mahárájá Bahádur, for his services during the war with the Nawáb Suráj-ud-daulá and the establishment of the British Power in Bengal after the battle of Plassey. He was famous for his munificence. Amongst other works of benefit to the public he constructed a good road from Diamond Harbour to Kalpi, a distance of eight miles. Despairing of having any male issue, he adopted one of his nephews, the Rájá Gopi Mohan Deb (see Rájendra Naráyan Deb, Rájá Bahádur); but subsequently a son was born to him, the Rájá Ráj Krishna Deb Bahádur (father of the present Mahárájá), and he consequently divided his estates between his own son and his adopted son. Rájá Ráj Krishna Deb Bahádur died at the age of forty-two, leaving eight sons, of whom the Mahárájá Sir Narendra is the only surviving one. Sir Narendra was educated at the Hindu College; served the Government as a Deputy Magistrate for about nine years, from 1844 to 1853, in which capacity he earned a solid reputation; and on his retirement began his public life as a Municipal Commissioner, a Justice of the Peace, and a leading Member of the British Indian Association—of which important body he has been thrice unanimously elected President. During the Viceroyalty of Lord Northbrook he was formally gazetted a Rájá, having long held that title by courtesy; and he was also appointed a Member of the Imperial Legislative Council of India, in which he attained a distinguished position. On the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India he was invited to attend the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, and then was granted the title of Mahárájá as a personal distinction. Subsequently he has been created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, and has occupied a great many posts of dignity and public usefulness. He has a son and heir, Kumár Gopendra Krishna Bahádur, M.A., B.L., a Member of the Statutory Civil Service of Bengal, and Joint-Magistrate of Sealdah; and several other sons.

The Santak of the Chauhan Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature.

(A circle with four *Trident*s or Tridents as radii at the cardinal points.)

NAROTAM SINGH (of Eka), Rájá.

Born 1835. The title is hereditary. Belongs to the illustrious Chauhan clan of Rájputs, being an offshoot of the Partápnér House (see Mohkam Singh of Partápnér, Rájá), and consequently a descendant of Prithvi Rájá, last Chauhan Emperor of Delhi and Ajmir. The father of the present Rájá, Hira Singh, succeeded to the Ráj in 1862 A.D.; he died in 1876, and was succeeded by the present Rájá. The latter has a son named Lal Singh.

Residence.—Eka, Mainpuri, North-Western Provinces.

NARPAT SINGH (of Gangwal), Rájá.

Born 12th January 1822. The title is hereditary, the Rájá of Gangwal being (since the confiscation of the Ráj of Ikauna for rebellion during the Mutiny) the representative of the elder branch of the ancient and powerful Janwar family, of which the present Houses of Balrámpur, Oel, Kaimahra, and Piágpur (all great Barons of Oudh) are offshoots. The founder of the Janwar family was a military adventurer, Bariar Sah, the youngest of six sons of a Sombansi Rájput Chief, whose home was in the great fort of Pawagarh on the confines of Gujarát. He joined the Imperial army of Delhi to seek his fortune. In 1374 A.D. the Emperor Firuz Sháh Tughlak made a pilgrimage to Bahraich, to the famous shrine of Sayyid Salár; he took Bariar Sah, then risen to be a Risaldár, in command of his escort, and ordered him to clear the country of the marauders who infested it. Bariar Sah executed this order so efficiently that the Emperor made over to him the Ikauna district, then called Khánpur Maháda. Seventh in descent from Bariar Sah was Ganesh Singh; his brother, Madho Singh, founded the family of Balrámpur (see Indar Kunwár, Maháráni). The grandson of Ganesh Singh was Mahá Singh, the hero of the family, who, in 1627 A.D., obtained from the Emperor Sháh Jahán a grant of the percentage on the Government revenue, called "Hag Chandar," throughout eight Parganá. In 1723 Chain Singh, grandson of Mahá Singh, deputed his brother, Pratáb Singh, to guard the border estate of Dobaha from the attacks of the Bisen Rájá of Gonda. This Pratáb Singh did so effectively that at last he felt himself strong enough to declare himself, independent of his brother the Rájá of Ikauna, as the Rájá of Mankapur, now called Gangwal. He was killed in a fight with the Rájá of Gonda, but his son Jaswant Singh held his own up to the time of his death in 1769 A.D. The grandson of the latter, Rájá Kishan Prasád Singh, slew his kinsman Himmat Singh, the first Rájá of Piágpur. He died without issue; so did his nephews, who succeeded him in turn, the Rájás Harsaran Singh and Sitla Bakhsh Singh. The latter was at first succeeded in 1885 by his widow, the Ráni Sukhráj Kunwár; but after some litigation an agreement was arrived at, by which the present Rájá, the youngest nephew of Rájá Kishan Prasád Singh, and brother of the two preceding Rájás, was installed. He has a son and heir, named Bhya Suraj Prakásh Singh.

Residence.—Gangwal, Bahraich, Oudh.

NARSINGHGARH, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA MAHTAB SINGH, Rájá of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1839; succeeded to the gadi 28th June 1890. Belongs to an Umat Rájput (Hindu) family, descended from Ajab Singh, who was Minister to the Ráwat of Rájgarh. His son, Parása Rám, succeeded him as Minister in 1660 A.D., and ultimately compelled the Ráwat, in 1681, to share his dominions with him—thereby founding the State of Narsinghgarh, which is at present tributary to Indore. Rájá Partáb Singh, father of the present Rájá, succeeded in 1875, his father in 1872 having received from the British Government that hereditary title. The family banner is white with a scarlet bordure, bearing in the centre the effigy of Hanumán, the monkey-god. The area of the State is 623 square miles; its population 112,427, chiefly Hindus, but including about 5000 Muhammadans, and 6000 belonging to aboriginal tribes. His Highness maintains a military force of 318 cavalry, 450 infantry, and 16 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Naulana, Western Málwá, Central India.

NAURANG KHAN, Khán Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 11th March 1859, as a personal distinction, for very distinguished services during the Multán rebellion and the Mutiny of 1857. Belongs to the Gandapur (Afghan) family of Kulachi in the Dera Ismail Khán district of the Punjab. He raised 50 horse and 100 foot for service in the Multán campaign, and was desperately wounded at that time. At the close of the campaign he joined the Police, retiring on a pension after three years; but continued to volunteer for service on the frontier, and his son, Muhammad Zamán Khán, was killed in this service. When the Mutiny broke out in 1857 he raised 600 men; and leaving 200 foot with the Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ismail Khán, he joined Sir Herbert Edwardes with the residue at Pesháwar, and marched at the head of these followers into Hindustan. He was engaged in the actions against the rebels at Jhelum, Delhi, Najafgarh, and elsewhere; and on one occasion saved Lieutenant Lind's life by killing a Sepoy who was about to bayonet that officer when dismounted. For these services he received a jágir in perpetuity, and the title of Khán Bahádur. His son, Muhammad Zamán Khán, mentioned above, left a son named Bakhtiyar Khán. Another son, Mehardil Khán, has three sons—Faiz Muhammad Khán, born 1862; Sayyid Muhammad Khán, born 1864; Abdulla Khán, born 1866. A third son, Sarfaráz Khán, Risaldár, has two sons—Gulzár Khán and Kunidád Khán. A fourth son, Sikandar Khán, has a son named Samandar Khán.

NAWANAGAR, HIS HIGHNESS JAM SHRI SIR VIBHAJI RANMALJI, K.C.S.I., Jám Saheb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 8th May 1827; succeeded to the gadi 22nd February 1852. Belongs to the illustrious Jareja Rájput family that has given ruling families to Kutch, Dhrol, Rájkot, and other States of Western India. Jám Ráwal, said to have been the elder brother of the then Jám of Kutch, emigrated from Kutch and established himself at Nawánagar in 1535. In 1788 the great fort of Nawánagar was constructed under the orders of one of Jám Ráwal's descendants, the Jám Jasaji. The latter died in 1814 without male heirs; and his widow, the Rani Achuba, adopted Ranmalji, who became the Jám Ranmalji, and was the father of the present Jám. The Jám Ranmalji was a popular ruler, and distinguished himself by the ability with which he saved his people from the horrors of the famines of 1834, 1839, and 1846. He was also a famous sportsman and lion-killer. The present Jám is equally distinguished as a sportsman; but he has also earned a great reputation as an administrator, especially in the departments of education and public works. He has also greatly improved the system of revenue-collection, and the administration of justice within his State. On the occasion of the visit to India of His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, the Jám went to Bombay to take part in his reception. Similarly, in 1875, His Highness had the honour of being one of those Princes of Western India who first received His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on the occasion of his memorable visit to India in the winter of 1875-76. In 1877 the Jám was an invited and honoured guest at the Imperial assemblage at Delhi, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India; and he then had the honour of receiving an addition of four guns to his salute, as a personal distinction. On 1st January 1878 he was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He has a son and heir, born about the year 1884. The State has an area of 3791 square miles; and a population of 316,147, chiefly Hindus, but including about 50,000 Muhammadans. His Highness maintains a military force of 191 cavalry, 3060 infantry, and 117 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns, including a personal salute of 4 guns.

Residence.—Nawánagar, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

NAWAZISH ALI KHAN, SIR, K.C.I.E (of Nawabganj), ALIABAD, Nawáb.

Born 1828. The title was conferred on 21st May 1866, as a personal distinction, in recognition of his position, and of the great public services of his distinguished father, the Nawáb Ali Raza Khán Bahádúr, and of himself. Belongs to a Quazilbash or Kazilbash family of high rank in Afghanistan; descended from Sardár Ali Khán, who came from the province of Sherwan on the west coast of the Caspian Sea, with Nádir Sháh, when the latter invaded India. On his return Sardár Ali Khán was appointed Governor of Kandahár. He obtained the district of Hazára, north of Kandahár, on the accession of Ahmad Sháh Duráni, whom he accompanied in his last invasion of India, and by whose instigation he was assassinated. His son, Hidáyat Khán, accompanied Sháh Zamán to Lahore in 1797. When the British army brought back Sháh Shujá to Kábul in 1839, Hidáyat Khán's son, Ali Raza Khán, who was living on his estate, was appointed Chief Agent of the Commissariat Department. During the disasters that followed he remained faithful to British interests; and it was mainly by his aid that the British prisoners were ultimately enabled to make their escape and join the relieving army of General Pollock. He accompanied the British forces to India on the evacuation of Afghanistan; and his estate was confiscated by Muhammad Akbar Khán, in consequence of which he received a British pension. During the Sutlej campaign he joined the British camp with his brothers and 60 horsemen of his tribe; and during the rebellion of 1848-49 furnished 100 horsemen for active service. In 1857 Ali Raza Khán voluntarily raised a troop of horse and sent it to Delhi at his own expense, mortgaging for the purpose his house and property at Lahore; this troop formed part of Hodson's Horse, and served with conspicuous gallantry throughout the Mutiny campaigns. Lieutenant-Colonel H. D. Daly, when commandant of Hodson's Horse, wrote of him in February 1859: "He has served throughout the war, and on all occasions has been conspicuous for chivalric valour. . . . His gallantry has won for him the First Class of the Order of Merit. . . . A braver soldier never took the field." As a reward he received a large grant of lands in Oudh, with the title of Nawáb conferred in 1864; and this, on his death in 1866, was continued to his son, the Nawáb Nawázish Ali Khán. The family have also received a grant of lands in Lahore district in the Punjab. The Nawáb was made an Honorary Assistant Commissioner of the Punjab on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India; and he was for some time a Member of the Imperial Legislative Council of India. On 1st June 1888 he was created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. He has taken a prominent part in the foundation of the Punjab University, and in all important works of public utility or benevolence in that Province.

Residences.—Bahraich, Oudh ; and Lahore, Punjab.

NAYAGARH, RAJA RAGHUNATH SINGH MANDHATA,

Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Succeeded to the gadi 2nd March 1890. Belongs to the Rájput (Hindu) family, of whom there have been twenty-two generations of Rájás in Nayágarh since the time when its founder, Surjya Mani Singh, a scion of the family of the Rájás of Rewah, established himself there. The family obtained at various times from the Rájás of Puri the titles of "Champati Singh Mangráj" and "Mandhata." The late Rájá, Ladhu Kishor Singh Mandhata, was born about 1843 ; and succeeded to the gadi 20th September 1851. The family cognisance or crest is a tiger's head. The area of the State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, is 588 square miles ; its population is 114,622, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 741 men and 9 guns.

NEPAL, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJ-ADHIRAJ PRITHVI BIR

BIKRAM JANG BAHADUR SAH SAHEB BAHADUR

SHAMSHER JANG, Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1875 ; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 17th May 1881. The ruling race of Nepál is the Gurkha, which also furnishes some of the best soldiers of the Indian army. The family of the Mahárájá is said to be of Sisodiya Rájput descent ; claiming descent from the Rájá Prithvi Naráyan, who died in the year 1771 A.D., about three years after the complete conquest of Nepál by his Gurkha troops. One of his descendants, in the time of Warren Hastings, about the year 1790, invaded Tibet on two occasions, and brought back great booty; but the Emperor of China, as Suzerain of Tibet, sent a large army into Nepál in 1792, that advanced within 26 miles of the capital, Khatmandu, and forced the Nepalese to conclude a treaty of submission. Subsequently, between the years 1803 and 1815, the Gurkhas of Nepál, notwithstanding great internal dissensions, overran the Cis-Sutlej territory of the Punjab and the Simla Hill States; but in 1814 the British intervened, expelled the Gurkhas from the Punjab territories in 1815, and in 1816 a treaty was signed, which transferred the control both of those territories and of Kumáun, the Dehra Dun, and the other outlying districts, to the British Power. The late Prime Minister of Nepál, Sir Jang Bahádur, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., was well known in England, and was the virtual ruler of Nepál from 1846 to the time of his death in 1877. He rendered good services in the Mutiny of 1857 by sending Gurkha troops, who gave material help in the reduction of the rebellious province of Oudh. The State has an area of 54,000 square miles, consisting of sub-Himalayan valleys and mountain-ranges. Its population is estimated at 2,000,000 and upwards. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 54 cavalry, 48,200 infantry, and 920 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 21 guns.

Residence.—Khatmandu, Nepál.

NIAMAT KHAN. See Ghulam Muhammad.

NIAMAT-ULLA KHAN (of Rehlu), Rájá.

The title was conferred on 1st August 1879, as a personal distinction. Belongs to a Rájput family, who for many generations were Rájás of Rájauri, in the territory now called Jammu, and belonging to His Highness the Mahárájá of Jammu and Kashmir. The late Rájá, Hamid-ulla Khán, was driven out of the Ráj of Rájauri by the late Chief of Jammu; and he subsequently settled at Rehlu in the Kángra district, receiving an annual allowance from the Jammu Government in compensation for the loss of his estate. Though no longer Rájá of Rájauri, the personal title of Rájá was conferred upon him by the British Government for his services during the time of the Mutiny in 1857; and he was appointed an Honorary Assistant Commissioner of the Punjab. He was succeeded by his eldest son, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Rehlu, Kángra, Punjab.

NIDHAN SINGH (of Mukerian), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár is a younger brother of Sardár Bur Singh of Mukerian—under whose name is given an account of this family.

Residence.—Mukerian, Hoshiárpur, Punjab.

NIEPHRODSYNE (of Manikchari), Mong Rájá.

The title is hereditary. The present Mong Rájá has recently succeeded to the gadi. His predecessor was the Mong Rájá Narabadi, who was born about the year 1848, and succeeded his father, the Mong Rájá Kejosine, in 1869. The family are the hereditary Chiefs of the Palangtha clan of Hill Burmese, sometimes called Maghs (Mugs) or Arakanese—who occupy the northern portion of the Chittagong Hill Tracts. The founder of the family was named Khedu; and he was originally the Dabaing or Sardár of a number of villages. His descendant was Konjai, the grandfather of the late Mong Rájá Narabadi. The latter did good service to the Government in the first Lushai war, by supplying coolies, boats, etc.; and the hereditary title of Mong Rájá has been confirmed to the family.

Residence.—Manikchari, Chittagong Hill Tracts, Bengal.

NIHAL SINGH (of Kang), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár is the younger brother of Sardár Naráyan Singh of Kang; under whose name an account of this family has been given.

Residence.—Kang, Jálándhar, Punjab.

NIHAL SINGH (of Sháhkot), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár is the younger brother of the late Sardár Bakshish Singh, father of Sardár Amar Singh of Sháhkot, under whose name has been given some account of this family. Their ancestor, Sardár Suján Singh, son of Amrika, took possession of Sháhkot and the neighbouring territory in 1759 A.D., on the decline of the Mughal Power. The family subsequently came under the power of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. The Sardár is the son of the late Sardár Kharak Singh, who was one of the grandsons of Sardár Suján Singh. He has a son and heir, named Sundar Singh.

Residence.—Sháhkot, Jálándhar, Punjab.

The title is personal, as the courtesy title of a son of the late Mahárájá Kamal Krishna Deb.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

NILGIRI, RAJA KRISHNA CHANDRA MARDRAJ HARI CHANDAN, *Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1827; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 22nd November 1832. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Hindu) family, claiming descent from Naráyan Singh Bhujang Mandhata Birat Basant Hari Chandan, a scion of the reigning House of Chota Nágpur, who married a daughter of Rájá Pratáp Rudra Deb, Rájá of Orissa about the commencement of the 15th century, and founded the Nilgiri Ráj. From him the present Rájá is twenty-fifth in descent; nearly every successive Rájá bearing the style and titles of Mardráj Hari Chandan, as well as that of Rájá, which was formally recognised by the British government in 1874. The family cognisance is a karaila flower. The area of the State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, is 278 square miles; its population is 50,972, chiefly Hindus, but including 6366 members of various aboriginal tribes, mostly Bhumij. The Rájá maintains a military force of 177 infantry.

Residence.—Nilgiri, Orissa, Bengal.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1861; succeeded to the gadi as a minor in 1864. Belongs to a Bhilala family. The population of the State is about 4600, chiefly Hindus. The Bhumia maintains a military force of 2 cavalry and 28 infantry. The State is tributary to Dhár; and the Bhumia is responsible for the police of the road between Dhár and Sultánpur.

Residence.—Tirla, Bhopáwar, Central India.

NIZAM-UD-DIN. See Muhammad Nizám-ud-din.

NIZAM-UD-DIN AHMAD, Khán Bahádur, Munfiz Jang.

The title is personal, and was conferred by the Nawáb of the Carnatic, and recognised on 16th December 1890. The Khán Bahádur was one of the Chief Officers of the last Nawáb of the Carnatic.

Residence.—Madras.

NIZAM-UD-DIN KHAN (of Mamdot), Nawáb.

Born 1862. The title is hereditary, and was conferred on 5th December 1864. The ancestors of the Chiefs of Mamdot, in the Lahore division of the Punjab, were Patháns, who came from Kandahár in 1570 A.D., and settled at Kasur, south of Lahore. When the Sikhs rose to power they experienced great opposition from this Pathán colony. Mahárájá Ranjit Singh repeatedly attacked Kasur, but without effect; till at last, in 1807, Kutb-ud-din, then Chief of Kasur, agreed to retire to the territory of Mamdot, which he had recently conquered from the Rai of Raikot. In 1831 Kutb-ud-din's nephew, Fateh-ud-din Khán, surprised his uncle, with the connivance (it was said) of Ranjit Singh, and drove him out of the country; and shortly afterwards Kutb-ud-din died at Amritsar. The Mahárájá Ranjit Singh then ousted Fateh-ud-din; and installed Jamál-ud-din Khán, elder son of Kutb-ud-din, in his father's possessions. When the control of the country passed to the British Government, Jamál-ud-din, for services rendered during the Sutlej campaign, was at first elevated to the position of a Ruling (feudatory) Chief. He, however, greatly abused his powers, and was deprived of them in 1856, the Mamdot territory being incorporated with the Firuzpur district, and in 1863 he died of apoplexy. His younger brother, Jálal-ud-din Khán, had been in no way connected with his misgovernment. In the rebellion of 1848, and again during the Mutiny of 1857, he rendered faithful service to Government; so in 1864 he was declared to be the hereditary Nawáb of Mamdot, to the exclusion of the sons of Jamál-ud-din. In 1870 he was made an Honorary Magistrate, and died in 1875. The present Nawáb was educated at Lahore with the Nawáb of Baháwalpur.

Residence.—Mamdot, Lahore, Punjab.

ORCHHA, HIS HIGHNESS SARAMAD-I-RAJAHA-I-BUNDELKHAND, MAHARAJA MAHINDRA SAWAI PRATAP SINGH BAHADUR, Mahārājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1854; succeeded to the gadi 15th March 1874. Is the head of the great Bundela family of Garhwar Rájputs, which has given ruling families to Panna, Dattia, Ajaigarh, Charkhári, Bijáwar, Sarila, Jigni, Jaso, Lughasi, and other Chiefships of Bundelkhand. In legendary times the Garhwar Rájputs were ruling at Benares; and on the subversion of that throne by the Musalmáns, Hem Kurn, surnamed Pancham, migrated westward. His son, Bir Singh, took the clan name of Bundela, by which his family and the country of Bundelkhand has ever since been known, and settled at Mau Mahoni in the north-west of that Province in the 13th century A.D. The family extended its possessions southward during the next hundred years; and a descendant named Sánpál took possession of Korár, east of Jhánsi, in the 14th century. In 1532 A.D. Rudra Pratáb, then the Chief of the Bundelas, founded Orchha. From his younger son, Udyajit, sprang the many families of the Eastern Bundelas (Panna, Ajaigarh, etc.); whilst Matkur Sah, the elder son, was the ancestor of the Chiefs of Orchha, Dattia, and other Western States. His son, the Rájá Bir Singh Deo, was famous in the reigns of the Emperors Akbar and Jahángir, and was the founder of many great public works. Orchha was the only State of Bundelkhand that did not fall under the power of the Peshwás; though the Mahrattas succeeded in dismembering it, by conquering Jhánsi and forming it into a new and ultimately a powerful State. When Bundelkhand passed under British control, Rájá Vikramáditya Mahendra was the Chief of Orchha; and by the treaty of 1812 he became a feudatory of the British Power. He died in 1834, and, after some disputes, was succeeded by Sujan Singh. On the death of the latter his widow adopted Hamir Singh, a descendant of the same family; and he was succeeded in 1874 by his younger brother, the present Mahārājá. In 1882 His Highness received the additional title of Sawai. The area of the State is 1933 square miles; its population 311,514, chiefly Hindus, but including 9560 Muhammadans, and 7233 Jains. His Highness maintains a military force of 350 cavalry, 4400 infantry, and 90 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns (including 2 guns personal).

Residence.—Tehri, Bundelkhand, Central India.

PADAMJI PESTANJI, Khán Bahádur.

Born 1820. The title was conferred on 29th May 1860, as a personal distinction, both on the Khán Bahádur himself and on his father, the late Khán Bahádur Pestanji Sorábji, for services during the Mutiny of 1857, and generally for services rendered in the conveyance of the Royal mails for a period extending over twenty-eight years. The late Khán Bahádur Pestanji Sorábji, a respected Parsi gentleman, had charge of the mail service between Bombay and Nágpur, and also other lines reaching to the Madras frontier. The Khán Bahádur Padamji Pestanji has been a Municipal Commissioner for the City of Poona (1860-74); was created a First-class Sardár of the Deccan, 1872; appointed a Member of the Legislative Council of Bombay (1874-76); is a Fellow of the University of Bombay; and has been exempted from personal attendance in Civil Courts. Has founded and maintained three Dharmshálas (rest-houses for poor travellers), a charitable dispensary school, and some other benevolent and religious institutions. Has four sons—Dorábji, born 1838; Naoroji, born 1841; Sorábji, born 1855; Bairámji, born 1860.

Residence.—Bhawánipet, Poona, Bombay.

PADMAN SINGH, THAKUR (of Khariar), Rájá.

The title was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty.

Residence.—Khariar, Raipur, Central Provinces.

PADMANAND SINGH (of Baneli), Rájá Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 2nd January 1888, as a personal distinction, on his succeeding his father, the late Rájá Lila Nanda Singh Bahádur. The great-grandfather of the present Rájá, Dular Singh, received the title of Rájá Bahádur for services rendered to the British Government in the Nepál war. Rájá Dular Singh died in 1821; and the title was continued to his son, Rájá Bidya Nanda Singh. The latter died in 1851, and the title was in like manner continued to his son, Rájá Lila Nanda Singh, the father of the present Rájá, as a personal distinction.

Residence.—Purniah, Bengal.

PAHAR SINGH (of Narhat), Rao.

Born 1854. The title is hereditary. The Rao is descended from the illustrious family of the Bundela Rájputs that has given its name to the Province of Bundelkhand, and ruling Houses to most of the States of Bundelkhand, including Orchha, Panna, Dattia, etc. (q.v.) The Narhat family is an offshoot of that of the Rájá Sardár Singh Bahádur of Katehra (q.v.) In 1851 Rao Bakht Báli, father of the present Rao, was in possession of the estate.

Residence.—Narhat, Lalitpur, North-Western Provinces.

PAHARI BANKA, DIWAN MIHRBAN SINGH, Diwán of.

A Ruling Chief.

Succeeded to the gadi 14th November 1890. Belongs to the great Bundela Rájput family, the head of which is the Mahárájá of Orchha (q.v.). Rai Singh, a descendant of the youngest son of Bir Singh Deo, held from his kinsman, the Chief of Orchha, the Burágáon jágir, and this he divided among his eight sons—whence the States so formed were called the Hashtháya jágirs, or “Appanages of the eight brothers.” Only four of these now exist—Dhurwai, Bijna, Tori, and last Pahári Banka, which was given to Umed Singh, the youngest son of Rai Singh. His great-grandson, the Diwán Ishri Singh, obtained a sanad from the British Government in 1823 confirming him in the possession of this State. He was succeeded by the Diwán Bijai Bahádur; who was in turn followed by the late Diwán Piyáriju, father of the present Diwán. The area of the State is about 5 square miles; its population is 1094, chiefly Hindus. The Diwán maintains a military force of 20 men.

Residence.—Pahári Banka, Bundelkhand, Central India.

PAHRA, CHAUBE RADHA CHARAN, Jágirdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 17th August 1856; succeeded to the gadi 14th January 1868. Belongs to a Chaubé Bráhman Hindu family, claiming descent from Rám Krishna Chaubé, Káldár (Governor of the Fortress) of Kálinjar, from whom descend also the other three branches of “the Kálinjar Chaubés,” viz. the Chiefs of Paldeo, Taraon, and Bhaisaunda (q.v.) His son, Sálíg Rám, received a sanad from the British Government, confirming him in the possession of Pahra. His great-grandson is the present Jágirdár. The area of the State is 10 square miles; its population is 4016, chiefly Hindus. The Chief maintains a military force of 12 cavalry, 100 infantry, and 2 guns.

Residence.—Pahra, Bundelkhand, Central India.

PAL, JAREJA RATAN SINGH, Tálukdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1841; succeeded to the gadi 25th October 1879. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, of the Jareja clan. The State, which is tributary to Baroda and Junágarh, has an area of 21 square miles, and a population of 1214, chiefly Hindus. The Tálukdár maintains a military force of 2 cavalry and 16 infantry.

Residence.—Pal, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

PAL LAHARA, RAJA GANESHWAR PAL, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1884; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 30th August 1888. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Rájput Hindu) family, claiming descent from Rájá Santosh Pál, alias Pat Ganeshwar Pál. Twenty-two generations have intervened, in regular descent from father to son, between the founder of the family and the present Rájá, each Rájá receiving alternately either the style of "Pat Ganeshwar Pál" or "Pat Muni Pál." The late Rájá, Chintámani Pál, was styled "Pat Muni Pál"; he succeeded to the gadi in 1860. The State had for a long time been included in that of Keunjhar, the Rájá having been treated as a feudatory of Keunjhar. But this caused many feuds, and Pál Lahara was at length declared a British feudatory, independent of Keunjhar. The late Pat Muni Pál rendered distinguished services during the operations for the suppression of the Keunjhar rebellion in 1867-68, and received as a reward the title of Rájá Bahádur as a personal distinction. He died in 1888, and was succeeded by the present Rájá, styled in turn Pat Ganeshwar Pál. The family cognisance or crest is the cobra or hooded snake. The area of the State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, is 452 square miles; its population is 14,887, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 94 infantry.

Residence.—Pál Lahara, Orissa, Bengal.

PALAJ, THAKUR DAULAT SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1878; succeeded to the gadi as a minor. The State has a population of 1701. The Thákur belongs to a Koli (aboriginal) family.

Residence.—Palaj, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

PALANJI RATANJI, Khán Sahab.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 18th August 1881.

Residence.—Surat, Bombay.

PALANPUR, HIS HIGHNESS SIR SHER MUHAMMAD KHAN, LOHANI, K.C.I.E., Diván of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1852; succeeded to the gadi 19th September 1877. Belongs to an Afghán family of the Loháni clan, whose ancestors occupied Behár in the time of the Emperor Humáyun. Ghazni Khán, the Chief, obtained the title of Diván from the Emperor Akbar in 1597, for successfully repelling an invasion of Afgháns, and he was also made Governor of Lahore. His descendant in 1682 received the Province of Jhálod (including Pálanpur, Disa, and other districts) from the Emperor Aurangzeb; but in 1698 his successor was driven westward by the Ráhtor Rájputs of Márwár, and settled in Pálanpur, where the family has ever since remained. In 1809 the State came under British control. In 1812 the Diván Firoz Khán was murdered by his Sindi guards; his son, Diván Fateh Singh, was reinstated by British troops under General Holmes, but was ultimately removed from the chiefship for maladministration. The late Diwán Zoráwar Khán was granted the additional title of "His Excellency"; he succeeded to the gadí in 1854, and dying in 1877 was succeeded by his son, the present Diwán. The family banner is crimson, with a bordure vert. The area of the State is 3150 square miles, with a population of 236,461, chiefly Hindus, but including 27,256 Muhammadans. His Highness the Diwán maintains a military force of 294 cavalry, 697 infantry, and 80 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns. Created a Knight Commander of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 2nd January 1893.

Residence.—Pálanpur, Bombay.

PALASNI, THAKUR JITSINGHJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1864. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The area of the State, which is tributary to Baroda, is about 6 square miles.

Residence.—Palasni, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

PALASVIHIR, NAIK NAWSA walad FIRIA, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1830. Belongs to a Bhil (aboriginal tribe) family. The area of the State, which is one of the Dang States of Khándesh, is about 2 square miles; its population about 220, chiefly Bhils.

Residence.—Palasvihir, Khándesh, Bombay.

PALDEO, RAO CHAUBE ANRUDH SINGH, Jágirdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 18th October 1837; succeeded to the gadí 2nd April 1874. Belongs to the Chaubé Bráhmaṇ family, known as the "Kálinjar Chaubé Jágirdárs," of whom there are now four Ruling Chiefs—those of Paldeo, Taraon, Bhaisaunda, and Pahra (q.v.) Descended from Chaubé Rám Krishna, who was kiládár (Governor of the Fortress) of the ancient and famous fort of Kálinjar under the Chief of Panna. His sons successfully defended the fort against Ali Bahádúr, who died in the attempt to take it. At a later period the family held the fort for some time against British troops; but ultimately they came to terms, and received Kálinjar and some territory around it as a jágir. Subsequently the Government resumed the fort of Kálinjar, giving the four brothers of the Chaubé family the four States named above, as feudatory jágirs, in exchange. Thus Baldeo Singh became the first Jágirdár of Paldeo, and his son, Dariao Singh, received a sanad from the British Government. The present Jágirdár is fifth in descent from him; and at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi in January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, he received the title of Rao as a personal distinction. The area of the State is 28 square miles; its population is 8824, chiefly Hindus. The Rao maintains a military force of 10 cavalry, 200 infantry, and 3 guns.

Residence.—Paldeo, Bundelkhand, Central India.

PALITANA, THAKUR SAHEB MANSINGHJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1863; succeeded to the gadi 24th November 1885. Belongs to the same family of Gohel Rájputs as that of His Highness the Mahárájá of Bhaunagar; descended from ancestors who were driven out of Márwár in Rájputána by the Ráhtors in the 12th century. The late Thákur Saheb Sursinghji succeeded to the gadi on 1st June 1860, and dying in 1885, was succeeded by his eldest son, the present Thákur. The State is famous for the greatest of all the sacred hills of the Jains, Satrunjaya, which is covered with a very large number of magnificent Jain temples. The area of the State is 289 square miles; its population is 49,271, chiefly Hindus, but including 3581 Muhammadans. The Thákur Saheb maintains a military force of 74 cavalry, 401 infantry, and 7 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Pálitána, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

PANCHAM SINGH, Rao.

Born 31st May 1860. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Bundela Rájput family; descended from Partábjú, who in early times founded the village of Swasa in Panwári, and obtained from the Rájá Jagat Ráj of Jaitpur (son of the Bundela Mahárájá Chhatarsal—see Ajaigarh) a grant of the village with the title of Rao. The Rao has a son and heir, named Bhopál Singh.

Residence.—Swasa, Panwári, Hamirpur, North-Western Provinces.

PANCHANAN BANARJI, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 2nd April 1874, as a personal distinction, in recognition of long and meritorious services to the State in the Judicial Department. The Rai Bahádur was formerly Judge of the Small Cause Courts at Hugli, Serampur, and Howrah.

Residence.—Hugli, Bengal.

PANDURANG HARI VAIDYA, Rao Bahádur.

The title is personal, and was conferred on 1st January 1878.

Residence.—Dewas, Central India.

PANGANUR, SUGATUR YIMMIDI SANKARA PAYAL YESUNATH, BAHADUR, C.I.E., Zamindár of.

Born 1st January 1830; succeeded as Zamindár of Panganur on 6th July 1847. His ancestor in the 15th century held the village of Sugatur under the Rájás of Vijayanagar. Later on the family founded the town of Kolár in Mysore, now famous for its gold mines, and acquired considerable territory in that neighbourhood. In the 16th century two brothers divided the estates between them; and by this partition the ancestor of the present Zamindár acquired Kolár and Sugatur. Later on the family extended its influence in the direction of Cuddapah (Kadapá), and Panganur was seized and fortified, and this and other acquisitions were held under the Nawábs of Cuddapah. In 1757 A.D. the Mahrattas overran the Zamindári, half of which was ceded to them. The Zamindár subsequently became subject to Haidar Ali of Mysore, and passed under British control on the conquest of that dynasty. The Zamindár has two sons—Raje Sugatur Yimmidi Vira Basavanna Payal Yesunath Bahádur Varu, and Raje Sugatur Yimmidi Kumára Chikkara Payal Yesunath Bahádur Varu. The family banner bears the device of a bull. The Zamindár was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire on 1st January 1884.

Residence.—Panganur, North Arcot, Madras.

PANJAB SINGH (of Dhandwal), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár is brother of Sardár Partáb Singh of Dhandwal (q.v.); belongs to a Jat family of Sikhs, whose founder, Sardár Mán Singh, conquered territory on both sides of the Sutlej in the year 1759 A.D. His son, Sardár Joga Singh, was succeeded in turn by his son, Sardár Chanda Singh, the father of the Sardárs Partáb Singh, Panjáb Singh, and Sher Singh, all of Dhandwal.

Residence.—Dhandwal, Hoshiárpur, Punjab.

PANNA, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA MAHINDRA SIR
RUDRA PRATAP SINGH MAHINDAR BAHADUR, K.C.S.I.,
Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 10th July 1848; succeeded to the gadi 9th June 1870. Belongs to the great Bundela Rájput family, of which His Highness the Mahárájá of Orchha (q.v.) is the senior representative, and of which junior branches are the ruling families in Dattia, Garrauli, Lughási (q.v.), and many other States in Bundelkhand, which Province takes its name from this clan. The Panna House is descended from Udyajit, younger son of Rudra Pratáb, the Bundela founder of the Orchha State. Udyajit's grandson, Champat Rai, made himself independent both of Orchha and of the Musalmáns; and his son, the Mahárájá Chhatrasal, acquired very extensive dominions in Eastern and Northern Bundelkhand. His eldest son, Hardi Sah, became Chief of Panna, while his second son was the ancestor of the Chiefs of Ajaigarh, Charkhári, Bijáwar, and Sarila; his third son was the ancestor of the Jigni family, and his fourth son the ancestor of the Jasu Chiefs. Hardi Sah's son was named Sobha Singh, and under his rule and that of his two successors the power and extent of the State were diminished by frequent wars, and the setting-up of independent chieftainships within its borders. The great-grandson of Sobha Singh was named Kishor Singh, and he obtained a sanad from the British Government in 1807. The late Mahárájá rendered valuable services during the Mutiny of 1857; in reward for which he obtained a handsome khilat, the privilege of adoption, and a personal salute of 13 guns. The present Mahárájá succeeded in 1870; and in 1876 was invested with the insignia of a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The area of the State is 2568 square miles; its population is 227,306, chiefly Hindus, but including 5989 Muhammadans and 16,690 belonging to various aboriginal tribes. It is famous as producing the largest supply of diamonds of any district in India in modern times. His Highness maintains a military force of 165 cavalry, 1157 infantry, 36 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 13 guns (including 2 guns personal).

