London, May 19.—The press is evidently respecting Premier Bonar Law's desire that a complete silence be maintained as to the nature of his malady until he himself authorizes a statement.

It has now become known that the Premier has been fighting his complaint ever since he assumed office and it is not thought possible he can continue much longer.

Sir Thomas Horder, who is treating Mr. Bonar Law, is a well-known cancer specialist.

$1,500 ON HEAD OF DESPERADO

Rewards Offered for Capture of L. Rogers in Ontario

Police and Citizens Combing North Bay District

North Bay, Ont., May 19.—The Province of Ontario will pay the sum of $1,000 for the capture of Leo Rogers, it was announced here to-day by Chief of Police Morbey of North Bay, who received the announcement from Maj.-General Victor Williams, Commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police, over the long distance telephone.

The addition of this sum to the bounty of $500 for Rogers dead, or alive offered by the town of North Bay brings the total reward on the head of the fleeing murderer to $1,500. Despite this and an all-night chase in which a dozen provincial policemen and nearly a score of specially sworn-in constables and volunteer pursuers took part, he is still at large.

Pursuit Continued.

North Bay, Ont., May 19.—Leo Rogers was still at large this morning. The police, both local and provincial, assisted by many citizen volunteers, continued their pursuit early to-day, according to information brought in from the scene of yesterday's sensational shooting.

From Toronto.

Toronto, May 19.—A. Cuddy, Commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police, announced this morning that the fugitive desperado at large near North Bay, was not captured by noon to-day, a detail of Toronto officers would be sent to join the posse out after Rogers.

Rifle and Revolvers

North Bay, Ont., May 19.—Armed with a Winchester rifle and two revolvers, Leo Rogers, the desperado who escaped from the courtroom here on Wednesday rather than face a comparatively minor charge of carrying concealed weapons, is still at large. One of his pursuers was killed and another is in hospital seriously injured.

Police and citizen volunteers are trying to track down the fugitive, who is believed to be in the area of the shooting. "They'll never take me alive," make him a man to be feared.

Escaped From Court

Rogers was arraigned in North Bay police court on Wednesday morning on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. He produced a small creek, like a revolver from his breast, held up the court and made his escape.

Rogers had sworn to "get Plainclothesman Fred Lefebvre, Chief of Police Morbey and Magistrate Weemer." Evidently urged on by a deacon at the trial, he carried out these three men, he designedly came into touch with the officers again after making a clear getaway on Wednesday afternoon.

Detective Killed

Shortly after daybreak yesterday Fred Lefebvre and Rogers suddenly found themselves facing each other on opposite sides of a small creek. His rifle spoke almost simultaneously, but it was Lefebvre who fell fatally injured with a bullet in his abdomen. Rogers fled to the hospital.

CHINESE BANDITS ARE OFFERED A PLACE IN THE SHANTUNG ARMY

Hope Expressed Agreement For Release of Foreign Captives Will Be Reached Soon; Telegrams to Peking Said Negotiations Might Be Broken Off.

Peking, May 19.—Telegrams received late to-day by the United States Legation here have increased the hope that an agreement soon will be reached for the release of the foreign captives held by the Suohow bandits. Governor Tien Chung Yu of Shantung Province has sent a messenger to the hills with army commissions for the bandit chiefs and an agreement to incorporate the entire bandit force in the Shantung army.

Peking, May 19.—Telegrams to the Chinese Government from Tsaohwang, near which fifteen foreign captives are held by the mountain outlaws of Shantung, indicate that the Government representatives are on the point of abandoning negotiations for the release of the hostages because of the bandits' extravagant demands.

The latest such terms were that troops should be withdrawn from the entire province of Shantung, the bandits to constitute the provincial military force.

It is intimated that Wu Yu Lin, Minister of Communications, who has been in charge of the governmental parleys, will be recalled to Peking.

Threat Made. London, May 19.—Marcel Berube, recently released by the Suohow train bandits, is journeying to Peking to present an ultimatum to the Chinese Government on behalf of the bandits, says a Reuter dispatch from Tsaohwang. The ultimatum, according to the dispatch, is that the Government troops besieging the bandits must be withdrawn by next Tuesday, failing which two of the American and British captives will be killed.

A Shanghai dispatch said: "Unless the foreign powers unite in forcing the Chinese Government to realize that the Suohow bandits are ready to forfeit their own lives and those of their captives in their determination to have their demands received here to-night (Friday) from Leon Friedmann, one of the foreigners held in the stronghold of the brigands."

EX-PREMIER HUNTS AT ANOTHER WAR

Mr. Lloyd George Strongly Assails France

SAYS SHE SLAPS OPPORTUNITY'S FACE

Foch Putting the Allied Armies in Order

BY THE RIGHT HONORABLE DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, O. M., M. P. (Former British Premier)

London, May 19.—The French and Belgian governments have slipped another opportunity in the face.

To make that slip sound as well as sting, they accompanied the rejection of the German offer by a savage sentence of fifteen years' imprisonment on the head of the greatest industrial concern in the Ruhr, if not in Europe.

Because he ordered the works' siren to sound "cease work" for one day when French troops occupied the place.

There's a swagger of brutality about that sentence which betokens recklessness. It came at a moment when the German government had just made an offer of peace, and when that ally of France who had made the deepest sacrifice in the war to save her, and Belgium from ruin was urging the French government to treat that offer at least as a starting point for discussion.

The answer was to treat the German note as an offense; to promulgate a penal sentence which outrages every sense of decency throughout the world, and to refuse to permit an ally who has been so faithful in time of trouble for France and Belgium even the courtesy of discussion on the tenor of the reply to be given to a note that so vitally concerned the interests of all the allies without exception.

Russian arrogance in its crudest days furnished no such example of clumsy and short sighted ineptitude. It gives point to Lord Robert Cecil's observation in the House of Commons that it is very difficult to reconcile the French attitude with the conviction that the French government desires a settlement.

What will the German offer? It proposed to limit the total obligations of Germany in cash and kind to thirty milliards of gold marks, to be raised by loans on international money markets at normal conditions, in installments of twenty milliards up to July 1, 1927; five milliards up to July 1, 1929; five milliards up to July 1, 1931.

There were provisions for the payment of interest from July, 1923, onward, and agreements entered into for delivery of payments in kind on account of reparation, to be carried out in accordance with arrangements already made. Then came this important provision. After the paragraph in which it was argued that the above limits of the whole reparations problem to an international commission uninfluenced by political considerations, as suggested by state secretary Hughes. It further stated that the German government would prepare and devise suitable measures in order that the whole German national resources should participate "in guaranteeing the service of the loan." Guarantees were also offered for deliveries in kind.

In order to insure a permanent peace between France and Germany the note proposed an agreement that all contentious questions arising between them in future should be referred to arbitration. The note finally stipulated that evacuation of the Ruhr be made "within the shortest space of time," and that restoration of the treaty conditions in the Rhine-land constitute "an essential leading up to negotiations on the basis of the above ideas."

100,000 LOSS IN AUSTRALIA FIRE

MANY IRISH IN SCOTLAND NOW

Report Issued by General Assembly of Church of Scotland

London, May 19.—(Canadian Press Cable)—A striking report has been issued by the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland with regard to the large Irish population in Scotland. The General Assembly declares that it is incumbent on the Scottish population to consider the grave situation in their native land before it is too late and devise means which, while doing no injustice to the Irish people whom they allow to come into their country, will preserve Scotland for the Scottish race.

It is explained that the influx of Irishmen began in the Sixteenth Century, when there was a demand for cheap labor in consequence of the industrial development of Scotland. Crowds of Irishmen with their families migrated to Scotland and subsequently invited their friends and relations to follow them. In the meantime there was a great exodus of the Scottish race to other countries.

According to the Roman Catholic directory for Glasgow in the West of Scotland, there are 125,000 Irish in that city in Irish.

Almost Double. In the last forty years the Irish population in Scotland has risen from 127,000 to 254,000.

"It is a notable fact," the report states, "that whenever the Irish population reaches a certain figure in any community the tendency of the Scottish population is to leave as quickly as they can. Many areas of large cities and not a few villages and even small towns are becoming exclusively Irish."

"It is, in fact, a sober, restrained prophecy to say that through the operation of various factors now at work, namely, the immigration of Irish and emigration of Scots, with the disinclination of Scots to work alongside of the Irish and live among them, the great plain of Scotland stretching from Glasgow in the West to Dundee and Edinburgh in the East will soon be dominated by the Irish race."

RIGHT TO ORGANIZE WAS DISCUSSED

Labor Question Debated By House of Commons

Ottawa, May 19.—Discussion in the House of Commons of the right of labor to organize gave rise to a hint from Premier King of the possibility of legislation on the subject. It came up yesterday afternoon on a motion for adjournment by A. W. Neil, Independent, Comox-Alberni, who complained that the Powell River Paper Company, whose plant is about 100 miles north of Vancouver, had notified the local Union of Paperworkers that unless it should surrender its union charter by Sunday next all the members of the union would be discharged.

The resolution declared that in the absence of a strike this notification constituted an attack on the right of any Canadian worker to join a legitimate union. The motion was seconded by J. S. Woodsworth, Labor, Centre Winnipeg. Told of Incidents. Mr. Neil stated that this paper company, which was located north of Vancouver, had provided good houses and sanitary arrangements at reasonable rental for its employees. Unfortunately the company, which was owned by American capital, had the idea that its employees were practically cattle and that they should only work for the company, but not think for themselves. An employee who had gone to a political convention had been dismissed, he said. A clergyman whose views were too democratic for the company had been told that the house he occupied, which was company property, was needed for another purpose and he had to leave though his parishioners were quite satisfied to have him stay.

Mr. Neil said he thought the time had gone past when it would be necessary to defend the right of labor to organize. If this union had to give up its charter its members would drift into Bolshevism. William Irvine, Labor, Calgary East, said the men were not likely to give up without a struggle, and as the principle involved affected labor throughout the country, it was unlikely that countrywide organizations would submit.

Other Towns. F. Stork, Liberal, Skeena, supported Mr. Neil's motion. He had in his riding, he said, several towns which were owned and controlled by the companies operating in them. In these towns the company exercised entire control and could refuse entry to any person it preferred not to admit. This did not make for good citizenship. Premier's Statement. Premier King declared that if the facts were as represented, it should be intimated to the company that the Canadian Parliament had given its adherence to articles of the Treaty of Versailles, one of which recognized the right of association for all lawful purposes.

"If that is not sufficient," the Prime Minister added, "I shall be very much surprised if the Parliament of Canada cannot find some means of successfully dealing with the question." Statement by Murdock. No official advice of the alleged action of the Powell River Paper Company had been received, declared James Murdock, Minister of Labor. Mr. Murdock was rather uncertain what action the Labor Department or Parliament could take in the matter. A large number of people appeared to think the Industrial Disputes Act gave the right to the Government to exercise control of cases of this kind. This was hardly the case, however.

One of the labor principles laid down in the Treaty of Versailles was association for all lawful purposes by employees. At a national industrial conference held in Ottawa in 1919, the employers' committee had recommended the employers should admit the right of the employees to join in lawful organization. Another recommendation of the employers was that they should not be required to discriminate as between employees who were members of unions and those not members. In view of this attitude of the employers at the conference, was it not strange that there were still found in various parts of Canada to-day employers adhering to the pre-war policy of denying the right of employees to organize for their protection? The Powell River Paper Company was not the only employer of labor in the Dominion which still maintained this position, he said. There were other employers, and some of them large, which the Labor Department ascertained to have very little regard for labor organization. Such employers were in the habit of making it very plain to their men what they should not do if they hoped to hold their jobs. Mr. Murdock thought it was rather fortunate that the particular matter under discussion had come so that Parliament might learn something of actual conditions. Mr. Murdock concluded by stating that the matter came within the jurisdiction of the Province of British Columbia under the British North America Act.

Woodsworth's Views. J. S. Woodsworth, Labor Winnipeg Centre, complained that when any trouble arose it always was shifted from the Federal Government to the Province. These big companies in rural British Columbia, he said, controlled the lives of their workers, even to the extent of the Government post office being "installed" within their plants so that Labor newspapers could not get to the men without risk of the men being dismissed. Surely it was time to know whether the Government or these companies were supreme in dealing with civil rights. T. G. McBride, Progressive, Cariboo, was surprised to see this particular company behave in such a manner. The Government should take steps to protect the men's right. W. C. Good, Progressive, Brant, Ont., blamed the capitalistic system. L. W. Humphrey, Progressive, East Kootenay expressed disappointment that Mr. Murdock had not presented in announcing what his Department was prepared to do. Mr. Neil subsequently withdrew his motion to adjourn and the House proceeded with other business.

PETITION AFFECTING JAPANESE SENT TO OTTAWA COMMONS

Ottawa, May 19.—The Speaker announced in the House yesterday afternoon that the petition against Japanese immigration, presented Thursday by W. G. McQuarrie, Conservative member for New Westminster, was not in order, as it was addressed to the Prime Minister instead of the House of Commons in Parliament assembled.

At Mr. McQuarrie's request the petition was returned to him for presentation in proper form. The petition is signed by 1,437 residents of the lower mainland and Vancouver Island, B. C. and asks that no further naturalization certificates be granted to Japanese and that such changes be made in the Immigration Act as to prevent the further entry of Japanese into Canada.

SUGAR REFINER HEARD BY OTTAWA HOUSE COMMITTEE

Ottawa, May 19.—C. H. Houston, president of the Dominion Sugar Company, giving evidence before the Agricultural Committee of the House yesterday afternoon, said all the farmers bring beets to the Dominion factory were not members of the Beet Growers' Association. He estimated that 6,000 growers brought beets to his factory. "Very few grievances have come to our office," he said. "I suppose if the farmers want too much for beets you can turn out cane sugar," remarked Chairman McMaster. "Yes, we could," replied the witness, "but our business is primarily a sugar beet business. We started for that and we always try to encourage a full acreage."

Mr. Houston quoted figures to show that his company, during the last ten years, had for the most part paid higher prices than were paid in the state of Michigan, where the sugar beet industry is also carried on. During the war his company had made considerable profits from cane refining, he said. "The highest dividend and bonus which we have paid were eighteen per cent," Mr. Houston stated. "Last year the dividend was sixteen per cent."

Money made by his company was made largely on cane and not on beet sugar, said Mr. Houston. This concluded the hearing of evidence by the committee.

Edmonton, May 19.—The big event of the Alberta Musical Festival took place yesterday afternoon in the Stutbury Cup contest for gold medals of this or previous festivals. There were eleven entries and first place went to Mrs. Gordon James of this city, with Mrs. C. T. Herbyson, of Calgary, second, and Miss Laura McMillan third. The festival was brought to a close last night with a grand concert, in which all the winners of the past two days took part.

DOCTOR IS FINED.

Chicago, May 19.—Dr. James A. Lyon was fined $1,500 by Judge James H. Wilkerson here yesterday when federal narcotic agents declared he had issued in fourteen days nearly 2,500 prescriptions for 71,636 grains of narcotic drugs. The prescriptions, federal agents here said, were distributed among seventy-five patients.

LOST FATHER AND MOTHER AND SISTERS

South Carolina Boy of Seventeen Heads Family of Five

Camden, May 19.—The father and mother and two sisters of Thomson Davis, aged seventeen, were burned to death in the fire which destroyed the Cleveland schoolhouse Thursday night. Yesterday the lad stood in the Buehler churchyard surrounded by sheeted and charred figures. Asked what he knew about the fire, he said: "I don't know very much. I wasn't there. I lost my mother and father and two oldest sisters, Lena and Ida. They were fourteen and twelve. At home there's a little brother about nine months and three more little sisters. They are two, five and six. They and me are all that's left. But I guess I can help some." Almost instantly a dozen hands were thrust into pockets and men who had heard his assertion thrust bills into his hands. The boy hesitated, but finally was prevailed on by an elderly man to take the money. "You've got a big load to carry, son," the man told him. "I'll do my best, sir," the boy replied.

