Prince Tokugawa Hopes For Success of Big Conference

Japan Is Prepared to Curtail Armaments and Stands Ready to Lend Its Complete Co-operation With the Powers, Says Prince Tokugawa, Leader of Japanese Delegation.

Japan stands prepared to limit armaments. If the weight of public opinion in Japan, expressed through its delegates to the world conference on the limitation of armaments convening at Washington on Armistice Day, can influence the trend of deliberations, there will be no serious stumbling block to the successful negotiation of an agreement between the Great Powers leading to the curtailment of armaments.

Peaceful Co-operation. Desirability for peaceful co-operation with the United States was the fundamental point made by Prince Tokugawa. He dwelt on the urgency of the removal of all misunderstandings and causes of misunderstandings between nations, because he believed that if such misunderstandings were permitted to continue they might lead to unfortunate circumstances, even to war.

Opposed to Militarism. The Prince replied: "I think that everybody who knows my work in Japan realizes that I am opposed to militarism as the world's only path to peace. I am not in need of armaments for offence. All that is necessary for Japan is to have an army and navy adequate for her defence. Japan is by nature a peaceful land. Our population is increasing and we have grave problems like that of finding raw materials necessary for our manufacturers and the problem of food supply. We are an energetic people and are naturally looking forward to economic development such as is necessary to meet the needs of our growing empire. In the Far East which is naturally our special field of interest we trust that the nations will be able to reach some understanding so that causes of conflict in the future will be avoided.

Programme of Japan Is Not Aggressive (By the Associated Press Special Representative) The Japanese delegation to the Washington conference reached the coast of North America to-day, filled with determination, according to its spokesmen, to do everything within reason to accomplish results on all questions, especially on naval curtailment, as they wish to contribute to the needed stabilizing and economic readjustment of the world, including Japan. Japan has no aggressive programme, nor will she spring any disagreeable surprises at the conference, the correspondent of the Associated Press was repeatedly assured during the momentous voyage across the Pacific, when a furious storm seemed conspiring to prevent the party from fulfilling its mission.

Welcoming Delegates. The Japanese delegation of welcome at the wharf was led by K. Saito, Japanese Consul. The local Chamber of Commerce was represented by J. F. Watt, president, and A. Gordon Scott, secretary. The Seattle welcoming party included Capt. James S. Gibson, chairman, representing Governor Louis Hart, of Washington; L. C. Gilman, representing Mayor Caldwell, of Seattle; R. H. Parsons, of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce; Harry Whitney; Dr. W. T. Christenson, of the Seattle Post Commission; H. H. Okada, president of the Seattle Japanese Commercial Club; C. Ito, president of the North American Japanese Association; C. Fujii, of the American Japanese Association; K. Hayasaka, Seattle manager of the Yokohama.

Japan's Leader, at Conference

PRINCE IYESATAO TOKUGAWA

Premier Exposes Sources of Attack

Premier Oliver surprised the Legislature last evening, when Attorney-General Farris completed his reply to Mr. Bowser, by adjourning the House only for two hours. The announcement went around that the Government leader would take the floor. Promptly at 8.30 o'clock he did, and held it for two hours, while he attacked Mr. Bowser on the Liquor Control administration motion for an inquiry, alleging malfeasance in office.

Doesn't Want Son Like Bowser. "My son's name is being besmirched. I have hopes that he will grow up to be a credit to the legal profession. But God forbid that he should grow up with the standards of the Leader of the Opposition," said the Premier. Speaker Manson called order: "I do not know of an uplifting thing that has ever been done by the Leader of the Opposition."

Political Life Worth While? "When this afternoon I was listening to the address of the Attorney-General I was very much impressed by one remark of that honorable gentleman when he asked what there was in public life to compensate any man for the abuse and vilification to which he is subject on account of false and malicious accusations," said Premier Oliver. "It took my mind back to the time early in 1918 when upon the death of the late Premier Brewster we were left without a Premier, and were in consultation as to who should be chosen to succeed that estimable gentleman. There was one thought in my mind at that time which reconciled me to the idea of taking on the duties of that position, and that thought was that it would be a very pleasant thing for my children to say that their father had reached such a place of honor in the service of his country."

FARRIS ANSWERS RECENT CRITICISM

Says Bowser's Innuendoes Do Much Harm. Replies Seriatim to Former Premier Charges. States Views on Campbell-Cromie Libel Suit. The Hon. J. W. de B. Farris, Attorney-General replied to Mr. Bowser in the Legislature late yesterday in one of "the most forceful speeches of his career. Dealing with the attack of the Leader of the Opposition Mr. Farris defied him to name one specific charge reflecting discredit upon the officials of the department or himself. The Attorney-General, who had spoken briefly on Thursday afternoon, following Mr. Bowser's discussion of his resolution, and then adjourned the debate until he had had time to study the "charges" carefully, rejected his determination to defend his honor and hurled back in the face of his political foe every derogatory statement which Mr. Bowser had made.

Nebulous "Charges." Hon. Mr. Farris said he had no words to "express the disgust he felt for a man in public life who would stoop to the making of "charges" such as had been laid by Mr. Bowser—charges, he added, which were of the most nebulous character and which did not directly suggest the implication of anyone. Hon. Mr. Farris admitted that all men in office made mistakes; that he knew his own, and that many Government officials erred at times and for these things responsibility must be accepted. Prepared to Meet It All. "However, I am in the hands of the members of this House," said Hon. Mr. Farris, "and in the hands of my constituents. I am prepared to meet any charge, but I demand that it be made so that whether against myself, my friends or members of this Government, it will be made so that the person charged will not feel that he has to fight the air."

FAVORABLE C. N. R. OCTOBER BALANCE

Better Than August Figure, Says Hanna. Low Traffic Rates Desired by Rates. Toronto, Oct. 29.—"The National Railways are not going to be an embarrassment on our hands," stated D. B. Hanna, president of the Canadian National Railways, in an address to the Toronto Rotary Club on the "Canadian National Railways and Steamships." "In August we were able to show an excess of earnings over expenditures for October we expect to show something even better."

FRENCH PREMIER ON WAY TO U. S.

Have, Oct. 29.—Premier Briand, heading the French delegation to the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and Far Eastern questions, sailed from this port for New York on the liner Lafayette at 6 o'clock this evening. The other members of the French official party accompanied the Premier. Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Mrs. Emma von Saucken, aunt of Field Marshall von Hindenburg, Germany, commander in the great war, and grandmother of two United States soldiers in the same war, died yesterday, aged 99 years. She was born in Danzig September 29, 1822.

Sooke River Bridge Goes Out

Serious Damage Reported From All Points. Passage of Island Highway Interrupted. Heavy Rainfall Is Cause of the Floods. Vancouver Island, in general with the rest of British Columbia's Pacific slope, has suffered very considerably as a result of the heavy rains of the past few days. Victoria's rainfall from 5 o'clock last night to 5 o'clock this morning was 1.15 inches and up to 10 o'clock this morning it was 1.35 inches as against Vancouver's 1.75 inches. In comparison with the lower mainland's record of four inches of rain during the past two days Victoria's precipitation stands at 2 inches.

Damage General. Damage has been occasioned to the Chase River bridge near Nanaimo, and all the streams are turbulent and dangerous. The Island highways in several places have also suffered quite severely, and the roadways are flooded. Traffic must be diverted off the Island Highway at mile 33, near Cobble Hill, and at Chemainus. An unfortunate result of the cutting of the water supply to the people on the other side of the bridge, as the water main feeding this section was carried on the bridge, is that the Public Works Department will undertake repair as quickly as possible, it was stated to-day.

Early Report From Britannia. Vancouver, Oct. 29.—A number of persons drowned, houses piled on the beach by a cloudburst and flood and the town cut off from communication by wire, is the report that came to Vancouver late last night from Britannia Beach. According to brief messages received by the Government telegraph through its linesman, a cloudburst washed out a fill at the mining town at 9 o'clock last night. A great rush of water came down, carrying houses and debris to the beach and piling them there, cutting the town in two and leaving it a raging torrent running between the two sections.

RECORD HIGH WATER AT JORDAN RIVER DAM

Seven feet of water is reported over the spillway at Jordan River dam, the highest ever known. The previous record was five feet seven inches. This tremendous freshet has done slight damage to the flume below the dam, but the auxiliary flumes at Alligator Creek are looking after the service, and the British Columbia Electric Railway reports that it is not likely there will be any interruption to the light and power service. "There is not a railroad to-day that would not prefer to have the lowest rates going, but look what they are up against. The Canadian National Railways' average wage to the employees per annum was at one time $700, and in 1913 it was $1,330. In 1920, thanks to the Chicago Labor Board, it was much increased so that in 1921 we are expecting an average wage rate of $2,000 per employee per annum."

Coast Floods Took Toll of Lives and Did Great Damage

Death List At Britannia Mines May Be Found to Be Half a Hundred; Transcontinental Trains Cancelled; Port Coquitlam Suffers.

Deaths at Britannia Mines, eighteen miles north of Vancouver, which may total fifty, destruction of bridges, washing out of railway lines east of Vancouver, with a consequent cancellation of transcontinental trains, destruction of the Sooke River bridge and interruption of highway traffic on the southern end of Vancouver Island were results of floods on this coast reported to-day.

Vancouver, Oct. 29.—The known dead and missing in the Britannia Mines flood number thirty-five, and the death list may reach fifty out of a population of 300. Fifty out of 110 houses were carried away and three or four are floating about in the bay. At Britannia Mines the following bodies of persons who lost their lives have been identified: F. O. Downing, Vancouver; Mrs. M. A. Nelson, Carl Nelson, J. Emmott, Mrs. H. Luxmore, Gordon Lowe, O. Fiva, W. Dion, wife and child; Mrs. C. M. Crippen and child, Mrs. J. Brailwood and child, R. Clark, child of F. Whitcomb, Mrs. H. Hawkins, Mrs. J. L. Godin, Mr. and Mrs. J. Henderson, and Margaret Primrose.

Continuing rains for a week, a heavy snowfall in the higher levels and Chinook winds brought on the flood. The assay office has been turned into a morgue and the work of identifying the dead is going on. A telephone message was received at 7.30 o'clock this morning by Walter Owen, Inspector of Provincial Police, Vancouver, from Mr. Moss, justice of the peace, Britannia Beach. Mr. Moss stated that following a cloudburst during the night, nearly half the houses at Britannia were washed down to the beach. A number of residents were reported missing. In accordance with Mr. Moss's request, five doctors and eight nurses were sent to the scene to-day by the steamer Capilano. They were accompanied by Senior Provincial Constable Sam North and Constable Sid Saunders. The latter resides at Britannia Beach, but it is understood from the meagre information received that his family escaped.

WORST COAST FLOOD RECORDED

Vancouver, Oct. 29.—Never in the history of this section of the Pacific Coast have flood conditions been so serious. Railway bridges have been washed out and the Canadian Pacific Railway announces that it will be five days before the trains can be brought into or dispatched out of this city for Eastern points. From Vancouver to Lytton heavy rain had been falling for several days and the higher level of the Canadian Pacific this morning were that the rain had let up all the way to Lytton at 9 o'clock, but a few minutes later other dispatches arrived stating that it had started raining again. Railwaymen are preparing for a hard struggle to clear their lines. Heavy snowfall and heavy lumber mills along the tracks for heavy timbers and work gangs are proceeding with all possible speed to the various subdivisions where the storm has worked destruction. At noon a special train will leave over the Canadian Pacific tracks for Coquitlam with timber.

TRACK WASHOUT 100 FEET LONG

Among the big washouts on the Canadian Pacific is that just east of Mileage 121, Thompson subdivision. This washout is 100 feet long and from forty to sixty feet deep. The latest report received this morning said that the water had not gone down any at this point. Another big washout occurred a few hundred feet east of the West Switch at China Bar. There is a rock slide forty feet long and eight feet deep at Mileage 8, Cascade subdivision. Three small washouts have been located between Mileage 12 and 14. The washout at Mileage 12 is sixty feet long and twenty to twenty-five feet deep. Serious damage occurred to the bridge over Kilo Creek, part of the west pier being destroyed. This is a small bridge, about sixty feet long. The report from this morning was that there was no chance and a work train and pile driver were effecting repairs.

Anxiety over Monday's debate in the Commons, especially its relation to the Irish negotiations, was reflected by to-day's newspapers. They emphasized the fact that an overwhelming vote of confidence, which would be assumed by the Government if it received, would strengthen the hands of the Ministry when its representatives should meet the Irish delegates again. It was generally believed the next meeting of the Irish conference would be of the utmost importance, and would show whether peace was possible.

may be considered an outpost for the protection of American interests in case of dispute over Far Eastern matters. But if everybody goes on establishing outposts and increasing navies without limit, where is the end to be, and how are the world peoples, including the Japanese, to enjoy prosperity and happiness. Sincerity and mutual trust must enter into the solution of this problem.

"Desires" was the word employed in outlining Japan's defensive naval force for the future—that it should be big enough to cope with any sea power in Oriental waters. But the authority at once admitted that if the United States and Japan launch a dual combat of building Japan would have to drop from the race because she is too poor to stand it. And Japan's economic poverty will, it is believed, play another part in the conference.

While other powers during the great war, spent or exhausted their wealth, Japan enriched herself in all directions. Her production—both steamers and clocks found a ready market everywhere. Her people suddenly found themselves able to live in a luxury hitherto undreamed of. The Oriental virtues of thrift and frugality disappeared. Everybody had money and spent it lavishly. But the end of the war changed everything. The cost of living went up higher than in other lands, and labor clamored for more return. Reconstructing Europe, especially Germany, has been gradually absorbing the world markets and ousting the Japanese whose prices are higher and whose efficiency is less. Japan's imports show a big excess over exports, and the unfavorable balance will probably continue for some time. The economic situation of the country is, therefore, bad. It is complicated by the fact that the Empire is in a stage of intense transition where all kinds of advanced social ideas, many entirely untried, are taking root. The growing demands of labor give great concern to the leaders of the nation.

Equal Commercial Opportunity.
Rapidly becoming an industrial country, Japan seems gravely anxious over the question of raw material of which she has little, and that problem, say, representative Japanese will have to be brought up at the Wash-

Musical Recital.

Duncan, Oct. 23.—A musical treat was enjoyed by the delighted audience of about 200 who attended on Thursday evening at the Odd Fellows' Hall, Duncan, the recital given by Mrs. Wilson-Jones.

The opening number, scene and aria, "Der Freischütz," "Softly Sighs" (Weber) was strong and true and sweet, as were all the various numbers.

"Robins My Mother Taught Me," Dvorak; "Si Mes Vers," Hahn; "Soldier's Song," Greig; "Ave Maria," Bach-Gounod, in the first part, and "In My Garden," Liddle; "Beethoven's Credo" in the second part, were studied by Mrs. Wilson-Jones with the composers.

The programme was full of variety. Russian, French, German, Italian and English composers were represented and the weird old Welsh dirge, "David of the White Rock," according to legend was composed on a death-bed and played by unseen hands by the composer's harp at his funeral.

"Robin Adair," "Kathleen Mavourneen" Annie Laurie" were among the closing numbers, and in response to an encore the singer gave a beautiful little composition of her own, a benediction, which she calls "Allah, and which has never been published.

Mrs. Edna Bales, R. I. A. M., and Feis-coill medalist, played the accompaniment and gave a very finished rendering of a "Polonaise in D Flat" by Chopin.

Hallowe'en Dance.

Duncan, Oct. 22.—The Hallowe'en dance by the Agricultural Society in their hall on Monday is arousing a great deal of interest. It is advertised as old-fashioned and "novelty" with fancy dress optional. The Cowichan Chapter of L. O. D. E. has taken charge of the arrangements for a play and dance to be given in the Duncan Opera House on November 16. Miss Stephens has been secured as stage manager for a delightful play, "A Flower of Yeddo," a Japanese romance, with music, in which Mrs. Wade, the Misses E. Bevan, Joyce Wilson and Koch and Mr. Henslowe are taking part.

Mrs. Martin's orchestra has kindly offered their music, and Mr. Scholey, manager of the Opera House, has very kindly donated the hall, the tickets, advertising on his screen at moving picture shows and has also kindly promised to book the seats for the committee.

These advertisements will appear at 10 o'clock on Monday and Tuesday evenings and at the regular pictures on Friday and Saturday evenings in the Opera House. Several ladies have taken tickets in different sections of the district for the play and a great crowd is expected.

