

NEW YEAR REVERBERATIONS. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

HOW THE NEW YEAR IS RECEIVED AT WASHINGTON—A MORNING SCENE AT THE WHITE HOUSE—POLITICAL QUIETUDE.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 1, 1877. Seventy-seven indeed! I presume I should improve the occasion in changing the final digit of my date to moralyze upon the departure of the old year with all its attendant blessings and misfortunes, and herald with appropriate remarks the advent of the new.

Seventy-six—the Centennial year—the year of progress and development; of premature spring, frolic summer, abundant autumn and frigid winter; the year of national prosperity, disaster and vexatious complication.

Seventy-five—the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes.

Seventy-four—the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes.

Seventy-three—the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes.

Seventy-two—the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes.

Seventy-one—the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes.

Seventy—the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes.

Sixty-nine—the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes, the year of the great political and social changes.

Band, rendered the scene one of kaleidoscopic beauty and indescribable brilliancy. It was one to be remembered with pleasure. At 12:30 the heads of bureaux—a quarter of an hour later the survivors of the wars of 1812, the Mexican war, and the members of the Grand Army of the Republic were received, and at 1 the great gates of the enclosure were opened and the great unwashed poured effusively in. From this hour until 2, the crowd was unceasing, and wondrously monotonous; the President standing bravely to his post and maintaining an energy of hand and countenance no less gallant and courageous than his deeds on the field of battle.

There is little or no change in the political situation. Congress has met several times during the week and adjourned for the want of a quorum. Barnes, the manager of the Western Union Telegraph, New Orleans, arrived in town last evening at the custody of an officer of the House, and it is expected will be arraigned on his bar on Wednesday, to answer the charge of contempt. His plea of course is that he acted in obedience to the orders of his superiors, and the latter have paid no attention to the subpoena of the House up to the present time, proposing to test their rights through the case of Barnes.

Notwithstanding the tone of the democratic press throughout the country, the opinion is gaining ground here among the conservatives of the party that the chances for Mr. Tilden have disappeared with the departing year. It is stated that the House Committee in South Carolina will unanimously report that the electoral vote of that state was received by Hayes and Wheeler and will only disagree in regard to the status of the rival legislatures. In Florida the Democrats are content with gaining the state government, and admit the fact that no action of the Supreme Court can change the result as announced in the canvassing report, so far as the electoral vote is concerned. The territory taken in New Orleans has not been all that was expected and so far as elected has been a mere repetition of that heard by the Returning Board. The Democrats admit their disappointment so far as these three states are concerned. They were promised assembling developments, glaring frauds by the Republicans, intimidation of democratic negroes; the goods were sold and purchased but have not as yet been received, and they are fast-selling down the belief that they have been deceived. Much is anticipated from the meetings of the 8th of January throughout the country, but unless the status of the times are as at fault, the people outside the ranks of the professional politicians are indisposed to continue a fallacious excitement, and there is little reason to doubt the peaceful inauguration of President-elect Hayes on the 5th of March.

TOWN AND VICINITY.

Mass Temperance Meeting. The Ladies of the East Weymouth Temperance Union have for some time past had in consideration the question of how to secure a more vigorous enforcement of the law concerning liquor selling, the result of their deliberations being the following call for a mass meeting, signed by a large number of leading citizens of the place.

Mass Meeting. We, the undersigned citizens of East Weymouth, believing that there is a great violation of the law by the sale of intoxicating liquors in our village, call upon the citizens of Weymouth to meet in mass meeting in the vestry of the Methodist Church, on Wednesday evening, January 3d, at 7 1/2 o'clock, to devise more effective measures for the enforcement of the law in this particular.

New Year Festival. The Scholars of the Baptist Sabbath School of Weymouth, were treated to a nice supper in the vestry on Monday evening, and given the pleasure of being in the latest expressions of childhood happiness. The vestry was well filled with children and friends of the school, and the admirable arrangements for their entertainment, under the direction of Mr. S. W. Gutterston, aided by the ladies of the society, made the festival a very agreeable affair.

Wedding Reception. Mr. Nathan J. Crane, of Braintree, visited Weymouth on Wednesday last week, and with the aid of a clergyman performed a marriage ceremony at the residence of Mr. Crane, on Quincy Avenue, and about fifty friends of the bride and groom were present. The bride was Miss Annie Loban, of Braintree, and the groom was Mr. Nathan J. Crane, of Braintree.

Perkins Literary Union. At the meeting of the above association on Monday evening last, the following officers were elected: President, Ebon Sheppard; Vice President, Walter Hunt; Executive Committee, G. W. Shaw, Mrs. Sara Hammett, Miss Abbie Thayer.

Yankee Trick. A regular customer having been refused his tea, he returned the other day, thought he would have sweet revenge by playing a Yankee trick on the vendor of the "sober-journal." Meeting another old regular, he says to him, "Where were you this morning?"

Accidents. To accidents and runaways have been numerous this week. Last Sunday morning Mr. G. C. Hallenbeck's horse ran from his residence in South Braintree to Weymouth, and was stopped by Mr. Smith, of Baker's Express, before he did any damage.

Lecture Announcements. The Lecture of Wendell Phillips in the Perkins Literary Union Course which was postponed on account of the storm, and that of Gen. Kilpatrick on account of the death of his mother.

Grand Concert. To add to the attractions of the concert to be given in the Baptist Church at Weymouth Landing on Friday, the 19th, the services of Mr. W. J. D. Leavitt, the well known organist at Tremont Temple, Boston, will be secured.

At the same evening, after taking his third degree in the "Temple," of which he has been a member for some time, he was presented with a "Templar's" pin. Bro. Maxim thanked the brothers for their kindness in remembering him, and expressed his determination to live up to the principles of the Order.

Accident. Mr. John Nelson, chief engineer at M. C. Dizer & Co.'s boot and shoe factory, while descending a step, caught his heel, and falling on his side fractured one of his ribs. Mr. Nelson is now able to get about.

Almost a Fatality. Last Monday evening the family of Mr. Patrick Cahill, residing on Broad street, retired to rest as usual, and left the stove, as they supposed, all right for the night.

For the Brighton Road. Next Wednesday afternoon the Emanon Society will have five invited friends, start for Brighton. If the present prospect of the Brighton Road is brightening, the party will start at the "Parker House" for refreshments.

LITERATURE.

[For the Gazette.]
LINES ON THE DEATH OF ALICE MAY.
DIED, May 18, ALICE MAY, daughter of D. B. and H. M. Phillips, of East Weymouth, aged 53 7 mos.

OUR DARLING ALICE.
Rest, dearly loved one, rest! thy task on earth is done;
Life's battle early fought, the victory won!
I say not 'twas death—that is too harsh a word,
'Twas only changing earth for life above.
(O joy ineffable! O bliss divine!)
I fain would make your better portion mine, dear sainted one.

Rest, dearly loved one, rest! no sin can reach you
now;
Your tiny feet can never go astray,
A Saviour's loving hand will guide them in the paths of peace and joy;
Your weary head find sweet repose
Upon the bosom of a Father's love.
Go, loved one, go! we give you back to God!
His claims are first: He gave, he took,
And blessed be his name.
We would not call you back to tread earth's sinful track.
Although our hearts with bitter grief are wrung,
Oft shall your fragrance on our hearts descend,
Weaving our spirits up to your fair clime,
Where flowers immortal bloom.
'Tis well that you have gone,
For much of sorrow deep have you escaped;
But oh how hard to give you up! to take the last,
fond, lingering look!
But yet we say 'tis well.
We hope to meet you there, in your bright world
Where death can never come.

Oh, with what holy love we'll clasp you to our hearts,
As when on earth. In heaven no parting's known,
There fall no farewell tears, no sighs;
There loved one's never die;
Immortal life is stamped on every brow.
O happy thought! 'I'll hope to meet you there!
Till then, dear child, farewell.

