

DEBATES AND PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

OF THE

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

CONVENED AT THE CITY OF SACRAMENTO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1878.

E. B. WILLIS AND P. [illegible]TOCKTON,

OFFICIAL ST[illegible]

STATE OFFICE, [illegible]

cause a printed schedule of such rates and fares to be properly framed and hung in a conspicuous place at every railroad depot and every railroad station in the State.

"SEC. 14. The Railroad Commissioners shall perform all duties in relation to the railroads, other than those prescribed in the last two sections, as may be required of them by law."

MR. WHITE. All that I wished to do was to show that I gave them absolute power; and that they were to arrange the fares and freights as in their judgment should be fair and just. Now, is it common sense for this scribbler to write down that Leland Stanford would be willing to put that power into the hands of any three men in this State? I regard it as the silliest nonsense and the most malicious sort of lying that could be got up.

MR. HUESTIS. I move that ... ution resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege. This is a matter of no very great importance, perhaps, but I take two exceptions to this publication. The first is, that it insinuates that the whole Committee on Corporations, in advocating this scheme, have been in the interest of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. Now, sir, it seems to me that the daily denunciations of the press in the interest and pay of the corporations, notoriously so of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, should have protected us from any such imputation. The principal organ here has denounced us as Communists, and has given virus to it by saying that we are Communists as bad as Jesus Christ and the Supreme Court of the United States. [Laughter.] Well, now, it seems to me that that should have been sufficient to have demonstrated to the writer of this article that none of us had been stowed away in the pigeon-holes of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Again, sir, the writer is entirely mistaken when he assumes to say that the magnates of the Central Pacific Railroad Company desire this Commission, because they believe they can control it. Now, sir, that is a mistake, because they made an experiment on three Commissioners which proved disastrous. I have it from authority which I believe, that a certain railroad agent, or assumed railroad agent, approached one of the former three Commissioners with a proposition. He happened to be a man of honor, who had borne his country's flag on many a field. He was indignant to an extent amounting to a towering passion, and he made an appeal to the code—not to the Civil Code, not to the Penal Code, not to the code that obtains among railroads—but to the code which did obtain among gentlemen once. The officers of the railroad at once declared that the party who had approached this gentleman had done it without their authority, and they disowned him. Of course that stopped it. But the railroad took its revenge. When the Legislature met, through its conduit pipe it run into the Legislature the Hart bill. It repealed the law under which the then existing Commission had been carried on, and of course wiped out the Commission. And they substituted for it, and carried through the Legislature, by means which I need not reiterate, a proposition to have one Commissioner. It seems that they came to the conclusion that while they could not manage three, that one, as the Irishmen say, might be very convenient, and, therefore, they displaced the three Commissioners and took the one. It was given out that the Governor would veto the Hart bill, and it was believed by a great many people, but when he came to act on the matter his patriotism got the better of him, and he signed it. That was the end of that matter.

So, then, I say that the Central Pacific Railroad Company does not desire three Commissioners; that they desire either one, or the Legislature. That is what they want; and the accomplished author of this letter is laboring under a delusion. Nor is that all. Even if it were possible for them to buy up the three Commissioners—which they have not been able to do yet—or experiment, the people could fall back and elect three others who have been under fire and come out unscathed; so I do not think we are in so much danger as the writer seems to think, of the three Commissioners. There is another thing in this matter—and I say here, that if the writer of this letter was not above suspicion—I would believe that he had been stowed, and that this attack was a weak device of the enemy. There is another matter in connection with this, since they have seen proper to provoke this attack upon us, which I may as well mention. Two or three years ago, the North American Review published an article which stated that the railroads no longer purchased votes in detail, but that when they wanted a Senator, they elected him—advanced cash enough to elect him—and that then they owned him during his term. The Central Pacific Railroad Company seems to have profited by that suggestion. They seem of late to have elected the Senator, and to have put a collar on him, with "Central Pacific Railroad Company" written upon it, so that if he got lost, or strayed, he could be recaptured and returned to his lawful owner. I am told here, by members of the last Legislature, that when the Hart bill was before the Legislature, he reappeared here and did his best to carry the Hart bill through. Therefore, it is, I say, that the learned author of this letter is barking up the wrong tree. He does not understand his business fully, and whatever may have been his purpose, he is mistaken altogether in his facts—if he has any facts—or in his conjectures; and he does not pretend that they are anything more than conjectures. It seems to me, in fact, that he had been dreaming, and it was nothing more than a feat of somnambulism which dictated this letter.

MR. HUESTIS. I renew my motion.

MR. O'DONNELL. I rise to a question of privilege. I rise to a question of privilege. I have a right here on this floor.

THE CHAIR. Does the gentleman withdraw his motion?

MR. HUESTIS. No, I will take the ruling of the Chair.

THE CHAIR. You are not in order, Mr. O'Donnell.

MR. SCHELL. It seems to me that the gentleman has a right to be heard on a question of privilege. I move that he be allowed to go on.

MR. O'DONNELL. It won't take two minutes.

MR. HUESTIS. If the house desires to hear it I have no objection.

THE CHAIR. Doctor, go on.

MR. O'DONNELL.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege as a member of this body, and respectfully request my colleagues to give me their attention. Every man familiar with parliamentary rules knows that members of the State and National Legislature can be called to account for words spoken in debate. In other words, so long as they act in accordance with their sworn duty as members of the legislative department of the government, they will be defended and protected. In the discharge of my duty as a delegate I gave offense to the managers of a vulgar newspaper called the Chronicle. I differed from that newspaper on the law of libel. I voted for a measure which I deemed essential to the protection of society from the attacks of professional libelers. In this step I acted in concert with some of the most honored members of this body, and for the exercise of my right and privilege I have been vilified by the paper which I confess ought to be nameless among honorable men. I shall at the proper time appeal to the Courts and endeavor to aid the authorities in their endeavors to bring these men to justice. I do not think them worthy of the notice of this body. I do not think that any of the gentlemen whom this mongrel paper has slandered ask the passage of any resolution, nor do they require any vindication. All I ask now is the privilege of assuring every member of this body that the charges published against me in this nameless sheet are utterly false and without foundation, and I pledge myself that in due time I will cram the libel down the throats of the infernal libelers. I thank you kindly for your attention.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: Now, if there is no other gentleman who wishes to rise to a question of privilege, I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Larkin in the chair, on the question of the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the first section.

THE SECRETARY read:

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary.

MR. BROWN. I move its adoption.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I believe it was understood that the debate should exhaust itself. The debate has taken the range of the entire article.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection to section one——

MR. GRACE. It seems to me that the debate has exhausted itself. I don't see as there are any speakers here. The section is good enough.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no amendments to section one the Secretary will read section two.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I wish to point out what in my judgment is a little error in the first section, and I was in hopes that the Chairman of the committee would be here this evening, as I had a short conversation with him upon that point. It is in the fifth and sixth lines of the first section of the report, and I hope that this will not be passed so that it cannot be taken up again. I am not ready to offer an amendment, but I suggest that the words, "invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases," means altogether too much. It means more, I believe, than the committee themselves intended to convey, because they may mean such diseases as are contagious or infectious, but may inflict any people, and they certainly do not wish to have the police power of this State invoked for the purpose of excluding them simply upon that ground. Now, the section should certainly be modified so as to reach only the point aimed at. It is not intended that if a person have the smallpox, or anything of that kind that may be contagious, that for that reason we would send them out of the State. Yet this is broad enough to cover that. Now, the section should be amended so that it would mean exactly what the committee, I think, had in their minds when the section was framed. I hope that there will be no action taken, but that it can still be amended. There is discussion to be had, and it should be had now, but allow the Chairman, as I know it is in his mind, an opportunity to perfect the section as he desires. I would move that we do not pass any section to-night in any way so that it cannot be called up again in the regular way.

MR. STUART. I second the motion.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is moved and seconded that the section be temporarily passed.

MR. FREUD. Mr. Chairman: I hope no such proceeding will be adopted. The Chairman will have an opportunity, when it comes up in Convention, to amend it as he may deem fit. I think we can go on with our usual business with propriety.

MR. AYERS. I send up an amendment to section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'shall,' in the first line, to and including the word 'and,' in the second line."

MR. AYERS. The object of that amendment is to make the enactment of such laws and the exercise of such powers mandatory.

MR. STUART. I suppose the whole article is open to discussion.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is all under consideration.

SPEECH OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. I have been a patient listener in this Convention, and have not been on the floor since its first organization—over two months ago. I have heard what was said with a great deal of instruction—sometimes; and sometimes with disgust and disappointment. I have been, during my life, in California nearly thirty years. During the thirty years that I have been here I have been a cultivator of the soil. I have made my living, raised and educated a large family through the cultivation of the soil. I have employed hundreds and hundreds of men. I have never been in the political arena; it is distasteful to me, and consequently I know little of the political movements, and of the management, and the plans that are used in the State for self-preference. I do not know whether I shall get through to-night with what I want to say, or not. I am somewhat unprepared and unaccustomed to public speaking. I will only make a few remarks, and then prepare myself for some future day on this article a little better.

Sir, I am opposed to all these sections from number one to number eight. They are not proper to be placed in any Constitution of the United States, let alone ours. It is in direct conflict with the Constitution of the United States and the treaty-making power. It is a boyish action for us to admit either one or the whole of these articles to be engrafted in our organic law. It would be the laughing-stock of the world, a disgrace to the State, a movement toward secession, and a disregard of the constitutional laws of the United States. I am not prepared to be one of the advocates of, or one of the silent listeners here and have it pass. I believe, sir, it is in conflict with article six of the Constitution of the United States, which says:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

That is sufficient for me, sir. That is sufficient for any intelligent gentleman in this body to reflect upon before he will take up a hotch potch, you may call it, or a set of articles of that character, that is neither one act or another, that belongs to a Constitution. It looks to me like the act of a ward political meeting, for the purpose of catching votes, or like some of the acts of this Convention in that behalf. I do not desire to reflect upon any gentleman, or the course of any gentleman's procedure here; neither do I desire to make an unparliamentary remark.

MR. O'DONNELL. You say you have employed hundreds of men; have you not employed hundreds of Chinamen?

MR. STUART. I have, sir, thousands of them, and hundreds of white men and thousands of white men, too.

MR. O'DONNELL. I thought so.

MR. STUART. That is what I am coming to now. There is not a man in California in my profession, that of farming, but what employs, directly or indirectly, the Chinaman. The Chinaman becomes your cook, the Chinaman becomes your servant, he becomes your hewer of wood and drawer of water, even in the City of San Francisco. The Chinaman has been, for the last twelve or fourteen years, a hobby-horse for all political parties to pass their resolutions on and make their platforms. Before that, it was the honest contraband in the fence. The honest contraband and the Democratic party came hand and hand into every campaign until, finally, the question was ended in blood and war. The honest contraband now is never heard of, but the Chinaman is in the fence in his stead. The Chinaman is now used by both parties, or by all the parties, if there be more than two—I believe there are three parties now. One party, which is probably like other eruptions of that character, may throw something upon the surface that may remain there. There are a good many elected by this Workingmen's party, young men that I delight to know, men of talent, of character, of responsibility, and I hope they will succeed as politicians, I hope they will succeed as men, but I hope they will not lay themselves up in this Convention for the purpose of future promotion, for future renown. Here is the place to make it without regard to their political party, without regard to who will be Governor, or who will be the Judges, or who will be the next representatives in our Legislature and in our Congress. These things, sir, are what I am astonished at. This thing is what I have listened to for months with a great deal of calmness and a great deal of interest. These are matters which the gentlemen who are foremost in their aspirations probably know better than I do what their motives are. I do not intend to impugn them.

But let me go back a little further. In eighteen hundred and fifty, I believe it was, in San Francisco, there was a celebration of the admission of California into the Union. I think it was October fourteenth; the State was admitted on September ninth. At that time, sir, if I am not mistaken, the Chinamen, few as they were, were admitted to a post of honor, and they followed the officers of the State and city in the parade. From that time down to the war, every movement of our government and every movement of our State, was to induce the Chinaman to come here and to capture the oriental trade. There were treaties made, first by force, by Porter, for he went with the navy, next by peace, and next by Mr. Burlingame, who was at one time in the Congress of the United States. The Burlingame treaty admitted, and has since admitted, the Chinaman to our country as free probably as any other treaty that has been made among the nations. That power lies in the government. There have been steamboats between here and China subsidized, and there have been other connections made and railroads built since. The Chinese have been the laborers of this coast for almost twenty years. White men we have plenty of here; and, sir, I will go further. If I was a member of a Constitutional Convention of the United States, I would raise my voice and put in an article there to repeal the naturalization laws. We have over forty million of inhabitants now, of Americans—foreign and native born. We have too many. We have thousands and tens of thousands of white men traveling this State and the United States, voluntary idlers—not involuntary. We have a class of so-called white laborers that never have worked, never intend to work, and never will work. I do not desire to go into details on that subject now. I desire more especially to have this article passed over until the Chairman of the committee comes in here so that he can explain them to me. Looking at it as a juror, it looks like a perfect hotch potch—nothing in it. There is not a section in the report that should be put into any school book, let alone the Constitution of the State. It is all very pretty to talk about, and the speech of my friend, the Colonel from Los Angeles, Colonel Ayers, was all very beautiful, handsomely arranged, beautifully delivered, and it almost, as Agrippa said to Paul, converted me. Also, my young friend to the right, Mr. Freud, just from his college days. He was eloquent, but there was no pith in it. It was a little as if we were upon a jury and some lawyer was prosecuting a Chinaman for some act he had done. Unfortunately our friend from Los Angeles quoted all his authorities from the minority report of the different Judges.

MR. AYERS. Not all of them.

MR. STUART. Well, most of them, I took notice. He also quoted very lengthily from Roger Taney. I remember when Taney made another decision. Do you know what became of it? I remember his Dred Scott decision. I think that was the first political case that was ever decided in the United States, and I remember what that led to, and I think you do. I want to steer clear of all that kind of Constitution making here; I want none of those things to be thrown up to us when we are out, by the Courts, or by the United States Courts and these attorneys—that we are a set of school boys, here as a debating society, getting in things not competent to a Constitution, and things that would not be fit to put into a common school book. I will say, for one on this floor, that I am in favor of holding America for Americans—that Americans shall rule America. I have no confidence in this wave of discontent, as you call it; I have no confidence in anything that may be thrown on top. It is only intellect that will tell in the United States; nothing else. I will say, sir, that I believe, taking the farmers in this Convention—and I tried to find out how many there were—probably twenty—(what I mean by farmers is, men that have cultivated the land for years, men connected with farming pursuits, men who live upon farms and support themselves and families there)—I believe that a vote among them to-night, sir, would throw that report into the waste basket. They would say: "We want labor; let the Chinamen alone." Let the Government of the United States control the matter; place it in the hands where it belongs, and have none of this senseless tinkering here, as you would tinker an old tin kettle if it was leaking. I have not inflicted you before, and I do not intend to now. I am somewhat unaccustomed to this kind of business, consequently I am going to leave that to others who are better posted than myself—after awhile. Chinese immigration is injurious to the country, is it? Chinese immigration to the country has made it what it is. [Derisive laughter.] Labor has made it what it is. The labor that has been done for the last fifteen years has been the progressive labor of the State of California. It has been labor that has cleared up farms, that has planted fruit trees, that has built cities, that has done every thing except the mining, and even then, the tailings we always used to rent to Chinamen in early days. Everything has been done by this labor. There is only one class of men you can get for servants—I mean servants that will do what they are wanted to do. I believe one white man is worth two Chinamen; that one Chinaman is worth two negroes, and that one negro is worth two tramps [laughter and hisses]—that is, for labor. It is a well known fact that in all nature, both animate and inanimate, both animal and every other kind, that the weak fall under the march of the strong. That is a well settled fact in all governmental philosophy—that the weak fall under the strong. The black man has faded away, and the Chinaman takes his place as a laborer. He is for a day, and gone. The idea of the Chinaman, or the Chinese Empire, overthrowing the Anglo-Saxon race is preposterous. A hundred thousand a month scattered through the United States would not affect it in a hundred years. The growth of the United States is something, and their energy is a great deal; and it has surprised me that the laboring portion of the people of California have not captured all this floating capital of labor and rented it out to us at increased rates. That is what has been astonishing to me. No, it has not been astonishing. Almost every gentleman that ever got up, has been perfectly astonished at something. I have never been astonished. Nothing astonishes me.

One of the gentlemen from San Francisco said money never made the man. Well, that might be so, but I would like to see the man that ever made money and became very wealthy but what is a big man. I would like to see the nation that has large amounts of money and has become very rich, but has been great. That is a mistake. It fills in very well in speech; it is beautiful to the ear, and it is very well for those who are satisfied with declamation only. I will not say anything more about it now; some other time—to-morrow, may be, I will refer to it again. I would like to hear from the farmers here; the men who live by the cultivation of the soil; the producers; that class of men who form one half of the population of the United States—over twenty millions of men who feed the world. Two years of the stopping of farming—yes, one year—would starve one half of the nation to death. The farmers have made the country wealthy; the farmers and the producers have covered every sea with the white sails of our commerce, and have gridironed the land with railroads. They have controlled the lightning and sent it over the world. The farmers and cultivators have done this. Not the consumers that my young friend thinks so necessary. They are necessary if they will labor; but the consumer should eat the bread from the sweat of his brow, like all of us have done who lived here long, like myself. For three score years I have worked all the time; I have been laborious all my life; I have done hard manual labor; I have succeeded in doing that which I laid out to do, and consequently I have no regrets if I am not called a workingman. But I tell you that I am not speaking for any party. I do not belong to any party. I was elected by a nondescript party, Non-partisan. You can call me Independent, Republican, Union, American man. What I was speaking about was not my own nomination. What I say in regard to repealing the laws of naturalization I do not wish to be understood as saying for any party. It is my own doctrine; it is not the doctrine of any party I am acting with. I have got my own ideas upon the subject, and I have got them from reading the monthly review, not from my neighbors, and not from any political friends. Now, I would like to hear some gentleman from among the farmers say something in regard to this question.

REMARKS OF MR. NOEL.

MR. NOEL. Mr. Chairman——

MR. LARUE. I would ask the gentleman if he is a farmer?

MR. NOEL. Mr. Chairman: I do not desire to make a speech on the Chinese. I simply wish to express my satisfaction with section one, and my entire dissatisfaction with all the remainder of this report. I am prepared to go in this matter, that is, to rid the State of the curse of the Chinese, just as far as we can go consistently, and I am not willing to go any farther.

[Cries of "louder."]

My lungs are weak. This section one seems to me to be justified, if I understand it, by the exercise of the police power of the State.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I believe the gentleman is an attorney at law. I would ask him whether section one confers any new powers at all; whether there is anything in section one, as presented to us for adoption, that confers any additional powers upon the Legislature, or in any way changes or alters the condition of things as they exist to-day. In other words, whether section one amounts to anything at all?

MR. NOEL. I will answer the gentleman. I believe it confers no additional power on the Legislature. I believe to-day that the Legislature has this power. But it seems to be deemed necessary that the Convention should give expression to something upon this subject, and it seemed to me to be about as harmless an expression as we can have, therefore I shall support it. [Laughter.] There is one other section, Mr. Chairman, that I do not know but I might support—section three.

MR. BEERSTECHER. That secures the unanimous support of the Independent party.

MR. NOEL. Yes. The Independent party is entirely sound upon the Chinese question. Section three provides: "No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution." I see no objection to that, so far as I am concerned. I will support that and section one, but no more of this report.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: As a farmer who, like Mr. Stuart, has lived on a farm and raised his family and supported them out of the produce of the soil, I wish just to state at this time that I entirely dissent from his views in every particular that he has expressed them; and I will state, with regard to the farming community with which I am connected, that of the Pajaro Valley, the facts of the case. In eighteen hundred and fifty, eighteen hundred and fifty-one, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and eighteen hundred and fifty-four we had plenty of white labor. There was not a Chinaman in our neighborhood. We neither had them as cooks, servants, or in workhouses. We never employed them in the harvest field, or in any other capacity whatever. So it run on for some years, and finally the Chinamen began to come in and settle in our center, in Watsonville. They crowded in there, and as they crowded in the white labor seemed to disappear. I will say for the farmers of that valley, that they universally had a great objection to employing them at all, but at the time of the harvest they would employ them to bind; and they gave them out the jobs of binding in the field because they could not find white men. Now, as to this great army of tramps which is talked about as some contagious sort of people that come around, I will tell you that my house is on the trail that was the shortest trail from the County of Santa Clara to Santa Cruz, consequently a great many white laborers came with their blankets, and I will say that I never wanted a man that these men would not turn in and work when I asked them.

In the twenty-five years I lived on that trail I never was refused by a single man, and I never even, in any way, was troubled by the tramps. When I offered them work they invariably took it. That is my experience. Even the religious papers talk about tramps, and some of them even say they ought to be seized and put into prison, at the time when the Chinamen were housed around these men's houses. They have no sympathy at all with the men going around, and say they do not want work. I do not know of any such men traveling in this State, and I have had some experience about it. Now, sir, of late years they have been determined to get rid of these Chinamen, and they have worked in every way to prevent even their binding. For years I have not employed them. My son runs the farm, and he does not employ one of them; and he finds it more profitable not to employ them. Twenty-five cents an acre is saved by using white men to bind the grain, and that is about the difference in the wages. That is the tendency among the farmers as to being rid of these Chinamen. Let the white men come; the men that will bring their families and deal with the stores and give the storekeepers some sort of show. The storekeepers and ranchers are joining in this cry against the Chinese, because they do not get any trade from them. They have no wives and children. They live upon a little rice, and they go to their own little stores to get that. Now that is the state of this case.

Can a country possibly prosper under the doctrine of Mr. Stuart? Here is a large laboring class. They can scarcely do anything else but labor for others. They are all thrown out of employment and looked upon with contempt, and a gentleman says a negro or Indian is worth two of them. If these Chinese were out of the country, these men would have a chance of working; they would settle down; they would take a few acres of ground. I wish I had at least five or six families of that kind settled on my place; let them have a few acres of land, and have them work for me in the harvest and in the Spring, and they live on the few acres of land in the meantime. We are trying to get rid of the Chinese in any possible way we can. We do not mistreat them. I cannot have any sympathy with the ideas expressed by my fellow farmer, because I know and see that the country is held back by these people.

Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to speak on this question at all, but Mr. Stuart appealed to the farmers, and I was astonished at the doctrine entirely in favor of these men running over the country. A short time ago some men proposed to buy four or five ranches down towards Santa Barbara or Los Angeles somewhere. They had it all planned out to put a couple of hundred Chinamen on there with cattle. They had it all planned out on paper, and it made a splendid speculation. They were getting a large capital subscribed in San Francisco, and they were going to do this until, upon consulting with some friends, they were told: "Do not do it; the people will go down there and clean it out, if it costs every one of them their lives. They will rise up." And through very fear these men did not do this thing. Now, if we are to preach that kind of doctrine, there would be no fear, and California would be absorbed by these men. It is all nonsense to say that that kind of vassals can come here and do not drive men out of the country. There was no difficulty in getting white hired girls some ten years ago. These men in San Francisco tell us that white girls do not come here at all now because they know that these Chinamen are in every house. Is this a wholesome state of affairs? These laboring girls used to come here and finally became the wives of good men. Now they do not come here at all; they go west, or somewhere where there are no Chinamen. I trust that there are very few farmers that hold the views of Mr. Stuart. I hope so, for the honor of that glorious profession of farming, which I have always gloried in. When I left it for a time, I could not keep away from it, and there I am still. [Applause.]

THE CHAIRMAN. Order! Order!

MR. STUART. Mr. Chairman: A year ago last Summer about twenty or thirty white men came up near my place. I went down with others to employ them. I wanted fifteen, I think; another wanted ten or twelve, and so on; and we took them all. After a little they inquired: "How much will you give?" "A dollar a day and board." They wanted a dollar and a half. We gave them until Monday morning to make up their minds, otherwise we would get other help. Nobody came. They did not want work. They would sooner go to San Francisco afoot; sooner go back to their beer. It is always my rule to buy an extra amount of beef and deal it out piece by piece to these tramps that come along. We have got to feed them. I would employ them if they would work for me. But I have always found myself the loser. It is not necessary for me to tell the gentleman this. If he has been a farmer twenty-five years he knows it. Speaking of the girls; it has not been the case for ten years that you could get a good one that would stay and work. I have paid high prices. I have paid them as high as eighty dollars a month, and found them; sixty dollars a month, and found them, when I lived in San Francisco. I have paid forty dollars a month—nothing less than that. Take them up to the ranch, where they could not hear the bell ring along the railroad line, and they get sick in a week or ten days and go away.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would ask the gentleman if he considers one dollar a day and board fair wages?

MR. STUART. It is fair wages. You can get them East for twelve and fifteen dollars a month—that is half a dollar a day.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I don't wonder that they do not work for you.

MR. WHITE. Wages in the Pajaro Valley are two dollars a day, and always have been, so far as I know.

[Applause and confusion.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The house will keep order.

MR. INMAN. I would like to know if this is a political meeting?

THE CHAIRMAN. The Sergeant-at-Arms will keep order in the lobby.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Chairman: I must confess that I have listened to this general tirade with indignation. Who are tramps? There are just as good men as any on this floor tramps in California. We were all tramps in forty-nine, will the gentleman remember that? Many gentlemen here, forty-niners—I am a forty-niner myself, have tramped in this State, in the mines. We were all tramps then and carried our blankets on our backs, and have seen an honorable and honest workingmen as there are in God's world tramping in this State in search of work and could not find it. I venture to say that the gentleman is an employer of Chinese.

MR. STUART. Yes.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Yes; I knew it the first words that fell from his lips; that he had such a hatred of his white fellow man——

MR. STUART. No; I employ white men too.

THE CHAIRMAN. Keep order!

MR. O'SULLIVAN. When they can get cheap and nasty Chinese labor then they despise their white fellow man. But society in California is to blame for the tramps. Society is to blame; and society will be to blame if this infernal Chinese curse is not got rid of. It will be to blame for a terrible revolution in this State. The gentleman would like to change the naturalization laws if he was in a Constitutional Convention of the United States. He talked about his native Americanism. Well, I was not aware that the gentleman was an Indian. I believe they are the only true native Americans. I am an American, thank God! An American by adoption; born in Ireland; and am proud of being an American. I have fought under the stars and stripes, and was willing to go and fight and will always be when this country is in danger. Men are not asked where they were born when defenders are wanted for the American flag; they are not asked where they were born. The naturalization laws of the United States are open to them and they always will be, thank God; for men of the narrow views of Mr. Stuart are few and far between amongst true Americans, thank God for it. He talks about working. I have worked every day of my life in California for thirty years; for three years mining with pick and shovel, and I was a tramp then in Calaveras and Tuolumne Counties—a tramp with blankets, pick and shovel on my back. I have tramped since in the State as a journeyman printer. I have tramped from Los Angeles to San Francisco, and I am as good as that gentleman. I have tramped, and there are just as good men as any citizen of the United States, native born Americans too, poor unfortunate men that cannot get a day's work to do because the Chinaman is preferred—the infamous, dirty, Chinese cheap labor is preferred. He boasted of his working, and said he thought he could claim to be a workingman. That was probably intended as a fling at the Workingmen's delegates here; but I can assure the gentleman that we are all workers—I am, with both hands and brain—and I have always earned an honest living in California, thank God. And so have my fellow delegates of the Workingmen's party here.

REMARKS OF MR. LINDOW.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. Chairman: I am a mechanic, and a tailor by trade. I am not ashamed of it, at all. I left the bench to sit here and make a Constitution. That is my intention. We are talking about the Chinese. I never have employed a Chinaman, and I never will as long as I can wear a boot on my foot. I always employ white men, and I always made headway. My way was when I commenced to work—our standard was to go ahead. Now the gentlemen make their expressions of tramps. That is easy enough to be done. I got a young gentleman now working for me only nineteen years of age. If I so cut down his wages and give him a dollar a day, if he don't want to go to work for that of course he will go as a tramp, because he is able to make more than a dollar a day, and I could go and put a Chinaman in his place what will do the work just as well. It is the white men that makes the tramps. The Chinaman is not to blame. He came here and looked for work, but it was the workingman what looked at the dollar business, too, and which I don't call just as much as nothing at all; not for white men. Where shall he get his clothes from? I want the gentleman to answer that question, if he can live for a dollar a day. I lived fifteen years in the City of San Francisco. I know the whole constituency of the non-partisan, and the way they were elected, and I am certain that the gentleman tramped on the platform with his feet, because it was in Platt's Hall, and they said: "This time we mean it; there is something to be done for you in the Constitution, and we can put a clause in there not to let Chinese come any more." But the people was so often deceived before, as Colonel Barnes said, that they would not believe the non-partisans. Now here we get it right away, and the gentleman goes back on the people for doing something. Where there is a chance to do something for the people he goes back on it. That is not the idea of the workingman. We will fight, and we will have something in the Constitution that will rid this Chinese curse from this shore. And we will put a clause in the Constitution for to not let them come any more. Our children will be relieved of it. I thank God—for the most part I fight for them—that we will succeed and get a clause in the Constitution so that they will be relieved. For that reason I think, coming here as workingmen, we must do our duty and not go to work and say that they are tramps. I cannot see what the tramps are. If he has got no means of support he must go tramping. Who has built up the State of California anyhow? Who has built up the City of San Francisco? Was it the Chinese? I ask any gentleman on this floor if it was the Chinese what brought the City of San Francisco to that what it is to-day? If them Chinamen had been in this State there would not be a City of San Francisco to be seen, grown up in that short time. But suppose it has grown, it is only the workingmen has built it up. Men got little savings of five hundred dollars put in real estate, and got a home for three thousand dollars, or three thousand five hundred dollars, and paid for it in installments in ten years. That is what has built the city up. But the Chinamen were put in their places. So wages were cut down to four dollars, and three dollars, and two dollars a day. Many workmen paid on real estate there for five or six years, living in their own houses, but he could not work and pay the installments, and his property was sold, and he and his family runs around the street. That is what the Chinamen bring in here. That is the good they do. You can buy property cheaper now than you could five or six years ago. Men that paid thirty thousand dollars for their property, now you can have it for ten thousand dollars, because it won't be worth anything twenty years from now if this immigration is not stopped. You can have a whole fifty vara lot for the taxes you are willing to pay. That is the prosperity of Chinese. Now, Mr. President, I am willing to quit now for to-night, because I will get an opportunity some other time. Somebody else will spring up so soon as I go off.

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. Chairman: Assertions have been made here that I, as a foreign-born citizen, protest against. I will challenge any man to discuss that question upon the great principles of republicanism, which are liberty, equality, and fraternity, on the principles of Christianity and the principles of humanity. Now, sir, on the principle of liberty. The Constitution of the State of California, section one and section two, declare that we have an inalienable right to defend our lives and liberty; consequently if our life is in danger our liberty is also. Whether our life is at stake by a tiger, or whether it is at stake by starvation, it is always at stake, and will not be any safer for it. We possess the right to defend our life, and if we do not, our liberty is speedily gone. Certainly a man is free to do good or evil, but whether he does good or evil he has to meet the consequences of his acts. The very moment he does an evil he destroys his liberty. All these things are necessary. Then follows the punishment which is to bring him back to the paths of virtue, justice, and truth. Therefore, as Chinese immigration is an evil it tends to destroy liberty; and in the pure name of liberty I oppose Chinese immigration. Now, sir, on the principle of equality I will oppose it. When I say equality, I do not mean the size of the man. I do not speak of his economy, or his religion, but the reciprocity of duties as well as rights. Now, gentlemen, can any government exist—can any society or nation exist, in which every citizen has not some amount of duties to perform? No duties without rights, no rights without duties, is the great maxim upon which repose all human society. Equality of rights, equality of duties. But do the Chinese perform the same duties as any other foreigner—as it is always thrown in the face of foreigners? Does the Chinaman perform that same duty that these other foreigners do? I deny the assertion that performing the same duties they cannot claim the same rights, and therefore on the ground of equality I oppose Chinese immigration.

Christianity, fraternity, and humanity; these three great walls which have been thrown often at the face of the opponents of Chinese immigration. It is for humanity's sake, and the sake of the Christian faith, that I say to these men, and to all those who bring them here, and those who employ them, do not tramp upon our liberties, upon our rights. Let us be men. Let us be women. Do not try to bring us to despair. Respect us, if you want us to respect you. Do not try to starve us, if you do not want to be starved. Listen to the voice of reason. Hear the people's cry. Watch the popular wave which is rising every moment. Read the history of the past, and learn from it lessons of prudence and wisdom. Some revolution will teach us charity and forbearance. Yes, I would be charitable, and I am, but when I look about me and see my comrades in misery and their families destitute, can my heart for a moment forget that this misery has been brought upon them by the presence of these Mongolians. I ask myself, whether, in order to be charitable to the Chinese, I must let my neighbor starve and die of hunger? No! There is a reason that forces every man to take this stand. It is a stern fact and we have to meet it boldly; it moves slowly and surely, but it has already produced and shown its effect last Winter. According to the laws of nature there is no effect without a cause. We now see the cause—the Chinese—and the effect will soon produce itself. Starvation stares us in the face, and with it degradation and crime. Why, Mr. Chairman, did our forefathers give their lives so freely for this land which they have sprinkled with their blood? And are we, in this very century, going to submit to an aristocracy of blood? To men who have lost all sense of justice, all sense of Christianity, and all sense of humanity? Who, for the sake of furthering their own views, are willing to starve their fellow men. Blind they must be if they cannot see that their crime will bring its punishment. Do they not think that one day they may be called to answer to these very people for their crime? They know their time will come, but I am afraid it will be too late. Let us meet this question fairly and honestly. Let us take the responsibility that rests upon us; and, after having done what is right, then let the minority be responsible for what we have done. [Applause.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The Sergeant-at-Arms will keep order.

MR. WICKES. I will be brief in the remarks I shall make. I know that the best part of our time has already been dissipated. I now move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

IN CONVENTION.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move we adjourn.

Carried.

And, at eight o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M. to-morrow.

SEVENTY-FOURTH DAY.

PETITION FOR LIEN LAW.

MR. CONDON presented the following petition, signed by a large number of mechanics and other citizens of California, asking that a provision be made in the Constitution for a lien law:

To the President and members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned respectfully represent that the practical working of the present legislation, and decisions of Supreme Court based thereon, regarding the rights of mechanics, material-men, and laborers to a lien for their labor and material furnished, is such that those who in a measure depend upon such law for just protection fail in nearly all cases to obtain it, because of the inefficient working of said law.

Wherefore, we pray you to declare, in our organic law, the right of every mechanic, material-man, and laborer to a perfect lien on the thing whereon his labor has been expended, or for which his materials have been furnished.

Moreover, we would state that we would be satisfied with amendment number one hundred and sixty-seven, introduced by Mr. Van Dyke, on October tenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and read and referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, as follows:

"SEC. —. Mechanics, material-men, artisans, and laborers of every class shall have a lien upon the property on which they have bestowed labor or furnished materials, for the value of such labor done and materials furnished, and the Legislature shall provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens."

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

MR. WELLIN presented a similar petition.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

THE BURLINGAME TREATY.

MR. DOWLING offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of three be chosen by the Convention, whose duty it shall be to proceed to Washington at once and present a memorial to the President of the United States, the Senate, and the House of Representatives, requesting an immediate modification of the Burlingame treaty, so that Congress will be enabled to enact a law prohibiting the further immigration of Chinese to the United States of America.

Resolved, That the said committee place the Chinese question in its true light before Congress, and make the necessary arguments regarding this Mongolian plague, setting forth the grievances of the Pacific States and Territories on this subject.

Resolved, That this Convention provide in the Constitution so that the expenses incident to the occasion be paid by the State.

MR. BROWN. I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. There is a resolution before the Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I second the resolution.

MR. DOWLING. My object in offering that resolution is that a committee going from this body and interviewing the President and Senate, and laying the case as it is, in its true light, before them, would have more effect with the President of the United States and the Senate than any memorial sent them. I think the resolution is worthy the consideration of this body.

MR. CROUCH. Mr. President: I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The motion prevailed.

PUBLIC LANDS.

MR. WYATT offered the following resolution:

Resolved, First—That we, the delegates of the people of the State of California, in Convention assembled, do most respectfully instruct our Senators and request our Representatives in Congress to use their influence to have passed a law reducing the price of the public lands in this State, within the limits of any railroad grants, to one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and to enable bona fide settlers upon said lands to homestead one hundred and sixty acres thereof—the lands belonging to the United States Government being the refuse or third rate lands, and mostly embraced within the foothills or mountains, and in most instances much subject to drought and scarcity of water, making it necessarily expensive to improve and utilize said lands.

Resolved, Second—That we respectfully instruct our Senators and request our Representatives to use their influence to have passed a law restoring to preëmption and homestead all the lands within the limits of forfeited railroad grants in this State upon the same terms and conditions as before said grants were made.

Resolved, Third—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

MR. LARKIN. I move the adoption of the resolution.

MR. WYATT. Just one word. The railroad grants by the Congress of the United States to the various railroads within the limits of the State of California have been made from ten to fifteen and eighteen years. Where the railroads have been completed and the grants have been made effective to the railroad companies, all the better portion of the even sections within these railroad limits have of course been either appropriated or purchased by settlers upon the grounds. There is, however, a third class land included in these grants that is yet open to preëmption and homestead settlement at the double minimum price. That is to say, that a party can preëmpt or homestead eighty acres, or buy eighty acres, at two dollars and fifty cents per acre. These lands, in consequence of the length of time they have been in the market, have been picked and culled until those now remaining in the market are not worth the double minimum at which they are holden. It is, then, with a view of putting them within the reach of any and all settlers who may desire to take them up that it is asked that the double minimum be taken off, and that they be restored to the market at the old rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. The second resolution refers to another class of lands. Many grants have been made to railroads in this State which have been forfeited upon non-user of the charter of the railroad company. They stand blocked, both in the even and odd sections, against settlement. For this reason I ask that this resolution pass, and that our Senators and Representatives be instructed to take the double minimum from these lands.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I think the resolution probably is a very good one, but the delegates cannot understand it from hearing it read at the desk, and it should be either printed or referred. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemptions. They can examine it, report it, and have it adopted. We cannot consider it this morning, because the delegates have not had an opportunity to examine it.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I suppose it would be well to have the resolution lay over until to-morrow, or next day. I am in favor of the passage of the resolution at the earliest day possible. Congress is now in session, and unless the resolution is forwarded at a very early day it will do no good at the present session of Congress. It is simply to take off the double minimum and restore the lands to the original government price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and the right of preemption and homestead to one hundred and sixty acres, instead of eighty acres. I am willing that the resolution should lie over, and be printed in the Journal, to be taken up to-morrow morning.

MR. HUESTIS. I make that motion.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I would call the gentleman's attention to the phraseology of the resolution. I see that he uses the expression "instruct our Senators and request our Representatives." Now, I think that we have no right to instruct the Senators of this State. It should be in the form of a request. I suggest that it should be fixed before it is printed.

MR. WYATT. I am willing to conform to the phraseology suggested by the gentleman.

The motion prevailed.

COMMITTEE CLERK.

MR. OVERTON offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the sum of ten dollars be and is hereby ordered to be paid out of the funds of this Convention to J. J. Flynn, for services rendered as Clerk of the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings.

THE PRESIDENT. It will be referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

MR. OVERTON. The committee kept their own minutes, but this——

THE PRESIDENT. It will have to go to the committee under the rules.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to section one.

SPEECH OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the Convention: It is not my desire or object to enter into a general discussion of the evils of Chinese immigration, or the Chinese presence in this State. But I deem it necessary, in order to controvert and, if possible, to meet some of the claims and the assertions of gentlemen upon this floor in relation to the right of the State to regulate the Chinese residents and the Chinese action in this State, to say a few words in reference to the law applicable to this case, as I understand the law to be. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that there has been too much scope, too wide a latitude allowed to the decisions that have been rendered upon the subjects touching Chinese residents and Chinese immigration in this State. With due deference to the opinions and the assertions of gentlemen upon this floor as to the power of the State to regulate this matter, I believe that the State has the power, that the State has the full power, to deal with and solve the Chinese question. I do not believe that it is necessary to have recourse to Congress. I believe, to-day, that there is a reserve power inherent in the State of California, and inherent in every sovereign State in this American Union, that has never been delegated, that has never been surrendered, that has never been robbed from the States, because, Mr. Chairman, I believe, sir, that in these latter days there has been a tendency to rob the States of their rights, and the time has come when persons who desire to see American institutions perpetuated, who desire to see the spirit that actuated the founders of this country carried out in its true intent and purposes, that they should rise up and see to the centralizing efforts at Washington.

It is conceded by all jurists, and it has been repeatedly decided, that the Federal Government was a government of delegated powers. That there were no original powers lodged in the Federal Government, but that all of the powers possessed by the General Government were those that were expressly delegated and given to it by the charter of its creation—the Constitution of the United States. Now, in the Constitution of the United States, there are just two powers lodged in the General Government, which it is claimed inhibit the State from acting upon the Chinese question, as to their immigration, or as to their residence. The first is the power of Congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes. This is found in article one, section eight, paragraph three. It is claimed that Congress has the exclusive right to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and upon this it is claimed that the State would have no power to prevent the landing of immigrants, whether they be Mongolians, or whether they be of any other race, upon the shores of a particular State. The second power is the treaty-making power, which is vested also absolutely and exclusively in Congress. Therefore it is claimed, that, first, under the right to regulate commerce; and, second, under the treaty-making power, we are debarred from acting in this matter.

I call attention to the record of Story on the Constitution, page three hundred and seventy-five, in which Mr. Story discusses the power, the scope, and the force of a treaty. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that we have given too much sanctity to the Burlingame treaty. The people at large believe a treaty to be a component of the Constitution. They believe a treaty to be a firm law of the land; but a treaty is neither a component part of the Constitution, nor is a treaty a firm law of the land in any constitutional sense of supremacy. A treaty is a mere Act of Congress. It has no further force, and it has no further effect than an Act of Congress has. And whenever an Act of Congress is unconstitutional, if the treaty endeavors to enact the same thing, the treaty itself is unconstitutional. If the Congress of the United States endeavor to encroach upon the reserved powers of the State; if the Congress of the United States endeavor to legislate in relation to the internal concerns of the State; if they endeavor to pass upon the police regulations of a State by a mere Act of Congress, that would be unconstitutional and void. If Congress by a treaty endeavor to do the same thing, that treaty is unconstitutional and void, because a treaty has no more sanctity, no more force, and no more effect than a local Act of Congress that has only force and effect in this country. Mr. Story says, paragraph 1508: "The power 'to make treaties' is, by the Constitution, general; and of course it embraces all sorts of treaties, for peace or war; for commerce or territory; for alliance or succors; for indemnity, for injuries, or payment of debts; for the recognition and enforcement of the principles of public law; and for any other purposes which the policy or interests of independent sovereigns may dictate in their intercourse with each other. But, though the power is thus general and unrestricted, it is not to be so construed as to destroy the fundamental laws of the State. A power given by the Constitution cannot be construed to authorize a destruction of other powers given in the same instrument. It must be construed, therefore, in subordination to it; it cannot supersede or interfere with any other of its fundamental provisions. Each is equally obligatory, and of paramount authority within its scope; and no one embraces a right to annihilate any other. A treaty to change the organization of the government, or annihilate its sovereignty, to overturn its republican form, or to deprive it of its constitutional powers, would be void; because it would destroy what it was designed merely to fulfill, the will of the people."

In a note to section eighteen hundred and forty-two of the same work, it is said that though a treaty is a law of the land, it is as much subject to repeal as any legislative act, and that any subsequent Act of Congress conflicting with it has the effect of repealing it pro tanto. And, Mr. Chairman, that brings me to the fact that when it is spoken of appointing an International Commission for the purpose of abrogating or modifying the existing Burlingame treaty, it is merely for the purpose of delay. Such a Commission is unnecessary, because Congress can by one Act wipe out the existing Burlingame treaty, and it is not necessary to appoint a Commission at all, because it has been repeatedly held by the Supreme Court of the United States that even where the treaty was not directly repealed, yet if any Act of Congress was passed, which was in conflict with an existing treaty, that Act of Congress vitiated the existing treaty. It being conceded, therefore, that the General Government's agreement of delegated powers, and that whatever is not expressly given to it yet remains with the States, and as a part of the reserved powers of the States, I call attention to the opinion of Mr. Justice Woodbury in the License Cases, as reported in the fifth Howard, page six hundred and twenty-nine; and I would here say to my friend, Mr. Stuart, that these opinions are not the opinions of what he said were minority Judges, but they are the opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States, rendered in eighteen hundred and forty-seven, and have never been reversed, changed, or altered. Mr. Justice Woodbury says:

"It is the undoubted and reserved power of every State here, as a political body, to decide, independent of any provisions made by Congress, though subject not to conflict with any of them when rightful, who shall compose its population, who become its residents, who its citizens, who enjoy the privileges of its laws and be entitled to their protection and favor, and what kind of business it will tolerate and protect, and no one government, or its agent or navigators, possess any right to make another State, against its consent, a penitentiary, or hospital, or poor-house farm for its wretched outcasts, or a receptacle for its poisons to health and instruments for gambling and debauchery. Indeed, this Court has deliberately said: 'We entertain no doubt whatsoever that the States, in virtue of their general police power, possess full jurisdiction to arrest and restrain runaway slaves, and remove them from their borders, and otherwise to secure themselves against their depredations and evil example, as they certainly may do in cases of idlers, vagabonds, and paupers.'" (Prigg vs. Penn., 16 Peters, 625.)

In the same case Mr. Justice Grier used the following language:

"It has been frequently decided by this Court, 'that the powers which relate to merely municipal regulations, or what may more properly be called internal police, are not surrendered by the States, or restrained by the Constitution of the United States, and that consequently, in relation to these, the authority of the State is complete, unqualified, and conclusive.' Without attempting to define what are the peculiar subjects or limits of this power, it may safely be affirmed, that every law for the restraint and punishment of crime, for the preservation of the public peace, health, and morals, must come within this category. As subjects of legislation, they are from their very nature of primary importance. They lie at the foundation of social existence; they are for the protection of life and liberty, and necessarily compel all laws on the subjects of secondary importance, which relates only to property, convenience, or luxury, to recede, when they come in contact or collision, 'salus populi suprema lex.'"

A State forming part of the American Union is nothing less than a family forming a part of a community, and as well might the municipal government—as well might the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco—dictate what sort of men should dwell in the families of that city as for the Congress of the United States to dictate to the State of California, or to any other State of this American Union, what sort of people should dwell within its boundaries, providing the inhabitants or citizens of that State did not desire these people to remain there. The whole social fabric is founded upon the family, and our government is founded upon the States. If you destroy the family you destroy the social fabric—you undermine and destroy civilization—and if you deny the power of the States you destroy the American Union, and you are drifting into absolutism, and you are drifting into monarchy—and I think we are going there rapidly.

"If the right to control those subjects be 'complete, unqualified, and conclusive,' in the State Legislatures, no regulations of secondary importance can supersede or restrain their operations on any ground of prerogative or supremacy. The exigencies of the social compact require that such laws be executed before and above all others."

Speaking of police regulations and internal regulations, he says:

"It is for this reason that laws which protect public health, compel mere commercial relations to submit to their control. They restrain the liberty of the passengers, they operate on the ship which is the instrument of commerce, and its officers, and even the agents of navigation. They seize the infected cargo and cast it overboard. The soldier and the sailor, though in the service of the government, are arrested, imprisoned, and punished for their offenses against society. Paupers and convicts are refused admission into the country. All these things are done, not from any power which the States assume to regulate commerce or to interfere with the regulations of Congress, but because police laws for the preservation of health, prevention of crime, and protection of the public welfare, must of necessity have a full and free operation according to the exigency which requires their interference."

I also call attention to the words of Mr. Justice McLean in the same case:

"The States, resting upon their original basis of sovereignty, subject only to the exceptions stated, exercise their powers over everything connected with their social and internal condition. A State regulates its domestic commerce, contracts, the transmission of estates, real and personal, and acts upon all internal matters which relate to its moral and political welfare. Over these subjects the Federal Government has no power. They appertain to the State sovereignty as exclusively as powers exclusively delegated appertain to the General Government."

Mr. Chairman, the decisions which are pointed out, and upon the authority of which it is stated we cannot prohibit the immigration of Chinese, and that we cannot regulate their presence among us, have never attempted to go to that extent. The trouble is this: it has been stated that these decisions went entirely beyond their intent, entirely beyond their scope, and entirely beyond the authority that was given to them by the Courts that rendered them. The Legislature of this State has attempted to meet and to solve this problem, but in their legislation they have gone too far; they have met the Chinese immigrants while they were yet within the protection of the laws of the United States; while they were yet part and parcel of the subjects protected by that exclusive regulation of foreign commerce vested in Congress. These laws attempted to levy a tax, attempted to put a restraint upon Chinese immigration, while Chinese immigration was protected by that exclusive power vested in Congress. But neither the Supreme Court of the United States nor any other Court, State or Federal, have ever decided that the State, after the Chinese have landed within the territorial limits of the State, do not have the right to control them. The distinction is very clearly pointed out by Mr. Justice McLean in his opinion, on page five hundred and ninety-two. He says:

"The police power of a State and the foreign commercial power of Congress must stand together." There is no conflict between the two. The foreign commercial power of Congress brings the goods or persons into the harbor. It brings the goods or persons up to the dock, up to the wharf; but when the Chinaman leaves the ship, and when the goods leave the ship; when the Chinaman walks upon our streets and goes into our houses; when the goods are taken from the ship and placed into our warehouses and become the property of citizens of this State; when the Chinaman desires to become an inhabitant of this State and to dwell here, then the power of Congress ceases the moment he places his foot upon the wharf. The moment the goods are carried over the gang-plank of the ship, then the police power of the State attaches. The trouble with the legislation of this State heretofore has been that they always attempted to go on board the ships. They attempted to cross the gang-planks, and we cannot do it, because the United States law is around and about that ship as a wall, and keeps us from it. We dare not go on the gang-plank; we dare not enter the ship, because there the powers of Congress are preëminent and exclusive. But when the Mongolian leaves the ship, when he comes within the territorial limits of the State, then he is within the jurisdiction of the State, and the State has got the exclusive power over him, and Congress has got no further power at all. Mr. Justice McLean says:

"The police power of a State and the foreign commercial power of Congress must stand together." Because they can stand together. There is no conflict between the two. There is an end of the one and a commencement of the other. They do not overlap each other; and where we have erred every time in the State legislation, has been that we have gone beyond our power. "Neither of them can be so exercised as materially to affect the other. The sources and objects of these powers are exclusive, distinct, and independent, and are essential to both governments. The one operates on our foreign commerce, the other upon the internal concerns of a State. The former ceases where the foreign product becomes commingled with the other property in the State. At this point the local law attaches, and regulates it as it does other property."

That decision has never been reversed. It stands unreversed to-day, and none of the cases that have been carried to the Supreme Court at Washington have ever reversed that decision, and it is the supreme law to-day. It is clear, and the wayfaring man, though a fool, can read it. It says, again: "The one operates upon foreign intercourse, the other upon the internal concerns of a State. The former ceases when the foreign product"—be it a Chinaman or be it a bale of cotton (it makes no difference at all as regards the decision)—"becomes commingled with the other property of the State. At this point the local law attaches, and regulates it as it does other property"—or other people within the confines of the State.

Mr. Chairman, I have examined the report of the Committee on Chinese. I have examined the first section, and after the examination of that section I was not at all surprised that the Chairman of the committee could defend the section, and could state to the Convention that he was in favor of section one. Section one is not obbjectionable in any sense. Section one would not be objectionable to Colonel Bee. Section one would not be objectionable to the Chinese residents of the State of California, because section one simply means nothing at all. Section one is a mere declaration of the powers that exist and are inherent in the State, and always have existed, and always have been inherent in the State. The trouble seems to be that there is a belief that we can confer power upon ourselves; that by making a Constitution, and by having certain sentences printed in that Constitution, that we can delegate and vest powers in ourselves. Now, the Constitution is no charter of liberties at all. A Constitution, in the American sense, is a mere restriction of powers, and is no delegation, and never can be a delegation of powers. All these powers are inherent in the people, whether they be expressed or unexpressed, and the Legislature can act without any declaration of this character.

But, Mr. Chairman, I propose to vote for section one, because, at all events it will express what is the will and the wish and the opinion of the people and of the Convention. I am in favor of every section of the report, even the most ultra section. If these sections, all of them—and perhaps there are some of them that would not be constitutional—at all events, the Chinese of this State will be obliged to take these sections into the Courts and have their rights decided; and in that way the people of the State can only gain, and they will never lose, by the adoption of this report. That the absolute power to regulate the Chinese residents within the confines of this State rests with the State is inherent in the people to-day, and can be expressed by their representatives in Legislature assembled, I have no doubt; not the least. We can drive them from the confines of this State to-day, but, Mr. Chairman, I have serious doubts whether we can say to them that they cannot come here. We can say to them, "You shall not stay here." We have attempted to say, "You cannot come here;" and we have been told that we were exceeding our powers. We have never attempted to say, "You cannot stay here;" and we have never been told that if we did say that we would be exceeding our powers. I believe that we can say to the Chinese, "You cannot stay here;" and I believe we can say, "We propose to regulate you, even the short time we do allow you to stay here."

As I said in the commencement, I do not desire to speak in relation to the damaging and blighting influence of the presence of the Chinese. I merely desire to state upon this subject, that unless the Chinaman is driven from the State the white man will be obliged to leave the State. I speak for the young men. I speak for the rising generation. I speak for the men that stand here to-day and expect to stand here after many of this Convention have passed away. I ask, on behalf of the young men of this State, that they be not obliged to compete with Mongolian slave labor. A young man has no chance in this State to-day if he is a workingman. It does not matter for the opulent. It does not matter for the people that live in palaces, that wear silk dresses and diamond rings. It makes no difference to them whether their laborers be Mongolian serfs, or white free men, or white free women. But it does matter to the white free man and to the white free woman that are obliged to labor for their daily sustenance. There is not a man upon this floor to-day, Mr. Chairman, and I challenge contradiction by any gentleman here, who will say that a white man or a white woman can compete against Chinese serf labor. I do not desire, as I said, to enter into the minutiæ and into the details of the subject, but it is a well known fact, as has before been said upon this floor, that if the white man works for a dollar a day, the Chinaman can work for fifty cents; if the white man can work for fifty cents, the Chinaman will work for ten cents. We cannot compete with them. This is what has driven the boys of San Francisco into hoodlumism and the girls into houses of prostitution. It is because labor has become degraded, and labor ought not to be degraded. Labor ought to be ennobled. Wherever a mongrel and servile class are the laborers of a country, in that country labor becomes degraded in the eyes of the people; and labor to-day is looked upon by a large class of people in the State of California as being degrading and debasing. It is for the rising generation that we ask that a provision be inserted in this Constitution forever saying to the Chinaman, "Halt! Thus far and no farther! You must leave this country! You must go out! You must surrender it to the people to whom it belongs." You must give it to the young man and the young woman for their heritage if you expect to wipe out hoodlumism. If you expect to wipe out crime you must wipe out the presence of the Mongolian in our midst. I desire, at the proper time, to offer, as an additional section, the following:

"SECTION —. All persons of foreign birth, before engaging in any manner of employment on their own account, or for others, within this State, shall first procure a certificate of authority; such certificate shall be issued to any applicant of a race eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State, without cost, by any Court of record of the State. No person of foreign birth shall engage or continue in any manner of employment in this State unless possessed of such certificate; nor shall any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, directly or indirectly, employ any person of foreign birth within this State, unless such person possess such certificate. The Legislature shall provide for punishment of violations of this section. Prosecutions shall be maintainable against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense."

SPEECH OF MR. KLEINE.

MR. KLEINE. Mr. President, and gentlemen of the Convention: What would you think of a man that would ridicule and that would trifle at the death bed of his father, or mother, or sister? What would you think of him? You would say he is a villain, or a knave, or a fool. Any man of feeling would forbear to do so, and yet, Mr. President, yesterday I had to witness such an outrage. Mr. President, and gentlemen of this Convention, we have fifty delegates on this floor who would not be here to-day if it was not for the Chinese question, and they dare not deny this. They would not be here—perhaps some of them would be at day's work for one dollar and fifty cents per day; and yet when this question came up yesterday they went out in the lobby, and treated it with utter contempt. If this is the conduct of gentlemen I ask you to inform me of the meaning of a gentleman. I do not read it so in Webster's Dictionary. I acknowledge that I was elected as a delegate to this Convention on the Chinese question, and, gentlemen, this question is to me as solemn as the grave. I cannot trifle with it. Why? Because I see the future before me. I see this country will be overflowed by a lot of degraded Mongolian serfs. Gentlemen of the Convention, I used to live in the Southern States when the slave-owners looked upon the white man that worked as "common white trash." A feeling of superiority is manifested among these coolie employers towards their white brother that has to work for a living. Mr. President, I tell you this is a question to me as solemn as the grave. I have no heart to trifle with it. Why, I can see as plain as I see my hand before me, that this State is doomed for the white man who has to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Already we see that our white brothers and sisters have to go and look round for a job to work for a dollar a day.

Gentlemen, any nation that will look upon labor as degrading, that nation cannot stand. And you talk about the Burlingame treaty! The Burlingame treaty is a fraud from the beginning. I can prove this to you. When Mr. Burlingame made the treaty, the Government of China didn't hardly know nothing about it. And Mr. President, and gentlemen of this Convention, you remember that when Mr. Burlingame came back he lived only a few years. He died. He died almost in despair.

Now we look a great deal to Congress. Now, gentlemen, I tell you Congress will never do anything for us. This Mongolian invasion is a combination between capital and the churches, and you know it.

I will tell you how. I will prove this to you. The churches, both Protestant and Catholics—Protestants more than Catholics, I am sorry to say—they tell you that we will bring the Chinese coolies to this Pacific Coast and convert them to Christianity. Now, Mr. President, I will prove to you now, and to the gentlemen of this Convention, and those that hear my voice, how they have succeeded. For the last twenty-seven years—I, myself, am a resident of the State over a quarter of a century, and I know whereof I speak—for the last twenty-five years—listen—for the last twenty-five years only about one hundred and fifty out of two hundred and fifty thousand has been converted to Christianity, according to the testimony of about fifteen ministers of the State of California. I can read about this. Mr. Blakeslee, a Congregational minister, says that during his mission only about forty or fifty has been converted, and out of these fifty half of them have been instructed in China, and not a single one of these converts who have made a profession of Christianity has ever assimilated and adopted our manners in any shape or form, but they have remained the same coolies. The same degraded coolies that they were before.

What has these long-faced preachers done? They have driven our poor white men, our white boys, and white girls into hoodlumism. They have made our poor white girls what? Prostitutes! It is almost impossible for a poor white servant girl to find employment in a white family. No! The mistress of the house wants a Chinaman. She wants a Chinaman, why? He is very handy. She can say, "John, do this," and John does it, and John never says a word. He keeps quiet; only when he goes home to his shanty in Chinatown, and then he tells all about it—what he has seen, and what he has heard. There you see what the missionaries have done by importing Chinese here. Rev. Mr. Gibson went to China for the purpose of converting Chinamen. He remained there several years, but the work was so self-denying he did not remain, but came back right in the midst of Chinatown, where he gets a fine, fat salary. Christian charity always begins at home.

It is almost impossible for a white man to get work, and I assure you, Mr. President, and gentlemen of this Convention, there is not a place in the civilized world—listen!—there is not a place in the civilized world that would submit to such an outrage as the people of the Pacific Coast. There was never a government in the civilized world that would degrade its citizens to the level of the slave, only this government. And let me tell you, I am not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but I believe, as God is my witness, that the working classes will rise in a mass, they will not submit to such an outrage. These men that have fought your battles through the late war—you have stripped their children, you have! You take away their rights, and now what are you doing? You take their children and start them off for low, coolie, servile laborers. But would these coolies defend you when your country is in danger? Will they march to the front as our servants marched upon the late war? No! They will laugh at you; and then you may call upon the tramps that you now say one dollar a day is enough for; then you will call upon these men to defend you; but these men, remember, will not defend you. They will do their best against you, and they would do right! Now, gentlemen, perhaps some of you remember—I don't know, perhaps some of you were slave-holders in the South—they drove negroes, they bought and sold negroes. I know a few of them here. I lived in the Southern States, and I tell you the slave-holders always looked upon the white people that had to work for a living—it was a common expression—"the poor white trash." The poor white trash! That is the expression the slave-holders used to make of the white people, and that is certainly the case now with those that employ coolies. They do not care for the white man, for the poor white man, only when they are in trouble.

Now, gentlemen, let us look at it now—at the coolie question. Are they a benefit to us? I tell you they have extracted one hundred and eighty million dollars from the State of California in the last twenty years. Every dollar a Chinaman receives, ninety cents goes back to China. Now, we have forty thousand of these coolies, servile laborers, in San Francisco. That is an average of forty thousand dollars a day they draw out of circulation. Now, what would be the benefit supposing our white fellow citizens would be there. Wouldn't that remain in the State? Wouldn't our city be prosperous? But no! The white rich aristocrats and the moneyed aristocrats they want the Chinaman, and the white girls and the white boys they can go to perdition. If they only succeed in converting one Chinaman, they do not care whether ten thousand white girls and boys go to perdition.

Now, let us look at it in another light. Are the property holders benefited by it? Every China quarter in Chinatown—every property is depreciated. Chinatown to-day, in San Francisco, would be the best and healthiest part of San Francisco if it was not for these coolie slaves. All the neighborhood around there is depreciated—the property is depreciated. The Chinaman is very shrewd in one sense. He is willing to pay. He never fights against big rent at first; but as soon as he has possession of the property he dictates his own price, and he will get it for his own price all the time, for John knows that wherever he occupies a place it cannot be occupied by any intelligent race, and therefore John has in one sense a little more shrewdness than some of our white people.

Now, let us look at it in another light, gentlemen. Sir, I have listened to my young friend here who made a remark yesterday that California was a prosperous State in spite of the Chinese. Now, I differ with him, and I will show you where he is mistaken. California to-day is the most degraded and impoverished State in the Union! And I will show you why. California, I admit, is a prosperous State for the railroad kings. I admit California is a prosperous State for the bank robbers. I admit this; but California and the Pacific Coast is the most degraded place for a poor white working man to come to. If a white man has to come here let him come, and let him be on an equality with the Chinaman. I know some of these aristocrats. They were poor here once, but they remember not the day when they were poor, and they care not for their fellow white citizens. Gentlemen, I must say, with all respect to my adopted country, the Americans—some of our Americans—they are the meanest men on the face of the earth! They do not care a continental for their fellow man as long as their pockets are filled.

Now, again, I have heard men say, "Have the Chinamen not the same right as a European?" Now to compare the coolie importation with European immigration is absurd; and no man that is possessed of common sense would use—would make use of such an assertion. To compare the Caucasian—you who have been raised where we all came from—to compare them with the low Chinese coolies! No one but an insane man could make such an assertion. The European comes here, gentlemen, and does something to improve our country. He comes here with the same religion, with the same feelings, with the same principles which we possess; and we shake hands with him, and we do right. He improves the country, and he fights for the country. Over one hundred and fifty thousand souls fought under the stars and stripes that were naturalized citizens. Would one hundred and fifty thousand coolie slaves fight for you? Not much! Will they fight for you? If you think so, you must be very far back, sure. Now the coolie—I appeal to the old pioneers—I appeal to you, gentlemen, who have been pioneers of California, and you will bear witness with me that since the last twenty-eight years have you ever known any Chinaman that assimilated with us? If I told you "yes," I would tell you a lie. I have never known not one yet. I have known some of them since fifty-four, and I know them to-day, and they are the same to-day as they were in fifty-four. Are these the people we want here?

Now you are talking about the Burlingame treaty. I will tell you something about the Burlingame treaty. As I told you before, it is a fraud. Why? Because it is a one-sided treaty. How can we remedy this? Look here, what we done by an Act of Congress, approved July seventh, seventeen hundred and ninety-eight: "All treaties between France and the United States are declared null and void, and no longer obligatory on the United States." The United States could declare a treaty null and void with the French Government, but you tell me that we could not do it with China. And something else. The American citizens are not subject to the laws of China, while Chinese are subject to the laws of the United States. England has a treaty with China. What does England do? What do the colonies in Australia do? They manage these affairs, and to-day Australia is a very hot place for the Chinese. They cannot remain there because the government don't want them there. But then you say, if we break the treaty we won't get tea. Gentlemen, we got tea before we made the treaty with China. We will get all the tea we want. No nation upon earth except this would allow it. For three thousand American merchants our country is to be overflowed with slave labor. The Pacific Steamship Company, what are they doing? They have a contract with the Six Chinese Companies to bring these coolies here, and no coolie can leave this State without a certificate. He cannot go without a pass from his masters. The negro in the Southern States could never absent himself without a permit from his master or mistress, and this steamship company are not allowed to take any Chinaman back to China without he has a permit from the Six Chinese Companies.

Now, according to the testimony of all the ministers, doctors, and lawyers in San Francisco, they all testify that the Chinese are a curse; that ninety-nine out of one hundred Chinawomen are prostitutes. We have the testimony of Dr. Toland. We have the testimony of Rev. Otis Gibson. He himself testifies that ninety-nine out of one hundred Chinawomen are prostitutes; and our government knows it, and we all know it; and our fine State government in California knows it; and yet, in the face of all these witnesses, they say: "Oh, we can do nothing with it; we can do nothing with it!" Why can't they do nothing with it? Because they are owned, body and soul, by the Six Chinese Companies. And if gentlemen could see to-day the influence which these Six Chinese Companies have upon our Federal, State, city, and county officers, you would be surprised. Is it possible for human nature to go so low? And yet, this is a fact. All the witnesses have declared it so.

And now, I tell you I have no hope whatever in Congress. Congress will do nothing for us, let me tell you. We have pleaded to Congress for the last ten years, and they have said: "Wait; wait a little longer." And that is all the comfort we get; and our poor and the rising generation are condemned to an everlasting servitude. That is just the result connected with this China question. This coolie importation will never be stopped except the hardy sons of toil stop it. If they don't stop it, they have to work like the Chinaman. Don't look to Congress; don't look to the aristocrats, they don't care nothing for you. They have lost their four million of slaves and they want these serfs in their place. Remember that! They want these serfs in their place. They are not satisfied, and the Chinese are the only nation that can furnish what they want.

Therefore, gentlemen, remember I am not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet; but one fact I know, that the Chinese curse will never be cured except the people rise in a mass; and you know self-preservation is the first law of nature, and also the first law of nations. Any government that will allow a degraded race to come and degrade its citizens, such a government is not worthy of respect. Such a government is not with the people. Therefore, I say the only remedy will be, the sons of toil must rise and get rid of the coolie servitude, or else the coolies will get rid of you. There is only one thing to be done; either you must leave or the coolie must leave! [Applause.]

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: The temper of this Convention is probably against the further discussion of the social, economical, and political aspect of this question. In that sense I suppose it may be safely said that the subject is exhausted. Better speeches and better arguments have been made by men of greater philosophical capacity upon the subject of race dissimilarities and the race conflicts which have gone on from the earliest of times. The nature of race growth and national growth, in connection with this question, I think I may safely say, has been fully considered, and the judgment of the people of the Pacific Coast has settled, undoubtedly, upon the conviction that the best of the argument is altogether in favor of the proposition that the presence of the Chinese on the Pacific Coast, in our social life, in our industrial life, and even in our political life, is detrimental. We cannot add to or strengthen that argument in this Convention, and the point now is to furnish a practical solution to the question; and the man who can now bring forward a plan which will remove one single Chinaman—yea, sir, even a sick Chinese baby—may be said to have accomplished more in the right direction than all the great mass of speeches and all the literature upon this Chinese question put together. We should endeavor here to deal with it as practical men; we should endeavor to bring out of the chaos of ideas, out of the vast amount of dissimilarity in execution, or in the method of reaching the evil, some point upon which we can all harmonize and agree—some point on which we can determine what power the State possesses, and in what manner that power shall be exercised for the purpose which all pretend to have in view, and that is, to relieve this State, and to relieve posterity on the Pacific Coast, of what is deemed to be a curse.

We profess to have at heart the future welfare as well as the present good of the people of the coast; and, therefore, sir, the discussion now ought to be restricted to the legal aspects of the questions involved. I assume that gentlemen are sincere when they admit that the presence of an alien race, with whom we cannot deal in accordance with American ideas, and in accordance with our free institutions—I assume, I say, that they are sincere when they tell us that they wish to rid the State of the curse; that they wish to do it in accordance with constitutional principles. Now, our forefathers, back to the time of the revolution, and back beyond the revolution, whenever the subject of the presence of the black man in America was brought up, and the institution of slavery was discussed, declared that it was an evil, declared that it could but have an evil effect upon the destiny of the country. Thomas Jefferson said that slavery was the sum of all evils. George Washington said that all his compatriots were anti-slavery men, and their idea and the idea of the fathers was that this was a white man's government. That, sir, is the cry of the party to which I belong to-day, and I was glad to see the Chairman of our committee reiterating that cry, which, it is true, fell into derision after Stephen A. Douglas proclaimed it; fell into certain derision on account of the sentimental view taken by many good people of the United States of the African and his deplorable condition. But it is none the less true. It is none the less strictly in accordance with the American idea that this is a white man's government; a government of Caucasians, established by white men, and for white men. Whenever we talk about treaties; whenever we talk about the comity of nations, it is understood and comprehended within that term that we mean the comity, the international law which exists among civilized and Christian nations.

When we talk about the rights enjoyed by an American citizen anywhere on the Continent of Europe, and the rights of the citizen of any of the nations of Europe upon American soil—which I am glad to know are respected—which I am glad to know are treated with greater liberality as time rolls on; it means the people of white races, and the people of a Christian country. There is no doubt of that. That was the kind of a government that our forefathers established. And all the international law and comity of nations, and the intercourse of nations which has grown up, and upon which the principles that are now recognized among civilized nations have been established, and recognized universally, has been in accordance with this theory—that a government was sought to be established upon these shores, and upon this continent, of white men—Anglo-Saxons, and those who could be brought within the great political fold, and incorporated into the great plan of our government, and merged as good citizens, and as contributors to the prosperity and the elevation of the nation. That was their idea, sir, and it never has been doubted—or never would have been except for certain complications that have arisen in this country in consequence of the existence of African slavery, and the enfranchisement of the slave, and the legislation which has arisen for the protection and the regulation of the rights of that people. It is sought now to be made use of here in California, and in Congress, for the protection of a people that Congress and the fathers never dreamed of, nor thought of, or expected upon this coast, and that is the Mongolian race. Now, we hear allusions made to the Fourteenth Amendment, the last amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and the Civil Rights bill, by those who profess to be anti-Chinese in sentiment, and yet who are continually deploring the want of any power outside of Congress. I will not trouble the Convention with authorities, but I think I may safely say that the view which I have here presented is the view taken by the Supreme Court of the United States, and established in the Slaughter House cases—that the legislation known as the Fourteenth Amendment, and the laws of Congress passed in pursuance of that amendment, had reference to the enfranchised slaves of the South; that their eye was upon that people; that they were seeking to protect them, in all that legislation; and to confer upon them the right of suffrage in what was called the anti-Kuklux legislation, and in the Civil Rights bill. And the direct intent of the law-making power was to protect the people lately enfranchised in the Southern States; and it is so distinctly affirmed in the Slaughter House cases by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Congress is three thousand miles away from the Pacific Coast. Ignorant, as may be safely said, or almost entirely ignorant of the true situation of affairs here, knowing little or nothing of that which we know from day to day by sight, by sound, yea, sir, by smell! of the effect of this alien race; knowing little or nothing about them—it never aimed any of this legislation at all at the relations which have sprung up on the Pacific Coast, and which are, sui generis, without precedent.

The Burlingame treaty is another stumbling block, constantly thrust in the way of those who sincerely and honestly feel that this subject is of over-shadowing importance, and that by Congress and by State power it must be regulated, and the people must be relieved. The Burlingame treaty—abundant authority can be brought in here, and books piled up here, covering every table in this room, to show that a treaty, or the provisions of a treaty, do not override a constitutional enactment by Congress, or by the States of the Union in their Constitutions, when it does not conflict with the Constitution of the United States. I am stating, sir, nearly the exact language of the great constitutional lawyer, Jeremiah Black. That, sir, has summed up the whole controversy in a nutshell. Otherwise what would be the condition of this people? What would be the condition of American government? What would become of the sovereignty, which we declare to reside in the people, if the King or Emperor of Germany and the President of the United States might meet together, and by a convention among themselves, establish an internal law of the State, or the laws that should govern the people of the United States? A most extraordinary and monstrous doctrine that would be! The Burlingame treaty, therefore, is but in the nature of a law, subject to repeal the moment it comes in conflict with the sovereign power of the States, acting within their legitimate spheres, to legislate upon a subject over which they have control. The treaty goes down, and there is no question about it. An independent and free minded people, living upon their own soil, within their own jurisdiction, making their own laws, cannot be tied hand and foot in that way, and it is idle to seek to bring to bear upon them such a monstrous doctrine as that is.

Now I come to the subject directly in hand. I do not maintain that the report of the Committee on Chinese Immigration has furnished any solution of the question, or a practical solution of the question. It is undoubtedly crude. It is undoubtedly very crude. Much of it looks undoubtedly like what would be called the legislation of the dark ages; or as some one has expressed it, Hottentot legislation. That is true. It bears that appearance. But the line of demarcation between those who say that the State can do nothing, the whole resting within the control of Congress, and those who maintain that the State does have some power, that the State does have some control in the premises, must exist somewhere, and therefore all this matter has been brought before the Convention by that report. Every single party that has put forward candidates and platforms in this State, has declared in general terms in favor of the exclusion of the Chinese, or in favor of a prohibition of their further immigration. They have declared it constantly in their platforms. It has been the hobby-horse on which, undoubtedly, they have ridden into office. In the last election, for members in this Convention, generally speaking, it was declared strongly by all, and the Workingmen adopted as their battle-cry, "The Chinese must go."

The non-partisan platform, upon which, Mr. President, you were elected, uses language like this, declaring it to be an evil, and pledging themselves to go to the verge of constitutional power. I do not know but that they were going to go out on the ragged edge a little beyond, to rid the State of the curse. What was done by the members from the country, or how they were pledged, I know not; but I assume that a majority who came up to this Convention, came up here with pledges in their mouths, made to their constituents and to the people of the State, that they would do something; that they would do whatever they could after consultation and discussion had developed a proper conception of the power of the State; they would do what they could to relieve the people of this infernal curse. Now, as practical men, the question is, first, are the members willing to keep that pledge in letter and spirit? Are they willing, if they can be convinced of the existence of the power, to go ahead and make use of that power? The first question that presents itself, sir, is this: Can anything be done in this direction by any proper amendments to the Constitution? The question is not now what view will be taken of this action east of the Rocky Mountains; the question is not what view will be taken of it in Europe, or what view will be taken of it in the Empire of China; not at all, sir. We are acting for the sovereign whose territorial lines are bounded and defined, and we must act up to our pledges without reference to their extraneous considerations at all. Nobody has to review this action which we perform here but the people of the State of California. No one has aught to say with regard to the Constitution, or the character of the Constitution we make here, except the sovereign people of the State of California, unless we make an anti-republican Constitution, and then the Congress of the United States, under the Constitution, will be authorized to interfere. But outside of that, there is no limit.

Then, sir, what power has the State, by amendments to the Constitution, to reach this question? There is the great question. There is a question which this Convention must solve. I take up section one, and I comment upon that. There is no objection to it, except simply that there is nothing in it. It is a perfectly harmless thing, and I assented to its being incorporated in the report as a member of the committee. A general declaration of the power which resides inherently in the State is contained in that section, but unfortunately it is followed up with some qualifications to which I object. I offered a section to be incorporated into the Preamble and Bill of Rights, which I understood to be satisfactory to a majority of the members, but it failed to be incorporated in there, because they doubted the propriety of inserting it in the place where I proposed it. A general declaration of the power of the State—that is, that the people of the State have the inherent sole and exclusive right of regulating their internal affairs, and the whole thereof; that they are the judges of whatever is detrimental or dangerous to the well-being of the State, and have the right to use the power of the State to prohibit and prevent it. That is a better statement, in my opinion, of the power, than this which is contained in this first section of the report of the committee. It is a fair statement of the power. In my judgment it comprehends the whole of the general declaration of the power that resides in the people of a sovereign State. Some objection may be made to it, because it is going toward State's rights too strong. I think not so. I think it is clearly within the decisions—all the decisions upon the subject—and the line of demarcation between Federal and State authority; no restrictions upon the judgment of the people of the State. There, sir, rests the king-pin. There rests the keystone of the whole arch, and that is its ultimate resort. Who is to decide? In whom is the power of judgment lodged? That, sir, is the question. Who is to decide this question? Is it the Congress of the United States, three thousand miles away, ignorant of our situation here, that is to decide upon the internal aspects of this question—and the infernal aspects—or is it the people of the State, those who are directly affected by it? That, sir, is the great question; and I insist upon that right of judgment on the part of the people of the State over this subject-matter, and I say that it has never been denied before in Christendom. It never has been held anywhere that any free-minded and intelligent people could be compelled to tolerate a nuisance, they themselves knowing it to be a nuisance, eating out their civilization, demoralizing their youth, and sapping the foundations of their political and civil liberty, and threatening its very existence; that people could have that nuisance inflicted upon them, and maintained among them, without the power of judgment, and the power of dealing with it themselves, it never was heard of before; and if the doctrine was sought to be promulgated, and sought to be enforced in any manufacturing community in Europe, in London, in Manchester, in Sheffield, that a body of foreign alien laborers were to be thrown upon that people, in less than twenty-four hours the Trades Union would pour two million of people into Hyde Park, protesting in tones of thunder at the very foot of the throne, against the damnable outrage.

We are limited by the terms of the first section of this report in the exercise of that judgment to the proofs that the obnoxious parties are paupers, are vagabonds, or are afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases—a matter which no man can prove. We know that the laboring class coming from China are brought here under contracts for terms of service and labor for years. We are morally convinced of it, but we have no proof. It cannot be established in any Court of justice. These laborers now in all the fair fields of industry on the Pacific Coast, scattered over your agricultural lands, and in your mines, and in domestic service, are healthy people, in the general sense of the word, and can strip down as clean men as the majority of this Convention, and let Dr. O'Donnell examine them. They are inferior in muscular development, in brawn and brain, to the white man, but healthy people in the main. Here and there in the large cities of course are prostitutes, and of course there are diseases, perhaps. Maybe there are lepers. I think most of it is venereal disease; but it is not that we object to. That is not what the people of the Pacific Coast and the laboring and working men complain of. There never has been a time that it was not competent for the authorities, by the exercise of the powers which they enjoy, to have rid the State or the cities from that part of the curse. I suppose the reason why it has not been done is that there is metallic argument against it, drawn from the coffers of the Chinese Six Companies. I suppose that without any constitutional provisions at all, if one half, yea, one quarter of the truth be told, or has been told, with regard to the Chinese quarters in San Francisco, the municipal authorities of that city have had power to expel them without the city limits. I do not think there has been any question about that, sir. I do not think that the Burlingame treaty, the Fourteenth Amendment, or the Civil Rights bill would have been considered infracted by any municipal regulation for the abatement of that nuisance. I have seen it. I have seen a quiet community up in the mountains here in which this foreign alien people have settled, and wherever they settle they immediately draw together in some little quarter. They are like a small or a large devil fish, according to their members, wherever they plant themselves down everything else begins to get away, moves off, gets out of there. That devil fish has planted itself in San Francisco, and it throws out its arms and takes in one block at a time. There seems to be some sort of poisonous exhalation from it which makes everything else get out of there. Even the hoodlums, thieves, robbers, and low prostitutes among the whites get away from there. They cannot stand it. They evacuate, absquatulate, and leave the octopus there all alone. Then it reaches out and takes in another part of a block, and again everything disappears before them as if from some deadly blight. It is like the feeding upon pasture lands of a flock of sheep. I do not wish to injure the business of the sheep herders in the Convention, or the sheep raisers, but they do say that when they take a flock of sheep into a certain section, and they feed over that section, that thereafter cattle and horses and all the more nobler sex of domestic animals refuse to go there. They will not feed there after the sheep have tramped over it and fed there. And that is the way with the Chinese. Whenever they set themselves down they are masters of the situation; everything else seems to want to leave. As I have said before, they start a Chinese quarter. They establish a wash house, gambling house, and a house of prostitution. They are a noisy people, and they are a nuisance to quiet people. People living around cannot sleep at night, and are disturbed by the noise and the lewd women, etc. Finally, in some places, they are invited to go away. I know of a case, only a short time ago, over in the mountains. They were there, and they troubled the neighborhood. The people told them to leave and go away. They talked about their civil rights. The citizens gave them a few days to go, and they did not go. Then they went there with their wagons, loaded up their plunder, and moved off all they had there. They told them about the situation, and not to come back there. No one has raised anything about the Burlingame treaty, and no constitutional provision has been infracted. It seems to be the right of a civilized community to protect itself. Nor is that confined to the Chinese. I know that a nuisance of any kind is compelled to vacate by the strength of public opinion alone where there is an absence of the machinery of Courts and civil law to enforce the remedies. There is a fundamental right inherent in the people to protect themselves from that which is destructive of their peace, their comfort, and their well-being. And so I maintain that the section which I offered to be inserted in the Preamble and Bill of Rights is a broader, and a fuller, and a better declaration of the power than that which is contained in section one of the report of the Committee on Chinese. There is nothing asserted there which does not already exist as a part of the sovereign power without the declaration, and I object to it because the qualifications therein stated do not reach the evil. We do not object to the Chinese population particularly, or individually, or even collectively because they are vagrants, because they are paupers, because they are infected with contagious diseases, but we object to them because they belong to an alien civilization. That is the reason.

What is the population of this country? What is the unwritten idea of the growth and building up of this State? It is, sir, that we plant houses; it is that we create cities; it is that we contribute to the general prosperity and enter into the great mass of useful material to the building up of the State. These do not. They cannot in any sense of the word be said to contribute anything to American civilization, but they constantly draw from it. That is what is the matter. In our fathers' times—I must go back to them, though I want to keep to the question as near as I can, and I have not the voice to go fully into the question now—our fathers understood this matter. Our fathers found, when they struck the shores of the Atlantic, a people already there with prior rights. A people, sir, who are still said and still described by those who have made a study of peoples, to be derived from the same stock as the Chinese. The Asiatics probably are an Indian race—are understood by the best scholars to be. They are the sort of people our ancestors found upon the shores of the Atlantic when they came there. European civilization and Christian civilization obtained a foothold on a strip along the shores of the Atlantic, whilst these people were there, by assumed treaties, by assumed fair dealing, and not by conquest exactly. They have driven that people silently, slowly, and constantly before them, from the shores of the Atlantic to the Pacific, until they have almost disappeared from the face of the earth.

Mr. De Toqueville, the most able writer, perhaps, who has discussed American institutions, characterizes the treatment of the Indian by the people of the United States as barbarous. So it was in many senses. It was, in point of fact, to strip it of all disguise, from first to last a constant war of extermination. That is all you can say about it. And why was it, sir? I suppose if there is a Providence overruling all, that it was because the demands of that Providence and His overruling designs intended the continent for European civilization, and for a white man's government. And our forefathers, when in the light of their blazing homes they pursued the fleeing savage and shot him down, never stopped to discuss the morality of the method, or the causes of that blazing home. He hunted him away because he had no other means of dealing with him. He drove him before the white man's civilization because he could not civilize him—because he could not Christianize him, and there were, all over that broad land where prosperity has built the happy homes that dot the Mississippi Valley, and all of the great Atlantic Coast, the lands are all wrenched from the people that were there before them—wrenched by the hand of power from a people driven at the point of the bayonet, and by the bullet, from before the advancing tide of civilization—because, in the Providence of God, the way had to be opened for the white man's civilization. And that is the best argument that is possible against those who object to saying that we must reserve part of it from the refluent wave of that same kind of hostile civilization that comes from the Orient back to the West. We stand at the very gate of the reservoir that hangs like some high cloud over the people, not only of the Pacific Coast, but of the United States—a great reservoir with five hundred million hungry souls to draw from, which may burst at any time and inundate not only this shore, but flow across the Rocky Mountains and overwhelm the people of the whole United States. I say we must stop the crevasse, we must prevent the inundation anyway, barbarous though it may be, it is our duty to do it; and while the sentimentalists of the East talk about the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God, we can tell them that we are trying to preserve them in their homes, in their temples of worship, and in their schools, where they teach the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God; for if they do overrun them, as it is possible for them to do, and it is possible in the inscrutable designs of Providence that they should, we labored to prevent it. Do not talk to us about the severity or barbarity of our proceedings.

The American Indian and the Chinaman possess different kinds of civilization to our civilization. They differ in the methods in which they resist it, but it is none the less resistance. The American Indian is opposed to it. He opposed it by savage war; he opposed it by direct and open onslaught upon that civilization which he saw coming. In his ignorance, in his barbarity, and in his vice he had none the less a steady, stern, inflexible will which resisted any advance of civilization, and consequently there could be no other result except the conflict which came. But the Chinese oppose a different kind of warfare to our civilization, and in my judgment it is a more dangerous warfare, for it is an insidious, slow-eating kind of warfare on our civilization, against which you cannot raise an arm as you could against that sort of civilization which attacked you openly, and which you could crush by means of your power.

The police power of the State has no specific or legal definition, but the line of demarcation has to be found, not in what is expressed, not in what has been decided particularly by the Courts, but it is to be found in an examination of the powers that have been granted to the Federal Government. Before the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted, and the other amendments, the power of the people over this subject, and over the admission of what, in their opinion—their judgment exercised upon the subject for themselves—determined to be obnoxious persons, was not questioned. The power was not questioned. The decisions in the Passenger cases, which have been quoted extensively already, fully and explicitly affirm the right of the people in the exercise of their jurisdiction over their internal affairs, and the regulations affecting the morals, the health, and the general welfare of the State was not denied. Now, so far as we are dealing with the question is concerned, the only effect of the Fourteenth Amendment and all the legislation of Congress thereunder, if any at all, as I claim, was to regulate the relations of the black people of the Southern States with the whites. That was the effect of that. Now, it is true that language is made use of in that amendment, and that language is made use of in the Civil Rights bill, which seems to imply that all persons found upon American soil, wherever the Constitution has sway, are entitled to the equal protection of the laws, and not to be abridged of any of their rights, or of the rights that are granted to any other person. On the face of it, I say, that seems to be the inference and necessary implication to be drawn from that Fourteenth Amendment and the Civil Rights bill. But the peculiarity of them is this: it is well expounded in the views of Judge Black, and in the views of General Butler, that the Fourteenth Amendment was intended to operate upon citizens—intended to operate upon citizens of the United States. In the first part of the article it makes use of the word "citizen." It says: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

Now, following after that, comes language which seems to be plain to the understanding of all persons:

"Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." Equal, how? Equal protection, in what manner? It is not to be construed or understood that the rights and privileges enjoyed by the citizen must necessarily be enjoyed by every person who comes within the jurisdiction. Not at all, sir. And therefore it is, in my opinion, that the effect of the amendments, and the intent of the amendments, and all the legislation thereunder, is to affect the citizens whose rights and privileges can be abridged, whilst aliens and those who have not become citizens, and who cannot be clothed with the rights of citizenship, shall not be permitted to enjoy those rights. Now, what are the powers of the State? (I must hurry through, for I am getting very tired.) What are the powers of the State over its internal affairs? And what are the internal matters over which the State has power? I wish, gentlemen, to come right square up now to the question. Has the State got any power? And if we point out to you the powers which the State has got, are you willing to exercise those powers? Are we going to confine ourselves down to the simple regulation of paupers, vagrants, and criminals; or shall we say the State has power to determine for itself that the whole class of people are obnoxious and dangerous to its well-being, and to bring that power to bear for the purpose of preventing and prohibiting that evil. Let us take the subject of the internal matters of the State, and of the right to catch fish. as an illustration. Does any man deny that the regulation and the exercise of that power is not proper to the State? Over the waters of the State, tide waters and all, except for the purposes of navigation and commerce, does any man deny that the State has absolute control? That it can admit to the privileges, for instance, of fishing in these waters, none but citizens and deny it to all others? If he does, I should like to see that man. Seven, five, or nine thousand Chinese live by fishing. Are gentlemen willing to say that the State, having this power, shall prohibit five, seven, or nine thousand Chinamen from exercising the right to catch fish in the inland waters of the State? The question is not new. Is that barbarous? The question is not new. Do you want to starve them out? The question is, will you exercise the power? You say you are willing to exercise any power of State. I tell you of a power. are you willing to bring it to bear? And I have a word to say on this question of starving them out. I do not know but it might be made to fit in with this first section. If we have got to find them out to be paupers. the best thing we can do is to make them paupers, and then we have got the power to send them out. That would be a natural and logical conclusion of this method of dealing with the question. We do not propose to let them starve, but if they are paupers, we propose to send them out to starve somewhere else. Why not say they shall not fish in the waters of the State, make them paupers, and then exercise the power which we have to send them out of the country.

Take the other question; take the subject of the right to carry on a business, trade, or occupation. It is a regulation over which the State has undoubted power. It cannot deny to its citizens, but it can deny to every one else the right to a license. Are gentlemen willing to exercise that power and take from the Chinese the right to do business? If they cannot do business, then of course they become paupers; and they are immediately put upon the same footing with the fisherman, and we can send them out.

Take for an instance, the subject of forbidding corporations organized under the laws of the State from giving employment to this class of people. Is there any question about the powers of the State to impose that sort of a condition upon corporations? They hold their franchises subject to the condition that the State may alter, amend, or repeal them, and if no one denies the power, it cuts them off from another great source of employment. Are gentlemen willing to go in for that? True, it will starve them out, but they become paupers, and then we take them as paupers and send them away.

Take again the subject of excluding them from employment upon any public work. I suppose there is no man who will object to the exercise of that power. I do not think nowadays that any man engaged in any public work would employ them, but, on the suggestion of my friend from Los Angeles, Colonel Ayers, I have no objection to its going in. The Supreme Court can set it aside if it wants to. We are not worse off. So as to section five:

"No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

I have this remark to make in regard to that, and I wish to call the attention of gentlemen to the posture of this question. We can make these declarations; we can insert them in the Constitution that we make; we can take the Chinese to the Courts, and wherever there is a doubt upon the question, I am in favor of taking the decision of a Court in this way—the only way in which I know it can be done; but I want something to fall back on. I insist that we shall not be left helpless and stranded after the Supreme Court of the United States has declared that these provisions conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

We have had, sir, for years and years, the same old thing. We have had platform declarations. We have had efforts in Congress to bring the subject before their attention ignored; so much so that, as I understand it, there has never yet been a vote taken upon it in Congress. The ayes and noes, or any kind of a vote, has never been taken in Congress upon the question in any shape whatever. So little attention has been paid to our constant and reiterated demands for relief that I do not know that even a committee has ever reported upon the subject at all.

Now, sir, we are proposed to be remanded to the Courts on every questionable and doubtful proposition declaratory of extremely questionable and doubtful purposes. And shall we be left there? No sir! I insist that we shall reserve still the power in the Constitution constituting the basis and framework for a legislative superstructure in the State of California upon the subject. I insist that we shall declare—positively and strongly declare—these rights, and these powers, police powers of the State, and direct the Legislature to erect upon it a system of laws by which the Chinese that are here will be excluded, and by which they can be driven out faster than they can be brought in. I say it can be done! I say it must be done. And I say I want to see it done, for the reason that Congress must be awakened, the great American people must be aroused. Men are there constantly at the doors of Congress, and in the President's chambers, insisting it is not the actual and genuine sentiment of the people of the Pacific Coast that this immigration must be stopped. We must demonstrate to them that we are in earnest. Yea, sir, we must startle them. I am in favor of shocking their sensibilities, and then they will know, sir, that we are in real earnest. What will be the consequence?

MR. AYERS. Do you think that there is anything that could shock the sensibilities of the East on this subject more than to adopt a section in the Constitution declaring the power of exclusion to exist in the State?

MR. BARBOUR. Yes, sir, I do. I think they would be more shocked by saying that if the worst comes to the worst that we are willing to use the public power of the State to starve them out. I do, because they might say we are trying to bully when we say that they shall not land here; but they know we have got the other kind of power, and seeing us propose to use it, they may say, "These people are in earnest. They are going for blood!"

Why is it that Chinamen come here? What is it that draws them to these shores? Demand for labor. If nobody employs them they will not come, will they? If they cannot get employment they will not come. That you may say is a maxim of political science. Men move from the love of food more than for mere conquest, and if they come here, they come here for food and employment. Destroy the demand and you destroy the immigration. If they see in the East that we are striking at the very demand for labor itself, they can but say, "These people are in earnest, if they are barbarous and cruel."

I am in favor of startling them. I am in favor of doing it so because I am willing to have either one of the consequences to happen. We try to reach them by saying, "Aliens ineligible to become citizens of the United States," because we do not want to affect foreigners of other countries. We can say that and take our chances. We do not actually know, by the decision of the highest tribunal, that they are ineligible to become citizens. The best decision that we have ever got, of course, declares them ineligible; but it is that sort of a decision that may be reversed to-morrow, and the highest tribunal may declare them to be citizens of the United States. Other Courts of record in the United States have admitted them, and are admitting them to citizenship. Congress might, at this session, amend the naturalization laws so that they could, unquestionably, become citizens.

Perhaps we will drive Congress into doing that, who knows! We had better drive Congress into doing something than to have this eternal contempt of the demands of the people of the Pacific Coast, for then, sir, we would be compelled to fall back on our own resources, knowing that there was no hope there. But it might have the other effect.

Gentlemen are always claiming and contending here that it would be a shame and a stain that would bring the blush to the cheek of a Californian to have such provisions in the Constitution, or our statute books, as apparently in defiance of our American civilization. I say, sir, that if under the spur of our resolute determination and our earnestness Congress should act, it is not difficult to remove them from the Constitution and from the statutes. It can be done simply and absolutely. It need not remain there when the effect intended has been produced in any other way. But the country must be awakened. It must be awakened as by an earthquake shock to the determination of the people of the Pacific Coast that something must be done, and some relief must be granted. And if it is possible to cut them off from every avenue of employment, and within the power of the State to do so, and it can be demonstrated on this floor that such would be the effect, where is the gentleman who opposes such measures, can reconcile it with his declarations to his constituents that he was willing to go to the very verge of constitutional power for the purpose of doing so. It does not need, sir, that it be done instantly and at once. It does not need that the vast army of Chinese laboring on this coast shall be suddenly, at one fell swoop, cut off from all employment, but that they shall be worked out. That is the plan, and the idea; we all hope, we all desire, we all prefer, that Congress should close the Golden Gate against their further immigration, but the question has resolved itself simply into this: If Congress will not act, are you willing to do so here in the State of California? We are placed in this predicament that we cannot ascertain the action of Congress before this Convention shall adjourn. If we could, we might make a last appeal to them to step in now and forbid Chinese immigration, and we could attend to those that are here. But we have no such opportunity. We must act then as if we had no other resource. We must act as if the question was upon us to decide for ourselves, to regulate for ourselves, and to regulate it in the best and most efficacious manner. Now, sir, what is that manner? With every disposition on earth to conform as nearly as may be to the ideas of civilized mankind, and the ideas of justice, and of humanity, I do say and I do insist that promptitude of action is imperatively demanded by the exigencies of the case—promptitude of action, sir, in order to save the fair cities and the fair fields of California from being the scenes of carnage, of riot, and of blood, I speak whereof I know. I speak whereof I know when I assure gentlemen of the Convention, and every one within the sound of my voice, that an uprising is hard to be restrained to-day. I have been, sir, upon the inside. The reverence for American institutions, the reverence for law and order, appealed to, has produced its effect. There does exist yet in the minds of our people an earnest and prayerful desire that they may not be driven, as they believe it will become imperatively necessary for them yet to be driven, to resort to that course taken by the revolutionary fathers when they went upon that ship in Boston harbor and flung overboard the contraband tea. God spare us that sort of a revolution, sir.

We should avert it if possible. We should give them some gleam of hope that something will be done at home, by peaceable and constitutional means. They are not anxious to rush into these things, but they do know their power and it cannot be denied. It cannot be denied that a great majority having within their control the destinies of this State, having expressed time and time again the determination, find themselves continually denied the rights they ought to have, continually forestalled in the occupation of the avenues of labor by this alien race, are discontented. It is for that reason, sir, that here and now I call upon this Convention for some promptitude of action, whatever that may be, which shall be an effectual, startling, and convincing awakener of the people of the Eastern States, of Congress, and the ruling powers, to the fact that we are in earnest, resolute.

The last biennial message of his Excellency the President of the United States, supposed to present for the consideration of Congress all matters affecting the welfare of the people of the United States, has not one single syllable touching a question which is the overshadowing and paramount subject of discussion at every fireside on the Pacific Coast; not one syllable; not one line! Deaf, indeed, to all prayers seems to be the ears of those that are now in power.

I see the hour for recess has arrived, and I will give way for a motion that the committee rise.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

MR. PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The hour having arrived, the Convention will take a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to section seven.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR—CONCLUDED.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I was presenting to the consideration of the Convention the conflict, the irrepressible conflict, which is impending over the people of the Pacific Coast by reason of the presence of a Mongolian population. I maintain that the conflict, in the very nature of things, unless a feasible remedy can be found, is inevitable. It is, sir, an irrepressible conflict between two entirely dissimilar civilizations—aye, sir, between two different systems of labor, as was the old irrepressible conflict between the free white labor of the North and the slave labor of the South. The manifestations of the conflict and the opposition existing may be different from the manifestations of the old conflict, but it is none the less true that the signs for a future conflict exist as certain and as inevitable as ever did exist the signs of the old conflict, and it is the part of statesmen—of true and wise statesmanship—to avoid the revolutionary part of the conflict, if it is possible to do so. Had our forefathers been guided by the experience of nations, as they might have been, this country would have been relieved from the conflict which impended over it so long, and which finally burst with such terrible effect upon it. But they were not guided by experience. They temporized. They felt they could not yield up the kind of labor which in their day they contended was the only kind of labor with which they could develop the resources of their section of the country.

And that same argument has been made on the floor of this Convention. We have been told here that Chinese labor is developing the resources of this country; and we are told now that Chinese labor is necessary to the further development of the country. Members did not proclaim these sentiments in the nominating conventions; they did not proclaim it on the stump. If they held any such opinions they failed to make it known before the election. They admitted the impending conflict; they admitted the evils resulting from the presence of the Chinese, and yet they now tell us they cannot work their mines at the present rates of labor, and that the present wages for white labor are too high.

I admire the honesty and candor of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Stuart, who makes no secret in this Convention as to what his opinion is. He believes that a great many of the landholders of the land can not work their land with white labor, at the present rates of production. I would rather hear men come out squarely and oppose these measures, for some cause, than to see them indifferent—assenting to the doctrine of the evils of Chinese immigration in the abstract, but unwilling to do anything practical to abate the evil. I contend, however, that the gentleman from Sonoma is mistaken in his premises. I contend that if the labor market of California could be instantly deprived of this great source of supply, there would be an influx of white labor to fill the vacancy. It will be governed by the law of supply and demand. Create a demand for labor, and inform the white laborers of the country that they will not be compelled to come in competition with Chinese labor, and they will come. You have but to call for white labor and it will come. There is no doubt about it in the world. It has been here, sir. It has looked over the fields, it has sought to obtain this employment, but it was forestalled, and it did not stay, because the ground was occupied—because free labor would not volunteer to place itself in competition with slave labor—or that which is similar in almost every respect to slave labor.

There might be present hardship to the industries of the country by the cessation of a hundred thousand laborers, if that is a correct estimate of the number. I admit that there would be a depression produced by the sudden withdrawal of this number of laborers. But is it not infinitely better for the interests of the entire community, for the interests of our future industries, and for the people of California and of the Pacific Coast, than that so much suffering, so much hardship be entailed upon them?

Now, I do not propose to go into an elaborate discussion of this section, or of the various sections of this report, but with regard to the method of regulation I have this to say: I do not desire to be left helpless and powerless by what I fear will be the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. I do not say that these provisions cover the case, or are exactly such as this Convention ought to adopt. But I do say, and I insist, that it is demanded of us here in this Convention that we do make some use of the internal police power of the State, in the event of the restraint being denied by Congress, or in the event that these other provisions be declared null and void. When we enter into the State, which is called a political community, we make a contract with all the other members of that community, and to that extent surrender certain of our rights. A given number of the members of this Convention may enter into an agreement among themselves, by which they bind themselves, by certain forfeitures, not to employ Chinese labor. They are legitimate agreements. They may be enforced. I maintain that the State, having the power to make these regulations, is empowered and authorized to do the very same thing. I maintain that the State may impose upon its citizens certain disabilities, in the event of their employing that kind of labor, because it comes within the police power of the State. It has the right to determine what kind of labor, in its judgment, and the presence of what kind of laborers are detrimental to the welfare of the State; and whoever employs it, whoever is instrumental in bringing that kind of labor into the State, to that extent is instrumental in maintaining a nuisance; and, therefore, it is competent for the State to impose that condition upon its citizens, at least those who come within its jurisdiction with regard to subject-matters of that kind. With all that class of persons who hold public offices, and exercise rights and privileges granted by the State, the State has a right to impose that kind of conditions upon them—the State may name the obligation clause—eo nominee. They may say that the Chinese—putting the question squarely—may not be ineligible to citizenship, no matter what the Courts may decide; and it is within that power, and within that general authority of the State, to impose these conditions upon the citizens—the conditions upon which they may exercise these rights and privileges.

But I go beyond all that, sir, and I say that it comes within and it ought to be placed upon the ground of the great sovereign power of the State. Here is what is confessed to be the greatest nuisance ever imposed upon a free and enlighted people, drawn here by the circumstances, the result of the growth of the State under the laws of supply and demand, which was in the beginning considered unworthy of particular attention, but which has grown to such proportions that it has become a mighty nuisance. Now, where is the community, where is the individual, where is the city, where is the county, where is the State on the face of the globe which does not possess as one of its chief attributes the power to abate nuisances? Simply a nuisance, and a great nuisance. And the judgment of the people of the State of California has already proclaimed to the world that here in our midst is the crowning nuisance, which calls for the exercise of the sovereign power of the State for its abatement. I maintain, sir, that the State does have the power to send them without our limits. And it is our duty to impose this duty upon the Legislature, which has control of the machinery. I am willing to take section one upon that ground. I am willing to take section two, which forbids the employment of Chinese by corporations. I am willing to take section three, which forbids their employment upon public works. I am willing to take section four, because it will hold at least until overturned by the Supreme Court of the United States. I am willing to take section five upon the same ground. Now, I understand the majority of this Convention are content to take this section, but desire to stop there. Now, sir, I can very readily perceive, under certain constructions put upon this section, how it will result; that we will deserve at the hands of the people the charge that we have done nothing. I can see how every single one of these sections may be rendered nugatory, because they do not—not one single one of them—come squarely down to a declaration of the duty of the State, to bring the arm of sovereignty, to bring its police power to bear directly upon this question. That is exactly where we differ. The Legislature and the municipalities will have no power. We not only want to give them power to do it, but we ought to impose the duty upon them. And it is for that reason that the succeeding sections, six, seven, eight, and nine, or something similar to those sections, ought to be incorporated in the Constitution, or submitted in separate sections. These sections are as follows:

SEC. 6. Foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to sue or be sued in any of the Courts of this State, and any lawyer appearing for or against them, or any of them, in a civil proceeding, shall forfeit his license to practice law. No such foreigner shall be granted license to carry on any business, trade, or occupation in this State, nor shall such license be granted to any person or corporation employing them. No such foreigner shall have the right to catch fish in any of the waters under the jurisdiction of the State; nor to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State; and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real estate to any such foreigner shall be void.

SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. It shall provide for their exclusion from residence or settlement in any portion of the State it may see fit, or from the State, and provide suitable methods, by their taxation or otherwise, for the expense of such exclusion. It shall prescribe suitable penalties for the punishment of persons convicted of introducing them within forbidden limits. It shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for their removal without the limits of such cities and towns.

SEC. 8. Public officers within this State are forbidden to employ Chinese in any capacity whatever. Violation of this provision shall be ground for removal from office; and no person shall be eligible to any office in this State who, at the time of election, and for three months before, employed Chinese.

SEC. 9. The exercise of the right of suffrage shall be denied to any person employing Chinese in this State, and it shall be sufficient challenge that the person offering to vote is employing Chinese, or has employed them within three months next preceding the election.

I introduced into this Convention a proposition to instruct the Judiciary Committee to report to this body the legality of submitting separate articles to the people, to be ratified or rejected, and I was in hopes they would have done so before we reached this article. I am informed they have made up their minds, and I suppose the probabilities are that we will be advised that it is not competent for us to submit separate articles for the people to vote upon. They may be right, and they may be wrong. I am of the opinion that it will be satisfactory to a large portion of the people to be allowed to vote directly and squarely upon this Chinese question; and if the outcome shall be that a majority are in favor of, or opposed to restrictive legislation, then it will have no validity; but on the contrary, if a majority do decide in favor of this legislation, it will be a direct and positive announcement: first, of the opinion of the people of the State of California; and second, that it will leave the Legislature power to do something for the accomplishment of this result. I have taken the opinions, as far as I have been able to do so, upon this question, and I believe they are willing to submit—outside of the Constitution—to the electors of the State of California, directly and squarely, the proposition whether this State shall bring to bear her police and internal power for the purpose of expelling the Chinese from our midst.

Many tell us that the question of Chinese commerce and the Chinese here are so mixed up with the laboring interests, bound up with it, that if you take the honest sentiment of the people of California, it will be found to be against restrictive legislation. Sir, I am perfectly content to risk it to the people, though I know that many who pretend to be anti-Chinese reformers secretly employ Chinese, and are secretly in favor of Chinese labor. I know that to be true, sir. I am willing to take the chances on that. I am not afraid but the honest sentiment of a large majority of the people of California will be found to be on the right side, if taken in a fair and square election.

Now, sir, I have spoken long enough, I suppose, both for my own good and the comfort of the Convention, but I have endeavored to plead the cause of the workingmen of this State before this body. I have endeavored to present the claims of that numerous class, but whether rightfully or wrongfully I know not. I have come to the conclusion, from the character of the legislation that has taken place; from the character of the events constituting the history of this coast for the past ten years—I say I have come to the conclusion that they have no friends among the powers that be. Whether rightfully or wrongfully, sir, I say that the workingmen of the State of California have lost confidence entirely in those who shape the legislation of the country, and they have done so because, notwithstanding the loud professions—the reiterated professions of friendship and devotion to the cause of labor and to the rights of laboring men—they have seen year after year roll away and nothing done—no, not one single step taken in the direction of reform—and I come before this Convention pleading their cause; and we would plead it in a sincere way. And I say to this Convention now, I demand, sirs, in the name of the workingmen of the State of California, that something more than mere obstructions, and humbug, and pretense, be dealt out to them hereafter. They want some practical work, something that will produce practical results. Nay, more, sir. Not alone for them do I appeal: I do so in the interests of the rising generation; I do so in the interests of humanity; I do so in the interest of the future prosperity of the Pacific Coast, and of California, which is my home, which has held me so far, and which will probably be my home so long as I live, and my resting place when I die. [Applause.]

MR. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman: I would like to offer a substitute for section one, as it at present stands.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. JOYCE. I offer a substitute for the whole business.

THE CHAIRMAN. Send it up.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of Mayors of incorporated cities, and the Supervisors of counties, after the first day of May, eighteen hundred and eighty, to see that no Mongolians be allowed to reside within the limits of their respective cities and counties; and it shall be the duty of the Governor of this State, in case of the inability of such Mayor, or such Supervisors, to use all the power of the State in assisting such Mayors and such Supervisors in enforcing the provisions of this section.

"SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to make all the necessary laws for the enforcement of the above section."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute.

SPEECH OF MR. JOYCE.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman: I offer that substitute for this reason: it seems to be unanimous, or very near unanimous, in this Convention, that they are all in favor of adopting some measure that will rid the country of the Chinese. Now, sir, it strikes me that being adopted, there is no possible means of labor being brought into competition with the Chinese after the enforcement of this. There is no necessity of dealing with the increase of the Chinamen in future, because, if they cannot reside here, they will have no anxiety of coming here. I believe that before the rebellion a majority of the border States had provisions preventing free negroes coming into their States. I believe, in a great many cases, these laws were executed; and I believe if this provision be embodied into the Constitution there will be no difficulty in the future in dealing with this thing. In the next place there is another principle back of it. If there are any counties in the State that desire to have Chinese, they can use the local option means. If the people desire to get rid of the Chinese in good faith, the sovereign will of the people can instruct their officers to do so. I do not see why this will not solve this Chinese question in a very simple way.

SPEECH OF MR. BARTON.

MR. BARTON. Mr. Chairman: Upon this subject, sir, I desire to say a few words, if I can have the attention of the committee for a few moments. This is a subject, Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the committee, more vital to the State of California and the whole Pacific Coast than any or all other questions that have ever been presented to the people of this coast. Year after year we have remained with our hands tied: year after year have we seen the Democratic party, and the representatives of the Republican party, assembled in this hall, and announce to the people of this State that they were positively opposed to the further importation of Chinese, and engrafting in their platforms, and upon their banners, in glowing colors, that infernal deception, calculated and designed for the purpose of creating sympathy and political prestige. Year after year have they inscribed upon their banners in every campaign this deception. Year after year we have heard these California demagogues (some of whom we find in this Convention to-day, sent here by the people to represent the people's interests), afraid to raise their voices on this floor on behalf of the people. Sir, I have been waiting for some of these great men who occupy seats here to rise up, statesman-like, and let me hear them place themselves either in favor of the people of the State of California and her institutions, or in favor of continuing this Mongolian curse.

I perhaps feel more deeply than many of you. I have been a citizen of this State long enough to rear a family to manhood, and I find myself and my children brought down by force of circumstances and misfortune to a level with these slaves, and yet I maintain my dignity. I stand here to-day to defend my dignity and my manhood; to defend the principles of our government and of the people of the country, and that is what I am here for to-day. The representatives of the working people of this State, in the Legislature of eighteen hundred and sixty-six and eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, asked to have engrafted upon the statute books that where the State granted aid to corporations, the parties receiving such aid shall not be permitted to employ Chinese labor thereon, and I am sorry to know that my Democratic friends and my Republican friends, in both branches of the Legislature, almost solidly voted against the proposition. That is a matter of record, and gentlemen need not take my word for it. Three several times when that measure was brought up, our Democratic friends and our Republican friends voted solid against it. The people asked that when the State was giving aid that the work should be done by white labor, and on these three several occasions the friends of labor, so called, turned their backs upon the people and voted against the proposition.

As to the evils of Chinese immigration, allow me to say right here that I do not believe, when you come right down to the real sober thought, that there is any great need for this argument. On this subject, I believe that the voice of humanity dictates that it is a vice; that it is the sentiment of the people of this State that it is a curse; therefore I do not propose to discuss that proposition at any length. We find ourselves in a very peculiar condition. We have the slaves of Asia, the penal scum of Europe pouring in upon us for the last twenty-five years, and in addition to that we find England closing Hell Gate and all her colonial ports against all of such scum, and we ask, in behalf of the people of this State and of humanity, that the Golden Gate shall be closed against them likewise. We ask this as a matter of self-protection. And I claim we have the right, notwithstanding the Burlingame treaty, to incorporate a clause in this Constitution, to drive out, if you please, from the incorporated cities of this State, and from the counties, this Chinese curse. Now, you may think that this is an extreme view, but if there is one thing above all others that I am in favor of, it is of protecting my Caucasian brothers in the State of California. I say England has closed Hell Gate, and I am in favor of closing the Golden Gate also. When we talk about the Burlingame treaty we are informed by these shoddy demagogues, hypocrites, and false philanthropists that we are powerless. You cannot abrogate the treaty because England is a party to that treaty. They hold a part of China, and she has become a party to the contract.

It is a lamentable fact, Mr. President, that we find ourselves so thoroughly controlled, both in our State and national halls of legislation, by the money bags of Europe, that our liberties are almost gone. And if we are to be compelled to submit to this thing, what will be the result? When we find that our statesmen have betrayed us; when we find that the combined powers of Europe are controlling the National Legislature against us, why, there is but one sequel to this question, and that is, that this country will be revolutionized, because, sir, Mongolian slavery can never predominate in this free country. I hope my eyes may never behold the spectacle. Again, I ask, where are our statesmen? Will some great mind come to the rescue and stay the impending conflict, and prevent, if possible, the deluging again this glorious country with blood; and it was to prevent this state of things that the workingmen have been called into existence to bare their breasts to the fight to maintain the constitutional law of this government.

The farmers ought to be as deeply interested in this matter as any of us, but I am sorry to say such is not the fact. The Grangers are false to their professions in this. They declare in their declaration of principles to foster and to elevate labor. Do they practice what they preach? No; they turn my boy and yours from their door to become a tramp—in most cases unwillingly. Why, sir, I have been cautioned by my brother Grangers not to oppose Chinese labor; if you do, you will sink the institution. I am told that many of our most influential Grangers are the advocates of Chinese cheap labor, and the Grange cannot afford to antagonize such an influence in the Granges. I am sick and disgusted with all such ideas and men; they are our very worst enemies. Instead of elevating labor, they are dragging labor down to the level of the Mongolian serf. Let the producing classes come down from their false position of high life in low circumstances, drive the Mongolian from the kitchen, from the wash-house, and place therein a Caucasian boy or girl. Stop before it is too late. No longer assist in dragging down our daughters to degradation and disgrace. You cannot deny it. The result of this Chinese labor is the filling of our land with hoodlum boys and girls, and you may talk as you like, but this is the subject of all others. The people are calling upon you, and you should open your mouths and assist us in some way, and let us once more stand up in our stalwart worth and manhood, like decent and dignified white men of our nation and State. Why, sir, where are our statesmen? They are dead! dead! Dead to the sensibilities of human nature. They tell us if it had not been for this system of human slavery the State would not to-day have been what she is. Go with me into the berry fields of San José—or any other portion of the State—and when you find a man that is willing to give white men and white boys employment, what does he tell you? Simply that it is impossible for him to employ white labor and compete with his neighbor who employs Chinamen. This is something that presents itself to every intelligent mind, and it should be dealt with according to its merits. Go to the fruit growers of the State, along the Sacramento River, and see the hundreds and thousands of Chinese that are employed, and ask these men if, in their inner consciences, they think it is right to give employment to Chinese to the exclusion of white men. They will tell you that when a white man comes along and wants work, he is informed that he must eat with and sleep in the same house with the Chinese. If that don't suit, you can go along. So, of course, he is turned away from his own people, and made to live with a herd of slaves. He is not fit to lay down his blankets and partake of the hospitalities of his own people, but has to eat and sleep with these slaves. You have driven all the honest labor from the State, in this way, both male and female.

We have heard so much of the dogmas of the would be leaders of the Republican party. I hope I may be excused for speaking thus plainly in reviewing the actions of the political parties on which we have depended. I say to you to-day, behold, if you please, the Goddess of Liberty, weighed down by over two billion dollars. Where has this money gone? Much of it has gone to subsidize a few scoundrels in the shape of a Chinese steamship company, for the purpose of importing and bringing into this State this horde of Mongolian slaves, and yet they tell us that a national debt is a national blessing. God forbid that the intelligence of the State of California should longer submit to such doctrines. Gorham and his followers teach the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, and the fatherhood of God. Away with such sentimentalism; for it is a curse and a stench to the people of this State and of the nation. We want no more of them. But if there be any more of them left within the confines of the State of California, be he Democrat or Republican, we say to them, we will have no more to do with you. The time has come when the people who take from the soil the material wealth of this great State will have no more to do with them. We want live statesmen, who are awake to the wants and necessities of a great people. Mr. Chairman, I am afraid the American statesmen have all ceased to live. I would like to see California produce one statesman that the people might have confidence in. We are admonished by the gentleman from San Francisco, General Miller, not to be led away by what he calls popular clamor. Sir, was it not popular clamor that threw the British tea into Boston Harbor? And was it not that same popular clamor that resulted in American independence? It was that which actuated the people, and yet we are told that we must not give way to popular clamor. I admonish you to give heed to popular clamor, for it is the voice of the people finding expression, and the voice of the people is the voice of God.

And more, sir, we have seen these Chinese erect in the heart of a great city an independent tribunal of justice, so called, in defiance of the laws of the government. Is there any other nation on earth so imbecile; is there any other nation that would for one moment tolerate such a thing? These heathens are employed in almost every household in the land. Have you ever thought how extensively they are employed? In every house in the city, on the farm, and everywhere. Nineteen out of twenty farmers who have help to cook for employ Chinese cooks. Suppose they should determine to destroy us, they could by one fell swoop, by placing poison in the food, destroy the people of the State. We ask who does not employ them? The Supreme Judges do, all the State officers do, the farmers do—in short, we all do; directly or indirectly, in some way or other, we are compelled to contribute to their support; and little by little this curse is fastening itself on the society and the politics of our fair land. They can never assimilate with us, and never will. They can and will supersede us in all branches of industry and labor, because of their habits of cheap living. They domicile with the rats and dogs. One hundred of them will thrive and do well in the same space that would be required for an honest white man and his family. They pay no tribute to the government, they will not fight the battles of our Union; the autocrat, the millionaire, and the Shylocks of the land want them, and we are told that our duty is to compete with these Mongolian slaves. I say these are public servants who tell us to do this, and it is disgraceful. White men will not submit to these things, and white women need the work and must have it. Where is the cold-blooded wretch who says this is not a great shame and a disgrace? And I am proud to know that it does not meet with the approbation of the people of this State.

Then, sir, again my attention was recently called to another and terrible outrage. The State gives one hundred dollars for the support and maintenance of orphans, and seventy-five dollars a year for half orphans and abandoned children. The people of this State are called upon to pay this money, but, sir, within a stone's throw of this building all the washing from that asylum—which was burned a few nights ago—goes to the Chinaman. There are young girls in that institution from twelve to sixteen years of age who are perfectly able to do this work; but no—that curse is fixed upon us so firmly that false pride and false modesty is driving us to perdition as fast as possible. I say it is wrong that we should permit these things. It is wrong that the people of the State should be compelled to pay taxes to support such institutions as that. Think of it, thirty or forty dollars worth of washing taken out of that building every month and given to these Mongolians, when the inmates ought to be compelled to do it themselves, instead of being supported in idleness. Again I ask some of our great statesmen to rise and solve this problem. Help us out of this difficulty. It is debauching public morals in every sense. We see it on every hand, and yet our great men are never heard to utter a word against these things. They may say that these are trifling matters. Mr. Chairman, there is where we should begin. Come down to the very bottom, and work up to a more healthy condition of things. The Chinese, we are told, in many of the Eastern States are constantly being admitted to citizenship. Now I would like to be informed by some intelligent gentleman how we are to understand this. Are we informed correctly when we are told by the leaders of our government that they are not entitled to become citizens, or are we to take the records of those Courts which are admitting them to citizenship? Only a few days ago, in New York, several Chinamen were admitted to citizenship. I tell you gentlemen this is all a delusion and a snare. And I am waiting for some of the leaders of this Convention—I don't mean the mudsills—to come to our rescue, and do something that will relieve us of this curse. I would that I had the power to drive these slaves over to the other side of the Mississippi River, five thousand, ten thousand, yes twenty thousand of them, in order that the Eastern people might become educated up to our necessities; and if I had the power to-day I would send a horde of those Chinamen into New England. That is where I would send them. That is what I would do with them, and I pray that time may come. But there is no hope of that. They intend to make their homes here. And unless we can find some way to prevent it they will fasten themselves upon us forever.

And now, Mr. Chairman, I want to give you an idea of the character of a man who made an attempt to come to this Convention, and I know whereof I am speaking. It was he who contended against me for a seat in this Convention. He is possessed of great wealth, having an income of perhaps eight hundred or one thousand dollars a month from houses rented to Chinese prostitutes. When our little city passed an ordinance that these houses shall be closed, he goes to a Justice of the Peace and makes a bargain: "How much will you charge to marry these people for me—how much a couple?" He secures Chinese bucks enough, and the prostitutes were all married to them, and the next morning this individual goes out and kicks the door open and tells his tenants to walk in, and the authorities are told to go to hell. "These are my tenants and my houses." This is the character of man who would legislate for the workingmen of this State. But, thank God, they are few, and if I thought such men could ever wield and control the power in this State, by the eternal God I would leave it, never to return. But having grown up, as it were, in this State, having enjoyed almost thirty years' citizenship, having all my interests identified with those of the glorious State of California, I shall not leave so long as there is a chance of ridding the State of this curse. If I had not taken the opportunity of saying a word on this question, I should have considered myself derelict in my duty as a citizen and a representative of the people. We want to know whether our hands are completely tied by the combined power of Europe and the banks of America? For God's sake do not let this opportunity pass, but in thunder tones breathe an emphatic declaration into the fundamental law of California. If the time comes when our liberties are to be taken away, let us rise up and see to it that none but friends are put on watch. Send those to Congress who we know will abrogate the Burlingame treaty, and make the Caucasian people free from the scum of Asia. Let us work in the interest of the free people of the country, and let us make our record now.

SPEECH OF MR. WICKES.

MR. WICKES. Mr. Chairman: What we do here must not be done with reference to any one class of the people of this State. Our work here is not final, and upon this Chinese question we wish, as near as possible, a unanimous ratification of our work. In deference, then, to those who believe in the brotherhood and evangelization of man, I give a brief outline of scriptural authority for the division and exclusion of races. First, I speak of the confusion of tongues and dispersion of races from the plains of Shinar, in the Valleys of Euphrates and Tigris. The same power, if the whole race is descended from one pair, must have infused primordial germs into these wandering peoples, from the development of which, under modifications of climate and surroundings, must have come the three or five distinct types of human kind. They created the tower of Babel, and the tower was destroyed, and a confusion of tongues ensued (something like that witnessed here in this Convention at times). These types now show that they are adapted to present and peculiar conditions.

St. Paul declares that, although God made of one flesh and blood all nations of the earth, He appointed unto them their bounds and habitations. Missionary work involves the sending out, to convert, not bringing in incongruous material to proselyte. The term "Apostle," means "one sent." Scripture, then, plainly teaches that the races are on different lines of evolution. If other races invade us, we should order them back, or meet force with force supported by the whole people of the State. The Jews expelled the Canaanites from the inheritance provided by God for Abraham and his descendants. A prediction in the Bible, relative to a people numerous as the sands of the sea, styled Gog and Magog, a Tartar race who shall threaten the Christian civilization, evidently points to the Chinese. It cannot mean the Turks, for the Mahomedan power is now broken, and its system of theology passing by an easy transition into the Christian.

Nature teaches the aristocracy of race, the law of nature's selection, the survival of the intellectually fittest. Culture developes the higher from the lowest types. Agriculture, floriculture, and stock raising teach us to preserve the best seed, The coming race, then, must be evolved from the white. The maintenance of this higher law should be dearer to us even than the Federal Union. In the Constitution we can only introduce such police measures as are covered by sections one, two, and three, and eight of the article on Chinese. We cannot exclude the Chinese, because we contravene the treaty-making power of the United States (vide amendments of the United States Constitution). We can now also memorialize the Congress of the United States to modify or abrogate the Burlingame treaty, and can prohibit naturalization of Mongolians in our Constitution. I am in favor ultimately of exclusion; but as we are obliged to lay our projectile Constitution before the United States Congress, for its recognizance, it would not now be good policy to defy the National Government. We must elect the next State administration pledged to support the closing of our ports against the Chinese, and work the public mind up to sustain such measures. Who does not stand shoulder to shoulder with us then, is a recreant to his race. For my own part, if this Chinese immigration is not stopped, I shall have to take my little family from these shores to some isle of the sea to spend the remainder of my days. I can see no other escape unless this invasion is soon checked. [Applause.]

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. SMITH, of Kern. I move the previous question on section one.

The motion was duly seconded.

MR. CROSS. I am tired of hearing this previous question.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the committee refused to order the main question—ayes 39; noes 46, and the section was passed over for one day, under the rule.

CORPORATIONS AND THE CHINESE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 2. Any corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises, and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

MR. JOYCE. What becomes of my substitute?

THE CHAIRMAN. It goes over for one day.

MR. CROSS. Was the majority opposed to the previous question?

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir; the committee refused to put the main question, and the section went over until to-morrow.

MR. BURT. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words, 'are not eligible to become,' in line four, and insert as follows: "have not declared their intentions.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Burt.

SPEECH OF MR. BURT.

MR. BURT. Mr. Chairman: I have two objects in offering this amendment. In the first place, I wish to state here that I am not only willing but anxious to go just as far as possible in legislating upon this subject without coming in conflict with either the laws or the treaty of the General Government. But it seems to me, sir, that the section as now constructed, if it is engrafted into the Constitution, must come in direct conflict with what is known as the Burlingame treaty. That treaty provides substantially that citizens of the Chinese Empire shall enjoy all the rights and privileges accorded to the subjects of the most favored nations. Now, it seems to me, sir, that this section two must of necessity come in direct conflict with the treaty; whereas, if the amendment which I propose is adopted, it will do away with any such conflict. If I am mistaken in my construction of this section I shall be only too glad to be set right; and my object in offering this amendment, or one object, is to provoke discussion upon this point, to determine how far we may go without coming in conflict with the laws and treaties of the General Government.

But, sir, I have another and more potent reason for offering this amendment. It is a well known fact that within a short time past certain citizens of the Chinese Empire have been naturalized in some of the Eastern Courts, with the avowed intention of bringing the subject before the United States Supreme Court, in order to have them determine whether or not Chinese are eligible to become citizens of the United States. Now, if the Court should decide that they are eligible, this section two, with the section following, must inevitably fail to accomplish the purposes for which they are intended. But under the amendment, as offered, it will still be effective to a certain extent, as it is not, in my opinion, reasonable to suppose that any large number of the Chinese will avail themselves of the privilege of becoming citizens of the United States. But, should the decision of the Court be in the negative, that they cannot become citizens, then the section, as amended, will still have as much force as it would if passed in its present shape. In offering this amendment I have no desire to aim a shaft at the people of any of the foreign powers known as Christian nations. If I did so intend, it would be upon the fact that I realize that the subjects of these foreign powers are here with the intention of becoming citizens of the United States, and they have only to declare their intentions in order to place themselves on a level with the citizens of the United States, so far as the prohibitions contained in this section are concerned.

SPEECH OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: From a cursory view of this section, and of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer, I am inclined to favor the amendment more than the original section, for the reason that we are in a very uncertain state as to who are capable of becoming citizens of the United States. We have heard of one or two instances in which the Courts have decided that no Mongolian, or person of the Mongolian race, can, under the laws of the United States, become citizens. But recently the other Courts have held quite the reverse doctrine, and have naturalized Chinamen—Mongolians. So, as I said, it is very uncertain at the present whether a Chinamen can become a citizen or not. And long before it is determined, we do not know but Congress will step in and cut the Gordian knot by declaring that the people of that race can become citizens. We do not know but they may. I hope they never will; but we cannot tell what may be the outcome.

Now, this question of eligibility all depends upon the Acts of Congress. Generally we understand that the only grounds upon which Chinese, or Mongolians, have been prohibited from becoming citizens, are that Congress has never passed an Act covering the case. There are Acts of Congress authorizing white aliens to become citizens, and those of African descent—none other. Therefore, some of our Courts have decided that there is no law of Congress authorizing the Mongolian race to become citizens, and upon that ground they refused to naturalize them. But all that is necessary, under the most favorable decision, under the most unfavorable decision, as regards the Chinese, is simply for Congress to pass an Act covering their case. So, that placing this section as it now stands in the Constitution, or any of these sections in regard to aliens who are ineligible to become citizens, seems to me will amount to but little; because, if Congress is disposed to hear our complaints upon the Pacific Coast, and legislate in our favor, they will at once take steps to abrogate the Burlingame treaty, and pass other Acts putting a stop to Chinese immigration, by Act of Congress. If they are disposed to do it, they will pass direct legislation discouraging and prohibiting Chinese immigration. But if, on the contrary, they are disposed to look adversely to our views, take a different view, saying that we are wrong, notwithstanding all the articles we may pass against persons who are ineligible to become citizens of the United States, if Congress is so disposed, they will simply pass a law that any person of any race may become a citizen of the United States, and that will rob all these provisions of their vitality. As far as that goes, it had better be left to Congress. If we wish to prohibit their immigration and employment (we cannot prohibit immigration)—if we wish to put in a clause prohibiting their employment, why not say Chinese at once, instead of saying that no person of the Mongolian race shall be employed upon any of the public works, etc. We mean Chinese, and why not come out squarely and say so. It will be much more effective, if there is nothing whatever said with reference to aliens who are ineligible to become citizens.

Now, as to this amendment, I will state the danger I think I see in it. This section is very broad. Just look at it:

"Any corporation incorporated under the laws of the State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchise and all legal rights thereunder if it employs in any capacity whatever foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

Now, that might do very well if it only applied to men who come along and ask for day's work, because these corporations, or their officers, when a man comes along who looks like an Irishman, or an Englishman, can make him show his papers. If that was the only fault it would not be so bad. But even in that case I would rather have it apply directly to Mongolians than to all aliens. But we all know that a great part of the work of California, a great number of the enterprises carried on here are by corporations, which must of necessity be carried on by corporate capital. We have a great many mining companies, and we all know that modern mining enterprises must be carried on by corporations. In most of our mining enterprises a vast outlay of capital is required, and it takes years and years of constant effort before any profits are realized. Sometimes members of a company die and others take their places before the result is achieved. Such enterprises I say could not be carried on by voluntary partnerships. Now, one of these companies may have occasion to employ men in England, or in France, to carry on their business. They may have occasion to ship machinery from England, or from France, and of necessity would be compelled to employ a Frenchman or Englishman to do that work. They must not be employed by the corporation in any capacity whatever. I say, sir, that this section is entirely too broad. So, taking that view of the case, any Court would be compelled to place that construction upon it—in fact no other construction can be placed upon it. Therefore, every company having occasion to send to England to get a piece of machinery to carry on its works—machinery perhaps that could not be had here—employing an agent in England to see to the shipping, employing an English ship to transport it, the corporation would, under this section, forfeit its charter.

While I am on this subject, I will say that I agree with all that has been said on this floor as regards the evils of Chinese immigration. I have never employed Chinamen in my life, except when I was absolutely compelled to. I never employed them in any capacity except to do work that I could not get done by white men. I have never in any other instance employed them, and I never will if I can help it. I would rather pay a white man twice the wages. But, Mr. Chairman, I have taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States. Now, I see an article here which my judgment tells me is in direct conflict with the Constitution of the United States. Whether it be right or wrong, as long as it conflicts with the Constitution of the United States I cannot support it. I say if this government is not good enough to live under, we had better rebel at once against the Government of the United States and set up an independent government of our own, where we will not be hampered. But as long as I am sworn to support the Constitution of the United States, I will not consent to a violation of its provisions, such as this. While we are one of the States of the Union; while I am here in a capacity in which I have sworn to support the Constitution, I say I will not vote for a section which my judgment dictates to me is a violation of that Constitution.

And there is another reason: it would be absurd to do so. We might show our disposition to make a Constitution here in violation of the Federal Constitution, but we will accomplish nothing by it, except to make ourselves the laughing-stock of the world. The first Court before which our work is brought would disregard it, and treat it as unconstitutional and void—as a violation of the Constitution of the United States. So that it is a mere waste of time to pass any such provisions. Gentlemen say we have a right to do this. That may possibly be so, but if it is, my judgment and reason are greatly at fault. My judgment tells me that we have no right to do it. If other gentlemen think differently, very well. For my part, I think we have no right to put it in the Constitution. I am prepared to stand here and defend and support the Constitution of the United States, and I am not prepared to vote for a section which I think is in direct violation of it. On that ground, and upon the ground that it will make us the laughing-stock of the country, I refuse to vote for it.

Now, if there is any thing we can do to prevent this Chinese immigration, I will go as far as any gentleman in this Convention, or any person in the United States, to accomplish it. I will go as far as any person in the United States in my own individual efforts to do it. We all concede that it is an evil. Why spend so many days in discussing that part of the question. Why do gentlemen get up here and spend time and money in discussing the evils arising from Chinese immigration, when we all admit it, with scarcely an exception? I venture the assertion that there is not one person in a hundred in this State but what looks upon the matter in the same way; and if they could stop it they would do it. Let us stop talking about that part of it, and try to find something effective, and not pass a section which will fall to the ground as soon as it is contested. If we cannot do any thing in this Convention, let us memorialize Congress, as one gentleman has well suggested. Let us do something which will have some effect, if possible.

Mr. Chairman, I have spoken longer than I intended. I merely suggest these objections to the section as it stands.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: How many amendments are there now pending?

THE CHAIRMAN. Only one.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Then I will offer an amendment by way of a substitute. It is proposition number four hundred and sixty-six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. All persons of foreign birth, before engaging in any manner of employment on their own account, or for others, within this State, shall first procure a certificate of authority; such certificate shall be issued to any applicant of a race eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State, without cost, by any Court of record of the State. No person of foreign birth shall engage or continue in any manner of employment in this State unless possessed of such certificate; nor shall any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, directly or indirectly, employ any person of foreign birth within this State, unless such person possess such certificate. The Legislature shall provide for punishment of violations of this section. Prosecutions shall be maintainable against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense."

SPEECH OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I am oppposed to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Burt. I am opposed to it because it strikes out everything that there is in the section directed against the Chinese. It strikes out the words "foreigners not eligible to become citizens of the United States," and inserts the words, "have not declared their intentions." It applies to all foreigners who have not declared their intentions of becoming citizens. It would be a question whether the Chinese would not escape it by declaring their intentions, though the Courts might hold that declaring one's intentions could only be evidenced by receiving first papers.

MR. BURT. I would ask if the substitute proposed by the gentleman is not open to the same objections?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I propose to speak of that. I am, therefore, opposed to the amendment because it destroys the section; it is rendered absolutely worthless as regards the Chinaman.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman——

MR. BEERSTECHER. When I get through I will tell you. The amendment which I have presented reads as follows, and I desire to call your particular attention to it:

"SEC. 2. All persons of foreign birth, before engaging in any manner of employment on their own account, or for others, within this State, shall first procure a certificate of authority; such certificate shall be issued to any applicant of a race eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State, without cost, by any Court of record of the State. No person of foreign birth shall engage or continue in any manner of employment in this State unless possessed of such certificate; nor shall any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, directly or indirectly, employ any person of foreign birth within this State, unless such person possess such certificate. The Legislature shall provide for punishment of violations of this section. Prosecutions shall be maintainable against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense."

It seems to me that is sufficient. It is not necessary, as a matter of punishment, for a violation of the provisions of this section, to say that the corporations shall forfeit their charters. It meets the objections raised by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe, that a person of foreign birth, not a citizen, and not desiring to become a citizen, entering the State for the purpose of erecting machinery, and after having done that particular work, again departs from the State. He says his objection to the original section is that, if the corporation so employed a man, it would forfeit its charter. They could not employ an alien in any capacity whatever, and to that he objects as being too broad. Now, in this case, under the provisions of the amendment I have offered here, that objection does not hold. Any foreigner can come into this State, whether he desires to stay one day or one year; and if he desires to do a particular piece of work, or desires to continue laboring here, it is not necessary for him to say that he desires to become a citizen, or to declare his intentions of becoming a citizen, but all he has to do is merely to go before a Court and ask for a certificate as a matter of right. He receives it, and he can then go on at any kind of labor without fear of molestation. But if any of these companies do employ any individuals not possessed of these certificates, they shall be punished as the Legislature may prescribe. If the Legislature in its wisdom should see fit to declare a forfeiture of charter the penalty for a violation of this provision, they can do so. The matter rests with the Legislature entirely.

Now, I have provided that "prosecutions shall be maintained against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense." Of course, if a Chinaman should go before a Court in this State, as the law stands to-day, he could not receive a certificate of this character. It would not hinder him from carrying on business on his own account, but he could not be employed by any corporation in this State. He would be subject to punishment by fine and imprisonment, and the corporation employing him would also be subject to fine and imprisonment. As the section is drafted, it says these certificates shall be granted on application to any person who is eligible to become a citizen under the laws of this State. Not under the laws of the United States, but under the laws of this State. It has been held by the Supreme Court of the United States that the matter of exercising the right of suffrage was a matter absolutely and exclusively within the supervision of the State, and that the State had a right to decide, had the right to say who should vote at its elections. And we can say that Chinese cannot vote in this State, and therefore I have used the word State.

It seems to me that the section will cover everything that can be covered. As the Chairman of the committee said—there is one way to get rid of the Chinese, and that is to starve them. There is a limit, even to their powers of subsisting, because they even cannot live upon nothing; and if they cannot get any employment in this State—if we prevent them from laboring—it will prevent others from coming, and the result will be that those who are here will be reduced to starvation, and will be glad to go, and those who desire to come will be discouraged from coming.

And again, as stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, if we adopt this system of starvation, if we give them nothing to do, if we pay them no money, we finally reduce them to paupers, and when they are reduced to the condition of paupers, we have the right to transport them and send them out of the country. I am in favor of adopting strict measures. We have to do it. If we adopt all these measures, and the Courts declare them unconstitutional, we are no worse off than we are now. It is expected of this Convention that we act decidedly in these matters, and that this great question be not ignored. I am very sorry to see the gentlemen upon this floor who should be expressing their opinions, whether for or against the legality or constitutionality, remaining silent. I hope the silence will be broken, and that the representative men upon this floor from different portions of the State will speak out upon this subject, or it will be a damage to the State of California, a damage to the interests of the State, a damage to the people of the State. Congress, at Washington, will point their fingers this way and say the great lawyers in the Convention, when the Chinese question was up for discussion, were silent. The great men who had seats in the Convention were silent upon the subject, and that shows that the people of the State of California care nothing about it. The Chinese representatives in the City of Washington will say, now you see who has been speaking upon this subject. It was only the Workingmen's delegates—the lower strata of society, not the solid, representative men. I would like to hear the solid men come out solidly upon this subject. It is due to the people of this State that they should come out and state their views on the subject. If we are wrong; if we are going too far; if we are overstepping our powers, let us know it. Now, every individual, whether he vote for or against the proposition, is indirectly responsible for every proposition that is adopted here. And if we adopt a lot of ridiculous stuff, the ridicule falls upon the head of every individual; it does not merely fall upon the head of those who introduced the propositions. I would like to see this matter thoroughly discussed, because a discussion of the subject would aid and assist in solving the question, and the record of our proceedings will go on to Washington and show that we are thoroughly in earnest in this matter and mean business.

MR. O'DONNELL. One word will correct this section, I think, and make it perfect. I wish to amend it by inserting after the word "employ" the word "Chinese;" and strike out all after the word "whatever," so that the section will read: "Any corporation, incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises, and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs Chinese in any capacity whatever."

THE CHAIRMAN. There are two amendments pending already, and the amendment is not in order.

MR. O'DONNELL. I wish to read the section again, as amended—(to a member interrupting)—shut your mouth, will you?

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Burt.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, which the Secretary will read.

MR. O'DONNELL. I offer my amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In the third line, after the word 'employ,' add the word 'Chinese,' and strike out all after the word 'whatever,' so that the section will read: 'Any corporation, incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises, and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs Chinese in any capacity whatever.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Dr. O'Donnell.

Division being called for, the amendment was rejected—ayes, 31; noes 44.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: That last vote was not fair, sir.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the substitute of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. All persons of foreign birth, before engaging in any manner of employment on their own account, or for others, within this State, shall first procure a certificate of authority; such certificate shall be issued to any applicant of a race eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State, without cost, by any Court of record of the State. No person of foreign birth shall engage, or continue in any manner of employment in this State, unless possessed of such certificate; nor shall any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, directly or indirectly, employ any person of foreign birth within this State, unless such person possess such certificate. The Legislature shall provide for punishment of violations of this section. Prosecutions shall be maintainable against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense."

MR. SHOEMAKER. I wish to offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature shall, and it is hereby made the imperative duty of the Legislative Department of the Government of the State of California, to enact such laws as shall prevent any alien who is a subject of the Emperor of China, from being employed within this State by any corporation incorporated or doing business under the laws of this State."

SPEECH OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I had thought, perhaps, that in this discussion I should have nothing to say, however deeply I feel its importance. And yet, sir, this substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, presents an idea to me that I am not justified in allowing to pass unnoticed. For years, sir, I have viewed with deep solicitude this Chinese question, and I have been to a certain extent conspicuous in my opposition. Since I can remember, almost, I have heard repeatedly from both sides of the political field; I have heard politicians on the stump declare their allegiance to the people, and their opposition to the Chinese, indicating that if that or this particular party succeeded, some relief would surely come to the people from this blighting curse. I have heard our own candidate for legislative position make pledges and promises, but I felt in my heart that nothing would be accomplished. Repeated failures to grant the people any relief has been one of the prime causes of the calling of this Convention. They came to believe that real reformatory measures could only be obtained through and by constitutional enactment. And, sir, feeling a great interest in this subject, I have looked into it and attempted to investigate it, and I have almost come to the conviction that even in the capacity of a constitutional body, we will fall far short of giving to the people the relief which they ask at our hands, and which they anticipate. We find that we are hedged about, even in a constitutional capacity, by the principles of a Federal Constitution on all sides. I refer to this matter as touched upon by the gentleman from Los Angeles. We are hedged about, sir, by the decision of the Supreme Court, as laid down in the twentieth California. We find also in the Federal Constitution (touching this proposed sixth section of the report of the committee) in the fourteenth article it declares that no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law. It does not restrict it to any citizen, but to any person within its jurisdiction.

Now, sir, reverting to the Burlingame treaty, we find this again, where the Chinese are made equal in this country before the law with citizens of the most favored nations. All these conditions and difficulties confront us, even in a constitutional capacity, and render this subject full of difficulties and complications. Some remedy is demanded; some relief is prayed for. We have seen this curse growing upon us, we have seen the Chinese gradually spreading over the various portions of the State, crowding out the white population, until it requires no prophetic vision to see that it is only a question of time when we must go to the wall. In view of the difficulties which surround us; in view of the insidious character of the race; in view of the Federal Constitution and the treaties made under it, we may not be able to accomplish all we hope to accomplish, or all that the people demand. But it behooves us to take every measure compatible with the laws of the country, and the treaties of the country—every measure compatible with common sense and justice, to restrict this immigration, however extreme and radical they may seem.

Now, sir, under the general powers of the State, under the right of the State to regulate its own internal affairs, and under the police power of the State, I believe the provisions contained in the substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, can be made effective. It will at least have the effect, if not to send them back to China, to send them into some other States; and I wish, if we cannot awaken them in any other way, we could transfer the whole Chinese population over to some of the Eastern States, that the people there might be brought to realize the condition of the people of California. I believe that is the only way the people of the Eastern States can be educated out of their sentimentalism. They look upon us as crazy on this subject, as hardly knowing what we do want. In the debates before Congress, it has been asserted that the people here do not know what they want. That the opposition to the Chinese comes from the inferior classes, and not the opinion of the intelligent classes. The first idea is false, as indicated by the legislation which has been enacted. The people are almost, if not quite, unanimous in their opposition to Chinese immigration, and there is no gentleman on this floor who will deny it. But the question here, to-day, is not as to whether Chinese immigration is an evil; the question is, what can we do? How far can we go? What measures can we propose? The idea of this last proposition is, that we require all foreigners—making no distinction—to procure these certificates, in order to entitle them to engage in business, provided they are eligible to become citizens of the State. That would be refusing the certificates to the Chinese, and he becomes disabled from gaining employment; and the consequence will be that he will find his way into Arizona, or Nevada, or Oregon, or Washington Territory, and from there work his way East. They will be compelled to emigrate to some other part of the country, to some other part of the United States, and by that means, those skeptical people will be brought to realize the benefits of having a Chinese population in their midst, so that they may educate, convert, and Christianize them to their heart's content. I know it has been claimed in the East that we ought to thank God that it has fallen to our lot to have these heathen people cast among us, in order to Christianize and convert them to the true religion; yet I doubt very much if there has ever been an absolute Chinese conversion in the world. They believe in the doctrines of Confucius as firmly as we believe in our religion, and it is just as absurd to believe that one of these can be converted to Christianity as to believe that one of us should be converted to the religion of Confucius.

But, sir, as to this proposition before the Convention, I rose to ask the particular attention of the members to this proposed amendment, offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher; and if they believe that it will prove to any extent a panacea for the Chinese evil, I ask them to give it their sanction. I believe, in fact I know, that we are here to do all we can on this subject. I only want to know what to do, and I will do it. If there is any good in any of these propositions, let us adopt them. I would suggest that in line four, after the word "race," he insert the words "none other," so as to make it conclusive.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I have inserted them; it reads that way now.

MR. FILCHER. Then I believe it is a good proposition, and will help to mitigate the evil, and hope it will be adopted.

SPEECH OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me to be a good idea for members to express their opinions upon this subject. As far as the mere question of power is concerned, it seems to me that the second section is not obnoxious—not open to criticism. It reads:

"SEC. 2. Any corporation incorporated under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchise and all legal rights thereunder, if it employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

I argue that it is within our power, because it applies only to corporations. Under our present Constitution the Legislature has the right to alter or repeal their charters. It is a part of the contract with every corporation created under the laws of this State. That reserve power exists in the Legislature, and in framing our new Constitution we can put in a similar provision, if it is necessary. As far as the question of power is concerned, it occurs to me that this section is not open to criticism. What is a corporation? It is an artificial entity. It derives its powers from the State, and is created by and under the laws of the State. We have an express decision of the Supreme Court of this State, in the eighteenth of Wallace: "They are not citizens of the State merely because they are created under the laws of the State, so far as the provision of the Constitution goes, which says citizens shall be entitled to all the privileges," etc. While they have this artificial entity, created entirely by the State, not having any powers derived from the Constitution of the United States; not having this power I have spoken of, having therefore an artificial character entirely, we have the right, not only as to the corporations already created, but as to those hereafter to be created, to place these restrictions upon them. So, as far as the mere question of power is concerned, there can be no question about it. But whether we should go the extreme of having corporations forfeit their franchises, is another question, as a penalty for the employment of Chinese in any capacity. I think it would be better to modify the section in that regard, so as not to go quite so far. For that reason I should favor the last amendment, leaving the power of providing penalties to the Legislature, in case of a violation of the provisions of the section.

There is no objection to using the word "Chinese" instead of "persons not eligible," etc. Now, there is something said about the treaty; and, although it has been a long time since I have read it, yet I think I know what it contains. The gentleman from Placer has referred to it, and I will read the sixth section:

"Citizens of the United States visiting or residing in China, shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation; and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States, shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation. But nothing herein contained shall be held to confer naturalization upon citizens of the United States in China, nor upon the subjects of China in the United States."

What is the provision here? It is in respect to travel and residence, that they shall enjoy the same privileges and immunities as the subjects of the most favored nations. They shall enjoy these privileges—in respect to what? In respect to travel and residence. Therefore, if we should attempt to say that they shall not lease houses, it would conflict with the treaty, because they have a right to reside here. And it might be argued, also, that they have a right to hold property. I am not so well satisfied about that, however. I am not sure whether the word "residence" can be construed to go so far as to confer upon them the right to hold property. It is restricted entirely to travel and residence in the State.

MR. HERRINGTON. Do you hold that the power of the government extends to the regulation of the residence of foreigners here?

MR. JOHNSON. No, sir. I am coming to that subject. I will answer the gentleman after awhile. I was about to say this: that there is no question but the power to regulate commerce exists exclusively in the United States. But there is another question that is not so clearly settled, and that is, when Congress has not passed upon the subject at all, whether the power rests exclusively in Congress, or whether it is concurrent. Now, even though the power to regulate commerce is in Congress exclusively, the passing of provisions excluding the Chinese from fishing, would in no manner interfere with commerce, therefore I think that section is not open to criticism. If Congress has passed no law in regard to fishing in the Bay of San Francisco, that power, according to the decision of the Supreme Court, is concurrent, and we have a right to pass local regulations.

I say the State has the power to control these corporations, but whether it would be policy to go to the extent of providing for a forfeiture of franchise, for simply employing Chinamen, is another question.

Now, in respect to the use of the word "Chinese," I cannot see any objection to it. There is nothing in the treaty to conflict, for the treaty is only in respect to residence and travel—exclusively residence and travel. There is another section here, to this effect:

"SEC. 3. No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

It is entirely within our power to pass a provision of this kind, because the State has a perfect right to employ whom she pleases, the same as an individual. The citizen has this right, and the State has the same right. This provision is that the State shall not employ certain classes. I think, therefore, that these two sections are as clearly within the powers of the State as section one. But sections four and five clearly come within the inhibition in regard to the regulation of commerce by the General Government. It seems to me it is foolish to put a provision in our Constitution which we can but know will be overturned, because the Supreme Court of the United States has decided such provisions to be unconstitutional, and that is the law of the land. The Constitution of the United States, and the laws of Congress, and the treaties made under it, are the supreme law, and we cannot evade it.

Now it does seem to me that there would be some good accomplished by adopting these three sections, and preparing a section in relation to fisheries. I think a great deal of good can thus be accomplished. Now, one word in relation to the amendment introduced by the gentleman, which goes, not only to corporations, but to individuals, and I am not prepared to go to that length. I am willing to apply it to corporations, for that is within our power; but I am not willing to go to the length of forbidding individuals from making contracts and employing whom they please. I think——

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

RECESS.

MR. VAN DYKE. I move the Convention do now take a recess until seven o'clock P. M.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move to adjourn.

Division was called on the latter motion, and the vote stood: ayes, 51; noes, 51.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair votes in the negative, and the motion is lost. [Applause.] The question is on the motion to take a recess.

Division was called for, and the motion prevailed by a vote of—ayes, 56; noes, 45.

And at five o'clock P. M. the Convention took a recess until seven o'clock P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

At seven o'clock P. M., in the absence of the President and President pro tem., the Secretary called the Convention to order.

MR. STEDMAN nominated for temporary Chairman Mr. Huestis, who was elected and took the chair.

THE CHAIR. The Convention will come to order.

[Cries of "Call the roll!"]

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order. Rule Three says "not less than seventy-seven members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business." My point of order is that there are not seventy-seven members present, and I now call for the calling of the roll.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will call the roll.

MR. INMAN. It is supposed that there is a quorum present. There will, undoubtedly, be a quorum here.

[Cries of "Call the roll!"]

THE CHAIR. It having been demanded, in regular order, the Secretary will call the roll.

MR. WATERS. I ask leave of absence for Mr. Boggs for the evening. He is sick.

THE CHAIR. There being no objection leave is granted.

The roll was called, and seventy-six members answered to their names.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I ask leave of absence for Mr. O'Sullivan, on account of sickness. Also leave of absence for Mr. Barnes. He is engaged this evening to deliver a lecture before a society in the city, and cannot be here.

THE CHAIR. There being no objection leave is granted.

MR. WATERS. I also ask leave of absence for Mr. Holmes, who is absent on official duty.

THE CHAIR. So ordered. Seventy-six members have answered. The rule requires seventy-seven members.

MR. STEDMAN. There is no quorum. Rule Three requires seventy-seven, and it has never been changed.

MR. VACQUEREL. I rise to a point of order. When the rule was made there was one hundred and fifty-two delegates. One is in Stockton, and two are dead, and a quorum consists now of seventy-five members. That is my point of order.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is well taken.

MR. STEDMAN. I merely call attention to the rule as it now stands. It says seventy-seven members constitute a quorum.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is under the impression that a question of this kind must necessarily change the rule.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. TINNIN. I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Huestis in the chair, for the purpose of resuming the consideration of the report of the Committee on Chinese.

MR. ROLFE. I rise to a point of order——

MR. STEDMAN. I desire to ask the Chair, under Rule Fifty-four, to instruct the Committee on Legislative Department, which proposes to meet to-night, as soon as we get into the Committee of the Whole, that under that rule they cannot meet while this committee is in session. There are a number of gentlemen——

MR. McCALLUM. I call for the question.

[Cries of "question."]

The motion to go into Committee of the Whole prevailed.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President, or Mr. Chairman: I desire to call the attention of the Committee of the Whole to a change that has been made in the printed copy of the amendment that I introduced this afternoon. There seems to have been a number of objections raised to the section, as it might require persons who had been naturalized and were citizens of the United States, and of the State, to take out the papers that are contemplated by the section. In line one of the section the words "persons of foreign birth," have been stricken out and the word "aliens" substituted. In line five the words "persons of foreign birth," have also been stricken out and the word "aliens" substituted, so that the section now reads: "All aliens, before engaging in any manner of employment, on their own account or for others, within this State, shall first procure a certificate of authority; such certificate shall be issued to any applicant of a race eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State, without cost, by any Court of record of the State. No alien shall engage or continue in any manner of employment in this State unless possessed of such certificate; nor shall any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, directly or indirectly, employ any alien within this State, unless such person possesses such certificate. The Legislature shall provide for punishment of violation of this section. Prosecutions shall be maintainable against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense." Now——

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order. There is not a quorum present. Rule Fifty-six prescribes that the rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole.

THE CHAIRMAN. Mr. Beerstecher has the floor.

MR. LARKIN. The gentleman is stating his point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. Does Mr. Beerstecher yield the floor?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I do not yield the floor.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. Unless the gentleman will yield the floor you cannot make your point of order. There cannot be two persons——

MR. STEDMAN. I understand that a point of order can be made at any time.

THE CHAIRMAN. A point of order cannot be made without first obtaining the floor.

MR. STEDMAN. A point of order is always made when some one is on the floor. The point of order is against the member——

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman to raise his point of order.

MR. STEDMAN. My point of order is that we are proceeding to business without a quorum. Seventy-seven members constitute a quorum, either in Convention or in Committee of the Whole, and since the roll was called several members have left. Originally we had seventy-six members when we went into Committee of the Whole——

MR. SHOEMAKER. His point of order should be taken——

MR. STEDMAN. The rules of the Convention——

MR. TINNIN. I hope the Chair will enforce order——

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentlemen will please preserve order. The gentleman from San Francisco raises the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair recognized the point of order, and it will be in order to ascertain whether there is a quorum present by moving a call of the roll, or a motion that the committee rise.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I rise to a point of order. There cannot be a motion made for the committee to rise while a member occupies the floor. And furthermore, when we went into Committee of the Whole, sir, there was a quorum present, and there is no official knowledge now but what that quorum is present, and a vote cannot be taken upon the subject until I yield the floor.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken. The Sergeant-at-Arms will preserve order.

MR. STEDMAN. The Chair recognized me——

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognized you to make a point of order.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: As I was stating, the objection to the section as introduced, which objection was privately stated to me by a number of delegates, was that the original section would compel persons who had become naturalized under the laws of the United States, persons who were citizens of the State—no matter whether they were citizens one day, or whether they were citizens twenty-five years, if residents of this State, but being persons of foreign birth—to procure these certificates contemplated in the section. The section now has been altered and so changed that it will not require any but aliens to make this application, and when a person has become a citizen of the United States, and a citizen of the State of California, it will not be necessary for them to go before a Court and get this certificate of authority to prosecute business in the State; and, therefore, the objection that has been urged against the section has been removed. Now, as regards this section, it is immaterial to me whether this particular section or whether a section of like import be adopted, but the section, in reality, goes much farther than section two, as reported by the committee. Section two, as reported by the committee, has exclusive reference to corporations, and to corporations alone. It says:

"Any corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

MR. INMAN. Do you propose to prohibit an individual from employing Chinamen?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes.

MR. INMAN. I want to understand it, because I am opposed to that.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I am in favor of absolutely and unequivocally cutting off the power and privileges of any Mongolian of getting any character of employment in the State whatever. That is the only way that we can rid ourselves of the nuisance. I do not believe myself that we have the power to meet the Chinese at the threshold and prevent them from entering our State. I believe that they can come here. I believe that the power delegated to Congress to regulate commerce will land them in this State, and that the laws of Congress, and the powers delegated to Congress by the States, will protect them until they are landed, but the moment that they are upon the soil of California, the moment that they commingle and intermix with the people of this State, the moment that they become residents within the border of the State, that moment the power and the protection of the United States ceases. The powers vested in Congress, giving it power over commerce, foreign and between States, ceases when the Chinaman comes here and becomes a resident, and commingles with the people and engages in business in this State. The moment that national power ceases, the power of the State attaches, under the police regulations, and we can regulate their residence here. We can regulate their transaction of business here, under that police power which resides in the State, which is always reserved by the State, and which has never been given to the General Government, and never has been stolen by the General Government, as other powers have by the General Government. And I believe that if we have the right to regulate their employment by corporations, we have the right to regulate their employment by copartnerships, and by companies, and by individuals. At all events, I believe in drawing the section just as strong as it is possible to draw it. If this section went before the Courts, and an individual should say that his rights as a citizen of the United States, or of the State of California, had been infringed upon, because he is not allowed to employ whomsoever he pleases, then the Court will simply say that this provision of the Constitution is unconstitutional, as far as the Constitution of the United States is concerned. The Courts will simply say the section is a good and valid section, it has force and vigor in law, with the exception of what relates to preventing private individuals from employing Chinamen. They might say that it might be invalid, as relates to private companies employing Chinamen, but the section will be good as to everything else. Every Court is bound to give effect to every law just as far as it can give effect to the law, and a law is never totally wiped out if it can be preserved. But it might only be wiped out so far as it endeavors to regulate the employment of Mongolians by private individuals. If we desire to draw provisions here in relation to the Chinese that are, beyond all doubt, beyond all possibility of a doubt, constitutional, then we had better not commence to draw them at all, because all of these inhibitions, perhaps, will rest under a doubt as to their constitutionality. And in such cases it will be necessary to take them before the Courts and to test them, and that is exactly what we are after. We desire to have them tested, and we desire to make a test case and ascertain what rights we have in the premises. If this section is to furnish a test case, well and good. If any other section is to furnish a test case, well and good. The Court will not wipe out the section because it goes too far, and as to other provisions the section will stand.

I hope that this section will be adopted instead of section two, because it not only prohibits corporations, but goes way beyond corporations and embraces much more, and at the same time embraces corporations by its terms.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: As a member of the Committee on Chinese, I have considered the propositions that are submitted by that committee, and I do not wish to devote my time this evening to a lengthy speech, but simply to give my views on the proposition. I shall support the first section as reported by that committee to this Convention. I believe in that first section there are rights, and there will be powers conferred on the Legislature——

MR. BEERSTECHER. I will state that the first section has gone over until to-morrow.

MR. LARKIN. I shall support the second section, unless something better is offered than has been already. I cannot support the proposition of Mr. Beerstecher. It goes farther than I propose to go in this matter. I propose to go as far as I believe is consistent; as far as the people of this State demand; as far as the Courts will sustain us in this matter. I do not propose, by any vote of mine upon this question, to load this Constitution so that it shall be objectionable to the better portion of the people of this State that desire to rid themselves of this nuisance. When we apply the provision to corporations, it occupies an entirely different position from what it would applied to private individuals. Under this Constitution and under the laws we have power to regulate corporations; we have power to wipe the last one of them from the State, and require business to be conducted by copartners; we have that right both in the Constitution and in the laws. We have the right to say that they shall not employ Chinese coolies; that the public good demands that the preference be given to persons eligible to become citizens of the United States. I do not propose to enter into the constitutional right that the State has in her Constitution to say that a citizen of the United States shall not engage in any business and employ who he pleases. I believe the Constitution of the United States would declare that a provision of that kind in our Constitution would be null and void. I believe that any citizen in the United States has a right to engage in any business, whether the Constitution of the United States was a check upon that power or not. That right, I believe, belongs to an American citizen; and I do not believe that your Constitution should be attempted to infringe upon it. If we place in this Constitution provisions that the Supreme Court will not sustain, just so far we weaken our position before the people of the world. Let us put nothing in there but what the Supreme Court will sustain. Then we have taken a step forward to accomplish the purpose which we design. To go farther than that shows weakness, a wild, rabid desire to do something, without any definite reason for what we are going to do, or without caring for the result of our acts.

Section three is again a clear proposition. In the Constitution of this State we would certainly have the power to-day that "no alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution." We have the right, I believe, to place that article in the Constitution. I believe it should be placed there. That and the provision before is all I am going to vote for in this Convention. That is as far as I will go on this question. I believe that is as far as the people of this State will sustain us in going, and anything farther than that will load the Constitution before the people of this State, which I do not propose to do.

Section five is the most extreme section offered in this report. "No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution." That covers the question of settlement in this State to any person ineligible to become a citizen of the United States. That section has a precedent in this Convention of Illinois that existed up to some fifteen years, when the Fifteenth Amendment was adopted, prohibiting mulattoes and negroes settling in that State. The State of Indiana prohibited negroes and imposed a fine upon them, which was used for the purpose of taking those from the State that were found in the State. That provision in the Constitution had been sustained by the Supreme Court as applicable to the negroes, and it certainly would sustain it as applicable to persons ineligible to become citizens of the United States. These provisions, sections one, three, and five, are all of this report I desire to support, and as far as I believe we should go. Powers enough will be conceded to the Legislature in these provisions, and I believe will determine the question. I desire to see us clearly and squarely stand upon these provisions that I think will be effective, and that the people of the State will ratify in the Constitution.

MR. STEDMAN. There not being a quorum present, I move that the committee now rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again. There are less than sixty members present.

MR. TINNIN. I hope that this motion will be voted down.

MR. STEDMAN. It is not debatable.

MR. CONDON. I move you, sir, that that motion be laid on the table.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman——

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair will put the original motion.

The question was put, and the vote stood: ayes, 15; noes, 48.

THE CHAIRMAN. The noes have it.

MR. STEDMAN. I would like the announcement of the vote.

MR. WELLIN. I ask——

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is lost.

MR. STEDMAN. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

MR. WATERS. I move that the gentleman have indefinite leave of absence.

MR. STEDMAN. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

MR. WELLIN. The decision of the Chair cannot be appealed from on a question of the vote of the house. The gentleman is entirely out of order. I don't know what is the matter of him to-night. I move that he be granted one year's leave of absence.

MR. STEDMAN. I want to say something more. There are two committees in session; one in room fifty-three, and one in the Senate Chamber, which is contrary to the rules of this house.

MR. TINNIN. I move that the gentleman be appointed a committee of one to bring in those members.

MR. WATERS. I rise for information. There has just been a question raised, and I would like to know whether there is a quorum present or not. I think I am entitled to the information.

THE CHAIRMAN. There are sixty-four members, according to the count.

MR. WATERS. Now, Mr. Chairman——

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair rules that there is a quorum present.

MR. WATERS. I do not think that this house should proceed if there is not a quorum present. If there is a quorum present, all well and good.

MR. HOWARD. There is nothing before the committee. I raise that point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken.

MR. WATERS. I will proceed in order, if the Chair will permit.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not speaking to anything before the committee.

MR. WATERS. I would like to read section one thousand nine hundred and ninety-five——

MR. HOWARD. I rise to a question of order. We are not here to listen to the reading of the Pentateuch.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair has decided that the point of order is well taken. But the gentleman asks leave. With the permission of the house——

[Cries of "Read," "read."]

MR. TINNIN. What does he want to read?

MR. WATERS. Section one thousand nine hundred and ninety-five of Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies reads as follows:

"A committee of the whole house, consisting of all the members. The rule as to the number necessary to be present, in order to make a house, has been extended to committees of the whole. If, therefore, it should appear, at any time, that the number present is less than a quorum—to be ascertained in the same manner as in the house; that is, in the Commons, forty, and in the Lords, three—the Chairman must immediately leave the chair of the committee, and the Speaker resume that of the house. The Chairman, then, by way of report—for he can make no other—informs the Speaker of the cause of the dissolution of the committee. When the Speaker is thus informed of the want of a quorum in the committee, he immediately proceeds, in the same manner, to determine whether there is a quorum then present in the house. If the" ——

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair calls the gentleman to order. The Chair has decided that there is a quorum present.

MR. WATERS. I understood that I had leave to speak.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Beerstecher. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"All aliens, before engaging in any manner of employment on their own account, or for others, within this State, shall first procure a certificate of authority. Such certificate shall be issued to any applicant of a race eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State, without cost, by any Court of record of the State. No person of foreign birth shall engage or continue in any manner of employment in this State, unless possessed of such certificate; nor shall any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, directly or indirectly, employ any alien within this State, unless such person possess such certificate. The Legislature shall provide for punishment of violations of this section. Prosecutions shall be maintainable against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense."