Cowichan Health Centre.

Duncan, Oct. 27.—The regular monthly meeting of the Cowichan health centre was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Women's Institute rooms, in which Mrs. Moss, O. B. E., in the chair. Great advance in the dental clinic was reported and it will be established very shortly in the school here, Chemois and Cobble Hill. Dr. Kerr is giving very help and encouragement and great thanks are due to him. The chair which Dr. Lewis Hall of Victoria, was good enough to donate it is thought may be set up right in the school and the chair that Dr.

All delegates to the committee meeting reported great progress in their respective units, and the G. W. V. A. delegates stated that their Mr. Courtenay, Langford, Cowichan and Parkville branches were ready to assist amalgamation by every means in their power. Application forms for provisional membership in the amalgamated body may be secured from the secretary of each ex-service body, and from C. K. Christian, secretary of the joint amalgamation committee.

To date not less than 1,000 applicants have signified their willingness to join the united body suggested in these proposals, and Victoria is leading the remainder of the Dominion by the first real signs of action in this direction, it is stated.

LAY THE CHARGE.
If the leader of the Opposition in the local Legislature has any information in his possession which is capable of conversion into a specific charge against either the Government as a whole or any of the gentlemen to whom he referred in his speech on Thursday afternoon there is nothing on earth to prevent him from taking the course which last night's disposal of his own resolution leaves open to him. He will have understood from the observations of the Premier and the Attorney-General, as well as from the attitude of the House by its vote, that if he desires to get an investigation into any transactions conducted by the Government or the Liquor Control Board, or such relationship as any public official or "political friend of the Government" may have had with either of these bodies, he will not be permitted to take refuge behind "insinuation" or innuendo; he will have to make his charge or charges on his own responsibility as a member of the Legislature and Leader of the Opposition. If Mr. Bowser is ready to do this, to follow the only honest and logical course, the course dictated by the fundamental principles of British justice, he may have the fullest investigation. To repeat rumor or street corner gossip in a new request for an inquiry will get him nowhere; it will delude nobody but himself. His duty is plain. Is he ready to discharge it or default?

DELEGATION ARRIVES.
It is a good omen that Japan should have sent her delegation to the armaments conference on the same vessel as that which has brought her trade mission to these shores. While the business with which the official and the unofficial representation will concern themselves differs entirely it is obvious that with the establishment of a more cordial commercial relationship between the Occident and the Orient there will be welded a link of common interest that must in future constitute a deadly foe to war and international friction. It is only natural that we in this part of the world should evince a more lively interest in the delegation from Japan which reached Victoria this morning if only because of the fact that the Western world had become occupied in surmise as to just what that enterprising Island Kingdom had at the back of its mind. But in answer to this comparatively harmless speculation we have the authority of the foremost leaders of public thought in Japan, none the less the official pronouncements of those who hold high office in the service of the Emperor, that she finds herself warmly in accord with all the nations which have consented to make a genuine attempt to attain universal and lasting peace. Victoria extends its greetings to the delegation which is now on its way Eastwards and sends its good wishes to the business men of the Orient who are seeking a more liberal interchange of commodities across the Pacific.

MERVILLE.
When members of the Legislature are discussing the soldier settlement area at Merville it would be better for them to take the considered statements of Mr. Menzies as a guide to their own criticisms rather than the obviously political "information" upon which a speech may be made without personal knowledge of conditions as they exist. It is doubtful whether even the Minister of Agriculture would look upon this particular scheme in all its phases as a howling success; but he and the Government are entitled to what credit there is in originating as well as financing, a means of rehabilitation which rightly belonged to the Dominion authorities. The area in question may not have been the best that could have been selected; it may be quite true that six thousand out of the fourteen thousand acres which comprise the settlement are not of much use for agricultural purposes; but Mr. Menzies has told the Legislature that there are one hundred and fifteen farms occupied and one hundred and twenty-six tracts of land cleared. Surely that much development is worth something to Vancouver Island and the Province even if the whole thing has cost more than half a million dollars. How many undertakings connected with the war and its aftermath could have been accomplished cheaper if there had been a few years to consider them? As for Merville the only real grievance seems to centre upon the question as to whether the Government will extend the time for re-payment of loans and reduce the interest charge. Very probably a solution will be found to get over this difficulty; but the Legislature and the Province as a whole—not excluding the settlers at Merville—will have to begin to get used to normal business methods.

FEDERAL REGISTRATION.
It does not appear to be generally known that the names of all those qualified electors in British Columbia who failed to exercise the franchise at the general election last December no longer appear upon the electoral roll of the Province. It does not seem to be understood as well as it might be that the Provincial lists will be used for the forthcoming Federal contest. In other words unless those who were automatically struck off by the operation of the local statute register before the fifth day of next month they will not be able to record a vote in the Dominion election. It is not necessary to emphasize the importance of the issues that are to be decided by the people of this country on the sixth day of December. Canada's economic and industrial future are in the balance and in the settlement of the numerous questions which have been introduced to the political arena during the last few weeks it is imperative that every man and woman should cast his and her ballot. But registration, where necessary, must be attended to on or before November 5.

NEW YORK KNOWS.
Two or three days ago the Minister of Finance announced the sale of two million dollars' worth of British Columbia securities. Yesterday's dispatches from New York intimated that the self-same issue had been promptly disposed of by the purchasers on the New York market. Whatever other significance the transaction may have it reveals a confidence in British Columbia which should hearten that section of the population which wears the frosted spectacles of "blue ruin."

KEEP HOPING.
While there are no actual conferences taking place between the Sinn Fein delegates and the British Cabinet the political writers of many London newspapers seem to take a keen delight in generating as much pessimism as their combined imagination will allow. One or two of the leading journals, however, are of the opinion that even if the present conference should fail another would be arranged almost immediately. And although that theory may be difficult to accept it should be remembered that it will be no easy matter for either de Valera or the Dail Eireann to accept responsibility for creating a condition out of which further excesses in Ireland would almost certainly arise. Look at it as one may, despite the obvious difficulties which still bar the way to an understanding, it is inconceivable that there will be a return to open warfare. And there is now no halfway house.

NOTE AND COMMENT
Those qualified electors in the City of Victoria who have failed to have their names included in the municipal electoral roll by the closing hour next Monday will not be permitted to vote at the civic elections which take place in the first week of December. It should not be necessary to emphasize the importance of the franchise and its use on polling day. All that remains for those who have not registered is the discharge of an important duty on or before Monday evening.
May we ask that the Government set aside one afternoon for a discussion of the plan to take care of the ex-sanatorium tuberculous patient. We refer to the colony for after care.
It has been discovered that it is too late to include Mr. Charles Hapsburg in the crew of the "Quest" which is now bound for the Southern Pacific and Antarctic regions.
Both of the Liberal and Progressive platforms call for a fifty per cent. customs preference for British goods. Mr. Meighen favors increased trade between Britain and Canada only to the point that it shall not interfere with a sacrosanct high protective tariff.
There will be no free samples of Scotch whiskey with which the various speakers in the Legislature may "illustrate" their points and criticisms in respect of the quality of brands stocked at the Government stores. Free apples from time to time is not considered a precedent.
According to a dispatch from Constantinople a British mission has gone to Anatolia to sound the Nationalists about peace and the Angora Government has demonstrated its welcome to the move. Apparently both Turks and Greeks do not like the way the newspapers have almost ignored their little scrap.

COUNSEL SUBMITS LIQUOR ACT NOT YET OPERATIVE.
R. C. Lowe Alleges Discrepancies in Signatories.
The appeal from a police court conviction, being brought by John Ferguson in the County Court, before His Honor Judge Lammann was yesterday adjourned until Monday for decision, after argument of counsel had been submitted. Briefly the appellant is asking for the reversal of a conviction in the police court, before Stipendiary Magistrate Alexis Martin when a sentence of six months was imposed on the accused on a charge of having liquor for sale, contrary to the provisions of the Government Liquor Act.
C. L. Harrison, for the Crown, submitted the evidence of Chief Fry and special constables Craig and Brown, as previously reported, to show that beer and whiskey had been found in the premises of the appellant, at the Gordon Hotel, Johnson Street, on August last, and that the specials had been able to purchase some beer for money.
R. C. Lowe, for the appellant, moved that the Government Liquor Act was not operative, having been gazetted by the Lieutenant-Governor alone, and not by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, as he stated was set forth in the Act itself. His Honor Judge Lammann adjourned the hearing, stating that the points raised by opposing counsel were extremely important and would need consideration. The case will be called on Monday next in the County Court.

HOROSCOPE
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1921.
(Copyright, 1921, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
Neptune dominates to-day in kindly rule, according to astrology, but Uranus is adverse.
The rule is held to give clear vision on public and private affairs and to influence the mind toward common sense decisions.
During this sway plans for extending business connections or commercial projects should be worked out, as they are likely to develop profitably.
There is a sign that promises much profit in oil lands and new sources of supply.
This should be a lucky day to start on an ocean voyage since the planetary government indicates safe journeying.
All the indications for this day seem to point to a tendency toward sane ideals of living and a tendency to condemn waste and extravagance.
The death of a Prince or man of Royal lineage will cause much speculation regarding the future of a country in Europe.
The stars foretell that Thanksgiving Day of this year will be fairly fortunate in its planetary direction, but it will emphasize the progress of new ideas, owing to incidents that forecast national problems.
The birth rate is to increase during the winter, but the stars foreshadow more than ordinary perils for young mothers.
There is a promising sign for manufacturers who provide for the needs of persons of moderate means.
Persons who hitherto it is in the augury of a favorable year in which they will profit by the aid or advice of friends. Young women will be much courted.
Children born on this day will be highly intelligent and they are likely to hold important positions. Girls have the forecast of early marriage that will be happy.

POLITICS
Rats Scurry Ashore.
Voters to Suit Themselves.
Meighen and Mathematics.
Sad Changes at Ottawa.

While the average voter will not bother much about political parties, he should not allow himself to be led into the belief that the present fight is a case of city versus country, The Lethbridge Herald warns. In a time in which there is an election campaign there is a temptation to make party and political strife enter the phase of individual and community strife amongst certain of those who allow partisan feelings to get the better of them. This is a temptation which should be stoutly resisted. It is one which does not enter the broad and right-thinking mind, that is the mind which gives itself to understand and realize that the fight is for issues in which personal feelings do not enter.
Statistics are somewhat like high explosives. It's best to handle them carefully. Mr. Meighen has been finding this out during the last few weeks. The St. John Telegraph notes. Mr. Meighen should remonstrate with the Department of Labor at Ottawa, The Telegraph suggests. That department has just issued a return showing that employment in Canada has an upward tendency. How can this be so if employers are so worried about possible tariff changes that they are afraid to enlarge their operations? If the Department of Labor is right, there is no panic among employers, and the Prime Minister is deceiving the people.
Things have sadly changed at Ottawa since the Borden Government came into office in 1911. The Manitoba Free Press remarks with passing interest and little regret. This is the political story of the last ten years: Of the members of the Borden Cabinet of 1911, only two members, Sir James Lougheed and Sir Edward Kemp, are members of the present Government. Of the others, four are deceased—Hon. Messrs. Cochrane, Hughes, Monk and Pelletier, as well as Hon. L. C. Casgrain, who later joined the Borden Cabinet. Five are in private life—Sir Robert Borden, Sir Thomas White, Sir George Perley, and Hon. Messrs. Doherty and Rogers. Three have gone to the Senate—Sir George Foster and Hon. Messrs. Reid and Crothers. Three have been appointed to Government positions—Hon. W. Roche to the Civil Service Commission, Hon. W. B. Naitel to the Railway Commission, Hon. Martin Burrell, as Librarian of Parliament; and two were appointed judges—Sir Douglas Hazen and the late Hon. L. P. Pelletier.

EGYPTIAN BREAD MAKING
3000 years B.C. "MIXING THE LEAVEN"
4X
THE "risen" loaf we owe to the discovery of "leaven" by the ancient Egyptians. Before then all bread was "sad" and heavy. But even with this momentous discovery, bread-making in ancient Egypt was a laborious business. The housewife still had to clean the grain, "bray" it, knead the dough, "prove" it and watch the loaves as they dried in the sun. The modern housewife is fortunate in comparison, for, with Shelly's 4X Bread delivered to her door, she need not bake at all! How much more pleasantly can she spend the hours she saves! Shelly's 4X Bread is always light and crisp with white, tender "crumb"; and thin crust, ever baked an even "golden brown."

ROYAL VICTORIA

It took Charles Chaplin just twenty-two weeks to make "The Idle Class," his latest comedy for First National, which will be shown for the last time to-day at the Royal Victoria Theatre.

Besides Mr. Chaplin the cast of "The Idle Class" consists of Edna Purviance, Loyal Underwood, Harry Bergman, Rex Storey, John Rand, Letitia Parker and Allan Garcia. In many of the scenes Mr. Chap-

IN THE QUEEN'S SERVICE

To-night will be the last opportunity for patrons to see "In the Queen's Service" at the Little Theatre, Oak Bay. It is the unanimous opinion of all those who have seen the play that it is one of the best produced by the Dramatic Society.

They are tunneling to the basement of a bank. After a battle royal he is gagged and bound securely to a chair. In trying to reach the bell rope he falls over. As impossible as it may seem it is a matter of film record that Ray manages to work his way towards a wall and by using his head as a lever manages to upright the chair, although his hands are tied so tightly that he cannot move them more than an inch or two. This is only one of the exciting scenes which will be seen in Charles Ray's latest release "A Midnight Bell."

VARIETY

Manager Clark of the Variety Theatre announces with regret the closing performance of William Farnum in the Fox photoplay "The Scuttlers," which has drawn not only full houses, but abundant expressions of pleasure from patrons. "It is one of those pictures you can see with interest many times," he says. However, his schedule makes it impossible to retain it after to-night.

DOMINION

When the spectator witnesses the showing of "The Great Impersonation," George Melford's latest Paramount production, which will be shown at the Dominion Theatre for the last time to-day, he will be carried on the wings of fancy to many different sections of the old world. A jolly room in an Oxford college opens the picture, which then cuts to a dense jungle in German East Africa and a thatched cabin in a clearing. From there the film flashes to a Bo-

Then, the audience is carried to the interior of the Kaiser's secret war vault on the Wilhelmstrasse in Berlin at a time just prior to the great war, when the Emperor was stoning up his many helms war machines to execute his plan to conquer the world. Next are seen the quarters of the German ambassador in London and settings representing offices in Scotland yard and other diplomatic headquarters.

COLUMBIA

Wild animals have a distinct attraction for everybody—probably a liking inherited from the days when we were kids and the advent of the circus was the biggest thing in our lives. Of course there are any amount of zoos where we can see animals, but the big delight is to watch them doing something. Here's where the big attraction comes in "Nomads of the North" at the Columbia.

PRINCESS

"The Rosary," a beautiful comedy drama, is being presented in a most acceptable manner by the Mildred Page Players. From start to finish there isn't a weak spot in the whole performance. The comedy is great and especially well handled by those playing the various character comedy parts.

Miss Page is at her best and Henry Leeland is the perfect com- cellent, while Byron Alden and Bruce Wilton add another to his many successes.

CURWOOD STORY HAS MANY THRILLS

That many animals possess not only minds, but also reason, is the rather startling claim made by James Oliver Curwood. And the author is warmly supplied with his claim by Jane Novak, who has the leading feminine role in the screen version of his story, "Kazan," which will open an engagement at the Royal Victoria Theatre on Monday. "This will shock some nature scientists of the old school, whose egoism will not allow them to concede that any living creature except man possesses reason," says Mr. Curwood. "The line between instinct and reason is very faintly drawn; the two overlap so much so that very frequently animal 'instinct' is far superior to man's so-called reason." And Miss Novak says: "I am absolutely convinced that Mr. Curwood is correct in his theory after working with the big wolf-dog who has the part of 'Kazan' in that picture. That dog could do everything but talk."

MR. MEIGHEN IS JUST "AS MEAN AS HE USED TO BE"

Considers Big Interests Instead of People, Marchant Says
 Liberal Rally Keen in Support of William Ivel

"When I refer to my friend Meighen I mean it for, up to a few weeks ago, he was my boss and he is just as mean now as he was then," declared William Marchant, veteran Liberal warrior, in the course of a fighting speech delivered at the Liberal rally last night in the Liberal Club auditorium. Mr. Marchant was very clever in his satire and humor and scored the Meighen Government right and left.