NAVY VOLUNTEERS IN INLAND CITIES

Minister Explains Recruiting System to Members of Commons

Ottawa, May 19.—William Duff, Liberal, Lunenburg, N. S., questioned the Government in the House yesterday afternoon as to reports that the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve was being recruited in Saskatoon, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Ottawa. Why, he asked, were these men being recruited in inland cities and not in the Atlantic and Pacific coast cities? Hon. E. M. Macdonald, Acting Minister of Defence, replied that two bodies were being organized, the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve and the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve. It was the latter which was being recruited in inland cities. This reserve contained men from all walks of life. The Royal Canadian Naval Reserve was to be recruited later and would be recruited in the Atlantic and Pacific Coast cities. Mr. Duff asked if members of the Volunteer Reserve would be supplied with seasickness remedies or if they would train on prairie schooners.

Men Like Pacific

One of our men met a camper out on a fishing stream last weekend. This man had a little silk tent and a most compact camping kit. Noticing a tin of Pacific Milk on a stump, our traveler asked him if he liked it better than other milk. The answer was that he buys a case of small tins each Spring to have it handy because he goes out every Saturday afternoon. He says it is the only canned milk he can use for tea and porridge.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

After examining the excellent display of locally-manufactured products at the Chamber of Commerce quarters last night he would be a pessimist indeed who would be bold enough to suggest that this Island must continue to depend upon the outside for most of its requirements.

We have been told that one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives. The adage is just as true as it is old. And it can be said with truth and authority that there are not one thousand people in Victoria who could enumerate the articles that are produced right in their very midst. The display on view last night must have been an eye-opener for the fairly large number who inspected it. It will have forcibly suggested to them the part they may play in developing industries that are already in operation here. It should also impress upon their minds the important fact that money spent here in this manner remains at home and becomes instantly available for further expansion on the spot.

The fundamental fact to be remembered by the people of this community is that great payrolls are not created by correspondence and advertising alone. When a practical industrialist is ready to establish himself in this neighborhood he will have been convinced that a market exists for his goods. He is not especially concerned with such trifling considerations as free sites and taxation advantages which men who have helped to build up the community into which he is about to enter do not enjoy, in spite of the fact that their enterprise has made it possible for him to launch his own venture; but he is interested in the loyalty of the people and their conception of the prime essentials of economic prosperity. He would be less than human if he did not take such concessions as it might well be advisable for this city to make. At the same time the industrialist and the plain investor will be found in those places which do not wilt under the cold scrutiny of fact.

While there is a prime duty for the people as a whole to discharge, a readiness to give the locally-manufactured article a fair trial, a willingness to compare its merit with the imported commodity, and to comment on the result of the experiment—whether it be complimentary or adverse—in order that quality may be maintained or improved, it must also be understood that the manufacturer who takes advantage, either in price or quality, of community loyalty of this description will merely assure his own loss.

Every encouragement should be given to the Industrial Group of the Chamber of Commerce. It can perform a useful and profitable service for this community and this Island by continuing the educational policy which took such practical and interesting form at last night's gathering.

REALIZING GLADSTONE'S DREAMS.

Twenty-five years ago yesterday death wrote the last chapter to the most brilliant public career of the Nineteenth Century—William Ewart Gladstone went to his long rest.

If the "Grand Old Man" could come back and review the progress of the world since he left it he would be content to re-enter his tomb with the consolation that a bountiful harvest had been reaped from seeds of his own planting. For it may be said in this brief reference to Gladstone's statesmanship that he devoted his life to devotion at home and decentralization abroad.

Ireland's present state, the development of the Empire along family lines of government, and the establishment of local authority in administrative affairs in the British Isles, are part of the fruits of his labor. That intricate and dangerous concentration which took force from the Treaty of Vienna in 1815 went to pieces in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles in 1919.

Decentralization in Eastern Europe—although the "bag and baggage" sentence upon Turkey seems destined to remain a suspended one—and India's march towards home rule round out the progressive realization of a policy largely conceived in the brain of the "Grand Old Man."

THE HALF-HOLIDAY.

In their recognition of the fact that more business would be done in Victoria, with the consequent improvement in their own pecuniary outlook, if the statutory half-holiday were abolished, the employees of the retail stores of the city—as indicated by Alderman Woodward at last night's dinner at the Dominion Hotel—have paved the way to an early and amicable understanding on a point of material interest to trade and commerce in this community.

It goes without saying that the store clerk, whose duties are a good deal more exacting than most people believe, is entitled to a few hours' respite on one of the working days of the week. His physical frame and mental equipment require relaxation. And it is in his employer's interest that he should be given relief from monotonous routine. At the same time, as the retail clerks obviously recognize, it is not good business for the city, or good business for them, that a large volume of floating population that very naturally considers its own convenience first, or people in the city and district generally for that matter, should have to ignore Victoria as a place of business on one afternoon in the middle of the week.

The broader aspect of this question is certainly to be found in the imperative necessity for Victoria to do all the business it possibly can.

Upon our annual turnover, upon our bank clearings, and the other intangible evidences of progress, the outside investor and the new resident base their opinion of us. An extra half day of business would be assured by a full working week and no clerk need miss his half-holiday.

SOVIET STUPIDITY.

Russia has made up her mind that she will not allow "a foreign will to be placed upon her." Great Britain has no intention of attempting to coerce her in any particular. She merely requires the Soviet Government to conform to arrangements of trade already entered into and to abide by all, and not only a part, of the conditions under which the famous pact was negotiated and completed. Russia ought to know that John Bull has been doing business with the rest of the world for a very long time on lines that have earned the respect of people a great deal more progressive than Lenin and Trotsky. And he will not alter his commercial code at dictation from Moscow; he will also be able to do without Russian business without wasting shot and shell to mark the end of the trade agreement. On the other hand when the Soviet talks about imposing a will it might take its own attitude into consideration and see what that might look like to Great Britain.

SWIFT JUSTICE.

That Cranbrook Judge who sentenced two aliens to ten and seven years in the penitentiary, with twelve lashes apiece on admission to the institution and another dozen apiece on the first anniversary of their crime, is contributing very materially towards a more respectful conception of the requirements of law and order.

As we have observed on more than one occasion recently, if longer prison terms and a much more liberal use of the lash were to be meted out to desperadoes who attack the person in various ways, there would very soon be an appreciable falling off in the more serious breaches of the criminal code. In this advocacy of more effective punishment there is no argument against the continuance and expansion of a prison system which conforms to corrective as well as penal requirements. It obviously arises out of a due regard for the seriousness of crimes, which are all the more appalling because it ought to be feasible to look for human progress to have had its effect, even upon the distorted mind of the individual who either gets a bad start or drops into loose ways by influences of association.

One has only to compare British with American criminal statistics, the ease with which the more dangerous offender against society in the country to the South of us gets off with a comparatively light penalty, to realize what an important and beneficial factor swift and adequate justice really is.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Congratulations to Mr. Jolly who succeeded in defeating Mr. Hagen in the British golf professionals' tournament at Leeds! This ought to cheer up the Old Country experts who are getting into trim for the "open" at Troon.

The British Institute of Patentees has started a "What's Wanted" book, in which Sir William Bell offers his suggestions as to inventions needed by the world. When the volume is completed it ought to be a fairly bulky one. We could offer a few ideas on the subject of what is needed by the world.

The New York World remarks that the dispute with the British Government in which the authorities at Moscow have involved themselves is pretty serious business for Russia. If it turns out, it says, "that the Soviets have neither the common sense, the tact nor the grace to be on their good behavior with the first great power to resume relations with them then they are ruled by a set of fools. Such supreme stupidity in itself is a capital crime." We doubt very much if those in charge of Russia's affairs, a very large proportion of whom are not actually Russians, are very greatly concerned with the effect of their policy upon the country which, for the time being, they have under their control. If they were they would try to get out of the international pariah class.

One significance of the adverse trade balance which has set in against the United States is that the inevitable process of gold redistribution has begun. Buying abroad more than it is selling abroad, our neighbor of course must meet the difference in gold which in time will find its way to the countries from which it originally came under the economic stress of war times. Sound business men in the United States will not regret the development. The accumulation of a gold reserve of some three billion dollars brought about an embarrassment of riches which was bound to react unfavorably upon the country afflicted with it. In fact, it might have been better for the republic if that process of gold redistribution had begun earlier; it might have averted in some measure the wave of inflation which seems to have started afresh in recent months and which is certain to have a serious reaction.

OUR CONTEMPORARIES

THE OPTIMISTS

Calgary Albertans—The farmer members of the Alberta legislature are not quite as pessimistic as the Alberta members of the House of Commons, or as the leader of the U. F. A. They conclude that it is a pretty good province after all, and with a couple of good years everything will be sunshiny again.

RESPECTING THE LAW.

Chicago Tribune—The average person would rather be arrested for violation of the traffic laws than be observed eating peas with a knife. He will violate the Volstead Act, but he would not be seen wearing tan shoes with evening dress. He is more concerned by what other people think of him with respect to their customs than what they think of him with respect to their laws. It is more serious, to tuck a napkin in the collar than to tuck a revolver in the hip pocket.

RE SPLENDID ISOLATION

To the Editor—I would like to express my opinion upon what an effect Victoria being alone in adopting daylight saving has on general business.

Instead of receiving Mainland and Island mail at 8.45 a.m., we now get it at 9.45 a.m., which you will agree is not conducive to a good start for the day's work. Also Mr. C. P. R. working on standard time means that they do not commence to unload freight until 9 a.m., daylight saving time, whereas on ordinary time they commence at 8 a.m. This hinders business considerably and sometimes prevents those who wish to render good service from doing so.

"GET TOGETHER" IS NEW SLOGAN

City Retail Merchants Discuss Matters of Common Interest

Special Representative Gives Good Advice on Many Points

"One of the things that is the matter with you is that you are divided in your affiliations," said George H. Hougham to the retail merchants at their get-together dinner at the Dominion Hotel last night. "In so far as your particular business is concerned, you should look to the type of organization that will best serve your interests." In Mr. Hougham's opinion the Retail Merchants' Association is the business of everyone present, and should be regarded by them as such. "Form one efficient organization that will represent you," was his advice. "Then support your executive, because I am convinced they are trying to serve your best interests."

Mr. Hougham is the special representative of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada and was giving some account of what he saw and heard and did during his recent trip to Eastern Canada. He intimated that his duties might shortly compel him to take up his residence elsewhere than in British Columbia, but he expressed no enthusiasm over this prospect.

Civic License Fees.

The chairman of the evening was H. O. Kirkham and about a hundred were present. The chairman pointed out that they were all at liberty to speak their minds freely on any subject of interest to the business men of Victoria and vicinity. The only limitation he would impose upon them was that in their remarks they should stick to the point. He mentioned especially the matter of the civic trade license fee, intimating that all must recognize that the city must have more revenue and that the only question was as to the most equitable method of levying the tax. H. Pout, of the Hudson's Bay Company, spoke of store decoration during the Frolic. He urged that special attention be paid to window dressing and that all vacant stores that he is the manager of the Government liquor store."

Mr. Hougham said this was the most representative audience of retail merchants it had been his privilege to address in Victoria since he first made their acquaintance in 1918. He had never seen the association proposition in Victoria look so hopeful as to-day. He hoped that after that get-together dinner there would be none of them who would refuse to do anything further. He asked them to give favorable attention to those who would call upon them to solicit their support for the association.

By Theorists. He then explained the reasons why he had gone East. The merchants knew of course that there had been litigation over the sales tax. The chief trouble with this tax was that it had been conceived by theorists and put into practice by theorists. (Concluded on page 23.)

Fourfold Protection for a Family Man

THE Mutual Life of Canada has acquired an experience of over half a century of life insurance. It has studied the results of thousands and thousands of policies. Our experience convinces us that for the average family man the most useful and economical form of insurance is the profit-participating, long-term, endowment policy. This policy matures at a specified advanced age, but is of course payable at prior death if that age be not attained.

Annual dividends are paid to holders of these policies and results will surprise those who have not realized what Mutual profit-participation can accomplish towards lessening the cost of life insurance. On some of these long-term endowment policies, taken out in youth, policyholders at maturity have actually received in cash 100% more than they have deposited with the Company as premiums!

This form of insurance provides against both premature death and helpless old age.

Accident and Disability Clauses

For a small additional premium, the Company will add the provision that should the assured at any time be overtaken by permanent disability no further premiums shall be payable, and furthermore, the Company will pay the assured a monthly income during the continuance of such disability. And if desired a still further privilege may be secured—namely, a double indemnity in the event of death by accident—that is, the Company will pay the face value of the policy.

Mutual Long-Term Endowment thus furnishes fourfold insurance protection—first against death, second against old age, third against disability, and fourth against accident. At the same time profits so reduce the cost of insurance as to make this policy an investment yielding not only all that it costs, but all the way from 25 to 100% more according to age and length of the endowment term.

Fill in and mail the coupon below and we will send you particulars about this policy.

COLWOOD BRANCH OF DIOCESAN BOARD IN V. A. ON FRIDAY

120 Town Members Entertained By Colwood Branch; Business Discussed

Three telly-ho cars and many private motors, on Friday conveyed 120 members of the Woman's Auxiliary to Colwood, where by the kind invitation of their W.A. the meeting of the Diocesan Board was held. The Diocesan President, Mrs. W. H. Belson, opened the meeting, after which Mrs. Pearson welcomed all present, adding that the enthusiasm shown in connection with this meeting had exceeded all the expectations of Colwood branch of the W.A. During the day seventeen officers of the Diocesan Board gave full explanation of the offices they held and the work accomplished in the departments, Mrs. Pearson explaining each fund of the W.A. and how dispensed. Announcement was made of the Summer school being held this year at Crofton House, Vancouver, from July 23 to 28, the rate, including registration, being $7 for the week.

The noon-day prayers and an earnest and helpful address were given by the Rev. H. A. Pearson, rector of St. John's, Colwood, who also expressed great pleasure at the great number in attendance, Metchoin and Leiford W.A. being present. A silent standing vote of sympathy was expressed with Mrs. Baugh-Allen and family of the late Rev. W. Baugh-Allen in the loss they have recently sustained. The late Mr. Baugh Allen had always shown keen interest in the work of the W.A.

The absence of the organizing secretary, Mrs. Dickson, through the illness of her husband, was much regretted, and the best wishes of the meeting conveyed for his recovery. Mrs. Belson reported on an interesting visit last week to Salt Spring Island, where they have a most promising W.A. A special appeal for relief for the suffering Greeks and Armenians was made by Miss Turner, who also made a strong appeal for candidates for the mission field. At 1 p.m. a wonderfully well-arranged luncheon was provided by St. John's, Colwood, W.A., the members taking advantage of the interval to enjoy the fresh air and scenery of Colwood.

The afternoon session commenced at 2 p.m., where Mrs. Luxton, hon. vice-president, gave a most clever presentation to Mrs. Ball, girls' camp supervisor, who is one of the three Victoria victors who are leaving for Los Angeles next week. The girls' Los Angeles next week. The girls' Los Angeles next week. The girls' Los Angeles next week.

