Those who seem determined to condemn the administration, right or wrong, have not been backward in making these crude speculations the text for complaints and denutations. The Intelligencer notices "the strange rumor that the minis ters of His Majesty George the IV with the aid of our minister to England,) are about to make a tariff of duties on imports for the United States!" They pronounce " the thing absolutely incredible, far exceeding any absurdity that has ever been conceived of under the wildest notions of reform " Whether these speculations be true of false we know not-and is seems to us to be somewhat premature to discuss the provisions of a treaty before the instructions of our minister are completed. We may, however, be permitted to express a hope that what has been intimated in some journals may prove true, and that a commercial treaty with Great Britain may be framed on more enlarged principles of reciprocity. We have too much confidence in the wisdom of our Executive and the ability of our minister, to anticipate any of the extravagant absurdities which may spring position journal. We have many important questions to adjust with Great Britain, and some too, growing out of It was a part of the policy of those lately in power to excite our prejudices against our late enemy. It were vain, M. President, to endeav or to conceal the strong emotious which I am aware my utterance-nay, my very looks must betray, (if they present the true expression of my feelings,) while attempting to acknowledge the kind notice it has pleased this assembly through the organ of one of its members, to take, on this interesting occa sion, of the State of which I am a citizen. Those feelings, sir, are not more the off-pring of the sensibility naturally awakened by gratitude for the hospitali ty you have shown me. a stranger among you, than of the affecting associations produced in my mind by the sentiment just expressed in commendation of the patriotism displayed by the Louisianians during the war. I stand here, on the anniversary of our national birth, cheered and encouraged to commune with them, with unrestrained freedom by the citizens of a state not long since forming an intregral part of one of the oldest an i most powerful of the confederated Republics, the cradle of American liberty, the birth place of Franklin, the fruitful soil, whence sprang so large a share of the harvest of national glory, but who, from motives of a high policy peace, by wisdom, by arts, -in war, by noble joined to a proud disdain of any thing daring, by deeds of eternal remembrance, are resembling the old vessalage to metropolitan superiority, consented, as it were, like the estate of a good and just father, in equal to be born again, to forego all the advantages of the past, to resign the inhe- family, through the unbroken series of success ritance of fame bequeathed them by sive generations. their heroic ancestors, in order to start anew in the career of lawful ambition. emulous competitors for preeminence in virtue, in patriotism, in knowledge-a noble rivalry, the only one I trust which ly granted?