There was a large attendance at the meeting and the speakers included Mr. Marchant, Henry C. Hall, ex-M.P.F.; William Ivel, the Liberal candidate for Victoria, and W. G. Stone, Captain M. D. Harbord, the president, was in the chair and the programme was interspersed with community singing.

The speakers pointed out very clearly the weakness in the present administration. Henry Hall, the first speaker, said that following his trip across Canada recently he was convinced that the West would be solid against Meighen, the East would be about as bad and in any event the Liberals would have a good majority in the next House.

ENJOYABLE PROGRAMME AT CAPITAL TO-MORROW

The second of the series of concerts to be held on Sunday evenings throughout the Winter by the G. W. V. A. band, at the Capitol, promises another enjoyable and profitable evening to-morrow. The band numbers include the great "Stradella" overture, Sullivan's "Yeomen of the Guard," and a descriptive nautical selection, "A Voyage on a Troopship," the words to the prayer being inserted in the programmes. The assisting artists on the occasion are Miss Hilda Knight, who has been re-engaged on account of her success at her initial bow before a Victoria audience, and Mrs. Grasley-Bick, mezzo soprano, who in her two songs will be assisted by Miss Irene Bick in two violin obligatos. Admission at future concerts will be by programme, which can be purchased

Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

TELLS SAFE, SIMPLE WAY TO TREAT AND RELIEVE AT HOME

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh or if phlegm drops in your throat and has caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms may be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmitin (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it 1/2 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easy, while the distressing head noises, headaches, dizziness, cloudy thinking, etc., should gradually disappear under the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell, taste, deafness, hearing and noises dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms which suggest the presence of catarrh and which may often be overcome by this efficacious treatment. It is said that nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are caused by catarrh and these most, therefore, be many people whose hearing may be restored by this simple, harmless, home treatment. NURSES' ALUMNAE OF ST. JOSEPH'S TO HOLD DANCE

At the last meeting of the Alumnae Association of St. Joseph's Hospital definite arrangements were made for their next dance which is to be held on Friday, December 2, at the Alexandra ballroom.

This will be the third dance to be given by the association, and judging from the enthusiasm of the members of the various committees it promises to be even a more successful evening than either their former dances. The dance will be under the patronage of the following ladies: Mrs. T. W. Barrett, Mrs. A. B. Hudson, Mrs. H. J. Wason, Mrs. A. Campbell, Mrs. A. McDermott, Mrs. J. Hart.

Heaton's orchestra has been engaged for the occasion and an excellent musical programme arranged. A limited number of tickets have been printed and these may be obtained from the members of the association or at the hospital.

WOMEN'S CLUB TO MEET IN BALLROOM

Increased Membership of the Women's Canadian Club Causes Change

So rapid has become the growth of the Women's Canadian Club that considerable difficulty has been experienced during the past year in accommodating the many members desirous of hearing the various lectures arranged by the club. To remove the handicap imposed by the overcrowded conditions in the private dining-room at the Empress Hotel where the club has been in the habit of meeting, the executive has arranged to hold all future meetings of the club in the spacious ballroom, commencing with Tuesday afternoon, when Rev. Robert Connell will speak on world-conditions of unemployment and unrest. Mrs. Lloyd Murtie will sing.

The announcement of the change in the meeting place will be welcomed with satisfaction by the members, while the new president, Mrs. J. C. F. Hyndman, feels confident that the membership will, now that the accommodation handicap is removed, grow ahead and reach the one thousand mark before the end of the club year.

FOR CHILDREN THE SANDMAN STORY FOR TONIGHT

MR. COON'S SURPRISE
Mr. Coon poked his head out of the hollow tree when he and his wife had spent the winter. The sun was nice and warm and Mr. Coon thought it would do no harm to take a little run when it grew dark, for he was sure spring had come to stay.

So when Mrs. Coon was fast asleep out crept Mr. Coon. Down the tree he ran and off to the farm with his plump chicken to Mrs. Coon, I am sure she will forgive me for going away without her.

So all day he slept in the nest and the sun was nice and warm, but when evening came Mr. Coon awoke with a shiver, for the sun was gone and a cold wind was blowing, which made Mr. Coon feel very unhappy and uncomfortable. He wished he was at home close beside Mrs. Coon in the hollow tree.

Mrs. Coon forgot all about the fat chicken he was to take to his wife; he thought only of feeling warm once more and down he jumped and off he ran to his home. But when Mr. Coon

HALLOWE'EN PARTY CHARMING AFFAIR

The spirit of Halloween held full sway in an appropriate atmosphere of black cats, witches and the like at the Alexandra ball-room yesterday when the members of the Camosun Chapter, I. O. D. E., were the hostesses at their annual Halloween party. The hall was charmingly decorated with festoons of orange and black, from which were pendant medallions showing black cats and broom-riding witches in silhouette, Autumn berries and foliage adding to the colorful effect.

The early part of the afternoon and evening, between the hours of four and eight, were given over to the tiny kiddies who came in all the gaiety of Halloween costumes. Orange and black was the predominating color chosen and many delightful costumes had been fashioned with the aid of crepe paper, making the task of the judges, Mrs. David Miller, Mrs. George Simpson and Mrs. W. W. Brentzen, no sinecure. After much deliberation the prizes were awarded to little Miss Murie Davenport, an awesome witch; June Proctor, a dainty fairy, who each received a box of chocolates generously donated by Ormond's, Ltd., while a special prize of a Halloween keepsake was presented to Doreen Wilson, a diminutive Turkish lady. Mrs. A. T. Griffiths presented the prizes to the winners.

The children entered thoroughly into the spirit of revelry, dancing indefatigably to the music furnished by the University Military School orchestra and the Rev. G. H. Andrews. When dancing paused, there were counter-attractions in the shape of a huge lighted pumpkin in charge of Mrs. Frank Bennett and Miss Leitch, and apple-bobbing under the direction of Mrs. F. H. Mayhew. At a prettily decorated stall, delicious candies in attractive containers were sold by Mrs. Kippen and Mrs. Wille.

At 5:30 the children marched to the downstairs cafe, where an abundance of delicious fare was served on tables decorated with marigolds, greenery and Halloween favors. Mrs. C. L. Campbell, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Wriglesworth and Mrs. McIntyre were in charge of the tea arrangements. At 8 o'clock the grand march was formed under the direction of Mrs. George Simpson and the kiddies reluctantly left for home.

The evening was given over to the grown-ups, many of whom were in costume. Mrs. J. C. Barnacle, the president, and Mrs. A. C. Luxton, vice-president, received the guests both in the ballroom and evening. Dancing to the strains of Heaton's orchestra continued until midnight. During the evening many of the guests took occasion to open into the future, aided by Mrs. Berkeley, Mrs. Conacher, Mrs. W. Brown and Mrs. Randall.

The Chapter wishes to express its grateful thanks to all those who in any way assisted, including Mrs. Luxton, Miss Carey, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Hartley and Miss Taylor, who carried out the decorations, and to Mrs. Hopkins, Mrs. Phillips, Messrs. Drummond-Hay, Hartley and Phillips, for presiding at the door.

Esquimalt Women's Institute.—The general monthly meeting of the Esquimalt Women's Institute will be held on Tuesday November 8 at the Parish Room, St. Paul's, Esquimalet Road. The report of the official delegate to the Conference of Women's Institutes will be read and other interesting items are being arranged. The executive will be the hostess at the social hour, and it is hoped a large number will attend this first meeting in the new quarters.

to have such pretty babies," snapped Mrs. Coon. "And as for their crying, why shouldn't they, when their heartless father stays away all day and part of the night and their mother has to go looking for him? Now you go in the house and don't you dare stir until I tell you to. I am almost frozen, and how can you expect me to keep six children warm all alone?"

"I—I thought it was Springtime," stammered Mr. Coon.

"Well, it isn't," said his wife. Mr. Coon meekly crawled into his nest and curled up with his family, and he made up his mind to say there until the Springtime came to stay, for he felt sure that six children to care for would not have been thrust upon him if he had been there instead of Mrs. Coon.

MAIN STREET

THE STORY OF CAROL KENNICOTT

By SINCLAIR LEWIS

A concrete sidewalk with a "parking" of grass and mud. A square mug brown house, rather damp. A narrow concrete walk up to it. Sickly yellow leaves in a window with dried wings of box-elder seeds and snags of wool from the cottonwoods. A screened porch with pillars of thin painted pine surmounted by scrolls and brackets and bumps of jigsawed wood. No shrubbery to shut off the public gaze. A lugubrious bay-window to the right of the porch. Window curtains of starched cheap lace revealing a pink marble table with a couch-shell and a Family Bible.

"You'll find it old-fashioned—what do you call it?—Mid-Victorian. I left it as is, so you could make any changes you felt were necessary." Kennicott sounded doubtful for the first time since he had come back to his own.

"It's a real home!" She was moved by his humility. She gaily motioned god-by to the Clarks. He unlocked the door—he was leaving the choice of a maid to her, and there was no one in the house. She jiggled while he turned the key and scampered in. . . . It was next day before either of them remembered that in their honeymoon camp they had planned that she should carry her over the sill. In hallway and front parlor she was conscious of dinginess and lugubriousness and airlessness, but she insisted, "I'll make it all jolly." As she followed Kennicott and the bags up to their bedroom she quavered to herself the song of the fat little gods-of-the-hearth:

I have my own home,
To do what I please with,
To do what I like with,
My den for me and my mate and my own!

She was close in her husband's arms; she clung to him; whatever side chair squeaked. "Choke her—choke her—smother her." The old linen smelled of the tomb. She was alone in this house, this strange still house, among the shadows of dead thoughts and haunting depressions. "I hate it! I hate it!" she panted. "Why did I ever—"

She remembered that Kennicott's mother had brought them family relics from the old home in Lac-qui-Meur. "Stop it! They're perfectly comfortable things. They're comfortable. Besides—Oh, they're horrible! We'll change them, right away."

Then, "But of course he has to see how things are at the office—"

She made a pretense of buying herself with unpacking. The chintz-lined, silver-fitted bag which had seemed so desirable a luxury in St. Paul was an extravagant vanity here. The darling black chemise of frail chiffon and lace was a husky at which the deep-bosomed bed stiffened in disgust, and she buried it into a bureau drawer, hid it beneath a sensible linen blouse.

She gave up unpacking. She went to the window, with a purely literary thought of village charm—hollyhocks and lilies and apple-cheeked-cottages. What she saw was the side of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church—a plain clapboard wall of a sour liver color, the ash-pile back of the church; an unpainted stable; and an alley in which a Ford delivery-wagon had been stranded. This was the arranged garden below her window; this was to be her scenery for—

"I mustn't! I mustn't! I'm nervous this afternoon. Am I sick? . . . Good Lord, I hope it isn't that! Not now! How people lie! How these stories lie! They say the bride is always so blushing and proud and happy when she finds that out, but—I'd hate it! I'd be scared to death! Some day but—Please, dear nebulous Lord, not now! Bearded sniffy old men sitting and demanding that we bear children. If they had to bear them I wish they did have. Not now! Not till I've got hold of this job of liking the ash-pile out there! . . . I must shut up. I'm mildly insane. I'm going out for a walk. I'll see the town by myself. My first view of the empire I'm going to conquer!"

She fled from the house.

She started with seriousness at every concrete crossing, every hitching-post, every rake for leaves; and to each house she devoted all her speculation. What would they come to mean? How would they look six months from now? In which of them would she be dining? Which of these people whom she passed, now mere arrangements of hair and clothes, would turn into intimates, loved or dreaded, different from all the other people in the world?

As she came into the small business-section she inspected a broad-beamed grocer in an alpaca coat who was bending over the apples and celery on a slanted platform in front of his store. Would she ever talk to him? What would he say if she stopped and stated, "I am Mrs. Kennicott. Some day I hope to confide that a heap of extremely dubious pumpkins at a window-display doesn't exhilarate me much."

(The grocer was Mr. Frederick E. Ludelmeyer, whose market is at the corner of Main Street and Lincoln Avenue. In supposing that only she was observant Carol was ignorant, misled by the indifference of cities. She fancied that she was slipping through the streets invisible; but when she had passed, Mr. Ludelmeyer puffed into the store and coughed at his clerk. "I seen a young woman, she come along the side street. I bet she's Doc Kennicott's new bride. Good-looker, nice legs, but she wore a hell of a plain suit, no style. I wonder will she pay cash. I bet she goes to Hollander's more as she does here, what you done with the paster for Fluffed Oats?")

UPPHILL FEARS FERNIE FOLK MAY BE SUSPICIOUS

Labor Member Talks on Unemployment, Compensation and Pensions

"We heard the Leader of the Opposition talk yesterday about 'kitties,' the member for Alberni the other day referred to 'shooting craps,' the member for Fort George says there was bootlegging in beaver skins and people were doing everything that is vile and the Attorney-General yesterday calling people liars and blasphemers," said Tom Uphill in his speech in the debate in the Legislature yesterday.

"If the people in my constituency knew that I was mixed up with such a bunch they would be asking me to come back to Fernie," he went on, bringing the House down in roars of laughter.

Mr. Uphill said he had sympathy for the Premier after listening with regret to members of the Government party criticize acts of the Government.

Must Tackle Unemployment.

"It is painful to hear members so disloyal as those I have heard since I have been in this House," he said. "Consequently I will not be as critical as I would have otherwise been."

He declared that there was no excuse for B. C. not trying to grapple with the unemployment situation even in only some small measure, although employment conditions were worse in most other countries. He said that under the present system there will always be unemployment as it is beneficial for corporations to have a surplus of labor.

"But," he added, "it is the duty of the state to see that no one in the state goes hungry."

Wants Better Mine Laws.

Mr. Uphill regretted that there was no mention in the Lieutenant-Governor's speech of amendments to the Coal Mines Regulations Act. He came out for the payment of men taking up mine rescue work as is done in England where they get $2 a day.

He asked whether members of the House would like to go through what it is so men go through without receiving remuneration. He said that as they have to be prepared to go through hell in case there is a mine disaster and during their training have to risk all sorts of dangers, it is not unreasonable that they should ask for fifty cents an hour, although he thought they were entitled to $1 an hour. Men taking this training, he thought, should also be insured for $5,000 for the benefit of their families.

Referring to checkweighmen in the mines, he said he was disappointed to discover that corporations have been able to dictate the appointment of these officials.

The labor members in the House, he said, intend to bring in amendments to the Mines Regulations Act later on.

More Compensation Needed.

As for the Workmen's Compensation Act, he declared that the compensation for men temporarily disabled was inadequate, and that widows and orphans coming under it should be paid as much as they would be under the Canadian Pensions Act. He declared that the maximum of $40 a month for a woman left with a family no matter how large was ridiculously inadequate.

The Mothers' Pensions Act he called a skeleton "because there are only certain individuals who can come within the scope of that act."

Mr. Uphill dealt in detail with the road situation in his part of the Province, declaring that the Government does not spend money there commensurate with the revenue it gets from that district. He declared that such a policy was dishonest, although he hoped for an improvement.

Against New Taxes.

"We find that this Province is said to be in such a deplorable condition that we have to hit a man for one per cent of his income," he went on. "No taxes should be placed on any man's earnings except on above what he thought, should also be insured man with a large family you hit worse than anyone else. To the person with a large family you give no encouragement. It would be more honorable to employ a Jesse James to go around with a gat and gun to get in money than to tax a man one per cent in this way."

"If the Government is making a lot of money out of the Moderation Act, why not go into other businesses, such as the butcher, grocery or dry-goods businesses and then perhaps we can eliminate this proposed taxation."

"I believe in giving credit and honor where credit and honor is due. This Government is a good business Government. Business is always judged by the results obtained. Any Government that can buy an article for $14 and sell it for $24 without any expenses is a good business Government. That is what is being done with beer."

ASKS ABOUT USING P.G.E. FOR HIGHWAY

Fred Anderson Asks Minister About the Abandonment of Clinton-Squamish Section

The proposal to abandon the Pacific Great Eastern Railway from Squamish to Clinton and use the railway grade for highway purposes, will come before the Legislature for the first time on Monday when Fred Anderson of Kamloops will ask the Hon. J. H. King, Minister of Public Works, whether the Government has given any consideration to it.

Abandonment of the Coast section of the P. G. E. through the mountains was advocated by a number of members of the Legislature after they made the trip over the line last August.

