

BASEBALL RULES ARE VINDICATED

By JACK VEIOCK New York, June 25.—Organized baseball, and the principle upon which it is built, has been vindicated once more.

When the Baltimore Reds withdrew their $900,000 suit against O. B. in the United States District Court at Philadelphia recently they made a practical admission that there was nothing unlawful about the inside workings of the game.

The suit was withdrawn, it was announced, because of a lack of evidence that organized baseball had conspired to wreck the Baltimore club. It was brought out that, despite statements to the contrary when the trial opened, the Baltimore Reds were in reality a party to the peace pact through having authorized former President Gilmore to act for them.

Had the owners of the defunct Baltimore club been able to see a loophole for a new line of attack it is not improbable that they would have seized it. Reference to the reserve clause in player contracts and a claim that the clause gives O. B. a monopoly on the playing talent was made when the trial opened, but the Baltimore club said that they could not hope to shatter the very keystone which supports the "organized arch."

The Reserve Clause Upheld The reserve clause as applied to players in O. B. ranks is upheld and respected by all club owners. The players themselves realize the necessity of such a clause and have willingly signed contracts containing it for years, simply because they know it is the foundation of the game.

Without the reserve clause leagues and clubs would soon be forced to the wall because of the fact that club owners who would spend the greatest amount of money could soon corral all the best talent and leave others out in the cold. One-sided pennant races would be the result, and the foundation would drop from beneath the game.

The reserve clause in contracts drawn up by organized baseball does not apply to any outside interest. The magnates have agreed to protect each other's interests in their ranks, but in seven cases out of ten the reserve clause would have little effect should a player go to court to fight for the rights to leave organized ranks and play with some team or league, such as the Federal league. It is true that many players did not leave O. B. ranks because they feared the hold the reserve clause had on them, but a great many others did not because of it, and there was nothing done about it.

There is little doubt that the "powers that be" in baseball felt a trifle shaky when the Baltimore suit came to trial, because of the fact that they expected the reserve clause would be attacked with every battery in possession of the Baltimore people, and felt that they might be called upon to go to extreme limits to show the court that the clause is absolutely necessary to the life of the game.

As it all turned out, the pastime is standing firm and alone once more and no one is putting forth a question as to its integrity or its fairness of purpose. It takes a strongly organized game to withstand the jolts baseball has received within the past four or five years.

Macks Last Fans Back Although the Athletics have no prospects of figuring in the scramble for the American League pennant this season, they are coming back into favor at Philadelphia because of the fact that Connie Mack has taught them something of the indomitable spirit of the old Athletics, who carried off three world championships.

The Athletics were never known as "fighters" in the sense that is generally taken. But they used to be fighters in the matter of plugging until the last man was out. To-day the Mackmen are showing signs that indicate the club has this brand of fighting spirit. They are down in the race, and they have been forced to take the brunt of unfavorable publicity all around their league, but they haven't quit fighting for every game.

The fans of Philadelphia, who deserted the Athletics of 1916 so completely that one game drew but $5 in paid admissions, have begun to appreciate the new team because of its plugging spirit. For the first time in three years the Shibes, partners of Connie, are wearing optimistic smiles.

Peck and Pipp Stars Wallie Pipp and Roger Peckinpach, first baseman and shortstop of the Yankees, are responsible for the paper that is being shown by Donovan's infield these days. Pipp and Peck are both pepper players, full of ginger in the field and just as full of it at the bat. They have both had their ups and downs in Yankee uniforms, but neither gave up hope of chasing the jinx, and

THE NAVY SCHOOL AT GREAT LAKES

By International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Great Lakes, Ill., June 25.—Thousands of men from the inland states, many of whom never have seen the ocean, are being made into first-class man-of-war's men at the United States naval training station here and shortly will take their places in the nation's first line of defense.

With barrack room for but 1,400 men when President Wilson proclaimed a state of war with Germany, the station is now caring for about 8,200. The station has grown like a boom mining town. The original red sandstone buildings on the wooded bluffs overlooking Lake Michigan are almost lost in the maze of white tents surrounding them on every side, in which the overflow of men from the barracks is quartered.

Organized upon the unit basis of a modern city, the station has its public works department, its streets, its sewage, water and electric light systems. Each department of a municipality has its complement in the organization of Captain W. A. Moffett, commandant.

The men in training here, coming from the Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Naval districts, comprising the states between Louisiana and North Dakota, western New York and Colorado, for the most part, are young, active and vigorous, and represent almost every walk of civil life.

Against a background of leafy bluffs, which sweep majestically down to Lake Michigan, hundreds of trim young fellows in white or in blue may be seen learning the rudiments of drill. Little, round, white hats are jammed down on heads, cheeks glow and bayonets swing from cartridge belt as they march back and forth in squads, companies and regiments in the land formations. The air is filled with hoarse commands and the ceaseless pounding of heavily shod feet on the turf. Helped by the blast of numerous bands, the thrill of war preparation which sets patriotic pulses beating seem everywhere.

Recruits are given a thorough schooling in land formations, which are similar to the infantry drill of the United States army. The training is supplemented by boat drill in the station harbor on Lake Michigan. Large tracts adjoining the station have been leased by Captain Moffett and are being used as auxiliary camp sites. On one of these, known as Camp Paul Jones, the naval militia of Michigan and Missouri is encamped.

