Amundsen and His Party Set Out For Arctic From Seattle

Hope to Drift Past North Pole in Stout Ship Maud; Scientists Will Try to Add Much to World's Knowledge; Two Aeroplanes to Be Used.

Seattle, June 3.—When Captain Roald Amundsen's exploration ship Maud sails from Elliott Bay here today for her long voyage through the ice packs of the uncharted North Polar basin, one of the most complete and extensive scientific expeditions ever undertaken in that region will get under way.

The expedition is a resumption of the efforts, begun by Captain Amundsen in 1918 under the auspices of the Norwegian Government, to drift past the North Pole with the ice floes, minutely studying phenomena of the vast area never before visited by white men and to secure data which the explorer expects may revolutionize present-day meteorological and oceanographical knowledge of the northern hemisphere.

The first effort met with delay in 1920, when the Maud lost a propeller in the ice off the northeastern Siberian coast and was forced to come to Seattle for repairs. Recently the vessel has undergone a complete overhaul and additional equipment, including two aeroplanes, a long range wireless outfit and many precise scientific instruments, has been added.

The expedition, Captain Amundsen has repeatedly declared, is primarily a scientific one, and while he hopes to reach the North Pole—he discovered the South Pole in 1911—the study of ocean and magnetic currents, the drift of the ice packs and movements of the air will be his first objective.

To Seek Land. Special investigation will be made to determine whether land exists in the neighborhood of the Pole, as some oceanographers, basing their belief on sudden shifts in Polar ocean currents, have maintained. Much attention will be given to the ocean itself, and through holes bored in the ice scientists of the expedition will measure the depth of the water, gauge the direction and strength of surface currents and take samples from different levels for chemical analysis.

Planes and Wireless. The two aeroplanes, one capable of carrying nine passengers and the other a three-seater, and the wireless outfit, the explorer deems the most important items of the vessel's equipment. With the planes, the eyes of the ship, he will make an intensive exploration of the huge area of almost a million square miles covering the "roof of the world." A larger plane will be used for the more extensive investigations, while the scout plane will fly in the immediate vicinity of the vessel.

By means of the wireless equipment, Captain Amundsen expects to keep in touch with the world and, perhaps to flash the message that, following Peary, he has reached the North Pole. Four times daily he will send wireless messages to Washington, giving in meteorological data expected to aid measurably in forecasting weather conditions around the globe.

Provisions and Fuel. Every precaution has been taken to guard the expedition against the twists of Fate in the Arctic, and often in the past have caused the failure of explorative efforts and resulted in tragedy for those who took part in them. Captain Amundsen is skeptical of the theory that an explorer can "live on the country in that part of the world," and the Maud has been stocked with provisions to last seven years. Sixty tons of fuel-oil—have been taken aboard.

"Husky" dogs, to be used in sledging work after the vessel is frozen into the ice, will join the vessel at Nome, Alaska.

To provide recreation in the long Arctic Winter, many books have been taken aboard.

RACING BALLOON IS UNREPORTED

All Other Aeronauts Who Left Milwaukee Landed

Chicago, June 3.—Lieut. W. F. Reed, of Pensacola, Fla., sole United States navy entry in the National Balloon Race, which started at Milwaukee Wednesday, was the only pilot unaccounted for when dawn streaked the skies to-day. Swung below their big silver gray bags, Lieut. Reed and his aide, Chief Flinger Kit Mullenaw, were believed to be drifting over the Great Lakes region. From the start of their flight Lieut. Reed and his companion virtually have been lost in the skies.

Determination of what three pilots will represent the United States in the international balloon races which start in Switzerland this summer awaited only reports from the navy airmen. It has been practically assured that the American entries in the international race will include one army pilot and one civilian—Major Oscar Westover, of Washington, D. C., and H. E. Honeywell, of St. Louis.

Floated 900 Miles. While enthusiasts awaited word of Lieut. Reed, Major Westover held high honors of the race, having covered a distance of approximately 900 miles when he landed near Lake St. John in the Province of Quebec.

Honeywell, when he descended south of Joppe, Mo., had floated 550 miles. Both of these balloons covered considerably more distance than any of the other competitors except the missing Reed and are virtually certain entries in the international event.

Celebrates His 57th Birthday

Victoria followed Great Britain and the whole British Empire to-day in celebrating the anniversary of the birth of the monarch. Although business was carried on as usual here, the holiday was observed in all Government offices, and by the hoisting of many British flags. The Victoria City Hall, which had not been observing the King's birthday during recent years, fell in line to-day and closed. One thousand school teachers of Seattle came in by two special boats to spend the afternoon in Victoria. In their honor a band played on Parliament Square. Several hundred left here this morning on the excursion by the Princess Adelaide to Port Angeles.

KING GEORGE V.

His Majesty's birthday will be fittingly observed by the local lodge of Elks in their home, Weller Block, tonight by a programme of music and song, commencing at 8 o'clock. None but Elks will be admitted on this occasion.

National Chapter Selects One Victorian Among Councillors

Vancouver, June 3.—(Canadian Press)—The National Chapter, I. O. D. E., faced an election this year as the result of Miss Arnoldi's announcement that she cannot stand for a third term. At this morning's session in Wesley Church, therefore, the election was held, resulting as follows:

- President—Mrs. P. E. Doolittle, Toronto.
First vice-president—Mrs. H. F. Burkholder, Hamilton.
Second vice-president—Mrs. Selwyn Holmsted, Toronto.
Third vice-president—Mrs. A. U. Depencier, of Vancouver.
Fourth vice-president—Mrs. A. F. Rylie.
Fifth vice-president—Mrs. Randolph.
Sixth vice-president—Mrs. J. D. Day.
Secretary—Miss McLellan.
Treasurer—Mrs. Warren Darling, Toronto.
Organizing secretary—Mrs. Malcolmson.
Educational secretary—Miss Constance Laing, Toronto.
Ehoses Secretary—Mrs. Barker, Toronto.
Standard-bearer—Mrs. McLimont, Quebec.
Miss Joan Arnoldi was made honorary vice-president.

Vancouver, June 3.—Urging that the Dominion Government evolve a national immigration policy based on the needs of the country, the adaptability of the immigrants and insisting on a predominance of British citizens among those admitted to Canada and recommending that Canada offer every encouragement and inducement to British settlers, the National Chapter of the I. O. D. E. at a special session last night took a definite stand on the matter of immigration.

Central Europeans. It was pointed out that the number of Central Europeans in the western provinces is already great enough to constitute a serious problem in some localities, and other immigrants of a similar type are being admitted through the Atlantic ports, and that it is most desirable that the British traditions and institutions which are held by the majority of the population of Canada should continue to be the traditions and institutions of Canada.

Several hours were spent in discussion of immigration and representatives of the Order from every part of the Province spoke. Immigration policies as affecting the prairie provinces were received with especial attention.

Again Enfranchisement. Protest was registered against the resolution brought down in the Federal House by W. D. Euler, which would confer the franchise on alien women who become automatically British subjects by marriage with British subjects or naturalized British subjects. The resolution from the meeting suggests that the women must comply with the same requirements as are imposed on alien men seeking naturalization, requiring them to take the oath of allegiance and to be able to write either the French or the English language.

(By Times Staff Representative) Vancouver, June 3.—Unanimous support was given at the meeting of the National Chapter of the I. O. D. E. to-day to a resolution that the Sunday preceding each National anniversary be observed as a day of prayer.

SCHOONER TO RACE IN ATLANTIC CALLED H. FORD Gloucester, Mass., June 3.—The schooner Henry Ford, built as a prospective United States challenger for the Fishermen's Cup, sailed yesterday on her first fishing trip. The schooner was near wrecked at her launching. Captain Morrissey, her owner and skipper, has been assured by the Nova Scotia Trustees of the cup that his vessel will not lose her standing as a challenger because of the lateness of her start for the banks.

MOVE TO PREVENT MCCORMICK-OSER WEDDING ENDS Chicago, June 3.—The court fight against Mathilde McCormick's marriage to Max Oser, Swiss horseman, ended abruptly in less than two minutes of proceedings in probate court to-day when Mrs. Edith McCormick, the girl's mother, withdrew her petition for a restraining order to prevent the union.

COMMONS SPEEDS UP ITS WORK Ottawa, June 3.—(Canadian Press)—The House is to speed up. The Prime Minister has given notice that on and after Saturday next, June 10, the House will meet on Saturday at the same hour as on other days.

WILL COMMEMORATE OUR GLORIOUS DEAD

Memorial Service at Parliament Buildings To-morrow Soldiers and Sailors of All Units Will Parade

To commemorate the Battle of Jutland, which was fought May 31, 1916, and the deaths of men of all ranks in the British forces who fell in action in the Great War or in previous wars, a memorial service will be held on the steps of the Parliament Buildings here to-morrow afternoon. Ex-service men, many of whom will wear decorations, of all ranks and from all regiments will attend—the service after marching through the city, while large crowds of civilians, it is expected, will be present.

The parade of former service men will start at half past two to-morrow on Yates Street, west of Government Street, and will march straight to the Parliament Buildings returning by Government, Yates and Blanshard Streets and breaking off at Douglas Street. The parade order will be: Royal Canadian Mounted Police Band of the Boys' Naval Brigade Boys' Naval Brigade Band of Fifth Regiment Military Forces Cadets University Military School The Girl Guides The Boy Scouts Band of the 16th Canadian Scottish Veterans' Organizations Army

The Westminster Gazette, whose liberal views and goodwill toward Ireland are well known, gives conspicuous publicity to a special article which, referring to yesterday's doing, says: "It was stated after the second meeting of the Cabinet that the outlook was better. This is not the case. Improvement of the situation does not lie with anything the Ministers can do. It depends on the willingness of the Irish delegates to submit a new draft of the constitution. Unless amendments to this are made the treaty will not be ratified."

Interesting Explanation Given by Winnipeg Surgeon Measures Taken With Children in Ohio

Toronto, June 3.—An explanation which would account for the increasing prevalence of goitre was offered before the Ontario Medical Association yesterday by Dr. N. J. McLean, Winnipeg surgeon and professor at the University of Manitoba, who pointed out that the spread of this thyroid trouble can be traced to a certain extent to use of manufactured salt instead of the old form of salt, which was formerly taken from the sea. For while salt recovered from the sea water contains sufficient iodine to keep down the incidence of goitre, the salt manufactured according to commercial standards does not contain iodine.

That thyroid troubles are increasing is evidenced by his statement that already in certain portions of Canada there are fully sixty per cent of the people affected, and while this trouble becomes fatal, or at least incapacitates the patient for ordinary work if it is not treated as early as possible, much of the difficulty can be overcome if the cases are only treated in childhood. This fact has been demonstrated in certain portions of Ohio, where goitre seems to be epidemic. The method employed was to hang bags of iodine containing salt around the schoolrooms and the results have been surprising. The sodium iodine treatment also has been employed with the children of Ohio and the actual results show that in cases where it has been used in an early stage of the child's life only a quarter of one per cent of the goitres have developed.

BRITISH TROOPS IN IRELAND SENT TO THE BORDER Belfast, June 3.—Large parties of British troops, fully equipped, left Liverpool, County Fermanagh, this afternoon for the border. They travelled on trains and commandeered lorries. Machine guns were taken along by the military. Their kitchen outfits accompanied them and they were evidently prepared for a long stay.

TWO DESTROYERS NOW AT BELFAST London, June 3.—The arrival of two British destroyers at Belfast is reported in a dispatch to The Central News.

BRITISH FORCES IN NORTH IRELAND BEING INCREASED Belfast, June 3.—The British forces in Northern Ireland were reinforced this morning by the arrival of 12 officers and 25 men of other ranks of the Royal Air Force. They are being followed by twelve fighting planes, which are due this afternoon. A battery of howitzers was also landed. Their destination is believed to be Enniskillen, where an advance party arrived yesterday and where there is much military strength and activity.

Several troops bringing English and Scotch regiments also entered the harbor this morning. The military in Fermanagh are commandeering automobiles and boats and it is believed that the capture of the Belek salient, recently seized by Irish Republican Army forces, is contemplated.

CANADIAN SURGEON HONORED FOR WORK BY ALBANIANS London, June 3.—Colonel-Surgeon Burnham, of Winnipeg and Toronto, according to a Reuter dispatch from Beirut, Athens, has received the thanks of the Albanian Government upon the termination of the White Cross work in the Balkans, and has been created a brigadier-general. Queen Milena has awarded Brigadier-General Burnham the Grand Cross of Danilo and a royal uniform to be worn on all public occasions.

BRIEF HALT IN IRISH DISCUSSION

Present Situation Does Not Inspire Optimism Griffith in Dublin; Lloyd George Rests

London, June 3.—Rupture of the Irish negotiations has again been averted, but there is little disposition here to take a very optimistic view of the situation and it is widely feared that a satisfactory arrangement will prove extremely difficult of attainment.

The answers of Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann, to six questions put to him by the British Cabinet yesterday, the nature of which was not given out, were declared "satisfactory," and Mr. Griffith left last night for Dublin and Premier Lloyd George for his Whitsuntide holiday at Criccieth, Wales.

The gloomy feeling here was increased by Mr. Griffith's statement before his departure that the position appeared the same as it was in December.

One extreme opinion is that Michael Collins is entirely in de Valera's hands as a result of his agreement and can not escape even if he wishes.

Irish Move Next. The Westminster Gazette, whose liberal views and goodwill toward Ireland are well known, gives conspicuous publicity to a special article which, referring to yesterday's doing, says: "It was stated after the second meeting of the Cabinet that the outlook was better. This is not the case. Improvement of the situation does not lie with anything the Ministers can do. It depends on the willingness of the Irish delegates to submit a new draft of the constitution. Unless amendments to this are made the treaty will not be ratified."

It has been plainly intimated to Griffith and Collins that the next and only possible move lies with them.

Election. The question of an election is also raised by other newspapers, and a prediction that it will occur within three weeks is attributed to a politician in close touch with the Government.

Alluding to the military possibilities of the situation, The Morning Post's Dublin correspondent says the 15,000 British troops in Dublin will parade here to-day on the occasion of the King's birthday, their bands playing the National Anthem.

CRAIG SAYS ULSTER POSITION CLEAR TO BRITISH MINISTRY Belfast, June 3.—Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, on his arrival from London told the newspapermen that his visit had been very profitable and that he was quite pleased with the results so far as Northern Ireland was concerned. The British Cabinet, he said, was now fully advised of the situation in Ulster.

Sun Yat Sen Warned by Wu Not to Oppose Unification of China

Leader Who Defeated Chang Says Harmony Must Be Restored in China Even If Those Shaping Affairs Must Have Recourse to Sword.

Peking, June 3.—General Wu Pei Fu, who recently wiped Chang Tao Lin, Manchurian war leader, from the slate of Peking politics, to-day declared that if Sun Yat Sen, President of the Republic of South China, persists in opposing plans for the unification of China, he too must be eliminated by the sword if necessary.

Tientsin, China, June 3.—Members of the old Imperial Parliament assembled here have not yet determined whom they will support as successor to Hsu Shih Chang, who submitted to their demand that he resign the presidency. There is a general desire among those here for the return of Li Yuan Hung, who was forced by the military leaders to resign the presidency in 1917. Li, however, is expected to act with the utmost caution in the present uncertain state of affairs.

General Tsao Kun, the powerful Northern leader who has been considered a presidential possibility, announced publicly to-day that he had no ambitions toward that office and would leave his future career in the hands of Parliament.

The arrival of ex-President Hsu Shih Chang here this evening was an impressive event. A few local officials and a police guard were assembled on the station platform, but it was evident his coming was generally unnoticed. No unusual crowds were present.

Stopping from his car, the deposed President bowed to saluting police, smiled nervously and stepped quickly into a motor drawn up alongside the train. The party immediately drove off to the residence of Hsu's brother in the Italian concession, to remain while his own private house in the British concession is being repaired.

Heavy movements of Chihli troops northward through Tientsin continued to-day.

The Chihli troops of Wu Fu today occupied Changli, in the province of Chihli north of here. Fighting was reported around Peitaiho, north of Changli, but the city itself was quiet following the landing of British blue coats. The Chinese troops continued to-day.

LEE REITERATES ADEQUATE EMPIRE NAVY NEEDED London, June 3.—(Canadian Press Cable)—A number of prominent people have sent messages to the special June number of The Empire Mail, Lord Lee, First Lord of the Admiralty, has a message saying that in these days of financial panic and economy at any cost it is well to remember the unchanging fact that the security of trade and commerce and the continuance of food supplies, and the very existence of the Empire are dependent on the maintenance of the sea power and an adequate and efficient navy.

Not Accepted. The Russians, the French Premier maintains, have not accepted any of the principles laid down as conditions for negotiations for the recognition of Russia, with the exception of the provision that the various nations can not claim mutual rights to dictate the principles for each other's interior policy.

M. Poincare says the Russian debt will be treated on the same basis as the debts of the Allies when a settlement is reached, provided Russia has agreed to the same conditions as the Allies, but there is no reason to accord her exceptional treatment in reducing her war debt, as was suggested at Genoa.

The memorandum rejects totally Russian claims of damages of 20,000,000,000 gold rubles for the Allied participation in military operations against the Soviet regime "as founded on inadmissible pretensions and the most faulty calculations."

C. O. CAMERON FACES TRIAL IN MONTREAL

True Bill Against Thornton, Davidson and Company Partner

Montreal, June 3.—The grand jury in the Court of King's Bench here returned a true bill yesterday against Colin Ogilvie Cameron, accused of theft, as partner, from the firm of Thornton, Davidson & Company, Ltd., formerly stockbrokers of this city, whose bankruptcy impaired the rest account of the Merchants' Bank of Canada by an amount close to $5,000,000. This loss was among the principal causes forcing that institution to consent to absorption by the Bank of Montreal.

Bigamously Married a Girl and Committed Perjury

Toronto, June 3.—Gagnor J. Miller, an American actor, who appeared in "And Very Nice Too," a musical comedy at a local theatre recently, was sentenced to serve two years in Kingston penitentiary by Magistrate King yesterday on charges of bigamously marrying on May 18 last a pretty Toronto girl and of perjury in connection with statements made when obtaining a marriage license regarding the age of the girl. The girl swore she had known Miller but two days when they were married and that she had told him she would be seventeen on her next birthday, while Fred W. Band, deputy issuer of Marriage Licenses, stated that Miller declared the girl was eighteen. Miller made a voluntary statement to the police that he had married a Mrs. Webster in New York and after six months she had left him.

CANADIANS AT HARVARD.

Cambridge, Mass., June 3.—A number of Canadians at Harvard University, representing both Eastern and Western provinces, were honored yesterday when awards were made of scholarships and fellowships valued in the aggregate at over $55,000.

Winnipeg and the prairies find orders numerically more, but consistently smaller. Wholesalers and manufacturers, with this reservation, say conditions are better. Retail trade in country points is still held back by farmers being on the land. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta crop reports say that conditions are all that can be desired.

Winnipeg, June 3.—(Canadian Press)—"Improvement" in business conditions still maintained, "steady to fair," "gradually improving." All these figures in advices received this week by the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association and are quoted in its weekly trade report. ## SENTIMENT CHANGES IN AUSTRALIA

Liberal-Labor Coalition Becomes More Shaky

Australian Wireless Station on B. C. Coast Soon

(Times Correspondence) Melbourne, Australia, June 2.—A general election for the Federal Parliament had all but been decided on when the Prime Minister went on tour of the country. In New South Wales the Labor Party had been heavily defeated and William M. Hughes, who had been Premier, was expected to be Prime Minister.

However, as a result of his tour the election has been postponed for the present, and the Liberal-Labor coalition under Mr. Hughes will hang together a while longer. There are ominous indications of a split, however.

The Prime Minister is in bad health. Recently he broke his collar bone through falling when on horseback. His temper, never very good, has rather startled his followers of late, and some deputations have gone away from his offices in a decidedly ruffled state.

The Amalgamated Wireless, Ltd., a company in which the Australian Government holds the larger share, will shortly establish a high power wireless station in Canada on the Pacific coast.

This company is under contract to the Commonwealth to make direct communication with Britain, through 12,000 miles of space and to transmit 40,000,000 words a year at much lower rates than the cable companies are able to offer.

It is expected that a greatly enlarged service of press news will be forthcoming both for Canada and Australia. In the slack periods wireless concerts will be sent out to feed the public in Australia, while wireless telephony will link up the "backblocks" with the big cities.

Within five years the company expects to be able to telephone direct to Britain.

The main stations will consist of 24 towers each of 300 feet high.

A railway to link up Australia from north to south is planned by the Federal Government to cost $70,000,000. Already a transcontinental railway links Perth in Western Australia with Melbourne and Sydney in the East.

The new line will run from Adelaide to Port Darwin, and would open up an area of grazing country as big as half of Europe. The line will pass through country where artesian water can be readily had, and will be altogether 1,520 miles long, omitting the section north of Adelaide, already constructed for other purposes.

There is a great belt of copper country and wolfram fields are numerous. But it is to sheep that the Government looks for the success of the line.

The rivers swarm with fish, and there are buffaloes and alligators in abundance for the sportsman.

Will Sink Warship. The Australian battleship Australia, now lying in Sydney Harbor awaiting disposal, will in all probability be taken out to sea and sunk. It would not pay, the Federal Government is informed, to break her up in the usual way.

Her engines will be removed and sold. They are especially good and could be used in a commercial ship. Mementoes will be kept of her, and the hull will be taken out to sea and either blown up or sunk by gunfire.

A New Ship. The last unit of the Australian fleet has been completed at Sydney at a cost of $11,000,000, or one-third more than the same ship could have been built in Britain.

The Adelaide, battleship, has taken five years to build. She is ready, say the naval experts, obsolescent. The delays, however, were not due to mismanagement but to improvements in construction in consequence of what was learnt in the battle of Jutland.