DR. WARREN INTRODUCED

Doctor J. W. Warren, the new Radiologist at the Jubilee Hospital, was introduced to the Board of Directors last evening on taking up his appointment. He comes here with the reputation of being an exceptionally able Radiologist, with a long experience in this particular branch of science, both in civil and military life. Doctor Warren had eleven years' experience in X-Ray work before he went overseas in 1914, where he served both in England and France, and during his stay in the former country was made a member of the Roentgen Society of London. In France Doctor Warren was Radiologist at No. 7 Canadian General Hospital at Etaples and during his period of office there his department radiographed nearly sixteen thousand cases. On returning to Canada early in 1919 he was placed in charge of the X-Ray Department of the College Street Military Hospital, Toronto. On his discharge from the army in the Autumn of 1919 Doctor Warren went to Calgary to take charge of the X-Ray Department in the General Hospital there and has held that position until the present time.

Among the modern masters, whose work is to be represented at the "Festival of Art" on May 28 and 29, is Dante Gabriel Rossetti. He is longed original of his Pre-Raphaelite School, but abandoned this later for a broader path. His pictures are so literary in character that he has been described as more dominantly a writer than a painter.

The picture chosen for the "Festival of Art" is "Dante's Dream." It was painted in 1871 and is considered to be Rossetti's largest and most important work, and illustrates a passage from the "Vita Nuova." In the composition, Dante is led by Love to where Beatrice lies dead, and bends down to kiss her. On either side of the bier where she lies, two maidens dressed in green are holding a pall covered with May flowers, and the ground is strewn with poppies, emblematic of death. From the staircases on either side one glimpsed the sunny streets of Florence. The composition of this picture is Mrs. George Phillips, assisted by Mrs. J. W. Spencer.

Local Council of Women—All representatives of affiliated societies are urged to attend the special meeting of the Local Council of Women, to be held in the Union Bank Building, on Monday afternoon, when special business will be considered.

P. O. Dwyer, of Edmonton, is registered at the Empress Hotel.

Dr. H. Ashton, of Vancouver, was in the city yesterday.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN'S INSTITUTE With Many Matters

Victoria Organization Deals With Many Matters

There was an excellent attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Victoria Women's Institute, held yesterday afternoon, over which president, Mrs. H. Crocker, presided. Mrs. H. Black, convener of the Ways and Means Committee, reported two card drives, a rummage sale and a quilting bee during May, which resulted in a substantial addition to the treasury. Mrs. Peden reported a very interesting social meeting on May 4th, while Mrs. J. R. Terry reported a successful visit to the Jubilee Hospital on Tuesday evening.

The secretary-treasurer's report showed the financial affairs of the Institute to be in excellent shape. The resignation of Mrs. Ernest Yeo, who is leaving on an extended visit to the East, as convener of the Home Economics Committee, was accepted with regret, and Mrs. L. Schmeis was appointed to take her place.

A donation of $31 was sent to the Central Park W.I. for their fund for crippled children, and the support of the Victoria Institute assured them in their splendid work. The Institute also approved of the recommendation from the Department of Agriculture regarding holding the annual District Conferences in November this year. It was decided that the Institute would conduct a lunch room during the three days of the Moose Convention here in June, with the following as conveners: Thursday, Mrs. T. W. Laing; Friday, Mrs. Slado; Saturday, Mrs. A. R. Colby.

Among events planned for the early part of June will be a silver tea at the home of Mrs. I. C. Campbell, 1715 Fort Street, on Wednesday, June 6. There will also be home cooking and candy stalls, the proceeds to be devoted to the purchase of material for the Fall bazaar.

On Wednesday evening, June 27, there will be a "moonlight cruise" around the Gulf, under the auspices of the Institute. As this will be one of the first excursions of the season, it is expected that it will prove popular.

Quite a discussion took place regarding the Fall fair, and it was decided that the Institute would enter an exhibit in the Women's Institute section and also conduct a lunch room as in previous years. The Victoria Institute will also do their part in the Maytime Frolic by entering a decorated car in the parade, and assisting with preparing decorations.

Another important work was started at the meeting, when a committee was formed to work in conjunction with the Tubercular Veterans' Association. The committee is composed of Mrs. H. Crocker, Mrs. W. P. Todd, Mrs. Frank Campbell, Mrs. T. Palmer, Mrs. C. Blomquist, Mrs. A. Colby, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Peacock, Mrs. J. R. Terry and Mrs. Urquhart.

In response to Mrs. Savory's suggestion at the last meeting, each member wore a strawberry leaf as a pledge not to buy berries until the local ones were in.

The hostesses for the social meeting on June 1 will be Mrs. J. R. Terry, Mrs. Wilkinson, Mrs. W. H. Hart and Mrs. D. Johnston.

CREATING FUND TO COMBAT OPEN SHOP

Longshorem to Be Assessed Nominal Sum, Boston Convention Decides

Boston, May 18.—A special assessment of the membership to create a fund to combat an "open shop" at Pacific Coast ports and elsewhere was decided on today by delegates attending the convention of the International Longshoremen's Union here.

The assessment will be 25 cents per member per quarter. This action was voted after a long discussion, during which it was reported that agents from the Pacific Coast were at work furthering "open shop" conditions in other parts of the country. The general officers of the union urged a campaign to organize all able-bodied dock workers in order to offset the trend.

Renew Affiliation. The convention adopted a recommendation of President Anthony J. Chlopek that the union renew affiliation with the International Transport Workers' Federation of Europe, broken off during the world war. President Chlopek was authorized to visit the chief European ports to investigate working conditions. He announced he would leave for Europe early in July and return after the convention in September of the British Trades and Labor Congress, to which he is a delegate from the American Federation of Labor.

Restorer Ready To Transfer Cable For Repairs at Banfield

Cables at Rithet Piers Awaiting Arrival of Dominion Miller; Duplication of Cable Between New Zealand and Fanning Island to Be Completed This Year; Fanning-Banfield Section Later

Duplication of the Pacific Cable by the Pacific Cable Board between Banfield, Vancouver Island, and New Zealand via Fanning Island, will eventually be carried out, but not this year, according to Captain V. Sparks, of the Commercial Cable Company's cables ship Restorer. The Restorer this morning shifted from Esquimalt to a berth at Pier 2, Rithet Docks, preparatory to taking aboard a shipment of fifteen miles of submarine cable from the Furness-Withy motorship Dominion Miller, which is expected to make this port from the United Kingdom at daybreak on Monday.

Restorer Leaves Wednesday. The Restorer expects to complete the transfer in time to leave for the Banfield Station on Wednesday where she will pick up the Fanning Island-Banfield line, take in fifteen miles of it, and replace it with the new line. The actual repair work will be carried on off Cape Beale where the fifteenth mile of cable lays.

That there will be a duplicate cable between New Zealand and the Banfield cable is an established fact. But the date set for the laying of such a cable is far distant. At present the Colonia, the world's largest cable vessel, is leaving for Fanning Island to commence work on the duplication of the cable from that station to New Zealand. She will reach Fanning Island about the middle of July, Captain Sparks said, and she expects to complete the work at the end of August. The route of laying will be from Fanning Island a matter of 2,000 miles to Fiji Island, Surva is the cable station there. From there cable will be laid to Norfolk Island a distance of 980 miles and from there to New Zealand which is 840 miles, making a distance of 3,820 miles.

The Colonia is carrying with her enough cable to cover the entire distance her capacity being some 4,000 miles of line. The work is expected to be finished at the end of August. Greater Business. Increased business is the cause of this duplication from Fanning Island to New Zealand. Increased wireless for the cable which is more secret than the wireless method of transmitting messages. The business from the Pacific Coast to the Antipodes and points on the way is increasing rapidly so that it will not be long before a duplicate cable will be laid to connect up with the one that will be completed at Fanning in August. Shortage of cable is the drawback to the laying of duplicate cable over the entire route. Captain Sparks said, there is a great demand at present on this material so that it will be some time before the new cable is completed to the Banfield Station.

The Restorer is the Commercial Cable Company's vessel but has been chartered to do repair work for the Pacific Cable Company, the fifteen-mile repair job being one of these.

Old Glory Once Almost Lost Rounding Cape Horn

William Gribble, of East Wellington, Former Sailor on Glory of the Seas, Ship Recently Destroyed By Fire, Recalls Incidents Afloat

The destruction of the old hulk Glory of the Seas on Puget Sound last Sunday marked the passing of one of the most romantic of the square-riggers that claimed Boston as her home port in the days when the United States was making a bid for recognition on the world shipping routes. During her adventurous career under sail, as a hulk and floating cannon, the Glory of the Seas never came nearer to disaster than in August, 1881, when rounding Cape Horn laden with wheat, John Gribble, of East Wellington, a former British navy man, was a member of the crew of the vessel on this particular voyage, when the Glory of the Seas was so strained that it became necessary, in refitting her, to include a series of upright pillars in the hold.

"We were rounding the Cape laden with 3,000 tons of wheat," says Mr. Gribble. "It was August 22, 1881. A southerly gale was blowing at the time and by 8 a.m. we were running with close-reefed topsails and had stowed the jib and mainmast. The sea was breaking over her and about 10 o'clock a tremendous sea swept over the deck smashing one boat and drawing the bolts out of the skids, allowing the cargo to shift. The ship went over on her beam ends."

Tremendous Strain. "The strain of three thousand tons of shifting bulk cargo was so tremendous that the seams in the deck opened and allowed the water to pour down into the hold. The pumps became choked. "All hands were called to clear away the wreckage and lower sail, but so dangerous was the position of the ship, with her deck being pounded by tremendous seas that no person would venture alone to carry out the necessary work. "The captain told the mate to go forward and do what had to be done. The mate refused. "Then the captain asked, 'Have I no one that will go?' "I was at the wheel, and I answered that I would. He told me to slip a rope over my shoulders and they would pay it out as I went forward. I told them that I would prefer not to have any rope about me, and only wanted them to watch the seas and let me know when a big wave was coming. Watching my chance I ran forward. "Then came the warning shout of 'seas' and I jumped to the rail and caught firm hold of a stanchion. The big sea pounded me hard, but I was ready for it and managed to hang on. "Before the next sea came I darted forward and carried out the work that I was sent to do, and which permitted the ship to be brought about. "It was black and blue from being forced against the rail by the weight of the seas. "When the Glory of the Seas had been brought about, but was still in a dangerous position the captain called for a volunteer to go below to clear the pump which had become choked with water. There was about four feet of water in the hold, so it meant diving down among the water and strain. "No one offered and the captain turned to me. 'Jack,' he said, 'I hate to ask you to do it, but will you? If you do you won't have to do another day of work during the whole trip.' "I went and it was a pretty tough

CURED HIS RHEUMATISM

"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army, over 50 years ago. Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all hours with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change." You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as try to get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints by taking treatment supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. It took Mr. Aschman fifty years to find out the truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of The Times wishes "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism," containing facts overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a post card or letter to H. P. Clearwater, No. 223 T Street, Hallowell, Maine. Send now, lest you forget! If not a sufferer, cut out this notice and hand this good news and opportunity to some afflicted friend. All who send will receive it by return mail without any charge whatever.

FIGURES SHOW HOW NEW TAX RATE WILL AFFECT PROPERTIES

Some People to Pay More and Some Less Under Present Levy

Some Big Owners in Downtown Area Get Substantial Reductions

How Victoria's current land and building tax of 39.72 mills will affect individual property owners is shown in figures compiled for Mayor Hayward to-day by City Treasurer E. C. Smith, head of the city's finance department. These figures cover a series of lots selected from all parts of the city so as to provide a broad idea of the effect of the new tax rate. Until these figures were compiled the city authorities had no idea how the new rate would work out as assessments of lands and buildings have been drastically changed by the Court of Revision.

The following figures show the 1922 tax and the 1923 tax on the lots selected and from them residents of various districts can estimate how the new rate will affect them:

N. E. corner Government and Courtney, net tax of 32.06 mills in 1922, $2,599.21, net tax of 39.72 mills in 1923, $2,966.23.

S. E. Corner Government and Johnson, net tax 32.06 mills in 1922, $1,775.92, net tax of 39.72 mills in 1923, $2,007.57.

W. side Government, between Yates and Bastion, net tax of 32.06 mills in 1922, $1,031.14, net tax of 39.72 mills in 1923, $2,390.53.

N. side Yates, between Broad and Douglas, net tax of 32.06 mills in 1922, $2,002.85, net tax of 39.72 mills in 1923, $2,390.53.

N. E. corner Douglas and Fort, net tax of 32.06 mills in 1922, $2,392.58, net tax of 39.72 mills in 1923, $3,585.92.

CURED HIS RHEUMATISM

"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army, over 50 years ago. Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all hours with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change." You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as try to get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints by taking treatment supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. It took Mr. Aschman fifty years to find out the truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of The Times wishes "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism," containing facts overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a post card or letter to H. P. FIGURES SHOW HOW NEW TAX RATE WILL AFFECT PROPERTIES

Some People to Pay More and Some Less Under Present Levy

Some Big Owners in Downtown Area Get Substantial Reductions

How Victoria's current land and building tax of 39.72 mills will affect individual property owners is shown in figures compiled for Mayor Hayward to-day by City Treasurer E. C. Smith, head of the city's finance department. These figures cover a series of lots selected from all parts of the city so as to provide a broad idea of the effect of the new tax rate. Until these figures were compiled the city authorities had no idea how the new rate would work out as assessments of lands and buildings have been drastically changed by the Court of Revision.

The following figures show the 1922 tax and the 1923 tax on the lots selected and from them residents of various districts can estimate how the new rate will affect them:

New Beauty in Design, in Finish and Tone

Made by the same master craftsmen who make the famous Gerhard Heintzman Piano, this phonograph reveals points of superiority in every detail. The cabinet is a work of art; the finish is lustrous and beautiful; the tone-throat of genuine violin spruce—the same as is used in the sounding boards of Gerhard Heintzman Pianos—produces a tone of singular sweetness and purity. Priced reasonably at $380.

Hagen Is Defeated By Jolly, New Golf Star

Young Britisher Trims Walter By Two Up In Final 36-Hole Match at Leeds To-day; Americans Retain Walker Cup When Dr. Willing, of Portland, Sank a Three-Yard Putt on Thirty-Fifth Green at St. Andrews

Leeds, Eng., May 19.—H. C. Jolly, of Foxgrove, the English professional, defeated Walter Hagen, American holder of the British open golf championship title, two up in the final of the professional tournament here to-day.

Jolly was one up at the end of the morning round and gathered another hole in the second eighteen in the afternoon.

Jolly is a new golf star in England, and has played brilliantly throughout the tournament. Hagen tried hard to shake the game of the Britisher but failed.

St. Andrews, May 19.—The American amateur golf team retained possession of the Walker Cup by defeating the British team in the two-day tournament ending to-day, six matches to five, with one halved.

The cup was won only on the thirty-fifth green of the twelfth match when Dr. O. F. Willing, of Portland, Ore., playing W. A. Murray, of the British team, sank a three-yard putt to win his match by two and one.

The British team maintained its strong lead in this morning's play. Starting with the point score three to one in Great Britain's favor as the result of yesterday's two-ball foursome matches, the British players were ahead at the end of the first round in five of the eight singles which conclude the contest to-day, the other three being all square. The British only needed four of these matches to win the cup.

The Americans made a phenomenal recovery in the afternoon round, shooting splendid golf.

Bowling Club Growing With Great Rapidity

Membership Exceeds Last Year's Roll; Draw Arranged for Handicap

Membership in the Victoria Lawn Bowling Club is growing by leaps and bounds, and last year's splendid total has already been surpassed, and many additional applications await consideration.

The green at Beacon Hill has been open for two weeks, and the players have had sufficient practice to start the first of their competitive rounds. The opening event will be the club handicap. This competition is looked upon as a good opportunity for rink practice, and must be played off promptly in order to get well under way before the cup ties begin.