Residence.—Panna, Bundelkhand, Central India.

Prime Minister of Udaipur.

Born August 1843. The title of Rai was conferred on 1st January 1877, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. The title of "His Excellency" is the courtesy title of the Rai as Prime Minister of the State of Udaipur, Rájputána. Belongs to a family that long occupied a position of influence in Bikanir, Rájputána, and that first acquired the designation of "Mehta" from an ancestor, Kuram Chand becoming, some centuries ago, Prime Minister of the State of Bikanir. Kuram Chand, Mehta, also received a jágir and honours from the Emperor of Delhi. Towards the end of the 16th century a grandson of Kuram Chand, Mehta, moved to Udaipur, and settled there; and his descendants, Agarji Mehta and Hunsráji Mehta, rose to high office under the Maharáná Ari Singhji in 1762 A.D., receiving charge of the fort and district of Mandalgarh in Mewár. Three of the descendants of Agarji Mehta have been Prime Ministers of Udaipur before the present Rai, namely, Devi Chand, Sher Singh, and Gokul Chand. The Mehta Murali Dhar, father of the Rai, died in 1886. The Rai was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire in 1887. In 1858 he married the daughter of Rai Chhagan Lal, and has issue, a son and heir, Kunwár Fateh Lal Mehta, born 1868, and educated at the Ajmir College.

Residence.—Udaipur, Rájputána.

PANTH PIPLODA, NARAYAN RAO JANARDHAN, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1869; succeeded to the gadi in 1887. Belongs to a Deccan Bráhmaṇ family, and is a co-sharer in the Chiefship of this State with Pandit Gopál Rao Naráyan. The population of the State is 4086, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Panth Piploda, Western Málwá, Central India.

PAP SINGH (of Hardoi), Rájá.

Born 4th June 1813. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Sengar Rájput family (see Raghbir Singh, Rájá of Rura), claiming descent from Sáran Deo, who obtained the title of Rájá with the jágir of Sahao, about the year 1095 A.D., and whose descendants are said to have remained in possession until the Bundela invasion of the Mahárájá Chhatar Sál. One of these, the Rájá Gokul Chand, obtained a jágir from the Peshwá when the latter conquered Jalaun; but on refusing to pay quit-rent he was ejected by Govind Rao Pandit, who ultimately conferred on him the jágir of Hardoi in Jalaun. The Rájá has a son and heir, Kunwár Nirand Singh.

Residence.—Hardoi, Jalaun, North-Western Provinces.

PARAN CHANDRA BOSE, Rai Bahádur.

Has rendered good service as Honorary Magistrate of the Mániktaál Municipal Bench in the Twenty-Parganá. Received the title as a personal distinction, 25th May 1892.

Residence.—Calcutta.

PARAPANAD, Valiya Rájá of. See Rájá Rájá Varma Rájá, Rájá.

PARBAL PARTAB SINGH (of Malhajini), Rájá.

Born 20th August 1867. The title is hereditary. The Rájá is Chief of the Parihár clan of Rájputs; descended from Mahip Singh, who came from Jagni near Mahoba, and settled in the district of Etáwah about seventy-five years ago. The Parihárs are a small clan of Rájputs, occupying the lands between the rivers Kuári and Chambal, which under the name Parihára formed a portion of Sarkár Trichh in the time of the Emperor Akbar. They were notorious for their lawless character, and for harbouring gangs of Thags and Dakaits. Their great ancestor was Bilan Deo, from whom the seventh in descent was Nahar Deo. On the defeat of Anang Pál of Delhi in the 11th century the Chief of the Parihárs, Sumit Rai, fled to the wild region of the Panchnadi and colonised it, giving it the name Parihára. Rájá Mahipat Singh, who died about 1857, was succeeded by his son, Rájá Bijai Singh, who married a daughter of the Rájá of Bhinga. He died in 1867, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, then a minor, the estate being under the Court of Wards till 1888. The Rájá was educated at the Etáwah High School. He married the second daughter of the Rájá Sheopál Singh (g.v.) of Murarmau, in the Rai Bareli district of Oudh, the Chief of the Bais Tilokchandi clan. The title of Rájá was recognised as hereditary in 1889.

Residence.—Malhajini, Etáwah, North-Western Provinces.

PARBHUDAS KISHANDAS MODI, Rao Bahádur.

Born 4th October 1831. The title was conferred on 26th June 1884, as a personal distinction, for long and meritorious service in the Government Service, in which he attained to the rank of Acting Assistant Accountant-General of Bombay. He entered the Service in April 1851, and retired with a good-service pension in April 1888, having greatly distinguished himself. The Rao Bahádur has been thrice married—(1) in March 1848, to Jamnabái, daughter of Kásidás Rámdás, Esq., of Surat; she died in 1859; (2) in February 1865, to Jamnabái, daughter of Gaurdhandás Premanand, Esq., of Baroda; she died in 1877: (3) in March 1878, to Pránkorbái, daughter of Vithaldás Farukhsiyárdas, Esq., of Dharangaon, Khándesh. The Rao Bahádur has adopted (in May 1886) a son, named Nagindás Parbhudás Kishandás Modi, born in 1878. The Rao Bahádur belongs to a Jádavbansi Hallai Bhattia family, and was educated at Surat. He was appointed a Justice of the Peace for Bombay in 1890.

Residence.—Bombay.

PARDUMAN SINGH (of Rámgarh), Mián.

The title is hereditary, the Mián being the eldest son of Sardár Ranjit Singh of Rámgarh in the Ambála district. Belongs to a Rájput family, claiming immediate descent from the Rájás of Kahlur (q.v.) or Biláspur. Rájá Singar Chand, Rájá of Biláspur, had two sons, the elder of whom, Megh Chand, inherited his father's Ráj, while the younger, Kalál Chand, was the ancestor of the Rámgarh Sardárs. Tenth in descent from him was Surat Singh, whose son, Khusal Singh, with three brothers, joined the Náhan Rájá in making large conquests, out of which they were permitted to retain Rámgarh. The three brothers died without issue. Khusal Singh built a fort at Rámgarh, and his two sons, the Sardárs Maldeo Singh and Naráyan Dás Singh, on his death divided his lands between them. One of the grandsons of Sardár Maldeo Singh was Sardár Ranjit Singh of Rámgarh, who was a jágiridár Magistrate in the Ambála district, and father of Mián Pardumán Singh.

Residence.—Rámgarh, Ambála, Punjab.

PARIKUD, Rájá of. See Gaur Chander.

PARON, RAJA GAJANDHAR SINGH, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1869: succeeded to the gadí as a minor 31st December 1882. Belongs to the illustrious family of the Chiefs of the great Kachhwáha clan of Rájputs, from which springs the family of His Highness the Mahárájá of Jaipur; claiming descent from the second son of the legendary Solar hero, Ráma, and from the ancient Hindu Emperors of Ajudhya of the Surjya Vansa or Solar dynasty. According to the Rájput chronicles the seventy-second in descent from Ráma was the Rájá Nála, the hero of the famous Sanskrit poem of Nála and Dámáyánti, who migrated westward (possibly in the 3rd century), and founded the city of Narwar and the kingdom (renowned in classical story) of Nishidha. One of the sons of Sora Singh, Thákur of Narwár, thirty-third in descent from Rájá Nála, was Dhola Rai, who became the founder of the great State of Dhundar in Rájputána, better known as Jaipur. The Kachhwaha Thákurs of Narwár, however, with an experience probably unique in Indian history, seem to have continued in possession of that place from the semi-legendary times of the Rájá Nála, through all the vicissitudes of the Hindu, Pathán, and Mughal periods of domination, right down to the time of the Mahrattas. At the commencement of the present century the Thákur Madhu Singh, of the line of Nála, was still in possession of Narwár, his family having held it during the lapse of at least fifteen centuries. But at last Madhu Singh was driven out by Daulat Rao Sindhia, and revenged himself by continually raiding and plundering in the territory of Gwalior. In 1818 Madhu Singh was taken under British protection, and granted the State of Paron as a feudatory of Gwalior, on condition of protecting the Gwalior territory from robbers. In 1857 Madhu Singh's successor, Rájá Mán Singh, at first joined the mutineers, but in 1859 he surrendered, under promise of being amnestied. Subsequently he rendered valuable service to the Government in connection with the capture of Tantia Topi, and was granted an increase of territory, with a pension. In 1883 Rájá Mán Singh died, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, then a minor. The population of the State is 7328, chiefly Hindus; it contains about thirty-four villages, of which the town of Paron is the chief.

Residence.—Paron, Guna, Central India.

PARTAB. See Pratáp.

PARTAB BAHADUR SINGH (of Katari), Rájá.

Born 10th March 1874. The title is hereditary, having been so recognised in 1864. Belongs to the important Kanhpuria family of Rájputs, of whom the Rájá Surpál Singh Bahádur (q.v.) is the chief. The great ancestor of the Kanhpurias was Kanh, from whose second son, Rahas, was descended Balbhaddar Singh, the progenitor of the Rájás of Katári. The late Rájá Sarnám Singh died childless in February 1869, leaving the estate to his widow, Ráni Harnáth Kunwár, for life, with power to nominate an heir. She died on 5th May 1886, having left the estate to the present Rájá, who was one of the nearest male relatives of Rájá Sarnám Singh, being a descendant of Barwand Singh, Rájá Sarnám Singh's uncle.

Residence.—Katári, Sultánpur, Oudh.

PARTAB BAHADUR SINGH (of Tiraul), Rájá.

Succeeded to the title in 1889. The title was conferred on 1st January 1877, as a personal distinction, on the present Rájá's grandfather, the late Rájá Ajit Singh of Tiraul, in recognition of his signal services during the Mutiny of 1859; and in 1888 the personal title was ordered to be for two generations, i.e. for the Rájá Ajit Singh and his successor. Belongs to the very ancient Sombansi Rájput family of the old Rájás of Partágarh, being descended from Suján Sáh, a younger son of the Rájá Sangram Sáh of Partágarh. During the Mutiny of 1857, when the Rájá Guláb Singh of Tiraul refused to receive the fugitives from Sultánpur, his nephew, Ajit Singh, then of Mallupur, took them into his fort, protected them for many days, and then escorted them himself, with as many followers as he could command, to Allahabad. For this his house and property were sacked by the rebels, and he had to flee from Oudh. He continued loyally to render good services throughout the period of the disturbances, and at the restoration of order received all the Tiraul estates, with a khilat, and ultimately with the title of Rájá. He was an Honorary Magistrate, and had the powers of an Assistant Collector. He died in 1889, and was succeeded (under the orders of 1888) by his grandson, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Tiraul, Partágarh, Oudh.

PARTAB BAHADUR SINGH (of Kurwár), Rájá.

Born 31st August 1876. The title is hereditary, having been so recognised in December 1864. The Rájá is the chief representative of the great Hindu Bachgoti sept of the illustrious Chauhán clan of Rájputs, claiming descent from Cháhir Deo, brother of the renowned Prithvi Ráj, last Chauhán Emperor of Delhi and Ajmir. His descendant, Bariar Singh, fled from the wrath of the Emperor Alá-ud-din Khilji, and, wandering eastward, settled in the Sultánpur district. He married the daughter of Rájá Rám Deo, the Bilkharia Rájá of Patti, and ultimately ousting his brother-in-law, seized the estate and the famous fort of Kot Bilkhar. He was succeeded at Kot Bilkhar by his youngest son, Ráj Singh, who had three sons, of whom the second, Rup Singh, became the ancestor of the Hindu Bachgoti Rájás of Kurwár and of the Musalmán Bachgoti Rájás of Hasanpur (see Muhammad Ali Khán, Rájá of Hasanpur). The late Rájá Madho Pratáb Singh of Kurwár died without heirs, and left the estate to his widow, Ráni Kishnáth Kunwár. She adopted the present Rájá, and left him the estate on her death in June 1885. He is a minor, the estate being under the Court of Wards, and is being educated at the Wards' College, Agra.

Residence.—Sultánpur, Oudh.

PARTAB CHAND, Rai Bahádur.

Is an eminent Banker of Allahabad. Received the title as a personal distinction on 25th May 1892.

Residence.—Allahabad, North-Western Provinces.

PARTAB NARAYAN SINGH (of Mahdauna), The Hon. Rájá, Mahárájá Bahádur.

Born 13th July 1855. The first title (Rájá) is hereditary, the second (Mahárájá) is personal, and was conferred on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. The Mahárájá is the grandson and successor of the famous Mahárájá Mán Singh of Mahdauna, one of the most prominent of the Oudh Tálukdárs during the Mutiny of 1857. Belongs to a Sankaldip (or Ceylon) Bráhman family, whose founder, Sadásukh Páthak, was Chaudhri of Bhojpur. His great-grandson, Bakhtáwar Singh, commenced life as a trooper in the 8th Light Cavalry. He attracted, when on leave at Lucknow, the notice of the Nawáb Saádat Ali Khán, who obtained his discharge, and appointed him a jamádar, and afterwards a risaldár. He was still further advanced by the succeeding Kings of Oudh, and a farmán of King Muhammad Ali Sháh conferred upon him the Ráj of Mahdauna, with the title of Rájá and the rank of premier Rájá in Oudh. He was the King's Muhtamin, or Quartermaster-General of the Resident's camp, and in 1840 accompanied Sir William Sleeman on his memorable tour through Oudh. Rájá Bakhtáwar Singh's younger brother, Darshan Singh, was in 1827 appointed Názim of Sultánpur and Faizabad, with the titles of Rájá Bahádur and Saltanat Bahádur. Darshan Singh died in 1844, and in 1845 his youngest son, the late Mahárájá Mán Singh (mentioned above, the grandfather of the present Mahárájá), was appointed Názim of Daryabad, Rudauli, and Sultánpur. He obtained from the King of Oudh the title of Rájá Bahádur for capturing a revenue defaulter of Surájpur, and that of Saltanat Bahádúr for arresting a notorious bandit. Sleeman narrates at length how Rájá Mán Singh "removed" Harpál Singh, Gargbansi of Maniarpur, for which feat he was known as Kaim Jang ("Steadfast in war"). In 1855 Rájá Bakhtáwar Singh died childless, leaving his large estates to his nephew and adopted son, Rájá Mán Singh. After the annexation Rájá Mán Singh was deprived of his estate as a defaulter in the payment of the revenue. During the Mutiny he saved the lives of a very large number of European refugees, and though at first for a time he took part with the rebels, he subsequently strenuously assisted the Government in the suppression of the Mutiny and the restoration of order. For these services he obtained the title of Mahárájá Bahádúr, and the grant of the extensive confiscated estates of the Rájá of Gonda. In 1869 he was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, and died in his fiftieth year, on 11th October 1870, and was succeeded by his widow, the Maháráni Sobhao Kunwár. In 1875 the Maháráni appointed another heir, but, after much litigation, the Privy Council decided in favour of the succession of the present Mahárájá, who is the son of Narsingh Naráyan Singh of Ajudhya by a daughter of the late Mahárájá. He ranks third among the Barons of Oudh, and at present enjoys the title of Honourable, as a Member of the Legislative Council of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

Residence.—Sháhganj, Faizabad, Oudh.

PARTAB SINGH (of Ghanauli), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár, with his brother Sardár Uttam Singh of Ghanauli, being representative of one branch of the family of Sikh Sardárs descended from Sardár Khushal Singh, who seized the town of Jálandhar, and conquered Ghanauli and other territories in the Cis-Sutlej States in 1756 A.D. He was succeeded by his two sons, the Sardárs Budh Singh and Sudh Singh, of whom the latter died childless, and the former had six sons, whose sons are at present the Sardárs of Ghanauli, Manauli, Bhunga, and Kardaula. Sardár Partáb Singh of Ghanauli is a son of the late Sardár Bhopál Singh, who was the second son of Sardár Budh Singh. The family lost their Trans-Sutlej possessions to the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh; for their Cis-Sutlej possession they came under British control with the other Cis-Sutlej Chiefs. They rendered valuable services during the Mutiny of 1857, and received as a reward large remissions of the commutation tax.

Residence.—Ghanauli, Ambála, Punjab.

PARTAB SINGH (of Manak Majra), Sardár.

Born 1850. The title is hereditary. The Sardár belongs to a Jat family of Sikh Sardárs, descended from Sardár Rám Singh, who acquired the territory of Buner and other lands by conquest in 1751 A.D. His son was the Sardár Ranjit Singh, two of whose grandsons were the late Sardár Basawa Singh and the Sardár Bhagwán Singh (q.v.) Sardár Basawa Singh's two sons are the Sardár Partáb Singh of Manak Majra, and his younger brother Sardár Naráyan Singh. The family has rendered good service to the British Government during the Gurkha Campaign, the first Sikh war, and the Mutiny of 1857.

Residence.—Manak Majra, Ambála, Punjab.

PARTAB SINGH (of Miánpur), Sardár.

Born 1846. The title is hereditary, the Sardár being the representative of a Kshatriya family of Fatehabad and Verowal on the Biás, descended from Lala Jaswant Rai. His grandson, Sardár Gurdit Singh, acquired Miánpur by conquest in the last century, and, dying in 1791 A.D., was succeeded by his son, Sardár Dál Singh. The eldest son of the latter was Sardár Diwán Singh, father of Sardár Partáb Singh; whilst the descendants of the second son, Sardár Rám Singh, hold jágirs in Una territory, Hoshiárpur district; and the third son, Sardár Kharak Singh, died without issue. Sardár Diwán Singh rendered good service in the war of 1845-46, and was himself present at the battle of Firuzshahr, as well as during the Mutiny of 1857, for which services the family received permanent benefits in the way of remissions of commutation tax. Sardár Partáb Singh has a son and heir, Sardár Shamsher Singh.

Residence.—Miánpur, Ambála, Punjab.

PARTAB SINGH (of Dhandwal), Sardár.

Born 1820. The title is hereditary. The Sardár is brother of Sardár Panjáb Singh of Dhandwal (q.v.); belongs to a Jat family of Sikhs, whose founder, Sardár Mán Singh, conquered territory on both sides of the Sutlej in the year 1759 A.D. His son, Sardár Joga Singh, was succeeded in turn by his son, Sardár Chanda Singh, the father of the Sardárs Partáb Singh, Chet Singh, Panjáb Singh, and Sher Singh (q.v.)

Residence.—Dhandwal, Hoshiárpur, Punjab.

PARTAB SINGH (of Alawálpur), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár is the brother of Sardár Ajit Singh (q.v.) Belongs to a Bais Jat family, descended from Chaudhri Guláb Rai, who was the Chaudhri of the Maloha iláka in the Nábha State. His son, Sardár Himmat Singh, first distinguished himself in the service of the Phulkian Chiefs, from whom he received grants of land. In 1808 A.D. he was appointed Agent of the Nábha State, to attend on the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore, and in 1812 A.D. entered the latter's service, in which he soon rose to the greatest eminence, obtaining from time to time extensive jágirs, including that of the Alawálpur iláka. Sardár Himmat was present at the conquest of Multán. His elder son, Sardár Albel Singh, obtained a large jágir on the reduction of Nalkhera. He was wounded in the Tiri campaign, and died in 1822, in the lifetime of his father. Sardár Himmat Singh died in 1826, and the Mahárájá resumed most of his jágirs, except the Alawálpur and Dhogri ilákas, which he divided equally between Sardár Achal Singh (son of the deceased Sardár Albel Singh) and Sardár Kishan Singh, the younger son of Himmat Singh. The son of Sardár Kishan Singh, Sardár Basáwa Singh, died without issue. Sardár Achal Singh joined Sardár Ranjodh Singh of Majithia against the British in the first Sikh war, but subsequently rendered good service. He died in 1857, and was succeeded by his two sons, Sardár Ajit Singh (q.v.) and the Sardár Partáb Singh of Alawálpur. Sardár Partáb Singh has a son and heir, Bhagwán Singh.

Residence.—Alawálpur, Jalandhar District, Punjab.

PARTAB SINGH (of Botála), Sardár.

Born 1827. The title is hereditary, the Sardár being one of the representatives of the important Kshatriya (Sikh) family of Botála, descended from Dhanna Singh, who was an associate of Sardár Jodh Singh, great-grandfather of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, and after Jodh Singh's death served under his son, Sardár Charat Singh. His sons followed the fortunes of the ancestors of Ranjit Singh, and his grandson, Sardár Dharam Singh, was the grandfather of Sardár Partáb Singh of Botála. Sardár Dharam Singh's son was Sardár Ganda Singh, who was in attendance on the Mahárájá Sher Singh when that prince was assassinated, and was severely wounded in the endeavour to defend him. He was killed at the battle of Firuzshahr, where his son Sardár Kirpál Singh (one of the younger brothers of Sardár Partáb Singh) was wounded. The Sardár Ganda Singh was succeeded by his four sons—Sardár Partáb Singh being the eldest, Sardár Dayál Singh (q.v.), Sardár Kirpal Singh of Kunjáhia (q.v.), and Sardár Joála Singh (q.v.). The Sardár Partáb Singh of Botála has a son and heir, named Godham Singh.

Residence.—Botála, Gujranwála, Punjab.

PARTAB SINGH (of Rania), Sardár.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Punjab.

PARTABGARH, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAWAT RAGHUNATH SINGH BAHADUR, Maháráwat of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1857; succeeded to the gadi 18th February 1890. Belongs to a family that is a junior branch of that of "the Sun of the Hindus," the Maháráná of Udaipur, and is consequently one of the Chiefs of the illustrious Sesodia clan of the Rájputs. In 1561 A.D., when Udaí Singh, the future founder of Udaipur, was Ráná—and just seven years before the terrible sack of Chitor, the ancient capital of the Sesodias, by the great Mughal Akbar, drove Udaí Singh to the jungles, whence he subsequently issued to build Udaipur—the Ráwat Bhikaji, a scion of the Royal house of the Sesodias, founded the State of Partábgarh, with its capital at Deolia. With the other States of Rájputána, Partábgarh was reduced, during the subsequent campaigns of the Mughal Emperors, to submission to Delhi; and in the reign of the Emperor Sháh Jahán the Ráwat received from that monarch the title of Maháráwat, which his descendants retain. The present town of Partábgarh was built by the Maháráwat Partáb Singh, and called after his name, about the beginning of the 18th century; it is distant about eight miles east of the ancient capital of Deolia. On the establishment of the Mahratta power in Málwá the Maháráwats became tributary to Holkar, and the Chief of Indore still receives that tribute, which is now paid through the British Government. Partábgarh passed under British control in 1818. In 1844 the Maháráwat died, and was succeeded by his grandson, Dalpat Singh, who had become Maháráwal of Dungarpur by adoption, but who resigned Dungarpur on his succession to Partábgarh. Dalpat Singh died in 1864, and was succeeded by his son, the late Maháráwat Udaí Singh. He was followed by the present Maharáwat in 1890. The area of the State is 1460 square miles; and its population is 79,568, chiefly Hindus, but including 24,229 Bhils (aboriginal tribe) and 4243 Muhammadans. His Highness, with his chief feudatories, maintains a military force of 327 cavalry, 454 infantry, and 4 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1874: succeeded to the gadi as a minor 30th March 1878. Belongs to an Afghán (Muhammadan) family, descended from Faiz Talab Khán, younger brother of Nijábat Ali Khán, Nawáb of Jhajjar. Faiz Talab Khán was severely wounded in an action with Holkar's troops; and for his services was granted the State of Pataudi, with the title of Nawáb, in 1806. He died in 1820, and was succeeded by the Nawáb Akbar Ali Khán; and the latter was in his turn succeeded by his son, Muhammad Ali Taki Khán, on 3rd March 1862. The latter died in the same year, and was succeeded by the late Nawáb Muhammad Mukhtár Husain Khán, his son, then a minor. He died in 1878, and was succeeded by the present Nawáb, also as a minor. The area of the State is 53 square miles; its population is 17,847, chiefly Hindus, but including 3286 Muhammadans. The Nawáb maintains a military force of 25 cavalry, 59 infantry, and 6 guns.

Residence.—Pataudi, Punjab.

PATHARI, NAWAB MUHAMMAD ABDUL KARIM KHAN, Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1850; succeeded to the gadi 19th October 1861. Belongs to a Pathán (Muhammadan) family, being descended from the younger son of the famous Dost Muhammad, the founder of the State of Bhopál (see Bhopál, Her Highness the Begam of). The area of the State is 26 square miles; its population 6393, chiefly Hindus, but including 965 Muhammadans. In 1807 Nawáb Haidar Muhammad Khán, father of the present Nawáb, was dispossessed of his estate in Rahatgarh; but ultimately, on the mediation of the British Government, he obtained the territory of Pathári. The Nawáb has a son and heir, the Mián Muhammad Abdul Rahim Khán.

PATIALA, His Highness the Mahárájá Bahádur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 25th May 1872; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 14th April 1876. The Mahárájá's full title is — His Highness Farzand-i-Khás-i-Daulat-

i-Inglishia Mansur-i-Zamán, Amir-ul-Umara, Maháráj-Adhiráj Rájeshwar Sri Mahárájá-i-Rájagán Rajendra Singh Mahendra Bahádur. Belongs to the renowned Phulkian family of the Sidhu Jat clan of Sikhs; so called from their ancestor Phul, from whom descend also the Chiefs of Jind, Nábha, and Bhadaur. Their great ancestor was the Rájput Chief Jaisal, the founder of Jaisalmir (q.v.); whose descendant in the twenty-ninth generation was Phul. His second son Ráma was the fonder of the Patiála House; whose son, Rájá Alá Singh, built the city of Patiála, and was granted the title of Rájá by Ahmad Sháh Duráni in March 1762. The title was continued to his son Amar Singh, with additional honour as Rájá-i-Rájagán Bahádur in 1767, and a flag and drum were given to him as symbols of his sovereign power. The title of Mahárájá was bestowed on the Patiála Chief in 1810 by the Emperor Akbar II. of Delhi, on the recommendation of General Ochterlony. During the Nepál war he aided the Government, and at its close was rewarded with parts of the Keonthal and Baghat States. In 1830 the sanitarium and territory of Simla were obtained from him in exchange for lands in Barauli. In the Sutlej campaigns of 1845-46 the Mahárájá rendered good service against the Lahore army; and was rewarded with a part of the territory confiscated from the Rájá of Nábha. During the Mutiny of 1857 the Mahárájá Narindar Singh aided the Government by sending an auxiliary force to Delhi, kept open communications on the Grand Trunk Road, sent troops to Gwalior and Dholpur, and afforded other valuable aid. In recognition of these services the Mahárájá received further large extensions of territory, with additions to his titles and powers. The Mahárájá Mahindar Singh, son of Narindar Singh, died at the age of twenty-three in 1876, and was succeeded by his son the present Mahárájá, then a minor. The area of the State is 5419 square miles; its population is 1,467,433, chiefly Hindus, but including 408,141 Sikhs and 321,354 Muhammadans. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 2423 cavalry, 4147 infantry, and 109 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns.

PATNA, MAHARAJA RAM CHANDRA SINGH, Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1870; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 25th November 1878. Belongs to a family of the illustrious Chauhán clan of Rájputs (see Mainpuri, Rájá of, and Rajaur, Rájá of) that has been settled as rulers in the Sambalpur district of the Central Provinces from a remote antiquity. The present Mahárájá is the thirtieth in direct descent from the founder of the Ráj; who, according to the traditions of the family, came here from Sambalgarh in the Mainpuri district of the North-Western Provinces, probably at the time of the earliest Muhammadan invasions. Tradition also connects the family, whose claim to the hereditary title of Rájá seems always to have been undisputed, with the Hai Hai Bansi House of the Ratanpur Rájputs. The late Mahárájá, Sur Partáb Deo, came to the gadi in 1866; and dying twelve years later, was succeeded by his nephew, the present Mahárájá, then a

PETIT, SIR DINSHAW MANOCKJEE, Baronet and Knight Bachelor.

Born 30th June 1823; granted the honour of Knighthood in 1887, and created a Baronet in 1890.

Belongs to a Parsi family, descended from Nusserwanjee Cowasjee Petit of Surat, who moved from Surat to Bombay. Mr. Nusserwanjee Cowasjee Petit was born at Surat in 1770; married Bhikaji, daughter of Framji Jogajee Patvana. His son, Manockjee Nusserwanjee Petit, born 26th August 1803, succeeded him on his death, 20th December 1820. He became a merchant in Bombay; married Humabai Jejeebhoy Dadabhoy Moogana; and died 21st May 1859, leaving two sons, the present Baronet and his younger brother, Nusserwanjee Manockjee Petit, Esq. Sir Dinshaw Petit was Sheriff of Bombay in 1887, and has been a Member of the Parsi Panchayat of Bombay since 1862. Served as a Member of the Legislative Council of Bombay from 1888 to 1889. He married, in 1837, Sakerbai Framjee (who died in 1890), daughter of Framjee Bhikaji Panday, Esq., of Bombay; and has issue, three sons and eight daughters. The Baronetcy was granted, with special remainder, first, to Framjee Dinshaw Petit, second son of the first Baronet, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten; and secondly, to the heirs male of the body of the first Baronet. Sir Dinshaw has long been renowned throughout Western India for his munificence. He has devoted his great wealth very largely to the service of his country, and to the good of his fellow-countrymen of all classes and nationalities. He is a great cotton mill-owner; and has been the pioneer of that industry in India, as the following account of his commercial career, taken from a leading Bombay journal, will show:—

“It was during his father’s lifetime, and while they were in partnership, that Mr. Dinshaw conceived the happy idea of identifying himself with mill industry—an idea which he has since worked out with conspicuous ability and such brilliant results. The successful working of Mr. Cowasjee Nanabhoy Davur’s mill, which confined itself to the spinning of yarns, could not escape Mr. Dinshaw’s vigilant eye, and, in 1855, he erected, in conjunction with his father, Mr. Manockjee Petit, the Oriental Spinning and Weaving Mill, which had the advantage over Mr. Davur’s mill of weaving cloth in addition to spinning yarn. This venture was such an immense success that in 1860 Mr. Dinshaw was induced to erect another mill and named it the Manockjee Petit Spinning and Weaving Mill, in memory of his father, who had died in the previous year. The investment proved to be so profitable that several cotton mills were started by Mr. Dinshaw, one after another, in rapid succession, and he is at the present moment the largest shareholder in the six cotton mills, viz. the Manockjee Petit Mill, the Dinshaw Petit Mill, the Mazagon Mill, the Victoria Mill, the Framjee Petit Mill, and the Gordon Mills. Besides spinning and weaving, Mr. Dinshaw has also directed his attention to the manufacture of thread, hosiery, and fancy goods, and is the proprietor of an establishment at Mahim for dyeing yarns. There are at the present day many cotton mills working in Bombay, but they have all sprung up after the success of Sir Dinshaw's first venture, and he may therefore justly be regarded as the initiator and leader of an industry which has done so much towards improving the commercial position and prospects of the city."

Sir Dinshaw has had three sons :—

(1) Cowasjee Dinshaw Petit, born in Bombay, 6th June 1845; married, in Bombay, Awabai Merwanjee Jejeebhoy Moogana, 17th February 1859; died in Bombay, 23rd October 1878, leaving issue—(a) Manockjee and Merwanjee Cowasjee (twins), born in Bombay 18th July 1863; Merwanjee died in Bombay, 9th June 1879; Manockjee survives, and married, 28th February 1872, Gulbai Sorabjee Jamssetjee. PUDUKOTA, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA MARTAND BHAIRAVA TONDIMAN BAHADUR, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1875; succeeded his grandfather, the late Rájá Rámachandra Tondiman, 15th April 1886, as a minor. Belongs to an ancient Kallar (Hindu) family, whose ancestors have borne the title of Tondiman Rájá from time immemorial, and have ruled in Pudukota. An ancestor of the Tondiman Rájá rendered good service to the British forces in the siege of Trichinopoli in 1753 A.D., by providing supplies and other aid, and obtained, as a reward, the grant of the fort and district of Kilanelli in South Tanjore. To the late Rájá Rámachandra Tondiman Bahádur a sanad was given, conferring on him the right of adoption, and the title of "His Excellency" as a personal distinction. The area of the State is 1380 square miles; its population 302,127, chiefly Hindus, but including 8946 Muhammadans and 11,372 Christians. His Highness the Tondiman Rájá maintains a military force of 16 cavalry, 136 infantry, and 27 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Pudukota, Madras.

PUSAPATI ANANDA GAJAPATI RAZ, SIR, G.C.I.E., Mahárájá.

See Vizianagram, Mahárájá of.

PUSHKAR PAL (of Askot), Rájwar.

Born 1843. The title is hereditary. The Rájwar (or Rájbar) is a Surajbansi Rájput, and traces his descent in 221 generations from Sri Utapannaptra, the founder of the Solar dynasty. The family is a younger branch of that of the Rájis of Katyuri—"Rájbar" being equivalent to "Rájkumár," and being the style of the heir-apparent among the Katyuris, who held sway over Kumáun before the Chand Rájá deprived them of their kingdom. They came from Joshimath, in Garhwál, in very early times. Abhaya Deva, forty-ninth in descent from Sáliváhana Deva, was the first to leave the Katyuri valley at the time of the decline of the Katyuri power. He changed his title from "Deva" to "Pála," because "Deva" belonged to the branch of the family ruling in Katyuri. When Rudra Chand took possession of Askot, he allowed the Rájwar of Askot to retain his patrimony as a Zamindár under the Chand Ráj. The present Rájwar of Askot is an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Askot, Kumáun, North-Western Provinces.

See Dumraon, Mahárájá of.

RADHANPUR, HIS HIGHNESS NAWAB MUHAMMAD BISMILLAH KHAN BAHADUR BABI, Nawáb of.

Born 26th April 1843; succeeded to the gadí 9th October 1874. Belongs to a Pathán (Muhammadan) family, famous in the history of Western India as the Bábi family, which has given ruling Houses to Junágarh and Bálásinor as well as to Rádhanpur. Bahádur Khán Bábi was appointed faujdar of Tharád by the Emperor Sháh Jahán, and his son, Sher Khán Bábi, was deputed to aid Prince Murád Bakhsh as Governor of Gujarát. His son, Jafar Khán Bábi, in 1693 A.D., obtained the faujdarí of Rádhanpur and other districts, with the title of Safdar Khán; in 1704 he was also appointed Governor of Bijápur, and in 1706 of Pátan. His son, Khán Jahán, received similar appointments from the Emperor, with the title of Jawán Marad Khán, which was continued to his son, Kamal-ud-dín Khán Bábi, who also seized the Governorship of Ahmadabad after the death of Aurangzeb. He was forced to surrender Ahmadabad to the Mahrattas under the Peshwá Raghunáth Rao and the Gaekwár Dámaji, in 1753, but he was allowed to retain his possessions as a jágirdár under the Mahratta Power. In 1820 the Nawáb of Rádhanpur obtained British protection, as a feudatory, bound to render military service, and to pay tribute; but the tribute has long ago been remitted, and has not been reimposed. The State has an area of 1150 square miles; and a population of 98,129, chiefly Híndus, but including 11,757 Muhammadans. The Nawáb maintains a military force of 248 cavalry, 362 infantry, and 10 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Rádhanpur, Bombay.

Residence.—Calcutta.

RADHIKA PRASANNA MUKHARJI, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1838. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. Belongs to a Kulin Bráhmaṇ family of the highest rank. Son of Ananda Chandra Mukharji of Gosain Durgapur in the district of Nuddea (Nadiyá), Bengal. Is a Zamindár, and Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle; educated at the Krishnaghur and Presidency Colleges of the Calcutta University. He won a Junior Scholarship in 1854 and a Senior Scholarship in 1855 (stood at the head of all the candidates from the Colleges of Bengal). Appointed to the Government Service as Deputy Inspector of Schools, Nuddea, in 1858; published Sásthya-Raksá—the first work on sanitation in any Indian vernacular—in 1863, and Bhubidyá or Physical Geography, in 1868; and in the same year made suggestions for the improvement of female education in Bengal, which were accepted by Government. In 1872 took part in organising the first Provident Institution in Bengal, now well known as the Hindu Family Annuity Fund, and was one of its Directors. In 1877 appointed Head Master, Hughli Normal School, and in 1878 Assistant Inspector of Schools, Bhágalpur division; in 1882 published a note advocating the substitution of "Kaithi" for the Persian character in the Courts of Behar; in the same year was appointed Assistant Inspector of Schools, Presidency Division, and in 1884 Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle (Class IV. Bengal Educational Service), and Secretary, Central Text-book Committee, Bengal; in 1885 was appointed a Fellow of the University of Calcutta, and has since acted on various University Committees and Boards of Studies; in 1886 a Member of a Government Committee which sat at Darjeeling for the purpose of revising the assignments to Government schools; was appointed in 1887 Member and Secretary of a Conference for revising the Rules for Grants-in-aid to schools and extending female education; and has received the thanks of Government on several occasions for his services. Is Member of the Bethune School Committee; Member and Secretary to the Board of Trustees, Eden Hindu Hostel, Calcutta; Member, Useful Literature Society; Member, Board of Visitors of the Government Engineering College, Sibpur; Member, Committee of Management of the Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science. The Rai Bahádur has supported a High English School and a Girls' School in his native town ever since 1859.