How it was proposed to connect the waters

VIA
Weymouth Fore and Taunton Rivers.

FIFTH PAPER.

THE WESTERN ROUTE.

Starting from Fore River, on the BRAINTREE side, this route followed Mon-taignot River on its northern bank,
crossing it at Flax Pond, and again
three-quarters of a mile from BRAINTREE centre; thence through BRAINTREE to the east of the road, passing by BRAINTREE Little Pond at a distance of about two hundred yards from its southern edge. Again crossing the Montaignot to the south of the Pond and to the east of Cochato River, leaving West Randolph about one mile to the west and fed by a fork of the Cochato, which pursues a serpentine course and enters the line of the Canal at every hundred yards, the route passes through Randolph, leaving Trout brook to the east some fifty yards, and continues on to North Bridgewater (now Brockton).

About half way between Randolph and North Bridgewater a survey was made to Massapoag Pond in Sharon,
leaving Stoughton village to the north,
with a view of utilizing its waters as a reservoir. From North Bridgewater, then containing about a dozen houses,
the route led directly south through the Bridgewaters, leaving West Bridgewater village a quarter of a mile to the west;
thence to the southern edge of Nippenittic Pond, in Bridgewater and Rayhanam.

From BRAINTREE Little Pond to Nip-penititic Pond the line is not more than two points from a direct south, the conformation of the country admitting of as straight a line as the railroad followed twenty years later; but thence it strikes a point to the west, and passing through Rayhanam village leaves Dean's Forge Pond a hundred yards to the east, and striking Taunton River about one mile from the village it follows its western bank to that point—
After crossing Mill River it leaves the Taunton, following the high lands to the west, but follows its general course to a point opposite Whale Hook, nearly one-half a mile from Broad Cove and about six miles from its outlet into Mt.
Hope Bay, which was the proposed southern terminus.

WESTERN PROFILE.
The levels of the western route were
as follows:
At BRAINTREE Bridge, 10,663 feet;
crossing Cochato River, 99,446 feet,
and gradually rising until at a point joining the line of feeder from BRAINTREE
Pond, it reaches an elevation of 110, 439 feet, and joining the line of feeder from Weymouth Great Pond and Cranberry Pond, 112,075 feet above tidewater elevation.

From this point the level varies from 105 to 110.131, which elevation it finds at the crossing of Cochato River, and still up to the summit level is reached at Howard's Meadow, in Randolph, at a height of 134,182 feet. At Trout Brook, joining line of feeder from Massapoag Pond, 107,945, south end of summit range, in North Bridgewater, 94,723; joining line of feeder
from Mill stream, and from Massapoag Pond, 107,046 feet. From this point the descent is gradual, reaching a level of 50,506 at the crossing of an outlet of Nippenititic Pond, the surface of which is 59,643 feet above tide water in Boston Harbor.

At the Plymouth and Bristol county line an elevation of 54,107 feet is reached, but the descent is continuous from this point. The water at Williams Landing, in Taunton. Higher elevations are reached after passing this point, the height at neck of land at Taunton Bridge, being 4,198; crossing Factory Creek, in Taunton, 4,396; opposite Weir bridge, 6,900 and 17,480.— Here the last summit is reached, for the route drops to the level of Taunton
River, with but one ascent near Digton Four Corners, of 3,347. The total length of the western route was a fraction less than thirty-six (36) miles.

THE EASTERN ROUTE.
Starting from Weymouth Fore River,
at a point to the west of Back River,
midway of the narrow neck of land running out to Grape Island, the eastern route followed the west bank of Back River, which it crossed near the village of East Weymouth, and is fed by the source of Back River, at Whit-man's Pond; thence through E. Weymouth, crossing the Norfolk-Plymouth line into Hingham, and following a southwesterly course, working a couple of points to the eastward as it formed an acute triangle at the upper end of Hingham, it entered Abington at the East village, (now Rockland). Crossing Deer Meadow River into East Bridgewater, the route led through that section of the town, passing over Satistick River twice before reaching the South village, which was left three-fourths of a mile to the west; thence through a Pond, directly southwest to Tillett Bay, crossing Taunton River at Burr's Bridge, and leaving Taunton River to the west.

From this point a half mile to King's Furnace Pond and through the township of Rayhanam, a southwesterly direction is taken through the edge of Taunton to Assonet River, where a crossing is made from the west to the east bank, and return within a distance of one thousand yards. Following the west bank one-eighth of a mile, a high ledge necessitates another crossing, but within three-fourths of a mile the route returns to the west bank, and passing through Assonet village reaches tidewater at Assonet River and Bay, in Freetown.

Commencing at low water line at the mouth of Back River, with an average tide of 10 feet 3 inches, it crosses the river at the first elevation of 0.214 feet, rising to 12.501 at the bridge on the Hingham road; then rising gradually to an elevation of 72.114, at a point on the Plymouth turnpike, it ascends to 113, 113 at the Abington and Hingham line, until the summit level is reached at Curtis Meadow, in Abington—128.2 ft.
above tide-water in Boston Harbor.

The descent is gradual to Sattucket River, the highest level being 33,167, and the average 28 to 30 feet. Tidewater is reached at Tillet Bridge, and thence upward to the level of Trout Brook in Haldenboro and Taunton, by the Bristol and Plymouth county line,
at the surface of King's Pond, an average height of 8.14 and 8.12 is found.
Why, the patent fire-proof scoundrel
has been living off of me for three years, and never thinks of paying any
rent. Tell Mangoe to stop my paper,
if that is his valuation of our best citizens. Is the man going crazy?

Maxymin heaved a sigh of astonishment and was about looking for the objectionable paragraph, when the sheriff bounced in, flushed and excited.

"What in the one hundred degree
thermometers does Mangoe mean puff-
ing and blowing for to be lenient with him?"
"Oh! sheriff, it was not he, it was I
that wrote!"
"You! you! you thin-kled saphead;
I might have guessed as much: I always thought you were not fit to lead
blind mice to water."
Maxymin breathed hard, and rubbed
his eyes to see if he was awake; and
when he took his hands from his opicles, there stood before him a middle aged woman in black, with her left hand waved aloft a satchel, and in her right brandished a bulgy umbrella.
"Are you the editor of this 'ere contentious paper?" she demanded, in a shrill voice, and, snatching the action to the words, she brought the felle of the umbrella down upon Maxymin's copy,
and punched an ugly hole through it.
"My dear madam!"
"Don't you dare, after going and printing that the base wretch who cruelly deceived me—a trusting, loving creature,
and whom I have sued for $3000 damages on a breach of promise of marriage, was a worthy youth deserving of sympathy, and ought not to be judged rashly by a censorious world. This is the divinity of the press, is it? Oh, you male monster! I'll—"
Her words were cut short by the entrance of Rev. Mr. Makepeace, who raised his hat, and in measured words
asked to see Mr. Mangoe.

of a bit of local history which it is not impossible may operate to the advantage of this section. That the project was an important one to commerce and trade, no one can question; that its reconsideration and serious investigation is among the acts of the future, is by no means improbable.

MAXYMIN'S TRIAL.

