INTRODUCTION.

THE inquiry must sometimes occur even to those not specially engaged in the study of language, by what steps does such and such a word come to have the meaning in which it is actually found, what is the earliest source to which it can be traced, and what are the cognate forms either in our own or in related languages. The answer to inquiries of such a nature constitutes what we look for in the etymology of a language. But if we are asked to recommend a book of reference in English etymology, we find it hard to point out a work to which resort may be had, with a reasonable expectation of meeting with reliable information on the subject. The increase of linguistic knowledge, and the quantity of materials placed within reach of the student, since the Etymologicums of Skinner and Junius, would inevitably have required a review of their labours, if they had been guided by far more correct views of the development of language, than those of which the authors have given proof in the works above cited, acute and learned men as they both of them were.

In later times the subject of English etymology has for the most part been treated as a subordinate department in the dictionaries of the language, and the choice would now lie between the elaborate works published within the limits of the present generation by Todd, Richardson, and Webster. The labour of compiling a dictionary single-handed can leave so little leisure for original speculation, that we ought not perhaps to look to the authors of such a work for more than a judicious selection among the suggestions afforded by the current philology of the period. Little more than this is aimed at in the etymologies of Todd, whose information was besides of a somewhat limited range. The great value of Richardson consists in his store of quotations, which are those mainly employed in the present work. In his own etymologies he is often led very wild by his belief in Horne Tooke, whose formula he applies at every turn, as the great master-key of the language. Few works indeed have been so effective in imparting interest to etymological discussion as the Ἐπεα Πτεροεντα, to which I, among others, am indebted for the first direction of my own attention to this branch of inquiry. But Tooke's alluring speculations will not bear the light of advancing knowledge, and it is hardly too much to say that there is not a sound etymology in the work.

The aim of true science is the same in every branch of learning, and it has commonly advanced by steps of very similar nature. The first germ of science begins to quicken when the question is suggested, what is the reason of some resemblance or contrast, or of some action observed among the phenomena of nature? The imagination proposes some kind of machinery adequate, according to the notions of the time, to account for the phenomena in question, which, in very early times is apt to take the form of a narrative of facts implicitly believed as historical truth. In process of time the theory is found either insufficient to satisfy the inquiries of a more cultivated age, or absolutely inconsistent with undeniable experience. Recourse is again had to the old source of the imagination, and new theories are invented to meet the improved condition of intellectual cultivation. But when once the principle of testing a theory by comparison with actual experience has been admitted, no system can long be left standing which has not a better foundation than the ingenuity with which it accounts for the particular group of phenomena for which it was originally invented. At last the true path is struck. A power is recognised in actual operation, producing effects analogous, on however inferior a scale, to the phenomena which form the subject of inquiry. Thus a solid foundation is attained, and the nature of the action being clearly understood, thousands of scientific labourers are found to trace the results through endless ramifications.

Geology affords an example of a science in which the final stage has been attained in the most recent period. It is only within our own times that geologists have established a vera causa in the powers now in action on the surface of the earth, to which they look for an account of the phenomena falling within the domain of their science, viz. the interior condition of the stratified crust of the earth, and the remains of organised beings imbedded in it.

Etymology is still at the stage where an arbitrary theory is accepted as the basis of scientific explanation. It is supposed that all language is developed from roots or skeletons of articulate sound, endowed with distinct and often very abstract meaning, but incapable of being actually used in speech, until properly clothed in grammatical forms. And this theory of roots takes the place of the elementary powers which form the basis of other sciences. The etymologist, who succeeds in tracing a word to a Sanscrit root, is as well satisfied with the account he has rendered of his problem, as the astronomer who traces an irregularity in the orbit of a comet to the attraction of a planet, within whose influence it has been brought in its last revolution. Now in what condition is it possible that roots could have existed, before they were actually used in speech? If it be suggested that they were implanted by Nature in the mind of man, as some people have supposed that the bones of mammoths were created, at the same stroke with the other materials of the strata in which they are buried—we can only say that it is directly opposed to anything we observe in infants of the present day. But if it be said that no one supposes that the roots, as such, ever had independent existence; that they are merely fictions of the grammarians to indicate the core of a group of related words having similar significations, in which sense the term will always be used in the present work; or if they are regarded as the remains of some former condition of language, then they cease to afford a solid resting-place, and the origin of the roots themselves becomes as fit an object of inquiry, as of the words in actual use at the present day. Nor will the curiosity of a rational inquirer be satisfied until he meets with a principle adequate to give rise to the use of language in a being with a mental constitution, such as he is conscious of in himself, or observes in the course of development in the infants growing up around him.

Now one such principle at least is universally admitted under the name of Onomatopœia, when a word is made to imitate or represent a sound characteristic of the object it is intended to designate, as Bang, Crack, Purr, Whizz, Hum. In uncivilised languages the consciousness of the imitative character of certain words is sometimes demonstrated by their composition with verbs like say, or do, to signify making a noise like that represented by the word in question. Thus in Galla, from djeda, to say, or goda, to make or do, are formed cacak djeda (to say cacak), to crack, tirr-or trrr-djeda, to chirp, dadada-goda (to make dadada), to beat, to make a noise, djam djam goda, to smack or make a sound with the lips in eating, as swine, to champ.—Tutschek. And the same mode of speech may be observed even in English.

“I should be loth to see you
Come fluttering down like a young rook, cry squab,
And take you up with your brains beaten into your buttocks.”

B. and F. Women pleased.

Here squab represents the sound made by the young rook thrown down from its nest upon the ground, whence a young rook is called a squab.

But though the origin of a certain number of words in the direct imitation of sounds is a recognised fact, yet it has been considered as quite an exceptional case, and there is a constant tendency in the progress of cultivation, to regard the words, whose imitative character is most clearly marked, as a sort of illegitimate pretenders to the dignity of language. We are apt to look upon words like fizz, whack, bump, bang, clearly representing different kinds of sound, or the actions which they accompany, as make-shifts of modern invention, not entitled to take place in sustained composition with elements which appear to derive their significance from the mysterious source of universal speech. The discredit, however, into which words of this description have fallen, is a prejudice resting on no solid foundation. There is no reason for supposing them less ancient than the most time-worn particle, of whose origin in a sensible image we cannot form a guess. To slam the door is a colloquial expression in which the verb seems as if it might have been suggested yesterday by its appropriateness to express that kind of noise, but the word is used in a much wider sense by the Laplanders, with a special application to this very instance of slamming the door; and what countless ages must have elapsed since their ancestors and ours parted from a common stock!

A little examination shows that the principle of imitation has a wider range than we are at first inclined to suppose. In some words the imitative character is so strongly marked, that it will be admitted by every one as soon as the question is raised. In others, though not consciously recognised, it heightens the power of expression, and gives much of that vividness of imagery which we admire in the poetry of Spenser and Gawaine Douglas. In others, again, the power of direct representation is wholly gone, and the imitative origin can only be shown by a detailed examination of the mode in which the meaning of the word has been developed.

It will be our aim to trace the operation of the principle through the foregoing classes, and to show that it is adequate to the expression of ideas the most opposed to all apparent connexion with sound of any kind.

It may be thought that we are so far removed from the origin of speech, that it must be as impossible to meet with an opportunity of observing language in the course of formation, as it appeared to our ancestors to obtain personal experience of the powers by which the surface of the earth has been reduced to its present form. But in the case of the infant learning to speak we are able to study the process by which an understanding in the first stage of development acquires the use of names. The nurse imitates the lowing of an ox, or bleating of a sheep, by the syllables moo or baa, which are subsequently recognised by the infant as the same articulation, when pronounced in an ordinary tone of voice; and thus he readily admits the compounds moo-cow or baa-lamb as the name of the animal whose cry is indicated in the former syllable. The name of the dog, in nursery language bow-wow, is composed of the syllables used in imitation of his bark, without further addition. Swiss bääggen, to bleat; bääggeli (in nursery language), a sheep. And so, of course, it must have been in the origin of speech with all animals named on this principle. In the absence of means of communication by a common language, a person desirous of raising in the mind of another the thought of an animal, such as a lion or an ass, characterised by a distinctive cry, would certainly resort to an imitation of the roar or the bray of the animal for that purpose. In many kinds of wild animals the voice is almost the only way in which they offer themselves to our notice. Hence the designation of birds especially on this principle is very common. The imitation of the cry of the cuckoo or the cockatoo is universally recognised. The origin of the designation is nearly as clear in the case of the peewit, whose melancholy cry gives rise to names in different European dialects, in which we recognise a fundamental identity, with considerable variety in the particular consonants by which the sound is represented; E. peewit, Sc. pee-weip, tuquheit, teewhoap; Fr. dishuit, Du. kievit, G. kiebitz, Sw. kowipa. The Lat. ululare, to howl, and ulula, a screech-owl, show the imitative character of the name, of which we are hardly conscious in the E. owl. The Lat. turtur is derived from an imitation of the cooing of a dove by a repetition of the syllable tur, tur, as in Dutch by the equivalent kor in korren, to coo or croo, as it was formerly written. It will be observed that it makes little difference in the imitation of natural sounds whether we make use of a p, t, or k, as seen in the different modes of representing the cry of the peewit above cited. For this reason it may commonly be taken as presumptive evidence of a short descent from an imitative origin, when we find a variety of equivalent forms, with an apparent interchange of consonants of different organs, as in clap, clack, or in Sc. teet, keek, E. peep.

The connexion of the name of the crow with the croaking voice of the bird is apparent in the NE. crowk, a crow; Icel. kraki, a crow, krakr, a raven; Du. kraeyen, to caw or croak, kraeye, a crow; Lith. kraukti, to croak, krauklys, a crow. In like manner the syllable caw, with which we imitate the voice of the rook or daw, gives rise to the Du. kauwe, kae, a jay or jackdaw, Picard. cau (Kil.), AS. feo, E. chough.

Examples of names given on the same principle in modern times are the American whip-poor-will, a species of nightjar, tuco-tuco, a small rodent in the plains of Buenos Ayres (Darwin), ai-ai, a species of sloth. And probably the name of the Hottentot is another example of the same class. The first colonists of the Cape of Good Hope could not fail to be struck with the click which forms so marked a feature of the Caffre tongues, which to a stranger would sound like a constant repetition of the syllables hot and tot. Hence the natives would be named by their Dutch masters Hott-en-tots. Du. en = and.

The imitative origin of the words designating the peculiar cries of different kinds of animals is still more obvious than the application of the principle to the animals themselves. No one doubts that the cackling of geese, clucking of hens, gobbling of turkeys, quacking of ducks, twittering of swallows, chirping of sparrows or crickets, cooing or crooing of doves, bumping of the bittern, hooting of the owl, croaking of the raven, cawing of rooks, chattering of jays or magpies, neighing or whinnying of a horse, barking, yelping, snarling, growling of a dog, grunting of a hog, bleating of sheep or goats, mewing or purring of a cat, are intended in the first instance as imitations of the sounds made by the animals in question.

In close connexion with the foregoing are the names of various inarticulate utterances of our own which may be compared with the cries of animals, as sob, sigh, moan, groan, laugh, cough (originally pronounced with a guttural, as Du. kuch, cough, lachen, lachachen, to laugh—Kil.), titter, hiccup, shriek, scream, snore, sneeze, wheeze, holla, whoop.

The imitative character of the last of these, representing a sharp shrill sound, is distinctly felt in whooping-cough, and in Goth. vopjan applied to the crowing of a cock (Mark xiv. 68), while it is a good deal obscured in the sense of calling, in which vopjan is commonly used. The original force of the word is preserved in AS. wop, outcry, lamentation, whence wepan, to weep, properly to lament, to utter the high-pitched tones of one in pain or grief, ultimately to shed tears, with a loss of all conscious reference to audible accompaniment. In Icel., as is usual in that language, the initial w is lost, giving op, outcry, herop, war-whoop, battle-cry, opa, Bret. hopa, to cry, to call, whence may be explained the Gr. οψ (ops), the voice, as Lat. vox from vocare, the counterpart of Goth. vopjan, with the very common interchange of the sounds of p and k. So also the Hebrew kol, the voice, from an equivalent of the Gr. καλεω, and E. call.

A very numerous class of words, of which the imitative nature can hardly be mistaken, are those employed to represent in the first instance the noise made by the collision or fracture of bodies of a greater or less degree of hardness or resonance, then the collision or fracture itself, the instrument by which the noise is produced, the consequences of the action, or generally any phenomenon that may be vividly associated in our mind with the noise fundamentally represented by the word in question. For example—

clap	frac-as (Fr.)	whine
rap	clash	bump
tap	flash	thump
knap	plash	dump
snap	splash	plump
frap-per (Fr.)	slash	boom
trap	swash	hum
flap	smash	drum
whap	dash	burr
swap	crash	whirr
'slap	bang	surr-a (Sw.) to hum
clack	clang	knurr-en (G.) to growl crack	twang	whizz
knack	ding	fizz
smack	ring	buzz
whack	din	hiss

Of the same class are the interjections mentioned by Grimm (III. 307) as imitating the sound given by certain objects in falling, whirling, snatching, breaking, as plump, platsch, bratsch, patsch, klatsch, witsch, husch, klapps, ripsraps, schwapps, bim, bam, bum, zink, fitsche, fatsche (for blows with a rod), strip, strap, stroll (for the sound of milking), &c.

A few examples may be given, showing as well the general recognition of the imitative principle in words of the foregoing class, as the mode in which their meaning is extended to ideas associated with the original image.

The Bremisch Wörterbuch explains klapp as a direct imitation of the sound of a blow. "He kreeg enen an de oren, klapp, segde dat"—He caught it on the ears, clap! said it. He got a box on the ears that sounded again. Klapps, an interjection that indicates the sound of a blow. "Klapps! daar kreeg he enen." Smack! he has caught it. Klappe is then applied to a flap, or anything that falls with a sudden blow, a draw-bridge. Enes klapps, at a blow, suddenly. To clap is used in English to express any sudden action. To clap on a hat, clap one up in prison. G. Knack, an indeclinable word that imitates the sound that a hard body makes when it breaks suddenly, in which also knucks is usual.—Küttner. "Knack, da war es entzwey," there, 'tis broken. "Es that einen Knack," it gave a crack. Nüsse knacken, to crack nuts. In the E. knock the reference to the sound of a blow is less vividly felt. G. klatsch, a clap, flap; klitsch-klatsch, pitsch-patsch, thwick-thwack.—Küttner.

Galla bilbila (natural sound), bell, clock; bilbil-goda, to make bilbil, to sound, to ring a bell, and 2. to glitter, beam, glisten.—Tutschek. In the last of these examples we may observe in the first place the agreement of the sound, by which a language, so remote from our own, imitates a clear ringing sound, with the English bell, Icel. biälla, and with peal, which is used to represent a similar sound; a peal of bells, a peal of laughter. In the second place we have a good example of the way in which a word, representing in the first instance (as must be the case with all imitative words) a lively impression on the organ of hearing, is used to express a visual sensation of the like vivid character. A closely analogous case is seen in the Fin. kilina, a ringing sound, a brilliant light; kilia, clear-sounding, also glittering. The articulation employed in the first instance to represent a tremulous sound in Pol. szemrać, Bohem. ssemrati, to rustle, murmur, E. simmer, to sound like water about to boil, is transferred to the appearance of tremulous light in G. schimmern, E. shimmer. Other examples of the same transference of signification from phenomena of sound to those of sight may be seen in the body of the work under Bright. It must not, however, be supposed that words will always preserve any cognizable resemblance to each other because they are originally imitations of the same natural sound. The explosion of a gun, which the English boy imitates in the exclamation "Bang-fire," is represented in French by Pouf! The neighing of a horse is expressed by the Fr. hennir, It. nitrire, Sp. rinchar, relinchar, G. wiehern, Sw. wrena, wrenska, Du. runniken, ginniken, brieschen, words in which it is difficult to see a glimpse of resemblance, although we can hardly doubt that they all take their rise in an attempt at direct representation of the same sound. There is so great a difference between the mechanism by which the cries of animals are produced, and the articulations of the human voice, as to allow a wide choice of syllables in which the imitation may be made with nearly equal propriety, and still more so in the case of inorganic sounds. The resemblance, therefore, between the words employed in cognate languages will often be of a very general kind, consisting in the syllabic structure of the word, the use of consonants of like class, &c. A momentary sound, such as that produced by the collision or fracture of hard bodies, is represented by monosyllables ending in the tenues p, t, k, as rap, clap, crack; rat-tat-tat, for the knocking at a door; a deader or hollower sound arising from bodies of a softer nature, by the medials b, d, g, as dab, thud, dag; rub-a-dub-dub, for the beating of a drum, represented in French by the syllables ran-tan-plan.

Sounds prolonged with more or less resonance are represented by syllables terminating in a liquid, as clang, din, boom, bang, knell, hum. Those arising from the motion of the air, or of liquids, are often represented by the letters r, s, sh, z, f, w, as whirr, whizz, fizz, whisper, rustle, Fr. siffler, It. fischiare, to whistle, Galla afufa, Hung. fuv-ni, Sc. fuff, to blow, Hung. fuvola, a fife.

Modification in the volume or pitch of the sound, depending on the size of the bodies in collision or vibration, are represented by a change of vowel; a sound of considerable volume being imitated by the vowels a or o, which are pronounced with a more open mouth and fuller voice, while notes of a high pitch are sounded with the thinner vowel i, into which the highest notes of the voice are necessarily moulded. We speak of the clanking of chains or of armour, using clink to express the sharp note given by smaller pieces of metal, as coin, bells, the blow of a hammer on a nail, &c.

And I shall clinken you so merry a bell
That I shall waken all this compagnie.—Chaucer.

Safe through the wet on clinking pattens tread.—Gray.

The open vowel in roar, blare, bray represents the volume of sound in the cry of lions or bulls, while i or ee is used in chirp, cheip, peep, to express the thin acute noises uttered by small birds, crickets, mice, and the like. The same adaption of the vowel to the sound represented is very common in German, as repeatedly observed by Küttner. "Knack—which imitates the sound which a hard body yields when it breaks suddenly. Knick expresses a finer, but Knuck a rougher, sound of the same kind." The distinction in the Bremisch Wörterbuch is that knacks represents a loud ringing sound; knicks, the noise of something breaking that is small and hard, as when a glass cracks; knucks an obscure or smothered sound (dumpfig), as when a joint springs back into its place.

The same relation holds good between knafren, knirren, knurren, to creak, knastern, knistern, to crackle. The E. clap, clack, express the open sound given by striking together the palms of the hands, clip, click, the sharp snapping of a pair of scissors, the fall of a latch, or light snap like that given by the spring of a gun-lock. The change of vowel from a to i is then used to express a lighter kind of action, without special reference to any difference in musical pitch in the noise produced in the two cases, and finally to indicate a diminution in size of the instrument or organ of action. The sound of the footfall is imitated in German by the repetition trapp-trapp-trapp, from whence Du. trappen, to tread. In the English tramp a greater emphasis is given by the insertion of a nasal, in order to express a heavier tread, in which, each fall of the foot is distinctly heard. To trip, on the other hand, with the short compressed vowel, is to tread with a light and quick step. So from stap, another imitation of the same sound preserved in the Du. stappen, to step, we have in English the intensitive stamp, and in Du. the diminutive stippen, to prick, whence the E. stipple, to mark with a succession of dots. The effect of the change of vowel in expressing diminution in the size of the organ of action is seen in top, nab, knob, an obtuse summit or projection, tip, nib, nipple, a thin and pointed one.

The same change of vowel which marks a rise in musical pitch, distinguishes the present from the perfect tense in a certain class of what are called strong verbs, as sat, sit; lay, lie; AS. fund, found, findige, find; and though the following explanation may be thought fanciful, yet it appears to me strictly in accordance with other instinctive devices for expressing similar modifications. It has been observed by others that the perfect tense, which indicates a complete and finished act, should naturally be expressed by a more original form of the verb than the present, which indicates a continuation of action; and as all modifications of thought must ultimately be expressed by some analogy in sound, I would compare the present with a vibratory sound, the continuous beats of which are less and less distinguishable to the ear as the vibrations become quicker, while the perfect may be represented by a single beat in the vibrating body, on the circumstances of which depends the general character of the continuous sound. Then as sound gradually rises in tone with increasing rapidity of vibration, the change from a to i, which represents a rise in musical pitch, would offer a natural type of the step from the separate beat of the perfect to the uniform hum representing the continued action of the present.

The simplest mode of expressing continuance of action would undoubtedly be by actual repetition of the syllable representing a single beat of the vibration, or momentary element of the action in question. Thus we have rat-a-tat-tat, rub-a-dub-dub, for continued noises, of which the individual elements are represented by rat-tat, rub-dub. The Latin turtur, murmur, tintin (in tintinabulum), represent noises the momentary effect of which upon the ear is imitated by the syllables tur, mur, tin. The repeated element is slightly curtailed in Lat. susurrus, Fr. chuchotter, It. bisbiglio, a whisper.

The formation of words on such a principle is particularly common in uncivilised languages, and the natural course seems to be to get rid of the repetition in the progress of cultivation. We may cite Susu (Western Africa), bang-bang, to drive a nail, nim-nim, to taste (from an imitation of smacking the lips; Zulu nambeta, to smack the lips, to have a taste, to relish); Indian, tom-tom, a drum.

A more artificial method of representing repeated or continued action is to add to the syllable, expressing a single element of the action, a second syllable composed of an obscure vowel with the consonants r or l, on which the voice can dwell for a length of time with more or less sensible vibration, in order to represent the effect on the ear, when the rapid succession of beats has merged in a continuous whirr. In the pattering of rain, expressing the falling of a rapid succession of drops on a sonorous surface, the first syllable pat is an imitation of the sound made by the fall of a single drop, while the vibration of the r in the second syllable represents the murmuring sound of the shower, when the attention is not directed to the individual taps of which the complex sound is made up. In like manner, to clatter is to do anything accompanied by a succession of claps or noises that might be imitated by the syllable clap or clat; to crackle, to make a succession of cracks; to rattle, dabble, bubble, guggle, to make a succession of noises that might be imitated individually by rat, dab, bub, gug. After the invention of such a mode of representing continuous sound, it would speedily be transferred to other cases of repeated or continuous action, giving rise to the commonest English form of the frequentative verb. Thus we have draggle, to continue dragging, grapple, to make a succession of grabs or gripes. The same effect is often produced by a final l alone, which, as Ihre remarks under gnælla, has something ringing (aliquid tintinuli) in it. Thus to squeak is to utter a sharp cry of momentary duration; to squeal, to utter a prolonged cry of the same nature; to wail, to utter cries of pain, such as those represented by the Lat. væ; or G. wehe; Fr. miauler, to utter cries imitated by the syllable miau, to mew; and the E. puke, howl, growl, are formed on the same principle. Here also the device contrived to represent the continuance of sound is extended far beyond the original purpose, and we find a terminating l as well as the fuller forms el and er used as the symbol of continued action with the instrument or object indicated in the body of the word. Thus to kneel is to rest on the knees; to prowl, from Fr. proie, is to go about seeking for prey.

When the body of the word has already a verbal signification, the terminations el and er (still employed as the symbols of continued action) serve to indicate the instrument or agent, as AS. rynel, a runner, bydel, a bidder, one who conveys orders. Du. krauwel, a claw, a scratcher or clutcher, from krauwen, to scratch. The identity of the frequentative l or r with the termination of the agent is pressed upon our notice by cases like the E. crawl, which may either be formed direct from a verb equivalent to the Du. krauwen above mentioned, as draggle from drag, or through the instrumental form krauwel, a claw, as signifying to claw oneself along. The frequentative termination is sometimes formed on a t instead of an l or r, as racket, a succession of raps, Fr. cliquetis, a clashing or succession of clacks. Here the additional syllable et seems to represent an echo of the sound indicated by the radical syllable, and therefore this mode of expressing continuance would in the first instance be applicable, only when the elementary sound was of a hard character, such as we have seen articulated with a p, t, or k. But in Latin the syllable it is the regular constituent of a frequentative verb, as l or r in English.

We have next to consider an important class of words founded on imitation of sounds by which our bodily and mental affections, as those of pain, cold, terror, disgust, &c., are more or less instinctively expressed. The cry to which we are impelled by a sharp pain is well represented by the G. ach, our ah, oh. Hence the OG. achsen to utter cries of pain, Gr. αχος, pain, grief, and the E. ache. A deeper seated groan, arising more from mental than bodily suffering, is represented by the Lat. væ, vah, G. wehe, AS. wa, from whence our woe, wail.

The effects of cold and terror on the human frame closely resemble each other. They both check the action of the heart and depress the vital powers. The shoulders are shrugged forward, and the arms and closed hands pressed against the chest, while the muscles of the face and jaw are kept rigid. The deep guttural sound uttered in this condition of the bodily frame is imitated in English by the interjection ugh, expressive of cold or horror, whence the Scotch and OE. ug, to feel abhorrence at, to nauseate.

The rattling drum and trumpet's tout
 Delight young swankies that are stout;
 What his kind frighted mother ugs
 Is musick to the sodger's lugs. Jamieson.

In a passage of Hardyng, cited at the same place, it is said that the abbess of Coldinghame, having cut off her own nose and lips for the purpose of striking the Danish ravishers with horror, —counselled all her sisters to do the same,

 To make their foes to houge so with the sight.
 And so they did, afore the enemies came Eche-on their nose and over-lip full right
 Cut off anon, which was an hougly sight.

Here, as Jamieson rightly observes, the passage clearly points out the origin of the E. ugly, as signifying what causes abhorrence, and he might have carried the derivation to its original source if he had added, what impels one to utter the exclamation ugh!

Ugh! the odious ugly fellow!

Countess of St. Albans.

In the Sc. ugsome, frightful, terrible, the original force of the root is preserved, which is much softened down in ugly.

The ugsomeness and silence of the nycht
 In every place my sprete made sare aghast.—D. V.

Then as things of an extraordinary size have a tendency to excite awe and terror, to make us ug or houge at them, the term huge is used to signify the utmost degree of magnitude. To hug is another derivative from the same fundamental image, expressing the bodily action induced by great cold, shrugging up the shoulders and pressing the folded arms against the breast; then with a total loss of all reference to the instinctive origin of the action, to press another to one's breast. The verb to shrug has probably its origin in the same image, as schuck is one of the interjections of cold cited by Grimm, and the insertion or omission of the r is of little importance. Compare Fr. trut, G. trotz, interjections of contempt, with E. tut, tush.

The idea of disgust takes its rise in the senses of smell and taste, in the first instance probably in smell alone. Now in defending ourselves from a bad smell we are instinctively impelled to screw up the nose, and to expire strongly through the compressed and protruded lips, giving rise to a sound represented by the interjections faugh! foh! fie! Lith. pu! G. pfui! Bret. fœi! fec'h!

Faugh! I have known a charnel-house smell sweeter ;
 If emperor's flesh have this savour, what will mine do
 When I am rotten? Beaumont and Fletcher.

Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank.—Shakespeare.

The Welsh interjection ffi is used as a substantive in the sense of loathing, whence ffaid, loathsome ; ffieiddra, loathsomeness, disdain. From forms like the Lith. pui, G. pfui, rise the Lat. putere, Fr. puer, to stink, Lat. putris, stinking, rotten ; Icel. fuki, stink, fuinn, putrid, Goth. fuls, stinking, foul. “Jah fuls ist,” (Ulph. Joh. xi. 9.)—by this time he stinketh. Hence Icel. fullsa, to show disgust at anything, fulslegr, hateful, disgusting, fulsome.

The expression is naturally transferred from physical to moral aversion in Icel. fiá, Goth. fijan, to hate, whence G. feind, an enemy, É. fiend, foe, feud.

The gratification of the appetite for food is the earliest occasion on which the infant has to exercise the option of acceptance or rejection ; and the gestures by which he indicates his inclination on this occasion are taken in after-life as the type of acceptance or refusal in general. When the infant is inclined to accept the proffered food, he bends his head eagerly forward to seize the breast, and when he is satisfied he moves his head from side to side, in order to withdraw his mouth from the nipple. Hence nodding or bending the head forward is universally used as the symbol of acceptance, and shaking the head, of negation or refusal.

The negative force of the particle no may probably be explained on the same principle, from representing the sound made through the clenched teeth, in sign of a resolution not to open the mouth for the reception of offered food. The act of rejection is expressed in a more lively manner by an imitation of spitting, as if in the effort to rid oneself of something disagreeable taken into the mouth, while the opposite feelings are indicated by smacking with the lips, as if in the endeavour to make the most of an agreeable taste.

In Leichardt's Australia we are furnished with examples of both these modes of expression among tribes in the lowest stage of civilisation, given as a simple statement of fact, without any theorising on the principle on which the meaning of the natives was understood.

“The men commenced talking to them, but occasionally interrupted their speeches by spitting, and uttering a noise like pooh! pooh! apparently expressive of their disgust.”—p. 189. The utterance was in fact identical with our own interjection pooh! which is merely a representation of the act of spitting in sign of contemptuous rejection. "Puh! puh! fi! fi! interjection of one who is sensible of something disgusting (cosa stomachevole)."—Patriarchi, Dict. Venet.

"They very much admired our horses and bullocks, and particularly our kangaroo-dog. They expressed their admiration by a peculiar smacking or clacking with their mouth or lips."—Leichardt, p. 336.

The production of the sound here represented by smack or clack arises from the fact, that the organ of taste is distributed over the tongue and palate, and the sensation is only appreciated in full intensity at the moment when the two branches of the organ are brought into contact, and again separated. Hence AS. smaec, G. geschmack, Pol. smak, taste, savour; Du. smaeklick, sweet, palatable, agreeable to the taste. In the Finnish languages the initial s is lost, giving rise to Esthon. maggo, makko, taste; maggus, makke, Fin. makia, sweet, well tasting, maiskia, to smack the lips; maiskis, a smack, kiss, delicacies; maisto, taste. In like manner the Gr. γλυκος, Lat. dulcis (for dlucis), sweet, may be explained from the second of the forms above mentioned, clack, or click, shown also in W. gwefus-glec, a smack of the lips—Spurrell, and with slight modification in E. lick. A sweet taste is one which makes one lick one's chops.

The natural expression of displeasure, assuming the shape under different circumstances of anger, defiance, or contempt, is a whiff of breath through the nostrils, or protruded lips. Hence to sniff or snuff at, to treat with contempt; to take a thing in snuff, to receive it with displeasure.

Sharp breaths of anger puffed
Her fairy nostrils out.—Tennyson.

To huff, which signifies in the first instance to blow, is commonly used in the sense of showing one's displeasure, giving one a sharp answer. The endeavour to represent the sound of a sniff or blurt of contempt or anger has given rise to several interjections, expressive of such feelings, pish, pshaw, tut, tush, OE. ptrot (scornful word—Pr. Pm.), prut, Fr. trut (an interjection importing indignation, tush, tut, fy man—Cot.), G. trotz:

Besides being used as the interjection tut, the W. twt signifies a puff or breath.—Lewis. Sc. toot, to blow a horn, to express dissatisfaction or contempt.—Jam. As the same puff of air through the nose and lips which expresses dissatisfaction is produced in sneezing, the act of sneezing is sometimes taken as a type of contempt, and we speak of a thing as not to be sneezed at, not worthy of contempt. Hence may be explained the agreement of many words signifying sneeze with the foregoing interjections. We may compare pshaw with kishoo, the articulation by which a sneeze is commonly imitated in English; tush with W. tisio, to sneeze; Gael. trus, Fr. trut with Lap. trusset, Fr. trucheter, to sneeze; ptrot, and prut with Hung. pűrűsz, trűsz, pűrűsz, sneeze, Sw. prusta, to snort, spurt, sneeze.

The Manuel des Pécchés, when treating of pride, takes as first example him —that is unbuxom al

Ayens hys fader spirital—
And seyth “prut! for thy cursyng, prest.”—l. 3016.

The author then proceeds to denounce him who uses “prout wordys” to his sovereign.

As from G. trotz! originally an interjection of contempt or defiance (Grimm.), is formed trotzig, arrogant, so from prut! arises prout, or as we now write it, proud, and the abstract pride.

The effect of complete absorption in an object, whether from sudden astonishment or intent observation, is marked by involuntary opening of the mouth, arising from the relaxation of all the muscles of the face not exerted in effecting a steady gaze.

I saw a smith stand with his hammer—thus—
The whilst his iron did on his anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news.—K. John.

The interjection of wonder then is formed from a repetition of the syllable ba! ba! mechanically uttered through the parting lips; Gr. βαβα! Lat. babæ! papæ! Hence the use of the root ba in the expression of astonishment in languages the most distantly removed from each other. Zulu babaza, Fr. e-ba-hir, a-bau-bir (Roquefort), to cause to cry ba! to set agape, to astonish. Hécart in his Rouchi Dictionary (the dialect of Lille) explains Ba! an interjection expressing doubt, and adds his belief that the word is pretty generally used with some modifications to express astonishment. In the same dialect babaie, celui qui regarde la bouche béante, a staring booby.

The original force of the syllable is seen in the O. Fr. baer, baier, modern béer, to open the mouth, to gape, then to be intent upon anything; abayer, attendre quelqu'un avec empressement, inhiare loquenti.—Lacombe. Hence the OE. abeyance, expectation, aby, to expect, endure, remain. The insertion of a d to avoid the hiatus gives the Prov. badar, to gape, to open; gola badada, as Fr. gueule b'ée, with open mouth. It. badare, to be intent upon, to wait, corresponding to the E. bide, abide (as shown in the body of the work), as O. Fr. baer to E. abie or aby. The same change of vowel takes place in the Lat. hio as compared with the Gr. χαιω, to gape.

The interjections commanding silence, st, hist, whist, hush, stand on a somewhat different footing. They are not the instinctive expressions of bodily or mental affections in the speaker, but are to be understood by the ellipse of a negative.

The slight inarticulate sounds that escape involuntarily from a person, or lowest whisper, are represented by the syllables st, hist, whist, whish, chut, chus, mus, mut, muk, mu, &c., and the fact of total silence is expressed by saying that not even a sound of such a nature was heard. Sp. no decir chus ni mus; ni chistar ni mistar; It. non far ni motto ni tutto; Gr. μυζειν μηδε γρυζειν; Lat. ne mutire quidem, to be totally silent. Dan. muk or gny (= Gr. γρυ), the slightest sound; han gav ikke en muk, not the slightest sound escaped him.—Ferrall. The author of Piers Plowman, speaking of the avarice of the monks, says that you may sooner

—mete the mist on Malvern hills

Than get a nom of their mouths till money be them shewed.

Mum is then used as an interjection commanding silence, or for a state of silence. In like manner It. citire, to whisper softly and scarce to move the lips; non fare zitto, non sentirsi un zitto, non fiatare, non alitare, not to let a breath be heard, to be perfectly still. Then with the ellipse of the negative, zitto, hushed, silent; citire, to silence, whist, still.—Fl. Sc. whish, a whisper, a rushing or whizzing sound; to whish, to hush.—Jam.

Lat her yelp on, be you as calm 's a mouse,

Nor lat your whisht be heard into the house.

Again, the sound of breathing is represented by the Sc. souch, swouch, swough, and thence by the same ellipse of the negative, souch, silent, tranquil, explaining the A.S. swugan, swigan, swigian, Gr. σιγαν, to be silent.

After thus tracing the expression of ideas like endurance or continuance, and even of silence itself, to an imitative root, we need not doubt the possibility of expressing any other idea on the same principle. A derivation then in the following pages will only be considered as having reached its utmost limit when it is traced to an imitative root. In the great majority of instances we are forced to stop far short of this, and must be satisfied if we are able to bring to light some portion of the process by which the form of the word and the actual signification have been attained.

One important consequence of the foregoing theory of the formation of language must not be overlooked; that it accounts for those striking coincidences which are occasionally found in the most remote languages, irrespective of the question whether the common forms of speech are the lingering remnants of a common ancestry. The most barbarous nations are often extremely good mimics, and it would not be surprising if their imitations of natural sounds often agreed with our own. I have accordingly made use of every source which I have found available, whether it tended to illustrate the formation of a word, or the application of a sensible image to the expression of a moral conception.

I have as a rule omitted words of classical derivation, whether immediate or through the French, unless sufficiently disguised in form to require explanation, or in cases where the meaning of the word has been greatly modified during its residence in a foreign soil, or where it seemed desirable to point out relations not commonly recognised by our classical scholars. It is difficult to draw such a line very accurately, and doubtless words of classic origin will occasionally have slipped in where it might not be very easy to explain the grounds of the exception.

It has been usual in the introduction to works of the present description to give a table of the consonantal changes met with in tracing a root through the related languages. But it seems to me that there is not an adequate advantage in such a provision. If it be confined to a statement of the consonants which may occasionally replace each other in equivalent forms, it might justify the change of any letter into almost any other, and if it took into account the conditions under which certain changes are found, it would draw to too great a length. Etymology is like other sciences. You cannot at once carry conviction in a given derivation to one who has never attended to the subject, and the kind of change compatible with identity in the root of a word must be practically learned in the course of experience. The best preparation will be found in an accurate analysis of the organic relations of the elementary sounds.

The usual classification of the consonants arranges them on a double principle, viz. first, according to the part of the vocal organs by the action of which the modification is produced, as labials, p, b; f, m; dentals, t, d, th, n; and gutturals, k, g, Germ. ch; and secondly, according to the nature of the organic action employed in pronunciation, as tenues, p, t, k; medials, b, d, g; aspirates, f or ph, th, ch; liquids, l, m, n, r; breathings, s, h, v and semivowels, y and w.

Or in a tabular view

	Tenuis.	Medials.	Aspirates.
Labials	P	B	PH or F
Dentals	T	D	TH
Gutturals	K	G	Germ. CH.

But this, as has frequently been observed, omits many analogies of the very kind which constitutes the principle of the arrangement. It is plain that v has to f, and x to s, the same relation that the medial has to the tenuis; that v is related to b as f to p, and that sh stands in the same relation to s as ph to p, or th to t, as is shown by the mode of spelling what are in truth simple sounds.

The whole of the organic relations of the consonantal sounds is, I believe, exhibited in the following table, in which the names of spirant and sonant are adopted instead of tenuis and medial, as expressing more clearly the nature of the vocal modification.

	Spirant.	Sonant.	Liquid.
Labial	{ clear	P	B	M
	{ thick	PH or F	V	W
Guttural	{ clear	K	G	NG
	{ thick	Germ. CH	Gael. GH	H
Dental	{ clear	T	D	N
	{ thick	TH in thick	DE, TH in this	L
Palatal	{ clear	S	Z	R
	{ thick	• SH	ZH, Fr. J	Y, Germ. J

The natural order of the vowels pronounced as in Italian, is i, e, a, a (in call), o, u, of which i at one end and u at the other pass into the semivowels y and w.

The difference between the spirants and the sonants, as intimated by the names, is that the latter are pronounced by the full tone of the voice, while in the former the same articulation is used with a breathing only. Both of these columns have been comprised under the name of explosives, as formed by the voice or breath being forced through a passage suddenly opened in some part of the vocal organs at the moment of articulation. The peculiarity of the liquids is that the configuration of the vocal organs with which they are pronounced is the same with that which immediately precedes the explosion productive of the corresponding sonant or spirant. The vocal organs during the pronunciation of the letter M are in the position occupied at the moment immediately preceding the exertion by which B is pronounced, and so with respect to N and D, NG and G, and the same is, I believe, true of L and TH, H and CH. Hence may be explained the common phenomenon known as the nasalisation of a consonant, when the corresponding liquid is inserted in a word before a radical spirant or sonant, as in Gr. λαμβανω, from a root λαβ, Lat. tundo, from a root tud, &c. On the other hand, a liquid is frequently strengthened by the addition of the corresponding sonant, as the vulgar gownd for gown, E. swamp, G. schwamm, &c.

I have not been able to come to a clear understanding as to the nature of the organic action which produces what I have called the clear or thick classes of consonants, but the general conviction, that the change from clear to thick is effected by a definite organic modification, is witnessed by the fact, that the thick consonant is written by the addition of an H to the corresponding clear one.

With respect to the probable length to which the present work may be expected to run, many circumstances tend to help us more quickly over the ground as we advance, and from such an estimate as I am able to make I hope to complete it in two more volumes.

ENGLISH ETYMOLOGY.

A, as a prefix to nouns, is commonly the remnant of the AS. on, in, on, among, as aback, AS. on-bæc; away, AS. on-wæg; alike, AS. on-lic.

In the obsolete adown it represents the AS. of, of or from; AS. of-dune, literally, from a height, downwards.

As a prefix to verbs it corresponds to the Goth. us, out of; OHG. ur, ar, er, ir; G. er, implying a completion of the action.

Thus G. erwachen, to awake, is to wake up from a state of sleep; to abide, is to wait until the event looked for takes place; to arise, to get up from a recumbent posture. See Grimm, ii. 818.

Abaft. AS. æftan, be-æftan, bæftan, after, behind. Hence on-bæftan, abaft. The word seems very early to have acquired the nautical use in which alone it survives at the present day.

Every man shewid his connyng tofore the ship and baft.

Chaucer, Beryn., 843.

Abandon. Immediately from Fr. abandonner, and that from the noun bandon (also adopted in English, but now obsolete), command, orders, dominion. The word Ban is common to all the languages of the Teutonic stock in the sense of proclamation, announcement, remaining with us in the restricted application to Banss of Marriage. Passing into the Romance-tongues, this word became bando in Italian and Spanish, an edict or proclamation, bandon in French, in the same sense, and secondarily in that of command, orders, dominion, power :

Alangst the land of Ross he roars,
And all obeyed at his bandown,
Even frac the north to suthren shores.

Battle of Harlaw in Jamieson.

Than Wallace said, Thou spekis of mychty thing,
Fra worthi Bruce had resavit his crown,
I thought have maid Ingland at his bandown,
So wttrely it suld beyn at his will,
What plesyt him, to sauff the king or spill.—Wallace.

Hence to embandon or abandon is to bring under the absolute command or entire control of any one, to subdue, rule, have entire dominion over.

And he that thryll (thrall) is is nocht his,
All that he has embandownyt is Unto his Lord, whatever he be.—Bruce i. 244.

The hardy Bruce anc ost abandownyt
Twenty thousand he rewlyt be force and wit
Upon the Scottis his men for to reskew.—Wallace x. 317.

The king rycht weill resauyt he,
And wndretuk his man to be,
And him and his on mony wyss
He abandownyt till his servise.—Bruce iii. 130.

He that dredeth God wol do diligence to plesse God by his werkes and abandon himself with all his might well for to do.—Parson's Tale.

Thus we see that the elliptical expression of "an abandoned character," to which the accident of language has attached the notion of one enslaved to vice, might in itself with equal propriety have been used to signify devotion to good.

Again, as that which is placed at the absolute command of one party must by the same act be entirely given up by the original possessor, it was an easy step from the sense of conferring the command of a thing upon some particular person, to that of renouncing all claim to authority over the subject matter, without particular reference to the party into whose hands it might come; and thus in modern times the word has come to be used almost exclusively in the sense of renunciation or desertion. “Dedicio—abaundunement,” the surrender of a castle. Neccham.

The adverbial expressions at abandon, bandonly, abandonly, so common in the “Bruce” and “Wallace” like the O. Fr. à son bandon, à bandon, may be explained, at his own will and pleasure, at his own impulse, uncontrolledly, impetuously, determinedly. “Ainsi s’avancèrent de grand volenté tous chevaliers et ecuyers et prirent terre.”—Froiss. vol. iv. c. 118.

To Abash. Originally, to put to confusion from any strong emotion, whether of fear, of wonder, shame, or admiration, but restricted in modern times to the effect of shame. Abash is an adoption of the Fr. esbahir, as sounded in the greater number of the inflections, esbahissons, esbahissais, esbahissant. In order to convert the word thus inflected into English it was natural to curtail merely the terminations ons, ais, ant, by which the inflections differed from each other, and the verb was written in English to abaisse or abaish, as ravish, polish, furnish, from ravir, polir, fournir.

Many English verbs of a similar derivation were formerly written indifferently with or without a final sh, where custom has rendered one, or other of the two modes of spelling obsolete. Thus obey was written obeisse or obeyshe; betray, betrash.

Speaking of Narcissus stooping to drink, Chaucer writes :

In the water anon was sene
His nose, his mouth, his eyen shene,
And he thereof was all abashed,
His owne shadow had him betrashed;
For well he wened the forme to see
Of a childe of full grete beanti.—R. R. 1520.

In the original—

Et il maintenant s'ébahit
 Car son ombre si le trahit
 Car il cuida voir la figure
 D'ung enfant bel a demesure.

On the other hand, burny was formerly in use as well as burnish; abay or abaw as well as abaisse or abaish:

I saw the rose when I was nigh,
 It was thereon a goodly sight—
 For such another as I gesse
 Aforne ne was, ne more vermeille,
 I was abawid for merveille.—R. R. 3645.

In the original—

Moult m'esbahis de la merveille.

Yield you madame en hicht can Schir Lust say,
 A word scho could not speik scho was so abaid.

K. Hart in Jamieson.

Custom, which has rendered obsolete betrash and obeish, has exercised her authority in like manner over abay or abaw, burny, astony.

The origin of esbahir itself is to be found in the O. Fr. baer, béer, to gape, an onomatopœia from the sound Ba, most naturally uttered in the opening of the lips. Hence Lat. Babæ! Mod. Prov. Bah! the interjection of wonder; and abaubir, esbahir, in the active form, to set agape, confound, astonish, to strike with feelings the natural tendency of which is to manifest itself by an involuntary opening of the mouth.

In himself was all his state
 More solemn than the tedious pomp which waits
 On princes, when their rich retinue long
 Of horses led, and grooms besmeared with gold,
 Dazzles the crowd, and sets them all agape.—Milton.

Wall. bawi, to look at with open mouth; esbawi, to abaw or astonish.—Grandg. See Abide.

To Abate. Fr. abbattre, to beat down, to ruin, overthrow, cast to the ground, Cotgr. Wall. abate, faire tomber, Grandg. It. abbatere, to overthrow, to pull down, to make lower, depress, weaken, to diminish the force of anything; abbatere la vela, to strike sail; abbatere dal prezzo, to bate something of the price; abbatersi, to light upon, to hit, to happen, to meet with; abbatersi in una terra, to take possession of an estate. Hence the OE. law term abatement, which is the act of one who intrudes into the possession of lands void by the death of the former possessor, and not yet taken up by the lawful heir; and the party who thus pounces upon the inheritance is called an abator. See Beat, Bate.

Abbot, Abbey, Abbess. More correctly written abbat, from Lat. abbas, abbatis, and that from Syrian abba, father. The word was occasionally written abba in Latin. It was a title of respect formerly given to monks in general, and it must have been during the time that it had this extended signification that it gave rise to the Lat. abbatia, an abbey, or society of abbots or monks. Epiphanius, speaking of the Holy places, says, εχει δε η αυτη αβαδες χιλιους και χιλια κελλια, it contains a thousand monks and a thousand cells.—Ducange. In process of time we meet with protestations from St Jerome and others against the arrogance of assuming the title of Father, and either from feelings of such a nature, or possibly from the analogy between a community of monks and a private family, the name of Abbot or Father was ultimately confined to the head of the house, while the monks under his control were called Brothers.

Abele. The white poplar. Pol. bialo-drzew, literally white tree, from bialo, white.

To Abet, Bait, Bete. Directly from O. Fr. abetter, to incite, animate, and that from the cry, bet! used in setting dogs on their prey.

He bade me what time a hart I met

That I should let slip and say, Go bett!

• With Hay go bett! Hay go bett! Hay go bett!

Now shall we have game and sport enow.

Common-place Book of Richard Hilles.—Fraser's Mag. Aug. 1858.

The herd of hartes founden is anon,
 With hey go bet ! pricke there, let gon, let gon.
 Chaucer, Legend of Dido. Dyces Skelton, i. 169.

In the South of France the exclamation takes the form of Abouto! a cry made to dogs, clapping the hands, to excite them against each other, whence abouta, to set dogs on, and figuratively to excite to anger. Dict. Castraise.

This exclamation seems to have been of very general use, as it has given rise also to Icel. beita, G. baizen, E. bait, to hunt with hawk or dog,—properly, to set on the animal to attack another. Icel. beiti hauki, hundum, falconem, vel canes incito, emitto. Hald.

The herd had with him a hound his hert to light,
 For to bait on his bestis when thai to brode went.
 William and the Werewolf.

i. e. to set on his dog to drive in his beasts when they wandered too far.

To bait a bull, to set dogs on a bull.

So in Dan. hidse, to set on, incite; hidse en hare, to course a hare.

The word is not found in AS. in the primitive sense of setting on dogs, but the compound gebetan is used in the applied sense of inciting. “He is to onbærnanne and to gebetanne mid thinre brotherlicnesse lufan.” He is to be kindled and incited by the zeal of your brotherhood.—Bede in Junius. And betan itself is used in the closely analogous sense of kindling a fire by blowing it up. Prov. and OE. to bete or beet the fire, to keep up the fire by supplying it with fuel. O. Sw. boeta fyr, accendere focum.—Ihre. Du. boeten het vier, struere ignem, admovere titiones.—Kil. vuur anbuten, to set fire to.—Overyssel Almanach. Fr. boutefeu, an incendiary, where it will be observed that we have the vowel sound of ou instead of the thinner e, as in the cry of encouragement to dogs, abouto! used in the South of France.

plying it with fuel, are closely allied. And from mending a fire the signification is extended to embrace the sense of repairing, mending, in general. Sc. "To beit a mister," to supply a want. "To beit one's bale," to remedy one's misfortune. "Daily wearing needs yearly beiting."

From the use of a dog in driving cattle, the term was specially applied to the driving of cattle to pasture. Icel. at beita, pastum agere pecus, whence beit, Sw. bete, a pasture, grazing; gå i bete, to graze; beta boskap, to graze cattle, to feed cattle. In like manner the Hung. haitani, to drive, when applied to cattle, signifies to drive them to pasture.

In the next stage bait comes to signify the act of feeding, without reference to the question whether the animal is driven to the pasture or the food brought to it.

Sw. betå pa rågen, to give your cattle food, to bait on the way. Icel. fiu-beit, hrossa-beit, cattle-food, horse-food. In English the sense was formerly extended to the taking of food in general.

On many a sorry meal now may she bait.—Chaucer.

In the Scandinavian languages the notion of driving is made to comprehend the act of urging forwards an inanimate object, or one which is not regarded as an agent in the matter; Sw. at beta för hestarna, to put the horses to. Icel. at beita sverdi, to brandish a sword.

In the sense of baiting a hook the accidental resemblance of bait and bite has led etymologists on a wrong scent. The object for which a bait is used is to induce the animal to take the hook, and thus the thing is naturally expressed by a word signifying incitement, instigation. So from G. reitzen, to stir up, irritate, provoke, is formed reizt, an irritation, incitement, bait (Küttner); and the E. entice, to allure, is a mere adoption of the Fr. attiser, to incite, stir up, kindle.

Abeyance. See Abide.

To Abide.—Abie. Abide and Abie (like guide and guy, Prov. guidar and guiar, It. gridare, and Fr. crier) are essentially the same verb under different forms, of which abide has descended to us from our Saxon ancestors, while abie has come to us through the medium of the French.

To begin with abie, we have seen under Abash that the sound made by the involuntary opening of the mouth under the influence of astonishment or similar affection was imitated by the syllable Ba, whence in O. Fr. baer, mod. Fr. béer, to open the mouth, to gape.

Quant voit le serpent qui baille .
Corant seus lui, geule baée.—Raynouard.

The verbs baer, baier, béer were then applied figuratively in the sense of listening attentively, gazing with open mouth, having the attention fixed upon anything, being absorbed in an object.

Tous baioient à la servir
Por l'amor de li desservir.—R. R. 1043.

Translated by Chaucer :

All busy werin her to serve
For that they would her love deserve.
Pour le temps que seras béent
En ta pensée delectable.—R. R. 2469.

In Chaucer:

Whilst thou so slombрист in that thought,
That is so swete and delitable.

The addition of an initial a makes no alteration in the sense, and abayer is explained by Lacombe, “écouter avec étonnement, bouché béante, inhiare loquenti.”

I saw a smith stand with his hammer thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news.—K. John.

The adoption of Fr. abayer gives us the verb to abie, and with still less change of form the legal term abeyance, suspense or expectation. The smith's work remained in abeyance, while he was gaping at the tailor's news. The action of a person thus absorbed in external observation being so suspended, the verb abie which expresses his attitude is applied to simple continuance in inaction, to passive endurance, or positive suffering of pain.

At sight of her they suddaine all arose
 In great amaze, ne wist what way to chuse,
 But Jove all fearless forced them to aby.—F. Q.

i. e. to remain or abide.

But patience perforce, he must abie
 What fortune and his fate will on him lay.—F. Q.

Certes (quoth she) that is that these wicked shrewes be more blissful that abien the torments that they have deserved than if no pain of Justice ne chastised them.—Chaucer. Boethius.

The course of development in form and signification in the case of Abide is exactly parallel.

In order to avoid the hiatus between the root ba and the syllables of inflection the root is strengthened by a final d ('the d being in ancient Latin the regular stop-gap of the hiatus.' Quart. Rev. No 148), and thus gives rise to It. badare, Prov. and Cat. badar, to open the mouth. Badare, hippitare, oscitare.—Gloss. Isid. Bader, ouvrir.—Vocab. de Berri. The Prov. gola badada, It. bocca badata, occupy the place of the Fr. gueule béc, bouche béante.

In modern Italian, Prov., and Breton the action of gaping or yawning is expressed by the frequentatives badigliare, badalhar, badalein, corresponding to the Fr. baailler, bailler, from the other form of the root; while the simple forms, It. badare, Bret. bada, are used in secondary applications. It. badare, to mind, to heed, to take care, to aspire, to covet (as abayar, desirer ardemment, Vocab. de Berri), to amuse oneself, to tarry, to stay.—Altieri. Bret. bada, badaoui, to be stupefied, dazzled, astonished. In the same way the word attend, which with us expresses the direction of the mind to a particular object, is used in Fr. attendre in the sense of simply waiting, remaining till something is done.

From It. badare we are led through Goth. beidan to expect, look out for, endure; O. G. bitan, arbitan; AS. bidan, abidan, to E. bide, abide, in precisely the same way as from Fr. baer, to gape, through baier, abaier, to E. abeyance, expectation, and abie, to expect, endure.

In OE. the active sense of looking out for a thing was much more strongly felt in the word abide than it is now, when the signification is nearly confined to the sense of continuance, endurance. Thus in many passages of the Scriptures the word abide in Wickliff's version is replaced by look for in our present translation. Luke ii. 38, "And she spake of him to all that looked for redemption in Jerusalem." In Wickliff's version "to all that abiden the redemption of Israel." 2 Pet. iii. 11, "What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation, looking for and hasting to the coming of God." In Wickliff, "What manner men behoveth you to be in holi livings abiding and highing unto the coming of the day of our Lord."

From the notion of waiting till something happens the next step was to that of enduring or suffering the event expected, then to simple endurance, continuance, dwelling, rest.

"At his wrath the earth shall tremble and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation." Jeremiah x. 10.

This Eolus no where abode

Till he was come to Fames feet.—Chaucer, House of Fame.

Abie, 2. Fundamentally distinct from abie in the sense above explained, although sometimes confounded with it, is the verb abie, properly abuy, and spelt indifferently in the older authors abegge, abeye, abigg, abidge, from AS. abicgan, abycgan, to redcem, to pay the purchase-money, to pay the penalty, suffer the consequences of anything; and the simple buy, or bie, was often used in the same sense.

Sithe Richesse hath me failed here,

She shall abie that trespass dere.—R. R.

Algate this selie maide is slaine alas!

Alas! to dere abought she her beaute.—Doctor's Tale.

O Gloteny fulfilled of cursidnesse !
 O the cause first of our confusion !
 O original of our damnacion !
 Till Christ had bought us with his blode again ;
 To see how dere shortily for to sain
Abought was first this cursid vilonic!—Pardoner's Tale.

Thou slough my brother Morgan
 At the mete full right
 As I am a doughiti man
 His death thou bist (buyest) tonight.—Sir Tristrem.

For whoso hardy hand on her doth lay
 It derely shall abie, and death for hondsel pay.
 Spenser, F. Q.

And when he fond he was yhurt, the Pardoner he gan to threte,
 And swore by St Amyas that he should abigg
 With strokes hard and sore even upon the rigg.
 Prol. Merch. 2nd Tale.

Ac for the lesyng that thou Lucifer lowe til Eve
 Thou shalt abygge bitter quoth God, and bond him with cheynes.
 P. P.

To buy it dear, seems to have been used as a sort of proverbial expression for suffering loss, without special reference to the notion of retribution.

The thingis fellin as they done of werre
 Betwixtin hem of Troie, and Grekis ofte,
 For some day boughtin they of Troie it dere
 And ofte the Grekis foundin nothing softe
 The folke of Troie. Tr. and Cr.

It will be seen from the foregoing examples how naturally the sense of buying or paying the purchase-money of a thing passes into that of simply suffering, in which the word is used in the following passages.

O God, forbid for mother's fault
 The children should abye.—Boucher.

If he come ~~into~~ the hands of the Holy Inquisition, he must abye for it.
 Boucher.

i. e. must suffer for it.

Now abie, from Fr. abayer, may frequently be translated in precisely the same manner.

Who dies the utmost dolour doth abie.—F. Q.

It is not surprising then that abie from abicgan and abie from abaier, being thus found identical both in form and signification, should occasionally have been confounded together. But the confusion has been carried one step further, for abide, being wholly synonymous with the abie of French extraction, has sometimes been used as if synonymous with the other abie, in the sense of paying the penalty.

If it be found so some will dear abide it.—Jul. Cæsar.

How dearly I abide that boast so vain.—Milton, P. L.

Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,

Lest to thy peril thou abide it dear.—Mids. N. Dr.

Able. Lat. habilis (from habeo, to have; have-like, at hand), convenient, fit, adapted; Fr. habile, able, strong, powerful, expert, sufficient, fit for anything he undertakes or is put unto.—Cotgr. It. abile; Prov. abilh.

It will be remarked on looking at a series of quotations that in the earlier instances the sense of the Lat. habilis is closely preserved, while in later examples the meaning is confined to the case of fitness by possession of sufficient active power.

God tokeneth and assigneth the times, abling hem to her proper offices.

Chaucer. Boeth.

In the original,

Signat tempora propriis

Aptans officiis Deus.

That if God willing to schewe his wrathe, and to make his power knowne, hath sufferid in grete pacience vessels of wrathe able unto death, &c.

Wickliff in Richardson.

To enable a person to do a thing or to disable him, is to render him fit or unfit for doing it.

Divers persons in the House of Commons were attainted, and therefore not legal nor habilitate to serve in Parliament, being disabled in the highest degree.—Bacon in Richardson.

The Fr. habiller is to qualify for any purpose, as habiller du chanvre, de la volaille, to dress hemp, to draw fowls, to render them fit for use ; whence habiliments are whatever is required to qualify for any special purpose, as habiliments of war ; and the most general of all qualifications for occupation of any kind being simply clothing, the Fr. habillement has become appropriated to that special signification.

Aboard. For on board, within the walls of a ship. Icel. bord, a board, the side of a ship. Innan bords, within the ship, on board ; at kasta fyri bord, to throw overboard.

Abolish. Fr. abolir, from Lat. aboleo, to crase or annul. The neuter form abolesco, to wear away, to grow out of use, to perish, when compared with adolesco, to grow up, coalesco, to grow together, shows that the force of the radical syllable ol is growth, vital progress. Pl. D. af-olen, af-oolden, to become worthless through age. De Mann olet ganz af, the man dwindles away. The primitive idea seems that of begetting or giving birth to, kindling. O. Sw. ala, to beget or give birth to children, and also, as AS. ælan, to light a fire ; the analogy between life and the progress of ignition being one of constant occurrence. So in Lat. alere capillos, to let the hair grow, and alere flammam, to feed the flame. In English we speak of the vital spark, and the verb to kindle is used both in the sense of lighting a fire, and of giving birth to a litter of young. The application of the root to the notion of fire is exemplified in Lat. adolere, adolescere, to burn up (adolescunt ignibus aræ. Virg.) ; while the sense of begetting, giving birth to, explains soboles (for sub-ol-es), progeny, and in-d-oles, that which is born in a man, natural disposition. Then, as the duty of nourishing and supporting is inseparably connected with the procreation of offspring, the O. Sw. ala is made to signify to rear, to bring up, to feed, to fatten, showing that the Latin alere, to nourish, is a shoot from the same root. In the same way Sw. föda signifies to beget, and also to rear, to bring up, to feed, to maintain. Gael. álaich, to produce, bring forth, nourish, nurse ; àl, brood, or young of any kind; oil, Goth. alan, ol, to rear, educate, nurse. The root el, signifying life, is extant in all the languages of the Finnish stock.

Abominable.—Abominate. Lat. abominor (from ab and omen, a portent), to deprecate the omen, to recognize a disastrous portent in some passing occurrence, and to do something to avert the threatened evil. Quod abominor, which may God avert. Thence to regard with feelings of detestation and abhorrence.

Above. AS. ufan, be-ufan, bufan, abufan, Du. boven, OE. abowen, Sc. aboon, above, on high. In Barbour's Bruce we find both abowyne and abow, as withoutyn and without.

About. AS. utan, outward, without, be-utan, butan, ymbutan, onbutan, abutan, about; literally, around on the outside.

Sometimes the two parts of the word are divided by the subject to which it relates, or the particle be is separated from the preposition and joined to the preceding verb.

Ymb hancered utan,—

About cockerow.

Thonne seo æftre

Ethopia Land

for ligeth butan, it compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia.

Abraid.—Abray. To abray or abraid, now obsolete, is common in our older writers in the sense of starting out of sleep, awaking, breaking out in language. AS. abrægdan, abredan, to awake, snatch away, draw out.

Tha of slæpe onbrægd Then from sleep awoke

Sunu Lamehes. The son of Lamech.—Cædmon.

The sense of the simple verb to abraid, abray (see Bray), is to do anything with a quick and sudden motion, to start, to snatch, to turn, to break out.

The Miller is a perlous man he seide

And if that he out of his sleep abreide

He might done us both a villonie.—Reve's Tale.

Where fearless I to sleep did down me lay,
But whenas I did out of sleep abray.—

Troilus near out of his wit abreid
And wept full sore with visage pale of hue.

Chaucer, Test. Cress.

To Abridge.—Abbreviate, to shorten, or cut short. Of these synonymous terms the former, from Fr. abrégér, seems the older form, the identity of which with Lat. abbreviare not being at once apparent, abbreviate was subsequently formed direct from the latter language.

Abréger itself, notwithstanding the plausible quotation from Chaucer given below, is not from G. abbrechen, AS. abreccan, but from Lat. abbreviare, by the change of the v and i into u and j respectively. The Provençal has breu for brevis; breuetat for brevitās, in analogy with which the verb corresponding to abbreviare would be abbreujar, leading immediately to Fr. abrégér; and other cases may be pointed out of similar change in passing from Lat. to the Romance languages. Lat. levis becomes leu in Prov., while the verb alleviare is preserved in the double form of alleviar and alleujar, whence the Fr. alléger, which passed into English under the form allegge, common in Chaucer and his contemporaries, so that here also we had the double form allegge and alleviate, precisely corresponding to abridge and abbreviate. In like manner from Lat. gravis, Prov. greu, heavy, hard, severe; greuetat, gravity, leaving a verb agreujar to be supplied corresponding to Fr. aggrégér, OE. agredge, “to aggravate. “Things that greatly agredge their sin.”—Parson’s Tale.

No doubt if we had not so complete a pedigree from brevis, the idea of breaking off would suggest a very plausible derivation from G. abbrechen, to break off; kurz abbrechen, to cut short, Küttner. “And when this olde man wende to enforce his talé by resons, all at once begonne thei to rise for to breken his tale and bidden him full ofte his words for to abregge.”—Chaucer, Melibæus.

Abroach. For on broach, from Fr. brocher, to pierce. To set a tun abroach is to pierce it, and so to place it in condition to draw off the contents.

Right as who set a tonne abroche

He perced the hard roche.—Gower in Richardson.

Wallon abroki, mettre en perce.—Grandg.

See Broach.

Abroad. On broad, spread over the surface, far and wide, and hence arbitrarily applied in the expression going abroad to going beyond the limits of one's own country.

But it (the rose) ne was so sprede on brede,

That men within might know the sede.—R. R.

Abscess. Fr. abscez, a course of ill humours running out of their veins and natural places into the empty spaces between the muscles.—Cotgr. Lat. abscessus, a gathering of ill humours to one part of the body.—Littleton, from abscedere, to retire, withdraw, draw to a head.

To Absorb. Lat. ab and sorbere, to suck up, corresponding to G. schlürfen, an onomatopœia of the noise made in sipping up liquid food. For the loss of the l compare Lat. fugio with G. flug, fliegen.

To Abstain.—Abstemious. Lat. abstineo, to hold back from an object of desire, whence abstemius, having a habit of abstaining from. Vini abstemius, Pliny, abstaining from wine. So Fr. etamer, to tin, from étain.

Abstract. Lat. abstrahere, abstractus, from trahere, the Lat. representative of the E. draw, drag. The abstract of a deed is a summary of the important matter drawn out and presented in a separate form, in the same way that the essentially synonymous extract is arbitrarily applied to the important part of material substance drawn out and separated from the useless mass.

Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face,—

These eyes, those brows were moulded out of his;

This little abstract doth contain that large

Which died in Geoffrey: and the hand of Time

Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.—K. John.

An abstract quality is a quality withdrawn from any of the particular objects whereby it is exhibited in actual existence; and the conception of a quality so considered, apart from any particular mode of exhibition, is an abstract idea.

To Abut. Probably not a mere adoption of Fr. aboutir in the same sense, but direct from the verb to butt, to strike with the head, as a goat or a ram. It is clear that the full force of the metaphor is felt by Shakespeare when he speaks of France and England, as

Two mighty monarchies,
Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
The narrow perilous ocean parts asunder.

Abuttals or boundaries are translated capita in mid. Lat., and abut, capitare.

In the same way the G. stössen, to thrust, butt, push with the horns, &c., is also applied to the abutting of lands. Ein Ochs der mit den Hörnern stösset, a butting ox; ein stössiger Bock, a butting goat; Ihre Länder stössen an einander, their lands abut on each other. So in Swedish stöta, to strike, to thrust, to butt as a goat; stöta til sammans, to meet together, to abut.

The idea of reaching to a certain boundary is in other instances expressed by the image of striking or beating, as the Fr. battre:

Et la prairie grand et belle Au pied d'el ce tertre batait.—R. R.

The meadow reached to the foot of the hill—translated by Chaucer:

The meadowis softe and grene
Beet right upon the water side.

Again:

Les cheveux eut blonds et si longs
Qu'ils lui batoient aux talons.
Her tresses yellow and long straughten
Unto her heles down they raughten.

See Butt.

Accede.—Access.—Accessory. Lat. accedere, accessum, to go or come to, to arrive at, approach. To support, to be of the party or side of any one, to assent to, to approve of. Hence accessory, an aider or abetter in a crime.

Fr. accès from accessus, a fit or sudden attack of a disorder, became in OE. axesse, pl. axes, still preserved in the provincial axes, the ague.—Halliwell.

A charm—

The which can helin thee of thine axesse

If thou do forthwith all thy businesse.

Tro. and Cress. 2, 1315.

It happith oftin so

That one that of axis doeth full ill fare

By gode counsaile can kepe his frend therefro.

Tro. and Cress. 1, 627.

Accomplice. Fr. complice, Lat. complex, bound up with, united with one in a project, but always in a bad sense.

Accomplish. Fr. accomplir, Lat. complere, to fill up, fulfil, complete.

Accord. Fr. accorder, to agree. Formed in analogy to the Lat. concordare, discordare, from *concor*s, *discor*s, and consequently from cor, the heart, and not chorda, the string of a musical instrument. Diez. The Swiss Romance has cordere, cordre, synonymous with G. gönnen, to consent heartily with what falls to another; Wallon, keure, voir de bon gré qu'un évènement arrive à quelqu'un, qu'une chose ait lieu; mes-keure, missgönnen. Grandgagnage.

To Accost. Lat. costa, a rib, a side; Fr. coste, a rib, costé, now côté, a side; coste-à-coste, side by side. Hence accoster, to join side to side, approach, and thence to greet.

Account. A reckoning, statement of expenses; formerly written accompt, from Fr. compter, Lat. computare, to reckon.

Accoutre. From the Fr. accoutrer, formerly accoustrer, to equip with the habiliments of some special office or occupation,—an act of which in catholic countries the frequent change of vestments at appointed periods of the church service would afford a striking and familiar example.

Now the person who had charge of the vestments in a catholic church, was the sacristan ; in Lat. custos sacrarii, or ecclesie (barbarously rendered custriz, when the office was filled by woman), in O. Fr. cousteur or coustre, coutre ; Ger. küster, the sacristan, or vestry-keeper. Ludwig.

Ad custodem sacrarii pertinet cura vel custodium templi—vela vestesque sacra, ac vasa sacrorum.—St Isidore in Ducange.

The original meaning of accoutrer would thus be to perform the office of sacristan to a priest, to invest him with the habiliments of his office ; afterwards to invest with the proper habiliments of any other occupation.

Accrue. Fr. accroître, accru, from Lat. crescere, to grow. Thence accrûe, a growth, increase, Cotgr., and E. accrue, to be in the condition of a growth, to be added to something as what naturally grows out of it.

Ace. Fr. as, It. asso, the face marked with the number one on cards or dice, from Lat. as, assis, which signifies a single one. Diez.

Ache. A bodily pain, from Ach! the natural expression of pain. So from G. ach! alas! the term is applied to woe, grief. Mein Ach ist deine Freude, My woe is your joy. Küttner. Achen, to utter cries of grief. The Gr. αχος, pain, grief, is formed on the same principle.

To Achieve. Prov. cap, Fr. chef, head, and thence the end of anything ; de chief en chief, from end to end ; venir à chef, to gain one's end, to accomplish ; Prov. acabar, Fr. achever, to bring to a head, to accomplish, achieve.

Acme. Gr. ακμή, a point: the highest degree of any quality.

Acorn. AS. æcern, æceren, accern ; Icel. akarn ; Dan. ageren ; Du. aker ; G. ecker, eichel ; Goth. akran, fruit. The last of the AS. spellings shows an early accommodation to the notion of oak-corn, a derivation hardly compatible with the other Teutonic and Scandinavian forms, or with the more general signification of Goth. akran, notwithstanding Grimm's quotation of Cajus, Glandis appellatione omnis fructus continetur.

Grimm is himself inclined to explain akran, fruit, as the produce of the akr, or corn-field.

Cat. aglá, an acorn.

To Acquaint. O. Fr. accointer, Prov. accoindar, to make known; O. Fr. coint, informed of a thing, having it known, from Lat. cognitus, according to Diez; but this seems one of the cases in which it must be doubtful whether the Romance word comes from a Lat. original, or from a corresponding Teutonic root. The G. has kund (from kennen, to know), known, manifest; kund machen, to make known, in precisely the same sense with the Prov. coindar, the d of which seems better to agree with the G. word than with the Lat. cognitus; G. kundig, having knowledge of a thing.

To Acquit. From Lat. quietus, at rest, was formed Fr. quitte, whence acquitter, to set at rest with respect to some impending claim or accusation. See Quit, Quite.

Acre. Gr. αγρος; Lat. ager; Goth. akrs, cultivated land, corn-land. G. acker, a field of cultivated land; thence a measure of land, so much as may be ploughed in a day.

To Adaw. Two words of distinct meaning and origin are here confounded:

1st, from AS. dagian, dægian, to become day, to dawn, OE. to daw, to dawn, adaw or adawn, to wake out of sleep or out of a swoon. • "I adawe or adawne as the day doth in the morning whan the sonne draweth towards his rising." "I adawe one out of a swounde," "to dawe from swouning, —to dawne or get life in one that is fallen in a swoune." Palsgrave in Halliwell.

A man that waketh of his slepe
He may not sodenly wel taken kepe
Upon a thing, ne seen it parfitly
'Til that he be adawed veraily.—Chaucer.

2ndly, from the Fr. adoucir, to soften, and thence to abate, to quell, to diminish the strength of.

As the bright sun what time his fiery train
Towards the western brim begins to draw,
Gins to abate the brightness of his beame
And fervour of his flames somewhat adawe.—F. Q. v. ch. 9.

So spake the bold brere with great disdain,
Little him answered the oak again,
But yielded with shame and grief adawed,
That of a weed he was overcrawed.—Shep. Cal.

In order to understand the step from adoucir to adaw, it must be observed that several of the Burgundian dialects (from whence much of our English is derived) regularly change the sound of the French s or ch to an h. Thus the ordinary Walloon has kinohe, while the Walloon of Namur has conoche, to know, from cognoscer?, It. conoscere. Wallon, bouhe; dialect of Aix, busch, a farthing. Wallon, lahe, for lache, a leash, sahon for saison, bihe for bise. The same peculiarity characterises the dialect of Gruyère in comparison with the surrounding portions of Roman Switzerland, and in the former district is preserved the verb adauhir, to soften, corresponding to adaucir of the ordinary patois. Hence E. adaw, as abaw from esbahir.

To Add. Lat. addere, to put to or unite with, the signification of dare in composition being in general to dispose of an object. Thus reddere, to put back; subdere, to put under; condere, to put by.

• • Adder. A poisonous snake. AS. ætr, ættern; Pl. D. adder; Bav. atter, ader, adern. Icel. eitr-orm, literally poison snake, from eitr, AS. atter, venom (see Atter-cop). The foregoing explanation would be perfectly satisfactory, were it not that a name differing only by an initial n (which is added or lost with equal facility), with a derivation of its own, is still more widely current, with which however Diefenbach maintains the foregoing to be wholly unconnected. Gael. nathair;

W. neidr ; Goth. nadrs ; Isl. nadr ; OHG. natra, nadra ; G. natter ; AS. nædre, nedder ; OE. neddre.

Robert of Gloucester, speaking of Ireland, says,

Selde me schal in the lond any foule wormys se
For nedres ne other wormes ne mow ther be noght.—p. 43.

Instead of neddre Wicliff uses eddre, as Mandeville cwte for what we now call newt, or the modern apron for OE. napron. It seems mere accident which of the two forms is preserved.

The forms with an initial n are commonly referred to a root signifying to pierce or cut, the origin of Goth. nethla, OHG. nâdal, Bret. nadoz, E. needle, and are connected with W. naddu, and with G. schneiden, to cut. Perhaps the Isl. nötra, to shiver, to lacerate, whence nötru-gras, a nettle, may be a more probable origin. There is little doubt that the Icel. eitr, AS. atter, venom, matter, is from OIIG. eiten, to burn.

To Addle. Prov. E. to earn, to thrive.

With goodmen's hogs or corn or hay
I addle my ninepence every day.—Halliwell.

Where ivy embraceth the tree very sore
Kill ivy, or tree will addle no more.—Tusser in do.

Addle. Liquid filth, a swelling with matter in it.—Halliwell ; rotten, as an addle egg. An addle-pool, a pool that receives the draining of a dunghill. Prov. Sw. Ko-adel, the urine of cows ; adla or ala, mingere, of cows, as in E. to stale, of horses.

Address. Fr. addresser, It. drizzare, from Lat. directus, directiare,—Diez, to direct to, to put one in the right way to.

Adept. Lat. adipiscor, adeptus, to obtain. Alchemists who have obtained the grand elixir, or philosopher's stone, which gave them the power of transmuting metals to gold, were called adepti, of whom there were said to be twelve always in being.—Bailey. Hence an adept, a proficient in any art.

To Adjourn. Fr. jour, a day; adjourner, to cite one to appear on a certain day, to appoint a day for continuing a business, to put off to another day.

To Adjust. Fr. adjuster, to make even, to make to agree with each other, to set to rights.

Adjutant. One of the officers who assists the commander in keeping the accounts of a regiment. Lat. adjutare, frequentative from adjuvare, to assist; It. aiutante, an assistant; aiutante de campo, an aidecamp.

Admiral. From the Arabic amir, a lord; originally made known by the crusaders as the title of the Saracen chiefs, and ultimately appropriated all over Europe to the commander of a fleet.

In eo conficto (i. e. the battle of Antioch in the first crusade) occisus est Cassiani magni regis Antiochiæ filius et duodecim Admiraldi regis Babiloniæ, quos cum suis exercitibus miserat ad ferenda auxilia regi Antiochiæ; et quos Admiraldos vocant, reges sunt qui provinciis regionum præsent.

Ducange.

So that aslayne and adreynt twelve princes were ded
That me clupeth amyrayls.—R. G. 402.

No doubt has ever been raised as to the origin of the second syllable, but the Spanish form of the word, almirante, has led some to suppose that the first syllable ad or al is the Arabic article al—al amir. In many cases, however, the article is placed after the noun, as in emir al moslemin, emir al mummenim, commander of the faithful, emir al omrah, lord of lords, titles of the Caffr; so emir al kub, emir al kelam. D'Herbelot. It is more probable, then, that the final al of admiral is the Arabic article, and the ad or al in admiral, almirante, a mere corruption of the first syllable of amir, emir.

tre, from dexter, explained by Cotgr. in the same terms. We also use dexterous, and adroit, as equivalent terms.

To Advance.—Advantage. Fr. avancer, to push forwards, from Fr. avant, It. avanti, before, forwards; Lat. ab ante. Advantage, something that puts one forwards, gain, profit.

Adventure.—Advent. Lat. advenire, to come to, to arrive, to happen; adventus, arrival; E. advent, the coming of our Lord upon earth. O. Fr. advenir, to happen, and thence aventure, a happening, chance, accident, a sense preserved in E. peradventure, perhaps. The word was specially applied to events, as made the subject of poetical or romantic narration, and so passed into the Teutonic and Scandinavian languages, giving rise to G. abenteuer, Icel. æfintyr, Sw. æfwentyr, OE. aunter, a daring feat, hazardous enterprise, or the relation of such, a romantic story. The "Aunters of Arthur at Tarnwathelan," is the title of an old E. romance. For the extraordinary derivations that have been suggested, see Ihre in v. æfwentyr.

To Advise.—Advice. The Lat. visum, from videri, gave rise to It. viso, O. Fr. vis. Visum mihi fuit, it seemed to me, would be rendered in O. It. fu viso a me, O. Fr. ce m'est vis. Diez. In the Roman de la Rose, advis is used in the same sense,—advis m'estoit, it seemed to me; vous fust advis, it seemed to you. Hence advis, It. avviso, OE. avise, view, sentiment, opinion. Advisedly, avisedly, with full consideration.

The erchbishope of Walys seide ys avyse,
'Sire,' he seide, 'gef ther is any mon so wys
That beste red can thereof rede, Merlin that is.'—R. G. 144.

To be avised or advised of a thing would thus be, to have notice of it, to be informed of it.

Of werre and of bataile he was full avise.—R. Brunne.

Whence advice in the mercantile sense, notice, news.

To advise, in the most usual acceptation of the term at the present day, is to communicate our views to another, to give him our opinion for the purpose of guiding his conduct, and advice is the opinion so given.

In O. Fr. adviser, like It. avvisare, was used in the sense of viewing, perceiving, taking note.

Si vy ung songe en mon dormant
Qui moult fut bel à adviser.—R. R. 25.

Avise is frequently found in the same sense in our elder authors.

He looked back and her avizing well
Wcened as he said that by her outward grace
That fairest Florimel was present there in place.—F. Q.

Britomart with sharp avizeful eye
Beheld the lovely face of Arthygall.—F. Q.

Adulation. Lat. adulari, to fawn, to flatter. A derivation is suggested from ad and aula, a hall, adulari, to stand waiting like a dog in the hall.

Advocate. Lat. advocare, to call on or summon one to a place, especially for some definite object, as counsel, aid, &c., to call to one's aid, to call for help, to avail oneself of the aid of some one in a cause. Hence advocatus, one called on to aid in a suit as witness, adviser, legal assistant, but not originally the person who pleaded the cause of another, who was called patronus. Afterwards the word was transferred to the person who conducted a process for any one; in modern language, an advocate, attorney, &c.

Advowson. From the verb advocare, corrupted to advocare in the sense above explained, was formed advocatio (advocatio), O. Fr. advoeson, the patronage or right of presentation to an ecclesiastical benefice. Ducange.

As the clergy were prohibited from appearing before the lay tribunals, and even from taking oaths, which were always required from the parties in a suit, it would seem that ecclesiastical persons must always have required the service of an advocate in the conduct of their legal business, and we find from the authorities cited by Ducange, that positive enactment was repeatedly made by councils and princes, that bishops, abbots, and churches should have good advocates or defenders for the purpose of looking after their temporal interests, defending their property from rapine and imposition, and representing them in courts of law. In the decline of the empire, when defence from violence was more necessary than legal skill, these advocates were naturally selected among the rich and powerful, who alone could give efficient protection, and Charlemagne himself is the advocatus of the Roman church. “Quem postea Romani clegerunt sibi advocatum Sancti Petri contra leges Langobardorum.” —Vita Car. Mag.

The protection of the church naturally drew with it certain rights and emoluments on the part of the protector, including the right of presentation to the benefice itself; and the advocatio, or office of advocate, instead of being an elective trust, became a heritable property. Advocatus became in O. Fr. advoué, whence in the old Law language of England, advowee, the person entitled to the presentation of a benefice, and advowson, from O. Fr. advoeson, advoisson, the right itself. As it was part of the duty of the guardian or protector to act as patronus, or to plead the cause of the church in suits at law, the advowee was also called patron of the living, the name which has finally prevailed at the present day.

Adze. AS. adesa, ascia. AS. Vocab. in Nat. Ant.

To Affeer. From Lat. forum, a market, Fr. feur, market-price, fixed rate, whence afferer, or affeurer, to value at a certain rate, to set a price upon. From the latter of these forms the OE. expression to affere an amerциament,—to fix the amount of a fine left uncertain by the court by which it was imposed, the affeerers being the persons deputed to determine the amount according to the circumstances of the case. “Et quod amerциamenta prædictorum tenentium afferentur et taxentur per sacramentum parium suorum.”—Chart. AD. 1316, in Duc. See Afford.

Affiance.—Affidavit. From fides, was formed M. Lat. affidare, to pledge one's faith. Hence affidavit, a certificate of some one having pledged his faith; a written oath subscribed by the party, from the form of the document, "Affidavit A. B., &c." The loss of the d, so common in like cases, gave Fr. affier, to affie, to pawn his faith and credit on. Cotgr. In like manner, from Lat. confidere, Fr. confier; from It. disfidare, Fr. desfier, to defy.

To Affile, OE. Fr. affiler, It. affilare, to sharpen, to bring to an edge, from Fr. fil, an edge, Lat. filum, a thread.

For well he wist whan that song was songe
 He must preche and well afile his tong;
 To winne silver as he right well coude,
 Therefore he sung the merrier and loude.—Chaucer.

See Burnish.

To Afford. From signifying a market the term forum was applied in M. Lat. to market price, whence Prov. for, Fr. feur, a certain price or rate. The second of these forms gave rise to the Fr. affeurer, and OE. affeer, as the former one to the Fr. afforer, to set a price on a thing, to fix a rate at which it may be sold. Hence, undoubtedly, E. afford, whether the final d be to be explained from the participle affored, or whether it be regarded as an unmeaning corruption. Afford certainly seems written for the participle affored in a passage quoted by Richardson.

"There is no such offering of Christ in the Scripture where you will find it once afford for all," i. e. once valued for all, deemed a sufficient price for all. To affor'd a thing would thus be to deem it worth the price affored, to be willing to give such a price for it, or to part with it at the same. In a passage from Shakespeare, also quoted by Richardson, it is actually written with the participial apostrophe.

Parolles. 'I would that the cutting of my garment would serve the turn or breaking of my Spanish sword.'

First Lord. 'We cannot affoor'd you so,' i. e. we cannot let you off at that price.

Affray.—Afraid.—Fray. Immediately from Fr. effrayer, to scare, appal, dismay, affright; effroi, terror, astonishment, amazement; frayeur, fright, terror, scaring, horror.—Cotgr.

The Prov. forms esfredar, esfreidar, have led Diez too easily to refer the word to Lat. frigidus. The Prov. freiior, he says, like Lat. frigus, or gelu, is properly shuddering; effrayer, to cause to shudder. But the d is an exceedingly moveable letter, and is so easily inserted between vowels that it is by no means safe to rely upon the Prov. forms. Nor could the notion of causing to shudder have arisen in this manner. Whatever may have been the original meaning of frigus, the adjective frigidus, from whence the Prov. verb must have proceeded, if it really belonged to this root, had simply the signification of cold, and esfreidar would be to cool, an image far too tame to represent the violent agitation implied in effrayer. Nor does the derivation from frigidus give any account of the earlier sense of Fr. effroi, or of the actual meaning of fray, affray, in E. Faire effroi, in O. Fr., is to make an outcry, to give an alarm. “Toutefois ne fit oncques effroi jusqu'à ce que tous les siens cussent gagné la muraille, puis s'écrie horriblement.”—Rabelais.

A distinct reference to noise and violence was preserved when the word passed into English, and an affray or a fray was used to express a disturbance or conflict accompanied with violence, hurly-burly.

Thus in the Flower and the Leaf, Chaucer calls the sudden storm of wind, rain, and hail, which drenched the partisans of the Leaf to the skin, an affray :

And when the storm was clene away passed,
 Tho in the white that stode under the tree
 They felt nothing of all the great affray;
 That they in grene without had in ybe.

To affray was to produce the effect of a crash or sudden noise; and was used even in cases where terror formed no part of the effect, as awakening one out of a sleep or out of a swoon.

Me met thus in my bed all naked
 And looked forthe, for I was waked
 With small foules a grete hepe,
 That had afraide me out of my sleepe,
 Through noise and swetenese of her song.

Chaucer, Dreame.

I was out of my swowne afraide
 Whereof I sigh my wittes straide
 And gan to clepe them home again.—Gower in Rich.

The real derivation is the imitative root, frag, representing a crash, whence Lat. fragor, and Fr. fracas, a crash of things breaking, disturbance, affray. Thence effrayer, to produce the effect of a sudden crash upon one, to terrify, alarm. In the same way the original signification of G. schrecken is to cry, crack, make a loud sharp noise; then to terrify.

To Affront. Fr. affronter (from Lat. frons, frontis, the forehead), to meet face to face, to encounter, insult.

After. Goth. Afar, after, behind; aftar, aftarō, behind; aftana, from behind; aftuma, aftumist, last, hindmost. AS. æft, æftan, æfter, afterwards, again. Icel. aptan, aftan, behind; aptan dags, the latter part of the day, evening; aftar, aftast, hinder, hindmost. According to Grimm, the final tar is the comparative termination, and the root is simply af, the equivalent of Gr. απο, of, from. Compare after with Goth. afar; AS. ofer-non, with after-noon.

Again. AS. ongean, ongen, agen, opposite, towards, against, again; gean, opposite, against; gean-bæran, to oppose; gean-cyme, an encounter; to-geanes, towards, against. O. Sw. gen, igen, opposite, again; gena, to meet; genom, through; Bret. gin, opposite; ann tu gin, the other side, wrong side; gin-ouch-gin, directly opposite, showing the origin of the G. reduplicative gegen, against.

The element gin should have the same meaning with Bret.

kein, W. cefn, the back, as the relations of place are commonly expressed by means of the different parts of the body. The Bret. has also kein-e-kein, in precisely the same sense as gin-ouch-gin, directly opposite; kein ouch kein, back to back. To turn again, is to turn back, to go over the ground a second time, whence again is used to signify repetition, repeated action.

Agate. Lat. achates, Gr. αχαρης.

Age. From Lat. etat-em, the Prov. has etat, edat; O. Fr. eded, edage, eage, aage, âge.

Hély esteit de grant eded.—Kings 2. 22.

Ki durerat a tres-tut ton edage.—Chanson de Roland in Diez.

Aé, life, age.

The form edage seems constructed by the addition of the regular termination age, to ed, erroneously taken as the radical syllable of eded, or it may be a subsequent corruption of eage, eaige (from æ-tas by the addition of the termination age to the true radical e), by the inorganic insertion of a d, as in Prov. esfreidar, to affray, a modification rendered in this case the more easy by the resemblance of the parallel forms edat, eded.

Agee. Awry, askew.

Aghast. Formerly spelt agazed, in consequence of an erroneous impression that the fundamental meaning of the word was set a-gazing on an object of astonishment and horror.

The French exclaimed the devil was in arms,
All the whole army stood agazed on him.—H. vi.

The origin of the word is in reality to be traced to the feelings of awe and horror which are apt to oppress the mind when deprived of external distraction, and lead the child or the uneducated person to people the darkness with ghosts, and make solitude the cause of indefinite terror.

Here will I dwell apart in gastful grove.—Shep. Cal.

Now the E. waste, desolate, uncultivated, void, appears in It. under the shape of guasto, and in Fr. under that of gaster, gâter, to lay waste, to destroy. G. wüst, waste, wild, desert; Du. wuest, woest, vastus, vastatus, desertus, et sordidus, obscœnus, turpis, squalidus, deformis; woestheyd, vastitas, vastitudo, desolatio. Kil. Thus we are led to the Sc. gousty, waste, desolate, dreary in consequence of extent or emptiness; then as loneliness and darkness (which acts by rendering the loneliness more complete), impress the mind with feelings of indefinite horror, goustie, or goustrous, acquires the sense of awful, full of the preternatural, frightful.

Cald, mirk, and goustie is the night,
Loud roars the blast ayont the hight.—Jamieson.

He observed one of the black man's feet to be cloven, and that the black man's voice was hough and goustie.—Glanville in Jam.

The word now becomes confounded with ghostly, the association with which has probably led to the insertion of the h in ghastly itself as well as aghost.

Agistment. From Lat. jacere, to lie, the Fr. had gésir, to lie; whence giste, a lodging, place to lie down in; giste d'une lièvre, the form of a hare. Hence agister, to give lodging to, to take in cattle to feed; and the law term agistment, the profit of cattle pasturing on the land.

Aglet. The tag of a point, i. e. of the lace or string by which different parts of dress were formerly tied up or fastened together. Hence any small object hanging loose, as a spangle, the anthers of a tulip or of grass, the catkins of a hazel, &c.—Junius. Fr. aiguillette, diminutive of aiguille, a needle, properly the point fastened on the end of a lace for drawing it through the eyelet holes; then like E. point, applied to the lace itself.

Ago.—Agone. Here the initial a stands for the OE. y, G. ge, the augment of the past participle; ago, agone, for ygo, ygone, gone away, passed by; long ago, long gone by.

For in swiche cas wimmen have swiche sorrwe
Whan that hir husbonds ben from hem ago.—Knight's Tale.

Go and loke well to that stone
Tyll the third day be agone.—Halliwell.

Agog. Excited with expectation, jiggling with excitement, ready to start in pursuit of an object of desire. Literally on the jog, or on the start, from gog, synonymous with jog or shog; gog-mire, a quagmire. Halliwell. "He is all agog to go."—Baker.

Six precious souls, and all agog,
To dash through thick and thin.—Jno. Gilpin.

To Agredge. To aggravate.—Chaucer. See Abridge.

To Agree. From Lat. gratus, pleasing, acceptable, are formed It. grado, Prov. grat, O. Fr. gret, Fr. gré, will, pleasure, favour; and thence It. agradire, to receive kindly, to please, Prov. agreiar, Fr. agréer, to receive with favour, to give one's consent to, to agree. Prov. agradable, agreeable. See Grant.

Ague. A fever coming in periodical fits or sharp attacks, from Fr. aigu, sharp, fièvre aigue, acute fever.

It is a remarkable fact that the Lepchas, when suffering from protracted cold, take fever and ague in sharp attacks.—Hooker, Himalayan Journal.

Se non febre aguda
Vos destrenha 'l costats.

Si non qu'une fièvre aigue vous presse les cotés.—Raynouard.

The confinement to periodical fever is a modern restriction, from the tendency of language constantly to become more specific in its application.

For Richard lay so sore seke,
On knees prayden the Crystene host—
Through hys grace and hys vertue
He turnyd out of his agu.—R. Coer de Lion. 3045.

Aid. Lat. adjuvare, adjutum; adjutare, to help. Prov. adjudar, ajudar, aidar, Fr. aider, to help.

Aidecamp. Fr. aide du camp, It. ajutante di campo, an officer appointed to assist the general in military service.

To Ail. AS. eglian, to pain, to grieve, to trouble, perhaps from the notion of pricking; egle, egla, festuca, arista, carduus—Lye, whence ails, the beard of corn (Essex). AS. egle, troublesome, Goth. aglo, affliction, tribulation, aglus, difficult, agls, shameful.

To Aim. Lat. æstimare, to consider, to reckon, to fix at a certain point or rate; Prov. estimar, to reckon; adestimar, adesmar, azesmar, aesmar, to calculate, to prepare; "A son colp azesmat," he has calculated or aimed his blow well—Diez; esmar, O. Fr. esmer, to calculate, to reckon—"Li chevaliers de s'ost à treis mille esma," He reckons the knights of his host at 3000—Rom. de Rou; esmer, to purpose, determine, to offer to strike, to aim or level at.—Cotgr.

Air. Lat. aër, Gr. αἴρ, doubtless contracted from æther, the heavens, Gr. αἴθρῃ, the sky, or sometimes air, as the Gaelic has aethar, athar, the air, sky, pronounced ayar, aar, W. awyr.

Aisle. The side divisions of a church, like wings on either side of the higher nave. Fr. aisle, aile, a wing, from Lat. axilla, ala.

By a like analogy, les ailes du nez, the nostrils; les ailes d'un forêt, the skirts of a forest.—Cotgr.

Ait. A small flat island in a river, for eyot, from eye, an island.

Ajar. On char, on the turn, half open, from AS. ceorran, to turn.

Like as ane bull dois rummesing and rare
When he eschapis hurt on the altare,
And charris by the ax with his neck wyeht
Gif one the forshede the dynt hittis not richt.—D. V. 46, 15.

I ———

Ane schot wyndo unschet ane litel on char
Persavit the mornyng bla wan and har—
The schot I closyt and drew inwart in hy Chyverand for cald the sessoun was sa snell.—D. V. 202, 24.

Swiss achar, ajar.—Stalder. Du. aen karre, akerre.

Ende vonden de dore akerre staende.—Wallewein. 9368.

See Char, Chare.

Akimbo. It. schembare, sghembare, to go aside from; schimbiccio, a crankling or crooked winding in and out; sedere a schimbiccio, to sit crooked upon one's legs, as tailors do, with the legs akimbo, as it were; asghembo, aschembo, aschencio, aslope, ascance; Gael. cam, crooked, awry. It. a gibbo, crookedly, arsy-versy. Gr. καμβος, crooked, especially applied to the legs.—Florio.

Alarm.—Alarum. It. all' arme, to arms! the call to defence on being surprised by an enemy.

This said, he runs down with as great a noise and shouting as he could, crying al' arme, help, help, citizens, the castle is taken by the enemy, come away to defence.—Holland's Pliny in Richardson.

Hence, E. alarum, a rousing signal of martial music, a surprise; Fr. allarmer, to give an alarum unto; to rouse or affright by an alarum—Cotgr.; and generally, to alarm, to excite apprehension. The alarum or larum of a clock is a loud ringing, suddenly let off for the purpose of rousing one out of sleep.

Alas. From Lat. lassus, Prov. las, wearied, wretched. Hence the exclamations, Las! Ai las! Helas! Ah wretched me! Alas!

Las! que farai? cum sui trahitz,
Wretch! what shall I do, as I am betrayed!

M'aviatz gran gaug donat
Ai lassa! can pauc m'a durat.—Raynouard.

You have given me great joy,
Ah wretched me! how little it has lasted.

Las! tant en ai puis soupiré,
Et doit estre lasse olamée
Quant ele aime sans estre amée.—R. R.

Alchemy. The science of converting base metals into gold. Mid. Gr. αρχημια; χημια—Suidas. Arab. al-kimīā, without native root in that language.—Diez.

Alcohol. Arabic, al kohl, the impalpable powder of antimony, with which the Orientals adorn their eyelids, anything reduced to an impalpable powder, the pure substance of anything separated from the more gross, a pure well-refined spirit, spirits of wine. To alcoholise, to reduce to an impalpable powder, or to rectify volatile spirit.—Bailey.

Alcove. Sp. alcoba, a place in a room railed off to hold a bed of state; hence a hollow recess in a wall to hold a bed, side-board, &c.; Arab. al-gobbah, vault, tent.—Diez.

Alder. AS. alr; Prov. E. aller, owler; G. eller, erle; Du. els; Sw. al; Pol. olsza, olszyna; Lat. alpinus.

Alderman. AS. eald, old; ealdor, an elder, a parent, hence a chief, a ruler. Hundredes ealdor, a ruler of a hundred, a centurion; ealdor-biscop, an archbishop; ealdor-man, a magistrate, præfectus, princeps.

Ale. AS. eale, eala, ealu, aloth; Icel. öl; Lith. alus, from an equivalent of Gael. ól, to drink; as Bohem. piwo, beer, from piti, to drink.

Alert. Lat. erigere, erectus, It. ergere, to raise up; erta, the steep ascent of a hill; erto, straight, erect; star erto, to stand up; star a l'erta, allerta, to be upon one's guard, literally, to stand upon an eminence. Hence alert, on one's guard, brisk, lively, nimble.

In this place the prince finding his rutters [routiers] alert (as the Italians say), with the advice of his valiant brother, he sent his trumpets to the Duke of Parma.—Sir Roger Williams, 4^o 1618, in Rich.

To Alegee. See Allay.

Alembic.—Lembic. \alembic still. It. lambicco, lembicco, Sp. alambique, Arab. al-anbiq; it does not appear, however, that the word admits of radical explanation in the latter language.—Diez.

Algates. From the N. E. gates, ways; Icel. gata, a path, Sw. gata, way, street. All ways, at all events, in one way or another.

Algates by sleight or by violence
Fro' year to year I win all my dispence.—Friar's Tale.

Always itself is used in the N. of England in the sense of however, nevertheless.—Brocket. Swagates, in such a manner.

Algebra. The science of calculation by symbols. Sp. algebra, which is also used in the sense of setting dislocated or broken limbs, said to be from Arab. al-gabr, the putting together of broken things, though the connexion in sense is not very clear.—Diez.

To Alight.—Light. To light on a thing is to come upon it suddenly, like a ray of light striking upon some reflecting object, and making it conspicuous amid the surrounding shadow.

I hope by this time the Lord may have blessed you to have light upon some of their ships.—Carlyle's Cromwell, 2, 384.

Conversely, a bird is said to light upon a tree when it stops its flight, and, settling on a branch, offers itself steadily to our view, like an object suddenly displayed by a ray of light falling upon it. Hence to alight, AS. alihtan, to light on anything, especially on the ground, and consequently to descend from a carriage, from on horseback. A similar metaphor obtains in New Holland, where the natives express seeing or finding an object by saying it makes a light.

“Well me and Hougong go look out for duck, aye, aye. Bel make a light duck.” Which rendered into English would be, “We don't see any duck” [don't light on any.]—Mrs Meredith.

All. Goth. alls ; Icel. allr ; AS. eall. Notwithstanding the double l, I have long been inclined to suspect that it is a derivative from the root ā, æ, e, ei, aye, ever. Certainly the significations of ever and all are closely related, the one implying continuance in time, the other continuance throughout an extended series, or the parts of a multifarious object. The sense of the original æ, however, is not always confined to continuance in time, as is distinctly pointed out by Ihre. “Urar hornet war swa fagurt som æ gull sæi.” The aurox horn was as fair as if it were all gold. So æ-lius, all-bright ; e-tid, modern Sw. all-tid, all time. AS. ælc, each, is probably æ-lic, ever-like, implying the application of a predicate to all the members of a series. In every, formerly everече, everilk, for æfre-ælc, there is a repetition of the element signifying continuance. But every and all express fundamentally the same idea. Every one indicates all the individuals of a series; every man and all men are the same thing. The Gr. ὅλος, whole, appears to spring from a totally different conception.

Alkali. Arab. al-qali, the salt of ashes.—Diez. In modern chemistry generalised to express all those salts that neutralise acids.

To Allay, formerly written allegge, as to say was formerly to segge. Two distinct words are confounded in the modern allay, the first of which should properly be written with a single l, from AS. alecgan, to lay down, to put down, suppress, tranquillise. Speaking of Wm. Rufus, the Sax. Chron. says,

Eallan folce behet eallan tha unrihte to aleggenne, the on his brothor timan wæran;

translated in R. of Gloucester,

He behet God and that folc an beheste that was this,
To alegge all luther lawes that yholde were before
And better make than were suththe he was ybore.

Thomalir why sitten we soe
As weren overwent with woe
Upon so faire a morrowe,
The joyous time now nigheth fast
That shall alegge this bitter blast,
And slake the winter sorrowe.—Shepherd's Calendar.

In the same way the Swed. has wädret lägger sig; wärken lägger sig, the wind is laid; the pain abates. So in Virgil, venti posuère, the wind was laid.

If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, alay them."—Tempest.

So to allay thirst, grief, &c.

The other form, confounded with alegge from alecgan in the modern allay, is the old allegge, from Fr. alléger, It. alleggiare, Lat. alleviare, to lighten, mitigate, tranquillise, thus coming round so exactly to the sense of alay, from alecgan, that it is impossible sometimes to say to which of the two origins the word should be referred.

Lat. levis, light, easy, gentle, becomes in Prov. leu ; whence leviar, leujar, to assuage ; alleviar, alleujar, O. Fr. alléger, to lighten, to assuage, precisely in the same way that from brevis, abbreviare, are formed Prov. brevu, abreujar, Fr. abrégé, OE. abregge, to abridge.

Que m'dones joi e m'leujes ma dolor.

Qu'elle me donnât joie et m'allegeât ma douleur.—Rayn.

Per Dieu aleujatz m'aquest fays !

For God's sake lighten me this burden.

So in Italian,

Fate limosina et dir messi accio che s'alleggino i nostri martiri —that our torments may be assuaged, or allayed.

She (Old Age) wepeth the time that she hath wasted—

And of her olde vanitie,

That but aforne her she may see

In the future some small socoure,

To leggin her of her dolour.—R. R.

It would have brought my life again,

For certes evenly I dare well saime

The sight only and the savour .

Aleggid much of my languor.—R. R.

In the original,

Le voir sans plus, et l'oudeur

Si m'allegeoient ma douleur.

To Alledge. Fr. Alleguer, to alleadge, to produce reasons, evidence, or authority for the proof of.—Cotg.

Lat. legare, to intrust or assign unto ; allegare, to depute or commission one, to send a message, to solicit by message.

“Petit a me Rabonius et amicos allegat.” Rabonius asks of me and sends friends (to support his petition): Hence it came to signify, to adduce reasons or witnesses in support of an argument. From the language of lawyers probably the word came into general use in England and France.

Justinus which that hated his folie ;
 Answered anon right in his japerie,
 And for he wold his longe tale abrege
 He wolde non auctoritia allege.—Merchant's Tale.

Thei woll a leggen also and by the godspell preoven it, Nolite iudicare quenquam.—P. P.

Here we find alledge, from Lat. allegare, spelt and pronounced in the same manner as allegge (the modern allay), from AS. alecgan, and there is so little difference in meaning between laying down, and bringing forward reasons, that the Latin and Saxon derivatives were sometimes confounded.

And eke this noble duke aleyde
 Full many another skill, and seide
 She had well deserved wrecke.—Gower in Rich.

Here aleyde is plainly to be understood in the sense of the Lat. allegare.

Alligiance. See Liege.

To Alleviate. See Allay.

Alley. Fr. allée, a walk, path, passage, from aller, to go.

Alligator. The American crocodile, from the Sp. lagarto, a lizard; Lat. lacerta. In Hawkins' voyage he speaks of these under the name of alagartoes! Lagarto das Indias, the cayman or South American alligator.

Allodial. Allodium, in Mid. Lat., was an estate held in absolute possession without a feudal superior.—Blackstone. The derivation has been much disputed, and little light has been thrown upon it by the various guesses of antiquarians. The word appears as early as the ninth century under the forms alodis, alodus, alodium, alaudum, and in Fr. aleu, aleu franco, franc-aloud, franc-aloi, franc-aleuf. The general sense is that of an estate held in absolute possession. "Mese prædium possessionis hereditariæ, hoc est, alodium nostrum qui est in pago Andigavensi."—Charta an. 839, in Duc.

It can hardly be wholly distinct from Icel. ódal, which is used in much the same sense, alodium, prædium hereditarium; ódal-s-jörd, prædium hereditarium; ódal-borinn, natus ad heredium avitum, scilicet rectâ lineâ à primo occupante; ódal-s-madr, dominus allodialis, stricté primus occupans.—Haldorsen.

Dan. Sw. odel, a patrimonial estate. The landed proprietors of the Shetland Isles are still called udallers, according to Sir Walter Scott. The Icel. ódal is also used in the sense of abandoned goods, at leggja fyrer ódal, to abandon a thing, to leave it to be taken by the first occupier. If Mid. Lat. alodis, alodum, is identical with the Icel. word, it exhibits a singular transposition of syllables. There would account for alodium from the compound “ alldha odhol,” mentioned in the Gothic laws,—an ancient inheritance, from alldr, ætas, antiquitas, and ódal, inheritance, as allda-vinnr, an ancient friend, alder-hæfd, a possession of long standing. See There in v. Od.

To Allow. Two words seem here confounded; 1. from Lat. laudare, to praise, and 2. from locare, to place, to let.

From the Lat. laus, laudis, was formed Prov. laus, lau, praise, approval, advice. Hence lauzar, alauzar, O. Fr. loer, louer, alouer, to praise, to approve, to recommend. In like manner the Lat. laudo was used for approbation and advice.

“ Laudo igitur ut ab eo suam filiam primogenitam petatis duci nostro conjugem,”—I recommend. “ Et vos illuc tendere penitus dislaudamus,”—we dissuade you.—Ducange.

“Et leur demanda que il loient à faire, et li loèrent tous que il descendist.”—“Et il li dirent que je li avois loé bon conseil.”—Joinville in Raynouard. In the same way in English :

This is the sum of what I would have ye weigh,
First whether ye allow my whole devise,
And think it good for me, for them, for you,
And if ye like it and allow it well—

Ferrex and Porrex in Richardson.

Especially laus was applied to the approbation given by a feudal lord to the alienation of a fee depending upon him, and to the fine he received for permission to alienate. “Hoc donum laudavit Adam Maringotus, de cujus feodo erat.”—Duc.

From signifying consent to a grant, the word came to be applied to the grant itself. “Comes concessit iis et laudavit terras et feuda eorum ad suam fidelitatem et servitium.” “Facta est hæc laus sive concessio in claustro S. Marii.”—Duc.

Here we come very near the application of allowance to express an assignment of a certain amount of money or goods to a particular person or for a special purpose.

“And his allowance was a continual allowance given by the king, a daily rate for every day all his life.”—2 Kings.

In this sense, however, to allow is from the Lat. locare, to place, allocare, to appoint to a certain place or purpose ; It. allogare, to place, to fix ; Prov. alogar, Fr. louer, allouer, to assign, to put out to hire.

To allow in rekeninge—alloco. Allowance—allocacio.—Pr. Pm. Wallon. alouwer, depenser.—Grandg.

Again, as the senses of Lat. laudare and allocare coalesced in Fr. allouer and E. allow, the confusion seems to have been carried back into the contemporary Latin, where allocare is used in the sense of approve or admit; essonium allocabile, an admissible excuse.

Alloy. The proportion of base metal mixed with gold or silver in coinage. From Lat. lex, the law or rule by which the composition of the money is governed, It. lega, Fr. loi, aloi. "Unusquisque denarius cudatur et fiat ad legem undecim denariorum."—Ducange. In the mining language of Spain the term is applied to the proportion of silver found in the ore. "The extraction for the week was 750 cargos of clean ore, average ley from nine to ten marks per monton, with an increased proportion of gold."—Times, Jan. 2, 57.

From signifying the proportion of base metal in the coin, the term alloy was applied to the base metal itself.

To Allure. To tempt by the offer of a bait or lure.

To Ally. Fr. allier; Lat. ligare, to tie; alligare, to tie to, to unite.

Almanac. Apparently from the Arabic, but no explanation is given us from that language.

Almond. Gr. αμυγδαλη; Lat. amygdala, Wallach. migdále, mandule; Sp. almendra, Prov. amandola, Fr. amande, It. mandola, mandorla, Langued. amenlou, amello.

Alms.—Almenry.—Aumry. Gr. ελεημοσυνη, properly compassionateness, then relief given to the poor.

This, being an ecclesiastical expression, passed direct into the Teutonic languages under the form of G. almosen, AS. ælmesse, ælmes, OE. almesse, almose, Sc. awmous, alms; and into the Romance under the form of Prov. almosna, Fr. aumosne, aumône. Hence the Fr. aumonier, E. almoner, awmnere, an officer whose duty it is to dispense alms, and almonry, aumry, the place where the alms are given, from the last of which again it seems that the old form awmbrere, an almoner, must have been derived.—Pr. Pm. When aumry is used with reference to the distribution of alms, doubtless two distinct words are confounded, almonry and ammary or ambry, from Fr. armoire, Lat. armaria, almaria, a cupboard. This latter word in English was specially applied to a cupboard for keeping cold and broken victuals.—Bailey, in v. Ambre, Ammery, Aumry. Ambry, a pantry.—Halliwell. Then as an aumry or receptacle for broken victuals would occupy an important place in the office where the daily dole of charity was dispensed, the association seems to have led to the use of aumry or ambry, as if it were a contraction of almonry, from which, as far as sound is concerned, it might very well have arisen. And vice versâ, almonry was sometimes used in the sense of armarium, almarium, a cupboard. Almonarium, almorietum, almeriola, a cupboard or safe to set up broken victuals to be distributed as alms to the poor.—Bailey. See Ambry.

Aloft. On loft, up in the air. G. luft, Isl. lopt, OE. lift, the air, the sky.

Along. We must distinguish along, AS. andlang, G. entlang, entlang, langs, Sw. ændalangs, It. lungo, Fr. le long de, through the length of, from along, in the sense of causation, when some consequence is said to be along of or long of a certain agent or efficient principle.

All this coil is long of you.—Mid. N. Dream.

Some said it was long on the fire making,

Some said it was long on the blowing.

Canon Yeoman's Tale.

In the former sense long is originally an adjective agreeing with the object now governed by the preposition along, as in AS. and langue dæg, through the long day, through the length of the day. In the latter, it is the OS. and AS. gelang, owing to, in consequence of, from gelingen, to happen, to succeed.

“Mir gelang ubilo an diu daz ih min frio wolta sin, nals din scalc.”—Notker. It happened evil to me that I would be my own lord, not thy servant,—evil to me was along of this, that, &c.

Quad that men bedon scoldi
Up to them alomahitgon Gode—

Thar is thiū helpa gelang
Manno gehuilco.—Heliand, 33, 44.

It is with Almighty God that is the happening of help to every man, It is along of Almighty God that, &c. AS. “æt the is ure lyf gelang,”—our life is along of thee, it springs from thee, it is along of thee that we live. “Hii sohton on hwom that gelang wære,”—they inquired along of whom that was, whose fault it was, from whom it happened that that was.—Lye.

Aloof. To loof or luff in nautical language is to turn the vessel up into the wind. Aloof, then, is to the windward of one, and as a vessel to the windward has it in her choice either to sail away or to bear down upon the leeward vessel, aloof has come to signify out of danger, in safety from, out of reach of.

Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;
But with a crafty madness keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.—Hamlet.

Alpine. Of the nature of things found in lofty mountains; from the Alps, the highest mountains in Europe. Gael. Alp, a height, an eminence, a mountain.

Altar. The fire-place on which sacrifices were made to the gods. Lat. altare, which Ihre would explain from Icel. eldr, fire, and ar, or arn, a hearth; or perhaps AS. ern, ærn, a place; as Lat. lucerna, laterna, a lantern, from luc-ern, leoht-ern, the place of a light.

To Alter. To make something other than what it is; Lat. alterare, from alter, the other. So G. ändern, to change, from ander, the other; and the Lat. muto finds an origin of like nature in Esthon. mu, another, whence muduma, muudma, to change.

Always. AS. eallne wæg, ealle wæga, the whole way, altogether, throughout. The Servians use put, way, for the number of times a thing happens; jeden put, once; dva put, twice, &c.

Amalgam. A pasty mixture of mercury and another metal, from Gr. μαλαγμα, an emollient, probably a poultice, and that from μαλασσω, to soften.—Diez.

Amanuensis. Lat. from the habit of the scribe or secretary signing the documents he wrote, as we see in St Paul's Epistle. "A manu —," from the hand of so and so. Hence a manu servus was a slave employed as secretary.

To Amate. To confound, stupefy, quell.

Upon the walls the Pagans old and young Stood hushed and still, amated and amazed.

Fairfax in Boucher.

O. Fr. amater, mater, mattir, to abate, mortify, make fade, from mat, G. matt, dull, spiritless, faint. It. matto, mad, foolish; Sp. matar, to quench, to slay.

But when I came out of swooning
And had my wit and my feeling,
I was all mate and wende full wele
Of blode to have lost a full grete dele."—R. R. 1737.

In the original—Je fus moult vain.

Derived by Diez from the expression check-mate, at chess, but the word mate has too wide a class of relationships to be explained from so restricted a source. Gr. μαρνν, in vain, μαραιος, foolish; Lat. fatuus, insipid, foolish; fatisco, to grow faint or weary; fatigo, to weary, baffle, or confute.

To Amay.—Amaze. It. smagare, to discourage, dispirit; Sp. desmayer, to discourage, despond; desmayar se, to faint; O. Port. amago, fright; Prov. esmagar, esmaiar, to trouble, to frighten, to grieve; Fr. s'esmaier, to be sad, pensive, astonished, careful, to take thought.—Cotgr. Esmay, thought, care, cark.—Hence E. amay, dismay, or simply may.

Beryn was at counsell, his hert was full woo,
And his menyé (attendants) sory, distrakt, and all amayide.

Chaucer, Beryn, 2645.

So for ought that Beryn coud ethir speke er pray
He myght in no wyse pass, full sore he gan to may.—Ibid. 1635.

The Prov. esmagar is united with E. amaze, by the provincial Fr. eméger; “s’eméger, s’etonner”—Vocab. de Berri; the soft g and z readily interchanging, as in It. prigione, E. prison; It. cugino, E. cousin, &c.

The Romance forms are, according to Diez, derived from the Goth. magan, to have power, to be strong, with the negative particle dis. Compare Dan. afmagt, a swoon.

Ambassador. Goth. Andbahts, a servant, andbahti, service, ministry; OHG. ambaht, a minister or ministry; ampahtan, to minister; Mod. G. ampt, employment, office.

In Middle Lat. ambascia, ambaxia, or ambactia, was used for business, and particularly applied to the business of another person, or message committed to another, and hence the modern sense of embassy, It. ambasciata, as the message sent by a ruling power to the government of another state; ambassador, the person who carries such a message.

“Quicumque asinum alienum extra domini voluntatem præsumperit, aut per unum diem aut per duos in ambascia sua,”—in his own business.—Lex. Burgund. in Ducange. “Si in dominica ambascia fuerit occupatus.”—Lex Sal. In another edition, “Si in jussione Regis fuerit occupatus.”

Ambasciari, to convey a message. “Et ambasciari ex illorum parte quod mihi jussum fuerat.”—Hincmar. in Duc.

The word ambactus is said by Festus to be Gallic: “ambactus apud Ennium linguâ Gallicâ servus appellatur;” and Cæsar, speaking of the equites in Gaul, says, “circum se ambactos, clientesque habent.” Hence Grimm explains the word from bak, as backers, supporters, persons standing at one’s back, as henchman, a person standing at one’s haunch or side.

The notion of manual labour is preserved in Du. ambagt, a handicraft; ambagts-mann, an artisan. Icel. ambatt, a female slave. It. ambasciare (perhaps originally to oppress with work), to trouble, to grieve; ambascia, anguish, distress, shortness of breath.

Amber. It. ambra, Fr. ambre, MHG. amber, âmer; Arabic, ambar; Sp. Port. ambar, alambar, alambre.—Diez. It is singular that a substance coming from so small a number of places should have had so many different names. Lat. succinum, Gr. ηλεκτρον; OG. glæs, according to Tacitus; Germ. bernstein, from its inflammable nature; Bohem. cistec.

Ambry, Aumbry, Aumber. A sideboard or cupboard-top on which plate was displayed—Skinner; in whose time the word was becoming obsolete.

Fr. armoire a cupboard. Sp. armario, almario, G. almer, a cupboard. Mid. Lat. armaria, almaria, a chest or cupboard, especially for keeping books, whence armarius, the monk in charge of the books of a monastery.

“Purpuram optimam de almariâ tollens” “thesaurum et almarium cum ejus pertinentiis, videlicet libris ecclesiæ.”—Duc. “Bibliotheca, sive armarium vel archivum, bochord.”—Gloss. Ælfr.

The word was very variously written in English. “Almoriolum—an almyry,”—Pictorial Vocab. in National Antiquities. And as the term was often applied to a cupboard used for keeping broken meat, of which alms would mainly consist, it seems to have contracted a fallacious reference to the word alms, and thus to become confounded with almonry, the office where alms were distributed.

The original meaning, according to Diez, is a chest in which arms were kept, “armarium, repositorium armorum.”—Gloss. Lindenbr.

Ambush. From It. bosco, Prov. bosc, a bush, wood, thicket; It. imboscarsi, Prov. emboscar, Fr. embuscher, to go into a wood, get into a thicket for shelter, then to lie in wait, set an ambush.

Amenable. Easy to be led or ruled, from Fr. amener, to bring or lead unto, mener, to lead, to conduct. See Demean.

Amercement.—Amerciament. A pecuniary penalty imposed upon offenders at the mercy of the court: it differs from a fine, which is a punishment certain, and determined by some statute.—Bailey.

In Law Latin, poni in misericordiâ was thus to be placed at the mercy of the court; être mis à merci, or être amercié, to be amerced, and misericordia was used for any arbitrary exaction.

Concedimus etiam eisdem abbati et monachis et eorum successoribus quod sint quieti de omnibus misericordiis in perpetuum.—Charter Edw. I. in Duc.

Et inde coram eo placitabuntur, et de omnibus misericordiis et emendationibus debemus habere 11 solidos.—Duc.

When a party was thus placed at the mercy of the court, it was the business of affeerors appointed for that purpose to fix the amount of the amercement. See Affeer.

Amount. From mont, hill, and val, valley, the French formed amont and aval, upwards and downwards respectively, whence monter, to mount, to rise up, and avalier, to send down, to swallow. Hence amount is the sum total to which a number of charges rise up when added together.

Amulet. Lat. amuletum, a ball or anything worn about the person as a preservative or charm against evil. From Arab. hamala, to carry.

To Amuse. To give one something to muse on, to occupy the thoughts, to entertain, give cheerful occupation. Formerly also used as the simple muse, to contemplate, earnestly fix the thoughts on.

Here I put my pen into the inkhorn and fell into a strong and deep amusement, revolving in my mind with great perplexity the amazing change of our affairs.—Fleetwood in Richardson.

See to Muse.

An. The indefinite article, the purport of which is simply to indicate individuality. It is the same word with the numeral one, AS. an, and the difference in pronunciation has arisen from the slighter accent being laid upon the word when used as an article than when as a definite numeral. So in Breton, the indefinite article has become eun, while the numeral is unan. Dan. een, one, en, a, an.

An.—And. There is no radical distinction between an and and; which are accidental modifications of spelling ultimately appropriated to special applications of the particle.

In our older writers it was not unfrequent to make use of an in the sense in which we now employ and, and vice versa and in the sense of an or if.

First, an for and.

He nome with hym of Engelond god knygt mony one
An myd grete poer and muche fole thuderwarde wende anon,
 So that he sone come bysyde hys fone echon,
 An bylevede hym there al nygt, and al hys ost also,
An thogte anon amorwe strong batayle do.—R. G. 319.

Secondly, and for if or an.

Me reweth sore I am unto hire teyde,
 For and I should rekene every vice
 Which that she hath, ywis I were to nice.

Squire's Prologue.

O swete and wel beloved spouse dere,
 There is a counseil, and ye wol it here,
 Which that right fain I wolde unto you saie.

2nd Nun's Tale.

And I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee simple of my life for an hour and a half.

We find an if and and if, or simply an for if.

—I pray thee, Launce, and if thou seest my boy bid him make haste.

But and if that wicked servant say in his heart, &c.

Nay, an thou dalliest, then I am thy foe.—Ben Jonson in Richardson.

In the same sense the O. Swed. æn; æn fæ flöger, if the cattle escape; while om æn corresponds exactly to our an if, om, formerly of, being the exact representative of E. if. The Sw. æn is also used in the sense of and, still, yet.—Ihre.

It is extremely difficult to guess at the sensible image which lies at the root of the obscure significations expressed by the particles and conjunctions, the most time-worn relics of language; but in the present instance it seems that both sense and form might well be taken from the E. even, in the sense of continuous, unbroken, level.

The poetical contraction of even into e'en shows how such a root might give rise to such forms as Icel. enn, O. Swed. æn, Dan. end. With respect to meaning, we still use even as a conjunction in cases closely corresponding to the Swed. æn, and Dan. end. Thus we have Swed. æn-nu translated by Ihre, etiamnum, even now, i. e. without a sensible break between the event in question and now; ændock, quamvis, even though, or although; æn, yet, still, continuously; "he is still there," he continues there. So in Danish,—om detto end skulde ske, even if that should happen; end ikke, ne quidem, not even then; end nu, even now. When one proposition is made conditional on another, the two are practically put upon the same level, and thus the conditionality may fairly be expressed by even contracted into æn or an. Analysing in this point of view the sentence above quoted,

Nay, an thou dalliest, then I am thy foe, it must be interpreted, Nay, understand these propositions as equally certain, thou dalliest here, I am thy foe.—It depends upon you whether the first is to prove a fact or no, but the second proposition has the same value which you choose to give to the former.

It will subsequently be shown probable that the conjunction if is another relic of the same word. On the other hand, placing two things side by side, or on a level with each other, may be used to express that they are to be taken together, to be treated in the same manner, to form a single whole; and thus it is that the same word, which implies conditionality when circumstances show the uncertainty of the first clause, may become a copulative when the circumstances of the sentence indicate such a signification.

Anchor. Lat. anchora, Gr. αγκυρα. There can be no doubt that it is from the root signifying hook, which gives rise to the Gr. αγκυλος, curved, crooked; αγκων, an elbow, recess, corner; αγκος, a valley; ογκος, a swelling; ογκη, ογκινος, a hook; Lat. angulus, an angle, uncus, a hook, crooked, and E. hook, hang, angle, a fish-hook, &c.

Unco alliget anchora morsu.—Virg.

Anchoret. A hermit. Gr. αναχωρητης, one who has retired from the world; from αναχωρηω, to retire.

Anchorvy. Fr. anchois, It. ancioe, Gr. αφήη, Lat. apua, aphya (apya); whence might arise, It. (app-uga) acciuga, Pied. Sicil. anciova, Genoes. anciuva.—Diez.

Ancient. Lat. ante, Prov. antes, It. anzi, before, whence anziano, Fr. ancien, ancient, belonging to former times.

Ancle. AS. ancleow, G. enkel. Probably a parallel formation with Gr. αγκυλη, a loop, the knee, or bending of the leg; and from the same root αγκων, the elbow, or bending of the arm; It. anca, the haunch, or bending of the hip; OHG. ancha, Bav. anke (genick), the bending of the neck.

And. See An.

Andiron. Originally the iron bars which supported the two ends of the logs on a wood fire. AS. brand-isen, brand-iron. But this could never have been corrupted into andiron. The Mid. Lat. has andena, andela, andeda, anderia; Fr. landier, grand chenet de cuisine.—Dict. Wallon. The Flemish wend-ijsen probably exhibits the true origin, from wenden, to turn; wend-ijsen, brand-ijsen, grateuterium, ferrum in quo veru vertitur,—Kil., i. e. the rack in front of the kitchen-dogs or andirons, for supporting the spit. “Lander, Gall. landier, Lat. verutentum; item hæc andena.”—Catholicon Arm. in Duc. In modern English the term has been transferred to the moveable fire-irons.

Anent.—Anenst. In face of, respecting. AS. ongean, opposite; foran ongean, over against, opposite, in front, So. foreanent. The word anent, however, does not seem to come directly from the AS. ongean. It shows at least a northern influence from the Isl. giegnt, Sw. gent, opposite, gent öfwer, over against. Hence on gent, anent, and with the s, so commonly added to prepositions (comp. antē, before, Prov. antes, AS. togeanes, &c.), anentis. "Anentis men, it is impossible, but not anentis God."—Wicliff. Hence Anenst, as alongst from along, whilst from while, against from again.

Anger. Formerly used in the sense of trouble, torment, grievance.

He that ay has levyt fre
 May not know well the propyrte,
 The angyr na the wrechyt dome
 That is cowplyt to foule thyryldome.—Bruce, i. 235.

Shame——

From whom fele angirs I have had.—R. R.

In the original,

Par qui je fus puis moult grévé.

From the sense of oppression, or injury, the expression was transferred to the feelings of resentment naturally aroused in the mind of the person aggrieved. In the same way, the word harm signifies injury, damage, in English, and resentment, anger, vexation, in Swedish.

The idea of injury is very often expressed by the image of pressure, as in the word oppress, or the Fr. grever, to bear heavy on one. Now the root ang is very widely spread in the sense of compression, tightness. G. eng, compressed, strait, narrow; Lat. angere, to strain, strangle, vex, torment; angustus, narrow; angina, oppression of the breast; angor, anguish, sorrow, vexation; Gr. αγγω, to compress, strain, strangle, whence αγγι (as It. presso), near; αγγεσθαι, to be grieved; αγγονη, what causes pain or grief.

Both physical and metaphorical senses are well developed in the Icel.; angr, narrow, a nook or corner, grief, pain, sorrow; angra, to torment, to trouble; krabba-angar, crabs' incers.

To Angle. To fish with a rod and line, from AS. angel, a fish-hook; Du. anghel-snoer, anghel-roede, a fishing-line, fishing-rod; anghelen, to angle. Chaucer has angle-hook, showing that the proper meaning of the word angle was then lost, and by a further confusion it was subsequently applied to the rod.

A fisher next his trembling angle bears.—Pope.

Anguish. Lat. angustia, a strait, whence It. angoscia (as poscia, from postea), Fr. angoisse, E. anguish. See Anger.

To Anneal. A staining and baking of glass, so that the colour may go quite through it.—Bailey.

It is much suspected aneyling of glass (which answereth to dyeing in grain in drapery), especially of yellow, is lost in our age as to the perfection thereof.—Fuller's Worthies of Kent, in Richardson.

Commonly referred to AS. anælan, onælan, to kindle, set on fire, light up; from ælan, to burn. But the AS. is a very unusual source for the designation of a process in any of the fine arts, and I think it more likely that the term was derived from the It. niello, Mid. Lat. nigellum, a kind of black enamel on gold or silver. To ornament in this manner became in Fr. neller or néeler, which seems loosely to have been applied to enamelling in general.

D'une bande d'or néellé

Also written noielé, noelé, and in the Latin of the period nigel-latus, nicellatus. Neller, to varnish, enamel, or glaze with the stuff nellure, one part whereof is of fine silver, two of copper, and three of lead.—Cotgr. Then as the E. enamel was formed from Fr. émailler it seems probable that néeler or neller was converted by a like addition into enneal, anneal. To enamel, esmailler, neller.—Sherwood. Afterwards the term was transferred to the tempering of glass in an enamelling furnace.