Residences.—Calcutta, and Gosain Durgapur, Nadiyá, Bengal.

RAGHBIR SINGH (of Kaláiwála), Sardár.

Born about the year 1877. The title is hereditary. The Sardár belongs to a Jat family of Sikh Sardárs, being the representative of Sardár Diwán Singh, who was adopted by Sardár Hari Singh, the great leader of the Bhangí misl or confederacy, and inherited half the possessions of that powerful Chief about the year 1760. Diwán Singh was succeeded by Dhanna Singh, on whose death the estate descended to Jodh Singh. Mahárájá Ranjit Singh made war on him, and annexed a considerable part of his territory; and ultimately the Sardár was compelled to submit and present a nazarána, on which the Mahárájá left him in feudal possession of a large jágir. Sardár Jodh Singh's only child was the Ráni Khem Kaur, married to the Prince Khark Singh, afterwards known as the Mahárájá Khark Singh; and on Jodh Singh's death the management of the Ráni's jágir devolved on her cousin, Sardár Amar Singh, son of Sardár Chart Singh and nephew of Sardár Jodh Singh. Sardar Amar Singh's grandson (son of Sardár Chanda Singh) was the late Sardár Bhagwán Singh, Kalálwála, father of the present Sardár Raghbir Singh. He was an Honorary Magistrate of Kalálwála, and officiated as Extra Assistant Commissioner; he died in 1885, and was succeeded by Sardár Raghbir Singh.

Residence.—Kalálwála, Siálkot, Punjab.

RAGHBIR SINGH (of Rura), Rájá.

Born 5th October 1878. The title is hereditary, the Rájá being a Chief of the Sengar clan of Rájputs, and descended from a Sengar Rájput leader who settled in the district of Etáwah about six centuries ago. The last Rájá in the direct line was Rájá Kushál Singh, who died fifteen years before the cession, leaving several widows, a nephew (Himanchal Singh), and a natural son (Ghanshyám Singh). On the death of Kushál Singh the property was settled first with Himanchal Singh, next with Ráni Bhadaurin (one of the widows of Kushál Singh), next with Ghanshyám Singh; and finally, on an appeal to the Privy Council, the property was settled with Himanchal Singh. He died shortly afterwards, and was succeeded by his nephew, Rájá Fateh Singh. The latter in 1857 unfortunately joined the rebels, but died before he could be brought to trial, and his property was confiscated. A portion, however, was restored to his son, Rájá Raghunáth Singh. The latter died in 1887, and was succeeded by the present Rájá.

Residence.—Rura, Parganá Biduria, Etáwah, North-Western Provinces.

The Santak of the Chauhán Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature.

(A circle with four Trisulas or Tridents as radii at the cardinal points.)

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1821; succeeded to the gadi in 1857. Belongs to a Chauhán Rájput (Hindu) family. The population of this State, which is included within Gwalior territory, is 16,920, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Raghugarh, Guna, Central India.

RAGHUJI RAO (of Deor), Rájá.

Born 7th November 1872. The title is hereditary, the Rájá being the representative of the old Bhonslé Rájás (Mahrattas) of Nágpur, his father, Janoji Sahab Bhonslé, having been adopted by Dariya Báí, Dowager Ráni of the last Bhonslé Rájá of Nágpur, Raghují III. The title of Rájá was originally conferred on Madhoji Bhonslé by the Emperor Akbar Sháh of Delhi. The Bhonslé family (some account of which is given under the heading "Kolhápur, Rájá of") claims to be descended from the illustrious "Solar race" of the Maháránás of Udaipur; and from the time of Sivaji the Great, founder of the Mahratta Empire, down to the period of the decline of the Mahratta Power, the family played a very important part in Indian history. In 1707 A.D. the title of Sena Saheb Subah was bestowed on Persoji Bhonslé of Nágpur by the Rájá Sivaji of Sátára. In 1861 the British Government conferred the title of Rájá Bahádur of Deor on the late Janoji Saheb Bhonslé, father of the present Rájá, in recognition of his position as the adopted son of the Dowager Ráni; and the title of Rájá has been made hereditary.

Residence.—Deor, Nágpur, Central Provinces.

RAGHUNATH RAO, Rao Saheb.

The title is hereditary, the Rao Saheb being one of the representatives of Rao Vináyek Rao, Prime Minister of the last Mahratta ruler of Ságár. RAHIM KHAN, Khán Bahádúr.

Born 1838. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 13th March 1872. Dr. Rahim Khán belongs to a Muhammadan family of Lucknow, long celebrated for its learning; descended from Muhammad Azim Khán, who died there in 1729 A.D. His descendant was Fakir-ulla-Khán, grandfather of the Khán Bahádúr; he maintained an Arabic School at his own cost in Lucknow. He died in 1837. His son, Yusaf Khán, was equally noted as an Arabic scholar at Lucknow, and was invited by the Governor-General's Agent in Assam to become the Mir Munshi, and the Superintendent of the Oriental College at Gauháti. He died in 1856, his son, Rahim Khán, being then seventeen years of age. The latter was educated at Dacca College; also at the Medical College, Calcutta, where he became a Sub-Assistant Surgeon in 1858, and received special and rapid promotion from Government because of his high attainments. In 1860 he was appointed to the Medical School of Lahore, where he had greatly distinguished himself by introducing a knowledge of European medical science among the chief hakims and native physicians of the Punjab. Is a Fellow of the University of Lahore; and received the rank of Honorary Surgeon on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. RAJA RAJA VARMA RAJA, Rájá.

Born 1837. The title is hereditary, according to the Marumakkatayam law of inheritance, common to this family with those of the other Malabar Rájás, by which the succession is with the offspring of its female members, amongst whom the next eldest male is always the heir-apparent of the Rájá. The members of this family, by an ancient custom, generally marry the female members of the family of His Highness the Mahárájá of Travancore. Belongs to a Kshatriya family, that ruled in ancient times from the Betetnád river in the south to the Polonad in the north, and the Rájá is commonly styled the Valiya Rájá of Parapanad. At the time of the invasion of Malabar by Tippu Sultán, the ruling Rájá was taken prisoner and carried to Mysore. The late Rájá Ithamer, Valiya Rájá of Parapanad, succeeded to the gadí in 1875; and on his death was succeeded by his heir, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Malabar, Madras.

RAJA SINGH, Sardár.

Born 1836. The title is hereditary. Belongs to the Mán family, originally Rájputs inhabiting the country about Delhi; descended from Sardár Karam Singh, son of Tára Singh. Karam Singh's son, Sardár Shám Singh, Mán, introduced his son, Sardár Fateh Singh, at an early age to the notice of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore; and when the Prince Kharak Singh was a few years old, Fateh Singh was appointed specially to his service. He served in the Kángra and other campaigns, for which services he received a considerable jàgir from Prince Kharak Singh, and was assassinated when returning from Jammu, whither he had been sent on certain negotiations between the Lahore Darbár and the Rájá Guláb Singh of Jammu. He left two sons—Sardár Sardul Singh, Mán, and Sardár Joála Singh, Mán; of whom the latter was the father of the Sardár Rájá Singh. Sardár Sardul Singh served under General Ventura in the Mándi campaign, and also fought in the campaign on the Sutlej. During the rebellion of 1848 and the Mutiny of 1857 he rendered excellent service to the British Government. Sardár Joála Singh was succeeded on his death by his son, Sardár Rájá Singh, Mán. A Ruling Chief.

Born 1857; succeeded to the gadí 6th July 1882. Belongs to the Umat Rájput (Hindu) family, descended from the Hindu Emperor Vikramá-ditya, through the famous Rájá Bhoj. The territory called Umatwára, including the existing States of Rájgarh and Narsinghgarh, was conquered by the Umat Rájputs during the decline of the Mughal Power. In 1448 the Chief of Umatwára received the title of Ráwat; and in 1681 the Ráwat's son, who was also his Diwán or Prime Minister, compelled him to divide the State, the Diwán taking Narsinghgarh, which has ever since been a separate principality—Rájgarh ultimately becoming tributary to Gwalior, whilst Narsinghgarh became tributary to Indore. In 1871 the Ráwat Moti Singh became a convert to Islám, and with the permission of Government assumed the title of Nawáb and the name of Muhammad Abdul Wasih Khán. He died in 1880, and was succeeded by his son, Bakhtáwar Singh, father of the present Rájá, who succeeded in his turn on the death of Bakhtáwar Singh in 1882. The present Chief belongs to the ancestral Hindu creed, and has been received back by his brother-chiefs to his ancestral position as a Chief of the Umat clan of Rájputs. The area of the State is 655 square miles; its population is 118,185, chiefly Hindus, but including 5830 Muhammadans, and 7175 belonging to aboriginal tribes. The Rájá maintains a military force of 300 cavalry, 360 infantry, and 6 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

RAJPIPLA, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARANA GAMBHIRSINGHJI,

Rájd of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1847; succeeded to the gadi 1860. Belongs to a Gohel Rájput (Hindu) family, claiming descent from Sáliváhana. About the year 1470 A. D., according to the family traditions, Chokárána, son of Rájá Saidáwat of Ujjain, having quarrelled with his father, left Ujjain and established himself at Pippla, in the hills to the west of Nándod, the present capital of this State. His only daughter married Makheráj, a Gohel Rájput Chief from the island of Perim in the Gulf of Cambay; and of the two sons of this marriage, Dungalji founded Bhaunagar, whilst Gemarsinghji succeeded Chokárána at Pippla; and his descendants have been Ranis and Maháranás of this State, with various vicissitudes, from the end of the 15th century to the present day.

In 1821 there was a disputed succession, and the late Maháráná Verisajji was placed on the gadí by the British Power. He was ruler for nearly forty years; and then, in 1860, abdicated in favour of his only son, the present Maháráná. The area of the State is 1514 square miles; its population is 114,756, chiefly Hindus, but including 5161 Muhammadans and 61,784 Bhils and members of other aboriginal tribes. Born 1837. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a family descended from the former rulers of the district of Ságar. In 1829 the Parganá of Jaisinghnagar was made over to the Rao Ganpat Rao, then head of the family, on a ten years' farming lease, as compensation for his name having been excluded by intrigues in the Ságar Court from the pension list. In 1834 Ganpat Rao became the Tilukdár; and died in 1843. He was succeeded by his son, the Rao Anant Rao; and the latter by the present Rao.

Residence.—Jaisinghnagar, Ságar, Central Provinces.

RAMCHANDAR DEO DHUBAL, Rájá.

Born about the year 1863. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Rájput family long settled in the Ráj of Dálbhum, Singhbhum, Bengal.

Residence.—Dálbhum, Singhbhum, Bengal.

RAMCHANDAR RAO, Rao Saheb.

Born 27th February 1840. The title is hereditary. The Rao Saheb belongs to a family whose founder was the Rao Benaik (or Vinayak) Rao, Prime Minister of the late Mahratta ruler of Ságar district. Vinayak Rao came originally from the Deccan, and was appointed at first a Mámlatdár by the Mahratta Government. He also obtained the titles of Rao Saheb and Subahdár. At the time of the cession he was granted a political pension, and smaller pensions have been continued to his grandsons. The Rao Saheb has a son and heir, the Rao Vinayak Rao Saheb Subahdár.

Residence.—Ságar, Central Provinces.

RAMCHANDRA NARAYAN MANTRI (of Bagni), Ajahan Sir Deshmukh.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Sátára, Bombay.

RAMCHANDRA NARAYAN PANDIT, Rao Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 14th January 1888.

Residence.—Bombay.

RAMCHANDRA TRIMBAK ACHARIYA, Rao Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1889.

Residence.—Thana, Bombay.

RAMDIN (of Paila), Rai Bahádur.

Born 1838. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 21st February 1873, in recognition of services rendered during the Mutiny of 1857 by his late father, Rai Tila Rám. Belongs to a family that came from Kanauj many centuries ago, and settled in Paila. As a reward for his loyalty during the Mutiny, part of the confiscated estates of the rebel Rajá Son Singh of Mithauli were conferred on him.

Residence.—Paila, Kheri, Oudh.

RAMDURG, VYANKAT RAO YOGIRAO BHAVE, Sachiv of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1877; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 11th February 1878. Belongs to a Bráhman Hindu family. The fort of Rámdurg or Rámdrug was a very strong one, and was placed by the Peshwás in charge of the ancestors of the present Chief, on condition of military service. It was conquered by the Sultán Haidar Ali of Mysore in 1778; and in 1784 Tippu Sultán carried off the Chief and his family as prisoners to Mysore. After the fall of Seringapatam and the death of Tippu in 1799, Rám Rao, then Sachiv Chief, was again placed in possession of Rámdurg as a vassal of the Peshwá. His sons were Vyankat Rao and Naráyan Rao, who succeeded to equal shares of the paternal jágers, and in 1818 came under British control. The State has an area of 140 square miles; and a population of 29,570, chiefly Hindus, but including 1903 Muhammadans. The Chief maintains a military force of 13 cavalry, 455 infantry, and 1 gun.

Residence.—Rámdurg, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

RAMENDRA KRISHNA, Kumár.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 18th July 1861, in recognition of his position as the second son of the late Rájá Harendra Krishna Deb Bahádur, of the Sobha Bázár family. The latter was the son of the late Rájá Kali Krishna Deb Bahádur, and nephew of the Maharájá Sir Narendra Krishna Deb Bahádur, K.C.I.E. (q.v.)

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

RAMENDRALALA MITRA, Kumár.

Born 26th November 1864; is the eldest son and heir of the late Rájá Rájendralála Mitra Bahádur, D.L., C.I.E., of Calcutta, the most famous of modern Indian scholars and authors. Belongs to a family of great antiquity; whose ancestor, Kálidása Mitra, came from Kanauj to the Court of King Adisur of Bengal, and was ennobled by that monarch. Eighteenth in direct lineal descent from Kálidása was Ayodhyáráma, who was a Diwán in the service of the Nawáb Názim of Murshidabad, and received from the latter the title of Rai Bahádur. His grandson, Pitambara, was the vakil of the Nawáb Vazir of Oudh at the Court of Delhi; he obtained a considerable jágir at Kurah, near Allahabad, with the titles of Rájá Bahádur and Sehazárimansabdár, or commander of 3000 horse. The great-grandson of Pitambara was the late Rájá Rájendralála Mitra; whose learned works on Sanskrit, on the Antiquities of Orissa, and on many other subjects, obtained for him a world-wide fame. He was the first Fellow of the University of Calcutta who was honoured with the degree of D.L., honoris causá; which was conferred upon him in March 1876. He was granted the title of Rai Bahádur as a personal distinction on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India; and on the institution of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1878, he was created one of the first Companions. Ten years later, 1st January 1888, he received the title of Rájá as a personal distinction. His sons are—the Kumár Rámendralála Mitra, subject of the present notice; and the Kumár Mahendralála Mitra, born 21st October 1870, married in 1891 to Sarala, eldest daughter of Bábu Brahmanáth Sen of Calcutta. The title of Kumár is a courtesy one. Kumár Rámendralála was educated at the Metropolitan Institution, and the Presidency College of the Calcutta University (B.A. 1886, B.L. 1888). He married, in 1887, Kundanandini, fourth daughter of Bábu Gopála Chandra Basu of Chandernagore, who died in 1890, without issue.

The arms adopted by the family are—A circular Indian shield, azure, bordered with a serpent (nága) with its tail in its mouth, argent, surrounded by a wreath of the leaves of the sacred tulsi, or, and bearing in the centre a figure of a bird volant, or. The bird carries on its wings a plough and a club crossed, or. From the beak of the bird hangs a fillet, or. Motto.—Satyameva jayati náuritam (Sanskrit), meaning—“Verily Truth prevails and not Untruth.”

Residences.—Calcutta and Baidyanath.

RAMESHWAR BAKHSH SINGH (of Birsinghpur), Rájá.

Born 16th June 1875. The title is hereditary. The Rájá is the head of the elder branch of the powerful Amethia family. This Kshatriya family is a branch of the Chamár Gaurs; and is said to be descended from a pregnant Gaur widow, who on the extirpation of the Kshatriyas by the Bráhmans took refuge in a Chamár's hut. The memory of this humble refuge is kept alive in the family by the worship of the rápi, the cobbler's cutting-tool. Tradition places them first at Shiupuri, and afterwards at the celebrated fortress of Kálinjar. About the time of the invasion of Timur, Raipál Singh, grandson of the Rájá Prithi Chand of Kálinjar, left the ancestral home and settled at Amethi in the Lucknow district. The tradition in the family is that he was sent by the Emperor of Delhi to suppress a rebellion in Oudh; and that he defeated and slew Balbhadra Sen, a Bishan Rájá, for which he received the title of Rájá of Amethia, and the family cognomen of "Amethia." Towards the end of the 15th century three brothers of this family, the sons of Rájá Jamdhar Singh, made further conquests; and the eldest of these, Rájá Dingar Singh, was the ancestor of the Kumrawan Rájás—the youngest, Rám Singh, being the ancestor of the Amethia Rájá, Bhagwán Bakhsh of Pokhra Ansari (q.v.) Seventeenth in lineal descent from Rájá Dingar Singh is the present Rájá, Rámeshwar Bakhsh Singh of Birsinghpur.

Residence.—Sheogarh, Parganá Kumrawan, Rae Bareli, Oudh.

RAMESHWAR SINGH (of Darbhanga), Rájá Bahádur.

Born 16th January 1860. Is the younger son of the late Mahárájá Maheshwar Singh Bahádur of Darbhanga, and younger brother of His Highness the present Mahárájá Bahádur—under whose name see an account of the history of this noble family. The late Mahárájá died very shortly after the birth of his younger son, and the Ráj came under the management of the Court of Wards. Was educated, with his elder brother, the young Mahárájá, under the care of Mr. Chester Macnaghten, Principal of the Rájkumár College of Rájkot, and other private tutors, and also in College. Attained his majority in 1878, when he was nominated to the Bengal Civil Service, and served with much credit successively as Assistant Magistrate of Darbhanga, of Chhapra, and of Bhágalpur, when he retired from the Service. In 1886 he was created a Rájá Bahádur in recognition of his high rank and position, as the brother of one of the first Chiefs of Bengal; was exempted from personal attendance in the Civil Courts, and appointed a Member of the Legislative Council of Bengal.

Residence.—Darbhanga, Tirhut, Bengal.

RAMGARH, THAKUR MAN SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1847; succeeded to the gadi 9th April 1863. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family.

Residence.—Ramgarh, Bhopál, Central India.

RAMJI GANGAJI BHORE, Rao Sahab.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st June 1888.

Residence.—Bombay.

RAMJI GOVIND, Rao Sahab.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 24th May 1889.

Residence.—Bombay.

RAMKRISHNA GOPAL BHANDARKAR, C.I.E.

Born 6th July 1837. Educated at Ratnagiri Government English School and Elphinstone College, Bombay; B.A. 1862, M.A. 1863, Examination Degree in 1866; Dakshina Fellow in Elphinstone and Poona College, January 1859–August 1864; Head-Master High School, Hyderabad (Sind) and Ratnagiri, August 1864–December 1869; Acting Professor of Oriental Languages, Elphinstone and Deccan College, and Assistant Professor of Sanskrit, Elphinstone College, January 1869–December 1881; Professor of Oriental Languages, Deccan College, Poona, January 1882; Hon. Ph.D. (Göttingen), 1885; Hon. M.R.A.S. London, 1874; Corr. M. Germ. Or. Soc. 1887; Hon. M. Amer. Or. Soc. 1887; Hon. M. Asiat. S. of Italy, 1887; Corr. M. Imperial Ac. of Sciences, St. Petersburg, 1888. Created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, January 1889. Author and editor of Sanskrit literary and antiquarian works; and of articles in the Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, the Indian Antiquary, and Transactions of International Oriental Congress, London 1874, and Vienna 1886; Fellow University of Bombay, and Syndic in Arts, 1873–1884. Is also a Fellow of the University of Calcutta. He has three sons—(1) Shridhar, born December 1858, M.A. (Bombay) 1882, Assistant Registrar, University, Bombay; (2) Prabhakar, born November 1862, B.A. 1882, L.M. and S. 1888; (3) Devadatta, born November 1875.

Residence.—Bombay.

RAMNAD, RAJA BHASKARA SETUPATI, Rájá of.

Born 1868; attained his majority in 1889. Is the head of the Maravár family or caste, and by custom entitled to affix the title of "Setupati" or "lord of the causeway" (alluding to Adam's Bridge between Ceylon and India) to his name. Pokalur, now a small hamlet on the Madura road, ten miles north-west of Rámnád, was formerly the family seat; but about the commencement of the 18th century they moved to Rámnád and fortified it. In 1729 the great Zamindári of Sivagunga was wrested from the then Setupati by a rebellious vassal. This territory came under the British Power by the treaty of 1792, with the dominions of the other pálegárs dependent on the Subahdári or Governorship of Arcot. In 1795 the Rájá was deposed for rebellion, and sent as a prisoner to Madras; and in 1803 his elder sister was placed in possession of the estates.

Residence.—Rámnád, Madura, Madras.

RAMNARAYAN SINGH (of Khaira), Rájá.

Born 1848. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. Belongs to a Rájput family that came into Bengal in early ages from Rewah in Central India. Nirbhai

Singh was succeeded by his son, Mahendra Naráyan Singh, who was the father of the present Rájá. The Rájá rendered good service in the time of the famine of 1873-74. He has two sons—Kumár Sri Naráyan Singh and Kártik Naráyan Singh.

Residence.—Khaira, Monghyr, Bengal.

RAMPAL (of Kutlahr), Rájá.

The title is hereditary. The Rájá is the head of a very ancient family of Rájputs that were formerly rulers in Kutlahr, according to the local traditions, for forty generations. The first Rájá of Kutlahr came from Sambhal, Moradabad, North-Western Provinces. In the time of the Katoch Chief Ghamand Chand, grandfather of Sansar Chand, half of the Kutlahr principality had been annexed to Kángra; and in Sansar Chand's time all the Rájá's possessions were lost. Subsequently, when Sansar Chand was hard pressed by the Gurkhas, the Rájá of Kutlahr was able to recover his ancestral fortress of Kotwal Bah, on the second range of hills overlooking the Sutlej. In 1825 this fortress was besieged by the Sikhs, and surrendered by the Rájá on the promise of a considerable jágir, which the family enjoys to the present time. The Rájá has a son, born about 1876.

Residence.—Kutlahr, Kángra, Punjab.

RAMPAL SINGH (of Kori Sidhault), Rájá.

Born 6th August 1867. The title is hereditary. Belongs to the Naihesta branch of the great Bais Tilokchandi clan of Rájputs—to which also belong the Ráná Sir Shankar Bakhsh Singh, K.C.I.E., of Thalrai (q.v.), the Rájá Sheopal Singh of Muramau (q.v.), and other Barons of Oudh. The two grandsons of Harhardeo, second son of Tilok Chand, were Khem Karan, ancestor of the Simbasi Ránás of Thalrai, and Karan Rai, ancestor of this Naihesta family. The latter's two sons, Har Singh Rai and Bir Singh Rai, established themselves in the Unao district of Oudh, taking their family name from the village of Naihesta in the Bihár Parganá of Unao. At the time of the invasion by Nawáb Saádat Khán, and the establishment of his dynasty in Oudh, Rájá Sádak Singh was Chief of Kori Sidhault, and was a leader of great influence. His two sons died without issue, and a cousin, Ináyat Ali, who had been converted to Muhammadanism, was adopted, and became Rájá. His son, Rájá Drigpál Singh, returned to the religion of his ancestors, but the family still retain one Muhammadan fashion, viz. as to the side on which they fashion their chapkans or tunics. Rájá Drigpál Singh's grandson, Rájá Hindpál Singh, was the grandfather of the present Rájá. The latter has been educated at the Aligarh College.

Residence.—Kori Sidhault, Bachráwan, Rai Bareli, Oudh.

RAMPAL SINGH (of Rampur Dharupur), Rájá.

Born 22nd August 1849. The title of Rájá was conferred by the late Wajid Ali Sháh, last King of Oudh, on Rájá Hanwant Singh, maternal grandfather of the present Rájá, and was recognised by Government as hereditary in December 1877. Belongs to the Bisen family; descended, according to tradition, from Mewai Bhát, a devotee, whose representative in the hundred and fifteenth generation is said to be the present Rájá of Majhauri in the Gorákhpur district of the North-Western Provinces. The Oudh branch of the family includes the Rájá Udai Partáb Singh of Bhingra, and the Rai Sarabjit Singh of Bhadri, as well as the Rájá Rámpál Singh of Rámpur Dharupur. They state that the Oudh branch broke off from Majhauri—whose Rájá they still recognise as their Chief—in the person of Rai Hum, a son of the Majhauri Rájá, who, about the year 1193 A.D., is said to have migrated into Oudh, and settled there under the protection of the powerful Mánik Chand, Garhwár Rájá of Mánikpur. Rai Raghu, fourth in descent from Rai Hum, obtained some lands at Derwa. There were constant feuds between the Bisens of Derwa and the Kanhpurias of Kaithola (see Jaibans Kunwar, Rani of Kaithola), who became the hereditary enemies of the clan. In 1748, in the time of the Nawáb Safdar Jang, the Názim at Mánikpur attempted to introduce a raiyatwári settlement; whereon the Bisens rose in rebellion, attacked the Názim at Mánikpur, and slew him. In 1839 Lál Hanwant Singh built a fort at Kálákankar, on the banks of the Ganges, and surrounded it with a canal from the Ganges, so as to be surrounded by the waters of the sacred stream. In 1849 he was made a Rájá by the King of Oudh. At the outbreak of the Mutiny in 1857 Rájá Hanwant Singh did good service by saving the treasure of the tahsil, and the lives of some British officers. The latter he sheltered in his fort from the 11th to the 22nd June 1857; and having seen them in safety to Allahabad—a service for which he was afterwards rewarded by a khilat and a valuable jágir—he returned to his fort “to maintain to the last an obstinate but manly and gallant resistance to the reoccupation of the Province” by the British forces. His only son, Partáb Singh, was killed in action at Chanda in Sultánpur, fighting against Colonel Broughton’s force. At the restoration of order, the Rájá submitted and was pardoned, and in 1860 invested with the powers of an Assistant Magistrate and Collector. The present Rájá is the son of Rájá Hanwant Singh’s daughter. He has resided many years in England, and is an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Kálákankar, Parganá Rámpur, Partábgarh; Oudh.

RAMPARTAB SINGH (of Mainpuri), Rájá.

Born 11th November 1849. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 10th December 1868—the conferment being apparently in the nature of the revival, in a personal form, of ancient honours forfeited by the late Rájá Tej Singh for rebellion in the time of the Mutiny of 1857. The Rájá is the head of one of the noblest and most ancient families of India, being the acknowledged Chief of the illustrious Chauhán clan of Rájputs, and thirty-fourth in direct descent from the great Prithiráj, last Hindu Emperor of Delhi. Rájá Khushál Singh of Rajaur (q.v.) is also a descendant of this family; as also the Rájá Mohkam Singh of Partápnar (q.v.), and other Chiefs. Eighth in descent from Prithiráj was the famous Bhoj Ráj

The Santak of the Chauhán Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature.

and his grandson, Rájá Awadh Rám Deo, had two sons, of whom the elder, Lakshman Singh, was the ancestor of this family. Eighth in descent from the latter was the Rájá Bhupál Deo, who had two sons, Udaicharan and Yaháni Sahái; the latter was the ancestor of the Rájás of Rajaur, the former of the Rájás of Mainpuri. One of his descendants, the Rájá Jagatman, drove out the Chirar tribe and occupied Mainpuri, assuming the title of Rájá. At the time of the cession to the British, Dalel Singh was Rájá, and he was confirmed in the Ráj. He died in 1829, and was succeeded by the Rájá Ganga Singh. The latter was followed in 1849 by Narpat Singh, who only survived his father by two years. Disputes and litigation as to the succession then arose. Tej Singh was adjudged the rightful successor by the local Courts, and entered into possession as Rájá Tej Singh; but his uncle, Rao Bhawáni Singh, appealed to the Privy Council against the decision. Meanwhile the Mutiny of 1857 broke out; Tej Singh joined the rebels, and the Ráj and all the Rájás' estates were confiscated, and subsequently bestowed on Rao Bhawáni Singh. The latter for his loyalty was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; and on his death in 1868 was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá. The Rájá of Mainpuri has a son, Kunwar Shib Mangal Singh, born 1873.

Residence.—Mainpuri, North-Western Provinces.

RAMPARTAB SINGH (of Mándá), Rájá.

Born 1860. The title is hereditary. The Rájá, who is married to a daughter of the Mahárájá of Dumraon in Bengal (Sir Radha Prasád Singh, K.C.I.E., q.v.), belongs to a family of Gaharwár Rájputs, claiming descent from the famous Rájá Jai Chand, the last of the Ráhtor Emperors of Kanauj, who was conquered and slain by Shaháb-ud-din Ghori in 1194 A.D. One branch of the family having fled to Rájputána, there to found the princely Houses of Jodhpur, Bikanir, and Jaisalmir, another branch settled in Kera Mangraur, near Benares. A scion of this latter branch, named Kundan Deo, left the Benares country and established himself in Kantit and Mándá about the year 1542 A.D.; and one of his sons, Bharáj Deo, became the first Rájá of Mándá. One of his descendants, Rájá Udit Singh, is said to have defeated with great loss Chhote Khán, the Subahdár of Oudh, who came against him with a large army. Udit Singh's son was Pirthmi Singh; and his son was Isráj Singh, who was Rájá at the time of the cession, and was confirmed in possession by the British Government. Rájá Rámpartáb Singh claims to be twenty-second in lineal descent from Bharáj Deo.

Residence.—Mándá, Allahabad District, North-Western Provinces.

RAMPUR, HIS HIGHNESS FARZAND-I-DILPAZIR-I-DAULAT-I-INGLISHIA NAWAB HAMID ALI KHAN BAHADUR WALI, Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1st April 1874; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 27th February 1889, as seventh Nawáb of Rámpur. Belongs to a Barez Pathán family, descended from Sháh Alim, who came from Afghánistán to India in the latter part of the 17th century, to seek service under the Mughal Empire. He left two sons; the elder, Dáud Khán, ancestor of the Nawábs of Rámpur; the younger, Háfiz Rahmat Khán (called Háfiz, because he was the guardian of the two sons of his nephew, Ali Muhammad), subsequently became famous in the time of the Rohilla war as the Chief of the Rohilla Sardárs. Dáud Khán distinguished himself in the Mahratta wars, and received a jágir near Budaun. His adopted son, Ali Muhammad, by his services to the Mughal Emperor against the Bárha Sayyids, obtained the title of Nawáb. He experienced many vicissitudes of fortune in conflicts with the Rájá of Kumáun, the Nawáb Vazir of Oudh, and sometimes with the Imperial forces. At one time he had lost all his possessions, and had to take refuge at the Court of Delhi; but in the confusion consequent on the invasion of Ahmad Sháh Duráni, he was able in 1747 to regain more than all he had lost, and left to his two sons the whole of the territory formerly known as Katehir, and now called Rohilkhand (from the name of the ancient seat of the Barez Patháns in Afghánistán). These two sons were under the guardianship of the Nawáb Háfiz Rahmat Khán, with whom was associated a cousin of Ali Muhammad's father. All of these were known as the Rohilla Sardárs, of whom the Nawáb Háfiz Rahmat Khán was the chief. The latter was at last slain in the battle of Katra, near Bareilly, by the Nawáb Vazir; and subsequently Faizullah Khán, the younger of the two sons of Ali Muhammad, was, by the intervention of the English, confirmed in the possession of the Rámpur territory, as a military vassal of the Nawáb Vazir, in 1774. Nearly twenty years later Faizullah Khán died; the elder of his two sons, Muhammad Ali, was assassinated by the younger, Ghulám Muhammad. The latter took possession of the State, but was speedily ejected by the Nawáb Vazir, with the aid of the British, in favour of Ahmad Ali, infant son of the murdered prince, in 1794. In 1801 Rohilkhand was formally ceded to the British; whereon the Nawáb Ahmad Ali became a feudatory of the British Power. He died in 1840, and was succeeded by his cousin, Muhammad Sayyid (son of the above-mentioned Ghulám Muhammad), to the exclusion of his only daughter. On the death of the Nawáb Muhammad Sayyid in 1855 he was succeeded by his eldest son, afterwards the Nawáb Sir Muhammad Yusuf Ali Khán, K.C.S.I.; who, for exhibiting "from the commencement of the rebellion of 1857 to the end, his unswerving loyalty to the British Government, by affording personal and pecuniary aid, protecting the lives of Christians, and rendering other good services," received a large accession of territory, many additional honours and titles (including the Knight Commandership of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, and an increase to the number of guns in his salute), and a khilat. Sir Muhammad died in 1864, and was succeeded by his son, afterwards the Nawáb Sir Kalb Ali Khán Bahádur,

G.C.S.I., C.I.E. He was a Persian and Arabic scholar of repute. In 1877, at the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, he was granted a personal salute of seventeen guns; he had already been created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India in 1875, and he was made a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire. Sir Kalb died on the 23rd March 1887, and was succeeded by his son, the late Nawáb Mushtáq Ali Khán, who suffered from continued ill health, and died on 25th February 1889. He left two sons, of whom the elder, the Nawáb Hamid Ali Khán Bahádur, Wali, is the present Nawáb; while the younger, the Sahebzáda Násir Ali Khán, aged eight, is his brother's heir-presumptive. During the minority of the Nawáb the administration is carried on by a Council of State, consisting of the following:—President, the Nawáb Safdar Ali Khán; Members, General Azim-ud-din Khán, Khán Bahádur (Vice-President), Nawáb Yar Jang Bahádur, and Sayyid Ali Hasan. The State has an area of 941 square miles; its population is 941,914, rather more than half being Hindus, and rather less than half being Muhammadans. The Nawáb maintains a military force of 598 cavalry, 2417 infantry, and 28 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 13 guns.

Residence.—Rámpur, North-Western Provinces.

RAMPUR, RAI NARAYAN BALI, Rai of.

Born 1864; succeeded his father, the late Rai Maháráj Báli of Rámpur, 7th September 1889. The title of Rai was first conferred for services rendered to the Mughal Empire in the time of the Emperor Akbar, and was recognised by the British Government as hereditary in 1877. Belongs to a family that for many years before the annexation held the office of Sighadár or Kanungo, and rendered valuable services to the Oudh Government for several generations. The names of his ancestors, the Rais Sobhá Rai and Sital Prasád, are famous in the history of Oudh administration. Rai Sital Prasád was wounded near Sanehi by certain recusant Zamindárs, but he ultimately reduced them to submission. He was succeeded by Rai Abhirám Báli, who was an Honorary Assistant Commissioner of Oudh; and he was followed by his son, the late Rai Maháráj Báli, father of the present Rai. Both Rai Naráyan Bali and his father, the late Rai, have been Honorary Magistrates.

Residence.—Daryabad, Bara Banki, Oudh.

RAMPURA, THAKUR UDAJI NARANJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1856; succeeded to the gadi 24th June 1889. Belongs to a Koli (Hindu) family. The population of the State is about 717, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Rámpura, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

RAMRAI, RAI SINGH, Seim of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1844; succeeded to the gadi 14th April 1883. Belongs to a Khási family. The population of the State—which is one of the group called “the Khási and Jaintia Hill States”—is 2209, and consists of Khásis and Christian converts.

Residence.—Ramrai, Khási and Jaintia Hills, Assam.

RAMZAN ABDULLA, Khán Saheb.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 24th May 1889.

Residence.—Karáchi, Sind.

RAN BAHADUR SINGH (of Tikári), Rájá.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1890. The Tikári family is descended from the Mahárájá Sandar Singh, who is said to have obtained his title for services rendered to the Nawáb Alivardi Khán, Názim of Murshidabad. He was succeeded by his son, the Mahárájá Baniyad Singh; from whom was descended the Mahárájá Mitrajit Singh of Tikári, who died in 1840, leaving two sons, Hetnáráyan Singh and Modináráyan Singh. The former received a sanad, granting him the title of Mahárájá, in 1845. He died without issue, and his widow, the late Maháráni Indrájit Kunwar, adopted her nephew, the late Mahárájá Rám Krishna Singh, to whom the title of Mahárájá was granted on 8th May 1873.