The cruiser, however, turns out to be a very fine ship and her speed is higher than any in the Australian navy at present.

Plague of Mice. Mice literally in millions have made farmers' homes in the outermost parts of New South Wales uninhabitable. Children in bed asleep have been attacked by the small rodents, which have traveled across country for miles doing immense damage to crops.

The plague's origin is unknown. The mice began to appear about the beginning of April and soon ate up even the grass. Now they are undisturbed possession of large areas. Attempts to get rid of them have been constantly made with but little success. One of the most ingenious is to place a greasy necked bottle on the edge of a table over a tub of water. The mice slip from the grease into the water and are drowned. A tubful of mice is not uncommon in the morning.

In some places members of the family have to take it in turns to do wrenny-go at nights so that the others may sleep. A Sydney inventor has, however, discovered a solution which no rats or mice will touch. He has impregnated bags with it, and though the bags have been full of bread and placed in an iron tank with a hundred mice they all starved to death rather than nibble through the bag to get at the food.

An Unusual Case. Summoned by his wife, a charwoman, a man named Melkie in the divorce court here proved to the satisfaction of the Judge that he was Sir Hector Douglas Mackenzie Melkie, and his wife Lady Melkie. He succeeded to the title, a Scottish one, in 1916, but did not give up his work as a daily gardener, because no estates went with the honor. His wife had purchased their humble home out of her earnings as a charwoman.

Evidence having been granted in the case, a decree nisi was granted.

B. C. BUSINESS REPORTS GIVE PROMISING OUTLOOK

Winnipeg, June 3.—(Canadian Press)—"Improvement" in business conditions still maintained, "steady to fair," "gradually improving." All these figures in advices received this week by the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association and are quoted in its weekly trade report. Montreal, Quebec, Toronto and the East find business gradually improving, with wholesalers and manufacturers and retail merchants optimistic as to the results of the Spring and Summer trade. Collections are still slow.

TEN-YEAR DRUG SENTENCE IN U.S.

Los Angeles Chinaman Also Fined $10,000

Los Angeles, June 3.—What is said to be the heaviest sentence ever given in California for violation of the Harrison narcotic law was imposed by Judge Oscar A. Trippett in the United States District Court here yesterday upon Tom Wah, "King of Chinatown."

It was ten years in the federal penitentiary at McNeil Island and a fine of $10,000.

It was announced that a previous sentence of three years and six months imposed on Wah a month ago for another conviction on a similar charge would run concurrently with that given yesterday.

Wah's wife, Fong Tai, convicted on a similar charge, was sentenced to six months in a reformatory for women at Rockwell City, Ia., and fined $5,000.

Federal officials announced their intention to ask maximum sentences for all violations of drug laws.

"You can't lend me a couple of dollars?" "Sure enough, but how did you know it?"

MANY WISH TO GO FROM EUROPE TO UNITED STATES

Constantinople, June 3.—The American consulate here yesterday hung out a standing room only sign when hundreds of would-be immigrants applied for passports to the United States under the July quota. The applicants included seventy nationalities.

SALE OF CATTLE AT SASKATOON

Saskatoon, June 3.—Maintaining an average of approximately $150 per head, the sale held here yesterday under the auspices of the Saskatchewan Cattle Breeders' Association proved to be one of the most successful held this season. Two animals topped the sale at $400 each and another went for $385, but these were the only outstanding prices paid.

TO SERVE FOUR MONTHS

Nelson, June 1.—Edmund Ralph, whose prosecution arising out of the shooting of Gus Steinberg in December last was dropped Thursday following the disagreement of the jury, which was strongly in his favor, was sentenced yesterday by Mr. Justice Gregory to one year in jail for the theft of the fur coat in which he attempted to leave town, the sentence starting at the time of his wounding by a constable and his entry into the hospital. With two months off for good behaviour, this leaves him with four months to serve.

Mrs. Rick's Scotch Scones

We had an enquiry asking for a recipe for real Old Country Scotch Scones. This is one Mrs. Rick sent us a while back. We have tried it and it is good: 4 cups of flour, one teaspoon soda, 2 teaspoons cream tartar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, Pacific Milk (diluted with equal amount of water) to make soft dough. Mix well and bake on a hot griddle. Turn and bake on other side. They keep better if wrapped in a towel.

LONG LIVE THE KING!

This day marks the fifty-seventh anniversary of the birth of His Majesty King George V. British people throughout the world will swell the chorus of good wishes.

It can be said without hesitation that few British sovereigns have reigned during such an eventful period as that which has passed since King George took up the sceptre which his father had laid down.

During the years which have passed since the great war came to an end His Majesty has witnessed a period of transition—an international awakening and a fairly general desire to establish world concord.

On this anniversary he may look back upon many stirring events with more than ordinary satisfaction. Thrones that have toppled, empires that have been laid low, possess no significance for His Majesty.

THE TARIFF SITUATION.

Mr. Fielding's announcement of the increase of the British preference attracted no little attention at Washington and must have aroused some misgivings in the minds of the high tariff promoters there.

sored mainly by the agrarian group from the Western states, whose position is precisely opposite to that of the Progressives in Canada, who desire a low tariff. It is true the Republican platform suggested an upward revision of the American tariff, but the Party is neither unanimous nor particularly enthusiastic over the fulfillment of that pledge.

Congressional elections will take place next November, and political prophets are predicting that the present comfortable Republican majority in Congress is likely to be very seriously reduced by a combination of circumstances, of which an oppressively high tariff is expected to be not the least important.

WELCOME!

Victoria extends a hearty welcome to the educational authorities and school teachers from Seattle. These are the sort of interchanges which strengthen the bonds of friendship and common purpose that exist between the people of the two countries.

HEARST MAY PROFIT.

Although The Toronto Globe is correct in its description of William Randolph Hearst and all his works we do not think that Mr. Lloyd George has committed a very grave error by asking "the King of Yellow Journalism" to dine with him at No. 10 Downing Street.

pire management. The twist that Hearst is able to give the lion's tail does not worry the animal in the least—it merely provokes the indulgent blink of a pair of good natured eyes. The only mistake that seems to have been made—if one can call it a mistake in view of all the circumstances—by some of the newspapers of the Motherland is in referring to the Hearst policy at all.

NOTE AND COMMENT

When the bankers' committee which is considering the terms of the German loan get through their examination of Europe's financial muddle it looks as if the question of debt cancellation will crop up again.

After all Mr. Lloyd George has earned a rest from his encounters with really big men. A luncheon with William Randolph Hearst would be something in the nature of a comic turn.

Great Britain is ready to cancel the three billion pound debt owing her if the United States will forego her billion-pound claim upon Westminster. Such an arrangement would strengthen the voice of Anglo-Saxondom in the councils of the world.

By the way, what has happened to the great coal strike in the United States? While the few hundred thousand miners are taking their costly holiday considerably more than one hundred million people are trying to keep cool. At least the strikers waited until stocks had been piled up, and until a time when the people would not suffer hardship, before they laid down tools.

impressive suggestion of the great of all modern scientific doctrines—evolution. "Slowly but surely we rise in the scale of being. Drummond sums it up thus: Some mineral, but not all, becomes vegetable, some vegetable, but not all, becomes animal; some animal, but not all, becomes human; some human, but not all, becomes good or spiritual, and man's possibilities are limitless.

CAUSE OF CAUSES.

To the Editor.—To Mr. H. Russell's enquiry I fail would reply. "You know not what you ask." From Paley's watch or the Dutch anchor from which he took it, is a long cry to Darwin and Spencer. Other writers who have expounded the naturalistic position re adaptation are: Professors Tyndall and Huxley, Grant Allan, Andrew Wilson, Joseph McCabe and Edward Clodd, etc. May I refer this gentleman and others, to these authorities' products have a different origin. PRINCESS

To-night the stock company at the Princess Theatre, will present for the last time to-night "Her Husband's Wife" which has made such a distinct hit this week with the patrons of this theatre. The hot spell prevented many from seeing this funny play thus far, and they should take advantage of the last opportunity to-night. The musical numbers are quite the best in this play than in the previous offerings. Wm. Campbell and Vivian Moore are presenting a singing act that would do credit to the Orpheum Vaudeville time, while Lily Dooley and Little Hilda Dooley are in a class by themselves with clever singing and dancing numbers in which the chorus nicely costumed assists. Seats may be reserved by phone and the curtain rises at 8.30 on account of the daylight saving.

ROYAL VICTORIA

Getting mixed up with a family of eight Jewish children got little Jackie Blair out of the confines of Ellis Island, but that is all it did. Landing on the island an orphan and scheduled for deportation, Jackie started to play with the eight children of a Hebrew woman who had arrived with her brood to join her husband. Therefore, when the family was allowed to leave the island, Jackie followed. Owing to the number of the juveniles, the official in charge lost count and Jackie found himself on the crowded streets of New York.

But when the head of the family started to count noses he discovered the presence of Jackie, and indignantly chased him out of the fold. Then began a thrilling series of adventures for the little shaver.

Jackie's adventures can be seen in "My Boy," an Associated First National attraction starring Jackie Coogan, which is the attraction again to-day at the Royal Victoria Theatre.

CAPITOL

Comedians are, as a rule, supposed to be funny and that's all. But Harold Lloyd interests himself in everything at the Hal Roach Studios, particularly fashions. He doesn't care for clothes that can be seen a mile away, but prefers quiet dressing for both sterner and gentler sex.

"Checks are all right for fellows who want to keep a memorandum; stripes for those who want to imagine they are in prison; and loud waistcoats for the chap whose hearing is poor," is the way he put it. The comedian isn't pledged to any particular color, however. Sometimes he likes an occasional suit of changeable effects, but he never subscribes to ultra shades.

Director and star pulling in exactly opposite directions! This is what occurred during the filming of "The Truthful Liar." Wanda Hawley's Fearful picture for Famous Players-Lasky, now being shown at the Capitol Theatre. It happened at the Los Angeles Athletic Club one evening, where the club basketball team was playing against the team of Santa Clara University.

Wanda Hawley is the official mascot of the club team, while Thomas Jefferson, her director, is a graduate of Santa Clara University. Hence the lack of agreement "The Truthful Liar" was written by Will Payne. The supporting cast includes Edward Hearn, Cason Ferguson, Chas. A. Stevenson, Lloyd Whitlock and E. A. Warren.

DOMINION

Jack Mulhall, who plays Joe Barcott, the leading role in "Turn to the Right," now showing at the Dominion Theatre, started to be an artist before he turned to the screen. Art was long and times between payment for the young artist's pictures were longer. He supported himself by acting as a model for collar advertisement pictures in New York.

A real "Gibson man" could not be allowed to go to waste when the screen was calling and Mr. Mulhall was offered a chance in motion pictures. He already had had some stage experience, playing in a New York stock company after he was graduated from Columbia University. In pictures he quickly became a leading man, playing opposite Viola Dana, Alice Lake and Emmy Wehlen. His biggest opportunity has come in "Turn to the Right," which is a Rex Ingram production for Metro, adapted by June Mathis and Mary O'Hara from the John Golden stage success by Winchell Smith and John L. Hazzard. John F. Seitz was photographer and A. J. Myers and Harold Grievie technical directors.

COLUMBIA

Pauline Frederick as a virile young woman who combats and puts to rout a band of culprits who place her father's ranch in jeopardy is a character that will appeal to thousands of photoplay fans wherever the shadow flicker on the silver screen. Such is her role in her current R-C production scheduled for exhibition at the Columbia theatre to-day. It is called "Two Kinds of Women" and is based upon Jackson Gregory's great novel of the Western country, "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch." A brilliant company was assembled to support Miss Frederick. Among the players is Tom Santschi, a star in his own

VARIETY

That his role of the Saharan chieftain in "The Sheik," a picturization by George Melford for Paramount of the now famous novel of the same name, which is the literary sensation of the current season, is the best of his screen career, is the opinion of Rudolph Valentino who, with Agnes Ayres, Paramount star, is the featured player in the production. It will be shown at the Variety Theatre to-day for two days.

"I know of no more colorful role than that of the Sheik in this tremendous picture production," he said during the filming of the photoplay in Paramount's California studio. "The scenes are as wonderful as they are stupendous and romantic."
Miss Ayres was enchanted with her role—the haughty English girl tamed by a masterful son of the desert, and by love.
And now those who have seen the picture say those quoted are right—"The Sheik" is a remarkable production.

AT ROYAL NEXT WEEK

Beautiful architecture and striking scenic effects are predominant features of Norma Talmadge's brilliant and powerfully moving production, "Smilin' Through," which is playing at the Royal Victoria Theatre next week.

A pretty little cottage in Ireland, a quaint old English village, a beautiful wedding fete of the 60's in a picturesque garden whose bowers and trees are hung with garlands, a tragic interruption by a rejected suitor, stirring scenes of 1914 when England's young manhood was called to the colors, a romance of modern backgrounds—all these are shown in a magnificent screen panorama, the sheer beauty and pictorial splendor of which are in themselves a crowning triumph of the photodramatic art.

Added to all this is a wonderful story of love and tragedy, in which Norma is at her histrionic best in the dual role of the beautiful Moon-yeen of the '60's and the equally charming Kathleen of modern times.

COMING TO CAPITOL

It was in the midst of a rehearsal of "Dream Street" which D. W. Griffith was at that time preparing for the camera.

An actor was missing. Mr. Griffith glanced around the room and his eye was attracted by the slender figure of a "prop" boy. He was a boy with a pale sensitive face and glowing Irish eyes.

"Suppose you try it," said Mr. Griffith. So the boy tried the difficult part of the weakling brother. Thereafter some twenty-six of the best juvenile actors in New York also tried it, but no one ever was found who could put into the part the yearning pity and pathos with which the "prop" boy had touched it.

And so it was that Charles Emmet Mack came to the screen as an actor in "Dream Street." So impressed were the New York critics with his performance that several have expressed the belief that another great screen career has started down the golden path along which Mr. Griffith has sent so many young actors.

For the boy it was the fulfillment of a dream.
Mack came from a good old Irish family down in Scranton, Pa. His mother, Ellen, a very Irish girl, whose girlish dream was to be a dancer. Instead she married, and raised a family, but she taught all her children to dance and gave them the gift of laughter that is never far from an Irish heart.

The boy went to the mines to the hard grinding work of the breaker, then he ran away with a circus where he slept in the tag end of the canvas. He worked in the side shows and rode the elephants, but the laughter never left his Irish heart, nor the poetry either.

Young Mack got a pretty thorough stage training in vaudeville before he came to motion pictures, but he made up his mind he was going to be a Griffith actor and gave up his other job to become a "prop" boy at the big studio. And there he waited patiently until his chance came. "Our dreams come true," says Mr. Griffith, "if we but dream right."
"Dream Street" will be the feature at the Capitol Theatre next week.

COMING TO THE DOMINION

Every mother who has boys, every man who remembers his boyhood, will recall some delightful memories after seeing Wesley Barry in the Warner Brothers' presentation of "Gus Edwards' School Days," which begins a six day engagement at the Dominion Theatre next week.

The picture reveals all the pranks, the disappointments, and the glory of a boy's life. It is a delightful comedy. Speck Brown, played by the freckle-faced star, And Speck fairly revels in his portrayal. He is first seen among rural surroundings, and later he gets a taste of private tutoring that is accorded children of wealthy parents in big cities.

Speck is a little orphan. He has a stern guardian, and all his pleasures at the old swimmin' hole with his dog, Hippo, are stolen. He also has an eccentric old friend who has invented a clothes pin and calls it, "you-can't-lose-it-clothes-pin." With the perfection of his invention, backed by financial aid, the old fellow threatens to become wealthy. But before the invention materializes, Speck meets his wealthy uncle, who persuades him to go East for an education.

A wise writer once said: "If you want to do something worth while in the world, please the children."
Universal has done just this in giving to the screen "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," which will start at the Dominion Theatre. There is scarcely a boy or girl in the world who has not read and been thrilled by the life of the venturesome Defoe hero. They may have been deprived of the advantage of a common school education, but some book or crook you can count on them being familiar with Crusoe, whether they are white, yellow, red or black. In the eyes of children Crusoe for many years has held the same position as the heroes of history have held, but one difference—he is loved even more.

Little Johnny may not be sure when Columbus discovered America, but you may count on him knowing in chronological order the adventures of Robinson Crusoe.

And because the escapades of this beloved hero furnish such wholesome and inspiring entertainment for children, Universal took advantage of its popularity and has further immortalized the story by giving it to the world in the universal language of the screen.

Though the story of Robinson Crusoe is partially fictitious, the continuity writer, Emma Bell Clifton, and the director, Robert F. Hill, have seized every opportunity to make every one of the eighteen chapters educational as well as entertaining. The resourcefulness of Crusoe on the desert land, the wonderful friendship between Crusoe and Friday, and the locale in foreign shores are vivid and graphically instructive.

GRADUATING EXERCISES HELD

Diplomas Awarded to Jubilee Hospital Graduates

One of the outstanding events of the social year, the graduating exercises of the Jubilee Hospital Training School for Nurses, were held last evening before a large and interested gathering in the Alexandra ballroom. Gay with laburnum and yellow and white broom, the ballroom presented a charming picture as the graduates and probationers entered in their snowy caps and uniforms. The hospital colors were denoted in the big bowl of crimson and white roses and peonies, which decked the chairman's table, and in the bouquets of red and white carnations, which were carried by the graduates, these being the gift of the Jubilee Women's Auxiliary.

Short Addresses.
After the nurses had taken their places, an invocation was delivered by Rev. Dr. Sippell, shortly followed by an address by Rev. Dr. W. L. Clay. Service, he said, was the first idea which entered one's head when thinking of the nursing profession, but will have at this point to emphasize instead the dignity of the nurses "calling." The builders of those wondrous cathedrals of the Old World must have been enabled by their labor to build the human body, "the temple of the soul," was the most marvellous structure of the universe. No cathedral was comparable with the wonders of its structure. To labor in the care of it, to repair it, to train others in its rightful service, was a finer work than any, "with clear eyes on a world of humanity that needs your service," he abjured then, "and you will find in the study of this human nature a fund of happiness that will reward you."

Presents Diplomas.
George McGregor, president of the Jubilee Board of Directors, spoke briefly to the nurses before awarding the diplomas. He recalled the trials under which the nurses had been working, the epidemic which had decimated their own ranks besides greatly increasing the number of their patients, and also the disadvantages of inadequate accommodation, which they had labored under. These trials had been surmounted, however, that they were in themselves cause for congratulation. He was proud to be associated with an institution which gave of its best, without differentiating between national, class or creed. Victorians should be proud to help to maintain a hospital which held to so high a standard.

The Diplomas.
Diplomas were then awarded to the graduates, as follows:
Edith Loretta Brandon, Stella Francis, Mary Gertrude Ehlers, Beatrice Ferreira, Flora Elizabeth Roth, Jessie Isabel Dunnett, Marjorie May Brethour, Kathleen Wright, Helen Robinson, Sarah Sydney Fatt (affiliation from Victoria Hospital and St. Joseph's Hospital), Mrs. Shaw-Wittman (a graduate of McEln Hospital, Mass., U.S.A., who has been taking a post graduate course in maternity and surgery), A diploma and badge were also held for Annie Louise Dyke, who was not present.

Miss Jessie Mackenzie, R. N., lady superintendent of the Jubilee Hospital, presented the graduates with their badges, each receiving her meed of applause from an interested audience as she passed before the platform.

Special presentations were then made by Miss M. Morrison, R. N., president of the Graduate Nurses' Association. Miss Clothier presented the honorary, presented annually to the student most proficient in her first year's work, and Miss Annie Louise Dyke, of the graduate class for general proficiency, who awarded a beautifully fitted case of surgical instruments complete down to a fascinating and diminutive "baby scale," this being the gift of Dr. Hook. An announcement was made that the Miss Sarah Sydney Fatt had passed highest in the recently held Provincial Nursing Board, R. N., examinations.

Musical Features.
Miss M. E. Purdy sang "Pale Moon" very charmingly at the opening of the programme, and Miss K. M. Cockrell's lovely voice was much appreciated in a quaint old Southern song, "Let Miss Lindy Pass." Professor Heaton was the accompanist. Cockrell was instructress of nurses at the Jubilee before going to New York, where she is now engaged with the Public Health Service. She rendered yeoman service in Franco-American American army, and Miss Cockrell is now enjoying a vacation in Victoria before returning to the U.S.A.

The National Anthem brought the formal proceedings to close, and the floor was then cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed to a late hour. Professor Heaton's five-piece orchestra providing a delightful programme of the newest dance tunes.

Among those present were, on the platform, in addition to Mr. George McGregor, Dr. Sippell, Rev. Dr. Clay and Miss Mackenzie, the following members of the Hospital Board: Mr. Charles Rhodes, Mr. James Forman, Mr. Drake, Mr. Parfitt and Mr. E. E. Campbell, also Dr. Hasell, medical superintendent, and Dr. Baile. Others in the audience were: Dr. and Mrs. Boak, Dr. and Mrs. Poyntz, Dr. and Mrs. Walker, Dr. Tomalin, Dr. and Mrs. Price, Dr. Graham, Dr. and Mrs. Brigg, Dr. and Mrs. Herd, Dr. and Mrs. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Miller, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas, Dr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Jones, Dr. and Mrs. Griffiths, Dr. Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Vye, Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Young, Dr. and Mrs. Taylor, Dr. and Mrs. Stewart, Rev. Dr. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Forner, Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Bullock-Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Pendray, Mr. and Mrs. MacLachlan, Mr. and Mrs. Collison, Dr. and Mrs. Humber, Mr. and Mrs. Tunnard, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Muskett, Mr. and Mrs. Umbach, Mr. and Mrs. Seabrook Young and Dr. and Mrs. Burgess.