To Annoy. It. annoiare, Fr. ennuyer, to annoy, vex, trouble, grieve, afflict, weary, irke, importune over much.—Cotgr. From in odio; est mihi in odio, it is hateful to me.

Hence Sp. enoyo, enojo, anger, offence, injury; Prov. enuei, enoi. The Prov., says Diez, must originally have said "amors m'es en oi,"—amor mihi est in odio; then, taking *enoi*s as a noun, amors m'es enois. In the O. Venet. dialect, the Lat. is retained unaltered; "plu te sont a inodio,"—equivalent to the It. piu ti sono a noja; "a te inodio,"—a tua noja. In accordance with this derivation O. Fr. enuier was construed with a dative; "icest afaire al rei enuiad."—Livre des Rois. The foregoing derivation seems conclusive, otherwise that of Kilian would have been satisfactory enough, from nood, need, compulsion, necessitas, labor, difficultas; noode, noye, invitus, et ægré, invité, moleste, gravaté; noode hebben, ægre ferre, ægre pati; noeyen, noyen, officere, nocere, molestum esse; noyelick, nocivus, molestus, infensus.

Anon. AS. on an, in one, jugiter, continuo, sine intermissione—Lye; at one time, in a moment; ever and anon, continually.

Answer. AS. andswarian, from and, in opposition, and swerian, Goth. sparan, to swear. Icel. svara, to answer, to engage for. It is remarkable that the Latin expression for answer is formed in exactly the same way from a verb spondere, signifying to engage for, to assure. The simpler idea of speaking in return is distinctly expressed by the Goth. anda-vaurd, G. ant-wort, AS. andwyrd, current side by side with the synonymous andswar.

Ant. The well-known insect, contracted from emmet; like aunt, a parent's sister, from Lat. amita.

Anthem. A divine song sung by two opposite choirs or choruses.—Bailey. Lat. antiphonia; Gr. ἀντιφωνία, from ἀντι opposite, and φωνή, voice. Fr. antienne; AS. antefn, whence anthem, as from AS. stefn, E. stem.

Antick.—Antique. Lat. anticus, from ante, before, as posticus, from post, behind.

At the revival of art in the 14th and 15th centuries the recognized models of imitation were chiefly the remains of ancient sculpture, left as the legacy of Roman civilisation.

Hence the application of the term antique to work of sculptured ornamentation, while individual figures wrought in imitation or supposed imitation of the ancient models, were called antiques, as the originals are at the present day.

At the entering of the pàlays before the gate was builded a fountain of embowed work engrayled with anticks workes,—the old God of wine called Bæchus birling the wine, which by the conduits in the earth ran to the people plenteously with red, white, and claret wine.—Hall's Chronicles in Richardson.

Again from the same author.

At the nether end were two broad arches upon three antike pillars, all of gold, burnished, swaged, and graven full of gargills and serpentes—and above the arches were made sundry antikes and devices.

But as it is easier to produce a certain effect by monstrous and caricature representations than by aiming at the beautiful in art, the sculptures by which our mediæval buildings were adorned, executed by such stone-masons as were to be had, were chiefly of the former class, and an antick came to signify a grotesque figure such as we see on the spouts or pinnacles of our cathedrals.

Some fetch the origin of this proverb (he looks as the devil over Lincoln) from a stone picture of the Devil which doth or lately did overlook Lincoln College. Surely the architect intended it no further than for an ordinary anticke.—Fuller in Richardson.

Now for the inside here grows another doubt, whether grotesca, as the Italians, or antique work, as we call it, should be received.—Reliquiæ Wottonianæ in ditto.

The term was next transferred to the grotesque characters, such as savages, fauns, and devils, which were favourite subjects of imitation in masques and revels.

That roome with pure gold it all was overlaid
Wrought with wild antickes which their follies playde
In the riche metal as they living were.—Spencer.

To dance the anticks is explained by Bailey to dance after an odd and ridiculous manner, or in a ridiculous dress, like a jack-pudding. To go antiquely, in Shakespear, to go in strange disguises. In modern language antic is applied to extravagant gestures, such as those adopted by persons representing the characters called antics in ancient masques.

Antler. Fr. andouillers, the branches of a stag's horns; but properly andouiller is the first branch or brow-antler, sur andouiller the second. As the brow-antler projects forward the word has been derived from ante, before, but the explanation has not been satisfactorily made out.

Anvil. Formerly written anvilt or anvild; AS. anfilt; Pl. D. ambolt; Du. aenbeld, ambeld, a block to hammer on; percutere, villan—Gloss. Pezron; fillist, verberás.—Otfried. So Lat. incus, incudis, from in and cadere, to strike; G. amboss; OHG. anapoz, from an and bossen, to strike.

Any. AS. anig, from an, one, and ig, a termination equivalent to Goth. eigs, from eigan, to have. Thus from gabe, a gift, wealth, gabeigs, one having wealth, rich. In like manner, any is that which partakes of the nature of one, a small quantity, a few, some one, one at the least.

Apanage. Lat. panis, bread, whence Prov. panar, apanar, to nourish, to support; Fr. āpanage, a provision for a younger child.

Apert.—Apartment. Fr. à part, aside, separate. Apartment, something set aside, a suite of rooms set aside for a separate purpose, finally applied to a single chamber.

Ape. Originally a monkey in general; latterly applied to the tailless species. To ape, to imitate gestures, from the imitative habits of monkeys.

Appal. Wholly unconnected with pale, to which it is often referred. To cause to pall (see Pall), to deaden, to take away or lose the vital powers, whether through age or sudden terror, horror, or the like.

An old appalled wight, in Chaucer, is a man who has lost his vigour through age.

A grievous disease came upon Severus, being appalled with age, so that he was constrained to keep his chamber.—Stow, Chron. in R.

And among other of his famous deeds, he revived and quickened again the faith of Christ, that in some places of his kingdom was sore appalled.—Fabian in R.

Apparel. From Lat. par, equal, like, the M. Lat. diminutive pariculus, gave rise to, It. parecchio, Sp. parejo, Fr. pareil, like. Hence It. apparecchiare, Sp. aparejar, Prov. aparelhar, Fr. appareiller, properly to join like to like, to fit, to suit. Appareil, outfit, preparation, habiliments.—Dicz.

And whanne sum men seiden of the Temple that it was aparelid with good stones.—Wiclif in Richardson.

Eke if he apparaille his mete more deliciously than nede is—Parson's Tale.

Then like Fr. habiller, or E. dress, the word was specially applied to clothing, as the necessary preparation for every kind of action.

To Appeal. Lat. appellare, Fr. appeler, to call, to call on one for a special purpose, to call for judgment, to call on one for his defence, i. e. to accuse him of a crime.

Apple. AS. æpl, Isl. apal, W. apal, Ir. avall, Lith. obolys, Russ. jabloko.

To Appoint. The Fr. point was used in the sense of condition, manner, arrangement—the order, trim, array, plight, case, taking, one is in.—Cotgr. En piteux point, in piteous case; habiller en ce point, to dress in this fashion.—Cent Nouv. Nouv. A point, aptly, in good time, in good season; prendre son à point, to take his fittest opportunity for; quand it fût à point, when the proper time came. Hence appoint, fitness, opportunity, a thing for one's purpose, after his mind; and appointer (to find fitting, pronounce fitting), to determine, order, decree, to finish a controversy, to accord, agree, make a composition between parties, to assign or grant over unto.—Cotgr.

To Appraise. Lat. pretium, Fr. prix, a price, value; apprécier, to rate, esteem, prize, set a price on.—Cotgr. The Pl. D. laven is used both as E. praise, to commend, and also as ap- praise, to set a price on. To praise, in fact, is only to exalt the price or value of a thing, to speak in commendation.

Apprehend.—Apprentice.—Apprise. Lat. prehendere, to catch hold of; apprehendere, to seize, and metaphorically to take the meaning, to understand, to learn. Fr. apprendre, appris, to learn, whence the E. apprise, to make a thing known. Fr. apprentis, a learner, one taken for the purpose of learning a trade.

To Approach. Lat. prope, near, whence M. Lat. propiare, appropriare; Prov. appropjar, apropchar, Fr. approcher, to draw near.—Diez.

Approbation.—Approve.—Approver. Lat. probus, good, probare, approbare, to deem good, pronounce good. Fr. approuver, to approve, allow, find good, consent unto.—Cotgr.

Hence an Approver in law is one who has been privy and consenting to a crime, but receives pardon in consideration of his giving evidence against his principal.

This false thefe this sompnour, quoth the frere,
Had alway bandis redy to his hond,
That tellith him all the secre they knew,
For their acquaintance was not come of new;
They werin his approvis privily.—Friar's Tale.

Apricot. Formerly apricock, which is nearer the true derivation. They were considered by the Romans a kind of peach, and were called præcoqua, or præcocia, from their ripening earlier than the ordinary peach.

Maturescunt æstate præcocia intra triginta annos reperta et primo denariis singulis venundata.—Pliny, N. H. xv. 11.

Martial alludes to the peach being grafted on the apricot,

Vilia maternis fueramus Præcoqua ramis
Nunc in adoptivis Persica cara sumus.

They were also called Mala Armeniaca; and Palladius describes the Armenia or Præcoqua as a species of peach. Dioscorides, after speaking of peaches, says the smaller sort, called Armenians, in Gr. πραϊκοκία, are more digestible. The word was also written in Gr. πρεκοκκία or βερικοκκία, whence the Arab. Barkokon.—N. and Q. No. 273. Mod. Gr. πραικοκκιον.

Apron. A cloth worn in front for the protection of the clothes, by corruption for napron. Still called nappern, in the N. of E.—Halliwell. Naprun, or barm-cloth.—Prompt. From O. Fr. naperon, properly the intensive of nape, a cloth, as napkin is the diminutive. Naperon, grande nappe.—Roquefort. Naperon is explained by Hécart, a small cloth put upon the table-cloth during dinner, to preserve it from stains, and taken away before dessert.—Dict. Rouchi.

—And therewith to wepe

She made, and with her napron feir and white ywash

She wyped soft hir eyen for teris that she outlash.

Chaucer, Beryn. Prol. 31.

The loss or addition of an initial n to words is very common, and frequently we are unable to say whether the consonant has been lost or added.

Thus we have nauger and auger, newt and ewte, or eft, nawl and awl, nompire and umpire, and the same phenomenon is common in other European languages.

Arbiter.—Arbitrate. The primary sense of Lat. arbiter is commonly given as an eye-witness, from whence that of an umpire or judge is supposed to be derived, as a witness specially called in for the purpose of determining the question under trial. But there is no recognized derivation in Latin which would account for either of these significations. The true explanation seems afforded by the Fin.

There is a common tendency in an uninformed state of society to seek for the resolution of doubtful questions of sufficient interest by the casting of lots in some shape or other. Thus in Latin sors, a lot, is taken in the sense of an oracle, and sortilegus is a soothsayer, one who gives oracles, or answers questions by the casting of lots; and this doubtless is the origin of E. sorcerer, sorcery. Albanian, short, a lot, shortár, a soothsayer. Now one of the points upon which the cunning man of the present day is most frequently consulted is the finding of lost property, and a dispute upon such a subject among a barbarous people would naturally be referred to one who was supposed to have supernatural means of knowing the truth. Thus the lotsman or soothsayer would naturally be called in as arbiter or dooms-man. Now we find in Fin. arpa, a lot, symbol, divining rod, or any instrument of divination; arpa-mies, (mies=man,) sortium ductor, arbiter, hariolus; arpelen, arwella, to decide by lot, to divine; arwata, conjicio, auguror, æstimo, arbitror; arwaaja, arbiter in re censendâ; arwelo, arbitrium, opinio, conjectura; arwaus, conjectura, æstimatio arbitraria. It will be observed in how large a proportion of these cases the Lat. arbiter and its derivatives are used in explanation of the Fin. words derived from arpa.

Arbour. From OE. herbere, a place for the cultivation of herbs, a pleasure-ground, garden, subsequently confined to designate the bower or rustic shelter which commonly occupied the most conspicuous situation in the garden; and thus the etymological reference to herbs being no longer apparent, the spelling was probably accommodated to the notion of being sheltered by trees or shrubs (arbor).

This path——

Freshly turnid——

The hegge also that yedin in compas

It growyth in a gardyn, quod he,

That God made hymselfe

Amyddes mannes body,

The more (root) is of that stokke.

Herte highte the herber

That it inne groweth.—P. P. 2. 33'

The word is still used in its ancient meaning at Shrewsbury, where the different guilds have separate little pleasure-gardens with their summer-houses each within its own fence, in the midst of an open field outside the town, and over the gate of one of these gardens is written "Shoemakers' Arbour."

This lady walked outright till he might see her enter into a fine close arbor: it was of trees whose branches so interlaced each other that it could resist the strongest violence of eye-sight.—Arcadia in Richardson.

Arch. A curved line, part of a circle, anything of a bowed form, as the arch of a bridge. Lat. arcus, a bow, which has been referred to W. gwyrek, curved, from gwyro, to bend.

Arch. From Gr. αρχη, beginning, αρχειν, to be first. Αρχι was used in composition to indicate the chief or principal, becoming arch in the English version, as in arch-bishop, arch-angel. In G., under the form ers, the particle was extended by analogy to the high dignities of the empire, and thus joined with words not derived from Greek; ers-herzog, arch-duke; ers-Pfalz, the palatinate of the Rhine; Erz-kämmerer, arch-chamberlain, &c.

It was then used to express eminence in evil, acquiring the sense of E. arrant; ers-betrüger, an arrant cheat, ers-bösewicht, an arrant rogue, ers-wucherer, an arrant usurer. So in E. arch, arrant or notorious, an arch-rogue, arch-traitor, &c.—Bailey.

Arch. Sly, mischievous. G. arg, bad, wicked, mischievous, petulant; ein arger Knabe, an arch boy. Du. erg, malus, malignus, and also callidus, versutus.—Biglotton. Ein erg Kind, un malin enfant, un petit rusé. Op een ergje uit zijn, to plot a trick. Dan. arrig, ill-tempered, ill-natured; det arrigste snavs, arrant trash, the most wretched stuff. Icel. argr, lazy, cowardly, and this is probably the source from whence the bad signification of the word has arisen. Among warlike barbarians the reproach of cowardice was the most offensive that could be made, and the charge was felt to include all the evil that could be said of a man.

Memento, Dux Ferdulfe, quod me esse inertem et inutilem dixeris, et vulgari verbo Arga vocaveris.—Paul Warnefrid.

Si quis alium Argam per furorem clamaverit.—Lombard. Leg. in Duc.

Gr. αργος slow.

Archives. Gr. αρχειον, the court of a magistrate, receptacle where the public acts were kept. The term would thus appear to be connected with αρχων, a ruler, αρχη, government, rule (principatus), and not with αρχαιος, ancient. From αρχειον was formed Lat. archivum (as Argive from Αργειοι), a repository for records or public documents, and hence in modern languages the term archives is applied to the records themselves.

Area. Lat. area, a threshing-floor, a bare plot of ground, a court yard, an extent of flat surface. Applied in modern E. to the narrow yard between the under-ground part of a house and the ground in front.

Arm. Sax. earm, Lat. armus, the shoulder-joint, especially of a brute, though sometimes applied to man.

Arms.—Army. Lat. arma, W. arf, Gael. arm, a weapon. As the arm itself is the natural weapon of offence, it is possible that the word arm in the sense of weapon may be simply an application of the same word as the designation of the bodily limb.

From the verb armare, to arm, are formed the participial nouns, It. armata, Sp. armada, Fr. armée, of which the two former are confined by custom to a naval expedition, while the Fr. armée, and our army, which is derived from it, are applied only to an armed body of land forces, though formerly also used in the sense of a naval expedition.

At Leyes was he and at Satalie

Whanne they were wonne, and in the grete see

In many a noble armée had he be.—Prol. Knight's Tale.

Arquebuss. It. archibuso, affording an example of a foreign word altered in order to square with a supposed etymology. It is commonly derived from arco, a bow, as the only implement of analogous effect before the invention of fire-arms, and buso, pierced, hollow. But Diez has well observed how incongruous an expression a hollow bow or pierced bow would be, and the true derivation is the Du. haeck-buyse, haeck-busse, properly a gun fired from a rest, from haeck, the hook or forked rest on which it is supported, and busse, G. büchse, a fire-arm. From haecke-busse it became harque buss, and in It. archibuso or arcobugia, as if from arco, a bow. In Scotch it was called a hagbut of croche; Fr. arquebus à croc.—Jamieson.

To Arraign. In the Latin of the Middle Ages, rationes was the term for the pleadings in a suit; rationes exercere, or ad rationes stare, to plead; mittere or ponere ad rationes, or arrationare (whence in O. Fr. arraisonner, aresner, aregnier, arraigner), to arraign, i. e. to call one to account, to require him to plead, to place him under accusation. In like manner was formed derationare, to clear one of the accusation, to deraign, to justify, to refute.

Arrant. Mere, downright, thorough, but only used in a bad sense, as an arrant fool, thief, knave. "An erraunt usurer."—P. P. Swiss, urch, urchig, urig, pure, unmixed.—Stalder. Goth. airkns, good, sound; airknitha, genuineness; OHG. erchan, genuine; AS. corcnan-stan; Icel. iarkna-steinn, a precious stone. Swiss, uren, urig, thoroughly bad, abandoned. "Es ist uriges wetter," when it both rains and snows.

To Array. It. arredare, to prepare or dispose before-hand, to get ready. Arredare una casa, to furnish a house;—uno vascello, to equip a ship. Arredo, household furniture, rigging of a ship, and in the plural arredi, apparel, raiment, as clothing is the equipment universally necessary. O. Fr. arroyer, arréer, to dispose, set in order, prepare, fit out. The simple verb is not extant in Italian, but is preserved to us in the Icel. reida, the fundamental meaning of which seems to be to push forwards, to lay out. Thus, hann reidir nu sverdit, he wields a sword; hann reidir fram mat, he brings out food; hann reidir nu feit, he brings forwards money, pays down money; hann reidir til rumit, he prepares the bed; hann reidir hey a hestinom—he carries hay on a horse. Skipin reiddi at landi, the ship was borne to land; hann reidir sig uppá Gud, he rests upon God. Sw. reda, to prepare, to set in order, to arrange. Reda ett skepp, to equip a vessel; reda mat, servir des mets; reda til middagen, to prepare dinner. The same word is preserved in the Scotch, to red, to red up, to put in order, to dress; to red the road, to clear the way.—Jamieson.

The meaning of the Lat. paro, paratus, seems to have been developed on an analogous plan. The fundamental meaning of the simple paro seems to be to lay out, to push forwards. Thus separo is to lay things by themselves; comparo to place them side by side; preparo, to lay them out beforehand; and the It. parare, to ward off. See Curry.

To Arrest. Lat. restare, to remain behind, to stand still. It. arrestare, Fr. arrester, to bring one to stand, to seize his person.

To Arrive. Mid. Lat. adripare, to come to shore, from ripa, bank, shore; then generalised, It. arrivare, Sp. arribar, Fr. arriver, to arrive.—Diez.

Arrow. Icel. ör, gen. aurva, an arrow; ör-varnar, missiles, probably from their whirring through the air; “örvarnar flugo hvinandi yfir haufut them,” the arrows flew whizzing over their heads.—Saga Sverris. p. 26. Icel. Orre, a grouse, or gorcock, from the whirring sound of his flight. Sw. hurra, to whirl, hurl.

Arsenal. It. arzana, darsena, tarzana, a dock-yard, place of naval stores and outfit, dock. Sp. atarazana, atarazanal, a dock, covered shed over a rope-walk. From the Arabic dār çanah, place of work.—Diez. O. Fr. arsenac; Arab. darsenaah, atelier, magasin.—Roquefort.

Oportet ad illius (navigii) conservationem in locum pertrahi coopertum, qui locus, ubi dictum conservatur navigium, Arsena vulgariter appellatur.—Sanutus in Duc.

Art. The exercise of skill or invention in the production of some material object or intellectual effect; the rules and method of well doing a thing; skill, contrivance, cunning.

Art and part, when a person is both the contriver of a crime and takes part in the execution, but commonly in the negative, neither art nor part. From the Lat. nec artifex nec particeps, neither contriver nor partaker.

Artichoke. Venet. articioco ; Sp. alcachofa ; Arab. al-charshufa ; It. carciofa.—Diez.

Article. Lat. articulus, diminutive of artus, a joint, a separate element or member of anything, an instant of time, a single member of a sentence, formerly applied to any part of speech, as tum, est, quisque (Forcellini), but ultimately confined to the particles the and an, the effect of which is to designate one particular individual of the species mentioned, or to show that the assertion applies to some one individual, and not to the kind at large.

Articulate. Separated into distinct members ; specially applied to the speech of man.

Artillery. We find in Middle Latin the term ars, and the derivative artificium, applied in general to the implement with which anything is done, and specially to the implements of war, on the same principle that the Gr. μηχανη, the equivalent of the Lat. ars, gave rise to the word machina, a machine, and on which the word engine is derived from the Lat. ingenium, a contrivance. Thus a statute of the year 1352 enacts :

Quod nulla persona—sit ausa venari in nemoribus consulum—sub pena perdendi—artes, seu instrumenta cum quibus fieret venatio prædicta.—Ducange.

Cum magnis bombardis et plurimis diversis artificialibus.—Duc.

From ars seems to have been formed the Fr. verb artiller, in the general sense of exercising a handicraft, or performing skilled work, subsequently applied to the manufacturing or supplying with munitions of war. In testimony of the more general sense we find artiliaria, and thence the modern Fr. atelier, a workshop :

Quod elegantur duo legales homines qui vadant cum officiali ad visitandum omnes artiliarias exercentes artem pannorum.—Stat. A. D. 1360, in Duc.

The word is applied to the sense of implements in general by Rymer.

Decem et octo discos argenti, unum calicem argenteum, unum parvum tintinnabulum pro missâ, &c., et omnes alias artillarias sibi competentes.

Artillement, artillerie, is given by Roquefort in the sense of implement, furniture, equipment, as well as instrument of war.

Tres bombardæ grossæ—cum aliis artiliariis et instrumentis, de quibus erant oncrati innumerabiles carri.—MS. A. D. 1482, in Duc.

A statute of Edward II. shows what was understood by artillery in that day :

Item ordinatum est quod sit unus artillator qui faciat balistas, carellos, arcus, sagittas, lanceas, spiculas, et alia arma necessaria pro garnizionibus castrorum.

When Jonathan in the Book of Samuel has done with his bow and arrows, it is said, "And Jonathan gave his artillery to the lad, and said, Go carry them to the city."

As. The comparison of the G. dialects shows that as is a contraction from all-so; AS. callswa; G. also, als, as (Schülze, Schmeller), O. Fris. alsa, alse, als, asa, ase, as (Richthofer). "als auch wir vergeben unsern schuldigern," as we also forgive our debtors.—Schmeller. Also, sic, omnino, taliter, ita,—Kilian. Fris. "alsa grate bote alsa," G. "eben so grosse busse als," as great a fine as; Fris. "aloe graet als," "aloe graet ende aloe lytich als," as great and as small as; "aloe ofte als," as often as.

In OE. we often find als for also.

Schyr Edward that had sic valour
Was dede; and Jhone Stewart alsua,
And Jhone the Sowllis als with tha
And othyr als of thar company.—Bruce, xii. 795.

Schir Edward that day wald nocht ta
His cot armour; but Gib Harper,
That men held als withoutyn per Off his estate, had on that day
All hale Schir Edwardis array.—Bruce, xii. 782.

i. e. whom men held as without equal of his station.

So in German, "ein solcher, als er ist,"—such a one as he is.—Schmeller. In expressions like as great as, where two as correspond to each other, the Germans render the first by so, the second by als; in OE. the first was commonly written als, the second as,

Thai wer

To Weris water cummy als ner

As on othyr half their fayis wer.—Bruce, xiv. 102.

Of all that grēte tresoure that ever he biwan

Als bare was his towere as Job the powere man.—R. Brunne.

But this is probably only because the second as, having less emphasis upon it than the first, bore more contraction, just as we have seen in the corresponding Frisian expressions that the first as is rendered by alsoe, the second by als. In other cases the Frisian expression is just the converse of the G. Fris. alsa lange sa = G. so lange als, as long as; Fris. asa fir sa—G. so weit als, as far as; Fris. alsa fir sa, in so far as.

Ash. 1. The tree. AS. æsc, Isl. askr.

2. Dust. Goth. azgo, AS. asca, Isl. aska. Esthon. ask, refuse, dung.

To Ask. AS. accian, ascian, Isl. æskia, G. heischen.

Askance.—Askaunt. Perhaps the connexion with scant, scanty, may be illustrated by comparison with It. scarso; cogliere scarso, to strike obliquely; scarso, scarce, scanty, stingy.*Du. schaers, a razor; schaers afcheren, to shave close; schaers, close, stingy, hardly. The fundamental idea is that of skimming transversely along a surface, and so moving close to it, as opposed to striking it direct; then through the notion of closeness expressing tightness, scantiness, want. It. schiancio, athwart, across, against the grain; scanzare, scansare, to turn aside, slip aside, walk by; cansare, to balk, avoid by going aside or aslope, to step aside.—Florjō. Perhaps from canto, a side. Piedm. bescant, per bescans, aslope, the prefix bes signifying inequality, irregularity. It is however worth remarking that there is a numerous class of forms related to some of the foregoing in the same way as It. cam- biare to cangiare, to change. Thus It. aschembo, parallel with aschencio, aslant, aschembrare, or E. to scamble, with It. aschinciare, to go awry; E. to scamp (to scamp his work, to do it in an insufficient, superficial manner), with scant; skimping, scanty (said of dress when cut too short or narrow for the person—Halliwell), with skinching (skinch, to give scant measure—Hall.), To this modification must be referred Gr. σκαμβος, crooked, Celtic cam, crooked, awry, and probably Icel. skammr, short.

Askew. Awry. Gr. σκαίος, Lat. scævus, properly oblique, then left, on the left hand; Icel. skeifr, Dan. skjæv, G. scheef. Perhaps related to shave, from the notion of skimming the surface (see Askance), and probably connected with Gr. σκαληνος, unequal, oblique, σκολιος, distorted, (σκαλλω, σκαλεω, to scrape?) G. schiel, oblique, schielen, to squint; Du. schuins, oblique; E. squint; Icel. skackr, oblique.

To Aspire.—Aspirate. Lat. aspirare, to pant after, to pretend to, from spirare, to breathe. The Lat. aspirare is also used for the strong breathing employed in pronouncing the letter h, thence called the aspirate, a term etymologically unconnected with the spiritus asper of the Latin grammarians.

Ass. Lat. asinus, G. esel, Pol. osiol.

To Assay. Lat. exigere, to examine, to prove by examination; “annulis ferreis ad certum pondus exactis pro nummo utuntur,” iron rings proved of a certain weight.—Caesar. Hence, exagium, a proof; exagium solidi, a proof shilling.

De ponderibus quoque, ut fraus penitus amputetur, a nobis agantur exagia (proof specimens) quæ sine fraude debent custodiri.—Duc.

From exagium was formed the It. saggio, a proof, trial, sample, taste of anything; assaggiare, to prove, try, taste, whence Fr. essayer, to try, and E. assay, essay.—Mur. Diss. 27, p. 766.

To Assail.—Assault. Lat. salire, to leap, to spring; Fr. sailir, to sally, to leap; assaillir, to assail, to set upon, whence assault, assailing or setting upon.

Assart. A cleared place in a wood. Fr. essart, Mid. Lat. exartum, essartum, assartum, sartum.

Essartu vulgo dicuntur—quando forestæ, nemora, vel dumeta quælibet—succiduntur, quibus succisis et radicitus evulsis terra subvertitur et excolitur.—Lib. Scacch. in Duc.

Et quicquid in toto territorio Laussiniaco diruptum et exstirpatum est quod vulgo dicitur essars.—Chart. A. D. 1196, in Duc.

From ex-saritum, grubbed up.—Diez. Lat. sarrire, sarire, to hoe, to weed.

Assassin. Hashish is the name of an intoxicating drug prepared from hemp in use among the natives of the East. Hence Arab “Haschischin,” a name given to the members of a sect in Syria who wound themselves up by doses of hashish to perform at all risk the orders of their Lord, known as the Sheik, or Old Man of the Mountain. As the murder of his enemies would be the most dreaded of these behests, the name of Assassin was given to one commissioned to perform a murder; assassination, a murder performed by one lying in wait for that special purpose.—Diez. De Sacy. Mem. de l’Institut, 1818.

To Assemble. The origin of Lat. simul, together, at once, is probably the radical sam, very widely spread in the sense of same, self. From simul, insimul, were formed It. insieme, Fr. ensemble, together; assembler, to draw together, s’assembler, to meet or flock together; whence E. assemble. In the Teutonic branch of language we have Goth. sama, the same; samana, sammath, AS. samod, together, i. e. to the same place; te somne, together; samnian, “somnian”; Sw. sammla, samka, Dan. samle, sanke, G. versammeln, to collect, to assemble. In OE. assemble was often used in the special sense of joining in battle.

By Carhame assemblyd thai;

Thare was hard fychting as I harde say.—Wyntown in Jam.

Than bathe the fyrst rowtis rycht thare

At that assemble wencnst wax.—Ibid.

And in old Italian we find sembliaglia in the same sense.

“La varatta era fornita. Non poteo a sio patre dare succurso. Non poteo essere a la sembiaglia.” In the Latin translation, “conflictui interesse nequibat.”—Hist. Rom. Fragm. in Muratori. -

To Assess. The Lat. assidere, assessum, to sit down, was used in Middle Lat. in an active sense for to set, to impose a tax; assidere talliam; in Fr. asseoir la taille, to fix a certain amount upon each individual.

Provisum est generaliter quod prædicta quadragesima hoc modo assideatur et colligatur.—Math. Paris, A. D. 1232.

Et fuit quodlibet foedum militare assessum tunc ad 40 sol.—Duc.

Assize.—Assizes. From assidere was formed O. Fr. assire, to set, whence assis, set, seated, settled; assise, a set rate, a tax; assize, of bread, the settled rate for the sale of bread; also a set day, whence cour d'assize, a court to be held on a set day, E. assizes.

Ballivos nostros posuimus qui in baliviis suis singulis mensibus ponent unum diem qui dicitur Assisia in quo omnes illi qui clamorem facient recipient jus suum.—Charta Philip August. A. D. 1190, in Duc.

Assisa in It. is used for a settled pattern of dress, and is the origin of E. size, a settled cut or make.

Assets. In legal language, are funds for the satisfaction of certain demands. Commonly derived from Fr. assez, but in OE. it was commonly written aseth.

And if it suffice not for aseth.—P. Plowman, p. 94.

And Pilat willing to make aseth to the people left to hem Barabbas.—Wiclif, Mark 15.

And though on heapes that lie him by
Yet never shall make his richesse,
Aseth unto his greediness.—R. R.

Make asethe (makyn sethe—K), satisfacio.—Pr. Pm.
“Now then, rise and go forthe and spekyng do asethe to thy servauntis”—Wicliffe; satisfac servis tuis—Vulgate. “Therefore I swore to the hows of Heli that the wickedness of his hows shall not be doon aseth before with slain sacrificis and giftis."—Wiclif. In the Vulgate, expietur. Assyth, Sithe, to make compensation, to satisfy. "I have gotten my heart's site on him."—Lye in Junius, v. sythe. Gael. sioth, sith, peace, quietness, rest from war, reconciliation; sithich, calm, pacify, assuage, reconcile. W. hedd, tranquillity, heddu, to pacify; Pol. Bohem. syt, syty, satisfied, full; Bohem. syti, to satisfy.

The Lat. satis, enough; Icel. sætt, sætti, reconciliatio, sætttr, reconciliatus, contentus, consentiens; sedia, saturare; G. satt, full, satisfied,—are doubtless all fundamentally related.

To Asseverate. Lat. asseverare, to affirm earnestly, to maintain; from severus, serious, earnest. So perseverare, to continue earnest in the attainment of an object, to persevere.

To Assoil. To acquit. Lat. absolvere, to loose from; O. Fr. absolver, absoiller, assoiller.—Roquefort.

To Assuage. From Lat. suavis, sweet, agreeable. Prov. suau, sweet, agreeable, soft, tranquil; O. Fr. soef, souef, sweet, soft, gentle; Prov. assuauzar, assuavar, assuaviar, to appease, to calm, to soften. Hence, O. Fr. assouager, to soften, to allay, answering to assuaviar, as alléger to alleviare, abréger to abbreviare, agréger to aggraviare, soulager to solleviare.

Mais moult m' assouagea l' oingture—R. R.;
translated by Chaucer,

Now softening with the ointment.

To Astonish.—Astound.—Stony. Fr. estonner, to astonish, amaze, daunt; also to stonnie, benumme or dull the senses of.—Cotgr. The form astopish shows that estonnir must also have been in use. According to Diez, from Lat. attonare, attonitum (strengthened to extonare), to thunder at, to stun, to stupefy. So in E. thunder-struck is used for a high degree of astonishment. But probably the root ton in attonitus is used rather as the representative of a loud overpowering sound in general, than specially of thunder. Thus we have din, a loud continued noise; dint, a blow; to dun, to make an importunate noise; dunt, a blow or stroke; to dunt, to confuse by noise, to stupify.—Halliwell. AS. stunian, to strike, to stun, to make stupid with noise; stunt, stupified, foolish; G. erstaunen, to be in the condition of one stunned.

At. Icel. at, Dan. ad, equivalent to E. to, before a verb, at segia, to say; Lat. ad, to; Sanscr. adhi, upon.

Atons. To bring at one, to reconcile, and thence to suffer the pains of whatever sacrifice is necessary to bring about a reconciliation.

If gentlemen or other of that contrei
Were wroth, she wolde bringen hem at on,
So wise and ripe wordes hadde she.—Chaucer in Rich.

One God, one Mediator (that is to say, advocate, intercessor, or an atonement-maker), between God and man.—Tyndall in Rich.

Lod. Is there division 'twixt my Lord and Cassio?
Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much
T' attone them for the love I bear to Cassio.—Othello.

Ye witless gallants, I beshrew your hearts
That set such discord 'twixt agreeing parts
Which never can be set at onement more.—Bp. Hall in Rich.

So to one, to unite, to join in one.

David saith the rich folk that embraceden and oneden all hir herte to treasure of this world shall slepe in the sleping of deth.—Chaucer in Rich.

Put together and onyd, continuous; put together but not onyd, contiguous.—Pr. Pm.

To Attach.—Attack. These words, though now distinct, are both derived from the It. attaccare, to fasten, to hang, originally apparently to tack or fasten with a small nail or point. Venet. tacare; Piedm. taché, to fasten.

Hence in Fr. the double form, attacher, to tie, to fasten, to stick, to attach, and attaquer, properly to fasten on, to begin a quarrel. S'attacher is also used in the same sense; s'attacher à, to coape, scuffle, grapple, fight with.—Cotgr.

It. Attacar un chiodo, to fasten a nail; — la guerra, to commence war; — la battaglia, to engage in battle; — il fuoco, to set on fire; attaccarsi il fuoco, to catch fire; — di parole, to quarrel.

To attach one, in legal language, is to lay hold of one, to apprehend him under a charge of criminality. In like manner we say—to fasten a quarrel on one, to pick a quarrel with one.

To Attain. Fr. atteindre, from Lat. tangere, to touch, attingere, to reach to. In the same way, destraindre, to dis-train, from distringere.

Attainder. — Attaint. Fr. atteindre (O. Fr. attaïnder—Roquef.), to reach or attain unto, hit or strike in reaching, to overtake, bring to pass, also to attain or convict, also to accuse or charge with.—Cotgr. The institution of a judicial accusation is compared to the pursuit of an enemy; the proceedings are called a suit, Fr. poursuite en jugement, and the agency of the plaintiff is expressed by the verb prosequi, to pursue. In following out the metaphor the conduct of the suit to a successful issue in the conviction of the accused is expressed by the verb attingere, Fr. atteindre, which signifies the apprehension of the object of a chase.

Quem fugientem dictus Raimundus atinrit.

Hence the Fr. atteinte d'une cause, the gain of a suit; atteindre le meffait, to fix the charge of a crime upon one, to prove a crime.—Carp. Atains du fet, convicted of the fact, caught by it, having it brought home to one.—Roquef.

To Attempt. Lat. tentare, to endeavour; O. Fr. tenter, temter, tempter, to try, to endeavour.

Attire. O. Fr. atour, attour, a French hood, also any kind of tire or attire for a woman's head. Damoiselle d'atour, the waiting-woman that uses to dress or attire her mistress—Cotgr.,—a tire woman. Attouré, tired, attired, dressed, trimmed, adorned. Attourner, to attire, deck, dress. Attourneur, one that waits in the chamber to dress his master or his mistress.

The original sense of attiring was that of preparing or getting ready for a certain purpose, from the notion of turning towards it, by a similar train of thought to that by which the sense of dress, clothing, is derived from directing to a certain end, preparing for it, clothing being the most universally necessary of all preparations.

He attired him to battle with folc that he had.—R. Brunne, in Rich.

What does the king of France ? atires him good navie.—Ibid.

To bank over the sond plankes thei over kast,
Als William thereon suld go he stombled at a nayle
Into the waise tham fro he tombled top over taile,
His knyghtes up him lyft and did him eft atire.—R. G. 70.

i. e. set him to rights. The change from atour to attire is singular, but we find them used with apparent indifference.

By her atire so bright and shene
Men might perceve well and sene
She was not of Religioun,
Nor n' il I make menciou
Nor of robe, nor of tresour,
Of broche, neither of her rich attour.—R. R.

Riche atyr, noble vesture,
Bele robe ou riche pelure.—Polit. Songs.

O. Fr. Atirer, attirer, atirier, ajuster, convenir, accorder, orner, decorer, parer, preparer, disposer, regler.—Roquefort.

Attitude. Posture of body. It. atto, from Lat. agere, actum, act, action, posture ; It. attitudine, promptness, disposition to act, and also simply posture, attitude.

Attorney. M. Lat. attornatus, one put in the turn or place of another, one appointed to execute an office on behalf of another.

Li atorné est cil qui pardevant justice est atorné pour aucun en Eschequier ou en Assise pour poursuivre et pour defendre sa droiture.—Jus Municipale Normannorum, in Ducange.

Auburn. Written also abron. Applied only to the colour of the hair.

Perhaps from the reddish brown colour of a young wild duck. O. Fr. halbran, albran ; Sp. halbrent, albrent, albran, a wild duck in its first year, or when moulting, a teal or pochard, the last of which is conspicuous for a bright chestnut head and neck. Fr. albrenner, to hunt the young wild duck or the old one when she moults. From halber-ente, Leduchat; G. halb-ente, the plotus anomalipes.—Adelung. With the London poulterers, a pochard is called a half-bird.

It must be remembered that sporting occupied a much more important place in the thoughts of our ancestors than with ourselves, and they were proportionally better acquainted with the beasts of chase. It is certain that the aspect of the bird was sufficiently familiar with the French to give rise to the metaphor hallebrené, heavy-looking, drooping as a moulting duck, or a ragged hawk.—Cotgr.

Audience.—Audit. In the law language of the middle ages audire was specially applied to the solemn hearing of a court of justice, whence audientia was frequently used as synonymous with judgment, court of justice, &c., and even in the sense of suit at law. The Judge was termed auditor, and the term was in particular applied to persons commissioned to inquire into any special matter. The term was then applied to the notaries or officers appointed to authenticate all legal acts, to hear the desires of the parties, and to take them down in writing; also to the parties witnessing a deed. “Testes sunt hujus rei visores et auditores, &c. Hoc viderunt et audierunt isti, &c.”—Ducange.

At the present day the term is confined to the investigation of accounts, the examination and allowance of which is termed the audit, the parties examining, the auditors.

Auger. An implement for drilling holes, by turning round a centre which is steadied against the pit of the stomach. Formerly written nauger, Dú. evagher, nevegher. In cases like these, which are very numerous in language, it is impossible primâ facie to say whether an n has been added in the one case or lost in the other. In the present case the form with an initial n is undoubtedly the original. AS. naf-gar, naf-bor. The force of the element naf is explained from the Finnish napa, a navel, and hence, the middle of anything, centre of a circle, axis of a wheel. In composition it signifies revolution, as from meren, the sea, meren-napa, a whirlpool; from rauta, iron, napa-rauta, the iron stem on which the upper millstone rests and turns; maan-napa, the axis of the earth. With kaira, a borer, the equivalent of AS. gar, it forms napa-kaira, exactly corresponding to the common E. name of the tool, a centre-bit, a piercer acting by the revolution of the tool round a fixed axis or centre. • Lap. nape, navel, centre, axle.

The other element of the word corresponding to the Fin. kaira, AS. gar, is identical with the E. gore, in the sense of being gored by a bull, i. e. pierced by his horns. AS. gar, a javelin, gara, an angular point of land.

Aught or Ought. Something; as naught or nought, nothing. AS. â-wiht, OHG. eo-wiht; modern G. icht; from â G. aiw, ever, and wicht, Goth. waihts, a thing. See Whit.

Aunt. Lat. amita. A similar contraction takes place in emmet, ant.

Avast. A nautical expression for hold, stop, stay. Avast talking! cease talking! It. bastare, to suffice; basta! enough! cease! Bret. basta, bastout, to satisfy, provide for, suffice.

Avaunt. Begone! Fr. avant, before; en avant! forwards!

To Avail. 1. To be of service. Fr. valoir, to be worth; Lat. valere, to be well in health, to be able, to be worth.

2. To Avail or Avale, to lower. To vail his flag, to lower his flag. Fr. à val, downwards, à mont et à val, towards the hill and towards the vale, upwards and downwards. Hence avaler, properly to let down, to lower, now used in the sense of swallowing.

Avenue. Fr. avenue, the approach to a place; Lat. ad and venire, to come. Applied in E. to the double row of trees by which the approach to a house of distinction was formerly marked.

To Aver. Aver. Fr. avérer, to maintain as true, from Lat. verus, true.

Aver. A beast of the plow. The Fr. avoir (from habere, to have) as well as Sp. haber, was used in the sense of goods, possessions, money. This in Mid. Lat. became avera, or averia.

Taxatâ pactione quod salvis corporibus suis et averis et equis et armis cum pace recederent.—A. D. 1166, in Duc.

In istum sanctum locum, venimus cum Averos nostros.—Chart. Hisp. A. D. 819.

Et in toto quantum Rex Adelfonsus tenet de rege Navarræ melioret cum suo proprio avere, quantum voluerit et poterit.—Hoveden, in Duc.

Averii, or Averia, was then applied to cattle in general, as the principal possession in early times.

Hoc placitum dilacionem non recipit propter averia, i. e. animalia muta, ac diu detineantur inclusa.—Regiam Majestatem.

Si come jeo bayle à un home mes berbits a campester, ou mes bœufs à arer la terre et il occist mes avers.—Littleton.

We then have averiq carruce, beasts of the plough; and the word avers finally came to be confined to the signification of cart-horses.

Average. 1. Average was the duty work done for the lord with the avers, or draught cattle, of the tenant. “Sciendum est quod unumquodque averagium æstivale fieri debet inter Hokday et gulam Augusti.”—Spelman in Duc.

2. Average, from the G. haferei, is a totally different word from the foregoing. The primitive meaning of haferei seems to be sea-damage, damage suffered on the conveyance of goods by sea, from the Scandinavian haf, hav, the open sea, pointing to the shores of the Baltic, where so many of our nautical terms took their rise, for the origin of the word. This in Fr. became avaris, decay of wares or merchandise, leakage of wines, also the charges of the carriage or measuring thereof—Cotgr.; avarie, damage suffered by a vessel or goods from the departure to the return into port.—*Dict. Etym. Marchandise avariées, damaged goods. But when goods were thrown overboard for the safety of the vessel, it was an obvious equity to divide the loss amongst those who profited by the sacrifice. Hence haferei was applied to the money paid by those who receive their goods safe, to indemnify those whose goods have been thrown overboard in a storm.—Küttner.

It. Avaria, calculation and distribution of the loss arising from goods thrown overboard—Altieri; an equal distribution of the loss among the shippers.

Hence, finally, in the modern sense of the term, an average is an equal distribution of whatever inequalities there may be among all the individuals of a series, and then the value of the individual so compensated. The origin of average in the latter sense became much obscured when by the practice of assurance the nautical average came to signify a contribution made by independent insurers to compensate for losses at sea, instead of a contribution by those who received their goods safe, to make good the loss of those whose wares were thrown overboard for the general safety.

To Avoid. Properly to make void or empty, to make of none effect.

And what if summe of hem beleyden not, wher the unbeleve of hem hath avoided the feith of God? God forbede.—Wiclif.

Shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? To avoid a contract, to make it void, and hence to escape from the consequences of it.

“To confess and avoid,” in legal phrase, was to admit some fact alleged by the adversary, and then to make it of none effect by showing that it does not bear upon the case.

Tell me your fayth, doe you beleeve that there is a living God that is mighty to punish his enemies? If you beleeve it, say unto me, can you devise for to avoide hys vengeance?—Barnes in R.

Here the word may be interpreted either way: Can you devise to make void his vengeance, or to escape his vengeance, showing clearly the transition to the modern meaning. So in the following passages from Milton:—

Not diffident of thee do I dissuade
Thy absence from my sight, but to avoid
The attempt itself intended by our foe.

To avoid, was also used as Fr. vuidier, vider la maison, Piedm. voidé na cà, to clear out from a house, to make it empty, to quit, to keep away from a place.

Anno H. VII, it was enacted that all Scots dwelling within England and Wales should avoid the realm within 40 days of proclamation made.—Rastal, in R.

Avoid thee, fiend, what tel'st thou me of supping ? i. e. Begone, keep clear of me.

It is singular that we should thus witness the development within the E. language of a word agreeing so closely in sound and meaning with Lat. evitare, Fr. éviter ; but in cases of this kind it will, I believe, often be found that the Latin word only exhibits a previous example of the same line of development from one original root. I cannot but believe that the radical meaning of Lat. vitare is to give a wide berth to, to leave an empty space between oneself and the object. Fr. vuide, vide, empty, waste, vast, wide, free from, not cumbered or troubled with.—Cotgr. To shoot wide of the mark is to miss, to avoid the mark ; OHG. wit, empty ; witi, vacuitas.—Graff.

Avoir-du-poise. The ordinary measure of weight. O. Fr. avoirs de pois, goods that sell by weight and not by measurement.

To Avow.—Avouch. Under the feudal system, when the right of a tenant was impugned he had to call upon his lord to come forwards and defend his right. This in the Latin of the time was called advocare, Fr. voucher à garantie, to vouch or call to warrant. Then as the calling on an individual as lord of the fee to defend the right of the tenant involved the admission of all the duties implied in feudal tenancy, it was an act jealously looked after by the lords, and advocare, or the equivalent Fr. avouer, to avow, came to signify the admission by a tenant of a certain person as feudal superior.

Nihil ab eo se tenere in feodo aut quoquo modo alio advocabat.—Chron. A. D. 1296. Ita tamen quod dictus Episcopus et successores sui nos et successores nostros Cemites Flandriæ qui pro tempore fuerint, si indiguerint auxilio, advocabit, nec alium dominum secularem poterant advocare.—

Charta A. D. 1250. Donec advocatus fuerit ut burgensis noster.—Stat. Louis le Hutin. 1315.—Until he shall be acknowledged as our burgess. Recognoscendo seu profitendo ab illis ea tanquam a superioribus se tenere seu ab ipsis eadem advocando, prout in quibusdam partibus Gallicanis vulgariter dicitur advouer.—Concil. Lugdun. A. D. 1274. A personis laicis tanquam à superioribus ea quæ ab Ecclesia tenent advouantes se tenere.—A. D. 1315, in Duc.

Finally, with some grammatical confusion, Lat. advocare, and E. avow or avouch, came to be used in the sense of performing the part of the vouchee or person called on to defend the right impugned.—To justify a thing already done, to maintain or justify, to affirm resolutely or boldly, to assert.—Bailey.

—————I could

With barefaced power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avouch it.—Macbeth.

Await. To wait till something happens. See Wait. Wal-lon. awaiti, to watch, waiti, to look.

Award. The primitive sense of ward is shown in the It. guardare, Fr. regarder, to look. Hence Prov. Fr. eswarder (answering in form to E. award), to inspect goods, and, incidentally, to pronounce them good and marketable; eswarder, an inspector.—Hecart.

An award is accordingly in the first place the taking a matter into consideration and pronouncing judgment upon it, but in later times the designation has been transferred exclusively to the consequent judgment.

In like manner in OE. the verb to look is very often found in the sense of consideration, deliberation, determination, award, decision.

When William Rufus was in difficulties with his brother Robert, about the partition of the Conqueror's inheritance, he determined to go to the King of France to submit the matter to his award. He says (in Peter Langtoft, p. 86):

Therefore am I comen to wite at yow our hewed
The londes that we have nomen to whom they shall be leued,

And at your judgement I will stand and do
 With thi that it be ent (ended) the strif bituen us tuo.
 Philip said, blithely, and sent his messengers
 Tille Ingland to the clergy, erles, barons, ther pers,
 And askid if thei wild stand to ther lokyng.

—where looking is used exactly in the sense of the modern award.

These senses of look are well exemplified in a passage from R. G. p. 567.

To chese six wise men hii lokede there
 Three bishops and three barons the wisest that there were—
 And bot hii might accordi, that hii the legate took,
 And Sir Henry of Almaine right and law to look—
 Tho let tho king someni age the Tiwesday
 Next before All Hallow tide as his council bisai, Bishops and Abbots and Priors thereto, Erles and Barons and Knightes also,
 That hii were at Northampton to hear and at stonde
 To the loking of these twelve of the state of the lond.

—to the award or determination of these twelve.

There it was dispeopled the edict I wis
 That was the ban of Keningworth, that was lo ! this ;
 That there ne should of high men desherited be none
 That had iholde age the King but the Erl of Leicetre one ;
 Ac that all the othere had agen all hor lond,
 Other hor heirs that dede were, but that the King in his hand
 It hulde to an term that there iloked was,
 Five year some and some four, ever up his trespas.

Awe. Fear, dread, reverence, and then transferred to the cause of fear, assumi~~ng~~g the signification of anger, discipline, chastisement.

But her fiers servant (Una's Lion) full of kingly aw
 And high disdaine, whenas his souveraine dame
 So rudely handled by her foe he saw,
 With gaping jaws full gredy at him came.

AS. ege, oga, egisa, fear, dread. Icøl. ægir, terrible ; ægia, to be an object of wonder or fear ; mer ægir, I am amazed, I am terrified ; ogn, terror ; ogna, to terrify ; ognar-mal, threats ;

Gr. αγη, wonder, αγαομαι, αγαζομαι, to wonder at, to be angry ; Dan. ave, chastisement, correction, awe, fear, discipline. "At staae under eens ave"—to stand in awe of one ; "At holde i stræng ave," to keep a strict hand over.

Isl. agi, discipline. Goth. agis, fear ; ogan, to fear ; inagan, ogjan, to threaten, terrify. Gael. agh, fear, astonishment, awe. See Ugly.

Awhape. To dismay ; properly, to take away the breath with astonishment, to stand in breathless astonishment.

Ah my dear gossip, answered then the ape,

Deeply do your sad words my wits awhape.

Mother Hubbard's tale in Boucher.

W. chwaff, a gust ; Lith. kwapas, breath ; Goth. afhvapjan, Icel. kefia, to choke, to suffocate ; Goth. afhvapnan, Icel. kafna, to be choked ; Sw. quaf, choking, oppressive.

Was I for this nigh wrackt upon the sea,

And twice by awkward wind from England's bank

Drove back again unto my native clime ?—2 Hen. VI.

Indirect, unfavourable wind. To ring the bells awk is to ring them backwards.

They with awkward judgment put the chief point of godliness in outward things, as in the choice of meats, and neglect those things that be of the soul.—Udal in R.

That which we in Greek call απιστερον, that is to say, on the awk or left hand, they say in Latin sinistrum.—Holland, Pliny in R.

The word seems formed from the Icel. af, Lat. ab, E. off of, signifying deviation, error, the final k being an adjectival termination. Thus, Icel. af-gata, iter devium, divortium ; af-krokr, diverticulum, a side way ; öfugr, inversus, sinister ; öfug-fleiri, a flat-fish with eyes on the left side ; öfug-nesni, a name given from antiphrasis ; öfug-ord, verbum obliquum, impertinens, offensum ; öfgar, absurditas ; öfga, to change, degenerate. Sw. afwig, inside out, averse, disinclined, awkward, unskilful; afwig-hand, the back of the hand. Dan. avet, crooked, preposterous, perverse.

G. ab in composition indicates the contrary or negation; abgrund, abyss, bottomless pit; abgott, false god; abhold, unkind; ablernen, to unlearn; aberglaube, false belief; aber papst, aber-könig, false pope, false king. In aben, inside out.—Schmeller. In Flemish we see the passage towards the u or w of awk; ave saghe, absurda narratio, sermo absonus; ave gaen, ave hanghen, &c.; auer gheloove, perverted belief, superstition; auer-hands, ouer-hands (as Sw. afwig-hand), manu aversâ, præposterâ; aver-recht, over-recht, contrarius recto, præposterus, sinister; auwiis, auer-wiis, foolish, mad.

The different G. forms are very numerous; OHG. abuh, abah, aversus, perversus, sinister; Prov. G. abich, abech, übicht, abechig, aweck, awecki (alles thut er awecki, he does everything awkly), affig, affik, aft, aftik, and again æbsch, äpisch, epsch, verkehrt, linkisch, link, and in Netherlandish, aves, aefs, obliquus; aafsch, aefsch, aafschelyk, aversus, preposterus, contrarius.—Kil.

Diefenbach would unite with the foregoing the AS. awoh OS. avuh (= Prov. E. awuh), awry, wrongfully, which undoubtedly it is not easy to separate from OHG. abuh. We should then have to look on AS. awoh as formed from the prep. ab, af, au, with an adjectival termination, and from thence must suppose the AS. woh, wog, bending, error, wrong, to be derived, altogether losing sight of the radical part of the word. Wyrcau woh, to work iniquity; wohdom, unjust judgment; woh-fotede, crooked-footed. There is a similar difficulty with respect to Goth. ibuks, retrograde, which Diefenbach also regards as an equivalent form, while he somewhat arbitrarily rejects the Slavonic opak, awry, crossways, wrong, Bohem. pačiti, to twist, Pol. opaczny, wrong, perverted; connecting the Slavonic forms with Fin. Lap. paha, Esthon. pahha, bad, pahhem (comp.), worse, left hand, pahhool, inside outwards, on the left, on the wrong side. Compare Bohem. pačiti se, to decline, to refuse, with Lap. paha- stallet, to refuse, Lat. tergiversari; OHG. abahon, aversari, abominari, with Esthon. paha melega (meel = mind), against one's will, Lap. pahak, unwilling, disobedient.

The addition of the particle ge gives rise to Prov. E. gawk, the left hand, gawky, an awkward person, Fr. gauche, left hand, awkward, unskilful. In the same way corresponding to forms like äpisch, absch, the G. has gäbisch, gäwisch, inverted, left-handed, "ein wort gäbisch nehmen," to understand one perversely, to take it awfully. A similar modification appears in E. gaby, an awkward person, corresponding to gawky, as G. gäbisch to F. gauche. See Diefenbach, v. Ibuds.

Awl. Icel. alr; G. ahle, Du. else, Fr. alesne, It. lesina.

Awn. A scale or husk of anything, the beard of corn. Isl. ogn, agnir, chaff, straw, mote; Dan. avne; Gr. αχνη, chaff; Esthon. aggan, chaff.

Awning. Awning (sea term), a sail or tarpawlin hung over any part of a ship. It should be observed that many of our sea terms are of Low German origin. Awning is rightly traced by the Rev. J. Davies to the Pl. D. havenung, from haven, a place where one is sheltered from wind and rain, shelter, as in the lee of a building or bush. Compare Dan. avne, awn; and with respect to the loss of the initial h, which is very unusual in a Teutonic derivation, E. average, Dan. haveri. The contracted forms havenje, haavje, explain the E. hove, shelter.—Hal. Hier hebbe ik haavje, here am I in shelter.—Brem. Wort. So in E. we speak of hoving under the shore.

One day as he forepassed by the plaine

With weary pase, he far away espide

A couple (seeming well to be his twaine)

Which hoved close under a forest side

As if they lay in wait, or else themselves did hide.—

F. Q. in R.

Aye is used in two senses :

1. Ever, always, as in the expression for ever and aye; and
2. As an affirmative particle, synonymous with yea and yes.
The primitive image seems to consist in the notion of continuance, duration, expressed in Goth. by the root aiv. Aivs, time, age, the world; us-airvan, to outlast; du aiva in airin, for ever; ni in aiva, niaiv, never. Lat. ævum, æt-as; Gr. αει, αε, always; αιων, an age. OHG. éo, io; G. je, ever, always; AS. âva, a; O. Swed. æ, all, ever.

The passage from the notion of continuance, endurance, to that of asseveration, may be exemplified by the use of the G. je, ja; je und je, for ever and ever; von je her, from all time; wer hat es je gesehen, who has ever*scen it. Das ist je wahr, that is certainly true; es ist je nicht recht, it is certainly not right; Es kann ja einen irren, every one may be mistaken; Thut es doch ja nicht, by no means do it. In the same way the Italian gia; non gia, certainly not. From this use of the word to imply the unbroken and universal application of a proposition, it became adopted to stand by itself as an affirmative answer, equivalent to, certainly, even so, just so. In like manner the Lat. etiam had the force of certainly, yes indeed, yes.

In Frisian, as in English, are two forms, ac, like aye, coming nearer to the original root aiv, and ea, corresponding to G. je, ja, AS. gea, E. yea. In yes we have the remains of an affix, se or si, which in AS. was also added to the negative, giving nese, no, as well as jese, yes.

Azure. It. azzurro, azzuolo; Sp. Port. azul. From Pers. lazur, whence lapis lazuli, the sapphire of the ancients.—Diez.

B.

To Babble. Fr. babiller, Du. babelen, bebelen, confundere verba, blaterare, garrire; Gr. βαβαζειν.—Kil. From ba, ba, ba, representing the inarticulate attempts of a child at talking. See Babe.

On the same principle a verb of the same meaning with babble was formed on the syllable ma.

And sat softly adown
 And seid my byleve
 And so I babbede on my bedes,

They broughte me aslepe—
 On this matere I might Mamelen full long.—P. P.

Hence to mumble, to chew with gums and lips, in which sense the Du. babbelen is also used.

Babe. The simplest articulations, and those which are readiest caught by the infant mouth, are the syllables formed by the vowel a with the primary consonants of the labial and dental classes, especially the former; ma, ba, pa, na, da, ta. Out of these, therefore, is very generally formed the limited vocabulary required at the earliest period of infant life, comprising the names for father, mother, infant, breast, food. Thus in the nursery language of the Norman English papa, mamma, baba, are the father, mother, and infant respectively, the two latter of which pass into mammy and babby, baby, babe, while the last, with a nasal, forms the It. bambino.

In Saxon English father is dada, daddy, dad, answering to the Goth. atta, as papa, to Hebrew abba.

Lat. mamma is applied to the breast, the name of which, in E. pap, Lat. papilla, agrees with the name for father. Papa was in Latin the word with which infants demanded food, whence E. pap.

In the same way it may be concluded from the Goth. dad-djan, to give suck, that the breast was in that language called dada, agreeing with the prov. Swed. dadda, nurse, Swiss dodo, mother, OHG. deddi, yulg. Eng. diddy, titty, the breast; Icel. totta, to suck.

It must be confessed that a different origin from the foregoing is suggested by the OE. use of the word babe or baby in the sense of a doll. Fr. poupée, a babie, a puppet or bable, also the flax of a distaff.—Cotgr. It. poppara, a sucking girl, also a child's playing baby or puppet. Pupa, puppa, a child's playing baby, puppy or puppet, to play withal.—Florio.

We must remember that the primary form of a doll is a bundle of rags. Fris. dock, a little bundle, as of thread, straw, &c.; also a doll; G. docke, a bundle, a skein, a child's puppet, baby, or doll.—Küttner. Esthon. nuk, a knob, bunch, doll; Fin. nukki, a doll of rags; Hung. báb, a skein or bunch of thread, a doll. Du. poppe, a bunch of flax or tow, a doll; Bohem. pup, an excrescence, pupen, a bud, pupek, a navel; Pol. pupka, pupeczka, a doll, a baby.

The Gael. has mab, bab, maban, baban, a tassel or bob, and these very words become in W. the word for son, doubtless through the notion of a baby. In the E. mop, mab (mab, to dress negligently—Halliwell) they have the original sense of a bundle of rags, while the diminutive moppet is used as a term of endearment to a child, a little moppet! exactly as the Hung. bábam, pupa, deliciæ meæ!

The It. poppa, vulg. E. bubby, Swiss bübbi, the breast, must then be referred to the notion of protuberance characteristic of a bunch or bundle, and must be classed with the E. bob, a lump, Hung. báb, a bunch of thread, &c., Bohem. pup, excrescence; Du. poppe, above mentioned. See Boy.

Baboon, Baber-lipped. From ba, the sound made by the collision of the lips, are formed, Prov. G. bappe, the chops or mouth; Fr. babines, the large lips of a beast; Sp. befo, the lip of a horse, a person with large lips, and for a like reason the OE. babber-lipped, having large lips.

Hence also doubtless It. babuino, Fr. babouin, E. baboon, an animal whose large lips form a striking feature of his face, when compared with man, whom he in some degree resembles.

Bachelor. Apparently from a Celtic root. W. bachgen, a boy, bachgenes, a young girl, from bach, little, and probably geni, to be born, whence geneth, genaith, a girl, a daughter. From bach are formed the diminutives baches, a little darling, bachigyn, a very little thing.

Whether the root geni be really concerned in the matter or no, there can be little doubt that the Celtic baches, or bachgen, is the origin of the Fr. bacelle, bacelote, bachele, bachelette, a young girl, servant, apprentice; baceller, to make love, to serve as apprentice, to commence a study; bacelerie, youth; bachelage, apprenticeship, art and study of chivalry. Hence by a secondary formation bachelor, bachelard, bachelier, young man, aspirant to knighthood, apprentice to arms or sciences. A bachelor of arts is a young man admitted to the degree of apprentice or student of arts, but not yet a master. In ordinary E. it has come to signify an unmarried man. Prov. bacalar, bachallier, was used of the young student, young soldier, young unmarried man. Then, as in the case of many other words signifying boy or youth, it is applied to a servant or one in a subordinate condition.

Vos e mi' n fesetz per totz lauzar
Vos com senher e mi com bacalar.

You and I made ourselves praised among all—you as Lord, and I as servant or squire.

Aytan can dura batalha
Nos fay gran dan sirventalha,
Panan van man bacalar.

As long as the battle lasts the servants do us great damage, many a bachelor goes robbing.—Rayn.

Where the bachelor is classed among the sirventalha or valetaille. It has nothing to do with the possession of a bacele, or certain portion of land, as explained by Diez.

The functions of a knight were complete when he rode at the head of his retainers assembled under his banner, which was expressed by the term “lever bannière.” So long as he was unable to take this step, either from insufficient age or poverty, he would be considered only as an apprentice in chivalry, and was called a knight bachelor, just as the outer barrister was only an apprentice at the law, whatever his age might be. The baccalarii of the south of France and north of Spain seem quite unconnected. They were the tenants of a larger kind of farm, called baccalaria, were reckoned as rustici, and were bound to certain duty work for their lord.

There is no appearance in the passages cited of their having had any military character whatever. One would suspect that the word might be of Basque origin.

Back, 1. Icel. bak; Lith. pakalà. The part of the body opposite to the face, turned away from the face. The root seems preserved in Bohem. pačiti, to twist; Pol. paczyć se, to warp (of wood), to bend out of shape; wspak, wrong, backwards, inside outwards; pakosć, malice, spite, perversity; opak, the wrong way, awry, cross; opaczny, wrong, perverted; Russ. opako, naopako, wrong; pâki in composition, equivalent to Lat. re, again; paki-buitie, regeneration. So in E. to give a thing back is to give it again, to give it in the opposite direction to that in which it was formerly given, and with us too the word is frequently used in the moral sense of perverted, bad.

A back-friend is a perverted friend, one who does injury under the cover of friendship; to back-bite is to speak evil of one; to back-slide, to slide out of the right path, to fall into error; Icel. bak-radudur, ill-counselled; bak-bord, the left-hand side of the ship. Esthon. pahha-pool, the back side, wrong side; pahha, bad, ill-disposed; Fin. Lap. paha, bad; OHG. abah, abuh, apah, apuh, aversus, perversus, sinister; abahon, aversari, abominari; Goth. ibuks, backwards. To this extent the connection with a root bak, bah, pak, pah, signifying twisting, turning away, seems distinctly traceable, but at this point we become involved in a labyrinth of words (indicated under the word Awkward), in which the same fundamental notion of perversion is expressed by apparent derivatives from the prep. ab, af, with an adjectival termination, ug, ig, &c. I find it impossible to draw the line distinctly between the two.

Back, 2. A second meaning of Back is a brewer's vat, or large open tub for containing beer. The word is widely spread in the sense of a wide open vessel. Bret. bac, a boat; Pr. bac, a flat wide ferry boat; Du. back, a trough, bowl, manger, cistern, basin of a fountain, flat-bottomed boat, body of a wagon, pit at the theatre ; Dan. bakke, a tray. Of this the It. bacino is the diminutive, whence E. basin, bason ; It. bacinetto, a bacinet, or bason-shaped helmet.

Backgammon. From the foregoing Dan. bakke (also bakkebord), a tray, and gammen, a game, may doubtless be explained the game of Back-gammon, which is conspicuously a tray-game, a game played on a tray-shaped board, although the word does not actually appear in the Dan. dictionaries. It is exceedingly likely to have come down to us from our Northern ancestors, who devoted much of their long winter evenings to games of tables.

To make or leave a blot at Backgammon is to uncover one of your men, to leave it liable to be taken, an expression not explicable by the E. sense of the word blot. But the Sw. blott, Dan. blot, is naked, exposed ; blotte sig, to expose oneself ; Sw. gora blott, at Backgammon, to make an exposed point, to make a blot.

Bucket. In the N. of E. a coal-hod, from back, in the sense of a wide open vessel ; Rouchi, bac à carbon.—Hécart. The Fr. baquet is a tub or pail.

Bacon. O. Fr. bacon ; baquier, a sty-fed hog ; O. Du. baecke, backe, a pig ; baecken-vleesch, baeck-vleesch, pork, bacon. Port. bacoro, a little pig. Du. baggele, bigge, bigghe, a pig ; baeckelen, bagghelen, vigghen, to pig, to produce young.—Kil. Pied. biga, a sow.

Bad. G. böse, Du. boos, malus, pravus, perversus, malignus. Pers. bud, bad. Unconnected, I believe, with Goth. bauths, tasteless, insipid.

Badge. A distinctive mark of office or service worn conspicuously on the dress, often the coat of arms of the principal under whom the person wearing the badge is placed. Du. busse, stadt-wapen, spinther, monile quod in humeris tabularii et caduceatores ferunt.—Kil. Bage or bagge of armys—banidium.—Pr. Pm. Perhaps the earliest introduction of a badge would be the red cross sewed on their shoulders by the crusaders as a token of their calling.

But on his breast a bloody cross he wore,
The dear resemblance of his absent Lord,
For whose sweet sake that glorious badge he wore.—F. Q.

Crucem assumere dicebantur (says Ducange) qui ad sacra bella profecturi Crucis symbolum palliis suis assuebant et affigebant in signum votivæ illius expeditionis.—Franci audientes talia eloquia protinus in dextra fecere Cruces suere scapula.

The sign of the cross, then, was in the first instance, “assumentum,” a patch, botch, or bodge; boetsen, interpolare, ornare, ang. botche, bodge.—Kil. G. batz, batze, botzen, a dab or lump of something soft, a coarse patch—Sanders; Bav. patschen, to strike with something flat, as the hand, to dabble or paddle in the wet. G. batzen, to dabble, to patch.—Sanders. The radical notion of patch, badge, will thus be something fastened on, as a dab of mud thrown against a wall and sticking there. Hence we find badged used by Shakespeare in the sense of dabbled.

Their hands and faces were all badged with blood.—Macbeth.

Badger. This word is used in two senses, apparently distinct, viz. in that of a corn-dealer, or carrier, one who bought up corn in the market for the purpose of selling it in other places; and secondly, as the name of the quadruped so called. Now we have in Fr. bladier, a corn-dealer (marchand de grain qui approvisionne les marchés à dos de mulets—Hécart), the diminutive of which (according to the analogy of bledier, blaiier, belonging to corn, blairie, terre de blairie, corn country) would be blaireau, the actual designation of the quadruped badger in the same language, which would thus signify a little corn-dealer, in allusion doubtless to some of the habits of that animal, with which the spread of cultivation has made us little familiar.

But further, there can be little doubt that E. badger, whether in the sense of a corn-dealer or of the quadruped, is directly descended from the Fr. bladier, the corrupt pronunciation of which, in analogy with soldier, solger, sodger, would be bladger; and though the omission of the l in such a case is a somewhat unfamiliar change, yet many instances may be given of synonyms differing only in the preservation (or insertion as the case may be) or omission of an l after an initial b or p. Thus Du. baffen and blaffen, to bark; paveien and plaveien, to pave; pattijn and plattijn, a skait or patten; butse and blutse, a bruise, boil; E. botch, or blotch; babber-lipped, P. P., and blabber-lipped, having large ungainly lips; fagged, tired, from flagged, Fr. betie and blette, beets; Berri, batte de pluie, a pelting shower of rain, Sc. a blad o' weet; Rouchi, basser, Fr. blasser, to foment.

To Baffle. Formerly written bafful. The French has bafouer, to hoodwink, deceive, baffle, disgrace, handle basely in terms, give reproachful words unto; beffler, to deceive, mock, or gull with fair words.—Cotgr. Of these the former may be actually borrowed from the E. bafful, which seems to have been applied to a definite mode of disgracing a man, indicated by Hall as in use among the Scots.

And furthermore the erle bad the herauld to say to his master, that if he for his part kept not his appointment, then he was content; that the Scots should bafful him, which is a great reproach among the Scots, and is used when a man is openly perjured, and then they make of him an image painted reversed with the heels upward, with his name, wondering, crying and blowing out of [on ?] him with horns in the most spiteful manner they can. In token that he is to be exiled the company of all good creatures.

Again, in the F. Q.

First he his beard did shave and foully shent,
Then from him reft his shield, and it r'enverst
And blotted out his arms with falshood blent,
And himself baffuld, and his armes unherst,
And broke his sword in twayn and all his armour sperst.

Now the Sc. has bauch, baugh, baach (ch guttural), repulsive to the taste, bad, sorry, ineffective. A bauch tradesman, a sorry tradesman;

Without estate

A youth, though sprung from kings, looks baugh and blate. —

Ramsay in Jam.

Beauty but bounty's but bauch. Beauty without goodness is good for nothing.

To bauchle, bachle, bashle, is then, to distort, to misuse; to bauchle shoon, to tread them awry; a bauchle, an old shoe, whatever is treated with contempt or derision.

One who is set up as the butt of a company or a laughing-stock is said to be made a bauchle of; to bauchle, to treat contemptuously, to vilify.

Wallace lay still quhill forty dayis was gayn
 And fyve atour, bot perance saw he nayn
 Baſtail till haiff, as thair promyſſ was maid.
 He girt display again his baner braid;
 Rapreiffyt Edward rycht gretlye of this thing,
Bawchyllyt his seyll, blew out on that fals king
 As a tyrand; turnd bak and tuk his gait.

If this passage be compared with the extract from Hall, it will be seen that the affront put by Wallace on the king's seal in token of his having broken his word was an example of the practice which Hall tells us was used in Scotland under the name of baffulling, the guttural ch being represented in English by an f, as in many other cases. The G. has bafel, bofel, pofel, synonymous with Sc. bauchle, spoiled goods, refuse, trash. — Küttn; verbafeln, to make a bafel of, to bauchle.—Sanders. The origin as well of the Sc. as of the G. term is, I believe, the interjection, Faugh! Baw! Pah! Pooh! Fr. Bah! Pooah! Sp. Baf! all of which are representations of the strong expiration accompanied by a projection of the lips, by which we instinctively defend ourselves against a bad smell, and are consequently in the first instance expressive of physical disgust, and then of contempt.

Bufa, the despising blast of the mouth that we call shirping.—

Way in v. Chyrp.

Hence also Port. bafó, breath; Prov. O. Sp. bafa, mockery, jest; Sp. befar, It. béffare, to jeer; Fr. befler, to mock. From the notion of mocking to that of frustrating the efforts of any one, in which the E. baffle is now used, is an easy transition, as shown in other instances; Sp. burlar, to mock, scoff, gibe, also to frustrate one's views, destroy one's hopes.—Neumann.

The Sp. befar, to jeer, make a lip, laugh at; also (of horses) move the lips and catch at the chain of the bit, would look like a derivation from befo, the lip of a horse; and the supposition is supported by the Genoese fa beffe, to pout, make a mouth at, point the lips at one, Fr. faire la lippe; but there is no real repugnancy in these derivations, the word befo being itself derived from a representation of the sound made by an expiration through the projected lips.

Bag. The etymology of this word is perplexed by similarity to forms probably having no true relation to it; W. baich, a burden, a load; Bret. beac'h, bec'h, bundle, burden, load, and, figuratively, difficulty; O. Fr. bagues, goods; vie et bagues sauves, with life and property; Icel. baggi, a load, a bundle, böggull, a bundle.

The true connexion is with Gael. balg, bolg, bag, a leather bag, wallet, quiver, belly, blister; Goth. balgs, a leathern case, a skin; G. balg, the skin of an animal stripped off whole, husk, peel; Lomb. baga, a wine skin. See Belly, Bulge, Baggage.

Baggage. Fr. bagage, from O. Fr. bagues, goods, signifying the collective goods of an army, and not the collective bags or packages, as we are inclined at first to suppose.

The origin is the Icel. baugr, AS. beag, a ring of silver or gold, which was used as a type of value, a ring being the simplest and most convenient form in which the precious metals could be made up or worn.

AS. beah-gyfa, a giver of jewels, a munificent rewarder. From the Danes doubtless it passed into France, giving rise to the Fr. bague, a valuable, and finally a portable possession of any kind.

Un riche et puissant homme qui—entre ses riches bagues et innombrables trésors se tenoit plus enrichy d'une belle fillé.—Cent. Nouv. Nouv. II.

En la fin monta en sa chambre et illec prepara et ordonna les bagues et joyaux qu'elle avoit attains et mis dehors pour festoier son amoureux.—Ibid. c.

Nous composons par traictié fait avecques ceulx la disme que devons en toile, en drap, en coussins, en banquiers et en autres telles bagues.—Ibid. xxxii.

Bail.—Bailiff. The Lat. bajulus, a bearer, was applied in later times to a nurse, viz. as carrying the child about. Mid. Lat. bajula, It. bália. Next it was applied to the tutor or governor of the children, probably in the first instance to the foster-father.

Alii bajuli, i. e. servuli, vel nutritores—quia consueverint nutrire filios et familias dominorum.—Vitalis de Reb. Aragon. in Ducange.

When the child under the care of the Bajulus was of royal rank, the tutor became a man of great consequence, and the μεγας βαιουλος was one of the chief officers of state at Constantinople.

The name was also applied to the tutor of a woman or a minor. Thus the husband became the Bajulus uxoris, and the name was gradually extended to any one who took care of the rights or person of another. In this sense is to be understood the ordinary E. expression of giving bail, the person who gives bail being supposed to have the custody of him whom he bails. From bajulus was formed It. bailo, bailivo (bajulivus); Fr. bail, bailli, E. bail, bailiff. The bail are persons who constitute themselves tutors of the person charged, and engage to produce him when required.

Tutores vel bajuli respondeant pro pupillis.—Usatici Barcinonenses in Duc.

Et le roi l'a reçue en son hommage et le duc son baron comme bail d'elle.—Chron. Flandr. in Duc.

Et mitto illum (filium) et omnem meam terram et meum honorem et meos viros quæ Deus mihi dedit in bajulia de Deo et de suis sanctis, &c. Ut sint in bajoliam Dei et de Sanctâ Mariâ, &c.—Testament. Regis Arragon. A. D. 1099, in Duc.

The Fr. bailler, to hand over, from bajulare, in the sense of making one a bail or keeper of the thing handed over, giving it into his bail or control.

Finally, every one to whom power was intrusted to execute not on his own behalf was called a bailiff, bajulius or ballivus, from the regent of the empire (as we find in the case of Henry of Flanders: "Principes, barones et milites exercitus me imperii Ballivum elegerunt") to the humble bailiff in husbandry who has the care of a farm, or the officer who executes the writs of a sheriff.

Bail, 2. Bail is also used in the sense of post or bar. The bails were the advanced posts set up outside the solid defences of a town. Fr. baille, barrier, advanced gate of a city, palisade, barricade.—Roquefort. It is probably the same word as paling or pale. Fr. balises, finger-posts, posts stuck up in a river to mark the passage. Balle, barrière—Hecart; Bale, poste, retrauchement; revenir à ses bales, to return to one's post, at the game of puss in the corner, or cricket. Hence the bails at cricket, properly the wickets themselves, but now the little sticks at the top.

Bait. See Abet.

Baize. Coarse woollen cloth. Formerly bayes. Du. baey, baai, Fr. baye.

To Bake. To dress or cook by dry heat; to cook in an oven. Bohem. pek, heat; peku, pěcy, to bake, roast, &c.; pec, an oven; pecene, roast meat; pekar, a baker; Pol. piec, a stove; pieć, to bake, to roast, to parch, to burn; pieczywo, a batch, an oven-full; piekarz, a baker.

Isl. baka, to warm; Kongur bakade sier vid elld, the King warmed himself at the fire.—Heimskr. Prov. E. to beak, beke, to bask, to warm oneself; Du. zig bakeren, Pl. D. bäckern, to warm oneself. G. bähen, to heat, semmeln bähen, to toast bread; kranke glieder bähen, to foment a limb. Holz bähen, to beath wood, to heat wood for the purpose of making it set in a certain form. Gr. $\beta\omega$, calefacere, Lat. Bajæ, warm baths. See Bath. The root is common to the Finnish class of languages. Lap. pak, paka, heat; pakes, to melt with heat; pakestet, to be hot, to bask; paketet, to heat, make hot.

Balance. Lat. lanx, a dish, the scale of a balance; bilanx, the implement for weighing, composed of two dishes or scales hanging from a beam supported in the middle. It. bilancia, Sp. balanza, Prov. balans, balanza, Fr. balance.

The change from i to a may be through the influence of the second a, or it may be from a false reference to the O. Fr. baler, baloier, Venet. balare, to move up and down, to see-saw.

Balcony.—Barbican. From the Persian bâla khaneh, upper chamber. An open chamber over the gate in the Persian caravanserais is still called by that name, according to Rich. The term was then applied to the projecting platform from which such a chamber looked down upon the outside.

As this balcony over the gateway is precisely the position of the barbican in a castle wall, it is probable that the latter name, in Mid. Lat. barbacana, is only another corruption of the same word which gives us balcony. If we compare the various modes of writing the word from whence our belfry is derived, and especially the two, belfredum, bertefredum, we shall find nothing startling in the conversion of bala khaneh into barba-cana by persons by whom the elements of the word were not understood.

A barbican was a defence before a gate, originally, doubtless, a mere projecting window from whence the entrance could be defended, or the persons approaching submitted to inspection, the word being probably brought from the East by the Crusaders. Balcony is a much later introduction, and has accordingly better preserved the true form of the original.

Bald. Formerly written balled, ballid, whence Richardson explains it as if it signified made round and smooth like a ball. The root, however, is too widely spread for such an explanation. Finn. Esthon. paljas, naked, bare, bald; Lap. puoljas, bare of trees; Dan. bældet, unfledged.

Besides signifying void of hair, bald is used in the sense of having a white mark on the face, as in the case of the common sign of the bald-faced stag, and the bald-coot, a black bird with a conspicuous excrescence of white skin above its beak, G. bläss-ente, bläss-huhn, also the bald-kite, or buzzard. Fr. cheval belle-face.—Nordfoss in v. blåsig. Bald-faced, white-faced.—Halliwell. The real identity of the word bald in the two senses is witnessed by the analogy of the Slavonic languages. Pol. Bohem. lysy, bald, marked with a white streak; Pol. lysina, Bohem. lysyna, a bald pate, and also a white mark on the face. Thus the Fin. pajjas, bald, is identified with Gr. βαλιος, φαλιος, bald-faced, having a white streak on the face.—Du. blesse, a blaze on the forehead, a bald forehead, bles, bald.—Kil. Gael. ball, a spot or mark; Bret. bal, a white mark on an animal's face, or the animal itself, whence the common name Ball for a cart-horse in England. As the common word for a mark of this kind is in E. blaze, Sw. blaesa, Dan. blis, the term bal, in the same sense, may probably be identical with Icel. bal, a blaze, a funeral pile.—Gudm. the white mark on a dark ground being compared to a flame, Gael. maol, bald; maolan, a beacon. Fin. pallaa, to burn, palo, burning, pajjas, bald. A bald head is remarkable as smooth and shining.

His head was balled, and shone as any glass.—Chaucer.

Balderdash. Idle, senseless talk; to balder, to use coarse language.—Halliwell. W. baldorddi, to babble, prate, or talk idly. Du. balderen, to bawl, make an outcry, to roar, said of the roar of cannon, cry of an elephant, &c.; bolderen, bulderen, blaterare, debacchari, minari.—Kil. Icel. buldra, blaterare, Dan. buldre, to make a loud noise, as thunder, the rolling of a waggon, &c.; also to scold, to make a disturbance. The final syllable seems to express a continuation of the same idea; prov. Dan. dask, chatter, talk; døv-dask, chatter fit to deave one. Bav. dütsch, noise of a blow with the open hand; dätschen, to clap, smack, tattle; Gael. ballart, noisy boasting, clamour; ballartaich, ballardaich, a loud noise, shouting, hooting. The same termination in like manner expresses continuance of noise in plabartaich, a continued noise of waves gently beating on the shore, unintelligible talk; clapartaich, a clapping or flapping of wings. From the same analogy, which causes so many words expressive of the plashing or motion of water to be applied to rapid or confused talking, balderdash is used to signify washy drink, weak liquor.

Bale. 1. Grief, trouble, sorrow. AS. bealo, gen. bealwoes, torment, destruction, wickedness; Goth. balva-vesei, wickedness; bal-veins, torment; Icel. böl, calamity, misery; Du. bal-daed, malefactum, maleficium. Pol. bol, ache, pain; boleč, Bohem. boleti, to ail, to ache, to grieve; bolawy, sick, ill. W. ball, a plague, a pestilence. Perhaps Icel. bola, a bubble, blister, a boil, may exhibit the original development of the signification, a boil or blain being taken as the type of sickness, pain, and evil in general. Russ. bolyat', to be ill, to grieve; boly-atshka, a pustule.

2. A package of goods. Sw. bal; It. balla; Fr. balle, bal, a ball or pack, i. e. goods packed up into a round or compact mass. See Ball.

To Bale out water. Sw. balja, Dan. balle, Du. baalie, Bret bañ; Gael. ballan, a pail or tub; G. balge, a washing-tub, perhaps from balg, a skin, a water-skin being the earliest vessel for holding water.

Hence Dan. balle, Du. baalien, to empty out water with a bowl or pail, to bale out. In like manner Fr. baqueter, in the same sense, from baquet, a pail.

To Balk. To balk is to pass over in plowing, to leave a thing unaccomplished, to disappoint, skip over.

For so well no man halt the plow
That it ne balketh other while,
Ne so well can no man afle
His tonge that stantyme in jape
Him may som light word ourescape.—Göwer in R.

A balk, then, is the separation between one division of a thing and another, the partition over which you must skip in passing from one division to the other, and specially a ridge of green sward left by design between different occupancies in a common field.—Halliwell. Icel. balkr, the division between the stalls in a cow-house. Sw. balka, to partition off.

This third the merry Diazome we call
 A border city these two coasts removing,
 Which like a balk with his cross-built wall,
 Disparts the terms of anger and of loving.—Fletcher in R.

Then, as it appears, from the resemblance in shape to a balk in a ploughed field, the term is applied to a hewn beam, Sw. balk, Dan. biælke, Picard. baque; and in French, for the like reason, to a course of bricks, bauche; ébaucher, to rough-hew, to hew into the form of a beam. The balks are the beams of which the roof is composed.

His own hand than made ladders three
 To climb by the ranges of the stalkes
 Unto the tubbes honging in the balkes.—Chaucer.

A hay-loft is provincially termed the balks—(Halliwell), because situated among the rafters. Hence also probably the Ital. balco, or palco, a scaffold; a loft-like erection supported upon beams.

We cannot doubt that balk is identical with It. valcare, valicare, varcare, to pass over, which Diez would derive from Lat. varicare, to stride; but it is plain that balk cannot be derived from valcare, while the Italian word might easily have arisen from a Gothic source.

Ball.—Ballad.—Ballet. It. ballare, to dance, from the more general notion of moving up and down. Mid. Lat. ballare, huc et illuc inclinare, vacillare.—Ugutio in Duc. Venet. ballare, to rock, to see-saw. O. Fr. baler, baloier, to wave, to move, to stir; baler des mains, plaudere manibus (Dict. Etym.), as to dance was plaudere pedibus.

Job ne fut cokes (a kex or reed) ne rosiau
 Qui au vent se tourne et baloie.

It. ballare, to shake or jog, to dance. Hence, ballo, a dance, a ball. Ballata, a dance, also a song sung in dancing (perhaps in the interval of dancing), a ballad. Fr. ballet, a scene acted in dancing, the ballet of the theatres.

It is probably an old Celtic word. Bret. baléa, to walk, balé, the act of walking, or movement of one who walks.

Ball.—Balloon.—Ballot. It. balla, palla, Sp. bala, Fr. balle, a ball, of which balloon is the augmentative, ballot, a little ball, the diminutive. Another form of the diminutive gives Fr. pelotte, a hand-ball, peloton, a clue of thread, &c.; E. pellet, a small ball.

With It. palla must be classed Lat. pila, a ball, and its dim. pilula, a pill. Nor can we separate the forms with the vowel o; Sp. bola, a ball, a bowl, Fr. boule, a ball, and the dim. boulet, a bullet; Du. bol, bolle, a globe or sphere, and specially the head; bolleken, capitulum; bol, bolleken, the bulb of an onion; polle, pol, polleken, the head or top of anything.

Ballast. Dan. bag-lest. The first syllable of this word has given a great deal of trouble. It is explained back by Adeling, because, as he says, the ballast is put in the hinder part of the ship. But the hold is never called the back of the ship. The true explanation is given by the Prov. Dan. bag-læs, the back-load, or comparatively worthless load one brings back from a place with an empty waggon. When a ship discharges, if it fails to obtain a return cargo, it is forced to take in stones or sand, to preserve equilibrium. This is the back-load, or ballast of a ship, and hence the name has been extended to the addition of heavy materials placed at the bottom of an ordinary cargo to keep the balance.

The whole amount carried by the canal lines in 1854 was less than 25,000 tons, and this was chiefly carried as back-loading, for want of other freight.—Report Pennsylv. R. 1854.

Ballast, inutilis sarcinæ.—Kil.

Balluster. Fr. ballustres, ballisters (corruptly bannisters when placed as guard to a staircase), little round and short pillars, ranked on the outside of cloisters, terraces, galleries, &c.—Cotgr. Said to be from balaustia, the flower of the pomegranate, the calyx of which has a double curvature similar to that in which balusters are commonly made. But such rows of small pillars were doubtless in use before that particular form was given to them. The Sp. barauste, from bara or vara, a rod, seems the original form of the word, of which balaustre (and thence the Fr. ballustre) is a corruption, analogous to what is seen in It. bertesca, baltresca, a battlement; Lat. urtica, Venét. oltriga, a nettle.

Sp. baranda, railing around altars, fonts, balconies, &c.; barandado, series of balusters, balustrade; barandilla, a small balustrade, small railing.

Balm, Balsam. Fr. baume, from Lat. balsamum, Gr. βαλσαμον, a fragrant gum.

Baltic. The Baltic sea, mare Balticum. In O. Sw. called Bælt, as two of the entrances are still called the Great and Little Belt. The authorities are not agreed as to the grounds on which the name is given.

To Bam. To make fun of a person. A bam, a false tale or jeer. Bret. bamein, to enchant, deceive, endormir par des contes. Bamour, enchanter, sorcerer, deceiver.

To Bamboozle, to deceive, make fun of a person.

There are a set of fellows they call banterers and bamboozlers that play such tricks.—Arbuthnot in R.

Sc. bumbazed, puzzled, astonished.

Bumbazed the gudeman glowred a wee

Syne hent the Wallace by the han' ;

“ It's he, it can be nane but he ! ”

The gude wife on her knees had faun.—Jamieson.

Perhaps from bum, to hum, and Du. baesen, delirare—to confuse with noise; verbaesen stupefacere, attonitum reddere. Or bamboozle may be a mixture of bam, and the Du. verbaesen.

To Ban. To proclaim, command, forbid, denounce, curse.

The primitive meaning of the word seems to have been to summons to the army. In the commencement of the feudal times all male inhabitants were in general required to give personal attendance when the king planted his banner in the field, and sent round a notice that his subjects were summoned to join him against the enemy.

He askyt of the Kyng
 Til have the vaward of his batayl,
 Quhatever thai ware wald it assayle,
 That he and his suld have always Quhen that the king suld Banare rays.

Wyntoun, v. 19 15.

Now this calling out of the public force was called bannire in hostem, bannire in exercitum, populum in hostem convocare, bannire exercitum, in Fr. banir l'oust; AS. theodscipe ut abannan. In Layamon we constantly find the expression, he bannode his ferde, he assembled his host. The expression seems to arise from Bann in the sense of standard, flag, ensign (see Banner). The raising of the King's banner marked the place of assembly, and the primitive meaning of bannire was to call the people to the Bann or standard. The term was then applied to summoning on any other public occasion, and thence to any proclamation, whether by way of injunction or forbiddal.

Si quis legibus in utilitatem Regis sive in hoste (to the host or army) sive in reliquam utilitatem bannitus fuerit, etc.—Leg. Ripuar.

Exercitum in auxilium Sisenardi de toto regno Burgundiæ bannire præcepit Fredegarius.—Si quis cum armis bannitus fuerit et non venerit.—Capitul. Car. Mag. A. D. 813.

Se il avenist que le Roy chevauchat a ost bani contre les ennemis de la Croix.—Assises de Jerusalem.

Fece bandire hoste generale per tutto 'l regno.—John Villani in Ducange.

In like manner we find bannire ad placita, ad molendinum, &c., summoning to serve at the Lord's courts, to bring corn to be ground at his mill, &c. Thus the word acquired the sense of proclamation, extant in Sp. and It. bando, and in E. banns of marriage. In a special sense the term was applied to the public denunciation by ecclesiastical authority; Sw. bann, excommunication; bann-lysa, to excommunicate (lysa, to publish); banna, to reprove, to take one to task, to chide, to curse, E. to ban.

In Fr. bandon the signification was somewhat further developed, passing on from proclamation to command, permission, power, authority. A son bandon, at his own discretion. OE. bandon was used in the same sense. See Abandon.

Oncques Pucelle de paraige
N'eut d'aimer tel bandon que j'ai,
Car j'ai de mon père congié
De faire ami et d'être aimée.—R. R.

Never maiden of high birth had such power or freedom of loving as I have.

Les saiges avait et les fols Communément à son bandon.—R. R.

Translated by Chaucer,

Great loos hath Largesse and great prise,
For both the wise folk and unwise
Were wholly to her bandon brought,

i. e. were brought under her power or command..

Band, 1. That with which anything is bound. AS. band, Goth. bandi, Fr. bande, It. banda. From the verb to bind, Goth. bindan, band, bundun. Specially applied to a narrow strip of cloth or similar material for binding or swathing; hence a stripe or streak of different colour or material. In It. banda the term is applied to the strip of anything lying on the edge or shore, a coast, side, region. G. bande, border, margin.

Band, 2. to Bandy. In the next place Band is applied to a troop of soldiers, a number of persons associated for some common purpose. It. Sp. banda, Fr. bande. There is some doubt how this signification has arisen. It seems however to have been developed in the Romance languages, and cannot be explained simply as a body of persons bound together for a certain end. It has plausibly been deduced from Mid. Lat. bannum or bandum, the standard or banner which forms the rallying point of a company of soldiers.

Bandus, says Muratori, Diss. 26, tunc (in the 9th century) nuncupabatur legio a bando, hoc est vexillo.

So in Swiss, fahne, a company, from fahne, the ensign or banner. Sp. bandera is also used in both senses. Fr. enseigne, the colours under which a band or company of footmen serve, also the band or company itself.—Cotgr.

But if this were the true derivation it would be a singular change to the feminine gender in Banda. The real course of development I believe to be as seen in Sp. banda, side, then party, faction, those who side together (bande, parti, ligue—Taboada). Bandear, to form parties, to unite with a band. It. bandare, to side or to bandy (Florio), to bandy being explained in the other part of the dictionary, to follow a faction. To bandy, tener da alcuno, sostener il partito d'alcuno.—Torriano.

Unnumbered as the sands
Of Barca or Cyrene's torrid soil,
Levied to side with warring winds, and poise
Their lighter wings.—Milton in R.

Kings had need beware how they side themselves, and make themselves as of a faction or party, for leagues within the state are ever pernicious to monarchy.—Bacon in R.

Fr. bander, to join in league with others against—Cotgr., se reunir, s'associer, se joindre.—Roquefort. It is in this sense that the word is used by Romeo.

Draw Benvoglio, beat down their weapons:
Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage,
Tibalt, Mercutio, the Prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets.

The prince had forbidden faction fighting. Sp. bandear, to cabal, to foment factions, follow a party.

The name of bandy is given in English to a game in which the players are divided into two sides, each of which tries to drive a wooden ball with bent sticks in opposite directions.

The zodiac is the line: the shooting stars,
Which in an eyebright evening seem to fall,
Are nothing but the balls they lose at bandy.

Brewer, Lingua. in R.

Fr. bander, to drive the ball from side to side at Tennis.

Hence the expression of bandying words, retorting in language like players sending the ball from side to side at bandy or tennis. Diez would explain Sp. bandear, Prov. bandeiar, in the sense of waving like a banner in the wind.

Los estandards drossatz contra 'l vent banoians.

But it is certain that the Sp. bandear, in one of its senses at least, is from banda, a side—to traverse, to penetrate from side to side. Another meaning given by Taboada is “brimbaler, secouer par un branle reitéré,” to shake backwards and forwards, to swing to and fro, from side to side.

Bandita. See Banish.

Bandog. A large dog kept for a guard, and therefore tied up, a band-dog. Du. band-hond, canis vinculis assuetus, et canis pecuarius, pastoralis.—Kil.

To Bandy. See Band, 2.

Bandy. Bandy legs are crooked legs. Fr. bander un arc, to bend a bow, &c.; bandé, bent as a bow.

Bane. Goth. banja, a blow, a wound; OHG. bana, death-blow; Mid. HG. bane, destruction; AS. bana, murderer. Icel. bana, to slay, bana-sott, death sickness, bana-sár, death-wound, &c., ben, a death-wound, now a wheal. Referred by Diefenbach to the root bang, a blow; Icel. banga, banka, to strike. So the verb schlägen, which in G. signifies to strike, becomes in E. to slay. Icel. drepa, to slay, seems identical with E. drub, to beat; vega, to slay, with whack. Compare also Lat. lædere, to hurt, with illidere, collidere, to strike.

To Bang. An imitation of the sound of a blow. Thus we speak of a thing falling bang! upon one. To bang the door, to shut it with a loud noise.

With many a stiff thwack, many a bang,
Hard crab tree and old iron rang.—Hudibras.

Sw. bång, stir, tumult; “med buller och bång,” tumultuous-ly; bångas, to make a stir; banka, to knock, to pummel.

The addition of an initial s gives Sc. spang, a spring; E.

spank, to slap with the open hand, to do a thing with violence, as to go along at a spanking pace.

The Susu, a language of the W. of Africa, has bangbang, to drive in a nail.

To Banish.—Bandit. From Mid. Lat. bannire, bandire, to proclaim, denounce, was formed the O. Fr. compound, for-bannir (bannire foras), to publicly order one out of the realm, and the simple bannir was used in the same sense, whence E. banish.

From the same verb the It. participle bandito signifies one denounced or proclaimed, put under the ban of the law, and hence, in the same way that E. outlaw came to signify a robber, It. banditti acquired the like signification. Forbannitus is used in the Leges Ripuar. in the sense of a pirate.—Diez. The word is in E. so much associated with the notion of a band of robbers, that we are inclined to understand it as signifying persons banded together.

Bannister. See Balluster.

Bank.—Bench. The latter form has come to us from AS. bæncc, the former from Fr. banc, a bench, bank, seat; banc de sable, a sand-bank. It. banco, panca, a bench, a table, a counter. Bantze, a desk. Vocab. de Vaud.

But natheless I took unto our dame

Your wife at home the same gold again

Upon your bench—she wot it well certain

By certain tokens that I can here tell.—Shipman's Tale.

Hence It. banco was used generally for a merchant's counting-house or place of business, whence the mod. E. Bank applied to the place of business of a dealer in money. When a man becomes unable to keep his engagements, his credit is spoken of as cracked or broken, and his bank or place of business being broken up, he becomes a bank-rupt. It. banca-rotta, banca-fallita, a bankrupt merchant, one that hath broken his credit; from Lat. ruptus, broken.

G. bank, a bench, stool, shoal, bank of a river, stratum of earth. The Icel. has two forms of the word, beckr, a bench, raised seat, and bakki, a bank, shore, fog-bank, back of a knife, leading us to infer a derivation from the back, taken as type of a gentle elevation. Thus Dorsum was applied in Latin to a sand-bank; dorsum jugi, the slope of a hill, a rising bank.

Banner. The word Ban or Band was used by the Lombards in the sense of banner, standard.

Vexillum quod Bandum appellant.—Paulus Diaconus in Duc.

In the same place is quoted from the Scoliaſt on Gregory Nazianzen :

Τα καθήμενα παρα Ῥωμαίους σιγνα και βανδα ταυτα ὁ Ἀττικίζων συνθηματα και σημεια καλεῖ.

Hence It. bandiera, Fr. bannière, E. banner.

The origin is in all probability Goth. bandvo, bandva, a sign, token, an intimation made by bending the head or hand. Icel. benda, to bend, to beckon; banda, to make signs; banda hendi, manu annuere. The original object of a standard is to serve as a mark or sign for the troop to rally round, and it was accordingly very generally known by a name having that signification. Icel. merki, Lat. signum, Gr. σημειον, OHG. heri-pauchan, a war-beacon or war signal; Fr. enseigne, a sign or token as well as an ensign or banner; Prov. senh, senhal, a sign; senhal, senheira, banner.

According to Diez the It. bandiera is derived from banda, a band or strip of cloth, and he would seem to derive Goth. bandva, a sign, from the same source, the ensign of a troop being taken as type of a sign in general, which is surely in direct opposition to the natural order of the signification. Besides it must be by no means assumed that the earliest kind of ensign would be a flag or streamer. It is quite as likely that a sculptured symbol, such as the Roman Eagle, would first be taken for that purpose.

Banneret. Fr. banneret. A knight banneret was a higher class of knight, inferior to a baron, privileged to raise their own banner in the field, either in virtue of the number of their retinue, or from having distinguished themselves in battle.

Qui tantæ erant nobilitatis ut eorum quilibet vexilli gauderet insignibus.
—Life of Philip August. in Duc.

They were called in the Latin of the period vexillarii, milites bannarii, bannerarii, bannereti.

Banquet. It. banchetto, dim. of banco, a bench or table; hence a repast, a banquet.

To Banter. To mock or jeer one.

When wit hath any mixture of raillery, it is but calling it banter, and the work is done. This polite word of theirs was first borrowed from the bullies in White Friars, then fell among the footmen, and at last retired to the pedants—but if this bantering, as they call it, be so despicable a thing, &c.
—Swift in R.

Bantling. A child in swaddling clothes, from the bands in which it is wrapped. In Icel. reiflingr, from reifa, to wrap. In a similar manner are formed yearling, an animal a year old, nestling, a young bird still in the nest, &c.

Bar. A rod of any rigid substance. It. barra, Fr. barre, and with an initial s, It. sbarra, OHG. sparro, Sw. sparre, E. spar, a beam or long pole of wood. The meaning seems in the first instance a branch; Celtic bar, summit, top, then branches. Bret. barrou-gwez, branches of a tree (gwez, a tree). Gael. barrach, branches, brushwood. Hence Fr. barrer, to bar or stop the way as with a bar, to hinder; barrière, a barrier or stoppage; barreau, the bar at which a criminal appears in a court of justice, and from which the barrister addresses the court.

Barb. 1. The barb of an arrow is the beard-like jag on the head of an arrow directed backwards for the purpose of hindering the weapon from being drawn out of a wound. Lat. barba, Fr. barbe, a beard. Flesche barbelée, a bearded or barbed arrow.—Cotgr.

2. Fr. Barbe, E. Barb, also signified a Barbary horse. G. Barbar, O. Fr. Barbare.—Leduchat.

3. The term barb was also applied to the trappings of a horse, probably corrupted from Fr. barde, as no corresponding term appears in other languages. Bardé, barbed or trapped as a great horse.—Cotgr.

Barbel. A river fish having a beard at the corners of the mouth. Fr. barbel, barbeau.—Cotgr.

Barber. Fr. barbier, one who dresses the beard.

Barbarous. The original import of the Gr. βαρβαρος, Lat. barbarus, is to designate one whose language we do not understand. Thus Ovid, speaking of himself in Pontus, says, Barbarus hic ego sum quia non intelligor ulli.

Gr. βαρβαροφωνος, speaking a foreign language. Then as the Greeks and Romans attained a higher pitch of civilization than the rest of the ancient world, the word came to signify rude, uncivilized, cruel. The origin of the word is an imitation of the confused sound of voices by a repetition of the syllable bar, bar, in the same way in which the broken sound of waves, of wind, and even of voices is represented by a repetition of the analogous syllable, mur, mur. We speak of the murmur of the waves, or of a crowd of people talking. It may be remarked, indeed, that the noise of voices is constantly represented by the same word as the sound made by the movement of water. Thus the Icel. skola, as well as thvatta, are each used in the sense both of washing or splashing and of talking. The E. twattle, which was formerly used in the sense of tattle, as well as the modern twaddle, to talk much and foolishly, seem frequentative forms of Sw. twatta, to wash. G. waschen, to tattle. In like manner the syllable bar or bor is used in the formation of words intended to represent the sound made by the movement of water or the indistinct noise of talking. The verb borrelen signifies in Du. to bubble or spring up, and in Flanders to vociferate, to make an outcry; Sp. borbotar, borbollar, to boil or bubble up; barbulla, a tumultuous assembly; Port. borbulhar, to bubble or boil; It. borboglio, a rumbling, uproar, quarrel; barbugliare, to stammer, stutter, speak confusedly. Fr. barboter, to toil, dabble in the mud, mumble, mutter; barbeloter, to mutter:

Sainte dame! comme il barbote
 — il barbelote

Ses mots tant qu'on n'y entend rien!—Dict. Etym.

eter, to rant, mutter, murmur; barboter, to mumble or mutter words, also to wallow like a seething-pot.—Cotgr. The syllable bar seems in the same way to be taken as the representative of sound conveying no meaning, in Fr. baragouin, gibberish, jargon, “any rude gibble-gabble or barbarous speech.”—Cotgr. We may also quote Gr. βορβορίζω, to rumble, boil, grumble (Lowndes, Mod. Gr. Lex.); Port. borborinha, a shouting of men.

Barberry. A shrub bearing acid berries. Prov. Fr. barbelin.—Dict. Etym. Barbaryn-frute, barbeum,—tree, barbaris.—Pr. Pm.

Barbican. See Balcony.

Bard. 1. W. bardd; Bret. barz, the name of the poets of the ancient Celts, whose office it was to sing the praises of the great and warlike, and hymns to the gods.

Bardus Gallicé cantator appellatur qui virorum fortium laudes canit.—Festus in Dict. Etym.

Βαρδοὶ μὲν ὑμνηταὶ καὶ ποιηταὶ.—Strabo, Ib.

Et Bardi quidem fortia virorum illustrium facta heroicis composita versibus cum dulcibus lyræ modulis cantârunt.—Lucan, Ib.

Hence in poetic language Bard is used for poet.

2. Sp. barda, horse armour covering the front, back, and flanks. Applied in E. also to the ornamental trappings of horses on occasions of state.

When immediately on the other part came in the fore eight knights ready armed, their basses and bards of their horses green satin embroidered with fresh devices of bramble bushes of fine gold curiously wrought, powdered all over.—Hall in R.

Fr. bardes, barbes or trappings for horses of service or of show. Barder, to barbe or trap horses, also to bind or tie across. Barde, a long saddle for an ass or mule, made only of coarse canvass stuffed with flocks. Bardeau, a shingle or small board, such as houses are covered with. Bardelle, a bardelle, the quilted or canvass saddle wherewith colts are backed.—Cotgr. Sp. barda, coping of straw or brushwood for the protection of a mud wall; albarda, a pack-saddle, broad slice of bacon with which fowls are covered when they are roasted; albardilla, small pack-saddle, coping, border of a garden bed. The general notion seems that of a covering or protection, and if the word be from a Gothic source we should refer it to Icel. bard, brim, skirt, border, ala, axilla. Hattbard, the flap of a hat; skialldar-bard, the edge of a shield; hval-bard, the layers of whalebone that hang from the roof of a whale's mouth. But Sp. albarda looks like an Arabic derivation; Arab. al-barda'ah, saddle-cloth.—Diez.

Bare. Exposed to view, open, uncovered, unqualified. G. baar, bar, Icel. ber; G. baares geld, ready money. From baren, to bear, according to Schwenk, because what is borne is made conspicuous. It must be admitted that the Icel. bera is used in several idiomatic expressions, which would seem to countenance the foregoing derivation. Thar bar à, there it stands up, is plain to see. Honum barst konungr i drauma, the king appeared to him in a dream. The E. bear is used somewhat in the same sense in the expression to bear witness, to make it manifest, to press it on the senses of the audience.

The origin may perhaps be preserved in the Fris. baria, to cry aloud, baer, clear—Wiarda; baria, to call one to justice; bare, accusation, complaint.

Bargain. O. Fr. barguigner, to chaffer, bargain, or more properly (says Cotgr.) to wrangle, haggle, brabble in the making of a bargain. The proper meaning of the word is contest, debate, and it was frequently used in OE. and Sc. in the sense of fight, skirmish.

And mony tymys ische thai wald
 And bargame at the barraiss hald,
 And wound thair fayis oft and sla.—Barbour in Jam.
 Ha lugeing land, battal thou us portendis,
 Quod my father Anchises, for as weill kend is,

Horsis are dressit for the bargane fele syis,
Were and debait thyr stedis signifyis.—D. V. in Jam.

We have seen under Barbarous that the syllable bar was used in the construction of words expressing the confused noise of voices, sounding indistinct either from the language not being understood, or from distance or simultaneous utterance. Hence it has acquired the character of a root signifying confusion, contest, dispute, giving rise to It. baruffa, fray, altercation, dispute; Prov. baralha, trouble, dispute; Port. baralhar, Sp. barajar, to shuffle, entangle, put to confusion, dispute, quarrel; It. sbaragliare, to put to rout; Port. barafunda, Sp. barahunda, tumult, confusion, disorder; Port. barafustar, to strive, struggle; It. baratta, strife, squabble, dispute; barare, to cheat, barattare, to rout, to cheat, also to exchange, to chop, whence E. barter, It. baratiere, a deceiver, cozenor, cheat; E. barratry, a term applied to different kinds of fraudulent proceeding; barretor, one who stirs up strife. Nor is the root confined to the Romance tongues; Lith. barti, to scold; barnis, strife, quarrel; Icel. baratta, strife, contest; bardagi, battle.

As Fr. baragouin is used to represent the confused sound of people speaking a language not understood by the hearer, the verb barguigner signifies to wrangle, haggle, chaffer, bargain.—Cot.

Barge.—Bark. 1. These words seem mere varieties of pronunciation of a term common to all the Romance as well as Teutonic and Scandinavian tongues. Prov. barca, barja. O. Fr. barge, Du. barsie, O. Sw. bårs, a boat belonging to a larger ship.

Barca est quæ cuncta navis commercia ad littus portat.—Isidore in Rayn. Naus en mar quant a perdu sa barja.—Ibid. Sigurdr let taka tua skip-bata er barker ero kallathir.—Ihre.

The origin is probably the Icel. barki, the throat, then the bows or prow of a ship, pectus navis, and hence probably (by a metaphor as in the case of Lat. puppis) barker came to be applied to the entire ship.

Bark. 2. The outer rind of a tree; any hard crust growing over anything. Icel. börkr; at barka, to skin over; barkandi, astringent.

To Bark. AS. beorcan, from an imitation of the sound. Hence probably Icel. barki, the throat.

Barley. The Goth. adj. barizeins indicates a noun, baris, barley; AS. bere. The E. barley seems derived from W. barllys, which might be explained bread-plant, from bara, bread, and llys, a plant.

Barm. 1. Yeast, the slimy substance formed in the brewing of beer. AS. beorm, G. berm, Sw. berma. Dan. bærme, the dregs of oil, wine, beer.

2. A lap, bosom. See Brim.

Barn. AS. berern, bærn, commonly explained from bere, barley, and ern, a place, a receptacle for barley or corn, as bæces-ern, a baking place or oven, lihtes-ern, a lantern. (Ihre. v. arn.) But probably berern is merely a misspelling, and the word is simply the Bret. bern, a heap. Acervus, bern; Gl. Cornub. Zeuss. So Icel. hladi, a heap, a stack, hlada, a barn. Du. baerm, berm, a heap; berm hoys, meta fæni.—Kil. Swab. baarn, barn, hay-loft, corn-shed, barn. Prov. Dan. baaring, baaren, baarm, a load, so much as a man can bear or carry at once.

Barnacle. A conical shell fixed to the rocks within the wash of the tide. Named from the cap-like shape of the shell. Manx bayrn, a cap; barnagh, a limpet, a shell of the same conical shape with barnacles. Gaël. bairneach, barnacles, limpets; W. brenig, limpets.

Barnacles. Spectacles, also irons put on the noses of horses to make them stand quiet.—Bailey. Probably the first of these meanings is the original. Limousin bourgna, to squint, half shut the eye, look through the corner of the eye; Wallon. boirgni, to look through one eye in aiming. Lang. borni, blind; bornikel, one who sees with difficulty, who half shuts his eyes, has weak eyes; borniques, spectacles.—Vocab. de Berri. As these were originally made to hold on by pinching the nose, the term might naturally be applied to a horse's twitch. In like manner I should be inclined to explain the It. briglia, a bridle, whose origin is unknown, from G. brillen, spectacles. Camus, bernac.—Vocab. in National Antiquities.

Baron. It. barone, Sp. varon, Prov. bar (acc. baró), O. Fr. ber (acc. baron), Fr. baron. Originally man, husband. Prov. "Lo bar non es creat per la femna mas la femna per lo baró." The man was not created for the woman, but the woman for the man. Hence manly, courageous. In the sense of man, in the Leg. Rip.

Tam baronem quam feminam. Barum vel feminam.—Leg. Alam.

In the Salic Law it signifies free born; in the capitularies of Charles the Bald barones are the nobles or vassals of the crown.

Baro, gravis et authenticus vir,—John de Garlandia,—A. D. 1040.

In our own law it was used for married man, Baron and femme, man and wife.

We have not much light on the precise formation of the word, which would seem to be radically the same with Lat. vir, Goth. vair, AS. wer, W. gwr, Gael. fear, a man.

Baronet. The feudal tenants next below the degree of a baron were called baronetti, baronuli, baronculi, baroncelli, but as the same class of tenants were also termed bannerets, the two names, from their resemblance, were sometimes confounded, and in several instances, where baronetti is written in the printed copies, Spelman found bannereti in the MS. rolls of Parliament. Still he shows conclusively, by early examples, that baronettus is not a mere corruption of banneretus, but was used in the sense of a lesser Baron.

Barunculus—a baronet.—Nominale of the 15th Cent. in Nat. Antiq.

It was not until the time of James I. that the baronets were established as a formal order in the state.

Barrack. Originally a hut made of the branches of trees. Gael. barrach, brushwood, branches, whence barrachad, a hut or booth.

Before the gates of Bari he lodged in a miserable hut or barrack, composed of dry branches and thatched with straw.—Gibbon.

It should be observed that, whenever soldiers' barracks are mentioned, the word is always used in the plural number, pointing to a time when the soldiers' lodgings were a collection of huts.

Barragan. A coarse kind of linen cloth. Baragant, Dutch grogeran.—Cotgr. Irish barrach, tow; Manx barragh, tow, the shorts of lint, cloth made of tow.—Cregeen.

Barratry.—Barrator. See Barter.

Barrel. It. barile, Sp. barril, barrila, Fr. barrique, a wooden vessel made of bars or staves, but whether this be the true derivation may be doubtful.

Barren. Bret. brec'han; O. Fr. brehaigne, baraigne; Picard. breine; Du. braeck, sterilis, semen non accipiens; braeckland, uncultivated, fallow.—Kil.

Barricade. Formed from Fr. barre, a bar; as cavalcade, from cavallo, a horse; and not from Fr. barrique, a barrel, as if it signified an impromptu barrier composed of barrels filled with earth. It is hard to separate barricade from Fr. barri, an obstruction, fortification, barrier.

Barrier. See Bar.

Barrister. The advocate who pleads at the Bar of a court of Justice. See Bar.

Barrow. 1. An implement for carrying. AS. berewe, from beran, to carry. It. bara, a litter, a biq, or implement for carrying a dead body. G. bahre, a barrow, todtenbahre, or simply bahre, a bier. This word introduced into Fr. became bière, perhaps through Prov. bera, whence E. bier, alongside of barrow.

Barrow. 2. A mound either of stones or earth over the graves of warriors and nobles, especially those killed in battle, as the barrow at Dunmail-raise in Westmoreland. AS. beorg, beorh, a hill, mound, rampart, heap, tomb, sepulchre, from beorgan, OE. berwen, to shelter, cover.

Worhton mid stanum anne steapne beork him ofer. They made with stones a steep mound over him.—Joshua vii. 26.

The OE. bear, a tomb, is wholly distinct, being identical with bier, applied to a permanent instead of a transitory receptacle of the corpse.

Barrow-hog. AS. bearg; Bohem. braw, a castrated hog; Russ. borov', a boar.

Barter. Barter or trafficking by exchange of goods seems like bargain, to have been named from the haggling and wrangling with which the bargain is conducted. See Barbarous and Bargain for the manner in which the syllable bar acquires the force of a root signifying confused noise, squabble, tumult. From this root were formed words in all the Romance languages, signifying, in the first instance, noisy contention, strife, dispute, then trafficking for profit, then cheating, overreaching, unrighteous gain.

Al is dai, n' is ther no night
Ther n' is baret nother strif.—Hickes in Rich.

They run like Bcdlem barreters into the street.—Hollinshead in Do.

Noble fathers, I am such a person whom ye knowe to have been a common baratour and thefe by a long space of yeares.—Elyot in Do.

O. Fr. bareter, to deceive, lie, cog, foist in bargaining, to cheat, beguile, also to barter, truck, exchange.—Cotgr. Sp. baratar, to truck, exchange; baratear, to bargain; barateria, fraud, cheating, and especially fraud committed by the master of a ship with respect to the goods committed to him.

Baratry is when the master of a ship cheats the owners or insurers, by imbezbling their goods or running away with the ship.—Bailey.

But according to Blackstone barratry consists in the offence of stirring up quarrels and suits between parties. In Scotland, again, the term is applied to the simony of clergymen going abroad to purchase benefices from the see of Rome.—Jamieson.

Barth. See Berth.

Bartizan. See Brattice.

Barton. A court-yard, also the demesne lands of a manor, the manor-house itself, the outhouses and yards.—Halliwell. AS. beretun, beortun, bere wic, a court-yard, corn-farm, from bere, barley, and tun, inclosure, or wic, dwelling.—Bosworth.

Base. It. basso, Fr. bas, low, mean; Sp. baxo; W. and Bret. bás, shallow, low, flat. The original meaning, according to Diez, would be pressed down, thick. “Bassus, crassus, pinguis.”—Gl. Isidore. “Bassus, curtus, humilis.”—Papias. “Ele a basses hanches et basses jambes.”

Basilisk. Gr. βασιλίσκος, from βασιλευς, a king. A fabulous serpent, said to kill those that look upon it.

There is not one that looketh upon his eyes, but he dieth presently. The like property hath the basilisk. A white spot or star it carieth on the head and settith it out like a coronet or diadem. If he but liiss no other serpent dare come near.—Holland’s Pliny in Rich.

Late sibi submovet omne

Vulgus et in vacuâ regnat Basiliscus arenâ.—Lucan.

Probably from reports of the cobra capel, which sets up its hood when angry, as the diadem of the basilisk.

To Bask. To heat oneself in the sun or before a fire. Icel. baka sig vid elld, to warm oneself at the fire; Prov. E. to beak, to bask in the heat; Pl. D. sich bakern, to bask, to warm oneself. It will subsequently be argued that the verb bada, to bathe, is another form of the same root, signifying originally to heat. Now the meaning of bask is essentially reflective, and it is probable that, like E. busk, to betake oneself, to get ready, from Icel. at buasc, for at bua sig, to bask may be from a form at bakasc, or badasc, for baka sig, or bada sig. Lap. bakestet or pakestet, to bask. See Bake, Batho.

Basket. W. basg, netting, plaiting of splinters; basged, basgod, a basket; masg, a mesh, lattice-work. It is mentioned as a British word by Martial.

Barbara de pictis veni bascauda Britannis,

Sed me jam mavult dicere Roma suam.

Bason. Fr. bassin, It. bacino, the diminutive of the word corresponding to E. back, signifying a wide open vessel. See Back.

Bass. It. basso, the low part of the scale in music.

Lend me your hands, lift me above Parnassus,
With your loud trebles help my lowly bassus.

Sylvester's Dubartas.

Bassoon. It. bassone, an augmentation of basso; an instrument of a very low note.

Bast.—Bass. Du. bast, bark, peel, husk; bast van koren, bran, the thin skin which covers the grain; Dan. Swed. Ger. bast, the inner bark of the lime-tree beaten out and made into a material for mats and other coarse fabrics. Dan. bast-maatte, bass-matting; bast-reb, a bass rope. Du. bast, a halter, rope for hanging, OE. baste.

Bot ye salle take a stalworthe baste
And binde my handes behind me faste.—MS. Halliwell.

Dan. baste, Sw. basta, to bind, commonly joined with the word binda, of the same sense. Sw. at basta og binda, to bind hand and foot. Dan. lægge een i baand og bast, to put one in fetters; and it is remarkable that the same expression is found in Turkish; besst, a tying, binding, besst-u-bendet, to bind. Lap. baste, the hoops of a cask.

Bastard. Apparently of Celtic origin, from Gael. baos, lust, fornication. O. Fr. filz de bast, filz de bas.

He was begetin o' bast, God it wot.—Arthur and Merlin.

Sir Richard, iz le rei of wan we spake bevore
Gentilman was inow thei he were a bast ibore.—RG. 516.

This man was son to John of Gaunt, descended of an honorable lineage, but born in baste, more noble in blood than notable in learning.—Hall in Halliwell.

So Turk. chasa, fornication, chasa ogli (ogli=son), a bastard.—F. Newman. Du. verbasteren, to degenerate.

To Baste. 1. To stitch, to sew with long stitches for the purpose of keeping the pieces of a garment in shape while it is permanently sewn. It. Sp. basta, a long stitch, preparatory stitching, the stitches of a quilt or mattress. Sp. bastear, embastir, It. imbastire, Fr. bâtir, to baste, to stitch; Fris. Sicamb. besten, leviter consuere.—Kil. OHG. bestan, to patch, as It. imbastire, to baste on a piece of cloth.

Nay, mock not, mock not: the body of your discourse is sometimes guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither.

Much Ado about Nothing.

Derived by Diez from bast, as if that were the substance originally used in stitching, but this is hardly satisfactory.

It seems to me that the sense of stitching, as a preparation for the final sewing of a garment, may naturally have arisen from the notion of preparing, contriving, setting up, which seems to be the general sense of the verb bastire, bastir, in the Romance languages.

Thus we have Sp. bastir, disposer, preparer (Taboada); It. imbastire, to lay the cloth for dinner, to devise or begin a business (Altieri). Fr. bastir, to build, make, frame, erect, raise, set up, also to compose, contrive, devise. Bastir a quelqu'un son roulet, to teach one beforehand what he shall say or do.—Cotgr. Prov. guerra bastir, to set on foot a war; agait bastir, to lay an ambush.—Rayn. Sp. bastimento, victuals, provisions, things prepared for future use, also the basting or preparatory stitching of a garment, stitching of a quilt or mattress. To baste a garment would be to set it up, to put it together, and from this particular kind of stitching the signification would seem to have passed on to embrace stitching in general.

A silver nedil forth I drowe—

And gan this nedill threde anone,

For out of toune me list to gone—

With a threde basting my slevis.—Chaucer. R. R.

—Sitze und beste mir den ernel wider in.—Minnesinger in Schmid.

It is doubtless from the sense of stitching that must be explained the It. basto, imbasto, a packsaddle, pad for the head to carry a weight on; Fr. bast, bât (whence the E. military term of a bat-horse), bastine, a pad or packsaddle, which was originally nothing but a quilted cushion on which to rest the load. Thus Baretta explains Sp. bastear, to pack a saddle with wool, i. e. to quilt or stitch wool into it; and Cotgr. has bastine, a pad, packsaddle, the quilted saddle with which colts are backed.

2. To beat or bang soundly.—Bailey. This word probably preserves the form from whence is derived the Fr. baston, bâton, a stick, an instrument for beating, as well as besteau, the clapper of a bell. Icel. beysta, to beat, to thrash; Dan. böste, to drub, to belabour; Sw. bösta, to thump, to knock. Perhaps in the use of the E. term there is usually an erroneous feeling of its being a metaphor from the notion of basting meat.—To baste one's hide; to give him a sound basting.

—But say, Sir, is it dinner-time? S. Dro. No, Sir, I think the meat wants what I have. Ant. In good time, Sir, what's that? S. Dro. Basting. Ant. Well, Sir, then 'twill be dry. S. Dro. If it be, Sir, I pray you eat none of it. Ant. Your reason? S. Dro. Lest it make you choleric and purchase me another dry basting.—Comedy of Errors in Rich.

The root of E. baste, to beat, and the Scandinavian verbs above cited, is probably a direct imitation of the sound of a blow, parallel with Dan. bask, a slap, a sounding blow, the sound of a blow, and with Pl. D. bats or babs in the same sense. “Bats! gav ik em eenen.” Smack! I gave him one. Hand-batsche, a flat bat for striking the hand. Oor-batsche, a box on the ear. Dan. at baske eens ören, to box one's ears. Irish bütta, a blow, Gael. bat, to beat, Fr. battre, and E. beat, as well as Sv. basa, s. s., all arise from similar imitations, and naturally preserve a general resemblance of radical form.

3. To pour dripping over a joint of meat while roasting, to hinder it from burning. This perhaps may be another application of the Fr. bastir, signifying preparing in general. The verb however does not appear to be used in this particular application in any of the Romance tongues, while the Danish has at baste en steg, explained by Molbech, stripping the thin outer skin off a piece of meat, to let it brown before the fire. As basting was formerly done by rubbing the meat with a piece of bacon at the end of a stick, or by letting the bacon drop over it, the signification may be derived from the sense of beating. Compare Fr. frotter, to rub, to chafe, also to cudgel, thwack, baste, or knock soundly.—Cotgr.

These all bound together in one chain, almost dead with famine and wasted with torments, having had their naked bodies basted or dropped over with burning bacon.—Oldys in Richardson.

Bastinado. Sp. bastonada, a blow with a stick, Sp. Fr. baston. Fr. bastonnade, a cudgelling, bastonner, to cudgel. In English the term is confined to the beating on the soles of the feet with a stick, a favourite punishment of the Turks and Arabs. For the origin of baston see Baste, 2.

Bastion. It. bastia, bastida, bastione, a bastion, a sconce, a blockhouse, a barricado.—Florio. Fr. bastille, bastilde, a fortress or castle furnished with towers, donjon, and ditches; bastion, the fortification termed a bastion or cullion-head.—Cotgr. All from bastir, to build, set up, contrive.

Bat. 1. The winged mammal. Sc. back, bak, bakie-bird; Sw. nattbaka, Dan. afton bakke, the night-back, evening-back. It. vipistrello, the night-bat.—Fl. Bakke, flyinge best, vespertilio.—Pr. Pm. Apparently from blatta, blacta, originally representing the squeak of the animal, and applied, in Lat. blatta, to a moth or nocturnal beetle. For the loss of the l compare badger from bladier.

Mid. Lat. blatta, blacta, batta (lucifuga, vespertilio), vle-dermus. Blactera est sonus vespertilionis. Placta, fledermaussgedon, the cry of a bat.—Def. Sup. to Duc. It will be seen that the form blacta is related in like degree both to bat and bak.

It seems strange to confound under a common name animals so different as a bat and a moth or beetle, on the score of their both flying by night, but the notions of our ancestors on the classification of natural history were very unsettled, and we find the lantern fly of the West Indies spoken of in Cotgrave as a bird.

Cucuye, an admirable bird in Hispaniola, having two eyes in her head and two under her wings, which are double, a greater and a smaller pair, &c.

A case more exactly in point is the application of the name of the owl to a moth, from flying about at the same time of evening, as is provincially used in England (Hal.), and also in Germany; Eule, Eulchen, a moth.—Adelung.

2. A staff, club, or implement for striking. In some parts of England it is the ordinary word for a stick at the present day. A Sussex woman speaks of putting a chung bat, or a dry stick, on the fire. In Suffolk batlins are loppings of trees made up into faggots. Bret. baz, a stick; Gael. bat, a staff, cudgel, bludgeon, and as a verb, to beat, to cudgel. Hung. bot, a stick. The origin of the word is an imitation of the sound of a blow by the syllable bat, the root of E. beat, It. battere, Fr. battre, W. baeddu. Bat, a blow.—Halliwell. The lighter sound of the p in pat adopts the latter syllable to represent a gentle blow, a blow with a light instrument. The imitative nature of the root bat is apparent in Sp. batacazo, baquetazo, the noise made by one in falling.

Batch. A batch of bread is so much as is baked at one time, G. gebäck, gebücker.

To Bate. 1. Fr. abattre, to fell, beat, or break down, quell, allay; Sp. batir, to beat, beat down, lessen, remit, abate.

