

GIFT OF

Elizabeth Whitney Putnam

955
L998
22 on sea

vfl

OPINIONS ON THE NEW TIMON.

"The New Timon is a composition which displays both beauty and power. It belongs to the school of Crabbe."—Literary Gazette.

"The work of a practised as well as powerful hand—there is keen, terse writing, a masculine discrimination of character, and bold expression. The design of the poem is original, and the author shows himself equal to a most impressive and spirited execution of it. There has not been better writing in this special vein and manner since Churchill."—Examiner.

"This is truly a magnificent poem, and can be treated with no cold voice of criticism. In sentiment it is noble and lofty, pure and elevating; its accents fall like manna on the heart. We have already spoken of the earlier portions, but the Third and Fourth Parts, now before us, fill our minds with surprise and gratification. 'The New Timon' will bear comparison with any one of the poetic tales of Byron; and we say advisedly, justice will not be done to this noble work of genius, if lasting fame be not granted to its author. Yes; a great poet is at length before the world. 'The New Timon' will become a standard study beside Byron. It has much of his keen and subtle wit—his elegant flow—his rapid perception. The author has many of the first requisites of his art. His mind is elevated and pure; his diction terse, vigorous, and mellifluous; there is thought, ideality, in his lines; and, in addition, a quality which in these days will be a great recommendation, his narrative is full of interest. There is much, too, of satire, keen, caustic, and severe—witness that on O'Connell. In a word, we think, 'The New Timon' a production which will have a wide and lasting reputation."—Hood's Magazine.

"One of the most remarkable poems of the present generation—remarkable in a threefold degree—its conception being strictly original—its language and imagery new—its tendency eminently moral. It has beauties of no ordinary lustre; the animus of the work is essentially humanizing, its plot ingenious, and its effect altogether bold, harmonious, and original. No poem of equal length has issued from the English press for a number of years, with anything approaching to the ability of 'The New Timon,'—it augurs a resuscitation of our Bardic glories. The poem combines the characteristics of Crabbe and Byron. Many of its descriptive passages smack of that genuineness and truth which rendered 'The Borough' so popular. The resemblance, on the other hand, which it bears to the style of Byron, is, if possible, more conspicuous; the forcefulness of its expressions, the energy of its allusions, its alternate sarcasm and sentiment, recalling to our memory, at every page, 'Childe Harold,' and 'The Age of Bronze.' We may point in an especial manner to the author's originality in analyzing some of our most remarkable political characters, including the Premier, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Stanley, Sir Robert Peel, O'Connell, &c. The introduction of these clever sketches of our contemporary rulers tends considerably to render the other portions of the romance doubly piquant and zestful. That 'The New Timon' is the production of no inexperienced pen, and that the author is no obscure observer of the social or political advancement of the age, is evidenced in every paragraph."—Sun.

As good as nothing

Nov. 2 1907

THE NEW TIMON.

A ROMANCE OF LONDON.

BY SIR E. BULWER LYTTON.

AUTHOR OF "PELHAM," "RIENZI," "PAUL CLIFFORD," ETC. ETC.

THIRD AMERICAN,

FROM THE FOURTH LONDON EDITION,

CORRECTED.

PHILADELPHIA:
CAREY AND HART.
CHESTNUT STREET.
1849.

PHILADELPHIA:
C. SHERMAN, PRINTER,
19 St. James Street.

PR
492
N4
1840
1878

P R E F A C E.*

THE motives that induced me to publish anonymously the first portion of "Arthur," as well as the "New Timon," are simple enough to be easily recognised. An author who has been some time before the public, feels, in undertaking some new attempt in his vocation, as if released from an indescribable restraint, when he pre-resolves to hazard his experiment as that of one utterly unknown. That determination gives at once freedom and zest to his labours in the hours of composition, and on the anxious eve of publication restores to him much of the interest and pleasurable excitement, that charmed his earliest delusions. When he escapes from the judgment that has been passed on his manhood, he seems again to start fresh from the expectations of his youth.

In my own case, too, I believed, whether truly or erroneously, that my experiment would have a fairer chance of justice, if it could be regarded without personal reference to the author:—and at all events it was clear, that I myself could the better judge how far the experiment had failed or succeeded, when freed from the partial kindness of those disposed to overrate, or the predetermined censure of those accustomed to despise, my former labours.

* An extract from the Preface to "King Arthur," by Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, published by Henry Colburn, London, 1849.

These motives were sufficient to decide me to hazard unacknowledged those attempts which the public has not ungraciously received. And, indeed, I should have been well contented to have preserved the mask, if it had not already failed to insure the disguise. My identity with the author of these poems has been so generally insisted upon, that I have no choice between the indiscretion of frank avowal, and the effrontery of flat denial. Whatever influence of good or ill, my formal adoption of these foundlings may have upon their future career, like other adventurers they must therefore take their chance in the crowd. Happy if they can propitiate their father's foes, yet retain his friends; and,—irrespective of either,—sure to be judged, at last, according to their own deserts.

E. BULWER LYTTON.

JANUARY, 1849.

THE NEW TIMON.

PART THE FIRST.

I.

O'ER royal London, in luxuriant May,
While lamps yet twinkled, dawning crept the day.
Home from the hell the pale-eyed gamester steals ;
Home from the ball flash jaded Beauty's wheels ;
The lean grimalkin, who, since night began,
Hath hymn'd to love amidst the wrath of man,
Scared from his raptures by the morning star,
Flits finely by, and threads the area bar ;
From fields suburban rolls the early cart ;
As rests the revel, so awakes the mart.
Transfusing Mocha from the beans within,
Bright by the crossing gleams the alchemic tin,—

There halts the craftsman ;—there, with envious sigh,
 The houseless vagrant looks, and limps foot-weary by.
 Behold that street ;—the Omphalos of Town !*
 Where the grim palace wears the prison's frown,
 As mindful still, amidst a gaudier race,
 Of the veil'd Genius of the mournful Place—
 Of floors no majesty but Grief's had trod,
 And weary limbs that only knelt to God !†

What tales—what morals of the elder day—
 If stones had language—could that street convey !
 Along that space the blood-hound crowd array'd
 Howl'd round the shrine where last the Stuart pray'd ;‡

* A phrase respectfully suggested to the classic taste of Mr. George Robins, as a substitute for the more prosaic synonym—"a central situation."

† Where now stands St. James's Palace stood the hospital dedicated to St. James, for the reception of fourteen leprous maidens.

‡ Charles the First attended divine service in the Royal Chapel immediately before he walked through the park to his scaffold at Whitehall. In the palace of St. James's, Monk and Sir John Granville schemed for the restoration of Charles II.

See to that space the self-same blood-hounds run
To lick the feet of Stuart's viler son !
There, through the dusk-red towers—amidst his ring
Of Vans and Mynheers—rode the Dutchman king ;
And there—did England's Goneril thrill to hear
The shouts that triumphed o'er her crownless Lear !
There, where the gaslight streams on Crockford's door,
Bluff Henry chuckled at the jests of More.
There, where you gaze upon the last H. B.,
Swift paused, and muttered, " Shall I have that see ?"
There, where yon pile, for party's common weal,
Knits votes that serve, with hearts abhorring, Peel,
Blunt Walpole seized, and roughly bought his man ;—
Or, tired of Polly, St. John lounged to Anne.

Well, let the world change on,—still must endure
While Earth is Earth—one changeless race—the Poor !
Within that street, on yonder threshold stone,
What sits as stone-like ?—Penury, claim thine own !
She sate the homeless wanderer,—with calm eyes
Looking thro' tears, yet lifted to the skies ;
Wistful but patient—sorrowful but mild,
As asking God when He would claim his child.

A face too youthful for so hush'd a grief;—
The worm that gnawed the core had spared the leaf;
Tho' worn the cheek, with hunger or with care,
Yet still the soft fresh childlike bloom was there;
And each might touch you with an equal gloom,
The youth, the care, the hunger, and the bloom;—
As if, when round the cradle of the child
With lavish gifts the gentler fairies smiled,
One vengeful sprite, forgotten as the guest,
Had breathed a spell to disenchant the rest,
And prove how slight each favour, else divine,
If wroth the Urganda of the Golden Mine!

Now as the houseless sate, and up the sky
Dawn to day strengthened, pass'd a stranger by:
He saw and halted;—she beheld him not—
All round them slept, and silence wrapt the spot.
To this new comer Nature had denied
The gifts that graced the outcast crouch'd beside:
With orient suns his cheek was swarth and grim,
And low the form, tho' lightly shaped the limb;
Yet life glowed vigorous in that deep-set eye,
With a calm force that dared you to defy;

And the small foot* was planted on the stone
Firm as a gnome's upon his mountain throne ;
Simple his garb, yet what the wealthy wear,
And conscious power gave lordship to his air.

Lone in the Babel thus the maid and man ;
Long he gazed silent, and at last began :—
“ Poor homeless outcast—dost thou see me stand
Close by thy side—yet beg not ? Stretch thy hand.”
The voice was stern, abrupt, yet full and deep—
The outcast heard, and started as from sleep,
And meekly rose, and stretched the hand, and sought
To murmur thanks—the murmur fail'd the thought.
He took the slight thin hand within his own :
“ This hand hath nought of honest labour known ;
And yet methinks thou'rt honest !—speak, my child.”
And his face broke to beauty as it smiled.

* No line in this poem has called forth more of the dismal facetiæ of “gentle dulness” than the one in which the epithet “small” is applied to the foot of a half-caste Indian, as if it were not obviously meant to designate a peculiarity of race ; for the same reason Scott specially notices the small hand of Saladin, and Cooper the long narrow foot of the American Indian.

But her unconscious eyes, cast down the while,
Met not the heart that opened in that smile :
Again the murmur rose, and died in air.
“ Nay, what thy mother and her home, and where ? ”
Lo, with those words the rigid ice, that lay
Layer upon layer within, dissolves away ;
And tears come rushing from o'erchargèd eyes :—
“ There is my mother—there her home—the skies ! ”
Oh, in that burst, what deeps of lone distress !
O desolation of the motherless !
Yet through the anguish how survived the trust,
Home in the skies, though in the grave the dust !
The man was moved, and silence fell again ;
Upsprung the sun—Light reassumed the reign ;—
Love ruled on high ! Below, the twain that share
Men's builded empires—Mammon and Despair !

At length, with pitying eye and soothing tone,
The stranger spoke : “ Thy bitterer grief mine own ;
Mine the full coffers, but the beggared heart,
Amidst the million, lonely as thou art.
But Gold—earth's demon, when unshared—receives
God's breath, and grows a God, when it relieves.

Thou trusts't our common Father, orphan one,
And He shall guide thee, if thou trust the son.
Nay, follow, child." And on, with passive feet,
Ghost-like, she followed through the deathlike street.
They paused at last a stately pile before ;
The drowsy porter oped the noiseless door ;
The girl stood wistful still without ;—the pause
The guide divined, and thus rebuked the cause :—
" Enter, no tempter let thy penury fear,
We have a sister, and her home is here."

II.

And who the wanderer that hath shelter won
Beneath the roof of Fortune's favoured son ?
Ill stars predoomed her, and she stole to birth
Fresh from the Heaven,—Law's outcast on the earth.
The child of Love, betraying and betrayed,
The blossom opened in the Upas shade ;—
So ran the rumour ; if the rumour lied,
The humble mother wept, but not denied :
Ne'er had the infant's slumber known a rest
On childhood's native shield—a father's breast.

Dead or neglectful, 't was to her the same :
 But oh how dear—yea, dearer for the shame,
 All that God hallows in a mother's name !
 Here, one proud refuge from a world's disdain,
 Here, the lost empress half resumes her reign ;—
 Here, the deep-fallen Eve sees Eden's skies
 Smile on the desert from the cherub's eyes.
 Sweet to each human heart the right to love ;
 But 't is the deluge consecrates the dove ;
 And haply scorn yet more the child endears,
 Cradled in misery, and baptized with tears.

Each then the all on earth unto the other,—
 The smiling infant and the erring mother :
 The one soon lost the smile which childhood wears,
 Chill'd by the gloom it marvels at—but shares ;
 The other, by that purest love made pure,
 Learn'd to redeem, by labouring to endure :
 Patience in penance, more than pain for deeds,
 Draws the hiv'd music from the bruised reeds.
 Hard was their life, and lonely was their hearth ;
 There, kindness brought no holiday of mirth ;

No kindred visited, no playmate came ;—
Joy—the proud worldling—shunned the child of shame !
Yet in the lesson which, at stolen whiles,
'Twixt care and care, the respite-hour beguiles,
The mother's mind the polished trace betrays
Of early culture and serener days ;
And gentle birth still moulds the delicate phrase.
By converse, more than books, (for books too poor,)
Learn'd Lucy more than books themselves insure ;
For if, in truth, the mother's heart had err'd,
Pure now the life, and holy was the word :
The fallen state no grovelling change had wrought ;
Meek if the bearing, lofty was the thought ;
So much of noble in the lore instill'd,
You felt the soul had ne'er the error will'd ;—
That fraud alone had duped its wings astray
From their true instincts to empyreal day.
Thus life itself, if sad'ning, still refined,
And through the heart the culture reach'd the mind.
As to the moon the tides attracted move,
So wakes the intellect beneath the love.—
To nurse the sickness, to assuage the care,
To charm the sigh into the happier prayer ;

Forestall the unuttered wish with ready guess ;
Wise in the exquisite tact of tenderness ;
These Lucy's study ;—and, in grateful looks,
Seraphs write lessons more divine than books.

So Lucy's April opened into May—
Fair time, to Life frank Nature's holiday !
When, unto most, the imagined future seems
The ivory gate whence glide to shape the dreams ;
When Love first trembles on the prison-bar
Of clay ; and Hope flies fearless to the far—
Blest time, to most the ideal heaven of man—
With her the Golden ceased, the Iron Age began.

Behold her by the couch, on bended knees !
There the wan mother—there the last disease !
Dread to the poor the least suspense of health,—
Their hands their friends,—their labour all their wealth :
Let the wheel rest from toil a single sun,
And all the humble clock-work is undone.
The custom lost, the drain upon the hoard,
The debt that sweeps the fragment from the board,

How mark the hunger round thee, and be brave—
 Foresee thy orphan, and not fear the grave?
 Lower and ever lower in the grade
 Of penury fell the mother and the maid,
 Till the grim close; when, as the midnight rain
 Drove to the pallet through the broken pane,
 The dying murmured: “Near,—thy hand,—more near!
 I am not what scorn deem’d,—yet not severe
 The doom which leaves me in the hour of death
 The right to bless thee with my parting breath—
 These, worn till now, wear thou, his daughter. Live
 To see thy Sire, and tell him—I forgive!”
 Cold the child thrills beneath the hands that press
 Her bended neck—slow slackens the caress—
 Loud the roof rattles with the stormy gust;—
 The grief is silent, and the love is dust;—
 From the spent fuel God’s bright spark is flown;
 And there the Motherless, and Death—alone!

Then fell a happy darkness o’er the mind;—
 That trance, that pause, the tempest leaves behind:
 Still, with a timid step, around she crept,
 And sighed “She sleeps,” and smiled. Too well she slept!

Dark strangers entered in the squalid cell ;
Rude hirelings placed the pauper in the shell ;
Harsh voices questioned of the name and age ;
Ev'n paupers live upon the parish page.
She answers not, or sighs, and smiles, and keeps
The same meek language :—" Hush ! my mother sleeps."
They thrust some scanty pence into her palm,
And led her forth, scarce marv'ling at her calm ;
And bade her work, not beg—be good, and shun
All bad companions—so their work was done ;
And the wreck left to drift amidst the roar
Of the Great Ocean with the rocky shore.

And thou hast found a shelter, hapless one !
Not yet too late breaks on thy morn the sun ;
Not yet deferr'd till Hope hath drooped too long
To plume the pinion, and to pour the song :
Hope—the sweet bird !—while that the air can fill,
Let earth be ice—the soul has summer still !

Yet o'er that house there hung a solemn gloom ;
The step fell timid in each gorgeous room,

Vast, sumptuous, dreary as some Eastern pile,
Where mutes keep watch—a home without a smile.
Noiseless as silence reigned there, like a law,
And the cold luxury saddened into awe ;
Save when, the swell of sombre festival
Jarr'd into joy the melancholy hall,
As some chance wind in mournful autumn wrings
Discordant notes, although from music-strings.
Wild were the wealthy master's moods and strange,
As one whose humour found its food in change,
Now for whole days content apart to dwell
With books and thought—his world the student's cell.
And now with guests around the glittering board,
The hermit-Timon shone the Athenian lord ;
There, bloomed the bright Ephemerals of the Hour,
Whom the fierce ferment forces into flower,—
The gorgeous nurslings of the social life,
Sprung from our hotbeds,—Vanity and Strife !
Lords of the Senate, wrestlers for the state,
Gray-haired in youth, exhausted, worn,—and great ;
Pale Book-men,—charming only in their style ;
And Poets, jaundiced with eternal bile ;—

All the poor Titans our Cocytus claims,
With tortured livers, and immortal names :—
Such made the guests, Amphitryons well may boast,
But still the student travailed in the host ;—
These were the living books he loved to read,—
Keys to his lore, and comments on his creed.
From them he rose with more confirmed disdain
Of the thorn-chaplet, and the gilded chain.
Oft, from such statelier revels, to the shed
Where Hunger couch'd, the same dark impulse led ;
Intent, the Babel, Art has built, to trace,
Here scan the height, and there explore the base ;
That structure call'd "The Civilized," as vain
As its old symbol on the Shinar plain,
Where Pride collects the bricks and slime, and then
But builds the city to divide the men ;
Swift comes the antique curse,—smites one from one,
Rends the great bond, and leaves the pile undone.

Man will o'er muse—when musing on mankind—
The vast expanse defeats the searching mind,
Blent in one mass each varying height and hue :—
Wouldst thou seize Nature, Artist—bound the view !

But He, in truth, is banish'd from the ties
That curb the ardent, and content the wise ;
From the pent heart the bubbling passions sweep,
To spread in aimless circles o'er the deep.

Still in extremes—in each was still betray'd
A soul at discord with the part it play'd ;
A soul in social elements misplaced,
Bruised by the grate and yearning for the waste,
And wearing custom, as a Pard the chain,
Now with dull torpor, now with fierce disdain.

All who approached him by that spell were bound,
Which nobler natures weave themselves around ;
Those stars which make their own charm'd atmosphere ;
Not wholly love, but yet more love than fear,
A mystic influence, which, we know not why,
Makes some on earth seem portions of our sky.

In truth, our Morvale (such his name) could boast
Those kinglier virtues, which subject us most ;
The ear inclined to every voice of grief,
The hand that oped spontaneous to relief,

The heart, whose impulse stay'd not for the mind
 To freeze to doubt what charity enjoin'd,
 But sprang to man's warm instinct for mankind;
 The antique honour, with its nameless power,
 Which is to virtue, as to plants the flower;
 And that true daring not alone to those
 Whom fault or fate has marshall'd into foes;
 But the rare valour that confronts with scorn
 The monster shape, of Vice and Folly born,
 Which some "the World," and some "Opinion," call,
 Own'd by no heart, and yet enslaving all;
 The bastard charter of the social state,
 Which crowns the base to ostracize the great;
 The eternal quack upon the itinerant stage,
 This the "good Public," that "the enlightened Age,"
 Ready alike to worship and revile,
 To build the altar, or to light the pile;
 Now "Down with Stuart and the Reign of Sin,"
 Now "Long live Charles the Second and Nell Gwynne;"
 Now mad for patriots—hot for revolution,
 Now all for hanging and the Constitution;
 Honour to him, who self-complete and brave
 In scorn, can carve his pathway to the grave,

And heeding nought of what men think or say,
Make his own heart his world upon the way!

Such was the better nature Morvale show'd.
Now view the contrast which the worse bestow'd.
Much had he read—yet all confused and mix'd,
No polar truth the wandering reason fix'd;
The fiery impulse and the kingly will,
If prompt to good, no judgment check'd from ill;
Quick in revenge, and passionately proud,
His brightest hour still shone forth from a cloud,
And none conjecture on the next could form—
So play'd the sunbeam on the verge of storm.

Still young—not youthful—life had pass'd thro' all
Age sighs, and smiles, and trembles to recall.
From childhood fatherless and lone begun
His fiery race, beneath as fierce a sun,
Where all extremes of Love and Horror are,
Soft Camdeo's lotos bark, grim Moloch's gory car.
Where basks the noonday luminously calm,
O'er eldest grot and immemorial palm;

And in the grot, the Goddess of the Dead
 And the couch'd strangler, list the wanderer's tread,
 And where the palm leaves stir with breeze-like sigh,
 Sports the fell serpent with his deathful eye.

Midst the exuberant life of that fierce zone,
 Uncurb'd, self-will'd, to man had Morvale grown.
 His sire (the offspring of an Indian maid
 And English chief,) whose orient hues betrayed
 The Varna Sankara* of the mix'd embrace,
 Carved by his sword a charter from disgrace ;—
 Assumed the father's name, the Christian's life,
 And his sins cursed him with an English wife :
 A haughty dame, whose discontented charms
 That merchant, Hymen, bargained to his arms.
 In war he fell : his wife—the bondage o'er,
 Loathed the dark pledge the abhorrèd nuptials bore—
 Yet young, her face more genial wedlock won,
 And one bright daughter made more loath'd the son.

* The Sanscrit term, denoting the mixture or confusion of classes; applied to that large portion of the Indian population excluded from the four pure Castes.

Widowed anew, for London's native air,
And two tall footmen, sigh'd the jointured fair :
Wealth hers, why longer from its use exiled ?—
She fled the land and the abandoned child ;
Yet oft the first-born, 'midst the swarthier race,
Gazed round, and miss'd the fair unloving face.
In vain the coldness, nay, the hate had been,
Hate, by the eyes that love, is rarely seen.

Yet more he miss'd the playmate, sister-child,
With looks that ever on his own had smiled ;
With rosy lips, caressing and carest ;
Led by his hand and cradled on his breast :
But, as the cloud conceals and breaks in flame,
The gloom of youth the fire of man became.
Not his the dreams that studious life allows,
“ Under the shade of melancholy boughs,”—
Dreams that to lids the Muse anoints belong,—
Rocking the Passions on soft waves of song :
No poet he ; adventure, wandering, strife,
War and the chase, wrung poetry from life.

One day a man who call'd his father friend,
Told o'er his rupees and perceived his end.
Life's business done—a million made—what still Remained on earth? Wealth's last caprice—a Will!
The man was childless—but the world was wide—
He thought on Morvale, made his will,—and died.
They sought and found the unsuspecting heir,
Crouch'd in the shade that near'd the tiger's lair,
His gun beside, the jungle round him,—wild,
Lawless and fierce as Hagar's wandering child:—
To this fresh nature the sleek life deceast
Left the bright plunder of the ravaged East.
Much wealth brings want,—that hunger of the heart
Which comes when Nature man deserts for Art:
His northern blood, his English name, create
Strife in the soul, till then resigned to fate;
The social world with blander falsehood graced,
Smiles on his hopes, and lures him from the waste.
Alas! the taint that sunburnt brow bespeaks,
Divides the Half-Caste from the world he seeks:
In him proud Europe sees the Paria's birth,
And haughty Juno spurns his barren hearth.

Half heathen, and half savage,—all estranged
Amidst his kind, the Ishmael roved unchanged—

Small need to track his course from year to year—
Till wearied passion paused in its career :
Travel, experience, lore of things and men,
Brought thought—thought books—books quiet ; well, and then ?

Alas ! we move but in the Hebrews' ring ;*
Our onward steps but back the landmarks bring,
Until some few at least escape the thrall,
And breathe the space beyond the flaming wall :
Feel the large freedom which in faith is given,
And plume the wings that shall possess the heaven.

He search'd his mother. She, intent to shun,
Closed that last refuge on the homeless son,

* According to some Eastern commentators the march of the Israelites in the Desert was in a charmed circle : every morning they set out on their journey, and every night found themselves on the same spot as that from which the journey had commenced.

Till Death approach'd, and Conscience, that sad star
Which heralds night, and plays but on the bar
Of the Eternal Gate,—laid bare the crime,
And woke the soul upon the brink of time.
Haply if close, too closely, we would read
That sibyl page, the motive of the deed,
Remorse for him her life abandoned, weaves
Fear for the dearer one her death bereaves ;
And penitent lines consigned, with eager prayer,
The lorn Calantha to a brother's care.
Not till long moons had waned in distant skies,
O'er the last mandate wept the Indian's eyes ;
But the lost sister lived,—the flower of yore
Bloom'd from the grave,—and earth was sweet once more ;
Fair Florence holds the heart he yearns to meet ;
Swift, when heart yearns to heart, how swift the feet !
Well, and those arms have clasp'd a sister now !
Thy tears have fallen on a sister's brow !
Alas ! thy doom a sister's heart forbade ;
Thy lot as lonely, and thy heart as sad.
Is that pale shade the Peri-child in truth,
Who shone, like Morning, on the hills of Youth ?