Change of Location.—Court Triumph No. 18 held its election of officers on Wednesday evening. They held their last meeting in the Green Block and next meeting is to be held in rooms of the Women's Institute, Surrey Block, on Tuesday next at 8 p.m.

NATIONAL CHAPTER SELECTS ONE VICTORIAN AMONG COUNCILLORS

The Columbia School of Music, Mrs. Burton-Murphy, A. C. V., principal, saw another of its monthly students' recitals last evening, when as usual the rooms of the school were filled to capacity with friends and parents of the young and enthusiastic recitalists.

The programme of twenty-five numbers was evidently constructed so that many of the senior pupils could take part, and another interesting feature was the inclusion of some numbers which will be the test pieces at the forthcoming local practical examinations by the R. A. M. and R. C. M., London, England, on June 20. Three departments of the school were represented on the programme, the piano dominating.

The Piano Division.
In this department there were numbers given that showed careful tuition, and in this respect mention must be made of the following in the order of the programme: "Lullaby" (McDougal), "Valse Caprice" in "Valse Caprice" (Warka), and in the piano duet with Hazel Clyde; Miss Matthews, who gave a spirited rendering of "Tarantelle" (Tarantelle); Hilda Elliott, Miss M. Keley, in her solo, "Impromptu" (Rheinhold), and in the piano duet with Ronald Heard, "Norwegian Dance" (Grieg), a very cleverly given number; Hazel Clyde, Miss Isobel Milldenhall, Dorothy Ashorn, both the latter distinguishing themselves later on in the duet "Polonaise" (Hoffman), and Ronald Heard, whose solo "4th Valse" (Chaminade), called forth much technical skill and was admirably interpreted by this ambitious and conscientious student.

Vocal Departments.
There were nine vocal numbers in all. Those calling for special mention are Mrs. W. D. Todd, who sang with a great deal of abandon, and keen perception, Lane Wilson's "Carmena," Mrs. H. B. Olson, in "For Love" (D'Hardiol), in which her clear soprano was heard to great advantage. This young singer has gone a long way since heard last at the recital, and it is safe to say that with further study she will attain to high heights in the near future. Miss Mary Morton sang delightfully, and there was an echo of "Come and Trip It," an early English song by (Handel). Miss Stevenson has a voice of wide range, and has some great war songs sympathetically but firmly rejected on the ground that with Canada facing great expense it would not be right to ask the Government for this purpose. By a pathetic coincidence this resolution was being considered just at the time that a band playing the dead in the streets of the Parliament Buildings as a memorial to her work.

Resolutions.
Resolutions forwarded by Primary, Municipal and Provincial Chapters and considered through the Development Committee were placed before the session yesterday by Mrs. R. S. Day, of Victoria, convenor.

The meeting decided that a portrait of Mrs. Clark Murray, founder of the Order, should be painted and hung in the National Gallery at Ottawa in the Parliament Buildings as a memorial to her work.

Councillors Elected.
The result of the election of councillors who will elect the officers was announced as follows:
Mrs. Dunn Anderson, Montreal; Miss Joan Arnold, Toronto; Mrs. D. M. Balfour, Regina; Mrs. W. H. Barker, Toronto; Mrs. W. B. Beer, Toronto; Miss M. L. Bolter, Vancouver; Mrs. O. L. Boynton, Vancouver; Mrs. R. H. Brothwood, Elkhorn; Mrs. W. H. Burns, Toronto; Mrs. F. Burkholder, Hamilton; Mrs. Colin H. Campbell, Winnipeg; Mrs. E. G. Canning, Toronto; Mrs. D. # The One Unwanted

By RUBY M. AYRES

INSTALMENT NO. 7

I tried to stop, but I was not sufficiently expert to be able to pull up quickly without overbalancing myself, and my ankle turned sharply and flung me down.

I did my best to scramble up, but every one knows how difficult it is to do so on skates without help, and then, to my horror, I saw that the ice around me was spreading into a star-like mark a small stone makes when it breaks a window, and I heard a slow cracking sound.

I knew what was happening then, and I screamed:

"—Mr. Anderson—Mr. Anderson!"

He shouted something in reply, but he was too far away to save me, and the next moment I was struggling in the icy water.

I shall never forget that terrible feeling of cold as long as I live. It was as if a thousand knives pierced my body at once, and I caught my breath in a gasp that was like a shriek as I went down, down, and felt the water closing over my head.

I clutched at the parting, slippery ice with desperate fingers, but it was impossible to hold to it even for a second. I can remember that the vague thought went through my mind, "Perhaps they'll be sorry at home now—perhaps they'll wish they'd let me stay with them," but my senses were going fast. I had just given myself up for lost, when strong hands caught and held me, and then I think for a moment I really did lose consciousness.

I was on the bank when I opened my eyes, and Mr. Anderson was kneeling beside me rubbing my hands. I felt as if my body was cut in ice, and when I tried to speak, my lips felt frozen too.

He put his arm round me and lifted me to my feet, holding me close to him, and for an instant I clung to him with a dreadful feeling of sickness and giddiness before I gasped out:

"Oh—oh! I thought I was drowned!"

Mr. Anderson laughed grimly.

"I thought you were, too," he said. His voice was hoarse, but it sounded unympathetic and I began to cry miserably.

There was a dreadful taste of river water in my mouth and I felt rather sick, but my worst sensation was that terrible frozen feeling.

"It's no use crying," Mr. Anderson said roughly. "And you'll catch your death of cold if you stand here. Take my hand! Do you think you can run?"

He took my hand, but I dragged back.

"I can't—oh, leave me alone—leave me alone!"

"Nonsense! You must run! Of course you can!" he urged sharply.

Your taste is the test

looking down into my cold, tear-stained face, then he bent and kissed me on the lips.

I had my bath, and a great basin of hot water, and a severe scolding from Mrs. Alberry before I went to bed, and even then she followed me upstairs and rated me soundly.

"Poor woman! I think she really had had a bad fright. It was all I could do to keep her from sending for a doctor."

"Supposing you'd been drowned," she said over and over again.

"But I'm not drowned," I said. "I'm quite well now, and, oh, so beautifully warm!" And I snuggled beneath the family quilt and looked over the top of it at her with sparkling eyes.

I wished she would go away and leave me. I wanted to think, and to remember that last wonderful moment when Mark Anderson picked me up from the big chair and kissed me.

I had never been kissed by a man before, and it seemed as if I lay there, grateful for the warmth and comfort after that dreadful walk home, that I should never want any other man in all the world to kiss me again.

I suppose I had always been a little in love with him, right from the first moment when he spoke over the hedge, when the wheel came off our trap, but I knew that I loved him with all my heart and soul.

That one kiss had made me his only and utterly—and young—and inexperienced as I was, I told myself that whatever happened I should be perfectly happy if only I could spend the rest of my life with him.

Nell could marry her millionaire if she liked, and Winnie could have all the money the aunts liked to leave her, but I only wanted Mark.

I had forgotten my incipient jealousy of Nina. I was young and unsophisticated enough to believe that a man only kissed a girl if he really cared for her and wished to marry her. I thought I was too excited to sleep a wink, and yet I fell asleep before I had been in bed more than a few minutes.

It was the excitement and fatigue, I suppose; but, anyway, I slept soundly all through the afternoon and woke to find my room quite dark save for the glow of the fire which Mrs. Alberry had insisted on lighting. I lay still, only half awake, thinking of what had happened. Just like a dream it seemed, and as I was wondering whether I ought not to get up so as to be in time to see the doctor when he called that evening as he said he should do, Mrs. Alberry opened the door softly and tiptoed in. "I'm awake," I said, laughing and I could hear the sigh of relief she gave.

"You've slept so long," she said. "I was beginning to be afraid; I really was."

"I've had a lovely sleep, and I'm quite well," I declared. "I'm going to get dressed and come down to supper."

"Supper! Why, bless your heart, it's past ten," she told me. "We had supper and cleared away an hour or more ago; but I'm going to bring you up something hot. Wait here!" I sat up and leaned on my elbow, staring at her.

"Past ten! Have I been asleep all the afternoon and evening then?" I asked blankly.

"You have indeed, miss," she assured me. "And sleeping quietly, too, or I should have had the doctor over here long enough ago."

I lay back on the pillow with a feeling of disappointment.

"Has Mr. Anderson been?" I asked and for the first time I felt shy of speaking his name.

"She was making up the fire with a big log."

"No, indeed, he has not," she said. "And I'm sure I hope that he's done the same as he told you to do, and gone straight to bed. I tried to make him stay and change into some of John's things, but not he. And I wouldn't be at all surprised if he doesn't get a fine chill!"

"He doesn't look delicate," I said.

"He had pneumonia last winter," Mrs. Alberry said tartly. "And once you've had it you're always liable, so my mother used to say."

She came and stood beside the bed and laid her hand on my forehead.

"Sure you don't feel feverish?" she asked anxiously.

"You dear old silly, I feel perfectly well," I answered. "And I'm very hungry."

But she would give me nothing but bread and milk; she had made up her mind to treat me as an invalid till the next day at all events, and I had to submit with as good a grace as possible.

HOW TO BUILD A RADIO SET—Article 6

By Frank I. Solar, Instructor of Manual Training, Detroit High Schools.

A loose coupler serves the purpose of a tuning coil—to "tune in" the sound waves—and while it is more difficult than the tuning coil to make, it gives better results.

With the loose coupler described here, and a good detector, a sensitive piece of galena, a pair of 2,000 ohm receivers, 100 feet of copper antenna well insulated and suspended on an aerial 50 feet from the ground, you should be able to receive from a distance of 200 to 300 miles.

The coupler is composed of two tubes, both wound with wire, one sliding into the other. The larger tube is called the primary and the smaller the secondary. The primary is set to the wave length by adjusting the top slider. Then the switch on the secondary is manipulated and the secondary is drawn in and out until the sound is increased or decreased satisfactorily.

The core of the primary tube is a round cereal box, and for the secondary tube, use a smaller, round salt box. Be sure both are dry before you wind them with wire so they will not shrink after being wound. Shellac the cardboard before winding the tubes, in order to stiffen it. The construction of the box-for-the-coupler is simple and fully explained in the drawing.

With a coping saw cut the opening in one end of the box to receive the secondary tube. Then make 3 discs of wood, 1/2 inch thick, one to fit in the back end of the primary, and one for each end of the secondary.

Several hundred boys in the schools in Detroit have made radio receiving sets under Mr. Solar's direction. And every set "works." The receiving outfit described in this series of articles is similar to the one Mr. Solar's students are making.

Obtain a 1/2 inch sliding curtain rod, the kind that is hollow to receive a solid rod. Cut off two pieces the length of the coupler box. These are to be inserted in the ends of the secondary. Cut two solid rods the same length. File them square and bring one end to a point. Drive the pointed ends into holes bored through the disc at the back of the primary and into the back of the box.

Wind the primary with No. 24 cotton-covered copper wire and when finished give it a coat of shellac. About one-quarter of a pound of wire will be needed. Start winding 1/2 inch from the end of the core. Fasten the ends of the wire by punching small holes into the cereal box and threading the ends of the wire into them. The wire at the back end of the coil should be twisted so it will not come loose. The one at the front end should be left quite long because it must be threaded back through the tubes, in order to stiffen it. The construction of the box-for-the-coupler is simple and fully explained in the drawing.

When the primary is wound it should be tacked with 1/2 inch brads to the disc at the back and to the edge of the hole cut in the front end of the box.

Purchase, or make, a slider and also making a loop long enough to reach two inches out of the front of the tube. Continue to wind the wire and loop through the holes until hole No. 12 is reached.

Scratch the insulation off the wire at the end of each loop and fasten the wire under the nut of the tap in the front disc, or solder it to the end of the proper track, if the brass-headed tacks are used.

The location of the taps will have to be spaced off on the disc that forms the front of the secondary tube. Holes should be bored for the taps. A hole must also be bored in the centre of the disc for the switch.

Fasten one end of the other flexible wire to the switch post inside the tube and thread it, with the other flexible wire, through hole A. The front disc is now fastened securely to the secondary tube with 3/4 inch round-head screws. It may easily be removed if repairs must be made on wires inside.

Scratch the insulation off the wire coil on the primary tube directly under the slider rod so that the slider will make a good contact.

In "hooking up" the instrument, remember the 1/2 shown in the diagram of the coupler in the upper right-hand corner of the picture, is connected to the aerial. X is connected to the grid of the switch of the secondary is connected to the condenser and the other flexible wire from hole 1 to the detector.

To improve the looks of your coupler you may stain it mahogany, varnish it and then rub it down, or enamel it black.

The Admiral liner Silver State is expected in quarantine early on Tuesday morning from ports in the Orient.

The Empress of Australia is a new ship, having been in the build- ing hands at the outbreak of the war.

The Montcalm is about half a mile from the shore, and although the season of high tides is passed, it is expected that on account of the strong easterly wind prevailing the vessel will be driven at least one foot higher than usual at this time of the year.

Seattle, June 3.—The steamer Blue Triangle, of the Navas line, arrived here from the east coast yesterday with a miscellaneous freight cargo.

Vernon Smith, solo violinist. Mr. Smith will also be associated with Miss Lillian Parritt in a concerto for two violins. With these well-known artists the choir has arranged an interesting programme, and after many weeks of hard practicing under the leadership of Fred Parritt will undoubtedly give a good account of themselves. The proceeds will be in aid of the pipe organ which the church has recently acquired.

B.C. Dramatic School Programme.—The Women's Canadian Club, in its meeting in the Empress Hotel next Tuesday will be entertained by students of the B.C. Dramatic School in a special programme of dramatics for the occasion. Among well-known artists who will take part is Mrs. Lochfort.

Cabaret Concert.—The Colwood Golf and Country Club is issuing invitations for a cabaret concert which will be held at the Empress Hotel on Tuesday evening next at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Jack Rihet is convener of the reception committee and Mrs. Charles E. Wilson of the concert programme.

Police Warn Speeders.—Complaining of the prevalence of speeding on the Island Highway the provincial police issued a general warning to motorists. The police, it is stated, do not wish to use traps for speeders, but the practice has become so general that every motorist is advised to put a stop to excessive speeding. No less than five motorists were charged with speeding during the week. In issuing the warning Officer Wilkie, of the provincial police, points out that recently a boy was run over at Colwood and left lying in the centre of the road with a broken leg, while the automobile speeded away. The driver of that car is still being sought by the police and the search will not be relinquished.

Entertainment at Garden City.—James Bryant, assisted by six members of the Three K's Vaudeville Party, gave an entertainment at the Garden City Methodist Schoolroom, which was a great success. Mr. Bryant acted as chairman, and in his genial, jolly and humorous way soon won over the audience. Arthur Hole opened the entertainment with popular songs, and won much applause. "Yorkie" in his ventriloquist act, newly furnished with jokes, stories and the wit that is Yorkie's. He is one of the most welcome entertainers, his twenty minutes being one of the delights on any programme on which he appears. Another feature was the appearance of Bob Miller in comic songs. The Three K's also gave a little comedy skit, "Shipwrecked," with Al Cox, George Allan and Yorkie presenting his humorous and comedy. Between these features Mr. Bryant presented four reels of motion pictures, and his principal screen attraction, the "City of Sunshine," soon won the admiration of the audience.

George I. Warren Reports Sidney-Anacortes Ferry Success

A large party of golfers for the tournament in Victoria came over from the American side via the Victoria-Anacortes motor car ferry route and brought their cars with them, according to Publicity Commissioner George I. Warren, who, in company with Alderman A. E. Todd and Captain Howard Payne of the United States Shipping Board, motor-cruised up from Seattle over the Pacific Highway to Anacortes and crossed over on the ferry.

Mr. Warren has had a busy week on the other side of the line and he arranged for a big spread of publicity. It was through his efforts that the Portlands, Oregonians gave a full page to colored feature along with respecting Victoria and the surrounding district in last Sunday's issue. He has talked with all the hotel managers in Seattle and they are all keen on calling Victoria and the Island to the attention of their guests who are on tour of the Pacific Northwest. One party alone will consist of thirty people and they will come here under the personal direction of "Quigley's" for a two-day visit.

Mr. Warren also arranged for the distribution of ten thousand descriptive leaflets through various channels in Seattle featuring the attractions of Victoria and the Island. He has also arranged for the distribution of three thousand pamphlets to the visiting school teachers today, and each of the teachers will also be supplied with a programme of the day's proceedings.

The marking of the highways with suitable sign posts along the route to the new ferry will also be undertaken at once. Mr. Warren reports, the signs having been made for this purpose.

COMMONS SPEEDS UP ITS WORK

Although the agricultural season is backward generally this year and production will run not more than 70 per cent of normal, the rich Comox Valley and the surrounding district will produce and export about 25 per cent more than last year, according to R. U. Hurford, manager of the Comox Creamery, who is in Victoria to-day.

The reason for this is the increased area under production this year, due to the increase in the number of sets.

This year there will be marketed through the creamery which markets the standard products 250 tons of super-standard potatoes, 25 tons of strawberries and more than 400,000 pounds of butter. The butter production last year was 250,000 pounds. Last year's increase in production over 1920 was 8 per cent.

Mr. Hurford to-day was making arrangements here for the installation of a modern jamming plant at the creamery to handle the surplus berry crop. He was also interviewing Cecil Tice, head of the Government's potato department, presenting facts to show that the Comox has now eclipsed Ashcroft as the standard potato district of the Province.

GREATER DEMAND FORCES PRICES UP

The increased consumption of tea in 1921, during which year, by agreement, the tea growers of Ceylon and India had curtailed production, forced the price of tea steadily upwards to the present abnormally high level. The lowering of the duty in England will mean still greater demand, and authorities on tea tell us that still higher prices may be expected.

Hurt at Mill.—Making the second accident of a similar nature this week, Shue Ken, a Chinaman, was removed to the Jubilee Hospital yesterday evening with two fingers of his right hand severed. The accident took place at the Cameron lumber mill, where the Chinaman was employed. On Tuesday evening of this week another employee lost three fingers in a similar manner.

Continuous Round of Golf Next Week

Hundreds of Golfers Will Tee Off on Monday In Qualifying Round For P. N. W. Championship; Putting and Driving Competitions and Team Matches Will Keep Everyone Busy For Six Days; Impossible to Predict Winners

Victoria is in for one continuous round of golf next week. Commencing just after daybreak on Monday morning several hundred players will begin to tee off at the Colwood and Oak Bay links in search of the Pacific Northwest amateur golf championship, which will be finally decided on Saturday.

The golfing spirit has been spread about the city this week by the staging of the open golf championship at Colwood. Golfing enthusiasts have been watching with interest the progress of the open championship and have been impressed with the splendid playing of Willie Black, the Colwood pro. Willie has a host of supporters who are hoping that he will succeed in winning the crown. Willie is an unostentatious pro and has never wallowed in the sea of praise and publicity that has been the lot of his brother Dave, of the Shaughnessy club of Vancouver.

The open championship will be decided to-day and the links will be reserved for the amateurs from Monday till Saturday next. The entry list is one of the largest in the history of the organization and the play is expected to be exceptionally keen.

Using Two Links.
On Monday the qualifying round, thirty-six holes, medal play, will be staged at the Oak Bay and Colwood links. Players with a P. N. W. handicap of less than 18-handicap will play at Colwood while those with more than a 9-handicap will play at Oak Bay.

Besides the regular play for the championship, both ladies and men, there will be various flights, putting and driving competitions and a team match for the J. A. Davis Jr. Trophy. Each club will nominate before the commencement of the qualifying round four men. The two teams having the lowest aggregate scores at the conclusion of the amateur championship qualifying round will compete on Tuesday at Colwood in a four-ball best-ball match. The winning team will play at Colwood while those with more than a 9-handicap will play at Oak Bay.

The winners to date are as follows: 1916—Waverley Country Club, at Spokane. 1917—Portland Golf Club, at Portland. 1918—Seattle Golf Club, at Seattle. 1919—Jefferson Park Golf Club, at Spokane. 1920—Waverley Country Club, at Vancouver. 1921—Waverley Country Club, at Portland.

Committee Which Did Things.
The tournament committee consists of James M. Wood as chairman and Biggerstaff Wilson as vice-chairman with the following departmental chairman: Ways and means, Reginald Genn; greens committee, J. S. Sayer; house committee, W. S. Terry; hotels and transportation, T. S. McPherson; competition, John A. Ribbet; ladies department, Miss M. L. Seward and publicity, H. P. Hodges.

Monday, June 5.
At Colwood Golf and Country Club, Pacific Northwest Amateur Championship—Qualifying round, 36-hole, medal play, full handicaps, 15 to qualify. Flights of 16. Eligibility: P. N. G. A. rating of more than 9-handicap.

Tuesday, June 6.
At Colwood Golf and Country Club, Pacific Northwest Amateur Championship. First round, 18-hole matches. First flight, 18-hole matches. Second and additional flights matches 18 hole.

Wednesday, June 7.
At Colwood, Pacific Northwest Amateur Championship. Second round, 36-hole matches. First flight, first round, 36-hole matches. Second and additional flights; second round, 18-hole matches.

Champions of Pacific North-West Golf Association Since Year 1906

Records of the Pacific Northwest Golf Association have been kept since 1906 and the list shows that in that year C. K. Magill and Miss Combe, both of Victoria, won the men's amateur and ladies' golf championships respectively. Competitions were held previous to that time but no records are available.

Next week the men and ladies will compete for the titles at the Oak Bay and Colwood links. This year will find the largest list of entries in the history of the association.