2. A term in falconry; to flutter with the wings. Fr. battre les ailes.

Bath.—To Bathe. Ital. bada, G. baden, to bathe. The original meaning of the word seems to be to warm, thence to bathe in hot water, and finally to immerse in water generally. Swed. badda sig i solen, to bask in the sun; solen baddar, the sun burns; bad-fisk, fishes basking in the sun; badda vidior, to beathe wood, as it is provincially termed, i. e. to heat it at the fire for the purpose of making it take a certain set. Flem. betten, to foment, to warm.—Kil. The Germ. bähen, to warm, to foment, may probably be another form of the same root. Holz bähen, to warp or beathe wood; brot bähen, to toast bread. Hence probably may be explained the name of Baise, as signifying warm baths, to which that spot owed its celebrity. It is difficult to separate Icel. baka, to heat; baka sig vid elld, to warm oneself at the fire; Prov. E. to beak, Pl. D. sich bakern, Swiss bächelen, to bask, to warm oneself. As the Slavonic pak, heat, undoubtedly exhibits the root of these latter forms, we must suppose that the final k was softened into an h in G. bühen, to which the form baden would correspond in the same way as E. abide, to abie, It. badare, to Fr. beer, bayer, to gape, to look.

To Batten. To thrive, to feed, to become fat. Goth. gabattan, to thrive, to be profited, Icel. batna, to get better, to become convalescent. Du. bat, bet, better, more. See Better.

Batten. In carpenter's language a scantling of wooden stuff from two to four inches broad, and about an inch thick.—Bailey. A batten fence is a fence made by nailing rods of such a nature across uprights. From bat in the sense of rod; perhaps first used adjectivally, bat-en, made of bats, as wood-en, made of wood.

To Batter.—Battery. Battery, a beating, an arrangement for giving blows, is a simple adoption of Fr. batterie, from battre, to beat. From battery was probably formed to batter under the consciousness of the root bat in the sense of blow, whence to batter would be a regular frequentative, signifying to give repeated blows, and would thus seem to be the verb from which battery had been formed in the internal development of the English language.

Batter. Eggs, flour, and milk beat up together.

Battle.—Battalion. It. battere, Fr. battre, to beat; se battre, to fight, whence It. battaglia, Fr. bataille, a battle, also a squadron, a band of armed men arranged for fighting. In OE. also, battle was used in the latter sense.

Scaffaldis, leddris and covering,
Pikkis, howis, and with staff slyng,
To ilk lord and his bataill,

Wes ordanyt, quhar he sald assaill.—Barbour in Jam.

Hence in the augmentative form It. battaglione, a battalion, a main battle, a great squadron.—Florio.

Battlement. It may be doubtful whether an embattled wall, i. e. a wall built with battlements, as well as the word battlement itself, is to be explained from the notion of putting in battle-array, preparing the building for defence, or from the Fr. bastillé, batillé, built as a bastille or fortress, furnished with turrets, “turriculis fastigiatus.”—Dict. Trev. The term in OE. was often battaling.—Jam. In support of the former origin may be cited It. battaghiere, a battlement on a wall, a flat roof on a house or castle for people to stand and fight.—Florio.

Battledoor. The bat with which a shuttlecock is struck backwards and forwards. Sp. batador, a washing beetle, a flat board with a handle for beating the wet linen.

Bauble. Originally an implement consisting of lumps of lead hanging from the end of a short stick, for the purpose of inflicting a blow upon dogs or the like, then ornamented burlesquely and used by a Fool as his emblem of office. “Babulle or bable—librilla, pegma,” “Librilla dicitur instrumentum libranti—a bable or a dogge malyote.” “Pegma, baculus cum massâ plumbi in summitate pendente.”—Pr. Pm., and authorities in note.

The origin of the word is bab or bob, a lump, and as a verb, to move quickly up and down or backwards and forwards. Gael. bab, a tassel or hanging bunch; E. bablyn or waveryn, librillo, vacillo.—Pr. Pm.

Bauble in the sense of a plaything or trifle seems a different word, from Fr. babiole, a trifle, whimwham, guigaw, or small toy to play withal.—Cotgr. But here also the derivation may fundamentally be the same, for bable was formerly used in the sense of a doll, from whence the notion of a child's plaything, a trifle, might easily arise. Fr. poupée, a babie, a puppet or bable, also the flax on a distaff.—Cotgr.

Now the simplest form of a doll is a bundle of clouts, and that indeed is the meaning of the word. In the sense, therefore, of a doll also, the word bauble may be from bab or bob, a lump or bunch. Compare Fr. poupée, a doll, with poupe de chenilles, a bunch of caterpillars; poupe de filasse, a handful of flax. Hung. bub, a bunch, a tuft, and buba, a doll, a little girl.

Baudrick.—Baldrick. Prov. baudrat, O. Fr. baudré; OHG. balderich, Icel. belti, a belt.—Diez. Baudrick in OE. is used for a sword-belt, scarf, collar.

Bavin. A brush faggot. O. Fr. baffe, faisceau, fagot.—Lacombe.

Bawdekin. Cloth of gold. It. baldacchino, s. s., also the canopy carried over the head of distinguished persons in a procession, because made of cloth of gold. The original meaning of the word is Bagdad stuff, from Baldacca, Bagdad, because cloth of gold was imported from Bagdad.

Bawdy. Filthy, lewd; in OE. dirty.

His overest slop it is not worth a mite—

It is all bawdy, and to-tore also.—Chaucer.

What doth cleer perle in a bawdy boote.—Lydgate.

W. baw, dirt, filth, excrement. To baw, to void the bowels.—Halliwell. From Baw! an interjection of disgust, equivalent to Faugh! being a representation of the expiration naturally resorted to as a defence against a bad smell.

Faugh! I have known a charnel-house smell sweeter.—B. and F.

Ye baw! quoth a brewere

I woll nocht be ruled

By Jhesu for all your janglynge

With Spiritus Justiciæ.—P. P.

—for they beth as bokes tell us

“Ye baw for bokes” quod oon

Was broken out of Helle.—P. P.

Sc. bauch, disgusting, sorry, bad.—Jam. The It. interjection oibo! fie, fie upon (Altieri), and Fr. bah! pooh! nonsense! Sp. baf! expressive of disgust, must all be referred to the same origin. Fr. pouac! faugh! an interjection used when anything filthy is shown or said, whence pouacre, rotten, filthy, and hence also either lazy, slothful.—Cotgr. In like manner Gael. ceach! expressive of disgust; ceachaith, dirt, filth; ceach-arra, dirty, sordid, worthless.

To Bawl. Formed from baw, the representation of a loud shout, as Fr. miauler, E. to mewl, to make the noise represented by the syllable miau, mew. The sound of a dog barking is represented by bau, bow; Lat. baubare, E. how-wow; Piedm. fè bau, to bark; baulé, to bark, to talk noisily, obstreperous.—Zalli.

Yet as soone as we should once heare those hell-hounds, these Turks came yalping and balling upon us.—Sir T. More in R.

Icel. baula, to low or bellow as an ox.

Bawson. A name of the badger, from the streaks of white on his face. It. balzano, a horse with white legs. Fr. balzan, a horse that hath a white leg or foot, the white of his leg or foot, also more generally a white spot or mark in any part of his body.—Cotgr. Prov. bausan, O. Fr. baçant, a horse marked with white. Provin. E. bawsoned, having a white streak down the face. From Bret. bal, a white mark on the face of animals, or the animal so marked, whence the E. name of a cart-horse, Ball. Gael. ball, a spot, a plot of ground, an object. Ball-seirc, a beauty-spot, ballach, spotted, speckled. E. pie-bald, marked like a pie. Probably connected with Pol. bialo, Russ. bielo, Bohem. bjly, white. Serv. bijel, white, bilyega, a mark, bilyejiti, to mark. See Bald.

Bay, 1. A hollow in the line of coast. Catalan badia, from badar, to open, to gape, dividere, dehiscere; badarse, to open as a blossom, to split. See “at Bay,” below. From Cat. badia to Sp. bahia, the step is the same as from It. tradire to Fr. trahir, to betray. It. baja. Fr. baie.

Bay, 2. Bay-window. The same fundamental idea of an opening also gives rise to the application of the term Bay (in Architecture) to “a space left in a wall for a door, gate, or window”—(in Fortification), to “holes in a parapet to receive the mouth of a cannon.”—Bailey. A barn of two bays, is one of two divisions or unbroken spaces for stowing corn, &c., one on each side of the threshing-floor.

Earth

By Nature made to till, that by the yearly birth
The large-bayed barn doth fill.—Drayton in R.

In great public libraries cases may be erected abutting into the apartment from the piers of the windows, as they do not obstruct the light or air, and afford pleasant bays in which to study in quiet.—

Journal Soc. Arts, Feb. 25, 1859.

A bay-window then is a window containing in itself a bay, or recess in an apartment; in modern times, when the architectural meaning of the word was not generally understood, corrupted into Bow-window, as if to signify a window of curved outline. Fr. bée, a hole, overture, or opening in the wall or other part of a house, &c.—Cot. Swiss beie, baye, window; bayen-stein, window-sill.—Stalder. Swab. bay, large window in a handsome house.—Schmid.

Bay-tree. The laurus nobilis or true laurel of the ancients, the laurel-bay, so called from its bearing bays, or berries.

The royal laurel is a very tall and big tree—and the baies or berries (baccæ) which it bears are nothing biting or unpleasant in taste—Holland's Pliny in R.

A garland of bays is commonly represented with berries between the leaves.

The word bay, Fr. baie, a berry, is perhaps not directly from Lat. baccæ, which itself seems to be from a Celtic root. W. bacon, berries. Gael. bagaid, a cluster of grapes or nuts. Prov. baça, baga, Sp. baça, Mod. Sp. bayça, the cod of peas, husk, berry. It. bacello, the cod or husk of beans or the like, especially beans.

Bay. Lat. badius, Sp. bayo, It. bajo, Fr. bai. The Sp. has also bazo, chestnut, yellowish brown; pan bazo, Fr. pain bis, brown-bread, tending to show that it is the same word with It. bigio. Venet. biço, grey. Fr. basané, dusky, of a tawny hue; see basaner, to wax bleak, tawny, swart—Cotgr.; to tan with the sun.

To Bay. To bark as a dog. It. abbaiare, Fr. abbayer, Lat. baubari, Gr. Βαυζειν, Piedm. jë bau, from an imitation of the sound. See Bawl.

At Bay. It has been shown under Abie, Abide, that from ba, representing the sound made in opening the mouth, arose two forms of the verb, one with and one without the addition of a final d to the root. 1st, It. badare, having the primary signification of opening the mouth, then of doing whatever is marked by involuntarily opening the mouth, as gazing, watching intently, desiring, waiting; and 2ndly, Fr. baher, baer, béer, baier, to open the mouth, to stare, to be intent on anything.

From the former verb is the It. expression tenere a bada, to keep one waiting, to keep at a bay, to amuse; stare a bada d'uno, to stand watching one.

Tal parve Anteo a me, che stava a bada, di vederlo chinare. Such Antæus seemed to me, who stood watching him stoop.

Non ti terro con verso lungo et dubbii discorsi a bada. I will not keep you waiting with a long story, &c.

I Pisani si mostrarono di volergli assalire di quella parte e comminciarono vi l'assalto per tenere i nemici a bada.

i. e. in order to keep the enemy in check, or at bay.

Ne was there man so strong but he down bore
 Ne woman yet so faire but he her brought Unto his bay and captived her thought.—F. Q.

he brought her to stand listening to him.

So well he wooed her and so well he wrought her
 With faire entreaty and swete blandishment
 That at the length unto a bay he brought her
 So as she to his speeches was content
 To lend an ear and sciftly to relent.—F. Q.

The stag is said to stand at bay, when, weary of running, he turns and faces his pursuers, and keeps them in check for a while. As this crisis in the chase is expressed in Fr. by the term rendre les abbois, the term at bay has been supposed to be derived from the Fr. aux derniers abois, at his last gasp, put to his last shifts, which however, as may be seen from the foregoing examples, would give but a partial explanation of the expression.

Bayonet. Fr. baionette, a dagger.—Cotgr. Said to have been invented at Bayonne, or to have been first used at the siege of Bayonne in 1665.—Diez.

To Be. AS. beon; Gael. beo, alive, living; beothach, a beast, living thing; Ir. bioth, life, the world; Gr. βιος, life. The Irisk. verb substantive is formed from a root bi, the W. from a root ba, bu.

Beach. The immediate shore of the sea, the part overflowed by the tide. Thence applied to the pebbles of which the shore often consists.

We haled your bark over a bar of beach, or pebble stones, into a small river.—Hackluyt in R.

I believe that beach is a modification of Icel. bakki, a bank, a shore, or of AS. becc, a brook; compare ripa, a bank, and rivus, a brook, It. riviera, a shore, and Fr. rivière, a river. In Norfolk bank is commonly used instead of beach.—Miss Gurney in Philolog. Trans. vol. vii.

So in Robert of Gloucester, speaking of W. the Conqueror landing in England.

His fole went up to lond, him selven was the last,
To bank over the sond plankes thei over cast.

Beacon.—Beck.—Beckon. OHG. bauhan; O. Sax. bokan; AS. beacen, a sign, a nod; OHG. fora-bauhan, a presage, prodigy; bauhnjan, Icel. bákna, AS. beacnian, nutu significare, to beckon. The term beacon is confined in E. to a fire or some conspicuous object used as a signal of danger.

The origin seems preserved in E. beck, to bow or nod; Catalan. becar, to nod; Gael. beic, a cùrtsey, perhaps from the image of a bird pecking; Gael. beic, a beak.

Than peine I me to stretchen forth my neck,
And East and West upon the peple I becke,
As doth a dove sitting upon a bern.—Pardoner's Tale.

He (Hardicanute) made a law that every Inglis man sal bek and discover his hed quhen he met ane Dane.—Bellendew in Jam.

Bead. A ball of some ornamental material, pierced for hanging on a string, and originally used for the purpose of helping the memory in reciting a certain tale of prayers or doxologies. AS. bead, gebed, a prayer. See To Bid. To bid one's bedes or beads was to say one's prayers.

Beadle. AS. bydel, the messenger of a court, officer in attendance on the dignitaries of a university or church. Fr. bedeau, It. bidello. Probably an equivalent of the modern waiter, an attendant, from AS. bidan, to wait. It will be observed that the word attendant also has a like origin in Fr. attendre, to wait.

Home is he brought and laid in sumptuous bed
Where many skilful leeches him abide
To salve his hurts.—F. Q.

i. e. wait upon him.

Beagle. A small kind of hound tracking by scent. "The Frenchmen stil like good begeles following their prey."—Hall's Chron.

Commonly referred to Fr. beugler, to bellow, which is however not applied to the yelping of dogs. Moreover the name, according to Menage, was introduced from England into France, and therefore was not likely to have a French origin. It may be a corruption of Beadle by comparison to a catchpoll tracking a criminal. In Italy at least we see the opposite metaphor. "Bracco, any kind of beagle, hound, bloodhound, &c., by metaphor, constables, beadles or sergeants, and catchpolls in the rogues language."—Florio.

Beak. A form that has probably descended to us from a Celtic origin. Gael. beic. "Cui Tolosæ nato cognomen in pueritiâ Becco fuerat; id valet gallinacei rostrum."—Suetonius in Diez. It. becco, Fr. bec, Bret. bek, W. pig. It forms a branch of a very numerous class of words clustered round a root pik, signifying a point, or any action done with a pointed thing.

Beam.—Boom. Goth. Bagms, Isl. badmr, G. baum, Du. boom, a tree. AS. beám, a tree, stock, post, beam. The boom of a vessel is the beam or pole by which the sail is stretched, coming to us, like most nautical terms, from the Netherlands or North Germany.

Bean. G. bohne; Icel. baun. Gr. πυρανος, κυρανος, Lat. faba, Slavon. bob. W. ffa, beans, ffaen, a single bean, the addition of a final en being the usual mark of individuality. Bret. fû or fav, beans, or the plant which bears them; faen or faven, a single bean, plur. favennou or faennou, as well as fû or fav. Thus the final en, signifying individuality, adheres to the root, and Lat. faba is connected through Oberdeutsch bobn (Schwenck) with G. bohne, E. bean.

Bear. The wild beast. G. bär, Icel. björn.

To Bear. Lat. fero, fer-re; Gr. φέρειν; Goth. bairan, to carry, support, and also to bear children, to produce young. The latter sense may have been developed through the notion of a tree bearing fruit, or from the pregnant mother carrying her young. It is singular, however, that the forms corresponding to the two significations should be so distinct in Latin, fero, to carry, and pario, to bear children, produce, bring forth. The connection of the latter with appareo, to appear, to come to light, inclines one to suspect that parere, to bear children, may originally have signified to bring to light, as the neuter parere, to come to light. See Bare.

From bear in the sense of carrying we have Goth. baurthei, Icel. byrdhi, E. burden; from the same in the sense of bearing children, Goth. gabaurths, birth. The Icel. burdr is used in the sense of a carrying, bearing, and also in that of birth.

Beard. G. bart, Russ. boroda; Bohem. brada, the beard, chin. Lat. barba, W. barf. Perhaps radically identical with Icel. bard, a lip, border, edge.

Beast. Lat. bestia; Gael. biast, an animal, perhaps a living thing, beo, living; W. byw, living, to live.

Beat. AS. beatan; It. battere, Fr. battre; from a root bat, imitative of the sound of a sharp blow, as pat imitates that of a more gentle one. See Bat.

From the verb to beat is formed beetle, boyle (Bailey). AS.

bytl, a bat for washing, a heavy log for stamping pavement, driving in piles, &c. Pl. D. betel, bötel, a clog for a dog; büteln, to flat turf with a beetle. Fr. batail, the clapper of a bell; bate, a paver's beetle; It. battaglio, any kind of clapper, the knocker of a door.

Beauty. Fr. beauté, from beau, bel, It. bello, Lat. bellus, pretty, handsome, agreeable.

Beaver. 1. The water quadruped. G. biber, Lat. fiber, Lith. bebrus, Slav. bobr, Fr. bièvre. Perhaps from Pol. ba-brac', to dabble. Bobrować, to wade through the water like a beaver. Secondly applied to a hat, because made of the fur of the beaver.

2. The moveable part of a helmet, which, when up, covered the face, and when down occupied the place of a child's bib or slobbering cloth. Fr. bavière, from baver, to slobber. It. bava, Sp. baba, Fr. bave, slobber, from an imitation of the inarticulate utterance of the slobbering infant. The O. Fr. bave expressed as well the flow of saliva as the babble of the child, whence baveux, bavard, Prov. bavec, talkative.—Diez.

Beck, 1.—Beckon. A nod or sign. See Beacon.

Beck, 2. A brook. As rivus, a brook, seems connected with ripa, a bank, while from the latter is derived It. riviera, signifying both a river and a bank, and Fr. rivière, formerly a bank (Diez), but now a river only, it is possible that Beck, a brook, G. bach, Icel. beckr, may be fundamentally the same with Icel. beckr, a bench, ðakki, a bank. It is to be remarked that beck is not a river, where the water first catches the eye, but a brook, in which at a little distance the broken banks are the conspicuous object, while the water is often not seen at all.

To Become. 1. To attain to a certain condition, to assume a certain form or mode of being. AS. becuman, to attain to, to arrive at.

That thu mæge becuman to tham gesælthan the ece thurhwuniath. That thou mayest attain to those goods which endure for ever.—Boeth.

G. bekommen, to get, receive, obtain, acquire.—Küttner. It will be observed that we often use indifferently become or get; "He got very angry," "He became very angry," are equivalent expressions, implying that he attained the condition of being very angry.

2. In a second sense to become is to be fitting or suitable. G. bequem, convenient, fit, proper; E. comely, pleasing, agreeable. This meaning is to be explained from AS. becuman, to come to or upon, to befall, to happen. He becom on sceathan, he fell among thieves; Thæm goðum becymth anfeald yvel, to the good happens unmixed evil.—Bosworth. Now the notion of being convenient, suitable, fitting, rests on the supposition of a purpose to be fulfilled, or a feeling to be gratified. If the accidents or circumstances of the case happen as we would have them, if they fall in with what is required to satisfy our taste, judgment, or special purpose, we call the arrangement becoming, convenient, proper, and we shall find that these and similar notions are commonly expressed by derivatives from verbs signifying to happen. Thus in OE. to fall was constantly used in the sense of falling or happening rightly, happening as it ought.

Do no favour, I do thee pray,
It fallith nothing to thy name
To make fair semblant where thou mayest blame.

Chaucer, R. R.

The angl came to Rome sone Recl, as fell a king to done.—K. Robert in Warton.

i. e. as became a king to do.

In darkness of unknowynge they gonȝ
Without light of understandynge
Of that that falleth to ryghte knowynge.

Prick of Conscience.

i. e. of that that belongeth to right knowing. So in Icel. "all-vel til Hofdingia fallinn," every way suited to a prince. G. gefallen, to please, to fall in with our taste, as fall itself was sometimes used in E.

With shepherd sits not following flying fame,
But feed his flock in fields where falls him best.—Shep. Cal.

On the same principle, AS. limpian, to happen, to appertain, limplice, fitly; gelimpan, to happen, gelimplic, opportune. AS. timan, getiman, to happen, G. ziemen, to become, befit, E. seemly, suitable, proper; O. Sw. tida, to happen, tidig, fit, decent, decorous, E. tidy, now confined to the sense of orderly. In like manner Turk. dushmak, to fall, to happen, to fall to the lot of any one, to be a part of his duty, to be incumbent upon him.

Bed. A place to lie down, to sleep on. Goth. badi, Icel. bedr, G. bett.

Bed-ridden. Confined to bed. AS. bed-rida, one who rides or is permanently borne on his bed.

Bedizen. To load with ornament, to dress with unbecoming richness; and to dizen out was used in the same sense. The only etymology suggested has been the Prov. E. to dize, to put tow on a distaff, to clothe the distaff with tow, which gives a very inadequate explanation of the word.

Perhaps bedizen may be from Fr. badigeonner, to rough-cast, to colour with lime-wash, erroneously modified in form, by the analogy of bedawb, as if it were derived from a simple verb to dizen, which latter would thus be brought into use by false etymology. The passage from a soft g to z is of frequent occurrence, as in It. prigione, Fr. prison; Venet. cogionare, E. cozen; It. cugino, E. cousin.

To plaister or bedawb with ornament is exactly the image represented by bedizen.

The same metaphor is seen in Fr. crespir, to parget or rough-cast; femme crespie de couleurs, whose face is all to bedawbed or plaistered over with painting.—Cot.

Bedlam. A madhouse, from the hospital of St Mary, Bethlehem, used for that purpose in London.

Bee. The honey-producing insect. AS. beo; Icel. by-fluga; G. biene. Gael. beach, a bee, a wasp, a stinging fly; beacheach, a horse fly; speach, a blow or thrust, also the bite or sting of a venomous creature, a wasp. So Finn. puskia, to push with the horns ; Lap. pustet, to sting ; Finn. puskiainen, a wasp.

Beech. A tree. G. buche, Icel. beyke, Slav. buk, buka, bukva, Lat. fagus, Gr. φηγος.

Beef. Fr. bœuf, an ox, the meat of the ox. It. bove, from Lat. bos, bovis, an ox.

Beer. 1. Originally, doubtless, drink, from the root pi, drink, extant in Bohem. piti, to drink, imperative pi, whence piwo, beer. The Lat. bibere is a reduplicated form of the root, which also appears in Gr. πινω, πινω, to drink, and in Lat. potulum, a cup or implement for drink ; potus, drink. In Gael. the same word bior is used in the sense of water.

2. A pillow-beer, a pillow-case. Dan. vaar, a cover, case, pude-vaar, a pillow-case. G. küssen-biere. Pl. D. büren, küssen-büren, a cushion-cover ; beds-büren, a bed-tick. Properly a cover that may be slipped on and off. Finn. wäärin, I turn (a garment), Esthon. pöördma, to turn, to twist ; pöördma, to turn, to change ; padja-pöör, a pillow-case or pillow-beer (paddi, a pad or cushion).

Beestings. The first milk after a cow has calved, which is thick and clotty. G. biest-milch, also bienst, briest, brieschmilch ; AS. beost, byst. The meaning of the word is curdled. Fr. callebouté, curded or beesty, as the milk of a woman that is newly delivered.—Cotgr. O. Fr. mer bêtée, a sea supposed to surround the earth. “La mar betada, sela que environna la terra,” “ainsi come ele (la mer) fust bietée,” in the Latin version of the passage “coagulatum.” “Sang vermeilh betatz,” red curdled blood.—Roman^e de Ferabras in Diez. The mer bêtée was in Mid. G. called leber-mer, the loppered sea, from leberen, to curdle or lopper. Fr. beton, beast.—Cotgr. Icel. ábristur, colostrum, coaguli colostrici ferculum, a dish of curdled biestings of sheep or cow.—Haldorsen. In Northamptonshire the milk of a fresh-calved cow is called cherry-curds.

Beet. A garden herb. Fr. bette or bléte ; Lat. beta, blitum ; Gr. βλιτον, spinach.

Beetle. The general name of insects having a horny wing cover. Probably named from the destructive qualities of those with which we are most familiar. AS. bitel, the biter. "Mordiculus—bitela."—Gl. Ælfr. in Nat. Ant.

To Beg. Skinner's derivation from bag, although it appears improbable at first, is certainly the true one. The Flem. beggaert (Delfortrie) probably exhibits the original form of the word, whence the E. begger, and subsequently the verb to beg. It must be borne in mind that the bag was a universal characteristic of the beggar, at a time when all his alms were given in kind, and a beggar is hardly ever introduced in our older writers without mention being made of his bag.

He went his way, no lenger wold he reste
 With scrip and tippid staff ytuckid hie
 In every house he gan to pore and pric
 And beggid mele and chese or ellis corne.

Sompnour's Tale.

Hit is beggares rihte vorte beren bagge on bac and burgeises for to beren purses.—Ancren Riwle, 168.

As beggars with bagges—
 Reicheth never the ryche

Bidderes and *beggere*s

Bagges and begging he bad his folk leven.—P. P. creed.

And yet these Bilderer wol beggen a bag full of whete

And thus gate I begge

That maketh beggars go with bordons and bags.—Political Songs.

So from Gael. bag (baigean, a little bag), baigear, a beggar, which may perhaps be an adoption of the E. word, but in the same language from poc, a bag or poke, is formed pocair, a beggar; air a phoc, on the tramp, begging, literally, on the bag. From W. ysgrepan, a scrip, ysgrepanu, to go a begging.

It. bertola, a wallet, such as poor begging friars use to beg withal; bertolare, to shift up and down for scraps and victuals.—Florio. Dan. pose, a bag; pose-pilte, a beggar-boy. Mod. Gr., θυλακος, a bag, a scrip; θυλακιζω, to beg.

Begin. AS. aginnan, onginnan, beginnan. Goth. duginnan. In Luc. vi. 25, the latter is used as an auxiliary of the future. “Unte gaunon jah gretan duginnid,” for ye shall lament and weep. In a similar manner gan or can was frequently used in OE. “Aboutin undern gan this Erle alight.”—Clerk of Oxford’s tale. He did alight, not began to alight, as alighting is a momentary operation.

The tother seand the dint cum, gan provyde
To eschew swiftlie, and sone lap on syde
That all his force Entellus can apply
Into the are— D. V. 142. 40.

Down duschit the beist, deid on the land can ly Spreuland and flychterand in the dede thrawes.—D. V.

To Scotland went he then in hy
And all the land gan occupy.—Barbour. Bruce.

The verb to gin or begin appears to be one of that innumerable series derived from a root gan, gen, ken, in all the languages of the Indo-Germanic stock, signifying to conceive, to bear young, to know; to be able, giving in Gr. γιγνομαι, γινομαι, γενος, γιγνωσκω, γινωσκω, in Lat. gigno genus, in E. can, ken, kind, &c.

The fundamental meaning seems to be to attain to, to acquire. To produce children is to acquire, to get children; bigitan in Ulphilas is always to find; in AS. it is both to acquire and to beget, to get children.

To begin may be explained either from the fundamental notion of attaining to, seizing, taking up, after the analogy of the G. anfangen, and Lat. incipere, from G. fangen and Lat. capere, to take; or the meaning may have passed through a similar stage to that of Gr. γιγνομαι, γινεται, to be born, to arise, to begin; γενεσις, γενετη, origin, beginning.

It will be observed that get is used as an auxiliary in a manner very similar to the OE. gan, can, above quoted; "to get beaten;" Icel. "at geta talad," to be able to talk; "about undern gan this earl alight," about undern he got down.

Begone. Gold-begone, ornamented with gold, covered with gold—D. V.; woe-begone, oppressed with woe. Du. begaan, affected, touched with emotion; begaen ziin met eenighe saecke, premi curâ alicujus rei, laborare, sollicitum esse.—Kil.

Begunes. Women of a certain religious order. See Bigot.

To Behave. The notion of behaviour is generally expressed by means of verbs signifying to bear, to carry, to lead.

Ye shall dwell here at your will

But your bearing be full ill.—K. Robert in Warton.

It. portarsi, to behave; portarsi de Paladino, for a man to behave or carry himself stoutly.—Florio. G. betragen, behaviour, from tragen, to carry. In accordance with these analogies we should be inclined to give to the verb have in behave the sense of the Sw. hæfwa, to lift, to carry, the equivalent of E. heave, rather than the vaguer sense of the auxiliary to have, Sw. hafwa, habere. But in fact the two verbs seem radically the same, and their senses intermingle. Sw. hæfwa in sæd, to carry corn into the barn; hæftig bort, take yourself off; hafwa bort, to take away, to turn one out; hafwa fram, to bring forwards. AS. habban, to have, hafjan, to heave; uf-haban, us-hafjan, to raise. G. gehaben, to behave, and (as Fr. se porter) to fare well or ill.

Mid hym he had a stronge axe.—So strong and so gret that an other hit scholde hebbe unethe.—R. G. 17.

Behest.—Hest. Command, injunction. AS. Hæs, command; behæs, vow; behat, gehat, vow, promise; behatan, gehatan, OE. behete, to vow, to promise; AS. hatan, to vow, promise, command; Du. heeten, to command, to name, to call, to be named; heeten willekom, to bid one welcome. Icel. heita, to name, to be named, to vow, exhort, invoke. Goth. haitan, to call, to command. The general meaning seems to be to speak out, an act which may amount either to a promise or a command, according as the subject of the announcement is what the speaker undertakes to do himself, or what he wishes another to do; or the object of the speaker may be simply to indicate a particular individual as the person addressed, when the verb will have the sense of calling or naming.

Behind. At the back of. The relations of place are most naturally expressed by means of the different members of the body. Thus in Finnish the name of the head is used to express what is on the top of or opposite to, the name of the ear to express what is on the side of anything. So from hántá, the tail, are formed hännässä, behind, hännittää, to follow, hántyri, a follower, and as the roots of many of our words are preserved in the Finnish languages, I doubt not that we have in the Finnish hántá the origin of our behind, at the tail of.

To Behold. To look steadily upon. The compound seems here to preserve what was the original sense of the simple verb to hold. AS. healdan, to regard, observe, take heed of, to tend, to feed, to keep, to hold. To hold a doctrine for true is to regard it as true, to look upon it as true; to hold it a cruel act is to regard it as such. The Lat. servare, to keep, to hold, is also found in the sense of looking, commonly expressed, as in the case of E. behold, by the compound observare. “Tuus servus servet Venerine faciat an Cupidini.” Let your slave look whether she sacrifices to Venus or to Cupid.—Plautus. The verb to look itself is frequently found in the sense of looking after, seeing to, taking notice or care of (Gloss. to R. G.). The It. guardare, to look, exhibits the original meaning of the Fr. garder, to keep or hold, and the E. ward, keeping.

The supposition then that the notion of preserving, keeping, holding is originally derived from that of looking, is supported by many analogies, while it seems an arbitrary ellipse to explain the sense of behold as “to keep or hold (sc. the eyes fixed upon any object).”—Richardson.

To Behove. To be expedient, to be required for the accomplishment of any purpose; behoof, what is so required, hence advantage, furtherance, use. AS. behofian, to be fit, right, or necessary, to stand in need of; behefe, advantage, behoof.

Radically connected with the verb to have, as Lat. habilis, fit, suitable, handy, with habeo. The connection may probably be explained from the use of habeo, with or without the reflective se, in the sense of holding or keeping oneself in a certain manner, being constituted in a certain manner with respect to any person or thing.—(Andrews, 4.) “Bene, male se habere.” “Bene habet, jacta sunt fundamenta defensionis;” it is well.—Cic. “Atqui sic habet,” but so it is. Habilis then is rightly constituted, constituted so as to meet a particular end, just as habitus, which properly signifies the condition, bearing, constitution of anything, is specially used in the sense of a perfect condition. So from Du. hebben, to have, is formed hebbelyk, fit, convenient; from Icel. hafa, to have, hæfr, hæfilegr, fit, convenient, hæfi (corresponding to Lat. habitus) mores et gesta (Anderson); congruentia, proportio, jus, meta, scopus (Haldorsen). “Thad er ecki mitt hæfi,” that is not within my competence; “thad er ecki hæfi,” that is not right, that does not behove; hæfa, fas; hof, originally apparently the habit or condition of things, then a right condition, right measure, moderation. Sw. hafwa, to have; hafwa sig, to turn out, to be in a certain condition; hófwa, condition, fit condition, measure, bounds, moderation. Ófwer hófwan, beyond measure; det är icke hån hófwa, it is not for me to do so and so, it does not behove me; hans hófwa ar at tiga, it becomes him, behoves him to be silent. Hence hófwas, to become, befit, behove, to be wanted for a particular purpose.

To Belay. Du. beleggen, to lay around, overspread, beset, garnish; belegsel, fringe, border, ornament.

All in a woodman's jacket he was clad

Of Lincoln green belayed with golden lace.—F. Q.

Du. De kabel aan de beeting beleggen, to lay the cable round the bits, to make it fast, in nautical language, to belay.

To Belch. AS. bealcan, bealcettan; OE. to bolc, to boke, to throw up wind from the stomach with a sudden noise. Doubtless an imitation of the sound. Another application of the same word is in Pl. D. and Du. bolken, bulken, to bellow, to roar.

Beldam. Fair sir, and Fair lady, were civil terms of address, in Fr. beau sire and bel dame. Then, probably because a respectful form of address would be more frequent towards an elderly than a young person, beldam became appropriated to signify an old woman, and finally an ugly and decrepit old woman.

Belfry. Fr. beffroi, O. Fr. berfroi, beffroit, a watch tower, from MHG. bercwrît, berwrît, a tower for defence; OHG. frîd, a tower, turrîs, locus securitatis—Schilter, and bergan, to protect. The word became singularly corrupted in foreign languages, appearing in M. Lat. under the forms belfredum, bertefredum, battefredum. It. bettifredo, a little shed, stand, or house, built upon a tower for soldiers to stand sentinel in; also a blockhouse or a sconce.—Florîo. In England a false etymology has confined the name of belfry, properly belonging to the church tower, to the chamber in the upper part in which the bells are hung.

To Believe. It is not obvious how to harmonise the senses of believing, praising, permitting or giving leave, promising, which are expressed in the different Teutonic dialects by essentially the same word or slight modifications of it; Pl. D. loven, löven, to believe; Du. loven, to praise, to promise, orloven, to give leave; Dan. lov, praise, reputation, leave; Icel. lofa, leyfa, to praise, to give leave; AS. leafa, geleafa, belief; gelyfan, to believe, lyfan, alyfan, to give leave; G. glauben, to believe, loben, to praise, erlauben, to permit, verloben, to promise or engage.

The fundamental notion seems to be to approve, to sanction an arrangement, to deem an object in accordance with a certain standard of fitness. In this sense we have Goth. galaubs, filu-galaubs, precious, honoured, esteemed; ungalaub kas, εἰς ἀπίθαν ἄκεος, a vessel made for dishonour, for purposes of low estimation; Pl. D. laven, Du. loven, to fix a price upon one's wares, to estimate them at a certain rate. To believe, then, Goth. laubjan, galaubjan, is to esteem an assertion as good for as much as it lays claim to; if a narration, to esteem it true or in accordance with the fact it professes to describe; if a promise, to esteem it as in accordance with the intention of the promiser.

The sense of praising may be easily deduced from the same radical notion. To praise is essentially to prize, to put a high price or value on, to extol the worth of anything, to express approval, or high estimation. Hence to simple approbation, satisfaction, consent, permission is an easy progress. Pl. D. to der swaren lave, to the approbation or satisfaction of the sworn inspectors; mit erven lave, with the consent of the heirs. In middle Latin the consent given by a lord to the alienation of a tenant's fief was expressed by the term laus, and E. allow, which has been shown to be derived from laudare, is used in the sense of approving, esteeming good and valid, giving leave or permission, and sometimes in a sense closely analogous to that of believe.

The principles which all mankind allow for true are innate; those that men of right reason admit are the principles allowed by all mankind.—Locke.

Bell. From AS. bellan, Icel. belia, boare, to resound, to sound loudly; Sw. böla, to bellow; Northamptonshire, to bell, to make a loud noise, to cry out (Sternberg). A bell, then, Icel. biälla, is an implement for making a loud noise.

Templora campana boant —Ducange.

Icel. bylia, resonare, and E. peal, are other modifications of the same imitative root, of which the latter is specially applied to the sound of bells. The same imitation is found in Galla, bil-bila, bell; bilbil-goda, to make bilbil, to ring.—Tutschek.

Bellows.—Belly. The word balg, bolg, is used in several Celtic and Teutonic languages to signify any inflated skin or case. Gael. balg, bolg, a leather bag, wallet, belly, blister; balgan-snamha, the swimming bladder, balgan-uige, a water bubble; Gael. builge, bags or bellows, seeds of plants. Bret.

belch, bolch, polch, the bolls or husks of flax; AS. bælg, a bag, pouch, cod or husk of pulse, wallet, blæst-bælg, a bellows; G. balg, skin, husk, pod, the skin of those animals that are stripped off whole, blase-balg, a blowing-skin, bellows. Icel. belgr, an inflated skin, leather sack, bellows, belly. Sw. bælg, a bellows, vulgarly the belly.

The original signification is probably a water-bubble (still preserved by the Gaelic diminutive bolgan), which affords the most obvious type of inflation. The application of the term to the belly, the sack-like case of the intestines, as well as to a bellows or blowing-bag, needs no explanation. It seems that bulga was used for womb or belly by the Romans, as a fragment of Lucilius has :

Ita ut quisque nostrum e bulgâ est matris in lucem editus.

It is probable that Gr. $\beta\omicron\lambda\beta\eta$, Lat. volva, vulva, the womb, is a kindred form from another modification of the word for bubble, from which is also bulbus, a round or bubble-shaped root, or a root consisting of concentric skins.

In E. bellows, the word, like trowsers and other names of things consisting of a pair of principal members, has assumed a plural form.

To Belong. Du. langen, to reach to, to attain, porrigere, attingere, pertingere; belangen, to attain to, to concern, to belong, attingere, attinere, pertinere, pervenire.—Kil. G. gelangen, to arrive at, to become one's property; zum Königreiche gelangen, to come to the crown; belängen, to concern, to touch. Was das belanget, as concerning that. Du. belang, propinquus, proximus, affinis.

To belong is thus to reach up to, to touch one, expressing the notion of property by a similar metaphor to the Lat. attinere, pertinere, to hold to one.

Belt. Icel. belti; Lat. balteus.

Bench. See Bank.

To Bend. Icel. benda; AS. bendan. Fr. bander un arc, to bend a bow; hence to exert force, se bander, to rise against external force; bandoir, a spring.

To bend sails is to stretch them on the yards of the vessel ; to bend cloth, to stretch it on a frame, G. Tuch an einen Rahmen spannen. For the derivation of the word see Bind.

Beneath. See Nether.

Benefice.—Benefactor.—Benefit. Lat. benefacere, to do good to one ; benefactor, one who does good ; benefactum, Fr. bienfait, a good deed, a benefit. The Lat. beneficium, a kindness, was in Mid. Lat. applied to an estate granted by the king or other lord to one for life, because it was held by the kindness of the lord. “Villa quam Lupus quondam per beneficium nostrum tenere visus fuit.” “Similiter villa quam ex munificentia nostra ipsi Caddono concessimus.” “Quam fidelis noster per nostrum beneficium habere videtur.” The term had been previously applied in the Roman law to estates conferred by the prince upon soldiers and others.—Ducange. The same name was given to estates conferred upon clerical persons for life, for the performance of ecclesiastical services, and in modern times the name of benefice is appropriated to signify a piece of church preferment.

Benison. Fr. benisson, a blessing, from benir, to bless, to pronounce happy, to wish well to.

Bent. The flower-stalks of grass remaining uneaten in a pasture. Bav. bimaiszen, bimpsen, binssen, G. binsen, rushes. OHG. pinoz, pinuz.

To Benum. See Numb.

To Bequeath. To direct the disposition of property after one's death. AS. becwathan, from cwæthan, to say. See Quoth.

To Beray. See Bewray.

To Bereave. AS. reafian, bereafian, to deprive of, to strip. See Reave, Rob.

Berry. A small eatable fruit. AS. beria ; Goth. basja ; Du. besje. Sanscr. bhakshya, food, from bhaksh, to eat. Hence on the one side Lat. bacca, a berry, and on the other Goth. basya, G. Beere, E. berry.—Kühn, Zeitschr. vol. vi. p. 3.

Berth. The seamen call a due or proper distance between ships lying at an anchor or under sail a birth ; also the proper place aboard for the mess to put their chests, &c. in, is called the birth of that mess.—Harris in Todd. Convenient ship-room to moor a ship.—Bailey. Probably the original sense is that given by Jamieson—size, bulk, burden.

The bustuous barge yclepit Chimera

Sa huge of birth ane cieté semyt sche.—D. V.

Icel. byrði, Dan. byrde, a burden, from bear. Hence the word might easily have been used to signify room for a ship of such a bulk or burden, and then sea-room generally, as when one speaks of giving an object a wide berth, i. e. leaving considerable sea-room for it.

2. A berth, in the sense of a place in a ship boarded off for one person to lie in, may be the Icel. byrða, arca e lignis compacta, arca grandis.—Andersen. Repositorium, arca; shelves, a cupboard—Haldorsen, from board, a board. A shelf would probably be the only berth allotted to a seaman in an old Northman's ship. But it may be a secondary application of berth in the former sense; viz. room for a man to lie in.

To Beseech. Formerly beseek.

His heart is hard that will not meke

When men of mekeness him beseke.—Chaucer, R. R.

To seek something from a person, to entreat, solicit. So Lat. peto, to seek, and also to entreat, beseech.

Beseem.—Seemly.—Beteem. The verbal element in these words must not be confounded with seem, the equivalent of the Fr. sembler, It. sembrare. It corresponds to the Icel. sæma; O. Sw. sæma, tæma; G. ziemen, geziemen, Du. taemen, betaemen, to be fitting, to befit, become, the initial s, t, and z interchanging, as in Du. saert, taert, G. zart, tender.—Kil.

It was shown under Become that the notion of being fitting or suitable is commonly expressed by means of a verb signifying to befall, to happen; what falls in with our taste, wishes, or with the requirements of the case. Now the O. Sw. tima, as the AS. gatiman, gatimian, signifies to happen; whence time, the course of events, and not vice versâ, as Ihre supposes. Wallon. atoumer, to happen, from toumer, to fall. It may be doubted whether timan, to happen, be not a modification of the same root with the Goth. quiman, AS. cwiman, to come. It is certain at least that the senses of the two are closely related, as seen in the Lat: venire, to come, evenire, to happen; and many examples may be shown of the interchange of an initial tw and kw or qw; as G. quist, Du. twist, E. twist, a twig or branch; G. quecke, zwecken, E. squitch, twitch, couch-grass. Du. quinkelen, E. twinkle; Du. quetteren, E. twitter; G. kunft (in zukunft, the future) for kumft, from kommen, to come; zumft, gezumft, zunft, conventus, conventio, conveniens, in which the k of kommen, venire, seems changed into a z.—Diefenbach in v. gatiman. Thus become, beseem, and the Du. betaemen, which are used in precisely the same sense, as well as comely and seemly, would be brought into radical relation with each other.

The connexion of the E. teem, beteem, with the Du. betaemen, Sw. taema, is obscured by the verb being used in a causative sense. To teem or beteem must be explained to make suitable, to deem suitable, to vouchsafe, to deign, to afford, as Lat. dignari, to deign or deem worthy, from dignus.

Yet could he not beteem

The shape of any other bird than eagle for to seem.

Golding's Ovid in Rich.

Ah! said he, thou hast co'essed and bewrayed all, I could teem it to rend thee in pieces.—Diction. of Witches. Percy Soc. x. 88.

The Icel. tima is used in the same sense, being translated by Andersen, sumptum facere audeo, by Haldorsen, a se impetrare, to bring oneself, to find in one's heart to do a thing, to allow it to happen. I could teem it to rend thee in pieces—I could find it becoming to rend thee in pieces, or I could let it happen to tear thee in pieces.

Besom. AS. besem, besm; Pl. D. bessen, G. besen. AS. besmas, rods. In Devonshire the name bissam or bassam is given to the heath plant, because used for making besoms, as conversely a besom is called broom, from being made of broomtwigs. The proper meaning of the word seems twigs or rods. Du. brem-bessen, broom twigs, scopæ spartiaë.—Biglotton.

Best. See Better.

Bestead. AS. stede, place, position. Hence stead is applied to signify the influences arising from relative position. To stand in stead of another is to perform the offices due from him; to stand one in good stead, or to bestead one, is to perform a serviceable office to him.

The dry fish was so new and good as it did very greatly bestead us in the whole course of our voyage.—Drake.

On the other hand to be hard bestead is to be placed in a position which it is hard to endure.

To Bestow. AS. stow, a place; to bestow, to be-place, to give a place to, to lay out, to exercise on a definite object.

To Bet. From abet, in the sense of backing, encouraging, supporting the side on which the wager is laid.

Gif thou wilt holden that thou me bet
That I shall wed the maiden fair.—Halliwell.

i. e. what you promised or engaged to me, if you will hold the promise with which you encouraged me.

Beteem. See Bescem.

To Betray. Lat. tradere, to deliver up, then to deliver up what ought to be kept, to deliver up in breach of trust, to betray. It. tradire, whence Fr. trahir, as envahir, from invadere. The inflections of Fr. verbs in ir with a double ss, as trahissons, trahissais, are commonly rendered in E. by a final sh. Thus from ébahir, ébahissais, abash; from polir, polissais, polish, &c. In like manner from trahir we formerly had trash and betrash, as from obéir, obéissais, obeish.

In the water anon was seen
His nose, his mouth, his eyen sheen,
And he thereof was all abashed
His owne shadow had him betrashed.—R. R.

In the original—

Et il maintenant s'ébahit
Car son ombre s'i le trahit.

Her acquaintance is perillous
 First soft and after noious,
 She hath The trashid without wene.—R. R.

Bien t'a trahie. Probably the unusual addition of the particle be to a verb imported from the Fr. was caused by the accidental resemblance of the word to Du. bedriegen, Gt. betriegen, to deceive, to cheat, which are from a totally different root. From It. tradire is traditor, Fr. traître, a traitor; and from Fr. trahir, trahison, treachery, treason.

Better.—Best. Goth. batizo, batista; AS. betera, betest, betst, better, best. Du. bat, bet, baet, better, more, OE. bet, better.

Between.—Betwixt. The AS. has twoh, a different form of twa, two, and thence twegen, twain. From the former of these are AS. betwuh, betweoh, betweohs, betweox, betwuxt, by two, in the middle of two, which may be compared as to form with amid, AS. amiddes, amidst, or with again, against. In like manner from twain is formed between, in the middle of twain.

The Ile of Man that me clepeth
 By twene us and Irlonde.—R. G.

Bevel. Slant, sloped off, awry. Fr. beveau, an instrument opening like a pair of compasses, for measuring angles. Buveau, a squire-like instrument having moveable and compass branches, or one branch compass and the other straight. Some call it a bevel.—Cotgr.

Beverage. A drink. Lat. bibere, to drink; It. bevere, whence beveraggio; Fr. beuvrage; E. beverage.

Bevy. It. beva, a bevy, as of pheasants.—Florio. Fr. bevé, a brood, flock, of quails, larks, roebucks, thence applied to a company of ladies especially.

To Bewray. Properly to accuse, and then to point out, to discover. Goth. vrohjan, to accuse, Fris. wrogia, ruogia, wreia, to accuse, AS. vregan, vregian, Sw. röja, to accuse, to discover. G. rügen.

To bewray or beray, in the sense of dirtying, is explained by * the Fr. faire caliges, to bewray or accuse his nose, viz. by the sense of smell. Wallon. arrier, to dirty.

Beyond. See Yonder.

Bezel.—Basil. Sp. bisel, the basil edge of a plate of looking-glass, which were formerly ornamented with a border ground slanting from the general surface of the glass. When the edge of a joiner's tool is ground away to an angle it is called a basil (Halliwell), in Fr. taillé en biseau. Biseau, a bezle, bezling or skueing.—Cotgr.

The proper meaning of the word seems to be a paring, then an edge pared or sliced off, a sloping edge.

Taylet le payn ke est parée,

Les biseaux (the paringes) à l'amoyne soyt doné.

Bibelsworth in Nat. Ant. 172.

To Bezzle. To drink hard, to tipple. Probably, like guzzle, formed from an imitation of the sound made in greedy eating and drinking.

Yes, s'foot I wonder how the inside of a tavern looks now. Oh ! when shall I bizzle, bizzle?—Dekkar in R.

To bezzle was then applied to wasting in debauchery.

Bias. Fr. biais, bihais, Cat. biax, Sardin. biascia, It. sbiescio, Piedm. sbias, sloped, slanting; Fr. biaiser, Sard. sbiasciai, to do something aslant. The It. bienco, sbienco, from obliquus, has a singular resemblance to sbiescio, used in precisely the same sense, though such a change of form would be very unusual.

The true origin is probably from the notion of sliding or slipping. It. sbiagio, sbiesso, bending, aslope; sbiaciare, bisciare, sbrisciare, sbrissare, to creep or crawl sideling, aslope, or in and out, as an eel or a snake, to glide or slip as upon ice; sbriscio, sbrisso, sbiscio, oblique, crooked, winding or crawling in and out, slippery, sliding; biascio, bias-wise. Compare slant, formerly sklent, with W. ysglentio, Sw. slinta, to slip or slide; slope with slip.

To Bib. Lat. bibo, to drink, whence Du. biberen, to drink much; biberer, bibaculus, a bibber, one who drinks in excess, Fr. biberon.

Bib. Fr. bavon, baviere, baverole, a cloth to prevent a child drivelling over its clothes. Baver, to slaver or drivel. See Beaver. Fris. bäbbe, the mouth. Perhaps the word has once been a bib-cloth.

Bice. An inferior blue, OE. asure-bice (Early E. misc. Hal. 78); Fr. bes-azur, the particle bes being often used in composition to signify perversion, inferiority. Prov. beslei, perverted belief; barlume (for bis-lume) weak light; Piedm. bes-anca, crooked; ber-laita (for bes-laita), Fr. petit-lait, whey; Cat. bescompte, miscount; Fr. bestemps, foul weather. Dict. Wallon.

To Bicker.—Bickering. To skirmish, dispute, wrangle. It is especially applied in Sc. to a fight with stones, and also signifies the constant motion of weapons and the rapid succession of strokes in a battle or broil, or the noise occasioned by successive strokes, by throwing of stones, or by any rapid motion.—Jamieson. The origin is probably the representation of the sound of a blow with a pointed instrument by the syllable pick, whence the frequentative picker or bicker would represent a succession of such blows. To bicker in NE. is explained to clatter, Halliwell. Du. bickeler, a stone-hewer or stone-picker; bickelen, bicken, to hew stone; bickel, bickelsteenken, a fragment of stone, a chip, explaining the Sc. bicker in the sense of throwing stones. Bickelen, to start out, as tears from the eyes, from the way in which a chip flies from the pick. Hence Sc. to bicker, to move quickly.—Jam.

Ynglis archaris that hardy war and wucht

Amang the Scottis bykarit with all their mycht.

Wallace in Jam.

The arrows struck upon them like blows from a stone-cutter's pick.

It must be observed that the word pick (equivalent to the modern pitch) was used for the cast of an arrow.

I hold you a grote I pycke as farre with an arowe as you.—Palsgrave in Halliwell.

To Bid. Two verbs are here confounded, of distinct form in the other Teutonic languages.

1. To Bid in the obsolete sense of to pray.

For far lever he hadde wende
And bidde ys mete yf he schulde in a strange lond.—R. G.

Bidders and beggars are used as synonymous in P. P.

For he that beggeth other biddeth but if he have need
He is false and faitour and defraudeth the neede.

In this sense the word is the correlative of Goth. bidjan, bidan, bath, or bad, bedun; AS. biddan, bæd, gebeden; G. bitten, bat; Icel. bidhja, or, in a reflective form, beidast.

2. To Bid in the sense of offering, bringing forwards, pressing on one's notice, and consequently ordering or requiring something to be done. Goth. bjudan in anabjudan, faurbjudan, to command, forbid; AS. beodan, bead, geboden; G. bieten, to offer, verbieten, to forbid; Du. bieden, porrigere, offerre, præbere, præstare.—Kil.

To bid the banns, G. ein paar verlobte aufbieten, is to bring forwards the announcement of a marriage, to offer it to public notice. Einem einen guten tag bieten, to bid one good day, to offer one the wish of a good day. To bid one to a dinner is properly the same verb, to propose to one to come to dinner, although it might well be understood in the sense of the other form of the verb, to ask, to pray one to dinner. Analogous expressions are G. einen vor Gericht bieten, to summon one before a court of justice; einen vor sich bieten lassen, to have one called before him.

With respect to logical pedigree, the meaning of bid, in the sense of ask for, pray, may plausibly be derived from Goth. beidan, AS. bidan, abidan, to look for. To pray is merely to make known the fact that we look for or desire the object of our prayers. The Lat. peto, quæro, signifying in the first instance to seek or look for, are also used in the sense of asking for. The Icel. leita is used in each sense (Ihre v. Leta), and the Sw. has leta, to look for, anleta, to solicit, just as the two ideas are expressed in E. by seek and beseech, for be-seek. The Icel. bidill, a suitor, from bidja, to ask, seems essentially the same word with AS. bidel, an attendant or beadle, from bidan, to abide or wait on.

Big. Swollen, bulky. The original spelling seems to be bug, which is still used in the N. of England for swollen, proud, swaggering.

But when her circling nearer down doth pull

Then gins she swell and waxen bug with horn.—More in Richardson.

“Bug as a Lord.”—Halliwell. “Big-swollen heart.”—Addison. “Big-uddered ewes.”—Pope in R.

The original form of the root is probably seen in the Icel. bolga, a swelling, bolginn, swollen, from belgia, to inflate; E. bulge, to belly, to swell, bilge or bulge, the belly of a ship, related to big or bug, as G. and Gael. balg, an entire skin, to E. bag. The loss of the l gives Dan. bug, belly, bulge, bow; bugne (answering to Icel. bolgna), to bulge, belly, bend. Compare also Sp. buque with E. bulk.

To Big. AS. byggan, Icel. byggia, to build, to inhabit; O. Sw. bygga, to prepare, repair, build, inhabit. A simpler and probably a contracted form is seen in Icel. bua, O. Sw. boa, bo, to arrange, prepare, cultivate, inhabit; Du. bouwen, to cultivate, to build; G. bauen, to cultivate, to dwell, to build.

Bigarroo. Fr. bigarreau, a kind of cherry, half white, half red, from bigarré, motley; bizarre, bigearre, bigerre, fantastical, toyish, humorous, also diversified in colour (having colours oddly assorted).—Cot. ♦ It. bizzarro, fantastical, giddy-headed, whimsical; ghiribizzi, humorous toys, sudden humours, fantastical conceits.—Fl.

A high degree of nervous excitation, whether from actual sensation or mental passion, is manifested by shivering, horripilation, and hence the image of shivering (as explained under Caprice) is used to signify a sudden fancy or unreasonable desire, the motives to which not being apparent, the attention of the bystander is directed to the bodily symptoms of the affection.

Thus from It. brisciare, to shiver, brezza, chillness or shivering, are formed ribrezzo, chillness or shivering, also a sudden fear or astonishment, also a skittish or humorous toy; ribrez- zoso, startling, trembling, full of astonishment, also toyish, humorous, fantastical, suddenly angry.—Fl. Now in words beginning with br., cr., &c., the liquid is very apt to be lost, as shown in numerous examples under Cuddle. Thus the It. has sbrisciare and sbisciare, to crawl, and the It. brezza is represented in French by a double form, brise and bise, a chilly wind. We shall therefore not be without the support of strong analogies, if we recognise the radical identity of ribrezzo and bizzarro, fantastical, passionate.—Altieri.

The root may be traced in some of the G. dialects. Swab. biz, anger; bizzel, excitation of the palate, eager desire, bizzeln, to tickle the palate, to make one long for, to make uneasy.—Schmid. Swiss. bitz, tart, agreeably sharp in taste.—Stalder.

Bight or Bought. A bend of a shore or of a rope. Icel. buga, a flexure, buga, to bend, to curve. AS. bugan, bigan; G. biegen, to bend.

Bigot. The beginning of the 13th century saw the sudden rise and maturity of the mendicant orders of St Francis and St Dominic. These admitted into the ranks of their followers, besides the professed monks and nuns, a third class, called the tertiary order, or third order of penitence, consisting both of men and women, who, without necessarily quitting their secular avocations, bound themselves to a strict life and works of charity. The same outburst of religious feeling seems to have led other persons, both men and women, to adopt a similar course of life. They wore a similar dress, and went about reading the Scriptures and practising Christian life, but as they subjected themselves to no regular orders or vows of obedience, they became highly obnoxious to the hierarchy, and underwent much obloquy and persecution. They adopted the grey habit of the Franciscans, and were popularly confounded with the third order of those friars under the names of Beguini, Beghardi, Begutta, Bisocchi, Bizzocari (in Italian Beghini, Bighini, Bighiatti), all of which are apparently derived from Ital; bigio, Venet. biso, grey. "Bizocco," says an author quoted in N. and Q. vol. 9, 560, "sia quasi bigioco et bigiotto, perché i Terziari di S. Francesco si veston di bigio." So in France they were called les petits frères, bis or bisets.—Ducange. From bigio, grey, was formed bigello, the dusky hue of a dark-coloured sheep, and the coarse cloth made from its undyed wool, and this was probably also the meaning of bighino or beguino, as well as bizocco. "E che l'abito bigio ovver beghino era comune degli nomini di penitenza," where beghino evidently implies a description of dress of a similar nature to that designated by the term bigio. Bizzocco also is mentioned in the fragment of the history of Rome of the 14th century in a way which shows that it must have signified coarse, dark-coloured cloth, such as is used for the dress of the inferior orders, probably from biso, the other form of bigio. "Per te Tribuno," says one of the nobles to Rienzi, "fora piu convenevole che portassi vestimenta honeste da bizuoco che queste pompose," translated by Muratori, "honesti plebeii amictus." It must be remarked that bizocco also signifies rude, clownish, rustical, apparently from the dress of rustics being composed of bizocco. In the same way Fr. bureau is the colour of a brown sheep, and the coarse cloth made from the undyed wool. Hence the OE. borel, coarse woollen cloth, and also unlearned common men. In a similar manner from bigello, natural grey or sheep's russet, homespun cloth, bighellone, a dunce, a blockhead.—Fla. From bigio would naturally be formed bigiotto, bighiotte, and as soon as the radical meaning of the word was obscured, corruption would easily creep in, and hence the variations bigutta, begutta, bigotto, beghino, begardo.

We find Boniface VIII., in the quotations of Ducange and his continuators, speaking of them as "Nonnulli viri pestiferi qui vulgariter Fraticelli seu fratres de paupere vitâ, aut Bizochi sive Bichini vel aliis fucatis nominibus nuncupantur." Matthew Paris, with reference to A.D. 1243, says, "Eisdem temporibus quidam in Alemannia præcipue se asserentes religiosos in utroque sexu, sed maximè in muliebri, habitum religionis sed levem susceperunt, continentiam vitæ privato voto profitentes, sub nullius tamen regulâ cōarctati, nec adhuc ullo claustro contenti." They were however by no means confined to Italy. "Istis ultimis temporibus hypocriticalibus plurimi maximè in Italiâ et Alemanniâ et Provinciæ provinciâ, ubi tales Begardi et Beguini vocantur, nolentes jugum subire verâ obedientiæ — nec servare regulam aliquam ab Ecclesiâ approbatam sub manu præceptoris et ducis legitimi, vocati Fraticelli, alii de paupere vitâ, alii Apostolici, aliqui Begardi, qui ortum in Alemannia habuerunt."—Alvarus Pelagius in Duc.

"Secta quædam pestifera illorum qui Beguini vulgariter appellantur qui se fratres pauperes de tertio ordine S. Francisci communiter appellabant."—Bernardus Guidonis in vita Joh. xx.

"Capellamque seu clusam hujus modi censibus et redditibus pro septem personis religiosis, Beguttis videlicet ordinis S. Augustini dotarint."—Chart. AD. 1518.

"Beghardus et Beguina et Begutta sunt viri et mulieres tertii ordinis."—Breviloquium in Duc.

They are described more at large in the Acts of the Council of Treves, AD. 1310. "Item cum quidam sint laici in civitate et provinciâ Trevirensi qui sub pretextu cujusdam religionis fictæ Beghardos se appellant, cum tabardis et tunicis longis et longis capuciis cum ocio incedentes, ac labores manuum detestantes, conventicula inter se aliquibus temporibus faciunt, seque fingunt coram simplicibus personis expositores sacrarum scripturarum, nos vitam eorum qui extra religionem approbatam validam mendicantes discurrunt, &c." "

"Nonnullæ mulieres sive sorores, Biguttæ apud vulgares nuncupatæ, absque votorum religionis emissionem."—Chart. A. D. 1499.

From the foregoing extracts it will readily be understood how easily the name, by which these secular aspirants to superior holiness of life were designated, might be taken to express a hypocrite, false pretender to religious feeling.—Tartuffe. Thus we find in It. bigotto, bisocco, a devotee, a hypocrite; Piedmontese bigot, bisoch, Fr. bigot, in the same sense. Sp. bigardo, a name given to a person of religion leading a loose life, bigardia, deceit, dissimulation; G. beghart, gleischnen (Frisch), a bigot or hypocrite, a false pretender to honesty or holiness.—Ludwig. "Bigin, bigot, superstitious hypocrite."—Speight in Richardson.

In English the meaning has received a further development, and as persons professing extraordinary zeal for religious views are apt to attribute an overweening importance to their particular tenets, a bigot has come to signify a person unreasonably attached to particular opinions, and not having his mind open to any argument in opposition.

Bight. See Bought.

Bilberry. The fruit of the vaccinium myrtillus, while that of vaccinium uliginosum is called in the N. of E. blae-berry, from the dark colour. Dan. blaa, blue; Sw. blåmand, a negro. In Danish the names are reversed, as the fruit of the myrtillus is called blaa-bær, that of the uliginosum bölle-bær.

The bilbery, according to Outzen, is also named from its dark colour, and he gives several examples of an obsolete bel, belg being used in the sense of black, dark; bel scedewuit, schwarz-beschattet, black-shadowed; bel baaren, beaten black and blue; belg-bundin, the black bottoms in which Odin's horses pastured; Dan. bælg mørk, pitch dark.—Outzen in v. biligjack.

Bilbo. A slang term for a sword, now obsolete. A Bilboa blade.

Bilboes. Among navigators, a punishment at sea when the offender is laid in irons or set in a kind of stocks. Du. boeye, a shackle. Lat. boja, Prov. boia, O. Fr. buie, fetters. Bojæ, genus vinculorum tam ferreæ quam lignæ.—Festus in Diez. This leaves the first syllable unaccounted for.

Bilge. The belly or swelling side of a ship. See Bulge.

To Bilk. To defraud one of expected remuneration; a slang term most likely from an affected pronunciation of balk.

Bill. 1. An instrument for hewing. G. beil, an axe; AS. bil, a sword, axe, weapon; Sw. bila, an axe, plog-bill, a plough-share; Du. bille, a stonemason's pick; billen den molen-steen, to pick a millstone.—Kil. W. bwyell, an axe, a hatchet. Gael. buail, to strike.'

2. The bill of a bird may very likely be radically identical with the foregoing. The Du. bicken is used both of a bird pecking and of hewing stone with a pick; bicken or billen den molensteen. AS. bile, the bill of a bird, horn of an animal. In the same way are related Pol. dziob, the beak of a bird, dziobać, to peck, to job, and dziobas, an adze; Bohem. top, a beak, tipati, to strike, topor, an axe.

Bill. 3.—Billet. A bill, in the sense of a writing, used in legal proceedings, as a bill of indictment, bill of exchange, bill in parliament, is properly a sealed instrument, from M. Lat. bullā, a seal. See Bull. A billet is the diminutive of this, a short note, the note which appoints a soldier his quarters. Du. bullet, billet, inscriptum, symbolum, syngraphum.—Kil.

Billet 2.—Billard. Fr. billot, a stick or log of wood cut for fuel, an ingot of gold or silver. Bille, an ingot, a young stock of a tree to graft on—Cotgrave; a stick to rest on—Roquefort. Langued. bilio, a stick to tighten the cord of a package. Fr. billard or billart, a short and thick truncheon or cudgel, hence the cudgel in the play at trap; and a billard, or the stick wherewith we touch the ball at billyards. O. Fr. billard also signified a man who rests on a stick in walking.—Roquef. Billette, a billet of wood; Billettes d'un espieu, the cross bars near the head of a boar spear to hinder it from running too far into the animal.

The origin of the term is probably from bole, the trunk of a tree, the o changing to an i to express diminution. A like change takes place in the other sense of billet from bullā, a seal.

Billow. Sw. bólja, Dan. bølge, Icel. bylgja, Du. bolghe, bulghe, fluctus maris, unda, procella—Kil. from O. Sw. bulgja, to swell. Du. belghen, AS. belgan, abelgan, to be angry (i. e. to swell with rage).

The mariner amid the swelling seas

Who seeth his back with many a billow beaten.—Gascoigne in R.

“Had much ado to prevent one from sinking, the billow was so great.”—Hackluyt in Do., where we see billow not used in the sense of an individual wave, but in that of swell.

So in Gr. οιδμα θαλασσης, the swelling of the sea, and in Lat. “tumidi fluctus,” “tumens æquor,” and the like are common-places. See Belly.

Bin. Bing. The proper meaning is a heap.

Like ants when they do spoil the bing of corn.—Surrey in R.

Then as side-boards or walls were added to confine the heap to a smaller space, the word was transferred to a receptacle so constructed for storing corn, wine, &c. Sw. binge, a heap, a division in a granary or bin. Icel. bunga, to swell, to bulge, bunki, a heap. Fr. bigne, a bump or knob.

The grete bing was upbeilded wele

Of aik trees and fyrren schydis dry.—D. V.

Gloss. Mons. pigo, acervus. See Bunch.

To Bind.—Bine.—Bindweed. AS. bindan, Goth. bindan, band, bundun. This word is I believe derived from the notion of a bunch or lump, expressed by Sw. bunt, Dan. bundt, G. bund, a bunch, truss, bundle, the primary notion of binding being thus to make a bunch of a thing, to fasten it together. In like manner from knot, Lat. nodus, a knob, I would derive the verb to knit, to bind together, as when we speak of one's limbs being firmly knit together. The idea which is expressed in E. by the verb knit or net, i. e. to form a knotted structure, is rendered in Icel. by binda, to bind; at binda nāt, to knot nets for fish, to net. Jith pinnu, pinti, to wreath, to plait. It seems more in accordance with the development of the understanding that the form with the thinner vowel and abstract signification should be derived from that with the broader vowel and concrete signification, than vice versâ. Thus I suppose the Gr. δεμω, to build, to be derived from δεμορ, a house, Lat. pendere, to hang, from pondus, a weight, the last of these forms being identical with the word which we are treating as the root of bind, viz. bund, bundt, bunch. Lith. pundas, a truss, bundle, also a stone weight, a weight of 48 pounds. The original meaning of pondus would thus be simply a lump of some heavy material, doubtless a stone. Another form of derivative from the same root is the verb to bend, to make into a hump or prominence, in the same way as from bug or bog, a prominence (W. bogail, the navel, boglyn, boss, knob, knot; Hung. bog, knob, knot, bud, bulb), is derived the G. biegen, to bow or bend.

Parallel with bind and bend we have wind and wend (G. wenden, to turn), which may have arisen from the actual change of the initial b into a w. The Sw. binda is G. winde, E. bind-weed.

The term bine or bind is applied to the winding or twining stem of climbing plants. Thus we speak of the hop-bine for the shoots of hops. The wood-bine designates the honeysuckle in England, while bind-wood, bin-wood, or ben-wood, is in Scotland applied to ivy. Here we see the root in the precise form of the Lith. pinnu, pin-ti, to twine.

Binnacle. See Bittacle.

Birch. AS. birce; Sw. björk; Lith. berzas (\dot{z} =Fr. j) Sanscr. bhúrja.

Bird. AS. brid, the young of birds; earnas brid, an eagle's young; G. brut, a brood or hatch of young. See Breed. We find the use of the word in this original sense as late as Shakespeare.

Being fed by us you used us
As that ungentle gull the cuckoo's bird
Useth the sparrow.—H. IV, y. sc. 1.

The proper designation of the feathered creation is in E. fowl, which in course of time was specially applied to the gallinaceous tribe as the most important kind of bird for domestic use, and it was perhaps this appropriation of the word which led to the adoption of the name of the young animal as the general designation of the race. A similar transfer of meaning has taken place in the case of pigeon, from Ital. pipione, piecione, properly a young pigeon, and of Fr. poule, a gallinaceous bird, E. poultry, from Lat. pullus, the young of an animal.

Birth. AS. beorth, Sw. börd, G. Geburt, from AS. beran, to bear, to bring forth. See To Bear.

Bishop. Lat. episcopus, from Gr. ἐπισκοπος, æp, overseer, overlooker. When compared with Fr. evêque, it affords a remarkable proof how utterly unlike the immediate descendants of the same word in different languages may become. Episcopus; It. vescovo, Fr. evesque, evêque.

Bisson.—Bisom.—Bisen.—Bizened. Blind, properly near-sighted. Du. bij sien, propius videre; bij siende, bij sienigh, lusciosus et myops, qui nisi propius admota non videt.—Kil.

Bit. The part of the bridle which the horse bites or holds in his mouth. AS. bitol. Icel. bitill, beitsl. Sw. betsel.

Bitch. AS. bicce; Icel. bikkia, a little dog, a bitch; applied also to other animals, and especially to a small poor horse. G. betze, or petze, a bitch, in Swabia, a pig; petz, a bear. Fr. biche, a hind or female stag. Something of the same confusion is seen in G. hindinn, a female dog; hindinn, a female stag.

To Bite. Goth. beitan, Icel. bita, G. beissen.

Bittacle or Binnacle. A frame of timber in the steerage of a ship, where the compass stands.—Bailey. Fr. habitacle, Sp. bitacora. Habitacle, a habitacle, dwelling or abiding place.—Cotgr. In Legrand's Fr. and Flemish dictionary habitacle is explained a little fodge (logement) near the mizen mast for the pilot and steersman. "Nagt huis, 't huisje, 't kompas huis."

Bitter. Goth. baitrs, Icel. beitr, bitr, apparently from its biting the tongue.

Peper ær bitter och bitar fast.

Pepper is bitter, and bites hard.—Hist. Alex. Mag., quoted by Ihre. Applied in Icel. to the sharpness of a weapon. "Hin bitrasta sverd"—the sharpest sword. When an edge is blunt we say it will not bite.

In a similar manner Gael. beum, bite, cut, and heum, bitter;

Gr. πικρος, bitter, is founded on the root pik, used in the designation of sharp and pointed objects.

Bittern. A bird of the heron tribe. It. bittore; Fr. butor; OE. bittour. Sp. bitor, a rail.

Bits. The bits of the anchor, Fr. bites, Sp. bitas, are two strong posts standing up on the deck, round which the cable is made fast. Icel. biti, a beam in a house or ship, a mast; bita-höfud, a bulkhead. Sp. bitones, pins of the capstern.

Bivouac. The lying out of an army in the open field without shelter. G. bei-wache, an additional watch, from wachen, to watch, corrupted in Fr. to bivouac, from whence we have adopted the term. But we formerly had the word direct from German in a sense nearer the original. Bivac, bihovac, a night guard performed by the whole army when there is apprehension of danger.—Bailey. Sp. vivac, town guard to keep order at night; bivouac, night guard, small guard-house.—Neumann.

To Blab.—Blabber.—Blabber-lip.—Blubber-lip. To blab, to talk much, indistinctly, to chatter; then to talk indiscreetly, to let out what should have been concealed.

I haif on me a pair of Lowthian hipps
Sall fairer Inglis mak and mair perfyte
Than thou can blebyr with thy Carrick lips.

Dunbar in Jamieson.

Why presumest thou so proudly to profecie these things
And wost no more what thou blaberest than Balaam's asse.

Halliwell.

Dan. blabbre, to babble, gabble. Pl. D. blabbern, G. plappern, to speak quick, confusedly, thoughtlessly; Bohem. bleptati, to babble, chatter; Lith. blebberis, a babbler; Gael. blabaran, a stammerer, stutterer, blabhdach, babbling, garrulous. All founded on a representation of the sound made by collision of the wet lips in rapid talking, and accordingly we find the same radical syllable employed to signify the sound of something wet or soft falling or striking against anything, and hence to designate the object making such a sound, a lump of anything wet or soft, drop of liquid, bubble, &c.

The Gael. plab is used to signify "a soft noise, as of a body falling into water, or water beating gently on the beach;" plabraich, a fluttering noise, a flapping, as of wings; plabar-taich, a continued soft sound, as of water gently beating the shore, unintelligible talk; plabair, a babbler.—Armstrong.

Then we have Sc. blab, bleb, or blob, a drop of water, blot of ink, bubble, lump of anything soft, as a large gooseberry, a coarse lip.

Wit hung her blob, even humour seemed to mourn.—Collins in Halliwell.

Hence a blabber lip, babber-lip (P. P.), blubber lip, a large coarse lip; Gael. blob, blobach, blubber lipped; Pl. D. flabbe, a large coarse mouth; Fris. bábbe, báppe, the chaps.—Outzen. To blabber out the tongue, to loll it out.—Halliwell.

The same train of thought is exhibited in Gael. plub, a sound as of a stone falling into water, the noise of liquor in a cask, any great and soft unwieldy lump; and as a verb, to speak inarticulately and rapidly; plubraich, gurgling, guggling, paddling in the water, a continued noise of agitated water.

The latter word illustrates clearly the formation of the English verb blubber, to make a broken incoherent noise in weeping. As a substantive the word blubber was used for bubbles, froth, foam, because produced by the agitation of liquids.

That he has seen blubbers upon the water of the Allochy grain—but does not know what they were occasioned by. That by blubbers he means air-bubbles.—Jamieson.

And at his mouth bluber stood of foam.—Chaucer.

Hence applied to any spongy substance, and specially to the spongy tissue filled with oil in which the body of the whale is enveloped.

Cetaceous fishes—whose whole body being encompassed round with a copious fat blubber.—Ray in R.

The directly imitative origin of these words, blab, blob, blabber, blubber, is further supported by the fact that they are accompanied by a series of parallel forms, differing only in the final consonant being a dental instead of a labial, and having nearly the same meaning as the foregoing.

The sound of driving rain or of a blow with a wet object is represented in Sc. by the syllable blad; a blad of weat, a heavy fall of rain; a bladdy day, a showery day. "A man may love a haggish that would not have the bag bladed in his teeth."—Sc. proverb. A blad, a spot of dirt on the cheek; a large piece of anything, especially of something soft; blads and dawds, large leaves of greens boiled whole. Gael. blad, a mouth, a foul mouth; bladach, garrulous, abusive, wide-mouthed; bladair, a babbler, synonymous with plabair. The OE. bloderit is used by Chaucer in the sense of blubbered, signifying noisy weeping, deformed by weeping.

She bloderit so and wept, and was so high on mode,
That unneþ she myght speke but other while among Wordis of diſcomfort, and hir hondis wrong.—Beryn. 464.

To bludder, bluther, to make a noise with the mouth in taking liquid, to make a noise in crying; to blether, blather, bladder, to speak indistinctly, to talk nonsensically.—Jamieson. Sw. bladra, to babble, and bladra, as OE. blubber, a bubble, blister. Lat. blaterare, G. plaudern, to babble.

Black.—Bleak. The original meaning of the word black seems to be pale. "Se mona mid his blacan leohte," the moon with her pale light; "blac-hleor ides," the pale-cheeked maiden. Pol. blakować, to lose colour, to fade; Russ. bleknut, to fade, to wither. G. bleich, Du. bleek, pale. Then as a pale complexion takes a bluish tint, the designation has passed on to mark the darker colours of the spectrum, and finally, in E. black, a total absence of all colour. The Icel. blackr is explained by Andersen, glacus seu subalbus; by Haldorsen, fuscus, obscurus, and in like manner the E. bleak is used to signify pale or light coloured, as well as livid or dark coloured. Fr. blesmir, to wax pale or bleaked.—Hollyband. Hasler, to sunburn, to make bleak or swart a thing by displaying it in the hot sun.—Cotgr. Bleak of colour, pallido, livido. To bleak in the sun, imbrunire.—Torriano. Icel. bleikia, mun-dark, albare, insolare. Here we see the verb to bleak, radically identical with bleach, apparently used in a diametrically contrary signification. In the one case the word is applied to things like the living skin, which, on losing their natural colour by exposure to the sun, take a dark tint; on the other, to textures which are rendered white by the same process.

In the North of England blake is used in the sense of yellow, applied to butter, cheese, &c. A blakeling, a yellow-hammer.—Brockett. “As blake as a paigle (cowslip).”—Ray.

Icel. blakki; candor sine macula.—Haldorsen. It. biacca, white lead. The similarity in sound and wide variation in meaning of many of these words designating colours are exceedingly puzzling.

Blackguard. A name originally given in derision to the lowest class of menials or hangers-on about a court or great household, as scullions, linkboys, and others engaged in dirty work.

A slave that within this twenty years rode with the Black Guard in the Duke's carriage (i. e. with the Duke's baggage) mongst spits and dripping-pans.—Webster.

I am degraded from a cook, and I fear that the Devil himself will entertain me but for one of his blackguard, and he shall be sure to have his meat burnt.—O. Play in Nares.

The word is well explained in a proclamation of the Board of Green Cloth in 1683, cited in N. and Q., Jan. 7, 1854.

“Whereas of late a sort of vicious idle and masterless boys and rogues, commonly called the Black-guard, with divers other lewd and loose fellows, vagabonds, vagrants, and wandering men and women, do follow the Court to the great dishonour of the same—We do strictly charge all those so called the Blackguard as aforesaid, with all other loose idle masterless men, boys, rogues and wanderers, who have intruded themselves into his Majesty's court and stables, that within the space of 24 hours they depart.”

Bladder. AS. blædre. Icel. blædra, a bubble, blister, bladder; G. blatter, a pustule; Bav. blatter, bubble, blister, bladder.

Commonly referred to G. blasen, O. H. G. platen (Adelung), to blow, as from Gr. φυσᾶω, to blow, φύσα, a bellows, bladder, φυσάλις, a bubble; from Cat. bufar, to blow, bufete, a blister; from Sw. blåsa, to blow, blåsa, a bladder, blister, G. blase, a bladder, bubble, blister. And doubtless, as far as the meaning is concerned, the derivation is perfectly satisfactory. The form of the word however makes me think it more probable that it is derived in a manner analogous to E. blabber, blubber, of which the latter is also used to signify a bubble [see Blubber under Blab], from an imitation of the noise made by the agitation of liquids. Blether, a bladder, also to make a great noise.—Halliwell. Bladder, Blather, Blether, chatter, foolish talk; to bludder, bluther, to blubber, disfigure with weeping; to bluiter, to blurt, to mix up with water, to make a rumbling noise.—Jamieson. Sw. blådra, to babble. It must be observed that the sound of voices is commonly described by means of words expressing in the first instance the agitation of liquids. The G. waschen, and Icel. skola and thwætta, are all used both in the sense of washing and in that of prattling. From the last of these are derived the Sw. twætta, to wash, E. twattle, tattle, twaddle, to talk much and idly, and Du. borrelen, to bubble, to purl; Fland. borlen, to vociferate, to shout.—Kil. In accordance with these analogies, I suppose the word bladder, blather, blether, signifying idle talking, to have been used in the first instance to represent the sound of paddling in water, and thence to have been applied to the bubbles produced by such agitation, then to any inflated pellicle, as a bladder. Perhaps the Sw. blådra, E. lather, may be evidence of the former use of blather in the sense of froth, bubbles.

Blade. Icel. bláð, the leaf of a tree, blade of a sword, or of an oar; G. blatt, leaf of a tree, sheet of paper, flap of a coat, &c.; Du. blad, a leaf, plate, board. The term is generally applied to anything thin and flat. It may be a modification of the root flat, It. piatto; Fr. plat; Du. G. plat; Gr. πλατύς, broad. But perhaps a more definite origin may be found in the notion of foam, or a mass of bubbles, which we have above endeavoured to indicate as the original signification of Bladder. The old Dutch form of the word is blader, a leaf, bladeren, leaves, branches; G. blatterig, leafy. And we have in foam a most complete example of leafy structure.

Blain. AS. blegen, Dan. blegne, Du. blegne, Icel. blina, a boil, pimple, blister. Perhaps from blegen, which Schwenk and Adelung give as an old Swabian form of the G. blähen, to blow. Or it may be a pale or discoloured spot. Dan. bleg, pale; OHG. blaken, macula.—Schilter. AS. blæco, pallor, vitiligo.—Lye. Compare E. blemish, from Fr. blesme, pale, wan, bleak, whitish, dead-coloured.—Cotgr.

Blame.—Blaspheme. Gr. βλασφημειν, to speak impiously. Lat. blasphemare, to revile, reproach, defame. Hence Ital. biasimare, Fr. blasmer, and E. blame.

Et per consilium eorum ita convenienter tibi respondebo quod cūm tecum loquar non credo te me inde blasphematurum.—Eadmer. Hist. Novorum, p. 86.

Que quand je parle avec vous je ne crois pas que vous m'en blamiez.

Blank.—Blanch. Fr. blanc, white; blanchir, to blanch, to make or become white; blanc, blanque, a blank ticket, a white or unwritten ticket, a ticket that does not obtain the prize. Hence applied to an occasion on which the result hoped for has not happened. Blank verse, verse void of the rhyme to which the ear is accustomed. To blank, or blanch. to disappoint, to omit, pass over.

Now, Sir, concerning your travels—I suppose you will not blanch Paris in your way.—Reliqu. Wott. in R.

The Judges of that time thought it a dangerous thing to admit if's and an's to qualify the words of treason, whereby every man might express his malice and blanch his danger.—Bacon in R.

The original root of the word is seen in the G. blinken, to shine, to glitter, as Lat. candidus, white, from candere, to shine, to glow. Dan. blank, shining, polished.

Blanket. From being made of white woollen cloth. Fr. blanchet, a blanket for a bed, also white woollen cloth; blanchet, whitish.—Cotgr.

To Blare.—Blatter.—Blatant. To roar, to bellow. Du. blaeren, probably contracted from bladeren, as blader, blaere, a bubble, blister, or as E. smother, smore, Du. modder, moere, mud. The present forms then should be classed with blether, blather, bladder, the origin of which has been explained under Blab.

She (the ship) roared at peace through his only pains and excellent endurance however envy list to blatter against him.—Spenser in R.

Blateroon, an empty boaster.—Spenser. Sp. baladron, s. s. baladrar, to bellow, talk loud and much; Du. balderen, to bellow, to cry, the place of the liquid being very easily transposed in these imitative verbs.

Du. blaet, blatero, ventosus, magniloquus, a boaster; blaeten, blaeteren, blaterare, stulte loqui, proflare fastum. Hence Spenser's blatant beast, the noisy, boasting, ill-speaking beast. Gael. blore, a loud noise; blaodhrach, blorach, clamorous, noisy. Ir. blaodh, a shout, blaodhrach, brawling, bawling.

Blast. A gust of wind. AS. blæsan, to blow; blest, a blast. To blast, to destroy, to cut off prematurely, as fruit or vegetables struck by a cold or pestilential blast of air.

Blatant. See Blare.

Blaze. 1. A strong flame. AS. blase, blæsa, blysa, a torch, a lamp; blasere, an incendiary; Icel. blossi, a flame; blys, Dan. blus, a torch; Du. blos, redness; Sw. brasa, fire, and, as a verb, to blaze; Sp. brasa, Fr. braise, live coal; embraser, to set on fire. A blaze is so intimately connected with a blast of wind, as to render it extremely probable that the word blaze, a flame, is radically identical with AS. blæsan, G. blæsen, to blow. If the fire were named from the roaring sound which it produces, it is obvious that the designation would be equally appropriate for the blast of wind by which the conflagration is accompanied and kept up, and which, indeed, is the immediate cause of the roaring sound. On the other hand, a connexion may be suspected with Icel. lios, light, lysa, to shine, as in Pol. lysk, polyšk, blysk, a flash, gleam.

2. A white mark on the face of an animal, a white mark on a tree made by stripping off a portion of the bark. In the former of these applications are found Sw. bläsa, Dan. blis, G. blässe, Du. blesse (Kil.). As Kilian has also blencke, macula emicans, a shining spot, probably the signification of a white spot on a dark ground may arise from the notion of shining like a blaze or flame, Sc. bleis, bless, bles.—Jam. It is remarkable, however, that a streak or mark of this nature is frequently designated by the same term with baldness. Thus the Du. blesse signifies not only a white streak on the forehead, but a bald forehead.—Kil. Bohem. Pol. lysy, bald; lysina, a baldpate, a blaze or white streak on the forehead. The E. bald is also used, in both senses, as has been observed under that word. Mid. Gr. βαλιος, φαλιος, Bret. bañ, marked with a blaze; Finn. paljas, bald. Bohem. pleš, Russ. plyesch, baldness, the priestly tonsure; plyeschina, a bald spot. Hung. pilis, baldness.

To Blaze.—Blazen. 1. To blow abroad, to spread news, to publish. AS. blæsan, Du. blaesen, to blow.

Remembering him that love to wide yblowe
Yelt bitter fruit although swete sede be sowe.

Troilus and Cressida, i. 385.

And sain, that through thy medling is iblowe
Your bothe love, ther it was erst not knowe. Ibid.

But now, friend Cornelius, sith I have blasened his vaunt hearken his vertue and worthiness.—Globe Book in R.

Utterers of secrets he from thence debarred,
Babblers of folly and blazers of crime.—F. Q. in R.

Sw. öron-blåsa, a whisperer, backbiter. Perhaps the expression of blazing, or blazening, abroad, was partly derived from the image of blowing a trumpet, as when we speak of trumpeting one's virtues. Du. "op een trompet blaazen," to sound a trumpet.

2. To portray armorial bearings in their proper colours; whence Blazonry, heraldry. Fr. blason, a coat of arms, also the scutcheon or shield wherein arms are painted or figured; also blazon or the blazing of arms.—Cotgr. The origin of this expression has given rise to much discussion, and two theories are proposed, each of much plausibility. First from the E. blaze, blazen, to proclaim, to trumpet forth, whence the Fr. blason used, among other senses, in that of praise, commendation; blason funebre, a funeral oration; blasonner, to extol, to publish the praises, proclaim the virtues of.—Cotgr. Du. blasoen, thraso, gloriosus, magniloquus, also præconium, laudes (Kil.). i. e. the matter trumpeted forth or proclaimed by a herald, which would ordinarily consist in the first place of the titles and honours of the party on whose behalf the herald appeared. Then, as the purport of armorial bearings was to typify and represent the honours and titles of the bearer, and to make him known when otherwise concealed by his armour, the term was transferred to the armorial bearings themselves, or to the shield on which they were painted.

The other derivation, which Diez treats as hardly doubtful, is from AS. blæse, a torch, a flame, splendour. The term would then be applied to the armorial bearings painted in bright colours on the shield or surcoat, in the same way as we speak of an illuminated MS.—a MS. ornamented with coloured paintings; Fr. planches illuminées, coloured prints. Prov. blezô, a shield, properly a shield with armorial device: “blezôs cubertz de teins e blancs e blaus,” shields covered with tints of white and blue. Or the word might spring from the same origin by a somewhat different train of thought. The AS. blæse, blase, is used in the sense of manifestatio, declaratio.—Lye. Icel. blaser vid, visui patet, it is manifest.—Anders. Hence the derivative blason, like the synonymous cognisance in English, might be used to signify the armorial bearings of an individual, as the device by which he was known or made manifest when completely cased in armour.

To Bleach. To make white. AS. blæcan, from blæc, pale. Icel. bleikia, Du. blaken. See Black.

Bleak. In a secondary sense bleak is used for cold, exposed, from the effect of cold in making the complexion pale and livid. See Black.

Blear. 1. Blear-eyed; having sore inflamed eyes, like one that has long been weeping. Pl. D. blarren, to blare or roar, to cry or weep. "He blarrede sinen langen tranen," he cried till the tears ran down. Hence blarr-oge or bleer-oge, a crying eye, a red watery eye.

2. The term blear, in the expression "to blear one's eye," to deceive one, is totally different from the foregoing, and seems identical with blur, a blot or smear concealing something that had originally been distinct.

He that doeth wickedly, although he professe God in his wordes, yet he doeth not for all that see God truly: for he is seen with most purely scowred eyes of faith, which are blurred with the darkness of vices.

Udal in Richardson.

In this sense it agrees with Bav. plerren, a blotch; plerr, geplerr, a mist before the eyes. "Præstigiæ, plerr vor den augen;" "Der Teufel macht ihnen ein eitles plerr vor den augen," the devil makes a vain blur before their eyes.—Schmeller. So in P. P.

He blessed them with his bulles and bled hure eye.

By a similar metaphor Pol. tuman is a cloud, as of dust or mist; tumanić, to cast a mist before the eyes, to humbug.

To Bleat. An imitative word intended to represent the sound made by sheep or goats. Gr. βληχασμαι, G. blöken, to bleat as sheep, or to low as oxen.

Blab. A drop of water, blister. See Blab.

Bleed. See Blood.

Blemish. A stain in a man's reputation, a spot, a fault, a disgrace.—Bailey. From the O. Fr. blesmir, tâcher, souiller, salir, to spot, to soil.—Roquef. The modern sense of the word bleme or blesme is pale, wan, bleak, dead-coloured.—Cotgr. blesmissure, blemissement, paleness, wanness, bleakness. As AS. blac includes the notion of pale and dark, and wan itself signifies not only pale but livid or dark of hue, it is probable that bleme was applied to the dark colour of lifeless flesh, and thence to a bruise, a spot, or blemish. The Promptorium has blemys-shen or blenschyn—obfusco.

According to Diez the proper meaning of blemir is to bruise or make livid with blows, from Icel. blámi; the livid colour of a bruise, livor, sugillatio, color plumbeus; bláma, to become livid. Sw. blema, a boil, wheal, pimple; Pol. plama, a stain, spot, blot, a blot on one's name or reputation; plamić, splamić, to spot; splamić sie, to stain one's honour or reputation, to disgrace one's name. So in Sw. fläck, a spot, blot, stain; fläck, på ens goda namn, a spot, a blemish in one's reputation.—Widegren.

Blench.—Blencher.—Blancher. To blench is sometimes used in the sense of blanking one, to make him feel blank, to discomfit, confound him. “Bejaune, a novice, one that's easily blankt and hath nought to say when he should speak.”—Cotgr.

For now if ye so shuld have answered him as I have shewed you, though ye shuld have somewhat blenched him therwith.—Sir J. More in Richardson.

At other times it is synonymous with blink, to wink the eye, shrink from a dazzling light, boggle at something, start back.

What is 't you blench at? what would you ask?
Speak freely.—B. and F. in Nares.

And thus thinkande I stonde still Without blenchinge of mine eie,
Right as me thought that I seie
Of Paradeis the moste joie.—Gower in R.

And now are these but mansbond (i. e. slaves) raskaile of refous—
For these ne shalle ye blenk.—R. B. 115.

Ne speddestu nogt mid thine unwrenche (trick)
For ish' am war and can well blenche.

Owl and Nightingale, 170.

To blink the question is to shrink from it, to wink at it, avoid looking it in the face.

In the same sense we have flinch, quinoch, and wince or winch, the fundamental meaning of each of which is rapid vibration, and thence an involuntary start.

To flinch is the equivalent of the Du. flikken, G. flinken, to glitter; flink, quick, active; to quinch, of Du. quincken, micare, motitare—Kil.; while wince or winch is a modification of wink, the vibration of the eyelids.

From the sense of rapid vibration blench came to be used for a trick, a movement executed for the purpose of engaging attention, while the agent accomplishes a purpose he is desirous of concealing.

Gif hundes urneth to him-ward (the fox)
 He genth wel swithe awaiward
 And hoketh pathes swithe narewe
 And haveth mid him his blenches yarewe.

Owl and Nightingale, 375.

It is then applied to rags flickering to and fro in the wind for the purpose of frightening birds, by the German hunters termed flindern, from their flickering or fluttering motion.

Lyke as the good husbunde when he hath sowen his grounde, setteth up cloughtes or thredes which some will call shailles, some blenchars, or other like shews to feare away byrdes.—Sir T. Elyot in R.

The term seems thence to have been transferred to beaters set to frighten back the game and drive them in the way of the sportsmen.

To Blend. A numerous class of words may be cited, with or without the nasal, representing the sound made by the agitation of liquids. Swab. blotzen, to churn, to dash cream up and down with a plunger; Du. plotzen, plonsen, to fall into water with a sudden noise, to plunge. To blunge clay, in potters' language, is to mix it up with water to a fluid consistency. Du. blanssen, to dabble in water.—Biglotton. Sc. to bluiter, to make a rumbling noise, to bluiter up with water, to dilute too much; bluiter, liquid filth; to bluther, bludder, to make a noise with the mouth in taking any liquid.—Jam. To blunder water, to stir or puddle, to make it thick and muddy.—Halliwell. Of this latter the E. blend, AS. blendian, Icel.

blanda, to mix, seems the simple form, but by no means therefore a previous one in the order of formation, as will be remarked in the observations on the origin of the word Blink. Sw. blanda vatn i vin, to dash wine with water. Afterwards applied to the notion of mixing in general, whether the subject matter is wet or dry, although in the latter case the consciousness of the imitative source of the word is wholly lost.

To Bless.—Bliss. AS. blithe, joyful, merry, blithe; blis, joy, gladness, bliss; blithsian, blissian, to rejoice, be glad; bletsian, to bless, to consecrate; bletsung, a blessing. OHG. blide, glad, joyful; blidu, joy; Paradises bliðnissu, the joys of Paradise; bliden, to rejoice. A similar development has taken place in the Slavonic languages. Russ. blago, well; blagaya, goods, riches; blajennii (Fr. j), blessed, happy; Serv. blag, good, sweet; blago, money, riches; Pol. blogi, blissful, sweet, graceful, lovely; Bohem. blaze, happily, fortunately, well; blahy (obsolete), happy; blaziti, blahoslaviti (= bene dicere), to make happy, to pronounce happy, to bless; blazeny, blahoslaveny, blessed, happy; Blazena, Beatrix.

From the action of the hand making the sign of the cross while blessing oneself or others, the verb to bless is sometimes found in the singular sense of to brandish.

Their burning blades about their heads do bless.—F. Q.

Scarce had I laid hands on my truncheon when they blest my shoulders with their pines in such sort, as they wholly deprived me of my sight.—Shelton's Don Quixote in R.

For the same reason a man is said to bless the world with his heels when he is hanged.—Nares.

Blight. A hurt done to corn or trees that makes them look as if they were blasted.—Bailey. Pl. D. verblekken, to burn up. “De Sonne het dat Koorn verblekket,” or “Dat Koorn is verblekket,” from blekken, to shine, to lighten. Perhaps the notion originally was that it was blasted with lightning. OHG. bleg, blích-fiur, lightning.—Brem. Wtb. Or, it may be from the discoloured faded appearance of the blighted corn. AS. blæc, pale, livid.

Blind. Deprived of sight. Goth. blinds, Icel. blindr, G. blind. Thence applied to anything which does not fulfil its apparent purpose, as a blind entry, an entry which leads to nothing; AS. blind-netel, a dead nettle, or nettle which does not sting; G. blinde fenster, — thüren, — taschen, false windows, doors, pockets.

A blind is something employed to blind one or prevent one from seeing, as a window-blind, to prevent one looking through the window.

The origin of the word must be treated in the next article.

Blink. A wink, a look, a gleam, glance, moment. AS. blican, to glitter, dazzle; G. blicken, to shine, to glance, to look; Du. blicken, to glitter; blick, a flash, a glance, a wink; blick-ooghen, to wink; blicksem, lightening. With the nasal, Du. blincken, to shine, to glitter; G. blinken, to twinkle, shine, glitter, and also to wink, as the result of a sudden glitter.

The sound of k before an s, as in Du. blicksem, readily passes into a t, giving G. blitz, a flash, glitter, glimpse, lightning; blitzen, to flash, glitter, lighten. The insertion of the nasal, as in the case of blick and blink, gives blinzen, blinzeln, to twinkle, wink, blink.—Küttner. Blinzler, a blinkard; blinz-äugig, blink-eyed, weak-eyed. Sc. blent, a glance; Swiss blenden, a flash of light; Dan. blende, to dazzle; Sw. blund, a wink, a wink of sleep; blunda, to shut the eyes. The term then passes on to designate the complete privation of sight. Du. *blindsele*n, cæcutire, cæcultare, to be blind, to act like a blind person.—Kil. G. blinzel-maus, or blinde-kuh, blind-man's-buff.

The origin of blind would thus be the figure of blinking under a strong light, and blink itself is sometimes used to express absence of vision.

To blink the question is to shut one's eyes to it, to make oneself wilfully blind to it. A horse's blinkers are the leather plates put before his eyes to prevent his seeing. Nor ought it to startle us to find the simple form of the word derived from a frequentative, as blinzeln, blindsehn. For this, I believe, is a much more frequent phenomenon than is commonly thought, and an instance has lately been given in the case of blend. Words aiming at the direct representation of natural sounds are apt to appear in the first instance in the frequentative form.

It is remarkable that in addition to the words with an initial l, which may be grouped around the Lat. lux, light—as Fr. luiser, to shine; lustre, brilliancy; Icel. lios, light; AS. lig, a flame, liget, lightning; Pol. lysk, a flash—two similar classes may be pointed out with an initial bl and gl. Thus,

Blister. Du. bluyster; Lat. pustula, pusula, a bubble, blister, pimple. Both the English and the Latin word are from the notion of blowing, expressed by cognate roots, which differ only in the insertion or omission of an l after the initial b.

The E. blister must be referred to AS. blasian, to blow, whence blast, bluster, to blow in gusts, to puff and be noisy, Bav. blaustern, to breathe hard, while Lat. pustula, pusula, must be classed with forms like Gr. φύσσω, to blow, G. bausen, busten, pausten, Sw. pusta, to blow, puff, swell.

The l, it must be observed, in imitative roots is an exceedingly moveable element, and easily changes its place, or is inserted or omitted. Thus we have blab and babble, bubble and blubber, Langued. blouca and Fr. boucler, to bubble, buckle, blouquette and bouclette, a little buckle, W. blisg, plisg, shells, husks, and pisg, pods, blisters.

Blithe. Goth. bleiths, mild, merciful; Icel. blidhr, mild, gentle; OHG. blide, Du. blijde, as in E. blithe, joyful. See Bless.

To Bloat.—Bloated.—Bloater. To blote, to swell, also to set a smoking or drying by the fire.—Bailey. Icel. blautr, soft, soaked. Sw. blót, Dan. blöd, soft. Sw. blöta, lägg i blót, to soak, to steep. Hence E. bloated, having an unsound swollen look, as if soaked in water. In like manner the Fin. kostua, signifying in the first instance to soak, is also used in the sense of swelling; kostia, subhumidus, inde humiditate tumidus. Sw. blótfisk, fish which is set to soak in water preparatory to cooking, cured fish.—Ihre. When fish under this name was imported into England, it was naturally supposed that the signification of the first element of the word had reference to the process by which it was cured, and hence to blote has been supposed to mean to smoke, to cure by smoke.

I have more smoke in my mouth than would blote a hundred herrings.—B. and F. in Nares.

You stink like so many bloat-herrings newly taken out of the chimney.—B. Jonson, Ibid.

Blob.—Blab.—Bleb. A small globe or bubble of liquid or lump of anything wet and soft; a blob of dew; a blob of ink, a blot; a blister, a gooseberry. Blabbit, blotted, blurred.—Jamieson. From the sound of a drop falling. See Blot.

Block. The stem or trunk of a tree.—Bailey. A solid mass of wood, stone, or the like. Hence, to block up the way, to close it with a solid mass. Gael. bloc, round, orbicular. Fr. bloc, blot, a block or log; en bloc, in bulk, in the lump or mass, taken altogether. It may be formed like clot, clod, blot, Sc. blad, from the sound of a small mass of something soft thrown against the ground. See Blot. The primary meaning would thus be a small mass of anything, an unformed mass, as distinguished from things fabricated out of it, the unhewn bole of a tree, any lump or mass of things.

But as the original meaning of Fr. boucle or the equivalent blouque (Hécart) seems to be a bubble, then anything round and prominent, as a buckle, or as in Prov. bocla, bloca, the boss of a buckler, perhaps the same figure may lie at the root of bloc in the sense of a round unshapen mass. Compare E. bulk and Pol. bulka, a bubble.

Blond. Fr. blond, light yellow, straw-coloured, flaxen; also (in hawks or stags) bright tawny or deer-coloured.—Cotgr. Diez suggests that the word may be a nasalised form of Icel. blaud, Dan. blød, soft, weak, in the sense of a soft tint, a supposition which is apparently supported by the use of the word blöde in Austria for a weak, pale tint.—Schmid. It is certain that we have in E. blunt a nasalised form of the foregoing root. But it is probably not to this root that blond is to be referred, but to the Pol. blady, pale, wan, It. biado (of which the evidence exists in biadetto, bluish, biadare, to grow pale. See Blue), blue, pale; biavo, blue, straw-coloured.—Diez, Florio. O. Fr. blois, bloi, blue; bloi, blond, yellow, blue, white.—Roquefort. Prov. bloi, liou, fair in colour, as the skin or hair. It should be remarked that the Du. blond is used in the sense of the livid colour of a bruise as well as in that of flaxen, yellowish; blond en blaauw slaan, to beat one black and blue; blondheid, couleur livide.—Halma.

Blood.—Bleed. Du. bloed, G. blut. Doubtless named for the same reason as Du. bloedsel, prov. E. blooth, G. blüthe, a flower, from the bright colour which these objects exhibit, from G. blühen, to glow. Both blut and blüthe are written bluat by Otfried, and blühen is used in the Swabian dialect in the sense of bleed.—Schmid. Erploten, to be red with rage.—Schilter. See Blow. 2.

Bloom.—Blossom. See Blow. 2.

Blot.—Blotch. The word blot arises from an attempt to represent the sound of a drop of liquid or portion of something wet or soft falling on the ground. Finn. plättätä, leviter ferio, sclopum edo surdum, to strike with a sound such as that which the Germans represent by the syllable Klatsch! Plätti, a spot, blot, or such a sound as that just mentioned. Prov. Dan. blat, blatte, a small portion of anything wet; en blat vand, skarn, a drop of water or filth; blæk-blatte, a blot of ink; koblatt (Sw. ko-bladde), a cowdung; blatte, to fall down, throw down. The Sc. blad represents the noise of a blow, especially a blow with something soft; a "blad o' weat," a heavy fall of rain; a blad, a lump of anything soft, a dirty spot on the cheek.—Jamieson. Then as a lump of something wet thrown on the ground spreads itself flat, Fr. se blottir, to squat or lie close. Blotter, to blot; blotte, bloutre, a lump, clod.—Cotgr. Dan. plet, a blot, spot; pletter i solen, spots in the sun; E. plot of land, a spot or small portion of land; G. plotz, a blow or the sound of it; platzen, platschen, as Sc. blad, to sound like a blow, to plash; platz-regen, a heavy fall of rain; blätz, a spot, a blot—Schwenck. E. blatch, to spot or blot.

If no man can like to be smutted and blatched in his face, let us learn much more to detest the spots and blots of the soul.—Harmar in R.

Blotch-paper, blotting paper.—Halliwell. Swab. blatsche, prov. E. a blanch, a blotch of pustules run together. Du. blutsen, to strike; bluts koorts, the spotted fever.—Kil.

But we may arrive at blatch or blotch from the same fundamental source by a somewhat different connexion. In these imitative roots a final t and k interchange very frequently, as well as an initial bl or pl, and gl, kl. Thus we find Du. placke, plecke, vleske, Sax. bleck, a blot, stain, spot of ground; plack- verwer, a dauber; placke, a blow; plack-papier, blotting paper.—Kil. AS. blæco, blæcthe, vitiligo, a discoloured spot on the skin, a bloach, blatch, blotch.

Parallel with the foregoing, but with an initial kl instead of bl, pl, we have Du. kladde, a blot, spot, blemish; klad-papier, blotting paper, waste paper; klad-boeck, Sw. kladd, a memorandum book, explaining Jamieson's blad, a portfolio; G. kleck, a blot, blur, spot; klecken, to blot, daub, scribble; kleck-papier, kleck-buch, blotting paper, memorandum book. To the latter form the Sc. clatch corresponds as bloach or blatch to Du. Kilian's bleck, plack. A clatch of lime, as much as is thrown from a trowel in a wall; to clatch, to daub with lime.—Jam.

Blot at Backgammon. See Backgammon.

To Blow. 1. AS. blawan, to blow, to breathe; G. blähen, to puff up, to inflate, a parallel form with blasen, to blow. In like manner Lat. fla-re, to blow, corresponds with Sw. flåsa, to puff, to breathe hard.

To Blow. 2. Bloom.—Blossom.—Blowze.—Blush. To come into flower, to show flower. The primary sense is to shine, to exhibit bright colours, to glow. Du. bloeden, bloeyen, bloemen, florere.—Kil. G. blühen, to shine with bright colours, to blossom, to flourish. We have before observed (under Blink) that the root signifying light and the connected ideas is developed in a threefold form, with a simple l as initial, or with bl, gl. With the former we have AS. lig, a flame, Icel. loga, Dan. lue, G. lohe, OE. and Sc. low, a flame, a blaze. With an initial bl, OHG. pluhon, to flame, erpluhites, exar-sisti, bluh, a flower.—Schmid.

The passage to forms with a final s is seen in Lat. lucere, Fr. luiser, to shine, whence a numerous class of related forms. Icel. tios, Dan. lys, light; Icel. lysa, to shine, and with an initial bl, Icel. blys, AS. blysa, Dan. blus, a torch. Du. blose, rubor, purpurissum, the redness of the cheeks, whence E. Blowze. "A girl whose face looks red by running abroad in the wind and weather is called a blowze, and said to have a blowzing colour."—Kennet in Halliwell. "To be in a blowze, to look red from heat."—Halliwell. Du. blosaerd, a red-cheeked person. Dan. blusse, to blaze, to flame, blusse i an-sigtet, to glow in the face, to blush, in which sense the Du. blösen is also used. Pl. D. blüse, bleuster, a beacon fire; Nord-blüse, the Northern lights; bleustern, bleistern, to shine, to glitter; de Bakken bleustert, the cheeks glow.—Brem. Wort. Swab. bluh, blut, blust, a flower, the part of a plant that exhibits glowing brilliant colours.—Schmid. Then with a derivative m, AS. blosm, blostm, Du. blosem, a blossom.

Again corresponding to Icel. liómi, splendour, AS. leoma, a beam of light, the form with an initial bl gives E. bloom, originally to shine, to gleam.—Jamieson.

The sone wes brycht and schynand clere
 And armouris that burnyst were Swa blomyt with the sonnys beme
 That all the land was in a leme.—Barbour.

And he himself in broun sanguine wele dicht

It is then applied to the bright colour of the healthy cheek, the lumen purpureum juventæ; to the delicate tint on certain fruits, and generally through the Gothic tongues furnishes the designation of a flower, for the reason above mentioned. Icel. blómi, blomstr, Du. bloeme, bloemsel, G. blume. E. bloom, flower.

Blow. We are in some doubt of the origin of this word. It comes very near Gr. πληγη, a stroke, from πλησσω, to strike; Lat. plaga, a blow, a stroke, Goth. bliggwan, OHG. bliuwan, to strike, Swab. blüuen, to strike, to throw. On the other hand, it may be named from the livid mark produced by a blow on the body. Du. blaeuw, blue, livid; blaeuwe ooghe, Fris. en blau ach, a black eye; Du. blaewoen, blowen, to strike; blauwel, a beater.—Kil. Pl. D. blawels, livid marks. Fris. blodelsa and blawelsa, wound and bruise. "Si quis alium ad sanguinis effusionem vel livorem vulgo blawe dictum læserit." "Ad livorem et sanguinem, quod bloot et blawe dicimus."— Hamburgh Archives, A. D. 1292, in Brem. Wort. "Nis hir nau-der blaw ni blodelsa," there is here neither bruise nor wound.—Wiarda. Blüen, blau schlagen.—Brem. Wort. From the sense of striking that of casting or throwing might be a secondary application, as in Swab. blüen.

O. Fr. blau, coup, tache, meurtrissure—Roquefort, a blow, a bruise. Du. placke, macula, labes, a blot, spot; placke van slaegen, ictus, a bruise.—Biglotton.

Blubber.—Bluther. These words seem directly formed by imitation, and are intended to represent the noise made by a mixture of air and liquid shaken together, or spluttering out together, whence the sense of bubble, froth, foam. "The water blubbers up."—Baker Northamptonshire Gl. "Blober upon water, bouteillis."—Palsgr.

And at his mouth a blubber stode of fome.—Chaucer.

Hence the modern application to the coating of fat with which the whale is enveloped, consisting of a network or frothy structure of vessels filled with oil.

Cetaceous fishes—whose whole body being encompassed with a copious fat blubber, which doth the same thing to them that clothes do to us.—Ray in Richardson.

Bohem. blubončiti, to bubble up.

At the present day the ordinary application of the verb to blubber is to 'weep' in a noisy manner, making an incoherent noise with the mouth, and thence to disfigure the face with weeping.

Her swollen eyes were much disfigured
And her fair face with teares was foully blubbered.—F. Q.

In the same way to bludder or bluther, to make a noise with the mouth in taking any liquid (Jam.), is used in the sense of blubbering or weeping.

Heraclitus if he had seen
He would have bluthered out his een.—Cleveland in Jam.

Her sweet bludered face.—Chaucer.

Blue. OHG. blao, blaw; It. biavo, Prov. blau, fem. blava.

Notwithstanding the little apparent resemblance, I have little doubt in identifying the foregoing with W. glas, blue, green, grey, pale; Gael. glas, pale, wan. The interchange of an initial gl, bl, or gr, br, is very frequent. We may cite for example G. glühen, blühen, E. glow, blow; Gr. γληχων, βληχων, a herb; Gr. βαλανος, Lat. glans; Ir. glaoth and blaoth, a shout; glagaireachd and blagaireachd, a blast, boasting; Bret. bruk, W. grug, heath. We thus identify the Celtic glas with G. blass, pale; O. Fr. bloes, blois, blai, blue; blazir, to make blue, and thence, to fade, to spot, to bruise—Roquef.; Langued. blazi, faded, withered, bruised; Prov. blezir, to fade, grow pale, dirty—Raynouard. The usual interchange of a final z and d connects these with Pol. blady, pale, wan, blednicé, to fade; It. biado, blue, pale, the evidence of which is seen in biadetto, blueish, and sbiadare, to become pale or wan.—Flor. Hence we pass to Prov. blahir, to become pale or livid, in the same way as from It. tradire, to Fr. trahir. The change from a medial d to v is still more familiar. We find accordingly It. sbiavare, as well as sbiadare, to become pale, and biavo (Diez), as well as biado, blue. The Romance blave is moreover, like the Celtic glas, applied to green as well as blue. Blavoyer, verdoyer, devenir vert; blavoie, verdure, herbe.—Roquefort.

Hence we may explain the origin of the It. biada, biava, corn, originally growing corn, from the brilliant green of the young corn in the spring, contrasted with the brown tint of the uncultivated country. "Biada, tutte le semente ancora in erba."—Altieri. The gradual change of colour in the growing plant from a bright green to the yellow tint of the reaped corn (still designated by the term biada) may perhaps explain the singular vacillation in the meaning of the It. biavo, which is rendered by Florio, pale straw-coloured. It is remarkable however that the E. blake (identical with AS. blac, G. bleich, pale) is provincially used in the sense of yellow. As blake as a paigle, as yellow as a cowslip.

Toward Aurora a-mørwe as I gan wake
 A fildefare ful eerly tok hir fihte
 To fore my study sang with her fetheris blaks.

Lydgate, in Percy Soc. x. 156.

Fieldfare, AS. fealo-for, from fealo, yellow.

The Du. blond is also applied to the livid colour of a bruise, as well as the yellowish colour of the hair. O. Fr. blô, blond, jaune, bleu et blanc.—Roquefort. Thus it becomes difficult to separate Mid. Lat. blavus, blue, from the Lat. flavus, yellow, Bohem. plawy, yellowish red, Pol. plowy, pale yellow, discoloured (plowieć, to grow yellow, to lose colour, to fade), G. falb, and E. fallow, fawn-coloured, reddish yellow.

Bluff. Du. blaf, planus, æquus et amplus, superficie planâ, non rotundâ; blaf aensight facies plana et ampla, a bluff countenance; blaf van voorhoofst, fronto, having a bluff forehead, a forehead not sloping but rising straight up.—Kil. So a bluff shore is opposed to a sloping shore. Blaffart, a plain coin without image or superscription.—Kil. A bluff manner, a plain unornamented manner.

The word is probably derived in the first instance from the sound of something falling flat upon the ground. Du. ploff, to fall suddenly on the ground, to plump into the water.—Halma.

It then signifies something done at once, and not introduced by degrees or ceremonious preparations; a shore abruptly rising, or an abrupt manner.

In like manner from an imitation of the same sound by the syllable plomp, Du. plomp, abrupt, rustic, blunt. See Blunt.

Blunder. The original meaning of blunder seems to be to dabble in water, from an imitation of the sound. It is a nasal form of such words as blother, blutter, bluiter, all representing the agitation of liquids, and then generally idle talk. Dan. pludder, earth and water mixed together, puddle, idle talk; pluddre, to dabble in the mud, to puddle, mix up turf and water. Then with the nasal, to blunder water, to stir or puddle, to make water thick and muddy; and metaphorically, blunder, confusion, trouble.—Halliwell.

To shuffle and digress so as by any means whatever to blunder an adversary.—Ditton in Richardson.

Analogous forms are Du. blanssen, in 't water dobbelen, to dabble—Biglotton; E. to blunge clay, to mix it up with water.—Halliwell.

To blunder is then, for the same reason as the synonymous dabble, used for the work of an unskilful performer. Blunderer or blunt worker, hebefactor.—Promptm.

What blunderer is yonder that playeth diddil,
He findeth false measures out of his fond fiddil.

Skelton in R.

Hence a blunder, an ill-done job, a mistake.

Like drunken sots about the street we roam:
Well knows the sot he has a certain home,
Yet knows not how to find the uncertain place,
And blunders on and staggers every pace.—Dryden in R.

The word is here synonymous with floUNDER, the original meaning of which is, like Du. floodderen (Weiland), to work in mud or water. To blunder out a speech, to bring it out hastily with a spluttering noise. G. herauspoltern or herausplatzen, to blurt or blunder out something.—Küttner.

See Blurt, Blunt, Bodge.

Blunderbuss. Primarily a man who blunders in his work, does it in a boisterous, violent way; subsequently applied to a short, wide-mouthed, noisy kind of gun.

Pl. D. buller-bak, buller-jaan, Sw. buller-bas, a blustering fellow; G. polter-hans, one who performs his business with much noise, bawling, and bustle; polterer, a blunderbuss, blunderhead, a boisterous violent man.—Küttner. From G. bullern, poltern, to make a noise. The Du. has donder-bus, a blunderbuss, from the loud report; buss, a fire-arm.—Halma.

• Blunket. A light blue colour. Pol. blekit, azure, blue. Probably radically identical with E. bleak, pale, wan, as the senses of paleness and blue colour very generally run into each other.

Blunt. Before attempting to explain the formation of the word; it will be well to point out a sense, so different from that in which it is ordinarily used, that is not easy to discover the connexion. Bare and blunt, naked, void.

It chaunst a sort of merchants which were wont
To skim those coasts for bondmen there to buy—
Arrived in this isle though bare and blunt
To inquire for slaves.—F. Q. .

The large plains—
Stude blunt of beistis and of treis bare.—D. V.

A modification of the same root, without the nasal, appears with the same meaning in Swiss blutt, naked, bare, unfledged; Sw. blott, G. bloss, It. biotto, biosso, naked, poor; Sc. blout, blait.

Woddis, forestis, with naked bewis blout
Stude strippit of thare wede in every hout.—D. V.

The blait body, the naked body.—Jamieson. The two senses are also united in Gael. maol, bald, without horns, blunt, edgeless, pointless, bare, without foliage, foolish, silly. Maolaich, to make bare or blunt.

Now the Swiss bluntsch, blunsch, is used to represent the sound which is imitated in English and other languages by the syllable plump, viz. the sound of a round heavy body falling into the water; bluntschen, to make a noise of such a nature, to plump into the water.—Stalder. A similar sound is represented by the syllables plotz, plutz—Küttner; whence Du. plotzen, plonsen, plompen, to fall into the water; G. plats-regen, a pelting shower of rain. We have then the expressions, mit etwas heraus-platzen, or heraus plumpen, to blunt a thing out, to blurt, blunder, or blab out a thing—Küttner; to bring it suddenly out, like a thing thrown down with a noise, such as that represented by the syllables bluntsch, plotz; plump; to plump out with it. Swab. platzen, to throw a thing violently down.

Peradventure it were good rather to keep in good silence thyself than blunt forth rudely.—Sir T. More in Richardson.

The term blunt is then applied to things done suddenly, without preparation.

Fathers are Won by degrees, not bluntly as our masters
Or wronged friends are.—Ford in R.

A blunt manner is an unpolished, unceremonious manner, exactly corresponding to the G. plump. Plump mit etwas umgehen, to handle a thing bluntly, awkwardly, rudely.—Küttner.

It is from this notion of suddenness, absence of preparation, that the sense of bare, naked, seems to be derived. To speak bluntly is to tell the naked truth, Sw. blotta sanningen. The syllables blot, blunt, plump, and the like, represent the sound not only of a thing falling into the water, but of something soft thrown on the ground, as Sw. plump, a blot, Dan. pludse, to plump down, Prov. Dan. blatte, to fall down, fling down; blat, a portion of something wet, as cow-dung.—Molbeck. Then as a wet lump lies where it is thrown, it is taken as the type of everything inactive, dull, heavy, insensible, and these qualities are expressed by both modifications of the root, with or without the nasal, as in E. blunt, Sc. blait, dull, sheepish.

Then cometh indevotion, through which a man is so blont, and hath swiche languor in his soul, that he may neither rede ne sing in holy chirche.

Chaucer, in Richardson.

We Phenicianis nane sa blait breistis has.-D. V.
Non obtusa adeo gestamus pectora Pœni.

Sc. Blaitie-bum, a simpleton, stupid fellow, and in the same sense, a bluntie. Du. blutten, homo stolidus, obtusus, inanis.—Kil.

“A blade reason” is used by Pierce Plowman for a pointless, ineffectual reason. Thus we are brought to what is now the most ordinary meaning of the word blunt, viz. the absence of sharpness, the natural connexion of which with the qualities above mentioned is shown by the use of the Latin obtusus in the foregoing passages. An active intelligent lad is said to be sharp, and it is the converse of this metaphor, when we speak of a knife which will not cut as a blunt knife. The word dull, it will be observed, is used in both senses, of a knife which will not cut, and an unintelligent, inactive person. Swiss bluntschi, a thick and plump person.—Stalder.

It will be seen that the G. plump, respecting the origin of which we cannot doubt, is used in most of the senses for which we have above been attempting to account. Plump, rough, unwrought, heavy, clumsy, massive, thick, and, figuratively, clownish, raw, unpolished, rude, heavy, dull, blockish, awkward. — Küttner. Plomp, hebes, obtusus, stupidus, plumbeus, ang. blunt.—Kil.

In like manner from the sound of a lump thrown on the ground, imitated by the syllable bot, is formed Du. bot, botte, a blow; bot-voet, a club foot; bot, plump, sudden, blunt, dull, stupid, rude, flat. Bot zeggen, to say bluntly.—Halma.

Blur. A smear, a blot. Bav. plerren, a blotch, discoloured spot, especially on the skin.—Schmeller. As the Du. has blader, blaere, a bladder; ader, aere, an ear of corn, and the E. to slubber or shur over a thing, it is probable that blur may be from bludder, bluther, blubber, to make a noise with the mouth, disfigure with crying—Jam.; bluter, to blot, to dirty, to blubber.—Halliwell.

The Sp. borrar, to blot, to efface; borron, a blot, a rough sketch; borroso, botched, bungled; seem related to the E. word through an elision of the l, as in G. blasen and bausen, to blow; Du. blaffen, baffen, to bark; E. spirt and splirt, blotch and botch, &c.

To Blurt. To bring out suddenly with an explosive sound of the mouth. Sc. a blirt of greeting, a burst of tears.—Jamieson. Related to blutter, bludder, as splirt to splutter. To splirt, to spurt out.—Halliwell. It. boccheggiare, to make mouths, or blurt with one's mouth; chicchere, a flurt with one's fingers, or blurt with one's mouth.—Florio.

Blush. See Blow, -2.

Bluster. To blow in puffs, blow violently, swagger. An augmentative from blast. Bav. blasten, blaustern, to snuff, to be out of temper.—Schmeller.

Boa. A large snake. It. boa, bora, any filthy mud, mire, puddle, or bog; also a certain venomous serpent that lives in the mud, and swimmeth very well, and grows to a great bigness.—Florio.

Boar. AS. bar, Du. beer. As the AS. has also cafor, and Du. ever-swin, it is probable that boar has no radical identity with G. eber, Lat. aper.

Board. Du. berd, G. brett, a board or plank. AS. bord, an edge, table, margin, Du. boord, a margin, edge, border. Fr. bord, edge, margin. Icel. bord, a border, outward edge, board, table, whence bord-vidr, literally edge-wood, i. e. planks or boards.

Med endilöngum bænum var umbuiz à húsum uppi, reistr upp bord vidr a utanverdom thaukom sva sem viggyrdlat væri.—Sverris Saga, c. 156.

Along the town preparations were made up on the houses, planks raised up outside the roofs, like the parapets (viggyrdil, war-girdle) raised on board a ship in a naval engagement.

Boast. To talk big, to puff oneself, to use inflated language, to threaten.

Sche wald nocht tell for bost nor yet reward.—Wallace.

Turnus thare duke reulis the middil oist

With glave in hand maid awful fere and boist.—D. V. in Jam.

The act of puffing and snorting is the natural expression of pride or anger. G. bausen, pausen, pausten, to blow, to swell the cheeks. Vor hoffart pausten, to be puffed up with pride. Baus-back, having puffed up cheeks; baus-backige reden, pompous language. Dan. puste, Pl. D. puusten, Fris. poesten, to blow. In a similar way poffen, to blow, to swell, proflare fastum, fumos jactare, efflare inanes glorias, grande loqui; Poffer, jactator, thraso, miles gloriosus, arrogans, ventosus.—Kil.

Boat. AS. bát, Du. boot. It. batello, Fr. bateau, Icel. bátr, W. bád, Gael. báta. It seems the same word with back, a wide open vessel. Bret. bag, bak, a boat, whence Fr. bac, a ferryboat.

To Bob.—Bobbin. To move quickly up and down, or backwards and forwards, to dangle; whence bob, a dangling object, a small lump, a short thick body, an end or stump; also a quick turn, whence, to bob, to cheat, in the same way that to diddle signifies deceiving one by rapid tricks. Gael. babag, a tassel, fringe, cluster; baban, a tassel, short pieces of thread. From the last must be explained Fr. bobine, E. 'bobbin, a ball of thread wrapped round a little piece of wood, a little knob hanging by a piece of thread. "Pull the bobbin, my dear, and the latch will fly up."—Red Riding-hood.

To Bode. To portend good or bad. AS. bod, gebod, a command, precept, message; boda, a messenger; bodian, to deliver a message, to make an announcement.—See Bid.

To Bodge. To make bad work, to fail.

With thjs we charged again; but out alas!
 We bodged again as I have seen a swan,
 With bootless labour swim against the tide,
 And spend her strength with over-matching waves.—H. VI.

The sound of a blow with a wet or flat body is represented in G. by the syllable patsch; whence patschen, to smack, to dabble or paddle; patsche, a puddle, mire, mud. Now unskilful action is constantly represented by the idea of dabbling; einen patsch thun, to commit a blunder, to fail, to bodge. "Hast scho' wide' patscht?" Have you failed again? "Etwas auspatschen," to blurt a thing out.—Schmeller.

Bodice. A woman's stays; formerly bodies, from fitting close to the body, as Fr. corset from corps. "A woman's bodies, or a pair of bodies, corset, corpset."—Sherwood's Dict.

Thy bodies bolstred out with bumbast and with bagges.—Gascoigne in R.

i. e. thy bodice stuffed out with cotton.

Bodkin. A small instrument for pricking, a dagger or large blunt needle. Lith. badyti, to stick, thrust with something pointed, as a horn, needle, bayonet; Bohem. bod, a prick, stitch; bodak, a prickle, point, bayonet; bodnu, busti, to prick, Russ. bodetz, a spur, bodilo, a sting; bodat, to butt, strike with the horns. French bouter, to thrust, and E. butt, to push with the horns, exhibit another modification of the root.

Body. AS. bodig, Gael. bodhag. It seems the same word with the G. böttich, a cask, the two being spelt without material difference in the authorities quoted by Schmeller; bottig, potig, potacha, a cask; bottich, bodi, the body of a shift; potahka, potacha, bodies, corpses; pottich, botich, a body. In like manner E. trunk and G. rumpf signify a hollow case as well as the body of an animal. We speak of the barrel of a horse, meaning the round part of his body. The Sp. barriga, the belly, is identical with Fr. barrigue, a cask.

The signification of the root bot, of which the E. body and G. böttich are derivatives, is a lump, the thick part of anything, anything protuberant, swelling, hollow. W. bot, a round body; both, the boss of a buckler, nave of a wheel, bothog, round, rounded; Wallon. bodé, rabodé, thick-set, stumpy; bodene, belly, calf of the leg.—Grandg.

The primary sense of body is then the thick round part of the living frame, as distinguished from the limbs or lesser divisions; then the whole material frame, as distinguished from the sentient principle by which it is animated. In like manner from bol, signifying anything spherical or round, E. bole, the stem of a tree; Icel. bolr, the trunk of the animal body, or stem of a tree, body of a shirt; Lap. boll, páll, pálleg, the body.

Bog. The word has probably been introduced from Ireland, where bogs form so large a feature in the country. Gael. bog, to bob, to move, equivalent to E. gog in gog-mire, quagmire; Ir. bogadh, to stir, shake, or toss; Gael. bog, soft, moist; bogan, anything soft, a quagmire; Ir. bogach, a bog, moor, or marsh.