Mr. Anderson wants to know what the Government is doing in connection with the Trans-provincial Highway from the Coast to the Interior, the time spent surveying each of the routes, the distance to be constructed and reconstructed on each route, maximum elevation of each summit, estimated costs, nature of maintenance, national benefits and period during which the route will be open each year. He is also asking Dr. King what is the estimated amount by which cost of construction will be

The Judgment of Fifteen Men - If you were being asked to invest in The Mount Royal Hotel Company, Limited, and had no other facts to base your decision upon than the character, reputation and financial responsibility of the Board of Directors, you could, with complete confidence, invest your money in this enterprise.

Consider these men individually, and their associations. Canada's greatest Banking, Railroad, Insurance and Industrial Corporations have no greater directorate.

Is it reasonable, then, to suppose that so able and so far-sighted a group of men would personally invest in this Company and go upon its Board of Directors if there was the slightest suspicion that the enterprise was not well founded. Certainly not.

They know, as does every other big business man, that Montreal is on the threshold of a great business destiny. It is our greatest City—our greatest seaport—our largest Transcontinental Terminal—and a Financial and Jobbing Headquarters.

Bobby's Adventures In Swan-Land

By Geoffrey T. Butler—Copyright Applied for

CHAPTER VI.

NEXT morning the sun was high in the heavens, when Bobby was awakened by its bright rays falling on his face. Hastily jumping out of bed, he peeped underneath to see if Bunny was still there. Sure enough, there was his rabbit friend peacefully sleeping with his head upon the pillow. Reaching under and taking hold of one long ear, Bobby gave it a sudden jerk; this so frightened Bunny that he jumped up, and in so doing, bumped his head on the bottom of the bed.

"Oh, dear, how you frightened me," he said, when he saw it was only Bobby. "I was dreaming of the fox, and I thought he surely had me."
"I didn't mean to frighten you," replied Bobby. "I only wanted to wake you. The sun is quite high and it is time we were up and dressed."

As soon as they were dressed they went down to breakfast, and after breakfast they went out to spend the day in the woods amongst the flowers, and also to try and find some lettuce for Bunny, who was very fond of it, indeed.

Leaving the King's palace by the back door, they strolled across a meadow, which was ablaze with violets, buttercups and forget-me-nots, to a low hill, from which they could get a splendid view of the surrounding country. Away to the north, as far as eye could reach, was a beautiful valley, which was dotted over by many graceful shade trees from amongst which many quaint little lakes peeped out. Through the interlacing branches of the trees, the picturesque houses of the swans could be seen, bordering on the white sandy shores of the lake. The houses were all of similar design. Each had a white slide leading down to the water, so that the baby swans could hastily get to the water. For you know that baby swans can jump into the water and swim as soon as they are out of the shell.

As Bobby and Bunny were seated under a tree viewing the charming landscape, great flocks of swans passed over their heads, and taking up their positions on their respective lakes, at once commenced to prepare their homes for the coming of the little swans.

While our two little friends were busily engaged watching the movements of the swans, the King waddled slowly across the hill, and seeing the two lolling about on the grass, came and seated himself beside them.

"Good morning Mr. King," cried Bobby and Bunny at the same time.

"Good morning my little friends," answered the King. "I hope you are enjoying yourselves in my country."

"Yes, we are enjoying ourselves very much, indeed," said Bobby, "but would you please tell us all about your country. It seems to be such a wonderful country."

"Yes, it is very wonderful," replied the King. "So much more wonderful than the outside world, though I have never been there myself I have heard my swans talk about it," he added.

"You saw the great mountain as you approached yesterday?"

"Yes, we did," replied Bobby.

"Well, that surrounds all of this country. In fact this land is laid out like a giant wheel. The north pole is the hub, and leading from it are high mountain ranges running out to the rim like huge spokes of a wheel, between these spokes, or mountains, are situated the valleys of the different birds. The next valley to ours is the Song Bird country. This valley is ruled by a very beautiful Canary Queen. Next to that is the Hate-Beetle country, which is the only bad section of my whole kingdom. It is presided over by a very wicked old Crow Witch who is noted for her sorcery and magic. Any bird that should be unfortunate enough to go into this valley is at once turned into a Hate-Beetle by the cruel old Crow Witch. When once in this country there is no way of getting out, except by magic. Beyond the Hate-Beetle country comes the Goose country, then the Duck country, and so on," said the King.

"Is there any way that we could go to the Song Bird country?" Bobby asked.

"Only one," replied the King. "And that is by way of Violet River. Violet River flows out of Rain Bow Lake, and passes away to the north through Hot Spring valley and Fairyland, then passing under the mountain, comes into Song Bird land."

"I think I would like to go to Song Bird land," remarked Bobby.

"I would advise you not to," said the King. "It is a very long, hard journey, and besides the birds would be very angry, and would probably all pick you with their sharp beaks."

"Oh, we are not afraid of a few bird picks," answered Bobby.

"Now," said the King. "I have talked long enough. It is getting late and I think we had better go in for the night." So the three strolled slowly across the meadow to the palace. Bobby and Bunny telling the King about the outside world as they went.

Time passed very quickly for Bobby and Bunny while in Swanland. They spent many pleasant weeks in wandering through the woods and exploring different sections of this beautiful country. Sometimes they would go to the lakes and help the swans gather dry grass and leaves to build their nests.

As Spring gave way to Summer, the lakes and streams became covered with little yellow baby swans, and our two little friends loved to sit on the shore and watch them floating gracefully along with their mothers.

One balmy afternoon as Bobby and Bunny were sitting on a rock and dabbling their feet in the water, they decided to try and reach Song Bird Land. "For who knows," said the rabbit, "but that we may find some lettuce in that valley. I am sure there is none in this." So slipping on their shoes, they at once went to the King and told him of their plans. At first the King refused to hear of it, but seeing that they were determined, he finally consented to let them go.

"Before you go, however," said he. "I will give you a magic feather. If ever you get into trouble, just blow on the feather three times, and make known your wish, then your wish will be immediately granted." Bobby thanked the King, and asked if he might have the feather that night, so that they could start early in the morning.

CHAPTER VII.

The next morning saw our little travellers up every early, and on their way, trudging along in the hot sun up hill and down dale. For a great distance they found the going quite hard, for in places the ferns and underbrush were very thick but presently they came to an open flat country where traveling was comparatively easy. Far ahead they could see great clouds of steam arising.

"I wonder what that can be," remarked the rabbit. "I hope it isn't rain clouds."

"Oh, no," said Bobby. "don't you know that it never rains in Swanland? It must be the Hot Spring country that the King spoke about; however, we shall soon see," he added.

Soon they came to a deep ravine, and looking down they could see that it was quite wide, with a small lake in the middle, which was surrounded by reeds and grasses. From these reeds there seemed to come a peculiar sound, or singing, as if thousands of tiny voices were singing, all in a different key, "we-we-we-we."

"Well, that is funny," remarked Bobby. "I will bet you that it is the Fairies."

"Oh, yes, it must be," said Bunny, "let's climb down and see."

The two climbed down the steep bank as fast as they could; but just as they were about to enter the reeds, something about the size of a hummingbird rose out of the grass, and coming towards them, sang in a deep voice "we-we-we-we." Then his voice changed to "cous-in, cous-in." At this a great flock of the same objects rose up and completely surrounded Bobby and Bunny, while they kept up their song of "we-we-we-we."

"Mosquitoes," cried the two, with the same breath.

"What shall we do?" said Bobby, "they are big enough to eat us up."

"I know," answered Bunny, "the feather."

So, quickly drawing the feather out of his pocket, Bobby blew on it three times and said, "drive off the mosquitoes."

At once the mosquitoes moved back, but circled about singing "we-we-we-we," all the louder. Then Bobby and Bunny hurried across the mosquito swamp, and lost no time in climbing the hill on the other side. On reaching the top they were quite out of breath, so sat down for a while before proceeding.

"Gee, I'm glad we had that feather," said Bobby, as soon as he had sufficient breath to speak. "Those fellows would have eaten us up."

"Yes," answered the rabbit; "but we had better be getting along now, for it is quite late, and we must soon be looking for a place to sleep."

The Cuttle Fish at Home With His Friends

Cuttle Fish and Their Cunning Ways

YOU HAVE no doubt, little reader, heard of the cuttle fish, and his objectionable habit of emitting a dense cloud of inky fluid when getting worsted in a fight, but did you know that he has two brothers, who, though different in shape are much allied in habits to this ugly monster. A cuttle fish is usually thought of as a great mass with huge protruding eyes and a number of long arms armed with "suckers," with which he is supposed to capture his food and destroy his enemies. Such a monster is not a cuttle fish in fact, but a poulpe, the half brother of the real cuttle fish.

Poulpes, cuttle fish, and calmars are the three types of mollusks which are given the general term, cephalopods, and are a very interesting group of marine life. The cuttle fish has two fins running the whole length of his body; the calmar has two separate and distinct fins attached to his sides, while the poulpe has neither, but has eight large arms growing apparently out of his head, and two still larger. All the cephalopods are extremely ugly looking creatures, but are not without interest.

Not being endowed with the power of moving to any great extent, these creatures have what is an equivalent, in great power and extreme cunning. To follow the poulpe for a moment, we find he hides in a large crevasse with his body covered with seaweed, but his arms free for all that. Presently along comes a crab, or a fairly large fish. Unsuspectingly it approaches within reach of the hidden arms and a sucking monstrous arm is shot forth with the speed of light, encircling the prey and drawing it down to destruction in an extremely large mouth under a parrot shaped beak, the whole set between two eyes of a fixed and terribly malevolent appearance.

If the prey so caught is large enough to warrant it, all arms are brought into play, and the poor victim is squeezed to a pulp by the terrible force. The arms of the poulpe is covered with round discs, which are in reality "suckers" similar in action to the feet of the house fly. Hundreds of these suckers are on the arms of the monster, and their combined pulling power is a very real source of danger to the luckless prey.

The arm of a man once caught by not a very large poulpe was rendered skinless and bleeding from this suction, and though the man escaped he did so only after the little savage had been killed. What you know as cuttle fish, but in reality the poulpes, are to be seen around the coast of this island, and more than one fairly large specimen has been seen in Esquimalt harbor, where the authorities forbade bathing on account of this menace.

During a storm the cephalopods anchor themselves to large rocks at the bottom of the ocean by means of two of their legs or arms, whatever you wish to term them, and keep on the alert for drifting prey. When attacked by a larger force than themselves the cephalopods emit clouds of a dark impenetrable fluid which completely hides them until the danger has passed. Once this is emitted the monsters cannot emit more until some hours have passed and in that time they are open to attack, so that they usually hide after a battle in which they have been worsted or have failed to kill their enemy.

One interesting member of the cuttle fish family can make astonishing leaps, and has been seen in Pacific waters to spring far out of the water, enough to fall on the deck of a small boat, but this is exceptional, as most of the tribe are slow to move and depend upon cunning for their meals and very existence. As a rule they are to be found at the bottom of the sea, and only come to the surface when too ill to put up a fight among their natural enemies.

Naval Brigade Boys Have Busy Week

THIS has been one of the busiest weeks possible for the local division of the Boys' Naval Brigade. All week long the boys have maintained the Ship's Office at the corner of Broad and View Streets, where large numbers of people have been given an insight into the training received by the members of the brigade. The band has been in attendance on two nights this week, and upon each occasion its services were much appreciated.

Aiding in the canvassing for funds to carry on the work of their brigade, the boys have been actively at work in a large number of different ways. Every day visitors were shown over the Ship's Office and made acquainted with the various uses of the equipment and models utilized in training for the career at sea. Boards showing every type of knot and splice imaginable, bends and hitches, compass charts, sailing models, and navigation aids, all have been explained to crowds of interested visitors.

In the evenings the boys, under their instructors, have given demonstrations in the various phases of their training, and these demonstrations were well attended by the public. On display in the window of the Ship's Office this week was a fully rigged model of the barquentine Simon F. Tolmie, donated by Mr. Chris. Cholberg to the brigade, as well as two interesting copies of The London Times of the days of Admiral Nelson, and other educational exhibits.

In addition to all this the boys have aided the officials of the Navy League in canvassing, with the result that the present campaign has been a success. Over fifty boys of the brigade are now actually serving at sea on ships of Canadian and British register, and many more are in training for their career at sea. The Victoria branch of the Boys' Naval Brigade holds the record for getting boys off to sea of all the brigades in Canada, and it is stated.

EXTENUATING CIRCUMSTANCES

Every member of the Smith family, barring one, performed on some musical instrument or other, which led a neighbor to remark that so much musical talent must be a great source of satisfaction to the head of the house.

"Really," continued the neighbor, "it is remarkable. Your youngest son plays the cornet, both your daughters are pianists, and your wife plays the violin. Now what are you?"

"I am a single stringed pessimist," replied the much harassed man.

IN TWO GRADES

A progressive grocer placarded his window with the sign "Use Make-All Flour," and underneath the advice, "The Best Is None Too Good." Of course, a small boy had to add "The Worst Is Rotten."

The Comets: Wayward Children of the Sun

IN OUR study of the heavens we have now proceeded to the point where we know a little about the planets, and the giant planets, but we have yet to learn many things, and one of the most interesting of these matters is the elusive comet and his tail. You will remember we compared the heavens to a large family wherein the sun is the daddy and all the other bodies are his children. Planets and even the elder children, the giant planets, are orderly and well behaved, indeed so regular in the actions are these children of the sun that we may tell each other where such and such a child will be to-night, or in a hundred nights from now, and we know where it must have been hundreds of nights ago, if we had use of such knowledge.

The comet on the other hand are the disorderly children of the sun, the wild wayward creatures, the very appearance of whom the sun could scarcely recognize upon their swift and unexpected return within his ken. The well behaved children of the sun have regular paths along which they travel with but trifling variation year in and year out. True they step aside a little one for the other, but never far enough to get off their own orderly courses. You see they are the solid masses of the sun's family, the heavy weights who can be depended upon to behave, but it is far different with his comets, of which the sun is ever in ignorance until at unannounced and momentary occasions, they come to visit him again.

The comets are of all sizes, young and elder children of the same wild, care-free dispositions. As might be expected from their actions they are restless and ever wandering, with no real home. They are of flimsy make-up, and uncertain in temper and not always of a very good behavior. If the sun could say so in words, his thought of his comets would be in the form of a perennial question, "Where are my wandering boys to-night?" and then nobody could tell him.

Comets visit us out of the outer spaces attired in glorious but ever changing raiment. As they near the sun they put on their best dress and carry long glistening tails in their wake, as they come abreast of the sun they switch their tails around out of his sight, so that he may not see their shabbiness, no doubt, and as they again leave him on their rambles the comets carry their tails in front of them. Some times they have one tail, at others two, and sometimes their journey has been so hard that they have no tail at all. But whatever the condition of their raiment they make the most of it for the benefit of the sun, or in fact the sun encourages them to look their best, for as they near him their tails become long and flowing, and fade rapidly away, the farther they go from their parent body.

With all their faults the comets are affectionate children, and return, though, of course, always unannounced. They have no careers in life and wander somewhat aimless, most of the time outside our ken, and never within our sight save by virtue of powerful telescopes guided by sheer good luck. It may be easily seen that with such a reckless and care-free mode of life the comet gets into great trouble with the more solid and sensible members of the sun family, and so that may perhaps account for a good deal of his erratic movement and ever changing dress. Some comets have been seen within reasonable limits of their expected arrival but are seldom on time, either very much too early, or very late and even out of their zig-zag path. Comets, indeed, are the blacksheep of the heavenly family, and perhaps because of that they are the more interesting to students of astronomy to-day, and in the days gone by.

UNDER THE CHESTNUT TREE

Sometimes a joke becomes so old and soft that it is forgotten, and upon finding it again the humor of the original is often recalled. Such a "chestnut" is the following:

Up Hill Work.

Paddy was at work between the ties on the railroad track when an express train came around the far corner unexpectedly. Paddy dropped his tools and ran for all he was worth right up the track. He had covered fifty yards in this manner when he passed a tramp sitting on the bank. "Run up the bank man, run up the bank," roared the tramp. The train was now almost on the heels of Paddy, who nevertheless continued to race up the track. At this stage he stumbled and fell—to be picked up by the cowatcher and brushed off the track, nearly dead from fright. The tramp came to his assistance, and in reply to the question "Why didn't you run up the bank?" a very faint Paddy replied, "Up the bank it is, Begorra, an' I couldn't bate it on the level."