The champions of the Northwest since 1906 are as follows:

Young Wins Bout.
Vancouver, B.C., June 3.—"Billy" Young, of North Vancouver, was given the decision over Walter Evans, of Seattle, here last night after six rounds of excellent boxing. Young had much the better of the fighting on points, but was unable to do more than outbox Evans. Evans put up a game fight and was never in serious trouble. They are lightweights. Joe Newman, of Vancouver, was given the decision over "Young" Boyd, of Bellingham, after four rounds. They are lightweights. "Young" Stanton, of Vancouver, was given the decision over "Young" Hingham, in the second round of a scheduled four-round bout. They are heavyweights. Stanton was much the better boxer and landed at will. Plaster, of Seattle, was given the decision over "Young" Fisher, of Seattle, after six rounds of excellent boxing. Young had much the better of the fighting on points, but was unable to do more than outbox Evans. Evans put up a game fight and was never in serious trouble. They are lightweights. ## LACROSSE CHAMPS EXPECTING A WIN

Mann Cup-holders Meet Vancouver at Stadium To-night; Hat for Winning Goal

"Everything in the garden is lovely" is the way Fred Kroeger, captain of the Mann Cup holders expressed himself this morning in regard to the championship lacrosse game which will be staged at the Stadium this evening at 7 o'clock. Fred says that everyone is ready for a hard game and is primed to win. The Capitals are anxious to get into the win column and believe that once they get there they will be hard to stop. The Capitals will field the strongest side that has taken the field this season. Vancouver may expect to win a lot of soft wins in store for them.

Here's Your Chance.
George Strath is so confident that Victoria will win that he is going to let the man who scores the winning goal walk into his store to buy a hat to wear to the game. It was pointed out to George that probably Victoria might win by two or three goals whereas he promptly replied that there were lots of hats in his store. A nice caddy will be something for the local players to strive for and there should be no lack of them. The game will start at 7 o'clock.

Look for Big Crowd.
The officials of the Victoria Lacrosse Club are looking for a bumper crowd to-night. The local team will be picked from the following: Simpson, the Dakers, Kroeger, McNamee, Taylor, Redgrave, Menzies, Steel, Ross, McInnes, Humber, Brynjolfson, Mitchell, McGregor, Johnson, Norton and McClure.

Mrs. Peacock and Mrs. Beamish Meet in Tennis Finals
Chilwick, Eng., June 3.—Mrs. Peacock, former women's tennis champion, defeated Mrs. Beamish, a British player, who plays today for the Middlesex women's singles championship. Mrs. Peacock yesterday, defeating Miss Elizabeth Ryan of San Francisco in the semi-final round, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

Young Wins Bout.
Vancouver, B.C., June 3.—"Billy" Young, of North Vancouver, was given the decision over Walter Evans, of Seattle, here last night after six rounds of excellent boxing. Cricket Match is Arranged Monday
P. Burns' cricket team, the Shamrocks, will play the Wednesday League leaders, Broad Street, on Monday evening at Beacon Hill Park, commencing at 6.30 o'clock. Capt. Dunn of the Shamrocks feels confident that his team can take the measure of the Broad Street eleven. On this occasion Fletcher and Cowan, of Broad Street, will play for the Shamrocks. Great enthusiasm has been displayed over this match, which should prove a close one. The Shamrocks will be as follows: G. Silburn, D. Fletcher, W. Cowan, D. Donaldson, A. Sedgely, R. Frith, W. P. Roberts, R. Dodds, T. I. Dunn, W. S. Kirchin and E. Adams.

Miller and Sisler Are in Merry Race

Philadelphia Outfielder is Hitting Ball Hard and Often, and is Right on Tail of Sisler—Hank Gowdy Leads National With Hornsby Fourth

Chicago, June 3.—Ed "Bing" Miller, the slugging outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, is giving George Sisler, the St. Louis star, a hot race for the leadership in batting and home-run hitting in the American League. Miller is leading with an average of .425. The batting mark of the St. Louis star was given a setback in the series between the White Sox and Browns, but the St. Louis favorite appears to have again struck his stride. In the last thirty-one times at bat he has driven out fourteen hits, giving him a total of twenty-five or more runs. Miller is right on his heels with an average of .387.

Williams Knocks His Fourteenth.
St. Louis Slugger is Once Again in Lead for Homerun Honors This Season

New York, June 3.—The Pittsburgh Pirates who have been slugging match for the world's champion Giants for some time, had another chance to go into the National lead to-day by winning and if New York yesterday to Boston. The Giants dropped another to the Boston Braves, yesterday, 7 to 3, the victors bunching their hits to better advantage. The Pirates were idle and gained a half game leaving only a single game between them and the top.

Best Base-Stealer as Well.
Sisler is giving the base-stealers the dust, his nearest rival being his team-mate, Williams. Sisler has stolen eighteen bases, while Williams has ten. Other leading batters for twenty-five or more games are: Speaker, Cleveland, .383; Cobb, Detroit, .381; Witt, New York, .378; O'Neil, Cleveland, .377; Schanz, New York, .364; McManus, St. Louis, .352; Severid, St. Louis, .331; Judd, Washington, .330; Hellmuth, Detroit, .329; Blue, Detroit, .325.

Rads Have Field Day.
Cincinnati had a field day at bat against four Chicago pitchers, knocking out 18 hits, for a 11-7 victory. Cavney and Duncan led the attack with home runs and stole one base.

Fred Kroeger.

The second practice of the Five C's Colts will be on Monday at 6.30 o'clock at Oak Bay. Added interest will be given to the next few practices in view of the approach of the Inter-City Junior match on July 1. There is no doubt that the selection committee will keep an eye on the most promising of the Five C's Colts with the view of including some of them on the team to represent Victoria against the Mainland City Club. All boys over 14 who wish to improve their cricket should take advantage of the opportunity and link up with the Colts on Monday.

Gordon Clark is High School King
Distance Runner Defeated Kenny and Wade for Athletic Championship

It was more or less of a surprise that Gordon Clark should yesterday win the Victoria High School athletic championship by a safe margin. Clark, a sophomore, defeated Fred Kenny and Edward Wade. Undoubtedly Kenny is the best man the school has in the sprints, and Wade is a close second, but the high jump Clark set in the half mile and mile events showed the splendid form that the runner has attained, and his record is a good one.

BIOGRAPHY OF DUNLOP IN TABLOID FORM

1888. J. B. Dunlop made his first two air tires in Belfast, February 25.

1889. William Hume, a Belfast cyclist, was the first rider to win a race on a Dunlop pneumatic tire. He beat the bunch in Belfast in May.

Pneumatic Tyre Company formed in November in Dublin by J. B. Dunlop, Harvey Du Cros, R. J. McCreedy, and others, with $25,000 nominal capital.

1890. R. J. McCreedy won the first race in England in which a rider used the Dunlop pneumatic tire.

1891. J. B. Dunlop presents Pneumatic Tyre Co. with a portrait bust of himself and his signature to be used as a trademark.

1892. Branch of the Pneumatic Tyre Co., England, opened in the United States at Belleville, N. J., under the name of American Dunlop Tire Co.

1893. J. B. Dunlop resigned as a director of the Pneumatic Tyre Company (England).

1894. Branch of the American Dunlop Tire Co. opened in Toronto at 35-37 Lombard Street.

First Dunlop trophy race held on Kingston Road, Toronto, September 29.

1895. Mr. J. Weston, General manager, joined the American Dunlop Tire Company, Toronto.

1896. The firm title, Dunlop Rubber Company, registered in England. The company had previously operated under the name of Pneumatic Tyre Co. Branch of American Dunlop Tire Co. opened at Montreal, Que.

1897. Dunlop trademark "Two Hands" registered for tires and rims July 3. Branch of American Dunlop Tire Co. opened at Winnipeg, Man.

1898. E. B. Ryckman, K.C. M.P., secures Dunlop rights for all America, by purchasing the control in the Belleville, N. J. company held by Dunlop Rubber Co., England.

1899. Organization of the Dunlop Tire Company, Toronto, superseding the American Dunlop Tire Co. Mr. Warren Y. Soper elected president, Mr. E. B. Ryckman, K.C. M.P., vice-president, and Mr. J. Weston, general manager, joined the Canadian Dunlop Company.

1903. The Dunlop Company evolved the idea of stamping a number of coins with their trademark—the "Two Hands." Whenever the coin was returned with the trademark on it, the successful holder of same was given an honorarium of one dollar. The idea created so much interest at the time that it is claimed the Canadian Government shut down on it and put through a statute making it impossible to get up such a scheme in the future. Yet, eight years after the discontinuance of the contest, the Dunlop Company received a letter from a man in Montreal, accompanied by a five cent piece. The letter said that he understood the Dunlop people were redeeming all these marked coins.

Branch of Dunlop Tire Co., Ltd., opened at St. John, N. B.

1904. The Dunlop Company made a test of trademark strength. Letters were mailed from Mexico and far-away points in the United States and Canada. These letters contained no other address than the word "Toronto." At the top left-hand corner was a small pair of hands. Everyone of these letters reached the Dunlop offices, Booth Avenue.

1905. Dunlop Company erected first factory with floor area of 35,000 square feet on the four acres of ground, Queen Street and Booth Avenue, Toronto.

Present Canadian company title—Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, adopted.

Dunlop (Canada) brings out the first "straight-side" automobile tire.

1908. Uptown branch of Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Ltd., opened at Toronto, Ont.

1909. Branches of Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, opened at Vancouver and Calgary.

1910. Branch of Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, opened at London, Ont.

1911. The transcontinental bicycle record made by Thompson Clark saw Dunlop tires used as a complete equipment, one set doing duty over the entire journey.

Branch of Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, opened at Hamilton, Ont.

Dunlop traction tread introduced to Canadian tire-dom.

1912. Dunlop Canada factory addition this year were alone nearly as great as the entire floor area of seven years previous.

Dunlop traction tread auto tires make a transcontinental record. They were equipped to a car that blazed the trail from Halifax to Vancouver in forty-nine days, forty-one of which the party were actually travelling.

The first staging of a combined automobile, motorcycle and bicycle meet in Canada was engineered by the Dunlop Company, Exhibition Track, Toronto.

Mr. A. E. King, assistant general manager, joined the Canadian Dunlop Company.

Branches of Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, opened at Ottawa, Regina, Victoria and Edmonton.

1913. J. B. Dunlop visited the United States, and in a number of speeches corrected some erroneous impressions regarding his tire invention. It seems his boy was not delicate as commonly supposed; therefore, the father's delving into ways and means to get a "softer" riding surface was really because his boy was well and wanted "a little speed."

Dunlop Canada Mutual Benefit Society organized February 3.

Dunlop-Canada Amateur Association organized in August.

The first moving picture of the rubber industry in Canada was put on by the Dunlop Company.

Branch of Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, opened at Saskatoon.

1915. Factory additions, Dunlop Canada, were just double those of 1912.

It is estimated that approximately ten thousand people attended the big Dunlop meet at the Exhibition Track, Toronto, in the Fall. The entire proceeds were donated to the Canadian Red Cross Society and the entire expenses borne by the Dunlop Company.

1916. At a rally of old-time Irish cyclists (Donnybrook Bridge to the Scalp, Ennisberry) August 20, J. B. Dunlop mounted on a cycle, fitted with the original Dunlop tyres, headed the procession.

The two most expensive automobiles ever seen at a New York auto show were both completely equipped with Canadian Dunlop traction tread tires.

One was a $25,000 De Dion Bouton; the other a $20,000 English Daimler.

Branch of Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, opened at Halifax.

1919. Dunlop (Canada) commences the manufacture of cord tires.

1920. Group insurance for employees inaugurated by Dunlop Tire & Rubber Co., Toronto, in February.

The death is reported in May of Mr. J. B. Dunlop, Jr., who rode the first set of pneumatic tires made by his father.

New $2,000,000 Dunlop factory, Toronto, ready for occupation in September.

1921. Aug.-Sept., John H. Cocking, Vancouver, made a trip from that city to Elmira, N. Y., (and later Toronto)

"Hair cut please," said the customer, dropping into the barber's chair. He had that tired look that stamped him as an over-worked editor.

With a sudden attention to his job, he broke off short and said:

"Like it short, sir?"

"Yes, please," answered the customer, wearily. "A brief synopsis will do."

without ever having to repump his Dunlop cord tires. Total mileage covered 5,169—1,009 miles further than a coast-to-coast trip represents.

The largest crowd which ever attended a bicycle road race staged entirely on the road—approximately 20,000 people—witnessed the 25th Annual Dunlop Trophy Race, Toronto, October 15.

John Boyd Dunlop, inventor of the pneumatic tire, died in his 82nd year in Dublin, October 24. He was born in Dreghorn, Ayrshire, Scotland, Feb. 5, 1840, migrated to Belfast, 1867, and there was successful in establishing himself as a veterinary surgeon.

DUNLOP CORD TIRES FABRIC

Making "Mile-ionaires"

These are great days for the motor car user—in a tire sense. Your dollar never before bought as much. Your speedometer never before registered as much. Your repair kit never was as idle. All because Dunlop Cord Tires came and ushered in a new era. Five years ago you paid half as much again for the same size tire; ten years ago you paid twice as much. Prices have been tumbling. Quality has been mounting. One time we thought 3,500 was mileage to boast of; to-day we may run into half a dozen "25,000 Milers" in a forenoon. "Dunlop did it," says one enthusiast. The "Two Hands" are making us Mile-ionaires," says another, and so on.

The Sign "Mileage Wanted" is now changed to "Mileage Supplied"—use Dunlop Cords.

DUNLOP TIRES MAKE ANOTHER SERVICE RECORD

Transcontinental Journey Re- calls Feat of 1912

A record of 5,169 miles of actual motoring on a trip across the continent from Vancouver to Toronto including a number of detours, with the Dunlop tires used on the journey in almost as good condition on arrival in Toronto as when the car left Vancouver is the latest Dunlop tire triumph, according to an announcement made by the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited.

The trip was made by John H. Cocking, of Vancouver, last Fall solely for pleasure. Prior to leaving he purchased a set of Dunlop Cord Tires. The course was through the United States almost entirely and there were considerable detours, some of which were quite lengthy and hard going. Nearly 500 miles were covered by Mr. Cocking in looking around New York State.

The trip made by Mr. Cocking recalls vividly to the minds of Victorians the famous Haney-Wilby trip on Dunlop tires in 1912, a journey of 4,169 miles from Halifax to Vancouver. On that occasion the event was celebrated in a big way in Victoria and throughout Vancouver Island, the visitors having been taken to Port Alberni, where the farthest west post of the Canadian Highway was planted.

H. W. ARMITAGE

Victoria Manager of the Dunlop Rubber Company

"You will be pleased to learn that the Dunlop Cord Tires I put on the Dodge in Vancouver stood all the gruelling road and climatic conditions of my Transcontinental trip most admirably, and, further, that they reached Toronto with a supply of good Vancouver air in them," Mr. Cocking wrote the company.

He relates that shortly after leaving Seattle we entered the famous Squamish Pass. The road ascended here to an altitude of 3,610 feet. The gradients experienced were extremely short and steep to a degree. The roadbed was strewn with loose rocks, as it was under construction at different points.

In his diary of the trip Mr. Cocking refers to numerous other places where the traveling was extremely rough and hard on cars and particularly on the tires.

Local Manager Armitage of the Dunlop View Street offices, has the following to say regarding Dunlop tires:

A taxi-driver in Hamilton was so busy piling up mileage that he didn't know his tires were doing likewise. When he got to figuring out his profits for the year he was amazed to note there was not a solitary tire purchased in many months. Here's his story (you can be sure that another "Dunlop" took the place of the tire referred to):—

"I have just returned to you a 37x5 Dunlop Traction Cord Casing which has gone 24,500 miles. The casing was used on the rear wheel of one of my Cadillac cars, covering 11,000 miles, and was then transferred to the front wheel and covered 13,500 miles after the change was made. I consider this exceptional mileage, indeed, and, needless to say, am more than pleased with the service rendered."

Here is another recommendation which comes from Vancouver:

"As you know, we have used Dunlop Cord Tires exclusively on our cars since they were placed on the market over two years ago. This is not due to any preference on our part for any particular tire, but is simply a matter of economy of operation. Until quite recently the roads over which we had to travel were undoubtedly the worst in the vicinity of Vancouver—Vancouver to Woodward's Landing. The manner in which your tires stood up over these roads we consider nothing short of phenomenal, and with the recent improvements on the road we believe your tires will give us a mileage thousands of miles in advance of what is generally considered good tire mileage."

LOOK TO DUNLOP FOR "CORD" SUPREMACY

A man who owns three cars and who has driven an automobile almost since the inception of the "gas buggy" remarked to one of our directors the other day:

"I have been getting such dandy service from Dunlop Tires that I think your claims about mileage are far too modest. As far as my experience goes, you cannot talk too big."

1922, 1921, 1920, 1919—Dunlop Cord Tires came into existence in 1919, and the transformation in mileage year by year that followed their use by motorists has been most striking. 1920 surpassed 1919 to be, in turn, surpassed by 1921; and here's 1922 producing testimonials like this:

"I have just returned to you a 37x5 Dunlop Traction Cord Casing which has gone 24,500 miles. The casing was used on the rear wheel of one of my Cadillac cars, covering 11,000 miles, and was then transferred to the front wheel and covered 13,500 miles after the change was made. I consider this exceptional mileage, indeed, and, needless to say, am more than pleased with the service rendered."

It is important to note that the tire referred to above was on a livery car, and, therefore, could not possibly have been subjected to a more severe test.

CORDOVA DISTRICT PROVIDES MILES OF ATTRACTIVE SCENERY

Excellent Camping Sites; Marine and Country Drive

The Cordova Bay district opens up to the eager tourist who is ever desirous to see fresh scenery an altogether different route than that supplied by any other drive around the city. A combined marine and country drive can be taken by following the coast line along Dallas road then connecting with Shelbourne street which carries the tourist through six miles of beautiful agricultural districts and small fruit growing areas.

With the completion of the six miles straight course along Memorial avenue Mount Douglas looms up and affords many shady nooks and haunts sure to be of attraction to the traveler. Here there are many trails leading to the summit which overlooks a wide expanse of country. A commanding view is obtainable from this point of vantage, beautiful spots being discernible in the distance. To the northeast is the Elk lake, while in the opposite direction a wide expanse of the straits can be viewed. In the other direction beautiful fertile farm lands meet the eye and prove very pleasing. Running in a detour around the west side of the hill is the Cordova Bay road connecting with Shelbourne street. Just half a mile after the turning off from Shelbourne street one comes upon a delightful camping ground with every facility a traveler could expect. The camping site is situated in the Mount Douglas Park in close proximity to the bathing beach. Leaving this pleasant location a wonderful drive is available through some three miles of beautiful woodlands through which now and then one can get a glimpse of the water of the straits and the nearby islands. At the end of this journey we approach what is commonly known as Cordova Bay. Here is a mile of very sand to supply the wants and desires of recreation facilities, camping sites and other attractions. The Mount Douglas camping site is by far the best for the tourist. The Cordova Bay road runs right through to Sayward then commences a steep winding climb till it comes to the summit, and on to the East Saanich road. In turning down to this highway one gets a splendid closeup view of the Elk lake and the Dominion Observatory which is on the other side of the lake.

JUNE IS MONTH WHEN OUTDOOR APPEAL IS KEEN

Vacation Plans the Chief Topic Now

June days are the good old outdoor days when the human inhabitants of the earth give way to the desire to associate with the birds and the flowers, and the confines of the house are exchanged for the wider range of forest and stream. Fire-places and ranges are abandoned for the camp fire and the moonlight. Long after the winter's trudge the tale of its appeal and the shingle roof gives place to the canopy of stars, while, seated around the glowing embers, the truthful discourses of Izak Walton relate their adventures and misadventures. Even in the days when transportation was so difficult there was no obstacle that could prevent those who desired getting back to nature from doing so. Such trivial details as packing a week or two's supplies to camp over rough and rutty roads, perhaps for many miles, with the aid of a team of horses and a wagon merely added zest to the affair. Those were the days when the Summer holiday was discussed regularly at the family tea table for many weeks prior to the event and even father's recollections of the things that happened and the thing he said—under his breath—failed to dampen the anticipatory pleasure with which the plans were discussed.

Wide Choice Now. Nowadays things are different and it is merely a matter of choosing one of a hundred or so charming spots where the family and friends should spend the vacation. This is one time in the year when the children can put their hand right in anything or everything that is needed around the house. Cupboards and boxes are ransacked and "in a jiffy" every item is checked off and piled in a heap ready to be tucked away conveniently in the motor car or launch as the case may be, just as soon as dad gives the word to start. Splendid highways and charming waterways lead to the most delightful and secluded spots. Little time is lost and much pleasure is gained from the journey to and from camp.

It is doubtful if any place in the world offers greater attractions for outdoor life than Vancouver Island. With its miles upon miles of coast line presenting one succession of sheltered coves and inlets, all available by motor car or boat, there is plenty of room for everybody and there is no reason whatever why anyone should stay at home during the Summer vacation.

Under Canvass. Considering the facilities for camping in and around Victoria and in Vancouver Island generally surprise has been expressed that comparatively few of the local people take to tents for the Summer. The advantages here are such that it is quite easy for the business man to look after his daily work in the city and spend his evenings by the sea-

PUBLICITY WANTED

Arriving in this city in preparation for a tour of the Island several motor parties from Portland, Oregon, were surprised to learn that a motor car ferry is operating between Sidney and Anacortes. This facility, it appears, has obtained little reference in Oregonian cities as yet, and few residents in that State have heard of the ferry service, except where they have come in contact with Seattle motorists or otherwise by chance. That there was great need of adequate publicity on this feature of the northern tourist route was the opinion of the visitors.

In addition to the local beaches and resorts where Summer life may be enjoyed in this way there are the various up-Island retreats to which the camp may be transferred for the vacation weeks, when the business man and his family get away altogether from the humdrum of city life.