To Boggle. To be scrupulous, to make difficulties about a thing like a startlish horse passing an object of terror. From bogle, a ghost or hobgoblin; bogle-bo, a scarecrow.—Jam. See Bugbear.

We start and boggle at every unusual appearance, and cannot endure the sight of the bugbear.—Glanville in Todd.

You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you.—All's well that ends well.

To Boil.—A Boil.—Boll.—Bole.—Bowl. Lat. bullire, bullare, Fr. bouillir, Icel. bulia, to bubble up, to boil. The origin is doubtless an attempt to represent the noise made by boiling water. The Sc. buller is explained by Jam. a loud gurgling noise, the sound of water rushing violently into a cavity, bubbling. Icel. bullt, the rumbling of the intestines.

Then as the boiling of water is produced by bubbles of steam rising rapidly to the surface, the Lat. bulia is applied first to a bubble, then to any small spherical object, a boss, stud, lump of lead on which the seal was stamped to authenticate a solemn document. Lap. pållo, a little ball, a silver knob or button.

A bubble affords so natural a type of roundness as to lead to a very general use of the root bol, bul, pul, in expressing the notion of roundness, swelling, protuberance, inflation.

Thus we have Icel. bola, a bubble, pustule, boil; Sw. bula, a bump, swelling, dint; Du. buile, puile, a boil or swelling; builen, puilen, Sw. bulna, to swell, to bulge; OE. bollen, bolne, swollen.

Ye ben bolnun with pride.—Wickliff in R.

Du. bol, swelling, cavernous; bol, bolle, a globe or sphere, the head or bulb of an onion, a round loaf; bolleken, the boll or seed-vessel of the flax plant. Sp. bola, Fr. boule, E. bowl, a ball or sphere of wood, lead, &c. Fin. pullo, a drop of water; pullo-poski, swollen cheeks, pullakka, round, swollen, pullistaa, to puff up; pulli, a round glass or flask; Icel. bolli, a cup, teacup; E. bowl, a round hollow vessel as well as a solid ball.

The idea of roundness is then made to include cylindrical as well as spherical curvature, giving Icel. bolr, the bole or round trunk of a tree, or of the animal body; W. bol, boly, the belly; Lap. boll, päll, pälleg, the body.

A similar series of designations from the image of a bubble may be seen in Fin. kuppa, a bubble, boil, tumour; kuppelo, kupula, a ball; kuppi, a cup; kupu, the crop of a bird, belly, head of cabbage, whisp of straw; kupukka, anything globular.

Boil. An inflamed swelling. Du. buile, G. beule. The name of an imposthume or swelling of this kind is usually taken from some designation of a bubble. Thus G. blase is a bubble in the water or blister on the skin. A bleb, a bubble, a blister or blain.—Ray. The word koppar signifies pocks or pustules in Icel., and bubbles in Fris. Dat waer kopet, the water boils.—Outzen. Finn. kupla, a bubble, blister, boil. So in Icel. bola, a bubble, blister, boil; bolu-sott, the small-pox. See To Boil.

Boisterous.—Boistous.—Bustuous. Boistous and bustuous were formerly used in the sense of rough, rude, uncultivated, unornamented, violent, strong, large.

And for rude words and boistous percen the heart of the hearer to the inrest point and planten there the sentence of things so that with litel help it is able to spring, this boke that nothing hath of the great flocde of wytte, ne of semelyche colours, is dolven with rude words and boystous and so drawe together as to make the catchers thereof more ready to hent sentence.—Chaucer, Testament of Love.

In the same short preface it is used in a widely different sense.

In winter whan the weather was out of measure boistous and the wyld wynd Boreas maked the wawes of the ocean se to arise.

As boystous as is here at baie.—Chaucer.

“Boystous, rudis ;” “bustus, rudis, rigidus ;” “rudis indoctus, boystous.”—Pr. Pm. and Notes.

Douglas translates Virgil's violentia by bustuousness. Lyndsay speaks of the “busteous blast” of the last trumpet.

It became a very frequent epithet of the wind, and hence perhaps the association with the idea of blustering led to the modern form of boisterous, applied exclusively to noisy, violent action, to which boistous was far from being limited in early times.

Time makes the tender twig

To boasteous tree to grow.—Turberville in R.

The real origin is the W. bwyst, wild, whence bwyst-fil, wild beast; bwystus, brutal, ferocious. — Spurrell. It is the same word with the G. wüst, wild, desert; Pol. pusty, waste, desert, empty, void, and figuratively, wild, loose, wanton, frolicsome; Du. woest, wuest, vastus, desertus, et sordidus, turpis, deformis, incultus; woest mensch homo agrestis, rusticus, durus, indomitus—Kil.; a sense in which boistous is frequently used by our early authors.

In Pl. D. the word becomes büster, wild, fearful, savage (approaching the form of the E. boisterous); “een büstern oord,” a waste ground.—Brem. Wört. Du. bijster, hideous, frightful, bewildered, troubled, and as an adverb, frightfully, violently.—Halma. “De stad bijster maecken,” to lay waste the town.—Kil.

Bold. Daring, courageous. Goth. baltha; OHG. bald, free, confident, bold. G. bald, quick. Icel. balldr, strong, brave, handsome; ballr, strong, courageous; Dan. bold, intrepid, excellent, beautiful; Sw. båld, proud, haughty, warlike. AS. balder, bealder, hero, prince. Fr. baud, bold, insolent; baude, merry, cheerful.—Cotgr.

Bole. The round stem of a tree, column of the throat.

And by the throte-bolle he caught Alein.—Chaucer.

“A captain—which with a leaden sword would cut his own throte-bolle.”
Hall in R.

The origin, as has been shown under Boil, is the root bul, bol, representing a bubble, and thence applied to anything round and swelling, as W. bol, the belly; Icel. bolr, Sw. bål, the trunk of a man's body, or of a tree. Another development of the same root is the following Boll.

Boll. The round heads or seed-vessels of flax, poppy (Bailey), or the like. Du. bol, bolle, a head; bolleken, capitulum, capitellum.—Kil. Bret. bolc'h, polc'h, belc'h; W. bul, flax-boll.

Bolster. The meaning of this word is a bag or case made prominent by stuffing, from a root signifying protuberance or inflation. It is applied to a boulting-sack in the Pr. Pm. “Bulte-pooké or bulstarre, taratantaram,” It has a much wider application in Dutch, where it signifies a mattras or pillow, or the stuffing with which it is filled, as well as the casing of grains or fruits, the husks of nuts or of corn, cods of peas and beans, &c., also the puffiness of a well-fed body; "bolster, pinguis corpore, bucculentus, malis plenioribus et inflatis."—Kil.

Bolster is related to Du. bult, a bulch or hump, bulte, a mattras, Sp. bullo, a protuberance, swelling, a pillow-case, and perhaps to bolsa, a purse or pouch, as Dan. blomster, a flower, to E. bloom, or as E. holster, a pistol-case, Sw. hölster, a covering, to Du. hulse, the husk or case of grain, &c.

Bolt.—1. A knob-headed arrow for a cross-bow.

2. A bar of iron or wood to keep something fast or to fasten one object to another; originally a rod with a large head to hinder its passing through an opening, for the purpose of fastening something at the other side. G. bolzen, a cross-bow bolt, also a large nail with a broad head and opening below (i. e. a bolt for a shutter).—Küttner. Swiss bolz, a perpendicular beam standing on another, whence bolz-gerade, bolt upright. Fr. boulon, a long big-headed peg of wood with which carpenters fasten pieces of timber together.—Cotgr.

Du. bout, bout-pijl, sagitta capitata—Kil.; bout van t' been, the thigh bone, from its large head; bout van het schouder-blad, caput scapulæ, the knob of the shoulder-blade.

The primary meaning of bolt is thus a head or knob, and in some parts of Germany bulbs and onions are called bolzen.

The origin is seen in Sw. bulta, Lat. pultare, to knock, to beat; Du. bulsen, pulsare; E. polt, a thump or blow.—Halliwel. Hence Du. bult, gibbus, tuber, a hump or lump.—Kil. E. polt-foot, a club foot.—See Boult.

Bomb. Fr. bombe, It. bomba, an iron shell to be exploded with gunpowder. From an imitation of the noise of the explosion. It. rimbombare, to resound. In E. we speak of a gun booming over the water; Du. bommen, to resound, to beat a drum, whence bomme, a drum; bombammen, to ring bells.

Dan. bommer, a thundering noise ; bomre, to thunder, to thump ; Gr. βομβειν, Lat bombire, to buzz, to hum ; W. bwm-ber, a murmur. "I bomme, as a bumble-bee doth or any fie. Je bruic."—Palsgr. in Way.

Bombast.—Bombasine. Gr. βομβυξ, the silk-worm, raw silk ; βομβυκια, silk dresses. It. bombice, a silk-worm, bombicina, stuff, tiffany, bombasine.—Altieri. The material called by this name, however, has repeatedly varied, and it is now applied to a worsted stuff.

When cotton was introduced it was confounded with silk, and called in Mid. and Mod. Greek βαμβακιον ; Mid. Lat. bambacium. It. bambagio, whence It. bambagino, Fr. bombasin, basin, cotton stuff ; E. bombase, bombast, cotton.

Need you any ink and bombase.—Hollyband in R.

As cotton was used for padding clothes, bombast came to signify inflated language.

Lette none outlandish tailor take disport
To stuffe thy doublet full of such bumbast.

Gascoigne in R.

When the name passed into the languages of Northern Europe, the tendency to give meaning to the elements of a word introduced from abroad, which has given rise to so many false etymologies, produced the Pl. D. baum-bast, G. baumwolle, as if made from the bast or inner bark of a tree ; and Kilian explains it boom-basyn, boom-wolle, gossipium, lana lignea, sive de arbore ; vulgo bombasium, q. d. boom-sye, i. e. sericum arboreum, from boom, tree, and syde, sije, silk.

Bond. A.S. bindan, band, bunden, to bind ; G. band, an implement of binding, a string, tie, band ; pl. bande, bonds, ties. O. Du. bond, a ligature, tie, agreement.—Kil. In legal language, a bond is an instrument by which a person binds himself under a penalty to perform some act.

Bone. G. bein, the leg, bone of the leg, the shank ; achsel bein, brust-bein, the shoulder-bone, breast-bone. Du. been, a bone in general and also the leg. Now the office of a bone is to act as a support to the human frame, and this is especially the function of the leg bone, to which the term is appropriated in G. and Du.

We may therefore fairly identify bone with the W. bón, a stem or base, a stock, stump, or trunk; and in fact we find the word in W. as in G. and Du. assuming the special signification of leg: W. bonog, having a stem or stalk, also thick-shanked; bon-gam, crook-shanked; bondeu, bonfras, thick-legged, from teu, bras, thick.

Bonfire. A large fire lit in the open air on occasion of public rejoicing. Named from the beacon-fires formerly in use to raise an alarm over a wide extent of country. Dan. baun, a beacon, a word of which we have traces in several English names, as Banbury, Banstead. Near the last of these a field is still called the Beacon field, and near Banbury is a lofty hill called Crouch Hill, where a cross (or crouch) probably served to mark the place of the former beacon. The origin of the word is probably the W. bàn, high, lofty, tall, whence ban-ffagh, a lofty blaze, a bonfire. Many lofty hills are called Beacons in E. and Ban in W.; as the Brecknockshire Banns, or Vanns, in W. Bànu Brychyniog, also called Brecknock Beacons.

Bonnet. Fr. bonnet. Gael. bonaid; a head-dress. The word seems of Scandinavian origin. From bo, boa, bu, to dress, to set in order, bonad, reparation, dress. Hufvud-bonad, head-dress; wágg-bonad, wall hangings, tapestry. But bonad does not appear to have been used by itself for head-dress. Irish. boinead, a bonnet or cap, is referred to beann, the top or summit (equivalent to W. penn, head), and eide, dress.

Booby. The character of folly is generally represented by the image of one gaping and staring about, wondering at everything. Fr. badaud, a fool, dolt, ass, gaping hoyden—Cotgr.; from badare, to gape. A gaby, a silly fellow, gaping about with a vacant stare.—Baker. Gawney, a simpleton, ibid.; from AS. ganian, to yawn.

On the same principle from ba, representing the sound naturally made in opening the mouth, Ir. bobo! Gr. βαβα! an interjection of wonder; Sp. bobo, foolish; Rouchi, baia, the mouth, and figuratively a gaping imbecile; babaie, baïou, in the same sense.—Hécart. Walon. bâber, boubair, bâbau, boi-bié; It. babbéo, a booby, simpleton, blockhead.

Book. AS. boc; Goth. boka, letter, writing; þokos, the scriptures; bokareis, a scribe; G. buch-stab, a letter; O. Slav. bükui, a letter; Russ. búkva, bukváry, the alphabet. Diefenbach suggests that the origin is buki, signifying beech, the name of the letter b, the first consonant of the alphabet, although in the OG. and Gael. alphabet that letter is named from the birch instead of the beech.

Boom. In nautical language, which is mostly derived from the Low German and Scandinavian dialects, a boom is a beam or pole used in keeping the sails in position, or a large beam stretched across the mouth of a harbour for defence.

Du. boom, a tree, pole, beam, bolt.—Kil.

To Boom. To sound loud and dull like a gun. Du. bommen. See Bomb.

Boon. A favour, a good turn or request.—Bailey. The latter is the original meaning. AS. ben, bene, petition, prayer. Thin ben is gehyred, Luke i. 13. Icel. beidne, petition, from beida (E. bid), to ask.

Boor. A peasant, countryman, clown. Du. boer, G. bauer, from Du. bowwen, to till, cultivate, build, G. bauen, to cultivate, inhabit, build; Icel. buá, to prepare, set in order, dress, till, inhabit.

From the sense of inhabiting we have neighbour, G. nachbar, one who dwells nigh.

From the participle present, Icel. buandi, boandi, comes bondi, the cultivator, the possessor of the farm, master of the house, hus-band.

See Bown, Busk, Build.

Boot. Fr. botta. Du. bote, boten-schoen, pero, calceus rusticus e crudo corio.—Kil. Swab. bossen, short boots.—Schm. It would appear that in Kilian's time the Du. bote was similar to the Irish brogue and Indian mocassin, a bag of skin or leather, enveloping the foot and laced on the instep. It is thus doubtless the same word with the It. botta, Sp. Prov. bota, Fr. botte, a hollow skin, a vessel for holding liquids.—See Butt.

To Boot.—Bootless. To boot, to aid, help, succour.—Bailey. Boot of bale, remedy of evil, relief from sorrow. To give a thing to-boot is to give it into the bargain, to give it to improve the conditions already proposed or agreed on.

Clement the cobeler cast off hus cloke
 And to the nywe fayre nempned it to selle ;
 Hick the hakeneyeman hitte hus hod after—
 There were chapmen ychose the chaffare to preise
 That he that hadde the hod sholde nat habbe the cloke,
 The betere thing by arbitours sholde bote the werse.—P. P.

i. e. should contribute something to make the bargain equal. Bootless, without advantage, not contributing to further the end we have in view. Du. boete, baete, aid, remedy, amendment ; boeten, to mend, and hence to fine, to expiate ; boeten den dorst, to quench one's thirst ; boeten het vier, AS. betan fyr, to betē the fire, properly to mend the fire, but used in the sense of laying or lighting it, struere ignem, admovere titiones.—Kil. Fr. boute-feu, an incendiary.

For the derivation of the word see Abet, where it is deducted from the setting on of dogs, an image which furnishes a designation for the act of blowing up the fire in other instances. Thus from uzz ! izz ! the cry used in irritating a dog and setting him on to fight, the It. has uzzare, izzare, aizzare, adizzare, atizzare, attizzare, to set dogs on to fight, to provoke, to stir up the fire. From the notion of mending the fire the signification may have been extended to that of mending in general ; or the figure of urging forwards dogs may have been used to express the idea of driving forwards, pushing on towards an object, and thus of obtaining a better position. If the latter be the path by which the idea of mending has been attained, it is probable that the Du. baete, advantage, utilitas, commodum, lucrum, et medela, remedium; baet, bat, bet, potius, melius, magis, plus—Kil.; and the E. better must be explained in the same manner. It will be observed that the word advantage literally signifies furtherance, the being pushed forwards, and thus the equivalent baete, above mentioned, might well be derived from a verb signifying to urge or push onwards, while the adverb baet, bat, bet would signify in a higher or further degree, in a condition more conducive to the object of desire.

The Goth. hwa boteitk mannan, what boots it a man, what does it better a man, might have been translated, what does it advance a man, what does it further him.

It is naught honest, it may not avauuce
For to have dealing with such base poraille.

Chaucer. Friar's Prol.

Booth. This word is very widely spread in the sense of a slight erection, a shelter of branches, boards, &c. Gael. both, bothag, bothan, a bothy, cottage, hut, tent, bower. Bohem. bauda, budka, a hut, a shop; budowati, to build; Pol. buda, a booth or shed, budowac, to build. Icel. bud, a hut or tent, a shed, a shop. O. Sw. sædes-bod, a granary; mat-bod, a cupboard. Du. boede, boeye, a hut, cupboard, barn, cellar.

Neither G. bauen, to build, nor E. abode, afford a satisfactory explanation. In the Slavonic languages the word signifying to build seems a derivative rather than a root. See Bower.

Booty. It is admitted that Fr. butin, It. bottino, are derived from G. beute. The Sw. byte points to the verb byta, to exchange or divide, as the origin of the word, the primary signification of which would thus be the division of the spoil.

Halfva bytning af alt that rof.

A half share of all that spoil.

Hist. Alexand. Mag. in Ihre.

In like manner the booty taken in war is called in Icel. grip-deildi and hlut-skipti, from deila and skipta, to divide.

Borachio. A wine-skin, and metaphorically a drunkard.

Sp. borracha, a leather bag or bottle for wine. Gael. borracha, a bladder, from borra, to swell. See Burgeon.

Border. Fr. bordure, a border, welt, hem or gard of a garment, from bord, edge, margin. Icel. bord, limbus, ora, extremitas; bordi, fimbria, limbus.

To Bore.—Burin. G. bohren, Icel. bora, Lat. forare. Hung. furni, to bore, furó, a borer; Fin. puras, a chisel, terebra sculptoria; purastoa, scalpo, terebro, sculpo; Ostiak. por, par, a borer, piercer.

The Fin. purra, to bite, leaves little doubt as to the primitive image from whence the expression is taken, the action of biting affording the most obvious analogy from whence to name the operation of a cutting instrument, or the gradual working a hole in anything. The Icel. bit is used to signify the point or edge of a knife; bitr, sharp, pointed. We speak in E. of an edge that will not bite, and it is doubtless in the sense of Icel. bit that the term centre-bit is applied to an instrument for boring. The corresponding forms in Lap. are pârret, to bite, and thence to eat; and pârrets, an awl, a borer.

The analogy between the operation of a cutting instrument and the act of gnawing or biting leads to the application of Fin. puru, Esthon. purro, to anything comminuted by either kind of action, as Fin. puru, chewed food for infants, sahan puru, Esthon. pu purro (saha = saw; pu = wood), OHG. uz-boro, urboro, sawdust, the gnawings as it were of the saw or borer.

Another derivation from Fin. purra, to bite, is purin, dens mordens vel caninus, the equivalent of the It. borino, bolino, a graver's small pounce, a sharp chisel for cutting stone with—Flor.; Fr. and E. burin, an engraver's chisel, the tool with which he bites into his copper plate. Compare Manx, birrag, a sharp-pointed tooth, or anything pointed, Gael. biorag, a tusk, which are probably from the same root. Fin. puras, a chisel, differs only in termination.

Boreal. Lat. Boreas, the North Wind, borealis, northern. Russ. borei, the N. wind; burya, tempest, storm.

Borough. A word spread over all the Teutonic and Romance languages. AS. burg, burh, byrig, a city, whence the frequent occurrence of the termination bury in the names of English towns, Canterbury, Newbury, &c. Goth. baurgs, Icel. borg, It. borgo, Fr. bourg. Gr. πυργος, a tower, is probably radically connected. "Castellum parvum quem burgum vocant."—Vegetius in Diez. Hence must have arisen burgensis, a citizen, giving rise to It. borgese, Fr. bourgeois, E. burgess, a citizen.

The origin seems to be the Goth. baorgan, AS. beorgan, to protect, to keep, preserve. G. bergen, to save, to conceal, withhold; Dan. bjerg, to save. Sw. berga, to save, to take in, to contain. Solen bergas, the sun sets. The primitive idea seems to bring under cover. See Bury, Borrow.

Borrel. A plain rude fellow, a boor.—Bailey. Frequently applied to laymen in contradistinction to the more polished clergy.

But wele I wot as nice fresche and gay
Som of hem ben as borel folkis ben,
And that unsittyng is to here degre.

Oocleve in Halliwell.

The origin of the term is the O. Fr. borel, burel, coarse cloth made of the undyed wool of brown sheep, the ordinary dress of the lower orders, as it still is in parts of Savoy and Switzerland. See Bureau. In like manner It. bizocco (from bizo, grey), primarily signifying coarse brown cloth, is used in the sense of coarse, clownish, unpolished, rustic, rude.—Altieri.

To Borrow. Properly to obtain money on security, from AS. borg, borh, a surety, pledge, loan. "Gif thu feoh to borh gesyllo," if thou give money on loan. G. bürge, a surety, bail; bürgen, to become a surety, to give bail or answer for another. AS. beorgan, to protect, secure.

Borsholder.—Borrowholder. A head-borough or chief constable. By the Saxon laws there was a general system of bail throughout the country, by which each man was answerable for his neighbour.

“Ic wille that eac man sy under borge ge binnan burgum ge butan bur-gum.” I will that every man be under bail, both within towns and with-out.—Laws of Edgar in Bosworth.

Hence “borhes ealdor,” the chief of the “borh,” or system of bail, corrupted, when that system was forgotten, into bors-holder, borough-holder, or head-borough, as if from the verb to hold, and borough in the sense of a town.

Bosh. A word lately introduced from our intercourse with the East, signifying nonsense. Turk. bosh, empty, vain, use-less, agreeing in a singular manner with Sc. boss, hollow, empty, poor.—Jamieson.

Boss. Fr. bosse, a bunch or hump, any round swelling, a wen, botch, knob, knot, knur.—Cotgr. Du. bosse, busse, the boss or knob of a buckler; bos, bussel, a bunch, tuft, bundle.

The words signifying a lump or protuberance have com-monly also the sense of striking, knocking, whether from the fact that a blow is apt to produce a swelling in the body struck, or because a blow can only be given by a body of a certain mass, as we speak of a thumping potato, a bouncing baby; or perhaps it may be that the protuberance is considered as a pushing or striking out, as projection from jacere, to cast. The Gael. cnoc, an eminence, agrees with E. knock; while Gael. cnag signifies both a knock and a knob; cnap, a knob, a boss, a little blow. E. cob, a blow, and also a lump or piece.—Hal-liwell. A bump is used in both senses of a blow and a pro-tuberance. Bunch, which now signifies a knob, was formerly used in the sense of knocking. Du. butsen, botsen, to strike; butse, botse, a swelling, bump, botch.

Corresponding to boss in the sense of a lump we have Du. bossen, It. bussare, Fr. bousser (Roquefort), to knock; Bav. buschen, bauschen, bossen, to strike so as to give a dull sound, and on the other hand G. bausch, a projection, bunch, whip of straw or the like.

A final ss exchanges so frequently with a t, that the fore-going must be considered as closely related to forms like the E. butt, to strike with the head; Du. bot, botte, impulsus, ic-tus; Fr. bouter, to thrust; It. buttare, Sp. botar, to cast, and here also we find the same connexion with the notion of a lump or round mass. Fr. bot, a luncheon or ill-favoured big piece of; ill-favouredly round, as pied-bot, a club foot; botte, a bunch, bundle; W. bot, a round body.—Spurrel.

Then from the peculiar resonance of a blow on a hollow object, or perhaps also from looking at the projection from within instead of without, the Sc. boss, bos, bois is used in the sense of hollow, empty, poor, destitute. A boss sound, that which is emitted by a hollow body.—Jam. Bos bucklers, hollow bucklers.—D. V. The boss of the side, the hollow between the ribs and the side.—Jam.

A boss is then a hollow vessel, a small cask or large jar; Fr. busse, a cask.—Dict. de Trevoux. Bossé, tonneau.—Vocab. de Vaud. Du. buyse, a jar, and also as E. boss; a pipe, cock, water-conduit. “The Bosses at Belinsgate.”—Stow.

In the latter sense the origin is probably from the notion of a tap or stopper (Fr. boucher, to stop, from bousse, bousche, a bunch) regulating the flow of water, the name of which is transferred, as in the case of It. doccia, to the pipe or spout through which the water is conveyed. See Dock.

Botch. Du. botsen, butsen, to strike, botse, butse, a contusion, bump, boil, botch. It. bozza, a botch, blain, pock; bozzare, to blister, swell, bladder. Gael. boc, a blow, a stroke; bóc, a pimple, pustule; It. boccia, a bubble, bunch, bud; buccia, a bud, cod, husk. For the connexion between the senses of a blow and a protuberance, see Boss.

To Botch. To mend by patching, hence to do work clumsily and ill-favouredly.—Bailey. Du. boetsen, butsen.—Kil. From the notion of striking, as the synonymous cobble, from cob, to strike. Swiss batschen, bâtschen, to give a sounding blow, to smack; bâtsch, a lump; batschen, patschen, to botch or patch.—Stalder.

Bote. House-bote, fire-bote, signifies a supply of wood to repair the house, to mend the fire. AS. bót, from betan, to repair. See Boot.

Both. AS. Butu, butwo, batwa; O. Sax. bethia, béde; Icel. bádir, gen. beggia; Goth. ba, baioths; Sanser. ubhau; Lith. abbu, abbu-du; Lett. abbi, abbi-diwi; Slavon. oba, oba-dwa; Lat. ambo.—Diefenbach.

Bottle. This word has two very distinct meanings, which however may be reduced to the same ultimate root: 1. a hollow vessel for holding liquids; 2. a small bundle of hay.

In the former sense it is immediately from Fr. bouteille, It. bottiglia, the diminutive of It. botte, Fr. botte, boute, a vessel for holding liquids.—Diez. See Butt. Fr. bouteille is also a water-bubble, in which sense bottle is provincially used in E.—Halliwell. Prov. botola, a tumour, tubercle.

In the second sense, "a bottle of hay" is the Bret. bótel foenn; Fr. botel, boteau, the diminutive of botte, a bunch, bundle; botte de foin, a wisp of hay; Gael. boiteal, boitean, a bundle of hay or straw. Fr. bot, a lump. For the primary origin of the word, see Boss.

Bottom. AS. botm, the lowest part, depth. "Fyre to botme," to the fiery abyss.—Cædm. Du. bodem; G. boden; Icel. botn, Dan. bund, Lat. fundus. The Gr. βυθος, βενθος, a depth, and αβυσσος, an abyss or bottomless pit, seem developments of the same root, another modification of which may be preserved in Gael. bun, a root, stock, stump, bottom, foundation; W. bón, stem or base, stock, butt end. See Bound. Ostiak, pede, sole, bottom; Wotiak, pydes, ground, sole, bottom.

2. A bottom is also used in the sense of a ball of thread, whence the name of the weaver in Midsummer Night's Dream. The word bottom or bothum was also used in OE. for a bud. Both applications are from the root bot, both, in the sense of projection, round lump, boss. See Boss. A bottom of thread, like bobbín, signifies a short thick mass. The W. has bot, a round body; both, boss of a buckler, nave of a wheel; bothel, pothel, a blister, pimple—Richards; bothog, round, botwm, a boss, a button; Fr. bouton, a bud.

Bother. From the Irish, where the word signifies grief, affliction.—Garnet. Phil. Trans. i. 171.

Bott. A belly-worm, especially in horses. Gacl. botus, a bott; boiteag, a maggot. Bouds, maggots in barley.—Bailey.

Bough. The branch of a tree. AS. bog, boh, from bugan, to bow, bend.

Bough-pot, or Bow-pot, a jar to set boughs in for ornament, as a nosegay.

“Take care my house be handsome

And the new stools set out, and boughs and rushes

And flowers for the windows and the Turkey carpet.”—

“Why would you venture so fondly on the strawings,

There’s mighty matter in them, I assure you,

And in the spreading of a bough-pot.”

B. and F. Coxcomb. iv. 3.

Bought.—Bout.—Bight. The boughts of a rope are the separate folds when coiled in a circle, from AS. bugan, to bow or bend; and as the coils come round and round in similar circles, a bout, with a slight difference of spelling, is applied to the turns of things that succeed one another at certain intervals, as a bout of fair or foul weather. So It. volta, a turn or time, an occasion, from volgere, to turn.

A bight is merely another pronunciation of the same word, signifying in nautical language a coil of rope, the hollow of a bay. The Bight of Benin, the bay of Benin. Dan. bugt, bend, turn, winding, gulf, bay:

To Boul.—Belt. To sift meal by shaking it backwards and forwards in a sack or cloth of loose texture. Du. buydel, bulga, crumena, sacculus.—Kil. G. beutel, a bag, a purse, the bolting-bag in a mill; Du. buydelen, buylen, G. beuteln, to bould meal.

Fr. bluter, Rouchi. bulter, Mid. Lat. buletare, It. burattare, to bould meal; burato, boulding cloth, buratello, a little boulding sieve or bag.—Flor.

We have seen under Boss a number of words, each of them traceable to a syllable representing in the first instance the sound of a blow, then signifying a knob, lump, swelling, inflation, receptacle, case; and a similar train of thought seems to have led to the designation of a sack or envelope by the term bult, bolt. We have the Lat. pultare, Sw. bulta, to beat, to knock; E. polt, a thump or blow; polt-foot, as Fr. pied-bot, a club-foot—Halliwell; Dan. pult, a clod or clump, Sw. bylte, a bundle; Du. bult, a hump, a boil,—bulte, a straw mattras, or sack stuffed with straw; Sp. bullo, a hump, bulk, pillow-case. With the t exchanged for an s we have Lat. pulsare, Du. bulsen (Kil.), to knock; E. bulch, bulse (Halliwell), a bunch; Dan. pölse, a sausage (a skin stuffed with mincemeat); E. pulse, sack-fruited vegetables; Sp. bolsa, a purse, and (with the same interchange of l and r which we saw in buletare, burattare) It. borsa and E. purse.

Instead of boult, the word bunt is used in Somersetshire for sifting meal, whence bunting, the loose woven woollen texture employed in the first instance for that purpose, and then for making the flags of ships, in which latter sense it is now generally used. And here also the meaning seems developed in a similar manner. To bunt, to push with the head, to butt; Dan. bundt, a bunch, bundle; E. bunt, the belly or hollow of a sail, the middle part of a sail formed into a kind of bag to receive the wind.—Hal.

To Bounce. Primarily to strike, then to do anything in a violent startling way, to jump, to spring. Bunche, tundo, trudo—he buncheth me and beateth me—he came home with his face all to-bounced, contusâ.—Pr. Pm.

The sound of a blow is imitated in Fl. D. by Bums or Buns; whence bumsen, bamsen, bunsen, to strike against a thing so as to give a dull sound; an de dor bunsen, to knock at the door.

Yet still he bet and bounst upon the dore
And thundered strokes thereon so hideously
That all the pece he shaked from the flore
And filled all the house with fear and great uproar. F. Q.

An de dor ankloppen dat idt bunset, to knock till it sounds again. He fult dat et bunsede, he fell so that it sounded. Hence bunsk in the sense of the E. bouncing, thumping, strapping, as the vulgar whapper, bumper, for anything large of its kind. "Een bunsken appel—jungen" a bouncing apple—baby.—Brem. Wört. Du. bons, a blow, bonzen, to knock.—Halma. See Bunch.

To Bound. Fr. bondir, to spring, to leap. The original meaning is probably simply to strike, as that of E. bounce, which is frequently used in the same sense with bound. The origin seems an imitation of the sounding blow of an elastic body, the verb bondir in O. Fr. and Prov., and the equivalent bonir in Catalan, being used in the sense of resounding.

No i ausiratz parlar, ni motz brugir,
Ni gacha frestelar, ni cor bondir.
You will not hear talking nor a word murmur,
Nor a centinel whistle, nor horn sound.—Raynouard.

Langued. bounbouneja, to hum; boundina, to hum, to resound.

Bound.—Boundary. Fr. borne, bone, a bound, limit, mere, march.—Cotgr. Mid. Lat. bodina, butina, bunda, bonna: "Multi ibi limites quos illi bonnas vocant, suorum recognoverunt agrorum." "Alodus sic est circumcinctus et divisus per bodinas fixas et loca designata."—Charter of K. Robert to a monastery in Poitou.—Ducange. Bodinare, debodinare, to set out by metes and bounds. Probably from the Celtic root bon, bun, a stock, bottom, root (see Bottom). Bret. men-bonn, a boundary stone (men=stone); bonnein, to set bounds, to fix limits. The entire value of such bounds depends upon their fixedness. Gael. bunaiteach, steady, firm, fixed. It is remarkable that we find very nearly the same variation in the mode of spelling the word for bound, as was formerly shown in the case of bottom, which was also referred to the same Celtic root.

Bound.—Bown. The meaning of bound, when we speak of a ship bound for New York, is prepared for, ready to go to, addressed to.

The barons were all bone to make the king assaute.—R. Brunne in R.

And bed hem all ben boon, beggeres and othere
To wenden with hem to Westmynstere.—P. P. in Ibid.

He of adventure happed hire to mete
 Amid the toun right in the quikkest strete
 As she was boun to go the way forth right
 Toward the garden.—Chaucer in R.

It is the participle past buinn, prepared, ready, of the Icel. verb buá, to prepare, set out, address.

Bourd. A jest, sport, game. Immediately from Fr. bourde in the same sense, and that probably from a Celtic root. Bret. bourd, deccit, trick, joke; Gael. burd, burt, mockery, ridicule; buirte, a jibe, taunt, repartee. As the Gael. has also buirleadh, language of folly or ridicule, it is probable that the It. burlare, to banter or laugh at, must be referred to the same root, according to the well-known interchange of d and l.

The notion of deceiving or making a fool of one is often expressed by reference to some artifice employed for diverting his attention, whether by sound or gesticulation. Thus we speak of humming one for deceiving him, and in the same way to bam is to make fun of one; a bam, a false tale or jeer—Hal.; from Du. bommen, to hum. Now we shall see in the next article that the meaning of the root bourd is to hum. Gael. burdan, a humming noise,—MacLeod; a sing-song, a jibe,—Shaw; bururus, warbling, purling, gurgling. Bav. burren, brummen, sausen, brausen, to hum, buzz, grumble; Sw. purra, to take one in, to trick, to cheat.

Bourdon.—Burden. Bourdon, the drone of a bagpipe, hence musical accompaniment, repetition of sounds with or without sense at the end of stated divisions of a song. The Sp. bordon is also used in the sense of burden of a song.

And there in mourning spend their time
 With wailful tunes, while wolves do howl and barke
 And seem to bear a bourdon to their plaint.—Spenser in R.

His wife him bore a burden a full strong Men might hir routing heren a furlong.—Chaucer in R.

Fr. bourdon, a drone of a bagpipe, a drone or dor-bee, also the humming or buzzing of bees.—Cotgr. Sp. bordon, the base of a stringed instrument, or of an organ. The meaning of the word obviously has reference to the droning or humming noise, the only character common to the drone of a bagpipe and the drone bee. Gael. burdan, a humming noise, the imitative character of which is supported by the use of durdan in the same sense; durd, hum as a bee, mutter. The Bret. has bouda, to buzz, hum, murmur, related to bourd, as E. sup, sop, to L. sorbere, or E. bubble, to OE. burble, s. s.

Bourdon.—Borden. Fr. bourdon. A pilgrim's staff, the big end of a club, a pike or spear; bourdon d'un moulin à vent, a mill-post.—Cotgr. Prov. bordo, a staff, crutch, cudgel, lance; It. bordone, a staff, a prop.

Bourn. 1. A limit. Fr. borne, a corruption of bonne, identical with E. bound, which see.

2. Sc. burn, a brook; Goth. brunna, a spring, Du. borne, a well, spring, spring-water; Gael. burn, fresh water; G1. βρυνν, to burst forth as a spring, or a flower-bud. See Burgeon.

To Bouse. To drink deeply. Du. buys, drunken; buysen, to drink largely, to indulge in his cups, from buyse, a large two-handed flagon; Sc. boss, a jar or flagon; O. Fr. bous, bout, outre, grande bouteille.—Roquefort. See Butt.

We shule preye the hayward hom to our hous—
Drink to him dearly of full good bous.

Man in the Moon in N. and Q.

So from Du. kroes, kruys, vas potorium, kroesen, krosen, potare, to carouse; from kroeg, a crock, kroegen; from W. pot, a pot, potio, to tipple.

To Bow. To bend. AS. beogan, bagan; Icel. buga, beygia; Goth. biugan, baug, bugun, G. biegen, beugen.

To bow in OE. was used in the sense of bending one's steps, proceeding in a certain direction.

 And hii full sone
 To Arthure come.—Layamon.

And Jesus bowide away fro the people that was set in the place.—
 Wiclif, Joh. 5.

A Bow. Generally anything bent or rounded, as a bow to shoot with, the rounded front of a ship, a curving of the back in sign of obeisance. G. bogen, a curve, arch, vault, bow. Sw. båge, an arch, bow. Dan. bug, bow of a ship, belly, bulge; bue, a bow to shoot with. Gael. bogha, a curve, vault, arch, bow. The origin is exhibited in W. bog, a swell, a rising up, whence bogel, a nave, navel, boglyn, a boss, knob, bubble. From this primitive image I believe the verb bugan, to bow, to be formed, and not vice versâ. So from bouk, a bunch (evidenced by Fr. bouquet, Russ. puk, a bunch), Dan. bukke, Du. bukken, to bunch oneself, to bow.

Bowels. It. budelle, Venet. buéle, O. Fr. boel. Mid. Lat. botellus. Si intestina vel botelli perforati claudi non potuerint.—Leg. Angl. in Diez. Bret. bouzellou, bouellou. W. poten, the belly, a pudding.

Probably from the rumbling of the bowels. Bret. bouda, to hum, to murmur, Fin. potista, rauce ebullio ut puls fervida, mussito, potina, a murmuring. In like manner the Icel. bumbr, the belly, seems related to bumla, to resound, Gr. βομβυλιαζω, to rumble; the Russ. brioch, Bohem. brich, the belly, to bručeti, to hum, to buzz; and the W. bru, the belly, to It. bruire, to rumble as the guts do in one's belly.—Altieri. The word guts itself is probably from a similar origin. Icel. gutla, to guggle; OE. gothel, in the s. s.

His guts begonne to gothelen
 Like two greedy sowes.—P. P.

Bower. NE. boor, a parlour.—Hal. Icel. bur, a separate apartment; utibur, an outhouse; AS. bur, a chamber; swefn-bur, a sleeping-room; cumena bur, guest-chamber; fata-bur, a wardrobe; Sw. hönse-bur, a hen-coop; W. bwor, an inclosure, intrenchment, bwra, a croft by a house. Unconnected with Icel. buá, G. bauen, to inhabit.

Three quotes from Hesychius βυριον, οικημα; βυριοθεν, οικοθεν.

The board in cupboard is a corruption of the foregoing bur, from the attempt to give meaning to the elements of a compound word when no longer understood in their original form.

Bowl. A wooden ball for rolling along the ground; also a round drinking vessel. Fr. boule in both senses. Icel. bolli, a teacup. See Boil.

Box. A hollow wooden case, as well as the name of a shrub, whose wood is peculiarly adapted for turning boxes and similar objects. AS. box in both senses. Gr. πυξος, the box-tree, πυξις, a box; Lat. buxus, the box-tree and articles made of it; G. büchse, a box, the barrel of a gun, büchsbaum, the box-tree; It. bosso, box-tree, bossola, a box, hollow place; Fr. buis, Bret. beuz, Bohem. pusspan, box-tree; pusska, a box.

Du. büsse, a box, bussken, a little box; Pl. D. büsse, büske. Hence, with an inversion of the s and k, as in AS. acsian, E. ask, we arrive at the E. box, without the need of resorting to an immediate derivation from the Latin.

The box of a coach is commonly explained as if it had formerly been an actual box, containing the implements for keeping the coach in order. It is more probably from the G. bock, signifying in the first instance a buck or he-goat, being applied in general to a trestle or support upon which anything rests, and to a coach-box in particular. See Crab, Cable. In like manner the Pol. koziel, a buck, is applied to a coach-box, while the plural kozly is used in the sense of a sawing-block, trestle, painter's easel, &c.

To Box. To fight with the fists. From the Dan. bask, a sounding blow; baske, to slap, thwack, flap, by the same inversion of s and k, as noticed under Box. It is plainly an imitative word, parallel with OE. pash, to strike.

Shall pash his coxcombe such a knock
As that his soule his course shall take.

O. Play in Halliwell.

Swiss batschen, to smack the hand; bätschen, to give a loud smack, to fall with a noise.

Boy. G. bube, Swiss bub, bue, Swab. buah, showing the passage of the pronunciation to E. boy. Lat. pupus, a boy, pupa, a girl, a doll, which last is probably the earlier meaning. The origin seems the root bob, bub, pop, pup, in the sense of something protuberant, stumpy, thick and short, a small lump. Lat. bubo, a swelling, Russ. pup', navel, Bohem. pup, excrement, pupek, navel, pupen, bud. It. puppa, pupa, a child's baby, puppy, or puppet, to play withal, by metaphor a pretty girl, a dainty mop.—Florio. Now the meaning of doll or of mop is a bundle of clouts, and poupe has the same sense in Fr. poupe de chenilles, a cluster of caterpillars.—Cotgr. "Moppe or popync."—Prompt. Parv. A poppet or puppet, a dressed-up image. The word seems then to have been transferred to a baby or young person, and in the case of puppy to the young of a dog. See Baby. The word bab or mab in Welch is a son, in Gael. a tassel, identical with E. map or mop, a bunch of rags.

In a similar manner from Bav. butzen; botzen, a bud, a lump, butz, butzel, a person or animal of small size; butt, bott, anything small of its kind, whether man, animal, or plant. Fr. un bout d'homme, W. pwt o ddyd, a short thick man, from pwt, anything short and stumpy. Hence, as the sense of something small of its kind might easily pass into that of a young animal, Schmeller would explain the It. putto a boy, and probably the Fr. petit may be a diminutive of the same root.

To Brabble. A variation of babble, representing the confused sound of simultaneous talking. In like manner the It. has bulicame and brulicame, a bubbling motion; Fr. boussole, Sp. bruxula, a compass; Fr. boiste, Prov. brostia, a box.

Du. brabbelen, to stammer, jabber, confuse, disturb, quarrel; Bohem. breptati, to stutter, murmur, babble.

From brabble seems to be formed brawl; as scrawl from scrabble; crawl from Du. krabbelen, unguibus arare.

Brace. The different meanings of the word brace may all be reduced to the idea of straining, compressing, confining, binding together, from a root brak, which has many representatives in the other European languages. See Brake.

To brace is to draw together, whence a bracing air, one which draws up the springs of life; a pair of braces, the bands which hold up the trowsers. A brace on board a ship, It. braca, is a rope holding up a weight or resisting a strain. A brace is also a pair of things united together in the first instance by a physical tie, and then merely in our mode of considering them. From the same root are bracket, breeches, &c.

Bracelet. Bracelet, an ornamental band round the wrist; bracer, a guard to protect the arm of an archer from the string of his bow. Fr. brasselet, a bracelet, wristband, or bracer—Cotgr.; O. Fr. brassard, Sp. brasil, armour for the arm, from bras, the arm.

Brach. Properly a dog for tracking game. It. bracco; Fr. braque, bracon, whence braconnier, a poacher. Sp. braco, a pointer, also (obsolete) pointing or setting.—Neuman. The name may then be derived from the Fr. braquer, to direct, to bend. Braquer un canon, to level, bend a cannon against; braquer un chariot, to turn, set or bend a chariot on the right or left hand.—Cotgr. See Brake. Or it may be from Dan. brak, flat; Sp. braco, flat-nosed, from the blunt square nose of a pointer or dog that hunts by scent, as compared with the sharp nose of a greyhound.

Brack. A breach, flaw, or defect, from break. Fr. briche, a brack or breach in a wall, &c.—Cotgr.

Floods drown no fields before they find a brack.—Mirror for Mag. in R.

You may find time in eternity

Deceit and violence in heavenly justice—

Ere stain or brack in her sweet reputation.—B. and F.

G. brechen, to break (sometimes also used in the sense of failing, as die Augen brechen ihm, his eyes are failing him), gebrechen, to want, to be wanting; want, need, fault, defect; Du. bræcke, ghebreck, breach, want, defect.—Kil. AS. brec, Pl. D. brek, want, need, fault; Icel. brek, defect. On the same principle from the Icel. bresta, to crack, to break, to burst, is derived brestr, a crack, flaw, defect, moral or physical.

Probably the sense of brack in the foregoing acceptation may in some degree have been confounded with that of G. brack, refuse, damaged; bracken, to try, to pick out and condemn the damaged. See Broker.

Brack.—Brackish. Water rendered unpalatable by a mixture of salt. One of the numerous cases in which we have to halt between two derivations.

Gael. bracha, suppuration, putrefaction; brach shuileach, blear-eyed; Prov. brac, pus, matter, mud, filth; el brac e la ordura del mun, the filth and ordure of the world—Rayn.; It. braco, brago, a bog or puddle; O. Fr. brac, braic, bray, mud; Rouchi breuque, mud, clay.—Hécart. Then as an adj., Prov. brac, bragos, O. Fr. brageux, foul, dirty. “La ville ou y avait eaues et sources moult brageuses.”—Monstrelet in Rayn. Thus brack, which signifies in the first instance water contaminated by dirt, might easily be applied to water spoilt for drinking by other means, as by a mixture of sea water.

But upon the whole I am inclined to think that the application to water contaminated with salt is derived from the G. and Du. brack, wrack, refuse, damaged; dicitur de mercibus quibusdam minus probis.—Kil. Brak-goed, merces submersæ, salo sive aquâ marinâ corruptæ.—Kil. Pl. D. brakke grund, land spoilt by an overflow of sea water; Du. brakke torf, turf made offensive by a mixture of sulphur (where the meaning would well agree with the sense of the Gael. and Prov. root); wrack, brack, acidus, salsus.—Kil. See Broker.

*From the sense of water unfit for drinking from a mixture of salt, the word passed on to signify salt water in general, and the diminutive brackish was appropriated to the original sense.

The entrellis eik far in the fludis brake
I sal slyng.—D. V. in R.

Bracket. A bracket is properly a cramp-iron holding things together; then a stand cramped to a wall. Brackets in printing are claws holding together an isolated part of the text. From brake in the sense of constraining. Fr. brague, a mortise for holding things together—Cotgr.; Piedm. braga, an iron for holding or binding anything together.—Zalli. See Brace, Brake.

To Brag.—Brave. Primarily to crack, to make a noise, to thrust oneself on people's notice by noise, swagger, boasting, or by gaudy dress and show. Fr. braguer, to flaunt, brave, brag or jet it; braguard, gay, gallant, flaunting, also braggard, bragging.—Cotgr. Icel. braka, Dan. brag, crack, crash; Icel. braka, to crash, to crack, also insolenter se gerere—Haldorsen; Gael. bragh, a burst, explosion; bragaireachd, empty pride, vain glory, boasting; Bret. braga, se pavaner, marcher d'une manière fière, se donner trop de licence, se parer de beaux habits. Langued. bragá, to strut, to make ostentation of his equipage, riches, &c. Swiss. Rom. braga, vanter une chose.—Vocab. de Vaud.

In like manner to crack is used for boasting, noisy ostentation.

But thereof set the miller not a tare
He cracked bost and swore it nas nat so.—Chaucer.

Then cease for shame to vaunt
And crow in craking wise.—Turberville in R.

On the same principle the Dan. braske, to boast or brag, may be compared with Lith. braszkėti, to rattle, to be noisy.

Brag was then used in the sense of brisk, proud, smart.

Seest thou thilk same hawthorn stud
How bragly it begins to bud.—Shepherd's Cal.

Equivalent forms are Gael. breagh, fine, well-dressed, splendid, beautiful, Sc. bra', braw, Bret. brao, brav, gayly dressed, handsome, fine.

Thus we are brought to the OE. brave, finely dressed, showy; bravery, finery.

From royal court I lately came (said he)
Where all the braverie that eye may see—
Is to be found.—Spenser in R.

The sense of courageous comes immediately from the notion of bragging and boasting. Gael. brabhdair, a noisy talkative fellow, blusterer, bully; brabhdadh, idle talk, bravado; Fr. bravache, a roisterer, swaggerer, bravacherie, boasting, vaunting, bragging of his own valour.—Cotgr. It. bravare and Fr. braver, to swagger, affront, flaunt in fine clothes; Sp. bravo, bullying, hectoring, brave, valiant; sumptuous, expensive, excellent, fine. Fr. brave, brave, gay, fine, gorgeous, gallant (in apparel); also proud, stately, braggard; also valiant, stout, courageous, that will carry no coals. Faire le brave, to stand upon terms, to boast of his own worth.—Cotgr.

She (Penelope) told his foe
It was not fair nor equal t' overcrow. [Compare bragging, the crowing of a black cock.—Halliwell.]

The poorest guest her son pleased t' entertaine
In his free turrets with so proud a straine
Of threats and bravings.—Chapman in R.

Bragget. Sweet wort.

Hire mouth was sweet as braket or the meth.^c—Chaucer.

From W. brag, malt, and that from bragio, to sprout; i. e. sprouted corn.

To Braid. See Bray.

Brail.—To Brail. From Fr. braies, breeches, drawers, was formed brayele; brayete, the bridge or part of the breeches joining the two legs. A slight modification of this was brayeul, the feathers about the hawk's fundament, called by our falconers the brayle in a short-winged, and the pannel in a long-winged hawk.—Cotgr. From brayel, or from braie itself, is also derived Fr. desbrailler, to unbrace or let down the breeches, the opposite of which, brailler (though it does not appear in the dictionaries), would be to brace, to tie up. Rouchi bréler, to cord a bale of goods, to fasten the load of a waggon with ropes.—Hécart.

Hence E. brails, the thongs of leather by which the penfeathers of a hawk's wing were tied up; to brail up a sail, to tie it up like the wing of a hawk, to prevent its catching the wind.

Brain. AS. braegen; Du. breghe, breghen, breyne.

Brake.—Bray. The meanings of brake are very numerous, and the derivation entangled with influences from different sources. A brake is

1. A bit for horses; a wooden frame in which the feet of vicious horses are confined in shoeing; an old instrument of torture; an inclosure for cattle; a carriage for breaking in horses; an instrument for checking the motion of a wheel; a mortar; a baker's kneading trough; an instrument for dressing flax or hemp; a harrow.—Halliwell.

2. A bushy spot, a bottom overgrown with thick tangled brushwood.

3. The plant fern.

The meanings included under the first head are all reducible to the notion of constraining, confining, compressing, subduing, and it is very likely that the root brak, by which this idea is conveyed, is identical with Gael. brac, W. braich, Lat. brachium, the arm, as the type of exertion and strength. It is certain that the word for arm is, in numerous dialects, used in the sense of force, power, strength. Thus Bret. breach, Sp. braso, Walloon bress, Wallachian bratsou, Turk bazu, are used in both senses.

It will be found in the foregoing examples that brake is used almost exactly in the sense of the Lat. subigere, expressing any kind of action by which something is subjected to external force, brought under control, reduced to a condition in which it is serviceable to our wants, or the instrument by which the action is exerted.

Icel. braka, subigere, to subdue. In this sense must be explained the expression of breaking in horses, properly braking or subduing them. To the same head must be referred brake, a horse's bit, It. braca, a horse's twitch. AS. bracan, to pound, to knead or mix up in a mortar, to rub, farinam in mortario subigere; Sp. bregar, to exert force in different ways, to bend a bow, to row, to stiffen against difficulties (se raidir contre.—Taboada), to knead, Prov. brega, Corrèze bredgea, bredza, to rub (as in washing linen — Beronie), Fr. broyer, to bray in a mortar. The Fr. broyer is also used for the dressing of flax or hemp, passing it through a brake or frame consisting of boards loosely locking into each other, by means of which the fibre is stripped from the stalk or core, and brought into a serviceable condition. As there is so much of actual breaking in the operation, it is not surprising that the word has here, as in the case of horse-breaking, been confounded with the verb break, to fracture. We have thus Du. braecken het vlasch, frangere linum.—Biglotton. Fr. briser, concasser le lin. So in G. flachs brechen, while in other dialects the words are kept distinct. Pl. D. braken, Dan. brage, to brake flax; Pl. D. braeken, Dan. brække, to break or fracture. It is remarkable that the term for braking flax in Lith. is braukti, signifying to sweep, to brush, to strip. The Icel. brak is a frame in which skins are worked backwards and forwards through a small opening, for the purpose of incorporating them with the grease employed as a dressing. Swiss Rom. brego, a spinning-wheel.—Voc. de Vaud. In like manner Lat. subigere is used for any kind of dressing.

Sive rudem primos lanam glomerabat in usus
 Seu digitis subigebat opus.—Ovid.

In the case of the N. E. brake, Gael. braca, a harrow, Dan. brage, to harrow (Lat. glebas subigere, segetes subigere aratriis), the notion of breaking down the clods again comes to perplex our derivation.

In other cases the idea of straining or exerting force is more distinctly preserved. Thus the term brake was applied to the handle of a cross-bow, the lever by which the string was drawn up, as in Sp. bregar el arco, to bend a bow, Fr. braquer un canon, to bend or direct a cannon. The same name is given to the handle of a ship's pump, the member by which the force of the machine is exerted. It. braca, a brace on board a ship.

After all, the verb to break is used metaphorically in a sense so closely agreeing with that of the foregoing brake, and the two are confounded in so many instances, that we are led to suspect a fundamental connexion between them. Thus we speak of breaking or diminishing the force of the wind, just as the brake of a wheel is an implement for resisting the force of traction, and diminishing the velocity. If the words are radically identical, the notion of strain or exertion of force must be derived from the force exerted in breaking a body, and the Gael. brac, Lat. brachium, the arm, must be so named as the bodily organ of force, and not vice versâ. See Branch.

Brake. 2. In the sense of a thicket, cluster of bushes, bush, there is considerable difficulty in the derivation. The equivalent word in the other Teutonic dialects is frequently made to signify a marsh or swamp. Du. broeck, Pl. D. brook, a fen, marsh, low wet land; G. bruch, a marsh, or a wood in a marshy place; brook, grassy place in a heath—Overyssel Almanach; NE. brog, a swampy or bushy place—Halliwell; M. Lat. brogilum, broilium, broilium, nemus, sylva aut saltus in quo ferarum venatio exercitur.—Duc. O. Fr. brogille, bregille, broil, broillet, breuil, copse-wood, cover for game, brambles, brushwood. Prov. G. gebröge, gebrüche, a brake, thicket. Inquirers have thus been led in two directions, the notion of wetness leading some to connect the word with E. brook, a stream, Gr. βρεχῶ, to moisten, and Lat. riguus, watered, while others have considered the fundamental signification to be broken ground, with the bushes and tangled growth of such places.

The latter supposition has a remarkable confirmation in the Finnish languages, where from Esthon. murdma, to break, is formed murd, gebüsch, gebröge, a thicket, brake, bush, pasture, quarry; from Fin. murran, murtaa, to break, mur-rokko, sylva ubi arbores sunt vento diffractæ et transversim collapsæ, multitudo arborum vel nemorum diffractorum et collapsorum. And this probably was the original meaning of G. bruch, gebrüche, gebröge, E. brog or brake. A break of such a kind, or overthrow of trees by the wind, is most likely to take place in low wet ground where their roots have less hold, and when once thrown down, in northern climates, they stop the flow of water and cause the growth of peat and moss.

Thus the word, which originally designated a broken mass of wood, might come to signify a swamp, as in Du. and G., as well as in the case of the E. brog above mentioned. A brake is explained in Palmer's Devonshire Glossary as "a bottom overgrown with thick tangled brushwood."

Brake.—Bracken. 3. It may be suspected that brake, in the sense of fern, is a secondary application of the word in the sense last described, that is to say, that it may be so named as the natural growth of brakes and bushy places. It is certain that we find closely resembling forms applied to several kinds of plants the natural growth of waste places and such as are designated by the term brake, bruch, &c. Thus we have W. bruk, heath; Icel. brök, sedge; Þurkni, Dan. bregne, bracken or fern; Port. brejo, sweet broom, heath, or ling, also a marshy low ground or fen; Grisons, bruch, heath.

It may be however that the relationship runs in the opposite direction, and E. brake, brog, G. bruch, gebröge, gebrüche, &c., may be so called in analogy with Bret. brugek, a heath, from brug, bruk, heath, or with It. brughera, thick brakes of high-grown ferns (Flor.), as places overgrown with brakes or fern, heath (Bret. bruk, brug), broom, or other plants of a like nature. The relation of brake to bracken may originally have been that of the Bret. brug, heath, to brugen, a single plant of heath. See Brush.

Bramble.—Broom. AS. bremel, Pl. D. brummel; Du. braeme, breme; Sw. G. brom, bramble; Du. brem, brom, broem, Pl. D. braam, G. bram, also pfriemkraut, pfriemen, broom, the leafless plant of which besoms are made.

It will be found that shrubs, bushes, brambles, and waste growths, are looked on in the first instance as a collection of twigs or shoots, and are commonly designated from the word signifying a twig. Thus in Lat. from virga, a rod or twig, virgultum, a shrub; from Servian prut a rod, prutye, a shrub; from Bret. brous, a bud and thence a shoot, brouskoad, bruskoad, brushwood, wood composed of twigs. Bav. bross, brosst, a shoot, Serv. brst, young sprouts, Bret. broust, hallier, buisson fort epais, a thick bush, ground full of briers, thicket of brambles—Cotgr; Fr. broussaille, a briery plot. In like manner the word bramble is from Swiss brom, a bud, young twig (brom-beisser, the bull-finch, E. bud-biter or bud-bird—Halliwell); Grisons. brumbel, a bud; It. bromboli, broccoli, cabbage sprouts—Fl.; Piedm. bronbo, a vine twig; Bav. pfropf, a shoot or twig. The primary idea is a knob or knop, something breaking or bursting out, a sense preserved in the Du. propje, a bunch, related to pop, s. s. (Bohem. pupen, Serv. pupak, Russ. pupuishka, a bud), as brush to bush, Du. strobbe to stobbe, a stub or stump; E. shrub or scrub to Lat. scopa, a twig.

The pointed shape of a young shoot led to the use of the G. pfriem in the sense of an awl, and the word bramble itself was applied in a much wider sense than it is at present to any thorny growth, as AS. bræmbel-appel, the thorn apple or stramonium, a plant bearing a fruit covered with spiky thorns, and in Chaucer it is used of the rose.

And swete as is the bramble flower
That beareth the red hepe.—Sir Topaz.

AS. Thornas and bremelas, thorns and briers. Gen. iii.[#]18.

Bran. Bret. brenn, W. bran, It. brenna, brenda, Fr. bran. The fundamental signification seems preserved in Fr. bren, excrement, ordure ; Rouchi bren d'oréle, ear wax ; berneux, snotty ; Russ. bren, mud, dirt ; Bret. brenn hesken, the refuse or droppings of the saw, sawdust. Bran is the draff or excrement of the corn, what is cast out as worthless.

Ils ressemblent le buretel
Selonc l' Ecriture Divine
Qui giete la blanche farine
Fors de lui et retient le bren.—Ducange.

So Swiss gaggi, chaff, from gaggi, cack. Gael. brein, breun, stink ; breanan, a dunghill, W. brwnt, nasty.

Branch.—Brank. We have seen under Brace and Brake many instances of the use of the root brak in the sense of strain, constrain, compress. The nasalisation of this root gives a form brank in the same sense. Hence the Sc. brank, a bridle or bit ; to brank, to bridle, to restrain. The witches' branks was an iron bit for torture ; Gael. brang, brancas, a halter. The same form becomes in It. branca branchia, the fang or claw of a beast ; brancaglie, all manner of gripings and clinchings ; among masons and carpenters, all sorts of fastening together of stonework or timber with braces of lead or iron.—Florio. Brancare, to gripe, to clutch.

Then by comparison with claws or arms, Bret. brank, It. branco, Fr. branche, the branch of a tree.

Brand. A burning fragment of wood. Icel. brandr, a firebrand, glowing embers. G. brand, a conflagration, a firebrand. A sword is called a brand because it glitters when waved about like a flaming torch. The Cid's sword on the same principle was named tizó, from Lat. titio, a firebrand.—Diez.

The derivation from brennen, to burn, would leave nothing to be desired if it stood alone. But we find It. brano, a piece or bit, brandone, a large piece of anything, a torch or firebrand ; Fr. brin, a slip or sprig, small piece of anything, bois de brin, uncleft wood ; brandon, a tavern bush, a stake. Icel. brand, a post, bar, rod. Thus the brand in firebrand might signify merely a fragment or billet. The corresponding form in Gael. is bruan, a fragment, morsel, splinter, which with an initial s becomes spruan, brush-wood, fire-wood. Sc. brane-wood, fire-wood, not, as Jamieson explains it, from AS. bryne, incendium, but from the foregoing brano, brin, bruan.

Quhyn thay had beirit lyk baitit bullis,
And brane-wod brynt in bailis.

When they had bellowed like baited bulls
And brushwood burnt in bonfires.

To Brandish.—Brandle. To brandish, to make shine with shaking, to shake to and fro in the hand.—Bailey. Fr. brandir, to hurl with great force, to make a thing shake by the force it is cast with, to shine or glisten with a gentle shaking; brandiller, to brandle, shake, totter, also to glisten or flash.—Cotgr.

Commonly explained from the notion of waving a brand or sword. But this is too confined an origin for so widely spread a word. Manx brans, dash, Rouchi braner, Bret. bransella, Fr. bransler, branler, to shake. If the sense of hurling be the original it may perhaps be from It. brano, a fragment, as we speak of quoting away a thing, from quoit, a flat stone.

Brandy. Formerly brandy-wine, G. branntwein, Du. brandwijn, brandende wijn, aqua ardens, vinum ardens.—Kil. The inflammable spirit distilled from wine. Du. brandigh, flagrans, urens.—Kil.

Brangle. This word has two senses, apparently very distinct from each other, though it is not always easy to draw an undoubted line between them. 1st, to scold, to quarrel, to bicker—Bailey, and 2nd, as Fr. brandiller, to brandle or brandish. The It. brandolare is explained by Florio, to brangle, to shake, to shog, to totter.

The tre brangillis, boisting to the fall*
With top trimbling, and branchis shakand all.

D. V. in Jam.

In this application the word seems direct from the Fr. branler, the spelling with ng (instead of the nd in brandle) being an attempt to represent the nasal sound of the Fr. n. In the same way the Fr. bransle, a round dance, became brangle or brawl in E.; It. branla, a French brawl or brangle.—Flor.

From the sense of shaking probably arose that of throwing into disorder, putting to confusion.

Thus was this usurper's faction brangled, then bound up again, and afterward divided again by want of worth in Baliol their head.—Hume in Jam.

To embrangle, to confuse, perplex, confound. The sense of a quarrel may be derived from the idea of confusion, or in that sense brangle may be a direct imitation of the noise of persons quarrelling, as a nasalised form of the Piedm. bragaté, to vociferate, make an outcry.

Brase.—Braser.—Brasil. To brase meat is to pass it over hot coals; a braser, a pan of hot coals. It. bracea, bracia, bragia, Fr. braise, Port. braza, live coals, glowing embers; brazeiro, a pan of coals.

The word brésil, brasil, was in use before the discovery of America in the sense of a bright red, the colour of braise or hot coals, and when Brazil was discovered it seems to have been named from furnishing a better red dye than those formerly known.—Diez.

Diez seems to put the cart before the horse in deriving the word from the Icel. brasa, to braze or lute, to solder iron. It is more likely derived from the roaring sound of flame. G. brausen, prasseln, to roar, to crackle; AS. brastlian, to brustle, crackle, burn.—Lye. Sw. brasca, faire fracas, to make display; Milan. brascà, to kindle, set on fire.—Diez. Gris. brasca, sparks. Sw. brasa, to blaze, also as a noun, a roaring fire. Fr. embraser, to set on fire; Wallon. bruzi, braise, hot ashes; Pied. brusé, It. bruciare, Fr. brusler, brûler, to burn. E. brustle, to crackle, to make a noise like straw or small wood in burning, to rustle.—Halliwell. Fr. bruire, to murmur, make a noise, and bruir, brouvoir, to burn.—Roquefort. “E tut son corps arder et bruir.”—Rayn.

Brass.—Bronze. AS. bræs, from being used in the brazing or soldering of iron. Icel. bras, solder, especially that used in the working of iron; at brasa, ferruminare, to solder. Probably from the glowing coals over which the soldering is done; Fr. braser l'argent, le repasser un peu sur la braise.—Cotgr. The same correspondence is seen between It. bronze, burning coals, bronzacchiare, to carbonado, as rashers upon quick burning coals, bronzar, to braze, to copper, and bronzo, brass, pan-metal.—Florio.

Brat. A rag, a contemptuous name for a young child.—Bailey. AS. brat, a cloak, a clout. W. brat, a rag. Gael. brat, a mantle, apron, cloth; bratach, a banner. For the application to a child compare Bret. truī, piī, a rag; truīen or piīen (in the feminine form), a contemptuous name for a woman, a slut.

Brattice.—Bartizan. A brattice is a fence of boards in a mine or round dangerous machinery, from Sc. bred, G. brett, Du. berd, a plank or board, as lattice, a frame of laths, from Fr. latte, a lath.

A bretise or bretage is then a parapet, in the first instance of boards, and in a latinised shape it is applied to any boarded structure of defence, a wooden tower, a parapet, a testudo or temporary roof to cover an attack, &c. Sc. brettys, a fortification.—Jam. Betrax of a walle (bretasce, bretays), propugnaculum.—Pr. Pm. It. bertesca, baltresca, a kind of rampart or fence of war made upon towers; a block-house.—Altieri. Fr. breteque, bretesque, bretesche, a portal of defence in the rampire of a town.—Cot.

Duæ testudines quas Gallicé brutesches appellant. —Math. Paris. AD. 1224. Circumeunt civitatem castellis et turribus ligneis et berteschiis. Hist. Pisana in Mur. AD. 1156.

A wooden defence of the foregoing description round the deck of a ship, or on the top of a wall, was called by the Norsemen vig-gyrdell, a battle-girdle. “Med endilöngum bænom var umbuiz a húsum uppi, reistr upp bord-vidr a utan-verdom thaukom sva sem viggyrdlat væri.” Along the town things were prepared up on the houses, boarding being raised up out on the roofs like the battle rampire on board a ship.—Sverris Saga 275.

Then as parapets and battlements naturally took the shape of projections on the top of a building, the term bretesche was applied to projecting turrets or the like beyond the face of the wall.

Un possesseur d'un heritage—ne peut faire bretesques, boutures, saillies, ni autres choses sur la rue au prejudice de ses voisins.—Duc.

Now this is precisely the ordinary sense of the E. bartisan; “the small overhanging turrets which project from the angles or the parapet on the top of a tower.—Hal.

That the town colours be put upon the bertisene of the steeple.—Jam.

The word is also used in the sense of a fence of stone or wood.—Jam. Sup. It may accordingly be explained as a corruption of bratticing, brettysing, bartising, equivalent to the Du. borderinge, coassatio, contignatio.—Kil.

Brave. See Brag.

Brawl. 1. A kind of dance. Fr. bransle, branle, from branler, to-shake. See Brandish. Brangle.

2. A dispute or squabble. Certainly from the confused noise, whether contracted from brabble, as scrawl from scrabble, or whether it be from Fr. brailler, frequentative of braire, to cry, as criailler of crier. Dan. bralle, to talk much and high; at bralle op, to scold and make a disturbance. Gael. braodh-lach, brawling, noise, discord; bravoilich, a loud noise. The term brawl is also applied to the noise of broken water, as a brawling brook. See Bray.

Brawn. The muscular part of the body. It. brano, brandillo, brandone, any piece, cob, luncheon, or collop of flesh violently pulled away from the whole.—Florio. OHG. brâto (acc. bratôn), Fris. braede, braeye, a lump of flesh, flesh of a leg of pork, calf of the leg.—Diez. Kil. Prov. bradon, brazon, braon, O. Fr. braion, Lorraine bravon; a lump of flesh, the buttocks, muscular parts of the body; Wallon. breyon, a lump, breyon d'chaur, bribe de viande, bas morceau de viande fraiche, breyon de gambes, the calf of the leg.—Remacle. Westphal. bran, Cologne broden, calf of the leg, buttock; So. brand, calf of the leg; Sp. brahon for bradon, a patch of cloth. O. Fr. esbraoner, It. sbranare, to tear piecemeal.

To Bray.—Braid. Many kinds of loud harsh noise are represented by the syllable bra, bru, with or without a final d, g, k, ch, y.

Fr. braire, to bray like an ass, bawl, yell, or cry out loudly; bruire, to rumble, rustle, crash, to sound very loud and very harshly; brugier, to bellow, yell, roar, and make a hideous noise.—Cotgr. Prov. bruzir, to roar or bellow.

Gr. βραχω, to crash, roar, rattle, resound; βρυχω, to roar. Icel. brak, crash, noise; wapna-brak, the clash of arms; Dan. brage, to crash, crackle; E. bray, applied to loud harsh noises of many kinds, as the voice of the ass, the sound of arms, &c.

Heard ye the din of battle bray

With a terminal d we have Prov. braidir, braidar, to cry; Port. bradar, to cry out, to bawl, to roar as the sea. OE. to braid, abraid, upbraid, to cry out, make a disturbance, to scold.

Whereat he (H. IV. on being told that his son had been committed by Gascoigne) a while studying, after as a man all ravished with gladness abrayded with a loud voice.—Elyot in Boucher.

Quoth Beryn to the serjauntes, That ye me hondith so
Or what have I offendit, or what have I seide?
Trewlich quoth the serjauntis it vaylith not to breide
" " (there is no use crying out)

With us ye must awhile whether ye woll or no.—Chaucer.

Then as things done on a sudden or with violence are accompanied by noise, we find the verb to bray or braid used to express any kind of sudden or violent action, to rush, to start, to snatch.

And thai (the winds) thereat having full great disdain
About their clousouris brays with many ane rare.—D. V.
—magno cum murmure
Circum claustra fremunt.

Ane blusterand bub out fra the North braying
Gan oer the foreschip in the baksail ding.—D. V.

Syne stikkis dry to kyndill there about laid is,
 Quhill all in flame the bleis of fyre upbradis.—D. V.

i. e. starts crackling up.

The cup was uncoverid, the sword was out ybrayid.—Beryn.

A forgyt knyff but baid he bradis out.—Wallace IX. 145.

But when as I did out of slepe abray.—F. Q.

The miller is a per'lous man he seide
 And if that he out of his slepe abreide
 He might don us both a villany.—Chaucer.

The Icel. bragd is explained motus quilibet celerior; at bragdi, instantaneously, at once, as OE. at a braid.

His bow he hadden taken right
 And at a braid he gun it bende.—R. R.

Icel. augnabragd, a wink, twinkling of the eye. Then, as the notion of turning is often connected with swiftness of motion, to braid acquires the sense of bend, turn, twist, plait.

And with a braid I turnyt me about.—Dunbar in Jam.

On syde he bradis for to eschew the dint.—D. V. in Jam.

Icel. bregda, to braid the hair, weave nets, &c. The Icel. bragd is also applied to the gestures by which an individual is characterised, and hence also to the lineaments of his countenance, explaining a very obscure application of the E. braid. Bread, appearance—Bailey; to braid, to pretend, to resemble.—Halliwell. To pretend is to assume the appearance and manners of another. "Ye braid of the miller's dog," you have the manners of the miller's dog. To braid of one's father, to have the lineaments of one's father, to resemble him. Icel. bragr, gestus, mos; at braga eftir einum, to imitate or resemble one.

On the same principle may be explained a passage of Shakespeare, which has given much trouble to commentators.

Since Frenchmen are so braid,
 Marry who will, I'll live and die a maid.

The meaning is simply, "since such are the manners of Frenchmen, &c."

To Bray. 2. To rub or grind down in a mortar. Sp. bregar, to work up paste or dough, to knead; Prov. Cat. bregar, to rub; Fr. broyer, Bret. braea, to bray in a mortar. W. breuan, a mill, a brake for hemp or flax. See Brake.

Breach. AS. brice, Fr. breche, a breach or brack in a wall, &c.—Cotgr. From the verb to break.

Bread. Icel. braud. G. brot.

To Break. Goth. brikan, brak, G. brechen, Lat. frangere, fractus; Gr. πηγνυμι, to break, ρακος, a rag; Fin. rikkoa, to break, to tear; Bret. regi, rogi, to break, to tear; rog, a rent.

The origin is doubtless a representation of the noise made by a hard thing breaking. In like manner the word crack is used both to represent the noise of a fracture, and to signify the fracture itself, or the permanent effects of it. The same relation is seen between Lat. fragor, a loud noise, and frangere, to break; Fr. fracas, a crash, disturbance, and fracasser, to break. The Lat. crepo and E. crash are used to signify both the noise made in breaking and the fracture itself. The Swiss has brätschen, to smack or crack, bratsche, a brack, breach, or wound.

Bream. A broad-shaped fresh-water fish, cyprinus latus. Fr. brame, Du. braessem. Swiss bratschig, ill-favouredly broad.

Breast. AS. bræost, Goth. brusts, Du. borst. Perhaps the original meaning may be a chest. Prov. brut, bruc, brusc, the bust, body; brostia, brustia, a box.

Breath. AS. bræth, an odour, scent, breath. Originally probably the word signified steam, vapour, as the G. brodem, brodel, broden.

The caller wine in cave is sought

Mens brothing breists to cule.—Hume in Jam.

See Broth.

Breeches. Lat. bracæ, braceæ; Bret. bragez; Icel. brok, brækur; It. brache; Prov. braga, braia; O. Fr. bragues, braies. The origin is the root brak in the sense of straining, binding, fastening; the original breeches being (as it must be supposed) a bandage wrapped round the hips, and brought beneath between the legs. Hence the Lat. subligar, subligaculum, from ligare, to bind. Piedm. braga, braca, a cramp-iron for holding things together, a horse's twitch; Fr. braie, braies, a twitch for a horse, bandage or truss for a rupture, clout for a child, drawers. Bracha, a girdle.—Gl. Isidore and Tatian.

The breech, Prov. braguier, braia, is the part of the body covered by the breeches. To Breech, in the sense of flogging, is not originally from striking on the breech. Prov. G. (Westerwald) has pritschen, britschen, to lay one on a bench and strike him with a flat board; Du. bridsen, de bridse geven, met de bridse slaan, xylogogio castigare.—Biglotton. Pl. D. britze, an instrument of laths for smacking on the breech. einem de britze geven, to strike one on the breech so that it smacks (klatschet). From an imitation of the sound.

Swiss brätschen, to smack, to give a sharp sound like a blow with the flat hand; brätsch, such a sound, or the blow by which it is produced; brätscher, an instrument for smacking, a fly-flap, &c.

Breeze. Fr. brise, a cool wind. It. brezza, chilness or shivering, a cold and windy mist or frost. Brezzare, to be misty and cold; windy withal, also to chill and shiver with cold.

The origin is the imitation of a rustling noise, as by the Sc. bristle, properly to crackle, then to broil, to fry; Swiss Rom. brire, to rattle (as hail), simmer, murmur.—Vocab. de Vaud; brisoler, bresoler, to roast, to fry; l'os qui bresole, the singing bone.—Gl. Génév. Then from a simmering, twittering sound the term is applied to shivering, trembling, as in the case of twitter, which signifies in the first instance a continuous broken sound, and is then used in the sense of trembling. We have thus It. brisciare, brezzare, to shiver for cold. Compare OE. grill, chilly, with It. grillare, to simmer, Fr. griller, to crackle, broil.

While they have suffrid colde full strofge
 In wethers grille and derke to sight.—
 Par le froid et divers temps.—R.R.

Breeze.—Brize. AS. briosa, brimsa, a gadfly. The second of these forms is identical with the G. breme, bremse, a gadfly, perhaps from G. brummen, Fris. brimme, to hum, Gr. βρεμεῖν, from the droning sound with which the gadfly heralds his attack.

But if Breeze, Brize, be an independent form, it may still be named from the buzzing or bizzing (as it is pronounced in the N. of E.) of the fly.

A fierce loud buzzing breeze, their stings draw blood,
 And drive the cattle gadding through the wood.

Dryden in Baker.

Du. bies-bout, scarabeus alis strepitans.—Kil. Fr. bezer, a cow to run up and down holding up her tail, when the brizze doth sting her.—Cot. The addition or loss of an r in an imitative word of this kind is of frequent occurrence. Du. bommen, G. brummen, to hum. The Prov. bruzir, to murmur, and more exactly the Russ. briosjat, to buzz, agrees with E. brizze. Swiss Rom. brison, bruit sourd et fort.—Voc. de Vaud.

Breeze.—Briss.—Brist. The ashes and cinders sold by the London dustmen for brickmaking are known by the name of breeze. In other parts of England the term briss or brist is in use for dust, rubbish. Briss and buttons, sheep's droppings; bruss, the dry spines of furze broken off.—Dev. Gl. Piedm. brossé, orts, the offal of hay and straw in feeding cattle; Sp. broza, remains of leaves, bark of trees and other rubbish; Fr. bris, debris, rubbish; bris de charbon, coal-dust; bresilles, bretilles, little bits of wood—Berri; briser, to break, burst, crush, bruise; Bret. bruzon, a crum, morsel; G. brosame, a crum; Du. brijsen, brijselen, to bray, to crush; Gael. bris, brisd, brist, to break; Dan. briste, to burst, break, fail. See Brick, Bruise.

forms, brasiare, braciare, brazare, Fr. brasser, to brew, from brace, brasium, O. Fr. bras, brauð, breiz, Gael. braich, W. brag, sprouted corn, malt. So Icel. brugga, Sw. brygga, to brew, from AS. brug, malt; "brug, polenta."—Gl. AS. in Schilter.

The Teutonic verbs, G. brauen, Du. brouwen, E. brew, are in like manner from a form similar to Wallon, brá, brau, Wallach. brahè, malt.

If the foregoing were not so clear, a satisfactory origin might have been found in W. berwi, to boil, the equivalent of Lat. fervere, whence berw, berwedd, a boiling, and berweddu, to brew. Gael. bruith, to boil, and O. Du. brieden, to brew.—Kil.

It is remarkable that the Gr. βραζω, βρασσω, to boil, would correspond in like manner to the Fr. brasser, which however is undoubtedly from brace, malt.

Brewis. See Broth.

Bribe. Fr. bribe de pain, a lump of bread; briber, to beg one's bread, collect bits of food. Hence OE. bribour, a beggar, a rogue; It. birbante, birbone, a cheat, a rogue, with transposition of the r.

A bribe is now only used in the metaphorical sense of a sop to stop the mouth of some one, a gift for the purpose of obtaining an undue compliance.

The origin of the word is the W. brioc, to break; briw, broken, a fragment; bara briw, broken bread. Prov. Fr. brife, a lump of bread.—Hécart.

Brick. A piece of burnt clay.—Thomson. The radical meaning is simply a bit, a fragment, being one of the numerous words derived from break. Lang. brico, or brizo, a crum; bricou, a little bit; bricounejha, to break to pieces; bricalio, a crum, little bit, corresponding to OE. brocaly, broken victuals. AS. brice, fracture, fragment, hlafes brice, a bit of bread. In some parts of France brique is still used in this sense, brique de pain, a lump of bread.—Diez. Brique, fragment of anything broken.—Gl. Génév. Bricoteau, a quoit of stone.—Cotgr. It. briccia any jot or crum, a collop or slice of something.—Florio.

Bride.—Bridal. Goth. bruths, daughter-in-law; OHG. brût, sponsa, conjux, nurus; G. braut, bride. W. priod, appropriate, fit, appropriated, owned; also married, a married man or woman; priodas, a wedding; priod-fab, a bride-groom (mab=son); priod-ferch, a bride (merch=maid). Priodi, to appropriate; priodor, a proprietor. Diefenbach compares Lat. privus, one's own, privatus, appropriate, peculiar.

Bridegroom, AS. bryd-guma, the newly-married man; guma, a man. Bridal, for bride-ale, AS. bryd-eale, the marriage feast, then the marriage itself. So in O. Sw. fastningar-ól, graf-ól, arf-ól, the feast of espousals, of burial, of succession to the dead; from the last of which, Prov. E. arval, funeral.

Bridge.—AS. bricge; G. brücke; O. Sw. bro, brygga, as so, sugga, a sow, bo, bygga, to prepare, gno, gnugga, to rub. The Sw. bro is applied not only to a bridge, but to a paved road, beaten way; Dan. bro, bridge, pier, jetty, pavement; brolegge, to pave. "Hañ læt broa twa rastin af Tiwede," he made two leagues of road through the forest of Tiwede.—Ihre. At Hamburg a paviour is called steen-brygger; Pol. bruk, pavement; Lith. brukkas, pavement, stone-bridge; brukkoti, to pave; brukkti, to press; ibrukkti, to press in, imprint. The original sense thus seems to be to ram, to stamp.

Bridle. AS. bridel; OHG. brittil, príttil; Fr. bride. Perhaps this may be one of the cases in which the derivation of the word has been obscured by the insertion of an r. Icel. bitill, Dan. bidsel, a bridle, from bit, the part which the horse bites or holds in his mouth.

So It. bretonica, betonica, betony; brulicame, bulicame, boiling up; brocoliere, E. buckler; Icel. bruskr and buskr, a bush; Du. broosekens, E. buskins; E. groom, AS. guma.

Brief. From Latin breve or brevis, a summary or any short writing. Applied especially to a letter or command, to the king's writs. In the G. brief it has been appropriated to the sense of an epistle or letter. In E. it is applied to the letter of the Archbishop or similar official authorising a collection for any purpose; to the summary of instructions given to a barrister for the defence of his client.

“Dictante legationis suæ brevem.”—Ducange.

Brier. AS. brær, brere, but probably from the Normans. In the patois of Normandy the word briere is still preserved (Patois de Bray); Fr. bruyere, a heath, from Bret. brug, bruk, W. grug, Gael. fraoch, Grisons bruch, brutg, heath. It. brughiera, a heath; brughera, thick brakes of high-grown ferns.—Florio. M. Lat. bruarium, a heath, barren land rough with brambles and bushes.—Duc.

Brig. A two-masted vessel. Probably contracted from brigantine. Sp. bergantino, a brig or brigantine, two-masted vessel.—Neumann.

Brigade. A division of an army, from Fr. brigade, and that from It. brigata, a company, troop, crew, brood. Trovar si in brigata, to meet together.

The Prov. has briguer, in the sense of Fr. frayer, to circulate, consort with. “Mes se a servir als valens homes e a briguar ab lor.” He set himself to serve men of merit, and to associate with them. The primary meaning of Sp. bregar, It. brigare, seems to be to exert force; bregar el arco, to bend a bow; It. brigare, to strive for, to shift for with care, labour, and diligence, briga, necessary business.—Florio. Brigata, then would be a set of people engaged in a common occupation.

Brigand.—Brigantine.—Brigandine. It. briga, strife, M. Lat. briga, jurgia, rixa, pugna.—Duc. It. brigare, to strive, brawl, combat. Probably then it was in the sense of skirmishers that the name of brigand was given to certain light-armed foot-soldiers, frequently mentioned by Froissart and his contemporaries. A Latin glossary quoted by Ducange has “Veles, brigant, c'est une manière de gens d'armes courant et apert à pié.” “Cum 4 millibus peditum armatorum, duobus millibus brigantum et ducentis equitibus."—Chron. AD. 1351, in Duc. They were also called brigancii or brigantini. "*Brigancii*s et balestrariis Anglicis custodiam castris muniendi reservavit."

The passage from the sense of a light-armed soldier to that of a man pillaging on his own account, is easily understood. It. brigante, a pirate, rover either by sea or land.—Flor. A similar change has taken place in the meaning of the It. malandrini, in later times a robber or highway-man, but classed by Thomas of Walsingham with the Brigands as a species of horse-soldier.

"Reductus est ergo et coram consilio demonstratus Brigantinorum more semivestitus gestans sagittas breves qualiter utuntur equites illarum partium qui Malandrini dicuntur."—Duc.

From brigante, in the sense of a robber, It. brigandare, to rob, to rove, to play the pirate or thief at sea, and hence a brigantine, a small light pinnace proper for giving chase or fighting — Bailey; a vessel employed for the purpose of piracy.

A brigandine was a kind of scale armour, also called briganders, from being worn by the light troops called Brigands. A Breton glossary quoted by Ducange has "Brigandinou, Gall. brigandine, Lat. squamma; inde squammatum, orné de brigandine."

The sense of strife or combat expressed by briga, is a particular case of the general notion of exertion of force. See Brake. In the same way to strive is, in the first instance, to exert one's force in the attempt to do something, and, secondarily, to contend with another.

Bright.—Brilliant. Goth. bairhts, clear, manifest; Icel. biartr, AS. beorht, bright; beorhtm, braehtm. bryhtm, a glittering, twinkling, moment. Bav. bracht, clang, sound, noise.—Schmeller. OHG. praht, pracht, clear sound, outcry, tumult, and, at a later period, splendour. The E. bright itself was formerly applied to sounds.

Heo—song so schille and so brihte
That far and ner me hit iherde.—

Owl and Nightingale, 1654.

The seolfc coc that wcl can figte
He mot mid me holde mid rihte

For both we habbeth stevene brizte.—Ibid. 1678.

In like manner the G. prahlen signifies in the first instance to speak with a loud voice, to cry, and secondly, to glitter, to shine.—Adelung. The origin of both these words is the imitative root brag, brak, representing a sudden noise. Swab. bragen, brägen, briegen, to cry—Schmid; OE. bray, braid.

The phenomena from whence all representative words are immediately taken, must of course belong to the class which addresses itself to the ear, and we find accordingly that the words expressing attributes of light are commonly derived from those of sound. So G. hell, clear, transparent, from hall, a sound, clangour. The Ir. glòr, a noise, voice, speech, glòram, the sound, show the origin of Lat. clarus, clear, with respect either to sound or colour, and the E. tinkle, that of Fr. étincelle, a spark. From Icel. glamm, glumr, tinnitus, glamra, to resound, may be explained glampi, glitter, splendour, glampa, to shine, corresponding to the Gr. λαμπω, λαμπος. Du. scha- teren, scheteren, to make a loud noise, to shriek with laughter, schiteren, to shine, to glisten. In Finn. there are many examples of the same transfer of signification from the phenomena of the one sense to those of the other; kiliä clare tinniens, clare lucens, splendens; kilistää, tinnitum clarum moveo, splendorem clarum reflecto. Wilistä, to ring, as glass; willata, wilella, wilahtaa, to flash, to glitter; kajata, to resound, re-echo, also to reflect, shine, appear at a distance, kimistä, to sound clear (equivalent to the E. chime), kiminä, sonus acutus, clangor tinniens, kimmaltaa, kiimottaa, to shine, to glitter; kommata, komista, to sound deep or hollow; komottaa, to shine, to shimmer.

In like manner in Galla the sound of a bell is imitated by the word bilbil, whence bilbil-goda (literally, to make bilbil), to ring, to glitter, beam, glisten.—Tutschek.

The meaning of the Fr. briller, to shine, seems to have been attained on a principle exactly similar. We must premise that an initial br and gr, as well as bl and gl, frequently interchange, as in Langued. brésil, Fr. grésil, small gravel, It. brullo, grullo, parched, broiled.—Flor. We have then in Fr. the verbs grisser, to creak, crackle; gresiller, grisler, to make a crackling noise, as of meat in broiling; griller, to creak, crackle, broil; and corresponding to these, with an initial br instead of gr, Sc. brissle, Swiss Rom. brisoler, bresoler (Gloss. Génév.), to broil, to parch, identical with the Fr. breziller, briller, to twinkle, glitter, sparkle. Here it cannot be doubted that the original meaning of the Sc. brissle was derived from the crackling noise made by meat in broiling, as in AS. brastlian, to crackle, to burn. In Fr. breziller, briller (related to each other as gresiller, griller), the meaning is transferred from the domain of the ear to that of the eye, from the analogous effect produced on the sensitive frame by a crackling noise and a sparkling light. So Fr. pétiller, to crackle, to sparkle, to shake, to long for a thing.

The verb briller itself seems to have the sense of shaking or trembling in the expression briller après, greedily, to covet—Cotgr.; properly to tremble with impatience.

Instead of briller in this application the Swiss Rom. uses brèsoler (il bresole d'être marie; os qui bresole, the singing bone), strongly confirming the contraction of briller from breziller, and the correspondence of the pair with griller, gresiller; griller d'impatience.—Dict. Trevoux.

It. brillare, to quaver with the voice.—Fl.

Brim.—Rim. G. brame, brame, Lith. bremas, border, margin, edge. Pol. bram, border, brim; Hung. perem, prem, a border, fringe (Lat. fimbria), Du. breme, bremel, a border, lap, fringe; Icel. barmr, the edge, border, lip of a vessel, lap of a garment; hence the bosom, originally the lap folding over the breast. E. barm, the lap or bosom; barm-cloth or barm-skin, an apron.

The E. ryme, which seems identical with rim, is used for the surface of the sea (Hawkins' Voyage). In the same way Sw. bryn is used in the sense both of border or edge and surface, vattu-bryn, the ryme of the water; ögne-bryn, the eye-brow. Dan. bryn, brow of a hill, surface of the ocean.

To Brim. To brim, G. brähnen, is said of sows ready to take the boar, from the peculiar cry of the animal on that occasion. AS. bremman, Du. brommen, Fris. brimme, Gr. βρῆμειν, Lat. fremere, It. bramire, O. Fr. bramer, to roar; bram, a cry of desire or pain. It. bramire, a longing or earnest desire—Florio; bramare, to desire; Du. bremen, to burn with desire—Kil.; bremstigh, brumstigh, brunstigh, ardens desiderio.—Kil.

Brimstone. For brynstone, burning stone, from AS. bryne, a burning.

Brindled.—Brinded. Sc. Sprained. Streaked, coloured in stripes. Icel. bröndottr s. s.; brand-krossottr, cross-barred in colour, from brandar, beams, posts, bars. A brindled cow is in Normandy called vache brangée, from bringe, a rod. Hence with an initial s, Sc. spraing, a streak, sprained, striped or streaked.

The identity of Icel. brand and Fr. bringe is traced through the It. brano, brandello, a bit; Fr. brin, a morsel, a slip or sprig of an herb; Berri, bringue, a crum, a morsel; bringe, a rod or twig, brindelles de balai, the twigs of a besom. See Brand.

Brine. AS. bryne, salsugo. Liquamen vel garum—fisc-bryne.—Gl. Ælfr. Du. brijn, pickle.—Kil. The AS. uses brym as a poetic name for the sea. Icel. brim, æstus litoralis maris; brim-sior, a stormy sea; brim-hliod, roar of the sea; brim-saltr, very salt. As brimi is flame, the term is probably derived from the roaring of the sea; Gr. βρῆμα, Fris. brimme, to roar.

Brisk. Fr. brusque, lively, quick, rash, fierce, rude, harsh; vin brusque, wine of a sharp, smart taste. It. brusco, eager, sharp, brisk in taste, as unripe fruits, sour, grim, crabbed.

Probably derived from the sound of sparkling liquor, produced by a quick succession of small bubbles coming to the surface and bursting.

It. frizzare, to spirt, frisk, or startle, as good wine doth, to bite or burn, to be tart upon the tongue as sour wine or fruit is, also to frisk or skip nimbly; frizzante, brisk, tart, or smacking upon the tongue, by metaphor quick and nimble-witted. Serv. vtzanye, vtzkanye, spiriting, moving quickly backwards and forwards. Fr. frisque, frisk, lively, brisk, spruce, gay.

The same connexion of ideas is seen in It. brillare, to twinkle, to sparkle as wine doth, also to skip or chuck for joy.

Fl.

Brisket. Fr. brichet, the breast of an animal, a very gristly piece of meat. Perhaps from Icel. briosk, Sw. brusk, gristle. On the other hand the Bret. bruched (Fr. ch), the chest, breast, craw of a bird, tends to connect the word with Slavonian forms, Russ. brioch, Bohem. břich, břicho, the belly, Russ. brioshko, Bohem. břísko, little belly. See Bowels.

Bristle. AS. byrst; Sw. borst, Du. borstel, Sc birs, birse, N. E. brust. A thick elastic hair, strong enough to stand up of itself. Corn. bros, aculeus.—Zeuß. Wallach. borzos (struppig), bristly; Swiss borzen, to stand out; Fr. à rebours, against the grain; rebrousser, to turn up the point of anything.—Cotgr. M. Lat. reburrus, rebursus, sticking up; “In suâ primævâ ætate habebat capillos crispas et rigidos et ut ita dicam reburros ad modum pini ramorum qui semper tendunt sursum.”—Vita abbatum S. Crispini in Duc.

The It. brisciare, brezzare, to shiver for cold as in a fit of an ague, has under Breeze been connected with the Sc. bristle, birsle, birstle, to broil, to scorch, originally merely to crackle or simmer. Hence ribrezzare, to shiver for cold or for fear, to astonish or affright with sudden fear; ribrezzoso, startling, trembling, full of astonishment, humorous, fantastical, suddenly angry.

Then as the effect of shivering, or the emotions which produce it, is to erect the hair, to birstle, bristle might properly be used in the sense of startling, ruffling, setting the hair on end, whence a birstle, bristle, would signify an erect hair, the true equivalent of the It. riccio. See Caprice.

Traces of the original meaning may be seen in the Sc. expression, to set up one's birse, to put one in a rage; birssy, hot-tempered, to be compared with the It. ribrezzoso, angry. A cold bleak day is called a birssy day, because it makes us shivery and goose-skinned, setting the hair on end; compare It. brezza, a cold and windy mist or frost.

The initial b is represented by the syllable hé in the Fr. hérissier, to set up his bristles, to make his hair to stare; se hérissier, his hair to stare, also to shiver or...yearn through fear.—Cot. From the same source is Lat. ericius, a hedgehog. In like manner the Lat. erica corresponds to Bret. brug, heath; the Lat. eruca to It. bruco, a caterpillar. The connexion with the Celtic name for heath meets us again in a very puzzling manner under Brush.

Brittle.—Brickle. Formerly written brotil, apt to break, from AS. brytan, Icel. briota, Port. britar, to break. Dan. bryde, to break, brodden, brittle. In the N. of E. and Sc. brickle, brockle, bruckle, are used in the sense of brittle, from break. The Pl. D. bros, brittle, is the equivalent derivative from the Gael. form bris, Fr. briser. Bret. bresk, brusk, fragile.

Broach.—Abroach.—Brooch. To broach a cask is to pierce it for the purpose of drawing off the liquor, and hence metaphorically, to broach a business, to begin upon it, to set it a going. W. procio, to thrust, to stab; Gael. brog, to goad, to spur, and, as a noun, an awl. Prov. broca, Fr. broche, a spit, a stitch; brocher, to spit, stitch, spur; Prov. brocar, It. broccare, brocciare, to stick, to spur. Sp. broca, a brad or tack, a button; broche, a clasp, a brooch, i. e. an ornamented pin to hold the parts of dress together.

Lat. broccus, bronchus, a projecting tooth; It. brocco, a stump or dry branch of a tree so that it prick, a bud, a peg; sbrocco, sprocca, a skewer, sprout, shoot.

It is probable that there is a fundamental connexion with the verb to break, the notion of a sharp point being obtained either from the image of a broken stick (brocco, stecco rotto in modo che punta—Altieri), or from that of a splinter or small fragment, which in the case of wood or similar material naturally takes the form of a prick, or finally from the pointed form of a bud or shoot, breaking out into growth. It. brocco, a bud, broccoli, sprouts. Compare also E. prick with Sw. spricka, to crack, to shoot, to bud.

A similar relation may be observed between Sp. brote, a bud, a fragment. Prov. brot, a shoot or sprig, and forms like the Icel. briota, Port. britar, to break.

Broad. AS. brād; Goth. braids; Icel. breidr; G. breit. We may remark a frequent connexion between words signifying edge, side, border, and those signifying broad. Thus Lat. latus, lateris, a side, and latus, broad; AS. side, a side, and sid, wide; Dan. bred, an edge or border, and breed, broad; Sw. bradd, edge, and bred, broad; bred-vid, side by side, having the sides or edges opposed, or else opposed in the direction of breadth (vid = near, at, upon).

The radical notion seems to be extended in the direction of the edges, extended from edge to edge. See Spread.

Brocade. It. broccata, a sort of cloth wrought with gold and silver. Commonly explained as from Fr. brocher, to stitch, in the sense of embroidered. But Muratori shows that, though from the same fundamental origin, the line of development has been something different. The It. brocco, a peg, stump, or snag, is also applied to a knot or bunch in silk or thread, whence broccare, to boss, to stud—Florio; broccoso, broccuto, knotty, knobby; and broccato was used to signify stuff ornamented with a raised pile, forming knots or loops, or stuff embossed with gold and silver.

Brock. A badger, from the white-streaked face of the animal. Gael. broice, a mole, a freckle, brucach, spotted, freckled; breac, speckled, piebald; broc, a badger; brocach, Sc. broukit, brooked, streaked or speckled in the face. Dan. broged, parti-coloured, broc, a badger. W. brech, brych, brindled, freckled, brychau, moles, spots, atoms; Bret. bric'h, briz, speckled, parti-coloured, streaked, brizen, a freckle. For the same reason the badger is also called Bawson, q. v.

Brocket. A hart of two years old. Fr. brocart, because the animal at that age has a single sharp broche or snag to his antler. The fallow-deer of the same age was termed a pricket.—Cot.

To Broider. Fr. broder, Sp. bordar, to ornament with needle-work. Here two distinct images seem to have coalesced in a common signification. The Bret. brouda, to embroider, to prick, to spur, and W. brodio, to embroider, to darn, point to an origin in Bret. broud, a prick, sting, Gael. brod, E. brod, prod, to prick. On the other hand the Sp. bordar seems derived from borde, bordo, a border, because a border of needle-work was the earliest mode of ornamenting a garment. There has gull-bord, a border ornamented with gold, silkes-borda, a border ornamented with silk. So from Pol. bram, a border, bramowanie, embroidering.

It may happen here, as will often be found to be the case in other instances where the derivation seems to halt between two roots, that these are themselves modifications of a common original. Thus brod, a point, and bord or bred, an edge, agree in being the extremity of a thing. The Icel. brydda is both to sharpen or furnish with a point, and also to sew on a border or fringe to a garment. Compare also *AS. brerd, breard, a brim, rim, margin, with Sc. braird, the shoot of corn, AS. onbryrdan, to instigate.

Broil. Disturbance, trouble, a falling-out, a quarrel.—Bailey. The sense has been somewhat modified in later times by a confusion with brawl.

The bark that broild in rough and churlish seas
At length doth reach a port and place of ease.

Turberville in R.

But that thou wilt in winter ships prepare
And trie the seas in broile of whirling windes.

Surrey in R.

The proper sense is that of Fr. brouiller (from whence it immediately comes), to jumble, trouble, shuffle, confound, to make a hurly-burly.—Cotgr. It. broglio. Gael. broighlick, noise, bawling, confusion, tumult; broighleach, bustling, noisy, tumultuous. From a direct imitation of a confused sound. The word hurly-burly is a parallel formation within the limits of E. itself. Fr. brouhaha, brouhoux, storms, blusters, hurly-burlies. See Brawl.

To Broil. To roast upon hot coals.—Bailey. Contracted from Fr. brasiller, to roast on the braise, or glowing coals; or perhaps we should rather say formed like Fr. brasiller, brusler, bruler, or It. brasciare, brasciuolare, brasolare, brusciare, brucicare, brusuolare (the last to be argued from brasciuole, brusuole, fried or boiled steaks), brullare, to burn, parch, scorch, broil.—Florio. Sc. birsle, brissle, to parch or broil. In all these words the imitative character of the designation from the crackling sound of flame and burning grease is felt in a lively manner. Compare G. prasseln, to crackle, rustle, and AS. brastlian, to crackle, to burn, Grisons brascla, sparks; E. brustle, to crackle, make a noise like straw or small wood in burning,—Halliwell.

When he is falle in such a dreme—
He routeth with a slepie noyse
And broustleth as a monkes froyse (pancake)
When it is throwe into the panne.—Gower in R.

It. brustolare, to seorch, broil, carbonado.

With an initial gr instead of br the Fr. has grisser, to crackle, creak, gresiller, to crackle as a shell in the fire, or salted fish on coals, grissement, a crackling noise as of meat in broiling; griller, to broil, precisely analogous to the Sc. brissle, and E. broil. The Italian has the double form brullo, grullo, parched, broiled.—Florio.

Broker. The custom of employing a broker in the purchase of goods arises from the advantage of having a skilled intermediary, capable from long practice of forming a critical judgment of the goods in question, of pointing out their latent defects, and rejecting whatever falls below the degree of excellence called for by the circumstances of the case. To find fault is accordingly recognised in Piers Plowman as the specific duty of a broker :—

Among burgeises hæve I be Dwellyng at London,
And gart Backbiting be a brocour,
To blame mens ware.

On this principle the G. designation is mäkler, from makel, a blur, stain, fault; mäkeln, to criticise, censure, find fault with, [and thence] to follow the business of a broker, buy and sell by commission.—Küttner. For the same reason the O. Fr. term was correctour, Lat. corrector, correctarius, whence the modern courtier, a broker. Per manus et mediationem quorundam J. S. et A. G.—brocariorum et correctariorum ejusdem barganei.—Lib. Alb. 396. Vous jurrez que vous ne marchanderez dez nullez marchaundisez dez queux vous ferez correctage.—Sacramentum Abrocariorum in Lib. Alb. To correct an exercise is to point out the faults.

Now in most of the Teutonic (especially the Pl. D.) and Slavonic dialects is found the root brak or wrak in the sense of rejection, refuse, vile, damaged, faulty, giving rise to a verb signifying to inspect, make selection, sort, try out, reject, cast out. Lith. brokas, a fault, weak place, matter of blame; brokoti, to blame, to criticise (makeln). Russ. bräk, refuse; brakovat, to pick and choose, to sort; brakovanie, inspection, rejection; Pol. brak, want, lack, refuse; brakować, to garble, to pick, to be wanting. In the Teutonic class: Du. brack, rejected, damaged; braeck goed, goods damaged by sea-water.—Kil. Pl. D. braken, to garble, inspect, try; wraken, to pronounce unsound, to reject; Dan. vrag, to reject, find fault with, to sort goods; slaae vrag paa, to throw blame upon, find fault with. G. bräck-gut (Sanders), Pl. D. wrack-good, refuse goods. Prov. brac, refuse, filth, mud, ordure, and as an adj. vile, dirty, abject. Fr. bric-a-brac, trumpery, brokers' goods. See Brackish.

The name broker seems to have come to us from the shores of the Baltic, with which much of our early commerce was carried on. In those countries the term braker, bracker, or wracker is used to signify public inspectors, appointed to classify goods according to their quality, and to reject the damaged and unsound.—Adelung. In Petersburg the price of tallow is quoted with or without brack, the term brack signifying the official inspection of sworn brackers or sorters.—Tooke's Catherine, 1. 38.

If we advance another step in the inquiry and seek the origin of the term brack, wrak, in the sense of rejection, we shall probably find the original image in the act of spitting, as the liveliest expression of disgust and contempt for the rejected object. G. brechen, Du. braecken, to vomit; Prov. E. whreake, tussis, screatio—Junius; wreak, a cough—Hal.; Icel. hraki, spittle; hrak, any refuse matter. Fr. raquer, racher, cracher, to spit; racaille, refuse; Prov. raca, an old worthless horse, analogous to Bohem. brakyne, an outcast or rejected sheep. The Langued. brumo, phlegm, spittle, has exactly the force of G. brack in the expression brumos de boutigo, marchandises de rebut; G. brack-gut, refuse wares.—See Wreak.

In the sense of blot or stain there is a singular confusion with brack, a breach or flaw, from break.

Bronze. It. bronzo, Sp. bronce, pan metal.—Florio. This word shows the same relation to It. bronze, glowing coals, which E. brass does to Sp. brasa, embers. Bronzare, to brase, to copper. Fr. braser l'argent, le repasser un peu sur la braise.—Ootgr. Icel. brasa, to braze or solder iron with a lute of brass. It would appear then that the use of the metal in soldering, an operation performed over hot coals, is the origin of the designation both of bronze and brass. It may be doubted whether the It. bronze is a nasalised form of brace, embers, or whether it be derived from the root bren, to burn. The Sc. has brunds, brands, embers, to brund, to emit sparks. — Jám. Grisons brinzla, brascla, a spark, sbrinzlar, to sparkle.

The use of the word bronzed in the sense of tanned, sunburnt, is probably not originally derived from comparison with the colour of the metal bronze, but from the primary sense of the It. bronze, embers. Abbronzare, abbronzanchiare, to roast on the embers, to scorch, tan, or sunburn.—Florío.

Brood.—Breed. AS. brod, a brood; bríd, the young of any animal; bredan, to nourish, cherish, keep warm. Du. broeden, to sit on eggs, to hatch; G. brut, the spawn of fishes, progeny of birds, insects, and fishes; brüten, to hatch, bring eggs and spawn into active life. Pl. D. brod, brot, fish-spawn; bröden, bröen, to hatch, brídde, a chicken. Commonly referred to the notion of warming, in which sense the OHG. bruoton is used by Notker. “also unsih diu uuolla bruotet unde uuider froste skirmet,” as wool warms us and protects us against frost. Bret. broud, hot, burning, fermenting. W. brod, hot, warm; brydio, to be hot. O. Du. brieden, to brew. See Broth.

Brook. AS. broca, a brook; W. bruchen, the bubbling or springing up of water, a spring, a source; Gael. bruich, to boil, seethe, simmer, from the murmuring noise. Gr. $\beta\rho\nu\chi\omega$, to roar, $\beta\rho\nu\omega$, to spring, Bohem. bruceti, to murmur. The meaning of the word brook in the low G. dialects is very different, signifying low wet land.—Brem. Wort.; a grassy place in a heath.—Overyssel Almanack.

It is possible that brook in the E. sense may be connected with Russ. breg, Gaek. bruach, Manx broogh, brink, verge, bank, as Fr. rivière, a river, It. riviera, a shore, from ripa, bank.

To Brook. To digest, to bear patiently. AS. brucan, to use, eat, enjoy; Goth. brukjan, to use; bruks, useful; G. brauchen, to use. Lat. frui, fructus.

Broom. A shrub with leafless pointed branches. G. pfriemkraut, awl-plant. See Bramble.

Broth. It. brodo, Fr. brouet, broth; Du. broeye, brue;

OHG. brod, G. brühe, Pl. D. broi, properly boiling water ; brühen, broien, to scald, pour boiling water over. Ir. bruithim, to boil ; bruith, sodden, boiled ; bruiſhean, heat, warmth ; bruthch'an, broth ; brothaire, a caldron. Gael. bruich, bruith, to boil, brothas, broth ; Manx broie, to boil, broit, broth. Bret. broud, W. brod, hot. G. brodem, broden, steam from heated bodies, in which sense the Sc. broth is sometimes used ; a person is said to be in a broth of sweat who is steaming with sweat. Du. broem (for brodem), spuma, sordes seu strigmata rerum decoctarum. The origin is a representation of the simmering of boiling water. Limousin broudi, brudi, to make a confused noise of winds, waves, &c. Pl. D. bruddeln, to bubble up with noise.

The softening down of the consonant (which is barely pronounced in Gael. brothas) gives the OE. browys, brewis, brewet, pottage, broth, and Sc. brose. The AS. has briw, infusion, ceales briw, kail brose, cabbage soup ; Sc. broo, bree, pottage made by pouring boiling water on meal, infusion ; the barley bree, juice of malt, ale ; Gael. brìgh, juice of meat, sap, pith, vigour, strength ; Ir. bruth, strength, vigour, rage, heat ; explaining the Prov. briu, and It. brio, mettle, spirit.

Brothel. Sp. borda, a hut or cottage ; Fr. borde, a little house or cottage of timber, hut, hovel.—Cotgr. Commonly derived from the boards, of which the fabric consists. But the Wallach. bordsiou is an under-ground hut as well as a house of ill fame.

The diminutive bordeau, bordel, was originally used in the innocent sense of a little cottage.

•Ne laissent en Chartrain ne en Dive bordel,

Ne maison en estant qui soit fors du chastel.—Duc.

Domunculum circumdedit cum familia. Sorengus vero expergefactus de bordello exiit et fugiens in vivariam exire voluit.—Duc.

Brother. A term widely spread through the branches of the Indo-Germanic stock. Sanser. bhratr ; Zend. brata ; Gael. brathair ; W. brwod ; Slavon. bratr ; Lat. frater.

Brow. The ridge surrounding and protecting the eye. AS.

braew, bregħ; Pol. brew; Russ. brov, brow. Bohem. braubiti, to border. Du. brauwe, eye-lid, eye-brow, and also border, margin, fur edging.—Kil. Icel. brá, eye-lid, eye-lash; brun, eye-brow, edge, eminence; Dan. bryn, eye-brow, brow of a hill, surface of the ocean; Sw. bryn, edge, border, surface. W. bryn, a hill. G. augen-braune, eye-brow.

The AS. forms appear related to the Russ. breg, Bohem. brek, Gael. bruach, a brink, bank, shore; Serv. breg, a hill, bank, shore.

Brown. Ger. braun, Icel. brun, It. bruno, Fr. brun, perhaps burnt colour, the colour of things burnt, from Goth. brinnan, G. brennen, to burn.

Browse. Fr. brouter, brouser, brouster, to knap or nibble off the sprigs, buds, bark, &c. of plants; broust, a sprig, young branch, or shoot.—Cotgr. Bret. brons, brous, a bud; brous-koal, brush-wood; brouskaol, brocoli, cabbage sprouts; brous-gwezen, a shrub; broust, briar, thick bush; brousta, to browse, to grow into a bush. Prov. brotar, to shoot, bud, grow; brossa, O. Fr. broces, brosses, Catalan brossa, Sp. broza, thicket, brushwood; brotar, to sprout, bud, break out as small-pox, &c.; Gris. braussa, low shrubs, as rhododendrons, juniper, &c. Prov. brus, heath. Fr. broques, brosses, brousses, brouches, brouic, bruc, bushes, briars, heath. — Roquefort. M. Lat. bruscia, brozia, dumetum. “Tam de terrâ bruscosâ quam de arabili.” — Duc. Serv. brst, sprouts; brstiti, to browse. OHG. bros, sprout. Bav. bross, brosst, a bud, a sprout. It. brocco, sprocco, broccolo, shoot, sprout.

Here we find throughout the Romance, Teutonic, Celtic, and Slavonic families, a variety of forms, broc, broe, brost, sproc, spross, sprot, signifying twigs, shoots, sprouts, or bushes and scrubby growths, plants composed of twigs, or broken up into a multitude of points. There can be little doubt that they are all derived from the notion of breaking out, which we find expressed by similar modifications in the termination of the root, brik, bris, brist, brit, to break or burst. See next article, and also Brush, Broach.

Bruise. AS. brysan, OE. brise, to crush.

“And he that schal falle on this stone schall be broken, but on whom it schall falle, it schall al to brisen him.—Wiclif.

Fr. briser, to break, crush, bruise extremely.—Cotgr. O. Fr. bruiser.—Diez. Prov. brisar, desbrisar, to break to bits; Gael. bris, brisd, brist; Port. britar, to break.

A modification of the same root which gives the E. break, the interchange of the final consonants being clearly shown in the derivatives, Prov. brico or brizo, a crum; briketo, brizeto, bricalio, a little bit; brizal, dust, fragments; brizal de carbon, du bris de charçon de terre, coal dust. See Breeze.

Brunt. Assault, onset, heat. Commonly explained from G. brunst, heat, strong passion. But the meaning is distinctly the front of an assault.

That in all haste he would join battayle even with the bront or brést of the van garde—Hall. in Richardson.

The shot of arblasters—overthrew many a horse and man, and specially the fore rydars that put themselfe in prese with their longe and sharpe lauucys to win the first brunte of the field.—Fabyan in Richardson.

The metaphor is really derived from the practice of hanging a bell on the leading beast of a herd, which the others then readily follow. Hence the expression of bearing the bell for being the first in a company. Now the Servian has brunza, a cattle bell, from the material of which it is made, and the thing must ~~once~~ have been known by the same name in the language of the Grisons, in which brunza now signifies the first of a train of baggage animals, the bell-mule, while the diminutive brunzinna is applied to a cattle bell, and portar la brunzinna is actually used in the sense of being the first in anything. If we read the phrase portar la brunza it would exactly correspond to our expression of bearing the brunt, and the meaning of the word brunza being lost in its adoption into English in the form of brunt, it would acquire from the context the sense of onset; ~~shock~~

Brush. An implement made of bristles or elastic twigs for whisking away small extraneous matters from a surface. It is singular that the word may be derived with equal propriety from the dust or rubbish it is used to remove, or from the materials of which it is itself composed. Catalan. brossa, quisquilie, sordes, fæx; brossar, detergere; Gael. brusg, a crum, It. brusco, brusco, a mote, fescue; brusca, a brush; Swiss bruske, Piedm. brosse, remnants of hay or fodder, Orts, brossa, a brush; Sp. broza, chips, dust, rubbish, brozar, to cleanse, broza, a brush; Gael. bruis (in the pl.), shivers, splinters, fragments, bruis (sing.), a brush; E. bris, brist, dust, rubbish. Piedm. bruscia, brustia, a horse-brush, wool-card, brustié, to-brush, Lang. broustia, a flax comb, G. borste, bürste, Sw. borste, a brush.

In E. also the word brush had formerly the sense of dust or flue.

(Agea) said, Sir by your speche now right well I here
That if ye list ye may do the thing that I most desire,
And that is, this your heritage there you liked best
That ye might give: and ever among, the brush away she pikid
From her clothes here and there, and sighid therewithal.

Chaucer. Beryn.

While cajoling her husband, she kept picking the dust or bits of flue from her clothes to hide her embarrassment. To brush then would be to dust, to clear away the brush or dust and rubbish.

On the other hand, the derivation is equally satisfactory from the twigs or bristles of which the brush is composed. The Lat. scopæ signifies in the first instance twigs, and in the second place a besom, while the word besom itself properly signifies twigs, rods. The same relation holds good between G. borste, Sw. borst, a bristle, and G. borste, bürste, Sw. borste, a brush; N. E. brust, a bristle, and Piedm. brustia, a brush, wool-card. Bav. bröss, brösst, a bud or sprout; Bret. brous, a bud, shoot; brous koad, brush wood, wood composed of twigs. Prov. bruc, brus, brusc (Dict. Castr.), heath, quasi twigs, a shrub composed of small twigs; Langued. brouso, a tuft of heath; Fr. brosse, a brush, bushy ground, also a head-brush, wool-card, flax-comb; brossettes, small heath whereof head-brushes are made.—Cotgr. It. brusca, ling or heath for brushes.—Florio. Icel. bruskr, a bush of hair, tuft of grass or hay, a brush.

Perhaps the explanation of the double origin is to be found in the fact that the words signifying mote, dust, rubbish, and those signifying a sprig, twig, bush, are both derived from modifications of the multiform root signifying break, appearing in Goth. brikan, Gael. bris, brist, Fr. briser, Port. britar. The Bav. bross, brosst, Bret. brous, O. Fr. broust, a bud, twig, or shoot, seems named from bursting (Icel. brista) or breaking out; or the separate twigs or bristles may be considered as splinters, as It. brusco, brusco, bruschetta, a little piece of wood or straw, fescue, mote. But see Bristle.

Bubble. It. bubbola. From an imitation of the sound made by the bubbling liquid. Bohem. bublati, to murmur, bublina, a bubble; Pol. bąbel, a bubble, a tumour; Lith. bubsėti, to bubble, boil; bubauti, to bellow as a bull; bubenti, to thunder gently; bubiti, to beat; bubleti, to bump as a bittern. Sc. bub, a blast of wind.

A bubble and a lump or swelling are very generally designated by the same word, either because a bubble is taken as the type of anything round and swelling, or because the same articulation is used to represent the pop of a bubble bursting, and the sound of a blow, from which the designation of a knob, hump, or projection is commonly taken. Fr. bube, a push, wheal, blister, watery bud, hunch or bump.—Cotgr. "Burble in the water → bubette."—Palsgrave in Pr. Pm. Hung. bob, bub, pup, a bunch, hump, tuft, top, buborek, a bubble.

To Bubble. See Dupe.

Buccanier. A set of pirates in the 17th century, who resorted to the islands and uninhabited places in the West Indies, and exercised their cruelties principally on the Spaniards. The name, according to Olivier Ouzmelin, who wrote a history of adventurers in the Indies, is derived from the language of the Caribs. It was the custom of those savages when they took prisoners to cook their flesh on a kind of grate, called barbacoa (whence the term barbecue; a barbecued hog, a hog dressed whole). The place of such a feast was called boucan (or according to Cotgrave the wooden gridiron itself), and this mode of dressing, in which the flesh was cooked and smoked at the same time, was called in Fr. boucaner. Hence those who established themselves in the islands for the purpose of smoking meat were called buccaniers.—Dict. Etym. The term bocan is still applied in the W. I. to a place used for the drying of produce.

Our next illustration represents the Bocan, or building used for drying and preparing cocoa and coffee. The building is regularly constructed with two floors, the upper for coffee, the lower for cocoa. They are divided by partitions of open lath-work, which is also used in a great portion of the ends and sides of the main building, to allow a free current of air.—Illust. News. March 28, 1857.

To Buck. 1. Formerly, when soap was not so plentiful a commodity, the first operation in washing was to set the linen to soak in a solution of wood ashes. This was called bucking the linen, and the ashes used for that purpose were called buck-ashes. The word was very generally spread. In G. it is beuchen, bäuchen, beichen, buchen, büchen, büken. Sw. byka, Dan. hyge; Fr. buquer, buer; It. bucatare; Bret. bugá. Sp. bugada, lye. The derivation has been much discussed. The more plausible are: Dan. bög-aske, the ashes of beech-wood, chiefly employed in making potash; but the practice of bucking would have arisen long before people resorted to any particular kind of wood for the supply of ashes.

2. It. bucata, buck ashes, supposed to be so called from buca, a hole, because the ashes are strained through a pierced dish, in the same way that the term is in Sp. colada, lye, bucking, the linen at buck, from colare, to strain, to filter, to buck, lessiver, faire la lessive. But the analogy does not hold, because bucare does not appear ever to have been used in the sense of straining or filtering.

The true derivation is seen in Gael. bog, moist, soft, tender, and as a verb, to steep or soak. Bret. bouk, soft, tender, boukaat, to soften. The ideas of wet and soft commonly coalesce, as G. erweichen, to soak, from weich, soft; It. molle, soft, wet; Lat. mollire, to soften, and Fr. mouillir, to wet. Pol. mokry, wet; miękki, soft; mięknać, to soak, to soften; moczyć, to soak foul linen before washing. Bohem. mok, a steep for flax. To buck then would originally be to set the linen to soak in lye, and as m and b so often interchange (comp. W. maban and baban, a baby), the word is doubtless identical with mok, the root of the Slavonic words above mentioned, and of the Lat. maccro, to soak. In Lat. imbuere, the guttural termination is lost, as in Fr. buée for buquée.

Buck. The male goat, also applied to the male deer, and then to other wild animals, as a buck-rabbit. W. bwch, Gael. boc, Fr. bouc, It. becco. Probably named from the tendency of the animal to butt or strike with the forehead. Fin. pukkata, to butt; Esthon. pokkama, to butt, to kick; Hung. bökni, to stick, to butt. Pol. puk, knock, rap, tap; Gael. boc, a knock or blow; Fr. buquer, bucquer, to knock at a door, to butt or jurr; Dan. bukke, to ram down a gun. The sounds of butt and buck approach each other very nearly. Compare E. rebuke with Fr. rebuter, to repel; Icel. hutr, a log or trunk of a tree, and bukr, the trunk or body of an animal.

Bucket. Fr. baquet, a pail or bucket, a small shallow and open tub.—Ostgr. Dim. from bac, a trough. See Back. Russ. buk, a washing vessel.

Buckle. We have seen under Boss that words signifying protuberance are generally derived from a representation of the sound of a blow, or perhaps of a thing cracking or bursting. The Pol. puk! is used in imitation of the sound of a smart knock; pukawka, a pop-gun; Russ. pukat, to crack, to burst; Bohem. pukati se, to open as a bud, to spring, sprout; Russ. puk, a bunch, bundle, whip; Fin. puka, a hump; sabulan puka, the saddle-bow; heinä-puka, a haycock; Rouchi poquer, to strike, poque, a pustule, ulcer, pock;

It. bucchia, buccia, boccia, a bunch, bud, bubble; Icel. bukr, the trunk, body, belly, the protuberant or thick part of a thing; Sp. buque, bulk, the hull of a ship; buche, craw, stomach, bag; Sw. buka, to swell, to bulge; Gael. boc, a blow, a stroke; bóc, to swell, to blister; W. bog, a swelling, rising up, boglyn, a boss, knob, bubble; Dan. bug, belly, bulge, bow; bugle, boss, protuberance; bugne, to bulge, to swell; Hung. bog, a knob, knot, bud, bulb; It. boccula, a bubble; Fr. boucle, a bubble, curl, buckle; bouclé, swollen, hulching, bearing out in the middle; Pol. pukiel, a lock of hair; G. buckel, a hump-back, hunch, boss, stud.

Buckler. Fr. bouclier, a shield with a central boss, from boucle, protuberance, Mid. Lat. bucula scuti.—Gl. Isidor. Icel. bugnir, a shield, from bugr, convexity; W. bog, a swelling or rising up. The Prov. has bocla and bloca, the boss of a shield, whence bloquier, Sp. broquel, It. brocchiere, brocchiète, a buckler, of which the last corresponds to the W. form bwcléd. Rouchi blouque, a buckle, blouquette, small buckle.—Hécart.

Buckram. Coarse linen cloth stiffened, with open interstices; Fr. bougran; It. bucherame, from buca, a hole, whence bucherare, to pierce full of holes.

Buckwheat. A kind of grain, having three-cornered seeds resembling beech-nuts. G. buch-weitzen, Dan. bog-hvete, from G. büche, Dan. bog, beech-mast.

Bud. Not immediately from Fr. bouter, Du. botten, to push, put forth, bud, as the final t is never converted into a d in the adoption of a word into E. A nearer connexion is Bohem. bod, a prick, Lith. badyti, to prick, stick, the root of E. bodkin, an instrument for pricking. The first appearance of the germ is expressed by the notion of pricking, piercing, as in Fr. poindre du jour, the peep of day. Bohem. bodka, a point, bodec, a thorn, sting, bodlak, a thistle, &c.

To Budge. Bret. boulg, movement; bouljein, Fr. bouger, to move, stir, budge, probably from the notion of bubbling, boiling; Port. bulir, to budge. Nao vos bulais d'aqui, don't stir from hence, don't budge. Icel. bulla, to boil; bullt, motus creber.

Budget. A bag or pouch.—Bailey. Fr. bougette, a little coffer or trunk covered with leather, also a little male-pouch or budget.—Cotgr. Dim. of bouge, a budget, wallet, great pouch, or male of leather serving to carry things behind a man on horseback. It. bolgia, bolgetta, a budget, leathern bucket. From bulga, a skin. See Bulge. •

Buff.—Buffle.—Buffalo. Lat. bubalus, Russ. buirol, Fr. buffle, the buffle, buffle, bugle, or wild ox, also the skin or neck of a buffle.—Cotgr. The term was then applied to the skin of the buffalo dressed soft, buff leather, and then to the yellowish colour of leather so dressed. It. buffalo, a buffle or a bugle, by metaphor, a block-headed noddy.—Florio. Hence the E. buffle-headed, confused, stupid. The name of the beast seems taken from a representation of his voice. Lith. bubenti, dumpf und hohl brüllen, to bellow; Hung. bufogni, to give a hollow sound.

Buff.—Buffet. A blow. From buff, an imitation of the sound of a blow. Pl. D. buffen, to strike; E. rebuff, to repulse; It. buffare, Fr. bouffer, to puff, to blow; It. buffetto, a cuff or buffet, also a blurt or puff with one's mouth. G. puff, a clap, buffet, cuff; Lith. bubiti, to beat. In other cases, as Diez remarks, the word for a stroke is connected with a verb signifying to blow; Fr. soufflet, a buffet, from souffler, to blow; souffleté, often blown upon, boxed on the ear; and the word blow itself is used in both senses.

Buff. A buff sound is a toneless sound as of a blow. Hung. bufogni, to give a dull sound (einen dumpfen schnell geben, puffen); Pl. D. duff, dull, of colours, sounds, tastes, smells, een duffen toon, a deadened tone; eene duffe couleur, a dull colour.

Buffet. Fr. buffet, a side-board. Fr. buffer, bouffer, to puff, to blow. The primary sense of buffeter seems to have been to take out the vent peg of a cask, and let in the air necessary for drawing out liquor, as from Lith. dãusa, air, breath, dausinti, to give air to a cask in order to let the beer run.

Si vos chartiers — amenant pour la provision de vos maisons certain nombre de tonneaux de vin les avaient buffetés et beus à demi, le reste emplissant d'eau, &c.—Rabelais.

Buffeter, to marre a vessel of wine by often tasting it; buffeté, deadened, as wine that hath taken wind, or hath been mingled with water.—Cotgr.

Hence vin de buffet, apparently wine on draught, wine drawn from the cask; “qui vinum de Buffet nuncupatum vendebat.”—Carpentier, who does not understand the phrase. Fr. buffeteur, M. Lat. bufetarius; tabernarius, caupo. Bufetarium, the duty paid for retailing of wine in taverns. The verb buffeter may thus be translated to tap, and vin de buffet, wine on tap; buffetier, a tapster. Thus buffet would signify the tap of a public-house or tavern, the place whence the wine was drawn. From thence it has been transferred in E. to the sideboard on which the drinkables are placed at meals, and in Fr. to the office in a department where other kind of business is carried on, while in Sp. it has passed on to signify simply a desk or writing-table.

Buffoon. Fr. bouffon, a jester, from It. buffare, to puff, huff, and snuff, to blow hard, to storm, jest, or sport; buffetto, a blurt or puff with one's mouth.—Flò.

Bug.—Bugbear.—Boggart.—Bogle. The meaning of Bug is simply an object of terror, from the cry Bo! Boo! Boh! made by a person, often covering his face to represent the unknown, to frighten children. The use of the exclamation for this purpose is very widely spread. W. bw! It. bau! “Far bau! bau! — far paura a' bambini coprendosi la volta.”—La Crusca. Alternately covering the face in this manner to form an object of sportive terror, and then peeping over the covering to relieve the infant from his terror, constitutes the game of Bo-peep, Sc. Teet-bo. A person is said to look as if he could not say Bo! to a goose, when he looks as if the goose would be more likely to frighten him than he the goose.

The cry made to excite terror is then used, either alone or with various terminations, to signify an indefinite object of terror, such as that conjured up by children in the dark.