Residence.—Gaya, Bengal.

RAN BIJAI BAHADUR SINGH (of Patti Saifabad), Diwán.

Born 21st September 1856. The title is hereditary. Belongs to the great Bachgoti clan of Rájputs (see Mádhó Prasád Singh, Rai of Adharganj, and Muhammad Ali Khán, Rájá of Hasanpur), which sprang from the Chauhán Rájputs of Mainpuri (see Rámpartáb Singh, Rájá of Mainpuri). The Rai Harbans Rai of Adharganj had two sons, Dingar Singh and Nahar Singh; the former retained the paternal title and estate, the latter became Diwán of Patti Saifabad. Hirda Singh, fifth in descent from Nahar Singh, left seven sons, of whom the eldest, Jai Singh Rai, succeeded him at Patti Saifabad. His grandson Dhir Singh had to part with a portion of his estate (Uriadih) to his younger brother, Bhir Singh. Dhir Singh's two grandsons, Amar Singh and Zabar Singh, both died without heirs; their widows adopted sons, and ultimately, after much disputing, the estate was divided between them. The Diwán Ranjit Singh, who was adopted by Amar Singh's widow, obtained the larger share; and he was the father of the present Diwán, who succeeded to the estate as a minor in 1861. The Diwán was educated at the Wards Institute, Lucknow; and he has two sons.

Residence.—Patti Saifabad, Partágarh, Oudh.

RAN SINGH (of Lakhnadon), Thákur.

See Ram Singh (of Lakhnadon), Thákur.

RANAJIT SINHA (of Nashipur), Kumár.

The title was conferred as a personal distinction.

Residence.—Nashipur, India.

RANASAN, KISHORSINGHJI JIWATSINGHJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Has very recently succeeded to the gadi, on the death of the late Thákur Hamirsinghji, who had succeeded his father, Thákur Wajesinghji, in 1879. Belongs to a very ancient Pramára Rájput family, descended from the Pramára Raos of Chandravati near Mount Abu in Rájputána. Its founder, Jaipál, migrated from Chandravati to Harol in Máhi Kántha in 1227 A.D.; and thirteenth in descent from him was the Thákur Prithvi Ráj, who moved to Ghorwára, and ruled the State of Ranásan from that capital. The area of the State is 101 square miles; its population 4840, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Ranásan, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

RANBIR SINGH, Rájá.

Born 17th May 1852. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 15th September 1875. Belongs to a family of Sikh Bráhmans. Rájá Lál Singh was the last Prime Minister of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore, and on the annexation of the Punjab he was sent to Dehra Dun. During the Mutiny of 1857 the late Rájá evinced much loyalty. On his death he was succeeded by his son, the Rájá Ranbir Singh; who is an Honorary Magistrate.

Residence.—Dehra Dun, North-Western Provinces.

RANDHIA, GHULAM HAIDAR, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Belongs to a Muhammadan family. The area of the State is 3 square miles; its population 539, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Randhia, Káthiáwár, Bombay.

RANDHIR SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1821. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 24th May 1883, for services rendered during the Mutiny of 1857. Belongs to a Kshatriya family, claiming descent from Thákur Singh Rai, who migrated from Baiswára in Oudh to the Jaunpur district, and founded the village of Singramau, the present seat of the family.

Residence.—Singramau, Jaunpur, North-Western Provinces.

RANDHIR SINGH (of Rájá Sánsi), Sardár.

Born 1856. The title is hereditary. The Sardár belongs to the famous Sindhánwália family of the Sánsi clan of Jats, which is the acknowledged head of all Sikh families between the Bias and Indus, and is descended from the same stock as that of the late Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore. The common ancestor, Sardár Budh Singh, had two sons, Chanda Singh and Jodh Singh; from the latter was descended the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, from the former the Sindhánwália Sardárs are descended. Chanda Singh's grandson was Sardár Amir Singh, who had three sons—Sardár Budh Singh, Sardár Wassáwa Singh, and Sardár Lehna Singh. Sardár Wassáwa Singh had two sons, Sardár Ajit Singh and Sardár Ranjodh Singh (father of the present Sardár Randhir Singh of Rájá Sánsi). On the death of the Ráni Chand Kaur, who was killed by the order of the Mahárájá Sher Singh, the Sardárs Ajit Singh and his uncle Lehna Singh plotted with the Rájá Dhyán Singh to remove the Mahárájá; and Ajit Singh slew him with his own hand on 15th September 1843, and afterwards slew the Rájá Dhyán Singh. Subsequently the son of the latter, Rájá Hira Singh, slew both Ajit Singh and Lehna Singh. The present Sardár Randhir Singh succeeded his father, Sardár Ranjodh Singh.

Residence.—Rájá Sánsi, Amritsar, Punjab.

RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR, PANDIT, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1846. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. The Rai Bahádur belongs to an ancient family of repute in Madras, and greatly distinguished himself as a graduate of the University of Madras, where he took the highest honours and the M.A. degree. He was appointed a Fellow of the Madras University in 1872, and Professor of Mathematics in the Presidency College in 1884. Served as Sheriff of Madras in 1891.

Residence.—Madras.

Residence.—Ránipura, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

RANJIT SINGH (of Hatnapur), Rájá.

Born 1827. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred many centuries ago by the ancient Gond Rájás of Mandla, for military services rendered to them by the ancestors of the Rájá, and having been confirmed by the British Government. The Rájá belongs to a Ráj Gond family that has been settled at Hatnapur from time immemorial. He has a nephew, Sangráam Singh, son of his younger brother, Mahráj Singh.

Residence.—Hatnapur, Narsinghpur, Central Provinces.

RANJIT SINGH, THAKUR, Rao Saheb.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1887.

Residence.—Bandanwára, Ajmir.

RANJODH SINGH, NAKAI (of Bahrwál), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being the head of the Bahrwál branch of the great Nakai family, from which the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh chose his Queen, the Ráni Ráj Kaur, mother of Prince Kharak Singh, who afterwards came to the throne as the Mahárájá Kharak Singh. The family is descended from the Chaudhri Hemráj, one of whose sons, Sardár Hira Singh, took possession of the Nakka country about the middle of the last century. On the death of Hira Singh, his son Dal Singh being a minor, his nephew, Sardár Nár Singh, succeeded to the command of the Misl or Confederacy. He was killed in a fight in Kot Kamalia, and was succeeded by his brother, Ram Singh, who became a powerful leader. His son, Sardár Bhagwán Singh, succeeded, and betrothed his sister, the Ráni Ráj Kaur, to the Sardár Ranjit Singh (son of Sardár Mahan Singh, Sukarchakia), afterwards famous as the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh of Lahore—"The Lion of the Punjab." Bhagwán Singh was succeeded by his nephew, Sardár Káhn Singh, who remained faithful in 1846, though his troops and his second son, Atar Singh, who were at Multán with the army, joined the rebels. Káhn Singh was made a Jágirdár Magistrate in 1860. His eldest son, Chhatar Singh, was distinguished for his loyalty; he died in 1857, leaving three sons and two daughters. The present Sardár, Ranjodh Singh, succeeded him, and has two sons, Udho Singh and Naráyan Singh.

Residence.—Lahore, Punjab.

RANPUR, RAJA BENUDHAR BAJRADHAR NARINDRA MAHIPATRA, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born about 1817; succeeded to the gadí 16th March 1845. Belongs to a very ancient Kshatriya family, who claim to have been settled in Orissa as Rájás of Ranpur for 109 generations; of whom, according to tradition, the founder was Básara Básuk. His son was Vikráma Narindra; and the subsequent 108 generations have all borne the ancient Hindu style or title of Narindra. The ninety-eighth Rájá was Kunjavihári Narindra, and he obtained the additional titles of Bajradhar and Mahipatra, which have been borne by all subsequent Rájás. The State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, and one of the most ancient States in Orissa, has an area of 203 square miles; its population is 36,539, chiefly Hindus, but including a good many Kandhs (aboriginal tribe). The Rájá maintains a military force of 954 infantry. He has an adopted son, Kunwár Harihar Birbar Jagadeb.

REWAH, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA VYANKATESH
RAMAN SINGH BAHADUR, Mahārājā of.

Born 23rd July 1876; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 4th February 1880. Belongs to a Bāghel Rājput (Hindu) family, descended from the ancient Chiefs of the illustrious Solanki clan ("Agnikula" or "Sons of Fire"). The founder was Bilagar Deo or Biāg Deo (who gave his name to the Baghel sept), who came from Gujarāt about 1057 A.D., conquered the territory between Kālpī and Chandalgarh, and married the daughter of the Rājā of Pīrhawān. His son, Kurun Deo, made further conquests, annexing the Rewah territory, which he named Baghelkhand. He married the daughter of the Rājā of Mandla, and obtained with her the great fort of Bandogarh. In the time of the nineteenth Rājā, Birbhan Rao, who succeeded in 1601, the family of the Emperor Humāyun took refuge in Rewah when driven from Delhi by Sher Shāh. In 1618 the Rājā Vikramāditya built the fort and town of Rewah, which has ever since been the capital of the State. In the time of the twenty-seventh Rājā, Abdut Singh, who succeeded as an infant, the fort of Rewah was captured by Hardi Shāh, the Bundela Rājā of Panna (q.v.); but after a time Abdut Singh (who had fled with his mother to Partābgarh) returned, aided by some Imperial troops from Delhi, and drove out the Rājā of Panna. He was succeeded by the Rājā Ajit Singh. The Rājā Jai Singh Deo succeeded in 1809, and in 1812 obtained the British guarantee in a treaty of that year, and again in a treaty of 1813. Rājā Bishnāth Singh (son of Jai Singh Deo) was succeeded in 1834 by his son, the late Mahārājā Raghurāj Singh, father of the present Mahārājā. Mahārājā Raghurāj Singh abolished sati throughout his dominions in 1847. During the Mutiny of 1857 he rendered excellent service to Government, and received as a reward a large accession of territory, and in 1864 was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He was also granted a sanad of adoption; and his salute was increased to 19 guns by the addition of 2 guns personal to His Highness. He died in 1880, and was succeeded by the present Mahārājā, during whose minority the Political Agent of Rewah has had charge of the State, assisted by a Council of ten Sardārs, members of His Highness's family. The family flag is yellow in colour. The crest is a hand with a flame (indicating the origin of the family as "Agnikulas" or "Sons of Fire"), with a Sanskrit motto meaning "God is our trust." The arms are, in the upper half of the shield, the tilak or sacred mark always worn by the Mahārājā; in base, a tiger rampant; supporters, tigers. The motto is in Sanskrit, meaning "Fear to oppose the tiger." The area of the State is about 13,000 square miles (nearly equal to the combined area of Saxony and Württemberg); its population 1,305,124, chiefly Hindus, but including 31,107 Muhammadans, 139,626 Gonds (aboriginal tribe), and 162,481 Kols (aboriginal tribe). The Mahārājā maintains a military force of 691 cavalry, 3135 infantry, and 55 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns.

Residence.—Rewah, Baghelkhand, Central India.

REZA ALI KHAN, Sardár. See Muhammad Reza Ali Khán.

REZA HUSAIN, SAYYID KAZI, Khán Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 6th July 1888, "for his liberality and public spirit."

Residence.—Patna, Bengal.

RICHPAL SINGH (of Malkhorda), Thákur.

Born 1859. The title is hereditary. The Thákur belongs to a Gond (aboriginal) family, descended from the Thákur Balrám Singh, who received a confirmation of his title, and the jágir of Malkhorda, from the British Government in 1844. The family has the curious cognisance or device of a dagger for the Thákur's seal and signature.

Residence.—Malkhorda, Sambalpur, Central Provinces.

RICHPAL SINGH, SINDHU (of Siranwali), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár belongs to a Sindhu Jat family of eminence, descended from the Sardár Durga Singh. His son, Sardár Lál Singh, married a daughter, the Ráni Isar Kaur, to the Mahárájá Kharak Singh of Lahore. Lál Singh's son, the Sardár Mangal Singh, was the father of the present Sardár Richhpál Singh.

Residence.—Siranwali, Siálkot, Punjab.

ROMESH CHANDRA DATTA, C.I.E.

Mr. Datta is a member of the Bengal Civil Service (Covenanted). He obtained his place by competitive examination in London, in which he greatly distinguished himself. He is now a Magistrate and Collector in Bengal, and was created a C.I.E. on 25th May 1892.

Residence.—Bengal.

RUDR PARSAD, CHAUDHRI, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

Residence.—Sitamarhi, Bengal.

RUDR PARSHAD SINGH (of Singrauli), Rájá.

Born 1869. The title is hereditary. The Rájá belongs to the Kharwár tribe of Rájputs; but the family are now styled Benbans Rájputs. They are descended from a Kharwár Chief who came from Rewah into Singrauli, and married the daughter of the Chief of Raipur in that Parganá. He and his son and grandson gradually got possession of the whole Parganá; but the last named was driven out by the allied forces of the Rájás of Agori Bárhar and Bardi about 350 years ago. For nine generations the family were in exile; then two brothers, Daryao Singh and Dalel Singh, twelfth in descent from the founder of the family, reconquered some of the Singrauli territory. Daryao Singh's son was Fakir Sáh, who assumed the title of Rájá about 180 years ago. He was succeeded by his son, the Rájá Rudra Sáh, who was in possession at the time when the Benares Province passed under British rule, and he was recognised in 1792. The present Rájá succeeded on the death of his father, the late Rájá Udit Náráyan Singh, in 1886.

Residence.—Gaharwárgaon, Singrauli, Mirzapur, North-Western Provinces.

RUDR PARTAB SAH (of Dera), Rájá.

Born 18th August 1860. The title is hereditary. Belongs to the great Bachgoti clan of Rájputs (see Mádho Prasád Singh, Rai of Adharganj, and Muhammad Ali Khán, Rájá of Hasanpur), which sprang from the Chauhán Rájputs of Mainpuri (see Rámpartáb Singh, Rájá of Mainpuri). This branch of the clan bears the name of "Rájkumár," which is frequently the style of junior branches of Rájput families. The family history down to the time of Bariár Singh is given under Mádho Prasád Singh, Rai of Adharganj. The Rájá of Dera is the most important of all the Chiefs descended from Bariár Singh. The grandson of the latter, named Asre Singh, settled at Bhadaian, and built a fort there. Bijai Chand, sixth in descent from Asre Singh, had four sons, one of whom led a colony across the Gumti river, and settled at Dera, where his descendants have remained ever since. The late

Rájá Mádho Singh, who was in possession at the end of the last century, fought a great battle at Masora with the Bachgotis of Meopur, and defeated them in 1798 A.D. He died childless in 1823, and was succeeded by his widow, the Thákurain Dariyao Kunwár, a most remarkable and able woman, who for twenty-five years held her own among most turbulent neighbours, and even added to the estate. In 1838 she annexed the valuable táluk of Barsinghpur, and killed the Gargbansi Thákur to whom it had belonged. She was on bad terms with the next male heir, Rustam Sáh, and wished to set him aside in favour of the niece of her late husband, a lady named Díháj Kunwár. Rustam Sáh in 1846 tried to take Dera by storm, but failed in the attempt, and his father, Chhatarsál, was slain in the assault. Subsequently the Názim, Rájá Mán Singh, favoured the pretensions of Rustam Sáh; and at last the latter seized the opportunity when the Thákurain had gone unattended to Ajudhya to bathe, to take her prisoner. He carried her off across the Gogra river, and forced her to sign a deed of transfer of the Dera estate in his favour; so great, however, was the shock that her proud spirit had sustained, that she died of grief soon after. The Názim then wished to treat the estate as an escheat, but ultimately Rustam Sáh obtained possession. He rendered distinguished service during the Mutiny of 1857. When the régiments in the neighbouring cantonments of Sultanpur mutinied, five officers escaped to his fort at Dera; he sheltered the party for a fortnight, and then sent them to Benares under the escort of his brother, Bariár Singh. Whilst they were in the fort a sawár (trooper) arrived with an order from the Maulavi of Faizabad to deliver up the fugitives; Rustam Sáh tore up the letter in Captain Bunbury's presence, and bid the messenger return to his master with the fragments as the Rájput's reply. He actively engaged in aiding the Jaunpur authorities, garrisoning their posts, collecting supplies, and assisting the Gurkhas and other British forces. Both the Rájá Rustam Sáh and his brother Bariár Singh received substantial rewards for their services on the restoration of order. In 1860 the Rájá was invested with the powers of an Assistant Magistrate and Collector. He died in 1877, and was succeeded by his nephew, the present Rájá, who is also a Magistrate.

Residence.—Dera, Sultánpur, Oudh.

RUDR PARTAB SINGH (of Unaula), Rájá.

Born 1791. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Sarnet Rájput family, descended from the same ancestors as those of the Thákurs of Bánsi. Rájá Chandra Sen had three sons, of whom the third, Rájá Randhir, occupied the Parganá of Unaula. The Rájá Rudr Partáb Singh has a son and heir, Mahesh Partáb Singh, aged about sixty-six.

Residence.—Unaula, Gorákhpur, North-Western Provinces.

RUDR PARTAB SINGH (of Uriadih), Diwán.

Born 2nd August 1849. The title is hereditary. The Diwán belongs to the great Bachgoti clan of Rájputs (see Mádho Prasád Singh, Rai of Adharganj, and Muhammad Ali Khán, Rájá of Hasanpur), which sprang from the Chauhán Rájputs of Mainpuri (see Rám Partáb Singh, Rájá of Mainpuri). The descent of this family down to the Diwán Bhir Singh is given in the account of the Diwán of Patti Saifabad (see Ran Bijai Bahádúr Singh, Diwán of Patti Saifabad). On the division of the paternal estates between Bhir Singh and his elder brother, Dhir Singh, the latter retained Patti Saifabad, the former obtained Uriadih, which has ever since remained in the possession of his descendants, and has been considerably increased by them. One of the latter, the Diwán Pirthipál Singh, is famous for his fight at Lohár Tára with his kinsman, Rai Bindsri Bakhsh of Adharganj (Dalippur), in which the latter was killed. His son, the Diwán Sarabjit Singh, consolidated this estate, and on his death in 1879 was succeeded by his son, the present Diwán. The latter has a son and heir.

The Santak of the Chauhán Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature. (A circle with four Trisulas or Tridents as radii at the cardinal points.)

Residence.—Uriadih, Partágarh, Oudh.

RUKN-UD-DIN SAYYID SAHEB KADIRI, HAJI MAULAVI, Shams-ul-Ulama.

Born 1852. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, for eminence in oriental learning. It entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Nawábs.

Residence.—Vellore, Madras.

RUP NARAYAN SINGH, Kumár.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 18th July 1861, in recognition of his position as son of the late Mahárájá Bhup Singh Bahádur, and brother of the late Mahárájá Mahipat Singh Bahádur, who died in 1879. Is a descendant of the Mahárájá Shitáb Rai Bahádur, who was appointed Diwán of Subah Behar by the Emperor Alamgir II. of Delhi in 1754 A.D., and who subsequently rendered good services to the British Government. He was succeeded by his eldest son, the Mahárájá Kalyan Singh Bahádur, and the great-grandson of the latter was the late Mahárájá Bhup Singh Bahádur.

Residence.—Patna, Bengal.

RUP SAH (of Jagamanpur), Rájá.

Born 10th March 1854. The title is hereditary. Is the Chief of the Sengar clan of Rájputs in the Jálaun district, and is descended from the Rájá Bápuki, who in early times received his title and the táluk of Jagamanpur from the Rájá Tej Chandra of Kanauj. His descendant, the Rájá Ratan Sáh, received a confirmation of this grant in 1717 A.D. from the Peshwá, Raghunáth Rao Baloji. Ratan Sáh's grandson was the late Rájá Mahbat Sáh. The present Rájá was educated at the Wards' Institution at Benares, and is an Honorary Magistrate. He has a son and heir, the Kunwár Janmejai Singh, aged about seventeen.

Residence.—Jagamanpur, Jálaun, North-Western Provinces.

RUP SINHA (of Bhareh), Rájá.

Born October 1827. The title is hereditary. Is the Chief of the Sengar clan of Rájputs in the district of Etáwah, where the clan settled in the 12th century. The late Rájá Mukat Singh, on his death, left two sons, Partáb Singh and Rup Singh. The former succeeded to the Ráj, and was succeeded by his son, Rájá Mahendra Singh, who died in 1871 without issue. After subsequent litigation the present Rájá Rup Singh (second son of Rájá Mukat Singh) succeeded in 1884.

Residence.—Bhareh, Etáwah, North-Western Provinces.

RUPAL, THAKUR MANSINGHJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 2nd June 1846; succeeded to the gadi as a minor on the death of the late Thákur Partápsinghji, 22nd July 1847. SACHIN, NAWAB SIDI NAJAF ALI KHAN, Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1886; succeeded to the gadi as an infant in February 1887. Belongs to an Abyssinian (Sunni Muhammadan) family, long known as the Habshi Sidis of Danda-Rájápur and Janjira. They were originally (see Janjira, Nawáb of) Admirals of the fleets of the Kings of Ahmadnagar and Bijápur; and were subsequently appointed to the same office under the Mughal Empire by Aurangzeb, about the year 1660. During the decline of the Mughal Power the Sidis of Janjira became notorious for their piracies. About the year 1784 Bálu Miá Sidi, the heir to the Janjira gadi, was expelled by a junior branch of the same family, who still retain Janjira. He was given Sachin by the Peshwá in exchange for his rights over Janjira; but the Peshwás never succeeded in enforcing those rights, though Sachin has remained in the hands of Bálu Miá Sidi and his descendants to the present day. The late Nawáb, Sidi Abdul Kádir Muhammad Yácut Khán, died in 1887, and was succeeded by the present Nawáb. The State is composed of many small detached portions, chiefly in the British district of Surat, and partly in Baroda territory. Its area is 42 square miles; its population 19,150, chiefly Hindus. The Nawáb maintains a military force of 5 cavalry, 52 infantry, and 4 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Oudh.

SAHEB SINGH (of Dayálgarh), Sardár.

Born 1812. The title is hereditary. The Sardár is a grandson of Sardár Charat Singh, who was the only son of Sardár Jai Singh. Sardár Jai Singh joined the misl or confederation that opposed Zain Khán, the Mughal Governor of Sirhind, who was slain in battle. The family rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857, and was rewarded at its close. Sardár Charat Singh married three wives, by all of whom he had children, who succeeded to the estate in accordance with the rule of Chanda Vand, which obtains in this family. The Sardár is the first cousin of Sardar Albel Singh of Lidhran (q.v.), and other Sikh Sardárs. He has three sons—Sardárs Shamsher Singh, Sher Singh (q.v.), and Kehr Singh.

Residence.—Dayálgarh, Ambála, Punjab.

SAHEB SINGH, Rao.

Born 1818. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 30th August 1859, for his good services rendered during the Mutiny of 1857. Belongs to a family that came from Gujarát in the Punjab, first moved to Hissár, and finally settled at Mandlána about 400 years ago. Its founder was Ratan, a Gujar of the Dapa got. In 1857 Saheb Singh placed the whole of his resources, and the sawárs of the Landhaura Ráj, at the disposal of the Magistrate; and after the earlier outbreak of the Gujars, assisted by his influence in keeping that turbulent community in subjection. When the Thána Bhawan insurrection occurred he marched with all his followers (some 200 or 300 men) and some small guns to Rámpur on the borders of the Muzaffarnagar districts, to prevent any inroads thence. He also joined the Magistrate in watching the Ganges opposite Bijnor. For these services he received not only the title, but also a considerable grant of land.

Residence.—Saháranpur, North-Western Provinces.

SAHEB SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. Belongs to a Khanna Kshatriya family; and rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857 in Rohilkhand, both by supplying information to the authorities there and in other ways. Is a Banker, an Honorary Magistrate, and a Member of the Municipal Commission of Delhi. He has a son and heir, named Indar Mal.

Residence.—Delhi, Punjab.

SAIF ALI KHAN, KHAKHAR (of Pind Dádan Khán), Rájá.

Born 1843. The title is hereditary. The Rájá is the head of a family of high Rájput origin, who settled near the Salt Range about the year 1623 A.D.; when Dádan Khán, a Khakhar Rájput in the service of the Emperor Jahángir, built a town at the foot of the Salt Range, which he called after his own name. Pind Dádan Khán soon became a flourishing town, and the centre of the salt trade. Dádan Khán left three sons—Shafi Khán (from whom descend the Rájás of Ahmadabad), Fateh Muhammad Khán (the ancestor of the Rájás of Pind Dádan Khán), and Firoz Khán. Sardár Charat Singh, the grandfather of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh, conquered the Khakhar country, but allowed the Rájá of Ahmadabad to hold his Chiefship. The Rájá of Pind Dádan Khán was treated with equal leniency; but having revolted early in the reign of Ranjit Singh, he was utterly defeated, and Pind Dádan Khán was taken from him, though he was allowed to retain a smaller jágir. In 1848-49 the Khakhar Chiefs joined the rebels, and all their estates were confiscated; but subsequently certain pensions were restored in favour of the Rájá Shamsher Ali Khán, father of the present Rájá Saif Ali Khán (as also of his kinsman, Sultán Ahmad Khan of the Ahmadabad family). The Rájá Saif Ali Khán succeeded his father, Rájá Shamsher Ali Khán.

Residence.—Pind Dádan Khán, Jhelum, Punjab.

SAILANA, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA DULEH SINGH, Rájá of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1841; succeeded to the gadi as a minor in 1850. Is descended, through Jai Singh, a younger brother of the Rájá Mán Singh of Ratlám, from the family of the Chiefs of the illustrious Ráhtor clan of Rájputs. In 1631 Rájá Ratan Singh, a scion of the Jodhpur House, obtained from the Emperor Sháh Jahán of Delhi the title of Rájá and the State of Ratlám, which at that time included Sailána and Sitámau. On the death of the Rájá Kesari Singh of Ratlám in 1709, his eldest son, Mán Singh, became Rájá of Ratlám, and the younger, Jai Singh, became Rájá of Sailána. Jai Singh's descendants became tributary to Sindhia, and subsequently passed under the control of the British Power. The state has an area of 113 square miles; and a population of 29,723, chiefly Hindus, but including about 7000 belonging to aboriginal tribes. BAHADUR, *Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 8th October 1843; succeeded to the gadi 3rd February 1865. Belongs to a Gujar (Hindu) family, descended from Nuni Sháh Rájdhár, a Diwán of the State of Dattia, who held from Dattia a jágir, of which Samthar was a part. His great-grandson, Rájá Ranjit Singh I., declared himself an independent Rájá in Samthar, towards the close of the 18th century. He died without issue, and was succeeded by a collateral, Rájá Ranjit Singh II. ; who received a treaty guaranteeing protection from the British Government in 1817. His descendant was the late Rájá Hindupat ; who was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, in 1865. The area of the State is 174 square miles ; its population is 38,633, chiefly Hindus, but including 2284 Muhammadans. His Highness maintains a military force of 290 cavalry, 2275 infantry, and 46 guns ; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns. The Maharájá has several sons—Himat Bahádur Birsinghdeo, Suraiia Jah Vikramáditya Bahádur, Lokindra Jagatráj Bahádur. The family motto is Drarh Charan, Bhu Waran ("The firm foot takes the territory").

Residence.—Samthar, Bundelkhand, Central India.

SANDUR, RAJA RAMCHANDRA VITAL RAO SAHEB,

Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1849 ; succeeded to the gadi 5th February 1879. Belongs to a Mahratta (Hindu) family ; descended from Malaji Rao Ghorpae, an officer in the Bijápur army, whose son, Biraji, entered the service of Sivaji the Great. Biraji's son, Sidaji, took Sandur from the Bidar Poligár or Chief ; and his conquest was confirmed to him by Sambhaji, the successor of Sivaji. He died in 1715, and was succeeded by his second son, Gopál Rao. Sandur was captured by the Sultán Haidar of Mysore, whose successor, Tippu Sultán, completed the fort ; and Gopál Rao's son, Siva Rao, was killed in 1785 in a battle with the Mysore forces. After the fall of Tippu in 1799 the Peshwá claimed the suzerainty of Sandur ; and at his request Sir Thomas Munro with a British force reduced the fort in 1817. In 1818, after the downfall of the Peshwá's government, Siva Rao II., the adopted son of Sidalji (son of Siva Rao I.), was placed on the gadi ; and he received a sanad from the British Government in 1826. He died in 1840, and was succeeded by his nephew, Venkat Rao ; the latter died in 1861, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Siva Shan Mukha Rao. He received the hereditary title of Rájá from Lord Northbrook's Government—the Chiefs having previously been styled Jágirdárs of Sandur. He died in 1878, and was succeeded by his half-brother, the present Rájá. The State (which is enclosed by the British district of Bellary, except on a small piece of its frontier, which marches with that of Mysore) has an area of 140 square miles, and a population of 14,999, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 2 guns.

Residence.—Sandur, Madras.

SANGLI, DHUNDI RAO CHINTAMAN, Chief of.

"Tatia Saheb."

A Ruling Chief.

Born 12th July 1838 ; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 15th July 1851. Belongs to the Patwardhan family of Konkani Bráhmans, like the Chiefs of Miraj ; descended from Haribhat, who was a military leader under the first Peshwá. In 1772 the State of Miraj descended to Chintáman Rao, grandson of Govind Rao Hari, to whom it had first been granted by the Peshwá ; and, as he was only a child of six years, his uncle Gangádhar Rao acted as Regent. Ultimately the State was divided between the uncle and the nephew, the former taking Miraj, whilst Sánгли fell to Chintáman Rao. On the fall of the Peshwá's Government in 1818, Chintáman Rao, the father of the present Chief, became a British feudatory; and in 1846 he received a Sword of Honour from the East India Company for his loyalty and high character. He died in 1851, and was succeeded by his son, the present Chief. The area of the state is 1083 square miles; its population is 196,832, chiefly Hindus. The Chief maintains a military force of 54 cavalry, 433 infantry, and 4 guns.

Residence.—Sánгли, Southern Mahratta Country, Bombay.

SANGRI, RAI MIAN HIRA SINGH, Mián of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1856; succeeded to the gadi 30th September 1876. Belongs to a Rájput family whose founder was a scion of the House of Kulu, who settled in the Sánгри territory. His descendants were feudatories of the Sikh Government of the Punjab until 1846. On the annexation of the territories on the left bank of the Sutlej in 1847 by the British Government, the Mián of Sánгри was confirmed in the possession of his estate. The courtesy title of the eldest son of the Mián is Tika. The late Rai Mián Jhagar Singh died in 1876, and was succeeded by his son, the present Mián. The area of the State, which is one of the Simla Hill States, is 16 square miles; its population is 2593, nearly all Hindus. The Mián maintains a military force of 10 infantry.

Residence.—Sánгри, Simla Hills, Punjab.

SANJELI, THAKUR PRATAPSINGHJI, Thákur of.

Residence.—Sanjeli, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

SANT SINGH (of Sikandra), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár belongs to a Sikh family, descended from Sardár Dargaha Singh, who acquired a large territory in the Ambála district, Punjab, by conquest in 1759 A.D. He left four sons, of whom the eldest, Sardár Charat Singh, was the grandfather of the present Sardár. Sardár Charat Singh was succeeded by his son, the late Sardár Bhág Singh; whose eldest son, Sardár Sant Singh, succeeded him at Sikandra. Sardár Bhág Singh's first cousin—also called Sardár Bhág Singh (q.v.)—is the surviving son of Sardár Agar Singh, younger brother of Sardár Charat Singh.

Residence.—Sikandra, Ambála, Punjab.

SANT SINGH (AIMAWALA), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being the only son of the famous Sikh leader, Sardár Nar Singh. Belongs to an Uppál Ját family, descended from Sardár Natha Singh, who, about the year 1738 A.D., left his home at Lakarki in the Gurdáspur district, and coming to Amritsar district, rebuilt a ruined village, to which he gave the name of Aima—whence the name of the family. His son, the Sardár Suján Singh, inherited the extensive jágers of his uncle, Sardár Dál Singh, as well as the ancestral territory. Sardár Suján Singh died in 1799 A.D.; and his eldest son, the late Sardár Nar Singh, first joined the misl or confederacy formed by Guláb Singh against the Maharájá Ranjit Singh. Subsequently, however, after the death of Guláb Singh, the Sardár Nar Singh joined Ranjit Singh, and accompanied him in some of his most famous campaigns. He successively aided the Maharájá against Sardár Jodh Singh, Atáriwála, against Rájá Sansar Chand of Katoch, and against Háfiz Ahmad Khán of Jhang. On the conquest of Kashmir he received a large jáger in the Jammu territory. In 1823 Sardár Nar Singh fought in the battle of Tehri; in 1835-36 he accompanied the Sikh force under Prince Kharak Singh against the Mazaris of Mithánkot; and during the Sutlej campaign he served under Sardár Ran Jodh Singh, Majithia. He remained faithful to the British Government during the Multán rebellion, and at last this veteran campaigner and brave soldier died, at the age of eighty-five, full of years and honours. He was succeeded by his son, the present Sardár Sant Singh, Aimawála, who has a son and heir, the Sardár Harnám Singh.

Residence.—Aima, Amritsar, Punjab.

SANTALPUR AND CHADCHAT, THAKUR LAKHAJI SAMATSINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1852; succeeded to the gadi as an infant in 1853. Belongs to a Jareja Rájput family, descended from the ancestors of His Highness the Rao of Kutch (q.v.) The Thákur is a Magistrate within the limits of his State, which has an area of 440 square miles, and a population of 20,466, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Sántalpur, Pálanpur, Bombay.

SARABJIT SINGH (of Rámnagar Dhámeri), RAIKWAR. Rájá.

Born 10th November 1820. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred by Shujá-ud-daulá; and the present Rájá succeeded to it in 1857. He is now the Chief of the great Raikwár clan of Rájputs; for though the head of the junior branch of the Chief's family, the senior branch, that of the Rájás of Baundi, disappeared from history after the Mutiny, when their estates were confiscated for rebellion. About the year 1414 A.D. two brothers, Partáb Sáh and Dunde Sáh, Rájputs of the Surájhansi or Solar race, migrated from Raika in Kashmir—whence the tribal name of Raikwár—and finally took up their abode at Bukheri in the Parganá of Sailak.

Partáb Sáh died, leaving three sons—Sáldeo, the ancestor of the Raikwár Rájás of Baundi ; Báldeo, the ancestor of the Raikwár Rájás of Rámnagar Dhámeri ; and Bhairwanand. The nephews pretended a prophecy that the uncle must be sacrificed for the future greatness of the family ; so Dunde Sáh held out his head to be struck off by his nephews, after which the family was prosperous. Bukheri being washed away by the Gogra, the three brothers settled at Chanda Sihali in Fatehpur. In this village a large chabutra (standing by a masonry well, which is stated to have been made by the Bhars) marks the spot where, according to tradition, Bhairwanand, the youngest brother, fell into the well, and was allowed by the other two brothers to remain there, in order to fulfil another prophecy of a Pandit, that their rule in Sailak would endure so long as Bhairwanand remained at the bottom of a well. To the present day pilgrims of the Raikwár clan come annually to worship at the shrine of Bhairwanand. After this Bál and Sál took service with two Bhar Rájás who held large territories on either side of the Gogra. Sál represented their interests at the Court of the Emperor of Delhi, and Bál became their Naib. The Bhar Rájás fell into arrears of revenue, and a force was sent against them by the Emperor of Delhi ; they were overcome and slain, and their territories made over, those on the right bank (Rámnagar Dhámeri) to Bál, and those on the left bank (Bamhnauti, now Baundi) to Sál. In the ninth generation from Bál, Rám Singh adopted his relative Zoráwar Singh, who became the first Rájá of the clan. In 1751 the Raikwárs headed a great Hindu movement to shake off the Musalmán government of Oudh. Under the Rája Anup Singh of Rámnagar, they marched on Lucknow, but were totally defeated by the Shekhzádas at the battle of Chholaghát. After this the family lost much of its possessions, but had recovered most before the British annexation in 1855. The grandson of the Rájá Anup Singh was the Rájá Gur Bakhsh Singh ; who, in the Mutiny of 1857, joined his kinsman the Rájá Hardat Singh of Baundi in rebellion. The latter was transported ; but the former was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, who was not concerned in the rebellion, and thus preserved a portion of the estate. He has been twice married—(1) to the Ráni Chandra Kunwár, and (2) to the Ráni Guláb Kunwár.

Residence.—Suratganj, Rámnagar, Bara Banki, Oudh.

SARABJIT SINGH (of Bhadri), Rai.