It is on such outings as the latter that the real benefits of the Summer cutting are realized. The scene is changed and there is that grand and glorious feeling of being away from all worry and responsibility. A dispatch from Moscow says the Council of Commissars has restored the right of private ownership of automobiles in Russia, and it is announced that the importation of motor vehicles and accessories will be permitted through the Foreign Trade Commissariat.

Instead of having a team of horses or mules drag the carcass of the dead bull out of the arena, an American-made tractor is now employed for this work at bull fights at Chihuahua, Mexico. The entries and exits are made with ease, and time is saved in clearing the ring for the entry of the next bull.

Don't Throw Away Tires or Tubes Until We Tell You They're Not Worth Repairing

MANY tires and tubes do not get a fair chance to deliver all the miles of service that they should give. They develop a minor fault and are allowed to lie around the garage until you find time to bring them to town for repairs.

Give us an opportunity to doctor those unlucky tires and tubes just as soon as they meet with a mishap. You'll find that it will pay you—and it gives you an opportunity to save you many extra dollars.

OVERLAND CLOSED CARS ARE POPULAR

Has Many Advantages, Thos. Plimley Points Out

The closed car is becoming very popular with particular motorists, according to Thomas Plimley, local Overland distributor, who reports that in Toronto during the past three months no less than 163 closed cars were sold.

Mr. Plimley reports a big demand for this type of car in Victoria and he has placed several of them just recently. In all cases the owners were greatly pleased with their purchase.

Blazing sun and dusty roads have no terrors for the owners of closed cars. With the top protection and the advantage of glass-paneled sides throughout the owner has the double advantage of being able to see all there is to be seen minus any inconvenience. If the car gets too stuffy it is an easy matter to open the windows, or for that matter to keep them open at all times except when it rains, of course, but it is very rare that the car gets too close because excellent ventilation arrangements are provided.

The closed cars have graceful lines. The beauty of the design of the Overland closed cars is enhanced by the perfect finish. The interior finishing and the upholstery add to the comfort and elegance of the car.

Speaking of the automobile business generally, Mr. Plimley is quite pleased with the prospects for this season. He is also distributor for the famous Packard, which is also a great favorite with automobile users.

The Ford Motor Company will begin late in the Summer to supply its one-ton truck, equipped with body complete, as well as the stripped chassis. The design of the body has not yet been definitely determined, but it will be a combination type practical for several uses. It is reported that Ford will enter the three-ton truck field late in the Summer.

DOMINION GARAGE GETS CAR AGENCY

The Jewett Latest Addition to Local Motordom

The Jewett is the latest passenger car arrival in Victoria and the Dominion Garage, Courtney and Gordon Streets, has secured the local agency, Ernie Eve announces.

A demonstration of the Jewett this morning developed some wonderful traits in this new car. In the first place it combines great power with a minimum of weight in the chassis. The steepest hills have no terrors for the Jewett, said Mr. Eve, who was delighted to show just what the car could really do on some of the short steep hills in the vicinity.

A few years ago it was thought that it would hardly be possible to introduce any further improvements in the modern car but the Jewett proves the fallacy of this idea. Every section of the mechanical end of the car is simplicity and convenience itself. Mr. Eve pointed out a number of improvements of value.

The lines of the Jewett are very graceful and the upholstery and finishing are of the very best. "But it is the price that goes with the quality and performance of the Jewett that will prove the big attraction to the local buyers," said Mr. Eve.

The Dominion Garage reports that business is good and prospects for the 1922 season are very hopeful.

George Lesser, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was recently sentenced to a term of ten years in Sing Sing for stealing an automobile.

AUTOMOBILE IS THE TRUE FRIEND OF PROGRESS

Value of Necessity, Its Convenience and Comfort, Realized

Every time you see an automobile, pause and remember you are seeing an asset to the community. It represents home-making, a vast pay-roll, the upkeep of thousands of families, and the pro-creator of industry in every conceivable line, that has to do with money, that is made and spent here.

Eronously, by people that know nothing about it, the auto is regarded as a sort of plaything, a pleasant affair to whizz one about, and a gimcrack, designed to startle pedestrians and carry around opulent folk who are too lazy to walk. All of which is an ignorant misunderstanding of the truth about the automobile. When one really understands the auto, and realizes its sterling value as a necessity, convenience and comfort, then is its true worth ascertained. Like the testing and proving of friendships, the automobile, as the truest friend of progress, needs knowing before it is really understood.

Motor Herald's Progress.
In the back woods, they do not have autos. Neither do they have libraries. Or real music. Or the latest adjuncts to civilization. In the darkest regions of the jungles, they do not have autos, either, but prefer to trek, barefooted, over thorny trails and worship man-made deities, while they subsist upon their fellow flesh. In dark days, and through the trend of feudalism, the motive power was the horse for the baron and the clogs for the yokel. In those days the mere prophecy of the horseless carriage would establish eligibility for the village stocks or the village ducking-stool as a penalty for wisdom or witchcraft. Darkness, ignorance, primitiveness, are all on the side of the people that "have no use for the auto," while intelligence, progress and civilized advancement are the forces that make the motor go, and do its part in mankind's progression. For the same reason that the best, the most intelligent, the most advanced folk now own and operate autos, it stands to reason that there is a sensible cause for the popularity of the motor car. Savages do not motor. The most progressive people do. There is the difference! Draw between the extremes, and see who stand in the middle. They are the non-autolists; people who are conditioned to be in that class, or others who prefer it that way.

Taxicab owners operating in New York, Buffalo, and Rochester will be required after July 1 to file with the state tax commission a personal bond with two sureties, a surety bond or an insurance policy for $2,500 to insure payment of any judgment recovered for death or injury to persons or property caused in operation of the machine. The bond must contain a provision for continuing liability notwithstanding any recovery.

on time

How many times would you have missed your boat if you had had to stop on the way to change tires? As you sit by the rail as the steamer pulls away, you suddenly note a wild-eyed, dishevelled, human being tear his way through the crowd and rush to the dock's edge—too late. The poor man had to fix a tire on the way to the boat. "On time" is the record of the business man who trusts his schedule to the unfailing dependability of "Gutta Percha" Tires

PRICE: The cost of a tire is what you spend in repairs, in lost time and mileage shortage, added to the first price. "Gutta Percha" Tires are high grade "standard" tires and the mileage they render makes them the cheapest tire to buy.

DRURY LANE REBUILT AT $750,000 COST

NEW 500 SEATS

Statues of Great Actors Still in Niches, However

"Midnight Follies" Brings Back Interest to Night Life

Alhambra Again Music Hall, But Soda Fountain Replaces Bar

London, June 3.—There was a private view this afternoon of the reconstructed interior of Drury Lane Theatre. Since it opened during the Restoration Drury Lane has been three times rebuilt. This time the shell has been left, but a year has been spent taking out the whole of the interior and remodelling it from top to bottom.

Old frequenters will sentimentally deplore the loss of familiar landmarks, but the characteristic entrance and the noble sweeping staircases have been left much as they were except for a general brightening. The statues of the great actors are still in their niches, and the mellow painting by Romney glows on one hundred and fifty thousand pounds has been spent on the new auditorium—about the total cost of the theatre when it was opened a little more than a century ago. The old-fashioned tiers and massive circular walls have been replaced, and within the widened space, which is now square instead of round, has been erected a three-tier house balcony supported on steel frames and cross girders built into the walls. The result is a much more spacious-looking theatre, and it holds far more seats.

The scheme of decoration is thoroughly fashionable with its combinations of neutral grey, Italian pink, Wedgwood bronze and brass gilt.

Jazzing Up at Midnight

The entertainment of "The Midnight Follies" at the Hotel Metropole has survived its troubled infancy and begun to develop into a justly popular and profitable series of official entertainments. The leading strings of official limitation are still there, but they are not obtrusive, and if one omits to look for them, and omits to suggest that they might be managed if only there were freedom more closely approximate to the American model, the entertainment is undoubtedly a real success.

Originally "The Midnight Follies" was intended to be an entertainment merely for the hour and a half between theatre closing and supper-timing. On two nights it is still just that; but once a week there is a longer night, and on these longer nights even the American who fed back to Paris because London is not too dull, would find complete satisfaction. There is dancing from 10 to 11; there is a medley of dancing and supper eating and variety turns from 11 to 12; and then for a couple of hours there is more dancing. In the middle period you may dance between the soup and the dress, listen to Mr. Jack Hobbs and the brass band, or both of them together—between the fish and the lamb; watch a couple of Spanish dancers between the lamb and the ice; dance again before the coffee comes.

The professional entertainers come down a wide staircase to the dance floor and give their turns on a level with the supper-tables, but they may not wear stage dresses and they may not mix with the audience. This is the more notable difference between the London and the New York way of running "The Midnight Follies."

Like Old Times

Londoners need no longer complain that they have to go as far from the hub of the pleasure world as Holborn or Victoria to find a variety show. Sir Oswald Stoll, took the films out of the Alhambra and reopened it as a music hall. The trouble with this house has been that, despite its gigantic size, the accommodation is comparatively small. That has been altered by some clever rearrangement which increases the holding capacity without causing discomfort.

The prices of seats have gone down agreeably. There is a ninepenny gallery, and the best stalls are only five-shillings. But the old staggers will not find anything like the old once-nightly West End hall with its ritual of raffishness. This is to be a "family house," with three shows a day, and on top of the bars has come that foreign imitation of a gentler day—the ice cream soda fountain. One can hardly picture the old guard watching Dan Leno over a "peach sundae."

The music hall of the tradition was essentially English. It found the models for its shows and toppers in the London shows, but Sir Oswald Stoll's "Bill" showed the American influence that has deluged us with ragtime and revue. There were two good American comedians, and even Miss Ella Renford, most obviously English, had to sing about the sun going down in Dixie. But there was one item for the die-hard, a singer advertised as "the new, battered evening dress, a broken straw hat, and made a joke about Charlie Peace. That's going back far enough, surely!"

Northcliffe Startles Readers by Hammering Own Newspaper Stock

London, June 3.—Much excitement and speculation has been aroused in financial and newspaper circles by an extraordinary paragraph which appeared in all of Lord Northcliffe's newspapers in the last few days frankly and deliberately hammering his own stock. The company owning his papers. The notice reads:

"It is reported that a block of deferred shares of £200,000 in Associated Newspapers, Limited, proprietors of the Daily Mail, the Evening News, and the Weekly Dispatch are offered for sale at 2s. 6d. each. Seeing that 750,000 deferred shares have been issued by the company, and that there has been a total of 1,000,000 preferred and ordinary shares, the price named for the deferred shares would appear to place an exaggerated value upon the earning power of the company and the intrinsic value of its assets. Holding such shares confers no political or literary influence whatever, control being in the hands of one individual."

That individual, of course, is Northcliffe. Among other large deferred stock holders are H. A. Harman, his brother, and Sir John Lubbock, the shipping magnate. Naturally, it is not supposed that either of these is trying to sell his interest, but the question is being asked whether, since Northcliffe started his recent attack on millionaires in the newspaper business who are not real journalists, one of this class may be trying to clear out at a profit. It is also assumed here that however much Northcliffe might like to buy in shares he naturally would not be inclined to pay the price quoted.

KEEPS OFF OLD AGE, BUT HASN'T FOUND ELIXIR OF YOUTH

Ballet, Master of Mysteries, Makes Admission to Court

Dyes More Hair Than Any Person in Country

London, June 3.—M. Ballet, a master of mysteries, has not discovered the elixir of youth, but he does know how to stave off the appearance of age. For it is his rather pathetic mission in life to persuade the world that thousands of people are much younger than they know themselves to be. Their gray hairs would give away the secret and Mr. Ballet, therefore, takes care that the gray hairs assume a dark, or cendre or golden tint.

M. Ballet, a witness in the King's Bench Division recently, modestly admitted that he "considered" he had dyed the hair of more persons than any other individual in the universe. Each year 18,000 ladies visit his establishments in Oxford Street to have their hair dyed, or, rather, 18,000 visits are paid by ladies who come three or four times in the year for the growth and color of their hair. Ballet estimates that for every 100 women he treats sixteen or eighteen men, but they have to go to him every month.

Mr. Ballet regards the matter philosophically, especially when he talks about the people who come to him because in disguise their age or fall out of the race. Among the working women he has many shop assistants whose employers behind them for their appearance. Most of the men are business managers or hold other responsible positions.

He never dyes their hair because they want to look beautiful, he said, and he has only one man who did, he said, and he was a woman who was hiring a girl much younger than himself.

A desire to retain their beauty and a sheer dislike of acknowledging their age are the reasons that bring most of his women customers, and women of eighty persist in wearing tinted hair.

"No one could guess," said M. Ballet, "how many of the people one sees have had their hair dyed, but you don't see many gray ladies now. The hair has to be dyed so skillfully that it is not suspected."

Paths of Situation

The paths of this business does not attach only to the customer, who, indeed, is the optimum M. Ballet is an artist. He studies the individual and knows that not only should he of a certain tint go with a certain complexion, but the expression of the face, and manner should all be taken into account. His clients pay no attention at all to these considerations. They like to follow the fashion. The fashion of the moment is for cendre shades, money-browns, with hardly a tint of red or gold.

Canary Bird Schools Turn Out Songsters Taught Note by Note

London, June 3.—A singular but interesting profession is that of the man who teaches canary birds to sing. Each school are to be found in various parts of Yorkshire and Lancashire and are well patronized, for, contrary to general belief, the untrained canary is a very good singer. The fault with untrained birds is that they attempt to imitate every sound they hear and frequently spoil their natural song. At school they are taught to reproduce perfectly certain notes produced by a "bird organ," a contrivance something like a barrel organ, and one note must be mastered before another is learned.

HONORS CREW OF ROBBERS DOWN AT HENLEY

Australian Eight Start Controversy With Request to Compete

London, June 3, Aristocratic Henley, the English oarsman's annual fixture, is greatly embarrassed by the necessity of making an important decision between sportsmanship and ancient tradition. It must define the requisite social caste of oarsmen, as affecting empire relations of the first consideration.

The issue was brought up by the cabled demand of the champion Melbourne eight of their amateur status will be recognized. The crew includes a locomotive fireman and driver, a fitter, a carpenter, a clerk and the skipper of a steamship. All are amateurs under the Amateur Athletic Union rules, but the rules of Henley, which always have been considered a preserve of the socially prominent classes, are quite different.

ENGLAND MAY CURB ANIMAL "ACTS"

Tricks Involving Cruelty Would Be Restricted by New Report

London, June 3.—There will be drastic restrictions in trained animal performances in Great Britain if Parliament approves recommendations in a forthcoming report of the House of Commons committee which has been investigating the matter for the last six months. It was stated today.

The committee concluded cruelty was necessary in the training of animals and will propose a ban on tricks involving serious risks to animals and without educational value. The proposed restrictions will apply particularly to the performances by the larger carnivores, such as lions, tigers and bears, on the grounds that these are dangerous.

Princess's Son Got $500,000 at Marriage But Now Has to Work; New Lady Politician

London, June 3.—The Marquis of Cambridge, Princess Beatrice's eldest son, who recently spent some time in the United States, returned to his office in New York learning the business, has now been appointed on the Board of Directors of Lever's famous fortune of $500,000. The money left his mother by Queen Victoria has been largely eaten into by the maintenance of her family of four, one daughter, the Guaranty Trust Company, and his wife, who has a salary of $10,000. He is said to possess some aptitude for affairs and, like other young sons of the royal family, needs the money.

AT KING'S PALACE Dressmakers Happy as Ladies Ordered to Restore Trains Lord Chamberlain Says Two Yards Behind Long Enough No Longer Need for Curbing Society Extravagance, Royalty Decides

London, June 3.—(By Associated Press)—Economy is no longer to be the keynote of court functions at Buckingham Palace. No more "economy courts," as they were called, are to be held. These were established by their Majesties after the war to set fashionable society a much needed example in curbing extravagance.

FINANCIAL PINCH ALARMS ENGLISH UNIVERSITIES: PROFESSORS "MUST LIVE"

London, May 20.—"We recommend that each university receive, instead of the existing interim grant of £30,000, an annual grant of £100,000, in addition to £10,000 a year for special purposes and a lump sum for pension arrears."

This conclusion of the report of the Royal Commission on Oxford and Cambridge universities illustrates the extent to which the two greatest and most famous of British universities have been hit by the war—or rather by the diminished purchasing power of money as a result of the war. Stripped of the softening verbiage with which the Royal Commission clothed it, the fact stands out that Oxford and Cambridge cannot make ends meet; nor will they probably be able to do so for some time to come.

To any one who has spent even a day wandering about through the Old World beauty of the old colleges and quadrangles, the idea that the existence of these should be imperiled for want of money seems to strike a jarring note. The old and serene are the old buildings that one feels they should somehow manage to exist independently as a part of the English landscape. It is a matter of fact, it is the very picturesqueness and beauty of Oxford and Cambridge that contributes largely to the expense of keeping them up.

TO GET CHURCH FUNDS; OPENS SWEEPSTAKE

London, June 3.—An unconventional method of raising funds to build a church has been adopted by the Rev. Canon P. A. Mansfield, a Roman Catholic priest at Mansfield.

He has organized a sweepstake on the Derby for next year and is offering a prize of £100 for the first horse.

Mansfield has no Catholic church and requires £75,000 to build one.

RISE IN OCEAN LINERS TO GO UP THAMES TO LONDON DOCKS

London, June 3.—Great Britain is determined to retain her maritime supremacy not only by making Southampton the world's greatest port, but it is expected in a few months to make it possible for passengers from New York to land in the heart of London via the Thames according to influential men behind the present development schemes.

Push Back Channel by Miles of Great Piers

The Southampton plan is to push the Channel back into the Thames by the greatest ocean liners is only a matter of time.

The Southwestern Railway Company, which owns the Southampton docks, has submitted plans to the Southampton Borough Council for an ambitious scheme which would cost many millions of pounds sterling and would take years to complete, but thereby 650 acres of sea front at present under water at high tide will be reclaimed and a floating dock capable of accommodating the majestic will be built, while the area in the back, when filled in, will provide a place for factories and business and private houses.

Service Improves and Safety Is Unchallenged

Cost About Same as Land, and Is Getting Cheaper

London, June 3.—A new timetable of the aerial routes has been issued by the Aerial Travel Bureau, and it is now possible for one to look up air connections with most parts of Europe and North Africa, just as one would decide on a train. Successful service has made the timetable a practical necessity.

There are twenty-six regular routes in operation in and out of Croydon airfield, eighteen of which are conducted by Great Britain, four by France and four by Holland. Daily there are nine services to and from Paris, two scheduled to Brussels and two from Brussels and the same for Amsterdam.

The guide gives a graphic idea of the extension of aerial transportation on the Continent. Under Belgrade one reads: "Leave Croydon at 4 in the afternoon, arrive Paris at 6, leave following morning at 8, arrive Prague at 2, wait half an hour, depart again and reach Budapest 6 in the evening, reach Belgrade at 10, which makes about forty hours of travel. This service is available daily and beginning in June will be further extended to Bucharest and Constantinople. Passengers leaving London later in the afternoon can fly to Warsaw via Paris in twenty-six hours.

Another interesting route outlined in the guide includes stops in Spain and Morocco. It is possible to fly to Paris, take a train to Toulouse, catching an airplane at 5 in the morning. Passengers leaving London later in the afternoon can fly to Warsaw via Paris in twenty-six hours.

It is both possible and practical to leave one's hotel in London and take off in an airplane at Croydon within the hour, to go to any point in Europe, Asia, Russia, London later in terms are not only not exorbitant, but, figuring on the longer time required by trains, with sleepers, meals and hotel charges, it is believed that the air is cheaper than travel by boat and train. The services are growing in popularity and it is believed that the summer months will inaugurate a new era in commercial aviation.

As a result of intensive competition in the guide, air stops in cross channel lines, further reduction in rates has been proposed, making the cost equal to if not less than by the sea route. The British have the Channel air traffic the British hold the supremacy, doing about three times the business of the French firms. The British are prepared to meet them.

Ton of Toffee Sent to Queen Is War Mystery

London, June 3.—Although biographies, memoirs and interviews have cleared up most of the mystery of the war, one mystery remains in the British War Office.

In the Autumn of 1914 a ton of toffee was delivered to the Queen. The War Office has now provided an answer. It was addressed to the Queen for the use of the troops, but carried away in a famous tea party.

The toffee was distributed among 10,000 men. The War Office is now trying to thank the Queen, who it appears to be impossible to trace.

Boston Tea Party Got Its Supply From This Shop

London, June 3.—In Gracechurch Lane, an obscure spot just outside one of London's busiest commercial centres, American tourists may see over a grocer's store the "Sign of the Crown and the Star." It is the sign which the location of the shop whence the tea was shipped in 1773 that ultimately went overboard in Boston Harbor during the world's famous tea party.

Only the sign, which was but recently restored and which bears in big gold numerals "175," the year of its establishment, is suggestive of remembrance. The grocer's shop, conducted by descendants of the firm's founders, over which the sign hangs, is now housed in a modern brick building. Inside nothing distinguishes the place from thousands of similar places of business.

London, June 3.—When J. H. Hargreaves, a wool merchant of Kirby Cotes, returns from America he will have made more than three hundred trips across the Atlantic between Liverpool and New York. He is 78 years old, but during his life has covered more than a million miles on the Atlantic.

TO GET CHURCH FUNDS; OPENS SWEEPSTAKE

London, June 3.—An unconventional method of raising funds to build a church has been adopted by the Rev. Canon P. A. Mansfield, a Roman Catholic priest at Mansfield.

He has organized a sweepstake on the Derby for next year and is offering a prize of £100 for the first horse.

Mansfield has no Catholic church and requires £75,000 to build one.