L'apparer del giorno
Che scaccia l' Ombre, il Bau e le Befane!—La Crusca

The peep of day
Which scatters spectres, bugs, and hobgoblins

In the same sense Sc. Boo, Bu-man, Bu-kow (from kow, a goblin), a hobgoblin; Prov. E. bo-man, Pl. D. bu-mann, Du. bullemann; W. bw, bwg, bwbach; Du. bullebak, E. bull-beggar.

As children be afraid of bear-bugs and bull-beggars.

Sir Thos. Smith in Todd.

In the Italian barabao, E. buggaboo, Swiss butzibau, Sc. boodieboo, Du. bietebau, Esthon. popo, Hung. bubus, an attempt is made to represent the continuance of the terrific sound by the repetition of syllables formed from the radical articulation, and a greater effect is produced on the mind of the child by the more sonorous title. Far barabao is explained in Patriarchi's Venetian Dictionary, "far bau! bau!" to cry boh! and il brutto barabao is interpreted "il Tentenino, il brutto Demonio," the black bug, the buggaboo.

In bug-bear or bear-bug, the word is joined with the name of the wild beast taken as an object of dread.

The humour of melancholye
Causith many a man in slepe to cry,
For fere of beris or of bolis blake,
Or ellis that blake buggys wol him take.—Chaucer.

where we find imaginary bulls and bears classed with bugs as objects of nightly terror.

Other modifications are boggart, bogle, signifying an object of terror. In Southern English the latter of these words is obsolete, but it has left a descendant in the familiar verb to boggle, to be scrupulous, to make difficulties about a thing like a startlish horse passing an object of terror.

We start and boggle at every unusual appearance, and cannot endure the sight of the bug-bear—Glanville in Todd.

In Prov. E. a boggarty horse is one thus liable to start; to take boggart at an object, to be startled by it; to take bug in the s. s.—Halliwell. Lith. bugti, to take fright, bauginti, to terrify, alarm.

Bug. 2. The name of bug is given in a secondary sense to insects considered as an object of disgust and horror, and in modern English is appropriated to the noisome inhabitants of our beds, but in America is used as the general appellation of the beetle tribe. They speak of a tumble-bug, rose-bug. A similar application of the word signifying an object of dread, to creeping things, is very common. The W. buceai signifies what produces dread or disgust, and also a maggot. It. baco, a silk-worm, also a boa-peep or vain bug-bear; baco-baco, boa-peep.—Fl. Limousin bobaou, bobal, a bug-bear, is also used as the generic name of an insect.—Béronic. So in Albanian, boube, a bug-bear, and in child's language any kind of insect. Hung. bubus, bug-bear, Serv. buba, vermin. Lap. râbme, an insect, worm, any disgusting animal, also a bug-bear, ghost. Russ. buka, a bug-bear; whence the dim. bukashka, a beetle. A bug, or black maggot or bug-bear.—Torriano. Sp. coco, a worm, also a bug-bear.

Bug. Swollen, tumid, proud. Apparently the original form from whence big is derived. "Bug as a lord." "Bugs' words," boasting, high-sounding words. Parolone, high, big, swollen, great, or bug words.—Florio.

W. bog, swelling or rising up; Dan. bug, belly, bow, bulge; bugne, to bulge, to bend. Sw. buk, belly, buka, to swell, to bulge, &c. See Buckle, Boss.

Bugle. 1. Same as buffle, a buffalo.

These are the beasts which ye shall eat of: oxen, shepe and gootes, hert, roo, and bugle.—Bible, 1551. Deut. xiv.

Hence bugle-horn, properly a buffalo horn, then a horn for drinking, or on which notes are played in hunting.

Janus sits by the fire with double berd
And drinketh of his bugle horn the wine.—Chaucer.

Lat. bucula, a heifer. Mid. Lat. buculus, O. Fr. bugle, buffle, bœuf sauvage.—Roquefort.

Probably, as Buffalo, from the cry of the animal; Serv. bukati, Hung. bögni, Fr. bugler, beugler, to bellow.

2. An ornament of female dress consisting of fragments of very fine glass pipes sewn on. “Et dictæ dominæ nunc portant bugolos qui sic nominantur, quos cooperiunt capillis capitis earum ligatis supra dictos bugolos.”—De moribus civium Placentiæ.—A. D. 1388. Muratori.

To Build. From Icel. lua, O. Sw. boa, bo, G. bauen, to till, cultivate, inhabit, was formed bol, a farm, byli, a habitation, O. Sw. bol, böle, byli, domicilium, sedes, villa, habitaculum, whence bylja, to raise a habitation, to build, or, as it was formerly written in English, to bylle.

That city took Josue and destroyed it and cursed it and alle hem that bylled it again.—Sir Jno Mandeville.

Bulb. Lat. bulbus, Gr. βολβος, a tuberous or bulbous root; Lith. bulbe, bulwis, the potato; G. holle, bulle, bulbe, a bulb; Du. bol, bolle, a globe, ball, head; bol, bolleken van loock, the head of an onion. Gr. βολβα, Lat. vulva, the womb.

From the image of a bubble taken as the type of anything round, swollen, hollow. In the representation of natural sounds, the position of liquids in the word is very variable. In English, as well as bubble, we have blob or bleb and blubber in the same sense. The Wallach. has bulbuk, a bubble, and bulbukat, to bubble up, to spring, swell, be protuberant. The change of l into r gives Lith. burbenti, burboloti, to splash, guggle, rumble; burbulas, a drop of water; OE. burble, Sp. purbuja, a bubble. See next article.

Bulge.—Bulk.—Bulch. The designation of a bubble is usually taken from a representation of the pop or sound it makes in bursting, but as such a representation is often indistinguishable from the syllable by which we represent the sound of a blow, it sometimes becomes impossible to say whether a word signifying knob, protuberance, hollow, is derived from the notion of a blow, as explained under Boss, or whether it is taken from the image of a bubble. The word buckle is in this predicament. In the sense of a prominence or swelling it seems related to the Pol. puk, Gael. boc, strike, knock. But the Fr. boucle, It. boccula, signify a bubble, and here also we find the same variation in the place of the l, as in the last article. Thus we have in some Fr. dialects blouque, blougue, for boucle (Hécart; Décorde); Prov. bloca, the boss of a buckler; bloquier, a buckler, corresponding in the place of the liquid to blob, blubber, while the Pol. bulka, Gael. bolg, a bubble (bolg-nisge, a water-bubble; Manx bolgan, a bubble, blister; Gael. builgean, a bubble, pimple, little bag), are analogous to bulb.

The development of meaning from the image of a bubble is well exhibited in the case of the Gael. bolg and its derivatives; bolg, a boss, pimple, bag, womb, belly, quiver; builgeadh, bubbling up of water; Ir. bolg, a blister, pock, pouch, belly, pair of bellows; Icel. bolga, a tumour; bolgna, to swell; Gael. bolg, blow, swell, blister. Dan. bølge, Pl. D. bulge, E. billow, the swelling waves. It. bolgia, bolgetta, a budget, leathern bucket. Fr. bouge, a budget, wallet, swelling or strouting out in a piece of work, boss of a buckler, bulging in a wall; E. bulge, to swell, to bow out, whence the bulge or bilge of a ship, the belly or convex bottom; Gael. bulg, a ship's bilge, convexity, a belly, a lump, a mass. Icel. bulki, a hump, a knob, corresponds to G. buckel, Dan. pukkel, as bulb to bubble. Dan. bulk, a lump, a clod; E. bulk, a knob, heap, mass. "Bossé, knobby, bulked or bumped out."—Cotgr. "Bolke or hepe, cumulus."—Pr. Pm. Lith. pulkas, a heap, crowd, herd; pulké, in bulk; Du. bulcke, thorax, the chest.—Kil. E. Bouke, body.—Chaucer. Sc. bouk, trunk, body, mass, size, bulk. Icel. bulka, to swell.

Bulch is merely a different way of spelling bulk, as Sc. kirk corresponds to E. church. The Grisons bulscha, a wallet, marks the passage to the Sp. bolsa, a pouch, bag, purse; NE. bulse, a bunch.—Halliwell; It. borsa, Fr. bourse, E. purse. “Bourser, to purse, impurse, also to gather, make bulch, or bear out as a full purse, to bunt, or leave a bunt in a sail.”—Cotgr.

A somewhat different modification of bulk, by the very common interchange of k and t, gives Sp. bulto, bulk, protuberance, hulch, bust, pillow-case (see Boulth, Bolster); Sw. bylte, a bundle, faggot.

The Icel. bukr, trunk, body, belly; Sw. buk, Dan. bugen, G. bauch, the belly; Sp. buche, craw, stomach, bag; may either be forms in which the l has been lost, as in the case of the Fr. bouge, OE. bouke, above mentioned, or in Gris. bulscha, buscha, a budget; or they may be direct from the imitation of the sound of a blow by the syllable puk! pop!

Bulk. 2. Bulk-heads are partitions made athwart a ship with boards whereby one part is separated from another. In this sense bulk is for balk, a beam. Bulkar, a rafter.—Linc. Dan. bialke, a beam, biælk-hoved, beam-head, corbel. In prov. Dan. bulk is used as balk in E. At lægge bulk, to make a balk in ploughing, to leave a balk unploughed.

Bull. 1. The male of the ox kind. W. bwla, Icel. bolli, G. bolle, bulle.

2. A papal rescript, from Lat. bullæ, the seal affixed to the document. The primary signification of bullæ is a bubble, from the noise, whence bullire, to bubble, to boil. Thence the term was applied to many protuberant objects, as the ornamental heads of nails, the hollow ornament of gold hung round the neck of the young nobility of Rome; in subsequent times applied to the seal hanging by a band to a legal instrument. It. bolla, a seal, stamp, round glass phial, boss, stud, bubble, blister, pimple. See Billet.

Bullace. The wild plum. Bret. bolos or polos. W. bulas. Fr. bellocier, a bullace tree. It. bullo, bullos, sloes.—Florio.

Bull-beggar. Corrupted from W. bwbach, Du. bulle-bak, a bugbear, by confusion with mock-beggar, a scare-crow, bugbear (mock-clown in the same sense).—Florio. See Bugbear.

The former part of the word arises from Pl. D. bullern, Du. bulderen, G. poltern, to make a loud noise, whence Pl. D. bulder-bak, Hambro' buller-brook, G. polter-hans, a noisy, violent fellow. Then as loud noise affects a child with terror, buller is used as signifying terrible, dangerous; "gae du nig bi dat buller-water," do not go by the dangerous water, as a mill-dam or the like. Hence G. polter-geist, a hobgoblin. Du. buldergheesten, lemures nocturni nigri.—Kil. G. poltern, to be haunted. See Bully.

Bullet. Immediately from Fr. boulet, the diminutive of boule, a bowl to play with or to drink in. One of the numerous class of words derived apparently from Lat. bullā, a bubble. Icel. bola, a bubble, bolli, a cup. W. bol, the belly; E. bole, the round part of a tree.

As an instance of the arbitrary way in which words acquire their precise meaning, it may be observed that a bullet in E. is applied to the ball of a gun or musket, while the projectile of a cannon is called a ball. In Fr., on the contrary, it is boulet de canon, balle de fusil.

Bullion. This word is used in several senses. 1. A boss or stud, any embossed work.

To beholde how it was garnished and bound
 Encoverde over with golde of tissue fine,
 The claspes and bullions were worth a thousand pounde.

Skelton in R.

After them came six disguised in white satyne and greene, embroudered and set with letters and castels of fine gold in bullion.—Hall. in R.

i. e. with letters and castles of fine gold in embossed work.

Sp. bullar, to emboss; bullon, stud, brass-headed nail; bolos de relieve, embossed work. Fr. bouillon, a stud, any great-headed or studded nail.—Cotgr. Elyot translates bullā "a bullion set on the cover of a book or other thyng." "Bullyon in a woman's girdle—clow."—Palsgrave. "Bullions and ornaments of plate engraven, a bullion of copper set on bridles or poytrels for an ornament."—Baret's Alveary in Halliwell. Here the notion of swelling or embossment is plainly derived from the boiling or bubbling of boiling water.

2. Bullion is applied to a particular kind of gold and silver lace, from Fr. bouillon, explained by Chambaud as being made of a very fine sheet of gold or silver twisted. Doubtless from bouillon in the sense of a puff or bunch, from the puffy texture of this kind of lace.

3. Gold or silver uncoined. Considerable difficulty has been felt in accounting for the word in this sense, from the use of the equivalent terms, billon in Fr. and vellon in Sp., in the sense of base metal, silver mixed with a large alloy of copper.

The original meaning of the word bullion, boillon, billon, was the mint or office where the precious metals were reduced to the proper alloy and converted into stamped money, from the Lat. bullā, a seal, whence Mod. Gr. βουλλόνω, to seal, to stamp; βουλλωτηριον, the matrix or die with which coins were stamped.—Dict. Etym.

In this sense the word appears in our early statutes. The Stat. 9 E. III. st. 2, c. 2, provides, that all persons “puissent sauvement porter à les eschanges ou bullion et ne mie ailleurs argent en plate, vessel d’argent et toutz maners d’argent sauve faux monioie et l’esterling counterfait,” for the purpose of exchange.

In the English version these words are erroneously translated “that all people may safely bring to the exchanges bullion or silver in plate, &c.,” which has led to the assertion that “bullion” in the old statutes is used in the modern application of uncoined gold or silver. The 27 Ed. III. st. 2, c. 14, provides, “que toutz marchauntz—puissent sauvement porter—plate d’argent, billetes d’or et tut autre maner d’or et toutz moneys d’or et d’argent a nostre bullione ou a nous eschanges que nous ferons ordeiner a nous dites estaples et ailleurs pernant illoeqs money de notre coigne convenablement à la value.” Again, 4 Hen. IV. c. 10, “que la tierce partie de tout la monioie d’argent que sera porte à la boillion sera faite es mayles et ferlynges”—shall be coined into halfpence and farthings.

In these and other statutes all trafficking in coin was for-bidden, except at the bullion or exchanges of the king; and similar restrictions were enforced in France, where the tampering with the coin was carried to a much greater extent than in England, insomuch as to earn for Philippe le Bel the title of le faux monnoyeur. Hence among the French the carrying to the billon their decried money became a familiar operation of daily life, and "porter au billon," "mettre au billon," are metaphorically applied to things that require re-making.

The decried coin brought to be melted up was termed "monnaie de billon," and hence billon and the equivalent Spanish vellon were very early used to signify the base mixture of which such coin was made, or generally a mixture of copper and silver. "Ne quis aurum, argentum vel billionem extra regnum nostrum deforme præsumat."—Stat. Philip le Bel in Duc. A. D. 1305.

In England the fortunes of the word have been different, and the Mint being regarded chiefly as the authority which determined the standard of the coin, the name of bullion has been given to the alloy or composition of the current coin permitted by the Bullion or mint. Thus bullion is translated in Torriano's dictionary (A. D. 1687), "lega, legaggio di metallo," and traces of the same application are preserved in the Spanish reckoning in "reals vellon," reals of standard currency. From metal of standard fineness the signification has naturally passed in modern times to all gold and silver designed for the purpose of coinage.

Bully.—Bully-rook. A violent overbearing person. Du. bulderen, bolderen, blatorare, debacchare, intonare, minari; perbulderen, perturbare sævis dictis.—Kil. G. poltern, to make a noise; Sw. buller, noise, clamour, bustle, buller-bas, a blusterer; Pl. D. buller-jaan (bully-John), buller-bak, buller-brook, a noisy blustering fellow, from the last of which is doubtless our bully-rook or bully-rook, a hectoring, boisterous fellow.—Bailey. Bully-rook, un faux brave.—Miege in Halliwell. The Sw. buller-bas, on the other hand, agrees with F.

blunder-buss, a clumsy fellow who does things with noise and violence. G. polterer, a blunder-head, blunder-buss, a boisterous, violent, furious man.—Küttner. To bully is to bluster, to terrify by noise and clamour, to behave tyrannically or imperiously.

Bulwark. A defence originally made of the boles or trunks of trees, then in general a rampart, bastion, or work of defence. Du. bol-werck, block-werck, propugnaculum, agger, vallum.—Kil. Fr. by corruption boulevard, boulevard, primarily the ramparts of a town, then applied to the walks and roads on the inside of the ramparts, and now at Paris to a broad street surrounding what was formerly the body, but now is the central part of the town. It. baluarte.

Bum. For bottom. Fris. bóm, ground, bottom; from boden, bodem, Icel. bottn, AS. botm. Fris. ierd-boeyme, ierd-beame, the soil. Hence böm and bön, a floor. D. buene, boene, G. bühne, a stage, scaffold.

To Bum.—Boom.—Bump.—Bumble. To bum, to hum, to make a droning sound.—Hall. Du. bommen, resonare, to beat a drum; bombammen, to ring the bells. Lat. bombilare, to bumble or make a humming noise; bombilus, Du. bommele, hommele, a bumble-, or a humble-bee. The cry of the bittern, which he is supposed to make by fixing his bill in a reed or in the mud, is called bumping or bumbling.

Bum-bailiff. From the notion of a humming, droning, or dunning noise the term bum is applied to dunning a person for a debt.—Halliwell. Hence bum-bailiff, a person employed to dun one for a debt, the bailiff employed to arrest for debt.

Bump. Pl. D. bums! an interjection imitating the sound of a blow. Bums! getroffen, Bang! it's hit. Bumsen, bamsen, to strike so as to give a dull sound. To bam, to pummel, to beat.—Halliwell. W. pumpio, to thump, to bang. Langued. poumpi, to knock; poumpido, noise, knocking. Then, as in other cases, the word representing the sound of the blow is applied to the lump raised by the blow, or to the mass by which it is given, and signifies consequently a mass, protubercance, lump. See Boss. Thus E. bump, a swelling, W. pwmp, a round mass; pwmp, a knob, a boss; Lith. pumpa, a button, pumpurras, a bud. Fr. pompette, a pimple or pimple on the skin—Cot.; pompon, a pumpkin or gourd, a large round fruit.

Bumpkin. A clumsy, awkward clown. Manx bonkan. Probably from bump, signifying one who does things in a thumping, abrupt manner. Pl. D. buns-wise, inconsiderately, from bunsen, to strike; Pro. E. bungersome, clumsy, lungeous, awkward—Halliwell; Icel. böngun, ars rudis, from banga, to beat. See Bungle.

Bun.—Bunion.—Bunny. Bun, a small round cake, properly simply a lump. Fr. bigue, a bump, knob rising after a knock, also clubfooted; bignet, bugnet, little round loaves or lumps made of fine meale, &c., buns, lenten loaves.—Cotgr. It. bugno, bugnone, any round knob or bunch, a boil or blain.—Florio. Hence E. bunion, a lump on the foot; bunny, a swelling from a blow.—Forby. Gael. bonnach, a little cake, a bannock. In the same way from bol, signifying anything round, Sp. bollo, Du. bol, Russ. bulka, a small loaf; Gael. builion, a loaf, builionnach, a baker. Hence Fr. boulangier, a baker, and not from poletarius.

The primary origin of the word must be sought in the notion of striking, expressed by Bret. bunta, bounta, to push, to strike; Prov. E. bunt, or punt, to strike with the head, to kick.—Baker. Pl. D. bunsen, to strike. Manx bun, a butt end, thick end; Gael. bun, a root or stump; bun-feaman, a tail, bob-tail. Hence the E. bunny, for a rabbit, because the short tail of the rabbit in running is very conspicuous. Bun, a rabbit, the tail of a hare.—Halliwell.

Bunch.—Bunk.—Bung. Bunch, a hump, cluster, round mass of anything. To bunch was formerly and still is provincially used in the sense of striking. Dunchyn or bunchyn, tundo.—Promptm. "He buncheth me and beateth me, il me pousse. Thou bunchest me so that I cannot sit by thee."—Palsgr. in Way. Related on the one side to Pl. D. bunsen, bumsen, to knock. "An de dör bunsen; oder ankloppen dat idt bunset,"—to knock at the door till it sounds again. "Daal bunsen," to bang down, throw down with a bang. "He fult dat et bunsede," he fell with a bang. Du. bons, a knock. See Bounce. On the other hand bunch is connected with a series of words founded on forms similar to the Icel. banga, Dan. banke, O. Sw. bunga, to beat, to bang; Icel. bunki, a heap; O. Sw. bunke, a heap, a knob; and related with Icel. bunga, to swell out; Prov. E. bung, a heap or cluster, a pocket; Sw. binge, a heap; Wallon. bonge, bongie, a bunch; Hung. bunko, a knob, a boil (bunkos bot, a knotty stick); Sw. bunke, a bowl; Pl. D. bunken, the large prominent bones of an animal (as G. knochen, E. knuckles, from knock); It. bugno, bugnone, any round knob or bunch, a boil or blain.—Florio.

Again, as we have seen E. bulk passing into Sp. bulto, and E. bult, a bag or sack, while bulch was traced through Gris. bulscha, a wallet, E. bulse, a bunch—Halliwell; Sp. bolsä, a purse; so the form bunk, a knob or heap, passes into Dan. bundt, Sw. bunt, a bunch, bundle, truss; E. bunt of a sail, the middle part of it, which is purposely formed into a kind of bag to catch the wind.—Bailey. Bunt, a pocket for sifting meal, to bunt, to bount or sift meal, whence bunting, the fine loose-textured cloth used for that purpose, and also applied to making flags.

Bundle. — Bunt. Du. bond, bondel, bundle, AS. byndel; something bound up. Du. ghebondte, ghebundte, colligatio, fascis, et contignatio, coassatio; bondel-loos, loosed from bonds.—Kil. Icel. bindini, a bundle. In these words undoubtedly the sense of a derivation from bind still remains. But this is not the primitive relation of the words. The Dan. bundt, Sw. bunt, a bunch, bundle, exhibits the word in its original sense, and hence I believe the verb to bind is derived in the same way that the verb $\delta\epsilon\mu\omega$, to build, is to be regarded as a derivative from $\delta\omicron\mu\omicron\varsigma$, a house; $\pi\epsilon\nu\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, to labour, from $\pi\omicron\nu\omicron\varsigma$, labour, pain; Lat. pendere, to hang, from pondus, a weight, the last of these being probably identical with G. bund, a bunch or bundle, Lith. pundas, a bundle, also a stone weight, a weight of 40 lb. The original meaning of the Lat. pondus would thus be a lump of some heavy material, doubtless of stone. Words signifying a lump or mass are commonly derived from the notion of knocking, and we find Bret. bounta, bunta, to knock, to push; E. bunt, to push with the head—Halliwell; bunt, punt, to kick.—Baker. From this root I believe the Dan. bundt, Sw. bunt, to be derived, as well as E. bunt, in the sense of a pocket, protuberance; the bunt of a sail, the belly or protuberance, or bagging part of a sail; to bunt flour, to sift it in a bunt or pocket.

To bunt in the sense of striking may be considered as the nasalised form of E. butt, Du. botten, while bunt, bundle, are in like manner the nasalised forms of F. botta, E. bottle. G. bund stroh, Fr. botte de foin; a bottle of hay.

The Pl. D. pung, pungel, a bundle, purse, Dan. pung, a purse, a bag, exhibit parallel forms with a final ng instead of nd, as E. bung compared with Fr. bondon.

Bung. The stopper for the hole in a barrel. From the hollow sound made in driving in the bung: OG. bunge, a drum; O. Sw. bungande, the noise of drums.—Ihre. Hung. bongani, to hum. So Du. bommen, to hum, and bomme, or bonde van t' vat, the bung of a barrel; Lim. boundica, to hum, Prov. bondir, Cat. bonir, to resound, and Du. bonde, Fr. bonde, bondon, a bung. The prefix of an initial s gives G. spund, Pl. D. spunt, whence spunt-gat, the bunghole, and hence probably the E. spiggot, properly the bunghole, but now applied to the bung itself. It may however be doubted whether the sense of a stopper for a cask is not a particular application of the more general meaning of a bunch or cluster mentioned under Bunch. The Fr. bouchon, a cork, boucher, to stop, are from bousche, bouche, a bunch or tuft, and the Sw. tapp (whence teppa, to stop, and E. tap, the stopper of a cask), is originally a whip or bunch; hå-tapp, halm-tapp, a whip of hay or straw.

To Bungle. To do anything awkwardly, to cobble, to botch.—Bailey. Fr. bougonner; Icel. böngun, ars rudis; böngunar-smidr, iners malleator, tudeator; from O. Sw. bunga, to strike, as cobble from cob, to strike. Icel. banga, Dan. banke, to strike. Because nailing on a patch is the most in-artificial way of mending a thing. “Bout cy, bout là, bungarly, disorderly, here a piece and there a patch.”—Cotgr.

Bunny. See Bun.

Buoy. Du. boei; Fr. bouée, Sp. boya. The Fris. has boye, a lump or cluster, and the original buoy would be a lump of wood.

Burden. A load. AS. byrthen, G. bürde, from beran, to bear.

Burden, of a song. See Bourdon.

Bureau. The Italian buio, dark, was formerly pronounced buo, as it still is in Modena and Bologna.—Muratori. Russ. buruii, brown; burjat, to become brown or russet. “Burrhum antiqui quod nunc dicimus rufum.”—Festus in Diez. OF. bure, burel, Sp. buriel, Prov. burel, reddish brown, russet, specially applied to the colour of a brown sheep, then to the coarse woollen cloth made of the fleeces of such sheep without dyeing. So in Pol. bury, dark grey; bura, a rain-cloak of felt. Then as the table in a court of audience was covered with such a cloth, the term bureau was applied to the table or the court itself, whence in modern Fr. it is used to signify an office where any business is transacted. In English from a writing-table the designation has passed to a cabinet containing a writing-table, or used as a receptacle for papers. See Borel.

Burganet. O. Fr. bourguignote, Sp. borgonota, a sort of helmet, properly a Burgundian helmet. A la Borgonota, in Burgundian fashion.

Burgess.—Burgher. OE. burgeise, O. Fr. burgeois, from Lat. burgensis.

Burgh.—See Borough.

Burgeon.—Burly. To burgeon, to grow big about or gross, to bud forth.—Bailey. Fr. bourgeon, bourjon, the young bud, sprig, or putting forth of a vine, also a pimple in the face.—Cotgr. The word is variously written in OE. burion, bourion, burjown. Langued. boure, bourou, a bud, boura, bouronna, to bud; Fr. abourioner, to bud or sprout forth.—Cotgr. Burryn, to bud.—Pr. Pm. Hence burr, the flower-bud of hops; the burr of a deer's horn is the rugged projection like buds at the root of a deer's horn. "Buttons, the burrs or knobs of a deer's horn."—Bailey.

The primary origin of the word, as of so many others signifying swelling, is an imitation of the sound of bubbling water, preserved in the Fin. purrata, cum sonitu bullio ut aqua ad proram navis, strideo ut spuma vel aqua ex terrâ expressa; puret, a bubble; Du. borrel, a bubble, borrelen, to spring as water. G. perlen, to bubble up, E. purl, to make a murmuring noise. From the notion of a bubble we pass to the Gael. borr, to swell, become big and proud; Ir. borram, to swell, to grow big and prosper, explaining the E. burgen in the sense of growing big, and also burly, big, prosperous. "Bouffer, to puff, blow, swell up or strut out, to burgen or wax big."—Cotgr. The Gael. has also borr, borra, a knob, bunch, swelling; borrachas, boasting, bravado; borracha, a bladder, explaining Sp. borracha, a wine skin.

Burglar. A legal term from the Lat. burgi latro, through the Burgundian form lâre (Vocab. de Vauyl), O. Fr. terre, a robber; bourglâre, burglator, burglaria. Grancelli, roguing beggars, bourglairs.—Flor. The essence of the offence is a nocturnal robbery of a house.

Omnes burgatores, domorum vel fractores Ecclesiarum vel murorum vel portarum civitatis regis vel burgorum intrantes malitiosè et felonice condemnentur morti.—Officium Coronatoris in Duc.

Burin. See under Bore.

To Burl. To pick the burrs or burls, i. e. the knots, from the surface of woollen cloth.

Soon the clothiers shears

And burlers thistle skim the surface sheen.—Dyer, in R.

For the primitive origin of the word see Burr. Du. borrel, Fris. borrle, a bubble; Rouchi bourle, a ball, bourléte, a little ball, bourlot, a pincushion, ball of twine; Langued. bourition, a little bud, side bud; Limousin bourlliou, a little tuft of wool, silk, &c., a flock; Gris. borla, a flower-bud, a bead; Sp. borla, a tuft, lock, tassel; E. burle, a knob or bump.—Halliwell. The burl is the first budding of a deer's horn. Wallon. bourlote, knob, knot, bourlot, a little ball.—Grandg.

Burlesque. It. burlare, to make a jest of, to ridicule. Probably a modification of the root which gave the OE. bourd, a jest. Limousin bourdo, a lie, a jest, bourdu, to ridicule, to tell lies. The interchange of d and l is clearly seen in the Gael. burd, burl, mockery, ridicule, joking; buirte, a jibe, taunt, repartee; buirleadh, language of folly or ridicule.

To Burn. OE. bren; Goth. brinnan; Du. brennen, bernen, barnen; AS. byrnan, to burn (neuter); bernan (active), to set on fire.

Probably from the crackling sound of the fire. Grisons brinzla, spark; sbrinzlar, to sparkle; Bohem. brunžiti, to hum.

Burn. A brook. Goth. brunna, Icel. brunnr, G. born, brunnen, a well, a spring; Gael. burn, water, spring-water; burnach, watery. As we have seen the noise of water bubbling up represented by the syllable bor, pur (see Burgeon), the final n in burn may be merely a subsidiary element, as the l in purl, and the word would thus signify water springing or bubbling up. Bav. burren, to hum, to buzz; Gael. bururus, warbling, purling, gurgling. Swiss. Rom. borni, a fountain. Vocab. de Vaud.

Burnish. Fr. brunir, to polish. Sw. bryna, to sharpen, brynsten, a whetstone; from bryn, the brim or edge of anything, whence bryna, to give an edge to. Then as sharpening a weapon would be the most familiar example of polishing metal, the word seems to have acquired the sense of polishing. So from Fin. tahko, an edge, a margin, latus rei angulatæ; tahkoinen, angular; tahkoa, to sharpen on a whetstone, thence, to rub, to polish.* So also from Fr. fil, an edge, affiler, OE. affle, to give an edge to, to sharpen.

Burr.—Bur. Bur has two meanings: 1. an excrescence out of the regular surface or round the edge of a thing, as the bur of a bullet, the neck produced by the hole through which the lead has been poured into the mould; the round knob or horn on a deer's head—Bailey; the uneven projection round the edge of a hole punched or bored in a piece of metal, &c. And secondly, the hooked seed-vessel of some kinds of plants.

In the former sense the word is derived from the notion of budding, the excrescence being compared to that made by the buds which form at the root of a branch. See Burgeon.

In the second sense it is derived from Fr. bourre, flocks or locks of wool, hair, &c., serving to stuff saddles, balls, and such like, also the down or hairy coat of sundry herbs, fruits, and flowers; also, less properly, any such trash as chaff, shales, husks, &c. Bourre de soie, tow of silk.—Cotgr. It. borra, any kind of quilting or stuffing, shearing of cloth, also all such stuff as hay, moss, straw, chips, or anything else that birds make their nests with.—Florio. A bur then is a seed-vessel which sticks to our clothes like a flock of wool, and is not readily brushed off. The Northumberland bur is a huskiness of pronunciation, as if the speaker had some kind of bur or flocks in his throat impeding his utterance.

The primitive meaning of the Fr. bourre seems to be stuffing, what is put into a thing for the purpose of puffing or swelling it out, from the Gael. borr, to swell (see Burgeon), and it might also derive the sense of a knot or flock of wool from the same origin. Or it might with much plausibility be derived from Fin. puro, Esthon. purro, anything comminuted by biting, chewing, or similar action, sawdust; OHG. uzboro, urbor, sawdust. See Bore. I think however that the former is the more probable derivation of the two.

Burrow. Shelter, a place of defence, safety, shelter. The same word with burgh, borough, borrow, from AS. beorgan, to protect, shelter, fortify, save. A rabbit barrow is the hole which the animal digs for its own protection. So in W. caer is a castle or fortress, cwning-gaer, the fortress of a coney or rabbit, a rabbit burrow.

Burrow is used in many parts of England in the sense of shelter from the wind, "the burrow side of the hedge," "a very burrow place for cattle."

Du. berghen, to hide, cover, keep, preserve, and thence bergh, a port, a barn or cupboard.—Kil. G. bergen, verbergen, to hide; Icel. biarga, to save, preserve.

To Burst. In OE. brast, brast. G. bersten, AS. berstan, byrstan, OHG. brestan, bristen, Sw. brista, Icel. briota, to break. Fr. briser, Port. britar; Gael. bris, brisd, break; brisleach, bristeach, brittle. The root appears under the forms brik, bris, brist, brit. Iang. brico, briso, briketo, brizeto, a morsel, fragment; E. brist, small fragments. Compare also OE. brokil and brotil; brittle, and, as it is still pronounced in N. of England, brickle. Serv. prsnuti, to burst.

To Bury. To cover up a corpse in the earth. AS. birgan, birgean, byrigan, byrigean. Du. berghen, to hide, to stow away, to keep, preserve; bergh, a barn, a place where corn is stowed away and preserved. G. bergen, verbergen, to conceal, to hide. To bury a corpse is to conceal it in the ground. AS. byrigels, a burial, a sepulchre.

Bush.—Busk.

Sibriht that I of told, that the lond had lorn
That a swincherd slouh under a busk of thorn.

R. Brunne.

The foregoing modes of spelling the word indicate a double origin, from the Icel. buskr, a tuft of hair, bush, thicket (buski, a bunch of twigs, besom), and from the Fr. bousche, bouche, a whip, tuft, whence bouchon, a tavern bush, boucher, to stop, to thrust in a bouche or tuft of hemp, tow, or the like. Bouchet, a bush, bramble. It has been shown under Boss that words signifying clump, tuft, cluster, are commonly derived from the idea of knocking. So from Fr. bousser, It. bussare,

Du. bossen, buysschen, to knock, we have Fr. bosse, bousse, a hump, hunch; Du. bos, a bunch, knot, bundle; bosch (a diminutive?), a tuft, then a tuft of trees, a grove; bosch van haer, a tuft of hair;—van wijn besien, a bunch of grapes. Fris. bosc, a troop, lump, cluster; gear-boskjen, to assemble together, qualster-boscken, a clot of phlegm (Epkema). Du. bussel, a bundle; It. bussone, a bush, brake, thicket of thorns; Bret. bouch (Fr. ch), a tuft, whisp. G. bausch, projection, bulk, bunch, bundle, whisp; bauschen, bausen, to swell, bulge, bunch out.

Bush.—Bushel. The bush of a wheel is the metal lining of the nave or hollow box in which the axle works. Du. busse, a box, busken, a little box; Dan. bøsse, a box, a gun; G. büchse, a box, rad-büchse, Sw. hjul-bosse, the bush of a wheel; Sc. bush, box wood; to bush, to sheath, to enclose in a case or box. Prov. forms of the word are boistia, boissa, whence the diminutives O. Fr. boistean, boisscau, Lat. (A. D. 1214) bus-tellus, a box for measuring, a bushel. See Box.

Busk. The bone in a woman's stays.—See Bust.

To Busk. To prepare, make ready, to dress, to direct one's course towards.

They busked and maked them boun.—Sir Tristram.

Jamieson thinks it probable that it may be traced to the Icel. buá, to prepare, to dress, at buá sig, induere vestes; and it is singular that having come so near the mark he fails to observe that busk is a simple adoption of the deponent form of the Icel. verb, at buast for at buasc, contracted from the very expression quoted by him, "at buá sig." The primitive meaning of buá is simply to bend, whence at buá sig, to bend one's steps, to betake oneself, to bow, in OE. "Haralldur kongur bist austur um Eythascog." Harold the king busks eastwards through the forest of Eytha. "Eptcr thetta byr sig jarl sem skyndilegast ur landi." After that the earl busks with all haste out of the land. Compare the meaning of busk in the following passage.

Many of the Danes privily were left
And busked westwards for to robbe eft.—R. Brunne.

It is certain that buast must once have been written buasc, and we actually find truasc, fasc, in the För Skirnis; barsc in Heimskringla, which would later have been written truast, fiast, barst. The frequency with which to busk is used, as synonymous with to make one boun, is thus accounted for; as boun is simply buinn, the past participle of the same verb buu, the deponent form of which is represented by the E. busk.

To bow was used in a similar manner for to bend one's steps, to turn.

Boweth forth by a brook, proceed by a brook.—P. P.

Burse.—Bursar.—Buskin. Burse, an exchange; Du. beurs, Fr. bourse, from bourse, a purse. Bursar, an officer who takes charge of the purse of a college.

It. bolgia, bolza, Gris. bulscha, buscha, a budget or leather wallet; Sp. bolsa, a bag, purse, exchange. Hence with the common change of an l for an r (as Sp. peluca, Fr. perruque), It. borsa, borsia, borza, Fr. bourse.

From the It. form bolza seems derived bolzacchini, Sp. bolzequin, buskins, originally signifying bags of skin into which the feet were thrust, as Sp. bolsa, bag lined with furs or skins to keep the feet warm.—Neumann. The same change from l to r, as in bolsa, borsa, gives It. borzacchini, Du. broseken (Fr. brodequin), E. buskin. In like manner it seems that the original meaning of boot was a leathern bag, as in Sp. bota, which signifies both a leathern bag to carry wine, and also boot, a leathern covering for the leg and foot. Du. bote, boten-schoen pero, calceus rusticus e crudo corio.—Kil.

Buss. A vessel employed in the herring fishery. Du. buyse, a vessel with a wide hull and blunt prow, also a flagon. Prov. bus, a boat or small vessel; Cat. buc, bulk, ship; Sp. bucha, a large chest or box, a fishing vessel. A particular application of the many-formed word signifying bulk, trunk, body, chest. See Boss, Box, Bulch, Bust.

2. A kiss. Gael. bus, a mouth, lip, snout; Pol. buzia, mouth, lips, also a kiss; Sp. buz, a kiss of reverence. So Westerwald munds, mons, a kiss, from mund, mouth. Lat. basium, It. bacio, Sp. beso, a kiss. Fr. baiser, to kiss.

Bust.—Busk. The bust is properly the body of a man, the trunk without arms or legs, then a statue representing the head and upper part of the trunk. The word busk was used in the N. of France in the same sense.

Le busch de St Saulve en la ch asse du dit Saint et Saint Superius sont en bon  tat.—H cart. A. D. 1776.

Both bust and busc were then used in the sense of a body garment, a garment closely fitting the body, and as this was supported by a stiff bone or steel in front, the word busk has ultimately been confined to the piece of bone, wood, or steel in the front of a woman's stays or stomacher.

Fr. bu, bust, buste, the whole bulk or body of a man from his face to his middle; buc, busc, bust, the long small or sharp-pointed and hard-quilted belly of a doublet.—Cot. It. busto, a bulk or trunk without a head, a sleeveless truss or doublet, also a busk.—Florio.

The ultimate origin seems to be the root buk, but, representing a knock or blow. Pol. puk, crack, knock; Fr. buquer, Lang. buta, to knock, strike. Hence, as in so many similar cases, words signifying bunch, swelling, thick end, trunk. Icel. butr, E. butt, Gris. b st, bist, the trunk of a tree; Mid. Lat. busta, arbor ramis truncata.—Gl. Lindenbr. in Diez. The same development of meaning is seen in Icel. bolr, the trunk of a tree, body of a man, vest, doublet; Dan. bul, trunk, log, body of a shirt; and in Sp. bulto, hulch, swelling, bulk, bust.

From the other form of the root with a final k instead of t, Icel. bukr, the trunk or body of an animal, belly; Cat. buc, bulk, belly; Sp. buche, stomach, breast; Lang. busco, Fr. busche, a log, great billet; Rouchi busch, a bust.

The Prov. inserts an r after the initial b; bruc, brut, brusc, bust, body, as in Icel. bruskur as well as buskur, a bush, tuft, whisp, Prov. brostia as well as bostia, a box. The form brust, corresponding to brut as brusc to bruc, would explain the G. brust, the breast, the trunk, box, or chest in which the vitals are contained.

Bustard. A large bird of the gallinaceous order. Fr. ou-tard. A great sluggish fowl.—Bailey. Sp. abutarda, or avutarda; Champagne, bistarde; Prov. austarda, Fr. outarde, It. ottarda.

Named from its slowness of flight. "Proximæ iis sunt quas Hispania aves tardas appellat."—Plin. 10. 22. Hence probably au-tarda, otarda, utarda, and then with avis again prefixed, as in av-estruz (= avis struthio), an ostrich, avutarda.—Diez. Port. abotarda, betarda.

A bustard or bistard.—Fr. bistard, outard, houstarde.—Sherwood.

To Bustle. To hurry or make a great stir.—Bailey. Also written buskle.

It is like the smouldering fire of Mount Chimæra, which boiling long time with great buskling in the bowels of the earth doth at length burst forth with violent rage.—A. D. 1555.—Halliwell.

Here we see the word applied to the bubbling up of a boiling liquid, from which it is metaphorically applied in ordinary usage to action accompanied with "a great stir." Icel. bustla, to make a splash in the water, to bustle. So in Fin. kupata, kupiäta, to rustle (parum strepo); käyn kupajan crepans ito, I go clattering about, inde discurro et operosus sum, I bustle. To brustle, to rustle, is also used in the sense of bustle; bruslery, a tumult—Halliwell; breessil, the act of coming on in a hurry.—Jamieson.

Busy. AS. biseg, bisgung; occupation, business; bysgian, to occupy. Du. besig, beezig, occupied, busy; besighen, uti, frui, usurpare—Kil.; eene zaak beezigen, to make use of a thing. Fr. besogne, work, business. The word is referred by Diefenbach to Goth. anabiudan, to enjoin (entbieten, befehlen), whence anabusns, command, commission.

But. As a conjunction but is in every case the compound be-out, Tooke's distinction between but, be out, and bot, moreover, to-boot, being wholly untenable.

AS. butan, buta, bute, without, except, besides; butan æ, without law, an outlaw; butan wite, without punishment; butan wifum and cildum, besides women and children. Pl. D. büten; büten door, out of doors; büten dat, besides that; Du. buiten, without; buiten-man, a stranger; buiten-zorgh, without care.

The cases in which Tooke would explain the conjunction as signifying boot, add, in addition, moreover, are those in which the word corresponds to the Fr. mais, and may all be reduced to the original sense of without, beyond the bounds of. Whatever is in addition to something else is beyond the bounds of the original object.

In Sc. we find ben, from AS. binnan, within, the precise correlative of but, without; But and ben, without the house and within; then applied to the outer and inner rooms of a house consisting of two apartments.

The rent of a room and a kitchen, or what in the language of the place is styled a but and a ben, gives at least two pounds sterling.—Account of Stirlingshire in Jamieson.

Ben-house, the principal apartment.

The elliptical expression of but for only is well explained by Tooke. Where at the present day we should say, "There is but one thing to be done," there is really a negation to be supplied, the full expression being, "there is nothing to be done but one thing," or "there is not but one thing to be done." Thus Chaucer says,

I n'am but a leude compilatour.—

If that ye vouchsafe that in this place—
That I may have not but my meat and drinke, where now we should write, “I am but a compiler,” “That I may have but my meat and drink.”

As an instance of what is called the adversative use of but, viz. that which would be translated by Fr. mais,—suppose a person in whom we have little trust has been promising to pay a debt, we say, “But when will you pay it?” Here the but implies the existence of another point not included among those to which the debtor has adverted, viz. the time of payment. “Besides all that, when will you pay?”

“All the brethren are entertained bountifully, but Joseph has a five-fold portion.” Here the but indicates that Joseph, by the mode in which he is treated, is put in a class by himself, outside that in which his other brethren are included.

Butcher. Fr. boucher, Prov. bochier, Langued. boquier, from boc, a goat (and not from bouche, the mouth), properly a slaughterer of goats; “que en carieras publicas li boquiërs el sanc dels bocs no jhiéton, ni avéisson los bocs en las plassas.”—Coutume d’Alost in Dict. Lang.,—that the butchers shall not cast the blood of the goats into the public ways, nor slaughter the goats in the streets. So in Italian from becco, a goat, beccaro, beccario, a butcher; beccaria, a butchery, slaughter-house. But It. boccino, young beef or veal flesh; bocciero, a butcher.

Butler. Fr. bouteillier, as if from bouteille, a bottle, the servant in charge of the bottles, of the wine and drink. But the name must have arisen before the principal part of the drinkables would be kept in bottles, and the real origin of the word is probably from buttery. Butler, the officer in charge of the buttery or collection of casks, as Pantler, the officer in charge of the pantry. Buttery, from butt, a barrel; Sp. boteria, the store of barrels or wine skins in a ship.

To Butt. To strike with the head like a goat or a ram. From the noise of a blow. To come full butt against a thing is to come upon it suddenly, so as to make a sounding blow.

Du. bot, tout à coup; bot blijven staan, s'arrêter tout à coup.—Halma. Du. botten, to thrust, to push; It. botto, a blow, a stroke; di botto, suddenly; botta, a thrust; It. buttare, to cast, to throw; Langued. buta, to strike, to thrust; Fr. bouter, to thrust, to push; W. pwtiaw, to butt, poke, thrust.

The butt or butt end of a thing is the striking end, the thick end. A butt, Icel. butr, the trunk, stump of a tree; Fr. bout, end; W. pwot, any short thick thing, stump. G. butt, butz, a short thick thing or person—Schmeller; Fr. botte, a bundle; Du. Fr. bot, thick, clumsy; pied-bot, a stump or club foot.—Cotgr. Gris. bott, a hill, hillock; botta, a blow, a boil, a clod. Fr. butte, a mound, a heap of earth; M. Lat. botones, bodones, botontini. In limitibus ubi rariores terminos constituimus monticellos plantavimus de terra quos botontinos appellavimus.—Dict. Etym. Fr. butter un arbre, to heap up earth round the roots of a tree; butter le céleris, to earth up celery; butter un mur, to support a wall beginning to bulge; butte, E. butt, a mound of turf in a field to support a target for the purpose of shooting at.

Fr. but, the prick in the middle of a target, a scope, aim; whence to make a butt of a person, to make him a mark for the jests of the company.

Fr. buter, to touch at the end, to abut or butt on, as in G. from stossen, to strike, to thrust; an etwas anstossen, to be contiguous to, to abut on.

Hence the butts in a ploughed field are the strips at the edges of the field, or headlands upon which the furrows abut; but-lands, waste ground, buttals, a corner of ground.—Halliwell.

Butt. A large barrel. It. Fr. botte, Mod. Gr. βουρις, a cask. O. Fr. bous, bouz, bout, Sp. bota, a wine skin, a wooden cask. Sp. botija, an earthen jar; botilla, a small wine bag, leathern bottle.

The immediate origin of the term is probably butt in the sense of trunk or round stem of a tree, then hollow trunk, body of a man, belly, bag made of the entire skin of an animal, wooden receptacle for liquors. A similar development of meaning is seen in the case of E. trunk, the body of a tree or of a man, also a hollow vessel; G. rumpf, the body of an animal, hollow case, hull of a ship. The E. bulk was formerly applied to the trunk or body, and it is essentially the same word with Lat. bulga, belly, skin-bag, and with It. bolgia, a leathern bag, a budget. A similar train of thought is seen in the Icel. bolr, the trunk or body of an animal, bole of a tree, body of a shirt; W. bol, bola, the belly, rotundity of the body, bag. The Sp. barriga, the belly, is doubtless connected with barril, a barrel, earthen jug; and in E. we speak of the barrel of a horse to signify the round part of the body. Wallon. bodine, belly, calf of the leg; bodé, rabodé, courtaud, trapu.—Grandg. Bav. boding, a barrel.—Schmell. From Grisons butt, a cask, is formed the augmentative buttatsch, the stomach of cattle, a large belly. The word body itself seems identical with G. bottich, a tub. The Bavarian potig, potacha, bottig, signify a cask or tub, while bottich, bodt', are used in the sense of body.

Butter. Lat. butyrum, Gr. βουρυρον, as if from βους, an ox, but this is probably a mere adaptation, and the true derivation seems preserved in the provincial German of the present day. Bavarian, buttern, butteln, to shake backwards and forwards, to bould flour. Butter-glass, a ribbed glass for shaking up salad sauce: Buttel-trüb, thick from shaking. Butterschmalz, grease produced by churning, i. e. butter, as distinguished from gelassene schmalz, dripping, grease that sets by merely standing.—Schmeller.

Butter-fly. So called from the excrement being supposed to resemble butter. Du. boter-schijte, boter-vliege, boter-vogel.—Kil.

Buttery. Sp. boteria, the store of wine in ships kept in bota's or leather bags. So the buttery is the collection of drinkables in a house, what is kept in butts. See Butler.

Buttock. The large muscles of the seat or breech. G. arsch-backe, the hind-cheeks.

From Du. bout, a bolt, or spike with a large head, then the thigh or leg of an animal, from the large knobbed head of the thigh-bone. Boutje, a little gigot, the thigh of a goose, fowl, &c. Hamele-bout, Lams-bout, a leg of mutton, leg of lamb. Now the leg of an animal, as it comes to table, includes the buttock or large muscles at the upper end. A buttock of beef is called a but in the W. of E.—Halliwell. Turk. büt, thigh of an animal, leg of mutton.

Button. Fr. bouton, a button, bud, pimple, any small projection, from bouter, to push, thrust forwards, as rejeton, a rejected thing, from rejeter, nourrisson, a nursling, from nourrir, nourriss (ons, ez, &c.). So in English pimples were formerly called pushes. Gael. put, to push or thrust, putan, a button. It is remarkable that Chaucer, who in general comes so close to the Fr., always translates bouton, the rosebud, in the R. R. by bothum and not button. W. both, a boss, a nave; bothog, having a rotundity; botwm, a boss, a button.

Buttress. An erection built up as a support to a wall. Fr. bouter, to thrust; arc-boutant, a flying buttress, an arch built outside to support the side thrust of a stone roof: Mur-but-tant, a wall buttress, a short thick wall built to rest against another which needs support; butter, to raise a mound of earth around the roots of a tree. Boutant, a buttress or shore post.—Cotgr.

Buttrice. A farrier's tool for paring horses' hoofs, used by resting the head against the farrier's chest and pushing the edge forwards. Perhaps corrupted from Fr. boutis, the rooting of a wild boar, the tool working forwards like the snout of a swine. Fr. bouter, to thrust, boutoir, a buttrice.

Buxom. AS. bocsam, buhsum, obedient, from bugan, to bow, give way, submit; Fris. bocgsam, Du. geboogsaem, flexible, obedient, humble.—Kil.

This word exhibits a singular change of meaning, from the original notion of obedience to that of brisk, cheerful, healthy, in the confined application of modern times.

For h^oly church hoteth all manere puple
Under obedience to be and buxum to the lawe.—P. P.

Buhsomenesse or boughsomeness. Pliableness or bowsomeness, to wit, humbly stooping or bowing down in sign of obedience. Chaucer writes it buxomeness.—Verstegan in R.

Then as pliableness and gentleness are the distinguishing feature of woman, the word seems to have been mainly applied as a term of commendation to a young woman, and so to have passed on to designate other admired characteristics of female society, cheerfulness, liveliness, and what tends to produce it, vigorous health.

The first I encountered were a parcel of buxom bonny dames that were laughing, singing, dancing, and as merry as the day was long.—Tatler.

To Buy. AS. bycgan, bohte, OE. bygge, to purchase for money. "Sellers and biggers."—Wicliff. The two pronunciations were both current in the time of Chaucer, who makes abigg, to abie, rhyme with rigg. See Abie.

Goth. bugjan, bauhta, to buy; frabuqjan, to sell.

To Buzz. To make a humming noise like bees. A direct imitation. Then applied to speaking low, indistinctly, confusedly. It. buzzicare, to whisper, to buzz.

Buzzard. A kind of hawk of little esteem in falconry. Lat. buteo; Fr. buse, busard; Prov. buzac, buzarg, It. bozzago, bozzagro, abozzago, a buzzard or puttock. The name is also given to a beetle, from the buzzing sound of its flight, and it is to be thus understood in the expression blind buzzard. We also say, as blind as a beetle, as Fr. étourdi comme un hanneton, as heedless as a cock-chafer, from the blind way in which they fly against one.

By. Goth. bi, AS. bi, big, G. bei, Du. bij, Sanscrit, abhi (Dief.). Too used a word to leave any expectation of an etymological explanation, but the senses may generally be reduced to the notion of side.

To stand by is to stand aside; to stand by one, to stand at his side; a by-path is a side path; to pass by, to pass at the side of. To swear by God is to swear in the sight of God, to swear with him by ; to adjure one by any inducement is to adjure him with that in view. When it indicates the agent it is because the agent is considered as standing by his work.

Bylaw. Originally the law of a particular town. Sw. bylag, from by, a borough, town having separate jurisdiction. Icel. Byar-lög, Dan. bylove, leges urbanæ ; Icel. byar-rettr, jus municipii.

Subsequently applied to the separate laws of any association.

C.

Cabal. The Jews believed that Moses received in Sinai not only the law, but also certain unwritten principles of interpretation, called Cabala or Tradition, which were handed down from father to son, and in which mysterious and magical powers were supposed to reside.—Dict. Etym.

Hence the name of caballing was applied to any secret machinations for effecting a purpose ; and a cabal is a conclave of persons, secretly plotting together for their own ends.

Cabbage. From It. capo, O. Sp. cabo, head, come the Fr. caboche, a head (whence caboched, heady, wilful), cabus, headed, round or great headed. Choux cabus, a headed cole or cabbage ; laitue cabusse, lactuca capitata, headed or cabbage lettuce.—Cot. It. cabuccio, capuccio, a cabbage ; Du. cabuyskoole, brassica capitata.—Kil.

To Cabbage. To steal or pocket. Fr. cabas, Du. kabas, Sp. cabacho, a frail, or rush basket, whence Fr. cabasser, to put or pack up in a frail, to keep or hoard together.—Cot. Du. kabassen, convasare, surripere, suffurari, manticulari—Kil. ; precisely in the sense of the E. cabbage.

Larron cabasseur de pecune.—Dict. Etym.

Cabin.—Cabinet. W. cab, caban, a booth or hut. It. capanna, Fr. cabane, a shed, hovel, hut. Tugurium, parva casa est quam faciunt sibi custodes vinearum ad tegimen sui. Hoc rustici capannam vocant.—Isidore in Diez. Item habeat archimacherus capanam (parvam cameram) in coquinâ ubi speccies aromaticas, &c., deponat : a store closet.—Neckam in Nat. Antiq. Cappa in O. Sp. signifies a mantle as well as a hut, and as we find the same radical syllable in Bohem. kabat, a tunic, kabane, a jacket ; Fr. gaban, It. cabarino, E. gabardine, a cloak of felt or shepherd's frock, it would seem fundamentally to signify shelter, covering. Mod. Gr. καπακι, a covering.

Cable. Ptg. calabre, cabre ; Sp. cabre, cable ; Fr. câble, O. Fr. caable, chaable.

The double a in the O. Fr. forms indicates the loss of the d extant in the Mid. Lat. cadabulum, cadabola, originally an engine of war for hurling large stones ; and the Fr. chaable, Mid. Lat. cabulus, had the same signification ; “une grande perière que l'on clame chaable.”—Duc.

Sed mox ingentia saxa Emittit cabulus.—Ibid.

From the sense of a projectile engine the designation was early transferred to the strong rope by which the strain of such an engine was exerted.

Concesserint—descarkagium sexaginta doliorum suis instrumentis, scilicet caablis et windasio tantum.—Duc. Didot.

Examples of the fuller form of cadable in the sense of cable are not given in the dictionaries, but it would seem to explain the Icel. form kcdal, a rope or cable. It is remarkable that the Esthon. has kabel, a rope, string, band, and the Arab. 'habl, a rope, would correspond to cable, as Turk. 'havyar to caviare.

The Sp. and Ptg. cabo, a rope, is probably unconnected, signifying properly a rope's end, as the part by which the rope is commonly handled.

The name of the engine, cadabula, or cadable, as it must have stood in French, seems a further corruption of calabre (and not vice versâ, as Diez supposes), the Prov. name of the projectile engine, for the origin of which see Caliver, Capstan.

Cablish. Brushwood—B., properly windfalls, wood broken and thrown down by the wind, in which sense are explained the O. Fr. caables, cables, cablis. The origin is the O. Fr. chaable, caable, an engine for casting stones, M. Lat. chadabula, cadabulum, whence Langued. chabla, to crush, overwhelm (Diet. Castr.), Fr. accabler, to hurl down, overwhelm, O. Fr. caable (in legal language), serious injury from violence without blood, Mid. Lat. cadabalum, prostratio ad terram.—Duc. In like manner It. traboccare, to hurl down, from trabocco, an engine for casting stones; Mid. Lat. manganare, It. magagnare, O. Fr. méhaigner, E. maim, main, from manganum.

Cack. Very generally used, especially in children's language, for discharging the bowels, or as an interjection of disgust to hinder a child from touching anything dirty. Langued. cacai! fi! c'est du caca. Du. kack! phi! respuendi particula.—Kil. Common to Lat. and Gr., the Slavonian, Celtic, and Finnish languages. Gael. ceach! exclamation of disgust; cae, dung, dirt; caca, nasty, dirty, vile. The origin is the exclamation ach! ach! made while straining at stool. Finn. ákistá, to strain in such a manner; ááh! like Fr. caca! vox puerilis detestandi immundum; úákká, stercus, sordes; áúkkatá, cacare. Swiss aa, agga, agge, dirty, disgusting; agge machen (in nurses' language), cacare; gaggi, gaggele, aeggi, stercus; gátsch, filth. Gadge! is provincially used in E. as an expression of disgust.

To Cackle.—Gaggle. Imitative of the cry of hens, geese, &c. Sw. kakla; Fr. caqueter; Lith. kakaloti, to chatter, prattle; Turk. kakulla, to cackle; Du. kackelen; Gr. κακκαζειν.

Cade. A cade-lamb is a lamb brought up by hand; to cade, to cherish, treat as a nurseling. Icel. kád, a new-born offspring; kádra, to lick the new-born young; barna-kád, a young infant. But see Coddle.

Caddy. Tea-caddy, a tea-chest, from the Chinese catty, the weight of the small packets in which tea is made up.

Cadence. It. cadenza, a falling, a cadence, a low note.—Flo. Fr. cadence, a just falling, a proportionable time or even measure in any action or sound.—Cot. A chacune cadence, ever and anon. It seems to be used in the sense of a certain mode of falling from one note to another, hence musical rythm. Lat. cadere, to fall.

Cadet. Fr. cadet, Gascon capdet, the younger son of a family; said to be from capitetum, little chief. Sp. cabdillo, lord, master.—Duc.

Cage. Lat. cavea, a hollow place, hence a den, coop, cage. Sp. gavia, It. gabbia, gaggia, Fr. cage. Du. kauwe, kevie, G. küfich.

To Cajole. Fr. cageoler, caioler, to prattle or jangle like a jay (in a cage), to prate much to little purpose. Cajollerie, jangling, babbling, chattering.—Cot.

Caitiff. It. cattivo (from Lat. captivus), captive, a wretch, bad; Fr. chétif, poor, wretched.

Cake. Sw. kaka, a cake or loaf. En kaka bröd, a loaf of bread. Dan. kage, Du. koek, G. kuchen. See Cook.

Calamary. A cuttle-fish, from the ink-bag which it contains. Lat. calamus, Turk. Arab. kalem, a reed, reed-pen, pen; Mod. Gr. καλαμάρι, an inkstand; καλαμάρι θαλασσιον, a sea inkstand, cuttle-fish.

Calamity. Lat. calamitas, loss, misfortune. Perhaps from W. coll, loss, whence Lat. incolumis, without loss, safe.

Calash.—Caloch. An open travelling chariot.—Bailey. A hooded carriage, whence calash, a hood stiffened with whale-bone for protecting a head-dress.

Fr. calèche, It. calessa, Sp. calesa. Originally from a Slavonic source. Serv. kolo, a wheel, the pl. of which, kola, signifies a waggon. Pol. kolo, a circle, a wheel; kolasa, a common cart, an ugly waggon; kolaska, a calash; Russ. kolo, kolesò, a wheel; kolesnitza, a waggon; kolyaska, kolyasochka, a calesh.

Calendar. Lat. calendarium, from calendæ, the first day of the month in Roman reckoning.

Calenture. A disease of sailors from desire of land, when they are said to throw themselves into the sea, taking it for green fields. Sp. calentura, a fever, warmth; calentar, to heat. Lat. calidus, hot.

Calf. The young of oxen and similar animals. G. kalb.

Calf of the leg. Gael. calpa, calba or colpa na coise, the calf of the leg. The primary meaning of the word seems simply a lump. Calp is riadh, principal and interest, the lump and the increase. It is another form of the E. collop or gollop, a lump or large piece, especially of something soft. The calf of the leg is the collop of flesh belonging to that member. In like manner the E. dallop is related to W. talp, a lump. The Lat. analogue is pulpa; pulpa cruris, the fleshy part of the leg; pulpa ligni, Du. kalf van hout, the pith or soft part of wood.

Icel. kalfi, the calf of the leg.

Calibre.—Caliver.—Calliper. Fr. calibre, It. calibro, colibro, the bore of a cannon; E. calliper-compasses, compasses contrived to measure the diameter of the bore.

The earlier sense seems to be that of the OE. caliver, an arquebuss or small cannon, the name of which was probably transmitted from the Fr. calabre, a machine for casting stones, whence also the name of the carabine is supposed to be derived. It was natural that the names of the old siege machines for casting stones should be transferred to the more efficient kinds of ordnance brought into use after the discovery of gunpowder. Thus the musquet, It. moschetti, was originally a missile discharged from some kind of spring machine.

Potest præterea fieri quod hæc eadem balistæ tela possent trahere quæ muschetti vulgariter appellantur.—Sanutus in Duc.

The Port. espingarda, a gun, firelock, is the ancient springald, a machine for casting large darts. Conversely the Lat. catapulta is used when it is required to render a gun in that language. “Hung. carabely, catapulta de collo pendula, carabine.”—Dankovsky.

The name of the calabre as a projectile engine is probably a corruption of the simpler form cabre, from cabra, a goat, as the Ptg. has both cabre and calabre in the derivative sense of a cable. From cabre, or the Languedocian equivalent crabe (see Capstan), through carabe to calabre, is a change exactly analogous to that from It. bertesca to the synonymous bel-tresca, a moveable kind of rampart, from Lat. urtica to Venet. oltriga, or from It. cortina to Venet. coltrina. Or the name may have been formed direct from cabre by the simple insertion of an l, clabre, calabre. O. Sp. cabra, cabreia, cabrita, an engine for hurling stones, passing in modern times to the designation of a machine for raising heavy weights.

The reason why the name of the goat is used to designate a machine for casting stones is probably that the term was first applied to a battering-ram, in G. bock, a he-goat, a machine named by the most obvious analogy after the goat and the ram, whose mode of attack is to rush violently with their heads against their opponent. From the battering-ram, the earliest instrument of mural attack, the name might naturally be transferred to the more complicated machines by which large stones were thrown, and from them it seems to have descended to the harmless cranes or crabs of our mercantile times, designated in the case of the G. bock, as in that of the Fr. chèvre, by the name of the goat.

Calico. Fr. calicot, cotton cloth, from Calicut in the E. Indies, whence it was first brought.

Caliph. The successors of Mahomet in the command of the empire. Turk. khalif, a successor.

To Calk. To drive tow or oakham, &c., into the seams of vessels to make them water-tight. Lat. calcare, to tread, to press or stuff. Prov. calca, calgua, Fr. cauque, a tent or piece of lint placed in the orifice of a wound, as the caulking in the cracks of a ship. Gael. calc, to calk, ram, drive, push violently; calcaich, to cram, calk, harden by pressure.

To Call. Gr. καλεω. Icel. kalla, to call, to say, to affirm. Lat. calare, to proclaim, to call. Probably from the sound of one hallooing, hollaing. Fin. kallottaa, alta voce ploro, ululo;

Turk. kal, word of mouth; kil-u-kal, people's remarks, tittle-tattle. Heb. kol, voice, sound.

Du. kal, prattle, chatter, kallen, to prattle, chatter.

Callet. A prostitute. Gael. caile, a girl, hussey, queen, strumpet. Fr. caillette, femme frivole et babillarde.—Dict. Langued. The Fr. uses the quail as the type of an amorous nature. "Chaud comme une quaille."—Cot. Caille-coiffée, a woman. The Slavonic languages have the same metaphor. Bohem. korotwicka, a little partridge, and also a prostitute.

Callous. Hard, brawny, having a thick skin.—B. Lat. callus, callum, skin hardened by labour, the hard surface of the ground. Fin. kallo, the scalp or skull, jâû-kallo, a crust of ice over the roads (jâû = ice).

Callow. Unfledged, not covered with feathers. Lat. calvus, AS. calo, caluw, Du. kael, kaluwe, bald.

Calm. It. Sp. calma, Fr. calme, absence of wind, quiet. The primitive meaning of the word, however, seems to be heat: Prov. Sp. calma, the heat of the day.—Diez. Ptg. calma, heat, calmoso, hot. The origin is the Gr. καυμα, heat, from kaw, to burn. M. Lat. cauma, the heat of the sun. "Dum ex nimio caumate lassus ad quandam declinaret umbram." Cauma—incendium, calor, æstus.—Duc. The word was also written cawme in OE. The change from a u to an l in such a position is much less common than the converse, but many examples may be given. So It. oldîre from audire, to hear, palmento for paumento from pavimentum, Sc. chalmer for chawmer from chamber.

The reference to heat is preserved in the It. scalmato, faint, overheated, overdone with heat.—Alt.; scalmaccio, a sultry, faint, moist, or languishing draught and heat.—Fl. Thus the word came to be used mainly with a reference to the oppressive effects of heat, and gave rise to the Lang. câouma, chaouma, to avoid the heat, to take rest in the heat of the day, whence the Fr. chommer, to abstain from work. The Grisons cauma, a shady spot for cattle, a spot in which they take refuge from the heat of the day, would lead us to suppose that in expressing absence of wind the notion of shelter may have been transferred from the sun's rays to the force of the wind. Or the word may have acquired that signification from the oppressiveness of the sun being mainly felt in the absence of wind.

Caloyer. A Greek monk. Mod. Gr. καλογερος, καλογηρος, monk, properly good old man, from καλος, good, and γερων, aged.

Calvered salmon. To carve, to grow sour or curdle—Hal., i. e. to separate, to become lumpy. Hence calvered for carvered, separated in flakes.

Cambering.—Cambrel. A ship's deck is said to lie cambering when it does not lie level, but is higher in the middle than at the ends.—B. Fr. cambrier, to bow, crook, arch; cambre, cambré, crooked, arched. Sp. combar, to bend, to warp, to jut. Bret. kamm, arched, crooked, lame. Gr. καμπτω, to bend, καμπυλος, crooked, hooked. E. camber-nosed, having an aquiline nose.—Jamieson. Cambrel, cambren, W. campren, crooked-stick, a crooked stick with notches in it on which butchers hang their meat.—B.

Cambric. A sort of fine linen cloth brought from Cambrai in Flanders.—B. Fr. Cambray, or toile de Cambray—cambric.—Cot.

Camisade. Sp. camisa, It. camiscia, a shirt, whence Fr. camisade, It. camisciata, a night attack upon the enemies' camp, the shirt being worn over the clothes to distinguish the attacking party, or rather perhaps a surprise of the enemy in their shirts.

Camlet. Fr. camelot. A stuff made of camel's or goat's hair. It was distinguished by a wavy or watered surface. Camelot a ondes, water chamlet; camelot plénier, unwater chamlet; se cameloter, to grow rugged or full of wrinkles, to become waved like chamlet.—Cot.

Campaign. The space of time every year that an army continues in the field during a war.—B. It. campagna, Fr. campagne, the plain open field, level country.

Candy. Sugar in a state of crystallisation. Turk. kand, sugar; kandi, of or pertaining to sugar.

Canibal. An eater of human flesh. From the Cannibals, or Caribs, or Galibis, the original inhabitants of the W. India islands, the name being differently pronounced by different sections of the nation, some of whom, like the Chinese, had no r in their language. Peter Martyr, who died in 1526, calls them Cannibals or Caribees.

The Caribes I learned to be men-eaters or cannibals, and great enemies to the inhabitants of Trinidad.—Hæckluyt in R.

Canker. Fr. chancre, an eating spreading sore. Lat. cancer, a crab.

Cann. Icel. kanna, a large drinking vessel. Perhaps from W. cannu, to contain, as rummer, a drinking glass, from Dan. rumme, to contain. But it may be from a different source. Prov. cane, a reed, cane, also a measure. Fr. cane, a measure for cloth, being a yard or thereabouts; also a can or such-like measure for wine.—Cot. A joint of bamboo would be one of the earliest vessels for holding liquids, as a reed would afford the readiest measure of length.

Cannon. It. cannone, properly a large pipe, from canna, a reed, a tube. Prov. canon, a pipe.

Canon. Gr. κανων, a ruler, originally the straight joint of a cane or reed. Hence canonicus, regular, according to rule; canonici, the canons or regular clergy of a cathedral.

Canoe. An Indian boat made of the hollowed trunk of a tree. Sp. canoa, from the native term. Yet it is remarkable that the G. has kahn, a boat. O. Fr. cane, a ship; canot, a small boat.—Diez.

Canopy. Mod. Gr. κωνωπειον, a mosquito curtain, bed curtain, from κωνωψ, a gnat.

Cant. Cant is properly the language spoken by thieves and beggars among themselves, when they do not wish to be understood by bystanders. It therefore cannot be derived from the sing-song or whining tone in which they demand alms. The real origin is the Gael. cainnt, speech, language, applied in the first instance to the special language of rogues and beggars, and subsequently to the peculiar terms used by any other profession or community.

The Doctor here,
When he discourseth of dissection,
Of vena cava and of vena porta,
The meseræum and the mesentericum,
What does he else but cant? or if he run
To his judicial astrology,
And trowl the trine, the quartile and the sextile, &c.
Does he not cant? who here can understand him?

B. Jonson.

Gael. can, to sing, say, name, call.

Canteen. It. cantina, a wine-cellar or vault.

Canter. A slow gallop, formerly called a Canterbury gallop. If the word had been from cantherius, a gelding, it would have been found in the continental languages, which is not the case.

Cantle. A piece of anything, as a cantle of bread, cheese, &c.—B. Fr. chantel, chanteau, Picard. canteau, a corner-piece or piece broken off the corner, and hence a gobbet, lump, or cantell of bread, &c.—Cot. Du. kandt-broodts, a hunch of bread.—Kil. Icel. kantr, a side, border; Dan. kant, edge, border, region, quarter; It. canto, side, part, quarter, corner. A cantle then is a corner of a thing, the part easiest broken off. Fin. kanta, the heel, thence anything projecting or cornered; kuun-kanta, a horn of the moon; leivan kanta, margo panis diffracta, a cantle of bread. Esthon. kan, kand, the heel.

Canton. Fr. canton, It. cantone, a division of a country. Probably only the augmentative of canto, a corner, although it has been supposed to be the equivalent of the E. territorial hundred, W. cantref, cantred, from cant, a hundred, and tref, hamlet.

Canvas. From Lat. cannabis, hemp, It. cannevo, canapa, hemp, cannevaccia, canapaccia, coarse hemp, coarse hempen cloth; Fr. canvas, canvas. To canvas a matter is a metaphor taken from sifting a substance through canvas, and the verb sift itself is used in like manner for examining a matter thoroughly to the very grounds.

Cap.—Cape.—Cope. AS. cæppe, a cap, cape, cope, hood. Sp. capa, a cloak, coat, cover; It. cappa, Fr. chape. Apparently from a root cap, signifying cover, which is found in languages of very distinct stocks. The Sc. hap signifies to cover, wrap, clothe. Gr. σκεπω, to cover; Mod. Gr. καππακι, a cover; Turk. kapamak, to shut, close, cover; kapi, a door, kaput, a cloak; kapali, shut, covered. See Cabin.

Derivatives are It. cappello, Fr. chapeau, a hat; It. cappuccio, a hood, whence the name of the capuchins or hooded friars.

Caparison. Sp. caparazon, carcase of a fowl; cover of a saddle, of a coach, or other things.

Cape. A headland. It. capo, a head. See Chief.

Caper. To caper or cut capers is to make leaps like a kid or goat. It. capro, a buck, from Lat. caper; caprio, capriola, a capriol, a chevret, a young kid; met. a capriol or caper in dancing, a leap that cunning riders teach their horses. Fr. capriole, a caper in dancing, also the capriole, sault, or goat's leap (done by a horse).—Cot.

Capers. A shrub. Lat. capparis, Fr. câpre, Sp. alcaparra, Arab. algabr.

Capital. Lat. capitalis, belonging to the head, principal, chief. From caput, the head. Hence capita' is the sum lent, the principal part of the debt, as distinguished from the interest accruing upon it. Then funds or store of wealth viewed as the means of earning profit.

To Capitulate. Lat. capitulare, to treat upon terms; from capitulum, a little head, a separate division of a matter.

Capon. A castrated cock. Sp. capar, to castrate. Mod. Gr. αποκοπτω, to cut off, abridge; αποκοπος, cut, castrated.

Caprice. It. capriccio, explained by Diez from capra, a goat, for which he cites the Comask nucia, a kid, and nucc, caprice; It. ticchio, caprice, and OHG. ziki, kid. The true derivation lies in a different direction. The connexion betwcen sound and the movement of the sonorous medium is so apparent, that the terms expressing modifications of the one are frequently transferred to the other subject. Thus we speak of sound vibrating in the ears; of a tremulous sound, for one in which there is a quick succession of varying impressions on the ear. The words by which we represent a sound of such a nature are then applied to signify trembling or shivering action. To twitter is used in the first instance of the chirping of birds, and then of nervous tremulousness of the bodily frame. To chitter is both to chirp and to shiver.—Hal. It is probable that Gr. φρῖσσω originally signified to rustle, as Fr. frisser (frisement d'un trait, the whizzing of an arrow—Cot.), then to be in a state of vibration, to ruffle the surface of water, or, as Fr. frissoner, to shudder, the hair to stand on end. Φριξος, bristling, curling, because the same condition of the nerves which produces shivering also causes the hair to stand on end. The same imitation of a rustling, twittering, crackling sound gives rise to Sc. brissle, birsle, to broil, to parch, Langued. brezilia, to twitter as birds, Genevese bresoler, brisoler, to broil, to tingle (l'os qui bresole, the singing bone), It. brisciare, to shiver for cold, and with an initial gr instead of br, Fr. greziller, to crackle, wriggle, frizzle, grisser, to crackle, It. gricciare, to chill and chatter with one's teeth, aggricciare, to astonish and affright and make one's hair stand on end. In Lat. ericius, a hedge-hog, It. riccio, hedge-hog, prickly husk of chestnut, curl, Fr. rissoler, to fry, hérissier, the hair to stand on end, the initial mute of forms like Gr. φριξος, It. bricciare, gricciare, is either wholly lost, or represented by the syllable e, hé, as in Lat. erica, compared with Bret. brug, W. grug, heath, or Lat. eruca compared with It. bruco, a caterpillar.

We then find the symptoms of shivering, chattering of the teeth, roughening of the skin, hair standing on end, employed to express a passionate longing for a thing, as in Sophocles' εφριξ' ερωτι, I have shivered with love.

The effect of eager expectation in producing such a bodily affection may frequently be observed in a dog waiting for a morsel of what his master is eating. So we speak of thrilling with emotion or desire, and this symptomatic shuddering seems the primary meaning of earn or yearn, to desire earnestly. To carne within is translated by Sherwood by frissonner; to yearne, s'hérisser, frissonner; a yearning through sudden fear, hérissonnement, horripilation. And similarly to yearn, arricciarsi.—Torriano.

Many words signifying originally to crackle or rustle, then to shiver or shudder, are in like manner used metaphorically in the sense of eager desire, as Fr. grisser, greziller, griller, brisoler; “Elles grissoient d'ardeur de le voir, they longed extremely to see it.”—Cot. “Griller d'impatience.”—Trev. “Il bresole (Gl. Génév.)—grezille (Supp. Acad.) d'être marié.”

The It. brisciare, to shiver, gives rise to brezza, shivering, ribrezzo, a chillness, shivering, horror, and also a skittish or humorous toy, ribrezzoso, humorous, fantastical, suddenly angry.—Fl. So from Sw. krus, bristling, curly, krus-hufvud (bristly-head), one odd, fantastic, hard to please.—Nordfoss. The exact counterpart to this is It. arriccia-capo, or the synonymous capriccio (Fl.), a shivering fit (Altieri), and tropically, a sudden fear apprehended, a fantastical humour, a humorous conceit making one's hair to stand on end.—Fl. Fr. caprice, a sudden will, desire, or purpose to do a thing for which one has no apparent reason.—Cot.

Capriole. See Caper.

Capstan.—Capstern.—Crab. Sp. cabrestante, cabestrante; Fr. cabestan. The name of the goat was given in many languages (probably for the reason explained under Calibre) to an engine for throwing stones, and was subsequently applied to a machine for raising heavy weights or exerting a heavy pull. O. Sp. cabra, cabreia, an engine for throwing stones. It. capra, a skid or such engine to raise or mount great ordnance withal; also tressels, also a kind of rack.—Fl. G. bock, a trestle, a windlass, a crab or instrument to wind up weights, a kind of torture.—Küttner. Fr. chevre, a machine for raising heavy weights. In the S. of France the transposition of the r converts capra into crabo, a she-goat, also a windlass for raising heavy weights (explaining the origin of E. crab s. s.), a sawing-block or trestles.—Dict. Castr.

The meaning of the Sp. cabrestante (whence E. capstern or capstan) now becomes apparent. It is a standing crab, a windlass set upright for the purpose of enabling a large number of men to work at it, in opposition to the ordinary modification of the machine, where it is more convenient to make the axis horizontal.

Captain. It. capitano, a head man, commander, from Lat. caput, capitis, head.

Capuchin. See Cap.

Car.—Cart.—Carry. Lat. carrus, It. carro, Fr. char. In all probability from the creaking of the wheels. Icel. karra, Du. karren, kerren, to creak, also to carry on a car; karrende waegen, a creaking waggon. Fin. karista, strideo, crepò, to rattle. So from Sp. chirriar, to creak, chirrión, a tumbrel or strong dung-cart which creaks very loudly.—Neumann. Derivatives are Fr. charrier, to carry; It. caricare, Fr. charger, to load; It. carretta, Fr. charret, a cart.

Carabine.—Carbine. The It. calabrino, Fr. calabrin, carabin, was a kind of horse soldier, latterly, at least, a horseman armed with a carbine or arquebus.

Les carabins sont des arquebusiers à cheval qui vont devant les compagnies des gens de guerre comme pour reconnaître les ennemis et les escarmoucher.—Caseneuve in Dict. Etym.

Carabin, a carbine or curbeene; an arquebuzier armed with a murrian and breastplate and serving on horseback.—Cot.

As the soldiers would naturally be named from their peculiar armament, it is inferred by Diez with great probability that the term calabre, originally signifying a catapult or machine for casting stones, was transferred on the invention of gunpowder to a firelock, and that the calabrans or carabins were named from carrying a weapon of that nature. He might have strengthened his surmise by a reference to the E. caliver, which is an obvious modification of the same word. Catapulta—donderbuchs—donrebusse, vel clover.—Dief. Sup. Carabijn, eques catapultarius, equester catapulta.—Biglotten. Now I have under Calibre endeavoured to show that the original form of calabre is cabre, crabe, whence the diminutive carabine, as the designation of a firelock.

Caracol. The half turn which a horseman makes to the right or left; also a winding staircase. Sp. caracol, a snail, a winding staircase, turn of a horse. Gael. carr, a twist, bend, winding; carach, winding, turning. AS. cerran, to turn.

Carat. Gr. κεραριον, seed of pulse, in Mod. Gr. a cornel-berry, seed of carrob; Venet. carate, seed of carob. Arab. kirat, Sp. quilato, a small weight. Fr. silique, the husk or cod of beans, &c., and particularly the carob or carob bean-cod; also a poise among physicians, &c., coming to four grains. Carrob, the carob bean, also a small weight, among mint-men and goldsmiths making the 24th of an ounce.—Cotgr.

Caravan. Pers. kerwan.

Carboy. A large glass bottle for holding oil of vitriol. Mod. Gr. καραμπογια (caraboyia), vitriol, copperas.

Carcase. Mod. Gr. καρκασι, a quiver, carcase;—του ανθρωπινου σωματος, the skeleton;—της χελωνας, the shell of a tortoise. It. carcasso, the hard core or pith of fruits, also a carcanet or border of gold; carcame, a dead carcase, skeleton. Fr. carquasse, the dead body of any creature, a pelt or dead bird to take down a hawk withal; carquois, a quiver; carquan, a collar or chain for the neck.—Cot. Cat. carcanada, the carcase of a fowl. The radical meaning seems to be something holding together, confining, constraining; shell, case, or framework. W. carch, restraint; Gael. carcair, a coffer, a prison. Wallach. carcere, corquere, to bend in, to cramp; carce, an iron ring. Bohem. krčiti, to draw in, contract.

Card. An implement for dressing wool. Lat. carere, carminare, to comb wool; carduus, a thistle, It. cardo, a thistle, teasel for dressing woollen cloth. Lith. karszti, to ripple flax, to strip off the heads by drawing the flax through a comb, to card wool, to curry horses; karsztuwas, a ripple for flax, wool card, curry-comb. Gael. card, to card wool, &c., càrlag, a lock of wool; carla, a wool card. The fundamental idea is the notion of scraping or scratching, and the expression arises from an imitation of the noise. Icel. karra, to creak, to hiss (as geese), to comb; karri, a card or comb; karr-kambar, wool cards. G. scharren, to scrape; kratzen, to scratch; Wallach. kàrtere, crepo, strido, gemo.

Cardinal. From Lat. cardo, cardinis, a hinge, that on which the matter hinges, principal, fundamental. Gael. car, a turn, winding.

Care. AS. cearian, carian, to take heed, care, be anxious. Goth. kara, care; unkarja, careless; gakaran, to take care of. The W. caru, to love, to care for, is probably the same word, as well as Lat. carus, dear, carere, to find dear, to want.

Probably the origin of the word is the act of moaning, murmuring, or grumbling at what is felt as grievous. Fin. kàristà, raucà voce loquor vel ravum sonum edo, strideo, morosus sum, murrèn, zanken; kàrry, asper, morosus, rixosus. A like connexion may be seen between Fin. surrata, stridere, to whirr (schnurren), and suru, sorrow, care; Icel. kumra, to growl, mutter, and G. kummer, grief, sorrow, distress; Fin. murista, murahtan, to growl, and murhet, ægritudo animi, mœror, cura intenta. The Lat. cura may be compared with Fin. kurista voce strepo stridente, inde murmuro vel ægre fero, quirito ut infans.

To Careen. To refit a ship by bringing her down on one side and supporting her while she is repaired on the other. Properly to clean the bottom of the ship. It. carena, the keel, bottom, or whole bulk of a ship; dare la carena alle navi, to tallow or calk the bottom of a ship. Carenare, Fr. carener, from Lat. carina, the keel of a vessel. Venet. carena, the hull of a ship, from the keel to the water line; essere in carena, to lie on its side.—Boerio. It is remarkable that the Du. has krengen in the same sense, een schip krengen, to lay a ship on its side; to stop a leak; krengen, to sail on one side. Dan. krænge, to heel over.

Career. It. carriera, Fr. carrière, a highway, road, or street, also a career on horseback, place for exercise on horseback.—Cot. Properly a car-road, from carrus.—Diez.

Caress. Fr. caresse, It. carezza, an endearment. W. caru, Bret. karout, to love. Bret. karantez, love, affection, caress. M. Lat. caritia, from carus, dear.

Carl. A clown or churl. AS. ceorl, Icel. karl, a man, male person.

Carminative. A medical term from the old theory of humours. The object of carminatives is to expel wind, but the theory is that they dilute and relax the gross humours from whence the wind arises, combing them out like the knots in wool. It. carminare, to card wool, also by medicines to make gross humours fine and thin.—Fl.

Carnaval. The period of festivities indulged in in Catholic countries, immediately before the long fast of Lent. It. carnavale, carnovale, carnasciale, Farewell flesh, that is to say, Shrove tide.—Fl. This however is one of those accommodations so frequently modifying the form of words. The true derivation is seen in M. Lat. carnelevamen or carnis levamen, i. e. the solace of the flesh or of the bodily appetite, permitted in anticipation of the long fast. In a MS. description of the Carnival of the beginning of the 13th century, quoted by Carpentier, it is spoken of as “delectatio nostri corporis.” The name then appears under the corrupted forms of Carnelevarium, Carnelevale, Carnevale. “In Dominica in caput Quadragesimæ quæ dicitur Carnelevale.”—Ordo Eccles. Mediol. A. D. 1130, in Carp. Other names of the season were Carnicapium, Shrove Tuesday, and Carnem laxare (It. carne-lascia), whence the form carnasciale, differing about as much from its parent carne-lascia as carnaval from carnelevamen.

Carol. Properly a round dance, Fr. carole, querole. Bret. koroll, a dance, W. coroli, to reel, to dance.

The mightist thou karollis senc
 And folke daunce and merie ben,
 And made many a faire tounring
 Upon the grenc grasse spring.—R. R. 760.

Chanson de carole, a song accompanying a dance; then, as Fr. balade from It. ballare, to dance, applied to the song itself. Diez suggests chorulus from chorus as the origin. But we have no occasion to invent a diminutive, as the Lat. corolla from corona gives the exact sense required. Robert of Brunne calls the circuit of Druidical stones a carol.

This Bretons reinged about the fælde
 The karole of the stones behelde,
 Many tyme yede tham about,
 Biheld within, biheld without.—Pref. cxiv.

To Carouse. To hold a drinking bout. From G. kräuse, Du. kruyse, kroes, a drinking vessel, kroesen, krosen, to tipple, to tope; bekrosen, in his cups, drunk.—Kil. From kroesen, krosen, is formed the E. carouse, as gally-pot from Du. gleypot, clay pot. So glas is pronounced gelas at Ghent.—Delfortrie.

The notion of drinking hard is expressed in a similar manner in Pl. D. kroegen, to sit drinking, from krug, a crock or pitcher; Du. pullen, to drink, from pul, a flagon. Hebt gy eens gepuld? avez vous bu un coup.—Halma. W. potio, to tipple, from pot.

Carp. A freshwater fish. G. karpfen, Du. karper, Fr. carpe.

To Carp. Carpyn or talkyn, fabulor, confabulor, garrulo.—Pr. Pm.

So gone they forthe, carpende fast
On this, on that.—Gower in Way.

Bohem. křapati, garrire, to chatter; křapanj, tattle, chatter. Port. carpire, to cry or weep. Analogous to E. chirp.

Carpenter. Lat. carpentum, a car; carpentarius, a wheelwright, maker of waggons; It. carpentiere, a wheelwright, worker in timber; Fr. charpentier, as E. carpenter only in the latter sense. Mid. Lat. carpenta, zimmer, tymmer, zimmer-span.—Dief. Sup. The word seems of Celtic origin. Gael. carbh, a plank, ship, chariot; carbad, a chariot, litter, bier.

Carpet. From Lat. carpere, to pluck, to pull asunder (wolle zeysen.—Dief. Sup.), was formed Mid. Lat. carpia, carpita, lintcum carptum quod vulneribus inditur. Fr. charpie, lint. The term was with equal propriety applied to flocks of wool, used for stuffing mattresses, or loose as a couch without further preparation. “Carpitam habeat in lecto, qui sacco, culcitra, vel coopertorio carebit.”—Reg. Templariorum in Duc.

It seems then to have signified any quilted fabric, a patchwork table-cover with a lining of coarse cloth—La Crusca, or the cloak of the Carmelites made of like materials; a woman's petticoat, properly doubtless a quilted petticoat. Carpeta, gonna, gonnella.—Patriarchi. “Quilibet frater habeat sac- cum in quo dormit, carpetam (a quilt?), lintheamen."—Stat. Eq. Teut. in Duc. On the other hand we find the signification transferred from the flocks with which the bed was stuffed to the sacking which contained them. Rouchi carpéte, coarse loose fabric of wool and hemp, packing cloth. "Eune tapisserie d'carpéte, des rideaux d'carpéte."—Hécart.

Carriage. The carrying of anything, also a conveyance with springs for conveying passengers. In the latter sense the word is a corruption of the OE. caroche, caroach, from It. carroccio, carroccia, carrozza; Rouchi caroche, Fr. carrosse, augmentatives of carro, a car.

It. carreaggio, carriaggio, all manner of carts or carriage by carts, also the carriage, luggage, bag and baggage of a camp.—Fl.

Carriion. It. carogna, Fr. charogne, Rouchi carone, an augmentative from Lat. caro.

To Carry. Fr. charrier, Rouchi carier, properly to convey in a car. Wallach. carare, to convey in a cart, to bear or carry.

Cart. AS. krat. It. carretto, carretta. Fr. charrette, dim. of carro, a car.

Cartel. It. cartella, pasteboard, a piece of pasteboard with some inscription on it, hung up in some place and to be removed.—Flor. Hence a challenge openly hung up, afterwards any written challenge.

Cartoon. Preparatory drawing of a subject for a picture. It. cartone, augm. of carta, paper.

Cartouch.—Cartoose.—Cartridge. Fr. cartouche. It. Cartoccio, a paper case, coffin of paper for groceries, paper cap for criminals ignominiously exposed.—Fl. The paper case containing the charge of a gun.

To Carve. AS. ceorfan, Du. kerven, to cut or carve; G. kerben, to notch. Lith. kerpu, kirpti, to shear, cut with scissors.

Cascade. It. cascata, Fr. cascade, a fall of water, from It. cascare, to fall. See next article.

Case. It. cassa, a chest, coffin, shrine, trunk, casket, or case for anything, also a merchant's cash or counter; casso, a body or trunk, also the bulk, or seat of the stomach (the chest), a stomacher; cassetta, a box, casket, pan; Fr. casse, caisse, a box, case, or chest, casket, pan, the hollow part of a horse's foot.—Cot.

Sp. casco, skull, potsherd, helmet (casque), cask or wooden vessel for liquids, hull or hulk of a ship, crown of a hat, hoof of a horse, carcase of a house. Icel. kassi, a coffer, case; Du. kasse, a coffer, chase for relics; kas, kast, a chest.—Halma. Kasken, cistula, locus.—Kil. G. kiste, kasten, a chest, the dim. of which, kästchen, corresponds to Du. kasken.

We have thus three equivalent forms of the root cas; cask, cast, as in the case of the O. Fr. buc, busc, and bust, the bust or body. The primary meaning seems something hollow or empty, from an imitation of the sound of a blow on an empty vessel by the syllable kass! quash! sometimes strengthened by a final k or t.

The imitative character of the word is well shown in the following passage from Swift.

My fall was stopped by a terrible squash, which sounded louder in my ears than the cataract of Niagara.

OE. quash was used in the sense of dash, throw violently, break to pieces.

The evil spirit—took him, quashing the child on the ground.—Udal in R.

From the same source are the Du. quetsen, to bruise, crush, injure; G. quetschen, to crush, crack, bruise, press; W. gwas-gu, to press, Pol. ciskać, to hurl, cisnąć, to hurl or press.

In the languages of the Latin stock the image gives rise to the Fr. casser, to break, burst, crash in pieces, quash asunder; Sp. cascar, to crack, crush, break to pieces; It. casciare, to squeeze, squash, or crush flat; accasciare, accastiare, to squash, squeeze, to dash or bruise together, cascare, to fall (to come down with a squash).

I should be loth to see you
Come fluttering down like a young rook cry squab!
And take you up with your brains beaten into your buttocks.

B. and F.

Then as the sound of a blow is greatly increased when it falls on a hollow object, the syllable imitative of the sound of a blow is frequently used to signify hollow, or hollow things. Thus from the sound of a blow imitated by the syllable boss is derived boss, hollow, empty, hollow vessel.

In like manner from the sound of a blow imitated by the syllable quash! cass! we have Lat. cassus, hollow, empty, void (whence Fr. casser, to annul, cashier), Fr. cas, hollow, or broken sounded, hoarse, and the senses of casse, caisse, cash, above given, in which they express a hollow receptacle of different kinds.

Case-mate. Fr. case-mate; Sp. casa-mata; It. casa-matta. Originally a loop-holed gallery excavated in a bastion, from whence the garrison could do execution upon an enemy who had obtained possession of the ditch, without risk of loss to themselves. Hence the designation from Sp. casa, house, and matar, to slay, corresponding to the G. mord-keller, mord-grube, and the OE. slaughter-house. “Casa matta, a canonry or slaughter-house, which is a place built low under the walls of a bulwark, not reaching to the height of the ditch, and serveth to annoy the enemy when he entereth the ditch to scale the wall.”—Flor. “Casemate, a loophole in a fortified wall.”—Cot. “A vault of mason’s work in the flank of a bastion next the curtain, to fire on the enemy.”—Bailey. As defence from shells became more important, the term was subsequently applied to a bombproof vault in a fortress, for the security of the defenders, without reference to the annoyance of the enemy.

Cash. Ready money. A word introduced from the language of book-keeping, where Fr. caisse, the money chest, is the head under which money actually paid in is entered. It was formerly used in the sense of a counter in a shop or place of business. It. cassa, Fr. caisse, a merchant’s cash or counter.—Fl. Cot.

To Cashier. Du. kasseren.—Kil. Fr. casser, to break, also to casse, cassere, discharge, turn out of service, annul.—Cot. From Lat. cassus, empty, hollow, void. See Case.

Cask.—Casket.—Casque. The Sp. casco signifies a scull, crown of a hat, helmet, cask or wooden vessel for holding liquids, hull of a ship, shell or carcass of a house. It seems generally to signify case or hollow receptacle. See Case. Hence casket, Fr. cassette, a coffer or small case for jewels.

Cassock. Gael. casag, a long coat. It. casacca, Fr. casaque, long man's gown with a close body, from casa, a hut, the notion of covering or sheltering being common to a house and a garment, as we have before seen under Cape and Cabin. So also from It. casipola, casupola, a little house or hut, Fr. chasuble, a garment for performing the mass in, Sp. casulla, O. Fr. casule, M. Lat. casula, quasi minor casa eo quod totum hominem tegat.—Isidore in Diez.

To Cast. Icel. kasta. Essentially the same word with Sp. cascar, to crack, break, burst; Fr. casser, to break, crush; It. cascare, to fall. The fundamental image is the sound of a violent collision, represented by the syllable quash, squash, cash, cast. It. accasciare, accastiare, to squash, dash, or bruise together.—Flo. The E. dash with a like imitative origin is used with a like variety of signification. We speak of dashing a thing down, dashing it to pieces, dashing it out of the window. See Case.

Caste. The artificial divisions of society in India. Port. casta, breed, race, kind.

Castanets. Snappers which dancers of sarabands tie about their fingers.—B. Sp. castaña, a chesnut; castañetazo, a sound or crack of a chesnut which bursts in the fire, crack given by the joints. Hence castañeta, the snapping of the fingers in a Spanish dance; castañeta, castañuela, the castanets or implement for making a louder snapping; castañetear, to crackle, to clack.

Castle. It. castello, Lat. castellum, dim. of castrum (castra), a fortified place.

Cat. G. katze, Gael. cat, Icel. köttr, Fin. kasi, hissa, probably from an imitation of the sound made by a cat spitting. Cass! a word to drive away a cat.—Hal. The Fin. kutis! is used to drive them away, while kiss! Pol. kic! kici! are used as E. puss! for calling them.

Cat o' nine tails. Pol. kat, executioner; katowac, to lash, rack, torture. Lith. kotas, the stalk of plants, shaft of a lance, handle of an axe, &c.; bot-kotis, the handle of a scourge; kotas, the executioner; kotawoti, to scourge, to torture.

Russ. koshka, a cat; koshki, a whip with several pitched cords, cat-o'-nine-tails.

Catacomb. Grottoes or subterraneous places for the burial of the dead. The Dict. Etym. says that the name is given in Italy to the tombs of the martyrs which people go to visit by way of devotion. This would tend to support Diez's explanation from Sp. catar, to look at, and tomba, a tomb (as the word is also spelt catatomba and catatumba), or comba, a vault, which however is not satisfactory, as a shew is not the primary point of view in which the tombs of the martyrs were likely to have been considered in early times. Moreover the name was apparently confined to certain old quarries used as burial places near Rome. Others explain it from κατα, down, and κυμβος, a cavity.

To Catch.—Chase. The words catch and chase are different versions of the same word, coming to us through different dialects of French. In the dialect of Picardy, from which much of the French in our language was introduced, a hard c commonly corresponds to the soft ch of ordinary Fr., and a final ch in Picard to the hard s of ordinary Fr. Thus we have Pic. or Rouchi cat, Fr. chat, a cat; Rouchi caleur, Fr. chaleur, heat; Rouchi forche, Fr. force; Rouchi equerviche, Fr. ecrevisse; Rouchi écaches, Fr. échasses, stilts. In like manner Rouchi catcher, Fr. chasser, to hunt, from the first of which we have E. catch, and from the second chase, the earlier sense of catch, like that of It. cacciare, Fr. chasser, being to drive out, drive away.

Mald thorgh the Landreis fro London is katched.—R. Brunne. 120.

“Catchyn away—abigo.” “Catchyn or drive forth bestis, mino.”—Pr. Pm. Fr. chasser, to drive away, follow after, pursuc.—Cot. It. cacciare fuora, to drive out; cacciare per terra, to cast or beat to the ground; cacciuolo, a thump, punch, push.—Fl.

The origin is the imitation of the sound of a smart blow by the syllable clutch! passing on the one hand into catch and on the other into latch, by the loss of the l or c respectively. G. klatsch! thwick-thwack! a word to imitate the sound made by striking with the hand against a partition wall; klatsch, such a sound or the stroke which produces it, a clap, flap; klatsche, a whip or lash.—Küttner. Du. kletsen, resonare ictu verberare; klets, kletse, ictus resonans, fragor; kletsoore, ketsoore, a whip; Rouchi cachoire, ecachoire, a whip, properly the lash or knotted piece of whipcord added for the purpose of giving sharpness to the crack.—Hécart. Norm. cache, s. s.—Pat. de Bray. Fr. chassoire, a carter’s whip.—Cot. Galla catchiza, to crack with a whip, catchi, a whip.—Tutschek. Du. kaetse, a smack, clap, blow, and specially the stroke of a ball at tennis.—Kil. Fr. chasse, E. chase, the distance to which the ball is struck. Arbalète de courte chasse, a cross-bow that carries but a little way.

In the sense of seizing an object the term catch is to be explained as clapping one’s hand upon it, snatching it with a smack, in the same way that we speak of catching one a box on the ear. In the sense of a sudden snatch the Sc. has both forms, with and without an l after the c. Claucht, snatched, laid hold of eagerly and suddenly; a catch or seizure of anything in a sudden and forcible way. When one lays hold of what is falling it is said that he “got a claucht of it.”—Jam.

Wallace—

—Be the coler claucht him with owtyn baid.

Wallace caught him by the collar without delay.

And claucht anone the courser by the rene.—D. V.

Gael. glac, to take, seize, catch.

In the s. s. caucht.

Turnus at this time waxis bauld and blythe Wenyng to caucht ane stound his strenth to kythe.—D. V.

i. e. to catch an opportunity to show his strength.

Galla catchamza, to snap, to snatch (said of dogs). For the equivalence of similar forms with and without an l after a c or g, compare G. klatschen, to chat, chatter, clatter.—Küttner. G. klatscherei, Sp. chachara, chatter; Du. klinke, E. chink.—Kil. Gael. glong, E. gingle. Rouchi clincailleux, Fr. quincailler, a tinman.

On the other hand the loss of the initial c gives rise to a form lash, latch, with similar meanings to those belonging to words of the form clutch, catch, above explained.

Thus we have the lash of a whip corresponding to the G. klatsche and Norm. cache. As Sc. chak expresses “the sharp sound made by any iron substance when entering its socket, as of the latch of a door when it is shut, to click;” and to chak is “to shut with a sharp sound” (Jam.); the representation of a like sound by the syllable latch gives its designation to the latch of a door, formerly called cliket, from shutting with a click. And on the same principle on which we have above explained the actual use of the word catch, the OE. latch was commonly used in the sense of seizing, snatching, obtaining possession of.

And if ye latche Lucre let hym not ascapie.—P. P.

Catechism. Elementary instruction in the principles of religion by question and answer. Properly a system of oral instruction, from Gr. κατηχίζω, κατηχέω, to sound, resound, to sound in the ears of any one, to teach by oral instruction, teach the elements of any science. Κατηχῆσις, the act of stunning by loud sound or of charming by sound, instruction in the elements of a science. Ἡχη, sound.

To Cater.—Cates. To provide victuals, &c. Rouchi acater, to buy, the equivalent of the ordinary Fr. acheter, O. Fr. achepter, to buy; It. accattare, to acquire, to get; Prov. acapta, acapte, acquisition of an estate. Neap. accattare, in the sense of Fr. acheter. From ad-captare, Mid. Lat. accapitare.—Diez.

Hence OE. acates, cates, victuals, provisions purchased, in contradistinction to those grown at home, then niceties, delicacies. The caterly was the store-room where cates were kept, whence to cater, to purchase provisions.

Caterpillar. The frequency with which the element cat appears in the designation of this animal in different dialects makes it probable that it is named from its resemblance to the catkins of a nut, and so originally to the tail of a cat or a dog. Swiss teufelskatz, Lombard gatta, gattola (literally, a cat or catkin, a little cat), Fr. chenille (Lat. canicula, a little dog), a caterpillar; Milan can, cagnon (a dog), a silkworm. The second half of the E. word doubtless alludes to the destructive habits of the insect, *pill*ing the trees upon which it is bred. The same notion is expressed by the former element of the Swiss Teufelskatz. The Fr. chate-peleuse, a weevil (Norm. carpleuse, a caterpillar), is probably an accommodation from the E. caterpillar, or it may be formed from chate, chaton, a chat or catkin, with allusion to the hairy aspect of a caterpillar, It. bruco peloso.

Catkin.—Chat. Loose clusters of male flowers supposed to resemble cat's tails, growing on certain kinds of trees, as hazels, poplars, &c. Fr. catons, catkins, cat tails, aglet-like blowings of nut trees.—Cot. Du. katten, kattekens, rattensteertkens, or rat-tails.—Kil. But it may be doubted whether this comparison to a cat's tail be not an accommodation. It would be a very singular perversion to leave out all reference to the tail, which forms so essential a portion of the resemblance. I am inclined to believe that the original designation was a cot or lock of wool, the G. equivalent of which is kotz, a rug or shaggy coverlet, also a catkin—Schmid; Pol. koc, a rug; kocianki, kotki, catkins. Russ. kosa, koska, kosilza, a lock of hair, tress. A similar relation holds good in Fin. between palma, the catkin of the willow (also called palm in E. and German), and palmikko, a lock of hair. See Cot. The Bohem. however has kočička, a little cat, and also (as well as kočata, kočatka) a catkin.

Candle. A warm comforting drink. Fr. chaudeau, from chaud, hot.

Caul. The omentum or fatty network in which the bowels are wrapped. It. rete, reticella; rete del fégato, the caul of the liver. A caul is also a small net to confine the hair, and hence a scull cap, also the membrane covering the face of some infants at their birth. The proper meaning of the word seems to be a net, whence it is provincially used in the sense of a spider's web.—Hal. Rete, any net or caul-work; rete ragno, a cobweb, also any net or caul-work.—Flo.

Her head with ringlets of her hair is crowned,
And in a golden caul the curls are bound.—Dryden in R.

Fr. cale, a kind of little cap; calotte, a skull cap.

Cauldron. Fr. chauderon, chaudron, chaudière, a kettle for heating water. Chaud, It. caldo, Lat. calidus, hot.

Causeway. Fr. chaussée, a paved road. M. Lat. caloeata, calceta, a road; calceata, shod or protected from the treading of the horses by a coating of wood or stone. Fr. chausser, to shoe; Port. calçar, to shoe, also to pave; calçada, a pavement, the stones of a street. Du. kautsije, kaussijde, kassije, via strata.—Kil.

Cavalry.—Cavalier. It. caraliere, Fr. chevalier, a horseman. It. cavallo, Fr. cheval, a horse, Lat. caballus, Gr. καβαλλης, OE. caple. “Caballus, a horse; yet in some parts of England they do call an horse a cable.”—Elyot in Way. W. ceffyl, a horse; Gael. capull, Pol. kobyła, Russ. kobuil', a mare.

Cave.—Cavern. Lat. cavus, hollow. The origin of the word seems a representation of the sound made by knocking against a hollow body. Fin. kopista, dumpf tönen, klopfend knallen, to sound like a blow; kopano, caudex arboris cavus pulsu resonans; koparo, koparet, a receptacle for small things, coffer, pit; kopera or kowera, hollow, curved, crooked; kopio, empty, sounding as an empty vessel (compare Lat. cassus in v. Case); koppa, anything hollowed or vaulted; kanteleen koppa, the box or sounding-board of the harp; pipun koppa, the bowl of a pipe; koppa-mato, a beetle or crustaceous insect; koppa nokka, an aquiline nose, &c.; koppeli, a hut, little house.

So from Fin. kommata, komista, to sound deep or hollow as an empty vessel, komo, hollow, giving a hollow sound; komo-jaa, hollow ice; wuoren komo, a cavern in a mountain (wuora, a mountain).

Caveson. A kind of bridle put upon the nose of a horse in order to break and manage him.—B. Fr. caveçon, Sp. cabeçon, It. cavezzone, augm. of cavezza, a halter, and that from Sp. cabeça, a head. A false accommodation produced G. kapp-zaum, as if from kappen, to cut, and zaum, bridle, a severe bridle.

Ceiling. The modern spelling has probably arisen from an erroneous notion that the word is derived from Fr. ciel, tilt, canopy, tester; It. cielo, in the same senses, and also in that of E. ceiling. It was formerly written seel, having the meaning of wainscoting, covering with boards. To seele a room, lambrisser une chambre; seeling, lambris, menuiserie.—Sherwood. Plancher, to plank or floor with planks, to seele or close with boards; plancher, a boarded floor, also a seeling of boards; planché, boarded, floored with planks, closed or seeled with boards.—Cot.

The essential notion is thus defending the room against draughts by closing or sealing up cracks, from O. Fr. seel, a seal. We still use the metaphor in the sense of closing with respect to the eyes, sealed eyelids. Fr. siller les yeux, to seel or sew up the eyelids. It. cigliare, to seel a pigeon's eye. What we now call the ceiling was formerly called the upper-seeling, Fr. sus-lambris, to distinguish it from the seeling or wainscoting of the walls. The upper seeling of a house, soffitto, cielo.—Torriano. When wainscoting went out of use the distinctive qualification was no longer necessary, and the term ceiling was appropriated to the coat of plaister which seals up the under side of the rafters in a room.

Celery. Fr. céléri.

Cess. A tax. For sess from assess, but spelt with a c from the influence of the Lat. census, the rating of Roman citizens according to their property. See Assize, Assess. Fr. cencer, to rate, assess, tax, value.—Cotgr.

Chack-stone. See Chuck.

Chafe.—Chafing-dish. To chafe is to heat by rubbing, to rub for the purpose of heating, then to rub without reference to the production of heat.

All good smelles be more odoriferous if they be well medled and chaufed together.—Golden Book in R.

Lat. calefacere, It. calefare, Fr. chauffer, echauffer, to heat, to warm, to chafe. Fr. chaufferette, a chafing-dish or pan of hot coals for warming a room where there is not fire.

Chafe. 2. In the sense of chafing with anger two distinct words are probably confounded; 1st from It. riscaldarsi, to become heated with anger, Fr. eschauffer, to set in a chafe.—Sherwood.

For certes the herte of manne by eschaufing and moving of his blode waxeth so troubled that it is out of all manere judgement of reson.—Parson's tale. De Irá.

But to chafe has often a much more precise sense than this, and signifies to snort, fume, breathe hard. It. sborfare, to huff, snuff, or puff with snorting, to tuff as a cat, to huff, to chafe and fret with rage and anger; tronfo, tronfio, puffed or ruffled with chafing.—Fl. In this application it is the correlative of the G. keuchen, to puff and blow, breathe thick and short, to pant, parallel with which is found keifen, to grumble, growl, scold, quarrel. Bav. kauchen, to breathe, puff.

Chafar.—Cheffern. Cock-chafar; fern-chafar. G. käfer, AS. cafer, Du. kever, any insect of the beetle kind, having a hard case to their wings. Fin. koppa-mato, from koppa, a case, excavatum vel cavum quid, and mato (G. motte), an insect. It is probable then that the meaning of the first syllable in chafar may be case or hollow, the equivalent of the Fin. koppa or Lat. carus, and perhaps of Lat. cophinus, E. coffin, coffer, Swab. kober, a basket, case.

Chaff. AS. ceaf, G. kaff. Pers. khah.—Adelung. Fin. kahista, leviter crepo vel susurro, movendo parum strideo ut gramen sub pedibus euntis vel arundo vento agitata (to rustle); whence kahina, a rustling; kahu, kahuja, hordeum vel avena vilior, taubes korn oder hafer, light rustling corn, consisting chiefly of husks; kuhata, kuhista, to buzz, hiss, rustle; kuhina, a rustling noise, rustling motion as of ants, &c.; kuhu-ohrat (ohrat, barley), refuse barley; kuhuja, quisquilæ vel paleæ quæ motæ leviter susurrant, chaff.

To Chaff. In vulgar language, to rally one, to chatter or talk lightly. From a representation of the inarticulate sounds made by different kinds of animals uttering rapidly repeated cries. Du. keffen, to yap, to bark, also to prattle, chatter, tattle.—Halma. Wallon. chawe, a chough, jackdaw; chaweter, to caw; chawer, to cheep, to cry; chafeter, to babble, tattle; Normand. cauette, a jackdaw, a prattling woman.—Pat. de Brai. Fr. japper, to yap, yelp. G. kaff, idle words, impertinence.—Kütt. n.

To Chaffer. To buy and sell, to bargain, haggle. Frequentative from G. kaufen, to buy. See Cheap.

Chagrin. Fr. chagrin, care, grief. According to Diez, from the shark-skin, or rough substance called shagreen, Fr. peau de chagrin, which from being used as a rasp for polishing wood was taken as a type of the gnawing of care or grief. Genoese sagrinâ, to gnaw, sagrinâse, to consume with anger. Piedm. sagri, shagreen; sagrin, care, grief. In like manner It. limare, to file, metaphorically to fret—Fl.; far lima-lima, to fret inwardly.—Altieri.

Chair.—Chaise. Gr. καθῆρα, from καθίζομαι, to sit, Lat. cathedra, Fr. chaire, a seat, a pulpit. As the loss of a d in cadena gives chain, a double operation of the same nature reduces cathedra (ca'e'ra) to chair. Prov. cadieira, cadera, O. Fr. chayère.

The conversion of the r into s gives Fr. chaise, a pulpit—

Cot., now a chair. Then, as a carriage is a moveable seat, the word has acquired in E. the sense of a carriage, pleasure carriage.

Chaldern.—Chawdron. Part of the entrails of an animal; a calf's chawdron, chitterlings. G. kaldauen, the tripes, entrails, garbage of an animal.—Kütt. Pol. kaldun, paunch, maw, bowels; Bohem. kaldaun, kaltaun, giblets; It. caldume, caldinelli, a meat made of minced tripes, &c.—Fl. Sp. chanfaina, the pluck of lambs, calves, &c.

Chalk. Fr. chaulx, lime; Lat. calx, limestone, lime.

Challenge. Fr. chalanger, to claim, challenge, make title unto; also to accuse of, charge with, call in question for an offence.—Cot. Hence to challenge one to fight is to call on him to decide the matter by combat. The origin is the forensic Latin calumniare, to institute an action, to go to law.—Duc. So from dominio, domnio, dongio, E. dungeon; from somnium, Fr. songe. Prov. calonja, dispute; calumpnjamen, contestation, difficulty; calonjar, to dispute, refuse.

The sacramentum de calumnia was an oath on the part of the person bringing an action of the justice of his ground of action, and as this was the beginning of the suit it is probably from thence that calumniari in the sense of bringing an action arose. "Can hom ven al plaiz et fa sagramen de calompnia." "Sagrament de calompnia o de vertat per la una part e per l'autra."—Rayn, Lat. calumnia, false accusation, chicane.

Chamade. A signal by drum or trumpet given by an enemy when they have a mind to parley.—B. From Port. chamar, Lat. clamare, to call. The chamade is a call on the enemy to parley.

Chamber. Fr. chambre. Lat. Camera, Gr. καμαρα, a vault or arched roof, place with an arched roof. Probably from cam, crooked. Camera, gewölb. Camerare, krümmen; cameratus, gekrümmt, gebogen, gewölbt.—Dief. Sup.

Chamberlain. Fr. chambellan; It. camerlengo, ciamberlano, ciambellano.

To Chamfer. To channel or make hollow. Port. chanfrar, to slope, hollow, cut sloping; Fr. échancrer, to eat into as a canker, to cut or make hollow and half round, also to pare very near, to nip off; chanfrain, the front stall or forehead piece of a barbed horse (from the hollows left for the eyes?); chanfrain creux, a chanfering or a channel, furrow, hollow gutter or streak in stonework.—Cot. A chamfer is the plain slope made by paring off the edge of a stone or piece of timber.—Hal. Sp. chaflán, bevel, obtuse angle; chaflanár, to form a bevel, cut a slope.

To Chamfer.—Champ. Prov. E. to cham, champ, chamble, to chew.—Hal. Properly to chew so as to make the snapping of the jaws be heard. Hung. tsammogni, tsamtsogni, to make a noise with the teeth in chewing. Galla djam-djam-goda (to make djam-djam), to smack the lips in eating as swine, to champ, move the jaws.—Tutschek. The G. schmatzen s. s. differs only in the transposition of the letter m. Icel. kampa, to chew; kiammi, a jaw; kiamsa, to champ, to move the jaws; kiamt, champing.

The sound of striking the ground with the foot is sometimes represented in the same manner, as in It. sampettare, to paw the ground; Prov. E. champ, to tread heavily.—Hal.

Champarty. Partnership. Fr. champ parti, Lat. campus partitus; as jeopardy, from Fr. jeu parti, Lat. jocus partitus, divided game.

Champion. Commonly derived from campus, a field of battle, fighting place. And no doubt the word might have early been introduced from Latin into the Teutonic and Scandinavian languages, giving rise to the AS. camp, fight, cempa, Icel. kempa, a warrior, champion; Du. kamp, combat, contest; kampen, kempen, to fight in single combat; kamper, kempe, an athlete, prize-fighter.

It must be observed however that the Scandinavian kapp appears a more ancient form than the nasalised camp. Icel. kapp, contention; kappi, athlete, hero; Sw. driicka i kapp, to drink for a wager; kapp-ridande, a horse-race. So in E. boys speak of capping verses, i. e. contending in the citation of verses; to cap one at leaping is to beat one at a contest in leaping. Hence (with the nasal) W. camp, a feat, game; campio, to strive at games; campus, excellent, surpassing, masterly; Sp. campear, campar, to be eminent; to excel. The word is preserved in Prov. E. camp, a game at football. "Campar, or player at football, pedilusor."—Pr. Pm.

Get campers a ball

To camp therewithal.—Tusser.

Prov. E. to cample, to talk, contend or argue; G. kampeln, to debate, dispute; Prov. E. champ, a scuffle.—Hal. The origin may perhaps be found in the notion of fastening on one in the act of wrestling.

Lith. kabēti, to hang; kimbu, kibtī, to fasten on, to stick to, to hold; kabinti, to hang; kabintis, to fasten oneself on to another; kabe, kabéle, kablys, a hook; sukibtī, to fasten oneself to another; susikibtī, to embrace, fold in each other's arms.

Fin. kimppu (Lap. kippo, kappo), a bundle, and thence the laying hold of each other by wrestlers; Fin. kimpustella, to wrestle; collector, kämpfen, ringen. Koira on kimpussani, canis est in attactu mei, the dog attacks me. Esthon. kimp, bundle, pinch, difficulty; kimplima, to quarrel (comp. G. kampeln, E. cample); kimputama, to wrap up, accuse, challenge, seize. Du. kimpen, to wrestle, luctare, certare.—Kil.

To cope or contend with, which seems another form of the root, is explained by Torriano "serrarsi, attaccarsi l'un con l'altro;" "se harper l'un à l'autre."—Sherwood.

Chance. The happening of things governed by laws of which we are more or less ignorant. Fr. chance; O. Fr. chéance, act of falling, from cheoir, Lat. cadere, Prov. cazer, Sp. caer, Pg. cahir, to fall. Prov. escazenza, accident, chance. It will be observed that accident is the same word direct from the Lat. accidere, to happen (ad and cadere, to fall).

Chance-medley. Fr. chaude meslée, from chaud, hot, and meslée, fray, bickering, fight; an accidental conflict, not prepared beforehand. "Mellée qui était meue chaleurement et sans aguet." M. Lat. calida melleia, calidameya. Meleare, mesleiare, to quarrel, broil.—Carpentier. When the element chaud lost its meaning to ordinary English ears, it was replaced by chance in accordance with the meaning of the compound.

It. mescolare, Fr. mesler, mêler, to mingle, shuffle, jumble.

Chancel.—Chancellor.—Chancery. The part of the church in which the altar is placed is called chancel, from being railed off or separated from the rest of the church by lattice-work; Lat. cancelli. The cancellarii seem to have been the officers of a court of justice, who stood ad cancellos, at the railings, received the petitions of the suitors, and acted as intermediaries between them and the judge. To them naturally fell the office of keeping the seal of the court, the distinctive feature of the chancellors of modern time.

From chancellor; Fr. chancellerie; E. chancery.

Chandler. Fr. chandelier, a dealer in candles; then, as if the essential meaning of the word had been simply dealer, extended to other trades, as corn-chandler. Chandry, the place where candles are kept, from chandler, as chancery from chancellor.

To Change. Prov. cambiar, camjar, It. cambiare, cangiare, Fr. changer. Bret. kemma, to truck, exchange. Cambiare seems the nasalised form of E. chop, chap, to swap, exchange, Icel. kaupa, to deal, as Chaucer's champmen for chapmen.

In Surrey whilome dwelt a company
Of champmen rich and therto sad and true,
That wide were sentin their spicery,
Their chaffare was so thrifty and so new.

Man of Law's Tale. 140.

In like manner Wallach. schimbare, to change, to put on fresh clothes, may be compared with Icel. skipta, E. shift. Wallach. schimbu, cambium, exchange; schimbatoriu, a money-changer. See Chop.

Channel. Lat. canalis, a pipe, water-conduit, from canna, a reed. The word appears in English under a triple form; channel, any hollow for conveying water, kennel, the gutter that runs along a street, and the modern canal.

Chant.—Chantry. Lat. cantare, Fr. chanter, to sing. Hence chantry, a chapel endowed for a priest to sing mass for the soul of the founders.

Chap.—Chip.—Chop. These are forms having a common origin in the attempt to represent the sound made by the knocking of two hard bodies, or the cracking of one, the thinner vowel i being used to represent the high note of a crack, while the broader vowels a and o are used for the flatter sound made by the collision of hard bodies. Sc. chap, to strike, as to chap hands, to chap at a door.—Jam. It is also used in the sense of the E. chop, to strike with a sharp edge, to cut up into small pieces, to cut off; Du. kappen, to cut, prune, hack; Lith. kapoti, to peck, to hack, to cut, to paw like a horse; W. cobio, to strike, to peck.

Again as a hard body in breaking gives a sharp sound like the knocking of hard things together, a chāp is a crack or fissure, properly in a hard body, but extended to bodies which give no sound in breaking, as skin; chapped hands. Compare chark, to creak, and also to chap or crack.—Hal. The use of crack in the sense of fissure is to be explained in the same manner.

The thinner vowel in chip expresses the sharper sound made by the separation of a very small fragment of a hard body, and the term is also applied to the small piece separated from the block.

Chap. A fellow. See Chubby.

Chape. A plate of metal at the point of a scabbard. Hence the white tip of a fox's tail.—Hal. The fundamental meaning is something clapt on, from clap, the representation of the sound made by two flat surfaces striking together. Hence It. chiappa, a patch of lead clapt unto a ship that is shot; a piece of lead to cover the touch-hole of a gun, also a clap, and anything that may be taken hold of.—Fl. Sp. chapa, a small plate of flat metal, leather, or the like; chapar, to plate, to coat; chapeta, chapilla, a small metal plate; Port. chapear, to plate, to apply one flat thing to another. Sp. Chapeleta, de una bomba, Fr. clapet, the clapper or sucker of a ship's pump; Sp. chapeletas de imbornales, the clappers of the scupper holes. The l is also preserved in the Russ. klepan, a strip of metal plate, as those on a trunk.

Chapel. Commonly derived from capella, the cape or little cloke of St Martin, which was preserved in the Palace of the kings of the Franks, and used as the most binding relic on which an oath could be taken.

Tunc in Palatio nostro super Capellam domini Martini, ubi reliqua sacramenta perecurrunt, debeant conjurare.—Marculfus in Duc.

Hence it is supposed the name of capella was given to the apartment of the Palace in which the relics of the saints were kept, and thence extended to similar repositories where priests were commonly appointed to celebrate divine services.

Rex sanctas sibi de capella sua reliquias deferri præcepit.—Ordericus Vitalis.

But we have no occasion to resort to so hypothetical a derivation. The canopy or covering of an altar where mass was celebrated was called capella, a hood. Mid. Lat. capellare, tegere, decken, bedecken; capella, ein himeltz, gehymels (eucharistie, &c.), the canopy over the sacred elements; eine kleine Kirche.—Dief. Sup. And it can hardly be doubted that the name of the canopy was extended to the recess in a church in which an altar was placed, forming the capella or chapel of the saint to whom the altar was dedicated.

Chaplet. A wreath for the head. Fr. chapelet, dim. of chapel, from capa, a cape or cope. The O. Fr. chapel, from signifying a hat or covering for the head, came to be used in the sense of a wreath or garland. “Cappello, ghirlanda secondo il volgar francese.”—Boccaccio in Diez. Hence applied to a circular string of praying beads, called in Sp. for the same reason rosario, a garland of roses, and in It. corona.

Chapman. AS. ceap-man, a merchant. See Cheap.

Chapter. Fr. chapitre, from capitulum, a head or division of a book. The Chapter of a cathedral is the assembly of the governing body. It. capitolo, Sp. capitulo, cabildo, Prov. capitol, Fr. chapitre.

Charcoal. Du. krik-kolen, carbones acapni minusculi, q. d. carbones crepitantes, a sonitu quem ardentis edunt.—Kil. Cricken, carbones creperi.—Bigl. From krieken, to creak, sonum creperum seu stridulum edere.—Minsheu. The E. chirk or chark was also used for a creaking or grating noise, and well-burned charcoal is singularly sonorous when shovelled up or struck together. In like manner Pl. D. klipp-torf, hard strong peat which gives a ringing sound when struck, from klippen, to clink; Du. klinck-sout, the finest salt, the blocks of which are so hard as to ring like flints.—Kil. So chark-coal would be clinking or creaking coal.

Chare. A chare is a turn of work; chare-woman, one who is engaged for an occasional turn. AS. cyre, a turn; cerran, Du. keeren, to turn; Gael. car, turn, twist. Probably from the creaking sound of a wheel turning round, as explained under Car; and see Ajar.

Charge. It. caricare, Ptg. carregar, Fr. charger, to load; properly to place in a car. Lat. carricare, from carrus. To charge an enemy is to lay on.

Lay on, Macduff,

And damned be he who first cries Hold, enough.

Chark.—Chirk. AS. cearcian, to creak, crash, gnash. Lith. kirkti, to cry as a child, creak, cluck; kirklys, a cricket; karkti (schnarren, schreien, krächzen), to whirr as a beetle, cluck, gaggle; kurkti, to croak as a frog; kurkelis, the turtle dove; czurksti, to chirp as sparrows, czirksti, to chirp, twitter.

Charlatan.—Charade. Fr. charlatan, a mountebank, prattling quacksalver, babbler, tattler.—Cot. It. ciarlatore, from ciarlare, to tattle, chatter. Sp. charlar (Valencian charrar, Norman charer—Diez), to prattle, jabber, clack, chat. An imitative word representing the inarticulate chattering or chirping of birds. Chirlar, to prattle; chirriar, to chirp, chirk, creak, hiss. Lith. czurliwoti, to sing or chirp as birds. Compare also Lith. czirbti, to prattle, chatter, with E. chirp.

From Norm. charer, Lang. chara, to converse, seems to be derived charade, a kind of riddle by way of social amusement.

Charlock. A weed among corn; also called kedlock. AS. cedeleac.

Charm. An enchantment. Fr. charme; It. carme, carmo, a charm, a spell, a verse, a rhyme.—Flo. From Lat. carmen, which was used in the sense of magic incantation. “Venefici qui magicis susurris seu carminibus homines occidunt.”—Justin. Inst. Hence carminare, to enchant; incarmatrix, an enchantress. From carmen was formed It. carme and Fr. charmer, as from nomen It. nome and Fr. nommer, to name.—Diez.

The root of the Lat. carmen is preserved in AS. cyrn, noise, shout; OE. charm, a hum or low murmuring noise, the noise of birds, whence a charm of goldfinches, a flock of those birds.

I cherne as byrdes do when they make a noise a great number together.—Palsgrave in Ital.

Vor thi ich am loth smale foze—
Hi me *bicherm*it and bigredeth.

Owl and Nightingale, 280.

Charnel-house. Fr. charnier, a churchyard or charnel-house, a place where dead bodies are laid or their bones kept.—Cot. Lat. caro, carnis; Fr. chair, flesh.

Chary. AS. cearig (from cearian, to care), careful, chary. Du. karigh, sordidus, parcus, tenax.—Kil. G. karg, niggardly.

To Chase. To work or emboss plate as silversmiths do.—B. Fr. chasse, a shrine for a relic, also that thing or part of a thing wherein another is enchased; la chasse d'un rasoir, the handle of a razor; la chasse d'une rose, the calix of a rose.—Cot. It. cassa s. s. Fr. enchasser, It. incassare, to set a jewel, to enchase it, and as the setting was commonly of ornamental work the E. chasing has come to signify embossed jeweller's work.

Chaste. Lat. castus, pure. Pol. czysty, clean, pure, chaste.

Russ. chist', clean, pure, clear, limpid. The origin seems preserved in the Fin. kastaa, to wet, to baptize, whence the notion of cleanliness as the consequence of washing. See Cistern.

To Chasten.—Chastise. Fr. châtier, Lat. castigare, from castus, as purgare from purus.

Chat.—Chatter. To talk, converse, make a noise as birds do, prattle. An imitative word. It. gazzolare, gazzogliare, gazzerare, gazzettare, to chat or chatter as a piot or a jay, to chirp, warble, prate.—Fl. Fr. gazoniller, to chirp, warble, whistle. Hung. csatora (Hung. cs = E. ch), noise, racket; csatorázni, to make a noise, chatter, talk much; csacsogni, to chatter or prattle; csacsogany, a chatter-box, magpie, jackdaw; Pol. gadúc, to talk, gadu-gadu, chit-chat, tittle-tattle. Malay. kata, a word, speak; kata-kata, discourse, talk.