The draw for the first and second rounds has been made. The first named player in every case is responsible for giving his opponent two opportunities to play the tie before June 2.

The first round draw is as follows: T. Roberts, R. v. J. Raeside, O. F. J. Byne, R. v. W. Chambers, R. J. Mavor, R. v. J. Roberts, R. A. McKeechie, O. v. W. Barbour, R. A. Henwick, R. v. D. Fyvie, O. Coast Champion Who Will Box Here

VIC FOLEY

Less than six months ago Vic Foley, of Vancouver, was little known in the Pacific world, but to-day he is rated as one of the best bantamweights in the country. He has won the Pacific Coast title and in defending it has met a number of cracking good American scrappers. He claims the Canadian title as well. Foley will appear here as the head-liner in the bouts to be staged at the Arena on Wednesday night next. He will meet Babe Foot, the Portland phenomenon, and a tough six-round bout is looked for. Foley will arrive here on Monday to begin active training for his bout. He is in good shape, having only fought this week in Seattle against California Joe Lynch.

SIDNEY WILL OPPOSE ESQUIMALT MONDAY

Esquimalt and Sidney are meeting in league lacrosse fixtures on Monday night at the Canteen Grounds. Esquimalt hopes to put up a better show than they did against the Garrison on last Monday evening, and Sidney expects to give Esquimalt a tough game. The suburban town boasts of a pretty strong team this year, and a good game is looked for. Esquimalt's star home man, will be one of the on-lookers, he having had the misfortune of breaking his thumb in the game against the Garrison. Broad-belt, too, is suffering from a bad leg.

BAR WILLARD FROM FIGHTING; TOO OLD

New York Athletic Commission Will Not Allow Jess to Meet Firpo. New York, May 19.—The New York State Athletic Commission has forbidden the proposed boxing match between Jess Willard and Luis Firpo. The commission, on the ground that Willard's age is beyond the legal limit. Tex Rickard, promoter of the bout, is said to be making plans to stage it in New Jersey, probably at Boyle's Thirty Acres. Rickard refused to discuss the commission's decision last night, but it was said that the bout would probably be staged in the Jersey City Arena on June 30. William Muldoon, chairman of the commission, also refused to comment on the reported action, but said his personal view had not changed from what it always had been—that Willard should not be allowed to box in New York unless he proved that he was under the prescribed age limit of 28. It was learned to-day that Willard came near being declared physically unfit to box Floyd Johnson in their bout last Saturday afternoon for the Milk Fund. Athletic Commission physicians, it was said, would have disqualified him had he been scheduled to meet a heavyweight of the extremely heavy hitting type.

ESQUIMALT SCORES WIN OVER OAKLANDS

The two old rivals, Oakland and Esquimalt lacrosse teams, met for the first time this season at the Royal Athletic Park yesterday afternoon, with the result that the latter came out on the top of a 4-2 score. The teams both displayed a brilliant brand of the national sport, which says much for the managers of the teams. The winners had a slight edge on their opponents from the start of the battle, and after obtaining an early lead they managed to keep it during the rest of the match. In the first quarter the winners seized the tempo for the two counters, while their opponents found the net for one. In the second frame each aggregation was able to find the net once, while in the final stanza the winners found the goal for a lone tally which ended the scoring for the day. For the winners Holder and Seefe each grabbed a brace, while Taylor and Hansen divided the honors for the losers.

Detroit Is Falling Fast; Babe Adams Wins on His 41st Birthday

New York, May 19.—The Philadelphia Athletics loomed to-day as the New York Yankees' most formidable rivals for American League honors. They kept on the heels of the Yankees by defeating Cleveland 4-1 yesterday.

At the same time the Detroit Tigers fell before the onslaught of the Bostonians 5-2.

The Yankees beat St. Louis Browns 9-4, while Babe Ruth hit his sixth homer of the season.

Washington used seventeen players to no avail against Chicago, who won 14-8.

The veteran Luque, of Cincinnati, handed the world champion New York Giants the first shutout of the season 7-0.

Babe Adams, veteran Pirate, treated himself to a gift on his 41st birthday by beating Boston 4-3.

Catcher Hartnett, of the Chicago Cubs, hit a home run and sent two men in ahead of him to beat Philadelphia 10-7. A home run also spelled defeat for Brooklyn, the St. Louis Cardinals winning 3-1.

Reports from Vancouver state that two of the premier oarsmen of Victoria intend to move their kits across to the Mainland. George Kingsley, senior sculling champion of the N. P. A. A. O., and John Wickson, hockey star and oarsman, are reported to have made application to the Vancouver Rowing Club for membership.

Both oarsmen have rowed under the colors of the J. E. A. A. For the past two years Kingsley has won the senior singles and was counted upon carrying the Bay's colors again this year. Wickson did not row last year, but was stroke of the senior fours for several years.

He was a member of Winnipeg "eight" which rowed at Henley some years ago.

If both oarsmen move to Vancouver they will make a big gap in local athletic circles.

SONS SCORE EASY WIN OVER SIDNEY

Visitors Are Defeated 16-4 in Their Opening Game in Commercial League

The Native Sons of Canada made their debut in the Commercial League last night under auspicious circumstances by taking the Sidney team into camp, defeating them sixteen to four at Central Park.

The visitors started things going in the first inning when Lines, first man to bat, crashed a home run to deep centre. This ended their scoring for this inning, and in the Sons' turn at bat "Longhanks" Salloway flew for a nice three-bagger to right field. The Sons were able to drive across two more runs, the inning ending with the count three to one in their favor.

In the third inning the Sons went farther into the lead. In a valiant attempt to stem the runs that were crossing the plate, the pitcher, Sylvester took the mound for Sidney, but it was of no use. Hits were boncing off the Sons' bats like hail off a tin roof. A nice three-bagger by Hocking with three men on base, put a climax to the frame.

SIDNEY RALLIES

Sidney staged a rally in the fourth and two costly errors by Hocking allowed them to secure three runs. Curtis then pitched a home run and that was the last that any of the losers saw of the home plate.

In the sixth inning May returned to the mound again and pitched a tight ball, allow only three hits in the last three innings, but the damage was done, and the Sidney men were forced to return home with a defeat in their first appearance here this year.

Four home runs were clouted during the progress of the battle, the Sons securing two while the visitors grabbed a brace. The teams were as follows:

Sons of Canada—Hilton, Curtis, Taylor, Hocking, Salloway, Campbell, Nachtrieb, Auchinlove and Holman. Sidney—Simpson, Lines, Sylvester, Humber, McClure, Norton, McNeill, Crossley and May.

JAPANESE WRESTLER FLOPPED BY TAYLOR

Winnipeg, May 19.—Jack Taylor, Canadian heavyweight wrestling champion, last night disposed of Tara Miyuki, a Japanese grappler, in a sensational mixed bout. The Japanese was given the decision in three 20-minute rounds of jiu jitsu wrestling when neither gained a fall, but in the catch-as-catch-can style, the victor was no match for the burly Canadian who flopped his smaller opponent in two straight falls. Taylor got the first fall in eight minutes with the head and armlock and won the match with the final fall in two minutes with an arm scissors and body hold.

CLUB PRO DRESSES AS WOMAN TO OPPOSE MRS. JACKSON, OF SEATTLE

Seattle, May 19.—Mrs. F. F. Jackson, of this city, who distinguished herself last week by putting up a promising fight in Victoria for the ladies' golf championship of British Columbia, was beaten yesterday by "Mrs. Mary McDonald, late of England."

When a match between the women of two clubs was half over Mrs. Jackson learned that the opposition, despairing of defeating her, had put in its professional Frank Noble, in the dress of a woman. Noble spoke not at all, and was three points ahead.

After the joke had been exposed at lunch Mrs. Jackson was awarded three points yesterday. Her club won the match 17-8.

CLOSE GAMES PLAYED IN JUNIOR LEAGUE

The opening games were played in the Junior baseball league last night. The Oakland nine defeated the Hustlers at Central Park, 15-5. Oaklanders were good in the field, while the Hustlers were weak in that respect. The batteries were: Oakland—Laird, Patrick and Essler. Hustlers—Biggs and McPhee.

AT THE HIGH SCHOOL THE OLD RIVALRY, THE PIRATES AND THE METS, CLASHED, THE PIRATES GETTING ON THE LONG END OF A 3-4 SCORE. THE LOSERS OBTAINED AN EARLY LEAD, BUT THE PIRATES CAME BACK STRONG IN THE FOURTH FRAME, AND REGAINED THE ADVANTAGE, HOLDING IT FOR THE REST OF THE BATTLE. D'ARCY KNOCKED OUT THE LONG HOME RUN OF THE GAME. THE BATTERIES WERE: PIRATES—KAY AND THORBURN; METS—MCELLENAN AND McELLOE.

At Beacon Hill the Bays took the M.C.A. into camp, trimming them 3-8. The game was exceedingly close, and belonged to either team until the final frame.

What is it? What does it mean? It is a milestone in the life of a diabetic, a partial record of his day's march, and it means that he is on the road to restored health.

And it means time and money and work. It means the co-ordination of the work of ward, diet kitchen and laboratory, and the fullest co-operation of the patient. Each of these is necessary or restored health is impossible.

Restored health. Why not cure? Insulin is being used. Surely this triumph of modern medical research will not fail?

No. Insulin has come to stay until its function can be performed by less costly means. It is the paving which makes the road to health smoother for some, passable for others.

Diabetic Patient Differs.

To understand what insulin is, and how it acts, it is necessary to understand how the diabetic patient differs from normal.

When a child gets mumps, it is obvious that the disease has caused inflammation of the glands situated at the angle of the jaw. It is not obvious that pancreas, a gland of very similar type situated just behind the stomach, often becomes inflamed in the course of this disease, and that this inflammation sometimes results in scarring of the gland and a lessening of its power to furnish its internal secretion "Insulin" to the blood.

If this occurs, the body fires can no longer burn as brightly as before. For the body is a furnace burning up food in an atmosphere of oxygen drawn in through the lungs. In place of coal and oil, it burns sugar and fat, and it gets material for its own repair from protein, as this is being burned up in its flames. Its fuel requires the preparation of digestion, for starch must be converted into sugar before it can be absorbed; and further, the sugar must be acted upon by insulin before it can be burned. If natural insulin is not readily forthcoming in sufficient amount, an excess of sugar accumulates in the blood, and keeps up a constant demand for insulin production. The pancreas, damaged by scarring and getting no rest, grows weary. Its output is lessened, and the amount of sugar able to be burned diminishes.

Rapid Progress in Childhood. Mumps is not the only precursor of diabetes, nor is childhood the only period when diabetes appears; in point of fact most cases begin in adults, but the disease usually makes far more rapid progress when it appears in childhood than when its onset is delayed until years of maturity are reached.

The first change from a normal condition is seen in a higher concentration of sugar in the blood. This causes thirst, which is a protective mechanism of the body, by which an attempt is made to keep the blood sugar at normal level by a process of dilution, and so give rest to the pancreas. The increased amount of sugar in the blood may irritate various tissues of the body, and the response to irritation of nerves and skin be felt as pain, or seen as an exanthematous eruption. If the condition progresses further, another stage is reached, where the blood contains so much sugar that some of it is excreted by the kidney unburned. Fuel being wasted, hunger is not appeased unless more food is eaten, and so increased appetite is linked to thirst. In the earlier stages, adjustment of the diet to the patient's needs and ability may slow or arrest his progress on the downward path. If a body furnace requires sufficient fuel to generate 3000 heat units a day, on the ordinary diet of this country these would be obtained from food yielding on digestion approximately 15 ounces of sugar and 4 ounces of fatty acid. It is quite possible to arrange the diet so that 5 ounces of sugar and little more than 2 ounces of fatty acid would need to be burned for the same number of heat units to be generated. As only one-third of the sugar is present, the amount of natural insulin demanded would be very materially lessened. A damaged pancreas that would stagger under a load of 15 ounces of sugar, might find 5 ounces well within its capacity, yet the output and quality of the work done by the bodily machine would be just the same. Thread Becomes Rope Again. If dietetic measures are neglected, a stage is reached when too little sugar can be rendered fit to burn by the patient's unaided efforts, and he stumbles along at the edge of a chasm, in which comes threatens to engulf him. It is in this last stage before coma, that insulin from outside source has proved so great a boon. It enables sufficient sugar to be burned to keep bright the fire of combustion, and the thread on which life hangs becomes a rope again, with which he may be drawn to safer ground.

But skilled hands are needed. The margin of safety which nature once provided has been left behind, and now no simple methods will avail. Each patient must be assayed. His fuel requirements must be calculated exactly, and the protein, fat and carbohydrate needed must be worked out in terms of weighed amounts of meat and butter and eggs.

Insulin from outside source must be added to the small amount furnished by the pancreas in exact doses necessary to burn up the sugar of the diet. An overdose, or an insufficient following of insulin-forming food in the diet, will result in a condition which coats the path with ice, and the chain of coma may be quickly reached. For the regulating mechanism has broken down, and insulin is an unstable substance, which loses its strength with time and varies with conditions of storage. Its capacity for work must be determined at the moment of injection. It cannot be given by mouth for it is destroyed by contact with digestive juices, yet when injected, it must be supplied with work to do, or the sugar naturally present in the blood will be diminished beyond normal. But just as patients can be educated to master the details of necessary dietetic measures, so they can be warned of dangers and taught to recognize the early symptoms of relative overdose. As physical exercise burns up fuel stored in the body, and produces sweating, and a sense of fatigue followed later by exhaustion and collapse, so with insulin. Its symptoms are the same, and in the same order. The treatment is the same too, but instead of rest, drink, and later food, food and the juice of an orange with a little added sugar is remedy enough, if taken when sweating is first noticed.

Education Regarding Diets. The problem of education of patients regarding diets is probably the greatest difficulty encountered in their successful treatment. Some patients are naturally more apt pupils than others—but when it is realized that ordinary foodstuffs have to be dispensed in accurate amounts just as a druggist dispenses medicines, and that the menus must be worked out in advance of requirements, the part played by the diet kitchen is seen to be an extremely important one. Moreover, before patients can be released from hospital care, each one must be sufficiently educated to act as a dietitian to minister to his own needs.

WHITSUNDAY TO-MORROW

Whitsunday, the annual festival of God the Holy Spirit, will be marked by special service, appropriate music and sermons, in all Anglican churches to-morrow.

Each case receiving insulin treatment calls for elaborate biochemical examinations, and a careful calculation on the part of the laboratory and diet kitchen authorities. Investigation and education of patients in hospital care, and preparation of special diets and the administration of the insulin involves a very great deal of work which takes up much time, not only in the laboratory but also in the diet kitchen and the wards. The additional strain thrown upon these departments means increased staff, and naturally increased expense. When the course of hospital treatment is completed the patient must continue his insulin and also his carefully regulated diet indefinitely. Now it is almost an impossibility for the ordinary individual from a poor home to carry on this routine. It has been tried and they have returned to hospital broken down after two or three days; in a well to do household where the house-keeping is on a larger scale there is not the same difficulty. It will be obvious from the foregoing remarks that the modern treatment of diabetes is beyond the ability of the poor person to pay for, and yet all would agree that the individual small means has as much right as his richer neighbor to the benefits of a discovery which offers him relief.