Shorty Stays at Home and What Happened Later

FIRE, fire, come, Shorty, there's a fire down at the grocers." Shorty, a lad of ten, looked up from a book that he was reading and ran down to the gate. Right enough the boys had been correct, the grocer's store was on fire and that badly. "Come on, what are you waiting for, silly!" called the gang of boys, even now racing to the scene of the blaze. "I don't want to," answered Shorty, and went slowly back to his book, though he started to his feet again as back from the street came the taunt "Shorty's scared; he's a fraidy cat. Shorty's scared of a fire."

Now Shorty had wanted to go to that fire in the most impelling way, for he was all boy and like others of his age saw only the impressive sight of the red licking flames and the actions of the firemen, and thought not of the damage or suffering a fire was sure to cost somebody. But the fact was Shorty had been told to stay at home, and that because he had been naughty, and he was to remain within his own yard for punishment. The punishment was none the less sweet, by reason of the new factor, a thrilling fire no less than eight doors from his home, with the noise plainly audible, but the conflagration out of sight.

"Bring a line there—look lively," Shorty heard, to be followed by "Get back, get back, keep it off the next house." The echoes were very tantalizing, but still Shorty stayed where he was. He had his book open in his hand, but he did not notice it was upside down, for after all he was a very small boy, and tears will come to us all at times.

Shorty, in this state of mortification was aroused by the sight of a train of sparks drifting on the wind over his head. They floated gracefully, flitted around a chimney stack, and caught by the wind started on again, until they were lost to sight over the roof of the next house. It was not much, but still it was something, and Shorty settled down to watch the weird, and aimless flight of the sparks. Presently one dropped on the roof of his own home. Shorty watched it resentfully, it glowed a moment, seemed to be going out, and then reddened with renewed brightness, the roof was alight. It took Shorty two seconds to realize that his home was in danger and then he raced off to the cellar, dragging out a hose that taxed all his strength. He had often watched his daddy hitch up the hose to water the garden but he never quite thought it would be so hard to get the hose on to the tap.

At last this was done, and with a heart swelling with pride he saw the first rush of water spout out of the nozzle. The spark by this time had grown to a red patch in which shingles were getting blackened. Shorty climbed up on the porch and drew the hose after him. With a foot cocked over the trellis work he played water on the roof until it steamed and hissed. He by now was in the very heaven of delight, he had a fire all of his own, and more than that he was fire chief, crew and all, for nobody else appeared to have noticed the fire on the house so far down the street from the main blaze.

Shorty was just in the midst of trying to climb up on to the roof itself when he heard a hail from the garden. His daddy had returned, and in a moment was alongside Shorty, taking the hose from his hands and patting him on the head. With this assistance Shorty's victory over the flames was assured, and he had saved the home of his daddy and himself. You will remember that Shorty was "at home" because he was naughty and was doing punishment, but now you must know that Shorty was given a very appreciative welcome by his parents for his sense of duty, the honest side of the little lad that made him stand even the insults of the street gang to do as he had been told. Shorty's dearest possession is a silver watch inscribed "Chief Shorty."

PERSONAL CARELESSNESS

"I don't like these photographs at all," stated the irate man to the photographer. "I look like an ape."

The photographer turned his back, and with a glance of lofty disdain, said, "You should have thought of that before you had them taken," was his cutting reply.

Part V. (Continued) Reforming the Household.

The next task upon which the Prince embarked was a more arduous one; he determined to reform the organization of the royal household. For years past the confusion, discomfort, and extravagance in the royal residences, and in Buckingham Palace particularly, had been scandalous; no reform had been practicable under the rule of the Baroness; but her functions had now devolved upon the Prince, and in 1844, he boldly attacked the problem. Three years earlier, Stockmar, after careful enquiry, had revealed in an elaborate memorandum an extraordinary state of affairs. The control of the household, it appeared, was divided in the strangest manner between a number of authorities, each independent of the other, each possessed of vague and fluctuating powers, without responsibility, and without coordination. Of these authorities, the most prominent, were the Lord Steward and the Lord Chamberlain—noblemen of high rank and political importance, who changed office with every administration, who did not reside with the Court, and had no effective representatives attached to it. The distribution of their respective functions was uncertain and peculiar. In Buckingham Palace, it was believed that the Lord Chamberlain had charge of the whole of the rooms, with the exception of the kitchen, sculleries, and pantries, which were claimed by the Lord Steward. At the same time, the outside of the Palace was under control of neither of these functionaries—but of the Office of Woods and Forests; and thus, while the insides of the windows were cleaned by the Department of the Lord Chamberlain—or possibly, in certain cases, of the Lord Steward—the Office of Woods and Forests cleaned their outside. Of the servants, the housekeepers, the pages, and the householders were under the authority of the Lord Chamberlain; the clerk of the kitchen, the cooks, and the porters were under that of the Lord Steward; but the footmen, the liveries, porters, and the under-butlers took their orders from yet another official—the Master of the Horse. Naturally, in these circumstances the service was extremely defective and the lack of discipline among the servants disgraceful. They absented themselves for as long as they pleased and whenever the fancy took them: "and if," as the Baron put it, "smoking, drinking, and other irregularities occur in the dormitories, where footmen, etc., sleep ten and twelve in each room, no one can help it." As for Her Majesty's guests, there was nobody to show them to their rooms, and they were left, having utterly lost their way in the complicated passages, to wander helplessly by the hour. The strange divisions of authority extended not only to persons but to things. The Queen observed that there was never a fire in the dining room. She enquired why. The answer was "the Lord Steward lays the fire, and the Lord Chamberlain lights it"; the underlings of those two great noblemen having failed to come to an accommodation, there was no help for it—the Queen must eat in the cold.

"The Boy Jones." A surprising incident opened everyone's eyes to the confusion and negligence that reigned in the Palace. A fortnight after the birth of the Princess Royal the nurse heard a suspicious noise in the room next to the Queen's bedroom. She called to one of the pages, who, looking under a large sofa, perceived there a crouching figure "with a most repulsive appearance." It was "the boy Jones." This enigmatical personage, whose escapades dominated the newspapers for several ensuing months, and whose motives and character remained to the end ambiguous, was an undersized lad of seventeen, the son of a tailor, who had apparently gained admittance to the Palace by climbing over the garden wall and walking in through an open window. Two years before he had paid a similar visit in the guise of a chimney sweep. He now declared that he had spent three days in the Palace, hiding under various beds, that he had "helped himself to soup and other eatables," and that he had "sat upon the throne, seen the Queen, and heard the Princess squall." Every detail of the strange affair was eagerly canvassed. The Times reported that the boy Jones had "from his infancy been fond of reading," but that "his countenance is exceedingly sullen." It added: "The sofa under which the boy Jones was discovered, we understand, is one of the most costly and magnificent material and workmanship, and ordered expressly for the accommodation of the royal and illustrious visitors who call to pay their respects to Her Majesty." The culprit was sent for three months to the "House of Correction." When he emerged, he immediately returned to Buckingham Palace. He was discovered, and sent back to the "House of Correction" for another three months, after which he was offered £4 a week by a music hall to appear upon the stage. He refused this offer and shortly afterwards was found by the police loitering round Buckingham Palace. The authorities acted vigorously, and, without any trial or process, of law, shipped the boy Jones off to sea. A year later his ship put into Portsmouth to refit, and he at once disembarked and walked to London. He was re-arrested before he reached the Palace, and sent back to his ship, the Warspite. On this occasion it was noticed that he had "much improved in personal appearance and grown quite corpulent"; and so the boy Jones passed out of history, though we catch one last glimpse of him in 1844 falling overboard in the night between Tunis and Algiers. He was fished up again; but it was conjectured—as one of the Warspite's officers explained in a letter to the Times—that his fall had not been accidental, but that he had deliberately jumped into the Mediterranean in order to "see the life-buoy light burning." Of a boy with such a record, what else could be supposed?

A Canny Prince.

But discomfort and alarm were not the only results of the mismanagement of the household, the waste, extravagance, and peculation that also flowed from it were immeasurable. There were preposterous perquisites and malpractices of every kind. It was, for instance, an ancient and immutable rule that a candle that had once been lighted should never be lighted again; what happened to the old candles, nobody knew. Again, the Prince, examining the accounts, was puzzled by a weekly expenditure of thirty-five shillings on "Red Room Wine." He enquired into the matter, and after great difficulty discovered that in the time of George III. a room in Windsor Castle with red hangings had once been used as a guard room, and that five shillings a day had been allowed to provide wine for the officers. The guard had long since been moved elsewhere, but the payment for wine in the Red Room continued, the money being received by a half-pay officer who held the sinecure position of under-butler.

After much laborious investigation, and a stiff struggle with the multitude of vested interests which had been brought into being by long years of neglect, the Prince succeeded in effecting a complete reform. The various conflicting authorities were induced to resign their powers into the hands of a single official, the Master of the Household, who became responsible for the entire management of the royal palaces. Great economies were made, and the whole crowd of venerable abuses was swept away. Among others, the unlucky half-pay officer of the Red Room was, much to his surprise, given the choice of relinquishing his weekly emolument or of performing the duties of an under-butler. Even the irregularities among the footmen, etc., were greatly diminished. There were outcries and complaints; the Prince was accused of meddling, of injustice, and of saving candle ends; but he held on his course, and before long the admirable administration of the royal household was recognized as a convincing proof of his perseverance and capacity.

At the same time his activity was increasing enormously in a more important sphere. He had become the Queen's Private Secretary, her confidential adviser, her second self. He was now always present at her interviews with Ministers. He took, like the Queen, a special interest in foreign policy; but there was no public question in which his influence was not felt. A double process was at work; while Victoria fell more and more absolutely under his intellectual predominance, he, simultaneously, grew more and more completely absorbed by the machinery of high politics—the incessant and multifarious business of a great State. Nobody any more could call him a dilettante; he was a worker, a public personage, a man of affairs. Stockmar noted the change with exultation. "The Prince," he wrote, "has improved very much lately. He has evidently a head for politics. He has become, too, far more independent. His mental activity is constantly on the increase, and he gives the greater part of his time to business, without complaining." "The relations between husband and wife," added the Baron, "are all one could desire."

Long before Peel's ministry came to an end, there had been a complete change in Victoria's attitude towards him. His appreciation of the Prince had softened her heart; the sincerity and warmth of his nature, which in private intercourse with those whom he wished to please, had the power of gradually dissipating the awkwardness of his manners, did the rest. She came in time to regard him with intense feelings of respect and attachment. She spoke of "our worthy Peel," for whom, she said, she had "an extreme admiration" and who had shown himself "a man of unbounded loyalty, courage, patriotism, and high-mindedness, and his conduct towards me has been chivalrous almost, I might say." She dreaded his removal from office almost as frantically as she had once dreaded that of Lord M. It would be, she declared, a great calamity. Six years before, what would she have said, if a prophet had told her that the day would come when she would be horrified by the triumph of the Whigs? Yet there was no escaping it; she had to face the return of her old friends. In the ministerial crisis of 1845 and 1846, the Prince played a dominating part. Everybody recognized that he was the real centre of the negotiations—the actual controller of the forces and the functions of the Crown. The process by which this result was reached had been so gradual as to be almost imperceptible; but it may be said with certainty that, by the close of Peel's administration, Albert had become, in effect, the King of England.

Part VI. Death of Melbourne.

With the final emergence of the Prince came the final extinction of Lord Melbourne. A year after his loss of office, he had been struck down by a paralytic seizure; he had apparently recovered; but his old elasticity had gone for ever. Moody; restless, and unhappy, he wandered like a ghost about the town, bursting into soliloquies in public places, or asking odd questions, suddenly, a propos de botte. "I'll be hanged if I'll do it for you, my Lord," he was heard to say in the hall at Brooks's, standing by himself, and addressing the air after much thought. "Don't you consider," he abruptly asked a fellow-guest at Lady Holland's, leaning across the dinner table in a pause of the conversation, "that it was a most damnable act of Henri Quatre to change his religion with a view to securing the Crown?" He sat at home, brooding for hours in miserable solitude. He turned over his books—his classics and his Testaments—but they brought him no comfort at all. He longed for the return of the past, for the impossible, for he knew not what, for the devilies of Caro, for the happy plitudes of Windsor. His friends had left him, and no wonder, he said in bitterness—the power, scanning the newspapers with solitude, and occasionally making a speech in the House of Lords. His correspondence with the Queen continued, and he appeared from time to time at Court; but he was a mere simulacrum of his former self; "the dream," wrote Victoria, "is past." As for his political views, they could no longer be tolerated. The Prince was an ardent Free Trader, and so, of course, was the Queen; and when, dining at Windsor at the time of the repeal of the Corn Laws, Lord Melbourne suddenly exclaimed, "Ma'am, it's a damned dishonest act!" every one was extremely embarrassed. Her Majesty laughed and tried to change the conversation, but without avail; Lord Melbourne returned to the charge again and again—"I say, Ma'am, it's a damned dishonest act!"—until the Queen said "Lord Melbourne, I must beg you not to say anything more on this subject now"; and then he held his tongue. She was kind to him, writing him long letters, and always remembering his birthday; but it was kindness at a distance, and he knew it. He had become "poor Lord Melbourne." A profound disquietude devoured him. He tried to fix his mind on the condition of Agriculture and the Oxford Movement. He wrote long memoranda in utterly undecipherable handwriting. He was convinced that he had lost all his money, and could not possibly afford to be a Knight of the Garter. He had run through everything, and yet—if Peel went out, he might be sent for—why not? He was never sent for. The Whigs ignored him in their consultations, and the leadership of the party passed to Lord John Russell. When Lord John became Prime Minister, there was much politeness, but Lord Melbourne was not asked to join the Cabinet. He bore the blow with perfect amenity; but he understood, at last, that that was the end.

For two years more he lingered, sinking slowly into unconsciousness and imbecility. Sometimes, propped up in his chair, he would be heard to murmur, with unexpected appositeness, the words of Samson:

"So much I feel my general spirit droop,
My hopes all flat, nature within me
In all her functions weary of herself,
My race of glory run, and race of shame,
And I shall shortly be with them that rest."

A few days before his death, Victoria, learning that there was no hope of his recovery, turned her mind for a little towards that which had once been Lord M. "You will grieve to hear," she told King Leopold, "that our good, dear, old friend Melbourne is dying. . . One cannot forget how good and kind and amiable he was, and it brings back so many recollections to my mind, though, God knows! I never wish that time back again."

She was in little danger. The tide of circumstances was flowing now with irresistible fullness towards a very different consummation. The seriousness of Albert, the claims of her children, and her own inmost inclinations, and the movement of the whole surrounding world, combined to urge her forward along the narrow way of public and domestic duty. Her family steadily increased. Within eighteen months of the birth of the Prince of Wales the Princess Alice appeared, and a year later the Prince Alfred, and then the pretty row of royal infants was not complete. The parents, more and more involved in family cares and family happiness, found the pomp of Windsor galling, and longed for some more intimate and remote retreat. On the advice of Peel they purchased the estate of Osborne, in the Isle of Wight. Their skill and economy in financial matters had enabled them to lay aside a substantial sum of money; and they could afford, out of their savings, not merely to buy the property but to build a new house for themselves and to furnish it at a cost of £200,000. At Osborne, by the seashore, and among the woods, which Albert, with memories of Rosenau in his mind, had so carefully planted, the royal family spent every hour that could be snatched from Windsor and London—delightful hours of deep retirement and peaceful work. The public looked on with approval. A few aristocrats might sniff or titter; but with the nation at large the Queen was now once more extremely popular. The middle classes, in particular, were pleased. They liked a love match; they liked a household which combined the advantages of royalty and virtue, and in which they seemed to see, reflected as in some resplendent looking glass, the ideal image of the very lives they led themselves. Their own existences, less exalted, but oh! so soothingly similar, acquired an added excellence—an added succulence—from the early hours, the regularity, the plain tuckers, the round games, the roast beef and Yorkshire pudding of Osborne. It was indeed a model Court. Not only were its central personages the patterns of propriety, but no breath of scandal, no shadow of indecorum, might approach its utmost boundaries. For Victoria, with all the zeal of a convert, upheld now the standard of moral purity with an inflexibility surpassing, if that were possible, Albert's own. She blushed to think how she had once believed—how she had once actually told him—that one might be too strict and particular in such matters, and that that ought to be indulgent towards other people's dreadful sins. But she was no longer Lord M.'s pupil; she was Albert's wife. She was more—the embodiment, the living apex of a new era in the generations of mankind. The last vestige of the eighteenth century had disappeared; cynicism and subtlety were shrivelled into powder; and duty, industry, morality, and domesticity triumphed over them. Even the very chairs and tables had assumed, with a singular responsiveness, the forms of prim solidity. The Victorian Age was in full swing.