Chats.—Chit. Chat-wood, little sticks fit for fuel.—Bailey. Yorkshire chat, a twig; Suffolk *chait*s, fragments or leavings of food, as *turnip-chait*s, scraps of offal; *blackthorn-chait*s, the young shoots or suckers on rough borders, occasionally cut and faggotted.—Forby. It seems the same word with Swiss kide, kidel, a twig; Welch. cedys, Stafford. kids, faggots of small wood. To chit, to germinate; chits, the first sprouts of anything.—Hal.

The primary import of the syllable chat, chit, chick, chip, is to represent the sharp sound of a crack, then the cracking of the hard case or shell in which something is contained, and the peeping or shooting forth of the imprisoned life within, or on the other hand it may be applied simply to designate the fragments of the broken object. In the latter sense chat may be compared with the Fr. eclats, shivers, splinters, fragments, from the sound of a body bursting or cracking, to which it bears the same relation as chape, a plate of metal, to clap.

It must be observed that the letters p, k, t, are used with great indifference at the end of syllables imitative of natural sounds, as in the E. clap, clack, clatter; G. knappen, knacken, knattern, to crack, crackle. We accordingly find the syllables chat or chit, chick, chip, or equivalent forms used to represent a sharp note, as that made by the crack of a hard substance, or the cry of a bird or the like. To chitter or chipper, to chirp as a bird; to cheep, to cry as a chicken; chip, the cry of the bat.—Hal. Swiss kittern, to titter; Russ. chikat', to cheep or peep as a young bird; OE. chykkyn, as hennys byrdys, pipio.—Pr. Pm. Du. kicken, It. citive, zittire, to utter the slightest sound, zittire, to lament (to speak in a whining tone of voice).—Fl. Fin. kidata, kitista, strideo, crepo, queror; Swiss kiden, to sound as a bell; E. chide, chite (Hal.), to scold (speak in a high tone of voice).

To chip is then to crack, to separate in morsels, to break open and burst forth as a blossom out of the bud, or a bird out of the egg.

The rois knoppis tetand furth thare hede
Gan chyp and kythe their vernal lippis red.

D. V. in Jam.

The egg is chipped, the bird is flown.—Jam.

Du. kippen, eudere, ferire, also to hatch.—Kil. It. schioppare, to crack, snap or pop, to burst open.—Fl. In like manner Prov. E. chick, a crack or a flaw; also to germinate or spring forth. And thus I doubt not has arisen the sense of germination belonging to chat or chit. Chit in the sense of a child is metaphorically taken from the figure of a shoot, as we speak of olive branches, or a sprig of nobility for a young aristocrat. So in Gael. gallan or ogan, a branch, also a youth, a young man; geug, a branch and a young female.

Parallel with E. chit in the latter sense the It. has cito, cita, citello, zitella, a young boy or girl.

Chatteles.—Cattle. Fr. chatel, O. Fr. chaptel, a piece of moveable property, from Lat. capitale, whence captale, catallum, the principal sum in a loan, as distinguished from the interest due upon it. "Semper renovabantur cartæ et usura quæ excrevit vertebatur in catallum."—Cronica Jocelini. Cam. Soc. Then, in the same way as we speak at the present day of a man of large capital for a man of large possessions, catallum came to be used in the sense of goods in general, with the exception of land, and was specially applied to cattle as the principal wealth of the country in an early stage of society.

Juxta facultates suas et juxta catalla sua.—Laws of Edward the Confessor. Cum decimis omnium terrarum ac bonorum aliorum sive catallorum.—Ingulphus.

Rustici curtillum debet esse clausum æstate simul et hieme. Si disclausum sit et introeat alicujus vicini sui captale per suum apertum.—Brompton in Duc.

It should be observed that there is the same double meaning in AS. ceap, goods, cattle, which is the word in the laws of Ina translated captale in the foregoing passage; and this may perhaps be the reason why the Lat. equivalent captale was applied to beasts of the farm with us, while it never acquired that meaning in France.

Cheap. The modern sense of low in price is an ellipse for good cheap, equivalent to Fr. bon marché, from AS. ceap, price, sale, goods, cattle. Goth. kaupon, to deal, Icel. kaupa, to negotiate, buy; Du. koop, G. kaufen, to buy; kaufmann, E. chapman, a dealer. Slav. kupiti, Bohem. kaupiti, to buy. Gr. καπηλος, Lat. caupo, a tavern-keeper, tradesman.—Dief.

Thre shows satisfactorily that the modern sense of buying is not the original force of the word, which is used in the sense of bargaining, agreeing upon, exchanging, giving or taking in exchange, and hence either buying or selling. "Hvert kaup skulu vid tha gifa them heilaga mannc." What shall we then give in exchange, what return shall we make to the holy man.—Tobit. c. 12. "Ek villdi kaupa skipinu vid yckur brædur." I will exchange ships with you two brothers. "Kópa jord i jord," to exchange farm for farm. Thus we are brought to the notion of changing, expressed by the colloquial E. chop; to chop and change, to swap goods; to coff—Hal., Sc. to coup s. s.; horse-couper, a dealer in horses.

Chear. Prov. Sp. cara, O. Fr. chiere, It. cera, the countenance; Fr. chère, the face, visage, countenance, favour, look, aspect of a man. Faire bonne chère, to entertain kindly, welcome heartily, make good cheer unto; faire mauvaise chère, to frown, lower, hold down the head; belle chère et cœur arrière, a willing look and unwilling heart.—Cot. Then as a kind reception is naturally joined with liberal entertainment, faire bonne or mauvaise chère acquired the signification of good living or the reverse, and hence the E. cheer in the sense of victuals, entertainment.

The Lat. cara is used in the sense of face by a writer of the 6th century. “Postquam venire verendam Cæsaris ante caram.”—Diez. Gr. καρα, the head.

Cheat. The eschators or cheaters were officers appointed to look after the king's escheats, a duty which gave them great opportunities of fraud and oppression, and many complaints were made of their misconduct. Hence it seems that a cheater came to signify a fraudulent person, and thence the verb to cheat.

Check. Fr. échec, a repulse, rebuke, a metaphor taken from the game of chess, where the action of a player is brought to a sudden stop by receiving check to his king.

To check an account, in the sense of ascertaining its correctness, is an expression derived from the practise of the King's Court of Exchequer, where accounts were taken by means of counters upon a checked cloth. See Chess.

Cheek.—Chaps.—Chafes.—Chawl. The names of the bodily members composing the mouth and contiguous portions of the neck and face are very ill defined. They are commonly taken from the sounds produced by a violent exertion of the throat as in hawking, retching, &c. Thus the same imitation which gives rise to the Icel. hraki, spittle, Fr. cracher, to spit, and to the E. retch, produces also G. rachen, in a proper sense a great and wide throat or gullet, a voracious beast's open and deep mouth, extended jaws, cheeks, or chaps. In contempt for a mouth.—Küttner. An attempt to represent the sound of guttural exertions by combinations of g and k gives Lap. kâkot, kâklot, to nauseate (properly to retch); Fin. kakaista, to vomit; Bav. gagkern, gagkezen, to cough in a dry and interrupted manner, to stutter; gigken, gigkezen, to make inarticulate sounds in the throat in retching, stuttering, or the like—Schmeller; AS. ceahhetan, E. giggle, to make sounds of such a nature in suppressed laughter; to keck, to hawk in spitting, to reach, choke, cough, whence kecker, keckorn, the windpipe.—Hal. In like manner Icel. kok, quok, the throat, jaws, W: ceg, the mouth or throat; Sw. kek, the jaw; Du. kaecke, the jaw, cheek, gills of fish, AS. ceac, the cheek, jaw; Sc. chouks, the jaws; Lith. kaklas, the neck; Pl. D. käkel, the gab or mouth (whence käkelen, to tattle, chatter); Fris. gaghel, the palate—Kil.; AS. geagl, a jaw, jowl.

In close connexion with the foregoing we find a second series in which the final k or g is converted into a p, b, v, or f.

The transition between the two series is marked by the E. cough, where the guttural is retained in writing, while the pronunciation is the same as if it were written with an f. Galla cufä, to belch, to cough, to keck or clear the throat, rattle in the throat.—Tutschek. G. koppen, kopen, to belch, to gasp.—Schm. Pl. D. gapen, japen, kapen, to gape, yawn, stare; E. gape; Dan. gabe, whence gab, the mouth, throat of an animal; Sw. gap, the throat, and E. chaps, the jaws and loose flesh adjoining. AS. ceaplas, ceafas, geafas, alongside of geaglas, Fris. gagl, and Pl. D. käkel, above quoted. Dan. kiæbe, kiære, the jaw; kiæft, the jaw, muzzle, chops, chaft. Icel. kiæfr, jaw, cheek, throat. Dan. kiægle, kiærle, to jaw, squabble, wrangle. Du. kauwe, kouwe, kuwe, the throat, gullet, cheek, jaw, chin, gills of a fish; kauwen, kouwen, kuwen, to chew, to chaw; and hence again the OE. charyl-bone or chawl-bone, mandibula—Pr. Pm.; chawe-bone, machovere; brancus, a gole or a chawle.—Vocab. in Way.

To Cheep. To make a shrill noise like a young chicken, squeak as a mouse, creak as shoes.—Jam. An imitative word, like peep in the same sense. Lith. czypti, to cheep like a chicken or squeak like a mouse, whence czyptulas, a chicken. Sc. cheiper, a cricket.

Cheese. This word would seem to be derived from a Finnish source. Fin. kasa, a heap, whence kasa-leipa, old bread, bread kept for a year. The Lapps prepare much of their food, as meat and butter, by laying it in a heap till it becomes rancid or half decayed, acquiring a flavour of old cheese. This they call hürsk. From them the practice seems to have been communicated to their Scandinavian neighbours, who treat their fish and coarser flesh in this manner. Iccl. kæs, kös subliquidorum coacervatio, mollium congeries, veluti piscium, carniū, &c. Hence kasa, to heap up such things for the purpose of acidifying them; kasadr, kasulldin, subacidus, veteris casei sapore—Andersen; kæstr, incascatus, made rancid by laying up in a covered heap, used especially of seals' flesh (havkalvekiöd), which is not otherwise considered eatable.—Haldorsen.

The use of the word kæsir, rennet, shows that the Icelanders recognise the identity of the process going on in viands subjected to this process with that which takes place in the formation of cheese, though it is remarkable that they use a different word, ost, for cheese itself, which seems also derived from a Finnish source.

Cherish. Fr. cherir, cherer; to cheer, to cherish.—Cotgr. See Chear.

Cherry. Lat. cerasus. It. cireggia, cirièggia, Fr. cerise; G. kirsche.

Chesnut. Lat. castaneus; Fr. chastagne, châtaigne. Du. kastanie, G. kesten, E. chesten.—Kil. Hence chesten-nut, chestnut.

Chess. It. scacco, Sp. xaquë, Fr. échech, G. schach, from the cry of check! (Pers. schach, king), when the king is put in the condition of being taken. As the board in this game is divided into a number of equal squares of opposite colours, things so marked are called chequered. Probably at one time the game was called the game of checks, subsequently corrupted into chess. It is sometimes written chests in OE.

Chest. AS. cist; G. kasten, kiste; Lat. cista. See Case.

Chevisance. Achievement, acquisition, gain or profit in trade. Fr. chevir, to compass, prevail with, make an end, come to an agreement with. Chef, properly head, then end, accomplishment; achever, to bring to an end, to accomplish.

Chevron. The representation of two rafters in heraldry. Fr. chevron, Prov. cabrion, cabiron, Sp. cabrio, a rafter; cabrial, a beam, cabriones, wedges of wood to support the breech of a cannon. Gr. καπριωλος, το ερεισμα της στεγης, furcilla; προτομος, capriolus.—Gl. Gr. and Lat. in Duc. Wallach. caferu, caprioru, beam, rafter. The word seems unquestionably connected with the name of the goat, and as Fr. cabrer is to rear like a goat, the term may be applied to rafters reared against each other like butting goats. The Hung. for rafter is szarufa, literally horn-wood. On the other hand G. bock is generally applied to a piece of wood on which anything rests, a trestle for sawing on, carpenter's bench, dogs in a fire-place, painter's easel.

Chicane. Fr. chicaner, to wrangle or pottifog it.—Cot. From chique, which must originally, like chiqe, have had the sense of a jag or rag. Chique, a lump of bread—Pat. de Brai; de chic en chic, from little to little—Cot.; chiquot, a scale in the root or end of a nail, sprig of a tree, stump of a tooth; chiqueter, to cut, gash, jag, hack; chiquetteres, cuttings, jags or shreds of cloth. Chicaner then would be equivalent to the E. haggle; to keep hacking and snipping at a thing instead of cutting it outright, and the Fr. chapoter, chipoter, are used in the same sense; chapoter, to hack or whittle, also to haggle, paulter, or dodge about the price of; chipoter, to dodge, miche, paulter.—Cot.

Chick. Du. kieken, a chicken. The shrill cry of the young bird is represented by the syllable cheip, peep, or chick, from the first of which is Lith. czypulas, a chicken, from the second Lat. pipio, a young bird, and from the third E. chicken. Chikkyn as hennys byrdys, pipio, pululo.—Pr. Pm. Russ. chikat', to cheep or peep as a young bird; chij (Fr. j), a finch.

Fin. tiukkata, tiukkua, to chirp or peep like a chicken, tiukka, the chirping of a sparrow; Hung. tyuk, a hen, doubtless originally a chicken; Lap. tiuk, the young of animals in general.

To Chide. AS. cidan, to scold, from the notion of speaking loud and shrill. Swiss kiden, to resound as a bell. Fin. ki-data, kitista, strideo, crepo, queror, knarren, knirschen, klagend tönen.

Chief. Fr. chef, Prov. cap, It. capo, Wallach. capu, pl. capete, Lat. caput, the head. The loss of the syllable it in capit is singular, which reappears however in the derivatives capitano, chieftain, captain. The curtailed form agrees in a singular way with G. kopf, Du. kop, a cup, a head.

Child. It is doubtful whether the l is a modification of the n in Du. and G. kind, as in the case of kilderkin, Du. kindeken, a small cask, Fr. aller, O. Fr. aler, aner, to go, or whether the word is related with Goth. kilthei, the womb, Sw. kull, brood, the children of one marriage, kulla, a maid, Bret. kolen, young of dogs, pigs, &c. It is remarkable that the anomalous plural children agrees with the Du. kinderen.

Chill. The meaning is properly to shiver or cause to shiver.

He said, and Priam's aged joints with chilled fear did shake.

Chapman in R.

Brezza, chillness or shivering.—Fl. Chilly weather is what causes one to shiver: to feel chilly is to feel shivery. Now the notion of shivering or trembling is most naturally expressed by a vibrating, quivering sound which passes, when the vibrations become very rapid, into a continuous shrill sound. The usual sense of twitter is to warble like a bird, but it is explained by Bailey* to quake or shiver with cold. To chatter represents the rapid shaking of the teeth with cold or the broken noise of birds, or of people talking rapidly; to chitter, to chirp or twitter as birds—Hal., then as G. zittern, Du. citteren, to tremble with cold. To titter is a modification of the same word applied to the broken sounds of repressed laughter, while didder is to shiver or tremble.

From the tingling sound of a little bell (Fr. grelot), grelot- ter, is to shiver for cold. On the same principle I regard the Ptg. chillrar, to twitter, Sp. chillar, to crackle, creak, twitter, hiss as meat on the gridiron, as pointing out the origin of the E. chill, signifying properly shivering, then cold. See Chimmer, Chitter. The Pl. D. killen, to smart, has probably the same origin. "De finger killet mi for kälte," my finger tingles with cold.

Chimb. Du. kimme, the rim or edge of a vase, or as E. chimb, the projecting ends of the staves above the head of a cask. Pl. D. kimm s. s., also the horizon. W. cib, a cup; cibaw, to raise the rim, knit the brow; cib-led, of expanded rim; hyd-y-gib, to the brim. Fin. kippa, a cup.

Chime. Imitative of a loud clear sound. Fin. kimiá, acute, sonorous, kimistá, acuté tinnio; kiminá, sonus acutus, clangor tinniens. Chymyn or chenkyn with bellys. Tintillo.—Pr. Pm.

Fin. kummata, kumistá, to sound, as a large bell; kumi-na, resonance; komiá, sounding deep, as a bell; kommata, komistá, to sound deep or hollow.

To Chimmer. Chymerynge, or chyverynge or dyderinge. Frigutus.—Pr. Pm. This word affords a good illustration of the mode in which the ideas of tremulous motion, sound, and light, are connected together. Pol. szemrać, to murmur, rustle; E. simmer, to boil gently, to make a tremulous sound on beginning to boil. Hence shimmer, a twinkling light, and chimmer, to tremble. Wallach. capereare, to simmer, vibrate, sparkle. See Bright, Chitter.

Chimney. Fr. cheminée. It. camminata, a hall; M. Lat. caminata, an apartment with a fire-place, from Lat. caminus, a fire-place. Cammatum, fyrhus.—Ælf. Gloss.

Chin. AS. cinne. Du. kinne. Kinne-backe, the jaw, cheek. Gr. γενυς, the jaw, chin; γενειον, the chin; Lat. gena, the cheek. Bret. gen, the cheek (jaw); genow (pl.), the mouth (jaws); genawi, to open the mouth.

Chine. The back-bone.—B. Is it from the Fr. échine, It. schiena, schená, schina, Ptg. esquena, esquina; or from the Bret. kein, formerly kevn, W. cefn, the back, or finally from Fr. chignon, chesnon, the chine-bone of the neck?

Dicz derives échine and schiena from the OHG. skina, a thorn, doubtless another form of Lat. spina, signifying both a thorn and the back-bone, from the pointed processes with which it is armed. Wallach. spinare, the back-bone. The derivation of chignon is from the chainlike links of which the spine is composed. O. Fr. caignon, caignole, the nape of the neck.—Roquef. Fr. chainon d'une chaîne, the link of a chain; — du col, the chine bone of the neck.—Cot.

Chink. Primarily a shrill sound, as the chink of money, to chink with laughter. Hung. tsengeni, tsöngeni, tinnire. Then, in the same way that the word crack, originally representing the sound made by the fracture of a hard body, is applied to the separation of the broken parts, so also we find chink applied to the fissure arising from the fracture of a hard body, then to any narrow crack or fissure. AS. cinan, to gape, to chink. The same sound is represented in E. indifferently by the syllable clink or chink, and the Du. klincken, to clink or sound sharp, gives rise in like manner to the substantive klincke, a chink or fissure.

In like manner E. chick, representing in the first instance a sharp sound, is provincially used in the sense of a crack, a flaw—Hal.; and from a similar sound represented by the syllable schrick, Bav. schricken, to crack as glass or earthenware; schrick, a chap, cleft, chink.—Kütt. n.

Chink-cough.—Chin-cough. • The hooping cough, from the sharp chink or hoop by which it is accompanied. Du. kichen, kincken, to wheeze; kich-hoest, kinck-hoest, the whooping cough.

Chip. See Chat.

Chirk. See Chark.

To Chirp. A parallel form with chirk, representing the shrill noise of birds or insects, all these imitative terms being liable to great variation in the final consonants. Lith. czir-szkti, to chirp, twitter; czirbti, to prattle; czirpti, to creak, hiss; Sp. chirriar, to creak, chirp, hiss; chirlar, It. ciar-lare, to prattle; Valentian charrar; Norman charer, to tattle, chatter; Prov. E. to chirre, to chirp. In the same sense, to chirm; chirring tongues of birds.—Phacr's Virg. in R. Chyrme or chur, as birds do.—Huloet. in Hal.

Chisel. Fr. ciseau (for cisel), a surgeon's lancet, also a chisel or graving iron.—Cot. It. cisello, Sp. cincel, Ptg. sizel. Fr. cisaille, clipping of coine. Sp. chischas, clashing of weapons.

Chit. See Chat.

To Chitter. To chirp or twitter.

But she withal no worde may sounce,

But chitre as a brid jargowne.—Gower in Hal.

Du. schetteren, stridere, crepare, displodere, et garrire; schetteringe, sonus vibrans, quavering of the voice.—Kil. From signifying a twittering sound chitter is applied to tremulous motion. Chyttering, quivering or shakying for colde.—Huloet in Hal.

It. squittire, to squeak or cry as a parrot, to hop or skip nimbly up and down.

Chitterling. 1. A frill to a shirt.

We make of a French ruff an English chitterling.

Gascoigne in Todd.

2. The small entrails of a hog, from their wrinkled appearance. G. krös, gekrose, a ruff or frill, also the mesentery or membrane which covers the bowels, from kraus, curly; kalbs gekröse, a calf's pluck or chaldron; gänse gekröse, a goose's giblets, called chitters in the N. of E. Fr. freze, a ruff, a calf's chaldron; fresure, the inwards of an animal, pluck, haslets, &c.

The origin of the word in the sense of a frill or wrinkled structure is chitter, to chirp or twitter, then to shiver, the ridges of a wrinkled surface being represented by the vibrations of sound or motion. In the same way the synonym frill is related to Fr. friller, to shiver, chatter, or didder for cold; and compare Pol. kruszyć, to shiver; kruszek, ruffs, also calf's, lamb's pluck or guther, chawdron, &c. Walach. cape-rare, to palpitate; Lat. caperare, to wrinkle.

Chivalry. The manners and sentiments of the knightly class. Fr. chevalerie, from chevalier, a knight. See Cavalry.

Chives. The fine threads of flowers, or the little knobs which grow on the tops of those threads; chivets, the small parts of the roots of plants, by which they are propagated.—B. Chives are also a kind of small onion, the eatable part of which consists of the young fine leaves. Fr. cive, civette, a chive, scallion or unset leek.—Cot. Verte comme chives, as green as leeks.—Body and Soul. The thing signified seems throughout the fine shoots of the plant. Fr. cheveler, to spriggle, to put forth a small root; chevelue, a sucker, a small impe of a plant springing from the root thereof; chippe, chiffe, a rag, jag; E. chife, a fragment, chimp, a young shoot; chibble, to break off in small pieces; shive, a small slice or slip of anything; shiver, a scale or fragment; Pl. D. scheve, the shives or broken fragments of stalk that fall off in dressing flax or hemp; schevel-steen, G. schiefer, stone which splits off in shives or shivers, slate;—all seem developments of the same radical image. See Chat.

Chock-full.—Chuck-full. Swab. schoch, a heap, g'schochet voll, full to overflowing, heaped measure, chock full.—Schmid. In the same dialect schoppen is to stuff, to stop; geschoppt voll, crammed full.

Choir. Fr. chœur, from Lat. chorus, Gr. χορος, a dance in a ring, company of singers and dancers, set of performers in the old tragedy, bearing a sort of accompaniment to the piece with musical recitation.

To Choke.—Chuckle. From Icel. kok, quok, the throat, is formed koka, quoka, to swallow; and from W. ceg, the throat, cegu, to swallow; cegiaw, to choke, or for something to stick in the throat. Sc. chouks, the throat, jaws. The OE. querken, to choke, stands in the same relation to Esthon. kurk, the throat; chekenyd or querkenyd, suffocatus.—Pr. Pm.

As it has been shown under Cheek that the origin of all these terms for the throat and adjacent parts is the imitation of an inarticulate guttural sound, it may be doubtful whether to chuckle or speak in the throat like a self-satisfied person is from a designation of the throat like Sc. chouks, or from direct representation of the tone of voice.

And when the Pardoner them espied, anon he gan to sing,
Double me this burden, chokeling in his throte,
For the Tapstere should here of his merry note.—Chaucer.

To Choose. Goth. kisan, AS. ceosan, Du. kiesen, kieren, koren.

To Chop. The syllable chap or chop represents the sound of a sudden blow; Sc. chap hands, to strike hands, to chap at a door; to chap, to hack, cut up into small pieces. Chap, chaup, choppe, a blow.—Jam. Hence to chop is to do anything suddenly, as with a blow, to turn. A greyhound chops up a hare when it catches it unawares; to chop up in prison, to clap up—Hal.; the wind chops round when it makes a sudden turn to a different quarter.

From the notion of turning round the word chop passes to the sense of exchanging, an exchange being the transfer of something with the return of an equivalent on the other side. Thus we speak of chopping and changing; to chop horses with one, to exchange horses. The Sc. and N. of E. coup, Warwickshire coff, Icel. kaup, keypa, are used in the same sense.

“Sídast bió hann at Holmi thviat hann keipti við Holmstarra bædi löndom oc konom oc lausa fe öllo.” At last he dwelt at Holm because he and Holmstarra had chopped both lands and wives and all their moveables. “Eun Sigridur sem hann átti ádur hengdi sig i hofeno thviat hun villdi eigi manna-kaupin.” But Sigrid whom he before had to wife hanged herself in the temple, because she would not endure this husband-chopping.—Landnamabok, p. 49.

Thus chop is connected with G. kaufen, E. cheap, chapman, &c. In Sc. coup the original sense of turning is combined with that of trafficking, dealing. To coup, to overturn, over-set.—Jam.

The whirling stream will make our boat to coup, i. e. to turn over.

They are forebuyers of quheit, bear and aits, copers, sellers and turners thereof in merchandise.—Jam.

Horse-couper, cow-couper, one who buys and sells horses or cows; soul-couper, a trafficker in souls. To turn a penny is a common expression for making a penny by traffic.

The nasalisation of chap or chop in the sense of exchanging would give rise to the It. cambiare, cangiare, and we actually find champman for chapman, a merchant, in Chaucer. See Change.

Chopino. Sp. chapin, high clog, slipper; chapineria, shop where clogs and patins are sold. From the sound of a blow represented by the syllable chap, chop, as Du. klompe, klopper, clogs, from kloppen, to knock, because in clogs or wooden shoes one goes clumping along, where it will be observed that the initial kl of kloppen corresponds to ch of chopino, as in the examples mentioned under Chape.

Chowse. From the Turkish Chiaus, a messenger or envoy. In 1609 Sir Robert Shirley, who was about to come to England with a mission from the Grand Seignor and the King of Persia, sent before him a Chiaus, who took in the Turkey and Persia merchants in a way that obtained much notoriety at the time. Hence to chiaus became a slang word for to defraud.—Gifford's Ben Jonson, 4. 27. In the Alchemist, which was written in 1610, we find the following passage:

Dap. And will I tell then? by this hand of flesh
Would it might never write good court-hand more
If I discover. What do you think of me,
That I am a chiaus?

Face. What 's that?

Dap. The Turk was here

As one should say, Doe you think I am a Turk?—

Face. Come, noble Doctor, pray thee let's prevail—
You deal now with a noble gentleman,

One that will thank you richly, and he is no chiaus—
Slight I bring you
No cheating Clim o' the Cloughs.—Alchemist.

We are in a fair way to be ridiculous. What think you, Madam, chiaus's d by a scholar?—Shirley in Gifford.

Chrism.—Chrisom. Fr. chrisme, Gr. χρισμα, consecrated oil to be used in baptism; Fr. crismeau, the crisme wherewith a child is anointed, or more properly the cloth or christening cap that was put on the head of the child as soon as it had been anointed.—Cot.

Chough. A jackdaw, AS. ceo; OE. kowe, monedula.—Nominale in Nat. Ant. Du. kauwe, kae; Lith. kowe; Sax. kaycke; Picard. cauc, caurette; Fr. choucas, chouquette, chouette, whence E. chuet.

Peace, chuet, peace.—Shakespeare.

This latter is the same word with the It. civetta, applied to an owl in that language. The origin of all these words is an imitation of the cry of the bird, equivalent to the E. kaw. See Chaff.

Chub.—Chevin. A fish with a thick snout and head. Fr. cherane, cheriniau. Confounded with the bullhead, a small fish with a large head. Mid. Lat. capito, capitanus, caphatenus, cavena, whence the Fr. chevane, E. chevin. G. forms are kaulhaupt (club-head, whence E. gull; capitone, a bullhead, gull or miller's thumb—Fl.), kolbe (club), kobe, koppe, whence apparently the E. chub.—Dief. Sup. Quabbe, quappe, gobio capitatus, capito.—Kil.

Chubby.—Chuffy.—Chuff.—Chap. The proper meaning of chubby, chuffy, seems to be full-cheeked. Fr. dodu, a fat chops or chuff; fat, plump, chuffy, round-cheeked, full-bodied. Joffu, joufflu, chuffy, fat-cheeked, swollen or puffed up in the face.—Cot. AS. geaglas, geaflas, ceaplas, ceaflas, the chops, jaws; Fr. gife, a cheek or chap; giffard, giffard, chuffy, full-cheeked. Wallon. chiffe, check; chofe, smack on the chops; chofu, chuffy, choufeter, chofeter, to kiss on the cheeks, tap the cheeks.

It. ciuffo, the snout of an animal.—Fl. Ceffo, the snout or muzzle, hence an ill-favoured face. Far ceffo, to make faces, to dislike a thing.—Altieri. Thus we may explain the OE. term of abuse, chuff, applied to an old miser, surly, ill-tempered churl. It is in all probability owing to a similar synecdoche that the E. chap has come to signify an individual in low and familiar language. Compare Dan. kieft, jaw, muzzle, chops, which is vulgarly used in the sense of a person.—Molbech. The forms chubby, chuffy, correspond to the Dan. kiæbe, kiæce, a jaw.

The Gael. gob, beak (snout in Irish), is ludicrously applied to the mouth. Compare also the Pol. pysk, snout, muzzle, chops; pyskates, chubby, chub-checked.

Chuck.—Chuckstone. A sharp sound like the knocking of two hard substances together is imitated by the syllables clack, chack, cak, clat, chat, as in Fr. cliquer, to clack, chatter; Wallon. caker, to strike in the hand, the teeth to chatter; Fr. caqueter, to chatter, prattle; E. clatter, &c.

In Sc. we have to chack, to make a noise like two stones knocking together.

Some's teeth for cold did chack and chatter.—Cleland in Jam.

Hence the name of the wheatear or stone-chat (a bird making a noise of that description), in Sc. chack or stane-chacker.

This imitation of the noise of pebbles knocking together has very generally given rise to the designation of a pebble or small stone, as in E. chack-stone, Sc. chuckie-stane. The Turkish has chaghlamak, to make a rippling noise, as water running over rocks or stones, chakil, a pebble; Gr. καχλαινω, to move with a rattling noise like pebbles rolled on the beach; καχληξ, χαλιξ, Lat. calx, calculus, a pebble; so Du. kabbelen, to beat as waves upon the shore, E. cobble, a pebble.

To chuck one under the chin is to give him a sudden blow, so as to make the jaw chack or snap. To chuck in the sense of throwing may have the same origin, or it may signify to toss like a small pebble, as from quoit, a flat stone, to quoit a thing, to throw it like a flat stone.

To Chuckle. See Choke.

Chump.—Chunk. A log of wood, the thick end of anything, a lump. Junk, a lump, a thick piece. See Cob.

Church. AS. cyrice; Gr. κυριακη, κυριακος, the Lord's house, from κυριος, the Lord. Kyrica, kirchia, kuninges hausse.—Dief. Sup.

Churl. AS. ceorl, a man, countryman, husbandman. Icel. karl, a man, male person, an old man. Du. kaerle, a man, a husband, a rustic; G. kerl, a fellow.

Churn. AS. cerene, cyrn; cernan, Du. kernen, to churn. AS. cerran, cyrran, to turn.

Cider. Fr. cidre, Lat. sicera. Siceratores, i. e. qui cervisiam vel pomarium sive piratiam facere sciant.—Charta A. D. 1106 in Mur. Diss. 24. Gr. σικερα.

Cieling. See Ceiling.

Cinder. Fr. cenre, It. cenere, Lat. cineres, ashes. AS. sinder, dross, scum, rust. Du. sindel, slag, scoria; G. sinter, scales, dross of iron; Icel. sindur, iron scoria, i. e. the scales which are driven off when the glowing mass is beaten on the anvil; sindra, to sparkle; sindri, a flint (what strikes sparks).

Cion.—Scion. Fr. scion, cion, a young and tender plant, a shoot, sprig, twig.—Cot. The proper sense is a sucker, as in Sp. chupon, a sucker or young twig shooting from the stock, from chupar, to suck. The radical identity of the Fr. and Sp. forms is traced by Gr. σφων, a tube or hollow reed (from the root sup, sip, suck), also a waterspout (sucking up the water of the sea), compared with It. sione, a kind of pipe, gutter, or quill to draw water through—Fl.; a whirlwind.—Alt. In Fr. cion, Sp. chupon, and E. scion or sucker, the young shoot is conceived as sucking up the juices of the parent plant.

Cipher. Fr. chiffre, It. cifra. Originally the name of the figure marking a blank in decimal arithmetic. Then transferred to the other numeral figures. Marked in Arabic (from whence the notation came to us) by a dot and called çifr, the original meaning of which seems to be a pip or seed.

Circle. Gr. κρικος, κικκος, a ring, circle, clasp. Lat. circa, around, circulus, a circle. The Gr. κρικος differs only in the absence of the nasal from Icel. kringr, hringr, a circle, a ring. In the latter language kring is used in composition as Lat. circum. Icel. kringla, a circle. See Crankle.

Cistern. Lat. cisterna, a reservoir for water. The original meaning of the word seems a washing place. Bohem. čiste, clean (the equivalent of the Lat. castus), whence čistiti, to cleanse, and čisterna, a cleansing place, a cistern. So Lat. lucerna, the place of a light. AS. ærn, ern, a place; domern, a judgment place; hiddern, a hiding place, &c. See Chaste.

Citadel. It. cittadella, dim. of città, cittade, a city. A fort built close to a city, either for the purpose of defence or of control.

Citron. Lat. citrus, a lemon tree.

City. — Civil. Fr. cité, It. città, Lat. civitas, civitat—; ciris, a citizen; civilis, belonging to cities or social life.

To Clack. The syllables clap, clack, clat, are imitative of the noise made by two hard things knocking together. Hence they give rise to verbs expressing action accompanied by such kinds of noise. Fr. claquer, to clack, clap, clatter, crash, crack, creak—Cot.; claquer les dents, to gnash the teeth, to chatter; claquet de moulin, the clapper or clack of a mill hopper. E. clack-dish, or clap-dish, a kind of rattle, formerly used by beggars to extort attention from the by-passers; clack, clack-box, clap, clapper, the tongue.—Hal. Icel. klak, clangor avium; Du. klacken, to strike, or split with noise, smack, lash; klack, a split, crack, sounding blow, sound of blow, clapping of hands; klacke, a whip, a rattle; Fr. claquer, to clap at a theatre. Du. klap, crack, sound, chatter; klappe, a rattle; klappen, to chatter, prattle. Bohem. klekotati, to cluck, rattle, babble; klepati, klopati, to knock, to chatter, prattle. Du. klateren, to clatter, rattle; klater-busse, klacke-busse, a pop-gun.

To Claim. Fr. clamer, to call, cry, claim. Lat. clamare, to call. From the imitation of a loud outcry by the syllable clam. To clam a peal of bells is to strike them all at once. Icel. glamm, tinnitus; Dan. klemte, to toll; Gael. glām, to bawl, cry out; glambar, clambar; Dan. klammer; Gael. clamras, uproar, outcry, vociferation. A parallel root is slam, with an initial s instead of c, as in slash compared with clash. Lap. slam, a loud noise; uksa slamketi, the door was slammed; nialme slam, strepitus verborum (nialme = mouth); slamem, ruin, fall. Sw. slammer, clank, rattle; slamra, to gingle, chatter, tattle.

Clam.—Clamp.—Clump. The idea of a lump or thick mass of anything is often expressed by a syllable representing the noise made by the fall of a heavy body. We may cite the W. clob, a knob, a boss; clobyn, a lump; Lat. globus, a ball, sphere; gleba, a clod; Russ. klub', a ball; Pol. klub, a ball, lump, mass; G. kloben, a lump, bunch; Sw. klabb, klubb, a block, log, trunk, lump of wood; or with the nasal, Sw. klamp, klump, klimp, a block, lump, clot. Icel. klambr, klumbr, a lump; Du. klompe, a clod, clog, lump; E. clump, W. clamp, a mass, bunch, lump.

The notion of a lump, mass, cluster, naturally leads to that of a number of things sticking together, and hence to the principle of connexion between the elements of which the mass is composed. We accordingly find the roots clab, clamp, clam, and their immediate modifications, applied to express the ideas of cohesion, compression, contraction. Thus we have G. kloben, a vice or instrument for holding fast, the staple of a door; kleben, to cleave, stick, cling, take hold of; Du. klobber-saen, coagulated cream, cream run to lumps; klebber, klibber, klubber, birdlime, gum, substances of a sticky nature; Prov. E. clibby, sticky—Hal.; Sw. klibb, viscosity; klibba, to glue, to stick to.

The E. clamp designates anything used for the purpose of holding things together; Du. klampen, to hook things together, hold with a hook or buckle, hold, seize, apprehend; klampe, klamme, hook, claw, cramp, buckle; klamp, klam, tenacious, sticky, and hence moist, clammy. To clame, to stick or glue.—B. Prov. E. to clam, clem, to pinch, and hence to pinch with hunger, to starve, also to clog up, to glue, to daub—Hal.; Du. klemmen, to pinch, compress, strain; klem-vogel, or klamp-vogel, a bird of prey, a hawk. AS. clam, bandage, bond, clasp, prison. G. klamm, pinching, strait, narrow, pressed close or hard together, solid, massy, viscous, clammy; klammer, a cramp, brace, cramp-iron, holdfast.

To Clamber.—Climb. These words are closely connected with clamp. To clamber is properly to clutch oneself up, to mount up by catching hold with the hands or claws. G. klammern, to fasten with cramp-irons, to hold fast with the hands or claws; Dan. klamre, to clamp, to grasp.

In like manner Du. klemmen, to hold tight, to pinch, klemmen, klimmen, to climb. OE. cliver; Prov. E. claver, a claw; Dan. klavre, to claw oneself up, to climb. Dan. klynge, to cling, cluster, crowd; klynge sig op, to clutch or cling oneself up, to climb. The Fr. grimper, to climb, is a nasalised form of gripper, to seize, gripe, grasp.

Clamour. The equivalent of Lat. clamor, but not directly from it, as the word is common to the Celtic and Gothic races. Sw. klammer, Gael. clamras, clambar, glambar, uproar, brawl. See Claim.

Clamp. See Clam.

Clan. A small tribe subject to a single chief. From Gael. clann, children, descendants, i. e. descendants of a common ancestor. W. plunt (the W. p corresponding regularly to Gael. c), offspring, children. The same word is doubtless exhibited in the Lat. clientes, who occupied a position with respect to their patronus, closely analogous to that of the Scottish clansmen towards their chief. Manx cloan, children, descendants; chienney of the children.

Clandestine. Lat. clandestinus, from clam, privately, and that from celo, to conceal. The root which gives rise to Lat. celo produces Fin. salata, to hide, conceal, whence sala, anything hidden, of which the locative case, salaan, is used in the sense of secretly, in a hidden place, as the Lat. clam. Salainen, clandestine.

Clang.—Clank.—Clink. These are imitations of a loud, clear sound, adopted in many languages. Lat. clangor, the sound of the trumpet; G. klang, a sound, tone, resonance; klingen, to gingle, clink, tingle, tinkle, sound. E. clang, a loud sound; clank, a sound made by a lighter object; clink, a sound made by a still smaller thing; the clank of irons, clink of money; Du. klank, sound, accent, rumour.—Hialma. Gael. gliong, tingle, ring as metal, clang.

Clap. An imitation of the sound made by the collision of hard or flat things, as the clapping of hands. Dan. klappre, to chatter (as the teeth with cold); G. klappen, to do anything with a clap; klopfen, to knock, to beat. Du. klappen, kleppen, to clap, rattle, chatter, beat, sound; kleppe, klippe, a rattle; kleppe, a whip, a trap, a noose; klepel, kluppel, a stick, club; Bohem. klepati, to knock, tattle, chatter, tremble; Russ. klepanie, beating, knocking; Bohem. klopiti, to overturn.

To clap in E. is used in the sense of doing anything suddenly, to clap on, clap up.

Clapper. A clapper of conies, a place underground where rabbits breed.—B. Fr. clapier, a heap of stones, &c., whereunto they retire themselves, or (as our clapper) a court walled about and full of nests of boards and stones, for tame conies.—Cot.

Lang. clap, a stone; clapas, clapié, a heap of stones or other things piled up without order. Hence the Fr. clapier, originally a heap of large stones, the cavities of which afforded rabbits a secure breeding place, then applied to any artificial breeding place for rabbits. “Pourta las péiros as clapas,” to take coals to Newcastle.

The proper meaning of the foregoing clap is simply a lump, from the W. clap, clamp, a lump, mass, the primary origin of which is preserved in Lang. clapa, clopa, to knock, whence clapassal, heavy blow of a fist, stick, hammer.

Claret. Fr. vin clairet, vin claret, claret wine. — Cot. Commonly made, he tells us, of white and red grapes mingled together. From clairet, somewhat clear, i. e. with a reddish tint, but not the full red of ordinary red wine. Eau clairette, a water made of aquavitæ, cinnamon, and old red rose-water. Du. klaeret, vinum helvolum, subrubidum, rubellum. It. chiarello.—Kil.

Clarion.—Clarinet. Sp. clarin, trumpet, stop of an organ. It. chiarino, a clairon of a trumpet—Fl., clairon, a clarion, a kind of small, straight-mouthed, and shrill-sounding trumpet. Fr. clair, It. chiaro, clear. Sp. clarinado, applied to animals having bells in their harness.

Clash. Imitative of the sound of weapons striking together. Du. kletse, ictus resonans, fragor; Lang. clas, the sound of bells rung in a volley to give notice of the passage of a corpse; souna de classes, to ring in such a manner for the dead. In E. it is called claming. Fr. glas, noise, crying, bawling, also a knell for the dead. G. klatschen, an imitation of the sound made by striking with the hand against a partition, wall, &c. If such a blow sound finer or clearer it is called klitsch; klitsch-klitsch! pitsch-patsch!—thwick-thwack.—Küttner. Klatsch-büchse, a pop-gun; klatsche, a lash, flap, clap; klatschen, to do anything with a sound of the foregoing description, to patter, chatter, clatter, blab.—Pol. klask! plask! thwick, thwack; klaskać, to clap; klask bicza, the cracking of a whip.—It. chiasso, fracas, uproar; Sp. chasquear, to crack a whip, &c. Gr. κλαζω, to clash as arms.

Clasp. Related to clip as grasp to grip or gripe. But clasp or clapse, as it is written by Chaucer, is probably by direct imitation from the sound of a metal fastening, as we speak of the snap of a bracelet for a fastening that shuts with a snapping sound, or G. schnalle, a clasp, buckle, locket of a door, from schnallen, to snap. Du. gaspe, ghespe, fibula, ansa.

Class. Lat. classis, a distribution of things into groups.

Originally clasis. Identical with Icel. klasi, Sw. Dan. klase, a bunch, assembly, cluster. Eya-klasi, insularum nexus; skeria-klasi, syrtium junctura. Du. klos, klot, globus, sphaera. — Kil.

Clatter. From the imitation of the sound of a knock by the syllable clat, equivalent to clack or clap. Du. klateren, to rattle; klaterbusse, as G. klatsch-büchse, a pop-gun.

Clavicle. The collar-bone, from the resemblance to a key, Lat. clavis, as Mod. Gr. κλειδια του σωματος, the collar-bone, from κλειδι, a key.

Claw.—Clew. The origin of both these words seems to be a form of the same class with W. clob, a lump; Russ. club', a ball, pellet; Lat. globus, a sphere; gleba, a clod. The b readily passes into an m on the one hand, and through v into a w or u on the other. Thus from Lat. globus we have glomus in the restricted sense of a ball of thread, and the same modification of meaning is expressed by the Du. klauw, klouwe (Kil.), E. clew.

We have explained under Clamp the way in which the notion of a mass or solid lump is connected with those of cohesion, compression, contraction. Thus from clamp, climp, clump, in the sense of a mass or lump, we pass to the E. clamp, to fasten together; Du. klampe, klamme, a buckle, hook, nail, claw (what fastens together, pulls, seizes); klampvoghel, a hawk, a bird with powerful talons.

In the same way must be explained the use of the Du. klauwe, klouwe, in the sense both of a ball and also of a claw. The form clew, which signifies a ball in E., is used in Sc. in the sense of a claw. To clew up a sail is to fasten it up, to draw it up into a bunch. To clew, to cleave, to fasten.—Jam. Analogous forms are the Du. kleeven, kljven, kleuen, whence kleuer, ivy, from clinging to the tree which supports it. In the same way is formed the OE. cliver, a claw.

Ich habbe bilc stif and stronge
And gode clivers sharp and longe.

Owl and Nightingale, 269.

A cliver or claw is that by which we cleave to, clew or fasten upon a thing.

With mys he wes swa wmbesete—
He mycht na way get sawfté,
Na with stavis, na with stanis,
Than thai wald clew upon his banis.

Wyntoun in Jam.

The root appears in Lat. under three modifications; clava, a club or massy stick, clavus, a nail, from its use in fastening things together, and clavis, a key, originally a crooked nail. So Pol. klucz, a key, kluczka, a little hook; Serv. klutsch, a key, hook, bend in a stream, identical in sound and nearly so in meaning with the E. clutch, a claw or talon.

Clay.—Clag.—Claggy. The primitive meaning of clag or clog, as of clab or clob, is a lump or solid mass of anything. Hence by the same train of thought, as explained under Clamp, to clag or clog, to stick or adhere; to cleg, to cling; claggy, cloggy, clodgy, sticky; AS. clæg, sticky earth, clay. Dan. kleg, kleg, clammy, viscous, sticky, and, as a noun, loam; Dan. klag, klagge, mud; Prov. E. clags, bogs.

Clean. The proper meaning of the word is shining, polished, as Lat. nitidus, clean, from nitere, to shine. Icel. glan, shine, polish; Gael. glan, radiant, bright, clear, clean, pure; W. glân, clean, pure. The word is fundamentally connected with forms like the Icel. glitta, Sc. gleit, to shine. Icel. glitnir, splendid; G. glatt, polished, sleek, smooth, pretty, neat. The introduction of the nasal gives rise to forms like Sc. glint, glent, a flash, glance; Dan. glindse, glandse, to glitter, shine, whence it is an easy step to forms ending in a simple nasal, as Icel. and Celtic glan.

Clear. Lat. clarus, Icel. klar, clear, clean, pure. This is probably one of the words applicable to the phenomena of sight, that are primarily derived from those of hearing. See Brilliant. G. klirren, Dan. klirre, to clink, gingle, clash, give a shrill sound; Ir. glòr, a noise, voice, speech; glòram, to sound or make a noise ; glor-mhor, glorious, famous, celebrated ; klor, clear, neat, clean. Lat. clarus.

Cleat. A piece of wood fastened on the yard-arm of a ship, to keep the ropes from slipping off the yard ; also pieces of wood to fasten anything to.—B. A piece of iron worn on shoes by country people. Probably a modification of the word clout. Du. kluit, kluyte, a lump, pellet. AS. cleot, clut, a plate, clout. A clate is the thin plate of iron worn as a shoe by racers. The cleats of the yard-arms are probably so named from a similar piece of iron at the extremity of an axletree, provincially termed clout. The clout of iron nailed on the end of an axletree.—Torriano. Axletree clouts.—Wilbraham.

To Cleave. This word is used in two opposite senses, viz. 1, to adhere or cling to, and, 2, to separate into parts. In the former sense we have G. kleben, Du. kleeven, kliejen, to stick to, to fasten ; Prov. E. clibby, Du. kleevig, kleverig, sticky. From clob, a lump, a mass. See Clam.

2. The double signification of the word seems to arise from the two opposite ways in which we may conceive a cluster to be composed, either by the coherence of a number of separate objects, or by the division of a single lump or block into a number of separate parts. Thus from G. kloben, a mass, lump, or bundle (ein kloben flachs, a bunch of flax), klöben, klieben, to cleave. When an object is simply cleft, the two parts of it cleave together. Du. kloue, a cleft, klöuen, chaps in the skin, klouen, klieuen, to chink, cleave, split.—Kil. The Dan. uses klæbe in the sense of adhering, klöve in that of splitting. The Dan. klov, a tongs, bears nearly the same relation to both senses. Sw. klåfwa, G. kloben, a vice, a billet of wood cleft at one end. The designation may either be derived from the instrument being used in pinching, holding together, or from being divided into two parts. Sc. cloff, a fissure, the fork of the body, or of a tree.

The same opposition of meanings is found in other cases, as the Du. klincke, a cleft or fissure, and Dan. klinke, to rivet or fasten together the parts of a cracked dish ; Du. klinken, to fasten together; E. clench. Compare also Fr. river, to fasten, to clench, E. rivet, and E. rive, to tear or cleave asunder, rift, a cleft.

To Clench. See Cling.

To Cleave. To call. From clap, the sound of a blow. Du. kleppen, crepare, crepitare, pulsare, sonare. De klok kleppen, to sound an alarm; klappen, to clap, crack, crackle, to talk as a parrot, to tattle, chat, chatter, to confess; G. klaffen, to prate, chatter, babble, to tell tales. AS. cleopian, clypian, to cry, call, speak, say. Sc. clep, to tattle, chatter, prattle, call, name.

Ne every appel that is faire at iye

Ne is not gode, what so men clappe or cric.—Chaucer.

Clerk.—Clerical.—Clergy. Lat. clerus, the clergy; clericus, Sp. clerigo, one of the clergy, a clerk; clerecia, the clergy, which in Mid. Lat. would have been clericia, whence Fr. clergé, as from clericio, one admitted to the tonsure, Fr. clerison, clerjon. “Chantent li maistre clerc et chantent li clerjon.”—Duc. The origin is the Gr. κληρος, a lot, from the way in which Matthias was elected by lot to the apostleship. In 1 Peter v. 3, the elders are exhorted to feed the flock of God, “not as being lords over God’s heritage,” μηδ’ ως κατακυριευντες των κληρων, “neither as having lordship in the clergie.”—Wiclif in R.

Clever. Commonly derived from deliver, which is used in Scotch and N. E. in the sense of active, nimble.

And with his salte teris gan he bathe

The ruby in his signet and it sette

Upon the wex delivirliche and rathe.

Tro. and Cress. 2. 1088.

The sound of an initial dl and gl or cl are easily confounded. But the prov. Dan. has klöver, klever, in precisely the same sense as the E. clever. Det er en klöver kerl, that is a clever fellow. The word is probably derived from the notion of seizing, as Lat. rapidus from rapio; Sc. gleg, quick of perception, clever, quick in motion, expeditious, from Gael.

glac, to seize, to catch. The Sc. has also cleik, clek, cleuck, cluke, clook (identical with E. clutch), a hook, a hold, claw or talon; to clek or cleik, to catch, snatch, and hence cleik, cleuch, lively, agile, clever, dextrous, light-fingered. One is said to be cleuch of his fingers who lifts a thing so cleverly that bystanders do not observe it.—Jam. Now the OE. had a form, cliver, a claw or clutch, exactly corresponding to the Sc. cleik, cluk.

Hence the OE. to clever, Du. klaveren, kleveren, to claw oneself up, climb, scramble; and hence also I believe is formed the adjective clever in the sense of snatching, catching, in the same way as the Sc. cleik, cleuch, above mentioned.

The bissart (buzzard) bissy but rebuik

Scho was so cleverus of her cluik,

His legs he might not longer bruik,

Scho held them at ane hint.—Dunbar in Jam.

Du. kleverig, sticky; Pl. D. klevisk, klefsk; klefske finger, thievish fingers, to which everything sticks.

Clew.—Clue. A ball of thread; originally from clob (ex- tant in W. clob, a hump, Lat. globus, a sphere, &c.), a lump. Hence Lat. glomus, a ball of twine, Du. klouwe, a ball of yarn, a clew. See Claw, Clam.

To Click.—Clicket. To click, to make a sound with the tongue. It represents a thinner sound than clack. To stand at a shop-door (as shoemakers, &c.) to invite customers.—B. Du. klicken, to rattle (crepitare), klick, a slap, smack; klickers, the soles of a shoe, from their creaking noise; Fr. cliquer, to clack, clap, clatter, click it. E. clicket, any little thing that acts with a clicking noise or snapping motion, as the latch or knocker of a door, a key, &c. Fr. cliquette, a clicket or clapper, a child's rattle, or clack; cliquet, the knocker of a door, a lazar's clicket or clapper.—Cot. Rouchi cliche, a latch or bolt; Bohem. klika, a latch, a trigger; Wallon. clichet, a tumbril, cart that tilts over; Du. kliket, klinket, wincket, a wicket or little door readily moving to and fro (Halma, Biglet.) Rouchi *clinch*er, to move, to stir; Fr. cligner, to wink; clin, a wink.

Prov. E. click, clink, a smart blow.—Baker. Norman clicher, frapper rudement une personne.—Vocab. de Brai. Sc. and N. of E. cleik, click, to snatch, catch, seize; to cleke, to snatch, grasp, or strike.—Hal. Sw. klencka, klønga, to snatch, to seize.—Ihre. Here, as well as in the case of the G. klinke, klinge, a latch, the etymology becomes confused between the idea of something moving with a clicking or snapping action, and the idea of fastening expressed by the root clink, clinch, clench. See Clinch.

Client: See Clan.

Cliff.—Clift. The primary meaning seems a cleft or cloven rock, a steep face of a rock, precipitous side of a mountain. Fourchure, the cliff (or in other MS.), clift.—Bibelsworth. Icel. kleyf from cliufo, to cleave. G. kluft, a fissure in a lock, cavern, grotto, hollow place, a cleft, clift or cliff. Du. kluchte, klufte, krufte, a den, cavern, crypt. Sc. cleugh, a narrow hollow between precipitous banks, narrow valley, precipice, rugged ascent. E. clough, ravine, narrow glen, cliff, fork of a tree.—Hal. Du. kleppe, klippe, a rock, cliff, cave. Bav. stein-kluppen, cleft in a rock. Dan. klippe, rock.

Climate. Lat. clima, climate, region; Gr. κλιμα, -τος (from κλωω, to bend, sink, verge), an inclination, declivity, slope; a region or tract of country considered with respect to its inclination towards the pole, and hence climate, temperature.

Climb. See Clamber.

To Cling.—Clench.—Clinch. To cling, to stick to, to contract. AS. clingan, to shrink, to wither. A Sussex peasant of the present day speaks of a clung bat, a dry stick. The origin is a nasalised form of clog, clag, in the sense of a lump or mass, as in Du. klonge, Swiss klungle, a ball of thread; glungelin, globulus (Schmeller); Dan. klynge, a cluster, knot. Hence Dan. klynge, to cluster, to crowd, to draw together. Klynge sig ved, to cling to a thing; klynge sig op, to climb up. Sw. klenga, to clutch, to climb. Prov. E. to clunge, to crowd or squeeze, clungy, sticky.—Hal.

The original sense of a lump or thick mass is preserved in prov. E. clunchy, thick and clumsy; Swiss kluntschi, a ball of thread; Pl. D. klunkern, small lumps, klönken, clogs, wooden-soled shoes. Then as a lump is a mass of materials cohering together, klinken, inklinken, as well as klingen, inklingen, to contract, shrink, shrivel, crease. Du. klinken, to fasten, to clench a nail. “Andromeda wierd aan eene rots geklonken.” Andromeda was fastened to a rock.—P. Marin. Dan. klinke, a rivet, something put in to fasten the parts of a broken body together. Bav. klanken, klinken, to knot together; giclénchan, conserere manus; gichlanhit, tortus; klank, a noose. Fr. clanche, G. klänge, klinke, the latch of a door; E. to clench the fist, to hook the fingers together and contract the hand, so as to form a ball; to clinch a nail, to fasten it by bending the projecting end back upon itself. Prov. E. clinch, a claw, a fang.

A clinch in the sense of a joke must probably be understood as the G. kniff, a pinch, and also a cunning trick, sleight, fraud, quirk.

Clink. The noise of a blow that gives a sound of a high note. See Clang. In imitative words the same idea is frequently expressed by a syllable with an initial cl, and a similar syllable without the l. Thus chink is also used for a shrill sound. So we have clatter and chatter in the same sense; Gael. gling, E. gingle, Fr. quincailler, Norman clincailler, a tinman. The E. clink was formerly used like chink in the sense of a crack (because things in cracking utter a sharp sound), Du. klincke, rima, parva ruptura, fissura, Ang. clinke.—Kil.

To Clip. To snip, cut with shears in the first instance. From an imitation of the snapping noise made by the two blades of the shears. Compare snap and snip. Du. klippen, kleppen, sonare, whence the designation of different actions done with a rapid, snapping action; klippe, knippe, a trap —Kil. ; Sw. klippa, to wink, blink. G. klipp, a clap ; klippchen, knippchen, a rap or fillip ; knippen, schnippen, to snap or fillip, schnippen, to snip. The Swiss kluben, klübeln, are used in the sense of snapping, while klüben, klupen, klumpen, to nip or pinch, exhibit the same development of meaning as is found in the E. clip, to compress, embrace. Swiss klupe, the fire tongs, and in low language the fingers, from their pinching, clutching action. In the same way from G. knippen, to snap, kneipen, kneifen, to pinch, to nip.

Cloak. Flem. klocke, toga, pallium, toga muliebris.—Kil. Bohem. klok, a woman's mantle.

Clock. Fr. cloche, G. glocke, Du. klocke, a bell. Before the use of clocks it was the custom to make known the hour by striking on a bell, whence the hour of the day was designated as three, four of the bell, as we now say three or four o'clock. It is probable then that clocks were introduced into England from the Low Countries, where this species of mechanism seems to have inherited the name of the bell which previously performed the same office. Sw. klocka, a bell, a clock.

The word clock is a variation of clack, being derived from a representation of the sound made by a blow, at first probably on a wooden board, which is still used for the purpose of calling to service in the Greek church. Serv. klepalo, the board used for the foregoing purpose in the Servian churches, G. brett-glocke, from klepati, to clap or clack, to beat on the board. Esthon. kolkma (with transposition of the vowel, related to clock, as G. kolbe to E. club), to strike, to beat, kolkima, to make a loud noise, kolki-laud, a board on which one beats for the purpose of calling the family to meals. Bohem. hluk, noise, outcry, hlučeti, to resound. Icel. klaka, clangere. Gael. clag, Ir. clagaim, to make a noise, ring ; clag, clog, a bell.

Clod.—Clot. The closely allied forms clob, clod, clog, with numerous modifications, are found in the sense of a thick round mass, and seem fundamentally to arise from a represensation of the noise made by a mass of something heavy falling to the ground. Dan. klods, Sw. klots, a block, log, clog; Prov. E. clodge, a lump of clay—Hal.; Sw. klot, a bowl, ball, sphere; G. kloss, a clod, lump, shapeless mass, ball, sphere; Du. klos, kloot, a ball; klot, klotte, a clod, clot, lump.

As clab, clob are nasalised in clamp, clump, so, corresponding to clod, clot, we have Dan. klunt, a log, block; Du. klonte, a clod, globe, lump. Du. klobber-saen, kloter-melck, klonter-melck, clotted cream, coagulated milk.

The close connexion between the ideas of a thick mass and the action of striking is seen in E. clout, a blow, Du. klotsen, kloteren, klunderen, to beat, batter.

Clog. 1. For the sense of a thick mass see Clod. The Gael. has both clod and plod in the sense of a clod, and in the same language corresponding to clog we find ploc, any round mass, a clod, block, bung, stopper; pluc, a lump, bunch, tumour.

To clog is to stick together in a mass, to accumulate in a mass and cause a stoppage.

2. A wooden shoe, a shoe with a wooden sole. From clog in the sense of a block or clumsy lump of wood. They are also called clumpers.—Hal. Du. klopper, klompe, klomper; Pl. D. klönken. In like manner from It. zocco, a log, zoccoli, clogs, pattens. Mod. Gr. τζοκον, log, stump of a tree, τζοκαρον, a clog, wooden shoe; G. klotz, a block, log, clog; klotz-schuh, a clog, wooden shoe.

Cloister. G. kloster, Fr. cloitre, a monastery. Lat. claustrum, from claudo, clausum, to shut.

Closhe. The game called ninepins, forbidden by 17 Ed. IV. Du. klos, a ball, bowl; klos-bane, a skittle-ground; klossen, to play at bowls. See Clod.

Cloth.—Clothe. AS. clath, cloth, clathas, clothes; G. kleid, Icel. klædi, a garment. Properly that which covers and keeps one warm. W. clyd, warm, sheltered; lle clyd, a warm place; dillad clydion, warm clothes (dillad, clothes). Bret. klet, sheltered; Ir. cludaim, to cover up warm, to cherish, nourish; cludadh, a cover or coverture; Gael. clumhar, cluth mhor, warm, sheltered; cluthaich, cluth-eudaich, clothe, make warm. Lat. claudere, to shut.

Cloud. Correctly explained by Somner as clodded vapours, vapours drawn into clods or separate masses.

Vapours which now themselves consort
In several parts, and closely do conspire,
Clumpered in balls of clouds.—More in R.

O.Du. clot, a clod, clote, a cloud; “eene vurige clote,” a fiery cloud.—Delfortrie. It. zolla, clod, lump of earth; zolla dell'aria, the thick and scattered clouds in the air.—Fl.

So also from Fr. matte, motte, a clod or clot, ciel mattoné, a curdled sky, a sky full of small curdled clouds.—Cot. Clowdys, clods.—Coventry Mysteries in Hal.

Clove. 1. A kind of spice resembling little nails. Du. naegel, kruyd-naegel (kruyd = spice); G. nügelein, nelke (dim. of nagel, a nail); It. chiodo di girofano, Fr. clou de girofle, Sp. clavo di especias, from Lat. clavus, a nail.

2. A division of a root of garlick. Du. kluyve, kluyfken loocks; Pl. D. klöce, klaven; een klaven krustlook, G. eine spalte knoblauch, a clove of garlick, from Du. klieven, Pl. D. klöven, to cleave or split, Du. klove, a fissure. It. chiodo d'aglio.

Clover. A plant with trifid leaves. AS. clæfer; Du. klaver; Pl. D. klever, from klöven, to cleave.

Clout. AS. clut, a patch. The primary sense is a blow, as when we speak of a clout on the head. Du. klotsen, to strike. Then applied to a lump of material clapped on or hastily applied to mend a breach. In the same way E. botch, to mend clumsily, from Du. botsen, to strike; E. cobble, in the same sense, from W. cobio, E. cob, to strike.

Clown. The significations of a clod or lump, of thumping clumsy action, and of a rustic unpolished person, are often connected. Du. kloete, a ball, a lump, block, stock, also homo obtusus, hebes (Kil.), whence the name of Spencer's shepherd Colin Clout. G. klotz, a log, klotzig, blockish, log-gish, coarse, unpolished, rustic.—Küttner. Prov. E. clodge, a lump of clay, clotch, to tread heavily; chunch, a thump or blow, a clod-hopper; clunchy, thick and clumsy.—Hal. Gael. plod, a clod, E. to plod, to walk heavily or clumsily; Gael. plodhaisg, a booby or awkward person. Du. klotte, klonte, a clod; klonen, klunderen, to knock, to beat; Prov. E. to clointer, chunter, to tread heavily, walk clumsily. The word clod is frequently used in the sense of a clown. Now clown bears the same relation to the Du. klunte as clam to clump, or as the form klonen, above quoted, to the synonymous klunderen. As the initial c is easily lost from many of these words beginning with cl (compare clog, log, clump, lump, chunch, lunch), it can hardly be doubted that clown is identical with lown, and clout with lout.

This loutish clown is such that you never saw so ill-favored a vizor.—
Sidney in R.

To Cloy. From clog, a thick mass. Fr. encloyer (to stop with a clog or plug), to cloy, choke or stop up.—Cot. A piece of ordnance is said to be cloyed, when something has got into the touch-hole. The same consonantal change is seen in clag, claggy, sticky, and clay, a sticky, clammy earth.

The sense of stopping up is frequently expressed by the word for a lump or bunch, as Fr. boucher, to stop, from O.Fr. bousche, a bunch, tuft. The Sw. klump, a lump, and tapp, a bunch, whip, are also used in the sense of a stopper.

Club. W. clob, a boss, a knob; clobyn, a large mass, a lump, Russ. klub', a ball, ball of thread. Sw. klabb, a log. Du. kloppen, G. klopfen, to knock. Du. kluppel, a club, cudgel. G. (with transposition of the liquid) kolbe, butt end, club, mace.

To Cluck. Imitative of the note of a hen calling her chickens. Du. klocken, Fr. glousser, Lat. glocire, Sp. cloquear, It. coccolare.

Clump. Related to club as stump to stub, bump to bob, hump to hob. Icel. klumbr, a lump, ball, klumba, a club; Du. klompe, a clod, lump. G. klumpen, a lump, mass, heap.

Dan. klump-fodet; Icel. klumbu fotr, E. club-footed; Dan. klumpe, to clot.

Clumsy. It will very often be found, when we are distracted by two plausible derivations, that they may both be traced to the same ultimate source. If we were not acquainted with the OE. forms we should confidently derive clumsy from clump, in analogy with Du. kluntet, awkward, clumsy, from klunt, a clod, log; Sw. klubbig, klumpig, klunsig, lumpish, clumsy, from klub, klump, kluns, a block, knob, lump; or Du. lompsch, stupidus, piger, from lompe, a lump. But the immediate origin of the E. word is from the figure of hands contracted or stiffened with cold. Pl. D. klamen, klomen, verklamen, to be stiffened with cold; Icel. klumsa, suffering from cramp. OE. comelyd, tumbled, clommed, clomsid, stiffened with cold.—Pr. Pm. Thou clomsest for cold.—P. P. Our hondis ben aclumsid.—Wicliff in Way. Havi de froid, stiff, clumpse, benumbed.—Cot. Thus clumsy is awkward and inefficient, like one benumbed with cold. Fin. kontas, stiff with cold, and thence unskillful, slow.

Cluster. A group, bunch. From the notion of sticking together. Du. klos, a ball; klisse, klette, a ball, a clot; klissen, to stick together; klister, kluster, paste, viscous material, also a cluster, a clove of garlick.

Clutch. Sc. cleik, clek, to snatch, seize, properly to do anything with a quick, smart motion, producing a noise such as that represented by the syllable click. Hence cleik, clek, cleuk, cluik, cluke, clook, an instrument for snatching, a claw, clutch, hand; to cleuk, to grip, lay hold of, clutch. Compare Swiss klupe, claws, tongs, fingers (familiar), from klupen, to pinch.

Clutter. Variation of clatter, a noise.

Clyster. Fr. clystere, Gr. κλυστηρ, from κλυζω, to wash, to rinse, as Fr. lavement, from laver, to wash.

Coach. The Fr. coucher became in Du. koetsen, to lie, whence koetse, koetseken, a couch, and koetse, koetsie, koetswagen, a litter, carriage in which you may recline, a coach.

Coal. Icel. kol, G. kohle. Ihre supposes the original meaning of the word to have been fire, as in some dialects of Swed. kylla is to kindle; kylle, dry sticks for kindling; Icel. koljarn, steel for striking fire; kolbytur, a fire raiser.

Coarse. Formerly written course, ordinary; as in the expression of course, according to the regular order of events. A woman is said to be very ordinary, meaning that she is plain and coarse.

Coast. Lat. costa, a rib, side; Fr. coste, s. s. also a coast.

Coat. Fr. cotte, a coat or frock, It. cotta, any kind of coat, frock, or upper garment. See Cot. 3.

Coax. The *OE. cokes was a simpleton, gull, probably from the Fr. cocasse, one who says or does laughable or ridiculous things.—Trevoux. Cocasse, plaisant, ridicule; cocosse niais, imbecille.—Hécart. To cokes or coax one then is to make a cokes or fool of him, to wheedle or gull him into doing something.

The primary image is probably, as in Fr. niais, béjqune, a young bird just out of the egg-shell. Coquar, an egg-shell, also a proud gull, malapert coxcomb, rash or forward cokes; coquassier, a seller of egg-shells.—Cot. See Gull.

Cob. A blow, and thence as usual a lump or thick mass of anything. A cob, the thick head of maize; a cobnut, a large round nut; cob-coals, coals in lumps; cob-stones, large stones; a cobber, a thumper, bouncer, great falsehood. W. cobio, to thump, to bunch; cob, a knock or thump, a tuft; cobyn, a tuft, bunch, cluster.

To Cobble. Frequentative of cob, to knock. Hence to mend by clapping on a patch, as botch, to mend clumsily, from Du. botsen, to strike.

Cobble. A round stone, a pebble. From the sound of pebbles rolling on the beach, as pebble, in like manner from Dan. pible, to purl. Du. kabbelen, to beat as water against a bank or on the shore, to splash, dash. It is also called coglestone, It. cuogolo (Skinner), agreeing with Gr. καχληξ, Turk. chakil, a pebble, from a like derivation given under Chuck.

Cobweb. A spider's web. E. atter-kop, a spider. Flem. kop, koppe, a spider, koppen-gespin, spinne-vebbe, a cobweb. W. pryf-coppyn, a spider (pryf = grub, vermin). The form attercop seems to give the full meaning of the word, poison-bag or poison-pock. The Fris. kop is bubble, pustule, pock, that is, a pellicle inflated with air or liquid. T' waer kopet, the water boils.—Outzen. Dan. kopper (pl.), small pox (pocks); kop-ar, E. pock-arr, a pock mark. Finn. kuppa, a bubble, boil, pustule.

According to Ihre, the bee was known by the name of kopp in O. Sw., probably for the same reason as the spider, viz. from bearing a bag, only of honey instead of poison. The contrast between the bee and the spider as collectors, the one of sweets and the other of poisons, is one of long standing.

Cochineal. Sp. cochinilla, a wood-louse, dim. of cochina, a sow, from some fancied resemblance. The wood-louse is still called sow in parts of England.—Hal. When the Spaniards came to America they transferred the name to the animal producing the scarlet dye, which somewhat resembles a wood-louse in shape.

Cockatrice. A fabulous animal, supposed to be hatched by a cock from the eggs of a viper, represented heraldically by a cock with a dragon's tail. Sp. cocatriz, cocudriz, cocodrillo; a crocodile. Cocatrixe, basiliscus, cocodrillus. — Pr. Pm. A manifest corruption of the name of the crocodile.

Cock. 1. The male of the domestic fowl. From the cry represented by the Fr. coquelicog, coquericot, Lang. coucouricou. Bohem. kokrati, to crow, kokot, a cock. Serv. kokot, the clucking of a hen, kokosch, a hen. Lith. kukti, to cry, to howl; kukauti, to cry as the cuckoo or the owl. Hung. kakas, Esth. kuk, a cock.

To Cock, applied to the eye, hat, tail, &c., signifies to stick abruptly up. Gael. coc-shron, a cocked nose. The origin is the sound of a quick sudden motion imitated by the syllable cock. It. coccare, to clack, snap, click, crack; coccarla a qualcuno, to play a trick, put a jest upon one.—Fl. Hence cock of a gun (misunderstood when translated by G. hahn), the part which snaps or clicks.

To cock is then to start up with a sudden action, to cause suddenly to project, to stick up. And as rapid snapping action is almost necessarily of a reciprocating nature, the word is used to express zigzag movement or shape, and hence either prominent teeth or indentations. The cock of a balance is the needle which vibrates to and fro between the cheeks. The cog of a wheel is a projecting tooth, while the It. cocca, Fr. coche, is the notch or indentation of an arrow.

2. A cock of hay. Probably from the notion of cocking or sticking up. Fin. kokko, a coniform heap, a hut, beacon. A small heap of reaped corn. Dan. kok, a heap, a pile.

3. A boat; cock-swain, the foreman of a boat's crew. It. cocca, cucca, a cock-boat.—Fl. Dan. kog, kogge, Icel. kuggi, s. s. The Fin. has kokka, the prow of a vessel, perhaps the part which cocks or sticks up, and hence the name may have passed to the entire vessel, as in the case of Lat. puppis, properly the poop or after-part of the ship, or of bark, a ship, from Icel. barki, throat, then the prow or front of a ship.

Cockade. Fr. coquarde, a Spanish cap, also any cap worn proudly or peartly on the one side (Cot.), i. e. a cocked-hat, consisting originally of a hat with the broad flap looped up on one side. Then applied to the knot of ribbon with which the loop was ornamented. In Walloon the r is lost as in English; cockád, a cockade.—Remacle.

To Cocker. See Cockney.

Cocket.—Cocksy. Coquart, foolishly proud, cocket, mala-pert. From the strutting pride of a cock. Coqueter, to chuck as a cock among hens; to swagger or strowt it as a cock on his own dunghill.—Cot.

Cockle. 1. A weed among corn. Fr. coquiole, Lith. ku-kalas, Pol. kakol, kakolnica, Gael. cogal.

2. A shell-fish. Lat. cochlea; Gr. κοχλος, a snail, snail-shell, shell-fish.

To Cockle. The primary meaning is to shake or jerk in different directions, from cock, a snap or rapid movement. Du. kokelen, to juggle, from the rapid movements of a juggler's tricks. Prov. E. to coggle, to be shaky, cocklety, unsteady.—Hal. A cockling sea is a sea jerked up into short abrupt waves by currents in different directions.

It made such a short cockling sea as if it had been in a race where two tides meet; for it ran every way—and the ship was tossed about like an egg-shell, so that I never felt such uncertain jerks in my life.

Dampier in R.

The term is then applied to any texture, as paper or cloth, the surface of which is rendered uneven by shrinking after being wet, compared to the surface of water shaken into prominences and hollows.

Cockney.—Cocker. The original meaning of cockney is a child too tenderly or delicately nurtured, one kept in the house and not hardened by out-of-doors life; hence applied to citizens, as opposed to the hardier inhabitants of the country, and in modern times confined to the citizens of London.

“Cokney, carifotus, delicios, mammotrophus.” “To bring up like a cocknaye—mignoter.” “Delicias facere—to play the cockney.” “Dodelineur—to bring up wantonly as a cockney.” —Pr. Pm., and authorities cited in notes. “Puer in deliciis matris nutritus, Anglice a cokenay.”—Hal. Cockney, niais, mignot.—Sherwood.

The Du. kokelen, keukelen, to pamper (the equivalent of E. cocker) is explained by Kilian, “nutrire sive fovere culina,” as if from koken, to cook, but this is doubtless an accidental resemblance. The Fr. coqueliner, to dandle, cocker, fedle, pamper, make a wanton of a child, leads us in the right direction. This word is precisely of the same form and significance with dodelineur, to dandle, loll, lull, fedle, cocker, hug fondly, make a wanton of, [but primarily] to rock or jog up and down; dodelineur, the rocker of a cradle; dondelineur de la tête, to wag the head; dodelineux (the same as coquelineux), fantastical, giddy-headed. The primitive meaning of cocker then is simply to rock the cradle, and hence to cherish an infant. See Cockle, Cock.

Cod. A husk or shell, cushion. Icel. koddi, a cushion, Sw. kudde, a sack, bag, pod. Bret. kód, gód, gódel, a pocket. G. schote, pod, husk. W. cód, cwd, a bag or pouch. It seems the same word with Fr. cosse, gousse, a husk, cod, or pod, whence coussin, It. coscino, a cushion, a case stuffed with something to make it bulge out.

Perhaps the original sense is simply something bulging, a knob or bump, an idea commonly derived from a word signifying to knock. Now we have Fr. cosser, It. cozzare, to butt as a ram. Du. kodde, kodse, a club.

As in words with an initial cl the l is very moveable, we may perhaps identify the Fr. cosse, a husk, with Bret. klos, klosen, a box or any envelope in general; klosen-gisten, the husk of a chesnut. Thus we are brought round to the Du. kloss, a ball or sphere, and the E. clot, clod, and as the latter appears in Gaelic in the double form of clod or plod, we find the same change of initial in the E. cod, pod; Dan. pude, a pillow.

To Coddle. 1. To pamper or treat delicately. Fr. cadel, a castling, starveling, whence cadeler (to treat as a weakly child), to cocker, pamper, fedge, make much of.—Cot. Lat. catulus, It. catello, Prov. cadel, Bohem. koč, a whelp; kotiti, to whelp, bring forth young (of sheep, dogs, cats, &c.); Pol. kotny, big with young, of hares, cats, sheep.

2. To boil lightly, whence codlin, a young apple fit for boiling; green peas.—Hal. Pl. D. koddeln, to give a hasty wash.

Cemetery. Gr. κοιμητηριον, a place for sleeping in, then applied to the place of final rest, a burial-place, from κοιμαω, to set to sleep.

Codger. A term of abuse for an elderly person; an old codger, a miser.

From G. kotzen, to spit, kotzer, a spitting or spawling man or woman, also an old caugher.—Küttner. So from Lith. kraukti, to, croak, to groan, breathe with pain, sukraukelis, a croaker, an old man.

Coffer.—Coffin. Gr. κοφινος, Lat. coffinus, a basket. It. cofano, cofaro, any coffin, coffer, chest, hutch, or trunk. Fr. coffre, a chest or coffer, the bulk or chest of the body. Bret. kóf, kór, the belly; AS. cof, a cave, cove, receptacle. Swab. kober, a basket. It. coffa, a gabion or wicker basket. Fr. cofin, a coffin, a great candle case or any such close and great basket of wicker.—Cot. Fin. kopp, a hollow case. See Cave.

Cog.—Coggle. To coggle is to be shaky, to rock; cogly, unsteady, rocking; cockersome, unsteady in position, threatening to tumble over.—Jam. Prov. E. coggle, keggle, kickle, tickle, easily moved.—Wilbraham. Ir. Gael. gogach, nodding, fickle, wavering, reeling. Ir. gogam, to make much gesture. E. gog-mire, a quagmire; to jock, to jolt; jocky, uneven, rough—Hal., joggly, unsteady, shaky; to jogger, joggle, to shake, to jog; Fr. choc, a shock, a motion brought to a sudden stop. The primary origin is seen in It. coccare, to clack, snap, click, crack. The syllable kok then, with the variations gog, cog, jog, becomes a root giving rise to words applied to any sudden motion, such as that which makes a snap, then to reciprocating motion, consisting of a series of jerks or jogs, then to the uneven surface traced out by a jogging motion. Hence a cog, Sw. kugge, an individual prominence in an indented wheel. It. cocca, a dent of anything, a notch; where the term is applied to the indentation instead of the prominence. With an initial s, E. shog, to jolt, Icel. skaga, to jut out, skagi, a promontory, corresponding to E. shaggy, rough, hanging in long locks.

To cog in the sense of cheating is from the image of deceiving by rapid sleight of hand. Du. kokelen, to juggle; It. coccarla ad uno, to put a trick upon one; coccare, to laugh at, mock, scoff. Sp. coçar, to mock, make mocking or ridiculous gestures, to cajole, wheedle. E. cog, gaber, flatter—Sherwood; lusingare, lisciar il pelo.—Torriano.

Coif. A cap for the head. Fr. coiffe, It. cuffia, Mod. Gr.

σκούφια. Apparently from the East. Arab. kufiyah, a head kerchief.

Coil. To coil a cable, to wind it round in the form of a ring, each fold of rope being called a coil. Port. colher hum cabo, to coil a cable; colher, It. cogliere, Sp. coger, Lat. colligere, to gather. In like manner Sp. coger la ropa, to fold linen.

Coil. Noise, disturbance. Gael. coileid, a stir, movement, or noise; perhaps from goil, boiling, vapour, fume, battle, rage, fury; goileam, prating, vain tattle. The words signifying noise and disturbance are commonly taken from the agitation of water.

Coin. To coin money is to stamp money, from Lat. cuneus, Fr. coin, quin, the steel die with which money is stamped, originally doubtless from the stamping having been effected by means of a wedge (Lat. cuneus, Fr. coin). Coin in O. Fr. was frequently used for the right of coining money. Sp. cuña, a wedge; cuño, a die for coining, impression on the coin. Muratori endeavours to show that the word is really derived from the Gr. εικων, an image, whence the Lat. iconiare, in the sense of coining money. So from W. bath, a likeness, arian bath, coined money, bathu, to make a likeness, to coin.

Coit. To toss the head, to throw. To coit a stone.—Hal.

Coit.—Quoit. Originally a flat disc of stone used for the purpose of throwing to a distance. Perhaps from coit, to throw, as it is sometimes called a coiting-stone.—Hal. Compare Sc. chuckie-stane, a pebble, with chuck, to throw. But this leaves the question open whether the sense of throwing be derived from the designation of the thing thrown, or vice versâ. The Du. has kae, kaeye, keye, silex, saxum (probably from kaede, which may be the same word with coit); and de kaeye schieten, ludere silice, lapide, disco; certare disco, saxeo, ferreo, aut plumbeo—Kil.; to play at quoits.

Coke. The carbonaceous cinder of coals left when the bituminous or gaseous blazing portion has been driven off by heat. Coaks, cinders; a grindle-coke, a remnant of an old worn-down grindstone. Colke, the core of an apple.

All erthe may well likened be
 To a rounde appul on a tre.
 That even amydde hath a colke :
 And so it may to an egges yolke,
 For as a dalk (hollow) is amyrdward
 The yolke of the egge when hit is hard,
 So is helle put (pit) as clerkus telles
 Amidde the erthe and nowher elles.—Hal. v. dalk.

Wall. chauke, germe de l'œuf.—Grandg. The term colk or coke then appears to signify a hollow, then the empty remnant of a thing when the virtue is taken out of it. It may accordingly be explained from the Gael. caoch, empty, blind, hollow; caochag, a deaf nut, nut without a kernel, the coke of a nut.

Cold.—Cool. Goth. kalds, cold. Icel. kala, to blow cold, to suffer from cold; kallda, fever. Dan. kule (of the wind), to freshen, to begin to blow. G. kalt, cold, kühl, cool. Lap. kâlot, to freeze, kâlom, cold, frost.

In Lith. szaltas, cold, sziltas, warm, the opposite sensations are distinguished by a modification of the vowel, while in Lat. gelidus, cold, calidus, hot, a similar relation in meaning is marked by a modification of the initial consonant.

The original image seems the disagreeable effect produced on the nerves by a harsh sound, whence the expression is extended to a similar effect on the other organs. Fin. kolia, sounding harshly as a rattle, rough, uneven, cold; kolia ilma, a cold air; kolian-lainen, roughish, cool; kolistua, to become cold as the air, or rough as a road; kolistus, making a crash, shattering. Esthon. kollisema, to rattle, make a harsh noise, kollin, a racket, kolle, noisy, frightful, ghastly; kollomats, a bugbear. The effects of fear and cold closely resemble each other in depressing the spirits and producing trembling. The Manuel des Pecchés says of Belshazzar when he saw the handwriting on the wall:

As he thys hande began to holde (behold)
Hys herte bygan to tremle and colde.

Fin. kolkka, sounding loud as a bell, then causing trembling or terror, ghastly; — ilma, a cold, raw day; — mies, a harsh, severe man; — korpi, a desolate wood. Compare Icel. kald-lyndr, harsh, severe in disposition; kallda-gaman, bitter sport; kald-ambr, distressing labour.

Collation. An entertainment. Fr. collation, a repast after supper. It. colatione, colettione, coletto, an intermeal, a refec-tion between regular meals; breakfast.

Colleague.—College. Lat. collega, supposed to be from lego, to choose, one chosen at the same time with one, a comrade. The radical part of the word however would be more satis-factorily explained if we regarded it as the equivalent of the Icel. lag, society, companionship, whence sam-lag, compan-ion-ship, partnership; felagi, a money companion or partner, a fellow; bröd-lagi, fisk-lagi, a partner at meals, in fishing, &c. On the same principle we should explain collegium, a college. See Fellow.

Collop. A lump or slice of meat. From clop or colp, repre-senting the sound of a lump of something soft thrown on a flat surface. Du. klop, It. colpo, a blow. Colp, a blow, also a bit of anything.—Bailey. The two significations are very commonly expressed by the same term. Sp. golpe, a blow, also a flap, as the loose piece of cloth covering a pocket. In like manner we have dab, a blow, and a lump of something soft; a pat with the hand, and a pat of butter; G. klitsch, a clap, rap, tap, and a lump of something soft; Sc. to blad, to slap, to strike, and blad, blaud, a lump or slice; to dad, to dash, to throw down, and dad, dawd, a lunch or large piece, especially of something eatable. See Calf.

Collow.—Colly. Smut, soot. To colowe, make black with a cole, charbonner.—Palsgr. in Way. Colled, becolled, smut-ted, blackened.—K. Horn. Icel. kála, quola, to smut or dirty; quol, frequent handling, dirtying.

Colonel. Formerly coronel; the captain coronal of a regiment, the chief captain, from corona, a crown.

Colt. A young horse. Sw. kult, a young boar, a stout boy.

Comb. Icel. kamb, G. kamm.

Combe. A narrow valley. W. cwm.

Comber. Perplexity, trouble, misfortune.—B. The origin seems preserved in the Icel. kumra, to growl, mutter, whence (as growling or muttering is the expression of discontent) Du. kommer, komber, loss, adversity, difficulty, care, grief; G. kummer, trouble, vexation, sorrow. In like manner from Fin. murista, to murmur, growl, murhet, trouble, sorrow, care. The term is then applied to what gives care or trouble, hinders us in accomplishing what we have in view, stands in our way. Manx cumr, cumru, to hinder, deter, delay; cumrail, hindrance, stoppage. Fr. encombrer, to hinder, trouble, give much business unto, to afflict, vex, annoy, disquiet, perplex.—Cot.

The G. kummer has in some parts of Germany acquired the sense of rubbish, ruins, dirt, as being a trouble and a hindrance, and it is in this sense that we must understand the Fr. descombres, ruins, what is to be moved out of the way, made to cease from hindering us, and not from the Lat. cumulus, a heap, as supposed by Diez. It. sgombrare, to rid from trouble.—Fl.

To Come.—Comely. Goth. cwiman, AS. cwiman, cuman; G. kommen. Du. komen, to come. The Biglotton also explains the Du. komen, cadere, convenire, decere, quadrare. Dat comt wel, bene cadit, convenit, decet, quadrat. In the same way to fall was used in OE.

It nothing falls to thee

To make fair semblant where thou mayest blame.

Chaucer. R. R.

G. gefallen, to fall to a person's mind, to please. In this sense the verb come must be understood in the E. comely and the Du. komelick, conveniens, congruens, commodus, aptus.—Kil. See Become.

This application is marked by a slight modification of form in the AS. cweman, becweman, to please, delight, satisfy, G. bequem, convenient, commodious, easy.

Comfit. Fr. confire, confit (Lat. conficere, confectum, to prepare), to preserve, confect, soak or steep in; confitures, comfits, junkets, all kind of sweetmeats.—Cot.

Comfort. Fr. comforter (Lat. fortis, strong), to solace, encourage, strengthen.—Cot.

Comfrey. A plant formerly in repute as a strengthener, whence it was called knit-back (Cot. in v. oreille d'âne), and in Lat. consolida, confirma, or conserva.—Dicf. Sup. E. comfrey seems a corruption of the second of these.

Comma. A stop marking a small division of a sentence. Gr. κόμμα, a piece or chop, from κόπτω, to cut.

Commence. It. cominciare, Fr. commencer. From con and initiare, Milanese inzà, to begin. O. Sp. compenzar, compezar. Sardin. incumbenzai, from in-com-initiare; Sp. empesar, from in-initiare.—Diez. Menage.

Commodore. Fr. commandeur, a governor or commander; Port. commendadór, from whence the term seems to have come to us.

Company.—Companion. It. compagno, compagnia; M. Lat. companium, association, formed from con and panis, bread, in analogy with the OHG. gi-mazo or gi-leip, board-fellow, from mazo, meat, or leip, bread. Goth. gahlaiba, fellow-disciple, Joh. xi. 16, from hlaihs, bread.

Compare. Lat. comparare, to couple things together for judgment, from compar, equal, and that from con and par, like, equal, a pair. But the meaning might equally be derived from the original sense of the verb parare, which seems to be to push forwards. Thus the simple parare is to push forwards, to get ready; se-parare, to push apart, to separate; com-parare, to push together, to bring into comparison, or to prepare, to accumulate.

Compass. Fr. compas, a compass, a circle, a round; compasser, to compass, encircle, begird, to turn round.—Cot. To go about, from con and passus, a step. A pair of compasses is an instrument for describing circles. The mariner's compass is so called because it goes through the whole circle of possible variations of direction. To compass an object is to go about it or to contrive it.

Complexion. Lat. complexio, a combination, connexion, physical constitution, applied in modern E. to the colour of the skin, as marking a healthy or unhealthy constitution. Fr. complexion, the making, temper, constitution of the body, also the disposition, affection, humours of the mind.—Cot.

To Comply.—Compliment. To comply is properly to fulfil, to act in accordance with the wishes of another, from Lat. complere, as supply, Fr. suppléer, from supplere. The It. has compiere, complire, compire, to accomplish, complete, also to use compliments, ceremonies, or kind offices and offers.—Fl. The E. comply also was formerly used in the latter sense, as by Hamlet speaking of the ceremonious Osric. “He did comply with his dug before he sucked it.” The addition of the preposition with is also an It. idiom: compire con uno, to perform one's duty by one;—col suo dovere, to do one's duty; alla promessa, to perform one's promise. Non posso compire con tutti alla volta, I cannot serve all at a time.—Altieri. Hence compimenti, complimenti, obliging speeches, compliments.

Comrade. Fr. camerade, a chamberful, a company that belongs to one chamber, tent, cabin.—Cot. Then applied to one of the company, a chamber-fellow. From It. camera, a chamber. Sp. camerada in both senses.

To Con. To learn, to study, to take notice of. Ale-conner, an inspector of ales. To con one thanks, Fr. savoir gré, to feel thankful and to make the feeling known to the object of it.

AS. cunnan, to know, cunnian, to inquire, search into, try. Gecunnian hwyle heora swiftost hors hæfde, to try which of them had the swiftest horse. He cunnode tha mid his handu, he felt them with his hand. Goth. kunnan, to know; anakunnan, to read; gakunnan, to observe, to read; kannjan, to make known. Sw. kunna, to be able; kunnig, known, knowing, skilful, cunning; kanna, to know, to feel, to be sensible.

Conceive.—Conceit. Lat. concipere, conceptum (con and capere, to take), to perceive, comprehend, imagine, think; also to become possessed of in the way of bodily impregnation, to hold in one's body, to breed. From the participle conceptum is formed It. concetto, E. conceit, an imagination, fancy, whence in the modern acceptation of the word, conceit, an imagination of one's own importance.

Concert. Agreement. According to Diez from concertare, to contend with, but the explanation of Calvera, which he mentions, is more satisfactory. The Lat. has screre, to join together, interweave (whence sertum, a wreath of flowers), and tropically to combine, compose, contrive. The compound conscrere is used much in the same sense, to unite together in action; conserere sermonem, to join in speech; consertio, a joining together. Hence It. conserto, duly wrought and joined together, a harmonious consort, an agreement; consertare, to concert or interlace with proportion, to agree and accord together, to sing, to tune or play in consort.—Fl. When the word conserto was thus applied to the accord of musical instruments, it agreed so closely both in sense and sound with concento, Lat. concentus (cantus, melody, song), harmony, harmonious music, that the two seem to have been confounded together, and conserto, borrowing the c of concento, became concerto, whence the Fr. and E. concert. In English again the word was confounded with consort, from Lat. consors,—sortis, partaking, sharing, a colleague, partner, comrade.

Right hard it was for wight which did it hear
 To read what manner musick that mote be;
 For all that pleasing was to living ear
 Was there consorted in one harmonie,
 Birds, voices, instruments, winds, waters, all agree.

F. Q. in R.

Conduit. Fr. conduict, conduit, a gutter, or pipe by which water is artificially conducted where it is required.

Cone. Lat. conus. Gr. κωνος, a cone, a spinning top, fir-cone, pine-tree, pitch.

Coney. Lat. cuniculus, Fr. connil, G. kaninchen, which last, it will be remarked, as well as cuniculus, is a diminutive form. The Bohem. term for a rabbit is kralyk, a little king, looking as if the Lat. cuniculus were a diminutive of the G. könig, a king.

Congenial. Lat. Genius is taken for fondness for good living, taste, appetite, inclination, whence genialis, jovial, agreeable, joyous, and congenial, of similar taste and inclination.

Conjure. Lat. jurare, to swear; Lat. conjurare, to combine together by an oath, but in the E. application to bind by an oath, to call upon some one by the most binding sanctions, hence (with the accent on the first syllable) to conjure, to use enchantments, to exercise the supernatural powers, and ultimately to use juggling tricks or sleight of hand.

Conqueror. Lat. querere, to seek, conquirere, to seek for, to seek out, obtain by seeking. Fr. conquerir, to get, purchase, acquire, and hence to get the victory, to subdue, overcome.

Consign. Lat. signum, a sign, a seal; signare, to mark, mark out, designate; consignare, to sign, to seal, to write down, register, hence apparently to consign, to appoint to a certain destination, to deliver, make over.

Constable. The Master of the Horse, or great officer of the empire who had charge of the horses, was called comes stabuli, the count of the stable, comestabilis, conestabilis, &c. To this officer, in the kingdoms which sprang up out of the ruins of the empire, fell the command of the army and the cognisance of military matters. “Regalium præpositus equorum, quem vulgo Comistabilem vocant.”—Armoine in Duc. “Comitem stabuli sui quem corrupte constabulum appellamus.”—Greg. Turon. in Duc. “Coram comite Herefordiensi qui secundum antiquum jus constabularius esse dignoscitur regii exercitūs.”

—Math. Westm. in Duc. The term was then applied to the commander of a fortress or any detached body of troops, and in this sense the title still remains in the Constable of the Tower, the Constable of Chester Castle. The Constable then became the officer who commanded in any district on behalf of the king. “In villis vero vel urbibus vel castellis quæ regis subsunt dominio, in quibus constabularii ad tempus statuuntur.”—Concil. Turon. A. D. 1163 in Duc.

Thus in England the term finally settled down as the designation of the petty officer who had the charge of the king's peace in a separate parish or hamlet.

Contrast. Fr. contraste, withstanding, strife, contention.—Cot. It. contrastare, to stand opposite, to withstand, contest, wrangle, contrastato, contrastanza, an opposing, contention. From contra, against, and stare, to stand.

Contrive. Fr. trouver, to find, invent, light on, meet with, get, devise; controuuer, to forge, devise, invent out of his own brain.—Cot.

Thre fals men togidere

Thise thre ageyn Edward made a compassment—

Of that fals controueyng gaf thei jugement.

R. Brunne 255.

It. trovare, to find, invent, or seek out. According to Diez from turbare, to disturb, to turn over in searching through, supporting his theory by the O. Pg. trovar = turbare; Neap. strurare = disturbare; controvare = conturbare. But the G. treffen, to hit, to reach, to come to, comes very near the notion of lighting on. Jemanden treffen, to meet with or find one. Compare Sw. hitta, to hit on, find, discover, contrive.

Control. Fr. contrerolle, the copy of a roll of accounts, &c. Contreroller, to keep a copy of a roll of accounts.—Cot. Hence to check the accounts of an officer, to overlook, superintend, regulate.

Convey.—Convoy. The tendency to a thin or a broad pronunciation of the vowels prevailing in different dialects of Fr.

converted Lat. via into veie (Chron. Norm. ; I. des Rois), or voie, way ; and the same variation is found in enveier, envoyer, It. inviare, to set in the right way, to send unto—Fl., and in conveier, convoyer, It. conviare, to make way with, to conduct. “Del ciel enveiid.” “Tut li poples de Juda out li rei conveied.”—I. des Rois. From the thin Norman pronunciation was formed E. convey, while convoy has been borrowed from a more recent state of the Fr. language.

No doubt a reference to Lat. convehere has affected some applications of convey, as when a carriage is called a conveyance.

Coo. Imitative of the noise of doves, formerly written croo ; Du. korren, kirren, Icel. kurra, Fr. roucouler, to croo like a dove.—Cot. To croo, crook, or mourn as a dove.—Fl. Mod. Gr. κουκουβακιζω.

Cook. Lat. coquus, a cook ; coquere, to cook, to prepare by fire. The primitive sense seems however to be to boil, from an imitation of the noise of boiling water. G. kochen, to boil ; das Blut kocht in seinen Adern, the blood boils in his veins. Fin. kuohua, kuohata, to foam, bubble, boil, swell ; kuohina, the boiling as of a cataract or of the waves. Mod. Gr. κοχλαζω, to boil, boil with a noise, bubble. Esthon. kohhisema, rauschen, brausen, to murmur, roar. Galla koka, to boil, to cook.—Tutschek.

Coöl. Icel. kul, kula, a cold blast ; kula, to blow, to be cold ; kulbord, the windward side of the ship ; kulldi, cold ; at kala, to blow cold, to suffer from cold ; kaldi, cold. OHG. chuoli, G. kühl. See Cold.

Coomb. A half quarter, or measure of four bushels. Fr. combe, heaped measure. Or is it from the Du. kom, a trough, a chest, deep dish ?

Coop.—Cooper.—Cub. Lat. cupa, Sp. cuba, Fr. cuve, Du. kuype, a tub, cask. Sp. cubero, a cooper. The Sp. cuba is also a hen-coop. It. cuba, a couch, bed, coop or pen for poultry. Du. kuype der stad, the circuit of the town, the space confined within the walls ; kuypen, to bind casks. To coop is to pen or confine in a narrow space. The OE. cub, to confine, seems a different form of the same root.

Art thou of Bethlehem's noble college free
 Stark staring mad that thou wouldst tempt the sea
Cubbed in a cabin, on a mattress laid.—Dryden in R.

Pl. D. bekubbelt is used in the same sense, confined, pressed for room. Sp. encubar, to put a criminal into a tub by way of punishment. W. cwb, a hut, pen or cote; cwb-iar, a hen-coop; cwb-ci, a dog-kennel; cwb-colomen, a dove-cote. Dan. kube, a hive; kove, a hut, hovel; torve-kube, torve-kove, a turf-shed. AS. cofa, Sw. kofwa, a chamber. Holstein kuure, a bed of poor people, a cot; Pl. D. kare, karen, a small enclosed place, a pen, kalver-karen, swiene-karen, a calf or swine-pen. G. koben, a hollow repository, a chamber; schweins-koben, a hog-stye; kobel, a cote, cot; tauben-kobel, a dove-cote; siech-kobel, a hovel for lepers. Probably cabin must be reckoned in the same class of words.

The radical idea seems that of bending round. Gael. cùb, crouch, stoop, shrink, cùbach, bent, hollowed; cùba, a bed; cùb, a bending of the body, a pannier. As the liquid is exceedingly moveable in words beginning with cr, cl, tr, &c., it is probable that the Gael. cùb must be connected with crùb, to squat, crouch, crùb, a claw, crùbach, a hook, a crooked woman, crup, to contract, shrink, crouch, &c. Thus “cubbed in a cabin” would be radically identical with Shakespear’s “cribbed, cabined, and confined.” See Cuddle.

Coot. A water-fowl, called also a moor-hen.—B. The two are often confounded, and in the moor-hen the short white tail bobbing up and down, with a motion like that of the tail of a rabbit, is a very conspicuous object. Now as the latter animal is from this cause called bunny, from Gael. bun, a stump, it is probable that the name of the coot is also taken from the tail.

W. cwt, a little piece, a short tail; cwta, cwtog, bobtailed, cwt-iar (iar = hen), a coot or water-hen.

Cop. W. cop, coppa, the top of anything, crown of the head; coppog, crested; coppyn, a small tuft or crest. Du. kop, the head. Wallon. copett, top.

The expression for a knob, bunch, or projection, is very often taken from the designation of a blow (see Boss), and the two senses are often united in the root kop. Hung. kop, sonus pulsu editus; kopogni, to stamp or clatter with the feet; kop-hal (hal = fish), gobio, the bull-head, a fish with a large head; Fin. koppata, to tap; kopsia, to knock, beat, smack; kopina, the noise of a blow; W. cobio, to thump; cob, a thump, also a top or tuft; cobyn, a tuft, bunch, cluster; Cat. cop, a blow; Sp. copa, the boss of a bridle; copo, bunch of flax on a distaff; copete, tuft, top, summit.

Cope. A priest's vestment, a cloak. An arch. The Cope of heaven, the arch or concavity of heaven.—B. It. la cappa del cielo, Fr. la chappe du ciel, the cape or cloak of heaven; Du. hulle or kappe des hemels—Junius (hulle, capitium, velamen mulicbre). Du. kap, kappe, a cap, hood, summit of a building. The same ambiguity is found in the expression coping of a wall, It. la volta d'un muro (Torriano), where we are doubtful whether to explain it as the capping of the wall, or from the Sp. copa, a cup, crown of a hat, roof or vault of an oven. The It. copi, tiles, may be so called as being used in the roofing of a building, while the coping of a wall is a layer of tiles projecting over the top and sheltering the wall. To cope, jut or lean out, forjecter.—Sherwood. Fin. koppa, anything hollowed out, koppa-reka, traha confornicata, koppa-nokko, a hooked nose.

To Cope. To cope, serrarsi, attaccarsi l' un con l' altro. Coped together, attaccati, afferrati insieme.—Torriano. Addouez homme a homme—fastened, clasped, grappled or coaped, scuffed together.—Cot. Probably in this sense the word must be referred to the Icel. kapp, contention, kappi, an athlete. See Champion.

Copesman.—Copesmate. To cope, to barter or truck.—B. Copeman, a customer; copesmate, a partner in merchandise, companion. Du. koop, chaffer, exchange; koop-man, a merchant.

Copper. Lat. cuprum. G. kupfer.

Coppice.—Copse. O. Fr. copeiz, copeau, wood newly cut; coppuis, right of cutting the waste branches of trees.—Roquef. From couper, to cut. What we call coppice or copse is in Fr. bois taillis. Gr. κοπαδες, arbores caeduae—Hesychius in Junius, from κοπω, to cut.

Copy. Lat. copia, abundance, and tropically, means, opportunity of doing anything; copiam exscribendi facere, to give the means of writing out a document, of taking a copy, whence copia came to be used in the sense of copy.

Coquette. Fr. coqueter, a cock to call his hens, or to cluck as a cock among hens; to swagger or strowt it as a cock among hens; coquette, one who lays herself out for the admiration of the male sex, as the cock does for the female.

Corbel.—Corbet. A shouldering piece or jutting out in walls to bear up a post, summer, &c.—B. Fr. corbeau, It. corva, corbella; a corbel, and also a basket.

Cordovan.—Cordwainer. Fr. cordovan, originally leather from Cordova. Cordouanier (a worker in Cordovan leather), a shoemaker.—Cot.

Core. The core of an apple. Fr. cœur, heart, also the core of fruit.—Cot. Sp. corazon, the heart; corazon de una pera, manzana, the core of a pear, apple. Esthon. südda, the heart, the core of an apple. Fin. sydän, the heart, whatever is in the middle, the wick of a candle, pith of a tree, kernel of a nut, &c.

Cork. Sp. corcho, from Lat. cortex, as Sp. pancho, paunch, from pantex. It is possible however that the word may be connected with Lat. cortex, and yet not be direct from a Lat.

source. The root cor is widely spread in the Slavonic and Fin. class of languages in the sense of rind, skin, shell, uniting the Lat. corium, skin, with cortex, bark. Fin. kuori, bark, shell, crust, cream; Lap. karr, bark, shell, karra, hard, rough; Esthon. koor, rind, shell, bark, cream; korik, crust. Cornelian. Fr. cornaline, It. cornalino. A flesh-coloured stone easy to be engraved upon.—Cot. From cornu, horn, because of the colour of the finger-nail. For the same reason it is in Gr. called οὐξ, the nail.—Diez. Others derive it from carneus, because flesh-coloured. But the true derivation is probably from the semitransparency of the stone resembling horn. G. hornstein, cornelian, chalcedony, agate.

Corner. Lat. cornu, Fr. corne, a horn, whence cornière, a corner. Comp. Icel. horn, signifying both horn and corner.

Cornet. A musical instrument. Fr. cornet, from corne, horn. Also for the standard of a troop of horse, or the officer who bore it, corresponding to an ensign of foot. It. cornetta, that ensign which is carried by lancers on horseback.—Fl. Fr. cornette, a cornet of horse, and the ensign of a horse company.—Cot.

Cornice. It. cornice, Fr. corniche, Wal. coronise. Gr. κορωνη, κορωνις, a summit, finish, or completion of anything; κορωνιδα επιτιθειναι, to put the finishing stroke to a thing. The Gr. κορωνις and Lat. corona (and in all probability also coronis) were also used in the sense of a cornice, or projection at the top of the wall of a building, το τελευταιον της οικοδομης επιθεμα.—Hesych. As the Gr. κορωνη also signified a crown, the sense of a summit or completion may arise from the notion of crowning, as we say “a crowning grace,” or as in the expression Finis coronat opus.

Corrody. Money or provisions due to the king as founder from a religious house, for the maintenance of one that he appoints for that purpose. M. Lat. conredium, corredum, conradium, corrodium, &c. “Quicquid ad alimentum ad mensam datur; præbenda monachi vel canonici.”—Duc. It. corredare, to fit out, furnish, set forth. See Array.

Corselet. A piece of armour covering the body. Fr. corselet, a little body.

Corsned. Ordeal bread; a piece of bread on which a curse is laid that if the party under trial is guilty it may be his death. AS. corsian, to curse, and snæd, a morsel.

Cosen. See Cozen.

Cosset. A lamb brought up by hand, a pet. It. casiccio, a tame lamb bred by hand—Fl., from casa, house, as in Suffolk cot-lamb. Wal. cosset, a sucking pig, is probably unconnected.

Costive. Fr. constipé, constipated, bound in the belly; Lat. constipare, from stipare, to cram, to stuff; It. costipativo, having a tendency to constipate, whence by contraction costive.

Cot.—Cottage. Fin. koti, a dwelling-place, house; kota, a poor house, cottage, kitchen; koti-ma (ma = land), country. Esthon. koddo, house.

Cot. 2.—Cote. Probably cote, a pen or shelter for animals, may be identical with cot in the last sense. We have sheep-cote, dove-cote; Du. duive-kot, hoen-kot, honde-kot, a dove, hen, dog-cote. In this language kot is widely used in the sense of hollow receptacle; kot, tugurium, cavum, latibulum, caverna, loculamentum, locus excavatus. "De leden wt de kote doen," to put limbs out of joint.—Kil. W. cot, a cot, hovel, sty. Cutt, a cottage, cutt moch, a hog-sty.—Richards.

Cot. 3. The primary sense of the nearly obsolete cot is a matted lock. G. zote, a cot, a lock of hair or wool clung together.—Ludwig. Cot-gare, refuse wool so clotted together that it cannot well be pulled asunder; cottum, cat or dog-wool (properly cot or dag-wool) of which cotto or coarse blankets were formerly made.—Bailey. Cotted, cottered, cotty, matted, entangled.—Hal. Lang. coutou, flock (bourre), wool, cotton, coutis, matted, coutisses, dag-locks, the tail-wool of sheep.—Cousinié.

The term is then applied to a fleece, mat, rug of shaggy materials, to a covering or loose garment made of such materials, to an inartificial sleeping-place, where a rug or mat may be laid down for that purpose.

Wal. cote, sheepskin, fleece; Prov. F. cot, a fleece of wool matted together in its growth, a door-mat made of a cotted fleece.—Baker. G. kozze, a rough, shaggy covering, a shaggy overcoat worn by peasants; kozzet, cotted, shaggy.—Adelung. Fin. kaatu, a rough coverlet of sheepskins. The Mid. Lat. cottus, cotta, cottum were used in both senses, of a rug or coarse woollen mat used by the monks as bedding, and of the single garment, made of similar material, covering the whole body. "Accipit incola cellæ ad lectum palcam, filtrum, si possit haberi, sin autem (but if not), pro eo pannum grossum simplicem non duplicatum, pulvinar, cotum, vel coopertorium de grossis ovium pellibus et panno grosso coopertum."—Stat. Cartus. in Duc. Rugs of the foregoing description were either to lie on or to serve as coverings. "Nec jaceant super cotos." "Super cotos in lecto quiescere." "Tunc, ait, ille es qui sub cotto quotidie completorium insurras?"—Duc.

A cot, a sleeping-place in a ship, is properly a mat, then the place where a mat is laid for sleeping.

The Mid. Lat. cotta, cottus is explained by Ducange, tunica clericis propria; in G. kutte, confined to the cowl or hood, the distinctive part of a friar's dress. It is probable that the derivation of the word coat, in which all reference to the nature of the material is lost, must be traced to the same origin. We have above seen the same word (kotze) applied to a rough overcoat. And it is probable that the Mid. Lat. flocus, flocus, frocus, the frock of the monk, is in like manner derived from flocus, a flock of wool, referring to the shaggy material of which the frock was made. So also from Fin. takku, villus animalium defluus, maxime implicatus vel concretus, a cot or dag (whence takkuinen, cotted, matted, takku-willa, dag-wool), takki, an overcoat, perhaps explaining the origin of the Roman toga.

In the original signification of a matted lock cot is related on the one side to clot, and on the other to the Sc. tot, tait, G. zote, Fin. tutti, Sw. totte, a bunch of flax, wool, or fibrous material. We have seen under Catch examples of the equivalence of forms beginning with cl and a simple c respectively. And the Fr. motte, matte, a clot or clod, is identical with E. mat, an entangled mass of fibre, the primitive idea being simply a lump. The Lap. tuogge, a tangled mat of hair, is also applied to the lumps of paste in soup or gruel.

It should be observed that the Sc. tottis is used, like G. kotze, for a coarse shaggy material.

Na dentic geir the Doctor seiks
Of tottis russet his riding breiks.—Jan.

Cotquean.—Quotquean. An effeminate man, man interfering in women's concerns. Du. kutte; Fin. kutta, kuttu, the distinctive feature of a woman, thence as a term of abuse for a feeble womanly man. In like manner Bav. fud, of the same original sense, is used in vulgar language for a woman, and contemptuously for a womanish man. E. cot, cote, a man that busies himself in the affairs of the kitchen.—Bailey. In cotquean the element signifying woman is repeated, as so often happens when the original form of the word has lost its significance.

Cotton. Sp. algodon, Arab. qo'ton, alqo'ton. The meaning would exactly agree with that of E. cot, a lock or flock. Lang. coutou, wool, flock, cotton.

Couch. Fr. coucher, O. Fr. culcher, to lay down; It. colcare, from Lat. collocare, con and locare, to lay.

Collocari jussit hominem in aureo lecto.—Cic. Sole collocato, au soleil couché.—Lex Salica. Menage. Cowchyn, or leyne things together, colloco.—Pr. Pm.

To Cough. Imitative of the noise. Du. kichen, anhelare, difficulter spirare, leviter atque inaniter tussire. Kuch, a cough; kuchen, to pant, to cough.—Kil. Fin. kóhkiá, kóh-hia, to hawk, to cough, rauce tussio, screeo.

Coulter. Lat. culter, a ploughshare, a knife. Fr. coultre, a coulter. Lat. cultellus, a knife. This would look as if to cut were the primary meaning of colere, to till.

To Count. Fr. compter, to reckon, calculate. Lat. computare, con and putare, to think.

Count. Fr. comte, from comes, comitis, a companion; the name given to the great officers of state under the Frankish kings.

Counterpane.—Quilt. W. cylch, a hoop, circle; cylched, a bound, circumference, rampart, what goes round about or enwraps, bed-clothes, curtains. Gwely a' i gylchedau, a bed and its furniture. Gael. coilce, a bed, bed-clothes; coilceadh, bed materials, as feathers, straw, heath. Bret. golched, a feather-bed, chaff-bed. Hence the Lat. culcita, originally probably a wadded wrapper, but applied in Lat. to a mattress, and avowedly borrowed from the Gauls.

Sicut in culcitris præcipuam gloriam Cadurei obtinent, Galliarum hoc et tomenta pariter inventum.—Pliny.

The Du. kulckt, Sp. colcedra, colcha, It. coltre, Fr. coultre, coulte, mark the passage to the E. quilt.

When the stitches of the quilt came to be arranged in patterns for ornament it was called culcita puncta.

Estque toral lecto quod supra ponitur alto
Ornatus causâ, quod dicunt culcita puncta.—Duc.

Nullus ferat secum in viâ punctam culcitram ad jacendum nisi is cui in capitulo concessum fuerit.—Ibid.

This in Fr. became coulte-pointe, coute-pointe, courte-pointe, and with that instinctive striving after meaning, which is so often the source of corruption in language, contre-pointe, as if from the opposite pits made by the stitches on either side of the quilt or mattress. Hence finally the E. counterpane.

Countenance. Fr. contenance, the behaviour, carriage, presence or composition of the whole body.—Cot. Lat. continere, to hold together.*

Country. Fr. contrée, It. contrada (contra-ata), the district which lies opposite you, as G. gend, a situation, Mid. G. gegenote, from gegen, opposite.—Diez. Muratori suggests the Lat. conterraneus a person of the same country, for which in Mid. Lat. was used conterratus. Occisus est Michael sub castello Mutulæ ab ipsis conterratis.—Chron. A. D. 1040, Et omnes conterrati dispersi sunt; id est (says Muratori) cives ejusdem terræ.

Courage. Fr. courage; It. coraggio, from Lat. cor, the heart.

Court. Fr. cour, It. corte, Lat. cohors, chors, cors, —rtis, a cattle-yard, enclosed place. Allied with a numerous class of words signifying enclosure. Pol. grad, a town, gradz, enclosure, gradzki, belonging to a court; Bohem. hrad, a fortress, castle; hradba, enclosure; hraditi, to enclose, fortify. Lat. hortus; Sw. gård, a yard, court, estate, house; E. yard. Hung. kert, a garden, kertelni, keritni, to enclose; keritek, kertelet, a hedge. Russ. gorod', a town, gorod'nya, a palissade, gorod'ba, an enclosure. Fin. kartano, a court, yard, farm.

Cousin. Fr. cousin; It. cugino; Lat. consobrinus, whence Grisons cusdrin, cusrin; Sp. sobrinno.—Diez.

Cove. A nook, a sheltered harbour. In secretis recessibus is translated by Holland in secret coves or nooks.—Rich. The relations of this word lead us in such a variety of directions, that it is exceedingly difficult to make up our minds as to the original source of the signification. Lat. cavus, hollow, Sp. cueva, a cave or grot, cellar, den of wild beasts, &c. Ptg. cova, a hole, ditch, pit; — dos olhos, eye-hole; — na barba, a dimple; covil, a den of wild beasts, a lurking-hole, covo, a coop for chickens. It. covare, to squat, brood, sit upon eggs, cova, coro, a den, covale, covaccio, a hatching nest, squatting form, lurking-hole; covile, coviglio, a kennel, sty, lurking-place, covigliare, to lurk or get into some secret place for shelter. Looking at the latter forms we should be inclined to refer the word to the Lat. cubare, to lie, Gael. cùb, to crouch, stoop, bend, lie down, whence cùba, a bed, cùba-chuil, Lat. cubiculum, a bed-chamber, cubile, a resting-place, a lair of animals, identical with the It. covile, coviglia.

The idea of cooping or confining may be united with that of lying down, if we suppose that the primitive image expressed by the Lat. cubare, to lie down, is the act of curling oneself up for warmth in going to sleep. Compare Lap. krukahet, to lie down on the ground without a bed, with E. crook. Gael. cùb; a bending of the body, cùbach, bent, hollowed. Lat. cubitum, the elbow or bending of the arm.

In the Finnish and Slavonic languages we have Lap. kâppe, kâpe, hollow, a cavern, ditch; kâppet, to hollow out; Russ. kopat, to dig, to hollow; Fin. kopio, sounding as an empty vessel, empty, hollow; koppa, anything hollow or vaulted; kopano, a hollow trunk of a tree; kopero, koparet, a receptacle for small things, trench for keeping turnips; kopera, kowera, hollowed, concave, curved, crooked.

If the whole of these words are radically connected, the train of thought must begin with the sound characteristic of a hollow object, whence the idea of empty, hollow, concave, crooked, making crooked, curling oneself up, lying down.

Covenant. Lat. conventus, conventio (from convenire, to come together, to agree), an assembly, compact, covenant. Fr. convenir, to assemble, befit, accord with; convenant, fit, comely, agreeing with, and as a subst. an agreement, contract.

The n has been lost in E. covenant, as in OE. covent for convent; Covent-garden.

Cover. Fr. couvrir, It. coprire, Lat. cooperire; con and ope-rire, to cover.

Coverlet. Fr. couvre-lit, a bed-cover.

Covet. Fr. convoiter, by a false etymology as if compounded with the preposition con. The real derivation is the Lat. cupidus, whence Prov. cobeitos, cubitos, cobes, covetous; cupiditat, cobeitat, covetousness; cobeitar, cubitar, to covet.—Diez.

Covey. A brood of partridges. Fr. couvée, from couver, to hatch.

Covin. A deceitful agreement between two to the prejudice of a third.—B. Lat. convenire, to agree. Lang. covinen, covinen, convention, agreement, plot; far covinens, to concert, to plot. See Covenant.

Cow. Sanscr. gao. G. kuh.

To Cow. Sw. kufwa, Dan. kue, to subdue, bring down, keep under. Connected by Ihre with Sw. quafva, to choke, stifle, extinguish, and metaphorically to damp, mortify, suppress; quafva et upror, to quell a rebellion. Goth. afhvaþjun, to extinguish, Icel. kafna, Sw. kufna (Ihre), to be choked; Icel. kóf, suffocation, mist; kafi, kafn, G. καπνος, thick smoke; Sw. quaf, shortness of breath, difficulty of breathing; Lith. kwapas, breath.

Precisely the same series of meanings are found connected under the G. dampf; dimpfen, to smother, quench, suppress; dampf, smoke, vapour, asthma, short breath, and as in the latter series the primary image is the stoppage of the breath, it is probable that the senses have been developed in the same order in the former series.

Cower. It is hard to decide whether we should consider the r as either purely intrusive or marking a frequentative form of the verb, or whether it is to be regarded as an essential part of the root.

On the one hand we have G. kauche, a narrow place, prison; kaue, a hollow narrow receptacle (hühner-kaue, a hen-coop), and thence kauchen,^h to sit on the heels, cower down, sit on eggs; also hauchen, hocken, Pl. D. luken, hurken, Sw. huka, sitta huka, Dan. sidde paa hug, to squat down, sit on one's hams. Du. hucken, hurcken, inclinare se, contrahere membra ut calefiant, incurvari, in terram se submittere.—Bigl. Hucken van swaeren last, to bend under a load; huck-schoudereren, to 'shrug the shoulders. Pl. D. up de hurken sitten, to squat; hurke-pot, a chafing-dish over which women sit and cower.

The loss of the final k would give rise to forms like the Icel. kura, to roost, to rest like a roosting bird; G. kauern, kauren, Bav. lauern, huren, to cower.

On the other hand the Celtic and Finnish relations look as if the r was an essential part of the root. W. cwr, a corner, nook, limit, border, cwrian, to squat, to cower; also cwrc, cwrcwd, a curvature, stooping, squatting. Gael. curr, a corner, an end, a pit; Esthon. käär, crookedness, Fin. kaari, bow, curvature; kaarittaa, to bow, to curve, go round, surround. Lap. kärjot, to lie curled up like a dog. Possibly the fundamental meaning may be to sit drawn up in a heap. Icel. hruka, hruga, a heap, a ruck; kroka, to crook; krokna, to be contracted with cold; krokr, a bending. G. hocke, a heap of sheaves of corn; höcker, a knob, bunch, hump.

Coward. Fr. couard, It. codardo, from coda, Lat. cauda, Wallon. cow, the tail; a tailer, one who holds back. O. Fr. couarder, to retire, to draw backwards.

Quant de Narcissus me souvint
A qui mallement mesadvint,
Sy commençay à couarder.—R. R. 1525.

Whan this letter of which I telle
Had taught me that it was the well
Of Narcissus in his beauté
I gan anon withdrawe me.—Chaucer.

In like manner Lap. murtet, to go backwards, and hence to be timid, to fear.

Probably there is also a reference in the word to the image of a terrified animal, crouching with his tail between his legs. In Heraldry a lion so depicted was termed lion coward.

Cowl. Lat. cucullus, Sp. cogulla, O. Fr. cuoule—Chr. Norm. ; AS. cugle, cufle, cuhle, W. cwfl, Gael. cubhal, a monk's hood, cowl. The origin may perhaps be Gael. cogull, husks of corn, in which the grain is cased as a monk's head in his hood.

Cowslip. Probably for cowseleek, as Rouchi coulîpe for colique. Icel. laukr, a garden vegetable. Comp. Houscleek.

Coy. Fr. coi, It. cheto, Sp. quedo, quiet, noiseless, easy, gentle ; Lat. quietus.

Cozen. It. coghione, a cullion, a fool, a scoundrel, properly a dupe. See Cully. It. coghionare, to deceive, make a dupe of. Rouchi coulionner, railler, plaisanter, to banter. Coule! interjection imputing a lie ; a lie. Couleter, to tell lies.

In the Venet. dialect coghionare becomes cogionare, as vogia for voglia, fogia for foglia ; cogionnare, ingannare, corbellare. —Patriarchi. Hence E. to cozen, as It. fregio, frieze ; cugino, cousin ; prigione, prison.

Crab. Icel. krabbi, G. krebs ; Bret. krab, krank ; It. granchio ; Lat. cancer.

The meaning of the word is undoubtedly the pinching animal. It is closely connected with the E. grab, to seize ; Bret. kraban, OE. craple, a claw ; It. grappare, to seize, to grapple ; grappo, a bunch ; E. cramp, It. granfo, granchio, a contraction, drawing together ; Icel. kreppa, to contract ; kreptr, contracted, crooked ; It. gropo, a knot, knob, bunch ; E. crump, humped, crooked ; Du. krom, G. krumm, crooked ; Gael. crub, to crouch, draw oneself together, crubag, a hook, a crab, a crooked woman, crub, a claw, the nave of a wheel.

Now we have a series of words beginning with cl of very similar meaning ; clamp, clump, club, clip, cleave, claw, &c., many of which cannot be separated from their analogues in the series with an initial cr. Thus we use almost indifferently grasp and clasp, clump-iron and cramp-iron, scramble and clamber, crump-footed and club-footed, Icel. klumbu-fotr. The Icel. kramir corresponds to E. clammy ; Fr. grimper to E.

climb ; Du. krauwen to E. to claw. Since then in the l series we came to the conclusion that the radical idea was that of a lump or thick mass (see Clamp), from whence the notion of sticking together, contracting, compressing were derived, we must assume as the origin of the r series forms like the W. erob, erwb, a round hunch, Gael. erub, nave of a wheel, E. erob, a clown (properly a clod)—Ital., It. groppo, grappo, a bunch. Then with the sense of contraction or compression we have Gael. erub, to crook, erubach, a cripple ; It. grappare, E. to grab, to clutch, to seize between claws ; Gael. erub, Bret. graban, E. craple, the claw or fang, the instrument of grabbing or seizing. A nasal pronunciation gives It. granfo, E. cramp, contraction ; Du. krampe, Fr. crampon, a hook, and as in the l series we saw clamp pass into clam, the p is in like manner lost after the r, giving Du. kramme, harpago—Kil., and E. cram, to stuff. In like manner we pass from W. erwb, Icel. kryppa, a hump, to E. croop-back, crump-back, and thence to G. krumm, crooked.

The same connexion between the notion of a lump or protuberance and that of seizing is exhibited in E. knob, knop, or knap, a lump, and nab, to seize, nip (G. kneipen), to pinch.

Crab. 2. A windlass for raising weights.

The G. bock, a buck or he-goat, is used for a frame of wood to support weights or similar purposes. It signifies a battering-ram, coach-box, starlings or posts to break the ice above a bridge, the dogs in a fire grate, trestles to saw wood on, a painter's easel or ass. In a similar manner the Sp. cabra, a goat, was used as the designation of a machine for throwing stones ; cabria, a crane ; Fr. chevre, a goat, and also a machine for raising weights. In the Romance of the department of the Tarn the place of the r is transposed, and the word for a goat is crabo ; crabit, a kid, and both these terms are used to designate the machine for raising weights, which we term in E. a crab ; as well as trestles, or, like the G. bock, a bagpipe.—Dict. Romano-Castraise. For the reason why the name of the goat was applied to a machine for raising weights, see Cable.

Crack. Imitative of the sound made by a hard substance in splitting, the collision of hard bodies, &c. In Gaelic expressed by the syllable enac, identical with E. knock or knack. Gael. enac, crack, break, crash, the crack of a whip, &c., enag, crack, snap, knock, rap, thump.

Cradle. See Crate.

Craft. G. kraft, strength, power; AS. craft, strength, faculty, art, skill, knowledge. The origin is seen in the notion of seizing, expressed by the It. graffiare. W. craft, a hook, brace, holdfast, creffyn, a brace, Bret. krafa, to seize. The term is then applied to seizing with the mind, as in the Lat. terms apprehend, comprehend, from prehendere, to seize in a material way. W. craftu, to seize with the understanding, to perceive; dyn craft, a man of quick comprehension; craft, a trade.

Crag. 1. The neck, throat.—Jam. Du. kraeghe, the throat. Pol. kark, the nape, crag, neck. Bohem. krk, the neck; Icel. krage, Dan. krave, the collar of a coat. The origin is an imitation of the noise made by clearing the throat. Bohem. krk-ati, to belch, krati, to vomit; Pol. krzakać, to hem, to hawk. The same root gives rise to the Fr. cracher, to spit, and It. recere, to vomit; E. reach, to strain in vomiting; Icel. kraki, spittle; AS. hraca, cough, phlegm, the throat, jaws; G. ra-chen, the jaws.

At other times the guttural sound is imitated without the r, as in E. hawk and keck, and hence is formed W. ceg, the throat, mouth, E. choke and Icel. kok, quok, the throat.

2. A rock. Gael. creag, a rock; W. careg, a stone; caregos, pebbles.

Cram. AS. cramman, to stuff, to cram. Icel. krami, pressure, kraminn, pressed, bruised; kramr, soft, clammy. Du. kramme, a cramp-iron, krammen, to clamp or cramp together. Dan. kramme, to crumple, crush. The fundamental notion is to draw together, to compress, to stuff. See Crab.

Crambe.—Crambo. A repetition of words, or saying the same thing over again. From the Gr. proverb dis κραμβη θavarov, cabbage twice boiled is death ; Lat. crambe repetita, a tedious repetition. Hence probably crambo, a play in rhyming, in which he that repeats a word that was said before forfeits something.—B.

Cramp. See Crab.

Crane. G. kranich ; W. garan, a crane, and also a shank, from gar, a leg ; garanawg, longshanked. The name however is very widely spread, and is found in some of the languages in the extremity of Siberia.

Crank.—Crankle.—Crinkle. To crankle or crinkle, to go in and out, to run in folds or wrinkles—B. ; Du. kronkelen, to curl, twist, bend ; E. crank, an arm bent at right angles for turning a windlass ; Lap. kránket, to crook, to bend ; kránkem, the bending of the knee ; Wallon. cranki, to twist, to fork ; Rouchi cranque, the cramp ; Bret. krank, It. granchio, a crab, as the pinching animal ; Prov. E. cringle-crangle, zig-zag—Hal. ; Icel. kringr, a ring or circle, kringlottr, round ; Dan. hringel, crooked, kring (in composition), round.

The interchange of mp and nk is so frequent that we can hardly separate crank from cramp, Du. kronkelen from E. crumple, E. crinkle from crimple. Then if we were right in our derivation of cramp, the origin of crank must also be the image of a block or lump represented by a form crog, answering to clog, as cramp to clamp.