Born 10th December 1853 ; succeeded to the estate and title, which is hereditary, on the death of his father, the late Rai Jagat Bahádur Singh, 15th February 1878. Belongs to the Bisen family, of which the head is the Rájá Rámpál Singh of Rámpur (Dharupur),—see Rámpál Singh, Rájá,—while the head of the whole clan of Bisens is the Rájá Udai Naráyan Mal of Majhauri—see Udai Naráyan Mal, Rájá. Of the three sons of Rai Ragho, the eldest, Rai Askaran, became the ancestor of the Rájás of Rámpur ; while the youngest, Khem Karan, became the ancestor of the Rais of Bhadri. After the Bisens had slain the Názim of Oudh, Jeorám Nagar, at the battle of Mánikpur in 1748, they made their peace with the Delhi authorities through the intervention of a Dároga of artillery ; and Jit Singh, the Chief of Bhadri, attended a Darbár and obtained the title of Rai. In 1798 the Názim Mirza Jan visited Bhadri ; he questioned the Rai Daljit Singh about his revenue, with a view to revision, and a quarrel ensued, in which the Rai was killed. His son, Rai Zalim Singh, was thrown into prison at Lucknow for non-payment of the revenue. His wife, the Thákurain Sheoráj Kunwár, boldly collected the rents while her husband was in prison, and was besieged by the Chakládár in the fort at Bhadri; but orders came from Lucknow to stop the attack, and in 1815 the Rai was released and recovered the estate. Again in 1833 the Názim Ehsan Husain besieged Rai Jagmohan Singh in Bhadri, on account of his refusing to pay revenue. After a prolonged siege Jagmohan and his son Bishnáth fled across the border to British territory. At Rámchaura Ghát they were surprised by the Názim and slain, but the Názim was subsequently removed from office because of this violation of British territory. The fort of Bhadri was levelled in 1858 by order of Government; its ruins are still to be seen, covered with picturesque clumps of bamboos.

Residence.—Bhadri, Partábgarh, Oudh.

SARAIKELAH, RAJA UDITNARAYAN SINGH DEO BAHADUR, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1848; succeeded to the gadí 25th November 1883. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, descended from a scion of the Porahat house of Orissa. The head of the family anciently bore the title of Kunwár, bestowed by the Rájás of Porahat. They appear to have been recognised as Rájás by the Governments of Lord Wellesley and Lord Minto; and in 1856 the late Rájá Chakardhár Singh Deo, father of the present Rájá, received the title of Rájá Bahádur for his loyalty, high position, approved public and personal character, and the good services rendered by his father, Azambhar Singh, in the Bol Campaign of 1837. The late Rájá rendered excellent service during the Mutiny of 1857; he died in 1883, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá. By the custom of the State the eldest son of the ruling Rájá bears the title of Tikait. The area of the State (which is one of the Chota Nágpur Tributary Mahals) is 459 square miles; its population is 77,097, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá has a military force of 4 guns.

Residence.—Saraikelah, Chota Nágpur, Bengal.

Was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1886.

Residence.—Calcutta.

SARDAR SINGH (of Katehra), Rájá Bahádur.

Born 1858. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 19th March 1880, in recognition of his position as representative of his kinsman, the late Rájá Ranmast Singh, adopted son and heir of the late Rájá Senapat Singh, Rao of Katehra. The Rájá belongs to the great Bundela Rájput family of which His Highness the Mahárájá of Orchha is the head, and from which are descended most of the principal feudatory Chiefs of Bundelkhand. The Rao Senapat of Katehra in Jhansi rendered most valuable services to Government during the Mutiny of 1857, as a reward for which he obtained the title of Rájá Bahádur, as a personal distinction, and to descend to his son, natural or adopted, and also a handsome khiyat and a grant of land. He was succeeded by his adopted son, the late Rájá Ranmast Singh; and the latter by the present Rájá, son of Lachhman Singh, who was a brother of the Rájá Senapat Bahádur.

Residence.—Katehra, Jhansi, North-Western Provinces.

SARDAR SINGH (of Dhangaon), Ráwat.

Born 14th March 1835. The title is hereditary, and the Ráwat or Rao has also been styled the Rájá of Mandhata. Belongs to a Bhilala family; descended from Bhárat Singh, a Rájput Chief of the great Chauhán clan. He established himself in the island of Mandhata in the year 1165 A.D.; and married the daughter of Nathu, the former Bhil Chief of that island.

Residence.—Dhangaon, Nimár, Central Provinces.

SARGUJA, MAHARAJA RAGHUNATH SARAN SINGH DEO, Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1860; succeeded to the gadi 25th March 1879. Belongs to a Rájput Raksel (Hindu) family; which was compelled in 1758 to submit to the Mahrattas, and became feudatories of Berar. In 1818 the State passed under British control, by an agreement with Madhuji Bhonsle (Appa Saheb). In 1826 the title of Mahárájá was conferred on the Chief. He died in 1851, and was succeeded by the late Mahārājā Indrajit Singh Deo, who died in 1879, and was succeeded by his son, the present Mahārājā. By the custom of the family the eldest son of the ruling Mahārājā bears the courtesy title of Jubarāj or Yuvarāj. The area of the State, which is the largest and most important of the Chota Nāgpur Tributary Mahals, is 6103 square miles; its population is 270,336, chiefly Hindus of aboriginal descent, including many Gonds and Urāons. The Mahārājā has a military force of 1 gun.

Residence.—Bisrámpur, Sarguja, Chota Nāgpur, Bengal.

SARILA, RAJA PAHAR SINGH, Rājā of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1875; succeeded to the gādī as a minor 19th August 1882. Belongs to the famous Bundela family of Rājputs that has given ruling families to Orchha, Panna, Dattia, Ajaigarh, Charkhāri, and most of the other States of Bundelkhand. Jagat Rāj, the second son of the great Mahārājā Chhatarsāl of Panna, became Chief of Jaitpur; and from him descend the Chiefs of Ajaigarh, Bijāwar, Charkhāri, and Sarila. His eldest son, Kirat Singh, was the ancestor of the Ajaigarh and Charkhāri families; the second, Bir Singh Deo, of the Bijāwar House; and the third, Pahār Singh, retained the Jaitpur Chiefship. He had two sons, of whom the elder, Gaj Singh, retained Jaitpur, while the younger, Rājā Man Singh, became Rājā of Sarila. He was succeeded by Tej Singh, who obtained a sanad from the British Government in 1807. His son and grandson reigned in succession; and the latter, dying childless, was succeeded by a collateral relative, named Khalak Singh, in 1871. He died in 1882, and was succeeded by his son the present Rājā. The area of the State is 36 square miles; its population is 5014, chiefly Hindus. The Rājā maintains a military force of 8 cavalry, 116 infantry, and 6 guns.

Residence.—Sarila, Bundelkhand, Central India.

SARNET SINGH (of Katra Belkhera), Thākur.

Born 1835. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred by Nizām Shāh, Gond Rājā of Mandla, and recognised by the British Government. His father, the Thākur Hindupati of Katra Belkhera, rendered excellent service during the Mutiny of 1857. The Thākur Sarnet Singh is a brother of the Thākurs Jawāhir Singh and Dirjan Singh of Katra Belkhera in Jabalpur.

Residence.—Calcutta.

SARUP SINGH, MALWAI, Sardár.

Born 1850. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Mán Jat family of Sikh Sardárs, formerly resident in Nábha. The Sardár Dhanna Singh, son of Mal Singh, and great-grandfather of the present Sardár, entered the service of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh in 1800 A.D., and rapidly rose to favour. He was one of the agents sent by Ranjit Singh to Wazir Fatheh Khán to arrange for the interview which took place between them at Jhelum in 1812. He fought in several campaigns, and died in May 1843, his son Bachattar Singh having died before him. The son and successor of the latter, Sardár Kirpál Singh, was with Rájá Sher Singh at Multán in 1848; but when the Rájá rebelled, he went over to the camp of Major Edwardes, and as a reward received a large accession of territory at the annexation. He died in 1859; and was succeeded by his only son, the present Sardár, as a minor.

Residence.—Lahore, Punjab.

SARUP SINGH (of Maniwára), Rao Saheb.

The title is hereditary, the Rao Saheb being the brother of Rao Saheb Dharup Singh (q.v.) The ancestor of this family, Kehári Singh, did good service with Sultán Muhammad, Nawáb of Rahatgarh, in consideration of which he received the title of Rao Saheb, and a grant of land. The Rao Saheb Jag Ráj Singh was succeeded by the present Rao Saheb.

Residence.—Maniwára, Ságár, Central Provinces.

SAURENDRA MOHAN TAGOR, SIR, KT., C.I.E., Rájá.

See Tagore.

SAVANUR, ABDUL TABRIZ KHAN DILER JANG BAHADUR,

Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1864; succeeded to the gadi in 1885. Belongs to an Afghán (Muhammadan) family, descended from Abdul Karim Khán, who had a village near Delhi granted to him by the Emperor of Delhi. Seventeenth in descent from him was Ragti Bahlol, who was in the service of the Mughal Emperor Sháh Jahán; and being dissatisfied with his position therein, quitted it, and took service under Ali Adil Sháh, King of Bijápúr. His grandson, Abdul Karim Khán, greatly distinguished himself by suppressing a revolt of Paligárs and Jamádárs in the Deccan, and Sikandar Adil Sháh granted him a very large jágir. Abdul Karim Khán's eldest son became the founder of the powerful family of the Nawábs of Cuddapah (Kadapá), in the Madras Presidency; whilst his fourth son, Abdul Rauf Khán, who had married a daughter of Ali Adil Sháh, the King of Bijápúr, succeeded to the ancestral estate. In 1680, when the King was hard pressed in Bijápúr by the Emperor Aurangzeb, he sent Abdul Rauf Khán to deliver up the seal and insignia of State to the conqueror; and by the address with which he conducted the negotiations, Abdul Rauf Khán rose high in Aurangzeb's favour. He received from the Emperor the grant of the jágir of Bankápúr, Torgal, and Azimnagar, with the title of Dalel Khán Bahádúr Diler Jang, and a mansab or command of 7000 horse. After a reign of thirty-five years, Abdul Rauf Khán died in 1715, and was succeeded by his son, Abdul Gafur Khán. The latter was followed by his son, Abdul Majid Khán, who ruled from 1722 to 1751, and raised the power of Savanur to its highest pitch. He was slain in a battle with the forces of Muzaffar Jang, the Subahdár of the Deccan; who was himself subsequently slain by the Nawábs of Cuddapah and Karnal in revenge. Abdul Majid's son, Abdul Hakim Khán Saheb, succeeded in 1752, and ruled for forty years. He was frequently involved in war with the Sultan Haidar Ali of Mysore; but ultimately a marriage was arranged between the daughter of Haidar Ali (sister of Tippu Sultán) and the son of the Nawáb, and the Mysore sovereign conferred on the Nawáb the sovereignty over twelve districts on condition of military service. Tippu, however, attacked the Nawáb, whereupon the latter transferred his allegiance to the Mahrattas. When Tippu crossed the Tungabhadra and marched to Savanur, the Nawáb was joined by Holkar, and also by Hari Pant, the famous Mahratta leader; and ultimately a treaty of peace was concluded in 1787, by which Tippu engaged to restore the Nawáb's jágir. The Nawáb obtained a large pension from the Peshwá; which was subsequently converted, at the instance of General Wellesley (afterwards Duke of Wellington), into an equivalent grant of territory. From 1792 to 1826 Abdul Khair Khán occupied the gadi at Savanur, and was succeeded by three sons, the first two of whom only survived their accession to the gadi a very short time. The third son, Abdul Dalel Khán Saheb, was better educated than most Musalmán nobles; and in recognition of his ability and high character he was appointed in 1862 a Member of the Legislative Council of Bombay. He died in the same year, and was succeeded by his son, the Nawáb Abdul Khair Khán, who died in 1868, and was succeeded by the late Nawáb Abdul Dalil Khán as a minor. The latter was educated at the Rájárám College, Kolhápur, and was a young Chief of high character and great promise. He came of age in 1883, and was duly installed as Nawáb, but unfortunately died in 1884. He was succeeded by the present Nawáb. The State has an area of 70 square miles, and a population of 16,491, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Savanur, Dhárwár, Bombay.

SAWANTWARI, RAGHUNATH SAWANT BHONSLE RAJE BAHADUR, Sir Desai of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 20th September 1862; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 29th August 1870. Belongs to a branch of the great Mahratta family of Bhonsle; descended from Mang Sávat, who about the year 1554 A.D. revolted from Bijápur, and maintained his independence during his lifetime. His immediate successors again became feudatories of the Bijápur kingdom; but his descendant, Khem Sávat Bhonsle, who ruled from 1627 to 1640, secured the independence of Sávatwári. His son, Sorn Sávat, ruled for about eighteen months; and was then succeeded by his brother, Lakhm Sávat, who tendered his allegiance to the great Sivaji, and was confirmed by him as Sir Desai of the South Konkan, including Sávatwári. Lakhm Sávat's brother, Phond Sávat, was succeeded by his son, Khem Sávat II., who received further grants from Sáhu Rájá, grandson of Sivaji. This Chief, who ruled from 1709 to 1737, concluded a treaty with the British Government against the notorious piratical leader, Kanoji Angria of Kolába. A third Khem Sávat, commonly called Khem Sávat the Great, ruled from 1755 to 1803; he married the daughter of Jáyaji Sindhia, and obtained the title of Raje Bahádur from the Mughal Emperor of Delhi. He died without issue in 1803. In 1805 his widow, Lakshmibái, adopted a son, Rámchandra Sávat alias Bháu Saheb; he was, however, strangled shortly afterwards, and was succeeded by Phond Sávat, another minor scion of the Bhonsle family. He died about the year 1812, and was succeeded by his minor son, named Khem Sávat; and the latter was followed in 1870 by the present

Sir Desai. This title is said to have been originally derived from the Kings of Bijápur. The Sir Desai was educated at the Ráj Kumár College, Rájkot. The area of his State is 926 square miles, its population is 174,433, chiefly Hindus. The Chief maintains a military force of 12 cavalry, 400 infantry, and 34 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Wári, Bombay.

Born 14th June 1861. The title is hereditary, and the present Rájá succeeded his father, the late Rájá Kalka Parshád, in 1884. The family are Kanaujiya Bráhmans, descended from Misr Baijnáth, an influential and wealthy banker of Bareilly, who rendered excellent services to the British Government, at the risk of his life, during the Mutiny of 1857. The Rájá Misr Baijnáth died in 1867, and was succeeded by his grandson, the late Rájá Kalka Parshád. The latter died in 1884, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá. The family estate, granted by Government in 1861 with the title, has since 1887 been under the management of the Rájá's cousin, the Kunwár Misr Har Charan. The Rájá has a son, aged two years.

Residence.—Bareilly, North-Western Provinces.

SHAMBHU NARAYAN SINGH (of Sayadpur Bhitari), Rájá.

Born 1839. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 13th January 1871. Belongs to the Gautam clan of Bhuinhár Bráhmans, of the same family as that of the Mahárájá of Benares; tracing their descent from Mardan Sahai, who was Tálukdár of Auradpur in the year 1704 A.D. His son, Daya Rám, succeeded him; and when Balwant Singh succeeded to the Benares Ráj in 1736, Bábu Ausan Singh, son of Daya Rám, was appointed his principal officer. In 1767 Chet Singh became Rájá of Benares, and Ausan Singh had to flee, and seek protection from the British Government. Subsequently, on the intervention of the Government, he obtained from Rájá Chet Singh the grant of Sayadpur Bhitari; and siding with the Government in the hostilities that followed, he was entrusted with the management of the Benares Ráj after the defeat and flight of Chet Singh. He died in 1800, and was succeeded by his son, Bábu Sheo Naráyan Singh, who rendered good service in the disturbances of 1811, and received a khilat from the Governor-General as a reward. He died in 1830, and was succeeded by his son, Bábu Har Naráyan Singh; the latter died in 1846, and his eldest son, Deo Naráyan Singh, received the khilat of investiture, and in 1853 obtained the title of Rai Bahádur for his services in the disturbances of that year. During the Mutiny of 1857 the Rai Deo Naráyan Singh placed all his resources at the disposal of Government, rescued the missionary fugitives, and rendered other good services, and was rewarded with the title of Rájá, a valuable khilat, and other considerable grants. In the Darbár held at Agra in 1866, Rájá Deo Naráyan Singh was created a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. Born 10th September 1833. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. Belongs to a well-known Kayastha family. His great-grandfather was Minister of the Rájá Chet Singh of Benares, and his father and grandfather held responsible posts under the British Government. The Rai Bahádur also rendered good service to Government, and in 1868 was appointed Secretary to the Agra Municipality. On 1st January 1877, at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, he received a Certificate of Honour. In 1879 he was presented in Darbár with a khilat for the good service rendered by him during the famine in connection with relief works.

Residence.—Agra, North-Western Provinces.

SHEONARAYAN SINGH (of Lidhran), Sardár.

Born about 1838. The title is hereditary. The Sardár is one of the Chiefs of the Lidhran family of Sikh Sardárs, descended from Sardár Jai Singh, of the Nishanwála misl or confederacy (see Sham Singh, Sardár: Saheb Singh, Sardár; and others). Sardár Jai Singh's only son, Sardár Charat Singh, married three wives, by each of whom he had children, who succeeded to the estates in accordance with the rule of Chanda Vand, which obtains in this family. Sardár Sheonaráyan Singh is the son of the late Sardár Chimman Singh, who was the younger brother of Sardár Budh Singh, and younger son of Sardár Wazir Singh, the eldest son of Sardár Charat Singh.

Residence.—Lidhran, Ludhiána, Punjab.

SHEONARAYAN SINGH (of Parkhali), Sardár.

Born 1857. The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Nihang Sikh family; descended from Sardár Prem Singh, who came from Káli in the Kasur sub-division of the Lahore district, and established himself at Parkhali in the Ambála district in 1759 A.D. His grandson, Sardár Kharak Singh, was present on the side of the British Government at the battle of Mudki. He rendered good service also during the Mutiny of 1857, and was suitably rewarded by the Government. On his death he was succeeded by his son, the present Sardár Sheonáráyan Singh, who has a son and heir named Surat Singh.

Residence.—Parkhali, Ambála, Punjab.

SHEONATH SINGH (of Bithar), Rájá.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, in 1864.

Residence.—Unao, Oudh.

SHEOPAL SINGH (of Murarmau), Rájá.

Born 7th June 1834; succeeded his father, the late Rájá Digbijai Singh, C.S.I. (illustrious as the saviour of the four survivors of the Cawnpore massacre), in 1867. The title is hereditary, having been originally conferred by the Emperor Muhammad Sháh of Delhi, and confirmed by the British Government. Is the Chief of the great Bais Tilokchandi clan of Rájputs, claiming direct descent from Pirthi Chand, eldest son of Tilok Chand. The origin of the Bais clan is traced to Sáliváhana, son of the World-Serpent, said to have been brought up by a potter on the banks of the Narbadá, to have conquered King Vikramáditya with an army of clay figures which turned to living brass at the time of battle, and to have become Emperor of India. His descendant, Abhai Charan, rescued the daughter of the Gautama King of Argal from the forces of the Subahdár, and was rewarded with the hand of the princess, and the viceroyalty of the country, afterwards known as Baiswára (from the name of his clan), in Oudh. Abhai Chand's grandson, Siddhu Rai, took possession of Murarmau and Daundia Khera. His descendant, Rájá Satna, was killed by the Emperor Husain Sháh of Jaunpur; but his Ráni escaped, and gave birth to a son, the famous Tilok Chand, who ultimately conquered all Eastern Oudh. On his death his eldest son, Pirthi Chand, took the western Provinces, and became the ancestor of the Chiefs of Murarmau, of Daundia Khera, and of Purwa. The late Rájá Digbijai Singh of Murarmau was the senior representative of this great family, and rendered conspicuous service to the Government throughout the Mutiny of 1857. He received, as a reward, large grants of territory, including most of the confiscated lands of his kinsman, the rebel Chief of Daundia Khera. He was invested with the powers of an Assistant Collector, and subsequently created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, in 1867. The latter is an Honorary Magistrate and Assistant Collector, and has issue, two daughters.

Residence.—Murarmau, Rae Bareli, Oudh.

SHEOPRASAD SINGH (of Parenda), Rájá.

Born 19th March 1834. The title is hereditary, having been originally assumed by Udebhan, a remote ancestor of the family, and confirmed by the British Government in 1877. The Rájá is the Chief of the Dikhit clan of Rájputs, claiming descent from the Surájbansi or Solar Kings of Ajudhya. The traditions of the clan state that Rájá Durgban left Ajudhya and migrated to Gujarát, where his descendants took the name of Durgbans. One of these, Kalian Sáh, Durgbans, went to pay homage to the Rájá Vikramáditya, and received from him, about 50 B.C., the name of Dikhit, which his descendants adopted. Balbhaddar Dikhit was in the service of the Ráhtor Emperor of Kanauj, and received from him a territory in Bándá. His grandson, Jaswant Singh, had four sons; of these the second, Udebhan, migrated to Oudh, and settled in the country afterwards called, from the name of the clan, Dikhtiyána, of which he dubbed himself Rájá. Sixth in descent from him was the Rájá Runa Singh; he had six sons, who partitioned Dikhtiyána among them, the second son, Pannamal, settling in Patheora, and becoming the ancestor of the Parenda Rájás. Rájá Pannamal was slain in battle, fighting against Muhammad Amin Khan, the General of the Emperor Akbar; and thereupon the Chandel Rájá of Sheorájpur made preparations for annexing Dikhtiyána. But the Dikhits sent for the young son of Pannamal, the Rájá Nirbáhan, who had gone with his mother to her home, and hastened to the banks of the Ganges to meet the Chandels. The issue being referred to single combat, the Rájá Nirbáhan slew the Chandel Rájá, shooting him with an arrow through the forehead. Nirbáhan thereafter settled at the town of Unao, and did not rebuild his father's fort of Patheora. His grandson, Rájá Bir Singh Deo, built Birsinghpur; but his son, Rájá Khirat Singh, removed thence, and built the fort of Parenda, where his descendants still live. About the year 1700 A.D. his great-grandson, the Rájá Hari Singh, rebelled, but his fort was taken and his lands confiscated. A descendant, the Rájá Chandi Bakhsh, being regarded by the clan as lazy and incapable, was deposed by the brotherhood, who elected Rájá Daya Shankar, his first cousin, in his place. Chandi Bakhsh died in 1852. Daya Shankar made considerable additions to the estates, and rendered good service to the Government during the Mutiny of 1857. He was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá of Parenda, and Chief of the Dikhits. He has a son and heir, named Kunwár Sheodat Singh Dikhit.

The family of the Rájás of Seohar is a younger branch of that of the Mahárájás of Bettiah (q.v.) On the death of the Rájá Dhanpat Singh of Bettiah and Seohar, in the last century, there was a disputed succession between Jugalkishor Singh (Dhanpat Singh's daughter's son) and Srikrishna Singh, cousin of Dhanpat Singh, which was ultimately decided by the Patna Council, who allotted the Bettiah Ráj to the former, and the Seohar Ráj to the latter. Rájá Srikrishna Singh, first Rájá of Seohar, was succeeded by his son, Rájá Drishthan Daman Singh, who appears to have received the title of Rájá Bahádur from Lord Moira in 1816 A.D. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Rájá Raghunandan Singh Bahádur, in 1820. The latter had no son, and adopted his nephew, the late Rájá Sheonandan Singh Bahádur, who succeeded him in 1852. During the Mutiny of 1857 the Rájá Sheonandan Singh rendered valuable services, for which he received the thanks of Government; he also constructed many important roads and other public works, and opened relief works in the famine of 1866. He died in 1867, and was succeeded by his eldest son, the present Rájá Bahádur, as a minor. The latter attained his majority in 1875, and was invested with the title of Rájá Bahádur, and has subsequently rendered good services in the famine of 1873-74, and again in 1890. His uncle, Deo Nandan Singh, was created a Rájá in 1892. He has a brother, Rájakumár Rudráj Nandan Singh, and two nephews, Lachmi Nandan Singh and Kálíka Nandan Singh.

SHYAM KISHOR DAS, Mahant. See Kondka.SHYAM SINGH (of Tájpur), Rájá.

Born 18th June 1857. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 7th December 1888. The Rájá belongs to a Taga Bráhmaṇ family, descended from Balráṁ Singh, who in the last century acquired the estate of Azimpur, in Parganá Bashta, and settled upon it. His son, Rám Krishna, largely added to the estate, acquiring by purchase, among other additions, the Tájpur land. His son, Kidha Singh, rendered good service to the British Government on the first occupation of the province, and received the valuable estate of Gopálpur in recognition thereof. His son and successor, Jiraj Singh, died young; and was succeeded by his son, Partáb Singh. The latter was eminently loyal during the Mutiny of 1857. He defied the rebel Nawáb of Najibabad; and when the rebels dispossessed the Chaudhris of Sherkot, he obtained the aid of his principal Hindu neighbours and turned them out. He defended Bijnaur, and in many ways contributed to the restoration of order, and in reward received the title of Rájá with extensive grants of lands. In 1873 he was succeeded by his eldest son, Rájá Jagat Singh Bahádur, who received the title of Rájá Bahádur as a personal distinction in the same year. He died 11th June 1885, and was succeeded by his brother, Shyam Singh, who received the title of Rájá as a personal distinction on 7th December 1888. He is an Honorary Magistrate, and has been most energetic in the promotion of agricultural improvements.

SIKKIM, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA THOTAB NAMGUE, Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1851; succeeded to the gadi as a minor in April 1874. Belongs to a Tibetan family, that came originally from the neighbourhood of Lhassa, and settled in early times at Gantak. About the middle of the 16th century the head of the family was Pencho Namgué; who, with the aid of three Tibetan monks, Professors of the Dupka or "Red Cap" sect of Buddhists, converted the Lepchas of Sikkim to that creed, and established himself as Rájá. In 1788, and again in 1792, the Gurkhas of Nepál invaded Sikkim; but on the latter occasion they were driven back by an immense army of Tibetans and Chinese, who in turn invaded Nepál, and dictated terms to the Gurkhas almost at the gates of Khatmandu. In the Nepál war the Rájá of Sikkim rendered good service, and at its close in 1816 he was rewarded with a considerable grant of territory ceded by Nepál, as well as by a guarantee of protection by the British Power. In February 1835 the Rájá of Sikkim ceded the territory of the sanitarium of Dárjiling to the Government, in return for an annual payment. In 1873 the late Rájá of Sikkim, accompanied by his brother and Prime Minister, Changzed Rabu, paid a visit to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal at Dárjiling. The area of the State, which consists entirely of Himalayan valleys, is 2702 square miles; its population is about 30,000, chiefly Buddhists. SIRMUR, HIS HIGHNESS RAJA SIR SHAMSHER PRAKASH BAHADUR, G.C.S.I., Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1846; succeeded to the gadi 4th July 1857. Belongs to the Rájput family of the Chiefs of the great Jadu Bhatti clan, whose founder was a scion of the House of Jaisalmir, the Ráwal Agar Sen; who came on a pilgrimage to the head-waters of the sacred Ganges, and finding that the Rájá of the Sirmur territory had been swept away by a flood, established himself on the vacant gadi in 1095 A.D. For more than seven centuries his descendants ruled in Sirmur. In 1803 the Gurkhas overran the country; but on their expulsion by Sir David Ochterlony in 1815, the Rájá Fateh Prakásh was confirmed in his ancestral dominions as a British feudatory. His son was the late Rájá Raghbir Prakásh, who died in 1857, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá. He has been created successively a Knight Commander and a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. The area of the State, which is one of the sub-Himalayan Simla Hill States, is 1045 square miles; its population 112,371, chiefly Hindus, but including 4240 Muhammadans. The Rájá maintains a military force of 100 cavalry, 408 infantry, and 10 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 13 guns, including 2 guns personal.

Residence.—Náhan, Simla Hills, Punjab.

SIROHI, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAO KESRI SINGH BAHADUR, Mahárao of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 20th June 1857; succeeded to the gadi 16th September 1875. Belongs to the Deora sept of the great Chauhán clan of Rájputs, descended through Deo Ráj from Prithvi Ráj, the last Hindu Emperor of Delhi. Mount Abu in Sirohi, being the sacred mountain of the Rájputs, was for many centuries an object of strife among the clans. The aboriginal Bhils appear to have been driven out by the Gehlot Rájputs, and they in turn had to submit to the Pramara clan of Rájputs. The latter long held sway, and were only driven out of Mount Abu by a stratagem of the Chauháns about the year 1152 A.D. About the year 1425 A.D. Rao Sains Mal allowed the Ráná Kambaji of Chittor (or Mewár) to take refuge on Mount Abu, when flying from the Mughal Emperor. On the retreat of the Imperial army the son of Sains Mal sent word to the Ráná to return to his own country; but he, having found out the strength of the position of Mount Abu, refused to leave it, and had to be driven out. In consequence of this, no Rájá was ever allowed to go up to Abu; and this custom remained unchanged until 1836, when the request of the British Political Agent obtained permission for the Mahárána of Udaipur to make a pilgrimage to the sacred shrines. Subsequently, many other Rájput Chiefs have been permitted to visit Mount Abu. In 1845 a portion of Mount Abu was given over to the British Government for the purpose of a sanitarium. The Maháráo Sheo Singh rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857; and received, as a reward, the remission of half his tribute. The area of the State is 3020 square miles; its population is 1,42,903, chiefly Hindus, but including 2933 Muhammadans and 16,137 Jains. His Highness the Maháráo maintains a military force of 199 cavalry, 532 infantry, and 8 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 15 guns.

SUDASNA, THAKUR TAKHTSINGHJI, Thákur of.

Born 1855; succeeded to the gadi 31st January 1885. Belongs to a very ancient Pramara Rájput family; descended from a scion of the house of Danta (q.v.), whose ancestors moved from Ujjain to Sind in 809 A.D. The younger son of the Ráná Punjaji of Danta was named Amarsinghji; and he established himself in the Sudasna territory. The late Thákur, Parbatsinghji Mohabatsinghji, was the uncle of his immediate predecessor (Thákur Bhupatsinghji), and the younger brother of the two preceding Chiefs (Thákurs Harisinghji and Ratansinghji). He was born in 1819, and succeeded to the gadi in 1845. He was the father of the present Thákur. The State, which is tributary to Baroda and Idar, has an area of 198 square miles, and a population of 5661, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Sudasna, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

SUDHAKARA DUBE, Mahámahopádhyaýa.

Born 26th March 1860. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, for eminence in oriental languages. It entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Rájás. Belongs to a family of Sarjupari Bráhmans, whose ancestors resided at Brahmapur in the Gorakhpur district. One of the family removed to Benares, where he became the heir of an Upadhya Bráhman. Sudhákara Dube was appointed librarian of the Sanskrit Department of the Benares College in 1883; and is the author of several works in Hindi and Sanskrit on Pure Mathematics and Astronomy.

Residence.—Benares, North-Western Provinces.

SUJAN SINGH, Sardár, Rai Baháddur.

These titles were conferred, as a personal distinction, the first on 1st June 1888, the second on 24th May 1889.

Residence.—Ráwalpindi, Punjab.

SUKET, HIS HIGHNESS DASHT NIKANDAN SEN, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1865; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 29th March 1879. Belongs to a Rájput family of the famous Chandravansi or Lunar race. The State of Mandi (q.v.) was united to that of Suket under this dynasty till the year 1200 A.D.; when a younger brother of the Rájá Sahu Sen of Suket left Suket and established himself at Mandi—frequent disputes and wars ensuing between the two branches of the family. Both States fell under the Sikh dominion; until in the year 1846, by the treaty with the Lahore Government, Suket came under British control, the Rájá Agar Sen being confirmed in his ancestral dominions. The Rájá Agar Sen was an accomplished Sanskrit scholar. He died in 1876, and was succeeded by his son, the late Rájá Rudra Sen, father of the present Rájá. During the minority of the present Rájá the State was administered by a Native Superintendent aided by a Council. The Rájá was duly installed on coming of age in 1884. The area of the State is 395 square miles; its population is 52,484, chiefly Hindus. His Highness maintains a military force of 12 cavalry, 12 infantry, and 4 guns; and is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Suket, Punjab.SUKHBASI LAL, *Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, in December 1858.

Residence.—Delhi, Punjab.SUKHDARSHAN SINGH (of Rámgarh), *Mián.

The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Rájput family, descended from Rájá Singar Chand, Rájá of Biláspur (Kahlur). He had two sons—Megh Chand (whose descendants still rule in Biláspur, q.v.) and Kalal Chand; and the tenth in descent from the latter was Sardár Surat Singh. His son, Sardár Khushal Singh, with three brothers, made considerable conquests by the aid of the Rájá of Náhan (Sirmur); of these conquests the Rájá retained the greater part, but Rámgarh went to Sardár Khushal Singh and his brothers. The brothers died without issue; and Khushal Singh had two sons, Naráyan Das and Maldeo, who divided the territory of Rámgarh between them. Sardár Sukhdarshan Singh is grandson of Naráyan Das. He has a son and heir, named Tek Singh. His nephew is Sardár Govardhan Singh (q.v.).

Residence.—Rámgarh, Ambála, Punjab.SUKHMANGAL SINGH (of Sháhmau), *Rájá.

Born 1st January 1848. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1879. The Rájá is one of the Chiefs of the Kanhpurias, and is descended, with the Rájá Surpál Singh of Tiloí, from Ráhas, second son of Kánh. Eleventh in succession from Ráhas was the Rájá Kandhe Rao; he had two sons, of whom the elder, Udebhan, was the ancestor of the Tiloí Rájás, while the younger, Gulál Sáh, was the progenitor of the Rájás of Sháhmau. Fifth in succession from Gulál Sáh was Chhatardhári Singh. In his time the Rájá Balbhaddar Singh of Tiloi died without issue, in 1784, leaving two Ránis; one was immolated, and from the pyre formally invested Chhatardhári of Sháhmau with the Rájá's cap. But the adoption was not recognised by the whole tribe, and the living Ráni adopted Shankar Singh. The result was a war of succession for fifteen years; till at length a compromise was agreed to, under which both competitors obtained the title of Rájá, and neither the seat of Tiloi, though the latter was subsequently obtained by Shankar Singh. Rájá Chhatardhári's grandson, the Rájá Dirgaj Singh, died without issue in 1879; and was succeeded at Sháhmau by his adopted son, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Sháhmau, Rai Bareli, Oudh.

3 SULAIMAN MIRZA KHAN, Saif-ud-daulá Mujáhid-ul-Mulk, Bahádur, Hazabr Jang.

The title is personal, and was conferred in recognition of his position as the son of Ghazanfar-ud-daulá, who married a daughter of the late Muhammad Ali Sháh, third King of Oudh. Is a Trustee of the Husainabad endowment.

Residence.—Lucknow, Oudh.

SULAIMAN SHAH, Mirza.

The title is hereditary, the Mirza being a scion of the Royal House of Taimur of Delhi, and a descendant of Alamgir II.

Residence.—Delhi, Punjab.

SULTAN ALI KHAN walad AHMAD KHAN, Mir.

The title is hereditary, the Mir being the representative of one of the Mirs or Chiefs of Sind at the time of the annexation (see Khairpur).

Residence.—Shikárpur, Sind.

SULTAN IBRAHIM, SADDOZAI, SARDAR, Khán Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1889.

Residence.—Pesháwar, Punjab.

SULTAN JALAL-UD-DIN, Sháhzáda.

The title is personal, being the courtesy title accorded to the Sháhzáda in recognition of his position as son of the late Sháhzáda Taimur, and grandson of His late Majesty Sháh Shujá-ul-Mulk, ex-King of Kábul. The Sháhzáda Sultán Jalál-ud-dín was residing at Ludhiána in 1857, and when the Jalandhar mutineers passed through that station, he and his brother Sultán Sikandar gave protection to the native Christians, whose lives would otherwise have been taken. For this act of courage and loyalty each of the royal brothers received a khilat, and an increase to their political pensions. The Sháhzáda has four sons, of whom the eldest is named Abdul Aziz.

Residence.—Ludhiána, Punjab.

SULTAN JAN SADDOZAI, C.I.E., Sardár.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 24th May 1881.

Residence.—Punjab.

SULTAN KHAN (of Pothi), Rájá, Khán Bahádúr.

The first title (Rájá) is hereditary, the second (Khán Bahádúr) was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 30th May 1891. Is descended from the ancient Chiefs of the Chib Rájputs, a tribe inhabiting the low ranges of hills between the rivers Biás and Jhelum. Those in the Gujrát district are chiefly Muhammadan, as is the family of the Chief; but in the Kángra and Jammu districts the Chib Rájputs retain their ancient faith. The Rájá Hasan Muhammad Khán held the sovereignty over the territory stretching along the Jhelum below Naushahra. He was succeeded by his son, Ináyat-ullah Khán, and third in lineal descent from the latter was the late Rájá Shujang Khán, father of the present Rájá. The Rájá Sultán Khán rendered excellent service during the Mutiny of 1857. He has four sons—(1) Muhammad Khán, born 1848; (2) Ata Muhammad Khán, born 1853; (3) Amir Ali Khán, born 1857; (4) Farmán Ali Khán, born 1861.