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I think it would be unadvisable to take a vote on any of these amendments when the house is so thin, even if there is a quorum. In the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, I see in line four, where he applies this rule of granting certificates, that he refers to persons eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State. I do not know why he refers to the laws of the State instead of the laws of the United States, unless it be under the impression that we can exclude a person from being a citizen of this State, although he may be a citizen of the United States. All these other amendments proposed by the committee refer to persons who are ineligible to become citizens of the United States. This refers to persons ineligible to become citizens under the laws of the State. If he is under an impression that the State of California, or any other State, can exclude from citizenship of the State a citizen of the United States, I think that he is laboring under a wrong impression. As to that, I refer to the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which reads:

"SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of the citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person, within its jurisdiction, the equal protection of the law."

Now, when the Chinaman can become a citizen under the laws of the United States, why, certainly, he is eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State of California, because if the State of California should pass a law to the contrary it would be invalid. Another objection I have to this section is, that it would be a great inducement for every Chinaman in the State, of whom very few now want to become citizens, to become citizens of the United States for the purpose of availing themselves of the Fourteenth Amendment. Therefore, I think that much of the gentleman's amendment as refers to a citizenship under the laws of this State, is a nullity. I would like to see it otherwise. I wish we had the right here to exclude the Chinaman from citizenship under the laws of the State, but under the Constitution of the United States we certainly cannot.

MR. AYERS. Would it be in order to offer an amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN. Not at this present time.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: It might get the committee out of its snarl. It is well known that the principal objection to the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco is that it interferes with the right of American citizens to employ whom they see fit. My amendment I think would get around that objection. I would provide that every Chinaman residing in this State be required to take out a license authorizing him to procure employment of any kind in this State, and directing the Legislature to fix penalties for the violation of the section. Under that authority the Legislature could pass a law requiring that each Chinaman should take out a license before he could be employed.

MR. MILLER. Do you propose to require them to pay for these licenses?

MR. AYERS. Not in the Constitution. Let the Legislature fix that.

MR. MILLER. The Supreme Court has decided that all license taxes of that sort are unconstitutional. Our Supreme Court so decided in this State.

MR. AYERS. They decided the mining taxes unconstitutional, but they decided it under the old Constitution. There was no provision in the Constitution authorizing the tax. If we should here authorize that tax it would hold before the Supreme Court.

MR. MILLER. The case I refer to was tried in the Circuit Court in San Francisco two years ago.

MR. TINNIN. It was the case ——

MR. VAN DYKE. The case of the United States vs. Jackson.

MR. GRACE. If we submit anything to the people and they ratify it, and say it shall be the law, if this is a republican government, if we have a republican form of government, and the majority rule, I do not see why we should not say that they must get a license.

MR. BLACKMER. Suppose this State should see fit to vote in favor of seceding from the government?

MR. GRACE. The Constitution would provide against that. I hold that the Union is perpetual, but I hold that the sovereign States, and that each State has equal rights, and have the right to regulate their own local affairs. I do not acknowledge the right of secession and never did. But I hold that one State has as much right as another. No State is bound to put up with an institution that is opposed to the advancement and prosperity of the State.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment, offered by Mr. Shoemaker. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature shall, and it is hereby made the imperative duty of the Legislative Department of the Government of the State of California, to enact such laws as shall prevent any alien who is a subject of the Emperor of China, from being employed within this State by any corporation incorporated or doing business under the laws of this State."

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I do not accept that amendment to my section. I am opposed to it. I know it is an amendment to my section, and I am opposed to it, because it is a repetition. It goes on and repeats. I have already said in my section that no person, copartnership, or corporation shall employ any one unless they possess a license. Now, upon this it is desired to tack this addition—in effect a repetition. It says "by any corporation incorporated or doing business under the laws of this State." Therefore, a foreign corporation, incorporated by Nevada, or by the State of Nevada, could employ Chinamen. We do not want to give any foreign corporations doing business in this State the privilege of doing what our own corporations cannot do. It is a favoritism towards foreign corporations. In answer to the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, I would say, that the very object of making these permits or licenses gratis, that a man can get them free, and the Court must give them, would avoid the decisions in this State and the decisions of the Supreme Court, in relation to making men pay for these privileges.

MR. LARKIN. How about men in the County of San Bernardino, for instance, who live several hundred miles from the county seat? They cannot go there to get these permits.

MR. BEERSTECHER. They can get them from any Court of record in the State of California. He could get them in any town that he would pass through. I would say to the gentleman, if you are going to make it so very easy, if nobody is to be troubled in the matter of getting rid of the Chinese, if no person is going to sweat in this business, then we will never do anything.

MR. LARKIN. In those large counties it will be hard on persons who will have to go fifty or one hundred miles even to get a permit to work one day.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would state to the gentleman that undoubtedly a man would certainly, in his travels, come to some place where there is a Court of record, and he could get his certificate there. He could get it from the Clerk of the Court in any town that he would pass through. A man could get it in San Francisco, and it would be good for his lifetime, all over the State. The trouble is, if we are not going to put anybody to any inconvenience, not going to trouble anybody, we will never do anything. For my part I am willing to go before a Court every year and spend half a day for the next ten years, if I can rid the State from the curse of the Chinese nuisance. [Applause.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentlemen will preserve order.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I will introduce my amendment at the proper time for the purpose of bringing it under debate. The decision, so far as the license goes, was never before the Supreme Court of the United States. There is a line of decisions which have been sustained, and I think, on debate, by consulting the authorities, it will be found that we have the power. At the proper time I will introduce my amendment.

MR. INMAN. Mr. Chairman: I hope that these two amendments will be voted down. I, for one, am opposed to stripping any citizen of his rights. The gentleman seems to think it would be all right. Probably it would be all right for him in the City of San Francisco, but in the country to say that a man must not hire Chinese to help in harvest would not do. It certainly would be unconstitutional. The only thing is to restrict their coming here, if it is possible to do so, and I will go just as far as the gentleman to do that. That would only be done under the police and sanitary law. The gentleman, Mr. Grace, talks pretty good secession doctrine. I agree that what is good in one State is good in another, but I object to secession and nullification.

MR. GRACE. How do they do where they have no Chinamen? You don't want to go to the county seat to get a laborer to work for you. How do they do in other countries? How do they do where they have no Chinamen?

MR. INMAN. Two years ago the farmers began to harvest at two dollars a day; the men asked three dollars, they gave it; the men asked four dollars, they gave it; the men asked five dollars, and they would not pay it. They were compelled to hire Chinamen.

MR. GRACE. And you hired Chinamen?

MR. INMAN. No, sir, I did not; but I deny that any man has the right to say what kind of machinery I shall use, or what kind of help I shall employ. I employ any help that is available, if I am forced to do it.

MR. GRACE. I say that the Chinese must go, all of them, out of the country—black, white, old and young, Chinamen born, and native. I want to get rid of them. There is plenty of help. There is no trouble about getting help. I would help the gentleman through harvest myself, rather than that he should employ Chinamen. [Applause.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The Sergeant-at-Arms, at the next demonstration of that kind, will clear the galleries.

MR. INMAN. I do not employ any Chinamen on the farm. I am forced to do it in our house, because we cannot get any other help in the house. But I know other gentlemen who do employ Chinamen on their farms. They are compelled to employ this help or leave their farms uncultivated. No gentleman wants his capital to lie idle. If you stop their coming here that is sufficient, and we all agree upon that. But for the Legislature or any individual to say what kind of machinery you can use, or what kind of help you can hire, is certainly unconstitutional and uncalled for. I cannot see the good sense in putting anything in the Constitution that will be annulled.

Gentlemen talk about wages in this country being so low. I can remember, years ago, when I hired men for a dollar a day. I pay forty and forty-five dollars a month to-day. You cannot get a Chinaman for less than thirty dollars a month. There is no State in the Union pays so much wages. There is no State in the Union so prosperous. You talk about the people of this State suffering. You will find that if there is suffering it is on account of the whisky mills. Nineteen twentieths of these men are men who spend their earnings in the whisky shops. The whisky mills are ten times worse than the Chinamen. If you will put the whisky mills out of the country, I promise you I will not employ a Chinaman. My farm shall lie idle for ten years, and I will try and get along without it. I am opposed to the whole thing. I do not see any sense to it.

MR. GRACE. Are you opposed to saloons being allowed to sell whisky? Are you opposed to that?

MR. INMAN. I think so.

MR. GRACE. Then he has nullified the laws of the United States. The United States issues them licenses. That is nullification. It is nullifying the laws of the United States, and I am opposed to it.

SPEECH OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Mr. Chairman: There were no Chinese here in eighteen hundred and forty-nine—nothing but white people. I think it was in fifty-one or fifty-two that the first Chinaman came to this country. But they came; they went to work in our kitchens, and wherever they could get anything to do. They would work for five dollars a month until they learned the routine work, and then they would call for more wages. They have gradually insinuated themselves into almost every avenue of labor; they planted out orchards, and berries, and vegetables; they worked themselves into the mines and now you find them everywhere. I have heard men say they would not employ Irishmen because they are given to strikes. Well, you hire a Chinaman and pay him five dollars a week, and he will steal another five dollars. He will carry off your sugar, and coffee, little at a time, so that you cannot notice it. They are the worst set of people that ever disgraced the earth. You hire one of them in your kitchen, and you will find he has half a dozen cousins to support. That is my experience with them. They are no benefit to the country; they bring no business to the stores. They buy nothing here, and they are a disgrace to our State, and ought to be got rid of, and I am in favor of the report of the committee.

SPEECH OF MR. LINDOW.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. Chairman: There is only three points in this Convention that ought to be taken up and discussed and voted on.

[Cries of "Louder!" "louder!"]

If the gentleman can't hear well he better get up and go out. [Laughter.] The principal thing was the corporations, taxation, and Chinese. The cry was all over the country that the Chinaman was a nuisance. That is the cry all over the country. ["Louder!" "louder!"] I wish that man would go out of the hall. [Laughter.] Mr. President, it is well understood that the principal thing been here now is this provision that ought to be put in force on the Chinese. Even if it does not come within the boundary and limits of the United States Government, let them test the thing in the Supreme Court, and then let them decide if we are wrong or right. That is the way it ought to work. If we don't do something besides talk, we might as well let the Chinese question be. It is a growing evil over the whole United States, and a crying evil in the State of California. Now, as my friend Beerstecher makes remark, I would like to see these men rise up and give us their views, so as to find out who are for the Chinese and who are against it. We like to see them gentlemen stand up and discuss the whole law of the United States, and discuss the law of the State of California, so we know when we are right and when we are wrong. That gives us an idea. My friend Beerstecher raised them up—woke them up on this side of the house. One gentleman said he employed Chinamen. I could not blame him; he only looked to his own interest. He don't look for the generation that is coming.

So long as I live here my few years I can get along without troubling me about the Chinese. But I am looking for the stock that I am raising. They hire out for a dollar a day, and they say we can live for a dollar a day, and we have no right to have any children. That is what they say. That is what's against us. They can't deny it. They done it. Of course money does it all. That's where it comes in. If the poor man had as much money as the rich man, nobody would want to work. It is only for money we work, and if we cut wages down so he can only just keep his mouth open, he might as well go back. We ought to give him a chance and respect him, and he will respect his employer. But as you cut wages down he don't respect him any more, and he finds the Chinaman in his place. So he sees right away that he is below the Chinaman; and there is gentlemen here who tells us that Chinamen is better than white men. I tell them the people don't think so. The Chinaman suits some people better than white men. Why? Because they can use him to cook and do chamber work, when another man would not do it. If he goes to a house he don't want to do chamber work. And that is where the whole question comes in. We want to get rid of this curse. We want the Chinaman away, and give a man a fair day's pay for a fair day's work, and then we won't have any tramps. If a man comes around and wants a job, the farmer, says he, "I have a lot of Chinamen;" and the man, says he, "I cannot starve, I will work for the same wages." "Well," says he, "you eat too much. You eat too much." He cannot get work for his grub; he cannot get work because he eats too much. Now, I can't see why the whole learned gentlemen are opposed to this concern, when the cry is all over the State that the people want to get rid of these Chinamen. I would not stand up here if I didn't feel it. We want to put something in the United States Courts to test it; and if they want the Chinamen, they can have them all. We want to do it peaceably if we can, or the worst will come. That is where it is. But here we are assembled to make a Constitution, and we ought to try peaceably, and the worst can come afterwards, if we can't do any better. If we go a little beyond, don't mind it. Let the United States test it, and then we will see how the United States stands. That is how it is.

SPEECH OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: It is seldom that I oppose measures introduced by my friend from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, for I have almost always found him right, and almost always working for the right. I find, however, in this provision, as presented by him, one object sought to be accomplished, and that is to prevent aliens who cannot become citizens of the United States from being employed. The means that are employed by this provision to accomplish this result is to compel those who may become citizens of the United States to take out certificates before they will be permitted to obtain employment, to which I object. I say the results contemplated can be reached more directly, and that is why I oppose it. The principle contained we all agree to. We do not desire that race to obtain employment here. But I do submit that the result can be more directly reached by getting directly at the persons themselves, without calling upon those who may have the right to be employed by us, without compelling them to take the trouble to obtain these certificates. Now I will read this section, as amended by the author:

"SEC. 2. All aliens, before engaging in any manner of employment, on their own account or for others, within this State, shall first procure a certificate of authority. Such certificate shall be issued to any applicant of a race, and none other, eligible to citizenship under the laws of the State, without cost, by any Court of record of the State. No alien shall engage or continue in any manner of employment in this State unless possessed of such certificate. Nor shall any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, directly or indirectly, employ any alien within this State, unless such person possess such certificate. The Legislature shall provide for punishment of violations of this section. Prosecutions shall be maintainable against both employers and employés. Each day's violation shall constitute a distinct offense."

Now it makes very little difference whether it is the law of this State, or the law of the United States. Now this first clause is what I object to. I say the distinction is so small that it is useless to put this extra trouble upon those who may be entitled to become citizens. For that reason, if for no other, I am opposed to this amendment, because it attempts to do indirectly what we might as well do directly.

MR. BEERSTECHER. With the gentleman's permission I would like to inquire whether he has got anything better to offer.

MR. HERRINGTON. I propose to offer some assistance in this matter if I can. I want to make it as acceptable as possible, as free from objections as possible, and as strong and effective as possible. So far as this first clause is concerned, it can be reached more directly. It can be reached directly by a proposition, to the effect that no person shall enter into any manner of employment who is not capable of becoming a citizen of the United States. It is not necessary to compel all foreigners to take out certificates, because we can as well do it directly.

The next clause: "The Legislature shall provide punishment for a violation of this section." It is just as well to have it apply directly to the persons who are prohibited from engaging in these vocations. I say if we have the power to make these provisions with reference to the procuring of licenses, we have the power to prevent these persons from engaging in these employments, who cannot obtain certificates. And if we have the power, let us proceed directly. We cannot deceive anybody as to the intention of a provision of this kind, and if it will stand the test in one case it will in another. Why compel these persons who are entitled to citizenship to go to the trouble of obtaining certificates, before they can be permitted to engage in these employments. Now I think I have made myself understood. It seems plain to my mind, and if I have not made myself understood, it is simply because there is no language to express it. If it is necessary I will repeat it again. I say that the distinction is so marked between the classes of persons that there is no need of this circumlocution. It will not make it any more binding, or any stronger, or any more legal. Let it operate directly upon those persons who may not become citizens of the United States. It is wrong to put this hardship upon those who are entitled to citizenship. It is unnecessary to bring them in at all. It is unnecessary to put them to the trouble. If we have the power to prevent the Chinese from obtaining employment indirectly, we have the power to do it directly. Anything we can do indirectly we can do directly. Let us put it in the Constitution in such a shape that we will know precisely what we are acting upon.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: As this is a matter of importance, upon which this Convention is nearly unanimous, feeling that something should be done, that the fullest powers of the State should be exercised, going to the very verge of our authority, and considering the fact that there is no quorum present, I move the committee now rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. TINNIN. I move to adjourn.

Carried.

And, at eight o'clock and fifty minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M.

SEVENTY-FIFTH DAY.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. VAN DYKE. I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITIONS—MECHANICS' LIENS.

MR. VAN DYKE presented the following petition, signed by a number of mechanics and others, citizens of California, asking that provision be made in the Constitution for a lien law:

To the President and members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned respectfully represent that the practical working of the present legislation, and decisions of Supreme Court based thereon, regarding the rights of mechanics, material-men, and laborers to a lien for their labor and material furnished, is such that those who in a measure depend upon such law for just protection fail in nearly all cases to obtain it, because of the inefficient working of said law.

Wherefore, we pray you to declare in our organic law the right of every mechanic, material-man, and laborer to a perfect lien on the thing whereon his labor has been expended, or for which his materials have been furnished.

Moreover, we would state that we would be satisfied with amendment number one hundred and sixty seven, introduced by Mr. Van Dyke, on October tenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and read and referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, as follows:

"SEC. —. Mechanics, material-men, artisans, and laborers of every class shall have a lien upon the property on which they have bestowed labor or furnished materials, for the value of such labor done and materials furnished, and the Legislature shall provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens."

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

SESSIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

MR. ROLFE presented the following petition from the members of the Bar of San Bernardino, which was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

To the honorable the Constitutional Convention of the State of California:

We, the undersigned members of the Bar of San Bernardino County, do on behalf of ourselves, and of the people of said county, respectfully but earnestly protest against any action of the Convention which will deprive Southern California of two sessions of the Supreme Court annually.

RESOLUTION—PUBLIC LANDS.

MR. WYATT. I move that the resolution which I presented yesterday morning be taken up.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, it will be taken up. The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, First—That we, the delegates of the people of the State of California, in Convention assembled, do most respectfully request our Senators and Representatives in Congress to use their influence to have passed a law reducing the price of the public lands in this State, within the limits of any railroad grants, to one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and to enable bona fide settlers upon said lands to homestead one hundred and sixty acres thereof—the lands belonging to the United States Government being the refuse or third rate lands, and mostly embraced within the foothills or mountains, and, in most instances, much subject to drought and scarcity of water, making it necessarily expensive to improve and utilize said lands.

Resolved, Second—That we respectfully request our Senators and Representatives to use their influence to have passed a law restoring to preëmption and homestead all the lands within the limits of forfeited railroad grants in this State, upon the same terms and conditions as before said grants were made.

Resolved, Third—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: The first resolution takes the double minimum from the price of the even sections within the limits of railroad grants where the railroads have been completed—where the conditions of the grants have been complied with. That is done because all the better class of land has been taken, either by homestead or preëmption, or purchase, within those limits, and there is nothing left except an inferior class of lands that are not worth the double minimum price, either as to purchase or taking eighty acres by homestead or preëmption.

The second resolution refers to all the lands included within the grants heretofore made which have been forfeited by reason of the non-construction of the roads; in that case all the even sections being subject to the double minimum, and the odd sections not being in the market at all. The effect of this would be to restore all the lands within these forfeited grants to the market at a certain price—that is to say, one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. All the lands which are surveyed certainly ought to be thrown open to homestead and preëmption by citizens of the United States. I believe it ought to be the policy of the government to make the lands as cheap as possible to the people, and not to increase the price, or make the quantity which a man may take less than one hundred and sixty acres. I think the resolutions are in accord with the popular sentiment of this State. I introduce them in compliance with very numerous petitions which I have received on the subject, and I hope they will be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolutions offered by the gentleman from Monterey, Mr. Wyatt.

Adopted.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, as amended.

SPEECH OF MR. OVERTON.

MR. OVERTON. Mr. Chairman: I did not intend to say anything upon this question now before the house, but from certain inquiries that have been made, certain allusions that have been made, by some of the gentlemen in their remarks, wanting to know why the lawyers on the floor had not participated in this debate—not that I thought the remarks had any reference to me whatever, because I don't claim to be one of the eminent lawyers whom this Convention would like to hear from in respect to this matter before the house; but two or three of the gentlemen found fault because the eminent lawyers on this floor have not expressed themselves either for or against the propositions introduced here. My reply is that there is but one side to take, looking at it in its legal aspect. Perhaps the reason that they have remained silent is that they know how utterly futile it would be to oppose the measures proposed to be inserted in the Constitution, consequently you have not heard from the legal gentlemen on this floor. Another reason is, sir, if they should get up here and attempt to enlighten the Convention upon this subject, as I should be glad to hear them do, one of the first things you would hear from the other side of the house would be that they were employed by some corporation; that they were interested in some scheme or other. These things have been hurled at the honorable gentlemen so often, when they have been trying to instruct this Convention, that they feel inclined to be heard less in the future. It is not very pleasant when a gentleman gets up here, when he feels that he is acting from conscientious motives, when he knows he is telling the truth, to have gentlemen get up and impugn his motives on this floor, and say that he is talking in the interest of corporations. I don't believe there is a single legal gentleman on this floor that has any other clients save the people of the State of California, or any other interests than the interests of the people of California. They are paid by the people; and their object is to make a Constitution that will be acceptable to the people of the State, and one that will be an honor to their own names when they die. And, sir, I believe—or at least I fear—that there are some of these legal gentlemen occupying places on this floor, if the various propositions which are presented here, and this report, particularly, if they should be incorporated into the Constitution of this State, that they would debate seriously in their own minds whether this Constitution will receive their support. I do not believe, sir, that men are going to be so far forgetful of their duty or their interests, and their desire for the right, as to support the measures which are attempted to be incorporated into this Constitution. They know that we have no right—that the State has no right, notwithstanding what has been said here—to incorporate such provisions as these into the organic law. Every legal mind, as well as every ordinary mind, knows that this Convention has no right to set at defiance a solemn treaty, made by the powers of this government with any other foreign government. Gentlemen reason, and say we can under the police regulation. They can't do it under any regulation, police or otherwise, if it contravenes a treaty made by the Congress of the United States, and there is no use of talking about it.

Now, gentlemen say this section means nothing, and is harmless. They can support it, but don't want to, because it means nothing. Now, Mr. President, it means considerable. It is enough in itself. I will read the first section, and you will see, by a careful reading, that it means a good deal:

"SECTION 1. The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens who are or may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

Now, our people are doing business in China to-day by virtue of this treaty made between their government and our government. We went there and asked them to make it; they did not ask us. England went there, and we went there and asked to be permitted to trade with them; to have a commercial treaty, and open up commercial relations—and some of the authorities of Europe were willing to go to war for the purpose of compelling them to make a treaty. We made a treaty, and we are availing ourselves to-day of the privileges and benefits of that treaty. Prior to the making of that treaty the United States were at a great disadvantage, because Germany at one time was about the only country that traded there. England and the United States also wanted to have this treaty; and I may as well remark, right here, that when that treaty was consummated San Francisco thought she had struck a great bonanza, and that it would make San Francisco one of the largest cities in the world. Now, after we made this treaty, we found that it did not work just exactly as we had anticipated, and now we want to do away with it. Gentlemen ought to have learned before now that it takes the same contracting power to do away with an agreement that it does to make it, and we cannot do away with that treaty here in any such way as this. Any lawyer knows we cannot do it; any thinking man ought to know we cannot do it. The contracting parties themselves are the ones that can do away with it. Now, that treaty has been read over to you by my colleague and others, and they say it only provides that the Chinese may come here for the purpose of residence and travel. If they are permitted to reside in this State, and to travel in this State, what are you going to say about this provision that Chinamen are prohibited from renting property? I would ask any gentleman when they are permitted by the terms of this treaty to come to this State and live, if it does not follow, naturally and logically, that they are entitled to live in a house—entitled to rent property. Would it not be an open violation of the treaty, when that treaty permits them to come to this country to reside, to deny to them the right to rent a house to live in? It follows naturally. Consequently, I say it is a direct violation of the solemn treaty made between the Government of the United States and the Empire of China, and I claim and assert that this body has no right to infringe upon that treaty.

Then, again, it reaches a class of persons that we should feel no antipathy against. What have they done to us? I would ask any gentleman here, if he would not better his condition if he could? Do we not all desire to make more money? Is it not human nature to better our condition whenever we can? I ask any gentleman, if there should be placer diggings discovered that would pay one hundred dollars a day, if there are not thousands who would flock to the scene of discovery in the hope of bettering their condition? And at this particular time China is stricken with famine. There are millions dying of starvation. Is it not human nature for these men to go away from that country, when they are dying off every day of starvation, into a country where they can better their condition? Are these poor creatures to be blamed for it? I think not. I don't think there ought to be any feelings of hostility against these Chinamen. And I, as an individual, while I greatly regret that they are here in the numbers they are, have no antipathy to them. I do sometimes feel a little bit hostile toward the party that has prevented us from modifying the provisions of the treaty which exists between this country and China, so that we might stop this influx of Chinamen. It is toward those men I cherish feelings of hostility, if I have any at all, and not against the Chinese who come to this country, as I would go to China, to better their condition.

Gentlemen must not forget the fact that this country has been several years filling up with Chinamen. It has taken a great many ships to bring them here. They have been coming and coming for the past twenty years. We cannot expect to relieve ourselves of them in a day, nor in a week. It took several ships to bring them, and it will take a great many ships to take them back again. We cannot relieve ourselves of an evil of twenty years growth in a day. It will take some time. As far as I am concerned, I hope we can find some partial remedy at least. But I don't think we can do it unless we act rationally; unless we go at this thing in a legal way. We cannot do it by any such resolutions as it is proposed to insert here. They would be declared unconstitutional the first time they come before the higher Courts. Gentlemen have inserted in this report a clause that they shall not be employed by corporations; that they shall not do thus and so; that they shall not engage in business without a license, and then provide further that they shall not have a license. Now, suppose you do this; suppose you incorporate this provision in the Constitution, and suppose the Constitution is adopted by the people, and becomes the law of the land. What are you going to do with these sixty thousand Chinamen, if they are all going to be excluded from work, until such time as they can get away? Are the people going to keep them? Are the people going to feed them, or are you going to run them into the sea? What do you propose to do with them?

MR. KLEINE. Let these Chinese companies that brought them here send them back.

MR. OVERTON. Yes, they will send them all back in a week—sixty thousand of them. You can't get rid of them in a day.

MR. KLEINE. There are one hundred and sixty thousand of them.

MR. OVERTON. That makes my argument all the stronger. You can't get rid of them in a month. Again, as some gentlemen have said, I have a right to my opinion, and I propose to vote as my judgment tells me is right, and I do not care what the people of the State may think. I am not a candidate for any office; I don't know that I shall ever hold an office again. If I could insert a clause prohibiting Chinese immigration, I would do it, but I know it cannot be done. I am going to vote as my reason dictates. I am not going to fall down to popular clamor for the sake of support. I am not going to do that, sir. I am going to act for myself, and I shall be responsible for my vote, and I want my constituents to see how I vote.

Now, sir, as I was going to say, I have an opinion on this section. I do not believe, notwithstanding other gentlemen differ with me, I do not believe that a clause in which we say the corporations shall not hire them is worth the paper it is written on. I don't believe it is worth the price of the ink used in writing it. I believe that Governor Stanford, or any other man controlling a corporation, will go on hiring them, and the Courts will sustain them. The Courts will say that you had no right to put such a prohibition in the Constitution, and your work will be set aside.

MR. TULLY. What principle of law does it violate, prohibiting corporations from employing Chinamen?

MR. OVERTON. Simply this: that the treaty says they shall come to this country to reside and travel, and be treated like the people of the most favored nations. Now, sir, the most favored nations, Englishmen, Irishmen, and Germans, can come to this country and hire out to whom they please. There is a discrimination in that regard between these people and the Chinese.

Now, I did not expect to make a speech. I wanted to make these few remarks so as to show how I stand. My vote shall be in keeping with my judgment, and I am perfectly willing for the people to see how I stand. I am not afraid to let them know. Now, sir, I agree with you as to the evils of Chinese immigration. I had taken that position long before I was called on to run for this office. I am not an office seeker. I have always opposed Chinese immigration, and I am as strongly opposed to it to-day as ever; but I want to get rid of these people in a legal way. I am not willing to go to such extremes as to make this State the laughing stock of the country. I pledged myself to adopt all lawful methods, and I am ready to do so. I stated then that I believed the only real, effective remedy would be to secure a modification of the treaty. One reason that this has not been done, is that for the last ten years the Republican party have had control of the two branches of Congress. I have never expected a great deal of aid from that party. Not that the Republicans in this State are not just as much in sympathy with us on this question, and just as deeply interested, but the great body of the party back East has not sympathized with us, and does not to-day.

The great body of that party believe in the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man theory, and they are in favor of the Chinese coming here, and will not give us the relief we need. I stated then, and I state it again now, that I believe that when the two houses of Congress get to be Democratic, then, and not till then, will we get relief. I believe the Democratic party are in sympathy with the people of this State on that question, and I have believed it for several years. I believe you gentlemen will see that we will get some relief from that quarter that will be of great use to us. If we cannot get it in that way we have no remedy. These resolutions will fall to the ground as nothing. We must not put ourselves in a hostile attitude towards the government, for if we do attempt to enforce these provisions we may plunge the country into a war with China. It could not be otherwise. We have a treaty with that country, and if our government is going to permit one individual State to set aside that treaty it is a cause for war, and war will be most apt to follow such an action on our part. We are not prepared, and the General Government is not going to permit us to violate a treaty in that way. The only way is to adopt the clause which I have suggested. I believe now, as we have, for the first time in years, both houses of Congress Democratic, I believe we can expect some aid from that source. I want to get rid of these Chinese as bad as any Workingman, or any other man. I see the evil effects. It corrupts our morals, degrades labor, and injures the business of the State; for, as I have often said, any man, I don't care who he is, may go to work and hire Chinamen because he gets them for less money, but he loses money by the operation. Every dollar paid to them is gone from us. We don't get any of it back, as we do when we pay it to white men. When you hire a white man and pay him money he will settle down in the neighborhood; if he is a single man he marries as soon as he gets enough, gets a piece of land, settles down, and becomes a valuable addition to the population. It is not so with these Chinamen. Every dollar we pay to them is gone from us. I have always advocated that it was to the financial interest of the country to get rid of them, but I want to do it in a legal way. I shall vote on these various propositions as my judgment dictates. I have taken an oath in this hall to obey the Constitution of the United States, and I do not propose to violate that oath.

SPEECH OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. Chairman: I have been reluctant to participate in this debate, and if I had not been operated upon by a sense of duty I should certainly have continued silent upon this subject. I concede that the object and effect of this article is to exclude Chinese immigration from California. It is admitted by all the members of this Convention who have spoken on the subject, that Chinese immigration is a great and menacing evil to the moral and material prosperity of the State. Several gentlemen who have discussed the question maintain, however, that the State is, under the Federal Constitution, powerless to resist, and they oppose all action. They remind one of the fellow down East who was in favor of the Maine liquor law, but against its execution. The opponents of State action maintain that the power to exclude the Chinese, or any other immigration that endangers the safety of the State, is exclusively in the Congress of the United States. I deny the premises and the conclusion, both upon authority and reason. I shall be unfortunate if I do not demonstrate that the authorities are the reverse of such a proposition. Nor is this any new position with me. As long ago as eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, when Mr. Gorham was canvassing the State as the Republican candidate for Governor on the "fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man" proposition, I discussed this subject in an address which was then published in the Examiner, republished, as to that portion of it, in a Workingmen's paper then printed in San Francisco. The truth is, there has always been a Chinese immigration party in the State, although at present few of its advocates have the courage of my friend from Sonoma, Mr. Stuart, to avow it. All those interested in the large moneyed corporations, like the railways, or who cultivate land by the thousands of acres, desire cheap Chinese labor, and a continuance of its importation. In this Convention that is the inner secret of the opposition to this report, and of the assertion that the jurisdiction is exclusively with the Federal Congress, where they are aware there is no relief to be anticipated. It is well known that for a long series of years the legislation in the Western States has excluded not only slaves, but free people of color, and it has gone unchallenged either by Congress or by the Federal judiciary. This course of legislation settles the question so far as State action is concerned. Article fourteen of the Constitution of Illinois of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, provides: "The General Assembly shall, at its first session under the amended Constitution, pass such laws as will effectually prohibit free persons of color from immigrating to and settling in this State; and to effectually prevent the owners of slaves from bringing them into this State for the purpose of setting them free." It is a matter of history that that policy was sustained and enforced by the State of Illinois with entire success, and without opposition from the Federal Government.

The thirteenth article of the Constitution of Indiana, adopted in eighteen hundred and fifty-one, declares:

"No negro or mulatto shall come into, or settle in this State, after the adoption of this Constitution. All contracts made with any negro or mulatto coming into this State, contrary to the provision of the foregoing section, shall be void, and any person who shall employ such negro or mulatto, or otherwise encourage him to remain in the State, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars nor more than five hundred dollars."

These provisions go quite as far as any contained in this report, and are as open to objection on the ground of code legislation as any contained in the report of the Committee on Chinese Immigration, and, aside from the treaty with China, are quite as obnoxious to constitutional objections. I maintain that the decisions of the Supreme Court are altogether clear and uniform as to the power of the State to exclude an immigration which endangers the morals and safety of the State, and that the power exists alongside of and independent of the power of Congress to regulate foreign and inter-State commerce. That it is a right of police regulation vested in the States exclusively, and which the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States from first to last fully recognize and sustain.

The first case was decided in eighteen hundred and thirty-seven, and the last bearing upon the subject in eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and they are entirely consistent. The Passenger cases go to the extent of asserting that the States have the exclusive right to determine whether the immigration is dangerous or not, and of applying the necessary remedy. In the City of New York vs. Miln, 11 Peters, decided in eighteen hundred and thirty-seven, Mr. Justice Barbour, rendering the opinion of the Court, quotes from Vattel, as the law of the case:

"The sovereign may forbid the entrance of his territory either to foreigners in general or in particular cases, or to certain persons, or for certain particular purposes, according as he may think advantageous to the State." * * * "Since the lord of territory may, whenever he thinks proper, forbid its being entered, he has no doubt a power to annex what conditions he pleases to the permission to enter."

The Court then proceeds to prove that the State possessed this power before the formation of the Federal Constitution had not surrendered it to the General Government, and still retained it. It has been asserted that the decision in the Passenger cases overruled the decision in the City of New York vs. Miln. It is an assumption without the slightest foundation in fact. In the Passenger cases, Judge McLean says:

"In giving the commercial power to Congress, the States did not part with that power of self-preservation which must be inherent in every organized community. They may guard against the introduction of anything which may corrupt the morals or endanger the health or lives of their citizens."

To the same effect is the opinion of Judge Grier, and seven of the nine Judges who composed the Court. Seven of the Judges, including the majority and minority, delivered concurrent opinions on this question, and eight of them concurred in the position thus expressed by Judge McLean, as I shall demonstrate before I conclude. I shall show that all the other decisions of the Court either substantially maintain the same rule, or expressly reserve any opinion on the subject.

Then do the Chinese immigrants, in the language of Judge McLean, tend to corrupt the morals of our people, or endanger the safety of the State? Let us begin with the foundation of society, the marriage relation. We know, from history and the statements of travelers, that a system of polygamy exists in China, quite as execrable as that which prevails among the Mormons of Salt Lake. That the position of woman in China is practically that of a slave and an article of commerce. I need not dwell on the fact, that there can be no desirable civilization or sound state of morals where polygamy is the position of woman. In the nineteenth century that is an admitted axiom among all people of any liberal cultivation.

To illustrate the Chinese idea of the rights and position of woman, I give the following contract from the Senate Committee report on the subject of Chinese immigration at a late session of Congress: "An agreement to assist the woman Ah Ho, because coming from China to San Francisco, she became indebted to her mistress for passage. Ah Ho herself asks Mr. Yu Kwan to advance her sixty dollars, for which Ah Ho distinctly agrees to give her body to Mr. Yee for services as a prostitute for a term of four years." And yet the passage did not cost Yee exceeding forty dollars, and Ah Ho for this service was required to prostitute herself for four years. And this is the foreign commerce which gentlemen, in effect, argue is protected by the Constitution of the United States. It appears from the testimony of Governor Low, in the same report, that by an arrangement between the Chinese Companies and the steamship company no Chinaman will be allowed to return to China on the steamer until all his debts are paid; and, therefore, there was no way for this woman to escape her odious contract until the expiration of the four years. Yet, such are the Six Chinese Companies tolerated in San Francisco, and such is the steamship company subsidized by the United States Government in the cause of civilization and commerce.

It is an admitted fact, to which every practicing lawyer can testify, that as a race the Chinese have no sense of the obligations of an oath, either when the litigation is among themselves or between Chinese and others, whether the oath is administered according to our laws or their own customs. If among themselves, they generally produce about an equal number of witnesses on each side, who testify directly in opposition to each other. I recollect the history of a case, when I first came to the State, when a Justice of the Peace, as a matter of curiosity, had witnesses in a suit until fifty had testified in contradiction of each other. A race that has no sense of the obligations of a jural oath is dangerous in any country, and especially where jury trials prevail according to the English or American rules.

It is well established that smallpox and leprosy prevail among the Chinese to an alarming extent, and that they have introduced both into this country. It is also an established fact that leprosy is an incurable disease, and that several deaths from that cause have occurred in San Francisco.

It is well known that their women fearfully corrupt the youths in our cities, both in morals and health. I have been credibly informed that they have introduced among our young people the practice of smoking opium, which, in some instances, has been indulged by young females. It cannot be denied, that in opposition to law and the Acts of Congress, Chinese are introduced into this country as coolies bound by contracts to labor—practically slaves—and that the Six Companies rigidly enforce these contracts. Nor is it possible to detect this violation of law, or repress this system of slavery so long as Chinese are permitted to be introduced as immigrants. It appears from the testimony before the United States Senate Committee that these people are generally too poor to pay their own passage. It is, therefore, the practice of the importer to advance the passage money under a contract to labor, and the coolie goes before the American Consul, and proves—or some one else does it for him—that he is a voluntary immigrant; and thus he sells himself into slavery for a term of time, and becomes a person "held to service or labor," as our system of slavery used to be described.

It is well established that these people are often made the subjects of the grossest frauds, and sometimes leap overboard before the ship leaves port, and are drowned in their effort to escape their fate. On the voyage they have been known to suffer all the horrors of the middle passage. It is our duty to put an end to this horrible traffic which can only be effected by a total inhibition of the immigration. We are informed by the reports of Americans, who have visited China, that their prisons are often resorted to for the purpose of filling contracts for labor made by the Six Companies. It is the statement of all intelligent Chinamen that the laborers introduced into California of late years are generally drawn from the lowest dregs of the Chinese people. This coast has become, to a large extent, a penal colony for the Emperor of China.

Every citizen of California is fully aware that the Chinese companies have a system of government and laws for the Chinese entirely independent of our own government, which they sometimes enforce, even to the taking of life. One or two cases have fallen under my own observation. Yet such is their system of terrorism, that it can never be proved in a Court of justice. They are, therefore, in open rebellion against the State Government. It was charged to juries by the United States Supreme Court Judges on the circuit, that combinations to resist the execution of the fugitive slave law were treason. Such are the combinations of these people for a Chinese Government in California. It has been said by some jurists that treason against a State was also treason against the United States. If this be so, the Chinese are in open revolt against both the State and Federal Government. The Chinese are now well armed with the improved weapons, and with their own passion and those of our people excited as they are at present, civil war may be anticipated at any time. Many riots have already occurred. It must be apparent to all men of reflection that China, with her four or five hundred millions in a state of starvation, may pour such a flood of immigrants upon our shores that, in process of time, they will subvert our institutions and government. It has been well said by the Chairman, in his able and candid speech on the presentation of the report, that with these people it is a question of food and existence, which they can only solve by immigration. Our own security requires that we should turn this tide away from California. If they continue to come in the numbers in which they have been arriving, they will in time, and at no distant day, drive out the free white laborers by their merciless system of competition, which must inevitably result in their getting the possession and control of the country. In other words, they will Mongolianize the Pacific Coast, for in the absence of the Caucasian laborer they will be irresistible in numbers, force, and power. The Chinaman earns only eight or ten cents per day in his own country. He is therefore benefited by any change of residence. In this country, with his nomadic habits, he lives in tents, or tenements of the meanest character. He clothes himself with Chinese raiment, and subsists on rice and the cheapest food. It is impossible for the white laborer to compete with him, and as a consequence he drives off the white man and monopolizes the labor market.

Instead of checking this evil the Federal Government has subsidized railroads to import and steamers to transport these coolies by the thousand to the Pacific Coast. Governor Low, in his testimony before the Senate Committee, which will be found on page seventy-six, testified:

"The impulse of eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, and eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, I have always conceived to have been given by the building of the Pacific Railroad, the company being very anxious for laborers. A great many were brought here directly and indirectly by the efforts of the railroad people to get laborers. * * * I should think on the Central Pacific, from my knowledge of it, four fifths of the labor for grading perhaps was performed by Chinese. That is, from here to Ogden."

The laborer can hardly regard a government as paternal which inaugurates measures to introduce a horde of Asiatics who compete with him in all the industries of the country, and by competition deprive them and their families of bread. National, like domestic charity, begins at home. The policy of the Federal Government for these last fifteen years cannot be accounted for on any rational or humanitarian principle. Under the cry against pauper labor it has established a so-called protective tariff, which has led to an importation of operatives, because it has rendered impossible an exchange of our agricultural products for the proceeds of that labor, filled the country with foreign paupers and tramps, broken up our foreign commerce, and overstocked the country with manufactures forced in this hotbed of legislation.

Asiatic immigration is opposed to all the great interests of the country. It represses that of our own and kindred races. I prefer that the future inhabitants of the Pacific should be descended from the fair daughters of Germany, Ireland, England, and France, instead of the copper-colored courtesans of China. Mixing with a lower race, without elevating them, debases our own.

There is another aspect of this question which requires our deliberate consideration. If this Chinese population is permitted to become permanent among us to the extent threatened, they will ultimately attain the right of suffrage. It is not possible to continue to carry them in our bosom as a quasi-alien enemy. If among us in the numbers we anticipate, paying taxes, it will be impossible to resist their claim to citizenship. They are already being naturalized in other States, and all legal objection to their naturalization rests upon the word "white" in the Act of Congress. How soon that will be construed away by the Courts, no one can divine.

If the Chinese now in the country had the ballot, in all party contests they would hold the balance of power and the Six Companies would control our politics and government. They would become the mere subjects of commerce, to be transferred to the party paying the highest price. It is urged that the exclusion of Chinese immigration from California is in opposition to the treaty with China. I have shown that according to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, it is not in the power of the Federal Government, by treaty, to annul the reserved rights of the States, or violate the Federal compact. If the President and Senate possessed that power they might abrogate the Constitution of the United States as well as the Constitutions of the States. The Supreme Court of the United States has also held that the right of the State to exclude an immigration which was injurious to the morals or dangerous to the safety of the State, was one of its sovereign powers never surrendered to the Federal Government. The existence of any sovereignty in the State since the rebellion has been denied. Such a position is merely preposterous. In the case of McCullough vs. The State of Maryland, Chief Justice Marshall and the Supreme Court of the United States said: "In America the powers of sovereignty are divided between the Government of the Union and those of the States. They are each sovereign as to the objects committed to it, and neither sovereign with respect to the objects committed to the other." This is almost verbatim the language of Alexander Hamilton in his report in seventeen hundred and ninety-one, in favor of the constitutionality of the United States Bank. It has received universal assent.

Since the rebellion, this doctrine has been repeatedly affirmed by the present Supreme Court of the United States. In United States vs. Daley, 11th Wallace, that Court held, the opinion being rendered by Judge Nelson: "The General Government and the States, although both exist within the same territorial limits, are separate and distinct sovereignties, acting separately and independently of each other within their respective spheres. The former in its appropriate sphere is supreme, but the States within the limits of their powers not granted, or in the language of the amendment 'reserved,' are as independent of the General Government as that government within its sphere is independent of the States."

It is a well established principle of law, from the earliest writers on international law to Vattel and Wheaton, that a treaty in violation of the Constitution of a country is void and without authority. In the Cherokee tobacco case, 11 Wallace, the Supreme Court of the United States held:

"It need hardly be said that a treaty cannot change the Constitution, or be valid if it is in violation of that instrument. This results from the nature and fundamental principles of our government."

And as to the power of Congress to abrogate a treaty, it is held in the same case:

"A treaty may supersede a prior Act of Congress, or an Act of Congress may supersede a prior treaty."

In order to establish satisfactorily that under the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, the State has the power to exclude an immigration which endangers her morals or safety, I shall have to go more fully into the principles and reasonings of these cases.

Judge Wayne states as the opinion of the Court in the Passenger cases:

"The State have also reserved the police right to turn off from their territory paupers, vagabonds, and fugitives from justice." (P. 425.)

Again: "But I have said the States have the right to turn off paupers, vagabonds, and fugitives from justice, and the States where slaves are have a constitutional right to exclude all such as are from a common ancestry and country of the same class of men. And when Congress shall legislate, if it be not disrespectful for one who is a member of the judiciary to suppose so absurd a thing of another department of the government, to make paupers, vagabonds, suspected persons, and fugitives from justice subjects of admission into the United States, I do not doubt it will be found and declared, should it ever become matter of judicial decision, that such persons are not within the regulating power which the United States have over commerce. The States may meet such persons upon their arrival in port, and may put them under all proper restraints. They may prevent them from entering their territory, may carry them out, or drive them off." (P. 426.)

It may be said that these were the utterances of a Southern Judge, but Mr. Justice Grier, of Pennsylvania, goes a bow-shot beyond him. He says:

"It must be borne in mind (what is sometimes forgotten) that the controversy in this case is not with regard to the right claimed by the State of Massachusetts, in the second section of this Act, to repel from her shores, lunatics, idiots, criminals, or paupers which any foreign country, or even one of her sister States, might endeavor to thrust upon her; nor the right of any State, whose domestic security might be endangered by the admission of free negroes, to exclude them from her borders. This right of the States has its foundation in the sacred law of self-defense, which no power granted to Congress can restrain or conceal. It is admitted by all that those powers which relate to merely municipal legislation, or what may be more properly called internal police, are not surrendered or restrained, and that it is as competent and necessary for a State to provide precautionary measures against the moral pestilence of paupers, vagabonds, and convicts, as it is to guard against the physical evils which may arise from unsound and infectious articles imported." (P. 457.)

I further answer this position in relation to the treaty in the language of Chief Justice Taney, who says: "And the first inquiry is whether, under the Constitution of the United States, the Federal Government has the power to compel the several States to receive and suffer to remain in association with its citizens, every person or class of persons whom it may be the policy or pleasure of the United States to admit. In my judgment this question lies at the foundation of the controversy in this case. I do not mean to say the General Government have, by treaty or Act of Congress, required the State of Massachusetts to permit the aliens in question to land. I think there is no treaty or Act of Congress which can justly be so construed. But it is not necessary to examine that question, until we have first inquired whether Congress can lawfully exercise such a power and whether the States are bound to submit to it. For if the people of the several States of this Union reserved to themselves the power of expelling from their borders any person, or class of persons, whom it might deem dangerous to its peace, or likely to produce a physical or moral evil among its citizens, then any treaty or law of Congress, invading this right, and authorizing the introduction of any person, or description of persons, against the consent of the State, would be assumption of power which this Court could neither recognize nor enforce." (P. 446.) The Chief Justice continues: "And it is equally clear that, if it may remove from among its citizens any person, or description of persons, whom it regards as injurious to their welfare, it follows that they may meet them at the threshold and prevent them from entering. For it will hardly be said that the United States may permit them to enter, and compel the States to receive them, and that the States may immediately afterwards expel them." * * * "I think it, therefore, to be very clear, both upon principle and the authority of adjudged cases, that the several States have a right to remove from among their people, and to prevent from entering the State, any person, or class, or description of persons, whom it may deem dangerous or injurious to the interests and welfare of its citizens; and that the State has the exclusive right to determine, in its sound discretion, whether the danger does or does not exist, free from the control of the General Government." (P. 467.)

In subsequent cases the Court has expressly reserved its opinion on the police powers of the State in this respect. In Henderson vs. Mayor of N. Y., 92 Otto, 250, decided in eighteen hundred and seventy-five, which was a question of a tax on immigration per se, the Court say: "Whether, in the absence of such action (Congressional legislation) the States can, or how far they can by appropriate legislation protect themselves against actual paupers, vagrants, criminals, and diseased persons arriving in their territory from foreign countries, we do not decide." (P. 275.) The most that can be said in favor of the exclusive power of Congress to so regulate foreign commerce as to interfere with the police rights of the States, is that it is not yet a settled question in the Supreme Court of the United States. The Supreme Court has not only by repeated decisions recognized the police power for the protection of its citizens, but in the recent case of United States vs. Dewitt, held an Act of Congress void, which prohibited the mining for sale of naphtha and illuminating oil, as interfering with the regulation of internal commerce, which it declared to be a power vested exclusively in the States. (11 Wallace, 41.) There could be no stronger illustration of the exclusive police powers of the States, and the utter want of jurisdiction in the Federal Government over that class of subjects.

In the case of Chy Lung vs. Freeman, 92 Otto, 280, so much relied on by the advocates of Federal power, the only point really decided was that a State officer could not go on board the ship and seize a woman and deprive her of her liberty as a prostitute without giving her a trial. The question arose on a writ of habeas corpus. There was no question of taxation involved in the case, nor any question of exclusion of the immigration, and clearly none of the safety to the State of Chinese immigration. The case and the State law assumed that the immigration of moral Chinese women was legal and a safe commerce. There is no doubt that the statute of California was liable to the criticism to which Mr. Justice Miller subjected it.

"The Commissioner has but to go aboard a vessel filled with passengers ignorant of our language and our laws, and without trial, or hearing, or evidence, but from the external appearance of persons with whose former habits he is unfamiliar, to point with his finger to twenty, as in this case, or a hundred if he chooses, and to say to the master: These are idiots, these are paupers, these are convicted criminals, these are lewd women, and the others are debauched women. I have here a hundred blank forms of bonds printed. I require you to fill me up and sign each of these for five hundred dollars in gold, and that you furnish me two hundred different men, residents of this State, and of sufficient means as sureties on these bonds. I charge you five dollars in each case for preparing the bond and swearing your sureties; and I charge you seventy-five cents each for examining these passengers, and all others you have on board; if you don't do this you are forbidden to land your passengers under a heavy penalty. But I have power to commute with you for all this for any sum I may choose to take in cash. I am open to an offer, for you must remember that twenty per cent. of all I can get out of you goes into my own pocket, and the remainder into the treasury of California."

This, although somewhat colored, is a tolerably accurate description of the statute. Of this law, Justice Miller correctly says:

"Its manifest purpose, as we have already said, is not to obtain indemnity, but to get money."

There was no pretense that it was a statute excluding Chinese immigration. The Court expressly admits the power of the State to the extent of what is necessary for self-protection, reserves its opinion as to what measures are necessary, and invites the presentation of a case which the Court may pass. The Judge says: "We are not called upon by the statute to decide for or against the rights of a State, in the absence of legislation by Congress, to protect herself by necessary and proper laws against paupers and convicted criminals from abroad; nor to lay down the definite limits of such a right, if it exists. Such a right can only arise from a vital necessity for its exercise, and cannot be carried beyond the scope of that necessity. When a State statute, limited to provisions necessary and appropriate to that object alone, shall, in a proper controversy, come before us, it will be time to decide that question." Thus the Court expressly rules that no question of exclusion is before them. The case, therefore, in nowise conflicts with the main question in the case of the City of New York vs. Miln, or the doctrines in the Passenger cases.

The truth is that no case has ever been before any State or Federal Court which fairly presented the right of the State to exclude Chinese immigration with its attendant circumstances. Unless the cases of the City of New York and the Passenger cases are in point which assert the right to prohibit it, it is entirely an open question. I maintain that the necessity indicated in the opinion of Mr. Justice Miller has already arisen in California in relation to Chinese immigration, and that the only proper, appropriate, and efficient remedy is a total exclusion of the Chinese from landing on our shores.

That the case of Chy Lung vs. Freeman does not overrule the former decisions, that the State is the exclusive judge of the necessity of the case in a question of self-defense, and that according to the opinion of Justice Miller the State must judge at least in the first instance and present a case for adjudication.

It is simply nonsense to say that if we present a case of exclusion under this report and a revised Constitution, it will lead to a conflict with the General Government. If the case should be decided against us, which I do not anticipate, we have only to submit to the judgment of the Court, and there can be no possible contest between State and Federal authority. Besides, each section, under the decisions of the Courts, will be a distinct and separate enactment, and some of them, at worst, will be held valid, while others may possibly be declared in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. The interests and honor of the State require that the experiment of invoking a decision should be made as suggested by the Supreme Court of the United States.

It is pertinent to remark that since the decision of the case of Chy Lung vs. Freeman, the subject of the police powers of the States was again before the Supreme Court of the United States, after a heated political contest over the subject in California, and Mr. Justice Field, in the opinion of the Court, took occasion to modify the language of the former opinion. That such was the intention can admit of no doubt, as Mr. Justice Field, in the opinion of the circuit, declared that a State had a right to protect itself against Chinese immigration as a matter of self-defense.

In this case of Sherlock vs. Alling, decided at the October Term, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, the Court, in the opinion by Justice Field, say:

"In conferring upon Congress the regulation of commerce, it was never intended to cut the States off from legislating on all subjects relating to the health, life, and safety of their citizens, though the legislation might indirectly affect the commerce of the country." (95 Otto, p. 100.)

In this case the whole principle is clearly enunciated. And now, sir, in conclusion, I take occasion to say there is not the least hope for relief by the action of Congress. I am utterly opposed to any action of that body in the premises, but the abrogation of the Burlingame treaty.

Now, sir, in the classic language of some of my friends on the other side, I say, "the Chinese must go." But I propose to make them go in a legal way, by the regular action of the government. Violence has been suggested. Mobs have been alluded to. Now, sir, so far as anything but regular governmental action is concerned, I set my face against it. If our system of government is not sufficient to correct all the evils of society, then is that government a failure and a fraud. I have no taste for mobs, whether they be in the nature of an honest uprising for the correction of abuses, or whether they are the lowest, and vilest, and most criminal of all mobs under the name of a Vigilance Committee. And, sir, if any violence is resorted to in relation to this Chinese question, if we have an Executive of honor and courage, it will be put down in sharp and vigorous action, cost what it may in blood or treasure. Let us take care what we do. We may as well talk sense as nonsense; it don't cost any more.

Mr. Chairman, mob means the torch; a mob means the destruction of property. It never can succeed in this country; there are too many property holders here. There are too many men who own little farms—little homes here. They will revolt against all mobs, and whenever violence is resorted to, I am for stifling it at once, be the cost what it may. In relation to the mobs of eighteen hundred and seventy-seven against Eastern railroads, although it may have been provoked by the reduction of wages at a time when they were declaring dividends of seven per cent., it was properly suppressed by the State and Federal Governments, and if President Hayes never does another act which will commend him to the grateful remembrance of posterity, the suppression of those riots will. No, sir, give us law and the regular methods of redress of grievances through the ballot box, and I trust we will redress a great many in that way.

I express myself in this manner, sir, because I know with what we have to deal here. I would not load the Constitution with objectionable and useless matter. I have no fear about the Constitution when it comes before the people. It will be ratified. I know, sir, that there is a disposition in certain quarters to malign this Convention. I know there has been a disposition to belittle our work and traduce it. And whatever we do or say, we are met with the threat that the Constitution will be rejected. But gentlemen are counting without their host. I know, sir, that certain papers in this State, notoriously in the interest of monopolies, are battling in that direction; that they endeavor to suppress all the reasons from the public for the action of the majority here. It is true, the Record-Union did print speeches for some of us, which we paid for, until we got to be too hard on the corporations, and then they shut down on us, and now you can't get a solitary line published which is against their views. The accounts which go to the city papers are so meager that the public can glean nothing of the reasons for what we do here. All this works against us, especially when everything said against the reforms proposed here is carefully published. But if we make a good instrument, and give to the public such reasons as we can, and take care to keep all tomfoolery out, I have no fear of the result; and I do not fear the opposition of this class of papers; it will fall harmless at our feet. We have no hope of any relief from this monstrous evil but in union among ourselves and the action of the State. I have no fear that such provisions as this will result in the rejection of the Constitution. If it should be rejected by the people, it will more probably be for what it omits than for what it contains. The cry of its defeat is an idle bugbear, which will not disturb even venerable maidens. The result will show that the wish is father to the thought, and that they who cry defeat are false prophets of evil omen. I say to you, in the language of the great bard:

"To thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

MR. GREGG. Mr. Chairman: If a motion is in order, I would like to move to strike out sections two, five, six, seven, eight, and nine of the report.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is not in order.

SPEECH OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: From the way we are going, this Convention will be in session till the Legislature meets. It is about time we were adopting some fixed, settled line of policy. Now, I can hardly hope to add any argument to that which has been made by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard. The doctrines which he advanced are eminently sound, and his logic invincible. There are very few, if any, additional authorities besides those which have already been presented. It may not be improper, however, to state what I consider the object and purpose for which the Government of the United States was established under the Constitution and forms of law. It is said that the chief purpose of the Constitution of the United States, as decided by its founders, to be to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity. And when it is considered that this was asserted by the thirteen sovereign States, it will be understood that nothing more was conceded than what was agreed to by these general terms. And when you have referred to the specific provision that the same instrument contains, by which the power is conferred upon Congress to put in force this instrument, so as to enable the Government of the United States to carry out these several general powers, we have arrived at the whole plans and powers of the Government of the United States as contradistinguished from the powers still remaining in the States of this Union. And it is with these powers, regulating commerce with foreign nations and between the States, borrowing money, etc., that you parted. Upon this subject of regulating commerce, I presume you have been sufficiently enlightened by the gentleman last upon the floor; and by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour. So far as that power is concerned, it extends only to the regulation of commerce between the States, and between the United States and foreign nations. It has been held, and rightly so, and I presume that it embraces also transient foreigners passing through the country—as far as the Burlingame treaty is concerned—that those who are here may reside here. The doctrine of the powers of the State has been expounded very clearly, and it is hardly worth while for me to go into that subject. I shall, therefore, refer simply to the action taken in establishing the treaty. I do not say it was the purpose of the President of the United States, or of the Congress of the United States, but I say it was an oversight, the result of eagerness to secure the commercial interests of the United States, and in their eagerness to secure this result, important guards and restrictions were omitted. I apprehend, however, that if ever the construction of that treaty was called in question before the Courts, and a fair construction given to it, it would be held, as the Fourteenth Amendment has been held in certain cases, to which I will call your attention, to apply solely to the regulation which the government is authorized to exercise. I refer to the Slaughterhouse cases. (16 Wallace, p. 37.)

There was a cry for cheap labor. Capital wanted cheap labor; corporations wanted cheap labor; and now cheap labor is fastened upon us, and threatening our ruin, threatening starvation to our poorer classes, and we are told that we are powerless. I say, no wonder the poor man is tempted to lift his voice against the powers that be. He who has ever been ready to take up arms in defense of his country, and of its institutions, finds himself driven to the wall by serfs, with no power of redress. What wonder that he lifts his voice in lamentation. It is not drunkenness that has caused this trouble. It is the lack of employment which makes men lift their voices against this unnatural condition of things. Cheap labor has redounded to the benefit of a few capitalists, but not to the prosperity of the country, or any part of the country. The cry of cheap labor had no foundation in fact, but was used as an excuse for an enormous subsidy to a line of steamers. We have all seen the evils of cheap labor, and the State has the power now to remedy these evils.

It has been said here that the Constitution of the United States was the supreme law of the land, and the treaties and laws made in pursuance thereof were the supreme law, anything in the Constitution of the States to the contrary notwithstanding. I understood that the proposition was set up as a general proposition.

If I am not mistaken that proposition is not law, and it will be sufficient to merely state what is the law, and let it rest upon that statement. In every case where there is joint jurisdiction, and there is an absolute prohibition by the State, and the same authority is concurrent in the United States, in such a case the laws passed by Congress, in pursuance of the Constitution, are the supreme law of the land, anything in the Constitution or laws of the State to the contrary notwithstanding. But in the absence of any law of Congress on a subject, where the authority is concurrent, the laws of the State will hold good. Of course when Congress does act, that supersedes the State law.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the substitute proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher.

The amendment was lost.

THE SECRETARY read section one, temporarily passed over:

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute of Mr. Joyce.

MR. MILLER. This amendment has no relation to the subject-matter of section one. It more properly belongs to section seven, which reads thus:

"SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. It shall provide for their exclusion from residence or settlement in any portion of the State it may see fit, or from the State, and provide suitable methods, by their taxation or otherwise, for the expense of such exclusion. It shall prescribe suitable penalties for the punishment of persons convicted of introducing them within forbidden limits. It shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for their removal without the limits of such cities and towns."

It alludes to the same thing precisely. I think we had better let this first section stand as it is precisely, because it deals with a certain class of cases. When the proper time comes I will offer an amendment which I consider necessary to perfect the section.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

Rejected.

MR. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

"Insert in the fifth line, after the word 'with,' these words: 'Incurable diseases which are,' and strike out in the last line the word 'diseases.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Miller.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment will not be adopted, because it raises a question upon which doctors might disagree. While Dr. O'Donnell might consider a certain disease incurable, Dr. Shurtleff might consider it curable. I think the amendment weakens rather than strengthens the section, and, unless the gentleman can produce some better reasons for it, I shall have to vote against it.

MR. MILLER. The object is simply this: there are a great many diseases that are contagious and infectious, which are mild in form, such as measles, mumps, and things of that kind. We do not want to put in a provision here to remove a man from the State simply because he may have the misfortune to have the measles or the mumps. That is why I have suggested the word incurable.

MR. JOYCE. It seems to me that the section is in the interest of protecting the Chinese. What benefits there is going to be got out of section one I can't see. If we are going to get rid of a few sick Chinamen and keep all the healthy ones, I don't see the good. I want to get rid of them all, and not merely the sick ones.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

Lost.

MR. O'DONNELL. I have an amendment to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The right is hereby reserved to the State to protect its citizens from pestilence and plague, and as a police regulation to prohibit the entering of dangerous and criminal classes."

SPEECH OF MR. O'DONNELL.

MR. O'DONNELL. I would like to have the Secretary read some extracts from the press which I send up.

Objected to.

THE CHAIRMAN. Objection is made and they cannot be read.

MR. O'DONNELL. Then I claim my right, and will read them myself, if the Secretary is not allowed to read them.

Objected to.

THE CHAIRMAN. Objection is made, and the gentleman cannot read them without the consent of the committee.

MR. O'DONNELL. Then I will speak of leprosy, and talk the extracts to you [laughter] I suppose. Mr. Chairman, that very few of the members on this floor understand what leprosy is. In the first place I want them to understand that Jesus Christ had delegated to his disciples the power to raise the dead, cast out devils, and heal every class of diseases, but he never delegated to any of his disciples the power to heal a leper. It is one of the most fearful diseases known to the world. I will show you a likeness of it. [Exhibiting a portrait, life-size, of a leper.] That is a likeness of one of these lepers now in the pesthouse in San Francisco.

MR. BLACKMER. Does the gentleman offer that as an amendment to the section? [Laughter.]

MR. ROLFE. I think I see a striking resemblance between that and the gentleman. [Laughter.]

MR. O'DONNELL. If the gentlemen don't stop interrupting me I won't get through before to-morrow night. [Laughter.] We know there are a thousand cases of leprosy in San Francisco, and there is no power to remove them. You all remember that a few years ago I went and got the reporters of the different papers and took them through Chinatown, and showed them over one hundred and fifty cases of leprosy, and the report is right there in black and white. It goes on and describes these cases. Now, according to the best medical writers in the world, if we allow them to remain here five years three quarters of San Francisco will be affected with this pestilence. That is the reason I produce that extract which you refuse to hear read. But, in the course of a few years, you will be sorry for it. If you don't take cognizance of this evil now, I say you, the delegates of this Convention, are responsible for the dire results which are certain to follow, and you ought to be held responsible.

There are now in the pesthouse, in San Francisco, some twenty-three cases. One of these cases was standing on the corner of Dupont and Washington streets for two years. Now, think of that. For two years one of these lepers was standing on the corner of Washington and Dupont streets, coming every hour in contact with your wives and children who are forced to pass through that part of the city. And according to the very best authorities in the world, they tell you that it is infectious. I want you to understand it is both infectious and contagious. The press, owned by the Chinese companies, will tell you that it is not. A majority of the people of this State don't know the difference between infectious and contagious.

MR. BEERSTECHER. What is the difference?

MR. O'DONNELL. I don't suppose there is any of them any more ignorant than you are. [Laughter.] Read what the honorable and distinguished Judge who died of leprosy on the island has to say about it, and how he contracted this loathsome disease by coming in contact with a leper. You all know the history of the islands. This man was traveling through the islands, and accidentally sat on a seat from which a leper had just got up, and he was removed to another island, where, in about seven years he discovered that he had the disease. This is an island set apart for lepers, and who enters there never goes away again. He had got the disease from sitting in the chair which the leper had occupied. He says leprosy is spread by coming in contact with lepers, or being where lepers have been. There have been five hundred lepers sent here for the purpose of sowing that disease broadcast all over this fair land. That is a fact. We have found it in San Francisco, and we have found it in every town in the State of California. Even here, in Sacramento, there are over fifty cases of leprosy. I can, within sight of this hall, produce over twenty cases of leprosy, that horrible, incurable disease. No human power can relieve the leper from that slow torture, a lingering, living death; there is no cure for the leper. You must understand that most of the press of the State of California is owned by the Six Chinese Companies. They tell me that it is not contagious. They tell you the disease is not contagious. But do they say it is not infectious? I say it is infectious! Remember, that wherever the coolie has gone, he has spread that disease. Look at the history of the Sandwich Islands. They were the purest blooded people on the face of God Almighty's world, those Kanakas, until these Mongolians came among them. What is the case now? Why, the island, to-day, is almost decimated from leprosy brought over there by the coolies. Go to other countries where they have gone; the same condition exists there; and I tell you that we have got to put our feet right down, and put a clause in the Constitution declaring that they shall not land here, or the people of the State of California will rise and stop their coming to this country. [Applause.] This section must be put in the Constitution, declaring that the coolies must not land on these shores in no instance.

Now, I say my object is to get rid of them, and this section will do it. We have the power to prevent their coming. We have the power to prevent them from spreading this loathsome disease broadcast over the land, and I mean to do it if I can. When we know that we have the power to put these things in the Constitution, why do you refuse to do it, when you know the people of the State of California demand it at your hands? My friend from Los Angeles says we have the power, and I know we have. Let us express it in the Constitution. The people want it, and they will ratify our work here if we do it.

MR. REYNOLDS. It seems to me that this is a good place for a point of order; the gentleman is not speaking to the question. The amendment which he proposes is out of order, for it assumes that the State has absolute power over the whole subject, which we all know is not the case. We can only provide for the exercise of such power as is reserved in the State, therefore the amendment is out of order. The Convention has no authority to reserve any rights or grant away any rights.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken. The gentleman from San Francisco will proceed.

MR. SCHELL. I rise to a point of order.

MR. O'DONNELL. State your point of order. [Laughter.]

MR. SCHELL. I wish to read Rule Forty-one, for the government of this body: "Every member when about to speak, shall rise and respectfully address the President, shall confine himself to the question under debate, and avoid personality, and shall sit down when finished." The last part is what I base my point of order on. The gentleman does not sit down when he has finished. [Laughter.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. O'DONNELL. I would like to inform the gentleman that I am going to finish my remarks if it takes until to-morrow night. [Laughter.] I am going to take my time, you can listen or not, as you please.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. I move we take a recess. [Laughter.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is out of order. The gentleman will proceed.

MR. O'DONNELL. I would like to read some of the testimony taken before the Senate Committee, in regard to the condition of this spot called Chinatown—this plague spot situated right in the center of the city. "I have lived here for twenty-eight years, and studied their habits, visited their places and their criminal dens, and I think I know something about them. They are low, degraded, and filthy."

MR. STEDMAN. I ask the gentleman whose testimony he is reading?

MR. O'DONNELL. My own testimony, given before the Commission under oath. [Laughter.] I merely wanted to say that I visited one of the ships, and the captain, who was present, admitted it. Captain Joy was the captain of the ship. I went on board of that ship which was running between this port and China for a great many years, and has brought a great many coolies to this country. I testified that most of them were shipped from Hongkong, an English port, and that those who are brought here are brought under these labor contracts, which are familiar to every member of this Convention, and that a great many of them are infected with these diseases. Now, during the testimony I gave, Captain Joy was present and acknowledged it to be a fact. I will read from my sworn testimony, and you can see what I said:

"Question—How long have you resided in this State?

"Answer—Twenty-six years, about.

"Q.—What is your profession?

"A.—Physician.

"Q.—On what street do you reside?

"A.—On Kearny, between Jackson and Washington.

"Q.—What reference has that to the Chinese question?

"A.—We have the bulk of the Chinese right there in our midst.

"Q.—Are you conversant with them, with their habits, and their manners, and have you had opportunities to observe them?

"A.—Yes, sir. I have practiced as a physician among them for a great many years, and I have studied their habits, and I think I know something about them.

"Q.—State to the committee the result of your observations, taking such drift as you may please in regard to the general idea of their character and habits, and as to cleanliness—hygiene, if that is the proper word—and so on, all through the category of virtues and vices.

"A.—I have lived in that vicinity for over twenty years, right in the midst of them. I have visited all their gambling houses and bagnios. I have been very careful to study their habits, and their habits are very immoral, low, degrading, and very filthy. In regard to filth, the stench of that vicinity is sufficient, I should think, to produce any disease. I have discovered among them leprosy, and any amount of smallpox patients. They were the first that introduced the smallpox here about five years ago. This last time it originated from them, because the first case that occurred in this last epidemic was a teamster who lived in Hayes' Valley, and at that time a ship by the name of Crocus, I think, brought a gang of these pirates here. The captain said they were pirates.

"Q.—That is the English steamer, Crocus, Captain Joy?

"A.—Yes. He said they were all a lot of pirates.

"Mr. Bee. Let me correct that right here. The captain wrote a note stating that he did not call them pirates.

"Senator Sargent. Where is the note?

"Mr. Bee. I saw it published.

"The Witness. I visited the ship, and the captain told me they were pirates. He told me the only way to keep them in subjection was by using hot pokers. He said he had to keep a brigade of hot pokers to keep them in subjection. The captain said that to me. One of the Custom House officers told me this ship had arrived. It was about six o'clock in the morning, and he was going down to get aboard of the steamer. He said he had to go. I asked him, why? He said because there was smallpox on board. I immediately got my buggy and horse and went down there. They had discharged the ship on Sunday. I met one of these Chinamen on the corner of Second and Brannan streets. He was broken out all over with the eruption of smallpox. I immediately drove back to the Health Office and informed them there; and I was told by one of the detectives that there was no case of smallpox on board. I told them I had seen one case particularly that I knew to be smallpox, that had left the ship. That is where this epidemic originated."

Now, you all recollect that epidemic, and you all know where it started. We lost by that epidemic some two thousand three hundred of our very best citizens, by this epidemic brought here by the ship Crocus. You all know that to be a fact. There is the sworn testimony of the captain who brought these pirates over. Thirty-three cases were discovered that had been landed here in the City of San Francisco, between five and six o'clock in the morning. I met the detective at the City Hall, and I told him I was going down to see this ship, and see if there was any smallpox on board. Why, says he, I have been down there, and there is not a case of smallpox there. I said, I am going to satisfy myself. Before I got to the ship I discovered three cases; I stopped them right there. They were broke out all over. I went on down to the ship, and when I got there they told me I could not come on board. The Health Officer was on board.

I tell you, Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, we have got to quarantine our ground. These Chinese companies, I tell you, can do anything in the world. They can do anything they want to do. Now, the very idea of allowing that ship to land here with smallpox, to spread it all over the city, and all over the State of California, to sweep off hundreds of our best citizens, is an outrage on our civilization. All brought here by the landing of one ship, all because it was not quarantined.

Now, if we put in this additional clause, it will prevent all such things in future, if the officers and citizens do their duty. The Supervisors and Board of Health declare they have no power. This Convention was called for the very purpose of putting some section in the Constitution to save the citizens of the State of California, and protect them against this invasion. That was the main object of calling this Convention, and no member on this floor dare deny it. Now, it appears to me, that notwithstanding fifty wise men are trying by every means in their power to destroy the effect of this section, we ought to stand up and pass it. They are attacking it with the pruning knife, and attempting to prune out the best part of it. The people of this State demand, in the name of humanity, that we give them some means by which they can remove this pestilence out of the Golden State. They demand that we give them some means of protecting their wives and children. This very Chinatown is situated in the very heart of San Francisco. No man can go from the eastern part to the western part of the city without coming in contact with these lepers.

Now, I want to read you what Mr. Gibbs says about these diseases:

"Mr. Haymond—How long have you resided in California?

"Answer—Since January, eighteen hundred and fifty—twenty-six years.

"Q.—How long in the City of San Francisco?

"A.—From eighteen hundred and seventy to the present time. The balance of the time I resided in Sacramento.

"Q.—What is your official position?

"A.—Supervisor from the Eleventh Ward, city government.

"Q.—Do you know anything about hospitals in this city?

"A.—I am Chairman of the Hospital Committee.

"Q.—Are there any Chinese in the hospitals?

"A.—In the hospital, one; in the almshouse, one; and in the pesthouse, thirty-six. I think eight are afflicted with leprosy, and most of the balance with venereal diseases.

"Q.—Do the Chinese contribute anything for the support of these persons?

"A.—Nothing whatever.

"Q.—What do they do with their sick and helpless?

"A.—I understand they are turned out to die.

"Q.—Have you ever been through the Chinese quarter of this city?

"A.—Yes, sir; several times.

"Q.—What is its condition as to cleanliness?

"A.—It is in a miserable condition—a disgrace to the city and to the police for permitting it; and to the health department, too, I think.

"Q.—In your opinion, what influence has the presence of this Chinese population on the morals of this city?

"A.—A very bad one, indeed. The women have inoculated the youth with diseases. The prices are so cheap in Chinatown that young lads resort there, and as a consequence have all sorts of venereal diseases. There are many cases of young men in the hospital, suffering from syphilis, contracted in the Chinese quarter.

"Q.—Have you ever seen any Christian Chinamen?

"A.—No, sir; I have not. I have been told that the Chinese each pay five cents a day for the right to be doctored free when sick; but should a Chinaman fail to pay his five cents, he must look out for himself.

"Mr. Rogers—You say a great many young boys are inoculated with these diseases; are many of them in the city institutions?

"A.—I think there are some, but a great many more are cured outside. A large number of dispensations are given and filled at the city institutions."

Now our wives and children have to pass through Chinatown every day. These Chinamen are all over the city, and all over the State. They go out into the country to work, and spread this disease everywhere. One of them cooks in your kitchen, and at night he goes down to these bagnios, associating with the lepers and prostitutes, and the next morning he is back in your kitchen.

I see that it is time for the committee to take a recess, and I will finish after dinner.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The Convention then took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and a quorum present.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. Section one and amendments are before the Convention. Mr. O'Donnell has the floor.

SPEECH OF MR. O'DONNELL—CONCLUDED.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman and my fellow delegates: I will only detain you a very few moments. It is only the importance of this issue that compels me to say a few words more. One of the most useful papers in the State, one that the people rely most upon, is the Call, and that paper says that "there is not a single house which does not contain at least one or two of these lepers." Mr. Chairman, listen to the language. Listen to the language of the most able man in San Francisco, and from the most truthful press in the State of California. They tell you that in every house in Chinatown there are cases of leprosy. It is sowing the seeds of death all over this State. That is the language; deny it who dare. There are gentlemen right around me here now that will tell you that there is over five hundred cases that they know of in Chinatown in the City of San Francisco.

MR. JONES. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a question of privilege. I understand from the speaker that he has been himself intimately connected with, and come in contact with, this horrible disease. That he has been daily mixed up with it, and that it may sleep in his system, and be communicated to other people. If that be so, I think it is the privilege of this Convention that they should have some guarantee against this thing cropping out on them seven years hence. That we ought not to be subject to the danger of contagion or infection here now.

MR. O'DONNELL. That exposes the ignorance of people. They don't understand that it takes at least five or seven years to come out on the system, and that it is only infectious when you get the pus or scale off the leper.

MR. JONES. We want the privilege of not having it come out seven years hence on us. We don't want it at all.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I hope you will protect me from the mouthpiece of these Six Chinese Companies. I want my rights guaranteed to me, and I will have it as any other member on this floor.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order. My point of order is that the gentleman is trying to mislead this Convention; that there are seven Chinese companies in San Francisco and not six.

MR. O'DONNELL. Oh, sit down.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from San Francisco will proceed.

MR. SCHELL. If the gentleman will allow me I would like to make a request.

THE CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from San Francisco yield the floor?

MR. O'DONNELL. For a moment I do.

MR. SCHELL. I desire to ask a favor of the gentleman. It is this——

MR. O'DONNELL. Now, I will not yield the floor. I want to go on.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is this: that the gentleman has a picture there upon his desk which has been exhibited here, and is being exhibited at the present time. I believe there is a penal statute now in force in this State which says that it is against the law, and makes it a crime, to exhibit an obscene picture. I consider that an obscene picture.

MR. O'DONNELL. Do you know the meaning of the word obscene? [Laughter.] Any other gentleman want to ask me any questions?

MR. SCHELL. If the gentleman wants to know what I consider a synonym of an obscene picture, I might state it.

MR. O'DONNELL. I don't want any information whatever. If I do I will go to some other source. Mr. Chairman, this is what a missionary knows about Chinese:

"The Rev. G. Benton, a missionary who has just returned from China, lectured Monday evening, in one of the halls of the Metropolitan Temple, on the subject of 'The Chinese must go.' He said that all missions to convert the Chinese have and will prove failures. It was time that philanthropists should cease giving money for such purposes. The Chinese are unexcelled in smuggling; they have no credit system in their business; they are such cheats and liars that they do not believe in the existence of truth. The filial duty so often attributed to Chinese is a myth; it is only practiced for self-aggrandisement and after the death of the parent. They are inveterate thieves; they are cannibals. Their officials are more corrupt than an Indian Agent or a School Director. They have no ambition; their only aim is to eke out a scant and miserable existence. Their ignorance and superstition is astounding. Their overrunning this country is only a matter of time, unless prompt legislative action is taken. They believe there is more gold in California than we can use. He did not understand how so many Chinese came to California. He thought the Six Chinese Companies were a ring who advanced them their passage money, and had a 'fat thing' in extorting money out of their wages."

That is from a missionary.

MR. TINNIN. What paper does the gentleman read from?

MR. O'DONNELL. I don't know. There is the article; I didn't notice the paper.

MR. STEDMAN. It is the Chronicle. [Laughter.]

MR. O'DONNELL. There is the article. I did not notice the paper. We have got to incorporate into this Constitution a law to prevent this class from landing. Self-preservation is the first law of nature. Charles O'Conor says that revolution is the highest law of the land. [Laughter.] The right of revolution is the highest law of the land. The people of the State of California, through their delegates to this Convention, have sent you for the purpose of putting an organic law into this Constitution to protect them against this pestilence. The State demands it and asks it of you. First, the Supervisors of San Francisco ask you to give them a little authority by which they could be able to remove this pestilence out of the heart of the City of San Francisco. They have come out before the people and say to the workingmen and to the citizens of the State of California, "Wait until the Convention adjourns." I don't know when that will be, but they will have patience I hope. That is what we say to them. We will get a clause into that Constitution to prevent them from landing here. Now here is our Attorney-General of the State. He says to me, "I would like to get an opportunity of testing this Chinese question." He says, "I know it is a State right, and we can prevent Chinamen from landing here." That is the language of the Attorney-General of this State. I hope that we will give him the right to test this question.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not going to detain you but a few moments. I only want to refer to the record. Maybe you are all familiar with it. According to the Custom House report, from eighteen hundred and sixty-eight to eighteen hundred and seventy-six—eight years—we have drawn from that country over one hundred thousand Chinese. Over one hundred thousand of these Chinese have come to this coast for the last eight years. Now, think of that! They have taken from this State two hundred and forty million dollars. Do you wonder at the cry of hard times in the State of California? Take one hundred and fifty thousand of these Chinese in this State, getting wages from a dollar to a dollar and a half a day, and out of the dollar they send seven bits to China. Over ninety thousand dollars leaves the State every day and goes to China, never to return. They do not pay taxes sufficient to pay for the criminals that are in the State Prison. They pay nine thousand dollars taxes altogether. Out of some six hundred in the State Prison they have two hundred and ten. They took from this country twenty-five million dollars in two years—eighteen hundred and seventy-one and eighteen hundred and seventy-two. They took twenty-one million dollars three years out of this State, never to return. Then you talk about hard times. I am going to warn these capitalists. Wait until you see—their own little children will be running to their fathers crying for bread. The white man cannot get work, cannot get labor to earn the bread for his little children. I tell you it is not in the nature of a white man to stand up and see his little children starve to death. Here is the gentleman from Sonoma. What did he say? Why, he says one Chinaman is worth a dozen tramps. Who make them tramps? It is the likes of him, who employs Chinamen in preference to the white man. It is the likes of him that are spreading this disease of leprosy throughout the country—employing these Chinamen, letting them go all around, and spreading this disease.

Another article, and then I will close. Mr. Chairman, I will read from the report to the California State Senate of its Special Committee on Chinese Immigration:

"The committee addressed circular letters to each County Assessor in the State, and from returns received, the assessed value of all property, real and personal, assessed to Chinese in this State, does not exceed one million five hundred thousand dollars. The rate of State taxes is sixty-four cents on each one hundred dollars in value, and if the whole tax was paid, the revenue derived by the State from the property tax laid upon property held by Chinese would not exceed nine thousand six hundred dollars.

"The assessed value of all the property in the State is, in round numbers, six hundred million dollars.

"The total population of the State is about seven hundred and fifty thousand, and the Chinese population is more than one sixth of the whole.

"The Chinese population, amounting to at least one sixth of the whole population, pays less than one four hundredth part of the revenue required to supply the State Government."

Now, think of that, Mr. Chairman and my fellow colleagues! We have on this coast over one hundred and fifty thousand of these Chinese, and we have over four hundred million of them nearer to us than New York. You say they cannot get ships here to run us out. In less than six months they could overrun this country. This report says again:

"The real cost of the State of keeping one hundred and ninety-eight Chinese prisoners in the State Prison is not less than twenty-one thousand six hundred dollars per annum, a sum twelve thousand dollars in excess of the whole amount of the property tax collected from the Chinese population of the State."

They do not pay one cent tax to the support of their criminals. The number of criminals is five hundred and forty-five in the State Prison. Out of that number two hundred and ninety-eight are Chinese. Now, just think of that, Mr. Chairman! And they tell me that we cannot prevent their landing here. With all we have before us, I cannot believe that out of the one hundred and fifty wise men of the State of California but what they can get an organic law to prevent them from landing here, or get rid of those lepers that are here. Five hundred and fifty-four are in prison in the State Prison, and two hundred and ninety-five are Chinese! Now, I say that the majority of those that come to this country are criminals of the blackest dye. I say, Mr. Chairman and my fellow delegates, we ought to give our children the same right to live as our parents gave us. We can only do that by banishing from their presence the contaminating influence of the coolie.

In regard to the females, you know as well as I do what they are. [Laughter.] According to the testimony of the committee, the report of the special committee, in eighteen hundred and seventy-six, they say that they are all prostitutes of the vilest kind.

I thank you kindly for your attention, and I assure you I would not have detained you one moment longer than I thought was necessary. I am satisfied that we do not understand the evil of the Chinese element that are in the State of California. I know it. No man believes any such a place as Chinatown ever existed in the world without he has been there. Why, we have had Health Officers in San Francisco for eight years to come out and acknowledge that they never were within two blocks of Chinatown. They themselves said that they were not, and never had been within two blocks of Chinatown, and were the Health Officers of that city. That was his evidence before the Commissioners, and that was Dr. Schorb. He said that he had been Health Officer for ten years, and had never been within two blocks of the center of Chinatown. There were nine of them, and the first house we came in contact with we saw three lepers. The next house, in Bull Run Alley, we found fifteen. One of them, when he was removed from his cot, part of his limbs fell apart. Now that is a fact, Mr. Chairman! [Laughter.] You may laugh, but I tell you it is a fact. When they seen that portion of Chinatown, and seen these lepers, they only went in a few houses, they said they had seen enough. But they say, "What can we do? We have got no authority." Now, I ask you, in the name of humanity, to give them the authority to remove these people. I went round with a petition, to get the names of the most respectable citizens of San Francisco. They did not wait; they signed their names, and their partners' names. They insisted that their partners' names should be placed there on that petition, which was to isolate the Chinese, or colonize them outside of the City of San Francisco; to remove them out of the city. I called on over five hundred of the merchants, and every man placed his name to that petition, for the purpose of colonizing them outside of the city. There you see that the best citizens of San Francisco have prayed, in the name of humanity, for you, my fellow colleagues, to do something to remove this curse from the land. Every merchant of the five hundred that I went to put his name to that petition to colonize them outside of the city. There is a good many members here that know this to be a fact. I carried that petition before the Board of Supervisors. I went to them with a decision from the Empire State of the Union, a decision of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, declaring that a house in a filthy and crowded condition was a nuisance which could be abated by having the house torn down. I asked the citizens, and urged them to keep the peace, and wait for awhile and see if they cannot get some redress from the city officers. You all know that in that case, where there was forty people crowded into a house forty by seventy, divided into small departments, and in a filthy condition, the citizens tore the house down and chopped it into pieces. The owner of the property went to the Supreme Court, and the result was that the Supreme Court decided that the citizens had a right to destroy that house. It is known to every man in the City of San Francisco that they have a right to put the torch to that Chinatown; to tear every house to the ground and chop it to pieces. But they wait with patience. They demand of you to give them redress; to stop this disease spreading throughout the land.

And now, my fellow colleagues, we have the Attorney-General of this State right here present, and I want to repeat what I did say when he was not here present. He said that he wanted an opportunity to test this question, and I tell you he is able to do it. And why not give him an opportunity? Why not compel the Attorney-General to test this question, and save the streets of San Francisco running red with blood? I know it will, because there has been a conflict, and, my fellow delegates, they will allow no vessel to land inside of that harbor. And I tell you that the military of this State is in the entire control of that class of men that will, if you do not delegate this State the power to check it, rise in a mass and check it themselves. They say it must be done, because self-preservation is the first law of nature. You see the city crowded with men walking around the streets, praying to get a chance to work and save their children from starving. And these men who employ Chinamen they say, "We don't want you, we can get a Chinaman for fifty cents a day." Do you suppose that these men, that have made this country what it is, are going to stand up and see their little children starve to death? No! For me, if I was a working man and could not get employment to earn food for my children, before I would see them starve I would take the first one of these capitalists I met by the throat and tell him to give me money to save my children from starving. If you don't give the work to the white class of people, how can they rear their little children or prevent them from starving? Why, I sat here in this hall, where I suppose the greatest body of intellect that was ever in a hall before in the world, is assembled, and I heard one of these men say—what? He says that these men will not work; that they are tramps. Who made them tramps? How were they made tramps? It has been repeated here that while they were making a fight for their country and for their flag——

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman has rehearsed almost this identical speech, and I think one rehearsal is sufficient. He is out of order in repeating.

MR. O'DONNELL. That speech will do to repeat every hour of the day to sensible men. I am surprised to see the Chinese Six Companies speaking through so many mouthpieces on this floor. After consulting several eminent lawyers I prepared a minority report on the Chinese. I approve of a good many sections of the majority report, but I want to get a clause of this kind in the Constitution:

"No alien of Asiatic descent shall ever be eligible to American citizenship, nor carry on any trade or occupation in the State of California, nor shall they be employed on any public work within this State."

I also wish to add this to section one. Thank you kindly for your attention.

RESOLUTION.

MR. MURPHY sent up the following preamble and resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, Leprosy is a very dangerous and fatal disease, and is both infectious and contagious; and, whereas, Dr. O'Donnell has publicly asserted that he does not know but what he himself, on account of his intimate professional connection with the lepers of Chinatown in San Francisco, is afflicted with the disease; therefore, be it Resolved, That in order to preserve the health and save the lives of the numerous statesmen, future Governors and Congressmen, comprising this Convention the said Dr. O'Donnell be quarantined and isolated, and that a portion of the gallery be set apart for his use and benefit.

[Laughter.]

MR. INMAN. I move it be adopted.

MR. STUART. I offer this substitute——

THE CHAIRMAN. The resolution is out of order.

MR. STUART. I wish to offer this as a substitute.

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. Chairman: What Dr. O'Donnell has said about leprosy being a fearful disease is true, but I see that he has caused a great deal of alarm in this body. The gentleman from Mariposa has left, and a great many other gentlemen have left, through fear. I wish to say that according to high medical authorities in the United States, and Great Britain, and in Continental Europe, leprosy is not considered a contagious or infectious disease. It is considered a hereditary disease, transmitted from parent to child, as scrofula is transmitted, sometimes slipping a generation, and then attacking a second or third generation. I make this explanation to quiet the fears of members of this body, for I begin to think that even the delegation from San Francisco would hardly dare to return to their homes; and also to come to the rescue of the delegate, that he may not be expelled from this body.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I did not intend to take any part in this debate, and have not now prepared myself to do so except with a few authorities, hastily collected. I am not going to read all these books, so I hope the gentlemen will not take their leave. I am not going to discuss the question of leprosy either, nor the question of the bad influence of the population that is under discussion here upon the people of this State. It seems to me to be time wasted to attempt to prove anything that is so well understood. Hardly an individual in this Convention would argue or believes but what the statements upon this question as they have been proven to this Convention, are in the main true. The question for us to determine is, what can be done about it? and that is all the question there is in it. It is for us to determine how far it is advisable to go, and how far our powers extend in that direction. Now, sir, I think it a good plan occasionally in this body to return to the landmarks that are to guide us; and I wish to read again, as it has been read here before, a part of section one, of article six, of the Constitution of the United States, for I think it has an immediate bearing upon this question:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

Now, sir, if there is a Constitution of the United States in force, if there is a treaty made in pursuance of the provisions of the Constitution in force, it is binding upon the people of the State of California, and we cannot do anything to break it. We can only have our action to agree with the provisions of that treaty. We must take this position. Anything outside of that is treason; and we are not here for that purpose. Now, sir, let us see for a moment two provisions here in that treaty in regard to the provisions of which we are discussing at the present time. In a section preceding the one which has been read here, it touches upon that same question, and it says:

"The United States of America and the Emperor of China cordially recognize the inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance, and also the mutual advantage of the free immigration and emigration of their citizens and subjects, respectively, from the one country to the other, for the purposes of curiosity, of trade, or as permanent residents."

Now, following that comes the provision that subjects of the Government of China who come to this State, or this country, shall have the privileges and immunities that are enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nations. These are the plain provisions of the treaty, and a treaty that we cannot abrogate. Now, it is maintained here, that under the provisions of the Constitution and the rulings of the Supreme Court, we can prevent the people of that country from coming into the State. It occurs to me, sir, that that provision of the Constitution of the United States which says that "the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby," settles that question. A treaty must hold until it is proved unconstitutional. It was that very thing that called the Convention to bring forth the present Constitution of the United States—the idea that the States had a right to govern their own commerce. I refer, gentlemen, to the 9th of Wheaton's Reports, page 224. I merely cite this for the purpose of getting at the facts. It says:

"For a century the States had submitted, with murmers, to the commercial restrictions imposed by the parent State; and now, finding themselves in the unlimited possession of those powers over their own commerce which they had so long been deprived of and earnestly coveted, that selfish principle which, well controlled, is so salutary, and which, unrestricted, is so unjust and tyranical, guided by inexperience and jealousy, began to show itself in iniquitous laws and impolitic measures, from which grew up a conflict of commercial regulations, destructive to the harmony of the States, and fatal to their commercial interests abroad.

"This was the immediate cause that led to the forming of a Convention.

"As early as seventeen hundred and seventy-eight the subject had been pressed upon the attention of Congress by a memorial from the State of New Jersey; and in seventeen hundred and eighty-one we find a resolution presented to that body, by one of the most enlightened men of his day, affirming that 'it is indispensably necessary that the United States, in Congress assembled, should be vested with a right of superintending the commercial regulations of every State, that none may take place that shall be partial or contrary to the common interests.' The resolution of Virginia, appointing her Commissioners to meet Commissioners from other States, expresses their purpose to be, 'to take into consideration the trade of the United States, to consider how far a uniform system in their commercial regulations may be necessary to their common interests and their permanent harmony.' And Mr. Madison's resolution, which led to that measure, is introduced by a preamble entirely explicit to this point: 'Whereas, The relative situation of the United States has been found, on trial, to require uniformity in their commercial regulations, as the only effectual policy for obtaining, in the ports of foreign nations, a stipulation of privileges reciprocal to those enjoyed by the subjects of such nations in the ports of the United States, for preventing animosities, which cannot fail to arise among the several States from the interference of partial and separate regulations, etc.; therefore, resolved,' etc."

There was the necessity, and there was one of the things that brought about the Convention to frame a Constitution.

Now, one word in regard to the case that was cited by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers. The case was that of Houston vs. Moore, in 5th Wheaton, page 48. It seems to me that the conclusion drawn from this case is not warranted by the case itself. It seems to me a fair construction to put upon the opinion delivered in the case, to take the whole opinion in connection with the fact that is passed upon. Now, the case was cited here to prove that we had a right to exclude these people from coming into the State, and that the jurisdiction of the State would extend to them. The case was one, as stated in the opinion, where there may be, perhaps, concurrent jurisdiction in the case. The State of Pennsylvania had passed a law that any person, an officer or private in the militia, who should refuse to come out and serve on a requisition from the President of the United States, should be subject to certain penalties. The case was carried up on the point that the statute of Pennsylvania providing penalties in such cases was unconstitutional; and the case was decided that the statute of Pennsylvania was constitutional. And in the decision, Justice Story (I read from page 48 of the fifth volume of Wheaton's Reports—the case of Houston vs. Moore) says: "The Constitution containing a grant of powers in many instances similar to those already existing in the State Governments, and some of these being of vital importance also to State authority and State legislation"—it was essential that the State be authorized to bring out the militia, and also that they should affix penalties in case they refused to come out; so that, in this case, both the authorities had the right to call out the militia, the State for its own defense, and, upon the requisition of the President of the United States, for the defense of the whole country—"it is not to be admitted that a mere grant of such powers in affirmative terms to Congress does, per se, transfer an exclusive sovereignty on such subjects to the latter. On the contrary, a reasonable interpretation of that instrument necessarily leads to the conclusion that the powers so granted are never exclusive of similar powers existing in the States, unless where the Constitution has expressly in terms given an exclusive power to Congress."

Now, that is the case here. The Constitution has, by the declaration that "all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land," said that the authority rests entirely with Congress in a case of this kind. I think that question cannot be decided upon any other ground. We must be bound in our action in this Convention by the Constitution of the United States, and by the treaties that have been made under it. Now, this is the question: "How far can we go under these provisions?" This report, if we take it as a whole, will carry us, in my judgment, far beyond that. We shall be authorized under the Constitution of the United States to exert the police power of this State to control these people when their presence here is inimical to the good and welfare of the State. We have the right to exert that police power. When we have done that, we must rest the case with the authorities of the United States. They must be made to see the great trouble that is brought upon this country, and directly upon this State, by this large immigration of this population. Now, it will be our first duty to so present this case, in a calm, dignified, clear, and unmistakable manner to the powers in Congress that they may have the voice of this Convention speaking to them in all sober earnestness, putting the case as strong as it is possible, and at the same time with such dignity that it will have weight. When we have done that, it will be our duty to turn our attention to see what can be done within the State upon this question. This first section, it is said, does not mean anything. To my mind, it means a good deal. It says:

"The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legistature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

It may be said that we have that power, but this is a reaffirmation of this power in this Constitution which we are to present. The second section provides:

"Any corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises, and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

It is not so clear to my mind that we have authority to say that any corporation shall not be allowed to employ whoever it sees fit. It is a question in my mind, first with the corporations, and second with the treaty. The inhabitants of that country—and we must look this matter square in the face—are guaranteed by the treaty the same privileges and immunities as the citizens or subjects of the most favored nations. Article VI of the treaty says:

"Citizens of the United States visiting or residing in China shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation; and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions in respect to travel and residence as may here be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation."

That is the treaty; that is the paramount and supreme law of the land so long as it stands. Now, then, if we go to that country it is our privilege, in common with those who go there from other nations, to employ ourselves as best we may for our own interests, and if we are debarred the privilege of labor, or engaging in any kind of business, we are not upon the same basis with the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation; and it is the same with the Chinese. If they are allowed to come into the port and spread themselves over the State; if they are by the treaty to stand upon the same platform as do those who come from the most favored nations, we cannot debar them from the privilege of either labor or business without breaking that treaty in some point. The third section is:

"No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

I think we have that right. We have a right to say that they shall not be employed on any public works, either by the State, by the cities, or by the counties, because that work is under public control. I am in favor of that.

Section four I believe goes beyond our authority. It provides that "all further immigration to this State of Chinese, and all other persons ineligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, is hereby prohibited. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of this section by appropriate legislation." I do not believe we have that authority. I believe that if we should take that step we should go outside of our duty; and I do not propose to lend my vote, or my voice, or my influence, to take this Convention one step beyond its constitutional bounds. We are pledged by the oath we took at the opening of the Convention to support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California. We are not here to put in some kind of legislation that will be adapted to a modification of that treaty. That is not the purpose, and it is not necessary. Gentlemen argue that we should put them in so that if the treaty is modified we will have a provision in the Constitution that will allow us to do something. A treaty made by the Government of the United States does not need the State Constitution to carry it out. Whenever that treaty is modified, a modification of the treaty works itself out by the force of the constitutional powers that have made it, and we do not need a provision in our State Constitution to do it.

The fifth and sixth sections I am entirely opposed to. I need only to read them to show why:

"SEC. 5. No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution.

"SEC. 6. Foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to sue or be sued in any of the Courts of this State, and any lawyer appearing for or against them, or any of them, in a civil proceeding, shall forfeit his license to practice law. No such foreigner shall be granted license to carry on any business, trade, or occupation in this State, nor shall such license be granted to any person or corporation employing them. No such foreigner shall have the right to catch fish in any of the waters under the jurisdiction of the State; nor to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State; and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real estate to any such foreigner shall be void."

The seventh section has been by some included in their scheme, and by others entirely rejected. It seems to me that the first part of that section might as well be adopted. It is giving an official expression of the opinion of the people of this State to say that "the presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States, is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power." I would have it read, "by all suitable means within its power." Whenever that has been done, all has been done that we ought to do; all that we have a right to do. I do not propose to favor setting up the government of the State of California in opposition to the government of the United States. I do not propose to entertain or advocate, or assist anything that looks toward the doctrine of State's rights. I do not believe that we are ready to look a question like that in the face and welcome it. We have done enough in this country in that direction. We are to stand here and see to it, that whatever we do, we keep within the bounds of constitutional law; that we recognize our allegiance, politically, first of all, to the Federal Constitution, and next, to the Constitution of the State of our adoption. But when we have done that; when we have framed—as I think we shall—such a declaration as will be within the Constitution; that will give expression to our indignation at the result of this treaty, and to our hope that we may, by reason of the influence of this Convention, have some effect upon the powers at Washington. When we have done this, and have finished the other work that we were sent here to do, we will have performed our duty.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Chairman: I have a substitute to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Coolieism, serfdom, peonage, or slavery of any description, shall never be tolerated in this State. Chinese brought into this State, who are bound by contracts to labor for corporations, or other parties importing them, or who enter into such contracts here, are hereby declared to come under the designation of coolies, serfs, or peons, and their importation is prohibited, as similar in all respects to the importation of African slaves. All contracts made by such coolies, serfs, or peons, or which they may make, to perform service under bond for a specified time, are declared void; and such contracts shall be regarded as a penal offense, both on the part of the importer or contractor and the coolie, serf, or peon so imported, and shall be punishable with the full force of the law."

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Chairman: I rise, sir, not to attempt making a speech, which would be superfluous, after the able arguments presented by gentlemen here, but simply to say a few words on this Chinese question, which I regard as in every way the most important question before this body. Since the first anti-coolie agitation occurred in this State I have with voice and pen earnestly opposed the immigration of the Chinese, seeing, perhaps, clearer than others, the dangers ahead which threatened in the future. In eighteen hundred and fifty-two, when the agitation commenced, and when the cloud of Chinese invasion was no bigger than a man's hand, I believe its course could have been checked, if not entirely stopped, if the people, the public men of the State, had gone sincerely to work to do so. Mr. Chairman, I regret to say that the people neglected their duty, and the politicians did not act, because the people did not compel them to fulfill their duties. In eighteen hundred and fifty-two the cloud of the coming Chinese curse was no larger than a man's hand. Now it forms a black pall overshadowing the whole of California, and threatening untold dangers in the near future.

Mr. Chairman, my business has led me for some years past to reside in many different quarters of the State, from Mendocino in the northwest and Sierra in the northeast, to Ventura and Los Angeles in the south, and I assure you that the public sentiment of the State is all but unanimous as to preventing the future immigration of the Chinese. Now, Mr. Chairman, as to the legal aspect of the case I pretend to have little or no knowledge. The eminent legal gentlemen in this Convention ought certainly to be able to devise some means of preventing the increasing evil of this obnoxious immigration. I tell you, Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the Convention, the people of the State demand earnest action at our hands on this question. As sure as God rules this world, revolution will come, and come shortly—sooner than we may now think—if the Chinese invasion is not stopped by the power of law. An irrepressible conflict between Chinese civilization and white civilization is at our doors. I fear it will only be settled by blood-letting. It will certainly be settled in no other way, if we sit here supinely and take no action, such as the people demand. I do not believe that because of the infernal centralization of power which is at work at Washington, that we cannot do anything. The people will take the matter into their own hands.

Section four I will support. It goes to the point. It says that "all further immigration to this State of Chinese, and all other persons ineligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, is hereby prohibited. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of this section by appropriate legislation." Self-preservation demands this action. Hungry men know no law. Hungry men who will not see their wives and children starving, will eventually break down the barriers of law, overturn everything that stands in the way, and cause indiscriminate ruin. Let us not invite this disaster. The amendment I offer I think is perfectly constitutional. If the Government of the United States has the power to prohibit the importation of African slaves, we have a sovereign right to prohibit the importation of Chinese serfs, as they are no more than slaves.

SPEECH OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: I did not intend to address the Convention upon the questions involved in this report, but I yield to the request of the Chairman of the committee and others to give expression to my dissent to the intent, the language, and if there is any difference in the expression, to the recommendation of this report.

For one I am disposed to listen to the voice of complaint and of entreaty; to hear the men who complain, respectfully and patiently, even when I believe their wrongs have not been endured, if I can only see sincerity in the complaint. It is difficult to entertain with respect statements of wrongs in which truth and error are recklessly or even ignorantly intermingled; but it is utterly exhaustive of all patience when one must see that the truth is quite disregarded, and that complaint is utterly unfounded.

Those who especially represent the workingmen here, I have no doubt, state their case truthfully, for truth is what the law of their nature compels them to believe. Not adopting all their opinions, I believe myself that the public opinion upon this subject is correct. I am therefore disposed to listen with great patience to expressions which violate propriety, which go beyond the occasion, and by senseless virulence darken counsel by words without knowledge, although they demand not respectful consideration, but only reproof and condemnation.

I have not had the opportunity of listening to the arguments here, excepting to those of the gentleman from Los Angeles, and those of others this morning. I have read the speech of the Chairman of the committee who presented this report. Judging, gentlemen, by what they say, giving their language its ordinary and necessary interpretation, it has come down simply to this: if a large body in this Convention, and apparently a majority of it, correctly represent the people, these crude, unreasonable, and absurd claims must be allowed, and be by us carried, not into effect, but into this Constitution. An open revolution agains all government is to be the effect. To give force to the argument we are distinctly told by one gentleman, and the idea is reiterated by others, that if this Convention does not yield obedience to these demands the streets will run with blood.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I rise to a point of order. I never said that there was any understanding to have a revolution, or anything of the kind.

MR. SHAFTER. I quote the language. One gentleman from San Francisco said that "the streets would run with blood," and the gentleman himself said that he believed it would "only be settled by blood-letting." Blood running in the streets upon such a question and for the reason here avowed, is but revolt against the law, which assumes the proportion of levying war against the government, which is treason within the definition of the Constitution.

I am not disposed to treat such ebullitions with any very great seriousness. Whether they are indulged in for the purpose of satisfying the particular constituency these gentlemen represent, or whether they are the result simply of febrile excitement, or are merely to be attributed to a desire for oratorical display, they equally invite commiseration and oblivion.

While I will exercise the forbearance to utter no threats in return, I may permit myself to say that when constitutional law has no longer any force in this State and country, when ignorance and violence shall undertake to rule us, it will become necessary to possess our souls in patience to endure the consequent disorder, or to provide those sharp remedies by which order and civilization vindicate at last the supremacy of their right.

It is undeniable that people of the United States, as represented by the General Government, are the final arbiters of this whole question of Chinese immigration. It would seem at least prudent to approach this tribunal respectfully, and in a manner winning confidence in our claim and in the justice of the tribunal to which we appeal.

I have addressed audiences in New England more than I can now remember, urging upon their consciences all those arguments which asserted that the extinction of slavery was necessary to the existence of republican institutions in this country. These arguments were all based upon the assertion of the substantial equality of man, and of the necessity for justice in the practical administration of the law. Satisfy them that your complaints are true, and that the remedies you propose are consistant with philanthropy, as well as statesmanship, and they will give you the power of this nation to your aid.

But no threatening will be listened to for a moment. The nation that put down the rebellion of eighteen hundred and sixty will ridicule, though it may be offended at, the bluster with which many indulge in relation to this subject. They will put their own interpretation of the Constitution, and they will see it enforced. Instead of such idle attempts as are presented by this report to enforce our views or our wishes, we can much more profitably turn our attention to possessing our Eastern friends with full information as to the true relations and actual effect of the Chinese upon our prosperity here in California. I believe our true condition is largely misunderstood.

It is true that most people who have visited us from the East, while they have seen the most favorable features of our Chinese population, have never seen their darker side. They have seen the Chinaman as a domestic servant, as an artisan, or laundryman, but never in the midst of those horrors which we group under the generic term "Chinatown." From what they have seen, they have returned home with the belief that the Chinese as domestics are superior to all others, and as workers are industrious, indefatigable and persevering, and accumulating the results of their labor by abstinence and economy. Now all of this is near enough to the actual fact to require the countervailing statement to be made. But what do we hear? Denunciation of an inferior race, of whose higher qualities we stand in mental dread; whose industry and economy are regarded as menaces to civilization and republican institutions. In my judgment, it would be a happy day for us all when the industry and economy of the Chinaman would be regarded by us as worthy of imitation. We belittle our objections in our allusions to his dress, not like our own, it is true, but at once warm, cheap, and convenient—qualities which ours often lack. We declaim and denounce him as a rice-eater, quite forgetting that rice is the food of more than half the human race.

The assertion of these accidental and trifling peculiarities has been attributed to us as the only, or at least some of our objections to the Chinese people, and as demonstrating the weakness of our position in regard to them. I have always thought it was a good thing to state your adversary's case stronger than he could himself, and then to answer it by one stronger than his own.

We may as well admit it, for it is true, the Chinaman is industrious and economical beyond the average laborer. He can do two thirds or three fourths as much as the average white man. It has been demonstrated that in heavy railroad work, selected gangs of Chinamen and Europeans, pitted against each other, the victory was repeatedly with the Chinaman.

He lives at about one fourth the cost of the support of a white laborer. I have had some hundreds of them in my employment, and assert that such as I have had, were as cleanly, as attentive to their business, as honest in the performance of their contracts—not as the tramps and wandering white man, but as the average laborer of respectable habits and character. Regarded as intelligent machines, with which a certain amount of labor is to be done, they must be regarded as a comparative success.

The same objections which are now made to them, fifty years ago were urged against, at least, some European immigrants. Differences of religion, of language, of dress, and habits, were in these people considered evidences of inferiority, and as indicative of danger. The true difficulty arises from the fact that between us and them there are vital differences of intellectual and moral character. The Chinaman, his life and motives begin and end in himself. There is apparently in him neither sincerity nor gratitude, and as to America, no patriotism. This country is to him foreign soil. In it he has no interest, and with its institutions he has no sympathy. In any tumult he is and will be an element of danger, and if his immigration is not checked, looking to the vast hordes which the Chinese Empire can pour out, he may become our fianl calamity.

Believing in, and not receding an inch from, the fact of the universal fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man, I have never supposed that to be all of truth, nor that it was the only maxim necessary for the administration of human affairs. Identity, demarcation, and isolation, are prerequisites to all governments. The precise relation of the individual man to the State must be prescribed, so that the mutual obligation of sovereign and subject may be alike known and enforced. The separation of the earth into distinct divisions demonstrates that nature itself denies the possibility of universal dominion. It is permitted to the philanthropist to distribute his gifts and expand his benevolence throughout the earth. Governments have rightful powers to exercise, and duties to discharge to their subjects, and to them alone. To foreign States and people they owe nothing, except observance of that code denominated the law of nations, and to that code obedience only so far as it secures their own safety and dominion. That governments have the right to exclude any and all foreigners from the country subject to them is undenied.

The treaties by which foreigners are allowed in this country directly admit this fact. When such treaties exist, all that remains to be done is to interpret and enforce their provisions. I do not intend to enter into any argument upon the labor question. The gentlemen who assume to be the only exponents of the economic laws controlling that topic will doubtless enlighten us in regard to them. The world and its statesmen have for a time covering a large part of history, exhausted themselves upon the relations of capital and labor. In the presence of the political economists who grace this chamber, I only permit myself to say, if all Chinamen are excluded from the State, other laborers must be found to take their place, and those laborers must work for a price which their employer can afford to pay, and such employer must pay such price and no more. How this is to be brought about I am not advised. How agriculture can bear the strain of increased cost of labor I, who have employed many hundreds of laborers, am utterly at a loss to conceive. Probably those who never did, or paid for a day's work on a ranch are better advised.

Waiving all such discussions, we have here only to consider the power of this State, which this report proposes to exercise by the exclusion of the Chinese. I deny that this power exists in this State, to any extent, or for any purpose. Passing by all questions raised or decided by the cases, what is the common sense view—that aspect which presents itself to non-professional minds? In intercourse between governments there must to each be attributed absolute sovereignty. There can be no claim, no interest, nor project affecting the relations of one nation to another, but of necessity must be the subject of agreement between them, and this can only be accomplished through the treaty making power. Neither party can enter into the question as to the power of the governmental agencies employed by the other, when their plenitude has been established by the certificate of the government from which they come. To hold any other doctrine is simply to say that the right which, by the law of nature, every man has to protect himself by prevision, by the aid of his servants and friends, is denied to a nation which is supposed to be "instituted among men," for the purpose of securing to the State as the embodiment of all individual rights, that very protection. The right or duty of inquiring into the powers of a foreign government as to conduct of its citizens, injuriously affecting another, was expressly denied by us in our late contest. British subjects, in violation of the law of nations, fitted out vessels for the Confederates. Our government, making claims for payment of damages, the British Government raised the question of responsibility, from the fact that by the alleged condition of their law the building and departure of these cruisers could not have been prevented.

Our reply was, that was a matter with which we had no concern. If British law was inadequate to prevent British subjects committing acts in violation of the law of nations, that Great Britain was directly responsible to us for an act of which its neglect was the cause. It might as well be claimed by the ship builders on the Clyde that this government should enter into treaty stipulations with them, as for the State of California to make the pretensions of this report. Nor is it at all probable that Great Britain will attempt to deal with California, Virginia, or Vermont, or make treaties with either as an independent nation.

A circumstance illustrative of the course of business as to treaties, fell within my own experience. I believe I drew, as Secretary of State of Vermont, the first extradition papers on the American side under the Webster-Ashburton treaty. Some criminals had escaped from Vermont to Canada, a requisition from the Government of Vermont upon the Governor-General of Canada was complied with, and the criminals returned. The next requisition of the same character was rejected, upon the ground that the United States alone possessed the power of requisition, and the demand had to be procured from the State Department at Washington. In all things relating to the formation and execution of treaties, the National Governments, who are the parties to them, can alone be heard.

That the present treaty with China is in no sense extraordinary, and that it involves on the part of the United States no unusual exercise of power, is apparent upon its face. It is, however, asserted here, by my distinguished friend from Los Angeles, that this treaty violates the Constitution of the United States. Such an assertion should be supported by the most direct demonstration. The language of the Constitution and of the treaty is before us, in what consists the conflict? Point it out.

The features of the treaty complained of are essentially the same as those with other nations. Are all these treaties void? and has the Legislature and people of this nation, during their whole existence, been mistaken in the exercise of the treaty-making power? Those who make this assertion should at least point out the conflict they allege.

The fact is, the Constitution says nothing at all about the extent of the treaty making power. It takes the term "treaty" as one, the significance of which was thoroughly comprehended among mankind. A fact in human government existing from the day of Lot and Abraham to the present moment, and the comprehension of which term was as universal as language itself. All the Constitution undertakes to do is to place the power of making treaties in the President and Senate. The power is designedly withdrawn from the people and the States, and lodged in those whose lofty office and intelligence separate them, as far as possible, from popular heat and the notions of the hour.

That this power of exclusion or admission of foreign peoples was exclusively in the possession of the United States, was admitted by the provision of their Constitution which forbid its exercise as to negroes before eighteen hundred and eight. Unless the National Government possessed this power there could be no propriety or force in this provision.

The United States Supreme Court is the tribunal in which all questions, arising under treaties, must be finally decided. When so decided, all State tribunals must adopt and act upon such decision.

This has been often affirmed by that Court, and such necessarily results from the nature of the subject.

It is said, in this report, that Chinamen should be forbidden to own real estate, to fish in public waters, to carry on business, or to be employed by any corporation, or do any work for the public, and that this may be done without violating any provisions of the Burlingame treaty.

That treaty says: "The United States of America and the Emperor of China, cordially recognizing the inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance, and also the mutual advantage of the free immigration and emigration of their citizens and subjects respectively, from the one country to the other, for the purpose of curiosity, of trade, or as permanent residents." This is a general declaration of principle.

It says, that the right of the Chinese to immigrate into California, to change his home and allegiance, is as truly "inherent and inalienable" as life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness are declared to be, in our Declaration of Independence.

Under this principle Chinese would have been eligible to citizenship, but for a subsequent express exclusion from that privilege.

With this exception, under their treaty, the Chinese stand upon exactly the same ground as does the Frenchman, the Irishman, or the German.

Not only were they, in their advent here, considered here of right, but they were treated to distinguished social attentions. Festivals were held in their honor, attended by the highest officers of the State and National Government. As late, I believe, as seven or eight years ago, Chinese were invited to take part in our national festival commemorative of the principle that "all men were created equal;" and riding in the processions, occupying a distinguished place, the merchant and Consular agents undoubtedly admired our institutions, and that justice and courtesy taught by Confucius over two thousand years ago, "not to do to others what you would not have others do to you." This State not only exhibited these courtesies to the Chinese, but it made them extremely useful. While the foreign miners' tax was assessed in terms upon all foreigners, it was collected substantially from the Chinese alone. Hundreds of thousands of dollars so collected went to feed the extravagance, or to pay the debts of the mining counties, and of the State.

This exaction was held ultimately to be in violation of our treaty obligations. Of a kindred character was the tax imposed upon the Chinese for the privilege of fishing, all of which, I believe, was stolen by the Collector upon constitutional grounds. While agreeing fully with the purpose to rid ourselves of this immigration, it seems to me that our past violation of our treaty obligations should lead us to avoid future ones. But I read again from the treaty:

"Citizens of the United States visiting or residing in China shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nations; and reciprocally, Chinese subjects visiting, or residing in the United States, shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nations."

Now, what are the reasons why Chinese cannot hold real estate in California? The reason assigned is, they cannot become citizens; and therefore the proposed provision confining the right to hold real estate to such foreigners as are eligible to citizenship is a proper one. My first thought was that this could be justified, but I now, after reflection, am convinced that such notion is erroneous.

Treaties must have a free general interpretation. Even close construction demands that all necessary or convenient incidents shall follow and accompany the principal right.

As the Chinese are to reside here, they must have all ancillary rights as to property necessary to make life desirable. If we can prevent his owning a house in which to reside we can prevent his leasing one, or even a spot of ground upon which to pitch his tent. He is not to be hired, and as he is forbidden to carry on a business, he must simply, after exhausting his present means, become a burden upon the charitable; and when charity is exhausted, starve. This is not what is meant by these stipulations. The Chinese stand upon the same ground that citizens of this country do in China, or that citizens or subjects of any other nation do here. All other foreigners have the right to buy and hold real property, to work, and earn their bread by the sweat of their face. Why should not these men have, under this provision, the same privileges as others, within the express terms of this treaty?

It cannot be otherwise than the right to reside carries with it the right to house and home, and the right of labor to support them.

In case of the adoption of the doctrine of this report, the Chinaman might well say: "You do take from me life, when you take from me the means whereby I live."

As to the prohibition of the employment of the Chinese upon public works, I consider it so far doubtful that I shall vote for it, leaving the question for its final solution to the Courts. It is said, if these provisions do seem of doubtful propriety, still, in deference to popular feeling, we ought to pass them, and leave the national judiciary to determine the questions they create. Undoubtedly such appeal to the Courts will be had, and it will become the duty of the law officers of the State and nation to give their aid in the premises. This fact, however, that our errors may have no evil consequences, is no reason with me for consenting to an act which I can clearly see is in violation of a treaty stipulation into which we have entered.

I have had repeated occasion to call attention to the fact that the dogma of States rights seems the controlling consideration with many gentlemen upon this floor. I do not wonder that those who were brought up with the idea that the States have paramount authority—that as to every governmental act which is to be exercised within their separate limits the State alone is to be ultimately obeyed—should support this report. But I think it behooves those of different education and opinion not to suffer the desire of securing a great good, to do the great wrong of attempting to nullify the paramount law. The attempt will only recoil upon ourselves, and disappoint and delay the fulfillment of our wishes. Cases have been cited here clearly establishing the law, declaring that this whole subject is a matter exclusively of national concern.

These decisions have received for answer declamatory effusion, garbled citations from dissenting opinions, and the obtrusion of personal opinion here, from those whose claim to the character of jurists and statesmen has been acquired in the pursuit of mechanical employment, or peddling goods, or in digging holes in the earth—employments honorable in themselves, but having no connection with nor relation to judicial learning. Among all the cases cited here one important one seems to have been overlooked. It has always seemed to me that the decision to which I allude was of the highest consequence, and I have never heard of its having been overruled. I allude to that which was finally rendered and put upon record at Appomattox Court House, in eighteen hundred and sixty-five, when Chief Justice Grant stood there, with all his Associate Justices, to decide this question of States rights, with a hundred thousand executive officers around him. I think that decision ought to end this discussion. It pushes by the lawyer, the jury, the civil codes, and at once denying all other jurisdiction, settles all question by the law and the force of arms. The ultimate force of government, the inexorable will guided by the highest intelligence of the people, declared that the Constitution of the United States, and the treaties made in pursuance thereof, are the paramount law of this land from this time forth. The moral grandeur of this spectacle by far exceeds that of the ratification of the law by the twelve tribes on Ebal and Gerizim. No new code was created, but one was reiterated and declared, and from the doctrine of that enunciation there is no appeal. Yet, astonishing as it may seem, men are still found who seem to have slept for the last twenty years, to have become torpid, with the thought about half expressed, about the rights of our sovereign State upon their life, and after their long sleep awake to the same line of thought, and to finish its incomplete expression.

The gentleman from Los Angeles reads us the dissenting opinion of Judge Taney as to the doctrine of the so called Passenger cases. Notwithstanding that Judge's admitted ability, I am unable to see what force is to be attributed to his views, when they are directly in conflict with the prevailing opinion in those cases. Those cases decide distinctly, as do the California cases, that laws affixing conditions to the immigration of foreigners to this country are regulations of commerce within the Constitution of the United States, and that by that instrument the power to create such regulations is conferred exclusively upon Congress.

There was a difference of opinion as to whether the States would have a right to regulate commerce between themselves and with foreign nations, in case Congress failed to exercise this power. The prevailing opinion held that in no case could a State exercise this power, but there was no diversity of opinion as to the paramount jurisdiction of Congress over this matter. As to this view, Judge Taney holds that the power is not concurrent, and that if it is lodged in the General Government the States do not and cannot possess it.

The result is one of necessity, that whether a rule regulating immigration is established by Act of Congress or by treaty, the State is excluded from meddling with such immigration.

Pressed with these considerations, their force is attempted to be diverted by alleging that when the Chinese arrive here they can be so dealt with by what is miscalled the police power as to make life intolerable, if not impossible to them, and thereby effect their practical exclusion. It seems to be supposed that this class of persons—whose right of residence is assured by treaty, whose status is fixed upon the same basis as that of the most favored nations—are rightfully to be subjected, under police regulations, to exclusion from convenient residences; are to be prevented from earning their bread by prohibition of all employment, by exclusion from trades, from working the mines, from fishing in public waters, and, in short, from everything but the sacred right of starvation and death; and after death he is further pursued by police regulations relative to sepulture and the custody and removal of his bones.

Now, there is no doubt that when any person has arrived here—has become one of our people—that he is subject not only to police but to all other laws which concern his personal character and conduct. It is in the power of this State to confine and to extradite criminals, insane persons, paupers, and the diseased, in any way which the exigencies of the case may require; but this cause must relate to and inhere in the individual as a distinct personal characteristic. I may further say, the existence of this cause ought to be judicially ascertained; at least, it ought to be declared by some authority as the result of personal examination. When a Chinaman attempts to land from the ship which has brought him here, the proposal of this report is to compel his departure from the State, not on the ground that he is a criminal, a pauper, or any of that class of persons, but that he is a Chinaman, or rather that he is one ineligible to citizenship. The treaty does not recognize the right to become a citizen as determining the right of residence. Indeed, it expressly negatives it, by at once allowing residence and forbidding citizenship.

Passing from the treaty, the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations rests with Congress alone. The only question which has ever been seriously made, is one to which I have already adverted, are persons within the scope of this provision?

This question has been often decided, and it is a subject of congratulation that the decisions in this State follow those of the nation. In The People vs. Raymond, 34 Cal. R. 492, Crockett, J., gives the opinion:

"After a careful examination of the numerous cases which have been adjudicated touching these provisions of the Constitution, we consider the following propositions to be definitely settled on reason and authority: 1st. That the term 'commerce,' as employed in that clause of section eight which is under discussion, is not to be construed as limited to an exchange of commodities only; but includes as well 'intercourse' between foreign nations, and between the several States; and the term 'intercourse' includes the transportation of passengers. 2d. That whatever doubt may have existed as to the power of the several States to regulate commerce between their own citizens and foreign nations, as with the citizens of other States, in the absence of legislation upon that subject by the Congress of the United States, it has never been seriously questioned, that when Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional right, does legislate upon that particular subject, its authority is permanent and exclusive, and its enactments supersede all State legislation on that subject. Any other rule than this would lead to perpetual conflicts between the State and Federal Government, and would prove to be utterly impracticable. 3d. That if the State has not the constitutional power, by means of direct legislation, to regulate the intercourse of its citizens with foreign nations and with the other States, it cannot accomplish, by indirect methods, what it is forbidden to do directly. These propositions are sustained by the following authorities: Gibbons vs. Ogden, 9 Wheaton R. 1; Passenger cases, 7 Howard R. 283."

The learned Judge proceeds to cite a large number of authorities; having done so, he examines them in detail, and states the result with such exhaustive precision and force as renders further comment unnecessary.

A later California case, that of Ah Fook, 45 Cal. R. 402, decides that the police power extends only to those who are personally objectionable, and must then only be exercised upon at least quasi-judicial examination.

In the case of The State vs. The Steamship Constitution, 42 Cal. R. 578, the Court clearly state the right of the State to exclude diseased or dangerous persons, and distinguishes such legislation from that which "operates upon persons who at the time of landing are neither paupers, vagabonds, or criminals, or affected with any mental or bodily infirmity, but on the contrary are perfectly sound in body and mind, and in every way fitted to earn a support."

The Court further sums up by the declaration "that a statute which obstructs the entrance into this State of persons who are neither paupers, vagabonds, or criminals, or in anywise unsound or infirm of body or mind, is not an exercise of the police power of the State, in any just sense of that term." Proceeding in the course of argument the Court submits to and adopts the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, that "whatever subjects of this power—to regulate commerce—are in their nature national, or admit of one system or plan of regulation, may justly be said to be of such a nature as to require exclusive legislation by Congress." The case then proceeds to hold that any law of this State, statutory or constitutional, which attempts to subject any class of immigrants to regulations to which they are not subjected elsewhere, and such as are not imposed upon such immigrants by any Act of Congress, is void.

It doubtless is in the power of Congress to pass a law which shall disregard the Burlingame treaty. This ought, according to the comity of nations, only be done after all proper efforts have been made to modify or annul it, as to its objectionable features.

If such efforts fail, then upon reasonable notice as to time, we shall have the moral as well as the lawful power to exempt the nation, States, and people from all observance of it. Of the necessity and justice of this act we are the sovereign judges.

If China—not amenable to our tribunal or judgment—is dissatisfied, she will be at liberty to assert her claims under the treaty in any way she may select.

This is the result which the law of nations and of nature alike allows. When there is no arbiter, no tribunal to which both parties may be compelled to appeal, the arbitrament of force alone remains. It is the first remedy which Blackstone indicates the right of the injured party to defend and redress himself. This right pertains to nations as to individuals. When such contest ensues, whatever may be said about the justice or expediency of the contest, the subordinate States and the whole people are equally justified under the act of their general government. As the General Government is bound to protect its citizens in all contests in which it engages him, it must have corresponding power over and duties to discharge as to all subjects of controversy, and to take such course as to them as it shall be advised. When piratical vessels were fitted out in the Clyde to destroy our commerce, as already stated, we held Great Britain responsible for the damages. When McLeoud, in the time of the Canadian troubles, burnt the steamer Caroline in Schlosser, a port of New York, he was committed and sentenced in a New York Court, and was redeemed from death only by the act of our General Government. Great Britain claimed that his act was in obedience to the command of his superior officer, and admitting it was an act of war, made reparation, apology, and satisfaction for the offense.

Suppose that we proceed to violate the treaty with China, and that Empire demands redress, is the General Government, as to its own treaty, going to turn China over to California for reparation? We are apt to speak of China with profound contempt, but it may be worth while to reflect a moment upon the power of the Empire of over four hundred millions of subjects, and of the inconvenience which might result if those hordes were precipitated upon us. Logically, our government should leave us to settle this contest arising from our act, to ourselves alone. Thus far I have endeavored to show that, first, we have no power over the subject-matter of this report; second, that if we had, it is unwise at this time to exercise it. I have now to call attention to the extraordinary acumen displayed in the particular language and intention of the provisions recommended.

I am here reminded of a saying of De Tocqueville forty years ago, that "in America the highest abilities are excluded from all public employments, as fully as though there was a positive regulation to that effect." This thought has been reiterated by many distinguished men.

But could they examine this report on the Chinese, they would be so astonished at the profound statesmanship exhibited, the clear appreciation of the Constitution, its high spirit, the clearness of idea, the full provision for all possible contingencies it displays, I am persuaded they would abandon their original opinion, and find here that breadth, that clearness, that profundity which would at once remove all fear and awaken a wondering admiration. The first splurge is as follows:

"The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

Here aliens of the dangerous classes are subjected to needful regulations. Why should not the native born scoundrels be subjected to like control? Not only those who are, but those "who may become" of that class are within the scope of this supervision.

Who may not become a pauper, mendicant, or invalid afflicted with disease under this clause, and that, too, without his fault? Because all of us may become thus unfortunate, are we to be now treated as worthy of action due to criminals in fact? It is not declared that those likely to become sick and diseased shall be dealt with, but that the whole of Adam's race, as they are, shall be thus subject. Who are "aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State." Who is to determine this matter? How is it to be determined?

A mere majority of the Legislature can, under this provision, expel any body or class of men disagreeable to them. I think the "presence" of democrats, or those likely to become such, is detrimental both to "the well-being and peace of the State," but it has never occurred to me that their exclusion is an act justifiable for that reason.

If this power of exclusion is to be conferred upon the Legislature, it should extend to the native born as well as the alien. As the greater sinner, the native deserves the severer rule and punishment. Unfortunately crime seems to be safe with us, at least the graver crimes, but they are committed not only by aliens, but by naturalized, as well as native born citizens. I am for applying the same rule to all. We have many among us who may appropriately quote the poetry:

> True patriots we,
> For be it understood,
> We left our country
> For our country's good.

Great as our inclinations may be to discriminate against these persons, we must recollect that they are not only here under the sanction of treaties, but they are here under the express protection of the Act of Congress, which secures to them every right of action and defense which belongs to the native born.

I have asked who are aliens "who may become" dangerous, and section seven attempts to answer the question:

"SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. It shall provide for their exclusion from residence or settlement in any portion of the State it may see fit, or from the State, and provide suitable methods, by their taxation or otherwise, for the expense of such exclusion. It shall prescribe suitable penalties for the punishment of persons convicted of introducing them within forbidden limits. It shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for their removal without the limits of such cities and towns."

Foreigners ineligible to become citizens are declared dangerous to the well-being of the State, and their exclusion is demanded.

It is true that the dangerous classes may be excluded by some unknown process, but here a special class is directly operated upon. The only question is, is he a Chinaman? for that nationality alone is excluded from citizenship. The treaty puts them on the ground of the most favored nations. It moreover declares that they may become residents. The Act of Congress, and the amendments to the United States Constitution, put them on exactly the same ground as any "other person," except as to naturalization; yet it is attempted by this section to oppose and repeal every provision established by the nation for the protection of "all persons" alike within their jurisdiction. Language fails to properly characterize the folly and atrocity of this attempt.

The good sense and grandeur of the attempt is further exemplified by section six.

"SEC. 6. Foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to sue or be sued in any of the Courts of this State, and any lawyer appearing for or against them, or any of them, in a civil proceeding, shall forfeit his license to practice law. No such foreigner shall be granted license to carry on any business, trade, or occupation in this State, nor shall such license be granted to any person or corporation employing them. No such foreigner shall have the right to catch fish in any of the waters under the jurisdiction of the State; nor to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State; and all contracts of conveyence or lease of real estate to any such foreigner shall be void."

The strong objection to the above is, that it is incomplete. Foreigners who are eligible and do not become citizens ought to have the "right" to be sued without, I will say, the liability or infliction of making a defense; and they should be further prohibited as known "vagrom men," from bringing any action whatever. An alien enemy, or insane person, or one not possessed of good moral character, or not well affected towards this government, is as ineligible as the Chinaman.

What grand pickings this provision will give to our profession. When this Constitution is adopted I propose to return to the practice of at least constitutional law, and see if I cannot sequester some few millions belonging to these unfortunate souls that the new Constitution proposes to turn over to robbery and spoliation.

But the section is as eminent for its consistency as it is for its sense. This foreigner cannot be sued. The independent American citizen cannot make the Chinamen pay his bills, nor for his transportation, except by direct force. I beg to suggest, we must get rid of the provision that no man can be deprived of his property "except by due process of law," for here is a case where the law cannot even be invoked. The ardor of our profession is not only checked, but it is stayed in the very presence of the swag, by the provision that "any lawyer appearing for or against them, or any of them," is immediately debarred. At first sight I thought this was an open attack of the workingmen upon lawyers; that debarring lawyers from this class of litigation they intended to constitute themselves (being as far removed as possible from that description of persons) the peculiar guardians of these unfortunate people. The provision, however, that the Chinamen can neither sue or be sued disposes of this idea. No, he is in a civilized community, coming here upon our invitation, to bear caput lupinum upon which any one may knock who will.

It is difficult to see the sense of the further restriction of this section. The rigbt to reside, to fish, to work, to lease or buy lands, is of no moment, when the law has denied all redress to those in whom these rights are violated.

"SEC. 8. Public officers within this State are forbidden to employ Chinese in any capacity whatever. Violation of this provision shall be ground for removal from office; and no person shall be eligible to any office in this State who, at the time of election and for three months before, employed Chinese."

This section, while in form it is a prohibition to the officers of the State, and declares a penalty to those not officers, but desirous of becoming such, is in text and effect directed to and is equivalent to debarring Chinese from employment. It has already been seen that this cannot be done. This seems to me to be a very small business. I have had in my employment natives of most European countries, of the isles of the sea, including the Cannibal Islands of the South Pacific. Why do you not exclude the Kanaka, the Fiji, the Malay, or the criminal from Australia. No reason against the Chinaman but presses with greater force against these people.

Some persons like them in considerable numbers are necessary in California. Cooks, domestics in country houses, in lumbering or ranches, in mining or other camps, cannot be obtained among women, who for moral and physical reasons cannot safely and properly be called upon for such service.

The descent into this trifling, this interference in the minute details of domestic life, which this provision involves, is ridiculous. There are low, menial services, for which this people are from their indifference well fitted.

I am asked if Americans can hold real estate in China? I am not informed upon that point. I believe the English are so allowed, and if so, under the treaty, we ought to stand on the same ground. Certainly most foreign nations, and perhaps all, have that privilege with us. Upon arriving in California, in eighteen hundred and fifty-five, I found a difference in our treaties with other nations; under them some foreigners could hold and transmit real estate here, and some could not. I addressed and published an article upon that subject, and drew a bill, which was passed at the session of eighteen hundred and fifty-six. That Act remains in force, and fully secures to foreign heirs transmission and inheritance of California estates.

If it is thought desirable to exclude Chinese from holding real estate, and I think it is, I hope the treaty will be made to so declare. The common law of England excluding all foreigners from ownership of lands was founded upon a just jealousy of foreign influence, may perhaps be extended over those so distinctly separated from us in intellectual constitution as are the Chinese.

Other objections are made to the Chinese, that they are dishonest, filthy, etc. In these respects they are certainly a very singular people. I have said, as to fulfillment of contracts, I have found them honest up to the average, and yet paradoxical as it may seem, in almost every way they will contrive some little sneaking advantage, laughable for its simplicity, and for the utter indifference they exhibit when exposed. So shameless are they when detected as to lead one to suppose that at least in their dealings with us they are incapable of distinguishing right from wrong.

I have found them scrupulously cleanly in their person beyond the white laborer, but in their aggregation, filthy beyond description. I have been through Chinatown with Eastern gentlemen and ladies of the highest social position, and have marked the horror which the life exposed created with those who had not been hardened by familiarity. Prostitution, passing through every stage of lust, had become bestialized in every quality a manifestation of which human nature was capable. Contagion and filth beyond description; dens filled, one which we entered, say twelve by fifteen feet, with fifteen persons, some of them white, in it, in every stage of stupefaction from opium, down to a sleep where breathing was intermitted and life apparently was ebbing to its close. And tripping with lifted garments through this noisome scene, shrinking from the touch of the beings there, were those who typified American civilization—the fair brow, the pure eye, the white trembling lip. Who could fail to see that between these races there was a gulf as deep as that which separated Dives from the heaven he had lost. In looking at these, who could fail to exclaim: "Lord, why hast thou made all things in vain."

The complaints made here by delegates from San Francisco, especially those of Mr. O'Donnell, I have no doubt are fully justified by the facts. The condition of things which is alleged to exist, does so, I am persuaded, by the connivance of officials, who are especially charged with the duty to suppress these evils which they foster and protect. The Chinaman has money, and he has long since learned that official blindness is created by its touch. The foulness of Chinatown, its leprosy, and crimes, are as well known to the police as are the streets, and are sources of a large revenue to them.

Sad as is this picture, hateful and destructive to progress as is this presence, I do not think the evils at present existing are the worst we may have to endure.

The growth, culmination, and ending of governments and peoples seem to follow a fixed law. They struggle against difficulty, grow in mind, become cultivated, learned; arts, science, and moral character are attained; they become rich, luxurious, enervated, corrupt. When thus weakened they fall, because of want of vital force, or are overcome by exterior barbaric force. Barbarism is the end. To-day we have attained the second stage. We are comparatively cultivated and rich. We are even now showing signs of decadence. By a singular fatality we are confronted with this people with whom we parted six thousand years ago on the plains of Central Asia. They number nearly five hundred millions of people. They are fatalists, reckless of life and its expenditure. They are becoming possessed, and skillful in the use of arms. They are fast creating a navy superior to ours, and are apparently making phenomenal advancement in warlike power and skill. An English statesman has lately expressed serious apprehensions as to this people, and of the effect which its precipitation upon the outer races will produce upon human progress. I confess I share his views, and consequent fears. We are more exposed to a Chinese invasion than were the Southern European Empires when overrun and conquered by the Northern hordes.

China is more truly a storehouse of nations than was Northern Europe. I submit that any further change from the direction indicated is at least a factor worthy of serious consideration. In this view, it becomes not only doubly important, but it becomes a necessity to prevent this immigration—to give China no foothold here; and while I, for one, desire friendly relations with the Chinese people, I desire to shake hands with them across an ocean.

But as important as the attainment of this result may be, I am not willing to attain it by means which violate my oath to support the Constitution of the United States, nor to disregard a treaty made under its authority.

No necessity exists for any such procedure. Let the government at once propose a modification of the Burlingame treaty, such as we desire. If our overtures are not accepted, give reasonable notice of the abrogation of the treaty, and then proceed to such independent action as will at once furnish a remedy for the evils under which we suffer, and vindicate our right by the whole power of the nation.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

THE PRESIDENT announced the following as the committee under the resolution of Mr. Dowling, adopted on December ninth: Messrs. Barnes, Howard, and Dowling.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. CAPLES. I move that the Convention take a recess until seven o'clock P. M.

MR. STEDMAN. I move that the Convention adjourn.

The motion prevailed, and, at four o'clock and twenty-six minutes, the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

SEVENTY-SIXTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Thursday, December 12th, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

PETITION—MECHANICS' LIENS.

MR. GORMAN presented the following petition, signed by a number of mechanics and others, citizens of California, asking for a provision in the Constitution for a lien law:

To the President and members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned respectfully represent that the practical working of the present legislation, and decisions of Supreme Court based thereon, regarding the rights of mechanics, material-men, and laborers to a lien for their labor and material furnished, is such that those who in a measure depend upon such law for just protection fail in nearly all cases to obtain it, because of the inefficient working of said law.

Wherefore, we pray you to declare in our organic law the right of every mechanic, material-man, and laborer to a perfect lien on the thing whereon his labor has been expended, or for which his materials have been furnished.

Moreover, we would state that we would be satisfied with amendment number one hundred and sixty-seven, introduced by Mr. Van Dyke, on October tenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and read and referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, as follows:

"SECTION —. Mechanics, material-men, artisans, and laborers of every class shall have a lien upon the property on which they have bestowed labor or furnished materials, for the value of such labor done and materials furnished, and the Legislature shall provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens."

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

CHINESE MEMORIAL.

MR. HARRISON. Mr. President: During the early days of this session, a resolution was introduced by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, providing for a memorial to Congress asking for the abrogation of the Burlingame treaty. This resolution was referred to the Committee on Chinese, where it now remains, no action having been taken on it. I do not propose at this time to enter upon any discussion of the great Chinese curse, as it affects the people of the State of California, nor to refer at any length to the keen anxiety with which our people are looking to the deliberations of this body, as well as to all other properly constituted authorities of the land, for relief. I am safe in asserting with confidence, however, that there is not a constituency represented on this floor, nor I think any gentleman representing a constituency in this body, who do not thoroughly sympathize with and heartily indorse every legitimate move looking to the extinguishment of this accursed coolie competition, and the removal from our midst of these hateful Mongolians—a race whose characteristics have been so completely summarized in the pithy saying of the distinguished Senator from Nevada: "Their vices corrupt our youth, and their virtues starve our men."

Recognizing the unanimity of the people of our State upon this all-absorbing question, I am anxious, Mr. President, that no unnecessary delay shall intervene in the drafting and forwarding of this memorial. Congress is now in session, and the present being a short one, the session will have more than half expired before the memorial can be laid before the body, even with the most complete expedition on our part; and I am anxious that whatever of good may result from it, will not be thrown in jeopardy by any delay on the part of this Convention in not getting it before Congress in time to enable it to receive some consideration from that body.

Personally, however, I am not disposed to anticipate from this memorial any great result. The evident disposition of that part of the United States lying east of the Rocky Mountains, upon this Chinese question, is so utterly at variance with any sympathy or understanding of the prostrate condition of our labor on the Pacific Coast, that it would be idle to hope it. Already that great and insidious septarchy, the Chinese Seven Companies, with its insatiate commercial greed, seeing where their labors to retain and increase their foothold in our country will be most effectual, have transferred their efforts to the East, and the journals of that section are teeming with editorials and leaders extolling the industry, honesty, virtue, and benefits of the Chinese as a race, attributing to their presence in our midst advantages, and with a maudling sentimentality, as false in fact as it is pernicious to our future, setting up the principle that, according to the underlying ideas which created our government, we can no more deny or resist this Chinese immigration than the immigration which comes to us from any of the oppressed nations of the earth.

There, also, we see another step—the naturalization and conversion into citizens of several of the representatives of this non-assimilating race—viewed with distrust, and accepted almost without dissent, by these same journals, which reflect in a great measure the sentiment of the people of that section, while on the other hand the honest and indignant wail of our people here, who feel the blight, is denounced as incendiary vaporings of demagogism.

The President of the United States, in his annual message to Congress upon the general condition of the country, wholly ignores the question, and his lukewarmness, or I might better say indifference, to our situation, is typical of the general sentiment there. This seems to be a strange and anomalous attitude for the General Government to stand in with reference to a part of the country; but that is by no means a new one on the part of the National Government with reference to the Pacific States, the history of the past legislation, where the interests of these States have been in question, will amply prove.

Still, although comparatively hopeless of any successful issue, I am anxious to have the memorial speedily forwarded. It will perhaps be the most thoroughly authenticated protest upon the Chinese question yet submitted from this State, and will place the State squarely on the record, and the General Government will be forced into the acknowledgment of the fact that if the Burlingame treaty is the great bulwark which protects this accursed Mongolian invasion, and during the existence of which we can do nothing to relieve ourselves—which possibilities, I desire to say here emphatically, I in no manner admit—then unless the General Government openly ignores the material and social future of this coast entirely, the Burlingame treaty "must go."

For myself, sir, the paramount and overriding question which brought me to a place in this body, and the all-absorbing idea, which I am free to say, tinctures all of my positions upon every question which is or has yet to come before it, embodied in that familiar and honored slogan, now, and from the first, the inherent spirit of the party of which I am proud to be called a member, "the Chinese must go!" And upon this rock I will build my faith, and neither the gates of h—ll or the Burlingame treaty "shall prevail against it."

I therefore offer the following resolution:

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Chinese, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, providing for a memorial to Congress aking for the abrogation of the Burlingame treaty, be and they are hereby directed to report the same, together with the memorial contemplated, at their earliest convenience.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco.

The resolution was adopted.

NOTICE.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I give notice that, to-morrow, I will offer an amendment to Rules Fifty-six and Forty-three, to read as follows:

Amend Rule Forty-three so as to read as follows:

RULE NUMBER FORTY-THREE—TIMES A MEMBER MAY SPEAK.

No member shall speak more than twice on any one question, nor more than fifteen minutes at any one time, without first obtaining leave of the Convention, nor more than once until other members who have not spoken shall speak, if they so desire.

Amend Rule Number Fifty-six so as to read as follows:

RULE NUMBER FIFTY-SIX.

The rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole, so far as they may be applicable, except that the ayes and noes shall not be taken, but the previous question may be moved; provided, that when the previous question is sustained, it shall only apply to the amendments then pending, and other amendments may be offered to the section.

Laid over for one day.

RESOLUTIONS—LAND AND HOMESTEADS.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption are required to report to this Convention immediately, or give sufficient reasons for not doing so.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. There is every reason in the world why this resolution should pass. The work of that committee was finished over four weeks ago, and they have never done any business since. The propositions were passed upon, and a majority of them voted down—the main propositions on the land question. The minority of that committee, consisting of four members, have their report ready, and are waiting to report. Now, there is no excuse in the world for this delay on the part of the majority. It looks, indeed, as if there was a deliberate intention to stifle this land question. I don't say that it is so, but I say it has every appearance of it; therefore, I demand immediate action, so as to know what excuse the majority have for not reporting. I am ready to make a minority report now at any moment, Mr. President; and if it is the intention to stifle this land question, we have a right to know it, so that we can make it hot for these bloated landholders. This is a question that must not be stifled, for the minority are going to be heard before this Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege in regard to the report in the Record-Union, of the few remarks I made yesterday. I have to apologize because my voice is not of the best, and I am well aware that it is very difficult to hear amid the great confusion in this hall. I am reported as having said that the Chinese could become citizens. I never entertained any such notion. I never said such a thing. I argued that under the treaty, the Chinese could become permanent residents, because it was included in the treaty. I said they could have become citizens like the people of any other nationality, had it not been for the tail end of the section, which says they cannot become citizens. I am charged again with saying that the same objections could be urged against the Irish. I do not charge the reporters with intentionally misstating it; I have no idea that they did. I never said any such thing, however. I never thought any such thing. I meant to say that the Irish, forty years ago, were objected to upon the ground of cheap labor. No man ever heard me utter a word disrespectful to the Irish on account of their nationality, and nobody ever will hear me utter a word. The Irish are entitled to the same respect as people coming from any other part of the world, and no more. They stand upon the same ground of equality, and I spurn any man's assertion that I have in my heart any feeling towards them because of their nationality, because I never did have. I was brought up an old line-back, yellow-bellied abolitionist, and I believe they stand upon an equality with me and all other men, and no higher.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I sat close by the gentleman when he was speaking, and I am satisfied that he had no idea of slandering the people of any nationality.

MR. BARNES. I have a resolution.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan, is before the Convention. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I will state that the Chairman of that committee is not present. I believe he is absent on account of sickness. That is my understanding. Now, sir, I have no opinion as to there being any disposition whatever to stifle that report, as stated by the gentleman from San Francisco. I have looked myself, time and again, to see something upon this subject, and I have been a little surprised that the report was not made. But I have concluded it was because this Convention has abundant business on hand, and consequently there is no demand for the report, because no action could be taken. Whether that is the correct reason or not I cannot say. But I do think it is unfair and uncalled for to hold out the impression here that there is an effort upon the part of that committee to stifle and suppress action on this question. That committee went through with its business, and acted, as far as I could see, very fairly, discussed the measures fairly, and arrived at its conclusions, and I doubt not the Chairman will make his report in good time. But to pass a resolution here requiring an immediate report, when the Chairman is sick in his bed, I think would be wrong on the part of the Convention, and I hope the resolution will not be passed. I am convinced that the report will be made in good time, and I do not see any use in pushing the committee. The report could not be taken up at this time anyway. I hope the resolution will be voted down.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I believe Mr. Smith, the Chairman of that committee, is sick. I know he has not been well for some time. I think he is sick in bed. I move, therefore, that the resolution be laid on the table.

Carried.

FUNERAL EXPENSES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I wish to offer a resolution:

WHEREAS, The expenses incurred in the funeral obsequies of Honorable J. M. Strong and Honorable B. F. Kenny amount to the sum of six hundred and fifty-one dollars, and the Controller of State has declined to allow the same to be drawn from the appropriation for the expenses of the Convention;

Resolved, That an assessment of four dollars and forty cents be levied upon each of the members of this body to pay said expenses; and that the Sergeant-at-Arms be and is hereby authorized to collect from the State Treasurer all the warrants to be issued by the State Controller for the per diem of members for the current week, and deduct therefrom the sum of four dollars and forty cents per member, and apply the same to the payment of said funeral expenses.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: These expenses were incurred, as they properly should have been, and it was supposed that the Controller of State would permit them to be paid out of the funds of this Convention. He has declined to do so for reasons which are satisfactory to himself. In view of the circumstances, and that these expenses have been incurred by order of this Convention, and for a most worthy purpose, I think there will be no objection to the resolution. I know this question was submitted to the Supreme Court, in some shape, I know not exactly what; I only know the effort failed.

MR. ROLFE. Did I understand that the Supreme Court has decided this matter?

MR. BARNES. I understand the Supreme Court decided that it was not a case for their interference. That the application could not be made to them unless it passed through a certain groove. They said they could not determine anything about it. They fired the legal committee out of the Court-room and adjourned sine die.

MR. WELLIN. Is it not the fact that the case was presented in such a bungling manner that the Court could not hear it? I have been so informed.

MR. BARNES. I have no doubt that this committee would have succeeded if my colleague from San Francisco (Mr. Wellin) had been Chairman of it. My only regret is that he was not added to the committee to settle the question.

MR. HILBORN. Who were the committee?

MR. BARNES. I do not propose to indulge in any personalities in debate. [Laughter.] I prefer to leave this committee to the merited oblivion into which it has fallen. But we have lost our chance, and this money ought to be paid. Now, sir, it is too much to ask of the Sergeant-at-Arms that he shall take a subscription paper and run around to all the members. It is simply a matter of business, and this money ought to come out of all alike. Let him collect all the warrants, deduct the amount from each, and that will be the end of it. The money must be paid.

MR. BARRY. The necessity of the resolution is so obvious I trust it will be passed without anything more being said about it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

It was adopted unanimously.

MEMORIAL TO CONGRESS.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I have a memorial which I wish to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

To the President of the United States, the Senate and House of Representatives:

The Constitutional Convention of the State of California, duly assembled and now in session by authority of law, by a unanimous vote of said Convention, the names of whose members are by themselves signed to this memorial, respectfully represent:

That, for many years past, large numbers of Chinese have come into our State, until the number of adult male Mongolians now exceeds one hundred and twenty thousand. That they are an inferior race of men, incapable of assimilation with the American people, or of becoming citizens of the American nation. That their laws and customs, which they bring with them and ever retain, differ from those of any civilized people; that they have no families; that they are the pauper element of a nation, where want is the rule and plenty the exception, and where this class of people, like other animals, seek for food only, and have no other ambition; that the presence in such large numbers of this class of servile laborers is closing every avenue to free white labor, and rendering it impossible for white laborers with families to live in this State; that civilization is more expensive than pauperism, and hence civilized white men cannot compete with Mongolian labor; that the Chinese are semi-nomadic, living in the open air, or in tents and outhouses, except in our large cities, and have few of the expenses which white men are subject to; that in a large degree the Chinese came here under contract with some of their own people, who control——

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move that the further reading be dispensed with, and that it be referred to the Committee on Chinese.

MR. ESTEE. I would like to have it read. The Secretary seems to have some trouble with my writing, and if the Page will return it to me, I will read it.

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is to dispense with the reading, and refer it to the Committee on Chinese.

Lost.

MR. ESTEE. I will read it myself. [Reads.]

To the President of the United States, the Senate and House of Representatives:

The Constitutional Convention of the State of California, duly assembled, and now in session by authority of law, by the unanimous vote of said Convention, the names of whose members are by themselves signed to this memorial, respectfully represent that for many years past large numbers of Chinese have come into our State; that the number of adult male Mongolians now here exceeds one hundred and twenty thousand; that they are an inferior race of men, incapable of assimilation with the American people, or of becoming citizens of the American nation; that their laws and customs, which they bring with them and ever retain, differ from those of any civilized people; that they have no families; that they are the pauper element of a nation where want is the rule and plenty the exception, and where the chief aim is to obtain food; that the presence, in such large numbers, of so many servile laborers is closing every avenue to white free labor, and rendering it impossible for white laborers who have families to live in this State; that civilization is more expensive than barbarism, and hence civilized white men cannot compete with Mongolian labor; that the Chinese are semi-nomadic, living in the open air, in tents and outhouses (except in large cities), and they have few of the expenses to which white men are subject; that in most instances the Chinese come here under contract with some of their own people, who control their labor while here; that very many of the males are criminals, and at least nine tenths of their women here are prostitutes; that every ship coming into our ports from China is freighted with this class of laborers; that the further influx of this plague is viewed with profound alarm by every class of our people, and if allowed to continue will cast a blight upon one of the fairest portions of our country; that the health, the peace, and the general prosperity of our people depends, in a great degree, upon the early inhibition of this class of immigration.

We, therefore, most earnestly pray that the present treaty with China be so modified as to prohibit the further immigration of this class of Chinese laborers, or that such laws be passed as will restrict such immigration.

MR. ESTEE. I ask to have this referred to the Committee on Chinese. I had it drawn up before the resolution was presented this morning; hence I wanted to have it read and referred to that committee.

MR. BARNES. What does the gentleman propose to do with this document? I understood that this subject was left to the Committee on Chinese.

MR. ESTEE. I wanted it read for this reason: I am most anxious to have some memorial go to the power that can control this matter, representing the unanimous voice of this Convention; and I believe it would be unanimous. It has been now some three or four weeks since this matter came up, and when it did come up I supposed the memorial would be presented, and it was with a view to hurrying it up that I have presented this.

MR. MILLER. There is no sort of objection to this being referred to the Committee on Chinese. We will hold a meeting and present a memorial, whether it will be this one or some other one I cannot say until I hear the views of the members of the committee. There are several already drafted. We will take the best one and bring it before the Convention to-morrow. There can be no objection to this one being referred to the committee to be considered along with the others.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the memorial will be referred to the Committee on Chinese. It is so referred.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. Section one and amendments are before the committee.

SPEECH OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. Chairman: When Mr. Seward declared that there was an irrepressible conflict between opposing and repugnant forces on one margin of the continent, he uttered a truth which, in this latter day, finds its repetition on the other. Now, as well as then, and here as well as there, there is an irrepressible conflict between opposing and repugnant forces. That conflict there, eventuated in a holocaust of blood. What may be its issue here? He alone, who holds the destinies of nations in the hollow of His hand, can determine; and, sir, unless relief be had, the portents, signs, and omens of the time point to a sanguinary future. You cannot mingle two races where there is no compatibility and no power of assimilation.

When Sparta overcame the Helots, it was to conquer, and coerce, and turn them into slaves. There was no possible assimilation, and the Helots soon perished from the face of earth. When the white man set his foot upon this continent he drove the red man from his path into the Western wilds. Before the advancing march of civilization the red man still receded, until now the relics of that fated race are swiftly passing to those happy hunting grounds which lie beyond the boundaries of time. Here, again, there was no compatibility and no power of assimilation. And now, as in the past, when the uncounted and innumerable hordes of Asia are pouring in upon us, there is no compatibility and no power of assimilation. The stronger will absorb the weaker, and the result may follow, if relief is not obtained, that the white race will succumb to their Mongolian invaders. There can be no union, no coalescence, no commixture, because the Chinese belong to a different people from our own; different in character, in culture, and in creed; different in the diversity of the distinctive races of the globe; different to the extent that they stand, in all respects, contrasted and repugnant.

The Chinaman is a barbarian. His habits, instincts, and pursuits are entirely alien to the nature and character and customs of our people. He bows down before an idol, and rejects the worship of the true God. Even in the frantic fanaticism of the French Revolutionists there was something manlier than this, for they deified the noblest faculty of man—the reason—and not a thing of wood or stone. He is cruel, treacherous, and revengeful. He has lived under a dominion entirely foreign to our institutions, and subject to a law antagonistic to our own. He holds in our midst an imperium in imperio. And, sir, even in his demise he is hostile to the land wherein he was an alien sojourner, for, while in life he exists in hostility to our customs, in death he shrinks from the pollution of our soil. Sir, the two races are absolutely irreconcilable in their nature, and cannot coexist. The one must absorb the other, and this absorption will be governed by the force of numbers. Unless stayed by the hand of power they will continue to come in countless myriads, such as no man can number.

In that physical convulsion of the globe wherein the waters that covered the Desert of Sahara lost their equilibrium, while they receded from the shores of Africa, leaving dry their sandy bed, they recoiled on the American Continent and formed the Gulf of Mexico with its tremendous flood. Below those waters lies a vast domain, exuberantly rich, where cities might have grown; where smiling farms might have spread broadcast o'er the soil; where peace and plenty might have reigned. But now it has become absorbed beneath those overwhelming waves. And, sir, by a significant analogy, there is a human tide, immense and measureless, now threatening to recede from the confronting shores of Asia, and sweep up upon this State in a resistless tidal wave, and utterly submerge our institutions and our people.

This is no fancy, no fiction, but an indisputable fact, unless we stay the inroads of this mighty, moving mass.

When the Goths and the Huns, from their northern fastnesses, beholding the Romans steeped in luxury, and enervated by excess, poured down in solid phalanx upon the imperial city, what was the result? The civilization of centuries sunk speedily into barbaric night. We are told by the Chairman of the committee that the Empire of China is overcrowded; that she needs relief for millions of men; that she cannot escape to the West, and she must therefore escape to the East.

Now, sir, if that be true, and it is proved to be, what is to hinder her from hurling in on the Pacific Coast this great human mass, more resistless and more devastating than the avalanche which rushes down the mountain side? Is this impossible? Not at all! Is it improbable? Nothing is more likely to occur. I believe that unless we adopt means to resist it, we will be compelled to accept the alternative of our extinction as a nation. From that overcrowded empire, to withdraw two hundred millions of its populace would only give relief; to force them upon us, would only involve national annihilation.

Now, sir, while such is the evil, the question arises, what is the remedy? The learned gentleman from Marin, in an able address to this Convention, endeavored to demonstrate that we were powerless to act, except through the medium of Congress. That gentleman enforced his proposition with his usual ability and skill. He was plausible in illustration and forcible in speech; but, sir, I think his reasoning is fallacious when strictly analyzed. I think he has made use of arguments that, while they were plausible and almost convincing, did not embody true principles, but were calculated to mislead and to deceive. Sir, his proposition is that there can be no restraint except such as Congress may afford, and it is based upon the idea of the existence and binding effect of the Burlingame treaty. I shall not discuss this question upon the broad, abstract, and constitutional ground, but simply direct my attention to an investigation of it in the form in which it here presents itself. Can we take any action in this body that would seem to militate against the provisions of the treaty with China which entitles the subjects of that empire to a residence among us? Without pausing to discuss the collateral privileges which the right of residence involves, I do not hesitate to say that, in my judgment, we can and ought to take some action tending to suppress this evil here and now.

When general principles exist in law, they are commonly of universal application, but when one of these comes in conflict with another, the one or the other must give way.

Congress has the power, under the Federal Constitution, to make treaties with other nations, and that power is unlimited. But on the other hand, each State has the power to regulate its own internal affairs, and to control its police system, which power is also unrestricted; and when these two come into collision, one must of necessity yield to the other.

In Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, that learned commentator says, page five hundred and seventy-two, of the police power of the State: "On questions of conflict between national and State authority, and on questions whether the State exceeds its just powers in dealing with the property and restraining the actions of individuals, it often becomes necessary to consider the extent and proper bounds of a power in the States, which, like that of taxation, pervades every department of business, and reaches to every interest, and every subject of profit or enjoyment. We refer to what is known as the police power. The police of a State, in a comprehensive sense, embraces its system of internal regulation, by which it is sought not only to preserve the public order and to prevent offenses against the State, but also to establish for the intercourse of citizen with citizen those rules of good manners and good neighborhood which are calculated to prevent a conflict of rights, and to insure to each the uninterrupted enjoyment of his own, as far as is reasonably consistent with a like enjoyment of rights by others."

"This police power of the State," says Redfield, Ch. J., in Thorpe vs. Rutland and Burlington Railroad Company, 27 Vt. 149, "extends to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort, and quiet of all persons, and the protection of all property within the State. According to the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas, which being of universal application, it must, of course, be within the range of legislative action to define the mode and manner in which every one may so use his own as not to injure others." And again: By this "general police power of the State persons and property are subjected to all kinds of restraints and burdens, in order to secure the general comfort, health, and prosperity of the State; of the perfect right in the Legislature to do which, no question ever was, or, upon acknowledged general principles, ever can be made, so far as natural persons are concerned."

It seems then that while, on the one hand, the Burlingame treaty gives the Chinese the right of immigration to an unlimited extent, on the other the police power of the State gives it authority by protective legislation, to suppress or modify this right when it endangers the peace, the health, or the welfare of our citizens, or threatens the subversion of our institutions.

Now, sir, if this be so, then the question arises, how far can we assert the prerogative of the police power of the State to abate this monstrous evil without trespassing on the domain of Federal authority? We hear gentlemen talk upon this floor as if the passage of these sections, by this body, would be an act of rebellion. Are they not familiar with the fact that nearly every State within the Union, without intending resistance to Federal control, has enacted laws which the Supreme Court has afterwards declared unconstitutional and set aside? Was the passage of such laws rebellion? If so, New York has rebelled, Massachusetts has rebelled, and divers other States. No, sir, we have not reached the point of rebellion. We have no desire to rebel; nor do we advocate the so called doctrine of States rights.

We are a loyal people, and if we should pass a law here, or adopt an article in this Constitution, or a section therein, or resolve upon a measure that tends to repress this intolerable evil—this curse of Chinese immigration, as it now exists—and, if in the future, the Supreme Court of the United States should decide our action to be unconstitutional, when that ultimate tribunal so decides, then, and then for the first time, will we have reached the crisis at which resistance is rebellion.

It is now but the testing of our legal rights. It is now but an attempt to lawfully accomplish what we may, within the limits of our constitutional restraint, to protect ourselves against the further inroads of this alien and barbaric race. It is intimated that the prevailing, or what is probably the legal sentiment, upon this floor, claims that we can do nothing to relieve ourselves. I do not believe that such a sentiment predominates, but if it does, it has no effect on my opinion. The bar of this State, including many of the most eminent among its members, were astonished at the decision of the Supreme Court in the Chicago Elevator cases, which involved the constitutionality of a law of the State of Illinois. If that law had been declared unconstitutional, could it have been said that the State was in rebellion? Or, if the State forebore to pass the law through fear that it might be pronounced unconstitutional, would not such a course have been analagous to that which alarmists among us now urge us to pursue?

Sir, these provisions of the Burlingame treaty were intended to have a general operation throughout the length and breadth of the United States. It was sanctioned by Congress with the intent and understanding that it would benefit the nation. It was believed at the time to be an act of public policy. But the fallacy and folly of that policy have been demonstrated to such a terrible extent that the doctrine of States rights is appealed to by many as a protection against its ruinous results.

Conscious as we are that these difficulties which have arisen were utterly unforeseen by Congress, should we not exercise the privilege to declare our sentiments upon the subject, and enforce our rights by legislation? Why, sir, suppose that the Pacific could be turned into a sea of ice and remain permanently such. Suppose that two hundred million of Chinamen should cross that glittering bridge and pour in upon us, to destroy our people and devour our land, would we be powerless to resist them because Congress had made a treaty that was suicidal to the nation? Would we be powerless to interpose resistance to the onward march of this devastating host? Or suppose—what makes the merely hypothetic sternly possible—that those insatiate invaders should employ their power and resources in constructing ships to an unlimited extent, until they literally bridged the Pacific with their navy, and thus obtained the means to force themselves upon us in an overwhelming swarm. Would we have no authority to repel them, until Congress could take, in our behalf, its slow and languid action?

Sir, the remedy ought to be adopted, and proportionate to the emergency, and I believe the Supreme Court, though maintaining the spirit of the Constitution, would be able to sustain such provisions, as in our prudence we might make, if those provisions be moderate and statesmanlike, as I desire they should, beyond the mere provisions of the first section, which is entirely nugatory, because the mere declaration of an abstract power existing in the State both heretofore and now. I believe the policy we are desirous to adopt ought to be considered by the Supreme Court of the United States, and any introduction of these or kindred amendments into the new Constitution of the State affords the only way in which they can be brought before the Court. What we desire is to relieve ourselves from an existing evil, now sapping the very foundations of our political and social structures, and prevent its indiscriminate extension. We desire to keep this Oriental outpour from coming in such streams upon our shores as to produce the same effect on us as the ferocious Danes wrought on the Saxons when they inundated England from across the sea. Something must be done by us, or some unconstitutional prophet will arise to stay this plague. Congress seems to be alike indifferent to our prayers and our tears. Nor will we ever be able to derive help from Congress, until we have first made an effort to help ourselves; a righteous, honest effort; an effort conceived in the spirit of legality, compelled by the sense of duty, and made in such a manner as will prove us true to the obligations of the Federal compact, and true to ourselves.