On the other hand the notion of a crumpled surface is often expressed by reference to a crackling noise, whether from the sound actually given in the crumpling up of textures of different kinds, especially under the influence of heat, or on the principle explained under Crisp. From this point of view crankle must be regarded as a nasalised form of crackle.

Crank. 2. Crank in nautical language is applied to vessels inclined to heel over. This is a special application of the notion of bending down. Sw. kránga, Du. krengen, to press down a vessel on its side, to heel over ; Lap. kránket, to bend, inflectere, incurvare.

Cranky. Poorly. Rouchi cranque, cramp. When a man begins to feel the infirmities of age it is said "qu'il a ses cranques." Cranquieux, cranqu'lieux, maladif.—Hécart. Crankle, weak, shattered.—Hal. G. krank, sick. So from cramp, Sw. krampig, sickly.

Cranny. Cranie, craine or cleft.—Minsheu. Rouchi crin (pronounced crain), a cleft or notch, s'crener, to chap. Fr. cren, crenne, cran, a breach or snip in a knife, &c., a notch, nib of a pen, jag about the edge of a leaf.—Cot. Bav. krinnen, Bret. cran, a notch. G. krinne, a rent, cleft, channel. From I. crinim, crainim, creinim, to bite, to gnaw, Bret. krîna, to gnaw. The metaphor may be illustrated by Cotgrave's explanation of Fr. cale, "a bay or creek of the sea entering or eating into the land."

On the other hand it would be more in analogy with the other words signifying a crack or fissure, if it could be derived from a syllable, crin, imitative of a sharp sound, while the Fr. crinon, a cricket, looks as if the chirp of that animal had been so represented. I should be inclined to refer the W. crinn, dry, to the same root, signifying in the first instance shrunk, as in Sussex a clung bat is a dry stick. To crine, to shrink, to pine.—Hal. A piece of wood in drying shrinks and cracks. G. schrund, a chink.

Crape. Fr. crêpe, a tissue of fine silk twisted so as to form a series of minute wrinkles. Crespe, curled, frizzled, crisp.—Cot. See Crisp.

Crash. An imitation of the noise made by a number of things breaking. A variety of clash, which is used in nearly the same sense. To crash or dash in picces, sfracassare, spez-zare.—Torriano. A word of the same class with craze, crush, &c.

Cratch. Fr. creiche, eresche, a cratch, rack, ox-stall, or crib. La sainte crèche, the manger in which our Lord was laid. Diez would derive it from the It. greppia, Prov. crepia, crepcha (as Mid. Lat. appropriare, Prov. apropjar, apropchar; Fr. approcher), O. Fr. crebe, greche, a crib. "En la crepia lo pauseron." "L'enfant envelopat en draps e pausat en la cru- pia.—Rayn. “And she baar her firste borun sone and wlappe him in clothes and leyde him in a cracche.”—Wicliff. See Crib. But the It. craticia (from Lat. crates, cratitius), a hurdle, lattice, sheep pen or fold, offers a simpler derivation. Hence the elision of the t would immediately give rise to the Fr. creiche, in the same way as it produces the Fr. creil, a hurdle (Roquefort), from the It. graticola, craticola, a grating.

Crate.—Cradle. A crate is an open case made of rods of wood wattled together. Lat. crates, wicker or hurdle work; craticius, wattled, composed of lattice work. It. crate, a harrow, hurdle, grate; graticcia, a hurdle, lattice. Dan. krat, copse; krat-skov, copse-wood. Gael. creathach, under-wood, brush-wood; creathall, AS. cradol, a cradle (from being made of wicker). Gael. creathall is also a grate. Ir. creatuch, a hurdle of wattled rods. Wallach. cratariu, clathri, cancelli, lattice.

Parallel with the foregoing are found a series of forms with similar meaning, with an initial cl instead of cr. Lat. clathri, lattice; Ir. cliath, a harrow, wattled hurdle, the darning of a stocking mended crosswise like lattice work. Gael. cleath, wattled work, a harrow, hurdle, gate; Fr. claye, a hurdle or lattice of twigs, a wattled gate; Gael. cleathach, ribbed, cliathag, the chine or spine (G. rückgrat).

The origin of both series is undoubtedly the word which appears under the forms of Gr. κλαδος, Manx clat, Gael. slat, W. lloth, E. lath, properly a shoot, twig, rod. The Dan. krat-skov would then be a wood of shoots or rods, as opposed to timber of large growth.

Cravat. Formerly written crabat, and spoken of by Skinner (who died in 1667) as a fashion lately introduced by travellers and soldiers. The fashion is said by Menage to have been brought in 1636 from the war, and to have been named from Crabats or Cravats, as the Croatsians (and after them a kind of light cavalry) were then called. The French had a regiment “de Royal-Cravate.” Pl. D. Krabaten, Kravaten, Croatsians.

Crave. AS. crasian, to ask. Icel. krafa, to demand, require; kraft, need, necessity. W. cref, a cry, a scream; crefu, to cry, to desire, to beg earnestly.—Spurrell.

Craven. Craven, cravant, a coward. Also anciently a term of disgrace, when the party that was overcome in a single combat yielded and cried cravant.—B. If the term had originally been craven, signifying one who had begged his life, it could hardly have passed into the more definite form cravant. The prov. E. cradant, Sc. cradon, a coward, seem the same word. To set cradants is to propose feats for the purpose of seeing who will first give in.—Wilbr.

The essence of the cry was an admission that the party begging his life was overcome. In the combat between Gawain and Ywain, when they become known to each other, each tries to give the other the honour of victory.

Sir King, he said, withouten fail
I am overcomen in this batayl.
 Nayertes, said Gawain, bot am I.
 Thus nowther wald have the maistri;
 Before the king gau aither grant
 That himself was recreant.—v. 3710.

In another combat, when the defeated champion has begged his life:

Sir Ywain said I grant it the
 If that thou wil thi selven say
 That thou art overcomen this day.
 He said, I grant withouten fail
 I am overcomen in batail,
 For pur ataynt and recreant.—v. 3280.

As most of our law terms come from the Fr. we should look for the origin of the word to the terms in which the vanquished champion acknowledged himself overcome in that language. The requisite meaning would be exactly given by Prov. cravantar, O. Fr. cravanter, to oppress, foyle or spoyle with excessive toyle or stripes—Cot., to beat down, overthrow, overwhelm. Je sus tout craventé, accablé de fatigue.—Hécart. The cry of cravante! then, would be an admission of being thoroughly beaten, though I am unable to show that, like E. cravant! it was actually used in judicial combat.

On the other hand the verb créanter was used for the admission of being beaten.

Sire, dist il, tencz m'espée,
La bataille avez affinéé,
Bien vos créant et reconnois, &c.

viz. that the right was on the other side

Et ainsi m'espéc vos rent.
Fabloiaux et Contes iv. 365.

Hence creant for one who admitted or granted himself beaten.
Fr. recreanz, vaincu de son propre aveu.—Gl. Chr. Norm.

Thai said, Syr knight, thou most nede
Do the lioun out of this place—
Or yelde the to us als creant.

Ywaine and Gawain, 3170.

The d (changing to v) in cradant, cravant may be the original t or d, the loss of which is marked by the hiatus in Fr. creanter, créanter. See Grant, Recreant.

Craw. G. kragen, the neck, throat, and in vulgar language the belly, guts. Du. kræye, jugulus, ingluvies, Ang. cræye.—Kil. Sw. kråfwa, Dan. kro, u craw. See Crag.

To Crawl. Du. krabben, krauwen, to scratch with the nails or claws, krabbelen, to scratch with the nails, to scabble, to scrawl, or make inartificial scratches, inapte pingere, scribere seu exarare.—Kil. As in English we have formed scrawl from scabble, so our crawl corresponds to the Du. krabbeln, of which the fundamental meaning is to exercise the nails or claws. To crawl is to drag oneself on by clutching with the claws. G. krabbeln, to crawl about, go on all fours. Bret. mond war he grabanou, to go on all fours, literally, to go on his claws, from kraban, a claw; krafa, krava, to seize, to clutch; Dan. kravle, to crawl, scramble. Du. krauwel, G. kralle, a claw; krallen, to claw, to scratch. See Crab, Grab.

Crawfish. Disguised by a false etymology, as if it were the designation of a certain kind of fish. The corruption however is comparatively modern. “Creceys, fysshe—polypus.”—Pr. Pm. Written also crevish.—Trench. From the Fr. écrevisse; Du. krevisse, krevitse—Kil.; OIIG. krebiz; G. krebs, a crab, from the grabbing or clutching action of the animal. Sp. escarbar, to scabble, escarabajo; Lang. escarabat, a beetle (an animal in which the claw is nearly as conspicuous a feature as in the crab), escurabisse, a crawfish.

Crayon. Fr. crayon, a piece of drawing chalk, from craier, to chalk; craie, Lat. creta, chalk, Gael. creadh, clay.

To Craze.—Crazy. To craze, to crack, to render inefficient.

And some said the pot was crazed.—Can. Yeoman’s Tale.

Earthenware at the present day is said to be crazed when the glaze is disfigured with a network of small cracks. Fr. accraser, to break, burst, craze, bruise, crush; escrasé, squasht down, crushed in pieces.—Cot. From a representation of the noise of crashing a hard substance. Dan. krase, knase, to crackle; slaae i kras, to break to pieces. Sw. kraslig, crazy, feeble, decrepit, poorly. The E. crazy, applied to the mind, is equivalent to cracked, cracky, crack-brained.

Creak. Imitative of a more acute sound than that represented by crack. Fr. criquer, to creak, rattle, crackle; cri-caille, chinks, coin.—Cot. It. crizzare, criechiare, to crick, creak, or squeak, as a door or a cartwheel, also to rattle. Cricco, crichio, that creaking noise of ice or glass when it breaks. Du. krick, krack, strepitus, fragor.—Kil. Then, as things in splitting make a sharp sound, we have creak of day for the narrow crack of light on the horizon, which is the first appearance of dawn. Du. kriccke, kricckelinge, Aurora rutilans, primum diluculum.—Kil.

Cream. In Fr. crème two words seem confounded, the one signifying cream, which ought to be written without the circumflex, and the other signifying chrism, O. Fr. eresme, Gr. $\chi\rho\iota\sigma\mu\alpha$, the consecrated oil used in baptism. In Italian the two are kept distinct, crema, cream, and eresima, chrism. The primary meaning of the word is, I believe, foam, froth.

Crème—spuma lactis pinguior.—Dict. Trev. Champagne

crémant, sparkling or mantling champagne. Icel. at krauma, lente coqui, to simmer; kraumr, krumr, kraum, the lowest stage of boiling, simmering, also the juice or cream of a thing, cremor, flos rei. It. cremore, the crecming or simpering of milk when it beginnith to seethe; also yeast, barm; used also for a shivering fever.—Fl. It must be remembered that one of the readiest ways of raising cream is by scalding the milk till it just begins to simmer. The forms cremore and crema in Italian correspond to the Icel. kraumr, kraum. As is often the case with words beginning with cr, the equivalents of the E. cream are accompanied by a parallel series beginning with a simple r. AS. and Sc. ream, Icel. riomi, Du. room, G. rahm, cream.

—Or quaff pure element, ah me!

Without ream, sugar, or bohea.—Ramsay in Jam.

Reaming liquor, frothing liquor. Then, as froth spreads like a mantle over the surface of a liquid, the ryme of the sea, the surface of the sea. The Icel. hrim is used to designate as well rime, or hoar frost, as soot, each of which forms a soft coating over bodies, like froth on the surface of water. The E. grime, like cream, preserves the initial guttural; “be-grimed with soot.” The G. rahm, cream, is also applied to soot.—Schwenk. It is not impossible that the word soot itself may have a like derivation from Icel. sioda, to scethe or boil. Hence Dan. sod, water in which meat has been boiled, and also soot; Du. sode, ebullition. E. sod, ‘the soft covering of a grassy field.

Crease. Bret. kríz, a wrinkle, pleat, tuck in a garment. The designation of a wrinkle seems often taken from a representation of the sound of snarling, as a dog in snarling wrinkles up the face. Du. grijsen, grijnsen, ringere, os distortuere, depravare, naves crispere, fremere, frendere, flere puerorum more—Kil.; grijnzen, montrer son chagrin en se ridant le front, en fronçant le sourcil, en grinçant les dents, ou par d’autres grimaces.—Halma. Fr. grisser, to crackle, crisser, grincer les dents, to grind, grate, or gnash the teeth together for anger.—Cot. It. grisciare, to chill or chatter with the teeth; grinciare, grinzare, to grin or gnash with the teeth, to wrinkle; grincia, grinza, a wrinkle. From It. grinza we readily pass to G. runzel, a wrinkle, analogous to E. crumple and rump.

We see the same relation between grinning or snarling and wrinkling in Du. grimmen, furere, fremere, frendere, hirrire, ringere, ducere vultus, contrahere rugas—Kil.; It. grimaccie, grimazze, crabbed looks, wry mouths; grimare, grimmare, to wrinkle through age, grimo, grimmo, wrinkled, withered. Grignare, to grin or snarl as a dog.—Fl. Fr. grigner, to grin; grigne, wrinkled.—Cot. To snarl is said of the grinning of a dog and the curling of over-twisted thread. The Du. grommen, grommelen, Fr. grommeler, to grumble, would seem to give a like derivation for E. crumple.

From the Lat. fremere, to growl, grumble, we may explain the Du. wrempen, wrimpen, os distortuere—Kil., and the E. frump, ill humour, to frumple, to wrinkle, ruffle.—Hal. Still nearer the Du. form is the E. wrimple, rimple, a wrinkle.

The facility with which an initial g, k, w, or f is added or lost before the r points to a similar origin of the E. wrinkle, in forms like the It. ringhi, ringhiature, snarlings, yarrings, or grinnings with the teeth; ringhiare, rinchiare, ringere, to blurt with the mouth as it were snarling, as angry mules when they kick.—Fl.

Creek. Used in two senses, which may however have a common origin.

1. A little bay, a nook in a harbour. Du. kreke, Fr. crique, an inlet, small natural haven. Icel. kryki, angulus, secessus, from krokr, a hook.

2. A brook, for which it is the common word in America. Cryke of watyr, scatera.—Pr. Pm. Du. kreke, a crooked ditch, a small stream that runs with an elbow.—Weiland. But kreke, as AS. crecca, is also a bank, brink, crepido—Kil., whence the sense of brook may be derived, as the original sense of Fr. rivière was a bank or margin.

To Creep. AS. creopan; Du. kruipen; G. kriechen, to creep; Icel. kriupa, to kneel; kriupa at kniam eins, ad genua cuius accidere, properly to crouch at his knees, to draw oneself together; kryppa, a hump. Gael. crup, crouch, bend, contract, shrink; crub, sit, squat, crouch, creep; crùb, a claw, fang; crubain, creep, crouch, cringe, shrug; cruban, a crouching attitude, a crabfish, any crooked creature. Fr. croupir, to crouch, bow, stoop or go double.—Cot. To creep is to move on by alternate contractions of the body. See Crab.

Crescent. The figure of the growing moon, of the moon in an early stage of growth. Fr. croissant, Lat. creescens, growing.

Cress. An herb eaten raw. AS. cærse, Du. kersse, Sw. krasse. Fr. resson, the herb termed kars or cresses; resson d'eau, water carries.—Cot. It. crecione, ressone, Mid. Lat. crissonium. Perhaps from the crunching sound of eating the crisp green herb. Fr. crisser, to grind the teeth.

Cresset. See Crock.

Crevice. Fr. crevasse, crevure, a chink, rift, from crever, to burst, chink, rive, or chawnc.—Cot. Lat. crepare, to creak, crack, break.

Crew. See Crowd.

Crewel. Two-twisted worsted.—B. Properly a ball of worsted. G. knäuel, Pl. D. klevel, a ball of thread. The interchange of liquids in this class of words is very common. Compare W. clob, crob, E. knob, a round lump or hunch.

Crib. A cratch or manger for cattle. Du. kribbe, G. krippe, Pl. D. krubbe, It. greppia, gruppia, Prov. crepia, crepcha, Fr. creiche. Probably from the notion of confining, signifying in the first instance a confined space for the purpose either of holding the fodder of animals, or for making a sleeping-place for a child or the like. "Cribbed, cabined, and confined." Manx crib, curb, contract, shrink. Gael. crup, crouch, bend, contract, shrink. See Crab.

Cricket. 1. An insect making a sharp creaking sound. Du. krieken, to chirp, kriek, a cricket.—Halma. Compare also Bohem. cwrček, a cricket, cwrkati, to chirp; Fr. grillon, grizzillon, a cricket; griller, to creak, grizziller, to crackle.—Cot.

2. Fr. criquet, the stick or peg serving for a mark in the game of bowls.—Roquef. In like manner doubtless in the game of cricket the word was originally the designation of the wicket at which the bowler directs his aim. The Du. kliket, klinket, is synonymous with wicket, wincket, a little door, moving readily to and fro. See Clinch. And the l of clicket changes to an r in Lang. criketos, clickets, or flat bones used as castanets. Fr. criqueter, to rattle, from whence the notion of moving backwards and forwards is derived.

Crimini. O Crimini! interjection of surprise, seems to have come to us from an Italian source. Mod. Gr. κριμα, a crime, fault, sin, pity, misfortune. Ω τι κριμα! Ω τι μεγαλον κριμα! O what a pity! what a sin or fault! Adopted into Italian the expression would be O che crimine!

Crimp, Crimple. Cramp, crimp, crump are all used in the sense of contraction. To crimp frills is to lay them in pleats; crimped cod is cod in which the fibre has been allowed to contract by means of parallel cuts through the muscle of the fish. To crimple is to wrinkle; crympylle or rympylle, ruga.—Pr. Pm.

W. crimpio, to pinch or crimp, crimp, a sharp edge; Dan. krympe, to shrink, Du. krimpen, to contract, shrink, decrease. The great difficulty in treating words of this kind arises from the innumerable directions in which their relations branch out on all sides. The addition of an initial s gives E. scrimp, to contract, cut short, AS. scrimman, to dry up, wither, G. schrumpfen, to crumple, shrivel, wrinkle. On the other hand the reduction of the initial cr to a simple r gives E. rimple as well as rumple, a wrinkle, crease, pucker; Du. rimpe, rimpel, rompel, a wrinkle.—Kil. G. rümpfen, to screw up the mouth and nose, make wry faces. In the latter sense Kil. has krimpneusen, wrimpen, wrempen, os distorquere, corrugare nares. The analogous E. term is frump, to frizzle up the nose as in derision.—B., whence, frumple, a wrinkle.—Pr. Pm.

It seems hard to separate words so closely related as cramp and crimp, but we must not neglect a clear line of derivation when it offers itself, because we find ourselves unable to make a perfect system of all the related forms. Now the derivation of several words signifying wrinkle was traced under Creak to the image of an animal under the influence of bad temper snarling, grinning, and wrinkling up the face. And the present series lends itself very naturally to such an origin. The Du. grimmen, fremere, frendere, hirrire, is doubtless a representation of the grumbling sound of a snarling dog, as grommen, grommelen, grunnire, murmurare, of similar sounds. After directly representing the sound, grimmen is applied to the action of the face by which the growling is accompanied, and then to contraction or wrinkling in general; grimmen, ringere, ringi, ducere vultus, contrahere rugas; grimminge, krimpinge in den buyck, griping in the belly.—Kil. It. grimo, grimmo, wrinkled or withered, grimaccie, crabbed looks, wry mouths.—Fl.

Crimson. Fr. cramoisi, It. cremasi, cremesino. Turk. kirmizi; Sp. carmesi, from kermes, the name of the insect with which it is dyed.

To Cringe. To go bowing, behave in a submissive manner. From AS. crumb, crymbig, crooked, a verb crymbigean, crymbian (not in the dictionaries) would be to crook or bend, corresponding to E. cringe as It. cambiare to E. change. G. krumm, crooked; sich krümmen und bücken, to stoop and cringe.—Kütt. Ir. cromaim, to bow down. Fr. croupir, to bow, stoop, go double; Dan. krybe, to creep, grovel, krybe for een, to cringe to one.

Crinkle. See Crank.

Cripple. Properly a crookback or humpback, one who goes crooked. Icel. kryppa, a hump, curvature, coil; kryppill, a humpbacked or a lame man. Du. krepel, kreupel, kropel, a cripple. Dan. krybe, krob, to creep, krobbel, krobbling, a cripple, a stunted object; Gael. crub, crup, to crouch, shrink, creep (go in a crooked or crouching manner), crubach, crupach, a cripple, lame person.

Crisp. Lat. crispus, Fr. crespe, OE. crips, curled.

Her hair that owndie (wavy) was and crips.—Chaucer in R.

The latter form might lead us to connect the word with Gael. crup, contract, crupag, a wrinkle. On the other hand the AS. cirpsian, to crisp or curl, compared with E. chirp, reminds us that Fr. cresper is both to frizzle or curl, and to crackle or creak, as new shoes or dry sticks laid on the fire.—Cot. And the sense of a curly or wrinkled structure is in other cases expressed by words representing in the first instance a crackling or creaking sound. It. grillare (and sometimes Fr. griller—Cot.) signifies to creak or chirp as a cricket, while griller is explained to sit rumped or in plaits, to snarl as overtisted thread; greziller, to crackle, also to curl, twirl, frizzle hair; to frizzle is used both of the crackling sound of fat in the fire, and in the sense of curling up. The train of thought proceeds from a quivering sound to a vibratory motion, and thence to a surface thrown into a succession of ridges or involutions. Thus the Latin speaks of the vibrating sound of the nightingale, sonus lusciniæ vibrans, of sound vibrating in our ears, while the passage from the idea of vibration to that of a wrinkled or curly structure may be illustrated by the designation of a chitterling and the synonymous shirt-frill, from E. chitter, and Fr. friller, to shiver. Vibrati crines are curly locks, and conversely crispus is applied to the rapid vibration of a serpent's tongue. Linguae bisulcæ jactu crispo fulgere.—Pacuv. in Forcell.

The sense of rigid and brittle might well be a special application of the former one, because the unevennesses of a rigid surface obtrude themselves on our notice. But on the other hand it seems to arise from direct imitation of the sound of crushing something crisp. Fr. cresper, to crashe as a thyngedothe that is cryspe or britell betweene one's teeth.—Palsgr. Pl. D. kraspehn, to rustle.—Danneil. In like manner crump is used for the sound of crunching, and also for crisp or the quality of things that crunch between the teeth.

Tib's teeth the sugar-plums did crump.—

Farls baked wi' butter

Fu' crump that day.—Burns in Jam.

Crumpy, short, brittle.—Hal. It is remarkable that here also is the same connexion with the sense of a crumpled or curly and wrinkled structure, as in the case of crisp.

Crock.—Cruise.—Cruet.—Cresset.—Crucible. Du. kruycke, G. krug, Dan. krukke, W. cregen, an earthen vessel, pitcher, jar. The Lith. kružas (ž = Fr. j), Fr. cruche, unite the foregoing with forms having a final s; Icel. krus, G. krus, Du. kroes, kruyse, a cup, drinking-vessel; Hung. korsó, E. cruse, cruise, a jar.

Perhaps the original meaning may be a narrow-necked jar.

Deep in a narrow-craiged pig

Lay many a dainty nut and fig.—Ramsay in Jam.

Bohem. krk (dim. krček); Pol. kark, Sc. crag, craig, a neck; Bohem. krčak, Russ. korsok (Palkovitsch), a crock or pitcher with a narrow neck. The Gael. has sgrog, the neck, krog, a pitcher. Lith. kragas, a can.

The diminutives of the foregoing appellations of a jar are formed with different terminations, giving rise to several words in the special significations, first of a vessel for containing oil, and then of a lamp, and secondly of a melting-pot.

From the form cruse are derived the Fr. creuset, croiset, a crucible, cruset, or cruet, a little earthen pot, wherein goldsmiths melt their silver, &c.—Cot.; crassetum, i. q. Picard. cracet, schmelz-tiegel (a crucible).—Dief. Süp. The loss of the s gives E. cruet, crewet, crevet, a phial or narrow-mouthed glass to hold oil or vinegar, a melting-pot.—B.

In the sense of a lamp we have Rouchi crassé, craché, Du. kruysel, krosel, Fr. creuseul, croissel, a hanging lamp; E. cresset, a large lantern fixed on a pole.—B. Ir. cruisgin, a small pot or pitcher, cruisgin oli, a pitcher of oil; Gael. cruisgin, an oil-lamp, a cruise.—Macleod. Fr. creusequin, a drinking-vessel, E. cruskin or cruske, coop of erthe.—Pr. Pm. The Greek diminutive termination πouλο gives crucibolum, a night-lamp, and also a crucible or melting-pot. Creuseul, croissol, lumière de nuit, crucibolum.—Gloss. in Duc. De noctu proferenti sæpius extinguebat candelam, crucibolum, et oleum effundebat.—Ibid. Crucibolus, kruse, kruselin, krug, becher.—Dief. Sup.

The erroneous supposition of a derivation from cruz, a cross, appears as early as the AS. times. Scyphum meum deauratum—quem crucibolum meum solitus sum vocare, quia signum crucis per transversum scyphi imprimitur interius cum quatuor angulis simili impressione protuberantibus.—Duc.

Crocus. The yellow flower from whence saffron is made. Lat. crocus, Gr. κροκος. Gael. croch, W. coch, red. Hence the surname Croker, a cultivator of saffron. “The crokers or saffron men do use an observation a little before the coming up of the flower.”—Hollinshed in R.

Croft. An inclosure adjoining a house. AS. croft, prædiolum.—Somner. Gael. croit, a hump, hunch, a croft or small piece of arable land; croiteir, a crofter, one holding a croft of land.

Crone. 1. An old woman. 2. An old sheep, beginning to lose its teeth.

In the former application it probably signifies a moaning, muttering creature. Gael. cronan, a dull note, low murmuring sound, humming of a bee, purring of a cat, &c. Sc. crone, croon, a hollow, continued moan.

In the second application it is the It. carogna, Fr. charogne, Du. karonie, kronie, a carcase, carrion, then applied to an old sheep, ovis vetula rejicula—Kil., ein faul Thier—Dief. Sup., in cadaver. Perhaps indeed the application to an old woman has the same origin. “An old carrion.”

Crook.—Crouch. A word of almost infinite connexions. Pol. kruk, a hook, crook; Icel. kraki, a hook; Du. kroke, a fold, wrinkle, curl; Dan. krog, a hook, crook, corner; Gael. crocan, a hook, crook; croch, hang; Ir. croch, gallows; crochaim, to hang; W. croca, crocca, crooked; crogi, to hang; Fr. croc, a grapple or great hook, crochu, hooked, bowed downwards or inwards.

The fundamental meaning of the word is to contract, and the origin seems preserved in the Bohem. krk, a neck. See Crag. Then as the neck affords an apt type of contraction, krčiti, to contract, to crook, curve, crumple, wrinkle, krčiti se, to shrink, shrivel, pucker; krec, sskrek, cramp, spasm; Russ. korvha, cramp, spasm; korčit, to draw in (retrecir), korchitsya, to shrink, to become stiff, to crook. The E. crouch is essentially the same word. It signifies to draw the body together in taking a submissive attitude. Comp. Fr. crochu, bowed downwards. Sc. crouchie, a humpback; Icel. krokna, to be contracted or stiffened, or even killed, with cold.

Gr. κρικος, a ring, link, hook, or anything curved, leads to Icel. kringr, hringr, a whirl, a ring; Sw. kringla, a circle, and unites the present series with the forms crank, crinkle, &c.

In Lith., as in G. rachen, the jaws, throat, the guttural is lost, and an initial r alone remains; ruku or runku, rukti, to contract, shrink; rauka, a fold, a wrinkle. Corresponding forms are exhibited in Lat. ruga, a wrinkle; Gael. roe, a curl, wrinkle, plait; Icel. hruckr, a wrinkle; E. ruck, a heap, crumpled mass; rugged, wrinkled, uneven.

Crop. AS. crop, top, bunch, craw of a bird. OE. *cropp*e of an erbe or tree, cima, coma, capillamentum.—Pr. Pm. The fundamental meaning is probably exhibited in the Gael. crap, enap, a knob, knot, boss, a little hill; W. crob, crub, a round hunch; crub, a swelling out; It. groppo, a knot, knob, bunch.—Fl. The word is then applied to different things of a rounded or protuberant form, the top of a hill or of a plant, the crop or projecting stomach of a bird, &c.

Fr. crope, croupe, the top or knap of a hill; la croupe du dos, the ridge of the back, and thence croupe, It. groppa, the rump or rounded haunches of an animal; E. crop, the craw, the belly, also the buttock or haunch—Hal.; Sw. kropp, the top of anything, the solid mass of the animal frame or body; kroppug, gibbous, humped; Lat. corpus. Or perhaps as the G. kropf is applied in a contemptible sense to the human stomach (Küttner), the designation may be extended to the trunk or body, of which the belly is the principal member.

Du. crop, the knob of the throat, the throat, itself, “dat steeckt my in den crop,” that sticks in my throat; crop, a swelling in the throat, goitre, the craw of a bird, stomach; croppen, to cram, to thrust food into the throat (Biglotton), whence the E. crop-full, cram-full, as in G. gepfropft voll, from pfropfen, to cram. G. kropf, the craw of a bird, goitre, wen; the head of vegetables, as kohl-kropf, salat-kropf; kropf-sallat, Du. krop van salaet, cabbage-lettuce; then anything bunchy or ill grown or small of its kind; sich kropfen, to grow amiss, grow crooked; krüpfen sich, to crook oneself.—Schmeller. Icel. kroppna, to stiffen or contract with cold; Fr. croupir, to crooch, stoop, go double—Cot.; to croup, to stoop, to crouch.—Hal.

The crop of a vegetable is the top, and thence the whole part above ground; the crop and root, or crop and more, are frequently contrasted with each other in OE. Hence to crop is to bite or gather the foliage or fruit. A crop of corn is the whole annual growth, and the sense being thus generalised the term is equally applied to the growth of roots, when that is the important part of the vegetables; a crop of turnips or of carrots as well as of grass or fruit.

It is remarkable that parallel with many of the foregoing forms, with an initial kr, are a series of similar meaning with a simple k. See Cuddle. Thus we have in E. the crop or cop of a hill; Bav. koppen, the crop or bushy part of a tree, koppen, to crop or cut off the crop or cop of a tree; G. kohl-kopf, kopf-sallat as kropf-sallat above cited. The same root may be traced in the Fin. kupo, a bundle of straw, &c., kuppa, a bubble, tumour, swelling (comp. OHG. chropf, a bladder—Schilter); kupu, the crop of a bird, belly of animals; kaalin kupu, a head of cabbage.

Cross. Fr. croix, It. croce, Sp. kruz, Icel. kross, G. kreuz, Du. kruys. All from the Lat. cruz, a cross for the punishment of malefactors; and that not directly from crook, to curve, but through the intermediation of the notion of hanging; Gael. crocan, a hook, croch, hang; Ir. crochaim, to hang, and croch, as Lat. cruz, a, gallows, an erection for hanging a man on.

From cruz are many derivatives: cruciare, to torture, crucifade, Mid. Lat. cruciata, Du. kruijs-vaert, an expedition from religious motives, in which the soldiers took the badge of the cross; crucify, &c.

Crotchet.—Crocket. Fr. crochet, dim. of croc, a little hook, and hence a note in music, from the hook-like symbol by which they were marked. Fr. crochet, crochue, a quaver in music. Then as a person playing music appears to carry in his brain the type of what he is playing, a crotchet is a fixed imagination. “Il a des crochues dans la tete, his 'head is full of crotchets.”—Cot.

As a good harper stricken far in years
 Into whose cunning hands the gout does fall.
 All his old crotchets in his brain he bears,
 But on his harp plays ill or not at all.—Davies in R.

A crotchet or crocket is also an ornamental excrescence in Gothic architecture like a twisted tress of hair, from Du. kroke, a curl.

And bellyche yeorven
 With crotchets on corners.—P. P. crede.

Crouch. A cross, as in crutched friars, the crossed friars, or friars who wore a cross; crouch mass, a festival in honour of the holy cross. To crouch, to mark with the sign of the cross.

And said his orisons as is usage,
 And crouchid hem and bade God shuld hem bless.

To Crouch. To stoop, to bow the body together. Icel. kro-kinn, crooked, bowed down, krokna, to be contracted or stiffened with cold; at sitia i eirne krukku, to crouch down on one's heels. W. crwcau, to bow, to curve; crwcod, a round squat, a person crouched together. Prov. E. cruckle, to bend, to stoop.—Hal.

Croup. A disease in the throat of young children, in which the throat is contracted and a harsh screaming cough produced. Gael. crup, contract, shrink; crupadh, contraction, shrinking, shrivelling; the croup. But perhaps the idea of contraction, expressed by the syllable crup, is derived from the harsh sound of struggling for breath through a contracted windpipe, and not vice versâ, so that the name of the disease would be direct from an imitation of the sound produced. And this would agree with the principle on which the notion of contraction or compression, expressed by the syllable crook, has above been explained.

Bohem. chrapati, chrupati, to snort; chrapawy, hoarse, chropot, snorting, hoarseness, chroptiti (röcheln), to struggle for breath, to sob; Pol. chrobotac, to grate, jar, rattle, chrapanie, rattling in the throat; chrapliwy, shrill, harsh, hoarse; chrap, nostrils of a horse.

Goth. hroþjan, Icel. hropa, Sc. roup, to cry. Sc. roup is also used in the sense of hoarseness and of the disease croup.—Jam. To croup, to croak.—Hal.

Crow.—Crouk. A direct imitation of the cry of different birds. G. krühen, to crow like a cock; krächzen, to croak; Du. kraeyen, to crow or to croak or caw; Lat. crocare; It. crociolare; Fr. croasser; Gr. κρωζειν; Bohem. krokati, to croak. From Du. kraeyen is formed kraeye, a crow. In like manner from croak the Icel. has krakr, a raven, kraki, a crow. Lith. kraukti, to croak, krauklys, a crow, NE. a crouk.—Hal.

Crowd.—Crowder. The crowd or fiddle was recognised by the Romans as a British instrument.

Romæusque lyrâ plaudat tibi, Barbarus harpâ, Græcus Achilliâ; crotta Britanna placet.

Fortunatus in Duc.

Named from the hollow sounding board. W. crwth, a hollow protuberance, bulge, belly, fiddle; croth, a bulge, a womb, crothi, to bulge. Gael. croit, a hump, cruit, a harp, fiddle; Ir. cruit, a hunch, also a crowd or fiddle.

Crowd. 2.—Curd. A crowd is a lump or mass of people; curds or cruds, as it was formerly written, are milk coagulated or driven into lumps; to cruddle, to coagulate or curdle; to crowd or huddle. To croodle (to draw oneself together into a lump from cold or otherwise), to cower, crouch, cuddle, also to feel cold.—Hal.

W. crowd, a round lump; Bohem. hruda, a clod, a lump, h. udka, a clot; Pol. gruda, grudka, a clod, snowball; E. crote, a clod of earth.—Hal. Fr. crottes, E. crottles, the lumpy dung of sheep, goats, &c.; crottles, cruttles, crums, broken pieces; to cruttle, to curdle; crut, a dwarf, W. crwt, crwtyn, a little dumpy fellow.

To crowd is to gather to a lump, hence to thrust, to push. Du. kruyden, kruyen, trudere, protrudere, propellere.—Kil. Crowdyn or showyn (shove) impello.—Pr. Pm. To crowd is still used in Suffolk in the sense of driving in a crowd-barrow or wheel-barrow (Du. kruy-wagen).—Forby. In Amis and Amilown a crowd-wain.

Then Amoraunt crud Sir Amiloun

Through many a cuntre up and down.—Way.

The word signifying a lump or clod is used in the same way to express the notion of thrusting, in the Bohem. hruden, the intercalary month, in G. schaltmonat, from schalten, to shove.

The double form of the Du. kruyden, kruyen shows the radical identity of the E. crowd and crew or crue, signifying a clump of people. Lith. kruwa, a heap, as of stones, straw, or people.

Crown. Lat. corona. W. crwon, round, circular; crynfaen, a pebble, a round stone; crynoi, to collect together, to draw to a mass, crynyn, a globule; Ir. cruin, round, cruinne, the globe of the earth; cruinnighim, to collect; Gael. cràn, the boss of a shield, a crown, garland; cruinn, round, globular; cruinne, the globe, cruinneachan, any round heap.

Crucible. See Crock.

Crude.—Cruel. Lat. crudus, bloody, raw, unripe, unfeeling; crudelis, hard, cruel, severe; cruentus, bloody, cruel; cruor, blood. Russ. krov', Bohem. krew, W. crau, Ir. crú, Lith. kraujas, blood. Bret. kriz, raw, cruel.

Cruise. To sail up and down. Du. kruissen, from kruis; Fr. croiser, from croix; Dan. krydse, from kryds, a cross.

Crum. A small morsel of bread. AS. crume. Gael. criom, pick, bite, nip, nibble; criomag, a small bit, shred, tatter; criomagaich, crumble; Berri. gremiller, to crumble, gremillons, groumignons, crums. The crum or soft part of bread (in which sense the Pl. D. krom is also used—Danneil) is the part which is easily crumbled.

Crump. — Crumple. Crump-back, hump-back; crump or crumple-footed, club-footed, to crumple, to draw up into wrinkles; Sw. krumpen, shrunk, contracted, numbed. AS. crumb, crump, crymbig, bowed, bent; G. krumm, W. crom, erom, crooked, crymu, to bend, crook, stoop; Sc. crummy, a cow with a crumpled horn. The fundamental image, in accordance with the views explained under Crab, should be a lump, round mass, or projection, from whence the ideas of contraction, bending, crookedness, readily follow. Now in the former sense we have W. crwb, a hump, E. croop-back, a hump-back, and with the nasal, crump, the projection of the haunches, rump.—Hal. Lith. krumplys, a knuckle; Bohem. krumple, a potato.

On the other hand the idea of curliness or roughness of surface is frequently connected with that of rigidity, and both are expressed by a direct representation of the sound made in crushing a rigid and brittle substance. And crump, as was shown under Crisp, is taken for such a noise and the quality of things which give rise to it.

To Crunk or Crunkle. To cry like a crane or heron. Lith. krankti, to make a harsh noise, to snort, croak; krunkinti, krankinti, to croak.

Crupper. Fr. croupière, the strap passing over the croupe or rump of a horse to hold back the saddle. Fr. croupe, the top of a hill, ridge of the back, rump of a horse. Porter en croupe, to carry behind one on horseback. Prov. E. crump, the rump. See Crop.

To Crush. From a representation of the noise of crushing a hard or brittle body. Fr. croissir, to crack or crash or crackle as wood that is ready to break.—Cot. It. crosciare, croscere, to squash, crash, crush, squeeze, but properly to fall violently as a sudden storm of rain or hail upon the tiles, and therewithal to make a clattering loud noise; to crick as green wood; croscio d'aqua, a sudden shower.—Flor. Lith. kruszi, to crush, to grind; krusza, hail, sleet; kruszinne (graupe), meal, grots; nukruszi, to grind off the husks of corn, especially barley (It. crusca, bran?). Hanover. krössehn, to crush break to bits.

Crust. Lat. crusta, the hard outward coat of anything. In all probability from the sound of crunching a crust of bread. Bohem. chraustati, to crunch (knarrend mit Zähnen zermalmen); chrasta, the crust of a wound; chrastěi, the cornerake; chraust, a beetle, insect with a crusty covering; chrustacka, gristle. See Gristle. Bret., with an inversion of the consonants, trousken, crust of a wound, scab. Gael. rusg, rind, skin, husk, bark; Bret. rusk, bark; E. rusk, a hard crust, crust baked crisp.

Crutch. G. krücke, Du. kruck, Lith. kruke, It. gruccia, a crutch; croccie, crocciette, crosslets, little crosses, a bishop's crosier, the cross bars of the hilt of a sword, also crouches or crutchets for lame men to go with. The meaning of the word then is obviously a staff with a cross bar at the top for the support of the arm. Crutch was also used in the sense of cross. See Cross.

To Cry. Imitative of a shrill sudden exertion of the voice. It. gridare, Fr. crier, G. schreien. Du. schrey, clamor et fletus, ejulatus. As a shrill cry is the natural expression of a high degree of pain, the word passes on to signify the shedding of tears, the most general expression of pain of any kind. In like manner the verb to weep comes from AS. wop, the primary meaning of which is simply outcry.

Crypt. It. cripta, a hollow vault, a church under-ground, a lurking den or secret sink under-ground.—Flor. Doubtless from κρυπτω, to hide, being primarily used for performing in safety the religious services of the early Christians. “Ac per cryptas et latibula cum paucis Christianis per eum conversis mysterium solennitatis diei dominici clanculo celebrabat.”—Greg. of Tours in Duc. “In qua Basilica est crypta abditissima.”—Ibid.

Cub. The young of animals of certain kinds, as of dogs, bears, foxes. Icel. kobbi, a seal, vitulus marinus. (Dan. sælhund.)

Cubit. Lat. cubitus, cubitus, Gr. κῦβιτρον, the elbow or bending of the arm. From a root cub, signifying crook or bend, seen in Gael. cub, crouch, stoop, shrink; cubach, bent, hollowed, in Gr. κῦπτω, to stoop, Lat. cubare, to lie down, properly, to bow down.

Cucking-stool. A chair on which females for certain offences were fastened and ducked in a pond. “The chair was sometimes in the form of a close-stool [which] contributed to increase the degradation.”—Halliwell. Manx cugh, excrement in children’s language. Icel. kuka, caccare. Cukkyngæ ðr pýsynge vesselle—sca-phium.—Pr. Pm. “Similiter malam cervisiam faciens, aut in cathedrâ poncbatur stercoris, aut iij. sol. dabat prepositis.”—Domesday B. in Way. It was also called goging-stool. A. Sax. gong-stole, a close-stool.

Cuckold. Cuckolled, treated in the way that the cuckow (Lat. cuculus) serves other birds, viz. by laying an egg in their nest.

Cuckow. G. kuckuck, Lat. cuculus, Sc. gowk, Du. kuyck-kuck, kock-kock.—Kil. From the cry.

Cucumber. Fr. concombre, coucombre.—Cot. Lat. cucumis, —meris, a cucumber; It. cocomero.

Cud.—Quid. To chew the cud is to chew the contents of the stomach, which in ruminating animals are thrown up into the mouth again for that purpose. It is called quid in Surrey, whence a quid of tobacco is a small piece of tobacco kept in the mouth like the cud of a ruminating cow.

AS. cud, rumen—Somner; cud, the inner part of the throat in beasts.—B. Goth. quithei, the womb; Icel. quidr, the womb, paunch, maw; at missa quidinn, Dan. miste maven, in Surrey to lose the quid, a disease in cattle equivalent to Bailey’s cudlost. In like manner in Lat. rumino, to chew cud, from rumen, the paunch. "Ego rumorem parvifacio dum sit rumen qui implcam," so long as I am able to fill my belly. Icel. et quida, to fill one's belly, quidadr, satisfied, full. Fin. kohtu, the womb, maw, especially of ruminating animals; Esthon. köht, the belly. Sc. kyte, the stomach, belly.

The Deil cut aff thair hands gooth he
That cramd your kyles sae strute yestreen.

Wife of Auchtermuty.

To Cuddle. Prov. E. crewdle, to crouch together, to croodle, to cower, to crouch, to cuddle, also to feel cold; to cruddle, to crowd or huddle.—Hal. To crewdle or croodle, to crouch together like frightened chickens on the sight of a bird of prey.—Wilbraham. Croodle, to lie close and snug as pigs or puppies in their straw.—Forby. From crowd, to press. To cruttle, cruddle, to stoop.—Holloway.

Now to cuddle is used exactly in the sense indicated by Forby or Wilbraham.

Or have you marked a partridge quake,
Viewing the trowing falcon nigh;
She cuddles low beneath the brake,
Nor would she stay nor dare she fly.—Prior in R.

They hopped from spray to spray,
They billed, they chirped all day,
They cuddled close all night.

The existence moreover of forms like cruddle and cuddle (one of which begins with a mute and a liquid, and in the other the liquid is omitted), either in the same or in related dialects, is a phenomenon of very frequent occurrence. We may cite E. scamble and scramble; stamp and stramp; coo and croo, like a dove; to cuff and cluff, to strike—Hal.; cob and clob, clay for building cottages; Bav. koppezen and kroppezen, to belch; Du. konkelen and kronkelen, to crinkle, kodse, kudse, and knodse, knudse, a club; kauwen and kнауwen, to chew, gnaw; koesteren and kloesteren, to cherish, pamper; Fr. gazon, glazon, a sod; Du. stobbe, Fris. strobbe, a stub; E. speckle,

Sw. spreckla ; E. speak, G. sprechen ; E. pin, Sc. prin ; Lat. scopa, E. scrub ; Bohem. kapati, krapati, to drip ; Lat. cancer, Bret. krank ; W. ceg, Icel. kok, the throat ; Bohem. krk, Sc. crag, the neck ; G. kegel, Pol. kregle, ninepins ; G. winkel, a corner, E. wrinkle ; Du. wiggelen, motitare, E. wriggle ; Lat. coaxare, E. croak ; Lith. kumpas, E. crump, crooked ; E. cob, W. clob, a lump ; Russ. puk, Gael. pluk, a bunch ; E. chink, Du. klinche, a slit, cleft ; E. gingle, Gael. gliong ; Fr. quincailler, Rouchi clincailler, to tinkle, E. chink and clink, to tinkle ; chatter and clatter ; Sp. casco, Lang. closco, a scull ; Fr. cosse, Bret. clos, a husk ; W. coch, Gael. croch, red ; Fr. crucheter and chucheter ; brimbeloter and bimbeloter.—Cot.

In like manner I believe the loss of an r has converted cruddle into cuddle.

Cudgel. Du. kodse, kudse, a club, knobbed stick ; knodse, knudse, a knotted stick, knodsen, knudsen, tundere, contundere, batuere.—Kil. The origin is probably a form like It. cozzare, to knock.

Cue. Fr. queue, a tail. The last words of the preceding speech, written with the speech of an actor in order to let him know when he is to come on the stage.

Cuff. It. schiaffo, a cuff, buffet, whirret or clap with the hand on the cheek.—Fl. The cuff of a sleeve is the flap or part that flaps or claps back. The Dan. has klap; a flap, as the flap of a table ; Sw. klaff, a flap, anything that hangs broad and loose, as the flap of a glove or a hat, the cuff of a coat. This with an s prefixed and the l converted into an i, after the It. pronunciation, would give schiaffo. In like manner the Sp. golpe signifies a blow and also the flap of a pocket.

Cuirass. Fr. cuirasse ; It. corazza, quasi coriacea, made of leather, from Lat. corium, a skin.—Diez. So Lat. lorica, a cuirass, from lorum, a strap. O. Fr. cuirie, Port. coura, a leather jerkin ; couraça, a cuirass ; couro, a hide, skin.

To Cull. To pick out. Fr. cueillir, to gather. Lat. colligere, from legere, to gather. Cullers are the worst of a flock culled out for disposal.

Cullender.—Cullis. A cullender or colander is a strainer, from Lat. colare, to strain; Fr. couler, to run (of liquids), to flow. Sp. colar, to strain or filter; colada, lye, strained ashes for washing; coladera, a colander or strainer. So from scavage, scavenger, from passage, passenger, &c.

Cullis. Fr. coulis, strained juice of meat, &c.

Cully. Properly the entertainer or companion of a courtesan. A leacher whom a courtesan or jilt calls her cully.—B. From Fr. couille, testicle, penis. Thence a fool, a soft-headed fellow, one who may be easily led by the nose or put upon.—B. To cully one, to make a tool of, impose upon, or jilt him.—B.

Tricks to cully fools.—Pomfret in R.

See Cozen.

Culm. This term is now applied to the kind of coal found not in solid lumps but in a loose powdery condition. The proper meaning is smut, and the latter name is given in Pembroke-shire to a superficial layer of coal in a still more imperfect condition than culm. “Culme of smeke—fuligo.”—Pr. Pm.

Thanne Pacience perceyved of pointes of this cote,

That were colony thorough coveitise and unkynde desiryng.—P. P.

Colmie, black, foul, dirty; becolmed, blackened.—King Horn. Probably connected with collow or colly, smut, soot.

Culprit. The name by which a prisoner on his trial is addressed when he has pleaded not guilty. Probably a corruption of culpat. for culpatus, the term for a person accused in the old Law Latin.

Cunning. See Con.

Cup. Fr. coupe, It. coppa, Du. kop, Bret. gôb, kôp, skôp. The notion of a round projection and of something hollow are often expressed by the same word, which is often taken from the sound of a blow, and especially a blow on a hollow body. Thus we have seen boss, a lump or projection, and boss, hollow. The G. napf, Lang. nap, a bowl or porringer, is a slight variation of knopf, a knob or knop, and both meanings are united in W. cnapen, a knob, a bowl, while the origin of the word seems a representation of the sound of a blow, or a thing breaking; E. knap, to snap, to strike.—Hal.

Now the G. kopf signifies both cup and cop, or top, knob, head; köpfchen, a tea-cup, kopf, a cupping-glass. The development of the meaning is well illustrated in the Fin. kopista, to resound from a blow; kopina, the sound of a blow; kopio, empty, sounding as an empty vessel; koppa, anything concave or hollow, as the box of a harp, the cup of a pipe. On the other hand, as in the case of boll and buckle, we are led to the image of a bubble, as the type of anything round and prominent, swollen, hollow. Fin. kuppo,—a,—u, a bubble, boil, tumour; kupia, swelling, puffed; kupu, the crop of birds, head of a cabbage; kupukka, anything globular; kuppi, a cup, kuppata, to bleed by cupping.

Cupboard. A cupboard, originally cup-bur or cup-bower, a bur or receptacle for cups, altered, when the latter element was no longer used in the sense of receptacle, into cup-board. Icel. búr, cella penuaria; uti-búr, a separate place outside a house for keeping victuals: fata-búr, a wardrobe. AS. cumena-búr, a guest-chamber. See Bower.

Cupel. Fr. coupelle, a coppell, the little ashen pot or vessel wherein goldsmiths melt or fine their metals.—Cotgr. From coupe, a cup.

Cupola. It. cupola, a round vaulted chapel behind the chancel; some use it for any round arch or vault of a church or copped steeple.—Fl. Cupo, deep, hollow, high. A modification of the root which gives cup and cop. Fr. coupeau, the top or head of a thing, coupeau de la tête, the crown of the head.

Cur. Du. korre, a house dog, properly a small dog. W. cor, a dwarf, then applied to anything small of its kind; cor-hwyad (dwarf-duck), a teal; coriar (dwarf-hen), a partridge; corlan (dwarf-court), a sheep-fold; coravon, a rivulet; corgi, a small dog, cur.

Curb.—Curve.—Curvet. Fr. courber, to crook, bow, arch; courbette, a small crooked rafter, the curvetting of a horse.

Gael. crup, contract, crouch, shrink; crub, crouch, sit, squat; crubadh, bending; Manx crib, curb, contract, shrink; Ir. crubadh, to bend or make crooked. From the Celtic root is Lat. curvus, crooked. W. crwb, a round hunch; crwbach, a hook, crook; crybwch, shrunk, crinkled. The insertion of the nasal gives AS. crumb, crump, crymbig, crooked; G. krumm, crooked; Gael. crom, bend, bow, stoop.

Curd. Formerly spelt crud, the lumpy part of coagulated milk. See Crowd.

Cure. Lat. cura, care; originally probably sorrow, lamentation, as we see that the E. sorrow is the equivalent of G. sorge, diligence, care, sorrow; sorgen, to take care of. The origin is preserved in Fin. kurista, voce strepo stridente, inde murmuro vel ægré fero, quirito ut infans. It must thus be considered a relation of Lat. queror, to complain. Fin. kurina, stridor, murmur, kurja, wretched, sad, miserable. Icel. kurr, murmur, complaint, grating; kurra, to coo as a dove, to murmur.

Curfew. Fr. couvrefeu, courefeu, Lat. ignitegium, the notice for covering or putting out lights at a certain hour in the evening.

Item quod nullus tabernarius seu braciator teneat tabernam suam apertam post horam ignitegii.—Lib. Alb. 1. 251.

Curl. Formerly crull. Du. krol, krolle, curl. Dim. of krokè, concinnus, coma muliebris, also a bending, curvature.—Kil. The Norwegian dialect preserves the dim. krökke, Pl. D. krükel, a curl; krükeln, krüllen, to curl. So furl from Fr. fardeler.

Curlieu. Fr. courlis; O. Fr. corlieu.—Cot. Berri. querlu. Probably from the shrill cry of the bird. Russ. kurliikat', to cry like a crane.

Curmudgeon. The quotations in Richardson seem to leave little doubt that it is from corn-mudgin, a dealer in corn. The dealers in corn were the most unpopular persons in times of scarcity, as they were always supposed to be keeping up the price of corn by their avarice.

The œdiles curule hung up 12 brazen shields made of the skins that certain corn-mudgins paid for hourding up their grain.—Holland's Livy.

Currant. Raisins de Corinthe; the dried small grapes of the Greek islands. Then applied to our own sour fruit of somewhat similar appearance.

Curry.—Currier. Curry in the sense of dressing skins has very naturally been derived from corium, a hide; whence coriarius might well signify a dresser of hides. It. cuoiaro a currier. But it is certain that the derivation is very different. The origin is the It. corredare, to prepare, set out, to rig a ship, set out a bride; Sp. conrear, to prepare wool for working by oiling it; Fr. conroyer, to curry or dress leather, to rough-hew timber, to work anything thoroughly. From the same root compounded with ad instead of con is It. arredare, to garnish, equip a ship; Fr. arrayer, E. array.

The simple form of the verb is seen in Icel. reida, to set out, prepare, push forwards; Dan. rede, to prepare, arrange; at rede sit haar, to comb one's hair. Hence rede, ready.

To Curry. 2. To curry a horse, is only a special application of the sense of dressing or working anything thoroughly. "To rub down, comb and dress him."—B.

Et frote et conroye et estrille.

Li vilains son roncein atorne

Fab. et Contes. 3. 198.

To curry favour is a proverbial expression corrupted from "curry favel." Fr. étriller fauveau, to curry the chesnut horse. "Tel étrille Fauveau que puis le mord," the ungrateful jade bites him that does him good.—Cot. It was usual to make a proper name of the colour of a horse, and to speak of the animal as Bayard, Dun, Lyard (Fr. liart, grey), Ball (whitefaced), Favel (Fr. Fauveau, from fauve, fallow), and any of these was taken proverbially for horse in general. "Dun is in the mire." "Who so bold as blind Bayard?"

When the meaning of Favel in the proverb was no longer understood, the sense was made up by the substitution of favour.

Curse. AS. corsian, to execrate by the sign of the cross. In Fr. we find sacrer used both in the senses of consecrating or execrating. An appeal to the Deity is made in both cases, but in the one case he is called on to execute vengeance on the devoted object, in the other it is offered to his gracious acceptance. So Icel. blota, to consecrate and to curse. The corsned or curse-mouthful of the AS. is spoken of by Blackstone in a manner that shows the connexion of the two ideas. "The corsned, or morsel of execration, being a piece of cheese or bread, which was consecrated with a form of exorcism, desiring of the Almighty that it might cause convulsions and paleness, and find no passage if the man was really guilty, but might turn to health and nourishment if he were innocent."—Commentaries.

Curial.—Curtail. From Fr. court, short, with a modification of the termination ard, seen in Bayard, dastard, drunkard, is formed courtault, courtaut, Mid. Lat. curtaldus, E. curtal, having a docked tail. To curtail is a different word, from court tailler, to cut short.

Curtain. Fr. courtine, It. cortina, the hangings of a court, as Lat. aulæum from aula.—Skinner. A more likely origin is the Wallach. cortu, a tent, a structure in fact consisting of one large curtain. In like manner It. tenda, a tent, tenda da letto, a bed curtain; alzar la tenda, to undraw the curtains. The G. zelt, a tent, corresponds to the E. tilt, the curtain or covering of a waggon or the like. Fin. teltä, velum quodvis obductum, tentorium, cœlum pensile in nuptiis, a tent, curtain, &c.

Curtsy. Fr. courtiser, to court, entertain with all compliments or offices of respect and observance; courtoisie, courtesy, civility.—Cot. But I am inclined to believe that the word fundamentally signifies to cross oneself, put oneself into the reverent position of those who make the sign of the cross. It is commonly pronounced curchy, and in Pembrokeshire a girl is told to make her crutch or curch. It. far croce, star colle braccia in croce, to cross the arms on the breast (often joined with bowing or kneeling), as an attitude of reverence.—La Crusca; riverenza, a curtsy or bending to another with the knee.—Fl. Faire reverence à, to arise, give place, make courtesie, vaile bonnet unto; to solicit with cap and knee.—Cot.

Curve. See Curb.

Curvet. Fr. courbette, the prancings of a managed horse, in which he bends his body together and springs out.

Cushion. Fr. coussin. It. coscino, cuscino. G. küssen. Icel. koddi, a cushion. See Cod.

Custom. It. costume, Fr. coutume, coutume. Sp. costumbre, from consuetudo, consuetudinis, through the medium, as Diez supposes, of a softened form consuetumen. So from mansuetudo, Sp. mansedumbre, Port. mansedume.

Cut. W. cwtt, a little piece, a cut, a gobbet; cwttws, a cut or lot; cwt, a short tail; cwttogi, to curtail, bridge; catt, a little piece or gobbet. Turk. kat', a cutting, kat'et, to cut; kit'a, a piece, a segment. Gael. sgad, lop, prune, cut off; sgath, cut off, injure, destroy; G. schaden. Icel. skadda, to take away part, to injure, skadi, loss, skada, to hurt; skaddr, mutilated.

Cutler. Fr. coutelier, a maker of knives, from couteau, formerly written cousteau, coulteau, It. coltello, Venet. cortelo, a knife, the r of which last has perhaps passed into the s of couteau. But this is not necessary, as an example of the same change in the opposite direction is seen in the O. Fr. coultre for coustre, a sexton, from custos.

Lat. culter, cultellus. W. cyllel, a knife.

Cutlas.—Curtal-axe. It. coltello and the augmentative coltellaccio become in the Venetian dialect cortelo, a knife, and cortelazo, a pruning-knife or bill. Hence the OE. courtelas, and with that striving after meaning, which is so frequent a cause of corruption, curtal-axe. Fr. coutelas, a cuttelas or courtelas, or short sword.—Cot.

Cuttle fish. Fr. cornet, a sea-cut or cuttle-fish.—Cot. Du. see-katte. W. mor-gyllell, the sea-knife, from the knife or feather-shaped bone contained in its body. In some parts of France it is called cousteau de mer. Cousteau, the principal feather in a hawk's wing, termed by our falconers cut or cut-tie.—Cot.

Gymbal. Gr. κυμβαλον, a cymbal; κυβος, a cavity, hollow vessel, goblet. From an imitation of the sound of striking a hollow object. Compare Gr. κομπεω, to clank; Fin. kopina, the sound of a blow, kopano, a hollow tree, sounding hollow when struck. Lat. campana, a bell; Alb. kembone, a cattle-bell. A timbal is a word formed on the same plan with an initial t instead of k.

D.

Dab.-Dabble.—Dawb. Dab, a slap on the face, a dirty clout; to dab, to slap or strike; to dabble (Du. dabben, dab-belen—Kil.), splash or stir about in the water and dirt.—B. The sound of a blow with something not resonant, as a lump of soft clay or a wet cloth, is represented by the syllables dab, dib, dub, as to dab a sore with a wet towel. The frequentative dabble represents the paddling sound of water agitated by the hands or feet. Then as the same word which represents the noise of a blow is commonly applied to the instrument which produces it, dab is used to signify a small quantity of something soft, such a lump as may conveniently be thrown, as a dab of butter, of mortar, &c.; a dabbet, a very small quantity; a dab-wash, a small wash got up on a sudden. To dawb is to cover a surface with dabs or portions of adhesive substance, to smear. In like manner from klak, representing the sound of a dab of something wet thrown against a wall, Pl. D. klak, klaks, a certain portion of mortar or the like, which sticks when thrown against anything, a blot, a dab, a small lump of butter; klik, kliks, a small lump; klakken, to dawb.—Brem. Wört.

A somewhat different application of the verb to dab gives the sense of pricking or striking a pointed instrument into a soft body. To dab in some parts of England is used, as dibble in others, for making holes in a furrow with a pointed stick for the planting of seed. To dab, to daub, to peck as birds, to prick.—Jam.

The thorn that dabs I'll cut it down,
Though fair the rose may be.

So to job, to strike, hit, or peck, and job, jobbet, a small piece or lump. Fr. dauber, dober, to beat, swindge, lamme.—Cot. In Dan. dobbe, Du. dobber, a float, the designation is taken from the bobbing up and down of the object; dobberen, to rise and fall with the wave.—Halma. The term has the same meaning in the name of the dabchick or dobchick, a water-fowl, which is constantly bobbing under water.

A dab-hand is one who does a thing off-hand, at a single blow. So Langued. tapa, to strike, to do a thing skilfully and quickly. “Aco's estat léou tapat” (léou, quick), cela a été fait lestement.—Dict. Cast. See Dad. 2.

Dad. W. tad. Lap. dadda (in children's language), father. Almost as universally spread as Baba or Papa.

Dad. 2.—Dawd. This is a word precisely analogous to dab. It is used in the first instance to represent the sound of a blow. Dad, a blow, a thump—Hal.; dad, dawd, to thrash, dash, drive forcibly.—Jam. “He dadded to the door,” slammed it to. “He fell with a dad.” Also, to throw mire so as to bespatter, to dawb. Hence dad, dawd (as dab, dabbet, above), a large piece, a lump, lunch.

Daddock, daddick, rotten wood, is, I believe, the dim. of the above. It signifies wood in a state in which you can pick it bit from bit. Hence dadacky, decayed, tasteless. Daddle (colloquially), the hand, as the instrument of slapping or dadding.

To Dade.—Dading-strings. To dade is applied to the first vacillating steps of a child. To dade a child, to teach him to walk; dading strings, leading strings. It is in this sense that the word is used by Drayton in passages which Nares gives up as hopeless, and on which Jamieson puts a wholly false interpretation.

Which nourished and brought up at her most plenteous pap
 No sooner brought to dade, but from her mother trips.—
 But eas'ly from her source as Isis gently dades.—Drayton.

•To dade a child is then to teach him to walk, to lead him by the hand while he toddles or totters; dading strings, leading strings, by which he is held up while learning to walk. The origin seems to be a representation by the syllables da da, of the incoherent utterances which accompany the muscular exertions of the infant. So in Galla, dudadagoda (to make dadada), to beat.—Tutschek. In the nursery language of France dada is the name given to a horse, the type of activity in a child's imagination. Dada, a hobby-horse. Dadées in a more general sense is applied to all the proceedings of an infant. “Souffrir a un enfant toutes ses dadées,” to cocker or cokes him.—Cotgr. The frequentative to daddle or daidle is in use in the N. of E. and Sc., signifying to walk unsteadily like a child. To daidle like a duck, to waddle.—Jam. To doddle, diddle, toddle, are other variations.

Quhiles dodling and todling

Upon four pretty feet.—Burel's Pilg. in Jam.

And when his forward strength began to bloom

To see him diddle up and down the room.—Jam.

Serenius has “to doddie along or dodde about,” “to dodde—vacillarè.” Fr. dodeliner, to rock or jog up and down, to dandle, loll, lull, fettle.

From the imperfect way of walking of a child the expression is extended to signify an inefficient manner of doing anything or being slow about a thing. To dade, figuratively, to move slowly; to daddle, to do anything imperfectly, to trifle, to toddle or waddle.—Hal.

The nasal modification gives the It. dande, dading strings (amico sin dalle dande, a friend from infancy); E. dandle, to toss or nurse an infant; Fr. dodeliner, as dodeliner, to rock or jog; dodeliner de la tête, to nod or wag the head, to carry the head unsteadily—Cot.; dandiner, to sway the body to and fro; It. dondolare, to dandle or play the wanton as nurses do with children, or children with their babes (dolls), to dally, loiter, idle; also to dangle in the air, to rock or dandle. G. tändeln, to trifle, toy, or play, loiter, linger; tand, a toy, trifle; kinder-tand, childish play; Bav. tanderey, tantrey, foolish tricks; Sc. dander or dandill, to saunter, go about idly, bewilder oneself. "He dandert out of the road," lost his way.—Jam. Then metaphorically, dander, to talk incoherently.—Hal. OHG. tantaron, delirare; Sp. tontear, to talk nonsense. Fr. dandin, It. dondolo, a ninny, foolish fellow.

Daffodill. Corrupted from Lat. asphodelus. Fr. asphodile, aphrodille, the daffodill, affodill, or asphodill flower.—Cot.

Dag.—Dagger.—Daggle. The syllable dag or dig represents the noise of a blow with something sharp, then the instrument with which the blow is given, or anything of similar form. Bret. dagi, to stab; OE. dag, to pierce.

Derfe dyntys they dalte with daggande sperys.

Morte Arthure in Hal.

Fr. dague, It. daga, E. dagger, a short stabbing weapon. OE. dag, a small projecting stump of a tree, a sharp sudden pain.—Hal.

Then in the sense of slashing with an edged tool "pouisoned and dagged clothing." "So much dagginy of sheres with the superfluity in lengthe of the foresaide gounes."—Chaucer in R.

Hence dag, a fragment of a slashed edge, a jag or 'shred. Dagge of cloth; fractillus.—Pr. Pm. Dagon, a slice. "A dagon of your blanket, leve dame."—Ch. Dag-locks, clotted locks hanging in dags or jags at a sheep's tail. Fin. takku, a shaggy fleece, takku-willa, dag-wool, takkuinen, matted, shaggy, dagged. OE. dag-swain, a bed-covering of shaggy material. "Some dagswaynes have long thrumys (fractillos) and jaggs on bothe sydys, some but on one."—Horman in Way.

Daglets, icicles, dags or jags of ice. In daggle, to trail in the dirt—Hal., bedagglled, daggle-tail, there is perhaps a mixture between the idea of hanging in dags in the wet and mire, and that of bedewing, soaking in the wet grass; Sc. dag, dew, drizzling; Sw. dagg, dew, Dan. dugge, bedugge, to dew, bedew; Devonshire dugged, dugged-tealed, duggle-tealed, wet and with the tail of the garment dragged along in the dirt.—Exmoor scolding. Draggled-tailed is a later introduction when the sense of duggle became obscure.

Dail.—Dale. A trough in which the water runs from the pump over the decks of a ship.—B. The course of development seems as follows. W. twell, Bret. toull, a hole, cavity; Pol. dol, a pit. Then a hollow where water collects, a sink, gully, drain, gutter, spout.

Swiss dole, a pit, hollow, sink, drain; OHG. dola, cloaca, fistula; Fr. dalle, a sewer or pit whereinto the washings and other such ordure of houses are conveyed—Cot.; in Normandy a spout or channel to void water by.—Roquefort. Sp. dala, the pump-dale of a ship. Icel. dvala, a depression, bucket for drawing water from a well, pump.

Dainty. W. dant, a tooth; dantaidd (as E. toothsome), dainty, delicate. Bav. däntsch, a delicacy, däntschig, dainty, nice in eating; NE. danch, s. s. OE. daunch, donch, fastidious, over-nice.—Hal.

Dairy.—Dey. The dey was a servant in husbandry, mostly a female, whose duty was to make cheese and butter, attend to the calves and poultry and other odds and ends of the farm. The dery, deyry, or dairy, was the department assigned to her. “A deye, androchius, androchea, genatarius, genetharia; a derye, androchiarium, bestiarium, genethcum.”—Cath. Ang. in Way. “Cascale, a dey-house where cheese is made.”—Elyot in Hal. In Gloucestershire a dairy is still so called. In the 37 Ed. III. A. D. 1363, are classed together “bovers, vachers, porchers, deyes et touz autres gardeirez des bestes,” the word deyes being translated in the English version deyars or dairy-men, and in 12 Rich. II., deye and derye woman.

The primary duty of the dey was doubtless the milking of the cattle, from whence the name is derived; Pol. doić, to milk cows, &c., dojka, a dairy-maid, dojarnica, a dairy;

Bohem. doiti, to milk or give milk; dogka, a wet-nurse, nurse-maid.

As they drew near they heard an elderin dey
Singing full sweet at milking of her ky.

Ross. Helenore in Jam.

Sw. deja, a dairy-maid. O. Sw. daggja, dia, to give suck; AS. diende, lactantes.—Benson in Ihre. Sw. di-barn, a nurse-child.

The barbarous genetheum, where Way is at a loss, is a corruption of gynceum, geniseum, primarily the women's apartment, then the place where the weaving was done. Androchia is for androgyna, probably from the office of the dey being performed indifferently by man or woman. Androgynus, androgeus, mans end wijfs kunne gelijs.—Dief. Sup. Mod. Gr. ἀνδρῶννος, husband and wife.

Dais. Fr. Dais or dais, a cloth of estate, canopy or heaven that stands over the heads of Prince's thrones; also the whole state or seat of estate.—Cot. O. Fr. dais, deis, a table, from discus. "A curt esterras, e à mun deis tuz jurs mangéras."—L. des Rois. "Un jor secit al maistre deis." One day he (the king) sat at the principal table or high dease.—Chron. Norm. The name was then transferred to the raised step on which the high table was placed, or the canopy over it.

Daisy. Day's eye.

That well by reason men it call may

The deisie or els the eye of the day.—Chaucer in R.

Dale.—Dell. W. twell, a hole, pit, dimple,—mwn, a mine-shaft; Bret. toull, a hole or cavity; Pol. dol, bottom, pit; dolek, a little pit or hole, socket of the eye, dimple; dolina, valley; Bohem. díl, a pit, shaft in a mine, dulek, a depression, pock mark, dolina, a valley. Goth. dal, a valley, gulph, pit; G. thal, a valley.

Perhaps Icel. dala, a dint, exhibits the primary sense of the word. Dan. dal, a valley, the dim. dæl, a depression; E. dale, a valley, dell, a depression in a hill-side. The E. had also a diminutive corresponding to the Slavonic dolek; "dalke, vallis."—Pr. Pm. Delk, a small cavity in the body or in the soil.—Forby. "Le fosset oue col, dalke in the neck."—Bibelsworth in Way.

•Dallop. Dallop, wallop, gallop, probably are all originally imitations of the sound made by the collision of soft or wet things. Icel. dolpungr, the surf, beating of the waves on the shore; dolpr, animal of unwieldy size. Prov. E. golp, a sudden blow; gollop, a large morsel; wallop, to beat, to be slatternly, a thick piece of fat; walloping, great; dallop, a slattern, a clumsy and shapeless lump of anything, to paw, toss, and tumble about carelessly.—Hal. W. talp, a lump, Icel. dálpa i feninu, to flounder in the mire; dálpa i arum, to paddle with the oars, to row softly. Compare Icel. damla, to dabble in liquids, to row softly.

Dally. To toy with, play, trifle. From Lat. talis, the ankle-bone of animals, then a die to play with, came apparently the OE. daly, a die, plaything; dally-bones, sheep's trotters.—Hal. "Daly or play, tessura (tessera), alca, decius."—Pr. Pm. "Men play with three dice, and children with four dalies, astragalis vel talis. Cut this fleshe into dalleys, tessellas."—Horman in Way. The term seems thus to have acquired the sense of a toy or plaything, with a special application to a girl's puppet, whence it is used to denote a painted figure.—Jam.

Neer price a weardless wanton elf

That nought but pricks and prins herself

Wha's like a dally drawn on delf or china-ware.—Morison in J.

Hence dallacked, dalled out, gaudily dressed.—Hal. The notion of dallying or trifling is attained in the same manner in the It. dondola, a kind of boy's play with a tossing ball, also a child's playing baby, also any toy, fancy, or conceit, to pass away the time withal, any dalliance, dandling, or wantonizing; dondolare, to dally, loiter, or idle, pass the time.—Fl.

Dam.—Dame. Lat. domina, It. dama, Fr. dame, a lady. From being used as a respectful address to women it was applied, καρ' εφοχην, to signify a mother, as sire to a father.

Enfant qui craint ni pere ni mere Ne peut que bien ne le comperre.
 For who that dredith sire ne dame
 Shall it abie in bodie or name.—R. R. 5887.

—And fykel tonge hure syre Amendes was hure dame.—P. P. in R.
 Faithlesse, forsworn ne goddesse was thy dam
 Nor Dardanus beginner of thy race.—Surrey in R.

Subsequently these terms were confined to the male and female parents of animals, especially of horses:

Dam. A word of far-spread connexions with much modification of form and sense. The fundamental signification is the notion of stopping up, preventing the flow of a liquid. Goth. faur-dammjan, to shut up, obstruct, hinder; Pol. tamo-wac, to stop, staunch, obstruct, dam; tama, a dam, dike, causeway. Icel. dammr, Dan. dam, a fish-pond. O. Sw. damfu, a dam. Bav. daum, daumb, taum, Fr. tampon, tapon, the wad of a gun; Bav. daumen, verdaumben, Fr. taper, to ram down, to stop the loading from falling out. Here we are brought to a root tap instead of tam, and it will be seen that the change might as easily take place from tap through tamp to tam, as in the opposite direction from tam to tap. The evidence preponderates in favour of the originality of the latter form. The idea of stopping up an orifice is naturally expressed by a word signifying a tuft or bunch, as Fr. bouchér, to stop, bouchon, a cork, from O. Fr. bousche, a handful or bunch; étouffer, to stop the breath, from touffe, a tuft, lock of hair, clump of trees. Now the Sw. tapp, a bunch, has precisely the signification required. Hótapp, halm-tapp, a whisp of hay or straw; tapp-wis, by handfuls. Then, from a bunch of fibrous matter being used in stopping an orifice, tapp, a bung, tap, plug. Hence tæppa, to stop a hole, to staunch, and in a wider sense to shut, shut up; tæppa et åker, to inclose a field.

Lap. tappet, to shut, to stop; tappa ukseb, shut the door; tappalet, to have the breath stopped, to be suffocated, tappaltak, the asthma; Sw. and-tæppa, shortness of breath, asthma (ande, breath).

Lang. tap, a cork, tapa, tampa, to stop, shut, shut up, in-close, surround; se tampa las ourellos, to stop one's ears; tampa uno porto, to shut a door; tampas, shutters.—Dict. Gastr. Tampo, a tank or reservoir.—Dict. Lang. Cat. tap, a cork, bung; tapa, the sluice of a mill; tapar, to stop, cover, conceal; taparse el cel, to become covered (of the sky); tapat (of the sky or atmosphere), close.

Ptg. tapar, to stop a hole, to cover; tapado, stopped up, fenced in, thick, close-wrought, tapada, a park, taparse, to darken, grow dark, tapulho, a stopper, tampam, a cover, lid of a box; Sp. tapar, to stop up, choke, cover, conceal; tapon, cork, plug, bung. Fr. tapon, tampon, E. tompion, tamkin, tomkin, a stopple for a cannon.

It will be seen that the Langued. form tampo, a tank, cistern, or reservoir, undoubtedly from the root tap, agrees exactly with the O. Sw. dampn, a dam or pond; kropp-dampn, a cistern at the top of a building.—Ihre.

To Damp. It is impossible to separate to damp, signifying to check the vital energies, suppress, subdue, from dam, to stop the flow of water by a physical obstacle. The fundamental idea in both cases is the notion of stopping an orifice, and the two senses are not always distinguished by different modes of spelling. The Pol. tamowac signifies to dam, to stop, to stop the breath, to check, to restrain. Lang. tapofam, literally, stop-hunger, a dampner or hunch of meat to damp the appetite at the beginning of a meal.—Dict. Cast. It is probably from the notion of stopping the breath that the figurative senses of the verb to damp are chiefly derived. Sw. and-tappa, shortness of breath; Lap. tappalet, to be suffocated, from Sw. tappa, Lap. tappet, to stop. In like manner Fin. sulku-tauti, asthma (tauti = sickness), hengen sulku (henki = breath), shortness of breath, from sulku, a dam. OHG. temphen, bedemphen, G. dämpfen, to suffocate, choke, smother; dämpf-leinchen, a cord to hang one, halter—Ade-lung; dampf, shortness of breath, dämpfig, Du. dempig, dampig, short-winded.

Then as the breath is the common symbol of life, to stop the breath is the most natural expression for putting an end to life, extinguishing, depressing, quelling. G. dämpfen, Du. dempen, Sw. dämpa, to extinguish a light, and also in a figurative sense to repress, to damp. G. Aufruhr dämpfen, to suppress a tumult; die Dämpfung der Lüste, the mortification of lusts.—Kütt. Sw. dämpa sina begärelsen, to stifle one's passions.

In the south of Germany dämmen is used in the same way; das Feuer—, Pein dämmen, to damp the fire, to still pain; Bav. demmen, dämen, to restrain, quell, extinguish, tame. “Dämen, domaße,” “Alle Irrung nieder zu drücken und zu dämmen,” “Glut demmen und löschen.”—Schmeller.

Here we are brought to a point at which we must admit the Gr. δαμαω, Lat. domare, Dan. tæmme, to tame, to break in, as parallel modifications of the same root. Compare Dan. tæmme sine ledenskaber, to curb one's passions (Repp.), with Sw. dämpa sina begärelser, above cited; Lat. domare iracundias.

The sense of vapour, exhalation, steam, smoke, expressed by the G. dampf, Du. damp, demp, domp, may have arisen in two ways. The G. dampf signifies short wind, *dampf*ig, breathing with difficulty, and, as the designation of a phenomenon is commonly taken from the most exaggerated manifestation of it, the term may have been applied in the first instance to the breath, and thence to exhalation, steam, smoke. Bav. dampf, contemptuously, the breath.—Schm. Or the designation may have been taken from regarding smoke, dust, vapour, steam, as suffocating, stifling, choking agents. Sw. damb, dust. The G. dampf is explained by Adelung “any thick smoke, mist, or vapour, especially when it is of sulphureous nature,” where the reference to the idea of suffocation is obvious. Compare Dan. quæle, to suffocate, choke, with G. qualm, vapour, smoke. In the choke-damp of our mines there is a repetition of the element signifying suffocation added to supply the loss of that meaning in the E. damp.

Damp. The sense of moisture expressed by the Du. and E.

damp has probably arisen from the connexion of closeness and suffocation with dampness or moisture. Cat. tapat, of the sky or air, covered, close; Sw. et tåpt rum, a close room, room with no vent for the air; Du. bedompt, stifling, close, confined; bedompt huis, maison mal percée, obscure, humide; bedompt, dompig, or dampig weer, dark and damp weather.—Halma. G. dumpf, musty, damp.

Swiss dobb, overcast, close, warm, damp; Bav. daumen, daumben, to stop, dauben, to damp, to still, and daum, vapour, smoke; daumig, vaporous, close, damp.

Damage. Lat. damnatio, from damnum, loss, injury. Prov. dampnatge, Fr. dommage.

Ut ei nemo contrarietatem vel damnationem adversus eum facere præsumat.—Ep. Car. Martel. in Duc.

Damask. Fr. damasquin; because figured silks, linen, &c., were imported from Damascus.

Damsel. Fr. demoiselle; It. damigella, dim. of dama, a lady, from Lat. domina.

Damson.—Damascene. A kind of plum. Mod. Gr. δαμασκηνον, a plum.

Dance. Fr. danser, G. tanzen, Dan. dandse. The original meaning was doubtless to stamp, in which sense danse, dandse is still used in South Denmark.—Outzen. So in Lat. “pedibus plaudere choræas,” “alterno terram pede quatere.” Glosses of 1418, quoted by Schmeller, render applaudēbant by tanzen mit den henniden. Dan. dundse, to thump, Sw. dunsa, to fall heavily; Du. donsen, pugno sive typhæ clava in dorso percutere.—Kil.

A like connexion is seen between AS. tumbian, to dance, and Pl. D. dumpen, to stamp; Devonsh. dump, to knock heavily, to stump; also a kind of dance.—Hal. “Perdiccas—his dame was a tombysterc,” i. e. a dancer.—Chaucer.

Dandruff. Bret. tañ, tiñ, Fr. teigne, scurf. W. ton, skin, crust; marwodon, dead skin, dandruff. Perhaps the W. drwg, bad, evil, may form the conclusion of the E. word, don-drwg, the bad crust or scab. Icel. thenja, OHG. gadanjan, to stretch, to spread.

Dandelion. Fr. dent de lion, lion's tooth, from the leaves with tooth-like jags directed backwards compared to a lion's jaw.

To Dandle.—Dandy. For the origin of the word to dandle see Dade. It signifies in the first instance to toss or rock an infant, thence to toy, play, trifle.

King Henry's ambassadors into France having been dandled by the French during these delusive practises, returned without other fruit of their labours.—Speed in R.

It. dondolo, a foolish toy or bauble, anything that is tossed to and fro and dandled; dondola, a toy, a child's playing baby; dondolarsi, to loiter away time.—Fl. G. tündeln, to trifle, toy, loiter, tündel-schürze, a short apron more for show than for use; kleider-tund, ostentation in dress.

In like manner may be explained the Sc. dandilly and E. dandy, applied to what is made a toy of, used for play and not for working-day life, finely dressed, ornamental, showy.

And he has married a dandilly wife,
She wadna shape nor yet wad she sew
But sit wi' her cummers and fill hersel fu'.—Jam.

A dandy is probably first a doll, then a finely-dressed person. Dandy-cock (quasi toy-cock), a bantam.—Hal.

Dandeprat, a dwarf. From sprat, something small of its kind?

Danger. Mid. Lat. damnum was used to signify a fine imposed by legal authority. The term was then elliptically applied to the limits over which the right of a Lord to the fines for territorial offences extended, and then to the inclosed field of a proprietor, by the connexion which one sees so often exemplified in Switzerland at the present day,—“Entrance forbidden under penalty of 10 fr.” “Si quis caballum in damnum suum invenerit.”—Leges Luitprand in Duc. “Exceptis averiis in alieno damno inventis.”—Mag. Chart. “Dici poterit quod averia capta fuerant in loco certo in damno suo, vel in prato vel alibi in suo separali.”—Fleta. In this sense the word was often rendered dommage in Fr. “Animalia in damnis dictorum fratrum inventa”—“bestes trouvées prises en damage.”—Monast. Ang. in Duc. “Qu’en dommaige et en sa garenne le poulain au charreton trouva.”—Cent nouv. nouv. Damage then acquired the sense of trespass, intrusion into the close of another, as in the legal phrase damage feasant, whence Fr. damager, to distrain or seize cattle found in trespass. “Comme Estienne Lucat sergent de Macies eust prinist et dommagé une jument.”—Carpent.

From this verb was apparently formed the abstract domigerium, signifying the power of exacting a Jamnum or fine for trespass. “Sub domigerio alicujus aut manu esse.”—Bracton. Then as damage is written damge in the laws of W. the Conqueror, the foregoing domigerium and the corresponding Fr. domager or damager would pass into damger, danger, the last of which is frequently found in the peculiar sense of damnum and dommage above explained. “En ladite terre et ou dangier dudit sire trouva certaines bestes desdis habitans. Icelles bestes se boutèrent en un dangier, ou patwage defendu.”—Carp. A. D. 1373.

Narcissus was a bachelere
That Love had caught in his daungere
(had caught trespassing in his close)
And in his nette gan him so straine.—R. R.

The term danger was equally applied to the right of exacting a fine for breach of territorial rights, or to the fine or the rights themselves, and the officer whose duty it was to look after rights of such a nature was called sergent dangereux. “Esquels bois nous avons droits de danger, c’est assavoir que toutes et quantefoiz que aucunes bestes seront trouvées esdis bois, elles seront confisquées à nous—Robert le fort notre sergent dangereux advisa de loing icelles brebis.”—A. D. 1403 in Carp. To be in the danger of any one, estre en son danger, came to signify to be subjected to any one, to be in his power or liable to a penalty to be inflicted by him or at his suit, and hence the ordinary acceptation of the word at the present day. "In danger of the judgment—in danger of Hell-fire."

As the penalty might frequently be avoided by obtaining the licence of the person possessed of the right infringed, the word was applied to such licence, or to exactions made as the price of permission. "Dangeria (sunt) quando bosci non possunt vendi sine licentia regis, et tunc ibi habet decimum denarium." "Judicatum est quod Johannes de Nevilla miles non potest vendere boscos suos de Nevilla sine licentia et dangerio regis."—Judgment A. D. 1269. "Concedo tum ipsis quam aliis personis collegii liberum molere—et id facere absque dangerio vel exactione qualibet tenebitur in futurum molendinarius molendini."—Chart. A. D. 1310, in Carp. The word then passed on both in Fr. and E. to signify difficulties about giving permission or complying with a request, or to absolute refusal. "Et leur commanderent que si la roine fe-sait dangier que ils la sachassent (chassassent) à force hors de l'eglise." "Comme le tavernier faisoit dangier ou difficulté de ce faire."—Carpentier.

With danger uttren we all our chaffare,
Gret precs at market maketh dere ware
And to gret chepe is holden at litel prise;
This knoweth every woman that is wise.—W. of Bath.

i. e. we make difficulties about uttering our ware.

I trow I love him bet for he Was of his love so dangerous to me.—Ib.

And thus the martial Erle of Mar
Marcht with his men in richt array—
Without all danger or delay
Came haistily to the Harlaw.—Battle of Harlaw.

Dangle. Prov. E. to dang, to throw down or strike with violence; Sw. danga, to bang, thump, knock at a door; Icel. dengia, to knock, to hammer; dangl, beating, dangla, to beat, and also as Dan. dingle, Sw. dangla, dingla, Pl. D. dungebn, to dangle, bob, swing to and fro. Compare Dan. daske, to slap, and also to dangle, bob, flap.

Dank. Synonymous with damp, as syllables ending in mp or mb frequently interchange with nk or ny. Thus we have It. cambiare and cangiare, E. dimble and dingle. Probably the two forms have come down together from a high antiquity. We have seen that damp, moist, is derived from the notion of closeness, stopping up, covering, expressed by the root tap, tamp, dank, while parallel with tap, tamp, are a series of equivalent forms, in which the p is exchanged for a c, k. Sp. taco, a tap, stopple, ram-rod; Cat. tancar, to shut, stop, enclose, fence, tancar la porta, to shut or fasten the door; Langued. tampa, tampa uno porto, in the same senses, fenestro tampado, a shut window, tamos, shutters; Port. tanque, Sp. estanco, a tank, basin, cistern, or pond; Langued. tampo, estampo, in the same sense. It is probable then that dank has come from the guttural form of the root in the same way as damp from the labial. In both cases the notion of darkness is united with that of dampness, as shutting up or covering is equally adapted to keep out air and light. Thus we have Du. bedampnen, to darken, bedompt, dark, obscure, damp; dompig, dark. In connexion with dank we have Du. donker, OIG. O. Sax. dunkar, dunkal, G. dunkel, dark, NE. danker, a dark cloud.—Ital. OHG. bitunkalat, nimbose, petunchlit, obducta, as Du. bedompt weer, close, covered, cloudy weather.

Dapper seems in E. first to have been used in the sense of pretty, neat.

For who is she that may endure

The dapper terms that lovers use.—Turberville in R.

Applied to a man it signifies small and neat. Du. dapper, strenuus, animosus, fortis, acer, masculus, agilis.—Kil. Pl. D. dapper, active, smart, dobber, dobbers, sound, good. De kase is nig dobbers, the cheese is not good. Bohem. dobry, good. Wendish. dehora deefka, a pretty girl.—Ihre in v. ducka. Dapyr or praty, elegant.—Pr. Pm. Dapper, proper, mignon, godin.—Palsgr. in Way. Godinet, pretty, dapper, feat, indifferently handsome.—Cot. See Deft.

Dapple. From dab, a lump of something soft, a blotch or spot, Icel. depill, nubecula, a spot on ground of different colour, deplottr, dappled. So from Fr. matte, a clot, mattefé, clotted, ciel mattonné, a curdled or mottled sky.

The resemblance of dapple grey to Icel. apalgrar or apple grey, Fr. gris pommelé, is accidental.

To Dare. 1. Goth. gadaursan, dars, daursun, daursta; AS. dearran, dyrran, dear, durron; E. dare, durst; MHG. türren, torste. The O. Du. preterite troste shows the passage to E. trust. AS. dyrstig, dristig, bold, Sw. drista, to dare. Icel. thora, to dare, thor, boldness; Gr. θαρρειν, to dare; θαρρος, trust, θαρρος, bold. Lith. drasus, drastus, bold, spirited; dristi, to dare; drasinti, to encourage, drasintis, to dare. So Icel. diarfr, bold, dirfa, to encourage, dirfaz (in the middle voice, as Lith. drasintis), to dare.

It is not easy to arrive at a consistent theory of the connexion of the various forms, or of the development of the signification. Sometimes the root seems to be a form similar to the Lat. durus, hard, Gael. dúr, stubborn, persevering, cager, Sc. dour, bold, hardy, obstinate, hard, whence Gael. dúraig, to adventure, dare, wish (to make bold), dùrachd, desire, earnestness, daring. To endure, to harden oneself under suffering, comes very near the sense of dare; "I cannot endure to give pain." In like manner Fin. tarkenén, tarjeta, præ frigore (vel rarius, timore) valeo vel audeo, non algeo; to endure to do, in spite of cold or of fear; en tarkene, I cannot for cold; tarkeneko menna, can you endure (for cold) to go. Lap. tarjet, to be able to do. In the same point of view we may compare E. hard with Fr. hardi, bold; It. ardire, to dare.

The W. dewr, strong, bold, forms a connecting link between durus and Icel. diarfr, OE. derf, hard, strong, fierce, G. derb, hard, strong, rough, severe, from whence the Icel. dirfaz, to dare, is certainly derived. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the G. dürfen, darf, to dare, to be so bold as to—Küttn., Du. derven, dorven, durven, to dare, are formed in like manner. The confusion with forms like the Du. derven, bederven, dorven, to want, be without, have need, G. bedür- fen, to be in need, AS. deorfan, to labour, gedeorf, tribulation; labour, calamity, would be accounted for if we suppose that the fundamental idea in the latter cases was to be in hard or difficult circumstances. The ideas of labour and want are closely connected. The sense of needing expressed by G. dürfen is sometimes found in the OE. dare.

So evene hot that lond ys that men durre selde
Here orf in howse awyuter brynge out of the felde.

R. G. 43.

i. e. that men seldom need to house their cattle in the winter.

The heye men of the lond schulle come bi fore the kyng
And alle the yonge men of the lond lete bi fore hym brynge—
And heo schulle be such that no prince durre hem forsake,
Ac for heore prowesse gladliche in to here servise take.—R. G. 112.

He that wyll there axsy justus—

Ther he may fynde justes anoon

Wyth syr Launfal the knyght.—Launfal. 1030.

He wax so mylde and so meke,

A mylder man thurt no man seke.

Manuel des Pecchés, 5826.

The passage from the sense of making bold to that of having power, cause, or permission, exemplified in G. dürfen, is illustrated by Fin. tarjeta, to endure, Lap. tarjet, to be able; Sw. toras (in the mid. voice), to dare, tora (as G. dürfen), to be possible. Det tor hánda, that may happen.

Strength is gode unto travaile,

Ther no strength may, sleght wille vaile.

Sleght and conyng dos many a char,

Begynnes thing that strength ne dar.—R. Brunne, exci.

Lith. turreti, to get offspring, to have, possess, to be bound to do a thing; turru eiti, I must go. Comp. Malay brani, to be able, can, also to dare, to venture.

To Dare. 2. To be cowed, stupified, to lie motionless, to be terrified. Daryn or drowpyn or privily to be hydde, lato, lateo.—Pr. Pm. Fr. blotir, to squat, to lie close to the ground like a daring lark or affrighted fowl.—Cotg. “With wodecokkys lerne for to dare.”—Lydgate in Way.

Pl. D. bedaren, to be still and quiet; dat weer bedaart, the weather settles; een beduart mann, a man who has lost the heat and violence of youth. Du. bedaard, stilled, calm, moderate.

“An old appalled wight,
As ben thise wedded men that lie and dare
As in a fourme sitteth a wery hare.—Chaucer.

Then as a lurking terrified creature looks anxiously around, to dare is found, in the latter sense. “To dare, pore or loke about me, je advise alentour. What darest thou on this facyon, me thynketh thou woldest catch larkes.”—Palsgr. in Way. Comp. Bav. dusen, to be still, either for the sake of listening, or in slumber.

To dare birds, to catch them by frightening them with a hawk, mirror, or other means; to dor, to frighten, stupify; to dorre, to deafen; to dor, or give the dor, to make a fool of one, dor, a fool.—Hal. Du. door, stultus, socors.—Kil. G. thor, Sw. dåre, fool, mad; dåra, to infatuate, dazzle, intoxicate.—Nordforss.

The fundamental signification of dare, as of the parallel form daze, which has many analogous derivatives, is to stun with a loud noise, to stupify. To daze, dazzle, dåire, to stun—Forby; Sc. daur, to stun, or be stupified, benumbed.—Jam. AS. Thor, the god of thunder; W. taran; Sw. tordön (thunder-din); Dan. torden, thunder.

A similar interchange of z and r is seen in OE. gaure, to gaze.

Dark. AS. deorc. The particles so and do in Gael. are equivalent to eu and divs in Gr., as in son, good, and don, bad. In similar relation to each other stand sorcha, light, and dorch, dorcha, dark. The element common to the two would appear to be the notion of seeing, which however we are unable to trace in the form of the words. See Dear, Dole.

Darling. AS. deorling, dyrling, a dim. from deor, dear.

To Darn. Now understood of mending clothes in a particular manner by interlacing stitches, but it must originally have signified to patch in general. O. Fr. darne, a slice, a broad and thin piece of.—Cotg. Bret. darn, a piece, fragment. The primary meaning may probably be a handful. W. dwrn, a fist, dyrnaid, a handful; Gael. dòrn, a fist, handle, short cut, or piece of anything; dòrlach, a handful; dornan, a small bundle, handful of anything.

Darnock. — Dannoek. Hedgers' gloves. — Forby. Icel. dornikur, dorningar, stiff boots for wading in the water. I cite this word from the singularity of a Gael. derivation, as we should so little expect a convenience of this kind to have been adopted from a people in the condition of the Celts.

Gael. dornag, a glove, gauntlet; from dòrn, fist; Manx dornaig, a covering for the hand or fist, used to guard the hand against thorns.—Cregeen.

Darnel. A weed in corn, supposed to induce intoxication, and thence called lolium temulentum in botanical Lat., and ivraie in Fr., from ivre, drunk. Rouchi darnelle. The meaning of the word is explained by the Lith. durnas, foolish, crazy, mad, whence durnes, durnei, durnzole, hyoscyamus, Du. malkruyd (from mal, foolish, mad), herba insaniam et soporem inducens.—Kil. The names of plants were originally very unsettled. Wallon. darnise, daurnise, tipsy, stunned, giddy.—Grandg. Sw. dare; G. thor, a fool; Dan. bedaaere, to infatuate, besot. Comp. Fr. sot, a fool, E. 'sot, a drunkard.

Darraign. It has been shown under arraign that rationes was used in the Lat. of the middle ages for a legal account of one's actions, whence derationare, Fr. desrener, to darraign, was to clear the legal account, to answer an accusation, to settle a controversy. From the arena of the forum the term was transferred to that of arms, as was natural when the ordeal by battle was considered a reasonable method of ascertaining a question of fact.

—Two harneis had he dight

Both suffisant and mete to darreine

The bataile in the felde betwixt hem tweine.—Chaucer.

Here the meaning is not to array the battle, to set it in order, but to fight it out, to let the battle decide the question between them.

As for my sustir Emelic—
 Ye wote yourself she may not weddin two
 At onys —
 And therefore I you put in this degré
 That cache of you shall have his destiné
 As him is shape.—
 And this day fifty wekis far ne nere
 Everich of you shall bring a hundrid knyghts
 Armd for the listis upon alle rights
 All redy to darrein here by bataile.

Knight's Tale, 1855.

That is to say, all ready to debate or settle the question as to her possession by battle. Afterwards undoubtedly the sense was transferred from the debate or actual settlement of a combat to the preparation for it, arraying, setting the troops in order for battle.

And in the towns as they do march along
 Proclaims him king, and many fly to him ;
Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.—II. VI. in R.

Dart. Fr. dard, a dart. Bret. tarz, a crack, clap, violent blow with noise; tarz kurun, a clap of thunder; tarza, sortir avec effort et fracture, to break, crack, burst, dart, to appear as the dawn. W. tarddu, to spring forth or appear as the dawn. To dart would thus be to hurl as a thunderbolt, to drive forth as by an explosion.

To Dash. An imitation of the sound of a blow, the beating of waves upon the shore, &c.

Hark, hark, the waters fall,
 And with a murmuring sound
Dash! dash! upon the ground,
 To gentle slumbers call.—Dryden in Todd.

Bav. dossen, to sound as thick hail, rain, rushing brooks. Mit lautem knall und doss.—H. Sachs. “Fone manigero wazzero dozze,” from the sound of many waters.—Notker in Schm. Sc. dusche, to fall with a noise, a fall, stroke, blow; Dan. daske, to slap. Sw. daska, to drub; Hanover. dasken, to thrash.—Brem. Wört.

To dash is figuratively applied to feelings analogous to those produced by a sudden blow, or loud crash, to overwhelm, confound, put out of countenance.

What was the snaky-headed Gorgon shield,
Wherewith she freezed her foes to congeal'd stone,
But rigid looks of chaste austerity,
And noble grace, that dash'd brute violence
With sudden adoration and blank awe?—Comus.

Dastard. The termination ard is the Du. aerd, indoles, natura, ingenium, G. art, nature, kind, quality. The meaning of the radical part of the word seems that which is seen in the figurative application of dash or daze, to stun, confound, frighten.—Hunter. Dastard, etourdi—Palsgr. in Way; a simpleton—Hal.; a person of a tame, submissive nature. Bav. dasig, dansig, dastig, quelled, submissive, tame. AS. adastrigan, to discourage, dismay. Compare the G. niederschlagen, to knock down, and figuratively to deject, dishearten, discourage, cast down; niedergeschlagen, sorrowful, afflicted, dispirited.—Küttner.

Icel. dust, a blow. Fris. dust-slek, dusslek, a stunning blow. Sc. doyst, a sudden fall attended with noise.—Jam. A dowse on the chops belongs to the same imitative root.

Date. The particulars of time and place concerning the execution of a written instrument, which were added in a Roman letter under the form, "Datum—" given at such a time and place.

Daughter. G. tochter; Gr. θυγατηρ; Sanser. duhitri; Lith. duktere; Armen. dustr; Bohem. dcera; Gael. dear; Finn. tüttär; Lap. daktar.

To Daunt. Fr. dompter, donter, to tame, reclaim, break, daunt, subdue. Dompte-venin, Celandine, from being considered an antidote. Sc. dant, danton, to subdue; a horse-danter, a horse-breaker. Probably not directly from Lat.

domare, but from the Teutonic form damp, which is essentially the same word. See Damp.

Daw. A bird of the crow kind. Swiss dühi, düfi; Bav. dahel; It. taccola, from taccare, to prate, where the syllable tac represents a single element of the chattering sound, as chat in chit-chat, chatter, kat in Malay kata-kata, discourse, wt in tattle, kak in Fr. caqueter. Birds of this kind are commonly named from their chattering cry. See Chaff, Chough, Chat.

To Dawb. From dab, an imitation of the sound made by throwing down a lump of something moist. Hence daub, clay; dauber, a builder of walls with clay or mud mixed with straw, a plaisterer.—Hal. Dawber, or cleyman; dawbyn, lino, muro.—Pr. Pm. In this sense the term is used in the Bible where it speaks of “daubing with untempered mortar.” “The wall is gone, and the daubers are away.”—Bible 1551, in R. Lang. tapis, torchis, clay for building; Sp. tapia, mud wall; tapiador, a builder of such, dawber. Lang. tap, tapo, plastic clay.

Dawdle. To do a thing in a purposeless manner, like a child. See Dade.

Dawn. Icel. dagan, dögun, dawn; dagur, day. AS. dagian, to dawn, or become day; dagung, dawning.

Day.—Daysman.—Diet. Lat. dies, G. tag, day. In the judicial language of the middle ages the word day was specially applied to the day appointed for hearing a cause, or for the meeting of an assembly. Du. daghen, to appoint a day for a certain purpose; daghen veur recht, to call one before a court of justice; daghinge, daeghsel, dagh-brief, libellus, dica, citatio; dagh-vaerd, an appointment of a certain day, and thence dagh-vaerd, lands-dagh, Mid. Lat. dieta (from dies), the diet, or assembly of the people. Diet was also used in E. for an appointed day. “But it were much better that those who have not taken the benefit of our indemnity within the diet prefixed should be obliged to render upon mercy.”—Letter of K. William, 1692.

O. Sw. dag, the time appointed for a convention, and hence the assembly itself.—Ihre. Sc. days of law, law-days, the sessions of a court of justice. “I send this by Betoun quha gais to ane day of law of the Laird of Balfouris.”—Jam. Ofl. daysman, an arbiter, the judge appointed to decide between parties at a judicial hearing.

To Daze.—Dazzle.—Dizzy.—Doze. To daze is to stun, stupefy with a blow, excess of light, fear, cold, &c. The frequentation dazzle is used only of the sense of sight. To daw-sel, to stupefy; dazzled, stupid, heavy—Hal.; dawzy, dawzy-headed, dizzy, as if confused, bewildered, thoughtless.—Forby. To dosen, dozen, to stupefy, benumb, become torpid.—Jam.

He saw he led fra the fechtung
Schir Philip the Mowbray, the wicht,
That had been dosnyt into the fycht—
—Quhen in myd causey war thai
Schir Philip of his desines
Ourcome. Barbour.

Dizzy, stunned, giddy. The origin is the sound of a heavy blow represented by the syllable doss, doyce, douss, doz. Dóz, fragor, doza, mugitus.—Gl. in Schmeller. G. getöse, noise. See Dash, Dastard.

Du. daesen, to lose one's wits in madness or fright; daes, dwaes, foolish, mad; duysigh, deusigh, stunned, fainting, stupefied, dizzy, astonished.—Kil. Icel. das, dos, a faint, exhaustion; hann liggr í dosi, he lies in a faint; dæsa, to fatigue. Bav. dos-óret, hard of hearing; dosen, to keep still, either in listening, reflecting, or slumbering; dusen, to be still, to slumber, be dizzy.—Schm. Pl. D. dösig, düsig, dizzy, tired, stupid; dussen, bedussen, to faint, to be stunned; dussen, to slumber, to doze.—Brem. Wört.

Deacon. Lat. diaconus. Gr. διακονος, a servant, from κοινω, to haste, to be active or busily occupied.

Dead.—Death.—Die. Goth. dauths, Icel. daud, Fris. dad, Sw. dod, Pl. D. dood, G. tot, dead. Goth. dauthus, Icel.

daudhi, Fris. duss, dad, death. Lap. taud, illness; Esthon. taud, illness, death.

Pl. D. doe for dode, a dead body; doen-wake, a corpse-wake. Wallon. touvé, Fr. tuer, Sw. doda, Pl. D. döen, to kill; Icel. deya, O. Sw. doja, Sw. dó, Dan. doe, OHG. douwen, douen, touwen, to die. We must thus consider die a derivative from dead, and not vice versâ.

The primitive meaning of the active verb seems to oppress, subdue. Bav. toten, to crack a flea, a nut, smother a fire; Sardin. studai, Lang. tuda, atuda, to extinguish; Prov. tudar, to extinguish, suffocate, choke; Fr. tuer la chandelle, to put out the candle; Pl. D. doen, to overwhelm; he woll me döen mit good daden, he will overwhelm me with benefits. Sw. doda sina lustar, to subdue one's passions;—varken, to allay the pain; also to obliterate, annul. Du. doodet in u de boosheit—mortifiez en vous la malice.—Halma. It. tutare, attutare, to appease, assuage, to whist; stutare, to quench, put out; attutare, to smother.—Fl. Icel. dodi, languor.

I find it so impossible to draw a distinct line of separation either in form or meaning between dead and deaf, that it will be convenient to treat of the primary origin of both in the next article.

Deaf. The meaning of the Goth. daubs, daufs, G. taub, E. deaf, seems founded in the notion of stopping an orifice. In John xvi. 6, gadaubida is found as the translation of implevit. "Sorrow hath filled your heart." From the notion of stopping up we readily pass to those of confining, preventing action, dulling, stupifying. Goth. gadaubjan, to harden, make insensible. The E. stop is applied to eyes, ears, and mouth, and in like manner the Goth. daubs, daufs, Icel. daufr, Du. doof, G. taub, are said of different kinds of dulled or vitiated action. Goth. afdobnan, to have the mouth stopped, to be dumb; Icel. daufr, deaf, dull of hearing, dull of colour, dull in spirit; Sc. dowf, dull, flat, gloomy, inactive, lethargic, hollow (in sound), silly; doof, dowfart, a dull, inactive fellow—Jam.; Icel. dof, torpor, ignavia, dofna, to fade, lose strength or life; Dan. doven, sluggish, flat, stale, vapid; Sc. daw, a sluggard, E. to daff, to daw, to daunt; daff, a dastard, a fool, dast, stupid, foolish, daffed, in one's dotage, to daver, to stun, stupify, droop, fade—Hal.; to dover, to slumber; dowerit, drowsy.—Jam. Du. doof, doove, what has lost its proper life and vigour; doof van sinnen, mad; doove verwe, a dull colour, doove netel, a dead nettle, without the power of stinging, as E. deaf nut, an empty nut; Du. doof-hout, rotten wood.

Here we are brought to the equivalence of dead and deaf above alluded to, and we are tempted to regard them as modifications of each other, as It. codardo, Ptg. cobarde, covarde, a coward. The Du. has doode or doove netel; doode or doove kole, an extinct coal; doode or doove verwe, a dull colour; Icel. dodinn, Dan. doven, languid; Icel. dodaskapr, Dan. dogenskab, languor. Icel. daufjord, Norweg. döllende, boggy, barren land. Du. dooden (Kil.), Prov. E. dove, to thaw.—Hal. We may compare the Sw. doda, to subdue, allay, annul, It. tutare, to allay, Lang. tuda, to extinguish, with Sw. dofwa, to deafen, dull, assuage, stupify, Dan. dove, to deafen, deaden, blunt; E. deave, to stupify, dave, to assuage.—Hal. Bav. dauben, to subdue, allay; Pl. D. doven, doven, to dump, subdue, suffocate; Du. dooven, uitdooven, to put out, extinguish.

The notion of stopping up, thrusting a stopper into an orifice, leads in the most natural manner to that of stopping the breath, choking, strangling, killing.

Du. douwen, duwen, to thrust, to stuff; iets in een hoek douwen, to stick something into a corner—Halma; Pl. D. duwen, douen, to press, depress; Bohem. dawiti, to strangle, choke, kill; daw, pressure, crowd; Russ. dawit', dawowat', to press, crowd, suffocate, strangle, oppress; Serv. dawiti (würgen), to slaughter. Thus we come round to the Wall. touwé, which is used in like manner for the slaughtering a beast; Goth. divans, mortal; OHG. douuen, touuen, to die. In order to trace dead and deaf to a common origin we must suppose that the former also is derived from the notion of stopping up, and we should find a satisfactory root in the Fris. dodd, dadde, a lump, bunch.—Outzerf. Een dod, a plug of cotton in one's ear.—Overyssel Almanach. Pl. D. dutte, a plug, a tap; Icel. ditta, Prov. E. dit, to stop. See Dam.

Deal. 1. A portion. Goth. dails, G. theil, Lith. dalis, Pol. dola, Bohem. dil, Gael. dála, Sanscr. dala, a part, lot, portion. Sanscr. dal, to split.

To deal is to give to each his lot, hence to traffic or have intercourse with others.

2. The wood of the fir-tree, in some parts of England called deal-tree. Sw. tall, pine-tree; tall-ved, fir-wood, deal. Probably from being easily cut and worked. Icel. tálga, to hew, talgu-knifr, a knife for cutting wood; Dan. tølge, telle, to cut, whittle; G. teller, a trencher, plate on which meat is cut, It. tagliare, Fr. tailler, to cut; Lith. dalgis, Fr. dalle, a scythe; Lat. dolare, to hew, dolabra, an axe; Icel. télgia, an axe. G. diele, a board.

Dean. Fr. doyen, Du. deken, the head of a collegiate body, from Lat. decanus; ten being used in Lat. as an indefinite number, as seven in Hebrew.

Dear. Formed in the same way as dark by composition with the Gael. negative particle do = Gr. δvs, opposed to so = Gr. ev. Gael. daor, bound, enslaved, precious, dear in price; saor, free, ransomed, cheap; gu daor, dearly; gu saor, freely, cheaply. Ir. daor, guilty, condemned, captive, saor, free, saoradh, ransoming, acquittal, cheapness. Manx deyr, deyree, condemn, deyrey, condemning, dear; seyr, free, clear, at liberty, seyree, to free, to justify.

Death. See Dead.

Debate. Fr. debattre, to contend, to fight a thing out. See Beat.

Debauch. Fr. debauche. Bauche, a course of bricks in building, perhaps from Icel. balkr, a heap, wooden or stone division in a cattle-house, division of a subject; E. balk, a beam, a slip of turf unplowed, separating lands in a corn-field. From bauche is formed baucher, to chip or square timber (to form a beam), also to rank, order, or lay evenly. The converse of this is desbaucher, to throw out of order, seduce, mislead, debauch.

Debonnair.—Bonnair. It. bonario, debonaire, upright, honest.—Fl. Fr. debonnaire, courteous, affable, of a friendly conversation. It was early explained as a metaphor from hawking, from aire, an airy or nest of hawks; de bon aire, from a good stock. Oiseau debonnaire de luy mesme se fait. The gentle hawk mans herself.—Cot. The connexion between courtesy and high birth was very strongly felt in feudal times.

Notwithstanding the plausibility of the foregoing, I am satisfied that the final element is simply the It. aria, aere, air, by metaphor the aspect, countenance, or cheer in the face of man or woman.—Fl. The expression is a relic of the old theory which supposed the affections of the health or dispositions of the mind to arise from certain humours, vapours, or airs. Debonnair then would literally signify good-humoured, as it is translated in the Gloss. to Chron. Norm., de bonne humeur.

Pain d'orge li unt aporté
E eve, n'i unt plus que traire;
Simple, benigne, et de bon aire
Le prient mult que ce receive.

Chron. Norm. 2. 10, 30.

So de mal aire, ill-humoured, of a bad disposition.

Ne nos seies plus de mal aire
Kar benignes e humilians
Sunes à faire tes talanz.—Chron. Norm. 14, 819.

In E. we speak of behaving with a gracious or ungracious air, with an air of indecision, &c. By itself the term airs is commonly applied in a bad sense to conduct inspired exclusively by fumes from within, without due regard to the claims of others. An air of music is a strain proceeding from the inspiration of the composer.

Debt. Lat. debeo, debitum, to owe. See Deft.

To Decant. To cant a vessel is to tilt it up on one side so as to rest on the other edge, and to decant is to pour off the liquid from a vessel by thus tilting it on the edge, so as not to disturb the grounds. See Cant.

To Decay. Prov. descazer, descaier, Fr. dechoir, to fall away, go to ruin, from Lat. cadere, to fall. O. Fr. Dechaisable, perishable.

To Deck. To cover, spread over, ornament. Lat. tegere, tectum, OHG. dakjan, dekjan, Icel. thekja, AS. theccan, to cover, to roof. From the last of these is E. thatch, properly, like G. dach, signifying simply roof, but with us applied to straw for roofing, showing the universal practice of the country in that respect. The Lat. has tegula, a tile, from the same root, showing the use of these as roofing materials in Italy at a very early period.

Lith. dengti, to cover; stala dengti, to spread the table; stoga dengti, to cover a roof.

Decoy. Properly duck-coy, as pronounced by those who are familiar with the thing itself. "Decoys, vulgarly duck-coys."—Sketch of the Fens in Gardener's Chron. 1849. Du. koye, cavea, septum, locus in quo greges stabulantur.—Kil. Kooi, kouw, kevi, a cage; vogel-kooi, a bird-cage, decoy, apparatus for entrapping water-fowl. Prov. E. coy, a decoy for ducks, a coop for lobsters.—Forby. The name was probably imported with the thing itself from Holland to the fens.

Deed. Goth. déd, galdéd, AS. dæd, G. that, a thing done. See Do.

Deem. See Doom.

Deep. See Dip.

Deer. Goth. diurs, OHG. tior, Icel. dyr, G. thier, a beast, animal. In E. deer confined to animals of the cervine tribe. Diefenbach considers it quite unconnected with Gr. θηρ, Lat. fera.

Defeat. Fr. defaite, from defaire, to undo, destroy, discomfit.

Defile. Lat. filum, Fr. fil, thread; whence defiler, to go in a string one after another, and defile, a narrow gorge which can only be passed in such a manner.

To Defile. AS. fyfan, Du. vuylen, to make foul or filthy. Sec Foul.

To Defray. Fr. defrayer, to discharge the frais or expenses of anything. Formed in a manner analogous to the It. pagare, to pay, from Lat. pacare, to appease. So from G. friede, peace, friede-brief, a letter of acquittance, and M. Lat. fredum, freda, fridus, mulcta, compositio quâ fisco exsolutâ reus pacem à principe exsequitur.—Duc. “Affirmavit compositionem sibi debitam quam illi fredum vocant a se fuisse reis indultam.” The term was then applied to any exaction, and so to expenses in general, whence Fr. frais, the costs of a suit.—Carpentier.

Quod pro solvendis et aquitandis debitis et fredis vilæ suæ possent talliare, &c.—Duc.

Defit.—Deff. Neat, skilful, trim.—Hal. AS. dæfe, dæfte, gedese, fit, convenient; gedafan, gedafnian, to become, behove, befit; gedæftan, to do a thing in time, take the opportunity, to be fit, ready.

The notion of what is fit or suitable, as shown under Be-seem, Betcem, is commonly expressed by the verb to fall or happen—what happens or falls in with one’s wishes or requirements. So from Goth. gatiman, to happen, G. ziemen, to befit; from fullen, to fall, gefallen, to please, and to fall itself was formerly used in the sense of becoming, being suitable. In like manner from Goth. gadaban, to happen, gadobs, gadofs, becoming.

From the same root Bohem. doba, time (as ‘time itself from gatiman, to happen); Pol. podobać, to please one; Bohem. dobry, good (primarily opportune), dobřeliky, agreeable; Lap. taibet, debere, oportere; taibek, just, due; taibetet, to appropriate, to assign to one. The Lat. debeo is manifestly the same word, and is fundamentally to be explained as signifying “it falls to me to do so and so.”

To Defy. Fr. defier, It. disfidare, to renounce a state of confidence or peace, and let your enemy know that he is to expect the worst from you. Hence to challenge, to offer combat.

Degree. Fr. degré, O. Fr. degrat, Lat. gradus, a step.

Delay. Fr. delai, from Lat. differre, dilatatum, to defer, put off, protract; dilatatio, delay; It. dilazione, delay; dilaiare, O. Fr. delayer, to delay.

To Deliberate. Lat. deliberare, to weigh in the mind, from librare, to swing, to weigh.

Delicate.—Delight. Lat. deliciæ, pleasure, delight, probably at first appetising food, food that makes you lick your chops; whence also delectare, to please, the immediate origin of E. delight and Lat. delicatus, alluring, charming, giving pleasure, luxurious. Compare Bohem. mlask, a smack with the mouth, kiss; mlaskati, to smack in eating, to eat delicately, without appetite; mlaskaček, liguritor, one nice in his eating; mlaskanina, leckerbissen, bits that one licks one's chops at, delicacies.

Delirious. Lat. lira, a ridge, furrow. Hence delirare (originally to go out of the furrow), to deviate from a straight line, to be crazy, deranged, to rave.

To Deliver. Lat. liber, free, whence liberare, to free, and E. deliver, to free from. Then as abandon, from signifying to put under the complete command of another, comes to signify giving up one's own claim, conversely the Fr. livrer and E. deliver, from the sense of freeing from one's own claims, passes on to that of giving up to the control of another.

The sense of Fr. delivre, E. deliver, active, nimble, is probably from the notion of free, unencumbered action.

Dell. See Dale.

To Delve. AS. delfan, to dig. Du. delven, dolven, to dig, to bury. Du. delle, a valley, hollow, lake—Kil.; Fris. dollen, dolljen, to dig, to make a pit or hollow.

To Demand. Lat. mandare, demandare (manu-dare, to hand-give), to commit, enjoin, confide; Fr. mander, to bid, to send, send for, send word of, to charge or appoint.—Cot. Hence demandeur, to send for from, to require from.

To Demean. To wield, to manage; demeanour, behaviour.

So is it not a great mischaunce
 To let a foole have governaunce
 Of things that he can not demaine.—Chaucer in R.

His herte was nothing in his own demain.—Ibid.

Come on with me, demeane you like a maide.—Ibid.

Fr. démener, se demener, to stir much, move to and fro;—un procès, to follow a suit;—marchandise, to traffic. Mener, to conduct, lead, manage, handle;—les mains, to lay about one;—la loi, to proceed in a suit—Cot.; It. menare, to guide, conduct, direct, or bring by the hand, to bestir.—Fl.

The later Lat. had minare, to drive cattle, derived by Diez from minari, to threaten; “asinos et equum sarcinis onerant et minantes baculis exigunt.”—Apuleius. “Agasones equos agentes, i. e. minantes.”—Paulus ex Festo. But the notion of threatening does not seem to me to be a point of view from which the act of driving beasts would be likely to be named. On the other hand the O. Fr. spelling, mainer, suggests an obvious derivation from Lat. manus, Fr. main, the hand, as we speak of handing one down-stairs; and mener is often synonymous with manage, which is undoubtedly from that source. Observe the frequent references to the hand in the explanations from Cotgrave and Florio above given. The same change of vowel is seen in Fr. menottes, handcuffs.

Demijohn. A corruption of the Fr. dame-jeanne, Lang.; damo-xano, a large bottle covered with matting.—Dict. Castr.

Demon. Gr. δαίμων, the divinity, the tutelary genius of a city or man. The Lat. dæmon was used in the latter sense, and by ecclesiastical writers was applied to the fallen angels.

To Demur. Lat. demorari, to delay, restrain; Fr. demeurer, to stay; in Law language applied to the stoppage of a suit by the preliminary objection that the plaintiff on his own showing is not entitled to the relief which he claims. Hence to demur to a proposition, to make objections.

Demure.

When this lady had heard all this language
 She gave answers full softe and demurely,

Without chaunging of colour or courage,
 Nothyng in haste but full mesurably.—Chaucer.

After that Gabriel had al thys sayed, the maiden made answer in fewe wordes, but wordes of suche sorte as might be a witnessse of exceeding great demureness in hir, coupled with passing great affiaunce and zele towards God.

Udal in R.

The sense in which the word is used in these early examples is so exactly that of the Fr. meure (from matûrus), ripe, also discreet, considerate, advised, settled, stayed,—Cotg., that we cannot but think that it is the remnant of some such expression as de mure conduite, or the like. Compare Fr. debail, a tutor or guardian, from bail in the same sense.—Cot.

Den. The hollow lair of a wild beast; a narrow valley. AS. dene, a valley. See Dimble.

Denizen. Commonly explained as a foreigner enfranchised by the king's charter, one who receives the privilege of a native ex donatione regis, from the O. Fr. donaison, donison, a gift. But the general meaning of the word is simply one domiciled in a place. A denizen of the skies is an inhabitant of the skies. In the Liber Albus of the City of London the Fr. deinsein, the original of the E. word, is constantly opposed to forein, applied to traders within and without the privileges of the city franchise respectively. "Et fait assavoire qe ceste ordinance se estent auxibiën as foreyns come as denzeins de touz maneres de tieulx bargayns faitz dedeinz la dite fraunchise." p. 370. "Item qe nulle pulletier deinsein—ne veignent pur achatier nulle manere de pulletrie de nulle forein pulletere." p. 465. "Qe chescun qavera louwe ascuns terres ou tenementz de denszein ou de forein deinz la fraunchise de la citee." p. 448.

The correlatives are rendered in Lat. by the terms intrinsecus and forinsecus; "mercatoris forinseci seu intrinseci," p. 252; and as forinsecus and forein are from Lat. foras, Fr. fors, without, while the meaning of intrinsecus is simply one who is within, so deinsein is from the old form deins, in which the modern dans, in, within, always appears in the Liber Albus. Deins né, né dans le pays.—Roquef.

. To Descant. A metaphor taken from musick, where a simple air is made the subject of a composition, and a number of ornamented variations composed upon it. "Insomuch that twenty doctors expound one text twenty different ways, as children make descant upon playne song."—Tindal in R.

To Devery. To make an outery on discovering something for which one is on the watch, then simply to discover.

Design. Lat. designare, to mark out; whence to design, to frame in the mind, purpose, project.

Desire. Lat. desiderium, regret, desire.

Despise.—Despite. O. Fr. despire, despissant, from Lat. despicere, to despise; as confire, from conficere.

Mult les despisent

E poi valent, e poi les present

Qui od Rou volent faire paix.

Chron. Norm. ii. 4978.

From Lat. despectus, we have Prov. despieg, despieyt; Fr. despit, contempt, despite.

Detail. Fr. detailler, to piecemeal—Cot.; from tailler, to cut. See Deal.

Deuce.—Dickens. A euphemism for the devil. The Pl. D. uses düker, duks, or duus, in the same sense; de duks un de dood! De duus! as in English, the deuce! or the dickens! Swab. taus; dass dich der Taus!—Schmid.

The Bret. has teuz, a goblin, or spectre, from teuzi, to melt, to disappear—Legonidec; whence probably the Celtic dusii, or demons, mentioned by Jerome and Augustin.—Wachter. Dusius, dæmon.—Gloss. Isid. But the Teutonic forms may perhaps be quite distinct. The Du. duyvel, duvel, Icel. difill, the devil, might seem to signify the diver, him whose dwelling is under-ground; from difa, Dan. duve, to duck. Hence in seeking an indirect way of naming him he might be called duyker, the ducker, or dipper. Other similar names have arisen from the same tendency to indirect designation. Pl. D. necker, the hangman; whence our Old Nick, G. henker, in the same sense.

Device. Two senses of the word must be distinguished ; 1. That of Fr. devise, a posie, emblem, conceit, coat, or cognisance borne [to distinguish an individual, or a party]—Cot. ; and 2. A contrivance.

The first of these is derived from a fashion prevalent in Italy about the 13th century, of wearing suits with the two halves of the body of different colours, by which the retainers of a particular house were distinguished. These uniforms were called vesti or panni divisati, vesti alla divisa, the colours adopted for the purpose constituting the partita, divisa, or device of the livery.

“Tutti vestiti de una roba, panni divisati di scarlatti et di velluti verdi.”—Fragm. Hist. Rom. in Muratori. “Tutti giovani vestiti col Re d’una partita di scarlatto verde-bruno, tutti con selle d’una assisa.” John Villani in Duc. v. Assisa. “Pulcherrima divisa est color albus et rubeus.” In a description of the dresses worn by the court at Avignon mention is made of “calze, una (i. e. one leg) rosso di panno, e l’altra alla divisa, secondo i colori dell’ arme del senatore.” “Maniche una di damasco rosso e l’altra alla divisa del Popolo Romano.”—Muratori Diss. 29. “Illi de Auria et Grimaldi pro ipsorum majori colligatione insimul se induerant simile vestimentum, duorum scilicet pannorum coloris diversi, ex quibus quilibet vestimentis unum habens gerebat pro dimidia colorem et pro reliqua colorem alterum.”—Chron. Genuensè, A.D. 1311, in Mur. Diss. 33.

Divisato, particoloured.—Fl.

And er alone but when he did servise

All black he ware, and no devise but plain.

Chaucer, Belle Dame sans merci.

Devise or device, in the sense of arrangement or contrivance, is the It. divisare, to think, imagine, devise ; also to appear, to seem unto, and also [to communicate one’s thoughts] to discourse.—Fl. Fr. deviser, to commune, discourse, also to order, digest, dispose of.—Cotgr. The origin is the Lat. visum, It. viso, what appears to one, view, opinion ; to devise, to arrange one's thoughts; to devise by will, to express the intentions of the testator as to the way in which his property is to go. See Appendix.

Under the present head may be explained the expression point device, which has been much misunderstood. The Fr. deviser is to imagine, to plan, and a devise is used as a superlative of praise.

Un noble château à devise.—Fab. et Contes, iii. 155.

Li vergiers fut biau à devise.—Ib. iii. 115.

The garden was fair as could be imagined, or as we say with greater exaggeration, fair beyond imagination. “—— went down in their barges to Greenwich, and every barge as goodly drest as they could devise.”—Chron. H. viii. in Cam. Miscell. iv.

• Ele fut portraite à devis; ——

N'est cuens ni rois ni amirés

Qui seust deviser tant bele

• En nule terre come cele. ——

Bien fu fete par grant maitrise

Nature la fist à devise.—Fab. et Contes, iii. 424.

She was a specimen of the beau ideal; no count, or king, or admiral, could imagine one so fair.

On the other hand point is used in the sense of condition; en bon point, in good condition; mettre à point, to put into condition, to dress.

A point devise then would signify, in the condition of ideal excellence, precisely the sense in which point device is always used.

So noble was he of his stature,

So faire, so jolie and so fetise,

With limmis wrought at point device.—R. R. 830.

Devil. Lat. diabolus; Gr. διαβολος, the accuser, from διαβαλλω, to calumniate, traduce.

Dew. Du. dauwo, G. thau, Dan. dug, Sw. dagg.

The Pl. D. dauen signifies both to dew and to thaw, and the outward aspect of the phenomenon is 'the same in both cases ; viz. the spontaneous appearance of moisture on a surface on which it has not apparently fallen from without.

Sc. dew, moist ; Icel. daugg, rain ; natt dög, dew.

Dewlap. Dan. dog-læp ; Du. douw-swen gel ; from sweeping the dew (P).

Dew-berry. G. thau-beere.—Adelung. A kind of black-berry covered with bloom. Probably a corruption of dove-berry, from the dove-coloured bloom for which it is remarkable, as the same name is in Germany given to the bilberry, which is covered with a similar bloom. Bav. taub-ber, taubenber (die blaue heidelbeere), vaccinium myrtillus. Dub-ber, mora.—Schmeller.

Dey. See Dairy.

Dial. A device for showing the time of day. Lat. dialis, belonging to the day.

Diamond. G. demant, corrupted from adamant.

Dia-per. It. diaspro, a Jasper or Diasper stone.—Flor. Gr: ιασπης, Lat. Jaspis. Then as jasper was much used in ornamenting jewellery, M. Lat. diasprus, an ornamented texture, panni pretiosioris species.—Duc. “Pluviale diasprum cum listis auro textis.” “Duas cruces de argento, unam de diaspro, et unam de crystallo—duo pluvialia de diaspro et panno Barbarico.” Diasperatus, adorned with, inlaid work, embroidery, or the like. “Sandalia cum caligis de rubeo sameto diasperato, breudata cum imaginibus regum.”

A stede bay, trapped in stele,

Covered with cloth of gold diaped well.—Knight's Tale.