Part VII. The Busy Prince.

Only one thing more was needed: material expression must be given to the new ideals and the new forces so that they might stand revealed, in visible glory, before the eyes of an astonished world. It was for Albert to supply this want. He nused, and was inspired: the Great Exhibition came into his head. Without consulting anyone, he thought out the details of his conception with the minutest care. There had been exhibitions before in the world, but this would surpass them all. It should contain specimens of what every country could produce in raw materials, in machinery and mechanical inventions, in manufactures, and in the applied and plastic arts. It should not be merely useful and ornamental; it should teach a high moral lesson. It should be an international monument to those supreme blessings of civilization—peace, progress, and prosperity. For some time past the Prince had been devoting much of his attention to the problems of commerce and industry. He had a taste for machinery of every kind, and his sharp eye had more than once detected, with the precision of an expert, a missing cog-wheel in some vast and complicated engine. A visit to Liverpool, where he opened the Albert Dock, impressed upon his mind the immensity of modern industrial forces, though in a letter to Victoria describing his experiences, he was careful to retain his customary lightness of touch. "As I write," he playfully remarked, "you will be making your evening toilette, and not be ready in time for dinner. I must set about the same task, and not, let me hope, with the same result. . . The loyalty and enthusiasm of the inhabitants are great; but the heat is greater still. I am satisfied that if the population of Liverpool had been weighed this morning, and were to be weighed again now, they would be found many degrees lighter. The docks are wonderful, and the mass of shipping incredible." In art and science he had been deeply interested since boyhood; his reform of the household had put his talent for organization beyond a doubt; and thus from every point of view the Prince was well qualified for his task. Having matured his plans, he summoned a small committee and laid an outline of his scheme before it. The committee approved, and the great undertaking was set on foot without delay.

Two years, however, passed before it was completed. For two years the Prince labored with extraordinary and incessant energy. At first all went smoothly. The leading manufacturers warmly took up the idea; the colonies and the East India Company were sympathetic; the great foreign nations were eager to send in their contributions; the powerful support of Sir Robert Peel was obtained, and the use of a site in Hyde Park, selected by the Prince, was sanctioned by the Government. Out of 234 plans for the exhibition building, the Prince chose that of Joseph Paxton, famous as a designer of gigantic conservatories; and the work was on the point of being put in hand when a series of unexpected difficulties arose. Opposition to the whole scheme, which had long been smouldering in various quarters, suddenly burst forth. There was an outcry, headed by the Times, against the use of the park for the exhibition; for a moment it seemed as if the building would be relegated to a suburb; but, after a fierce debate in the House, the supporters of the site in the Park won the day. Then it appeared that the project lacked a sufficient financial backing; but this obstacle, too, was surmounted, and eventually £200,000 was subscribed as a guarantee fund. The enormous glass edifice rose higher and higher, covering acres and enclosing towering elm trees beneath its roof; and then the fury of its enemies reached a climax. The fashionable, the cautious, the Protectionists, the pious, all joined in the hue and cry. It was pointed out that the Exhibition would serve as a rallying point for all the ruffians in England, for all the malecontents in Europe; and that on the day of its opening there would certainly be a riot and probably a revolution. It was asserted that the glass roof was porous, and that the droppings of fifty million sparrows would utterly destroy every object beneath it. Agitated nonconformists declared that the Exhibition was an arrogant and wicked enterprise which would infallibly bring down God's punishment upon the nation. Colonel Sibthorpe, in the debate on the Address, prayed that hail and lightning might descend from heaven on the accursed thing. The Prince, with unyielding perseverance and infinite patience, pressed on to his goal. His health was seriously affected; he suffered from constant sleeplessness; his strength was almost worn out. But he remembered the injunctions of Stockmar and never relaxed. The volume of his labors grew more prodigious every day; he toiled at committees, presided over public meetings, made speeches, and carried on communications with every corner of the civilized world; and his efforts were rewarded. On May 1, 1851, the Great Exhibition was opened by the Queen before an enormous concourse of persons, amid scenes of dazzling brilliancy and triumphant enthusiasm.

Victoria herself was in a state of excitement which bordered on delirium. She performed her duties in a trance of joy, gratitude, and amazement, and when it was all over, her feelings poured themselves out into her journal in a torrential flood. The day had been nothing but an endless succession of glories—or rather one vast glory—one vast radiation of Albert. Everything she had seen, everything she had felt or heard, had been so beautiful, so wonderful that even the royal underlinings broke down under the burden of emphasis, while her remembering pen rushed on, regardless, from splendor to splendor—the huge crowds, so well behaved and loyal—flags of all the nations floating—the inside of the building—so immense, with myriads of people and the sun shining through the roof—a little side room, where we left our shawls—palm trees and machinery—dear Albert—the place so big that we could hardly hear the organ—thankfulness to God—a curious assemblage of political and distinguished men—the March from Athalie—God bless my dearest Albert, God bless my dearest country!—a glass fountain—the Duke and Lord Anglesey walking arm in arm—a beautiful Amazon, in bronze, by Kiss—Mr. Paxton, who might be justly proud, and rose from being a common gardener's boy—Sir George Grey in tears, and everybody astonished and delighted.

CHAPTER V. Lord Palmerston—Part I.

In 1851 the Prince's fortunes reached their highwater mark. The success of the Great Exhibition enormously increased his reputation and seemed to assure him henceforward a leading place in the national life. But before the year was out another triumph, in a very different sphere of action, was also his. This triumph, big with fateful consequences, was itself the outcome of a series of complicated circumstances which had been gathering to a climax for many years. The unpopularity of Albert in high society had not diminished with time. Aristocratic persons continued to regard him with disfavor; and he on his side, withdrew further and further into a contemptuous reserve. For a moment, indeed, it appeared as if the dislike of the upper classes was about to be suddenly converted into cordiality; for they learnt with amazement that the Prince, during a country visit, had ridden to hounds and acquitted himself remarkably well. They had always taken it for granted that his horsemanship was of some second rate foreign quality, and here he was jumping five-barred gates and tearing after the fox as if he had been born and bred in Leicestershire. They could hardly believe it; was it possible that they had made a mistake, and that Albert was a good fellow after all? Had he wished to be thought so he would certainly have seized this opportunity, purchased several hunters, and used them constantly. But he had no such desire; hunting bored him, and made Victoria nervous. He continued, as before, to ride, as he himself put it, for exercise or convenience, not for amusement; and it was agreed that though the Prince, no doubt, could keep in his saddle well enough, he was no sportsman.

BOXING GLOVES OF LEAD

Boxing is one of the world's oldest sports. The noble art of self-defence was practised more than thirty centuries ago. It was indeed a strong man's game. One hero, called Epagoras, used to slay oxen by giving them one blow between the eyes with his fist. Boxing gloves were in use even in those early days; but there was a difference. The glove of to-day is a padded affair designed to soften the effect of a blow. In former times it was meant to increase the force of the punch! It consisted of a strip of leather, reinforced with lumps of brass and lead, which was wound round the pugilist's fist. Men were willing to fight, not for a purse of thousands of pounds, but for a simple laurel wreath! The boxing matches of those days were no joke, for in most cases the vanquished boxer was killed by the knock-out blow.—Tit-Bits.

paid her final visit. "It looked so beautiful," she said. "I could not believe it was the last time I was to see it. An organ, accompanied by a fine and powerful wind instrument called the sommerophone, was being played, and it nearly upset me. The canvas is very dirty, the red curtains are faded and many things are very much soiled, still the effect is fresh and new as ever and most beautiful. The glass fountain was already removed. . . and the sappers and miners were rolling about the little boxes just as they did at the beginning. It made us all very melancholy." But more cheerful thoughts followed. When all was over, she expressed her boundless satisfaction in a dithyrambic letter to the Prime Minister. Her beloved husband's name, she said, was for ever immortalized, and that this was universally recognized by the country was a source to her of immense happiness and gratitude. "She feels grateful to Providence," Her Majesty concluded, "to have permitted her to be united to so great, so noble, so excellent a Prince, and this year will ever remain the proudest and happiest of her life. The day of the closing of the Exhibition (which the Queen regretted much she could not witness), was the twelfth anniversary of her betrothal to the Prince, which is a curious coincidence."

"PATHOGEN" THE CAUSE OF DISEASE

Accumulation of Waste Matter Which Obstructs The Free Flow of The Blood Stream

"Fruit-A-Lives," The Health Protector

According to some of the greatest living medical authorities, the main cause of disease arises in the stomach, from the formation of a semi-liquid, decaying substance, known as Mucus.

The human body has thousands of feet of almost invisible tubes through which the blood circulates.

"Pathogen" is the name given to mucus or accumulation of waste matter which clogs up the thousands and thousands of tubes which carry the blood to every part of the body.

"FRUIT-A-LIVES," The famous fruit medicine, prevents Pathogen because it insures sound digestion, makes the bowels move regularly and naturally, flushes the kidneys, increases the eliminating action of the skin and thus keeps the blood channels free of mucus.

"FRUIT-A-LIVES" are sold by all druggists at 50c. a box $ for $2.50, trial size 25c, or sent post-paid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-Lives Limited, Ottawa, Ont. (Adv.)

CANNIBALS MORE MODEST

Baltimore, Oct. 28.—Returning to civilization after thirty-five years in the African jungle, the Rev. William S. Miller of West Central Africa, Methodist Episcopal Mission, who is visiting here, says American women are not as modest in their dress as the cannibal women, and that the United States is worse than heathen.

Cannibal women, he said, always are modest. The upper part of their body is clothed in blankets and native cloths to the neck. Prohibition is unknown in the jungles. The natives make a beer from corn and palm wine. Surprising numbers die from "home brew."

"It was pointed out to the Premier and the members of his cabinet that the Personal Property Tax was an inequitable and unjust tax as it imposed a tax on a merchant when he had actually incurred a loss in carrying on his business."

"The unfairness of the tax was illustrated by Mr. W. H. Malkin who held that a man earning a salary of $10,000 was better off than the merchant who drew the same amount from his business."

The Premier then devoted his attention to R. J. Cromie, publisher of The Vancouver Sun, whom he said he met in London in 1918, noting that he was taking over the P. G. E. Railway by the Province.

"After negotiating for a settlement of the P. G. E. Railway, he was then asked to do by the Sun and whether he would appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the transaction."

VARSITY ATHLETES GOING TO BIG MEET

Star Track and Field Men to Compete in Western Inter-Collegiate Sports

Comparison of Records Show That B.C. Boys Should Do Exceptionally Well

Vancouver, Oct. 29.—Will the University of British Columbia athletes who go East to the western inter-collegiate track meet next Fall have any chance against the men of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan universities in the view of the expressed purpose of the Varsity Track Club to send a team next year, a comparison of the times and distances made in the recent inter-collegiate meet with those made here on Wednesday will be of interest.

First of all, there is no doubt that if the Varsity Club keeps a number of its premier athletes in training all summer—such men, for example as Livingston, Buchanan and Russell—it will be well represented.

Some Good Athletes.

Garrett Livingston is good for the hurdles, the 100, the 220 and the 440. In each of these events he has set up excellent marks. Buchanan can hold his own in the pole vault, and the broad jump. Russell is the premier high jumper of the local Varsity, being good for 5 feet 4 inches any day. With some intensive training he could reach 4 1/2 or perhaps more. Clifton Mathers might be included in the team for the discus throw, and as a member of the relay team. He has been the best form in the discus competition of any B.C. college man. He will have to better his present record, however.

Buckley, a freshman in Agriculture, would undoubtedly do well in the distances, although the present Varsity records leave considerable to be desired. Helley Arkley, who cleaned up in the 800 and mile for the past two years, was out of the meet this year, being under doctor's orders. It is just a question whether he or Buckley is the best mile runner. Helley is an excellent miler, too, and it would take considerable elimination to pick the best. Buckley would be the man for the three miles, while Arkley could be counted on for the $50 and the mile.

Such a team would give B. C. very good representation. The relay team, picked from among these men, would be one of the best. Livingston, Russell, Mathers and Buckley are all good for a place on such a team.

The Two Records.

Here is a comparison of the records of this meet:

100 yards—Inter-collegiate, 13.5 sec.; U. B. C. 13.1-5. The B. C. record is 13 sec.

100 yards—Inter-collegiate, 10.2-5 sec.; U. B. C. 11 sec. B. C. record is 10.1-5 sec.

200 yards—Inter-collegiate, 25 sec.; U. B. C. 25.2-5 sec. The B. C. record is 24 sec.

400 yards—Inter-collegiate, 55 sec.; U. B. C. 55 sec. B. C. record is 53 sec.

800 yards—Inter-collegiate, 2.05 sec.; U. B. C. 2.11 sec.

1 mile—Inter-collegiate, 4.54; U. B. C. 4.66.

Three miles—Inter-collegiate, 17.21 sec.; U. B. C. 17.3.

5 miles—Inter-collegiate, 1.39 3-5; U. B. C. 1.45.

Pole vault—Inter-collegiate, 9 feet 9 inches; U. B. C. 8 feet 9 inches. B. C. record is 9 feet 9 inches.

High jump—Inter-collegiate, 5 feet 4 inches; U. B. C. 5 feet 4 1-2 inches.

Broad jump—Inter-collegiate, 19 feet 2-4 inches; U. B. C. 19 feet 2 inches.

Discus—Inter-collegiate, 107 feet 3 inches; U. B. C. 97 feet 1 inch.

Shot put—Inter-collegiate, 24 feet 3 inches; U. B. C. 37 feet 3 inches. B. C. record is 35 feet 3 inches.

When one considers that in three years the local Varsity has never had a clear day, with good ground or weather conditions for its meets, these records look fairly hopeful.

"Moose" Johnson Will Be Back For Another Season With Victoria

Veteran Puck-chaser, Who Never Says Die, Thinks He Is Good Enough to Defy Father Time For At Least One More Year; Fans Hope He Will Repeat Last Year's Performance.

Yes, siree, dear old Moose is coming back. Ernie Johnson, the hero of professional hockey for the past seventeen years, is going to put in another season with the Aristocrats.

Lester Patrick, manager of the local squad, announced this morning that "Moose" has arranged with his partners of the Oregon-Washington Railway for leave of absence for the Winter.

Still Game.

"You can't count me out yet," wrote the big defence man to Lester. "I'll be up there when the call goes forth and I think I can stand the gaff for another season."

That's the way with the "Moose"; he always figures he's good for another season. He's been doing that for a long time. He's just like the babbling brook, goes on forever.

It will be a sad day for the Aristocrats when the "Moose", through old age, is forced to nail his stick on the wall. Some folks figured that Johnson would have done this in Winter, but he's going to wait for the blue and gold for another season anyway.

The Spectacular Boy.

"Moose" is the spectacular being in the P. C. H. There is no other player in the league that approaches him for sensational effectiveness. Whenever one sees the veteran break up a rush by hurling some unfortunate forward over his shoulders, he thanks the planets that the "Moose" is with Victoria and not with one of the other teams.

The fearless reckless daring of the "Moose" has made him a greater favorite than his mere puck-chasing ability. He's a player who never quails. He gives his best at all times. He has his off days, but man, when he's on form he gives you enough to rave about for a week.

Alone in a Wide, Wide World.

There isn't another athlete in the world who is as fearless as the "Moose". He's never been hurt. The only thing he hasn't done to date is to play hockey with a couple of broken ribs.

Broken ribs, bust jaws, cuts and lacerations, but he's never been hurt. He's never been hurt. He's never been hurt. He's never been hurt.

It will take a man with a strong hitting arm to knock the "Moose" out of a game. Johnson once played hockey league games with a broken jaw and a fractured rib, but he never quit.

Johnson, but he couldn't stick the pace last Winter and has dropped out for keeps.

Last year was generally conceded to be the "Moose's" last. It was thought that he would slow up a lot. But he just went out on the ice and knocked the young 'uns dinky and made the fans chant his praises louder than ever. It was undoubtedly the best season the old boy has had in coast hockey. He may repeat this year.