I firmly believe that Congress will aid us when it perceives that we are fearfully in earnest, and that we mean to help ourselves—as Horace says:

Si vis me flere
Primum tibi flendum est.

When the cartman stood by his wheel, in the mire, and prayed to Hercules to lift it out, the god replied: "First put thine own shoulder to the wheel, then I will help you," and Congress will no longer be indifferent or neglectful of the demands and claims of our people, after they shall have taken the stern initiation of action. If Congress should thereupon refuse to aid us, and the Supreme Court should decide that what we do is in violation of the Constitution, then we have no alternative remaining, save submission. But the hour of submission has not come, though the hour for action is at hand.

Sir, a new party has arisen in the State. It contains many agitators, many demagogues, many men who are selfishly seeking their personal advancement. But these are the mere scum upon the surface, while beneath lies a vast seething mass of human suffering. The strong man goes penniless to his home at night. He gazes on his tearful wife; he listens to his children's cry for their bread, until, in the excess of agony, with an aching heart and a bursting brain, he becomes savage in his instincts. In the wide diffusion of this misery, what wonder that the evidence of riot and of rapine is threatened, if this cause of the prevailing suffering, the Chinese curse, be not removed? The malcontent, groaning under a burden too heavy to be borne, is in no condition to consider fine spun constructions of constitutional law when his wife and children are famishing before his eyes. Who shall deny that, amid the general distress, a vigorous effort should be made in the halls of legislation to provide a remedy for the fierce malady that is consuming the vitals of the commonwealth? It is our duty to act in this emergency, and something must be done. The people are crying for relief, and their cry must not be disregarded.

SPEECH OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. Chairman: I do not desire to occupy the attention of this Convention at any great length upon this subject. The debate has already been lengthy, though by no means uninstructive. But the variations of opinion, as to what our right and powers are, seem to be very wide. One side holds that the State has complete power to remedy the evil from which we are suffering. The other class holds that we are utterly powerless, and can do nothing but supplicate at the doors of Congress for relief from this evil. Both of these opinions seem to be largely supported by the law and authorities which have been produced pro and con. I am inclined to think that we ought to go to the extent, if it be necessary to go so far, of giving the Supreme Court an opportunity of passing upon the issues here involved. I am first, therefore, in favor of section one, as reported by the committee.

"The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

Now, as I said, I am in favor of that section. Section two of the report provides as follows:

"Any corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises, and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

I am in favor of that section, but I want it changed in wording so that we will know exactly what it means. I want it amended so as to apply, co nominee, to the class it is intended to effect. I shall, therefore, move to amend section two, when that matter again comes up for consideration, as follows:

"SEC. 2. The Legislature shall pass laws prohibiting any corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, from employing or giving employment to any Chinaman or Mongolian, in any capacity whatever, within this State, under such penalties as may be prescribed."

I don't want to say aliens who are not capable of becoming citizens of the United States, because that is a matter of some uncertainty. It is true that one Judge has decided that Chinamen cannot be naturalized under the laws. That is Judge Sawyer's decision; and I believe one Judge in the City of New York has followed that decision, and denied the application of Chinamen for naturalization. But I am also aware, if the public prints are to be relied upon, that other United States Judges have naturalized Chinamen, and are now naturalizing them. And to say now that Chinamen are not capable of being naturalized, is simply to state a mooted question, one upon which precedents can be produced pro and con, and one upon which at least it is very doubtful whether there is any settled policy in the Courts.

I am in favor of section three, which also provides that "no alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution." It provides that all public work shall be done by citizens, or at least shall not be done by Chinese; that they shall be prohibited from contracting for or doing public work. I shall favor section three for that reason. I think, however, that the section ought to be enlarged, as to pointing out more particularly that sub-contractors shall be prohibited from employing Chinamen—that they shall not be employed directly or indirectly.

That, sir, brings me to section four, which provides that "all further immigration to this State of Chinese, and all other persons ineligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, is hereby prohibited. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of this section by appropriate legislation."

This brings up the question of the jurisdiction of the State in its police capacity, and the jurisdiction of the United States in its capacity as sovereign of the States in their outside relations with the world. And there is where the conflict comes in the authorities that have been presented to this Convention. I am in favor of section four, but I would like to have it worded a little different, so as to say expressly what we intend to say. I support it for the purpose of bringing this matter before the Supreme Court of the United States for reëxamination, so as to have them determine what are the rights of the State, and what are the rights of the United States, in reference to this subject. The decisions that have heretofore been made upon that subject were made not with a view to the magnitude of the subject here presented, they were made with reference to immigration coming from Europe—men of like character, and like feelings, and like blood as ours. It was made with reference to preventing the shipping of a limited number of paupers. It was made with reference to preventing those governments from shipping criminals to our shores. I say, sir, that since eighteen hundred and fifty-two—in particular since eighteen hundred and sixty—the Chinese question has grown to be a momentous one; that it was unknown and undreamed of prior to that time, either by Congress, or the President, or the Supreme Court, or any governmental authority that were called on to deal with the question of immigration. The characters of this people are so different from ours, that the very virtues of the one become the vices of the other. They are antagonistic in everything—in government, in religion, in personality, in morality, in all that goes to make up a nation, and in all that goes to make up an individual. They come by invitation, it is true, but they are coming in such vast streams that we are crying out for mercy. They must be stopped, or they will crush us out of existence.

You all remember the Granger cases in Illinois, which were passed upon by the Supreme Court in eighteen hundred and seventy-four or eighteen hundred and seventy-five. They have just been referred to by the gentleman from San Francisco. The decision of the Court, as he says, was a surprise to the legal fraternity, and contrary to the law ideas of the Bar, not only in San Francisco, but all over the State, and all over the United States. Notwithstanding that, the decisions were made in obedience to the necessities of the case, in obedience to the demand of the great body of the people of the United States. And whenever law is so exclusive that it ceases to supply the wants of the people, that it ceases to protect the people, that it becomes an engine of destruction and oppression to the people, it ceases to become good law for the people. And I say now that if we pass these provisions and bring this matter before the Supreme Court of the United States, presenting it as it can be presented, I believe they will find a way to relieve us from our burdens, as they did the farmers of Illinois. In doing that we further present this subject in a forcible manner to the American Congress, and before the people of the country, and we make an appeal which is manly, and one which will carry conviction with it. We make an appeal which is loyal on our part, which is right on our part, and we say to them, we have done all that a people of a State can do for life and self-protection.

I am, therefore, for section four, in such language as will cause the case to be presented in proper shape—if it becomes necessary—to the Supreme Court of the United States; for I submit, if the doctrine of the gentleman from Marin is to be maintained as law, the people of the United States become the basest serfs that it is possible to conceive of, for by treaty the people of the State of California, and of the United States, may wake up some morning and find themselves bound hand and foot by a treaty, when the Congress of the United States by no direct law would be authorized to bind them in any such shape; when the Constitution of the United States confers no such direct power upon them. In other words, they can, by the circumlocution of a treaty, do that which they are powerless to do directly. A treaty of the United States, like every other administration of law under the authority of the United States, must be within limits and bounds. The Constitution itself is limited. The laws of Congress, made in pursuance of the Constitution, are the supreme laws, and no other law is supreme. Yet Congress must not go beyond the authority enforced upon them by the Constitution. They are not law unto themselves. They may make laws pursuant to law, pursuant to authority, subject to authority. Then, I say, if the people can be oppressed beyond the limits established by the Constitution by treaty stipulation, it is saying we can do through a treaty what we could not do directly under our constitution and laws.

Then, I say, it is our duty, when we believe the treaty has exceeded the authority of the treaty making power, to make the issue squarely in our capacity as a State; deny that the treaty is binding upon us, and declare that Congress exceeded its authority in making the treaty, and go before the Supreme Court of the nation upon that issue. For that reason, I am in favor of this section. I am in favor of having the question of the rights of the State, in regard to self-protection, reëxamined before the Supreme Court of the United States. The change in time, the magnitude of the question, the very right of existence upon the part of the people of this Pacific Coast, demand that we do it; not for the purpose of rebellion, but for the purpose of ascertaining our legal rights in a legal and regular manner. For, Mr. President, it would be useless to ask me, or any other man outside of a lunatic asylum, as to whether he favors war or not. You might as well ask him if he is in favor of the next flood of the Sacramento River, or the next cyclone sweeping the shores of our State. Whenever the conditions exist, they come, and no human power can prevent it. Whenever the laws of good government have been so violated that restraint becomes impossible; that the administration of the law no longer affords protection to life and property, then rebellion and anarchy come, whether men are in favor of it or not. But it is the part of wise statesmanship to prevent such a state of affairs coming about, and I differ with the gentleman from Marin as to the method of preventing it. I say we must take issue with the laws of Congress, and with the Burlingame treaty. Under this "most favored nation" clause, they say that the Chinese can come here and hold real estate in defiance of the laws of the State of California—the very highest privilege that can be conferred by the State upon her citizens—that they can come here and hold real estate in defiance of our laws, and we cannot pass laws to prevent them from doing it. If we are reduced to such an absurdity by the treaty, let us take issue with it at once, and go boldly but respectfully before the Supreme Court of the United States. Let us take issue with it in every conceivable manner. I say we are encouraged in this action by another decision.

The Fourteenth Amendment seems very sweeping in its provisions, and was supposed to substitute itself in all the States of this Union for all other character of government. Were the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment contested before the Supreme Court, so far as relates to this question here, I have reason to believe that it would not be held to be so sweeping as some claim.

Mr. President, I hope we may be able to relieve ourselves from the dire calamity which is impending. But the sooner we do it the better, for I am inclined to believe that, sooner than see this fair land overrun and devastated by this Asiatic horde, the people will rise in open rebellion. That time has not arrived; but when all peaceful means fail, that event is not improbable.

SPEECH OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: When this subject of Chinese immigration first came before the Convention, I had not expected to participate in the debate. I had somehow induced myself to believe that the views expressed by the Chairman of the committee, in his able opening argument, would be adopted as the sentiment of the Convention. I believed that the position he had taken would be accepted by all persons, and especially by the legal fraternity. Those views seemed to me to be plain, clear, and decisive of the course which should be pursued here. I thought that the Convention would adopt section one, and probably section three, and reject the other sections of the report. I had myself, at different times, long ago, examined this question, and did not think that, on the subject of the power of the State, there could be any dispute. I had studied the question, not as an advocate, not as a lawyer to sustain his client, but judicially, as any impartial person would examine a question for the purpose simply of arriving at the right conclusion. But it seems that I was mistaken, and that differences of opinion exist in the Convention between gentlemen eminent and able, upon the subject of the power of the General Government and the power of the State in this matter. Learning that fact, I have been induced to present my views on the subject of the power which the State may lawfully exercise in this matter, in connection with what I conceive to be the great evils attending Chinese immigration.

Twenty-five years ago and upwards I landed in San Francisco in company with yourself, Mr. Chairman, as you well recollect. We were strangers in the State of California and in San Francisco. You will recollect that there were many things strange, curious, and peculiar, which attracted our attention, and that we wandered from place to place looking at the different portions of the city for some days. We were not, in those days, troubled very seriously with clients. Nothing was of greater interest or curiosity to us than the Chinese population. We had never seen this race of people before; knew nothing of their habits, qualities, and modes of life, except from general reading, and they were objects of interest and curiosity to us. We visited the Chinese quarters to learn what kind of people they were. We saw their merchants and their traders, visited their various places of business and houses of trade. We visited their theater to learn their idea of histrionic art. We visited their joss house, and other places of amusement and trade. We saw a population isolated entirely from other people, and from the citizens of San Francisco.

Twenty-five years and upwards have since gone by, and the children of the white race of people that were in this city have grown now into manhood and womanhood. The white boys of that day have become the men who participate in our government of to-day. They are citizens; they are taxpayers; they are the men of whom our armies are made, and of whom our statesmen are made. But the Chinese remain ever the same. They have extended the limits of their quarter of the town, and, I believe, have an additional joss house, and an additional theater, but, in other respects, this period of upwards of a quarter of a century has found that people the same, and in the same place, with the same qualities, habits, and characteristics. This, of itself, teaches statesmen and political economists a great truth—that here is a non-assimilative class; a great body of people in the heart of a great city in the American republic remaining for more than a quarter of a century completely isolated from all Americans, adopting none of our principles, customs, or habits of life, but differing with us in every respect.

There is no advancement, no progress, no change, but still the same to-day and forever. Still the same Chinese alien, worshiping a Chinese joss, eating Chinese victuals, wearing Chinese clothes, and remaining forever Chinese. The people from all the other nations of the earth come here and assimilate and commingle with our people and become a part of our people. Their children grow up Americans; they become Americans, and become one people with us. The Chinese alone remain an isolated, distinct, and peculiar people, and in their nature cannot become a part of the people of this country. This, of itself, is a great evil, if there were no other. Their mode of life is different from ours; their feelings are different from ours; they have not a similar habit of thought; they have not the same religion; not the same ideas of government, or anything else. This, of itself, is a great weakness in our government. It is an element from which we do not draw voters in time of peace, nor soldiers in the time of war. One hundred and twenty thousand foreigners are in our midst, remaining foreigners forever. This, I repeat, is a great evil and a great weakness. It is like a foreign substance that has found its way into the human body, but which never receives the heart's blood; which never takes up the circulation, but remains forever a foreign thing, irritating the nervous system and impairing the health; only to be remedied by the surgeon's knife. The Chinese are absorbing the material and mechanical industries, and monopolizing the labor market of the country. Their influence in that respect has been so thoroughly stated upon this floor that it needs merely to be mentioned. We all know that the Chinese do not establish homes in the country, in the great English and American sense of the term. One of the characteristics and great landmarks of American civilization is the home of the family, consiting of a wife, husband, and children—the home—of all places most blessed, and connected with which are the sweetest memories and associations. Not so with the Chinese. No such thing as home, in that sense, is known to them. The Chinese population consists of a large mass of men and a few women of the lowest character. But few marriages take place, and they live together in crowds. Now, in view of all these evils, we find—what? We find a strong feeling of antagonism existing between a large class of the American people and this Chinese horde. Whether this feeling is justly entertained or not can cut no figure in the discussion of this question. Whether that prejudice is ill founded or not, I say, is unimportant. It is a fact that we have this foreign horde in our midst, this peculiar people, and there is arrayed against it a strong hostility of feeling upon the part of the citizens that is irrepressible. Therefore the cause should be removed; the citizen should be protected, and this vast horde taken from our midst, if it is possible to do so. The important question here is, how shall we get rid of them? And this sends us back to another question—how did they get here? There has always been something in oriental life that has seemed to be exceedingly attractive to persons who are not in the midst of it. There has always been an idea amongst the nations of the earth that it would be a wonderful achievement to secure the trade of the Orient.

England, very early, obtained the East India trade, and the Dutch (I do not mean the Germans), obtained at one time almost an entire monopoly of the Japanese trade, and for a series of years held that trade, long before the Americans had made any treaty with China or Japan. These events were regarded by the other nations of the earth as of the greatest importance, and it was thought a grand thing to secure the trade of these people. The English were so anxious to get a portion of the Chinese trade, and the French were so desirous of the same thing, that they acted in concert, and by absolute force of arms—at the cannon's mouth—made China open up its ports to trade, and allow them the advantages of commerce there. The Yankee, that great American tradesman, quietly followed after and persuaded the Chinese and the Japanese that we were their friends; that we had always been their friends; that we did not intend to act as the French and English had acted, and demand to participate in their trade through force of arms: but that we wanted a little of it in a quiet way. We succeeded in persuading those nations that it would be to their advantage to allow us to participate in that trade. We succeeded partially through skillful diplomacy. Our statesmen, and especially our Chinese Ministers, received the highest approbation at the hands of the government and the people for their great success in managing that business and getting an entering wedge, allowing us to participate, to a very limited extent, in their trade. The first treaty was negotiated by Mr. Cushing—called the Cushing treaty—in eighteen hundred and forty-four (see 8 U. S. Stat. 593). It was very limited in its scope, but it secured something. By it we secured commercial relations with China, and we hoped for something better in the future. All will recollect the glowing pictures portrayed and anticipations indulged by Senator Benton in regard to these countries, and how he described what was to be our glorious future in that trade with China and Japan. It seemed as though it was only necessary to open up trade with those nations and people to make the country prosperous and wealthy. A great trade was to set in; we were to become the great commercial nation of the earth. Encouraged by what we thus secured, we pushed on stronger and stronger, and, in eighteen hundred and forty-eight, made another treaty through the efforts of Mr. Reed, securing greater rights and privileges (see 12 U. S. Stat. 1023). Finally, we pushed on to such an extent that in eighteen hundred and sixty-eight we accomplished what was regarded as a great triumph, in the Burlingame treaty. (See 16 U. S. Stat. 787.) It was very strange, and one of the novelties of this affair, that Mr. Burlingame, an American statesman, should appear as the Ambassador of the Chinese Empire in negotiating this treaty. We made that treaty with great satisfaction, and through it, in conjunction with the former treaties, secured to ourselves certain rights, privileges, and commercial advantages, and reciprocated by granting similar privileges to the Chinese. But in these treaties, as we have found out since, the Chinese had very much the advantage. Our anxiety to get the trade, and our solicitude to secure this business, was so great that we gave China largely the advantage.

While they admitted us to trade to a limited extent in three or four seaport towns, the whole of America was opened up to the Chinaman, and he was invited to come freely and like the rest of the earth to this "asylum of the oppressed," to this "land of the free and home of the brave." He was permitted to settle anywhere—trade anywhere in the United States. The Yankee was not afraid to come in contact with any person on the face of the earth! He was willing to swap jack knives with anybody. After this lapse of time, we find we have the worst of the bargain. While we have obtained a portion of the Chinese trade, we have received too many Chinamen. We have one hundred and twenty thousand of them here as against one or two thousand of our own people in the Chinese Empire. We have them spread all over our country, while our people are limited to two or three of their ports. Now we want to get rid of them. We opened the gate to their coming, invited them in, and thought we were very sagacious and blessed in our success. Now, we have found that it was a grand mistake. We have invited the guest to our house, and having gotten him here we desire to be rid of him. But he is so quiet, so bland, and yet so decided in his enjoyment of the privileges we have accorded to him, that it requires at our hands again some diplomacy. It is somewhat difficult to get him out of the house into which we so lately urged him to enter. How will we get rid of him? That is the question. By some it is said that we may prohibit the Chinese from coming, and absolutely shut up the Golden Gate and not let in any more; and that we may likewise expel and drive out those who are already here in the country. It is urged that if we cannot do this directly, we may do it indirectly, and that we have that power, because there is a great inherent though somewhat undefined power of self-defense and self-protection, called the police power, which has cut so great a figure recently in what is called the Elevator cases, and the Granger cases, which gentlemen here have referred to. It is said that we could fall back upon that great police power which has now become the modern citadel into which all undefined powers seek refuge. On the other hand, we find looming up before us these several treaties of which I have spoken. We find the Constitution of the United States giving to Congress the absolute and exclusive power to regulate commerce between the States, and between this government and foreign nations. We have also standing up before us the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which seems to throw some impediments in the way of our efforts upon this subject. We have been preaching for years and years the great doctrine of expatriation. It has been insisted upon as long as the American Government has existed. It is a great doctrine underlying the American Government that any man has a right to leave his place of birth, and throw off his allegiance to the land of his nativity, and go to and reside in another country according to his own will and pleasure.

We have been recently trying to establish this doctrine with other countries, and as part of the law of nations. That doctrine, in part, brought on the war of eighteen hundred and twelve, because the British cruisers attempted to take off from American vessels sailors and marines born in the British Empire. The English claimed that "once an English subject, always an English subject," and that allegiance is always due to the land of one's birth, and cannot be thrown off. We contested it, and insisted that the subjects had the power to throw off their allegiance to their own nation and become American citizens. I say that one great cause of the war of eighteen hundred and twelve was that very question of the right of a man to leave his place of birth and reside in and become a citizen of any other nation. We have, in all our modern treaties, pushed that question upon the nations of the world, and tried to get them to adopt it as part of the law of nations, and in the Burlingame treaty we presented the same proposition to the Chinese Government. In our anxiety to have this recognized as a broad principle of international law among nations, we succeeded in incorporating it into the Burlingame treaty, there solemnly announcing the right of the Chinese people to come here and live among us, and accept the privileges of an asylum, open to all the nations of the earth. That idea would never have originated with the Chinese. The Chinaman would never have thought of it. It is of American origin, and the Chinaman accepted it as part of the treaty on our own solicitation. Now, this treaty creates the great difficulty here in the use or exercise by the State of that great police power upon which gentlemen so much rely. The police power is of course a very great power in the State Government, as is also the taxing power. It is defined as one of those inherent, original powers necessary to the existence of a State. Yet, great as it is, and it has been defined as the grand repository of all undefined powers, it must be considered in view of our relation to the whole United States and to foreign nations. In forming a General Government we conceded something of our powers. If we have given any portion of our original power into the hands of the General Government, we can no longer claim to exercise it. If we have agreed in the national compact that any power shall be exercised by the General Government exclusively, we have given up the right to exercise it ourselves in every respect. As a State we have no relations with foreign countries. As the Chairman of the Committee on Chinese, General Miller, has ably shown here, the State of California is not a nation, but the United States alone is the nation. We have our relations as a State with the General Government, but we have no relations as a State with foreign countries. We can make no treaties with them. They do not recognize us; do not know us. We are only a part of the nation, and they will deal only with the whole Federal Government, or with the representatives of that government. Therefore, as far as treaties are concerned, we have yielded up to the General Government the entire power, exclusively and solely to make all treaties with foreign nations, and to enter into all those compacts and relations which usually and ordinarily exist between separate nations of the earth; therefore, a treaty made by the General Government becomes the paramount law of the land. The Constitution of the United States puts treaties on an equality with Acts of Congress. The Constitution says that treaties made under the Constitution of the United States, and Acts of Congress passed pursuant thereto, shall be the supreme law of the land. They necessarily override all local and State legislation. Therefore, it follows that this treaty-making power, within its rightful scope, is superior and paramount to all the local powers, call it police, or call it anything else. A treaty is a law of the land, and is superior to any law of the Legislature, and, in case of conflict, supersedes it the same as a rightful Act of Congress will supersede it. Now, it is a great mistake to suppose that the treaty-making power has nothing to do with our internal and municipal regulations, because sometimes it has. A case arose in this State many years ago, and was carried to the Supreme Court of California, in which a treaty between Prussia and our government came directly in conflict with a statute of the State concerning real property, and the right of an alien Prussian to take by descent. Now, if there is any one thing over which the State of California, or any other State, would seem to have absolute and exclusive control, it is the regulation of the descent of land situated within this State, and of the persons who may take by descent. The treaty with Prussia provided as follows: "And when on the death of any person holding real estate within the territory of the one party, such real estate would by the laws of the land descend on a citizen or subject of the other, were he not disqualified by alienage, such citizen or subject shall be allowed a reasonable time to sell the same and withdraw the proceeds without molestation." Now, the statute of California provided that in such case the real estate of the decedent should escheat to the State. The Attorney-General, on behalf of the State, claimed the property against the administrator of the deceased, and a purchaser from the alien heirs. The conflict was direct, and one or the other had to yield. The question was fairly and squarely presented as to how far the treaty-making power could transcend the power of the State to control its own domestic affairs. The case is reported in the Fifth California Reports, page three hundred and eighty-one, and is entitled The People ex rel. the Attorney-General versus Gerke and Clark. The Justice who delivered the opinion, Judge Heydenfeldt, is very well known as an able man, an accomplished lawyer, and a learned Judge. He was born and raised in the South, with all the old notions of the strict constructionists of the Constitution. My friend from Los Angeles, General Howard, who is a strict constructionist himself, knows that they never conceded a particle of power that was not specially granted. Judge Heydenfeldt, who delivered the opinion in the case referred to, was as strong a State rights man as any.

His opinion is very well fortified by authorities. It refers to and cites the views of Jefferson and Adams—those two leaders of opposite schools of construction—uniting and agreeing upon this one proposition, establishing the paramount authority of national treaty over State authority. Mr. Calhoun's views are also cited, and he has always been regarded as the leader of the school of strict constructionists. Within the limits and strict construction which he has placed upon the treaty-making power, he admits the superiority of the treaty power over a State statute, in such a case as that. So that the State lost and the alien heir took contrary to the California statute. In Chirac vs. Chirac, 2 Wheaton, 259, the Supreme Court of the United States decided that the treaty with France of seventeen hundred and seventy-eight, secured to the citizens and subjects of either power the privilege of holding lands in the territory of the other. This was again affirmed in Cavenac vs. Banks, 10 Wheaton, 189. A treaty with Great Britain of seventeen hundred and ninety-four, to the same effect, was held good and controlling by the Supreme Court of the United States in Hughes vs. Edwards, 9 Wheaton, 489. As said in The People vs. Gerke, by the Supreme Court of California: "So far as the authority of the Federal Courts is concerned, they appear to have uniformly administered the law upon the meaning given by construction to the language of the treaty, seeming never to have, in any respect, doubted the power of the General Government to provide by treaty with a foreign power for the mutual protection of the property belonging to citizens, or subjects of each, in the territory of the other. The treaty-making power of the Federal Government must from necessity be sufficiently ample so as to cover all of the usual subjects of treaties between different powers. If we were to deny to the treaty-making power of our government the exercise of jurisdiction over the property of deceased aliens, upon the ground of interference with the course of descents, or the laws of distribution of a State where property may exist, by parity of reasoning we should not make commercial treaties with foreign nations, because it might be said some of their provisions would injure the business of a portion of the citizens of one of the States of the Union."

This decision has been reaffirmed in later cases by the Supreme Court of this State. In fact, their views have never been doubted outside of this Convention.

The United States has the power to make all treaties, not only with foreign nations, but with Indian tribes. When exercised with regard to the Indian tribes, a treaty occupies the same position, and is of the same general nature, as when exercised with foreign nations. The Indian is regarded as a protegé of the United States. We have bestowed upon him the dignity of making a treaty with him, and these treaties are to be observed and kept as solemnly as when made with foreign nations. And the treaty-making power, in regard to the Indian tribes, is of the same nature as the treaty-making power with foreign nations.

In the Supreme Court of the United States, in a very recent case, a question arose as to the power of the government to interfere directly in the domestic affairs of a State Government, by a treaty with the Indians, and the treaty-making power was held to be paramount in that respect to the power of the State of Minnesota. The case is entitled "The United States vs. Forty-three Gallons of Whisky." (93 U. S. Reports, 197.) There the treaty-making power having declared that no liquor should be sold to Indian tribes anywhere within the limits of the State, the United States officers proceeded to forfeit this liquor which dealers in the State of Minnesota were selling to the Indians. The position was taken there that Minnesota was a sovereign State, and that she had conclusive control over her domestic affairs, and therefore the treaty-making power could not intrude itself in such a manner as to interfere with the power of the State Government over what was entirely domestic and purely local. But the Supreme Court of the United States held to the contrary. The decision referred to says:

"Besides, the power to make treaties with the Indian tribes is, as we have seen, coextensive with that to make treaties with foreign nations. In regard to the latter, it is, without doubt, ample to cover all the usual subjects of diplomacy. One of them relates to the disability of the citizens or subjects of either contracting nation to take, by descent or devise, real property situate in the territory of the other. If a treaty to which the United States is a party, removed such disability, and secured to them the right so to take and hold such property, as if they were natives of this country, it might contravene the statutes of a State; but in that event the Courts would disregard them, and give to the alien the full protection conferred by its provisions. If this result can be thus obtained, surely the government may, in the exercise of its acknowledged power to treat with Indians, make the provision in question, coming, as it fairly does, within the cause relating to the regulating of commerce."

Now, if this be true with regard to the State of Minnesota, how can it be said that the Burlingame treaty is a violation of the rights of this State; that it interferes with the police powers of the State; that it infringes upon it; that it is in contravention of natural law and natural justice? It has been, as I have shown, a principle and doctrine of the American Government almost since its origin, that Congress may enter into a treaty on such subjects as these under the treaty-making power, which shall be paramount and superior to the power exercised by the State itself. The Burlingame treaty has been read here. By it the Chinese are allowed to enter this State at will and become permanent residents, and their security in life and property is guaranteed by the treaty. They are placed on an equality, in regard to personal liberty and property, with the people of the most favored nations of the earth. How, then, can we here, with these limitations upon us, in a Constitutional Convention, as statesmen and jurists, undertake to contravene the power of the United States Government to make that treaty? In what attitude would we place ourselves before the American nation if we undertake to sail our ship of State upon this rock of Gibraltar?

MR. BARBOUR. I would like to show you Mr. Black's opinion on that matter.

MR. WILSON. I have seen Mr. Black's opinion; I read it at the time it was published. Mr. Black came here on a hurried visit to our coast and was entertained handsomely by our people, and while here was invited to express an opinion on this subject. He learned that there was a strong feeling here on the subject of Chinese immigration, and when called upon to give an opinion on that subject, in full sympathy with our wishes and feelings, he wrote the letter alluded to without any investigation or examination. Let us read it. The first thing he states is: "I have not examined this subject with that care that its importance demands." Mr. Black would have done well had he then added, "Yours respectfully," and said no more. If members can derive any comfort from this opinion they are welcome to it; it does not relieve me much. I read it at the time it was first published, and I thought Mr. Black had expressed a very hasty opinion upon a profound question, and had allowed his sympathy to supply the place of his judgment.

MR. BARBOUR. I would like to ask you a question.

MR. WILSON. Certainly, sir.

MR. BARBOUR. I would like to know, sir, whether, in your opinion, there is any limit to the power of Congress or legislation by way of treaty, or whether that power of Congress is unlimited, and whether, in your opinion, there are any reserved powers remaining in the States at all?

MR. WILSON. I think I can answer the gentleman. I believe there is a limit to the treaty-making power. If the gentleman has industry enough to examine Mr. Calhoun's views, referred to by Judge Heydenfeldt, he will learn that there are certain limits which exist. A treaty cannot change our form of government, and there are many other things which cannot be done by treaty. It is not necessary for me to depart from my line of argument to attempt to read the acknowledged law on that subject. It is sufficient for me to say that the power exercised in the Burlingame treaty is within the treaty-making power. These cases which I have cited are cases which bring the Burlingame treaty clearly within the treaty-making power. That is sufficient, without undertaking to say where the exact line is. Probably I would agree, in the main, with the views of Mr. Calhoun.

That treaty must, therefore, be respected. It is the paramount law of the land. In case of conflict, whether by the exercise of police power or otherwise, the police power must yield to the treaty-making power in its broad extent. In the case of Henderson, cited by the Chairman of the Committee on Chinese, General Miller, in the United States Court, where the express object of the Court was to settle the question, as far as it was possible, this question of the police power of the State is commented on. The Court say, in that case, in respect to this police power:

"This power, frequently referred to in the decisions of this Court, has been, in general terms, somewhat loosely called the police power. It is not necessary for the course of this discussion to attempt to define it more accurately than it has been defined already. It is not necessary, because whatever may be the nature and extent of that power, where not otherwise restricted, no definition of it and no urgency for its use can authorize a State to exercise it in regard to a subject-matter which has been confided exclusively to the discretion of Congress by the Constitution.

"Nothing is gained in the argument by calling it the police power. Very many statutes, when the authority on which their enactments rest is examined, may be referred to different sources of power, and supported equally well under any of them. A statute may at the same time be an exercise of the taxing power and of the power of eminent domain. A statute punishing counterfeiting may be for the protection of the private citizen against fraud, and a measure for the protection of the currency, and for the safety of the government which issues it. It must occur very often that the shading which marks the line between one class of legislation and another is very nice and not easily distinguishable.

"But, however difficult this may be, it is clear, from the complex nature of our form of government, that, whenever the statute of a State invades the domain of legislation which belongs to the Congress of the United States, it is void, no matter under what class of powers it may fall, or how closely allied to powers conceded to belong to the States."

It is manifest, then, that this treaty-making power having been exclusively granted to Congress, if there is a conflict between the exercise of that power and the police power of the State, the police power must yield, and the treaty-making power must be held paramount. The power of Congress to regulate commerce, foreign and inter-State, is exclusively in Congress, and is closely allied to the proposition I have stated in regard to the treaty, as far as this question is concerned. That power is exclusively in the United States Government. Years ago the transportation of passengers was held to fall within these powers to regulate commerce. It was so held in "the Passenger cases," and since that in a series of others. It was so held in a recent case in the United States Supreme Court, 5 Otto R. 265, and also in the case of Henderson, 2 Otto R., cited by General Miller. All of the recent cases, "the Passenger cases" especially, are based on the conceded proposition that a State cannot prohibit the entrance of foreign goods or foreign passengers. What is the use of discussing these sections prohibiting the Mongolians from coming into the State, when every one of these cases cited have decided that it is not in the power of the State to so ordain. These sections attempted to reach the Chinese passenger coming here, through what is called the exercise of some inherent State power similar to the power of taxation, or police power, as they choose to call it; and it is by the exercise of some one of these powers that it is sought to place the first check upon Chinese immigration.

MR. WYATT. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question.

MR. WILSON. Certainly.

MR. WYATT. Now, upon the supposition that the introduction of passengers described in this case is absolute death to the citizens of the State, what attitude would it then assume before the Supreme Court of the United States in regard to the decisions upon these questions, conceding that the very presence of these people here is conducive to the destruction of the State?

MR. WILSON. In the first place, the question, in its legal aspect, would not be bettered by such an extreme state of facts. The treaty-making power, having absolute control over the commercial relations, determines the question as to what is right and what is wrong. If the State should differ with the United States, the State would certainly have to yield. She might enter a remonstrance; she might appeal to the authorities of the United States for modification or other relief, but so long as the United States insist that these people shall be permitted to come here under its treaty, the State has not the power to exclude them. So far as the power to regulate commerce is concerned, it embraces passengers as well as freight and merchandise. All the cases where that question has been raised have conceded that, and all the authorities are uniform, and agree that the State has not authority to regulate trade in such a manner as to impede it or place onerous burdens on commerce, and that this power is vested in the General Government alone. Although, in some of the States, it was attempted to maintain these cases under the guise of the taxing power, the Supreme Court of the United States invariably looked through the disguise, penetrated the gauze work, detected the object and intention of these provisions, and therefore decided that even the power of taxation cannot be exercised so as to interfere with commerce. This was so in "the Passenger cases." There it was sought to escape the question of interference with passengers directly by an ingenious intervention of onerous duties on the master of the ship. The master of the vessel was required to give certain bonds to protect the State upon the introduction of passengers, and the argument to sustain the law was this: "We have not interfered with your passengers; we do not ask anything of the passengers, but simply lay a duty on the vessel, which we have a right to tax." The Supreme Court penetrated this ingenious device, and saw that it was intended to prevent the passengers from coming into the State; that it incommoded them, and prevented their free entrance into the State. It is therefore useless to discuss any farther this power of prohibition, because the highest Court in the land has already, as shown, decided against the right of prohibition in the State, and against the right of a State to place or impose any onerous burdens upon passengers. I will read a short extract from the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Chy Lung, 2 Otto:

"The passage of laws which concern the admission of citizens and subjects of foreign nations to our shores, belongs to Congress and not to the States. It has power to regulate commerce with foreign nations: the responsibility for the character of those regulations, and for the manner of their execution, belongs solely to the National Government. If it be otherwise, a single State can, at her pleasure, embroil us in disastrous quarrels with other nations."

I further find that in the attempt to exercise or interfere with commerce, even commerce between the States comes in conflict with the Federal Government. It was found, some years ago, that the cattle introduced from Texas into various States of the Union, had certain diseases which were infectious, and it was attempted to prevent the importation of these diseased cattle in Missouri, and thus avoid the spreading of the disease among the domestic cattle in the latter State. The State of Missouri passed a law prohibiting the importation of cattle from Texas into that State during a period of six months in each year. That was a very strong case, and I do not know that any gentleman has submitted, in regard to the power of a State to regulate its own domestic affairs, any case which is stronger than the one presented on that occasion. There were droves of diseased cattle coming in from the prairies of Texas, which were likely to spread infection and disease among the domestic cattle of Missouri, and the question was as to the power of the State of Missouri to protect herself against this threatened danger to man and beast. The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of The Railroad Company vs. Houston, 5 Otto, 465, pass upon the validity of that statute of Missouri.

MR. HOWARD. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Does not the Texas case go upon the grounds that the statute is so broad that it excluded all the cattle, healthy as well as diseased?

MR. WILSON. You are trying to exclude the healthy Chinese cattle as well as the diseased ones.

MR. HOWARD. I say they are all diseased. That is not an answer to my question. I asked you upon what grounds that decision went. Whether the decision of the Supreme Court was not upon the ground that the statute was so broad that it included healthy as well as diseased cattle?

MR. WILSON. It is precisely as I stated it. The State of Missouri undertook that mode of cutting off the diseased cattle just as in these other cases. The Chairman of the Committee on Chinese has shown exactly how far the limit goes in regard to the exercise of State power. You can reach the pauper, but you cannot go beyond him, so all these decisions say. The Supreme Court said that that did not come within the proper police regulation; it was an interference with the right to regulate commerce between the States which is vested solely in Congress. Neither the unlimited power of the State to tax, nor any of the large police powers, can be exercised to such an extent as to work a practical assumption of the powers given to Congress by the Constitution of the United States.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

RECESS.

The hour for recess having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, has the floor.

SPEECH OF MR. WILSON—(Continued.)

MR. WILSON. Mr. Chairman: I have occupied more time upon this subject than I had expected, and I will proceed as rapidly as possible. I have called the attention of the Convention to the case of the Railroad Company against Husen. It seemed to be conceded in that case that if the State of Missouri had confined itself in the exclusion of diseased cattle only, that the statute might have been constitutional and proper. But while the real object was to exclude diseased cattle, it applied to all cattle for certain periods of time, and it was held that the statute was more an absolute regulation of commerce than the police power of the State could warrant. And the limit is defined between that class of legislation which operates to exclude paupers and criminals, and similar persons, and other sanitary measures, and that which would embrace persons against whom no objection could be raised, or more properly against whom no such sanitary regulations could be aimed. The first section on this subject reported by the committee is aimed principally at persons following directly and properly within the police powers of the State, such as vagrants, paupers, criminals, and those afflicted with incurable diseases. All these are clearly within the domain of the police power of the State. But the subsequent sections which embrace and include all persons in the State, whether of the classes before indicated or not, fall directly within the decisions which I have read and commented upon. In the several decisions cited in the argument of the Chairman of the Committee on Chinese, the same rule is laid down, and the opinion of the Courts are very explicit and consistent.

In the case of Henderson, the Supreme Court intended to settle the question, but there is a doubt expressed as to whether the police power will extend to the cases of paupers. I think, however, that the decision, in most of the cases, is to the effect that a State may exercise the police power over vagrants, paupers, diseased persons, and criminals. But some of the cases, particularly the last case referred to, seems to throw a doubt upon the exercise of this power over paupers. It seems to incline to the view that in that respect and class of cases, Congress is the sole repository of such power.

I am willing to go to the extent of the exercise of that power, as indicated in section one, as it seems to me we can sustain ourselves upon it. There is nothing dangerous in it to the State. The learned gentleman from Los Angeles, in his argument took the ground that the State itself should be the judge of the proper exercise of the police power. But the Supreme Court of the United States differs with him upon that subject, and, highly as I respect the opinions of that gentleman, yet, when his views are in conflict with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, the decision of that tribunal will secure my concurrence.

In the case of the Railroad Company against Husen, the Court discusses this very question, as to who shall be the judge of the proper exercise of the police power. It had been urged that the question of the propriety of the exercise of the police power is to be determined by the Legislature of the State and not by the Courts. But the Supreme Court of the United States says: "With this we cannot concur. The police power of the State cannot obstruct foreign commerce, or inter-State commerce, beyond the necessity for its exercise; and under color of it objects not within its scope cannot be secured at the expense of the protection afforded by the Federal Constitution. And as its range sometimes comes very near to the field committed by the Constitution to Congress, it is the duty of the Courts to guard vigilantly against any needless intrusion."

These decisions we must accept as final, because whether we indorse them or not they are the law of the land. In considering this subject, there are some other questions worthy of our consideration. I will refer for a moment to the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. It is well known that some of these latter amendments to the Constitution arose from the peculiar condition of affairs in the South during and subsequent to the civil war. Congress passed a number of Acts, the special object of which was to protect the negro recently emancipated from slavery, and to confer upon him all the rights of an American citizen. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments of the Federal Constitution were designed to place the negro in a position of political equality with the whites, and Acts of Congress were passed to enforce the principles embodied in those amendments. Of the wisdom of what was thus done we have nothing to say, we can but simply accept the result as an accomplished fact. The Fourteenth Amendment says:

"SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the States wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of its laws."

We must yield to these persons within our borders and jurisdiction the equal protection of the law. It matters not who the individual is; it matters not how humble he is, or how base he is, the broad shield of the law extends over him, and he may demand all the right which any other person may have to the equal protection of the laws. Of course this does not embrace political privileges, which are limited, but he is entitled to full protection. This amendment has sometimes been supposed to be limited entirely to the negro race, because the circumstances and condition of that race at the end of the war caused the passage of these Acts; but the language is not limited merely to the negro, it is comprehensive enough to embrace all others, and it must be construed according to its natural meaning. In the history of laws we see that certain things cause the enactment of ordinances and statutes, but they must, nevertheless, be construed according to plain ordinary meaning of the words employed. It is not necessary to show this by argument, because the Supreme Court of the United States, in the Slaughterhouse case, in 16 Wallace Reports, here so construed this very amendment of the Constitution. After viewing the history of this legislation, and this constitutional enactment, showing that the negro was the cause of these laws having been passed, and that the negro was primarily intended to be benefited by them, the Court says: "We do not say that no one else but the negro can share in this protection. Both the language and spirit of these articles are to have their fair and just weight in any question of construction. Undoubtedly while negro slavery was alone in the mind of the Congress which proposed the thirteenth article, it forbids any other kind of slavery, now or hereafter. If Mexican peonage, or the Chinese coolie labor system, shall develop slavery of the Mexican or Chinese race within our territory, this amendment may safely be trusted to make it void. And so if other rights are assailed by the States which properly and necessarily fall within the protection of these articles, that protection will apply, though the party interested may not be of African descent."

My object thus far has been to demonstrate, so far as in me lies, that in view of the Burlingame treaty and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, we cannot safely go beyond sections one and three as presented by the committee, if indeed we can go that far. Yet I do not wish to be misunderstood. If any one can show me how we may constitutionally relieve ourselves from this Chinese incubus, I will go as far as his light may illume the path. I am no lover of these Oriental pagans. They have no advocate in me. I entertain no mere prejudice against them, but I have a settled conviction, the result of years of observation and reflection, that their residence among us is a scourge, a growing evil, and highly detrimental to our prosperity, morals, and general welfare. It is a public calamity that they are in our midst; and in their undisturbed presence here I see much to make the statesman fear, the patriot mourn, and the philanthropist despair. Yet I will not lend myself to any measures in themselves inhuman, or which violate the Constitution of the United States, or that of the State of California, or place myself in an absurd attitude before the people of the United States.

MR. HERRINGTON. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. If the present Burlingame treaty were not in force and effect, would it be proper for the State of California, for this Convention, to adopt provisions in our Constitution to prevent the accession by the Mongolians of permanent residences in this State?

MR. WILSON. Yes, I think in that event we might go a great way in that direction, until met by the provisions of the Constitution as to commerce.

MR. HERRINGTON. Then I will ask another question. If that be so, would a provision of this Constitution be in violation of any provisions of the Constitution of the United States; or would it be in any different position than the law in reference to insolvency, when the general bankrupt law was in existence?

MR. WILSON. It would be like passing a law by the Legislature or by the Constitution, in direct violation of the Act of Congress, because the treaty is a law as much as the Constitution, or an Act of Congress. We cannot pass any legislation which is an infringement upon that existing law.

MR. HERRINGTON. Then the law passed a little while before the repeal of the bankrupt law was not in violation of the Constitution; that law is still in force and effect.

MR. WILSON. A serious question was raised on that point the other day. A gentleman of great legal experience suggested to me, in a case we were discussing, that, as the State insolvent law was passed pending an Act of Congress, it could not be considered of any validity or effect now; and that suggestion raises serious doubts in my mind as to the validity of the Act. However, this is like one of the recent school examinations, and I have not been furnished, as the parties there were, with the questions beforehand. [Laughter.] This first section, as reported by the committee, has a clause which I am somewhat doubtful about:

"The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

The clause I refer to is that relating to "aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State." These words give a wide latitude. They may embrace almost anything. "Detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State." How? In what respect? By what mode? What is the well-being of the State? is it wise to use these words, to which nothing definite can attach, and which in their wide sweep are boundless as space?

These words remind us of the old English bills of attainder. They were based on the same idea contained in the language to which I object. All the constitutions in this country contain prohibitions against bills of attainder. They grew up in England upon the idea that while there were definite crimes for which persons could be tried and punished, yet there occasionally might exist in the State a man who, though not guilty of any known or defined crime, would be dangerous to the peace and well-being of the community. Bills of attainder originated on this assumption. Parliament passed such bills to reach these persons asserted to be "dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State." By bills of attainder such persons were punished, their blood attainted, and their estate confiscated to the crown. I believe the last bill of attainder was passed in England over a century ago. I believe that almost every one of the State Constitutions contain provisions against such bills. The Constitution of the United States provides that no bill of attainder shall be passed. The present Constitution of California contains also the same prohibition against such bills. Now, this provision of section one sounds very much like the old bills of attainder—"aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State." In other respects I have agreed with section one, not that I think it is necessary, because I think the State has inherently all the power that that section gives it. But as some expression of opinion on this subject by the Convention is thought to be desirable, I yield my concurrence to this section as it stands.

In my view, the remedy is beyond the powers of the State, and it has been my object, so far, to show that we can have no relief, either through the Legislature or Constitution, against the evils of Chinese immigration. We have no power to stop these people from coming into the State; we have very little power to control them while here; and though I am anxious to see the State rid of these evils, I am persuaded that the only remedy is in an application to the treaty-making power, or to Congress itself. We may have a modification of the Burlingame treaty, with the consent of China, it being a contract—and the consent of the Chinese Government is necessary in making a new treaty, to guard and protect us against this unlimited invasion of foreigners not susceptible of naturalization. We may also call upon Congress for some remedy, and Congress has the power to so regulate the intercourse between the two countries as to afford us some relief. There is no doubt at all about the correctness of the position assumed by the gentleman from Marin, that while the treaty itself binds the two nations, we cannot get rid of it except by consent of China, although we may break it by Act of Congress or otherwise, being ourselves responsible to the Chinese Government, as we are in all cases, for the infraction of a treaty. That responsibility, if I were a part of the administration of the General Government, I would be willing to take. I would give relief, even if we had to resort to war. But we can only have adequate relief through Congress, or the treaty-making power. Just at this particular time California seems to occupy a very important position. The political signs indicate that California will soon rise from political obscurity and assume a place of power in the national councils—I do not care what party succeeds here, whether it be the Workingmen's, the Republican, or the Democratic party.

This State may hold the balance of power and have a voice in determining who will be the President of the United States; and that probability, has, to a great extent, gained faith recently. We are entitled to use our power for our State protection; we are entitled now to demand of the General Government that it shall awake and listen to us. And, I believe now, that if a strong, earnest, and determined effort is made, the General Government, in view of the political condition, will listen to us. And, in my judgment, whether they do or do not, it is our only hope and our only remedy, and we should here put ourselves upon this record, in the language of the gentleman from San Diego, Mr. Blackmer, in a dignifying, manly, and statesmanlike position, and go to the General Government and ask it to relieve us from these evils under which we are suffering. I believe that anything in the shape of violence towards the Chinese will have the same effect that it did in regard to the negroes. In order to protect the negroes, Congress made them citizens of the United States, and I believe now that any violence on our part against the Chinese will simply induce Congress to pass an Act rendering them eligible to citizenship, which will render them more hurtful to the interests of the State than now, and merely aggravate our evils. And, in that view of the case, I think we should appeal to Congress in a sensible, statesmanlike manner. I believe we will get relief. It may be long coming; it may be difficult to rouse those people of other States to a comprehension of our situation, and, when you come to think of it, it is not wonderful that it is so. They know nothing about this subject; they know nothing of this competitive labor; they know nothing of the absolute power of the Chinese to affect, most injuriously, the laboring men of the country; they know nothing of the manifold evils attending the residence of Chinese among us. We call upon them to reverse the old, respected, and revered doctrines of the government on the subject of expatriation. We have boasted, time and again, that we had here a land open to all the nations of the earth. We have listened to that doctrine preached in the halls of Congress, and in Fourth of July orations, and from the stump. We have everywhere proclaimed that this is an asylum for the oppressed of all nations, and asked them to come here and enjoy, without stint, the blessings of this free land of ours. Now we turn to the people of the other States, who have heard these things preached for one hundred years, and say to them, "reverse all these things and exclude these people from our shores."

It is the first time any such proposition has ever been advanced; it is the first time any such request has ever been made. It is not wonderful they are slow to adopt our views. It would be strange if they easily yielded to our arguments. We must be careful and sensible in our action. We must try to induce them to hear us. It is the only possible remedy. Now, I know, Mr. President, that if I were to urge extreme measures here I would please some persons. I know that there is a great deal of radicalism on this subject among many persons, but my object on this floor is not merely to please, but to advocate these measures which will afford the true remedy for the wrongs we suffer, recognizing that I am responsible to the people of the State for my action, and desirous of putting myself upon the record here, as one not afraid to speak the truth, however unpalatable it may be; therefore, I say that I cannot favor these extreme measures. We should look at this question as it is, in all its naked deformity, and ascertain where the remedy lies, and not run after a remedy which will not avail, or which will only result in future distress to us. We have appealed to the General Government to aid us in this matter. Let us continue this appeal. Let us take advantage of the political crisis about to come, and make our power in that respect felt. Let us demand proper legislation by Congress, and proper action by the treaty-making power, which will relieve us of this gigantic evil.

MR. BARBOUR. I ask the gentleman if he indorsed the Non-partisan platform upon which the candidates in San Francisco were elected?

MR. WILSON. Does it make any difference in the strength of the argument, whether I indorsed that platform or not? In fact I was not here in the State at the time that platform was framed, or at the time of the election. I was in the Atlantic States, and therefore never have seen it to this day.

MR. BARBOUR. All right.

MR. WILSON. I had supposed that my action was in accordance with it. If I am convinced, as I am, that the State has no power over this subject, and that the remedy is in Congress alone, and I am anxious and willing to adopt that remedy, I suppose I am not inconsistent with the Non-partisan platform. I have, therefore, fully presented my views, recognizing the greatness of the evil and where the remedy is. I abide the result, whatever it be.

SPEECH OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: No one can feel more keenly the responsibility which rests upon us in the consideration of this question than I do. No one can feel more desirous than I that whatever is done here should be wisely done; and if it be true, as suggested by the gentleman last on the floor, that the people are remediless, and that, when so many of our citizens feel perhaps their lives—certainly the welfare of themselves and their families—depend in a great measure upon this Convention, I feel unequal to the task of coping with gentlemen so able and distinguished as those upon the other side of this question, who have argued to us with the earnestness that marks them as sincere, that the people of this coast are absolutely and solely remediless in the premises. That we are to be in the future, as we have been in the past, and are in the present, subject to the unlimited presence of an element so forcibly described by my colleague from San Francisco, without hope of remedy, is to say that our government is a failure. Surrounded by distress, and hunger, and want on every hand, it is said we must sit supinely down under this upas tree and inhale the poison that falls from its limbs, absolutely devoid of the power—not merely to lay the ax at the foot of the tree, but powerless to remove a single limb that drips its poison upon us. And we are referred to the Constitution of the United States, and to the treaty-making power conferred upon the President and Senate of the United States, as something which constitutes an impassable barrier between us and this great social and political wrong. Now, sir, I prefer to regard this, not as a case depending altogether upon authorities—though I believe that authority, and good authority, can be advanced for the views which I entertain—but I prefer to look for a moment at it as a case of first impression, as if we had not this provision in the Constitution in reference to the power of the government, and the rights given to Congress and the President of the United States; as though none of these vexing questions had ever risen at all; as though there had never been such a case as that cited from Otto in respect to diseased cattle; as though we had never a case passed upon in respect to the importation of Chinese women; as though we had never had a case founded upon the right of one citizen to import into another State his merchandise of human bodies. Let us look for a moment at it as a case of first impression.

These great men who gave us this form of government called the Constitution of the United States, under which this nation has attained all its greatness, and grandeur, and prosperity, gave it to us for one purpose, as they say, and only one. And while they exacted from us certain things, they gave us certain other things in return. For what we surrendered we received an equivalent in return. But let us see farther what each was to receive in accordance with that compact. It is necessary to see what these rights are in order to determine what powers it is necessary for us to have in order to maintain the rights which were guaranteed to us under the Constitution. Now, sir, although I detest the spirit of nullification as I detest the spirit of secession, I do not believe that a State can live in this Union which repudiates one law intended to enjoin harmony on the balance; still I believe it is the right of every State to bring the principles which it considers underlie the social fabric to the test. I do not understand, with the gentleman from Marin, that it is a violation of our constitutional oath of office to engraft into this Constitution anything which we might consider necessary and essential for the welfare of the people of this State. It is well known that the Legislatures of the States have, from time to time, passed laws and adopted resolutions, which, when submitted to the critical tests of judicial interpretation, have been declared unconstitutional. There was no pretense that the members violated their oaths when they attempted to establish some law which they considered right and just, though in the end it was declared to be in violation of the Constitution. And I consider that we are eminently justified in going to the extreme verge of constitutional law, both here and elsewhere, for the purpose, if nothing else, of ascertaining by the determination of the Court of last resort, whether we have the rights we believe we have or not. If that Court shall decide that we do not possess them, we can submit, as we have always done, and as I trust we always will do. If that Court decides that we do possess these rights and powers, we shall feel that we have been the means of accomplishing a great reform. Sir, I regret that the gentleman who preceded me seemed to think that it was easy to speak on the popular side of this question. I do not so understand it. I think the man who undertakes to take a step in advance requires more courage, better will, and stronger resolution than he who attempts to stick in the dark, and says we shall not move for fear we may run counter to the Constitution of the United States.

Now, sir, what was that compact? Why, sir, the compact made by the people of the State was that we entered into this agreement and surrendered these powers utterly and absolutely to the centralized government for several purposes. It was to form a more perfect Union. It was to establish justice. It was to insure domestic tranquillity, provide for common defense, and the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity. We find ourselves subjected to an innovation, the extent of which no man can tell, which is absolutely destructive to justice; which destroys domestic tranquillity; which places an obstacle in the way of common defense, destroys the general welfare, and absolutely undermines the blessings of liberty which we claim for ourselves and for our posterity. Under that form of Constitution it was expected that the nations of the earth would come in here and find a common heritage, to grow up a homogeneous and united people. The provisions were ample at that time, because our fathers never looked out beyond the western shore into this great unknown sea of hungry humanity. They never dreamed that the happy and contented people were to be exposed to such danger and degradation as that. If they had, sir, does any one doubt that those wise men would have framed this Constitution so as to give us some protection and some defense? They never had any such idea. They never dreamed of the danger ahead. The provisions in respect to naturalization were broad and full. Congress was directed under the organic law to provide a system of naturalization that should enable men, whether born here or not, to live among us on equal terms, participate in the government of the country, and become American citizens in every sense of the word. They guaranteed a republican form of government, based upon intelligence, upon education, and upon love of country. Those were the principles enunciated by the father of his country; those were the principles upon which this government was founded, and upon which our fathers intended it should survive. That was the basis, and that is the only basis upon which a republican government can ever stand. It was upon the idea of universal intelligence, where the people in their individual and collective capacity, without reference to wealth, stand equal before the law.

Well, sir, have we got that form of government here to-day, when in our midst exists this poison; when in our midst exists this great body of people who have no sympathy or interest in the government; who take no part in our system of education; a people who have no part in the underlying religious ideas of our institutions? Why, sir, the argument on that side has been so forcibly presented by gentlemen who have preceded me, that it needs no language—indeed, language would fail to express it in all its horrors and destructive capacity. No man of intelligence will deny, I think, that this thing is a curse that will in the end, if continued, destroy the very framework of government and society; and when you have said that, you have said all that can be said on that branch of the subject.

Now, we are told that notwithstanding we are living under a government that professes to carry out the principles to which I have referred; notwithstanding we are guaranteed a republican form of government, under which all are supposed to be equal before the law, we are told here to-day that we must adopt no means here by which we can test the validity of this compact, because they say the Constitution of the United States, and the treaties made in pursuance thereof, are the supreme law of the land, and we must not question them. I say they are subject to the interpretation of the Supreme Court the same as any other law. Suppose for a moment that the President of the United States and two thirds of the Senate should make a treaty with Great Britain, by which certain portions of this country should be formed into a kingdom, or some system of government which should absolutely overthrow the Constitution of the United States, and the people should undertake to test it, as they should test it. The question would be submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States. I see no difference—none laid down in the books—between a treaty and a law of Congress. And we have the right, as we have the power, to test it in every way, and this is the best way in which it can be tested. And I have no doubt, if it could be shown before the Supreme Court that any treaty or law of Congress, whichever it may be, is, either in itself or in its results, subversive of American liberty, as we all understand it, that it would be set aside and annulled, and the people declared free and independent of its operations. It might plunge us into a war with China; it might bring about any other international difficulty, but so long as the people are contented and prosperous at home it makes very little difference what such difficulty may be. I say it is our duty to put a provision in the Constitution, such a one as in our judgment the exigencies of the times demand, with the purpose—if for nothing else—of testing this thing before the Courts of the land. The gentleman says we cannot run counter to the central government; that we are bound here hand and foot until Congress shall see fit to act, and that the only thing for us to do is to continue to pray to Congress for relief.

We are, he said, to continue our supplications until Congress shall do like the woman did—marry the man who was courting her in order to get rid of him. [Laughter.] Now, we have tried that sort of thing for a long time, and no man of intelligence can look ahead and give us any assurance of relief in that direction. I can see no prospect of it. We know what the feeling in other parts of the country is, and we know the influence that surrounds Congress in the City of Washington, and we know that that influence will continue to be exerted and continue to have its effect. It will not be until this State shall be filled from one end to the other that Congress will awaken to the necessity of doing something for our relief. I am free to say that I do not anticipate any relief in that direction; I see no prospect of it. I can see nothing in the future which holds out any hope of relief. If we could see the bow of promise, like that which God hung over the people after the flood, we might be willing to wait yet a little while; but, sir, I cannot see anything of the kind. On the contrary, the signs of the times to my mind indicate that if we, as a State, do not do something for ourselves, we will miss the only opportunity we shall have of helping ourselves. And here in the organic law is the place to make the attempt.

Now, sir, I do not like this article on Chinese. My opposition to it is based upon this: that it is evasive; that it is attempting to do indirectly what it seems by tacit consent we can do directly. And if we can do a thing indirectly, we can do it directly. All these provisions about requiring aliens to get certificates, and all that sort of thing, are worse than nonsense. It is unmanly. If we are going to act at all let us put a broad, open, and manly declaration in the Constitution, declaring that the presence of these people is a constant menace to our government, and then apply the ax to the tree, and go boldly before the Courts claiming our right to act in self-defense. Now, this first section, let us see what that contains:

"SECTION 1. The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

Why, sir, that is nothing but a declaration of the powers of the State, which it has always had. The police power of the State has been talked about here from the beginning. We all know what it is. It is to compel men to slaughter hogs outside of the city limits; provides for the sale of milk cows. The State has that power, and always will have, but that does not help us here. It is a fraud. It mutilates the article. [Applause.] And I am glad of it. It is cowardly. There is nothing in it which entitles it to our respect. There is nothing in it which entitles it to the respect of mankind. To say that we are going to get rid of a population that are menacing free government, and destroying our happiness, and carrying desolation to our homes, by the exercise of the police power of the State, is utterly absurd.

Now, my friend from Marin refers to his life-long services in the cause of abolition. He knows very well there was a time in the history of the abolition of negro slavery in this country when it was considered an impeachment of the Constitution of the United States for a man to deny the divine right of slavery. Take your books and examine the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, and see how many of these enactments were declared unconstitutional, one after the other, as opposed to the spirit of comity and the right of Congress to regulate commerce. The Act of eighteen hundred and twenty-one, passed by the State of New York, was contested upon the ground that it was unconstitutional, flying in the face of slavery and the Constitution of the United States to pass it. That great man, under whose teachings Charles O'Conor stood, produced an argument almost identical with that of the gentleman from Marin—that to undertake to pass these laws was unconstitutional, and they were flying in the face of Providence and the Constitution of the United States.

Now, sir, all these provisions here are evasive. They undertake to escape from the results of a conflict of authority by undertaking to accomplish them in an indirect way. In my judgment, we ought to do whatever we do, directly. I don't like the language, "aliens ineligible to become citizens of the United States." If we mean Chinamen, why not say Chinamen or Mongolians? If we intend to rid the State of them, let us say so openly and squarely, and then we will have the respect of the Courts and of the government. They may set aside the declarations which we put in the Constitution, but if they do, no harm follows. We will gain nothing by saying "persons ineligible to become citizens," for everybody knows we mean that to include the Chinese, and no one else; so that it is far better and far more manly to say Chinamen at once. Let us make these propositions direct to the point, and something will be accomplished.

Now, my ideas of what ought to be embraced in this article—and I have no doubt they will shock the nerves of the gentlemen who are bound up in the Constitution of the United States—are somewhat different from this. They are my honest views, and they are open to criticisms. My ideas are embraced in an article which I have drawn on this subject, and gentlemen can vote for it or not, as they please. I know of no way to stiffen their backs or quicken their consciences. [Laughter.] I will read the article:

"ARTICLE —.

"IN RELATION TO MONGOLIANS.

"The people of California, while recognizing the paramount authority of the United States of America to regulate commerce and intercourse with foreign nations and all treaty obligations, demand, as they possess, the inalienable privilege of controlling their domestic affairs to the end that serfdom in every form may be abolished, and themselves protected from a vicious, non-assimilating population incapable of the duties of American citizenship. As intelligent citizenship must be the reliance of representative government, so must the presence of large numbers of persons incapable of such citizenship be its perpetual menace. In the immediate presence of this danger, and threatened with its overpowering continuance, a contingency not foreseen, and therefore not contemplated in the grant of power to regulate commerce made by the people to the Congress of the United States, the public safety authorizes and demands the following constitutional provisions:

"SECTION 1. All Mongolians within this State shall be required to remove therefrom within four years from the time this Constitution takes effect. At the first session of the Legislature convened hereunder, provision shall be made for judicial proceedings to compel such removal, and for the seizure and sale of so much of any property of such Mongolians who may not theretofore have voluntarily departed within the period herein limited, as may be necessary to defray the necessary cost of their removal from this State to their native country.

"SEC. 2. After this Constitution takes effect, no Mongolian shall carry on or maintain any business, occupation, profession, or mechanical trade for gain, or perform any usual manual labor for reward in this State, and it shall be unlawful for any person or persons, bodies corporate or politic, to employ, contract with, or harbor such aliens, except for temporary accommodation, shelter, or charity.

"SEC. 3. All persons or bodies corporate who shall violate the provisions of this article shall pay to the State suitable penalties, to be provided by the Legislature, and to be recovered in civil action or actions by the people of the State. No property shall be exempt from levy on execution or other process issued to collect such penalties according to law, and such penalties shall be a lien upon real property superior to any other lien created after this Constitution takes effect.

"SEC. 4. All penalties collected under the provisions of this article shall be placed in the State treasury, to the credit of a fund to be called the "Mongolian Transportation Fund." They shall be expended as the Legislature may direct, in the deportation to their native country of all Mongolians who shall be unable to provide transportation thereto for themselves; and also of all such Mongolians who may be imprisoned in any State Prison, County Jail, or other place of confinement for persons convicted of crime; and also of all such Mongolians, as aforesaid, who shall be or become paupers or inmates of public hospitals, almshouses, or places of refuge for the indigent and destitute.

"SEC. 5. All such Mongolians, as aforesaid, who shall, after this Constitution takes effect, be convicted of any crime or offense against the laws of the land, except capital offenses, shall, in lieu of fine or imprisonment, or both, be sentenced to deportation from this State to the country of their nativity, and the Legislature shall make due appropriations of public moneys for the purposes of this section to supply any deficiency in the fund to be provided by section three of this article.

"SEC. 6. The Legislature shall provide by law for the enforcement of the provisions of this article."

Now, let me call your attention to this treaty with China; and as I remarked at the outset that I believe a treaty made by the United States is subject to the same test as any law of Congress, and that it may be determined to be contrary to the spirit and letter of the government given to us the same as any law. Now, suppose you submit the treaty to the test of constitutionality, and set up that it is not in harmony with the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, declaring that only a homogeneous people, an intelligent people, a liberty-loving people, are qualified to form a republican government.

Let us see how this treaty reads:

"The twenty-ninth article of the treaty of the eighteenth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, having stipulated for the exemption of Christian citizens of the United States and Chinese converts from persecutions in China on account of their faith, it is further agreed that citizens of the United States in China, of every religious persuasion, and Chinese subjects in the United States, shall enjoy entire liberty of conscience, and shall be exempt from all disability or persecution on account of their religious faith or worship in either country. Cemeteries for sepulture of the dead, of whatever nativity or nationality, shall be held in respect and free from disturbance or profanation."

That is article four of the Burlingame treaty. Again I read:

"Citizens of the United States, visiting or residing in China, shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemption, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nations; and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects, visiting or residing in the United States, shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation. But nothing herein contained shall be held to confer naturalization upon citizens of the United States in China, nor upon subjects of China in the United States."

That is the sixth article of the treaty—the most favored nation clause. Now, there is upon the very face of the treaty a violation of the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and of our whole system of government. There is a class of people permitted to come here without limit or restriction, who are acknowledged to be unworthy of becoming citizens of the United States. If they were worthy, then that power ought to have been conferred upon them. If they are not worthy, then they have no business here, for this country has no use for an alien population. And I say if this treaty was submitted to the test of the American judiciary, it would, in my opinion, be held violate and subversive, and destructive of the principles upon which this government is founded, as contained in the instrument itself.

Now, sir, I believe it is our right, and not only our right but our duty, to test this question. Whether the treaty will be reformed or altered I do not know. I see that one of our Representatives in Washington has introduced a bill on this question, but I do not know what it will accomplish, even should it pass. But I want to test this matter in an open, direct, and manly way. I want it decided on a square basis. If we are overthrown, well and good, let us be overthrown upon a plain question, and not undertake to do it in this indirect and unsatisfactory manner, which will make us the laughing stock of the country. Now, section one of the article which I have prepared, says that "all Mongolians within this State shall be required to remove therefrom within four years from the time this Constitution takes effect. At the first session of the Legislature convened hereunder provision shall be made for judicial proceedings to compel such removal, and for the seizure and sale of so much of any property of such Mongolians who may not theretofore have voluntarily departed within the period herein limited, as may be necessary to defray the necessary cost of their removal from this State to their native country."

Now, it has been argued that we had the right to take them after they got here and locate them on a sort of a Chinese reservation, as the Government of the United States locates the Indians upon reservations removed from the settlements, where they are kept under the control of the government. If we can do that; if we have the power to designate one place, we have the power to put them out of the State. If we have a right to place one single restriction upon the residence of the Chinese here; if we have the right to locate them upon any given quarter section of land in this State, or put any limit upon them whatever, upon the ground that it is necessary for the protection of the public, why, then, if we think it is necessary for the protection of the public to make John go further, go out of the State, we have the power to make him go. "All Mongolians within this State shall be required to remove therefrom within four years from the time this Constitution takes effect." Now there is something direct about that proposition. [Laughter and applause.] It is a direct intimation to the Chinaman that his company is not desirable. [Laughter.] Now don't laugh—that is the legitimate result, I submit—the legitimate, honest result of the views expressed upon this floor, and all else that seeks to strike at this thing is simply in my judgment cowardly and evasive. I am prepared to vote for it, because I believe, with my colleague from San Francisco, that the Mongolian is a curse to our golden land, and because the prosperity and happiness of this people depend upon his going. If anything is to be done that will be effectual, it must be something of this nature. We want this question decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, and I have broadly declared here that we intend to exercise the power which we believe we possess to rid ourselves of this dangerous element, which is a perpetual menace to free institutions. Why not make this broad declaration instead of putting in such a provision as this: "The Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State, upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

I tell you there is nothing in it. It will accomplish no good whatever.

Now, I will take up section six, which provides that "foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to sue or be sued in any of the Courts of this State, and any lawyer appearing for or against them, or any of them, in a civil proceeding, shall forfeit his license to practice law. No such foreigner shall be granted license to carry on any business, trade, or occupation in this State, nor shall such license be granted to any person or corporation employing them. No such foreigner shall have the right to catch fish in any of the waters under the jurisdiction of the State; nor to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State; and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real estate to any such foreigner shall be void." Now, why should we put in a provision that they shall not fish in the waters of this State, nor to purchase, own, or lease real property? If the Chinaman stays here—if you are going to allow him to stay here—he should have every privilege that everybody else has. He should be allowed to engage in any business he pleases, and earn his living. He should have the protection of the laws guaranteed to him, if he is to be allowed to remain here. But I say he shall not stay here. He is undermining the welfare and prosperity of our people, and is the cause, in my judgment, of nine tenths of the tramping feet going on all over the land.

The great corporations, declaring dividends of seven, eight, and nine per cent. on stock watered four or five times over, have reduced the rate of wages so that the laboring man can no longer support himself, and wife, and little ones; and the corporations have been enabled to do this because of the presence of this cheap labor. Let us take the question up, and if we are going to deal with it at all, let us have something that will present the question fairly and squarely, and not go up to the Supreme Court upon a provision that will make us the laughing stock of the country—which is both a disgrace to manhood and a disgrace to the State. If you are going to keep the Chinaman here, give him the privileges of every other man, and let him earn his living the best way he can. But if we believe, as I think we do, that his presence is injurious and destructive to the very form of government under which we live; destructive to private rights and public morals; injurious to every interest of the State, there is no other way for men to do but to come squarely up and say to him, you shall go. [Applause.] We will give you a reasonable time, so that the Supreme Court of the United States may pass upon the question of our power, and decide between us, but if we have the power, you shall go. [Applause.]

Now, Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer this article as a substitute to the article reported by the Committee on Chinese.

MR. HILBORN. I do not rise to make a speech, but simply make a motion that the usual number of copies be printed. The members will then have a chance to read it and study it.

THE CHAIRMAN. Such a motion is not in order in the Committee of the Whole.

SPEECH OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. Chairman: Not having these amendments, proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, and having had no chance to read them, I wish to ask him whether, in his plan, he proposes to prevent the immigration of the Chinese.

MR. BARNES. No, sir; there is no plan for anything of that kind. They can come as much as they like; but when they get here we will send them back. If this constitutional provision shall be declared to be constitutional, I don't think many of them will be disposed to make the trip. It has been decided that we cannot interpose any restrictions upon immigration, but upon the theory that when they are here we can remove or deal with them, I make this article. If we send them away when they do come, they will not be apt to come.

MR. HILBORN. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

MR. BARNES. Yes, sir.

MR. HILBORN. Whether you will begin to remove them before the expiration of four years from the passage of this Act.

MR. BARNES. No, sir.

MR. MILLER. Then I understand the proposition. It is that the Chinese who are here, and those who come here, can remain for four years before they are to be disturbed, before we make any attempt to rid ourselves of them; and the Chinese who are not here can come for the next four years, without any effort on our part towards their prohibition. That is the sum and substance of this proposition. The other matters contained in the article are merely details.

Now, I do not see anything brave in that. [Laughter.] I do not denounce it as cowardly, as the gentleman did the report of the committee. I expected, when he got through with his denunciation of cowardice, that he would propose something that was the very essence of bravery—something warlike [laughter]; that he was going to do something that would involve some responsibility. Instead of that, what does he propose? Why, to entail this evil, this curse which he denounces with such fiery eloquence, as a perpetual menace to free institutions, as a disgrace to our civilization, as the destroyer of domestic peace and tranquillity—to entail this evil upon the people of California for four years more, without making a step to relieve ourselves from it. And as he considers that the State has the power, and is the proper authority to deal with this question, it seems to me he puts off the day of remedy for a long time.

Now, I must confess that the gentleman frightened me, and I suppose the other members of the committee were frightened also. We are a committee of very cowardly and unwarlike men, but we were trying faithfully to devise some plan whereby the State could relieve herself from this evil. In our humble, quiet, and peaceable way we did what we thought was for the best. I do not agree with all that the committee—the majority of the committee—have done in respect to these last sections, and particularly in relation to the non-employment of Chinamen. I opposed them in committee as improper to be offered to this Convention, but a majority of them agreed to it, and it was reported. Now, from the reading of the proposition offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes, I do not see that it is very much of an improvement upon these sections reported by the majority of the Committee on Chinese, in respect to non-employment. We say that we will deal with the paupers, vagrants, and criminals, as we have the undoubted right to do. We never pretended, never asserted, never intimated that this was a complete remedy for the Chinese evil. But we, in effect, said that in our view of the Constitution the powers of the State, under the Constitution of the United States, and the treaties made in pursuance of it, that all we could do was to deal with this class that were admitted to be dangerous—that class of persons which no foreign government has any right to allow to depart from their shores, to import into our country under any pretense of law. I explained that under the operations of the first section. I thought we could begin a system of deportation at once, in perhaps a simple way—not such a grand, warlike way as the gentleman from San Francisco would do, but in what I believe to be a legitimate and lawful way. I stated my belief that under the section we could debar from the State about five thousand of these people per annum. I believe so still. By that means, before the gentleman will have blown a single blast to call to battle his army for the banishment of the Chinaman, we will have rid the State of twenty thousand of the very worst of these people. What the gentleman expects to gain by placing California in open conflict with the treaty I cannot see. If we send five thousand back every year it will have some effect in stopping immigration; not, perhaps, a very great influence, but it will exert some influence in stopping immigration; that is all we claim; that it will have a tendency in that direction, because we know that these people are aided in coming here. They have not the means themselves to get here; they borrow the money—raise money in some way—by which to get here. They mortgage themselves; they mortgage their wages and their children—anything they have; mortgage their toil and labor for years in advance in order to raise the means requisite to bring them here. Now, we thought, by deporting five thousand every year the people in China who are in the habit of loaning this money, and giving aid to these people to come here, would at once see that they were in danger of losing the money by reason of the forced return of these people back to China. It would give them reason to fear that they would never get back their money, and they would be more careful about making these investments. That is one of the reasons why we proposed that section. We never pretended, we never dreamed, that it was going to settle the Chinese question.

I do not think it is necessary for me to further argue the question of the power of this State to qualify an Act of Congress, or to abrogate a treaty, or any part of it, made by the law-making power of this country. I say I do not think it is necessary to argue that question further, because the arguments that have been adduced on this side of the question have not been answered. They have never been touched. The gentleman who has just taken his seat has certainly not answered the arguments of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, or any part of his arguments. I think that question has been so thoroughly discussed, and the arguments are so conclusive, that it may be considered settled that the remedy, the full remedy, for this evil of Chinese immigration, rests not with the State but with the General Government. Gentlemen seem to forget here that when the framers of the Constitution made that instrument they did something more—they created a nation among the powers of the earth. They created a national sovereignty upon the face of this planet. That governmental sovereignty, that governmental power, has been maintained in the face of the world with tolerable success up to this time. They seem to forget that every State in this Union is a subordinate sovereignty to the national sovereignty; that the States have no relations with foreign powers; have not the power to make treaties, nor the power to repeal treaties. I do not believe the State of California can repeal the Burlingame treaty; I do not believe that any gentleman who has studied the question thoroughly, who understands the theory of our government, and the objects of our government, its purposes, and its powers, will contend for a moment that the State has the power to repeal, or alter, or abrogate a treaty made by that government, or an Act of Congress either.

Now, I am not going to repeat the arguments that have been made here by my friend from Marin, and other able gentlemen, in respect to the danger in the State's setting itself up in defiance to the Federal Government. I think it has been sufficiently demonstrated here that it is an unwise policy to pursue. I have no doubt there are a great many men in California who are perfectly willing, at any time, to implicate this State in a conflict with the Government of the United States. They say this will be no conflict, or, if it is, it will be nothing but a peaceable conflict. Now, suppose you pass an Act inhibiting Chinese immigration, or any other law in respect to this question, clearly violative of the Constitution of the United States. Suppose you prohibit vessels bringing these people into the ports of the State. You must pass some Act of the Legislature to carry out your prohibition. You must appoint officials to execute its provisions, and prevent the landing of these people. How will you do this? Your officers go aboard these ships and say to the captain, you must not land your passengers, the State forbids it. Well, suppose they say, we have the right to come and we will come. You take charge of these vessels, and put them in duress, you quarantine the passengers, until the case comes up in the Courts to try the validity of the Acts of your Legislature. The case is carried up to the Supreme Court of the United States, supposing that the Supreme Court of the State has decided in your favor. What have you gained? Why, you have simply stood up to be knocked down.

MR. BARNES. What do you mean by saying that the Chinese should not fish?

MR. MILLER. I have not proposed any such thing. The gentleman had better ask that question of somebody else. I have not proposed, and I shall not support this fourth section. I am quite satisfied that it is not in the power of the State to pass any such law. I hold in the first place that the Chinamen have some rights of some kind. There are two kinds of domiciles. One is a political domicile entitling the party to all political privileges. Another is the social domicile, under which he has the right of social domicile, but has no political rights, but has some rights. You cannot murder him with impunity. You cannot deprive him of his property. You cannot deprive him of the right to live. He has a right to what he owns, and he has a right to what he earns; and I say the right to labor is as high a right as the right to live, because it involves the right to live; the one includes the other, because all men must live by labor. If you deprive a man of the right to labor you deprive him of the power of subsistence. A man cannot live upon air. He cannot live on water. He cannot live on the elements. He must live on something raised from the soil. Deprive him of the right to labor and he must starve. I say you cannot do that with any human creature. It is a pernicious principle upon which all these sumptuary laws are founded—like a law saying that a man shall drink what the State prescribes. If you can go that far, you can go further, and enter into his house and see what kind of a fire he shall build; what sort of a house he shall have; and what sort of clothes he shall wear. I say I will never sustain any such propositions. I am willing to go as far as the power of the State will permit us to go, and that is, in my view, to prohibit the dangerous classes, such as criminals, diseased persons afflicted with contagious and infectious diseases, and paupers, from residing here. That class of persons are included in the section favored by the minority of the committee, but none others.

It has been shown conclusively by the gentleman from Marin that this class are not included in the treaty. There is no treaty with any government with whom the United States have relations, which authorizes them to cast upon our shores any such class of persons; but it does not follow that we have power to prohibit the whole nation, for they are not all of that class. There are other kinds of people. They are not all bad. They are not all paupers and criminals. And if you drive out the whole nation, declare that they are universally bad, you do something which you have no right to do. Right and reason will not sustain you in it. The law will not sustain you. It is a violent assumption on your part which the law will not permit you to profit by. It is a violation of the United States law regulating commerce.

Now, what is commerce? What is commercial intercourse? Commerce does not mean simply to trade. It means intercourse—intercourse of the people of one nation with the people of another nation. You cannot carry on commerce without intercourse. You cannot carry on commerce within the meaning of this treaty unless a certain number of the people of the other nation may reside in your country. This thing has been very well explained. I say it is not in the power of any State to dictate to the Government of the United States.

MR. HERRINGTON. I wish to ask the gentleman a question.

MR. MILLER. Certainly.

MR. HERRINGTON. Is there not a distinction. Some reside here for work. Some do washing, some cook, and they enter into various employments in this State, which have no reference to intercourse with other States. Such residence has nothing whatever to do with commerce.

MR. MILLER. I think it has. All kinds of business pertain to commerce. They have a right to come here and travel around through the country, and stay as long as they like. I think, in the present state of the public mind upon this question, it is unnecessary to put in an illegal thing. And if we did put in such a provision it would do no good, because, if the people of California show a spasmodic disposition on this subject; if we adopt these unconstitutional provisions, it will prejudice our case. For the ultimate success of our cause, it is necessary that we deport ourselves in this matter in a dignified and legal manner. That is my position. Now, my whole life and conduct have shown that I have been sincere, and uniformly opposed to Chinese immigration. I have been opposed to it for years—ever since my attention was called to the subject, and it is not in the mouth of any man here to rise and say because I believe the Constitution of the United States prohibits us from adopting these measures, I am insincere. No man has a right to say it, or intimate it. No man has a right to say it of any member. We are here to act upon our judgment and consciences; and God being my helper, I intend to do it, and I can say to the people that I have acted here upon what I believe to be reasonable, legal, and just. I believe the people of California will sustain me. I do not believe it is cowardly to take such a course. I do not believe it is ever cowardly to do right. [Applause.] I am not brave enough to violate the Constitution of the United States for the purpose of this question, or any other question, or for any other purpose. [Applause.]

Now, sir, haven't there been tests enough? Haven't these questions been decided and settled over and over again? You all know it; and under the pretext of making a test case, you propose to violate the Constitution of the United States. You can do as you like; I shall not do it. I am too cowardly to do it, if you please. I do not propose to say anything upon this subject; I have said all I wish to say, as I do not wish to go over what has already been said. It has been ably and liberally debated; nearly everything that can be said on either side has been said. I arose simply to vindicate the committee and myself from these aspersions—that the conduct of the committee in reporting these first and second sections was cowardly.

SPEECH OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I was inclined to think my friend from San Francisco, General Miller, was joking when he rose to his feet and said he was afraid when I commenced what I had to say. I thought he meant it as a joke. But I was inclined to think before he got through that he was afraid. Something or other was the matter—that he didn't seem to comprehend the remarks I made.

MR. MILLER. I was scared. [Laughter.]

MR. BARNES. Nobody is less inclined than myself to charge the gentleman with cowardice, and nobody has charged him with cowardice. He has been a brave and valiant soldier in the army of his country, and everybody knows he is not afraid, and nobody has any reason to say so or to think so. I was talking about the principle, and I said the best way to meet this question was the direct way; and I say, and I think it cannot be denied, that all the provisions contained in the article as submitted are in fact evasive. Now, I am not in favor of evasion. I am in favor, either of leaving this whole subject alone, or making a radical article; one that is fair and just; one that is fair and just to the Chinese, fair and just to ourselves. And that is no crime, as I insist, against the Constitution of the United States; and I do not think any gentleman need be afraid to sustain that, or any other proposition that is advanced here upon principle, because it may, in some sense, seem to be against the Constitution of the United States. Lawyers differ, and Judges decide, and the Supreme Court settles it one way or the other.

Now, to say that this whole thing should stand upon the undoubted question of the police power of the State, is to say too little. An entirely different condition of things exist now from what did exist at the time any one of the questions was passed upon by the higher Courts of the nation. It is time to advance. The gentleman says his provision provides for the deportation of the criminal classes. That object is attained by the proposition I submit, which takes effect immediately. That provision deals with the criminal class, with which we have the undoubted right to deal. I propose to do this, either by general taxation, or by requiring those who employ them to pay in some form to the government something that should provide a fund, at the end of a given time, to be employed for the deportation of those who belong to the diseased classes. I propose to put the time at four years, and the gentleman says, why not have it operate at once. I say they are entitled to notice, and four years seems to me to be but reasonable notice—reasonable to those who deal with them—a reasonable and fair length of time for all concerned. As far as the criminal classes are concerned, that provision takes effect at once.

Now, it is possible, barely possible, that as the science of jurisprudence grows, it has taken, and will take, steps in advance as to what are understood to be popular rights. I do not suppose there is a distinguished lawyer on this floor—the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, the gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter, or the gentleman from San Francisco, General Miller, lawyer as well as general—who would undertake to say that in five years, or ten years, the higher Courts may not have taken advanced doctrines as to what are considered popular rights. Such advances are necessary in order to keep pace with the changed condition of things. The bearing of circumstances may change and alter the condition of things, and the law, being a progressive science, will move along and keep pace with this change; and if we put a clause in the Constitution that will permit this question to be reopened and reëxamined, no man need be afraid of this being in the nature of a defiance of the Constitution of the United States. It is the only way to test it. It is the legitimate, legal, honorable method of testing it, and having our powers and our rights defined. It does not require either bravery or cowardice, and it was not necessary for the gentleman to say that no man had a right to charge him with insincerity, for no one did charge him with it.

MR. MILLER. I did not allude to you.

MR. KLEINE. Suppose the four years expires, and the Chinese do not go? We want them to go.

MR. BARNES. I propose to make them go.

MR. KLEINE. Perhaps it will take four years longer to make them go.

MR. BARNES. We have a way to make them go; but we will do it according to the forms of law. It is my purpose to deal with this subject, not only in view of the powers which it is admitted we have, but to try and see if we have not something more. He gets nothing who asks nothing. If we fail to assert our powers, we will reap no benefit from them. They say we can deal with this subject under our police power, but that is as far as we can go without running counter to the Constitution of the United States. I have no fear of hurting the Constitution of the United States. But what I do say is, that we shall see how far a treaty can infringe upon the powers rightfully belonging to the State. If we believe we have rights, let us maintain those rights, and let the United States Courts draw the line. No harm is done to the government, because the Courts of that government are the ones we appeal to. The Constitution of the United States will stand forever, against the storm and tempest, like the lighthouse upon the rock-bound coast. The waves beat against it, but still it stands. No man pretends to claim any such thing, and it would be folly if he did; and the gentleman puts us in a wrong attitude. We are seeking to put this State in a position where it can ask—where it can act. We put it into the organic law, and if the Supreme Court shall decide against us, when the case comes to be tested, that will be the end of it. But if, taking an advanced step, in accord with the progress of the age, they shall sustain us, then we will have accomplished something of consequence.

I do not desire to make a demagogic argument. I have nobody to please except myself. I have nobody to please but myself. It would have been far more agreeable if I could have kept silent, and agreed with my friend Wilson. Generally my views drift in straight lines with his, but this is an exception. I think it is time now to make some advance to meet a popular demand and a popular necessity. I am not so much personally interested as many others. I can live somewhere else as well as here. Chinese immigration strikes no blow at me. But I do not want to see this beautiful land the home of barbarians. I want to stop it; but I want to deal with the matter in an open, manly way. I want to say to the criminal classes, this is no home for you. I propose that the men who employ these Chinamen shall be held responsible. I do not claim that this is going to raise wages, or assist the laboring classes, except to give them the work which is now performed by Chinamen. I do not believe that the Chinamen's going will help the laboring classes as far as wages are concerned. I think there are natural laws which reach far beyond that. I have not discussed this question in that aspect at all. I think that so long as wages are low at the East, they will be comparatively low here. Any raise of wages here will bring laborers here from the East, and the prices will be governed by the supply. There are others who are interested in this question to as great an extent as the laboring classes. The taxpayers, who are compelled to support these Chinese criminals in our prisons, are interested, and vitally interested. The Chinese have a government within a government, which is stronger than ours. Look at the one hundred and twenty thousand Chinese in this State, how few of them resort to our Courts to settle their own differences. Once in a great while you see them litigating, but it is not general. They punish for offenses against their code of laws independent of our Courts. They have their own code of laws. They buy and sell property according to the laws of the Empire of China. Whether this change will help the laboring classes I do not know. I doubt it very much. I do not believe it will be of any great assistance, or that their salvation is to be worked out in this way. I did not intend to say this much at this time, but I wanted to correct the erroneous impressions that had gone out, and make myself understood.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I believe the report of the committee should not be further acted upon until the substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes, is printed, and I therefore move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Lost.

SPEECH OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. Chairman: I believe the question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Dr. O'Donnell.

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment again.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to all these amendments. I prefer the original section as presented by the Committee on Chinese, because it goes further and is more effective than any of these amendments. Now, sir, the first section provides that "the Legislature shall have and shall exercise the power to enact all needful laws, and prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

Now, sir, all the criticisms upon this first section are unmerited, because, under it, if it is adopted, the Legislature can provide for the removal of all persons, and especially all Chinamen, who are deemed dangerous to the safety and well-being of the State. And under that section, sir, every Chinaman in the State, if the Legislature declares him to be dangerous to the peace and safety of the State, can be removed out of it, and at once. There is no four years about it. Therefore, I am in favor of that section. And I may say, as a general thing, that after a committee have spent weeks upon a subject, and the majority bring in a report, I am loth to offer or accept amendments. Now, my plan is to adopt the report of the committee down to the sixth section. To adopt the fifth section and stop, because, I think, these sections cover the whole question. As far as the arguments that have been presented here are concerned, I am somewhat astonished, in view of these arguments, that the able gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, and the learned gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter, should be willing to support this first section. They see nothing unconstitutional in that, they see nothing wrong in that, though, in point of fact, it gives us power to remove every Chinaman in the State.

There is another reason in favor of adopting several sections in regard to this subject—because it is a well settled principle of construction, that in all laws one section may be constitutional and valid, and another unconstitutional and invalid. And therefore it is that if we adopt the first section and it shall be held to be constitutional and valid, as the gentleman from San Francisco and the gentleman from Marin say they believe, then, at least, we will have accomplished so much. Now, sir, as to those arguments which have been addressed here to the proposition that the State is bound—absolutely bound—by what the Federal Government does, and has no recourse—cannot resist—when they adduce such arguments they do so against the plain decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. I stated yesterday that these six Judges in the Passenger cases had declared that the State had the power, as a matter of self-defense, to protect itself against injurious legislation by Congress, if attempted. I now find that I was mistaken as to the number—there were seven. In reviewing it again to-day, I find that Judge McLean says that in giving this power to Congress, the States did not part with the power of self-preservation, which must be inherent in organized communities. They may guard against the introduction of anything which may corrupt the morals or endanger the lives and health of the citizens. There were seven Judges agreed on that point. And no case has been produced—no case can be produced—overruling that decision. Judge Wayne says that if Congress should ever undertake to pass a law which, against the wishes of the people of the State, were to impose upon her a dangerous class of citizens, such law would be pronounced unconstitutional; and a treaty stands no higher than a law of Congress. All the decisions go to the extent that a law of Congress or a treaty in violation of the Constitution is void, and has no legal existence whatever.

Now, if the committee will bear with me a moment, I will read a few sentences from the opinion of Judge Wayne:

"But I have said the States have the right to turn off paupers, vagabonds, and fugitives from justice, and the States where slaves are have a constitutional right to exclude all such as are, from a common ancestry and country, of the same class of men. And when Congress shall legislate—if it be not disrespectful for one who is a member of the judiciary to suppose so absurd a thing of another department of government—to make paupers, vagabonds, suspected persons, and fugitives from justice subjects of admission into the United States, I do not doubt it will be found and declared, should it ever become a matter for judicial decision, that such persons are not within the regulating power which the United States have over commerce. Paupers, vagabonds, and fugitives never have been subjects of rightful national intercourse or of commercial regulations, except in the transportation of them to distant colonies to get rid of them, or for punishment as convicts. They have no rights of national intercourse; no one has a right to transport them, without authority of law, from where they are to any other place, and their only rights where they may be are such as the law gives to all men who have not altogether forfeited its protection.

"The States may meet such persons upon their arrival in port, and may put them under all proper restraints. They may prevent them from entering their territories, may carry them out or drive them off. But can such a police power be rightfully exercised over those who are not paupers, vagabonds, or fugitives from justice? The international right of visitation forbids it. The freedom of liberty of commerce allowed by all European nations to the inhabitants of other nations does not permit it; and the constitutional obligations of the States of this Union to the United States, in regard to commerce, and navigation, and naturalization, have qualified the original discretion of the States as to who shall come and live in the United States."

Now, sir, that is what the Court said; that is what the Court determined. That is what Justice Wayne said; that is substantially what Justice McLean said. And Judge Grier, 7 Howard, 450, says: "It must be borne in mind (what has sometimes been forgotten) that the controversy in this case is not with regard to the right claimed by the State of Massachusetts, in the second section of this Act, to repel from her shores lunatics, idiots, criminals, or paupers, which any foreign country, or even one of her sister States might endeavor to thrust upon her; nor the right of any State, whose domestic security might be endangered by the admission of free negroes, to exclude them from her borders. The right of the States has its foundation in the sacred law of self-defense, which no power granted to Congress can restrict or annul. It is admitted by all, that those powers which relate merely to municipal legislation, or what may be more properly called internal police, are not surrendered or restrained; and that it is as competent and necessary for a State to provide precautionary measures against the moral pestilence of paupers, vagabonds, and convicts, as it is to guard against the physical pestilence which may arise from unusual and infectious articles imported." * * *

Now, these were cases in which the State of New York and the State of Massachusetts attempted to impose a tax upon passengers arriving from foreign countries. That is, they first attempted to require a bond from the master of the vessel that such parties should not become a charge upon the State. The Act provides that they might go on board the ship, take a list of these passengers, see who they were and where they came from, exact a bond from the master of the vessel in the sum of five hundred dollars, or any other sum, that these people should not become a government charge. In lieu of a bond it provided that they might accept a tax of one dollar and fifty cents from each passenger. The Court decided that this was a restriction of commerce, and therefore contrary to the Constitution of the United States and void. The opinions that I have just read go to the extent of giving the State power to protect itself against paupers, vagrants, and criminals. The second plan presented here in this report goes to the extent of compelling prohibition of Chinese immigration.

Now, that is a solemn decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, and I challenge the gentleman to produce anything to the contrary. Now, sir, I was particularly lost in admiration at the ingenious manner with which my learned friend from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, touched this matter. He talked all round the point, and when I put a question to him, he tried very hard not to answer it. He is too skillful and wary to put his foot in it, as he would have done had he answered the question.

MR. WILSON. I thought I had answered you very successfully. Quite a number of the people said so. [Laughter.]

MR. HOWARD. You didn't answer me at all, and how it could have been successful, I do not know. He was absolutely dumb, and made no retort. He answered in the only way he could, by remaining silent about it. Now, sir, I say if this people are dangerous, as they are admitted to be, our power to expel them is undoubted, according to the emphatic decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. Are they not dangerous? Who denies it? Who dares to deny it? Have they not a government of their own here, independent of ours, by which they administer law and life in open defiance of our law? Why, there is a sect in India known as Thugs who murder everybody but their own sect. Suppose that a cargo of Thugs is about to be introduced from India and landed here. Are we compelled to submit to their introduction within our borders? Judge Wayne, Judge Greer, and a majority of the Court of eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, say no. We may meet them on the shore and prevent their landing; or, if they landed, send them away. That is law and common sense. But, according to the doctrines of the gentlemen from Marin, we would have to wait until the Thugs commenced to murder our people, before we could interfere and send them away. Again, sir, suppose the United States Government should, by subsidizing a line of steamers, bring a lot of cannibals here. Do the gentlemen mean to say we cannot meet these cannibals and turn them away. According to the haggling doctrines of the gentleman from Marin we must wait till they have eaten a man clear up to his eyebrows before we must say a word. We must not even protest against it for fear of hurting somebody's feelings. It is absurd. There is no sense in it. There is no reason in it. And being destitute of common sense and reason, it cannot be true as a proposition of constitutional law.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. LAINE. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Schell, Rolfe, West, and Smith, of San Francisco.

Carried—ayes, 65; noes, 37.

THE CHAIRMAN. The first question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Donnell.

Lost—ayes, 1; noes, not counted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman, is it offered as a substitute, or as an addition to the section.

THE CHAIRMAN. As a substitute.

The substitute was rejected.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer an amendment.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I understand that I will have to offer my proposition section by section; that it cannot be submitted as a whole article.

THE CHAIRMAN. Take them up and offer them section by section as we reach them.

MR. BARNES. I move that the preamble and section one be adopted as a substitute to section one, as reported by the committee.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The people of California, while recognizing the paramount authority of the United States of America to regulate commerce and intercourse with foreign nations, and all treaty obligations, demand, as they possess the inalienable privilege of controlling their domestic affairs to the end that serfdom in every form may be abolished, and themselves protected from a vicious, non-assimilating population, incapable of the duties of American citizenship. As intelligent citizenship must be the reliance of representative government, so must the presence of large numbers of persons, incapable of such citizenship, be its perpetual menace.

"In the immediate presence of this danger, and threatened with its overpowering continuance—a contingency not foreseen, and therefore not contemplated in the grant of power to regulate commerce made by the people to the Congress of the United States—the public safety authorizes and demands the following constitutional provisions:

"SECTION 1. All Mongolians within this State shall be required to remove therefrom within four years from the time this Constitution takes effect. At the first session of the Legislature convening hereunder provision shall be made for judicial proceedings to compel such removal, and for the seizure and sale of so much of any property of such Mongolians who may not theretofore have voluntarily departed within the period herein limited, as may be necessary to defray the necessary cost of their removal from this State to their native country."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I desire to have Colonel Barnes' proposition printed. I therefore move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried. Ayes, 80; noes, 35.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

MR. HUESTIS. I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

MR. STEDMAN. I hope the gentleman will withdraw the motion temporarily, so as to permit the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes, to make a motion which he desires to make.

MR. HUESTIS. I withdraw it.

MR. BARNES. I move that the preamble and article submitted by myself be printed and laid on the desks of members to-morrow morning. I want the proposition to have a fair consideration.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move as an amendment that all the sections be printed—four hundred and eighty copies—out of order.

THE PRESIDENT. That is the motion already.

MR. ROLFE. I would like to know whether the printers can do it, and get it back here in time.

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

MR. FILCHER. I move as an amendment that it be printed in the Journal to-morrow morning.

Carried.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. STEDMAN. I move we now adjourn.

Carried.

And, at four o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

SEVENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Friday, December 13th, 1878.

REPORT ON EDUCATION.

MR. WINANS, from the Committee on Education, presented the following report:

To the President of the Convention:

Your Committee on Education, to whom were referred amendments numbers thirty-six, fifty-three, fifty-five, sixty-seven, seventy-nine, one hundred and eighty-five, two hundred and fourteen, two hundred and seventeen, two hundred and twenty-four, two hundred and forty-two, two hundred and forty-seven, two hundred and fifty-four, two hundred and sixty-seven, two hundred and ninety-seven, three hundred and fifteen, three hundred and eighty, four hundred and forty, four hundred and forty-nine, four hundred and sixty, four hundred and sixty-nine, and five hundred, having considered the same respectfully report said amendments back to the Convention, with a recommendation that they be not adopted.

So much of such proposed amendments as your committee have approved is either literally or in a modified form embraced in the educational system, which is proposed by your committee, and accompanies this report.

Your committee have the honor to submit, and recommend the adoption of the same as Article Nine of the Constitution.

December 12th, 1878.

ARTICLE IX.

EDUCATION.

SECTION 1. A general diffusion of knowledge and intelligence being essential to the preservation of the rights and liberties of the people, the Legislature shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of intellectual, scientific, moral, and agricultural improvement.

SEC. 2. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall, at the first gubernatorial election after the adoption of this Constitution, and every four years thereafter, be elected by the qualified voters of this State. He shall receive a salary equal to that of the Secretary of State, and shall enter upon the duties of his office on the first Monday of January next after his election.

SEC. 3. A Superintendent of Schools for each county shall be elected by the qualified voters thereof at the first gubernatorial election, and every four years thereafter; provided, that the Legislature may authorize two or more counties to unite and elect one Superintendent for all the counties so uniting.

SEC. 4. The proceeds of all lands that have been or may be granted by the United States to this State for the support of common schools which may be, or may have been, sold or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States under an Act of Congress distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several States of the Union, approved A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as may be granted or have been granted by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all the rents of the unsold lands and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State, subject to the provisions of section six of this article.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall provide for a system of common schools by which a free school shall be kept up and supported in each district at least six months in every year, after the first year, in which a school has been established; and any school district neglecting to keep up and support such a school, shall be deprived of its proportion of the interest of the public fund during such neglect.

SEC. 6. The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, and such high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools, as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority; but the entire revenue derived from the State School Fund, and the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools.

SEC. 7. A State Board of Education, consisting of two members from each Congressional district, shall be elected by the qualified voters of the district at the first gubernatorial election after the adoption of this Constitution, who shall hold their office for the term of four years, and enter upon the duties thereof on the first Monday of January next after their election; provided, that such members first so elected shall be divided into two equal classes—each class consisting of one member from each district—and that the first class shall go out of office at the expiration of two years from the commencement of their term of office; and at each general biennial election after such gubernatorial election, one member of such Board shall be elected from each Congressional district, so that one half thereof shall be elected biennially. The Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be ex officio a member of such Board, and President thereof.

SEC. 8. The State Board of Education shall recommend a series of text-books for adoption by the local Boards of Education, or by the Boards of Supervisors, and County Superintendents of the several counties where such local Boards do not exist, but such recommendation shall not be compulsory. After the adoption of a series of text-books by said Boards, or any of them, such books must be continued in use for not less than four years. The State Board of Education shall also have control of the examination of teachers and the granting of certificates. They shall possess such further powers and perform such further duties as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 9. No public money shall ever be appropriated for the support of any sectarian or denominational school, or any school not under the exclusive control of the officers of the public schools.

SEC. 10. The University of California shall constitute a public trust, and its organization and government shall be perpetually continued in their existing form and character, subject only to such legislative control as may be necessary to insure compliance with the terms of its endowments, and of the several Acts of the Legislature of this State, and of the Congress of the United States, donating lands or money for its support. It shall be entirely independent of all political or sectarian influences, and kept free therefrom in the appointment of its Regents, and in the administration of its affairs.

THE PRESIDENT. The report will lie on the table and be printed.

MR. HILBORN. The Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses report the following resolution, in relation to the ice bill of December, and recommend its adoption:

Resolved, That the sum of thirty-three and eighty one hundredths dollars be appropriated, out of the fund for carrying on this Convention, to pay the bill of the Pacific Ice Company for the month ending December first, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and that the warrant be drawn in favor of the Sergeant-at-Arms of this Convention.

Adopted.

PETITION.

MR. SWING presented the following petition, signed by a number of the citizens of San Bernardino County, against any provision prohibiting appropriations for charitable purposes:

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY, California, November 12, 1878.

To Honorables Byron Waters, H. C. Rolfe, and R. G. Swing, members of the Constitutional Convention of California:

The undersigned, your constituents, hereby petition each of you to oppose the insertion of any clause or clauses in the new Constitution that will forbid or in any manner restrict future Legislatures from appropriating any State moneys to private orphan asylums.

Very respectfully.

Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

NO MORE ICE.

MR. HILBORN. As there seems to be some opposition to the payment of the bills, I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to dispense with the further use of ice for members.

Carried.

LIMIT TO TIME OF SPEAKING.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I desire to call up the notice I gave yesterday to amend Rules Fifty-six and Forty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

Amend Rule Number Forty-three so as to read as follows:

RULE NUMBER FORTY-THREE—TIMES A MEMBER MAY SPEAK.

No member shall speak more than twice on any one question, nor more than fifteen minutes at any one time, without first obtaining leave of the Convention, nor more than once until other members who have not spoken shall speak, if they so desire.

Amend Rule Number Fifty-six so as to read as follows:

The Rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole so far as they may be applicable, except that the ayes and noes shall not be taken, but the previous question may be moved; provided, that when the previous question is sustained, it shall only apply to the amendments then pending, and other amendments may be offered to the section.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: It will be observed that the only amendment to this Rule Fifty-six is in striking out a part of the second and third lines. It simply strikes out the words "except for limiting the times of speaking and." It will be observed that all the amendments are contained in that rule as read with this exception that I have mentioned. In amending Rule Forty-three the only change which is made is in adding after the word "question," in the first line, the words "nor more than fifteen minutes at any one time." That is all the amendments that are made. The one depends upon the other. Without the one is adopted the other is useless. I think that the reason for these amendments are obvious to every member of the Convention. It is not the design to cut off any legitimate debate. It is simply to put it within the control of the Convention. The Convention ought to have more jurisdiction over it. The time of any member will be extended whenever the Convention desires to hear him. Therefore I think that the Convention should have control over the debate.

MR. TINNIN. I desire to offer an amendment to Rule Forty-six.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will have to give one day's notice.

MR. TINNIN. I mean Rule Forty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

Provided, That the Chairman of the several standing committees may have one hour when their reports are first read in the Committee of the Whole.

MR. TINNIN. I think that is fair. The remarks made by the Chairmen on the taking up of their reports have been interesting and instructive.

MR. WEBSTER. I think there will be no objection to its being added. I have no objection to accepting the amendment. This Convention will extend the time to any reasonable extent at any time.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I am utterly opposed to this proposition to limit the time of speakers in Committee of the Whole to fifteen minutes. I look upon it as an attempt, after the great and eloquent orators of this body have had full swing in making known their views, to shoke off the small fry, among whom I include myself. I submit to all fair-minded, candid men, that this would hardly be right or just. For myself, I have occupied the floor very little indeed, as all members know, not but what I would like to have spoken many times when I was silent, and was unable to do so. But there are questions coming up for discussion in which I desire to take a part; questions on which I claim to be somewhat informed, and when I shall speak upon these questions, I will certainly require more than fifteen minutes to present my views intelligently. There may be only one single question on which I shall desire to be heard at any great length, but under this rule I shall be cut off—absolutely gagged from having my full say. There is a subject to come up which I deem of vital importance, and one which I think should be fully ventilated in debate. I appeal to the common sense of the majority, if it is just to apply the gag now, when it will strike members in my position? I have sat in this Convention, and voted constantly against all attempts to limit gentlemen to any specified time, on the principle of doing unto others as I would like to be done by. That is an excellent principle, which we should never forget, because if we act contrary to it, we may ourselves some time suffer for it. I appeal to the sense of justice of a majority of this Convention to vote down this proposition to alter Rule Forty-three.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: Upon the adoption of this amendment depends whether this Convention makes a Constitution or not. Seventy-six days of the time allowed in the Act are now spent, and we have not completed half the work of this Convention. After the one hundred days, we have to depend upon our own resources. There will be no provision to pay us. The money will be exhausted in a few days more. We may draw warrants for the balance of the one hundred days after the fund is exhausted, but after the one hundred days expire members will have to remain at their own expense. I do not believe that a majority of the Convention can afford to stay here two months longer to complete a Constitution. I think fifteen minutes is long enough time for any gentleman to express his position on most questions, and my experience has been that when a man is talking to the question the point is never raised. But the Convention should have the power to call time, so that speeches should not be made for delay. Members can say all that is necessary in explanation of their votes in fifteen minutes.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I shall vote in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster, but I shall not vote for the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Trinity, Mr. Tinnin. I want to see all members upon this floor placed upon an equal footing. I want to see the fifteen-minute rule applied to all; and if a member is delivering an interesting speech, one in which the Convention is interested, the time can very easily be extended. I do not desire to see the amendment to the amendment adopted. I do not believe that the Chairmen want that advantage, or very few of them. Let us have the rule, and if they are not delivering interesting speeches, let us cut them off in fifteen minutes.

MR. KLEINE. I offer this, Mr. President:

Resolved, That from and after the adoption of this Constitution no Mongolian shall be allowed to have in his possession any firearms of any description.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is out of order.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I hope that this body will not adopt this fifteen-minute rule, because it will take more time than that to discover where the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, stands on any question. [Laughter.] I am opposed to it.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I hope this gag law, as it is called, will be sustained. I do not call it a gag law. I have made a calculation, to the best of my mathematical ability, as to the length of time that will be required to complete our work at the same rate of speed we are going now, and according to the calculation that I have made it will take until the first of next October. So any gentleman can see that our work will be useless. We must get it done by the fore part of May. I do not charge it to any gentleman here, and I do not suppose it has been done, but if there are any reasonable number of delegates here who are opposed to this Constitution, who are working to defeat entirely the work of the Convention, which I do not suppose there are, they could very easily do so by talking against time, and there has been already too much talk on this matter. We have had enough talk. Let us get down to business.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I am rather sorry to hear the gentleman on the other side of the hall calling this gag law. I do not look upon it so. We have spent seventy-six days here, and what have we done? If we keep on in this way, when will we ever get our work through? I believe that fifteen minutes is long enough for any delegate to tell all he knows. The Chairman should have more time. Therefore I hope the amendment will be adopted.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: It seems to me that the time for four-hour speeches has gone by, and I am in favor of this fifteen-minute rule. We never will get through unless we adopt some such rule. Gentlemen have occupied a half day here talking about one thing and another that is not to the question at all. If this rule is adopted every member will confine himself more directly to the question, and in fifteen minutes he will be done, and the Convention will get through with their work more rapidly.

MR. SMITH of Santa Clara. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment of the gentleman from Trinity, Mr. Tinnin, has been accepted by the mover of the amendment to the rule.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I call for the ayes and noes.

Messrs. Stedman, Ringgold, Farrell, and Harrison also demanded the ayes and noes.

MR. McCALLUM. I move to strike out the proviso.

MR. TINNIN. I rise to a point of order. The previous question had been moved.

THE PRESIDENT. The previous question had not been ordered.

MR. LARKIN. The ayes and noes had been moved, therefore the motion was not in order.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the amendment to Rule Forty-three was adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

Andrews,	Harrison,	Ohleyer,
Ayers,	Harvey,	Porter,

Kleine,

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment to Rule Forty-three is adopted. The question recurs on the amendment to Rule Fifty-six.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move an amendment to the amendment. I offer as an amendment Rule Fifty-six, as printed in the Standing Rules. There is going to be another opportunity to get rid of the previous question in Committee of the Whole, and I cannot afford to let it pass. That is the reason I move this amendment. There is another reason. We do not need the previous question in Committee of the Whole, because we have adopted the fifteen-minute rule. With that rule there is no necessity of ever moving the previous question in Committee of the Whole.

MR. TERRY. That rule as printed in the Standing Rules contains the words "except for limiting the times of speaking."

MR. REYNOLDS. I will send up my amendment.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I think we can be killed in fifteen minutes by some men's talking, and I hope it will not be adopted.

THE SECRETARY read Mr. Reynolds' amendment, as follows:

RULE FIFTY-SIX.

The rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole, so far as they may be applicable, except that the ayes and noes shall not be taken, and that the previous question shall not be moved.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: Now that we have adopted the fifteen-minute rule in Committee of the Whole, which we ought to have done in the first place, instead of the previous question, I hope that the Convention will take that absurdity out of the rules, and do away with the previous question in Committee of the Whole.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: All I desire to say is that the adoption of the amendment will defeat the rule we have just adopted, because it excepts limiting the time of speaking.

THE PRESIDENT. He does not include that in his amendment.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: Let me say here that the previous question in Committee of the Whole has had but one single effect, not to save fifteen minutes time on any one question, but it has led, on three different occasions, to having business so jammed up that it required three days to get out of the difficulty. Members have been surprised into voting upon amendments that they did not approve. A section is read in this way, an amendment is offered, and then another amendment. A discussion ensues, and then some person, who regards it as his special duty, moves the previous question, and that is the only speech that gentleman ever makes. The Convention then comes to a vote upon the last pending amendment, and then turns its attention to the next amendment. This amendment may be a good one, if it could be slightly amended, but this cannot be done, and the committee must adopt it as it is, or reject it altogether. In nine cases out of ten gentlemen are compelled to vote for something that does not suit them, and the result has been that we have been three days at a time getting out of this trouble. Let us return to something like reasonable sense. Let us return to the time-honored custom—a custom which all legislative bodies have adopted since the time when the memory of man runs not back. Have no previous question in Committee of the Whole, and then you always have an opportunity to perfect your work. That is what the Committee of the Whole is for.

MR. REDDY. I think this is rather a bad time to change the rules.

MR. REYNOLDS. I call for the ayes and noes.

Messrs. White, Inman, Nelson, and Farrell also demanded the ayes and noes.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I undertake to say that the confusion which has arisen here and the misunderstanding, has been from the fact that for days general questions have been discussed, and the immediate pending question has not been referred to at all. If we continue with the understanding that after a reasonable time discussion shall close, the result will be that members will discuss the pending question and not the general subject. I think we had better not change this rule of disposing of the two pending amendments, which would be the effect of the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

AYES.

Tinnin,

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment is rejected. The question recurs on the amendment to Rule Fifty-six, offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster.

The amendment was adopted.

PAY OF EMPLOYÉS.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: If it is in order, I move to take from the table the resolution offered by me on the seventh instant, in relation to the pay of the employés of the Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I second the motion.

MR. BARNES. I do it for the purpose of modifying and altering the resolution and explaining it. I do not think it was understood.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, The appropriation for the expenses of this Convention is now nearly exhausted, and the session is likely to be prolonged to the limit expressed in the Act of the Legislature convening this body, and perhaps beyond it,

Resolved, That when payments from said appropriation shall reduce the balance in the State treasury to the sum of seven thousand dollars, the President be and he is hereby directed not to certify any payroll for the per diem of members, and that said unexpended balance be reserved exclusively to the expenses of the Convention, other than per diem of members, and to the payment of salaries and wages of employés.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that this resolution will remain on the table, because I believe it perfectly absurd. We are all here the servants of the people. Those who came here and solicited these places if they do not wish to remain can go. We can get others to take their places. Already gentlemen have offered to come and take their places, and take their chances for pay; perfectly willing and perfectly competent. They are no better than us, and we are no better than they are. We are all servants of the people here together. I think every delegate intends to remain here and perform the duty we were sent here to do, even if we never get a dollar for the time beyond the hundred days, or beyond the extent of this appropriation. Now, we ask of them to do the same. They come and solicited these places, but of course they can walk off, and we will get others in their places. There are men on this floor who will do the duties of this desk, if the men leave it who have been elected to do the work. There are men here who will see to these doors and perform all the duties of every employé in this house, if it is necessary. But as to this distinction, that they are something so inferior, that is assuming a position of grandeur that I have no sympathy with. I contend that we must all go together, and take just what we get; and this idea of making ourselves so grand that we are to give out our pay to them, I do not consent to it, and I trust this Convention will take this view of the matter, and if these gentlemen wish to retire let them retire.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I only asked that the resolution should be taken from the table in order that I might modify it and amend it, and put it in a shape where I think it can be adopted. If the gentlemen agree with the proposition of my friend from Santa Cruz, that the members of the Convention can do all the work that is required to be done here, I have no objection. I think the gentleman would look very cunning running around here as a Page, and it would be delightful to call him in from cleaning a spittoon to take part in the proceedings of this body. I simply ask to have the resolution taken up so that I can amend it, and then the Convention may dispose of it as they see fit.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: With all due deference to the gentleman from San Francisco, whom I respect very much, I move that the motion to take from the table be indefinitely postponed.

MR. TULLY. I would like to make an inquiry.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order.

MR. TULLY. I want to know what this Convention has to do with that question? Every member is entitled to his money as long as there is any. I propose to have my money as long as it lasts; and after that I propose to stay here and pay my own expenses as long as there is any Convention, and take my chances.

MR. JOYCE. It seems to me that this thing has been settled.

The motion to indefinitely postpone the motion to take from the table prevailed.

NOTICE.

MR. O'SULLIVAN sent up the following notice:

I give notice that I will, on Monday, December sixteenth, move an additional amendment or proviso to Rule Forty-three, so that a member who presents a minority report from a standing committee shall also be permitted to speak for one hour.

Laid over for one day.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes.

SPEECH OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I did not intend to say anything on this subject, but, inasmuch as I cannot vote to the extent of my desire in the premises, I wish to briefly explain my vote, and I hope I may not exceed the fifteen-minute rule; if I do exceed it a few minutes I hope I may not be interrupted. Now, Mr. President, I appreciate, to the fullest extent, as has been said here, the difficulties and dangers of this Chinese question. We all appreciate the fact that we have upon us here a system which, unless it is checked, will result in a species of slavery in this State, and perhaps in other States, as objectionable, if not more objectionable, than the system of slavery that prevailed in the Southern States. We have a population here not only foreign in law but foreign in nature, and a population that in the nature of things cannot become assimilated, as every man knows. It would not be desirable if it could be assimilated. Then, Mr. Chairman, we have this condition of things: unless checked it will bring up in this country men of great wealth, concentrated capital, large landed estates, which we unfortunately are plagued with here, and an inferior race as laborers. Every one recognizes that as the ultimate result, unless some check is put to this. American institutions cannot survive long when one class of the population are a degenerate and inferior race, incapable of becoming citizens, incapable of taking any part in the government, and when another class are becoming richer and absorbing the estate and property of the country. As has been well said:

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

Republican institutions cannot, I say, survive such a condition of things. We all understand this on the Pacific Coast, and I think our brethren across the mountains are beginning to comprehend the question in its true light. We cannot complain that they have not at once jumped at the conclusions that we have arrived at. We were ourselves at first at fault in this, and no party can be justly chargeable with this evil that is upon us. Why, sir, in one of the most beautiful parks in St. Louis—Lafayette Park—stands a splendid monument to Senator Thomas H. Benton, a large sized statue of that noble old hard money Democrat. He is represented as he stood in the United States Senate making his great speech, with a scroll in his hand, with the lines of commerce to Asia designated upon it. With the other hand the great Senator is pointing to Asia, and on the base are quotations from one of his speeches: "There is the East; there are the Indies." Now, sir, I say he was pointing west across the mountains and the broad Pacific—"There is the East; there are the Indies." That symbolized the hope, the dream, the aspiration of the American nation. It was to get, as we supposed, the rich trade of the Indies and China. That was what we all desired. Now, sir, I say that no party and no class of our people are to blame. We were all blinded by this dream of glitter and grandeur by acquiring this trade of the Indies and China. But, Mr. Chairman, we have lived here to see that dream dispelled, and like other dreams, to vanish into thin air. We have seen the realization of that dream, and it is not necessary to say that we are all disappointed, that the glowing picture has vanished, and the reality is that which we have now to confront, and that is to check this growing evil, or have a system entailed upon this country which is threatening to the perpetuity of our government.

I am in favor of going as far as any gentleman on this floor to check this growing evil, but, sir, there are right ways and there are wrong ways to accomplish this result. There is a straightforward, legitimate way to reach the object in view, and there are ways which are unstatesmanlike and which will not accomplish the purpose we have in view. I claim that the direct and proper way to reach the object we have in view is through the General Government. That government was instituted for the purpose of regulating our affairs with foreign nations, and, Mr. Chairman, as I remarked, we will not have to wait long for this action from the General Government. And I say we cannot be surprised that the whole people of the United States have not arrived at the point we have, but the leaven is working. Does any man suppose that two or three years ago a resolution could have passed through both houses of Congress requiring the Executive Department of the government to take steps to annul a treaty which we ratified here with great acclaims of joy? And yet, at the last session of Congress, that was witnessed. What has brought about this change of sentiment? Why, the discussion of the matter in a legal manner. They sent an investigating committee here composed of representatives of both the Senate and House of Representatives. They then perceived for the first time, that here they were about to establish a new system of slavery in the country. Having but a few years previously wiped out one system of slavery we were about to establish another. The moment this dawned upon the minds of the people of the Northern States, a complete revolution has been going on there. My own personal experience proves this to be the case. In eighteen hundred and seventy-six I attended the Centennial in Philadelphia. One of the most extensive exhibitions of the Oriental nations was the fine department from China, representing their arts and wares. That was visited by thousands. The Chinese were glorified by all of the visitors there. But last Spring I passed through some of the Northern States, and had occasion to stop at several towns in New York, Illinois, and Ohio, and in conversation with people there I found their minds had altered, and a complete change in the tone among the people there was perceptible. They said that they perceived the danger, and this evil should be checked; and, sir, it will be checked, and will be checked properly and legitimately. I have not the least doubt about it.

Now, sir, after the citation of authorities here by gentleman who have addressed this committee, I say that an unbroken line of decisions from the 9th of Wheaton to the present time has been laid before this committee, showing conclusively the controlling power of the General Government in reference to commerce and treaty obligations. Not only that, but we have in our own State—since we have gentlemen who defer more to the authority of the States than they do to the General Government—a line of decisions running from the 4th to the 48th California Reports, all the same way. Not a break in the line, either in the Federal Courts or in the State Courts. It is true, sir, gentlemen have read from dissenting opinions, and by assuming their positions justify the position they take. But, Mr. Chairman, what weight would any such dissenting opinions, or such loose expressions, even though they come from eminent jurists, have with any Court where such an unbroken line of authorities were presented on the other side. Why, of course, they would not be listened to for a moment. And that is just the attitude in which this question presents itself before this committee precisely.

I hold in my hand the Federalist, and I wish to read a few remarks from Mr. Madison upon this question; and it will be borne in mind that not only in the Supreme Court of the United States, but all the Courts of the Union, wherever constitutional questions are involved, the papers of the Federalist are considered the best kind of authority. They were written by two of the most conspicuous members of the Convention that framed the Constitution of the United States, Hamilton and Madison. Mr. Madison is answering the attacks upon the new Constitution made by its enemies, on the ground that it had exceeded the powers given to alter the old articles of confederation. In warding off attacks on that score he would not be likely to claim for the Federal Government any more powers than were actually conferred upon it, because his purpose was to show that the government did not possess unnecessary powers. Its enemies were saying that they had given it too many powers, therefore I say that he cannot be charged with claiming more for it than actually existed. Mr. Madison is compelled to admit—I refer to the fortieth number of the Federalist—that the Convention did exceed, in this respect, the call for the Convention. He says: "From these two acts it appears, first, that the object of the Convention was to establish in these States a firm national government; second, that this government was to be such as would be adequate to the exigencies of government, and the preservation of the Union."

Then, farther on, page one hundred and eighty-six, he enumerates the several powers conferred on the Government of the Union. He says:

"That we may form a correct judgment on this subject, it will be proper to review the several powers conferred on the Government of the Union; and that this may be the more conveniently done, they may be reduced into different classes, as they relate to the following different objects: First, security against foreign danger; second, regulation of the intercourse with foreign nations; third, maintenance of harmony and proper intercourse among the States; fourth, certain miscellaneous objects of general utility; fifth, restraint of the States from certain injurious acts; sixth, provisions for giving due efficacy to all these powers."

These were the exclusive powers. Now, on the subject of treaties, you will find, on page one hundred and ninety-three, number forty-two of the Federalist, by Mr. Madison, this:

"The second class of powers lodged in the General Government consists of those which regulate the intercourse with foreign nations, to wit: to make treaties; to send and receive Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls," etc.

He says:

"This class of powers forms an obvious and essential branch of the federal administration. If we are to be one nation, in any respect, it clearly ought to be in respect to other nations."

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman voted for the fifteen-minute rule, and now he is exceeding his time.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time is up. Shall the gentleman from Alameda have leave to proceed?

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I object.

MR. CROSS. I object.

The question was put, and the Chair declared that the noes appeared to have it.

A division was called for, and the gentleman was allowed to proceed, by a vote of 46 ayes to 31 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alameda will proceed.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I am obliged to the Convention. Mr. Madison says:

"The powers to make treaties, and to send and receive Ambassadors, speak their own propriety. Both of them are comprised in the article of confederation, with this difference only, that the former is disembarrassed by the plan of the Convention of an exception, under which treaties might be substantially frustrated by regulations of the States."

Now, that was the fault of the old confederation, that the States might interfere with treaties, and Mr. Madison says, explicitly, that in that respect, by the new plan, the treaties are placed entirely above and beyond the reach of the States. Now, again, in considering the limitations on the States, the same great statesman says, in referring to this clause in reference to treaties:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States, shall be made in pursuance thereof, or all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land, and the Judges in every State will be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

Now, he says, upon that:

"The indiscreet zeal of the adversaries to the Constitution has betrayed them into an attack on this part of it also, without which it would have been evidently and radically defective. To be fully sensible of this we need only suppose for a moment that the supremacy of the State Constitutions had been left complete by a saving clause in their favor.

"In the first place, as these Constitutions invest the State Legislatures with absolute sovereignty in all cases not excepted by the existing articles of confederation, all the authorities contained in the proposed Constitution, so far as they exceed those enumerated in the confederation, would have been annulled, and the new Congress would have been reduced to the same impotent condition with their predecessors.

"In the next place, as the Constitutions of some of the States do not ever expressly and fully recognize the existing powers of the confederacy, an express saving of the supremacy of the former would in such States have brought into question every power contained in the proposed Constitution.

"In the third place, as the Constitutions of the States differ much from each State, it might happen that a treaty or national law of great and equal importance to the States, would interfere with some and not with other Constitutions, and would consequently be valid in some of the States, at the same time that it would have no effect in others.

"In fine, the world would have seen for the first time, a system of government founded on an inversion of the fundamental principles of all government; it would have seen the authority of the whole society everywhere subordinate to the authority of the parts; it would have seen a monster, in which the head was under the direction of the members."

Can there be anything added to that? Not at all. A treaty is the supreme law of the land, and it makes no difference how we meet it here, with a clause of the Constitution or by a statute. It amounts to the same thing. It is said that we might do this and have it tested. Why, Mr. Chairman, what would we think of a gentleman at the bar who would bring week after week and day after day a suit where there were forty authorities to show that it had been decided adversely to him without exception? I am not, for one, disposed to put myself in the attitude either of a demagogue or of a fool in this Constitutional Convention. I propose, sir, here to abide by my oath, and I do not propose to put into this Constitution, so far as I am concerned, anything which is in direct—unmistakably direct—conflict with a treaty of the United States, simply because we can raise a point before the Supreme Court on it. After we know it has been decided against us, it is sheer folly and madness for us to put it in here. I say it would weaken our position before the country. I say we want the coöperation of the whole country. We cannot paddle our own canoe in this matter. This is a matter which concerns a great nation. It is a matter which a great nation will right in due time. And what is required is for the people to be enlightened upon the subject, and they are fast being enlightened.

I cannot vote for any part of the proposed article except that in the first section; and I agree with the gentleman from Los Angeles, General Howard, that that covers the whole thing. It is given as a declaration. It covers the whole ground. I will support that as a declaration of our principles against this Chinese evil, and I will sign the strongest kind of a petition to Congress and the President of the United States.

MR. BARNES. I would like to ask the gentleman from Alameda what he understands by the language, "and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State?"

MR. VAN DYKE. I suppose that the Legislature can pass laws under that to exclude some classes of Chinamen. It might be tested, and it is certain that the State can exclude paupers, criminals, and that class of people.

MR. BARNES. But I call the gentleman's attention to the words, "and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State."

MR. VAN DYKE. I do not know as I am ready to define that. They could drive out a great many——

MR. BARNES. Then, if it is proposed to confer that power on the Legislature, why not test it here and now?

SPEECH OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: I do not propose to transcend the limits prescribed—fifteen minutes—and, in fact, it is with the greatest diffidence that I presume to say anything upon the subject which has been discussed by some of the ablest lawyers of this State. I am convinced, however, that each one of us must think for himself. That is as unequivocally established as that we must eat for ourselves and see for ourselves; and, in fact, if we are only to be guided by what we are told, we are not fit to vote in this Convention. We have heard able authorities quoted; we have heard eminent men discuss this subject, and, in their discussion, taking their arguments, it would seem that certain things were so beyond all doubt; then, when other gentlemen of ability, on the same provision, were engaged in the discussion of this subject upon the opposite side, the same would appear almost obviously clear. Now, I am under the impression that it is necessary for us to look at this matter in a certain light, and we must consider the great principles under which we are acting, and if we will look back to the period when the Constitution of the United States was framed, we will see a band of men collected together, the country just having emerged from under the dark cloud of war, and those men determined to transmit to posterity the advantages and benefits of the seven years' revolution. And when we turn to that instrument and examine the preamble, there we will discover the purpose of their meeting—the purpose of that instrument which they got up for the government of these United States. Now, it is to be observed at all times, that there is a great principle of law, a spirit of law, and that that spirit is the essence and reality of law. When we turn to the Constitution of the United States and read the preamble, there we find what was the purpose and intention. It reads as follows:

"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

This was one great thing to be promoted. This instrument was gotten up for the welfare of the people; for the prosperity of the nation; and we must understand this great principle as expressed in this preamble, extending through that great instrument in all its bearings. And we must understand that anything whatever that is in conflict with the welfare of the people, the prosperity of the nation, the prosperity of all the States, is in direct conflict with the grand purpose and spirit of this instrument which is expressly for the prosperity of the people. What we must take into consideration is the great spirit of this instrument. Now, if we take this into consideration, we are compelled at once to see, with regard to any matter here, it is in conflict with these grand provisions in that declaration of the spirit of the Constitution of the United States. We may say the Burlingame treaty was popular; the people demanded it. So they did. The people have made many popular mistakes, and Legislatures have made many popular mistakes, and it may be that the treaty-making power has made a mistake, and we believe it has. It was popular in its day. Now we must consider that this treaty-making power has the right—no one doubts that. The gentleman last on the floor seemed to contend with great earnestness of purpose for this right, but we must understand that all human institutions and human purposes are defective. Popular opinion was wrong, and this matter of the treaty proved it. Now, the great matter is this, shall we consider this treaty as lying in the way of getting out of this difficulty, of getting rid of the Chinese, or the Mongolian race, in this country? I am convinced that every one of us will admit, so soon as we consider that they deprive the white race of labor, that they deplete this country of money and carry it away into a distant land where we never see it again, that they are a detriment to the country, that they are at variance with the great interests of this State, and that as soon as they are at variance with the prosperity of the State, they are at variance with the principles of the Constitution.

Now, as to those who made the Constitution. We do not doubt their right. We know that they are good authority, but we do contend that the matter has resulted differently from what any one anticipated, and that instead of the treaty being a blessing, instead of being as intended, it has turned out to be a curse. Now, if we attempt to legislate against this it appears to me that we should pronounce it an evil. I will read from article sixth:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land."

We must look at the spirit, and not the mere words. "Under the authority." What is the authority? The Constitution of the United States is the authority, and the only authority by which the treaty-making power has carried out what it has in this matter; and everything that is made in accordance with this is binding, is effectual. But we find practically that this is not in accordance with that instrument. Instead of adding to the prosperity, and happiness, and tranquillity of the people, it has the reverse effect to almost all intents and purposes. Now, we should look at this in this light, and consider the authority. The Legislature frequently passes laws that are inconsistent with the Constitution. This very clause seemed to anticipate the matter of Constitutions conflicting. Now, we find that this shall be the supreme law of the land, and the laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof, and the treaties, shall be the supreme law of the land. But the first thing spoken of is the Constitution of the United States, and these others in accordance with the same, and by authority of the same. But it must be in accordance with the spirit of the Constitution. The Constitution is placed first. "Made under the authority of the United States," which authority is the Constitution:

"And the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

Now, I am fully impressed with the idea that we can meet this evil, and we should act upon it accordingly, and in fact it is proper and right. We should carry out wishes here in this Convention. I believe that we have a right to do so. Some say it is treasonable. You ought to have read the Constitution, and you would see that it is nothing of the kind. Treason is raising an army against the United States, or giving aid or comfort to the enemy; but making laws contrary is nothing of the kind. This great treaty is a law de facto, but not a law de jure. We have a right to go ahead and make provisions as we choose. We will be representing the great spirit of the Constitution. If the treaty is in violation of the spirit of the Constitution, we have the right to go on and act outside of it.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I could commit no greater folly than attempt to prolong this debate. I shall, therefore, endeavor to see how short I can be—how brief my remarks can be made—not how short I can be. Mr. Chairman, I am unable to support the substitute for section one, which is now pending, and in order that there may be an understanding in regard to this, I call for the reading of section one of the substitute offered by Mr. Barnes.

THE SECRETARY read:

SECTION 1. All Mongolians within this State shall be required to remove therefrom within four years from the time this Constitution takes effect. At the first session of the Legislature convened hereunder provision shall be made for judicial proceedings to compel such removal, and for the seizure and sale of so much of any property of such Mongolians who may not theretofore have voluntarily departed within the period herein limited, as may be necessary to defray the necessary cost of their removal from this State to their native country.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I ask leave to strike out the word "Mongolians," and insert the word "Chinese."

MR. CROSS. I object. That will let in the coolies from India. They are the worst class we have.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: Two difficulties hedge us about when we approach the discussion of this question. If we attempt to interfere with the immigration of this class of persons, we are immediately beset with the interpretation which the Supreme Court of the United States has put upon the power granted to Congress to regulate commerce; and the gentleman himself, Colonel Barnes, and several other legal lights on this floor, have taught us to understand, and I hesitate not to say, have convinced us, that it is utterly useless for us to attempt to prohibit the incoming of subjects of the Chinese Empire. If there has been anything settled by this decision, it is that; and hence, I am surprised to see the gentleman himself, after successfully meeting that question and settling it, introduce this section, one which flies directly in the face of the very proposition he has himself settled. For, as was stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, when a Court undertakes the examination of an Act of Congress, or a State Legislature, it immediately looks through the gauze of subterfuges by which you attempt to accomplish anything by indirection, and goes straight to the subject, and hence, no one can misunderstand or can be misled by this section, which provides for the deportation of the very persons whom we have no power to prevent coming in. If we have no power to prevent their coming, we have no power to deport them. Hence, the section offered as a substitute by the gentleman from San Francisco is answered by its own argument. I am opposed to that section for another reason, or I rather prefer the report of the committee, because it contains in better form the very same thing, but directed to another proposition. The substitute is deportation, pure and simple, without a reason. Section one of the report of the committee provides that vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, and persons afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being and peace of the State, may be removed from the State. There is a reason which comes directly within the doctrine of the Passenger cases, and directly within the doctrine of the Slaughter-house cases, and within subsequent decisions following those, and within the doctrine laid down by the gentlemen in debate here. If you will turn to section seven you will find another branch of the same subject:

"SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. It shall provide for their exclusion from residence or settlement in any portion of the State it may see fit, or from the State, and provide suitable methods, by their taxation or otherwise, for the expense of such exclusion. It shall prescribe suitable penalties for the punishment of persons convicted of introducing them within forbidden limits. It shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for their removal without the limits of such cities and towns."

It says, "the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all means within its power." I do not know how they will do that. Here are certain classes of persons declared by the power of the State—the only power that has a right to judge—to be dangerous to its well-being, and then it shall have the power to deport or remove them from the State, or to remove them to different places within the State, if it so sees fit. Now, the reason I am in favor of the report is, that it provides these reasons. It tells why it undertakes to do these things; and thus, so far as it can be effective at all, it is quite as effective as the substitute could be if it could be adopted.

And the reason why I am opposed to the substitute is because it puts off the time for any attempt to enforce any of its provisions four years. The report of the committee may be enforced at any time after the adoption of the Constitution. So far it may be made effective, if effective at all, within a reasonable time. The substitute will delay action, if there is anything in it at all, for four years. I do not intend to say a word about the inconsistency of the gentleman from San Francisco in section two that he has offered here, with his remarks upon the subject. He said that he was opposed to any act of cruelty towards this class of persons; that the right to live here and the right to stay here implied the right to earn a living, and he was opposed to depriving them of the right to fish. I understood him to say that he was opposed to anything that looked towards depriving the Chinaman of earning a livelihood, or laboring wherever or whenever he could.

MR. BARNES. I did not say that. What I said was this: I was opposed to these queue-cutting ordinances, and this saying that a man should not fish.

MR. REYNOLDS. That does not better it any. He follows up these remarks by proposing:

"SEC. 2. After this Constitution takes effect no Mongolian shall carry on or maintain any business, occupation, profession, or mechanical trade for gain, or perform any usual manual labor for reward in this State; and it shall be unlawful for any person or persons, bodies corporate or politic, to employ, contract with, or harbor such aliens except for temporary accommodation, shelter, or charity."

Well, if a Chinaman is entitled to make a living in the State, how is he going to do it if he shall not be employed? Where is the consistency? Mr. Chairman, I listened with a great deal of pleasure to the gentleman's remarks. They were able and eloquent, but it seems to me, as we have heard it said of another, that the performance did not come up to the proclamation; that when we come to read his proposition there was nothing in it except what is in the report in a better shape. The fact is, his proposition drives directly at the law, as it has already been settled, and amounts to a system of deportation. I undertake to say that you might as well meet the Chinaman at the wharf, and say that he shall not land, as to undertake to say boldly and plainly that you will deport him the next minute after he sets his foot on the wharf, unless you can establish some reason, some power, some unquestionable power within the State that will give you the right to deport him. [Cries of "Time."] And then, when it comes to the other section, that no Mongolian shall be employed, that he shall not work, the same proposition is in better shape in the report, in section six, with a slight amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time is up.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: I will not detain the house but a few moments. I should not speak at all, but I wish to state just what part of this report I can support. The first section I think we ought to adopt, and I believe it will be adopted. Section two reads:

"Any corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises, and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

That section I shall not support. I shall not support it because, among other reasons, it would be perfectly futile if it is intended to reach the railroad company. That railroad company exists under higher authority than the corporate power of this State, and we could not make them forfeit their charter if we tried to. Secondly, I think it is barbarous. I confess that I agree with the gentleman when he says that the Chinese after they are here have a right to work just like anybody else, and not under circumstances by which they cannot earn an honest living. I do not believe "the Chinese must go," but I think the point is that the Chinese shall not come. I do not believe in this idea that the Chinese must go. I think that howl that has been going over the State has delayed action on this great subject at least two or three years. The threats that have been made everywhere that blood would flow in the streets have caused the people of the East to doubt our sincerity. I wish to read a few words from Vattel's Law of Nations, page 173, in regard to this subject:

"The sovereign ought not to grant an entrance into his state for the purpose of drawing foreigners into a snare; as soon as he admits them he engages to protect them as his own subjects, and to afford them perfect security, as far as depends on him. Accordingly, we see that every sovereign who has given an asylum to a foreigner, considers himself no less offended by an injury done to the latter, than he would by an act of violence committed on his own subject. Hospitality was in great honor among the ancients, and even among barbarous nations, such as the Germans. Those savage nations who treated strangers ill, that Scythian tribe who sacrificed them to Diana, were universally held in abhorrence; and Grotius justly says that their extreme ferocity excluded them from the great society of mankind. All other nations had a right to unite their forces in order to chastise them.

"From a sense of gratitude for the protection granted him, and the other advantages he enjoys, the foreigner ought not to content himself with barely respecting the laws of the country; he ought to assist it upon occasion, and contribute to its defense, as far as is consistent with his duty as citizen of another state. We shall see elsewhere what he can and ought to do, when the country is engaged in a war. But there is nothing to hinder him from defending it against pirates or robbers, against the ravages of an inundation, or the devastations of fire. Can he pretend to live under the protection of a state, to participate in a variety of advantages it affords, and yet make no exertion for its defense, but remain an unconcerned spectator to the dangers to which the citizens are exposed?

"He cannot, indeed, be subject to those burdens that have only a relation to the quality of citizens; but he ought to bear his share of all the others. Being exempted from serving in the militia, and from paying those taxes destined for the support of the rights of the nation, he will pay the duties imposed upon provisions, merchandise, etc., and, in a word, everything that has only relation to his residence in the country, or to the affairs which brought him thither."

Vattel is a recognized authority upon the law of nations. I apprehend that the gentleman proposes now to create a new law of nations, and to fight the whole world upon a proposition of such gravity. I am, therefore, opposed to the proposition in this report that would prohibit a Chinaman from earning an honest living. I think it is barbarous; I think it is cruel. I say that when they come here under the laws of the country they have a right to earn their living, just as any other foreigner has when he comes here—a legal right—and it would be barbarous, in my opinion, to assume any other position. Now, so much for that. The third sections provides:

"No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

That I shall favor. Let that work be done by those who will defend it in time of war and maintain it in time of peace. Section four I should be very glad to support if it did not contain the word "Chinese," because as it is it will come in direct conflict with the treaty. I would support it upon the proposition that if the Government of the United States declare they are ineligible to become citizens of the United States, there is something about that people that renders them unworthy of the confidence of the people of the State, and we have the right to prohibit their coming. The Supreme Court of the United States have held that the police powers of the State are to advance the safety, and happiness, and prosperity of the State, and that under that proposition the people have a right to provide for the general welfare. They have a right to say that the United States having refused to allow a certain class to become citizens of the United States, that that class of people would not advance the general welfare, and that the United States had passed upon the question of fact by declaring that they were unworthy of citizenship. In the case of Chi Lung, the Court says:

"We are not called upon to decide for or against the right of a State, in the absence of legislation by Congress, to protect herself by necessary and proper laws against paupers and convicted criminals from abroad; nor to lay down the definite limit of such right, if it exists. Such a right can only arise from a vital necessity for its exercise, and cannot be carried beyond the scope of that necessity. When a State statute, limited to provisions necessary and appropriate to that object alone, shall, in a proper controversy, come before us, it will be time enough to decide that question."

I can probably support sections three, four, and five, and that part of section six which relates to the owning of real estate. It is not a debatable proposition that the State has the right to prohibit any class owning real estate. That is settled by law and by decisions. I will call your attention to an authority, though I have not time to read it. It is not an American authority, but it will be taken, I think, as good law. It is a book written by the Right Honorable Alexander Cockburn, Lord Chief Justice of England. I maintain that the States have a right to impose that authority, and I hope that the States will do so. I would be very glad to support the last part of section six; the first part I cannot. These people are a great injury to the State. We ought to adopt all means we can to keep them from coming here and sending them away within the law. But I am not one of those who believe that the streets will run with blood. I am not one of those who believe that the people are going to rebel against law, or against the organized authority of this State, or of the General Government. I believe this people are capable of self-government. I believe that they are capable of meeting any and all great questions——

MR. JOYCE. Do you think the people are capable of competing with Chinese labor?

MR. ESTEE. I do not think so; but I propose to get rid of the Chinese in a legitimate way—in a legal way.

MR. BARNES. What is a legitimate way?

MR. ESTEE. I would answer, first, by adopting section one, that discourages their coming; section three prohibits their employment on public works; section four, by making it general so that it would not stand in direct opposition to the treaty, would discourage their coming. Adopt a memorial to the President of the United States and to both houses of Congress, and I would have it signed by every member of this Convention, to show that the people of this State are unanimous, and I think it would have a very marked effect upon the opinion that Congress might have relative to this great subject. I do not believe in this proposition in section six: "Foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to sue or be sued in any of the Courts of this State;" but I would support that portion of the section which would not allow them to hold real estate, because that comes within the bounds.

MR. GRACE. What good would it do them to have the right to be sued?

MR. ESTEE. I am not prepared to say. I am not prepared to say that there are not a great many white men who would get along better if they had not the right to be sued.

MR. KLEINE. Is it more barbarous or more cruel to drive the sons and daughters of American citizens out, or to deprive coolie serfs of employment?

MR. ESTEE. What can we do here against the whole civilized world? I say if you want to bring this thing into disgrace, if you want to be cruel, and do wrong, you will be condemned by the best thinking people of the world, and then you will have this planted upon you forever. The way to do is to approach it in a dignified, solemn manner; approach it in a legal manner; do only those things which we can do, and do it earnestly, and we will accomplish the result.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: It has not been my purpose to discuss this question, nor is it now my intention to go into any general discussion of the question. It is apparent to all that there is really but one question to be legitimately discussed here. As to the question of this being a great evil, there is but one opinion. We all agree that it is an evil that threatens law, order, society, and civilization itself. Upon that proposition we are all agreed. The real question, Mr. Chairman, that should be discussed here is that great question that has been fought since the foundation of the government—the limits and boundaries of State and Federal authority. It is a legal question. It is a great question, that has engaged the greatest minds of modern times. It is a question that has been fought on the grandest arena, the grandest rostrum, of modern times, and by intellectual giants. For that reason I have preferred to listen to a discussion by our great constitutional lawyers, knowing, as I do, that they were best qualified to give us light upon this great subject—practical light, and light that we need, to act intelligently. My purpose, Mr. Chairman, in rising, is to call attention to some pertinent historical facts bearing upon this great question. The distinguished gentleman from Marin, a day or two since, in alluding to this great question of the power of State authority and Federal authority, alluded to a very celebrated authority. After the struggle had gone on from the foundation of the government down to the year eighteen hundred and sixty-one, it was submitted to the arbitrament of arms, and the gentleman tells us that the whole question was decided by Chief Justice Grant, at Appomattox. I do not propose to controvert the assertion of the gentleman, for it is eminently true. It is the simple fact of the case; but I desire to call attention to the patent fact that that great court is the court of last resort; and I assert in this presence that all human institutions, all political rights, are based upon the sword, and are maintained by the sword, and that that court to which the gentleman referred is in fact the supreme court, or court of last resort. And, in this connection, I would say to my distinguished friend from Los Angeles, that it might not be the part of wisdom to ignore this decision and its result upon the Congress and upon the public opinion of the American people, because it is a stubborn fact. My friend from Marin no doubt said right, "this decision is final." All right. Very well. It was our neighbor's ox that was gored then; but to-day we find ourselves, here upon this floor, confronting a question as broad as society, as civilization, and this time the boot is on the other foot. It is our ox that is gored this time. I am sorry it is so, but such is the fact; and, as I suggested, it may not be wise in us to ignore that great decision of that court of last resort.

MR. AYERS. I would like to ask the gentleman whether that great court of last resort wiped out the right of the States to protect themselves from dangerous classes?

MR. CAPLES. I did not propose to discuss this question, but only to call attention to pertinent historical facts, and to suggest to my friend from Los Angeles to take into consideration the bearing of that decision upon popular opinion in these States of the American Union. I do not undertake to say to what extent that decision goes, but I do undertake to say that it has had an important bearing upon the judicial decisions of our highest Courts, and that it has had a marked influence upon popular opinion. And right here is the point at issue, the point which I desire to call the attention of this committee to. We expect to frame a Constitution here; we desire that it should be adopted by the people; we have already arrayed against us the great monopoly of the country; we have already arrayed against us a power that is perhaps equal to that of the people, and it is an open question whether we shall be able to carry it or not, and the point is this: can we afford to array against us two important classes of the community upon this issue—the over-conservative and the timid? Because, gentlemen, talk as they may, they may say that this is but a judicial question that will be decided by the Courts, and there will be no collision with the Federal power; but could they convince the people of California that there would be no collision? They might convince some. I have no doubt that they would, but there would be a large class that would not be convinced and would vote against your Constitution through fear or ultra conservatism. I submit that it would not be wise in us to adopt propositions and measures that would array against us that class. However ill or well founded their objections may be, it would tell against the adoption of the Constitution without a doubt.

Mr. Chairman, there is a legal way, a right way, and a proper way in everything, and there is another way that is illegal, that is wrong, and that is impolitic. The object, the desire, the aim of this Convention should be to do the very best that we can do to relieve the State of California and the Pacific Coast from this great curse that is upon us. Can we do it best by proceeding regularly, legally, legitimately, or can we do it best by an impotent exhibition of anger, passion, and violence?

There is another phase of this question, to which I desire to call the attention of the gentlemen of this committee. It was remarked by a distinguished gentleman on this floor, within the last day or two, that the reason for conferring the franchise and ballot upon the negro was, not that we considered him capable of a just and wise and equitable exercise of that power, but simply as a matter of self-protection; protection against oppression. Now, I think, he was right. I think, perhaps, that that was the controlling idea with the American people when they conferred the ballot upon the negro. Now, Mr. Chairman, I suppose we proceed under the impulse of passion or prejudice, however well founded it may be. Suppose we persecute these people, and by lawless measures attempt to free ourselves from this great evil, would not the logic of the gentleman to whom I refer lead us to fear, at least, that the same reasons that operated in conferring the franchise upon the negro would, in the end, induce the Federal Government to confer the franchise and ballot upon the Chinaman? Now, Mr. Chairman, it is not wise to hide from ourselves the danger that menaces us. The wise and just course to pursue is to proceed within the limits of law, and, after we have exhausted every effort and have represented our case fully, and shown that our society and our civilization depends upon our being freed from this great curse; if, after we have exhausted every effort, the Federal Government should remain deaf to our appeals; if this fair land and these beautiful valleys that we had hoped to leave as a legacy to our children, are to be taken by this brood of Mongolians, then I would say, and if it were in my power to do so, I would speak it in tones of thunder that would shake the earth, that every impulse of humanity, every instinct of our natures, would impel us to prevent it, though we perish in the attempt.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I do not rise to make a speech upon this subject. I merely wish to call the attention of the committee to the term which is used in the amendment offered by Colonel Barnes. He uses there the term "Mongolian."

MR. BARNES. I desire to say that, after looking into it, I recognize the impropriety of the word, and propose to ask leave to make a correction. I think myself that the word is improper there.

MR. AYERS. I merely wished to call the attention of the committee to it so that we could alter it at present. The term "Mongolian" is one of the great divisions of the human race, and includes the American Indian, according to the best authority that we have.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I have listened with a great deal of patience to the speeches that have been made on this question. I admit that it has been necessary that speeches should be made, and that the general principles connected with this subject should be discussed, and I am of the opinion that that time has passed. I think henceforth the speeches should be made directly to the question before the committee, and I shall oppose any further general speeches, on general principles, made perhaps more for buncombe than for anything else. It is presumed now that every gentleman has made up his mind. Let the remarks in future be practical and applied to the questions under consideration, and not for such suggestions as the wisdom of the members may suggest for the general question under consideration. Believing now that a different system of tactics should be adopted in order that this Convention may finish its deliberations, I shall in the future move the previous question upon all occasions, and I, therefore, move the previous question now upon the two amendments pending before the committee.

The call for the previous question was seconded by Messrs. Schell, Stedman, Howard, Ayers, and Laine.

A division was called for and the main question was ordered by a vote of 73 ayes to 26 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes.

MR. AYERS. I took my seat with the understanding that the word "Chinese" should be substituted for the word "Mongolian."

The substitute was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no further amendments to section one the Secretary will read section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 2. Any corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall forfeit its franchises, and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

MR. TERRY. I propose the following substitute for section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No corporation now existing or hereafter formed under the laws of this State shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, employ, in any way, any Chinese or Mongolians. The Legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to enforce this provision."

MR. WEST. I offer the following amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No alien shall ever be employed in any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would ask the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Terry, whether his amendment does not relate merely to corporations formed under the laws of this State? What harm could it do to take in all corporations?

MR. TERRY. You can provide for that in another section. The committee have already provided that they shall not be employed by public corporations. I do not believe, with some of the gentlemen who have spoken upon this question here, that we have the authority by a statute of our State, or by our Court, to abrogate a treaty made by the treaty-making power of the United States. I do not believe that we can prevent these people landing or residing here, or that we can prevent any citizen from employing them; but corporations are the creatures of the statute. They exist by the will of the State, and we can control corporations, and prevent them from employing any class of laborers we choose. We can make it a condition of the existence of their charter. It is a fact pretty well known that perhaps two thirds of the Chinese employed in the State are employed by corporations. I propose to discourage their immigration here by all legal means. I do not propose, so far as any vote of mine is concerned, to bring the State of California into conflict with the power of the government. I tried that on once when I had a great deal better backing than now, and I proved my faith by my works. I went to where the fighting was going on, and felt some of the missiles. I was whipped, and I had sense enough to know it after it was done. I do not propose to provoke any more conflicts of that kind. [Laughter.] I propose to exercise all the power we have got, and no more.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. I would like to ask him whether he has anticipated that corporations will employ them through contractors and sub-contractors?

MR. TERRY. I am perfectly willing to accept an amendment that no Chinese shall be employed by any contractor or sub-contractor of any corporation.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Judge Terry. Section two provides for the forfeiture of the franchise of the corporation. You cannot forfeit the franchise of a foreign corporation doing business in this State, because we have not granted them the franchise. I am in favor of leaving the matter of penalty entirely with the Legislature. That is the proper place to leave it. Therefore, I will vote for Judge Terry's amendment.

SPEECH OF MR. FARRELL.

MR. FARRELL. Mr. Chairman: It seems to be a desire of some persons on this floor to rush this matter through without a proper investigation, and I am sorry to see it.

These same gentlemen who are desirous of so doing, have occupied the time of this Convention for over three weeks, on the subject of corporations, which, sir, is of no importance whatever when compared with this great evil, and I hope and trust that a free and general discussion will be allowed upon this question for the benefit of the people of this State, and of the United States.

Why, sir, they talk about Congress not taking any action in this matter. What can you expect from Congress, when gentlemen of this Convention, who were elected pledged to try and remedy this evil, above all others, attempt to rush it through under a false plea of economy. Mr. Chairman, this is the first time that I have attempted to occupy the time of this Convention, and I hope the same privilege will be given to me as has been granted to others to speak upon this question in general.

I hold, sir, that it is now the duty of the members of this Convention, as representatives of the people of this State, to take such steps as will protect the people against this Mongolian importation.

It is only a pity for the rising generation, a love for my country, and the principles of my party, that compels me to urge the arrest of this great curse. The question at present is: Have we no power to prevent the introduction of these leprous serfs who come here for private speculation, and who are driving our children into idleness and crime, and our laboring men to destitution and starvation.

Mr. Chairman, I was astonished to hear the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Stuart, take the part of these leprous Mongolians, notwithstanding the fact that he was elected to this Convention by the so-called Nonpartisan party, whose platform loudly proclaimed reform upon this particular subject. He talks about tramps! Who has been the cause of making these men tramps? Why, sir, it is such men as he and the managers of the Central Pacific Railroad, who employ them, and they are the parties who will be held responsible for the downfall of these poor men, who are now classed as tramps. There are hundreds of stalwart young men, wandering along the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad, from house to house, and from farm to farm, who are ready and willing to do the commonest kind of work in order to gain an honest living. But, sir, how sad and alarming it is to know that the sons of men who contributed millions of dollars to build that road are set aside for these leprous coolies. And yet, sir, the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, objects to prohibiting railroads from employing them.

Why, sir, it would be better for the people, and better for the people of the State of California, that the ground would open and swallow up the whole outfit of the Central Pacific Railroad, than to have them continue this practice of employing these moon-eyed lepers, thereby driving these poor laboring men to desperation and starvation, and then branding them as tramps.

My impression is, although I am by no means a lawyer, or versed in the finely drawn lines which separate and mark the boundary between the jurisdiction of the sovereign State of California and that of the General Government, that without trenching upon the paramount rights of the latter, we can still insert such proscriptive clauses, and make such proscriptive distinctions, as will make their continued stay in our midst unprofitable to them; and God knows, when a country becomes unprofitable to a Chinaman, he won't stay in it; this, too, notwithstanding the formidable character of the Burlingame treaty is thrown in our face as the great stumbling block over which they say it is impossible for us to go. I am in favor of the report of the committee with but few exceptions. To the first, second, and third sections of the report, I have but one objection to urge. There seems to be among the many legal opinions which have been brought to bear upon this question, a general agreement, that by the use of the terms "foreigners who are ineligible to become citizens" a complete escape has been effected from the much quoted clause of the Burlingame treaty giving Chinese coming to our country the same rights as those of the most favored nations.

And yet our daily papers have recently contained telegrams announcing the naturalization of several of the class which the terms here used, "foreigners ineligible to become citizens," is intended especially to reach. It seems as if this question of eligibility is by no means settled as yet, and in view of the uncertainty of anticipating what the decision of the higher Courts will be, it strikes me as dangerous to the measures which we are discussing to leave them entirely at the mercy of the future, where, too, an adverse decision may make all the sections nugatory. I should and do favor, in these three sections at least, and wherever else possible, the striking out of these equivocal terms, and boldly inserting therefor just what we mean: "No Chinese or Mongolians."

As to our right to do this, irrespective of that magnificent monument erected on the ruin of our mechanical vocations and the dire distress and prostituted morality of this coast to the memory of Anson Burlingame, the question of corporations, as discussed for the past three weeks, has settled one thing beyond any question of doubt, and that is, the unqualified right of the State to control private corporations. And, sir, where can that control be exercised to a more salutary purpose than in restricting them from using a class of labor, no matter of what nationality, no matter of what treaty regulations, which is, in itself, the cause of all this discontent and distress among our laboring classes. As to the other points, the right of the State to exercise all necessary police regulations, and to control the character of labor to be employed upon State or public works, I don't think any one has, as yet, been able to bring forward any treaty prohibition which could, for a moment, object. And as to the policy of the exercise of all these rights in our self-protection, it is unnecessary for me to argue, at this time, in the State of California. The cry of "the Chinese must go," much as it has been derided by some gentlemen of the opposition parties, has become so identified with the future of our State, if it is to have any future worthy of record, that all now recognize that it has met with a responsive throb in the heart of every well meaning citizen of the Pacific Coast. I am only anxious, therefore, Mr. President, that what we do say in this Constitution will be comprehensive, explicit, and to the point.

Personally, I am here representing a party whose ambition is to secure reform in this particular instance, and I stand here ready and willing to vote for the most radical and sweeping provisions which will remedy this great evil. And I am most concerned to feel that if we do not effect some practical remedy, the temper and control of a long and sorely tried people will, after a time, lose that reverence for law and order which is now their greatest honor. And now, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I offer the following as a substitute for section two, of the report of the committee, and I hope it will be adopted:

"No corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, shall employ any Chinese or Mongolians in any capacity whatever. And a violation of this provision shall work a forfeiture of the franchise of the corporation so offending. It is hereby made the duty of the Legislature to enforce this provision by appropriate legislation."

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The Convention will take a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at one o'clock and thirty minutes P. M. President Hoge in the chair.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. CONDON. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Joaquin, Judge Terry.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: I now offer an amendment to the proposition of Judge Terry.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment:

"Amend the amendment by inserting after the word 'employ,' the words 'directly or indirectly.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

MR. TERRY. I accept the amendment.

SPEECH OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: I deem this proposition the most important one that has been offered here, for the reason it seems to me to be a matter which is subject to the least doubt as to the power of the State against the Chinese. I have no desire to make any argument, for I think we have had sufficient arguments and authorities—able arguments on both sides of the question. As far as I am concerned, I am willing to take the law and arguments of Mr. Wilson, and apply it to the position I shall take as against the position he took.

Now, it seems to me, according to the arguments and authorities cited, that we are hedged in by three propositions of national law—the power to regulate commerce, the provisions of the treaty in regard to residence and travel, and the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment in regard to equal protection under the laws. Now, it seems to me we are restricted by the treaty only as to residence and travel; and, if you remember some authorities that were read some time ago, they were to the effect that treaties are construed, like Constitutions, strictly, and anything expressed therein is law. As far as it has any application to the domestic affairs of the State, it seems to me it must be expressly done. Now, there is a difference between the domestic powers and political powers, so far as the treaty is concerned. There are certain powers, as Mr. Wilson acknowledged, which our State cannot violate or infringe upon; but there are certain other powers, domestic powers, which are expressly given to the State, which cannot be taken from the State. And he cited the instance in the Fifth California in regard to real property. I do not know anything in this treaty which will prohibit us from preventing the employment of Chinese by corporations or individuals. And I therefore think it is perfectly right for this State to take advantage of all the power it has, of a domestic or any other nature, to protect itself against this evil. Allow them for the purposes of residence and travel to have full sway. Let the Chinese have their pound of flesh, but not one drop of blood. A corporation is the creature of the State, controlled by the State. And for that reason it seems to me, because there is less chance for doubt, and because corporations have employed a great many Chinamen, that this is one step in advance, and this measure should be adopted. As to waiting upon Congress, I have not much faith in that plan. We here are absorbed in that question, and the people of the other States are absorbed in the question of commerce, and I am inclined to think we are in danger of being overruled by the greater interest of commerce. I am in favor of doing everything we can do, and taking every chance, where there is no settled opinion against us.

SPEECH OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. Mr. Chairman: I consider, sir, that we have spent time enough in arguing this question, and from the able arguments that have been made I cannot hope to say anything new on this subject, but, sir, it is my duty to raise my voice against this, the greatest evil in the State. According to the Constitution of the State slavery cannot exist. But, sir, I think it is well known by every gentleman on this floor that slavery does exist in the very worst form. Slavery in the South was broken up by law, but in this State to-day it is upheld by a power above the law, by the power of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, Colonel Bee, and the Chinese companies, and they will bid defiance to the law in the future as they have in the past. Now, sir, the coolies imported by these companies are never free men. They always have to contribute to these companies, and when they fail to do so they are put out of the way.

Now, sir, Congress has been petitioned and memorialized time and again in regard to this matter, but to no effect, with the exception of a few Senators from this coast making a few anti-Chinese speeches. And why? Not for the benefit of the people on this coast, or the State itself, but for the express purpose of making political capital out of this question. But that day is past. The people of California cannot be kept by demagogue speeches any longer, and they intend to take this matter into their own hands, and apply their own remedy, and Congress must be blind not to see this question in its right light. This Burlingame treaty is a one-sided treaty, and hence is no treaty at all. It is a treaty that was made for the benefit of the Chinese, and against the working class of this State, and the State itself, and our brothers in the East will find it so to their cost some day.

Now, we claim we have the constitutional right to protect ourselves as a State by prohibiting these people from coming here. Aye, if even we have to come in direct conflict with Congress to do it. It is a constitutional right. Section four of article four of the Constitution reads as follows:

"The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion."

Now, who is the best judge of this invasion. I think the people of the State. When this State is being overrun by a foreign foe, shall we not defend ourselves? They are driving our laborers out of employment. They are stealing away our business. Is this not an invasion? I claim that it is. It is immaterial to me what form the invasion takes. When I see these things I hold it to be my duty to raise my voice against it, and to do all in my power to protect myself and my family and the State. I certainly do not propose to be driven out of this State by this tide of humanity.

Now, the treaty does not say that slaves shall concentrate in any particular number in this country, and as one of the people I shall insist upon the rights of the State. Now, there seems to be but one way out of this difficulty. If Congress continues to bring the Chinese into this golden State, then, sir, it is the duty of the people of this State to drive them out of the State in defiance of Congress. I hope we will adopt section four of this report, and show Congress that we are in earnest on this matter, and if it leads to riot and violence Congress will have itself to blame.

It is claimed that a person has the right to employ whoever he sees fit, and that it is essential to employ Chinamen in order to develop the resources of the State. I deny it. I should like to know of these Chinese lovers, to whom do they sell the produce of the State? if it is taken and consumed by the Chinese? The truth is these men are of a grasping, greedy mind; men without souls; men who do more to hold back the progress of the State than the Chinese themselves. It is better that free labor be employed. If it had been, the State would be far in advance of what it is to-day. Why? Because these white laborers would become a part of the State, and own homes and enter business on their own account. The Chinese do not build up the State, and if I had the power I would make them leave.

Now, sir, they say this fourth section conflicts with the Constitution of the United States. I claim there is a difference of opinion in regard to the Constitution. I claim that it does not conflict. That instrument recognizes the police power of the State to wipe out this evil, treaty or no treaty. I hope this section will be adopted, and this matter brought before Congress, so that the people will know how much to expect from the government, and apply their own remedy.

As regards section three, it ought to be adopted. The Legislature passed a law that no Chinese labor should be employed on the City Hall in San Francisco, but that law has been violated. So long as we have unfaithful officers, so long will our laws be of no avail.

SPEECH OF MR. KLEINE.

MR. KLEINE. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Convention: I like to be right in the middle of the hall, and speak always right in the face of men. The gentlemen have said on this floor, and especially the lawyers, that we are helpless. That we have the Burlingame treaty, and therefore we are helpless. To listen to these gentlemen one would imagine we were in the Empire of China. Now, gentlemen, under the Constitution of the United States the people have the right to make laws. The people send their servants to make laws, and they have a right to make the kind of laws they should make. The people of the State of California have sent you here to get rid of these Mongolians. It is very strange, indeed, to hear these gentlemen say, O, the poor Chinaman, what shall we do with him? [Laughter.] The gentlemen better say, What shall we do with our poor boys and girls who are walking the streets in idleness? It is a rare thing in San Francisco to find a servant girl in a family. These families have swapped the servant girl for the coolie, and they have them in their families to make beds and do everything which God intended for women to do, because they say: "O, these girls are too sassy." [Laughter.]

Gentlemen, if we have no right to protect ourselves; if we are helpless; if our sons and daughters of the rising generation must be made hoodlums; if they must be driven into crime, the sooner we know it the better. We want to know it. We have a right to defend ourselves. Let us know it, and let the law of self-preservation rule.

Now, gentlemen, you remember in eighteen hundred and fifty-six there was a vigilance committee organized in San Francisco. The government said, you must not do so, but they raised it, and gave warning to these political vagabonds and loafers that they must quit, and they strung up several of these scoundrels, and the rest escaped the country, and the vigilance committee subsided; but some of them are here to-day, in this State, ready to answer the call of duty again.