"Ah! if I were only afforded the opportunity, how I would increase the circulation and the popularity of the paper, my dear Mr. Statutebundler!"
That is what Maxymin, associate editor of the Witherer, said to his dear friend, who entered the sanctum of the Witherer, and the exchange, made a footstool of one of the desks, and degraded the waste-paper basket to the level of a cuspidor. Statutebundler quite agreed with Maxymin that the Witherer was too severe, and that Man-goe, the proprietor and editor, was far too rigorous; was not liberal enough;
made no allowances for the weaknesses of human nature. Matters moved on in the editorial rooms of the Witherer until the session of the legislature,
when a corrupt clique took the audacious
step of proposing to grant a right of way through thousands of acres of valuable lands to the Bogus Bubble Billion Transportation Company; said privilege to be given in order to allow the aerie to be strung to pull along the ground their drag-ropes without infringing on the sanctity of growing crops and destroying human life. There was a good deal of honest indignation, and a rush toward the state capital, by all good citizens who possessed any power over the legislators. Among the pilgrims was Mangoe. Forced to depart in haste, for time was pressing, he had only opportunity to tell Maxymin that he would have to be the sole and responsible editor of the ensuing number.

The prospect of extra work was a grateful stimulus to the blood of Septims. "At last," murmured he to himself, "at last I have the opportunity to get out a paper in my own way."
Ah! wouldn't I do it well! Smash my pastor-pot if I don't believe I shall electrify the country."

Maxymin sat down to his desk with a beaming face. He wrote incessantly, day and night. Having finished up all the editorials, he blandly dismissed
the local itemizers, and industriously
did up that department; he threw away
the regular financial and market reports, and fixed up current prices of everything, from government bonds to fence rails, to suit his own peculiar ideas of the fitness of things politically.

Maxymin was a happy man when,
early on the morning of publication day,
he gloated fondly over what he called his first paper. Before his en-raptured imagination rose long lists of new subscribers, all sending their $2.50 per annum in advance, "on account of the sensible tone of your last number," small stacks of commendatory letters, and a score of presents from enthusiastic and grateful admirers; while, above and beyond all, he pictured the return of Mangoe, in transports of joy,
falling upon his neck and exclaiming
"Ah, you have taught me how to run a paper; bless you, bless you, and just hold my satchel while I draw up articles of copartnership—Mangoe & Maxy-min." From these sweet visions of bliss he was rudely awakened by a stout man, who vociferated, "where is Man-goe?"

"At the state capital, why?"
"Red hot tiles and cracked singlets!
what does he mean by calling that bogzity rascal, Mangoe, one of our best citizens, oppressed by misfortune?"
Why, the patent fire-proof scoundrel
has been living off of me for three years, and never thinks of paying any
rent. Tell Mangoe to stop my paper,
if that is his valuation of our best citizens. Is the man going crazy?"

Maxymin heaved a sigh of astonishment and was about looking for the
objectionable paragraph, when the
sheriff bounced in, flushed and excited.

"What in the one hundred degree
thermometers does Mangoe mean puff-
ing and blowing for to be lenient with him?"
"Oh! sheriff, it was not he, it was I
that wrote!"
"You! you! you thin-kled saphead;
I might have guessed as much: I always thought you were not fit to lead
blind mice to water."
Maxymin breathed hard, and rubbed
his eyes to see if he was awake; and

Her words were cut short by the entrance of Rev. Mr. Makepeace, who
raised his hat, and in measured words
asked to see Mr. Mangoe.

"He is in—"
"Absent, I presume, sir."
"To—ye—ea—!" Sep.'s courage and confidence were fast deserting him.
"I thought as much sir, or this godless defiance of the miserable atheist who desecrate the Sabbath and make a mockery of religion, would never have defiled the pages of this journal. It's all along of you, sir; nor am I surprised,
for you feature proclaim you an abandoned wretch."

"O merciful heavens!" groaned Maxymin, as he buried his face in his hands and dropped his head upon his desk. His body shook convulsively, and of a sudden started up convulsively,
for Mangoe had entered like a cat-ina-hurry, and brought his cane down with one sharp blow over the back of his amiable associate editor. He sprang up to avenge the attack, but he did not strike, when Mangoe broke out with,
"You traitor, viper, mascal! how low you the brazen impudence to sell my paper out to the legislative ring, when

CAPITAL DOINGS.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

SLIGHTING ON THE AVENUE—HULL-DOING AT THE CAPITOL, AND DISCUSSION OVER THE COUNTING OF THE VOTES.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 8, 1877.

For the first time for many a year the denizens of the national capital are enjoying the genuine sensation of sleighing. The new year brought with it about fifteen inches of that peculiar light and feathery article of snow, which an hour or two of sun usually compresses to about one-third the bulk and provides the stratum upon which a pair of light runners may glide to the music of a laughing and merry laughter. Of course the occasion has been made the most of, and coach-horses and ponies, dray-horses and field-horses, trotting nags and mules from the top-paths are dashing and ambling down the avenue, as contentedly as though sleighing was the sole duty of equine life. And then the vehicles, bays and gigs on runners, market-wagons and "hay-barges," goods, packages and semi-trailers; heads from the elegant landau of Madame, and the associated gaiters, everything is made use of to contribute to the general demand for a sleigh ride. Saturday being Twelfth-day (and night), arrangements were made for a large sleighing carnival. Hundreds, if not thousands of entries were made for the grand procession. Trains of sleighs, drawn by teams of six or eight horses, and carrying everything in the shape of a sleigh-able to hold itself together, impinged upon the service. But at the eleventh hour an injunction in the shape of a drizzling rain was issued by the Meteorological Bureau with evident intent to restrain further proceedings, and although but partially successful, it operated as a sand-bank upon the more ardent spirits of the sleighing party. A beautiful all-time of the year, in winter it shows us a sternness like that of the North Pole. With the barren Helderberg range to the south of us, we seem almost separated from the rest of the world, though Springfield is only 200 miles away. The Golden Rule is situated on a hill which rises out of the Connecticut valley like an apple in a large bowl. There is only one convenient mode of access to Amherst, and that is by the New London and Northern Railroad, which crawls over and around the hills, blocked by every snow storm.

TOWN AND VICINITY.

Public Installation.

On Tuesday evening Wendell Phillips, Esq., lectured in the Perkins Library, Eng. Course to a highly respectable and very intelligent audience. The subject of Mr. Phillips' lecture was "The Times," and prominently our present political condition as a people. Holding, as Mr. Phillips claims he does, an independent position in politics, expectation was whetted in anticipation to support and back his views. The lecturer, however, was not without his share of applause. At the outset Mr. Phillips indulged the audience with some nuptial congratulatory remarks, in connection with the success which has attended the Republic during the past one hundred years, and then proceeded to define the idea which was in the mind of the founders of the Government, and the important part we had to play in the development of this idea. His full fruition, however, is not entirely imperative. It would be found that President Grant, when occupied as continually distinguished position as he had upon the battlefield, and we believe it. He said that the negro is not on trial to-day, and we were glad to hear of Mr. Phillips' views on this subject. The negro had been the source of all our troubles, both past, present, and to come; that the statement coming from Wendell Phillips, was to our ears like the music of heaven. It was, he said, the only one on trial to-day, and the North is on trial to-day, and now that we have between the South and the North the conflict of two civilizations, and such was the perplexity in the public mind in regard to the final issue of this conflict, who can tell but that there may be at the end of the next hundred years, one Republic or six, on this continent?

DEPARTURES REYNOLDS POST.

In compliance with your direction I have the honor to submit the following report for the year 1876:

On the last day of 1875 the full strength of the Post was 113 members. There has been added to this number during the year two by mastering; two elected by transfer, and seven reinstated—a total gain of 11.

The loss has been by death, two, by "dropped," 17. Total loss 19; leaving the number on the rolls at the close of the year, 184, a loss of eight members.

But it is thought, all things considered, that the number gained adds more real strength to the Post than is suffered by the loss of the dropped members.

The funeral expenses of the two deceased comrades were borne by the Post, and both were buried under arms with appropriate services.

A memorial service, in honor of the memory of our late Commander, Comrade James L. Bates, was held on the evening of February 23d, and the address of Past Commander Geo. S. Merrill, was a just and eloquent portrayal of the character and services of a true and noble man, a true soldier, and a beloved Comrade.