Should Receive Daily Subsidy. Hospitals are unable to meet their ordinary expenses and should not be asked to bear the additional cost of this expensive form of treatment for those unable to pay for it. The scale of payments made by the municipalities for patients unable to pay for their treatment, as calculated for "ordinary hospital treatment" and meets only a fraction of the cost of diabetic treatment, consequently the hospital carries a charge in that the individual small means properly fall on the rates. In order that those persons who require insulin treatment and yet have not the means to pay for it, may get the benefit of this discovery and at the same time not be a financial burden on the already overburdened hospitals, it is suggested that the hospital receive a daily subsidy for each patient under treatment either from the Government or from the municipality from which the patient comes.

Education Regarding Diets. The problem of education of patients regarding diets is probably the greatest difficulty encountered in their successful treatment. Some patients are naturally more apt pupils than others—but when it is realized that ordinary foodstuffs have to be dispensed in accurate amounts just as a druggist dispenses medicines, and that the menus must be worked out in advance of requirements, the Japanese Poet Chose Name of "Onoto Watanna" for Winnifred Reeve, Noted Canadian Novelist.

By WILLIAM BUTLER.

IN the list of Canada's greatest women the name of Mrs. Winnifred Reeve might well be included. To the readers of the novel she will be better known by the pseudonym of "Onoto Watanna," for it is under this delightfully curious name that all of her seventeen published novels have appeared.

Born in the fair city of Montreal, in the French quarter of Hochelaga, Mrs. Reeve was one of fourteen children and at an early age commenced the inevitable battle for existence. From her English-Irish father she inherited a keen sense of artistry, which later stood her in good stead and which gave birth to her girlhood ambition of authorship, although at times the desire to possess a candy shop was pre-eminent.

Mrs. Reeve's literary career commenced when her first story appeared in a little weekly magazine published in Montreal called the Metropolitan. Soon after this, at the age of seventeen, she went to the West Indies, where she reported the debates in the Jamaica legislature for the Gleaner, and after a three months' sojourn went to Chicago, where she wrote her first Japanese stories. Since then Mrs. Reeve has written scores of short stories and recently completed her eighteenth novel, "Cheerio," which is to be published soon.

All but two of her charming novels have had Japanese themes, and it was quite by accident that Mrs. Reeve wrote them. Her sister, also an author, wrote Chinese stories under the name of "Sui Sin Far," so in friendly rivalry Mrs. Reeve commenced writing Japanese stories. Much to her surprise, they proved very popular, and she was urged to continue writing this type of material. Many of her works have been dramatized, and her second novel, "A Japanese Nightingale," published by Harpers, was translated into many languages.

Mrs. Reeve, who divides her time between her residence in Calgary and her husband's ranch near Banff, has written two novels dealing with western Canadian life. The first of these, "Cattle," is a curious production from an author whose work is remarkable for its unmannish and fineness of touch. It has been described as a "great epic of the soil," and has for its theme the great ranching and cattle country and its almost untouched resources. Mrs. Reeve knows her subject well, for she has lived in the West for many years, where her husband, Francis Reeve, has big ranching interests.

"Onoto Watanna," Mrs. Reeve's curious pseudonym, was selected for her by a Japanese poet—now very famous. He made it Onoto Watanna, which is Japanese, but this did not sound euphonious, so they compromised by making it Watanna. With her three children, her writing, and the secretarial duties of Mr. Reeve's ranches, her life is a very active one. Mrs. Reeve is the president of the Calgary branch of the Canadian Authors' Association, and when she recently addressed the Canadian Club of that city she was the first woman to be accorded that privilege.

Mrs. Reeve has a keen sense of humor, as can be seen by the following story which she tells on herself:

She was, on one occasion, giving a dinner to an editor to whom she wanted very much to sell stories. Mrs. Reeve confesses that she was "on the rocks" at the time, and she spent her all upon that dinner.

Whilst the meal was being prepared the gas man arrived to collect an overdue bill, and this personage would neither lower his voice or put off collection. However, the editor was a good sport and paid the bill. Mrs. Reeve felt so humiliated that she wept, but she did sell him a story.

Poincare's Mother

An amusing story is told of President Poincare. When the president of France returned to his home in the Rue Commandant Martin after his election, his mother, neglecting the official personages present, kissed her son in front of them all, and then, patting his cheek, said clearly and distinctly:

"I hope, Raymond, that you have not undertaken too difficult a job. You were never quite so clever as you thought yourself, you know."

READY FOR THE HURDLES ONCE MORE

Upper right, Mr. Drury at his desk in his office at the parliament buildings; centre, the Drury home at Crown Hill, where the U.F.O. premier was born 45 years ago and has lived ever since; left, the premier as a fisherman, in a rare holiday mood; lower oval, Mrs. Drury, who was a Miss Partridge before her marriage, of a family which settled in that part of the country with the premier's great-grandfather in 1820.

Crown Hill, and Mr. Drury himself has demonstrated how he can "step out" on occasion.

At least Mr. Drury goes to the country now better known than in the early days of his premiership four years ago, when he enjoyed the joke on himself at Toronto's Arts and Letters Club. The Bohemian callings of Toronto are very proud of their Arts and Letters Club—a cosy retreat where, in an atmosphere that is congenial and surroundings that are pleasant, a capital lunch or dinner may be had without frills and at a moderate price.

To his sanctuary a newspaperman one day brought three or four of the farmer members of the Ontario legislature. It was just prior to the advent of the former government of Premier Drury, and the host evidently was so interested in getting a "story" out of his guests that he failed to acquaint them with the exclusive character of the institution.

Hence, when a few days later, one of his guests was leaving the buildings with his leader, he opined that he had found "a swell joint to eat at," and straightway piloted him to the club in question.

The two ordered a sustaining repast, and were in the midst of it when the secretary became suspicious that they were non-members. After inquiring among a number he became satisfied that they were interlopers, broke the news to them that they were intruding in a club, handed them their hats, and showed them to the door. The former guest was inclined to protest, but his friend was profuse in his apologies and quickly withdrew.

A week afterward the secretary happened in the office of a weekly publication, and while conversing with the editor a proof sheet of the front page was laid before the latter containing a two-column cut of Premier Drury.

The secretary's eyes started from their sockets.

"Who in blazes," he demanded, "is that fellow that you are giving top of column, next to reading, this week?"

"That?" replied the editor. "Why, that's our new premier."

"Good heavens," came the reply, "that's the fellow I bounced from our club the other day. The joke would not be complete were it not stated that Mr. Drury probably enjoyed it more than anyone, and that he is now a valued member, in good standing, of the club whose hospitality, through the inadvertence of a friend, he once almost violated."

Premier Drury's face is familiar now to the whole countryside. Some writers have found a striking resemblance, especially about the mouth, to that of Lincoln. As a boy, however, it was his mouth that seemed a defect to his family.

He had a large mouth—large horizontally—which prevented him from being called really handsome. The horizontal dimensions of his food-receiving and voice-giving aperture are quite marked even to-day, but are not so noticeable as they were when he was a growing boy on the home farm at Crown Hill.

A wide mouth in a man means one thing, but in a child something different. In the man Drury it means eloquence, a clear and distinct enunciation, and a delivery of the spoken word that is most pleasing to his hearers. In the child Drury it was a defect in appearance that should be remedied if at all possible. Hence the concern of the good folk at Crown Hill about "Ernie."

The matter was discussed with friends and with visitors to the Drury home. Among the frequent visitors was the parson. This worthy gentleman, after considering the matter carefully, recommended that "Ernie" be taught to repeat the word "oak" over and over again, as the shaping of the mouth in order to repeat this word would tend to lessen its horizontal dimensions and give it a more perpendicular or a more rounded outline.

The embryo premier was thus taught to say "oak" and everything looked favorable for speedy improvement. In a few days the parson was again a visitor at Crown Hill. Inquiring about his pupil and how he was getting along, he was told that the boy was out at the barn. There the parson found him, but instead of repeating the word "oak," as instructed, "Ernie" was shouting with all the vigor he could put into it, "Hemlock, hemlock."

If the number of anecdotes that collect about a man is a proof of his popularity, then Premier Drury will be a winner in his race in June. With the exception of Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, no other premier, perhaps, has been the subject in such a short time of so many stories. The wide humanity and modesty of the man appeal to all with whom he comes in contact.

If you would know the whole man in all his versatility, you must see him in all the poses of the photographs. You must get him to tell you what he thinks of alfalfa or sheep raising or beehives in the orchard, or how he regulated his water supply by a device of his own invention, or how he doubled the output of his own farm while the state of the labor market forbade intensive farming.

Bruce returned to Australia with a clear conception of duty. He soon made his mark as a thoughtful and sincere follower of Mr. Hughes. But his rapid promotion dates back only to 1921. In that year, while traveling in Europe on a pleasure trip, Mr. Hughes appointed him to represent the commonwealth at the League of Nations. He arrived at Geneva just in time for the opening meeting. He is no orator, but his simple and sincere speeches, especially on questions of finance quickly established a distinct reputation for him. He returned to Australia a made man, and when, a few months later, Sir Joseph Cook resigned his office as treasurer to become high commissioner in London, Bruce was appointed as his successor.

Most Beautiful "Lady of the Cakes" Does Penance for Her Frivolity

Eve Lavalliere, Most Luxurious Woman of Paris and Leading Comedienne of the French Stage, Goes in Humility Among the Poor of Montmartre—Voice in Dream Told Her to Take Up Her Cross.

Eve Lavalliere, a few years ago the foremost comedienne on the French stage, holding in comedy a position equal to that of Sara Bernhardt at her best in tragedy, to-day goes silently and clad in black among the poor of Montmartre distributing cakes and alms.

She refuses to speak to interviewers, but it is understood that it is a penance she is doing for her years of frivolity and extravagance as ruling favorite of Paris.

"Every morning and evening she is to be seen praying under the dome of the Basilica of the Sacred Heart, in the very centre of the wildest artistic quarter of Paris. There the crowds of beggars who come asking alms know her as "The Lady of the Cakes," for it is not bread or money that she distributes, but delicate cakes, such as the poor people have never before tasted.

Three years ago Eve Lavalliere announced that she had given up the stage and retired to a Carmelite convent. This is the austere order known to religion. A Carmelite nun is required to hide her face till she dies, never to speak, and to see no human being outside her order. She passes all her days in sight of a grinning skeleton, and is subjected to terrible severities.

Eve Lavalliere, however, did not enter the convent then. It is believed that she was ordered to go through a long period of preparation before being allowed to enter the convent.

So those of her friends who best know her experiences since she gave up the stage offer as a solution to the mystery of her solitary appearances in the church that this test was given her to prove her humility and sincere repentance. There, ill-dressed and silent, she meets daily the artists, actors, journalists, and boulevardiers with whom she was formerly associated. She must never speak to them nor give them a sign of recognition, but remain humbly serving the poor.

This is the woman who, before the war, had one of the most brilliant salons in Paris, where princes, statesmen and millionaires flocked to lay tribute at her feet. In her luxurious apartment overlooking the gardens of the Tuilleries she used to receive her court, propped up in a bed that once belonged to her namesake, Louise de la Valliere, first favorite of Louis XIV.

During the war Eve Lavalliere spent most of her fortune caring for wounded soldiers. At first she amused them by her dancing and singing. But as her friends were killed off, one by one, she lost all heart for theatrical work and became a nursing sister.

In a letter to a friend she tells how her final decision to enter a convent came about. It was after a dinner in her honor given by a young man who had spent 10,000 francs on the orchids alone. That night she had a dream in which she saw the poor and oppressed of the city. A voice said to her: "Help these people! Do not add to the sins of the world and increase the sufferings of the poor. Do not be a willful parasite of society! Take up your cross!"

So now Eve Lavalliere, a few years ago the witliest, most frivolous and most luxurious woman in Paris, and the leading comedienne of the French stage, goes in poverty and humility among the poor of Montmartre—"The Lady of the Cakes."

Premier of Australia Youngest in Empire

This is the new premier of Australia and his wife, Stanley Melbourne Bruce, when he succeeded Premier Hughes, early this year, was only 39 years of age, and looked five years younger. The suggestion of physical strength makes all the more noticeable the painful limp and the heavily dragged foot which are reminders of his war service in France.

Novelist-Preacher Welcomed by a Ditty

Great Congregation Stuns Dr. Gordon by Rising En Masse and Welcoming Him by a Brosey Song.

It is not often that a preacher of international experience is nonplussed when he faces an ordinary audience, or that a novelist whose trained imagination has made him world-famous finds that imagination outdone in an average situation, but something like that is exactly what is reported to have happened to "Ralph Connor" a few Sunday evenings ago in a city across the border.

The minister of a large congregation composed mostly of working people had been endeavoring by means of Sunday "Drama Sermons" to interest his people in the reading of good books and had made the stories of many recent books the bases for his discourses. The people had manifested exceptional interest in the works of the Canadian author, and the idea was conceived of having Dr. Gordon complete the series by a personal visit and a regular sermon through which they might get to know him and his message better.

Ralph Connor.

On the evening arranged the church was filled to overflowing an hour before the service was announced to begin. Over two thousand people were there, eagerly expectant to participate in an event which they felt they would not soon forget. The intervening time was occupied with the singing of familiar hymns, and the director of the singing had opportunity for the rehearsal of what they thought would be a "different" kind of welcome for their guest.

When the minister and the distinguished preacher of the evening took the platform the regular service was proceeded with in the usual way, though perhaps briefer than usual, that more time might be given the speaker. When it came time to introduce the novelist this was done in a suitable fashion and Dr. Gordon arose to advance to the pulpit to preface his discourse with the usual Scottish "Prayer for Illumination." To his surprise, and almost his dismay, the great congregation arose en masse as they had been trained some moments before. Instead of remaining silent or adopting some form of welcome in keeping with a service of worship they broke forth into singing, with a ditty that has become well known in Rotary, Kiwanis and other clubs, but seldom, if ever before, heard in a church service.

"How d'you do, Doctor Gordon, How d'you do! Is there anything that we can do for you? We are with you to a man. We will do the best we can. How d'you do, Doctor Gordon, How d'you do!"

There was no doubt about the warmth of the welcome, but the preacher's embarrassment in the unusual situation created witnessed the fact that he at least would have been more at home with one more in keeping with the traditions which he has always regarded and which perhaps lend more of dignity and reality to occasions like that.

Ducks Had Own Ideas and Flying Etiquette

Famous Canadian Ace and Companions Tried to Teach Farmer's Birds Some Favorite Formations.

Lieut.-Col. William A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., Canada's famous ace, while a captain in the Royal Flying Corps in Toronto was billeted near a farm in which numerous practical jokes were played on the stock.

One afternoon, in particular, Capt. Bishop and his fellow-officers secured three ducks and a lot of paint. One duck they painted with circles around it of red, white and blue, just like the allied markings of our machines. The other two they painted, one red and one blue. Although the ducks did not seem to appreciate it, they were certainly distinguished-looking for two months or more.

Then they began to moulit. Afterwards, one would see wandering through the grass a weird sight, looking like a moth-eaten bird, a dirty scarlet in some places and a dirty white in others. It was a horrible sight at close quarters but from a distance quite pretty resembling a bird of paradise.

These ducks the airmen tried hard to train, if possible to teach them to walk on the ground in formations, the same as the air squadrons in the air. They were not very adept pupils, however, and instead of walking at correct distances apart would keep looking behind and jostling into the men on the right and left.

One afternoon, Bishop and his companions got as many as sixteen ducks, and after giving them a good luncheon, by way of celebration for their outing, they put them on the roof of the officer's mess, where they all sat in a stately row, quacking in spasms.

These incidents, though simple to tell now, at that time afforded the greatest amusement, and as they were in no way cruel to the animals the French people did not seem to mind.

In his early days, Sir Edward Elgar earned a living by writing songs for singer, minstrel. He received five shillings for each song!