Now, gentlemen, is it possible that we have no protection against this curse? You say we must appeal to Congress. Haven't we been appealing to Congress for the last ten years, and what has Congress done for us? Nothing at all. Nothing at all. They have poked fun at us, and give us no releif. And these lawyers tell us we can't do anything. Well, I tell you to pay very little attention to what these lawyers say, because the lawyers disagree among themselves. Only a few months ago they made out that this was not an office, because Judge Fawcett wanted to retain his seat. They can make white black, and black white, so pay no attention to these lawyers whatever. [Laughter.] Now—just look, listen. These gentlemen have said, what are we going to do with the poor Chinaman; Better say, what are we going to do with these poor white people; Who is going to care for them? Go down to San Francisco and see these poor boys and girls tramping the streets day after day, because they can't get work; all on account of this cheap labor. Gentlemen, don't you know what this cheap labor means? It means extravagance and luxury for the capitalists. That's what it means. We have a class of capitalists that want cheap labor, they want coolies, they want slaves. According to testimony taken before the Commission, these Chinamen can live for eight cents a day. That's what capital wants. They want to bring us down to the level of the coolie himself; to a level with slave labor. Now they employ them for servants.

There's no hope that Congress will do anything for us on this question, unless this State takes a step to represent ourselves before Congress. We can't expect anything from Congress. Don't you remember two years ago, Congress sent a committee out here and took all the testimony of our respectable citizens of California, lawyers [laughter], merchants, business men, mechanics, and they all said the Chinese were ruining the State, that they were a curse; and did they do anything? No, sir, not a thing; and the Chinese come, and come, day after day, and now the gentleman from San Francisco wants to give them four years more before we commence doing anything. Don't you know there are over forty thousand of them in San Francisco? Do you remember some years ago, when these Chinamen rose and massacred over seven hundred white men, women, and children; and not a single word said about it? Not a word said. And we will have the same riots here some day. It is only a question of time.

Now, let me read something—listen. [Laughter.] The old slaveholders used to declare slavery a divine institution, and it was a favorite text, "Servants, obey your masters." I suppose Stanford, and all the rest of them, will say the same thing about Chinese coolies. These preachers say the same thing. They seem to love these coolies.

MR. ROLFE. The gentleman's time is up.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I hope, sir,——

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is not debatable. Those in favor of permitting him to proceed will say aye.

Carried.

MR. KLEINE. I tell you, I speak because my duty compels me; because I see the future of this now. I know some of you gentlemen may think I am talking excited. [Laughter.] No. I can see the future, and I predicted three years ago that this slavery would overturn republican institutions.

Now, I shall tell you that in San Francisco only a few Chinese have been converted, while hundreds of white men, women, and children have been forced into crime. Charity begins at home. The good book tells us, he that don't provide for his own home is not a Christian. The time will come when these Chinese will drive out your wives and children, if you don't drive out the Chinese. Let me tell you that many of your rich men will become poor. I know a rich man whose sons and daughters are to-day poor miserable scrubs, making a living by day's work, and perhaps some of your sons and daughters will commit murder, because forced to do it, and they will curse you and say: our fathers protected this Chinese treaty and compelled us to come in competition with these coolies, who live for eight cents a day, and that is a fact. You know it is true. [Laughter.] I won't say no more now. I tell you the people have sent you here to relieve them, and if you don't do it the the people will do it for themselves. Our white citizens will not come down to the level of the Mongolian slaves. They will not live on six cents a day. Don't tell us we have no power to remove this curse, for I know better. I tell you if they had these coolies in New York or Washington, they would not stand it twenty-four hours. The Chinamen here are criminals and paupers. Now, why do you tell us we are helpless? Then we have no government, for self-preservation is the first law of nature.

[Cries of "Go on!" "Go on!"]

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Judge Terry.

The gentleman from San Francisco moves to amend this amendment by adding the following: "No corporation incorporated by or under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall employ any Chinese or Mongolians in any capacity whatever. A violation of this provision shall work a forfeiture of the franchise of the corporation so offending. It is hereby made the duty of the Legislature to enforce this provision by appropriate legislation."

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Judge Terry.

Adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. There being no further amendments, the Secretary will read section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I offer the following amendment to section three:

THE SECRETARY read:

"No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be employed on any State, county, or municipal, or other public work."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I wish merely to note the fact that it leaves out some unnecessary words, and makes it read better. There is no necessity for the words, "in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

MR. MILLER. I accept the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman cannot accept it. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

MR. WYATT. I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No Chinese, except for punishment of crime, shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State, and neither contractors nor sub-contractors, nor their agents, nor any other person or persons, who shall do any work or render any service whatever to the State, county, or municipality, or other public work under its direction, shall employ, or caused to be employed, in any capacity, directly or indirectly, any Chinese in the prosecution of said work or services. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of this section by appropriate legislation.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. Chairman: This amendment, I believe, embodies the idea presented in section three. I intended that it should, except the words "aliens ineligible to become citizens." As I understand it, we do not intend to discourage the immigration of anybody at the present time except the Chinamen. And I do not think it is a good idea to whip the Chinese over the backs of other people. In other words, to place disabilities upon other people for the purpose of reaching the Chinese. I therefore leave out the word aliens, and say Chinese, the very men we are talking about, and attempting to discourage so that they will not stay with us any longer. I think it is more manly to do whatever we propose to do, directly rather than indirectly. It is always safer to pursue a direct course than to take a roundabout way. I think the amendment important in another respect, in that it might be held that the Chinese cannot be worked upon public works as a penalty for crime, under the section as reported by the committee; and we should certainly reserve to ourselves the privilege of working these Chinamen upon any of our public works, as a punishment for crime, if it becomes necessary. I like it better, because it comes nearer to being self-executing, and because it says neither directly nor indirectly. I therefore hope the amendment will be adopted, as I believe it is more full, and more completely carries out the idea of the committee than either the report of the committee or the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I hope the gentleman from Monterey will consent to allow the amendment to remain as the other sections read, "Foreigners ineligible to become citizens," for the reason that every person who comes here will be exempt from its provisions except the Chinese. I think the provision is better in that shape. I hope the gentleman will leave it. As it is reported it covers the whole thing, and I hope the gentleman will see the propriety of leaving it stand.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Monterey, Mr. Wyatt.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

Adopted.

MR. HAGER. Are there any other pending amendments.

THE CHAIRMAN. No, sir.

MR. HAGER. I move to add the words, "Except in punishment for crime."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager.

Adopted.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

Strike out the words in line one "alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States," and insert the word "Chinese" in lieu thereof.

MR. BARBOUR. The object is to make it conform to the section already adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of this amendment.

It was adopted by a standing vote of 45 ayes to 40 noes,.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I have a substitute for section four.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section four first.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 4. All further immigration to this State of Chinese, and all other persons ineligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, is hereby prohibited. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of this section by appropriate legislation.

MR. HAGER. I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"After December first, eighteen hundred and eighty, unnaturalized resident foreigners who have not legally declared their intentions to become citizens of the United States, excepting the diplomatic and commercial agents of foreign governments duly accredited and acknowledged by the Government of the United States, shall neither hold nor inherit property, nor do business, nor engage in any employment in this State, unless they shall first obtain a special license therefor, and pay into the State treasury annually the sum of five hundred dollars. The moneys so paid may be appropriated for the maintenance of such foreigners as may become a charge upon the State, and for disposing of any who may be convicted of crime, or insanity, or who, upon moral grounds, may be unsafe or unfit citizens of this State. Without such employment no person shall give employment to such foreigners. The Legislature shall enforce this section by penal and other proper laws."

SPEECH OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I think this amendment will be effectual in checking Chinese immigration. It is not in conflict with the Burlingame treaty, not in conflict with the laws of the United States. It applies to all classes, and therefore it does not come in conflict with the provisions of this treaty which puts the Chinese upon an equality with the people of the most favored nations. There is the ground where every effort we have made to exclude the Chinese has failed. The treaty says that Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions in respect to travel and residence as may there be enjoyed by the citizens and subjects of the most favored nations. Now, this section does not apply to the Chinese alone, it applies to all foreigners, until they declare their intention to become citizens of the United States. If a person, not born here, lives in this country, all he has to do is to declare his intention to become a citizen, and this provision ceases to apply to him. But the Chinaman does not have the right to declare his intention, and therefore it applies to him. But he is placed in the same category as all others. Now, an Englishman cannot come here and do business, if he does not declare his intentions, unless he takes out a license. That is right enough. Why should a foreigner come here that does not intend to become a citizen, unless he takes out a license. We have to do it in China. No American can go to China unless he takes out a license. So with many of the nations of Europe; a foreigner cannot come there unless he takes out a license. Now, we must do something to protect our people from this Chinese immigration, and I have come to the conclusion that this is the only way we can reach them by making a provision applicable alike to all foreigners, but at the same time all other foreigners are placed on an equality with us as soon as they declare their intentions to become citizens. If the Chinaman can declare his intention to become a citizen, why, of course, he has to go and get a license, and pay five hundred dollars a year, and that constitutes a fund for the maintenance of those who may become a charge upon the State, or those convicted of crime. Isn't that good? Isn't it right that we should do so?

Mr. Chairman, I cannot talk to-day. I did intend to speak upon the question. This whole thing hangs upon a thread. At the time I was in Washington they left out the clause with regard to the white race. The committee reported it back. I suppose they thought that inasmuch as Congress had extended the naturalization laws to the African race, even to those not born in this country, it was no longer any use to keep the word there. Therefore it was reported back. It was left out. Afterwards, when it was discovered, I think it was Mr. Page in the House offered an amendment in which he says, section two thousand one hundred and sixty-five, "amend by inserting in the sixth line, after the word 'alien,' 'being free white persons and aliens of African descent.'" The amendment was to section two thousand one hundred and sixty-nine. If it had been to two thousand one hundred and sixty-five it would have been all right. As it now reads, there is a doubt as to the construction of this statute as to whether it applies to Mongolians or Chinese, or not. The treaty says, "but nothing herein contained shall be held to confer naturalization upon citizens of China," etc. Now, our many projects, as far as excluding the Chinese is concerned, hangs upon that little amendment. When it came into the Senate Mr. Sargent and myself consulted together in regard to it, but we didn't attempt to change it, because we were fearful that it would be thrown out altogether. We did not dare to raise the question in the Senate and send the matter back to the House, for fear it would not be tolerated at all. They were so thoroughly imbued with the brotherhood of man theory, that they would not listen even to argument in regard to the Mongolian race not being equal to any other race, inasmuch as it was decided that the African race was equal to any other. It was inconsistent with the action of the party to say that Chinese did not belong to the common brotherhood after the African had been received into fellowship. Therefore we did not raise the question, and it was passed in that imperfect shape, and it is very imperfect.

Now, the amendment to this section merely provides that unnaturalized resident foreigners—it does not apply to those who do not reside in the State, and therefore, if a man from England or France is doing business in California, and not a resident here, it does not apply to him—but resident foreigners, unnaturalized, who have not declared their intentions of becoming citizens, must take out a license in order to pursue any business, and pay into the State treasury five hundred dollars a year, in order to constitute a fund for the purpose of sending those out of the State who are guilty of crime, or unfit to live here, and for the purpose of supporting those who may become a charge upon the State. As I said before, it is impossible for me to undertake to address the Convention at length, and I submit the amendment for the consideration of the Convention.

SPEECH OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: I confess I am at a loss to understand the object of this amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager. The amendment proposes that after the year eighteen hundred and eighty, no foreigner shall engage in any employment, or the pursuit of any business, without first paying five hundred dollars into the State treasury. Now, it must be apparent to all practical men, that it is equivalent to an absolute prohibition. It would have been quite as rational to have said five hundred millions, because the one as much as the other amounts to a prohibition; and so the proposition simply is, that after the first of December, eighteen hundred and eighty, no Chinese shall engage in any work by which he may earn his bread. Let us for a moment consider what would be the result of the adoption of a law like this. We have something like one hundred and fifty thousand of these people here now, and they would practically be debarred from earning their bread. What would be the result? We would have one hundred and fifty thousand starving human beings in our midst. Even supposing we might get rid of a few of them, we would still have, perhaps, one hundred and twenty thousand left, starving, because they would not be permitted to earn a living. That would be about the result. Now, I cannot bring myself to believe that the gentleman ever contemplated such a condition of things as this. Surely he could not have reflected upon the result of this plan he proposes. I do not doubt we are all in favor of applying some remedy, but I submit to the candor and common sense, whether we are prepared to adopt such a course as this, even if we have the power. It is an absurd proposition.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: Is an amendment in order?

THE CHAIRMAN. You may amend the substitute, or the original section.

MR. ROLFE. I offer an amendment to strike out the whole section. Strike out section four, with the proposed amendments.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out section four, and the proposed amendments.

SPEECH OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I suppose we might just as well test the sense of this Convention now on this proposition which some of us think is clearly contrary to the Constitution—in direct conflict with the Constitution of the United States. I am not opposed to the exclusion of the Chinese, and I do not suppose there is a gentleman on the floor who is. But while I am not opposed to that, I am opposed to running our heads right against the Constitution of the United States. I do not propose to take a course that will bring us into contempt, and expose us to the ridicule of the country.

Now, I do not see as the proposed amendment gets around the objections which are made to discriminating laws. The treaty places a Chinaman on the same plane with other citizens of the most favored nations, and gives to them the same privileges; and this same treaty expressly provides that no Chinaman shall have the right to become a citizen of the United States. That is left to Congress. But with that exception it places the Chinese upon the same footing with other nations—the same as Englishmen or Frenchmen. Well, under the laws of the United States it is not the right of a Chinaman to become a citizen; and then we have that provision of the treaty as an exception to the rule as to citizenship. Now we propose to get around it by not allowing aliens who cannot become citizens to do business without procuring a license, which is exactly the same thing as a prohibition. That, I say, is putting the Chinaman upon a different footing, and it will be so held by the Courts. Well, the Chinamen not being permitted to become citizens, if we say none but those who have declared their intentions may labor or do business in the State, we are putting him on a plane different from the citizens of the most favored nations, and therefore we are coming in conflict with the treaty and the Constitution of the United States, under which the treaty was made. I say such enactments as this are foolish. If we want to get at it we must do it in some other way. Instead of putting these provisions into the Constitution, which will make us the laughing stock of the world, I say we can get at it through the Legislature. You say the Legislature will not do anything. I say such fears are unfounded. Why, the last Legislature passed an Act submitting the question to the qualified voters of this State, to vote whether they are in favor or against Chinese immigration. Any gentleman may turn to the statutes and find it. They are called upon to vote for or against Chinese immigration. And upon the result of that the Governor and Secretary of State are to memorialize the President of the United States as to what that decision may be.

Now, we can only memorialize Congress through the State at large. Some gentlemen suggest that we pass around a petition and get every man to sign it. That would be very well, but the Legislature has adopted a better plan. We can have a vote of the people of the State of California, which will, I trust, be overwhelmingly unanimous against Chinese immigration. That will be a memorial to send to Congress which they will be bound to respect. They cannot help but respect it. Under the treaty this last amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco is in no better shape for the purpose of getting around the Constitution than this section four, and I made up my mind to move to strike out the whole thing, believing as I do that it is an open violation of the Constitution to pass this section, and it will fall dead on our hands. You will scarcely get a Justice of the Peace who will be willing to enforce it.

SPEECH OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I seconded the motion to strike out, because I wish to get a vote of this Convention upon this proposition. I am entirely opposed to it for the reason so ably stated by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Judge Rolfe. I am opposed to it, believing as I do that it is entirely unconstitutional, and if adopted could not be enforced. I believe the end aimed at can be arrived at by the section already adopted, by means of the Legislature. This section, in my opinion, is clearly unconstitutional. It is already embraced, so far as the State has any power, in the clause already adopted, "and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being of the State," etc. That part is included within the scope of legislative power. We can impose conditions upon which certain classes can reside in the State, and to provide means for their removal from the State in case of a failure to comply with such conditions. Now, if the Legislature desires, it can do so under the provisions of the first section, and fix the conditions upon which they may reside in the State. If they desire to make up a case to be passed upon by the Courts, the Legislature can do it just as well as to put something in this Constitution which a majority of us believe to be unconstitutional. I hope this motion to strike out will prevail.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I desire to ask what question is pending?

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Bernardino to strike out section four, and the proposed amendment.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I hope the motion to strike out will prevail, and I also hope a similar motion will prevail as to section five, for the reasons which I gave this morning concerning the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from San Francisco, that the section and substitute were directly in conflict with the doctrine as laid down by the Courts, as to the power of Congress over such subjects. And, now, by the adoption of sections four and five of this report, we are attempting to go over the same ground. I should like to see these two sections stricken out for the reasons already given, and, because, when I look at the work already adopted, I find we have practically covered the ground in section one. We have provided for the deportation of alien criminals; that is one thing. Section seven of the report will strike out another thing, and with section six, if we adopt it, we shall have covered all the ground that it is possible for us to cover without flying directly in the face of the treaty stipulations.

MR. WHITE. I should like to ask the gentleman what there is in Judge Hager's amendment that is opposed to the Constitution, or in violation of the treaty?

MR. REYNOLDS. I say I desire to strike out sections four and five and leave it stand as we have adopted it, with, perhaps, a portion of the last sections, in regard to denying aliens ineligible to become citizens of the United States the right to fish in the waters under the jurisdiction of the State, nor to purchase land or hold any real property in this State, etc., that covers one of the most vital points in this whole report. If we can prohibit them from purchasing or holding land we can make it almost impossible for them to live here. There is no question of the power of the State as to conferring the right to hold land—no question about it at all. The State can decide who shall hold real estate, and who shall not, even as to our own citizens; how much more then has the State the right to exercise this control over foreigners.

MR. BARNES. Does the gentleman know of any instance where a Chinaman has ever invested in real estate?

MR. REYNOLDS. I know they have, largely; and it makes no difference whether they buy or lease lands. One is as broad as the other. The use of the land is sufficient for their purposes, and if we can deprive them of the privilege of leasing real estate they cannot stay and do business here.

MR. BARNES. Do you say you can put a provision in the Constitution that will prevent them living in houses?

MR. REYNOLDS. That is what some of the gentlemen have asserted. I have not argued any such proposition. I propose to prevent him from leasing real property.

MR. BARNES. Why?

MR. REYNOLDS. Because we wish to discourage immigration and encourage deportation.

MR. BARNES. Why do you wish to prevent them from leasing real property?

MR. REYNOLDS. For the purpose of preventing them from going into such branches of business as require the use of real property. I do not desire to be interrogated and catechised during the brief time that is allotted to me on this question.

MR. BARNES. I spent nearly the whole time answering questions when I was on the floor, and I thought that I might be permitted to ask one or two questions in order to have a better understanding of the gentleman's arguments. I wanted to know the gentleman's reasons. I understand the objurgation in respect to myself, but I wanted the reasons of the gentleman.

MR. REYNOLDS. I am sorry the gentleman so considers my remarks, for they were not so intended. I am opposed to these provisions which have already been passed upon. If we prohibit Mongolians from purchasing real estate, he cannot enter into competition with the granger and fruit grower. He cannot enter into competition with the wheat grower as he can now. I say, sir, that the Chinaman can enter into competition with the white man in the raising of wheat, because Chinese labor is cheaper than white labor. He can go into your valleys and beat you raising wheat, because he employs Chinese labor at five dollars a month for a long term of years, and you are compelled to pay white men thirty dollars a month. They can raise grain and other crops at about half the cost now, because they can employ this cheap labor for a term of years at a very low rate of wages, which the white man cannot do. So with every other crop. Hence, if you can cut him off from leasing real property, he cannot then go in and compete with you in the raising of fruit and grain. I am sorry to see so much objurgation, so much argument against the Chinaman because he is a Chinaman. That kind of argument proceeds upon a false assumption. He is a superior man in many respects. He is superior, I say, in many respects to the white race. He is superior as a laborer, as an economist, to which fact dozens of members on this floor can attest to their sorrow from their own experience. There is no use in declaiming against him, he is our superior when it comes to economy.

MR. LINDOW. Let me ask you a question. Will you allow me to ask you a question?

MR. REYNOLDS. I hope we will avoid the absurdity of attempting to legislate against that which it has already been decreed we have no power to do, and confine ourselves to what we may do; and there is no doubt as to the right of the State to say who shall and who shall not own and lease real property. I hope we shall strike out sections four and five, and then adopt these clauses in regard to the right to fish and hold real property. There is more in these two provisions than in all the rest of the stuff in this article. I am willing to adopt anything that can be made of any avail; but there is the whole business. It is not deportation. It is in no way in conflict with the treaty, or the Constitution, or laws of the United States. It is not contrary to any decision of the Supreme Court that I am aware of, nor against any treaty stipulations. It runs against no settled doctrine of law.

MR. MURPHY. I move the previous question. [No second.]

SPEECH OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I have no serious objections, as far as I know, to the amendment offered by Judge Hager, in itself, but I do object to it as a substitute to section four. As a separate section I would probably be in favor of it. If the gentleman will hold on until we get to the sixth section, where his proposition will be germane to the subject-matter, I think I can favor his amendment. Now, sir, there is a disposition here to treat the arguments and authorities introduced here in favor of exclusion in an unfair manner. Our arguments and our authorities have not been answered. They have been sneered at, but they have not been answered. I say we have shown on this floor that the Supreme Court has held, time and again, that the States have the power undoubtedly to protect themselves from the importation of injurious and dangerous classes of persons, persons who are dangerous and detrimental to the best interests and welfare of the State. And in my argument, and in that of my worthy colleague from Los Angeles, General Howard, we not only introduced the authorities in the Passenger cases, of a majority of the Judges in that case, and also of the minority, in support of these measures, and their reasons, in my judgment, were conclusive. They have asserted that Judge McLean sustained their proposition. Gentlemen have forgotten, or ignored entirely, the fact that in the debate on this question, as regards the powers of the State, I read from the decision of Judge McLean, which has never been overruled or qualified. In Graves vs. Slaughter, (p. 568, 15th Peters), the decision is to this effect:

"Each State has a right to protect itself against the avarice and intrusion of the slave dealer; to guard its citizens against the inconveniences and dangers of a slave population.

"The right to exercise this power by a State is higher and deeper than the Constitution. The evil involves the prosperity and may endanger the existence of a State. Its power to guard against and to remedy the evil rests upon the law of self-preservation, a law vital to every community, and especially to a sovereign State."

That authority has never been answered. It is the law of the land, and upon that we base section four of this article, that we have a right to preserve ourselves from this curse. We have a right to protect ourselves from an inundation which threatens to destroy all our industries, and to destroy the morals of the State. It has never been answered. I say if we take this case to the Supreme Court, taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, taking into consideration the character of the people that are being thrown upon us, the Supreme Court of the United States will follow their decisions in the cases I have mentioned and decide this measure to be constitutional. If the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager, will withdraw his substitute and offer it when we reach section six of this article, I will support it. I will not support it as a substitute to this section.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I have no objection to withdrawing it, to be offered at some other time. I did not know that section four had so many friends here. I thought perhaps it was a proposition which would not be insisted upon. I think it is in contravention of the treaty. But I will withdraw my substitute, and offer it to some section that has not so many friends.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws his substitute. The question is on the motion to strike out section four.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"All further immigration to this State of Chinese, ineligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, is hereby prohibited. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of this section by appropriate legislation."

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is to strike out section four.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. Chairman: I desire to refer to the remarks of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds. I wish to say that if he had expressed the sentiments which he has here, in regard to the white race, before the nineteenth of June, he would have been elected to stay at home. I hope, sir, that section four will remain just as it is. I don't desire to occupy the time of this Convention in discussing it. If it is defeated it will be heard from. I now move the previous question.

THE CHAIRMAN. The committee is ready to vote. The question is on the motion to strike out section four.

Division being called for, the motion to strike out the section prevailed by a vote of 54 ayes to 51 noes.

MR. WHITE. I offer a section in place of section four.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is not in order. The Secretary will read section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 5. No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I make the same motion, strike out the section. I will only state that it is the same in substance as the other. It comes under the same objections.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out section five. Is the committee ready for the question?

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: I had not intended to speak on this question, for two or three reasons. One was that I thought we were unanimous upon the question. Another reason was that it seemed to me we were consuming too much time. But when a motion has been made and carried to strike out a previous section, and another motion is pending to strike out section five, I deem it my privilege and my duty to state briefly to this Convention one or two reasons why I support these measures which seem so radical. Now, sir, to me it seems that the real strength of the propositions in opposition to Chinese immigration has not been stated on the floor of this Convention. The gentleman from Marin, Judge Shafter, stated the proposition of the other side in about these words: he said the Chinese should be prevented from coming here because they fill the labor market and are a moral pest. Sir, there is such a thing as a peaceable struggle for the possession of the soil. There is such a thing as a peaceable struggle for the possession of the country. And the laws which govern these things are just as well established as any of the laws of nature; and they act, sir, with unerring certainty. Now, sir, there is one rule which will act here, which we are bound to look at and consider in our action here. Sir, when two races struggle peaceably for the possession of any soil, or any country, or any land, that race, sir, will prevail in that struggle which is most capable of supporting itself upon any given portion of the soil. That is the history of the world. That is the experience of all civilized races.

Now, sir, experience has shown that four or five Chinamen can wrench from the soil a living where only one white man can make a living. Then, sir, this brings us right back to the question that it is not a question as to whether these people are moral pests or not. It is not a question as to whether they pack the labor market, and take the labor from white men; it is a question as to whether in a few years from now there shall be a Mongolian race or a Caucasian race to dominate this land. It is a question, sir, as to whether this country shall be covered by the homes of freemen of our own race, or whether it shall be filled with Chinese slaves. It is a question, sir, as to whether in every hamlet there shall be a Christian church or a joss house. It is a question as to whether the future schools of this land shall be schools in which shall be taught the principles of science and progress, or whether they shall be schools in which shall be taught merely the writings of Confucius. It is more, sir. It is a question as to whether our descendants shall occupy this country, or whether it shall be occupied solely by the Chinese race. It is a question, sir, as to whether in the near future the descendants of the Caucasian race can find a place in this beautiful and fertile land which God has given to us, in which to plant their feet.

Now, sir, if clover and hay be planted upon the same soil, the clover will ruin the hay, because clover lives upon less than the hay; and so it is in this struggle between the races. The Mongolian race will live and run the Caucasian race out, because it requires less from the soil to live upon. It was not the superior intelligence of the white man that took this country from the Indians and made it a prosperous agricultural country; it was the great law of nature, acting in that case, that enabled many white men to draw support from the same piece of soil from which one Indian could draw support, and the Indians were forced to retreat again and again, and to-day are almost extinct. And, sir, we must take this question as it is, and we must deal with it as it is. It is a question as to whose land this shall be. Now, viewing this question in this strong light, I am disposed to support some measures which will be of some avail. I am free to say that I have a stronger love for my own race than I have for the Mongolian race. I am frank to say that I will support such measures as I believe will make this land in future the home of white men, rather than the home of a Mongolian race. I know there are religionists who believe that these rowdy Chinese who come here will be Christianized. But, sir, I assume that the law of nature will prevail over these creeds and beliefs. I believe the creed of a nation will always prevail.

Now, sir, perhaps some of these measures seem a little rash. But it is better that we should make a strong effort, even if it be a mistaken one, than that we should make none at all. Let it be understood in Washington that we attempted to put some anti-Chinese measures into the Constitution of this State, and that they were defeated by a strong vote; let it be understood that they were defeated only by a vote of fifty-five to fifty-one, as was the case with the vote taken a few moments ago, on the motion to strike out section four, and the members of the United States Senate will say, as has already been said, that the majority of the people of California are anxious to have these Chinese to remain among them. I say that all this clamor, and all this opposition against the Chinese, amounts to nothing in Washington, and you know it. You know what President Hayes' proclamation was. He did not dare to say anything touching this subject, and yet he is Chief Executive of this great nation. And, sir, allow me to say—and perhaps it is a little out of order here—that his actions in thus ignoring our wrongs will certainly damn the Republican party in this State. [Applause.]

Now, sir, this question of citizens ineligible to become citizens of the United States has cut some figure here, and gentlemen well versed in the law have differed upon it. Allow me to say that the United States Congress has recognized a marked difference between those who are eligible to become citizens and those who are not. In all the laws of the United States with regard to public lands, Congress has so fixed the matter that no Chinaman can acquire from the United States any kind of right to land. He cannot locate at all. He cannot file a homestead. He cannot file a preëmption claim; cannot get any right or title to mining land; and the authorities are there in the Revised Statutes of the United States. And that being the case, Congress having made this distinction in these matters, I believe we have the right to make a distinction in the laws of this State, and to say that this country shall not pass into the possession of Chinamen; that we have a right to prohibit them from leasing the land, or buying land, and that no man of Chinese descent shall have the right to the possession of any land. I am in favor of this fifth proposition. I know it is radical. If it shall conflict, why, the United States will simply prevail, and we will acknowledge ourselves in error. We will have done what we could. It is better than to make no effort at all. I believe these provisions are right. I hope when we have adopted these provisions, those offered by Colonel Barnes will be brought up and given a full consideration. Now, sir, let us make a provision here so that if the Burlingame treaty should be repealed during this Winter, there will be power given by the Constitution to do something in this matter.

SPEECH OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: In regard to the motion to strike out section five I shall detain this Convention but a very few moments. I do not propose to argue the question of evils arising from Chinese immigration. I say this section ought to be adopted. This section is now in the Constitution of Illinois and Indiana, and has been for years. The section there was made to apply to negroes and mulattoes, and a fine imposed for coming into the State, and conditions upon which they may be transported from the State. It existed to the time of the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and the Supreme Court sustained that provision. That was in relation to negroes born in the United States; and, sir, there is a class of men here now who are far more objectionable to the people of the United States than ever the negroes were in any State. I believe this right has been established. I believe we have not the right to prohibit their settlement, their right to travel, or to come here for commercial purposes. But the right to prevent them from owning any land, or leasing any land, or engaging in any business here, I believe we have. I have offered a proposition here, which the committee have seen fit to change in form, but the substance of it is in section five, and the last clause of section six. I believe this to be a good provision, and I believe if we adopt it the Supreme Court will sustain us, and uphold it as constitutional.

SPEECH OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I wish first to correct a statement made by my colleague from San Francisco, Mr. Freud. He gave the Chinese residents of San Francisco credit for paying taxes upon one million five hundred thousand dollars, while they really pay on the small sum of four hundred and nineteen thousand seven hundred and thirty dollars, as shown by the Assessor's reports published in the Post of December second, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight.

I had no intention of punishing this committee by giving my opinions on this subject. I hoped that the legal members would explain to us all the rights we had, and that we would be able to arrive at conclusions intelligent and satisfactory; but, after a four days' debate, I am as much at a loss as ever. I have heard some of our best lawyers advocating measures as strong as any of the demands of the opponents of Chinese immigration; and others, again, on the other side, as fully learned, assert that we have no rights whatever. Now, I am one of those who think that something should be done, and that something means to abate the evil, for the evil is admitted by all.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I take a different view of this matter from that expressed by many of our delegates. I look upon the present influx of Chinese as a something to be dreaded, and an evil to be prevented by all the means within the power of the State, and even expanding the powers to make them reach beyond what they seem to reach by the present interpretation. I am anxious to go to the very extreme measures of legal lengths, and even to the seemingly un-American ideas, to remove them from our midst. Some people think we should merely petition the treaty-making powers, and there let the matter rest. These gentlemen seem to forget that California has sent petition after petition to Washington. And let the Chinamen answer what good they have done. We have sent our members to Congress; and our Senators have laid our claims before the authorities at Washington, and they have been treated with scorn. California has sent up a cry from the pulpit and the press, and the cry has been supported by all classes of our citizens, and we were answered that it was an Irish alarm. And as for these gentlemen keeping their word with the people, why, the President—Mr. Hayes—promised some relief, and then passed it with silent contempt in his message. And in the face of all this, we are told to memorialize and be patient. Yes, memorialize and be patient, say these well-fed, well-clad, well-housed fortunate few, who are not suffering yet; but the time will come—and if nothing is done to prevent it, those fortunate and very patient gentlemen will cry as loud as the men who are now without house or home, and who are living like Digger Indians, degenerate and debauched.

I look upon this question not merely as a conflict between labor and capital; I view it in a broader light. I see in it a struggle between two races—the ancient civilization, better named Asiatic barbarism, like a tidal wave lashing upon our shores, it meets the modern Christian civilization following after the setting sun. The modern, in its course, carries all that is useful and good; the ancient, everything that is degrading. The question now is for us to choose between the two kinds of civilization, modern Christian, or ancient Barbarism. Why, this question reaches down to the very foundation of republicanism itself, and threatens it with destruction. Our grand institutions are in danger of being overthrown: our churches will soon become joss houses, and our schools Chinese dwellings, as paganism has no use for schools or places of learning. We have our choice now; yield to barbarism or support the modern civilization. I mean to support the modern, even if it should require a resort to the extreme and doubtful contest of war. The Administration which refuses to answer the call of the people for protection from an enemy, is an Administration not worthy of our support or confidence, and it is the duty of the people to retire it by their votes, and set up one that will come up to the demands of the times, and by fair and determined measures remove a threatening evil.

More than thirty years ago the people in Illinois, by force and violence, drove the Mormons from their State, and everybody approved the act. The same Mormons moved West and settled in the desert, forming a new and strange government, and defying the laws of the land. And why has the government been so silent upon the subject? There a degrading custom of polygamy is carried on in open defiance of the established law, and our authorities at Washington are blind to the whole subject; and we are threatened by dire calamity if we try to rid our State of a degraded race which is destroying our very existence.

Do these gentlemen who, in their mild and humiliating way, mean to tell us that the government will only bolster up and defend the worst form of degradation that can be practiced? Polygamy in Utah and paganism in California! Do these gentlemen mean to say that the Administration can look with an approving eye upon these degrading things and feel that it will only punish those who try to suppress them, and by such acts approve them? We may well ask if the gold of James Q. Cannon, and the mysterious heavy boxes of Chin Lan Pin, of the Chinese Embassy, has anything to do with these things; and while all this is going on we are told to have patience and send another memorial. You might as well wait for leave to put out the fire that was consuming your house as send another petition.

I hope this measure will pass, even if it seems un-American. We have the vague hope that the President will yet move in the matter, as the political party scales are so nicely balanced that the little western State of California will be of some importance in the next Presidential election, and on the ground of selfishness, which seems to move men more than reason, the government may abrogate the treaty, and then the measures would all come good; and even if they deny us this, the Courts can only decide those parts unconstitutional, and the remainder would stand.

The gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Stuart, made a speech which was only valuable as showing the gentleman's courage. He would destroy all our naturalization laws, and, from his standpoint, thinks the Chinaman a very desirable immigrant; he seems to think that he is the only man in California who raised a family, and without Chinamen we would have nothing; he says they have created all the wealth, and built all our cities. Now, they may have cultivated his farm, and helped raise his family, for all I know or care, but I have seen most of the cities of California, and I have yet to see the first house built by a Chinaman.

MR. STUART. May I ask the gentleman a question?

MR. WELLIN. Yes, sir.

MR. STUART. I called upon the farmers around me to see if they were not in favor of the Chinese, and if not, to rise and say so; and, as they made no reply, I considered they approved my position.

MR. WELLIN. Sir, one gentleman, Mr. White, of Santa Cruz, rose in his place, made a speech, and did not approve—he condemned your course, and he is a farmer of twenty-five years' experience in California, and never employed a Chinaman. And I inquired of those who have seats around me—Mr. Boucher, Mr. McConnell, Mr. Schomp, and others—and not one of these gentlemen, all farmers, support you. You, sir, stand singly and alone. But he would, if in a National Constitutional Convention, vote to abolish all naturalization laws. We may all feel happy that the Constitution of the nation was made by men of more liberality. Have people the right to remove an objectionable thing from among them? We have shown that Mormonism was driven out of Illinois by violence, and we may remind you of a memorable tea party in the Harbor of Boston; and not many years ago, in Staten Island, the New York quarantine buildings were considered dangerous to the health of the people, and after the usual waiting and petitions, one night a great fire swept them all away, and the danger was removed forever. Suppose a great fire should occur in San Francisco, and a nuisance abated. Fire is a good purifier; but we hope that it will not be required by a free people. I do not advocate insubordination, but if all relief is denied, and the evil of which we complain is protected; if the laws we make are only to be used to support an evil, then the people must remember the Boston tea party and the people of Staten Island.

Our learned lawyers have been as much at sea in this matter as the men from the field and workshops. Now, I am losing some of my good opinion of our legal gentlemen on constitutional matters, when a simple case was placed in their hands to bring an appeal by this Convention from the State Controller, on the payment of a bill, and the matter was done in such an unprofessional manner that their case was thrown out. I believe the report of the committee should be adopted with very little amendment, and await the action of the Courts, and then do whatever the times may demand, and I am fully convinced that if the presence of the Chinese was as injurious to the rich as it is to the poor, a remedy would soon be found.

A year ago last June, some Chinamen located in the fashionable part of New York and built their wooden shanty, engaged in the laundry business, and were doing well; but one morning a gang of men came and tore down the house, threw its contents on the ground, stacked the material on their wagons and drove off. Now, if this was done in San Francisco, what name would they get, and what would be done? They would be called hoodlums, and be punished by the law. But this was done in New York by the police, and the materials of the building carried off to the corporation yard. And the people approved of the act.

Wait till the Chinamen get to going East in considerable numbers, and we shall see a revulsion of sentiment that will cause these proposed measures to be regarded in a very different light. There is not a city in the Union that would have stood what San Francisco has. The people have been patient and long suffering, and they are looking to this Convention for some legal redress. And now it is proposed to strike out first one section and then another, until there will be nothing left of the report. I say, let us adopt these provisions, and let their constitutionality be tested before the Courts. If the Courts shall decide them to be unconstitutional, all we have to do is to submit. But let us see how far we are permitted to go. It is our duty to try every means within our power to do away with this curse, and if we do not make the attempt we will never accomplish anything.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. Chairman: I will do as much as any member on this floor to remedy this matter. Section four has already been stricken out, because it was considered to be in contravention of the treaty between China and the United States. Section five, notwithstanding the eloquent argument of the gentleman from El Dorado, I consider to be in contravention of section five of the treaty with China, which recognizes the right of men to change their residence. I am, therefore, in favor of striking it out.

SPEECH OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to section five. I offer it for the reason that the Convention seems to be rather tender-footed on the proposition to prohibit Chinamen from residing here, and I am willing to put something in that will qualify it. I am astonished, after the universal expression of opinion on this floor, that the Convention should be so tender-footed. I am astonished that the Convention should have rejected section four, contrary to the expressed desire of its members. I cannot understand the difference between section four and section five, though my friend Larkin voted in favor of striking out section four. I think they are exactly the same, and I am in hopes my amendment will suit the gentlemen, because it provides that no force shall be used. Now, sir, I mean to support the amendment of Judge Hager with all my energy when the time comes for it to be introduced again. I believe it does the whole business, while I believe it does not conflict with the laws, or the treaties, or the Constitution of the United States. I think he has already shown that it does not conflict. It will, of course, be some inconvenience to white immigrants arriving here, but we must do something if we wish to accomplish anything. They will be put to some inconvenience, but it will only be temporary. That, in my opinion, will end the matter. I believe it will accomplish more than the entire report of the committee towards driving the Chinese out of the country. I offer this as an amendment:

"SEC. 5. The Governor shall, by proclamation, forbid the entrance into this State, after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, of any Chinaman or Mongolian. Any such person arriving in this State after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, may be expelled from the State by such means as may be prescribed by the Legislature; provided, that nothing in this section, nor any law passed in pursuance thereof, shall authorize the Governor, or any State officer, in the expulsion of any such Chinese or Mongolian, to forcibly resist the civil or military power of the United States. If the Governor shall be prevented from enforcing this section, or the laws made in pursuance thereof, by the Government of the United States, then it shall be the duty of the Governor to take such action as will enable him to contest the right of the United States to prevent the execution and enforcement of this section, and the laws made in pursuance thereof, before the Supreme Court of the United States."

SPEECH OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman: Now that the Convention has stricken out section four, I am in hopes they will not strike out section five. I don't see why the motion was made to strike out section four, because, in my view, section four was the best section reported by the committee. Why? Because it strikes directly at the evil. It was defeated because members thought that it was going beyond the powers of the State. I claim that it is an open question as to the power of the State. Notwithstanding the authorities that have been cited here, and the arguments that have been made, I claim that this is an open question, and that if it ever is determined, it will be determined in favor of sections four and five. Mr. Chairman, I will read you a paragraph from the decision of Justice McLean, in the Passenger cases, which has not yet been read, page one hundred and thirty-two, seventeenth of Curtis:

"No one has yet drawn the line clearly, because, perhaps, no one can draw it, between the commercial power of the Union and the municipal power of a State. Numerous cases have arisen, involving these powers, which have been decided, but a rule has necessarily been observed as applicable to the circumstances of each case. And so must every case be adjudged."

Now, sir, from the discussion on this floor, I believe it will be conceded as a fact that we must stop this Chinese immigration, or the civilization of this country will be destroyed. We must stop this Chinese immigration, or our State will be destroyed. That, sir, is the proposition, and I believe that nine tenths of those on this floor are of that opinion. It is admitted to be a fact, and I believe it to be a fact as much as I believe that I am standing on this floor. I believe it to be a fact that this immigration must be arrested, or our civilization will be destroyed—that being an admitted fact, let us see what this same decision says:

"In giving the commercial power to Congress the States did not part with that power of self-preservation which must be inherent in every organized community. They may guard against the introduction of anything which may corrupt the morals or endanger the health or lives of their citizens."

I say this, sir, that if the question involved in these two sections ever was decided, it was decided in favor of the State having the power to regulate this matter. This is a question that must be met, and I am in favor of meeting it squarely, and for that reason I was in favor of section four. It becomes us, in view of the surroundings, to meet these questions as Americans ought to meet every question, fairly and squarely, and the question was squarely met in section four, which has been stricken out. What is our position? We are the advance guard of civilization. We are here at the front, at the western margin of the empire. We are here, sir, meeting and facing this evil, that if it cannot be met and overcome here will not only destroy American civilization on the Pacific Coast, but it will destroy American civilization throughout the land.

Now, sir, certain gentlemen talk as though the friends of these measures were advocating revolution. Nothing of the kind. I do not understand that when we are standing here contending for our right to deal with this question, independent of the Federal Government, that we are advocating revolutionary measures. This, at least, is an open question, and it is a question that ought to be tried by the highest tribunal in the land. We arguing, not in the spirit of a revolution, but in a spirit that becomes American citizens, and if the decision is against us we will accept it in the same spirit. I regret to hear any threats of riot and revolution. I concur with the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, that this government is drifting into absolutism. I concur with him in that. But riot and revolution and violence only tends to make absolutism. It will have no other effect. And I am satisfied that if the remedy proposed in sections four and five should fail, that the Federal Government will help us out. I hope section five will not be stricken out. I am sorry that section four has been stricken out, for I would like to see a test case made up on these two sections. The same question is involved in section five that was contained in section four, and I hope that the Convention will not strike it out.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: My opinion is that members of this Convention who found themselves unable to support section four, will, upon examination of section five, discover sufficient difference in the two sections perhaps to enable them to support section five. The one might have been of questionable character and in conflict with the federal power in prohibiting immigration. The other relates to the power of the State acting within its own jurisdiction. And gentlemen who could not support section four on account of their construction of the Federal Constitution, may safely support section five to bring this question to a judicial determination. Now, what is it we are seeking to accomplish here? The first thing is to obtain the judgment of this Convention, as the judgment of the people of the State of California, and to have that judgment recorded in the Constitution, because there can be no better test of the sentiments and wishes of the people of a State. All the authorities are that a Constitutional Convention represents the sovereign people of a State in a sovereign capacity better than any other body. We obtain a list of the members representing them, and then send the work back to them for their ratification. This Convention must put these declarations in the Constitution in order to comply with the pledges they made to the State. We expressly pledged ourselves to bring the whole power of the State to bear for the eradication of this evil. How is it, sir, that these gentlemen speak here day after day, declaring themselves opposed to Chinese immigration, and then, when we ask them to put themselves on record in favor of using some of the admitted powers of the State to suppress this evil, they suddenly become religious and refuse us their aid? We are soon to be called upon to vote upon a proposition here which is based upon the powers of the State, which powers have never been denied, and cannot be denied, by any gentleman upon this floor. The State is clothed with this sovereignity in regard to the regulation of its internal affairs. As a proposition of law this cannot be controverted. I endeavored to obtain from gentlemen here a declaration that they were in favor of going to the very verge of constitutional law. I wanted to obtain from them an express declaration that they were in earnest in using these powers which are not questioned to prohibit this immigration, the powers which the State does possess over its internal affairs, in the regulation of its business, its governmental affairs, its public works, and everything of that kind, which powers have never been denied.

You have adopted a provision forbidding corporations from employing Chinamen. But do you think that is a sufficient remedy? Do you expect that the people will be satisfied with that alone? Suppose you do forbid them; what is the result? You drive them out of one employment into another. When they overrun one line of industry they will take up another. When they cannot cook and wash they will make shoes. We all know that. They came to California to dig gold. That was what they came for in the beginning. But their imitative powers are such that they have worked themselves into nearly all our factories, and they can resort to various pursuits when the corporations cease to employ them. But that provision amounts to something. It is good as far as it goes, but it will not be satisfactory to the people of this State, I can most solemnly assure you. We must do more than that. If you drive him out of one branch he will enter others, and still come in competition with white labor. It is as broad as it is long. And this trifling will not satisfy the people. They ask for bread, and they will not be satisfied with a stone. I am in favor of adopting this section. Of course it only declares that they shall not be allowed to settle here. But it is the basis upon which legislation is to be built. I therefore hope the Convention will adopt the section.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: When last on the floor I had a few words to say in reference to sections four and five. I have no particular objections to sections five and seven, if they are to be adopted as a declaration of principles, though one is a repetition of the other. I do not know that there is any particular objection to it.

SPEECH OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. Chairman: I wish to say that the position taken by the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, is somewhat confused as regards the Constitution of Illinois. The Constitution of the State of Illinois, of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, says:

"The General Assemply shall, at its first session under the amended Constitution, pass such laws as will effectually prohibit free persons of color from immigrating to and settling in this State, and to effectually prevent the owners of slaves from bringing them into this State for the purpose of setting them free."

I will ask the Secretary to read a portion of article thirteen, of the Constitution of Indiana, of eighteen hundred and fifty-one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. No negro or mulatto shall come into or settle in the State after the adoption of this Consitution.

"SEC. 2. All contracts made with any negro or mulatto coming into the State, contrary to the provisions of the foregoing section, shall be void; and any person who shall employ such negro or mulatto, or otherwise encourage him to remain in the State, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars."

There seems to be a large number of gentlemen in this Convention who are in the position of the man down East in regard to the Maine liquor law. He said he was in favor of the law but against its execution. [Laughter.] They all deprecate this evil, and admit that it is monstrous—a terrible thing. But they say they can't do anything; that we are tied up; that we have no power. Now, sir, that was before the Supreme Court of the United States, and they decided that the State had the power, as a matter of self-defense, to exclude a population deemed injurious, notwithstanding it was an interruption of commerce. That is what Judge McLean said; that is what Judge Wayne said. As a matter of self-defense the State has a right to exclude an obnoxious population. Now, Mr. Chairman, I must say that it is a little extraordinary that, with this great evil hanging over us, we are not willing to go to the extent that the States of Illinois and Indiana were willing to go to in relation to mulattoes and negroes. It shows one thing, I think, conclusively, that if the United States had not been reinforced by these Western men, she never would have won the fight, and that the men of the West have at least some courage, moral and physical, and they are willing to take some of these consequences, be they what they may. Now, are we not willing to act when we are supported, as I say we are, as I say the Supreme Court of the United States has decided we are, are we not bound to act? For, in almost every case, that has been cited here by the other side, relates to a tax which was levied before the immigrants had landed.

Mr. Chairman, there is and always has been in this State a party in favor of Chinese immigration, and there is now. They have not all got the frankness of my friend from Sonoma, Mr. Stuart, but while they do not care to acknowledge it, they are none the less in favor of it. They are in favor of it, but have not the courage to say so. These large corporations are in favor of this cheap labor. The man who cultivates thousands of acres is in favor of this cheap labor; the more he can get of it the larger his profits will be, and the more he is in favor of it. That is the position we are in to-day, sir.

MR. JOYCE. Don't you think the majority of this Convention are in favor of it?

MR. HOWARD. I do not know what they are in favor of. To my mind the principle of section five is the same as section four. I shall support it because I believe we have the constitutional right to do it; because the Supreme Court of the United States, which is the final arbiter on constitutional law, has said so. And even if the State Constitutions to which I have referred, were in some respects contrary, they are entitled to great weight with me. But it so happens that they are quite the contrary.

Now, sir, it has been said by my friend from Sacramento, Doctor Caples, that this question has been construed and settled by Judge Grant, and that since then, the States have no rights. Well, sir, I prefer the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States to that of Judge Grant——

MR. CAPLES. If the gentleman will permit me, he is mistaken. I did not say that the States had no rights since. I did say that I believed that great decision had colored and influenced the opinions and decisions of Courts and changed popular opinion.

MR. HOWARD. I am glad to hear the gentleman admit that the States have still some rights left, notwithstanding the decision of Chief Justice Grant. As I was about to say, I acknowledge that Chief Justice Grant is weighty on nepotism, the third term, and imperialism; but on questions of constitutional law, the gentleman will excuse me for preferring the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States, and especially as expressed in their judgments since the rebellion. They have put an end to bayonet government, I trust never to be revived in this country. It is due to that Court to say, that amid all the bitterness and violence of party and sectional conflict, it has maintained the true principles of the government, and as a general thing the rights of the States.

Now, sir, I say that the fifth section is supported by the Constitution of the United States; supported by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States; and for that reason I shall vote against the motion to strike out. I shall also vote for Judge Hager's proposition, with some amendments that are necessary. But the fifth section is clear, and is supported by the decisions of the highest tribunals in the land.

MR. WHITE. I withdraw my amendment for the present.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Santa Cruz withdraws his amendment temporarily.

SPEECH OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. I am sorry to be engaged in the thankless task of tearing down the beautiful air castles built by the distinguished gentleman from Los Angeles. I am really surprised to hear the distinguished gentleman from Los Angeles draw a parallel, or assume to draw a parallel, between the provisions of the Constitution of Illinois of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, and the Constitution of Indiana, in excluding the free negroes and mulattoes from that State. Why, the gentleman knows very well that there was no Burlingame treaty in existence at that time. We had no treaty with the King of Dahomey, or with the Southern States. It was years and years before, and there is no parallel at all in the cases. The section declares that the Chinese shall not reside in California. The treaty declares in express terms that they shall reside in California if they want to. Now if my distinguished friend from Los Angeles had, like the Pope, fulminated a bull against the Burlingame treaty, I would have joined him with all my heart.

MR. HOWARD. The gentleman will excuse me, but that is precisely what I have done. I say the treaty, so far as it conflicts with our power to exclude this class of people, is totally void.

MR. CAPLES. I took an oath, when I entered upon my duties here, to support the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the State of California. The Constitution of the United States declares that the Constitution, and the laws enacted in pursuance thereof, and the treaties made in pursuance thereof, are the supreme law of the land. The treaty—and I am free to say that it is the sum of all villainies—nevertheless the treaty is the supreme law of the land, and I have sworn to support it. And I say it declares in plain specific language, that these people shall have the right to come and reside here, while this fifth section says they shall not reside here.

MR. AYERS. I desire to ask a question.

MR. CAPLES. Yes, sir.

MR. AYERS. If the treaty violates the Constitution of the United States, then it cannot be constitutional, and by adhering to the treaty we would be violating the Constitution of the United States, which is higher than the treaty.

MR. CAPLES. The gentleman raises a constitutional question that must be determined by the Federal authorities and the Courts. It has not been declared unconstitutional, and like a law is binding until it is repealed or declared unconstitutional. I am free to concur with the gentleman that the treaty is in conflict with the letter and spirit of the Constitution of the United States. But until it is so declared and set aside it is binding.

MR. AYERS. Allow me to ask how we can make a case in order to test the question as to whether it is constitutional or not, if we cannot make it in this way. What we want is to make a case to test that very question.

MR. CAPLES. A case can be made—there is no difficulty in that respect. But I think there could not be a worse way than to incorporate a provision that is clearly in direct conflict with the laws and treaties of the United States. The gentleman asks how we are going to make this test. Let the Legislature enact a law, and if it is set aside as being unconstitutional, there is no harm done. But if we put in the Constitution of the State a provision that is clearly in conflict with the Constitution of the United States, we cannot repeal it, and that is where the principal objection comes in. It will defeat the Constitution and swamp it out of sight. I desire that we shall make a Constitution that shall be adopted by the people. If we load it down with things of this kind, it will be rejected. I am, therefore, in favor of the motion to strike out section five.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out section five.

SPEECH OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: A few weeks ago the people of California were surprised that an individual of some note, and of some reputation for truth, having something of a position in the political world, should assert in Washington that the people of California were not opposed to Chinese immigration; that only Kearney and some of the ignorant Irish followers were opposed to the Chinese. Now, sir, this Convention is supposed to represent the public sentiment of California. It is supposed, by its acts, to reflect the will and sentiments of the people of the State. Now, if the vote taken by this Convention upon the motion to strike out section four of the report of the Committee on Chinese Immigration is a correct criterion of the opinions of the members of this Convention, then the people of California are not properly represented, and there will be a seeming verification of Mr. Bee's statement, that it is only the ignorant Irish who are in favor of stopping Chinese immigration.

Now, one word in regard to the decision of Chief Justice Grant. I was one of the jurymen who helped to decide the question upon that occasion, and I speak for the balance of the jury when I say that the question there decided was that a State of this Union could not secede, and that the laws of Congress, made in pursuance of the Constitution of the United States, should be obeyed, and the citizens of this government who believed in those principles defended them with their lives, and by their sacred honor. But, sir, I deny in toto the assumption that any part of the question was in issue. I say, as my colleague has said, that the only way to try the constitutionality of that treaty is to make up a case and take it before the proper tribunal. I say this is one of the highest rights of an American citizen, and I shall vote in favor of retaining section five. Therefore I hope that the motion made by the gentleman who represents the equinoctial line will be voted down by this Convention, and that we shall retain it simply as a proposition declaring that the further immigration of the Chinese into this State as citizens, becoming citizens, shall not be allowed. By striking it out you give the lie to the assertion that the people of this State are opposed to Chinese immigration. If we put that declaration in the Constitution, we simply declare, as the representatives of the people of this State, that the further immigration of Chinese into this State is subversive of the best interests of the people, and that therefore we enter our solemn protest against it. Upon that provision we will go to the Courts and appeal to them to protect us, and defend us in our rights. It will be valuable as an official protest, even if for no other purpose.

MR. CAPLES. Allow me a question.

MR. WEST. Certainly.

MR. CAPLES. Is the gentleman not aware that the Committee on Chinese have under consideration, and in course of preparation, a memorial to Congress on this subject, in which it is expected there will be universal condemnation of this evil?

MR. WEST. I am aware of that fact, and I know that so long as we content ourselves with drafting memorials so long will we be left without aid. You know the axiom—"the gods help those who help themselves." How will our memorial be received by Congress, and the people on the other side of the mountains, when the record of the vote by which this Convention has stricken out section five has gone along with it? I hope that we shall show to Congress that we are trying to do something to help ourselves, for so long as they believe we are not in earnest they will do nothing in the matter. I hope this section will be adopted. You need have no fears about this being a load for the Constitution to carry, it will commend itself to the good judgment of the people of this State, and they will adopt our Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. I hope this section will be stricken out, for if section four was unconstitutional, this section certainly is none the less so.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I believe we have a rule which says that no gentleman shall speak more than once. The gentleman from San Bernardino has already, I believe, spoken to this section.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken. If any other gentleman desires the floor he can have it, if not the gentleman will proceed.

MR. ROLFE. I say we have already had test cases. The Legislature made a test case and got defeated, and the Burlingame treaty was sustained. Now, I say, the gentlemen are doing an injustice when they say that the vote on this section will reflect the sentiment of the Convention or the sentiment of the State at large upon the Chinese question. I say they are mistaken. It does not reflect the sentiment of this Convention, as to whether they are in favor of or opposed to Chinese immigration. It is merely a question of constitutional law. I am as much opposed to Chinese immigration as any man on this floor, but my conscience tells me that this is an open violation of the Constitution of the United States, which I have taken an oath to support, and I will not vote for any such provision. It is clearly a violation of the supreme law of the land, and I am not ready to place myself in any such attitude.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out section five.

Division being called, the committee divided, and the motion to strike out was lost—ayes, 43; noes, 60.

MR. STEELE. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. GREGG. Mr. Chairman: I move we do now adjourn.

Carried.

And, at five o'clock and seven minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned.

PETITION.

MR. CONDON presented the following petition from the Carpenters' and Millmen's Association, signed by several hundred citizens of California, against the employment of convict labor by contractors:

CARPENTERS' AND MILLMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Resolutions passed by the Carpenters' and Millmen's Association of San Francisco.

To the members of the Constitutional Convention:

WHEREAS, The employment of convict labor by private individuals or corporations in industrial pursuits is a crime against the laws of political economy, as it thereby comes in competition with free labor, and reduces the wages to such a point that it is impossible to exist as a human being; and whereas, there is at present in the State Prison at San Quentin a large number of prisoners employed in making sash, doors, and blinds, by contractors, at fifty cents per day; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Carpenters' and Millmen's Association of San Francisco, That we petition the delegates of the Constitutional Convention, now in session at Sacramento, that they adopt a clause in the new Constitution that will forever prohibit the employment of convict labor in any pursuit detrimental to the interest of free labor.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent by the Secretary of the Carpenters' and Millmen's Association to the President of the Constitutional Convention.

Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

REPORTS.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, presented the following report from the Committee on Lands and Homestead Exemption:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Lands and Homestead Exemption, to whom was referred amendments number six, by Mr. Evey; number ninety, by Mr. Dowling; number one hundred and four, by Mr. Freeman; number one hundred and seventy-nine, by Mr. Ayers; number four hundred and thirty, by Mr. Barton; number five hundred and twelve, by Mr. Davis, have had the same under consideration, and recommend that no further action be taken thereon.

Also, amendment number one hundred and forty-three, by Mr. O'Sullivan; number five hundred and eleven, by Mr. E. O Smith, part of which has been reported by the Committee on Chinese, and on the part not reported we recommend that no further action be taken.

Amendment number four hundred and six, by Mr. E. O. Smith, the committee have embodied in the accompanying article, and recommend its adoption.

E. O. SMITH, Chairman,
JOSEPH C BROWN,
GEORGE OHLEYER,
J. SCHOMP,
W. J. SWEASEY,
THOMAS McCONNELL,
J. M. CHARLES.

RELATIVE TO LANDS AND HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

SECTION —. Hereafter the homestead, consisting of the family dwelling house, outbuildings, improvements, and lands appurtenant thereto, of each head of a family resident in this State, of the value not exceeding five thousand dollars, shall not be alienated or incumbered, except by the consent, in manner to be prescribed by law, of both husband and wife, where that relation exists, and such homestead shall be exempt from seizure or sale for the payment of any debt or liability, except for the purchase money and the payment of taxes, laborers' and mechanics' liens, and obligations contracted for the improvement of such homestead, and for debts incurred before the adoption of this Constitution. And in case of the death of the husband and wife, the surviving member or members of the family, if any, shall succeed to the title and possession of such homestead with the like exemption herein prescribed in favor of such head of the family. And the Legislature shall, by general law, not inconsistent with this section, effectually secure the benefits of such homestead exemption.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. Mr. President: This is a report of the majority, and I understand that Mr. O'Sullivan desires to make a report for the minority. He is not present, and I move that this report be laid on the table and not printed until the minority report is in.

Report received, and the proposed amendment read and ordered to lay on the table until the minority report shall be presented.

CHINESE MEMORIALS.

MR. BARNES presented the following:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your committee appointed to draft memorial to be forwarded to the Governors of Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory, most respectfully submit the following, and recommend its adoption, and also that it be printed in the Journal.

For the Committee:

W. H. L. BARNES,
VOLNEY E. HOWARD,
P. T. DOWLING.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF CALIFORNIA,
SACRAMENTO, December —, 1878.

To the Governors of Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory: Your attention is respectfully invited to a resolution adopted by this body, on the 9th instant, of which the following is a copy:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to draft petitions to be forwarded by this Convention to the Governors of Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory, requesting their Excellencies to memorialize the President of the United States and the Senate, on behalf of their States and Territory, for a modification of the Burlingame treaty, now existing between the Chinese Empire and the Republic of the United States of America.

This body entertains no doubt that the people of Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory are in full accord with the people of California in desiring to prevent the further immigration of the Chinese, and to compel the removal of those now domiciled upon the Pacific Coast. It believes that your Excellencies have recognized the evils which have resulted from the presence of the Chinese, and that your Excellencies will cheerfully unite with us in the expression of the existing universal sentiment of hostility to its continuance, to the President and Senate of the United States, to the end that the treaty now existing between the United States and the Empire of China may be abrogated, or so modified as to permit the prevention of further immigration of a vicious and non-assimilating population.

You understand, doubtless, as we do, that these people have no respect or regard for our government, either as to its form or administration; that they govern themselves by a system of laws peculiar to themselves, and have their own tribunals for the administration of law; that twenty-five years' experience has shown that they are incapable of assimilation, either in sentiment, habits of life, or religion; that they are rapidly absorbing all branches of mechanical and manual labor, and expelling from most ordinary pursuits the middle and poorer classes of our citizens; that the destitution thus caused is developing a race of American paupers, criminals, and tramps, instead of a race of industrious, virtuous, and intelligent American citizens; that the existence of either an aristocratic or servile class is a perpetual menace of free institutions, and that both these deplorable results of Chinese immigration are imminent, and have already manifested themselves; that the habits of the Chinese, the absence of the family relation, of fixed homes, and of decent social life among them, enable them to support themselves and accumulate money upon wages which would starve an American citizen, and that their accumulations are very rarely expended or invested in the communities where they are domiciled, but are transmitted to the country of their nativity, and that they are therefore enabled to avoid taxation and any considerable share of the burdens of government, and to drain the circulating capital of the coast; while their criminal habits and utter immorality are filling our prisons, jails, almshouses, and places of refuge for the destitute, and debasing, by example and intercourse, the rising generation. We believe that these considerations, and others that may occur to your Excellencies, should be pressed upon the attention of the President and the Congress of the United States.

This body will take occasion to express the views indicated above to the President and Senate of the United States, and respectfully request your Excellencies to officially address the treaty-making power of the government and Congress to the same effect, to the end that they may understand the wishes, necessities, and demands of the people of the Pacific Coast in reference to the question of Chinese immigration.

MR. DOWLING offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary be and is hereby directed to cause the memorial to the Governors of Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory to be suitably engrossed for the signature of the President of the Convention, and transmit the same by mail to the Governors of said States, and also that a copy of the same, when executed by the President, be printed and forwarded to the Governors of all the States of the United States.

MR. DOWLING. I move the adoption of the report and the memorial.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: It seems to me that the resolution is rather premature. We have not adopted the memorial yet. I believe that the Chairman asked that it be printed in the Journal. I am not able to give it sufficient consideration now.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I would ask if it would not be proper to amend it so as to include Arizona Territory? We could insert after Washington Territory, Arizona Territory.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I would like to say, in reference to the suggestion of the gentleman from Trinity, that the resolution directed the memorial to be addressed to the Governors of these States and Washington Territory, and that was the limit. If it is to be amended now, it may perhaps be well, as suggested by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe, to have it printed and submitted to the examination of the Convention. I move that it be printed out of order, and laid upon the desks of members.

The motion prevailed, and the report and memorial were laid on the table and ordered printed.

MR. MILLER, from the Committee on Chinese, presented the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Chinese, to whom was referred the resolution of the Convention instructing the committee to prepare and report memorials to the President, Senate, and House of Representatives of the United States, praying for the modification of the treaty with China, and the necessary national legislation for the prohibition of Chinese immigration, begs leave to submit herewith the draft of two memorials upon this subject—one to the President, and one to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States—with the recommendation that these memorials, if approved by the Convention, be properly engrossed and prepared for the signatures of the members of this Convention, and that all members be requested to sign the same.

Your committee respectfully returns herewith the draft of a memorial on the same subject, which was referred to the committee on the twelfth instant, the committee having failed to adopt it.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN F. MILLER, Chairman.

SACRAMENTO, December 14th, 1878.

To the President of the United States:

We, the members of the Constitutional Convention of the State of California, respectfully represent that the continued immigration of Chinese to this coast endangers the health, peace, and prosperity of the people. This representation we make upon our own knowledge of the facts, and therefore earnestly request such Executive action in respect to the existing treaty with China as will afford relief from the evils of such immigration.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

We, the members of the Constitutional Convention of the State of California, respectfully represent that the continued immigration of Chinese to this coast endangers the health, peace, and prosperity of the people. This representation we make upon our own knowledge of the facts, and therefore earnestly ask that the necessary national legislation be promptly had to prohibit their further immigration.

REMARKS OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: The committee instructed me to explain to the Convention that it was thought best to make these memorials as short as possible, and merely expressive of the sentiment of the people of California as represented by the delegates of this Convention, that the Chinese immigration ought to be prohibited. There have been a number of memorials sent to Washington to the President and to Congress, in which the whole Chinese question has been elaborately argued. The committee thought that if this Convention, or the members of this Convention, who represent the whole people of the State of California, in this brief manner expressed their views or their belief that Chinese immigration was an evil that ought to be prohibited, and state that they do it from their own knowledge of the facts, that argument would be unnecessary in such a document; that the argument had better be left to our Representatives in Congress: that we merely reinforce them by this expression of the popular will of the people of California. Representations have been made, as we understand, that the opposition to Chinese immigration in this State is confined to a limited class of our people. By this act we mean to show that it is not confined to a single class of our population, but the dissatisfaction was universal. The memorial that has been submitted here this morning by my friend from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes, of the Special Committee, addressed to the Governors of certain States, does argue the question, I think, very clearly and well. A memorial was sent last Winter, at the last session of the Legislature, I think by the Senate, which goes into an elaborate argument upon the subject. It might be well to send these memorials to the different Governors as well as Senators and Representatives. I merely rose to state that opinion of our committee that it was best to present a brief memorial to the point, as we have done, and it is for the Convention to decide whether they will adopt them.

REMARKS OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I do not understand that the memorial presented by the Special Committee appointed to prepare an address to the Governors undertakes to argue the question at all. I understand it rather to be a statement of facts from which the arguments may be adduced that this treaty ought to be reformed or abrogated entirely. I think that the ground taken by the Committee on Chinese is hardly tenable. We must admit no question that the recommendation of a body of this character, abroad at least, if not at home, is such as to entitle it to respect, and it is hardly enough to address a communication to the President and Senate of the United States as long as an invitation to dinner, or a dunning letter, saying, in effect, that this claim against the government has been put in our hands for collection, and they had better speedily attend to it. I think it would be fairer, in the sense of making the case plainer, if this body were to take the trouble, and the committee were to take the time, to state, as it could be stated in very much better language, and more concisely, I think, upon careful consideration, a full review of the subject; for, indeed, when one undertakes to consider the facts, they go on until it gets to be a very large subject for consideration. A suggestion was made to me that it ought to be a statement of the effect of this system of peonage that exists among us; the fact that it is a system of slavery worse than the one that has been abolished in this country, from the fact that the owner is not a resident; that the result of this labor is transmitted to another country. That, of itself, is a very important question. I think it all ought to be considered. After taking up this question, and giving it considerable attention, I found myself drifting naturally into a very radical view of the subject, but a radical view that, I think, can be sustained upon the principles of law and upon the principles of justice.

The gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, in falling back upon his constitutional objections, remarked that he did not intend to be a demagogue or a fool. I would suggest to all gentlemen of his sentiments that while it is easy enough to avoid being a demagogue, as I understand the word, instead of attempting to strike any blow for popular rights by keeping still, or falling back on constitutional objections, when you come to the question of being a fool, man proposes on that subject, but God disposes. [Laughter.] I do not know whether the gentleman is in his seat. If he is, he must be doing what the gentleman from Marin alluded to the other day—sitting upon his head.

MR. SCHELL. [Sotto voce.] That's good sand lot talk.

MR. BARNES. The gentleman to my right says that is good sand lot talk. I want to be understood, and I do not intend to be changed in my course by enemies in the field, nor by side-bar remarks, and I will say to my friend from Trinity—[examining the card on the member's desk]—Mr. Schell, well, remarks of that kind come from a shell that has nothing in it. In pressing this matter upon the consideration of the Convention I wish to say once for all, for myself, that I have no part nor lot with the sand lots, nor with anybody else; but I am free to say this, that if the sand lot has an idea that is a good idea, I am willing to help it. There is a great deal about the sand lots that is right, and there is a great deal about the sand lots that is wrong—villainously wrong—and I regret for the sake of themselves that some of the gentlemen who represent what we have come to call the sand lots, because they meet out of doors to discuss grievances, real or fancied, have got up here and made speeches, like Mr. Wellin, and talked about the streets of San Francisco running in blood, and about fire and rapine.

MR. WELLIN. I do not think I used any such language. Dr. O'Donnell made some such remark, but he is not the mouthpiece of the sand lots.

MR. BARNES. I understood several of the gentlemen to make allusions of that kind. The principle is right, but that sort of discussion is wrong and out of place. I have insisted from the first, and I insist now, that the arguments to go into these memorials and communications, or the statement of the facts, ought to be as broad as the subject itself, and it ought not to be left to a simple and bald statement of two lines. There is no need to argue the question. We can argue the question there, but to state the facts, I do not understand to be an argument. If I were going to argue it, I would take the declarations of the witnesses, and then take the Constitution itself. I would take this view of the treaty-making power in its legal aspect, and I believe that whenever that question comes to be fairly considered by any Court it will be decided that this Burlingame treaty is an outrage, and a violation of the inherent rights of the people, and upon the very principles upon which this government must depend. I believe that no treaty-making power has the right to strike a blow at republican government, and to undertake to override and destroy the principles laid down in the Constitution of the United States, and that is the reason why, in connection with these fixed principles, it would be advisable to make that representation. It is a great question, and ought not to be passed over in this brief and crude way. I think the committee would do the people of the coast a greater justice if they would undertake to give a clear statement of facts, and not an argument in favor of the restriction of the Chinese coming to the coast. I would recommend that this memorial be recommitted to the Convention, with instructions to submit another report which shall contain a statement of the facts. Now, we will suppose, for instance, that this memorial goes to the President of the United States. I regret, as much as any Republican can regret, the course that the President of the United States has taken in respect to that matter, as well as in respect to a good many others. Suppose this memorial goes there to the President of the United States. It is said that he can refer to those that have gone before for the facts. I suppose that they have disappeared in the waste-paper baskets and down the vaults of the various departments, and the President would find it very difficult to hunt them up. We could send such a statement of facts that, without any trouble to himself, he could make it the basis for a special message to Congress upon the subject. He could say, I have received from the Constitutional Convention of California a statement of facts, as follows, and then give the facts, and they would have it all right there for action. We all know that a want of understanding, either accidental or designed, must be the reason why the people of this State have not been able to have any relief upon this subject. We have got to press it, and press it as fully and as strongly as it can be pressed, in order to be heard at all.

Now, I wish to say one word in respect to myself, as I have been somewhat censured for going so far in this business. I took the same ground before I came here at all, and before there was any question here upon this floor, and at a time probably when there were few men in this State more unpopular or more thoroughly disliked—as the fellow says in the play—I got myself disliked pretty thoroughly by some people. I did not care anything about it then, and I do not care anything about it now. But if anything is right, I propose to advocate it as strongly as I know how, and not dodge the legitimate result. I hope that this memorial will go back to the committee, and that we will have one reported that the President can make a basis for a special message to Congress.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I must admit that the witticism got off at my expense was good; and I know it is only one of the many good things which the gentleman from San Francisco has been getting off in this body. I do not complain of that, sir, so far as I am concerned, nor did I complain or intend to complain, in my little side remark to him, of the position he has taken upon this Chinese question, by any means. I believe, so far as that is concerned, I will go as far as I legitimately can—as far as I believe the Constitution, the paramount law of the land, will allow—in the restriction of Chinese immigration; and I sympathize with him in feeling that Chinese immigration is an evil. What I intended to say, and what was intended for him alone, and which he has seen fit to bring before this body, was in reference to the remarks made by him, which I deemed unparliamentary to be made in this body, in reference to a gentleman who is not present. Because he did not see fit to go as far, or believed a little more or less than his Chinese gospel, he supposes that he sits upon his head in his seat. That was the only thing I referred to, and of course I got a butt over the head. I want to say that whether there is anything in the shell or not, I believe it received as honorable indorsement as did the gentleman from the people of this State. I had the honor of receiving several thousand more votes in indorsement for this position than did the gentleman himself. And I will be permitted to remark that I sometimes think that the gentleman himself, instead of the gentleman from Alameda, has been sitting upon his head. I have watched his course here for the reason that he was elected upon a ticket called the Non-partisan ticket, and it was intended that those elected on it would act without reference to party, and for the purpose of making the best Constitution that could be made. I say I have watched his course and thought perhaps he had been sitting upon his head, and have often been forcibly reminded of an old doggerel poem which I read some years ago, and which reads like this—I do not intend to make any personal application, but will repeat it to this honorable body:

"A man so various, that he seem'd to be
Not one, but all mankind's epitome;
Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong,
Was everything by starts, and nothing long,
But in the course of one revolving moon,
Was soldier, fiddler, statesman, and buffoon."

[Laughter.]

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: As a member of the committee reporting the memorial, I express the hope that the Convention will not recommit it, but that if it does do so that it will add the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes, to the committee, in place of Dr. O'Donnell. [Laughter.] Some of us in the committee thought that we should try some rhetoric and fine writing, but there were others of us that were in favor of quitting when we got through. The point was to get testimony from the Convention—direct and positive testimony upon the subject. The committee believed that if they attempted to branch out into rhetoric that they would strike somebody's sensitiveness and not be able to obtain the signatures of all. We believe that all of the members will sign this. There have been many memorials sent and they are never read. If a long document appears there it will not be read. We sent a memorial from the City of San Francisco when we saw that a Chinese Embassy was going there. They were not yet officially known at Washington, but it was known that such an embassy was on the way, and we saw in that a design to encourage the immigration of the subjects of China. I drew up the memorial, and I flattered myself that I had got in some good rhetoric and facts, and the statement was only a little over half a column of a newspaper, and yet a gentleman who called upon the President in reference to that thing was informed that he had forgotten entirely that such a thing had been presented—he did remember something of the kind, but it was thrown in some waste paper basket—it looked too long to read. Therefore, I favor a brief statement, signed by every member of the Convention. I think that is the best plan.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I do not know what is before the Convention except the memorials generally. It does seem to me if we take any more action on these memorials that we are putting ourselves in the ridiculous position of blowing hot and cold in the same breath. Here in one breath we memorialize the President and Cabinet to repeal the Burlingame treaty, or to modify it, so as not to allow Chinese immigration. The same breath we petition the Governors of our contiguous Pacific States and Territories asking them to do the same thing. We send memorials or petitions to Congress asking them to relieve us—taking it for granted that it is a matter within the jurisdiction of the United States Government exclusively; and then in the same breath we vote to the effect that the Congress and Government of the United States has nothing to do with it. Last night we refused to strike out section five of the report of the Committee on Chinese, which reads as follows:

"SEC. 5. No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

It was argued by eminent men, whose opinion I have respect for, that this is a matter not within the jurisdiction of the United States, that it is a matter which this State alone can deal with, and upon such arguments this Convention refused to strike out the section. I disagreed with it, but that is the action of this Convention. Now, if we have the jurisdiction over this matter, why ask Congress to act? Why ask that the Burlingame treaty be rescinded when that treaty is void and of no effect. Let this section five stand as this Convention has decided it must stand, then this State will keep out the Chinamen. That is the answer that will come from the Cabinet and from the United States Government. That is the answer we will get. That is the answer you would get if I was President. That is the answer we will get from Congress. They will say, you have taken the matter in your own hands. Now, I do not say I am opposed to these memorials. I say that this is the proper course to take. I can vote for these memorials consistently, but I cannot just as consistently vote for these, as I consider, unconstitutional measures, in this report of this Chinese Committee. Therefore, I will ask gentlemen to pause and consider, not because I care particularly for the consistency of this Convention, because I would rather be right than consistent, but I will ask gentlemen to pause and consider the inconsistent position they are taking. Here is a matter we are taking into our own hands, and then putting ourselves in the ridiculous light of asking Congress to act in it. Would it not have a bad effect? I say either do one thing or the other. I would not object to taking a dozen different courses to reach the same thing if they were not inconsistent and directly opposed to each other; but I say that the very fact this Convention has refused to strike out section five, if the decision of this Convention is worth anything at all, will put a construction on this Constitution so far as this Convention can pass upon it. When we memorialize Congress they will turn to us and say, according to your own decision, if your decision is worth anything, we cannot act in the matter, and what action we take would be useless. Therefore, I do say that we ought to take one or the other, and that alone.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the memorials.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I wish to say that I hope it will not be referred, but that it will be adopted. I think it is long enough, too, as brevity is the soul of wit; and as for the two horns of the dilemma, as my friend from San Bernardino has hung himself on both, I leave him there.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I desire to second the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes. I heartily concur with the views and sentiments expressed by him. I desire to sign my name to a memorial to go to Congress that will express fully and emphatically the wishes and wants and demands of the people of this State. Therefore, I second the motion of Mr. Barnes to recommit.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair did not understand that the gentleman made any such motion at all.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: As a member of the Committee on Chinese I concur with the recommendation of the Chairman of that committee. I hold in my hand a report of a committee of the Senate of the last session, procured by able men who devoted a long time to it. They have a special memorial to Congress of seven pages in here, and it might be submitted again. They have here a report of three hundred and two pages, the most conclusive document we could offer to the Congress, or the people of the United States, on this subject. If any change should be made I would move to substitute this, and I believe this would satisfy any gentleman on this floor. But I believe our report is sufficient. Our own delegations in Congress, in both houses, are familiar with this subject. We thought that the main object would be to have each member of this Convention subscribe to the report. Such a report was made, as we did not believe any man could hesitate to sign. The main object was to have a unanimous vote of this Convention.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I move that it be recommitted to the committee, with a request that they insert a brief statement of facts. I do not understand that we want a statement of all the facts and evidence of the subject at all, but that there shall be a statement of something more than that we believe the presence of the Chinese is injurious to the health, the prosperity, and the peace of the State. I think that is hardly enough. If brevity is the soul of wit, why, that is the wittiest thing on a big subject that was probably ever written. It is too brief, I think. I do not know whether the Convention will agree with me, of course. I intended to make a motion to make it a little more ample. I do not know that there is any occasion for writing. We do not want figures of speech, but a very plain statement of facts, setting forth some of the salient points. We all know that the ground taken by those in favor of the Chinese in the East is, that the opposition to them is confined entirely to the uneducated portion of the people of this State; therefore, when a representative body like this speaks, what it says will be read and will be considered, and I think it ought to be something longer than that which has been presented.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: The object of the committee was to draw such a document that every member would sign it. I think the committee acted judiciously. I am very certain that it will commend itself to very nearly every man in the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hope this motion to recommit will not prevail, and that if it is recommitted, it will be to some other committee than the Committee on Chinese. This memorial, as I understand it, meets with the ideas of that committee unanimously, and, Mr. President, I do not think that the objections raised by the gentleman from San Francisco are well taken. That memorial expresses that Chinese immigration is an evil, dangerous to the peace, happiness, and prosperity of the people of this State. I do not remember the language, but it expresses it, in my opinion, sufficiently. Could we have expressed more, even if we adopted the language of the gentleman from San Francisco? We express, as we believe, the sentiment of the people of this State, and express it fairly and fully, and I do hope, if it is to be recommitted, it will be recommitted to some other committee, or that it will be recommitted to the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes.

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: As a member of the committee I would say that I supported this memorial because it is short. There have been many memorials sent from this State that have not been considered, and it is a well known fact that matters that come before the President and Cabinet are not considered if they are couched in lengthy terms. This, I admit, and we all feel, is a great national question. It is a question that concerns the people of the United States, but it has not made its mark yet, as it should have done, upon the councils of the nation. I am glad to see that some statesmen are cognizant of this matter, and that great men are paying their attention to it and are drawing conclusions, among them Senator Bayard, of Delaware. He speaks of it as a statesman grappling with a great issue. The evils are set forth there briefly, and I think sufficiently, and I believe it will meet the attention of the President and Cabinet. The long documents that have been sent from here have not had the attention that they should have had, but I believe this sets forth the evils, and the arguments will be presented by our delegation in Congress. I support the memorial because it is short.

REMARKS OF MR. CASSERLY.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I confess that when I saw the memorial, reported by the Committee on Chinese, I experienced a feeling of disappointment. Of course no sensible person would be in favor of a memorial so long that the average man would not have time to read it and carry it in his head, but there is certainly a distinction to be drawn between a memorial so very short as this is and one of the length I have just described. We must remember that it will be scrutinized by men who are familiar with documents, and with the expressions of men who feel that they are suffering great wrong. When this is printed it will make about two lines and a half of ordinary print. Shall I be told that a people feeling that they are struggling with an enormous wrong can satisfy themselves by a complaint of two lines and a half in print? Why, sir, it is not reasonable on the face of it. I am in favor of recommitting this memorial. I believe that a memorial properly drawn, with sufficient fullness to cover all the cardinal facts, would be a great help to us, and for one I should not consider the time spent in recommitting the memorial lost. I think it is a very critical movement. If I did not think so I would not rise at this time to interfere in the slightest degree in its disposition; but feeling as I do, I think the best disposition that can be made of it is to recommit it to the committee. Then I shall ask leave to amend the memorial as it now is by inserting the word "morals" after the word "place." I want that inserted, if the Convention will allow it, because, in common with a very great number of the people of this State, I consider the moral aspect of this Chinese question as a predominant one.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I hope it will be recommitted. If the only point is to have it brief, why, just put in "The Chinese must go!"

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: I hope the motion will prevail. As I understand it the memorial merely gives the deductions from facts, and does not set forth the facts. No one wants one of the length referred to by the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, but we want one that will set forth the facts clearly and distinctly.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I do not think, sir, that it is of so much consequence what the language may be in this memorial, provided it goes far enough to indicate what public sentiment is in this State. When I was at Washington I had the privilege of presenting a memorial upon this subject in the Senate. It was looked upon as the expression of opinion of a political body, to a certain extent, and in course of time—in about two weeks—as soon as the report of the remarks I made on the memorial came to California, a pamphlet from some of those in favor of Chinese immigration was placed upon the desk of every Senator. I have one somewhere. The pamphlet favored Chinese immigration on humanitarian grounds, for the purpose of converting this great people to Christianity. It stated that the matter was engaging the attention of the religious men here, and looked forward to the conversion of that people; that they might be sent back to China as Christians to Christianize that country. After this pamphlet came Senators came to me and said: "Why, they tell me these people are all to be converted to Christianity." That is the influence brought to bear. It does not matter about words. What we wish to effect is to convince the authorities at Washington that the people of the State of California are opposed to Chinese immigration, not as individuals, but that the public sentiment throughout the State is opposed to it; and when we produce that effect there we perhaps will be able to get something done for our relief here. Now, I would prefer—I care not how short it may be—but I would prefer that it should be presented to this body and voted upon with the ayes and noes recorded at length, and certified, with the request that it be forwarded by the Governor, under the seal of State. Give it some official consequence, in accordance with the sentiment of this body. I would suggest this in preference to every member signing his name. Let every member's name be recorded "yea," or "nay." Let it appear that the "ayes" and "noes" were called, and the "ayes" recorded, and the "noes" recorded, and then certified by our officers here, and forwarded by the Governor of the State, under the official seal, with the "ayes" and "noes." There our names would be in print. I think that if it should pass this body unanimously, as I hope it will, and it should state that the ayes and noes were called, and that it passed unanimously—"ayes, one hundred and forty, or one hundred and fifty; no noes"—it would have more effect than if we undertook to put our sign-manual there, which perhaps they could not read. My friend in front writes very well, but it is hard to read his handwriting. I write very well, but some people complain that they cannot read it. They would see, then, that it is the act of the Convention, and I would prefer that course in order that it may speak as the act of the Convention, instead of the act of us as individuals. Let it be forwarded either by the Governor or the Secretary of State.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope that the motion to recommit the memorial to the committee will prevail, for several reasons. I desire, Mr. President, that this memorial be presented in the shape of something more than a mere formal State paper, that contains nothing but a few glittering generalities. I desire that this memorial shall contain a few concise reasons why we are opposed to the further incoming of the subjects of the Emperor of China. I desire this, Mr. President, because I am convinced that there never has been any honest work done in Washington on this subject. We have sent committees there, and we have Congressmen there who have pretended to scratch around the edges of the question, but they have only done so much as seemed to be necessary to affect public opinion at home, and not to accomplish the objects which they pretend to be working for in Washington—the abrogation or the modification of the treaty. And, sir, the resolutions and memorials that have been sent from this State and from the Legislature contain within themselves their own repudiation. Why? Because they were couched in terms that meant nothing, or because they gave reasons that nobody of any sense would ever believe that we meant. They were made up of glittering generalities, and were a good deal like scolding the Chinaman for his vices, and condemning him because he was an inferior man, or something of that sort of stuff. Why, we must take the broad ground and oppose the Chinaman because we know he is essentially a slave, and because there is an eternal and unending conflict between free and slave labor. We know that he is a slave in many instances, and to a great extent, and when he is not so his ancestry, his condition, his relations, his capacity for labor, his capacity to live on next to nothing, makes him, in comparison with our white laborer, essentially a slave. Now, let us set forth these honest reasons in this memorial. Do not let us pretend that he is a man of so many vices that we cannot endure him. That is not true. It is on account of his virtues that we fear him. Let us say so. That is why I want some of these fair, square reasons, showing that there is heart in it; that we believe in it; statements that do not carry on their own faces their own repudiation. Such has been the character of the memorials that have been sent to Congress heretofore. Do not let us trifle away the time reading any more such. State what we mean. Admit that the Chinaman can outwork us; admit that he can live on less; but don't scold at him because he is an inferior man, or because of his vices. It is all folly to talk about such stuff. It is because he is essentially a slave, and because his civilization and his ancestry make him so. I understand, Mr. President, that while he was on the floor, the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Ringgold, stated that if I had uttered such sentiments before the nineteenth of June last, I would have been elected to stay at home. So be it, if such be the case. I desire to state the truth, if there is not another man from the sand lot who dare. I want to see this opposition to the Chinamen put on the true ground; on the ground that free labor cannot compete with him. We all remember the four years of carnage that this country has endured, with all its subsequent train of evils, for what? To settle the conflict between free and slave labor. We thought, Mr. President, when that conflict was settled that all our evils would disappear. It is not true. Each question is confronted with evils that tax its energies and are as difficult to solve as the last. We find ourselves face to face now with an evil no less in magnitude than African slavery, which has cost us so much. Now, let us not scratch around the edges of it; state the true reasons; something that cannot be misunderstood, and show to everybody that we mean what we say; that we do not undertake to obtain action from Congress, nor from the Administration, nor from the government, on any false reasons, but for the true one, and let this be sufficiently stated. Do not be afraid to cover a half page of foolscap with print in order to state it.

Now, Mr. President, in a wandering way I have stated a few of the reasons why I would like to see that report recommitted, in order that it may be made to state the case a little more clearly and more fully. I want to disclaim any intention to reflecting any disrespect on the committee at all. I think they thought they were acting wisely; but it seems to me that we ought to go a step farther, and that we can do so with profit.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I demand the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Freud, Herrington, Wyatt, McComas, and Wickes.

The main question was ordered, on a division, by a vote of 70 ayes to 16 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to recommit the memorials to the Committee on Chinese, with the request that they insert a brief statement of facts.

The motion prevailed.

ARTICLE ON CHINESE.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. Section five is under consideration.

MR. BLACKMER. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section five the following: 'Except such settlement be by virtue of rights derived from treaties made by the Government of the United States with foreign nations.'"

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: Then the section would read as follows:

"SEC. 5. No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution, except such settlement be by virtue of rights derived from treaties made by the Government of the United States with foreign nations."

I think that is the ground that we ought to take; that we should say distinctly that it is only to be prohibited when these rights are not stated in the treaty made by the Government of the United States with a foreign nation. I do not believe, and I am not yet convinced by any argument, or any cases that have been cited here, that this fifth section is a constitutional provision, and I cannot support it in its present shape, but with this amendment I can support it. Then, of course, if their settlement be by virtue of rights derived from treaties made by the Government of the United States, the State can have nothing to say about it. I cannot go beyond that.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I do not desire to say anything further than to call attention to this amendment. The amendment says, "Add to section five the following: Except such settlement be by virtue of rights derived from treaties made by the Government of the United States with foreign nations."

If we add that amendment to section five, then section five means nothing at all. You might as well strike it out, because it is in express words recognizing the authority of the United States to bind us in our internal concerns by a treaty when they cannot bind us by a law of Congress. Where a law of Congress would be unconstitutional, a treaty would be unconstitutional, because it is nothing more than a mere Act of Congress. If we desire to declare that that shall be the supreme law of the State, then we in effect declare that the Burlingame treaty is a part of our Constitution. It is the most ridiculous and absurd proposition that has been brought here, and especially by a gentleman who desires to see the Chinese go. I respect the gentleman from San Francisco for the opinions he has brought before the committee, but it seems to me that the method that he desires to have us adopt here is a very strange one. We have been contesting against the rights of the government to bind us by a treaty where they could not bind us by an Act of Congress. I hope the amendment will be promptly voted down, because if we put that in the Constitution we had better adjourn sine die, and go home.

MR. BLACKMER. Do you recognize that the Burlingame treaty has any authority over the citizens of this State at all?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes.

MR. BLACKMER. It recognizes the right of people to settle here.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It recognizes the right to dwell here.

MR. BLACKMER. There may be a distinction between settling and dwelling.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I have never contended that we could prevent the Chinese from coming here, but I believe we can regulate them after they get here. I believe that among the reserved powers of the State is the right of internal regulation.

MR. ROLFE. If we cannot prevent them from coming here, can we prevent them from settling here?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes; we can. We can prevent them from engaging in business, from being employed by corporations, from earning a living, and prevent their settling by starving them out. That, sir, was admitted by the gentleman who was the Chairman of the Committee on Chinese. He says we can starve them; and that is what we desire to do, if we cannot get rid of them in any other way.

MR. MILLER. I did not say I was in favor of starving them.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I would like to answer fifteen or twenty questions. This Convention, it seems, does not understand my ground of opposition to the Chinaman.

MR. BEERSTECHER. No; we don't.

MR. REYNOLDS. I am sorry for the gentleman. I have stated it times enough, and it is on the ground that he is essentially a slave. Beyond that, Mr. Chairman, I pity the gentlemen who have not yet found out that if we ever succeed in ridding ourselves of the curse, so called, of cheap Chinese labor, it must be upon the ground that it is slave labor, and to that it must come. You cannot exclude him because he is a Chinaman; nor because he smokes opium; nor because he eats rice; but you can exclude him because he is essentially a slave. I hope this amendment will be promptly voted down, because we have a right to protect ourselves against slave labor, and upon that we have authorities. In Groves vs. Slaughter, 15 Peters, the Supreme Court said:

"Each State has a right to protect itself against the avarice and intrusion of the slave dealer; to guard its citizens against the inconvenience and dangers of a slave population."

The Chinese population is a slave population. I hold it is all the more dangerous because it is voluntary. And further the Court says:

"The right to exercise this power by a State is higher and deeper than the Constitution. The evil involves the prosperity, and may endanger the existence of the State. Its power to guard against or remedy the evil rests upon the law of self-preservation; a law vital to every community, and especially to a sovereign State."

It is higher and deeper than the Constitution, and so it is higher and deeper than any treaty. Upon that ground I am willing to stand in opposition to the treaty; because it is a higher right than any treaty or any Constitution to protect ourselves against the avarice or intrusion not only of slave dealers but of slave labor.

MR GRACE. I want to know if you mean to say that the Chinese are slaves?

MR. REYNOLDS. It has been ascertained that he is essentially a slave, and in some cases it is proved that he is a slave. I cannot furnish the gentleman with brains to understand, but I can state a thousand times that he is essentially a slave.

REMARKS OF MR. HALL.

MR. HALL. Mr. Chairman: I think that we have reached the point which constitutes the limit to which we are authorized to go under the existing laws of the land. We have declared in the first section of this report the power of the State to pass all needful laws and regulations for the protection of the people of this State against the presence of a dangerous class of people. That power is fully expressed in the first section. We have gone further and imposed a prohibition upon which are the creatures of authority of the State against the employment of this obnoxious class. We have gone further, in section three, and declared that the State shall not employ this objectionable class, nor permit any of its political subdivisions to do so. Now, it seems to me that we have reached the point to which we are permitted to go. Howsoever much I may desire to go further, the oath which I took when I was qualified to take a seat here prescribes the bounds beyond which I do not feel at liberty to go. As I view the matter, Mr. Chairman, there can scarcely be a reasonable doubt as to the validity and the operative force of what is known as the Burlingame treaty. If the question were dependent upon that alone it would be decisive of our right of action here. But even independent of that, as it occurs to me, the Government of the United States had the power to exclude or receive the people of foreign nations at its will and at its pleasure. It is an incident to the sovereignty of the National Government, and I maintain, respectfully, that even if there were no treaty here at all, a foreigner, not eligible, if you please, to become a citizen of the United States, would be entitled to the protection of this government in the absence of any treaty on the subject; and that seems to be the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in some of their decisions. It is a protection which the government shall give to a foreigner independent of any treaty with the Government of the United States. Now, sir, I believe that the Government of the United States has the absolute control over this subject. There is but a single limitation, and that limitation is in the first article of the Constitution of the United States, wherein it is said:

"The immigration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year eighteen hundred and eight."

I know very well that that provision was directed exclusively to the slave traffic at that time which the States were receiving within their limits; but it announced a power and principle. It forms the power of the Federal Government to exclude such people as the State may choose to admit, and by necessary implication it forms the power of the government to authorize to be received such people as the State Government may choose to exclude. In other words, it forms the absolute sovereign power of the Federal Government over the whole subject.

Now, as to the decisions referred to and the arguments before this committee, it seems to me that they leave no doubt upon this subject; with all due deference to the able and the plausible arguments which have come from the members of the profession upon the other side. It seems to me that the Courts have defined very clearly the powers of the General Government and the powers of the State Government on this subject, declaring in the broadest terms the entire power of the Federal Government over this subject, save and except the remnant which is left to it called the power of police regulation, and defining that so that the power of the State shall extend to the right to exclude paupers, vagrants, and criminals from its borders—people of that class who are dangerous to its prosperity and its peace; expressing the general power of the Federal Government over the subject, and defining with clearness and precision the narrow limit of the powers of the State over this subject.

Entertaining these views, I believe that this provision, unless it be amended as is suggested by the gentleman from San Diego, will be a violation of the Constitution of the United States, and an infraction of a treaty made in pursuance thereof. As we have taken an oath here to support the Constitution of the United States, it necessarily carries with it an obligation to support this treaty. It must stand, and it must be operative until it is set aside. It must govern any action here until it is set aside by some action of the government. That is my rule of action, and howsoever strongly I might desire to go farther against what I believe in common with the delegates on this floor generally, to be a great evil, threatening the peace and prosperity of the people of this State, I do not feel at liberty, sir, to pass beyond the boundary which has been fixed for the exercise of my official functions, by the oath which I took at that stand. Hence, sir, this amendment will receive my approval, but the provisions of the section without it cannot receive my assent.

If I am permitted to go farther for a few moments I will direct attention to section six. We find there a provision to the following effect: "Foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to sue or be sued in any of the Courts of this State." Now, there is a provision which it seems to me will operate to confiscate the property of this objectionable class. We have had this people among us since eighteen hundred and fifty. They have been coming here in large numbers for the last twenty-eight years. It is admitted that they have acquired a very considerable amount of property, estimated from four hundred and fifty thousand dollars up to a million and a half of dollars. It has been acquired by these people who have come here by the invitation of the Federal Government, under and by virtue of the sanction and authority of the Burlingame treaty.

They have come here and acquired property under a declaration in our Courts, declaring all men are free and independent, and having and possessing the right to acquire, possess, and protect property. They have come here under laws declaring that foreigners becoming bona fide residents shall have the rights of possessing, enjoying, and inheriting property as native born citizens. Now, under these provisions these people have been among us and acquired property to the amount above named, possibly the higher amount being nearer the truth than the lesser amount. Now, sir, we propose what? To say in section six that they shall not be permitted to sue or be sued. That is about equivalent to uncovering this property from the protection which it is entitled to by our own laws, independent of Federal recognition of the subject. They have acquired this property in a legitimate way, and yet we propose to say in this section six that they shall not be permitted to sue or be sued; that they shall not be admitted to the exercise of those remedies which are enjoyed by every other member of the community. Pass this provision and does it not expose this property to rapine and plunder? Is it not an invitation to strip them of the property which they have acquired by the authority of the laws of the land, Federal as well as State? What would property be worth, if the owner or the claimant of it is not allowed to resort to the Courts, and to the remedies prescribed by law for security and protection. To a provision of that kind I cannot give my assent. I think, sir, that the objections which I have stated here, hastily and in a general form, will apply to each and every one, in a greater or less extent, of the provisions which follow section six. For these reasons I will support the proposed amendment of the gentleman from San Deigo, Mr. Blackmer, and when the time comes for recording our votes, I must record myself against every subsequent provision in this report.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I do not intend to occupy the time of this Convention, because I think there has been enough discussion upon this question to proceed to vote upon it. I shall vote in favor of section five, but having on yesterday voted against section four—in favor of striking out section four—I propose to give my reason. There is a difference between the two sections, to my mind. The Burlingame treaty, to my mind, was a commercial treaty. It allowed their landing in the country, and it was believed that that was the sole purpose of that treaty. And if they had had any intention of making them citizens and giving them residence—permanent residence in this State; if that had been intended, that they should have a permanent residence and possess the rights of the most favored residents—they would have declared that they should have the right of citizenship; because the policy of our government is, if they desire them to be permanent residents, to give them the right of citizenship. That has been the policy of this government from its foundation. This proposition in section five is upon the question of settlement. We are here in Sacramento as residents. We have not settled. We are temporary residents. We are not settlers. A man settles by removing his home and his tools here, and settling down here. The Chinese, under that treaty, have the right of residence for commercial purposes, but they have no right to enter in and take possession of our land. That is a right that belongs to American citizens, and it is a right reserved to the State, and which we propose to declare here. Even the Republican party has gone back on "the universal fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man," and come to the conclusion that this is a white man's government, made for the white man. This State should be a State for white men, without any respect to the treaty, or misinterpretation of any treaty. The State has the right of self-preservation. It is the same right that a man of family has to protect his house and home. The State has the right to say that our people have a right to the land and the water, and to control the destiny of the State. Allow one million of these people to come in here, and the country would be taken possession of by them. That is a right that belongs to us, and that has never been transferred. It is a right that New York declared—that a certain element from Europe should not settle there. This amendment of the gentleman from San Diego seeks to nullify that. That right, I claim, has never been denied by the Supreme Court of the United States—that no treaty with any country in the world has forbidden a State to exercise the right to say as to who shall settle and become permanent citizens of the State. I hope that the amendment will be voted down, and that the section will stand as it is, for the protection of ourselves and our children. When one race is mixed with another, it does not elevate the lower grade to the level of the higher, but it lowers the higher grade to the level of the lower.

MR. FILCHER. But how is the word "settler" to be defined?

MR. LARKIN. The common use of the word, as used in law and in language, "settler" means a permanent resident. It is so recognized in the use of the word whether in law or in a conversation. I hold that this is a vital question, and still further, I would have an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing that no person, unless he be a white man, be permitted to settle in the United States, after the adoption of that amendment. We want no other race here. The future of this republic demands that it shall be a white man's government, and that all other races shall be excluded. The whole future of this country rests upon propositions like this fifth section, and they must be embodied in the whole foreign policy of the Government of the United States under our system.

SPEECH OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I do not desire to travel over the ground again that has been traveled over several times in this Convention, but in answer to the gentleman from San Joaquin, whose conscience is arrested at the threshold of the treaty power, I would like to say that the friends of this section, and the friends of this principle of the Constitution, plant themselves on the ground of the reserved rights of the States guaranteed to them by the Constitution, and which no treaty can override without becoming unconstitutional and void. In the beginning of this debate I think that our side fairly, clearly, and plainly pointed out the position which we occupy with reference to this branch of the subject, and I may say that in the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Holmes vs. Jennison et al., I think this principle is clearly illustrated. In that decision the Court says:

"The power to make treaties is given by the Constitution in general terms, without any description of the objects intended to be embraced by it, and consequently, it was designed to include all those subjects which in the ordinary intercourse of nations had usually been made subjects of negotiation and treaty, and which are consistent with the nature of our institutions, and the distribution of powers between the General and State Governments." (14 Peters, 569.)

And I will here say, parenthetically, that my friend from San Diego was altogether wrong when he charged that I tried to impose upon this Convention a reading of law which was not in good faith.

MR. BLACKMER. I beg the gentleman's pardon, I did not take that position.

MR. AYERS. He stated, if I recollect right, that I had not read the entire substance of the matter alluded to in the authority, and that I left it unfinished, and therefore I took advantage of the Convention, or seemingly took advantage of the Convention, by not giving in good faith the whole substance. That is, that in arguing upon the powers of the State I had quoted from page forty-eight, of 5th Wheaton's reports, a paragraph which related entirely to the commercial powers of the States. I made that quotation simply for my argument in reply to the Chairman of the Chinese Committee and suggestions in this Convention. He had said that the section was repugnant to that portion of the Constitution which gave the regulation of commerce to Congress, and that is simply what I quoted from Wheaton, to show where it was not prohibited in express terms to the States, where it was not exclusive in its nature, and where it was not granted to the Federal Government in express terms.

Now, Mr. Chairman, with reference to this treaty argument, I say that where a treaty transcends the reserved powers of the States it is unconstitutional and void; that it is inconsistent "with the nature of our institutions and the distribution of powers between the General and State Governments." We claim that the President of the United States and the Senate have no power to make a treaty with China, the effect of which would be to infringe upon and overturn the reserved rights of this State, as they claim they have done in this treaty with China, to the material injury of the people. I will also refer to the opinion of Justice Baldwin in the same case, published in the Appendix to fourteenth Peters. He says:

"It is but a poor and meager remnant of the once sovereign power of the States; a miserable shield and patch of independence which the Constitution has not taken from them, if, in the regulation of its internal police, State sovereignty has become so shorn of authority as to be incompetent only to exclude paupers, who may be a burden on the pockets of its citizens; unsound infectious articles, or diseases which may affect their bodily health, and utterly powerless to exclude those moral ulcers on the body politic which corrupt its vitals and demoralize its members. If there is any one subject from which this Court should abstain from any course of reasoning, tending to expand the granted powers of the Constitution so as to bring internal police within the law or treaty-making power of the United States, by including it within the prohibition on the States, it is the one now before us. Nay, if such construction is not unavoidable, it ought not to be given, lest we introduce into the Constitution a more vital and pestilential disease than any principle in which the relator could be rescued from the police power of Vermont, would fasten in its institutions, dangerous as it might be, or injurious its effects. Should an adjudication, so fearful in its consequences, be made in a case of kindred nature with this, the people and States of this Union will 'plant themselves' on the 'impregnable positions' taken in the opinions of this Court, in the cases quoted; and, standing on grounds thus consecrated, refuse to surrender those rights which we had declared to be complete, unqualified, and exclusive."

I say, Mr. Chairman, that the treaty with China only cuts this figure in this argument, that wherever Congress had the right to enact a treaty with China, giving them the rights of immigration to this country or to this State, that it did not extend to the right of giving them the power of immigration as to effect a result which would be disastrous to the people of this State. And I will further say, that there is an element in this Chinese population; there is an element in this question which I believe, when taken to the Supreme Court, will cut a very large figure in their decision, and that is that they do not come here voluntarily as immigrants, but that they come here under contract; that they are in effect slaves; and that they are not the character of people that it was ever contemplated that the hospitality of our territory should be extended to.

REMARKS OF MR. RINGGOLD.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. Chairman: I will be proud when the time comes when men will stop taking middle ground. If the State has no right to regulate its internal commerce, it is no longer a State but a dependency. I wish to refer to the statement of the Chairman of the Committee on Chinese. If I understood the Chairman right, he said that the reason the ballot was given to the freedmen of the South was because of fear of its turbulent spirit and as an act of justice. From my own standpoint of American politics it was nothing of the kind. If it had been anticipated that the freedmen of the South would have voted the Democratic ticket and put them in power, we would never have heard of any such sublime virtue. It was given for the purpose of offsetting the Democratic party of the South, and perpetuating the reign of the Republican party in the councils of the nation. It seems to me that the diversity of interest in the American Union is so wide that if we do not stand by the principle of popular sovereignty, it will result in the destruction of the nation, and I hope that the gentleman will withdraw such a miserable attempt at a compromise as he has offered this morning.

MR. TULLY. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

The call for the previous question was seconded by Messrs. Tinnin, McComas, and Smith of Santa Clara.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The main question has been ordered. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Diego, Mr. Blackmer.

The amendment was lost.

MR. MCCALLUM. I offer a substitute for section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No aliens who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution."

MR. FILCHER. I raise the point of order that the amendment is out of order, because it is covered by the provisions of a previous section.

THE CHAIRMAN. That does not make it out of order.

MR. WHITE. I move the previous question.

MR. MCCALLUM. I withdraw the amendment.

MR. MCCONNELL. I move to amend section five by striking out the last four words, "adoption of this Constitution," and inserting the words "year eighteen hundred and eighty-five," so that it will read "no person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the year eighteen hundred and eighty-five."

The amendment was lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no further amendments to section five the Secretary will read section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 6. Foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to sue or be sued in any of the Courts of this State, and any lawyer appearing for or against them, or any of them, in a civil proceeding, shall forfeit his license to practice law. No such foreigner shall be granted license to carry on any business, trade, or occupation in this State, nor shall such license be granted to any person or corporation employing them. No such foreigner shall have the right to catch fish in any of the waters under the jurisdiction of the State; nor to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State; and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real estate to any such foreigner shall be void.

MR. LARKIN. I move to strike out all down to line seven, so as to read "no such foreigner shall have the right to catch fish in any of the waters under the jurisdiction of the State; nor to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State; and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real estate to any such foreigner shall be void."

MR. REYNOLDS. I have a substitute for section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to catch fish in any waters under the jurisdiction of the State, nor to purchase or hold any real property in this State, and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real property to any such aliens shall be void."

MR. LARKIN. I accept that as an amendment, and withdraw my amendment.

MR. HERRINGTON. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six as follows: Strike out the first part of the section down to and including the word 'license,' in line five, and insert in lieu thereof the words 'no license shall ever be granted to any Mongolian or Chinese.' Also, strike out the word 'foreigner' in the remaining part of the section wherever the same occurs, and insert instead 'Mongolian or Chinese.' Also, after the word 'State,' in line eight, insert the words 'nor kill or take game at any place therein,' so that the section shall read: 'No license shall ever be issued to any Mongolian or Chinese to carry on any business, trade, or occupation in this State, nor shall such license be granted to any person or corporation employing them. No such Mongolian or Chinese shall have the right to catch fish in any of the waters under the jurisdiction of the State, nor to kill or take game at any place therein; nor to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State; and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real estate to any such Mongolian or Chinese shall be void.'"

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I think that embraces all that was intended to be embraced by the committee when they made that report. Thus it corresponds with the provisions of the section which have been adopted by striking out the word "foreigner," giving it conformity and consistency with the sections already adopted. I hope the amendment to the amendment will be adopted as read.

The amendment was lost, on a division, by a vote of 41 ayes to 51 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

MR. WEBSTER. I move to amend section six so as to read as follows:

"Foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall not have the right to purchase, own, or lease real property in this State, and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real estate to any such foreigner shall be void."

I have had nothing to say on this question so far. I do not desire to say but a few words now. I have been satisfied to sit here and listen to the arguments which have been presented. It is the legal bearing of the subject which we want; and I believe that it has been fully shown that this amendment is legitimate and can be sustained. I am in favor of going to the extent of the law, and no further. I believe, sir, that this amendment is sustained for several reasons. It is claimed that by a provision in the treaty the inhabitants of China shall have the right of travel and residence in the State of California. The idea of residence is transient, as I think, and I am borne out in this statement by the definition given by Bouvier's Law Dictionary, second volume, page four hundred and sixty-eight. There is a difference between a man's residence and his domicile. He may have his residence in Philadelphia, and he may have his residence in New York; for although a man can have but one domicile he may have several residences. A residence is generally transient in its nature; it becomes a domicile when it is taken up as permanent. Now, sir, I hold that under that treaty, and the exceptions that are made to it, we can prohibit them from holding or leasing real estate in this State. So far we can go, if no further. There are exceptions, although it is claimed in the body of the instrument that they are entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of the most favored nations. There are exceptions, because it turns round and says that they shall not be entitled to the same rights and immunities, for it expressly prohibits their naturalization.

Now, sir, I have said nothing on this subject, but I fully concur as to the evil to the fullest extent which has been claimed here. I have seen it in San Francisco to the fullest extent. And there is one thing there, sir, that fully convinced me that the Chinamen are able to live and prosper upon the fare of horses and run the country besides, for this reason: they learned to pool their issues when Kearney was a boy. You can go into the markets there in San Francisco and in every basket of turnips they pool their issues and buy in quantity. They tax a Chinaman for the same material less than one half what the citizens of San Francisco pay for the same material. I have seen it there. You can see women and children, half naked and starving, following the Chinamen around with the baskets picking up the refuse. You can see it any day.

I will turn for a moment to another part of the subject which has not been touched upon. The great farmers of the country have not felt this evil yet. Their time will come by and by. The horticulturists of the country are driven to the wall by them. I have been one, and my vocation is gone, because I cannot compete with them in raising any kind of product. They can rent land right under my nose and pay twenty dollars per acre per annum and run me out of my business. That is the condition of the horticultural interest of the State to-day. It is to that extent that the farmers of Santa Clara are driven out of business.

MR. STUART. I would like to ask the gentleman if the Italians or any other foreigner does the same thing?

MR. WEBSTER. The Italians are the only people that they don't compel to leave. I know that they are raised in such a way that their living costs them very little. It is only because they fully understand their business that they can compete with them at all.

MR. BEERSTECHER. The amendment that you offer is substantially the same as that offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, with the exception that you do not include the inhibition upon the Chinese to fish in the waters of the State. I would ask you if there is any objection to including that inhibition in the section?

MR. WEBSTER. I do not believe that we have the power to do it. I say when you do that you go beyond the authority of this State. Now, sir, I believe that a revolution in sentiment everywhere is coming upon this as well as the people East of the Rocky Mountains. I believe that the election which will be holden here next Fall upon this question will have a great bearing upon the action of Congress, where the vote upon this direct question—Chinese or no Chinese—is to be taken. And I believe that a memorial to Congress will also have its influence; and I believe when it is understood that distress has overtaken this State, which in the last thirty years has added more wealth to the commerce and the coffers of the nation than any State in the Union, or country in the world—according to its size; that when the people of the North, with whom we stood shoulder to shoulder in the great struggle for national life; when the South in their great calamity, which occurred just a few months ago, and we poured out our money and sympathy as freely as the gentle dews fall from heaven; and when the people of the whole country see as we stand here driven to the verge of constitutional law, and now upon the line between constitutional, State, and national rights—that when they see us in this position, with one hand pressing back the hordes of Asia, and with the other upholding and defending the Federal Constitution, that they will meet us at the threshold and assist us in driving this curse from the land.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I do not desire to speak on this subject to any extent, but I favor the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, for the reason that he embraces the inhibition against the Chinese fishing in the waters of this State, as the fisheries are gradually passing into the hands of Chinese, and in a few years the Chinese will be the only fishers in the State. There is no doubt in my mind about our right to control the fisheries and say who shall fish in the waters of this State. I call the attention of the committee to a note to section one thousand and seventy-three of Story on the Constitution, the last edition by Judge Cooley. It is there stated:

"The State may control the fisheries within its limits and confine the privileges thereof to its own citizens."

He cites a number of cases in support of the statement. Mr. Cooley, in his Constitutional Limitations, on page 524 says:

"The rights of which we here speak are considered as pertaining to the State by virtue of an authority existing in every sovereignty, and which is called the eminent domain. Some of these are complete without any action on the part of the State; as is the case with the rights of navigation in its seas, lakes, and public rivers, the rights of fishery in public waters, and the right of the State to the precious metals which may be mined within its limits."

There is no doubt about the right of the State to say who shall fish within the waters of this State. The amendment offered by Mr. Webster is the same as the amendment offered by Mr. Reynolds, with the exception that Mr. Reynolds says that no Chinese shall fish in the waters of this State. I believe that we have a right in law and in justice to put this inhibition in the Constitution, and therefore I am in favor of the amendment of Mr. Reynolds in preference to that of Mr. Webster. It includes an inhibition that we can legally make.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. Chairman: Neither the original nor the amendment covers the question. Both say "foreigners ineligible to become citizens." The Chinese are not so. There are Chinese naturalized now.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. Chairman: I seconded the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster. As has been said by many gentlemen, I would be willing, for one, to go just as far toward the exclusion of Chinamen from residence and from all classes of employment in the State of California as I think we are able to do consistently with the oaths we have taken to support the Constitution of the United States. I have no desire, sir, to attempt a discussion of the question broadly; suffice it to say that, after listening to many eloquent gentlemen on this subject, I believe that the judgment of the men, women, and children of the State of California, and of the whole Pacific Coast, can be epitomized in one brief sentence, that they are prepared to do all within their power to prevent in the future the increase of Chinese population on this coast. Now, sir, taking this view of it, I take it that it is the united voice and wish of the people of this State who sent us here, to frame an organic law, to do all in our power consistent with our allegiance to the Government of the United States, and to the laws and treaties of the United States, to avert the evils of Chinese immigration. I believe, sir, that it is within our power to prohibit foreigners not eligible to become citizens of the United States from purchasing or leasing real estate within the State. I am not unaware, Mr. Chairman, that there is some doubt upon legal authority, and high legal authority, upon this proposition; yet, after having examined this question in the past, and having listened with such attention as I have been able to, to the arguments made upon the subject, I have yet to hear that which changes my previously formed opinion upon the subject, and that is that it is within our power to make that prohibition effective.

An objection may be raised in regard to the obligation of the State not to interfere with the power of the General Government to dispose of public lands in this State; but, sir, it may be noted in the laws of the United States providing for the alienation of the public lands belonging to that government within our limits, there are no provisions by which these lands are provided to be sold by the government, except to citizens of the United States, and those who have declared their intention to become such. For instance, it will be remembered by the lawyers on the floor that until eighteen hundred and sixty-six, no provision was made for the alienation of any of the lands generally known and classed as mineral lands, being part of the public domain. By a series of Acts, commencing July twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and running down to either eighteen hundred and seventy or eighteen hundred and seventy-two, the last Act upon the subject, the right to occupy the public lands of the United States for the purpose of mining, for delving for minerals, the right of occupancy, and the right to purchase ultimately and to take title by patent, is limited to citizens of the United States, and those who have declared their intentions to become such. And, sir, if you will look through the body of our law providing for the alienation of agricultural lands, by preëmption and homestead, you will find that the right is nowhere extended to any others than citizens of the United States, and those who have declared their intentions to become such. I, therefore, take the view of this policy as manifested by the government of the United States, that we are not in want of harmony with the government, that we are not in conflict with the spirit or letter of the Constitution when we put into the framework of our Constitution a prohibition equally applicable to all foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States. Now, if we look through the body of our Federal law, we will find that there is nowhere an authorization to acquire property from the government except in favor of citizens, and those who have declared their intentions to become such. We are, therefore, within the limits of that rule, because we only prohibit those from acquiring title to real property who are ineligible to become citizens.

Mr. Chairman, I should be very glad to vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, if I believed that we could safely go so far. I am not satisfied that we could do that. I do believe, however, that we can go to the extent of prohibiting those persons ineligible to become citizens from acquiring a title, either in fee or by lease, to real property in this State; and if we do that we shall have effected some direct relief, something very potent towards the exclusion of this class of people from our coast. I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster, may be adopted by the committee.

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. Chairman: I do not wish to occupy the time of the committee further than to say that I do not think we can rightfully prohibit this element from leasing any real estate. You say we cannot prohibit their coming here nor their residing here, but we may prohibit their leasing property. If they have a right to come here, even for the purpose of commerce, I am unable to see how they can come here for the purposes of commerce or temporary residence unless they can lease some property on which to live. You may say, in a hotel. That does not meet the question. If China has the right of commercial intercourse with us, if she has a right to have commercial business here, Consuls and other officers, they have the right to lease something to do business in, and a right to lease a place to live in. It seems to me that we are going too far when we say that no foreigner ineligible to citizenship shall be permitted to lease any real property in the State. I know the evil that is attempted to be cured—these men leasing gardens, raising vegetables, and all that—and the end is a desirable one; but while we are attempting to do something we ought not to go too far. It seems to me that we cannot say that no foreigner ineligible to become a citizen shall ever lease any real property.

MR. HAGER. Our people go there and cannot lease property or hold property, under our treaty.

MR. BELCHER. I do not know how it may be in China; but I know we permit the citizens of other nationalities to lease and occupy real property here, and we permit the inhabitants of China to come here under this treaty and to have all the privileges of other nations. Now, how they are to come here, and live here, unless they can occupy real property, lease real property, and hold real property for the time, is more than I can see. I am in favor of the clause that prohibits the Chinaman from fishing in the waters of the State. I think we can do that, where they are engaged in fishing. I am in favor of prohibiting that; and I am in favor of prohibiting their purchasing or holding land. I would be in favor of prohibiting the leasing, if I thought we could do that. Now, of course, back of this is the question as to the mass of the people coming here; but if they have the right to come here and settle, and live here, then they have the right to lease property to live upon, and must occupy it for the time. I think we go too far in saying that no land shall ever be leased by any of these men. I suppose no one here is in favor of this section six. I hear nothing in favor of it, and therefore shall say nothing against it.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY, OF SOLANO.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. Chairman: This committee has in its wisdom refused to strike out section five. That section reads: "No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution." It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that is going nearly as far as the most radical would deem it necessary to go. It is an acknowledged fact by everybody that these Chinamen are here. It is generally conceded by all citizens that they are obnoxious to the interests of the State; that they are obnoxious to the people of the United States generally, from various causes. But they are here. One gentleman stated here several years ago, and made himself very obnoxious by saying it, that these Chinamen must either work, beg, starve, or steal. Now, it has been argued upon this floor that this Convention ought to so hamper these Chinamen that they cannot obtain a livelihood; that we ought to force them into the class of paupers and vagrants in order to make them come within the law. They propose to make them a burden upon the State of California—to make them an absolute burden upon the taxpayers of California. I would like to know how many of the taxpayers of California are willing to accept them. As to whether they should fish or not, I do not know whether it is a matter of any great importance, but I presume that the power to exclude them from fishing is the power to exclude them from any other business. Now, I am inclined to think that in the way of market gardening they come in more direct competition than they do in fishing. They must do something. The gentleman from San Francisco says they must go home, but many of them are totally unable to go home. They have not got the means to go home. They have come here on the invitation of the United States, and there was a time when the people of the United States looked upon them as desirable immigrants—as a desirable labor element. I recognize the fact that that was a mistake—I believe that it was a mistake.

MR. HERRINGTON. Haven't they got ample room in the other States?

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Undoubtedly they have; but the question is, whether the State authorities have the power to drive them from one point to another. They have been invited here by the people of the United States. The United States entered into treaty stipulations with them, guaranteeing them certain rights and privileges. As an enlightened nation, as a civilized people, we ought to be content with testing our power under section five, without attempting to make paupers of them, and place them as a burden upon the State treasury of California. As to this matter of leasing land, I think the gentleman from Yuba, Judge Belcher, is certainly correct in his view of that case, and I doubt if any measure of that kind will relieve us in any way whatever. The only relief that can be had is to stop their coming, and await the time when time shall remove them from among us. Their general disposition to get home as soon as possible, and the fact that they die off rapidly, will relieve California perhaps as fast as desirable, even to the labor element of California. As to the argument of the gentleman from Alameda, that they run him out of business; that they can cultivate small fruits and market gardens, and sell their produce for less than any other class of people, then, of course, that class of produce is furnished to consumers at vastly less rates than it would be without them. That is true. Let them be swept away within a week, or within a day, and all these places left vacant, what is the result? Why, sir, the gentleman from Alameda, instead of cultivating his orchard and vineyard, would take it up and plow it and sow it to wheat; and every person, like the mechanic, who produces no vegetables, and who consumed this produce largely at the late prices, would be compelled to pay once, twice, or three times the price, or go without them. The demand will be good, however. The lands that are now used for this purpose will be used for something else.

I desire to say that it does seem to me that after refusing to strike out section five we have done enough. We have placed ourselves in a position to test the question of our rights under the treaty. Now, then, as to the objection to this class of people, the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, has taken the position that they are obnoxious on account of color. I think them obnoxious, as he does, but not on account of their color, but because of their non-assimilative qualities. They cannot become of us, nor a part of us. They cannot assimilate with the American people.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the committee will rise now and take a recess, and that before we adjourn to-day we will dispose of this business. I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President pro tem. Belcher in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President pro tem. in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I would inquire if there is a quorum present.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: I move, for the purpose of determining that question, that the Secretary be directed to call the roll.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, for the purpose of determining whether there is a quorum present.

MR. HUESTIS. I raise a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Convention has resolved itself into Committee of the Whole. There can be no roll call in Committee of the Whole, as I understand it.

MR. NOEL. I move that the committee rise, in order to see if we have a quorum present.

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and seventy-eight members found present.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President pro tem. in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to section six.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. HUESTIS. I move the previous question on the pending amendment.

Seconded by Messrs. Moreland, Noel, and Evey.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

[MR. TINNIN in the chair.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco.

The vote was taken, but objections being made that there was no quorum voting, it was put again.

Division being called, the committee divided, and the amendment was adopted—ayes, 72; noes, 8.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by Mr. Reynolds.

Adopted—ayes, 43; noes, 35.

MR. SMITH. Is an amendment in order?

MR. LARUE. Mr. Chairman, I send up an amendment to section seven.

MR. SMITH. First I have an amendment or substitute for section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No Chinese, or foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States, shall be allowed to fish in any of the waters of the State, nor to purchase or own any real property, nor any interest therein, nor to lease, rent, hold, or use any land for the purpose of agriculture, horticulture, grazing, or other means of profit, and all contracts or conveyance of any right or interest in real property, and any lease of any land for the purposes of agriculture, horticulture, or grazing, or other means of profit, to or with any such foreigners, shall be void and not entitled to record."

THE CHAIRMAN. The amendment is out of order, as I understand it is offered as a substitute.

MR. SMITH. Allow me to explain what the amendment is. The amendment as adopted, it seems to me, will defeat the whole matter. One of the most important objects is to prevent the Chinese from leasing land. For fear it might defeat the whole matter, I have provided that they shall not lease or rent any land. Now, this is an important matter, which it seems to me should be attended to, and if we cannot do it any other way, we ought to reconsider the matter in order to get this provision in. Where I live the Chinamen do all the gardening, and lease a great deal of land, and take the place of a great many white laborers. If this amendment is in order, I hope it will be adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. I rule the gentleman's amendment out of order, for the reason that a portion of the substitute already adopted would be stricken out by it, and it covers part of the same ground adopted by the Convention.

MR. SMITH. I then move to reconsider the vote by which the substitute was adopted, in order to have a chance to put in this amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. That can only be done by the unanimous consent of the house. The Chair hears objections.

MR. BURT. Mr. Chairman: Will it not be in order for the gentleman to add to the substitute already adopted by the Convention? If his amendment only adds to it, is not that in order?

THE CHAIRMAN. By the rules the gentleman can do so with the unanimous consent of the Convention. The Convention has adopted a substitute for the section, and the gentleman now offers a substitute, which strikes out a portion of what has already been adopted by the Convention. It is therefore ruled out of order.

MR. NOEL. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment which I wish to offer as an addition to the section.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. He can offer it as an additional section after we get through with the article.

MR. NOEL. I wish to offer it now.

MR. HAGER. I understood the Chair to rule that we cannot reconsider the vote by which the substitute was adopted at this time.

THE CHAIRMAN. It cannot be reconsidered without one day's notice being given, except by unanimous consent of the Convention.

MR. HAGER. That only applies to a final vote, not to the Committee of the Whole. This is not a final vote. We may at any time move to reconsider without going through the formula of one day's notice.

MR. LARUE. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. State your point of order.

MR. LARUE. We are acting under the previous question.

THE CHAIRMAN. The previous question only goes to the amendment. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. HAGER. We have exhausted the previous question. I wish a correct ruling in regard to the progress of the business, as we pass upon these sections here. If we adopt an amendment and afterwards find that we have made a mistake, it seems to me very strange that we have to give notice and wait until the next day before we can get at it to make the correction. That rule only relates to a final vote.

MR. LARUE. Mr. Chairman: I rise for information——

MR. NOEL. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. NOEL. My point of order is that the gentleman is not directing his remarks to any question pending before the Convention. There is no question before the Convention.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. State your point of order.

MR. ROLFE. My point of order is that the Chair has already ruled the motion out of order, and there has been no appeal taken from the ruling of the Chair, hence any further discussion is out of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair rules the point of order well taken, unless there is an appeal from the decision of the Chair.

MR. HAGER. I wish to call the attention of the Chair to the fact——

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I insist upon my point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair rules that the adoption of the substitute for section six was a final vote, as far as the Committee of the Whole is concerned.

MR. REYNOLDS. If I understand the Chair correctly the decision is that the adoption of the substitute is a final vote. And I understand there are gentlemen here who desire to amend that substitute without striking out or destroying anything that has already been adopted, or altering the substance of what has been adopted. It seems to me the effect of the ruling of the Chair is to prevent a measure from being perfected. Now, if we have adopted a substitute, and amendments are offered which do not change the character of the substitute, they ought to be entertained. They are certainly in order, and I think the ruling of the Chair is wrong.

MR. NOEL. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order. The Chair has ruled on the question and no appeal has been taken; this debate is therefore out of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken. The Chair will entertain any motion to amend section six, which does not strike out the substitute, or any portion of it.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I understand that the amendment of the gentleman from Kern does not strike out any portion of section six, but is simply a further amendment.

MR. NOEL. Mr. Chairman: I insist upon my amendment being read.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No Chinese shall be allowed to catch fish in any of the waters of this State, nor to take game within the limits of the State; provided, immature tadpoles and pollywogs shall not be considered fish, nor tomcats and mud hens as game."

[Laughter.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The amendment is out of order.

MR. NOEL. Mr. Chairman: I contend that my amendment is cognate to the subject under discussion.

THE CHAIRMAN. The amendment is frivolous, and will not be entertained.

MR. NOEL. It seems to me it is germane to the subject under consideration.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to the substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert between the words 'no' and 'alien' the words 'Mongolian or'."

MR. WEST. I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. State your point of order.

MR. WEST. The committee have already adopted the substitute. It has been adopted as a whole and cannot be amended. Amendments were in order to the substitute before it was adopted, but having been adopted as a whole it cannot be amended.

MR. HAGER. We have taken a final vote by adopting the substitute, and how can it be subject to further amendment? The Chair has decided that the adoption of the substitute was a final vote, and how are you going to amend it?

THE CHAIRMAN. As far as it went, additions can be made. No portion of it can be stricken out.

MR. ROLFE. I claim the floor.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: Not one word is stricken from the substitute by my amendment; it only adds to it.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: Have I the floor or not?

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I insist upon my point of order, that the committee have adopted the substitute, and thereby have exhausted their resources for amending it. It is a final action, and no further amendment can be allowed.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken. The committee have a right to perfect the substitute by adding to it.

MR. WEST. The right to perfect a proposition is exhausted when that proposition is adopted, therefore we cannot proceed to further amend it after it is adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I suppose all this talk will not count on my fifteen minutes. I do not offer this amendment by way of a joke, or as a frivolous proposition, or in any manner to impair the section. I do it in good faith. Now, if there is anything in this section six, if we can sustain it under the treaty—and I am in hopes we can—I am under the impression if there is any part of the article that can be maintained under the treaty, I think it is section six, as it has been finally adopted. Therefore, I offer this amendment for the purpose of obviating what I am afraid may be an obstacle in the way of its execution, by inserting the word "Mongolian," so that no Mongolian or alien shall have these privileges; because it may be finally decided that there is nothing in our naturalization laws which will preclude them from becoming citizens, in which event the provision, as it now stands, would be of no avail whatever. That is as yet an open question, and some of the Courts are naturalizing the Chinamen; therefore, if that should be the result; if it should finally be determined by the highest Court in the land that the Chinese may become citizens, or if Congress should pass a law to that effect. But if you put the word "Mongolian" in there, that includes them, whether they become citizens of the United States or not. Then, if this has any force at all, we can at least exclude those who are not citizens of the United States—who are not actually citizens—and if they are aliens and Mongolians too, we can exclude them just the same; and if they should be decided to be eligible to citizenship, if this provision will hold water, we can still exclude them. I think it is important that this amendment should be made to the substitute.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I wish briefly to give my reasons for objecting to the use of this word "Mongolian" in the Constitution. The term Mongolians does not apply exclusively to the Chinese. It is a generic type of the human family, and some of the leading authorities on ethnology have divided the species into three classes—Mongolian, Caucasian, and Negro. Some of them claim that the word Mongol embraces the American Indian. Now, if you are going to put that term into the Constitution, and the Courts come to construe it, where will you be? You are not confining it to the Chinese, and they are the people aimed at. Why not come at it directly and say Chinese? I opine that almost every gentleman on this floor was sent here for the purpose of procuring legislation that will prevent the immigration and settlement of the Chinese. Not Mongolians, but Chinese. If you place the word Mongolian there for the purpose of reaching the Chinese, you may find yourselves badly mistaken when the Courts come to construe it. I hope the gentlemen of this Convention will not place a word in there that will be capable of having a double meaning placed upon it. We all know that we mean the Chinamen, and why not say Chinamen?

MR. REED. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me this is altogether too important a measure for us to undertake to pass upon here with a slim house. I think we ought to adjourn. There is scarcely a quorum present. I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I hope the committee will not rise. We are here for business, and if members absent themselves that is not our fault. We are not responsible for their running away.

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is that the committee rise.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe, to insert the words "Mongolian or."

Lost.

MR. SMITH, of Kern. I move to insert in the same place the words "Chinese or," so as to read "no Chinese or alien," etc.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

MR. HARRISON. That part of the amendment relative to fishing, if it is adopted, will prevent the Chinese representing the Empire of China from going fishing for pleasure. He can be arrested for fishing for pleasure. I think it ought to be qualified.

MR. AYERS. I will inform the gentleman that the Chinese who represent the Empire of China are here under the law of nations, and this provision would not affect them in any way.

MR. BARNES. I think that is an error.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman——

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman——

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman ——

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I ask the gentleman if he ever knew a Chinaman to go fishing for pleasure?

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I wish to call the attention of the Convention to the fact that whoever offered that amendment is intending to defeat the whole section. It is no friend of the section who offers such an amendment as that. It practically allows every Chinaman to fish whenever he pleases. It leaves out the most essential part, and practically allows the Chinaman to do whatever he pleases. It does not follow, as a matter of course, that they are all aliens. Lots of them were born right here, and they are not aliens. They are citizens of the United States. If the word aliens covers the Chinese, what is the use of putting the word Chinese in there?

MR. TULLY. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Any minister of any religious denomination who shall teach or read the Scriptures, or attempt to convert to the Christian faith, any Mongolian resident of this State, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall forfeit his privilege to preach and forever be disqualified from citizenship, and, upon conviction for the second offense, shall be imprisoned for life, and every such converted Mongolian shall be arrested and banished from the State as more dangerous than the pagan himself."

THE CHAIRMAN. Out of order.

MR. TULLY. I offer another amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Any physician or surgeon who shall willfully render any medical or surgical aid to any person not entitled to become a citizen of the United States" ——

THE CHAIRMAN. Ruled out of order as frivolous.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I wish to express my regret that so many members are willing to turn this subject into ridicule, when the whole people of the State are watching it with such deep solicitude.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. One moment, Mr. Chairman——

MR. CONDON. I move to insert the word "Chinese" after the word "alien."

MR. AYERS. I suggest "Chinese or other aliens."

MR. BLACKMER. It is very evident that the amendment is not understood.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

[Cries of "Division," "division."]

The Convention divided, and the vote stood: Ayes, 36; noes, 27.

THE CHAIRMAN. No quorum voting.

MR. CONDON. There are members present who do not vote on either side. The rules call on all to vote.

MR. LARKIN. I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. State your point of order.

MR. LARKIN. Unless the ayes and noes are called it is not possible to determine whether there is a quorum voting or not.

MR. CONDON. Undoubtedly there seems to be a misapprehension about this amendment. I ask for the Chair to direct the Secretary to read it again.

MR. WELLIN. I would like to know what the difference is between the other amendment and this one? Can the Chair point out the difference?

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The vote stood: Ayes, 41; noes, 21.

THE CHAIRMAN. There is not a quorum voting.

MR. AYERS. I move that the word "other" be inserted after the words "Chinese or." Now, how is the Chair to know whether there is a quorum voting? In the Convention you call the ayes and noes. It is evident that there is a quorum here. If there is a quorum present we can transact business.

MR. STUART. I have an amendment to offer.

MR. AYERS. Does the Chair decide that there must be a quorum voting.

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir.

MR. AYERS. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

THE CHAIRMAN. Gentlemen: On the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kern, Mr. Smith, division was called for, and on that division there were 41 ayes and 21 noes, not being a quorum of this body, and the Chair ruled that there not being a quorum voting, there was no vote. From this decision of the Chair the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, appeals. The question now is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I rise to ask a question. What is the effect on this section when there is no quorum voting—is it lost, or does it go over? Can we go on with any other business, and adopt any other section?

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. HOWARD. While the Chair is putting the question to the house, no discussion is in order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair had not put the question. That is the custom that has prevailed here.

MR. HOWARD. There is no book on earth that will sustain any such practice.

MR. STEDMAN. I shall vote to sustain the Chair, because he is right. There is no quorum present.

MR. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman: I ask if there are not gentlemen present who have not voted on either side?

THE CHAIRMAN. I cannot answer that question, because I have no way of knowing.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. Chairman: There is no way of determining unless the roll is called.

MR. CROSS. Our rules provide that the Committee of the Whole shall be governed by the same rules as in the Convention, except as to the roll call.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I am satisfied that there is more than a quorum present, and if we do not make the members vote, the rules amount to nothing. If we insist upon members voting, we will have more than a quorum.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I understand the rule to be this: that having gone into Committee of the Whole, a quorum is supposed to be present. If a vote is taken and a quorum does not vote, we take no notice of it, but go on with the business. There is no means of compelling members to vote unless you call the roll.

MR. STEDMAN. Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies——

MR. BARNES. My friend Stedman is going to give us something useful, and I give way.

MR. STEDMAN. Cushing says, paragraph 1991, that if at any time there is not a quorum present, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole must immediately leave the chair and the Speaker must resume the chair, and the House must then proceed to ascertain if there is a quorum present. If a quorum appears to be present, the House may then resolve itself into Committee of the Whole again, and proceed with the business. If a quorum does not appear to be present, the Speaker adjourns the House.

Now, I hold that a question has been raised whether there is a quorum present or not. I do not want to instruct the Chair, but I merely give my opinion, and I hold, sir, that it is your duty to immediately go into Convention and order the calling of the roll to see if there is a quorum present, and if there is, we can go back into Committee of the Whole again.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Cushing's Manual lays down a proposition which I never saw questioned before. It is the duty of the Chair to ascertain, by counting or otherwise, whether there is a quorum present. The Secretary can count and see if there is a quorum present. It is not necessary to vote. Section nineteen says that no business can be done when the number is reduced below the number, and the Chair may decide that fact. If the Chair decides that there is a quorum present, by count, we can proceed, and if the Chair determines that there is a quorum present, it is not necessary for the quorum to vote on each proposition. It is not material whether the quorum votes or not, if there is a quorum present, for a majority can do business, without any regard to whether there is a quorum voting or not. If the Chair will refer to Cushing he will find that it is not necessary on division, in Committee of the Whole, to determine whether there is a quorum voting, because members might or might not vote. You can demand that members shall vote when the roll is called, but you cannot demand it on division. Therefore a majority vote, when there is a quorum present, determines the question at any time.

MR. STEDMAN. The language is very plain. When the Speaker is thus informed that there is no quorum present, he immediately proceeds in the same manner to determine whether there is a quorum present. The question has been raised now, and it must be determined, so that we will know what rule we are going to follow.

MR. AYERS. I ask the Chair if there is a quorum present?

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair has no way of judging except by the vote taken.

MR. AYERS. Except by counting.

MR. HALL. Mr. Chairman: Section six says that a majority of the Convention shall constitute a quorum to do business. I understand that rule applies to the Committee of the Whole as well as to the Convention. I assume that there must be a majority present in order to do business.

THE CHAIRMAN. As far as the Chair is concerned, it is immaterial what the decision of the house is. I desire to state that the Chair has ruled that it requires a majority of a quorum to pass upon any proposition. The Chair ascertained that a majority of a quorum had not voted on the question, and for that reason ruled that it had not been carried. From that decision the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, appeals. The question now is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand?

MR. ANDREWS. I understand that the Chair decided that a quorum must vote in the Committee of the Whole.

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir.

MR. ANDREWS. I believe the appeal is well taken. I do not believe it is necessary for a quorum to vote in the Committee of the Whole.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: It seems that Saturday afternoon gets to be like a school boy's day, and there is a great deal of confusion here. Things do not go right at all, and I do not think we had better proceed any further. I think it is better for the interests of the Convention, and better for the interests of the people of the State, that we go no further. I, therefore, move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order. When there is no quorum in the Committee of the Whole, the committee becomes dissolved.

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is, that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The vote stood 43 ayes to 36 noes.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: There is no quorum voting.

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir, there is a quorum voting.

IN CONVENTION.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again. What is the pleasure of the Convention?

A CALL OF THE CONVENTION.

MR. LARKIN. I move a call of the House.

THE CHAIR. The gentleman from El Dorado moves a call of the House. The question is on the motion.

Carried.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

PRESENT.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will call the absentees.

THE SECRETARY called over the absentees.

MR. NOEL. Mr. President: I would like to inquire if the Convention has voted to have a call of the house.

THE CHAIR. Yes, sir; the question was put to the house.

MR. AYERS. I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to bring the absentees before the bar of this house, except those who are absent with leave.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I move as an amendment to the motion that they be brought here on Monday, at two o'clock, under arrest, by the Sergeant-at-Arms. I think it is perfectly disgraceful such proceedings as we have had. I think when men abandon their duty that they should be brought up and exposed before the country. I think the people of the State ought to be informed of it.

MR. NOEL. I raise a point of order, that the vote just taken shows there is not a quorum present, and it is not competent to do any business.

THE CHAIR. A quorum has a right to send for absent members.

MR. LARKIN. I move that the Secretary be instructed to furnish the Sergeant-at-Arms with a list of the absent members who have leave of absence.

MR. BARRY. I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

MR. HOWARD. There is already a motion pending.

MR. FILCHER. I rise to ask if there is a quorum present. I protest against this sort of demagogy and humbuggery, and demand that we go on with our work.

MR. NOEL. I don't see why the gentleman don't go to work.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to inquire whether the Chair knows whether there is a quorum present or not. I move that this foolishness stop, and that further proceedings under the call be suspended, and that we proceed to business.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

Lost.

THE CHAIR. The motion now is that the Sergeant-at-Arms be sent after the absentees, to be brought here at two o'clock on Monday.

MR. TULLY. I hope the gentleman from Los Angeles will withdraw his motion. It is impracticable. Many of the absent members are in remote parts of the State, and it will involve a great deal of expense to bring them here out of the Convention Fund. I don't see any practical good to result from such a proceeding. I hope it will be withdrawn, and that the Convention will settle down and dispose of as much of this Chinese question as possible. I think it would be more profitable to ourselves, and give better satisfaction to the people of the State. I hope the motion will be withdrawn by the gentleman from Los Angeles.

MR. WHITE. I hope a resolution will be presented to have the Sergeant-at-Arms go after these men and bring them in, or as far as it is practicable, because the conduct of some members on Saturdays and Mondays is entirely inexcusable, and if we do anything, we ought to do something determined; and if we lose the whole of the rest of the day in bringing these men here, I am in favor of it, because we have a great deal of work before us, and every week it is the same old thing. They run out of the room on purpose, and then when we call the roll they come in again. I think this thing should be exposed, and the people should know who it is.

MR. REED. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that the exigencies of the case do not require such rigorous measures, and when you consider the matter the Sergeant-at-Arms is going to incur considerable expense in carrying out this resolution. How is that expense to be paid? We cannot pay it. We have no authority to order it paid. We have no authority to take it out of the fund. And I think we had better look at what we are doing.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. There is no necessity of going out of town. The officer can take them, and on Monday morning bring them before the bar of the House. I want to bring them here and give them a chance to make their excuses.

MR. JOYCE. I offer an amendment, that the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to get what he can find in the city, so as not to incur any expense.

MR. AYERS. I accept that amendment.

MR. LARKIN. What is the question before the Convention?

THE CHAIR. That the Sergeant-at-Arms be sent out after the absentees, and bring them in at two o'clock on Monday, all that he can find within the limits of the city.

MR. McCALLUM. I desire to ask leave of absence for Mr. Martin, of Alameda, on account——

THE CHAIR. It is not in order. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: My understanding of the law is that a motion to dispense with further proceedings under the call of the house is always in order, and I insist upon my motion to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: Is a motion in order?

THE CHAIR. No, sir. It is moved that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

MR. LARUE. I move to lay the whole subject-matter on the table.

MR. CROSS. I move we go into Committee of the Whole.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Larue, to lay the whole subject-matter on the table.

Carried.

MR. LARKIN. I move we go into Committee of the Whole, to take up the Chinese article.

A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: In the correspondence to the Chronicle, I have been somewhat misrepresented as to my opinions upon this Chinese question. I suppose it is an error, but, at the same time, that paper has a large circulation, and I do not wish to be placed upon the side of Mr. Stuart and Mr. Wilson upon this matter. I understand from the correspondent that the misrepresentation was not made at this end, so it must have been changed at the other end of the line. I will state here, in regard to Mr. Wilson's statement of the law, as I then stated, that it was correct——

MR. AYERS. I rise to a point of order——

MR. TULLY. I move that the Chronicle be directed to correct it, and that further proceedings be dispensed with.

THE CHAIR. That motion is out of order.

MR. SMITH. That law, as stated by Mr. Wilson, does not interfere with these domestic powers of the State, which still remain, and that under those powers——

[Noise, objections, and general confusion.]

I believe this Convention have given other members a chance to set themselves right; and I ask them to extend the same courtesy to me. I have no doubt this Convention understands how I stand on this matter, but I think I have a right to set myself right before the people of this State——

MR. AYERS. I rise for information. Is the gentleman speaking to a question of privilege?

THE CHAIR. Yes, sir.

MR. SMITH. As I stated then, I hold, with Mr. Wilson, that the State has certain reserved powers that the Fourteenth Amendment, nor the treaty, nor any other provision, can take away, and that under these powers we have authority over the Chinese in this State.

RESOLUTION.

MR. LARKIN. I desire to offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms is hereby requested to furnish the Convention the number of employés now employed in the Convention, and to state if there are any that are not required for the performance of the work in the future; also, if there are any employed that are not authorized by law.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of this resolution.

MR. HUESTIS. I would like to hear the gentleman assign some reason why this resolution should be adopted before I vote on it. I want to know what it is for.

MR. LARKIN. As the time expires next week in which there will be money in the treasury for us to draw on, the Controller will not pay any attachés unless they belong to the Convention, as authorized by law. We have some attachés that the law authorizes. I want to know whether there are any that we can get along without. This resolution simply calls for information. The Convention can then determine whether to act upon that information or not. The Sergeant-at-Arms will report the number, and we can see whether we are employing more than we are authorized to do. I hope the resolution will be adopted.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

It was adopted.

MR. LARKIN. I move that the house now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, to further consider the report of the Committee on Chinese.

MR. GREGG. I move we do now adjourn.

MR. LARKIN. Ayes and noes.

MR. HOWARD. Ayes and noes.

MR. FILCHER. Ayes and noes.

MR. HUESTIS. Ayes and noes.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

Lost.

MR. CONDON. I ask the Chair if, when we go into Committee of the Whole, and a vote is taken, and it is found that no quorum has not voted, whether the Chair will hold, as he did this afternoon, that it is not a vote, because no quorum has voted?

THE CHAIR. Yes, sir.

MR. CONDON. Then, sir, in that view of the case, I move that this Convention do now adjourn to meet next Monday, at ten o'clock.

Lost.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the pending amendment, which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert between the words 'no' and 'alien,' in the sixth line, the words 'Chinese or,' so as to read 'no Chinese or alien,' etc.; and also in the last line, the same amendment."

The amendment was lost.

MR. TULLY. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out and insert: 'No foreigner can catch fish, if he is addicted to the profession of swearing.'" [Laughter.]

THE CHAIR. Out of order.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I move to amend by inserting in line eight, after the word "alien," the words "to use for the purpose of agriculture, horticulture, gardening, or other purposes of profit."

MR. LARKIN. That would leave open every avenue except agriculture. It allows them to go into the mines, and to rent land for all other purposes. It allows them to go into the towns and rent houses, and I am opposed to the amendment, and I shall vote against it.

MR. SMITH. The gentleman misunderstands the object and purpose of the amendment. It says "or other purposes of profit." It includes all business of profit.

MR. LARKIN. My criticism is that you name certain purposes, and therefore that leaves all other avenues open to them.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within their power. It shall provide for their exclusion from residence or settlement in any portion of the State it may see fit, or from the State, and provide suitable methods, by their taxation or otherwise, for the expense of such exclusion. It shall prescribe suitable penalties for the punishment of persons convicted of introducing them within forbidden limits. It shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for their removal without the limits of such cities and towns.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I move an amendment.

MR. LARUE. I have an amendment.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: Is my amendment in order?

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir; send it up.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all of lines one and two and insert: 'The presence of Mongolians or Chinese in this State is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being thereof;' and also strike out all the section after the word 'power' in line four, so as to read: 'The presence of Mongolians or Chinese in this State is declared hereby to be dangerous to the well-being thereof, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within their power.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

MR. LARUE. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all of section seven after the word 'power,' in line four."

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the amendment to the amendment, as it is precisely the same as one I had prepared to offer. I believe that is all we can do, and all we ought to do. It is an outspoken statement by this Convention, assembled here for the purpose of framing an organic law for the people, that we believe the presence of this class of persons to be dangerous to the welfare of the State; and we say that the Legislature shall do all within its power to prevent their immigration and settlement within the limits of the State. I am anxious to have that statement in that form, or stronger, if it is possible to get it, and embodied in the work of this Convention. And I do this to be consistent with what I have done before. I second the motion to strike out all the latter part of that section. If you will remember, I strove to take out of this article section four, and also section five. Section four was stricken out by a small majority, but section five was retained. I then made an effort to bring section five within the scope of the Constitution of the United States and of the treaty. That also failed; and if the members of the Convention want to meet that responsibility, and say that the treaty is not binding upon this Convention, I am willing they should do it; but in regard to this section, we should certainly strike out all after the word "power," and let this matter of fact declaration stand. While I am anxious to do all that is legal, I do believe that even the Chinaman, obnoxious as he is, has some rights that the white man is bound to respect. I do believe in going behind the treaty, and saying that the Chinese should not be invited to our shores; but as long as that treaty stands as the supreme law of the land, I do not believe it should be violated. Until that treaty is repealed, they have some rights which we are bound to respect.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. STUART. I move the previous question.

The motion was duly seconded.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman: In case the previous question is not sustained, will the Chair rule that the section will have to go over one day?

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

The vote resulted in 55 ayes—noes not called for.

MR. HUESTIS. I rise to a point of order.

MR. GREGG. I rise to a point of order. The majority did not vote.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the first amendment.

MR. HERRINGTON. I ask leave to withdraw my amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there is no objection the gentleman will have leave. The Secretary will read the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all of section seven, after the word 'power,' in line four."

Division was called for, and the vote was announced: Ayes, 59, and the Chair declared the amendment adopted.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: Is there a quorum voting? The other side has defeated our amendment by this means, and I want to know whether there is a quorum voting or not.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I insist upon it, that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. It was sought to defeat the will of the majority here by subterfuge, and I want to know if the Chair is going to sit there and refuse to tell us how many voted in the negative? I demand to know it.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has not asked the Chair to do it before. I will inform him that fifty-nine voted in the affirmative and six in the negative.

MR. BARBOUR. That is not a quorum.

MR. CROSS. It takes seventy-five to make a quorum.

THE CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman raise that as a point of order?

MR. CROSS. Yes, sir.

THE CHAIRMAN. Then the Chair will rule that the amendment is not adopted, because there was no quorum voting.

MR. WEST. I protest against absent members voting on these propositions. [Laughter.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not aware as to who are delinquent members. The Chair will put the motion again.

The next vote, on division, resulted in 55 ayes to 4 noes.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I notice there are a number of members who do not vote either way, and I protest against their invalidating the action of those who are trying to do their duty.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. HOWARD. It having been officially ascertained that there is a quorum present, that settles the whole question. The fact that members refuse to vote does not have any bearing.

MR. ROLFE. Allow me one word. If there is a quorum present, and if a majority of that quorum vote one way, that is all that is necessary. It makes no difference whether the negative is called for or not. For instance, seventy-seven constitutes a quorum, and if a majority of seventy-seven vote aye a measure is lawfully carried. That is the rule.

MR. JOYCE. I would like to raise a point of order that the Chair cannot decide whether there is a quorum present or not, without having a call of the house. The other Chair never has went back on this rule.

THE CHAIRMAN. We will try the vote again.

The vote was taken again, with the same result, and the same ruling.

MR. STUART. I would suggest if the Chair would enforce his decisions we would get along very well.

THE CHAIRMAN. There is no quorum voting. The Chair has ruled that a quorum must vote, and from that decision an appeal has been taken.

MR. JOYCE. I move that the appeal be laid on the table.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to lay the appeal on the table.

Division was called, and the motion to table was lost—ayes, 23; noes, 48.

THE CHAIRMAN. The noes have it.

MR. JONES. Unless there is a quorum, there can be no decision again. The Chair has so ruled all along, and I think the ruling should be carried out.

MR. TULLY. A point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. State it.

MR. TULLY. That there is no question before the house.

MR. LARKIN. I move we pass section seven temporarily, and proceed to the consideration of section eight.

MR. NOEL. I call for the ruling of the Chair on the question before the house.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair decided that the amendment was not adopted.

MR. MCCALLUM. I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. State your point of order.

MR. MCCALLUM. The appeal is still pending, and I call for the question on the appeal.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken. The question is now on the appeal from the ruling of the Chair. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the house?

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman——

THE CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stedman will take his seat. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order. A motion was made to lay the appeal on the table, and as there was no quorum voting I want to know how that motion was lost.

MR. HEISKELL. It is evident that there is but one way to settle this question, and that is by calling the roll. Now, I understand that if there are but six persons voting on a proposition, three in the affirmative and two in the negative, that the man who refuses to vote gives his assent to the measure, and it is just that way here. The members who are here refuse to vote, and under this ruling they can balk the work of this Convention.

MR. CROSS. I cannot see any good that will result to this Convention, nor to the people of this State, for us to stay here this afternoon, and I therefore move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

THE CHAIRMAN. The appeal is pending. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the house?

MR. LARUE. I desire to ask a question. This house is composed of one hundred and fifty members, and seventy-six constitutes a quorum of the house. Now, we resolve ourselves into Committee of the Whole, and there are seventy present. Then two gentlemen go away, and according to the ruling of the Chair we cannot do anything, because there is no quorum present. They refuse to vote. I hold if there is a quorum present it is all sufficient.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention? The Chair has no preference in this matter; in fact, as far as I am concerned, I hope the Convention will overrule the Chair.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. Chairman: I desire to read this to sustain the decision of the Chair——

MR. HOWARD. I raise the point of order that the reading at this time is out of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken. The question is on sustaining the decision of the Chair.

Ayes 15, noes 45; and the decision of the Chair was overruled.

MR. BARBOUR. I raise the point of order that there is no quorum voting. [Laughter.]

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Mr. Chairman: I would inquire whether or not, when a quorum is present, and a vote is taken, it is necessary that a quorum should vote?

THE CHAIRMAN. The Convention has just decided that it is not.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Then I think the Convention is wrong.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will take up the amendment to strike out all after the word "power."

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: If this amendment to strike out section seven——

MR. LARUE. I rise to a point of order. We are acting under the previous question on this amendment, and the gentleman has no right to discuss it.

THE CHAIRMAN. That is the way the Chair understands it, and consequently is out of order. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Larue.

Division being called, the amendment was adopted by a vote of 56 ayes to 18 noes.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: I wish to give notice that at the next meeting of the Committee of the Whole, I shall move to reconsider the vote by which this portion of section seven is stricken out. I will also state that I voted aye on the motion, in order to have a chance to make this motion.

MR. BARBOUR. I second that motion, and I wish to call the attention of this Convention to the fact that you are stultifying yourselves by voting that the Chinese shall not settle in this State, and then voting down a proposition that the Legislature shall oppose them by all the means in its power.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to section seven, by way of a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute for section seven the following: 'The presence of Chinese in this State is declared herein to be dangerous to the well-being of the State. The importation of Chinese coolies, being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited, and all contracts for coolie labor shall be void, and all contractors for coolie labor shall be liable to the pains and punishments provided by the law of Congress against importers of African slaves. In all trials under State jurisdiction for violations of this section, the jury shall be the judge of the law and the facts in each case. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. It is out of order, as the Convention has adopted a portion of section seven, and you cannot now strike it out.

MR. BARRY. I move to amend section seven as amended by adding my amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. That is in order.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: In offering this amendment to section seven it will be unnecessary for me to dwell upon the evils of Chinese immigration. All that has been said by the learned and eloquent gentlemen, and it is more than sufficient to convince this committee that this is an evil which should be curbed, and that it is within the power of this Convention to curb and restrain the further extension of this evil within this State. As regards section five, I voted for it because I believed it was within the power of the State to do this, even though gentlemen speak of the sacredness of treaties made between this country and China. As far as that is concerned, this amendment refers only to those who come here as coolie slaves. It is well known that slavery does exist in this State in the form of Chinese coolieism. Now, sir, provided the Supreme Court of the United States should hold section five to be unconstitutional, we will still have something to fall back on. We would still have this section seven. It provides that Chinese coolieism, in this State, is a form of human slavery, and shall be prevented, and that those who import Chinese here, they being slaves—being a form of human slavery—shall be forever prohibited in this State. Now, sir, if the Convention does not have the power under the powers of the State—under its police powers—to prevent it from being overrun by a class of that character, then it certainly does have the power to adopt a section like this. I don't think there is any fear about its not being constitutional. It is well known, and admitted by eminent gentlemen on this floor, that human slavery does exist in this State. Chinese slavery does exist. That being the case, I presume no gentleman will deny that a proposition of this kind is legal.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to the section merely for the purpose of correcting the phraseology. In the second line I move to strike out the word "herein," and insert before the word "declared" the word "hereby."

THE CHAIRMAN. The Convention has adopted a portion of the section, and it is not in order to move to strike it out. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Barry.

MR. REYNOLDS. I make the same point of order against that as the Chair has just made against me. I propose merely to strike out one word and insert another, not for the purpose of changing the sense, but merely the phraseology for the purpose of improving it a little, and now comes an amendment to strike out two entire lines of the amendment already adopted. If I cannot strike out one word without being out of order, how is it that another gentleman can strike out two whole lines and still be in order?

THE CHAIRMAN. This amendment don't strike out anything.

MR. REYNOLDS. It strikes out all of the third and fourth lines.

MR. AYERS. I wish to say this: I would like to see all these amendments in such language that they will mean something. The last amendment offered says that the importation of Chinese coolies is a form of human slavery. The importation is not a form of slavery. Therefore there is no sense to the amendment.

MR. CROSS. I raise the point of order that there is not a quorum present.

THE CHAIRMAN. Not well taken.

MR. REYNOLDS. Now, sir, I am opposed to the amendment that has been offered here, and I insist upon a ruling upon my point of order. If I understand it, the section now ends at the word "power." Am I correct?

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir.

MR. REYNOLDS. Very well; now the Chair has just ruled that to strike out the word "herein" is not in order, because that has been adopted, and now here is an amendment which strikes out more than one whole line.

MR. MCCALLUM. Will you allow me to explain a moment. The gentleman offered his amendment to strike out. The Chair ruled that he could not do it. Then he said he offered it as an addition, which the Chair said he could do. This is not to strike out at all, it is in addition. It is a mere repetition of the former language.

MR. REYNOLDS. Well, sir, as I heard the amendment read, it commences at the beginning. Section seven as adopted reads:

"The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared herein to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power."

Then you propose to add to that the amendment that:

"The presence of Chinese in this State is declared herein to be dangerous to the well-being of the State," etc.

The absurdity of this amendment appears by reading it; and it strikes out a portion of the amendment in reality, and that is as much out of order as mine, and more.

MR. BARRY. I ask leave to strike out the first portion of my amendment.

THE CHAIR. If there is no objection it will be stricken out.

MR. BARRY. There is a mistake there; I don't know whether it is mine or not. In place of "importation," it should be "presence."

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried—ayes, 34; noes, 29.

IN CONVENTION.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Chinese, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. TULLY. I move we now adjourn.

Carried.

And, at four o'clock and twenty-five minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until Monday morning.

EIGHTIETH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Monday, December 16th, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY THORNTON. Gentlemen: The President and President pro tem. being absent, the first business in order will be the election of a temporary President.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Secretary: I nominate Mr. Tinnin, of Trinity.

Mr. Tinnin was elected, took the chair, and called the Convention to order.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

Three days leave of absence was granted Mr. Boucher.

Leave of absence for one week was granted Mr. Swing.

Indefinite leave of absence was granted Messrs. Herrington and McComas, on account of sickness.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

Carried.

VACANCIES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I present a petition from the people of Mariposa County, and two others from the people of Merced County, asking that this Convention fill the vacancy made by the death of J. M. Strong, by an election, and recommending W. J. Howard as their choice to fill such vacancy. The petitions, which may be read by the Clerk, are signed by the leading representative men of the two counties, to the number of something like one hundred and fifty. There is nothing that a committee could act upon in the matter unless it be simply to verify the signatures. As the law provides that this Convention may fill vacancies, and as a respectable number of very respectable citizens from these two counties ask that the vacancy be filled, I ask that W. J. Howard be appointed to fill the vacancy. I do not see that there is anything which should require a reference, and I therefore propose that when we come to the head of miscellaneous business we proceed to fill that vacancy by an election. I shall then nominate W. J. Howard to fill the vacancy.

The petitions, omitting the signatures, were as follows:

To the honorable Constitutional Convention of the State of California:

The undersigned, citizens of Merced County, would most respectfully petition to your honorable body to appoint the Honorable W. J. Howard to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the late J. M. Strong. Mr. Howard is one of the oldest citizens of this section of the State, and fully understands the wants of the people, and if appointed to the position we feel assured that he will represent the interests of the people with ability and fidelity.

To the honorable Constitutional Convention of the State of California:

We, the undersigned citizens of Mariposa County, would respectfully petition your honorable body to appoint Wm. J. Howard, a citizen of Mariposa County, to fill the seat in Constitutional Convention made vacant by the death of Col. J. M Strong. Mr. Howard has been a citizen of this and Merced Counties about thirty years, and has heretofore served the people of this section in several official capacities, in which he acquitted himself with honor and satisfaction to his constituents. If appointed, we feel satisfied that he will represent the interests of the people with ability and fidelity.

THE CHAIR. The petition will lie on the table.

MR. LARKIN. I am in favor of suspending the rules and considering that resolution now. The people of that district are entitled to representation. I move that the rules be suspended, and that the motion of the gentleman from Merced and Mariposa be considered at the present time, and that this Convention proceed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Strong.

Carried.

MR. JONES. I move now that this Convention proceed to fill the vacancy made by the death of J. M. Strong.

MR. JOYCE. Haven't we passed a resolution declaring that place vacant for the balance of the term, and granted the per diem to his widow?

MR. HOLMES. We all know that the resolution was inoperative. We cannot draw the per diem.

MR. HEISKELL. The Controller would not draw his warrant for it.

MR. JOYCE. The rest of the resolution would operate.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I would like to ask what the incentive is that has given rise to this sudden movement? It is, no doubt, just to the people of Mariposa and Merced Counties that they should be fully represented on this floor. Of course I recognize that fact, and yet I know how indifferent people, as a body, will be to matters of this kind. The people of Mariposa and Merced, as a body, may feel that the matter is all right, that the result will be just as good without any representation as with. I know how easy it would be for a man to arrange a plan to secure a seat on this floor. If I was home and desired to be a member of this Convention, under similar circumstances, it would be no trouble for me to obtain one hundred and fifty signatures of very good men. I do not know of any good man, hardly, but could get up a petition, in the first place, setting forth that the position ought to be filled. It seems to me as though this might have been a movement on the part of an individual rather than a spontaneous movement on the part of the people. I simply rise to inquire, for I want to know the incentive of this movement so suddenly sprung upon us.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz. I would like to make this the special order for to-morrow, at two o'clock. I do not wish to vote for any gentleman of whom I have no knowledge; I would like a little time, therefore I move that it be made the special order for to-morrow, at two o'clock.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I hope that that motion will prevail. It does seem to me that this matter is being sprung in haste, and is not, to say the least, in good taste. Now, while I am in favor of electing some gentleman to fill this vacancy, I do not think that it is the proper thing here, when we have barely a quorum, to require us to vote for some gentleman to fill this vacancy without one moment's notice, and vote blind. I for one object to voting upon a matter of such magnitude and importance without any consideration, without any thought, without any knowledge of whom we are voting for. And we wish some little time to inform ourselves of the fitness of the various aspirants who may present themselves. I therefore suggest and submit to the gentlemen of the Convention that we ought to have a little time, and to-morrow, at two o'clock, will be certainly little time enough.

MR. HOLMES. Mr. President: I have no objection in the world to putting it off until to-morrow, at two o'clock, but if you do, what more information can the gentleman get than they can get from the gentlemen now present, who are acquainted with Mr. Howard?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Isn't it just to sixty or seventy absentees to have it put over?

MR. HOLMES. I have no objection whatever.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: If there are fifty or sixty absentees, it is their fault and not the fault of this Convention. I am pretty well acquainted in Mariposa and Merced Counties, and have known Mr. Howard a long time. I have received letters from prominent gentlemen of that county, among them the County Judge, stating to me that Mr. Howard was the choice of the people. I do not know how the gentlemen are to get any information. I think that from the fact that Judge Jones vouches for him, and that he has lived in that county for a quarter of a century, is sufficient evidence for me that Mr. Howard is a proper man to occupy a seat here, and that he is a worthy and true man. I do not see what further information we can have. I hope that we will go into the election and dispose of the question.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I hope that we will go on. This excuse about absentees exists every Saturday and Monday. It is their own fault that they are not here. Those people have not moved in this matter of filling up the vacancy before because they were willing, if the widow of the deceased member could get the per diem, that she should have it. They have found that such is not the case, and they now desire to be represented. These petitions and the statements of gentlemen here are all the information we can get, and that is sufficient.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I wish to say simply that there is no desire nor design that anything should be sprung upon this Convention. These petitions were here on Saturday last, and I spoke to the President of the Convention upon the subject of presenting them then, and he advised that they should not be presented on the last day of the week and in a thin house. Upon that suggestion, I failed then to present them. Saturday, Sunday, and Monday—there is nearly half of a week, and now there is a thin house, it is true. We can wait until to-morrow, and there may be a thinner house then. Wednesday there may be a full house, and in the meantime this Convention will pass upon the most important matters—the matter of Chinese, of corporations, and all that. I think it is not proper to suggest now, or to insist, that there is not more than one half of the week in which a number of the people of the State can ask that they be represented in this body. As to the matter of these petitions, they can be read, and it will appear that in the most urgent manner the people of Mariposa and Merced Counties ask that they have a representative for their Assembly district. As to the names signed to these petitions, they are not all the voters in this case, but, then—and other gentlemen here can guarantee to this body that—they are the names of the leading and substantial citizens of these counties. There are other good citizens there, but the names of the men who are signed to this petition are the names of men substantially the leading citizens of these counties, without regard to partisanship—leading merchants, leading lawyers, leading farmers, and leading stockmen—men of all classes. Now, if there is anything which can be ascertained for the information of this Convention between now and to-morrow, I have not the least objection in the world that the matter go over until to-morrow, at two o'clock, but I am unable to see what there is in the world that the Convention can get posted on between now and to-morrow, or between now and next week, in regard to the matter. All there is is three petitions—one from Mariposa County and two from Merced County—containing the names of about one hundred and forty or one hundred and fifty men. That is all there is to see. As to the man himself, W. J. Howard, I do not know how they will find out anything about him, except by coming to the men that know him; and if they come to men that know him—to Mr. Heiskell, Mr. Holmes, myself, and I do not know who else—they will be satisfied. I have known him for some twenty-nine or thirty years, as a resident sometimes of Merced and sometimes of Mariposa County. Other gentlemen have known him the same length of time, I presume; and during that time he has been a man respected in the county where he resided. He has been a member of the Legislature, some years ago. He was appointed, in Mariposa County, two or three years ago, by the Board of Supervisors, as District Attorney, to fill a vacancy, and he filled that vacancy with credit and honor. Now, I do not wish to insist upon an immediate election at all, if it seems to the members of this body that anything is to be gained by a delay of a day or two days. I have no objection at all that the matter should go over until two o'clock to-morrow, or any other time, if there is anything to investigate; but what strikes me is this: I do not see what further or other information it is possible to obtain.