There has been expansion in charity during the year, the sum of $239.00, apportioned among four comrades and six widows of comrades.

It is safe to say that nothing has transpired during the year to give Comrades so much healthy and honest satisfaction, as the ability of the Post to help these poor widows and their families, and the four-leaved Comrades.

It is safe to say that nothing has transpired during the year to give Comrades so much healthy and honest satisfaction, as the ability of the Post to help these poor widows and their families, and the four-leaved Comrades.

The average attendance of at least one Comrade to one hundred and one per cent, the excess of one being for a night when he walked a mile and a half to a meeting on the wrong evening.

And it may properly be added that this Comrade's hair is white with the snows of many winters, and by reason of good and faithful service in the great war for the Union. Knowing Sir Comrade that you desire to honor the true and faithful, I report the name of Comrade Dummer Sewell, as worthy of honorable mention.

During the year the Post has given two concerts, which netted $290.00.

On the whole, however, it was a bad year for concerts, and we hope to do better in the future.

The first parade of the whole Dept., that took place in Boston, on the 11th of Oct., was attended by the Post, 118 strong. The occasion was a success in reviving old associations, renewing zeal, and consecrating ourselves to the welfare and duties of our noble Order.

In conclusion, it may be stated, that while our finances are in a healthy condition, and the real strength of the Post has not diminished, there is one other fact worthy of favorable notice. I allude to the harmony and good feeling that exists between the officers and between the members. No bickering, no wire pulling, no disappointed office seekers. In point of fact, the officers seek the Comrades and not the Comrades, and when there is an election, we know positively from South Weymouth, who are equally sure that the Comrades of our choice will be peacefully inaugurated and have the unreserved support of the entire Post.

The ceremonies concluded, the entire company were invited to the town hall building, where Caterer Smith, of Boston, had spread the tables, which filled the entire floor with a most tempting and elegant repast, which, it was whispered about, was provided by the generosity of the Commander. About 250 ladies and gentlemen were seated at the tables, and the distive blessing having been invoked by Department Chaplain Lovering, feasting was the "mild passion" of an hour or more, when Commander Lovell invited the assemblage to listen to a musical selection by the excellent quartette from South Weymouth, Mrs. Kempton, Mrs. Howe, Messrs. J. M. Whitcomb and F. Vining.

The distinguished guests of the Post, who were seated at the head of the tables, included the department commander, Gen. Horace Binney Sargent; Pas. Commander Major George S. Merrill; the Mastering Officer, Capt. J. G. Adams and Col. E. T. C. Merrill; the Council of Administration, including: Lovell, Capt. C. Gray; Col. S. Sumner; Hon. John D. Long, Speaker of the House, and ladies, with the Board of Selectmen and other officials of the town and county; and as might have been expected, with such an array of talent, the addresses of these gentlemen were a spicy addition to the feast. In addition to the speaking, the company was entertained by singing by Messrs. De Young and N. H. Nolan, the former being accompanied with a clarinet obligato by Mr. W. F. Burwell; Mr. Arthur M. Raymond and Mrs. Foss, including a report of the addresses, but in conclusion we may say that the occasion was one well calculated to awaken a renewed interest in our community in the welfare of this noble brotherhood, and one which was exceedingly creditable to the officers and members of Post 58.

By comparison of the financial returns of the Commissioners for Norfolk County for 1876, with those of the previous year, we note as follows:—

Receipts for 1875, including balance of previous year, $226,536.00.

Receipts for 1876, $171,144.48.

The taxes have all been paid, and the County is free from debt.

Work at the Shop.

Mr. R. H. Everett, of East Weymouth, has been employed this winter in mason work on the Pacific House at Nantasket, also on two houses now being built on Atlantic Hill, for Cobb, Bates & Yerra, of Boston, and one on Green Hill, and three on Jerusalem Road, the latter for parties in the city.

Fun at Fires.
Never was there a better proof of the truth of the old saying that "Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well"
than at the recent fire in South Braintree,
which may be regarded as a fair specimen of dwelling-house fires in general. Whenever there is an alarm of fire, a night of day, a large portion of the citizens rush themselves from their beds, or leave their employment, as the case may be, actuated,
many of them, by feelings of sympathetic pity for the unfortunate people whose sheltering roof is fast being scattered to the four winds. With eager haste they rush towards the scene, and, anxious to be of service, enter the house and excitedly join in the work of saving (?) property. They labor away manfully tugging at stoves and furniture, wrenching up carpets, and doing immense excavation generally, at the time imagining that they are of great service and deserving of all praise for their sturdy endeavors. By and by the fire is subdued and all hands find time to rest
in the work of saving (?) property. They

THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

Who has Counted it.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

THE METHOD OF PROCEDURE DURING THE FIRST HALF-CENTURY OF THE REPUBLIC—TOGETHER WITH OPINIONS OF THE FRAMERS OF THE CONSTITUTION.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 15, 1877.

The political situation having resolved itself into a universal discussion, both in Congress and out, as to the manner in which the Electoral vote is to be counted, I can but fall in with the current, and by giving you a review of the progress of the argument, endeavor to prepare you for the coming of the 14th of February. Argument is at the best a subtle power, for it is a poor issue that cannot present two reasonably fair sides, and gather about it a respectable following. But in the present argument no greater proof of the strength of the republican cause can be advanced than the fact that the democracy beaten in precedent and law, are disposed to abandon reason and argument, and discuss the question of force. While I shall endeavor to report the current, I certainly expect to conclude as I commence, that appearances indicate that Mr. Hayes has received the constitutional majority of votes, will be so declared by the President of the Senate on the 14th of February, and inaugurated on the 3rd of March.

THE FIRST COUNT.

Commencing with the earliest record following the framing of the Constitution, we find the convention of 1787 adopting a resolution, specifying in the manner in which the Electoral vote shall be counted. Referring to the section (Sect. 1, Art. 2, Clause 3), and to the sentence thereof, which reads: "The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the vote shall be counted."

This is certainly but one construction to be put upon this clause. The President of the Senate was not merely to count the votes, but to receive them, to open them, and to count them. By a construction of the kind, which by the identical framers of the Constitution, before parties were formed, nominating conventions had met, or elections been tried.

Now let us see what was done. On the 9th of April, 1789, Congress having assembled in accordance with the Constitution, Mr. John Langdon, of New Hampshire, was elected by the Senate as President of the Senate, and the journal of that date reads as follows:

"The President of the Senate, elected for the purpose of counting the votes, declared to the Senate, that the Senate and House of Representatives had met, and that, in their presence, had opened and counted the votes of the electors. For President and Vice President of the United States; whereby it appears that Congress was unanimously elected President."

Certainly thus far, there can be no question as to the law, custom, and fact. And now we come to the election of THOMAS JEFFERSON, the great apostle of Democracy, and the principal framer of the Constitution, who surely will not be charged with ulterior motives. Mr. Jefferson was not only the leading candidate for the Presidency, but he was the Vice President of the United States, vested under the Constitution with the duty of declaring the election of his successor. Waving the question as to the delicacy of the situation in which Mr. Jefferson found himself placed, his reputation as a strict constructionist would have him to strain a point, for even when the ordeal might be avoided, and the letter of the law maintained, but Mr. Jefferson was on record as the particular champion of the strictest possible construction of the law, and carried out to letter, and this is the indubitable proof.

"Be it known that the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, being convened at the city of Washington, in February, A. D. 1801, the undersigned Vice President of the United States and President of the Senate, did, in the presence of said Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates in count all the votes of the electors for President, whereupon it appeared that Thomas Jefferson had a majority of the votes of the electors, and an equal number of votes; in consequence of which the House of Representatives proceeded to a choice of President, and by all of which they did choose President; by all of which it appears that Aaron Burr, Esq., of New York, is duly elected to the Presidency, and that Thomas Jefferson is duly chosen Vice President of the United States of America."