RISE IN OCEAN LINERS TO GO UP THAMES TO LONDON DOCKS

London, June 3.—Great Britain is determined to retain her maritime supremacy not only by making Southampton the world's greatest port, but it is expected in a few months to make it possible for passengers from New York to land in the heart of London via the Thames according to influential men behind the present development schemes.

Push Back Channel by Miles of Great Piers

The Southampton plan is to push the Channel back into the Thames by the greatest ocean liners is only a matter of time.

The Southwestern Railway Company, which owns the Southampton docks, has submitted plans to the Southampton Borough Council for an ambitious scheme which would cost many millions of pounds sterling and would take years to complete, but thereby 650 acres of sea front at present under water at high tide will be reclaimed and a floating dock capable of accommodating the majestic will be built, while the area in the back, when filled in, will provide a place for factories and business and private houses.

EX-M.P.P. IS NOTED AS COLLECTOR OF STAMPS

George W. Sulman of Chatham Has $30,000 Collection—Also a Globe-Trotter.

By T. R. ELLIOTT.

AMONG the few men in Canadian public life who took a personal interest in the recent auction sale of the world-famous Phillippe Ferrari stamp collection was George W. Sulman, of Chatham, former Kent county representative in the Ontario Legislature. The value of the whole Sulman collection is only about $30,000, and a single specimen at the Ferrari auction brought in $32,000, but stamp collections worth $30,000 are not so plentiful in Canada, at that.

Geo. W. Sulman

In addition to being a collector of stamps, Mr. Sulman is something of a globe-trotter, and has zigzagged about the world a number of times. On a single trip he covered a distance of 80,000 miles and on this jaunt he added several thousand specimens to his collection of stamps. He has one or more specimens from every stamp-issuing country in the world, from the Tonga Islands down to Fiume. From the latter country he has a complete set of those issued by D'Annunzio in celebration of his capture of the city.

Among the 30,000 odd in his possession, Mr. Sulman has some very valuable stamps. One which he bought in the Argentine some years ago for 15 cents, is now worth $300—to a collector.

Mr. Sulman became interested in stamps when his son took up the hobby 25 years ago. George junior died some years later, but his father continued the work of gathering postal franks from all the nations of the world, to such good purpose that he is to-day one of the outstanding philatelists in the Dominion.

BY A QUICK CHANGE FUAD ESCAPES JAIL

Former Sultan of Egypt Outwits an Officer.

IN 1913 Fuad I, the new king of Egypt, was an unsuccessful candidate for the Albanian throne, after having been colonel of artillery in the Italian army.

When he became Sultan of Egypt his role under the protectorate of England was not always easy to maintain.

One day a messenger of the British Resident asked him to sign an ordinance against the Egyptian Nationalists. He refused. The messenger of the Resident signified to him with the utmost courtesy:

"I shall then, to my regret, have to arrest and imprison your highness."

"Permit me," replied Fuad Pasha, "to go for a moment to my room to reflect."

A few minutes later Fuad came back in the uniform of an Italian colonel. He was not arrested.

YOUTH, RICHES, SERVICE THIS young man of twenty-six is Frederick Trubee Davison, son of the late Henry P. Davison, noted financier of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., the bulk of whose fortune he will inherit. Upon his mother's death he will receive $4,500,000 and much stock. The dead banker and philanthropist was anxious that his son should devote his life to altruistic ideals rather than finance, so he was given a year to decide between public service and joining the Morgan firm. Young Davison chose public service and will devote his great wealth to this end. He has already entered on his chosen career, as he is now serving his first term as a member of the New York state assembly for the second district of Nassau, N. Y., where he succeeded Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Davison is a graduate of Yale. He entered the war as a naval aviator, crashed in his plane at Huntingdon, L. I., was badly injured, and has never fully recovered.

Bad Fright for Cowan As the Darkness Fell

Terrifying Attack On a Lonely Road by a Dog and a Man With Stones.

A GOOD story is told of Col. Alexander Cowan, former mayor of Barrie, Ont., who joined up during the war with the 81st Battalion. It concerned a certain bound owned by a farmer which was valuable, but had a bad habit of running out and barking at passing vehicles. Its owner decided that it had to be cured of the habit, so he prepared a pile of sticks and stones behind a tree ready for the dog.

Col. A. Cowan

It was just falling dusk as a buggy appeared driven by Col. Cowan. Immediately the dog came bounding out and barking. Followed the farmer throwing sticks and stones and shouting.

The colonel, terrified at this belligerent demonstration, whipped his horse into a gallop, quickly leaving both man and dog in the distance. On reaching town he reported being chased and stoned by a crazy man.

George Bernard Shaw Taking It Easy.

HERE is the famous Irish novelist, satirist, Fabian Socialist, playwright and what not, in his working togs at his home in Ayot, St. Lawrence, Herts, England. He is said to be very fond of chopping wood. Otherwise he does prolific writing, most of it in his favorite easy chair. It must have been in this that he wrote his latest, "Back to Methuselah," a cycle of five plays. It is doubtful if he could have produced it in a straight-backed chair.

Arthur Meighen's Early Morning Rebellion Against Tyranny of Sir William Mackenzie

When the Latter Gave Him Too Big a Dose of Golf and Was Keen for More the Former Premier Slipped Away.

By W. L. EDMONDS.

FEW and rare are the golfers who will at any time acknowledge they have had too much of the game. But lover and all that Right Hon. Arthur Meighen is of the royal pastime, he was for once in his life in this position. He was on this particular occasion spending the week-end with Sir William Mackenzie at the latter's summer home in Kirkfield, Ontario. Sir William, who is noted as a "golf fiend," almost immediately after his guest's arrival suggested they should repair to the links for an afternoon's game.

Mr. Meighen was willing; and was equally willing to "stay with the game" as long as there was sufficient light to enable them to do so. He was also willing, after dinner, to sit up with his host and other kindred friends unto the "wee sma' hours" at bridge.

Hon. A. Meighen

But when at eight o'clock in the morning, just when he was turning over for an additional forty-minute snooze, his host pounding on his door, shouted: "Hurry up and dress and get breakfast. We must try and do a hundred holes to-day, his tired frame rebelled."

Without, however, entering a demurrer, he dressed, ate his breakfast, but while Sir William's back was momentarily turned the former premier slipped through a side-door and sped across an intervening field to the dwelling of a neighbor, where, an hour or two later, he was found sitting on the kitchen table eating a luscious apple and between bites discussing problems of the day with the owner of the place of refuge.

While this digression did not prevent a game of golf, it did prevent the realization of Sir William's ambition for a hundred-hole enterprise.

Famous Octogenarians

ON the left is John D. Rockefeller, the oil king, who is the youngest of the trio, being just 83 in July next. This is his latest studio photograph, never before published. On the upper right is Chauncey M. Depew, most famous of American senators and after-dinner speakers, who recently celebrated his 88th birthday. The remaining G. O. M. is Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, great publicist and preacher, now in his 86th year. Mr. Depew and Dr. Abbott were recently honored by France by being made, respectively, officer and knight of the Legion of Honor.

Civilization "WHAT is civilization?" asks a California writer. It's where you stand on a street corner and wait for ten street cars, four hundred automobiles, fifty motorcycles, twenty-five bikes, a dozen motor trucks, a few fire engines, the police patrol, a hurry-up ambulance and a funeral to pass before you dare make a try for the opposite corner.—San Francisco Chronicle.

REMARKABLE RESEMBLANCE BETWEEN TWO LANCELEYS

REV. EBENEZER LANCELEY, pastor of Woodgreen Tabernacle, Toronto, who was recently made a "D.D." some years ago was walking through the grounds of Grimsby park with his brother John, when they were met by a gentleman who, noticing the remarkable resemblance between the two men, asked: "Are you two brothers?" "Yes," replied Ebenezer, "but I am a new and improved edition."

Cannot Walk as Far as He Used in His Youth

But Bishop Reeve, at Seventy, Has More Vigor Than Most Younger Men.

THERE are few men in Toronto more vigorous than Bishop W. D. Reeve, of the Anglican Church, despite his more than three score and ten years. His figure is erect and he walks with a firm step like a man of 50. Almost every Sunday he takes from two to three services, which often involve long drives.

After many years' strenuous missionary labors in the MacKenzie river district he was offered the position of assistant bishop of Toronto. Some of the clergy thought he was too old a man and not sufficiently active for the work. One of them ventured to express this opinion in a synod meeting. Another rector replied by saying: "It is quite true that Bishop Reeve is not as strong as he once was. For instance, he used to be able to walk thirty miles a day, and now he cannot do more than twenty-eight."

Needless to say, all opposition to his appointment immediately ceased.

BOYS PEPPERED TEACHER THROUGH A KNOT-HOLE

Chief Whip of Conservative Party, It Is Feared, Was Naughty in His Youth.

WHEN W. A. Boys, K.C., M.P. for South Simcoe, chief whip of the Conservative party, was a boy he had the reputation of being a great practical joker. It used to give him great pleasure to get the better of an old man teacher who was always on the lookout for tricks.

One day young Boys noticed a knot in the old pine floor beneath his feet. This he removed, penetrating the ceiling of the room below and securing a clear view. So he got a pea shooter and when the old master began teaching below he would pepper him with peas, replace the knot and go on with his work most innocently.

It is not on record how this manoeuvre ended or whether young Boys met his deserts. But at any rate the old man did not have a very high opinion of his ability or capacity for work and often got angry with him. One day he had Boys up at the board explaining an algebra problem to him, but in vain—the youngster could not understand. Finally the master flew into a rage and ordered him to his seat, exclaiming, "If you ever make a mark in the world, Boys, it will be with your heel."

LORD ROSEBERY HAS A POSTILION TO DRIVE

A Touching Glimpse of Former Great Statesman.

HERE is a delightful picture of a former great figure in British politics, taken from an English paper, which reads like an echo of the past:

"Late in the evening, when the country is lying asleep under the stars, through the quiet lanes round Epsom, in Surrey, often rolls an old-fashioned carriage with a crest and a coronet on its doors and a former prime minister sitting inside it."

"Sometimes, to the surprise of strangers, instead of a coachman on the box there is a postilion on one of the two bay horses—a small, neat figure in peaked cap, blue coat, white breeches, and riding boots, rising up and down with the movement of his mount."

"The great Victorian who so likes to drive in the evening before going to bed, and who, when the nights are not too dark, likes to be driven in the old-time way by a postilion is Lord Rosebery, who lives at The Durdans, just outside Epsom."

"In the spring evenings Lord Rosebery, who is 74, drives out in search of the song of the nightingale, and when from some copse or thicket the silver notes of the bird are heard pouring out in a rapturous melody the carriage stops and the elderly peer sits and listens in delight to the song enchanting the still night."

BERNARD M. BARUCH, noted American financier and at one time one of the spectacular plungers on Wall street, has turned down the offer of a position in the theatre world similar to that now held by Will Hays in the movies, that of supreme director, guide, counsellor, and friend. He is too busy as it is, he declares. Mr. Baruch has made a close study of economics of recent years, and is friendly to the growing demands of the farmers for self expression.

Suit of Clothes Kills Petty Officer's Grouch

COMMANDER J. K. L. ROSS, Montreal capitalist, lover of horses and ships, is a thoughtful man, and his many considerate acts endeared him to the sailors under his command aboard the H.M.C.S. Grise during the war.

The Grise, a speedy torpedo destroyer, was commissioned by the government to do patrol work in West Indian waters. In the hurry and bustle of getting the destroyer to sea some trivial matters were naturally overlooked. The chief omission in the eyes of one sailor was a uniform suitable to his rank. His rating was that of a petty officer, while his clothes were those of an able seaman. He was disgruntled and he never ceased to say so. And a sailor knows how to grumble when his shore-going uniform is not what it should be.

In due course the Grise dropped anchor in the blue water of Hamilton harbor, Bermuda. The petty officer, clad as an able seaman, carrying a camera and a load of bad feeling against his uniform, went ashore to garner some photographs. As he rambled along the road towards Spanish Point he met Commander Ross, who was walking in the opposite direction. He saluted, then stopped the genial officer, and told him his trouble about the uniform. Commander Ross listened intently to the tale of woe. Then he made a quick decision.

"Is there any tailor in Hamilton who can make you a uniform suitable to your rank?" he asked.

"Yes sir, I know of one."

"Very good then. Go and order a uniform and have it charged to me."

The First Election Ever Held in Simcoe County

The Strategy of an Irish Soldier Who Had Served With Wellington in the Peninsula.

THE first election to fill the seat for Simcoe was held in July, 1828. Simcoe was a separate constituency for parliamentary purposes. Wm. R. Robinson was the candidate on the ticket of the Family Compact, and John Cawthra, of Newmarket, was his opponent. Some very old timers might remember it. The tale is gleaned from Hunter's records of Simcoe county.

Anyhow, there was but one polling place for the whole election. It was at Holland Landing, and George Lount was returning officer. The poll was kept open a week. The candidate Robinson kept open-house at Phelps' tavern to furnish free feeds and drinks to the free and independent voters; Cawthra did likewise at Johnston's Landing.

A soldier who had served with Wellington in the Peninsula campaign had received a grant of land in the county and settled on it. He came out to vote and took quarters at Robinson's booth in Phelps' tavern. After feasting and drinking and making as much noise as a small army, he started off on the last day of election to the polling place. A crowd of loafers followed to see how he would vote. Of course, voting by ballot had not yet been introduced. The voter took place at a wicket high above the ground, and approached by a small stairway leading up to a platform in front of it. After voting the elector descended by another stairway. The veteran soldier mounted the rostrum. Asked how he desired to vote, he answered: "I vote on this," throwing down the patent deed of his land with a flourish. "But what candidate?" he was asked. "Oh, Cawthra," he exclaimed in a loud voice. A fierce and threatening outcry arose from the gang. The soldier stood in danger of getting hauled down and mobbed. Then, turning to the crowd he said: "Gentlemen! I served under Wellington. My general lent me to feast on my enemies, and he'd be d—d if I haven't done it."

Cawthra was elected by nine votes at that first election in Simcoe county.—Collingwood Bulletin.

A Narrow Escape

Further adventures of "Tom Seeley," contributed by Mrs. Harrison Eke.

MAMIE WILSON peeped through a knot-hole in Smith's barn, and laughed merrily as she espied Tom Seeley, one of the farm hands, seated on an upturned milk pail, pencil in hand, bending perplexedly over a writing pad resting on his knees.

"I sent a letter to my love and on the way I dropped it," trilled Mamie.

The boy sprang to his feet confused, and then a laughing blue eye caught his.

"Say, Mamie Wilson," he cried reddening, "you've no right peeping around barns that way."

He threw down his writing material as he spoke and moved towards the door. Mamie instantly fled. Nimbly she seized the ladder resting near the hay loft, then scrambled to the roof and sat astride the roof-joint.

"And some of you have picked it up and put it in your pocket," she went on teasingly. Then suddenly she espied another boy in the distance leaving the house. She cupped her hands and called:

"Ben-n, coo-oo, coo-oo, coo-oo."

Ben glanced up at an old maple tree in the grove nearby. Mamie Wilson's favorite perch, but he could not see her.

"Coo-oo, coo-oo, coo-oo," it came again.

"Aw, Mamie," he called back, "I know where you are, up that old tree again. Just you wait till your ma catches you. Oh, boy, won't you get a licking."

"Cross patch, draw the latch," flung back Mamie as Ben neared the barn. Just then Tom Seeley appeared.

"Take the ladder away," he suggested crossly, as Ben came up, "and let her stay up there. I think she's been eating bird seed, singing up there like a loony."

Ben glanced upwards.

"What are you doing up there, Mamie?" he asked in a loud voice, "that's no place for girls."

"I'm broadcasting," returned Mamie grandiloquently.

Ben burst into a fit of laughter. "Oh, gee, Tom, did you hear that?" putting his head inside the barn.

"Yes, I heard," replied Tom with a broad grin, "and if they hear that mushy ditty she was singing just now they will."

Mamie glanced scornfully at Ben as the words reached her ears. "Oh, you needn't be mad about it," she cried aloud from her high perch. "When pa gets our radio fixed you boys won't get a chance to listen in. You're too mean for anything, so there!"

"Aw, shucks," returned Ben sippantly, "we don't care. Plenty more where that came from."

At this moment Tom slipped outside the barn.

Look here, Mamie Wilson," Tom shouted, "Ben and I are going to play 'Andy, Andy, 'igh over' with a couple of rocks of you don't come down."

"You wouldn't dare," returned Mamie stoutly.

"We'll dare anything," replied Tom quickly, "if you stay."

Tom re-entered the barn, and picking up his writing-pad and pencil, hid them under a sack of oats. At this moment, Ben's father came towards the barn. Mamie instantly descended, skipping blithely through the gates towards home. The boys now busied themselves preparing for the day's work.

"You boys had better catch 'Bess' and bring her in. She'll pull better with 'Dolly' than 'Old Sandy.' Better not take all day about it, either."

"Wonder where she is anyway?" mumbled Ben, reaching for his old straw.

"You've asked me something new, son," promptly returned the father. "Horses are like kids, there's no accounting for one or the other when they are out of your sight." Ben's eyes caught Tom's. Their thoughts flew to a eye caught Tom's. Their thoughts flew to a eye caught Tom's. Their thoughts flew to a eye caught Tom's.

Careless Boys Cause Damaging Fire

GAINING its inception in a careless act of some diminutive boys who went to the woods to smoke cigarettes, a bush fire raged in the woods of Esquimalt district for the greater part of this week. True, due to the efforts of the fire rangers and volunteer help the fire did not take serious hold of the forest, but it blazed to such an extent as to require the attention of four paid officials of the fire prevention staff for the first four days of this week, and only the training and foresight of these officials confined the damage to the extent created.

The fire took place in brush near Craigflower Farm, on land owned by the Hudson's Bay Company, and was caused, it appears, by youths.

Citing this as but one case of many where forest fires have been traced to wanton carelessness, not always on the part of children either, forestry officials are renewing their request to the public that every care be taken with fire in the woods. Camp fires, necessary for picnics perhaps, may be held safely by the use of a little care, and caution to see that all is under control. By far the greater number of forest fires start from camp fires that are left unattended. It sounds almost too simple, but there it is, and much of these wanton fires could be eliminated.

If in a city a man were to drop a match in a building, and see that building burned to the ground, that man would be storing up trouble for himself. Yet this happens in the woods, and though buildings are not destroyed, yet millions of dollars worth of valuable timber disappear in this manner every year. Time after time this fire loss of timber is pointed out by the forestry department of the Province, but seldom is it that the average resident examines the figures in the light of added taxation for which he in part is responsible. The careless throwing down of a lighted match in dry brush, by a boy who is smoking illicitly, has a very real connection with the taxes that the father of that boy must pay for the upkeep of an extensive and efficient fire fighting force. No boy willfully sets fire to the brush, but many do so through lack of a little care. It is not the thousands who go to the woods annually that occasion fire loss, but the few who go and leave caution behind. Friend Caution is too valuable an ally to lose sight of for a moment, keep him ever with you.

Panther Is Deer Killer

THE average panther which stalks in the numerous woods of this island is responsible for some two deer every week. Killing never less than that number to get its food, and often killing more for the sake of killing. Cougars, as the panthers are sometimes called, are outlaws in the sight of the law, and a bounty is set on their head, and rightly so, for one animal kills in the neighborhood of 110 to 150 young deer every year. Often walking in the woods the body of a slain deer can be seen with the meat practically intact, and it is evident that the animal has been killed by a panther just for the mere joy of killing, and while we may not blame the panther for following his natural instincts, we are not obliged to let him kill deer with impunity. So it is that numerous hunters are the avowed enemies of panthers, and hunt the manning beasts with dogs trained for this purpose. When chased by dogs the panther will take to a tree, where it crouches until it is brought down by a rifle ball.

What Are Your Wireless Problems?

FOR many years a very popular hobby wireless transmission and reception in amateur circles has taken on a phenomenal lease of new life with the advent of the radiophone, and wireless concerts. The status of amateur wireless has undergone an amelioration of conditions that will make it more possible for Canadian enthusiasts to take part in joys shared by their prototypes on the other side of the line with the same advantages, or nearly so.

The cost of wireless equipment has dropped considerably, bringing this popular hobby well within the reach of all. For the amateur, much of the equipment necessary can be manufactured at home, and the making of wireless gear is a delight in itself to the average boy. It may be in eagerness to establish connections with the music of the ether, enthusiasts rush on and forget that wireless reception and more especially transmission is controlled by Federal statute.

It would be well for every boy interested in wireless to get a copy of the wireless regulations, to be had on request to Superintendent E. J. Houghton of the Dominion Wireless office here, located in the Old Post Office Building. The restrictions and requirements placed on amateur reception of wireless signals are very few, and easily complied with by all. Yet a lack of knowledge of these laws may lead some youthful enthusiast into trouble. Full data as to conditions of operating, wave lengths, and license fees may be had at the same source, and remember the authorities are anxious to aid the amateur so long, and only so long, as the amateur is willing to co-operate and confine his activities within the generous bounds permitted.

For the benefit of those who have encountered problems in the erection or operation of their wireless set as Wireless-Question-Box will be established, and all who wish to take advantage of this facility are invited to address their problems to the question box, care of this page. It is not claimed that every question will be answered through these columns, but where the subject be of general interest it will be published, and where not a stamped envelope enclosed will bring the reply. All questions will be submitted to the best local authority on such matters, and where a solution is not forthcoming, it will be so stated.

All questions on this subject should be addressed to the Wireless Question Box, as stated, and signed by the name of the interrogator. Initials only will be cited in reply through these columns.

HIS ADOPTED SON.

A mother was questioning her little daughter, aged 6.

"Who is the father of the calf?" asked the mother.

"The bull," replied the youngster.

"Who is the father of the duckling?" continued the mother.

"The drake," responded the child.

"And who is the father of the kid?"