Is that cold voice the same that rang through air,
Blithe as the bird sings in rebuke of care ?

Certes, to those who might more closely mark,
That dove brought nought of gladness to his ark ;
No loving step, to meet him homeward, flew ;
Still at his voice her pale cheek paler grew.
The greeting kiss, the tender trustful talk,—
Arm linked in arm—the dear familiar walk ;
The sweet domestic interchange of cares,
Memories and hopes—this union was not theirs.
Partly perchance the jealous laws that guard
The Eastern maids, their equal commune barr'd ;
For still, in much the antique creed retain'd
Its hold, and India in the Alien reign'd :
That superstitious love which would secure
What the heart worships, for the world too pure ;
And wrap with solemn mystery and divine,
From the crowd's gaze, the idol and the shrine,
In him was instinct,—generous if austere ;
More priestly reverence, than dishonouring fear.
Yet wherefore shun no less, if this were all,
His lonely chamber as his crowded hall ?

For days, for weeks, perchance, unseen, aloof
Far as the poles, beneath one common roof,
She drew around her the cold spells, which part
From forward sympathies the unsocial heart.
Yet, strange to say, each seemed to each still dear ;
And love in her but curb'd by stronger fear ;
And love in him by some mysterious pride,
That sought the natural tenderness to hide :
Did she but name him, you beheld her raise
Moist eyes to heaven, as one who inly prays.
News of her varying health he daily sought,
And his mood altered with the tidings brought :
If worse than wanted, it was sad to view
That stern man's trembling lip and waning hue,—
Sad, yet the sadness with an awe was blent,—
No words e'er gave the struggling passion vent ;
And still that passion seem'd not grief alone,
Some curse seem'd labouring in the stifled groan :
Some angrier chord the mixed emotion wrench'd ;
The brow was darken'd, and the hand was clench'd.

There was a mystery that defied the guess,
In so much love, and so much tenderness.

What sword, invisible to human eyes,
So sternly severed Nature's closest ties :
To leave each yearning unto each—apart—
All ice the commune, and all warmth the heart ?

III.

Now, for some weeks had she, the stranger guest,
Found in that cheerless home her grateful rest :
Her task no menial's,—privileged to share
Calantha's hours, to soothe them was her care.
Scarce told her loss, than what untold remain'd
Calantha hush'd—her heart already gain'd ;
And generous pity shunn'd anew to bare
The wounds yet quivering to the faintest air ;
That chastened speech, the grace so simply worn,
Bespoke the nurture of the gentle-born ;
And, as an equal might an equal woo,
Calantha sigh'd—" I am an orphan too,
Both mourners and both lonely—be to me,
Sister, and friend—I, sister, friend to thee."
And day by day the new-born influence stole,
As steals the summer, o'er that frozen soul ;

Calantha brightened in her presence—broke
Into faint smiles when the young Soother spoke ;
Wept tears, that seem'd to sweet founts to belong,
At Lucy's bird-like and untutored song ;
And felt as some poor captive, when from far
The mavis nestles on the dungeon bar,
And sings him back, forgetful of his chain,
To home and hope, and happy hours again.
The very menials lingered as they went,
To spy the fairy to their dwelling sent,
To list her light step on the stair, or hark
Her song ;—yes, now the dove was in the ark !
Ev'n the cold Morvale, spell'd at last, was found
Within the circle drawn his guest around ;
Less rare his visits to Calantha grew,
And her eye shrunk less coldly from his view ;
'The presence of this gentle third one, brought
Respite to memory, gave fresh play to thought ;
And as some child to strifeful parents sent,
Laps the long discord in its own content,
This happy creature seem'd to reach that home,
To say—" Love enters where the guileless come !"

It was not mirth, for mirth she was too still,
It was not wit, wit leaves the heart more chill ;
But that continuous sweetness, which with ease
Pleases all round it, from the wish to please,—
This was the charm that Lucy's smile bestowed ;
The waves' fresh ripple from deep fountains flowed ;—
Below exhaustless gratitude,—above,
Woman's meek temper—childhood's ready love.

Oft, after all the cheerful smiles of day,
When by her couch she knelt at night to pray ;
As some fair lake reflects, when day is o'er,
With stiller deeps and clearer tide the shore,
So, Night and calm the lengthening memory glass'd ;
And from the silence rose distinct the past.
Again she sees her mother's gentle face ;
Again she feels the mother's soft embrace ;
Again the mother's sigh of pain she hears,
And starts—and lo, the spell dissolves in tears !
Tears that too well that faithful grief reveal,
Which smiles, by day made duties, would conceal.
So droop the flowers, when lonely eve renews
Earth's and heaven's union in baptizing dews.

It was a noon of summer in its glow,
And all was life, but London's life, below ;
As by the open casement half reclined
Calantha's languid form ;—a gentle wind
Brought to her cheek a bloom unwonted there,
And stirred the light wave of the golden hair.
Hers was a beauty that made sad the eye,
Bright, but fast fading, like a twilight sky ;
The shape so finely, delicately frail,
As formed for climes unruffled by a gale ;
The lustrous eye, through which looks forth the soul,
Bright and more brightly as it nears the goal ;
The fatal clearness of the varying hue,
Where life the quick lamp shines, in flickering, through ;
The waning beauty, the funereal charms
With which Death steals his bride into his arms.
What made more sad the outward form's decay,
A soul of genius glimmer'd through the clay ;
Oft through the languor of disease would break
That life of light Parnassian dreamers seek ;
And music trembled on each aspen leaf
Of the boughs drooping o'er the fount of grief.

Genius has so much youth no care can kill ;
Death seems unnatural when it sighs—" Be still."
That wealth, which Nature prodigally gave,
Shall Life but garner for its heir the Grave ?
What noble hearts that treasure might have blest !
How large the realm that mind should have possest !
Love in the wife, and wisdom in the friend,
And earnest purpose for a generous end,
And glowing sympathy for thoughts of power,
And playful fancy for the lighter hour ;
All lost, all caverned in the sunless gloom
Of some dark memory, beetling o'er the tomb ;—
Like bright-wing'd fairies, whom the hostile gnome
Has spell'd and dungeon'd in his rocky home,
The wanderer hears the solitary moan,
Nor dreams the fairy in the sullen stone.
Contrasting this worn frame and weary breast,
Fresh as a morn of April bloom'd the guest.
April has tears, and mists the morn array ;
The mists, the sun,—the tears foretell the May.
Lo, as from care to care the soother glides,
How the home brightens where the heart presides !

Now hovering, bird-like, o'er the flowers,—at times
Pausing to chant Calantha's favourite rhymes,
Or smooth the uneasy pillow with light hand ;
Or watch the eye, forestalling the demand,
Complete in every heavenly art—above
All, save the genius of inventive love.

The window opened on that breadth of green,
To half the pomp of elder days the scene.
Gaze to thy left—there the Plantagenet
Look'd on the lists for Norman knighthood set ;*
Bright issued forth, where yonder archway glooms,
Banner and trump and steed, and waves of plumes,
As with light heart rides wanton Anne to brave
Tudor's grim love, the purple and the grave.
Gaze to the right, where now—neat, white, and low,
The modest Palace looks like Brunswick Row ;
There, echoed once the merriest orgies known,
Since the frank Norman won grave Harold's throne ;
There, bloom'd the mulberry groves, beneath whose shade
His easy loves the royal Rowley made ;

* The Tilt-yard.

Where Villiers flaunted, and where Sedley sung,
And wit's loose diamonds dropp'd from Wilmot's tongue!
All at rest now—all dust!—wave flows on wave;
But the sea dries not!—what to us the grave?
It brings no real homily, we sigh,
Pause for awhile and murmur, “all must die!”
Then rush to pleasure, action, sin once more,
Swell the loud tide, and fret unto the shore.

And o'er the altered scene Calantha's eye
Roves listless—yet Time's Great the passers by!
Along the road still fleet the men, whose names
Live in the talk the Moment's glory claims.
There, for the hot Pancratia of Debate
Pass the keen wrestlers for that palm,—the State.
Now, “on his humble but his faithful steed,”
Sir Robert rides—he never rides at speed—
Careful his seat, and circumspect his gaze;
And still the cautious trot the cautious mind betrays.
Wise is thy heed!—how stout soe'er his back,
Thy weight has oft proved fatal to thy hack!

Next, with loose rein and careless canter view
Our man of men, the Prince of Waterloo ;
O'er the firm brow the hat as firmly prest,
The firm shape rigid in the button'd vest ;
Within—the iron which the fire has proved,
And the close Sparta of a mind unmoved !
Not his the wealth to some large natures lent,
Divinely lavish, even where misspent,
That liberal sunshine of exuberant soul,
Thought, sense, affection, warming up the whole ;
The heat and affluence of a genial power,
Rank in the weed as vivid in the flower ;
Hush'd at command his veriest passions halt,
Drill'd is each virtue, disciplin'd each fault ;
Warm if his blood—he reasons while he glows,
Admits the pleasure—ne'er the folly knows ;
If for our Mars his snare had Vulcan set,
He had won the Venus, but escaped the net ;
His eye ne'er wrong, if circumscrib'd the sight,
Widen the prospect and it ne'er is right,
Seen through the telescope of habit still,
States seem a camp, and all the world—a drill !

Yet oh, how few his faults, how pure his mind,
Beside his fellow-conquerors of mankind ;
How knightly seems the iron image, shown
By Marlborough's tomb, or lost Napoleon's throne !
Cold if his lips, no smile of fraud they wear,
Stern if his heart, still " Man " is graven there ;
No guile—no crime his step to greatness made,
No freedom trampled, and no trust betray'd :
The eternal " I " was not his law—he rose
Without one art that honour might oppose,
And leaves a human, if a hero's, name,
To curb ambition while it lights to fame.

But who, scarce less by every gazer eyed,
Walks yonder, swinging with a stalwart stride ?
With that vast bulk of chest and limb assign'd
So oft to men who subjugate their kind ;
So sturdy Cromwell push'd broad shoulder'd on ;
So burly Luther breasted Babylon ;
So brawny Cleon bawl'd his Agora down ;
And large-limb'd Mahmoud clutch'd a Prophet's crown !

Ay, mark him well ! the schemer's subtle eye,
The stage-mime's plastic lip your search defy—
He, like Lysander, never deems it sin
To eke the lion's with the fox's skin ;
Vain every mesh this Proteus to enthrall,
He breaks no statute, and he creeps through all ;—
First to the mass that valiant truth to tell,
“ Rebellion's art is never to rebel,— Elude all danger, but defy all laws,”—
He stands himself the Safe Sublime he draws !
In him behold all contrasts which belong
To minds abased, but passions rous'd, by wrong ;
The blood all fervour, and the brain all guile,—
The patriot's bluntness, and the bondsman's wile.

One after one the lords of time advance,—
Here Stanley meets,—how Stanley scorns, the glance !
The brilliant chief, irregularly great,
Frank, haughty, rash,—the Rupert of Debate !
Nor gout, nor toil, his freshness can destroy,
And Time still leaves all Eton in the boy ;—

First in the class, and keenest in the ring,
 He saps like Gladstone, and he fights like Spring!
 Ev'n at the feast, his pluck pervades the board,
 And dauntless game-cocks symbolize their lord.
 Lo where atilt at friend—if barr'd from foe—
 He scours the ground, and volunteers the blow,
 And, tired with conquest over Dan and Snob,
 Plants a sly bruiser on the nose of Bob;
 Decorous Bob, too friendly to reprove,
 Suggests fresh fighting in the next remove,
 And prompts his chum, in hopes the vein to cool,
 To the prim benches of the Upper School :

Yet who not listens, with delighted smile,
 To the pure Saxon of that silver style;
 In the clear style a heart as clear is seen,
 Prompt to the rash—revolting from the mean.

Next cool, and all unconscious of reproach,
 Comes the calm “Johnny who upset the coach.”*

* Lord Stanley's memorable exclamation on a certain occasion which now belongs to history,—“Johnny's upset the

How formed to lead, if not too proud to please,—
 His fame would fire you, but his manners freeze.
 Like or dislike, he does not care a jot ;
 He wants your vote, but your affection not ;
 Yet human hearts need sun, as well as oats,—
 So cold a climate plays the deuce with votes.—
 And while his doctrines ripen day by day,
 His frost-nipp'd party pines itself away ;—
 From the starved wretch its own loved child we steal—
 And “Free Trade” chirrup on the lap of Peel !—
 But see our statesman when the steam is on,
 And languid Johnny glows to glorious John !
 When Hampden's thought, by Falkland's muses drest,
 Lights the pale cheek, and swells the generous breast ;
 When the pent heat expands the quickening soul,—
 And foremost in the race the wheels of genius roll !

What gives the Past the haunting charms that please
 Sage, scholar, bard ?—The shades of men like these !
 Seen in our walks ;—with vulgar blame or praise,
 Reviled or worshipp'd as our faction sways :

coach !” Never was coach upset with such perfect sang-froid
 on the part of the driver.

Some centuries hence, and from that praise or blame,—
As light from vapour breaks the steady flame,
And the trite Present which, while acted, seems
Time's dullest prose,—fades in the land of dreams,
Gods spring from dust, and Hero-Worship wakes
Out of that Past the humble Present makes.
And yet, what matter to ourselves the Great?
What the heart touches—that controls our fate!
From the full galaxy we turn to one,
Dim to all else, but to ourselves the sun;
And still, to each, some poor, obscurest life,
Breathes all the bliss, or kindles all the strife.
Wake up the countless dead!—ask every ghost
Whose influence tortured or consoled the most:
How each pale spectre of the host would turn
From the fresh laurel and the glorious urn,
To point, where rots beneath a nameless stone,
Some heart in which had ebb'd and flow'd its own!

What marvel then that sad Calantha's eye
Roved listless o'er the nobler passers-by?
History in vain records them in her line:
O, heart! a nation's history is not thine!

But now, why sudden that electric start ?
She stands—the pale lips soundless, yet apart !
She stands, with claspèd hands and strainèd eye—
A moment's silence—one convulsive cry,
And sinking to the earth, a seeming death
Smites into chill suspense the senses and the breath :
Quick by the unconscious hostess knelt the guest,—
Bathed the wan brows, and loosed the stifling vest ;
As loosed the vest,—like one whose sleep of fear
Is keen with dreams that warn of danger near,— Calantha's hand repell'd the friendly care,
And faintly clasp'd some token hoarded there,—
Perchance some witness of the untold grief,—
Some sainted relic of a lost belief,
Some mournful talisman, whose touch recalls
The ghost of time, in Memory's desolate halls,
And like the vessels that, of old, enshrined
The soil of lands the exile left behind,—
Holds all youth rescues from that native shore
Of hope and passion, life shall tread no more.

Calantha wakes, but not to sense restor'd,
The mind still trembled on the jarrèd chord,

And troubled reason flickered in the eye,
As gleams and wanes a star in some perturbèd sky ;
Yet still, through all the fever of the brain,
Terror, more strong, can Frenzy's self restrain.
Few are her words, and if at times they seem
To touch the dark truths shadowed on her dream,
She starts, with whitening lip—looks round in fear,
And murmurs “ Nay ! my brother did not hear !”
Then smiles, as if the fear were laid at rest,
And clasps the token treasured at her breast,
And whispers, “ Lucy, guard my sleep ;—they say
That sleep is faithless, and that dreams betray !”

Yet oft the while—to watch without the door,
The brother's step glides noiseless o'er the floor,—
There meekly waits, until the welcome ray
Of Lucy's smile gives comfort to the day,—
Till Lucy's whisper murmurs, “ Be of cheer,”
And Pity dupes Affection's willing ear.
Once, and but once, within the room he crept,
When all was silent, and they deemed she slept,
Not softer to the infant's cradle steals
The mother's step ;—she hears not, yet she feels,

As by strange instinct, the approach ;—her frame
Convulsed and shuddering as he nearer came ;
Till the wild cry,—the waving hand convey
The frantic prayer, so bitter to obey,
And with stern brow, belying the wrung heart,
And voiceless lips comprest, he turns him to depart.

Wondering, mused Lucy, the dark cause to find,
Which made Calantha sting a soul so kind ;
Awe that had chill'd the gratitude she felt
For Morvale, now in pity seem'd to melt :
This patient tenderness in one so stern,
Perchance so wrong'd—this love without return,
This rough exterior, with this gentle breast,
Awoke a sympathy that would not rest ;
That wistful eye, that changing lip, that tone,
Whose accents droop'd, or gladden'd, from her own,
Haunted the woman's heart, which ever heaves
Its echo back to every sound that grieves.
Light as the gossamer its tissue spins
O'er freshest dews when summer morn begins,
Will Fancy weave its airy web above
The dews of Pity, in the dawn of Love!—

At length, Calantha's reason wakes ;—the strife
Calms back,—the soul re-settles to the life.
Freed from her post, flies Lucy to rejoice
The anxious heart, so wistful for her voice ;
Not at his wonted watch the brother found,
She seeks his door—no answer to her sound,
She halts in vain, till, eager to begin
The joyous tale, the bright shape glides within ;
For the first time beheld, she views the lone
And gloomy rooms the master calls his own ;
Not there the luxury elsewhere, which enthralles
With pomp the gazer in the rich man's halls ;
Strange arms of Eastern warfare, grimly piled,
Betray'd the man's fierce memory of the child,—
And littered books, in mystic scrolls enshrined
The solemn Sibyl of the elder Ind.
The girl treads fearful on the dismal floors,
And with amazèd eye the gloomy lair explores ;
Thus, as some Peri strays where, couch'd in cells,
With gods dethroned, the brooding Afrite dwells,
From room to room her fairy footsteps glide,
Till, lo ! she starts to see him by her side.—

With crimson cheek, and downcast eyes, that quail
Beneath his own, she hurries the glad tale,
Then turns to part—but as she turns, still round
She looks,—and lingers on the magic ground,
And eyes each antique relic with the wild
Half pleased, half timorous, wonder of a child ;
And as a child the lonely inmate saw,
And smiled to see, the pleasure and the awe ;
And softened into kindness his deep tone,
And drew her hand, half shrinking, in his own,
And said, “ Nay, pause and task the showman’s skill,
What moves thee most ?— come, question me at will.”

Listening she lingered, and, she knew not why,
Time’s wing so swiftly never seemed to fly ;
Never before unto her gaze reveal’d
The Eastern fire, the Eastern calm conceal’d :
Child of the sun, and native of the waste,
Cramp’d in the formal chains it had embraced,
His heart leapt back to its old haunts afar,
As leaps the lion from the captive bar ;
And, as each token flash’d upon the mind
Young dreams, bold deeds, with memory intertwined,

The dark eye blazed, the rich words roll'd along,
Vivid as light, and eloquent as song ;
At length, with sudden pause, he check'd the stream,
And his soul darkened from the gorgeous dream.
“ So,” with sad voice he said, “ my youth went by,
Fresh was the wave, if fitful was the sky ;
What is my manhood ?—curdled and congeal'd,
A stagnant water, in a barren field :—
Gall'd with strange customs,—in the crowd, alone ?
And courting bloodless hearts that freeze my own !
In the far lands, where first I breathed the air,—
Smile if thou wilt,—this rugged form was fair,
For the swift foot, strong arm, bold heart give grace
To man, when danger girds man's dwelling place,—
Thou seest the daughter of my mother, now,
Shrinks from the outcast branded on my brow ;
My boyhood tamed the lion in his den,
The wild beast feels men's kindness more than men.
Like with its like, they say, will intertwine,—
I have not tamed one human heart to mine !”
He paused abruptly. Thrice his listener sought
To shape consoling speech from soothing thought,

But thrice she failed, and thrice the colour came
And went, as tenderness was check'd by shame ;
At length her dove-like eyes to his she raised,
And all the comfort words forbade, she gazed ;
Mov'd by her childlike pity, but too dark
In hopeless thought than pity more to mark ;
“ Infant,” he murmured, “ not for others flow
The tears the wise, how hard soe'er, must know ;
As yet, the Eden of a guileless breast,
Opes a frank home to every angel guest ;
Soft Eve, look round !—The world in which thou art
Distrusts the angel, nor unlocks the heart—
Thy time will come !”—

He spoke, and from her side
Was gone,—the heart his wisdom wronged replied !

THE NEW TIMON.

PART THE SECOND.

I.

LONDON, I take thee to a poet's heart !
For those that seek a Helicon thou art !
Let schoolboy Strephons bleat of flocks and fields,
Each street of thine a loftier Idyl yields ;
Fed by all life, and fann'd by every wind,
There, burns the quenchless Poetry—Mankind !
Yet not for me the Olympiad of the gay,
The reeking SEASON's dusty holiday :—
Soon as its odour-pomp the mead assumes,
And Flora wanders through her world of blooms,
Vain the hot field-days of the vex'd debate,
When Sirius reigns,—let Borthwick rule the state !

Vain Jersey's cards, and Lansdowne's social feast,
Wit but fatigues, and Beauty's reign hath ceased !
His mission done, the monk regains his cell ;
Nor even Douro's matchless face can spell !
Far from Man's works, escaped to God's, I fly,
And breathe the luxury of a smokeless sky !
Me, the still " LONDON," not the restless " TOWN,"
(The light plume fluttering o'er the helmèd crown,)
Delights ;—for there, the grave Romance hath shed
Its hues ; and air grows solemn with the Dead.
If, where the Lord of Rivers parts the throng,
And eastward glides by buried halls along,
My steps are led, I linger, and restore
To the changed wave the poet-shapes of yore ;
See the gilt barge, and hear the fated king
Prompt the first mavis of our Minstrel spring ;*

* " One of the most remarkable pictures of ancient manners which has been transmitted to us, is that in which the poet Gower describes the circumstances under which he was commanded by King Richard II.—

‘ To make a book after his hest.’

Or mark, with mitred Nevile,* the array
 Of arms and craft alarm "the Silent Way,"
 The Boar of Gloucester, hungering, scents his prey!
 Or, landward, trace where thieves their festive hall
 Hold by the dens of Law,† (worst thief of all!)

The good old rhymers—— . . . had taken boat, and upon the broad river he met the king in his stately barge The monarch called him on board his own vessel, and desired him to book 'some new thing.'—This was the origin of the Confessio Amantis."—KNIGHT'S London, vol. i. art. The Silent Highway.

* "What a picture Hall gives of the populousness of the Thames, in the story which he tells us of the Archbishop of York (Brother to the King-maker), after leaving the widow of Edward IV. in the sanctuary of Westminster, 'sitting below on the rushes all desolate and dismayed,' and when he opened his windows and looked on the Thames, he might see the river full of boats of the Duke of Gloucester his servants, watching that no person should go to sanctuary, nor none should pass unsearched."—Ibid. Ibid.

† A favourite rendezvous a few years since (and probably even still) for the Heroes of that Fraternity, more dear to Mercury than to Themis, was held at Devereux Court, occupying a part of the site on which stood the residence of the Knights Templars.

The antique Temple of the armèd Zeal
That wore the cross a mantle to the steel ;
Time's dreary void the kindling dream supplies ;
The walls expand, the shadowy towers arise,
And forth, as when by Richard's lion side,
For Christ and Fame, the Warrior-Phantoms ride !
Or if, less grave with thought, less rich with lore,
The later scenes, the lighter steps explore,
If through the haunts of living splendour led—
Has the quick Muse no empire but the Dead ?
In each keen face, by Care or Pleasure worn,
Grief claims her sigh, or Vice invites her scorn ;
And every human brow that veils a thought
Conceals the Castaly which Shakspeare sought !

Amidst the crowd, (what time the glowing Hours
Strew, as they glide, the summer fields with flowers,)
Who fly the solitude of sweets to drown
Nature's still whisper in the roar of Town ;
Who tread with jaded step the weary mill—
Grind at the wheel, and call it "Pleasure" still ;—
Gay without mirth, fatigued without employ,
Slaves to the joyless phantom of a Joy ;—

Amidst this crowd, was one who, absent long,
And late returned, outshone the meaner throng;
And, truth to speak, in him were blent the rays
Which form a halo in the vulgar gaze;
Howden's fair beauty, Beaufort's princely grace—
Hertford's broad lands, and Courtney's vaunted race;
And Pembroke's learning in that polished page,
Writ by the Grace, "the Manners and the Age!"
Still with sufficient youth to please the heart,
But old enough for mastery in the art;—
Renown'd for conquests in those isles which lie
In rosy seas beneath a Cnidian sky,
Where the soft Goddess yokes her willing doves,
And meets invasion with a host of loves;
Yet not unlaurell'd in the war of wile
Which won Ulysses grave Minerva's smile,
For those deep arts the diplomat was known
Which mould the lips that whisper round a throne.