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this 15th day of February, 1801.

And right here should come the words of Mr. Jefferson in the debate of 1800, for the purpose of consideration of this construction, all the powers of government, legislative, executive and judiciary, result to the legislative body.—The concentrating in the same hands is precisely the definition of a despotic government. It will be no alleviation that those powers will be exercised by a plurality of hands, and not by a single one. — One hundred and seventy-three despots would surely be as oppressive as one. Let those who doubt it turn their eyes on the republic of Venice. As little will it avail us, that they were chosen by ourselves. An elective despotism was not the government we fought for."

JAMES MADISON.

Before recording the fact in the case of Madison, we find that gentleman, also a framer of the Constitution, remarking in the Federalist, (48th number), "It is against the enterprising condition of this department, (Congress), that the people ought to indulge all their jealousy, and exhaust all their precautions. * * * Its constitutional powers being at once more extensive and less susceptible of precise limits, it can with the greater facility mask under complicated and indirect measures, the encroachments which it makes on the other departments. * * * Nor is this all. As the legislative department alone has access to the pockets of the people, and has in some constitutions influence over the pecuniary rewards of those who fill the other departments; a dependence is thus created in the latter, which gives still greater facility to encroachments of the former."

Madison's great merit, we could quote much stronger language on this point from Mr. Hamilton, one of the chief authors of the Constitution, throughout the pages of the Federalist, but in the language of Rufus King, of Massachusetts, still another framer, "Nothing can be more absurd than to suppose that the framers of the Constitution have said one word to consider their work in every light which can possibly arise in its future consideration." In the counting of Mr. Madison's vote in 1820, and again in 1825, precisely the same formula was observed as has been stated in the count for Washington, Adams, and Jefferson: the two houses of Congress listened passively to the count of the President of the Senate, and after performing their constitutional duty as officers to the proceeding, retired to the performance of their respective legislative duties.

THE OPINION OF OTHER FRAMERS.

It is quite as emphatic, and it is reasonably safe to say, that they comprehended the use of the English language, and its application to their own ideas, quite as well as democratic constitutions of the present day. Archibald Ritchie, of Georgia, one of the framers, referring to the absolute powers of the Electoral College, said in 1801, "I shall these powers be taken away from that body and submitted to the superior decision and control of Congress, without a particle of authority for it from the Constitution?" John Randolph, of Roanoke, remarked in the debate of February 11, 1812, that he could "not recognize in this House or in the other House, singly or jointly, the power to decide on the votes of any state. I maintain that the Electoral College is an independent Congress as Congress of them." Thomas H. Benton is authority for stating that in the count of the Electoral vote in 1801, Thomas Jefferson "counted returns that were informal, thereby availing his own ends, yet no friend of Burr or member of either House of Congress, or member of either constitutional right to decide what votes should be counted." While these opinions can be multiplied by the column, they are unnecessary to this juncture, which brings us to the first departure from the rule on the 12th of February, 1817, when was elected, the convention assembled as usual in the House of Representatives, Ellbridge Gerry, the Vice President, in the chair. During the count Mr. Taylor, a member of the House, from New York, rose and addressing the Speaker of the House, who was seated on the left of the Vice President, objected to the vote of Indiana, on the ground that Indiana was not a state of the Union. The Speaker merely declared Mr. Taylor out of order, remarking that while the two houses were acting in joint meeting no proposition could be considered, or business performed not prescribed by the Constitution. Mr. Taylor insisting upon his point, a Senator proposed that the Senate withdraw, in order that the House might consult a question of its own discipline. The House did conform, and by an almost unanimous vote, laid Mr. Taylor's resolution on the table. The convention then proceeded to the vote of Indiana, which most of duty he filled to the satisfaction of his constituents. In May, 1808, he united in company with his wife, with the Baptist church, of which he continued an esteemed member until his death, and had officiated for a year or two, as a member of the Standing Committee of the Society.

AS A MEMBER OF THE TWO BENEVOLENT ORDERS ASSEMBLED AT HIS FUNERAL.

As a member of the two benevolent orders assembled at his funeral, he stood in high esteem, and the brotherly kindness manifested by them in their position of watchers to his sick bed, by night and by day, and the relief extended to his family by them, will never be remembered with gratitude by his friends. As a citizen he was temperate, industrious, providing for his family, to whom he was a kind husband and devoted father. As a man his character was courageous, though sensitive and retiring, and those who knew him best realize that his death is indeed a loss to the community in which he dwelt.

THE SERVICE AT THE CHURCH CLOSED WITH SINGING "THY WILL BE DONE."

The service at the church closed with singing "Thy will be done," by the Quartette, and the coffin lid, on which was an elegant wreath of flowers, prepared by Mr. Shaw at the request of the Knights, was closed, and the sad procession moved to the receiving tomb, where the body will remain until the final interment in Middleborough.

CONCEALING.

Is a serious amusement on a public way, and we expect every day to record the naming of a daughter of some reckless youth. Last Wednesday afternoon a lad was sliding down Prospect street just as a sleighing party from Abington, was passing up Washington street, and nothing but a fortunate shower of the horses prevented his colliding with the team and perhaps being severely injured.

TOWN AND VICINITY.

THE EXTRA EVENING OF THE LECTURE COURSE.

The Tuesday and Wednesday evening lectures at the Union Church, next Tuesday evening, will be fully worth a place in this course. The Rudersdorf Sextette, (entirely of ladies), is particularly engaged by Theodore Thomas, as it is engaged to assist at his concert in Boston and New York, during the present season. Miss Johnson is approved by an unquestionable authority. Charles Oshman, anti is highly recommended by other competent critics who have been privileged to hear her.

PROGRAMMES.

Programmes will be circulated throughout the town, the last of this week, and tickets for Saturday at Mr. Amblers', on after Saturday evening, Jan. 29th.

READING ROOM.

The Reading Room of the Weymouth Reform Club is open every evening except Sunday, to all who choose to come, and as this fact may not be generally known, we give it further publicity. The room is well warmed and lighted, and supplied with books, illustrated papers, magazines, etc., of the day, together with interesting games, including dominoes, backgammon, chess, checkers, &c. The rooms have been fitted up by the ladies at considerable expense, for the express purpose of meeting a great want for cozy, home-like resort for those who have a mind to come, and especially for the young men; and it is a great discouragement to the ladies that their efforts are not better appreciated. — It is the duty of every one who has the welfare of the young men of this village at heart to see that this institution is well supported, and we hope this short article will engage the attention of every reader of the GAZETTE, and will have its desired effect.

PSYCHOLOGICAL.

The effects of temperance are curiously manifested in the person of a little girl of 7 or 8 years, daughter of a resident of this town, who whenever her father is on a spree, and wherever he may be located at the time, presents all the manifestations of an inebriated condition. She is certainly an object of interest to philosophers.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

Were held in the Baptist Church at Weymouth Landing, last Monday evening, over the remains of Mr. Charles H. Morse, who died at his residence on Front street, Saturday last week, after an illness of about two weeks. Mr. Wilbur was an esteemed member of Delta Lodge, F. & A. M., and also of Delta Lodge, K. of P., a good number of representatives from both these bodies being present at the service, which was conducted especially under the charge of the Knights of Pythias, who, clothed in their regalia, and escorted by the Masonic band, marched to the Village Cemetery in the midst of the driving snow storm, and paid the last respects to their deceased brother by a solemn ritual service at the tomb.

The exercises in the church, as the body was borne in and deposited in front of the pulpit by the Knights who officiated as bearers, commenced with an impressive funeral march, by the organ, followed by singing of the beautiful transcription of "Book of Ages," by a quartette consisting of Mrs. Geo. F. Field, Miss Susie H. Richards, Mr. Chester H. Shaw, and Mr. Lewis M. Pratt.