Everyone will certainly hope so. Johnson is one of the few originals in Coast hockey. He played with Westminister the first year the league started. He began playing hockey way back in the early years of this century. He and Lester Patrick started their pro hockey days together on the Wanderers Club of Montreal. He played days with Lester. It turned out the other way. Lester finished his ice days with the Moose, for the local mogul decided to quit last Winter while the Moose still rolls merrily on.

Last season the fans decided to do honor to this Knight of the Blade. They had a notion in the back of their minds that it might be the last year the Moose would venture forth on the glossy surface.

A Wonderful Night.

No one will ever forget "Moose" Johnson's night. The arena was packed and they started off by rushing into the Moose until he had to call for a cab to take the things home.

Then Referee Ivn turned the Aristocrats and Seattle Mets loose and they played for six periods, two solid hours. As the midnight hour was tolled off it was decided to call quits and the fans filed out weak and exhausted.

The Moose is the third man to send his best to Manager Patrick. Captain Eddie Ostman and Harold "Slim" Halderman are the others who are ready to report at the end of next month for training purposes.

THEY'RE HAVING A TIME OVER SCRAP

Was Carpenter Pushed or Did He Slip in the Battle of the Century?

Many Witnesses Were Busy Tying Shoes When Georges Dropped

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 29.—The Hudson County grand jury of Jersey City is faithfully trying to ascertain what caused Georges Carpenter to do a nose dive in the ring at Boyle's Thirty Acres on the afternoon of July 2 last.

The question is, did he slip or was he pushed? Because if he slipped, it's all right, but if Jack Dempsey helped him fall, the people, including the governor, the mayor and Lieutenant-General Robert Lee Bullard were there and then misdemaneants in aiding and abetting a fracture of the Jersey statutes in such cases made and provided.

James F. Clarke, the deputy prosecutor, who is presenting the evidence to the grand jury was at the ringside, but he feels disguised to say what occurred as he was bent over tying his shoe at the time. Several members of the grand jury, also, were present, but aren't this the strangest thing—neither did they see what, if anything, struck Monsieur Carpenter, as they, too, were bent over tying their shoes.

Slightly Mixed.

Canon William Sheafe Chase of Brooklyn, prohibitionist and reformer, who didn't see the fight, was a witness before the grand jury to tell what happened. What he said in the jury room is between himself and the grand jury, but he knows all about prize-fights, because he saw one last year between this Henry Dundee, the middleweight, and Olat O'Dowd, the bantamweight champion—or somebody. The canon is a bit wobbly on ring names and classes. The fight he saw certainly wasn't a boxing exhibition but a brutal contest. Why, this Herman Dundee walked up to this what's-his-name and struck him with his clenched fist right on the nose.

The international reform bureau is the agency which is seeking the truth about the events of July 2 in the interests of justice and morality. The jurors were charged by Justice Francis Swayze of the New Jersey Supreme Court to ascertain whether there was a fight or a boxing exhibition.

ENGLISH CHAMPION MADE FINE SHOWING

Ernie Rice Had to Quit When Blood Obscured Vision in Seventh Round

New York, Oct. 29.—Sailor Friedman, of Chicago, last night defeated Ernie Rice, English lightweight champion, in the seventh round of a scheduled 15-round bout in Madison Square Garden, when Rice's seconds tossed a towel into the ring.

In an eight-round bout Joe Gorman, Portland featherweight, boxed a draw with Sammy Seiger, of New York, when Seiger's seconds pulled out in the second round. He was hardly able to see his opponent, but apparently was strong and trying to turn the tide of battle when it ended. Rice's plucky efforts were cheered by the crowd.

SEVEN TONS OF APPLES ON BIG TRUCK

Mr. Guest is one of the largest freighters in the interior and at this season of the year is taking an important part in the task of moving the big apple crop, for which Kelowna is justly famous. The load above illustrated consists of 317 boxes of McIntosh Reds, averaging 45 pounds to a box and making a total weight of 7 tons and 265 pounds. Figuring 150 apples to the box, this Day-Elder is carrying 47, 450 single apples, not an unusual load by any means for Mr. Guest's truck during the busy season.

An exceptionally large body is necessary in order to give sufficient loading space—to accommodate the mountains of apple boxes transported at one time. The dimensions of the platform are 16 feet long and 8 feet 4 inches wide—possibly the largest body of its kind in British Columbia. The truck is equipped with Sewell cushion wheels and Firestone solid tires. The Sewell equipment effects a far greater degree of protection against jolts and jars for the truck as well as for the fruit, than the ordinary truck wheels. The cushioning is derived from a section of solid corrugated rubber five inches deep and four inches wide, running clear around the wheel between the felloe band and where the spokes enter the wheel. This permits the use of Firestone solid tires instead of giant pneumatics, which were found in the past to be so necessary in the Okanagan account of the fragile nature of the merchandise.

Mr. Guest's Day-Elder and complete special equipment was supplied by the Hayes-Anderson Motor Co., Limited, Vancouver, B. C.

MANY MATERIALS USED FOR ROADS

Babylonians Used Asphalt in 600 B.C.; Queer Fillings

From the days when asphalt as a road material was first used by the Babylonians, or about 600 B. C., through the time of the great Roman roads like the "Appian" and the "Flaminian" ways, down to the present, road building has engrossed the civilized world. Savage man built no roads, nor had he any conscious need for them. In the early days of dense population and large cities are impossible without roads. As civilization developed along with the centuries the highways connecting the centres of population developed until in this day—the day of the electric automobile and the gasoline motor car and truck, the highways of the world are approaching the height of perfection in the smooth, resilient, dustless types-de-luxe to be found in America.

Highway development has brought many peculiar types of roadway—types ranging from the two-foot stone slab pavements used by the Romans, down to the refined petroleum asphalt pavements manufactured largely since the discovery of the asphaltic petroleum in California and Mexico. The singular or outstanding feature of the development, however, is that the asphalt road has stood the test and has grown steadily in favor since it was first used. At the present time, highway development throughout both Europe and the Americas is in that direction.

Odd Types of Highways.

Many odd types of roads have been tried, only to fail because of cost and climatic and traffic conditions. The United States has been the scene of more experiments in recent years than any other country in the world. Attempts have been made even to build highways of syrup, or molasses, in America. It was at Newton, Mass., in 1908 that a molasses refuse of sugar refineries was used as a binder for road materials, but was found impracticable because of its increasing high cost and the fact that the binder was somewhat soluble in water. The road, however, did sustain traffic for a number of years.

Plank roads were legion in the United States and are used to this day by military engineers. The road binders have been made from sulphite liquors obtained from tanneries and attempts have been made to burn roads that were surfaced with clay so as to make the surface fully as hard as though it were paved with brick. The most recent attempt to harden clay roads by burning was made in 1904 near Clarkdale, Miss., where experiments conducted by the United States Bureau of Public Roads proved successful, but costly and impracticable only in regions where an ample supply of timber could be secured for fuel.

Roads have been constructed of cherts from zinc mines and slag from blast furnaces, old shoes and scrap leather, the bones of dead animals and shells from the sea. Oyster and clam shell roads are now to be found in many places in the coast states. Rubber has also been utilized as a road material in experimental highway construction in England and rubber roads have been in use in India for some time.

Hard Surfaced Roads. The ordinary broken stone or macadam road invented by John Macadam, a Scotch road engineer of Ayrshire, has until recently been in most general use. These are now giving way to the hard-surfaced roads—that are better adapted to automobile and truck traffic. Seaweed, hay and straw have often been used in the construction of roads. In contrast to such material it is of interest to note that iron and steel has also been used. A steel road has been in use in Valencia, in Spain, for twenty years. Portland cement roads in America are now being reinforced with steel.

In 1712 Dr. Eirinosus, a Greek physician, discovered large beds of rock asphalt at Neuchâtel, in Switzerland. Shortly after that Count Sassenay utilized such material to lay asphalt pavements in Europe. The modern sheet asphalt pavement composed of a carefully prepared mixture of asphalt with graded sand, is a more recent development of this type of pavement, and in America dates back to 1875.

COSTLY MOTORING.

The cost of motoring in Japan is terrific—yen 7 per hour for a private car. None but the wealthy can own cars. Import duty in the first place is thirty-five per cent., and a Ford to buy costs yen 2,175, practically the equivalent of £390. The municipal tax for running the same in Tokio is yen 500 per annum, while his majesty the chauffeur gets yen ninety per month for tearing the inside out of the machine and enjoying the privilege of purloining the petrol. In Tokio there are about 3,000 cars, many of which are now "resting" owing to the cost of maintenance.—London Times.

PACK-PLUGS WITH OIL.

A frequent and unsuspected loss of power is due to spark plug leakage. Most plugs leak when run very hot, and for this reason it will prove an advantage to make an occasional test at the end of a trip by dropping a little oil around the packing joints and watching for bubbles. The leakage can usually be stopped by taking up on the packing glands of the plug, compression cocks open and spin the engine with the starter. This will thin down the mixture and will probably start the engine.

THIN OUT MIXTURE.

When struggling with a balky engine do not overprime. The usual tendency is to pull out the dash adjustment and to put gasoline in the priming cup. Many times the mixture is too rich to fire.

TIP TO MOTORIST.

An auto expert claims that more unpleasant delays, when on tour, are due to neglect of motor car springs than to any other cause. He says the springs should be examined at least once a month and the spring clips tightened. The thread of the bolt should be examined for signs of stripping and where it has begun the part should be replaced.

PASSES RESOLUTIONS ON PROVINCIAL HIGHWAY ISSUE

Kamloops Board of Trade Deals With Matter

The Kamloops Board of Trade special committee appointed at the last session to draft resolutions regarding the coast highway and the road to connect up the province with Alberta via Jasper Park have presented to the board two resolutions on the subject and after they had been submitted to the last meeting of the board by C. H. Dunbar, chairman of the committee, they were unanimously accepted. The resolutions follow:

Inter-Provincial Highway. Whereas during the last four years at all conventions of the Good Roads League and Associated Boards of Trade, held at several centres of the province, resolutions have been unanimously adopted urging the government to proceed with early construction of the highway link to connect the great interior of the province with the coast, the great necessity for which must be evident to all;

And whereas legitimate business is being considerably handicapped by a lack of such connection and the interior is deriving little share in the tourist traffic, which, it must be admitted, is only in its infancy;

And whereas the people of our great Dominion, who desire to view the great scenic effects of our province, particularly in the interior, are prevented from so doing, and can only enjoy a visit to the coast, the mere fringe of the province, and then only by traveling through friendly yet foreign states;

Now Has Data. And whereas at the suggestion of these several conventions, the Minister of Public Works, has, we understand, carried out a reconnaissance survey of the several routes suggested, and is now, or is about to be, in possession of the requisite data;

And whereas the immediate commencement of the construction of this great highway link, eventually to connect all portions of the Dominion, would employ a large number of men and thus obviate the absolute necessity otherwise for a "bread line," when all relief money spent would be mere waste;

And whereas we believe the peoples of the province are a unit on the absolute necessity of this proposed highway, which, in view of the great tourist traffic which will result, will be an asset of first importance;

Be it therefore resolved that this public meeting in the City of Kamloops, urge upon the government and particularly the Minister of Public Works, to make a public announcement in the opening days of the Autumn session of the legislature, as to the route selected, feeling convinced that the northern portions of the province, where the populations of the future will reside, and where the building of a road will open up great agricultural possibilities, will receive every consideration in the selection, and that some tangible evidence of the government's sincerity in this regard will be forthcoming immediately.

Jasper Park Highway. Whereas a highway exists along the valley of the North Thompson River from Kamloops to Avola;

And whereas the Edmonton Automobile and Good Roads Association is pressing the government of Alberta for the adoption of the abandoned railway grade between Edmonton and the Yellow Pass as part of a highway, looking to connection with the North Thompson River with the interior of British Columbia and the coast;

Be it therefore resolved that a road be built from Avola along the North Thompson River to connect with the proposed road from Edmonton to the Yellowhead Pass and so establish the connection between Alberta and British Columbia hereinbefore referred to;

And whereas a Dominion government grant is available for use on new construction;

And whereas such new construction along the North Thompson River would open up a large territory now served by any highway and would lead to a large influx of tourists;

Be it therefore resolved that the Government of British Columbia be urged to proceed with the construction of such road and the establishment of connection with the proposed Alberta highway from Edmonton to the Yellowhead Pass.

MOTORISTS TO HOLD CONVENTION NEXT WEDNESDAY

Victoria Automobile Club Arranges Big Meeting

The Vancouver Island convention of motorists to be held under the auspices of the Victoria Automobile Club in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock will be open to all motorists, whether members of the club or not.

The purpose of the convention is to take up all matters of interest to automobile owners and there will be perfect freedom to everyone wishing to bring forward any suggestions that will affect the interests of the motorist on Vancouver Island.

G. D. Christie, chairman of the committee arranging the convention, has been busy and his well-known activities in motoring circles has enabled him to promote a great deal of interest which will insure a big attendance at the meeting.

One of the most important matters to be discussed will be plans for safeguarding the public when the change in the rule of the road takes effect on January 1. The question of island roads, road making, maintenance and extensions will be taken up.

A large delegation is expected from Nanaimo, where there is a very active club, one that has functioned very satisfactorily in the past and is steadily increasing in membership and influence.

The Victoria Automobile Club is anxious that all sections of the island should be represented and it is safe to say that the convention will be the largest and most influential of its kind ever held on Vancouver Island.

The man who used to sell the farmers lightning rods, gold bricks and crayon chromes of the family now has a son who can only sell them accessories for their automobiles.

Bowser had three accusations to make. The first was that too high a price had been paid, the second that the purchase was illegal and the third, which was not clearly made, was an attempt by inference to leave the impression that the transaction had been corruptly and wrongfully made.

Valuation Sworn To.
He spoke of the Campbell-Cromie libel suit and asserted that Mr. Cromie and his counsel, Joseph Martin, had seen to it that they secured every scintilla of evidence that could be had. Various opinions of experts had been secured. Some opinions were that the price was too high, but men of less political bias asserted that the price was fair. The Attorney-General mentioned the name of Frank Murdoch, who had said that the rents charged were fair. Then there was the firm of Waghorn, Gwynn & Co. Mr. Waghorn was a lifelong Conservative. His opinion supplemented the written opinion furnished the Government, in which the price of $150,000 was named as a fair one.

Produces Letter.
Hon. Mr. Farris said that the Government had secured the advice of competent men, advice that was substantiated in court.

He then touched upon Mr. Bowser's charge that the Government had corruptly and dishonorably purchased the property. He produced a copy of the letter commencing "My Dear Wallace" and said he could see Mr. Bowser smile and smack his lips over that letter. It was purely a personal bit of correspondence, he asserted. He and Mr. Campbell were old friends and had called each other by their first names for years. The Minister denied the suggestion that Mr. Campbell was going East at that time to secure money with which to buy the World.

No Early Negotiations.
"That letter was written in January," said Mr. Farris, "and there was nothing sinister in that. The reference to a hitch occurring had been made much of. There was a hitch. I told Mr. Campbell and he testified at the trial that I turned him down and said that I could not tie the hands of the Board in that way. But the only suggestion in the letter was that of rent, not purchase."

Tells of Warehouse Deal.
Hon. Mr. Farris first spoke of the purchase of the Campbell warehouse. He could see no reason for not admitting the purchase of the warehouse from Mr. Campbell, who was a well-known friend of himself and a Liberal of known standing. There was nothing to cover up, he went on, and the fact that the assessed value of the warehouse was $58,000. "We will assume that is correct," he said. "But that means that there is no direct relation between assessed values and actual values. Assessed values are invariably much lower than real values."

The Bowser Accusations.
The question of the illegality of the purchase, as charged by Mr. Bowser, was next discussed. In this connection the Minister said Mr. Bowser and I have had dealings before with members of this Legislature. I want to put myself on record as having nothing to fear or conceal and I am ready to meet the situation with a consciousness of my position and sense of fair play.

Shot His Bolt.
"To use a slang expression," he continued, "the Leader of the Opposition has shot his bolt, but he has left the door open for renewed insinuations and generalities, the reports of which have gone broadcast all over the country. Still, I have implicit faith in the people of Vancouver and I have had dealings before with members of this Legislature. I want to put myself on record as having nothing to fear or conceal and I am ready to meet the situation with a consciousness of my position and sense of fair play."