Long in the numbing hands of Law had lain
Arden's proud earldom—Arden's wide domain.
Kinsman with kinsman, race with race had vied
To snatch the prize, and in the struggle died;

Till all the rights the crowd of heirs made dim,
Death cleared—and solved the tangled skein in him.
There was but ONE who in the bastard fame
Wealth gives its darlings, rivall'd Arden's name :
A rival rarely seen—felt everywhere,
With soul that circled bounty like the air,
Simple himself, but regal in his train—
Lavish of stores he seem'd but to disdain ;
To art a Medici—to want a God,
Life's rougher paths grew level where he trod.
Much Arden, (Arden had a subtle mind,
Which sought in all philosophy to find,)
Loved to compare the different means by which Enjoyment yields a harvest to the rich.—
Himself already marvelled to behold
How soon trite custom wears the gleam from gold ;
Well, was his rival happier from its use
Than he (his candour whispered) from abuse ?
He longed to know this Morvale, and to learn :
They met—grew friends—the Sybarite and the stern.
Each had some points in common : mostly those
From which the plant of human friendship grows.

Each had known strong vicissitudes in life ;
The present ease, and the remembered strife.
Each, though from differing causes, nursed a mind
At war with Fate, and chafed against his kind.
Each with a searching eye had sought to scan
The solemn Future, soul predicts to man ;
And each forgot how, cloudlike, passions mar,
In the vex'd wave, the mirror of the star ;
How all the unquiet thoughts which life supplies
May swell the ocean but to veil the skies ;
And dark to Man may grow the heaven that smiled
On the clear vision Nature gave the Child.
Each, too, in each, where varying most they seem,
Found that which fed half envy, half esteem.
As stood the Pilgrim of the waste before
The stream that parted from the' enchanted shore,
Though on the opposing margent of the wave
Those fairy boughs but seeming fruitage gave ;
Tho' his stern manhood in its simple power,
If cross'd the barrier, soon had scorned the bower ;
Yet, as some monk, whom holier cloisters shade,
Views from afar the glittering cavalcade,

And sighs as sense against his will recalls
 Fame's knightly lists and Pleasure's festive halls,
 So, while the conscience chid, the charm enchain'd,
 And the heart envied what the soul disdained.

While Arden's nature in his friend's could find
 An untaught force that awed his subtler mind—
 Awed, yet allured ;—that Eastern calm of eye
 And mien—a mantle and a majesty,
 At once concealing all the strife below,
 It shames the pride of lofty hearts to show ;
 And robing Art's lone outlaw with the air
 Of nameless state the lords of Nature wear ;—
 This kingly mien contrasting this mean form—
 This calm exterior with this heart of storm
 Touch'd with vague interest, undefined and strange,
 The world's quick pupil whose career was change.

Forth from the crowded streets one summer day,
 Rode the new friends ; and cool and silent lay
 Through shadowy lanes the chance-directed way.
 As with slow pace and slackened rein they rode,
 Men's wonted talk to deeper converse flowed.

“Think’st thou,” said Arden, “that the Care, whose speed

Climbs the tall bark and mounts the rider’s steed,
And (still to quote old Horace) hovers round
Our fretted roofs, forbears yon village ground?—
Think’st thou that Toil drives trouble from the door;
And does God’s sun shine brightest on the Poor?”

“I know not,” answered Morvale, “but I know
Each state feels envy for the state below;
Kings for their subjects—for the obscure the great:
The smallest circle guards the happiest state.
Earth’s real wealth is in the heart;—in truth
As life looks brightest in the eyes of youth,
So simple wants—the simple state most far
From that entangled maze in which we are,
Seem unto nations what youth is to man,—”

“ ‘When wild in woods the noble savage ran,’ ”
Said Arden, smiling. “Well we disagree;
Even youth itself reflects no charms for me;
And all the shade upon my life bestowed
Spreads from the myrtle which my boyhood sowed.”

His bright face fell,—he sighed. “And canst thou guess
 Why all once coveted now fails to bless?—
 Why all around me palls upon the eye,
 And the heart saddens in the summer sky?
 It is that youth expended life too soon :
 A morn too glowing sets in storm at noon.”

“Nay,” answered Morvale, gently, “hast thou tried
 That second youth, to which ev’n follies guide ;
 Which to the wanderer SENSE, when tired and spent,
 Proclaims the fount by which to fix the tent ?
 The heart but rests when sense forbears to roam ;
 We win back freshness when Love smiles on Home ;—
 Home not to thee, O happy one ! denied.”

“To me of all,” the impatient listener cried,
 “Thy words but probe the wounds I vainly hide ;
 That which I pine for thou hast pictured now ;—
 The hearth, the home, the altar, and the vow ;
 The tranquil love, unintertwined with shame !
 The child’s sweet kiss ;—the Father’s holy name ;
 The link to lengthen a time-honoured line ;—
 These not for me, and yet these should be mine.”

“If,” said the Indian, “counsel could avail,
Or pity soothe, a friend invites thy tale.”

“Alas!” sighed Arden, “nor confession’s balm
Can heal, nor wisdom whisper back to calm.
Yet hear the tale—thou wilt esteem me less—
But Grief, the Egoist, yearneth to confess.
I tell of guilt,—and guilt all men must own,
Who but avow the loves their youth has known.
Preach as we will, in this wrong world of ours,
Man’s fate and woman’s are contending powers ;
Each strives to dupe the other in the game,—
Guilt to the victor—to the vanquished shame !”
He paused, and noting how austere gloom’d
His friend’s dark visage, blush’d, and thus resumed.
“Nay, I approve not of the code I find,
Not less the wrong to which the world is kind.
But, to be frank, how oft with praise we scan
Men’s actions only when they deal with man ;
Lo, gallant Lovelace, free from every art
That stains the honour or defiles the heart,—

With men;—but how, if woman the pursuit?
 What lies degrade him, and what frauds pollute;
 Yet still to Lovelace either sex is mild;
 And new Clarissas only sigh—‘How wild!’”

“Enough,” said Morvale; “I perforce believe!
 Strong Adam owns no equal in his Eve;
 But worse the bondage in your bland disguise;
 Europe destroys,—kind Asia only buys!
 If dull the Harem, yet its roof protects,
 And Power, when sated, still its slave respects.
 With you, ev’n pity fades away with love,—
 No gilded cage gives refuge to the dove;
 Worse than the sin the curse it leaves behind:
 Here the crush’d heart, or there the poison’d mind,—
 Your streets a charnel or a market made,
 For the lorn hunger, or the loathsome trade.
 Pardon,—Pass on!”

“Behold, the Preface done,”

Arden resumed, “now opens Chapter One!”

LORD ARDEN'S TALE.

“ REARED in a court, a man while yet a boy,
Hermes said ‘ Rise,’ and Venus sigh’d ‘ Enjoy;’
My earlier dreams, like tints in rainbows given,
Caught from the Muse, glowed but in clasping heaven ;
The bird-like instinct of a sphere afar
Pined for the air, and chafed against the bar.
But can to Guelphs Augustan tastes belong ?
Or Georgium Sidus look benign on song ?
My short-lived Muse the ungenial climate tried,
Breathed some faint warbles, caught a cold, and died !
Wise kinsmen whispered ‘ Hush ! forewarned in time ;
The feet that rise are not the feet of Rhyme ;
Your cards are good, but all is in the lead,—
Play out the heart, and you are lost indeed :
Leave verse, my boy, to unaspiring men—
The eagle’s pinion never sheds a pen !’

“ So fled the Muse ! What left the Muse behind ?
The aimless fancy and the restless mind ;
The eyes, still won by whatsoe’r was bright,
But lost the star’s to prize the diamond’s light.
Man, like the child, accepts the bauble-boon,
And clasps the coral where he ask’d the moon.
Forbid the pomp and royalty of heaven,—
To the born Poet still the earth is given ;
Duped by each glare in which Corruption seems
To give the glory imaged on his dreams :
Thus, what had been the thirst for deathless fame,
Grew the fierce hunger for the Moment’s name ;
Ambition placed its hard desires in Power,
And saw no Jove but in the Golden Shower.
No miser I—no niggard of the store—
The end Olympus, but the means the ore :
I looked below—there, Lazarus crawl’d disdained ;
I looked aloft—there, who but Dives reigned ?
He who would make the steps of power his home,
Must mask the Titan till he rules the Gnome.

“ If I insist on this, my soul’s disease,
Excuse for fault thy practised sight foresees :

It makes the moral of my tale, in truth,
And boyhood sowed the poison of my youth!

“ Meanwhile men praised, and women smiled ;—the wing,
Bowed from the height, still bask’d beneath the spring!
Pass by the Paphian follies of that day,—
When true love comes, it is to close our May.
Well, ere my boyish holiday was o’er,
The grim god came, and mirth was mine no more :
A well-born pauper, I seemed doom’d to live
By what great men to well-born paupers give :
I had an uncle high in power and state,
Who ruled three kingdoms’ and one nephew’s fate.
This uncle loved, as English thanes will all,
An autumn’s respite in his rural hall ;
In slaughtering game, relax’d his rigid breast ;
And so,—behold me martyred to his guest !

“ One day, beside a brooklet, as my own
Free steps as devious, wandering and alone,
Chance or fate led me to a scene which spell’d
The foot that paused, the charm’d eye that beheld,—

Bright from the woodland, to the western beam
Glass'd on its bosom, shot the sparkling stream,
Lull'd where a pastoral home its shadow gave
To the clear quiet of the halting wave :
With many a flower (the year's last infants) gay,
Sloped to the marge, a modest garden lay.

“ Along the banks, beneath the bowering tree,
Young fairies play'd—young voices laugh'd in glee ;
One voice more mellowed in its silver sound,
Yet blithe as rang the gladdest on the ground ;
One shape more ripened, one sweet face more fair,
Yet not less happy, the Titania there !
Soft voice, fair face, I hear, I see ye still !
Shades and dim echoes from the blissful hill
Behind me left, to cast but darkness o'er
The waste slow-lengthening to the grave before !

“ So Love was born ! with love invention came ;
I won my entrance, but concealed my name.
As the poor herb, when all that pomp could bring
Were vain to charm, admits to Oberon's ring,

So in the guise earth least esteems, I found
A fearless welcome on that fairy ground.
The sire, a village pastor, poor and wise,
In aught that clears to mortal sight the skies,
But blind and simple as a child to all
The things that pass upon the earth we crawl ;
The mask'd Lothario to his eyes appeared
A student youth, by Alma Mater reared
The word to preach—the hunger to endure,
And see Ambition close upon a Cure ;—
A modest youth, who owned his learning slight,
And brought his taper to the master's light.
This tale believed, the good man's harmless pride
Was pleased the bashful neophyte to guide :
Spread out his books, and, moved to pity, prest
The backward pupil to the daily guest.

“ So from a neighbouring valley, where they deem
My home, each noon I cross the happy stream,
And hail the eyes already watchful grown,
And clasp the hand that trembles in my own ;
But not for guilt had I concealed my name,
The young warm passion nursed no thought of shame ;

The spell that bound ennobled while it charm'd,
And Romeo's love Lothario's guile disarm'd ;
And vain the guile had been !—impure desire
Round that chaste light but hovered to expire ;
Her angel nature found its own defence,
Ev'n in the instincts of its innocence ;
As that sweet flower which opens every hue
Of its frank heart to eyes content to view,
But folds its leaves and shrinks in sweet disdain
From the least touch that would the bloom profane.
That meekest temper, which all proof defied,
But flow'd in calm above a heart of pride,
A pride like that the antique knighthood own'd,
In spotless thought, yet humble mind, enthron'd.
O'er all the Woman did the Virgin reign,
And love the heart might break—it could not stain.

“ Yet in the light of day to win and wed,
To boast a bride, yet not to own a shed ;
To doom the famine, yet proclaim the bliss,
And seal the ruin in the nuptial kiss ;—
Love shunn'd such madness for the loved one's sake ;
What course could Prudence sanction Love to take ?

Lenient I knew my kinsman to a vice ;
 But, O, for folly Cato less precise !
 And all my future, in my kinsman bound,
 Shadow'd his humours—smil'd in him or frown'd ;
 But Uncles still, however high in state,
 Are mortal men—and Youth has hope to wait,
 And Love a conqueror's confidence in Fate.—
 A secret hymen reconciled in one
 Caution and bliss—if Mary could be won ?
 Hard task ! yet what will pleading love not win ?
 Silence might shame, but still it cloaked no sin.
 To her I told my name, rank, doubts, and fears,
 And urged the prayer too long denied with tears—
 ' Reject'st thou still,' I pled, ' well, then to me
 The pride to offer all life holds to thee ;
 I go to tell my love, proclaim my choice—
 Clasp want, mar fate, meet ruin, and rejoice,
 So that, at least, when next we meet, thy sigh
 Shall own this truth—' He better loved than I.'

“ With that, her hand upon my own she laid,
 Look'd in my eyes—the sacrifice was made ;

And blame her not, if love that hour beguiled
Into fond fault, the impulse of the child—
Alas, she had no mother!—Nature moved
Her heart to mine—she trusted, for she loved!
I had a friend of lowlier birth than mine,
The sunnier spot allured the trailing vine.
My rising fortunes had the southern air,
And fruit might bless the plant that clamber'd there.
My smooth Clanalbin!—shrewd, if smooth, was he,
His soul was prudent, though his life was free;
Scapin to serve, and Machiavel to plot,
Red-haired, thin-lipp'd, sly, supple,—and a Scot!
To him the double project I confide,
To cloak the rite, and yet to clasp the bride;
Long he resisted—solemnly he warned,
And urged the perils love had seen and scorned.
At length subdued, he groaned a slow consent,
And pledged a genius practised to invent.
A priest was found—a license was procured,
Due witness hired, and secrecy assured;
All this his task:—'tis o'er;—and Mary's life
Bound up in one who dares not call her wife!

“ Alas—alas, why on the fatal brink
Of the abyss—doth not the instinct shrink ?
The meaner tribe the coming storm foresees—
In the still calm the bird divines the breeze—
The ox that grazes shuns the poison-weed—
The unseen tiger frights afar the steed—
To man alone no kind foreboding shows
The latent horror or the ambush’d foes ;
O’er each blind moment hangs the funeral pall,
Heaven shines—earth smiles—and night descends on all.

“ But I!—fond reader of imagined skies,
Foretold my future in those stars—her eyes !
O heavenly Moon, circling with magic hues
And mystic beauty all thy beams suffuse,
Is not in love thine own fair secret seen ?
Love smooths the rugged—love exalts the mean !
Love in each ray inspires the hush’d alarm,
Love silvers every shadow into charm !

“ O lonely beech, beneath whose bowering shade
The tryst, encircling Paradise, was made,

How the heart heard afar the hurrying feet,
And swell'd to breathless words—' At last we meet !'
But Autumn fades—dark Winter comes, and then
Fate from Elysium calls me back to men ;
We part !—not equal is the anguish ;—she
Parts with all earth in that farewell to me ;
For not the grate more bars the veiled nun
From the fair world with which her soul has done,
Than love the heart, that vows, without recall,
To one, fame, honour, memory, hope, and all !
But I !—behold me in the dazzling strife,
The gaud, the pomp, the joyous roar of life,—
Man, with man's heart insatiate, ever stirr'd
By the crowd's breath to conflict with the herd ;
Which never long one thought alone can sway,—
The dream fades from us when we leap to day,—
New scenes surround me—new ambitions seize,—
The world one fever,—who defy disease ?—
Each touch contagion :—living with the rest,
The world's large pulse keeps time in every breast.
Yet still for her—for her alone, methought,
Its web of schemes the vulgar labour wrought—

To ransom fate—to soar, from serfdom, free,
Snap the strong chains of highborn penury ;
And, grown as bold to earth as to the skies,
Proclaim the bliss of happy human ties :—
So, ever scheming, the soothed conscience deem'd !
Fate smiled, and speeded all for which I schem'd.
My noble kinsman saw with grave applause
My sober'd moods, too wise to guess the cause.
'Tis well,' said he, one evening ; ' you have caught
From me the ardour of the patriot's thought ;
No more distinguished in the modes of vice,
Forsworn the race-course, and disdained the dice :
A nobler race, a mightier game await
The soul that sets its cast upon the state.
Thoughtful, poor, calm, yet eager ; such, in truth,
He who is great in age should be in youth.
Lo, your commencement !'

And my kinsman set
Before the eyes it brightened—the Gazette !

“ O, how triumphant, Calendar of Fame !
Halo'd in type, emerged the aspirant's name !

‘ We send you second to a court, ’tis true ;
 Small, as befits a diplomat so new,
 Quoth my wise kinsman : ‘ but requiring all
 Your natural gifts ;—to rise not is to fall !
 And harkye, stripling, you are handsome, young,
 Active, ambitious, and from statesmen sprung !
Wed well—add wealth to power by me possest,
 And sleep on roses,—I will find the rest !
 But one false step,—pshaw, boy ! I do not preach
 Of saws and morals, his own code to each,—
 By one false step, I mean one foolish thing,
 And the wax melts, my Icarus, from your wing !
 Let not the heart the watchful mind betray,—
 Enough !—no answer !—sail the first of May !’

“ Here, then, from vapour broke at last the sun !
 Station, career, fame, fortune, all begun !
 Now, greater need than ever to conceal
 The holy spring that moved the onward wheel ;
 And half forgetting what I wish’d forgot,
 Each thought divides the absent from my lot.
 One night, escaped my kinsman’s hall, which blazed
 With dames who smiled, and gartered peers who praised,

I seek my lonely home,—ascend the stair,—
 Gain my dim room,—what stranger daunts me there?
 A gray old man!—I froze his look before;
 The Gorgon's eye scarce fixed its victim more,—
 The bride's sad father on the bridegroom's floor!
 In the brief pause, how terrible and fast,
 As on the drowning seaman, rush'd the past!
 How had he learn'd my name,—abode,—the tie
 That bound?—for all spoke lightning in his eye.
 Lo, on the secret in whose darkness lay
 Power, future, fortune, poured the hateful ray!
 Thus silence ceased.

' When first my home you deign'd
 To seek, what found you?—cheeks no tears had stain'd!
 Untroubled hearts, and conscience clear as day;
 And lips that loved where now they fear to pray:
 'Twixt kin and kin, sweet commune undefil'd—
 The grateful father—the confiding child!
 What now that home?—behold! its change may speak
 In hair thus silvered—in the furrowed cheek!
 My child'—(he paused, and in his voice, not eyes, Tears seek the vent indignant pride denies)

‘ My child—God pardon me—I was too proud
 To call her daughter!—what shall call the crowd?
 Man—man, she cowers beneath a Father’s eye,
 And shuns his blessing—with one wish to die,
 And I that deathbed will resign’d endure
 If—speak the word—the soul that parts is pure?’

“ ‘ Who dares deny it?’ I began, but check’t
 In the warm burst—cold wisdom hiss’d—‘ Reflect,
 Thy fears had outstripp’d truth—as yet unknown,
 The vows, the bond!—are these for thee to own?’
 The father mark’d my pause, and changing cheek,
 ‘ Go on!—why falter if the truth thou speak?
 ‘ Who dares deny it?’—Thou!—thy lip—thine eye—
 Thy heart—thy conscience—these are what deny?
 O Heaven, that I were not thy priest!’

His look

Grew stern and dark—the natural Adam shook
 The reverend form an instant;—like a charm
 The pious memory stay’d the lifted arm;
 And shrunk to self-rebuke the threatening word,
 ‘ Man’s not my weapons—I thy servant, Lord!’

Moved, I replied—‘ Could love suffice alone
 In this hard world,—the love to thee made known,
 A bliss to cherish, ’twere a pride to own :
 And if I pause, and if I falter—yet
 I hide no shame, I strive with no regret.
 Believe mine honour—wait the ripening hour,
 Time hides the germ—the season brings the flower.’
 Wildly he cried—‘ What words are these ?—but one
 Sentence I ask—her sire should call thee son !
 Hist, let the heavens but hear us !—in her life
 Another lives—if pure she is thy wife !—
 Now answer !’

I had answered, as became
 The native manhood and the knightly name ;
 But shall I own it ? the suspicious chill,
 The world-wise know, froze up the arrested will,
 Whose but her lips, sworn never to betray,
 Had failed their oath, and dragged my name to day ?
 True she had left the veil upon the shrine,
 But set the snare to make confession mine.
 Thus half resentment, half disdain, repell’d
 The man’s frank justice, and the truth withheld.

Yet, so invoked, I scorn'd at least the lie,
And met the question with this proud reply—
'If thou dost doubt thy child, depart secure,
My love is sinless and her soul is pure.
This by mine honour, and to Heaven, I swear!
Dost thou ask more?—then bid thy child declare;
What she proclaims as truth, myself will own;
What she withholds, alike I leave unknown;
What she demands, I am prepared to yield;
Now doubt or spurn me—but my lips are seal'd.'
I ceased, and stood with haughty mien and eye,
That seemed all further question to defy;
He gazed, as if still spell'd in hope or fear,
And hungering for the word that failed the ear.
At last, and half unconscious, in the thrall
Of the cold awe, he groaned—

‘And is this all?’

Courage, poor child—there may be justice yet—
Justice, Heaven, justice!’

With that doubtful threat
He turn'd, was gone!—that look of stern despair,
That slow step trembling, heavy, on the stair,

The clapping door—and then that void and chill,
 That aching silence, save the heart, all still—
 That sense of something gone, which yet behind
 Has left a ghost, a nightmare of the mind,
 The larva of the brain, that wizard keep,
 The spectral memory gleaming through our sleep!

“ Next day, the sire my noble kinsman sought,
 One ruling senates must be just he thought.
 What chanced, untold—what followed may declare,
 Behold me summoned to my uncle’s chair !
 See his cold eye—I saw my ruin there !
 I saw and shrunk not, for a sullen pride
 Embraced alike the kinsman and the bride ;
 Scorn’d here, the seeming snare by cunning set,
 And there, coarse thraldom, with rebellion met.

“ Brief was my Lord—

‘ An old man tells me, sir,
 You woo his child, to wed her you demur ;
 Who knows ; perhaps—(and such his shrewd surmise)
 The noose is knit—you but conceal the ties !

Please to inform me, ere I go to court,
How stands the matter ?—sir, my time is short.'

“ ‘ My Lord,’ I answered, with unquailing brow,
‘ Not to such ears should youth its faults avow ;
And, grant me pardon if I boldly speak,
Youth may have secrets honour shuns to seek.
I own I love, proclaim that love as pure ;
If this be sin—its sentence I endure.
All else belongs unto that solemn shrine,
In the veil’d heart, which manhood holds divine.
Men’s hearths are sacred, so our laws decree ;
Are hearts less sacred ? mine at least is free.
Suspect, disown, forsake me, if thou wilt,
I prize the freedom where thou seest the guilt.’
My kinsman’s hand half shaded the keen eye,
Which glanced askant ;—he paused in his reply.
At length, perchance, his practised wit foresaw
Threats could not shake where interest failed to awe ;
And judged it wise to construe for the best
The all I hid, the little I confest ;

Calmly he answered—

‘ Sir, I like this heat,

Duper or duped, a well-bred man’s discreet ;

Take but this hint—(one can’t have all in life,)

You lose the uncle if you win the wife.

In this you choose—Rank, Station, Power, Career ;

In that, Bills, Babies, and the Bench, I fear.

Hush !—‘ the least said’—(old proverb, sir, but true !)

As yet your fault indulgently I view—

Words,—notes (sad stuff!)—some promise rashly made—

Action for breach—that scandal must be stay’d.

I trust such scrapes will teach you to beware ;

’Twill cost some hundreds—that be my affair.

Depart at once—to-morrow—nay, to-day,

When fairly gone, there will be less to pay !’

So spoke the Statesman, whom experience told

The weight of passion in the scales of gold.

Pleased I escape, but how reprieve enjoy ?

One word from her distrusted could destroy !

Yet that distrust the whispering heart belied,

Self ceased, and anger into pity died,

I thought of Mary in her desolate hour,
And shuddered at the blast, and trembled for the flower.
Why not go seek her?—chide the impatient snare,
Or if faith lingered, win it to forbear: }
Now was the time, no jealous father there! }
Swift as the thought impell'd me, I obey'd!
'Tis night; once more I greet the moonlit shade;
Once more I see the happy murmuring rill;
The white cot bowered beneath the pastoral hill!
An April night, when, after sparkling showers,
The dewy gems betray the cradled flowers,
As if some sylphid, startled from its bed
In the rathe blossom by the mortal's tread,
Had left behind its pearly coronal.—
Bright shone the stars on Earth's green banquet hall;
You seem'd, abroad, to see, to feel, to hear
The new life flushing through the virgin year;
The visible growth—the freshness and the balm;
The pulse of Nature throbbing through the calm:
As wakeful, over every happy thing,
Watch'd, through the hush, the Earth's young mother—
Spring!

Calm from the lattice shot a steady ray ;
 Calm on the sward its silvery lustre lay ;
 And reach'd, to glad, the glancing waves at play. }
 I stood and gazed within the quiet room ;—
 Gazed on her cheek ;—there, spring had lost its bloom !
 Alone she sate !—Alone !—that worn-out word,
 So idly spoken, and so coldly heard ;
 Yet all that poets sing, and grief hath known,
 Of hope laid waste, knells in that word—ALONE !