Residence.—Pothi, Gujrát, Punjab.

SULTAN KUNWAR (of Raipur Bichaur), Thákurain.

Born 6th August 1813; succeeded her father-in-law, Rai Pirthipál Singh, Bachgoti, in 1866. The title of Rai was conferred on her husband, Jagmohan Singh, as a personal distinction, in 1877; it was made hereditary in 1883, and when Rai Jagmohan Singh died in 1886, it seems to have fallen into abeyance during the lifetime of his widow, the Thákurain. The Thákurain is a Chief of one of the numerous subdivisions of the Bachgoti clan of Rájputs, of which the Rájá of Mainpuri is the principal Chief (q.v.), and the Rájá Partáb Bahádúr Singh of Kurwar (q.v.), the Rai Mádhó Prasád Singh of Adharganj, Dalippur (q.v.), the Diwán Ran Bijai Bahádúr Singh of Patti Saifabad (q.v.), and others, are also Chiefs. The Rais of Raipur Bichaur are an offshoot of the Patti Saifabad house. The Diwán Hirda Singh of Patti Saifabad (fifth in descent from Nahar Singh, the founder of the family) had seven sons, to each of whom he gave a share of his estates; and Raipur Bichaur fell to the second son, Rai Agar Sen. His son was Rai Zoráwar Singh, to whose son, Rai Jabar Singh, and grandson, Rai Pirthipál Singh, the estate descended undivided. During the lifetime of the last named he was twice besieged in his fort of Dandpur—in 1818 by the Nawáb Názim, and in 1847 by the late King Wajid Ali Khán of Oudh. In each case the Chief had to fly into British territory, but subsequently returned to the possession of his estate. In 1866 he divided his estate of Raipur Bichaur, giving rather more than half ($\frac{11}{20}$ ths) to the present Thákurain, wife of his eldest son, and rather less than half ($\frac{9}{20}$ ths) to his youngest son, Bisheshwar Singh. His third son, Randhir Singh, had been adopted in 1810 by one of the Thákurains of Patti Saifabad; and the share of his second son, Digbijai Singh, appears to have been included in that of the Thákurain Sultán

Kunwár, and was ultimately fixed by the Courts in 1876 at $\frac{9}{10}$ ths. In 1882 the Thákurain instituted a suit, and obtained possession of the Dasrathpur estate from the Diwán Ranbijai Bahádur Singh of Patti Saifabad. Her husband, Rai Jagmohan Singh (whose titles have been given above), died on the 9th April 1866. She has a son and heir, named Jagatpál Singh.

Residence.—Raipur Bichaur, Parganá Patti, Partábgarh District, Oudh.

SULTAN MUHAMMAD SHAH, AGHA, His Highness.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th April 1886. His Highness is the spiritual head of the Khoja community of Western India.

Residence.—Bombay.

SULTAN MUHI-UD-DIN, GHULAM, Khán Bahádur Intizám Jang Aziz-ud-daulá.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, by one of the Nawábs of the Carnatic, and was recognised 16th December 1890.

Residence.—Madras.

SUNDAR LAL, PANDIT, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1835. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 24th May 1882, for meritorious services rendered in the Postal Department. Is a Sanadhya Bráhmán of the Dikshit family of Mahában; descended from ancestors who were invited by Rájá Jai Chand, and given a jágir in the Etáwah district. The Rai Bahádur's grandfather settled in Agra, where he became a physician.

Residence.—Agra, North-Western Provinces.

SUNDAR SINGH (of Malaudh), Sardár.

Born 1843. The title is hereditary, the Sardár being the son of Sardár Mit Singh of Malaudh, and the younger brother of Sardár Badan Singh of Malaudh (q.v.) The House of Malaudh is descended from Phul, the common ancestor of the great Phulkian Houses—the Mahárájás of Patiála, Jind, and Nábha, and the Sardárs of Bhadaur. The fourth son of the great Phul was named Ráma, who died in 1714; whose son, the Sardár Bhakta, conquered Malaudh from the Máler Kotla Afgháns in 1754. He died in 1757, and was succeeded by his son, the Sardár Mán Singh, who died in 1778. His son, Sardár Dalel Singh, who died in 1824, was succeeded by two sons—Sardár Fateh Singh (who died in 1849), and Sardár Mit Singh, father of Sardár Sundar Singh. The Sardárs Fateh Singh and Mit Singh rendered good service in the war of 1845-46, supplying fifty horsemen, and Mit Singh fought himself at the battles of Mudki and Firuzshahr. The latter Sardár also showed conspicuous loyalty during the Mutiny of 1857, being always ready with men and money, and he received a considerable remission of taxation as a reward.

Residence.—Malaudh, Ludhiána, Punjab.

SUNDAR SINGH (of Dayálgarh), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár is a younger brother of Sardár Tilak Singh of Mustafabad (q.v.), and is a descendant of Sardár Mahtab Singh, who took possession of Mustafabad and the surrounding territory in 1759 A.D., on the decline of the Mughal Power. His grandson, Sardár Dewa Singh, had three sons, the Sardárs Tilak Singh, Kanh Singh, and Sundar Singh.

Residence.—Dayálgarh, Ambála, Punjab.

SUNTH, MAHARANA SHRI PRATAPSINGHJI, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 24th March 1860; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 17th April 1873. Belongs to a Pramara Rájput family that came originally from Ujjain, claiming descent from the Mahipáwat branch of the famous Málwá dynasty, which boasts of Vikráma of Ujjain in the 1st century A.D., and of Rájá Bhoj of Dhár in the 11th century. This dynasty was driven from Ujjain in the 10th century, when Jhálam Singh, a Pramara Chief of the Puár sept from Mount Abu, established his power at Jhálod. From him the fifth Ráná in succession was also called Jhálam Singh; and the legend runs that the Emperor of Delhi, hearing of the wonderful beauty of the daughter of the Ráná, demanded her in marriage, and being refused by the haughty Rájput, made war upon him and slew him. The Ráná's son was named Sunth, and he, in the year 1255, conquered the Bhil Chief of Bráhmápurí, and gave his own name to the capital and State, which his descendants have ever since retained. In 1819 Sunth was overrun by Sindhia, and would have been either annexed or ravaged but for the intervention of the British Power. The Maháráná Pratapsinghji was educated at the Rájkumár College, Rájkot. The area of the State is 394 square miles; its population is 58,922, chiefly Hindus. The Maháráná maintains a military force of 98 cavalry, 226 infantry, and 4 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 9 guns.

Residence.—Sunth, Rewa Kántha, Bombay.

SURAJ KANT, PANDIT, C.I.E. (of Lahore), Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 27th January 1886.

Residence.—Kashmir.

SURAJ MAL JHUNJHUNWALA, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1847. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1885, in recognition of his liberality and public spirit. Has founded and endowed schools, libraries, and dharmsalas or rest-houses for travellers. He has also constructed a temple and a suspension bridge for the use of pilgrims to the shrine of Badrí Naráyan in the North-Western Provinces. Has a son and heir, named Sheoparshád Jhunjhunwála.

Residence.—Calcutta, Bengal.

SURAJ NARAYAN ACHARJI, PANDIT, Mahámahopádhyáya.

Born 5th April 1826. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty, for eminence in oriental learning. It entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Rájás. Belongs to a Bráhmaṇ family that, for the last six generations, has been uniformly distinguished for its Sanskrit learning.

Residence.—Sultánpur, Oudh.

SURAJBHAN SINGH (of Bhagwánpur), Rájá.

Born 1833. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 15th April 1859, in recognition of active service to Government rendered in suppressing the disturbances in Sháhábad during the Mutiny of 1857. Is an Honorary Magistrate of Sháhábad.

Residence.—Sháhábad, Bengal.

SURAN CHAND, GENERAL, Sardár Bahádur.

Granted the title of Sardár Bahádur, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1893. Is the General Commanding the Kashmir troops in Gilgit.

Residence.—Gilgit, Kashmir.

SURAT KUNWAR (of Khairigarh), Ráni.

Born 1866. The title is hereditary. The Ráni succeeded her husband, the late Rájá Indra Bikram Sáh (who died childless and intestate in 1885), under the provisions of Act I. of 1869. He belonged to a Rájput Pahári family of the Surajbansi or Solar race; descended from Dip Sáh, whose ancestors had been Chiefs at Dhóti in Nepál. The family was driven out of Nepál by the Gurkhas in 1790 A.D., and Dip Sáh came to Khairigarh in Oudh. His two sons aided the British in the Nepál war of 1812; and the descendants of the younger, Ráj Ganga Sáh, still enjoy a pension on this account. In 1821 they occupied Kanchanpur, drowning the Bráhmaṇ proprietor in the river Chanka; and in 1830 Rái Ganga Sáh drove out the Banjáras who owned Khairigarh, and possessed himself of the estate. It was confirmed to the Rájá at the annexation, and again after the Mutiny of 1857. In 1859 Kanchanpur was ceded to Nepál, and the Rájá of Khairigarh received a confiscated estate in Dhaurahra, as compensation. The son of Ráj Ganga Sáh, Rájá Rhundaj Sáh, was succeeded by his son, the late Rájá Indra Bikram Sáh, who was educated at the Canning College, Lucknow, and died in 1885. He left three widows, and the Ráni Surat Kunwár, as senior Ráni, succeeded him. The Ráni's heir is the Ráni Ráj Kunwár, second Ráni of the late Rájá. The present Ráni is the daughter of the Thákur Bhup Sáh of Achain in Nepál.

Residence.—Singahi, Khairigarh, Kheri, Oudh.

SURENDRA NARAYAN SINGH (of Barwári), Rájá.

Born January 1883. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 6th June 1885, in recognition of his loyalty and public spirit. The Rájá's ancestors had received the title of Rájá in early times from the Muhammadan Government, and have long been resident landed proprietors in the district of Bhágalpur. A parwána is in existence among the family papers at Barwári, bearing the seal of the Emperor Sháh Alam, in which the Rájá Kákbat Singh, then Zamindár of Barwári, is styled Rájá.

Residence.—Bhágalpur, Bengal.

SURGANA, SHANKAR RAO RAVI RAO DESHMUKH,

Deshmukh of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1849; succeeded to the gadí in 1867. Belongs to a family that is said to be of Koli (aboriginal) origin, and that had the charge, during the period of Muhammadan rule, of one of the great roads from Surat to the Deccan. In 1818 the Deshmukh, having attacked a British force, was conquered and hanged, and his cousin was placed on the gadí. The Deshmukh Murár Rao was succeeded by Bhaskar Rao, and the latter by the present Deshmukh.

Residence.—Surgána, Násik, Bombay.

SURIYA RAO NAYUDU, R., Rao Bahádur.

Born 1845. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 20th May 1890, in recognition of his services in the Executive Service of Government. He was appointed a Deputy Collector in 1881.

Residence.—Masulipatam, Kistna, Madras.

SURJA KANT ACHARJI (of Muktagáchi), Rájá Bahádur.

Born 1849. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty. The Rájá had been created a Rai Bahádur on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India. The family traces its origin to Sri Krishna Acharji, who is said to have been a descendant of the famous Hindu theist, Udai Naráyan Acharji, the author of Kusamanjali, the last book of the Nyáya Darsana. Sri Krishna was Zamindár of Muktagáchi, and held high office under the Nawáb Názim of Bengal at Murshidabad. The motto of the family is Sanskrit, and means "Virtue is the only friend in the world." In 1873 the Rájá received the thanks of Government for founding scholarships in Dacca, and since then has largely subscribed to many important public needs.

Residence.—Muktagáchi, Maimansingh, Bengal.

SURJA KUMAR, PANDIT, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 6th July 1888, in recognition of his meritorious services in the Public Works Department. The Rai Bahádur is District Engineer of Murshidabad.

Residence.—Howrah, Bengal.

SURJANARAYAN SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 2nd January 1888, in recognition of his civic services as Chairman of the Bhágalpur Municipality.

Residence.—Bhágalpur, Bengal.

SURMA CHAND (of Datarpur), Mián.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Hoshiárpur, Punjab.

SURPAL SINGH (of Tiloi), Rájá Bahádur.

Born 13th December 1870. The title is hereditary; that of Rájá, having been originally conferred by the Rájá of Hasanpur, was confirmed in 1877, and in 1882 the title of Rájá Bahádur was recognised as hereditary. The Rájá is the Chief of the great tribe of the Kanhpurias, descended from Kanh, a Rájput ancestor. He had two sons, Sáhas and Ráhas; from the elder descend the Kanhpuria Rájás of Kaithola (see Jaibans Kunwár, Ráni), from the younger spring the Rájás of Tiloi, Sháhmau (see Sukhmangal Singh, Rájá), Katári (see Partáb Bahádur Singh, Rájá), and other Kanhpuria Houses. Sixth in descent from Ráhas was the Rájá Prasád Singh, who divided his territory between his three sons, the eldest (Janga Singh) taking Tiloi. Fourth from Rája Janga Singh was Khande Rai; he also divided his territory between his two sons, the younger (Guláh Sáh) taking Sháhmau and the elder (Udebhan) taking Tiloi. Udebhan suffered from a successful rebellion of the Kurmi tribe; but his son and successor, Rájá Surat Singh, who ruled most successfully from 1670 to 1680 A.D., made this Ráj one of the largest and most powerful in Oudh. Four of his successors retained this power, till the death of the Rájá Balbhaddar in 1784 A.D. He died childless, leaving two Ránis; one was immolated, and from the pyre formally invested the Rájá's kinsman Chhatardhári of Sháhmau (see Sukhmangal Singh, Rájá) with the Rájá's cap. But this adoption was not accepted by all the Kanhpuria tribe of Tiloi. The surviving Ráni adopted Shankar Singh, the ancestor of the present Rájá. For fifteen years a war of succession was waged without any decisive result; till at last it was agreed that both the competitors should have the title of Rájá, but neither the ancestral seat of Tiloi. Shankar Singh took his title from Asni, and Chhatardhári from Sháhmau; and it was not till some years afterwards that the former, a prudent and peaceful Chief, recovered Tiloi, the centre of the tribal traditions. He was followed by his son, Rája Buniad Singh; and the latter by his son, Rájá Jagpál Singh, father of the present Rájá. Jagpál Singh sent men to the general levy at Lucknow in 1857, but was never prominent in the rebellion; and early in 1858 he made his submission to the Government, and assisted in re-establishing the Imperial outposts. For this he was besieged in his fort by the combined forces of Beni Madho and all the rebellious Tálukdárs, and reduced to great extremity. It was long before he could be rescued by British troops; and for his services he received a grant of some of the confiscated adjacent territory. In 1860 he was made a Magistrate; and in 1875 he died, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Tiloi, Rai Bareli, Oudh.

SUSANG, MAHARAJA KUMUD CHANDRA SINGH,
Mahárájá of.

Born in June 1866. The title is hereditary, having been so recognised in 1884. Is descended from a family that has held rule over the Pargána of Susang in Maimansingh, and the adjacent wild country of the Garo hills, from very early times. Prior to the reign of the Emperor Jahángir they seem to have been altogether independent, and had little or no intercourse with the Muhammadan conquerors of Bengal, some of these early Chiefs bearing the style or title of Malik. The last of these quasi-independent Chiefs, Malik Janaki Náth, was succeeded by his son, Raghu Náth. The fragrant wood called agar, produced largely in the Garo hills, was in request at the Court of Delhi; and Raghu Náth agreed to supply a quantity of agar to Delhi yearly as a tribute, in return for the help of an Imperial force, which enabled him to subdue his turbulent Garo subjects, and for the title of Rájá. It is further stated that the Emperor conferred on Rájá Raghu Náth the titles of Garo Junlí Mansabí, Durjai Mansabí and Panch Hazári or Commander of Five Thousand. He was succeeded by his son, Rám Náth Singh, who continued to pay the tribute to Delhi, then called agarburi or the cutting of agar wood. Rám Náth Singh died without issue, and was succeeded by his nephew, Rám Jiban Singh. The latter received a sanad from the Emperor of Delhi, recognising him as Zamindár of Susang, and rightful successor of his uncle; and from this time the head of the family is usually styled Rájá. In the time of the Emperor Aurangzeb a money-payment was substituted for the agar wood, and in addition a regular nazarána was paid by the subsequent Rájás of Susang. Rájá Rai Singh, who succeeded his brother Rájá Kishor Singh in 1784 A.D., was the Zamindár with whom the Decennial Settlement was made. He died in 1822, and was succeeded by his second son, Rájá Biswa Singh, as the eldest, Baidya Nath, had died during the lifetime of his father. Biswa Singh's son, Prán Krishna Singh, received the title of Rájá Bahádúr as a personal distinction, 5th December 1862. He died in 1864, and was succeeded by his son, Rájá Ráj Krishna Singh, who at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, received the higher title of Mahárájá as a personal distinction, and this was declared hereditary in 1884. The late Mahárájá died in 1890, at the age of fifty-nine, leaving four sons, of whom the eldest, Mahárájá Kumud Chandra Singh, succeeded him. The present Mahárájá was educated at the Presidency College, Calcutta, where he graduated B.A. in 1889.

Residence.—Susang Durgapur, Maimansingh, Bengal.

SUTALIA, SHAMBHU SINGH, Chief of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1877; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 28th August 1886. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The population of the State is 5330, chiefly Hindus.

* Residence.—Sutalia, Bhopál, Central India.

SUTHRI, JAREJA JASAJI CHANDAJI, Chief of.

This Chief is a feudatory of His Highness the Rao of Kutch (q.v.)

Residence.—Suthri, Kutch, Bombay.

SWAMINATHA AIYAR, S., Rao Saheb.

Granted the title, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1893, for eminent services as a Deputy Collector in North Arcot.

Residence.—North Arcot, Madras.

SWARNAMAYI (of Kásimbázár), C.I., Maháráni.

Born 1828. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 11th August 1871, in recognition of her munificent public charities, and active and loyal public spirit. The Maháráni has also received from Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen Empress, as further token of approval, the Imperial Order of the Crown of India; and the title of Mahárájá, as a personal distinction, is to be revived in the Maháráni's successor in estate. The Maháráni's heir at present is named Monindra Chandra Nandi. The Kásimbázár family derives its origin from Krishnakánta Nandi, Diwán to the Marquess of Hastings when Governor-General. His son, Loknáth Rai, obtained the title of Mahárájá from the British Government. Mahárájá Loknáth Rai's son, Rájá Harináth Rai Bahádur, was the father of the late Rájá Krishnanáth Rai Bahádur, husband of the Maháráni. For many years past the Maháráni has contributed very largely to every good work; and in time of famine especially her charities have been unbounded.

Residence.—Kásimbázár, Murshidabad, Bengal.

TAGORE, MAHARAJA SIR JOTEENDRO MOHUN, BAHADUR, K.C.S.I., Mahárájá Bahádur.

Born 1831. Is one of the chief members of the well-known Tagore family of Calcutta, and eldest son of the late Babu Hara Kumár Tagore.

Descended from Bhatta Naráyan, the chief of the famous five Bráhmans of Kanauj, whom King Vira Singh of Kanauj sent to Bengal at the request of King Adisur of Bengal about the year 994 A.D. Bhatta Naráyan is reputed to have left sixteen sons, among whom was Nri Singh or Nánu, a Suddha Srotriya, the ancestor of the Thákurs—or, as the name has been Anglicised, the Tagores. Eighth in descent from him was Dháránidhára, the author of a Commentary on the Institutes of Manu; and his grandson, Dhánanjai, was a Judge under the King Ballála Sena of Bengal, who established the system of Kulinism in the social classification of the Bráhmans and Káyasthas of Bengal. "The main object of this system," wrote the learned Rájá Rájendra Lála Mitra, D.C.L., "was to give pre-eminence to the five Bráhmans and five Káyasthas who had been brought to Bengal by Adisura." The son of Dhánanjai was Halayudha, who was Prime Minister under King Lakshmana Sena of Bengal, and his two grandsons, Mahendra and Gánendra, were respectively known as the Bara Kumár and Chhota Kumár. The sixth in descent from the "Bara Kumár" was Jagannátha, famous for his learning, who was known as the Pandit-Rájá, or "Prince of Pandits"; and his son, Purushottam, again, was the author of the Prayága Ratnamála, and many other learned works. It is curious to note, as an extreme instance of the stringency of the discipline of Kulinism, that the Pandits condemned the marriage of Purushottam with the daughter of a man, otherwise of unstained reputation, who had incurred caste-penalties by the accidental smelling of forbidden food. The sixth in descent from Purushottam was Panchánan, who appears to have been the first of the family to receive the title of Thákur or Tagore, which they still bear as a family name. He settled at Govindpur on the banks of the Hughli river, a mouth of the sacred Ganges, where he bought land and built himself a house, and a temple dedicated to the worship of Siva. His son, Jairám, was Amin of the Twenty-four Parganáas at the time of the Black Hole tragedy, the capture of Calcutta by the infamous Siraj-ud-daulá, and its recapture by the British troops; and his paternal land at Govindpur was subsequently taken up by Government as the site of the new Fort, when Jairám moved to Pathariaghatta, and there erected the dwelling-house and the bathing-ghát which are still the property of the family. He died in 1762, leaving four sons, of whom two, Darpa Naráyana and Nilmani, were the ancestors respectively of the senior and junior branches of the Tagore family.

Both of these branches have been rendered illustrious by the great men they have produced. In the junior branch, two of Nilmani's grandsons—the Hon. Dwarka Nath Tagore, the great Hindu reformer and philanthropist, and the Mahārājā Romā Nath Tagore, C.S.I., late Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council and President of the British Indian Association, were most distinguished men. They, with their equally distinguished cousin of the senior branch, the Hon. Prasanna Kumār Tagore, C.S.I., contributed almost more than any others to that fusion of British and Indian interests and sympathies in the Councils of the Empire that has been so useful in Indian administration. The repeated visits of Dwarka Nath Tagore to Europe—where he was honoured by the most gratifying marks of the approval of Her Majesty and of the late Prince Consort—made him a personage of cosmopolitan importance, respected in London and Manchester as much as in Calcutta; and at the same time familiarised him with all the best traditions of Western society, and with the most recent movements of modern thought. It was in compliance with the humble request of Dwarka Nath Tagore that Her Majesty and the Prince Consort consented to sit for those handsome full-length portraits that now adorn the Town-Hall of Calcutta; and on the occasion of the same visit of Dwarka Nath to Windsor Castle, the Queen ordered miniatures of herself and the Prince Consort to be prepared for presentation to this specially-honoured guest. This was in 1842, and in the same year he received a Gold Medal from the Directors of the Hon. East India Company, accompanied by an appreciative letter, from which the following is an extract: "The Court trusts that the noble course which you have pursued will have the effect of contributing to the accomplishment of that object which it has ever been their anxious desire to promote, namely, the identification of the feelings and interests of the natives to their Government, and thus strengthening the bond which unites India with Great Britain." Dwarka Nath Tagore died in London at the early age of fifty-one, regretted by his Sovereign and by all ranks of his fellow-subjects, English as well as Indian, 1st August 1846.

His brother, Romā Nath Tagore, was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, 1874; and a Mahārājā in 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. In 1872 he had been appointed a Member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council; and he also filled successively the offices of Vice-President and President of the British Indian Association. On the occasion of the visit of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to Calcutta, the Mahārājā was chosen to be Chairman of the Committee of Reception; and was honoured with the gift of a handsome ring from the Prince, as a souvenir of the auspicious occasion. The Mahārājā died in 1877; the above, being descendants of Nilmani Tagore, belonged to the junior branch of the family. Nilmani's elder brother, Darpa Narāyan Tagore, was the ancestor of the senior branch, of which the present head is the Mahārājā Sir Joteendro Mohun Tagore. Darpa Narāyan's second son, Gopi Mohun, succeeded to a large share of his father's great wealth, to which he made immense additions during a most successful career. His public munificence was on a princely scale, and on a par with his private charities; and among many important benefactions with which his name was associated may be mentioned the foundation of the Hindu College—afterwards the Presidency College of the University of Calcutta—to which he contributed so largely that, with the Mahārājā of Burdwan, he was appointed Hereditary Governor of that great Institution. He left six sons, of whom one, Prasanna Kumár Tagore (already alluded to), became one of the most famous lawyers and politicians of modern India; while an elder, named Hara Kumár, distinguished for his blameless and successful life, his amiability of character, and his eminence as a Sanskrit scholar, became the father of the Mahárájá Sir Joteendro Mohun, as well as of the Rájá Sir Sourindro Mohun Tagore, Kt., C.I.E. (q.v.).

The Hon. Prasanna Kumár Tagore, C.S.I., was perhaps the chief among the founders of the Landowners Association of Bengal, that afterwards developed into the British Indian Association. He was also one of the founders of the modern system of public instruction in India; and his Minute on the subject, written in 1841, was published by Government with its Educational Regulations. He was the most learned writer of the day, and one of the most voluminous—chiefly on questions of law and jurisprudence. At his death in 1866 he left no less a sum than nearly seven lakhs of rupees for religious, charitable, and educational purposes; of which a portion formed the well-known endowment of the “Tagore Law Professorship” of the Calcutta University. The late Joykissen Mookerji (see Piári Mohan Mukharji, Rájá) wrote of him, on the occasion of the great Public Meeting held in Calcutta in his honour shortly after his death: “There was scarcely a movement during the last forty years, either for the assertion of the political rights or for the social advancement of the people, in which he was not either the originator or one of its warmest supporters.”

The late Hara Kumár Tagore, elder brother of the Hon. Prasanna Kumár, died in 1858; and was succeeded, as head of the family, by the present Mahárájá Sir Joteendro Mohun Tagore. Born in 1831, he was educated at the Hindu College, Calcutta, and subsequently under the private tuition of Captain D. L. Richardson and others. He displayed from an early age a marked taste for literary composition, both in English and in the Vernacular, and especially for poetry. He was the author of several excellent Bengáli dramas and farces in the Vernacular; among which the Bidya Sundara Nátak is perhaps the best. He rendered much help to Government in 1866, in succouring the famine-stricken people of Midnapur. He was Honorary Secretary of the British Indian Association for several years; elected its President in 1879, re-elected in 1891, and continues still to act in that capacity. In 1870 he was chosen a Member of the Legislative Council of Bengal, and reappointed in 1872. In 1871 he had received the title of Rájá Bahádur, and was exempted from attendance in Civil Courts in April of that year. He received the title of Mahárájá in January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. Appointed a Member of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General in February of that year, and in recognition of the valuable assistance rendered in the discussion of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Bill, was reappointed in 1879. In the latter year he was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; and appointed for the third time a Member of the Viceroy's Council in February 1881. Created Knight Commander of the Star of India in May 1882; received the title of Mahárájá Bahádur in January 1890, and in the January of the following year this title was made hereditary in his family. He made a free gift of his interest in the land on which the Mayo Hospital is built, and supplemented that gift by giving Government Promissory Notes for Rs. 10,000 in aid of that institution. One of the wards of the Mayo Hospital is named after him, in recognition of his gift, and he founded some valuable scholarships, in the name of his father and of his uncle, the Hon. Prasanna Kumár Tagore, C.S.I. He also set apart funds for the provision of a gold keyur or armlet, to be annually presented to the best student in Sanskrit literature in the Calcutta University; and founded a gold medal for the best student who passed an examination after attending the Tagore Law Lectures, annually, and another gold medal for the best student in Physical Science. The Mahárájá is a Justice of the Peace for the town of Calcutta, Fellow of the University of Calcutta, Trustee of the Indian Museum (of which he was elected President in the year 1882), one of the Governors of the Mayo Hospital, and a Member of the Asiatic Society. He had the honour of being elected the President of the Reception Committee during the visit of the late Prince Albert Victor in 1889. He was Vice-President of the Syndicate of the Calcutta University in 1881, and President of the Faculty of Arts in 1881-82. He presented to the Calcutta University the marble statue of his uncle, the Hon. Prasanna Kumár Tagore, which is placed in the portico of the Senate House. Jointly with his brother, the Rájá Sir Sourindro Mohun Tagore, he presented a piece of land to the Municipality of Calcutta for the construction of a Square (to be named after his father), in which he has at his own expense placed a marble bust of his father. He has also founded an endowment for the benefit of Hindu widows, of one lakh of rupees, under the name of the "Mahárájmátá Shib Sundari Debi's Hindu Widows' Fund." His son and heir is the Maháráj-Kumár Pradyot Kumár Tagore; and he has had four daughters, of whom one only is alive at present. The three deceased ladies have left five sons, viz. Kumád Prakás, Nolin Prakás, and Sesh Prakás Ganguli, and Jaladhi Chandra and Kiron Máli Mookerji; who are now living with their grandfather the Mahárájá Bahádur.

TAGORE, RAJA SIR SOURINDRO MOHUN, KNIGHT, C.I.E.,

Rájá.

Born 1840. Is a son of the late Hara Kumár Tagore, and a younger brother of the Mahárájá Sir Joteendro Mohun Tagore, under whose name will be found an account of the family history. Educated in the Hindu College, Calcutta, he wrote at the age of fourteen a work on history and geography, and a year later an original drama, in Bengáli, which was some time after followed by a translation of Kálidása's Málavikágnimitra. Has studied the Sanskrit theory of music, on which he is the first living authority. The Rájá is a practical musician, and composer of a large number of pieces of vocal, instrumental, and concerted music. He wrote, translated, or edited many works on music, the drama, and other subjects, numbering in all about sixty. He founded the Bengal Music School, August 1871, and the Bengal Academy of Music in August 1881, both these institutions being conducted at his expense and under his presidency. He reduced Hindu music to a system, and was the first to introduce its teaching by means of the notation which he devised. He received the degree of Doctor of Music in April 1875 from the University of Philadelphia, the degree being subsequently confirmed by the Government of India; was made a Fellow of the University of Calcutta, and a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, in 1880. In the same year he was granted the title of Rájá. He translated the National Anthem into Bengáli, the rendering being approved and accepted by the "National Anthem for India" Committee, London; set the Anthem to twelve varieties of Indian melody at the request of the same Committee, which addressed him as "the highest musical authority in India." He was created a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. He is the owner of extensive landed property in eight districts of Bengal (including Plassey, where the famous battle was fought, and Ganga Ságar, the celebrated place of pilgrimage at the mouth of the Ganges). He is a connoisseur of gems, and author of Marimáá, a voluminous work on the subject. He is a pious Hindu, and contributes liberally towards objects of public utility; maintains a charitable Homœopathic Dispensary in Calcutta; is Honorary President, Fellow, or Member of many literary and scientific societies in Asia, Europe, Africa, America, and Australia. He has, for his investigations into the theory, and efforts for the advancement of the art of Hindu music, obtained a world-wide reputation and an unprecedented number of decorations, some of which are enumerated below—Knight Commander of the Royal Order of the Crown of Italy; of the Most Exalted Order of Francis Joseph, Austria; of the First Class of the Order of Albert, Saxony; of the Order of Frederick, Wurtemberg; of the Order of Leopold, Belgium; of the Order of Dannebrog, Denmark; of the Royal Order of Vasa, Sweden; of the French Republican Order; the Order of the Dragon, Anamese Empire; of the Royal Order of Dannelo, Montenegro; of the Royal Order of Kapiolani, Hawaiian Islands; Knight of the Royal Portuguese Military Order of Christ; of the Royal Order of the Netherlands' Lion; of the Second Class of the High Imperial Order of the Lion and Sun (as also the title of Nawáb Sháhzáda), Persia; of the Order of Basabamáá, Siam; of the First Class of the Imperial Order of "Paow Sing," China; of the Gurkha Star

(and the titles of Sangita-Silpa-Vidyasagara and Bharatiya-Sangita-Nayaka), Nepál; Grand Cordon of the Order of the Bust of the Liberator (Bolivar), Venezuela; Officer of the Academy, and of Public Instruction, Paris; Honorary Member of the Royal Academy of St. Cecilia, Rome (being appointed by the late King of Italy, Victor Emmanuel). His eldest son and heir is the Kumár Promodh Kumár Tagore.

Residence.—Shikárpur, Sind.

TAJAMMUL ALI, SAYYID, Khán Bahádur.

The title was originally an official one, in recognition of the Sayyid's position as a Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, but on account of his good services it was continued for life, 18th June 1885.

Residence.—Gardah, Faridpur, Bengal.

TAJAMMUL HUSAIN, Khán Bahádur.

Born 1864. The title was conferred 1st January 1887, as a personal distinction, in recognition of his position as son-in-law of His late Highness Prince Intizám-ul-Mulk, the third of the titular Princes of Arcot.

Residence.—Madras.

TAJPURI, THAKUR MOTISINGHJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1850. Belongs to a family that is said to be descended from a Pramara Rájput Chief, who drank water at the house of a Koli (aboriginal tribe), and whose descendants were thence called Pramara Kolis. The family first settled at Tájpuri in 1474 A.D., the first Thákur being named Ráwanji. His son was the Thákur Jesalji; and from him there were fourteen generations to the late Thákur Madhusinghji, who was born in 1826, and succeeded to the gadi in December 1858. He was succeeded by his eldest son, the present Thákur. The area of the State is 17 square miles; its population 2292, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Tájpuri, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

TAKHT SINGH (of Bedla), Rao Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 1st January 1887.

Residence.—Mewár, Rájputána.

TAL, RAWAT ONKAR SINGH, Ráwat of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1853; succeeded to the gadi as a minor in 1859. Belongs to a Doria Rájput (Hindu) family. The State contains a population of about 1600.

Residence.—Tal, Central India.

TALCHER, RAJA RAM CHANDRA BIRBAR HARI CHANDAN MAHIPATRA, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 22nd December 1856; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 8th November 1873. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family, claiming descent from the ancient Solar dynasty of Ajudhya. The founder, Narhari Singh, came into Orissa from Ajudhya (Oudh); and having conquered the aboriginal tribes, established himself as Rájá. From him the seventh in direct lineal descent, the Rájá Ayadi, assumed the style or title of Birbar Harichandan Mahipatra, which has been borne by all his successors. The family cognisance is a tiger's head. The eighteenth in succession was the Rájá Dayanidhi Birbar Harichandan Mahipatra Bahádur; he received the title of Rájá Bahádur from the British Government for good services rendered in quelling disturbances in the neighbouring State of Angul. The State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, had come under British control, 24th November 1803. It has an area of 399 square miles, and a population of 35,590, chiefly Hindus. The late Rájá Bahádur was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, in 1873. The latter maintains a military force of 493 infantry and 2 guns.

Residence.—Talcher, Orissa, Bengal.

TAMKUIH, Rájá of. See Kishan Partáb Bahádur Sahai.

TAPPA, THAKUR TAKHT SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1857; succeeded to the gadi 24th August 1866. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The State contains a population of about 1200; and is feudatory to Gwalior, having been granted to the Thákur Rup Singh in 1822 by the Mahárájá Daulat Rao Sindhia. The late Chief, who died in 1865, left no heir, and the present Thákur, being a relative, was adopted in 1866, with the sanction of the Mahárájá Sindhia of Gwalior.

Residence.—Tappa, Bhopál, Central India.

TARA MOTI (of Dilehri), Ráni.

Born 1846. Belongs to a Ráj Gond family, descended from Ranjor Singh, who obtained the title of Rájá for military services rendered to one of the kings of the ancient Gond dynasty of Mandla. In the disturbances of 1842 the Rájá Senápat of Dilehri captured the rebel leader Bhagwant Singh of Hirdapur, whose estate was confiscated and conferred on Rájá Senápat as a reward for his loyalty. The latter was succeeded by his son Dalip Singh, who died while still an infant, when the title of Rájá became extinct, and the estate escheated to Government. The estate was, however, ultimately settled at light rates with the Diwán Murat Singh, brother of Rájá Senápat, and other members of the family. The Diwán Murat Singh rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857, and was rewarded with a handsome khilat by Government. He was succeeded by his son, Balbhadar Singh (husband of the Ráni), who was known as the Rájá of Dilehri. His son, Ratan Singh, died as a minor, and was succeeded by his mother, widow of Balbhadar Singh.

Residence.—Dilehri, Narsinghpur, Central Provinces.

TARA PRASAD MUKARJI, Rai Bahádur.

The title, which is a personal one, was conferred "for good services and public spirit," on 1st January 1891.

TARA PRASANNA RAI, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 1st January 1889, as a personal distinction, in recognition of his eminence in medical science, and especially in Chemistry. The Rai Bahádur has been Assistant Chemical Examiner to the Government of Bengal, and Assistant Professor of Chemistry in the Medical College of Calcutta. He holds the rank of Assistant Surgeon in Her Majesty's Army.

Residence.—Calcutta.

TARA SINGH (of Chuni Machhli, Bhareli), Sardár.