MR. FILCHER. I would like to ask the gentleman if the delegation knows whether these petitions are the work of Mr. Howard, or some of his friends, or whether it comes spontaneously from the people?

MR. JONES. I cannot answer the question any further than this: that I have looked over the names on the petitions. The names are signed in the handwriting of the business men of these counties. I recognize their handwriting, and could swear to their signatures in any Court. I recognize that most of these men are men that do not do anything at the dictation of anybody else. They would not sign a petition for anybody unless they thought it a right thing and a good thing to do. As to whether Mr. Howard ever asked them to sign anything or not I do not know, and I submit that that is a point of no consequence at all, provided it be true, as I assert, that the men are men who do not sign papers because men go and stick them under their noses. I am one of that kind, too.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: It seems to me that if we go on with this election now we shall be acting with indecent haste. I have no doubt but what this applicant is a perfect gentleman. I do not have any reason for thinking otherwise, but it is only within the last ten minutes that I have heard that there was an intention to fill this vacancy. I want a few hours time to think it over, otherwise I shall be compelled to ask leave to decline voting. If we allow this to be brought up this morning in this shape we must allow it again, and although this may be perfectly fair and honest this morning, and nothing like a trap that is sprung upon us, yet there may be a dishonest applicant hereafter. I do not say there will be, but there might be. We will establish a precedent which we will be pained to look to. I do not think we ought to take action on it to-day.

MR. JONES. I accept the amendment for Tuesday, at two o'clock P. M.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I think this is a very hasty matter. I want to lay the whole matter on the table, and I now move that this matter be laid on the table.

[Cries of "No!" "No!"]

The motion was lost.

MR. GRACE. I move to amend that we also fill the vacancy caused by the death of Bernard F. Kenny, of San Francisco.

MR. JONES. I rise to a point of order. The amendment is not cognate to the motion.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. LARKIN. I think that the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco should be a separate motion. His motion will be in order after this motion is disposed of.

MR. GRACE. I am not certain that the motion is in order, but my opinion is that it is. I do not see why this motion cannot be amended as well as any other.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: If I understand the position it is this: the gentleman from Mariposa moves that we proceed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Strong, and the gentleman from San Francisco moves to amend so that we also fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Kenny.

THE CHAIR. The Chair has decided it to be in order.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: With all due respect to the Chair, I shall have to dissent from the ruling. I appeal from the decision of the Chair. The appeal is that the Chair rules that it is in order to incorporate an amendment that the vacancy from San Francisco shall be filled at the same time.

THE CHAIR. The Chair sees no second to the appeal.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: There is no petition here from the people of San Francisco to fill a vacancy. If a majority of the delegation require it I will support it. The people of Mariposa and Merced have requested it. If the people of San Francisco so desire it let them show it, and I will support it. But I think that it should not be connected with this matter.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will prevail, and I think it highly proper that if one vacancy should be filled that the other should be. This is not a matter that concerns one section alone. This is a matter that concerns the people of the whole State, and if we go to filling vacancies I see no reason why we should not fill all the vacancies.

MR. KLEINE. Mr. President: I do not see why the Workingmen's party should not have the same right to elect another delegate in the place of Mr. Kenny. Haven't we got as much right to one of our delegates as the gentleman from Merced? I say if a majority of the delegates vote against filling the vacancy of Mr. Kenny, they ought to vote against filling the vacancy of Mr. Strong.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I would not have taken the floor except to reply to Mr. Larkin. I would say to that gentleman that the general understanding has been that they would not ask to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Kenny, because it was understood that the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Strong would not be filled. But now the matter has come up, and as it is proposed to fill one vacancy, we will ask also to fill the other. I will also state to the gentleman from El Dorado that while in San Francisco a large number of people came to me, and to various delegates, and asked us to have the vacancy filled, naming some persons, and we agreed that as there were two vacancies to be filled, to let the matter rest. But now if a disposition is felt to fill one vacancy, we shall name you a gentleman who is worthy of a place upon this floor.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: The matter of filling the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Kenny is one that had not occurred to my mind as being connected with the question of filling that from Merced. I perceive now that it has a bearing upon the matter in the minds of members of the Convention. I do not believe the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco to be a proper amendment, under parliamentary rules, to a motion to fill the vacancy from Merced, and upon an appeal I shall be bound to vote against the ruling of the Chair that the motion to fill the vacancy from San Francisco is properly an amendment to the motion to fill the vacancy from Merced. But I say this, that while that is my opinion, it is simply in regard to the order of things, and that whenever members of this body from San Francisco nominate any man to fill the vacancy made by the death of Mr. Kenny, and guarantee to this body that the candidate is a proper man for the place, I will recognize the so called Workingmen of San Francisco as having a majority in this body from that city, and shall vote readily and cheerfully for the man that they nominate. I shall vote that the vacancy be filled, in the first instance, and that it be filled, in the second instance, by the man they nominate. There is no desire to get a vote one way nor the other in this matter; and I have no doubt that all my friends, and all those who are acquainted with Mr. Howard, feel as I do in regard to that; that when the people of San Francisco ask to have a vacancy filled that we shall take the opinions of these men as entirely satisfactory to us. The gentlemen from San Francisco, who by all right and precedent are to be regarded as the representatives of that city and county, shall have my vote for any man they name to fill any vacancy that has occurred or shall occur in their representation here. I say there is nothing at all in the line of gaining an additional vote one way or the other, and I cannot say in what direction the vote of the person that I nominate to fill the vacancy from Merced and Mariposa will be given, except from mere inference, from a knowledge of his life and character for many years. I have had no pledge, no assurances upon the subject at all. I simply know him as a business man, as an old Californian, who knows, or ought to know, as much about the wants of the people as anybody else, and who can be trusted to exercise his judgment properly, honestly, and well in assisting this body to conclude the labors that are before them. The main object for which I have spoken this is to assure members of this Convention that there is no claptrap, that there is nothing to be sprung at all, and if they want more time than until to-morrow at two o'clock, let them make it Wednesday, or Thursday, if there is anything to investigate. If there is anything to investigate, all right. But if there is nothing to be suspected as being wrong, why then, having accepted the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Cruz that we proceed to an election to-morrow, at two o'clock, I hope that may be done. But simply as a technical matter and nothing else, I do not see how a motion to fill a vacancy from Mariposa and Merced has any connection whatever with a motion to fill a vacancy from some other place, and I do not understand that a motion to fill the vacancy from San Francisco is a matter cognate to the motion to fill the vacancy from Merced and Mariposa; but it does not matter, in a practical sense, for if the decision of the Chair be sustained, I shall certainly vote with the gentlemen from San Francisco in regard to filling their vacancy, if they wish it filled, and shall vote for the candidate they name when they name him.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I wish to set the gentleman's heart at rest by informing him that we seek not to interfere with his filling the vacancy at all, but that the question of vacancy having been raised, and there being still other vacancies to fill, that it is entirely proper that an amendment be made to the motion to go into an election on a certain day to fill other or all vacancies. We seek not to interfere with filling the vacancy from Merced, but we desire to fill the other vacancy at the same time. But in regard to the hypercriticisms of the gentleman from El Dorado, I do not see why he should be so wonderfully hypercritical as to whether the people of San Francisco want to fill the vacancy. It is enough that the Convention has the power, and it should be enough for the gentleman from El Dorado that the gentlemen from San Francisco indicate their wish. If he wants to vote against it let him do so. If he wishes to oppose filling the vacancy, let him undertake it if he wants to.

MR. LARKIN. I will support it if the people of San Francisco wish it.

MR. HEISKELL offered the following as an amendment:

Resolved, That the Convention, on Tuesday, at two o'clock, proceed to fill the vacancies caused by the deaths of J. M. Strong, of Merced and Mariposa, and B. F. Kenny, of San Francisco.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz. I accept that amendment.

MR. WICKES. I move that the whole matter be indefinitely postponed.

MR. PROUTY. I second the motion.

The motion was lost.

MR. NOEL. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Howard, Smith, of Santa Clara, Evey, and Rhodes.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Heiskell.

Adopted.

THE CHAIR. The question recurs on the adoption of the amendment as amended.

Adopted.

RESOLUTION.

MR. BEERSTECHER offered the following:

Resolved, That speakers shall confine themselves to the immediate subject under consideration. The report of standing committees shall be considered by sections, and the speaking shall be confined to the immediate section under consideration.

MR. LARKIN. I move the adoption of the resolution.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I offer this resolution because I believe that we can get along with the business much faster if the speakers are confined to the immediate section under consideration. When the report of a committee comes in here in the shape of an article of the Constitution, speakers getting up here traverse over all the sections, and speak, perhaps, fifteen or thirty minutes, and then when the separate sections come up they can speak to the separate sections. This resolution will confine every speaker to the immediate subject, the section under consideration. Gentlemen have been called to order here as not speaking to the subject under consideration, and the Chair has been required to rule, by reason of the existing rules of order, that in the Committee of the Whole gentlemen could speak upon any subject, whether it was pertinent to the question under consideration or not. I think if we do this we will certainly save a vast amount of time.

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: I wish to ask the gentleman whether he would have any objection to amending the resolution so that the Chairman of the committees would have the privilege of traversing the whole report?

MR. BEERSTECHER. There will be no objection to his adding that.

MR. JONES. I move as an amendment that Chairmen of committees may traverse the whole subject.

MR. LARKIN. There is no necessity for that amendment. The house is willing to concede to Chairmen that privilege at any time.

MR. NOEL. I rise to a point of order on the resolution. The resolution proposes to change a standing rule of this house, which cannot be done except by one day's notice.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is well taken. The amendment is out of order.

MR. HUESTIS. I suggest that there is no need of the amendment. It is already in the rules.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I take an appeal from the——

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Tinnin in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Chinese.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

MR. STEELE. I rise to a point of order. I see that it is the custom of various members on this floor to leave their seats and go nearer the desk to speak, to the disadvantage of those who set back here. Rule Forty-one says: "Every member, when about to speak, shall rise and respectfully address the President, shall confine himself to the question under debate, and avoid personality, and shall sit down when he has finished. No member shall speak out of his place without leave of the President." I move that the rule be strictly enforced after this.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read the first amendment to section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Asiatic coolieism, being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited in this State, and all contracts for coolie labor are null and void. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to the penalties and punishments provided in the law of Congress against the importers of African slaves. In all trials under State jurisdiction for violations of this section, the jury shall be the judge of the law and the facts in each case. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

MR. MILLER. Mr. Chairman: This amendment seems to be against coolieism—that coolieism is a kind of slavery. I would like the gentleman to explain what he means by coolieism.

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I will state to the gentleman that in some of the ablest debates in Congress Mr. Sargent made one of the ablest arguments that was made, I presume, at any time, and he referred to the term coolie very freely; he referred to the Chinese being here in the form of coolies; that there was no doubt but what they were coolies. I presume, as I interpret it, that it means really Chinese slaves. I presume the gentleman will not deny that that is what they really are, used in the sense that they land on this coast. And Mr. Sargent particularly, in his argument, speaks of them in that respect, as Chinese coolies; in other words, Chinese slaves. He referred to the slavery system existing in this State on account of the Chinese being brought here by those who were desirous of making money, and particularly by the Six Chinese Companies, and I did not think there was any doubt as to what the word coolie meant, and I think it is a proper word to be used in this case with reference to the Chinese in this State—that is, that they are Chinese slaves.

REMARKS OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. Chairman: If coolieism means slavery, or is a synonymous term with slavery, then there is no necessity for any such provision as this, because slavery cannot exist in the United States. The Constitution of the United States forbids it. But I think the definition of the word coolie by the gentleman is hardly correct. The word coolie, as I understand it, had its origin in India, and means a porter, or, as applied to Chinese in this country, it means a laborer. It is not a word of such definite meaning, or the word coolieism would not be a word of such definite meaning, as could properly be placed in a Constitution. If the gentleman desires a prohibition against slavery in any form, I have no kind of objection, but I think in making a Constitution we ought to certainly approximate, in the use of words, something like certainty. I think that the section as it originally stood would be much preferable to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry. I believe on Saturday we struck out all this section after the word "power" in the fourth line. Notice was given at that time of a motion to reconsider the vote by which that part of the section was stricken out. I do not know whether it is the intention of the gentleman who gave the notice to make the motion or not.

MR. CROSS. It is my intention.

MR. MILLER. Then I have a word or two to say in respect to this section. The next four lines after the word "power," read as follows: "It shall provide for their exclusion from residence or settlement in any portion of the State it may see fit, or from the State, and provide suitable methods, by their taxation or otherwise, for the expense of such exclusion." Now, the substance of that portion of the section is included in section five, which has already been agreed upon, and if we were to adopt that portion of this section it would probably be necessary to strike out section five, because it would be unnecessary to place in the Constitution two sections or paragraphs meaning the same thing. Further on it reads: "It shall prescribe suitable penalties for the punishment of persons convicted of introducing them within forbidden limits. It shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for their removal without the limits of such cities and towns." Now, there can be no great objection made to the latter part of this section. It is merely the intention of it, I think, that the Legislature should have the power to delegate to incorporated cities the power to abate the nuisance; that is, to say that the Legislature may delegate to the incorporated cities the power to declare any particular quarter or portion of that city a nuisance and abate it. Take for example Chinatown of San Francisco. The municipal authorities, as the law now stands, could not, perhaps, declare the whole of Chinatown to be a nuisance and abate it. They would be obliged to proceed against the individual to make a case against each particular house, or each particular Chinaman, and remove or abate the nuisance in that manner. I think the intention of this was whether it can be done under this section, or whether the intention fails, I am not exactly prepared to say; but I think the intention of this part of this section was to confer upon the incorporated cities the power to declare the Chinese quarter, so called, in any city or town, a nuisance, and abate it; that is to say, remove these people who create this nuisance by their vile habits and their conduct generally, outside the limits of the city. I cannot see any great objection to that; and if section five were stricken out I should not object, but would be in favor of this section as it was originally drawn instead of section five.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'in all trials under State jurisdiction for a violation of this section the jury shall be the judge of the law and the fact in each case.'"

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: As there are some gentlemen who will vote for the amendment if we strike out these words, being a little sensitive on the libel matter, that is, claiming that these should be stricken out of the Constitution, and I claim that they should be left in, I am willing to let it stand as the law is in other cases, so that I shall accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Diego, Mr. Blackmer.

MR. BLACKMER. Then the section will read:

"Asiatic coolieism, being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited in this State; and all contracts for coolie labor are null and void. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to the penalties and punishments provided in the law of Congress against the importers of African slaves. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

REMARKS BY MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: I do not know that I should have had anything to say upon this proposition, were it not for the disagreement, as to the definition of the word coolie, between the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Miller, and the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry. Now, let me premise by saying that it seems to me that no man has made his views more clear, or has maintained a more just and consistent course, than has the Chairman of this committee. If any man has failed to understand the real intention of the Chairman, or has failed to see that he has pursued a consistent course, then I cannot understand what he has failed to say. It seems to me that the course of the Chairman, from first to last, has been just and consistent. After listening to him closely, I understand him to be a careful constitutional lawyer. If I understand his position it is this: that while he feels anxious to abate this Chinese curse, he is equally anxious to act within what seems to him constitutional limits, as fixed by the Constitution of the United States. Now, this word coolieism, here introduced, it seems to me, has, among those who are familiar with this Chinese question in its later phases, a well defined meaning. I think the word has its origin as the Chairman stated, or very nearly so; yet this word has come now to have a very definite meaning, and is used with as exact a meaning as almost any term. Now, sir, the word slavery is not a synonymous term. Coolieism is a contract by which the Mongolian is imported from his native country to some foreign country, there to work a certain period of time to pay his passage. Now, that is the meaning of coolieism, as treated even in our popular magazines—a word which has come to have, in our literature, with regard to the Chinese, especially, a definite meaning. If a Chinaman pays his own way to the United States, or to the British Colonies, or to Australia, and there goes to work, receiving his own pay, he is not a coolie. But if under a contract, made previous to his importation, he engages to work a long period of years for his importation price, then, as I understand this clause, he is a coolie. They exist in the British Colonies and Australia, and they are numerous in California. A large portion of them have worked out their time. A large portion of them here are not coolies. We have come by some means to use the word coolie for Mongolian. Just how the word has come in use here I do not know. In California our Chinese have already passed the period of coolieism. I think the period of coolieism is about six years. That is, a Chinaman from Hongkong is brought from China under a contract that, in consideration of being landed here, he will work a period of six years, and pay all, or a certain portion of all, that he earns during that time to those who import him, but during that time the latter will have absolute care of him, take care of him in sickness, etc.

The Six Companies bring nearly all of the Chinamen here under such contracts. As a rule, those who want to come here go to the agents of these companies and make their arrangements with those agents. When they come over here they find out that it is a hard bargain, that they have made a hard bargain, and by the time their period of coolieism expires a large portion of them are used up. If we put this in the Constitution we shall be doing this race an act of justice, to say that these contracts should not be binding upon them when they reach our soil, for it is a stage of slavery, although not involuntary slavery, because they sign these contracts of coolieism. Now, if we pass an Act or adopt a constitutional provision which shall make these contracts of coolieism void, then I think we will interfere with the importation of Chinese in this way, that the companies will not bring them here if the law of this State is such that they are no longer bound by these coolie contracts; and I will attempt to say that they are very hard contracts, such as we would not allow an American citizen to be bound by; and these contracts are the very means of bringing nearly all of the Chinese to this State that come here.

MR. MILLER. Does the gentleman believe that the word "coolieism" has such a well defined meaning that a Court could determine what it meant?

MR. CROSS. I think it could. I do not think it is so much a word in law as it is in this particular branch of affairs. Now, one word as to the remarks of General Miller as to this section and section five. It seems to me that there is quite a difference between the latter part of section seven and the section five of which the gentleman speaks.

MR. MILLER. The first four lines.

MR. CROSS. Section five is as follows: "No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States, shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution." Section seven says: "It shall provide for their exclusion from residence or settlement in any portion of the State it may see fit, or from the State, and provide suitable methods, by their taxation, or otherwise, for the expense of such exclusion." It seems to me that we have three points to attempt to reach in this matter; whether we shall gain them, is really a question which we might consider, but I feel bound to make the attempt. One is to prevent their coming, by an attempt to prevent immigration; next, adopting such provisions, not amounting to direct prohibition, as will discourage their coming; and third, adopting such regulations as will make them less injurious to the interests of the State, and less liable to come in contact with our civilization when they are here. Section five is a direct prohibition to their coming; and I will say that I have some doubt as to whether it is not in violation of the Constitution of the United States. I mean an honest, unrebellious attempt to have it determined as between the State and the United States. This portion of section seven is this: that there are places in the United States more dangerous to have them reside than in other places. Two years ago there came the scourge of diphtheria, and the deaths without exception were confined to the families and children who lived in the neighborhood directly surrounding Chinatown. Dr. Caples and those who are physicians here will understand that directly in that vicinity were the places where the scourge took death to almost every individual that was attacked, and yet other portions of the city located in the same way, but not near Chinatown, were entirely untouched by it. Now this section provides that the Legislature may provide for their exclusion from the city to such localities as they see fit: and that they may require them not to settle in such places. It may provide for excluding them from the State. I am not sure that the word would be more apt if it had said "deport" them from the State.

MR. MILLER. The treaty permits of their residence in the State, and as I looked at it they could not be excluded from settling in the State.

MR. CROSS. Perhaps it would have been a little better if the word "settlement" had come first. "Residence" is an intention to remain. But the words in a Constitution do not always come as they should, and so this word "residence" has come first. It says it may exclude them from residence. It seems to me that this reaches a point not reached by section five. They may prevent them from acquiring a settlement or being settled, it may break up their residence and compel them to go. Now, sir, if the Burlingame treaty were abrogated to-day, and we had none of these provisions, the Chinese could come and settle here. But suppose we had the fifth section, that there should not be any more immigration, the result would be that we would have about one hundred and twenty thousand of them in the State, but no more could come. Now we want more, that we may be freed from the injuries of those who are here; that we may be permitted to exclude them from the localities where they may be most injurious. If the treaty should be repealed, and this Constitution adopted, then we would have these provisions so as to go right to work and protect ourselves against those who are here. The fifth section provides that no more shall come, and this portion of the seventh section provides the means by which we can regulate those that are here.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time is up.

MR. FREUD. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry, will be adopted. It embodies in it measures which, if ratified by the people, may tend to repress this Chinese immigration. In regard to the word "coolie," it has at present attained a well defined signification. Moreover, it has been used in some of the various States of the Union. Section one, of article twenty-two, of the Constitution of Texas, uses the word, and prohibits the importation of coolies; so we see that it has obtained a signification that can be construed by the Courts.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I will merely take two or three minutes. After hearing the explanation of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross, I am inclined to concur with him in his views, but I am afraid that the amendment of the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry, does not cover it. The idea is to nullify these contracts by which aliens bind themselves to be transported to this country and work for a certain length of time to pay for their transportation; that these contracts shall not be binding on them whenever they come here. But if we do that it seems to me that we should frame a section directly to the point, and expressing that such contracts shall be null and void, and those who enter into those contracts when they come here should be free from them. But if this is coolieism, and I will admit that I am not very well versed as to the meaning of the word, then coolieism, in my mind, is not slavery. If this is coolieism, then thousands of California miners were coolies. I know of my own knowledge hundreds; I have no doubt thousands of men came here in eighteen hundred and forty-nine, eighteen hundred and fifty, and eighteen hundred and fifty-one under contracts. Some of them were honest enough to fulfill their contracts, and I do not know whether such contracts are immoral or evil. But if we want to annul such contracts, I will ask the gentleman if, instead of calling that slavery, and then, in a roundabout way prohibiting it, it would not be better to say directly what we mean. Slavery is already prohibited. Anybody who comes here as a slave, the minute he strikes American soil he is free, under the Constitution and laws of the United States and this State, and saying that anything is slavery does not make it so. Still, I have no objection to prohibiting this importation of coolies or Chinamen in this manner if we can, and I am inclined to think we can, read it in that way; but I would suggest if it would not be better to frame a section and specify it in so many words, and that it shall be a crime to enforce them. I am not sure that it would not be a good idea to go that far; but name the contracts. I am afraid the Courts will say if coolieism is slavery, then the contracts are not coolieism.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. Chairman: As the amendment offered by Mr. Blackmer was accepted, I understand that the amendment is now subject to amendment, and I offer the following amendment to the amendment:

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State, for the removal of Chinamen without the limits of such cities and towns, or for their location within prescribed portions of those limits."

MR. WINANS. Mr. Chairman: As I understand while I was temporarily absent on Saturday afternoon, and was about to be made the object of a peculiar visitation by the Sergeant-at-Arms, the Committee of the Whole struck out all of section seven after the word "power." Now, my amendment looks to a restoration, in a modified form, and with more extended application, of a portion of that section. By proposing it in the form in which I submit it, I leave out that portion which provides for their exclusion from the State. As that is a matter involving legitimate debate as to its constitutionality, it would be well to present that separately on the reconsideration, and meet the proposition squarely, face to face, upon the constitutional idea. But, in the meantime, if that should perish from the constitutional scruples of certain gentlemen upon this floor, which I think, in many instances, are unduly strained and carried beyond the reasonable boundaries: still I wish, in deference to that idea, to protect from its application the section which I now introduce in the form of an amendment, and which is clearly exempt from any constitutional inhibition or objection. Now, sir, in regard to the term coolie, I consider that it is sufficiently definite to answer the purposes of this section or this amendment. It does not mean slavery in its actual form, pure and simple; it does not mean such slavery as constituted the system under which the African was the subject of his owners. As I understand, it constitutes a system of peonage. I conceive that the Courts can always determine the meaning of words by giving to the word the general and received acceptation which belongs to it at the time. I do not conceive, therefore, that there would be any difficulty in determining the meaning of the word, which would become a question of fact for the determination of the jury, provided the Court was unable to give a definite meaning to the term. Considering that the amendment has that objection, I desire to have added, if the committee will consent, this other provision, which is, in my mind, of great importance.

Sir, these men not only come among us, but they are arrogant and aggressive in their habits. They locate in the very central parts of cities; they locate upon the most desirable lands, and where they come, population begins to recede, and falls back as the waves of the sea before the blasts of the tornado, or as the rush of men before the invasion of a pestilence. Now, sir, I wish that the corporate authorities of the various cities in this State should have the power, which they do not now possess, to regulate this population, and place it either without the cities altogether, where it is such an evil as requires that extremity to remedy it, or place them within such limits as to protect the rest of the population, and allow the rest of the interests to thrive. Sir, not only is their presence in those portions of the cities which they choose and select, injurious to the working men, but to the interests of real estate holders; and wherever they come property depreciates just as surely as life falls before the blast of the destroyer.

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I accept the amendment. I think the amendment makes my amendment fully complete. I think that, in order to make it more effective, the amendment of the gentleman is a good one, and therefore I will be willing to accept it. Without referring to the evils of the presence of the Chinese, that have been referred to so often, I would say we all realize the necessity of the most stringent provisions in our Constitution to endeavor to remedy the evil so far as we possibly can. And if section five of the report of the Committee on Chinese should be held nugatory, then section seven, as provided by myself, and the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, would stand. There is no doubt about its constitutionality; that is, that the State has the power, as a matter of course, to remedy evils of this character; that as far as slavery is concerned of course it can be punished under the laws of Congress; that Chinese coolieism being a form of human slavery, we can punish those who bring coolies to this State. They shall be punished the same as provided by the law of Congress for the punishment of those who bring African slaves. There is no trouble about establishing the fact that they are Chinese coolies; that they are imported here under a form of contract, which in its nature partakes of human slavery. I had included a clause that the jury should be the judge of the law and the facts, but consented to strike that out to meet the views of some gentlemen. I thought it would be a good provision, yet, on reflection, I had no doubt but that the jury would in a case of this character, when it was brought before them under the proper instructions of the Court — I had no doubt but what a conviction would be had, and was willing to have that provision stricken out. Without taking up the time of the committee, I believe we all realize the necessity of this amendment; that so far as section five is concerned, there being a doubt as to whether they can become eligible to become citizens of the United States; there being a doubt whether Chinese would be excluded under that section—a great many holding that it is possible or probable that Chinese may be naturalized, and may enjoy all the rights and privileges of citizens—if the higher Courts of the country, the Supreme Court, should hold that the Chinese may properly become naturalized, when a case should come from a Circuit Court, or a District Court, then section five would be null and void, and section seven, if this Convention should adopt it, would stand, and we would be able to reach this evil. It would at least cover three fourths of the Chinamen in this State who are held here under a form of slavery; and we would be able to get rid of these, and prevent any more of that class coming to this State. I believe that in that way we can prevent the evil in a measure, if we cannot wholly remove it from the State. I think the committee should agree upon that amendment, and I do hope and trust that it will become a part of the Constitution of this State.

MR. MILLER. Mr. Chairman: It is important that we should understand now how this section will read. As I understand the amendment of the gentleman from Sierra, as amended by the gentleman from San Francisco, it is intended to take the place of that which was stricken out on Saturday.

MR. WINANS. Yes.

MR. MILLER. If the gentleman is correct in that statement, that the word "coolieism" has such a definite signification as to enable the Courts to determine what it is, I see no objection to the amendment, and it makes the section consistent and harmonious with those that have been adopted. I see no objection to the adoption of the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. HARRISON.

MR. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman: When the English Government done away with slavery in her dominions they had a system of coolieism in the West India Islands. They brought negroes there from other parts of the world and made them serve out a term of years for the advantage of bringing them there — for their passage money — notwithstanding there were free negroes in the island; and I think the Island of Bermuda is one. The free negroes rebelled against this. It throwed them out of employment; and the case was referred to the Home Government, and they declared it slavery on the face of it, and stopped it. The question arose again in the Colony of Queensland, in Australia. I happened to be there at the time mining. They introduced the same system; they fetched Kanakas there—negroes that were called Kanakas—to work on cotton plantations, and the large sheep stations. They sent agents to the islands down here in the Pacific and decoyed these men out there, promised them large wages, and these men not understanding the value of money, in reality they agreed to go there for four pounds a year, just twenty dollars of American money. The white people there got up and objected to this. It threw all white men out of labor, and this case was referred to the Home Government also. I believe it came before what is known as the Privy Council, but as it is over twenty years since I left England I forget what department it came before. They declared it slavery on the face of it, and they stopped it. And it is only a few years ago, I see in a San Francisco paper, where there was a vessel captured having a cargo of the Kanakas bound for that colony. The captain and other officers were thrown into jail, and the Kanakas sent home to their island, and the captain punished, and I believe his term of punishment is not up yet. I think we can assert nothing in our Constitution too strong to meet this case. As to being in conflict with the Constitution of the United States, I think there will be no trouble about that. The proposition of Colonel Barnes was pretty strong, but I do not see that the papers have anything to say to it. They say that he has raised the issue, and that is all he has done. I believe that the Burlingame treaty will be modified and nothing else, and that this coolieism will be stopped. If the white people is driven to desperation I don't know what they might do. They might do what they have done before under similar circumstances.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I think the section now is a very excellent section; the whole section as it now reads, amended.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to come in after Mr. Winans' amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after Mr. Winans' amendment the following: 'It shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution.'"

MR. FREUD. I second the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. I understand that Mr. Winans' amendment was accepted by the mover of the amendment.

MR. WINANS. Mr. Chairman: I wish to insert in my amendment the word "Chinese" in place of the word "Chinamen."

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection. The gentleman will have leave.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: If the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry, is adopted, I shall vote against the whole section, because that makes the importation of coolies punishable according to the Act of Congress, which is death. We used to have a phrase in Texas about running a thing into the ground, and I am opposed to that.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I cordially agree with the sentiments of General Howard. I believe we have already passed in Committee of the Whole a sufficient restriction on this question, and the idea of repeating and repeating what we have already asserted seems to me to be absurd. I believe in adopting the section as it was amended on Saturday, by striking out all after the word "power." That, with the other sections adopted in Committee of the Whole, covers the whole question, and gives the Legislature all the power that they may have within their jurisdiction, under Congress and under the treaty laws, to control and regulate this matter. I think any further additions to our work on this article is surplusage, and will only cumber it up, burden it, and add to the probabilities of swamping the whole thing.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I may perhaps be mistaken about the punishment being death, but I am opposed to the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I do not agree with my colleague from Los Angeles, that by inserting such amendments as commend themselves to this committee, we will weigh down and injure the Constitution. We are dealing with a very serious and intricate question, and if we can surround it in every possible manner, both directly and indirectly, with a fire that will destroy it, we ought to do it. Now, every gentleman on this floor, with one exception, has pronounced the presence of the Chinese in this State an evil and a curse that ought to be abated. The people of this State feel it severely. We know that it has generally been supposed among the people that our power in this respect was very limited; that we were hampered by the Federal Constitution and by the treaty, but since we have been in this Convention, and have discussed the question in all its bearings; since we have heard the members upon the powers of the State; since we have seen that some of our ablest lawyers have taken the stand that the States have the power; I say that we should take the step to test this power; that we should provide every means, direct and indirect, for the purpose of putting down and curing this great evil. The amendment of the gentleman from Sierra possesses great merit, in my opinion. It brings up this question in another of its forms, and I may say, in one of its most pernicious and ugliest forms, that of coolieism.

I look upon coolieism as being even a worse form of slavery than slavery itself, as it existed with the African race. It reaches the same end that African slavery reached, but in a cheaper way. It gives one man or company of men a power over the services of their fellows for a series of years. Then it is invested with peculiarities which render that power perpetual, and it is safe to say that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred where a coolie contract has been entered into, that the coolie, from the vices which grow up and which are inherent in the system, never frees himself from the shackles. We know that peonage, which is a cognate system, has existed in Mexico; that it has been in a few families for centuries, and that a class of people exist there now known as peons, attached to the estate of the hidalgos, working out the ransom which their ancestors incurred. It is one of those things which grows upon that which it feeds on. It becomes so imbedded into the system, it becomes so irremediable, that the longer a peon is in that position the longer he and his posterity must remain in it. It creates vice itself. It encourages the vice of gambling, which pervades the vice of peonage. I am glad that the gentleman from Sierra has thought of this subject, and has so ably presented thought in his amendment. If we surround this subject with all the prohibitions we possibly can; if we make it difficult, or even impossible for the Chinese to remain upon our soil; if, while they are here, we prevent them from enjoying all the immunities which they now enjoy, and freeze them out; if we render their labor unprofitable to their masters, we will help to cut the Gordian knot. Then, again, I say that the power of the State is supreme for exclusion. I say it, and eminent gentlemen on this floor have said it, and produced the authorities to show it. Then I say we would be false to our trust and false to ourselves, unless we place certain provisions in here that can be tested and can be decided in the highest Courts of our land, so that we can draw the lines.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the amendment will be adopted, because it really means something. Those who are opposed to doing anything of course they will object, and they ought to vote against it; but those who are in favor of doing something effective ought to vote for the section as amended now. All of the amendments are excellent.

REMARKS OF MR. THOMPSON.

MR. THOMPSON. Mr. Chairman: In my mind this question of Chinese immigration is of greater and more vital importance than any other that will come before this Convention during our deliberations, and yet when we look at it in an intellectual and legal point of view, we see at a glance that our powers are very limited to deal with this great subject in the way we would all like to without coming in direct conflict with the Constitution of the United States, or some of the provisions of the Burlingame treaty. Yet, Mr. President, I am willing to go as far as any gentleman on this floor by way of police, sanitary, criminal, or vagrant regulations, or refusing to license this class of aliens to carry on any trade or business whatever, if we can in any way, by statute or otherwise, prevent the same. And I would go further and continue to hamper them in every way that human ingenuity could invent, so that the "heathen Chinee" himself would see that it was getting too hot for him to attempt to try to make a living here, and would consequently leave for his own or some other more genial climate for him at least. There has been so much said on this question, Mr. President, that I shall not attempt to delineate to this Convention all the numerous causes why the vast hordes of this insignificant and loathsome people should be prohibited from swarming amongst us in untold thousands, unless the powers at Washington provide, and that quickly, some sure and wholesome measures to prevent it. Therefore, I shall be brief, and allude only to a few of the most injurious and evil consequences that this people are bringing upon us in various ways. I hold, Mr. President, that unlimited Chinese immigration is a blight and a curse to our fair State, from the fact that it is in the first place coming in direct competition with the free labor of our own white population, to that extent that it will ere long be next to impossible for a white man or woman to procure work at all, even at the present starving prices of Chinese wages. You may say that we have already arrived at this state of affairs pretty generally throughout the length and breadth of this great State. It requires no argument to convince any candid mind of this fact. If it does, go with me through the streets of our cities, look at the hundreds of poor, anxious, wan, careworn faces of the laboring classes, seeking, day after day, in vain for an opportunity to get a day's work at any price, and unable to obtain it. Look at our cities again in another and more humiliating aspect either by gas or daylight, anywhere on the Pacific Slope; visit the public brothels, behold the woful sights that meet you there. Why, you see scores and hundreds of once beautiful, lovely, and virtuous females who have been driven to the vilest sinks of iniquity, and the lowest grade of female degradation, and shame, all for the want of the opportunity of making an honest living in the numerous vocations that these Chinese hordes are in every direction usurping and taking away from them. Behold the spectacle! Is it not enough to make one's heart shudder to contemplate the scene? Again, look at it in another serious aspect and see the hundreds of youths who have contracted from the above, and the miserable Chinese prostitutes, the most loathsome and almost incurable diseases that humanity is heir to, in addition to having their minds and morals corrupted peradventure beyond all future reformation.

Mr. President, how, I ask, in the name of humanity, can we improve this painful state of affairs, under existing circumstances, with the continued influx of unlimited Chinese immigration, with the treaty with that province staring us in the face? I see but one way, and that is by way of memorial to Congress, couched in the most respectful, yet impressive terms, the ingenuity of this Convention can devise, requesting them to take immediate action. If we cannot get relief in this way, I, for one, have not the faith of a grain of mustard seed that we can accomplish it in any way that has been proposed from the other side without coming in conflict with the Constitution of the United States, as I have before indicated. If we cannot accomplish anything in this way, anything that this Convention can do more than to adopt the first and perhaps the third section of the report of the committee would be vain and absolutely futile, and it would be only a matter of time when the Supreme Court would reverse all that we adopt beyond these sections.

As for State rights in the premises, I consider that but an empty bubble, long since exploded and settled by the sword, and confirmed by Chief Justice Grant, with one hundred thousand Associate Justices standing around him at Appomattox Court House, as has been well said by the gentleman from Marin. I hope, therefore, we shall hear no more foolish arguments of this kind, but abide the time that we may get relief from national authority. Now, Mr. President, I will add, in conclusion, that I do not believe that any gentleman on this floor is more opposed to the unlimited immigration of Chinese than I am, and I have never, in the twenty years that I have lived in this State, given a Chinaman a day's work, nor do I ever expect to. If everybody would do this it would go a long way towards removing this incubus; but everybody will not do it, so we are cut off from this source. I would like to, if I could, vote with my San Francisco colleagues for all of the most stringent propositions of the committee, if I could without it appearing puerile and silly; but as it comes, in my mind, in conflict with the national government, I must refrain from doing so, as I believe, with many others, that such a course would delay the object we all wish to attain. But if Congress does not grant us the relief required by prohibiting the Burlingame treaty, I fear, as a great statesman has said before me on another subject, some future bard may sing of California in this wise:

"The star of Hope shone brightest in the west,
The star of Liberty the last the best.
It, too, has set on her golden shore,
And life, hope, and freedom light up earth no more."

MR. WHITE. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Ayers, Freud, Belcher, and Lampson.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The first question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Ayers.

The amendment was adopted, on division, by a vote of 47 ayes to 30 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs on the adoption of the amendment as amended.

Adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. Are there any further amendments to section seven?

MR. BELCHER. Mr. Chairman: Is an amendment to the part which is adopted in order now?

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir; an addition.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. Chairman: The part adopted refers to an Act of Congress. It seems to me that whenever we legislate here we should legislate for ourselves, and not refer to the legislation of another government and another system of laws. The amendment which I have sent up is to this effect: Strike out the words "subject to the penalties and punishments provided in the law of Congress against the importation of African slaves," and insert "subject to such penalties as may be prescribed by the Legislature." Now, the Act of Congress provides as the punishment for that offense a fine not exceeding seven thousand dollars and imprisonment not less than three years nor more than seven years. That is the Act of Congress. Something might be said about that penalty. It is said that coolieism is the letting of labor or a contract by which a party agrees to perform services for a certain length of time. If the penalty prescribed is imprisonment at hard labor for not less than three years, it would seem a pretty severe penalty, and the penalty must be in proportion to the offense. Now, this penalty is the penalty applied for stealing men; but I object to it principally because it is a reference to the laws of another government, another system of statutes not under the control of this State, either its Legislature or this Convention. This law may be changed wholly. Instead of having this penalty, it might be repealed by Congress. I think we should refer here to such penalties as the Legislature may prescribe, and not such as the Congress of the United States may prescribe. The amendment, I think, should be adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'subject to the penalties and punishments provided in the law of Congress against the importation of African slaves,' and insert the words 'subject to such penalties as may be prescribed by the Legislature.'"

MR. WINANS. Mr. Chairman: I entirely concur in the views expressed by the honorable delegate from the Third Congessional District. I think we should do our own legislation and impose our own penalties. This objection struck me as a forcible one to the proposition of the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry, when it was introduced, but I was not willing to oppose it then or suggest any change, because I was fearful that in the similitude of amendments the main proposition might be sacrificed and lost, but inasmuch as the proposition is now before us and has been adopted, I suggest that it would be directly in the line of right enactment for us to remove that one objectionable provision, and leave the matter entirely to State action and State control.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. HUESTIS. I would like to hear section seven, as adopted, read.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared herein to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. Asiatic coolieism being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited in this State, and all contracts for coolie labor are null and void. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to such penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State, for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities and towns, or their location within prescribed portions of those limits, and it shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I believe we are now on section eight.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 8. Public officers within this State are forbidden to employ Chinese in any capacity whatever. Violation of this provision shall be ground for removal from office; and no person shall be eligible to any office in this State who, at the time of election and for three months before, employed Chinese.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section eight——

MR. BLACKMER. I second the motion.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD. I move to strike out section eight, which I consider entirely inadmissible, and insert the following: "The Legislature shall have power to impose a special capitation or poll tax on resident Chinese." My own observation is that the collection of taxes will be the most efficient way of getting rid of resident Chinese. It is undoubtedly true that our officers are quite energetic in the collection of taxes, especially the taxes of Chinese. I hold the provision, under the decisions, to be entirely unobjectionable in point of law. Mr. Cooley says, on the third page of his book on taxation:

"The power of taxation is an incident of sovereignty and is coextensive with that of which it is an incident. All subjects, therefore, over which the sovereign power of the State extends, are, in its discretion, legitimate subjects of taxation; and this may be carried to any extent to which the government may choose to carry it. In its very nature it acknowledges no limits, and the only security against abuse must be found in the responsibility of the Legislature, which imposes the tax, to the constituency who are to pay it."

In relation to capitation taxes, the same authority states that there is really no limitation. Unless restrained by provisions of the Federal Constitution, the power of the State as to the mode, form, and extent of taxation is unlimited where the subjects to which it applies are within her jurisdiction. The Supreme Court of the United States, in a recent case—in the case of the State tax on foreign held bonds—says:

"Unless restrained by provisions of the Federal Constitution, the power of the State as to the mode, form, and extent of taxation is unlimited, where the subjects to which it applies are within her jurisdiction."

Our own Supreme Court has decided the same thing. Chief Justice Murray, in his opinion in the case of The People vs. Coleman, 4 Cal. Reports, 49, says:

"From this it follows that the power of the Legislature to tax trades, professions, and occupations, is a matter completely within the control, and, unless inhibited by the Constitution, eminently belonging to and resting in the sound discretion of the Legislature."

There may be possibly some conflict in our own State decisions about this matter, although I do not think there is much. In the case of The People vs. Naglee, 1 Cal., Mr. Justice Bennett, after reviewing the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, says:

"The power being conceded, the limitation and extent thereof must, as to subject-matter, persons, amounts, and times of payment, rest in the discretion of the government of each State; and if a State, enacting laws in pursuance of this acknowledged power, sees fit to impose the burden of taxation upon a portion of the persons within the sphere of its jurisdiction, and specially exempt others, its legislation, even though it might be unequal and unjust, would yet be no infringement of the Constitution of the United States."

For instance, we have a road tax law which holds the employer responsible for the tax, and I know that the employers of Chinese take the tax from their wages and pay the road tax. So I understand there is now a poll tax; and there is no doubt that the Legislature would have the power, under a provision of this sort, to levy such a tax upon resident Chinese as would make it profitable for him to go somewhere else.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. Chairman: I desire to know if it is the gentleman's opinion that section eight is unconstitutional.

MR. HOWARD. As it stands, I think so. I consider it unconstitutional, and very objectionable in every point of view.

MR. LAMPSON. Has the Legislature of this State the right to levy a capitation tax upon Chinese and not upon any other foreigner, under the treaty?

MR. HOWARD. The Supreme Court has held that way once and the other way another time; but there is no doubt that we would have the right to levy a different tax. Besides, so far as the treaty is concerned, I do not look upon the treaty, when it comes—and that is the fact in this case—when it comes to a tax imposed by the State on residents, that the treaty has anything to do with it.

MR. MILLER. How does this proposition of itself differ from the miners' license tax, authorized by the Legislature some time ago, and declared unconstitutional?

MR. HOWARD. Under the ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States, the miners' tax would be legal. In respect to the case of Lin Sing vs. Washburn, the majority of the Court held that it was unconstitutional, as interfering with commerce.

MR. MILLER. So I thought.

MR. HOWARD. A case obviously against the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. MILLER. Did not the Circuit Court of the United States, in San Francisco, decide that that tax was unconstitutional?

MR. HOWARD. My understanding is that it decided it under the Fifteenth or Fourteenth Amendment, and the Supreme Court of the United States has held since, I believe, that the Fifteenth Amendment applied only to freedmen.

MR. MILLER. I think the case of Jackson, Sheriff of Trinity County, was decided before the Fifteenth Amendment was adopted.

MR. HOWARD. I have not seen that case. I did not know that it was reported. There is no doubt that under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, we have a right to levy a discriminating tax; and so far as the State case is concerned, the case of Lin Sing vs. Washburn, the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Field is perfectly conclusive, and I think we might say of that decision as we do of the kangaroo, that the strength is in the tail.

MR. LARKIN. I would state that in the case of Jackson, Sheriff of Trinity County, in the United States District Court, it was decided that we could not proceed to collect that tax.

MR. HOWARD. That is not the law now; and when you cite a case you should cite some supreme tribunal.

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out all of section eight after the figure '8,' in the first line."

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. President: It occurs to me that there is no particular benefit to be derived from this section, and since they are here the Chinese must have labor. I can see no relief by driving them from one employment or calling to another. It appears to me that we are rather overdoing this thing. I think we have gone far enough. There is no good to be derived from this section and the next one, and I hope they will be stricken out.

MR. HOWARD. I rise to a point of order. Under a motion to strike out and insert, no motion to strike out is in order. There may be a division of the question called for.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair will sustain the point of order.

MR. MILLER. I call for a division of the question.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: If the proposition of the distinguished gentleman from Los Angeles is correct, we have a solution of this vexed question; and if the distinguished gentleman can show us that he is right, legally, we shall certainly be under infinite obligations to him, because it affords us an easy and complete, absolute, and radical solution of the whole question. We can get rid of the Chinaman, because we can tax him out of his rights, and out of his boots; and we would do it, too, but the trouble is, that we do not understand that the gentleman from Los Angeles is correct in his legal interpretation of the power with which we are invested. But I heartily and sincerely desire that he may be able to convince us that we have this exclusive power of taxation. For my part, I am unable to see that we have any such power; and it appears to me that the decision in the case of Sheriff Jackson, so far as it goes—it is true that it is not the decision of the great Supreme Court—but, so far as it goes, it shows conclusively to that extent that we have not this power of exclusive taxation, and I am heartily sorry that we have not got it.

MR. HOWARD. My proposition was to show that to Themis, not to Esculapius.

THE CHAIRMAN. A division of the question has been demanded. The first question is on the motion to strike out the section.

The motion prevailed.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the portion which is moved to be inserted in place of the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature shall have power to impose a special capitation or poll tax on resident Chinese."

The amendment was rejected, on a division, by a vote of 27 ayes to 54 noes.

MR. KLEINE. I offer an additional section, to take the place of section eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

"From and after the adoption of this Constitution, no Mongolian shall be allowed to have in his possession any firearms of any description, concealed or otherwise; and it shall be the duty of all county officers to enforce the law; and any and all such property found in any house or building occupied by any Chinese, in whole or in part, shall be seized. Any person selling any firearms to any Mongolian, under any pretense, shall be guilty of felony."

MR. NOEL. I rise to a point of order. The section was stricken out, and cannot be amended now.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. GRACE. Mr. Chairman: It is not often that I favor anything offered by Mr. Kleine, because he is a little too enthusiastic on the subject. He says to him it is a matter as solemn as death. In fact, it is a solemn matter with me. Now, Mr. Chairman, I wish to make a little statement. I remember that along last Summer there was a good deal of excitement, and I have to say that the Mayor of San Francisco tried to foist upon the State that the Workingmen's party was trying to instigate anarchy and riot in that city, and that that was not thought of by the party with which I have the honor to be connected. At that time it was intimated to me that the Chinese were armed in that city; that they were sold hatchets and bludgeons and instruments of warfare, for the purpose of defending themselves in case there was a riot. If there had been any riot there it would have been instigated there by those over whom the Workingmen's party had no control. I am opposed to arming any servile population, or any class, for the purpose of instigating anarchy; and I believe the best way is to adopt this resolution offered by Mr. Kleine.

MR. KLEINE. Mr. Chairman: I am aware that there are Chinamen in San Francisco armed; and to-day the Chinamen get muskets from white men. I know there are over forty thousand in the city all armed; and I think it is necessary to adopt this amendment.

MR. ROLFE. I offer a substitute for the amendment proposed.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Constitution of the United States and the laws and treaties made thereunder, so far as the same may conflict with the Constitution of this State, are hereby declared null and void, and any Judge of any Court who shall hold otherwise shall be punished by death or imprisoned for life."

MR. AYERS. I move to amend so as to read so far as they conflict with the laws of this State and the judgment of the mover of that substitute.

THE CHAIRMAN. The substitute is out of order. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Kleine.

MR. LARKIN. I move to lay the whole subject-matter on the table.

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 9. The exercise of the right of suffrage shall be denied to any person employing Chinese in this State, and it shall be a sufficient challenge that the person offering to vote is employing Chinese, or has employed them within three months next preceding the election.

MR. HOWARD. I move to strike out section nine.

Carried.

MR. BLACKMER. I move that the committee now rise, report this article back to the Convention, with the recommendation that it be printed.

MR. MILLER. Will the gentleman give way one moment?

MR. BLACKMER. I withdraw my motion.

MR. MILLER. I move that the committee rise, report this article back to the Convention, and recommend that nine hundred and sixty copies be printed of that part agreed upon.

MR. HOWARD. I move to amend that it be adopted.

MR. MILLER. My motion——

MR. HOWARD. You want the report of the Committee of the Whole adopted, don't you?

MR. MILLER. Yes, of course; my motion should include that.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is moved and seconded that the committee rise and report the article back to the Convention, with the recommendation that it be adopted as amended and printed.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have had under consideration the article on Chinese, have amended the same, and recommended its adoption as amended, and that it be printed.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M. President pro tem. Belcher in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

MILITARY AFFAIRS.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, for the purpose of considering the report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I move to amend by substituting the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. We ought to dispose of that first.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: With respect to the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, I desire to say that the report stands in its order on the general file. It will not be a lengthy matter, and I understand that even if the amendment of the gentleman should prevail, the Chairman of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation is not in a state of physical health to permit him entering upon the debate to-day; and after consultation it was thought best to make this motion to have this report taken up and considered to-day.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I think the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, is well enough, and certainly we ought to dispose of this report on revenue and taxation before the holidays. It is now the most important thing we have to consider, and I trust we will take it up to-day.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I have an amendment to the amendment. I move that the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation be made the special order, to be taken up immediately after the disposition of the report on military affairs. I make that motion.

MR. HOWARD. I don't know why it should be postponed till after the report of the Committee on Military Affairs is disposed of. Our military affairs are not of very great importance, and the subject of revenue and taxation is of the utmost importance.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: As far as I am personally concerned, it is utterly immaterial to me what time the report of my committee is considered. It will be utterly impossible for me to-day to participate in the discussion on the subject. The condition of my lungs is bad, and I have a very severe cough. Some days since an arrangement was made with the Committee on Legislative Department, by which the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation was to be considered after the disposition of the other question, as there were several questions embraced in the report that ought to be considered before the other was taken up. It was then generally understood that that report was not to be considered until after the report of the Legislative Committee was disposed of. That was the understanding with the Chairman of that committee, and several other committees, and I was under the impression that that was to be the order of procedure; but these other gentlemen are not here to-day. I hope, sir, in view of their absence, and the importance of having a full attendance, that the report of the Committee on Military Affairs will take precedence, and that the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation will not be taken up until to-morrow morning.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I would not object to that.

MR. BARNES. I object to the pressing of the motion. There is a motion before the Convention to take up the report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The motion is that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

MR. HOWARD. To that there was an amendment.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I arise to a point of order.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. BARNES. Rule Fifty-three provides: "All propositions and resolutions embracing matter proposed to be incorporated in the Constitution, reported by a standing or special committee, shall be read when reported, and shall be placed on a general file, to be kept by the Secretary, in the order in which they are reported. They shall be taken from the file and acted upon in the order in which they are placed thereon, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention; provided, that engrossed propositions and resolutions shall be placed at the head of the file in the order in which they are received," etc.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. It would be competent for the Convention to order any of these reports taken up specially.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I accept the modification proposed by the gentleman from Sacramento, to take up the report on Revenue and Taxation to-morrow.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The motion then is that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of taking up the report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

The President pro tem. in the chair.

THE SECRETARY read the report as follows:

ARTICLE VII.—MILITIA.

SECTION 1. Organizing and disciplining the militia.
2. Officers, how elected or appointed.
3. Removal of general officers.
4. Governor to be Commander-in-Chief, and to call out the militia.
5. Exemptions.
6. Provisions to be made for wounded and disabled members of militia.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall provide by law for organizing and disciplining the militia, in such manner as they may deem expedient, not incompatible with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such manner as the Legislature shall from time to time direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor.

SEC. 3. No general officer shall be removed from office except by the Senate, on the recommendation of the Governor, stating the grounds on which removal is recommended, or by a decision of a Court-martial in accordance with military custom. No officer of the militia shall ever be removed from office for political reasons.

SEC. 4. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia of the State. He shall have power to call them forth to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

SEC. 5. The officers, musicians, and members of the State militia, who comply with all military duties as provided by law, shall be entitled to the following privileges and exemptions, viz.: exemption from payment of poll tax, road tax, and head tax of every description; exemption from jury duty, and exemption from serving on any posse comitatus. All officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates, who have faithfully served in the military service of the State for seven consecutive years, and received the certificate of the Adjutant-General certifying the same, shall thereafter be exempted from further military or jury service, except in time of war.

SEC. 6. Every officer or member of the State militia, wounded or disabled in the service of the State, shall have reasonable expenses paid him; and the widows and children of members killed in the service of the State shall be provided for by the Legislature.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall provide by law for organizing and disciplining the militia in such manner as they may deem expedient, not incompatible with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

SPEECH OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I may be pardoned if I open this debate—if there is to be any debate—by referring to it in a general way, in the hope that perhaps the consideration of the facts, and of the legislation by which the General Government, and the State Governments elsewhere, have been governed, may induce a consideration of the question here such as its importance demands. I have felt at all times since my appointment on this committee—and I have had good reason to feel it—that it was considered by the Convention rather in the light of a joke, and whenever there was anything funny to be said, it was said upon this subject. Everybody knows how it has been treated, and what the results have been. Let us now proceed to consider it temperately and seriously, and in the spirit in which the government has always regarded it. And I desire to say that, as early as seventeen hundred and seventy-eight, in the Articles of Confederation—in article six, it was provided that every State shall always keep up a well regulated and well disciplined militia. That article says:

"Every State shall keep up a well regulated and disciplined militia, sufficiently armed and accoutered, and shall provide and constantly have ready for use, in public stores, a due number of field pieces and tents, and a proper quantity of arms, ammunition, and camp equipage."

After the revolution and the formation of the Confederacy of States, the subject was still considered one of at least sufficient importance to be inserted in the Constitution of the United States. Section eight, of article one, provides for this subject in prescribing the powers of Congress:

"To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

"To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress."

In addition to that I find in article two a declaration that a well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of free States, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed. Now, we know that this question was considered a very important one in the early organization of the government, and it is no less important now than it was then, because the people had their choice then as they have now between a well organized State militia in the several States and a standing army maintained by the central government, which, under our system of republican institutions, has always been considered an enemy to liberty, and when the people had their choice between maintaining a large standing army, maintained by the General Government as the great armies of Europe are maintained, at a vast cost to the General Government and to the people, they determined upon the plan which now exists, that is to say, to provide for the organization and equipment of a militia force.

The question as to the relation of the militia to the General Government has been deemed of sufficient importance to receive the construction and judicial determination of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the relations and duties of the General Government have been determined and fixed, not merely in the Constitution and by statute, but by elaborate decisions of the Court of last resort—the Supreme Court of the United States.

So important has this subject been considered, that at every session of Congress since this government was organized there have been appropriations made to the several States for arms and munitions of war. You are all aware, I suppose, that under the laws of the United States the only office required to be maintained in any State is the office and department of Adjutant-General of the State. He is the only person in the State who, by the operation of law, is required to make communications to and keep in correspondence with the General Government. Every year he makes up a roll which is sent to Washington, which shows upon its face the number of able-bodied citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years who are capable of bearing arms. That roll, so returned, is made the basis upon which arms and munitions of war are distributed by the General Government to the several States. Therefore, under our duty to the General Government, the obligations which exist, the office and department of Adjutant-General cannot be abolished. Now, the theory of all this is, and of all the laws, that Congress shall prescribe the general rules for a uniform system for the State, secure the enrollment of all able-bodied males, etc., but all the details and all the management of the troops are left to the State, and they are only to be called upon when it may become necessary by reason of some public emergency. This power of calling out the military has been very seldom exercised. It was exercised to suppress the insurrection in Pennsylvania in seventeen hundred and ninety-four. It was also exercised during the war of eighteen hundred and twelve; the whole of the latter fight, and, indeed, I may say of the rebellion, being conducted by the militia of the States. Now, down to the time of the rebellion the militia was regarded with general disgust. It was considered an absurdity for a man to belong to a military company. He was the butt of everybody's jokes, and the object of public contempt, if nothing more. But ever since the rebellion, in all the States of this Union, at least north of the line over which the contending parties fought, as much attention has been given to the foundation and organization and disciplining of militia as to any other department of government.

I wish to call the attention of the committee to the State of New York. In that State they have an organized and armed militia of nineteen thousand nine hundred and ninety-one men, consisting of eight divisions, with all the arms, accouterments, ammunition, etc. A great deal of fault has been found at the extent of the appropriations for the support of the militia in this State. The report of the Controller of this State, which has been laid upon the desks of members, shows what has been done in this regard. I may here remark that the report of the committee as submitted, and which has been read, the first section of which we are considering, consists of six sections, upon which this committee has agreed. There is a minority report—I don't know that it can be called a minority report, because it is signed by a majority of the committee—which differs from this report as to what the appropriation shall be, and as to what shall be the limit of the militia force of the State. It is proposed in that report that the Legislature shall be limited by the Constitution, and that the entire appropriation for any one year shall not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars.

Now, sir, I desire to speak to the whole of this report; and, as far as my judgment goes, if it is worth anything this limitation should not be put upon the Legislature, either as to the extent of the appropriations which may be made for the support of the militia, or as to the number of the force. And we shall see, by looking briefly at what the other States have done, how little necessity there is for putting into the Constitution such a provision as this. Now, in the State of New York, the State supplies armories, arms, transportation, and supplies, and pays for all services rendered. The members of the National Guard are exempt from jury duty. Now, in that State, during the year eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, the appropriation for the support of the National Guard was seven hundred and forty-five thousand three hundred and forty-six dollars and thirty-three cents. This was something like two hundred and fifty thousand dollars above the previous appropriations, but it was made necessary, owing to the so called labor riots. And while commenting upon this I wish to call attention to this fact: that while in the State of New York where these labor riots—or whatever they were called—burst upon that city, as they did in Pennsylvania, the State of New York was in such a condition, and had such a force of men, that it only expended two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in putting down the riots which threatened the destruction of an immense amount of property, and if it had succeeded would have cut off communication between the great grain growing regions of the West and the State of New York. At an expense of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars they put a prompt end to it so that no property was destroyed and no lives.

Now, in the State of Pennsylvania, where they had no such system, where they relied upon mere volunteer companies, we all know what destruction there was upon the great railroads which cost the State of Pennsylvania not less than fifteen million dollars inside of forty-eight hours. This shows the difference between the two systems. No lives or property were destroyed in New York, while the destruction of life and property in Pennsylvania was terrible.

In the State of Massachusetts—and I remember hearing a good Irish friend of mine in San Francisco say, when his son asked how he should vote, watch Massachusetts vote, and vote that way. Now look at that State. That State maintains a force of thirty-six thousand and eighty. The State furnishes armories, arms, drill grounds, and target ranges. It exempts the members from jury duty after nine years of service. The expense for supporting these amounts to four hundred and fifty-four thousand two hundred and seventy-four dollars and sixty-seven cents. In addition to that the State receives from the United States for arms, six thousand two hundred and thirty-seven dollars and twenty-one cents.

Even in the State of New Jersey they have a force of forty-eight companies, or about three thousand five hundred men. The State furnishes armories, arms, transportation, etc., at an expense of seventy thousand dollars per annum. Then they receive from the United States four thousand dollars, and the members of organized militia companies are exempt from jury duty.

The State of Connecticut has a force of two thousand two hundred and ninety-three men. The State furnishes armories, arms, etc., and pays two dollars per day to each member of a company for seven days services in each year.

In the State of Maine they have a force of eight hundred and seventy-three men. They furnish armories, etc., have one armory, and one regiment of cadets. Even for that small force of only eight hundred men the State pays thirty-five thousand dollars per annum.

In Vermont the State furnishes the armories, arms, etc., and pays two dollars a day to each member for five days services in each year; encourages target practice, makes appropriations for it, furnishes all the money for that purpose, which is done in every State, I believe, except California. And, sir, while we are poking fun at the militia, I regard this matter with considerable State pride; and, notwithstanding the poor encouragement that has been given the marksmen of this State, have won the admiration of every State in this Union, and of every government in the world. The California marksmen have been taken from among the clerks, and shop boys, and those young men of San Francisco and elsewhere, who have been made the butt of laughter and sneers of so many men. These marksmen have been taken out of stores, and blacksmith shops, and various other callings, and I say they should be encouraged and not sneered at.

Now, sir, take the State of Rhode Island—even that little handful of dirt, Rhode Island—and she has a force of one thousand eight hundred men. They have arms, armories, etc., furnished them, and a muster of the troops is had every year, and each officer and private is furnished with transportation and one dollar and a half per day. The State receives two thousand dollars a year from the General Government, and the rest is raised by a general tax.

Now, in the State of Pennsylvania, where, I say, they had no such organization as in the State of New York, and no appropriations worth speaking of were made—no encouragement was given—the State of Pennsylvania was forced to expend, in addition to the enormous loss of property that was destroyed, to keep together the independent military companies of the State, the sum of seven hundred and ten thousand dollars for that one occasion alone.

In Ohio they have reorganized the militia, and they now have an effectual militia. The State furnishes arms, armories, etc., pays the members for services during a certain number of days, exempts them from jury duty, and also from the road tax.

In Nevada there is a force of five hundred men; the State furnishes arms, armories, etc., and allows five hundred dollars to each company.

Kentucky has recently commenced to organize her militia, and an annual tax has been levied which will place them on a good footing. The State furnishes arms, armories, etc.

Texas, of course, is an exception, because the militia are always liable to be called upon at a moment's notice. The State appropriates, I think, about six hundred and twenty-nine thousand dollars a year.

In Louisiana they have a total force of two thousand nine hundred and seventy men. The State furnishes arms, armories, etc., and annual appropriations are made.

In Florida they have a very creditable organization, and they appropriate about thirty thousand dollars a year.

Many of the other States I could name would make an equally good showing. Now, in the State of California you will see how meager, how utterly inadequate the means will be if this constitutional provision which is proposed here should be adopted. It is proposed to put a limit in the Constitution so as to leave no discretion to the Legislature at all, either as to the number of men or as to the amount of the appropriation. Now, sir, in view of what the other States have done, it seems to me it would be very unwise, upon the principle of economy, so called, for this Convention to take such a course as that. In California we have a total force of two thousand seven hundred men. The appropriation amounts to forty-five thousand two hundred and sixty-four dollars a year. And instead of the State, as in these other cases that I have mentioned, furnishing arms, armories, etc., the companies themselves have to furnish them out of the allowance. The allowance for target practice amounts to about two days' pay for a policeman, and they save to the people of the large cities an enormous expense in the matter of a large police force, for a well organized militia stands ready at all times, at a moment's notice, to come to the rescue when property is in danger. Now, how paltry this appropriation seems when we come to compare it with the appropriations made by the other States. How little and trifling the sum seems for the government to pay for the maintenance of an institution for the protection of life and property, in case of riot and conflagration. Why, sir, the army of Germany costs two hundred and sixty-eight dollars and seventy-five cents per man; Russia, two hundred and eleven dollars; Italy, two hundred and twenty-four dollars; France, two hundred and seventy-nine dollars; and England, four hundred and seventy-eight dollars. Now, what a vast difference there is between the expensive system adopted by the nations of Europe and that adopted by this country.

As I said, sir, the report of the committee embracing these six sections embodies the views of the militia of this State, and are based on provisions of other State Constitutions. We have considered the best interests of the State; and, while some complaint has been made that a large portion of these appropriations go to San Francisco, I say it is not improper or unjust that so much of the militia force should be located in San Francisco, for there is where there is the greatest necessity. And I say now, to the gentlemen of this Convention, that any attempt to reduce the appropriation by constitutional provisions, will be an act of extreme unwisdom, which would have an encouraging influence upon disorderly persons in San Francisco. I know that gentlemen outside of that city—gentlemen connected with the agricultural interests of the State—look upon this matter of spending forty-five thousand dollars a year for the support of this establishment as a thing which is unnecessary. They hear the subject discussed to a considerable extent, and they think they understand it, but I think they will see the propriety of leaving this matter of the amount of money to be expended and the number of the force to the Legislature. Why, sir, every farmer on this floor knows as well as I do that last year the militia saved the City of San Francisco from riot and fire, which might have cost the city one hundred million dollars in property. We all know that there is a large class of persons there who feel—I doubt not with considerable justice—that the presence of the Chinese is sufficient cause for them to bring about a public disturbance. We know the public mind is greatly agitated upon this subject, and I cannot but regard the putting of such a restriction as this in the Constitution as an act of extreme unwisdom.

Who is objecting? Who is protesting against it? Why, sir, the people of San Francisco, who pay a large portion of the taxes of this State, are not protesting against it. I have not heard a single man from that city object to it. On the contrary, if petitions were of any use, if it was necessary, I could bring the unanimous voice of the property holders, men who have the interest of that city at heart, in favor of the position I have taken—not merely rich men, but poor men; not merely the men of large means, but those of small means; men who have their little homesteads; those families who feel that they cannot afford to suffer from riot, or conflagration, or disturbance of any character. We cannot afford to wipe out the militia system and leave property and life at the mercy of the mob. I submit that such a course is both unwise and indiscreet. This is a matter we can safely leave to the Legislature. It ought to be left to the Legislature. Why should we limit it for ten years? Is there any gentleman on this floor who can look forward ten years and say what the United States are going to do? I must say I cannot. I do not know what may be the result of a year, or a day, or a night. If the necessity should arise for legislative action, the Legislature ought to have the power to control this matter.

Now, I had intended running over, to some extent, the authorities on this subject, and quoting the views of some of the best military men of our own country who have given this subject attention, but I have not time now to do it. I simply ask that the report of the committee be adopted, and that this Convention will not decide to put in the limitations contained in the minority report.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order—the majority report.

MR. BARNES. I have said so several times. As I said in the beginning, a majority of the committee saw fit to sign the adverse report, urging that the powers of the Legislature shall be restricted to giving ten companies support, not to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars a year. I know my young friend challenged my admiration when, on signing that report, he said he could take one thousand men and march from Siskiyou to San Diego (if nobody opposed him). It is simply a question of judgment, that is all. We have a very economical system in this State, when we come to compare the appropriations made by this State with those of other States. Notwithstanding that we have an organized force of militia in this State equal to that of any State in the Union, as far as efficiency is concerned, and it is superior to many. I ask that this article may be adopted, without speaking to it section by section, because I have read over legislative extracts from other States bearing upon the whole question. I say that the Constitution is no place to fix the amount of the appropriation; that should be left entirely to the Legislature, so that when occasions and exigencies demand it, they can act untrammeled by any constitutional limitation. They can reduce the amount if they see fit, or they can increase it if the exigencies demand an increase. I believe the present militia force is absolutely necessary for the safety and protection of the City of San Francisco, and men outside have no reason to complain, for they are almost as much interested in the prosperity of that city as the residents themselves. No part of the State can strike a blow at San Francisco without injuring every other part of the State. San Francisco desires that the militia shall at least be maintained at its present standard, and San Francisco pays a large portion of the taxes of this State.

SPEECH OF MR. MOFFAT.

MR. MOFFAT. Mr. Chairman: I believe ten companies are all that this State requires. What is the use of all this militia? Under the present system we have forty companies, which would make four thousand eight hundred men. What is the use of all this militia? What is the use of supporting it? It is taxing the people for nothing. Now my opinion is, that we reduce the number down to ten companies. That is all the State requires in my opinion. That would give six hundred men in San Francisco. I believe that is all that is required to perform all the police regulations of that city, and all that the people demand. I believe that an appropriation of twenty-one thousand dollars a year is sufficient to pay that number of men fairly for their work, and keep their arms in good repair. Now, in San Francisco, I know of my own knowledge, that there is many a man in San Francisco who is performing military duty that is doing himself and his family an injury, and appropriating money for these companies which his family should have. I know that to be a fact. Any amount of them. They are so infatuated that they go down in their pockets and always leave their families. I believe we ought to reduce it down to twenty-five thousand dollars a year—cut the whole thing down as the committee have marked it out, to about two hundred men, and reduce the appropriation down to twenty-five thousand dollars, and cut down the Adjutant-General to two thousand dollars a year. I don't see any use of taxing the people. I believe the proposition in the report of the committee is right. I understand that the Adjutant-General's salary is four thousand dollars. That makes an expense in that office of seven thousand dollars. That is more than many a man with fifty thousand dollars invested in a farm can make. There is too much time and money spent on military affairs. I believe it ought to be put in the Constitution so as to prohibit the Legislature from spending so much money. Put it in the Constitution, and that settles the thing for ten years, and that will be the end of it. Twenty-five thousand dollars is enough, and no member of the committee was in favor of cutting it down below that amount. Every man subject to military duty is taxed six bits. My friend Stedman is full of statistics, and he will give you this part of it. Let us take this thing away from the Legislature, and that is all that the people are willing to pay for.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section one: 'Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such manner as the Legislature shall from time to time direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor. The Governor shall have power to call forth the militia to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections and repel invasions.'"

MR. BARNES. The same matter is embodied in sections two, three, and four of this article.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to section one.

SPEECH OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: My object in offering this amendment is to place the Constitution on the same footing, in the same language precisely, as the Constitution has heretofore stood. And if this amendment is passed I shall then ask the house to strike out all the remaining sections, and that will leave the Constitution just as it is to-day. Now, sir, I am opposed to this tinkering with every section and every article of the Constitution. There are instances where we are called upon to legislate—all that class of cases where there are plain and acknowledged defects in the present Constitution. But as far as other portions of the Constitution are concerned—those which are not connected with corporations, Chinese, taxation, etc., I am in favor of leaving them as they are as far as possible. In those cases there are exceptions, because it is plain that something should be done in order to correct existing evils.

Now, this is a subject where the Legislature is not liable to do anything improper, and this is a matter that may safely be left to legislative discretion, so that they may regulate the matter according to the exigencies and circumstances of the case. So far as I know there is no general public complaint in regard to this portion of the Constitution. From the observations I have made I have found the opinion universally expressed that it is unwise for this Convention to attempt to tinker with and change every section in the Constitution; to subject every part of it to change and alteration. And further, that it is unwise and unreasonable for us to assume that we know everything, and that the Legislatures which are to assemble hereafter will know nothing. It is wrong for us to tie up the hands of the Legislature for ten years upon a subject that ought to be elastic, and about which there is no general complaint. Now, here we are on the seventy-sixth day of the session. If we go on with amendment after amendment amending everything in this Constitution, we shall not get through in time to enable the people to know what they are voting on. This Constitution has to be submitted to the people in May next, and we have been now nearly three months engaged here and have only finished three or four articles. Now, except whenever public experience and observation show that a radical change is required, let us adhere to the old Constitution. Let us leave something to legislative discretion. So far as I know there has been no complaint in this State in regard to this particular article in the Constitution. Why not leave it as it is? Why tinker with it, and spend day after day in debating upon a proposition which, if the people should adopt, they might regret within twenty-four hours after its adoption? I hope, sir, as far as possible, we will adhere to the old Constitution, and it is for this purpose that I have offered this amendment. There is no change demanded, I am satisfied, as regards this portion of the Constitution.

MR. BARNES. I call the attention of the Convention to the fact that section one is precisely the same as section one of the existing Constitution, and the substance of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Alameda is embraced in the other sections of this report.

MR. CAMPBELL. This makes the section embrace all there is in the old Constitution.

MR. BARNES. Then why are you tinkering the old Constitution?

MR. CAMPBELL. I am not tinkering it at all. I am adopting the language of the old Constitution precisely. This amendment makes it word for word the same as the old Constitution.

MR. BARNES. The other sections have not been read.

MR. CAMPBELL. No, sir, because section one is the section under consideration. I propose to add sections two and three of the old Constitution so as to make the language identical, and it will be there all in one section.

MR. BARNES. I don't deny that at all.

SPEECH OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. We hear the same lecture here that we have heard so many times before, that it is improper to correct anything in the old Constitution that appears to be right in the eyes of some gentlemen. I hope we will proceed to correct every part of it as we go along, whenever and wherever we can make any improvement in it. I insist upon it that there is a feeling in the State generally that there is a great deal of money wasted, and I am very anxious to see a clause, such a clause as is reported by the majority of this committee, as to exempting them from jury duty, and things of that character, I think that is entirely too broad and wholesale. Jury duty has got down, Mr. Chairman, very low, and I think it should not be done. I hope we will correct everything where we find we can make an improvement. We are sent here for that purpose, and we can settle it here ourselves as well as anybody else, and I hope we will do it. We are sent here for that purpose by the people of the State, and I hope we will do our duty.

SPEECH OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: I believe, sir, that I am in favor of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell. Now, as far as this matter is concerned, it does appear to me that it does not amount to a great deal, and I believe the old Constitution will give as general satisfaction as anything we will be likely to put in its place. I do not know that this change will amount to a great deal either way. I would have no very serious objections to determining the amount to be appropriated to the military companies of this State, but I do not think it is of sufficient importance to bother with it, especially when the Legislature can at any time reduce the amount for that purpose; and if there is a general public demand for such a reduction they will do it, no doubt. With this view of the subject, though I am in favor of low appropriations, I am in favor of the amendment. But there may be extreme emergencies, as there have been in almost every State, when it would be well for the Legislature to have this power. I hope we will settle this matter speedily, and I think the best solution of it is the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Judge Campbell.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. Chairman: An amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the amendment, 'but no appropriation for the support of the militia shall in any one year exceed the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, except in case of war, insurrection, riot, or invasion, when the public necessity may require it.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

SPEECH OF MR. STEDMAN.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I was not aware that this report would be taken up to-day. I expected to be prepared fully upon this question, but I understood that the legislative article was coming up, and so I am not fully prepared to discuss this article. I do not desire to make any special argument upon this question, but I wish merely to call the attention of this committee to the report which has been received from the Controller in answer to a resolution by this Convention. What I desire particularly to call your attention to is the figures. If members will notice these figures they will find that the appropriations under the present system have come to be fearful. In fact, sir, if we do not place some limit upon the Legislature in appropriating money for this fuss and feather business, why, I am satisfied the time will come when it will cost more to maintain the militia of this State than the total cost of the civil service. I will read the figures of that report to show the cost of maintaining the militia. For the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, it cost the sum of six thousand and eighty-four dollars and thirty-one cents; for the same period ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, four thousand six hundred and ninety dollars and ninety-two cents; eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, six thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars and seventy-seven cents; eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, four thousand seven hundred and twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents; eighteen hundred and sixty, six thousand two hundred and ninety-six dollars and eighty-six cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-one, four thousand five hundred and fifty-eight dollars and eighty-five cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-two, two thousand four hundred and forty-two dollars and forty cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-three, fifteen thousand six hundred and fifty-nine dollars and sixty-eight cents, which also included deficiencies in former years, amounting to over six thousand dollars; eighteen hundred and sixty-four, three hundred and forty-one thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars and sixty-eight cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-five, sixty-three thousand three hundred sixty-two dollars and seventy-six cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-six, forty thousand and fifty-eight dollars and thirty-nine cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one hundred thousand four hundred and sixty-four dollars and eighty-one cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, eighty-seven thousand six hundred and twenty-nine dollars and fourteen cents; eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, fifty-two thousand four hundred and forty-five dollars and fifty-five cents; eighteen hundred and seventy, thirty-nine thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight dollars and sixteen cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-one, thirty-seven thousand three hundred and twenty-seven dollars and twenty-four cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-two, forty-nine thousand nine hundred and thirteen dollars and seventeen cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-three, seven-two thousand one hundred and six dollars and sixty-five cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-four, sixty-six thousand three hundred and seven dollars and eighty-five cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-five, thirty-eight thousand four hundred and sixty-four dollars and eighty cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-six, thirty-nine thousand two hundred and fifteen dollars and ninety-six cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, ninety-eight thousand one hundred and forty-three dollars and fifty-three cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, thirty-eight thousand seventy hundred and seventy-two dollars and ninety cents; eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, fifty-one thousand four hundred and fourteen dollars; eighteen hundred and eighty, fifty-one thousand four hundred and fourteen dollars; making a total of one million three hundred and twenty thousand two hundred and twenty-three dollars and seventy-eight cents.

I don't know how these deficiencies came about, as I have not studied that matter. But I know there has been a great increase in the cost. What should cause this increase is more than I can say. There is no need that it should be increased. Why was it? For the years eighteen hundred and seventy-nine and eighty there is an appropriation of one hundred and two thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight dollars for the two years—fifty-one thousand four hundred and fourteen dollars a year. What for? I ask the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes, what it was for, this fifty-one thousand dollars a year, what was it for?

MR. BARNES. For the purposes of the militia system of the State. I did not keep the accounts of the State. I don't know what it was expended for, and what is more, I don't care.

MR. STEDMAN. What benefit has this State received from the expenditure of this vast amount of money? We find that some five or six thousand dollars was appropriated for the expense of the militia while stationed at San Francisco, when they were called out to prevent a riot. I was there in San Francisco—I have been there a great many years—almost all my life, and I was there during the excitement at that time, and I saw no need of the militia. I am satisfied that the three hundred thousand people of San Francisco saw no need of it. There was no riot. Then what is this money appropriated for? Because they want to draw money out of the State treasury. That is what it is for.

Mr. President, I regard this in a great measure as a useless expenditure. I am radical enough to say that I would be in favor of abolishing the militia. At times they are a necessary evil, I suppose—something like a great many other evils we have. At times, probably, they would be useful—I don't know whether they would be or not. I notice when the civil war was raging, it was not the militia we depended on. No, sir, when the war broke out, they threw down their arms and fled the country. I say, sir, that the Seventh Regiment of New York, in the last war, did not attain much honor.

MR. HILBORN. Doesn't the gentleman know that the Seventh Regiment furnished more officers in the late war than it had men when it went into the war?

MR. BARNES. Let me ask you a question. Was the gentleman in San Francisco when the news came of the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

MR. STEDMAN. Yes, sir; I know all about it.

MR. BARNES. Does the gentleman not know also that the first regiment that reached Washington after the war broke out, and saved that city, was the Sixth and Seventh Regiments of New York, which were militia?

MR. STEDMAN. I don't want to go into a history of the Seventh Regiment at this time. I wish simply to say that the Seventh New York Regiment, that did service in the war, was a reorganized regiment, and not the one that first started. I did not wish to hurt the gentleman's feelings.

Now I say, if there is not some restriction placed upon the Legislature, restricting them from appropriating vast sums of money, we will see the day that it will cost more to maintain the militia of the State than it does the civil service of the State. I think the time has come when such a clause as this ought to be put in the Constitution. I believe the people demand it. I shall vote to put it in there, and I hope the committee will adopt this amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland.

SPEECH OF MR. O'DONNELL.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I have been a resident of this State for the last twenty-eight years, and a greater part of that time I have lived in San Francisco, and I have never yet seen any benefit derived from the militia. In eighteen hundred and fifty-six, when the Vigilance Committee took charge of the City of San Francisco, the militia was called out and one hundred and eight men answered roll-call. My friend Barnes knows that to be a fact. When their support was required they were not there.

MR. BARNES. Not where?

MR. O'DONNELL. Not ready to take hold of their arms and defend the State from invasion. Now, I am entirely opposed to the militia. I organized the second company that was ever organized in this State, and what was the result? Why, they were of no earthly account to the State. [Laughter.] They were the best companies ever organized here. Here last year in San Francisco there was a wash-house, a Chinese wash-house, where they had the smallpox, and they were spreading the disease over the city. When the militia were called out the people of San Francisco had no confidence in them whatever, because they were all locked up in the armories, and so they ordered out the citizens with clubs and pistols. This was called the Pickhandle Brigade. Now, sir, that is the fact that the people of this State have got no confidence in the militia. Now, for a few days, as I said, they were compelled to remain at the armories. It cost the State for that service five thousand two hundred and two dollars. That large amount of money was taken out of the treasury for nothing. I had a conversation with one of the captains of one of the companies who occupied the armory on Montgomery street. He said all they wanted was an opportunity to fire into some of these workingmen. Now, if that had occurred there, if there had been a single shot fired there by one of the militia, the whole city would have been in flames. Every officer of the city, and his residence, was known, and they would have suffered for it, and a few dozen of them would have been killed maybe. But they were locked up in the armories. Never one of them was seen on the streets on that occasion. You all know that to be a fact. [Laughter.]

How did they have any tendency to quell the mob? There never was any mob. I have lived there for twenty-eight years and I never saw any signs of a mob. I never saw a city in better condition than San Francisco has been in since the Workingmen's party has been in existence. Never in my life. It was never in danger. The only way you could have got up a riot there was to get two or three of the militia to shoot some of the workingmen. I never saw any benefit they could be to the State, except to cause a riot. It is of no benefit whatever. The money appropriated for the militia at that time was a perfect waste, and was of no use in the world. Some of these big vultures, I don't care to name them, circulated protests in regard to certain measures, and that is about the extent of their usefulness. [Laughter.] They are used for political purposes, and nothing else. They are of no benefit to the State whatever; and if there is to be any appropriation at all, I would limit it down to five thousand a year. I hope, sir, that this section one will be stricken out altogether.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. Chairman: I wish to occupy one moment. I know something of this extra appropriation of five thousand dollars alluded to by the gentleman, and I will say that we paid this per diem to these gentlemen who were kept in the armories day and night in order to protect the property of the State from such men as Dr. O'Donnell and his friends.

MR. O'DONNELL. There was never any intention whatever to interfere with the arms of this State. There was not the least danger in the world, and you all know that to be a fact.

SPEECH OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. Chairman: I would not say a word on this question were it not for a remark made by the Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs. He said, I believe, in his speech, that the farmers were opposed to voting a sufficient amount of money to support the militia of the State.

MR. BARNES. I did not mean to say that exactly. I said it was the expression in the committee that there was a sentiment among the agricultural portions of the State to that effect, and that I did not see why such a feeling should exist because they were all deeply interested in the welfare of San Francisco.

MR. STUART. I think, sir, that the farmers, the agriculturists, the producers of California, are as loyal as any set of men in the United States. I think they desire to have a military force that is sufficiently strong to protect the great City of San Francisco at any and all times, and under any circumstances. I think, sir, that there is no necessity for a change in the old Constitution in regard to that department of our government. I believe our citizens of our cities and towns should be protected. Lives and property must be protected from rioters and all other enemies, and I am therefore opposed to the amendment of my colleague from Sonoma. I believe that the people are well enough satisfied with the old order of things, and I shall therefore vote for the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Judge Campbell.

SPEECH OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: Perhaps it is not worth while for me to take up any time in this discussion, but several remarks have been thrown out in regard to the military, and it is nothing more than right that I should refer to them briefly, or at least one or two of them. So far as the gentleman upon the other side is concerned, and his statement that the Seventh Regiment of New York supplied so many officers, I wish to call the attention of the gentleman to one little fact in connection with that regiment—it is true it was the first to volunteer when the war opened, but they were also the first to return home. They volunteered as a three months regiment, and, sir, there was no fighting done until after the expiration of that three months, and then they marched towards the City of New York as fast as it was possible for them to travel. Sir, the Sixty-ninth New York marched to the field of battle, and were among the first to take part in the contest, and while they were fighting on the battle field at Bull Run, as the gentleman well knows, the Seventh New York were marching with all possible speed towards home. When they came back the regiment was reorganized, and new men enlisted, and then this new regiment marched to battle. But the gentleman makes a mistake when he gives to this first regiment the credit that history has given to the Seventh New York.

MR. BARNES. I do not intend to defend the character and fame of the Seventh Regiment, for it will live long after its traducers are forgotten. It was sent to the seat of war to protect the City of Washington. It did its duty there, and was recalled at the request of the Governor of the State of New York, for the purpose of preserving the peace of the City of New York, which was threatened by a class of persons whom my friend on the other side of the hall alluded to, who hissed and hooted them as they marched through the streets. It was brought back against its will, because the Governor of the State believed that the peace of the city was in great danger, and everybody who knows anything about it knows it.

MR. WELLIN. I lived in the city at the time, and I know there was no disposition whatever towards a riot at the time these men returned home.

MR. BARNES. I allude to these men who went on this four months service. That regiment bore a character for a military organization the like of which does not exist upon the face of the civilized globe. Now, [laughter]——

MR. AYERS. I raise the point of order that this discussion, as far as it relates to the Seventh Regiment of New York, is all out of order, and is not in any manner pertinent to the question under discussion.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken.

MR. WELLIN. I object to this position being taken, because the gentleman knows that not one of them went to the battlefield. I was there at the time myself, and I know something about it.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair ruled that the point of order made by the gentleman from Los Angeles was well taken.

MR. WELLIN. I do not care enough about it to appeal, but when assertions of this kind are made I think it is right that I should have an opportunity of replying. Now, the gentleman asks if I was in the city of San Francisco in eighteen hundred and sixty-five. Yes, sir, I was, and I did not belong to a military company either. I was at one of the armories where a company was supposed to be, and I will inform the gentleman that there were not five members of that company present.

MR. BARNES. What company was it?

MR. WELLIN. I don't remember—in one of the drill rooms on Market street.

MR. BARNES. Do you know the regiment?

MR. WELLIN. No, sir.

MR. BARNES. Nor the company?

MR. WELLIN. No, sir.

MR. BARNES. If you don't know the company, nor the regiment, how do you know that there were not five members present?

MR. WELLIN. I know from those who were present whether they were volunteers or not. I was with one of the owners of the drill-room. If the gentleman does not believe me, he can do as he pleases. I assert the fact, and let him prove to the contrary.

Now, the gentleman raises a serious question, when he says the expense of the militia last Winter was made necessary in order to keep down the Workingmen. The Workingmen do not need to be kept down. We propose to work within the law. It is the militia which needs to be put down. We ask for none of its protection. We will abide by the laws, and let them do the same.

MR. MANSFIELD. I offer an amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. There are two amendments pending already. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I rise, sir, for the purpose of deploring the spirit which exhibits itself here, and I must express my surprise when I see irreverent hands of iconoclasts laid upon such a valuable and time-honored institution as the militia. Is it not time to pause and inquire whither are we drifting? Do you propose to leave us stranded and defenseless? Do you propose to deprive us of the glorious fourth of July parade, and other parade days, and target days, and picnic days, when we see all the glories and pomp and circumstances of war? Do you remember that our homes and our firesides are sheltered and protected by them? What are we about to do? Do you propose to deprive the Major of militia of all his hard-earned glory—he whose soul swells and expands with joy when parade day approaches. I, sir, owe a duty to my constituents, which I feel it incumbent upon me to keep. I was desirous, after being made a candidate for this position, of being elected; and in speaking to the people of San Francisco, at Horticultural Hall, I was desirous of obtaining the votes of our country's brave defenders there, and I told them that I was going to advocate a provision in this Constitution that there should be nothing in the militia below the grade of Major of militia. I remember, when I was a small boy, and my father, a majestic Major of militia, took me out on muster day, how my soul exulted and swelled within me at the glorious things that I beheld on that occasion. I could not think of depriving the rising generation of the delights which I enjoyed at that time; and I made that promise to these gentlemen—who are the delight of the small boys—sometimes called, irreverently, "fuss and feathers," and all that sort of thing. I would be willing to give General McComb a feather two feet higher than anybody else, and that the Drum Major should have a seventy-five pound lead at the end of his stick—only that it would make these gentlemen too conspicuous on the field of battle. Their lives are too valuable to be thrown away. Suppose the Indians were to come in on us, what show would these men have? Sir, we must save them from the Indians, and everything of that kind. And if I can find an opportunity, I shall propose to this committee an amendment which will prevent them from being killed by Indians. I shall propose that the militia of the State shall not be permitted to depart from the State except in case of invasion. [Laughter.] I shall propose that they be protected from incursions of hostile Indians, and everything of that kind; and provide for calling out the old women, with their brooms, to protect us. I do not want to run any risk of their being destroyed. It has been contended here that they are not useful; but will any man rise in his seat and say that they are not ornamental? I pause for a reply. Do not the gentlemen want anything but that which is useful? Shall we have nothing in the Constitution of an ornamental character? I am not pretty; I have not got the shape nor the style for a glorious parade day; but shall I be jealous, and prevent those who have shape and style from riding through the streets of San Francisco, seeking to repel an invasion?

Now, sir, seriously speaking, are the militia companies any protection in this State? We are told that they are, but it is not true. They are no protection. The protection, sir, of the State, and of every State, is the patriotism of the people. A government which cannot rest upon that, cannot rely upon that, must give up the republican idea; must give up the idea of self-government, and must resort to the theory of all monarchical institutions. We do not, according to our theory of government, depend at all upon the hand of power, but upon the will of the majority. Now, the organized, uniformed companies, are not the real militia upon which the country depends for safety. The proper constitutional amendment would be that every able-bodied man in the State is a militiaman. That is the true militia of the State; that is the militia which the Constitution of every single State in the Union recognizes as the State militia. I am surprised at a report coming in here that fails to contain that provision, which is contained in every single one of the State Constitutions in the United States, and which is the only true theory on the subject. Now, we talk about the militia being called out by the Governor. We do not mean the organized militia force of the State alone, it is the citizens—the able-bodied citizens of the State that are meant. It is not those who join these companies for the purpose of show and parade, not those who belong for the purpose of learning to shoot at a target; not by any means, but the citizens who are devoted to the welfare of the State—the great body politic—the citizens, who are called upon, and all you need is enough of an organization to take care of the militia property, and to keep the books and records. It is the great body of citizens, the volunteers, who compose the militia. We want no more of such militia as we have had in this State—no more of such militia as we have had in San Francisco—not by any means. Allusion has been made to their services to the State, to the protection of property in San Francisco by the militia. Some have spoken of it as a matter of history. If history shows anything, it shows that the use of the militia in San Francisco was a dastardly and outrageous suppression of what was simply an honest and peaceable uprising. There was no single shadow of reason for calling out the militia at the time of that political excitement. And if they had been called upon to fire, they would have fired in the air. There was no reason for calling upon the militia by any possible construction that could be put upon it. It was done by the political tricksters for the sole purpose of quelling an honest, legitimate political uprising. If there had been danger, what would the militia have amounted to in the matter of protecting five thousand, or six thousand, or eight thousand people against twenty-five thousand? What folly to talk about such a thing. And then again, most of the members of these companies were in sympathy with this great political uprising, and had they been ordered to fire, they would have fired in the air. That is how it would have been done. Now, if I have an opportunity, I shall offer this amendment to section one:

"The militia of the State shall consist of all able-bodied white male residents of the State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, except such persons as are exempt by the laws of the United States or of this State."

That is all that is proper, that is all that is necessary to put into the Constitution, and I shall offer that amendment as soon as it is in order.

SPEECH OF MR. HARRISON.

MR. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman: I wish to say one word or two, only for one reason, and that is to show why I shall vote as I do on this question. Mr. President, I lived on Rincon Hill during the time of the riot. When the bell struck the alarm of fire that night I went down to see what was going on, and I seen no disturbance whatever. The Mayor was willing to pander to the interests of the vultures, and that is why they were ordered out. I lived on Rincon Hill, and owned property there, and I was not at all afraid of getting burned out in San Francisco; I was not afraid of anybody setting fire to my property. I have a wife there, and I am not afraid of getting burned out. Now, the gentleman from Vallejo made some allusion to Dr. O'Donnell in connection with the Workingmen's party.

MR. HILBORN. No, sir, Mr. O'Donnell said he was there during that whole disturbance. I said the militia was called out to protect the property of the State from Mr. O'Donnell and his friends.

MR. HARRISON. An account of that riot and trouble was sent out through the country, it was circulated through the press, and these gentlemen all read it. As they are going to vote on this question, I wish to tell them there was no riot, only the disturbance caused by these vultures. I was there and saw it all. I saw them shoot indiscriminately at men, women, and children, and a poor man living in the city was killed on that occasion and died. He was a stranger in the city and had no friends. I stood right there and saw these cowardly fellows with their pistols. Now I like to see Fourth of July parades, and I always take my children down to see them. Last Fourth of July I took them down to see the procession. My little girl, about four years old, was in my arms, she saw the red lining on one of those hats and says she: "O, papa, see that funny hat!" Well, I thought it was worth all it cost to let her see the hat—it was a funny hat. Mr. President; I vote in favor of cutting down the militia and the money appropriated for their keeping. There is no need of any militia in San Francisco. The workingmen that owns property, like me, are not going to get up any riot, they will help put it down if there is any riots.

MR. STEDMAN. With permission of the committee I wish to make one statement. There are several States in this Union that do not appropriate money for the benefit of the militia.

MR. STUART. I call the gentleman to order. He has spoken twice on the same subject.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

SPEECH OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. Chairman: It was not my intention to say anything on this subject; but I think there is danger of being carried away by prejudice against the militia. It is true, as my friend from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, says, that the real militia of the country are the independent freemen of the State—men who are ready, at the call of the country, to take up arms in the country's defense. It is true, that when the great rebellion came upon the United States in eighteen hundred and sixty-one, the several States—the Northern States—quickly raised and equipped from this militia the finest army that ever was seen on this continent, and perhaps the finest in the world. But it must be remembered that in every State there was a militia system. Every State had established laws for the organization of militia. I do not think we should take the narrow view of the subject which seems to have prevailed here. We had better adopt the experience of the other States of the Union. Now, if the militia have been unsatisfactory in this State, it does not follow as a logical conclusion that you need no militia hereafter. The militia system is the school for the military art in this country. And we found in eighteen hundred and sixty-one that those States which had paid some attention to the military art were better prepared to send forward organized troops than those States which had paid no attention to these matters.

Mention has been made of the State of Indiana. I have the honor to be a native of that State, and at the time of the breaking out of the war I was a resident of that State. It was the militia system of that State which enabled them to organize a large force at once, and directly after the war began the Legislature was convened in extra session, and a militia law was passed which authorized the Governor to organize additional regiments, which he did. Senator Morton—Governor at that time—would never have had the credit of being the great war Governor had it not been for the acts of the Legislature which I have mentioned. It is true he was a man of such determined character, and of such great ability, that he was capable of making the most out of the means given him. But he nor no other man could have done this had it not been for the acts of the Legislature.

MR. STEDMAN. This amendment provides that in case of war or insurrection we may do the same thing.

MR. MILLER. I do not know anything about that, but the State ought not to wait till the emergency arises before organizing a militia system. That would be a very short-sighted policy. I believe in fostering and encouraging the military art in this country. Under the policy of the General Government it can only be fostered by the States. The disposition is to cut down the regular army, and the art must be fostered by the individual States. I believe in a military nation. A nation that exhibits a military spirit has the respect of the world. There is such a thing necessary as force in the government of mankind. It behooves every nation, in order to occupy a position of equality among the nations of the earth, to foster a military spirit.

Now, as to what ought to be the cost in the State of California I cannot say. I do not know what the amount ought to be. Of course, it ought to cost the very smallest sum possible, because the taxes of the people are already high enough. But, can we not trust that matter to the Legislature? Does not the Legislature decide, from session to session, what the appropriations for the maintenance of the government shall be? It seems to me we can safely leave it to them. We cannot see into the future. We do not know what crisis may arise in this country, or what the State of California may be called upon to do, and it seems to me a very unwise and short-sighted policy to place any limitation upon the Legislature, in the Constitution. I think we had better leave it to the Legislature to determine, from session to session, what the appropriations shall be.

SPEECH OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I did not expect to discuss the military question, and would not now were it not for the purpose of correcting the erroneous impression which might be obtained from the remarks of some who have addressed the committee. There is a misunderstanding in regard to the report of the Adjutant-General and Controller in regard to the cost. It was stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman, that for the year eighteen hundred and seventy-seven the Legislature appropriated ninety-eight thousand one hundred and forty-three dollars and fifty-three cents for the support of the militia. It is true that was the appropriation, but he did not tell us that a part of it was to cover deficiencies for previous years. I will read the report, which shows all the deficiencies:

Expense of Maintaining State Militia, including Adjutant-General's Department, from July first, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and eighty, as shown by the Controllers' Reports:

YEARS.	Amount.
Year ending June 30th, 1856	$6,084 31

Year ending June 30th, 1880	‖ 51,414 00
Total	$1,320,223 78

* Includes deficiencies, $6,070 13, of 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th fiscal years.
† For the equipment and expenses of organized militia.
‡ Includes deficiency appropriations, $71,359 38, for the 25th, 26th, and 27th fiscal years.
§ Includes deficiency appropriation, $3,564.
‖ These two appropriations have not as yet been expended, as they are for the present and coming fiscal years.

Members will see, by referring to this, just exactly what it has cost. Now, in regard to this proposed limitation, it does occur to me that we ought to leave the whole matter to the Legislature; and I am willing to allow that body to determine what the appropriations shall be, according to the emergencies that may arise. It is not in San Francisco alone that this system is of benefit. There is a long southern border to this State, where, whenever the time comes that the troops are taken away from that locality, there will always be need for a military organization. Now, I know last Winter the troops were taken away to fight the Indians, and a raid was immediately made upon the station down there, near the line, and the people of San Diego were obliged to organize and go out themselves and defend the lives and property of the citizens. I am in favor of leaving this matter to the Legislature. They are the people's representatives, just as much as we are, and will do their bidding.

Mr. STEDMAN. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. In that place they have riots, insurrections, and war?

Mr. BLACKMER. Yes, sir; and they made an assault upon a place down there near the line.

Mr. STEDMAN. Across the line?

Mr. BLACKMER. No, sir; and the gentleman reminds me of the men to whom Harry Hotspur refused to surrender his prisoners.

SPEECH OF MR. FILCHER.

Mr. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: From the discussion, it appears that this is one of the most important questions that this Convention will have to deal with, and I wish briefly to state my views of the matter to this Convention. In the first place, though I have been edified and instructed by the remarks of the Chairman of the committee, that I am satisfied that the people of this State demand that this reduction be made in the number and cost of the State militia. This question has been universally discussed throughout the State by the press and among the people, and the universal sentiment seems to be that there should be a limit placed upon the expenditures for the support of the militia. There ought to be some change in the system. However, sir, I am opposed to any positive iron-bound restrictions, for the reason that we cannot foresee the events that may happen, and we must leave it sufficiently elastic to allow the Legislature to act if occasion should require it. I agree with the sentiments of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, that the safety of American institutions rests upon the patriotism of the people. Hence, I also agree with the other gentleman from San Francisco, General Miller, when he says he believes in cultivating and fostering a military spirit. And to establish and carry out these ideas, I would advocate the adoption of this section as proposed to be amended by the gentleman from Alameda, Judge Campbell, providing how the militia may be organized, providing how the officers may be chosen, and conferring upon the Governor the power to call out this militia in case of emergency; and then to go further, and declare that all able-bodied male citizens of this State not exempt by law from military duty, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, shall form the militia of the State. Then, I think, it would be wise to adopt with that a provision restricting appropriations in time of peace to the payment of the Adjutant-General's expenses and salary, and of the officers in charge of the State armory, and for the purchase of arms. We are yet, to some extent, occupying rather a frontier position. We have seen the peace and quiet and safety of our citizens threatened within the last twelve months. The Indian tribes from Washington Territory overrun Oregon, and even touched California at one time, and disturbed the peace even of this State, and we sent arms and ammunition to the people of these threatened districts. Our State was in a condition to send them arms, and that was what was needed most of all. California is in a condition to-day to repel either invasion, insurrection, or to quiet disturbance in our own midst. The spirit is here, the military disposition is here; and all you have to do is to furnish the arms, and when occasion requires, there will be a vast army of volunteers. I think it would be wise for us to pass a provision here that appropriations may be made for the purchase of an ample supply of arms, and having done that, I would ask, what enemy dare invade us? It seems to me that would be the best system we could adopt. The people complain because they are taxed to support a lot of strutting peacocks, instead of having a militia that is adequate; and these men also are exempt from many of the burdens of government, which the taxpayers have to shoulder. Now, I do not believe in an armed militia; I believe the true militia of the State consists of the able-bodied citizens, not exempt from military duty by law. The people are tired of paying for uniforms and regalia for these strutting peacocks who are an insult to the men who pay the taxes. I do not believe in uniforming a State militia.

Mr. BARNES. The appropriations that are made by this State only provide for armories, and the mere expenses connected with transportation. The State does not pay for any uniforms.

Mr. FILCHER. I understood so.

Mr. BARNES. No, sir.

Mr. FILCHER. Then I am glad to learn the fact.

Mr. O'DONNELL. Didn't they appropriate money last year for dress uniforms?

Mr. BARNES. No, sir; not a dollar in any way.

Mr. FILCHER. That is a small matter. I contend that we do not require an organized militia in times of peace. Let the State furnish arms, so that if a company wishes to organize in any little town, for instance, they can get arms from the State Armory for the purpose of drilling, by giving good security for the safe return of the same. I believe in the general proposition, that it is enough that the able-bodied citizens of the State shall be subject to the call of the Governor in times of trouble, and I am satisfied that they will be better qualified to defend our liberties than the present militia of the State.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

Mr. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: I believe enough of the time of this Convention has been taken up in the discussion of this question, and I therefore move the previous question.

The motion was seconded by Messrs. Brown, Barbour, Evey, and Wyatt.

The CHAIRMAN. The previous question has been moved and seconded. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

The CHAIRMAN. The first question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland.

Division being called for, the committee divided, and the amendment was lost by a vote of 41 ayes to 56 noes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Judge Campbell.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. Chairman: I rise to inquire if this amendment of the gentleman from Alameda makes the section embrace everything that is in the present Constitution?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

The SECRETARY read:

"Except in case of war, insurrection, riot, or invasion, the Legislature shall not authorize to be expended or appropriated more than fifteen thousand dollars in any one year for organizing and disciplining the militia, which shall include all salaries, rents, and disbursements of every character relating to the militia of the State, and the care of the arms belonging to the State."

Mr. BARNES. I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. State your point of order.

Mr. BARNES. That matter has already been disposed of.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hold that it is in order.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman: I wish to offer an amendment.

The SECRETARY read:

"All militia organizations provided for by this Constitution, or by any law of this State, shall, while under arms, either for ceremony or duty, appear only in the uniform prescribed for troops of the United States, and carry no device, banner, or flag of any State or nation, except that of the United States or the State of California."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman.

Mr. VACQUEREL. I don't see why he put in the word "riot;" they can make a riot any day they like. Three men may get together, and the Legislature may call it a riot, and therefore they can order out the troops.

Division being called for, the committee divided and the amendment was lost by a vote of 35 ayes to 64 noes.

Mr. O'DONNELL. I offer an amendment.

The SECRETARY read:

"The appropriation made by the Legislature for the military companies, shall not exceed, in any one year, a larger sum than ten thousand dollars."

Mr. O'DONNELL. I want that added to Mr. Campbell's amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Dr. O'Donnell.

Lost.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, General Mansfield.

Mr. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. CROSS. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. FILCHER. I believe I have the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. Neither one of you was recognized. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. FILCHER. What is the amendment—that they shall not wear any but the United States uniforms? I want to vote intelligently upon this question.

[Cries of "Question," "Take a vote," "Vote it down," "Division," "Division."]

Mr. FILCHER. I would like to know what I am voting on.

Mr. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman——

MR. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman: Mr. Chairman——

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Joyce.

MR. JOYCE. The reason I rise to make a remark or two is simply this: I appeal to any man if these regiments will not march to the very canon's mouth, carrying their own flag as well as the United States flag, and why should this insult be offered to these men? These German and Irish regiments, maybe once a year start out for target practice, carrying their own flag as well as the United States flag, and I don't see what harm it does. I don't see why this spirit should be shown here in regard to this matter. I hope this amendment will not be adopted. It is an outrage and an insult upon the age, and I hope the Convention will vote it down.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that this resolution is aimed directly at the foreign military companies and societies. It provides that they shall carry no flag, banner, or device when they are marching, either for duty or ceremony, and that they shall dress only in the uniforms prescribed for United States troops. I don't see any objections to any independent military companies carrying their own flag. We know that regiments nearly always carry battle flags, and if a society desire to carry their own banners in connection with the United States flag, what possible objection can there be to it? It seems strange that Germans, Irishmen, or Frenchmen, if they choose, cannot be allowed to carry the flag of their country in connection with the American flag. What harm is there in it? I hope this resolution will be promptly voted down by this Convention. If it is not voted down here I wish to see the ayes and noes taken upon it when we come into Convention, when I hope to see gentlemen put themselves on record upon that point. There are a number of independent organizations in San Francisco—independent military organizations—that are willing at any time to answer the call of the Governor of this State, and the only flag they recognize is the stars and stripes, and they calculate to stand under that flag, and fight for that flag, and at the same time if they desire to carry any other banner they should be allowed the liberty of doing so; but they do not desire to be coerced or bound down. I hope the amendment will be promptly voted down, for no such provision is necessary in the Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. BARTON.

MR. BARTON. Mr. Chairman: If I can have the attention of the Convention for a few moments, I would like to express myself upon this question. This, sir, is one of the American States of this American Union, and, sir, this is a Constitutional Convention being held to-day in the State of California, which is one of the States belonging to that Union. And, sir, while I recognize every citizen as an American, wherever he may be born, yet, when he adopts this as his country and becomes an American, I want him to work under the stars and stripes, and none other. I want them to go to battle under the stars and stripes, the flag under which we achieved our liberties, and I say that any man who claims a seat here who is not willing to go to battle under the glorious old stars and stripes, is not worthy the name of an American. He is not worthy of a seat upon the floor of this Convention. [Applause.] He has no business to occupy a seat in a body called for the purpose of framing a Constitution for one of the great free States of this American Union. Let him take his own flag and carry it where he pleases; but when the Governor of the State calls upon Americans for military services, let them march, as American citizens, to the field of duty under the stars and stripes, and none other. We know no other flag. We propose to stand as a solid phalanx of American citizens. I want to see nothing else established, nothing else recognized but the American flag, and, sir, I desire to place myself upon record in this matter. I am willing that my children and my grandchildren shall point to my vote upon this proposition, and I am sure they will never have cause to blush when they read the vote. [Applause.]

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will be adopted. I believe the gentleman from San Francisco does not understand the full import and nature of the amendment. It does not prohibit independent organizations and societies from carrying any flag or device which they may desire to.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would ask the gentlemen whether it would not be competent for the Legislature of this State, at any time, to frame a law so as to oblige every independent company in the State to organize pursuant to that law?

MR. WEST. Certainly. But if they wished to remain independent as a regiment of their own nationality, as an independent organization, there is nothing to prevent their carrying their own colors or banners, because they do not stand in the light of military companies acting under the laws of this State. Therefore, I hope the amendment will be adopted. It is proper and right, and I believe it is the sense of this Convention that it should be adopted.

MR. JOYCE. How would it be in case of invasion or war, when the whole foreign-born regiments are called into action. Would that prevent them from carrying their own native flags.

MR. WEST. When they are called into action they will be acting under the laws of the United States, and when they are called to duty to defend this State they will be acting under the laws of this State.

MR. TULLY. What is the objection to companies carrying their own flags?

MR. WEST. The objection is that the American flag is the flag that Americans ought to carry, and not the flags of other nations. I hope the amendment will prevail.

MR. HUESTIS. I move the previous question.

No second.

MR. O'DONNELL. There is no such clause in the Constitution of the United States as that. What is the idea of not allowing any other flag but the American flag to be carried in the streets? I see no necessity for any such provision as that.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Division being called for, the committee divided, and the amendment was lost by a vote of 35 ayes to 60 noes.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I wish to offer an amendment.

MR. STUART. I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

No second.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment:

"Except in case of war or insurrection, the Legislature shall not authorize to be expended or appropriated more than twenty thousand dollars in any one year for organizing and disciplining the militia, which shall include all salaries, rents, and disbursements of every character relating to the militia of the State, and the care of the arms belonging to the State."

MR. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. No appropriation for the support and maintenance of the militia of this State, except for the pay of the Adjutant-General and State Armorer, shall be made in time of peace."

MR. STUART. I move to lay it on the table.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is not in order to lay on the table in Committee of the Whole.

MR. HUESTIS. I move the previous question.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Mansfield.

Lost on division, by a vote 38 ayes to 57 noes.

MR. FILCHER. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No appropriation of money shall be made by the State for militia purposes in time of peace, except for the purchase of arms and ammunition, and the salaries of Adjutant-General and State Armorer."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman.

Division being called for, the committee divided, and the amendment was lost by a vote of 44 ayes to 53 noes.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer to be added to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No appropriation for the support of the militia shall, in any one year, exceed the sum of thirty thousand dollars, except, in case of war, insurrection, or invasion, public necessity may require it."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost on a division vote: ayes, 37; noes, 55.

MR. CAMPBELL. If it is in order, I will move to strike out all the succeeding sections, so that the Constitution will stand just as it now is.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is not in order. When we reach the next section you can move to strike it out. The Secretary will read section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 2. Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such manner as the Legislature shall, from time to time, direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section two.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out section two.

Carried, and the section was stricken out.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 3. No general officer shall be removed from office except by the Senate, on the recommendation of the Governor, stating the grounds on which removal is recommended, or by a decision of a Court-martial in accordance with military custom. No officer of the militia shall be removed from office for political reasons.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section three of the report, for the same reasons given before.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alameda to strike out section three.

Carried, and the section was stricken out.

THE SECRETARY read section four:

SEC. 4. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia of the State. He shall have power to call them forth to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section four, upon the same grounds.

Carried, and the section was stricken out.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 5. The officers, musicians, and members of the State militia, who comply with all military duties as provided by law, shall be entitled to the following privileges and exemptions, viz.: Exemption from payment of poll tax, road tax, and head tax of every description: exemption from jury duty and exemption from serving on any posse comitatus. All officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates, who have faithfully served in the military service of the State for seven consecutive years, and received the certificate of the Adjutant-General certifying the same, shall thereafter be exempted from further military or jury service, except in time of war.

MR. TULLY. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section five of the report.

MR. BARNES. I wish to say a word in regard to this.

[Cries of "Leave!" "Leave!"]

MR. BARNES. I do not ask leave—I demand it. This is found in all the States having an organized militia.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Santa Clara, to strike out the section.

Carried.

THE SECRETARY read section six:

SEC. 6. Every officer or member of the State militia wounded or disabled in the service of the State, shall have reasonable expenses paid him; and the widows and children of members killed in the service of the State shall be provided for by the Legislature.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section six.

MR. CROSS. I do not wish to make a speech, but I wish to say that I am in favor of this section, and I hope it will not be stricken out.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out the section.

Carried.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I offer a new section.

MR. CAMPBELL. There is a supplementary report here.

MINORITY REPORT.

MR. PRESIDENT: We, the undersigned, a majority of your Committee on Military Affairs, beg leave to report the following additional section for insertion in the article on militia, in the new Constitution:

SECTION —. Except in case of war or insurrection, the Legislature shall not authorize to be expended, or appropriated, more than twenty-five thousand dollars in any one year for organizing and disciplining the militia, which shall include all salaries, all rents, and disbursements of every character relating to the militia of the State, and care of the arms belonging to the State. Nor shall the number of uniformed militia in the State exceed ten companies of one hundred and twenty men rank and file each; provided, that at the expiration of ten years from the time of the adoption of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power, notwithstanding this section, to increase the allowance hereby made, and the number of uniformed militia hereby allowed.

JOHN C. STEDMAN,
E. V. SMITH,
J. C. BROWN,
WM. S. MOFFAT,
THOS. H. ESTEY,
HAMLET DAVIS.

MR. CAMPBELL. I desire to move to strike that out.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is not in order, as it is not before the Convention as an article. The Secretary will read the new section offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The militia of the State shall consist of all able-bodied white male residents of the State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, except such persons as may be exempt by the laws of the United States or of this State."

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I move that the word "white" be stricken out.

MR. BARBOUR. I accept the amendment.

MR. CONDON. I move to amend by striking out the word "resident," and inserting the word "citizen."

MR. BLACKMER. I would suggest to the gentleman to make the maximum fifty years. Too many members of the Convention would be exempt, if you put it at forty-five.

MR. TULLY. I hope this amendment will be voted down. I think the whole subject-matter ought to be left to the Legislature.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the section.

MR. GRACE. Mr. Chairman: I want to see every man who is protected by the flag come to the front and fight for it, and defend the country, and I want the Chinamen, if they are going to stay, to be made to fight in defense of the flag that protects them.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I hope we will stand by the old Constitution as it is. You have provided in this first section that the Legislature shall provide by law for the organizing and disciplining of the militia of this State. Now, if we go on and provide that that militia shall consist of all the able-bodied men in the State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, you provide that the Legislature will have to organize and discipline over one hundred thousand men. Leave these matters of detail to the Legislature, where they belong. This is a suitable matter for the Legislature to deal with, and has no business in the Constitution.

MR. BARBOUR. As I explained before, we ought to define who are the militia of the State, and this is a very important declaration. There is nothing inconsistent whatever between this and the first part of the section, that the Legislature shall provide by law for the organizing and disciplining of the State militia. This merely defines who are the militia. Now, sir, I say this is a usual provision found in all the State Constitutions, and there is a necessity for it, because they may all be called on by the Governor. Not only those who organized into companies, but the whole body of able-bodied men in the State of the prescribed age. There is no inconsistency or absurdity in it at all. The Legislature may organize such portions of that militia as they in their wisdom may think best, but the true militia of the country is the great body of the citizens. It does not have any such meaning as that placed upon it by the gentleman from Alameda.

MR. AYERS. I object to limiting the power of the State to a certain age. In times of great emergencies the State may have exhausted its power and still not have enough men. I want that power left to the Legislature. I am opposed to the amendment.

MR. BROWN. I thought, sir, a few moments ago, that this thing was amended, but it seems not. Gentlemen keep springing amendments and new sections. I think the Convention is ready to vote, and the only way for us to do is to vote down all amendments and adopt the section in its present shape.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the new section.

Lost on division—ayes, 22; noes, 91.

MR. LARKIN. I move that the committee rise, report back the article with the amendments, and recommend that it be adopted as amended.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Military Affairs, have adopted certain amendments thereto, and report the same to the Convention, recommending the adoption of the report as amended. If there is no objection the usual number will be ordered printed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

MR. BROWN. I ask four days' leave of absence for Mr. Casserly.

Granted.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. HUESTIS. I move to adjourn.

Carried.

And at five o'clock and fifteen minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned until nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M. to-morrow.

EIGHTY-FIRST DAY.

LAND AND HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

MR. O'SULLIVAN presented the following minority report from the Committee on Lands and Homestead Exemption:

MR. PRESIDENT: The undersigned, a minority of the Committee on Lands and Homestead Exemption, dissent from the report of the majority of said committee, in so far as they recommend that no further action be taken on amendment number one hundred and forty-three, "relating to land tenures and limitation of ownership," and beg leave to present their reasons for such dissent.

The subject of land monopoly we regard as one of paramount importance to the people of California. It is so from the generally admitted fact that it exists here as a gigantic evil, without a single redeeming feature. We hold that it is one of the first duties of a just government to abate an evil so great and threatening in its character as land monopoly confessedly is, by instituting reforms which will lead to the equitable distribution of the land among the people, and its general ownership by the actual tillers of the soil. Land is the basis and source of all wealth. Its possession gives power, and they who own the land of a country will inevitably rule that country. If ownership of the land is to be granted to and remain in the hands of a few persons, as is now actually the case in this State in a great measure, our theory of government is a delusive sham, and all our Fourth of July talk about human rights, equality, etc., a senseless mockery.

It will be well here to take a brief glance at the history of land titles in California, and, incidentally, at the origin and growth of land monopoly. At the period of the American conquest and acquisition of California, it was sparsely settled by a branch of the Spanish-Mexican race, each family occupying a large tract—generally several leagues in extent—granted to them by the Mexican Government. By the terms of the treaty of peace between our Government and that of Mexico, it was stipulated that all rights of property possessed by the inhabitants of the transferred territory should be respected.

The Mexican system of granting large tracts of land, however liberal it may appear, is undoubtedly a vicious system, for it leads directly to land monopoly—to a condition of things similar to that of feudalism in Europe, where the great mass of the people are landless and homeless in countries whose soil they and their forefathers have tilled for thousands of years. But simply considering the legality of their claims to the large grants held by them, the Mexican inhabitants of California, when it passed into our hands, are blameless for the vicious system of land-holding which originated under their former system of government. In the early days of our American settlement of the country, it was generally thought the evils resulting from the great size of the Mexican grants would decrease in the course of time, and that excessive holdings would gradually diminish through the subdivision and sale of the large ranchos. On the contrary, the curse of land monopoly has increased to an extraordinary extent. The pernicious example of the great Mexican grants has proved a legacy of evil to California. It stimulated the acquisitiveness of a certain class of our own people in the direction of land grabbing, and the peculiar facilities existing here for the promotion of their designs have enabled a few persons to become lords of more acres than were embraced in the largest of the old Mexican ranchos.

Data as to the exact amount, or even a near approximation to it, of land held by the inhabitants of California in eighteen hundred and forty-six, are not accessible to us. The Mexican grants, however, were mainly confined to the coast counties, and did not cover even a tithe of their area, as the numerous preëmption settlements subsequently made in those counties attest. It is safe to assert that but a small fraction of the valuable arable land of the State was covered by genuine Mexican grants. The great Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys had few grants located in them; and the same may be said of all the western slope of the Sierra Nevada, which includes a large section of the State.

As the agricultural interest began to be developed, towards the close of the prosperous placer mining era, and land increased in value through the demand for its use, the monopolists commenced acquiring large tracts throughout the State, by one means or another, until now a few persons pretend to hold possession of vast estates—some of them containing from one-hundred thousand to four hundred thousand acres. We give a few of the figures from the Assessors' reports for eighteen hundred and seventy-two: Miller & Lux, three hundred and forty-three thousand acres; Bixby, Flint & Company, four hundred and thirty-four thousand acres; W. S. Chapman, two hundred and fifty thousand acres; the Railroad Company, two hundred and ninety-one thousand acres; Charles McLaughlin, two hundred and forty-nine thousand acres; Mrs. Beale, one hundred and seventy-three thousand acres; the Philadelphia and California Petroleum Company, one hundred and thirty-one thousand acres; H. W. Pierce, one hundred and six thousand acres; Dibblee & Hollister, one hundred thousand acres; and J. B. Haggin, two hundred thousand acres, assessed to him in Kern County in eighteen hundred and seventy-seven.

In addition to these, let us quote a few more facts and figures: From a tabular statement published by the State Board of Equalization in eighteen hundred and seventy-two, we learn that there were at that time twenty-seven thousand nine hundred and ninety-six farms of one hundred acres and upwards, assessed in the State, containing a total acreage of twenty-three million three hundred and forty thousand. These farms are classified into nine different classes. The first class, which embraces twenty-three thousand three hundred and fifteen farms, containing from one hundred to five hundred acres each, has a total acreage of four million six hundred and sixty-three thousand. The ninth class, which includes one hundred and twenty-two farms, containing twenty thousand acres and upwards, has a total acreage of eight million seven hundred and eighty-two thousand, which is an average of seventy-one thousand six hundred and forty-seven acres each. These one hundred and twenty-two large farms embrace double the quantity of land comprised in the twenty-three thousand three hundred and fifteen small farms of the first class—one of the most startling facts ascertained by examination of the figures furnished in the reports!

Further, the area occupied by our twenty-seven thousand nine hundred and ninety-six farms of one hundred acres and upwards, embracing twenty-three million three hundred and forty thousand nine hundred acres in all, is larger than the whole cultivated area of the State of Ohio. That State, with twenty-one million acres of land under cultivation, has one hundred and ninety-five thousand farms, the majority of which are below one hundred acres each. California, with twenty-seven thousand nine hundred and ninety-six farms, has already disposed of two million acres of land more than is under tillage in Ohio. In the latter State there are but sixty-nine farms exceeding one thousand acres. Here there are two thousand two hundred and ninety-eight of that class, and they embrace nearly seventeen million acres of land.

We supplement these figures, which are peculiarly startling and suggestive, with the following calculation: The twenty-three million three hundred and forty thousand acres of land in this State now occupied by only twenty-seven thousand nine hundred and ninety-six farms, if subdivided into holdings of one hundred and sixty acres each, would make exactly one hundred and forty-five thousand eight hundred and sixty-five farms; and reckoning that each family owning a farm would consist of at least four persons, this would give us a total agricultural population of five hundred and eighty-three thousand four hundred and sixty persons, or nearly quite as much as the present total population of California.

It is quite evident that such of the large landed properties of California as were not originally covered by genuine Mexican grants have not been honestly acquired through operation of the preëmption laws of the United States, the letter and intent of which aim to limit each person to the acquisition of one hundred and sixty acres of land. Indeed, from the numerous evidences of fraud perpetrated in the later acquirements of landed property here, and the dubious legality of the titles by which many large estates in this State are held, there is ground for the belief that a majority of these monopolies have grown up through a total disregard of strict law and justice.

Some of these outrageous robberies of the public domain have been engineered through specious but dishonest Acts passed by the State Legislature and by Congress, regarding swamp, timber, mineral, so called desert lands, etc. The audacity of these swindles is astounding, and yet the people and press of California have apparently looked on almost without a murmur, and certainly without any adequate attempt to prevent them. Forged Mexican grants have, also, in numerous instances, been floated over coveted portions of the public lands, and though some of these have been proved to be fraudulent, others have been successfully carried through the Courts. Deputies from the United States Surveyor-General's office have been bribed by purchasers of Mexican grants to make dishonest surveys, extending the boundaries designated in the original documents, and increasing the number of leagues claimed. The immense donations of lands by the General Government to the Central Pacific Railroad Company and its branches—seen when too late to have been a serious error of policy, if, indeed, it should not be termed a crime against the people by their public servants—has also alienated a large portion of the public domain from preëmption settlement and helped to swell the possessions and power of a monopoly which aims at nothing less than dominating and dictating to the government of this State.

From these various causes and the facts cited, it may be summed up as a positive fact that California is, to-day, the worst land monopoly-cursed State in the Union. After all the magnificent patrimony which she brought into that Union, the amount of good arable land within her borders unoccupied, unclaimed, and fit for settlement, is very limited indeed.

The indignation naturally aroused in our minds by contemplation of the damning facts relating to this question, which investigation brings to light, leads us to say that if the higher law of God's justice could only for a brief time hold sway among men, there would be a sure remedy for all the land stealing perpetrated in California—and that would be confiscation and immediate restitution to the State. But we are reminded that there is a wide divergence between God's equity and human law, and that through the imperfections of the latter the ends of justice are often defeated. So it is in this case.

The adoption of a system of limitation in the ownership of land—not to affect present lawful possessions, but to go into operation in the future—appears to us the most practicable means within the power of the State to remedy the evil of land monopoly. In accordance with these views, we recommend the adoption of amendment number one hundred and forty-three, introduced by Mr. O'Sullivan, as follows:

RELATING TO LAND TENURES AND LIMITATION OF OWNERSHIP.

SECTION 1. Perpetuities and monopolies are contrary to the genius of a free government, and shall never be allowed; nor shall the law of primogeniture or entailment ever be in force in this State.

SEC. 2. All lands within the State are declared to be allodial, and feudal tenures are prohibited. Leases and grants of land for a longer term than ten years, in which rent or service of any kind shall be reserved, and all fines and like restraints upon alienation, reserved in any grant of land hereafter made, are declared to be void. No lessee shall sublet any portion of the land held in his name.

SEC. 3. No persons other than citizens, or those who have declared their intentions to become such, shall ever acquire or own, either by purchase or otherwise, real property in this State; and in case any alien dies possessed of real property in this State, contrary to this provision, such property shall escheat to the State. Nor shall any land in this State be held in trust for any alien; but the creation of any trust in lands for the benefit of an alien shall at once escheat the land to the State.

SEC. 4. No person shall forever hereafter be permitted to acquire, in any manner, more than six hundred and forty (640) acres of land in this State. Copartnerships, joint, or other ownership of lands, shall not be allowed contrary to this provision. No person who dies possessed of landed property in this State shall have the right to will or devise more than six hundred and forty (640) acres of land to any one heir; otherwise the said will shall be void; provided, however, that all land over and above six hundred and forty (640) acres so devised to each lawful heir, of which such deceased person died lawfully possessed, shall be sold to the highest bidders for cash, in quantities not exceeding six hundred and forty (640) acres each, and the proceeds divided equally among the lawful heirs.

SEC. 5. Actual occupation and continuous use for agricultural purposes during a period of one year shall constitute a title to the ownership of land in this State. Tracts of land of over six hundred and forty (640) acres in extent, which shall remain unoccupied and unused for agricultural purposes during a period of one year, shall be open to the occupation and use of citizens of the United States, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty (160) acres; provided, if it shall appear that any other person has previous title to such tract of land, the party occupying and using the same shall pay to said person the assessed value of the property.

SEC. 6. No more than one hundred and sixty (160) acres of land shall hereafter be granted or patented by the State, in any manner, to any one person. No grant or patent of lands by the State shall hereafter be made otherwise than upon the basis of actual settlement and use. No land scrip or land location certificates shall ever be issued in this State.

In conclusion, permit us to say that we have given this question the most careful consideration, and the further we have examined it the stronger have become our convictions that the whole land system of California is radically wrong, and that sweeping changes are demanded in the interest of the people and of good government. How to reach a solution of the question of land monopoly—which few deny to be an evil—may be considered the main point of difference between men. Some timid minds seem to look upon this question with a sort of sacred awe, as if there was something sacred in the monopoly of God's earth, and as if it were a dreadful thing to disturb what are called "vested rights," which in many cases are really "vested wrongs;" and we hear these timid ones cry out that all remedial measures are out of the question—that "there is no use locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen." But men who have honest convictions regarding the necessity of reform, and who earnestly seek the establishment of simple justice when it is demanded by the needs of society, will follow the path of duty to its logical goal, regardless of the objections of the timid, the blind, or the interested adherents of an infamous injustice.

Perhaps some may think the proposed limit of six hundred and forty acres too small—others, too large—an amount of land for the needs of one person. We believe it would afford an ample property for any reasonable family. Consider the effect which this limitation would have on the large estates of California if it became the supreme law. Through its operation land monopoly would gradually disappear throughout the State in the course of a generation, and where now there are leagues upon leagues of unimproved solitudes the dreary landscape would be changed into scenes of smiling farms and happy homes.

REPORT.

MR. HILBORN, from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses have had under consideration the resolution offered by Mr. Overton, providing for the payment of ten dollars to J. J. Flynn, for services as Clerk of the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings, herewith report the same back, and recommend that it be adopted.

S. G. HILBORN, for the Committee.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution:

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the sum of ten dollars be and is hereby ordered to be paid out of the funds of this Convention to J. J. Flynn, for services rendered as Clerk to the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings.

The resolution was adopted.

MEMORIAL ON CHINESE.

MR. MILLER. I have the following report to make from the Committee on Chinese, and if the Convention will permit I will read it myself:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Chinese, to whom was recommitted the memorial to the President, Senate, and House of Representatives of the United States, on the subject of Chinese immigration, beg leave to report the draft of a memorial, accompanying this report, for the action of the Convention.

Respectfully submitted.

JNO. F. MILLER, Chairman.

SACRAMENTO, December 17th, 1878.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The people of the State of California, by their delegates now assembled in Constitutional Convention, respectfully present to the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States this memorial, the object and purpose of which is to invoke the exercise of the supreme national authority for relief from Chinese immigration, an evil of such magnitude and of a character so threatening to the highest interests of the State as to excite in the minds of our whole people the most serious dissatisfaction and alarm.

As became a people devoted to the National Union, and filled with a profound reverence for law, we have repeatedly, by petition and memorial, through the action of our Legislature, and by our Senators and Representatives in Congress, sought the appropriate remedies against this great wrong, and patiently awaited with confidence the action of the General Government. Meanwhile this giant evil has grown, and strengthened, and expanded; its baneful effect upon the material interests of the people, upon public morals, and our civilization, becoming more and more apparent, until patience is almost exhausted, and the spirit of discontent pervades the State. It would be disingenuous in us to attempt to conceal our amazement at the long delay of appropriate action by the National Government toward the prohibition of an immigration which is rapidly approaching the character of an Oriental invasion, and which threatens to supplant Anglo-Saxon civilization on this coast. If the facts relating to this immigration now patent to all observers—if the ascertained knowledge now within the reach of every intelligent man—will not serve to awaken an interest upon this subject in the minds of the governing power of the nation, we are tempted to despair of ever reaching a remedy. If it be supposed, as has been often said, that the hostility to Chinese immigration is confined to a small and ignorant class of our people, we protest against such an assumption The discontent from this cause is almost universal. It is not limited to any political party, nor to any class or nationality. It does not spring from race antipathies, nor alone from economic considerations, nor from any religious sentiment, nor from low hatreds, or mercenary motive.

We submit that our people, being interested to a greater extent in commerce with China than any other portion of the American people, the reasons for this hostility to Chinese immigration must be considered overwhelming when sufficient to array the whole body of our people against a treaty which was intended to secure to that people, more than to any other, the great benefits to be derived from Asiatic commerce. Our sincerity cannot, therefore, be doubted, since we are willing to forego all the benefits of commerce with China, if need be, rather than suffer the ills which this immigration must inevitably entail upon us and our descendants.

Among the many reasons for our opposition to Chinese immigration—all of which cannot be stated in a brief memorial—we submit the following:

1. The country being now stocked with a vigorous, intelligent, progressive, and highly civilized people, there is no need of immigration for the increase of our population—certainly not of the immigration of a non-assimilative and alien race.

2. That, considering the character of Chinese immigrants in respect to their habits, and modes of life, and physical peculiarities, this immigration operates as a substitution of Chinese for white men of the Caucasian race, and not as an addition to our population—the question being, shall Chinese ultimately occupy the country, or shall it be held for the homes of men of the Caucasian race?

3. There is danger of an immense increase of Chinese immigrants in the near future. The effect of the famine now unhappily prevailing in the northern provinces of China is certain to cause a migration of greater proportions than any known in the history of the human races. The fear of hunger will drive the survivors of this calamity forth in prodigious numbers in quest of food—eastward, because there is no other outlet—and California offers the most fruitful fields for their sustenance. The speculators in Chinese labor will, if permitted, seize this opportunity to augment their fortunes by the importation of these hunger-driven creatures into our ports. This invasion is to be dreaded by us more than a hostile invasion by armed men, for upon the first note of alarm from such a cause the nation would hasten to our rescue and defense.

4. The Chinese bring with them habits and customs the most vicious and demoralizing. They are scornful of our laws and institutions. They establish their own tribunals for the redress of wrongs and injuries among themselves, independent of our Courts, and subject the victims of such tribunals to secret punishments the most barbarous and terrible. In our cities they live crowded and herded like beasts, generating the most dangerous diseases. They introduce the ancient, infectious, and incurable malady called leprosy, the germs of which, when once distributed, can never be eradicated, but fasten themselves upon the people as an eternal consuming rot. They poison our youth in both mind and body. They build no homes. They are, generally, destitute of moral principle. They are incapable of patriotism, and are utterly unfitted for American citizenship Their existence here, in great numbers, is a perpetual menace to republican institutions, a source of constant irritation and danger to the public peace.

5. The system of labor, which results from their presence, is a system which includes all, or nearly all, the vices of slavery, without the conservative influence which is incident to the domestic or paternal relation between master and slave. It degrades labor to the standard of mere brute energy, and thus excludes the labor of free white men who will not and cannot endure the degradation of competition with servile labor. Chinese labor is, therefore, substituted for the labor of free white men, and the State is afflicted with a quasi-slave system, under which Chinese population supplants white American citizens, and drives them to other fields or to starvation.

The necessary brevity of this memorial forbids the further enlargement of facts and reasons for the almost universal hostility in California to this immigration. We beg the earnest attention of the Government at Washington to this subject, fraught with immense interest to us, and, as we believe, to the whole people of the United States. Whatever the State of California may lawfully do to abate or mitigate this evil it has resolved to do, declaring, however, our settled determination to avoid all conflict with the national authority, and to limit our action to the exercise of the police power of the State. We ask most earnestly and respectfully of the Congress of the United States such prohibitory legislation as will effectually prevent the further immigration of Chinese coolies or laborers into the American ports of this coast.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move it be adopted.

MR. HUESTIS. I move that it be printed in the form of a memorial.

The memorial was adopted.

MR. HUESTIS. My idea was to have time to read it. This is a grave question.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I move that the Secretary have the memorial properly engrossed and present it to each member of this Convention for his personal signature.

The motion prevailed.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business on our file is the consideration of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Following is the draft of the proposed article on the Legislative Department presented by the Committee on Legislative Department:

ARTICLE IV.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial, and shall commence on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in January next ensuing the election of its members, at twelve o'clock M., unless the Governor shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No session shall continue longer than sixty days, except the first session called after the adoption of this Constitution, which may continue eighty days. And no bill shall be introduced, in either House, during the last ten days of the session, without the consent of two thirds of the members of said House.

SEC. 3. The members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, and their term of office shall be two years.

SEC. 4. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly, and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State, and of the district for which he shall be chosen, one year next before his election.

SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of thirty members, and the Assembly of sixty members, to be elected by districts, as hereinafter provided. The seats of the fifteen Senators from the odd numbered districts, chosen at the first election under this Constitution, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half the Senate, after the first election, shall be chosen every two years.

SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into thirty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called legislative districts. Each district shall choose one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered from one to thirty, inclusive, in numerical order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust said districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as nearly equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district. Until such adjustment shall be made, the First District shall consist of the Counties of Del Norte, Siskiyou, Modoc, Lassen, Shasta, and Trinity; the Second, of the Counties of Humboldt and Mendocino; the Third, of the Counties of Tehama and Butte; the Fourth, of the Counties of Colusa, Lake, and Sutter; the Fifth, of the County of Sonoma; the Sixth, of the Counties of Marin, Napa, and Contra Costa; the Seventh, of the Counties of Solano and Yolo; the Eighth, of the Counties of Sierra, Yuba, and Plumas; the Ninth, of the County of Nevada; the Tenth, of the Counties of Placer and El Dorado; the Eleventh, of the County of Sacramento; the Twelfth, of the Counties of Calaveras, Alpine, and Amador; the Thirteenth, of the County of San Joaquin; the Fourteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at a point where Larkin street intersects the waters of the Bay of San Francisco; thence meandering along the shore of said bay, in an easterly and southeasterly direction, to the point where Market street intersects said bay; thence along Market street to California street; thence along California street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to Vallejo street; thence along Vallejo street to Larkin street; thence along Larkin street to the waters of the Bay of San Francisco, the place of beginning. The Fifteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Larkin street intersects Vallejo street; thence along Vallejo street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to California street: thence along California street to Market street; thence along Market street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to Pine street; thence along Pine street to Larkin street; and thence along Larkin street to Vallejo street, the place of beginning. The Sixteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Franklin street intersects Pine street; thence along Pine street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to Market street; thence along Market street to Van Ness Avenue; thence along Van Ness Avenue to Tyler street; thence along Tyler street to Gough street; thence along Gough street to Geary street; thence along Geary street to Franklin street; thence along Franklin street to Pine street, the place of beginning. The Seventeenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Larkin street intersects the waters of the Bay of San Francisco; thence along Larkin street to Pine street; thence along Pine street to Franklin street; thence along Franklin street to Geary street; thence along Geary street to Gough street; thence along Gough street to Tyler street; thence along Tyler street to Van Ness Avenue; thence along Van Ness Avenue to Market street; thence along Market street to Ridley street; thence along Ridley street and said Ridley street produced in a direct line westerly to the Pacific Ocean; and thence meandering northerly and easterly along the waters of the Pacific Ocean and the Bay of San Francisco to Larkin street, the place of beginning. The Eighteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Market street intersects the waters of the Bay of San Francisco; thence meandering along the waters of said bay to the point where Channel street intersects the waters of said bay; thence along Channel street to Seventh street; thence along Seventh street to Harrison street: thence along Harrison street to Second street; thence along Second street to Market street; and thence along Market street to the waters of the Bay of San Francisco, the place of beginning. The Nineteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Second street intersects Market street; thence along Second street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Sixth street; thence along Sixth street to Market street; and thence along Market street to Second street, the place of beginning. The Twentieth, of all that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Sixth street intersects Market street; thence along Sixth street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Seventh Street; thence along Seventh street to Channel street; thence along Channel street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Fifteenth street; thence along Fifteenth street to Howard street; thence along Howard street to Fourteenth street; thence along Fourteenth street to Mission street; thence along Mission street to Ridley street; thence along Ridley street to Market street; and thence along Market street to Sixth street, the place of beginning. The Twenty-first, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Channel street intersects the Bay of San Francisco; thence along Channel Street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Fifteenth street; thence along Fifteenth street to Howard street; thence along Howard street to Fourteenth street; thence along Fourteenth street to Mission street; thence along Mission street to Ridley street; thence along Ridley street and the line of Ridley street projected westerly to the Pacific Ocean; thence southerly along the Pacific Ocean to the southern boundary line of the City and County of San Francisco; thence along said southern boundary line to the Bay of San Francisco; and thence meandering along the waters of the Bay of San Francisco to Channel street, the place of beginning. The Twenty-second, of Oakland Township, County of Alameda. The Twenty-third, of all that portion of the County of Alameda exclusive of Oakland Township. The Twenty-fourth, of the County of Santa Clara. The Twenty-fifth, of the Counties of Merced, Mariposa, Stanislaus, and Tuolumne. The Twenty-sixth, of the Counties of Tulare, Inyo, Fresno, and Mono. The Twenty-seventh, of the Counties of Santa Cruz, San Mateo, and San Benito. The Twenty-eighth, of the Counties of Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, and Monterey. The Twenty-ninth, of the County of Los Angeles. The Thirtieth, of the Counties of San Bernardino, San Diego, Kern, and Ventura.

SEC. 7. Each House shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members.

SEC. 8. A majority of each House shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

SEC. 9. Each House shall determine the rule of its own proceeding, and may, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member.

SEC. 10. Each House shall keep a Journal of its own proceedings, and publish the same, and the yeas and nays of the members of either House, on any question, shall, at the desire of any three members present, be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 11. Members of the Legislature shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest, and shall not be subject to any civil process during the session of the Legislature, nor for fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

SEC. 12. When a vacancy occurs in either House, from any cause, during the session of the Legislature, the House in which said vacancy occurs shall proceed immediately to elect, from the constituency deprived of representation, a member to fill said vacancy for said session. If the Legislature is not in session at the time the vacancy occurs, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancy.

SEC. 13. The doors of each House shall be open, except on such occasions as in the opinion of the House may require secrecy.

SEC. 14. Neither House shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

SEC. 15. No law shall be passed except by bill. Any bill may originate in either House, but may be amended or rejected by the other, and on the final passage of all bills, they shall be read at length, and the vote shall be by yeas and nays upon each bill separately, and shall be entered on the Journal; and no bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each House.

SEC. 16. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the House in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both Houses, by yeas and nays, by a majority of two thirds of the members of each House, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objection. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return, in which case it shall not become a law, unless the Governor, within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted), shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contains several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill. In such case he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor, and the appropriation so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the House in which the bill originated a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor.

SEC. 17. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. When sitting for that purpose the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members elected.

SEC. 18. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Justices of the Supreme Court, and Judges of the Superior Courts, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State; but the party convicted or acquitted shall nevertheless be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment according to law. All other civil officers shall be tried for misdemeanor in office in such manner as the Legislature may provide.

SEC. 19. No Senator or member of Assembly shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this State, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which have been increased during such term, except such offices as may be filled by election by the people.

SEC. 20. No person holding any lucrative office under the United States, or any other power, shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under this State; provided, that officers in the militia, to which there is attached no annual salary, or local officers, or Postmasters whose compensation does not exceed five hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed lucrative.

SEC. 21. No person who shall be convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of this State, or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State, and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution, not under the exclusive management and control of the State as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature.

SEC. 23. The members of the Legislature shall receive for their services a compensation per diem, and mileage, to be fixed by law, and paid out of the public treasury; but no increase of the compensation shall take effect during the term for which the members of either House shall have been elected.

SEC. 24. Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title, and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reënacted and published at length as revised or amended.

SEC. 25. The Legislature shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say:

First—Regulating the jurisdiction and duties of Justices of the Peace, Police Judges, and of Constables.

Second—For the punishment of crimes and misdemeanors.

Third—Regulating the practice of Courts of justice.

Fourth—Providing for changing the venue in civil or criminal cases.

Fifth—Granting divorces.

Sixth—Changing the names of persons or places.

Seventh—Vacating roads, town plats, streets, alleys, or public grounds not owned by the State.

Eighth—Summoning and impaneling grand and petit juries, and providing for their compensation.

Ninth—Regulating county and township business, or the election of county and township officers.

Tenth—For the assessment or collection of taxes.

Eleventh—Providing for conducting elections, or designating the places of voting, except on the organization of new counties.

Twelfth—Affecting estates belonging to minors or other persons under legal disabilities.

Thirteenth—Extending the time for the collection of taxes.

Fourteenth—Giving effect to invalid deeds, wills, or other instruments.

Fifteenth—Refunding money paid into the State treasury.

Sixteenth—Releasing or extinguishing, in whole or in part, the indebtedness, liability, or obligation of any corporation or person to this State, or to any municipal corporation therein.

Seventeenth—Declaring any person of age, or authorizing any minor to sell, lease, or incumber his or her property.

Eighteenth—Legalizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officers.

Nineteenth—Granting to any corporation, association, or individual any special or exclusive right, privilege, or immunity.

Twentieth—Exempting property from taxation.

Twenty-first—Changing county seats.

Twenty-second—Restoring to citizenship persons convicted of infamous crimes.

Twenty-third—Regulating the rate of interest on money.

Twenty-fourth—Authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens.

Twenty-fifth—Chartering or licensing ferries, bridges, or roads.

Twenty-sixth—Remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures.

Twenty-seventh—Providing for the management of common schools.

Twenty-eighth—Creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, cities and counties, townships, election or school districts.

Twenty-ninth—Affecting the fees or salary of any officer.

Thirtieth—Changing the law of descent or succession.

Thirty-first—Authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children.

Thirty-second—Authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, or maintaining roads, highways, streets, alleys, or public grounds.

Thirty-third—For limitation of civil or criminal actions.

Thirty-fourth—In all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, no local or special law shall be enacted.

SEC. 26. The Legislature shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets, or tickets in any scheme in the nature of a lottery, in this State. The Legislature shall pass laws to regulate or prohibit the buying and selling of the shares of the capital stock of corporations in any Stock Board, Stock Exchange, or stock market under the control of any association. All contracts for the sale of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association on margin, or to be delivered at a future day, shall be void, and any money paid on such contracts may be recovered by the party paying it by suit in any Court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 27. When a Congressional District shall be composed of two or more counties, it shall not be separated by any county belonging to another district. No county or city and county shall be divided in forming a Congressional District so as to attach one portion of a county or city and county to another county or city and county; but the Legislature may divide any county or city and county into as many Congressional Districts as it may be entitled to by law.

SEC. 28. The Legislature shall pass laws for the regulation and limitation of the charges for services performed and commodities furnished by corporations, and where laws shall provide for the selection of any person or officer to regulate and limit such rates, no such person or officer shall be selected by any corporation, and no person shall be selected who is an officer or stockholder in any corporation.

SEC. 29. Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liabilities of the corporators and other means as may be prescribed by law. The property of corporations now existing, or hereafter created, shall forever be subject to taxation, the same as the property of individuals, and the franchises of such corporations shall be assessed at their actual cash value, and taxed accordingly.

SEC. 30. The term corporations, as used in this article, shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships. And all corporations shall have the right to sue, and shall be subject to be sued in all Courts, in like cases as natural persons.

SEC. 31. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes, but associations may be formed under general laws for the deposit of gold and silver and other lawful money of the United States; but no such association shall make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, check, ticket, certificate, promissory note, or other paper, or the paper of any bank, to circulate as money.

SEC. 32. The Legislature of this State shall prohibit, by law, any person or persons, association, company, or corporation from exercising the privileges of banking or creating paper to circulate as money.

SEC. 33. Each stockholder of a corporation or joint stock association shall be individually and personally liable for his proportion of all its debts and liabilities contracted or incurred while he was a stockholder, and the Trustees or Directors of such corporation or association, and each of them, shall be responsible, individually, for the misappropriation by the officers thereof of the funds or deposits of such corporation or association.

SEC. 34. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide, by general laws, for the organization of city, town, and county governments, and for assessing and collecting taxes for the support of the same; provided, that no city, city and county, town, or county shall ever incur a debt which, together with existing indebtedness, shall exceed two per cent. of the assessed value of the property therein. Such value shall be ascertained from the assessment roll for State and county purposes made immediately previous to incurring such indebtedness; provided, however, that a city, city and county, town, or county may borrow money under and in accordance with the following conditions and limitations in addition to any other conditions and limitations contained in the Constitution, namely: the debt must be for some single work or object only, and must be authorized by a resolution passed by a vote of three fourths of all the members elected to the Board of Supervisors, Common Council, or local Legislature. Such resolution shall also distinctly specify the single work or object for which the debt is to be created, and the amount of the debt authorized, and shall contain provisions for a sinking fund to meet the same at maturity, and requiring at least ten per cent. of the principal to be annually raised by taxation and paid into the sinking fund. Such resolution shall not take effect until it shall be ratified at an election held in said city, city and county, county, or town, at which no other matter is voted upon, and which shall be held within —— days after the passage of said order or resolution. The Legislature shall make such laws as may be necessary to provide for holding such election and ascertaining the result thereof.

SEC. 35. In all elections by the Legislature the members thereof shall vote viva voce, and the votes shall be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 36. The general appropriation bill shall contain no item or items of appropriation other than such as are required to pay the salaries of the State officers, the expenses of the government, and of the institutions under the exclusive control and management of the State.

SEC. 37. Neither the Legislature, nor any county, city and county, township, school district, or other municipal corporation, shall ever make an appropriation, or pay from any public fund whatever, or grant anything to or in aid of any religious sect, church, creed, or sectarian purpose, or help to support or sustain any school, college, university, hospital, or other institution controlled by any religious creed, church, or sectarian denomination whatever; nor shall any grant or donation of personal property or real estate ever be made by the State, or any city, city and county, town, or other municipal corporation, for any religious creed, church, or sectarian purpose whatever.

SEC. 38. The Legislature shall have no power to give or to lend, or to authorize the giving or lending, of the credit of the State, or of any county, city and county, city, township, or other political corporation or subdivision of the State now existing, or that may be hereafter established, in aid of or to any person, association, or corporation, whether municipal or otherwise, or to pledge the credit thereof, in any manner whatever, for the payment of the liabilities of any individual, association, municipal, or other corporation whatever; nor shall it have power to make any grant, or authorize the making of any grant, of any public money or thing of value to any individual, municipal, or other corporation whatever; and it shall not have power to authorize the State, or any political subdivision thereof, to subscribe for stock, or to become a stockholder in any corporation whatever.

SEC. 39. The Legislature shall have no power to grant, or authorize any county or municipal authority to grant any extra compensation or allowance to any public officer, agent, servant, or contractor, after service has been rendered, or a contract has been entered into and performed in whole or in part, nor to pay, or to authorize the payment of any claim hereafter created against the State, or any county or municipality of the State, under any agreement or contract made without express authority of law; and all such unauthorized agreements or contracts shall be null and void.

SEC. 40. The Legislature shall not ratify any amendment to the Constitution of the United States which may be proposed by Congress, except such as shall have been proposed and published at least thirty days next preceding the general election for members of the Legislature ratifying such amendment.

SEC. 41. In case of a contested election in either branch of the Legislature only the claimant decided entitled to the seat shall receive from the State per diem compensation, or mileage.

SEC. 42. In order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of this Constitution, no officer shall be suspended or superseded thereby, until the election and qualification of the several officers provided for in this Constitution.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The people of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no amendment to section one, the Secretary will read section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial, and shall commence on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in January next ensuing the election of its members, at twelve o'clock M., unless the Governor shall in the interim convene the Legislature by proclamation.

No session shall continue longer than sixty days, except the first session called after the adoption of this Constitution, which may continue eighty days. And no bill shall be introduced in either House during the last ten days of the session, without the consent of two thirds of the members of said House.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I have a resolution to offer:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Convention that the report of the Committee on Legislative Department be recommitted to said committee, with instructions to so amend it as to provide that the members of the Legislature, both Senate and Assembly, shall be elected at the same time and place for the term of four years; to hold one session of the Legislature during the term of these officers, except oftener convened by the Governor of the State; and that said regular session shall be held after the second year of the Governor's term has expired.

The Legislature we are going to have we are going to take away all the special legislation from it. There will be only the necessity for overhauling the general laws of the State. Each session of the Legislature costs now two hundred and thirteen thousand dollars. This will save the State about forty thousand dollars a year, this theory of the committee; but the theory of having only one session in four years would save the State, from the present way, two hundred and thirteen thousand dollars. Now, sir, the meeting of the Legislature is a universal cause of trotting into existence the political machinery throughout the State, and it is rather demoralizing to the people—these frequent elections, which really amount to nothing. The Governor could have full power to call the Legislature together at any time that he should need them, and I think we could trust them for four years, when that session would be in the middle of the Governor's term. The feelings of my district are uniformly that the Legislature should only be allowed to meet once in four years, for really the people, when the Legislature has met, have felt the greatest anxiety to have them adjourn. They are a most expensive body. The Codes have really to be reprinted; and it appears to me that the good sense of the people is represented in this matter, and that they demand that the Legislature shall only meet once in four years. It will save the State an immense amount, and I really think it will be a benefit to the whole country. Here it is not so universal. We are here among politicians. I approve of the report of the committee, so far as they have reduced it, but I think we ought to confine ourselves to one session in four years, leaving the Governor the power to call it together, if he desires.

MR. FILCHER. I desire to ask the gentleman if he knows of a State in the Union, or of a civilized government in creation, where the Legislature meets as seldom as once in four years?

MR. WHITE. I do not think there is; but it was only a short time ago that the Legislature met every year. They are all meeting now every two years and they will soon meet every four years. I find in the old State of Pennsylvania they are tired of these political bodies meeting. The young men of the country are turning into politicians all over the State. They give up their employment and go into politics as a business. If there was but one session in four years these men would die out between the four years and be obliged to go at some honest employment. All the young men are looking to politics as a means of livelihood. I would rather that one of my sons would carry a hod for a living than to take the best office in the gift of this State. Therefore, I would like to see something done to check this office hunting.

MR. MORELAND. Suppose you have the session quadrennial, how are you going to provide for the election of the United States Senator?

MR. WHITE. I suppose that could be done in some way, and that is the reason why I brought this thing up.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I offer an amendment; to insert in section two, line six, after the word "Constitution," the words "which may continue one hundred and fifty days."

MR. CHAIRMAN. The only motion that the gentleman from Santa Cruz can make is to move that the committee rise. It cannot be done in the committee.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise for that purpose.

The motion was lost.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend by inserting in line six, after the word "Constitution," the words "which may continue one hundred and fifty days." As the section is reported it reads: "No session shall continue longer than sixty days, except the first session called after the adoption of this Constitution, which may continue eighty days." I do not desire to speak upon this subject, but it seems to me, if this Constitution is adopted, and the Legislature is convened under the old Constitution, and it is incumbent upon them to frame a new code of laws for this State, they cannot do it intelligently and faithfully and properly unless they have one hundred and fifty days. It seems to me that it is entirely too short a time to say that they shall frame a code of laws in consonance with the new Constitution in eighty days. We have seen the effect of attempting to frame even a Constitution, a short instrument, in one hundred days, and we have accomplished almost nothing. It seems to me a moral impossibility to accomplish it in eighty days, and therefore, why the restriction? It seems to me that the Legislature convened after the adoption of this Constitution, if the same be adopted, should certainly have one hundred and fifty days, to intelligently do its work. There is no object in putting men under a forcing process so that the Legislature must be called again, the next year, in order to change the law. If a Legislature is to come here to put into operation this Constitution, let them have ample time to do it; let them have time to mature their work; let them have time to do it properly, and do not bind them down to eighty days. I believe that one hundred and fifty days is just as short a time as we ought to make it, and I would be in favor of six months, but I do not believe that any body of men can do the work necessary to be done, if this Constitution be adopted, in eighty days.

MR. BROWN. I second the amendment.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The sessions of the Legislature shall be quadrennial, and shall commence on the first Monday in December next ensuing the election of members, unless the Governor of the State shall, in the interim, convene a special session by proclamation. No session shall continue longer than one hundred and twenty days."

MR. O'DONNELL. I offer that as a substitute.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman: I desire to say that from the first I have been in favor of quadrennial sessions of the Legislature. Now, it is proposed to make quite a reform in our Constitution. The object or desire is to eliminate all of this local legislation, and to put in a constitutional provision that will do away with all that class of legislation. So far as the report of the committee is concerned in that direction, I am fully in accord with it, but I think that the sessions of the Legislature of this State should be quadrennial. I know in our own County Convention, which was largely attended, there being about one hundred present, without being required to stand upon any platform, I told them all that I should favor quadrennial sessions of the Legislature, and they knew the grounds upon which I stood. Now it is said this is a novelty. It occurs to me that we have drawn very liberally from the Constitutions of other States, and I think it is nothing to our discredit if we have a little novelty in the Constitution of California. I say that once in four years is often enough to meet here, and in that event a better body of men will be selected. I am not in favor of having this election at the same time of the Presidential election. Voting for electors for President and Vice President would perhaps make a ticket unnecessarily large, and perhaps it would make the honesty of each to depend upon the suffrages of the people at any one election. But I am in favor of quadrennial sessions of the Legislature, commencing on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November of next year, and every four years after. I think a good deal of time is lost by having the session commence before the holidays, and therefore I am in favor of so much of the report of the committee as says that they shall meet on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in January. It will be a great saving to this State, and I say that that constitutional stricture should be based upon economy. It is a move in the right direction, and I say that on economic grounds this should be favored. If we limit the session to sixty days, and eliminate all this local legislation, and confine the legislation to general matters, I say that sixty days will be time enough, and four years frequent enough, and I believe that that is in accord with the sentiment of the people of this State. Furthermore, if any emergency presents itself the Governor can call the Legislature together. There is no occasion to have these biennial sessions. Almost uniformly at first in all of the States the sessions were every year, now they are mostly biennial. If we make the sessions quadrennial there will be a better class of men selected, and the interests of the people of this State will be looked after better than they are at present. Therefore I am entirely in sympathy with the proposition to have quadrennial sessions.

MR. WICKES. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me there would be a little difficulty in the election of a United States Senator. I am in favor of biennial sessions, and of confining these sessions to short terms, and leaving all local legislation to the county Boards of Supervisors.

REMARKS OF MR. JOYCE.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman: I am very sorry to hear this cry of reform being raised here again. It seems to me this old penny wise and pound foolish cry rises in this Convention very often. It seems to me that we cannot afford to abolish the Legislature altogether and place in the hands of the Governor the whole power.

MR. WHITE. Were you elected on a platform that favored sessions once in four years?

MR. JOYCE. No, sir.

MR. WHITE. Yes, you were.

MR. JOYCE. I believe there is a good deal of corporations in this. I believe the people are hoodwinked. I believe that when our old States were organized they were organized by honest men and conscientious people. In some places corporations were unknown. Since these corrupt corporations have been formed they come in for an abolition of our Legislatures as a whole. I believe they go in for putting power in the hands of the Governors, and the next thing will be the Governors oppress the citizens. We are here almost eighty days, and what have we done? I believe that the State of California is ground down by the combined combination of corporations; that it would take them at least four or six weeks of this sixty days to get through with the election of a United States Senator, and before they could get what was necessary to protect the people against the power of corporations that the sixty days would be up. I do not believe that the people are so ground down by the Legislature or direct salaries of officers as what they are by the monetary jobs and accumulated salaries of our officers. The contractors of San Francisco rob the people of that city and county more than their whole public tax for the paying of public officers. This we do not say a word about. We want to tear down salaries and bring down wages. The corporate bodies of this State want to bring down their officials, and they want to show on the outside. I do not believe it can be done by crippling the hands of our Legislature. I believe that our Legislature, if it was convened once a year, and then convened for ninety days, could do more. I am sorry to hear this cry from our side of the house. I would like to know how many of these corrupt bills have ever been vetoed by the Governors of this State. I do not want to see this nigger in the fence where there is no nigger in the fence. I want no hoodwinking on the ground of economy. Here those people tell us that it is almost impossible to find honest men for the position of legislators. The consistency of these arguments is beyond the knowledge of workingmen. The whole thing looks suspicious; at least it does to me. I have an amendment to offer, if it is in order, Mr. President.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by inserting the words 'one hundred' in line five, instead of the word 'sixty,' and insert the words 'one hundred and fifty,' in line six, instead of the word 'eighty.'

MR. DOWLING. I am sorry to hear men laboring under misapprehension——

MR. MORELAND. I suggest to the members of the Workingmen's party that they should "pool their issues."

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by inserting at the end of the fourth line, 'No session shall have pay for a longer period than sixty days, except the first session called after the adoption of this Constitution.'"

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: There are several amendments pending now. I expect to support this report. I believe it to be a good one—the best report that has been made to this body, and as to the amendment pending—as to time, I think the true limit should be to limit the pay and allow them to sit as long as they please. If the provisions of this report are adopted there will be no necessity for about seven eighths of the bills that are now presented. I think the last session considered nine hundred and fifty bills, and not to exceed two hundred. I think, were general laws. I do not think after the adoption of this Constitution there will be any necessity for changing more than one hundred and fifty laws. I think it better to limit the amount paid than the time of the meeting. I think that five hundred dollars should be the limit for a term of the Legislature. I am in favor of the Legislature meeting every two years. Really, I would prefer the Legislature should meet annually instead of every four years. I believe in bringing the Government as near to the people as possible. I do not believe in leaving it to the Governor. I think we propose to bring the representatives a little nearer to the people, so that the laws shall be a reflex of the people of this State. That is the policy of a republican government. The only change to be made in the Constitution, in my mind, is to limit the pay that they should receive at any general session of the Legislature.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz. Mr. Chairman: The people of my section are in favor of the Legislature meeting once in four years. In fact, they do not care if it never meets. They can get along without it.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out "eighty," and insert "one hundred and fifty."

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: It does appear to me that this length of time will be considered none too great, taking into consideration the fact that there is a new starting point almost throughout, and that laws are to be made in accordance with the new Constitution, to suit its peculiarities; to suit its provisions throughout. It will require time; and unless there is given sufficient time to investigate, to consider, to weigh and balance the laws that are to be made, and to compare them with this great organic law that is now under consideration, it will be merely impossible in the short length of time to make laws which will answer the purpose. It does not require that there should be any lengthy argument upon this subject. We must know at once that the work will be one of great magnitude, and that there should be no hurry in this matter in consequence of there being a narrow limitation of time. We have seen the ill effects of this here in this body, and we would not wish this to be repeated when the Legislature meets for the purpose of making laws, in many respects different from any laws which we have had before, and which should correspond nicely with the Constitution now being made. I am in favor of the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I concur entirely with the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, in regard to limiting the pay instead of the time the Legislature may remain in session. They will be driven in the last few days to consider the most important legislation, and the result will be hasty and ill considered legislation. Now, if you limit the compensation you accomplish the whole purpose, and then let the terms be continued until the work is completed and completed properly and in order. I was about to move to strike out all of the section from the word "in" in the fourth line, to the word "days" in the sixth line, to meet that object.

REMARKS OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: There seems to be a great deal of difference of opinion among the members in regard to this matter. I will say that the Committee on Legislative Department arrived at the conclusion that sixty days session would be amply sufficient for all the purposes of legislation hereafter, and that that conclusion was arrived at from consideration of the fact that by changing the time of meeting until after the holidays, we had saved at least twenty days; because I believe that twenty days have been wasted on account of the holidays and other adjournments for a long time. Again, we have provided here such limits as in our judgment will, if adopted by this Convention, put an end to special legislation; and we all know that at least two thirds of the time of former Legislatures has been consumed in such legislation as will be prohibited if this report is adopted. Sixty days is long enough for any Legislature to make necessary changes in general laws; and eighty days limit for the first session was that which was adopted in the committee, after some difference of opinion, and in my mind it is sufficient. I do not understand that it is necessary, because this Constitution is adopted, to have a new code of laws. I do not understand that the Constitution is going to repeal all our statutes, and do not see really that any more time will necessarily be consumed by the first session than any subsequent session of the Legislature; and I cannot see why there will be any greater difficulty or any more time necessary for the first Legislature than in any subsequent session. It will be necessary to make some changes in the Code of Civil Procedure. The twenty days extra allowance is amply sufficient for that. I have no particular pride of opinion about this report, but I think that the time here is amply sufficient. I believe that it is proposed that the Legislature should meet as often as once in two years. Very large interests are confided to the executive officers of this State. They are to report to the Legislature, and two years is long enough between the examinations of the accounts of these receiving and dispensing agents, and ascertaining what has been done in the way of executing the laws and dispensing the money of the State. Great changes have been made and will be made which may render proper the readjustment of the rate of taxation. I think the sessions of the Legislature should be as often as once in two years. The suggestion made by the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, that it is to allow, instead of per diem, a gross sum to each member of the Legislature for the session; that might, I say, render the sessions shorter than they would be otherwise. I think the report of the committee is proper and ought to be adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher.

The amendment was lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Joyce.

The amendment was lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Smith. The Chair hears no second to the amendment.

MR. VAN DYKE. I send up my amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out in line four, from and including the word 'no,' down to and including the word 'days' in line six."

MR. VAN DYKE. The purpose of that amendment is to strike out the limit on the session, and then when we reach the compensation then to limit the compensation.

The amendment was lost.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'which may continue eighty days,' and insert in same place 'for which members thereof shall not have pay for more than one hundred and twenty days.'"

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: Would that amendment be subject to amendment? If so I would move to strike out "one hundred and twenty" and insert "one hundred." I believe a majority of the Convention will agree upon a session of one hundred days.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I accept the amendment.