"Charlie Chaplin!"—Tid-Bits (London).

Four Local Boys Off to Sea From Boys' Naval Brigade

TRAINING hard for a year four boys of the local division of the Boys' Naval Brigade joined their ships within the last few days. E. Tucker, R. Shortrede and P. Gough shipped as deck boys on the Fishery Protection steamer, Givency. Douglas Reynolds was given an opportunity of filling a vacancy on the Canadian Government Merchant Marine steamer Canadian Importer, and accepted with delight. He too shipped as a deck boy, and joined his ship at Vancouver, from which port she will sail shortly for the Orient. The three boys on the steamer Givency will see much of the coast in these waters, and all were keen to get away on their first voyage. Nearly sixty boys have trained here now and taken their place on ships of British register.

That the local division of the Boys' Naval Brigade is on an equality with the most highly trained boys in the Province developed when the division was inspected this week by Captain Cummings, acting officer in charge of cadet corps. Quite recently the Boys' Naval Brigades of the Dominion came within the scope of the cadet inspection staff, and this is the first offering of the local brigade. Captain Cummings complimented the boys very highly on their showing, and the brigade responded with one of the smartest turnouts of the year. The inspection took place at the Menzies Street Drill Hall on Wednesday afternoon, the brigade parading under the command of Lieut. W. N. Hotham, assisted by Sub-Lieut. P. W. Tribe. In complimenting the ratings, Captain Cummings told of his recent inspection of Naval Brigades at Vancouver and New Westminster, and delighted the local parade by stating that he had not yet seen a finer turnout than inspected here.

To-morrow a muster parade of the local division will take part in the church parade of all naval, military and veteran organizations in the annual commemoration of Memorial Day. The band will accompany the division in the parade, and is now up to full strength, and happy in the possession of new instruments.

Y. M. C. A. Boys Have Busy Days

WELL into the Summer programme, the Boys' Work Division of the Y. M. C. A. is a hive of bustling activity these days. Camera clubs, stamp exchanges, first aid lessons, life saving classes, boxing practices, hikes, and baseball form but some of the many forms of entertainment now under way. In all about 200 boys take part in these various groups, attending in the average of twice per week. Arrangements for the Summer camp at Beaver Lake are now complete and the first group will go into camp on July 3. The camp will last five weeks, and boys are to attend this year for two week periods, where possible. This will give a greater scope in forming a programme of work and play, it is said, and the results will be greatly enhanced.

On Tuesday afternoons two picked teams of the boys went their way to Central Park for a baseball game, and much keen interest is being taken in these outings. The Juniors have a team in the city junior league, where they are holding their own in fine style. On Mondays and Wednesdays boxing classes, concerning forty boys in all, are held, with William Inglis instructing. On Wednesday also upwards of fifty boys are taking part in life saving practices in the pool at the buildings, under John Hedley. Friday is a busy day with the meetings of the Camera Club, stamp collecting meetings, first aid classes, and club meetings. On Saturdays the boys will up a busy week with a long walk into the country. The Saturday afternoon hikes have become very popular and are well attended.

Boys intending to take part in the Beaver Lake camp this year will be pleased to hear that Miss Mousie, dealer to the hearts of the boys as a provider of excellent pies, will supply their meals at the camp this season. As followed last year, the boys will go to the camp in age-groups, the younger boys going into camp by themselves at the opening, and being followed later by older boys. In this manner boys are given companions of their own age and special interests.

Harold C. Cross, Boys' Work Secretary, is in charge of all arrangements as to the requirements of boys wishing to go to camp, and acts also as adviser on all boys' work matters for the institution.

FOR CHILDREN The Sandman Story For To-night

MR. FOX SETS A NEW STYLE—Part I.

AS everyone knows, Mr. Fox is a very clever animal, but one time he was at the very end of his wits to know what to do, in spite of this fact.

Mr. Fox had been over to a certain farm one dark night and, because he had never had any trouble there, he grew careless, but the farmer must have grown tired of having Mr. Fox carry off his poultry, for one day he set a trap for him.

Now while he did not catch Mr. Fox, that is, to hold him in the trap, Mr. Fox was foolish enough to step on the brush under which the trap was hidden, and the sharp iron caught one foot.

Mr. Fox pulled and pulled and out came the foot, but it was hurt so badly that he limped and had to carry a cane.

He staid away from the wood folk, for he knew they would laugh at him for getting caught in a trap, for the reason that he had always bragged that no trap had ever caught him.

One day there came an invitation to go to Mr. Bear's house to a dinner. Mr. Bear was a very generous creature and always gave nice dinners to his guests.

Mr. Fox wanted to go, but he did not wish to explain how he became lame, and if he did say he cut his foot, everyone would be sure to know he was not telling the truth and say that at least he had been caught in a trap.

So he sat thinking very earnestly how he could go to that dinner and not be laughed at, and he found it was no easy matter to think up a plan.

He could wear a pair of boots he had found in the woods, but he could not help limping, he thought.

"Now, if I could get there early and get seated at the table," he said to himself, "no one would know a thing about my limb but Mr. Bear, and I can fool him in some way."

So the night of the party Mr. Fox dressed early and painfully limped up the path to the home of Mr. Bear, and Mr. Bear was out.

"Ah, I am in luck," said Mr. Fox, limping across the room to the table and seating himself; then he slipped the cane under the tablecloth, which hung over the sides, touching the floor. "I am glad Mr. Bear has such a big tablecloth; my feet will never be seen," he said, smiling to think how simple it had all been.

"Ah, I was not safe as he was soon to learn."

Pretty soon Mr. Bear came back with a bouquet of wild flowers for his table, and when he saw Mr. Fox he was surprised, but knowing that he was always the first guest to arrive, Mr. Bear, who was very polite, said nothing about the early hour.

"Won't you take this rocking chair?" he said; "we shall not have dinner for a long time yet; I am planning to have a grand march all around before we sit down to dinner."

Mr. Fox had a queer feeling in his stomach—not so much from hunger as from fear he would have to go in that march and everyone would be sure to know about the trap. What would he do?

FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

THE elderly lady was about to leave her guide, a burly seaman, after having been taken over one of the latest liners just launched.

"I am sorry to see by the rules that tipping is forbidden here," she said to her guide.

"Lor' bless you, mum, so were apples in the Garden of Eden," was the comforting reply.

An elderly Scotsman was at the point of death. Admittedly his chance was hopeless. Relatives surrounded the bedside, and not a sound broke the stillness as the old man commenced making his signature to the last will and testament. "D-A-Y-I" he wrote, and then fell back exhausted. "D, Uncle David, D," urged his nephew.

How to Make Hose Nozzle Holder

Of all the handy things you can construct there is none made handy. I believe, that the hose-nozzle holder described here this week. It may be set upon the porch post, the sidewalk, or the lawn, to support the hose while sprinkling the lawn, foliage or garden with a fine spray; thus making it unnecessary for you to stand and hold the nozzle.

The tools required for the making of the holder are a plane, saw, hammer, screw driver, coping or turning saw, and a brace and bit.

Lay out the outline for the bed of the holder, using a pencil compass, pencil and rule. Use the compass for marking the large curve. Make the curves between A and C free hand.

Make feet for the bottom of the bed and fasten them in place with nails or screws.

The supports for the hose are easily made and should be fastened to the top of the bed with either nails or screws.

Give the holder, when it has been assembled, several coats of paint. It will be continually soaked with water and needs the paint for protection.

DOES A GARDEN PAY? YES, BUT NOT IN MONEY

This Amateur for $5 Worth of Seeds, Etc., and $30 in Labor Got $10 in Vegetables.

BUT THINK OF THE FUN AND EXERCISE HE HAD

And Don't Forget the Ornithological Orchestra Which Furnishes the Gardener With Real Entertainment.

By WILLIAM LEWIS EDMONDS
Does backyard gardening pay? It largely depends upon the meaning of the word "pay."

A good many backyard gardeners, like myself, have possibly come to the conclusion that from a purely dollars-and-cents standpoint it does not pay.

Last season I had under cultivation about one hundred square yards of backyard garden. For seeds, plants and fertilizers I had an expenditure of about five dollars. Although spading and cultivating were the labor of my own hands, the old maxim, "the laborer is worthy of his hire," kept so persistently buzzing in my ears that I finally consented to levy a charge of fifty cents an hour. I do not know whether anyone else would compute the gardening value of my labor at this rate per hour. But personally I was quite confident that it was a moderate amount to levy against the garden. And as at the end of the season I computed that an aggregate of at least sixty hours had been consumed in painstaking, faithful labor I was entitled to receive a credit note for $30.

Accounting labor, as well as seeds, plants and fertilizers, the total cost entailed in last year's backyard gardening venture would, therefore, be $35.

In order to secure an approximate value of the beans, carrots, beets, parsnips, rhubarb, tomatoes and lettuce produced a record was kept of the estimated worth, based on prevailing market prices, of each mess of vegetables as gathered for household use.

The record gave the season's output an aggregate value of ten dollars! Strange to say, this was the exact figure I had guessed at when the census enumerator was making his rounds early in the season.

Looking at the venture as a purely business proposition, there was a deficit—if estimated value of labor is allowed—of twenty-five dollars. Transfer from the garden to the exercise account the charge for personal labor, and there is a surplus of five dollars.

In fairness to the backyard garden—and, in fact, to the gardener as well—it should be pointed out that two factors adverse to large productivity obtained. In the first place the soil is decidedly sandy, while in the second place trees deprived the vegetables of their necessary proportion of sunshine.

Your Own Vegetables the Best

IN view of the unsatisfactory results the question naturally arises: Is it my purpose this season to again embark upon the backyard gardening venture? It certainly is, and for a lot of good reasons—only there won't be a repetition of the accounting feature.

In the first place, we last summer and fall had many vegetables which, owing to distance from stores, we would otherwise have been denied. This was a matter both of convenience and gratification, to say nothing of the pride that swelled the breast of the gardener. Furthermore, what you gather from your own garden has—in imagination at any rate—a better flavor than that bought at stores or from peddlars.

Obviously, therefore, by being in a position to gather garden truck from your own backyard it is quite in order to enter these three items on the credit side of the ledger: (1) Supply, (2) convenience, and (3) gratification. The first of these three may be the only one whose value can be computed in money; but the others have their value just the same.

But there are still a few other items entitled to a place in the credit column, notwithstanding that in the coin of the realm their value cannot be computed. One of these is the beneficial results obtained by sedentary workers, like myself, from digging, delving, hoeing, and raking. An hour or two of judicious labor in the invigorating sunshine not only dissipates the lethargy of winter development, but makes one feel ten to twenty years younger and capable of climbing trees or scaling fences with the alacrity of boyhood days. Another item for the credit column is the entertainment provided, while strolling about the garden, in watching from day to day the process by which vegetables expand and come to fruition.

And although it has nothing directly to do with the cultivation of backyard gardening there is still another item that must be placed in the credit column. This is the entertainment I last spring derived, while gardening, from an attending ornithological orchestra. Never of a bright morning did this orchestra fail to tune up. But there was one little soloist that was particularly faithful. It was a tree-sparrow, which, perched upon an overhanging branch, would entertain me with its rich, caxary-like song, while occasionally an orange-tinted oriole would venture into a near-by tree and intermittently pause in its insect-gathering activities to utter, in notes rich and full, "joy—pretty—joy." Robins became close friends, finally venturing to dodge between my legs to gather juicy worms that the spade brought to the surface, or standing a foot or two away greedily gathered the worms I threw to them and then, after cutting them into convenient lengths, speed away to fill the mouths of lusty offspring.

And at this very moment, as I write, I hear a tree sparrow in the back garden luring me to labor. I wonder if it is the same that last year attended me so faithfully? Of one thing I am certain: It will appear to be, which thought recalls this remark in one of the late John Burroughs' books:

"There is something almost pathetic in the fact that the birds remain forever the same. You grow old, your friends die or move to distant lands, events sweep on, and all things are changed. Yet there in your garden or orchard are the birds of your boyhood, the same notes, the same calls, and, to all intents and purposes, the identical birds endowed with perennial youth."

She Sings, But None Hear Her—Joy For the Neighbors.

A CLEVER contrivance for the amateur singer who enjoys hearing her own voice more than the neighbors do! None can hear her sing, but she can hear herself with great intensity, due to the amplification produced. It was constructed by an amateur who had long been worried with the efforts of Miss Tetrazini next door.

LORD ASTOR AND HIS WIFE

A CONFESSION THAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN

By Emil Longue Beau

"MY most cynical friend in New York," said Lord Astor, "asked me how I was getting along in the world of disillusion where I have lived since we had two members of the British parliament in one household, of whom I, though in the Upper House, hold the lower position. What do you suppose my answer was?"

It was impossible to guess—how could anybody guess unless he had had something of Lord Astor's absolutely unique experience? Nancy's husband continued:

"I told him I hadn't lived among disillusion since I became a peer and my wife succeeded to my place in the Commons, but that I have lived in a world of discovery. Why, I feel more like Christopher Columbus, who has just found a New World, than like a sufferer from formal and political ennui."

"And your chief discoveries?" I ventured to suggest.

"Well, I don't know that I could give them to you in the order of their value to me; so perhaps I had better think out loud and you can sort out the impressions afterwards. Will that do?"

It would do excellent well.

"The first discovery I made—it was a gradual one—was that my wife was an even finer, more comprehensive, more brilliant woman than I had believed her to be. That may sound like an avowal of stupidity after many years' marriage, and a houseful of children, and the success of my wife has always been in private life, in society and wherever she came in contact with public affairs. You see, I was member for Plymouth for several years before my father died; and over in England the wife of a member of parliament is very much more a public figure than she is in Canada—or a congressman's wife in the United States. That is true, too, of the wives of mayors. During a mayoral term the mayorese is regarded by everybody as the first lady of the city. She appears to all sorts of functions with her husband. So does the wife of the M. P. unless she determinedly keeps out of sight. My wife was always keenly interested in my parliamentary career, and was very ambitious that I should make a considerable figure in political life. She never failed to insist that I could do it—as she used to say, in spite of my wealth, which, of course, could open many doors that might not otherwise swing as easily on their hinges."

"During all that time," Lord Astor proceeded, talking easily and with just enough enthusiasm to betray the lover who hasn't forgotten the halcyon-days, "during all this time, of course, I knew that my wife had political instinct, and what is much rarer, political courage. I also knew that she saw more in politics than a rivalry between those who held office and those who wanted their jobs. I knew, too, that, in what she said, and the way she said it, there was more natural force than I could put into my own more commonplace utterances; and I used to joke with her about the time when I would be her subordinate in some impossible government of the future—that isn't quite right; I should say she joked with me."

Anyone who has met Lady Astor privately and heard her publicly can easily accept her husband's correction.

"No doubt you are thinking of my wife's superlative sense of humor, and of what a plain stick I am, in comparison with her. Well, you are right; and I should be a poor stick indeed if I couldn't find out what all the world knows. I don't mind telling you that, years ago, when I would see a man overshadowed by his wife I thought I sympathized with him. But I have long ago got past that danger of an ignoble jealousy. You are happily married, I hope?"

"This Croesus with the famous wife spoke as earnestly as if he were an evangelist of matrimonial felicity.

"To a girl who hasn't aged a bit in thirty years," I replied. "Then you'll understand me perfectly, I'm sure," said the viscount. "Here's my wife, not only the first woman to sit in the mother of parliaments, but a woman to whom, on her qualities among men of the first quality, has won a unique place in the esteem of forward-looking people all over the world. Why, she is having an experience such as no woman ever had on this continent—not as a singer or as an actress; but as herself. She is worthy of all the homage that is paid her—believe me, she is. Knowing that, what could I be if I didn't think it a greater honor to be her husband, than I did to be her fiancé?" There's a side to that position which no doubt you can guess."

"Do you mean," I replied, "that in your wife's fame there is the superiority of character over every other claim to respect—that it is for what we are, more than for what we have, that our fellows really judge us?"

"Yes, I think you have put what is in my mind exactly. My father, you know, set infinite store by the appurtenances of wealth. He hankered after the privileges of aristocracy, and eagerly desired that there should be an Astor dynasty which would give a sort of mythical distance to old Jacob who traded in furs, which had to be brought from Astoria, on the Pacific coast, to New York, by way of Cape Horn. He wished me to marry into the old English nobility. The idea was part of my education. Along with it went something else that galled me, though it might have irretrievably ruined me—I mean the everlasting low-kowling because of the wealth everybody knew would some day be mine by inheritance. If I think well of myself at all, it is because I determined against ever being wrecked on the rocks which strew every gilded shore. I wanted people's regard for what I was, in myself. And my wish came true in the wonderful way you have seen for yourself."

"You mean in your wife?"

"Precisely—and not through the hoary nobility, but through a vivacious Virginian. You know we have great friends among the Labor party in England, who sometimes tell us their personal experiences. Neither of us know what it is to be worried about where food or clothing are to come from. Sometimes we almost regret our deprivation of the experience which, after all, really teaches the deepest lessons of life. We reverence much of what we know of the life of such men as Clynnes, for instance. What men like him have done is infinitely greater than anything we can do merely because we happen to be endowed with this world's goods. We have found out that the sense of trusteeship is the only safeguard of character for people like ourselves; and we are trying to honor that discovery. And in doing so, my wife has been more to me than everything else. That is not merely because of her magnificent and courageous intellect, but because she suffered the disaster of her first marriage, and came through the ordeal as gold seven times purified."

"I read the account of your thanks to the Plymouth audience to whom Lady Astor told the story, when the unutterable Bottomley attacked her in 'John Bull'." I said.

"Did you, indeed?" said Lord Astor. "It was the bravest thing mortal ever did, made a poor list of telling her constituents what I thought of their chivalrous devotion to her in a cruel episode; and I think they already knew where I stood towards their member, my wife and successor, as their representative. Yes, Plymouth is to her what Calais was to Queen Mary. The name is graven on her heart."

A Reasonable Excuse

SHE had purchased some goods on the hire-purchase system, but shortly afterwards her finances gave out, and the payment to the dealer ceased.

In due course came a letter from the firm, demanding the money. This is her reply:

"Dear Sirs,—In answer to your letter, I have not received same, as I do not live here now. Yours, Nancy Woto."—Answers.

A Child Poet of Much Promise is The Granddaughter of W. T. R. Preston

Little Hope Alexander, at Thirteen, Has Been Writing Verse for Three Years of Quaint Maturity and Childish Charm—A Literary Future Seems Assured—Two Sisters, Ruby and Grace, Also Show Unusual Talents.

THREE little girls of Harrow, England, the Alexanders, are known as the scholarship sisters because of their marked ability while yet very young. They are Anglo-Canadian, granddaughters of W. T. R. Preston, of Port Hope, the well-known Liberal figure, former Canadian trade commissioner and author of "The Life and Times of Lord Strathcona."

Ruby Alexander, the eldest of the girls, carried off a London County scholarship at twelve years of age, although she was easily the youngest among a large number of contestants. Grace, whose original drawings received the highest prizes at an exhibition of children's work at the Guildhall, London, attracted the attention of a London artist, who persuaded her mother to allow her to enter for an Academy of Arts scholarship at 11 years of age, in which she was successful, although her other competitors were her seniors by four to seven years.

Hope, who is now just 13 years old, when 10 years of age carried off a London County three-years' scholarship in literature, although she was three years younger than any other contestant for the prize. She has continued to show the same extraordinary talents in the large county school, heading all her classes.

During the last three years, since she was ten, little Hope Alexander has written verses of a mature quality which give promise of a future that is likely to make a mark in literature. They are beautiful, graceful little things, filled with the gladsome thoughts of a child and yet expressed as if coming from a much older person's mind and carrying ideas one would not expect to find in a child.

For example, here is "The Discontented Fountain," written by Hope when she was 12 years old:

Said the Fountain to the Fairy,
As he splashed his silver waters,
"I become both sad and weary
As I play here in all weathers,
For I want a face like others,
A face with eyes to see with,
And a kindly tongue to speak with."
Said the discontented Fountain.

Then the Fairy laughed right gaily,
And she said, "You foolish Fountain,
Don't you wear a fresh face daily?
I can see the sky and mountain,
And the butterflies and thrushes,
And the willows and the rushes,
And myself, when I peep over
For a drink from your sweet waters.
If I had so many faces,
I should be content and happy,
Not a discontented Fountain."

There is a delightful lilt in her little poem, "In the Garden," written when she was thirteen and from which the following stanza may be quoted:

High up in the elm tree the parent rooks are calling;
Looking for the sheltered nests they left behind last year,
Hanging little cradles where there is no fear of falling
For the fluffy downy babies who will soon be here.

A DIFFERENT sentiment altogether is touched on in "Alone" which begins:
There's no one here to play with me,
Down by the lonely summer sea,
But sea-gulls, that with rusty cry
Wheel out and swoop down from the sky
To sit upon the waves and float
As lightly as a fairy boat.

Perhaps the criticism might be made that some of Hope's poems are rather too literary, based not so much on the observations of a child as on the memory of how poems are made. Her ballad, "To London Town," fresh as it is and lifting beyond doubts may be quoted as showing the influence of reading on her thoughts:

The broad road leads to London town,
The hills rise up and the road leads down;
And beyond the hills the lights are gay,
And the streets are paved with gold, they say,
As the lads and lassies trip along.
The whole wide world seems filled with song.
In my new pink bonnet and russet gown
I, too, will go to London town.

I've run away from London town
In my new pink bonnet and russet gown.
I've run from the lights and laughter gay
To the hills, where the heather spreads away
Like a purple sea on each side of me,
And a bird is singing on every tree.
And the sun and the wind laugh all day long,
As I run away from London town.

But the child is uppermost in Hope's quaint "If I Were King," written recently:

If I were king on a golden throne
And all I saw was quite my own
To make and build as I thought fit
I'd have a merry time of it.