Born 1858. The title is hereditary. The Sardár belongs to a Jat family, descended from Sardár Majja Singh, who acquired territory in the Jálándhar district by conquest. When deprived of this by the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh he crossed the Sutlej and conquered the territory which has since been held by the family in the Cis-Sutlej States. He was succeeded by his son, Sardár Dál Singh; whose son, Sardár Kanh Singh, was the father of the Sardárs Basant Singh and Jaswant Singh. The former died childless. Sardár Jaswant Singh rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857, and received the reward of a considerable permanent remission of taxation. His son and successor is the present Sardár Tára Singh.

Residence.—Chuni Machhli, Bhareli, Ambála, P'unjab.

TARA SINGH (of Zafarwál), Sardár.

Born 1852. Belongs to a Randháwa Jat family of Sikh Sardárs, descended from Dyánat Rai, whose son was Lachhi Rám, and his grandson Sardár Gajja Singh. The grandson of the latter was Sardár Prem Singh, who served with the forces of the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh in many campaigns. He had two sons, the Sardárs Jaimal Singh and Jawáhir Singh. Jaimal Singh joined the British forces and rendered excellent service. He died childless. His brother, Sardár Jawáhir Singh, was the father of the present Sardár, Tára Singh.

Residence.—Zafarwál, Siálkot, Punjab.

TARA SINGH, Sardár

The title was conferred in 1874, as a personal distinction, in recognition of his eminent services in connection with Sir Douglas Forsyth's Mission to Yárkand.

Residence.—Tárágarh, Ráwalpindi, Punjab.

TARAON, CHAUBE CHHATURBHUIJ, Jágirdár of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 22nd January 1863; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 3rd March 1872. Belongs to a Chaubé Bráhmaṇ (Hindu) family, descended from Rám Krishna Chaubé of Kálinjar, who was kiládár (or Governor) of the fortress of Kálinjar under the Mahárájá of Panna. He and his sons successfully held Kálinjar both against Ali Bahádur and subsequently against British troops. Ultimately the Chaubé family submitted, and were allowed to retain Kálinjar as British feudatories. Rám Krishna Chaubé died in 1816; and his four sons received four other territories in lieu of Kálinjar, which was resumed—the four States thus formed being known as the Kálinjar Chaubés, and comprising Paldeo (q.v.), Bhaisaunda (q.v.), Pahra (q.v.), and Taraon. The last-named was the appanage of Gajádhar, whose son, Gaya Parshád, received a sanad from the British Government. Two generations intervened between Gaya Parshád and the present Chief. The State has an area of 12 square miles, and a population of 3163, chiefly Hindus. The Jágirdár maintains a military force of 3 cavalry, 43 infantry, and 3 guns.

Residence.—Taraon, Bundelkhand, Central India.

Residence.—Faridpur, Bengal.

TAROCH, THAKUR KIDAR SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1865; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 20th May 1871. Belongs to an ancient Rájput family; descended from Thákur Kishan

Singh, to whom Taroch was granted in very early times by the Rájá of Sirmur (q.v.) From him the twenty-first in lineal descent was the Thákur Karam Singh, who was in possession when Taroch fell under British control. He died in 1819, and the Ráj was conferred on his brother Jhobu, and subsequently on Jhobu's son, Shyáma Singh. But ultimately, in 1843, it was given to the late Thákur Ranjit Singh, son of Karam Singh. Ranjit Singh's son, the late Thákur Kehr Singh, was the father of the present Thákur, and was succeeded by him in 1871. The area of the State (which is one of the Simla Hill States) is 75 square miles; its population is 3216, chiefly Hindus. The Thákur maintains a military force of 50 militia.

Residence.—Taroch, Simla Hills, Punjab.

TASSADUK RASUL KHAN (of Jahángirabad), Rájá.

TEHRI (or Garhwál), HIS HIGHNESS RAJA KIRTI SAH,

Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1873; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 6th February 1887. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Rájput Hindu) family, descended from Kanak Pál, a Rájput of the Lunar race. For many generations this family ruled in Garhwál, occasionally paying a small tribute to the Emperor of Delhi. In 1804 the Gurkhas overran this territory, and expelled the Rájá, Pradhuman Sáh, who was slain in a vain attempt to recover his dominions. After the defeat of the Gurkhas by the British, and the annexation of Kumáun and part of Garhwál in 1815, a portion of his father's territories were conferred on Sudarshan Sáh, son of Pradhuman Sáh. The Rájá Sudarshan Sáh ruled in Tehri from 1815 to 1859, and rendered excellent service during the Mutiny of 1857. In consideration of these good services the Ráj was conferred on his eldest natural son, the Rájá Bhawáni Sáh. He was succeeded in 1871 by his son, the late Rájá Partáp Sáh, who was followed in 1887 by the present Chief. During the minority of the Rájá the State is administered by a Council of Regency, presided over by the Ráni Guleri, His Highness's mother. The State has an area of 4180 square miles, and a population of 199,836, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá is entitled to a salute of 11 guns.

Residence.—Tehri, Garhwál, North-Western Provinces.

THAKUR PARSHAD NARAYAN DEVA (of Haldi), Rájá.

Born 1853. Is Chief of the Hyobans clan of Rájputs of the Lunar race; claiming descent from the ancient Hyobans dynasty of Ratanpur in the Central Provinces. The Ratanpur dynasty ruled there for fifty-two generations; and one of their princes, Chandra Got, in 850 A.D. migrated northward and settled at Manjha on the Ghogra, in the modern district of Sáran. Two hundred years later his descendants settled south of the Ganges at Bihia. In or about the year 1528 A.D. the Rájá Bhopat Deo committed an inexpiable crime by violating a Bráhman woman named Maheni, who imprecated the most fearful curses on the Hyobans race; and in consequence of this tragedy they left Bihia, and after sojourning for a time at Gai Ghát, settled ultimately at Haldi. After the rebellion of Rájá Chet Singh of Benares in 1781, Rájá Bhuabul Singh of Haldi was confirmed in the possession of his estates. He died in 1803; and was succeeded by his son, Rájá Ishri Parshád, who died in 1806. Then follows Rájá Dalganjam Singh, who was succeeded by Rájá Harak Náth Deo in 1825. The late Rájá Sarab Naráyan Deo of Haldi rendered excellent service during the Mutiny of 1857, throwing all the weight of his considerable local influence into the scale of the Government; and for this he was rewarded with a grant of some of the confiscated land of the rebel Kunwár Singh.

Residence.—Haldi, Ballia, North-Western Provinces.

THAKUR SINGH, Kunwár.

The Kunwár has received this title in recognition of his position as a son of the late Mahárájá Sher Singh.

TIGARIA, RAJA BANAMALI KHETRIA BIRBAR CHAMPATI SINGH MAHAPATRA, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1857; succeeded to the gadi 8th April 1886. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Rájput Hindu) family; descended through twenty-five generations from Sur Tung Singh Mandhata, a Rájput pilgrim to Puri from Northern India. He, about 400 years ago, seized the country, and drove out or conquered the aboriginal inhabitants. The twenty-second in descent from him was the Rájá Gopináth Singh, who adopted the family style or title of Champati Singh Mahipatra. His great-grandson, the late Rájá Harihar Khetria, added also the style of Birbar; he succeeded to the gadi in 1844, and dying in 1886, was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá. The family cognisance is the sastra pancha (an Indian weapon). The State, which is one of the Orissa Tributary Mahals, has an area of 46 square miles, and a population of 19,850, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá maintains a military force of 485 militia. The State derives its name from three ancient forts (Trigarh).

Residence.—Tigaria, Orissa, Bengal.

TIKAMGARH, Mahárájá Bahádur of. See Orchha.TIKARAM, SETH, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 24th May 1889, as a personal distinction.

TILAK SINGH (of Sikri), Sardár.

The title is hereditary, the Sardár being the head of a Jat family of Sikh Sardárs descended from Sardár Bhág Singh, who conquered Sikri and some neighbouring territory in 1789 A.D. The family came under British protection with the other Cis-Sutlej Chiefs. Bhág Singh's son, Sardár Mahtáb Singh, had a son named Sardár Lahna Singh. The latter was succeeded by his son, the late Sardár Joála Singh, who in turn was succeeded by the present Sardár.

Residence.—Sikri, Karnál, Punjab.

TILAK SINGH (of Mustafabad), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. The Sardár belongs to a Jat family of Sikh Sardárs, descended from Sardár Mahtáb Singh, who took possession of Mustafabad and neighbouring territory in 1759 A.D., on the decline of the Mughal Power. He also seized some villages in the Jálandhar Doáb. The latter were taken from the family by the Mahárájá Ranjit Singh; but the Cis-Sutlej jágir came under British protection. Sardár Mahtáb Singh was succeeded by his son, Sardár Ratan Singh. The latter had two sons—Sardárs Gursaran Singh (q.v.) and Dewa Singh. Sardár Dewa Singh was the father of the present Sardár.

Residence.—Mustafabad, Ambála, Punjab.

TIMBA, THAKUR NATHUSINGHJI, Thákur of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 8th February 1857; succeeded to the gadí as a minor 12th March 1859. Belongs to a Chauhán Rájput family, descended from Thákur Bhimaji, who obtained possession of Timba in 1524 A.D. The State, which makes an annual payment to Idar, has a population of 1205, chiefly Hindus.

Residence.—Timba, Máhi Kántha, Bombay.

TIPPERAH, HILL, HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJA BIR CHANDRA MANIKYA DEB BARMAN, Mahárájá of

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1837; succeeded to the gadi 31st July 1862. Belongs to a Rájput family that claims descent in 179 generations from Chandra (the Moon), and that has ruled in Tipperah, or Tripura, from prehistoric times. Eighty-eighth in descent from Chandra was the Rájá Birráj, who introduced the Tipperah era, used in the Rájmáli or Chronicles of the Kings of Tipperah. The first part of this Chronicle was compiled in the reign of the Rájá Dharma Manikya, who seems to have succeeded to the gadi in 1407 A.D., and is entered as the 148th in descent from Chandra. The Rájmáli is believed to be the earliest specimen of Bengáli composition extant. The area ruled over by this family has at times been very extensive; in the 16th century it extended from the river Hughli (or Hooghly) on the west, to Burma on the east, and to Kámrup on the north. In 1512 the Rájá conquered Chittagong, and his successors, though often engaged in hostilities with the Mughal forces, maintained their independence. In 1620, under the Emperor Jahángir, the Nawáb Fateh Jang invaded Tipperah, captured the Rájá, Jaso Mánikya, and carried him a prisoner to Delhi. Shortly afterwards the Mughal troops were compelled by an epidemic to evacuate the country, in the time of Rájá Kalyán Mánikya, who succeeded Jaso; and though ultimately the Muhammadans established themselves in the lowlands of the Ráj—now the British district of Tipperah in Bengal—the hilly country appears to have been left to the control of the Rájás. The British Government, after obtaining the diwáni of Bengal in 1765, always invested the successive Rájás on payment of the usual nazar or fine on succession. In 1857 the mutineers of the Chittagong garrison captured Agartalá, the capital of this State; but the Rájá, Ishan Chandra Mánikya, rendered to the Government all the assistance in his power. He was succeeded in 1862 by his brother, the present Rájá, who had held the title of Jubáráj (or Yuváráj) during the late Rájá's lifetime. The family cognisance is the device of a figure half man, half fish, said to be derived from the figure of a fish very widely borne on their flags by ancient Rájput Chiefs (see Darbhanga). The area of the State is 4086 square miles; its population is 95,637, chiefly Hindus, but including 26,951 Muhammadans. The family law of succession is peculiar to this State; under it the Rájá has the power of nominating any male member of his family as his successor, with the title of Jubáráj, and also a successor to the Jubáráj, with the title of Bara Thákur. But this right of the Rájá's is subject to the condition that he may not pass over, for the post of Jubáráj, the kinsman (if any) who had been appointed by his predecessor to the post of Bara Thákur; so that practically it comes to this, that the Rájá cannot appoint his own successor, but can appoint the Bara Thákur who will ultimately succeed that successor. In addition to the territory of Hill Tipperah, the Rájá possesses a large estate in the British district of Tipperah, with larger revenues than those of his feudatory State of Hill Tipperah; and in the frequent cases of a disputed succession, as the devolution of this estate has always been decided by the British Courts, that decision has also usually fixed the succession to the Ráj.

Residence.—Agartolá, Hill Tipperah, Bengal.

TIPU HUSAIN, MIR, Khán.

The title is a personal one. It was originally conferred by the Nawáb of the Carnatic, and has been recognised by the British Government.

Residence.—Madras.

TIRLA, Bhumia of. See Nimkhera.

TONK, HIS HIGHNESS AMIN-UD-DAULA WAZIR-UL-MULK
 NAWAB SIR MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM ALI KHAN
 BAHADUR SAULAT JANG, G.C.S.I., Nawáb of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1848; succeeded to the gadi 20th December 1867. Belongs to a Pathán (Muhammadan) family of the Buner clan, descended from Amir Khán, the famous Pindári leader of the last century. His grandfather, Tála Khán, came from the Buner country on the confines of Afghánistán, and took service with the Rohillas in Rohilkhand, in the time of the Emperor Muhammad Sháh Gházi. Tála Khán's son was Haiát Khán, who became a landowner in Moradabad, and was the father of Amir Khán. The latter rose to be in 1798 the commander of a large independent army in the service of Jaswant Rao Holkar. In 1806 he received the State of Tonk from Holkar. In the same year he transferred his military services to the Rájá of Jaipur, then at war with the Rájá of Jodhpur; and after crushing Jodhpur, then changed sides and conquered Jaipur. In 1809, having plundered both these Rájput States, he turned his arms against the Mahratta Rájá of Nágpur; but was warned off by the British Government. In 1817 the Marquis of Hastings, then Governor-General, determined to put an end to the Pindári ravages, and to restore peace to Rájputána and Central India, so he offered Amir Khán the sovereignty of the tracts given him by Holkar, under British protection, on condition of his disbanding his army. This was agreed to; many of Amir Khán's troops enlisted in the British service, all were liberally treated, and Amir Khán himself became Nawáb of Tonk, to which State the British Government spontaneously added the fort of Rámpura and the district of Aligarh-Rámpura. He died in 1834, and was succeeded by his son, Wazir Muhammad Khán, who died in 1864. The latter was succeeded by the late Nawáb Muhammad Ali Khán, who was deposed in 1867, and was succeeded by his son, the present Nawáb. The area of the State is 2509 square miles; its population is 338,029, chiefly Hindus, but including 38,561 Muhammadans and 5693 Jains. His Highness, who has been created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, maintains a military force of 510 cavalry, 2081 infantry, and 77 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 17 guns.

Residence.—Tonk, Rájputána.

TONK, THAKUR NIRPAT SINGH, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1843; succeeded to the gadi in 1869. Belongs to a Rájput (Hindu) family. The State, which is a small Central India State, is not connected with the large State of the same name in Rájputána.

Residence.—Tonk, Indore, Central India.

TORAB. See Turab.

TORI FATEHPUR, DIWAN ARJUN SINGH,

Diwán and Rao Bahádur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1870; succeeded to the gadi as a minor 7th February 1880. Belongs to the great Bundela Rájput family, from which are descended the ruling houses of Orchha, Panna, and all the chief Bundelkhand States. Rai Singh, great-grandson of Hardul, one of the sons of the Maharájá Bir Singh Deo of Orchha (q.v.), held the territory of Baragaon, and divided it among his eight sons, whence the States so founded are commonly known as the Hashthhaya (or "Eight brother") jágirs. Of these there are four now existing—Dhurwai (q.v.), Bijna (q.v.), Pahári (q.v.), and Tori Fatehpur. Rai Singh's son, Hindupat, became the first Diwán of Tori Fatehpur. His great-grandson was the Diwán Haraparshád, who received a sanad from the British Government in 1823. His son, the Diwán Prithi Singh, succeeded to the gadi in 1858. At the Imperial Assemblage of Delhi on 1st January 1877, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India, the Diwán received the additional title of Rao Bahádur. He died in 1880, and was succeeded by his son, the present Chief. The area of the State is 36 square miles; its population is 10,631, chiefly Hindus. The Chief maintains a military force of 15 cavalry, 150 infantry, and 12 guns.

Residence.—Tori Fatehpur, Bundelkhand, Central India.

TRAILAKSHA NATH SARKAR, Rai Sahab.

Granted the title, as a personal distinction, 2nd January 1893, for eminent services in the Bengal Public Works Department.

Residence.—Calcutta.

TRAVANCORE, HIS HIGHNESS SIR BALA RAMA VARMA,
G.C.S.I., Mahárájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1857; succeeded to the gadí 4th August 1885. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Hindu) family, whose rule in southernmost India probably dates from the abdication of the Malabar Emperor Cheraman Perumal, about 352 A.D. This potentate, resolved to betake himself to Benares and retire from the world, divided his dominions among the great vassals of his crown, the chief of whom received the southern portion, with the capital named Tiruvánkodu (corrupted into "Travancore"), now a small village in this territory. A long line of successors ruled in Travancore with varied fortunes, till, in 1684 A.D., the Mahárájá Eruma Varma Perumal came to the throne, and reigned till 1717. His descendants, Vanchi Mártánda Perumal (1729 to 1746), and Vanchi Bala Perumal, his son, largely extended the Travancore dominions. Throughout the wars with Tippu Sultán of Mysore, the Rájá of Travancore was the steadfast ally of the British Power. Tippu invaded Travancore in 1789, and again in 1790, but without success; and in 1795 the Rájá Bala Ráma Varma entered into subsidiary alliance with the British Government, receiving a guarantee of protection. His successor of the same name in 1805 entered into still closer relations with the Paramount Power. A rebellion occurred among the Nairs in 1809, but this was promptly suppressed by the British troops, and ever since then the country has enjoyed profound peace. The family follows the Marumakkatayam law of inheritance, general in the Malabar country, by which the succession is with the offspring of its female members, amongst whom the next eldest male is always the heir-apparent; and a special sanad from the Governor-General, dated 1862, authorises the adoption of nieces to perpetuate the dynasty.

The full title of the Mahárájá is — "His Highness Sri Padmanábha Dasa Vanji Sir Bala Ráma Varmá Kulashekhára Kiritapati Mani Sultán Mahárájá Ráj Ráma Rájá Bahádur Shamsher Jang, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India." The area of the State is 6730 square miles; its population is 2,401,158, chiefly Hindus, but including 146,909 Muhammadans and 498,542 Christians. The Mahárájá maintains a military force of 61 cavalry, 1442 infantry, and 6 guns, and is entitled to a salute of 19 guns. His Highness was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India in 1889. The heir-apparent, who always bears the courtesy title of "the Elaya Rájá," is Prince Kerala Varmá, born in 1864. The family cognisance is a conch or chank-shell.

Arms.—Argent, on a fesse azure, three reversed conches or chank-shells or. Crest.—A sea-horse proper. Supportors.—Elephants rampant, proper. Motto.—Dharmo Smat Kuladevatam.

His eldest son was the late Rájá Harendra Krishna Deb Bahádur, who died in 1886; his second son was the Kumár Uдай Krishna Deb.

Residence.—Calcutta.

UDAI NARAYAN MAL (of Majhauri), Rájá.

Born 1834. Is the Chief of the great Bisen clan of Rájputs in the Gorakhpur district, North-Western Provinces, claiming descent from the famous ascetic Mayur Bhát. By one of his wives, a Surajbansi Rájputni named Surajprabha, he had a son, Biswa or Bisu Sen, who was the great ancestor of the Bisen clan. After him there were seventy-nine generations of Rájás, all of whom had the style of Sen. The eightieth Rájá, Hardeo Sen, obtained on account of his bravery the title of Mal from one of the Delhi Emperors. Then followed twenty-three generations, to Bodh Mal, who succeeded in 1564 A.D., and is said to have been arrested for default of revenue by order of the Emperor Akbar. During his imprisonment at Delhi he was converted to Muhammadanism, taking the name of Muhammad Salim. On his return the Ráni refused to allow him to enter the fort of Majhauri; so he crossed the Little Gandak, and founded the town of Salimpur, while the Ráni managed the Ráj during the minority of her son, Bhawáni Mal. The descendants of the latter continued to rule down to Rájá Ajit Mal, who was Chief from 1753 to 1806; during his time the British took over the district. Rájá Tej Mal was ruler from 1815 to 1843, when he was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá, then a minor. The Rájá Uday Naráyan Mal has a son and heir, Lal Kharag Bahádur Mal, born 30th August 1853.

Residence.—Majhauri, Gorakhpur, North-Western Provinces.

UDAI NARAYAN SINGH (of Babhnipair), Rájá.

Born 1854; succeeded his mother, the Ráni Sarfaráz Kumár, in 1873. The title is hereditary, the Rájá being the head of the only legitimate family of descendants from the old Kalhans Rájás of Khurása, whose Ráj extended from Hisámpur in Bahraich far into the Gorakhpur district. Their ancestor, Sahaj Sah, who traced his descent from the great King Jurasindhu of Behar, is said to have come from Rájputána in the 14th century, and to have taken service with his friend, Málík Ain-ud-din, who ruled the south of Oudh from Karra Manikpur. That officer found him and his band of Rájput soldiers useful in suppressing the internal disorders of the province, and assigned him in jágir the Trans-Gogra district, afterwards known as Khurása, where he settled after expelling the Doms. Tradition says that the Dom Rájá, struck by the beauty of one of the daughters of the Chhattri, demanded her in marriage. The Kalhans Rájá dissembled his rage at the indignity offered him, and pretended to comply, but when the Dom came with his followers to claim his bride, plied them with strong drink till they were insensible and then murdered them.

In the 16th century, seventh in succession from Sahaj Sah was Achal Naráyan Singh—the last of the dynasty, whose fall is related in a well-known legend. He carried off to his fort of Lurhiaghát near Khurása the daughter of Ratan Pánde, a small Bráhman Zamindár. The outraged father sat dharna for twenty-one days under a tamarind tree at the door of the ravisher, refusing meat and drink, till death put an end to his sufferings. Before his spirit fled he pronounced a curse of utter extinction on the family of his oppressor, modifying it only in favour of the offspring of the younger Ráni, who alone had endeavoured to make him break his fast, and to whom he promised that her descendants (the present Rájás of Babhnipair) should succeed to a small Ráj, but that as his eyes had fallen out from hunger, so should they also be blind. The curse has only been partially fulfilled, as though there have been one or two blind Rájás of Babhnipair, the majority of them have been unaffected in their eyesight. The avenging ghost of the Bráhmaṇ obtained the aid of the river Sarju. A lofty wave rushed up from that river, overthrew the Rájá's fortress of Lurhiaghát, and left not a member of his household alive. The Ráni had fled, on the Bráhmaṇ's advice, to her father's home in Rasulpur Ghaus, where the posthumous son of Achal Naráyan Singh, Bhing Singh, the ancestor of the present Rájá, was shortly born. He possessed himself, when he grew up, of a small principality, including Babhnipair and Burhapara in Gonda, and Rasulpur Ghaus in Basti. He was, however, stripped of the Burhapara Parganá by Alawal Khán, the aggressive leader of the Patháns of Atraula, who after a long struggle finally expelled the Kalhans. For five generations the direct lineal descendants of the last Rájá of Khurása held the combined Parganá of Babhnipair and Rasulpur Ghaus.

Sixth in descent from Bhing Singh was Madhukar Singh, whose sons, Ráj Singh and Himmat Singh, divided the inheritance, the former taking Rasulpur Ghaus with the title of Rájá, the latter, as Bábu, Babhnipair. The grandson of Ráj Singh, Kesri Singh, was killed in battle by the Rájá of Bansi, who forcibly possessed himself of the Parganá of Rasulpur Ghaus. The murdered man left an infant son, Shúja Singh, who was adopted by his cousin, the childless Bábu Ráni Singh of Babhnipair, and transferred the title of Rájá to the holder of that estate. His son, Abdhút Singh, held the Ráj till 1821, and was succeeded by the blind Rájá Jai Singh, who died only a few years before the annexation. On the reoccupation of Oudh the estate was settled with Ráni Sarfaráz Kumár, widow of Indrajit Singh, who had an infant son, the present Rájá. In 1867 the estates were taken under management of the Court of Wards. Rájá Udhai Naráyan Singh was educated at Canning College, and received possession of the estates in 1873. He has issue, two daughters.

Residence.—Babhnipair, Gonda, Oudh.

UDAI PARTAB SINGH (of Bhing), Rájá.

Born 3rd September 1850; succeeded to the Bhing Ráj on the death of his father, Rájá Kishn Datt Singh, 24th April 1884. Belongs to the Bisen clan of Rájputs; the family is a younger branch of the Bisens of Gonda, being descended from Bhawáni Singh, second son of Rájá Rám Singh. The Rájá is now, however, the chief representative of the House, as the title of Rájá of Gonda is extinct. The possessions of the elder branch were confiscated after the Mutiny for rebellion. The first recorded ancestor of the family is Partáb Singh (or Mal), Zamindár of Goháni in Parganá Digsai, Gonda district, who was Chaudhri of Parganá Khurása under the Kalhans Rájá at the close of the 15th century. On the tragic death of Rájá Achal Naráyan Singh of Khurása, Partáb Singh became the leading representative of the Hindu community during the anarchy that ensued. Third in descent from Partáb Singh was Mán Singh, who first assumed the style of Rájá and founded the present town of Gonda in what was then a dense jungle. Two legends are connected with these events. It is related that in 1618 the Emperor Jahángir heard through Mirza Ali Beg, the Jágirdár of Khurása, that Mán Singh of Goháni had caught a remarkably fine elephant in the Tarái jungles, and ordered that both the Zamindár and his beast should be invited in this Darbár. The elephant was added to the Imperial stable and the Zamindár recompensed with the title of Rájá. The Rájá was hunting near where Gonda now is when a hare turned round and put his hounds to flight. "If the air of this place," he exclaimed, "will make hares braver than dogs, what will it do for men?" He immediately left the Goháni and laid the foundation of a new capital, which he called Gonda, after a cowshed which he found on the spot.

The most brilliant period in the annals of the family commenced with the accession of Rájá Rám Singh, at the beginning of the latter half of the 17th century, who considerably extended the family estates. The following story is related of the birth of his sons: "His old age was unblest with offspring, and he had recourse to the services of Ganga Gir Goshain, the most noted of his time among holy men of Ajudhya. The saint had two disciples, Datt and Bhawáni, whom he despatched to Benares with directions that they were to insert their heads into a grating which overlooked the Ganges, and as the guillotine-like door descended from above to decapitate them, to pray to the river who received their lives that in exchange for each a son might be given to the Gonda chieftain. The sacrifice was efficacious and two sons were born, who were named after the authors of their lives, Datt and Bhawáni. At the same time the Goshain gave the Rájá his tooth-pick and directed him to plant it in Gonda, with the prophecy that as long as it remained green the family of the Bisens should prosper. It grew into a chilbil bush, throwing out two main branches. In the Mutiny, when his rebellion cost Rájá Debi Bakhsh Singh his estates, the principal bough was broken off by a hurricane. The second bough yet remains, and with it are bound up the fortunes of the descendants of Bhawáni Singh, the Rájás of Bhingá."

Rájá Rám Singh was succeeded by his son Rájá Datt Singh, whose exploits and conquests are famous. The most celebrated of his wars was with Alawál Khán, who had been appointed by the new Subahdár, Nawáb Saádat Khán, his lieutenant for the Trans-Gogra Provinces, and who was killed at the battle of Sarbangpur. Rájá Datt Singh finally came to terms with the Oudh Government, and his territories were created into a separate jurisdiction, independent of the Názims of Bahraich and Gorakhpur, within which he exercised the full powers of government. He provided for his younger brother, Bhawáni Singh, by sending him to Bhingá, nominally in order to defend it from its foreign enemies and to repress the Banjáras. His strong hand soon restored order. The Janwar chieftain of Bhingá died without issue. The claims of his kindred were disregarded, and Bhingá became thenceforward a Bisen dependency under the rule of Bhawáni Singh and his descendants. Bhawáni Singh brought under his sway all that portion of the Parganá which lies between the Rápti and the forest, as well as a considerable portion of the Tarái which lies to the north of the bank of the river. Up to 1816 the estate was included in the jágir of the Bahu Begam. The present Rájá is the sixth in descent from Bhawáni Singh. Rájá Udai Partáb Singh was educated in the Wards Institution at Lucknow. He is the author of a pamphlet entitled Democracy not suited to India, and is a Fellow of the Allahabad University. He has a son and heir, named Kunwár Sarendra Bikráma Singh, born 18th December 1878.

Residence.—Bhingá, Bahraich, Oudh.

UDAIPUR (or Mewar), HIS HIGHNESS MAHARANA DHIRAJ
SIR FATEH SINGH BAHADUR, G.C.S.I., Mahāráná of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1848; succeeded to the gadi 21st December 1884. Is the Chief of the Sesodia clan of Rájputs; and is called "the Sun of the Hindus," as being the head of the elder branch of the Suryabansi or Solar race, and the legitimate heir of the semi-divine Ráma, the first in blood of all Hindu Princes. The Mahāráná is universally acknowledged as the Chief of the "Thirty-six Royal Tribes"; and the House of Mewár — which is the name of the country of which Udaipur is the capital—is the only dynasty in India that still rules over the same territory as that which its ancestors ruled over for centuries before the Muhammadan invaders from Ghazni first crossed the Indus.

The title, however, of Ráná or Mahāráná—which is proudly borne by every considerable Sesodia Prince in Central and Western India, in token of kinship with the illustrious Mahāráná of Udaipur—is comparatively modern, having been adopted in the 12th century in lieu of the more ancient "Ráwal," on the occasion of the conquest of the Puár Ráná of Mandor by the Sesodia Ráwal of Chitor. Every member of the Sesodia clan claims kinship with his Chief; and even if he is only the holder of a charsa or "hide" of land, he addresses the Mahāráná as Bápi—father or sire.

The chief modern authority for the history and antiquities of Mewár, as of the other great Rájput States, is the Annals of Rájsthán, by the learned Colonel Tod, dedicated to King George the Fourth in 1829, and embodying the researches of many years spent as a Political Agent in Rájputána, in the most friendly personal intercourse with the Rájput Chiefs of that day. Of this great work the most important part is the Annals of Mewar, compiled from the records of Udaipur, from the history written by the Rájá Jai Singh of Jaipur, and from a large number of ancient chronicles, including the Memoirs of the Emperors Bábar and Jahángir, the Ain-i-Akbari of Abul Fazl, and others. Tod says of this State:—

"Mewár exhibits a marked difference from all the other States in her policy and institutions; she was an old-established dynasty when these renovated scions were in embryo. We can trace the losses of Mewár, but with difficulty her acquisitions. . . . The honours, and privileges, and the gradations of rank amongst the vassals of the Ráná's House exhibit a highly artificial and refined state of society. Each of the superior rank is entitled to a banner, kettle-drums preceded by heralds, and silver maces, with peculiar gifts and personal honours, in commemoration of some exploit of their ancestors. . . . Only those of pure blood in both lines can hold fiefs of the Crown; the highest may marry the daughter of a Rájput whose sole possession is 'a skin of land,' the sovereign himself is not degraded by such an alliance."

The knight's fee in Mewár is stated to be land of about the yearly rental-value of 250 rupees. The Thákurs of the first class in Mewár are those whose estates represent a yearly value of 50,000 rupees and upwards; these appear at the Court of the Maháráná only on special invitation, and are his hereditary councillors. Those of the second class, with estates of a yearly value of 5000 rupees and upwards, were formerly required to be always in attendance on the Maháráná; and from their number were appointed the *Faujdar*s and military officers. Below these Chiefs are the great body of smaller Thákurs, called the Gol, holders of smaller estates. And in addition to all are the Bábás, or "Children of Mewár"—the numerous younger branches of the Maháráná's own family, who within a certain period are entitled to an appanage. To this class belong the Rájás of Bunera and Sháhpura, great and powerful Chiefs; the ancestor of the former was a twin-brother of the Ráná Jai Singh in the time of the Emperor Aurangzeb, whilst the latter is descended from a scion of the family of the Ráná Udai Singh in the time of Akbar. These greater feudatory Chiefs have their grants renewed by the Maháráná at each succession, and receive from His Highness the khilat of investiture; but otherwise their feudal burdens are almost nominal. The greatest of the Mewár feudatories is the Ráwat of Salumbar, the head of the great Chondáwat sept; descended from the Prince Chonda, elder son of the Ráná Lakha Rám. The legend runs that Chonda, annoyed by some light words of his father, voluntarily surrendered his right to the gadi of Chitor in favour of his younger brother Mokalji, who became Ráná in 1398 A.D. Chonda stipulated that he and his descendants should always hold the first place in the Councils of the State; and that his symbol, the bhala or lance, should always be attached to the signature of the ruling Chief in all grants to vassals. To the present day the descendants of Chonda, Ráwats of Salumbar, are the hereditary Chief Councillors of the Maháránás of Udaipur; and in all grants, the monogram Sahai, which is the sign-manual of the Maháráná, is preceded by the symbol of the lance, the sign-manual of the Salumbar chieftain, as shown in the margin.

(a) The Bhala or lance of the Ráwat of Salumbar, attached to every Udaipur grant.

(b) The monogram of the word Sahai, the sign-manual of the Maháráná of Udaipur, which always follows the Bhala.

The history of the family of the Maháráná of Udaipur is a most interesting one; only a very few landmarks in it can here be given. The legendary empire of Ajudhya, of which Ráma was the monarch, was named Koshala, and in the archives of the Maháráná at Udaipur the first royal immigrant from the north into Mewár is called Koshalaputra—the son of Koshala. Ráma's two sons were Loh and Cush; of whom the elder, the founder of Loh-Kot or Lahore, is claimed as the ancestor of the Ránás. Fifty-sixth in descent from the deified Ráma was Sumitra, the contemporary of King Vikramáditya, about the year 56 A.D. But the actual founder of the Mewár dynasty is generally considered to be Kanak Sen, who appears to have migrated from Loh-Kot or Lahore into Saurashtra (a province of Káthiáwár, Bombay) about the year 145 A.D. His descendants long reigned in great splendour at Ballabhipur; till at length, about the year 524 A.D., that city was sacked, and the Rájá Siláditya and all his people exterminated. Only the Queen, Puspávati, was saved, who happened to be absent on a pilgrimage to the shrine of Bhaváni in her native land—she was a Princess of the Pramara clan of Rájputs from Chandravati near Mount Abu. She gave birth to a son in a cave in the mountains of Mallia; and then, having confided her infant to the care of Kamalávati, the daughter of a Bráhmaṇ priest of the temple, with the injunctions to bring up the child as a Bráhmaṇ but to marry him to a Rájputni, Queen Puspávati mounted the pyre of her dead husband Siláditya. Thus was preserved the Solar race: and Goha (the "Cave-born") subsequently founded the earliest dynasty of Idar (q.v.) By the time he was eleven years old he had become quite unmanageable by his kind Bráhmaṇ protectors; he associated with Rájput children, killed birds, hunted with the wild Bhils of the forest—in the words of the legend, "How could they hide the rays of the 'Sun'?" The eighth in descent from Goha was Nagadit; he was killed by the Bhils, and the Idar Ráj destroyed. But his infant son, Bappa, was saved by one of the descendants of the faithful Kamalávati, was brought up under the protection of a Bhil family, and became the conqueror of Chitor. An immense mass of legendary lore is attached to the name of Bappa. The saint Harita, who conferred on him the title of "the Diwán of the god Eklinga," dwelt on the spot that is now the site of the great temple of Eklinga, the tutelary deity of Mewár; and the high-priest of that temple, in Colonel Tod's time, was sixty-sixth in lineal descent from Harita. Bappa in some of his flights was accompanied by two Bhils, Baleo of Oguna Panora, in the west of Mewár, and Dewa of Undri, in the valley of Udaipur; and when later he conquered the kingdom of Chitor these Bhils made the tiká or mark of sovereignty on the forehead of the young Prince, with blood drawn from the thumb of Baleo. Whence it comes that, to the present day, in the installation ceremonies of a Maharáná of Udaipur, the Ráná of Oguna Panora, a Bhumia Bhil descended from Baleo, makes the tiká on the forehead of the Prince with blood from his thumb, and takes him by the arm, and seats him on the gadí; whilst the Undri Bhil, the lineal descendant of Dewa, holds the salver of spices and sacred grains of rice used in making the tiká. The date of the capture of Chitor and settlement of Bappa Ráwal in Mewár has been fixed at 720 A.D.