MR. INMAN. Mr. Chairman: I hope this Convention will make no change in this report. The Chairman has said sixty days is sufficient time. We are not going to pull to pieces the statutes of the State nor the Codes. I hope that this Convention will put a veto upon all those propositions when they do not bring any good reason for them, and stand by not only this report, but the reports of all the committees. I hope there will be no more amendments offered.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I shall oppose the amendment unless it is to strike out the limit in regard to time. As the Convention is not willing to limit the pay instead of the time, I shall support the report of the committee.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH, OF FOURTH DISTRICT.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: If the Legislature is not doing right, and there is outside support, it can very easily continue without pay from the State, and I believe it is a thing that should be certain and fixed by law. It is uncertain how much new legislation will be required by the first session. It is certain that there will be considerable. There is some new matter and some novel matter introduced already into this Constitution; and it is certain that in addition to the ordinary business of legislation, and in addition to some change in the laws necessary, there would have to be considerable new legislation under the new Constitution, and we have already found that the Legislature has made a great mistake in limiting us to one hundred days. I do not know that we have committed any great offense against time. There has been, of course, some little delay, and I think we have found here in our experience in this body, that the hundred days is a very short time. I think it would be better for the first session, inasmuch as it is uncertain how much would have to be done, to give them some more time, and a hundred days is little enough. They would require at least that much time, and they should have pay for that much time. If it should happen that a great deal more legislation should be necessary, let them stay, as we stay, beyond the time without any pay.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I hope we shall not make the mistake to too much limiting the first session. The other is all right; but if gentlemen will reflect a moment they will see that there will necessarily be a great deal of legislation. In regard, for instance, to the subject of municipal corporations, we are going to take from the Legislature a large body of power, and it will be necessary to regulate municipal corporations to a very great extent; there will have to be a very large amount of legislation there. Then, if we organize our judiciary, as we contemplate, there will be considerable legislation there; then, as we have provided for the matter of corporations not municipal, there is very important legislation there, at the first session; and, as in regard to the subject of taxation, it is probable that considerable careful legislation will have to be adopted; we shall have to adopt, perhaps, an entire new taxation law. It is not a matter of great moment whether the Legislature, at its first session, shall sit a few days longer or a few days less time, but give it ample time, so that it can set into operation this new Constitution under the most favorable circumstances, and, therefore, with careful legislation. I believe we would do no wrong to allow them to stay four months and pay them if necessary. After that the sixty days would be perfectly proper. I hope the committee will not limit them down to eighty days. I believe it will be impossible to set in operation this Constitution in that length of time. The report, in its main features, I agree with; I think it an admirable report. I am not in favor of great changes. I hope the time will be extended to at least one hundred days. I think one hundred and twenty days would be preferable. I had proposed to offer this amendment striking out "eighty" and inserting "one hundred and twenty," and then if the gentlemen think it is too long to pay them for one hundred and twenty days, we can, in the resolution fixing the compensation, say that they shall only be paid for one hundred, but let them sit after one hundred days. I hope that we will strike out "eighty" and insert "one hundred and twenty."

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I am somewhat surprised that so much opposition should be manifested to a proposed section of the Constitution which embodies a proposition so universally demanded by the people. I know that it has been widely discussed on the stump. It is true that there is a widespread sentiment among the people opposed to legislation generally. That sentiment which has caused them to look upon legislative bodies as an evil is calculated to create a spirit of this kind; and I know that certain candidates told the people that they were in favor of having fewer sessions, or quadrennial sessions, or less time. I am convinced that it is not the right principle, and would work an evil to our general form of government. It has been suggested here, in reference to that point, that it would be inconvenient to elect two United States Senators in six years; and so it would. There is an objection in that point. It has been suggested that we could not well foresee the condition of the country, and could not wisely provide for the revenue for so long a time. That is also an objection. But there is another and more vital objection, in my opinion, and that is the idea of so long absenting the people from those who have power over them. It is a principle that we cannot afford, in my opinion, to indorse. The idea that the administration and the Legislature could come in here simultaneously and go out together is not a good one. The administration would be absolutely left to itself during its term. Assuming that the Governor should become implicated in some nefarious practices, I ask you what power there is under such a system to reach him? You provide that the Governor may be impeached, but as soon as the sixty days of the Legislature are over he is left to himself. One of the best features of our government is that the officers are frequently brought face to face with those whom the people elect to scrutinize their action. The oftener you can send up persons directly from the people, and in this capacity legislators come, to look into and examine the affairs of State, and confront the officers enlisted with power by the people, the better your government.

In reference to the time of the sessions, that matter was thoroughly discussed in committee, and I believe that the judgment of the committee will be satisfactory to the people. We have required that the Legislature shall not meet until after the holidays. Then we have provided that no special legislation shall be enacted. It provides for cutting off largely all special legislation. A great amount of time has been spent on these special bills, and if you sift it right down and get right into the internal workings, you would find that not thirty days, on the average, have been earnestly, studiously, and faithfully devoted to the consideration of general measures. The committee at first decided in favor of sixty days, but on further consideration concluded to allow eighty days for the first session, because, in the event of the adoption of this Constitution, there would naturally be a little more legislation necessary. In other words, it would be necessary to alter many laws now existing in order to make them conform to this Constitution. It would be necessary to pass certain laws in reference to municipal corporations. A few general laws will, and only a few will be required; perhaps one for each of these reports will meet the whole requirement. I claim that a bill general in its nature can be considered, and thoroughly considered, in less time than we have devoted here to the consideration of one of the reports of our committees. There is another point in favor of less time as compared with the time required by this body. It must be remembered that body is smaller than this. The largest house, if this report is adopted, will contain but sixty members, and I think it is a rule that will hold good that in proportion as the body is smaller the work will be facilitated. Sixty members may not bring all the experience of a larger body, but they will get over the work in much less time than a body twice as large. I believe the report is wide enough as it is. I haven't heard any amendment proposed that improves it. The reforms demanded are contained in it. The evil of special legislation is aimed at. The lobby influence is aimed at. If you scan that report narrowly you will find more reforms contained therein than will perhaps appear on the surface. I hope that the gentlemen will forego these little notions and trifling objections and let us get on to other and more important business.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: I do not care to remind gentlemen what platforms they were elected on, but this Convention has every admonition to reform. I hope that the committee will strike out that limitation in the second paragraph which provides that no session shall be longer than sixty days, except the first session. Leave the time entirely independent, and when we come to the amount of salary, not leave that to the Legislature. Such a question as that ought not to be left to the Legislature unless the times change so fast, and the value of money changes so fast, as to make it necessary to leave it to the Legislature. If money is going to depreciate, of course, they ought to have the power to raise their pay; but I am in favor of striking out the limitation as to time, and allow them in a future section five dollars a day and no more; in no case to exceed five hundred dollars for a session, excepting, perhaps, the first session. If they choose to hold over one hundred days, then give them no pay. If they get through with the business, what propriety is there in paying them five dollars a day when they are doing nothing. I think, that in view of the burden of debt that presses upon the people of the State that five dollars a day is all that should be paid. The cry is that nobody but rich men could come. Any man can come for that. A gentleman here tells us that he lives for five dollars a week; and five dollars a day is certainly as much luxury as any gentleman has a right to indulge in at the expense of the State. If any gentleman chooses to indulge in more let him pay it himself. Strike out these three lines, the fourth, fifth, and sixth, and when we come to a future part of the provisions put in a provision that they shall have five dollars a day, and in no case receive above five hundred dollars. I am in favor in the first place of striking that out and inserting nothing.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: The question of compensation is not referred to at all in the report of the Committee on Legislative Department. In the committee that matter was discussed, and the majority of the committee were of the opinion that it was beneath the dignity of the Constitution to fix the matter of compensation, which belonged exclusively to the Legislature, and also for the further reason that the compensation is fixed by law, and would continue, in the absence of anything in the Constitution to change it. As to the time, Mr. Chairman, I must confess that my judgment has undergone some change since we of the committee assented at least to this report, or to the main features of it. Since then we have acted upon a Bill of Rights, in which we have made many changes upon the subject of traverse juries, grand juries, and other subjects, and thus made work for the Legislature. Upon the subject of the Chinese, we have referred much important business to the Legislature. As to revenue, there will be a vast amount of business at the first session of the Legislature; and as to the matter of corporations, which has been passed upon so far as the general committee on that subject has been concerned, gentlemen will notice that in this report of the Committee on Legislative Department there are some very important provisions there with regard to all other corporations not treated upon by the Committee on Corporations proper, which will require very considerable business in the Legislature. It will be noticed there that by one section of the article on Legislative Department, the Legislature—unless it is otherwise provided, and it has not been, as we have passed corporations—has to provide for the fixing of the rates of all corporations. I maintain that this question of water rates which agitates a good many in this Convention will find its solution, perhaps, in that section of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department. I have no doubt that the first session of the Legislature will require double the time, or nearly so, of any succeeding session. I know there has been a good deal of time wasted here. There have been some speeches unnecessarily long, and some speeches unnecessarily repeated, and yet it is true that this, as a deliberative body, has worked as hard, perhaps, and intelligently, as any that has ever assembled in the State. And yet it is now plain and palpable, that if we perform our duty we will remain here a considerable time beyond the one hundred days, compensation or no compensation, to do our work faithfully. I do not know that one hundred and twenty days, however, are required; but I do believe, in view of what has transpired, and the vast amount of business which has been referred to the Legislature—for I understand it means the first session of the Legislature, where we make a thing mandatory—there is a necessity for a longer time than specified. Therefore I shall vote for the amendment to strike out "eighty," and I shall offer to strike out the word "eighty," in line six, and insert the words "one hundred." I think perhaps that may be acceptable as a compromise. As to the other sessions, I think sixty days are amply sufficient.

Now, Mr. Chairman, a word as to quadrennial sessions, and I have done. The argument presented on the question here was discussed in the committee, and it had considerable weight. We do not propose to try the experiment and be the first State among men, and in the history of mankind, to make the sessions of the Legislature less frequent than once in two years. Arguments have been used here that I do not propose to repeat; but I propose to simply say this, that it is, after all, only in the Legislature where the people are heard; and when we propose to make the sessions of the Legislature less frequent than biennial, the less frequent they are made the less republican is the form of government. I do not believe, however, from the expressions I have heard, that it is profitable to discuss these propositions which have so little support that there is no possibility or danger of their success.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I believe, sir, after reading the report of the Committee on the Legislative Department, that they have considered this subject with ability. They have made an able report, and in the main, I am prepared to support the report; but I hope it will not be considered treating the committee with any disrespect to offer or vote for material amendments. Now, it is well known that the first Legislature that meets under the new Constitution, if adopted—and I believe it will be adopted, for I believe we will make a good Constitution—will be the most important legislative body that was ever assembled in the State of California. It will be the most important deliberative body that ever met in California. I will not even except this Convention. While they will not be called upon to make the new machine, they will be called upon to adapt the new machine to the State Government under the circumstances occurring by the adoption of the new Constitution. As has been well remarked, the jury system will need a good deal of change if any amendment is adopted. The question of revenue and taxation, and the State's finances will need a great deal of consideration, of careful examination and adjusting. The question of municipal corporations, which has been referred to, and especially that part in relation to county and township organizations, will require much legislation. All these subjects coming up before the Legislature will require thought, will require study, and will require time for their proper adjustment.

Therefore I hope that the amendment will be adopted, striking out "eighty," and inserting "one hundred," in the sixth line. I am not one of those who believe, and I have not on any occasion claimed, that the Legislature of the several States are proverbially dishonest. We expect to elect an honest Legislature, and we suppose that they will do their work carefully and well. I am opposed to restricting the pay. I believe that five dollars a day is enough, but I am in favor of a per diem and not in favor of a fixed salary. Whenever the time expires in which members receive pay, I have found in all legislative bodies of which I have had any acquaintance, there is a class of members that commence a system of discontent and demoralization, moving to adjourn and impeding the progress of legislation, and I have never been able to find any good work done after the time has expired for which pay is allowed. Come down to old prices; give them a per diem, but give them a per diem as long as you allow their session to hold; and, if you confine them in any respect, confine the length of the session. Therefore I agree with the report, in confining the length of the session to sixty days for ordinary sessions, after the first meeting of the Legislature, which I believe should have one hundred days. I believe that would be a proper length of time.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman: If I am in order I would like to offer an amendment to strike out "eighty," in line six, and insert "one hundred."

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kern, Mr. Smith, has moved to strike out "which may continue eighty days," and insert in lieu thereof the words, "for which members thereof shall not have pay for more than one hundred days."

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman: I think that one hundred days for the first session is little enough. My idea is that one hundred and twenty days would be better than one hundred. Unless we should have a much better legislative body than I have been associated with, one hundred and twenty days is little enough. Sixty days is too great a limitation. I think that eighty days is little enough. I do not believe that it is wise to drive our legislators, and I think sixty days would always drive them. I am in hopes that the committee will not provide that the first session after the adoption of the Constitution shall be less than one hundred days.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: If that amendment is adopted the pay will be for one hundred days only, and then they could go on just as we are now, without pay.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I cannot see why we should limit the time. The Governor can call them together on the next morning. I am opposed to any limit. If it was necessary to continue the first session, the Governor could call an extra session the very next morning after the time expired.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend, so as to read as follows: "There shall be no Legislature convened from and after the adoption of this Constitution, in this State, and any person who shall be guilty of suggesting that a Legislature be held, shall be punished as a felon without the benefit of clergy."

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's amendment is out of order.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'proclamation,' in the fourth line, down to and including the word 'days,' in the sixth line, and insert as follows: 'No pay shall be allowed to members for a longer period than sixty days, excepting the first session of the Legislature called after the adoption of this Constitution, they may be allowed pay for one hundred days.'"

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. Chairman: It occurs to me that it is doubtful policy to limit the time absolutely to any time whatever. I think that will remove the evil. If there is matter of great importance before the Legislature, they should not be cut off from the enactment of good laws by a constitutional provision. By cutting off the pay after a certain time, they are not likely to stay longer than is absolutely necessary to enact the legislation which is before them.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: There is general complaint of the work of this Convention, that we are moving along too slowly, and any member of the Convention being present and looking over the room, and noticing how little interest is taken, will say that it is no wonder that we are moving along slowly. No one pays any attention, and these matters are moving along in this way by reason of the indolence of the members, and it is their fault, and no one else's. I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster. The only objection that is urged is upon the plea of economy. It is said that the Legislature ought not to sit more than sixty, or more than eighty, days, because it costs too much, and the expenses ought to be reduced. And as it is merely a plea of economy, I cannot see any objection to allowing the Legislature to sit just as long as it is necessary to continue in session, but limit the time for which they are to receive pay. Now, that is the true theory. Give them pay for just so long, and no longer, and, if necessary, allow them to continue in session. There is no objection to allowing them to continue in session. I believe that the laborer is worthy of his hire, and I believe in paying the legislator ten dollars a day for a certain number of days. I do not believe that the people will thank us for getting scrub members and giving them scrub pay.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: I think the gentleman from San Francisco is mistaken in the matter of economy being the only question. It seems to me that the reason for short sessions is, that the longer the Legislature that is not doing good work is in session the more chance there is for evil. Now, there generally is a certain amount of work to be done. The effort of this Convention is to reduce that amount of work to general laws, and consequently to much less work. Now, if we have a session of the Legislature that intends to do evil, that session can continue and be paid from outside as long as it needs to, and the evil go on against the people. The policy has been in most of the States to reduce the time of service. Let it be fixed by law, and shut down at the time that the work that is necessary to be done is finished. Let them have no longer time than is necessary for the ordinary business.

MR. O'DONNELL. I call for the previous question.

THE CHAIRMAN. The committee seems to be ready for a vote. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kern, Mr. Smith.

The amendment was lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 68 ayes to 32 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Donnell.

The amendment was lost.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out "biennial" and insert "quadrennial."

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no more amendments to section two, the Secretary will read section three.

MEMBERS OF ASSEMBLY.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 3. The members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, and their term of office shall be two years.

MR. WYATT. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend section three by inserting after the word "November," in the third line, the words "unless otherwise ordered by the Legislature." It is proposed now that one time of holding the election in every four years shall be upon the day of the Presidential election. That is now on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. That day of holding the Presidential election may be changed at any time, and the strong probabilities are that it will be changed before the session of this Convention closes. A bill has now passed the Senate of the United States changing the day of the Presidential election to the first Monday in October, with every probability that it will pass the House and become a law. If so, then it ought to be in the power of the Legislature to make the general election of this State conform to the law of Congress, and it ought to be flexible. I therefore think that this amendment ought to be inserted in this clause of the Constitution.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I would suggest that there should be an exception made in regard to the first election. If this passes without excepting the first election, we will have to have a separate election for the election of members of Congress.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I would suggest that that could be provided for by some provision in the schedule. A provision can be made in the schedule which will cover all the articles and all the sections.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section four.

TERMS OF SENATORS.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 4. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly, and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State, and of the district for which he shall be chosen, one year next before his election.

MR. WELLER. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line three, so as to read, Who has been three years a citizen, and an inhabitant of the State and of the district for which he shall be chosen one year next preceding his election."

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: The question as to probation for persons to become citizens of the United States, or to possess all the qualifications of an elector, should precede his citizenship, and no condition should be made as to his qualifications to hold office. If a man is a citizen of the United States, he is a citizen, of course, and has all the rights of a native-born, and the idea of declaring that he should live here three, or four, or five years to be entitled to hold office, I think is wrong. If we are not satisfied with the limit of time a man should reside here before he becomes a citizen, why amend the naturalization laws, but when a man is declared to be a citizen, a one year's residence in the State should be sufficient to entitle him to all the rights of the native-born citizen.

MR. INMAN. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment will be adopted. I want to drive out the carpet-baggers. I do not care whether they are American or foreign-born. I do seriously object to carpet-baggers. We witnessed their effect in the Southern States, and I hope that this Convention will adopt the amendment.

MR. WELLER. Mr. Chairman: I think the gentleman from El Dorado is mistaken in regard to the amendment. A person who has not been in the State more than one year cannot be qualified—and cannot understand the wants of the people of this State—for the legislative and judicial officer, as well as individuals who have lived here three years with the same qualifications, and it is no more than right that our people should be protected in that way, and that they should have individuals that are acquainted with our wants, for legislators and judicial officers.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I shall oppose that amendment. It is drifting back to Know-Nothingism. I think the section, as it is in the old Constitution, is good enough: "Senators and members of the Assembly shall be duly qualified electors in the respective counties and districts which they represent." I shall oppose the amendment.

MR. WELLER. Mr. Chairman: One word more. The gentlemen get the idea that the amendment was aimed directly at foreign born citizens, which is not the case. It is not aimed at them more than the American citizen; but the men who hold representative offices in this State should be residents of the State for three years, and one year residents of the districts which they represent. It is right that we should have that protection. It is a right and it is a respect which our older residents should have accorded to them, that they should not, on any impulse, be thrown out by individuals that are mere carpet-baggers in the State. It is a matter that must be conceded by any person that will look at it in the proper light. We want intelligent men—men that are acquainted with our wants and interests, and men who have had time to understand them—to represent us in the Legislature.

MR. BARTON. Mr. Chairman: I do not think this has anything at all to do with naturalized citizens. We do not know anybody but Americans in this country, and when they are once citizens I recognize them as American citizens. There might be a time when the people of some of the counties of this State may be willing, and glad, and anxious to select some talented man that had lately come into their midst, and under this provision it would operate against such individuals, and thereby strangle the desires of the people. I shall vote against this amendment, and hope it will be defeated.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: Now we are all convinced that when there is a necessity for anything whatever to be done it is always very important that the person or the individuals who do it should know what the matter is, and understand its nature and comprehend it in its different tendencies and bearings. For instance, if a man is sick and the doctor is called in, it is necessary that that doctor should know the case, that he should understand precisely the disease he is dealing with, in order that he may act advisedly and cure that patient. Well, I hold that in all matters it is necessary for individuals that act to understand fully what is before them, that they may act intelligently in the same. We know perfectly well that the men who live in the eastern part of our country do not understand the peculiarities of California; they do not understand the peculiarities of our institutions and laws and our peculiar interests, and we know moreover that it takes some length of time to comprehend these. We are fully aware even in this Chinese question that has been before this body that they do not look upon it as we do. Why is it? Because they have not lived here; because they have not been connected with the same circumstances; therefore it is a matter of importance for them to comprehend and act intelligently upon these things that affect this State, as we consider it, with due respect to their intelligence. The same principle applies when we take into consideration the laws of this State, and I am under the impression that most men, after they have been here two or three years, find at once that they have not understood the question. On the subject of farming, we see men come here from the East, and to hear them talk you would imagine that the farmers here knew nothing at all about farming, but as soon as they get to work they find that they know nothing about farming and irrigation as it is carried on here, and are utterly incompetent for a length of time. They positively need a schooling before they are prepared to act intelligently in this State. These are matters of serious importance, and I am fully convinced that a man who comes to this State cannot understand, until after a certain length of time, the peculiar interests of the people of this State. When he comes here it is necessary, in order that he may act intelligently, that he should undergo quite a schooling first in our peculiar institutions. I am utterly opposed to men coming here and being elected to the Legislature before they have become acquainted with the wants and needs of the people.

MR. GORMAN. Mr. Chairman: I believe that any gentleman ought to be eligible that the people of this State wish to send to the Legislature. I think that a man must understand the people in less time than three years. Therefore, I move to amend by striking out "three years," and inserting "two years."

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: Now, if this is a limitation to protect the old residents, why not make it for those who have been here twenty-nine years. I happen to be one of that number. I think there are quite a number of them. I think my friend Gorman is correct. The men who live in a community are the best judges of the men they want to elect. I think you can trust the people to elect their own representatives in any part of the State of California. I do not think it requires any constitutional provision to prohibit them from electing whom they please. I shall oppose the amendment.

MR. WELLER. Mr. Chairman: I think that for a man to be sufficiently acquainted with the interests of the people three years is little time enough. He cannot act intelligently unless he has that amount of time. Our State has grown and passed the certain period when we can get along without such inexperienced talent, and when we have experienced talent among us. It is not doing any injustice to any individual. It is actually for the benefit of the whole State. We have been left to suffer in many instances, when, if that law had been in existence, we would have had individuals who were acquainted with our wants, and who would have done us good service in the Legislature.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I wish to call the attention of the committee to the fact that section four in the report of the committee is section five of the present Constitution. There is no amendment whatever except in omitting the indefinite article "a" before the word "inhabitant." We do not propose any change—the committee has not proposed any change at all—unless that would be considered a change. Section five of the present Constitution reads just the same as section four of the article, if gentlemen will look at it. I do not propose to vote for any amendment except when an amendment is demanded. I am opposed to it on principle anyhow. The portions of the State some of us come from increase rapidly in population. I believe the population of Alameda County has increased three-fold within the last six years; a great many people are coming over from San Francisco, and I would not be surprised if we had a larger city yet on the right side of the bay, and I do not propose to discourage the new comers.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Gorman.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Weller.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 68 ayes to 41 noes.

MR. EVEY. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding to section four, 'and members of the Assembly shall not be less than twenty-five years of age, and Senators not less than thirty years of age.'"

MR. NASON. I second the amendment.

MR. WHITE. I hope, gentlemen, that you will not cut off all the young men of this State in that way.

MR. EVEY. I do not consider men twenty-five years of age old men; I consider them young men; men just entering upon life; men that are more mature than boys under that age, and I hope that this Convention will adopt that amendment.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: Considering what gentlemen have said about legislative bodies, I think it is a shame to put these young men in such bad associations, and, therefore, I am in favor of the amendment.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. Chairman: If a man is qualified for the position of Assemblyman at twenty-five years of age I do not think it will take five years more to make him competent to be a Senator; it seems to me that it would be ridiculous. When Henry Clay was sent to the United States Senate he lacked a little of being thirty years of age, but the Senators that voted for Clay had to be thirty-five years of age, five years older than required for the United States Senate; still they sent their brilliant young statesman a little before he was eligible. I see no good reason for prescribing young men in this way. I think that the people are the best judges as to the qualifications relative to age.

MR. TULLY. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will not prevail. I cannot see any reason why a man, when he is twenty-one years of age, shouldn't be eligible to a seat in the Legislature, or to hold any office. I know many young men less than twenty-five years of age who know more than some men of fifty, and who I would rather have in the Legislature. I think it would be an outrage.

MR. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman: Article fourteen of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States reads: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States." I think that amendment is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend the amendment so as to read as follows: 'The members of the Senate and Assembly shall not be less than twenty-five years of age.'"

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I offer this amendment because we have already incorporated in the Constitution that a person twenty-five years of age may be Governor, and I think that any person who becomes old enough to be Governor is certainly qualified to be a Senator. With that amendment I am in favor of putting some restriction in as to the age of members of the legislative bodies of this State. I agree with the gentleman from San Francisco when he said that he did not believe in admitting these young men into such bad company as our Legislatures are generally composed of. I hope that this amendment, twenty-five years as to both branches of the Legislature, will prevail.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to these amendments. I can see no propriety whatever in them; in fact, I am rather of the opinion that if the people conclude that any man whatever is competent, and they wish to send him to the Legislature, they should have the right of doing so. I do not believe that age is a test of wisdom or a test of capacity at all.

MR. EVEY. I accept the amendment of the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment, and I do this on behalf of the young men.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the amendment, 'And not over forty-five years of age.'"

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the amendment of Mr. Stedman. I hope you will all vote for it. I hope that the old men will be allowed to protect themselves against the encroachments of the youths. I can further say to the facetious gentleman from San Francisco that I do not think he will ever fall into the Senate unless he is elected from some place where he is not known.

MR. WELLER. Some gentlemen are more popular where they are not known.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question occurs on the amendment offered by Mr. Evey.

The amendment was lost, on a division, by a vote of 53 ayes to 60 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no further amendments to section four, the Secretary will read section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of thirty members and the Assembly of sixty members, to be elected by districts as hereinafter provided. The seats of the fifteen Senators from the odd numbered districts, chosen at the first election under this Constitution, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senate, after the first election, shall be chosen every two years.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I offer section six of the old Constitution as a substitute for section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The number of Senators shall not be less than one third, nor more than one half, of that of the members of the Assembly; and at the first session of the Legislature after this section takes effect, the Senators shall be divided by lot, as equally as may be, into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half shall be chosen biennally."

MR. AYERS. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line one the word 'forty,' in place of the word 'thirty,' and in line two the word 'eighty,' instead of 'sixty.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I offer that amendment for the reason that I do not believe that the number of representatives should be reduced as proposed in this report. I believe in a representation by large bodies of the people, and I think that this Convention has shown that the interests of the people are safer in large bodies than they are in the hands of small ones. If we adopt the amendment which I have offered the people of this State will continue to be represented as equally as they can in all their districts. I hope that the amendment will prevail, for I do not believe that the change recommended by the committee is one that will work well for the State.

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the representation will stand as in the present Constitution. I think this proposition of the committee would be very unjust to the sparsely settled portions of the State. They may complain as it is. This is the second State in area in the Union. It has all the climates that can be found between the great lakes in the north and the Gulf of Mexico in the south. A Senator or representative should know all about the district that he represents—the climate, the productions, and everything pertaining to its interests. Under this apportionment you will find a district composed of the Counties of Del Norte, Siskiyou, Modoc, Lassen, Shasta, and Trinity—twenty-three thousand square miles; larger than two or three of the Eastern States. Another district, composed of the Counties of San Bernardino, San Diego, Kern, and Ventura, contains an area of over forty-eight thousand square miles; an area that is greater than the great State of New York; greater than the States of Pennsylvania, and Ohio, and Massachusetts combined. Now for a Senator alone and two Assemblymen to represent that immense area, is a matter of impossibility. Our Senators in Congress and our Representatives have sometimes failed to know our wants from a want of knowledge of the State. I recollect a little over twenty years ago, while I resided at Shasta, a well known citizen of that town met a distinguished Senator from this State, and said to him, "We should like to see you up at Shasta." This was in the month of June. The Senator replied: "I should take great pleasure in meeting my constituents in Shasta, but I could not go there now. I think next September I will make you a visit. About that time the snow will be off and I will make you a visit." Those who know the climate of that place will appreciate the circumstance. I hope, therefore, that there will be no cutting down of representation. I think it is necessary that the popular branch of the Legislature should consist of at least eighty members.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I agree with the gentleman from Shasta in the main, in relation to the question of representation. I am in favor of this State being divided into Senate districts according to population, but every county in this State should have a representation in the Assembly. The interests of the State demand it. I mean that every county should have a representative in the house. I am in favor of increasing the number, and fixing the number at such a number that each county in the State shall have a representative. My friend Dunlap suggests that one hundred and twelve will give one to each county, and sixty to be divided among the more populous counties. The reduction proposed by this committee would really disfranchise a majority of the people of this State. They would be compelled to vote for men that even the oldest inhabitant had never met. There would be no responsibility to stand up and protect any particular constituency. His constituency would be scattered over too much territory; and you might as well not allow them any representation, unless you allow them to select such men as will represent their interests and their views and look after their welfare. The only argument is economy. If it is economy, you had better do away with the Legislature entirely. Second, that they will get better men. Both of these propositions are not tenable. The only idea of selecting men to represent them should be to select such men as those that belong to the community; that know their wishes; that will come here representing the great interests of those who send them, and to do that they should be known in the community; and no man should be allowed to vote for more than one representative. That representative should have a constituency who could approach him. When he returns to them, he could return to a constituency and give an account of his acts. But the policy as foreshadowed in this report, in part, of dividing the State simply into Senate districts and selecting two in the district, I do not approve of. I approve of dividing the State into Senate districts, and then dividing these districts into Assembly districts—two Assembly districts in each Senatorial district. I believe it would be better that each Senate district have three Assembly districts, so that every county, even the little County of Alpine, should have a representative. Every county in the State should be recognized in a representative upon this floor. If a county is too small, disincorporate it. If they are too small for representation, provide for their combination with other counties. Give each county a representative; then you will have a representation that will have the interests of the whole people of the State at heart.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the report of the committee will be supported, and that we will do something to correspond with the wishes of the people in regard to economy. The gentleman forgets that we are about to do away with all the special legislation. What is the use of each county being specially represented here. Of course, the district ought to be represented. I will ask you, sir, in this Convention, are we not satisfied with six men to do all our legislation in Congress? Six men do it all, and you say here that sixty men in this house and thirty in the other is not sufficient to know the wants of the State, as regards these bills of general import, for there will be no special bills after this Constitution is adopted. I hope that the gentleman will do something to respond to the call of the people for economy. This report of the committee will save the people of the State of California about forty thousand dollars, as I have estimated, and something ought to be done to respond to the wishes of the people. I am opposed to this idea of creating more politicians and men striving for office, and increasing it in all these sort of ways. I trust and hope that this Convention will see the necessity of standing by the report of the committee on that subject. There will be plenty of men here, and I know that sixty men, or, in fact, a less number, could come here and pass such general laws as are needed, and they will do it faster and better than if the bodies were larger. The consideration that special legislation is to be taken out of the Legislature, in my opinion takes away all the force of the argument that every county should have a representative on this floor. All that we want is that the whole people should be fairly represented, and that they should not be crowded, so as to do business with too great rapidity. I trust that you will sustain the report of the committee in that regard.

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I offered section six of the old Constitution because I believe that as it exists in that respect it is far better than the section reported by the committee. I am satisfied, so far as I have the honor of representing—at least I feel satisfied in my own mind—that they have a representation as it now stands. I believe that it would be better for the interests of the people of the State that the representation should be as it is now; that eighty members of the Assembly and forty members of the Senate can and will do the work more to the people's interest than a less number. And as regards the objection made by the gentleman from Santa Cruz, I will say that I do not think there is any force in it. I do not think there is any gentleman who may advocate this matter that has any desire to accomplish his own political purposes. I do not think that is the object. It is not that more men shall have opportunities of filling legislative positions, but that we shall be represented, and we desire to be represented. It is said that there is a great deal of dissatisfaction, and I believe that if this remains as it is now there will be more dissatisfaction among the people. I think it should stand as it is in the old Constitution. The people of the counties generally desire to have one representative. They do not have that now, but I think if the Constitution is allowed to stand as it is now, that it would be very satisfactory to the people of the State. I believe that it is not one of the changes demanded, and I think this Convention should not tamper with it.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The Convention took the usual recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M.

President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

FILLING VACANCIES.

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: Is it in order to proceed with the election to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Hon. J. M. Strong and Hon. B. F. Kenny?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

MR. STEELE. Then, sir, I move that this whole matter be indefinitely postponed.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is that the whole matter be indefinitely postponed.

REMARKS OF MR. STEELE.

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: The reason I make this motion is that the session has almost expired for which we were elected, and it is very obvious that the force here is large enough, and even if we had a less number we would probably get along faster. New members coming in at this day would render very little assistance, and might be an element of discord. We now seem to have got into concord, and I see a great many reasons why we should not proceed to elect. I hope that it will be indefinitely postponed, and that no more time will be consumed in the discussion.

SPEECH OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I could not hear all that the gentleman who has just taken his seat said, but I understood him to make a motion to indefinitely postpone this matter. And he seemed to take the ground that, as we were very near the end of our labors, it is unnecessary, at this stage of the proceedings, to fill these vacancies. Now, this may look very well and very reasonable to us, but by way of starting out on this subject, I would say that when the body of the deceased member, Hon. J. M. Strong, was taken down to Merced City, the impression produced upon the citizens in those counties was this: that the per diem that was coming to Mr. Strong would go to his widow, and as it was greatly needed, it appeared to be the idea that they would not demand another representative upon this floor. In this way they were deterred from doing what they otherwise would have done in the matter. Now we find that Mr. Howard has come here to demand the place, and he has not come as an office seeker, but he comes here, backed by the sentiments of the people of those two counties. We find there are over sixty signatures from the town of Mariposa, including the District Judge, the County Judge, District Attorney, and all the merchants of the place. All the principal men there are demanding his admission to a seat upon this floor. Every class of citizens there, from all we can learn, are demanding this at the hands of this Convention. We find, also, that over in Merced it is the same thing. Then, again, we find that the best men in all that part of the country have recommended him.

Now, I do not think it will be urged by any of you, that the people of these two counties have not the right to be represented by a local representative in this body if they demand it. It is a right that we cannot take from them without doing them great injustice. They say they want to be represented. They have sent their petitions and their man here. They do not demand anything that is contrary to law, or anything that is unreasonable. True, gentlemen may get up here and say that our deliberations are almost ended, and that one man will not make much difference either one way or the other. We do not know that we have almost ended our deliberations, or that one man won't make any difference; and we do know that if we do not give to these people a representative, which they have a right to by law, we are acting in that particular illegality. We are acting unjustly. There is not a man present who cannot comprehend that fact.

Now, it may be contended that we can get along and act as we please; that this is not a material thing, and that it is entirely optional with this body. I am under the impression that this body is acting under a law made by the Legislature of this State, and that this law is imperious in its demands, and that its provisions are mandatory in this respect, and that it is a mistake to suppose that it is optional with this body. This is a thing that must be done. For instance, I would ask this body to listen while I read a small portion of this law, and although you may have concluded in your own minds that perhaps it would be better to lay this matter upon the table, have nothing farther to do with it, not fill any vacancies whatever—while you may have concluded this, still you may be wrong. You may have concluded a great many things, but I am under the impression that there are none of us who will not correct ourselves when we find we are in the wrong. I do not believe the members of this Convention would be willing to knowingly violate a law of this State. Let me read that law: Section eleven of the Act of the Legislature which governs and controls this body, says that in case any vacancy occurs by death, resignation, or otherwise, of any delegate to said Convention, the same shall be filled by the Convention. Now, we are acting under that law, and in pursuance of that law. We are not a lawless body, neither are certain things left to our option. We are here under the forms of law, and we must obey that law. Now, that law does not say that vacancies may be filled, or that it is optional with the Convention to fill them or not. It is imperatively demanded of us as law-abiding citizens—as law-abiding members of this Convention—that we give to this man a seat in this Convention. "Shall be filled," says the law. Are gentleman in this body prepared to set themselves up in the face of such a mandatory provision as that, in view of the fact that these people have sent a man of their choice here who is without demanding admittance? Will you ignore their lawful demands, and refuse him admission? Is it right? Can you say this law shall have no binding force over our actions? No, gentlemen, we must obey that law and give him a seat upon the floor of this Convention.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment, to be added to the motion before the house.

THE SECRETARY read:

"And that the Sergeant-at-Arms draw the per diem of the members of this Convention for the week ending December thirty-first, and retain the pay for one day from each member, and equally divide the entire sum so retained between the families of Honorable J. M. Strong and Honorable B. F. Kenny."

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the motion is out of order.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I ask the privilege of speaking away from my seat, because it is almost impossible to make myself heard from my own seat. I believe it was the general understanding among members of the Convention that there would be no action taken in regard to filling the vacancies that have occurred through misfortune and death, since the assembling of the Convention. To that I believe there has never been a dissenting voice among the San Francisco delegation. I believe the delegation and the people of San Francisco, so far as I have heard, will assent to that proposition, and it was only yesterday morning that this matter was first introduced to the attention of this Convention, in regard to filling any vacancies at all.

Now, it seemed to us that if there were to be any vacancy filled it would be only just and right that they all be filled. In view of that fact, the San Francisco delegation, conferring among themselves, unanimously agreed that they were willing to indefinitely postpone the matter of filling any vacancies at all; not, however, because they are opposed to filling them, because they do not wish to deprive any county of a representative, but for reasons that have been stated by the mover of this motion, and which have, no doubt, suggested themselves to other members of the Convention, because it is near the close of the session, and we thought it just as well to let the matter stand, and take no action upon it. But, if it is the will of the Convention—if it is the wish of the majority that these vacancies be filled—then we will bring forward a candidate to fill the vacancy in San Francisco, upon the ground that if one is to be filled the other ought to be. Upon this motion we are willing to vote aye. I believe it is the universal sentiment of the San Francisco delegation. I merely wished to state this sentiment, because they are more nearly interested than any other delegation upon the floor. That is the reason I have consumed this much time.

SPEECH OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: As far as I am personally concerned I may have thought, as the gentleman from San Francisco seems to have thought, that there was no occasion for the Convention to fill any vacancies. But I have never thought so upon the basis that it is optional with the Convention to act or not as they please, in the face of the expressed will of the people of any county or district where there is no representative. It is the right, as I understand it, of every district which desires it, to have a representative upon this floor. So long as they do not demand it, of course the Convention would be justified in not taking any action. But in the case of the district composed of the Counties o Mariposa and Merced, the people have taken a very definite and forcible way of asking this Convention to fill the vacancy. It is right that they should demand it, and we should not disregard their demands.

MR. BARNES. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

MR. JONES. Certainly.

MR. BARNES. What is the voting population of the district represented by Mr. Strong?

MR. JONES. At the last election, when only about half the votes were cast, the vote amounted to some one thousand three hundred.

MR. BARNES. How many of the voters have demanded that this vacancy be filled?

MR. JONES. This petition is signed by one hundred and thirty-seven of the representative men—the best men—in that community.

MR. BARNES. What do you mean by representative men? Every voter is a representative man.

MR. JONES. I mean by that the best men, the most reputable citizens, merchants, farmers, lawyers, miners, citizens in every branch of business in the two counties composing that district. But I wish it understood that these papers have not been circulated extensively. There has not been an effort made to obtain a large number of signatures. We all know how easy it is to fill a petition with names of men who have no particular standing or influence in the community. It is easier to produce the names of a thousand men whom a particular individual might not be able to identify than to get the names of fifty men who are well known at home and abroad. I have looked over the names here, and I see they are names of men who could not be induced to set their hands to a petition that did not fully accord with their sentiments. Many of them are men that would as soon set their names to a promissory note as to sign a request of this sort, unless that request meets their own personal approbation. Public officers are no better than anybody else, but they are representative men, who have received a public indorsement there. The District Judge, the County Judge, Sheriff, District Attorney, and all that class of men are to be seen here. And in Merced County the petition is signed by the County Judge, Sheriff, and other county officers, and the lawyers practicing in the Courts. It is signed by miners, merchants, farmers, and laboring men—men that I know stand well in the community.

Now, sir, these people make this request; I do not make it. I did not even know that it was to be made. There had been something said—I had received some notice from one gentleman in Merced County; to make a clean breast of it, I told him that he was a well known Republican there, and that, in my judgment, it would be the sense of this Convention that the vacancy should be filled by a person who might be the choice of the people, of the same politics as the deceased member, and acting on that intimation, his name was withdrawn. I then received these papers. They came from Mariposa and Merced, and I deem it my duty to urge the wishes of those people manifested in this emphatic manner, upon this Convention, and to ask the Convention if they intend to set at naught the clearly expressed desire of the people of that district whose representative is deceased. If this Convention thinks there is a necessity for so disregarding the wishes of that people, they will of course do so; but I am utterly unable to see upon what grounds it can be done.

It is said that we are near the close of the session. Who is it that knows that? I would thank God if I had any means of arriving at that conclusion that we are nearing the close of the session. We intend to do our duty here as well as we are able to do it, and if we do, I say that there is nothing to indicate to me that we are nearing the close of the session. We are near the close of the time provided by law, near the close of the time for which the law provides that we are to receive pay. The money provided for paying us is well nigh exhausted, but that does not militate against the people in any district, or against their right to send a representative here, who shall take the same chances as to pay as the rest of the members of this Convention. All I ask of this Convention is to respect the wishes and the demands of the people of these two counties, and allow the man whom they have sent here to take his seat. It is their right, and I cannot see any possible grounds upon which they can be denied. The place has become vacant by death, and the law plainly provides how such vacancies shall be filled. I hope there will be no attempt made to thwart the desires of these people, because I say it is the manifest desire that this vacancy be filled. It is plain that there is no money in it, and that is all the better, because it shows that there is no selfish interest in it. I trust that there will be no attempt made to thwart their wishes. I deem it to be their right, and I will maintain that right as well as I am able, and I shall be very much surprised if this Convention shall fail to recognize that right.

SPEECH OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I understand the gentleman to say that this petition is signed by one hundred and thirty-seven and a half men [laughter] of these counties. The vote of those two counties is two thousand two hundred and eighty. Now we all know how easy it is for anybody to get a recommendation or a protest signed. I have no objection to the gentleman, and I do not know of any objection to him; but we all know how easy it is to get up these petitions. I remember a petition was circulated in New York, among the congregation of a noted divine, asking that the minister be hung as a public nuisance, and a majority of the congregation signed it. Anybody will sign a petition. I sign them here every day, and I presume members of this Convention have signed petitions for pardons. Petitions go for nothing.

Now the committees of this body have done their work, and we are now engaged in considering their work. Now what is the use at this time of going into an election and taking up the time of this body, to bring in men who can be of no service whatever? We have counsel enough. We have one hundred and forty-eight orators besides myself, and there is little time left in which to do the work. The public does not need it. The counties do not need it. Judge Jones himself is fully able to represent that district and the counties composing it. I hope the motion will prevail. He says we must do it because the law says so. All that means is that if a vacancy occurs there shall not be an election by the people. I would dislike very much to be the man to take the sad memorials from the desks of either Mr. Kenny or Mr. Strong. I would hate to be the man to remove the crape from those desks. Let us keep these seats as a reminder of what is coming for all of us, and let the lesson of death stand in this body as it has stood, hoping that those who occupied those seats are now members of that great convention above.

SPEECH OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: If I believed this to be a matter which the Convention might settle according to its own will, I would support this motion. But we have the application of the people of this district, and it is the duty of this Convention to comply with their demands and give them a representative here, and I do not propose to shirk that duty. The statute under which this Convention was called provides that in case of vacancy occurring by death or otherwise, the Convention shall fill the same. It is as mandatory as any other provision in that law. It is our plain duty to fill these vacancies, and as far as consuming the time is concerned, more time has been wasted in arguing this matter than would have been required to fill the vacancies, which the people of Mariposa and Merced demand, and which is their right. The law gave to these two counties a representative, and they are without a representative here. Judge Jones is not a representative of these two counties. He represents a district composed of three counties. He does not appear here to represent that district, and if he did, they are entitled to all the representation which the law allows them. The people have a right to demand it. I place no importance upon the names of one hundred and thirty-seven and a half men. If any one man demands to be represented, he has a right to it. If an election had been called, and only five or six men had voted at that election, the candidate receiving three votes out of the five would be entitled to his seat here just as much as if he had received a majority of all the votes in the district. Now this is not a matter which this Convention has a right to dispose of according to its own whim. The people are entitled to a representative, and if they come here and demand it at our hands, we have but one thing to do, and that is to comply with their demands. We have no right in the world to refuse it.

SPEECH OF MR. STEELE.

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: Before I made this motion the gentleman from San Joaquin was in favor of indefinite postponement, or so I understood him at least. He seems to have changed his mind about the matter. What has come over the spirit of his dreams I do not know. I certainly do not wish to disfranchise the people of San Francisco, or the people of Mariposa and Merced, if it is demanded. But now the session is near its close; the committees have all reported, and what is the benefit of a man coming in at this late day, who is not at all conversant with the business before this Convention. Not only that, but we see that the election of these men will be very apt to breed discord. There is already an element of discord here. There are hardly ten members on the floor of this Convention who think alike. We have a very short time in which to complete our work; let us go to work and do it. We have had already too much dilly-dallying, and why introduce another element of discord. I am in favor of going to work. We know how little we have done, and how much remains yet to be done, and we know, too, that no injury will be done to this district by refusing to elect this man. They certainly have representatives enough on this floor to look out for and protect their interest. I do not think anybody or any interest will suffer. I think it would be greatly to their advantage, and to the advantage of the State, for us to drop this matter and go to work. I hope the motion will prevail.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I move the previous question.

The motion was seconded by Messrs. Brown, Ayers, West, and Wyatt.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

MR. WHITE. I call for the ayes and noes.

Seconded by Messrs. Brown, West, Wyatt, and Steele.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the motion to indefinitely postpone prevailed by the following vote:

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I changed my vote for the purpose of moving a reconsideration. I now give notice that on to-morrow, at two o'clock P. M., I will move to reconsider the vote by which this matter was indefinitely postponed.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT—LEGISLATIVE DISTRICTS.

MR. TERRY. I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. Section five and amendments are under consideration. The first question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, to insert "forty" in place of "thirty," and "eighty" in place of "sixty."

MR. KELLY. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to the section, which I send up.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment:

"Amend so as to read: 'The Senate shall consist of forty members and the Assembly of eighty, to be elected by districts, as hereinafter to be provided; and the Legislature shall have power to form Senatorial and Assembly districts; provided that in forming Assembly districts each county shall be entitled to at least one member.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, to strike out thirty and insert forty, and strike out sixty and insert eighty.

Division was called for, and the committee, by a standing vote of 73 ayes to 36 noes, adopted the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Yolo, Mr. Kelley.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I feel as sure as I ever felt of anything in my life, that the Committee of the Whole has voted inadvertently in adopting the amendment that has just been adopted to section five. It will be discovered, by reading this report through with all the different sections, that the scheme for thirty Senators and sixty Assemblymen is a compromise, as it was, in fact, in the committee—or partly a compromise in the committee—where there were many conflicting opinions concerning the structure and membership of the Legislature—concerning the number that it should consist of, the length of the sessions, and the per diem of members, apportionment, and all things and all matters connected with the structure of the Legislature. This scheme of reducing the number of Senators to thirty, and the number of Assemblymen to sixty, was a part of that compromise, and a great many considerations entered into it. The chief feature of it was the cutting off of special legislation; and turning to section twenty-five of the report, and comparing that with the present Constitution, it will be discovered that seven eighths of the legislation of the present day is by section twenty-five prohibited. This section provides that the Legislature shall not pass any local or special laws, in the cases therein enumerated. This has greatly reduced the labors of the Legislature, and also lessened the necessity of its representative character, as urged by a gentleman this morning. This report, taken as a whole, is designed to reduce the Legislature more to the character of a Constitutional Convention. It is designed to reduce its labors, so that they will be confined almost entirely to the perfecting of the Codes; to deprive it of the power of frittering away the people's money, to prevent jobbery, and to blot out of existence the lobby, and to reduce the Legislature to something like a fundamental body, or general Legislature, so that nearly every Act, except the appropriation bills for carrying on the Government, will be in one or the other of the Codes, in the shape of amendments to the Political, Civil, or Penal Codes, or the Code of Civil Procedure. And to this all legislation is tending at the present day. To this all the more recent Constitutions tend, that is, all those that have been adopted within the past ten or fifteen years; and the Committee on Legislative Department was unanimous, without a dissenting voice, in favor of the proposition that this Convention should take the most advance ground upon that question, and deprive the Legislature of the power to pass such laws. I allude to this because it is one of the considerations which entered into the compromise, whereby the committee reached a conclusion and reported back section five, providing for thirty members of the Senate, and sixty Assemblymen.

Now, sir, I feel sure that the members of this body have not fully considered all of these questions. I feel certain that they voted inadvertently when they voted to restore the former Legislature, instead of cutting it down to thirty Senators and sixty Assemblymen, because they have not considered all these questions, and all the different bearings this matter has upon the structure of the Legislature, as the committee considered it, before they arrived at a conclusion. And that is why I was sorry to see the vote taken so hastily upon the amendment. Since that vote was taken I have talked with the Chairman, and he says he sought to catch the Chairman's eye before the vote was taken, in order to place this whole matter squarely before the Convention, but he made a failure of it, and the vote was taken before he had an opportunity to speak. I would like to see that vote reconsidered, so that the whole report can be considered together, as a whole, as it ought to be considered.

The committee, as I said before, agreed upon this report unanimously, and they succeeded in compromising the many conflicting opinions, some of which are not embodied here. They preferred to take this as a whole rather than to bring in any minority report, which would induce confusion. It seems to me now that it would be better for the Convention to reconsider the amendment that has been adopted and allow the other sections which have a bearing upon this section to be discussed and considered in connection with this. We do not want to act hastily in this matter. We cannot afford to act hastily. We do not want to increase the number to forty and eighty, and then go on and act upon the balance of this report. We might as well strike out the rest of this report and substitute the old Constitution. This section has an important bearing upon the balance of the report—the time of the Legislature, the per diem of members, etc.—and we have found, sir, in the experience of this Convention, that ponderous bodies are incapable of transacting business with dispatch. It is not the fault of this Convention that we have sat here for almost one hundred days and accomplished nothing. It is not the fault of this Convention; it is the fault of its structure. It is composed of so many men that it is impossible to expedite business. It is just so in the Legislature. It is well known that fifty or sixty members of a Convention can frame a better Constitution, and in a much shorter space of time, than double the number. It is so in the Legislature. Thirty in the Senate and sixty in the House, when the Legislature is confined to general laws and the amendment of the Codes, is a sufficiently representative body. There is no need that every county should have a member in the lower house. There are no local laws to be passed. The Legislature, under this report, is confined to enacting general laws. Turn to section twenty-five, to which I called your attention awhile ago, and see. It says the Legislature shall pass no local or special laws in any of the following cases:

First—Regulating the jurisdiction and duties of Justices of the Peace, Police Judges, and of Constables.

Second—For the punishment of crimes and misdemeanors.

Third—Regulating the practice of Courts of justice.

Fourth—Providing for changing the venue in civil or criminal cases.

Fifth—Granting divorces.

Sixth—Changing the names of persons or places.

Seventh—Vacating roads, town plats, streets, alleys, or public grounds not owned by the State.

Eighth—Summoning and impaneling grand and petit juries, and providing for their compensation.

Ninth—Regulating county and township business, or the election of county and township officers.

Tenth—For the assessment or collection of taxes.

Eleventh—Providing for conducting elections, or designating the places of voting, except on the organization of new counties.

Twelfth—Affecting estates belonging to minors or other persons under legal disabilities.

Thirteenth—Extending the time for the collection of taxes.

Fourteenth—Giving effect to invalid deeds, wills, or other instruments.

Fifteenth—Refunding money paid into the State treasury.

Sixteenth—Releasing or extinguishing, in whole or in part, the indebtedness, liability, or obligation of any corporation or person to this State, or to any municipal corporation therein.

Seventeenth—Declaring any person of age, or authorizing any minor to sell, lease, or incumber his or her property.

Eighteenth—Legalizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer.

Nineteenth—Granting to any corporation, association, or individual any special or exclusive right, privilege, or immunity.

Twentieth—Exempting property from taxation.

Twenty-first—Changing county seats.

Twenty-Second—Restoring to citizenship persons convicted of infamous crimes.

Twenty-third—Regulating the rate of interest on money.

Twenty-fourth—Authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens.

Twenty-fifth—Chartering or licensing ferries, bridges, or roads.

Twenty-sixth—Remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures.

Twenty-seventh—Providing for the management of common schools.

Twenty-eighth—Creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, cities and counties, townships, election or school districts.

Twenty-ninth—Affecting the fees or salary of any officer.

Thirtieth—Changing the law of descent or succession.

Thirty-first—Authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children.

Thirty-second—Authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, or maintaining roads, highways, streets, alleys, or public grounds.

Thirty-third—For limitation of civil or criminal actions.

Thirty-fourth—In all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, no local or special law shall be enacted.

Now, it will be seen from this what a load of special legislation will be removed. All that class of legislation where it is important for the several counties to be represented, will be taken away from the Legislature and sent back to the counties to be enacted by the local Boards, so that there is no real need of a representative, so far as the local interests of a county are affected.

Now, sir, I am opposed to this amendment, and I shall move to reconsider it. These various sections depend upon each other, and the entire report ought to be considered together.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted.

MR. REYNOLDS. I believe it to be in the power of the Committee of the Whole at any time to move a reconsideration. If the Committee of the Whole should at any time find that a mistake has been made, I believe it has the power to reconsider without notice being given.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: It is manifestly the wish of the majority of this Convention that the representation in the Legislature shall not be cut down. That has been shown by the vote just taken. Now, I do not know whether this amendment will disarrange the entire plan of the committee or not, but the only way by which we can come at this matter of retaining the present representation is to amend the report as we go along, and if it is necessary to strike out the entire scheme of apportionment, I do not know but the Convention will do so. I say the majority of this Convention will require that the representation shall be full and complete.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I move to amend section five by striking out the words "as hereinafter provided," in line two, and insert the words "as provided by law." Also, strike out the word "fifteen," in line three, and insert in lieu thereof, the word "twenty." That will make it conform to the amendment adopted. I am under the impression that the action of the committee in refusing to cut down the representation is not inconsistent by any means. I believe the committee were fully aware of what they were doing. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

MR. LARKIN. Is the amendment of the gentleman from Yolo before the Convention?

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. I think that amendment ought to be adopted by this Convention. I do not propose to take up your time in discussing this matter, but I want to answer the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, who, I understand, in his canvass declared himself in favor of reducing the number in the Legislature. I believe he wrote his own platform and advocated his own views.

MR. WHITE. I didn't write my own platform. It was the Workingman's platform, adopted in Convention, and I hold it in my hand.

MR. LARKIN. I know he had as much to do with it as any man. I think the people understood that he would come and represent their best interests, as far as reducing expenses is concerned. I think we should provide that members of the Legislature shall not receive more than five hundred dollars for a general session. That we can do when we arrive at section twenty, which amount should cover all their expenses except mileage, which should not exceed ten cents. All these things should be fixed in the Constitution, so that the Legislature will not have power to increase their own salaries.

Now, the proposition that each county shall be represented I believe to be the fundamental principles of government. The whole people of this State should be represented. The industrial interests, and the producing classes, should be recognized in a legislative body. The men who till the soil and delve in the mines, and in the shops, have a right to dictate legislation, and their wishes should be respected. They have that right, and this Convention should say by their votes that these varied industries should be represented. They are a class of men who will guard the interests of the whole State, and it is upon these industries that the whole State is built. They are engaged in developing the resources of California. It will not work any injury to San Francisco, because these men are all deeply interested in the prosperity of San Francisco, and her rights will be guarded and protected by every county in the State.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I offer an amendment to cure an inconsistency. This amendment gives one to each county, and thus it is provided that they shall be elected by districts. I offer this amendment to cure that defect.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section five: 'No apportionment shall be made which shall deny to each county in the State at least one Assemblyman,' and that the words 'by districts' in the second line be stricken out; also strike out the word 'fifteen' and insert the word 'twenty.'"

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. BARRY. The amendment before the house is the amendment which I offered to section five—the corresponding section of the old Constitution. The gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, offered an amendment, which was to leave the section practically as the law is now, that is, forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen. My idea was to not change the section. The gentleman talked of accepting the amendment, but afterwards, when the amendment was called up, he failed to do it. Now, my point of order is that three amendments have been offered—one by Mr. Kelley, one by Mr. Dudley, of Solano, and another by Mr. Smith, of Kern. Mr. Dudley offered an amendment to section five of the report of the committee, which was not before the house. It was my substitute for section five—section six of the old Constitution—that was before the house, and the amendment offered by Mr. Ayers to my substitute.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's amendment is a substitute for the whole section. The friends of the section will be permitted to amend it as they see proper. The point of order is not well taken. The substitute will be voted upon in its order.

MR. ESTEE. As I understand it, the amendment of the gentleman from Yolo is the one that is pending.

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir.

SPEECH OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: An amendment, I believe, has been adopted fixing the number of Senators at forty, and the number of Assemblymen at eighty. Now, if this amendment be adopted, of course there will be fifty-two Assemblymen distributed among the fifty-two counties, leaving twenty-eight Assemblymen to be distributed according to population. In other words, Alpine County, which polls one hundred and fifty-seven votes, would have one member, and San Francisco, which polls twenty-seven thousand votes, would have but three in the Assembly. I do not think that would be right; I feel sure that if this amendment should be adopted the Constitution would be rejected, and it ought to be rejected. Of course, if the number should be increased, as has been intimated here, perhaps an amendment of that character, giving one to each county, and dividing the balance according to population, might pass; and even then it would not be right, but the populous counties might consent to it. But the idea that a little county, having but one hundred and fifty voters, having one third the representation of a county having twenty-seven thousand to forty thousand voters, is certainly not right. It would be an experiment which I feel sure the people of the State would not indorse. It is contrary to every principle of a representative government. I do not believe that this Convention will indorse any such scheme. If the gentleman desires to increase the Assembly, as it stands in Pennsylvania, one hundred and twenty-eight; or in New York, one hundred and twenty-three; or, as it is in Missouri, then that kind of representation would be more reasonable. I do not know but it might commend itself to the favorable consideration of this Convention; but, sir, if you fix it at eighty Assemblymen, and divide fifty-two of them among the various counties, one to each county, the smallest county one, and the largest county one, and distribute the remaining twenty-eight according to population, it will be no fair or reasonable representation of the business interests of these great counties; I am, therefore, opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yolo. I understand, of course, that the very small counties would favor such a proposition, because they would get a large representation with a very small population, yet, the idea of limiting San Francisco to three members of the Assembly, I opine there would not be three thousand votes in that city in favor of the new Constitution; because it would be so extraordinary, so exceedingly unfair, so contrary to every principle of a republican form of government, that twenty-five men in San Francisco would be only equal to one in some other county. I say it would be so manifestly unjust and unreasonable that your Constitution would be ignominiously defeated, as it ought to be.

SPEECH OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yolo, Mr. Kelley, so far as retaining one representative to each county in the State, will be supported by this committee and by this Convention. I deem it to be an unwise policy upon the part of this Convention to make so few representatives to the Legislature as to practically deprive the people of this State, or a portion of them, of representation. Now, if the population of any county should become so small, so reduced, that the county is not able to maintain its county government, of course it ought to be merged into other counties, as was done in the northwestern portion of the State a session or two ago. But I do not think any county in the State ought to be permitted to maintain a distinct political organization, without being entitled to one representative in the Legislature of the State. And if increasing the number to eighty, as we have, will not entitle each county in the State to a member, and, in addition, give to the more densely populated portions of the State a proper representation, then, I say, increase the number of representatives until we can properly represent the State, and every county in the State. The State of California is able to pay for proper representation, and is willing to pay for it, and she demands proper representation; and I propose to offer an amendment that shall increase the number of representatives from eighty to one hundred, and I don't know but I should prefer to have one hundred and twenty Assemblymen and forty Senators, and elect three representatives in each Senatorial district, and elect them upon the same plan as is in vogue in Illinois—so that a bare majority shall not be able to deprive a strong minority of representation, so that every community in the State will be represented. I therefore hope that so far as the amendment of the gentleman from Yolo is concerned, allowing to each county in the State one representative, it will be maintained by this Convention. Increase the number of representatives, if it is found necessary. I want it arranged so that it will be simple and effectual. A membership of sixty Assemblymen in this State is equivalent to no representation at all, unless you want to carry on this government upon the principle of a Commission. I am in favor of Commissions, when they are necessary, but I am not in favor of transforming the Legislature into a Commission. I want the people to have representation, and I want every locality in this State to be represented. Take my district, for instance, as it will be under the apportionment marked out in this report—Monterey, San Luis Obispo, and Santa Barbara—commencing at Monterey Bay and extending down the coast one hundred and fifty miles to the county seat of San Luis Obispo, and about the same distance between San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara. A representative there would have no more idea of the local wants of these people than he would have of the wants of the people of Siskiyou or San Diego. That district embraces a territory larger than that of the State of Pennsylvania, too large to be represented by one man. He might as well be elected from Siskiyou, for all he would know about it. Therefore, I hope that this amendment will be adopted, and each county given one representative at least, even if it becomes necessary to increase the number to one hundred and twenty.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Is an amendment in order?

THE CHAIRMAN. No, sir.

MR. HOWARD. I give notice that, as soon as it shall be in order, I will move to have the present apportionment offered as a substitute, with the single exception of the County of Los Angeles, where there has been a great increase in population. I will move to increase the number there by one.

SPEECH OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. We have got into confusion, and I don't see how it is possible to get out of it without the committee rising. An amendment has been adopted to section five, that the Senate shall consist of forty and the Assembly of eighty members. The idea of giving each county one representative has been suggested, but it is not possible to do so without violating our rules. The number has been fixed by the Convention. Now, sir, I am perfectly satisfied that through inattention there has been a misunderstanding here. When this question was first put, the noes evidently had it, and I did not deem it necessary to speak upon it; but when the Chair called for a rising vote, the members did not seem to understand what the question was, and it was declared carried. This amendment changes the character of a considerable portion of the report of the committee. I do not suppose it is necessary for me to argue against the proposition of having eighty Assemblymen, fifty-three of them to be apportioned one to each county, and the balance to be divided according to population. If we should adopt such a proposition as that, the Constitution would probably receive a majority of the one hundred and sixty votes in Alpine County, and would be hopelessly defeated by San Francisco with her thirty thousand votes, Alameda with ten thousand, and other large counties in proportion. It is a proposition that is not worth arguing about. Now, sir, I do not know what this committee will do—that is, what it has done. I do not know whether the Chair will entertain a motion to reconsider what has been done. It disturbs the whole business of the committee. If the Chair does so rule, I propose to make a motion by which we can get at the judgment of the committee—that is, that the committee rise, recommend to the Convention to recommit section five to the Committee on Legislative Department, to restore that section so as to read as it was originally presented, if the Chair will entertain a motion to reconsider. If it does not, it is actually impossible to get the judgment of the majority of the Committee of the Whole on the proposition pending. I will make that motion in order to get the judgment of the Committee of the Whole.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is moved and seconded that the committee rise and recommend to the Convention to recommit section five to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instruction to restore the section as it was originally presented.

Division was called for, the committee divided, and the motion was lost: ayes, 52; noes, 55.

MR. KELLEY. Mr. Chairman: If it is in order, I would accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kern, Mr. Smith.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there is no objection the gentleman will have leave.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: I think there has been a misunderstanding. The object of the last motion, it seems to me, was to fix the number of Senators and Assemblymen in the Constitution. Now, to give to each county one representative, and limit the number to eighty, would be doing a great injustice to San Francisco and other large places. Now, it seems to me we should present a Constitution to the people that is on the basis of economy. We should present one with a small number, or else not deal with the matter at all, and leave it to the Legislature, because we will step on a great many corns, and lose a great many votes for our Constitution. Now, if we should leave the matter as it is in the old Constitution, with the additional provision, that each county in the State shall have at least one representative, we get at the matter; and I think a large number voted against the committee rising through a misunderstanding of the matter. I believe the object was to restore the section as it was originally reported. I don't know how to get at it, whether it is in order to move to amend the section so as to increase the number or not.

THE CHAIRMAN. No, sir, it is not.

MR. SMITH. Then the only way to get at the matter is to rise.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: Is an amendment in order now?

THE CHAIRMAN. No, sir. The question is on an amendment to an amendment offered by the gentleman from Yolo.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I was in favor of this section as it was originally reported; but the will of the Convention has been clearly expressed to increase the number, which has been thus fixed at forty and eighty respectively, for the two houses. I hope that no such amendment as that which has been offered here, giving one to each county, will pass. If it did pass, beyond all question the result would be the defeat of the Constitution. If you deprive the people of the larger counties of a reasonable and fair representation, they will not vote for your Constitution because that is the very essence and foundation of representative government. And they never will consent that one hundred men in one part of the State shall be more fully represented than one thousand in another part. Now, sir, the true solution of this would be to strike out simply the word "fifteen," in line three, and insert "twenty," and then you have the section complete. But the next section would have to be remodeled. And I should then propose, in the event of such an amendment being adopted, that the next section be recommitted to the Committee on Legislative Department. Population has always been, under our system of government, the basis of representation, and the people will not tolerate this proposed innovation. That is the very foundation upon which our government rests, and any attempt to foist this change upon the people will be emphatically repudiated, I can assure you.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. Chairman: There is no confusion here at all. It is perfectly clear and plain, if the committee will amend the latter part of section five to conform to the former part, the section will be complete. Already an amendment has been sent up, and is now pending, to amend the latter part of the section and make it harmonize with the first part. Then, so far as the following sections are concerned, I propose, and I don't think this committee is going to yield to the idea of giving to each county in the State one representative (regardless of population); I presume we will have to vote that down, unless the number was increased very much. Otherwise it would deprive the populous portion of the State of proper representation. Now, section five ought to be amended so as to read harmonious, and I propose to offer an amendment so as to make it read that "Senatorial Districts shall remain as now provided by law, until the Legislature shall change the same."

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: As far as San Francisco is concerned I know that the electors of that city do not desire to have their representation cut down. And they are perfectly satisfied with the representation as it stands at the present time. And it seems to me that we are about to commit a very grave mistake, if we desire to insert in this Constitution any iron-clad clause that will state how many representatives there shall be in the Legislature of this State. I am utterly opposed to putting into this Constitution the number of men that shall represent the people in the Legislature. And I believe the matter should be left in the new Constitution as it is in the old Constitution, and I am in favor of the amendment of Mr. Barry, and I hope that every other amendment now pending before this Convention, and every amendment that may be offered before the committee, will be promptly voted down. I hope the report of the committee will be changed so as to substitute section six of the old Constitution, to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. The number of Senators shall not be less than one third, nor more than one half, of that of the members of the Assembly; and at the first session of the Legislature, after this section takes effect, the Senators shall be divided by lot, as equally as may be, into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half shall be chosen biennially"——

MR. VAN DYKE. The number is limited in the old Constitution—section twenty-nine:

"SEC. 29. The number of Senators and members of Assembly shall, at the first session of the Legislature holden after the enumerations herein provided for are made, be fixed by the Legislature, and apportioned among the several counties and districts to be established by law, according to the number of white inhabitants. The number of members of Assembly shall not be less than twenty-four, nor more than thirty-six, until the number of inhabitants within this State shall amount to one hundred thousand; and, after that period, in such ratio that the whole number of members of Assembly shall never be less than thirty nor more than eighty."

MR. BEERSTECHER. Now, I believe in a clause of the character of section six. I believe in an elastic clause, one that will provide representation in proportion to population. I do not believe there is anything wrong in giving to every county in this State one representative, provided you go further, and after you have given to each county one representative, you commence and apportion by population also. Each county has one to start on, and then, if they have a certain number of voters in a county, over and above a certain number, then they have one more; and so on. Give each county one, and after that the representation should be according to population. Now, there is no objection to such a course as that. But I do not believe it is right nor just that we should say there shall be forty Senators and eighty members of the Legislature. I do not believe that is right, and then go on and say that each county shall have one, and by that way deprive the voters of San Francisco, and Oakland, and other large towns in this State, of their proper representation according to population.

MR. HEISKELL. Didn't you vote to deprive San Francisco, and Merced, and Mariposa, of representation in this body?

MR. BEERSTECHER. No, sir. Now there is one reason why it is not as necessary now in this Constitution as it was in the old Constitution. We propose to cut off all local and special legislation. We propose to take this class of legislation away from the Legislature and vest it directly in the people of the several counties. They will do their own legislation for themselves, consequently the necessity of sending men to the Legislature does not exist after the adoption of this Constitution as it did before. After considering the subject I believe the true basis of popular representation is here in the old Constitution. I believe the people are satisfied with the representation as fixed in the old Constitution. I think it will be a mistake on our part to depart from it, and I believe if we depart from the old Constitution in this particular the people will very promptly vote down the Constitution. I do not believe in putting in any iron-clad rule, and saying that there shall be forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I should like very much to see each county in the State have a representative in the Assembly. But I can see that it would not be just to the larger counties, or counties having a large population, with the small number of Assemblymen that we have provided for. Consequently, I cannot support such an amendment. I believe, however, that our safety lies in adopting the substitute proposed by Mr. Barry, the section taken from the old Constitution. That will leave the apportionment as it is now, and I do not believe we can improve upon it at present. If we should undertake it, I think, more than likely, we would make it worse. For my part, I shall vote for it when the proper time comes, and I hope the committee will see the wisdom of adopting it.

REMARKS OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: The change made by the Committee of the Whole in the number of Representatives and Senators need not affect the general plan reported by the committee, except so far as to increase the two houses. Representation ought to be based upon population. It may be very well to say that each county should have one representative; but there is no fairness in saying that the County of Alpine, with one hundred and seventy-five votes, should have the same representation as some other county with a voting population of four thousand, or three thousand. There will be no reason requiring every county to have a representative to look after local legislation and local interests in the future, if this Constitution is adopted, because it is proposed to do away with special and local legislation, and to repose in the local Legislature of each county the right to regulate their own private affairs, so that there will be no necessity for each little county to have a representative in the Legislature to watch the interests of that county. Now, it is proposed here to limit the number of Senators to forty, and the number of Assemblymen to eighty. That may be followed up by a corresponding change in the succeeding section. It will then read that "for the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, composed of contiguous territory," etc. Each district shall choose one Senator and two members of the Assembly. They shall be numbered from one to forty, etc. Now, it will not be necessary to make any change, except simply to substitute forty for thirty. Then I propose to add: "Until such adjustment shall be made, the present apportionment provided by law shall continue." So it will remain as it is now, until the census of eighteen hundred and eighty is taken. Then it will be the duty of the Legislature to apportion the State. Every portion of the State will have proper representation according to population. Now the changes that have been made need not render necessary the remodeling of the section, until we get down to the nineteenth line; then I propose to add, in lieu of what follows, that "until such adjustment shall be made, the present apportionment provided by law shall continue."

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman: I regret very much that I could not hear the remarks of the gentleman from San Joaquin. Gentlemen have said something in relation to the present apportionment, and in relation to that matter I would say that the present apportionment is as unjust, in my view, as any the State has ever had. The gentleman talks about the effect that the changes might have in relation to the vote in San Francisco. I ask them to take into consideration the effect upon the votes of other districts. I say that it is unjust that San Francisco should be represented from twenty to thirty per cent higher than the population of my district.

MR. ESTEE. Do you understand that to be the fact?

MR. ANDREWS. Yes, sir.

MR. ESTEE. The gentleman is entirely mistaken, because San Francisco was entitled, under the last apportionment, to twenty-two and one half members, but we consented to take twenty, and the apportionment was made upon this ratio.

MR. ANDREWS. That was made upon no constitutional census at all. That apportionment was made, sir, upon the Federal census, and every one knows that that census, so far as the sparsely settled regions were concerned, was no census at all. The gentleman knows that the compensation for Census Marshals, even in a large place like San Francisco, was not adequate, much less so in sparsely settled counties such as I represent. That apportionment was not made upon a coustitutional basis. The basis of apportionment is the census made by the State, and the gentleman knows it. This is not a constitutional apportionment. The district which I represent is not represented within thirty per cent. as San Francisco is represented. Further, sir, it would not be just, even to make it upon the basis of votes. There are six hundred, or seven hundred, maybe eight hundred voters in the district I represent, and some of them have to go twenty or thirty miles to vote; that is not the case in San Francisco; every vote is polled, which cannot possibly be the case in the district which I represent. I say the apportionment is an unconstitutional apportionment. It is an unfair apportionment to the people of this State, and whatever you may do in this Convention, if you are going to base representation upon population, they require that there should be some consideration of the popuiation in the various districts, and not made as this last one was made, upon an unfair enumeration, not contemplated in the Constitution.

For that reason, I care not particularly as to the number, whether it is forty or thirty—whether you settle upon forty for the Senate, or thirty. If it shall consist of thirty the apportionment made here by the Committee on Legislative Department is to some extent more just than that which we are entering upon. The apportionment proposed by the gentleman from Solano is unfair and unjust. There are other parts of the State besides San Francisco to be looked to in framing an organic law. The other parts of the State have, from their very organization, paid tribute to San Francisco. It is that which has made San Francisco what she is to-day; and, I say, if representation is to be cut down, do not cut it down in such districts as I represent. I have seen, in the history of this State, representatives from other parts of the State save San Francisco from herself.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman: In order to find a clue to get out of this labyrinth, it seems to me that the suggestion of the gentleman from Alameda was proper, though the other gentleman from Alameda has stated that he thought the vote was decisive as to the meaning of the Convention. But it was nearly a tie vote. Now, in order that the sense of the Convention may be properly tested, I move that the committee now rise, report progress, and instruct the Committee on Legislative Department to restore section five, as originally reported, so as to start right again.

MR. ESTEE. I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. ESTEE. The same motion was made awhile ago for the same instructions, and voted down.

The point of order was overruled.

On the motion, the committee divided, and the motion prevailed by a vote of 53 ayes to 48 noes.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department. They recommend that the article be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to restore section five as originally presented.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move the reference of section five to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to restore the section as originally presented.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I shall oppose that. The sense of this Convention is to the effect that we have eighty members of the Assembly and forty Senators, and I think the instructions should go to the committee that it is the wish of the Convention that the numbers be fixed at forty and eighty.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I hope this thing will not be done. I am opposed to cutting down representation in the only popular department of the government. There is no reason, in my judgment—and I have listened for some reason—for cutting down the Assembly to sixty members. It is not the policy adopted in any other part of the country. In Missouri, where they have changed the Constitution recently, they have one hundred and forty-three members of the Assembly. In New York, one hundred and twenty-eight; in Pennsylvania, two hundred; in Massachusetts, two hundred and fifty. In fact, nearly all the larger States in the East have from one hundred to two hundred and fifty in the Assembly, and the reason is this: that this is the popular branch of the government, through which the people speak, and that the people can only be fairly represented by people who go direct from their homes; that in a great State like this it would be a physical impossibility for a man living in San Bernardino County to properly represent San Diego County, because, necessarily, he would not be acquainted with the local necessities of the people. Now, my friend to the left represents five or six counties, composing one district, extending across the whole breadth of the State, and running down the coast one hundred and eighty miles. It is utterly impossible for him to adequately represent the wants and wishes of the people of such a large territory, and I hope the Convention will not adopt the proposition to cut down the representation in the legislative department of this State. I would much prefer to see one hundred and twenty members of the Assembly. Let us not cut it down, because there is no reason for it. Let us make the number pretty large. If we wish to be economical, limit the compensation, but do not deprive the people of a fair representation in the popular branch of the Legislature.

Now, I wish to say that the question raised by the gentleman from Shasta cuts no figure in this case. If the people of any part of the State are not properly represented, then they ought to be properly represented. Would it better their condition any to cut down the representation from eighty to sixty? I think not. I say it is against the interests of the people of this State, and I believe against their wish also, to cut down the representation in the popular branch of government, and for one I am opposed to it. It has no reference to San Francisco; San Francisco only gets her proportional share. It has no reference to Shasta. Let San Francisco and Shasta stand side by side, and be represented according to population, and let that population be ascertained according to law.

MR. ANDREWS. How would you ascertain the population?

MR. ESTEE. Ascertain it by the United States census. I am aware that there is a clause in the old Constitution requiring the State to take the census, but they have never done it.

MR. ANDREWS. Permit me further—are you not aware that in the counties I represent the last census was no census at all?

MR. ESTEE. I did not know it until I heard it from the gentleman. I had supposed it was a fair census. Let him make that representation to the committee. Let his county and all other counties be fairly represented. There is no desire to disfranchise any portion of the State. I certainly have no such desire.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I move to instruct the Committee on Legislative Department to adjust their report so that hereafter there shall be forty Senators and one hundred and twenty Assemblymen.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: My idea of representation is based a good deal on the Federal plan. We find out that every State has put it according to population. Each district is represented according to population. Now, if we say that there shall be forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen, if the population should grow to five million, it will be out of the power of the Legislature to increase the number, or to manipulate in any other way except to reduce in one place and add in another. There ought to be some way by which the representation can be increased according to population.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I think the amendment I sent up will take us out of this confusion and meet the views of a large number of the members. If one hundred and twenty Assemblymen is too many we can reduce the number to one hundred, but I would like to test the sense of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on referring to the committee, with instructions to place the number at one hundred and twenty.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: If we refer this to the committee, and they report it back again, will it be considered as the act of the Convention?

THE PRESIDENT. It is in the power of the Convention to amend it.

MR. GRACE. Will it be in the power of a member of the Convention to move an amendment?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

MR. GRACE. Then I am in favor of the amendment.

MR. BELCHER. I propose an amendment to make it forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move we adjourn.

MR. McCALLUM. I did not hear the answer of the President to the question asked, that if the committee should restore this section, whether it will be open to amendment?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

MR. McCALLUM. Then that being the case, the matter can come up at the proper time and be amended. I suggest that we adopt this motion and restore the original section as reported by the Committee on Legislative Department.

MR. REYNOLDS. If I understand the motion, it is that section five be referred back to the committee, with instructions to make the number forty and eighty, instead of thirty and sixty. It may be amended.

THE PRESIDENT. There is an amendment to the amendment. The first question is on the motion of the gentleman from Yuba, Mr. Belcher.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I suggest that the whole report be referred to the committee, so that sections five and six may be adjusted to the amendment adopted by the committee, of forty and eighty, so as to complete the report. Now, the committee have adopted the numbers, forty and eighty, and what we wish is to have the report referred back to the committee to make the whole report conform to this idea.

MR. McCALLUM. There is a certain matter which has been entirely overlooked here. If gentlemen will look at section twenty-five of the report of the committee, they will find enumerated thirty-three different matters of special legislation which the Legislature is prohibited from legislating upon in future. This whole system of local legislation is to be left to the localities concerned. I think we ought to vote down the amendments, and adopt the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to restore section five again.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: This matter has got into such a confused condition, I move we do now adjourn. In the morning we can get at it and note the proper instructions.

Division was called for, and the motion prevailed, by a vote of 81 ayes.

And at four o'clock and thirty minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning.

EIGHTY-SECOND DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Wednesday, December 18th, 1878.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

Carried.

ATTACHES.

MR. PRESIDENT. I have a communication from the Sergeant-at-Arms, in reply to a resolution of inquiry, which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

To the honorable President and members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: In reply to a resolution passed by your honorable body, on Saturday last, requesting me to furnish the Convention "a list of employés," and to state "if there is any that are not required to do the work in future," also if there is any employed who are not authorized by law, I will say: The employés at present consist of one Secretary, two Assistant Secretaries, one Minute Clerk, one Journal Clerk, one Sergeant-at-Arms, one Assistant Sergeant-at Arms, three Doorkeepers, four Porters, one Postmaster, one Mail Carrier, eight Pages, one Gas Porter; total, twenty-five. Salary per week, eight hundred dollars. I think the work can be done in future by a less number. The following reductions can be made, and then get along very well with the work: Four Pages, two Doorkeepers, one Porter, and one Mail Carrier. The Act creating the Convention provides that the President may appoint not to exceed one Doorkeeper and four Pages. I therefore think that four Pages and two Doorkeepers, now employed, are not authorized by law.

Respectfully submitted.

T. J. SHERWOOD, Sergeant-at-Arms.

MR. LARKIN. I move that the recommendation of the Sergeant-at-Arms be adopted.

MR. HUESTIS. I move that the whole matter be laid on the table.

MR. BARNES. I second the motion.

The motion prevailed.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I move that section five of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department be re-referred to the Committee of the Whole.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: What will be the effect of that motion?

THE PRESIDENT. To take it into Committee of the Whole.

MR. BARNES. Is there anything now before the Convention?

THE PRESIDENT. A motion to re-refer section five to the Committee of the Whole.

MR. McCALLUM. I would like to know what has become of the motions already pending to refer that section to the Committee on Legislative Department.

THE PRESIDENT. If this motion prevails those motions will necessarily fall. They will be disposed of by this motion, if the Convention refers it back to the Committee of the Whole. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Solano, Mr. Dudley, to re-refer section five of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department to the Committee of the Whole.

The motion was lost, on a division, by a vote of 44 ayes to 45 noes.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I renew the motion that was pending at the time of the adjournment yesterday.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the motions pending at the time of the adjournment yesterday.

THE SECRETARY read from the Journal:

"Mr. Reynolds moved that section five of the article on Legislative Department be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to restore the section as originally reported by said committee.

"Amendment by Mr. Ayers:

"Instruct the Committee on Legislative Department to adjust their report so that there shall be forty Senators and one hundred and twenty Assemblymen.

"Mr. Belcher moved to amend 'that the committee adjust the section to the amendment, as adopted in Committee of the Whole, of forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen.'"

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I desire to withdraw my motion and substitute one that the Committee on Legislative Department be instructed to adjust the section by substituting section six of the old Constitution. That effects the same thing, and leaves the system so that, if it should be necessary, it can be changed. At present there are forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen, and it seems to me that at some time it might perhaps be better to have it so that it could be changed, if necessary. It seems to me that eighty Assemblymen would do at present, and that forty Senators are enough at present, but years hence it may be thought that one hundred or one hundred and twenty representatives would be better than eighty. Now, if section six of the present Constitution was adopted it would leave the system the same as it is now, and the next section will be easily adjusted to it, leaving the whole system as it is now. I therefore move to substitute, as an amendment, that the committee be directed to report section six of the old Constitution in the place of section five.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I second the motion of the gentleman from the Fourth District, to substitute section six of the old Constitution in place of section five as reported by the Committee on Legislative Department, and the amendments offered to section five. That, as I understand now, would place the number of representatives at eighty and the number of Senators at forty, with the privilege left in the Legislature at any future time to increase the number as may seem proper and right to them, to give a just representation to the people of this State. I am opposed to having one Senator less than forty or one representative less than eighty, and I would prefer to have one hundred and twenty representatives to forty Senators.

MR. AYERS. I would like to know where there is found anything in section six that provides that there shall be eighty members of the Assembly and forty members of the Senate.

MR. WYATT. If there is nothing in section six, there is something in section twenty-nine which fixes it. I would prefer to go farther and provide that each county of this State shall have one representative and that there should be representatives enough to give to the heavily populated counties of the State what would be a proper representation, taking one representative from each county. I deem it important that the representation should be increased rather than diminished. Under the growth of the State of California since eighteen hundred and sixty-

San Francisco has been swallowing the population of the State, and there is every reason to believe that for the next ten, fifteen, or twenty years, she will hold the same large population as compared with the balance of the State; and to represent San Francisco will be to represent the State, simply taking the population as a basis; and in order to some extent to counteract that influence, not only for the good of the State at large, but for the good of San Francisco, it is necessary to deviate somewhat from the representation upon this basis of population, to a representation by territorial districts. But if the Convention will not allow one representative for each county of the State, then I am at least in favor of leaving it to the Legislature, so that they can increase the representation of the State when they shall see the immediate necessity for it, and I believe they will in the near future. The State of Illinois has found it necessary to provide that the City of Chicago shall never have at any time exceeding one fifth of the representation of that State. It ought to be in this Constitution that the City of San Francisco should not at any time exceed one fifth of the representation of the State of California. Based upon population now, they would have one fourth of the representation of the State, and it is not improbable that in the next fifteen years they would have one third of the representation of this State, and it might possibly be one half. It has been said further, and found to be a practical fact so far as it has been shown in the history of American legislation, that large cities are, as Mr. Jefferson described, where the corruption of legislation comes from, and that the country districts are those to be looked to for the purification of the public administration of justice. I do not want to see the representation of this State so reduced that any great city shall hold one third of the representation of the people, and then when an excitement springs up like that of last Winter, result in the passage of such laws as the gag law of the last Legislature. San Francisco, without saying anything that is not true of it, has been saved from herself by the members from the country on different occasions in this State; and it is proper that the representatives that represent the length and breadth of this broad State should be provided for. I therefore hope that nothing less than forty Senators and eighty representatives will be provided for in this Constitution; with a flexibility in this Constitution to allow the Legislature to increase at any time that the necessities of the case may require it.

Mr. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I believe that a majority of the delegates of this Convention is satisfied with the section six of the old Constitution, to take the place of section five of the new Constitution; and to adopt that and leave out section six. These counties talking about not having proper representation! San Francisco has not a proper representation. She has now only twenty representatives. Look at El Dorado. She had four Senators and San Francisco four. These distant counties have all been well represented—always have been. There has never been any disturbance in regard to that matter. The counties have always been satisfied with their representatives except one or two of these old cow counties, where there is but some two or three hundred men living in them. [Laughter.]

Mr. AYERS. Does the gentleman say that outside of San Francisco the counties have always been satisfied with their representatives?

Mr. O'DONNELL. I have never heard any complaint except from one or two old cow counties.

Mr. AYERS. Then you had better take a trip through the State.

Mr. O'DONNELL. I have been through the State.

Mr. AYERS. Then you had better take another trip.

Mr. O'DONNELL. New York has one hundred and twenty-eight representatives. She has got six million population. California has got seven hundred thousand. Such a comparison I never heard before. In regard to the old section another thing is, if the State should increase in population there is a provision made there about the Legislature. There is a provision—and no doubt if this Constitution should be adopted there will be a great increase of population, if we get rid of the Mongolian.

Mr. HEISKELL. Do you want the Chinese to be represented—enumerated in the apportionment?

Mr. O'DONNELL. Well, we do not represent them. We have got only twenty representatives and have three hundred thousand inhabitants. Here are some of your counties with only a thousand or fifteen hundred. I want to be represented according to the census of the United States. We don't mean the Chinese. We count them more as chattels or stock. Now, Mr. President, how can we have a better clause in the Constitution than this:

"Sec. 6. The number of Senators shall not be less than one third, nor more than one half, of that of the members of the Assembly; and at the first session of the Legislature after this section takes effect the Senators shall be divided by lot, as equally as may be, into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half shall be chosen biennially."

I cannot see any reason why we should not adopt that section. This is one of the most important sections in the Constitution. You have all had a proper representation, and I hope that the amendment that this be reported back will be adopted. I see a great deal of dissatisfaction here among members. They want to load down this Constitution. They want to put a clause into the Constitution so that the whole of it will be repudiated, and if we keep these two sections there it will be repudiated. The people are well satisfied with the old Constitution in this respect, and I hope it will be adopted; that this section will be reported back to the Committee of the Whole and will be adopted. If it is it will be adopted at the next election.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. President: I wish to ask a question. If this motion prevails to refer this with instructions to replace section six in the bill we are now considering—if this is done, will it be subject to amendment in Committee of the Whole? Will it be open to amendment?

The PRESIDENT. It will be open to the action of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. TURNER. And subject to amendment?

Mr. VAN DYKE. Yes.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President: I would like, if in order, to submit another instruction.

The PRESIDENT. There is already an amendment to an amendment pending.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I hope the gentleman will accept this additional instruction. It seems to me that the proposition now does not go far enough. The committee should be instructed to adjust the representation according to the population of the counties. My amendment is to that effect.

Mr. ROLFE. That is in another part of the article. That is provided for in another part.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I would prefer to have the instructions go to the committee together.

Mr. BLACKMER. Mr. President: It seems to me that this does not go far enough, for the reason that it will be as necessary to remodel section six of the report of the committee as to substitute section six for section five. This provides one thing that it seems to me is already provided for, and that is, the division of the Senators by lot. That is already provided for; what we wish to do is to continue the present apportionment until the next Legislature meets, or until after the next census. Both sections should be referred to the committee so that they can arrange the two.

Mr. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: The sixth section has not been taken from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I had prepared an amendment to refer sections five and six to the committee, with instructions to so adjust them as to leave the present subdivisions as they are until after the next census.

Mr. MANSFIELD. That is just what we complain of.

The PRESIDENT. Section six is not before the Convention. It is in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MANSFIELD. That perpetuates the evil we complain of. We have over six thousand; we have not a proper representation. The County of Solano has two thousand less votes, and they have four. The County of Santa Clara has some three hundred less votes, and they have five. Under this present apportionment we should be afflicted with the same difficulty of which we complain now.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

Mr. McCALLUM. Mr. President: The objection to the amendment of the gentleman from Yuba is that it belongs to section six, and not to the section now under consideration. It has no reference whatever to the apportionment as provided in section six of the present Constitution. That section says nothing whatever about the number of Senators or Assemblymen. There is another section in the old Constitution which makes the apportionment. The gentleman from Los Angeles proposes that the Assembly shall consist of one hundred and twenty, and the Senate consist of forty members, making the entire representation one hundred and sixty. I cannot entertain any apprehension that this economical Convention is going to adopt a proposition making an increase of fifty thousand dollars in the expenses of the Legislature, instead of the decrease of fifty thousand dollars per session, as proposed by the committee. If the Convention favors forty and eighty, let us vote on that. If they propose to let the present representation stand as it is, let us vote upon that. Let us not mix up matters which belong to section six with matters which belong to section five. As to whether it will reach the question of whether there should be apportionment now or not, would be an open question. Let it be presented at the proper time. When a question is presented, let us vote upon that as a proposition disconnected with other matters. For my own part, I think this Convention would be derelict in duty if it should fail to make an apportionment. The Constitution has provided for a State census every ten years. It is imperative in the requirement, although it has never been complied with. But it has not been complied with, on account of the great expense. The Legislature could not make it, because it would be unconstitutional. The Constitution can make it, however, and it ought to be made, and made now, because, after the National census to be taken in eighteen hundred and eighty, there would be no meeting of the Legislature until eighteen hundred and eighty-two, no election under that until eighteen hundred and eighty-three, and no session of the Legislature under it until eighteen hundred and eighty-four—five years hence. Our present Constitution required it to be done in eighteen hundred and seventy-five. It can be made now. It ought to be made now. It is in conformity with the letter and spirit of the Constitution to say that it should be made. Some counties have doubled and trebled in population. The gentleman says it is so in Los Angeles. I know it is so in Alameda, and many other counties have doubled their population. I do not believe in waiting for the National census, when two United States Senators are to be elected, and when matters of much more consequence are to be passed upon by the Legislature. But let us vote upon that question as a distinct proposition, and not mix it up with the matters presented in section five. Let us fix the number first, and then we can proceed intelligently upon the question of distribution afterwards.

REMARKS OF MR. BARNES.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. President: I understood the view of the committee to be as stated in the instructions proposed by Mr. Belcher to the committee last night, which was that the Committee on Legislative Department be requested to adjust their report so that there should be forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen. That leaves them just as it was before. Now, then, in order to accomplish that result, it seems to me a simple matter enough to do, if we take out section five as it stands and substitute section six of the old Constitution in place of it, and then in place of section six insert section twenty-nine of the old Constitution, so that it shall read: "The number of Senators and members of Assembly shall, at the first session of the Legislature holden after the enumerations herein provided for are made, be fixed by the Legislature, and apportioned among the several counties and districts to be established by law," etc.

The gentleman from Alameda says there are some counties in this State whose population has trebled. There are counties whose population has been very largely diminished. How are we to get at it? Certainly we cannot take the vote of the county, or the vote of the district, to determine the question of its population. Population is one thing, and the vote is another; and, as I understand it, this subject cannot be settled until we shall have such an enumeration in eighteen hundred and eighty as is provided for in the old Constitution. There is at present an apportionment that is in the main satisfactory. Now, why in the world should we undertake, without knowledge and without anything upon which to base a substantial judgment, to change it? Why not leave that subject where it properly belongs, with the Legislature, simply putting in section six of the old Constitution in place of section five of the report, and moving section twenty-nine and putting it in place of section six of the report, and leaving it to the Legislature to redistrict the State, if necessary. I think if that course were taken it would cover the whole ground, and we would be able to get over this subject.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: If the Convention will permit me to withdraw my motion, I think we can easily get out of this difficulty. If the Convention——

THE PRESIDENT. The difficulty is, there are two amendments to your motion pending.

MR. REYNOLDS. I was about to say, if the Convention will permit a withdrawal of this portion of the amendment, then I would move to refer so much of the report as relates to this subject back to the committee, with instructions to amend it so as to adapt it to the amendments adopted by the committee, restoring the numbers forty and eighty. That would obviate all this difficulty. The committee could then adjust sections five and six to the amendment already adopted by the Committee of the Whole, and report at their earliest convenience, and we could temporarily pass these sections.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the gentleman will be permitted to withdraw his motion. The amendments would drop with it.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I object.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will put the question to the Convention. The gentleman from San Francisco asks leave to withdraw the instructions which he moved.

The leave was granted.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I now move that sections five and six of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department be referred to that committee, with instructions to readjust the report, so as to conform to the amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole, to wit: forty Senators and eighty Representatives.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will recollect that section six is now in the Committee of the Whole and has not been withdrawn. Section six can be adopted in Committee of the Whole just as well as to send it back to the Committee on Legislative Department.

MR. VAN DYKE. Let the gentleman confine his motion to section five.

MR. TERRY. I think the difficulty can be settled in Committee of the Whole. I move that section five be referred back to Committee of the Whole.

The motion prevailed.

MEMORIAL ON CHINESE.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I move to take from the table the memorial presented by the special committee on December fourteenth, to be transmitted to the Governors of Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, and Washington Territories.

The motion prevailed.

THE SECRETARY read:

MEMORIAL.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF CALIFORNIA,
SACRAMENTO, December —, 1878.

To the Governors of Oregon, Nevada, and Washington and Arizona Territories:

Your attention is respectfully invited to a resolution adopted by this body on the ninth instant, of which the following is a copy:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to draft petitions to be forwarded by this Convention to the Governors of Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and Washington Territories, requesting their Excellencies to memorialize the President of the United States and the Senate, on behalf of their States and Territories, for a modification of the Burlingame Treaty, now existing between the Chinese Empire and the Republic of the United States of America.

This body entertains no doubt that the people of Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and Washington Territories are in full accord with the people of California in desiring to prevent the further immigration of the Chinese, and to compel the removal of those now domiciled upon the Pacific Coast. It believes that your Excellencies have recognized the evils which have resulted from the presence of the Chinese, and that your Excellencies will cheerfully unite with us in the expression of the existing universal sentiment of hostility to its continuance to the President and Senate of the United States, to the end that the treaty now existing between the United States and the Empire of China may be abrogated, or so modified as to permit the prevention of further immigration of a vicious and non-assimilating population.

You understand, doubtless, as we do, that these people have no respect or regard for our Government, either as to its form or administration; that they govern themselves by a system of laws peculiar to themselves, and have their own tribunals for the administration of law; that twenty-five years' experience has shown that they are incapable of assimilation, either in sentiment, habits of life, or religion; that they are rapidly absorbing all branches of mechanical and manual labor, and expelling from most ordinary pursuits the middle and poorer classes of our citizens; that the destitution thus caused is developing a race of American paupers, criminals, and tramps, instead of a race of industrious, virtuous, and intelligent American citizens; that the existence of either an aristocratic or servile class is a perpetual menace of free institutions, and that both these deplorable results of Chinese immigration are imminent, and have already manifested themselves; that the habits of the Chinese, the absence of the family relation, of fixed homes, and of decent social life among them, enable them to support themselves and accumulate money upon wages which would starve an American citizen, and that their accumulations are very rarely expended or invested in the communities where they are domiciled, but are transmitted to the country of their nativity, and that they are, therefore, enabled to avoid taxation and any considerable share of the burdens of government, and to drain the circulating capital of the coast; while their criminal habits and utter immorality are filling our prisons, jails, almshouses, and places of refuge for the destitute, and debasing, by example and intercourse, the rising generation. We believe that these considerations, and others that may occur to your Excellencies, should be pressed upon the attention of the President and Congress of the United States.

This body will take occasion to express the views indicated above to the President and Senate of the United States, and respectfully request your Excellencies to officially address the treaty-making power of the Government and Congress to the same effect, to the end that they may understand the wishes, necessities, and demands of the people of the Pacific Coast in reference to the question of Chinese immigration.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I move that the memorial be adopted and transmitted to the Governor.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I do not see the necessity of including Arizona Territory. At the last report there were only nineteen Chinamen in the whole Territory of Arizona.

MR. AYERS. There are more than that there now.

MR. SHURTLEFF. In the Territory of Idaho there are a good many, but as regards Montana I, for one, do not propose to follow the Chinamen over there. I think if we had about three hundred thousand of them scattered throughout New England and the great West, it would solve this Chinese problem. I think Idaho ought to be embraced in the resolution, and Utah also. I move that Idaho be added.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I move that Montana be added to that report.

MR. WELLIN. I move to add Utah and Colorado.

MR. GRACE. I have lived in Montana, and know there are a great many Chinese there. If we want to do good, we had better add Montana.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to add Idaho and Montana.

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes.

Carried.

WASH BILL.

MR. BEERSTECHER presented the following:

SACRAMENTO, December 13, 1878.

Constitutional Convention of California, in account with Mrs. Margaret Galt, Dr.:
To washing towels, twelve weeks, seven dollars.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

ICE BILL.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne, presented the following:

Resolved, That the sum of thirteen dollars and seventy-five cents be and the same is hereby allowed the Pacific Ice Company for ice to December thirteenth.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

RESOLUTION ON CHINESE.

MR. DOWLING offered the following:

WHEREAS, That there is at present employed in the gold mines of California at least thirty thousand Chinamen; and whereas, a slight amendment to the United States mining laws would exclude all Chinese from holding, owning, or working such mining ground; therefore,

Resolved, That our Representatives in Congress be requested by this Convention to use all reasonable and honorable means to have the desired amendments incorporated in the United States mining laws.

Resolved, That the Secretary be and is hereby instructed to forward a copy of these resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives at Washington.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I believe it is well known to those who are familiar with our mining laws, that under the Acts of Congress, as they now stand, no Chinaman can hold a mining claim in the State of California. The mining laws provide for the application for patents of mining claims, and provide that citizens of the United States, and those who have filed their intentions, may file adverse claims, and there is no provision for any other person. I undertake to say that that is the law to-day. I believe that there is no difference of opinion among those who have made a specialty of studying the mining laws, that persons that have become citizens of the United States, or have declared their intentions to become citizens, may obtain patents to claims now in the possession of Chinese. That is the statute and the laws of the United States to-day.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I understand the theory upon which the mines of this State have been worked from the very commencement to be, very briefly, this: The State has allowed claims to be taken up by possessory titles on property. They have been allowed to be bought and sold, devised, and treated as property. The United States has been passively acquiescing in this, and it is only until very recently that the United States has undertaken to dispose of mining claims by permitting them to be taken upon certain conditions.

MR. McCALLUM. Twelve years since.

MR. BARNES. That is comparatively a recent period. Now, so far as the law of this State is concerned, I do not understand that there is anything in it that prevents a Chinaman buying and holding as well as anybody else. If he has no title anybody might go on and make a location, and take his claim under a patent of the United States. But that is not the scope of this resolution. What I understand the gentleman from San Francisco desires to accomplish by this is some positive amendment of the mining laws of the United States, so that the United States Government itself will inhibit and prevent the working of mines upon the public lands of the United States by Chinamen.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I ask that the Secretary read the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read the resolution as above.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I move to lay that resolution on the table. It is entirely unnecessary. As has been said——

THE PRESIDENT. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

MR. HALE. I wish to withdraw the motion temporarily, as I wish to make a remark. The resolution is——

MR. HOWARD. I rise to a point of order.

MR. STEDMAN. I object to the withdrawal of the motion.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman can make the motion at the end of his speech if he desires.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: As stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes, up to eighteen hundred and sixty-six the policy of the Government of the United States, in respect to its public lands, was one of silence, with the full knowledge of the fact that these lands were largely occupied for mining purposes; large sums were extracted from them, and government quietly submitted and apparently recognized it. The Courts of this State until that time considered this acquiescence upon the part of the government as a permission, and treated the occupants of mines as being the owners of the property, founded upon the well recognized legal presumption of ownership of title founded upon possession. In eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the first time the Government of the United States was moved to take some active steps in the premises, and then not for the purpose of condemning the previous policy or practice obtaining in the mining districts, but with a view of securing title upon a safe and convenient basis. They provided for the first time that citizens of the United States, and those who had declared their intentions to become such—and limiting the right to those persons—might occupy the public lands for mining purposes; and provided at that time for the purchase by such occupants of certain classes of them upon terms which are described. Amendments were made in eighteen hundred and seventy and eighteen hundred and seventy-two, but to-day the law stands in this wise, that citizens of the United States, and those who declare their intentions to become such, and only those, are privileged to occupy the public lands for mining purposes, and the privilege is limited to that class. Now, that is all that Congress can do. I submit, therefore, that there is no occasion for this resolution whatever. The fact is that the status of our law, so far as the Federal law is concerned, is just what any of us would ask for. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I submit——

THE PRESIDENT. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

MR. BARNES. I think the gentleman pursued a singular course. That is a nice way to do, debate it and then move to lay on the table. I hope the gentleman will pursue the same course and lie on the table.

The motion prevailed, on a division, by a vote of 51 ayes to 31 noes.

MR. DOWLING. I call for the ayes and noes.

THE PRESIDENT. You are too late.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

MR. WYATT. Mr. Chairman: I want to offer an amendment to section five.

THE CHAIRMAN. I think there are about four amendments now pending.

MR. KELLEY. Mr. President: I understand section five was referred back to the committee.

THE CHAIRMAN. To the Committee of the Whole.

MR. ROLFE. I will ask if these amendments were not handed in before we went into Committee of the Whole?

THE CHAIRMAN. They were pending in Committee of the Whole when the committee last rose. The Secretary will read them.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Offered by Mr. Dudley, of Solano:

"Amend section five, by striking out the words 'as hereinafter provided,' in line two, and insert the words 'as provided by law;' also, strike out the word 'fifteen,' in line three, and insert in lieu thereof the word 'twenty.'"

"By Mr. Smith, of Fourth District (accepted by Mr. Kelley):

"Add to section: 'No apportionment shall be made which shall deny to each county in the State at least one Assemblyman;' and that the words 'by districts,' in the second line, be stricken out; also, strike out the word 'fifteen' and insert the word 'twenty.'"

"Mr. Barry offers section six of the old Constitution."

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I would say that before recess on yesterday I offered section six of the old Constitution, and that has not yet been read. I offered that previous to the offering, by any other person, of any other amendment, and I think that would be first in order.

THE CHAIRMAN. That amendment is a substitute for the whole section, and will come up after the others. The first in order is the amendment offered by the gentleman from Solano, Mr. Dudley.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: I understand that the word "fifteen" was stricken out. If the gentleman will read section six, as reported by the Committee on Legislative Department, I think he will agree that his amendment is unnecessary; that is, his amendment striking out "as hereinafter provided" and inserting "as provided by law." The section requires the Legislature, after the next census, to apportion the State; and, further, provides that, in making such apportionment, parties who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States shall not be taken into account. I think this is a better provision than is now in the law. It is provided so that the State may be divided into forty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, composed of adjacent territory, after the census of eighteen hundred and eighty, and after each census taken by the United States; and that in making such adjustment, persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States shall not be counted as making a part of the population.

MR. BARNES. Are they not population?

MR. TERRY. They are not citizens. Alien residents are not population.

MR. BARNES. Are they not population?

MR. TERRY. No, they are not population. If they are population, they are not such that they should be counted as forming a basis of representation. They are people who are here against our will, and whom we are anxious to get rid of. They may be population, but it is a class of population like the Indians—not taxed, who are not counted in making up a basis of representation.

Mr. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. Chairman: On the supposition that the committee will adopt section six, that part of my amendment to strike out "as hereinafter provided," and insert "as provided by law," is not necessary. The last part is.

MR. TERRY. I understood that the other had been done.

MR. DUDLEY. It has not been done. The word "fifteen" still remains.

MR. TERRY. That, of course, is necessary then.

MR. DUDLEY. I am not particular about the rest. I therefore modify my motion.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no objections, the gentleman will have leave to modify his motion. The question is on the motion to strike out "fifteen" and insert "twenty."

MR. WYATT. Mr. Chairman: I really do not know what we are voting upon or what we are proposing to reach. In order to test the sense of the committee as to whether they are willing to increase the Senators to forty, if they have not been, and increase the Representatives to one hundred and twenty, if it has not been done, I shall move that this committee now rise, report back sections five and six, with the recommendation that they be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to report to the Convention that the Senate consist of forty members, and the Assembly of one hundred and twenty members; that they shall be elected from separate Senate and Assembly Districts, and that each county shall be entitled to one Assembly representative in the Legislature.

MR. ANDREWS. I second the motion.

MR. LARKIN. Will the gentleman allow me to offer an amendment to that proposition? If the gentleman will make it one hundred and twelve members, that will allow one for each county, and the same number as now apportioned by the committee for the balance of the State.

MR. VAN DYKE. I rise to a point of order. There are three members——

THE CHAIRMAN. This is a motion for the committee to rise; there is no amendment.

MR. WYATT. No, sir; there ought to be at least one hundred and twenty Assemblymen.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Solano.

[Great confusion, and cries of "Read!" "Read!"]

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out 'fifteen,' in line three, and insert 'twenty.'"

Adopted, on a division, by an affirmative vote of 80.

MR. KELLEY. Mr. Chairman: I will insist on my amendment, offered yesterday, and would like to make a statement to this house. I have examined the last apportionment, and find that there are eighteen counties that have a joint Assemblyman that are now represented in the Assembly by nine Assemblymen. I find, also, that there are twelve counties that have two or more Assemblymen, which makes forty-eight in all. Twelve large counties have forty-eight members in the Assembly, and the eighteen small counties have nine. Now, that amendment proposes to take nine from these large counties and add to the eighteen small counties, which would then, under the present apportionment, allow these twelve large counties thirty-nine Assemblymen instead of forty-eight, which is nine less. I do hope that the amendment will pass, in justice to the small counties.

MR. VAN DYKE. Is that an amendment to section five?

THE CHAIRMAN. That is offered as an amendment to section five. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section: 'No apportionment shall be made which shall deny to each county in the State at least one Assemblyman;' and that the words 'by districts,' in the second line, be stricken out; also, strike out the word 'fifteen,' and insert the word 'twenty.'"

MR. KELLEY. Mr. Chairman: I would further state that in case the Assembly was increased to ninety it would just leave it as it is, with the addition of these nine counties.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I would say to this Convention that I trust that we may not increase the Assembly beyond what it is at present. There are many here who are in favor of having it still less, but as a compromise I would be willing to have it remain as it is. But all these attempts to get a larger representation on the floor is entirely contrary to the wishes of the people. I am perfectly satisfied that any increase in the numbers of legislators will be disapproved by the people. I think they would stand the present Legislature, but I think if we go beyond it they will not stand it. We are about to do away with special legislation. Out of seven hundred laws in these volumes there are five hundred and odd of them which are local laws. What is the use of having the same number as are on this floor now just to overlook the general laws of the State, and get such an immense crowd here? It appears to me that the people will not stand it. I trust that the members who are in favor of going higher will come to common ground and go back to the old Legislature of eighty and forty. I am in favor of less, but at the same time I am willing to take that as a compromise. I think it is the general feeling that one hundred and twelve or one hundred and twenty would be disapproved by the people.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I understood that yesterday, in the Committee of the Whole, we voted to strike out "sixty," and insert "eighty." Then I submit any proposition that goes to change that is out of order. So the number cannot be increased from eighty without reconsidering that.

THE CHAIRMAN. The amendment does not propose to increase it.

MR. VAN DYKE. I have then to say that to attempt to distribute these eighty members so as to give each county one would defeat this Constitution, however good it may be, and I hope the members will vote it down.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no further amendments——

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman; I believe that my substitute is now in order.

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes, that is true. It is in order. The motion is to substitute section six of the old Constitution for section five of the report.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I offered that substitute yesterday, believing that it would be better for the interests of the people to let the Constitution remain unchanged so that the number of representatives would be just as they are now—forty in the Senate and eighty in the Assembly. In that way the people are represented as fully as they desire to be. By the amendment proposed to be offered by Colonel Barnes, it would still give further flexibility to the section, and provide that it might be still further raised as the exigencies of the case may require, when the population of the State may increase, and the apportionment be changed, and then the number of representatives may be increased. I believe that is the sense of this Convention, that the Convention should adopt section six of the present Constitution. I believe that they realize that no change is necessary. I believe that with the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco it would suit all this Convention.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: We have perfected this section five so that it accomplishes the object contemplated by substituting section six of the old Constitution. We have it now forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen. Section six of the old Constitution provides that the number of Senators shall not be less than one third nor more than one half of that of the members of the Assembly, and then the proposition was to put in section twenty-nine. That is just the effect of what has been adopted. It is altogether unnecessary now to substitute the old section six, as moved by the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Barry. If we substitute the old section six then we will have to put some limitation on the number, and the limitation by section twenty-nine is eighty Assemblymen and forty Senators. That we have already voted for. It is an idle work now to substitute section six, because it does not limit it at all. You must necessarily limit it somewhere. It won't do to have a body without any limit, and if you add the old limitation you will come round again to the same point we are at now, and I submit to the members that it is altogether unnecessary now to substitute the old section six. Let us allow this to remain as we have at present amended it, and we have accomplished the object had in view.

MR. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend by recommitting this section six to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to adjust the representation between the counties according to the population as determined by the vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six.

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is not in order.

REMARKS OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the proposition made by the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry. It states, in a better way than is contained in section five, the conclusion to which I think this Convention has come; and then if we add to that as a substitute for section six so much of the old section twenty-nine as is necessary, we have got a very good section. Let it be so that until the Legislature shall direct otherwise, the apportionment and representation shall be as now provided by law. The census that may be taken under direction of the Congress of the United States in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, and every subsequent ten years, shall serve as the basis of representation in both houses of the Legislature. You have there a very simple system. You are not required to go into what is population; and, as I had occasion to remark before, it seems to me unjust and improper to take the vote of any election in this State as a basis upon which representation shall be had. I see no reason why the vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six—I believe that was the Presidential election—should be taken as a basis of representation of the people of this State. Section twenty-eight of article four of the old Constitution provides:

"SEC. 28. The enumeration of the inhabitants of this State shall be taken, under the direction of the Legislature, in the years one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, and one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, and at the end of every ten years thereafter; and these enumerations, together with the census that may be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty, and every subsequent ten years, shall serve as the basis of representation in both houses of the Legislature."

Now, sir, we see that the founders of the old Constitution considered it was necessary to get at the facts with some care. They provided for two enumerations in the early history of the State—one in eighteen hundred and fifty-two, and another in eighteen hundred and fifty-five. The basis of representation was fixed by population, and not by voters; and I do not understand that the view of my friend, the gentleman from San Joaquin, is a correct one. Population is the basis of representation, and not voting. If we have the Chinaman here, and if we have the Chinaman in San Francisco, he is a part of the population of the State. As far as he has property he is taxed. We want representation on population.

MR. TERRY. Have the Indian tribes in any Territory or any State ever been counted as population?

MR. BARNES. No, sir; and I will tell you why——

MR. TERRY. Or the slave population in the South, except for the three to five——

MR. BARNES. I do not care how many they got. They were a basis of representation in the South, as everybody knows, and the South got its representation on the basis of the slave population. There was a compromise, which never was satisfactory to the South. But they did finally get it. It was reluctantly yielded. The South always did win, because the South furnished the brains of the Democratic party. I beg pardon; there is so much conversation going on here that it disturbs my feeble mind; but it was a basis of representation. Why were the Indians not made a basis of representation? Because they were not taxed. That was the reason. The Indian was put aside upon a reservation. He was the ward of the Government, and the Government supported him, and it imposed no taxes upon him whatever. If the Indian had been taxed as we tax the Chinese, he would have been a basis of representation. If there are ten or fifteen thousand Chinese in San Francisco who are taxed, and who are not the wards of the Government, that city is entitled to representation upon that basis, and you can argue the question logically, it seems to me, upon no other ground.

What is proposed here now? That we shall take the Presidential vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six as a basis for the apportionment of the population of this State. That is an entire departure from the system proposed by the founders of this Constitution. They had a careful enumeration of the population of this State, two within three years, in view of the enormous growth that was going on; that was taken with the census of the United States. Now it is proposed that the vote of this State shall be taken as a basis of representation. It is a violation, it seems to me, of every principle, and if you are going to take the vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six, what reason is there for selecting that? We have had elections since; if votes are to be the basis, why not take the last election that was had, when this Convention was called? Why not take the vote of the State upon the question of the Constitutional Convention, or any other question that was ever submitted to the people? It is not right, it is not just, and I submit that this Convention has not before it, or in its possession, the proper data to reapportion this State. Mr. Cross says that we have all a pretty good idea of what the population of the different portions of the State are. The gentleman may have a pretty good idea of the population of his county, but before I could consent to vote for any basis of representation there, I should want to know with some certainty. There is no more reason for taking the vote in a Presidential election than in a Gubernatorial election; they differ as much upon the elements as anything else; bad weather and bad roads, fair weather and good roads, make a difference, sometimes, of one third of the entire vote of an election. To say that we shall determine by the vote would be to undertake to do something absolutely impossible. We would want to know what the condition of the roads were; what the state of the farming interests were, whether they could get out or not; almost whether the people were sick or well, and what the domestic details of the families in the districts of this State were, before we could undertake to determine upon any such thing. I hope there will be no attempt made in this Convention to change the apportionment so recently made by the Legislature. We fought long and hard enough for that—now the first time they get a clip at us again they try to make a new basis of representation. This is like all the other attempts to apportion this State, they have always been in the interest of some other place or some other portion of the State than San Francisco. I say it ought not to be dealt with at all, it should be left to the time, when, in the course of two years, we shall have the enumeration made by the Government of the United States. It should be left, as the gentleman from Sierra suggests, putting in section six of the old Constitution, and portions of section twenty-nine, and we shall not do anybody any injustice. If the motion of the gentleman from Sierra prevails I propose to offer as a substitute for section six the following:

"The number of Senators and members of Assembly shall be fixed by the Legislature and apportioned among the several counties and districts, to be designated by law, according to the number of inhabitants. The number of members of Assembly shall not be more than eighty, and until the Legislature shall so direct the apportionment of representation and adjustment of districts shall be as now provided by law. The census that may be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, and at every subsequent ten years, shall serve as a basis of representation in both houses of the Legislature."

It would be a remarkable thing if the suggestion of my friend Mansfield should prevail, and representation should be based upon the Presidential vote of this State in eighteen hundred and seventy-six. It would be an anomaly, sir, so far as any adjustment of representation is concerned. If any vote is to be taken I do not see why the last vote is not the best. You might as well take the largest vote as the smallest. It shows nothing, it proves nothing.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that this question of what should be the basis of representation in the Legislature, is an important question, and one that we ought to deal with in a direct manner. As I understand the principle of a representative government, it is this, that every man who has a right to participate in the affairs of government, has a right to be heard equally with every other man who has a right to participate in the affairs of government, without reference to where he resides. Under the original idea of democratic government, in small communities all the members of a particular society met in one place and held a town meeting, and there expressed their vote in person. When the communities became populous, and the State large, this became impracticable, and then men began to combine and to speak in large numbers through small numbers called representatives. It was intended that the vote of one man in one locality should have as much weight as the vote of another man in another locality. I know of no reason why the man who happens to live in Alpine County should not have as much right as the man who lives in San Francisco; nor do I know of any proper rule by which a Chinaman should be entitled to as much voice in the government of this State as a white man. Now, sir, if we make the population the basis, I am not sure that it would be an advantage to colonize these Chinamen.

MR. BARNES. You can have ours.

MR. CROSS. It seems to me that one man, residing in one portion, has a right to as much influence as another. Take the Presidential vote. It seems to me that those who have a right to participate in the affairs of government is the true basis, and that perhaps the Presidential vote is the proper basis for two reasons: one reason is that that vote was a very full one all over the State. I believe it has been claimed that in some places it was almost too full. And if at such a time any portion of the people do not participate, I do not believe they deserve much consideration from any legislative body. I understand the case of the County of Alameda, in which the population has grown enormously; I can understand the case of Los Angeles, in which the population has very largely increased; and I can understand the case of other counties, in which the population has very largely diminished. I think it is right and proper that this Convention should fix the basis of representation. I was in favor of large legislative bodies, especially the lower house. It is the only place where the people directly touch the affairs of the government. It is the only place in which the people almost directly speak their wishes. The executive department rests with a very few men, and they cannot be acquainted with the great body of the people, and thus the legislative department is the representative department of the State. This State has an immense area, and with a representation of sixty and thirty we shall have one man representing two thousand square miles; and, sir, in a body like the Assembly of the State of California, I undertake to say it is impossible for one man to represent two thousand square miles. I believe we should have a larger Assembly. There should be a more liberal representation. If we had one hundred and forty in the two houses of the Legislature, we should still have each member of the Legislature representing something like six thousand people, and as the State grows the number would be increased to three or four times what it is now. The cases of Massachusetts, New York, and Rhode Island have been cited here. They have comparatively small legislative bodies, in comparison with the population, and yet the territory which each member represents is comparatively very small. While Chinamen are not entitled to representation it seems to me that there should be a large and liberal representation in the Assembly.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: The argument of the gentleman from San Francisco upon the basis of representation upon population is certainly an argument that that gentleman should not use if he is a representative of the people, and not of Dupont street and the Barbary Coast. He objects to the last Presidential vote, and yet I believe it was conceded in San Francisco that that vote was some fifteen thousand more than they were entitled to. Still he objects to taking that as a basis for San Francisco. It has been found in New York and Ohio, where there are large cities, that the interests of these cities have demanded that they should not have to exceed one fifth of the representation of the State. I am satisfied that San Francisco's interests have been protected as much by the people of this State outside of San Francisco as it has been by her own representatives. Now, so far as this question is concerned, if we don't adopt the proposition to allow each county in the State a representative, let us adopt the old section and leave it to the Legislature. If this body is not willing to act upon that proposition, the time will come, and come soon, when the people of this whole State will demand that they be represented, as they should, in the Legislature of this State. I am not in favor of limiting the number. If there is to be any limitation, I prefer to fix a minimum rather than a maximum. Provide that it should not be less than thirty Senators and not less than ninety Assemblymen, and leave it to the Legislature to provide that each county should have a representative. These counties that have been formed under some mining excitement, or some temporary excitement from some other cause, they will be weeded out. It will be the duty of the State. I hope this Convention will determine, if they cannot give to each county a representative, to leave it to the Legislature to determine the number of representatives.

MR. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman: The adoption of the present clause is a continuance of the injustice which I protest against. Los Angeles County is not fairly represented, as every member here knows. The only body that can give us relief is this Convention. The Legislatures do not do it, and I ask for the consideration of my amendment, which I submitted a short time ago.

REMARKS OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I did not catch the first part of the observations of my friend from El Dorado, but I understood him to assert several things in which I think he is mistaken. He says that everybody admits that we had fifteen thousand fraudulent votes——

MR. LARKIN. Respectable men.

MR. BARNES. Well, that comes with a bad grace. The gentleman is entirely incorrect. Various reports went about through the country, and probably the first report of it reached the gentleman. The whole subject was pretty thoroughly investigated there, and although it was decided that there was some wrongful voting there all around, it did not reach to anything like that number. There may have been two or three thousand votes that were out of order, but certainly not to exceed that. I attended the examination when the County Clerk was examined, and he came off triumphantly acquitted. I undertake to say that the vote in San Francisco, as a rule, is as fair as any vote the gentlemen ever received. I did not understand what he said about my representing the people, but he does not regret my presence here more than I do; and I only wish that whenever gentlemen have anything to say to me, that they got more votes than I did for the Constitutional Convention, to remember that I thank my friends from the bottom of my soul who voted against me, and I only wish there had been about three thousand more of them, and I would not have been here.

Now, he says there is no such thing as representation by population, and he talks like a statesman—rather an ignorant statesman—[Laughter], as to what is a basis of representation. Why, the Constitution of the United States, which, until this body met, was a respectable authority, and a man could present some of his views and put his back up against and defy the enemies of good government, has something to say on this subject. I do not suppose it is worth anything to the gentleman from El Dorado, and probably if he could have the re-creation of this government he could make a much better Constitution than Washington and the rest of the gentlemen who had that work in hand. I only wish that the genleman from El Dorado had lived in that time. Now, as I say, this heavy old humbug, the Constitution of the United States, in section two, of article one, makes some allusions to this subject. It provides for the composition of the House of Representatives, and for the electors, and as to representation, and taxes, and I was under the impression that "representatives and direct taxation should be apportioned among the several States within this Union according to their respective numbers." Numbers, not citizenship.

MR. LARKIN. Has that any reference to this State?

MR. BARNES. If the gentleman will allow me I will undertake to instruct him so that he won't get up again on this floor without informing himself a little on the subject about which he proposes to talk. The Constitution of the United States says:

"Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other persons."

There is no question there as to the basis of representation. It was simply the number of free persons, including those bound for service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, and three fifths of all other persons, so that the basis of representation was all free persons in the State, including those bound to service for a term of years, excluding Indians not taxed, and three fifths of the slaves.

"The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct."

Article fourteen of the Constitution deals simply with the question of citizenship, and not with population.

"All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside."

The committee will observe the difference between the basis of representation on population and citizenship. Citizenship is one thing; population for the purpose of representation is another, and the idea that underlies the whole doctrine of representation is that while a man shall only be entitled to vote upon possessing certain qualifications, either having been born upon the soil or taken the oath of allegiance to the Government, every man paying taxes is entitled to representation upon that basis. That is the principle, sir, and it cannot be denied. I do not undertake to say to what extent, because I do not know, the Chinese population have been made a basis of representation in that city. If they have not been included, upon every principle of government, they ought to be included, and I do not think the exception made in the report of the committee ought to stand. I think that San Francisco, and every other portion of the State, is entitled to representation upon this population, because this population, whether citizens or not, pays taxes. They have got to be provided for. The whole system of government reaches them. For them hospitals are built, jails are constructed, and the whole system of government revolves about them as much as it does about the voter. And while they cannot vote they are population, and in the apportionment made under the laws of the United States to-day for our representation in Congress, Chinamen are just as much a part of population for the purpose of determining our population to give us representation in Congress as the noblest white man who lives.

Now, sir, we have another illustration of this same principle of population. While the idea of the statesman from El Dorado is that nobody is entitled to be represented except the voter, I certainly think he is mistaken in that view, because in our population are counted women. Now, women cannot vote, and yet they are a basis of population upon which representation is based. Boys under twenty-one, and girls under eighteen, are a portion of the population, and they are taken into account in our basis of representation; and yet they would be excluded upon the doctrine propounded by the gentleman from El Dorado. Now, the whole people are population. It is not merely the voter, who has the ballot and can go to the polls and vote, but it is the people, men, women, and children. It is everybody—all free persons—under the Constitution of the United States. If you could suppose such a thing as is suggested by Mr. Wilson——

MR. ROLFE. Has not the Convention acted upon the fact that the Chinese population are not free but are coolie slaves?

MR. BARNES. Exactly; but as long as they are here they are population.

MR. ROLFE. Are they free persons?

MR. BARNES. I do not know that that makes any difference on the basis of representation. It is a very good reason why they ought to go, but as long as they are here, as long as they are taxed, and are a part of the population of this State, they ought to be entitled to representation.

MR. ROLFE. Would you read from the Constitution——

MR. BEERSTECHER. I rise to a point of order. On Monday I introduced a resolution, which was adopted by this Convention, that speakers should confine themselves to the immediate subject under consideration. I hope, Mr. Chairman, that hereafter speakers will be confined to the immediate section under consideration.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. State your point of order.

MR. STEDMAN. We have a rule which prescribes that no gentleman shall speak longer than fifteen minutes and not more than once on any question. The gentleman is now speaking the second time on the question.

THE CHAIRMAN. The time has not yet expired. The Chair will announce the time.

[Cries of "Leave," "leave."]

Mr. BARNES. Thank you, gentlemen. Mr. Chairman: If the Chinaman owns any property he is taxed, he belongs to that population which is taxed, and which ought to be made the basis of representation as far as population is concerned. That is the view taken by the Constitution of the United States, and it ought to be the view taken of it here.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: We are here not only for the purpose of taking into consideration all these questions, but we are here to rectify abuses which exist under the present laws. The gentleman from San Francisco is perhaps well satisfied with the apportionment as it now exists. So, perhaps, are gentlemen from other portions of the State. I can well understand it; but I say right here that there could be no more unjust apportionment than that which we now have, and in behalf of the section which I represent I shall endeavor here to rectify the error which now exists, for it is a grave one. I shall merely call the attention of the committee to these figures. Based upon the vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six, Los Angeles has one representative in the Legislature to two thousand two hundred and nineteen votes; San Francisco has one representative in the Legislature to every one thousand three hundred and sixty-six; Santa Clara has one representative to every one thousand two hundred and eighty votes; Nevada one representative to every one thousand and fifty-one votes; and Amador, mirabile dictu, has one representative for eight hundred and twenty-nine votes. Now I ask you whether there is anything fair, just, or decent in that apportionment? That Los Angeles should have one representative to two thousand two hundred and nineteen votes, while Amador has one for every eight hundred and twenty-nine votes. I say we can rectify that in this Constitution. We can at least rectify it up to the time of the next census. There will be no apportionment——

MR. FILCHER. Placer has one for every one thousand six hundred and fifty votes.

MR. AYERS. If we should adopt the old Constitution without reference to making a new apportionment, our county would continue to be represented as it is up to the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two, four more years to go on, and I say that we can do justice in this Constitution just as well as we can in the Legislature after the census of the population has been taken. I believe that it would be proper to take the Presidential vote as the basis to reapportion this State, and I hope that any action of this Convention upon the subject will take that as its basis.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: I have a word to say in regard to representation on the basis of population. I fully agree with the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes, about the sense of the term population. I take it that it means all people, black, white, and yellow. The term covers every human being, and the Constitution of the United States is correctly in point as an authority. The word "numbers" is used, the word "people" is used, and the word "population" is used, and the basis of representation undertaken to be declared. They found it necessary to deduct out of the word "population" or "numbers" certain classes of persons, and they expressly excepted them out of that, and they made the exception because they were included in the generic term first used. Exceptions always come out of something stated before. The word "numbers" was diminished by "Indians not taxed." Indians that were taxed were left in the numbers. In the Western States the Oneida Indians, and some others, were taxed, and they were included in the basis of representatives, while the Ojibbeways, and Pottawatomies, and others were excluded because they were not taxed. But "population" and "numbers" included all these persons, and those were left out which fell within the exception, and those who did not were counted in the basis of representation. Now, it has been just so here in California. Everybody has been included under the term population. Whether it is proper to exclude Chinamen is another question, but the Constitution does not affect the matter in any way whatever. If we want to represent the Diggers here we have a right to put them in. It is simply a question of expediency as to whether the Chinaman shall be represented or not. The representative must come from the voting class, but he is to represent the interest and protect the rights of all the people, and somebody or other ought to protect them. Whether it is best or not best is a question for the Convention to settle.

Now, as regards the position of the gentleman from Los Angeles. He does not deny that population is the basis of representation; but you have got to ascertain it in some way or other. They say that they are not represented, and they want some means adopted by which they will approximate the population and place them in a better position. Now, if that could be done safely I should be inclined to favor it. Whether the vote is a correct indication of population, or whether it is in the same ratio in different localities, is a question open to inquiry. So general an election as the Presidential election may give an approximately correct idea of the population, and if that would be the case, and there are no exceptional facts that I do not readily see, I do not see why that should not be effected for the next election, and let the Legislature of eighteen hundred and eighty-one or eighteen hundred and eighty-two make it right. There have been gross wrongs perpetrated in this State upon that matter. I came here in eighteen hundred and sixty-one, and that accomplished man, Governor Downey, interested himself very much in the matter. The pony express brought the census across the continent, and there was El Dorado, a very respectable county and very respectably represented, with four Senators and eight members of the Assembly. It was said in express terms, you mining counties have got the Legislature now, and if you do not keep up the cow counties will get it and take the power out of your hands, and it was offered as a reason why this apportionment should be changed. It was partially remedied then. In regard to San Francisco, I am willing to say that the fractions were taken against the city—the prejudice was against the city. In eighteen hundred and sixty-three, the Constitution being in force, we were required to have an enumeration in eighteen hundred and sixty-five. The Legislature of eighteen hundred and sixty-three passed a bill providing for an enumeration in eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and the Governor put it in his pocket because it was going to cost some money. We did not have any apportionment because he would not sign that bill, and the city was deprived of the representation that they sought. Four years ago they succeeded in getting in some apportionment. Now, sir, if you are going to let this provision stand as it is, that in the enumeration all Chinese should be excluded, I do not know of any reason why all aliens should not be excluded; certainly all aliens who have not filed their declarations should be excluded if the Chinese are. I am satisfied that this apportionment better be left to the Legislature itself, except in pursuance of the idea of the gentleman from Los Angeles, if the Convention should see fit to provide temporarily for these difficulties, and then leave it to the Legislature after eighteen hundred and eighty. I am satisfied that Los Angeles is suffering great injustice. I am inclined to support Colonel Barnes' proposition, and I am perfectly satisfied with the old Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: For instance, you take San Francisco, and under the same theory, if the vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six is to be the test, San Francisco would have about twenty-five Assemblymen, because in eighteen hundred and seventy-six there were polled forty-one thousand six hundred and forty-six votes in that city, and whenever you open this question on the theory that at the next Legislature it is necessary to have a new apportionment for that session only, you will open it for all these counties. I apprehend that Alameda would come in, because I understand the population has increased very largely there. I think a good way is to leave that as it is for the next session of the Legislature. As to the representation of Chinese, I agree with Colonel Barnes in one proposition: that they are population, and should be taken as population, because otherwise we might lose our Congressional representation on that basis. I find that San Francisco has no greater proportion of Chinamen than other portions of the State. I find in eighteen hundred and seventy, according to the United States census, there were one hundred and forty-nine thousand four hundred and seventy-three inhabitants in San Francisco, twelve thousand and thirty of whom are Chinese. Take San Joaquin, with twenty-one thousand and fifty, there are one thousand six hundred and twenty-nine Chinese. There the proportion would be a little less. Take Yuba, population ten thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, Chinese two thousand three hundred and thirty-nine, and so with several of the counties. In fact, take El Dorado. The total number of inhabitants is ten thousand three hundred and nine, while the Chinese number one thousand five hundred and eighty-two. So that it has no local significance.

MR. LARKIN. The census takers of that county were very quiet men. It has nothing correct, and the population as taken is nowhere near right.

MR. ESTEE. That is the old argument, that the census was taken wrong, because the rule applies to other counties as well as El Dorado. I find that Alpine has six hundred and eighty-five inhabitants, eighty of whom are Chinese. I only refer to that to show that it has no local significance. I understand that there are too many Chinese in San Francisco, as there are too many in other counties. But if the State should establish a rule that Chinese should not be counted, then Congress might say that they should not be counted for the purpose of Congressional representation. Now, it is true that the gentleman may state that the Chinese will not be here at the next apportionment, but I apprehend, although my friend from San Francisco says the Chinamen must go, that they will not be away before the next apportionment. They will be here still, and while they do not vote, they are population for all the purposes of representation. I hope that the section will either be left as it is, or that the old section will be adopted, and for this reason, that the people are satisfied with the present apportionment. I warn the gentleman from Yolo that if he got anything of the kind he proposes into this Constitution the Constitution would fall by its own weight.

MR. EDGERTON. That has been voted down.

MR. ESTEE. I understood it was before the house. I will not address the house upon a question that is not before it.

MR. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman: I believe that the law as it now stands, leaving the Legislature to regulate this matter, would suit my constituents best. I hope that we will arrive at a vote without spending much more time in this discussion.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: There was a Committee on Apportionment and Representation which should have reported upon this matter. I think we ought to defer this matter until that committee make their report if they have not done so. I have no recollection that the committee has made its report. It is a large committee, of which Mr. Murphy, of Del Norte, is Chairman. I do not know that they have made any report. Some of the members perhaps may know, but if we had a report of that committee, perhaps it would offer a better basis for our argument than we now have. As far back as I can remember it has always been a matter of contest as to how they should be represented properly in the Legislature. I think we ought to have in the Constitution a just and inflexible rule that will control the matter in the future. I do not believe in the provisions contained in the old Constitution at all. It has been unsatisfactory in its operation, and has caused all the contests heretofore, in the struggles to obtain and enjoy a large representation in some parts of the State. Representation should be based on population. That is a rule so uniform that it prevails in almost every State in the Union. There are but very few States that have not adopted that rule. So far as aliens are concerned I can find but three exceptions. In one Constitution "aliens and Indians" are excluded, in one "aliens and colored persons not taxed," in one "aliens and Indians not taxed," some others exclude "Indians not taxed." Now, in regard to the Indians of this State, by our Constitution they may be admitted to citizenship. They may become electors under our Constitution by a concurrent vote of the two houses. They are not excluded.

I do not suppose anybody can make an enlightened argument why population should not be the basis. In Pennsylvania, under the old Constitution, representation was based upon the number of taxable inhabitants. That was the Constitution of eighteen hundred and thirty-eight; but the Constitution adopted in eighteen hundred and seventy-three brought the rule right back to where it belongs:

"The State shall be divided into fifty Senatorial Districts, of compact and contiguous territory, as nearly equal in population as may be," etc.

They dropped the words "taxable inhabitants" and come to the word "population," which is the proper term. Why, take our alien population in San Francisco and in other parts of the State. Suppose there are in San Francisco one hundred thousand English, French, and others; ought they not to be represented to some extent? Is not their property to be protected? So far as representation is concerned, and it is for the protection of persons and property, is not every man in the community who pays taxes entitled to representation, in order that he may be heard in matters upon which his safety and happiness depend? Ought he not to be heard here? It is putting it down on very narrow rules when gentlemen get up here and say that because a man is not a voter he has no protection at all. But in regard to what would be a just and inflexible rule, I would be perfectly willing to adopt the rule that has been adopted in Pennsylvania and Missouri. Take the Pennsylvania Constitution. Section sixteen, of article two, says:

"The State shall be divided into fifty Senatorial Districts, of compact and contiguous territory, as nearly equal in population as may be, and each district shall be entitled to elect one Senator."

Suppose California has a population of eight hundred thousand, and we have forty Senators. Divide eight hundred thousand by forty and it would give twenty thousand for each district. Why could not the State be divided in that way? All that remains to do is to divide the State into forty districts, each composed, as nearly as may be, of twenty thousand inhabitants. Section eighteen of the same article of the Pennsylvania Constitution says:

"The General Assembly, at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, and immediately after each United States decennial census, shall apportion the State into Senatorial and Representative districts, agreeably to the provisions of the two next preceding sections."

Now, we could make it so that the General Assembly, or Legislature, immediately after the next United States census, which would be in eighteen hundred and eighty, shall apportion the State into Senatorial districts—that is, into forty Senatorial districts. There is a burden imposed upon the Legislature that after each decennial census of the United States, they shall divide the State into districts as nearly equal in population as may be. There is a rule that is just. It gets rid of this eternal contest in the Legislature, and the struggle for representation there, and it is controlled by the Constitution. Why should it not be so? I would like to hear any gentleman on this floor get up and say that this rule is not just. Now in the Assembly:

"The members of the House of Representatives shall be apportioned among the several counties on a ratio obtained by dividing the population of the State, as ascertained by the most recent United States census, by two hundred. Every county containing less than five ratios shall have one Representative for every full ratio, and an additional Representative when the surplus exceeds half a ratio; but each county shall have at least one Representative. Every county containing five ratios, or more, shall have one Representative for every full ratio."

Now, that is a very fair and a very just rule. It gets around every question, and no man can complain, or should complain. Now, in Missouri, the provision is:

"The House of Representatives shall consist of members to be chosen every second year by the qualified voters of the several counties, and apportioned in the following manner:

"The ratio of representation shall be ascertained at each apportioning session of the General Assembly, by dividing the whole number of permanent inhabitants of the State by the number two hundred. Each county having one ratio, or less, shall be entitled to one Representative; each county having three times said ratio, shall be entitled to two Representatives; each county having six times said ratio, shall be entitled to three Representatives; and so on, above that number, giving one additional member for every three additional ratio."

Then it goes on and points out the manner. Then, in regard to Senatorial districts, the same article contains the following:

"The Senate shall consist of thirty-four members, to be chosen by the qualified voters for four years; for the election of whom the State shall be divided into convenient districts."

Now, if we had a provision here, as we have determined upon forty Senators, that, for the purpose of choosing them, the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial districts, then let the clause come in: "The Legislature, at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, and immediately after each United States decennial census, shall apportion the State into Senatorial and Representative districts, agreeably to the provisions of the preceding sections."

It seems to me that would be a very easy and a very convenient mode of arranging this whole subject, that would be satisfactory to every portion of the State. The only objection that could be made, perhaps, would be that in regard to the Assembly districts. Some of the smaller counties that are contiguous would have to join together to constitute an Assembly district; but even in that respect, if the Convention see fit to give each county representation, they could do so by variation of the general rule; but I should oppose giving any county that has less than one thousand inhabitants a full representative. It is not just. Nor do I think it is just to cut off representation where the population is large, no matter how large it may be. If you tax a county in proportion to the property and population, why should you not give them representation in proportion to population? Taxation and representation, according to the rule that has been established in this country, go together, and should not be separated. Taxation and representation, therefore, should go together in every county of the State. Why not in San Francisco as well as in El Dorado, or any other county? The first time that I was in the Legislature of the State of California El Dorado had four Senators, and they considered themselves as magnanimous as another. We were placed upon equality. But in course of time population has increased in San Francisco and diminished in El Dorado.

I hope we will not go back to section six, and I hope that we will adopt a system here in accordance with that which has been adopted by the different States of the Union, which is up to the progress of the age, and which should be based upon such rules fixed in the Constitution that we will get rid of this constant struggle in the Legislature in regard to representation. If I had my wish about it I would propose that this section six be deferred until the Committee on Representation and Apportionment make their report, or if they do not, let it be referred back to the Committee on Legislative Department, to arrange it in Senatorial Districts.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I desire to make an explanation in reference to this matter. Mr. Murphy, the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment and Representation, had designed some attention to this matter, when he found that the Committee on Legislative Department had taken control of the whole thing he has ceased and gone overland to Del Norte, so that we are a committee without a Chairman.

MR. TERRY. The Committee on Legislative Department investigated nothing which was not referred to them by this Convention.

MR. BARNES. I did not say so.

MR. TERRY. I understand that that committee has never met but one time, for organization. It was more than a month after that committee was formed before the Committee on Legislative Department recommended this. That was not the true reason that the gentleman paid no attention to the matters submitted to him, because some other committee was considering them, for he did not know what the Legislative Committee was doing.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The Convention then took the usual recess.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I ask for indefinite leave of absence. I have to go to the city on business that demands my attention, and I hope to be able to return on Monday.

Granted.

RECONSIDERATION—SPEECH OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: Pursuant to notice given on yesterday, I now move to reconsider the vote by which the motion to proceed with the filling of vacancies in this Convention was indefinitely postponed. I make this motion, Mr. President, with the most perfect respect to this Convention as a body, and to the members of this Convention individually. There was not a full house, in fact it was rather thin, when that vote was taken. Moreover, I did not hear any objections to the action contemplated in that motion, to proceed to fill the vacancies in the Convention, which seemed to me to be sufficient to satisfy the minds of members of this Convention. The motion, as made, was in accordance with petitions that were sent here and submitted, from certain respectable and responsible people of the Counties of Mariposa and Merced, that this Convention fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the Hon. J. M. Strong. It was my duty to present those petitions to this body, as a member—the only member here representing any portion of that district. Being a representative of a district embracing three counties, of which these two counties form a part, very properly, as I understand it, these petitions were sent to me. I have already given to this Convention my personal guarantee in regard to the character of these petitioners. There may be those present, however, who were not present at the time I gave them. To those, as briefly as possible, I will say this: that while the number of men is not great, compared to the number of votes in the two counties—a hasty count shows one hundred and thirty-seven—they are among the best men to be found in the two counties, representing the several walks of business—as good as are to be found in any other counties. They make the request that the vacancy caused by the death of the Hon. J. M. Strong be filled. They name the man who is their choice to occupy the position. Now, sir, I not only desire that they should be heard here, I not only desire that the petitions which they have presented to this Convention should be fairly considered and acted upon, in the best judgment of the Convention, upon its own merits alone, separated from all other considerations, but I claim that the will of the people of this or any other district is entitled to respectful consideration. And it is the will of the people, for this request is uncontradicted. There is no other gentleman recommended from these two counties to fill this vacancy.

The two questions are separate. The first question is that of filling this vacancy, and then members can suggest any name they may desire. If the Convention resolves to fill the vacancy, they can then say what person shall fill it. I claim nothing exclusive in that respect. But I do claim this: that in accordance with the principles of republican government—in accordance with the customs and usages in this State—the people of those two counties are entitled to be fully represented in this Convention.

Now, the matter is a very simple one, and I design occupying but a very few moments of your time in its discussion. If there be objections to it, of course it is open to those objections. But the objections I have heard I cannot take as being good grounds why this Convention should refuse to accede to the wishes of the people of that district. As expressed yesterday, these objections amount to this and no more, that the number of petitioners was not a large proportion of the voters in the two counties. I do not consider it sufficient excuse for refusing the prayer of these petitioners. I do not understand that in order to present a petition before this body that will be entitled to your consideration, or credence, it must contain the names of a majority of the voters of these two counties. If that were so, they might as well go and hold an election.

It is true the number of petitioners happens to be one hundred and thirty-seven; and they happen to be men nearly all of whom I know personally. They are the foremost men of the counties—merchants, miners, laborers, farmers, in fact men of various professions and callings. There are other men as good as they, but these are prominent men in these several pursuits in these two counties, and they most respectfully ask this Convention, for their own interests—for the local interests of these two counties—that a man be appointed to fill this vacancy. Now, the objection raised that the number of petitioners is too small, does not appear to me to be good ground why these people should be treated with absolute contempt, when that request comes to a representative body such as this. The gentleman from San Francisco took occasion to get off a witticism—I suppose he considered it so—by saying that the number was one hundred and thirty-seven and a half. As to that matter I do not care to comment upon it. I think the gentleman who has given birth to such a thing as that should have a midwife in attendance to see him safely through it.

The next objection made was that we are almost through with our work. We have passed over a large part of the allotted time, but what is the fact? We have passed in Committee of the Whole upon three or four reports of committees, and they have yet to come up in Convention for further pruning, perhaps. If it was true that we are nearly through; if this Convention had but one week more to sit, I still would not concede to this Convention the right to deny to any district in the State the representation which the law gives it, if the people demanded it at the hands of this body. They have a right to be represented, if only for a week.

The next objection that was mentioned was that it would produce discord; that it would introduce a discordant element. That is rather extraordinary. They say, we have got along so far, and got nearly through, you propose to give us more chin music, and set us all agog again. Now, Mr. President, I can assure gentlemen, as far as personal assurance can go, that the gentleman represented to fill this seat made vacant by death, is like most of the other people of California, very well advised as to what we have been doing. He does not, any more than the great mass of thinking people in this State, rest in ignorance of the progress we have made, of the steps we have taken, of the resolutions we have passed, of the reports we have passed upon in the Committee of the Whole. I say you cannot take any intelligent man in the State of California, and bring him here now, who does not know nearly as much of the business of this Convention as we do. If there be such a man, he ought to be denied the right of suffrage. For what we have done has been merely a reconnoissance—and my military friend from San Francisco will understand me—over the subject, of making a Constitution to be submitted to the people. As to the gentlemen who are to be introduced to these vacant seats troubling this Convention with "chin music," I do not know any ground upon which such a supposition can be based. I have not myself heard any talk upon the floor of this Convention which I would be willing to characterize as chin music. I had supposed I was in the midst of a body of honorable gentlemen who knew their duties, and who were trying to do them; and who, when they arose to address the Convention and the Chair, were speaking words which they were empowered to speak by a sense of duty, and to a point they thought proper at the time. I had supposed they were speaking from a sense of duty, or as a matter of conscience, and I have not felt disposed to characterize their utterances as "chin music." And I do not think any gentleman in this Convention can be afraid of "chin music" being introduced here in the future, unless he is afraid to look in the looking-glass himself. I say such objections as these ought to have no weight in deciding this matter. I do not wish the matter to be passed over as a frivolous matter. I do not wish such suggestions as this, that new chin music will be introduced, to influence members in their actions upon this question. It is a question of popular rights. It is a question whether the people of this district shall be arbitrarily denied representation in this Convention when they come and demand it. And I say now—I may be mistaken—I do not attempt to impose any opinions—but I say now that I desire a vote to fill every vacancy that shall occur in this body from this time on till the close of our labors, whenever there comes a respectful demand that such vacancy be filled. I do it as a matter of principle and right. If any one district in this State has no right to be represented here, then my district has no right, your district has no right, and no other district has any right. Right is right.

Now, I am not aware that any other objections have been offered in this body to the motion to fill the vacancies occasioned by death than those I have enumerated. I feel at liberty to say that I have heard it insinuated, outside of this body, that a great number of resignations are going to occur in this body as soon as the money runs out. Now, that may possibly be true. I do not believe it, and I will not believe it until I see it. I am not aware that money considerations brought us here, in the first place. I am not aware that we are able to come here for the money there is in it, and leave the vocations by which we support ourselves and our families. And I do not believe, though I may be mistaken, that these insinuations are true, that a great number of members of this Convention are going to resign—vacate their seats as soon as the money runs out. But, sir, if they are going to do it, if they do do it, I say for myself—and I hope I speak the feelings of other gentlemen—I hope the people of the districts which they represent will promptly name to us some better men to fill the vacancies; some men who don't move exactly as the money moves, and we will elect them; men who will come here to stay, fodder or no fodder; men who will come to do their duty, even at the sacrifice of personal convenience, as most of the members here have done. I will be in favor of filling all such vacancies, upon the demand of the people of such districts, manifested in a proper and respectful way.

I am very well aware that there will be hardships, which will be felt by many members, when the time comes that they can no longer receive the money which is necessary for their support; and if there be any man in that straight, and he has no friend that will support him here in the performance of his duty, why he will not be subjected to censure, and I would not breathe a word against him. But it is my hope, sir, that as long as we have reasonable hope that we can do that which we came here to do; so long as there is a prospect of accomplishing the grand object which the people set out and undertook to accomplish when they ordered this Convention, so long I hope we shall stand substantially a solid body. I should prefer rather to adjourn now and go home, than that a large number of the members of this Convention should, from any necessity whatever, retire, vacate their seats, or resign, and their seats remain unfilled by this Convention, so that the action of the Convention would be merely the action of a bare quorum. I should prefer in that event to adjourn at once. I want the Convention to be substantially a full Convention when we come to pronounce upon the final work. If we cannot do that, I shall have great fears as to the ultimate fate of the instrument when it comes to be submitted to the people.

As for myself, I stand pledged to vote to fill every vacancy that may occur by resignation, death, or from any other cause. I believe it is right. I believe it is expected and demanded of us, and I believe duty demands of us that we shall stay here, as far as possible, all those who can stay, until the work is completed; and I hope if any vacancies do occur, that the people will send men here to fill them—men who are able and willing to assist us in what yet remains to be done. I am aware that the vote of yesterday was a very strong vote. Nevertheless, for the reasons I have recited here, I believe we should fill these vacancies. I have not heard one solitary reason why we should refuse to listen to respectful petitions from recognized legal districts of the State, and I am led to hope that this Convention may decide to take a different view of this matter to-day from what they did yesterday. If it does not, I shall have done my duty. I have expressed my views, and they will stand, not only on this question, but every other question like it. I believe in representation. We have spent nearly two days talking about apportionment and representation, and I would like to know what that apportionment is worth if you are going to disfranchise a district or two or three districts. If you have a right to disfranchise one, you have a right to disfranchise twenty districts. I would not give a snap for all the apportionments that can be made here, if they shall amount to this: that when that apportionment recommends that there shall be a representative from one district, and that representative happens to die, we are denied the right to have his place filled. I submit this matter to the consideration of the Convention, most respectfully, that the idea of popular sovereignty, as far as applicable to this matter, will not be treated with contempt. There has been a respectful demand made here to have these vacancies filled, and I do hope and expect, where such a demand as this comes to this Convention, it will not be treated with contempt, despising the very principles by which we ourselves are here in the capacity of members of the Convention. I therefore move, sir, that the vote taken in this body on yesterday, on the motion to fill the vacancy created by death, in the district composed of the Counties of Mariposa and Merced, and in the County of San Francisco, be filled. I move that they be filled in this order: First, the vacancy caused by the death of J. M. Strong, and second, the vacancy caused by the death of B. F. Kenny, delegate from San Francisco.

SPEECH OF MR. HOLMES.

MR. HOLMES. Mr. President: In seconding the motion of the gentleman from Mariposa, to reconsider this motion, I wish to say that I hope the Convention will decide to reconsider this matter. When it was first brought up yesterday, from a personal knowledge of the applicant, and of the citizens who sign this petition, I had intended to indorse the nomination, but was prevented by the action of the Convention. I do not see why it should have been necessary for him to come here with petitions at all. If he had come here himself and asked this Convention to fill that vacancy, it seems to me to be our duty, under the law, to proceed to fill it. But, instead of that, he comes here backed by one hundred and thirty-seven respectable citizens of the two counties, asking that the place be filled. Colonel Barnes wants to know why they want that place filled. I answer, that it is the will of the people that the place be filled, and we have no right to deny them. In addition to the petitions that have been presented here, I have here an extract from a paper published in that district, in which it says:

"The seat in the Constitutional Convention, made vacant by the death of the Honorable J. M. Strong, has to be filled by some one to be selected by the Convention. We understand that Mr. Howard is an applicant, and we know of no one better qualified for the discharge of those duties than Mr. Howard. He has natural ability, has had legislative experience, having represented this county in the Assembly in eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, and has also held the office of District Attorney one term. He has resided in Merced County since eighteen hundred and forty-nine."

That is from the county paper, and in addition to that, he comes here with the recommendation of one hundred and thirty-seven of the best citizens of the counties. I hope the Convention will reconsider the vote and fill these vacancies. If the San Francisco delegation desire to have the other vacancy filled I will vote for it.

SPEECH OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: The right of representation is acknowledged and conceded on all hands. It is one of the important principles of popular government in this country, and why it should be denied to any community I am at a loss to understand. There are in this case two counties in which there are one thousand three hundred voters, and perhaps four thousand or five thousand people. They are entitled to representation here. The fact that we have proceeded some distance with this business, is no reason why they should be excluded. They have a right to be represented all the way through, even to the very last act; they have a right to be represented even on the question of final adjournment. I presume no one will deny it. If the Legislature had not commanded us to fill these vacancies, it would still be our duty to fill them when requested to do so. And why any member of the delegation from San Francisco should attempt to prevent it is more than I can see. When their own county is so well represented, I do not see why they should deny that right to others, for not only is the majority in San Francisco represented, but the minority also, and the very gentleman who most strongly opposes this election, I believe, represents the minority. Why should the right be so persistently denied when these people are here demanding representation? Why the gentleman from San Francisco should, for a moment, question the statement of Judge Jones, I am unable to understand.

MR. BARNES. I did not, sir.

MR. REDDY. I understand that the people of these two counties desire to have this vacancy filled, and Colonel Barnes asked him first how many voters there are there; and next, how many had signed the petition. Mr. Jones replied, that it was signed by one hundred and thirty-seven representative men of the two counties; and the gentleman from San Francisco was not satisfied with that statement, but wanted him to define what he meant by a representative man of the county—what was the definition of the term. Colonel Barnes claimed that every voter was a representative man. Now, I do not understand that to be the definition of a representative man, because, in that case, the Colonel himself would be a representative man. I understand a representative man, in a political sense, to be one who can carry the majority of the votes in the community where he lives, or the district in which he resides. So there we have a farther definition of the term representative man, and I presume that Judge Jones had that definition in view when he answered that gentleman.

The only question seems to me to be, whether there is a demand from that district that this vacancy be filled. I claim, whether there is or not, it is our duty to fill that vacancy as soon as an applicant appears. We have the statement of Judge Jones to the effect that the people of these counties desire the vacancy filled, and I am sure that Judge Jones' statement, made on this floor, ought to be sufficient, as to the will of the people whom he represents. Certainly his statements are entitled to respectful consideration, which Colonel Barnes seems to deny. He seems to attempt to raise a doubt as to whether there is a demand. I think that demand has been fairly made. The insinuations of the gentleman are insufficient to overcome the statements made here, and the petitions signed by one hundred and thirty-seven men of the two counties. If it is his intention to set up such doubts against such a showing, I can only compare it to the gentleman who stands in midsummer day under the scorching rays of the sun for the purpose of admiring his own shadow.

What reason is there for denying to these people representation? It has already been clearly stated by the gentleman from Mariposa, and I shall not take up the time in going over the ground again. But they have a right to be represented. We have important business yet before us. You propose to deal with the question of water rights, of property rights; you propose to make a new bill of rights; you propose to readjust representation, and yet you propose to leave this important district entirely without counsel. I cannot see how such a measure can be indorsed by this body. Not only is it true with this district, but there are other districts similarly situated, having a common interest in the business here. For instance, those who are interested in mining desire to have the aid and counsel here of those who are experienced in such things. Again, the gentleman from San Francisco has made use of an argument that I never heard used before. I never heard it used to carry a point. I never heard a statesman use the memory of the dead for the purpose of carrying a point in a deliberative body, speaking as though it would be a disgrace, or sort of sacrilege, to fill these seats. Why, nearly every legislative body that ever met in this hall has lost one or more members, and it has never been considered disrespectful to fill the vacancies. So I hope this Convention will recognize the right of these people to be represented, and proceed to fill the vacancies. If San Francisco does not desire any more representation on this floor, it is her right to say so, but if the people want it it is their right to demand and receive it.

SPEECH OF MR. O'DONNELL.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I shall vote to reconsider this vote. I think it is the duty of every honorable delegate to do it. They have a right to it. The law demands it. "In case a vacancy occur by reason of death or otherwise, the same shall be filled by the Convention." That is what the law says. Under that law we are sent here, and that law we have got to abide by. There is a flimsy excuse made by one delegate here, Mr. Estee, that if we fill this one vacancy we have got to fill five or six more that will be caused by resignation. That was the excuse he made to the gentleman that was sent here to represent the people. Now, sir, I think it is our duty to represent the people of that county, and to elect the representatives that are sent here. They demand it, and the law insists that it shall be done. Several other gentlemen have made the same excuse. We want to fill the vacancy in the San Francisco delegation, and I hope the Counties of Mariposa and Merced will be allowed to fill that one. I am going to vote to reconsider this question, and I am satisfied that it will be carried.

SPEECH OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I do not rise to reply to the statement made by the delegate from San Francisco, though I have made no such statement as he imputed to me. I have made no such statement as that on the subject. What I was going to say was this: that I shall vote against reconsideration, not because I am opposed to representation, but because if we do go ahead and elect a representative from that county, we should certainly do the same with the northern district, and the same for San Francisco, and I think that the time had better be devoted to the regular business of the Convention. And I do not agree with the gentlemen from Inyo and from Mariposa, as to the absolute necessity of filling these vacancies, because it was only yesterday that it was well understood that if the widow of the late J. M. Strong could get the ten dollars a day, they would not have demanded representation. It seems they were more anxious about the ten dollars a day than about representation.

MR. BROWN. You misunderstood me, sir. I said if it had not been for the idea that the widow would get the ten dollars a day, the protest would have come here sooner.

MR. ESTEE. I understood that was the reason they had not applied sooner. I have nothing to say against the gentleman who presents himself—I presume he is a gentleman well qualified to discharge the duties of this position. I presume he would represent the wishes and reflect the views of the people of that district, but I presume it would take two or three days to get through with this question of electing delegates to fill vacancies, and I hope we will not go into it. We are too near the close of the session, and have too much else to attend to.

SPEECH OF MR. STEDMAN.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I do not desire to detain this Convention in the discussion of this question; but I desire to say, that as far as I am concerned, I will never vote against the request of these people for representation. I don't care whether it is signed by one hundred and thirty-seven and a half or by one humble citizen—the humblest in that county. I say, sir, that if only one citizen should come here and demand representation, he has a right to it. When I see gentlemen standing here and talking about the right of the people to have representation, and when a practical case is brought before this Convention vote against it, I cannot think they are consistent. Is it consistency? When I see the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes, standing here and telling us he does not wish to see the crape torn off of these desks, what do you think? I think, sir, he would rather see those empty desks because he fears the result; he would rather look on the empty desks than look into the face of one person who may be put in. Now, I like sentiment; but, Mr. President, the people of Mariposa and Merced are entitled to representation. They have no representative on this floor, and they come here asking for a representative. The law says when a vacancy occurs in this Convention we shall proceed to fill it. Now, sir, a petition has come here from those two counties asking that this vacancy be filled, and it is mandatory upon us to proceed to fill it. I am surprised that any gentleman like Mr. Estee should stand here and talk about that other vacancy in the northern district. Does he not know that the absence of Mr. Berry does not create a vacancy? There is no vacancy in that district. If he does not know it, he ought to know it. There is no vacancy, and cannot be a vacancy, unless a suit is brought by the people of that district. I shall vote to reconsider the motion; and I hope there will be an overwhelming vote in favor of it. At least I shall place myself on record in favor of it.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I call for the previous question.

The motion for the previous question was seconded by Messrs. Brown, West, Evey, Wyatt, and White.

THE VOTE RECONSIDERED.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

MR. STEDMAN. I demand the ayes and noes.

Seconded by Messrs. Gorman, West, Evey, and White.

The Secretary called the roll, and the motion to reconsider prevailed by the following vote:

FILLING THE VACANCIES—MARIPOSA AND MERCED.

THE PRESIDENT. The special order is upon filling the vacancies. Nominations are now in order.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I nominate, to fill the vacancy in the Assembly District composed of the Counties of Merced and Mariposa, Mr. W. J. Howard, a resident of that district for the past twenty-nine or thirty years.

There being no further nominations, the Secretary called the roll, with the following result:

FOR MONTGOMERY.

Gregg, Hitchcock.

Whole number of votes cast	111
Necessary to a choice	56
Mr. Howard received	109
Mr. Montgomery received	2

Mr. Howard, having received a majority of all the votes, was declared duly elected a delegate from the Counties of Mariposa and Merced.

SAN FRANCISCO.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move that the Convention proceed now to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. B. F. Kenny.

THE PRESIDENT. Nominations are in order for that position.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: Nominations being in order, I will state that I am instructed by the unanimous vote of the delegation from the City and County of San Francisco to place in nomination Hon. J. R. Sharpstein. We have heard much during this discussion concerning the filling of vacancies, about obedience to the popular will. I suppose that this Convention has now arrived at the conclusion to obey the popular will, by filling these vacancies. It has, in obedience to the popular will, voted to fill the vacancy in the Counties of Merced and Mariposa, upon a petition of one hundred and thirty voters. I might say, sir, that I present here a petition of more than fourteen thousand voters of the City and County of San Francisco, being a majority over all, in favor of the gentleman I have named to fill this vacancy. It is not necessary for me to say more than that. Judge Sharpstein has long been known in public life, having filled the position of District Judge in the City and County of San Francisco. He received a majority of all the votes cast for a seat in this Convention. We put him forward as the delegate named by that delegation, under the impression that he is the choice of the people of that city.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I second the nomination of John R. Sharpstein. I do it on account of knowing Judge Sharpstein a great number of years. And he received the largest vote of any member elected to this Convention, and I hope will receive the unanimous vote of this Convention.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I place in nomination John J. Kenny. He is a brother of the deceased member, and I understand he is a very worthy gentleman.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I second the nomination of Mr. John J. Kenny, upon the same principle that I voted for Mr. Howard. Mr. Kenny is a brother of the deceased delegate, belongs to the same ward—the Fourth Ward—therefore, as every county and every district has a representative, I think I shall support a candidate from that district.

MR. KLEINE. I nominate Mr. Flynn, of San Francisco. The reason I object to Mr. Sharpstein is that we have more lawyers and Judges now in this assembly. Then I say let us have a few honest workingmen. If we had less lawyers here we would make better progress as we have made so far; and by all means let us have a few more honest men in this Convention. I nominate Mr. Flynn, a faithful member of the Workingmen's party.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I stand by my guns to use the phrase of the gentleman from San Francisco, and put in nomination again before this Convention, Mr. R. H. Lloyd, whom I nominated once before to fill a vacancy. I have nothing to say against the gentlemen who have been nominated by other members upon this floor. I think, however, that Mr. Lloyd will make a better representative on this floor than any man who has been named, notwithstanding he is one of that poor, despised profession, called lawyers. Mr. Lloyd is a young man, in the prime of life, a man of experience in matters of this kind, and will be of more use to us than any other man I know of who could come into this Convention at this late day. He is a man whose character is above reproach, and nothing can be said against him. He ran upon the Non-partisan ticket and was defeated, though he received the largest vote of any man upon the ticket. Therefore, without saying anything against these other gentlemen, I present his name before this Convention.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I take pleasure in seconding the nomination of Mr. Lloyd, as a gentleman I have had the pleasure of knowing; for a number of years. Notwithstanding I agree with gentlemen that we have rather too many lawyers, he is an honest lawyer, and I want him to stand off against some of these corrupt lawyers and politicians. I trust that this Convention will elect him, for he stands as pure and white as the noonday sun. You might as well attempt to strike the noonday sun as to say anything against the character of Mr. Lloyd. I ask you to elect a man who will be an honor and a credit to the Convention and to the State, and that man is Mr. Lloyd, of San Francisco. [Laughter.]

MR. BEERSTECHER. I am instructed to state for Mr. Flynn, that he is not a candidate for a position here, and that he does not desire to place any impediment in the way of Judge Sharpstein. Consequently his name is not before this body. He has requested me to make that statement.

MR. KLEINE. I was not aware that Mr. Sharpstein was a candidate.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I am rather surprised at my friend Major Biggs, for he told me not longer ago than this morning that he intended to support Judge Sharpstein heartily.

MR. BIGGS. I never told you anything of the sort, sir. Whenever I am misrepresented I claim the right to be heard. It is false as false can be.

MR. BEERSTECHER. That is what I understood you.

MR. WHITE. I desire to appeal to you, gentlemen, to do what is fair towards San Francisco. [Cries of "Call the roll!"] No, sir; they come here united in putting in nomination a certain man. There was no effort made by San Francisco to defeat any man being nominated by other counties. Now I do appeal, in the name of justice and equality; for the sake of harmony in this Convention; for the good spirit it will engender, for you to let San Francisco have the man of her choice.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: By request, I place in nomination for this position R. A. Leonard, a resident of the fourth ward, San Francisco, a man of intelligence, ability, learning, and honesty.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: In the words of my learned friend from San Francisco, I propose to stand by my guns. When the matter of filling the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Morris was before this Convention, the friends of Mr. Lloyd placed him in nomination, as a gentleman whom they said was well qualified for the position, and a man of integrity. The Workingmen of San Francisco also placed in nomination the name of Judge Sharpstein, as one who had carried a very large vote in the City of San Francisco, the largest vote, as I understand it, of any man before the people. They represented that he was the choice of the people, twice expressed at the ballot box, and that if this Convention desired to be governed by the will of the people we should select him. But at that time there appeared to be sufficient reasons in the minds of the members to reject him and select another.

Now, sir, the same question comes up again to-day, and I indorse the nomination of J. R. Sharpstein now, as I did then, believing that he combines all the requisites necessary to fill this position with credit to himself and to the people of this State. During my short acquaintance with him, I believe I can say he is a gentleman of integrity and ability. That he is a fine jurist, and a man of such conservative and moderate views that he will be able to render valuable service to this Convention, and to the people of this State. And, sir, in supporting him, I am warmly supported by a large number of the most eminent members of the San Francisco bar, some two or three of whom are upon this floor. It affords me pleasure to be able to give the indorsement of such gentlemen as are upon this floor from San Francisco, sitting as Non-partisans, who, while they are friendly to Mr. Lloyd, have also indorsed Judge Sharpstein for the position of Judge, and paid him a very complimentary vote. I have here a paper, signed by a number of eminent lawyers, warmly indorsing Judge Sharpstein for the position of Judge of the Twelfth District Court. This paper was circulated in eighteen hundred and seventy-five, among the members of the San Francisco bar: "We, the undersigned, members of the bar of the City of San Francisco, wish to recommend to the support of the voters of this city and county, the Honorable John R. Sharpstein for Judge of the Twelfth District Court, the office now held by him," etc. Now, sir, I submit that when gentlemen of such high character as those whose names appear here, among whom I see those of Colonel Barnes, S. M. Wilson, M. M. Estee, J. W. Winans, of this Convention—when they honor him by indorsing him for the position of District Judge, that it is good evidence of his fitness for this position. I am satisfied that such men as Messrs. Barnes, Wilson, Estee, and Winans would not have signed that paper unless they believed it to be true. Therefore I submit that it ought to be sufficient evidence for this Convention. I believe the gentleman is worthy of the very high recommendations he then received.