STAR CAR PROVES VERY POPULAR HERE

Agents Tell of Demand for 350,000 Motors This Year

The Star car, which has now been produced by W. C. Durant for something over a year, has proved the greatest sensation in the annals of the automobile industry. It has been proven, without a doubt, that the Star car is the biggest value in the United States and Canada that has ever been sold, on four wheels. It has been selling far ahead of the supply, and the manufacturers cannot keep up with demands. They are making great strides in the direction of increasing their production, however, and soon the Star will find a place wherever it is wanted. It is equipped with the Durant "tubular backbone," which runs the length of the car, and stands to make it far less susceptible to the strain of bad roads and sharp corners. The car is mated with the same sturdiness of its elder brother, the Durant, and is entirely dependable as a light car. It is a very comfortable riding car, and powerful and economical in operation, and thus has found popularity with many owners. The demand for 350,000 cars is pushing the Durant Motors, Ltd., to full capacity. This demand must be filled in one year. The factories in progress of construction are now almost completed, and will soon be available as producers of the popular little car. There are at present over fifty cars of this make on the roads of Victoria and surrounding districts, and the praises heard of them on every hand from the owners are sufficient proof to the many doubtful intending buyers of the worth of the

Cameron and Calwell Busses to Run North To-morrow

The new Cameron & Calwell motor bus service between Victoria and Nanaimo will be opened to-morrow morning. The first bus will leave the Cameron & Calwell taxi stand near the Post Office at a quarter to nine daylight saving time. A second bus will leave at half past two in the afternoon. While there will be only one southbound trip from Nanaimo to-morrow, commencing at two o'clock, in future busses will leave the up-island city at a quarter to nine in the morning and two in the afternoon. The trip both ways will take about three and one-half hours with a ten-minute stop at Duncan. Heads of the Cameron & Calwell concern announced last night that they were making arrangements now for linking their new service up with a line of busses running from Nanaimo north to Campbell River and Cumberland. This will provide a through motor service from Victoria to these northern points. With the commencement of the tourist season the Cameron & Calwell concern expects to have its busses filled on all trips. Thousands of tourists who do not own private cars will be glad of the opportunity of seeing the Malahat and the Island Highway by automobile.

CLUB NOW HAS OFFICIAL HOTELS

New Service By Automobile Club for Its Members

The Victoria Automobile Club is now completing a list of official hotels and garages to which it will recommend its members, and the thousands of motorists that will pass through its hands this Summer. Last week the secretary made a trip over the Island Highway to inspect hotels and garages and to make official appointments. Every place on the main highway as far as Forbes Landing was visited. In the appointment of these official hotels and garages the club has adopted the plan of selecting them without any fee or advertising consideration as it is regarded as a distinct service to members and affiliated members and not as an advertisement for the institutions concerned. The club obligates the official appointed to give the best accommodation possible at reasonable rates and to treat all members and guests with utmost courtesy. This, of course, is a benefit to the hotel or garage recommended but it is not done with that object in view. At a meeting of the board of directors held on Wednesday the appointment of R. L. McKenzie was approved. This official will meet all ferries at Sidney and will be at the call of the members going away or motorists coming to the Island for any service or assistance they may desire. He will co-operate with the customs and ferry officials and with his knowledge of the Island he will be a very useful acquisition. An entirely new series of road maps are now in process of production for the club, and when they are complete, which will be in the near future, they will be the most up to date and authentic yet offered the touring public. Each section will be mapped separately and will be carefully checked by actually driving over the road before they go to the printer.

CHEVROLET SEASON OPENS ON PRAIRIES

Factories Behind in Deliveries; Increased Orders Rushing Plants

Owing to the selling season on the Prairies opening up the Chevrolet factories are being taxed to their capacity and are already 2,000 cars behind in their deliveries owing to the great demand. Farmers do not store their cars away for the winter like coast people, and as a result the opening season on cars come when the weather is suitable. For two months the demand is expected to keep the factories working day and night, so that little will be heard of the Chevrolet for a while on the coast. The month of April, it was stated by the local agent this morning, James Wood, of the Beggs Motor Company, was the biggest month of this year for the Chevrolet people in British Columbia. Approximately 1,200 cars were delivered to British Columbia. The local agents are still having a successful business in this make of car. Altogether twenty-one cars were sold this month. These cars are made up of a large majority of Chevrolets, showing the popularity that the new Superior model has attained.

RECORD PACE SET BY HUPMOBILE CAR

Cars Sold as Rapidly as They Are Delivered; Exceed Last Year's Record

Reports from distributors and dealers from all parts of the country show that sales of Hupmobiles by them during April were the greatest they have ever enjoyed by a wide margin. The cars are being sold as rapidly as they can be delivered by the Hupp factory. Many distributors and dealers have already sold their entire May allotment, and state they could sell two or three times what their contracts call for if they could secure the cars. April shipments exceeded those of April, 1922, the record month in Hupp history up to that time, by more than 800 cars, or an increased business volume for the corporation itself of nearly $1,000,000 over the previous high April mark. Driveaways to many of the near-by centres of distribution continue to be necessary, owing to the inability of railroads to supply all the freight cars needed, local distributors are the Consolidated Motor Company.

BLUE BIRD MODEL POPULAR OVERLAND CAR ON THE MARKET

Thomas Plimley Sold Out, But Will Have Shipment Next Week

So great is the demand on the "Blue Bird" model of the Overland car that the local agent, Thomas Plimley, has sold all stock on hand and will be unable to deliver any more orders until next week when another shipment of the Overland cars is expected in. Not only are the local agents finding a big demand for this type of car, but also the factories. So great has been the pressure on the factories in endeavoring to meet the ever increasing popularity of the "Blue Bird," that they are 4,000 cars behind. That the service given by these cars are good is illustrated by the information given by H. E. Bailey, of Thomas Plimley, to-day to the effect that the cars in one way are taking business from them. The garage does not get the replacement jobs that they used to have owing to the quality of the new models. The one dollar taxi service inaugurated in Toronto are using Overland cars only. The "Blue Bird" model is built on English lines. The body is of an English design and so popular has this model become that the Americans are introducing a car of similar appearance, and calling it the "Red Bird." The car is selling fast but its popularity does not attain to that secured by the Canadian "Blue Bird" which leads on the Canadian market. Packards and Maxwells are also securing a big demand in this city but does not equal that of the "Blue Bird" which is a cheaper and lighter model.

It is the things hidden away in the motor, the transmission, and the rear axle, which account for the extremely low upkeep cost, and the long life, for which the Hupmobile is noted. Come in and learn what these "hidden things" are.

GRAY DORT CAR IN GREAT DEMAND

Orders Now on Hand Are Keeping Plant Busy; Remarkable Record Made

With dealer and distributor applications pouring into the Gray factory from all over the United States and Canada, and with hundreds of orders coming in with every mail, the plant is being taxed to capacity, while the sales department is forced to work overtime in an effort to keep its sales and producing records up to date. While factory officials are holding back sales and production figures at this time, it was stated that orders received within the last six weeks are in excess of the entire production programme of the Gray Dort company last year. Orders on hand will run the plant to capacity to May 31. Frank L. Klingensmith, president of the Gray Dort Motor Corporation, predicts that this year will prove one of the largest in the history of the automotive industry, and will clearly demonstrate that the low priced, light weight quality car is the choice of the general buying public. "I base this opinion on the remarkable showing being made by our dealers throughout the world, and upon the enthusiasm expressed by the thousands of people who are at present driving the Gray car." A magnetic brake system has been introduced for front wheel use.

PROVINCIAL CLUB READY TO START

Will Build on Basis of Member Clubs

The four thousand members now enrolled in the three Automobile clubs of Vancouver, Victoria, and New Westminster, will in the course of a few days now be formed into a provincial body which will in all probability be known as The Automobile Club of B. C. Plans which have been maturing for the past three months will by the end of this month be complete, and the three large and influential bodies will be united into one. The local autonomy will be maintained to as large an extent while the provincial organization will "take care of all provincial matters." The membership of the Victoria Club is now close to the four hundred mark, and the executive is confident that before the touring season has really started it will have passed the five hundred figure. A great deal of thought and study has been given to the matter of the provincial club, and the recommendations of the joint committee which has had the matter in hand have been ratified by all three clubs in general meeting. For the present a provincial executive will be formed from the clubs and additional local clubs will be organized wherever possible in the Province as member clubs. Individual membership in the Automobile Club of B. C. will be available to all motorists who reside in districts where there are not sufficient cars to form a local club, and in this way all of the direct financial advantages that are enjoyed by members of city clubs will be provided. The Vancouver and Victoria clubs are in a splendid financial position, and having been operating for a matter of ten or more years have developed a service to members and motorists generally that is the envy of many larger institutions. Under the provincial organization this service is to be further developed and the interest of every motorist in the Province protected as well as that of the visitor. The Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster clubs have no connection with any other automobile organization in B. C.

HOME-MADE GASOLINE SAVER IS A SUCCESS

Considerable more mileage per gallon of gasoline may be obtained from the ordinary car if it is equipped with some method of mixing additional air with the gas. Each auxiliary air valve may be placed between the carburetor and engine in the intake manifold. Adjustment is conveniently made by means of a dash control. A short distance above the carburetor, the intake manifold is drilled and tapped to take the nipple of a small grease cup. The cap of the cup is drilled with three small holes and a pivot hole in the centre provided. A piece of light sheet metal with correspondingly placed holes is fitted and riveted to the cap of the cup through the pivot hole. This sheet metal disc has an arm projecting that is connected to a wire leading to the dash. The cap of the cup is screwed in place and the thread joint made air tight with solder. The holes in the valve are opened and covered by moving the dash control back and forth. Any desired adjustment may be made with this rod.

BILLBOARD HERO OF BUSINESS ROMANCE

John Owen, an English Novelist, Narrates In "The Hoarding" the Story of Richard Boxrider, an Advertising Agent Who Made Fine Art the Handmaiden of Big Business.

By Professor W. T. Allison

A considerable body of literature has appeared in recent years which makes a special appeal to business men. The psychology of salesmanship, for example, has been discussed in dozens of volumes. Other books have instructed clerks and merchants, commercial travellers and sales managers, how to develop personal traits that are bound to make for success on the Bialto. Up to the present, however, makers of fiction have rarely condescended to devote full-length stories to the romance of business. It is, therefore, a pleasure to me to introduce to my business friends to-day John Owen, an English novelist, who has entered this neglected field. A year or so ago he produced "The Cotton Broker," a vigorous and extremely well-written story of a fictitious character, Edward Crossford, who began life as a warehouse boy and advanced rapidly to the position of cotton king. His latest achievement is entitled, "The Hoarding" (Hodder and Stoughton, Toronto), in which the hero is an aggressive Londoner, who begins as a humble writer of small advertisements and who shows such originality in thinking out publicity feats that in a very short time he sets the business of big manufacturing firms and becomes what might be called the king of the billboards. This may not strike the general reader as a happy theme for a novel, but in the capable hands of Mr. Owen there is built up a narrative with a good plot, singularly interesting characters, and a denouement as satisfying as it is dramatic. Mr. Owen brings to his study of the English business world the keen observation of a man of letters, a refined but powerful management of character and dialogue, and, best of all, a sense of humor. I am sure that every business man will find in this novel not only a fascinating story, but stimulation in the conduct of his own affairs. Moreover, I cannot see why the reader of the conventional romance could not get more solid enjoyment out of this book than from half a dozen of the usual parlor tales.

ADVERTISING NOW A PROFESSION

Mr. Owen tells in his foreword that because he once told the story of a man in the cotton trade there has been thrust upon him a tale of a very different sort, yet with a background of commercialism. "The man who told me the story," he says, "knew, I think, two, if not three, of the chief people in it, and knew them fairly well. Advertising," said this friend of mine, "advertising is now a profession. It's their own word, the men who run it. And when you get something deeply enough established to give it a sort of right to call itself by that style (pretentious, perhaps?), you are likely to discover that many things are becoming involved—deep things even of the heart. Every human business is dominated other men; he has a gleaming personality, an iron will, and is an adept in converting an apathetic or even a hostile advertiser to his own point of view. Consider, for example, how he convinced phlegmatic Gladden, of Gladden & Co., chair makers and upholsterers, that a one-inch advertisement on the back page of a London newspaper was not only ineffective but fatuous. The manufacturers of the Bobs chair informed the public in this diminutive advertisement—"The Bobs chair is worth many bobs. Give it a trial. Write for details." Boxrider got at Glad-

BOXRIDER AND THE BOBS CHAIR.

Early in the story we become convinced that Richard Boxrider, the hero, has mastered the contents of numerous up-to-date books on business psychology. He knows how to dominate other men; he has a gleaming personality, an iron will, and is an adept in converting an apathetic or even a hostile advertiser to his own point of view. Consider, for example, how he convinced phlegmatic Gladden, of Gladden & Co., chair makers and upholsterers, that a one-inch advertisement on the back page of a London newspaper was not only ineffective but fatuous. The manufacturers of the Bobs chair informed the public in this diminutive advertisement—"The Bobs chair is worth many bobs. Give it a trial. Write for details." Boxrider got at Gladden in his office and after a preliminary encounter in which the advertiser was sarcastic, he proceeded to take John Bull by the horns, by criticizing the advertisement, which did not sell his goods. "In your ad," said Boxrider, "you tell 'em to write for particulars. Who's going to write for particulars? They don't want to be involved in correspondence. They're not. They think it's a dodge—that it's a rotten old chair, and the maker wants a lot of money for it. Seven guineas, or something like that, they figure as the price—maybe fifteen; and if once he gets our address we're done. That's what they think. You say they're fools. They're not. They're not clever, but they've a certain amount of common sense, and they're not too much money to spend, the majority of them. So, if you've got something good and cheap to offer, give 'em your price straight away; all the fortunes have been made by the man who quotes—"

BOXRIDER TRIUMPHS OVER HIS FOES.

Unfortunately Boxrider sprained his ankle a day or two after this first meeting and this was why his antagonist was so successful. The gentleman and pugnacious advertising man was sent to interview Miss Senior. Beech lends comic relief to the story, because he is always trying to get into the picture for purposes. As he falls in love with

COCOA SUGGESTION IN ART GALLERY.

It was a few weeks after Richard Boxrider entered into partnership with effeminate George Beech, who had inherited an advertising agency from his pushful father, that he got hold of a new idea. Kingford, a cocoa manufacturer, was one of the best customers of the Beech agency, but had become profuse in his payments. Boxrider, who had been working for Beech's feeble publicity work, and was gradually handing over his advertising to other firms, wondered how he could remedy this state of affairs. The solution came to him one afternoon when he visited the Spring exhibition of the Royal Academy. He looked at the picture of a young woman, radiant with Spring, a young woman in a green meadow on which her pale feet glistened, and as he studied the picture, "Waiting" like a flash came his inspiration. This beautiful being was waiting for her cup of Kingford's. What an advertisement this would be! He hurried to the boardings of London! He turned to the catalogue and found that the name of the artist was "Lesley Senior." It was a girl's name, Lesley, and this bore him. You never know how to take women or what they would do. But he acted at once. He went to the clerk in charge of the room, asked the price of the picture, was told that it was seventy pounds, offered him fifty, but was informed that he would have to see the artist. He obtained her address and, like the man of action he was, lost no time in going to her Chelsea flat. Before he had been talking to Miss Senior very long, Boxrider discovered that he had a difficult task on his hands. He soon agreed to pay sixty pounds for the picture, but the real tug of wills took place when he told the artist that he was going to use her "Waiting" to advertise Kingford's cocoa. She had a firm chin, had Lesley, and it became very firm when she told him that the deal was off, for, as she explained, "I don't like advertisements of any kind. I think they are coarse and vulgar and meretricious. They appeal to the stupid and gullible; and I object most strongly to them."