Fr. diaspré, variegated, “versicolor instar jaspidis.”—

Duc. In OE. poetry a meadow is frequently spoken of as diapered with flowers. At a later period the reference to different colours was lost, and the sense was confined to the figures with which a stuff was ornamented. Fr. diapré, diapered, diversified with flourishes on sundry figures.—Cotgr. As now understood it is applied to linen cloth, woven with a pattern of diamond-shaped figures.

Dibber.—Dibble. A setting-stick, usually made of the handle of a spade, cut to a point and shod with iron.—Baker.

I'll not put
The dibble in the earth to set one slip of them.

Winter's Tale.

The syllable dib, expressing the act of striking with a pointed instrument, is a modification of Sc. dab, to prick, Bohem. dubati, to peck, E. job, to thrust, or peck, parallel with dag or dig; to strike with a pointed instrument. Norm. diguer, to prick; diguet, a pointed stick used in reaping.—Pat. de Brai.

Dibble-dabble. Rubbish.—Hal. Comp. Hung. dib-dàb, useless; dib-dàbsag, useless stuff (quisquilæ), rubbish.—Dankowski.

Didappér. Also called dab-chick, or dob-chick, a water-bird constantly diving under water. Du. doppen, doopen, to dip; dobber, a float, bobbing up and down with the waves.—Halma.

To Didder. To didder, dither, dodder, to tremble; diddering and daddering; doddering-dickies, the quivering heads of quaking grass.—Hal. Icel. dadra, to wag the tail; Hung. dideregni, dederegni, dödörgni, to tremble; Sc. diddle, to shake, to jog.

Hale be your heart, hale be your fiddle,

Long may your elbuck jink and diddle.—Burns in Jam.

To doddle, to totter; Bav. tattern, to tremble. The origin is a representation of the repeated beats of a vibrating body by the syllables da, da, ta, ta, or when the beats are rapid and small, di, di, ti, ti. Compare Galla dada-goda, to make da-da, to beat.—Tutschek. Mod. Gr. $\tau\zeta\iota\tau\zeta\iota\pi\iota\omega$, to shiver, shimmer; G. zittern, to tremble.

To Diddle. Properly, as shown in the last article, to move rapidly backwards and forwards, then to use action of such a nature for the purpose of engaging the attention of an observer while a trick is played upon him, to deceive by juggling tricks.

Die.—Dice. A small cube used in gaming. Arab. daddon, dadda, game of dice. It. dado. Prov. dat. Fr. dét, dé.

To Die or Dye. The proper meaning is to soak, wet, or steep.

Then if thine eye bedye this sacred urn,
Each drop a pearl shall turn,
To adorn his tomb.—Epitaph, 1633.

AS. deagan, tingere; Prov. E. to deg, to moisten.—Hal. Icel. digna, to become wet; Dan. dug, dew; dygge, to sprinkle with water, dyg-vaad, dyng-vaad, thoroughly wet. In the latter of these forms we see a close agreement with Lat. tingere, which unites the senses of wetting or moistening, plunging in liquid, dyeing with colour. Gr. $\tau\epsilon\gamma\gamma\omega$, to moisten, stain, colour.

Diet. 1. A deliberative assembly. See Day.

2. Gr. διαίτα, mode, or place of life, means of life, subsistence.

Shall no more hereafter; and eche day our diete (intercourse)
Shall be mery and solase, and this shall be forgete.

From Lat. dictare, to dictate, to speak what is to be taken down in writing. Dictare, dichen, tichten, vorsagen oder lesen das man schreibt.—Dief. Sup. Sw. dickta, to invent, to feign, to devise; dickta up en historia, to trump up a story. See Ditty.

Dike.—Ditch. As the earth dug out of the ground in making a trench is heaped up on the side, the ditch and the bank are constructed by the same act, and it is not surprising that the two should have been confounded under a common name. Du. dijk, agger, et fovea, alveus, fossa.—Kil. In like manner the It. mota, the mound on which a castle was built, is identical with E. moat, the surrounding ditch out of which the earth was dug. In the N. of England a dike is a dry hedge; dike stour, a hedge-stake, while dike-holl or dike-hollow is the ditch.—Hal. In Dan. the term dige is applied both to a ditch and bank, but dige-grøft is specifically the ditch.

The primary signification is doubtless that of the Fr. digue, a bank, jetty, or dam for stopping the flow of water, whence the term is applied, like the Scandinavian dam or the Romance tampo, tanco, to a pond of water held up by a dike or dam. Du. dijk, piscina, stagnum.—Kil. The two applications are in G. distinguished by a modification of spelling, and deich is used in the sense of a dike or dam, teich in that of a pond. In a similar manner in England the northern pronunciation dike has been appropriated to a bank, the southern, ditch, to a trench.

The ultimate origin of the term must be looked for, not in the idea of digging with a spade, but in that of stopping up, thrusting in a peg to stop an orifice, in accordance with the fundamental signification of the root dag or dig, whence Sp. taco, a stopper, ramrod, billiard cue, wadding; W. tagu, to choke, to stifle.

Hung. dugni, to stick in, to stop, duga, a plug, stopper, stuffing; Illyrian tukani, Pol. tkać, to thrust, stick, cram, stuff; utykać, to stop chinks; Bohem. zatka, a stopper, bung, obstruction. Fin. tukkia, to stop a hole, stuff something into a hole; tuket, a stopper; tukkuta, to be stopped, to stagnate; Esthon. tükma, to thrust, press in, to stop; tükkis, a stopper. Sc. dook, a peg driven into a wall.

The natural connexion between the notion of stopping the flow of water and that of fencing an inclosure is obvious enough, but it may tend to show the fundamental relation of all these forms, if we adduce in illustration the Sw. tappa, to stop, to shut, tappa et åker, to inclose a field; Lap. tappi, a plug, a stopper, tappo, an inclosed piece of ground, a yard; Lang. tampa, tanca, fermer, boucher, enclore, entourer.—Dict. Castr.

Dilling.—Dill. Dilling, a darling or favourite, the youngest child or the youngest of a brood.—Hal. Icel. dill, the nurse's lullaby; dilla, to lull a child to sleep. To dill, to soothe, to still, to calm—Hal., to dill down, to subside, become still. "The noise of the Queen's journey to France has dilled down."—Jam. Hence the name of the herb dill (Sw. dill, Dan. dild, anethum), used as a carminative or soothing medicine for children. To dill is simply to make or become dull or inactive. Prov. Dan. dull, still, quiet, as pain when the attack goes off; dulme, to subside, assuage, soothe. Lith. tylus, quiet, still, tildyti, to quiet, tyla, silence; Pol. tulić, to seek to calm, soothe, or appease one, utulić, to quiet a crying child. See Dull.

Dilly. A public carriage, contracted from Fr. diligence.—Hal.

Dim. One of the numerous class of words branching out from the root tap, dab, dam in the sense of stop, obstruct, mentioned under Deaf and Dam. Lang. tapa lou jhour, to stop one's light; Ptg. tapa los olhos, to cast a mist before one's eyes, taparse, to darken, become dark; tapar os ouvidos, Lang. se tampa las aourelhos, to stop one's ears.

Bav. daumb, daum, taum, stopper, wadding; daumen, verdaumben, to ram down, to stop; dumper, dimper, dull in sound or in colour; "timper, fusca vox, cæcus sonus," timberriuwolchen, the dark clouds; ein tumperer nebel, a dark mist. Timberi, caligo—Notker, identical with Lat. tenebræ; vertumperte augen, oculi contenebrati.—Schmeller. Swab. die-mer, dumper, gloomy, of the weather, vertumplen, vertumlen, to make thick (trübe). Du. bedampen, to darken, to make dim, obscurer, ternir—Halma; een dompig huis, a close, dark house. Icel. dimmr, dark, thick; dimma, dumba, darkness; dimmeitr, dumbinn, dark-coloured; dumbungr, thickness of air, covered weather; dimmraddadr, voce obscurâ et gravi; dimma, to grow dark. Sw. dimba, a fog, haze; Dan. dum, dumb, dim, obscure, dull, low (of sound), stupid.

The same relation between the ideas of shutting up and darkening is seen in Manx doon, to close or shut up, and also to darken, doon, a field or close, dooney, shutting, closing, darkening, E. dun, of a dark colour. The same development of the root is found in the Finnish languages. Fin. tumma, dull, dim, tummeta, to be dimmed, to be put out as a fire, tummentaa, to damp the fire, to extinguish; Esthon. tumme, dull, dim, dark. Lap. tuom, dull in action, slow. Bohem. tma, darkness, tmjti se, to become dark.

Dimity. Originally a stuff woven with two threads, from Gr. dis, twice, and μῆρος, a thread. "Officinas ubi in fila variis distincta coloribus Serum vellera tenuantur, et sibi invicem multiplici texendi genere coaptantur. Hinc enim videas amita, dimita que et trimita minori peritiâ sumptuque perfici," i. e. (says Muratori) "vulgares telæ sericiæ uno filo seu licio, duobus, aut tribus contextæ."—Falcandus, Hist. Sicil. in Mur. Diss. 25. In the same way the G. name for velvet, sammet, is contracted from exhamita, from having been woven of six threads. In like manner G. drillich, E. drill, a web of a threefold thread; G. zwillich, E. twill, a web of a double thread.

Dimble.—Dimple.—Dingle. Dimble or dingle is a narrow glen, deep valley.

Within a gloomy dimble she doth dwell.—Sad Shepherd.

Lith. dubus, hollow, deep (of vessels); dubus medis, a hollow tree; dumbu, dubti, to be hollow; dûbe, dobe, a ditch, hole in the earth, den; dubele, a little pit, dimple in the cheek or chin; dauba, a glen, cleft, valley; duburys, a hole in the ground, a wet springy spot. Fris. dobbe, a ditch, hole, pit, hollow; dobbetjens, a dimple.—Epkema. E. dib, a valley; dub, a deep place in a river—Hal., a puddle or gutter—Jam.;

dump, a deep hole of water; Bav. dümpf, dümpfel, a deep hole in a river; OHG. tumphilo, gurgles—Schmeller; E. dumble, a wooded dingle.—Hal.

Closely connected with deep, dip. The radical image may be the hollow made by a blow with a pointed instrument, represented by the syllable dib, whence dibber, dibble, a setting-stick. Compare Bohem. dupati, to stamp, dupa, a hollow; Pol. dupnieć, to become hollow. On the same principle we have dent, the hollow made by a blow (and perhaps den, a cave or hollow), from dint, a blow. So also from dig or ding in the sense of stabbing or thrusting or striking with a hammer or the like, dinge, the hollow made by the blow, and dingle, synonymous with dimble, a narrow glen.

Din. Imitative of continued sound. Icel. dynia, dundi, to resound; duna, to thunder. Lat. tinnire, to sound as a bell, tonare, to thunder. See Dun.

To Dine. It. desinare; O. Fr. disgner, disner, digner; Prov. disnar, dirnar, dinar. “Disnavi me ibi.”—Gl. Vatic. quoted by Diez. Diez suggests a derivation from a Lat. decænare (analogous to devorare, depascere), whence in Fr. might have arisen decener, desner, diner, as from decima—desme, dîme, from buccina—busna. The O. Fr. hād reciner, a lunch, from recænare.

To Ding. To strike, knock, cast. To ding through, to pierce. “He dang him throw the body with ane swerd.”—Bellenden in Jam. To ding at the door, to knock.—P. P. Icel. dengia, to hammer; dengia einum nidr, to ding one down.

From an imitation of the sound, as in ding-dong for the sound of repeated blows.

Dingle. A narrow valley, a glen. A variety of dimble, and, as the latter was derived from dib, expressing a blow with a pointed instrument, dingle stands in the same relation to dig, ding. The primary meaning then would be a dint, pit, hollow.

Dingy. Related to forms like the G. dumpfig, dead in sound, musty, damp, Du. dompig, dark, close, as cringe to AS. crymbig, crooked, It. cangiare to cambiare, to change. It may be considered as the analogue of the Du. donker, G. dunkel, dark. See Damp, Dim.

Dint.—Dent.—Dunt. All imitative of the sound of a blow. To dint, to strike so as to make a hollow sound, to beat, to palpitate.—Jam. Icel. dyntr, dynt, shaking up and down; dynkr, a hollow sound as when a stone is thrown into water; Sw. dunka, to beat heavily. Sc. to dump, to beat or strike with the feet. Sw. dimpa, to fall.

Diocese. Gr. διοικησις, the management of a household, administration, function of a steward, a province or jurisdiction, in ecclesiastical matters the jurisdiction of a bishop. Διοικω, to manage household affairs, from οικος, a house.

To Dip.—Deep. Goth. daupjan, AS. dippan, Sw. doppa, to dip, to soak. Du. doppen, doopen, to dip, baptise; Sc. doup, Du. duypen, to duck the head. G. taufen, to baptise; It. tuffare, to dive or duck, to plunge under water.

Goth. diups, Icel. diupr, Du. duyp, diep, G. tief, deep. Lith. dubus, hollow, deep (of a vessel); dube, dobe, a ditch, hole in the ground, dubele, a little hole, a dimple; dumbu, dubti, to be hollow.* E. dub, a pool in a river, dump, a deep hole of water. Du. dampen, dompelen, to plunge under water—Halma; Bav. dümpf, dümpfel, a deep hole in a river.

Bohëm. dupa, a hole or cavern, dupati, to stamp, dubati, to peck, strike with the beak.

The original root seems to be the syllable diß, dub, deep, representing the sound of a blow with a pointed instrument, and thence being applied to the hollow made in the object struck, or on the other hand to the sudden motion downwards with which the blow is given. To dip then is to go suddenly downwards, and deep designates the quality of things which admit of going suddenly downwards, the depth being greater as they admit of a more extended or more sudden descent.

It is remarkable that as we have a root dig in the same sense with diß, the same parallelism of the labial and guttural final is found throughout the series. We have Du. duypen and duycken, to duck the head, to duck under water, dive; Sc. doup in the same sense as the E. duck; G. taufen, to baptise, tauchen, to dip or dive; E. dimble and dingle, a glen; Du. dampen, G. tunken, to dip.

Dirge. A funeral service; from Ps. 5, v. 8. "Dirige Domine Deus meus in conspectu tuo vitam meam," repeated in the anthem used on such occasions.—Jam.

The frere wol to the dirge if the cors is fat.

Political Songs 332. Cam. Soc.

In old Sc. dregy, dirgy.

Dirk.—Durk. A dagger. Sc. durk, G. dolch, Sw. dolk, a dagger. Bohem. tuleg, a spear (spiculum), tulich, a dagger. Hung. tolni, to thrust; Russ. tolkat', tolknut', to give a blow, strike, knock; Bohem. tlauk, a pestle. Fris. dulg, dolge, dolch, a wound.—Epkema. The interchange of an l and r before a final guttural is very common. Comp. Prov. Dan. smilke and kilche, corresponding to E. smirk and kirk—Junge; Outzen. O. Fr. pourpe for poulpe.—Roquef.

Dirt. Dryte or doonge, merda, stercus.—Pr. Pm. To drite, cacare, egerere.—Cath. Aug. in Way. Icel: drit, excrement. G. Du. dreck, excrement, filth, mud, dirt, anything vile and worthless. Rouchi draque, dregs. See Draff.

Dis. From Gr. dis, twice, in two parts, separately. In composition it implies separation from the thing signified by the word with which it is compounded, and hence negation, opposition.

Disaster. Fr. desastre, It. disastro, an evil chance, something brought about by an evil influence of the stars. Prov. astrar, to cause by the influence of the stars; astruc, Lat. astrosus, fortunate; benastre, good fortune; desastre, misfortune.—Diez.

To Discard. Sp. descartar, to throw cards out of one's hand at certain games; hence to put aside, reject.

Dish.—Disk. Lat. discus, a quoit or flat circle of stone.

wood, or metal; hence a dish; Gr. δίσκος, a quoit, a tray. G. tisch, a table.

Dishveled. Fr. descheveler, to put the hair out of order. Fr. cheveux, Lat. capilla, the hair.

Dismal. Swiss, dusem, dark, thick, misty, downhearted.—Stalder. Bav. dus, dusam, dusig, dusmig; dull (not shining), still, cloudy.—Schmeller. Prov. Dan. dusm, dussem, slumber. Dasmyn or missyn as eyne, caligo.—Pr. Pm. See Dizzy. Swab. disseln, disemen, dusemen, dismen, dusmen, to speak low, dosen, dosmen, to slumber.

The primary image is a low sound, then dull in colour, dark, overcast, uncheerful.

Dismay. Sp. desmayo, a swoon, fainting-fit, decay of strength, dismay; desmayar, to faint, to be faint-hearted, to discourage, frighten. See Amaze.

To Disparage. From Lat. par, equal, arises Fr. parage, equality of birth or in blood, (and hence) kindred, parentage, lineage.—Cotgr. Hence to disparage, to match a person with one of inferior birth and condition, and in modern usage to speak slightly of one, to put him lower in estimation.

Dispatch. It. impacciare, to impeach, encumber, hinder; dispacciare, to dispatch, rid or free.—Fl. Fr. empescher, to hinder, impeach, pester; despescher, to rid, send away quickly, discharge.—Cot. Diez would derive the words from Lat. impingere, in the sense of fastening something troublesome upon one, through the supposed frequentative forms impactare, impactiare. More probably from the same original root through the notion of stopping up or barring the way, as embarrass from Fr. barras, a barrier, blockade. Lat. repagula, bars, restraints, fastenings; Prov. empaig, empacha, empaïta, obstacle, hindrance; empaïchar, empaïtar, empazar; empechar, to embarrass; the converse of which, to dispatch, is to remove a hindrance.

The variety of the Provençal forms may be compared with the dialectic varieties of the Gr. πηγω, πησσω, πηττω.

To Display. O. Fr. desployer, It. dispiegare, spiegare, from Lat. plicare, to fold.

To Dispute. Lat. disputare, to cast up a sum, compute, to examine and discuss a subject. In modern language the term is applied to hostile discussion of a subject with another person.

Distaff. The staff on which the flax was fastened in spinning. Pl. D. diesse, Ditmarsh dies, the bunch of flax on the distaff; Prov. E. dise, to supply the staff with flax.

The term may be a modification of the root appearing in Gael. dos, a bush, cluster, tuft, lock of hair, E. tussock, a tuft of grass, Bav. doschen, duschen, dosten, a bush, tuft, tassel. On the other hand the thread drawn down from the stock of flax on the distaff may be compared to the stream of milk drawn from an animal's udder, and thus the term may be identical with the Sw. diss, a teat, dissa, to suck. Comp. spin with Du. spene, spinne, sponne, the udder, teat, mother's milk. —Kil. We speak of blood spinning from a vein.

Distrain. — Distress. — District. From Lat. stringere, to strain, to draw tight, Mid. Lat. distringere (whence Fr. distraindre and E. distrain) was used in the sense of exercising severity upon, correcting, and especially in that of compelling or constraining a person to do something by the exaction of a pledge or by fine or imprisonment. "Et liceat illi eos distringere ad justitias faciendas."—Hist. Fr. in Duc. "Et ce qui est dessus devisé fut fait et establi pour destraindre les gens à venir faire droit en la cour."—Assis. Hierosol. In this sense we still speak of distraining for rent, when we seize the goods of a tenant, in order to compel him to pay the rent.

The pledge or the fine exacted was termed districtio, distress, and the same name was sometimes given to the right of exercising judicial authority. "Districtio quoque villæ ad ecclesiam pertinebit, ita ut Godescalcus—qui advocatus est ejusdem allodii, medietatem ipsius districtionis de Ecclesiâ teneat."—Charta an. 1124. But the right of exercising such authority, as well as the territory over which it was exercised, were more commonly termed districtus, It. distretto, O. Fr. destroict, E. district. “Maneantque sub iudicio et districtu vestro.”—Bulla Bonifacii ann. 1033. “Qui allodium venderit, districtum et jurisdictionem Imperatoris vendere non præsumat.”—Lib. Feod. “Et totum districtum ejusdem insulæ cum totâ justitiâ dedi eis.”—Charta ann. 983. “Prædictum furnum et districtum ejusdem furni,” i. e. the soke of the oven, or right of compelling the tenants to resort to it for the purpose of baking.—Duc.

To Dit.—Ditch. To dit is to stop an orifice. “Dit your mouth with your meat.”—Sc. proverb. AS. dittan, to stop. Icel. ditta, to stop chinks. From dot, a lump, as the notion of stopping an orifice is commonly expressed by reference to the bunch of materials thrust into the opening. See Dam. Du. dodde, a tap, stopper, plug.—Kil. Prov. Dan. dot, a stopper.

Another modification of the word is ditch, “ditched or diched, filled up, deeply insinuated. A table is diched when the dirt has insinuated itself into the grain of the wood.”—Baker Northampt. Gl. “Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantis”—Timon of Athens; much good stuff or fill thy heart. Bav. datschen, detschen, dotschen, to press down something soft; datsch, &c., a mess of something soft, kue-datsch, cowdung.—Schm.

Ditch. See Dike.

Ditty. O. Fr. dict, dicté, ditté, recitation of an adventure, story, poem, work of imagination.—Roquef. Lat. dicere, dictum, to say.

Then said I, thus it falleth me to cesse

Eithir to rime or ditees for to make.

Chaucer. Belle Dame sans merci.

Divan. The raised bench or cushion at the upper end of a Turkish room on which the principal persons sit. Hence a council or court of Justice.

To Dive. Du. duypen, to duck or bow the head; douwen, to press, thrust in, enfoncer—Halma; AS. dufian, gedufian, to plunge in water, sink, dive, be drowned; Icel. difa, to press down, to tread a hen; difai, to dip (comp. Bav. ducken, to tread); Icel. difng, immersion, dubla, dufla, to dive. Dan. duve, to pitch, as a ship meeting the waves. See Dip.

To Divine. Lat. divinus, belonging to God; dize, Gods. Gr. dios, godlike. The Lat. divinus was applied to a prophet or soothsayer, one conversant with divine matters, as in modern times the term is applied to a clergyman. Hence divinare, to divine, foretell, prophesy, foresee, then to guess.

Dizzy. AS. dysig, dyslic, foolish; Pl. D. dusig, dösig, giddy, dizzy, dusig weder, hazy weather; Dan. disig, hazy; Du. duysig, deusig, stupid, giddy, stunned; E. dizze, to stun. "Etourdir, to astonish, dizze, amaze."—Cotgr. Bav. dusen, duseln, dusseln, to be still, to slumber, to be giddy; dasig, submissive, tame; dausig, dusig, dull, foolish. E. to daze, to stupefy, benum; dasyd or bedasyd, vertiginosus.—Pr. Pm. To dozen, dosen, to stupefy with a blow or otherwise, to lose power and life, benum, become torpid.—Jam. Icel. dos, das, languor, lassitude. Hann liggr i dosi, he lies in a faint. Dan. dös, drowsiness, döse, to doze, to mope.

Do. It is often said that do in the inquiry after a person's health is properly the Sc. dow, Du. doogen, deugen, G. taugen, to be able or good for, to avail, to thrive; but this is a mistake. To do is to act, or often to serve as the medium of active exertion. We ask how a thing does, meaning, how does it perform the office expected of it, and the word is used in a very similar sense in the inquiry, How do you do?—How do you get on? How do you perform the offices of life? It is a simple translation of the O. Fr. Comment le faites-vous.

Puis li a dit par grant douçor,
Sire, comment le faites-vos?
Dame, bien, dit le Segretains.

Fab. et Contes. l. 245.

"David demanded of him how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered." In the Livre des Rois:

E David—enquist cume Jpab le fist, e li poples, e coment il le feissent del siegè—and how they got on with the siege.

Dock. 1. G. docke, a bundle, bunch of thread, knot of cords, baluster, plug, stopple. A short thick piece of anything. Fris. dekk, a small bundle, ball of twine, bunch of straw. It. tocco, a sefup, cob, collop, cut or shive, viz. of bread and cheese.—Fl. W. toc, that is, short or abrupt; tocyn, a short piece; tocio, to reduce to a short bit, to curtail, explaining the E. dock, to reduce to a stump, to cut short. Icel. dockr, a short stumpy tail. The term dock is applied to several plants having leaves broad in proportion to their length, as sour-dock, sorrel, burdock, blatter-dock (Du. docke-blaederen, petasites), AS. ea-dock, Swab. wasser-düchlein, the water-lily. Another application of the term is to the rump of an animal, butt end of a tree, the thick end.—Hal.

Dock, like other words signifying a lump, is probably derived from the notion of knocking. Du. docken, dare pugnos, ingerere verbera.—Kil. It. toccare, to knock. Compare dump, to beat (—Jam.), with dummy; dunch, to beat, with dunch, one who is short and thick,—Jam.; to punch, to strike, with punchy, short and thick, &c.

Dock. 2. The cage in a court of justice in which a criminal is placed at his trial. Flemish docke, a bird-cage.—Kil.

Dock. 3. An inclosed basin for repairing ships. A pond where the water is kept out by great flood-gates till the ship is built or repaired, but are opened to let in the water to float or launch her.—B.

Both in this sense and in that of a cage the meaning is probably to be explained through the notion of stopping up, hemming in, confining. The G. docke, signifying primarily a hunch, is applied to the tap by which the water of a fish-pond is kept in or let off,—Adelung. Hence the name seems to have been transferred to a naval dock, the essential provision of which is the power of keeping in or shutting out the water by an analogous contrivance though on a greatly magnified scale. Clausa, eyn cluse (a sluice or flood-gate), tock; i. q. docke, obturamentum piscinæ.—Dief. Sup. See Dam.

From signifying the plug or sluice by which the flow of water is regulated, the word is applied to the dam of which the sluice forms part, and generally to the dam or bank of a ditch or artificial piece of water, to the conduit through which the water flows away, to a spout, gutter, watercourse. In the former sense we have Prov. doga, douva, Fr. douve, douhe, a bank. "Douvam sive aggerem dicti fossati." "Qui a douhe, il a fossé," whoever possesses the bank, he has the ditch. In the sense of a conduit; "fossas in circuitu basilicas fieri jussit ne forte dogis occultis lymphæ deducerentur in fontem."—Gregory of Tours in Diez.

In It. we have doccia, a mill-dam, a spout, gutter; Sp. aguaducho, a rush of water, watercourse; It. docciare, to spout, to let water run with some force upon one's head for to cleanse and wash it, as they use in Italy.—Fl. Whence the modern E. douche, a bath taken by pouring water from a height on the patient.

In the sense of a water-conduit we find dozza (doccia, dozza, as fuccioletto, fazzoletto) in a passage misunderstood by Carpentier. "Statutum est quod canalis de S. Catharina—ducatur tantum per dozzam, quæ est—sub fundo circæ (by the culvert which is under the bottom of the ditch), et quod terralium et ripa dictæ circæ claudatur in totum usque ad dictam dozzam ita quod nulla ruptura sit in dicto terralio, et a latere foras dictæ circæ in capite dozzæ possit fieri una clusa alta (a deep sluice, or flood-gate, at the head of the culvert) super dictam dozzam," &c.

The sense of stopping up is expressed by the same root in the Finnish languages. Fin. tukko, a lump, bunch, tuft; tukkia, to stop an orifice; tuket, a stopper, the condition of being shut up; tukkuta, to be stopped up, to stagnate, as water. Hung. dugni, to stuff; dugasz, a stopper, bung.

Docket. A small piece of paper or parchment, containing the heads of a large writing.—B. A shred, or piece.—Hal. A diminutive of dock, in the original sense. W. tocyn, a small piece, or slip, a ticket.

Dod. Synonymous in several of its senses with Dock. Fris. dodd, dadde, a lump, clump, bunch.—Outzen. Sc. dawd, a lunch, lump. Du. dot, a bunch of twisted thread.—Halma.

To dod is to reduce to a lump, to cut off excrescences, to curtail. Doddyn trees or herbs, or other like, decomo, capulo. Doddyd, without horns. Doddyd, as trees, decomatus, mutilus.—Pr. P_{IK}.

Doddy, low in stature, like a lump. Fr. dodu, fat, plump, full-bodied.—Côt. Doddy-pate, or doddy-poll, is equivalent to block-head, or numskull, jobber-noll, lump-headed. Fris. dodd, a simpleton. Du. dots-kop, a blockhead.—Halma.

Dod.—Dodder. Sc. dad, a slam; to fall, or clap down forcibly, and with noise. He fell with a dad.—Jam. Hence dad, a lump, large piece, synonymous with dod. Sc. dod, to jog. To dad, to shake, to strike.—Hal. To dodder, dudder, dither, to shake, to tremble; doddered, shaken, shattered. A doddered oak, a shattered oak. A dodderel, or pollard, is from dod in the other sense of the term, to poll, or cut short.

To doddle, to totter, as well as diddle, to move quickly backwards and forwards, should perhaps be referred to the present root rather than to that explained under Dade.

Dodge. Closely allied with Dod. To dodge, to jog, to move quickly to and fro; hence to follow in the track of any one, to follow his ins and outs, also to deceive one by change of motion.

The original sense seems that given by Forby; a small lump of something moist and thick, as of mortar or clay, from the sound of such a lump thrown against a wall, or on the ground; then applied to the jerk with which it is thrown. Dadge, a large lump.—Hal. See Dab, Dad. Bav. datsch, dotsch, a mass of something soft, a fat person; kue-dätsch, a cow-dung; datschen, dotschen, to press down something soft. Swiss, datsch, dotsch, blow with the open hand, something flat and broad like a soft substance thrown on the ground; datsch-nase, a flat squab nose. Dätsch, the noise of a blow, or the blow itself, smack, clap; dätschen, to smack, to fall, or throw down with a noise, to tattle.

Doe. Lat. dama, G. dam, A.S. da, Dan. daa, fallow-deer; It. daino as E. doe, the female of the same kind. Gael. dqmh, an ox, a stag.

Dog. Icel. doggr, Du. dogghe, a large dog. The uprights in front of the iron bars on which the logs in a fireplace rest are called dogs, in Swiss feuer-hund, probably from the resemblance to a dog sitting on its haunches; in Pol. and Lith. wilki, a wolf. Icel. sitia vid dogg, to sit up in bed.

Doggrel. Pitiful poetry.

Now swiche a rime the devil I beteche,
This may wel be clepe rime dogerel quod he.

Chaucer, Prol. Melibeus.

Doiley. Probably only a modification of the Du. dwaele, a towel, although commonly said to be derived from the name of a dealer by whom they were introduced.

The stores are very low, Sir, some Doiley petticoats and manteaus we have, and half a dozen pairs of laced shoes.—Dryden. Kind Keeper.

The use of doileys, in the sense of a small napkin at dessert, was probably imported with the name from Holland. Du. dwaele, dwele, mappa. G. zwahel, a towel; Swiss dwaeheli, a napkin.

Doit. Du. duit, from Venet. daoto, a piece of eight soldi, da oto soldi. They had also a piece called daquindese, of 15 soldi.

Dole.—Doleful. Sc. dule, dool, grief; to sing dool, to lament.—Jam. Lat. dolere, to grieve; It. duolo, doglia, pain, grief; Fr. deuil, mourning. Ir. doilbh, doilfe, dark, gloomy, sorrowful, mournful; doilbheas, doilgheas, affliction, sorrow; Gael. doilleir, dim, dark; duilbhearra (Ir. duilbhir), sad, anxious, melancholy. The opposites to these last are soilleir, bright, clear, and suilbhir, chearful, joyful, constructed with the particle so equivalent to the Gr. eu, as the former series with the particle do equivalent to the Gr. δυσ. See Dear, Dark. In like manner Gael. dolas, woe, grief; solas, solace, comfort. The idea of darkness is always connected with that of grief and melanckoly. Prov. E. dowly, dingy, colourless, doleful.—Hal.

Dole. 2. A portion, or lot. See Deal.

Dole. 3. Doles, dools, slips of pasture left between furrows of ploughed lands.—B. “Cursed be he that translateth the bounds and doles of his neighbour.”—Injunction 19 Eliz. in Brand’s Pop. Ant. A dole-meadow is a meadow in which the shares of different proprietors are marked by doles or landmarks. Now the simplest division of property would be a strip of turf left unploughed. Pl. D. dole, a small ditch with the sod turned up beside it for a landmark; utdolen, so to mark the division of properties with a ridge and furrow.—Brem. Wört. The word is probably at bottom identical with W. toll, a pit, Bohem. dül, a pit, ditch; then (as the ditch and bank are made by flinging on the one side the earth taken up from the other) applied both to ridge and furrow, and subsequently appropriated to either as accidental circumstances might determine. We find the same duplicity of meaning in dike; and mote, the term by which we designate the ditch of a castle, signifies in It. the mound on which the castle is built.

Dole, a boundary mark, either a post or a mound of earth, a lump of anything.—Hal. Doel, a butt, or mound of turf for archers to shoot at.—Kil. Dool, dole, the goal in a game of football, &c.—Jam.

Doll. Properly a bunch of rags. Fris. dok, a little bundle, as of thread, a whisp of straw, also a doll; G. docke, Swab. döckle, a doll; dokkelen, to play with a doll.

So in Fin. nukka, a flock, rag, patch; nukki, nuket, a doll, pupa lusoria puellarum ex panniculis.

If I were mad I should forget my son,

Or madly think a babe of clouts were he.—K. John.

Dollar. Du. daler; Gr. thaler.

Dolt. Swab. dalde, dalter, dolde, dalle, dohle, dallebatsch, dallewatsch, dalpe, dalper, a foolish, awkward, clumsy person; dalpicht, talkicht, clumsy, clownish; dalpen, talken, to handle awkwardly; G. tölpel, a dolt, blockhead. Bav. dalken, to work in sticky, doughy materials; verdalken, to blot, dawb, do a thing unskilfully, spoil by awkwardness; dalkend, dalket, sticky, awkward; der dalk, the awkward person.—Schmeller. Icel. dálpa, to paddle with the oars, flounder in the mire. E. dallop, to handle anything awkwardly, paw, toss and tumble about; dallop, a slattern. Compare to dabble, to work in the wet, and dabbler, an inefficient worker, and see Blunder.

Dome.—Domestic.—Domicile. Lat. domus, a house. Gr. δομος, δωμα. It is doubtful how the term dome came to be applied to a cupola or vaulted roof. A cathedral is in It. duomo, in G. dom, and a dome may be so called because it was the ornament of a cathedral church. A church in general was called domus Dei, the house of God, and probably the name was given to a cathedral church par excellence. On the other hand we find that the Gr. δωμα was used for a roof. “Doma in Orientalibus provinciis ipsum dicitur quod apud Latinos tectum, in Palæstina enim et Ægypto—non habent in tectis culmina sed domata, quæ Romæ vel Solaria, vel Mæniana vocant, id est, plana tecta quæ transversis trabibus sustentantur.”—St Jerome in Duc. Δωμα, tectum.—Gloss. Gr. Lat. Ibid.

The word domus is commonly derived from the Gr. δευω, to build, but this I believe is putting the cart before the horse. The form with the narrow vowel is commonly the derivative, and πεινομαι is derived from πονος, labour, deem from doom, and not vice versâ. We have then the most natural derivation for the word signifying a dwelling, in the notion of a hearth or fire-place.

The Fin. sawu, signifying smoke, is applied in the second place to a house, household, family living in a house, and in like manner the W. mwg, smoke, is identical with Bret. moug or mog, a fire, hearth, household, house, while a derivative moged is in the latter dialect used for smoke. This mode of expression is almost universal in a rude state of society.

“The census includes those provinces beyond the frontiers dependant on the empire, which are numbered by fire-places or houses.”—Population of China, Amer. Orient. Soc.

Now the Pol. dym (radically identical with θυμος and fumus) is rendered smoke, cottage, house, while the form dom is also used in the latter sense. Bohem. dym, smoke; dùm, a house, where the two senses are distinguished as in Bret. by the modifications moug and moged. Lith. dumas, smoke.

Dominion. The Lat. dominus, a lord, must probably be explained from domus, the man of the house, master of the house.

Domino. A sort of hood worn by the canons of a cathedral church (It. domo, duomo); also a mourning veil for women.—Bailey.

Doom. AS. dom, judgment, whence deman, to deem, or form a judgment.

Door. Gr. θυρα, Goth. daur, G. thor, thüre, Sanscr. dvâr, Lith. durris, Slav. dvryr, &c.

Dor. A drone bee, a beetle. From the humming sound made by animals of this class in flying. Gael. dùrdan, humming noise; dùrdail, murmuring, grumbling, cooing like a dove. Ir. dordam, to hum like a bee; dord, humming or muttering.

To Dor. To befool one, put a trick upon him. Icel. dár, irrisio; dúra, to deride, befool; dári, Dan. daare, a fool; bedaare, to delude, befool; Du. door, G. thor, a fool.

Doree. Fr. dorée, the dorce or St Peter's fish—Cot., from the yellow colour of the skin.

Dormant.—Dormer. Fr. dormant, quiescent, sleeping, from dormir, to sleep. Eau dormante, standing water. A dormant claim, a claim in abeyance. A dormer was a sleeping apartment, whence a dormer window, a window in the roof, usually appropriated to sleeping apartments.

Dormouse. The termination mouse is probably an instance of false etymology, the real origin being a Fr. dormeuse, which cannot it is true be cited from the dictionaries, but is rendered probable by the name by which the animal is known in Languedoc, radourmeire. In the same dialect dourmeire, a slumberer, sleepy head, equivalent to dormeuse (souris, a mouse, is feminine) in ordinary French. The dormouse is called a sleeper in Suffolk.

Dose. The quantity of medicine given at once. Gr. ῥοοις from διδωμι, to give.

Dosil. Fr. dousil, dusil, a spigot, faucet, peg or tap to draw off liquor from a cask, erroneously derived by Diez from ducere, to lead. The fundamental idea is a bunch of something thrust in to stop an orifice. G. docke, a bunch, also the tap of a fish-pond.—Adelung. In It. doccia, the signification is extended to a mill dam, and as it is the office of a tap to let the water flow, doga (Gregory of T.), a water conduit. It. doccia, dozza, a spout, gutter, water conduit. Prov. dotz; O. Fr. doiz, dois, source of water, conduit.

C'est la fontaine, c'est la doiz

Dont sortent tuit li let péchié—

Rome est la doiz de la malice.—Raynouard.

Prov. adozilhar, Fr. doisiller, to pierce. At the same time a parallel line of development seems to have taken place in the Teutonic languages from a root doss of the same signification with dock. Gael. dos, bush, tuft, cluster; Prov. E. doss, a hassock; dosset, a small quantity; dossel, a whip of hay or straw, to stop up a hole in a barn, a plug. Swiss-düssel, a wooden tap. E. dosil, a tent for a wound, probably comes from the French.

Compare Fr. bousche, a bush or bunch; boucher, to stop; bouchon, a stopper, cork. And see Dot, Dit.

Dot. A small lump or pat.—Palsgr. in Hal. Fr. cail-lon, a dot, clutter, clot, or congealed lump of phlegm, blood, &c.—Cot. Hence, like other words signifying a bunch or lump, applied to a bunch of something used for stopping a hole. Du. dodde, Pl. D. dutte, a plug or stopper; Sc. dottle, a small particle.—Jam. E. dottle, a stopper; to dutten, or dit, to stop, shut, fasten.—Hal.*

Other modifications of the expression are jot, tot, tait. Tot, tote, something small, a tuft of hair, grass, &c.—Hal. Sc. tate, a small portion of anything, as wool, flax, &c. Fin. tutti, Sw. totte, the bunch of flax on a distaff. G. zote, a flock or lock.

To Dote. Du. doten, dutten, delirare, desipere.—Kil. Fr. dotter, radoter, to dote, rave, play the cokes, err greatly in understanding.—Cot. Sc. dute, dutt, to doze, slumber, be in a sleepy state. Auld dut, an old dotard. To doit, to be confused, to dote.—Jam.

It is not easy to come to a decisive judgment whether it should be regarded as a modification of the Pl. D. dussen, bedussen, to be dizzy or dazed, the equivalent of the E. doze, or whether it be from the notion of nodding the head in slumber. Icel. dotta, to slumber, nod the head in slumber, dott, a sleepy nodding with the head. Devonshire doattee, to nod the head whilst one is sitting up when sleep comes on. In this sense is perhaps to be understood the Sc. to dut and sleep. If nodding in sleep be the original image the word must be classed with Icel. datta, to palpitate, Sc. dodd, to jog, dodder, didder, totter, tottle, to tremble, to move backwards and forwards, totty, reeling, dizzy. But upon the whole I am inclined to believe that the primary signification is to become stupified or insensible, and that the sense of nodding is merely consequential. Du. dodderig, sleepy, stupified; dodoor, a sleeper.—Halma. Sc. dottar, to become stupid, lose one's senses in sleep. E. doated, dotard (of old trees), beginning to decay; doted, foolish, simple.—Hal. If the last supposition be correct the word must be referred to the numerous class treated under Deaf, Dead, Doot; and see Dowdy.

Dotterel. A bird proverbial for stupidity, from dote.

Doublet. Originally a wadded garment for defence. Fr. doublé. Dobbelet, bigera, diplois.—Pr. Pm. Diplois is explained “duplex vestis et est vestis militaris.”—Cath. in Way; Zwyfaltig kleyt, jacke.—Dief. Sup.

To Doubt. Fr. doubter; Lat. dubitare, from dubius, doubtful, what may turn out in two ways.

Dough. AS. dah, Du. deig, G. teig. Properly damped flour. Icel. deigia, to wet; deigr, wet, soft; deig, dough. See Dye.

Doughty. AS. dohtig, valiant; dugan, Du. deugen, doghen, doogen, valere, probum esse, in pretio esse; deughd, virtus, valor, probitas; deughdelick, sound, good; G. tuggen, to be good for, to be of value; tugend, virtue; tüchtig, Lap. doktok, sufficient for its purpose, sound, strong.

To Dout. To dout the candle is to put it out, and douters are flat pincers used for that purpose. As we have dup, to do up, don, to do on, and doff, to do off, so we at first explain dout without hesitation as do out. But a little further examination connects it with forms which cannot be derived from such an origin. Lang. tuda, attuda, attuzar, to suffocate, choke, extinguish; It. stutare, to do out, quench forth—Fl.; attutare, to put out, quench, calm, appease.—Altieri. Fr. tuer la chandelle, to put out the candle. Bav. tóten, to crack a flea or nut, to put out a fire or lighted match by pressure or covering it up. Bohem. dušyti, to choke, extinguish; Pol. duśić, to choke, stifle, quell. E. slang, to douse the glim, to put out the light. Fris. duss, death; duse, dud mage, to extinguish a fire, discharge an account.

Dove. Du. duyre, Icel. dufa, perhaps from its habit of ducking the head, from Du. duypen, to duck the head, Icel. dufla, to dive, as we find the Lat. columba in the same connexion with Gr. κολυμβᾶν, to dive.

Than peine I me to stretchen forth my neck
And East and West upon the people I beck,
As doth a dove sitting upon a beam.—Pardoner's tale.

Dowdy. Shabby in dress.—Hal. The fundamental idea is however torpor, sloth, while that of carelessness of dress or appearance is an incidental application. Sc. dawdie, a dirty, slovenly woman; to dawdle, to be indolent or slovenly; Pl. D. dödeln, to be slow, not to get on with a thing.—Schütze. Icel. dodi, languor; dodaskapr, Dan. dovenskab, sloth, languor. For the ultimate origin see Deaf. Icel. daufr, dull, deaf, flat, spiritless, dof, torpor, sloth, dofna, to fade, lose spirit, become dull and flat. Sc. dow, to fade, wither, become flat, doze, trifle with; daw, a sluggard.—Jam. E. dowed, flat, dead, spiritless.—Hal. Icel. dofnad öl, Sw. dufwen öl, dowed ale. Sc. dover, to slumber; Prov. E. doven, dovening, a slumber.—Hal. Sc. dowly, dolly, melancholy. Sw. dålig, miserable, poor.

Dowel. A projection in a stone to fit into a socket and fasten it into the adjacent one; a wooden peg fastening two boards together. Fr. douelle, douille, a tap or socket; G. döbel, a peg, plug, stopper.—Kütt. Bav. düpel s. s. especially the dowel or wooden peg entering into each of two adjacent boards to fasten them together, a damper of clay to stop the chimney of the oven, a clump of flax, of people, &c.—Schmeller.

Du. douwen, to press into; jemand jets in de hand douwen, or steeken, to put something secretly into one's hand.—Halma. Pl. D. duwen, to press, press down.

Dower.—Dowager.—Endow. Lat. dos, dotis, a marriage gift; dotare, Fr. douer, E. endow, to furnish with a marriage portion. M. Lat. dotarium, Prov. dotaire, Fr. douaire, a dowry or marriage provision; douairière, a widow in possession of her portion, a dowager.

Dowle. A portion of down, feather. "Young dowl of the beard."—Howel in Hal. Fr. douille, douillet, soft, delicate. Lith. duja, a mote, pl. dujos, dust; dujoti, to float in the air; duje and the dim. dujele, a dowl or down-feather.

Down. 1. Applied to things light enough to float in the air, as thistle-down. G. daune, Icel. dún, the lightest and softest kind of feather; Du. donse, donst, down of feathers or of the typha, sawdust, meal, flour.—Kil. G. dunst, exhalation, vapour, mist, fume. The primary signification is probably mist or vapour, the down being compared for lightness to vapour floating in the air. Thus the Esthon. has uddo or udsu, mist; uddo karwad, down-hair, uddo-sulled or udso-sulle, down-feathers (karwad = hair; sulled = feathers). Traces of this sense are seen in the Icel. daun, odour, smell. But most likely the final consonant was originally an m instead of an n, as preserved in Esthon. tuum sulle, down-feathers, and in the Prov. E. dum, down, fur. A duck or a goose is said to dum her nest when she lines it with some of her own feathers plucked off for that purpose.—Hal.

The same form was extant in O. Fr. (Diez v. duvet), and is preserved by the Emperor Frederick II. in Duc. 'Innascitur vero avibus plumagium multiplex—Secundo innascuntur aliæ [plumæ] quæ dicuntur lanulæ, a quibusdam dumæ, hæ sunt exiles et molles, densiores et longiores primis, &c.'" Hence the prov. Fr. dumet, which has become duvet in ordinary Fr.—Menage. Dumetté, downie.—Cot. The origin is seen in the O. Du. dom, vapour; Bohem. dym, smoke; Du. domp, vapour, exhalation, breath, whence Pl. D. dumpstig, dumstig, dunstig, vaporous, bringing us round to the G. dunst.

The same consonantal change which is seen in the Fr. dumet, duvet, dubet, is also found in the modifications of the same root having the sense of vapour, exhalation, odour. Thus we unite the Du. dom, vapour, with Sp. tufo, a vapour, exhalation, stink, Dan. duft, fragrance, odour, Icel. dupt, Sw. doft, dust, dofta, to evaporate. With an initial s, Sc. stove, steev, a vapour, smoke, dust; Du. stof, stuyf, stuyve, dust, whatever floats in the air; stuyf-sand,—meel, arena, farina ~~volatica~~; stof, flocks of wool; stof-hayr, down-hair; stuyf-ken, the down of flowers = Fr. duvet.

2. Du. duyne, Fr. dunes, sand-hills by the sea-side. Fris. döhne, a hillock of sand or snow driven by the wind. AS. dun, a hill. Gael. dùn, a heap, hill, mount, fortified place.

The adverb down is from AS. of dune, as the O. Fr. à mont and à val, to the hill and to the valley, for upwards and downwards respectively. Of dune, deorsum.—Lye.

Doxy.—Gixy. Probably from the rogue's cant. Fr. gueuse, a woman beggar, a she rogue, a doxy or mort. Goguenelle, a feigned title for a wench, like our gixie, callet, minx, &c.—Cot. Doxy, a sweetheart.—Hunter.

To Doze. Bav. dosen, to keep still, to listen, to slumber; dusen, dussen, to slumber; Ban. döse, to doze, to mope; dysse, to lull; taus, silent, hushed. And see the forms cited under Dismal. The fundamental image is probably the deep breathing in sleep represented by the syllable du, tus. Lith. đusas, a deep breath, dwasas, the breath; dusti, dwēsti, to breathe; Bohem. dušati, to snort. In like manner a representation of the same sound by the syllable sough, swough, gave rise to the OE. swough, sleep, swoon, Sc. souch, swouch, soyf, the deep breathing of sleep, silent, quiet; Icel. svefia (as Dan. dysse), to quiet, svefn, sleep; AS. suwian, swugan, to be silent.

Dozen. Fr. douzaine, from douze, twelve.

Drab. 1. Du. drabbe, Dan. drav, Gael. drabh, draff, dregs; Du. drabbig, feculentus; Gael. drabach, nasty, dirty, slovenly; dràbag, a dirty female, a drab; drabaire, a dirty, slovenly man. From the same image a dirty woman is called in Prov. Dan. drav-so, drav-trug, a draff-pail.—Molbech. See Draff.

2. The grey colour of undyed cloth. Fr. drap, It. drappo, cloth. See Drape.

Drabble.—Draggle.—Drivel. Properly to cover with filth, from Du. drabbe, Rouchi draque, Dan. drav, dregs, G. dreck, filth. Drabelyn, drakelyn, paludo; draped, drabtyd, paludosus, lutulentus.—Pr. Pm. One is said to drable his cloise who slabbers his clothes when eating.—Jam. Pl. D. drabbeln, to slobber, let liquids fall over one in eating; drabbelbart, one who dirties himself in such a manner; Sc. draglit, bedirtied, bespattered—Gl. Dougl.; Sw. drågla, dreglu, to slobber, drivel, let the spittle fall from the mouth. AS. drefliende, rheumaticus.—Lye. See Draff. Sc. draked or drawked, mingled with water or mire—Gl. Dougl., reduced to a dreggy condition; Gael. druaip, lees, dregs, sediment; druablas, muddy liquor.

In modern usage all sense of a derivation from a word signifying dregs or dirt has been lost, and draggle is understood as if it were a frequentative from drag, signifying what has been dragged in the mire.

Draff. AS. Du. drabbe, Dan. drav, Icel. dráf, dregs, husks, hogswash, refuse food for hogs. Draffe, or drosse, or matter stamped, pilumen.—Pr. Pm. G. träbern, brewers' grains; Russ. drobina, dregs, lees; Du. drabbig, Prov. E. dravy, droyy, thick, muddy, dirty. Drubby, myddy.—Hal. Drobly, of drestys, feculentus, turbulentus.—Pr. Pm. Draff, chaff.

Why shuld I sowen dráf out of my fist,
Whan I may sowen whete, if that me list.

Chaucer in Way.

The change of the final labial for a guttural gives rise to a series of forms that cannot be separated from the foregoing. Icel. dregg, E. dregs, sediment; G. Du. dreck, dung, dirt, mud. Prov. draco, dregs of the vintage; Rouchi draque, O. Fr. drague, drache, drasche, drêche, dresche, draff, brewers' grains, dregs of brewing. The form drasche was Latinised as drascus, drasqua, and from the facility with which the sound of sc passes into that of st, gave the Latinised drastus, as well as drascus.—Way. Hence the OE. forms drast, drest, traist; G. trestern, dregs; AS. dresten, fæces.

For the change of the final consonant compare Fr. buc, busche, busc, bust, a bust, trunk.

Again the sound of the Fr. ch in some dialects of France regularly corresponds to that of ss in others, as the Picard or Norman catcher to the Fr. chasser. In like manner the form drache leads to the AS. dros, fæx, sordes, Du. droessem, dregs, dras, mud.—Halma. OE. drass, dross, refuse, cleanings of corn, metal, &c. Drosse, or fylthe whereof it be, ruscum; drosse or drasse, of corn, acus, criballum.—Pr. Pm.

The Gael. leads us to the same forms through a different route; drabh, draff, grains of malt; drabhag, dregs, sediment, refuse; drabhas, filth, foul weather, obscenity; draos, trash, filth.

Pol. drożdże (z = Fr. j), Waläch. droschdii, dregs, lees.

The fundamental signification is refuse matter, the part cast out as worthless or disgusting, a notion commonly expressed by reference to the act of spitting. Now the root rac, alone, or strengthened with an initial mute, is widely spread in the sense of spitting and rejection. Lang. raca, to vomit; Fr. cracher, to spit; Icel. hraki, spittle, hrak, refuse; Lang. raco and draco, dregs of the vintage; Fr. racaille; Dan. dravelsfolk, E. rabble, the dregs of the people. The addition of an initial d before an r is not of unusual occurrence. AS. hreosan, and dreosan, to fall; G. rieseln, E. drizzle; E. rathe, and Pl. D. drade, quick, soon; Sc. rad-dour, Prov. E. dreadre, fear; OHG. recke, 'OE. rink, Icel. drengr, a warrior.

To Drag.—Draw. AS. dragan, Icel. draga, to drag or draw; Du. dragen, G. tragen, to carry. Du. trecken, to draw, as a sword, to trace outlines; treck-brugghe, a draw-bridge; treck-net, a drag-net. Lat. trahere, to draw.

To Draggie. See Drabble.

Dragon. Lat. draco, Gr. δρακων, a serpent, from its supposed sharpness of sight; δερκω, εδρακον, to see.

Dragoon. Described by Skinner as "in recentiori militia equites sclopetarii," cavalry carrying fire-arms, and therefore capable of service either on horseback or on foot. As the French carabins, a similar kind of troops (carabijn, equester sclopetarius—Bigl.), were named from the carbine which they carried, it is probable that the dragoons, or dragooners (Du. dragonder), as they were also called, had a similar origin. Dragon, a species of carbine—Hal., so named, no doubt, after the analogy of culverin, Fr. couleuvrine, from couleuvre, a snake. Drake, a kind of gun.—Bailey.

Drain.—Drains. Drain in the sense of drawing off water is without exact equivalent in any of the cognate languages, and it is not easy to form a decisive opinion of the radical signification and connexions of the term.

On the one hand we have provincially rin, rhine, reean, drean, rindle, drindle, a gutter or channel to carry off water; strine, a ditch—Wilbraham, Hal.; OHG. drahan, trahan, a drop, a tear; tránjan, to weep; AS. drehnigean, excolare, to strain. Hence to drain might with great probability be explained, to trickle away, to drip, being perhaps fundamentally connected with forms like Lith. drėgnas, wet, sloppy; drėgti, to become wet to thaw; Gael. drugh, soak, ooze through, drain; drùchd, dew, a tear, sweat; drùchdan, a drop, whey [the drainings of curds]; driog, a drop, a tear, and as a verb, to drop or trickle.

On the other hand we find drains in a sense which cannot well be explained from this source. The term brewers' grains, or the dregs of brewing, seems a corruption of drains, the name by which they are still known in Suffolk.—Forby. Drascus—nos de la drague dicimus, Angli draines et druff.—Duc. Perhaps the change of initial may have taken place from confusion with another synonym, grames, found in Hexham's Du. and E. Dict. 1660; brewers' grames; corresponding to the Sw. grum, grummel, dregs; It. groma, dirt, scurf, dregs. Drain in the foregoing sense seems related with Russ. drän, drántza, refuse, dirt, rubbish; Dan. drank, dregs, lees, grounds; Sw. dragg, drank, distillers' wash, or grains; tunn dragg,—drank, the settlement of liquor in a cask; win-drank, lees of wine. Lith. dranka, hogs' wash.

Now the notion of draining might be explained from running a vessel to the dregs or grounds, the attention being directed in this case to the final result of the operation, as in the former supposition to the appearance while the operation is going on. Perhaps, as is frequently the case, when we are puzzled by a double derivation, they may both be traced to the same original source. See To Drake.

Drake. The male of birds is in one or two instances designated by the syllable rick, drick, drake. Dan. due, a dove; duerik, a male dove; and, a duck, andrik, Sw. and-drake, a drake; G. ente, a duck; enterick, a drake. The same variation between an initial r and dr is found in the original sense of the word. OHG. recke, a warrior, hero; Icel. reckr, vir, milés; OE. renk, rink; Icel. drengr, a warrior.

In like manner the Fin. uros (identical with the Gr. ἦρως and Lat. herus, G. herr, master) signifies a grown man, brave man, and the male of animals; uros-puoli, the male sex; uros-lintu, a male bird; uro-teko, a heroic deed. Anser (vir aëcarum) ein herr unter den gensen.—Dief. Sup.

To Drake.—Drack.—Drawk. To saturate with water—Hunter; to mix with mire or water.—Gloss. Dougl. To dreap, to drench.—Hal. Draplyd, drablyd, paludosus. Drablyn, drakelyn, paludo.—Pr. Pm. From the notion of mud, dirt, filth, disagreeable wet, expressed by the double form of root, drag, drab, drak, drap. Drakes a slop, a mess; Gael. drabhas, filth, foul weather; E. trapes, a slattern [one who lets her clothes trail in the wet].—Hal. Pl. D. drek-metje, a woman who dirties her clothes, a drabble-tail; drek-soom, the border of wet at the bottom of a bedraggled gown.—Schütze. Icel. dreckia, and (as the root takes a nasal form in Sw. drank, dregs, grains, wash) Sw. dránka, to plunge in water. Lith. dregnas, wet, sloppy, dreginti, drekinti, to make wet. See Draff.

Drake. 2.—Drawk. Drake, drawk, drank, drunk, darnel, a mischievous weed among corn. “Le yveraye (darnel) i crest, et le betel (drauke).”—Bibelsworth in Way. Du. dravick, ægilops, vitium secalis.—Kil. W. drewg, Bret. draok, dreok, darnel. Walon. dráwe, drauwe. The radical meaning is not improbably dregs, refuse, out-cast, making the term identical with Fr. draque, Dan. drank, dregs, from the root rak, spit, cast out, in support of which hypothesis may be cited the Russ. plevai, plevelui, weeds, from plevat', to spit out. The OHG. turd, zizania, O. Sax. durth, G. durt, dorst, darnel, point to a similar origin. Weeds are the filth of the cultivated land; a weedy field is said to be very foul.

The sense of rejection appears also in the labial form of the root in the expression drapè sheep, the refuse sheep of a flock.—Hal.

Dram.—Drachm. Gr. δραχμη, a drachm or dram, a weight of 60 grains. It. dramma, a very small quantity of anything. Bret. drammour, an apothecary, one who retails medicaments in drams. In Normandy the term drame is applied to a pinch of snuff.—Patois de Bray. In Denmark, as in England, it is used for a small glass of spirits, a dose of spirits.—Molb. Dial. Lex.

Drape.—Draper. Fr. drap, cloth. Sp. trapo, rag, tatter (which seems the original signification), cloth. A todo trapo, with every rag of canvas set. Perhaps from the sound of a flapping piece of cloth represented by the syllable trap. Sp. gualdrape, the housings or trappings of a horse, the long hangings with which they were covered on occasions of state; also a tatter, rag hanging down from clothes; gualdrapazo, slap of the sails against the mast.

Drape-sheep. See Drake. 2.

Draught. What is dragged or drawn. A draught of water, so much as is drawn down the throat at once. A draught of fishes, what is taken at one drag of the net. A move at chess or similar game was formerly known by this name, whence the game of draughts, of moves with separate pieces.

The burgeise took avisement long on every draught—
 Draw on, said the burgeise, Beryn, ye have the wers—
 The next draught thereafter he took a rook for nought.

Chaucer.

In the same way It. tiro, a move at chess, from tirare, to draw.

To Drawl. Du. draelen, Fris. draulen, Icel. drolla, Dan. dræve, dræge (Molbech), to delay, loiter, hesitate. Prov. Dan. drævs, a slow inactive person; drøvle, to be slow at one's work. "Han dræver sine ord saa langt ud," he drawls out his words so slow. But the notion of delay is probably a secondary development from the image of imperfect, unmeaning speech, jesting, trifling, expressed by Icel. drafla, Sw. drafwel, Dan. dræve, drævle, Pl. D. draueln. See Drivel, and for the passage from the idea of trifling to that of delaying, Dally. The same connexion in sense is seen in prov. E.

drate, to draw out one's words—Ray; to drote in speech, traulo—Pr. Pm. (explained to ratylle in Cath. Ang.), compared with prov. Dan. draade, to be torpid in action; Pl. D. dröteln, to loiter, dawdle; dröteler, a lazybones.

Dray. Sw. drög, a sledge, a carriage without wheels, what is dragged along, as Lat. traha s. s., from trahere, to draw. It. treggia, a hurdle, sled, harrow, truck.

Dräzel.—Drossel. A dirty slut. Prov. Dan. drasse, to be slow, inactive in work; draasel, a dull, inactive person; Dan. dröse, to dawdle. Du. draselen, oberrare, vagari. The word may however be identical with the Icel. drægl or dræglí, femella prolixis et sordidis vestibus, a slut. 'But even here the notion of slowness may be the true origin. Drægia, delay, drægiulegr, dræglisleggr, slow, tardy.

Dread. Several instances have been given under Draff, in which a root takes a double form of development with an initial dr and hr or r. In the same way we must identify dread with Sw. rædas, to fear, rædd, Sc. rad, red, afraid; prov. E. dredre, Sc. dredour, dridder, with Sc. raddour, reddour, fear, dread.

The origin is, I believe, in the notion of trembling, expressed by the O. Fr. dredré, onomatopœia for the chattering of the teeth; dridriller, to gingle as mule's bells.—Roquef. The parallel form with an initial hr is seen in AS. hridrian, to sift, shake, hrith-adl, a fever or ague, a shaking sickness, hrithian, to be ill of a fever [to shiver]; G. rütteln, to shake. Bret. drida or trida, to thrill or shiver with joy.

Dream. Icel. draumr, G. traum. Russ. dremat', to slumber, be slow; Serv. drem, drijem, slumber, sleepiness; Pol. drzynać, to doze, slumber, nap.

Perhaps the confused state of mind in drowsiness and dreams may lie at the root of the word, as trouble of mind is commonly expressed by the metaphor of thickness or muddiness of liquids.

My mind is troubled like a fountain stirred,
And I myself see hot to the bottom of it.

Thus we have prov. E. droff, dregs, refuse; AS. drof, Du. droef, prov. E. dreivy, drubby, dfaffy, dirty; Du. droef, droeve, droevig, troubled in mind, sad; droeven, turbare, dolere, tristari—Kil.; AS. drefan, gedrefan, to disturb, trouble, afflict. So from Du. droes, dregs, may be explained OHG. driuzan, G. verdriessen, to trouble, disquiet, and not improbably Lat. tristis, from the OE. form drest, traist, lees, dregs. Du. drijt, dirt, verdriet, trouble, annoyance.

In like correspondence to the Du. dreck, dirt, mud, is AS. dreccan, to trouble, whence the OE. drecche, dretche, to disturb or trouble, especially to disturb by dreams, and thence simply to dream.

This Chanteclere gan gronen in his throte
As man that in his dreme is dretchyd sore.

Chaucer in R.

Dremyn or dretchyn yn slepe, sompnio.—Pr. Pm. So also we may compare prov. E. dreivy, dravy, thick, muddy, with Sc. drevilling, unsound sleep, slumber—Jam.; E. draveled, slumbered fitfully.—Hal.

Quhen langsum dreuillyng, or the unsound sleep
Our ene ouersetis in the nyctis rest,
Than semes us full busy and full prest.—D. V.

Again the final b or v of the root drab, drub, drev, passes into an m in droumy, dirty, muddy—Hal., Sc. dramock, drum-mack, a thick dreggy mixture of oatmeal and water; Lith. drumstas, dregs, drumsti, to make thick, to trouble; Pl. D. dram, trouble—Brem. Wtb.; Sc. dram, drum, dull, melancholy; Icel. dræmr, slow; prov. Dan. drumse, to be sluggish; E. drumley, muddy, thick, hence confused, also slowly, lazily; E. drumbled, disturbed, muddy, to drumble, to be sluggish, to be confused in doing anything.—Hal. "Look how you drumble."—Shak. He dreams drumbles, he is half asleep or stupid.—Hal. Drommet di wor? you speak as if you were dreaming.—Brem. Wtb.

Compare drumbley above quoted with drobly or drubly, turbulentus, turbidus; drobly (of drestys) feculentus—Pr. Pm.;

turbidus, troubli, drobli or dark.—Way, in notes. On the same principle we identify Douglas' drevil or dravel with prov. E. dremel, a dream.

Dreary. AS. dreorig, OHG. trurag, G. traurig, sorrowful; OHG. getruregot, conturbata; trüren, druren, contristari, to be troubled or grieved in mind. This seems to be another instance in addition to those given under Dream, where the notion of mental disturbance is expressed by the metaphor of the thickening or troubling of liquids. The root is the AS. dros, Du. dröes, droessem, OHG. trusana, trosana, truosina, drusina, lees, dregs, with the very frequent conversion of the final s into an r, as in AS. dreosan, dreoran, to fall, G. verlieren, E. lose, AS. coren, E. chosen.

To Dredge.—Drizzle. To dredge, to scatter flour on meat while roasting; to dridge, to sprinkle.—Hal. Dan. drysse, to dredge, sprinkle, powder, to fall in small particles as sand. From the pattering sound of such a fall. Prov. Dan. draase, drase, to fall with a pattering or rustling noise. "Det regner saa det draaser," G. "Es regnet dass es dräuscht," of a heavy shower. Grain is said in Dan. to draase through the cracks of an old loft, or from the ears of corn when they are setting up the sheaves. This is the prov. E. durze. Durzed or dorzed out, said of corn that by wind, turning of it, &c., is beaten out of the straw.—Ray. Dras, what falls out of the corn in threshing.—Molbech. Sc. drush, atoms, fragments.—Jam. G. rieseln, to purl as a brook, to fall in grains as frozen snow or small rain, to drizzle.—Kütt. Swiss droseln, troseln, to make a rattling or rustling noise in falling, as fruit from a tree, to fall with such a noise, the fuller vowel in droseln being used of larger fruit, as apples, the thinner in dröseln of nuts. Dan. drasle, to fall with a rustling noise, to patter.

In Fr. the same idea is expressed with an initial gr instead of dr; gresiller, to hail, drizzle, sleet, reem to fall.—Cot.

It. trosciare, to rain or shower down most furiously; stros-ciare, to fall furiously and clatter withal, as rain or hail falling upon tiles or against glass windows.—Fl. G. dräuschen, to make a dashing noise like pouring rain.—Kütt. n.

Dredge. 2.—Dradge. Oats and barley mixed together.—B. Dragge, mengled corne (drage or mestlyon, P) mixtio.—Pr. Pm. Fr. dragée aux chevaux, provender of divers sort of pulse mingled together; dravée, all kind of pulse, as beans, peas, &c.—Cot. See Drug.

Dredge. 3. Du. dregghe, harpago, et verriculum; a kind of anchor with three or four flukes, an instrument for dragging. Dregh-net, verriculum, everriculum, a dredge or kind of net for dragging along the bottom.

Dregs. See Draff.

Drench. Icel. dreckia, to plunge in water; Sw. dränka, s. s., also to drown; Du. drencken, to water beasts, to lead them to drink. Probably the idea of drinking is not the original import of the root, which seems preserved in prov. E. drakes, a mess, a slop, Lith. dregnas, wet.

Dress. To prepare for any purpose. Fr. dresser, to straighten, set up, direct, fashion;—un lit, to make a bed; se faire dresser quelque chose à quelqu'un, to get him to set it straight, or to give order for it.—Cot. It. drizzare, to address or turn toward any place. Lat. dirigere, directum, to direct.

Dresser. Fr. dressoir, buffet ou l'on range les plats en les dressant, a kitchen dresser.—Vocab. de Berri. Dressure or drëssynge boorde, dressorium, directorium.—Pr. Pm.

To Dretch. To vex, harass, trouble, especially to trouble with dreams, to dream, also to delay, and to deceive. We have explained under Dream the way in which the earlier of the foregoing meanings are developed from the root drak, dregs, the connexion of which with the notion of delay is not very obvious. But as the parallel root drav, dregs, is also accompanied by verbs (A.S. drefan, to disturb, trouble, vex, and Dan. dræve, to lag, loiter, drawl) uniting the senses of trouble and delay, it is probable that there is a radical connexion between them. Now we often speak of the latter part of an entertainment, when the rooms are getting thin, as the dregs of a party, and thus to dreg or dretch out a thing may be to dwell on it to the last, to drain it to the last drop.

Then make I other taryngys
To drecche forthe the long day,
For me is lothe to part away.—Gower in Hal.

The sense of deception, which is generally overlooked, may be explained from the same source. The fundamental signification is to trouble the sight, to cast a mist before the eyes.

And ever his [the hypocrite's] chere is sobre and softe,
And where he goth he blesseth ofte,
Whereof the blynde worlde he dretcheth.—Gower in R.

—he bleses the eye of the world.

Ye schall see a wonder dreche,
Whan my sone wole me fecche.

Not a sorrowful sight, probably, as explained by Hal., but a vision.

And the fader of the freres
Defoulide her soules,
That was the dyggyng devel
That dreccheth men oft.
The devil by his dotage
Dissavyth the chirch.—P. P. Creed, 1001.

G. betriegen; Du. driegen, bedriegen; Sw. bedraga, to impose upon, deceive, the explanations of which from the notion of dragging or drawing are most unsatisfactory.

Dribble. A true dribble is a servant that is truly laborious and diligent.—B. Icel. thrif, diligentia domestica, carefulness, husbandry; thrifil, a careful man.

To Dribble.—Dribblet. Drib, dribblet, a small portion; to dribble, to give out by small portions. We should have no hesitation in referring the expression to Dan. draabe, a drop, prov. Dan. drible, to drivel, E. drop, drip, were it not that in all the Slavonic dialects drob signifies a crum, fragment. Pol. drob, every diminutive thing; droby, drobki, the odds and ends of animal food, goose's giblets, calf's pluck, &c.

He charged each of them shake hands together,
 And when they met, to say, Good morrow, brother;
 Thus each quit other all old debts and driblets,
 And set the hare's head against the goose's giblets.

Harrington in R.

Pol. drobny, small, petty, slight; drobno, in small pieces; Bohem. drobet, a little of anything, a crum of bread, drop of water; drobiti, to crumble, to mince; drobitše, to fall to pieces; Russ. droblio, drobit', to crumble; drobienie, pulling to pieces; drob', fragments, small shot. We may observe that E. drib, dribble, are most commonly used of liquids. It is probable there may be a radical connexion between the foregoing forms and Russ. drobina, dregs, on which some light may be thrown by the Icel. draf, Gael. drabh, dregs, draff; Icel. drafna, Gael. drabh, to rot, fall to pieces, dissolve.

Drill. 1.—Trill.—Thrill. Du. drillen, trillen, tremere, motitari, vacillare, ultro citroque cursitare, gyrosque agere, gyrare, rotare, volvere, tornare, terebrare.—Kil. The primary signification is to shake, to move to and fro; then, as vibration and revolution are characterised by the same rapid change of direction, to move round and round, and thence to bore a hole. The Du. drillen was specially applied to the brandishing of weapons; met den pick drillen, to shake a pike—Sewel, or, as it was formerly called, to traid a pike; drilkonst, the art of handling or managing a gun. Hence drillen, as a factitive verb, to drill soldiers, or make them go through their exercise.

The origin is seen in Fr. dredré, the chattering of the teeth; dridriller, dridiller, to gingle, as hawks' or mules' bells; Gael. drithlich, Fr. driller, to twinkle, glitter; the notion of chattering, trembling, quavering, shaking, glittering, being commonly expressed by modifications of the same root. Thus the Fr. has bresoler, to crackle in frying or roasting, to shiver, or thrill—Gloss. Génév.; bresiller, briller, to twinkle or glitter; It. brillare, to twinkle, sparkle, quaver with the voice. So Fr. tresoler, trisoler, to ring a peal of bells—Roquef.; It. trillare, trigliare, Sw. drilla, E. trill, to shake or quaver with the voice in singing; to trill upon the pin, to rattle the latch of a door in order to give notice that some one is without.

To trill, like drill, is then used in the sense of turning round, rolling.

—the sodaine smartes

Which daily chaunce as Fortune trills the ball.

Gascoigne in R.

The senses of shivering, turning round, piercing, are also found united in thrill, thirl, which must be classed with drill as mere differences of spelling. A thrill of emotion is a shiver or shudder of nervous excitement. Icel. thirla, circumagere; E. thirl-pool, for whirl-pool—Rich.; AS. thirlian, to pierce; thyrel, O. Du. drille, a hole; Icel. thiril, a whirl for milling milk; G. zwirl, a tool for drilling holes; Du. dwarlen, to whirl; E. twirl.

The notion of shaking is one of those most appropriately expressed by the frequentative form of verb. I therefore regard the Fr. dridriller, dridiller, as the original form, Bret. drida, trida, to quiver with joy, as a derivative. Hence we pass to Icel. trita, to whirl; tritill, Dan. trilde, a child's top; Icel. tritla, to whirl; Dan. trilde, trille, to roll; trilde-bór, a wheel-barrow.

Drill. 2. Trill.—Rill. Drill, rill, a small stream of water; to drill or trill, to trickle or flow down in drops, or in a small stream.

“There was no water on this island, but at one place close by the sea; there it drills down slowly from the rocks, where it may be received in vessels.”—Dampier in R.

Drylle, or lytylle drafte of drynke, haustillus.—Pr. Pm. I believe that this is a special application of the notion of shaking, rolling, or unsteady motion, explained under the former head. Prov. Dan. drille, drilre, to spill, as water out of a full vessel; Gael. drill, a drop, a twinkle, and as a verb, to drop, to drizzle; drilseach, glittering, dropping, drizzling; Bret. dral, W. dryll, a fragment; drylliach, driblets, snips; Sw. drälla, to scatter, to sow, to let fall here and there, as out of a riddle or sieve. To drill corn is to let it dribble along a furrow, like a trickling rill of water. Probably the sense of a row was first developed from that of a little stream, then to drill, to sow in rows. Compare E. rill, a little stream, with W. rhill, a row or trench, and ultimately with Icel. rida, to tremble, to move slowly; rilla, to vacillate, to roll. We have seen that trill signifies to roll, and it is in this sense that the word is to be understood when we speak of tears trilling down the cheeks. Thus the W. treiglo, to roll, may afford the explanation of the E. trickle, O. Sc. trigil.

Be all thir teris trigilland ouer my face.—D. V.

The derivation of drill, signifying the rolling motion of a drop down the side of a vessel, from Fr. dridiller, to gingle, may be further illustrated by Fr. griller, originally to rattle, also to glide, steal, trickle—Cot.; It. brisciare, to shiver, sbrisciare, to creep in and out as a snake or an eel, to glide as upon ice.—Fl.

Drill. 3. A kind of linen cloth; G. drillich, M. Lat. trilix, drilex, drylich von dreyen faden—Dief. Sup.; Lat. licium, a thread of the warp. So twill, G. zwillich, cloth made with two divisions in the warp.

Drink.—Drench.—Drown. Goth. drigkan, Icel. drecka, Dan. drikke, to drink; Icel. dreckia, to sink under water, to drown; Dan. drukken, drunk; drukne, to drown. Prov. E. to drake or drack, to wet thoroughly, to soak in water.

To Drip. See Drop.

To Drive. AS. drifan, Goth. dreiban, G. treiben, to urge forwards, to move under the influence of an overpowering force. Icel. drif, a tempest; drift-hvitr, white as the driven snow. Dreifsa, to scatter.

Drivel.—Droll. For the sense of slobbering see Drabble. As drivelling is the sign of imbecility from age or idiocy, as well as infancy, the term might naturally be transferred to imbecile talk or action. But in this sense the word has probably a different origin, or if it have the same ultimate origin, it comes by a different course. From Gael. drabh, draff, is formed drabhas, filth, filthiness of speech, and the same metaphor is used in Russ. drän', rubbish, dirt, idle talk. So from Icel. dráf, dráff, we have dráft, loose, idle, indecent talk; dráfa, dráflá, imbecilliter loqui velut moribundi et semisopiti—Andersen; to speak unintelligibly, as a drunken man—Hald.; perhaps to speak thick, as dravy, drovy, thick, troubled. Sw. dráfvel, nonsense, trifles; hablerie, radotage, fatras.—Nordfoss. Dan. dræve, to dally, trifle, play the fool—Wolff; dræve, to twaddle, drivel, talk foolishly. Pl. D. draueln, to speak in a childish, foolish manner, to trifle. He draelt wat, he is joking. Hence Fr. draule, drole, a wag or merry grig—Cot., whence E. droll, facetious, joking.

To Drizzle. See Dredge.

Drone. AS. draen, the non-working bee, from the droning or buzzing sound it utters, as G. hummel from hum. It. tronare, to thunder, to rattle. Icel. drunr, a bellowing, loud hollow noise; Dan. drón, din, peal, rumbling noise; Pl. D. dronia, to sound; Gael. drannan, humming, buzzing, growling; drann-eun, a humming-bird.

The drone of a bagpipe is the pipe that keeps constantly making a droning noise.

To Droop. Icel. dryp, driupa, to drip; driuppi, driupa, to droop, hang the head, hence to be sad or troubled; driupr, suppliant, sad; to droup or drouk, to dare, or privily be hid.—Pr. Pm.

Drop.—Droop.—Drip. Du. drop, drup, G. tropfen, Icel. dropi, a drop; Icel. driupa, Du. druppen, druypen, drup-pelen, G. triefeln, to drip, or fall in drops. The Gael. driog, a drop, and E. trickle, seem parallel forms with a final guttural instead of labial in the root.

In Lith. the root drib has the sense of hanging. Dryboti, to hang to something, hang down; dribti, to hang, to drip (of viscous fluids), to fall as snow, to dribble; nudribti, to hang down, to droop (of a sick person who cannot hold himself up); nudribbusos ausys, drooping ears; padribbusos akys, dripping eyes.

Dropsy. Lat. hydrops, from vdap, water.

Dross. In general the dregs or refuse of anything; drosse or fylthe whereof it be, ruscum; coralle or drassø of corne, acus—Pr. Pm.; dross-wheat, refuse wheat for the swine.—Way. AS. dros, Du. droes, droessem, dregs, filth. Fr. draque, drasche, drache, lees, brewers' grains. See Draff.

Drought. AS. druguth, Du. drooghte, Sc. drouth, from AS. dryg, Du. droogh, dry.

Drowsy. Du. droosen, to doze, slumber, Dan. drøse, to dawdle; Pl. D. dróteln, to delay, dawdle; drösseken, dusken, to slumber. Perhaps from the droning sound of the breathing in sleep. Pl. D. drunsen, to low like a cow, to drone out one's words through the nose; drünsen, drünseln, to slumber, to be drowsy.

Swiss dösselen, doselen, to go about half sleeping, to dawdle, lounge, lead a lazy, inactive life.

To Drown. See Drink.

To Drub. Icel. drepa, to strike, to slay; Sw. drabba, to knock, hit; Prov. E. drab, to beat; Bohem. drbati, to rub, scratch, to give a sound beating.

Drudge. Ir. drugaire, a slave, or drudge. To drug, to drag, to do laborious work.

At the gate he proffered his servise

To drugge and draw, what so men wold devise.—Chaucer.

Right earnestly they wirk,

And for to drug and draw wald never irk.—D. V.

Manx drug, a dray; drug, a timber waggon; prov. E. drugeous, huge.—Hal.

Drug. Fr. drogue. Du. drooghe wders, droogh kruyd, pharmaca, aromata, from their hot, dry nature, drying up the body.—Kil. A more likely origin is the It. treggea, Sp. dragea, Mod. Gr. τραγαλα, τραγημα, sweetmeats. Fr. dragée, a kind of digestive powder prescribed unto weak stomachs after meat, and hence any jonkets, comfits, or sweetmeats, served in the last course for stomach closers.—Cot. Articles of such a nature seem to have been the principal store of the druggist or apothecary.

Boxis he bare with fine electuares,
 And sugrid siropes for digestion,
 Spicis belonging to the potiquares,
 With many wholesome swete confection.

Test. Creseide, 250.

Full redy hadde he his apothecaries,
 To send him drugges, and his lettuaries.—Chaucer.

Drum. From an imitation of the sound. G. trommel.

The whistling pipe and drumbling tabor.—Drayton in R.

Drumble-bee, a humble-bee. Icel. thruma, thunder; thrumketil, æs tinniens. Dan. drum, a booming sound.

Dry. AS. drig, Du. droog, G. trocken, Icel. thurr, Dan. tor.

Dub. A small pool of rain-water, puddle, gutter.—Jam. Fris. dobbe, a puddle, swamp. See Dip.

To Dub. The origin of the expression of dubbing a knight has been much canvassed, and it has been plausibly explained from the accolade or blow on the neck with the sword which marked the conclusion of the ceremony. Icel. dubba, to strike; Fr. dauber, dober, to beat, swinge, canvass thoroughly.—Cot. But the accolade was never anything but a slight tap, and it is very unlikely that it should have been designated by a term signifying a sound beating. Nor have we far to seek for the real origin. The principal part of the ceremony of dubbing a knight consisted in investing him with the habiliments of his order, putting on his arms, buckling on his sword and his spurs. Now in all the Romance languages is found a verb corresponding to the E. dub, signifying to arrange, dress, prepare, fit for some special purpose. Prov. adobar, to arrange, prepare, dress victuals. Fr. douber, to rig or trim a ship; addouber, to dress, set fitly together, arm at all points.—Cot.

La dame s'est moult tot armée
Et com chevalier, adoubée.

Fab. et Contes, iv. 291.

Cat. adobar, to repair, dress leather, dress or manure land ; Sp. adobar, to dress or make anything up, cook meat, pickle pork, tan hides ; adobo, dressing of any kind, as paint for the face, pickle, or sauce, ingredients for dressing leather ; E. to dub cloth, to dress it with teasels ; to dub a cock, to prepare it for fighting by cutting off its comb and wattles ; dubbing, a dressing of flour and water used by weavers, a mixture of tallow for dressing leather.

The origin is preserved in Slavonic. Bohem. dub, an oak, oak bark, tan ; dubiti, to tan ; Lith. dubas, tan ; dobai, dobbai, tanners' lie. From the image of tanning leather the term seems to have been extended to any kind of dressing.

Duck. Du. duycken, to bow the head, and especially to sink it under water, to dive. G. tauchen, Sw. dyka, to dive ; Bav. ducken, to press down ; duck machen, to let the head sink ; duckeln, to go about with the head sunk.

The change of the final guttural for a labial gives a series of parallel forms, Du. duypen, to stoop the head, go submissively ; G. taufen, to baptise ; E. dip, dive.

Duck, the bird, is so called from the habit of diving, as Lat. mergus, from mergere. Du. duycker, G. tauch-ente, Bav. duc-antl, the dob-chick.

Dudgeon. 1. The root of box-wood.

2. Ill-will.

Due.—Duty. Lat. debere, It. dovere, O. Fr. deuvre, of which last the participle at one time was probably deuté, corresponding to It. dovuto, duty, right, equity—Fl., afterwards contracted to deu, and mod. du, due.

Dug. A teat. Sw. dægga, to give suck. See Dairy.

Duke. Fr. duc, Lat. dux, a leader ; ducere, to lead.

Dull. The radical idea is a stoppage of the faculties or powers proper to the subject. A dull edge is one that does not cut, a dull understanding does not readily apprehend, a dull colour does not strike the eye, a dull pain is one that continues without imperiously absorbing the attention. When the powers of the understanding are partially stopped, the condition is that of folly or madness. Goth. dvals, foolish; *prov. E. to dwaule, or dwallee, to talk incoherently, as one in delirium. Du. dol, dul, G. toll, mad. The sense then passes from mental to material wandering. Pl. D. dwalen, dpeelen, twalen, Fris. dwala, to err in judgment, act foolishly, wander; Du. dwaelen, dolen, to wander, miss the way; AS. duelian, to deceive; dwohian, to err. The idea of folly is often used to express what fails to answer its apparent purpose, as Fr. avoine folle, wild or barren oats; AS. fon-fyre, Fr. feu-follet, Du. dwaal-licht, the ignis fatuus; dulle-kervel, hemlock, fools-parsley, poisonous parsley; dulle-besien, Dan. dvale-bær, deadly nightshade, or dwale, which last admits of a different explanation. When the faculties subjected to stoppage are the perceptive senses, the affection becomes a faint, torpor, trance. Icel. dvali; Sw. dwala, giddiness, fainting, stupefaction, sleep; Dan. dvale-drik, a soporific, and perhaps dvale-bær, or E. dwale, may be berries producing stupefaction and death. Kilian gives dull-kruyd as a synonym for dwale, while Pl. D. dull-kruud is hyoscyamus, mad-wort.

OHG. dualm, torpor, sleep, lethargy; prov. E. dwalm, dwaum, a fainting fit.

Hur fadur nere hande can talme,
Soche a sweme hys harte can swalme,
For hete he waxe nere mate.

Florence of Rome, 770.

Dan. dulme (explaining the origin of Lat. dormire), to subside, assuage, slumber, doze. Ilden dulmer, the fire burns dull; solen dulmer (sol dormit—Plaut.), the sun is obscured; det dulmer, it is dull weather.—Molb. dial. lex. Du. bedwelmen, to become dizzy, to faint; bedwelmtheijd, defectus animi, mentis caligo, vertigines et tenebræ oculorum. Thus we are brought naturally to the idea of blindness, or dulling of the eyes, as vice versâ Gr. τυφλος, blind, is applied to the other faculties.

τυφλος τὰ ὦτα, τὸν τε νοῦν τὰ ὄμματα, dull of hearing, of the understanding, and of sight. Gael. dull, blind, obscure, dark, to mislead, deceive; Bret. dall, blind, blunt.

The origin, in analogy with other words signifying imperfection of the senses, should be the idea of plugging or stopping an orifice, and may perhaps be preserved in Lith. dullas, Du. dol, dolle, E. thowl, the wooden pins stuck into the gunwale of a boat to keep the oars in their places.

Dumb. This is one of the words alluded to in the last article as derived from the notion of a physical stoppage, and the meaning is very much the same as that of dull. For the origin, see Deaf. Goth. gadaubjan, to stupify; afdaubnan, to be stopped, stupified; afdobnan, to be dumb; dumbs, Icel. dumbi, dumb; dumba, darkness, dark colour; dumbungr*, thickness of the air, covered weather; dumma, to be still; lata dumma, to let be; dimmr, dark, thick, obscure; Dan. dum, dumb, dim, obscure, dull, low (of sound), stupid, foolish; G. dumpf (of sound), hollow, dead; dumm, stupid; stumm, dumb; Du. dom, blunt, dull, stupid, deaf; dom en blend, deaf and blind; domsinnigh, mad.—Kil.

Fin. tumma, dark; tummehtaa, to darken, put out, extinguish; Du. dompen, uit dooven, to put out; dompig, bedompt, dark, obscure; E. stummy, close, confined; to stūm up a house with trees, to shut out the light and air; Esthon. tuim, stupid, tasteless, dull, insensible, worthless.

Dumps. Melancholy, fixed sadness.—B. From Du. domp, damp, a vapour. Domp uit de mage, vapidus fumus ex ventriculo in cerebrum erumpens.—Bigl. In the last century the term vapours was commonly used in the same sense. Vapeurs, une certaine maladie dont l'effet est de rendre melancholique.—Dict. Trev. Avoir une vapeur, to have an unreasonable fancy, a fixed persuasion of a thing. Dump, a sudden astonishment, a melancholy fit.—B. A merry dump is a merry humour.

Dumpy.—Dumpling. Dubby, dumpy, short and thick.—Hal. Prov. Dan. dubbet, s. s. Humpty-dumpty, a short, thick person. From dab, dub, a blow; dab, a small lump. We have bump, dump (with the equivalent thump), hump, lump, bunch, dunch, hunch, lunch, used nearly synonymously for a blow and a shapeless lump. The origin is probably the sound of a blow. See Dunch.

To Dun. To make a droning sound. Dunnyn, in sound, bundo. Dunnynge of sownde, bunda, bombus.—Pr. Pm. Hence to dun, to demand a debt clamorously. In like manner from bum, a humming sound, bum-bailiff, a bailiff employed to dun for a debt, and incidentally to arrest the debtor.

Dun. Dark in colour.

And white things woxen dimme and donne.—Ch. in R.

From the notion of shutting up, covering, obscuring. AS. steorran dunniath, stellæ obscurantur. Gael. duin, to shut, close; donn, brown; Manx doon, to shut up, close, darken; doon, a field, a close, the equivalent of E. town and of G. zaun, a hedge. The connexion between the ideas of covering and darkness is a very natural one. Sp. tapar, to stop up, hood-wink, cover; tapetado, of a dark brown or blackish colour; Ptg. tapar, to stop up, cover, inclose; taparse, to darken, grow dark.—Vieira. Du. dompen, properly to stop; dompig, bedompt, sombre, obscure.—Palma. Dumps, twilight.—Hal. From the same root (with a change of mp into nk), Du. doncker, dark in colour; G. dunkel, dark.

Dunce. From Duns Scotus, the great leader of the schoolmen, called after him Dunsmen or Duncemen; and as they were violently opposed to classic studies in the revival of learning, the name of Dunce was given to an opposer of learning, or one slow at learning.

Remember ye not within this twenty yeares and far less, and yet dureth unto this day, the old barking cures Dunce's disciples, and like draffe called Scotists, the children of darkness raged in every pulpit against Greek, Latin, and Hebrew.—Tyndal in R.

Perhaps the reference to Duns has coincided with another designation of similar sound. The Latin grammar which obtained universal acceptance was that of Donatus, whence a Latin grammar was called a donat, and a student in grammar donatista, donaist. Donatus, Donaist; Donatista, qui studet in isto libro.—Carp. Fr. donataire, a donatary, or donce.—Cot.

Dunch. Dunche or lunche, sonitus, strepitus, bñdum, bombus. Dunchyn or bunchyn, tundo; dunchinge or lunchinge, tuncio, percussio.—Pr. Pm. Dan. dundse, to thump. Lat. tundere.

Dung. The original meaning, like that of muck, seems to be simply, wet. Dan. dygge, dugge, to sprinkle with water; dyg-vaad, dyng-vaad, wringing wet, as wet as muck; bedugge, to bedew; E. bedaggled, dirtied; daggly, wet, showery; dugged, dugged-tealed, wet, with the tail of the garment dragged in the dirt. Prov. Dan. dung, dyng, diung, wet through; Sw. dynga, dung, muck; G. düngen, to manure.

Dungeon.—Donjon. Originally the principal building of a district, or fortress, which from its position or structure had the command of the rest, from the Lat. dominio, domnio (as domnus for dominus), domgio, dongeo (as Fr. songer from somniare), donjon. In a charter A. D. 1179, given by Muratori, is an agreement “quod de summitate Castri Veteris quæ Dongionem appellatur prædictus episcopus ejusque successores decant habere duas partes ipsius summitatis, scilicet ab uno latere usque ad vineam episcopi et ab altero usque ad flumen,” showing that in this case the dominio was mere open ground. In general however it was applied to a tower or other work of defence. “Milites ocyus conscenso Domnionem, domo scilicet principali et defensivâ.”—Duc.

Desus le plus maistre dunjon

Drescent le reial gonfanon.

Chron. Norm. 2. 820.

Donjon in fortification is generally taken for a large tower or redoubt of a fortress, where the garrison may retreat in case of necessity.—Bailey. The name of Dungeon has finally been bequeathed to such an under-ground prison as was formerly placed in the strongest part of a fortress.

To Dup. To do up, as doff and don, to do off and do on. Swiss tuffen, to open, as a door or a letter.

Dupe. Fr. dupe, one who lets himself be deceived. From dupe, duppe, a hoopoe, from some tradition of the habits of that bird of which we are ignorant. Thus from It. bubbola, a hoopoe, bubolare (portar via con inganno), to cheat—Altieri, whence E. to bubble one. Pol. dudek, a hoopoe, also a simpleton, a fool. Wystrychnąc na dudka, to make a fool of one.

The name of the bird, dupe, is probably from the crest by which it is characterised (Fr. touffe, a tuft), as the E. names hoopoe, whoop, or hoop, from Fr. houppe, a tuft.

Duration. Lat. durare, to last, durus, hard. Gr. δῆρος, lasting, enduring. Turk. durmak, to continue, stay, endure.

Dusky. Lifeless, without animation, dim in colour, obscure.

The pennons and the pomels and the poyntes of shields Witdrawen his devocion and dusken his hert.—P. P.

—they dull or blunt his religious feelings.

The ground stude barrane, widderit, dusk and gray,
Herbis, flowris and gerssis wallowt away.—D. V.

Sw. dusk, dull, melancholy weather. It seems a derivation from dull through the forms dulsk, or dolsk, dorsk, dosk. Prov. Dan. dulsk, dolsk, dull, lifeless, loitering; prov. Sw. dalsk; lazy, slow; Dan. dorsk, indolent, sluggish, dull, torpid; Icel. doska, to dawdle, delay.

Dust. Icel. dust, Gael. dus, duslach, dust. Du. donst, vapour, down, flour, dust; G. dunst, vapour, exhalation, dust-shot. See Down.

Dwale. See Dull.

Dwarf. AS. dweorg, dweorh, Icel. dvergr, Sw. dverg, dwerf.

To Dwell. It has been shown under Dull that the stoppage of the powers of life and mind or general failure of activity is expressed by a double form of root, dul and dwal, whence Du. dolen, dwaelen, to err, to go about, as opposed to going straight to a certain point; AS. dwelian, to deceive, to balk one of his purpose, dwolian, to err, Pl. D. dwalen, to wander in judgment, act foolishly, jest, wander; Icel. dvelia, to hinder, and in a neuter sense to delay; Sw. dvala, a trance, dválgas, to dwell; Dan. dvale, to dwell, linger, tarry.

To Dwindle. AS. dwinan, Pl. D. dwanen, to fade, waste away, vanish; Du. verswiinen, verdwiinen, to fade, perish; Bav. schweinen, G. schwinden, to shrink, waste away, wane. "Der mane wahsit unde swinit," the moon waxes and wanes—Diutiska in Schmeller. Icel. dvina, to diminish, to leave off; Sw. twina, to pine away, languish, dwindle; Dan. twine, to pine away, also to whine or whimper. In the last of these we probably touch the origin of the word. A languishing or weakly condition of body is naturally expressed by reference to the whining, pipy tone of voice induced by illness. Thus a person says he is rather pipy, meaning poorly. The Pl. D. has quakken, to groan or complain like a sick person, whence prov. Dan. quak, poorly; Du. queksen, to complain, to groan, to be poorly.—Kil. In like manner Goth. cwainon, W. cwyno, to bewail, complain, grieve; Pl. D. quinen, to complain, to be poorly, languish, waste away; Icel. queina, veina, to bemoan oneself; AS. cwanian, wanian, to mourn, faint, languish, wanian, to wane. For the interchange of an initial cw and tw see Bescem.

To Dye. AS. deagan. The primitive meaning seems to be to soak, to stæp, to wet. Dan. dygge, to sprinkle with water, bedugge, to bedew.

Then if thine eye bedye this sacred urn,
Each drop a pearl shall turn
To adorn his tomb.—Epitaph, 1633, in N. and Q.

Dan. dyg waad, dyng waad, thoroughly wet. Probably the Lat. tingere may be radically the same word. Gr. $\delta\epsilon\omega$, to water, wet, soak, also to dye, to colour.

A P P E N D I X.

Abet.—Bait. Et si defaut soit trove en le pain del pestour de la citee a primer foithe soit traie sur une claie de la Guyhalle jesques a soun hostielle parmy les grauntz rues ou il purront pluis de gentz estre aboteez (where they can best be baited by the people) et parmy les plus grauntz ordes rues, ove le faux pain al son cool.—Liber Albus. 265.

Along of. After all, the expression long of or along of may be simply the equivalent of Fr. selon, which is derived, not, as Diez suggests, from confusion with Lat. secundum, but from long and the particle si, se, ce, so, here, this.

Trop fesoient miex cortoisie
A toute gent long ce que erent.

Fab. et Contes, l. 160.

They did better curtesy to each along of what they had, according to what they had.

Arrant. The references in the text are, I believe, erroneous. The connexion is in all probability with the forms mentioned under Arch. G. arg, bad of its kind, great, exaggerated; ein arger Schelm, an arch rogue. AS. earg, timid, evil, wretched; OE. arwe, arrant. —Coleridge, Gloss. Index.

Now thou seist he is the beste knyght—
And thou art as arwe coward.—Alisaunder. 3340.

The termination ant is probably from the Low German inflection en. Een argen drog, ein Erzbetrüger, an arrant rogue.—Brem. Wörterb.

Arrow. For the derivation from the whirring sound of its flight compare It. freccia, an arrow, with Fr. frisement. Un trait, the whizzing sound of a flying arrow.—Cot.

Atone. The idea of reconciliation is expressed in the same way in Fr.

Il ot amis et anemis ;
Or sont-il tot à un mis.
Fabliaux et Contes, l. 181.

Avow. In the sense of maintain. Et prædicti Vicecomites advocant prædictum attachionamentum justum eo quod, &c.—Lib. Alb. 406.

Bat. The derivation of bat or bak, from blacta, blatta, is confirmed by the OE. form blak.

But at that yche breyde
That she furthe her synne seyde,
Come fle yng oute at here mouthe a blak—
That yche blak y dar wel telle
That hyt was a fende of helle.

Manuel des Pecchés. 11,864.

Beck. Compare Esthon. nokkima, to peck as a bird; nok-kutama pead, to nod with the head.

Beer. Beer seems to have been used in OE. in the sense of drink, comprehending both wine and ale.

Rymenild ros or benche
The beer al forte shenche
After mcte in sale,
Bothe wyn and ale.
An horn hue ber an hond,
For that was law of lond
Hue dronc of the beere
To knyght and skyere.—1114.

Hue fulde the horn of wyne
Ant dronk tō that pelrync.—1156.

K. Horn.

Benison. O. Fr. beneïçon, benéison, from benedictio.—Fab. et Contes, 2. 302.

Braid. In support of the explanation of braid in the sense of gesture, countenance, resemblance, comp. Icel. svip, any rapid movement; svipa, to whip, do quickly, turn; svipr, vibration, moment, countenance, features.

Brown study. O. Fr. enbrons, soucieux, préoccupé, la tête basse.

Unques n'i vout douer respons,
Mais tuz pensis e tuz enbrons
Tint un baston, si'n na reieés
Les cendres qu' out aplaniées.

In deep thought he drew lines with a stick in the ashes.—Chron. Norm. 7817. Vol. 2. 354.

It. imbronciare, to huff and snuff with anger—Fl.; broncio, anger, grief, trouble; far il broncio, to pout at one; bronfiare, to huff and snuff, to snort.

Brunt.

The larke and lynneth singith well,
The thrissel dowe his best,
The robbyn beares away the bell
And passeth all the rest.

On Robert Earl of Essex. Camd. Misc. 3.

Deuce. This euphemism for the Devil may perhaps have no higher source than a gambler's exclamation. The G. daus is properly the deuce or two of cards or dice, but in G. cards the name has been transferred to the ace, and as this is the conquering card of a suit, the term is used as an interjection of amazement, or to express the type of perfection. Ei der Daus! Was der Daus! The Deuce! Wie ein Daus, deuced, point-device.

De olle Fritz, potz schlag in't hous!
Det was en keunig as en Dous.

That was a deuce of a king!

Devise. Doubtless the notion of a testamentary or other disposition of property commonly includes and insensibly blends with that of division of the property in question, whence ius dividendi is found in Mid. Lat. for the right of disposing of lands by will.—Duc. But the original meaning of devise is that stated in the text, and on the same principle a testamentary disposition is called a Will. “Fai ta devise e tun plaisir de ço que est en ta maisun, kar tu murras” — Livre des Rois. “Set thy house in order.”

Richard, duke of Normandy, having appointed his eldest son his heir, is pressed as to his will respecting his other children.

Sire or nos fai cers e sachanz
 Quel ert de tes autres enfanz,
 Dreiz est tun plaisir en sachon ;—
 Kar tot cissi sera gardé
 Cum de ta boche ert devisé.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Of the industry bestowed upon this extensive compilation, and of the marvellous condensation of fact which it supplies, it is difficult to speak in terms of proper commendation; even to the most accomplished bibliographer it cannot fail to be of great service, but how much more to the tyro or ordinary bibliographer."—Brownson's Review.

"There is more variety, interest, and even life in the Memoirs of Libraries, than might be expected. Mr. Edwards has a more comprehensive mind and a more sensible judgment than always characterise the tribe of librarii. His style has not an undue spirit of rhetoric, which throws off anything approaching to the manner of Dryasdust."—Spectator.

"Both as a history of libraries and a manual of their economy, this work is valuable: delightful to the scholar in the first respect; in the second, indispensable to the librarian."—Critic.

"We now take leave of these volumes, feeling that we have given a very imperfect indication of their contents, and strongly recommend them to the consideration of all persons connected with or interested in libraries, public or private, because they contain a vast quantity of information never before collected, and much that would be sought for in vain elsewhere."—Bookseller.

"Mr. Edwards's style is pleasant, and free from the slang and pedantry of many more costly productions in the field of bibliography. If we feel occasionally inclined to differ from the author's views and deductions, we do so at all times with some deference, because throughout the work it is evident that he has been earnest to furnish the fullest and most satisfactory information which it was in his power to do."—Leader.

"It is now generally conceded that the civilization of a people may be judged rather by the number and value of its private libraries, than by the extent and magnificence of those provided by the Sovereign. Such being the case, it is incumbent upon us to examine our position in this particular, by comparison with other nations. This we are now enabled to do, for the first time, by the aid afforded in Mr. Edwards's 'Memoirs of Libraries,' which exhibits a mass of evidence such as only the greatest devotion to the subject, perseveringly continued through many years, could have accumulated. So completely is the subject exhausted, that it would be vain and useless for the inquirer to push his researches further in order to obtain a clear view of the libraries of the past and present; for what of interest or value he finds not in these volumes he will scarcely hope to obtain elsewhere."—Gentleman's Magazine.

"The various schemes propounded for the classification of knowledge—the extent to which libraries may safely be made available for public use—their internal economy, and the qualifications essential for their management—these are subjects which it would have afforded us both pleasure and profit to have discussed with Mr. Edwards. But it is time to take leave of him with the respect due to a writer whom some diffuseness, occasional want of discrimination, and a few doubtful views, will not debar from a cordial reception wherever industry is appreciated or erudition recognised."—Press.

IMPORTANT WORK ON ENGLISH AND AMERICAN LITERARY HISTORY.

A Critical Dictionary of English Literature, AND BRITISH AND AMERICAN AUTHORS,

LIVING AND DECEASED, FROM THE EARLIEST ACCOUNTS TO THE MIDDLE OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Containing 31,000 Biographies and Literary Notices. With an Index of Subject Matter.

By S. AUSTIN ALLIBONE.

The Second Volume (letter K. to Z, likewise exceeding 1000 pp.), which is in a very forward state (being stereotyped as far as the letter S), will complete the work, and be published, with a most elaborate Index of Subject-Matter, in the Autumn of 1859, on the same terms as the first Volume.

The above important work was originally announced to be published in 1857, in one Volume, imperial 8vo., of about 1500 pages, and the first appeal to the public on its behalf was signally successful. The delay in the publication seems to have caused a feeling of disappointment among the patrons of the work, but it is hoped that this feeling will give way to one of lively satisfaction when the first half of it is examined. The high expectations raised by the mere announcement made it incumbent upon the Author and Publishers to spare no expense or trouble to bring the work to the greatest state of perfection; and although stereotyped to the letter H at the time it was first announced, that portion has been entirely revised, partly rewritten, and so much new matter introduced, that the subscribers will now receive above 2000 pages, at no increase of price.

DESCRIPTIVE TITLE.

THE characteristics of the work, which have not been united in any previous undertaking of the kind, are as follow:—

“1. It is a Biographical Dictionary of English and American Authors, comprising both the living and the dead; furnishing those incidents respecting the persons who have made themselves famous in the Republic of Letters, which every reader desires to know, and few know where to find.

“2. It is a Bibliographical Manual, giving information as to the best editions of authors, the circumstances attending their publication, the reception which they met with from the public, the influence they have exercised on the public mind, and many other interesting particulars, not one of which the true lover of books and student of letters would ‘willingly let die.’

“As a Bibliographical Manual, the Index, which forms the second portion of the volume, will prove no small addition to its value. In this Index the subjects of human knowledge are divided into forty distinct classes, and an alphabet is allotted to each. By this means the reader is enabled to see at a glance who are the principal writers on all subjects, from Agriculture, Class 1st, to Voyages, Class 40th.

“It is thought that this Index will contain between 40,000 and 50,000 names, yet no author is mentioned whose works are not noticed in the first part of the Dictionary.

“It is a Critical as well as a Biographical and Bibliographical Dictionary. Here the author has a great advantage over his predecessors, without a single exception. Makers of books approaching to the character of this are in the habit of giving their own opinions, or opinions adopted as their own, which must be based upon very partial knowledge, and one, therefore, of little value; or are apt to be tinctured with prejudice and party bias, and are therefore entitled to little confidence. But Mr. Allibone contents himself with adducing the opinions upon various writers, as they come under his notice, of critics of great and extended reputation, who have earned a claim to be heard with respect, if not in all cases with entire acquiescence. These invaluable specimens of criticism are quoted verbatim, and distinguished by a smaller type, which adds greatly to the beauty of the work.”

To the above Summary of the Work the Publishers beg leave to append the following remarks:—

It contains, it is believed, the names of every Author in English Literature and Science, living and dead, that anybody would think of looking for. Their dates are given, and the dates of their several publications. Critical notices by writers of authority are always added, and with such fairness and copiousness as challenge a constant surprise, and afford, besides, a most instructive and entertaining exhibition of the judgments of capable men upon the qualities and characters of the celebrities of literature. The compiler of these authoritative criticisms, however, does not avoid his own responsibilities, but frankly and ably sets down his own opinions, wherever any interest of moral truth or literary justice is involved.

The second division of the work will contain “a copious index of subjects,” arranged alphabetically, under such heads as Agriculture, Antiquities, Chemistry, Divinity, Drama, Law, Political Economy, Biography, etc. etc.; so that the inquirer can find at a glance all the authors of any note under the title of the subject upon which he has written. This division, besides being a most interesting presentment of authorship classified—a table of the sciences and of their cultivators—is an invaluable index to the biographies and literary notices, for the use of students in every profession, and of every specific pursuit. Together, the two divisions will be to study what the alphabet of the ledger and the account of stock on hand are to the merchant. Booksellers, school committees, and librarians, will perceive their practical interest in it, as much as merchants, farmers, lawyers, doctors, clergymen, and mechanics, in their several ways require it; and authors, too—for the living labourers in literature are all upon the record—will find themselves, each in his appropriate place, in this great gathering of celebrities. In a word, the book is constructed upon a plan, and the plan executed with such success, that it will serve not only as a directory, but as a guide to study, a catalogue, invoice, and manual to the trade in literature.

MODE AND TERMS OF PUBLICATION.

THE WORK—Volume I., comprising the letters A to J, pp. 1005, is issued. The second Volume, comprising letters K to Z, already stereotyped as far as letter S, will be published, with the Index of Subject-matter, in Autumn, 1859, and exceed 1000 pages.

FORM AND STYLE—2 Volumes, imperial 8vo., containing above 2000 pages, elegantly and closely printed in double column, on the finest paper.

PRICE—£1 : 16s. (Thirty-six Shillings) per Copy, to subscribers before publication—18s. to be paid upon delivery of each Volume; £2 : 8s. to non-subscribers, or 24s. each Volume.

CRITICAL OPINIONS.

"Most truly is Mr. Allibone's Dictionary a great work, which cannot fail of being extensively useful, from the comprehensiveness of its plan, and also for the ability, persevering industry, patience of research, impartiality and accuracy, with which it is executed. The introduction of brief critical testimonies to the character and value of the works of eminent authors is a happy thought, and cannot fail to be of great service to future bibliographers and librarians in the selection and purchase of books.

"Mr. Allibone's list of authorities consulted includes (I believe) every work of any value. My own knowledge of American authors has hitherto been derived chiefly from the best edition of 'Allen's American Biography,' and from Mr. Trübner's concise but truly valuable 'Guide to American Literature.' But henceforth Mr. Allibone's researches will leave nothing to be desired."—Rev. Thomas Hartwell Horne, in a Letter to the Publishers.

"Mr. Allibone, an American gentleman of wide reading, is engaged on a 'Critical Dictionary of English Literature,' a work very seriously needed. Lowndes is very imperfect. Watt is out of date, is also very imperfect, and is out of print. Mr. Allibone is said, on high American authority, to be well prepared for his task. His method, of which we can judge for ourselves, is novel: his plan being to supply the facts about his authors himself, and to quote opinions about them from distinguished critical contemporaries and successors. For example, under the title of 'Opinions on Burke,' there are forty brief excerpts from Samuel Johnson, Arthur Murphy, Lord Jeffrey, Professor Smyth, Dugald Stewart, James Prior, the Earl of Chatham, King George III., Charles James Fox, John Roche, M. Cazales, William Wyndham, Gerard Hamilton, Mr. Curwen, Rev. Thomas Campbell, Dr. French Laurence, Edward Gibbon, Richard Cumberland, William Wilberforce, Thomas James Mathias, Lord Thurlow, Rev. Dr. Samuel Parr, Henry Grattan, Oliver Goldsmith, Mr. Richards, the Duke de Levis, Warren Hastings, R. B. Sheridan, F. Schlegel, Robert Hall, George Crabbe, Samuel Warren, T. B. Macaulay, Rev. Dr. C. A. Goodrich, Mr. Shackleton, Sir James Mackintosh, Sir Robert Peel, Lord John Russell, Lord Erskine, and Lord Brougham. This gives an idea of the work. By such a plan the reader is presented with a History of Opinion on great writers, as well as a History of their Works. If Mr. Allibone's 'Dictionary' proves to be as able in execution as it is felicitous in conception, it will be welcome to many libraries in England as well as in America."—Athenæum, Jan. 5th, 1856.

"That which the entire bookselling trade of London could not effect, a Philadelphian gentleman has been quietly to some extent executing in distant America. Mr. S. Austin Allibone, by great and conscientious labour, extending over a long period of time, has completed the compilation of 'A Critical Dictionary of English Literature, and British and American Authors, Living and Deceased, from the Earliest Accounts to the Middle of the Nineteenth Century.' Some sheets of this work having been shown to us, we are enabled to give some account of its nature and plan. In the first place, it will contain upwards of thirty thousand names—a larger number than has ever been collected before in any similar work. Watt's 'Bibliotheca' contains rather less than 23,00 names, and Chalmers's has only 9000. In the next place, each name has a short biographical notice appended; and in many cases critical observations, mostly extracted from well-known and respectable sources, are appended to the list of works. One volume of 1500 closely but clearly printed pages will be the full extent of the work, which will thus be within the reach of those whose means do not permit them to purchase large and expensive works. It would be too much to expect perfection in such a task, executed by a single hand; but, from what we have seen, we have no hesitation in predicting that Mr. Allibone's Dictionary will be a most valuable work."—Critic, December, 1855.

"Mr. Allibone's work is warmly commended by Irving, Prescott, Bryant, Everett, Bancroft, Sparks, and other distinguished scholars and men of letters in America. The only book of the kind now in use is 'Watt's Bibliotheca Britannica,' supplemented by the London Catalogues. Watt is in four bulky and expensive quartos, and is now nearly 30 years old. That it has nothing about American books is a sufficient motive for another work being required in the States; but in England, also, a book of bibliographical reference, with critical and biographical notices, is a desideratum, and we are prepared to receive Mr. Allibone's Dictionary with favour."—Literary Gazette.

"We have had an opportunity of inspecting that portion of Mr. Allibone's Bibliographical Dictionary which has already been printed, and are glad to hear that the entire work will be ready for issue in a very short time. We understand that arrangements have been made by Mr. Trübner to publish it in America and in England on the same day."—Critic, Feb. 15th, 1856.

"It has been reserved for an American gentleman to produce the first complete Dictionary of the literature and literary men of England and America, which has yet appeared in either country. The work will contain about 31,000 biographies and literary notices, and an examination of the first 464 pages, completing the letters A, B, and C, has convinced us that the author has brought to his task all the requisites of the Encyclopædist—the most patient industry and painstaking love of detail and accuracy. The Rev. T. Hartwell Horne, than whom we know no greater authority upon bibliographical matters, and to whom the work was submitted as far as printed, passes the following high eulogium upon it:—'Most truly is Mr. Allibone's Dictionary a great work, which cannot fail of being extensively useful, from the comprehensiveness of its plan, and also for the ability, persevering industry, patience of research, impartiality, and accuracy, with which it is executed,' etc. The work will be published by subscription, and not to be accessible to the book trade for a whole year after publication, and then only at an increased price. Mr. Trübner, the American bookseller, of Paternoster-row, has succeeded in effecting an arrangement by which he will issue subscribers' copies in this country simultaneously with the American publishers."—Bent's Lit. Advertiser, Feb. 1856.

Copy of Letter from Cardinal Wiseman to S. Austin Allibone, Esq.

"London, Feb. 18, 1859.

"Dear Sir,—I thank you very sincerely for the first volume of your Dictionary of Authors. I have tested its value in two different ways: first, by looking at the accounts of comparatively unknown or obscure authors, hardly to be found in ordinary biographical works, and then by glancing at the history of celebrated ones, whose lives have occupied volumes. Your work stands both tests admirably. I have found more about the first class of writers than I have ever seen elsewhere, and than I could have anticipated in so comprehensive a work; while the interesting points in the literary lives of those belonging to the second, are brought out in sufficient detail and treated with sufficient accuracy to render further reference or inquiry unnecessary. I congratulate you on the success of your herculean undertaking, and am

"Yours very faithfully,

(signed) "N. CARD. WISEMAN."

From Lord Macaulay.

"Holly Lodge, Kensington, April 9, 1859.

"Sir,—Since I wrote to you last (Jan. 29, 1859), I have had frequent occasion to consult your Dictionary, and I have scarcely ever failed to find what I sought. I have no hesitation in saying that it is far superior to any other work of the kind in our language. I heartily wish you success proportioned to the labour and cost of your undertaking.

"I have the honour to be, Sir,

"Your faithful servant,

This work, it is believed is the first attempt to marshal the Literature of the United States of America during the last forty years, according to the generally received bibliographical canons. The Librarian will welcome it, no doubt, as a companion volume to Brunet, Lowndes and Ebert, whilst to the bookseller it will be a faithful guide to the American branch of English Literature—a branch which, on account of its rapid increase and rising importance, begins to force itself daily more and more upon his attention. Nor will the work be of less interest to the man of letters, inasmuch as it comprises complete Tables of Contents to all the more prominent Collections of the Americans, to the Journals, Memoirs, Proceedings and Transactions of their learned Societies—and thus furnishes an intelligible key to a department of American scientific activity hitherto but imperfectly known and understood in Europe.

A-HANDBOOK OF AFRICAN, AUSTRALIAN AND POLYNESIAN PHILOLOGY,

As represented in the Library of His Excellency Sir George Grey, K.C.B.

HER MAJESTY'S HIGH COMMISSIONER OF THE CAPE COLONY.

CLASSED, ANNOTATED, AND EDITED BY

SIR GEORGE GREY AND DR. W. H. J. BLEEK.

Vol. I. Part 1.—South Africa, 8vo. pp. 186. 7s. 6d.

Vol. I. Part 2.—Africa (North of the Tropic of Capricorn), 8vo. pp. 70. 2s.

Vol. II. Part 1.—Australia, 8vo. pp. iv., 44. 1s. 6d.

Vol. II. Part 2.—Papuan Languages of the Loyalty Islands and New Hebrides, comprising those of the Islands of Nengone, Lifu, Anciteum, Tana, and others, 8vo. pp. 12. 6d.

Vol. II. Part 3.—Fiji Islands and Rotuma (with Supplement to Part 2, Papuan Languages, and Part 1, Australia.) 8vo. pp. 34. 1s.

Vol. II. Part 4.—New Zealand, the Chatham Islands, and Auckland Islands, 8vo. pp. 76. 3s. 6d.

Vol. II. Part 4 (Continuation).—Polynesia and Borneo, 8vo. pp. 77 to 154. 3s. 6d.

The above is, without exception, the most important addition yet made to African Philology. The amount of materials brought together by Sir George, with a view to elucidate the subject, is stupendous; and the labour bestowed on them, and the results arrived at, incontestably establish the claim of the Author to be called the father of African and Polynesian Philology.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"We congratulate the Governor of the Cape on the production of a most important aid to the study of the twin sciences of philology and ethnology, and look forward to the completion of the Catalogue itself as a great and permanent step towards civilization of the barbarous races whose formation, habits, language, religion, and food, are all, more or less, most carefully noted in its pages."—Leader.

"It is for these substantial reasons that we deemed it worth a brief notice to call attention to these excellently arranged Catalogues (with important notes), describing the various works in the library of Sir George Grey, and by which this great philanthropist will greatly aid in civilizing the numerous peoples within the limit of the colony of the Cape of Good Hope."—Brighton Gazette.

TRÜBNER'S BIBLIOTHECA GLOTTICA.

THE LITERATURE
OF
AMERICAN ABORIGINAL LANGUAGES.

BY HERMANN E. LUDEWIG.

With Additions and Corrections by PROFESSOR W. W. TURNER.

EDITED BY NICOLAS TRÜBNER.

8vo.; fly and general Title, 2 leaves; Dr. Ludewig's Preface, pp. v—viii; Editors' Preface, pp. ix—xii; Biographical Memoir of Dr. Ludewig, pp. xiii, xiv; and INTRODUCTORY BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES, pp. xiv—xxiv, followed by List of Contents. Then follow Dr. Ludewig's Bibliotheca Glottica, alphabetically arranged, with additions by the Editor, pp. 1—209; Professor Turner's additions, with those of the Editor to the same, also alphabetically arranged, pp. 210—246; Index, pp. 247—256; and list of Errata, pp. 257, 258. One volume, handsomely bound in cloth, price 10s. 6d.

This work is intended to supply a great want, now that the study of Ethnology has proved that exotic languages are not mere curiosities, but essential and interesting parts of the natural history of man, forming one of the most curious links in the great chain of national affinities, defining as they do the reciprocity existing between man and the soil he lives upon. No one can venture to write the history of America without a knowledge of her aboriginal languages; and unimportant as such researches may seem to men engaged in the mere bustling occupations of life, they will at least acknowledge that these records of the past, like the stern-lights of a departing ship, are the last glimmers of savage life, as it becomes absorbed or recedes before the tide of civilization. Dr. Ludewig and Professor Turner have made most diligent use of the public and private collections in America, access to all of which was most liberally granted to them. This has placed at their disposal the labours of the American Missionaries, so little known on this side of the Atlantic that they may be looked upon almost in the light of untrodden ground. But English and Continental libraries have also been ransacked; and Dr. Ludewig kept up a constant and active correspondence with scholars of "the Fatherland," as well as with men of similar tastes in France, Spain, and Holland, determined to leave no stone unturned to render his labours as complete as possible. The volume, perfect in itself, is the first of an enlarged edition of Vater's "Linguarum totius orbis Index." The work has been noticed by the press of both Continents, and we may be permitted to refer particularly to the following:

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"This work, mainly the production of the late Herr Ludewig, a German naturalized in America, is devoted to an account of the literature of the aboriginal languages of that country. It gives an alphabetical list of the various tribes of whose languages any record remains, and refers to the works, papers, or manuscripts, in which such information may be found. The work has evidently been a labour of love; and as no pains seems to have been spared by the editors, Prof. Turner and Mr. Trübner, in rendering the work as accurate and complete as possible, those who are most interested in its contents will be best able to judge of the labour and assiduity bestowed upon it by author, editors, and publisher."—Athenæum, 5th April, 1858.

"This is the first instalment of a work which will be of the greatest value to philologists; and is a compendium of the aboriginal languages of the American continents, and a digest of all the known literature bearing upon those languages. Mr. Trübner's hand has been engaged passim, and in his preface he lays claim to about one-sixth of the whole; and we have no doubt that the encouragement with which this portion of the work will be received by scholars, will be such as to inspire Mr. Trübner with sufficient confidence to persevere in his arduous and most honourable task"—The Critic, 15th Dec. 1857.

"Few would believe that a good octavo volume would be necessary to exhaust the subject; yet so it is, and this handsome, useful, and curious volume, carefully compiled by Mr. Ludewig, assisted by Professor Turner, and edited by the careful hand of Mr. Trübner, the well-known publisher, will be sure to find a place in many libraries."—Bent's Advertiser, 6th Nov. 1857.

"The lovers of American linguistics will find in the work of Mr. Trübner scarcely any point omitted calculated to aid the comparative philologist in tracing the various languages of the great Western Continent."—Galway Mercury, 30th Jan. 1858.

"Only those deeply versed in philological studies can appreciate this book at its full value. It shows that there are upwards of seven hundred and fifty aboriginal American languages."—Gentleman's Magazine, Feb. 1858.

"The work contains an account of no fewer than seven hundred different aboriginal dialects of America, with an introductory chapter of bibliographical information; and under each dialect is an account of any grammars or other works illustrative of it."—The Bookseller, Jan. 1858.

"We have here the list of monuments still existing of an almost innumerable series of languages and dialects of the American Continent. The greater part of Indian grammars and vocabularies exist only in MS., and were compiled chiefly by Missionaries of the Christian Church; and to Dr. Ludewig and Mr. Trübner, we are, therefore, the more indebted for the great care with which they have pointed out where such are to be found, as well as for enumerating those which have been printed, either in a separate shape, in collections, or in voyages and travels, and elsewhere."—Leader, 11th Sept. 1858.

"I have not time, nor is it my purpose, to go into a review of this admirable work, or to attempt to indicate the extent and value of its contents. It is, perhaps, enough to say, that apart from a concise but clear enumeration and notice of the various general philological works which treat with greater or less fulness of American languages, or which incidentally touch upon their bibliography, it contains not less than 256 closely-printed octavo pages of bibliographical notices of grammars, vocabularies, etc., of the aboriginal languages of America. It is a peculiar and valuable feature of the work that not only the titles of printed or published grammars or vocabularies are given, but also that unpublished or MS. works of these kinds are noticed in all cases where they are known to exist, but which have disappeared among the débris of the suppressed convents and religious establishments of Spanish America."—E. G. Squier, in a paper read before the American Ethnological Society, 12th Jan. 1858.

"In consequence of the death of the author before he had finished the revision of the work, it has been carefully examined by competent scholars, who have also made many valuable additions."—American Publishers' Circular, 30th Jan. 1858.

"It contains 256 closely-printed pages of titles of printed books and manuscripts, and notices of American aboriginal languages, and embraces references to nearly all that has been written or published respecting them, whether in special works or incidentally in books of travel, periodicals, or proceedings of learned societies."—New York Herald, 29th Jan. 1858.

"The manner in which this contribution to the bibliography of American languages has been executed, both by the author, Mr. Ludewig, and the able writers who have edited the work since his death, is spoken of in the highest terms by gentlemen most conversant with the subject."—American Historical Magazine, Vol. II., No. 5, May, 1858.

"Je terminerai en annonçant le premier volume d'une publication appelée à rendre de grands services à la philologie comparée et à la linguistique générale. Je veux parler de la Bibliotheca Glottica, ouvrage devant renfermer la liste de tous les dictionnaires et de toutes les grammaires des langues connues, tant imprimés que manuscrits. L'éditeur, de cette précieuse bibliographie est M. Nicolas Trübner, dont le nom est honorablement connu dans le monde oriental. Le premier volume est consacré aux idiomes africaines; le second doit traiter des langues de l'Inde. Le travail est fait avec le soin le plus consciencieux, et fera honneur à M. Nicolas Trübner, surtout s'il poursuit son œuvre avec le même ardeur qu'il mise à le commencer."—L. Léon de Rosny, Revue de l'Orient, Février, 1858.

"Mr. Trübner's most important work on the bibliography of the aboriginal languages of America is deserving of all praise, as eminently useful to those who study that branch of literature. The value, too, of the book, and of the pains which its compilation must have cost, will not be lessened by the consideration that it is first in this field of linguistic literature."—Petermann's Geographische Mittheilungen, p. 79, Feb. 1858.

"Undoubtedly this volume of Trübner's Bibliotheca Glottica ranks amongst the most valuable additions which of late years have enriched our bibliographical literature. To us Germans it is most gratifying that the initiative has been taken by a German bookseller himself, one of the most intelligent and active of our countrymen abroad, to produce a work which has higher aims than mere pecuniary profit, and that he, too, has laboured at its production with his own hands; because daily it is becoming a circumstance of rarer occurrence that, as in this case, it is a bookseller's primary object to serve the cause of literature rather than to enrich himself."—P. Trömel, Börsenblatt, 4th Jan. 1858.

"In the compilation of the work the editors have availed themselves not only of the labours of Vater, Barton, Duponceau, Gallatin, De Souza, and others, but also of the MS. sources left by the missionaries, and of many books of which even the library of the British Museum is deficient, and furnish the fullest account of the literature of no less than 525 languages. The value of the work, so necessary to the study of ethnology, is greatly enhanced by the addition of a good Index."—Berliner National-Zeitung, 22nd Nov. 1857.

"The name of the author, to all those who are acquainted with his former works, and who know the thoroughness and profound character of his investigations, is a sufficient guarantee that this work will be one of standard authority, and one that will fully answer the demands of the present time."—Petzhold's Anzeiger, Jan. 1858.

"The chief merit of the editor and publisher is to have terminated the work carefully and lucidly in contents and form, and thus to have established a new and largely augmented edition of "Vater's Linguarum totius orbis Index," after Professor Jülg's revision of 1847. In order to continue and complete this work the editor requires the assistance of all those who are acquainted with this new branch of science, and we sincerely hope it may be accorded to him."—Magazin für die Literatur des Auslandes, No. 38, 1858.

"As the general title of the book indicates, it will be extended to the languages of the other Continents in case it meet with a favourable reception, which we most cordially wish it."—A. F. Pott, Preussische Jahrbücher, Vol. II. part 1.

"Cette compilation savante est sans crédit, le travail bibliographique le plus important que notre époque ait vu surgir sur les nations indigènes de l'Amérique."—Nouvelles Annales des Voyages, Avril, 1859.

"La Bibliotheca Glottica, dont M. Nicolas Trübner a commencé la publication, est un des livres les plus utiles qui aient jamais été rédigés pour faciliter l'étude de la philologie comparée. Le premier tome de cette grande bibliographie linguistique comprend la liste textuelle de toutes les grammaires, de tous les dictionnaires et des vocabulaires même les moins étendus qui ont été imprimés dans les différents dialectes des deux Amériques; en outre, il fait connaître les ouvrages manuscrits de la même nature renfermés dans les principales bibliothèques publiques et particulières. Ce travail a dû nécessiter de longues et patientes recherches; aussi mérite-t-il d'attirer tout particulièrement l'attention des philologues. Puissent les autres volumes de cette bibliothèque être rédigés avec le même soin et se trouver bientôt entre les mains de tous les savants auxquels ils peuvent rendre des services inappréciables."—Revue Américaine et Orientale, No. I., Oct. 1858.

The Editor has also received most kind and encouraging letters respecting the work from Sir George Grey, the Chevalier Bunsen, Dr. Th. Goldstucker, Mr. Watts (of the Museum), Professor A. Fr. Pott (of Halle), Dr. Julius Petzholt (of Dresden), Hofrath Dr. Grasse (of Dresden), M. F. F. de la Figanière (of Lisbon), E. Edwards (of Manchester), Dr. Max Müller (of Oxford), Dr. Buschmann (of Berlin), Dr. Jülg (of Cracow), and other linguistic scholars.

Amongst the 556 articles of which the Collection consists, at least 100 are not mentioned by any bibliographer. Indeed, only about 150 of them are found in Ternaux and Rich, which of itself is ample testimony of the importance, and must secure to the publication more than ordinary interest in the eyes of bibliographers and literary men.