“ Who contemplates, aspires, or dreams, is not
 Alone : he peoples with rich thoughts the spot.
 The only loneliness—how dark and blind !—
 Is that where fancy cannot dupe the mind ;—
 Where the heart, sick, despondent, tired with all,
 Looks joyless round and sees the dungeon wall ;—
 When even God is silent, and the curse
 Of torpor settles on the universe ;—
 When prayer is powerless, and one sense of dearth
 Abysses all, save solitude, on earth !
 So sate the bride !—the drooping form, the eye
 Vacant, yet fixed,—that air which Misery,

The heart's Medusa, hardens into stone,
Sculptured the Death which dwelleth in the lone !

“ O, the wild burst of joy,—the life that came Swift, brightening, bounding through the lips and frame,
When o'er the floors I stole, and whispered soft her name !

‘ Come—come at last ! O, rapture !’

Wherefore, heaven,
Is such strange power o'er earth's best spirits given
To earth's worst clay ?—What was there in my coarse
Saturnian planet, to become the source
Of light, the sun dispensing all that shone
On that pure star so near the sapphire throne ?

“ ‘ So thou art come !’

‘ Hush ! say whose lips revealed
All these soft traitors swore to guard concealed—
Our love—my name ?’

‘ Not I—not I—thy wife !’

Oh, truth to thee more dear than fame—than life :

A friend—my father's friend—the secret told ;
 How guess'd I know not :—Oh ! if Love controll'd
 My heart that hour—that bitter hour—when, there
 Bent that old man, who——Husband, hear my prayer !—
 Have mercy on my father !—break, Oh, break
 'This crushing silence !—bid his daughter speak,
 And say 'Thou'rt not dishonour'd ?'

‘ If thou wilt

Tell all ;—dishonour not alone in guilt !
 Men's eyes dishonour in the fallen see ;—
 Speak, and dishonour thou inflict'st on me !
 The debt, the want, the beggary, and the shame,—
 The pauper branded on the highborn name !
 Speak and inflict,—I still can spurn,—the doom !
 Unveil the altar to prepare the tomb !
 I, who already in my grasp behold,
 Bright from Hesperian fields, the fruit of gold,
 By which alone the glorious prize we gain,
 Foil'd of the goal will die upon the plain !
 I own two brides, both dear alike, and see
 In one Ambition—in the other Thee !

Destroy thy rival, and to her destroyed
Succeeds despair to make the world a void.’
Then, with stern frankness to that shrinking ear,
I told my hopes,—in her my only fear ;
Told, with a cheek no humbling blushes dyed,
How met the sire—how unavowed the bride !
‘ Thus have I wrong’d—this cruel silence mine ;
And now be truth, and truth is vengeance, thine !’
I ceased to speak ; lo, she had ceased to weep ;
Her white lips writhed, as Suffering in its sleep ;
And o’er the frame a tremulous shudder went,
As every life-vein to the source was sent :
The very sense seemed absent from the look,
And with the Heart, its temple, Reason shook !
So there was silence ; such a silence broods
In winter nights, o’er frost-bound solitudes,
Darkness, and ice, and stillness all in one,—
The silence without life—the withering without sun.
But o’er that silence, as at night’s full noon,
Through breathless cloud, shimmers the sudden moon,
A sad but heavenly smile a moment stirr’d,
And heralded the martyr’s patient word.

‘Fear not, pursue thy way to fortune, fame,
 I will not haunt thy glory with my shame.
 Betray! avenge!—For ever, until thou
 Proclaim the bond and ratify the vow,
 Closed in this heart, as lamps within the tomb,
 Shall waste the light, that lives amidst the gloom,—
 That lives, for oh! the day shall come at length, Though late, though slow,—(give hope, for hope is strength!)—

When, from a father’s breast no more exil’d,
 The wife may ask forgiveness for the child?”

“And so you parted?” with a moistened eye,
 Said Morvale, “nay, man, spare me the reply;
 Too much the Eve has moved me”——

“Not to feel

That for the serpent which thy looks reveal,”
 Said Arden, sadly smiling; “Yet, in truth,
 See how the gray world grafts its age on youth;
 See how we learn to prize the bullion Vice,
 Coined in all shapes, yet still but Avarice;
 The stamp may vary,—you the coin may call
 ‘Ambition,’ ‘Power,’ ‘Success,’—but Gold is all.

Mine is the memoir of a selfish age,—
Turn every leaf—slight difference in the page—
Through each, the same fierce struggle, to secure
Earth's one great end—distinction from the Poor ;
All our true wealth, like alchemists of old,
Fused in the furnace for a grain of gold.”

III.

LORD ARDEN'S TALE CONTINUED.

“ Well then, we parted,—to make brief the tale,
I take my orders, and my leave, set sail ;
For weeks, for months, fond letters, long nor few,
Keep hope alive with love for ever new :
If she had suffered, she betray'd it not ;
All save one sweetness—‘ that we loved’—forgot.
She never named her father ;—once indeed
The name was writ—but blurr'd ; it was decreed
That she should fulfil the martyr-measure,—hide,
Not the dart only, but the bleeding side,
And, wholly generous in the offering made,
Veil even sorrow, lest it should upbraid.

“ At length one letter came—the last ; more blest
In faith, in love, false hope, than all the rest,
But at the close some hastier lines appear,
Tremblingly writ, and stain'd with many a tear,
In which, less said than timorously implied,
(The maid still blushing through the secret bride)—
I heard her heart through that far distance beat—
The hour Eve's happiest daughter dreads to meet,—
The hour of Nature's agony was nigh,—
Husband and father, false one, where was I ?
Slow day on slow day, unrevealing, crept,
And still its ice the freezing silence kept :
Fear seized my soul, I could no longer brook
The voiceless darkness which the daylight took,—
I feigned excuse for absence ;—left the shore ;—
Fair blow the winds :—Behold her home once more !
Her home ! a desert !—still, though rank and wild,
On the rank grass the heedless floweret smil'd ;
Still by the porch you heard the ungrateful bee ;
Still brawl'd the brooklet's unremembering glee ;
But they—the souls of the sweet pastoral ground ?—
Green o'er the father, rose the sullen mound !

Amidst his poor he slept ; his end was known,—
Life's record rounded with the funeral stone :
But she ?—but Mary ?—but my child ?—what dews
Fall on their graves ?—what herbs which heaven renews
Pall their pure clay ?—Oh ! were it mine at least
To weep, beloved, where your relics rest !—
Bear with me, Morvale,—pity if you can—
These thoughts unman me—no, they prove me man !”

“ Man of the Cities,” with a muttered scorn,
Groaned the stern Nomad from the lands of Morn,— “ Man of the sleek, far-looking prudence, which Beggars life's May, life's Autumn to enrich ;
Which, the deed doing, halts not in its course,
But, the deed done, finds comfort in remorse.
Man, in whom sentiment, the bloodless shade
Of noble passion, alternates with trade,—
Hard in his error—feeble in his tears,
And huckstering love, yet prattling of the spheres !”
So mused the sombre savage, till the pale
And self-gnawed worldling nerved him to his tale :—

"The hireling watch'd the bed where Mary lay,
 In stranger arms my first-born saw the day.
 Below,—unseen his travail, all unknown
His war with Nature,—sate the sire alone :
 He had not thrust the one he still believed
 If silent, sinless,—or in sin deceived,
 He had not thrust her from a father's door,—
 So Shame came in, and cover'd upon the floor,
 And face to face with Shame, he sate to hear
 The groan above bring torture to his ear.

"In that sad night, when the young mother slept,
 Forth from his door the elder mourner crept ;
 Absent for days, none knowing whither bent,
 Till back returned abruptly as he went.

With a swift tremulous stride he climb'd the stair,
 Through the closed chamber gleam'd his silver hair,
 And Mary heard his voice soft—pitying—as in prayer !

' Child, child, I was too hard !—But wo is wild ;
 Now I know all !—again I clasp my child !'
 Within his arms, upon his heart again
 His Mary lay, and strove for words in vain ;

She strove for words, but better spoke through tears
The love, the heart, through silence, vents and hears.

“ All this I gathered from the nurse, who saw
The scene, which dews from hireling eyes could draw ;
So far ;—her sob the pastor heard, and turn’d,
Waved his wan hand, nor what more chanced she learned.

“ Next morn in death the happier father lay,
From sleep to Heaven his soul had pass’d away ;
He had but lived to pardon and to bless
His child ;—emotion kills in its excess,—
And that task done, why longer on the rack
Stretch the worn frame ?—God’s mercy call’d him back !

“ The day they buried him, while yet the strife
Of sense and memory raged for death and life
In Mary’s shattered brain, her father’s friend,
Whose hand, perchance, had sped him to his end,
Whose zeal officious had explored, revealed
My name, the half, worse half, of all concealed,

Sought her, and saw alone: When gone, a change
 Came o'er the victim terrible and strange;
 All grief seem'd hush'd—a stern tranquillity
 Calm'd the wan brow and fixed the glassy eye;
 She spoke not, moved not, wept not,—on her breast
 Slept Earth's new stranger—not more deep its rest.—
 They feared her in that mood—with noiseless tread
 Stole from the room, and, ere the morn, she fled—
 Gone the young Mother with her babe!—no trace;
 As the wind goes—she vanish'd from the place;
 They search'd the darkness of the wood, they pried
 Into the secrets of the tempting tide,
 In vain,—unseen on earth as in the wave,
 Where life found refuge or despair a grave.”
 “And is this all?” said Morvale—

“No, my thought
 Guess'd at the clue; her father's friend I sought,
 A stern hard man, of Calvin's iron mould,
 And yet I moved him, and his tale he told.
 It seemed, (by me unmarked,) amidst the rest,
 My uncle's board had known this homely guest.

Our evil star had led the guest one day,
 Where through the lone glade wound our lover's way,
 To view with Age's hard, suspecting eyes,
 The highborn courtier in the student's guise.
 Thus, when the father, startled to vague fears,
 By his child's waning cheek and unrevealing tears,
 First to his brother priest for counsel came,
 He urged stern question—track'd the grief to shame,
 Guess'd the undoer, and disclosed the name. }

“ Time went—the priest had still a steady trust
 In Mary's honour, but to mine unjust,
 Divined some fraud—explored, and found a clue,
 There had been marriage, if the rites were due ;
 Had learned Clanalbin's name, as one whose eye
 Had seen, whose witness might attest the tie.
 This news to Mary's father was convey'd
 The eve her infant on her heart was laid.

“ That night he left his home he did not rest
 Till found Clanalbin—‘ Well, and he confest ?’

I cried impatient—my informer's eye
Flash'd fire—'Confess'd the fraud,' was his reply.
'The fraud!'—'The impious form, the vile disguise!
Mock priest, false marriage, hell's whole woof of lies!
Lies!—had the sound earth opened its abyss
Beneath my feet, my soul had shuddered less.
Lies—but not mine!—his own!—not mine such ill,
O wife, I fly—to right,—avenge, and claim thee still!"

"Thy hand—I wrong'd thee," Morvale faltered, while
His strong heart heaved—"Thou didst avenge the guile?
Thou foundst thy friend—thy witness—well! and he?"—
"Had spoken truth, the truth of perfidy.
This man had loved me in his own dark way,
Loved for past kindness in our wilder day,
Loved for the future which, obscure for him,
Link'd with my fate, with that grew bright or dim.
I told thee how he warred with my intent,
The strong dissuasion, and the slow consent,
The slow consent but veiled the laboured wile,
That I might yet be great, he grovelled to be vile.

'Twas a false hymen—a mock priest—and she
The pure, dishonoured—the dishonourer free !

“ This then the tale that, while it snapp'd the chord,
Still to the father's heart the child restored,
This told to her by the hard zealot's tongue,
Had the last hope from spoil'd existence wrung ;
Had driven the outcast through the waste to roam,
And with the altar shattered ev'n the home.
No ! trust ev'n then,—ev'n then, hope was not o'er :
One morn the wanderer reach'd Clanalbin's door.
O steadfast saint ! amidst the lightning's scathe,
Still to the anchor clung the lingerer Faith ;
Still through the tempest of a darkened brain,
Where misery gnawed and memory racked in vain,
The last lone angel that deserts the grief
Of noble souls, survived and smiled,—BELIEF !
There had she come, herself myself to know,
And bowed the head, and waited for the blow !
What matter how the villain soothed, or sought
To mask the crime,—enough that it was wrought ;

She heard in silence,—when all said, all learned,
Still silent lingered ; then a flush returned
To the pale cheek,—the Woman and the Wrong
Reared the light form,—the voice came clear and strong.
' Tell him my father's grave is closed ; the dread
Of shame sleeps with him—dying with the dead ;
Tell him on earth we meet no more ;—in vain
Would he redress the wrong, and clear the stain,—
His child is nameless ; and his bride—what now
To her, too late, the mockery of the vow ?—
I was his wife—his equal—to endure
Earth's slander ? Yes !—because my soul was pure !
Now, were he kneeling here,—fame, fortune won,—
My pride would bar him from the fallen one !
Say this ; if more he seek my fate, reply—
Once stain the ermine, and its fate—to die !'

“ I need not tell thee if my fury burst
Against the wretch—the accuser—the accurst !
I need not tell thee if I sought each trace
That lured false hope to wo's lorn resting place ;

If, when all vain, gold, toil, and art essayed,
Still in my sunlight stalked the avenging shade,
Lost to my life for ever ;—on the ground
Where dwell the spectres—Conscience—ever found !”

“ True was the preface to thy gloomy tale ;
Pity can soothe not—counsel not avail,”
Said Morvale, moodily. “ What bliss foregone !
What years of rich life wasted ! What a throne
In the arch heaven abandoned ! And for what ?
Darkness and gold !—the slave’s most slavish lot !
Thy choice forsook the light—the day divine—
God’s loving air—for bondage and the mine !
O ! what delight to struggle side by side
With one loved soother !—up the steep to guide
Her faithful steps—unshrinking from the thorn ;
And front, with stout breast, the down-rushing scorn !
And when firm will and gallant heart had won,
The hill-top opening to the steadfast sun,
Look o’er the perils of the vanquished way,
And bless the toil through which the victory lay,

And murmur—‘ Which the sweeter fate, to dare
 With thee the evil, or with thee to share
 The good ?’ Nay, haunting must thine error be,
 Thee, Camdeo gave the blest Amrita tree*
 The ambrosia of the gods,—to scorn the prize,
 And choose the Champac† for its golden dyes :
 Thou hast forsaken—(thou must bear the grief)—
 The immortal fruitage for the withering leaf!”

“ Nay,” answered Arden, writhing, “ cease to chide ;
 Who taunts the ordeal should the fire have tried.
 If Fortune’s priests had trained thy soul, like mine,
 To worship Fortune as the holiest shrine,
 Perchance my error, cynic, had been thine !”

* The Amrita is the name given by the mythologists of Thibet, (as Sir William Jones truly informs us,) to the heavenly tree which yields its ambrosial fruits to the gods.

† The Champac, a flower of a bright gold colour, with which the Indian women are fond of adorning their hair. Moore alludes to the custom in the “ Veiled Prophet.”

“ The maid of India blest again to hold
 In her full lap the Champac’s leaves of gold,” &c.

“Pardon,” said Morvale ; “and, my taunt to shame,
 Know me thus weak,—I envy while I blame ;
Thou hast been loved ! And had I erred like thee,
 Mine had been crime, from which thy soul is free,
 Thy gentler breast the traitor could forgive——”
 “Never !” cried Arden—

“Does the Traitor live ?”

And as the ear that hissing whisper thrill'd,
 That calm stern eye the very life-blood chill'd ;
 For there, the instinct Cain bequeathed us, spoke,
 And from the chain the wild's fierce savage broke.
 “O yes !” the fiery Alien thus renewed ;
 “I know how holy life by Law is viewed ;
 I know how all life's glory may be marr'd,
 If safe the clay, which, as life's all, ye guard.
 Law—Law ! what is it but the word for gold ?
 Revenge is crime, if taken—Law, if sold !
 Vile tongues, vile scribes, may rot your name away,
 But Law protects you,—with a fine to pay !
 The child dishonoured—the adulterous wife—
 Gold requites all, save this base garment—life !

*So, life alone is sacred!—so, your law
Hems the worm's carcass with a godhead's awe;
So, if some mighty wrong with black despair
Blots out your sun, and taints to plague the air,
If, with a human impulse shrinks the soul
Back from the dross, which compensates the whole;
If from the babbling court, the legal toil,
And the lashed lackey's guerdon, ye recoil,
And seize your vengeance with your own right arm,
How every dastard quivers with alarm!
Mine be the heart that can itself defend—
Hate to the foe, devotion to the friend!—
The fearless trust, and the relentless strife;
Honour unsold, and wrong avenged with life!"*

He ceased, with trembling lip and haughty crest,
The native heathen labouring in the breast!
As waves some pine, with all its storm of boughs,
O'er the black gulf Norwegian winds arouse,
Shook that strong spirit, gloomy and sublime,
Bending with troubled thought above the abyss of crime!

Long was the silence, till, to calm restor'd,
 The moody Indian, and the startled lord.
 "And yet," resumed the first, with softer mien,
 And lip that smiled, half mocking, yet serene,
 "Not long thy sorrow dimm'd thy life ;—unless
 Men's envy wrong thee, thou might'st more confess
 Of loves, perchance as true and as deceived ;
 Of rose-wreaths withered in the hands that weaved.
 Talk to the world of Arden's dazzling lord,
 And tales of joyous love go round the board ;
 Who, if adoring less, by beauty more adored ?"

"Ill dost thou read the human heart, my friend,
 If bounding man's life with the novel's end ;
 Where lover's married, ever after love—
 To birds alone the turtle and the dove !
 Where wicked men, (if I be of the gang,)
 Repent, turn hermits, or cut throats and hang !
 Our souls repent,—our lives but rarely change ;
 Grief halts awhile, then goads us on to range.
 More wooed than wooing, scarce I feigned to feel—
 What magic to the magnet draws the steel ?

Wealth soon grew mine, the parasital fame
Concealed the nature while it deck'd the name ;
Kinsman on kinsman died, each death brought gold ;
In birth, wealth, fame, strange charms the sex behold !
The outward grace the life of courts bestows,
The tongue that learns unconsciously to gloze,
All drew to mine the fates I could but mar ;
And Aphroditè was my native star !
Forgive the boast, not blessings these, but banes,
If spring sows only flowers, small fruit the autumn gains !
I mark my grave coevals gather round
Their harvest-home, their sheaves for garners bound ;
And I, that planted but the garden, see
How the blooms fade ! no harvest waits for me !”

“ Yet, didst thou never love again ? as o'er
The soft stream, gliding by the enamelled shore,
Didst thou ne'er pause, and in some lovelier vale
Moor thy light prow, and furl thy silken sail ?”
“ But once ;” said Arden, “ years on years had fled,
And half it soothed to think my Mary dead.

For I had sworn, (could faith, could honour less ?)
My hearth, at least, to priestly loneliness ;
To wed no other while she lived, and be,
If found at last, for late atonement free.
I kept the vow, till this ambiguous doom,
Half wed, half widowed, took a funeral gloom ;
So many years had passed, no tidings gained,
The chance so slight that yet the earth retained,
At length, though doubtful, I believed that time
Had from the altar ta'en the ban of crime.
Impulse, occasion—what you will, at last
Seized one warm moment to abjure the past.

“ Far other, she, who charmed me thus awhile,
Thought in each glance, and mind in every smile ;
Hers power and genius, and the Iris dyes
Of fancy glistening through swift shifting skies ;
Wild in caprice, impassioned, and yet coy,
Woman when mournful, a frank child in joy ;
The Phidian dream in one concentrating all
The thousand spells with which the charmers thrall,
And pleasing most the eye which years begin to pall !

I do not say I loved her as, in truth,
 We only love when life is in its youth ;
 But here at least I thought to fix my doom,
 And from the weary waste reclaim a home !
 Enough, I loved, to woo, to win, to bind
 To her my fate, if Heaven had so assigned !
 The nuptial day was fix'd, the plighting kiss
 Glowed on my lips ;—that moment the abyss,
 Which hid by moss-grown time yet yawned as wide
 Beneath my feet, divorced me from her side.
 A letter came—Clanalbin's hand ; what made
 Treason so bold to brave the man betray'd ?
 I break the seal—O Heaven ; my Mary yet
 Lived ; in want's weeds—the wretch his victim met.
 Track'd to her home, (a beggar's squalid cell !)
 Told all the penitence that lips could tell.
 'Come back and plead thyself, and all may yet be well !'
 Had I a choice ? could I delay to choose ?—
 Here conscience dragg'd me, there it might excuse !

“ Few hurried lines, obscurely dark with all
 The war within, my later vows recall,

Breathe passionate prayer,—for hopeless pardon sue,
 And shape soft words to soothe the stern adieu.
 So, as some soul the beckoning ghost obeys,
 The haunting shadow of the vanish'd days
 Lures to the Grave of Youth my charmèd tread,
 And sighs, ‘ At length thou shalt appease the Dead !’

“ Scarce had I reached the shores of England, ere
 New pomps spring round me,—I am Arden’s heir !
 The last pretender to the princely line,
 Whose scutcheon’d lions waved at Palestine,
 Borne to our dark Walhalla,—left me poor
 In all which sheds a blessing on the boor.—
 Yes, thou art right ! how, at each sickening grasp,
 For the heart’s food, had gold befool’d my clasp !
 Gorg’d with a satrap’s treasure, the soul’s dearth
 Envied the pauper crawling to his hearth.”

“ But Mary—she—thy wife before heaven’s eye ?”
 “ Lost as before !” was Arden’s anguish-cry ;
 “ Not beggary, famine—not her child (for whom,
 What could she hope from earth ?—as stern a doom !)

Could bow the steel of that proud chastity,
Which scorn'd as alms the atonement due from me!
What had been pride, a kind of madness grown,
She hugg'd her wrongs—her sorrow was her throne.
She fled and left no sign!—again the same
Vain track—vain chase!—Not here was I to blame!”

“ I should have found her,” muttered Morvale;—“Thou,
Thou track the outcast!—luxury knows not how!”

“ Henceforth,” sigh'd Arden, “ hope, aim, end confined
To one—my heart if tortured is resign'd;
So lately seen, oh! sure, she liveth yet,
Once found—Oh! strong thine eloquence, Regret!
The palace and the coronal, the gauds
With which our vanity our will defrauds,—
These may not tempt her, but the simple words
' I love thee still,' will touch on surer chords,
And youth rush back with that young melody,
To the lone moonlight and the trysting tree!”

As the tale ceased, the fields behind them lay,—
The huge town once more opened on the way ;

The whirl of wheels, the galliard cavalcade ;
The crowd of pleasure, and the roar of trade ;
The solemn abbey soaring through the dun
And reeking air, in which sunk slow the sun ;
The dusky trees, the sultry flakes of green ;
The haunts where Fashion yawns away the spleen ;—
Vista on vista widens to reveal
Ease on the wing, and Labour at the wheel !
The friends grew silent in that common roar,
The Real round them, the Ideal o'er ;
So the peculiar life of each, the unseen
Core of our being—what we are, have been—
The spirit of our memory and our soul
Sink from our sight, when merg'd amidst the whole ;
Yet atom, atom never can absorb,
Each drop moves rounded in its separate orb.

THE NEW TIMON.

PART THE THIRD.

I.

LORD Arden's tale robb'd Morvale's couch of sleep,
The star still trembled on the troubled deep,
O'er the waste ocean gleam'd its chilling glance,
To make more dark the desolate expanse.

This contrast of a fate, but vex'd by gales,
Faint with too full a balm from Rhodian Vales;*
This light of life all squander'd upon one
Round whom hearts moved, as planets round a sun,

* The perfumes from the island of Rhodes,—to which the roses that still bloom there gave the ancient name,—are wafted for miles over the surrounding seas.

Mocks the lone doom his barren years endure,
As wasted treasure but insults the poor.
Back on his soul no faithful echoes cast
Those tones which make the Music of the Past.
No memories hallow, and no dreams restore
Love's lute, far-heard from Youth's Hesperian shore ;—
The flowers that Arden trampled on the sod,
Still left the odour where the step had trod ;
Those flowers, so wasted ;—had for him but smil'd
One bud,—its breath had perfumed all the wild !—
He own'd the moral of the reveller's life,—
So Christian warriors own the sin of strife,—
But oh ! how few can lift the soul above
Earth's twin-born rulers,—Fame and Woman's Love !
Just in that time, of all most drear, upon
Fate's barren hill-tops, gleamed the coming sun ;
From Nature's face the veil of night withdrawn,
Earth smiled, and Heaven was opened, in the dawn !

