The Mobile mail brought New-York papers of the 10th inst; their columns present no very important matter. Through the kindness, howster, of our correspondent of Mobile, The Patviet, we have received a slip bearing date of the 20th inst. containing late interesting details—we offer the principal items to the perusal of our

The Budget is an extremely interesting docu carry into effect many : ther measures, which are d. for the amelioration of the aufferings of the working classes, and for the promotion of the

On the 10th February in the Imperial Parlia. ment, Earl Randor presented petitions from Dub-lin for a repeal of the Union. One closed in the following style, "Ireland was the great bulward of the Constitution, the rendezvous of Grea Britain, and the granery of Europe."

The London Globe says, "The Times of ye carday justly remarks, what a stronge exhibition the Five Great Powers have made of themselves with their parade of non-intervention in Belgic The result certainly has ben tha which, of all others, is the least agreeable to al the Allied Powers, except one, and the leas likely to tend to the preservation of what, begond all things, is most desirable—the Peace of Europa."

Advices from Paris had been received at Lon to the evening of the 9th February. We perceived in the Sun, an extract from Ga lignani's Messenger of a paragraph dated Madri January 30, by which it appears there must have has some movements between Spain and France, since our last advices. It reads as follows: Nothing is talked of but the war about to be commenced by Ferdinand VII. against market: France. His Majesty is making louns and levice of troops, and it is reported that in the month of May or sum after, a camp of 100,000 me The formed on the frontiers. At Alcate comp of 30,000 men are already forming, all the enirransiers and lancers of the guard are in mo cion, and are about to proceed to Barcelona. Advices from Posen of the 26th ult., state

The Sun has the following editorial articles: The Dutch Papers received this morning conthin Count Diebitsch's order of the day to the Russian army. This order which is dated from Grodno, holds out no hopes to the Poles, exof the Russiane," says this military adventurer, "shall teach them that treason is as im potent as criminal: Russian discipline and valor shall bring back to order their folly and scanda lous licentiqueness." So much for the spirit of this blood thirsty document, the principle it inciets on is equally revolting: being nothing more ag less than a downright declaration that migh enght always to overcome right. "Russian coldiers saye Count Diebitsch, "will never yield to asternal or internal enemies the smallest part which has been victoriously acquired by the theed of the Russians."

Upon this principle a tyrant has a legal right to remain whatever he may have acquired by blood. If for instance, Nicholas, was to take e finey to the Austrian and Prussian share of Polish plunder, or if he was to ambition a slice el sweden or a half of Turkey, or even of Prence or Belgium, he would have a very just lb. lower, and as the prices continue to de line down to them, provided he could make that doin good by blood. What is this but the docsine of Genghia Khan, or Timour Beck, or cost or any of those ruffian barberians, who knowledged no appeal but that of the sword, no right but victory. By way of sanction to this meastrate principle, the Count actually deserted invoke the sid of the Almighty! infa stone bloophamer! With far more propriety, ustainly with more decency, might he implore ace of Samn! We hope this document will excite the disgust which it appears in unded to provoke, of universal Europe. It is railelled even in the ennals of Russia, and so but one redeeming merit, that of sinpley. The Devil betrays his cloven foot in drift-wood corded up on the Levee-I directed my men to take in one cord, which would be sufficient to carry the boat to a wood yard. Before I had taken but a gord, the above named gentlemen made their appearance, and immedi ately ordered my men to carry back all the wood they had taken. They then informed me that I had no right to take it without obtaining their consent-that it was not for sale, and especially to a rascal. I then directed my men to replace what they had upon their shoulders again upon the wood pile-offering at the same tiats to pay them two dollars for what I had taken, or return them the same quantity of wood in re-passing up. They demanded for the quantity taken "ei-ther 5 dollars (little enough to clear me from stealing) or instantly return what little I had taken on board," neither of which deman 's I complied with. The first bring unreasonable, and the last I was unable to comply with. I then

I will add in conclusion that it is a practice which has unive sally obtained sanction on the river, upon the landing of a bout, to commence taking in wood immediately, and to settle with the owner when he makes his appearance, as persuing any other course would prove highly mjurious to owners, freighters and passengers, who are all interested in sking quick trips. I now respectfully submit the subject to the de-rision of the public. W. B. CULVER: P. S. NEW URLEANS, March 30, 1831. By an insertion of the following in your paper of this day, you will greatly oblige the ger tlemen who address it: and we trust, throw a weight in the scale of justice. We the undersigned, passengers and officers of the Walter Scott, being present at the above transaction, disinterestedly corroborate the statenent of capt Culver, & fully justify his course of conduit as being thatof's gentleman, & in com-phance with the duti-a of his command situation. We cannot recall any language of capt. Univers, which might be compared in share and vulgative to that of the Messra. Fortier's. Neither rould we adjudge his entire disregard of the rash threats of his opponents, as a want of c urage. In short—driven by necessity and duty to his passengers—with a sense of the well known generosity of the river planters, he did not sur-mise an exception or hestate in the lenst, in the course he pursued. This we deem ourselves, quatice bound to state, in vindication of the character of capt. Culver-whose honesty and worth is well known to all war have dealt with nım.