Rev. Wm. C. Wright, pastor of the society, of which the deceased was a member, then delivered a discourse appropriate to the occasion, and offered a fervent prayer in behalf of the afflicted wife and children, and relatives of the deceased. Following the prayer, the pastor recounted the leading incidents in the life of the departed, stating that he was born in Middleborough Nov. 5, 1834, and was one of a family of five children, two of whom were present at the funeral, his parents having died some years since. He was married in Middleborough May 21, 1859, to Miss Frances M. Thomas, both of whose parents have also deceased, leaving her both orphan and widow. In the country she was employed by the gallant Commodore Farragut, in which service he continued for three years, when he received an honorable discharge. He was also a member of Post No. 8, G. A. R., for some time after his organization, from which he was honorably discharged. During the period when the Crisis organization was in active operation in this town, he was elected a member of the Massachusetts Legislature, which most of duty he filled to the satisfaction of his constituents. In May, 1868, he united in company with his wife, with the Baptist church, of which he continued an esteemed member until his death, and had officiated for a year or two, as a member of the Standing Committee of the Society.

TEMPERANCE ADDRESS.

The lecture-room of the Union Congl Church was well filled last Sunday evening, by an audience assembled to listen to a temperance address by Elijah A. Morse, Esq., of Cambridge, Mass., who has spent a considerable part of his life in the temperance cause, and is a highly respected and intelligent man. He never attempted to address an intelligent audience like the one before him, without putting up a prayer for help to talk to the purpose, and he had entered on this work from love to his fellow men, — a work which every patriot and every philanthropist should examine, and use their best efforts in restraining the tide of intemperance.

In illustration of his remarks in reference to the raising of revenue by the taxation of the liquor traffic, he said it was parallel with the idea of inoculating men with small-pox and then laying a tax on coffee for revenue. He had occasion to address the Legislature, of which he was a member last winter, on the liquor law, when an opponent remarked that temperance speakers were out of place in that body; but that same gentleman, when he addressed the House in advocacy of a law to prevent the capture of women less than ten inches in length, and it was a fair question to propose to the member whether the subject of protecting the widows and orphans made miserable by rum-selling was not as important as that of protecting little lobsters. He was afraid that the true reason of a legislator's hostility to the advocacy of temperance legislation was akin to that of the culprit who was tried for stealing hams, and though the proof of his guilt was conclusive, he being questioned on this point by his counsel, who could not understand why this verdict should be rendered in the face of such evidence, the rogue replied, "Why, the jury had some of the hams!"

The speaker paid his respects to temperance men who are unwilling to sign the pledge by comparing them with the vendor of "hot pies," who when asked by the jury why he sold them, he had called them hot pies, replied, "Oh, that's the name of them." So with these hot pie temperance men—their hearts are frozen at the core. The danger of moderate drinking Mr. Morse illustrated with a story of an army mule of a headstrong disposition, whom one of the soldiers in his company undertook to mount, while the other held the animal. He succeeded in seating himself on his back, when the mule started off at full gallop, and a comrade whom he met in the road, called out, "John, where are you going?" Holding on to his hat and desperately clinging to the mule, he shouted, "I don't know; ask the mule!" The moderate drinker is in the same uncertain position; but he is on the brink of a precipice, and every young man should beware of taking the first steps in a career of drunkenness.

Another allusion to the speaker was that of the man who had been shot in the chest, and when asked by the jury why he shot him, he replied, "Oh, that's the name of them." TEMPERANCE ADDRESS.

The lecture of Gen. Kilpatrick, in the Perkins Union Lecture Course, given in the Union Congl Church, last Monday evening, was a graphic and interesting review of the incidents of Sherman's heroic march from "Atlanta to the Sea," in which military adventure Gen. Kilpatrick, as a cavalry commander, was a prominent actor, making him perfectly at home in his delineation of the stirring events of that march which has passed into history as the achievement of the bravest military commander. The great glory of the invading army, from Atlanta's lurid blaze lighted by the torch of war, to the city of Savannah, and from thence to North Carolina, is familiar to all who followed the course of events during the rebellion; but it is still interesting to listen to a recital of events in the history of the strife which resulted in the collapse of the rebellion, and a review of the concert of plans and operations that culminated in signal triumph. Will not be out of place in this report of the lecture, though, to use the words of the speaker, the history of the campaign is the individual history of 70,000 men.

Commencing with the plan of General Grant to drive the rebel General Bragg from his position on Lookout Mountain, we find Gen. Hooker holding the vanguard, leading the entire army against the rebel line. Sherman occupied the central position with Missionary Ridge in front of him. — Gen. Sherman was ordered to a point on the river, above Chattanooga, to seize the northern extremity of the ridge, which was unfortified, while a cavalry force was directed to proceed to the right and rear of the rebels, and sever Longstreet's southern communications with Bragg. In this way Hooker and Sherman were to hold each flank of the rebel army, while Thomas pierced their centre. All the arrangements having been made to his satisfaction, Grant, on the 23d of November, 1863, ordered the demonstration against Missionary Ridge, and the next evening Thomas had seized the extremity of the ridge, while Hooker scaled the slopes of Lookout Mountain and fought his famous battle among the clouds.

These successes culminated in a general advance of the entire army against the rebel line, who were entrenched at the foot of Missionary Ridge. The line moved forward rapidly and orderly, and charged the rebel positions, which the rebels swarmed out and fled, while the Union soldiers, seized with an irresistible impulse to mount the very heights, despite the storm of shot and shell which rained down upon them from above, dashed onward and forced their way up the steep sides and broken crumblings of the ridge. Night fell and the conflict, and Bragg's troops decamped during the darkness. The campaign ended in rescuing Kentucky and Tennessee from the rebels, and the way was now thrown open to Atlanta.

Next to Richmond, Atlanta was the most important position for the rebels, as a centre of military operations and supplies, and a vast workshop for war material. — It was also one of the chief railroad centres in the Confederate States, and Atlanta was in the possession of Sherman, would become a new and advanced position from whence he could continue his determined movement upon the enemy. The battles of Kennesaw, Pine and Lost Mountains, after Atlanta had been turned, was another signal triumph for Sherman, and opened the way to the Chattahoochee, eight miles distant from Atlanta. Hood, who held the post in the place of the rebels, General Johnston, manoeuvred to crush Sherman in a sudden and overwhelming attack on his position, but was defeated in this engagement, which was the most sanguinary of any fought in Georgia. Other movements, followed with continued success, resulted in Hood evacuating Atlanta, and Gen. Sherman had reached his objective point in the plan for penetrating the heart of the Confederacy.

The following day the rebel railroad was repaired, the sick and wounded and supplies sent back to Chattanooga, and every thing put in readiness for the march through Georgia. Cutting loose from all his communications, he set fire to everything which could be of service to the enemy, and with his army of nearly 70,000 men, he set forth on the march to the south, to be merely a raiding expedition in Georgia.

Various incidents of the march were depicted by the lecturer in a lively manner, especially the exploits of the bummers, who proved formidable foes to chicken roosts and household supplies, in their industrious foraging for the marching hosts. As Sherman remarked, "I propose to ruin Georgia; the people here do not know what war means, and when the rich planters miss their corn crops, they say they are being ruined by the Yankees." In alluding to carry out this enterprise, the army spent two days on the plantation of Howell Cobb, before they could cut him out, and the operations of the bummers in this connection must have been convincing evidence to the rebels that the Yankee troops were not very profitable patrons of their lands.

In his concluding passages the lecturer paid an eloquent tribute to the soldiers of the Union, whose valor and victories as those which marked Sherman's advance from Atlanta to Goldsboro, were possible. Millions, said the lecturer, will tell the story of their heroism when we sleep in the churchyard, and liberty will raise her hand and say, "These were my children."