Needed Place For Liquor.
Mr. Farris denied the Opposition Leader to produce one word of evidence in support of his statement that Mr. Campbell had gone East to buy the paper. Mr. Nelson and Davidson, Messrs. Cameron and Nelson, were the owners of The World.

Legality of Purchase.
Hon. Mr. Farris felt that this explanation cleared up that situation and he said the charge made regarding the method of payment might be taken as a type of the Opposition Leader's insinuations.

Attempt To Embarrass.
"This was the situation," he continued. "We had the prohibition Act in force and when that law ceased to operate there would be left a great deal of equipment. Would it not have been a nice mess to section like that Board has been included in the Act making it possible for the preliminary work to be done. Had it not been for that clause there would have been an interval of two or three months after the Act came into effect before the law really became operative."

Tells of Libel Case.
The Attorney-General then turned to a consideration of the libel case. He said so far as the jury was concerned it was for them to decide whether or not Mr. Cromie had made good his allegations, or Mr. Campbell had been libelled. The Government was connected with the affair, he added, and he wished to show some light upon this phase of the matter.

No Charge Against Campbell.
"There was not one word of any wrongdoing imputed to Mr. Campbell," he went on. "Still The Sun newspaper the next morning announced that the charges had been proven true."

The Attorney-General referred to the address of Mr. Justice Morrison to the jury. He said he would leave it to any lawyer to form an opinion of Mr. Justice Morrison's power to impress a jury. He instructed the jury to consider carefully whether or not anything wrong had been done to Mr. Campbell. Hon. Mr. Farris read from the jury's charge to the jury excerpts which he, the Attorney-General, inferred had influenced the jury in the verdict rendered.

The whole suggestion in the charge to the jury was that nothing had been said to injure Mr. Campbell and therefore he should receive no damages," averred Mr. Farris. "So members of House should not be carried away with the story carried by The Sun the day after the trial."

The Minister claimed that if Mr. Bowser would not come forward with specific charges then the members of the House should "try the case" on the evidence being submitted by the Attorney-General.

Next came a consideration of the renting of premises. Mr. Bowser had said that only political friends figured in these transactions, said Mr. Farris. The truth of the matter was that no attention whatever was paid to the political faith of the parties dealt with.

The Minister cited the Pithers & Leiser warehouse in Victoria. These people were no friends of the Government. As for the Belmont House, Mr. Farris did not know who owned it and with regard to the Johnson Street store, this was a retail store and not a warehouse as Mr. Bowser termed it.

"Furthermore," the former store on Yates Street, belonged to Stephen Jones," said the speaker. "Mr. Jones has been a life-long Liberal and is a friend of the Government, and is a close friend of Mr. Farris. He has taken the other property because it was cheaper. The only other building actually named by Mr. Bowser was the property of Mrs. Norris in Ladysmith. This, he claimed, was formerly a poolroom, rented at $20 per month, whereas the truth of the matter was that the property was rented for $150 per month, the figure at which the Government took it over."

Mr. Farris then touched upon the question of the Government employing members who had formerly been convicted.

"I asked for names," he added, "but I got no satisfaction. I will say that though, I do not know of a single case of this kind."

The Attorney-General said it might be true that men were employed who had served sentences, but their names had not come to light and if the liquor control board had secured some of those names, he would be embarrassed."

"When we were deluged with over 6,000 applications for positions under the Liquor Control Board, we should have employees who would embarrass us," he said.

Mr. Bowser was apparently suggesting the discharge of these employees, continued the Minister, who referred to the Kaslo episode in his own experience. At that time the opposition leader claimed that the Attorney-General had secured some $40,000 worth of liquor which he had shipped across the line for profit. An affidavit was taken that the charge was untrue, but the Opposition Leader repudiated the affidavit, saying that the man who made it had been convicted of an offence against the law and that his statements could not be believed.

Hon. Mr. Farris explained, reading from old newspaper clippings, that a girl in the drug store of the convicted man in question, had sold a bottle of patent medicine without attaching thereto the Government sales stamp, and the owner had been convicted of an offence against the law.

necessarily, but he wished to deal with the clauses of Mr. Bowser's resolution. There were very definite and he expected to find charges made, so that it would be possible to meet them with a clear understanding of what had to be fought. But finding the accusations of the Opposition Leader so vague he knew that it was but another move to attempt to discredit himself and the Government, with the assumption of responsibility on the part of the man laying the charges.

"Shot His Bolt."
"To use a slang expression," he continued, "the Leader of the Opposition has shot his bolt, but he has left the door open for renewed insinuations and generalities, the reports of which have gone broadcast all over the country. Still, I have implicit faith in the people of Vancouver and I have had dealings before with members of this Legislature. I want to put myself on record as having nothing to fear or conceal and I am ready to meet the situation with a consciousness of my position and sense of fair play."

Tells of Warehouse Deal.
Hon. Mr. Farris first spoke of the purchase of the Campbell warehouse. He could see no reason for not admitting the purchase of the warehouse from Mr. Campbell, who was a well-known friend of himself and a Liberal of known standing. There was nothing to cover up, he went on, and the fact that the assessed value of the warehouse was $58,000.

The Bowser Accusations.
The question of the illegality of the purchase, as charged by Mr. Bowser, was next discussed. In this connection the Minister said Mr. Bowser and I have had dealings before with members of this Legislature. I want to put myself on record as having nothing to fear or conceal and I am ready to meet the situation with a consciousness of my position and sense of fair play."

Needed Place For Liquor.
Mr. Farris denied the Opposition Leader to produce one word of evidence in support of his statement that Mr. Campbell had gone East to buy the paper. Mr. Nelson and Davidson, Messrs. Cameron and Nelson, were the owners of The World.

Legality of Purchase.
Hon. Mr. Farris felt that this explanation cleared up that situation and he said the charge made regarding the method of payment might be taken as a type of the Opposition Leader's insinuations.

Attempt To Embarrass.
"This was the situation," he continued. "We had the prohibition Act in force and when that law ceased to operate there would be left a great deal of equipment. Would it not have been a nice mess to section like that Board has been included in the Act making it possible for the preliminary work to be done. Had it not been for that clause there would have been an interval of two or three months after the Act came into effect before the law really became operative."

Tells of Libel Case.
The Attorney-General then turned to a consideration of the libel case. He said so far as the jury was concerned it was for them to decide whether or not Mr. Cromie had made good his allegations, or Mr. Campbell had been libelled. The Government was connected with the affair, he added, and he wished to show some light upon this phase of the matter.

No Charge Against Campbell.
"There was not one word of any wrongdoing imputed to Mr. Campbell," he went on. "Still The Sun newspaper the next morning announced that the charges had been proven true."

The Attorney-General referred to the address of Mr. Justice Morrison to the jury. He said he would leave it to any lawyer to form an opinion of Mr. Justice Morrison's power to impress a jury. He instructed the jury to consider carefully whether or not anything wrong had been done to Mr. Campbell. Hon. Mr. Farris read from the jury's charge to the jury excerpts which he, the Attorney-General, inferred had influenced the jury in the verdict rendered.

The whole suggestion in the charge to the jury was that nothing had been said to injure Mr. Campbell and therefore he should receive no damages," averred Mr. Farris. "So members of House should not be carried away with the story carried by The Sun the day after the trial."

The Minister claimed that if Mr. Bowser would not come forward with specific charges then the members of the House should "try the case" on the evidence being submitted by the Attorney-General.

Next came a consideration of the renting of premises. Mr. Bowser had said that only political friends figured in these transactions, said Mr. Farris. The truth of the matter was that no attention whatever was paid to the political faith of the parties dealt with.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 3/4 ounce of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and save easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "3/4 ounce of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. WE'RE ALL LOPSIDED!

There is scarcely a man or woman who has not one shoulder a little lower than the other. The low shoulder is generally the right. For the droop is caused by using one hand and arm more than the other. Usually the muscles of the right side are better developed than those of the left—but, curiously enough, the left foot is often larger than the right.

As a rule the right eye is better than the left, whilst if we wish to catch an indistinct sound, it is always the right ear that we turn towards it.

This neglect of the left side has made it less robust than the right. Diseases which affect the ears, eyes, nose, or legs occur far more frequently on the weak left side than on the more developed right.—Fit-Bits

NEELANDS BRINGS ONE-MAN CAR MOVE BEFORE HOUSE

Says B. C. Electric Railway Has No Authority

Poor Man Needs All His Money Without Taxes, He Declares

R. H. Neelands, labor member for South Vancouver, brought up the one-man car proposals in the Legislature yesterday during his speech in the debate and expressed the opposition of British Columbia labor towards their introduction.

Mr. Neelands declared that there was a larger percentage of accidents with the one-man car and quoted records and reports to back up his statements.

"I want to know by what authority W. G. Murrin of the B. C. Electric speaks with the assurance he does and goes before a public meeting and says that it is not necessary for the company to consult the municipalities, as they have consulted higher authority," said Mr. Neelands. "I want to know whether the time has arrived when these large corporations can dominate the Legislature or whether this Legislature is to have its say."

He declared that he found that by Order-in-Council the rule prohibiting single-truck cars has been set aside and suggested that the change had likely been made as a result of the representations of the corporation.

Opposes Taxing Poor Man.

"Because of the unemployment situation this is no time even to discuss the introduction of system of this kind," Mr. Neelands went on. "In the introduction of modern machinery we always find that the workers are the one who suffer. If modern appliances are to be improved it should accrue to the benefit of the workers, and the people I think the cities of B. C. have developed beyond the stage where this type of conveyance is practicable."

Mr. Neelands protested against the proposal to abolish the exemptions from taxation on income of less than $1,500.

"A man with less than that income requires all his money for the needs of himself and his family," he went on. "If the Government needs additional revenue it should direct its attention to where money can be found, to the large corporations with large incomes. I would suggest a graduated tax on incomes, increasing according to the amount of the incomes."

Mr. Neelands expressed the hope that the Government would at an early date restore the franchise to South Vancouver.

Provincial Library Busy Compiling Information, House Learns

Compilation of an index to the Liquor Control Act, comprising 899 entries and classification of 1,043 rare historical manuscripts for the archives department have been completed by the Provincial Librarian, according to the report for the last nine months presented to the Legislature to-day by the Hon. J. D. MacLean, Provincial Secretary.

Early manuscripts and records of the Lands Department are being transferred to the Archives Department and all records dated prior to Confederation will be assembled in the Archives, the report announces.

During this year there has been an increase in business, with 20,043 volumes issued from the desk and 1,719 new books added to the collection. The reference department has dealt with the following questions and prepared memoranda on them: Government control and liquor traffic in foreign countries, maternity benefits, restriction of athletic immigration, licensing and regulating billboards, state budget systems, American-Japanese Treaty and League of Nations, colonization schemes, taxation of farm lands in cities, taxation of timber limits in the United States, old age pensions, minimum age of children for industrial employment, restriction of athletic immigration, Doherty Act, water and sewerage boards in the United States.

Clippings from Victoria and Vancouver newspapers of all that went during the Legislature at last session have been preserved in a permanent form for the assistance and guidance of members at future sessions. Two sets of the various statutes of B. C. have been annotated up to the present year.

MOTHERS' PENSION BOARD ATTACKED

He Declares Speaker Manson Safe With His Constituents

John McRae, Conservative member for Yale, in the Legislature yesterday first complimented the Government for several good works and then declared that no Conservative ever stooped so low as to turn down a women's plea for assistance for herself and fatherless children because she had not voted for the party.

This, said the Yale member, occurred in the case of a widow in his riding. She had lost her husband and was sorely in need of help. She applied through her representative, Mr. McRae, who took up the matter with Chairman Pies of the Mothers' Pensions Board. The latter was asked to make an investigation. Mr. McRae threatening to expose the official of the floor of the House if action was not taken.

Nothing came of his efforts, he declared; hence this action. He read a telegram from the woman in his riding showing that she had not been communicated with. However, Mr. McRae said that enquiries had been made about her and she was turned down, solidly because she had voted against the Government at the last election.

Pay Taxes, Get No Roads.

"I ask the Government members if they ever heard of a Conservative doing a thing like that," continued the speaker. "We all have our faults and the Conservatives have lots of them. I am not a hide-bound party man and know there are many fine men among the Liberal ranks, but no Conservative would stoop so low as that. I am appealing to the Premier in this matter and intend to stay with it till justice is done."

The Yale member said two men in his riding were paying more into the Government coffers in taxes than was being spent on roads and trails in the entire riding. He said the appropriation for Yale was only $45,000 last year, which was spread over 700 miles of roads and 200 miles of trails. And he added, Delta received $235,000.

"I can well understand now why the honorable member for Delta seconded the address," he commented. (laughter)

Speaker Is Strong.

He wondered where the country was going to, when the Liberals had increased the public debt of the Province in four years from $19,000,000 to $40,000,000. If an election were held tomorrow, he predicted, Speaker Manson would be the only Liberal returned to Victoria. (laughter)

Speaking of the "don't pay" he said he had regretted not being able to go along, although he did not see how any intelligent opinion could be formed when one was travelling with a bunch of idlers.

Mr. McRae appealed for assistance for the blind, mentioning a specific case in his riding where help was needed.

HENNINGER STILL WITH PARTY SHIP

Grand Forks Member Declares Irrigation Will Help Pay B. C. Debt

E. C. Henninger of Grand Forks, speaking in the debate in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, declared that it were legitimate to pledge the public credit for any enterprises that were surely no fairer field for Government activities than in bringing under irrigation the dry areas of the interior.

Mr. Henninger pointed out that lands that a few years ago were arid deserts in other parts of the continent, millions of dollars of produce are now shipped out annually. The Yakima Valley this year is shipping out 45,000 carloads of produce and the Okanagan $3,000,000 worth.

"In no other parts of the Province does there lie such rich promise from irrigation as in the Valley of Grand Forks," said Mr. Henninger. "Irrigation there is a public duty which this Government dare not neglect. Increased demand for wheat makes it mandatory that production be stimulated."

Referring to reports last Summer to the effect that he had broken with the Government Mr. Henninger said that he wished "to say that there was very little truth in that; in fact, there would be the same amount of truth in that as in some of the reports that got around as to what happened here when the House prorogued at the end of last session."

"During the last few days there have been rumors that this Government was getting shaky and drifting on the rocks," he went on. "I want to take this opportunity of informing my friends opposite that I don't think that they will have to be forced to save the Government by getting up to support. There have been low and insidious attacks by pirates submarine in the form of the Vancouver Sun and by that old pirate of the political seas, but when the roll is called you will find not a sailor missing from this ship and not one in irons."

Mr. Henninger declared that the Moderation Act is a start in the right direction and that under a system of education the public drinking evil will be gradually lessened.

"Now we see delegations of rich brewers and hotel men, who always want an easy way of making money, coming down here and seeking to shift the responsibility for the demand for beer on to the poor workman," he went on. "We don't want this country built up as a country of beer drinkers."

"Can be used in a hundred different ways"

Perhaps the most exciting sport in the world is tarpon-fishing in the Gulf of Florida. The tarpon is a gigantic cousin of the herring, weighing anything up to 800 pounds. The fisherman uses a rod only ten feet or so in length, and a line that is little stronger than a piece of stout string.
Sallying out in a motor boat, he trails behind him a fair-sized fish as bait. Suddenly there is a tremendous tug, and in a moment a tarpon six feet or more in length leaps out of the water. The fisherman strikes

Rinso

RINSO—not a cake soap, nor a chip soap, nor a washing powder, but pure granules so rich in cleaning value that dirt is loosened while the clothes are soaking. Yet so harmless that your things are as safe in the RINSO suds as in pure water alone.

Even the washboard wears out! What about your clothes?

RINSO is different from anything ever before produced—

It is fine granules of purest and highest-quality ingredients ever used in a family laundry soap.

It cleans by soaking in the rich foaming RINSO suds for a few hours and then thorough rinsing in either warm or cold water. Even the worst spots, the collar bands, cuff edges or hems, need only a slight rubbing between the hands to make them, too, perfectly clean.

Just soak the clothes with Rinso. A few hours later rinse them thoroughly in either warm or cold water. That's all. They're clean.

If you have a washing machine—
Soak the clothes overnight in the usual Rinso way. The cleansing suds loosen every bit of dirt. In the morning operate the machine for a few minutes and the clothes are perfectly clean—even the most soiled spots.