How chanced this change !—how chances all below ?
What sways the life the moment doth bestow :

An impulse—instinct—look—touch—word—or sigh—
 Unlocks the Hades, or reveals the sky.
 'Twas eve ; Calantha had resumed again
 The wonted life, recaptured to its chain ;
 In the calm chamber, Morvale sate, and eyed
 Lucy's lithe shape, that seemed on air to glide ;
 Eyed with complacent, not impassioned, gaze ;
 So Age looks on, where some fair Childhood plays :
 Far as soars Childhood from dim Age's scope,
 Beauty to him who links it not with Hope !

“ Sing me, sweet Lucy,” said Calantha, “ sing
 Our favourite song—‘ The Maiden and the King.’
 Thou lov'st not music, Morvale, or, at least,
 Nought save some war-song that recalls the East.
 Who loves not music, still may pause to hark
 Nature's free gladness hymning in the lark.
 As sings the bird sings Lucy ! all her art
 A voice in which you listen to a heart.”

A blush of fear—a coy, reluctant nay,
 Avail her not—thus ran the simple lay :—

THE MAIDEN AND THE KING.

I.

“ And far as sweep the seas below,
My sails are on the deep ;
And far as yonder eagles go,
My flag on every keep.

“ Why o’er the rebel world within
Extendeth not the chart ?
No sail can reach—no arms can win
The kingdom of a heart !”

So sigh’d the King—the linden near ;
A listener heard the sigh,
And thus the heart he did not hear,
Breathed back the soft reply.

II.

“ And far as sweep the seas below,
His sails are on the deep ;
And far as yonder eagles go,
His flag on every keep ;

“ LOVE, thou art not a king alone,
 Both slave and king thou art !
 Who seeks to sway must stoop to own
 The kingdom of a heart !”

So sigh'd the Maid, the linden near,
 Beneath the lonely sky ;
 Oh, lonely not !—for angels hear
 The humblest human sigh !

III.

His ships are vanish'd from the main,
 His banners from the keep ;
 The carnage triumphs on the plain ;
 The tempest on the deep.

“ The purple and the crown are mine,”
 An Outlaw sigh'd—“ no more ;
 But still as greenly grows the vine
 Around the cottage door !

“ A shelter from the hunter, Maid,
 And water from the spring !”
 Before the humble cottage pray'd
 The Man that was a King.

Oh, was the threshold that he crost
The gate to fairy ground ?
He would not for the kingdom lost,
Have changed the kingdom found !

Divine interpreter thou art, O Song !
To thee all secrets of all hearts belong !
How had the lay, as in a mirror, glass'd,
The sullen present and the joyless past,
Lock'd in the cloister of that lonely soul !—
Ere the song ceased, to Lucy's side he stole,
Stole, as in sleep unconsciously we glide,
Hush'd was the voice, and still he dream'd by Lucy's side !
Dream'd till too sweet the vision : Mournfully
He raised his looks, he met the virgin's eye,
It fix'd his own, nor droop'd ;—so gaze met gaze,
And heart saw heart, translucid through the rays.
In that electric link we do but prove
The power by which the wheels of glory move ;
One same, harmonious, universal law,
Atom to atom, star to star, can draw,

And heart to heart!—swift darts, as from the sun,
The strong attraction, and the charm is done!
Whoe'er thou art, look back, when on thy tame
Expanse of life first flash'd Love's heavenly flame,
And own the date the holy kalend took
Rose from the worship kindled in a look.
A look! and suddenly they felt alone!
Calantha's place was void—the witness gone;
They had not mark'd her sad step glide away,
When in sweet silence sank, less sweet, the lay;
For unto both abruptly came the hour
When springs the rose-fence round the fairy bower;
When earth shut out, all life transferred to one,
Each other life seems cloud before the sun;
It comes, it goes, we know if it depart
But by the warmer light and quickened heart.

And what then chanced? Oh, leave not told but guest;
Is Love a God?—a Temple, then, the breast!
Not to the crowd in cold detail allow
Its delicate worship, its mysterious vow!

Around the first sweet homage in the shrine
Let the veil fall, and but the Pure divine !
Coy as the violet shrinking from the sun,
The blush of Virgin Youth first woo'd and won ;
And scarce less holy from the vulgar ear
The tone that trembles but with noble fear :
Near to God's throne the solemn stars that move
The proud to meekness, and the pure to love !

Let days pass on ; nor count how many swell
The episode of Life's hack chronicle !
Changed the abode, of late so stern and drear,
How doth the change speak ?—" Love hath entered here !
How lightly sounds the footfall on the floor !
How jocund rings sweet laughter, hush'd no more !
Wide from two hearts made happy, wide and far,
Circles the light in which they breathe and are !
Liberal as noontide streams the ambient ray,
And fills each crevice in the world with day !

And changed is Lucy ! where the downcast eye,
And the meek fear, when that dark man was by ?

Lo ! as young Una thrall'd the forest-king,
 She leads the savage in her silken string ;
 Plays with the strength to her in service shown,
 And mounts with infant whim the woman's throne !

Charm'd from his lonely moods and brooding mind,
 And bound by one to union with his kind,
 No more the wild man thirsted for the waste ;
 No more, 'mid joy, a joyless one, misplaced ;
 His very form assumed unwonted grace,
 And bliss gave more than beauty to his face :
 Let but delighted thought from all things cull
 Sweet food and fair—hiving the Beautiful,
 And lo ! the form shall brighten with the soul !
 The gods bloom only by joy's nectar bowl ;
 Bright as Apollo, when his toils were done,
 Shone in heaven's court Alcæna's rugged son,
 But not till Hebe, the ambrosial bride,
 Poured to the parchèd lips the immortal golden tide !
 Nor deem it strange that Lucy failed to trace
 In that dark grandeur, but the birth's disgrace,
 And Europe's ban on Earth's primeval race.

Were she less pure, less harmless, less the child,
Not on the savage had the soft one smil'd.
Ev'n as the young Venetian loved the Moor,
Pity refines to reverence in the Pure ;
Touch'd with a finer sense, its eye surveys
The mine, where wastes appal the common gaze ;
Love in such hearts, like some sweet poet, where
Round it the Homely dwells, invents the Fair ;
To rudest forms, its own bright splendour given,
It shapes the seraph and creates the heaven.

And both were children in this world of ours,
Maiden and savage ! the same mountain flowers,
Not trimmed in gardens, not exchanged their hues,
Fresh from the natural sun and hardy dews,
For the faint fragrance and the sickly dyes
Which Art calls forth by walling out the skies :
So children both, each seemed to have forgot
How poor the maid's—how rich the lover's lot ;
Ne'er did the ignorant Indian pause in fear,
Lest friends should pity, and lest foes should sneer.

“What will the world say?”—question safe and sage ;
 The parrot’s world should be his gilded cage ;
 But fly, frank wilding, with free wings unfurl’d,
 Where thy mate carols—there, behold thy world !
 And stranger still that no decorous pride
 Warned her, the beggar, from the rich man’s side.
 Sneer, ye world-wise, and deem her ignorance art ;
 She saw her wealth (and blush’d not) in her heart !—
 Saw through the glare of gold his lonely breast ;
 He had but gold, and hers was all the rest.

Pleased in the bliss to her, alas ! denied,
 Calantha hail’d her brother’s plighted bride :
 “Glad thou the heart which I made sad,” she sighed. }

Since Arden’s tale, but once the friends had met,
 Nor known to one the other’s rapture yet ;
 Some fancied clue, some hope awhile restored,
 Had from the Babel lured the brilliant lord.
 The wonted commune Morvale failed to miss,—
 We want no confidant in happiness.

Baffled, and sick of hope, wealth, life and all,
 One night returned the noble to his hall ;
 He found some lines, stern, brief, in Morvale's hand,—
 Brief with dark meaning,—stern with rude command,—
 Bidding his instant presence. Arden weighed
 Each word ; some threat was in each word convey'd ;
 A chill shot through his heart—foreboding he obey'd. }

II.

What caused the mandate?—wherefore do I shrink ?
 The stream runs on,—why tarry on the brink ?
 On to my task ; yet in the pause between
 Sorrow and joy, behold the quiet scene ;—
 The chamber stately in that calm repose,
 Which Art, the god whose life is calm, bestows ;
 There, gleam the shapes in which, immortal, still,
 Live the bright exiles from the Olympian Hill ;
 Still moonèd Dian from the breathing stone
 Haunts, with pure eyes, thy dreams, Endymion ;
 Still on the vast brow of the Father-god,
 Hangs the hush'd thunder of the awful nod ;

Still fair, as when on Ida's mountain seen,
 By Troy's young shepherd, Beauty's bashful Queen ;
 Still Ind's divine Iacchus laughing weaves
 His crown of clustering grapes and glossy leaves ;
 Still thou, Arch-type of Song,* whose task to soothe
 The rest of Heroes, and with deathless youth
 Crown the Celestial Brotherhood—dost hold,
 Brimm'd with the drink of gods, the urn of gold !

All live again ! for this most pure, most high
 Of Art's link'd choir, this chastener of the eye,
 This heightener of the soul, that symbols all
 The thoughts that fire us, and the toils that thrall,
 Hewing from mine and rock its airy throne,
 And quickening shapes for gods to wear, from stone,
 Charm'd Morvale's mind,—which simple and austere,
 Ev'n in relaxing, yearned but to revere.

'Twas noon, and broken by the gentle gloom
 Of coolest draperies, through the shadowy room,

* Hebe.

In moted shaft aslant, the golden ray
 Forced lingering in, through tiers of flowers, its way,
 Glanced on the lute, (just hush'd, to leave behind Elysian dreams, the music of the mind,)
 Play'd round the songstress, and with warmer flush
 Steep'd the young cheek, unconscious of its blush,
 And fell, as if in worship, at thy base,
 O sculptured Psyche* of the soul-lit face,
 Bending to earth resign'd the mournful eye,
 Since earth must prove the pathway to the sky ;
 Doomed here, below, Love's foot-print to explore,
 Till Jove relents, the destined wandering o'er,
 And in immortal groves, Soul meets with Love once more.†

* The Psyche of Naples, the most intellectual and (so to speak) the most Christian of all the dreams of beauty which Grecian art has embodied in the marble.

† Every one knows, through the version of Mr. Tighe, the lovely allegory of Eros and Psyche, which Apuleius—the neglected original, to whom all later romance writers are unconsciously indebted—has bequeathed to the delight of poets and the recognition of Christians.

And, side by side, the lovers sate,—their words
Low mix'd with notes from Lucy's joyous birds,
Sole witnesses and fit—those airy things,
That, midst the bars, can still unfold the wings,
And soothe the cell with language learn'd above ;
As the caged bird—so on the earth is love !
Their talk was of the future ; from the height
Of Hope, they saw the landscape bath'd in light,
And, where the golden dimness veil'd the gaze,
Guess'd out the spot, and marked the sites of happy days,
Till silence came, and the full sense and power
Of the blest Present,—the rich-laden Hour
That overshadowed them, as some hushed tree
With mellow fruitage bending heavily,—
What time, beneath the tender gloom reclined,
Dies on the lap of summer noon the wind !

Rous'd from the lulling spell with startled blush
At such strange power in silence, to the hush
The maid restored the music, while she sought
Fresh banks for that sweet river—loving thought.

“Tell me,” she said, “if not too near the gloom
Of some sad tale, the rash desire presume ;
What severs so the chords that should entwine
With one warm bond our sister’s heart and thine ?
Why does she love yet dread thee ? what the grief
That shrinks from utterance and disdains relief ?
Hast thou not been too stern ?—nay, pardon ! nay,
Let thy words chide me,—not thy looks dismay !”

“Not unto thee, beneath whose starry eye
Each wild wave hushes, did my looks reply ;
They were the answer to mine own dark thought,
Which back the gloom, thy smile had banish’d, brought.

“Well ;—to the secrets of my soul thy love
Hath such sweet right, I lift the veil above
Home’s shattered gods, and show what wounds belong
To writhing honour, and revengeless wrong.—

“Reared in the desert, round its rugged child,
All we call life, grouped, menacing and wild ;
But to man’s soul there is an inner life ;—
There, one soft vision smiled away the strife !

A fairy shape, an infant's face of glee,
An angel from that heaven, young Memory,
A voice that called me brother ;—years had fled
Since my rough breast had pillowed that sweet head,
Yet still my heart throbb'd with the pressure ; still
Tears such as mothers know, my eyes would fill ;
Prayers, such as fathers pray, my soul would breathe :—
The oak were sere but for that jasmine-wreath !
At length, wealth came ; my footsteps left the wild,—
Again we met ;—to woman grown the child !
How did we meet ?—that heart to me was dead !
The bird, far heard amidst the waste, was fled !
With earthlier fires that breast had learned to burn ;
And what yet left ? but ashes in the urn :
Wooded and abandoned ! all of love, hope, soul
Lavish'd—now lifeless !—well, were this the whole !
But the good name—the virgin's pure renown—
Woman's white robe, and Honour's starry crown,
Lost, lost, for ever !”

O'er his visage past
His trembling hand,—then, hurriedly and fast,

As one who from the knife of torture swerves,
Then spurns the pang, as pride the weakness nerves,
Resumed—"As yet that secret was withheld,
All that I saw, was sorrow that repelled,—
A dreary apathy—a deathlike chill,
That froze the yearning back and left us severed still.

"One night I fled that hard indifferent eye;
To crowds, the heart that Home rejects, will fly!—
Gay glides the dance, soft music fills the hall,
I fled, to find the loneliness through all!
Thou know'st but half a brother's bond I claim,—
My mother's daughter bears her father's name;
My mother's heart had long denied her son,
And loathed the tie that pride had taught to shun,
My sister's lips, forbid the bond to own,
Left the scorn'd life, a brother breathed, unknown!*

* The reader will bear in mind these lines, important to the clearness of the story; and remember that Calantha bore a different name from her half brother—that her mother's unnatural prejudice or pride of race, had forbidden her ever to mention that brother's name; and that, there-

Not evèn yet the alien blood confest ;—
 Who, in the swart hues of the Eastern guest
 And unfamiliar name, could kindred trace
 With the young Beauty of the Northern Race ?—
 Calm in the crowd I stood, when hark, a word
 Smote on my ear, and stunn'd the soul that heard !
 A sound, with withering laughter muttered o'er,
 Blistering the name—O God !—a sister bore ;
 Nought clear, and nought defined, save scorn alone,—
 Not heard the name scorn coupled with her own ;
 Somewhat of nuptials fix'd, of broken ties,
 The foul cause hinted in the vile surmise,
 The gallant's fame for conquests, lightly won,
 For homes dishonoured, and for hearts undone !
 Not one alone on whom my wrath could seize,
 From lip to lip the dizzying slander flees ;
 No, not one ribald separate from the herd !
 Through the blent hum one stinging tumult stirr'd ;

fore, her relationship, until he sought her out, was wholly unknown to all : the reader will remember, also, that during Calantha's subsequent residence in Morvale's house, she lived as woman lives in the East, and was consequently never seen by her brother's guests.

One felt, unseen, infection circling there,
A bodiless venom in the common air,
And as the air impalpable!—so seem
The undistinguished terrors of a dream,
Now clear, now dim, transformed from shape to shape,
The gibbering spectres scare us and escape!

“Fearful the commune, in that dismal night,
Between the souls which could no more unite,—
The lawful anger and the shaming fears,—
Man’s iron question, woman’s burning tears;
All that, once pass’d, divide for aye the ties
Of the close bond God fashioned in the skies.
I learned at last,—for midst my wrath, deep trust
In what I loved, left evèn passion just;
And I believed the word, the lip, the eye,
That to my horrid question flash’d reply;
I learned at last that but the name was stain’d,
Honour was wreck’d, but Purity remain’d.
O pardon, pardon!—if a doubt that sears,
A word that stains profane such holy ears!

So, oft amidst my loneliness, my heart
 Hath communed with itself, and groaned apart,—
 Recalled that night, and in its fierce despair,
 Shaped some full vengeance from the desert air,—
 That I forgot what angel, new from heaven,
 Sweet spotless listener, to my side was given!

“But who the recreant lover?—this, in vain
 My question sought; that truth not hard to gain;
 And my brow darkened as I breathed the threat
 Fierce in her shrinking ear, ‘that wrath should reach him yet!’

I left her speechless; when the morning came,
 With the fierce pang, writhed the self-tortured frame,
 The poison hid by Wo, drained by despairing Shame. }

“Few words, half blurr’d by shame, the motive cleared,
 For the false wooer, not herself, she feared;
 ‘Accept,’ she wrote, ‘O brother sternly just,
 The life I yield,—but holy be my dust!
 Hear my last words, for, them Death sanctify!
 Forbear his life for whom it soothes to die;

And let my thought, the memory of old time,
The soul that flees the stain, nor knew the crime,
Strike down thine arm ! and see me in the tomb,
Stand, like a ghost, between Revenge and Doom !'

“ I bent, in agony and awe, above
The broken idol of my boyhood's love !
Echoed each groan and writhed with every throe,
And cried, ‘ Live yet ! O dove, but brood below,
Hide with thy wings the vengeance and the guilt,
And mould, disarm, unman me as thou wilt !’
And, as I spoke, the heavy eye unclosed,
The hand press'd mine, and in the clasp reposed,
The wan lip smiled, the weak frame seem'd to win
Strange power against the torture-fire within ;
The leech's skill the heart's strong impulse sped,
She lived—she lived—and my revenge was dead !

“ She lived !—and, clasp'd within my arms, I vowed .
To leave the secret in its thunder shroud,
To shun all question, to refuse all clue,
And close each hope that honour deems its due ;

But, while she lived!—the weak vow halted there,
Her life the shield to that it tainted mine to spare!

“ But to have walked into the thronging street,
But to have sought the haunt where babblers meet,
But to have plucked one idler by the sleeve,
And asked, ‘who woo’d yon fairhaired bride, to leave?’
And street and haunt, and every idler’s tongue,
Had given the name with which the slander rung—
To me alone,—to me of all the throng,
The unnatural silence masked the face of wrong!
But I had sworn! and, of myself in dread,
From the loathed scene, from mine own wrath, I fled.

“ We left the land, in this a home we find.
Home! by our hearth the cleaving curse is shrined!
Distrust in her—and shame in me; and all
The unspoken past cold present hours recall;
And unconfiding hearts, and smiles but rife
In the bland hollowness of formal life!
In vain my sacrifice, she fears me still!
Vain her reprieve—grief barr’d from vent will kill.

And then, and then, (O joy through agony !)
 My oath absolves me, and my arm is free !
 The lofty soul may oft forgive, I own,
 The lighter wrong that smites itself alone ;
 But vile the nature, that when wrong hath marr'd
 All the rich life it was our boast to guard
 But weeps the broken heart and blasted name ;—
 Here the mean pardon were the manhood's shame ;
 And I were vilest of the vile, to live
 To see Calantha's grave—and to forgive :
Forgive !"

There hung such hate upon that word,
 The weeping listener shuddered as she heard,
 And sobb'd—

“ Hush, hush ! lest Man's eternal Foe
 Hear thee, and tempt ! Oh, never may'st thou know
 Beside one deed of Guilt—how blest is guiltless Wo !” }
 Then, close, and closer, clinging to his side,
 Frank as the child, and tender as the bride,
 Words—looks—and tears themselves combine the balm,
 Lull the fierce pang, and steal the soul to calm !

As holy herbs the rock with verdure wreath,
 And fill with sweets the summer air they breathe,
 In winter wither, only to reveal
 Diviner virtues—charged with powers to heal,
 So are the thoughts of Love!—if Heaven is fair,
 Blooms for the earth, and perfumes for the air;—
 Is the Heaven dark?—doth sorrow sear the leaf?
 They fade from joy to anodynes for grief!
 From theme to theme she lures his thought afar,
 From the dark haunt in which its demons are;
 And with the gentle instinct which divines
 Interest more strong than aught which Self entwines
 With its own suffering—changed the course of tears,
 And led him, childlike, through her own young years.
 The silent sorrows of a patient mind—
 Grief's loveliest poem, a soft soul resign'd,
 Charm'd and arous'd——

“O tell me more!” he cried:

“Ev'n from the infant let me trace the bride.
 Of thy dear life I am a miser grown,
 And grudge each smile that did not gild my own;

Look back—thy Father? Canst thou not recall
His kiss, his voice? Fair orphan! tell me all.”

“My Father? No!” sigh’d Lucy; “at that name
Still o’er my mother’s cheek the fever came;
Thus from the record of each earlier year,
That household tie moved less of love than fear;
Some wild mysterious awe, some undefined
Instinct of wo, was with the name entwined.
Lived he?—I knew not; knew not till the last
Sad hours, when Memory struggled to the Past,
And she—my dying mother—to my breast
Clasp’d these twain relics—let them speak the rest!”
With that, for words no more she could command,
She placed a scroll—a portrait—in his hand;
And overcome by memories that could brook
Not ev’n love’s comfort,—veil’d her troubled look,
And glided swiftly thence. Nor he detain’d:
Spellbound, his gaze upon the portrait strain’d:
That brow—those features! that bright lip, which smil’d
Forth from the likeness!—Found Lord Arden’s child!

The picture spoke as if from Mary's tomb,
 Death in the smile and mockery in the bloom.
 The scroll, unseal'd—address'd the obscurer name
 That Arden bore, ere lands and lordship came ;
 And at the close, to which the Indian's eyes
 Hurried, these words :—

“ In peace thy Mary dies ;

Forgive her sternness in her sacrifice !

It had one merit—that I loved ! and till

Each pulse is hush'd shall love, yet fly, thee still.

Now take thy child ! and when she clings with pride

To the strong shelter of a father's side,

Tell her, a mother bought the priceless right

To bless unblushing her she gave to light ;

Bought it as those who would redeem a past

Must buy—by penance, faithful to the last.

Thorns in each path, a grave the only goal,

Glides mine, atoning, to my father's soul !”

What at this swift revealment—dark and fast

As fleets the cloud-wrack, o'er the Indian past ?

No more is Lucy free with her sweet dower
 Of love and youth! Another has the power
 To bar the solemn rite, to blast the marriage bower.

“ Will this proud Saxon of the princely line
 Yield his heart’s gem to alien hands like mine?

What though the blot denies his rank its heir:

The more his pride will bid his love repair

By loftiest nuptials—Oh supreme despair!

Shall I divulge the secret! shall I rear,

Myself the barrier, and the bliss so near?”

He scorn’d himself, and raised his drooping crest:

“ Mine be Man’s honour—leave to God the rest!”

As thus his high resolve, a sudden cry

Startled his heart. He turn’d: Calantha by!

Why on the portrait glares her haggard eye?

“ Whose likeness this? Thou knows’t not, brother? speak!

What mean that clouded brow—that changing cheek?

Thou know’st not!”

“ Yes!”

And as the answer came,

With Death’s strong terror shook the sister’s frame,

A bitterer pang, an icier shudder, ran
Through his fierce nature—

“Dost thou know the man?

Ha! his own tale! O dull and blinded! how,
Flash upon flash, descends the lightning now!
Thou, his forsaken—his! And I—who—nay!
Look up, Calantha; for, befall what may,
He shall——”

The promise, or the threat, was said
To ears already deafen'd as the dead!
His arm but breaks the fall: the panting breast
Yet heaves convulsive through the stifling vest.
The robe, relax'd, bids doubt,—if doubt yet be—
Merge the last gleam in starless certainty!
Lo there, the fatal gift of love and wo
Miming without the image graved below—
The same each likeness by each sufferer worn,
Or differing but as noonday from the morn.
In Lucy's portrait, manhood's earliest youth
Shone from the clear eye with a light like truth.
There, play'd that fearless smile with which we meet
The sward that hides the swamp before our feet;

The bright on-looking to the Future, ere
Our sins reflect their own dark shadows there :—
Calantha's portrait spoke of one in whom,
Young yet in years, the heart had lost its bloom ;
The lip of joy the lip of pride had grown ;
It smiled—the smile we loved to trust had frown.
In the collected eye and lofty mien
The graver power experience brings was seen ;
Beautiful both ; and if the manlier face
Had lost youth's candid and luxuriant grace,
A charm as fatal as the first it wore
Pleased less—and yet enchain'd and haunted more.

And this the man to whom his heart had moved !
Whose hand he' had clasp'd, whose child he loved !—he loved !

This, out of all the universe, O Fate !
This, the dark orb round which revolved his hate ;
This, the swart star malign, whose baleful ray
Ruled in his House of Life ; and day by day,
And hour by hour, upon the tortured past
One withering, ruthless, demon influence cast !

There writhes the victim—there, unmasking, now
The invoked Alecto frowns from Arden's brow.
O'er that fierce nature, roused so late from sleep,
Course the black thoughts, and lash to storm the deep.
Love flies dismay'd—the sweet delusions, drawn
By Hope, fade ghost-like in the lurid dawn ;
As when along the parched Arabian gloom
Life prostrate falls before the dread Simoom,
No human mercy the strong whirlwind faced,
And its wrath reigned sole monarch of the waste !

III.

The Hours steal on. Like spectres, to and fro
Hurry hush'd footsteps through the house of wo.
That nameless chill, which tells of life that dies,
Broods o'er the chamber where Calantha lies.