In addition to the literary entertainment the audience were regaled with a splendid organ performance by Mr. Frank O. Nash, of North Weymouth.

EAST BRAINTREE.

Escape from Fire. — About 9 o'clock last Monday evening, as Mr. Alex McDonald and Mr. Thomas South, Jr., were coming out of the bar-room at the corner of Main street, and were passing a building which was burning in the vicinity. In investigating the cause they entered the wheelwright shop of Mr. South, and found it filled with smoke. — One of them went for a lantern, while the other remained on watch, and when the light was brought they found the smoke proceeding from the floor under the stove. Tearing up a portion of the flooring, they found the undertaker had placed a few buckets of water put out. No great damage was done, but had it not been for his timely discovery, the fire would have been a serious one, as the night was stormy, and it would have been difficult to get the engines through the snow.

Dramatic. — The entertainment which was given by the East BRAINTREE Dramatic Club in Lincoln Hall, on Monday evening, was well conducted by the young men of the Club, but was not so largely attended as was desired. The small attendance was owing to the stormy night.

Post Office. — The new office is going to have a Post Office, which will be opened sometime in February. Mr. Perry L. Parker has been appointed Post Master.

LAW.

EAST WEYMOUTH.

Tuesday evening the friends and relatives of Mr. S. S. Marden, agreeable to a previous understanding, assembled at his residence to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his birthday. Mr. Marden being taken completely by surprise. After the company had all arrived, Mr. Marden was presented by Z. L. Bicknell, Esq., with a Past Grand's Regalia and Jewel, in behalf of Crescent Lodge, No. 22, I. O. O. F., of which Mr. M. was a member. The regalia is made in a most thorough manner, and is a model of its kind. Mr. M. was also the recipient of numerous other fancy and useful tokens of esteem. After participating of a bountiful collation, the company proceeded to enjoy themselves in social games, dancing, vocal and instrumental music, and at a late hour they dispersed to their homes. The vocal music was sustained by Mrs. Sarah Pratt, Mrs. Anna Lovell and Miss Sarah Perkins, of Abington, Me.

To-morrow the scholars connected with the School St. Intermediate School, Miss Holbrook, teacher, will, if the weather is agreeable, take a sleigh-ride. The prospect is that the scholars will enjoy themselves largely, as the going is so fine.

The Weymouth Iron Co. have had out their complement of nails, (3,500 casks,) for a month of January, closed operations Wednesday. The quantity is about one and one-half week's work when the times are brisk and all of the machines are in operation.

The Ladies Sewing Circle connected with the M. E. Church, held their usual meeting Wednesday afternoon and evening, in the vestry of the Church.

Last Sunday afternoon the congregation of the M. E. Church, at a previously announced, while Thomas pierced their centre. All the arrangements having been made to his satisfaction, Grant, on the 23d of November, 1863, ordered the demonstration against Missionary Ridge, and the next evening Thomas had seized the extremity of the ridge, while Hooker scaled the slopes of Lookout Mountain and fought his famous battle among the clouds.

The ladies team of Mr. W. A. Hodges was overthrown in turning a corner, the other day, but the horse being in a gentle mood, did not attempt to run, and beyond the spilling of a small amount of pastry no damage was done.

Accident. — A delegation from Mechanic's Temple were intending to pay their Melrose brethren a visit Monday evening, but owing to the inclement weather the project was abandoned, although we learn that some five or six of the excursionists did go, making use of the "Iron Horse." It is now proposed to make another trial next Monday evening, if the sleighing and weather are agreeable.

At Mr. Nelson Blanchard, station agent at North Weymouth, was passing through Middle Street, in a pug, his horse suddenly started into a run, and turning the corner at Shaw's store, the horse ran against a stone post, throwing Mr. Blanchard out, and inflicting a severe bruise on his head.

EXTENSION.

A party of some thirty young residents of East Weymouth made an excursion to Brockton, last Wednesday evening. They called on Miss Lillian Randall, daughter of Mr. Otis Randall, and spent a very pleasant evening, their enjoyment being enhanced by the company of Rev. Mr. McKivay, formerly of East Weymouth. — The party was entertained in hospitable manner.

Religious. — Rev. Geo. Dodson, the new pastor of the Plymouth church, will preach on Monday at East Weymouth, and on Tuesday at North Weymouth. Mr. D. is an able and eloquent preacher, and will doubtless be greeted with large audiences.

Surprise. — The home of Mr. Amos Tirrell was the scene of a happy surprise party on Tuesday evening, it being Mr. Tirrell's birthday. Mr. Tirrell's children and their families assembled early in the evening, and from the merry manner in which the surprise was made, it was evident that they intended to enjoy themselves. After spending a portion of the evening happily together, they looked at the clock, and found the hour, whose rabble indicated by their appearance a genuine Turkey supper.

After satisfying themselves with the happy occasion, they parted, Mr. Tirrell with an elegant pair of gold eye glasses. Mr. Tirrell thanked his children very kindly, and bidding each other good night, they departed to their homes.

The builders canted in the dawn, The rose-bloom deepened day by day,

The earth was still a little space, And waited for its robe of white—

"Of course it is!" "It strikes me that is a very selfish mode of existence."

"Yes," said Mr. Redblossom, "I'll call it a man's duty to make these visits of condolence."

"Show him in, Phoebe!" said Mr. Redblossom. He glanced downward at a small square visiting card as he spoke the words,

"I'm well," said Redblossom, trundling forward a big chair. "Have a seat, won't you?"

BRANTREE DEPARTMENT.

ELLIOT'S LETTER.

Every one appreciates the discomfort of waiting in a railroad station for a belated train, and most of us have equal occasion to remember regretfully the many minutes of (impatient) waiting we have spent in loitering about for a tardy friend to put in an appearance at some appointed rendezvous.

Notwithstanding the hopes that were entertained concerning the elaborate and substantial train which was built for the Thayer Academy at the time the cellar for that edifice was dug, it has been found inadequate, owing to the springy nature of the soil, for removing the floods of water deposited by a sudden and heavy rain, and a new and additional drain, about 1100 feet in length, is to be commenced at once.

The second half of the season of the employees of the Old Colony Railroad came off very successfully at the Town Hall, Friday evening. The weather was favorable, and the attendance consequently large, including visitors from all the principal roads running out of Boston.

The Regular Meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held next Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 31, at 3 o'clock. Text at hand, "Milk and Honey," by Rev. S. H. Richards, Secretary.

On Tuesday evening Unity Lodge, of Good Templars welcomed a large crowd of members of Quincy, Weymouth and Randolph lodges at Grand Army Hall, South Braintree, and a social and business gathering was held and a general good time indulged in.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Bishop were "surprised" by numerous friends on Tuesday evening, and a very enjoyable evening passed by all present.

The first of a series of 12 o'clock assemblies under the auspices of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer Post St. G. A. R., was given in Grand Army Hall, South Braintree, on Wednesday evening, and everybody who attended had a good time.

Mr. James Larvin, employed in the Old Colony rail shop, in South Braintree, had his left foot considerably injured by the fall of a heavy rail upon it on Monday afternoon. It will be "laid up" about a week.

Last Wednesday evening an entertainment, as announced last week, was given in Lyceum Hall, under the auspices of the Parsonage Association. The committee hoped to be able to have a lecture from Mr. Ben. Tower, a young lawyer who has recently come among us, to make the chief feature of the programme; but Mr. Tower's business engagements made it impossible for him to meet the wishes of the committee in this respect, so the whole burden fell upon those who only expected to be called upon to fill up the chinks in the evening's entertainment, viz., Mrs. Geo. O. Wales, Mr. Nathaniel Thayer, and Mrs. F. W. Holbrook.