BOXRIDER REFERS TO 'MILLIE'S' 'BUBBLES.'

Did Boxrider retire from the field of battle mortally wounded at this onslaught? Not he! He was not only surprised, but angry at her decision. He even went so far as to tell her that she was absurd. "Did you never hear of Millie's 'Bubbles'?" he queried. "Are there E. A.'s whose pictures are used? Don't the best black-and-white men fight for this? Is the art you see in the National Gallery vulgarized because it's seen by every class in the country? And how is your picture vulgarized because it's seen by millions of men, women and children—thousands more than ever saw a Gainsborough or a Van Dyck. I've got in my mind all kinds of stands. One by the National Gallery itself. There's a big board there. I want to put 'Waiting' right across that board, and I'll undertake that for every man who turns into the National Gallery to see the 'Turners,' a thousand will stop for a minute and study the 'Senior.' But Miss Senior was adamant. As he moved towards the door, Boxrider said he would not take no for an answer. She was obliged to relent, but he would come back in a week to renew his attack.

THE STORY OF OUR ROCKS

By ROBERT CONNELL

Limestone has both economic and scenic value in the Victoria district and the latter is dependent upon the first. Ever since the first building operations began here lime has had to be obtained and at several points the ruins of old lime kilns are to be seen, and very picturesque they are, half grown over with herbage, and near by the old quarries. Among the easily accessible ones is that on the Highland District road from the Colwood Station north. It is just beyond the gate at Aldermere, the kiln on the left and the quarry on the right. Another is at Knoekan Hill on Wilkinson Crossroad near Burnside Road. The quarry and kiln are both on the hillside above the highway. A third is on the east side of Admirals Road, just opposite the southern entrance to the old Indian Reserve. Not much of the kiln is left, but the ruins are there with the old excavation. The limestone here shows very well on its exposed surfaces the effect of water in weathering it away. The water charged with acid, sometimes from the atmosphere, and more plentifully from the vegetation, eats slowly but surely into the rock and it becomes covered with little hollows. In some places as is well-known, the presence of limestone leads to the formation of extensive underground caverns and rivers may run to disappear for miles and miles, and reappear again. If you have read Boyd Dawkins' book on caves and cave-hunting you will remember how it was in such places that the remarkable discoveries of the remains of prehistoric man and the associated animals in Great Britain.

the artist, he proceeds to double-cross his masterful partner, but of course, without success. Even on crutches Boxrider was a doughty opponent, as Miss Senior found later, when he persuaded her after another exciting argument to bend to his wishes. His troubles were not yet over, however. He who had never looked twice at a woman before, argued with Lesley Senior until he fell in love with her. But picture his disappointment when he learned long before his sprained ankle was better that the cool-minded young artist was engaged to marry Henry Coleton, the distinguished novelist. It was this same Coleton who later wrote a long and indignant letter to the Times, when Boxrider achieved his most sensational publicity stroke in buying an eighteenth century masterpiece for Kingford and the newspapers were filled with the noise of battle between Boxrider's critics and admirers. He became James almost overnight, but it was not long before Kingford and Lesley mended him to Lesley Senior. But thanks to Beech and to a subtle lady, a Mrs. Graeme, that high and mighty Coleton, pool-pooper of advertising, is convinced of inconsistency and in the last chapter we see the painter of "Waiting" herself waiting for the triumphant Boxrider at the foot of the tallest hoarding in London.

STEPHEN LEACOCK MY WIFE'S DOG

The Life and Achievements of Darling Wee Wee

I remember as if it were yesterday the day the dear little fellow first came to me. I shall never forget waiting for him at the railway station on the evening when he arrived by express. My wife was not certain whether he was to come on the eleven thirty or the half past midnight, and thought it best to take no chances. She felt that had he arrived on the first train and been left alone tied up at the depot it might have depressed him. The evening turned out to be wet and cold. I remember thinking as I walked up and down the platform, beating my arms against my sides, what a lucky thing it was that Wee

The first morning that the new milkman came, Wee Wee flew right at him and bit him in the thumb. Milkmen's hands are always well sterilized so there was no harm done.

Wee Wee had not had to wait. It could easily have given the dear little fellow angina pectoris. However, at half past midnight or a little after it, the train was forty minutes late—Wee Wee arrived safe and sound. The men in the express pointed him out to me at once. It seemed that he had bitten one of them in the leg only in play, of course, and torn a piece out of some of the more permanent parts of his vast and varied assemblage of shoes and near-shore life, and ultimately pointed him out to me at once. This doubtless was the beginning of our Sutton formation. It tells of a time when this part of the world was a tropical climate and when the sea view must have resembled that of the South Seas, that haunt of romancers and literary men. R. L. Stevenson. It is no exaggeration to say that when we incorporate into our buildings to-day the lime front of our kilns, we are using the heat and vital energy of Jurassic days. While the coral animals built their houses of lime where the long breakers broke, away to the east the innumerable reptiles bespotted themselves in their dull way, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and 30 feet high to the bird-like forms which reached their climax in the Archaeopteryx. Mammals of the kind which were so numerous on the continent of the time, but which undoubtedly the age of the reptiles. Occasionally one sees something which like the touch of a vanished hand recalls for a moment the conditions of the period. On Trial Island, for example, may be seen in patches of limestone, small angular fragments of an undisturbed limestone, or less continued volcanic activity, such as exists to-day in parts of both East and West Indies, pieces of lava were hurled by explosive action into the air and fell not infrequently into the pools of limy mud which marked the deep portion of the reef. Eventually the mud hardened and the fragments remained in their resting places.

Marbles and Minerals.

The limestones have been recrystallized and become by that process marble. In the days of the past taken place in addition to this. The contact of the limestone with later intruded granite rocks has had the effect of developing certain minerals, for example, on the shore of Cocton Bay, not far from the locality of the pillow-lavas I referred to last week, will be found a thick band of magnetic iron ore which was produced in this way. In other places, as for example, near the head of Esquimaux Harbor, copper is associated with the limestone. While without economic value a most interesting discovery of a mineral in this connection was made by me a few years ago south of the Burnside Road, where, in a pocket in a highly altered and silicified limestone, I found some beautiful crystals of actinolite, a rare mineral. The specimens are of a transparent glassy pinkish brown and are associated with very perfect though small crystals of quartz, often showing the double pyramid termination, but not infrequently lying horizontally among the vitreous actinolite. The latter is a borosilicate of lime and alumina and is the product of heat and water vapors rising through the cracks in the granite rock and acting on the limestone. This discovery is a matter of conjecture, but even things to surprise one in relation to the Sutton limestones. Meanwhile let me say that for a view of a volcanic dyke cutting a beautifully banded limestone there is no better place than the western end of the Belmont Quarries at the end of the light railway.

MRS. DAVIS NERVOUS WRECK

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"I cannot speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. My husband's mother advised me to take the Vegetable Compound and I started it at once. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine bouncing baby and am able to nurse her and enjoy doing my work. I cannot help recommending such a medicine, and any one seeing me before I took it, and seeing me now, can see what it does for me. I am only too pleased for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. EMILY DAVIS, 721 McGill St., Winnipeg, Man. Lydia E. opened to disappear I can only state the matter as I have already gone over it a hundred times with my wife and Flora.

It was on a night of vivid lightning and thunder when Flora was detained at our house by the storm and Foo Joo stayed with us. "Foo" the little fellow was often called "Foo" as more affectionate than Foo Joo—the linen closet, so I slept on a sofa in the sitting room. Both the little fellows were restless and seemed to find it impossible to sleep, so about two o'clock in the morning my wife suggested that as the storm had gone I might take the two of them out for a little run to calm their nerves. I took 'em out, each on a string, and we walked. I remember, towards the river. It was a black night and I was heavy with sleep and I am not sure at what precise moment the two little fellows disappeared. It may have been before I came to the river, or it may not. Or I may have taken them to the railway depot and checked them for San Francisco or perhaps I left them at the Salvation Army All Night Life Boat Station. I can't remember. At any rate they are gone. My wife says, and Florasays, that Wee Wee and Foo Joo have such character—that they will find their way back. But I doubt it.

Don't let diapers irritate your baby's skin

NO matter how carefully you bathe and powder him—if his diapers are washed with harsh soap—his tender skin will suffer. The diaper rash that is the source of such severe suffering to babies is caused by this very thing—washing diapers with harsh or impure soaps. Safe for all his little clothes. Keep your baby's diapers soft and comfortable. Wash them in pure, safe Lux suds and thoroughly rinse. There is no free alkali in Lux to stick to them and make them irritating. No harmful ingredient to inflame the sensitive skin. These pure flakes are safe for all the clothes that touch his tender skin. Use Lux for your baby's soft woolen shirts and bands, his petticoats and dresses, his diapers and socks. To keep diapers from irritating. To prepare for washing: Remove all solid matter immediately—put to soak in cold water. If diapers are simply wet place in a covered pail and let soak in cold water. To wash: Whisk two tablespoonsful of Lux into a thick lather in a tub of very hot water. Let diapers soak for a few minutes then dip up and down pressing suds repeatedly through them. Thoroughly rinse in three waters. Boil diapers once a week using one tablespoonful of Lux to a gallon of water.

A PAGE OF INTEREST TO CHILDREN

MISCHIEF RAG DOLL TAKES AN OUTING

IN THE nursery mantelpiece the clock went tick-tock, tick-tock, and ticked itself nearly to sleep. Of all the nursery it was the only moving thing—all else was still with the quiet of a warm Spring evening. The room was shadowed by the half light of the closing day—but even in the dim light its main appointments could be discerned.

Over in one corner near an open window was a bed. Silhouetted against the sky lay the tousled head of a sleeping child. The soft eyelids were closed, while only a very faint and regular rise and fall of the covert disclosed the sleeper's form. Sharing the pillow with the sleeping child was a golliwog, whose black, woolly face seemed to snuggle into the pillow under the shade of the curly ringlets of the sleeper's hair.

In another corner was an arm chair littered with square wooden blocks and a miscellany of other playthings. Three of the blocks were still arrayed on the broad seat to form the word "cat." Not far off was a "k," which no doubt had caused the now sleeping form some concern. Perched on the arm of the chair and surveying the masterpiece in three-letter words was a rag doll. Its dress was shabby, its sex uncertain, and but one thing redeemed it from the common clay of a rag doll—its eyes.

The eyes were like living coals of fire; though made of pieces of red glass, the eyes glowed and shone with the pure spirit of mischief. They lent a rakish touch to the otherwise placid countenance of the doll—a kind of "You really don't know what I can do if I like" air that challenged even the quietly sleepy surroundings of the nursery.

It may have been that a rising moon lent a touch of mystery to the light and shadow in the room or it may not, but presently the room seemed to become wholly alive. True, the sleeper moved not, but in the witchery of the moonbeams everything else seemed to be cheerfully awake. The moon rays climbed the leg of the arm chair and rested for a moment lovingly on the wooden "cat," crossing to illumine the glowing eyes of the rag doll perched on the arm of the chair.

It may, as we say, have been the uncertain light of the moon playing tricks with mortal eyes, but the rag doll seemed to move of its own accord. In fact, it appeared to stand up and then jump down from the arm of the chair to the seat. It seized the first block, which happened to be the letter "k," and whisked it into the place where the little child had put the "c." The word now spelled "kat." Was it the witchery of a moonlit night or did the rag doll really laugh? It certainly sounded uncommonly like a laugh.

Then with a run it jumped down to the floor and sped across to the bed of the sleeping child. Clambering up the bed post the rag doll went across the covers as if on snowshoes. It even ran up the sleeve of the sleeping child and alighted in the crevice of the coverlet again. Presently it reached the head of the child, and tickled the golliwog on the nose. The golliwog shook its head and the tickling continued. The golliwog made a sudden grab at its nose. There was nothing there; "Bother that fly," it murmured drowsily. Again the rag doll laughed. Tiring of its fun it rolled off to the edge of the bed and parachuted to the floor, sliding down the white bed rail. The room was again surveyed by the mantelpiece for a moment in silence. It tried to climb up one side of the fireplace but could not hold on to the slippery polished wood. Then it reclimbed the chair, only to find that the chair did not reach high enough. At last it sat down in front of the fire place and gazed intently at the clock.

The red eyes of the rag doll glowed and sparkled with redoubled vigor—it seemed to be trying to mesmerize the clock. "Tick-tock tick-tock" sang the clock with commendable patience. The rag doll said nothing, but now its eyes had turned to a greenish hue. It waved its hands slowly from side to side and darted its fingers pointedly at the face of the distant clock. A change came in the tune of the clock. From saying "Tick-tock tick-tock" with a carefully modulated voice it seemed to get jumpy about its song. "Tickety-tock tickety-tock-tock" it now sang, and even this distorted tune was being further broken up.

Meanwhile the hands of the clock took on an unexpectedly rapid action. The minute hand galloped around much as the second hand of a stop watch, while the hour hand followed more slowly, but obviously trying to catch up. Round and round raced the minute hand. "Tickety-tock-tock ticks-tock ticks-tock" sang the clock uncertainly. Meanwhile the hours flew. Ten o'clock became eleven o'clock with a speed that even surpassed the daylight saving measure. Eleven o'clock collapsed into midnight, and still the hands raced on.

Meanwhile a grin settled on the face of the rag doll. All this time it had not spoken, now it seemed to be shouting. "You've got it, you've got it, you've got it," while the red eyes glowed with fire. This extraordinary behaviour could not go on forever. The clock was set to alarm at seven o'clock in the morning, it knew. Now the hours were chasing away as minutes. Four, five, six o'clock raced the hands, passing each hour mark as if it were only a late in a marathon race. Two minutes to seven was reached and the clock got ready with a preparatory clearing of its throat to announce the time with its vibrant summons.

"Brrr-rr-rr" rattled the alarm. In one bound the rag doll left off its antics and regained its place on the arm chair. The sleeper stirred and sat up. All else was still in the room. The clock had resumed its orderly habits. Jumping out of bed, the boy shut off the alarm.

On his way back to the bedside he paused by the chair. "Kat" stared up at him from the wooden blocks. Nearby was the "c" block, now out of use. "That's right," he mused, "I had it right last night. 'C-k-a-t.' I'm sure it is," he said, and replaced the changings.

If the rag doll saw it gave no sign. Listlessly it perched on the side of the arm chair, seemingly it had not moved. Only the clock gave a cluck, a kind of grunt of indignation, and its hands tried to point out the mischievous one, but, imprisoned behind glass, they could not make their message clear.

The Sandman Story For To-night

MR. BEAR MEETS MR. FOX

Mr. Bear would never have noticed Mr. Fox if he had not spoken to him as he was going home with a bag over his shoulder which held his breakfast.

Mr. Fox was hiding behind a clump of bushes. He carried a bag also, but it was not so well filled as the one Mr. Bear carried. The greedy eyes of Mr. Fox looked with envy at the well filled bag. "I really ought to speak to Mr. Bear," he told himself. "He lives far up the mountain side, and I feel sure he has few acquaintances."

So, Mr. Fox popped out from behind the bushes when Mr. Bear came along. "Good day, Mr. Bear," he said very sweetly. "I see we are both early hunters. You must be tired carrying such a heavy load. Why not rest a bit?"

Mr. Bear was a good-natured creature and not at all suspicious, so he carefully laid the bag on the ground behind him as he sat down. Mr. Fox began to talk. He told of his civerness in eluding Mr. Dog, he talked about the wonderful hunting he could do. In fact, he talked so much that Mr. Bear did not say a word, and pretty soon he began to nod for he had traveled a long way and was tired.