The Hours steal on—and o'er the unquiet might
Of the great Babel—reigns, dishallowed Night !
Not, as o'er Nature's world, She comes, to keep
Beneath the stars her solemn tryst with Sleep,

When move the twin-born Genii side by side,
And steal from earth its demons where they glide ;
Lull'd the spent Toil—seal'd Sorrow's heavy eyes,
And dreams restore the dews of Paradise ;
But Night, discrown'd and severed from her twin,
No pause for Travail, no repose for Sin,
Vex'd by one chafed rebellion to her sway,
Flits o'er the lamp-lit streets—a phantom-day !

Alone sate Morvale in the House of Gloom,
Alone—no ! Death was in the darken'd room ;
All hush'd save where, at distance faintly heard,
Lucy's low sob the depth of silence stirr'd ;
Or where, without, the swift wheels hurrying by,
Bear those who live as if life could not die.
Alone he sate ! and in his breast began
Earth's deadliest strife—the Angel with the Man !
Not his the light war with its feeble rage
Which prudent scruples with faint passions wage,
(The small heart-conflicts which disturb the wise,
Whom Reason succours when the anger tries,

Such as to this meek social ring belong,
In conscience weak, but in discretion strong ;))
But that known only to man's franker state,
In love a demigod—a fiend in hate,
Him, not the Reason but the Instincts lead,
Prompt in the impulse, ruthless in the deed.

And if the wrong might seem too weak a cause
For the fell fate—not his were Europe's laws.—
Some think dishonour, if it halt at crime,
A stingless asp,—what injury in the slime ?
As if but this poor clay—this crumbling coil
Of dust for graves—were all the foul can soil !
As if the form were not the type (nor more
Than the mere type) of what chaste souls adore !
That Woman-Royalty, a spotless name,
For sires to boast—for sons unborn to claim,
That heavenly purity of thought—as free
From shame as sin, the soul's virginity,
If these be lost—why what remains ?—the form !
Has that such worth ?—Go, envy then the worm !

And well to him may such belief belong,
And India's memories blacken more the wrong ;
In Eastern lands, by tritest tales convey'd,
How Honour guards from sight itself the maid ;
Home's solemn mystery, jealous of a breath,
Screen'd by religion, and begirt with death :—
Again he cower'd beneath the hissing tongue,
Again the gibe of scurril laughter rung,
Again the Plague-breath air itself defiled,
And Mockery grinn'd upon his mother's child !
All the heart's chaste religion overthrown,
And slander scrawl'd upon the altar-stone !

And if that memory pause, what shapes succeed ?
The martyr leaning on the broken reed !
The life slow-poisoned in the thoughts that shed
Shame o'er the joyless Earth ;—and there, the dead !
Marvel not ye, the soft, the fair, the young,
Whose thoughts are chords to Love's sweet music strung,
Whose life the sterner genius—Hate, has spared,
If on his soul no torch but Atè's glared !

If in the foe was lost to sight the bride,
 The foe's meek child!—that memory was denied!
 The face, the tale, the sorrow, and the love,
 All fled—all blotted from the breast; above
 The Deluge not one refuge for the Dove!
 There is no Lethé like one guilty dream!
 It drowns all life that nears the leaden stream;
 And if the guilt seem sacred to the creed,
 Between the stars and earth, but glooms the Deed!
 So in his breast the Titan feud began:
 Which shall prevail—the Angel or the Man?

He comes! the lone light faintly breaking o'er
 The gloom, waves flickering to the open door,
 And Arden's step is on the fatal floor!
 Around he gazed, and hush'd his breath,—for Fear
 Cast its own shadow on the wall,—a drear
 And ominous prescience of the Death-King there
 Breathed its chill horror to the heavy air;
 O'er yon recess—which bars with draperied pall
 The baffled gaze—the unbroken shadows fall.

The lurid embers on the hearth burn low ;
The clicking time-piece sounds distinct and slow ;
And the roused instinct hate's suspense foreshows
In the pale Indian's lock'd and grim repose.

So Arden enter'd, and thus spoke ; the while
His restless eye belied his ready smile :
“ Return'd, I find thy mandate, and attend
To hear a mystery, or to serve a friend.”
“ Or front a foe !”

A stifled voice replied.

O'er Arden's temples flashed the knightly pride.
“ What means that word, which jars, not daunts, the ear ?
I own no foe,—if foe there be,—no fear.”

“ Pause and take heed—then with as firm a sound
Disdain the danger—when the foe is found !
What, if thou hadst a sister, whom the grave
To thy sole charge—a sacred orphan—gave,
What, if a traitor had, with mocking vows,
Won the warm heart, and woo'd the plighted spouse,
'Then left—a scoff ;—what if his evil fame,
Alone sufficed to blast the virgin name,

What—hourly gazing on a life forlorn,
 Amidst a solitude wall'd round with scorn,
 Shame at the core—death gnawing at the cheek—
 What, from the suitor, would the brother seek?"
 "Wert thou that brother," with unsteady voice,
 Arden replied; "not doubtful were thy choice:
 Were I that Suitor——"

"Ay?"

"I would prepare
 To front the vengeance, or—the wrong repair."

"Yes"—hiss'd the Indian—"front that mimic strife
 That coward's die, which leaves to chance the life;
 That mockery of all justice, framed to cheat
 Right of its due—that vengeance thou wouldst meet!—
 Be Europe's justice blind and insecure!
 Stern Ind asks more—her son's revenge is sure!
 Repair the wrong—Ay, in the Grave be wed!
 Hark! the Ghost calls thee to the bridal bed!
 Come (nay, this once thy hand!)—come!—from the shrine
 I draw the veil!—Calantha, he is thine!

Man, see thy victim!—dust!—Joy—Peace and Fame,
These murder'd first—the blow that smote the frame
 Was the most merciful!—at length it came. }
 Here, by the corpse to which thy steps are led,
 Beside thee, murderer, stands the brother of the Dead!”

Brave was Lord Arden—brave as ever be
 Thor's northern sons—the Island Chivalry ;
 But in that hour strange terror froze his blood,
 Those fierce eyes mark'd him shiver as he stood ;
 But oh ! more awful than the living foe
 That frown'd beside—the Dead that smiled below !
 That smile which greets the shadow-peopled shore,
 Which says to Sorrow—“ Thou canst wound no more !”
 Which says to Love that would rejoin—“ Await !”
 That says to Wrong that would redeem—“ Too late !”
 That lingering halo of our closing skies
 Cold with the sunset never more to rise !

Though his gay conscience many a heavier crime
 Than this had borne, and drifted off to Time ;

Though this but sport with a fond heart which Fate
Had given to master, but denied to mate,
Yet seem'd it as in that least sin arose
The shapes of all the opening deeps disclose ;
The general phantom of a life whose waste
Ravaged each bloom by which its path was traced,
Sporting at will, and moulding sport to art,
With that sad holiness—the Human Heart !
Upon his lip the vain excuses died,
In vain his manhood struggled for its pride ;
Up from the dead, with one convulsive throe,
He turn'd his gaze, and voiceless faced his foe :
A horrid glamour fix'd his shape to stone,
He felt those eyes glare doom upon his own ;
He saw that clench'd and quivering hand glide slow
To the bright steel the robe half hid below,—
Near, and more near, he felt the fiery breath
Breathe on his cheek ; the air was hot with death,
And yet he sought nor flight—nor strove for prayer,—
As one, stray'd—chance-led, in a lion's lair,
Who sees his fate, nor deems submission shame,—
Unarm'd to wrestle, and unskill'd to tame,

Nerved for each strife that social life recalls,
But here the strangeness crushes and appals,
And the brave worldling dwarf'd into a child,
Beside the roused Nemæan of the wild!

A lifted arm—a gleaming steel—a cry
Of savage vengeance!—swiftly—suddenly,
As through two clouds a star—on the dread time
Shone forth an angel face and check'd the startled crime!
She stood, the maiden guest, the plighted bride,
The victim's daughter by the madman's side,
Her airy clasp upon the murtherous arm,
Her pure eyes chaining with a solemn charm,
Like some blest thought of mercy, on a soul
Brooding on blood—the holy Image stole!
The lifted steel fell guiltless on the floor,
The gulf that yawn'd as down to hell, before,
Abruptly closed—the demon spell was o'er;
And, as a maniac in his fellest hour
Lull'd by a look whose calmness is its power,
Backward the Indian quail'd! yet evèn less
Him moved that vision's sudden holiness

Than Arden!—startled from his trance of death,
 A newer awe with wonder strove for breath;
 Kneeling he clasp'd the robe—

“Com'st thou to save
 Thine own?—O God! comes Mary from the grave?”
 Then with a bound he reach'd the Indian—

“Lo!

I tempt thy fury, and I court thy blow;
 But, by men's rights o'er men,—man, speak! whose eyes

Ope on life's brink my youth's lost paradise?
 The same—the same—look, look!—the same—lip, brow,
 Form, aspect,—all and each—fresh, fair as now,
 Bloom'd my heart's bride!”—

Silent the Indian heard.

Nor seem'd to feel the grasp, or heed the word!
 As when some storm-beat argosy glides free
 From its vain wrath,—subsides a baffled sea,—
 His heaving breast calmed back—the tempest fell,
 And the smooth surface veil'd the inward hell.
 Yet the eye, resting on the wondering maid,
 Somewhat of wo, perchance remorse, betray'd,

And grew to doubtful trouble—as it saw
Her aspect brightening slowly from the awe,
Gazing on Arden till shone out commix'd,
Fear, hope, and joy, in the sweet eyes thus fix'd !
Instinctively her hand within her vest
Sought the sad talisman that failed the breast,
Her mother's death-gift !—No !—to Morvale's side
She rush'd ; one trembling hand repell'd the bride,
And one (for well the question he divined)
Drew from his robe the relic it resign'd ;—
She heeded not his gesture, not the groan
That stirr'd his lips—the Daughter reign'd alone :
One glance !—oh, yes ! no erring hope beguiled,
“ Father !” she sobb'd ; “ look, look—and bless thy child !”

As from the rock the bright wave leaps to day,
The mighty instinct forced its living way ;
No need of farther words ;—all clear—all told ;
A father's arms the happy child enfold :
Nature alone was audible !—and air
Stirr'd with the gush of tears, and gasps of murmur'd prayer !

Motionless stands the Indian ; on his breast,
 As one the death-shaft pierces, droops his crest ;
 His hands are clasp'd—one moment the sharp thrill
 Shakes his strong limbs ;—then all once more is still ;
 And form and aspect the firm calmness take
 Which clothes his kindred savage at the stake !
 So—as she turn'd her looks—the wo behind
 That quiet mask, the girl's quick heart divin'd,—
 And with fear—pity—and the soft remorse,
 The love rush'd back to its suspended course.
 “ O Father !” Lucy cried—“ not first on me
 Pour out thy blessings !—Him, who saved me, see !
 Him who from want—from famine—from a doom,
 Frowning with terrors darker than the tomb,
 Preserved thy child !”

Before the Indian's feet
 She fell, and murmur'd—“ Bliss is incomplete
 Unless thy heart can share—thy lips can greet !”
 Again the firm frame quiver'd ;—roused again,
 The bruised eagle struggled from the chain ;
 Till words found way, and with the effort grew
 Man's crowning strength—Man's evil to subdue.

“Foeman—’tis past!—lo, in the strife between
Thy world and mine, the eternal victory seen!
Thou, with light arts, my realm hast overthrown,
And, see, revenge but threats to bless thine own!
My home is desolate—my hearth a grave—
The Heaven one hour that seem’d like justice gave,
The arm is raised, the sacrifice prepared—
The altar kindles, and the victim’s—spared!
Free as before to smite and to destroy,
Thou com’st to slaughter to depart in joy!

“From the way side—yon drooping flower I bore;
Warm’d at my heart—its root grew to the core,
Dear as its kindred bloom—seen through the bar
By some long-thrall’d, and loneliest prisoner—
Now comes the garden’s Lord, transplants the flower,
And spoils the dungeon to enrich the bower—
Yea, the same hand that sentenced to the bond,
Plucks from the scene, the all that soothed beyond!

“So be it, law—and the world’s rights are thine;
Lost the stern comfort, Nature’s law and mine!

She calls thee 'Father,' and the long-deferr'd,
 Long-look'd for vengeance, withers at the word!
 Take back thy child! Earth's gods to thee belong!
 To me the iron of the sense of wrong
 Heaven makes the heart which Earth oppresses—strong!"

"Not so,—not so we part! O husband!" cried
 The Girl's full soul—"Divorce not thus thy bride!
 Yes, Father, yes!—in wo thy Lucy won
 This generous heart;—shall joy not leave us one?"

A moment Arden paused in mute surprise
 (How charm'd that outcast Beauty's blinded eyes?)
 Then, with the impulse of the human thought,
 Which smiled atonement for the evil wrought,
 "Hear her!" he said—"her words her father's heart
 Echoes.—Not so—nor ever, may ye part!
 Nobly, hast thou an elder right than mine
 Won to this treasure;—still its care be thine;
 Withhold thy pardon if thou wilt,—but take
 The holiest offering wrong to man can make!"

Slowly the Indian lifts his joyless head,
Pointing with slow hand to the present dead,
And from slow lips comes heavily the breath :
“ Behold between us evermore—is Death !”

“ Maiden, recall my tale—thou clasp'st the hand
Which shuts the Exile from the promised land ;
Go—ask thy heart in which still guide, if grieve,
The fresh, pure instincts of Earth's virgin Eve,
If the dead victim's brother, undefil'd,
Could ask his blessing and could wed his child !”
With that he bent him o'er the shuddering maid,
On her fair locks a solemn hand he laid ;
Lifted eyes, tearless still—but dark with all
The cloud, that not in such soft dews can fall :
“ And so, belovèd one—life's all—farewell !
Still by my hearth thy gentle shade shall dwell !
Still, shall my soul, when Night the dreariest seem,
Fly back to thee, O soft—O vanish'd dream !
If to the Dead an offering still must be,
All vengeance calls for be fulfill'd in me !

I make myself the victim!—thou dread Power
Guiding to guilt the slow chastising hour,
From the doom'd hearth by her chaste step made pure,
Let this lone roof thy thunder-stroke allure!—
Go hence—(nay, near me not!) behold!—the kind
Oblivion closes round her darken'd mind;
If, when she wake, it be awhile for grief,
Soon dries the dew-drop on the April leaf!"

He said, and vanish'd, with a noiseless tread,
Within the folds which curtain'd round the dead!
So, the stern Dervish of the East inters
His sullen soul with Death in sepulchres!
His new-found prize, while yet the unconscious sense
Sleeps in the mercy of the brief suspense,
With gliding feet, the Father steals away.
Grief bends alone above the lonely clay;
But over grief and death the Eternal Eye
Shines down,—and Hope lives ever in the sky.

THE NEW TIMON.

PART THE FOURTH.

I.

To Joy's brisk ear there's music in the throng ;
Glorious the life of cities to the strong !
What myriad charms, all differing, smile for all
The hardier Masks in the Great Carnival !
Amidst the vast disguise, some sign betrays
To each the appointed pleasure in the maze ;
Ambition, pleasure, love, applause, and gold,
Allure the young, and baby* yet the old.
For here, the old, if nerves and stubborn will Defy Experience, linger, youthful still,
Haunt the same rounds of idlesse—or of toil
That lure the freshest footsteps to the soil,

* " At best it babies us."—YOUNG.

Still sway the Fashion or control the State,
 Gay at the ball, or fierce at the debate.
 It is not youth, it is the zest of life
 Surviving youth—in age itself as rife,
 That fits the Babel and enjoys the strife ;
 But not for you our world's bright tumults are
 Soft natures, born beneath the Hesperus star,—
 To us the storm is but the native breath ;
 To you, the quickening of the gale is death ;
 Fly from each change our varying sky bestows,—
 The clime that suits the tender is—Repose !
 Yours Nature's world, not man's !—the stillest shade
 Where, all unseen, the cushat's nest is made,
 Less lone to you than pomps which but bestow
 The tinkling cymbal and the painted show.

The lights of revel flash from Arden's halls ;
 There throng the shapes that troop where Comus calls ;
 But not Sabrina more apart and lone
 From the loud joy, on her pure coral throne,
 Than thou, sad maiden !—round the holy tide
 Swell the gay notes, the airy dancers glide ;

But o'er the shadowy grot the waters roll,
And wall the revel from the hidden soul!
What rank has noblest, manhood's grace most fair,
Bend low to her now hail'd as Arden's heir;
If rumour doubts the birthright to his name,
The father's wealth redeems the mother's shame;
And kindly thoughts o'er lordly pride prevail,
"The Earl's best lands are not in the entail."

How Arden lov'd his child!—how spoke that love
Of those dead worlds the light herb waves above;
Layer upon layer—those strata of the past,
Those gone creations buried in the last!
Their bloom, their life, their glory past away,
Speak in this relic of a vanish'd day.
There, in that guileless face, revived anew
The visions glistening through life's morning dew,
Fair Hope, pure Honour, undefilèd Truth—
The young shape stood before him as his youth!*

* "For oh! he stood before me as my youth."

COLERIDGE'S Wallenstein.

And in this love his chastisement was found—
The thorns he had planted, here enclosed him round ;
He, whom to see had been to love,—in vain
Here loved ; that heart no answer gave again—
It lived upon the past,—it dwelt afar,
This new-found bond from what it loved the bar !
Her conscience chid, yet, while it chid, her thought
Still the cold past, to freeze the present, brought ;
How love the sire round whom such shadows throng,
The mother's death-bed and the lover's wrong !
The dazzling gifts, which had through life beguil'd
All other souls, are powerless with his child.
Vain the melodious tongue, and vain the mind,
Sparkling and free as wavelets in the wind ;
The roseate wreath the handmaid Graces twine
Round sternest hearts, soft infant, breaks on thine !

Child, candid, simple, frank, to her allied,
Far more, the nature sever'd from her side,
With its fresh instincts and wild verdure, fann'd
By fragrant winds from haunted Fable-land ;

Then all the garden graces which betray
 By the bough's riches the worn tree's decay.
 What charms the ear of Childhood?—not the page
 Of that romance which wins the sober sage ;
 Not the dark truths, like warning ghosts, which pass
 Along the pilgrim path of Rasselas ;
 Not wit's wrought crystal which, so coldly clear,
 Reflects, in Zadig, learning's icy sneer ;
 Unreasoning, wandering, stronger far the thrall
 Of Aimée's cave,* or young Aladdin's hall ;
 And so the childhood of the heart will find
 Charms in the poem of a child-like mind,
 To which the vision of the world is blind !
 Ev'n as the savage, 'midst the desert's gloom,
 Sees, hid from us, the golden fruitage bloom,
 And, where the parchèd silence wraps us all,
 Lists the soft lapse of the glad waterfall !

So Lucy loved not Arden?—vainly yearn
 His moisten'd eyes ;—Can softness be so stern ?

* The beautiful story of Aimée—the delight of all children
 —is in the collection entitled “The Temple of the Fairies.”

That soul how gentle ! but that smile how cold !
 A marble shape the parent arms enfold ;
 No hurrying footstep bounds his own to meet,
 No joyous smiles with morning's welcome greet,
 Not him that heart—so bless'd with love—can bless,
 Lost the pure Eden of a child's caress ;
 He saw—he felt, and suffer'd powerless !
 Remorse seized on him ;—his gay spirit quail'd ;
 The cloud crept on,—it gather'd,—it prevail'd.
 The spectre of the past—the martyr bride,
 Sate at his board, and glided by his side ;
 Sigh'd, “ With the dead, Love the Consoler dies,”
 And spoke his sentence in his child's cold eyes !
 And now a strange and strong desire was born,
 With the young instinct of life's credulous morn,
 In that long-sceptic breast, so world-corrupt and worn.

From the rank soil in which grim London shrouds
 Her dead,—the green halls of the ghostly crowds—
 To bear his Mary's dust ; the dust to lay
 By the clear rill, beside her father's clay,

Amidst those scenes which saw the rapture-strife
And growth of passion—life's sweet storm of life,
Consign the silent pulse, the mouldering heart,
Deaf to the joy to meet—the wo to part ;
Rounding and binding there, as into one
Sad page, the tale of all beneath the sun ;
And there, before that grave—beneath the beam
Of the lone stars, and by that starlit stream,
To lead the pledge of that fresh morn of love,
And while the pardoning skies seem'd soft above,
Murmur, “ For her sake, her, who, reconcil'd,
Hears us in heaven, give me thy heart, my child !”
But first—before his conscious soul could dare
For the consoling balm to pour the prayer,
Alone the shadows of the past to brave,
Alone to commune with the accusing grave,
And shrive repentance of its haunting gloom
Before Life's true Confessional—the Tomb !
Such made his dream !—Oh ! not in vain the creed
Of old that knit atonement with the dead !
The penitent offering, the lustrating tide,
The wandering, haunted, hopeful homicide,

Who sees the spot to which the furies urge,
Where halt the hell-hounds, and where drops the scourge,
And the appeasèd Manes pitying sigh—
“Thou hast atoned! once more enjoy the sky!”

Such made the dream he rushes to fulfil!—
Round the new mound babbled the living rill;
A name, the name that Arden's wife should bear,
Sculptured the late and vain repentance there.
O'er the same bridge which once to rapture led,
Went the same steps their pathway to the dead:
Night after night the same lone shadow gave
A tremulous darkness to the hurrying wave;
Lost—and then, lengthening from the neighbouring yews,
Dimm'd the wan shimmer of the moon-lit dew,
Then gained a grave;—and from the mound was thrown
Still as the shadow of its funeral stone!

II.

Meanwhile to Morvale!—Sorrow, like the wind
Through trees, stirs varying o'er each human mind;

Uprooting some, from some it doth but strew
 Blossom and leaf, which spring restores anew ;
 From some, but shakes rich powers unknown in calm,
 And wakes the trouble to extract the balm.

Let weaker natures suffer and despair,
 Great souls snatch vigour from the stormy air ;
 Grief not the languor,—Grief the action brings ;
 And clouds the horizon but to nerve the wings.

Up from his heavy thought, one dawning day,
 The Indian, silent, rose, and went his way ;
 Palace and pomp and wealth and ease resign'd
 As one new-born, he plunged amidst his kind,
 Whither, with what intent, he scarce divined. }
 He turn'd to see, through mists obscure and dun,
 The domes and spires of the wan Babylon ;
 Before him smiled the mead and waved the corn,
 And Nature's music swell'd the hymns of Morn !
 A sense of freedom, of the large escape
 From the pent walls our customs round us shape ;
 The imperfect sympathies which curse the few,
 Who not the chase the many join pursue ;

The trite convention, with its cold control,
Which thralls the habit, yet not links the soul ;
—The sense of freedom pass'd into his breast,
But found no hope it flatter'd and caressed ;
So the sad captive, when at length made free,
Shrinks from the sunlight he had pined to see ;
Feels on the limb the custom of the chain,
Each step a struggle and each breath a pain,
And knows—return'd unto the world too late,
No smile shall greet him at its lonely gate ;
Seal'd every eye, of old that watch'd and wept ;
The world he knew has vanished while he slept !

He wander'd on, alone, on foot,—alone,
As in the waste his earlier steps had known.
Forth went the peasant—Adam's curse begun ;—
Home went the peasant in the western sun ;
He heard the bleating fold, the lowing herd,
The last shrill carol of the nestling bird !
He saw the rare lights of the hamlet gleam
And fade ;—the stars grow stiller on the stream ;

Swart, by the woodland, cowers the gipsy tent
Whence peer dark eyes that watch'd him as he went—
He paused and turned :—Him more the outlaws charm
Than the trim hostel and the happy farm.
Strangers, like him, from antique lands afar,
Aliens untamed where'er their wanderings are,
High Syrian sires of old ;*—dark fragments torn
From the great creed of Isis,—now forlorn
In rags—all earth their foe, and day by day
Worn in the strife with social Jove, away—
Wretched 'tis true, yet less enslaved, their strife
Than our false peace with all this masque of life,
Convention's lies,—the league with Custom made,
The crimes of glory, and the frauds of trade.
Rest and rude food the lawless Nomads yield ;
The dews rise ghost-like from the whitening field

* According to the hypothesis of Voltaire, that the Gipsies are a Syrian tribe, the remains of the long scattered fraternity of Isis,—an hypothesis which has more in its favour than at first appears—against the recent and now popularly received opinion which deduces their vagrant origin from India.

And ghost-like on the wanderer glides the sleep
Through which the phantom Dreams, their witching
Sabbat keep!

At dawn, while yet, around the Indian, lay
The dark fantastic groups,—resumed the way;
Before his steps the landscape spreads more free
And fresh from Man;—ev'n as a broadening sea,
When, more and more the harbour left behind,
The lone sail drifts before the strengthening wind.
Behold the Sun!—how stately from the East,
Bright from God's presence, comes the glorious Priest!
Deck'd as beseems the Mighty One to whom
Heaven gives the charge to hallow and illumine!
How, as he comes,—through the Great Temple, EARTH,
Peals the rich Jubilee of grateful mirth!
The infant flowers their odour-censers swinging,
Through aisled glades Air's Anthem-Chorus ringing;
While, like some soul lifted aloft by love,
High and alone the sky-lark halts above,
High, o'er the sparkling dews, the glittering corn,
Hymns his frank happiness and hails the morn!