The entertainment opened with a song by Mr. Nathaniel Thayer, which was loudly applauded, as it well deserved. Mrs. Holbrook then read a chapter from "My Opinions and Betsy Robbott's," by Josiah Allen's wife. Mr. Thayer then sang again, and received a hearty encore, to which he kindly responded by another song. Mrs. Wales being called upon by the President of the evening, Josephus Shaw, Esq., read "The Lord of Burleigh," from Tennyson, and "Signs and Omens," both with excellent effect. Mr. Thayer sang, accompanying himself upon the organ, "All for Jesus," and nothing was rendered more effectively during the evening than that simple revival hymn. R. Elmer Morrison, Esq., accompanied Mr. Thayer in his songs upon the organ.

After this singing, Mrs. Holbrook read "Tob's Monument" and "How he Saved St. Michael's," and another song from Mr. Thayer followed. Mr. Wales then read "Skipper Ireson's Ride," and "Dead as a Post," the latter creating much merriment. A song from Mr. Thayer closed the entertainment, which was pronounced by a small, but appreciative audience, to be very satisfactory.

Friday afternoon the "Woman's Christian Temperance Union" met with Mrs. F. A. Holbert. Though there were not a large number present it was a lively meeting, and some important business was done. Two items are of interest. A committee was appointed to obtain signatures to petitions to Congress and the Legislature for the enactment of a law prohibiting the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors, to be used as a beverage within the United States, Territories and District of Columbia; and for the enactment of a stringent prohibitory law in the state, providing such means as are necessary for its strict enforcement. The petitions were circulated last summer in East Braintree, and a large number of signatures obtained, but the work has not been thoroughly done, in North and South Braintree, as yet.

ABINGTON.

Block, at 2 P. M. if the weather is favorable; if not, it will be postponed till next Tuesday, at the same hour. All ladies interested in the cause are invited to attend the meeting, whether members of the Union or not. It is hoped that we shall have Mrs. Chapin, the Vice President for Norfolk Co., with us at that meeting, to arrange with us for the Convention.

Found Party. Friday evening there was a found party at Mr. C. C. Gregg's residence, instead of with Miss Sadie Merrill, as announced last week. Quite a nice little sum was realized, we understand, to assist the young people in fitting up their table in the coming fair.

The Dramatic Entertainment. Announced for the women Wednesday, will be given next Wednesday evening, in Lyceum Hall.

Bible Lesson. At the Bible Class Tuesday evening, Mrs. Holbrook read an essay on the lesson for next Sabbath, taking for a subject "Elijah's unwavering faith in God, and implicit obedience to his commands."

Numerous burglaries in this vicinity for a week or two past, commencing with the stealing of robes and harnesses from the stable of Henry A. Johnson, Esq. of East Braintree, and the ransacking of A. W. Stetson's place and robbery of clothing, and entering of the house of Caleb Stetson, Esq., have been followed by the arrest of Dennis Nolan and his son Michael, and the capture of a man named L. L. Lam.

Roadway Accident. Tuesday afternoon about 2 o'clock John Cronin's horse ran away on 1 street, throwing Mr. Cronin and another rider, Horace Richards, out of the street, the horse turned up Comm. street and collided with the fence in front of Mr. Joseph White's house, and threw the sleigh, and proceeding was stopped.

The Regular Meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held next Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 31, at 3 o'clock. Text at hand, "Milk and Honey," by Rev. S. H. Richards, Secretary.

In the District Court Tuesday, before Judge Keith, Lewis L. Lincoln, for suing his wife, was fined $5 and costs. The Madawaska Cavalry held a grand ball at Agricultural Hall, on Friday last. The attendance was quite large, and consequently a large number participated in the festivities of the occasion.

The officers of the Hingham Mutual Benefit Society for the ensuing year are: President, John Upton; Vice President, Edward Pyne; Sec'y, William Balentine; Treasurer, John Crowe. The election of Trustees was postponed until the February meeting.

The lecture of Rev. A. G. Jennings, in the home course, given in Lincoln Hall, on Thursday evening of last week, upon Alexander Hamilton, was a very interesting account of the life of this great man. The speaker commenced by giving a history of his life, and the condition of our country at the close of the Revolutionary war. The financial condition was next referred to, and statistics of the public debt given at that time, after which he spoke of Hamilton as a statesman, soldier, lawyer and writer, and gave a very concise account of his duel with Aaron Burr, and closed by briefly referring to his funeral services, in Trinity Church, in New York city, reading an extract of the oration delivered by Gen. Morris, of that State.

The teachers and scholars of the Sunday School connected with the St. Paul's Catholic Church, have formed an organization under the name of the Sunday School Library Association, and have made choice of the following officers: President, Wm. H. Blake; Sec'y, John F. Crowe; Treas., John Morrissey; Trustees, Joanna Hawley, Lizzie Louden and Ellen McCarthy. The Baptist, Methodist and Congregational churches, are holding union week-evening meetings, at which considerable interest is manifested.

The 25th annual fair of the Fort Hill Cemetery Association, took place at Lyceum Hall on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The tables were adorned with a large variety of useful and fancy articles, all of which met with a ready sale. The affair was to all appearances eminently a successful one, and nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the occasion, and everything passed off in a creditable manner, although the attendance was not so large as could be desired. The grand musical entertainment given by the Chapel Quartette of East Weymouth, assisted by Miss Alice Young and Miss Ada Cushing, was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The High School gave an exhibition in Underwood Hall, Monday evening, Jan. 10th, to obtain funds with which to furnish a room in the High School Building for the performance of Philosophical, Chemical, and Astronomical experiments. The amount realized was very small, owing to the severe character of the weather, but Mr. Stetson, the teacher, promises another at an early date, at which it is hoped a goodly sum will be raised, as the scholars greatly stand in need of the extra conveniences.

Rev. Geo. F. Stanton, of South Weymouth, occupied the last Sabbath in exchange with the pastor of the G. A. R. Sewing Circle held an entertainment in Underwood Hall, Thursday evening, the 18th inst. The most prominent act of the evening was a drama entitled "One on a Time," which added to the collection of Tableaux and Music afforded an excellent entertainment.

The new passage was completed last week, so that the post-office between Weymouth and Braintree, as yet, has not been thoroughly done, in North and South Braintree, as yet.

The Union also voted to hold a Norfolk County Convention on an early day, as soon as it can be arranged for. A special meeting of the Union is called on Saturday next, in G. A. Hall, Holbrook.

ABINGTON.

Robbery. Mr. J. N. Farrar, Cashier of the Abington National Bank, carried to Boston last Saturday some $500 in paper belonging to the bank. While eating dinner on Essex St. he placed the satchel containing the money on the table before him, when suddenly it was snatched and carried away.

Last Sunday afternoon as Mr. Henry A. Noyes was driving to the Cong'l church, his horse started to run from Hattery Hall to the horse-sheds back of the church. There he could not stop and hit the back of the sled with such force as to tear the boarding from the sill. He broke his neck, thus abruptly ending his mundane career. Mr. Noyes was thrown from the sleigh but fortunately was not injured.

Mission Circle. The Children's Mission of the Cong'l Church held a fair in the vestry, Wednesday evening, the 17th inst. The entertainment consisted of music and various exercises by the children. Articles made by the circle were also exposed for sale. The proceeds amounted to about twenty dollars.

Reading. Mr. Horace Lamb of Boston gave a reading Friday evening, under the auspices of the "G. A. R. Post 76" in their new hall at "Hunt's Corner." The room was crowded and the audience well pleased with the rendering of his selections.

The Reform Club held a meeting for choice of officers Sunday evening. The same board was re-elected with the exception of Mr. Patrick O'Brien, the president, who declined, and Mr. L. M. Dean was chosen in his place.