MR. FILCHER. What year was that?

MR. BARRY. Eighteen hundred and seventy-five.

MR. FILCHER. Was he elected?

MR. BARRY. He was appointed first to this position, and then he came up for election. I was merely trying to show what these lawyers thought of him then. But the indorsement of these gentlemen was not sufficient, it seems.

MR. WILSON. The honest people, spoken of by Mr. Kleine, defeated him, notwithstanding the recommendations of the lawyers.

MR. BARRY. When they gave him as large a vote as they did, it was plain to be seen that he was their choice, because he ran several thousand votes ahead of any other person. I wish to read what the lawyers say about him.

"John R. Sharpstein took his seat this morning. The place within the bar of the Court-room was crowded with attorneys"——

MR. JOHNSON. I move that the reading be dispensed with, and that it be printed and laid upon our desks.

MR. BARRY. When the indorsement was brought here from Mariposa County, in behalf of Mr. Howard, it seems the Convention was willing to act upon that. They were governed in their action by the petitions presented and the statement made by Judge Jones. Now they ought to be willing to hear what members have to say in reference to Judge Sharpstein.

["Objection;" "objection."]

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: The name of John J. Kenny has been placed in nomination here to fill the vacant chair, caused by the death of his brother. I am personally acquainted with him; he is twenty-six years old, and follows the same profession as his brother; he lives in the same ward, and I am confident will represent the wishes and views of his constituency. I will recommend him to the consideration of this Convention as a good and faithful representative, and one in every way worthy to be elected to this honorable position. I would not have risen in connection with this matter at all, but it has been represented here that it was the unanimous wish of that delegation that Judge Sharpstein should be chosen to fill that position. Now, a meeting was held and Judge Sharpstein's letter of acceptance was shown, but this vacancy is in the fourth ward and Judge Sharpstein lives in the eighth ward, which has three representatives here now. I shall, therefore, support Mr. Kenny.

MR. KLEINE. I withdraw the name of Mr. Flynn, and I hope we will be able to elect one of our men, and not let them get away with it.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I had made up my mind to vote against Judge Sharpstein here. I thought we had exhausted the subject, but since I have learned of the indorsement of Colonel Barnes, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Estee, I must say that I cannot disregard such high authority.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I have no desire to enter again into this controversy; I do not propose to do it; I only wish to say one word with reference to this paper. Every lawyer knows that when he goes before the Judge on the bench he has the interest of his client at stake. When a petition is presented to him in favor of a man upon the bench, he cannot risk his client's interests by refusing to sign it.

MR. HOWARD. Does the gentleman mean to say that he recommended a person for Judge, who was totally unfit for the position, because he had cases pending before him?

MR. BARNES. What I mean to say is this: that where a paper is put before you by the Judge's most intimate friend, it is a very risky thing, when you have clients whose interests are at stake, to decline to sign it. We all know that the same kind of papers are circulated by almost every man who is a candidate for Judge, and there is not one lawyer in ten who would be unwise enough to refuse to sign it, when he had a large number of cases pending in the Court. He would not dare to put himself in direct personal antagonism to a Judge without doing injustice to his clients. For instance, the friend of the Judge goes to Mr. Wilson, and he signs his paper; he comes to me, and I think over this matter and that matter, and I don't want to have his friend go back and say, "Barnes said so and so, and refused to sign it." I know how sometimes a client's case is lost because the Judge has a difficulty with the lawyers. I have seen it and felt it over and over again. These men signed this indorsement, but there was not one in ten, perhaps, who voted that way, because, when it came to an election, the result was not what might have been expected from such an indorsement as this. Now, the gentleman can criticise as much as he pleases.

MR. BARBOUR. Was that recommendation for honesty, capacity, purity of character, etc., given after the Spring Valley decision to which you referred on a former occasion in this Convention?

MR. BARNES. I think it was. But the Supreme Court had put its heel upon it before that time. I have had trouble enough about this thing, and I don't care whether he comes here or not.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to ask a question. If, after the retirement of Judge Sharpstein from the bench, a meeting of the bar was not held, at which the gentleman himself was present, and if he was not one of the most complimentary speakers on that occasion, after Judge Sharpstein had retired from the bench, and there was no case pending before him?

MR. BARNES. I have no recollection of any such thing. On the contrary, I assisted the opposition candidate in that election. I assisted him in raising money to make the canvass.

MR. BARBOUR. What was the amount of greenbacks—how much was it?

MR. BARNES. It cost five hundred dollars to pay the assessment.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to ask the gentleman if that is the way he takes to win his cases?

MR. BARNES. Yes, sir, that is the way I undertake to win that kind of a case, when my friend is a poor man, and cannot raise money to pay his assessment.

MR. REYNOLDS. Then I understand the gentleman recommended one man, and spent his money for another.

MR. BARNES. I signed the recommendation for his nomination; I didn't care who nominated him.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I not only signed that recommendation, but I remember going to the Governor of this State, and in the most earnest manner requested him to appoint John R. Sharpstein to that position. I was in the Legislature, in this room. I sought his nomination, and used all the means in my power to secure his appointment by the Governor, and he was appointed. I signed that recommendation; I did all I could to secure his election; I voted for him, and worked for him. When I worked for him and voted for him, I did so upon principle; and now I am going to vote against him, and I do that from principle. I did not introduce this subject, but it has been brought before the Convention, and I propose to give my reasons for the faith that is in me. I shall vote against him for a member of this Convention, because, at the time when there was great excitement in San Francisco, when it was feared that a large portion of the people might rise against the city government; at a period when strife and turmoil and trouble prevailed; when property and lives were in danger from the torch; when men were wild with excitement; at that time, sir, Judge Sharpstein appeared upon the stage of action. Just from the bench, it might have been expected that he would range himself upon the side of law and order. Instead of warning the people, who were excited and infuriated (not without cause, it is true), but excited upon great subjects—instead of telling them they must bear their ills for a time; instead of saying to them, your remedy is at the ballot box—appeal to that first—as a Judge should have done, I remember distinctly that he said he was surprised they had borne it so long. Instead of trying to pacify, he heaped fuel upon the flame which threatened to destroy the city. And for that reason, and for others that I might name, I shall not vote for him to fill the vacant seat in this Convention. I have nothing to say against the Workingmen's party; I have nothing to say against these gentlemen; but I cannot support a man who pursued such a course as Judge Sharpstein did. Instead of trying to quiet the excitement, and advising them to obey the law and appeal to the ballot box for their redress, he added new fuel to the flame, and said he was surprised they had borne their evils so long.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I desire to ask you to what particular time you refer—what date?

MR. ESTEE. I have not time to go through the files of papers; we can ascertain it when we have leisure.

MR. BEERSTECHER. According to my best knowledge, sir, the first time that Judge Sharpstein appeared before the people was at or immediately prior to the nominations, which would place it about the month of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-seven. I don't think he had anything to do with the Workingmen's organization prior to May.

MR. ESTEE. I did not say anything about the time. But I assert it to be a fact, and the public prints of San Francisco will show that it is true. My friend from San Francisco will find himself very much mistaken if he asserts that these statements were not made. Any other questions?

MR. GRACE. I have lived in San Francisco for the last ten years, and I have never seen any signs of a riot.

MR. ESTEE. I am not speaking of a riot. I was not there, and I do not know how near it came to being a riot.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I was one of those who signed that memorial read from to-day. I recommended Judge Sharpstein, because I believed from his past career that he was a good man for the place. But, sir, his career subsequent to that has proved a bitter disappointment, and therefore I shall now vote against him.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain, commend me to the gentleman who signed this long recommendation in favor of Judge Sharpstein, and now gives as an excuse that he was afraid if he refused to sign it the interests of his clients might suffer. And then, after signing it, he turned round and worked for another man. Now, if they did this as a simple matter of interest to themselves and their clients, how do we know that there is not the same sort of interest in getting this vacant seat filled by the man of their choice, a man who will bring them votes here. These are little questions to answer, but they are questions that require some explanation. As far as the nomination of this other gentleman is concerned, I desire to say that we have, as the representative party of San Francisco, desired the election of Judge Sharpstein. The nomination which has been made by a gentleman far removed from San Francisco, shows what a deep interest he takes in San Francisco, and we will soon show him how little we appreciate it. We have known Mr. Leonard as long as the gentleman from San Joaquin, and while he may be in every way worthy, none of us saw fit to nominate him. I have nothing to say against him, but he is not the choice of the delegation.

MR. TERRY. Don't you know I was requested to place him in nomination by one of your colleagues, Mr. Stedman?

MR. WELLIN. Then my colleague will have the blame. I don't admire any such departure. If I wanted a man nominated I certainly would not go to the gentleman from San Joaquin, or any other gentleman, while I am able to do it myself. That gentleman is not the choice of the San Francisco delegation. Neither of these gentlemen named are indorsed by our delegation. I have not a word to say against either of them. They are both, no doubt, very worthy young men, but they are not our choice—they are not the choice of the people of San Francisco. I submit that we ought to have the man of our choice. When the vacancy from Alameda was to be filled, we made no nomination, but threw a unanimous vote in favor of your candidate, without a dissenting voice. When this vacancy from Mariposa and Merced was to be filled, we made no nomination, but conceded them the man whom the people had indorsed as their choice. Now, I ask, is it fair; is it honorable; it it right, to make these nominations against the expressed wish of the people? And I want to know whether this Convention is going to reject the man who is the choice of the delegation and of the people of San Francisco.

MR. INMAN. I move the previous question.

No second.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I have no apology to make to the Convention here for signing the card recommending Judge Sharpstein, or for the course I then took or now take. Judge Sharpstein was appointed by Governor Booth in January, eighteen hundred and seventy-five, I think. I had had some acquaintance with him before his appointment, but was not intimately acquainted with him. I knew nothing against him. He went upon the bench, retiring from the bar, and occupied that position for several months. In the Fall of the year, eighteen hundred and seventy-five, nominations were to be made for Judges to be elected at the ensuing election. I signed this card upon the principle upon which I always act, and that is, if a Judge has left the bar and accepted a position upon the bench, I always sustain him for a second term, unless I have some very good reason to do otherwise. I always have acted upon that principle, and I think it is a good principle, because a lawyer who leaves his business to go upon the bench, necessarily does so at the sacrifice of his business, and ought to be supported. In that case I knew of no good reason for making an exception to the rule. I thought he might make a good Judge, and signed that card in good faith, believing him to be what he was represented. And I voted for him besides. I have nothing now to say against him in regard to the matters set forth in that card. Were his history between that time and this wiped out, I would reindorse what is there said. But after a man has been upon the bench, and has associated with such men as we have had upon the bench in San Francisco, I will not excuse any Judge who thereafter denounces those men who have been his associates as being bad and corrupt men. I venture to say that there is no better set of men in the State of California, or anywhere else, than the Judges of the Courts in San Francisco. They are honest and upright men in every sense of the word. As I understand it, Judge Sharpstein on the stump denounced these men, declaring that they were a corrupt and unreliable set of men, in addition to other matters referred to. If you want to find out what a man is, go among his fellows, his associates. The merchant goes among merchants to find another merchant's standing. No man can stand up in this world against his own craft, and it is the best test a man can have. I say now that not one third of the bar of San Francisco will support Judge Sharpstein. Whatever gentlemen may say concerning the bar, I am satisfied of that fact. He has fallen into disrepute among his fellows, and I do not believe he could get one out of ten of those who signed that card to sign a similar one now. I do not make any apology for what I have done or for what I do now.

MR. FREUD. Mr. President: I am not acquainted with Judge Sharpstein intimately. I am intimately acquainted with Mr. Kenny. But, sir, in my opinion, there is a great principle involved here; it is the same principle upon which I acted when I voted for Mr. Strong. The same principle upon which I acted when I voted for Mr. Howard. I did not inquire into the character of those men; I did not inquire into their merits; it was enough for me, sir, that the gentleman from that district placed them in nomination, and indorsed them, and said that it was the wish of the people there that these men should be elected to represent them. Now, sir, the delegation from San Francisco are almost unanimous in favor of Judge Sharpstein, and I hold that the members of this Convention will accord to us the same rights which we accorded to them.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I merely desire to make an explanation, because an attack has been made upon me for placing Mr. Kenny in nomination. I made that nomination at the earnest request of a gentleman from San Francisco, a delegate upon this floor. I at first objected to it, but was urgently requested to make the nomination, and out of courtesy I did so. I consider that I have a right to make a nomination upon this floor to fill any vacancy that may occur here.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I did request Judge Terry to nominate Mr. Leonard. I did so, sir, not as against Judge Sharpstein, but as against Mr. Kenny. I propose to vote for Judge Sharpstein, and I assure the Convention that I did not have him put in nomination against Judge Sharpstein. I withdraw his nomination as against Judge Sharpstein, but not as against Mr. Kenny.

Mr. ROLFE. I wish to ask whether Mr. Leonard is a candidate?

MR. STEDMAN. I have withdrawn Mr. Leonard.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. INMAN. I move the previous question.

The call for the previous question was duly seconded, and the main question was ordered by the Convention.

THE SECRETARY called the roll with the following result:

THE PRESIDENT. Mr. Kenny having received a majority of all the votes cast, I declare him duly elected to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the Honorable B. F. Kenny.

Mr. Howard, delegate elect to represent the Counties of Mariposa and Merced, came forward and took the usual oath of office, administered by the President.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I move we adjourn.

Carried, and at four o'clock and twenty-five minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

EIGHTY-THIRD DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Thursday, December 19th, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M.

President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

One day's leave of absence was granted Messrs. Stuart and McComas.

Indefinite leave of absence was granted Messrs. Estey, Miller, and Kelley.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

Carried.

RESOLUTION.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Convention that no indefinite leave of absence be granted to any member after this date except for cause of sickness; and that if any member shall absent himself from the Convention without leave to do so for the period of seven days, his seat shall be deemed to be vacant, and it shall be in order for the Convention to forthwith fill such vacancy by election in accordance with the law convening this Convention.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move that be laid on the table.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I ask leave to say why I offered it. I offer it merely to prevent indefinite leave of absence to persons going away that never intend to return, and in that way would leave the Convention without a quorum. I notice that a good many have gone home and have been absent some time. We do not know whether they will come back here or not. It is very easy for gentlemen to set a time when they will come back, and we can renew that leave if necessary; but this asking indefinite leave leaves the Convention without knowledge as to whether they will come back. I think it is wise to declare the sense of the Convention on that matter.

MR. McCALLUM. I move to strike out the last clause.

MR. WHITE. I accept that amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to lay on the table.

MR. JOYCE. I call for the ayes and noes.

MR. WICKES. I call for the ayes and noes.

MR. McCALLUM. I understand that the last clause is stricken out.

MR. PORTER. Mr. President: I was only going to say that we had better go to work instead of wasting an hour every morning on motions of this foolish character.

MR. RINGGOLD. I call for the ayes and noes. I do not think it is a foolish motion at all.

MR. O'DONNELL. I withdraw my motion to lay on the table.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read by the Secretary as amended.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Convention that no indefinite leave of absence be granted to any member after this date except for cause of sickness.

The resolution was adopted.

REPORT.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I send up a report from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred resolution number ninety, providing for the payment of the sum of thirty-eight dollars to Patrick Leavy for services as Gas Porter from the commencement of the Convention up to the date of his appointment, have had the same under consideration, and herewith report the same back without recommendation.

S. G. HILBORN, for the Committee.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I move that the report and resolution lie on the table until the author of the resolution is present.

Carried.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move that the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation be made the special order for the seventh day of January. I make the motion to postpone it until that time at the request of several members of the Convention, some of whom are absent, and several of whom have to leave here for the holidays. I suppose it will be generally conceded as a matter of great importance, and many gentlemen who are now unavoidably absent for some days desire to be here for——

MR. WHITE. Mr. President——

MR. EDGERTON. Does the gentleman rise to a point of order or for another buncome speech?

MR. WHITE. It was not a point of order, but——

MR. EDGERTON. Sit down, then. The gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, desires to be away for a few days. That gentleman has devoted much time to the subject, and will doubtless be able to benefit this Convention a great deal on the consideration of this report. So far as I am personally concerned I am ready to take it up now, or at any time the Convention may see fit. I make the motion for the reasons I have stated.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that this resolution will not pass, and that we will go right on with business. There is no one more anxious to have the assistance of the gentleman from Santa Clara than I am, but there are several others that may go away. That puts it beyond the hundred days for which this Convention was to sit, and a great many may never come back here. I think we ought to go right on with business, and I hope and trust that there will be no adjournment for Christmas for more than one day; and if this is the way we go on until the seventh of January, why, the consequence will be that we will not have half the Convention here—that they will never come back.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I hope the motion will prevail. I have been quite unwell, and intend to leave for home to-morrow, not being well enough to stay here. I am in hopes of being back here by the seventh of January. My people are very much interested in this subject, and I should like to be here. I know there are many others that would have to go home, and I think this ought to be put off.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: This is but a part of the consistent course of some gentlemen to delay and eventually defeat this Constitution.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order in making that style of remark about members.

MR. LARKIN. I say that this will eventually defeat this Constitution. A majority cannot afford to stay here. The effect of this motion will be to compel them to come here and wait upon these men who have sought these delays.

MR. TOWNSEND. Isn't there enough to occupy the time of this Convention without bringing that up?

MR. LARKIN. This is the main question. These are the great questions. We came here to amend this Constitution, and I want to see the work of this Convention proceed upon these important questions, and I shall oppose any motion for adjournment, or any motion for making special orders for January or next June.

MR. EDGERTON. Did I understand the gentleman from El Dorado to say this motion was made for the purpose of defeating the objects of this Convention?

MR. LARKIN. I say the result of it would be.

MR. EDGERTON. Did the gentleman say the motion was made for that purpose?

MR. STEDMAN. I move that the motion of the gentleman from Sacramento be laid on the table.

MR. TOWNSEND. I hope the motion will not prevail.

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is not debatable.

The motion to lay on the table prevailed, on a division, by a vote of 67 ayes to 40 noes.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The pending question is the motion of the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry, to substitute section six of the old Constitution for section five of the report of the committee.

MR. McCALLUM. I rise to a question of order: that the number having been fixed by an amendment already adopted this substitute is not in order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The rule expressly provides that a substitute is a mere amendment. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. Chairman: I would inquire, if the substitute is adopted, if it would be open to amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is an amendment itself.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: The adoption of that amendment will leave no number of Senators and Representatives fixed by the Convention. Section five, as amended, provides that the Senate shall consist of forty, and the House of eighty. Striking out that section and adopting the one proposed, would leave no number designated. It seems to me that the object of this is sufficiently expressed by the fifth section as it stands. The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the House of eighty members. That section, if taken in connection with the sixth as it will be amended, it seems to me expresses the opinion of the majority of this Convention. It is necessary to have some designated number, if the Constitution is adopted, as it will be.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I will state that while this section six of the old Constitution, which I have offered as a substitute for section five, does not fix the number, yet it is understood, that if it is adopted the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes, will offer a substitute for section six which will give the law some flexibility, so that in the future the Legislature may be able to increase the number if it is found to be necessary or desirable.

MR. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman: I protest against the present apportionment, and for my section of the State I demand a change. I renew my motion that the Legislative Committee be instructed to adjust the representation between the counties according to the population as determined by the vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six; that is, that we recommit this section with those instructions.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: I am decidedly in favor of this course. Now, there has been complaint for a long time in the southern portion of the State upon this very subject. For instance, Tulare County and Kern, have but one representative in the Assembly, and yet in eighteen hundred and seventy-six——

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I respectfully suggest that that belongs to section six.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair has decided that this motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles is out of order. This committee cannot instruct any other committee. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sierra.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I have not heard the amendment read, but I am informed that it is in substance section six of the old Constitution. In other words, it leaves it as it has been in the past. Having been in the Legislature eight years, my experience was that it was a constant struggle in the different counties of the State in order to obtain each for themselves the largest possible representation; and so it will be in the future. This committee have already gone through section five and perfected it the extent of deciding that forty members shall constitute the Senate and eighty members shall constitute the Assembly. That is the provision now. That is the number now constituting the Senate and Assembly, and all seem to be of the opinion that that number is sufficient for the interests of the State. Why not let it remain so? Why go back to the uncertain rule of leaving it open to a contest every time the Legislature meet, in regard to representation? There never has been, perhaps, a fair apportionment in this State when it has been fixed by the Legislature, for the reason that it has always been the result of a compromise, and finally the small counties, where they have had an able representative, have got an undue apportionment in the Legislature. I have noticed, sir, that in the new Constitution they fix the number of legislators. That takes away that bone of contention from the legislative body. Supposing that section five had been settled upon and determined, I had drawn a substitute for section six, which I will read:

"SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial Districts of compact and contiguous territory, as nearly equal in population as may be, and each district shall be entitled to elect one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered consecutively from one to forty, commencing at the northern and ending at the southern boundary of the State. In forming such districts, no county shall be divided unless entitled to two or more Senators; nor shall a part of any county be united with any other county in forming a district. The Senatorial ratio of representation shall be ascertained by dividing the whole population of the State by the number forty. The members of the Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties on a ratio obtained by dividing the population of the State by eighty. Every county containing a population equal to one or more ratios, shall elect separately its proportion of Assemblymen allotted to such county, as may be provided by law. The Legislature, at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, and thereafter after each United States decennial census shall have been ascertained, shall apportion the State into Senatorial and Assembly districts, in conformity with the provisions of this section. Until such apportionment shall be made, forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen to constitute the first Legislature under this Constitution shall be elected, as now provided by law. After the United States census of the year eighteen hundred and ninety shall be ascertained, the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, may increase the Senatorial districts, and the number of Senators to fifty, and the members of Assembly to one hundred."

That will permit of an increase of the number of legislators after the census of eighteen hundred and ninety, so that there may be fifty Senators and one hundred Assemblymen. If this view should be favorably entertained by the Convention, leaving section five as it is already amended, and adopting the substitute for section six, which I have just read, it would be a better rule for the future than it would to leave it to that uncertain rule that has heretofore prevailed, having a contest in each Legislature in regard to representation. I therefore hope that we will not go backward now and adopt the amendment which was proposed here, taking the provision from the old Constitution, and substituting it for that which has been acted upon and amended by the Convention; that is, by substituting "forty" and "eighty" in place of the numbers reported by the committee.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. Mr. Chairman: I do not desire to see the representation cut down. I wish to see all counties represented: but I contend that the larger counties should be represented according to the population. It seems to me that we had better leave this matter——

MR. VAN DYKE. We are not on the question of apportionment at all. That is in the next section. As I understand it——

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair cannot control the argument of the gentleman as long as it is pertinent.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. I think we had better leave this matter where it is now, and leave the Legislature to regulate this matter.

REMARKS OF MR. BARNES.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: It occurs to me that section six, as it stands in the Constitution, substituted in place of section five, together with the substitute proposed to be adopted for section six, would be the best plan. I am aware that it would not meet the objection of the gentleman from Los Angeles as to the present unfair apportionment, as considered by himself and the other gentlemen from the southern part of the State. But, sir, the mischief to follow from undertaking to make the vote at any election a basis of representation would be greater than the present hardship. Whatever the evil that is sought to be remedied the remedy sought to be applied is worse than the disease. It does not appear to me that we have sufficient light at present to dispose of this question. It should have been done, as was stated yesterday, years ago. A struggle was made for it year after year. It was not until three years ago that it was accomplished. It was made upon the best lights that could be obtained, but in our present situation I do not think that we have the data with which to make a change that would be satisfactory. Now, if section six of the old Constitution were adopted in place of this section five, then in place of this long apportionment being put into the Constitution, I would propose that we adopt a section something like this: "The number of Senators and members of the Assembly shall be fixed by the Legislature, and apportioned among the several counties and districts to be established by law according to the number of inhabitants. The number of members of the Assembly shall not be less than eighty, and until the Legislature shall otherwise direct, the number of Assemblymen shall be eighty, and the number of Senators forty. And the apportionment of districts shall be as now provided by law. The enumeration of the inhabitants of this State shall be taken under the direction of the Legislature in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and at the end of every ten years thereafter, and these enumerations, together with the census that may be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, and every subsequent ten years, shall serve as the basis of representation in both houses of the Legislature."

That would make a system that is flexible. It settles the question of the number of Senators and Assemblymen, and it leaves the subject open to be adjusted as the increase of population, the growth and development of the State, might require.

MR. MANSFIELD. Why do you have a census in eighteen hundred and eighty-two instead of eighteen hundred and eighty?

MR. BARNES. We shall have a census of the inhabitants of the State by the United States Government in eighteen hundred and eighty. That will give one basis. Of course, it would not be desirable to have an enumeration going on on the part of the State at the same time that the United States census was being taken. Then, if you have a State enumeration and the United States census, you have a double basis to determine the question. You have got two sources of information, one carried on by the State, and one carried on by the General Government in the year eighteen hundred and eighty. That idea is taken from the old Constitution. Section twenty-eight of the article on the Legislative Department as it was adopted, reads:

"SEC. 28. The enumeration of the inhabitants of this State shall be taken, under the direction of the Legislature, in the years eighteen hundred and fifty-two and eighteen hundred and fifty-five, and at the end of every ten years thereafter; and these enumerations, together with the census that may be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty, and every subsequent ten years, shall serve as the basis of representation in both houses of the Legislature."

That is an explanation of it, and I think it is a very just idea. We cannot depend entirely upon the census taken by the United States. I cannot avoid repeating, that it seems to me that any attempt to apportion the State from the very feeble and meager light afforded by a popular vote would be a very great mistake. The vote depends upon so many circumstances, and there are so many questions as to the fairness of any election. Now, the gentleman from El Dorado said it was known that there was some fourteen or fifteen thousand fraudulent votes——

MR. ROLFE. I rise to a point of order. Apportionment is not before the body.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair has already decided that point.

MR. ROLFE. Go on.

MR. BARNES. Thank you! I am aware of the opinion of the Chair, but I was not aware of the decision of Mr. Rolfe.

MR. ROLFE. My decision is that you are out of order. The Chair decides the other way.

MR. BARNES. I did not propose to be bound by it; I simply wanted to know what he thought. However, I have no more to say, except that we ought not to deal with this question until we have the proper light upon it.

REMARKS OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that there is some misunderstanding on the part of the Convention about the position in which this matter stands now. The Committee on Legislative Department reported this section:

"SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of thirty members, and the Assembly of sixty members, to be elected by districts, as hereinafter provided. The seats of the fifteen Senators from the odd numbered districts, chosen at the first election under this Constitution, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senate, after the first election, shall be chosen every two years."

The Committee of the Whole has voted that the House shall consist of eighty members and the Senate of forty members, so that of course the adjustment of districts, reported by the committee, will have to go out, and it is not proposed by the committee, as far as I understand, that there should be a new apportionment. It would require a good deal of time. This section kept back the report more than two weeks. It would require a long time to readjust this apportionment to fit forty districts. Therefore, I propose, when section six shall come up, to move to strike out all after the nineteenth line, and to insert in lieu of it, "that until the adjustment is made by the Legislature the apportionment now provided by law shall continue in force." So that until after the first session of the Legislature which meets after the census of eighteen hundred and eighty is taken, the representation will continue as now, the Assembly consisting of eighty members and the Senate of forty. If this section six is adopted it will be the duty of the Legislature, after the next census, to make a new apportionment. Here is another section:

"For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature the State shall be divided into forty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called legislative districts. Each district shall choose one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered from one to thirty, inclusive, in numerical order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust said districts and reapportion the representation, so as to preserve them as near equal in population as may be."

Now, under the scheme proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, no readjustment of representation can be had until eighteen hundred and eighty-four; because you provide for a census in eighteen hundred and eighty-two; so that for three sessions of the Legislature, for six years, there could be no change in the apportionment as it now is. Whereas, under the plan proposed by the committee, the change could be made at the session of eighteen hundred and eighty-two; so that instead of continuing the present representation the first session that would meet under the new apportionment would meet in eighteen hundred and eighty-four; whereas, under the plan proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, it would be in eighteen hundred and eighty-six; so that there would be three sessions of the Legislature, necessarily, under the present apportionment, if the plan proposed by the gentleman was adopted.

MR. BARNES. What would be the objection to the matter being postponed until there was a thorough examination into it? If complaints are made, examine into them carefully, and put an end to the complaints.

MR. TERRY. I cannot understand why the enumeration made and paid for by the United States will not be just as correct, just as thorough, and just as reliable, as any that will be made by the State. The taking of the census by the State will involve a very large expense without any corresponding benefit. If the United States census is taken in eighteen hundred and eighty, that will be sufficient without waiting for two years longer for the State to take the census, in order to make an apportionment. If we judge the future by the past, is there any assurance of there being any State census taken? In eighteen hundred and forty-nine the Constitution provided for a census in eighteen hundred and fifty-two and in eighteen hundred and fifty-five, and one every ten years thereafter. Would any gentleman inform me that any such census was taken?

MR. VAN DYKE. It was taken in eighteen hundred and fifty-two.

MR. EDGERTON. No; and never will be.

MR. TERRY. Then where is the necessity of waiting for the State to do it?

MR. BARNES. Then what is the object of putting any mandatory provision in the Constitution as to a legislative duty, if they do not do their duty? If they do not do their duty, that is their lookout. It is for us to throw around this question all the safeguards we can. The benefit of a State enumeration of population for the purpose of having a basis of representation is, that every town and county will have an interest in seeing that it is taken. It will not be taken in the hasty and careless way in which the census of the United States is taken.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that the argument cuts both ways. If the basis of representation is fixed upon the census of the United States, then every citizen, and every town and county, has just as much interest in seeing that it is correctly taken. If the census taken in eighteen hundred and eighty by the United States is made by this Constitution the basis of representation, is not the same interest involved?

MR. BARNES. I do not so regard it.

MR. TERRY. Then I cannot understand it. It seems to me a self-evident proposition. It occurs to me, that with the amendment adopted by the committee, of forty Senators and eighty members, and the amendments which I will propose when it comes up to section nineteen, we will have a system which, it seems to me from the votes already taken, meets with the approval of a majority of this Convention. If the gentleman desires to give it flexibility, there would be no objection to an addition, that the number may be increased. I cannot see any advantage which section six of the old Constitution has over section five as amended here, because section six provides for no number of representatives. It simply says that the number of Senators shall not be less than one third nor more than one half of that of the members of the Assembly, but how many Senators and Assemblymen there shall be does not appear. The objections to section five will be obviated by permitting the present apportionment to stand until after the next census.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. Chairman: The proposition is to substitute section six of the old Constitution in place of this section five as amended. Now, I hope that the Convention will adopt section six of the old Constitution. I think that the interests of the people demand that this be left flexible. As it stands to-day San Francisco has nearly one half of the population of the State, and the chances are that by eighteen hundred and eighty she will have one half of the population of the State. If that is the case, then one half of the representatives will come from the city; in other words, the people of the State at large cannot be acquainted with their Senators and Assemblymen. On the other hand the Senators and Assemblymen cannot know the people of the State at large. Now, the old Constitution, as it is, forbids an increase; it ought to be permitted, as it may turn out that the people of San Francisco may be able to control the whole State. It is necessary, because that city upon the sea may grow so enormous that the people of the State will be lost. I think it is but fair that each county should have an Assemblyman. If the counties are too small we should have territorial representation in the Assembly, because our interests are so diverse, and I hope that whatever apportionment is made that the Convention will keep in sight the future, and that we will not sacrifice the whole State to the great city that is growing so rapidly by the sea.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: There is some force in the argument of the gentleman from Kern, Mr. Gregg, in regard to having some flexibility, but what we ought to meet is the radical injustice which exists in the present apportionment. We can do that here without trouble. It is not so great a work. I, myself, have spent a couple of days on the matter, and I find that the apportionment is really very unequal. The gentleman, in offering this as a substitute, as I understand it, will insist upon the present apportionment lasting until after the census of eighteen hundred and eighty. The Legislature which shall meet in eighteen hundred and eighty-two will be able to apportion the State on the basis of that census. The Legislature elected for eighteen hundred and eighty-four will be the first Legislature elected under the new apportionment. The crying injustice of the present apportionment we shall have continued, unless we correct it here, for six years longer; and not only that, but I understand, from another amendment that is to be offered, that a census is to be taken in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and the correction of the evil will then be put off two years longer. I do not think that while we can ourselves correct an error of that magnitude that we should remand it over for so many years. I think that it is perfectly proper to take the electoral vote at the Presidential election as a basis, and from that apportion the State. It can be done fairly, by any gentleman on this floor, in three hours. I propose, when section six comes up, to offer that as an amendment to section six, hoping that this Convention will adopt it. It is fair to every part of the State. It changes the representation to some extent. It does justice to some of the counties that now have not half their representation, and I insist that it would be a great wrong on the part of this Convention to compel the counties that are now not half represented in the Legislature to continue thus inadequately represented for the next six or eight years. It is our duty to do it here. We can do it without injustice to any portion of the State, and we should do it.

MR. INMAN. This is simply a rehash of yesterday. I move the previous question.

Messrs. Howard, O'Donnell, Keyes, and Caples seconded the motion.

The main question was ordered, on a division, by a vote of 64 ayes to 15 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The main question has been ordered. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry, to substitute section six of the old Constitution for section five of the report.

The amendment was rejected, on a division, by a vote of 36 ayes to 73 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section six.

MR. ANDREWS. I concur, Mr. Chairman, fully, with the remarks made by Colonel Ayers. I think we can remedy it here as well as it can be done by the Legislature, and for that reason I offer this resolution, if it be considered in order:

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the committee now rise and report sections five and six back to the Convention, and recommend that said sections be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to apportion representation to accord with the amendments adopted to section five in Committee of the Whole, said apportionment to be ascertained upon the vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six and eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, and from such other data as can be found.

MR. BROWN. I second the motion.

MR. EDGERTON. I hope the resolution will not be adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is not debatable.

MR. McFARLAND. I would like to hear section five read as it now stands, or now amended.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Shasta, Mr. Andrews.

The resolution was lost.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I have an amendment to section five.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section six.

MR. HOWARD. A division was called for in time by a half-dozen.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not recognize anybody or hear anything until the decision had been made. The Secretary will read section six.

APPORTIONMENT.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into thirty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called legislative districts. Each district shall choose one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered from one to thirty, inclusive, in numerical order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust said districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as nearly equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district. Until such adjustment shall be made, the First District shall consist of the Counties of Del Norte, Siskiyou, Modoc, Lassen, Shasta, and Trinity; the Second, of the Counties of Humboldt and Mendocino; the Third, of the Counties of Tehama and Butte; the Fourth, of the Counties of Colusa, Lake, and Sutter; the Fifth, of the County of Sonoma; the Sixth, of the Counties of Marin, Napa, and Contra Costa; the Seventh, of the Counties of Solano and Yolo; the Eighth, of the Counties of Sierra, Yuba, and Plumas; the Ninth, of the County of Nevada; the Tenth, of the Counties of Placer and El Dorado; the Eleventh, of the County of Sacramento; the Twelfth, of the Counties of Calaveras, Alpine, and Amador; the Thirteenth, of the County of San Joaquin; the Fourteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at a point where Larkin street intersects the waters of the Bay of San Francisco; thence meandering along the shore of said bay, in an easterly and southeasterly direction, to the point where Market street intersects said bay; thence along Market street to California street; thence along California street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to Vallejo street; thence along Vallejo street to Larkin street; thence along Larkin street to the waters of the Bay of San Francisco, the place of beginning. The Fifteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Larkin street intersects Vallejo street; thence along Vallejo street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to California street; thence along California street to Market street; thence along Market street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to Pine street; thence along Pine street to Larkin street; and thence along Larkin street to Vallejo street, the place of beginning. The Sixteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Franklin street intersects Pine street; thence along Pine street to Kearny street; thence along Kearny street to Market street; thence along Market street to Van Ness Avenue; thence along Van Ness Avenue to Tyler street; thence along Tyler street to Gough street; thence along Gough street to Geary street; thence along Geary street to Franklin street; thence along Franklin street to Pine street, the place of beginning. The Seventeenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Larkin street intersects the waters of the Bay of San Francisco; thence along Larkin street to Pine street; thence along Pine street to Franklin street; thence along Franklin street to Geary street; thence along Geary street to Gough street; thence along Gough street to Tyler street; thence along Tyler street to Van Ness Avenue; thence along Van Ness Avenue to Market street; thence along Market street to Ridley street; thence along Ridley street and said Ridley street produced in a direct line westerly to the Pacific Ocean; and thence meandering northerly and easterly along the waters of the Pacific Ocean and the Bay of San Francisco to Larkin street, the place of beginning. The Eighteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Market street intersects the waters of the Bay of San Francisco; thence meandering along the waters of said bay to the point where Channel street intersects the waters of said bay; thence along Channel street to Seventh street; thence along Seventh street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Second street; thence along Second street to Market street; and thence along Market street to the waters of the Bay of San Francisco, the place of beginning. The Nineteenth, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Second street intersects Market street; thence along Second street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Sixth street; thence along Sixth street to Market street; and thence along Market street to Second street, the place of beginning. The Twentieth, of all that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Sixth street intersects Market street; thence along Sixth street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Seventh Street; thence along Seventh street to Channel street; thence along Channel street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Fifteenth street; thence along Fifteenth street to Howard street; thence along Howard street to Fourteenth street; thence along Fourteenth street to Mission street; thence along Mission street to Ridley street; thence along Ridley street to Market street; and thence along Market street to Sixth street, the place of beginning. The Twenty-first, of that portion of the City and County of San Francisco bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the point where Channel street intersects the Bay of San Francisco; thence along Channel Street to Harrison street; thence along Harrison street to Fifteenth street; thence along Fifteenth street to Howard street; thence along Howard street to Fourteenth street; thence along Mission street to Ridley street; thence along Ridley street and the line of Ridley street projected westerly to the Pacific Ocean; thence southerly along the Pacific Ocean to the southern boundary line of the City and County of San Francisco; thence along said southern boundary line to the Bay of San Francisco; and thence meandering along the waters of the Bay of San Francisco to Channel street, the place of beginning. The Twenty-second, of Oakland Township, County of Alameda. The Twenty-third, of all that portion of the County of Alameda exclusive of Oakland Township. The Twenty-fourth, of the County of Santa Clara. The Twenty-fifth, of the Counties of Merced, Mariposa, Stanislaus, and Tuolumne. The Twenty-sixth, of the Counties of Tulare, Inyo, Fresno, and Mono. The Twenty-seventh, of the Counties of Santa Cruz, San Mateo, and San Benito. The Twenty-eighth, of the Counties of Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, and Monterey. The Twenty-ninth, of the County of Los Angeles. The Thirtieth, of the Counties of San Bernardino, San Diego, Kern, and Ventura.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: I offer the following amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six as follows: First, strike out the word 'thirty' in the second line, and insert 'forty;' second, strike out all of said section after the word 'made,' in the nineteenth line, and insert 'the apportionment now provided by law shall continue in force.'"

MR. AYERS. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add after the word 'made,' in the nineteenth line, the following: 'The apportionment of the State for legislative representatives shall be made, namely:

"Senatorial Apportionment.

"First District—San Diego and San Bernardino, one Senator.

"Second District—Los Angeles, two Senators.

"Third District—San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, and Ventura, one Senator.

"Fourth District—Fresno, Tulare, Kern, Mono, and Inyo, two Senators.
"Fifth District—Mariposa, Merced, and Stanislaus, one Senator.
"Sixth District—Monterey, San Benito, and Santa Cruz, one Senator.
"Seventh District—Santa Clara, two Senators.
"Eighth District—San Mateo and San Francisco, jointly, one Senator.
"Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, and Thirteenth Districts—San Francisco (boundaries as at present), each two Senators.
"Fourteenth District—Alameda, two Senators.
"Fifteenth District—Contra Costa and Marin, one Senator.
"Sixteenth District—San Joaquin, one Senator.
"Seventeenth District—Calaveras and Tuolumne, one Senator.
"Eighteenth District—Sacramento and Placer, three Senators.
"Nineteenth District—Solano and Yolo, two Senators.
"Twentieth District—Napa and Lake, one Senator.
"Twenty-first District—Sonoma, one Senator.
"Twenty-second District—El Dorado, Alpine, and Amador, one Senator.
"Twenty-third District—Nevada and Sierra, one Senator.
"Twenty-fourth District—Sutter and Yuba, one Senator.
"Twenty-fifth District—Butte, Plumas, and Lassen, one Senator.
"Twenty-sixth District—Del Norte, Humboldt, and Mendocino, one Senator.
"Twenty-seventh District—Modoc, Siskiyou, Trinity, and Shasta, one Senator.
"Twenty-eighth District—Colusa and Tehama, one Senator.

"Assembly Apportionment.

"Alameda, five; Alpine and El Dorado, one; El Dorado, one; Amador, one; Butte, one; Butte, Plumas, and Lassen, one; Calaveras, one; Tuolumne, one; Colusa, one; Tehama, one; Contra Costa, one; Marin, one; Del Norte and Humboldt, one; Humboldt, one; Mendocino, one; Fresno, one; Tulare and Kern, one; Mono and Inyo, one; Napa and Lake, one; Napa, one; Sonoma, three; Los Angeles, three; Mariposa and Merced, one; Stanislaus, one; Siskiyou and Modoc, one; Trinity and Shasta, one; Monterey, one; San Benito, one; Santa Cruz, one; San Diego, one; San Francisco, as at present districted, twenty; San Mateo, one; San Joaquin, two; San Luis Obispo, one; Santa Clara, three; Solano, two; Yolo, one; Sutter, one; Yuba, one; Nevada, two; Nevada and Sierra, one; Sacramento, three; Placer, one; Ventura, one."

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I have made that apportionment as nearly equal as I possibly could from the official returns in the office of the Secretary of State of the votes cast at the Presidential election of eighteen hundred and seventy-six. The entire vote at that election was one hundred and fifty-two thousand eight hundred and three; divided by forty Senators, would make the number of votes to each Senator three thousand eight hundred and twenty; that divided by two would make the number of votes to each Assemblyman one thousand nine hundred and ten. Taking as an average four thousand for the Senator and two thousand for the Assemblyman, and approximating so as to bring the contiguous counties as near together as possible, and to equalize their representation, I have arrived at the apportionment which I have made. It increases the representation in some of the counties and decreases it in others, but it will be seen that it is not always possible to come to the exact fractions of figures in making an apportionment of this character. Wherever the fraction made enough more to give a Senator I have done it; and so with the Assemblymen. I would rather have had that apportionment referred to a committee, so that they could look over it, as I am satisfied it will stand the test of examination. I have placed a great deal of labor upon it, and I have brought to it conscientious labor. I will state that it may be supposed that I may be greatly influenced by my desire to see Los Angeles largely represented; but so as to let this Convention know that I have acted merely upon the figures, or what they would justify, I will state that Los Angeles polled six thousand six hundred and fifty-seven votes, which would entitle her to over three Assemblymen, and that is the same proportion that I have given to all the counties polling over six thousand votes. If this committee does not feel that it is possible to act upon that apportionment understandingly in Committee of the Whole, I would rather see the apportionment referred to the Committee on Legislative Department, so that they can examine it and return it to this Convention with their indorsement, for I feel sure that they will indorse it when they come to examine it in connection with the figures.

Now, sir, if this apportionment should be adopted every part of this State would be as nearly equally represented as it possibly could be. It has been objected on this floor that the returns of an election are not the proper basis upon which to make such an apportionment. I believe that the returns of a Presidential election, such as the last one we had, will give a fair representation of the population of the State. The vote was a full one, and I believe represents fully the entire population of this State. Now, as to the principle of accepting election returns, I have to quote here from a gentleman who has suggested the following argument: What is the purpose of apportionment? It is to fix the number of those who are the rulers of the State—who shall perform the duties of rulers in the Legislature. For example: not the number of electors in the population, but the electors to be the rulers. These only adopt laws in the Legislature; these only adopt or reject Constitutions; those only who are electors are or can be legislators. Now, the object is to fix the number of electors who can be sent by electors to pass laws.

I have nothing more to say upon this subject, Mr. Chairman, but this, that I believe that if this Convention will adopt that apportionment, it will satisfy this State, that we will save a great deal of discontent in those districts which are now inadequately represented, and that we should not delay for six years to do this act of justice.

MR. BARNES. How much do you increase the representation of the district you represent now?

MR. AYERS. I increase it from one Senator and two Assemblymen to two Senators and three Assemblymen.

MR. BARNES. Where do you get the increase from? Who do you take it from? You do not take any from San Francisco.

MR. AYERS. Because you have a vote which entitles you to that.

MR. BARNES. What part of the State do you take the members from that you add to your district? I suppose you know.

MR. AYERS. You will see by comparing. It comes from various portions of the State.

MR. BARNES. When I find that out I want to sound the alarm for the plundered districts. I understand Tulare will be shouting here in a minute. [Laughter.]

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: I am astonished that gentlemen speak of my shouting. The members sometimes find it so difficult to hear me that they shout "louder, louder." That I take more as a matter of applause than otherwise. [Laughter.] But in the present case I was anxious to say a few words when Mr. Van Dyke ruled me off the floor. I thought the Chair did or I would not have taken my seat. The cry of the gentleman from Los Angeles is justice and equal apportionment. Now, sir, we find that there is an unjust apportionment, and any member that by any amendment whatever will meet this I am satisfied will answer a great purpose. It is a consummation much to be desired. I am convinced that this matter of injustice has been continued long enough, that the people for a length of time, in different portions of this State, as well as the portion that I represent, have been anxious that they should be fairly represented in the halls of legislation; but, Mr. Chairman, it has unfortunately been that they have not. I am opposed to this thing being delayed until eighteen hundred and eighty-two, eighteen hundred and eighty-three, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, eighteen hundred and eighty-five, or eighteen hundred and eighty-six. But if a measure comes up purporting to remedy this evil, and it does not reach it, only in assertions, I will certainly oppose such, and I will point out the objections—where it does not reach the point. Now, I am convinced that San Francisco probably has over its proportion. It has three or four times as many in proportion to its number of inhabitants as the county that I represent. I was on the floor attempting to show before this house that there are counties here not fairly represented. I had better read this. The gentleman said yesterday: "Los Angeles has one representative to two thousand two hundred and nineteen votes; San Francisco, one to one thousand three hundred votes; Santa Clara, one to one thousand two hundred and eighty votes; Nevada, one to one thousand and fifty-one votes; Amador, one to eight hundred and twenty-nine votes."

Now, sir, Tulare County has nearly three thousand votes, or had in eighteen hundred and seventy-six, and yet has but one representative in the Assembly on a population which is over twice as much as some of the counties spoken of. Tulare has complained of this thing. The remedy has not been reached. Now, if Mr. Ayers would reach this I would have no objection; I would be in favor of it; but he does not. Instead of reaching this evil, which is the greatest injustice that is on hand, so far as investigation goes, for there is not another case in which a county has had so small a representation in proportion to its large population—if it would reach this, I would not object; but when the gentleman gets up and urges definitely that it will answer every thing in the line of justice, I must state here that he has accomplished nothing. He has given just the same as existed before. The great evil that has been complained of, and known of, and understood for years, is not reached.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise and report back section six, and the pending amendments, to the Convention, with the recommendation that they be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department. I believe that in an hour they can adjust it to suit everybody.

MR. EDGERTON. I hope not.

The motion was lost, on division, by a vote of 35 ayes to 59 noes.

MR. DUDLEY. Mr. Chairman: I never heard of representation being based upon the result of a popular vote before. Can the gentleman tell me that he ever heard of an instance before? And as this matter was very fully discussed yesterday, I now move the previous question.

Messrs. Hitchcock, Crouch, and Hale seconded the motion.

The main question was ordered.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. Chairman: I ask leave to say a few words for the benefit of the Los Angeles delegation.

[Cries of "Read the amendment!"]

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add after the word 'made,' in the nineteenth line, the following: The apportionment of the State for legislative representatives shall be made, namely:

"Senatorial Apportionment.

"First District—San Diego and San Bernardino, one Senator.
"Second District—Los Angeles, two Senators.
"Third District—San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, and Ventura, one Senator.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected, on a division, by a vote of 34 ayes to 68 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Terry. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six, as follows: First, strike out the word 'thirty,' in second line, and insert 'forty;' second, strike out all of said section, after the word 'made,' in the nineteenth line, and insert 'the apportionment now provided by law shall continue in force.'"

Adopted.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I give notice that I will move to reconsider that vote to-morrow.

LIMITING REPRESENTATION.

MR. FILCHER. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in the sixteenth line, after the word 'be,' the words: 'Provided, however, that no one county shall have a greater representation in the Senate than one fifth of the Senators.'"

MR. HALE. I second the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I believe, sir, something covering this idea is necessary in a State situated as we are here in California. The object of this amendment is not to deprive San Francisco of representation sufficient for her protection, assuming that she bases protection on the strength of her representation, but, sir, it is to protect, mutually, San Francisco against the interior, and the interior, on the other hand, against San Francisco. Now, sir, we can easily see that a great commercial center such as San Francisco is or may be, might in the future years contain a majority of the State of California, and under such circumstances would necessarily have a majority of both branches of the Legislature, and under such circumstances we can readily see, without argument, what the consequences might be. Not only might she impose upon the country, but she might impose damnation on San Francisco herself, for I assert that past experience has proven that the very representatives of San Francisco have proved her worst enemies. San Francisco has been here praying the members from the interior to save her more than once, and frequently has she been saved and evils of the worst character averted from her by the votes of the country members. I would give to San Francisco, or any other great commercial center, her just proportion of members of the house on her population. If it was a majority, let her have a majority of the Assembly; if two thirds, even, let her have it in that house; and in that house she would be able to protect herself against any imposition that perhaps the interior might see fit to practice upon her. On the other hand, the interior would always be protected by holding four fifths of the Senate. Therefore, measures emanating from San Francisco directly in the interests of the commercial center, and directly opposed to the interests of the interior, might be knocked in the head. The Senate would stand, as it should stand, a conservative body, calculated in its very nature to protect not alone the interior, but the whole State, from any scheme. The very theory and basis of our representative Senate is that it should be conservative in its nature, and yet it is plain that no conservatism can come from selfish motives. Several of the States, I understand, including Illinois, New York, and Pennsylvania—States which have within their limits large commercial centers, as, for instance, Chicago in Illinois, New York City in the State of New York, Philadelphia in the State of Pennsylvania—have been compelled to move in this direction to protect the whole commonwealth against the prominent influence of these cities. While the people of the interior have been apprehensive of it, they have never made any grievous complaint; yet they are apprehensive, in view of the rapidity with which San Francisco is growing in importance, that in the near future San Francisco will possess a majority of the population of this coast, and in such an event gentlemen will agree with me that the Legislature might be perhaps robbed of its conservatism and wisdom. The idea is this, that while the lower branch of the Legislature shall contain forever a representation in proportion to population, it shall nevertheless be provided that not in any event shall any one county have more than one fifth of the members of the Senate.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: I really do not know of what kind of material the people of Placer County are composed, but I had supposed that they were all citizens of the United States, and citizens of the State of California. I had supposed that they were men and women and children made in the same way and possessing the same natural and legal rights we do, not by any machine process where they can accumulate much more rapidly than elsewhere; but I am informed by my distinguished friend from Placer, that unless they have some means whereby Placer County can represent its deserted mining pits, by representation in the Senate, that they lose the balance of power in the legislative department of the government. Sir, for one, and I speak my own sentiments alone, I ask no favors for San Francisco. She is not here to ask them. We ask nothing from this Constitutional Convention that she is not entitled to. San Francisco is a part of this State. She is entitled to the same consideration on this floor as any other part of the State, and no more. She is entitled to the same consideration because she is a part of the same people, and the people of the mountain districts and the valleys ought to be proud of her. She is one of the great commercial marts of the world. The great interests of this commonwealth center there, and she is entitled to the same representation, by every principle of representative government, in every department of the State, that the mountain counties are, and no more.

The floating population cannot vote unless they remain a certain length of time; and if they float down there from the mountains, out of respect for the mountain districts, they ought to be allowed to vote if they have been there long enough. The illustration of the gentleman from Placer was a very unfortunate one. In Pennsylvania it is expressly provided that the State shall be divided into fifty Senatorial districts, as nearly equal in population as may be. In the State of New York, the City of New York never did have one fifth, certainly not more than one fifth, if as much. There is over four millions of population in the State of New York, and the City of New York has only about one million. So far as Illinois is concerned, I have not had an opportunity to examine the Constitution in that regard. But there is one proposition that is certain, and that is, that in a republican form of government, the right of representation is the most sacred right of the people, and that right rests upon population. To say that San Francisco shall be entitled to only one fifth of the number of Senators, when she has a greater population, would be to say that the people of San Francisco, the principal interests of San Francisco, the intelligence of San Francisco, the manufacturing interests of that part of the State, and the commercial interests of San Francisco, were not entitled to the same protection as like interests receive elsewhere throughout the State. I cannot conceive that any considerable number of gentlemen on this floor will sustain any such proposition. I took occasion the other day to say that if such a proposition was inserted in the Constitution, that I felt sure—and I speak of it kindly—that the Constitution containing such a proposition would not receive a handful of votes. I see that the papers of San Francisco already have taken up that subject and have discussed it.

MR. FILCHER. Allow me to read the provision of the Constitution of Pennsylvania. Section seventeen, of article two, reads:

"Every county containing five ratios or more shall have one representative for every full ratio. Every city containing a population equal to a ratio shall elect separately its proportion of the representation allotted to the county in which it is located. Every city entitled to more than four representatives, and every county having over one hundred thousand inhabitants, shall be divided into districts of compact and contiguous territory, each district to elect its proportion of representatives according to population; but no district shall elect more than four representatives."

MR. ESTEE. That is so. That does not answer the question at all. I still repeat—and if Judge Hager will read it he will find it so—that the representation in Pennsylvania is according to population, and it is divided just as I stated. I have but one word more to say, and that is this: that I cannot imagine why one section of the State, on any principle of government, should not be entitled to the same representation as any other section, and I warn the gentleman from Placer, if he undertakes to inflict such a penalty for the growth of a city, that the penalty will not be endured. I warn him that the people of this State—one portion of this State—claim to be the equals of the people of any other portion of the State. That equality must be represented in the Legislature of the State.

MR. FILCHER. I simply want to know the objection. You have your full representation in the house. You want to impose upon us——

MR. ESTEE. That is what you want. Is it imposing on Placer County to give San Francisco her just representation? The gentleman is unfortunately living in a small county.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I regret, sir, that San Francisco should be brought up here in this debate, as if it was necessary to refer to San Francisco in order to settle the justice or equity of this controversy. What has that to do with it? It reminds me of the old times when San Francisco was the subject of a great many debates that occurred in the Legislature. I have never discovered from experience that San Francisco was indebted to the country for its preservation. I admit that San Francisco has been sometimes badly represented in the Legislature, but I assert also that the country has been quite as badly represented. Some of the most odious laws that have ever been imposed upon San Francisco have been passed by the country members against the protest of the delegation from San Francisco. The Second street cut—look at that! It stands there staring you in the face. It was forced upon us against the protest of the San Francisco delegation in the Senate.

MR. EDGERTON. No, sir.

MR. HAGER. I know that I was against it; I know that it was imposed upon us——

MR. HALE. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question? Will you please state the vote cast from San Francisco in the two houses on that measure?

MR. HAGER. I say that if it had not been for the country members that law would never have passed, because San Francisco did not have representation enough to pass the bill, if they were disposed to, without the votes of the country. Without the votes of the country it never would have passed at all. But there it stands to-day, a disgrace to the Legislature, a disgrace to the State, a disgrace to the city—that Second street cut. I deny that the City of San Francisco is indebted to the country for her preservation. There may be bad men in the City of San Francisco, and perhaps there are a great many bad men in the balance of the State. We are here for the purpose of adopting a Constitution to be recommended to the people of the State of California, that will be just in all its provisions, and in all its parts; and I hope I will never narrow my mind to so low a plane that I cannot hear the call for justice of every portion of the State of California, and I hope to be the last to make any invidious distinction between one portion of the State and another. Suppose San Francisco contained a million inhabitants; whose fault is that? Has not the member from Placer an equal right to go there with his household gods and make that his home? Is not San Francisco open for all? Why not leave your mountain homes if you do not like them? I once lived in the mountains and I was just as happy there, and if it was my desire I would go back there again. But that has very little to do with this question. I have contended that the proper manner of arranging the basis of representation is that which is contained in the Constitutions of the States of Pennsylvania, Missouri, and others, upon a ratio of population. Let there be a Senatorial ratio, and if there is a number of Assemblymen to be elected let there be an Assembly ratio. Suppose our State is composed of eight hundred thousand inhabitants, and you have forty Senators. Divide the eight hundred thousand by forty and you have the ratio for districts, and divide the State into forty Senatorial districts, the ratio would be twenty thousand. Is not that right? Now in reference to the Assembly. Suppose there are eight hundred thousand, and you want eighty Assemblymen; divide the State into eighty Assembly districts. In that way you have ten thousand as the ratio of Assemblymen. But we are told San Francisco will get an undue proportion—undue in proportion to population—because there are Chinese. Exclude the Chinese. I do not object to that. But if you cannot assail the proposition on the ground of justice and equality, why not adopt it? Now, the rule in Pennsylvania is as I have stated, and the quotation of the gentleman from Placer is not to the point. In the sixteenth section of article two, it is provided that "the Senatorial ratio shall be ascertained by dividing the whole population of the State by the number fifty." Now, their Senate is composed of fifty; the House of Representatives, two hundred. Now, if eighty Assemblymen are not enough for the State of California, to satisfy every man, then it is proper to increase the number, if you see fit, to one hundred, or two hundred, that every man may have a representation there. I do not object to that. If the number is too small to give a fair representation, make it one hundred, two hundred—anything you choose; but base it upon some fair principle, and then I will vote for it. I will give every county in the State a representative, but increase your number of Assemblymen so that you can make every county entitled to a representative. Now, the gentleman read this from the Constitution of Pennsylvania:

"Every city entitled to more than four representatives, and every county having over one hundred thousand inhabitants, shall be divided into districts of compact and contiguous territory, each district to elect its proportion of representatives according to population; but no district shall elect more than four representatives."

It does not deprive the City of Philadelphia, or any other city, of its just proportion of representation in the Legislature. No man can get up here and advocate the proposition that because a county contained a large number of inhabitants her representation must be cut down, on any just principle, unless he violates what I have recognized as a fundamental principle of constitutional law, that taxation and representation shall go together. If you want to deprive San Francisco of her just representation here reduce her taxation in proportion, and then it would not be so bad. But you levy upon us nearly one half of the taxes of the State, and now say we ought not to have a fair representation in the Legislature under the Constitution.

MR. PORTER. Does not that Constitution of Pennsylvania restrict the number of Senators in any one city to one sixth of all the Senators?

MR. HAGER. If it is there I have not seen it. If the gentleman can find it there he is at liberty to do so.

MR. ESTEE. There is nothing of the kind there.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I was going to ask how many amendments are pending now?

THE CHAIRMAN. One, at present.

MR. HAGER. Then I offer this as a substitute for section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial districts of compact and contiguous territory, as nearly equal in population as may be, and each district shall be entitled to elect one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered consecutively from one to forty, commencing at the northern and ending at the southern boundary of the State. In forming such districts no county shall be divided unless entitled to two or more Senators; nor shall a part of any county be united with any other county in forming a district. The Senatorial ratio of representation shall be ascertained by dividing the whole population of the State by the number forty. The members of the Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties on a ratio obtained by dividing the population of the State by eighty. Every county containing a population equal to one or more ratios shall elect separately its proportion of the Assemblymen allotted to such county, as may be provided by law. The Legislature at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, and thereafter after each United States decennial census shall have been ascertained, shall apportion the State into Senatorial and Assembly districts, in conformity with the provisions of this section. Until such apportionment shall be made forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen, to constitute the first Legislature under this Constitution, shall be elected as now provided by law. After the United States census of the year eighteen hundred and ninety shall be ascertained, the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, may increase the Senatorial districts and the number of Senators to fifty, and the members of the Assembly to one hundred."

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I think that is just to the whole State. If any gentleman will put in an amendment that aliens shall not be classed as population I will accept it.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: We, of Oakland, are not at all jealous of San Francisco, because we calculate, in a few years, that we will have more population than San Francisco, and we are afraid that this amendment will apply to Oakland; we shall oppose it for that reason. But, really, I again warn the delegates in this Convention, that if they want to have this Constitution adopted, not to attempt to depart from the plan of representation based upon population, because it must be apparent to all that if you change that rule which has been in vogue for years you will defeat the Constitution.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: I call attention to section six, of article four, of the Constitution of Illinois. It says:

"SEC. 6. The General Assembly shall apportion the State every ten years, beginning with the year eighteen hundred and seventy-one, by dividing the population of the State, as ascertained by the Federal census, by the number fifty-one, and the quotient shall be the ratio of representation in the Senate. The State shall be divided into fifty-one Senatorial districts, each of which shall elect one Senator, whose term of office shall be four years."

Sections seven and eight provide for minority representation. That is only a limitation as to the size of the district. And I challenge any gentleman to find any State where the people of any locality is not the ratio upon which the representation is based.

MR. EDGERTON. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that in the Senate of the United States each State has but two Senators, no matter whether it has got a hundred thousand or a million population.

MR. ESTEE. That represents State sovereignty; I do not know of such a thing as county sovereignty.

REMARKS OF MR. EDGERTON.

MR. EDGERTON. And the thing is that it was designed as a check upon the popular branch. I do not believe that the Senate should be upon the basis of population at all. It should be so constituted as to operate as a check upon the popular branch. The gentleman from Alameda warns this body——

MR. VAN DYKE. Does the gentleman suppose that if we attempt to deprive the people of that city of their just representation that they will vote for this Constitution?

MR. EDGERTON. I am now talking of the principle of justice, and making a good Constitution, which, I suppose, animates the breast of every gentleman in this Convention. Now, as to San Francisco and the injuries that city has suffered on account of the country members, I have this to say: there never has been a time in the history of the legislation of this State, so far as I know anything about it, and I have been there two or three times, when the delegation from that city could agree upon anything at all, and the more numerous their representation has been the greater has been the conflict. They have got one third of the Senate.

MR. ESTEE. One fourth.

MR. EDGERTON. Well, one quarter, then. They never agree upon a proposition, hardly, and no country member can really tell what the interests of that city require, and they have to guess at it; they have to go in and combine with one party or the other as to some measures which they have.

MR. AYERS. Is it not a fact that the country members, as they are termed, have frequently come in to save San Francisco?

MR. EDGERTON. I was going to say that San Francisco has been saved time and time again, and the city members have acknowledged, over and over again, that, but for the interposition of the country delegations, San Francisco would have been sacrificed. I do not recollect the year that the bill for the Second street cut went through. While Judge Hager was addressing the Convention I was under the impression that a large majority of the San Francisco delegation, in both bodies, supported that measure. I know, at all events, that a large number of the people of San Francisco were here in these lobbies and endeavoring to get votes for that measure from the country delegations.

MR. BARNES. Do you remember what the political complexion of that delegation was?

MR. EDGERTON. My impression is that it was Democratic. I have had nothing to do with politics for the last ten years, and cannot say positively.

MR. AYERS. Does the gentleman recollect how the San Francisco delegation stood on the bulkhead bill.

MR. EDGERTON. Almost unanimously. Mr. Page, in the Senate, and one or two others, opposed it. Now, Mr. Chairman, it is a little invidious to talk about legislative iniquities. I do not believe in three quarters of them, as I had occasion to say the other day, but I believe that it would be safe to say that five sixths or perhaps nine tenths of the iniquity done in the Legislature comes from the City of San Francisco, and is supported by the people living in that city and county. And now, sir, theoretically, upon this question of the constitution of the Senate, it seems to me that it should be so constituted as to form a check upon the popular branch. I think four or five members from San Francisco could represent San Francisco in the Senate as well as forty. There would be a greater unanimity in the delegation, and the interests of the city, so far as that body is concerned, would be better represented than it is with the quarter of that body, as it is now. I would like to hear the amendment of the gentleman from Placer read once more.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to this amendment of the gentleman from Placer, because it is a violation of principle, and one which I consider to be gross. You cannot go and say to the population of any county, you shall not have representation according to your population, because your population is large. That may be a reason for changing the form of the government, but it has no application upon principle to apportionment. It is grossly improper. Now, suppose they did have a large Senatorial representation in San Francisco, what of it? They pay taxes there in proportion and they have rights in proportion, and especially they have the right of political justice.

Now, sir, I am opposed to cutting down the Senate. I would be in favor of the proposition of my colleague from Los Angeles, to increase the Senate wherever it is necessary to destroy the present gross injustice and inequalities where they exist. I am opposed to a small Senate, for the reason that we know, in this State, that all the attacks upon the integrity of the Legislature have been made by the corporations in the Senate. They have left the House and have gone to the Senate, because they say the Senate being a smaller body does not require so large an investment. I am in favor of a proportionate representation in the House according to population.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. Chairman: The argument used by the gentleman in support of this proposition, seems to be inconsistent with the argument that was used in relation to the Railroad Commissioners.

MR. HOWARD. I do not know that I am under obligation to look after the logic of the gentleman from some place.

MR. HUESTIS. I called attention to it, and I would like to have it explained.

MR. HOWARD. I am not under obligation to explain anything. What I say is, that it is not sound policy to reduce the Senate. If you reduce the number in San Francisco, why, doesn't it reduce the Senate? I do not know that it would be any safer in Placer or in Los Angeles than in San Francisco. All I say in relation to Los Angeles is this, that you have not done justice to Los Angeles.

MR. EDGERTON. I was in the Legislature when this present apportionment was made, and the delegation from Los Angeles cordially and unanimously assented to it. It is based upon the census of eighteen hundred and seventy—the only practical basis that could be taken—and they agreed to it as a just basis of apportionment, and if there is any injustice, it is that injustice which has come from changes of population, etc., and which other sections of the State probably feel as much as Los Angeles.

MR. HOWARD. Does it follow that because a county grows that the apportionment, without regard to the increase of population, is to be adhered to?

MR. EDGERTON. That is not my position. What I say is, that Los Angeles has nothing more to complain of than some other counties, and that it is unwise to attempt to tinker it up here on the basis of a popular vote. I am in favor of waiting until eighteen hundred and eighty, when another census will be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States.

MR. HOWARD. It cannot be unjust to do it according to a popular vote, because it will apply as well to one county as another, where there has been a growth and an increase of population. Everybody knows that the United States census, so far as an enumeration is concerned, is a delusion.

MR. EDGERTON. Could that be any greater delusion than the popular vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six?

MR. HOWARD. Yes. I will tell the gentleman why. Because, in a general election, the voters are all brought out, and it is a fairer index than any census taken by the United States Government. The census takers are poorly paid, and everybody knows that the census is not just nor truthful.

MR. EDGERTON. Then the gentleman would base the representation upon the vote rather than upon population.

MR. HOWARD. I say that the vote is a truer test even than the census of the United States.

MR. EDGERTON. Upon what basis?

MR. HOWARD. Upon the basis that the people come out and vote, and that the census taker does not get all the names.

MR. EDGERTON. Does not the gentleman know that in one county the voting population is most all the population there is in it—that it does not number any women and children? That rule would operate the greatest kind of injustice to Los Angeles.

MR. HOWARD. I do not know any such thing.

MR. EDGERTON. Everybody else knows it.

MR. HOWARD. In some counties there may be a larger male than female population; but it is not very few. I say that the vote, at the Presidential election, is a truer test of the actual population than the census taken, in the bungling way in which the census of the United States is taken by the Marshals. There is a gentleman in this Convention from one of the counties above here, who says that the census taker who had been appointed, came to him and asked him to write it up for him: that there was not enough pay in it for him to go around and take the names. He wrote it up, and the result was that it was the best taken census in the State. Now, what confidence is there in any such census as that? It is notorious that the census of the United States as to population, is totally unreliable, and I say, therefore, it is true that the popular vote at the Presidential election is a better test than the United States census.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

The motion was seconded by Messrs. Hunter, Tully, O'Donnell, and Laine.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The main question has been ordered. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher.

The amendment was rejected by a vote of 48 ayes to 64 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six as follows: Strike out all after the word 'no,' at the end of line sixteen, and before the word 'shall,' in line eighteen, and insert the word 'alien.'"

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. I offered that for the purpose of avoiding the mistake that we are falling into here. It reads now: "But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district." Now I propose to make it read this way: "But in making such adjustment, no alien shall be counted as forming the population of any district."

Now, I do not mean this as any particular point against aliens, and I am also in favor of excluding Chinese. I am opposed to enumerating Chinamen in adjusting the representation of the State. Certain portions of our State are too easy of access to Hongkong. This section, if adopted, provides that the census, taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the legislative districts. Now, if I am correct, the census of the United States never affords any information as to whom are eligible to become citizens of the United States. I do not think it gives the race. It may give the nationality of aliens, but there are white men born in China that are certainly eligible to become citizens of the United States. Now, I think the safest plan is the one I offer, because we have but very few aliens in this State excepting Chinamen, and the census of the United States shows just how many aliens there are, and I first thought of making my amendment so as to allow those who had declared their intentions to become citizens of the United States, to be enumerated, but I believe the census of the United States does not afford any information upon that point. Therefore, if we make it aliens—simply enumerate citizens of the United States who are residents of the United States. I think it will be the best and the fairest apportionment, provided we wish to exclude Chinamen, although I do not intend to class all other aliens with Chinamen. It seems to me that this is the only way we can strike at them.

REMARKS OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: The objection to the proposition is, that it would exclude not only all those who have declared their intentions to become citizens, but it would exclude the families of many citizens. For instance, a man arrives here and becomes a citizen of the United States: his children, born in the United States, are aliens until they become twenty-one years of age, and all of the families are aliens. You exclude the families of those who have actually become citizens. I suppose the object was to reach that class of people who are not permanent residents—who form no part of the permanent population. They are here to-day, and there to-morrow; but it is a sort of floating population that ought to be reckoned in. That, I presume, is all that was intended by this amendment.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: It appears to me these aliens are considered a portion of the population of the State. I see there is a great deal of contention here among the country members, and they get up here and state that San Francisco has more than her portion of representation. I say that is false. She pays more than one half of the taxes, and she has got nearly one half of the population, and she has only one quarter of the representation in the State. You know that to be a fact. Why do you get up here and say that we have got more than our portion of representation? The population of San Francisco is nearly three hundred thousand. The population of the State is seven hundred thousand, nearly. We pay more than half the taxes of the State. San Francisco is the most troubled city in the world. The country drives their paupers upon us; we take care of their paupers. Talk about San Francisco having more than her portion of representation!

MR. INMAN. Paupers are not before the house. I hope the gentleman will confine himself to the subject.

MR. O'DONNELL. What is the subject? I guess you don't know, yourself. Aliens, I am referring to—most of them are paupers.

MR. ROLFE. As I supposed this had been an oversight and would be corrected—as I understand from the explanation of the Chairman of the Committee on Legislative Department—and they understand it to be correct as it is, with the permission of the committee I will withdraw my amendment.

No objection was made, and the amendment was withdrawn.

MR. BARNES. I desire to offer a substitute for the section as recommended by the committee.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute for section six the following:

"The number of Senators and members of the Assembly shall be fixed by the Legislature, and apportioned among the several counties and districts to be established by law, according to the number of inhabitants. The number of members of the Assembly shall not be less than eighty, and until the Legislature shall otherwise direct, the number of Assemblymen shall be eighty, and the number of Senators forty. And the apportionment of representation and the apportionment of districts shall be as now provided by law. The enumeration of the inhabitants of this State shall be taken under the direction of the Legislature in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, and at the end of every ten years thereafter; and these enumerations, together with the census that may be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, and every subsequent ten years, shall serve as the basis of representation in both houses of the Legislature."

MR. BEERSTECHER. I second the amendment. I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was lost.

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to the provision in the Constitution allowing the Legislature any discretion to increase the members of the Senate and Assembly beyond that fixed in the old Constitution. The old Constitution provided that at the first election there should be sixteen Senators, and that after the population of the State should reach one hundred thousand then at such ratio that the whole number of members of the Assembly should never be less than thirty nor more than eighty. The first Legislature, at one rush, carried it up to the maximum. Perhaps it was justifiable, but I recollect that there were many taxpayers who thought that the Legislature was a little rash in increasing it at once to the maximum. There are certain considerations why we should be careful in inserting such a provision as that in the Constitution. A great many members of the Legislature are candidates for reëlection to that office, and there are some who would be willing to seize upon any opportunity to increase the number of representatives, in order to increase their own chances of being returned. It carries with it a change of district which may, in many instances, be very agreeable to their aspirations.

Now, it is said that this is a great State, and we contemplate a very great increase of population. It is a great State, but not comparatively so. The State of California to-day, although she has been in the Union twenty-nine years, is, comparatively—speaking of the white population—rather a small State. There are fifteen States in the Union with over a million inhabitants, and according to the census we stand the twenty-fourth State in the Union. Our increase has not been very rapid; considering the richness of its mines and its agricultural interests, I am compelled to say that California is not, comparatively, a large State. There is nothing in the future that naturally, for the next twenty-five years, calls for this elasticity, as some term it, in the Constitution. Now you will observe, by looking over the Constitutions of various States, that generally a Constitutional Convention is called as often as about once in twenty-five or thirty years. For the most part, necessary amendments are reached through the Legislature, and the people ratify their action in case of necessity. Something has been said here about the vote being an evidence of population. I will read from the statistics to show what the vote has been, beginning with eighteen hundred and sixty. In eighteen hundred and sixty the total vote cast for President in this State was one hundred and eighteen thousand eight hundred and forty. Gentlemen will bear in mind that at that time the colored population of the State had no vote. In eighteen hundred and sixty-four, the total vote was one hundred and five thousand nine hundred and seventy-five; in eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, one hundred and eight thousand six hundred and sixty; in eighteen hundred and seventy-two, ninety-five thousand eight hundred and six; and in eighteen hundred and seventy-six, the total vote was one hundred and fifty-five thousand eight hundred. Now we see by going back to eighteen hundred and sixty there was no great increase of votes, and when you look at it closely you will find that it will not be imperatively necessary to increase the representation either in the Senate or Assembly. We do not increase as fast as some of the northwestern States. The State of Wisconsin, two years older than California, has a million and a quarter of inhabitants to-day, and it is estimated that we have eight hundred thousand. The State of Minnesota, that has a snow bank six months in the year, to-day is not a great ways behind California. Tracing the history of the State back twenty-nine years, and looking forward, gentlemen, I do not think that it looks reasonable that there would be any need of placing this elasticity in the Constitution to increase the representation in either house.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The Convention then took the usual recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M.

President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

Mr. John J. Kenny, duly elected as a delegate to fill vacancy from San Francisco, after taking and subscribing to the usual oath of office, took his seat as a member of the Convention.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. TERRY. I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. LAINE. On that amendment I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Evey, Hager, Van Dyke, and Heiskell.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

ORGANIZATION—RULES, ETC.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 7. Each house shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there is no amendment, the Secretary will read section eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 8. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no amendments, the Secretary will read section nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 9. Each house shall determine the rule of its own proceeding, and may, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no amendments, the Secretary will read section ten.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 10. Each house shall keep a Journal of its own proceedings, and publish the same, and the yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall, at the desire of any three members present, be entered on the Journal.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I move to add the following.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the section: 'Any member may dissent from and protest against any act or resolution which he thinks injurious to the public or to any individual, and may have such protest and his reasons therefor, without alteration, commitment, or delay, entered on the Journal.'"

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: There is no such provision found anywhere in the report of the committee, and in order to save any question that might arise in the course of the deliberations of the Legislature as to the right of a member to have his protest entered against any action which he deems injurious to the public or to any citizen, I offer this amendment so that there may be no doubt about it, provided such a provision should not happen to be inserted in the rules of the house. And for authority I will refer to the fact that this identical proposition is found in the Constitutions of fifteen States at the present time.

MR. LARKIN. I am opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman. It would make a very lengthy Journal if any member might enter a written protest to every measure which does not suit him. The rules of the house are a sufficient protection to the members, and it is unnecessary to be embodied in the Constitution.

MR. REYNOLDS. I will simply state this fact. The rules of the house do not sufficiently protect the members. The rules of the house simply provide that the member may protest, but not that he may spread it upon the Journal. And it so happens, sir, that at the last session but one there was a new Court created for the City and County of San Francisco—a Criminal Court. The Act was passed by both houses, and sent to the Governor for his signature. But it was passed and went to him in such a shape that he positively refused to sign it. It gave the most monstrous and exclusive jurisdiction in certain cases, and for that reason the Governor refused to sign it. By a joint resolution that bill was taken back, and it was then amended by the Clerk, and then, without ever having been repassed or sent to the other branch of the Legislature, it went to the Governor, amended by the Clerk, sufficiently to obviate the objections raised by the Governor, was signed by him, and became a law. And a member who knew all these facts, protested against the action of the house, but not having the privilege of putting that protest on the Journal, a record of it was never kept.

MR. EDGERTON. The gentleman will allow me to correct him. He is entirely mistaken in regard to that bill. That bill was passed at the unanimous request of the San Francisco delegation; and as to the error he alludes to, it was corrected by a joint resolution passed by a unanimous vote in both houses.

MR. REYNOLDS. I thank the gentleman for the correction, which is not a correction. The bill was brought back upon a joint resolution, but it was not corrected by a joint resolution. I had occasion to examine that record, and I know whereof I speak. The law creating the City Criminal Court never passed the Legislature. And that is the reason why there ought to be such a provision as this. It is a privilege that every member ought to have granted to him. Every member should have the privilege of showing on the Journal, if the house has acted contrary to law, doing an injury to the public or to some individual. These are reasons enough why the amendment should be adopted.

MR. LARKIN. My suggestion is that the rules of the house govern that matter. I am in favor of going still further, and providing that no bill shall become a law, unless passed by the ayes and noes, and that will indicate the vote of each member, and do away with the necessity of such a provision as this. I don't think any bill should become a law unless passed by the ayes and noes in each house. With that provision each member would be present and indicate his own vote.

MR. McCALLUM. I will ask the gentleman, Mr. Larkin, if he is not aware that in this report that is already provided for. More than that, it ought to be required to pass by a majority of all the members elected to each house. In the absence of the Chairman of the committee I have simply to say, with reference to this proposed amendment, that section corresponds with section ten of the present Constitution. The same line of argument which the gentleman has just made, was made use of in the committee, and we could not see any application of the amendment. I do not suppose the committee will change the section—I beg leave to correct myself—I thought Judge Terry had left. [Laughter.]

MR. ROLFE. I wish to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add the following: 'provided such protest shall not contain a stump speech.'" [Laughter.]

THE CHAIRMAN. Out of order. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no further amendments the Secretary will read the next section.

MEMBERS EXEMPT FROM ARREST.

THE SECRETARY read section eleven as follows:

SEC. 11. Members of the Legislature shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest, and shall not be subject to any civil process during the session of the Legislature, nor for fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no amendments the Secretary will read the next section.

FILLING VACANCIES.

THE SECRETARY read section twelve as follows:

SEC. 12. When a vacancy occurs in either house, from any cause, during the session of the Legislature, the house in which said vacancy occurs shall proceed immediately to elect, from the constituency deprived of representation, a member to fill said vacancy for said session. If the Legislature is not in session at the time the vacancy occurs, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancy.

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. I move to strike out section twelve, and insert the section of the old Constitution.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 12. When vacancies occur in either house, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of the Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies."

MR. DUDLEY. That, Mr. Chairman, is the old Constitution. I move to strike out the section reported by the committee. I am not in favor of placing any such power in either house.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: With all deference to the gentleman, I think, in view of the experience of California, there is merit in section twelve. We had here—only during the last session, I believe—during the sitting of the Legislature, certainly four, and I am not sure but five deaths, and to fill one or two of these vacancies—three of them, I believe—special elections were called at great cost to the people of these counties. Indeed, sir, the cost was so great that there was a desire on the part of the people to evade the responsibility; and in the case, I believe, of Amador County, left without representation, the Governor, in deference to the will of the people, and the expressed wishes of the people of that county, took it upon himself to violate the plain letter of the Constitution. And yet there was no serious complaint. He did so, and was almost unanimously justified. Now, to meet a contingency of that kind, this new section to the Constitution is proposed. If a death occurs a few days before the close of the session, I contend there is no alternative for the Governor, if he is to strictly conform to his oath, but to issue an election proclamation. And since these things are liable to occur; since we have had expressions from the people that they would rather temporarily forego representation than to have this extra expense heaped upon them—I say it becomes us to insert that clause. The committee refused to give that power to the Legislature in all cases. It is only in cases of urgency or necessity. They may act on petitions in making these selections. The Legislature, in calling this Convention, no doubt acted upon their own experience, when they provided that the Convention should fill vacancies. They were no doubt induced to do so from the result of experience, and the complaints arising from former actions. Now, sir, it is in deference to that sentiment, so clearly expressed, that this amendment is offered. Has that privilege been abused in any case by this body? Is there any evidence that we have abused the privilege? Is there any evidence that the gentleman chosen to fill the seat of Mr. Strong was not a fit representative—a satisfactory representative—to his constituency? Is there any evidence that the gentleman from Alameda is not a satisfactory representative to the people? Have there been any complaints here from the people that they would rather have had the power of choosing for themselves? And yet all these vacancies were filled under the same rule which we here provide for the Legislature. I ask, in the case of Mr. Strong and Mr. Kenny, would it have been wise to send back to their counties and impose the expense of a special election, for the short time yet remaining of the session? I say, sir, that the people will indorse the proposition, especially those who have had experience with special elections. I hope, in defense of this section, that the representatives from Santa Clara, and Alameda, and Amador, will rise and inform the Convention as to the sentiment of the people on this matter.

MR. WEST. If a vacancy is filled by the Senate, will the candidate so elected remain and fill the unexpired term, or only during the session during which he was elected?

MR. FILCHER. Under that provision, he will fill the position during the entire term. I would have no objection, so far as I am concerned, to an amendment providing that he should only hold for the remainder of the session. I find it so provides here, upon closer examination. It is plain. The primary object of the amendment is simply this: to save money; to economize, and at the same time without restricting unnecessarily the rights and privileges of the people. The right of the people to be provided with representation is provided for better than in the old section. In case a member dies two weeks before the session closes, you can see how utterly impossible it would be to have an election; and yet, by this means, it is possible for them to have a representative on the floor the very next day, and it would be the duty of the Legislature to fill the vacancy at once.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. I hope the amendment will prevail. I believe the Legislature entirely incompetent, as this Convention is, however able they may be, to judge of other matters, to elect a member to a deliberative body, to represent a constituency of whose wants they are entirely ignorant. I believe the people of the counties would be better off without any representative until the next election, if there is not time to call a special election. They had better spend the time and money necessary to an election than to have the vacancy filled by some political hack belonging to the dominant party, who could get in no other way. I hope the amendment will prevail, and that the people will have the power to elect their members to both houses of the Legislature under all circumstances.

REMARKS OF MR. HEISKELL.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. Chairman: I regret exceedingly to have to differ with the committee, but I hope the substitute will prevail. It is, in my opinion, a blow at the representative character of our government, to which I cannot consent. There is no certainty that the people will be represented when a vacancy is filled by the Legislature, and to be misrepresented is far worse than to be unrepresented.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me, sir, if there is any branch of the government in which the people ought to be directly interested by their votes, it is in the Legislative Department. That is the true idea of popular government. Now, we have known cases where such rules prevailed—that, for instance, where the Democratic party is in the minority in a particular district to be represented, the House or Senate has elected a man to fill that place from the minority party, contrary to the wishes of a majority of the people of that district. And it is equally true, in cases where the Republican party happens to be in the minority, that the House, if a vacancy occurs in that particular district, will do the same thing, if it happens to have the power. I think it is much better to leave them vacant than to fill these seats with persons who do not represent the people, and that very frequently occurs under such a rule as this proposed by the committee. Now, the amendment that is offered is the same provision as in the old Constitution. And, sir, it is a very proper provision, in my judgment, to have members elected by the people whom they are to represent, and only by such men as they may elect. Now, the gentleman from Placer raises a question. He compares the filling of a vacancy in this body to that of filling a vacancy in the Legislature. This body has elected a man who has been rejected by the people whom he attempted to represent, and rejected a man who was the choice of the people. I will further inform him that we did our best to elect a man who would properly represent the people. As to the question of expense, I will say, so far as I am concerned, that I do not deem that of so much importance as it is to have the principles of our government sustained. Let us establish the right principle of representative government here, and let us stand by those principles. The people are in favor of economy, but a representative government costs something. The fact that it costs something ought not to deter us. We can afford to pay something, in order to sustain those principles. That is why Legislatures and Conventions are organized. I am in favor of the amendment. I believe in having this in the new Constitution exactly as it is in the old.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me, sir, that we are making an innovation, the end of which no man can tell. It appears to me that in the report of the committee the principles of republican government have been departed from. Now, for instance, suppose the majority of the members of the Legislature to be Republican, or a majority Democratic, it is to be supposed at once that the body has full power, and would exercise that power, to elect a man of the political sentiment which the majority thought right. And in this way a Republican county or Senatorial district might be deprived of its choice of a man of the political sentiment which it approved. Now that would certainly be improper. It is certainly an aggression upon American liberty, and ought not to be tolerated. We should look at this thing as it is. As to a few dollars and cents coming into consideration, it ought not to be mentioned. What if it does cost a few dollars, the people will elect their own men to represent their wishes, wants, and sentiments. I say this section is contrary to the spirit of republican government. With due respect to the committee, it is contrary to everything we have been taught to believe is right. It is wrong to deprive the people of a representation, and it is wrong to force a man upon them that they do not want. I hope the substitute will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I must concede that the argument is a very plausible one, and if the proposition was to make a serious innovation from the general rule of electing legislative officers, I would myself oppose the report of the committee. I am of the same view with regard to any radical innovation. But when this section is carefully read, gentlemen will see that it is the only remedy for a great evil which the committee propose to cure. It is not a simple question of economy, though that is very serious. In our county a vacancy occurred at the last session, which was filled near the end of the session, at a cost, I believe, of between two and three thousand dollars. In the County of Santa Clara two vacancies occurred. I believe I am authorized in saying that those who have had experience in that way have had enough of it. I prefer this course, outside of the mere consideration of dollars and cents. It is economy of time. Now, remember, we have provided for a sixty days' session of the Legislature. These vacancies have to be filled by the Legislature only during the session, and at the next general election the vacancy will be filled by the people. The law requires thirty days' notice for an election. The Legislature is not in session but sixty days. You give thirty days' notice, after a reasonable time, and the members elected will have but a few days of that session to serve, in any case. As the law now stands it is imperative that the Governor shall issue a writ for a special election. That is the amendment offered, and that is the present Constitution. In those cases where the vacancy occurs towards the end of the session, it is a serious question whether the Governor shall obey the mandates of the Constitution or not. Sometimes he would not do it, and if he does not choose to take that responsibility, and disregard the Constitution, he puts the people of the county, or of the district, to a very heavy expense, without any real benefit being realized from his action, because the member hardly gets here before the term expires. Why, sir, this idea was illustrated by the election in this Convention. There was a necessity, if the people were to be represented at all, that they ought to be represented at once. We have filled those vacancies, and I cannot see why the intimation should be thrown out here that we have not acted wisely and well. I have never heard any complaints. I know the Convention has acted intelligently in this matter, with a desire to do what is right. In our county, these special elections, the people won't attend them, and you do not in fact get an expression of the popular will. The opposition to this section is based, in the main, upon the theory that if they are to be appointed by the Senate or Assembly there might be a person of different politics chosen from that which prevails in the county or district. Perhaps even that would not apply, in view of the fact that there is always such a small vote. But that is a mere partisan view, unworthy the consideration of this Convention. As to the idea of its being unrepublican, from the very necessities of the case we have to have officers appointed, and there are cases in which our Constitution requires them to be appointed. If a vacancy occurs in the office of Secretary of State, State Treasurer, or any of those offices, what is done? It is republican to elect in all these cases, but the Governor appoints for the time being. That is all there is in this proposition. It is only for the time being. When we consider that the session will only be sixty days, you will readily see that very often a district will have to go unrepresented. It will save a heavy expense in every case, and I consider it ought to stand.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the substitute.

Division being called for, it was adopted by a vote of 65 ayes to 38 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the next section.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 13. The doors of each house shall be open, except on such occasions as in the opinion of the house may require secrecy.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there is no amendment, the Secretary will read the next section.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 14. Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

MR. LARUE. I move to amend as follows:

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding: 'Nor shall the members of either house draw pay for any recess or adjournment for a longer time than three days.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

Adopted.

MR. AYERS. I move to amend by adding, after the word "sitting," the following: "unless by a two-thirds vote of each house."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

MR. AYERS. There may be floods or other calamities in this State, which might make it necessary for the Legislature to adjourn to some other place.

The amendment was lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section fifteen.

THIRD READING OF BILLS.

THE SECRETARY read section fifteen, as follows:

SEC. 15. No law shall be passed except by bill. Any bill may originate with either house, but may be amended or rejected by the other, and on the final passage of all bills they shall be read at length, and the vote shall be by ayes and noes separately, and shall be entered on the Journal; and no bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each house.

MR. CONDON. I move an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'bill,' and before the word 'any,' in the first line, the following: 'No bill shall become a law until it has been read three different days of the session, in the house in which it originates.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. I propose an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by inserting after the word 'bill,' in the first line, the following: 'Nor shall any bill be put upon its final passage until the same, with the amendments thereto, shall have been printed for the use of the members; nor shall any bill become a law unless the same be read on three several days in each house, unless, in case of urgency, two thirds of the house where such bill may be pending, shall, by a vote of ayes and noes, deem it expedient to dispense with this rule.'"

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: This amendment commends itself to the consideration of the committee, without any remarks or waste of time in discussion. It simply provides, in addition to the provisions of section fifteen as reported, that the bill and the amendments, if any, shall be printed before the bill, with the amendments, shall be put upon its final passage. It seems to me that a provision of this kind needs no comment; need not be urged upon the attention of this committee. We have had sufficient experience here, in this Convention, and in early legislative experience, to prove, I think, to every man, that it is impossible for a member to understand what he is voting for, or what the provisions of a bill are, by hearing them read at the desk. I undertake to say that of the legislation which goes through under a suspension of the rules, simply by being read at the desk, not one quarter of the members know what they are voting for, and the object of the provisions of the amendment is that the bill shall be read, or, what is the same thing, considered on three several days, before being put upon its final passage; the object of that is apparent; it is to prevent hasty legislation, unless in case of urgency, when the rules may be suspended by a two-thirds vote. I think they are both wise provisions, both tending to guard legislation. These are the only two provisions intended by this amendment. They are both wise. They are not intended to, nor will they hamper legislation, but to compel it to be done decently and in order, after the legislation has been well considered.

MR. MCCALLUM. Why, sir, if they put that provision in the Constitution, it might be construed that the bill cannot be read by title.

MR. REYNOLDS. The section says that "on the final passage of all bills they shall be read at length." That part of the section, construed with the amendment, will not be understood as meaning that the bill shall be read at length on the second and first readings, but considered on three several days before passage.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. Chairman: I hope neither of these amendments will prevail. I make this statement in behalf of a majority of the Committee on Legislative Department, and I wish to say this in addition: that the very able and faithful Chairman of the committee is necessarily absent during this day and to-morrow. I ask all the members of this committee to carefully consider the terms of this fifteenth article, or section, as it was framed by a majority of the entire committee, though not by the unanimous voice of the committee, yet with the concurrence of a large number of its members. As to all the details about printing, and the procedures to be had under it, we thought that might safely be left to the discretion of the Legislative Department. The thing which we aimed to accomplish was to require that upon the final passage of a bill in either house of the Legislature, it should be read at length, considered at length, and when adopted, done so by a majority of all the members of each house. It seems to me that in that guarantee—in its results—we have guarded, as fully and safely as it is possible to do by a constitutional provision, against hasty legislation, and I hope, in behalf of the members of this committee, that you will scan this section very closely; and I think you will be satisfied that the evils of hasty legislation are sufficiently guarded against by the provisions of that section. Now, I trust these amendments will be voted down and the section adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco will prevail. Looking over the Constitution of Pennsylvania I find the same provision. Section two, of article three, of that Constitution, reads as follows:

"SEC. 2. No bill shall be considered unless referred to a committee, returned therefrom, and printed for the use of the members."

Section four of that article reads as follows:

"SEC. 4. Every bill shall be read at length on three different days in each house; all amendments made thereto shall be printed for the use of the members, before the final vote is taken on the bill, and no bill shall become a law unless on its final passage the vote be taken by yeas and nays, the names of the persons voting for and against the same be entered on the Journal, and a majority of the members elected to each house be recorded thereon as voting in its favor."

Now, I understand the purport of this amendment to be to guard against hasty legislation. Bills and the amendments are to be printed before the bills are put upon their final passage. That acquaints every member with what is before the house, just as we have been acquainted with the substance of these various propositions, and of which we can have no knowledge, and we could not have been made acquainted with their contents without having them printed. That is one proposition. And the next is that they shall be read three different days, and it seems to me that also should commend itself to our approval, so that a bill shall not be hurried through. I say it is a good provision. It is a guard against improvident legislation, and I hope it will be adopted.

MR. ANDREWS. Does the Pennsylvania Constitution contain this limitation that no bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each house?

MR. JOHNSON. Yes, sir, it does.

MR. ANDREWS. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

MR. BARNES. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is out of his seat.

THE CHAIRMAN. He has a right to address the house there by permission of the Chair.

MR. SCHELL. It is in the discretion of the Chair.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman: In the way of an apology, I will say that I might as well almost have no seat in this Convention or in the Committee of the Whole. I am satisfied I am not trespassing upon the gentleman, Mr. Tinnin, as he is not occupying his seat to-day. He is absent on account of sickness. As I was going to say, I don't know but the amendment would be uncertain in its effect—as to whether that two-thirds rule—as to what that rule would apply to—to the whole section, or only to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco. I think, sir, that the guards thrown around legislation by this section, as reported, are amply sufficient. Here is a guard that does not exist now: "On the final passage of all bills they shall be read at length." That is a guard that does not exist now. "And the vote shall be by ayes and noes upon each separate bill." That is a guard that is not in the present Constitution. This is the most important guard, and I do not believe it is one that exists in the Pennsylvania Constitution—certainly not as cited by the gentleman. "No bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of all the members elected to each house." That is a guard, and a very important one. Now, sir, there frequently arise emergencies, in which it is necessary that immediate action should be had in the way of legislation. I think it is sufficiently guarded, and if we make it more so, we may prevent legislation very often; and what they do would amount to naught, for the reason that there would not be time to effect it.

MR. FILCHER. Isn't printing—the gentleman has had a good deal of experience—isn't that usually provided for by the rules of the house?

MR. ANDREWS. Yes, sir; generally, in legislative bodies in which I have served, there is a standing rule that all bills of a general nature shall be printed. That has been the rule in every legislative body in which I have served, that all bills of a general nature shall be printed. As I understand, it is the intention now that our legislation shall all be of a general nature hereafter. I am in hopes that the section as reported by the committee will stand, and not be amended.

MR. JOHNSON. I will read sections four and five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania:

"SEC. 4. Every bill shall be read at length on three different days in each house; all amendments made thereto shall be printed for the use of the members before the final vote is taken on the bill, and no bill shall become a law unless on its final passage the vote be taken by ayes and noes, the names of the persons voting for and against the same be entered on the Journal, and a majority of the members elected to each house be recorded thereon as voting in its favor.

"SEC. 5. No amendments to bills by one house shall be concurred in by the other, except by the vote of a majority of the members elected thereto, taken by ayes and noes, and the names of those voting for and against recorded upon the Journal thereof," etc.

MR. ANDREWS. That may be, but it is for us to judge what this State requires. I think the section as reported by the committee is sufficiently guarded, and as we have rejected the example of Pennsylvania to-day upon one occasion, I don't know why we should not reject it again.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I won't detain this Convention long. This section fifteen as reported is the least guarded of any I can find in any Constitution. It dispenses with the reading of bills on three several days. That is ordinarily a matter of safety. If the Constitution requires that a bill shall be read on three different days, any person can get up and object to its being read more than once on that day. It dispenses with the reading, except on one day; dispenses with the printing, and I consider it less guarded than the existing provisions of our Constitution. The Constitution of Pennsylvania has been adverted to, and as it is among the late Constitutions, it is taken as a guide——

MR. MCCALLUM. Our present Constitution——

MR. HAGER. This requires that "no law shall be passed except by bill. Any bill may originate in either house, but may be amended or rejected by the other, and on the final passage of all bills they shall be read at length, and the vote shall be by yeas and nays upon each bill separately, and shall be entered on the Journal; and no bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each house." A bill may be introduced in the house without referring to a committee, and voted upon immediately, and all be done in the course of fifteen minutes, and, perhaps, one half of the members know nothing about it. There is no safety in that, unless the laws of the Assembly should prevent it; then, of course, it would require the suspension of the rules.

Now, as I said, in this Constitution of Pennsylvania, they require that all bills shall be printed; that all amendments shall be printed and engrossed, and when the final vote is taken it shall be recorded with the ayes and noes, entered upon the Journal, and that the bill shall be read on three several days. Take the Constitution of Missouri:

"Bills may originate in either house, and may be amended or rejected by the other; and every bill shall be read on three different days in each house."

"No bill shall be considered for final passage unless the same has been reported upon by a committee, and printed for the use of the members."

Every bill shall be reported by a committee.

"No bill (except general appropriation bills, which may embrace the various subjects and accounts for and on account of which moneys are appropriated, and except bills passed under the third subdivision of section forty-four of this article) shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title."

"All amendments adopted by either house to a bill pending and originating in the same, shall be incorporated with the bill by engrossment, and the bill, as thus engrossed, shall be printed for the use of the members, before its final passage," etc.

"No bill shall become a law unless on its final passage the vote be taken by yeas and nays, the names of the members voting for and against the same be entered on the Journal, and a majority of the members elected to each house be recorded thereon as voting in its favor."

Now, these are new provisions, which is a precaution against hasty and ill-considered legislation. I have known very important amendments to be put in bills passed, in the enrollment of them, and when we came to read the law we found the substance in many respects changed from what they were when they were passed by the Legislature. I know whereof I speak, because I have known these things to take place myself. There may be fifty bills in the Enrolling Committee's hands at one time at the last end of the session, when it is almost impossible to accomplish the work. They have to employ men from the outside to assist——

MR. ANDREWS. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. Do you not know, in your legislative experiences, cases that required immediate action by the Legislature?

MR. HAGER. Sometimes, I believe, I have known that to occur, where bills have passed in emergencies; where it was said that it was important that it be done at once. I have known such instances. But in looking over these provisions I see some that I think it would be well for us to adopt in this State. I do not know of any State where they do not require that a bill shall be read on three different days. I thought it was in our Constitution, but it seems it was only a rule of the House and Senate. I know they were required to be read by the rule, and I presumed it was in the Constitution. I should like to have incorporated here an amendment requiring all bills to be referred to a committee, and to be printed before they shall be finally passed. Others go to the extent that all amendments shall be printed, and that may be a precaution well enough to observe. In Missouri and Pennsylvania they require that all amendments shall be printed, and engrossed before the house takes action, or either branch. I hope the amendments will prevail requiring a bill to be read on three different days, requiring it to be referred to a committee, and requiring it to be printed, in order that the house may know what they are acting upon, in order to prevent this hasty legislation that has from time to time crept in, in the course of our legislative experience in this State.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. Chairman: Consistency is a jewel. In eighteen hundred and sixty-nine–seventy, the first day of the session, a bill was introduced here, and my friend from San Francisco, Judge Hager, came from San Francisco, and urged the great necessity of passing that law, and it passed immediately. My worthy friend, Judge Hager, done that, and I appeal to him now if it is not customary for the Legislature and parliamentary bodies to have their rules so that all bills shall be read and printed; and I ask him if that is not the best guarded clause in the United States. That old Constitution of Missouri, where it required a majority of all the members of each house—isn't that a safeguard? Then the ayes and noes has to be called. Does the gentleman now propose that every bill shall be read, section by section, three days? He has been a legislator, and knows parliamentary rules. It is first read by title, and before it is finally passed it is read section by section, and it is unnecessary to tell the Legislature, when they have the power to establish their own rules governing the sessions of the Legislature, that all bills shall be referred to committees, that all bills shall be printed, and all amendments printed. More than that. We want to have every vote recorded. I want my friend, Judge Hager, to be consistent. When he came here, he came here and almost seduced me, to get me to vote for an unconstitutional bill. He recollects it. He came here with tears in his eyes and begged me to vote for the lottery bill.

MR. BARNES. Allow me to make an observation. He says the bill was an unconstitutional bill. On the contrary, it was a constitutional bill, so held by the Courts of this State, and the debates of the Convention that passed the Constitution will show that the clause against lotteries was a lottery maintained by the State, and not private lotteries.

MR. BIGGS. My friend is a great lawyer, and he can make black white and white black; but I tell him the Constitution of California says there shall be no lotteries. I hope this amendment will not pass.

MR. HAGER. Now, in regard to that lottery bill, the committee that were interested in the library—and I believe it would have gone under—came up with a bill for a gift enterprise—not a lottery—for the purpose of saving that institution. I introduced that bill for a gift enterprise. The bill originally was drawn for the purpose of inaugurating a gift enterprise for the purpose of saving the library from being sold for debt. It didn't originate with me, but I introduced it, and held myself responsible for it to that extent. But it was not unconstitutional and never was so declared.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I cannot understand the objections made by my friend from Shasta, Mr. Andrews, to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds. The amendment desires merely to guard against hasty legislation. Hasty legislation has been the curse of this State, and the curse of several States in this Union, until they have been obliged to guard against it. Now, all that the amendment of Mr. Reynolds contemplates is merely that every proposition introduced into the Legislature shall be printed. That it shall be read three times before it is put upon its final passage; but in case an emergency exists it can be avoided by a two-thirds vote. And I don't see any objections to that. In fact, everything stands in favor of it. It prevents hasty legislation. It allows members to have printed copies put upon their desks, and then they are able to consider them fully and read them. A bill is introduced and kept in the hands of the Clerk, and he reads it, and it is put upon its passage, and no one sees the bill until it is enrolled, and oftentimes an entirely different bill is enrolled than the one passed. An entirely different Act becomes a law without the Assembly contemplating it. This is a guard put on the Legislature. It prevents and guards against hasty legislation. It seems to me that this should be adopted.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move the previous question.

Not recognized.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: It seems as though every person has spoken who wants to speak upon the amendment, and I would like to refer the Committee of the Whole to the authority of more than half or about two thirds of the States of this Union that have provisions of this kind in their Constitutions—twenty-one States and several others besides, but I have twenty-one States here now. And I deem this matter of enough importance to refer you to a few of these authorities. Alabama, Kentucky, and Texas provide that no bill shall have the force of law until on three several days it shall have been read in each house. Arkansas, every bill or joint resolution shall be read three times on different days in each house, unless two thirds of the house shall dispense with that rule. That is precisely the amendment here. Now I will omit a few that have the same thing, and come down to Illinois—"Every bill shall be read at large on three several days." Now, I do not ask that in this provision. I only ask that it shall be considered on three several days. But as a substitute for reading the bill at large on the second and first days, I propose that it be printed. But the Constitution of Illinois provides not only that it be read at large on three several days, but printed too. "Every bill shall be read at large on three different days in each house, and the bill and all amendments thereto shall be printed before a vote is taken on the final passage." And so on down the list of twenty-one States. "Every bill shall be fully and distinctly read on three different days, unless in case of urgency, three fourths of the house shall have dispensed with the rule." Constitutions of Nebraska and Ohio. Now, I deem these authorities sufficient for us to establish this rule. It is to prevent hasty legislation. It is to prevent legislation that should not be passed; but in case of urgency, upon a call of the ayes and noes, the rule that they shall be considered on three different days may be suspended.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Van Dyke, Smith, of Santa Clara, and Weller.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The first question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

Division was called, and the amendment was adopted by a vote of 60 ayes to 42 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

MR. CONDON. I accept the amendment of Mr. Reynolds, as it embodies the same principle.

The amendment to the amendment was adopted.

MR. SCHELL. I offer a further amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out in the first line the following words: 'No law shall be passed except by bill.'"

MR. SCHELL. I don't suppose there was ever a bill introduced into the Legislature and became a law except by bill. The reason I move to strike out these words is, that they are absolutely unnecessary and superfluous.

MR. LAINE. There is a case of a joint resolution. One of the largest grants the railroad companies now have was made by joint resolution.

MR. JOHNSON. I would suggest to Judge Schell that the Pennsylvania Constitution has the same provision.

The amendment was lost.

MR. HARRISON. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all that part commencing with the word 'and' in the second line, and ending with the word 'Journal' in the fourth line, and then insert a new section, to be numbered section sixteen. 'Every bill.'"——

THE CHAIRMAN. That is not an amendment to section fifteen.

MR. HARRISON. The only difference between mine and Mr. Reynold's is, that I leave part of the original section stand, and introduce an additional one. The additional section makes the matter more full.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section sixteen.

APPROVING BILLS.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 16. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it he shall sign it; but if not he shall return it with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, by ayes and noes, by a majority of two thirds of the members of each house, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objection. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return, in which case it shall not become a law unless the Governor, within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted), shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contains several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill. In such case he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor, and the appropriation so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the house in which the bill originated, a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor.

MR. SHURTLEFF. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out in the sixth line, after the word 'nays,' the words 'a majority of,' and insert after the word 'house' the words 'voting therefor,' so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 16. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, by yeas and nays, by two thirds of the members of each house voting therefor, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objection. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return; in which case, it shall not become a law, unless the Governor, within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted), shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contains several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill. In such case he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor, and the appropriation so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the house in which the bill originated a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor."

MR. SHURTLEFF. The object of the amendment is to correct the phraseology. As it reads, it does not appear very creditable.

MR. HALE. As I understand the effect of it, it is to not allow a bill to be passed over the Governor's veto by less than two thirds of the members of each house.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me the amendment proposed entirely changes the section as it now stands. It says, by a majority of two thirds of the members of each house. That means two thirds elected to each house. Not merely two thirds of the members voting. But by the amendment of the gentleman from Napa, exactly half the members elected to each house could walk out of the room, and allow the other half to vote, and two thirds of those remaining would have a right to carry the bill over the veto. I do not believe we desire to do any such thing as that. We desire to have two thirds of all the members elected, and if you change the phraseology in this way you will entirely change the meaning of the section.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: The remarks of the gentleman from San Francisco are correct. Now, there is no gentleman who has had any experience in a legislative body but knows that a very important bill may be passed when there is a bare quorum present. And by the same rule a bare quorum could pass a bill over the Governor's veto. I think if members will look at this matter they will see the necessity of a provision that will require a two-thirds majority of all the members in order to pass a bill over the Governor's veto.

MR. VAN DYKE. It does not change that at all. The members of each house never has been understood as all the members elected to each house, and the object of the amendment proposed is to remove the ambiguity.

MR. FILCHER. I wish to call attention to this fact, that if this phraseology is wrong, we have been working under it for twenty-eight years in California, for it is precisely the same as in the old Constitution, which reads: "If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses by a majority of two thirds of the members of each house present," etc. The committee thought it was better to leave out the word "present," so as to require a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house.

I claim that the idea is a good one, and that the section is sufficiently clear.

MR. AYERS. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute between the word 'nays' and the words 'of the,' the words 'by a two-thirds majority.'"

MR. MCCALLUM. The present Constitution reads, "a majority of two thirds." That has stood for twenty-nine years, and I see no reason for changing it. I wish to call attention to one matter. The theory of this report is that no law shall be passed without a majority of all the members elected. Now, if this amendment of the gentleman prevails, in the Assembly, twenty-seven members, which is two thirds of a quorum, can overrule the veto of the Governor, whereas it actually required forty-one votes to pass the law in the first instance. In the Senate it requires twenty-one of the forty members to pass a law, while, if the Governor vetoes it, two thirds of twenty could override the veto. The theory of the amendment is contrary to the theory of the report.

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: It is perfectly obvious what the committee is intending to do. I would suggest that we vote down the amendments and then strike out these words, and then it will be perfectly clear. Strike out the words, "a majority of."

MR. VAN DYKE. Strike out the word "majority," and insert the word "vote."

MR. WILSON, of First District. It seems to me very plain. Reading it, there is no obscurity in it, as it is proposed to be amended by Dr. Shurtleff—"if, after such consideration, it again pass both houses by yeas and nays, by a majority of two thirds of the members in each house, it shall become a law." Two thirds of the members of each house is a phrase easily understood. But a majority of two thirds of the members of each house seems somewhat obscure. Is it a majority consisting of two thirds, or when you select two thirds do you then take a majority of that two thirds? It seems to me the amendment of the gentleman from Napa clears the thing up. "If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, two thirds of the members voting therefor, it shall become a law." If two thirds of the members vote for it, it shall become a law. How can you make it any more clear?

MR. REYNOLDS. I will suggest an amendment of two words to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Napa, which will make it perfectly clear and impossible to be misunderstood. I will suggest to his amendment the words "elected to," so as to make it read in this way: "If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, by ayes and noes, two thirds of the members elected to each house voting therefor, it shall become a law." It is impossible to misunderstand that. I think it is just the thing.

MR. SCHELL. Suppose there should be a vacancy of one or two seats in either house at the time a bill was voted on, would you have to have two thirds?

MR. REYNOLDS. That is just the contingency that this amendment seeks to cover.

MR. SCHELL. Would it not be better to put in the word "all," so as to read, "two thirds of all the members voting therefor?"

MR. REYNOLDS. No, sir; the committee, in considering this question, came to the unanimous conclusion that they desired, in order to have a bill passed over the veto of the Governor, that it should pass by two thirds of all the members elected to each house, notwithstanding any vacancy. That was the unanimous wish of the committee, and as far as has been expressed, seems to be the wish of the Committee of the Whole. I think this is the only amendment suggested which will clear away all possible doubt and obscurity.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: What do we desire to accomplish? Now, if it is proposed to require a majority of all the members elected to each house, that is one thing; if it requires a majority of those present, that is another thing. I have never known it to be required that a majority of two thirds of all the members elected should vote in order to pass a bill over the Governor's veto. The practice has been, in this State, that a majority of those acting were sufficient. Now, I think if we require two thirds of those present in the chamber to vote in the affirmative, it is sufficient. We should not require a majority of all the member selected, because half of them may be absent when the bill is under consideration, therefore, it ought to read, a majority of those acting upon the bill, that would be two thirds of all the members constituting the house for the time being. But if it is the wish that it shall be two thirds of all the members elected to each house, it ought to read so; but I am opposed to that.

MR. MCFARLAND. It does seem to me that this is unnecessary, as the words employed in the report are the same that have been in the Constitution since it was first adopted. I venture to say that there is not a Court in the world, nor a man on this floor, but knows what is meant by a majority of two thirds. The words "two thirds," qualify the term. The report says that it must be a two-thirds majority. This language has been in the Constitution ever since it was made. You can't find a gentleman here who does not know what it means.

MR. REYNOLDS. The gentleman from Napa, I believe, accepts my amendment.

MR. SHURTLEFF. The gentleman misunderstood me. That brings in a new principle right at once. It is not customary to require two thirds all of the members elected to each house. If there is any such case it is exceptional. In the Constitution of the United States no such term is used; it is two thirds of the members voting in the United States Senate and the House of Representatives, and it is also so in the various State Constitutions; there may be exceptions to the rule, however.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: Notwithstanding what the gentleman says as to the Constitution of the United States, we have adopted a new principle in section fifteen here, that no bill shall become a law unless voted for by a majority of the members elected to each house. Now, in order to be consistent, it seems to me we should adopt the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds. Therefore, to be consistent, we must say two thirds of the members elected to each house voting therefor. In section fifteen we require a majority of all the members elected to each house to pass a bill, while here, if the Governor vetoes a bill, two thirds of a bare quorum may pass it over his veto. It seems to me it is very necessary to adopt an amendment requiring two thirds of all the members elected to each house to vote in the affirmative, in order to pass a bill over the Governor's veto.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Napa.

MR. MCCALLUM. Will the gentleman explain what he means by a two-thirds vote.

Division was called for, and the amendment was adopted by a vote of 65 ayes to 55 noes.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'of' and insert the words 'elected to' in line six."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

MR. REYNOLDS. This will make the language absolutely unmistakable, as I have endeavored to explain before.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will not be adopted. It introduces a doubtful feature into the Constitution, one not contemplated by the committee. I think the gentleman from San Francisco is mistaken when he says that it is contemplated by the committee. It is true, sir, that the change which the committee presented has been voted down. The Legislative Committee proposed that when a vacancy should occur in either house, the same should be filled by the body for the session, and that afterwards it should be filled by an election, so that there would be the full number of members in each house. Now, it never was contemplated by the Legislative Committee to require more than a two-thirds vote of the members present, in order to pass a bill over the Governor's veto. I say it never has been contemplated. It has not been required by any State Constitution in the Union. It has never been required by the Constitution of this State. The rule was that it should be passed by a two-thirds vote of the members present in each house. Suppose that one, or two, or three members of the Assembly have died, according to the amendment made by the Committee of the Whole, these vacancies could not be filled, except by election. Then, sir, it would consist of seventy-seven members. Now, the intention of the committee was to require two thirds of the house, as then constituted, and no more. The rule which they intended to establish was, that in order to pass a bill over the Governor's veto, it must have a vote of two thirds of the members in each house. Two thirds of the members present and voting should be sufficient.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: I took it for granted that when this committee had adopted section fifteen it was their deliberate intention thereafter to proceed to carry out the theory. That theory was that no bill should become a law unless by a concurrence of a majority of all the members elected to each house. Now, in considering the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, we must keep in view the fact that we have adopted section fifteen, and we can only argue this question upon that assumption. Now, if this Convention intends to stand by section fifteen, that no bill can become a law without a majority of the members elected to each house voting therefor, it is necessary to adopt the amendment to section sixteen proposed by Mr. Reynolds. Suppose we illustrate the workings of section fifteen. Under that section, assuming that the Senate shall consist of forty, it would require twenty-one Senators to vote for the law in order to pass it, twenty-one being a majority of forty. After it has been passed by both houses, the Governor vetoes it, and it comes back again. Then, under this section, two thirds of a quorum may pass it over his veto. Twenty-one being a quorum in the Senate, and fourteen being two thirds of twenty-one, it could be passed over the veto by fourteen votes, whereas it required twenty-one votes to pass the bill in the first place. That is an absurdity. You are, therefore, in order to avoid this inconsistency, compelled to adopt the amendment, or else go back to section fifteen and change that. Section fifteen was adopted in order to guard against hasty legislation, so that a bill could not be rushed through when there is a very thin house. I say you must necessarily require two thirds of all the members elected in order to pass a bill over the veto, or you will be doing a very absurd act.

MR. HALE. What objection would there be to correcting section fifteen, so as to read in this wise: "A majority of all the members of each house."

MR. WILSON. Why didn't they make it so?

MR. HALE. The committee did that because they had provided that in case of the death of a member, the house should fill the vacancy immediately, and there would always be a full house. That is the reason they made that section that way.

MR. WILSON. Mere accident or death should not change a great rule.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. Chairman: I have no doubt myself that as the phraseology now stands it means simply two thirds of a quorum. It has always been the rule in this State, and I believe it has been the rule in Congress, that a bill may be passed over the veto by a two-thirds vote of those acting. Now, if it is the intention that a bill cannot be passed over the veto except by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected, why not say so, and done with it. But if it is the intention that two thirds of a quorum may pass a bill over the veto, say so in plain words.

MR. REYNOLDS. I will say that this amendment is clearly in accord with the intention of the committee, because they struck out of the old Constitution the word "present." That word was left out purposely and intentionally.

MR. EDGERTON. Then I will say that they didn't more than half do their work. If they meant it, why didn't they say so in plain English?

MR. REYNOLDS. That is precisely what this amendment is attempting to say.

MR. WILSON. It would only require twenty-seven to constitute two thirds of the Senate.

MR. McCALLUM. I wish to corroborate the statement that when we said two thirds of the members of each house we meant two thirds of the members elected to each house, and not two thirds of those who happened to be present. But there is ambiguity there, and it is becoming worse confounded. I undertake to say that it is the desire of the Committee of the Whole that it shall be two thirds of the members elected to each house. Now, if that is the judgment of the Committee of the Whole, then we ought to adopt the amendment proposed by Mr. Reynolds.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I stated here before that I was opposed to the amendment proposed by Mr. Reynolds. I have changed my mind. I was of the opinion that it ought to be two thirds of the members present, but upon reflection, I think it better to adhere to the rules adopted by most of the recent Constitutions. I find such a provision in the Constitutions of Missouri and Pennsylvania. They require a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, upon which the ayes and noes shall be recorded. Upon reflection, I am inclined to support the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by Mr. Reynolds.

Adopted.

MR. FREEMAN. I move that the committee now rise.

Ayes, 57; noes, 57. The Chair voted in the negative, and the motion was lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section seventeen.

THE POWER OF IMPEACHMENT.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 17. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. When sitting for that purpose the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members elected.

MR. AYERS. I move that the committee rise.

Lost.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 18. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Justices of the Supreme Court, and Judges of the Superior Courts, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State; but the party convicted or acquitted shall nevertheless be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment according to law. All other civil officers shall be tried for misdemeanor in office in such manner as the Legislature may provide.

MR. AYERS. I move that the committee rise.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there are no amendments, the Secretary will read the next section.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 19. No Senator or member of Assembly shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this State, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased, during such term, except such offices as may be filled by election by the people.

MR. EDGERTON. I move that the committee rise.

Lost.

MR. WEST. There are some of these sections that require amendment. Section eighteen will require amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section twenty.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 20. No person holding any lucrative office under the United States, or any other power, shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under this State; provided, that officers in the militia, to which there is attached no annual salary, or local officers, or Postmasters whose compensation does not exceed five hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed lucrative.

MR. BARNES. I don't understand that provision, that officers and Postmasters shall not be deemed lucrative.

MR. WHITE. I move the committee rise.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: Before we pass to the next section I hope the Convention will calmly consider, for there are some of them that need amending. Section eighteen needs amending, as well as others.

THE SECRETARY read section twenty-one:

SEC. 21. No person who shall be convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of this State, or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State, and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

MR. LARUE. I wish to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'municipality,' the words 'or any savings bank or trust fund.'

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No public officer, nor any person who is holding a position of trust, and as such has been the collector or receiver of public money, shall be eligible to any office of trust or profit in this State, under the laws thereof, or any municipality therein, until he shall have accounted for or paid over all public moneys, for which he may be accountable. The Legislature shall provide, by law, for the punishment of embezzlement or defalcation of public funds as felonies."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento.

MR. McCALLUM. I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. I move we do now adjourn.

Carried.

And at four o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M. the Convention adjourned, until to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

EIGHTY-FOURTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Friday, December 20th, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Six days' leave of absence were granted Messrs. Stuart and Martin, of Santa Cruz.

Mr. Jones was granted indefinite leave of absence, on account of sickness.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. GORMAN. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

Carried.

REPORT.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I have a report to make from the Committee on Harbors, Tide-waters, and Navigable Streams.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Harbors, Tide-waters, and Navigable Streams beg leave to report that they have carefully considered inclosed proposition number one hundred and seventy-eight, to secure the people in their right to free communication with their natural highways, and recommend its passage by the Convention.

JAMES G. AYERS, Chairman.

REGARDING THE FRONTAGES OF NAVIGABLE WATERS.

SECTION —. The right of eminent domain is hereby declared to exist in the State to all frontages on the navigable waters of this State.

SEC. —. No individual, partnership, or corporation, claiming or possessing the frontage, or tidal lands of a harbor, bay, inlet, estuary, or other navigable water in this State, shall be permitted to exclude the right of way to such water whenever it is required for any public purpose; and the Legislature shall enact such laws as will give the most liberal construction to this provision, so that access to the navigable waters of this State shall be always attainable, and that the people shall not be shut out from the same.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I move that the report be printed, and that it be referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. Mr. President: I wish to offer a new proposition.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC —. Within three years after the adoption of this Constitution, every city in this State containing one hundred thousand people or more, shall, by condemnation, purchase, or appropriation and construction, become the owner of waterworks and water rights sufficient to supply its population with good water; provided, no city procuring its supply of water, or works, by condemnation or purchase, the sum paid for such works shall not exceed ($7,000,000) seven million dollars."

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. I move that it be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

RESOLUTION.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the further services of four Pages, two Doorkeepers, one Porter, and one Mail-carrier be dispensed with, and that the Sergeant-at-Arms be authorized to designate the persons to be retired.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I wish to say, in explanation of this, that it would seem to be very late in the day to be wakening up to this resolution, and yet it will be remembered that I endeavored early in the session to secure the same idea. I call attention to the statute providing for this Convention, where it reads: "The President of the Convention may appoint not exceeding one Doorkeeper and four Pages;" and to the further fact that those who serve here may possibly never receive anything at all for their services. It is incumbent upon us to get along with as little help as possible, and I believe that we can get along with the number that will be left.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: It seems to me that there is just as much necessity for these boys now as there ever has been. These young gentlemen are willing to stay with the Convention until the last and take their chances on being reimbursed. It partakes of the nature of unjust discrimination between the Pages, and looks to me like a small piece of business. I move that the resolution lie on the table.

The motion prevailed.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I have a resolution to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That when this Convention adjourns to-morrow (Saturday) it shall adjourn until Monday, December thirty-first, instant, at two o'clock P. M.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: I offer this resolution because, in the middle of next week comes Christmas. Every Christian—every person raised in Christendom—wants to be home on that day. It will take a day to go and a day to return, and the next week would be so broken up that it would be impossible to accomplish anything. The next business, I think, that this Convention strikes, is the important business of taxation. There ought to be a full Convention at that time. I see, myself, very little chance for a full Convention next week, and therefore I have introduced this resolution. If we adjourn to-morrow and meet the following Monday week, it just gives the Christmas week. So far as the succeeding week is concerned, I care nothing about it, and am willing to come here and stay at the pleasure of the Convention. But I think the week which embraces Christmas had better be a vacation than an abortive attempt to keep the Convention here. At least, it would be a very thin house during that week, and for that reason I offer that resolution.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: There is another quite serious reason why we should be permitted to take this adjournment. It is the close of the year. Every man who has much to do has a good many settlements to make. The financial settlements of the year come about this time, and business all has to be closed up. There is a great deal that a man has to do that is extraordinary and exceptional. It certainly is so in my case; and while we are all willing to give all the time that may be necessary to the business of the Convention and the State, we ought to be permitted to take a little time for the arrangement of our own affairs. In my own case it is absolutely essential. It is unlike any other portion of the year. The business man, after having been here most of the time since the twenty-eighth of September, and likely to be here some time longer, ought to have a chance to look after his business a little, and maybe some of us want to shin around and raise the money to stay here through January and February. That is the reason I am in favor of it. I am free to say that it is absolutely essential for me to go home, and I propose to adjourn, unless the Sergeant-at-Arms shuts me up. I would like to be here during the consideration of this question of taxation, but I cannot go to absolute destruction, even for that. I think there are a good many other gentlemen in the same situation.

MR. ROLFE. I would suggest that while we are members here we are free from arrest or civil process.

MR. BARNES. I am very glad of it. That may explain the reason why the gentleman wants to keep on working, and stay here as long as he can. [Laughter.] But I am not so much afraid of civil process as I am of the almshouse, and I would like to go and look a little after my own affairs, and I think that all who are not too far away from home would like to do the same thing. For that reason I support Mr. Wilson's resolution.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I hope the resolution will not prevail. If the gentleman wants to go home we will give him leave of absence.

MR. BARNES. Thank you. Go ahead.

MR. TULLY. There are a number who cannot go home, and I think it is not fair. It don't matter if there are only five, if there is only one who cannot go home, why should he be compelled to stay here on expense? I must say that this is his regular fight pretty nearly every Friday or Saturday, and, if you were to judge by the roll-call, he has been absent a great deal, and we have got along without him; notwithstanding he is entertaining, instructive, and useful, but still I am satisfied the Convention can do without him. I shall vote to give him leave of absence, and he can go home for a reasonable time. I hope that the Convention will proceed with the business. I hate to vote against Mr. Wilson, but I must do it in this case.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I suppose that the true reason might as well be stated at once: By the extraordinary construction that is placed upon the law calling this Convention, the hundred days of session are made to mean one hundred consecutive days. There is another law that if the Convention adjourn over three days they do not get pay for any of it. Now, you ask gentlemen to continue on here and their pay not go on—heads I win, tails you lose. I shall vote against the amendment. As well as any other gentleman I can give the State my services for nothing, but I do not propose to.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I wish to correct the statement of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Tully. The gentleman is mistaken when he says I have been absent a great deal.

MR. WYATT. I rise to a point of order. No one member is allowed to speak twice on any one question until others have spoken who wish to. There are others who desire to speak.

THE PRESIDENT. No one claimed the floor when it was assigned to Mr. Barnes.

MR. BARNES. I will be brief. I have not been absent a great deal. When the preliminary business was going on, and this folly of calling the roll and allowing everybody to be stuffing in two propositions a day, I saw no occasion for my sitting here, and I attended to my own business. Since there has been any serious business before this Convention I have been here all the time in my seat, as much, and I think more, too, than the gentleman who has charged me with being absent. If the members are so fortunate as my friend from Santa Clara to be able to remain here I do not want them to go away. I want them to stay here, and if there is any money I want them to get it. Get it all. But I understood that Mr. White's resolution forbid anybody going except for sickness. I presume I might get off, for I am sick enough of it; and if I can go I do not care. I shall vote against no man's rights in the world so long as I can secure my own.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope that this resolution will not pass. I deem it a serious act of injustice to those gentlemen who live at a distance from the Capital. The gentlemen from San Francisco have had weekly opportunities to go home, while the delegates from the southern and northern and eastern parts of the State have not had an opportunity to go to their homes at all. Now this resolution provides that we shall take another week, and leave these gentlemen here at the Capital doing nothing, and at their own expense. Those who desire to go home for a day can do so, but I do not think it is just or fair that we should leave those here who live far away and are not able to reach home. I hope the resolution will be voted down.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I am surprised that members who live so near the Capital that they can go home every week should favor a resolution that will be such an inconvenience, and such an expense to members who live at a distance from the Capital, as many of us do. Now, what will be the effect? I do not know of anything that could be introduced into this Convention that would tend more to prevent the framing of a Constitution than a matter of this very kind; to take away the per diem of the few days that are left in the hundred days, and leave members on an added expense during the time. Perhaps additional expense to go home will cripple many members and extend the time of keeping them away from their business that they cannot attend to at all during the time of the Convention. I say there is nothing that would tend to defeat the Constitution more than the loss of time by such a resolution as this.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

MR. WILSON, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I would ask the gentleman to withdraw the motion temporarily.

MR. MORELAND. I withdraw it for an explanation.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I wish to say a single word in regard to this resolution. I simply offer this resolution for the general good. Now, we have at least thirty, maybe forty, days yet of hard work to do. We have reached one of the most important parts of the Constitution, and I know that it is the opinion of a number of gentlemen that we will not have a quorum, or at least that we will have a very thin house, as we had Saturday, when this Convention had scenes which were not very creditable to it. On Saturday afternoons, even the negroes, in slave times, had a holiday. This Convention undertook to sit on Saturday afternoon, and look at the result. This is not the time——

[Confusion.]

MR. RINGGOLD. I understand that there is a motion to lay on the table.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman misunderstands. There is no such motion.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I say that I have no personal interest in the resolution, but we will make nothing by sitting here during Christmas week.

MR. McCALLUM. It is said that the Controller will count the time in the one hundred days.

MR. WILSON, of First District. My understanding is that we will draw pay for one hundred days. I do not regard the Controller as the Supreme Court.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I renew my motion.

[Cries of "Division."]

MR. LARKIN. I call for the ayes and noes.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. Tully, Joyce, McCallum, and Ringgold.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to lay the resolution on the table. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the resolution laid on the table by the following vote:

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. Section twenty-one and pending amendments are before the committee. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 21. No person who shall be convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of this State, or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State, and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

"Amendment offered by Mr. Larue:

"Insert after the word 'municipality' the words 'or any savings bank or trust fund.'"

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I call the attention of the Committee of the Whole to the fact that the amendment proposed by the committee is section twenty-two of the present Constitution as it is, amended so as to include embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of any county or municipality. With reference to the pending amendment, I have to say simply that the object of the section is with reference to the embezzlement of public funds, and the embezzlement of private funds ought not to be mixed up with it. The gentleman's proposition is right in itself, but it has no connection whatever with the object of the section, which refers exclusively to the matter of embezzlement of public funds. I suggest, when a section is drafted as this has been by the Committee on Legislative Department, that these other matters be left for the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects. Let us confine this matter, and not vote for every proposition because it is right in the abstract. It has no place there.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I believe that the amendment is not in the proper shape. It is tautology in the way it reads. It would be better to say at once that no person who shall be convicted of embezzlement shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Larue.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend by inserting the word "any" in place of the word "this," so that it will read: "defalcation of the public funds of any State," etc. I do not know of any reason why, if a man was convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of the State of New York, it should not be the same as if he committed the same crime in this State. If the question is raised on him it ought to disqualify him. The crime is the same, whether committed in this State or anywhere else.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I am surprised that a member of the Legislative Committee should come into the Committee of the Whole with this amendment. What have we got to do with any other State? If we go on in this way we shall not get through in a year. There is no necessity for that amendment at all. We have nothing to do with the affairs of any other State. I hope that the amendment will be voted down.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: That very amendment I sought to get adopted in the committee, and I met with the very same remark that the gentleman makes now, that we have nothing to do with the affairs of any other State. That is far-fetched, and entirely aside from the question. We do not propose to have anything to do with the affairs of any other State; but if a felon comes here from another State, convicted of felony, why should we give him an opportunity to hold an office of public trust that we do not give to our own felons.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected, on a division, by a vote of 43 ayes to 41 noes.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. Chairman: I have a substitute pending there.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No public officer nor any person who has held an office of trust, and who, as such, has been a collector or receiver of public moneys, shall be eligible to any office of trust or profit in this State under the laws thereof, or of any municipality therein, until he has accounted for and paid over all public moneys for which he is accountable. The Legislature shall provide by law for the punishment of the embezzlement of public funds as a felony."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section twenty-two.

CARE OF ORPHANS.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution, not under the exclusive management and control of the State as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws of every regular session of the Legislature.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the words 'by the State' and before the words 'an accurate statement,' in the seventh line, the following: 'Provided, that nothing herein contained shall prohibit the Legislature from granting to orphan asylums or other institutions in this State in which orphans or abandoned children are received and provided for, such pecuniary aid as may be deemed appropriate, which aid shall be based upon the number of such orphans or abandoned children received or provided for, and shall apply alike to all institutions in the State.'"

MR. WELLIN. I second the amendment.

SPEECH OF MR. STEDMAN.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: The question before the committee, so far as it involves a consideration as to what the duty of the State toward the orphaned and abandoned children within her limits, is one which, I take it, requires no particular argument. In this age, and in the light of our present civilization and enlightenment, I think I may be safe in assuming that no gentleman in this committee will deny or resist the acknowledgment of this duty as one which the State must discharge if she would exercise any fostering care over the well being of her future citizens; a duty which is equally as obligatory as that other one of providing educational facilities for all of her children.

There being no question as to the position in which the State stands as to this unfortunate class in our community, there only remains for consideration the question as to how and in what manner the necessary provision for their maintenance shall be made, and what restrictions are required to prevent this aid from being improperly expended or diverted from its proper application. Dissenting, as I do, from the close and narrow methods which the adoption of the section proposed by the Committee on Legislative Department would confine this charity to, I have submitted the amendment which I have just sent up, the object of which is to leave the question of State aid to our benevolent and charitable institutions, both public and private, exactly where it stands now, with the Legislature; and I propose in what few remarks I may make, to treat of the proposition only with reference to the economical aspect presented, leaving the higher social and humanitarian aspect to be treated by other gentlemen who have doubtless given the subject the necessary investigation to enable them to treat it completely in all its phases. Prior to the year eighteen hundred and seventy, whatever of aid was provided by the State was given to private asylums by special legislative enactment upon their own presentation of their claims for sympathy and support, but by this time, however, the experience of the various instituions of the State, which were mostly under church auspices, had developed the fact that those institutions which were the best able to bring to bear on Legislatures influences favoring their particular claims for aid, were the most considered in the disbursements made for this purpose, and, as a consequence, glaring inequalities were sometimes found to have crept into the system. The dissatisfaction with this state of things, together with the fact that exposition of such favoritism was having a tendency to operate against even the continuance of the charities themselves, called forth the first Act for relief based upon the per capita plan. This Act, approved March twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy, provided for a donation to the various orphan asylums, and other institutions having orphans under their care, the sum of fifty dollars per annum for every whole orphan, and twenty-five dollars per annum for half orphans. The intent of the Act being, by this equitable settlement of the pro rata amount of aid to be furnished, to put an end to the hitherto unjust divisions, as well as the perpetual lobbying of the various institutions at every session of the Legislature.

Notwithstanding this, however, many of the institutions continued during the next five or six years to secure, by means of specious representations of their necessities, direct appropriations to their benefit, in addition to the amounts allowed them under the per capita law. To obviate any such necessity or justification for these continual applications for additional aid over that provided for in the general law, the Legislature of eighteen hundred and seventy-three and eighteen hundred and seventy-four raised the amounts given by the per capita law to seventy-five dollars per annum for each whole orphan, and fifty dollars per annum for each half orphan, and fifty dollars per annum for each abandoned child. The Legislature, at the same time, defined what was an abandoned child. These amounts were subsequently increased by the Legislature of eighteen hundred and seventy-five and eighteen hundred and seventy-six, to one hundred dollars per annum for each whole orphan and seventy-five dollars per annum each for half orphans and abandoned children, at which amounts the law still remains, these sums having been found sufficient to allay and shut out any further successful importunities for State aid. Now, sir, having briefly recapitulated the history of the system now in force in this State, I desire to submit, for the information of the committee, some of the statistics of the expenditures made under it. There are now within this State sixteen aylums which are in receipt of aid from the per capita tax, and they have received from this source, and direct aid since October eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, the following amounts:

Protestant Orphan Asylum, San Francisco.

Support of inmates, per capita	$69,845 96
Direct State appropriations	16,000 00
	$85,845 96

Roman Catholic Female Orphan Asylum, San Francisco.

Support of inmates	$93,988 85
Direct aid	10,500 00
	$104,498 85

St. Boniface Orphan Asylum, San Francisco.

Support of inmates	$4,909 53

St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Branch Orphan Asylum, San Francisco.

Support of inmates	$30,697 74

Pacific Hebrew Orphan Asylum, San Francisco.

Support of inmates	$12,314 08
Direct aid	3,000 00
	$15,314 08

Protestant Orphan Asylum, Sacramento.

Support of inmates	$22,201 12
Direct aid	3,750 00
	$25,951 12

St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, Sacramento.

Support of inmates	$4,360 28
Direct aid	1,500 00
	$5,860 28

Good Templars' Home for Orphans, Vallejo.

Support of inmates	$23,636 62
Direct aid	2,000 00
	$25,636 62

St. Vincent's Boys' Asylum, San Rafael.

Support of inmates	$108,014 86
Direct aid	8,500 00
	$116,514 86

Grass Valley Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, Grass Valley.

Support of inmates	$47,146 60
Direct aid	2,000 00
	$49,146 60

San Juan Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, San Juan.

Support of inmates	$2,743 66

Santa Cruz Orphan Asylum, Santa Cruz.

Support of inmates	$5,661 82

Pajaro Valley Male Orphan Asylum.

Support of inmates	$16,312 09

Los Angeles Orphan Asylum.

Support of inmates	$7,574 81

St. Vincent's Female Orphan Asylum, Santa Barbara.

Support of inmates	$8,715 45
Direct aid	2,000 00
	$10,715 45

St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, Petaluma.

Support of inmates	$3,640 00

Making a total, for the same period, to all the institutions of the State:

On account of per capita aid	$461,773 77
Direct State appropriation	49,250 00
Total	$511,023 77

Now, sir, from an examination of the figures of the cost of maintenance in the various asylums in the State, I select as a fair exhibit the figures connected with the operations for the past year for four out of the list, and located, as they are, in different sections of the State, and presenting as widely diversified characteristics as can be found in the whole list, they will give us the fairest idea of the whole number.

The Grass Valley Orphan Asylum, with one hundred and thirty-eight inmates, reports a total expenditure for maintenance of children of twenty-six thousand four hundred and fifteen dollars and thirty-five cents—an average of one hundred and ninety-two dollars and forty-two cents per capita. The Good Templars' Home, at Vallejo, with seventy-five inmates, reports expenditures of thirteen thousand two hundred and twenty dollars and seventy-four cents—an average of one hundred and seventy-six dollars and twenty-five cents per capita. The Pacific Hebrew Orphan Asylum, of San Francisco, with fifty-nine inmates, expenditures of fifteen thousand one hundred and sixty-three dollars and six cents—an average of two hundred and fifty-seven dollars per capita. The Santa Cruz Orphan Asylum, with twenty-three inmates, an expenditure of three thousand three hundred and five dollars and ninety-five cents—an average of one hundred and forty-three dollars and seventy-three cents per capita. Or in a total of four different asylums, in different sections of the State, under different managements and of different sizes as to capacity and number of inmates, we have: Number of inmates, two hundred and ninety-five; cost of maintenance, fifty-eight thousand one hundred and five dollars and ten cents; average cost per capita per annum, one hundred and ninety-six dollars and ninety-seven cents.

The average amount of State aid under the present law is about eighty-three dollars per capita per annum, and less than one half the amount shown to be required for actual maintenance. The foregoing figures have made no estimate and included none of the items which would properly be chargeable as a part of the expense, such as cost of buildings and improvements, and which I am perfectly within bounds in saying that it would represent an annual charge upon this charity of fully as much as the amount represented in the actual working expenses; therefore, Mr. Chairman, I am forced to conclude that the aid now extended by the law is no more than about one fourth of the cost of this benevolence that in the eight years covered by the figures I have given. Had the State been the sole almoner and dispenser of this fund, an expenditure of at least two million dollars would have been required to have secured a service which under the present system has been secured at an expense to the State of a half million.

The total number of children provided for by the private institutions in the State, as nearly as I have been able to get them, is one thousand seven hundred and three, and to provide for them as the committee contemplates would cost four times the present expenditure. And now, sir, to collect together and average some of the statistics of other States upon this question. In the comprehensive report of the Board of State Charities for Massachusetts, for the year ending September thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-six—and I may perhaps remark here in passing that in Massachusetts the system of official oversight and careful management of all public charities, reformatory institutions, and State supervision of provisions for the destitute, has received doubtless as much attention, and been the subject of as careful consideration, as in any of the States of our country—I find that in the eleven public institutions under the control of the State direct, that the average expense per capita ranged from ninety-seven dollars per annum in the Monson School to two hundred and thirty-six dollars and sixty-six cents in the Springfield School, and it appears, in commenting on the exceptionally low average attained in the Monson School, that the Board remarks of the Superintendent that "he has sometimes carried frugality to the verge of parsimony or beyond." Of the entire State the tables show that there were in all the public institutions an average number throughout the year of one thousand five hundred and thirty children, and the average cost per capita of maintenance was one hundred and twenty-nine dollars and seventeen cents per annum. This, of course, being the simple expense of maintenance, exclusive of any charges to improvement or repairs of buildings, and, of course, also excludes any estimates of interest invested in these institutions. In addition there are shown to be thirty-two private institutions for the care and support of destitute children, who, in the aggregate, support about two thousand children, at an expense of two hundred and twenty-five dollars per capita per annum.

The cases cited in the report of the minority of the averages of other States: Wisconsin, one hundred and forty-nine dollars and twenty-nine cents; Minnesota, one hundred and forty-one dollars and seventy cents; Maine, one hundred and forty-six dollars and twelve cents; Pennsylvania, one hundred and ninety-five dollars and thirty-three cents, which with the figures for Massachusetts, the cheapest of them all, one hundred and twenty-nine dollars and seventeen cents, shows that in five States the average cost for bare maintenance is one hundred and fifty-two dollars and thirty-two cents.

These figures, Mr. Chairman, in every case justify the conclusion that the system of provision for our destitute and orphaned children, now in operation, is by far the most inexpensive one that could be adopted or applied; that in no case, either in the history of the private institutions of this State or the history of the public or private institutions of any of our sister States, has the support and maintenance of these objects of the public bounty been provided for at figures as low as the amounts which have from time to time been appropriated in our State; and as the very able and convincing report of the minority of the Legislative Committee aptly sets forth, no sustained charges of misappropriation or maladministration resulting from the following of this system has ever been put forth, and no demand has ever been made at the hands of any political party for its abrogation. The only question, therefore, remaining to us, Mr. Chairman, in the consideration of this subject, is this: does the present system discharge in the best manner the duties incumbent on the State with respect to the beneficiaries?

To this question, I submit that a careful and unprejudiced examination of the history it has made can leave no doubt in the mind of any gentleman on this floor. These charities are now under the control of a class of our citizens who are drawn to the work by the noblest impulses known to humanity—who labor in the cause with no hope of selfish reward and for the gratification of no groveling ambition. They are high above and beyond the reach of the dirty cesspool of politics; and in view of the almost certainty of corruption which creeps into the management of all institutions when they are made the subject of political strife and political reward, I am thoroughly convinced of the absolute necessity of setting up an absolute and impassable line of demarcation between the management of this charity and politics.

With the general idea of protection to the State treasury sought to be attained by the section reported by the committee, I have every sympathy, and feel as deeply as any delegate in the Convention the necessity of surrounding the strong box of the State with such safeguards as will forever hereafter make it impossible for the unscrupulous lobbies to manipulate our Legislature so as to rob the people through the means of subsidies, grants, and special appropriations for the benefit of enterprises in which the State has no direct interest; and holding this sympathy, I have aimed to draw my amendment so as not to impair the vitality of the general idea sought to be established, but for the sole purpose of excluding from its application one particular character of appropriations of which no public sentiment has ever complained, and which every sentiment of duty, humanity, and economy demands shall not be restricted or abolished. In my consideration of this subject I have, as I said in the beginning, only looked at it from an economical standpoint; but I cannot refrain from saying, in conclusion, that if we are to have these homeless, friendless orphans in our midst grow up into useful men and women, they must be provided for while they are in that tender and plastic age, that they may be molded into virtue, or else they must take their chances in the other avenues of life, where they are more likely to learn the ways of vice, and I moreover do not desire to throw any discouragement upon the labors of that noble army of men and women who labor in this cause without hope of reward other than the consciousness of their own labor, and to whom weariness of heart is but the too frequent attendant of their efforts.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired under the rule.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: This subject has presented a fine opportunity for aspiring gentlemen to shoot reams of legal cap, and foolscap, and all kinds of cap at the devoted heads in this Convention. It was a sense of imperative duty that compelled the committee to offer this fine opportunity to these gentlemen, and I make no doubt but what the opportunity will be availed of to indulge in all kinds of buncombe.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: There was a motion made to extend the time.

THE CHAIRMAN. No gentleman was recognized. The gentleman from Sacramento secured the floor.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: I merely wish to make this apology to the Convention, and to say that that committee never contemplated for one moment the idea of leaving these orphan children unprovided for. On the contrary, they contemplated from the first that they should be provided for at least as well as they are at present. But it was a part and parcel of the general plan of that committee to take away from the Legislature this game of grab—this grabbing with both hands into the public treasury. This was a part of the general plan of that committee, and I myself say, in justice to that committee, that they gave this subject the most thorough, patient, and painstaking investigation; and they acted from the first with the view of cutting off from the Legislature the opportunity for special legislation and for special grabbing into the treasury, and this, as I aver, is a part of that system that they adopted to prevent indiscriminate pilfering of the treasury. It was discussed and understood that these orphans should be provided for by institutions over which the State should have control; and the chief argument and the chief motive that impelled the committee was to carry out the original design, the primary, central idea of our public school system. As everybody knows, the central idea of that system is to secure homogenitiveness in that system, by securing uniformity of text-books, etc., it is hoped in the future to secure something like uniformity of sentiment, so that we may have peace and quietness, and a oneness of sentiment in American people in the coming generation. This system of educating orphans in sectarian institutions, so far as it extends, has a tendency to educate them in hostile systems, so that the tendency in the future, instead of being homogenity, will be hostility of sentiment. Mr. Chairman, after gentlemen shall have expended their Fourth of July spread eagle oratory upon the poor orphans that they will tell you have been thrown upon the world by this section—after they have expended their ammunition—I hope to have a chance to say something more to the committee.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: I propose to amend by substituting the provision I have sent up to the desk, and which I ask the Secretary to read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of the Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances, such aid to be granted on a uniform rule, and apportioned to the number of inmates of the respective institutions."

MR. WILSON, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: There are several sections of this report of the Committee on Legislative Department which cover the same proposition which my amendment is intended to reach. The proposition offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman, does not go as far, because it does not reach any section except section twenty-two. The gentleman will find, by turning over the report of the committee, that there are four or five sections which will also have to be amended in order to reach the desired result. My amendment would accomplish this, for it reads: "Notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of the Constitution," etc.

I desire to say very little on this subject, because I think that very little will cover the whole subject-matter. I regard orphans and abandoned children as a rightful charge upon the State. They are wards of the State, and should be supported and taken care of by the State. There seems to be no public institution of this character at present in the State, and these orphans and abandoned children are supported by different private institutions. I believe that all the different religious denominations have orphan asylums—not only the Catholic, but the Protestant, Hebrew, and others. Now, these children are well taken care of by these institutions; according to my information, their general maintenance and support, their health, their morals, and their education, are all considered and cared for by these different institutions. I know of no instance of abuse existing in regard to the condition and management of the poor children in these establishments.

I do not know why the State from time to time should not grant aid to the institutions that are supporting the wards of the State. They have an equitable and just right to claim some aid from the State, and the State is, in reality, simply paying its own debt and supporting its own wards by making appropriations to these institutions for taking care of them. I do not care anything about what sect these children belong to, or to what religious denomination. I only stop to think that they are poor, unfortunate, fatherless children, independent of any religious question or any religious dogma. It is a question of common humanity. It appeals to our generosity in its broadest and widest sense, and I do not care anything about the religion of the parents of these children. The fact that the child is left without its natural support by the death of its parents, or by abandonment of the child by the parent, is sufficient, as it thereby becomes a charge upon the State, and the State should support it. I have attempted to word this amendment so that it would not conflict with any provisions of the Constitution, except those which are specified, and to make it as guarded as possible, and providing for aid by a uniform rule and apportionment according to numbers, thus avoiding favoritism and inequality. I think this covers all of the subject-matter necessary for the Constitution, and the rest could be well left to the discretion and judgment of the Legislature. I have embraced in this not only the maintenance of orphans and half orphans, but also of abandoned children. Now, in all ages of the world there have been inhuman parents who, for one cause or another, have abandoned their children. I look upon the abandoned child as being in a more hopeless condition than even the orphan. The orphan may have collateral relatives who may look after his welfare; but when a child is abandoned by its parents, its identity is gone, and it has no person to care for it. These abandoned children are left, generally, to the hospitals and asylums, and are orphans in fact. If I desired to elaborate a speech on this subject, I could refer back to ancient history—even back to the enlightened city of Athens. Athens, in its most refined period, had many children abandoned by their parents. They were abandoned because their parents did not care for them, or were in poor circumstances, or for some other reason, and they were left in public places to be picked up and adopted by strangers, or to perish. My understanding is that this class of children, as a general rule, has been taken to the orphan asylums, or those institutions which take care of poor children. They are as much the wards of the State as the orphan or the half orphan. There are also persons taken care of in such places as the Old Women's Home.

I think the State should be permitted to grant aid to such institutions as that. An old woman in poor circumstances is as much an object of charity and care on the part of the State as anything that can be imagined. For these reasons, I think this amendment should be adopted. I have nothing to say against the amendment offered by Mr. Stedman, except that it does not go quite as far as mine does. It does not reach those other provisions of the Constitution which my amendment reaches, and is, perhaps, subject to some other objections. I think that all there is that is good in his amendment is contained in mine, while mine is a little more guarded.

Whilst I am in favor of every retrenchment or reform, and against any appropriation of the public funds to any institution that is not entitled to aid, I think it would be unwise to take away from the Legislature the power to aid those meritorious institutions, who are maintaining the unfortunate children and destitute persons in whose behalf I intercede. I will further say that the language which I have used here in the amendment—orphans, half orphans, and abandoned children—is taken from the Act of the Legislature of eighteen hundred and seventy-seven-seventy-eight, page one thousand and eight, and seems to have come into general use in speaking of this class of persons, and for that reason I think the phraseology must be unobjectionable.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I wish to say that when this section, limiting State appropriations to State institutions was first inserted by the committee, a great principle was aimed at. I do not believe that the idea of orphans ever entered the head of the one making the suggestion. The principle has been declared in every State platform for years. It was to the effect that parties were opposed to this limitless power of the Legislature to vote away the people's money. The people have never tired in asserting this doctrine, and it was to strike out this great principle that the committee inserted this section. When it was seen, on review, that their amendment cut off the appropriation to orphan asylums, the committee reconsidered it. Parties appeared before them, on behalf of these institutions, and made strong arguments in their favor, and yet the committee, conscious of the great reform covered by its amendment, still decided to retain it there by a vote of eleven to four.

MR. BIGGS. Say a portion of the committee—not all of them.

MR. FILCHER. There were only four that could be rallied to sign the report against the proposition. Now, I repeat, it was a principle that we aimed at. Let us look at the evils that this amendment cuts off. I have taken the pains to obtain from the Controller of State the amount of the appropriations made for the year, and it may be interesting to the Convention to know that they reach almost one million of dollars—nine hundred and ninety-four thousand one hundred and forty-one dollars and some cents are exactly the figures. In this amount, to be sure, is included much for the support of purely State institutions. For instance, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for this Convention. But for miscellaneous purposes, outside of the essential elements of government, for this person and that person, for this object and that object, the appropriations amount to over one third of a million—three hundred and eighty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-one dollars and sixty-seven cents. Now, sir, that is a great burden. I know that the people are in favor of supporting the government and all the institutions necessarily incident thereto.

MR. WELLIN. How much of that money went to the orphan asylums?

MR. FILCHER. One hundred and ten thousand dollars, I believe. I wish to say that I have been misrepresented on this proposition. I say that I do believe in my heart that there is not a man on this floor that has more inate sympathy for these poor abandoned waifs than I have. I am poor myself, and liable, like others, to be called away at any time. I have small and helpless children; and I sometimes shudder when I think that if I were taken suddenly away they would be left in poverty; and I want a provision, and a wise one, for the protection of all little innocents who are thus unfortunate. I am opposed, however, to the present system. I think that a State system or county system, such as could be devised, would be much better. Under the present system the orphan is shut in from all the busy and instructive world around him. I do not pretend to criticise the management of the institutions, nor the character of the treatment the children receive, but I know of reason that if the child lives to the age of fifteen its struggle is a hard one at the best, and when he or she is turned out at that age what does the child necessarily know? In what condition is it for battling with life? In what condition is it to contend with the world and to start out to make a living? How can it know, when it has been confined nearly all its days behind those high walls, that which is necessary for the struggle of further existence in this world? It is turned out with a knowledge perhaps of some little needlework and a little arithmetic, but it knows nothing of the outside world or of the contests it has got to engage in.

Now, I wish to read from the report of the Board of Charities of Massachusetts, where they adopted this very proposition in reference to orphan asylums. They assert that:

"Institution life, in its best estate, is but a poor substitute for family life, and it is a very meager affair, indeed, when it does no more than give food and clothing, neglecting the weightier matters of such teaching as looks to self-subsistence, and such training as furnishes the moral stamina on which success in life depends. Careful examination of the yearly and special reports that have come to hand, gives the impression that only a portion of these institutions take any particular pains to train inmates to the habit of intelligent and vigorous industry. There is danger, on the one hand, that the child will find the asylum which receives him and enters his name on its books, hardly more than a halting-place on the downward ways of poverty; while on the other hand, it is to be feared that he may come to regard an institution of some kind as his proper home, and support by the public as his rightful heritage."

Take for instance the Children's Mission to the Children of the Destitute: "The current expenses of the Mission average about eight thousand dollars annually, though during the past year they reached the sum of eight thousand four hundred dollars."

That is but a sample of the whole thirty-two institutions in that State that receive their income and support from other sources. Not one of that thirty-two does the State aid in any particular. Then, again, I claim that if we should withdraw this aid these institutions would not necessarily go down. So far as they are established by religious denominations, they are largely the outgrowth of Christian charity, and Christian charity will maintain them to the extent of its ability. Yet, what they fail to do, it becomes the province of the State to do, or the State through the counties—and to do it well. And I say, sir, that inasmuch as they have established these institutions, and contributed the money for building the houses and setting them in motion, so should they continue to keep them in running order. When the orphan asylums were built did they get State aid? Had they any reason to believe that State aid would be contributed to support them? No. It is a provision that has been made by the Legislature, session after session. They must realize that they are dependent upon themselves.

But again, while some gentlemen urge us to support this system, they oppose the very same doctrine when applied in another direction. It is the doctrine advocated by Zach. Montgomery on the school question. His idea of the school management corresponds precisely with the principle that is now brought forward and sought to be maintained in reference to orphan asylums. The eloquent gentleman from San Francisco declared that it became the duty of the State to assist in maintaining these wards, since charity people had started in to do it, and because the State had assisted them so far it ought to continue to assist them. Now, will not the same argument hold good in reference to our school system? Are not the children the wards of the State? Are we not under the same obligation to support these children—to educate them? I say we are. And yet, following up that same line of argument, if I should come here and start a school, will I have the right to obtain State aid to assist me in my enterprise? I would be taking from the State a portion of its burden; I am taking so many children and assuming to educate them; I take that responsibility off the State, and I have the right to come in and ask State aid, if the arguments on the other side are to hold good. And yet, when you are asked by Mr. Montgomery to apply this to the school system, you say no. In this respect Massachusetts has been consistent. She has established a school system and provided for the education of the children; and she has carried the same principles into the asylums.

While I repeat I am in favor of the very best protection to the orphans that can be given them, I do not believe that the best results can be obtained from the present system of asylums. Assuming that all these institutions should go down if we cut off these appropriations, which I hold would not be the case, then it would become the duty of the State to make every necessary provision for the protection, education, and support of these children. Suppose we should make a provision that each county should take care of the orphans within its limits; I can readily imagine how some good old man or woman, or both, could be found to take charge of them and bring them up as their own, in the presence of other children, and under the eyes of the friends and neighbors of their deceased parents.

THE CHAIRMAN. Time.

SPEECH OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. Chairman: I shall not detain the Convention very long. In the feeble health I am in, it would be impossible for me to say what I should like to say; but, having been one of the committee that signed the minority report, I believe it my duty to make some explanation or statement to this Committee of the Whole. In doing so, I do not intend to make any spread-eagle speech, as has been suggested by Dr. Caples. It is known that I was one of the members of the Committee on the Legislative Department that took the position that it was the duty of the State to make some appropriation for the private asylums of the State. I believed it was best to support the orphans in that way, and I believed it was economy to the State; that they would be better trained and cared for than they would be to allow the State to go on and build asylums, and employ teachers, and have them educate them. I took that position as an economist. That, sir, was one of the reasons why I made this minority report. That is one of the reasons why I opposed the action of the Legislative Committee, and I thank God that there is a goodly number of that committee who will stand by this minority report; and I trust this Convention will adopt the amendment offered by my friend from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson. What are the facts? I do not propose to go into general details, but I propose first to state what I presume every one will admit, that the State is the guardian of these children, or stands in the same relation that the parent does to the child. Now, I appeal to this Convention whether they are going to turn them loose upon the world, or put them in your large asylums under the care of paid officials. I believe it would be a bad policy. I believe they are wards of the State, and upon that point I believe there is no difference of opinion, that the State should take care of them. I ask the gentlemen of this Convention just to let it run through their minds for one moment. Take, for example, the State's prison, the insane asylums, and the deaf and dumb asylum. Gentlemen, if you put them into asylums you will have to employ people to take care of them. And you must erect your asylums, and, in doing that, we all know it is let out to the lowest bidder to say who will take charge of them. I say that it is better for the State to do as she has done on former occasions—to make appropriations to aid these institutions that are now taking care of these children, and pay about eighty-four dollars per capita for taking care of these orphans, as will be seen by the minority report of the committee.

Take the one hundred dollars for whole orphans, seventy-five dollars for the half orphans and abandoned children, and it makes about eighty-four dollars per capita that they are cared for under the present system, and they are brought up in the fear of God and become the admiration of the world. Some gentleman said that he did not want any spread-eagle speeches on this occasion. I do not intend to make any spread-eagle speech, but I propose to take the side of the orphans. I do not want to see the little female waifs cast upon the streets to fill houses of prostitution; neither do I want to see these little boys turned out upon the world to, alternately, fill prisons, or to have them crowded into large asylums where the teacher and the keeper of the asylum is paid a big salary to take charge of them. I ask you, Mr. President, and every gentleman upon this floor, if it is not economy for the State to provide for the support of these orphans as it has done in the past? You may take the history of the other public institutions in this State, and I will commence at the insane asylums at Napa and at Stockton, and the Deaf and Dumb Asylum and all other asylums in this State, and it costs one thousand dollars per capita to provide for the inmates of these institutions. Now, sir, when people—I care not whether they belong to one sect or denomination or another—when they propose to take them and keep them for the simple appropriation of eighty-four dollars per capita, to clothe and feed them, educate, and instruct them in the paths of virtue and teach them to shun vice, should they not be allowed to do so? What has happened here in the City of Sacramento within the past few days? The children in the orphan asylum of this city have been afflicted with the diphtheria, and the citizens of this town have appropriated between eighteen hundred and two thousand dollars for the relief of the Protestant Orphan Asylum in Sacramento City during that time. And yet, gentlemen say, we propose to erect asylums. I tell you it will cost over one thousand dollars per capita to take care of them, if you take as a basis the Napa Asylum and the Deaf and Dumb Asylum of this State. My friend, Mr. Filcher, knows that in the committee I made an urgent fight on this thing. My friend Judge Hale and I disagreed only upon one question, and that was, that while I thought it was best to leave the orphans in charge of those who are now taking care of them, he thought it was best, even if it cost more, to let the State build these institutions.

Now, gentlemen, suppose any of you were to be overtaken by misfortune, and were to leave a wife and family of helpless little children—and this is only supposing that which might happen to any of us; upon her death she leaves these little children, and would you say to her that she should not be allowed to designate where these little ones should go—whether they should be sent to a Catholic, or Protestant, or any other asylum? Are you going to deny that dying mother of the privilege of saying where these little children shall be reared, educated, taught, and cared for? I trust this Convention will never be guilty of such an outrage as that. I hope they will allow the mother, in such a case as that, to look after the careful moral training of her children. All over the world they say that California is the pride of America—that she is the pride of the United States. Now, with all her boasted pride and wealth, these gentlemen here propose that she shall cast her orphans out, or huddle them together like sheep in a corral. I believe that you had better turn upon them the artillery of your State and kill them at once, and prevent them from filling houses of prostitution, and the prisons, jails, and penitentiaries of the State. In regard to erecting asylums for them, I say that there is a job in every public building that has been put up in this State. I appeal to every gentleman upon this floor if there has ever been a public building erected in this State but what there has been a job in it. If you build your orphan asylums by the State, I want to know if you have not got to have your keepers, your stewards, and your teachers to educate them, and the State pays for it. Now the State does not pay a dollar. It is all done by these noble men and women who have charge of these institutions. I call the attention of the gentlemen to the minority report. My health will not permit me to go into this matter. I would have made that report more lengthy had it not been for the fact that I have been upon a sick bed for some time, and this is the only time that I have been up all day, and it may be the last time that ever I will attempt to address this Convention. If so, I thank God I have had the privilege of appealing to my colleagues and the delegates representing this State in forming our organic law, and I hope that as a crowning act they will adopt that amendment, and that we may in the future protect the orphans, as we have in the past.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I withdraw my amendment in favor of Mr. Wilson's.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the gentleman will be allowed to withdraw his amendment.

No objection was raised.

REMARKS OF MR. O'DONNELL.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of this amendment offered by Mr. Wilson. It provides that "notwithstanding anything in this or any other section of the Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances," and that "such aid shall be granted on a uniform rule and apportioned to the number of inmates of the respective institutions." Now, Mr. Chairman and my fellow delegates, you all remember, as well as I do, that a few years ago, the State undertook to take care of the orphans, and what was the result? She expended eight hundred and ninety-four thousand dollars for an institute and finally she had to abandon it. Now, for instance, if you undertake to take care of these orphans, as a good many of the members have proposed to do, it will cost in the first place for a building, over a million of dollars, and it will cost over a million of dollars to support them afterwards. At the present time, it only costs twenty-three dollars and seventy-five cents for an orphan, according to the last report. Two years ago it cost the State something over seventy thousand dollars; now it does not cost quite twenty thousand dollars to take care of these orphans, and now you propose, in shape of reform, to saddle this State with a million of dollars expense every year, and a million of dollars this year to build an institute to take care of these orphans. How have they been taken care of for the last fifteen or twenty years? I say that the best educated children in the State have been educated in the orphan asylums, and I defy any man to deny that. The finest educated women and children in the State have been educated in orphan asylums at the expense of these private institutions. That you know is a fact. Now, Mr. Chairman, it is not necessary for any one to speak or take up any length of time in the discussion of this question, because we all understand how this has been conducted for the last fifteen or twenty years. We have seen the result of it, and we have seen the benefit to the State. I do not think that you or anybody else should dictate to me where I should send my orphan children in case I should die, and to say that they should be educated by the State is ridiculous. I am satisfied to leave it to the Legislature. This amendment seems to be a good provision, and I hope it will be adopted. I know it is satisfactory to everybody in the State.

MR. WELLIN'S REMARKS.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: Owing to the short time we have to speak I shall not attempt to make much reply to the gentleman who speaks about spread-eagle speeches, because I prefer rather to deal with facts than to deal with spread-eagles. He says that the committee wishes to prevent grabbing from the treasury. I shall show him, by facts and figures, where the stealing comes in. He says that these institutions are hostile to the educational system of the State. I desire to know if we have any proof of that fact—that the tendency of Christianity has yet proved an injury to civilization. I maintain that from the very first day that the Pilgrims landed on these shores, that this has been a Christian community, and that Christianity has gone hand in hand with civilization, notwithstanding the sneers the gentleman may throw upon it. I also call his attention to section four of the Bill of Rights in our Constitution: "The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State," and no State will be a free and prosperous State without it. The gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher, asserts that we are arguing in favor of the same kind of proposition as that advanced by Zach. Montgomery the other evening. I assert that we are not, and that Mr. Montgomery is not supported by any one in his views, and that was shown when he attempted to talk the committee to death the other evening. He started in with forty or fifty people, and ended with an audience of seven. He complained bitterly that people did not side with him; but he must stand by himself. Here is one fact which I desire to state: I have been informed that not one of these orphans, reared in these institutions, has ever been found in the State Prison at San Quentin. I have not the proof of this myself, but persons who have had a good opportunity of knowing, have told me that not one of these children, who have been reared in the private orphan asylums of California, has ever been in San Quentin. A few years ago the State of California undertook to manage this thing itself. I might refer you back to the early days of California, in eighteen hundred and fifty, when the City of San Francisco undertook to manage the charities on its own account, and the result was that they lost two thousand acres of city property to settle the trouble they got into. Now, as I propose to deal with facts, and show these gentlemen something in regard to the economy that they talk about, and the grabbing from the treasury, I will refer to the Appendix to the Journal of the Assembly of the sixteenth session, and read to you a few extracts in regard to the institution built at Marysville, one of the institutions started by the State of California as an experiment.

MR. HALE. Do you not know that it perished, because it was in a malarious swamp?