He stands upon the green hill's lighted brow,
And sees the world at smiling peace below,
Hamlet and farm, and thy best type, Desire
Of the sad Heart,—the Heaven-ascending spire!

He stood and mused, and thus his musing ran:—
“How strong, how feeble, O vain Art of Man!
Thou coverest Earth with wonders—at thy hand
Curbs the meek water, blooms the subject land:
Why halts thy magic here?—Why only deck'd
Earth's sterile surface, mournful Architect?
Why art thou powerless o'er the world within?
Why raise the Eden, yet retain the sin?
Why, while the earth, thou but enjoy'st an hour,
Betrays thy splendour and attests thy power,
Why o'er the spirit does thy sorcery cease?—
Lo the sweet landscape round thee lull'd in peace!
Why wakes each heart to sorrow, care, and strife?
Why with yon temple so at war the life?
Why all so slight the variance, or in grief
Or guilt,—the sum of suffering and relief,

Between the desert's son whose wild content
Redeems no waste and charms no element
And ye the Magians?—ye the giant birth
Of Lore and Science—Brahmins of the Earth?
Behold the calm herd drinking in the stream,
Behold the glad bird glancing in the beam,
Say, know ye pleasure,—ye, the Eternal Heirs
Of stars and spheres—life's calm content, like theirs?
Your stores enrich, your powers exalt the few,
And curse the millions wealth and power subdue;
And ev'n the few—what lord of luxury knows
The joy in strife, the sweetness in repose,
Which bless the houseless Arab?—Still behind
Ease waits Disgust, and with the falling wind
Droop the dull sails ordained to wing the mind.
Increasing wants the sum of care increase,
The piled up knowledge but sepulchres peace,
Ye quell the instincts, the free love, frank hate,
And bid hard Reason hold the scales of Fate—
What is your gain?—from each slain instinct springs
A hydra passion, poisoning while it stings;

Free love foul lust ;—the frank hate's manly strife
A plotting mask'd dissimulating life ;—
Truth flies the world—one falsehood taints the sky,
Each form a phantom, and each word a lie !

“ Yet what am I ?—the crush'd and baffled foe,
Who dared the strife, yet would denounce the blow.
What arms had I against this world to wield ?
What mail the naked savage heart to shield ?
To this hoar world I brought the trusts of youth,
Warm zeal for men, and fixed repose in truth—
Amongst the young I look'd for young desires,
Love which adores, and Honour which aspires—
Amongst the old, for souls set free from all
The earthlier chains which young desires enthrall,
Serene and gentle both to soothe and chide,
The sires to pity, yet the seers to guide—
And lo ! this civilized and boasted plan,
This order'd ring and harmony of man,
One hideous, cynic, levelling orgy, where
Youth Age's ice, and Age Youth's fever share—

The unwrinkled brow, the calculating brain,
The passion balanced with the weights of gain,
And Age more hotly clutching than the boy
At the lewd bauble and the gilded toy.

“ Why should I murmur ?—why accuse the strong ?
I own Earth’s law—the conquer’d are the wrong.
Am I ambitious ?—in this world I stand
Closed from the race, an Alien in the land.
Dare I to love.—O soul, O heart, forget
That dream, that frenzy !—what is left me yet ?
Revenge !” —His dark eyes flash’d—yet straightway died
The passionate lightning—“ No !—revenge denied !
All the wild man in the tame slave is dead,
The currents stagnate in the girded bed !
Back to my desert !—yet, O sorcerer’s draught,
O smooth false world,—what soul, that once has quaff’d,
Renounces not the ancient manliness ?
Now, could the Desert the charm’d victim bless !
Can the caged bird, escaped from bondage, share
As erst the freedom of the hardy air ?

Can the poor peasant, lured by Wealth's caprice
To marts and domes, find the old native peace
In the old hut?—on-rushing is the mind:
It ne'er looks back on what it leaves behind.
Once cut the cable and unfurl the sail,
And spreads the boundless sea, and drifts the fatal gale!

“Come then, my Soul, thy thoughts thy desert be!
Thy dreams thy comrades!—I escape to thee!
Within, the gates unbar, the airs expand,
No bound but Heaven confines the Spirit's Land!
Such luxury yet as what of Nature lives
In Art's lone wreck, the lingering instinct gives;
Joy in the Sun, and mystery in the Star,
Light of the Unseen, commune with the Far;
Man's law his fellow, ev'n in scorn, to save,
And hope in some just World beyond the Grave!”

So went he on, and day succeeds to day,
And still untired the step, and track'd the way;
At night his pause was at the lowliest door,
The beggar'd heart makes brothers of the Poor;

They who most writhe beneath Man's social wrong,
But love the feeble when they hate the strong.
Laud not to me the optimists who call
Each knave a brother—Parasites of all—
Praise not as genial his indifferent eye,
Who lips the cant of mock philanthropy,
He who loathes ill must more than half which lies
In this ill world with generous scorn despise ;
Yet of the wrong he hates, the grief he shares,
His lip rebuke, his soul compassion, wears ;
The Hermit's wrath bespeaks the Preacher's hope ;
Who loves men most—men call the Misanthrope !

At times with honest toil reposed—at times
Where gnawing wants beset despairing crimes,
Both still betray'd the sojourn of his soul,
Here wise to cheer, there fearless to control.
His that strange power the Church's Fathers had
To awe the fierce and to console the sad ;
For he, like them, had sinn'd ;—like them had known
Life's wild extremes ;—their trials were his own !

Were we as rich in charity of deed
As gold—what rock would bloom not with the seed?
We give our alms, and cry—“What can we more?”
One hour of time were worth a load of ore!
Give to the ignorant our own wisdom!—give
Sorrow our comfort!—lend to those who live
In crime, the counsels of our virtue!—share
With souls our souls, and Satan shall despair!
Alas, what converts one man, who would take
The cross and staff, and house with Guilt, could make!

Still, in his breast, 'midst much that well might shame
The virtues Christians in themselves proclaim,
There dwelt the Ancient Heathen;—still as strong
Doubts in Heaven's justice,—curses for man's wrong.
Revenge denied in deed—still rankled deep
In thought—and dimm'd the day, and marr'd the sleep,
And there were hours when from the hell within
Faded the angel that had saved from sin;
When the fell fury, beckoning through the gloom,
Cried “Life for life—thou hast betray'd the tomb!”

For the grim Honour of the ancient time,
Deem'd vengeance duty and forgiveness crime ;
And the stern soul fanatic conscience scared,
For blood not shed, and injury weakly spared ;—
Wo, if in hours like these, O more than wo,
Had the roused tiger met the pardoned foe !

Nor when his instinct of the life afar
Soar'd from the soil and task'd the unanswering star,
Came more than Hope—that reflex-beam of Faith—
That fitful moonlight on the unknown path ;
And not the glory of the joyous sun,
That fills with light whate'er it shines upon ;
In which the smiles of God as brightly fall
On the lone charnel as the festive hall !

Now Autumn closes on the fading year,
The chill wind moaneth through the woodlands sere ;
At morn the mists lie mournful on the hill,—
The hum of summer's populace is still !
Hush'd the rife herbage, mute the choral tree,
The blithe cicala, and the murmuring bee ;

The plashing reed, the furrow on the glass
Of the calm wave, as by the bank you pass,
Scaring the glistening trout,—delight no more ;
The god of fields is dead—Pan's lusty reign is o'er !
Solemn and earnest—yet to holier eyes
Not void of glory, arch the sober'd skies
Above the serious earth !—ev'n as the age
When fades the sunlight from the poet's page,
When all Creation is no longer rife,
As Jove's lost creed, with deity and life—
And where Apollo hymn'd, where Venus smil'd ;
Where laugh'd from every rose the Paphian child ;
Where in each wave the wanton nymph was seen ;
Where in each moonbeam shone Endymion's queen ;
Where in each laurel, from the eternal bough,
Daphne wreathed chaplets for a dreamy brow ;
To the wreck'd thrones of the departed creed
A solemn Faith, a lonely God succeed ;
And o'er the heathen altars of our Youth
Reigns, 'mid a silence disenchant'd,—Truth !

Beneath the still boughs of the yellowing beech,
 An old man sate—whose mission was to teach
 God's saving Word ;—no hierarch of the Fane
 Who sounds the Jordan for the golden grain ;
 But the calm dweller by the streams of life ;
 Unknown to fame, for what is fame but strife ?—
 Heaven's own true priest, from earth's worst tempters
 pure,
 Gold and Ambition ;—sainted and obscure !
 Before his knee, (the Gospel in his hands,
 And sunshine at his heart,) a youthful listener stands !

The old man spoke of Christ—of Him who bore
 Our form, our woes ;—that man might evermore
 In succouring wo-worn man, the God, made Man, adore !

“ My child,” he said, “ in the far-heathen days,
 Hope was a dream, Belief an endless maze ;
 The wise perplex'd, yet still with glimpse sublime
 Of ports dim-looming o'er the seas of Time

Guess'd HIM unworshipp'd yet—the Power above,
Or Dorian Phœbus, or Pelasgic Jove !
Guess'd the far realm, not won by Charon's oar,
Not the pale joys the brave who gain abhor ;
No cold Elysium where the very Blest
Envy the living and deplore the rest ;*
Where ev'n the spirit, as the form, a ghost,
Dreams back life's conflicts on the shadowy coast,
Hears but the clashing steel, the armèd train,
And waves the airy spear, and murders hosts again !
More just the prescience of the eternal goal,
Which gleam'd, 'mid Cyprian shades, on Zeno's soul,
Or shone to Plato in the lonely cave ;
God in all space, and life in every grave !

* Whoever is well acquainted with the heathen learning, must often have been deeply impressed with the mournful character of the mythological Elysium. Even the few admitted to the groves of asphodel, unpurified by death, retain the passions and pine with the griefs of life ; they envy the mortal whom the poet brings to their moody immortality ; and, amidst the disdain'd repose, sigh for the struggle and the storm.

Wise lore and high,—but for the few conceived ;
By schools discuss'd, but not by crowds believed.
The angel-ladder clomb the heavenly steep,
But at its foot the patriarchs did but sleep ;
They did not preach to nations ' Lo your God !'
No thousands followed where their footsteps trod ;
Not to the fisherman they said ' Arise !'
Not to the lowly they reveal'd the skies ;—
Wisdom was theirs—alas ! what men most need
Not the sect's wisdom, but the people's creed !*

* Not only were the lofty and cheering notions of the soul cherished by the more illustrious philosophers of Greece, confined to a few, but even the grosser and dimmer belief in a future state which the vulgar mythology implied, was not entertained by the multitude. Plato remarked that few, even in his day, had faith in the immortality of the soul ; and indeed the Hades of the ancients was not for the Many. Amongst those condemned, we find few criminals, except the old Titans, and such as imitated them in the one crime—blasphemy to the fabled gods : And the dwellers of Elysium are chiefly confined to the poets and heroes, the oligarchy of earth. That all men should live again—whether for weal or wo ; that slave and hero had the same birthright, and should be judged by an impartial law, was a more

Then, not for schools—but for the human kind—
 The uncultured reason, the unletter'd mind ;
 The poor, the oppressed, the labourer, and the slave,
 God said, ' Be light !'—and light was on the Grave !
 No more alone to sage and hero given,
 Ope for all life, the impartial Gates of Heaven !
 Enough hath Wisdom dream'd, and Reason erred,
 All they would seek is found !—O'er Nature sleeps the Word !

“ Thou ask'st why Christ, so lenient to the deed,
 So sternly claims the faith which founds the creed ;
 Because, reposed in faith the soul has calm ;
 The hope a haven and the wound a balm ;
 Because the light, dim seen in Reason's dream,
 On all alike, through faith alone, could stream.
 God will'd support to Weakness, joy to Grief,
 And so descended from his throne—BELIEF !

unfamiliar doctrine than one who has read Tully and Plato without surveying the general darkness of the contemporaneous populace, might readily believe.

Nor this alone—Have faith in things above,
 The unseen Beautiful of Heavenly Love ;
 And from that faith what virtues have their birth,
 What spiritual meanings gird, like air, the Earth !
 A deeper thought inspires the musing sage ;
 To youth what visions—what delights to age !
 A loftier genius wakens in the world,
 To starrier heights more vigorous wings unfurl'd.
 No more the outward senses reign alone,
 The Soul of Nature glides into our own.
 To reason less is to imagine more ;
 They most aspire who meekly most adore !

“ Therefore the God-like Comforter’s decree—
 ‘ His sins be loosen’d who hath faith in me.’
 Therefore he shunn’d the cavils of the wise,
 And made no schools the threshold of the skies :
 Therefore he taught no Pharisee to preach
 His Word—the simple let the simple teach.
 Upon the infant on his knee he smiled,
 And said to Wisdom, ‘ Be once more a child ! ’ ”

The boughs behind the old man gently stirr'd,
By one unseen those Gospel accents heard ;
Before the preacher bow'd the pilgrim's head :
“ Heaven to this bourne my rescued steps hath led,
Grieving, perplex'd—benighted, yet with dim
Hopes in God's justice,—be my guide to Him :
In vain made man, I mourn and err !—restore
Childhood's pure soul, and ready trust, once more !”

The old man on the stranger gazed ; unto
The stranger's side the old man softly drew,
And gently clasp'd his hand ;—and on the three
The western sun shone still and smilingly ;
But, round—behind them—dark and lengthening lay
The massive shadow of the closing day.

“ See,” said the preacher, “ Darkness hurries on,
But Man, toil-wearied, grieves not for the Sun,
He knows the light that leaves him shall return,
And hails the night because he trusts the morn !
Believe in God as in the sun,—and, lo !

Along thy soul, morn's youth restored shall glow !
As rests the earth, so rest, O troubled heart,
Rest, till the burden of the cloud depart ;

Rest, till the gradual veil from Heaven withdrawn,
Renews thy freshness as it yields the dawn !”

Behold the storm-beat wanderer in repose !
He lists the sounds at which the Heavens unclose,
Gleam, through expanding bars, the angel-wings,
And floats the music borne from seraph-strings.
Holy the oldest creed which Nature gives,
Proclaiming God where'er Creation lives ;
But there the doubt will come !—the clear design
Attests the Maker and suggests the Shrine ;
But in that visible harmonious plan,
What present shows the future world to man ?
What lore detects, beneath our crumbling clay,
A soul exiled, and journeying back to day ;
What knowledge, in the bones of charnel urns,
The ethereal spark, the undying thought, discerns ?
How from the universal war, the prey
Of life on life, can love explore the way ?
Search the material tribes of earth, sea, air,
And the fierce SELF that strives and slays is there.

What but that SELF to Man doth Nature teach ?
Where the charm'd link that binds the all to each ?
Where the sweet Law—(doth Nature boast its birth ?)—
“ Good will to man, and charity to earth ?”
Not in the world without, but that within,
Revealed, not instinct—soul from sense can win !
And where the Natural halts, where cramp'd, confined,
The seen horizon bounds the baffled mind,
The Inspired begins—the onward march is given ;
Bridging all space, nor ending ev'n in Heaven !
There, veil'd on earth, we mark divinely clear,
Duty and end—the There explains the Here !
We see the link that binds the future band,
Foeman with foeman gliding hand and hand ;
And feel that Hate is but an hour's—the son
Of earth, to perish when the earth is done—
But Love eternal ; and we turn below,
To hail the Brother where we loathed the foe :
There in the soft and beautiful Belief,
Flows the true Lethé for the lips of Grief ;
There, Penury, Hunger, Misery, cast their eyes,
How soon the bright Republic of the Skies !

There, Love, heart-broken, sees prepared the bower,
 And hears the bridal step, and waits the nuptial hour!
 There, smiles the mother we have wept! there bloom
 Again the buds asleep within the tomb,
 There, o'er bright gates inscribed, "No more to part,"
 Soul springs to soul; the heart unites to heart!—

Refresh'd in that soft baptism, and reborn,
 'The Indian woke, and on the world was morn!
 All things seem'd new—rose-colour'd in the skies
 Shone the hoary peaks of the old memories;
 No more enshrouded with unbroken gloom
 Calantha's injured name and early tomb—
 No more with wo, (how ill-suppress'd by pride!)
 Thought sounds the gulf that parts the promised bride!
 Faithful no less to Death, and true to Love,
 This blooms again—that shall rejoin, above!
 The Stoic courage had the wound conceal'd;
 The Christian hope the wound's sharp torture heal'd.
 As rude the waste, but now before him shone
 The star;—he rose, and cheerful journey'd on,
 Full of the God most with us when alone!

III.

Tis night,—a night by fits, now foul, now fair,
As speed the cloud-wracks through the gusty air :
At times the wild blast dies—and fair and far,
Through chasms of cloud, looks down the solemn star—
Or the majestic moon ;—as watch-fires mark
Some sleeping War dim-tented in the dark ;
Or as, through antique Chaos and the storm
Of matter, whirl'd and writhing into form
Pale angels peer'd !

Anon, from brief repose

The winds leap forth, the cloven deeps reclose ;
Mass upon mass the hurtling vapours driven,
As one huge blackness walls the earth from heaven!—
In one of these brief lulls—you see, serene,
The village church spire 'mid its mounds of green,
The scatter'd roof-toops of the hamlet round,
And the swoln rill that girds the holy ground.—

A plank, that rock'd above the rushing wave,
The dizzy pathway to a wanderer gave ;
There, as he paused, from the lone churchyard, slow
Emerged a form the wanderer's eyes should know !
It gains the opposing margent of the stream,
Full on the face shines calm the crescent beam ;
It halts upon the bridge !—Now, Indian, learn
If in thy soul the heathen yet can yearn !
Swift runs the wave, the instinct and the hour,
The lonely night, when evil thoughts have power,
The foe before thee and no things that live
To witness vengeance !—Canst thou still forgive ?
Scarce seen by each the face of each—when, deep
O'er the lost moon, the cloud's loud surges sweep ;
Yea, as a sea devours the fated bark,
Vanish'd the heaven, and closed the abyss of dark !
You heard the roaring of the mighty blast,
The groaning trees uprooted as it pass'd,
The wrath and madness of the starless rill,
Swell'd by each torrent rushing from the hill.
The slight plank creaks—high mount the waves and high,
Hark ! with the tempest's shrieks the human cry !

Upon the bridge but one man now!—below,
 The night of waters and the drowning foe!
 The Indian heard the death cry and the fall;
 Still o'er the wild scene hung the funeral pall!
 What eye can pierce the darkness of the wave?
 What hand guide rescue through the roaring grave?
 Not for such craven questions pause the brave!
 Again the moon!—again the churchyard's green,
 Spire, hamlet, mead, and rill reclothe the scene!—
 But on the bridge no form, no life!—The beam
 Shoots wan and broken on the tortured stream;
 Vague, indistinct, what, yonder, moveth o'er
 The troubled tide, and struggles to the shore?
 Hark, where the sere bough of the tossing tree
 Snaps in the grasp of some strong agony,
 And the dull plunge, and stifled cry betray
 Where the grim water-fiend reclasps his prey!

Still shines the moon—still halts the panting storm,
 It moves again—the shadow shapes to form,
 Lo! where yon bank shelves gradual and the ray
 Silvers the reed, it cleaves its vigorous way;—

Saved from the deep, but happier far to save,
The foeman wrests the foeman from the grave!
Still shines the moon—still halts the storm!—above
His sons, looks down divine the Father-love!
Upon the Indian's breast droops Arden's head,
Its marble beauty rigid as the dead.

What skill so fondly tends the soul's eclipse,
Chafes the stiff limb, and breathes in breathless lips?
Woos back the flickering life, and when, once more,
The ebbing blood the wan cheek mantles o'er;
When stirs the pulse, when opes the glazing eye,
What voice of joy finds listeners in the sky?
“Bless thee, my God—this mercy thine!—he lives;
Look in my heart, forgive—for it forgives!”

Then, while yet clear the heaven, he flies—he gains
The nearest roof—prompt aid his prayer obtains;
Well known the noble stranger's mien—they bear
To the rude home, and ply the zealous care;
Life with the dawn comes sure, if faint and slow,
And all night long the foeman watch'd the foe?

Day dawns on earth, still darkness wraps the mind ;
Sleep pass'd, the waking is a veil more blind ;
The soul, scared roughly from its mansion, glides
O'er mazy wastes through which the meteor guides.

The startled menial, who alone of all
The hireling pomp that swarms in Arden's hall
Attends his lords,—dismay'd lest one so high,
Without all arts that fawn on death, should die,
Departs in haste to seek the subtler skill
Which Fashion charters with the right to kill,
And summons Lucy to the solemn room
To watch the father's life,—fast by the mother's tomb.
Meanwhile such facile arts as nature yields,
Draughts from the spring and simples from the field,
Learned in his savage youth, the Indian plies ;
The fever slakes, the cloudy darkness flies !
O'er the vex'd vision steals the lulling rest,
And Arden wakes to sense on Morvale's breast !

On Morvale's breast !—and through the noiseless door
A fearful footfall creeps—and, lo ! once more

Thou look'st, pale daughter, on thy father's foe!
Not with the lurid eye and lifted blow;
Not as when erst, between the murtherous blade
And the proud victim gleam'd the guardian maid—
Thy post is his!—that breast the prop supplies
That thine should yield;—as thine so watch those eyes,
Wistful and moist, that waning life above;
Recall the Heathen's hate!—behold the Christian's love!

The learned leech proclaims the danger o'er;
When life is safe, can fate then harm no more?

The danger past for Arden, but for you
Who watch the couch—what danger threatens anew!
How meet in pious duty and fond care,
In hours when through the eye the heart is bare?
How join in those soft sympathies—and yet
The earlier link, the tenderer bond forget?
How can the soul the magnet-charm withstand,
Whence chance brings look to look, and hand to hand!
No, Indian, no,—if yet thy power divine
Above the laws of our low world be thine;

Where yet, perchance, while happier Suffering slept,
Its mournful vigil tender Duty kept,
One prayer!—what mercy taught us prayer!—as dews
On drooping herbs—as sleep tired life renews,
As dreams that lead and lap our griefs in Heaven,
Prayer to the Soul, dew, sleep, and dream, is given!
So bowed, not broken, and with manly will,
Onwards he strode, slow up the labouring hill!

If Lucy mourned his absence, not before
Her sire's dim eyes the face of grief she wore;
Haply her woman heart divined the spell
Of her own power, by flight proclaim'd too well;
And not in hours like these may self control
The generous empire of a noble soul:
Lo, her first thought, first duty—the soft reign
Of Woman—patience by the bed of pain!
As mute the father, yet to him made clear
The cause of flight untold to Lucy's ear;
Thus ran the lines that met, at morn, his eyes:—
“Farewell! my place a daughter now supplies!—

Thou hast pass'd the gates of Death, and bright once more
Smile round thy steps the sunlight and the shore !
Farewell ; and if a soul, where hatred's gall
Melts into pardon that embalmeth all,
Can with forgiveness bless thee ;—from remorse
Can pluck the stone which interrupts the course
Of thought to God ;—and bid the waters rest
Calm in Heaven's smile,—poor fellow-man, be blest !
I, that can aid no more, now need an aid
Against myself ; by mine own thoughts dismay'd ;
I dare not face thy child—I may not dare
To commune with my heart—thy child is there !
I hear a voice that whispers hope, and start
In shame, to shun the tempter and depart !
How vile the pardon that I yield would seem,
If shap'd and colour'd from the egoist's dream ;
A barter'd compromise with thoughts that take
The path of conscience but for passion's sake—
If with the pardon I could say—' The Tomb
Devours the Past, so let the Moment bloom,
And see Calantha's brother reconcil'd,
Kneel to Calantha's lover, for his child !'