Mr. Fox kept right on talking. When he saw that Mr. Bear was sleeping, in a humdrum tone he kept on until Mr. Bear was sound asleep. Mr. Fox was so busy that he was sound asleep from the noise he made breathing.

Still mumbling, Mr. Fox carefully got up Mr. Bear's full bag, but he was not very careful losing it over his shoulder, and down it came "whang bang" on his back.

This was bad enough, but inside the bag was Mr. Goat, and when he found that Mr. Bear had his fisty tied inside the bag he had gone to sleep, intending to try to make his escape when Mr. Bear untied the bag.

The tons of the bag over Mr. Fox's shoulder awoke Mr. Goat and the first thing he did was to kick. He kicked so hard that he stunned Mr. Fox, who dropped the bag and fell, hitting Mr. Bear and waking him up.

"Hey, what are you doing?" said Mr. Bear, jumping up and looking dazed for a minute.

BUDDY AND HIS FRIENDS

By Robt. L. Dickey

Mars Takes Its Curves "On High"

What would you think of an engine driver who waited until he had come to the sharpest corner on his route to pull the throttle in the engine cab wide open and crowd on all speed? His last ride would be like that of Casey Jones of song book fame. Yet there is one engine that runs around its track that does just that, and though it does not run on rails it never deviates from its course. Mars is the name of this engine; the planet Mars and its course is an elliptical one with the sun as its foci.

It takes the planet Mars about two years slightly less, to get around its course in the heavens. Now for half of this distance the heavenly engine runs along the elliptical side of its course toward the sun, while for the other half it is running back on the other side away from the sun. There are two sharp curves on its track, that nearest and that farthest away from the sun. While Mars negotiates its distant curve with due caution and slackened speed it rushes around the curve nearest the sun at a terrific rate of speed—as fast as it can move in fact.

Now a railway engine has a curve nicely banked for it so that it can stay on the track and not be thrown off; and even then the engine driver must slow his locomotive down to a very modest speed if he wishes to bring his passengers home safely. Mars on the other hand has no rails on which to run and yet it rushes around its sharpest curve with terrific force. Why is this?

Learners men of science tell us that Mars when nearest the sun is subjected to the strongest pull from this influence, therefore, to keep its track and not be drawn in to the sun it speeds away as fast as it can. It is as if it tries to travel so fast that the sun will not be able to deflect it from its pre-ordained track. At the furthest curve from the sun however, Mars feels very slightly the pull of the sun's influence and if it traveled other than very slowly at this stage it would escape altogether and also leave his track.

So you see that the engine driver in the heavenly locomotive knows what he is about and Mars travels at just that speed in every portion of its orbit that will keep it on the track it was told to go. For a long time astronomers could not understand the uneven speed of the larger planets until Newton's Laws came to supply a reason for their suspected action. Now the astronomical world is faced with a new theory—the Einstein theory, which it is said would upset many calculations if it were found to be proven fact.

Astronomers in the olden days observed the heavens with the naked eye, gazing through holes in the side and roof of their dwelling. They took measurements with instruments which now resemble our car wheels and other crude devices, yet they learned much that served us to proceed upon. Astronomers today have huge telescopes and instruments of such a delicate nature that they can be made to answer to the slightest wish of the observer. Photography plays an important part in astronomy to-day, and in one sense all sciences combine and depend upon the science of astronomy, making fuller the knowledge of the world below by meditation upon the world of the heavens.

In all the universe the earth plays a very small part threading its ordered path as set out by the laws of nature. Yet even the earth must do its duty or it would come to grief. The individual on this earth plays a very small part, yet we too, each and everyone of us, must do our share in the ordered scheme of life. To study the heavens is to learn humility and a true appreciation of the real purposes of our duty in life.

Present Care Means Future Gain

"Our Forests and Why We Should Protect Them," is the subject of an essay competition to be opened under Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Minister of Lands, for children of junior, intermediate and high school grades. The first prize in each grade is a silver cup while for second prize are a number of gold medals, with silver medals for third prize in each grade. The prizes are to be engraved and a special die has been struck for them. Full details of the competition may be had from the Department of Lands, Parliament Buildings, by telephone.

Annually in British Columbia millions of feet of standing timber are burned to the ground by forest fires. Forest rangers, men who have made a life-long study of the work, have found out that many of the fires are caused by campers' carelessness; leaving fires unprotected to chance; building great fires where there is a hazard of their becoming uncontrollable; and in burning slashings and brush in the very dry season. On top of the

RED SENTINEL FIGHTS REARGUARD ACTION

"HIRR-RR"—the warning alarm of the red squirrel re-echoed across the clearing as two boys came in sight down the path through the bushes. "Chirr-rr," it called, to be answered with the same call from six or seven different places in the trees. He seemed to be a sentinel, the red squirrel, on guard to watch for the approach of the intruders. Certainly his warning went not unheeded. In the trees squirrels drew in on the clearing on all sides to see what had caused the sentinel to give the alarm.

As they watched, two boys came up the path. One had a sling-shot and the other a bow and arrow. The pair stopped in the centre of the clearing. "There he is," said one boy, pointing to where the red squirrel guard sat on his log at the edge of the bushes. "Let's shoot together!" replied the other boy. Silently they prepared their weapons. The boy with the sling-shot inserted a few lead pellets in the pouch of that weapon, while he with the bow bent an arrow on its string to the edge of his ear. "One, two, three," counted the first boy.

At the word "three" the bow twanged; pellets and arrow sped on their way towards the red squirrel. The arrow passed over his head by inches, while the pellets whizzed all around him, but he escaped unhurt. With a sudden dart the sentinel sped along the bark of the log and up a nearby tree. Dancing from bough to bough he passed several trees between himself and the clearing, a warning to others to keep out of sight. He was going to draw the fire of the intruders.

"There he is again," said one boy, and both followed the squirrel through the woods. Sliding down a tree in full view and climbing it again on the other side, jumping from bough to bough and retracing his steps as quickly as he fled, the squirrel worked the boys away from the vicinity of the clearing. At last he came to rest. He had shaken off the pursuit, he thought. Then, and this time silently, he returned to the edge of the clearing and there climbed the bole of a huge dead tree.

Now this tree had a fork in its trunk about ten feet up from the ground. At its roots there was a small cavern, from which it could be seen that the immense bole was hollow. The red squirrel came to rest in the fork and sat there watching the clearing. While he gazed thus intensely to the open space the bushes were parted behind him and a face peeped out. It was the taller of the two boys. The face disappeared as quietly as it had come, and then ensued a whispered consultation.

"Wait until he comes down and then club him," said one boy. "No, let's smoke him out," said the other. The full bent of their intentions became plain when it developed that the tree stood by itself and out of reach from all its fellows. If trapped there the red guard had little chance to escape. He that counselled fire prevailed, and presently one boy sat at the foot of the tree while the other brought damp green ferns and some dry bracken.

A fire was built right in the hollow of the tree and both boys stepped back, one on either side of the tree. Both had dropped their former weapons and taken long sticks. What of the red squirrel? When the smoke commenced to float up through the bole of the tree as through a chimney it found a vent at the fork. The red guard shifted his stand from the mouth of this aperture and hopped around the side of one of the main branches anxiously. The boys were watching him, he saw.

Then the squirrel did a curious thing. He returned to the fork of the tree, now hidden in a pall of smoke, and disappeared from sight. He reappeared in a moment. The boys had not moved. Next he ran down the tree to within a few feet of the ground; but rushed up again as both boys closed in on him. Their sticks thumped against the tree several inches below him as he sped aloft again.

What might have been the end of the unequal contest is not certain, but at this stage a man entered the clearing and saw what the boys were about.

As he was about to be caught in the unmanly contest, the boys left the clearing crestfallen. The man stamped out the first at the foot of the tree and crossed the clearing. Seating himself on a log he heard the "chirr-rr" of the red squirrel. This time there was a note of gladness about that warning, as if almost the squirrel had seen what the newcomer had done for him. Entering the hole in the fork the squirrel emerged at the foot and looked about. The boys had gone. Across the clearing the man, his deliverer, was eating a lunch from a paper packet of sandwiches.

Reassured, the red guard re-entered the tree. In a few minutes he was back, but this time he carried something in his mouth. It was a little brown ball of fur, a baby squirrel. Carefully the guard carried the youngster across the clearing and up to the first branches of a neighboring tree. Here he "chirr-rr"-ed again and was met by another full-grown squirrel. Together they climbed the tree, carrying the little one with them. The man, his lunch over, crossed the clearing and left the paper wrappings at the foot of the tree. Meat and crumbs of bread protruded from its coverings. Then he left.

as many home-made articles as he can, and to write a short summary describing how one of these articles is made.

To do this you will have to talk the subject over with your companions, friends, parents and with all who may have a knowledge of the subject. When you select your list of "Made-in-Victoria" articles bear in mind that all that is changed from the unfinished to the finished state in Victoria and the vicinity is eligible for the purposes of this contest. It is not likely that your list will be complete, but with the lists of other contestants a valuable index of what is here done can be made.

Then where you take one industry for a detailed summary your fellow-readers will choose others, and in this way there will be gathered a list of summaries which will have been prepared by yourselves. To write intelligently about an industry you must make a study of that industry, and that is where the real interest in the contest will come to you. Nothing is manufactured in these days of advanced machinery that does not present a fascinating study in itself.

No matter how plain the object made, its manufacture is a thriving history of industrial romance. The contest will close with the last day of this month, so do not delay in preparing your entry now. If any questions arise which you want settled, drop a line to the Children's Page, The Times, for maybe your fellow competitors are having the same difficulty. To know your own city is the first qualification of a citizen. You, little reader, are the citizen of to-morrow, and now is the time to commence a study of your own home town. A prize of $5 is offered for the best entry in the contest, for further details of which see back issues of this page.

INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY SHOULD BEGIN AT HOME

Industrial Meeting Held to "Boost" Home Products

Display of Local Manufacturers Under Chamber Auspices

An open meeting for all those interested in the welfare of Victoria manufacturers' success with local markets was held last night, a large representation of the city's business men and women were present to hear the address and view the exhibits of locally produced goods. The meeting opened with speeches by various prominent men, and the ladies' addresses were reserved for the latter part of the meeting, since "the sweetest fruit is the late fruit." Many were the arguments put forth in pressing the local buyers to patronize home industries, and amongst the foremost of these was the fact that every dollar spent at home aided the business man, the manufacturer, the retailer and the wholesaler in the upkeep of his business. Indirectly, of course, the public benefited, since, as the city began an increase in production, prices would fall in a fixed ratio.

J. A. Griffith impressed his audience with the fact that first and foremost was the employment situation in the minds of many men and women of Canada today. That employment in Victoria was scarce was an undeniable fact, he asserted. But there was opportunity of a great and immediate increase of opportunity in this respect if the people would only consider home industries and patronize them. Concerns would have a greater demand for their products and that would necessitate an increase of the payroll, and Victoria would have what she needed, more lunch-tables at home.

Industrial Commissioner, Major Martyn, Industrial Commissioner of British Columbia, gave a very excellent address along the same lines as his predecessor. He drove home the fact that local capital should be utilized in the development of the country as a whole and Victoria in particular, not leaving the situation to outsiders. He cited the case of the Albion Stove Works, the product of which was being installed in a ship being built in Scotland, as evidence of the ability of the British Columbia manufacturer to produce a high-class article. The best toned photograph, he had been informed by you who knew, was produced in Victoria.

By getting behind the campaign it would be easy to add another 5,000 to the population of the city on the present industries alone and create an atmosphere which would attract other enterprises. Furthermore, he stated, the proportion of Canadians in the United States was astounding. That they were second in the proportion of the population of the American nation to the Germans, was a recognized fact, he pointed out. "It is unfortunate for us that we cannot keep these people at home," he remarked. "For it was those who were anxious to get on in the world who left their native land and endeavored to make a living wherever they could find one."

Out of the $250,000,000 that British Columbia brings into her people every year, a great amount of this went to the other side of the boundary line to pay for American produce that was driving the smaller Canadian producer out of the market. This was another unfortunate circumstance, the speaker stated.

Women's Organizations. What was wanted now was the co-operation of the women's organizations, said the speaker, and that urgently. He gave a few examples of the manner in which people of this city gave a half-hearted support to local manufacturers. The Sidney Rubber Roofing and Paper Company has sixty per cent of Victoria's trade. They spend one-quarter of a million dollars every year in this city. If they were given 100 per cent of the demands for their particular commodities they would spend a proportional amount for employees, supplies and other necessities. The Albion Stove Works was another similar company in the same predicament. This company actually supplies demands in Scotland for stoves for steamers and yet they get about forty per cent of the Victoria trade. The same thing applied to gramophones, beer, jams, fruits, confectionery and many other products of the city.

Mr. Beckwith Speaks. J. L. Beckwith stated that what Victoria wanted was community spirit and co-operation. This theory was generally accepted as a fact by all the speakers and was applauded by the audience. Seattle was an example of community effort. Men and women should do a little organizing. It was evident throughout the proceedings that the women wanted to see the men organize, and that the men wanted to see the women organize themselves to aid in making the Victoria manufacturers good-sellers.

matter rested with the consumer, who must demand locally made goods, they argued.

C. T. Cross, President of the Chamber of Commerce, made a few remarks in conclusion, stating his sympathy with the statements made during the evening. An open discussion followed in which several participated, but there were no important developments. The meeting closed after over two hours of enlightening argument and hearty suggestion, and the audience left with firm determination that it would support home industries as long as there were local goods obtainable. This is the spirit Victoria requires. There were nearly three hundred at the meeting.

ELEVATOR CONTRACT AWARDED BY BOARD

William O'Neill and Company Will Install Elevator Doors for New Jubilee Hospital

Contract for elevator doors in the two machines of the new Jubilee Hospital was awarded by the Board of Directors in session last night to William O'Neill & Co. at a cost of $4,500 inclusive. Dr. J. W. Warren, new radiologist at the hospital who has just arrived to take up his duties was introduced to the Board. Considerable discussion centered on the composition of corridor floors in the new building. Finally it was decided to get in touch with several of the larger new hospitals and find out how the problem had been solved in those institutions. Considerable progress was made in connection with minor items in the new building. An effort will be made to determine whether or not the Government would be disposed to make a grant to aid the hospital in connection with the giving of insulin treatments. The treatments cost from $2 a day downwards. The services of a chemist in connection with this work will be necessary, the board discovered. Dr. Walter Bapty gave a brief outline of the insulin work already done by the hospital and advocated wider publicity of the treatments here given. The Board approved a set of regulations for the department of radiology, similar to those in force for the pathological section of the work. The Board acknowledged with thanks the gift of an easy chair from Mrs. Cassidy, the second contribution of a similar nature the donor has made to the building.

CITY APPROVES CONTINUANCE OF RAILWAY BRANCH

To Ask Government to Grant Victoria West Land for Park Purposes

Arrangements under which the Canadian Pacific Railway would be able to maintain permanently its spur line across the southern portion of Victoria West Park were approved by the City Council yesterday. The Council will meet the Provincial Government shortly and endeavor to frame with it an agreement regarding the spur line. The city will ask the Government to hand over to the citizens of Victoria a triangular strip of land at the north side of the park and fronting on Esquimalt Road. In return for this the city would grant the C. P. R. its right-of-way over the southern end of the park land. The Council's decision yesterday followed a lengthy inspection of the present spur line and of Victoria West Park. Some of the aldermen, led by Alderman E. S. Woodward, opposed the continued operation of the spur. They said it was not vitally necessary and would involve the installation of a level crossing on Johnson Street. This, they asserted, would be dangerous.