MR. WELLIN. The facts are before us. And even if it was in a swamp, it showed the stupidity of officers in placing it there, and the fact of its being stupidly located does not change the figures or the facts as to the money it cost. Here are some of the items in the cost of taking care of thirty inmates:

Salaries	$10,940 84
Drugs and medicines	163 54
Groceries and provisions	4,284 53
Hats	186 00
Drygoods and clothing	2,188 85
Books and stationery	59 74

These are some of the figures. Now, if they bought a worthless piece of land, in order to make money for those who owned it, that does not change these expenses. I am glad the gentleman spoke of that, because it shows where the jobbery came in. There were thirty inmates. They must have been well supplied with hats, for it seems they spent one hundred and eighty-six dollars for hats; and for "books and stationery, fifty-nine dollars and seventy-four cents." The teacher was paid three thousand seven hundred and twenty-five dollars to use up fifty-nine dollars and seventy-four cents worth of books and stationery. They must have been well supplied. The whole institution cost, for the year, twenty-five thousand five hundred and sixty-seven dollars and sixty-eight cents, or a per capita of about four hundred and twenty dollars. The same number, in one of the asylums, under the present management, would cost the State two thousand five hundred and fifty dollars; a saving of twenty-three thousand and seventeen dollars and sixty-eight cents. We are told that this is a spread-eagle speech, but I consider it solid facts. In their report, the managers say: "We have done all within our power, with the limited sum at our disposal, for the care and improvement of those whom the State has intrusted to our charge, but the condition of our finances has been such that, with every retrenchment and the practice of the strictest economy, we have been compelled to neglect many things which were of great necessity. The appropriation for the sixteenth and seventeenth fiscal years will be exhausted by the first of December, and we will need, for the balance of the present fiscal year, an appropriation of, say, seven thousand dollars, being one thousand dollars per month for the necessary current expenses."

Now, I wish to call attention to the report of the Joint Hospital Committee in eighteen hundred and sixty-seven-eight, in regard to this State Reform School, as found in the Appendix to the Journal of the seventeenth session. They say:

"The whole is surrounded by a high inclosure, and both internally and externally bears unmistakable evidence of neglect. The farm contains one hundred acres of fine land, very little of which is under cultivation. Your committee are decidedly of the opinion that the law creating a State Reform School should be abolished. As now conducted it seems more as a school for vice than for moral instruction. Convicts of some eighteen or twenty years of age are allowed not only to commingle with young children who are placed there for protection, but to control and in a measure direct them during the day, when it is not convenient for the Superintendent to be with them. The Trustees of the Industrial School at San Francisco propose to take charge of the boys now in the State Reform School for the sum of twelve dollars and fifty cents per boy per month, for the next two years, conditioned that the Legislature will appropriate two thousand dollars to such school for building purposes the present year, which are absolutely required if the said boys are received."

So much for a grand State school, where they mix the old and vicious criminal and the innocent youth together. Here is what the same committee says of the Protestant Orphan Asylum of San Francisco:

"Here, again, the committee can only express their gratification on witnessing the operations of this noble charity. Had they the time and space to dwell upon its merits, they could not in language half portray its substantial beauties. This is emphatically a home for the helpless. In this institution your committee found two hundred and nineteen children, nearly all of whom were under the age of twelve years, and undergoing the most perfect system of training of the Catholic Orphan Asylum. The committee are satisfied that this institution is also doing great good by dispensing a needed charity to many destitute children."

Now, perhaps gentlemen may think we have been particularly unfortunate in this matter of charity. Let me take them over the mountains, into Nevada, and read a few bills from the reports of the eighth session of the Nevada Legislature, eighteen hundred and seventy-five. They had the Nevada State Asylum, taking care of thirty-nine children, at a total cost of fourteen thousand three hundred and seventy-two dollars and thirteen cents. Among the items are:

Salaries	$4,985 00
Provisions, meats, and general supplies	4,052 99
Drygoods, clothing, boots, and shoes	2,001 89
Schools books and stationery	56 15

They must have been well educated there. Thirty-nine inmates, and it cost the State about three hundred and sixty dollars per capita—the salaries alone amounting to four thousand nine hundred and eighty-five dollars. And this is the grand State institution that the gentlemen ask us to come to. Now I call your attention to the report of an institution in San Francisco—the twenty-sixth annual report of the Protestant Orphan Asylum. The total expense for eighteen hundred and seventy-six was twenty-six thousand nine hundred and seventy-nine dollars and thirteen cents. Among the items are some extraordinary or unusual expenses, such as—

Repairs and improvements	$3,624 89
Furniture	1,541 63
Tax and insurance	1,390 19
	$6,551 69
Which leaves a current expense of	20,407 44

They took care of one hundred and seventy-one inmates, at a per capita of about one hundred and twenty-two dollars and fifty cents, and the State contributed nine thousand two hundred and seventy-six dollars and fifty cents. Had these been in a public State institution, it would have cost seventy-one thousand eight hundred and twenty dollars, and this after the erection of buildings and the purchase of grounds, and the other necessary outfit, which would cost from two hundred and fifty to five hundred thousand dollars. Now, to sum up: At Marysville, to take care of thirty inmates, the salaries were ten thousand nine hundred and forty dollars and eighty-four cents; in Nevada, thirty-nine orphans, salaries, eight thousand one hundred and thirty-seven dollars and ninety-nine cents; Protestant Orphan Asylum, one hundred and seventy-one inmates, five thousand and twenty dollars and fifty cents. And this is the system of reform proposed by the committee. This is the grab that the Doctor has told us so wisely about. I hope that this committee will see it in its true light, and adopt the amendment.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: There seems to be no one opposed to this amendment, and it is, perhaps, an act of supererogation to argue in favor of it; but I cannot refrain from expressing my views briefly upon the question. The principle involved in the section reported by the committee is a correct principle—that the treasury of the State should be protected from invasions from every quarter, if possible. But no rule was ever framed by human ingenuity to which there was not an exception, and if ever there was a proper exception it is in the case of the orphan asylums. I do not, although the argument is a good one, place my advocacy of this exception upon the ground of economy, although I believe the argument is immensely in favor of the present system of State aid to these institutions. But I place my advocacy upon the ground of the welfare of those little fatherless and motherless waifs of humanity. I remember of reading once a novel by Charles Dickens, entitled "Oliver Twist," I think that was the name of it, which contains a very extensive description of the method of official bringing up of orphans and abandoned children. We have there a picture of the parochial official, of the parochial father and the parochial mother. They are brought up according to mathematical principles—so much meat and so much bread. So also with regard to the clothing, and I believe they even played according to a stated mathematical principle. They were brought up by the ear, and when they were turned loose on the world the brand of the official parochial institution stuck to them through life. They were known all through life as the creatures of public charity. Sir, in the interests of humanity, in the interests of these poor little waifs, I protest against interfering with these benevolent and religious men and women who devote their lives, who devote their time, from principle and from conscience, to the welfare of these unfortunate children, and become in loco parentis to them. In a sense they are fathers and mothers to them.

Now, sir, a child requires the application of a different rule and of a different principle than those who are also proper objects of State aid, such as inebriates, deaf and dumb, blind, and destitute persons. These do not require training; their habits are formed already, and all they require is support. But as to the children, something more is necessary. You want to furnish him, as long as it is possible to do so, with that which is the life and soul of the child, and that is a home, and the surroundings of a home, the training of a home, and the influence of a mother. The thing that makes his little eye bright and his little heart glad is to be treated as if he were at home, surrounded by those influences. Brought under these influences, they will make good citizens, and good fathers and mothers. These, sir, are the reasons why I am in favor of a departure from the principle, and for the application of this exception. And I, sir, have no sectarian feelings. I do not fear to allow them to be taken care of in these institutions because some religious instruction may be given them. The State is in no danger. It has not been in the past, and it will not be in the future. These exaggerated fears never should deter any man from giving his support to this proposition, even assuming that these institutions are sectarian; that they are trying to sap the foundations of free institutions. It is only a flea-bite, anyhow; it is only a small portion of the community anyhow, and it is a fact that the line of training given is the same line of bringing up as they would have received from their natural father and mother if they had been alive, and the State never ought to descend to an inquiry into what were the antecedents or religious belief of the parents when it proposes to give the child aid of that character.

MR. FILCHER. If that is the case, why do you not favor the appropriation of the School Fund for sectarian schools?

MR. BARBOUR. Because the State cannot afford to split up the School Fund. It is necessary to the efficiency of the schools that the fund should be preserved intact. But now we are dealing with another matter. The State undertakes to furnish food and clothing to the children, and a home and shelter, that is the difference. If the parents of that child lived, and they had chosen to bring up that child at home, under the influences there with which they chose to surround it, the State could not have any objection to it. The principle is a different principle. As I understand it, the State does not exclusively support these children, and never was expected to. A large portion of their support is drawn from private charity that is given to these particular benevolent men and women, to be used in their own judgment and their own discretion. I do not believe that any of them entertain any designs against the State or against free institutions. Not at all. I do not suppose that there is one single man upon this floor who believes that there is anything but a purely disinterested and religious impulse that causes them to do this, and, therefore, it strikes me as exceedingly small, thin prejudice upon which this opinion is based. I hope this exemption will be made, and I hope it will go no further, because the rule that applies in this case does not apply in others.

PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I believe the committee have heard this matter discussed sufficiently. I move the previous question.

MR. REYNOLDS. I hope the gentleman will withdraw the motion for one moment.

THE CHAIRMAN. There is a second to the motion. The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

The main question was ordered, on a division, by a vote of 61 ayes to 36 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'State,' in line seven, as follows: 'Provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances, such aid to be granted on a uniform rule and apportioned to the number of inmates of the respective institutions.'"

The amendment was adopted by ninety affirmative votes.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add, after Mr. Wilson's amendment, 'Provided further, that the State shall have at any time the right to inquire into the management of such institutions.'"

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. Chairman: My object in this amendment is, that the State, as has been said by Mr. Wilson, is the father of its children, and I want the father to look into the conduct of his children. I say, if a corporation receives any subsidies from the State, the State has the right to control the corporation, and on the same principle, if the State appropriates money for the support of these institutions, the State has the right to inquire into the management of them; not to direct them, but to see what use is made of that money granted by the State. I hope that the amendment will prevail.

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding after the word 'Legislature,' in the tenth line, the following: 'Provided, that no sum greater than fifty dollars shall ever be donated by the State to any one orphan or person per annum.'"

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I second the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The first question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Vacquerel.

The amendment was adopted by an affirmative vote of ninety-one.

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. Chairman: It occurs to me that fifty dollars would be an ample sum to donate to each and every one of the orphans of the State.

MR. EDGERTON. Do you think fifty dollars will support a child for a year?

MR. McCONNELL. It will partly support a child.

MR. EDGERTON. What part of the child do you propose to support? [Laughter.]

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I second the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento. I believe there should be a limit. The greater evil in this matter comes, perhaps, from the wrangle to procure the aid rather than the nature of the aid itself. Heretofore, if I have been rightly informed, the appropriation has not averaged that much a year. It has never been regulated in accordance with the absolute needs of any particular institution. It has never been shown, to my knowledge, when these appropriations have been asked for, that the whole of the institutions absolutely needed all the assistance asked, while it has been true that in many instances the institutions have been amply able to maintain themselves. Now, sir, I am in favor of fixing the amount and stopping future wrangles. If fifty dollars is not the right sum change it, but by all means have a limit. By doing so we will drive away the lobby. Different Legislatures have granted different sums—twenty dollars, forty dollars, and lastly seventy-five dollars and one hundred dollars; and this, not according to the need, but according to the influence that was brought to bear on members of the Legislature to make the amount greater or less.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to this limitation, and I hope that this Convention will not fix any limitation in this matter. I believe that the Legislature is just as good a judge of the amount that ought to be appropriated as this Convention is. Here we are laying down a rule for all time. The Legislature, in its judgment, can make these regulations every two years, according to the exigencies of the circumstances. Now, sir, it may be that fifty dollars per year at present is enough, but I do not know of any abuse of this discretion that the Legislature has ever been guilty of. I do not know that the Legislature has ever been accused of giving the orphans any too much. Now, while fifty dollars may be amply sufficient at present, we all know that the purchasing power of money changes. Fifty dollars ten years ago would not go further than twenty-five dollars would go at present, and we do not know but in the next few years the purchasing power of money may decrease; we do not know but that the currency will be inflated. We have got a large party in the United States now in favor of an inflated currency. It might be that the currency will be inflated so that a bushel of money would not buy enough hay to feed a cow. I hope the Convention will take into consideration the fact of the financial condition of the country at this time, and that this may extend for a hundred years or fifty years. I certainly hope, sir, that this limitation will not pass, and I do not believe that the Legislature will abuse this discretion.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that there should be some limitation in this matter. It is urged that the Legislature will know just as well as this Convention knows. It may be that the Legislature will know just as well what should be constitutional law as this Convention knows, but there is pressure sometimes brought to bear upon Legislatures which in this case is evidently not brought to bear upon us. There will be pressure brought to bear upon the Legislature, and they might, under certain great influence, act different from what is demanded at their hands, but if there is a constitutional limit it will free them from this class of embarrassment. I am perfectly satisfied that most men would wish, under such circumstances, some constitutional provision for their protection. I can see nothing wrong in it, and I can see considerable of principle that is right, for the protection of right with regard to this matter.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will not prevail. Now, as has already been stated, these orphans have to be taken care of, either by the State or by private charity; it is simply a question as to which is the best method—to have the State take care of them entirely, or to appropriate a sufficient amount as a supplement to private charity. In any event, it is the duty of the State to take care of them, and it seems to me that you must necessarily leave this matter to the Legislature. They have got to be taken care of by the State if we intend to live in a civilized country, and it is simply necessary to ascertain how much the State must donate as a supplement aid to private charity.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will not pass. If we propose to do anything, let us place no limit upon the Legislature. As has been aptly stated, the purchasing quality of money changes. Fifty dollars may be considerably more or less to-day than it will be ten years from now. If we limit them to fifty dollars we give the Legislature no discretion at all. It is not merely a matter of sympathy or justice towards these orphans, but it is a matter of absolute necessity under the existing circumstances. If this Constitution goes into force and effect, and this aid is cut off from these orphans, or limited to the paltry sum of fifty dollars for each one, then these children who have been receiving aid, and these institutions who have been receiving donations from the State, will be cut off at once, and they will not be able to proceed with their charities. The State cannot by magic erect orphan asylums, or the houses necessary to take care of the poor and poverty stricken. It takes time to do these things, and even if the State intended to do it, this aid must continue for a time, and it must continue in its present form if we do not desire, by a simple amendment, to turn these poor children, these fatherless and motherless orphans, upon the cold charity of the world; and I, for one, shall never vote for anything of that character. I believe that the Legislature is qualified to deal with this question. It has never been charged that the Legislature has been corrupt in granting this aid, and I believe that the matter should be left in the discretion of the Legislature.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McConnell.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer a substitute for the section. I propose to offer the present section of the present Constitution for the section as it now stands. This is section twenty-three of the old Constitution.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in accordance with appropriations made by law. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public money shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature."

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: This is section twenty-three of the present Constitution. The Committee of the Whole, Mr. Chairman, have seen proper to reverse the action of the Committee on Legislative Department upon this subject, and I am not going to say but what the Committee of the Whole may have done right. That is not the question now before us. It is proper to say, however, that the main object of the majority of the committee was to accomplish the very point which has been reversed by the Committee of the Whole. It was that class of institutions which are provided for in the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, that the committee had in view to stop appropriations for, intending that all these institutions or class of institutions should hereafter be managed by the State. Now, as this amendment has been adopted, it is an invitation, it is a suggestion in itself to the Legislature hereafter to make such provisions, cutting out of it appropriations for all other institutions whatever except the institutions specified in the amendment. I am aware, Mr. Chairman, that there are many persons who are opposed to appropriating money for agricultural societies and district fairs. They would be opposed to an appropriation for the State Fair, though I believe the Agricultural Society of the State is a State institution. I merely refer to it. It has been the custom heretofore to make appropriations for district societies to a limited degree, it being claimed that they were as much entitled to it as the State Society, and I do not know but there is about as much reason in the one case as in the other. My object is not, however, to advocate that there should be, but merely to present this point, that inasmuch as we have now changed the whole object of the amendment reported by the Committee on Legislative Department, we had better leave the Constitution as it was, and not give preference to any particular class of institutions which are not under the control of the State. Let them all stand alike. Therefore I offer this amendment.

THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Alameda. The proposition embodied in the report, in section twenty-two, covers a variety of subjects. The only exception I think this Convention desires to make is the one they have already made. The other restrictions upon the Legislature are deemed to be very important, that, "No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation." Right there is the question. There is now five thousand dollars appropriated for the State Agricultural Society, and the Legislature would not have the power to repeal that Act. That appropriation should be stricken out. I do not believe that the State should appropriate any money for State agricultural or district agricultural fairs; they have become horse-racing and gambling schemes.

MR. HILBORN. Does not the gentleman know that not one cent of the money can be used for horse-racing.

MR. LARKIN. That is the principal object of these appropriations.

MR. HILBORN. Not one dollar can be used for horse-racing.

MR. LARKIN. But the object is to encourage that class of gambling, which should be stopped. I hope the section will remain as amended; that this Convention will determine that it is proper in its present form, and not strike out the section.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. Chairman: I wish to read to the gentleman a clause in the Act appropriating money for the State Agricultural Society. In section one it says: "The money so drawn by each society shall be used for the purpose of paying premiums for the different kinds of live stock, and the various agricultural, mineral, mechanical, and manufacturing products of the State, and for no other purpose; and no part whatever shall be given, in any contingency, in purses for horse-racing."

MR. LARKIN. The principal object of the fairs is jobs to fleece the public. I am opposed to the State paying, directly or indirectly, for horse-racing, or any kind of gambling. Let them stand on their own bottom.

MR. REED. If I understand the gentleman from El Dorado, he says the object of the fairs is to put up jobs to fleece the public.

MR. LARKIN. I say it has been used for that purpose.

MR. REED. I pretend to say it is a slander upon the Agricultural Societies of this State. I know whereof I speak, and I know that the agricultural people of this State would deem it a slander. I say that not one dollar has ever been appropriated for horse racing that has ever been given by this State. I was President of this State Agricultural Society for ten years, and I know the charge of the gentleman to be a slander.

MR. LARKIN. The gentleman must misunderstand me entirely. I say that the conduct of these institutions is such that the gamblers come there.

MR. REED. Gamblers come to camp meeting also. I would ask the gentleman from El Dorado if he ever comes.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. Chairman: I had the honor of being a Director of the State Agricultural Society for six years, and I was President one year when we had no appropriation at all, and I most emphatically declare that we did not encourage gambling or any other vice, and there was never one dollar of State money appropriated to horse racing.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment will not be adopted. I was opposed to the amendment adopted by the committee, but having been adopted I hope it will be allowed to stand. There was several other lying-in hospitals and humbug institutions in San Francisco, that by one means or another obtained appropriations of money to private institutions, which are nothing in the world but a grab. I do not know but they are as bad as the horse races are represented to be by the gentleman from El Dorado. But now that we have adopted an amendment which especially excepts the orphan asylums and those for aged and indigent persons, let us adhere to that and exclude all other institutions for the purpose of grabbing money out of the treasury.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

The amendment was rejected.

AGED AND INDIGENT FEMALES.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. I desire to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to Mr. Wilson's amendment: 'Provided, that institutions having care of aged indigent females shall not refuse to receive such on application.'"

REMARKS OF MR. WALKER.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. Chairman: I offer this for this reason: The amendment of Mr. Wilson says:

"Provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of the Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances; such aid to be granted on a uniform rule, and apportioned to the number of inmates of the respective institutions."

Now, sir, it is well known in the counties of this State—some of the counties I can positively speak for—there are three or four indigent females, ladies very aged, that are absolutely—and have been for many years—suffering and in great distress for the want of a proper institution in which to place them. I can speak from personal knowledge in my own county. In Tuolumne County the Supervisors have met on several occasions, and I have been called in to consult with them myself, and we have found it utterly impossible to take care of them. The county is so small that they could not be taken care of and respectably supported in connection with the County Hospital, as it would require the erection of an apartment which would have to be supplied with female help. There are some of them now in a deplorable condition. Now, sir, I am satisfied that if the State is going to give money to these institutions, there are institutions in this State that could take care of these people, and they ought to be compelled to take them in if they receive State money. The counties having one, two, or three of these people could make application to these institutions, and they would be compelled to receive them, and it would meet with the hearty support of every person in the State. I hope that the gentlemen of this Convention will give this matter serious consideration, and look upon it in the light that I hold it myself. There are very few who are acquainted with these peculiar cases; these come to my knowledge professionally. As I have said, there are one or two deplorable cases in my county, and we have not been able to get them into any institution. We have ladies who have stood in high position. Their friends have died off and left them in old age in this deplorable condition, and they certainly need some action from this Convention.

MR. REYNOLDS. I move to amend it so that it shall read: "Provided, that institutions having the care of orphans, half orphans, abandoned children, and aged indigent females, shall not refuse to receive such, upon application."

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. Chairman: I only wish my amendment to apply to those institutions that have charge of aged and indigent females. I would not expect them to receive aged females in an orphan asylum. The gentleman misunderstands me. My object is to have these institutions that are taking care of aged and indigent females take in all that apply. I do not allude to men, because they can go to the County Hospital. Under the gentleman's amendment, if they should make application to an orphan asylum they could not be refused.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that we are entering upon a domain that we are not entitled to enter upon, by adopting such an amendment as that. We have no right to say to these institutions how they shall manage their affairs, and what discretion they shall exercise, provided no great wrongs or improprieties are committed. Now, the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Vacquerel, gives the State the right to inquire into the management of these institutions, and, if there is any improper management or abuse existing there, the State could refuse to make the appropriation, or take such other action as might be necessary. The power is left in the Legislature altogether. This merely enables them to give aid, and the Legislature would exercise sound discretion every time it would give. If any institution was improperly managed, or was conducted in such a manner as to offend the public morals, they would receive no appropriation. But to say that every institution should positively receive all applicants, is going too far. Suppose they are full. That is a good reason for refusing to receive an applicant, and yet, under the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tuolumne, they would have still to receive. They might have to go and employ more servants, or erect more buildings. There are various reasons why the institution should not be compelled to take all that make application. I hope the amendment will be lost, and that when these institutions show that they are actually supporting these children, they may receive aid. I do not think we have a right to say they shall receive everybody that may apply.

REMARKS OF MR. WALKER.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. Chairman: The gentleman will understand that perhaps there are not twenty-five females in the condition which I state. It was to get the vote of my people for the Constitution. There has been a great deal of feeling in this matter, and I think, in this particular case, where there are so few persons of this class, if we should provide that when they make application to those institutions having charge of that peculiar class of people, they should be received, it would take that distinctive character out of it; it would take away that feeling of sectarianism. For instance, a church or private institution may be opened for the care of this class of persons, and will receive only a certain class. I say that such an institution has no right to call upon the State for money for its support, where it is of a distinct, sectarian, or private character. Now, if they will open their doors and make it of such a public character as to receive these twenty-five or fifty people, then they have grounds for applying to the State for money. I say these people are in a most deplorable condition, and I do not believe that these institutions are unable to receive these few individuals. I believe that they are supported mostly by ladies, and I am very sure they would not object. It is because these people never get to them. The counties never send them forward. I wish the gentleman to observe that I am looking out for the future. The State needs an institution of this kind, and this will be a stepping-stone. I think if gentlemen will take a proper view of it, they will find that the institutions would make no objection so far as the numbers are concerned, for it never can overrun them, and it would place the thing before the Legislature in a better light. The people of my county would understand it in that way.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The Convention took the usual recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M. President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and a quorum present.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I ask for a correction of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings. I find my name among the absentees. I was not absent. I was here all day, and answered to my name.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. Section twenty-three and pending amendments are before the committee. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amendment offered by Mr. Walker of Tuolumne:

"Add to Mr. Wilson's amendment: 'Provided, that institutions having care of aged indigent females shall not refuse to receive such on application.'"

"Amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Reynolds:

"Amend the amendment so as to read: 'Provided, that institutions having care of orphans, half orphans, abandoned children, and aged indigent females, shall not refuse to receive such on application.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. I wish to add to my amendment the words, "In their respective institutions."

MR. WALKER of Tuolumne. Mr. Chairman: I will accept the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I hope, sir, this amendment will not prevail. I suppose every one here understands these asylums are not public, but private institutions, supported mainly by the self-imposed charity of those who have hitherto voluntarily established and maintained them. In San Francisco there are Protestant and Catholic orphan asylums, and other institutions, which have been in existence for years, and been supported entirely by private charity, long before the State made any appropriation to aid them. The habitations which have been constructed for their use are quite insufficient to accommodate the whole State. If this amendment should be adopted it would be obligatory upon these institutions, if they received any aid from the State, to admit all who might apply, which, for want of accommodations, it would be impossible to do, even if they were so disposed, and necessarily they would have to close their doors against all, or decline all State aid. They could not comply with the conditions imposed upon them by a constitutional provision as proposed by this amendment. Whenever the State shall establish, and take the management of orphan asylums, or asylums of any kind, for the unfortunate or indigent, we will have the right as well as the privilege of declaring all shall be provided for. But whilst we are dependent upon private charity, and not exclusively on State aid, we should leave the management to those who have constructed the buildings and established the institutions.

The orphan asylums now in existence have not been established by the State, but by such funds as charitable ladies have contributed and solicited from charitable individuals, and the property does not belong to the State. Now, the amendment offered by my colleague, if it should prevail, would close up these institutions. Suppose the State should grant fifty dollars per year, or one hundred dollars, as the case may be, per capita, it would not be sufficient for the support of all these orphans. And yet you would say that unless they receive every applicant they should be denied all aid from the State. At the last session of the Legislature the appropriation granted to aid these institutions in supporting these children, was one hundred dollars for each whole orphan, and seventy-five dollars for each half orphan and abandoned child. Now, who would undertake to support these children, to clothe and feed them, give them house room, employ persons to attend to them in sickness and in health; I say who would undertake to do this for the sum of seventy-five dollars per year per head? I doubt whether any one would attempt such a thing.

The State has been quite liberal, and with the large charities of individuals, the children have been, so far, well taken care of. A hundred dollars each for orphans, and seventy-five dollars each for half orphans and abandoned children, is not sufficient for their entire support. And why should you make it compulsory upon these private asylums to receive every one that applies, or else deprive them of this donation? It would be exactly right, provided the appropriation of the State was adequate to the support of the inmates without any other aid from any other quarter. But it is not adequate. Why should you say, therefore, that the orphan asylums in the City of San Francisco should receive orphans from the whole State, when the State has not built these buildings, when the State does not maintain them except in part, and the buildings themselves are inadequate for the purpose of supporting all the orphan children in the State, or even of that city. I would agree to the amendment if the appropriation was adequate to the support of these children, but it is not adequate, and you have no right to ask private individuals to pay the money out of their own pockets to support all that may apply, in order to get the State appropriation. That is not the purpose of this charity. It should not be the purpose of any amendment to compel any asylum to do that thing unless the State apropriation is made sufficient to enable them to do it. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. Chairman: I would ask, if the State considers it necessary that these institutions shall take sole care of the orphans, etc., and contribute money sufficient for that purpose, whether or not these institutions do not become quasi institutions of the State?

MR. HAGER. They do so far as the State aid is concerned. But it is a partial aid, as I said; if the aid was sufficient for the entire support of the orphans, then it would be all right. These buildings cannot accommodate more than fifty or one hundred apiece. They have not the room. They are limited in their capacity. Why would you compel them to do that which it is impossible to do?

MR. WALKER. It would not be considered impossible. If these institutions are going to take it upon themselves, the supposition is that they will erect buildings to accommodate all.

MR. HAGER. How can they do it?

MR. WALKER. We have voted that the State shall contribute sufficient money.

MR. HAGER. The State has not contributed one dollar towards the building of the orphan asylums of the City of San Francisco. They were put up by private charity. They have not the capacity to accommodate all that apply at this time. They have no funds to build with, and all that the State has appropriated hitherto is not sufficient to maintain them. Why ask them to do that which they cannot do? If the amendment went so far as to provide buildings it would be all right. But it does not. Why, then, ask them to do what is impossible unless you wish to close their doors; because I am sure they will not undertake to do that which they cannot do.

REMARKS OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. Chairman: It seems that the result of this amendment would be to take from the managers of these institutions the discretion as to who they will receive. As I understand this measure, it would only be necessary for any person to make an application, claiming that they were within the description given, and if they were refused, that will be cause for the Legislature to refuse to make any appropriation for the institution. Now, it seems to me that this would place the institution entirely at the mercy of its enemies. I believe that it is necessary to give that discretion to the managers of these institutions, in any view of the case. Would it be proper for any such an institution to receive a woman without knowing anything about her, about her previous character, or know whether she was a proper person to be associated with children, or not? Certainly such a measure as this would tend to destroy the usefulness of the whole institution, if I understand the measure correctly.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. It does not propose to put these women in the orphan asylums.

MR. REDDY. Mr. Chairman: That is the way I understand it. I do not understand that the section is so worded as that the aged female must make application to an institution provided for that class of people especially.

MR. WALKER. That is the provision.

MR. REDDY. Then I will abandon the ground I have been going over and take another view of it. Certainly, they must first provide accommodations, and after they have accommodations they must receive them; but they are compelled to do so under the amendment; they are compelled to receive the person, and they are to receive a small stipend for the maintenance of these persons, but nothing for the building. Each institution is compelled, under the law, to receive any person who may make application.

MR. WALKER. The supposition is that the Legislature will make provision for these emergencies.

MR. REDDY. For buildings?

MR. WALKER. If an orphan asylum refuses to receive an orphan what is to become of these orphans? It is proposed to make these institutions quasi institutions of the State. I want to make them the institutions of the State. I am in full and hearty support of the institutions, but I want to enable every place in the State to enjoy the benefits of them.

MR. REDDY. I did not understand the measure so when I first addressed myself to it. Your idea is that there shall be ample provision made to enable these institutions to erect buildings and furnish them?

MR. WALKER. If it becomes necessary.

MR. REDDY. And who will own the buildings then, the institution or the State?

MR. WALKER. That is for the Legislature to decide.

MR. REDDY. Then I have nothing more to say.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I am sure if the abandoned children and the orphans and the half orphans have understood what an immensity of political reputation depended upon their existence, they would be abandoned for life. I am sorry to see such a wonderful sensitiveness, and if there is any compensation for having been cut off from making my little speech this morning by the previous question, it is that forty-seven other gentlemen, whose desks are so full of manuscript on the subject, that they cannot get the lids down, were likewise cut off. Now, sir, I am in favor of this amendment, because these wonderful institutions, which have such a paternal care over the orphan and the half orphan and the abandoned child and the old woman, having received now the benefit of State appropriations—all they can get out of the Legislature—ought to assume some of the responsibility. Mr. Chairman, there is not, within the boundaries of the State of California, but one institution where there is any power by law under which you can place an orphan within their walls. For all that is on your statute books, the streets may be full of orphans and abandoned children, and no power on earth could compel an institution, except one, to receive one, notwithstanding the appropriations by the State. But what I wish to accomplish by the amendment which the gentleman from Tuolumne has accepted, is that we shall provide that, when the Legislature has enacted a law, giving them an appropriation under certain regulations, that it shall be compulsory upon them to receive all; they must receive them. If they are going to assume the care of the orphans to the exclusion of the State, let us provide by law that they must do it. Why not? I see no reason.

And further, Mr. Chairman, a good deal was said this morning of the cost. It was cheaper to do it this way than it was the other. I will allude to a single institution that has been kept out of politics. Thank God, there is one in the State! and thank God, also, that it is in the City and County of San Francisco! I refer to the City and County Almshouse. Sir, there is a model institution. It is the only one where there is any power to put an orphan. And what is the result? Why, sir, that notwithstanding all of the orphan asylums all over the State, that institution that was designed only for the aged and infirm, contained, on the average, during last year, sixty children, and has at present seventy-five.

Why? Because the other institutions in the City of San Francisco would not receive them; because there is power to put them into that institution. And as to the cost. It costs but little more to put them there than the State now appropriates to the orphan asylums. I am opposed to this whole business, because I believe that the State should care for its orphans. It is sound in theory, and it cannot be wrong in practice. I forgot to say that it cost in that institution but one hundred and forty-six dollars per year per head, and that is but little more than the State appropriates to the orphan asylums. There is no doubt that the correct principle is that the counties, and, if we had township organizations in this State, the townships, should take care of the indigent and the orphans. I hold that it would be better for the orphans to be raised in the communities where they belong—in the communities and among the friends of their youth, where they are born. I hold that the community itself will, in an awkward, stumbling way, raise these children better. They will send them to the public schools with the other children. They will grow up there with the other children, and when they become of age they will have a local habitation and a home among their acquaintances, an acquaintance among men of enterprise, an acquaintance with the world, and will be much better off than being herded in the large institutions now paid by the State.

MR. REDDY. I rise to a point of order. The matter being discussed by the gentleman now was fully discussed this morning.

MR. REYNOLDS. I am willing to stop if it will injure any of the reputations of these gentlemen.

MR. JOYCE. What institution did you refer to as being a model?

MR. REYNOLDS. I referred to the City and County Almshouse of San Francisco.

MR. JOYCE. Do you know anything about the money he spent here last Winter, trying to get into office?

MR. REYNOLDS. Do you know? How do you know anything of it? I do not know anything about it; and having been kept out of politics is sufficient reason for the success of the institution. The remark I make is that it can be done. I wish now that these institutions simply be held responsible, and that there be some power to compel them to receive and take care of the orphans of the State, if they are to be intrusted with that duty by the State and are to be paid by the State for it.

SPEECH OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee: This is a matter of much importance that we are dealing with, and I trust that we shall deal with it with prudence. I think it makes a difference of a good many thousand votes, and I address this to those gentlemen who are desirous that the people may adopt the Constitution which we may pass upon here. Now, the question as it stands, if I correctly understand it, is that section twenty-two is not emasculated. It is added to. Section twenty-two runs thus:

"SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution, not under the exclusive management and control of the State as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws of every regular session of the Legislature."

As I understand, no part of that has been stricken out, but an amendment has been adopted, which reads in this wise—that is, by adding at the end of the section, after the word "State," this: "Provided, that, notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances, such aid to be granted on a uniform rule, and apportioned to the number of inmates of the respective institutions."

Now, that has been adopted by the Committee of the Whole, and I shall assume, as I believe it has been done in good faith, that it is expressive of the sense of the committee. Now, the pending amendment, if I understand it, reads this way, by adding to Mr. Wilson's amendment: "Provided, that institutions having care of orphans, half orphans, abandoned children, and aged indigent females, shall not refuse such on application to their respective institutions."

I do not know who is the author of the last amendment, but I would suggest to him that in order to make it conform to the amendment already adopted, that the word "female" should be stricken out, and the word "persons" substituted for it. Will the gentleman accept it?

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. I do not think it is necessary. The County Hospitals take care of all indigent males.

MR. HALE. Mr. Wilson's amendment provides for "orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances."

MR. WALKER. I think it would defeat the whole object in view. I tried to explain that there was a small number of old infirm indigent females, who are now left entirely without support, and in a most deplorable condition. My object is to have these particular females taken care of.

MR. HALE. Your purpose is to require that they shall be received without distinction.

MR. WALKER. Of course. There is no distinction, in my mind; they are all in need.

MR. HALE. Of course, if it be not agreeable to the gentleman, I do not wish to urge it. I am in favor of the amendment with the suggestion that I have offered, so that it will apply to indigent persons whether male or female.

MR. WALKER. I do not presume that Mr. Wilson's amendment provides for indigent persons.

MR. HALE. Yes, it does. I will read it again: "Provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances."

MR. WALKER. I see it does.

MR. HALE. Now will you accept the amendment?

MR. WALKER. No, sir. That is not my object.

MR. WHITE. Under your amendment could the fourteen thousand people who were starving in San Francisco last Winter get into the orphan asylums?

MR. HALE. I do not know whether they could or not. I am discussing the question from the standpoint of the committee's action. Now, what was the object of the Committee on the Legislative Department? They have little opportunity to explain the motives of their report on this floor thus far. It was this: that while we recognize the fact that the orphans, and half orphans, and abandoned children, and aged persons in indigent circumstances spoken of are properly the wards of the State; that they are entitled upon every just consideration to receive the support of the State; yet the purpose was to secure it to be done under general law, and upon terms that should be equal, and conducted in State institutions, so that the money which is drawn from the treasury might be applied to all those persons in the classes enumerated wherever they might be in the State. That was the policy of the committee. Now the Committee of the Whole has modified this to the extent of allowing this system of supporting the orphans in private institutions to be continued, and providing that the State treasury shall bear, in part, the expenses of such support.

MR. WALKER. I will accept that amendment proposed by the gentleman.

MR. HALE. Mr. Chairman: I still say with this amendment, as it now stands, we will accomplish the purpose in this way: while by your action you have allowed this duty of supporting them to be taken by private institutions, this amendment aims at this result, that wherever these wards may be, whether in San Francisco, San Diego, or Siskiyou, in Placer or Monterey, wherever they may be, they shall have a right to go to these institutions, and be permitted entrance there, and be supported upon equal terms with the others.

MR. BIGGS. Does not that take in Chinese women and children?

MR. ROLFE. Chinese prostitutes?

MR. HALE. I do not know how that may be. It will be determined by law. The State owes as a duty a guardianship to its wards. No gentleman will deny that it is a duty. You have decided that you will perform this duty through these private institutions. Suppose there be six persons in the county where I reside. By what right can they go to these institutions and demand entrance? By none whatever. There is no power to place an orphan in one of these institutions except the management of the institution upon their own sweet will see fit to do it. The amendment seeks to remedy this evil. Since the State proposes to allow these institutions the charge of the orphans, and proposes to pay for their support, all the wards of the State should have the benefit of the money.

MR. HAGER. The amendment already adopted provides that the aid shall be granted on a uniform rule. It does not apply to one any more than another.

MR. HALE. But suppose we have no such institution in Placer County? How can they get into institutions in San Francisco?

MR. HAGER. You cannot.

MR. HALE. The policy is, that since the State pays for it, all persons in like necessitous circumstances, wherever they may live, shall have the benefit of that fund and have the right to entrance and support there. I appeal to the sense of justice of this committee, is not this right? I am not one of those who agree with the policy of the committee here, to substitute private charitable institutions to perform the duty, but having adopted that, is it not right that you should give all of them the right, the common right of entrance there and of support? I ask every gentleman to weigh this matter well, and I implore you to do this act of justice. We have had orphans and indigent persons in our county, and have had no place to put them. Why? Because the State has none. Because of this system of appropriating money to these private institutions, there is no public asylum in the State. The State has none, never has had, and never will have, so long as you have this system. But you have adopted it, and as an act of justice, I hope that the committee will adopt this amendment, and provide that all these persons, wherever they may live in the State, shall have a common right of entry and support in these institutions, and it strikes me that the ends of justice will be accomplished.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that the amendment now proposed is only an adroit move to defeat the action of this committee, resolved upon this morning. If it were true that the State proposed to appropriate for these institutions a sufficient sum for the maintenance of all the orphans, half orphans, and abandoned children, then there would be a reason why every applicant should be admitted; but the State has not proposed to do anything of that kind. She only proposes to pay a portion of the expenses which the institutions are now compelled to maintain, and now, as a condition of her paying a portion of the expenses which are ordinarily incurred in these institutions, she insists that they shall assume an obligation, the extent of which cannot be measured.

MR. LEWIS. Does the provision adopted this morning prescribe the amount the State may pay? Does it not leave it to the Legislature to pay anything that is necessary?

MR. FREEMAN. Yes, sir. The proposition adopted this morning might cause the Legislature to make an adequate compensation, but it is not to be expected that the Legislature is going to donate to these institutions the full amount necessary for their support. But it seems to me that the point must be reached in every institution when that institution is full, and when it is full I do not understand how it can accommodate any more. For instance, we have, within a short distance of this building, an orphan asylum. It is capable, I will assume, of accommodating fifty orphans. It may be full. Every orphan may be accommodated there that can possibly be accommodated, and yet, under the provisions of this amendment, that institution has no right to any appropriation unless it shall take every other orphan which shall thereafter apply. In other words, it must agree to do that which no institution can do, to bring itself within the section as agreed upon this morning, if this amendment is adopted. Another feature of the amendment is its broad character. They must admit every orphan and every abandoned child that applies. Under the provisions of that clause, it would be necessary for them to admit an orphan twenty years of age, that is fully capable of maintaining itself. The truth is, that these men who are controlling these institutions understand them better than we do. They have to take into consideration who are proper persons to be admitted there; and, again, it seems to be manifest that there are orphans or children in the State whose moral character is such that an institution of that kind could not afford to admit them indiscriminately—whose moral character is such that it would operate badly upon the other inmates of the institution. This discretion of who shall be admitted and rejected, must necessarily be left to the persons who maintain these institutions. I am asked what is to become of them? I do not know what is to become of them. It must be one of the ideas of this Convention that we shall shut off and shut up, as far as possible, the charities of the State. We have already adopted a section which will close the doors of the treasury to many worthy charities. We have cut off all appropriations for benevolent societies, and yet, because, under the limited language of this amendment as it has now been adopted, we cannot find a place to put these persons, it is urged that this matter should be made more objectionable than it is now.

SPEECH OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the committee: It seems to me that the true criterion of this whole matter is that of limit. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, says that by the amendment we have already adopted, we have placed the orphans exclusively in the control of these institutions. "Exclusively" is the word that the gentleman from San Francisco uses. The gentleman is mistaken. We have not attempted to place the care of the orphans and indigent persons exclusively under the control of these private institutions. Now, there is a vast difference between these private institutions and institutions that are maintained and cared for by the State, and the difference arises exactly upon the point of limit. These private institutions receive aid for the persons they have actually cared for. The basis of the aid is the number taken care of, and therefore it cannot be any injury to the State. If the institution says, "We will take care of one hundred orphans," or, "We will take care of two hundred indigent persons"—for, in the one case, the State pays for the one hundred orphans, and in the other case it pays for the two hundred indigent persons—it does not pay for any more than are taken care of. If the private institution limits its numbers, it thereby simply limits the amount of the appropriation; and who has got anything to complain of? If it limits the amount of the appropriation, certainly the State cannot complain. They have a right to place a limit upon the number of persons they take care of, and they have a right to say what kind of persons they will take care of. The State can only say: "If you do not take care of a certain class of persons, we will give you nothing at all;" but, after the class has been disposed of, the institution has the right to say how many they can accommodate, and the State cannot complain, whether they take care of a greater number or a less. There is always a limit to the capacity of private institutions, but there is no limit to the capacity of State institutions, in a certain sense. The State must take care of all of its poor, of its orphans, of its indigent, and of its sick. It is a duty that properly belongs to the State, and, where charitable institutions, benevolent institutions, or hospitals established by private enterprise, see fit to take the burden off the shoulders of the State, and the State says that, "By reason of your doing that which properly belongs to us, we will give you a certain amount of aid for every person that you take care of," they have a right to say how many persons they will take care of, and, consequently, will see just exactly how much aid they propose to appropriate. There is no harm done, there is no injury done to the State, and there is no wrong done to the institution. There are many reasons why these institutions should have the right to say who should be admitted within their quarters, why they should have the right to say how many persons shall be admitted, and if the institutions are not properly conducted, all the State can do is simply to say: "We will give you no aid. We will cut off the aid entirely." Under these circumstances they certainly have a right to designate who and how many they will take. I cannot favor that kind of an amendment. The amendment which has already been adopted does not place it exclusively within the control of private institutions. We desire to perpetuate and continue the existence of every benevolent institution within the limits of the State; and because we do desire to perpetuate, and because we do desire to continue them, therefore we desire to give them aid; but it in nowise cuts off the State from going into the same business.

MR. CONDON. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

The motion was seconded by Messrs. Joyce, Belcher, Tinnin, and Moreland.

The main question was ordered, by a vote of 70 ayes to 15 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The main question has been ordered. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tuolumne, Mr. Walker.

The amendment was rejected, on a division, by a vote of 53 ayes to 60 noes.

MR. WINANS. I desire to offer an amendment. I would like to read it myself. Amend section twenty-two by inserting in that portion of it which constitutes the amendment of Mr. Wilson, the words "or invalid" after the word "aged." It now reads: "Provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of the Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances; such aid to be granted on a uniform rule, and proportioned to the number of inmates of the respective institutions." Now, my object is to reach that class of persons who are invalids, and I desire to insert before the word "aged" the words "or invalid," so that they will be embraced within the provisions of this amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The amendment is not in order. The amendment of Mr. Wilson has been adopted, and cannot be again amended.

MR. LEWIS. I propose to amend the section as it now stands. Insert between the word "circumstances" and the word "such" in line ten, the words "or to any benevolent institution." That is to go in the tenth line of Mr. Wilson's amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. It is out of order.

MR. WINANS. I propose to amend section twenty-two by inserting the words "or invalid," so as to take in that class. Is that in order?

THE CHAIRMAN. No, sir. The Secretary will read section twenty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 23. The members of the Legislature shall receive for their services a compensation, per diem and mileage, to be fixed by law, and paid out of the public treasury; but no increase of the compensation shall take effect during the term for which the members of either house shall have been elected.

MR. LARKIN. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Members of the Legislature shall severally receive for their services, a sum not exceeding six dollars per day; in addition to the foregoing per diem, members shall receive, as mileage, a sum not in excess of ten cents per mile for each mile necessarily traveled to and from the place of holding the session; each member shall receive at each regular session, an additional sum of thirty dollars, which shall be in full for all stationery, postage, and other incidental expenses."

"The members of the Legislature shall receive for their services in full, as compensation, a sum to be established by law, not exceeding five hundred dollars, for each regular session, and two hundred and fifty dollars for each called session; provided, that mileage shall be allowed at the rate of twenty cents per mile for one way only."

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can only offer this amendment as an amendment to the amendment. Is there a second?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I second the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I would say, as an explanation of my position, in offering the amendment to this report, being a member of the Committee on Legislative Department, that I struggled hard, in the committee, to secure this amendment, and it was defeated in the committee, and obtained a universal consent of the committee to offer this amendment in the Committee of the Whole. I argued there on the general principles of fixing salaries; that it became incumbent upon us, if we at all believe in the principle, to at least fix the maximum to be allowed, whether we fixed the salaries of such officers or not. I contended then that if the maximum to be allowed was fixed, and it was fixed on an economical basis, with them having the power to regulate, that the principle would stand itself throughout the whole system of government. We have seen, sir, in the past, attempts, as often as each Legislature is convened, to reduce the salaries in California, and in response to that sentiment, the Convention has already reduced the salaries of the State officers; and, now, sir, to correspond with the reduction we have made, I claim that we should fix at least a maximum for the members of the Legislature. It is argued in reference to this, and also in reference to the salary of the Governor and State officers, that we must pay fair compensation for good services. I agree with the sentiment, Mr. Chairman; but I argue now, as I did then, that there must be a limit. It is conceded that the legislative office never was a money making office in California, while it would pay enough to support any man in the commonwealth, to live respectable, while he attended a session here, still it would not pay any more than that. It has been enough to pay his legitimate expenses, sufficient to maintain him respectably during the session, and it seems to me that six dollars a day is about a fair medium. In view of the changed condition of affairs; in view of the fact that the purchasing power of money is so much greater than it has been; that wages have come down in every direction; why should there not be a reduction in the pay of legislators? Why should they receive so much more than they are paid in any other portion of the Union? I will give some of the per diems paid in other States: In Illinois, five dollars; Indiana, three dollars; Iowa, five dollars and fifty cents; Maine, two dollars; Michigan, three dollars; Minnesota, five dollars; Missouri, five dollars; Nebraska, three dollars; New York, three dollars; Ohio, five dollars; Oregon, three dollars—I wish to call special attention to that in our sister State—it is three dollars. Now, if there be any good reason shown, why we, in California, should pay ten dollars, when three dollars has proven sufficient in Oregon, I would be glad to hear it. If it can be shown that high salaries produce competency; if it can be shown that the Legislatures in Oregon are proportionately weaker, I wish to hear it. Pennsylvania, seven dollars; Rhode Island, one dollar; Wisconsin, three dollars and fifty cents; Alabama, six dollars; Louisiana, eight dollars; Texas, eight dollars; Virginia, six dollars; West Virginia, three dollars; Nevada, eight dollars; California, ten dollars. It will be observed that the average is below four dollars. The State of Nevada, situated the same as we are, prompted by flush times and mining excitements, and induced by the general high prices, fixed a maximum, and fixed eight dollars per day, even two dollars less than we have allowed here in California. We find outside of this State, that the highest prices are paid, in some of the southern States, where these carpet-bag governments have secured the supremacy and rule. The average per diem in the conservative States, the good States of the Union, where wisdom, intelligence, patriotism, and everything good in government prevails, is less than four dollars a day. In view of that fact, it seems to me that this is a fair maximum for California.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I would like to ask the gentleman if he does not know that the last Legislature cut down the pay to eight dollars a day, to take effect next December?

MR. FILCHER. I am aware of that. Now, the bills of members of the Legislature for stationery have been as high as fifty, sixty, and eighty dollars. I am satisfied that that privilege was greatly abused; and it amounts to nothing less than legalized stealing on a small scale. I am satisfied that thirty dollars is amply sufficient for all incidental necessary expenses of a short session, for the length of the time fixed here in the Constitution. Thirty dollars will buy all the stationery that any member will use during the ordinary term, and by all means it ought to be fixed; and this privilege of drawing indiscriminately and packing home stationery by the trunk full ought to be stopped—a thing which I have known to be done.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to the provision of the general amendment, and in favor of paying a gross amount to a member of the Legislature, and that that pay shall be in full for all services; that there shall be no consideration for postage stamps; for stationery; for paper bills; or for washing, or for anything else. Each man shall provide himself with everything he needs connected with his position as member of the Legislature. Five hundred dollars is sufficient compensation for any member of the Legislature of California under the provision of the Constitution which we propose to enact here, doing away with special legislation, limiting our term, etc.; and I believe that the true policy is to pay our members by the term. It will encourage members that come to the Legislature to take hold of the work and proceed without delay, and not depend simply upon their per diem; for if they complete the work in forty days it is five hundred dollars, and if it takes them eighty days, they receive but five hundred dollars. If members of the Legislature come here with the understanding that this is the only compensation, they will complete their labors in less time than if they draw a per diem for an indefinite period. The idea of giving stationery and stamps to members; there is no reason in it. The practice has been followed in many of the States. When the Sergeant-at-Arms had the privilege of purchasing and dispensing stationery, the stationery consisted of anything and everything—from a corkscrew to a barrel of whisky, or a bouquet. The stationery necessary for a member here will not exceed ten dollars; many will not use five dollars' worth. Let each member buy his own. Limit them to twenty cents a mile for one way only; they can return or not, as they please; that will be sufficient for them.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I was in hopes of getting an opportunity to offer an amendment to Mr. Filcher's amendment. I desire, at the proper time, to offer an amendment to that amendment, striking out "six" and inserting "five"—five dollars per day. Permit me to say, Mr. Chairman, that I believe—and I will repeat the remark made the other day on the floor of this committee—that whatever time we limited the Legislature to, we should pay the members a per diem. There is always an element in the Legislature, whether in California or any other State, that is in favor of adjourning and getting home with the least legislation possible, whenever their interests may not be served by remaining. Therefore, if the session of the Legislature should be a short one they will receive a per diem, and if it is a long one they will receive a per diem, and if the interests of the State require a longer session they will receive pay for that longer time. I hope that the committee will not adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, but will adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher, with an amendment making it five dollars a day instead of six.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The reason of my offering that amendment I might have stated more fully. I propose to again move in Convention to strike out all limit to the session of the Legislature. I believe in limiting the pay and not limiting the time that the session shall last. I am in favor of that proposition, and others in favor of that proposition favor striking out the limit which we have already passed, as to limiting the time in which the Legislature may sit, and placing the limit upon the pay.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment of the gentleman from El Dorado will not prevail, because it ignores the fact—remarked by some philosopher, I do not know when or where—that there is a great deal of human nature in mankind. By giving a salary of five hundred dollars, unconditioned as to time, I presume we might have very brief sessions of the Legislature. I do not know any good reason why a session should hereafter extend over thirty days, in view of the fact of the report of the committee here in section twenty-five, which, if it should be adopted, contemplates general legislation in all cases. Why the Legislature should be in session over thirty days is more than I can comprehend, and I believe in some of the States their Legislatures have remained in session but thirty days; therefore, five hundred dollars would be entirely too much. I am opposed, also, to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher; first, because it is unnecessary legislation in the Constitution. An Act of the Legislature has already passed——

MR. FILCHER. Most all of the other States have found it necessary.

MR. MCCALLUM. Not most all of them. A number of them, it is true, have done so. It was formerly provided in this State, in the first instance, that the per diem should be sixteen dollars per day. Afterwards, in eighteen hundred and fifty-three, I think, the per diem was reduced to twelve dollars per day. In eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, the per diem was reduced to ten dollars per day; and at the last session of the Legislature the per diem has been reduced further, to eight dollars per day. That is one half. It may be that eight dollars a day is a dollar or two too high. That may possibly be true; but to fix an inflexible rule in the Constitution that it shall be six dollars a day, or eight dollars a day, or five dollars a day, it seems to me would not be very wise legislation. It is true that the purchasing power of a dollar now is considerable more than when the per diem was fixed at sixteen dollars, at twelve dollars, or at ten dollars per day. I am not enough of a financier, and I do not know of anybody else who is, to tell what is going to be the purchasing power of a dollar, while this Constitution shall last, provided it shall be adopted by the people. It appears to me the Legislature has done very well in making a reduction of eight dollars, and it is beneath the dignity of a Constitutional Convention to attempt to legislate to the extent of two dollars on a per diem, and fix that inflexible rule, and a specific rule, as I understand.

Another argument in favor of the section is this that it is section twenty-three of the present Constitution. It proposes no change. Again, we have adopted an amendment already which provides that after sixty days there shall not be any compensation whatever. Now, if there should be a session, necessarily extending beyond the sixty days, ten or twelve days, it is understood that the legislators get nothing for their additional time. That certainly is an argument in favor of not fixing this inflexible rule. The Legislature has already fixed the per diem, and in the absence of anything in the Constitution, it stands as the rule, therefore there is no necessity to legislate upon the subject. Among the numerous objections which are made to us outside of the Convention, that which I hear most frequently is, that we are legislating too much. I am perfectly aware that that comes from ignorance of what we have done, for there are a good many who are taught to believe that such is the case. They read the original proposition and do not read any further; perhaps that is enough for them. No, sir, I submit that we had better take the Constitution as it is, with the action of the Legislature, upon that subject, and inasmuch as we have reduced the session to sixty days—no per diem after that. The per diem has been reduced by law to eight dollars per day, and we might as well leave it right there; but to fix an inflexible rule, without knowing the purchasing power of a dollar in the future, is to do a very unwise thing in a Constitution. There are many things which may operate to change the purchasing power of a dollar. Why, if in the city where you reside, persons who are engaged in mining operations are to be believed, the Comstock is worth one hundred and fifty millions of dollars, with a prospect of being worth fifteen hundred millions of dollars, it will have its effect upon the value of coin. I do not think these things are very probable, but they are within the range of possibility, and even such things as that do affect the purchasing power of a dollar throughout the whole world. The gold which has been produced in California has revolutionized the world, as regards the purchasing power of money. Sir, I do not know how it is elsewhere, but in the part of the State which I have the honor, in part, to represent, the complaints have not been made on that score; the objection has been to the scheme connected with legislation, and not to an honest compensation of honest and faithful officers.

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: It is surprising to see the mania which affects a large portion of this committee. Propositions are brought up from time to time which seem to aim at economy, but when sifted down it is in effect but a degradation of the public service. So it is with this amendment. It would be, in my opinion, demoralizing and degrading to the public service. If any portion of the remarks which have been urged upon this floor against our legislators in the past is true, then, sir, there is still greater reason why the law should remain as it now is, that legislators should receive the sum of eight dollars per day. In the past they had ten dollars; but as I understand it now, the pay of legislators is eight dollars per day and mileage. Now, sir, I believe that is little enough for any man of honor to come to the Legislature and do his duty to himself and to the people of this State. If you lessen the amount, then, sir, in my opinion you open the door to the corruption which has been charged to have been used so freely. It is sufficient, in my opinion, for this committee to judge of the conditions of men; judge of the motives that may impel them; consider human character; consider its human frailty; consider that men are liable to be tempted; that they are subject to the tempter; that men are necessarily imperfect, and that those imperfections always will remain; admit that there is a growing sentiment in this State among the people who are desirous of selecting a higher standard of men to fill public stations. Admitting that the people are more likely in the future to select men who cannot be bought, then, sir, let these men be paid a proper amount for their services. Do not let it be said that the great State of California, with all its resources, has cut down the pay of its officers to the level of the States which have been named by the gentleman, like Rhode Island and others, where the pay is three or four dollars a day. But here, in a State that is well able to pay eight dollars, it is well to keep up the high standard of morality and worth. And let it not be said that we are unable to pay our public servants such an amount as they ought to be paid. For one, I know that the people whom I have the honor to represent, are against the reduction. I have talked with them freely upon it, and I believe that is the general sentiment. What they demand is that taxation shall be equal and uniform; that the rich shall pay for what they are worth, and that the poor shall not pay any more; and that something shall be done about lands; and that uncultivated lands shall be taxed as well as cultivated lands, if they are worth as much and are of equal producing capacity; and to provide for the public revenue, in such a manner that they will be better able to sustain the government. Now, prevent the corruption which is said to exist in our State—and it must be admitted that corruption does exist, and that it is likely to exist more or less—but our main endeavor should be to pass such laws as shall prevent this corruption as much as it can be prevented. Let us do this and we shall do our duty. But let the amount of the salary of the legislators remain as it is. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman, suggests that a man may live on five dollars a day, but there are very few who will come here and live on that amount. There are very few who can come here and live on that amount. And the greater number of the legislators are, I am happy to say, men of families—married men. They cannot leave their families at home, and they cannot sustain themselves and their families and live as they ought to live, for such a compensation. Therefore, I hope, Mr. Chairman, that this amendment to cut down the pay, will be promptly voted down.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. Chairman: I shall favor the section as reported by the committee. I do not know that the gentleman from Placer, or any other gentleman, has returned any conscience money, though they have received ten dollars a day.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the amendment offered to this section will not be adopted by the committee, and for the reason that after all is said and done about this per diem business of the members of the Legislature, or the question of salaries, it amounts to nothing to the member, and it amounts to nothing comparatively to the State, and there is no need of spending a great deal of time on contriving to tie up the matter in any particular way. We have found that the Legislature itself has gone on reducing the per diem as far as expenses have been reduced, and that seems to be one of the things that we can trust the Legislature with. I do not see why we should not adopt the section of the old Constitution which has been reported by the committee.

[Cries of "question," "question."]

MR. REYNOLDS. That seems to be an invitation for me to bring my remarks to a close. I will.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. WEST. I move to amend by striking out the word "six," and inserting in lieu thereof the word "five."

MR. McCONNELL. I second the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the proposition as originally offered. Now, I have seen here shameless proceedings in regard to this matter, and had the resolution passed that was offered here at an early day, that no member of this Convention should be a candidate for office at the first election after the adoption of the Constitution, I should receive with much more pleasure a statement of what is beneath the dignity of this Convention. I have known, in times past, absurd scrambles over mere matters of postage stamps, stationery, and newspapers. These things have occurred, and the whole State is ashamed of it. Now, why not put in here a reasonable compensation for services, and not leave it for these scrambles. Now, no further back than eighteen hundred and seventy-three-four, I find that for the mere matter of newspapers there was expended seven thousand three hundred and sixty-nine dollars and ninety-one cents—just for newspapers. Then for extra compensation to their clerks, in the same session, they spent seven thousand eight hundred and forty-eight dollars and eighty-six cents; making in these two items alone the enormous sum of fifteen thousand two hundred and eighteen dollars and seventy-seven cents. Now, I say that was a shame and an outrage, and as the people have called us together here, it becomes our duty to see that it never occurs again. I am in favor of this amendment, and that there shall be no extra pay or compensation. If five dollars is not enough, fix it at twelve dollars, but fix it somewhere, so that the people may know, and not leave it to the arbitrary judgment of the Legislature. They form combinations for the purpose of enlarging their pay, and in this most shameless manner, take the money that belongs to the State.

REMARKS OF MR. INMAN.

MR. INMAN. Mr. Chairman: I hope the gentleman's amendment will not prevail. I do not know that I shall ever get here again. I hope I won't. We have got nine dollars and fifty cents a day. Now you propose to pay five dollars a day. I hope this Convention will not be so niggardly as to cut these gentlemen down to five dollars a day, so that they cannot live respectably. I suppose that they are not going to have any clothes. I object to anything so niggardly. Eight dollars a day is low enough, and I do hope that this Convention will not fix it below eight dollars per day. If the gentlemen's consciences hurt them so much, they can pay back five dollars a day that they have received here. I do not presume any of them will. I hope that the amendment will not prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. WEBSTER.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment will prevail, not for the reasons, mainly, that have been stated here. It is notorious that, in every department of the Government, there has been extravagance. We have tried, even in our County of Alameda, to reduce the salaries of officers. We find that it is impossible, while at the head of the Government salaries are out of all proportion to the services rendered. I think, sir, that in order that this reduction may run through the whole system, that we must begin here. Here is the place. We have tried it with the county governments. That, sir, is like trying to stop the progress of a monster, which is eating out our substance, by cutting off his tail. I believe in cutting off his tail two inches behind his ears, and that is right here. I know that it is not the per diem that brings any member here on this floor, or on the floor of the Legislature, that is worthy of the place. I hold, sir, that there is not a member here but what would have come just as readily for five dollars a day as he did for ten dollars. It was conceived, sir, that there was some honor attached to this position. It was formerly conceived that there was some honor attached to the position of a legislator, and the reason why there is no honor is, that it is a scramble for office and for the emoluments of office.

I hold that we want to come down to the old principle when the office will seek the man and not the man the office. We must have it so that men will come here for the love of the State and its service; for the honor that is attached to the position and not the money. In every department of the Government we need a curtailment and reduction of expenses, and we come here, avowedly, for the purpose of reduction. Now, sir, if we begin here this reduction, this curtailment, this retrenchment will follow down through every department of State, and we can hope for nothing in that direction without we do begin here. I hope the amendment will prevail, with the difference between five dollars and six dollars.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: It has been charged that the motive and intention of this motion is to represent the people of this State as niggardly, or in other words, as being unjust to their public servants. It has also been represented that in those States which have prescribed a lower limit the Legislatures were dishonest or incompetent, and that the services of the best men of the State could not be obtained for such paltry sum. I deny it; and I insist that the greater price you pay the more likely you are to have men seeking office for dishonorable motives, who expect to speculate either in the per diem or the perquisites of the office, directly or indirectly. I contend that in those States which have been mentioned as paying low salaries, there are men in the Legislature every year who are as competent even as Mr. Barry is. I claim that the States that have paid three dollars a day are no more niggardly than is the gentleman on my left; and the members of the Legislature in those States dress themselves just as respectably as the gentleman on my left. Every laboring man's club that has passed a resolution on this matter, as far as I have seen, have fixed the figure at five dollars per day. The public has demanded that the per diem of the Legislature shall be fixed in the Constitution, and as the gentleman from Alameda has well said, when you fix their per diem you fix the criterion by which the Legislature will fix the salaries for the county officers and the other officers of the State. You cannot expect retrenchment and reform when you make the fountain head impure. You must commence at the fountain head, and if you fix the per diem of members of the Legislature at five dollars, they will fix the per diem of other officers in proportion. I assert that there are just as competent men as there are in this Convention that would be glad to get three dollars a day and work with a pick and shovel; men who are fit and competent to sit in this Convention, so far as talent and education is concerned, and because fate stands cruelly in their way, it is no sign that they are not competent. Sir, there are hundreds of citizens of California to-day that would be glad to make one dollar a day. I contend that five dollars is sufficient to get honorable and honest men to come here and legislate for the people of this State. And I believe that the intelligence of this committee will bear me out in saying that there are men here who could have made twenty dollars a day at home, and yet they have come here like yourself and others to serve the State—not for the sum they receive as a per diem, but because they expect to build a monument for the State, to insure and enhance its future prosperity.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. Chairman: I do not think these gentlemen ought to vote for this limitation, for I cannot imagine that a man can live here for five dollars a day. Certainly he leaves a family behind him and comes here. He is compelled thus to keep up two establishments, and doubles his ordinary expenses. We should make some allowance for burying unfortunate men who die in this town. I do not understand how you can expect men to attend the Legislature, leaving their business at home, for five dollars a day. Five dollars per day will not pay their ordinary expenses; if they bring any member of their family here they cannot pay their hotel bills; they cannot go into society. I think that eight dollars a day is small enough pay—four hundred and eighty dollars for a session of a Legislature. Men have to leave their business and come here from distant parts of the State, and even at ten dollars per day they would make no money at it. Why, it is simply niggardly to pay five dollars a day. This great State is able to pay a man a fair and reasonable compensation for his services. I say that at eight dollars a day I do not think anybody will go home rich, unless they are good hands at poker. [Laughter.]

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of carrying on economical government as much as anybody. We have limited the time for which the Legislature shall receive pay to sixty days. Now, gentlemen say that is ample time for them to do their work. I hope it is. I fear it will not be. The Legislature limited the time for which we should receive pay to one hundred days. Everybody thought it would be ample time. Some thought we would get through in thirty days. There was nobody that thought we were going to stay over the one hundred days. Now we find that the one hundred days will not more than half complete our business. Now, it may be that we will find the Legislature in the same situation. We may find that we are mistaken, and that we have not allowed them sufficient time. Even if they finish their work in sixty days, I say that eight dollars a day is none too much for them to receive, taking into consideration the fact that they have to abandon their business—and any man who has got no business is not fit to go to the Legislature. No man, unless he has got brains enough to have some business, is fit to occupy a seat in the Legislature. If, however, the purchasing power of money should change, and the Legislature should in the future be satisfied with a less amount, then leave it to them to change it, and I have no fears but what they will act honorably in this matter. I will admit that some of our Legislatures heretofore have acted extravagantly; but this extravagance has not been in the per diem. It has been in the little incidental matters, such as newspapers and stationery. Nobody knows what this amounts to. If we make any limitation, let us make it in these incidentals. I protest against putting into the Constitution a provision cutting down the pay. And I predict that in limiting the time for which they shall receive pay we will find hereafter that we have made a mistake. I fear we have made a mistake in cutting down the time of the session, when we take into consideration how slowly work progresses in the Legislature. Therefore I shall vote for the original section, as it stands in the old Constitution and in the report of the committee. I will say that if a proper amendment is proposed which will limit the amount of stationery which can be drawn by a single member, or something like that, I have no objection to it. I think there has been a great abuse of that privilege, and I believe that in the future the legislators themselves will prevent it.

REMARKS OF MR. OVERTON.

MR. OVERTON. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor always of economy in the right direction, but I am not in favor of public servants working for nothing. My constituents do not want men to come up here and serve them for five dollars a day. We expect to send business men to represent us; men who have got plenty of business; men quite as worthy and as well qualified and competent as ourselves. There may be those who would be willing to come here for five dollars a day who have nothing else to do, but they are not at all suitable to represent us, because they know nothing about our interests. We want business men. It is not the expense alone here. A man who receives a nomination for the Assembly is expected to go around his county and express his views upon various topics. He spends a month or six weeks in canvassing his county. That is attended with considerable expense. There is no provision made by which his ticket is published, or his card in the paper. He has got to pay a little at the cross roads, or at least that has been my experience. We are not in the habit of taking these Jersey drinks in our county. We ask those around us to join; we expect to keep up that habit, and our voters expect to pay men so that they can run for office respectably, come to Sacramento in good shape, acquit themselves with dignity, and live at first class hotels. I am against the proposition, and I am in favor of the section as it came from the committee, leaving it to the Legislature in the future to reduce it if they see fit. They have reduced it fast enough in the past, and I claim that they are just as competent to fix it as we are. We are not more honest than they are, and they have treated us a great deal better than we are proposing to treat them. They have given us ten dollars a day and cut themselves down to eight dollars. I do not think they gave us any too much; I am not going to get home with any money. I wish they had given us more, and more days to draw it.

MR. CONDON. Mr. Chairman: I demand the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Joyce, Gorman, Barbour, and Heiskell.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. West, striking out "six," and inserting "five."

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher.

The amendment was rejected, on a division, by a vote of 47 ayes to 60 noes.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add after the word 'treasury,' the following: 'Provided, that the per diem shall not exceed ten dollars, and no incidental or other allowance shall be made.'"

MR. WALKER. Mr. Chairman: My object is that the per diem should be fixed and established by the Legislature, and I think ten dollars per day is as low as it is safe to fix it. My object is to stop this outrageous extravagance spoken of by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

MR. KENNY. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Members of the Legislature shall receive for their services a compensation per diem, to be fixed by law, and mileage, not exceeding the actual amount of fare charged by common carriers to convey members to the seat of government for a single journey, and the same shall be paid out of the public treasury; but no increase of compensation shall take effect during the term for which the members of either house have been elected."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tuolumne, Mr. Walker.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Kenny.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. CROUCH. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Members of the Legislature shall each receive for their services a per diem and mileage, to be fixed by law, which compensation shall not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars for each regular session of the Legislature, and the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars for each called session; said mileage not to exceed thirty cents per mile for one way only. Said compensation and mileage shall be in full for compensation, mileage, stationery, postage, papers, and all other incidental expenses."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. PROUTY. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-three by inserting in the second line after the word 'compensation' the words 'not to exceed seven dollars.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'Treasurer,' in line three, and insert the following: 'Such per diem shall not exceed eight dollars, and such mileage shall not exceed ten cents per mile. No increase in compensation or mileage shall take effect during the term for which the members of either house shall have been elected.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 63 ayes to 42 noes.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. Chairman; I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add 'and the pay of no attaché shall be increased after he is elected or appointed.'"

MR. TINNIN. Mr. Chairman: I offer that amendment for this reason: it has been customary in the Legislature of this State, at the last hours of the session, to offer resolutions increasing the pay of attachés, and it is in this manner that a great portion of the money has been filched from the treasury of the State.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no further amendment to section twenty-three the Secretary will read section twenty-four.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 24. Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title, and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reënacted and published at length as revised or amended.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. Chairman: I have a substitute for that section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in its title; but if any subject shall be embraced in any Act which shall not be expressed in its title, said Act shall be void only to so much thereof as shall not be so expressed, and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reënacted and published at length as revised or amended."

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. Chairman: The section, as reported by the committee, is precisely the same as the section in our present Constitution. In the case of Washington against Page, reported in Fourth California, and also in a case in Tenth California, it has been decided that this section was advisory only; that the Legislature were at liberty to reject it, and if they passed a law which was not in compliance with the section, that such law was nevertheless valid. Now, as I understand the object of this section in the Constitution, it is this: that the members of the Legislature, and others, shall not be deceived by the mere title. That there shall not be inserted in a bill something foreign to its title, which comes in in the nature of a "little joker," and which is generally not discovered until after the bill has become a law. Now, in several of the States the section, as I have proposed it, is in force. That is to say, so much matter as is put in a bill, as is different to the object expressed in the title, is considered to be void, and the other part is permitted to stand.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman: Before the vote is taken I wish merely to say this: that I hope this amendment will be adopted. I did not understand exactly the remarks of the gentleman from Sacramento, and for fear that others did not understand the object of the amendment, I will state it: I will say that this provision has been construed to be directory, and that it is not mandatory. Provisions are sometimes voted for by members thinking they are mandatory, and they are liable to be deceived in this way. If a provision is merely directory, and they vote upon it considering it to be mandatory, they are deceived. Now, the purport of this amendment is to this effect, that so much of a law as is not expressed in the title shall be void; therefore this provision will be mandatory. It will put every person on his guard in voting for an Act when he discovers in the body of a bill matter which is not expressed in the title. We have statutes which are construed to be directory, and all law, even constitutional provisions, have been construed in certain cases to be directory. I say that this should not be, and that we ought to guard against it by putting in a provision of this kind, so that every one in voting for the provision may know that it is mandatory.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the amendment will not prevail, and for the simple reason that in my judgment it would increase litigation. In every case you would have to go to the Supreme Court to determine whether an Act was a proper Act under the provisions of the Constitution. It seems to me that in view of the section adopted here yesterday, section fifteen, requiring all bills to be read on three different days, that no member of the Legislature voting upon it could be voting under a trick, and could not certainly be misled by the title of a bill. I think the amendment is entirely unnecessary, and I believe that its adoption would have a tendency to increase litigation, because it would raise the question in the Courts as to whether certain portions of an Act were constitutional. In view of the stringent character of section fifteen, it seems to me this amendment is absolutely unnecessary.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I call the attention of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Freeman, and of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Johnson, to the fact that in article one, already passed upon by the committee, we have a section which meets the decision referred to, and makes this Constitution, except where otherwise expressly stated, mandatory—every provision of it. That is in the first article adopted in Committee of the Whole.

MR. JOHNSON. Is not that provision confined to the Bill of Rights?

MR. VAN DYKE. No, sir; to the whole Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: I will vote for the amendment, provided nothing better can be done. In my judgment the first part of the section should be stricken out at once. That would give rise, as it has before, to litigation. The idea of expressing in the title all that is in the law, is simple nonsense. You pass a law, and then you have got to put the whole of it on the back as an indorsement. We have passed Codes in this State. How would you indorse the title Civil Code, so as to express the subject in the title. Why, the title would have to be as long as the Civil Code itself, and as complicated. It seems to me as impossible. I think the first portion of the section ought to be stricken out entirely, and it ought to commence to read at the word "no," in the second line. The first part of the section is not only unnecessary, but it is mischievous, because you have got to look in construing a law to see whether the title embraces the whole subject-matter in the law, which I say is impossible. It think the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Freeman, will remedy it to some extent, and I shall vote for it.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Sacramento, will have exactly the contrary effect from that stated by the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell, and that is to prevent litigation. The amendment is to save that which is expressed in the title and prevent it all from being declared void, because there may be in the Act something that is not in the title. The objection of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland, is not well taken. It is a proper and useful thing to provide that the subject-matter of an Act should be expressed in the title, and more especially in relation to Acts appropriating money. It is not true, as stated by the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell, that we have already provided that bills shall be read at large three times. We have provided that they shall be read three times, but not at large. They may be read by title, and in the careless way in which legislation is carried on mischievous provisions may slip in, unless you have such a provision as this in the Constitution.

MR. SCHELL. How long a title would be necessary for a bill to amend the Civil Code?

MR. BARBOUR. About two lines.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. Chairman: Certainly either this section should be stricken entirely out or it should be put in such a shape that it means something. Now I am reminded by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, that we have already adopted in our Bill of Rights, a provision which says every section of this Constitution shall be mandatory. Now, if that is adopted, then this section must be construed as meaning something. The question would at once arise before the Courts, does this Constitution mean that a law in violation of that section shall be entirely void, or that it shall be void only to so much of it as is without the range of the title? That question ought to be settled by clear language here, and not be reserved for contest in the Courts. It is true that an Act may be in such a shape that the parts cannot be segregated, but often that is not the case; in fact, the legislation which the section is intended to provide against, is legislation of a different character; is that legislation which introduces into an Act some entirely foreign topic. I, myself, have seen Acts of the Legislature which were apparently upon some general subject, and which, somewhere near the middle of the bill, contained a provision for the condemnation of a toll-bridge across the Sacramento River. Now, if this amendment was adopted, the people would naturally be informed that such legislation was pending. Few persons read the entire Act, and they suppose, when these bills are presented, that some Act of a general nature is before the Legislature, and do not know that they are being made liable for the purchase of a toll-bridge across the Sacramento River. The idea is, that a bill which contains a "little joker" of that description shall not be entirely void. At all events, one policy or the other ought to be pursued. This section, if it is right in spirit, should be amended as I have suggested, or in some other manner, so that we shall know precisely what it means.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: If I understand the gentleman from Sacramento, it is for the information of the people that he desires that the title shall express the substance of the Act. That gentleman knows, or ought to know, that the title is the last thing acted upon in the passage of a bill; therefore the people would have no information, so far as they are concerned, by the title pending during the discussion of the bill, because the title is amended at the last stage of its passage. That, I presume, every gentleman is familiar with. Mr. Chairman, as Judge Schell has said, we have adopted a provision requiring that a bill shall be read three times. Gentlemen say it does not say three times at large. I say that that rule, in parliamentary usage, which says that a reading of a bill by title is a reading of the bill, does not apply to the construction of a Constitution; therefore, when our Constitution says that a bill shall be read three times, on three different days, it means as it says, a reading of the bill. It is unnecessary to put in this surplus clause, which would be necessary if the other had not been adopted. I do not know that the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento would do any harm, but I am apprehensive of changing the language of the section apparently plain enough, and which has been the subject of judicial construction in years past. What construction would be put upon it if the gentleman's amendment should be adopted, I do not know. He refers to a case wherein you may declare a portion of an Act unconstitutional, and let the remainder stand. The rule of construction by the Courts is this: that if a portion of an Act is unconstitutional, and it can be so held, that the balance of the Act can remain without being impaired; it may be rejected as unconstitutional. But here the gentleman from Sacramento proposes to lay down the rule of construction for the Courts, that they shall reject that portion of the bill. His amendment reads:

"Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in its title; but if any subject shall be embraced in any Act which shall not be expressed in its title, said Act shall be void only to so much thereof as shall not be so expressed, and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reënacted and published at length as revised or amended."

As it now reads, the question will come up: is the provision embraced that stated in the title? Many questions will arise. This very proposition was before the Committee on Legislative Department. We discussed it at some length there, and it was thought that it might be a dangerous innovation. The committee were of the opinion, that inasmuch as this section has stood for many years, and as we have provided that these laws should be mandatory, we might as well let it stand as it is. The object of this was not the information of the people.

MR. BARBOUR. I will state a case. A bill went through the Legislature, providing for the opening of Seventh street in San Francisco. It contained the usual provisions for a Commissioner, etc. In the middle of the fifth section was interjected a proviso for paying two thousand three hundred or two thousand four hundred dollars of a defeated claim for the same purpose, and that went through because it was overlooked. It related, in one sense, to the same subject-matter, although in another sense it was outside of the matter. The object of this amendment is to authorize the saving of the bill and the rejection of that matter.

MR. McCALLUM. We have already agreed to an amendment, that every bill shall be read at large, by sections, and the ayes and noes called, and that it shall not pass unless it shall receive the votes of a majority of all the members elected to both Houses, and I suppose that such mistakes, if they were mistakes, will not be so likely to occur. I do not know how we are to go to work to make the men intelligent and honest who shall make our laws, and I do not propose for my part to fix up the Constitution that way. Certainly somebody was derelict in that case. I do not know that it will do any harm, but I believe it would be a dangerous innovation, for reasons which I do not propose to state at length. I think we ought to stand upon this rule. It is now well settled. These errors are not likely to occur again, and I have no doubt that if the amendment is adopted, it will be the subject of any amount of litigation, in attempting to lay down the rules of construction for the Courts in these cases.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: The Committee on Legislative Department undertook to put in an iron-bound provision, and have overruled all the decisions of the Supreme Court.

MR. McCALLUM. The committee have not changed the Constitution at all.

MR. McFARLAND. They determine when language is mandatory and when it is directory. Now, this Convention has said that they shall not declare anything directory. I am opposed to the first proposition of the section, because I say that under the rule that it is mandatory, you might get into the greatest kind of difficulty. We suppose that the law of the land is what the Legislature enacts, if it is constitutional. When the Legislature passes an Act, and it is signed by the Governor, that is supposed to be the law, and yet if they do not give a title to it that expresses all that is in the law, then, according to the section reported by the committee, it is not the law of the land. There is an opening for the greatest kind of litigation. I shall vote for the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, and if it is not adopted I shall move to amend by striking out the first part entirely. I repeat that it is impossible to express all there is in a law in its title without making the title nearly as long as the law. A law may cover twenty pages, or it may cover three; and it may have several sections, and then you have got to relate in three lines what it is about, and after you have passed it solemnly, and it has been signed and become a law, if the title is not long enough it is void. Is not that nonsense? How can a man put into a title what it takes twenty sections to put into a law? He cannot do it. I do not think it ought to be in the Constitution at all under this rule, that everything is mandatory. I am in favor of one portion of the section, that no law shall be revised or amended by its title, but I am entirely opposed to this rule that you have adopted here in this Convention, that a Court shall not exercise its ordinary functions. If you adhere to that rule you will have any number of lawsuits.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: The object of the section is very well understood, and it is a very easy matter for any person to state in the title the subject of a bill. When the amendment was first offered I was inclined to support it, but I desire to call, very briefly, the attention of the committee to what may follow such a rule. The question presented is simply this: if a bill should pass that had a provision in it that was not within the title, the whole bill would fall. By the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, that result would not necessarily follow, but the law would fall only as to the portion not within the title. Now, here is the danger. Suppose the gentleman from Sacramento is a member of the Legislature, and he is a good lawyer. Under the Constitution, he knows very well, in drafting his bill, that all will be held constitutional that is within the title; but finding that his bill cannot receive a sufficient support if there is nothing in it which embodies something else that will catch other members of the Legislature, he can safely put in other matter, knowing that one portion of it must fall. That may be the very portion that passes the bill. Thereby members that are unwary, or not well skilled in constitutional law, will be induced to vote for a bill that they would not otherwise vote for. Only that part falls that is without the title, and it may be that very part that has induced the Legislature to pass the bill. I see no reason why a bill should not fall if it is a cheat.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: As I think we have done a very good day's work to-day, I move that the committee do now rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was lost.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. Chairman: I call for the reading of the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in its title; but if any subject shall be embraced in any Act which shall not be expressed in its title, said Act shall be void only to so much thereof as shall not be so expressed; and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reënacted and published at length as revised or amended."

MR. EDGERTON. I would suggest to the gentleman that he insert the word "as" before the word "to," so that it will read: "Such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in its title." That is from the Constitution of Iowa.

MR. LAINE. There are several Constitutions that use that language.

MR. JOHNSON. The Constitution of Indiana, also.

MR. EDGERTON. It is in the Constitution of Iowa of eighteen hundred and forty-six, and in the new Constitution of eighteen hundred fifty-seven they incorporated the same provision; and somewhere in some of the decisions of the Supreme Court of that State—I do not now recollect which—that question has been discussed, and they illustrate there, it seems to me, very satisfactorily, the wisdom of this provision. I suppose everybody understands that the object of the provision is to prevent collusion in a legislative body; to prevent the passage of what are called omnibus bills—uniting various interests in order to get them passed. It seems to me that this constitutional provision is very much needed. I think the amendment is a good one, and I shall vote for it. I will say that the Court in Iowa held that this provision was mandatory. I shall offer the amendment I have suggested as soon as I can prepare it.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: The amendment proposed by the member from Sacramento is contained in the Constitution of Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, and Oregon. In the Constitution of New Jersey it reads:

"To avoid improper influences which may result from intermixing in one and the same Act, such things as have no proper relation to each other, every law shall embrace but one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title."

That is the reason of the rule. They express it there in the Constitution itself. The object of this provision, that a bill shall embrace but one subject, is to prevent these omnibus bills. For instance, a bill is called up and somebody puts in an amendment which nobody would pass if he knew it was there. That is the way legislation takes place in the Congress of the United States, and accounts for the vicious legislation which takes place there. An appropriation bill comes up and somebody gets up and moves to add a few thousand dollars for some other purpose than that already mentioned, and it is adopted, and all bills are passed in that way. Now, if we should take this clause out altogether, it would open legislation here to the same rule. Combinations would be made and influence brought to bear to put a number of schemes together, and rush them through; whereas, either one of them alone, would not pass. That is the reason of this provision that bills shall contain but one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title. I think the amendment is contained, verbatim, in the Constitution of Illinois, and also, as I see, in Indiana, Iowa, and Oregon. These are the only variations from the general rule. There is one objection to the amendment, which I will state. If we open the door to any subject that is expressed in the title, and then some foreign subject should be introduced into a law, the Supreme Court will have to decide in all cases, and the provisions of a law would be uncertain in its various sections until the Supreme Court had passed upon it, one section after another. Otherwise, I do not object to the amendment. But, I think, perhaps, as we have already gone on in this State nearly thirty years with this limitation upon the legislative power, and have got accustomed to it so that the legislators and the people generally know and understand that a bill should relate only to one subject-matter, that perhaps we had better adhere to the rule as it has hitherto existed in this State. We might, of course, lose a good law because it had in it a provision not expressed in the title. As it now stands, special legislation is prohibited, and there will not be the same danger as there has been heretofore.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. Chairman: I have prepared a substitute, which I understand the author of the amendment is willing to accept.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Every Act shall embrace but one subject and matters properly connected therewith, which subject shall be expressed in the title; but if any subject shall be embraced in an Act, which shall not be expressed in the title, such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title."

MR. EDGERTON. That is a precise copy from the Constitution of Iowa.

MR. FREEMAN. I am willing to accept that amendment.

MR. VAN DYKE. I wish to ask the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, if that is not the rule of construction now; if the part cannot stand which is not void.

MR. EDGERTON. I understand that some allusions have been made to the decisions of the Supreme Court in reference to this section. I did not hear the whole of this discussion. If I recollect right, the decision of the Supreme Court was, that this provision as it now stands is merely directory; that it does not amount to anything.

MR. VAN DYKE. My question is aimed at the proposed amendment. I ask if that is not now the rule of construction, that which you have embodied in your amendment? That is if an Act can stand, the Courts allow it to stand. Therefore, this would be unnecessary.

MR. EDGERTON. I do not know how they would decide. Perhaps the Court might decide that the whole thing should stand.

MR. VAN DYKE. But if it can be separated the Courts allow that which is valid to stand. Now I do not see any necessity for this amendment, and it might complicate matters. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

MR. EDGERTON. A Court might allow the whole thing to stand. The object is that nothing shall stand except that which is expressed in the title.

MR. VAN DYKE. That is the effect now under the common law of construction, and the Courts always allow that which is valid to stand. I say that this amendment is unnecessary although it may be in a dozen Constitutions.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, should be adopted, so far as it goes, together with the balance of section twenty-four, which reads: "No law shall be revised or section amended by reference to its title; but in such case, the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reënacted and published at length as revised or amended." I like this very much better than the original, as reported by the Committee on Legislative Department, because it contains the clause, "and matters properly connected therewith."

MR. VAN DYKE. I have no objection to that.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. The old section, that it shall embrace but one subject, made it very difficult in some cases to limit it to one subject, and that subject to be expressed in the title. If you had two subjects that were not closely related to each other, or were two distinct subjects, the whole Act would be void. For instance, take the Act of the Legislature of eighteen hundred and seventy-seven and eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, entitled "An Act to authorize the maintenance of booms in Elk River, and the removal of obstructions from said stream," there are really two distinct subjects, and yet they are so related to each other that there could not be any rational cause assigned why they should not be joined. The maintenance of the boom, and the keeping of the river free from obstruction, must necessarily go together, and yet, under the present provision of the Constitution they would be held to be two distinct subjects. But taking this amendment, as proposed by the gentleman from Sacramento—that it shall embrace but one subject, and matters properly connected therewith, the maintenance of the boom, and the keeping of the river, would be akin to each other, and would be properly in the same bill. Many illustrations of the same character might be found. It makes the law a little more sensible, and would prevent many laws being declared void, against which no rational objections could be assigned. Now, so far as the question raised by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, that it is the common rule of construction that only that part of the law is declared void which is not expressed in the title, I have to say, if that be the common law rule of construction, there is no objection to putting it in here. There may be some doubt about it. There is sometimes great difficulty in deciding just how much of the law pertains to the subject expressed in the title, and sometimes the Courts decide that the whole law must go out. I do not see any objection to retaining the last part of the section which I have read, and it seems to me that, with the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, is just what we desire.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I desire to ask how the Courts are going to construe an Act of this kind? An Act which is not specified in the title is, by the terms of that amendment, to be rejected only so far as not expressed in the title. Now, suppose it so mingled up with the balance of the Act that the Courts, under any other rule of construction, won't reject the whole of it, is not the Court then compelled to change the whole system of construing laws on this rule attempted to be fixed upon the Courts here, by saying that it shall be rejected only so far as not expressed in the title.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that I can give the gentleman an illustration in a moment: Take a simple appropriation bill, "An Act to provide for the support of the State government." Now, suppose that somebody should succeed in getting into that bill an appropriation for some other purpose, I do not see that the Supreme Court would have any difficulty, under this amendment, in holding that that was not expressed in the title, and, pro tanto, was void.

MR. MCCALLUM. In that case it would be perfectly clear; there would be no difficulty so far as the case supposed is concerned. The question I have asked is this: Suppose, in a different case, where the matter was not referred to in the title, and was so commingled with the balance of the Act that, under the old rules of construction, the Court would reject it all, then does not this rule in this amendment compel the Court to change the whole rules of construction?

MR. WILSON, of First District. Not at all.

MR. EDGERTON. Not at all.

MR. MCCALLUM. I ask the Secretary to read it.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Every Act shall embrace but one subject and matters properly connected therewith, which subject shall be expressed in the title; but if any subject shall be embraced in an Act, which shall not be expressed in the title, such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title. No law shall be revised or section amended by reference to its title; but in such case, the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reënacted, and published at length as revised or amended."

MR. MCCALLUM. I would say that in such a case as I have mentioned, where the matters contained in a bill were so mingled that the Court would now hold that the whole Act must fall, it would be compelled to decide the other way under this provision. This is clouding up the matter in a peculiar way. It says that every Act shall embrace but one subject and matters properly connected therewith. Now, I ask if this very phrase does not in itself invite any amount of litigation, discussion, and difficulty, as to what would be properly connected with the matter. This language in the Constitution, at present, is not ambiguous. The only difficulty is that the Court says it is directory and not mandatory. The Bill of Rights, which we have adopted, says that these provisions shall be mandatory. That removes the objection. The Committee on Legislative Department have reported the section the same as it was in the old Constitution. It reads:

"SEC. 24. Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title, and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised or section amended shall be reënacted and published at length as revised or amended."

That sounds like a Constitution. Then comes in this piping amendment: "but notwithstanding, nevertheless, if you don't do what the people by their sovereign authority commanded you to do," etc. Now, we tell the Courts to disregard this other part, though you have commanded the Courts to construe this as mandatory.

MR. WILSON, of First District. The gentleman raises an objection here, and because he cannot answer it himself he thinks nobody else can. Now, there is no sort of difficulty in this question, the gentleman is very easily answered, and has been already answered by the gentleman from Sacramento. If you have a vicious matter connected with a good matter, and you can separate the vicious from the good, you simply leave it off and the vicious falls and the good remains. That always has been the rule. But if the vicious is so intermingled and commingled with the good that you cannot separate the two, the Courts have always held that the whole is bad. That is laid down in the books, and this amendment does not change it in the slightest degree. It simply says that if any subject shall be embraced in an Act which shall not be expressed in the title, such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title. It follows as a necessity that the Court has got to separate the two in order to leave off the bad. The very moment you cannot separate the two the whole is bad. That is the rule laid down in the elementary books everywhere.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Hunter, Condon, Morse, and Joyce.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton.

The amendment was adopted on a division, by a vote of 56 ayes to 35 noes.

MR. MCCALLUM. I gave notice yesterday that I would move to reconsider the vote by which the committee adopted the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Terry, to section six. I wish to save the motion. I make that motion now to reconsider, and I will ask the Chair if this question can properly come up to-morrow.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

MR. HUESTIS. I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

Carried.

And at five o'clock and ten minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned.

EIGHTY-FIFTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Saturday, December 21st, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE,

For two days was granted Mr. Kelley.

For one week was granted Messrs. Townsend and Waters.

Indefinite leave of absence was granted Mr. Graves on account of sickness.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

Carried.

BILLS.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. Chairman: I wish to report back the following resolution from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, with the recommendation that it be adopted:

Resolved, That the sum of thirteen dollars and seventy-five cents be and the same is hereby allowed to pay the bill of Pacific Ice Company for ice from December second to December thirteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, the same to be paid out of the funds appropriated for the expenses of the Convention, the Controller to draw his warrant in favor of the Sergeant-at-Arms for the amount.

Adopted.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I also wish to report back without recommendation the bill of Mrs. Margaret Galt. The bill is not authorized by any resolution, and the committee are unable to ascertain the amount which this person is entitled to. There is no doubt but what she has performed some service, but we are unable to find out how much washing has been done.

THE SECRETARY read:

SACRAMENTO, December 13, 1878.

Constitutional Convention of California, in account with Mrs. Margaret Galt, debtor: To washing towels twelve weeks, seven dollars.

MR. FREUD. I move the bill be paid.

Carried.

FUTURE AMENDMENTS.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I send up a report from the Committee on Future Amendments.

THE SECRETARY read:

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, December 21, 1878.

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Future Amendments, to whom were referred propositions numbers one hundred and seven, two hundred and twelve, three hundred and twenty-three, three hundred and sixty-nine, and four hundred and eight, beg leave to report that they have had the same under consideration, and herewith report the same back, and recommend that no further action be taken thereon.

So much of such propositions as your committee deem it expedient to adopt have been incorporated in the article herewith submitted, which your committee recommend for adoption by the Convention, as article ten of the new Constitution.

J. R. WELLER,
J. M. CHARLES,
J. V. WEBSTER,
P. T. DOWLING,
J. A. GORMAN,
CONRAD HEROLD,
DANIEL LEWIS,
WM. P. GRACE.

MODE OF AMENDING AND REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

SECTION 1. Any amendment or amendments to this Constitution may be proposed in the Senate or Assembly, and if two thirds of all the members elected to each of the two houses shall vote in favor thereof, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered in their Journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon; and it shall be the duty of said Legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner and at such time as may be deemed expedient. Such amendment or amendments shall be published in full in each county in the State wherein a newspaper is published for at least three months next preceding the election at which they are submitted. Should more than one amendment be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished, by numbers or otherwise, that they can be voted on separately. If the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments, or any of them, by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the Legislature voting therefor, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of this Constitution.

SEC. 2. Whenever two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature shall think it necessary to revise this Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote at the next general election for or against a Convention for that purpose, and if a majority of the electors voting at said election, on the proposition for a Convention, shall vote in favor thereof, the Legislature shall, at its next session, provide by law for calling the same. Said Convention shall consist of a number of delegates not to exceed that of both branches of the Legislature, which shall be chosen in the same manner, and have the same qualifications, as members of the Legislature. The delegates so elected shall meet within three months after their election, at such place as the Legislature may direct. The Constitution that may be agreed upon by such Convention shall be submitted to the people at a special election to be provided for by law, for their ratification or rejection, in such manner as the Convention may determine. The returns of such election shall, in such manner as the Convention shall direct, be certified to the Executive of the State, who shall call to his assistance the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, and compare the returns so certified to him; and it shall be the duty of the Executive to declare by his proclamation, such Constitution as may have been ratified by a majority of all the votes cast at such special election, to be the Constitution of the State of California.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I move that the report be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

REPORT.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I send up a report from the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on the Preamble and Bill of Rights, to whom was referred the following proposition, to wit: number three hundred and seventy-seven, introduced by Mr. Edgerton; number four hundred and eighty-one, introduced by Mr. Mills; number four hundred and ninety-one, introduced by Mr. Ringgold, and one memorial, beg leave to report that the same relate to matters on which the committee had already acted and reported their action to the Convention, and, therefore, return the propositions and memorial, and recommend that no further action be taken thereon.

Respectfully submitted. WALTER VAN DYKE, Chairman.

THE PRESIDENT. The report will lie on the table.

MR. DUNLAP. I move to take up the resolution to pay Patrick Leavy for services as Gas Porter.

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is not in order at present.

MR. AYERS. I send up a proposition and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Apportionment and Representation.

MR. DUNLAP. I renew my motion to take up the resolution to pay Patrick Leavy.

The motion prevailed.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That Patrick Leavy be allowed thirty-eight dollars out of the appropriation for the expenses of this Convention, for nineteen days' services as Gas Porter, viz., from September twenty-eighth to October seventeenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, prior to his regular appointment by this Convention, which nineteen days' services were not included in the pay-roll heretofore certified to.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted on a division, by a vote of 53 ayes to 31 noes.

NOTICE.

MR. VACQUEREL gave the following notice:

MR. PRESIDENT: I wish to give notice to this Convention that on Monday, December twenty-third, I will rise to a question of privilege in regard to section five and section six of an Act to provide for a Convention to frame a new Constitution for the State of California.

A. P. VACQUEREL.

ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, December 21, 1878.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I move that the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation be made the special order for Monday, December thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and in making that motion, I would say that it is necessary. I am opposed to special orders, but I want to be present when that question is considered. I want to go home and have time enough to pay my taxes and return. I am not able to go into the consideration of that report now. I would thank the Convention kindly for just making it the special order for December thirtieth. It is one of the most important reports that will come before this Convention. There are plenty of other reports that can be taken up. The report on suffrage and other reports can just as well be taken up, and we will have a fuller Convention then.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I would like to see the gentleman accommodated, but the fact is, that we are postponing everything too much, and if we expect to get through with the business here at all, we must take it up in its order. This report follows next after the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, and if we postpone the reports of the committees for one gentleman, we must for another.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that it will not be put off. Motions are made here every day by somebody to put something off. I think we will have a better Convention during the next ten days than we will for the ten days following that. I trust that everything will be done up in its order.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: "Procrastination is the thief of time." It does seem to me that if it be the desire and intention of this Convention to frame a Constitution, that the putting off, procrastinating anything, is certainly unwise; and, as to having a fuller Convention on the thirtieth than at present, I have no faith that such will be the case. I do believe that the longer we put matters off the thinner the Convention will be. I am opposed to putting anything off.

MR. BIGGS. I pledge my word that I will be here during every day of the Convention. I do not ask it on Biggs' account—God knows I don't!

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: If we put off matters of great consequence, we may expect to have a thin house. If the question of taxation is put off, there will only be matters of small consequence taken up, and members will not care whether they are here or not. Now, for the purpose of having a full house, it does appear to me that we should refuse to put off these important matters.

The motion was lost.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO RULE.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I desire to send up a notice of intention to move to amend a standing rule.

THE SECRETARY read:

I hereby give notice that I will move to amend Standing Rule Number Fifty-Five so that it shall read as follows:

FIFTY-FIVE—COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

In forming a Committee of the Whole Convention, the President may preside or appoint a member to preside. When propositions or resolutions relating to the Constitution shall be committed to a Committee of the Whole Convention, they shall be read in Committee of the Whole by sections. All amendments shall be noted and reported to the Convention by the Chairman. After report, the proposition or resolution shall again be subject to amendment before the final question is taken; but any report, proposition, or resolution may be considered in Convention without having been committed or referred to the Committee of the Whole.

I will also move to repeal Standing Rule Number Fifty-eight.

THE CHINESE MEMORIAL.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to call the attention of the members of the Convention to this matter. One of the members, Mr. McComas, is at home, sick; knowing that this body is about to sign the memorial on the subject of Chinese immigration he has written to me to ask leave of the Convention to sign his name to that memorial. I now call the attention of the Convention to it, so that in case it is prepared I may sign it for Mr. McComas.

[Cries of "Leave! leave!"]

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I have a letter from Mr. Pulliam to the same effect.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move that both gentlemen have leave to sign the names.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, it is so ordered.

MR. EDGERTON. I wish the gentleman from Santa Clara, while he is about it, would sign my name. It may come home to roost.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I ask leave of absence until Monday for the Secretary, Mr. Johnson.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, it is granted.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. Section twenty-four was pending when the committee rose.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. I wish to offer an amendment to that section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-four by adding, 'and all laws of the State of California, and all official writings, and the executive, legislative, and judicial proceedings shall be conducted, preserved, and published in no other than the English language.'"

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I understand that refers to all judicial proceedings. I hardly think that it is necessary, and in some instances it would work injury. We have a provision in our present Constitution, requiring laws to be translated and published in Spanish; that, I think, is entirely unnecessary, and should be rescinded. We have statutes, however, passed for the purpose of meeting exigencies in some parts of this State, allowing, in some kind of proceedings—judicial proceedings in the Courts—to be conducted either in the English or Spanish language. Now, while I would not make that mandatory, and while I would say nothing about it in the Constitution, I would leave it in the discretion of the Legislature to make that same provision, for I can assure this Convention that there are Justices of the Peace in my county, and their proceedings are judicial proceedings, who are intelligent men, and very able Justices of the Peace, who have no knowledge of the English language. There are settlements in that county, in certain localities and townships, in which the English language is scarcely spoken, the population being made up, almost entirely, of people who use the Spanish language. Now, in this instance, it would work a very great injury. It would be very inconvenient in such localities. I do not suppose that there are many townships in the State in that situation, but there are some within my knowledge. I can only speak as to my own locality, but I have no doubt that there are other localities in the same situation. Therefore I think that in these townships where almost the entire population is made up of a Spanish-speaking people, there would be no harm done in allowing the judicial proceedings of the Justices' Courts to be conducted in the Spanish language. In early days there were District Judges who had at least an imperfect knowledge of the English language. I do not suppose there is any such case now. There are judicial proceedings in the District and County Courts of this State, gentlemen will find, by referring back to the records, that are in the Spanish language. I do not suppose there is any objection to requiring the proceedings, in the District and County Courts, to be conducted in English, but there is no good reason why it should be required in the Justices' Courts. I will say further, that from my experience in looking over the dockets of a good many Justices of the Peace, who try to conduct their proceedings in English, that it would scarcely bear the test of correct English at least.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will be adopted. There was a day when such proceedings were necessary—in the early days in this State—but I contend that day has now passed. Thirty years have elapsed since this portion of the country became a portion of the Government of the United States, and the different residents who were here at that time have had ample time to be conversant with the English language if they desired to do so. This is an English-speaking Government, and persons who are incapable of speaking the English language certainly are not competent to discharge public duties. We have here in the Capitol now tons and tons of documents published in Spanish for the benefit of foreigners.

MR. ROLFE. Do you call the native population of this State foreigners?

MR. TINNIN. They had ample time to learn the language.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will not be indorsed by this Convention, but that it will be left with the Legislature to act as it sees fit. In the section of the State which I represent there are large portions of it which are entirely populated by a Spanish-American population, not a foreign population, but a population who were here before we were here, and I wish to say that almost without an exceptional instance these natives of California, who were adults at the time this State was ceded to the United States by Mexico, are still in the same condition, as far as their knowledge of English is concerned. There are but very few of them, if any, who understand our language at all, and, if I am not mistaken, in the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo there was an assurance that the natives should continue to enjoy the rights and privileges they did under their former Government, and there was an implied contract that they should be governed as they were before. It was in this spirit that the laws were printed in Spanish. As Judge Rolfe says, there are townships in Southern California which are entirely Spanish, or Spanish-American, and in those townships the Courts of Justice of the Peace are carried on sometimes exclusively in the Spanish language, and it would be wrong, it seems to me, for this Convention to prevent these people from transacting their local business in their own language. It does no harm to Americans, and I think they should be permitted to do so.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: I do not propose to say many words, but I am convinced that we should not load this Constitution down. We must recollect that there are a great many in this State, quite a considerable number, I might say, of Mexican descent, and it would agonize their feelings if this Constitution should have anything like a prohibition of this nature in it. I am, therefore, entirely in accord with the remarks of the gentleman from Los Angeles on this subject. Let matters remain as they are.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee: As has been aptly stated by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, there was an implied contract in the treaty of peace with Mexico that the Mexican citizen should enjoy the same privileges and immunities under the American rule as they enjoy it under the Mexican rule. And among these privileges and immunities was the right of having the laws of this State printed in Spanish, and having the judicial proceedings of this State, at least in certain districts thereof, and, to a certain extent, conducted in the Spanish language. And the Codes of this State, to-day, contain a special provision that in certain counties of this State the proceedings may be in the Spanish language. Further, this clause will provide that all laws of the State, and all official documents, shall be published only in the English language. Now, it is not the policy of any State in the Union to publish exclusively in the English language. In the State of Michigan, where I resided for eight years, our public documents were published in the English, the German, and the French languages. In the State of Wisconsin the public documents are printed in the English, German, and Norwegian languages. In Pennsylvania, in English and German; and it is the policy of the Western States, generally, with their cosmopolitan population, to publish State documents in more than one language. Be this proper, or be it improper, it is a matter that ought to rest in the discretion of the Legislature, and we ought not to put any Know-Nothing clause into the Constitution. We ought not to allow that sort of antagonism to raise in the Constitution. I hope there will be no declaration of that kind in this Constitution. I hope that it will be promptly voted down. I hope that the Spaniards will have their rights, as they have them to-day, and if the Legislature can assist them by having documents published in their language, I hope they will do so.

MR. TINNIN. Where do you find in the treaty of Hidalgo any such contract?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I said that I found it in the Acts of the State.

MR. AYERS. I say that the treaty implied that.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It says that they should have the same privileges and immunities.

MR. SCHELL. If we are to be so exceedingly cosmopolitan, would it not be equally reasonable that our laws should be published in German and French?

MR. INMAN. And Chinese.

MR. SCHELL. And every other language that we have here.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I do not say that our laws ought to be published in any but the English language; but I do say that there should not be any inhibition contained in the Constitution that would prevent the Legislature from publishing official documents in any other language, if it was desirable to do so. I do not see why the Governor's messages should not be published in German and French, and any other language, if it is desirable.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment will not prevail. As the Constitution is at present it is compulsory upon the Legislature to have the laws printed both in English and Spanish. That, I think, is not necessary now, but I think this Constitution should be left without any direction in regard to that, so that the Legislature may, if in its wisdom it should think proper, publish public documents, the laws for instance, in other languages, to be distributed in certain counties of this State where there is a large population of that kind. There are some portions of this State where all business and all proceedings are carried on in the Spanish language, and one or two of the Justices of the Peace in Southern California cannot carry on the proceedings of their Courts unless they do it in the Spanish language, and they are among the best Justices of the Peace we have. Now it is not right to say that the Legislature shall not publish anything but in the English language.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. Chairman: Do the English-speaking constituents down there all understand the English language?

MR. BLACKMER. No, sir, not all of them, because there are a great many there who cannot read or understand the English language, and it is but just that the Legislature should be allowed to publish State documents in the Spanish language for these particular localities, so that they might know about them. In most of the counties where there is so large a proportion of Spanish population, a great majority of the English-speaking people understand the Spanish, and speak it so that they can make themselves understood back and forth. I hope it will be left with the Legislature.

MR. SCHELL. How many voters are there that speak the Spanish language down there that can also speak the English language?

MR. BLACKMER. There are a great many, but there are a great many who are able to speak the English language who cannot read it.

MR. GREGG. Can they read the Spanish?

MR. BLACKMER. Most of them can.

MR. HEISKELL. I demand the previous question.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The main question has been ordered. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Smith.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 46 ayes to 39 noes.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to the last amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the last amendment to section twenty-four the following: 'Provided, that the Legislature may, by law, authorize judicial or other official proceedings in any designated counties or other localities, to be conducted in the English or Spanish language.'"

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I second the amendment.

Mr. SCHELL. Mr. Chairman: If that amendment were to prevail we might as well strike out the amendment already adopted; and besides, it would be special legislation. I believe the policy of the Convention is to do away with special legislation.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: It is true that there is an endeavor to cut off special legislation as much as possible; but in some instances special legislation must be had, and under this amendment we have just adopted, there is an instance in which I think it is very proper that special legislation should be had. Now, I offer this by way of an amendment, and as an addition to the section. Now, if that is added, this will be the rule, that unless there is a special provision made by the Legislature, all these proceedings must be conducted and published in the English language. That would include the proceedings of the Legislature and the laws of the Legislature. This amendment which I propose now does not interfere with the laws of the State, proclamations of the Governor, or anything of a State nature. It only refers to proceedings of a local nature, and then, unless the Legislature specially authorizes that to be done, these local proceedings must be conducted in the English language. But I do say that, in localities in this State, where the population are almost universally of the Spanish-speaking people, it is unjust to them to compel them to conduct their proceedings in the English language. Gentlemen ask here if these Mexican-Spanish-speaking people do not speak English as a general thing. I say, as a general thing, they have an imperfect knowledge of English, and few of them have a perfect knowledge of English. Some of the best educated people of that race that we have in this State only have an imperfect knowledge of the English language, the same as some of the best educated have but an imperfect knowledge of the Spanish language. Now, I say that some localities in this State are almost universally populated with a Spanish-speaking people. There are some English-speaking people there, it is true, but most of them understand the Spanish language. They conduct their business and all their proceedings in Spanish. They make their contracts in Spanish. Although a man may be very well educated in Spanish, and may have a very ordinary knowledge of the English language, it may still be very inconvenient for him to conduct his proceedings in English; and in these judicial proceedings, where a man, whose mother and father is Spanish, although he may have a very ordinary knowledge of the English language, it is wrong to compel him to conduct his entire proceedings in a Justice's Court in the English language. He will make mistakes in language which will be injurious to litigants before his Court. It will be not only an inconvenience to him, but it is the right of parties before his Court.

Now, I say that we should take into consideration the fact that the American, or English-speaking people, of this State are the new comers. We settled this State and took it from these people when the Spanish was universally the mother tongue of the people. They are a conquered people. Now, I say when we take their country and the people too, and make American citizens of them, we must take them as they are and give them an equal show with us whether it was so contracted in the treaty or not. I say it is nothing but just, as long as there is one township in the State which is populated mostly by these people. I say, although it may be not more than one township of five hundred inhabitants, it is nothing but just that we should allow that locality to conduct their proceedings in the mother tongue of the people who inhabit it. But there is more than one township in that situation, there are large sections of some counties, and large counties, in this State, in the same situation. Now, I do hope that the Convention will do these people the justice to make this one exception to the amendment which has just been adopted, that everything should be conducted in the English language, and to allow this one exception in the case of a great many localities in this State where the people are so situated as I have stated.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I have as high regard, sir, as any man for the foreign element of citizens of this State who have come here and identified themselves with the institutions of this country, and assimilated, they and their families, with its institutions; but I have no regard for that demagogism that panders to this foreign element, that follows it for years and years for the sake of the votes it affords on election days. I speak whereof I know when I say that hundreds of those who pretend to be citizens of California are recent immigrants from Sonora and other portions of Mexico, some of them bandits, cutthroats, and robbers, that come in and are placed on the Great Register, and vote there. I believe that they are not citizens, and yet they are at once placed upon the Great Register, while the Dutchman, and the Irishman, and the Frenchman must be naturalized and come in in the regular way. It is an abuse, it is an outrage upon the institutions of our country. On election day they are corraled and voted, when they have not been in the State five days. Many of them are admitted or classed as citizens under the treaty who were born in Mexico since the treaty was ratified. Many of them make it their business to rob and plunder, and they avail themselves of this opportunity to deprive the citizens of the United States of the influence of their votes. We have opened the doors of our public schools to them and their children, and attempted to educate them under the general influence of our schools, and if thirty years will not do it, I think we had better send missionaries into the county from which the gentleman from San Bernardino comes. I do not know that these gentlemen spoken of are competent to perform the duties of Justices of the Peace or any other position, but I am satisfied that the Spanish element do not ask it. It is the demagogues who ask it, and not the educated, thinking, and reading part of that population. I respect that population, where they are bona-fide citizens, as much as any member of this Convention, but I want a period placed where the importation of Mexicans into this country and the collecting of them at the polls shall cease.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I wish to state that I am not in favor of printing the laws in Spanish. Neither am I in favor of any law that is intended to drive a certain population out of the State. Whether the statements of the gentleman from Los Angeles are correct or not, I do not know, but I do know that there are a great many districts where it would be impossible to get justice for these people if they are not allowed to go on with their proceedings in Spanish. I do not think it would be wise for us not to allow proceedings in Spanish in those localities where they all talk the Spanish language. I think the Convention ought to make some exception in these places. They are born on the soil, and they have the same rights as any one of us, and they ought to be allowed to have their proceedings, in the Justices' Courts, in the Spanish language. I hope that this Convention will not be unjust to these people, but will be fair to them, and make some exception in this Constitution that will allow of proceedings in Spanish in Justices' Courts. As to the publishing of the laws in Spanish, it ought to be stopped at once.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: This is not a question of demagogism, or partisanism; it is a question of right. Now, I know that in Southern California there are districts and communities that are so entirely Spanish that if you depriye them of the right to continue their proceedings in Justices' Courts in Spanish, you will deprive them of justice. I do not see what it has to do with this case, whether people are run in in bands, from Mexico, and put upon the Great Register or not. That is a question for the Courts. If they are run in, in that way, and falsely placed on the Register, it ought to be stopped; but even if that was the case, it is no reason for taking away the rights of any portion of this people. It is only five years since the Mayor of Los Angeles could not speak the English language, and he was a very efficient Mayor. I remember a case in San Luis Obispo, which was tried before a Spanish Justice of the Peace, when a distinguished gentleman on this floor was the counsel on one side, and the whole audience were Spanish, and the whole proceedings in the case were in Spanish. It does not harm this State any. I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from San Bernardino will be adopted on the ground that it is right and just. It is all well enough for us here, who are strong, to stand up and denounce them because they are weak. We have taken from them their patrimony and their lands, and now we are kicking them while they are down.

REMARKS OF MR. OVERTON.

MR. OVERTON. Mr. Chairman: I am not in favor of the amendment; neither do I care for this sympathetic appeal. We have done it, it is true. We have done it honorably, and we have lived up to the contract. We have protected them for thirty years, and if they have not learned to conduct their business in English, I think it is about time they did learn. I do not think, Mr. President, that there is a township in this State that there is not some Americans, or some foreigners, who do not speak the Spanish language, and we are doing them an injustice if we allow proceedings to be carried on in a language they do not understand. These cases are subject to appeal, and if the proceedings of that Court is had in Spanish, there is not a County Court in this State the proceedings of which are conducted in Spanish, and therefore you cannot appeal. If you are going to permit one township to have it in Spanish, there is just as much reason why another should have it in Swiss and another in Italian.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I would like to ask the gentleman whether the Swiss and Italians came here from other countries, or were born here, or whether they were found here?

MR. OVERTON. They came here under a treaty, and have got just as much right as those under the Hidalgo treaty. These people sold us their country, and we have paid them the money. I am not in favor of printing laws in Spanish. Our County Court House has a room that is occupied by statutes published in Spanish, and there they remain to-day, by the ton, and they are not worth anything. This State has paid out thousands and thousands of dollars—thrown it away—for the purpose of publishing books in Spanish, and we have got them there now, and no one ever has any use for them.

MR. ROLFE. We do not ask the laws to be published in Spanish.

MR. AYERS. Does the gentleman know that there are tons and tons of English literature in this building too?

MR. OVERTON. Yes; I know there are. We can read it too. When it comes to publishing laws in Spanish, I hold that it is useless. There is not a nationality in this State that has not got papers that publish them, and they can read them there.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend the amendment by inserting after the word "conducted" the words "and published."

MR. ROLFE. I accept that amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: I do believe that these people have some rights that we ought to respect. I do not believe, because we are stronger, because we outnumber them and are continually increasing the ratio, that we should entirely ignore the rights that these people ought to have under a free government. It is a simple question whether we will do right because it is right, or whether we will do wrong because we have the power to do it. I look upon it in that light. I say that it is but simple justice that the Legislature be given the authority to allow, in certain localities, these Courts to conduct their business in that language, and, if necessary, that they may also publish in that language. It does not compel the Legislature to publish the laws in Spanish, but it simply gives them the authority to allow it to be done in certain counties, or localities, if they think it proper; and I do think it is only a matter of justice that this be done.

MR. WICKES. Mr. Chairman: In addition to what has been said, I think it very good policy to give some official recognition to the Spanish language. It is a noble language, spoken by millions of people upon the American continent.

MR. WEST. I would like to hear the amendment. My opinion is that the amendment of the gentleman from San Bernardino nullifies the other amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair knows of no point of order that would prevent the Convention doing a foolish thing.

MR. WEST. I accept the ruling.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. Mr. Chairman: I wish to say that I am in favor of that amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe.

The amendment was lost on a division, by a vote of 27 ayes to 55 noes.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I give notice that I will make a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Smith, was adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no further amendments to section twenty-four the Secretary will read section twenty-five.

SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 25. The Legislature shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say:

First—Regulating the jurisdiction and duties of Justices of the Peace, Police Judges, and of Constables.

Second—For the punishment of crimes and misdemeanors.

Third—Regulating the practice of Courts of justice.

Fourth—Providing for changing the venue in civil or criminal cases.

Fifth—Granting divorces.

Sixth—Changing the names of persons or places.

Seventh—Vacating roads, town plats, streets, alleys, or public grounds not owned by the State.

Eighth—Summoning and impaneling grand and petit juries, and providing for their compensation.

Ninth—Regulating county and township business, or the election of county and township officers.

Tenth—For the assessment or collection of taxes.

Eleventh—Providing for conducting elections, or designating the places of voting, except on the organization of new counties.

Twelfth—Affecting estates belonging to minors or other persons under legal disabilities.

Thirteenth—Extending the time for the collection of taxes.

Fourteenth—Giving effect to invalid deeds, wills, or other instruments.

Fifteenth—Refunding money paid into the State treasury.

Sixteenth—Releasing or extinguishing, in whole or in part, the indebtedness, liability, or obligation, of any corporation or person to this State, or to any municipal corporation therein.

Seventeenth—Declaring any person of age, or authorizing any minor to sell, lease, or incumber his or her property.

Eighteenth—Legalizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer.

Nineteenth—Granting to any corporation, association, or individual any special or exclusive right, privilege, or immunity.

Twentieth—Exempting property from taxation.

Twenty-first—Changing county seats.

Twenty-second—Restoring to citizenship persons convicted of infamous crimes.

Twenty-third—Regulating the rate of interest on money.

Twenty-fourth—Authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens.

Twenty-fifth—Chartering or licensing ferries, bridges, or roads.

Twenty-sixth—Remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures.

Twenty-seventh—Providing for the management of common schools.

Twenty-eighth—Creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, cities and counties, townships, election or school districts.

Twenty-ninth—Affecting the fees or salary of any officer.

Thirtieth—Changing the law of descent or succession.

Thirty-first—Authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children.

Thirty-second—Authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, or maintaining roads, highways, streets, alleys, or public grounds.

Thirty-third—For limitation of civil or criminal actions.

Thirty-fourth—In all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, no local or special law shall be enacted.

MR. VAN DYKE. I move to amend section twenty-five by adding to subdivision thirty-two the following: "Except such as belong to the State."

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. I move that we take up the subdivisions seriatim.

THE CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, that course will be pursued.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer a substitute for the entire section. I suppose I have a right to do that? I offer it as a substitute.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can offer his amendment but it will not be taken up at present. Is there any amendment to subdivision one?

MR. HERRINGTON. Then I cannot offer it at all?

THE CHAIRMAN. It cannot be taken up until we go through the section.

MR. REYNOLDS. I will suggest to the gentleman that he can offer his substitute for subdivision first of the section. If it be a substitute for the whole section, and be adopted, it will take the place of the whole remaining part of the section.

THE CHAIRMAN. We must travel through all these subdivisions first. The Secretary will commence and read each subdivision.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions one, two, three, and four.

MR. ROLFE. I wish to offer a simple amendment to the fourth subdivision. I move to strike out of line seven the word "venue" and insert "place of trial." I think the object of that amendment will be obvious. If we conduct our proceedings in English this word "venue" is a very awkward word to be used here.

MR. HERRINGTON. I wish to ask the gentleman a question, and the Chair also: If the proposed amendment should be adopted to any portion of this section how would it be possible, after it is adopted, to strike it out with an amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN. It would be perfectly possible to do it.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: If the gentlemen will examine the Code of Civil Procedure, and the old Practice Act, I think they will find that this word "venue" is not used, although I will admit that in old proceedings in England this word "venue" is common, especially when they used the barbarous law French and law Latin; it means the place of trial; that is plain English, which anybody who understands English can understand, and as we have already decided not to print our laws in anything but English, let us have our Constitution in English. I always did object to using this phrase, "change of venue," in the laws, although in our talk we may use it. But I will suggest to the gentlemen, and I think every lawyer will agree with me, that it is not a very proper word to use when we are using the English language, but "place of trial" is. If the gentlemen will examine section twenty-one, I think it is, of the old Practice Act, where we ordinarily say that it provides for a change of venue, they will find that the Act does not use the word "venue," but says "place of trial." I think the change will be an improvement, and certainly the meaning will be more generally understood.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was lost.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions five, six, and seven.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer to subdivision seven; I will explain it before I send it up. The Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations have made a report in which we have reported on the matter contained in subdivisions seven and thirty-two—they relate to the same subject. I propose to amend section twenty-five by striking out subdivision seven and thirty-two, and inserting what I will send up.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-five by striking out subdivisions seven and thirty-two, and inserting the following: 'Authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, maintaining, or vacating roads, highways, streets, alleys, town plats, parks, cemeteries, graveyards, or public grounds, not owned by the State.'"

The amendment was adopted on a division by a vote of 77 ayes to 6 noes.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions eight and nine.

MR. BURT. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer a substitute for subdivision nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-five by striking out subdivision nine and inserting the following: 'Regulating the internal government and business management of county and township organizations, or election and compensation of county and township officers.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BURT.

MR. BURT. Mr. Chairman: I presume that it was the intention of the Committee on Legislative Department to cover the same ground that is covered in my proposed amendment, but I regard this matter of special legislation, relating to county and township organizations, as of too much importance to leave any room for doubt as to its construction. In my opinion this matter of special legislation, relative to county and township organization, is more to be deprecated than all other matters of special legislation combined. It is not only detrimental to the interests of the counties and townships, but it is one of the greatest, if not the greatest source of corruption in our legislative halls. And not only this, but it serves to clog the wheels of necessary general legislation. It is not necessary, Mr. Chairman, to offer any evidence in support of this to any members on this floor, who have ever participated in the business of legislation in these halls. The fact that matters of vast importance to the State are pressed to the wall, day after day, during the session, to give room for this special legislation, is well known, and such matters if they are allowed to be considered at all, are postponed until the very close of the session, and then passed, if at all, without any consideration. To those who have never participated in matters of legislation, I have only to refer them to this volume of the statutes of the last session. I find upon a closer examination of this volume, that out of five hundred and seventy-two laws contained therein, sixty-nine of them are general in their purport and application, while five hundred and three of them are special; and this is but a fair average of the general legislation in this State.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not maintain, nor do I propose to maintain that such special legislation is unnecessary, or that it can be avoided. On the contrary, I know that it is necessary, but I do contend that it will better subserve the interests of the people for whom it is intended by being left entirely to the local Boards of Supervisors. Aside from this, if left to the local Boards, it will work a great saving to the State. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that our Legislature is squandering its time and funds in passing such special laws as our statutes are mostly composed of. In examining, for instance, I find a special law passed to prevent hogs and goats from running at large in Rocklin precinct, Placer County, and another to prevent hogs and goats running at large in Adin township, Modoc County. It seems to me that the Legislature if they had appropriated the funds consumed in making this special legislation, to the payment of damages caused by the depredations of such hogs and goats, it would have been a saving to the State. I know it is held by persons who are in favor of continuing this special legislation in the hands of the Legislature, that in placing this power in the hands of the Boards of Supervisors we are concentrating too much power into a few hands—in other words, savoring of the one man power; while if left to the Legislature at large, there is wisdom in a multitude of counsel. But while this may be true in theory, I hold that in practice the reverse is the fact. I think with the exception of the City and County of San Francisco, there is not a county in the State whose delegation, including both Senators and members of the Assembly, is not less in number than constitutes the local Boards of Supervisors. And as regards the City and County of San Francisco, it seems to me that they have infinitely more to fear from their delegation in the Legislature, than from their Board of Supervisors. To use the California phrase, the City of San Francisco trembles in her boots during the entire session of the Legislature. But there is another reason why this should be left in the local Boards of Supervisors. They are of the people and constantly mingling with the people. They know the wants of the people of their locality better than it is possible for the Legislature to know them. What, for instance, Mr. Chairman, does the representative from Modoc, on the north, or San Diego on the south, know of the wants of the citizens of San Francisco. And yet, they know much more of those wants than it is possible for the representatives of San Francisco to know of the local wants of those remote counties. The representatives from the interior have access to the daily papers of San Francisco, which are filled with the wants of San Francisco. This source of information is beyond the reach of the representative from San Francisco with reference to the interior counties, simply because there are no local daily papers. Now, with reference to these local bills when they are passed especially for the benefit of communities, or of county officials, they are invariably passed at the urgent solicitation of those individuals or officials, and not at the request of the communities interested. For instance, during the last session of the Legislature, a law was passed increasing the compensation of the Recorder of Placer County. Now, while not pretending to say whether such law was just, or unjust, I do say that it was passed without a single request from any individual in that county aside from the Recorder interested; and had the matter been left to the Board of Supervisors I do not believe that his compensation would have been increased. But that is only one case out of hundreds that are passed nearly every session with reference to all the counties in the State. I believe, Mr. Chairman, that the public sentiment is tending towards increasing and concentrating this power of special legislation in the hands of the Boards of Supervisors. Such power has been greatly increased during the last two years, and I have yet to learn of the very first instance where such power has been abused. I think, therefore, Mr. Chairman, that we are perfectly safe in leaving all such matters of special legislation, with reference to county and township organization, in the hands of Boards of Supervisors.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: The gentleman is trying to arrive at the very position which the committee arrived at. I do not think his amendment is any improvement. I think that "regulating county and township business" is fully as comprehensive as "regulating the internal government and business management of county and township organization." I hope it will be voted down.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: As the committee, of which I am the Chairman, has considered this same subject-matter, I will send up the paragraph as reported by the Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations. It is fuller and more comprehensive than that of the Committee on Legislative Department. I will send it up. It reads: "Regulating the affairs of counties, cities, towns, townships, wards, cities and counties, Boards of Education, school districts, or other political or municipal corporations or subdivisions of the State." Of course, if it is adopted here it will be stricken out of the report of the Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Burt.

The amendment was rejected.

THE SECRETARY read the tenth subdivision.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I wish to make an inquiry. I have known in my experience in township matters, and especially in school matters, where the local school officers have levied a tax and collected a part of the money for the purpose of erecting a school-house, and it required a special Act of the Legislature to enable them to collect the taxes. I want to know if, under the principle of this report, it could be collected?

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: The object of this section is to get rid of all special legislation. We propose that the Legislature shall not say to these people they shall do this, or that, or anything.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions eleven and twelve.

MR. CROUCH. Mr. Chairman: I wish to offer an amendment to subdivision twelve.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend subdivision twelve, by inserting after the word 'affecting' the words, 'estates of deceased persons.'"

MR. CROUCH. Mr. Chairman: I think it is quite important that there should be no special legislation respecting the estates of deceased persons, authorizing the administrator to sell at private sale, etc. I would like to prevent legislation of that kind.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend by striking out the words "belonging to," so that the subdivision will read: "affecting the estates of deceased persons, minors, or other persons under legal disabilities."

MR. CROUCH. I accept the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions thirteen, fourteen, and fifteen.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Chairman: I think that section ought not to be in the Constitution. I would inquire of the Chairman of the committee if he has considered that proposition? It strikes me that this is one of the cases where it should be allowed to be special. Now we cannot pass a general law for refunding money. Suppose a case where the State has money belonging to one of its citizens which, in equity and common conscience, the State ought not to keep? I would like to inquire how that money is to reach the party to whom it in equity belongs? Suppose the State sells property, and it turns out there is no title to the property, and it is absolutely lost to the purchaser? Now, of course, we all recognize the fact that in equity and common conscience the money belongs to the party who has paid it. How is he to get it? You cannot sue the State.

MR. TERRY. The easiest matter in the world—by a simple provision in a general law, that any person who has paid money to the State for property, and it turns out there is no title, shall have that money restored to him—putting all men on the same plane.

MR. VAN DYKE. I think it is a much more dangerous provision than to leave it to the Legislature. I move to amend by striking out that subdivision. I do not think we ought to have a general law on the statute book allowing money to be refunded. There would be too many claims to get money from the State. We have no law now allowing the State to be sued, and I am opposed to any general law allowing money to be extracted from the treasury. In a case where the State has money that, in equity and common conscience, belongs to a citizen, the Legislature should be allowed to pass an Act to refund that specific money. I say that it is safer to let every case stand upon its own merits than to have a general law.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I think a general law in such a case would be a great deal more dangerous than a special law, where it was evident to the Legislature that the money belonged to the citizen; therefore I hope the amendment will be adopted.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I consider that one of the most salutary provisions in this section. A general law may provide that any party who has paid money to the State, under those circumstances, that it should be refunded to him.

MR. WHITE. I would ask if a general law would not open the doors of the treasury to everybody?

MR. LARKIN. I think not.

MR. HALL. Mr. Chairman: I rise simply to remark that the Federal Government has a general law providing for the return of money paid for purchase of lands wherever the title of the Government proves to be defective. I do not see why a like rule should not be adopted by the State.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, to strike out subdivision fifteen.

The motion was lost.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, and nineteen.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: I move to amend by striking out subdivision nineteen. I am sorry, sir, that the word "corporation" is in that subdivision, because that word throws certain gentlemen into fits, and I am not good on fits. [Laughter.] But I believe we are going too far if we adopt this subdivision. Now, we have at the end of section twenty-five, that no special law shall be passed when general laws will apply, and I believe there are some instances where it is proper to grant a special right to an individual or to an association. I do not believe it is safe to prevent the Legislature from doing so at all. I have in my mind's eye now a case like this. For instance, I have a large body of land here that lies five or six thousand feet above the level of the sea, valuable only for lumbering purposes. We have in that vicinity streams of water which would be very beneficial to this district if they could be improved so that lumber could be floated in them. Now, sir, no private individual could undertake to make the necessary improvement, and the Legislature, in several instances, for the benefit of large communities, have given special privileges to certain parties, authorizing them to charge a small amount for the privilege of floating lumber down. I do not understand how that could be done by a general law, because in a general law it would be granting too great privileges, and granting it upon too many streams. I refer to this simply as an instance where the Legislature should have the power to grant special privileges of this kind. Where it can be done by a general law let it be done; and this section provides that where a general law will apply no special privilege can be granted. I do not believe that this Convention ought to prohibit the Legislature from complying with the wishes of a large community by granting a special privilege of this kind. If it is a special grant, it can be limited to the conditions of the case, whereas a general law allowing any person or persons such privileges would be dangerous, because there might be cases where it would work an injury instead of a benefit. I believe that the Legislature ought to have power in these extreme cases to grant special privileges of that kind. I do not think it would be proper to cut off from the Legislature entirely the power in any imaginable case to grant special legislation of that character. A general law, it seems to me, would be more dangerous than to allow the Legislature to do it in special cases, because a general law would be taken advantage of by those who would merely wish to monopolize right.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I was satisfied that the word corporation was somewhere ahead of us, or we would not have seen these gentlemen here all this morning. The first special Act of that character which was passed had a little job in it, and it was the same with the second. Persons floating lumber down these streams were required to pay certain amounts, and instead of proving a benefit to the entire community, as the gentleman says, it was found that there was a fortune in it for the few who had secured the franchise, but nothing in it for the rest of the community. It was detrimental to the best interests of the State. These Acts have been cursed by the people of the State ever since. So far as the word corporation is concerned, I do not think a corporation should have any more rights than an individual or association. All persons should have the same rights.

MR. MCFARLAND. I would like to ask the gentleman if he is opposed to the improvement of any stream.

MR. LARKIN. By a special Act I am opposed to it, but under general law I am in favor of it.

MR. MCFARLAND. I would like to inquire how he would improve a river.

MR. LARKIN. By a general law authorizing people to associate for that purpose.

MR. MCFARLAND. Then he wishes, by a general law, that he or anybody else can go on and take up streams. The first man that goes there gets it. That is his idea of being against monopoly.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend subdivision nineteen by adding at the end thereof the following: 'except as provided for in section twenty-two of this article.'"

MR. SCHELL. Mr. Chairman: I desire merely to remark that I understand that special privileges have been allowed to individuals or associations by section twenty-two. I understand that the Legislature may make special appropriations under that section. I offer this amendment for the purpose of bringing up the question. I do not fully understand it, but suppose it was some special appropriation for the support of these orphans, and that it would take a special law.

MR. LARKIN. As section twenty-two is amended I do not think this section would affect it.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland, to strike out subdivision nineteen.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-five, subdivision nineteen, by inserting, after the word 'association,' the word 'official.'"

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. Mr. Chairman: The subdivision would then read: "granting to any corporation, association, official, or individual, any special or exclusive right, privilege, or immunity." The reason why I offer that amendment is this: that our last Legislature did grant special privileges to certain officials in the City of San Francisco, concerning the City Hall. They had done certain work which did not conform to the contract and specifications, and by doing so would have forfeited their bonds, and to protect themselves they came to the Legislature and secured special privileges in regard to it.

MR. TERRY. I would like to ask the gentleman if he can find an officer who is not a person? The word, "individual," includes all persons, and I would like to know if the gentleman can find an officer who is not an individual?

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. It says "individual," and not "individuals." In this case there were two officials instead of one. [Laughter.]

The amendment was rejected.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions twenty, twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty-four, twenty-five, twenty-six, twenty-seven, twenty-eight, and twenty-nine.

MR. MCFARLAND. I move to amend by striking out subdivision twenty-nine. My reason is simply this, I do not believe that the business of this State has become so equalized that the fees of the county officers should be the same in every county. I do not believe that a man can do the business in Mono at the same price he can do it in Sacramento.

MR. LARKIN. I understand that each county is to have the control of all these things in the Board of Supervisors.

MR. MCFARLAND. If that is the proposition I am satisfied, but I do not see where it is. This certainly refers to no officer, State or county. I do not understand that anything has been passed allowing the county to determine the salary of its officers. I suppose the Legislature will determine the fees and salaries of officers in all counties. If you specify counties it will be a special law. You cannot pass a general law providing for the fees and salaries of county officers. This subdivision says that you shall not pass any law affecting the fees or salary of any officer. Now, if you pass a law saying that they shall have so much in San Francisco, and so much in Sacramento, it is a special law.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

THE SECRETARY read subdivisions thirty, thirty-one, thirty-two, thirty-three, and thirty-four.

MR. JOHNSON. I have an amendment to offer to subdivision thirty-four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'no local or special laws shall be enacted.'"

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman: I am sorry to say, Mr. Chairman, that those words are surplusage, and I think the Chairman of the Committe on Legislative Department will admit it. The first part of the section says: "The Legislature shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say," etc.

MR. TERRY. I believe it is surplusage, and ought to be stricken out.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

MR. HERRINGTON. I have a substitute which I desire to offer for section twenty-five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-five by striking out the section and inserting the following: 'The Legislature shall have no power to pass any special or local law, but may, by general law, authorize Courts to carry into effect the manifest intention of parties and officers by curing defects, omissions, and errors in instruments and proceedings arising out of their want of conformity to the laws of the State, upon such terms as may be just and equitable.'"

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I take it from the provisions of section twenty-five that it was the intention of this Convention—and if gentlemen will keep quiet I may be heard, for I have not got strong lungs to-day—I take it that it was the intention of this Convention to cut off all local and special legislation. I know of but two cases in which there would be a necessity for any special legislation, and such cases could only arise where great injustice would result to parties in consequence of a failure to comply with the law, so that the intention of the parties is entirely defeated by the act of the parties themselves; and in cases where officers have failed to conform to the laws, and in consequence injustice has been done by reason of nonconformity, and their acts are therefore invalid under the law. Now, this provides that the Legislature may make a general provision whereby the Courts may cure these errors, defects, and omissions.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. Chairman: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is that this Convention has already adopted section twenty-five. The gentleman now proposes to strike out what has already been adopted by the Convention.

THE CHAIRMAN. The amendment is a substitute for the entire section and will be in order.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: That is what I expected. I expected that point of order to be raised. Now, I submit that all that is embraced in the section which has been passed upon by the Committee of the Whole is embraced in the section which I offer. It prevents all special and local legislation, and it authorizes the Legislature to provide, by a general law, for the correction of all errors, omissions, and defects, in instruments and proceedings. It is a provision which will be found in some of the Constitutions of the States, and is highly commended by eminent authorities on constitutional limitations. Mr. Cooley says that it is a perfect and effectual guard of the State against injurious and unwise legislation on the part of the Legislature. It is recommended as one of the wisest measures that has ever been adopted by any people in their Constitution to prevent the evils which flow from hasty and local legislation. I submit that that provision ought to be adopted, and I would like, if it can be done, to have it read again so that it can be fairly understood by the Convention.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-five by striking out the section and inserting the following: 'The Legislature shall have no power to pass any special or local law, but may, by general law, authorize Courts to carry into effect the manifest intention of parties and officers, by curing defects, omissions, and errors, in instruments and proceedings arising out of their want of conformity to the laws of the State, upon such terms as may be just and equitable.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. TURNER. Mr. Chairman: Being somewhat slow I failed to ask a question which I wish to ask in regard to subdivision eighteen. It provides that the Legislature shall not pass any local or special law "legalizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer." If it does not mean that what does it mean? I understand that it means that if any officer commit an act against the State that the State may legalize it. If it does not mean that, what does it mean? I wish to ask if that is what the Convention wants to put into this organic law?

STOCK SALES.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section twenty-six.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 26. The Legislature shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets, or tickets in any scheme in the nature of a lottery, in this State. The Legislature shall pass laws to regulate or prohibit the buying and selling of the shares of the capital stock of corporations in any stock board, stock exchange, or stock market under the control of any association. All contracts for the sale of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association, on margin or to be delivered at a future day, shall be void, and any money paid on such contracts may be recovered, by the party paying it, by suit in any Court of competent jurisdiction.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment to that section:

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word State, in the fourth line, and insert the following: 'Nor shall any stock board or stock exchange, or other association for the buying or selling of the shares of the capital stock of corporations be allowed to exist.'"

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: The amendment is as first adopted in the Committee on Legislative Department. It was conceded, as I believe, that the evil aimed at is one that ought to be repressed, and yet the argument in committee was so overwhelming, that in the event of the adoption of a Constitution here, the power of the Stock Boards will defeat the Constitution, that it was changed. It was asserted that they could perhaps put in the field as much as two millions of dollars to defeat the Constitution, in the event of the adoption of a section of this character. I feel this way in regard to it: if we are going to do anything in the Constitution at all, let us strike at it effectually. If not, if our measure is not effectual, and will not accomplish the object aimed at, then I would be in favor of having nothing to do with the subject in the Constitution, for I recognize the fact that the Legislature has all the power in this matter, without any constitutional provision, that it would have with one, such as is suggested. I anticipate that this section, as it now stands, would bring upon this Constitution all the opposition from the quarters suggested that would be centered against it even in the event of the adoption of the amendment which I propose. If this Constitution should be adopted with the amendments as reported by the committee, it would be a continual source of lobbying and corruption about the Legislature. We have seen this matter tried. We have seen the California Legislature attempt to suppress to some extent the evil of stock gambling; and we have seen several of the most formidable lobbies perhaps ever assembled here, to defeat that measure. I, for one, am in favor, as far as possible, of removing all sources of evil, and the lobby is one of the worst; therefore, I say, if we trouble this stock gambling evil at all, let us touch it in a way that it will be effectual.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'association,' in line seven."

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: If this should be adopted as a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Placer, it would leave the original section, down to the word "association," in line seven, and would strike out the balance of the section, and would then read as follows:

"SEC. 26. The Legislature shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of a lottery in this State. The Legislature shall pass laws to regulate or prohibit the buying and selling of the shares of the capital stock of corporations in any stock board, stock exchange, or stock market under the control of any association."

As reported by the committee, it authorizes the Legislature to regulate or absolutely prohibit the sale of stocks in stock exchanges. It delegates that power to the Legislature. That is a very extensive business, and it may be that the Legislature may be able to regulate it in such a manner as to remove some of the manifest and prominent evils surrounding it. With my amendment it would leave it in that condition. If the Legislature should find that the evils were incurable, it would then have the power to prohibit it entirely.

MR. FILCHER. I would like to ask the gentleman if the Legislature would not have just as much power without the second sentence as with it?

MR. WILSON. No, sir; in the one case it is made mandatory and in the other it is discretionary. It would have the power, of course, without any amendment to the whole section, but the difference is that in one case it is made mandatory, and in the other it is not. For this body to undertake to prohibit absolutely the buying and selling shares of stock, is to undertake a great responsibility, because a vast amount of capital is invested in that business. If it is capable of being regulated, let the Legislature do it; but this section, as reported by the committee, would drive all the incorporated companies to Virginia City, and Virginia City would have the entire business. The people of San Francisco would deal as much in stocks in Virginia City as they do in San Francisco. It seems to me far better to authorize the Legislature to either prohibit or regulate, than to absolutely prohibit in the Constitution itself. The amendment which I propose, strikes out the last seven lines with the exception of the word "association." That is, it strikes out the following: "All contracts for the sale of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association, on margin or to be delivered at a future day, shall be void, and any money paid on such contracts may be recovered by the party paying, by suit in any Court of competent jurisdiction."

That is altogether too broad. It has been conceded heretofore in the debates in this Convention that corporations were necessary to conduct many of the great branches of business in this State. It is admitted by all that we cannot prosper without aggregated capital in the form of corporations. We have already passed some very strong provisions to regulate and control them, and the State and the Legislature has at all times the power to regulate and control them. If it be true that we intend to preserve corporations as a part of the great business machinery of the State, then there will be a large amount of capital stock that will always be necessarily owned by individuals. It embraces, as has been shown here by the record, a number of branches of business—banks, insurance companies, shoe manufacturing companies, railroads, rolling mills, manufacturing companies, lumber companies, carriage factories, and all these various interests. Assuming that I should own in a large carriage company three or four hundred shares of its capital stock, why should I not be permitted to sell it part cash and part on time? Is there anything in the transaction inconsistent with the public morals? Is there any just reason why I should not sell my private stock? In an insurance company, why should I not sell my own shares of stock part cash and part on time? Yet, this section would prohibit as simple a business transaction as that.

MR. FILCHER. In my opinion, it would not.

MR. WILSON. I will explain. After it has ended with the Stock Exchange it proceeds in a distinct and separate sentence and says: "All contracts for the sale of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association on margin, or to be delivered at a future day, shall be void, and any money paid on such contracts may be recovered by the party paying it, by suit in any Court of competent jurisdiction."

It seems to me beyond the pale of contradiction, that if a man sells a hundred shares of his insurance stock for so much a share, half cash and half payable in thirty days, the Courts would declare the whole contract to be void, and the man who had voluntarily paid his first installment could recover at law. There are cases sometimes where an administrator or executor may deem it expedient to sell part cash and part on time. A man dies possessed of a large amount of stock in one of these many companies; in order to close the estate satisfactorily, the executor finds it best to sell that stock part cash and part on time, and the Probate Judge approves of it as an expedient and proper course to be followed, and such a sale is made—a public sale to a bidder is had—the stock to be delivered at the last payment. It is really a contract of sale between private individuals, because the balance is to be paid at a certain time, at which time the stock is to be delivered; this is a contract of sale. But in such a case the contract of sale would be void, although made under the direction of the Court, because the Constitution prohibits any such sale where the property sold is to be delivered at a future day. Take the case of a partnership. Two men are engaged in business, and in the course of their business are unable to agree, and must dissolve their connection. It becomes necessary to have a sale in the public market in order to close up their partnership affairs. They desire to sell. They agree to sell in the market at auction, and to divide the proceeds between themselves. In such a case they might deem it desirable to sell on time, or sell half cash and half on time. This section prohibits that transaction. This disposition of the Convention to regulate, or prohibit the private business of men, will be found to be wrong, and will not meet with the judgment of the great body of sensible voters of this State when they consider this section. I do not see why it is necessary to forbid sales of stock to be delivered at a future day. The evident intention of the section, as the gentleman from Placer says, was aimed at sales in the stock board. But it goes further, and seems to have no limit. It reaches private sales and private transactions. Then, too, it uses the words, "on margin." This would be a bad term to put in a Constitution. It is a technical phrase. If I understand a sale on margin, it is merely a sale of stock on time, the stock being retained as security, and not delivered until the final payment is made. That is what is generally called a sale on margin. If the stock falls in value before the time of final payment arrives, the buyer is called upon to advance more margin. At the end of the time the practical operation is, that instead of paying and taking the stock they generally pay the difference between the value of the stock, at the time of the first transaction, and the value at the time of the settlement. But here you do not aim solely at the stock board. You make it apply to a private transaction.

The question will be whether in the judgment of this Convention it is good business policy. This is a question which addresses itself to the sound business sense of the Convention. How far shall we determine these matters instead of leaving them to the Legislature. In the first portion of the section it is left to the Legislature to determine when it will prevent abuses, but this last sentence goes to the extent of preventing an ordinary business transaction, against which no valid objection could be made in point of morals or expediency, and it also interferes with the private rules of business men in numerous instances, such as I have cited, of administrations, partners, and many other instances which might be given of a similar nature. The section, with the amendment I propose, would place it within the power of the Legislature to regulate or prohibit sales in the Stock Board as it might see fit, and would permit men to make their own private contracts, as they ordinarily do in business transactions, exercising their own judgment, and not calling upon the State to direct or regulate them.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, have made progress, and ask leave to sit again.

EXPENSES.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: I have a resolution to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, The balance of the money appropriated for this Convention amounts to about three thousand nine hundred dollars, which is about two days' pay for the members; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members receive for those two days certificates, and that the money above referred to be set aside for the expenses of this Convention.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: It will be seen that in two days the fund will be exhausted. The Convention will then be without any money at all, any ready cash, anything to pay with, and inasmuch as we must take certificates after two days more, we might as well commence now and leave this money for contingencies which may arise during the remainder of the session. These certificates which it is generally understood will be given to members, can be cashed at a discount of ten per cent. In that case the loss to each member would be simply two dollars on these two days. I hope there are no members here but what can spare that two dollars for that purpose. It will not be much loss to the members and in the aggregate amounts to a pretty good fund. I hope the resolution will receive the favorable consideration of the Convention.

MR. ROLFE. Don't you intend to put the attachés on the same footing with the members? Don't you think they should be put on the same footing with the members?

MR. REDDY. I don't know. The resolution is to retain this sum for the expenses of the Convention, except the per diem of the members. Now, members will lose but two dollars, simply the discount on the two days' pay, and if it should go to the attachés I certainly, for one, would be willing to let it go. It may be necessary to have a call of the house before many days, and if we have no money we will be unable to enforce the rule. We will have to have some printing done, and if we have no cash I presume the printer will refuse to do it.

MR. FILCHER. It is understood that the printing will be done on the same terms as we have.

Mr. REDDY. There may be, for instance, a call of the house; the Sergeant-at-Arms must have money to start on. The fund will be paid out on the order of the Convention any way. It is reserved for the expenses of the Convention and can only be paid out by the action of the Convention. I apprehend that if this resolution is adopted there are no members on this floor who will demand it or who will stand about this two dollars.

MR. VAN DYKE. I call for the reading of the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read the resolution.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I am in favor of that resolution. We might have occasion for the use of a little money and then we would find ourselves in an awkward position. I think we had better allow that fund to remain for contingent expenses.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: This is the third time this resolution has been brought up; each time in a new form. It is very indefinite what this money is intended for. It is, as I am informed, to be divided among the attachés of this Convention. I know it; because they come to me and told me so. I think we are as good as they are, and they are as good as we are, and we ought to all stand together.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. I move to amend by inserting the word "incidental" before the word "expenses."

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The motion prevailed.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, White, Howard, of Los Angeles, Dean, and McCallum.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to adjourn by the following vote:

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M. President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and a quorum present.

EXPENSES.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I have a resolution to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, The balance of appropriation for this Convention amounts to about three thousand nine hundred dollars; therefore, be it

Resolved, That hereafter the members, officers, and attachés of this Convention receive certificates of service, and that the money aforesaid be set aside for the incidental expenses other than pay of members and attachés.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention has already voted down such a proposition.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I know that there are quite a number of members in this Convention who voted against the other resolution because it only referred to members, and therefore it would leave this balance in a few days to be taken up by the attachés, and leave us without any money for other incidental expenses. Now, it is proposed to not pay either members or attachés after to-day, because we all understand it will only be about two days' pay for us anyhow, and that will be a very small matter with any of us. The attachés, the Sergeant-at-Arms, and Pages, will, under the law, be entitled to their pay as long as this Convention lasts. They are not limited to the one hundred days. The members of this Convention will have to do without pay after the one hundred days unless the Legislature should hereafter see fit to make an appropriation for us, which is somewhat doubtful. But there are other expenses which we must save some money for, I believe, and the amount of money in the fund is now getting very small. I think we had better save a little so that we will not have to go into our own pockets for it.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I move to amend the resolution by adding "or for printing or gaslight." The idea is that if we leave this sum in the treasury the printing expenses and the gaslight expenses will exhaust it all, and it will not subserve the purpose which the gentleman seems to aim at. There may be some purposes for which this money ought to be reserved, such as expenses of the Sergeant-at-Arms, but it should not be reserved for any such purposes as printing and gaslight.

MR. ROLFE. I accept the amendment.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope this resolution will not be adopted. It takes away from the attachés and members both. The attachés ought certainly to get it to the last day there is any money there. It will be wasted in something; somebody will get hold of it in some way. I think we had better go right along as we have, and let us go to the last day and we will all get along some way, just as well as by keeping three or four thousand dollars for incidental expenses. I do not know but that it means to give an extra pay to some Porter. We do not want any extra expenses. I do not think the law would allow us to keep it if a member asked for his pay, because he has a right to his pay for the one hundred days. I hope the resolution will go by the board just as these others have. I move to lay it on the table.

The motion prevailed.

MILEAGE.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Controller be ordered to issue warrants for the mileage of the newly elected members, representing the districts of Mariposa and Merced and San Francisco.

Referred to Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Legislative Department.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question before the Convention is section twenty-six, and the amendments thereto.

REMARKS OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: When the committee rose last we were discussing the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, to strike out of section twenty-six the following words: "All contracts for the sale of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association, on margin or to be delivered at a future day, shall be void, and any money paid on such contracts may be recovered by the party paying it by suit in any Court of competent jurisdiction." Now, the object of that provision is to place these contracts, which are, in any way that you may regard them, mere gambling contracts, upon the same footing that other gambling contracts are, and let these parties take the same chances that other gamblers do. The gentleman from San Francisco objects to the phrase "sales on margins." That term, I believe, is well understood. I suppose, perhaps, if the gentleman himself is ignorant of the term, he is the only gentleman from his city who is. A great many of them have the very best of reasons for knowing what that phrase means, and they will never forget that knowledge, because they have paid very dearly for it. Sales on margin compose the principal part of the business in these stock boards. It is the very worst species of gambling that can be indulged in. In almost any other gambling a man knows what he is going to lose. If he puts up his money on a game of faro he knows what he is going to lose; but when he buys stock on a margin he never knows where his losses are going to stop. In the language of the gentleman he is called on for "more mud." He is in a condition to lose thousands for a failure to put up more margin. He is never certain where his loss is going to end. If, as was suggested, this clause was confined to those contracts made in stock boards, it would easily be avoided by making such contracts on the streets, and the object of the committee was to prevent such dealings anywhere in the stock board, on the street, or in any private office. Men do not buy stock. That is a mere pretense. The seller has got no stock in his possession, the buyer don't want any stock, and the seller knows it.

The fact is, as I learn from those who have had dealings with these boards, no stock is ever delivered or intended to be delivered. If at the end of the time, say ten days, the stock has advanced in value, why he gets his check for the difference between that and the price he agreed to pay for it. If, on the contrary, the stock has declined in value, the purchaser must pay the difference, and that is the end of it. But if this provision is adopted, as I think it will be, then no man can sell stock unless he has got it to sell, because he is required to deliver the stock at the time of the sale; and whether he chooses to sell for cash or not, he must have it and deliver it when he sells it. It is not a perfect remedy, but it is some remedy. It will prevent a great deal of the evil. Persons will not have so much object in putting up and down price of stocks, which is simply done for the purpose of robbing the people. These fine stories are simply flies to catch gulls. If these men who have been indulging in that kind of swindling had justice meted out to them in the same measure and at the same rate that it has been meted out to poorer, though less guilty, they would have to live more than a thousand years or cheat the State out of years of service. Now, we propose to put some sort of check upon such operations. We propose to say that they are dealing with a man as other gamblers, and that it is at his option whether he will pay them or not; that if he objects, he can sue them and recover his money. It puts them exactly on the same footing with other gamblers and allows a party to recover the money out of which he has been fleeced.

It has been said that the effect would be to drive this stock board to Virginia City. Well, as far as I am concerned, and I think the people of the State are of the same opinion, I would be perfectly willing to see the whole business in —— a climate very much farther south than Virginia City. It would be "good riddance to bad rubbish." The country would be prosperous now but for that. We have periodical rises and falls in this stock board. Whenever the season has been prosperous, some wonderful discovery of millions of ore is made in the fifteen hundred-foot level or the twenty-four hundred foot-level of some mine, and a great excitement is raised and kept up until the profits arising from the wheat crop has been stolen from the honest farmers, and then it is discovered that what was supposed to be a large body of ore was only a little bunch that did not amount to much anyhow; the mine peters out and there is nothing left of it except a few miserable persons who have lost their homesteads or their savings of years, and are driven into the almshouse or into the penitentiary in time. This provision is not going to interfere with an honest sale by anybody, of any honest stock that he may have. If an administrator makes a sale of stock, there is no reason why the stock should not be delivered. The party delivers other property when he sells, and takes security for the purchase money, and no harm can be done in that way. If a man has got the stock he can deliver it; if he has not got the stock, he has no right to sell it in a manner which simply means a bet upon the rise or fall. I say that no injury can be done to any honest man or any legitimate business, and the only effect will be to prevent these swindling sales of stock which the seller has not got, and the purchaser does not want, and which is simply betting upon the rise or fall of that stock within a given number of days. The section without that would be of very little benefit to anybody. To be sure, the Legislature is directed to regulate or prohibit the buying or selling of stock. They may regulate in a way which will afford no benefit to the people. I hope that they will regulate it so as to put an end to it. But we should do something. An attempt was made last Winter to try to do away with some of the evils which flow from the dealings in stocks, and it is a matter of public history, as far as newspapers can make history, that a bill was presented to parties in San Francisco for twenty-eight thousand dollars, the expenses in defeating that bill in the Senate, and the bill was paid. I do not know whether it was transferred to the "India rubber account," or what was done with it. That was to prevent the passage of a bill regulating that traffic. Now, it is for us to protect the people against it. We cannot do it as fully as the Legislature can, but we can do this much: we can make these contracts void, and in that way we will do away with more than one half of the injury and loss which is inflicted upon the people by this manner of dealing.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. Chairman: I am satisfied that the section will not work out the good which the gentleman proposes. His speech sounds well. As to the Grangers around here that have gone to the city and bought on "buyers 30," I spoke to several of them, and they deny it. Mr. McConnell says he has done none of it. This does not remedy the evil, and the evils that are in the section are greater than those aimed at. This class of contracts only exist between dealers carrying large capital. It is the smaller transactions wherein the people are injured. I am sorry about these grangers, but I do not see that the part Mr. Wilson proposes to strike out is of any benefit to them. I think that Mr. Terry is mistaken, and that by adopting this section, you are increasing the chances of the poorer classes being robbed. It is for the Legislature to regulate or prohibit, and the knocking off of the latter part of the section does not reduce the chances of the Legislature doing that. Mr. Wilson's amendment leaves it this way:

"SEC. 26. The Legislature shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets, or tickets in any scheme in the nature of a lottery, in this State. The Legislature shall pass laws to regulate or prohibit the buying and selling of the shares of the capital stock of corporations in any stock board, stock exchange, or stock market under the control of any association."

The latter part of the section could easily be avoided. In spite of prohibitory legislation, and in spite of this clause in the Constitution, it will only be necessary for one broker to deliver the stock to be delivered to another broker as security in order to avoid it. It is simply a little more circumlocution in doing the same thing, and the only thing that can be done is to leave it to the Legislature to make proper laws in regard to it. This clause in the Constitution is simply a catchpenny and will not save the grangers who send their money to the stock board.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. Chairman: The argument of the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Terry, in support of the section, is impracticable. He seeks to remedy an evil, and in proceeding to do so he destroys the rights of innocent business men. There is just the trouble and the exact difficulty. While it cures the evil, it destroys more honest and regular business transactions, and does greater injury to the public than the benefits which it confers. It prevents the sale of any shares of capital stock to any person to be delivered at a future day, and it does not reach the point to which he would address himself. If he intended to reach fictitious sales of stock he has been singularly unfortunate. I claim that this is destructive of business principles. It is a violation of the dictates of good common sense. It is interfering with the business of men who are capable of conducting their own affairs; and I am opposed to this Convention acting as a wet nurse to individuals who are able to manage their own affairs; and I am opposed to declaring any transaction void after a man enters into it with his eyes open and is dealing according to his own judgment. It seems to interfere with the ordinary business transactions of life which are free from any immoral tendency. We had better delegate it to the Legislature. We had better understand now and at once what is the object and meaning of a Constitutional Convention. The Legislature, after all, is a branch of the general government, and we must leave to it ordinary powers of the legislative branch of the government. The section without this last clause permits the Legislature to exercise a sound discretion on the subject of stock transactions; but this last clause is a violation of all business principle, and, in my judgment, the dictates of common sense, and is productive of more evil than the evil which is sought to be remedied. This does not prevent the fictitious sale of stocks at all; it goes further. It is hardly related to that purpose, yet it prevents the ordinary business transactions of which I have spoken, and it prevents sales being made part cash and part on time. The gentleman says, deliver the property and take security. There are many instances where the best security is the property itself. A man sells a piece of land, and the purchase money is to be paid in the future. He retains the title to the lands as his security. That is an every day transaction.

MR. TERRY. But if he retains possession of personal property the sale is void.

MR. WILSON. You are speaking of a case of fraud.

MR. TERRY. If a man sells personal property and a creditor attaches it in his hands, the sale is void as to that creditor.

MR. WILSON. The gentleman knows that a transaction between a buyer and a seller, and one between a buyer and a sellor and a creditor who is being injured, are two different things. This does not affect the creditor at all. That is merely one of those delusive lights which the gentleman throws out. No gentleman more thoroughly understands the art of presenting the worse as the better reason. He has the capacity, as shown in his argument, beyond any man that I know of on the floor. It is with the greatest difficulty, at times, that I resist him, for he rises with that earnest, honest expression of his, and can almost make us believe that wrong is right. But he evades the question. I ask him to walk up to the mark and say if this does not interfere with the common transactions of which I speak, and that if a man who owns insurance stock, or stock of a carriage company, is not prevented from selling it payable in the future? I say that to place that in the Constitution would make us the laughing stock of the world at large, and it will be criticised and commented upon as a simple case of corporation-phobia. I say to put that in the Constitution is not to be thought of.

MR. TERRY. The gentleman is objecting that this will interfere with business transactions, and knows that sales of personal property, unaccompanied by actual and continued possession, are not good.

MR. WILSON. Is it not good between the parties?

MR. TERRY. Certainly it is good between the parties.

MR. WILSON. That answers the question.

MR. TERRY. If a man has got property to sell, I can see no wrong that is done, either to the buyer or the seller, by requiring the property to be delivered when it is sold. That is what the statute of fraud requires.

MR. WILSON. It does not as between the parties.

MR. TERRY. You say that it will derange business. Does not the statute of fraud do the same thing? If I buy property of you and allow that property to remain in your possession, don't I have to take the chances?

MR. WILSON. If we introduce a third person into the proposition I have nothing more to add. It has nothing to do with the matter under consideration.

REMARKS OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: The gentleman says that it is wrong for this Convention, or for the Legislature, to constitute itself the guardian of grown men, and to say that they shall not do as they please with their own. Why, the same kind of argument can be used against the law to prevent the sale of lottery tickets. The gentleman may say, why, here is a man who says: "I am willing to give you twenty-five dollars for a lottery ticket," and the Legislature has no right to come in and say that the man shall not make the contract. Here is a man who is willing to sell, and here is a man who is willing to buy, and yet the State prohibits it, because it is against good morals, or against public morals to allow it. What right has the State to step in there? Yet the State does step in and prevent the transaction. Not one man has been driven to crime by faro and monte, and other kinds of gambling, to a thousand by the transaction of these stock boards in San Francisco. Public officers, men of the highest reputation, men who have been looked upon as the soul of honor, have been drawn into this whirlpool, have gambled off what did not belong to them, and have only escaped the penitentiary by committing suicide. Men employed in banks—employés, clerks, and tellers—rob their employers in order to obtain money to keep up their gambling operations in stocks. I do not put this forward as a perfect remedy, but in some degree it protects the people against these swindlers. It makes all such contracts void. No man is going to sell to another when he knows that the man can repudiate the contract and sue him, and recover his money back. The gentleman from Kern says that these things are principally confined to the manipulators of the stock board. Let them. Let the dogs eat the dogs. Let the thieves rob the thieves. Let the swindlers make a Kilkenny cat business of it, and put each other in the poorhouse; I have no objection to it. But I want to protect the honest people outside of the stock board. The laws are not to protect gamblers against each other, but to protect other men against gamblers. This section is not to protect stock gamblers against each other, but to protect honest people against stock gamblers, and I ask the members of this Convention to adopt it.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS: Mr. Chairman: There has been some question raised by members of the Convention that individuals not speaking upon this floor the views which they have, are inclined to have an influence here which they ought not to have. The argument has been offered to us that it will not do to interfere with the matter of the sale of stock; that whenever we do that we are going against the interests of our constituency. I know not how that may be, but I know something of the history of the relation of the stock boards, and their transactions to the legitimate business of mining in this State; that so far from the transactions of the stock boards being in any way an aid to the mining interests of California, they are the means of diverting from the legitimate business of mining the very capital which ought to be invested in legitimate mining, and investing it in the worst form of gambling. Now, the gentleman talks about wet nursing people; I will give him a sample of this wet nursing. Now, sir, about a year ago the curbstone brokers in San Francisco became hungry because for some time past there had been no great excitement in mining stocks. They concluded that they must have a mining excitement. They commenced to talk about a certain stock, and how they had had the advice of men who knew to put their money into that stock. They concluded that if this stock could be run up to a high figure, it would carry others with it, and there would be sales of stock and plenty for them to do. They secure some newspaper—some one of those great leading journals of San Francisco—and blow about this certain stock. They then begin to talk about a rise. Stocks are going up! Everybody soon talks about it. Even young people, just starting out in life, think it would be a great thing to make a fortune, or make a few thousand dollars that will give them a start. They put into these stocks all the money they have saved with which to begin life. Go to a broker to buy stock; they do not want to sell stock; they want a man to give so much margin, and they will carry so much stock for him; presently the stock begins to boom, and a few more buy. Everybody puts into it all the money they can raise. Stocks are going up and the people think they are rich. This lasts until all the loose money in the State is on margin. Then what? Then, all of a sudden, the papers quit blowing, and the curbstone brokers quit talking, and in a day the margins are swept away. And what goes with them? Why, the savings of years; the earnings of men and women who have labored for years to save a small amount of money, and the homes of people who had their little homesteads. Why one hundred and eighty-eight million dollars went into stocks in this State. Did it go into the pockets of the people? No, sir; it was swept over a few bankers' counters. Now, the whole system is wrong. It is a system of robbery; it is a system of false assertions, and it is as much worse than the game of three-card monte as a lie is worse than a mistake.

MR. WILSON. Can you name any honest newspaper that you can pick out, that will lend itself to any such swindling operation as you have described?

MR. KLEINE. You say that the brokers will not buy any stock except on a margin. I say the leading brokers will not buy any stock on margin except good stock on Comstock. They won't buy you a share.

MR. CROSS. Now, sir, the result is this, that the whole earnings of the year are sometimes swept away in a few days into the hands of a few men. The unfortunates who have been ruined by this stock gambling are not in San Francisco alone. They are all over the State. I tell you, Mr. Chairman, this opposition does not come from a fear that this section will not have any effect. The fear is that it will have some effect. The sales that are so dangerous are the very class that this section strikes at—this business of selling stock that is never delivered. It is the great means of robbing the industries of this State of a large share of their earnings. The mining interests of this State demand not that stocks shall be sold on margin, not that stocks shall be sold to be delivered at some future day, but that when the stock is sold, that it shall be a bona fide sale, and that is all they do demand.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.