I'd make the houses all of glass,
And railway trains to run on grass,
And mounds of sweets and things folks say
Aren't good for little boys to-day.

If I were queen with a golden crown,
And sat in velvets on a throne,
And wore glass slippers on my feet,
I'd have a merry time of it.

For all the babies should have wings,
And toys, and boats, and other things,
And dolls that never broke at play.
Such golden-hours would slip away.

If I were a king or a queen, you see,
The world would topsy-turvy be;
So it's quite as well—no, better far,
That things should stay just as they are.

A Barefaced Tragedy

by P. W. Luce

HE was but a lad! A few months ago he had been happy, care-free, full of the joy of life!

But now his face bore unmistakable signs which should be only on the countenance of men who have seen much, dared much, done much.

It was not his fault that he had changed. This thing had grown upon him slowly, insidiously, until at last it could no longer be hidden.

Neighbors smiled cruelly when he passed by. Candid friends lacerated his finer feelings through their kindly-meant advice. In the bosom of his own family he was the butt of jokes.

Taunted beyond endurance, the youth decided to end it once and for all. He was alone when he reached the Great Decision. He was glad that there would be none to stay his hand. Walking boldly into his father's room, young Cyril found the white powder he needed to accomplish his dreadful task. He had often seen his father, a chemist, use this with meticulous care, for a perfectly legitimate purpose. But he did not know how much he would need for the end in view.

"Better too much than not enough," Cyril remarked bitterly to himself, as he shook out the innocent-looking substance.

Strange that such potency should lurk in that white stuff!

Cyril gazed at his reflection in the glass. Never again, he thought with a slight tinge of regret, would mortal eye see that countenance as he saw it at that moment.

At the thought he hesitated, but only for a second. Then the memory of the jibes and taunts steeled him in his determination. He could not—would not—stand this any longer!

He closed his eyes. After all, it was not so very difficult. He brushed away tiny flecks of foam from his lips.

Then, very deliberately, and with admirable composure, Cyril picked up an old-fashioned razor.

But he shivered as the hot blood spurted.

Father, mother, brothers and sisters gazed on that fair face that had so changed during their brief absence. They looked on the loved features in speechless silence.

Then Maisie, the youngest, shrieked out:
"Oh, lookit, momma! At last! Cyril's had his first shave!"

And the father added:
"Next time, young fellow, use your own shaving powder, or you'll hear from me."

Divorce Gifts

THE facetious suggestion that divorce presents will be the latest fad before long should not be dismissed with an idle jest. It is an idea full of the most gracious possibilities. Being an entirely new conception, it can be developed along carefully thought out lines. It must not be strangled in its infancy by the annoyances incidental to the giving of wedding and Christmas presents. If at the outset certain clear rules are established, there should be no possibility of that duplication so provokingly prevalent in the other cases, particularly weddings.

In divorce cases certain conditions may be taken for granted that did not pertain when the couples were engaged. There is a touch of unsophistication about those who contemplate sauntering to the altar that is lacking in the rush to the divorce court, and which enables them to welcome six sets of bath tubs from friends who read the store advertisements. As each engagement is announced, friends, near-friends and would-be friends turn gloomily to the eternal question, "What shall we give them?" In the prevalent despair, duplicates are duplicated over and over again with no dire results. At the worst, the contracting parties become shut off from the world by piles of cut glass vases and water sets until a simple gift of a dozen clothes-pins or a trower hanger is welcomed with shrieks of joy and an invitation to the donor to spend a week with the honeymooners.

When a divorce has been granted, it may be taken as read that the couple have put in several months at steady housekeeping during which time they have almost certainly accumulated various more or less useful household goods to counterbalance the wedding presents. This makes it essential that the person who prides himself on showing thoughtful discrimination in giving, should wrinkle his brows before rushing out to buy something for a divorcee. Casseroles, carving sets and embroidered pillow cases are sure to be de trop. Really thoughtful donors, however, will not overlook the fact that certain articles, such as rolling pins, which are so liable to become chipped or showy, may be renewed appropriately and without giving very much offense. Such mementoes of the happy occasion should be sent through the mail. Delivered personally, they may call for long and involved explanations that will get the caller nowhere except quickly into the middle of the street.

For gentlemen divorcees there is a wide range of possible gifts. A neatly framed photograph of his late partner's millinery bill—the one referred to by his counsel as "breaking the camel's back"—will keep the light of other days smoldering in his eyes. Where only a formal acknowledgment is necessary, a card of bachelor buttons will convey the idea of tender solicitude. That is a gift that cannot be duplicated too often. Where the connection is particularly close, a pair of the new "wear-proof" wire-wove hose—the kind that, if they wear out in ten years, you take them back and exchange them for corn-plasters.

Gifts for the lady are not so easily decided, woman being so much more of a self-contained proposition than a man. Thoughtful ingenuity, however, will find a way. It may be suggested, meantime, and until the custom has become more amenable to definite rules, that the three-fold gift of a parrot that swears, a monkey that chews tobacco, and a cat that comes back with the milk, will—if not duplicated more than several times—fill any possible void that the decree nisi can create.

All these ideas will be useless, however, if something is not done to check the evil of undue duplication. First and foremost there should be established in each community a divorce gifts clearing house. Here divorcees could file lists of all their earthly possessions. To this central depot intending donors could refer.

"Dear Depot," they would write; "please advise if Mrs. Ponsonby Smithers, who was recently divorced from her husband, owns a platinum trying pan?" Or, "I am hesitating between a roller-bearing umbrella and an indiarubber toothpick for Benjamin P. Jorka, who was divorced last week. Kindly let me know what, in your opinion, he appears to be most pressing in need of."

If these suggestions are incorporated by those who are engineering the new fad, there is no reason why it should not enjoy a long vogue.

Corns a Cause for Gladness

IF you want to avoid rheumatism or gout, cultivate your corns.

"Corns, bunions and almost all other callouses of the feet are merely Nature's wonderful provision for extracting from the human body the chalk that sets up rheumatism and gout."

This salce to foot sufferers emanates from Mr. T. Gillings, the well-known chiropodist, who has tended the feet of almost every judge, sheriff and lord mayor of London within the past fifty years.

"The corn," explained Mr. Gillings, "draws the chalk from the body like a magnet. Invariably when the corn or other callosity ceases to grow the twinges of gout or rheumatism are felt."—Tit-Bits.

One Honest Judge

A MAN was being tried in court on a charge of stealing a pig. When sentencing the prisoner the magistrate made a long speech, in which he pointed out that pig-stealing had been rife in the neighborhood recently, that it was exceedingly wrong to steal pigs, and that no more pigs must be stolen. In conclusion he exclaimed:

"Unless I make an example of this man it's very certain none of us will be safe."—Pearson's Weekly.

BALLOONS RELEASED

Miniature, Hot Air Dirigibles Sent Up From Roof of Gordons Ltd.

Shoppers in the downtown district this morning were surprised to see what was taken as the passage of an American sausage balloon. It developed, however, that the balloon was one of six dirigible shaped hot air bags that were sent up from the roof of Gordons Ltd., Yates Street. Each balloon carried advertising matter and an order. Three orders for $5.00 each and three for half that amount were included in the balloons. The first balloon, eight feet by six in depth, was filled at ten o'clock, gaining its source of energy from a small burner. The burners lasted for twenty minutes, in which time the balloon ascended some 1,000 feet and drifted backwards and forwards over the city. At the lower levels the balloons traveled to the northeast, and at higher altitudes commenced their return journey on a veering wind. On the ground a small army of boys followed underneath the balloons on bicycles, and the merchandising orders enclosed in the floating bags proved the subject of much lively racing on the ground. Deputy Chief Munro watched the balloon ascension, seeing that all was in order regarding burners in the hot air balloons. Men's Society Meet.—Mr. Hallam reported on the progress of the Memorial Tablet, which is to be installed in St. John's church for those who went overseas from the parish, at the regular monthly meeting of the Men's Society of the St. John's Church. This society which had made its object to have this carried out report that half the funds have been secured, and that the remainder will be forthcoming in the near future.

TEACHERS DELIGHTED WITH RECEPTION

About 1,000 Teachers Arrive From Seattle and District Points

Arriving on board two steamers, the S. S. Indianapolis and the S. S. Sioux, at 2:30 p. m., 1,000 members of the teaching profession from Seattle and the surrounding districts became the guests of this city today. On arrival of the boats the party split into three groups, for facility of entertaining, each group being given colored tickets. The weather, almost too hot on previous days, was ideal, a fact that won the hearts of the visitors to the capital city in no uncertain manner. On arrival the party convened at the Parliament Buildings to be received by Attorney-General Manson, for the Premier, and Mayor Marchant in person when addresses of welcome were tendered. Later the groups were photographed on the steps of the buildings. The first party, with yellow tickets, were driven to the famous Benvenuto gardens at 3 p. m., and will spend two hours there. The second group, with white tickets, were shown over the Provincial Parliament Buildings, taking keen interest in the Provincial Library and Museum. Later these were driven to Government House, where a reception was tendered by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Walter C. Nichol. The third group, blue tickets, convened at Craigdarroch, where the Victoria and District teachers took charge of their entertainment. This group later joined the main party at Government House. The visitors took a keen interest in the administrative buildings, and expressions of delight were general when the groups were driven to see the various beauty places of the city and district. Particularly delighted were those who were taken to the Butchart's gardens, now presenting a glorious sight with its turf of bloom. Highly pleased with their visit and delighted with the cordial reception

CITY REPRESENTED AT ANNUAL ASSEMBLY

Rev. Dr. Clay and Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson to Represent the City

Vancouver Island is to be represented at the Presbyterian Assembly, which will be held at the St. Stephen's church, Winnipeg, by four ministers and four laymen. Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson of the city is to represent Victoria at the gathering accompanied by Rev. W. G. Wilson of the First Presbyterian, Rev. J. W. Dobbin, of Qualicum and Rev. James Hood, of Courtenay will also attend representing the island district. Four laymen will leave here tonight with the four representatives to attend the assembly which is the forty-eighth annual meeting. The following are the laymen: Messrs. Walter Walker, W. A. Jamieson and McNaughton while the other layman has yet to be chosen. Some thousand ministers and laymen are expected to attend the meeting at Winnipeg. Special arrangements are being made to accommodate the large gathering, which will be in that city for nine days. Reports from the various provinces will be forwarded at this Dominion-wide conference. Many returned missionaries will attend the meeting, and three sessions a day will be held. There will be very little time for recreation, but a social committee will be formed to look after the recreation programme and make the visit of delegates to the city as pleasant as one as possible. Altogether 500 delegates are expected to attend, while families of the delegates will make up the thousand anticipated.

ST. ANDREW'S BOYS' DEPT.

The junior boys of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. MacInnes, of Leonard Street, on Friday evening. After refreshments new officers were appointed for the summer session. The following appointments were made: Chief ranger, William MacInnes; sub-chief, James Moskop; cache, James Bishop; tally, Holmes Coates; mentor, A. C. Smith. Each boy upon being appointed to office was congratulated by the mentor and applauded by his fellows. Holmes Coates and A. C. Smith thanked Mr. and Mrs. MacInnes for their abundant hospitality. Mrs. MacInnes replied. The rest of the evening was spent with games and competitions. The next meeting of the camp will be Friday next at 4:30 o'clock.

WILL REPAIR WESLEY'S GRAVE

World Famous Burial Ground to Be Improved

London, June 3.—A forlorn and decaying object is the monument over the grave of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. The little graveyard where Wesley was buried is behind the famous chapel in the City Road, and is visited by thousands of pilgrims. The turf in this place of burial is meagre and impoverished, and the asphalt paths are cracked. The monument itself is in a very serious state of disrepair. With its long inscriptions, telling of his life and labors of the evangelist, it is blackened with soot. The surface of the stonework is scarred and defaced, and the archway is falling to pieces. It is well known that the atmosphere of London corrodes certain kinds of stone, and this one shows the atmospheric effect in pronounced deterioration. The atmosphere has bitten deep into the surface of the plinth of the memorial, and honeycombed it with ruts and fissures. Appeal is Made. The memory of John Wesley deserves something other than this crumbling monument in a decaying wilderness. Nearly two years ago the First London District Synod passed a resolution, drawing the attention of the trustees of Wesley's chapel to the unkempt condition of Wesley's burial ground, and urgently requesting that "an appeal be made to the Methodist people for funds to put the historic site in a state worthy of its traditional importance." A renovation fund has now been opened and £10,000 is asked for. It is estimated that this amount will be required to defray the cost of repairing the chapel and the church-yard with its memorials.

PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONS

The Presbyterian Church in Canada now has the largest force in its history, 1922, in missionary work. Its fields in India, China, Formosa, Korea, Trinidad, British Guiana and among the Chinese in Canada. The recruits for 1922, in missionary work, represent the largest total in recent years. The number of volunteers for future service also shows a marked increase. Modern mission work is no longer confined to its evangelistic aspects, although that is still the primary object. The twentieth century programme of missionary activity also includes educational, medical, industrial and literary work. The Canadian Presbyterian Church is responsible for the missionary care of fifteen millions of Eastern peoples through the allotment of fields through the comity of Missions. But even with the force at present at work only a small percentage of this large total is being reached, thus leaving wide fields to be occupied as men and means are forthcoming.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE WOULD CLOSE TORONTO TIGHTER ON SUNDAY

Toronto, June 3.—Rev. W. M. Rochester, representing the Lord's Day Alliance, appeared before the Board of Police Commissioners, asking that the law regarding the sale of ice cream and tobacco on Sunday be more stringently enforced. Subsequently Chief of Police Dickson announced that on account of the absence of Judge Denton, owing to illness, the board had not arrived at any decision. No complaint regarding Sunday concerts was received.

Saves Mother's Time

Used in 50,000 HOMES

4X

OVER 50,000 housewives have proved the advantages of using Shelly's 4X Bread. They have no patience with the old adage: "Woman's work is never done." They believe that woman's work—subject, of course, to its different conditions—can be organized as man's has been. They have learned the value of time and its ordering, the importance of a wider life, the dangers to health and heart and mind—yes, and soul—of an endless round of drudgery. So they bring into service every modern convenience that will save their time. But they do not order Shelly's 4X Bread merely for the time it saves them. They have proved its wholesomeness, its never-failing freshness. They like its crisp crust and its tender white "inside." Order Shelly's 4X Bread today.

LET ORIENTALS GO HOME, SAYS MANSON

They Are Holding Jobs From Whites, He Declares

Unemployed Say 1,000 Still Need Jobs in Victoria

The Hon. A. M. Manson, Attorney-General and Minister of Labor, came out against the wholesale employment of Orientals by many firms during the conference which he had with municipal representatives on unemployment.

Many Orientals are still employed in the lumber, shingle and logging industries and in other lines of work, it was pointed out.

Mr. Manson said that this condition was being investigated by the Department of Labor with the idea of making a direct appeal to industrial leaders.

"If we had," said Mr. Manson, "the hearty co-operation of the employers for three weeks in attending to this situation, I am satisfied beyond a doubt that we would have our difficulties solved. We might have some Orientals unemployed, but let them go back to their own countries. We want British Columbia to be a white Province. The Retail Merchants' organization, through their Provincial executive is very vigorously attacking this Oriental problem, and organized labor has been doing so for many years. Others should do likewise. Although the desired results in entirety may not be immediate, yet they will be certain in the end."

There are one thousand persons in Greater Victoria in dire need of employment to provide themselves and families with actual necessities of life, Mr. Manson said that the department of unemployed persons on Wednesday had told him.

"Many of these unemployed are not listed," he said. "Their pride does not permit them to ask for anything in the nature of charity, and they do not like to disclose their real necessities. Nevertheless, their cases are urgent—in many cases very urgent indeed."

Mr. Manson pointed out the contract between the employer who refuses to give preference to whites and the C. P. R. which recently undertook to replace on the Mainland

WATCH EXTINGUISHER CHEMICALS IN ACTION

Fire Officials Present at Demonstrations of Two Agencies.

Interested spectators at a demonstration of fire extinguishers, in the hand siphon class, were Chief Vernon Stewart, Deputy Chief Munro, and Alderman R. W. Perry, yesterday. Demonstrations were staged in the morning by T. B. Ross, of T. B. Ross and Company, and in the early part of the afternoon by M. S. Soules, general manager of the Prono Company of Ontario.

In the morning demonstration several types of fires were dealt with, miniature blazes being instituted on the vacant ground at the rear of the market buildings. Similar tests were held in the afternoon, in this case a wood fire, soaked in gasoline being extinguished in 30 and 2-5 seconds. Pitch and gasoline were used for most of the tests.

FIND MANY LOTS FOR CULTIVATION

But Few People Want to Cultivate City Property, Aldermen Say

The city has plenty of lots which could be leased to private interests for cultivation, Mayor Marchant and members of the civic City Council found in course of an extensive automobile tour of the city Friday morning.

While there are plenty of lots, many of them an acre or more in extent, few people are anxious to grow things, members who make inspection trip Friday explained. The city they said, was prepared to lease many of these lots for cultivation purposes for a long term of years provided people would accept this offer. The problem was to find cultivators, they said.

Ways and means of attracting people to lot cultivation are now under consideration but no decision has been reached yet. The city is anxious to make some use of its vacant lots and at the same time increase production of foodstuffs.

SECOND FATALITY OCCURS AT GORGE

Canoe Capsizes, Throwing Occupants Into Rapids Under Bridge

Visiting War Veteran Succumbs

The second fatality to take place at the Gorge this year occurred at 8:05 p. m. last evening, when a canoe rushing the rapids beneath the Gorge bridge capsized, throwing its two occupants into the water. Edward Carroll Fitzgerald Oxley, of Sioux Lookout, Ontario, and his young ward, Frederick Hall, aged 13, struggled in the water for some time before aid could be brought.

Oxley went under several times, persisting in his endeavor to care for Hall. Taken ashore unconscious, Oxley failed to recover, despite the use of a pulmotor and artificial respiration. The young lad, Hall, seizing hold of the upturned canoe soon after the accident, was brought ashore.

The actions of three boys near the scene at the time nearly averted the fatality, and their quickness was the one bright feature of the tragic incident. Kenneth Scholes and J. Ewing were swimming in the water at the time, and made immediately for the scene of the accident. J. Good, 3116 Washington Avenue jumped into the water fully dressed and towed Oxley ashore. Scholes and Ewing succeeded in bringing young Hall ashore to safety.

All three boys worked at artificial respiration, and rendered services that under less unfortunate conditions, would have averted the fatal result. Chief Brogan, of the Saanich police, Chief Dawley of the Esquimalt police, and Dr. H. A. Whillans were called to take charge of subsequent proceedings.

Cause of Death?

From information received from eye witnesses, Chief Dawley, of the Esquimalt police, stated to-day that heart failure may possibly have been the cause of the fatality. To some it did not appear that Oxley sank, but became partially submerged and, as he struggled to get the boy to the canoe. When taken from the water there was air still in his body, a fact that would not be likely with anyone who had been entirely submerged for long, it is asserted.

The late Mr. Oxley came to this city recently, and was staying at the Young residence, Admiral's Road, intending to pass the summer here, before returning to Sioux Lookout.

He was about 45 years of age, an employee of the Fur Department of the Hudson's Bay Company at Sioux Lookout. During the war he served as captain in the West Yorkshire Regiment, gaining distinction. His ward, Frederick Hall, was the son of a regimental companion, who was killed in action. Young Hall was adopted and cared for by the unfortunate victim of the accident after the armistice was signed.

Relatives of the late Mr. Oxley reside at Brighton, England. The boy's mother and other relatives live in Sands Fomentary, where an inquest will be held on Monday morning, commencing at 11 o'clock.

ROUNDTOP CASE AGAIN BEFORE COURTS

Pulice, Beneficiary Under Disputed Will, Bringing an Appeal

At the forthcoming sitting of the Court of Appeal to open here on Tuesday at 11 a.m., the Franklin Riah Roundtop will be brought to light again in an appeal taken by Pulice from a decision of Mr. Justice Gregory in favor of the sister of the late F. R. Roundtop, when the will of the latter was upset. Pulice, a beneficiary under the will, is bringing an appeal, citing the Standard Trust Company as respondent. S. T. Hamlin, H. A. Maclean, K.C., and G. C. McGeer will act for the respondents.

Unusual interest was aroused in the action at its trial in the Supreme Court. Pulice being a well-known resident. The late testator was a man here and made the acquaintance of Pulice at that vocation, bequeathing him a legacy of approximately $50,000 at the time of making his will. The will was upset in favor of a sister of the testator, who contested the will.

The list of cases to be heard at the present sittings of the Court of Appeal includes:

THIN BLOODED PEOPLE

Need a Tonic to Enrich the Blood and Restore the Health.

Some people have a tendency to become thin-blooded, just as others have an inherited tendency to rheumatism, or to nervous disorders. The condition in which the blood becomes so thin that the whole body suffers, comes on so gradually that anyone with a natural disposition in that direction should watch the symptoms carefully. Bloodlessness, or anaemia, as the medical term is, can be corrected more easily in the earlier stages than later. It begins with a tired feeling that rest does not overcome, the complexion becomes pale and breathlessness on slight exertion, such as going up stairs, is noticed. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a home remedy that has been most successful in the treatment of troubles due to thin blood. With pure air and good food, these blood-enriching pills are the correct treatment when the symptoms described above are noticed. The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. M. Chase, of Trenton, Ont., who says: "I can highly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who suffer from anaemia and nervous exhaustion. For three years I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and until I began taking these pills no treatment seemed to do more than give me temporary relief. I had read of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were doing for others and finally decided to try them myself. I further decided to give them a fair trial and kept on taking them regularly for several months and I am glad to say have derived permanent relief. I feel that I can safely and honestly recommend this wonderful medicine."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