From the minute he slips into a blue jacket, athletics play a large part in the life of the future sailor. Directed by a regularly established athletic department, baseball games, basketball contests, swimming matches, boxing and wrestling contests and almost every other branch of sport have their places in the life of the station. Some of the athletes show ability that would make a name in intercollegiate matches.

And there are the bowling alleys, the billiard rooms, the Y. M. C. A., the gymnasium and numbers of other interests to occupy the recruit during his leisure hours. But, despite the recreational facilities of the station, the interest of the men seem to center in their work. Each man seems to be obsessed with the idea that he, personally, shall make good; that his camp record be good enough to attract the attention of his commanding officer. Some way the officers have a trick of infusing that spirit into a man—or perhaps it is arousing the spirit.

"When we go to sea," has almost become a catch phrase about the station, and the general feeling seems to be that "when we go to sea" we are going to show that the Middle Westerner can do his part in the work of the nation's first line of defense.

HEAVEN HOME OF HER EMPLOYER, SAYS CENSUS

Albany, N. Y., June 25.—The New York state military census, is going to show some curious information. For instance, an unmarried, nineteen-year-old girl gave these answers on her blank:

"What is your business?" "Colporteur." (One who sells or distributes religious tracts.) "Are you in business for yourself?" "No." "If not, what is the name of your employer?" "The Lord." "What is your employer's business?" "Forgiving sins." "What is your employer's address?" "The heavenly sanctuary."

since they started slamming the ball around, their fielding has shown noticeable improvement and the Yank infield has caught the spirit to a man.

RUTH CATCHES SUSPENSION

Chicago, June 25.—You must not hit the "mumps." "Babe" Ruth, star pitcher of the Boston Americans, today was indefinitely suspended by President Ban Johnson. Ruth hit Empire Owens on the jaw during the first inning of the first Washington-Boston game Saturday. Owens had called four balls on Morgan, the first man up. President Johnson was awaiting a report from Empire Dineen, Owens and McCormick before deciding the length of the suspension and whether a fine would accompany it.

CAN'T TELL KISS BY SOUND COURT RULES

By International News Service. Beacon, N. Y., June 25.—You can't tell whether it's a kiss or not by the sound alone. A momentous decision, truly, but one easily reached by Judge Willard Brockway when Herbert Jordan attempted to justify his kissing his wife because she kissed a grocery clerk. "How do you know she did?" asked the judge. Jordan brought forward a neighbor, who said she had heard the "sound of kissing through the key-hole." "We have to go by fact, not by sound," remarked Judge Brockway. "It might have been some other noise with a kissing sound."

DOWLING TO AID

In fighting the cost of living, Dr. Dowling, president of the state board of health, will take a hand. Yesterday he wrote to Claiborne parish ordering a carload of peaches and watermelons which he proposes to handle through the Housewives league on the curb market. Dr. Dowling was in this parish last year and noticed that many melons and peaches were going to waste. He declared that they were the best he had ever tasted and he wanted to open a market for them here.

ONE IN JEST AND ONE IN EARNEST

With a gun he claims he did not know was loaded, Philip Nicholas, negro, 1826 St. Claude street, shot and killed William Scott, negro, 2033 St. Claude street, in the saloon of Anthony Giacico, 1135 North Peter street, yesterday forenoon. Scott died at the Charity hospital after making a statement that he was shot in jest. Nicholas was arrested on a murder charge.

Nicholas told the police he and Scott, who had been friends, were skyarking in the saloon. Scott struck Nicholas on the face and the latter ran behind the counter and picked up a revolver. As Scott advanced, Nicholas pulled the trigger, sending a bullet through his lung. Nicholas said he did not know the gun was loaded and that he was merely playing. Scott's statement corroborates his defense.

Lulu Philips, negroess, 1309 Gasquet street, was cut and almost instantly killed by her husband, at Berleville and Robertson streets Sunday night. Philips was arrested. Police say Philips caught his wife going out with another negro and he quarreled with the man. During the altercation the woman fled and Philips went behind her. Overtaking his wife, it is alleged, Philips stabbed her several times in the back and stomach with a carving knife.

PREACHERS WILL URGE CONSERVATION OF FOODS

All preachers of New Orleans have been appealed to devote next Sunday to sermons of conserving food. Yesterday many ministers read to their congregations a letter which they had received from Herbert Hoover, national food controller, telling of the shortage of crops and urging the utmost economy. Mr. Hoover urged the people of New Orleans to make up by economy the deficiency which will be caused by poor crops. He said that the 1917 crop of wheat will be far shorter than the 1916 crop, which was below the average. He said also that the allies need 500,000,000 bushels of wheat from the United States and Canada this year and that the best possible that both countries could give would be 300,000,000 bushels.

Fifty dollars clear waste is the annual average for each family of New Orleans and the rest of the country, he said.

WASHINGTON ARTILLERY MAY TRAIN STUDENT OFFICERS

Student officers in training camps may receive their instruction in artillery work from the Washington artillery. This became known yesterday when it was learned that because there are not enough of the regular artillery available to give the student officers training the government would have to call on the six best artillery organizations in the national guard. As Washington artillery is considered one of the best organizations of its kind in the guard, it is expected that this organization will be called upon to assist in training the student officers in all branches of artillery. It is probable that an entire regiment of national guard artillery will be placed at some of the camps. At least a battalion will be sent to each camp for training purposes.