At the time of the Muhammadan invasion of Shaháb-ud-din Ghori, a brave descendant of Bappa named Samarsi was the Ráwal of Chitor. He was married to the sister of Prithvi Ráj, the last Hindu Emperor of Delhi; and was the chief ally of that monarch, whose campaigns are the theme of the poet Chand. Shaháb-ud-din was at first defeated by the combined forces of the Chauháns, Tuárs, and Gehlots or Sesodias, according to the account of Chand; but returning in the following year, 1192 A.D., he slew Samarsi and his son Kalyan Rai, as well as Prithvi Ráj and all the flower of the Rájput chivalry. The Queen Pritha died on the pyre of Samarsi; but another widow of Samarsi, Kuramdevi, a Princess of the Salonki Rájputs of Patan, administered the government of Chitor during the minority of her son Karna, while an elder son of Samarsi emigrated and founded the dynasty of Dungarpur. At the head of her Rájputs, Kuramdevi gave battle to Kutb-ud-din near Amber, when the latter was defeated and wounded; and on this occasion nine Rájás and eleven Ráwats of the septs of Mewár followed the mother of their Prince. The Ráwal Karna succeeded to the gadí in 1193 A.D.; but he was not destined to be the ancestor of the future Princes of Mewár. His son Mahup abandoned Chitor, to live with his maternal relatives of the Chauhán clan ; and Rahup, son of Karna's cousin (and grandson of Surájmal, brother of Samarsi) succeeded at Chitor.

Goha, Bappa, and Samarsi were the great names of the early semi-legendary times of the Mewár dynasty. With Rahup's accession in 1193 A.D. its history becomes clearer and more authentic. He conquered Mokal, the Purihár Ráná of Mandur ; and assumed his title of Ráná or Maháráná, which has ever since distinguished the Sesodias. Ninth in descent from Rahup was the Ráná Lakumsi, who succeeded in 1275 A.D. ; his reign is famous for the terrible sack of Chitor by Alá-ud-din, the Pathán Emperor of Delhi. According to the Rájput chronicles, it was the beauty of the fair Padmáni, the Chauhán bride of Bhim Singh, uncle and guardian of the Ráná, that was the cause of this great catastrophe—when Padmáni and all the women of Chitor burnt themselves in one grand holocaust, while their husbands and brothers put on the saffron robe and threw themselves on the Pathán hosts, to be exterminated to a man. The Ráná Ajai Singh was the sole survivor among the royal princes of this massacre ; and he was succeeded by his nephew, the great Ráná Hamir, in 1301 A.D. Hamir recaptured Chitor, and in a long reign of sixty-four years restored the fortunes of his family. During the remainder of the Pathán period, Mewár enjoyed great power and prosperity ; and the Emperor of Delhi was defeated by one of its Ránás, Khait Singh, at the battle of Bakrol. Khait Singh's son, Lakha Ráná, had many sons, of whom the heroic Chonda was the eldest, and Mokalji the youngest. After a romantic series of incidents, already alluded to above, the succession was handed over by Chonda to Mokalji ; and the Ráwat of Salumbar, the descendant of Chonda and the Chief of the Chondáwat sept, is the first noble of Udaipur to this day. After a long reign Mokalji was assassinated, and was succeeded by his son, Khumbo Ráná, in 1419 A.D. ; and the latter in 1440 A.D., at the head of 100,000 horse and foot and 1400 elephants, routed the combined forces of the Musalmán Kings of Málwá and Gujarát, and carried off Máhmud, the Khilji King of Málwá, a prisoner to Chitor. The story of this victory is told by Abul Fazl, Akbar's great Minister, in the Ain-i-Akbari ; and he dilates on the magnanimity of the Rájput Prince, who set Máhmud at liberty, not only without ransom but with rich gifts. The triumphal pillar which Khumbo set up at Chitor eleven years later still records his glory. Khumbo built thirty-two strong fortresses in Mewár, of which the most famous in history is the huge Kumbhomer. In 1469 he was assassinated by his son Uda Singh ; and the parricide's name is properly left a blank in the chronicles of Udaipur. His descendant, the Ráná Raimal, had three sons famous in the Rájput ballads, of whom the eldest, the Ráná Sánta, saw the climax of the greatness of Mewár. He is one of the "Pagan" heroes of the Memoirs of Babar ; and was defeated by the Mughal invader at the great battle of Kánua, on the result of which Bábar assumed the title of Ghází, which was held by all subsequent Mughal invaders. In this battle many of the greatest princes of India were slain, fighting under Sánta as their lord paramount—including the Ráwal Udaí Singh of Dungarpur (q.v.), with two hundred of his clan ; the Ráwat of Salumbar, with three hundred Chondáwats ; Raimal, son of the Ráhtor Rájá of Jodhpur (q.v.) ; Rámdas, the Rao of Sonigara ; the Khán of Mewát ; and the son of the last Lodi Emperor of Delhi. Under the rule of Ráná Vikramáditya, son of Sánta, Chitor was once more stormed by the Musalmán foe—this time Bahádur Sháh, King of Gujarát ; but it was during the reign of the Ráná Udai Singh, 1541-1572 A.D., that this famous old fortress was finally stormed by the great Akbar himself. Akbar is stated in the Jáhángir Námeh to have shot Jaimal, the heroic uncle of the Ráná, with his own matchlock ; which he afterwards called Singhrám (another form of Sánga) in honour of this exploit. The Ráná Udai Singh fled, and founded a new capital in a more remote district ; he called it Udaipur from his own name, and from that time, 1568 A.D., it has been the capital of Mewár.

The wars with the forces of the Mughal Empire under the generals of Akbar and Jahángir continued with varying fortunes during the reigns of Udai Singh's successors, the Ránás Partáb Singh and Umra Singh ; but in 1613 A.D. the latter made his submission to the Emperor Jahángir, who treated him magnanimously, and lavished honours on him and his son Karran. The Emperor Sháh Jahán being a son of the famous Princess of Jaipur, there was great friendship between the Mughals and the Rájputs during his reign. The old animosity broke out anew when Aurangzeb imposed the jaziah, or capitation tax on infidels, on all Hindus ; but in 1681 he relinquished this odious claim. In 1713, during the reign of the Emperor Farukhsiyar, there was a coalition of the three greatest Rájput States, Mewár (or Udaipur), Márwár (or Jodhpur), and Amber (or Jaipur), against the Imperial power ; but this was not of long duration. The House of Udaipur never consented to give a daughter in marriage to the Mughals, and contemned the other Rájput princes who had submitted to this infringement of caste rules. Hence the re-admission of the Jaipur and Jodhpur families to the honour of matrimonial alliances with the Udaipur family was the subject of negotiations, and the condition of treaties ; and the stipulation on which this was conceded—that the sons of Udaipur princesses succeed their fathers in preference to elder sons by other mothers—was the fruitful cause of bitter family dissensions and many wars. From the year 1736 this State, like most other Rájput States, was incessantly engaged in resisting the Mahrattas or in submitting to their exactions or ravages. Towards the end of the last century, during the rule of the Ráná Bhim Singh, occurred the disastrous war between the Rájás of Jaipur and Jodhpur, both of whom were aspirants for the hand of the Princess Krishna Kunwár of Udaipur. The feud was temporarily appeased by the cruel counsels of the Minister or Diwán of the Ráná, who persuaded the latter to poison his daughter, so as to give peace to Rájásthán. But the ravages of the Mahrattas and the Pindáris under Amir Khán (see Tonk) from this time almost made a wilderness of the whole country ; till, in 1817, the British Government intervened, put an end to the predatory system in Central and Western India, and undertook the protection and control of the Rájput Chiefs. The Maháráná Bhim Singh gladly entered into this arrangement ; and from that time the succession in Udaipur has been a peaceful and happy one. The Maháráná Sambhu Singh, who died in 1874, was succeeded by his first cousin, Maháráná Sujjan Singh, G.C.S.I. The latter died in 1884, and was succeeded by the present Maháráná ; who was created a Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India on the 15th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty.

The chief feudatories of Mewár are the States of Chani, Jawas, Jura, Madri, Oghna, Panarwa, Para, Patia, Sarwan, and Thana. The area of the State, including these feudatories, is 12,670 square miles ; its population is 1,494,220, chiefly Hindus, but including 51,076 Bhils (an aboriginal tribe), 43,322 Muhammadans, and 78,171 Jains. The Maharáná maintains a military force of 5560 cavalry, 19,344 infantry, and 464 guns. His Highness is entitled to a salute of 19 guns.

Arms.—Gules, a sun in its splendour or. Crest.—A sheathed sword erect, proper. Supporters.—A Bhil and Rájput warrior attired for forlorn hope (in saffron robes), proper. Motto.—Io Drirha Rakhe Dharma Kouri Tihin Rakhe Katar.

Residence.—Udaipur, Rájputána.

UDAIPUR (CHOTA NAGPUR), RAJA DHARAMJIT SINGH DEO, Rájá of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 17th March 1857, succeeded to the gadi 18th March 1876. Belongs to a Kshatriya (Rájput Hindu) family, descended from the Chiefs of Sargujá (q.v.) The last surviving Rájá of the family that formerly ruled in this State having been guilty of murder and rebellion during the Mutiny of 1857, and having been transported to the Andaman Islands, the State was conferred on the father of the present Rájá, who was the Rájá Bindeswari Parshád Singh Deo Bahádur, C.S.I., brother of the Mahárájá of Sargujá. He distinguished himself greatly for his loyalty to Government, and was created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He died in 1876, and was succeeded by his son, the present Rájá. The latter has a son and heir named Bishan Partáb Singh Deo; who bears the courtesy title of Jubaráj or Yuvaráj. The State, which is one of the Chota Nágpur Tributary Mahals, has an area of 1051 square miles; and a population of 33,955, chiefly Hindus. The Rájá has a military force of 3 guns.

Residence.—Udaipur, Chota Nágpur, Bengal.

UDHAM SINGH (of Pirthipur), Mián.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Pirthipur, Kángra, Punjab.

UDIT NARAYAN SINGH (of Tirwa), Rájá.

Born 1855; succeeded to the Ráj as a minor on the death of his kinsman, the late Rájá Jagat Singh, in 1857. He is a Baghel Rájput, the son of Rájá Báji Singh. The remote progenitor of the family is said to have been one Bazag Gir Deo, who came from Gujrat and settled in Rewah. In the time of Rájá Jai Chand, the Ráhtor Prince of Kanauj (circ. 1190), one Bhaun Partáb came from Rewah and settled at Kolapur in Kanauj, and the family spread in the neighbouring villages, till about the end of the 17th century Dharm Dás took up his abode in Tirwa. His grandson, Partáb Singh, by ingratiating himself with the Oudh Governor, Almas Ali, extended his influence and acquired the title of Rao. Sumer Singh, son of Partáb Singh, raised the family to the greatest distinction they ever enjoyed from his connection with Shujá-ud daulá, the Nawáb Vazir of Oudh, whom he aided in the battle of Buxar. He obtained from the Emperor Sháh Alam the title of Rájá Bahádur, and the dignity of a mansabdar of 3000.

Residence.—Tirwa, Farukhabad, North-Western Provinces.

UDIYAJIT (of Kakarbai), Rao.

Born 14th April 1827. This Bundela Thákur is descended from Bharat Chand, grandson of Rájá Malkhan of Orchha. The title of Rao is said to have been conferred on the grandfather of the present holder by the Mahárájá of Panna. Arjun Singh, the father of Rao Udiyajit, assisted in restoring order in the Garotha tahsil towards the close of the Mutiny. Rao Udiyajit owns seven villages in the Jhānsi district. He has a son and heir, Lachhman Singh, aged twenty-six years.

Residence.—Kakarbai, Jhānsi, North-Western Provinces.

UGRA NARAYAN SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 1st January 1877, as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India.

Residence.—Supul, Bhágalpur, Bengal.

UJAMBAR. See Ajambar.

UJJAL SINGH (of Dhanaura), Sardár.

Born 1858; succeeded to the title, which is hereditary, on the death of his father, the late Sardár Dewa Singh of Dhanaura. Belongs to a Khatri family of Sikh Sardárs, descended from Hazuri Singh, whose eldest son, Sardár Dharam Singh, was the grandfather of Sardár Natha Singh, father of the late Sardár Dewa Singh of Dhanaura. The younger brothers of Sardár Dharam Singh were the Sardárs Karam Singh and Sada Singh, both of whom made considerable conquests in the Punjab—the last-named being the conqueror of Dhanaura and the neighbouring territory, which descended to the posterity of his elder brother, Sardár Dharam Singh. The family came under British protection with the other Cis-Sutlej States, and rendered good service during the Mutiny of 1857.

Residence.—Dhanaura, Karnál, Punjab.

UJYAR SINGH (of Gormara), Thákur.

The title is hereditary.

Residence.—Gormara, Seoni, Central Provinces.

UMAKANT DAS, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred on 1st January 1889, as a personal distinction, in recognition of eminent services in the Political Department, particularly in connection with the State of Hill Tipperah (q.v.), in Bengal. The Rai Bahádur holds the position of Assistant Political Agent in Hill Tipperah.

Residence.—Hill Tipperah, Bengal.

UMED KUAR (of Fatehpur), Ráná.

Belongs to a Ráj Gond family, claiming an antiquity, in the Hoshangabad district of the Central Provinces, of more than 900 years. The Fatehpur jágir is said to have been conferred on an ancestor by Rájá Kamal Nain, Gond Rájá of Mandla, in 930 A.D. A sanad from the Rájá of Mandla, dated 1500 A.D., is still in the possession of the family.

Residence.—Fatehpur, Hoshangabad, Central Provinces.

UMED SINGH (of Piplod), Ráná.

The Santak of the Chauhán Rájputs, called Chakra, used in the seal and for signature.

(A circle with four Trisulas or Tridents as radii at the cardinal points.)

Born 1844. Belongs to a family claiming descent from the famous Chauhán Rájputs of Ajmir; the chakra or Chauhán device used in the seals and signatures of Chauhán Chiefs is given in the margin. The name of the founder of the family is unknown, but he is said to have received the jágir from Pádsháh Gházi of Delhi about 725 years ago. The earliest Ráná was Ráná Jagrup Singh; from whom the succession has been from father to son in uninterrupted course. The Ráná is an Honorary Magistrate. He has three sons—(1) Nahita Singh, (2) Nirbhi Singh, (3) Umrao Singh.

Residence.—Piplod, Nimár District, Central Provinces.

UMEDRAM ANANDRAM, Rao Bahádur.

The title was at first conferred as an official title, and for good services was subsequently continued for life.

Residence.—Surat, Bombay.

UMETA, THAKUR HATHISINGHJI, Thákur of.

A Ruling Chief.

Born 1825. Belongs to a family said to be of Bariya (aboriginal) descent. The area of the State is about 37 square miles.

Residence.—Umeta, Rewá Kántha, Bombay.

UMRAO SHA (of Sobhapur), Rájá.

Succeeded to the title on the death of the late Rájá Chandra Churáman Sha of Sobhapur, 14th December 1886. Belongs to a Ráj Gond family, whose ancestor obtained the title of Rájá from the Gond Rájá of Mandla.

Residence.—Sobhapur, Hoshangabad, Central Provinces.

UMRAO SINGH (of Kachesar), Rao.

Born April 1835. Belongs to a Jat family of the Dalál gotra, founded by four brothers, Bhual, Jagram, Jarmal, and Gurwa, who came from Mandoti in Hariana about 200 years ago. The first three settled in Chitsona, Parganá Sayana, while Gurwa took possession of lands in Parganá Chandansi. Bhual was succeeded by Manghi Ram, who had two sons, Rai Singh and Chatar Singh, the latter of whom obtained considerable power. He had two sons, Magni Ram and Randhan Singh. Both of these joined the Jats of Bhartpur, but Najib-ud daulá secured their allegiance by granting them Kachesar in jà ir, with the title of Rao, and the office of chormár, or destroyer of thieves, for the nine surrounding Parganá. Randhan succeeded to the estate in 1790, and obtained from Sháh Alam a perpetual lease of Parganá Path, Sayana, Thana Farida, and talúqas Datiyana and Sayyidpur, at a yearly revenue of Rs.40,000. This grant was confirmed by the British Government in 1803. Rao Randhan died in prison in Meerut in 1816, and on his death the grant was settled with the original proprietors, but the jágir of Kachesar was granted revenue-free in perpetuity to his son, Rao Fateh Singh, by Lord Moira in the same year.

Fateh Singh died in 1839, after amassing immense wealth and estates, and increasing his talúqa to an enormous extent. He was succeeded by his son, Rao Bahádur Singh, who added twenty-six villages to the estates. He expressed his intention of leaving his estates equally to Guláb Singh and Umrao Singh. Guláb resented this, and Rao Bahádur was found foully murdered in his house in 1847.

Guláb Singh, who succeeded, received estates assessed at Rs.7,083 for his services during the Mutiny. He died in 1859, and was succeeded by his widow, Jaswant Kunwar, who again was succeeded by her daughter, Bhup Kunwar. Bhup Kunwar died without issue in 1861, and was succeeded by her husband, Kushal Singh, nephew and adopted son of the late rebel, Rájá Nahar Singh, of Ballabgarh. Umrao Singh had meanwhile been pressing his claims, and in 1868 a settlement was made by arbitration—five-sixteenths of the property were awarded to Partáp Singh, a grandson of Magni Ram; six-sixteenths to Umrao Singh, and the remainder to Khushal Singh. Umrao Singh subsequently gave one of his daughters in marriage to Khushal Singh. He has a son and heir, named Girraj Singh, aged twelve years.

Residence.—Kachesar, Bulandshahr, North-Western Provinces.

UMRAO SINGH, LALA, Rai Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 29th May 1886, in recognition of good services rendered in the Railway Mail Service.

Residence.—Calcutta.

UMRAO SINGH (of Majithia), Sardár.

The title is hereditary. Belongs to a Shergil Jat family, descended from a common ancestor, fourteen generations back, with Sardár Dayál Singh, Majithia (q.v.) Izzat Singh was the founder of this branch of the family. He acquired a strip of the Dhanni territory, and held it till his death in 1772 A.D. The Mahárájá Ranjit Singh took possession of the whole of the Dhanni country, but he allowed the Sardár Attar Singh, grandson of Izzat Singh, to retain a considerable estate, and the Sardár ultimately was permitted to administer the country. He was killed in Hazára in 1843, and succeeded by his only son, Surat Singh—to whose influence was largely due the rebellion of the Mahárájá Sher Singh in 1845. After the annexation of the Punjab the Sardár Surat Singh's jágirs were confiscated, and he was banished to Benares. When the Mutiny of 1857 broke out he displayed conspicuous loyalty. He kept a Sikh detachment, which guarded the Treasury at Benares, to their duty; and in an engagement with a party of Rájputs, who had attacked Benares, he received a severe wound. For his services during the Mutiny the Sardár received the additional title of Bahádur, a considerable pension, and a valuable jágir; and he was subsequently created a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. He received permission to return to the Punjab, and generally resided at Majithia. On 1st January 1877 he received the title of Rájá as a personal distinction, on the occasion of the Proclamation of Her Most Gracious Majesty as Empress of India. He was succeeded by his elder son, the present Sardár, the younger son being named Sundar Singh.

Residence.—Majithia, Amritsar, Punjab.

UMRAO SINGH (of Naigaon), Rájá.

The title is hereditary, the Rájá belonging to a Rájput family, whose ancestor received the title from the Emperor Akbar of Delhi. The family were originally the Chiefs of Argal on the river Jumna. Subsequently they migrated to Garhakota, and ruled there. The late Rájá of Naigaon, Guláb Singh, was born 21st January 1806; and on his death he was succeeded by his adopted son, the present Rájá.

Residence.—Naigaon, Ságar, Central Provinces.

UMRAO SINGH, Rai Bahádur.

Born 1834. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 14th November 1888, for good services rendered in the Medical Service. The Rai Bahádur is the son of the late Makhun Singh of Cawnpore. He entered the Medical Service of the Government of India as Native Doctor in February 1854, and was attached to the 63rd Regiment. Transferred to 2nd Grenadiers N.I., and served in medical charge of two companies of the regiment in the expedition against the Santáls in June 1855, and subsequently with the whole regiment in 1855-56. In 1857 was appointed to a detachment of Her Majesty's 64th Foot at Chinsurah, and marched to Cawnpore, and joined the headquarters of the regiment. Was present at the action of Sewrajpore and Cawnpore in November 1857 against the rebel Sepoys, and was entrenched for nine days at Cawnpore; was afterwards present in the final action at Cawnpore on 28th November 1857, when the Gwalior contingent was defeated. Appointed to the 35th Regiment in 1858, and served with the corps in keeping open the line of communication along the Trunk Road between Mainpuri and Merah-ki Serai. In 1863 was appointed to the Civil charge of the Rampur Boáliya Charitable Dispensary. In 1865 was transferred to His Excellency the Viceroy's Household Dispensary. In 1886 accompanied His Excellency the Viceroy to Mandalay (Burma Medal). Retired 1891. He has a son and heir, named Bhojrub Prosad Singh, born 21st July 1858.

Residence.—Simla and Calcutta.

UMRAO SINGH, BAHADUR (of Barhpura), Rao.

Born 1839. This very ancient title, which is hereditary, was originally conferred by the famous Prithiráj, last Hindu Emperor of Delhi. The Rao belongs to a Bhadauriya (Chauhán Rájput) family, and is the Chief of the clan in the Etáwah district. For the family history, see Mahendra Mahendra Singh, Bhadauriya, Mahárájá of Bhadáwar. The Rao has a son and heir, Lala Himanchal Singh, born 20th February 1867.

VIKAR-UL-UMARA (IKBAL-UD-DAULA) BAHADUR,

His Excellency the Nawáb.

One of the Premier Nobles of the Hyderabad State.

Born about the year 1840. The Nawáb Bahádúr bears the courtesy title of "His Excellency" as a Member of the Council of State and Minister of His Highness the Nizám. With his brother, Sir Khurshid Jáh (q.v.), and his cousin, Sir Asmán Jáh (q.v.), he is the present representative of the great and powerful Shamsiya family, the first among the noble families of Hyderabad, which has been frequently connected by marriage with the ruling House, and entrusted with the hereditary command of the Paigah or Household Troops of the Nizám. Descended from the famous captain, Shaikh Abul Khair Khán, Imám Jang, Shamsheer Bahádúr, who was a Mansabdár in Málwá under the Emperor Aurangzeb. He attached himself to the fortunes of the great Asaf Jáh, the founder of the Hyderabad dynasty, under whose banner he rose to the highest commands. In 1745 he defeated a force of Mahrattas; and under the successors of Asaf Jáh, the Nizáms Násir Jang and Salábat Jang, he continued his successful career. In 1752 he died at Burhánpur; and was succeeded by his son, Abul Fateh Khán Teg Jang, who became the first Noble of the Nizám Ali, obtaining the command of the Paigah or Household Troops, immense territorial possessions, and the titles of Shams-ud-daulá, Shams ul-Mulk, and Shams-ul-Umará. He died in 1876, when campaigning in Panghul; and was succeeded by his son, who at the early age of four had received from the Nizám the titles of Ba-ud-dín Khán, Imám Jang, Khurshid-ud-daulá, and Khurshid-ul-Mulk. He succeeded to all the honours of his father, and became a famous scholar and savant, receiving at various times the titles of Teg Jang, Shams-ud-daulá, Shams-ul-Mulk, Shams-ul-Umará, Bahádúr, and in 1827 the title of Amir-i-Kabir. In 1849 he became for a short time Prime Minister of Hyderabad. He died in 1862, leaving two sons, Umdat-ul-Mulk (who became Amir-i-Kabir), and Ikhtidár-ul-Mulk (who became Vikar-ul-Umará). The former died in 1877, when the latter succeeded him in the family honours, and as co-Regent of the State—adding the title of Amir-i-Kabir to that of Vikár-ul-Umará. He died in 1881, leaving two sons, the Nawáb Sir Khurshid Jáh (q.v.) and the Nawáb Ikbál-ud-daulá, who became the Vikár-ul-Umará. Both these noblemen, like their kinsman Sir Asmán Jáh, have shared the fortune of their ancestor, in allying themselves in marriage with Princesses of the Royal House of Hyderabad. The Vikár has two sons, who have been most carefully educated under both Indian and English tutors, and who are both promising scholars and exceedingly popular. The Vikár has always taken an active share in the administration of His Highness's government, and is one of the most experienced and accomplished statesmen in India. He is also famous as the first sportsman in India; and in this capacity has always been most generous in providing the finest tiger-shooting for many distinguished visitors. On the occasion of the visit of the Viceroy to Hyderabad in November 1892, the Vikár was entrusted by His Highness the Nizám with the duty of meeting His Excellency and bringing him into Hyderabad. His palace of Falaknuma, a few miles out of Hyderabad, is one of great magnificence, and is one of the sights of India.

Residences.—Hyderabad ; Falaknuma, near Hyderabad.

VIKRAMA DEVU GARU, SRI (of Jaipur, Vizágapatam), Rájá.

Born 1875. The title of Rájá of Jaipur was recognised as hereditary in December 1890. The late Rájá of Jaipur, Sri Ramachendra Devu Garu, received the title of Mahárájá as a personal distinction on 2nd December 1875. Claims descent from the ancient Kings of Jambhuráj; the founder of the family, Vináyakadevu, having been, in very early times, the younger brother of a King of Jambhuráj. The family banner, coloured yellow and purple, bears the figure of Hanumán, the monkey-god. For a seal the Rájás of Jaipur use the device of a lion argent standing on the back of an elephant azure. The title of Mahárájá Saheb Mehrban Doston is said to have been conferred on the Rájá's ancestors by one of the Mughal Emperors of Delhi. Vináyakadevu, who is described as a Rájput of the Chandravansa or Lunar race, is said to have married the daughter of one of the Gajapati Kings of Orissa, who conferred on him this extensive Zamindári, and subsequently, to confirm his authority over the wild tribes of the mountainous districts of Jaipur, he took as his second wife the only surviving Princess of the ancient Sila Vansa dynasty. Among the population of the Ráj are many Kandhs, Gauras, and other aboriginal tribes, who were formerly notorious for their human sacrifices known as Meriah.

Residence.—Jaipur, Vizágapatam District, Madras.

VILAYAT ALI KHAN, SAYYID, C.I.E., Nawáb.

The title of Nawáb was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 14th April 1882, in recognition of "prominent and devoted services rendered during the Mutiny, and munificent liberality." The "Saviour of Behar"—the late William Tayler, Commissioner of Patna at the time of the outbreak of the Mutiny—thus wrote of the Sayyid:—

"Vilayet Ali Khan has been conspicuous from the very commencement of the disturbance, and the bravery and frankness with which he has at very great risk to himself cast his lot on the side of the authorities is deserving of special recognition at the present time, and has been in itself of great use. A few days after the news of the Mutiny reached us, he presented to me a petition stating that he was ready to devote his life and property in the service of the State; and from that day he has incessantly exerted himself in the cause of Government, seeking for information, ferreting out bad characters, watching the city, and obtaining good information, through emissaries employed at his expense, from the neighbouring villages. Professions of loyalty are valuable in proportion as they are voluntary and timely, and their sincerity is tested by acts. The proffer of Vilayet Ali's services was made in our darkest and most dangerous crisis, and the proffer throughout was supported by 'deeds.'"

At the time of the visit of the Prince of Wales to India, the Sayyid had the distinguished honour of receiving His Royal Highness's personal thanks for his good services to the Empire; and was created a Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, 1st January 1878. He was one of the chief founders of the Patna College, now a great centre of learning, of the Temple Medical School, and of many other important educational institutions; and has always been prominent in every good work in the province of Behar.

Residence.—Patna, Bengal.

ZAFAR HUSAIN KHAN (of Farukhabad), Nawáb.

Born 1840; succeeded his father, the late Nawáb Tajammul Husain Khán, in 1858. Belongs to a Bangash Pathán family, said to have come originally from Kohát. The first well-known ancestor was Muhammad Khán, the founder of Farukhabad, whose father, Ain Khán, of the Kághzai Karláni clan, settled at Mau Rashidabad (Kaimganj), in Farukhabad, in the reign of the Emperor Aurangzeb, 1658-1707, and took service in the cavalry. In the action which placed the Emperor Farukhsiyar on the throne, fought between Farukhsiyar and Jahandár Sháh near Agra, in January 1713, Muhammad Khán rendered the greatest service to Farukhsiyar, who rewarded him with the dignity of a Char Hazári, with the title of Nawáb, and gave him in jágir Kálpi, Kunch, Sipri, Jalaun, etc. In 1714 he founded the town of Farukhabad, calling it after the Emperor. Afterwards, when the Emperor Muhammad Sháh had put down the Sayyids in 1720, he still more richly rewarded Muhammad Khán, and gave him the title of Ghazanfar Jang, with many other honours, and the jágir of Bhojpur and Shamsabad. In 1720-24 Muhammad Khán received the appointment of Governor of the Allahabad Provinces, and was directed by the Emperor to rescue Bundelkhand from the usurping Bundelas. In 1729 he was besieged by the Mahrattas in Jaitpur, the garrison was reduced to the direst extremities, and he was compelled to bind himself never again to invade Bundelkhand. In 1743 he died, at the advanced age of eighty years, and was buried at Nekpur Khurd of Parganá Pahára. To the fiefs of Shamsabad and Bhojpur, which he held by Imperial grant, he had added, by title of the sword, the rest of the district, the western half of Cawnpore, the whole of Mainpuri, nearly the whole of Etah, two Parganás of Budaun, one of Sháhjahánpur, and parts of Aligarh and Etáwah.

Kaim Khán, entitled Kaim-i-Jang, succeeded his father without opposition. He was a splendid horseman and a brilliant performer with the lance. Safdar Jang, Viceroy of Oudh, looked on all Patháns, whether Bangash or Rohilla, as his rivals. He promised Kaim that if he ejected the Rohillas, he should be appointed Governor of all Rohilkhand. At the same time the Vazir covertly encouraged the Rohillas to resistance. A large force set out from Farukhabad and arrived opposite the entrenched camp of the Rohillas at Daunri, near Budaun, on the 21st November 1748. The battle began next morning, and resulted in the defeat of the Bangashes and the death of Kaim Khán. Imam Khán, brother of Kaim, succeeded, but was treacherously dispossessed of the Farukhabad territory by the Vazir after a few months. Ahmad Khán, second son of Muhammad, headed a movement to restore the fortunes of the family; he defeated at Khudaganj and killed the usurping Governor of Farukhabad, who had been appointed by Safdar, and gained a victory over Safdar himself in Etah. The territory from Koil to Cawnpore was taken possession of, and arrangements were made for occupying the whole of Oudh. Ahmad next besieged Allahabad, and established his headquarters at Jhánsi. Safdar Jang meanwhile called in the aid of the Mahrattas, and Ahmad marched to Farukhabad to oppose them. He entrenched himself in the fort of Fatehgarh, and summoned the Rohillas to his assistance; the Rohillas on their arrival were defeated by the Mahrattas, which compelled Ahmad to evacuate Fatehgarh. He fled to Aonla, and subsequently to Chilkiya, where he was besieged by the Mahrattas. Eventually a peace was concluded, Ahmad Khán alienating half his territory in payment of the expenses of the campaign. After the defeat of the Mahrattas at Panipat in 1761, Ahmad Khán recovered most of the territory of which he had been deprived. He died in 1771, and was succeeded by his son, Muzaffar Jang, a boy thirteen years old. About this time the Bangash territory became tributary to the Oudh Power. Shujá-ud-daulá began to receive $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs per annum, which was assigned for part payment of the contingent of British troops stationed at Fatehgarh. Muzaffar Jang died in 1796, poisoned by his eldest son, and was succeeded by his second son, Imdád Husain, Násir Jang. He was a mere puppet under the control of his uncle, Amin-ud-daulá. In 1801 the tribute of $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs hitherto paid by Farukhabad to Oudh had been ceded by the Nawáb Vazir to the British, and Imdád resolved that his domains should follow the tribute. At Bareilly, on the 4th June 1802, was signed a treaty by which the Nawáb ceded his country in return for a yearly allowance of Rs.1,08,000 to himself and his dependants. Násir Jang, the last ruling prince of his house, died in 1813, and was succeeded in his honours and estates by his son, Khádím Husain, who bore the title of Shaukat-i-Jang, and was then ten years old. He died in 1823, and was succeeded by his son, Tajammul Husain, a baby not a year old. But this Tajammul Husain died childless in his twenty-fourth year (1846), and was succeeded by his cousin, Tafazzul Husain. On the outbreak of the rebellion, Tafazzul Husain was enthroned on the cushion of his forefathers by the mutinous 10th Native Infantry stationed at Fatehgarh, and after the massacre of the Europeans the formation of a native Government was taken in hand, which lasted for seven months. When the British reoccupied Fatehgarh in January 1858, the Nawáb fled to Bareilly, but soon surrendered himself. He was attainted for treason, and deported to Mecca. The estates then reverted to the father of the present Nawáb, Tajammul Husain Khán. The present Nawáb has a son and heir, Sultán Husain Khán, born 1874.

ZAIN-UL-ABADIN, SAYYID, Nawáb Bahádur.

Born 8th December 1838. The Nawáb Bahádur received his title, as a personal distinction, on 5th June 1867, in recognition of his position as great-grandson of the Nawáb Názim Mubárah-ud-daulá, the youngest son of the Nawáb Názim Mir Muhammad Jáfar Ali Khán, and also as son-in-law of His late Highness the Nawáb Názim. His grandfather was Mir Abul Kásim, second son of the Nawáb Názim, who received from his father the title of Nawáb Mangli. His father was Safdar Ali, who received a title from the British Government. The Nawáb Bahádur's full title is "Shuja-ul-Mulk Asaf-ud-daulá Nawáb . . . Khán Bahádur Firoz Jang."

Residence.—Murshidabad, Bengal.

ZAKA-ULLAH, MAULAVI, Shams-ul-Ulama, Khán Bahádur.

Born April 1832. The title of Shams-ul-Ulama was conferred on 16th February 1887, as a personal distinction, for eminence in oriental learning, on the occasion of the Jubilee of the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty; it entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Nawábs. The Maulavi's ancestors were for four or five generations tutors and preceptors of the Royal House of Tamerlane at Delhi. He served Government from 1851 to 1887 in the Educational Department. In recognition of his services in the cause of female education the Maulavi received a khilat in 1864. He has published several excellent series of scientific works, which have been commended by Government, and is Fellow of Allahabad University. In addition to the title of Shams-ul-Ulama he enjoys the title of Khán Bahádur, conferred also in February 1887.

Residence.—Aligarh, North-Western Provinces.

ZAMAN KHAN, Sardár Bahádur.

The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 21st November 1882, in recognition of his eminent military services. The Sardár Bahádur is Subahdár-Major of the 29th Bombay Native Infantry.

Residence.—Bombay.

ZEB-UN-NISA (of Jahángerabad), Ráni.

Born 28th October 1855; succeeded her father, the late Rájá Farzand Ali Khán, 7th April 1881. The title of Rájá was conferred on the latter by the late King of Oudh, Wajid Ali Sháh, and has been recognised as hereditary by the British Government. The estate of Jahángerabad belonged to Rájá Razak Bakhsh, who, dying without male heir, left it to his son-in-law, the late Farzand Ali Khán. Farzand Ali was the darogah in charge of the Sikandra Bágh at Lucknow, and owed his success in life to a fortuitous circumstance about three years before the annexation. King Wajid Ali Sháh, on visiting the garden, was struck with the appearance of the young man, and presenting him with a khilat, directed him to attend at the palace. With such a signal mark of the royal favour Farzand Ali's advancement was rapid, and by the interest of the influential eunuch, Basis-ud-daulá, he eventually obtained a firmán designating him the Rájá of Jahángerabad. Farzand Ali Khán was attached to the Court of the late King, and followed him in 1856, after his deposition, to Calcutta, where he remained for some time. He was not prominent during the Mutiny, and early made his submission. In 1860 he was invested with the powers of an Assistant Collector within the limits of his estate.

Rájá Farzand Ali Khán had no male issue; and his daughter, Ráni Zeb-un-Nisa, has married Sheikh Tasadduk Rasul Khán, who succeeded his father-in-law and uncle as tálukdár, and was created a Rájá (as a personal distinction) on 2nd January 1893.

Residence.—Jahángerabad, Nawárganj Parganá, Bara Banki District, Oudh.

ZIA-UD-DIN KHAN, MAULAVI, Khán, Shams-ul-Ulama.

The title of Khán was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 20th May 1870, and that of Shams-ul-Ulama, for his eminence in oriental learning, on 16th February 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her Majesty's reign. The latter honour entitles him to take rank in Darbár immediately after titular Nawábs. He is the grandson of the late Nawáb Shaikh Ghulam Hasan Khán, Jágirdár of Basi. In addition to his Arabic scholarship, which is of the very highest order, he is a profound mathematician, and has a considerable knowledge of physical science. He has been appointed an Extra Assistant Commissioner. He has three sons—Anwar-ud-din Khán, Munáwar-ud-din Khán, and Násar-ud-din Khán.

Residence.—Delhi, Punjab.

ZUHR-UD-DIN AHMAD, HAJI, Khán Bahádur.

Born 1841. The title was conferred, as a personal distinction, on 3rd March 1876, in recognition of his position as son-in-law of the Nawáb Ghausia Begam (q.v.).

Residence.—Madras.