It may not be ; sad sophists were our vain
Desires, if right were not a code so plain ;
In good or ill leave casuists on shelf,
‘ He never errs who sacrifices self ! ’ ”

Great Natures, Arden, thy strange lot to know
And lose !—twin souls thy mistress and thy foe !
How flash’d they, high and starry, through the dull
World’s reeking air—earnest and beautiful !
Erring perchance, and yet divinely blind,
Such hero errors purify our kind !
One noble fault that springs from SELF’S disdain
May oft more grace in Angel eyes obtain,
Than a whole life, without a seeming flaw,
Which served but Heaven, because of Earth in awe,
Which in each act has loss or profit weighed,
And kept with Virtue the accounts of Trade !
He too was born, lost Idler, to be great,
The sins that dwarf’d, he had a soul to hate.
Ambition, Ease, Example had beguiled,
And our base world in fawning had defiled ;

Yet still, contrasting all he did, he dream'd ;
And through the Worldling's life the Poet gleam'd.
His eye not blind to Virtue ; to his ear
Still spoke the music of the banished sphere ;
Still in his thought the Ideal, though obscured,
Sham'd the rank meteor which his sense allur'd.
Wreck if he was, the ruin yet betray'd
The shatter'd fane for gods departed made ;
And still, through weeds neglected and o'erthrown,
The blurr'd inscription show'd the altar stone !
So scorn'd he not, as folly or as pride,
The lofty code which made the Indian's guide ;
But from that hour a subtle change came o'er
The thoughts he veil'd, the outward mien he wore ;
A mournful, weary gloom, a pall'd distaste
Of all the joys so warmly once embraced.
His eye no more look'd onward ; but its gaze
Rests where Remorse a life misspent surveys :
What costly treasures strew that waste behind ;
What whirlwinds daunt the soul that sows the wind !
By the dark shape of what he is, serene
Stands the bright ghost of what he might have been :

Here the vast loss, and there the worthless gain—
Vice scorn'd, yet woo'd and virtue lov'd in vain!

'Tis said, the Nightingale, who hears the thrill
Of some rich lute, made vocal by sweet skill,
To match the music strains its wild essay,
Feels its inferior art, and envying, pines away :
So, waked at last, and scarcely now confest,
Pined the still Poet in the Worldling's breast !
So with the Harmony of Good, compared
Its lesser self—so languish'd and despaired.

Awhile, from land to land he idly roved,
And join'd life's movement with a heart unmoved.
No more loud cities ring with Arden's name,
Applaud his faults, and call his fashion " Fame !"
Disgust with all things robes him as he goes,
In that pale Virtue, Vice, when weary, knows !
Yet his, at least, one rescue from the past ;
His one pure gem ; his Lucy's love at last !
That bed of pain o'er which she had watch'd and wept—
That grave where Love forgot its wrongs and slept ?

That touching sorrow and that still remorse
 Unlock'd her heart, and gave the stream its course.
 From her own grief, by griefs more dark beguil'd
 Rose the consoling Angel in the Child !
 Yet still the calm disease, whose mute decay
 No leech arrests, crept gradual round its prey !
 Death came, came gently, on his daughter's breast
 Murm'ring, " Remember where this dust should rest."
 They bear the last Lord of that haughty race
 Where winds the wave round Mary's dwelling-place
 And side by side (oh, be it in the sky
 As in the earth !)—the long-divided lie !

Doth life's last act one wrong at least repair—
 His nameless child to wealth at least the heir ?
 So Arden's will decreed—so signed the hand ;
 So ran the text—not so Law rules the land :
 " I do bequeath unto my child,"*—that word

* If a man wishes to leave a portion to his natural child, his lawyer will tell him to name the child, as if it were a stranger to his blood. If he says, " I leave to John Thompson, of Baker street, 10,000*l.*," John Thompson may proba-

Alone on strangers has the wealth conferr'd.
 O'erjoyed, Law's heirs the legal blunder read,
 And Justice cancels Nature from the deed.
 O moral world ! deal sternly if thou wilt
 With the warm weakness as the wily guilt !
 But spare the harmless ! Wherefore shall the child
 Be from the pale which shelters Crime exiled ?

bly get the legacy ; if he says, " I leave to my son John Thompson, of Baker street, 10,000*l*," and the said John Thomson is his son, (a natural one,) it is a hundred to one if John Thompson ever touches a penny ! Up springs the Inhuman Law, with its multiform obstacles, quibbles, and objections—proof of identity—evidence of birth !—Many and many a natural child has thus been robbed and swindled out of his sole claim upon redress—his sole chance of subsistence. In most civilized countries a Father is permitted to own the offspring, whom, unless he does so, he has wronged at its very birth—whom, if he do not so, he wrongs irremediably ; with us the error is denied reparation and innocence is sentenced to outlawry. Our Laws, with relation to illegitimate children, are the most infamous violation of Humanity, of Justice, of Christian Piety, which Hypocrisy has yet inflicted upon the rights of Nature, and the Heart of Man.

Why heap such barriers round the sole redress
Which sin can give to sinless wretchedness?
Why must the veriest stranger thrust aside
Our flesh—our blood, because a name's denied!
Give all thou hast to whomsoe'er thou please,
Foe, alien, knave, as whim so Law decrees;
But if thy heart speaks, if thy conscience cries—
“I give my child”—the Law thy voice belies;
All meshes balk all effort that atones,
And Justice robs the wretch that Nature owns!

So abject, so despoil'd, so penniless,
Stood thy love-born in the world's wilderness,
O Lord of lands and towers, and princely sway!
O Dust, from whom with breath has pass'd away
The humblest privilege the beggar finds
In rags that wrap his infant from the winds!

In the poor hamlet where her grandsire died,
Where sleeps her mother by the magnate's side,

The orphan found a home. Her story known,
Men's hearts allow the right men's laws disown.
Though lost the birthright, and denied the name,
Her pastor-grandsire's virtues shield from shame,
As flowers, which night, when day is o'er, perfume,
Breathes the sweet memory from a good man's tomb.
Pity seeks kind pretext to pour its balms,
And yields light toils that saves the pride from alms.
A soft respect the orphan's steps attends,
And the sharp thorn at least the rose defends.
So flows o'ershadowed, but not darksome, by,
Her life's lone stream—the banks admit the sky.
Day's quiet taskwork o'er, when ev'ning gray
List the last carol on the quivering spray,
When lengthening shadows glass the distant hill,
And the near spire, upon the lulléd rill ;
Her sole delight with pensive step to glide
Along the path that winds the wave beside,
A moment pausing on the bridge, to mark
Perchance the moonlight vista through the dark :

Or watch the eddy where the wavelets play
Round the chaf'd stone that checks their happy way,
Then onward stealing, vanish from the view,
Where the star shimmers on the solemn yew,
And dim boughs broadening o'er the mystic sod,
Clasp the blind caves, which are the path to God!

Moons pass'd—and May is in the earth and sky?
May, Time's young darling with the mirthful eye;
With whose light locks, flower-crowned, the Graybeard
toys,
And half forgets his mission in her joys;—
May, with her choir of happy birds above;
May, whose least whisper wakes the world to love;
May, when the Young see hope and pleasure flower
Out of each leaf that weaves her bridal bower,
And Age itself, made young,—through amorous boughs,
Sees the lost smile and lists the silenced vows!
And does not May, lone child, revive in thee,
Blossom and bud and mystic melody;
Does not the heart, like earth, imbibe the ray?
Does not the year's recall thy life's sweet May?

When like an altar to some happy bride,
Shone all creation by the loved one's side ?

Yes, Exile, yes—that Empire is thine own,
Rove where thou wilt, awaits thee still thy throne !
Lo, where the paling cheek, the unconscious sigh,
The slower footstep, and the heavier eye,
Betray the burden of sweet thoughts and mute,
The slight tree bows beneath the golden fruit !

'Tis eve. The orphan gains the holy ground,
And halts and harks ;—the boughs that circle round
Vex'd by no wind, yet rustle with a sound,
As if that gentle foot had scared some lone
Unwonted foot more timid than her own !
All still once more ; perchance some daunted bird,
That loves the night, the murmuring leaves had stirr'd ?
She nears the tomb—amaze !—what hand unknown
Has placed those pious flowers upon the stone !
Why beats her heart ; why hath the electric mind,
Whose act, whose hand, whose presence there, divined ?

Why dreading, yearning, turn those eyes to meet
 The adored, the lost?—Behold him at her feet!
 His, those dark eyes that seek his own through tears,
 His hand that clasps, and his the voice she hears,
 Broken and faltering—“Is the trial past?
 Here, by the dead, art thou made mine at last?
 Far—in far lands I heard thy tale!—And thou
 Orphan and lone!—no bar between us now!
 No Arden now calls up the wrong'd and lost;
 Lo, in this grave appeas'd the upbraiding ghost!
 Orphan, I am thy father now!—Bereft
 Of all beside,—this heart at least is left.
 Forgive, forgive—Oh, can'st thou yet bestow
 One thought on him, to whom thou art all below?
 Who could desert but to remember more?
 Can'st thou the Heaven, the exile lost, restore?
 Can'st thou——”

The orphan bow'd her angel head;
 Breath blent with breath—her soul her silence said;
 Eye unto eye, and heart to heart reveal'd;
 And lip on lip the eternal nuptials seal'd!

The Moon breaks forth—one silver stream of light
Glides from its fount in heaven along the night—
Flows in still splendour thro' the funeral gloom
Of yews,—and broadens as it clasps the tomb—
Thro' the calm glory hosts as calm above
Look on the the grave—and by the grave is LOVE!

THE END.

NEW BOOKS IN PREPARATION.

The following Works will soon be issued by

CAREY & HART.

PHILADELPHIA.

I.

TIERS' NAPOLEON. VOL. II.

Uniform with the fine and coarse Editions, in cloth gilt and cloth gilt backs. (Now ready.)

II.

THE POTTLETON LEGACY.

A STORY OF TOWN AND COUNTRY.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

Complete in one volume, 160 pages, price 25 cts.

III.

CON CREGAN.

THE IRISH GIL BLAS.
BY SAMUEL LOVER.

IV.

THE MANUFACTURE OF IRON.

IN ALL ITS VARIOUS BRANCHES.
BY FREDERIC OVERMAN.

Mining Engineer.

Illustrated by 150 Engravings.

V.

THE COTTON SPINNER,

AND CARDING-MASTER'S ASSISTANT.

BY ROBERT H. BAIRD.

VI.

MEMOIRS OF MARIE ANTOINETTE.

BY MADAM CAMPAN.

(Uniform with "Memoirs of Josephine.")

In 2 vols. 12mo., cloth, extra gilt.

VII.

PHYSICAL ASTRONOMY.

BY SIR JOHN HERSCHELL.

In one volume 12mo.

VIII.

THE NEW TIMON.

A Romance of London.

BY SIR E. BULWER LYTTON.

Third American from the 4th London Edition.

IX.

MEMOIRS OF ANNE BOLEYN,

Queen of Henry VIII.

BY MISS BENGER.

X.

THE DRAWING-ROOM SCRAP-BOOK FOR 1850.

Elegantly Illustrated by 20 superb Plates.

In 1 vol. quarto, richly gilt.

XI.

SOUTHEY'S MISCELLANIES AND ESSAYS.

(Uniform with "Macaulay's," and "Carlyle's Miscellanies.")

XII.

LEAVES FROM THE NOTE-BOOK

OF A

MISSISSIPPI STEAM DOCTOR.

With Illustrations by Darley.

XIII.

THE RUBY FOR 1850.

With 10 Engravings.

XIV.

PRINCESS LAMBALLE'S MEMOIRS.

BY A LADY OF RANK.

Uniform with "Memoirs of Josephine."

NEW WORKS PUBLISHED BY
CAREY AND HART,

PHILADELPHIA.

THE FEMALE POETS OF AMERICA.
BY RUFUS W. GRISWOLD.

In One Volume, Octavo.

WITH SIX FINELY ENGRAVED ILLUSTRATIONS.

“Mr. Griswold has made greater and more important contributions towards preserving a record of the literature of America, than any other man in the country, and we are happy to know that the public have shown a just appreciation of his efforts.

“In the present volume he has given selections from more than ninety of the poetesses of America, the writings and even the names of some of whom had almost been lost in the lapse of time and on the dusty shelves of old libraries. Accompanying these selections are ably and vigorously written biographical and critical notices of these authoresses and their poetry.

“The selection will be found a rare addition to our literature, and we have seen none so full, both as regards the specimens and the information contained in the remarks of the editor.”—Hunt's Merchant's Magazine.

“Dr. Griswold has performed the duties of his undertaking with a diligence, a taste, and a discrimination which we doubt whether any man in this country could have equalled.”—Home Journal.

“Which cannot fail to please the intelligent reader.”—Baltimore American.

“Like Shakspeare, it is not for a day, but for all time.”—N. Y. Mirror.

“Anything from Mr. Griswold is welcomed as coming from an old and tried friend of the public.”—Newark Advertiser.

THE DEERSTALKERS:

OR,

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

A TALE OF THE SOUTH-WESTERN COUNTIES,

BY FRANK FORESTER,

AUTHOR OF “THE WARWICK WOODLANDS,” “MY SHOOTING-BOX,” “FIELD SPORTS OF AMERICA,” ETC.

ILLUSTRATED BY THE AUTHOR.

In One Volume, 12mo. Price 50 Cents.

THE LIFE
OF
MAJOR GENERAL PETER MUHLENBERG,
OF THE REVOLUTIONARY ARMY.

BY HENRY A. MUHLENBERG.

IN ONE VOLUME, 12MO.

WITH A PORTRAIT.

“The perusal of this volume has proved a great treat to us.”

“We rather devoured than read it, and, in two sittings, every syllable and word in the book came under our eye, and we regretted that the volume was not twice as large. It is the General's military life merely which is narrated; but this is exceedingly interesting, and in it many important Revolutionary incidents are detailed which have never before fallen under our notice. The author has executed his task with considerable ability; he is never tedious, always interesting and instructive, and the public will doubtless evince their high appreciation of the merits of the publication by buying up the first edition in a very short time.”—Lutheran Observer.

~~~~~
ELEMENTS OF AGRICULTURE;

FOR THE USE OF PRIMARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOLS.

BY L. BENTZ, OF FRANCE,

DIRECTOR OF THE NORMAL PRIMARY SCHOOL OF THE MUERTHE, MEMBER OF ROYAL AND CENTRAL SOCIETIES, OF NANCY AND AURILLIAC,

AND

A. J. CRETEN DE ROVILLE,

PROFESSOR OF RURAL ECONOMY IN THE SAME SCHOOL, MEMBER OF AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NANCY, ETC. ETC.

TRANSLATED AND ADAPTED TO THE USE OF THE RURAL PRIMARY SCHOOLS OF THE UNITED STATES,

BY F. G. SKINNER.

“The above work fully supplies all these deficiencies, and we endorse the remarks made by C. Mandel in his report to the Central Agricultural Society of the Muerthe in France, that the teacher may with confidence draw on its pages for all that seems to be of primary necessity for himself first, and then for the children or adults committed to his care. He might with equal justice have added, that it should be a text-book in every school in our country; that every agriculturist would, in studying its contents, derive pleasure from their perusal, and profit from their practical application.”—Baltimore American.

A MAN MADE OF MONEY.

A NOVEL.

BY DOUGLAS JERROLD.

AUTHOR OF "MRS. CAUDLE'S CURTAIN LECTURES," "STORY OF A FEATHER," ETC. ETC.

Complete in One Volume. Price 25 Cents.

"The very commencement of the volume testifies to having been written by the same hand that penned the "Candle Lectures," of popular memory. Its accuracy as a daguerrotype of domestic happiness can be testified to by more than one husband who suffers his family to live beyond their means, that the wife and daughters may struggle up to a circle a little above their own."—Saturday Post.

---

V A L E R I E,

A TALE.

BY THE LATE CAPTAIN MARRYAT, R. N.,

AUTHOR OF "PETER SIMPLE," ETC. ETC.

COMPLETED BY A LITERARY GENTLEMAN.

In One Volume. Price 25 Cents.

"A new work by Capt. Marryat must always be attractive. This is his last work. He commenced it, but death, which came upon him whilst he was engaged in it, did not allow him to complete it. 'A literary gentleman, has taken it in charge, and finished the story. There is an invention, a humour, and a vigour about all Capt. Marryat's writings which gave to them a particular charm, that at once takes hold of the reader and carries him to the end.'—Western Continent.

---

STRAY SUBJECTS, ARRESTED AND BOUND OVER;

BEING THE FUGITIVE OFFSPRING OF THE

"OLD 'UN," AND THE "YOUNG 'UN."

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY DARLEY.

"The two wittiest sketch-writers in the country."

"Sketches which have had a wide circulation and popularity."—N. Y. Sunday Atlas.

The Encyclopedia of Chemistry.

THEORETICAL AND PRACTICAL.

PRESENTING A COMPLETE AND EXTENDED VIEW OF THE PRESENT STATE OF

CHEMICAL SCIENCE.

BY JAMES C. BOOTH,

MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY; PROFESSOR OF TECHNICAL CHEMISTRY IN THE FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, ETC. ETC.

ASSISTED BY

CAMPBELL MORFIT,

PRACTICAL AND ANALYTIC CHEMIST; AUTHOR OF "APPLIED CHEMISTRY," "CHEMICAL MANIPULATIONS," ETC.

---

SHEEP HUSBANDRY IN THE SOUTH;

COMPRISING A TREATISE ON THE

ACCLIMATION OF SHEEP IN THE SOUTHERN STATES,

AND

AN ACCOUNT OF THE DIFFERENT BREEDS;

ALSO,

A Complete Manual of Breeding, Summer and Winter
Management, and of the Treatment of Diseases.

WITH PORTRAITS AND OTHER ILLUSTRATIONS.

IN A SERIES OF LETTERS FROM

HENRY S. RANDALL, ESQ.,

OF COURTLAND VILLAGE, N. Y.

CAREY & HART HAVE RECENTLY PUBLISHED
A NARRATIVE OF THE
LATE EXPEDITION TO THE DEAD SEA,
FROM A DIARY BY ONE OF THE PARTY.

EDITED BY EDWARD P. MONTAGUE,
(Attached to the United States Expedition Ship Supply) *

WITH INCIDENTS OF TRAVEL FROM THE TIME OF THE SAILING OF THE EXPEDITION,
IN 1847, TILL THE RETURN OF THE SAME, IN 1848, ACCOMPANIED BY A COLOURED MAP OF THE HOLY LAND.

In One Vol., Post Octavo, 348 pages, Cloth Gilt, $1 00.

NOTICES OF THE WORK.

“The results of that Expedition, we are satisfied from what has already appeared in the public prints upon the subject, are of a character highly honourable to the American Navy, and of great importance to general science. To that Navy, the world is indebted for the first complete exploration of that distant and unknown sea, whose dangers had baffled, hitherto, the enthusiasm of individual enterprise, and the well-concerted plans of more than one national undertaking. The veil which has for ages hidden its mysterious coasts from the eyes of the scientific world, has at length been raised, and its bays and headlands, its shores and its soundings, its tributary streams and bordering mountains now lie before us mapped out with minutest precision; while its geological, mineral, and vegetable peculiarities are equally open to our closest scrutiny, from the Judean Mountains to the rocky summits of Moab; from where the Jordan loses its waves in the salt and sluggish flood, to where the mingling waters of El Jeib are ruffled by the hot breath of the Arabian winds, and will soon be familiar ground; and the pilgrim of science, the student of sacred history, and the lover of oriental research, may in the quiet seclusion of their homes, traverse with confidence its deserted shores, and sound its dense depths, and walk its chrysalized floor. When we reflect that this hazardous enterprise has been accomplished by a handful of American seamen, we cannot forbear the expression of a just pride in the service which originated, and which has so successfully prosecuted this important design.”—Cummings' Evening Bulletin.

“Messrs. Carey & Hart have just published a Narrative of the late Expedition to the Dead Sea, compiled from the Diary of one of the party. It is filled with incidents and adventures, and is handsomely illustrated with maps, &c., and altogether one of the most interesting books we have lately come across.”—Pittsburg Daily Despatch.

“It occupies a volume of over three hundred pages, and is from a Diary by one of the party. It is illustrated by a Map of the Holy Land, handsomely coloured, and furnishes interesting sketches of incidents and adventures, from the time of the sailing of the Expedition in November, 1847, until the return of the same in December, 1848. This is one of the most entertaining publications of the day. It is printed in good style, and is handsomely bound.”—Phila. Inquirer and Courier.

"This is a very agreeable and entertaining work, presenting life in new aspects, even where, as on shipboard, it has been already so much written about. The deeper interest of the Narrative begins with the start, or rather the first attempt to start, over the mountains of Syria for the great scene of the labours of the Expedition to the Dead Sea. The voyage from Lake Tiberias, where the boats safely arrived by land-carriage, down the rapid and winding Jordan, with the leaps over the numerous falls; the spectacle of the thousands of pilgrims bathing in the Jordan, in the celebration of the baptism of Jesus; the explorations of the mysterious Dead Sea; all this is described in a rapid, sketchy manner indeed, but furnishing a good outline of things."—Christian Register.

"The book is an interesting one, and among persons who take pleasure in the explorations of this Expedition will meet with ready sale."—The City Item.

"It tells the incidents of the voyage, and of the explorations of the party, in an easy, gossiping style, and is altogether a most entertaining book. The writer seems to have settled in his own mind that the Dead Sea covers the site of Sodom and Gomorrah, and even believes that the pillar of salt is the true representation of Lot's wife. Whether he is right or wrong, it will trouble any one to prove that his opinions are incorrect."—Evening Bulletin.

---

LIFE OF ROBESPIERRE.

THE LIFE OF MAXIMILIAN ROBESPIERRE,

WITH

EXTRACTS FROM HIS CORRESPONDENCE.

BY G. H. LEWES,

AUTHOR OF THE BIOGRAPHICAL HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY, ETC., 12 mo.

"This is a carefully written biography of a remarkable man. The author has had access to the best published and unpublished materials for his work, and he has executed it with great ability and impartiality."—Scott's Weekly.

"The work is a lively and entertaining one, and will be generally read and admired for the candour and sprightliness of the detail."—The City Item.

"We apprehend that from this volume will be gathered a more thorough knowledge of Robespierre's character than has yet been accessible to the general reader."—Commercial Advertiser.

CAREY & HART, Publishers,
No. 126 Chestnut Street.

---

THE MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS

OF

LEIGH HUNT.

IN ONE VOLUME.

GENIUS AND CHARACTER

OF

BURNS.

BY

PROFESSOR WILSON.

AUTHOR OF "MISCELLANIES," ETC.

---

THREE HOURS

OR

THE VIGIL OF LOVE,
AND OTHER POEMS.

BY

MRS. SARAH J. HALE.

(In One Volume, 16mo. Price 75 cents.)

---

TAM'S FORTNIGHT RAMBLE,

AND OTHER POEMS.

BY

THOMAS MACKELLAR.

(In One Volume, 16mo. Price 75 cents.)

"Many truly beautiful extracts might be made from the miscellaneous poems. The following we have read over twice: there is such a sweet naturalness in it, so much friendliness, and good verse withal, that a man may read it over a dozen times, and find it somehow fresh in his heart the last time."—The Nineteenth Century.

---

MY DREAMS.

BY

LOUISA S. M'CORD.

A VOLUME OF POEMS.

(In One Volume, 16mo. Price 75 cents.)

HISTORICAL AND SECRET MEMOIRS

OF THE

EMPRESS JOSEPHINE,

(Marie Rose Tascher de la Pagerie,)

FIRST WIFE OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

BY

Mlle. M. A. LE NORMAND.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY JACOB M. HOWARD, ESQ.

(In 2 vols., 700 pages, muslin extra gilt.)

"It possesses great intrinsic interest. It is a chequered exhibition of the undress life of Napoleon. All the glitter and pomp and dust of glory which bewilder the mind is laid: and we behold not the hero, the emperor, the guide and moulder of destiny, but a poor sickly child and creature of circumstance—affrighted by shadows and tortured by straws."—Phila. City Item.

"This is one of the most interesting works of the day, containing a multiplicity of incidents in the life of Josephine and her renowned husband, which have never before been in print."—N. O. Times.

"This is a work of high and commanding interest, and derives great additional value from the fact asserted by the authoress, that the greater portion of it was written by the Empress herself. It has a vast amount of information on the subject of Napoleon's career, with copies of original documents not to be found elsewhere, and with copious notes at the end of the work"—N. O. Com. Bulletin.

"Affords the reader a clearer insight into the private character of Napoleon than he can obtain through any other source."—Baltimore American.

"They are agreeably and well written; and it would be strange if it were not so, enjoying as Josephine did, familiar colloquial intercourse with the most distinguished men and minds of the age. The work does not, apparently, suffer by translation."—Baltimore Patriot.

"It is the history—in part the secret history, written by her own hand with rare elegance and force, and at times with surpassing pathos—of the remarkable woman who, by the greatness of her spirit was worthy to be the wife of the soaring Napoleon. It combines all the value of authentic history with the absorbing interest of an autobiography or exciting romance."—Item.

THIS BOOK IS DUE ON THE LAST DATE
STAMPED BELOW

AN INITIAL FINE OF 25 CENTS
WILL BE ASSESSED FOR FAILURE TO RETURN
THIS BOOK ON THE DATE DUE. THE PENALTY
WILL INCREASE TO 50 CENTS ON THE FOURTH
DAY AND TO $1.00 ON THE SEVENTH DAY OVERDUE.

JUL 27 1940

REC'D

APR 15 '68 - 5 PM

LOAN DEPT.

New Timor

n

DEC 8 1920

Harris

JUL 12 1920

Chroete

Sept 27

Pearce

MAY 1 1920

Rawlins

Dec 20 '45

Mending

Mar 7 '46

411351

Lytton

955

L998

12

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARY

