WHEN M-G-M's "THE SEA OF GRASS" FOLLOWS M-G-M's "THE YEARLING" AT RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL—

M-G-M proudly cherishes the honor of showing three of its outstanding attractions in a row at the world-famed Radio City Music Hall. "Till The Clouds Roll By" was followed by "The Yearling", and now a new M-G-M hit, "The Sea of Grass". It is a mark of distinction for a motion picture to be selected for exhibition at the Music Hall—and three-in-a-row is a record for which M-G-M is deeply grateful to the Music Hall and its patrons.

Tax Refund

THE operation of candy and gum counters in theatre lobbies does not make such houses subject to the Mississippi state chain-store tax, the state's Supreme Court ruled this week. In doing so the tribunal reversed a Hinds County Circuit Court decision in the case of Richards-Lightman Theatres Corporation vs. A. H. Stone, chairman of the State Tax Commission. The lower court had denied the corporation's right to get back a chainstore tax of about $2,000 including penalties. In overruling this decision the Mississippi Supreme Court held that the corporation could recover the money because it does not avail itself of the advantages of mass buying as practiced by ordinary chain-stores.

Young

ROBERT R. YOUNG, C. & O. Railway chairman and head of Pathe Industries, who proposes to improve American railroading before he starts on films, this week gave the nation's financial rajahs more to mull, as he formed a "Federation for Railway Progress". This outfit, which bucks the old-line Association of American Railroads, described by Mr. Young as a "broken down lobby", apparently will be open not only to those financially interested in railroading but also to the general public—suggestions for service improvement are welcomed. Mr. Young took his group of railroads out of the AMR recently. They and his holding company, Alleghany Corporation, will be the Federation's charter members. An advisory committee headed by Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., former Secretary of State, and including Admiral William F. Halsey, former Representative Claire Booth Luce, former Wisconsin Governor Phillip La Follette, former New Jersey Governor Charles Edison, and publisher M. Lincoln Schuster, will guide the Federation without pay. Mr. Young is in the motion picture industry by way of PRC and Eagle-Lion.

The Show Goes Through

London Bureau

FROM the looks of things these past ice-bound English days, you would have thought Sidney L. Bernstein's mobile cinemas were operated not by British theatre-men but by American postmen doggedly muttering their "nor snow, nor rain" motto. Although faced with near-Arctic conditions—ice-covered roads, 10-foot snow drifts, canceled bus and postal services—Century

Mobile Cinemas have not once failed to give their scheduled 16mm shows in the storm-bound villages of Britain's Home Counties.

These units, operated by Mr. Bernstein's Granada Theatres, are each in charge of a manager-operator-driver who has fought his way through storm and blizzard to more than 30 villages, and there given the customary two shows daily. Villagers everywhere have turned out as a gesture to the men who were determined to observe the old rule: "The show must go on."

All the manager-operators employed by Granada are ex-servicemen.

Viva Peron

Washington Bureau

PRESIDENT PERON of Argentina has expressed his opposition to a proposed bill which would have cut the import of American films into that country by 80 per cent, according to George Canty of the U. S. State Department's film section. President Peron said he favored expansion of the Argentine domestic industry, but that, at the same time, he did not believe it would be wise to restrict present imports. Mr. Canty supplied some of the reasons for this attitude when he pointed out that Argentine depends on the United States for its rawstock and equipment.

QUIGLEY AWARDS JUDGING MONDAY

More than 100 industry executives who comprise the Quigley Awards Committee of Judges will appraise the work of 22 finalists competing for the annual Quigley showmanship titles Monday, March 3 in the North Ballroom of the Hotel Astor, New York. The two selected by the judges as the outstanding showmen for 1946 will receive Silver and Bronze plaques.

The 22 candidates comprising the top winners in the quarterly competitions during 1946 represent the largest number of individual entries ever presented to the judges' committee. In addition to theatre men from the United States and Canada, the judges will view campaigns submitted by theatre men in South America, England, New Zealand, Belgium and Cuba.

Following the appraisal of the campaigns, the judges will be the guests of Martin Quigley. Principal speaker at the luncheon will be Sol A. Schwartz, vice-president in charge of theatres for RKO Service Corporation.

FOUR MAJORS FILE JOINT DECREE APPEAL; PARAMOUNT, ALONE, ATTACKS BIDDING

by RAY LANNING

Wednesday, at three o'clock in the afternoon, the five theatre-owning defendants in the U. S. versus Paramount, et al, anti-trust suit filed their appeals from the New York Federal District Court's December 31 final decree. Paramount filed alone, the only one of the five to state that the court was in error in decreeing competitive bidding and single sales. RKO, MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers filed a joint appeal. Both appeal documents, filed with the District Court, paralleled each other with the exception of the competitive bidding issue.

Both documents cited errors in the court's decree, findings of fact, and conclusions of law, centering their attacks on the court's prohibiting of fixing minimum admissions, joint ownership of theatres and theatre expansion and the court's failure to order the establishment of some sort of an arbitration system.

RKO, MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners listed 39 errors; Paramount, being a little more particular and detailed and concerned with the bidding provisions, listed 47.

All of the appeals in the suit in Equity No. 87-273 have now been filed. Universal and United Artists filed their appeals February 20. Details of their appeals are on page 15. The Department of Justice filed its appeal last Friday. Details are on page 16. Columbia, the first to file its appeal, filed February 6.

Exhibitor Groups Appeal On Intervention Issue

The third party at interest—the exhibitor—was heard from too. The American Theatres Association, represented by Thurman Arnold, and the Southern California Theatre Owners Association, represented by Paul Williams, Wednesday filed appeals with the New York Federal District Court from the order which barred them from intervention. The Confederacy of Southern Associations was to appeal from the same order later this week. All three groups contend their exhibitor members are entitled to a voice in the decisions.

The arguments in the anti-trust suit begun July 20, 1938, now move to Washington.

The joint "Statements as to Jurisdiction," signed by all five of the theatre-owning defendants, raised four substantial questions on which the appeals were based.

1. The court's holding that it lacked the power to continue the arbitration system—the court merely recommended that

THE SCOREBOARD

This week the final objections to the decree in the anti-trust suit were entered in the New York Federal District Court and could be tallied. The objections at the end of Appeal Week:

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers and RKO Radio: the failure of the court to provide for a system of arbitration, the court's prohibitions forbidding fixing minimum admissions, joint ownership of theatres and theatre expansion.

Paramount: the competitive bidding order, the single sales order and everything to which MGM, RKO, 20th-Fox and Warners objected.

The Government: the court's failure to decree divestiture and absolutely prohibit theatre expansion, the system of clearances.

United Artists: competitive bidding, single sales, price fixing, placing the burden of proving clearance on the distributor, most other major provisions.

Universal: competitive bidding, prohibition of franchises, being found conspiring to maintain admissions and clearances, single sales, most other major provisions.

Columbia: competitive bidding, single sales.

some such system be established—is contrary to the decision of the Supreme Court in the U. S. versus Swift and Company suit.

2. The decree deprives the defendants of their rights, which they hold under the Copyright Laws and the common law, to protect their interests by contract. There is nothing in the anti-trust laws which prohibits the owner of a motion picture and the person authorized to show the picture to agree as to what the admission price shall be.

3. There is no justification for the decision of the court in prohibiting the continuation of joint ownership of theatres between a defendant and an independent exhibitor. This decision, prohibiting such an arrangement, said the defendants, "did not result from the trial of any issue tendered by the plaintiff or contested during the hearings."

4. The failure and refusal of the court to permit a defendant exhibitor to expand his theatre holdings "for the purpose of acquiring theatres or interests therein in order to protect his investments, or in order to enter a competitive field," with permission of the court, "stands as a barrier to healthy growth" of the industry and is "far more restrictive" than the decree directed by the Supreme Court in the U. S. versus Crescent Amusement suit.

Paramount, alone, stated the court was in error in decreeing paragraph eight, Section II, of the decree: "From licensing in the future any feature for exhibition in any theatre, not its own, in any manner except the following. . . ." Then follows detailed instructions for selling features theatre by theatre to the highest bidder.

Paramount, alone, also stated the court was in error in decreeing paragraph seven, Section II, of the decree which prohibits the defendants from entering into a license in which the sale of one feature is conditioned upon the sale of another and which gives the licensee the right to reject 20 per cent of the features not trade shown prior to the granting of a license.

Vigorous Objection to Price Fixing Ban

Both appeal documents, the four companies combined and Paramount singly, were minutely concerned with price fixing of admissions to all features and with roadshows in particular.

"The prohibition (against price fixing) has particular effect in the case of a feature of unusual cost, where it is necessary to roadshow the production at a specified admission price, in order to recover the exceptional investment," chorused the five defendants.

"The decree, as shown, will present the production in the future of such occasional and unusually costly features, since their production costs can only be recovered by roadshow exhibitions. Thus the decree not only deprives each defendant of rights which he is entitled to enjoy under the Copyright Laws and the common law, but, in addition, the public will be deprived of the entertainment value of the exceptional motion picture."

Asks Supreme Court to Pass On Questions After Hearings

"Each of the appellants," concluded the appeals, "is of the belief that all questions here raised as well as others raised by the respective Assignments of Errors . . . are substantial and each respectfully petitions the Supreme Court to pass on them after plenary hearing."

Accompanying is the detailed "Assignment of Errors" as listed by RKO, MGM, 20th-Fox and Warner Brothers. Paramount's

"Assignment of Errors" agrees with the appended list except that the company has more detailed objections to partial divestiture and partnership arrangements and is the only company to protest the order for single sales and competitive bidding. Paramount, too, is the only company not protesting the court's order prohibiting the making or continuance of pooling agreements.

Langer Would Jail Violators, Berge Says No

Washington Bureau

An argument over the pros and cons of jailing industry violators of the Sherman anti-trust law developed at a recent hearing in Washington before the Civil Service Committee between Chairman William Langer and Wendell Berge, recently resigned as head of the Department of Justice anti-trust division.

How many of the guilty bigwigs caught violating trust laws have been put in jail, asked Mr. Langer.

"None," replied Mr. Berge. "None in the last generation, I guess."

Mr. Langer, who plans a bill calling for theatre divorcement, said the Attorney General's office had blocked passage of such a bill since 1941. Now, he indicated, he was in favor of jailing industry leaders guilty of violating anti-trust laws.

But Mr. Berge was not in favor of such a remedy. Said he: "I think you have got to go further than just punishment. I think you have got in this movie situation, and many other situations, a fundamental wrong in the structure of the industry that has to be remedied. . . . We have got this suit pending in New York where we are trying to tackle the problem on the whole national scale and get divestiture of the motion pictures houses from the control of the big fellows."

Here Mr. Langer interjected the idea that jail sentences might be effective.

Mr. Berge answered by stating that while he did not like to be in the position of defending the motion picture industry he did not know "any rational way" of assessing "moral guilt on a few fellows and put them in jail to atone for the economic wrong of the whole industry."

Dues of National Allied To Rise by One-Third

Stanley D. Kane, executive director of North Central Allied, reporting in Minneapolis this week on his attendance at the Allied States board meeting and the election in Washington last month, disclosed that the national organization's board approved, in principle, an increase of one-third in dues to be paid annually by regional units.

TEXT OF APPEAL ERRORS

Following is the text of the 39 points listed by Twentieth Century-Fox, Warners, RKO and Loew's in their Assignment of Errors on which the appeal filed Wednesday is based:

ASSIGNMENTS OF ERRORS AND PRAYERS FOR REVERSAL

Loew's Incorporated, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, RKO Proctor Corporation, RKO Midwest Corporation, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, National Theatres Corporation, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Warner Bros. Pictures Distributing Corporation (sued herein as Vitagraph, Inc.), and Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corporation, defendants in the above entitled cause, in connection with their several petitions for appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, hereby severally assign error to the Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law, Judgment, Final Order and Decree of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York entered on December 31, 1946, and to the Order of said District Court entered on February 11, 1947, and say that there is manifest error in the entry of such Judgment, Final Order and Decree, and in the proceedings in this cause prior to, concurrent with, and subsequent to the entry thereof, committed by the said District Court to the prejudice of each of the said defendants severally, in the following several particulars, to wit:

1. The Court erred in Section II, Paragraph 1 of the Decree in enjoining the distributor-defendants, and each of them, as follows:

"1. From granting any license in which minimum prices for admission to a theatre are fixed by the parties, either in writing or through a committee, or through arbitration, or upon the happening of any event or in any manner or by any means."

2. The Court erred in failing to conclude that a distributor-defendant has a lawful right under the Copyright Law and under the common law to agree with its licensee that the latter shall charge a price not less than that specified in the license agreement during the exhibition of the feature licensed, and erred in failing to permit a distributor-defendant to make such provisions in its license agreements with each licensee with whom it does business.

3. The Court erred in making its Finding of Fact No. 64 reading as follows:

"64. The defendants' licenses are in effect price-fixing arrangements among all of the distributor-defendants, as well as between such defendants individually and their various exhibitors. Thus there was a general arrangement of fixing prices in which both the distributors and exhibitors were involved. The licenses required existing admission price schedules to be maintained under severe penalties for infraction. In the case of such exceptional features as "Gone With the Wind," "For Whom the Bell Tolls," "Wilson," and "Song of Bernadette," licensed for exhibition prior to general release and as to which the distributors were not satisfied with current prices, they would refuse to grant licenses unless the prices were raised."

4. The Court erred in making its Finding of Fact No. 65 reading as follows:

"65. The defendants granting film licenses have agreed with their licensees to a system which determines minimum admission prices in all theatres where feature motion pictures licensed by them are exhibited. In this way are controlled the prices to be charged for most of the feature motion pictures exhibited either by the defendants or by independents within the United States."

5. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 66 in finding that these defendants or any of them have a definite interest in keeping up prices in any given territory in which they own theatres, and in finding that they or any of them safeguarded this interest by fixing minimum admission prices in their respective licenses when distributing films to exhibitors in those areas.

6. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 66 in finding that there was a system which presupposed a fixing of prices by all parties concerned in all competitive areas.

7. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 67 in finding that the agreements therein mentioned showed the intent of the defendants, who were parties thereto, to maintain admission prices at artificial levels.

8. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 69 in finding that RKO, Loew's, Warner, Paramount and Fox, in granting and accepting licenses with minimum admission prices specified therein, have among themselves engaged in a national system to fix prices, and in finding that Columbia, Universal, and United Artists have participated in that system.

9. The Court erred in making its Finding of Fact No. 70 reading as follows:

"70. The distributor-defendants have acquiesced in the establishment of a price-fixing system and have conspired with one another to maintain prices."

10. The Court erred in making its Finding of Fact No. 71 reading as follows:

"71. In agreeing to maintain a stipulated minimum admission price, each exhibitor thereby consents to the minimum price level at which it will compete against other licensees of the same distributor whether they exhibit on the same run or not. The total effect is that through the separate contracts between the distributor and its licensees a price structure is erected which regulates the licensees' ability to compete against one another in admission prices. Each licensee knows from the general uniformity of admission price practices that other licensees having theatres suitable for exhibition of a distributor's feature in the particular competitive area will also be restricted as to maintenance of minimum admission prices, and this acquiescence of the exhibitors in the distributor's control of price competition renders the whole a conspiracy between each distributor and its licensees. An effective system of price control in which the distributor and its licensees knowingly take part by entering into price-restricting contracts is thereby erected."

11. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 72 in finding that the differentials in admission prices appearing in licenses of a particular feature in theatres exhibiting on different runs in the same competitive area were calculated or intended by the distributor-defendants, or any of them, to give prior run exhibitors as near a monopoly of the patronage as possible.

12. The Court erred in its Conclusion of Law No. 7 (a) in concluding that the defendants therein named, or any of them, have violated the Act of Congress approved July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. 209; 15 U.S.C.), as amended; herein referred to as the Sherman Act, as stated in said conclusion of law, by:

CITE 39 ERRORS BY COURT

"Acquiescing in the establishment of a price fixing system by conspiring with one another to maintain theatre admission prices."

13. The Court erred in its Conclusions of Law No. 8(a) and No. 8(b) in concluding that the defendants therein named, or any of them, have violated the Sherman Act, as stated in said conclusions of law, by:

"(a) Conspiring with each other to maintain a nationwide system of fixed minimum motion picture theatre admission prices;

(b) Agreeing individually with their respective licensees to fix minimum motion picture theatre admission prices."

14. The Court erred in failing to conclude that a distributor-defendant had a lawful right under the Copyright Law and under the common law to agree with its licensee that the latter shall charge an admission price not less than that specified in the license agreement during the exhibition of the feature as a road-show.

15. The Court erred in making its Finding of Fact No. 79 reading as follows:

"79. The major defendants have acquiesced in and forwarded a uniform system of clearances and in numerous instances have maintained unreasonable clearances to the prejudice of independents."

16. The Court erred in making its Finding of Fact No. 81 reading as follows:

"81. The distributor-defendants have acted in concert with the formation of a uniform system of clearance for the theatres to which they license their films and the exhibitor-defendants have assisted in creating and have acquiesced in this system."

17. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 82 in finding defendants or any of them "acted in concert in their grant of run and clearance."

18. The Court erred in Section II, Paragraph 2 of the Decree in enjoining each of the distributor-defendants "from agreeing with each other or with any exhibitors or distributors to maintain a system of clearances."

19. The Court erred in Section II, Paragraph 4 of the Decree in decreeing that

"Whenever any clearance provision is attacked as not legal under the provisions of this decree, the burden shall be upon the distributor to sustain the legality thereof."

20. The Court erred in making its Finding of Fact No. 84 reading as follows:

"84. Both independent distributors and exhibitors, when attempting to bargain with the defendants, have been met by a fixed scale of clearances, runs, and admission prices to which they have been obliged to conform if they wished to get their pictures shown upon satisfactory runs or were to compete in exhibition either with the defendants' theatre or theatres to which the latter had licensed their pictures."

21. The Court erred in its Conclusions of Law No. 7(b) and No. 8(c) in concluding that the defendants, or any of them, have violated the Sherman Act, as stated in said conclusions of law, by conspiring with each other to maintain a nation-wide system of runs and clearances which is substantially uniform in or as to each local competitive area.

22. The Court erred in its Conclusions of Law No. 9(c) and No. 9(d) in concluding that the exhibitor-defendants, or any of them, have violated the Sherman Act, as stated in said conclusions of law, by:

"(c) Conspiring with each other and with the distributor-defendants to fix substantially uniform minimum motion picture theatre admission prices, runs and clearances:

(d) Conspiring with the distributor-defendants to discriminate against independent competitors in fixing minimum admission prices, run, clearance and other license terms."

23. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 110 to the extent that it found that these defendants or any of them have discriminated against small independent exhibitors in favor of large affiliated and unaffiliated circuits.

24. The Court erred in its Conclusion of Law No. 8(d) in concluding that the distributor-defendants, or any of them, have violated the Sherman Act, as stated in said conclusion of law, by:

"Agreeing individually with their respective licensees to grant discriminatory license privileges to theatres affiliated with other defendants and with large circuits as found in finding No. 110."

25. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 115 in finding that the joint interests therein referred to between an exhibitor-defendant in conjunction with independent exhibitors enabled the parties to operate theatres collectively rather than competitively.

26. The Court erred in its Finding of Fact No. 116 in finding that when theatres are jointly owned by a major defendant and an independent exhibitor it is evident that both joint owners wish to participate and are directly or indirectly participating in the business of exhibiting motion pictures and that the defendant thereby eliminates putative competition between itself and the other joint owner who otherwise would be in a position to operate theatres independently.

27. The Court erred in its Conclusions of Law No. 9(a) and No. 9(b) in concluding that the exhibitor-defendants therein named, or any of them, have violated the Sherman Act, as stated in said conclusions of law, by:

"(a) Jointly operating motion picture theatres with each other and with independents through operating agreements or profit-sharing leases;

(b) Jointly owning motion picture theatres with each other and with independents through stock interests in theatre buildings."

28. The Court erred in Section III, Paragraph (2) of the Decree in enjoining the exhibitor-defendants, or any of them, from continuing to perform existing agreements, therein referred to, with exhibitors not defendants herein.

29. The Court erred in Section III, Paragraph (5) of the Decree in enjoining the defendants or any of them

"From continuing to own or acquiring any beneficial interest in any theatre, whether in fee or shares of stock or otherwise, * * * in conjunction with an independent [meaning any former, present or putative motion picture theatre operator which is not owned or controlled by the defendant holding the interest in question,] where such interest shall be greater than five per cent unless such interest shall be ninety-five per cent or more."

30. The Court erred in Section III, Paragraph (6) of the Decree in enjoining the defendants therein named, or any of them, from expanding their present theatre holdings in any manner whatsoever except as permitted in Section III, Paragraph 5 of the decree.

31. The Court erred in denying Paragraph I of these defendants' motions to amend and modify the decree so as to make Paragraph (6) of Section III thereof read as follows:

"From expanding its present theatre holdings in any manner whatsoever, except as permitted in the preceding paragraph; or except for the purpose of acquiring theatres or interests therein in order to protect its investments, or in order to enter a competitive field, if such defendant shall show to the satisfaction of the Court, and the Court shall first find, that such acquisition will not unduly restrain competition in the exhibition of feature motion pictures. Reasonable notice of the intention to make any such acquisition shall be served upon the Attorney General and the plaintiff shall be given an opportunity to be heard with respect thereto before any such acquisition shall be approved by the Court."

32. The Court erred in denying Paragraph (4) of the motion of these defendants to amend and modify Conclusion of Law 9(d) to read as follows:

"Conspiring with the distributor defendants to receive discriminatory license privileges as found in Finding No. 110 above."

33. The Court erred in not decreeing that any defendant might apply to the Court for permission to retain a given partial interest in a theatre or group of theatres upon a showing to and finding by the Court that the particular relationship did not or would not unreasonably restrain competition.

34. The Court erred in decreeing in Section V of the Decree that the Consent Decree entered November 20, 1940, should be of no further force or effect, except insofar as it might be necessary to conclude arbitration proceedings now pending, and to liquidate in an orderly manner the financial obligations of the defendants and the American Arbitration Association, and in failing to permit the said Consent Decree to remain in effect as a final determination between the plaintiff and the defendants as to the matters therein set forth.

35. The Court erred in failing to decree that disputes between one or more of these defendants and exhibitors arising under the Decree should be determined by arbitration under the Rules of Arbitration provided for in the Consent Decree, as the same might be modified by the order of the Court from time to time.

36. The Court erred in denying and in failing to grant the motions made by the defendants and each of them to dismiss the petition and amended and supplemental complaint and to strike exhibits and evidence upon the grounds set forth in their respective motions appearing at pages 383-4, 503-526 and 2501 of the Record.

37. The Court erred in so much of Finding of Fact No. 154 as states that there were illegalities and restraints.

38. The Court erred in finding and concluding that these defendants or any of them have violated the Sherman Act in the respects herein assigned as error.

39. The Court erred in making and entering so much of the Decree as is herein appealed from.

UNIVERSAL AND UA ATTACK SINGLE SALES AND BIDDING

Separate Appeals by Little Three Plead Innocence of "Conspiracy" Charge

The appeals of United Artists and Universal, filed in the New York Federal District Court February 20, both center about a "not guilty" plea of conspiracy with the other defendants. Universal sought exemption from the decree on the grounds that it was not in a position at any time to curtail or control the film market. United Artists sought to set itself apart from other defendants by pointing out that it is merely a distributing company and that approval of its exhibition contracts must come from the producers of the company's pictures.

Says Exhibitor Fixes Own Admission Price

UA, which claimed 80 errors in the decree, findings of fact and conclusions of law, appealed provisions on single sales, competitive bidding, the prohibition of price fixing, the placing of the burden of proving the legality of clearance on the distributor, clearance between theatres not in substantial competition, and the injunctions against franchise agreements, formula deals, master agreements and the arbitrary refusal of some runs.

The company raised six major questions in its appeal.

On the ban of price fixing, UA charges that there is "undisputed evidence" that the exhibitor determines the actual admission price charged at his theatre and that "no inference should have been drawn that the stipulation of a minimum admission price in a license agreement made the defendants guilty of a conspiracy to fix theatre admission prices"

The company claimed the court "has deprived the appellant of well-established property rights as well as rights conferred by the Copyright Law" in enjoining the making and performance of such licenses.

Holds Only Legislation Can Order Bidding

On the matter of clearances, UA submitted that placing the burden of proving upon the one who alleges is the fundamental rule of law, rather, as the court would have it, placing the burden of proving upon the distributor.

On the prohibition of franchises, UA insists that franchises insured "the independent exhibitor product for this theatre, did not restrain trade and provided the non-theatre-owning defendants additional outlets for their product."

UA held that a competitive bidding order should originate from legislation rather than from the courts. It supported this state-

FORUM POSTPONED UNTIL DECISION

That exhibitor free-for-all, at which the nation's exhibitors, individually and representing any and all organizations, were to talk it over, during a period in which basic practices of the film industry are being questioned and overthrown and new ones being tried, has been cancelled. Wednesday, Fred Wehrenberg, sponsor of the scheduled Motion Picture Forum, March 10 and 11, at the Hotel Atsor, New York, said in St. Louis that incomplete response to his invitations made a forum at this time impractical.

After the United States Supreme Court has ruled on appeals in the U. S. anti-trust suit, another attempt will be made to hold a forum, he indicated.

Allied States Association and the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners declined to attend the New York forum. The Conference of Independent Exhibitor Associations had not replied.

ment by contending that "the Sherman Act provides for injunctions against acts found unlawful; it does not authorize the court to prescribe affirmative way of doing business."

The UA appeal was prepared by the law firm of O'Brien, Driscoll, Raftery and Lawler.

The Universal appeal, filed by Thomas T. Cooke, attorney for the company, attacked all the major provisions of the decree. It attacked the decree in finding that Universal conspired with other defendants to fix and maintain minimum admission prices; in finding that, in the case of exceptional features, it refused to grant licenses unless the exhibitors raised their admission prices; in finding that the company commonly specified clearances in terms of clearances fixed by other distributors, and in finding that Universal acted in concert with other defendants in the grants of runs.

Attack Prohibition on Franchise Agreements

The company further attacked the decree's provisions outlawing master agreements and franchises. This was one of the major issues of Mr. Cooke's arguments during the period when the case was being heard. He maintains that Universal's franchises with independent exhibitors were not an issue in the case.

The court erred, Universal maintains, in failing to find that the company, as a producer and distributor without theatres, would have no reliable market for the great majority of its pictures.

Competitive bidding was also condemned by the company.

In a supplemental "Statement as to Jurisdiction," Universal contended that clearance and run are not matters "upon which a non-theatre-owning defendant, distributing an insignificant portion of the best-drawing pictures could have any substantial influence."

"Whether or not there was a conspiracy among the theatre-owning distributors," the statement continued, "the similarity of Universal's action, in respect of admission prices, runs, and clearances, to that of the other defendant distributors, was not a proper basis upon which to hold it (in violation of the Sherman Act)."

Kirsch Re-Named Head Of Illinois Allied

Jack Kirsch won re-election as president of Illinois Allied for a three-year term and two of the organization's heads were re-elected for one-year terms early this week. A 15-men board of directors also was named.

Those who won re-election besides Mr. Kirsch were Van A. Nomikos, vice-president, and Ben Banowitz, secretary-treasurer. Harry Nepo again was chosen sergeant-at-arms.

The board of directors includes Lou H. Harrison, Arthur Davidson, James Gregory, Verne Lagdon, Sinuel Roberts, Richard Salkin, John Semadales, Charles Nelson, Jack Rose, Harold Gollos, B. Charuhas, Joseph Stern, Howard Lubliner, Al Bartelstein, and Ulidwig Sussman. Mr. Kirsch plans to leave for a month's vacation in Florida next week.

Films' Contribution to Brotherhood Praised

Other mediums were excellent, but "nothing compares with what was done by the film industry" for the recent American Brotherhood drive, Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, told an amusement division report-luncheon Wednesday, at the Hotel Astor, New York.

Spyros P. Skouras, chairman of the film division, told division members he would be pleased to head next year's campaign. Mr. Skouras is president of Twentieth Century-Fox.

Reports on the industry campaign were given by David Weinstock, Roger Ferri, Robert W. Coyne, Tom Connors, Rodney Smith and others.

U. S. CALLS DECREE ILLEGAL; DEMANDS "ADEQUATE RELIEF"

Appeal Brief Cites List of 25 Errors in Decision; Insists on Divorcement

A basic and detailed attack on almost every provision of the final decree handed down December 31 by the New York Federal District Court in the Government's trust suit was made Feb. 21 by the Department of Justice when it filed its appeal from that decree in New York.

The appeal contained a 17-page commentary, signed by George T. Washington, Acting Solicitor General, supplemented by a 25-point Assignment of Errors.

Together they reiterated the Government's contention that complete divorcement of theatre interests is the only practicable remedy in the U. S. versus Paramount, et al, suit; and that the court erred when it decided that divorcement at this time was not in the public interest.

They hit at competitive bidding, characterized by the Department as merely regulating "the exercise of the major defendants' power to dominate the domestic motion picture industry."

They attacked the clearance system.

They protested the failure of the court to prohibit absolutely any further acquisition of theatre interests.

They protested that the decree does nothing to "disturb the continuance of the defendants' domination of exhibition."

They found that the court had virtually conceded its inability to regulate effectively the "illegal power found in the possession of the defendants."

Competitive bidding was hit on a number of points. It was characterized as "unenforceable." And even if it were enforceable why did the New York court not decree that competitive bidding be conducted on a flat rental basis? The court erred in that respect, says the Department. And why was not a ban on cross licensing decreed? The court erred again, it said.

The Government, it is reported, will not seek a stay of the competitive bidding system until the Supreme Court takes final action on the case.

Basic Issue of Appeal Is "Judicial Power"

The basic issue of the appeal, according to the Department, "is one of judicial power rather than the mere exercise of judicial discretion."

"If," the Government stated, "the court is right in its assumption that the untried and unenforceable competitive bidding relief is an adequate substitute for the traditional divestiture relief and complete prohibition of future agreement among the guilty defendants—traditionally applied in situations of this character—then a proceeding under Section Four of the Sherman Act has become an instrument for protecting an established monopoly from either effective judicial or legislative correction."

"We submit," the appeal concluded, "that the court's assumption is untenable and that reversal of its decision is required not only to secure adequate relief, but to maintain the validity of the equity suit as a mechanism of Sherman Act enforcement."

The Government's appeal presents four main questions. As listed by the Department, they are:

1. "Accepting the expediting court's findings as to the extent and nature of the violations involved in their entirety, it erred as a matter of law in failing to enter a judgment which dealt adequately with these violations.

2. "The court erred as a matter of law in concluding that the major defendants had not actually achieved a monopoly in exhibition, either singly or collectively, and that all of the defendants had not actually collectively achieved a monopoly of distribution, in violation of Section Two of the Sherman Act.

3. "The court erred as a matter of law in concluding that any of the defendants may make a valid clearance agreement for the purpose of protecting any exhibitor from competition.

4. "The court, upon proper findings as to the legal consequences of the defendants' violations, should have ordered the ultimate divorcement of the major defendants' theatre holdings from their distribution and production activities and should have restrained them from licensing films for exhibition in each other's theatres while such relief is being effectuated. It should also have enjoined all of the defendants from continuing to make clearance agreements."

The Government stated that the New York District Court "exceeded the limits of its discretion" when it rejected theatre divorcement in favor of competitive bidding.

Yet at the same time the Department concluded that the matter of divorcement might be a matter for Congress rather than the courts. Picking up the New York court's conclusion that divorcement would hurt the defendants and the public, the Department contended that "there is no evidence whatsoever that the theatre-going public would suffer hardship of any kind from a change of ownership or management of theatres now owned or managed by the major defendants."

And then it went on: "Any conclusion as to the public desirability of avoiding such private injury as may result from relief necessary to achieve the objective of the Sherman Act appears to be for Congress rather than the courts. A specific legislative authorization would seem essential to substitute for dissolution of a monopoly which violates the Act mere regulation of its business practices."

The court's recommendation for an adoption of an arbitration system was interpreted by the government as an indication of "the inability of a court to regulate effectively in the public interest the illegal power found in the possession of the defendants. . . . It (the court) apparently recognized an inherent lack of power to establish and maintain a mechanism not approved by the defendants when it conditioned the incorporation of such a system (of arbitration) in its decree upon the consent of the parties. The fact that the Government and the defendants were unable to agree upon arbitration machinery . . . should have compelled the court to revise its relief in terms of prohibitions enforceable by contempt."

Defendants' Domination Not Curtailed, Appeal Says

The appeal stressed that nothing had been done to curtail the major defendants' domination of exhibition. The Government claims the majors dominate in all but four of the 92 cities in the U. S. with populations of more than 100,000 and in the great majority of those over 25,000.

"The decree concededly does nothing to disturb the continuance of this dominance," the Government stated, "because the opinion did not find it to be unlawful, despite the fact that it had been acquired and maintained by unlawful means."

The full list of the 25 points in the Assignment of Errors follows:

1. The court erred in concluding that the relief granted was adequate to prevent the guilty defendants from unreasonably restraining competition in the motion picture business in the future.

2. In concluding that the major defendants had not actually achieved a monopoly in exhibition either singly or collectively.

3. In not concluding that the defendants had actually achieved a collective monopoly of distribution.

4. In failing to prohibit the guilty defendants from making clearance agreements in the future.

5. In failing to prohibit the continued use by the major defendants of each other's theatres as exhibition outlets for each other's films.

6. In failing to order ultimate divorcement of the distribution and production businesses of the major defendants from their theatre operations.

7. In failing to require the major defendants to divest themselves of all their theatre holdings.

8. In failing to prohibit absolutely any further acquisition of theatre interests by the major defendants.

9. In failing to prohibit the major defendants from continuing to exhibit their own films in their own theatres upon terms which discriminate against their competitors.

10. In decreeing competitive bidding as appropriate relief in situations where the defendants' theatres were in competition with independent theatres.

11. In failing to require that all competitive bids be stated in terms of flat rental.

12. In concluding that none of the defendants had attempted to monopolize or conspired to monopolize or restrain trade in the business of producing motion pictures.

13. In concluding that the factor of print cost would confine exhibition to high-priced theatres unless a system of successive runs protected by clearance is employed.

14. In concluding that a grant of clearance when not accompanied by a fixing of admission prices or by an undue extension as to area or duration affords a fair protection to the licensee without unreasonably interfering with the public interest.

15. In concluding that the fixing of clearance in license contracts or by other agreements is essential to the reasonable conduct of the motion picture business.

16. In concluding that competition can be introduced into the present system of fixing admission prices, clearances, and runs by requiring a defendant-distrib-

END OF DECREE SUIT IN 1948 — MAYBE

Although the Government's anti-trust suit will not last forever, Robert L. Wright, counsel for the Government, estimates that the suit will not be argued before the Supreme Court until October or November. Proceeding from that guess, it is estimated that the high court will not hand down a decision until sometime in 1948. And even then the defendants have the right to appeal for a re-hearing after the first decision and that would drag the case out for another 60 days after the final decree is handed down. Completion of the case probably will not come until June, 1948, Government officials believe. And then will come a new problem. Who will be in charge of the eventual policing of the final decree? The Department of Justice's anti-trust department believes that it will. In Washington, last weekend, Mr. Wright asserted that he thought enforcement in any anti-trust litigation was ultimately left to the anti-trust division. But right now there is considerable discussion about special arbitration boards and a unit of the Federal Trade Commission being empowered to do the enforcing.

utor, when licensing its features, to grant the license for each run at a reasonable clearance (if clearance is involved) to the highest bidder.

17. In concluding that the percentage of features on the market which any of the five major defendants might play in its own theatres would be so small as in no wise to approximate a monopoly of film exhibition.

18. In concluding that the competitive bidding decreed would make it impossible for the defendants to discriminate unreasonably in favor of circuit theatres and against independents.

19. In concluding that a defendant's interest of five per cent or less of a theatre investment in which others were also interested was de minimis and only to be treated as an inconsequential investment in exhibition.

20. In concluding that the defendants' theatre holdings are not large enough to permit them, individually or collectively, to have a monopoly of exhibition.

21. In concluding that there was or would be under its decree adequate competition between theatres operated by the major defendants in any city.

22. In concluding that certain theatres which had used the product of more than one distributor in the past could not operate on the product of one distributor in the future.

23. In concluding that the illegalities and restraints found to exist in the industry did not lie in or result from the ownership of theatres by the major defendants.

24. In concluding that total theatre divestiture would be injurious to the corporations concerned and would be damaging to the public.

25. In concluding that such divestiture would not remedy the illegal practices found by it which had unreasonably restricted competition in the industry.

Harold Lasser, special attorney for the Government, filed the appeal for the Department.

School Groups Hit Gang Films

from San Francisco

Protest by the Parent-Teachers Associations and educational groups against gangster and crime pictures is causing considerable concern among theatre managers who are endeavoring to pacify the club members and educators.

The Alameda County Federation of Women's Clubs presented a resolution to their members linking the rise in juvenile delinquency to the numerous crime pictures being shown. The resolution stated that while theatres should not have to shoulder the responsibility for young people seeing this type of film, theatres should not book so many thrillers and should, instead, show more "family" type pictures.

There was further agitation in nearby Sunnyvale where the local PTA circulated a petition signed by hundreds of parents who protested the horror pictures shown at Saturday children's matinees. The PTA stated that double bills were another grievance and that the serialized "thrillers" were psychologically harmful to children.

In Campbell, similar trouble arose. PTA groups demanded better billing of Saturday matinee shows and elimination of the gangster and horror films.

In an effort to correct motion picture programs, the San Jose school district will play host to a California Youth Authority Conference beginning March 8 when a day will be devoted to a panel discussion of "movies and Recreation." Principals of various high schools and junior high schools, representatives of the State Department of Education, PTA representatives, and Mrs. Hulda McGinn, Community Service and Legislative director for the California Theatres Association, will participate.

ON THE MARCH

by RED KANN

Ralph H. Clark PRC General Sales Manager

THE hue and cry about product shortages has been ringing throughout the land. It is Allied which has been responsible largely, for focalizing attacks on distributors, putting forth the claim this is part of a conscious move to rig the market artificially. This attitude overrides the fact that distributors, as agents for the producers, surely retain the privilege of selling what they want when they want although it is true likewise that the stake of the subsequent-run exhibitor, who consumes product in large gobs, is not to be ignored.

However, Allied's campaign for a greater and more regular flow of new product appears to be heading toward success, but not because of the noise and the fury. The reason is something else entirely and bears on changes in the market itself. These are the shifts inevitable in the post-war period, discussed and anticipated while the fighting was on and, therefore, actually a surprise to no one.

You will recall, no doubt, how widely it was accepted as a fact to be met that the gradual return of consumer's durable goods—automobiles, refrigerators, radios, washing machines, etc., etc.—would absorb a substantial portion of the public's buying power. It has happened, of course, and it will continue to happen in accelerating volume until show room and store shelf fill the demand.

All this provides an avenue of buying which was denied during the war. As that avenue began to widen, it restored part of the mobility to a public which had been immobilized. People are able to go places, and are going. Important in this cursory examination of the economic scene is the rise in the cost of living and its effect on budgets which so generously had been earmarked for entertainment.

THEREFORE, the analysis of things-to-come, once hostilities ceased, was safest when it allowed for a sharpening in audience appraisal of the product. It was to be expected the slap-happy era of "anything goes" would end and that, for one reason or another including those already outlined, the public once more would become as discriminating as it used to be, and perhaps more so. Consequently, it is logical for the measure of extended first runs to be gauged more by merit than by need; that, in the overall, long run first runs no longer would be quite so long.

This is taking place. Not headlong, but gradually. It means the theatre which got along with eight to 12 attractions a year will require a dozen to 18, these statistics being general and not specific. Specific, however, is a Minneapolis straw in the wind. The Minnesota Amusement Co. there has swung over to a policy of shorter runs at Radio City, its 4,000-seat downtown show-window. It means the return of stern, competitive conditions with which the sales manager must re-acquaint himself after a four-year absence.

But it means more. No distributor can be expected to walk away from playing time made available to him by changing conditions. Nor will he willingly stand by for a competitor to capture playdates which might be his if he had the product to offer.

Despite today's state of affairs, it should precipitate no upheaval to find this emerging:

1.—An unlatching of product reserves by consistent—and regular—dips into backlogs.

2.—An increase in production as a more favorable labor situation in Hollywood indicates will be possible shortly. The increase to come about through larger schedules by the majors or production deals engineered by them with Hollywood creators always aflame to set themselves up in business. Or a combination of both.

It can happen in 1947.

There was a fuss over "The Grapes of Wrath" this week. City fathers of Oslo prohibited the film because American distributors demanded a beginning explaining the plight of the Okies of the picture had resulted from natural disasters and trailing economic factors and an ending pointing out things were better here now since the authorities took action.

It is not clear why the authorities acted unless it was insistence the film be shown as produced and made available in Norway. But it is not clear why the distributors did their insisting, either. If they were fearful a wrong impression of America might be created, the film should never have been earmarked for the Norwegian public. A good place to begin is at the beginning.

REVERSE NOTE ON A FREE MARKET: The Producers' Association in England and the Association of Kine Technicians there have reached agreement that five foreign directors and five foreign producers—no more—will be permitted to work in British studios during 1947.

Thus, no matter how ambitious the American industry may get about production in London, it will be permitted to go this far, and not beyond.

For the rest of the obvious picture, compare with Hollywood where major studios keep the door open for the best, and the most, they can find regardless of geography.

The appointment of Ralph H. Clark as general sales manager of Producers Releasing Corporation was announced Wednesday by Harry H. Thomas, president.

Ralph H. Clark

Mr. Clark, veteran theatre and circuit operator as well as domestic and international sales executive, assumes his new duties March 3. He entered the industry with the Turner and Dahnken Circuit in California and in 1917 became its general manager, representing the circuit's interest in First National. He left that post in 1921 to open his own theatres in New York and New Jersey. In 1927 he joined Warner Bros., as general sales manager for the Far East, Australia and New Zealand. He joined International Pictures in 1945.

In announcing the appointment, Mr. Thomas said in part: "We are indeed fortunate in being able to get Ralph Clark on our team. . . . He is well able to assume the responsibility for sales and exchange operations for the company and to relieve me of the burdens of the distribution end of our business. . . ."

At the same time he also disclosed that Lloyd L. Lind, vice-president and assistant general sales manager of PRC since 1945, had been named president of Pictorial Films, Inc., Pathe Industries' 16mm distribution outlet.

Mr. Lind will take over his new duties as president of Pictorial Films within a week. His appointment is in line with the expansion program to be undertaken by the narrow-gauge distributing company which up to now has limited itself to PRC releases and a few independent productions. Eagle-Lion films now will become available to Pictorial and it is expected that the company will begin to seriously entrench itself in Latin America and the Far East. The new program also provides for the integration of 16mm films into the PRC exchange system throughout the U. S.

Coast-to-Coast Television Seen a Few Years Away

The extension of the present regional television network to include a station in Baltimore and several in New England was forecast by Niles Trammell, president of National Broadcasting Company in an address at the 25th anniversary dinner of WGY in Schenectady, N. Y., last week. He foresaw other regional networks soon.

BRITISH CRISIS CUTS PRINT SUPPLY FOR REST OF YEAR

Power Shortage Hits Lab Output, Production and Exhibition Equally

by PETER BURNUP
in London

There is no shadow of a doubt that film programs this side will be affected throughout the present year because of the continuing coal and power shortages. The effect will be evident no matter how soon the Government lifts its present restrictions. It is reliably estimated that only 70 per cent of the normal year's supply of prints will be available for the remainder of 1947.

Production has been hurt, raw stock manufacturers are close to closing, laboratories are in an equally sorry state, theatres cannot open before 4 P.M. each day.

All-Industry Committee Given Plenary Powers

Full appreciation of the grave circumstances came to the trade at large only when the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association convened its all-industry meeting on Thursday last and appointed a committee given plenary powers which practically amount to despot control of the industry for the time being.

At a Monday meeting, the committee was shown evidence that printing is assured for three weeks, but is doubtful for a fourth week.

The committee has two lines of approach. It will bring every possible pressure to bear on the Government—inside and out of Parliament—to allow special fuel priorities to the laboratories and raw stock makers. It will also, in conjunction with the Kinematograph Renters Society, produce a revised release schedule which, it is hoped, will be met by a pooling of all printing resources.

Exhibitors Face Reduction in Available Releases

The latter proposal, at the best, will result in a radical reduction of releases on offer to exhibitors with a consequent considerable adjustment in distributor-exhibitor contracts. But all parties are agreed that in the present time of crisis revolutionary amendments of practice are needed if theatres are to be kept open. Feature release printing will have top priority. It is likely that, for the time being, printing of newsreels, shorts, trailers, and production rushes will cease completely.

Crucial flash-point for the industry here will occur four or five weeks hence, unless the Government heeds the fervent and pronounced warnings already given it.

Drastic overhauls of program arrangements are, as noted, now in process. But, without Governmental aid, it may well be

BRITISH FILM REMITTANCE COMPARATIVELY SMALL

Britain's import program for 1947 includes net film remittances of £18,000,000 ($72,000,000), the Reuters news agency reported from London Monday. Other items include tobacco, £50,000,000; petroleum production, £55,000,000; machinery and equipment (including ships), £60,000,000. The two largest items are £725,000,000 for food and supplies for agriculture and £525,000,000 for raw materials and supplies for industry. Only £35,000,000 is provided for consumer goods. The total imports program amounts to £1,450,000,000.

that many theatres will be compelled to close for the sole reason that distributors no longer will be able to service them with films.

Conditions at this reporting are:

Motion picture theatres, so far as electric power and light are concerned, fall into the category of "domestic and non-industrial users." They are forbidden to open to the public until 4 P.M. Moreover, the use of power for such ancillary purposes as electrically-operated curtains or the illumination of advertising displays is forbidden.

Theatres in Midlands Get No Electricity Priorities

Electricity for industrial purposes was to be restored in the Midlands area Monday, but restrictions will continue on "domestic and non-industrial users." Midlands theatres, accordingly, will continue to operate, for the period of the emergency, on conditions similar to those obtaining in other parts of the country.

Studios, raw stock manufacturing plants and processing laboratories are all located in and around London, in what is known as the Southeastern region. It is extremely uncertain when the Government will allow electricity to be switched on in this area.

All studios are carrying on with production; three of them, Denham, Pinewood and Ealing, with their own self-generating plants, the others with specially hired generators. But all production executives report that work is falling behind schedule.

In regard to raw stock manufacturers, Eastman Kodak, which normally handles 80 per cent of the output, has been closed down for two weeks. Ilford is unable to produce negative stock due to lack of fuel. They have small supplies of material to meet their regular "positive" customers' demands, but say that without early fuel priority, all work in the plant shortly will be brought to an end.

Laboratories are in a bad state. The largest plant, George Humphries, is closed down completely. The aggregate output of the laboratories is, at the moment, 40 per cent of normal. But continuance of output at this standard depends on the maintenance of the Diesel oil supply, now rapidly diminishing.

Only Three to Four Weeks Stock Supply Available

Close examination of stock resources reveal that present theatre operations can only continue for a further three to four weeks unless Government fuel priorities are issued to raw stock manufacturers and laboratory printers, or, alternatively, program arrangements are drastically revised.

Interviews between the all-industry committee and Government officials already have occurred, with the former pressing the view that the maintenance of motion pictures should be regarded as an emergency operation. To date, there is no evidence of any relaxation of the official attitude.

Heartening circumstance throughout the period of crisis has been the sturdy fashion in which motion picture securities maintained their stability on the London Stock Exchange. British industrial price-indices showed in many instances high-calamitous falls. Inevitably, motion picture stocks reacted to the general movement, but to nothing like the same degree.

Extravagant estimates have been published in the newspapers of box office losses in these melancholy two weeks. By and large they are unrelated to reality. Analysis undertaken by this bureau shows that theatre attendances have been regulated strictly by local conditions. Computation reveals that throughout the 14 days the country's box office has fallen some 12 to 15 per cent.

Top Pictures Draw Well Despite Storm's Wrath

One odd characteristic appears in the attendance graph. People, it is clear, have been shopping for the better attractions. Crowded evening houses have been the rule for pictures like "Notorious" and "Odd Man Out," even in the midst of the blizzard's wrath. However, certain less meritorious films have died like dogs in the snow.

The industry's trades unions have fallen decently into line in the emergency. On the second day of the crisis, Tom O'Brien, intransigent general secretary of the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, sent out peremptory instructions to all his union's local branches that the brethren should do all they could to help the show go on. Union members have rallied around. It's a gesture much appreciated and one which will not soon be forgotten.

PARAMOUNT CUTS BROADWAY PRICES

Theatre's Decision Based on Indication Public Is Shopping for Bargains

A general reduction in admission prices at the Paramount theatre on Times Square, New York, became effective Wednesday morning as a result of a public opinion survey which demonstrated that the public was shopping for bargains in entertainment, Robert M. Weitman, managing director of the theatre, announced Sunday.

Under the new policy the weekday opening price has been reduced from 70 to 55 cents; the Saturday opening price from 85 cents to 70 cents, and its Sunday opening price from $1.30 to $1.25, all tax included.

Reduce Night Prices

Afternoon prices are 90 cents from 1 to 6 P. M., Mondays through Fridays; 95 cents from noon to 1 P. M. Saturdays; $1.25 from 1 to 5 P. M. Saturdays.

Night prices during the week and Saturdays have been reduced 10 cents, to $1.20 and $1.50, respectively. The Saturday schedule will apply on holidays. Sunday prices will be $1.25 from opening to 1 P. M., then $1.50 to the close of the last stage show.

To announce the price reduction to the public the Paramount ran full page advertisements in New York's tabloid-size newspapers and half-page ads in standard size dailies Monday evening and Tuesday morning. [See cut on next column.]

While other Broadway motion picture theatres said they planned no immediate price reductions, the Paramount management said it had found recent business disappointing and admitted its action was prompted by the hope of bringing patrons to the theatre in greater numbers.

Hopes to Bring Crowds Back

"We firmly believe our new price policy will bring back to Times Square and Forty-third Street the long lines of moviegoers who used to pack the early Paramount shows but have been dwindling for some months," Mr. Weitman said.

He added that bobby soxers and other early patrons had been staying away because prices were too high for family incomes that had shrunk since the war.

Mr. Weitman pointed out that a six-month study of attendance at the Paramount, other Broadway theatres, cabarets and night clubs indicated that the free spending of the war years had seriously dwindled in recent months.

"In the boom period when the madness was with us a good average show would pack them in," he said, "now only a smash hit will do it."

women shoppers, the salesmen and the band fans, to the morning shows especially. Our shows and pictures are just as good or better, but family incomes are less," Mr. Weitman added. "People shop around for amusement. Night attendance during the week, and especially Friday night, all day Saturday and Sunday, continues to be very good," he pointed out.

"But those who go at night have money to spend. We are out to bring back the bread-and-butter trade, the movie fans who are the common denominator of the business."

A substantial slash for all admissions could not be made because of the continued high operating costs of the theatre which threaten to go even higher, Mr. Weitman said.

To inaugurate the new admission policy the Paramount presented Paulette Goddard and Fred MacMurray in "Suddenly It's Spring" on the screen and a stage show featuring Johnny Long and his orchestra.

Prices Up in Chicago

Last week it was reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD that all Loop theatres in Chicago have been gradually increasing admission prices until today they are at the highest peak in the history of Chicago film exhibition.

A study disclosed that the increase had taken effect for the most part in the daytime admission prices. Indicative of the trend the report said that a few months ago adult admission prices at Balaban and Katz theatres during the morning were 35 cents, with 65-cent prices going into effect at noon or shortly thereafter. Today the 55 and 65 cent admission prices have been eliminated.

"THE MOVIES AS ENTERTAINMENT"

A brochure presenting an address by Martin Quigley at the Boston Institute for Religious and Social Studies in January has been put into distribution among persons interested in the screen, both within and external to the industry. It is receiving a flow of responsive comment. The following letter comes from Mr. Delmer L. Daves, director and writer for Warner Brothers Pictures, Burbank, California:

DEAR MR. QUIGLEY:—I have just finished reading the printed copy of your address: "The Movies as Entertainment." This is one pamphlet I am going to keep in my library. I wish it were bound so that I could lend it to both friends and critics of our business. I have never read nor heard a fairer or more accurate summation of the problems involved in the making of motion pictures.

I wish your speech could be printed on the editorial pages of every newspaper in the country; I wish that it could receive wide circulation abroad.

As a spokesman for us all, you gained my respect for presenting the case without apology but with an effort toward clarification instead.

I think your parallels were skillfully and intelligently drawn throughout and these parallels such as the use of the columns of the New York Times for distribution of the outsiders' viewpoints, the reminder to England, France and Russia that Shakespeare, Dumas and Tolstoi did not shun the violent subject matter of many current films,—in fact, each of your parallels was explicit, clear and informative.

As an individual in my twentieth year in this business, as property man, actor, writer and director, I appreciate the truth behind your statement that we all aim toward making a good picture every time we come to bat; and I think each of us tries to make each picture better than the last.

I know I can speak for more than myself as an individual, however, when I say that we are grateful to you for your address and for the things you said, not in our defense, but in our support.—Sincerely, DELMER L. DAVES

Iowa Bill Asks Censorship of Films and Ads

A bill to provide for state censorship of all motion pictures and of all posters, banners and other advertising in connection with the showing of films was introduced in the Iowa House Tuesday.

The measure, introduced by Harvey Long, of Clinton, is a companion bill to one he offered earlier, which proposes an annual $1,000 license fee on all film distribution.

The new bill proposes to create a state department of motion picture censorship and licensing within the State Board of Education. The director of the department and his assistants would be appointed by the Board of Education upon recommendation of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The bill provides that all motion picture films, except "current events" films, and films shown by religious, charitable and other groups without profit, shall be examined and licensed by the new department.

The department also would be given the authority to inspect and approve all posters, banners and other theatre advertising.

A permit fee of $3 for each 1,000 feet of film would be assessed on each original picture and $2 on each 1,000 feet of film for each copy of the picture.

SCREEN AND PRESS FIGHT CENSOR BILL

Ask Dewey Veto New York Measure Banning Any Film Because of Ads

The amended Wilson-Condon bill, which passed the New York State Assembly and Senate early last week, and which would permit the Motion Picture Division of the State Department of Education to revoke the license of a film where any of its advertising is obscene, indecent or immoral, was attacked by the industry and the press this week while awaiting the approval or veto of Governor Thomas E. Dewey.

The bill was introduced and passed by both houses as a result of New York City License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding's appeal to revoke the permit of Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw" on the grounds of salacious advertising.

Delegation Objects

A delegation from New York expressed objections to the measure Monday in a meeting with Charles Breitel, the Governor's counsel, and others. The group comprised Howard Dietz, advertising-publicity chief of MGM and vice-president of Loew's; Mort Blumenstock, Warner vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity; Stanleigh Friedman, Warner vice-president and counsel, and, representing the Motion Picture Association, Sidney Schreiber, counsel; Glendon Allvine, New York director of public relations, and Gordon White, director of the Eastern Advertising Code.

At the same time the American Civil Liberties Union urged Governor Dewey to veto the bill.

Monday the editorial pages of the New York Times and the Herald Tribune took issue with the bill. The Times termed it as dangerous and unnecessary, while the Herald Tribune called it "obnoxious censorship legislation" and urged the Governor to veto the bill.

'Times' Cites Bill's Evils

"Clearly this bill attempts to introduce an entirely new principle," the Times editorial said. "Under its terms the most innocent motion picture could be suppressed by the (Board of) Regents, or their representatives, if it were advertised in what they consider too spicy a manner. If this principle is sound for motion pictures it is also sound for stage plays and for books. Indeed, if it is sound in any field of advertising, it is sound in all fields. We do not suppose Mr. Wilson intended to introduce a general censorship of advertising, with possibly a general censorship of news and comment to follow, but he is on the way."

The editorial concluded: "We hope Mr.

Dewey will look into the matter and exercise his veto power."

In attacking the measure, the Herald Tribune said: "Two bills which strike us as obnoxious passed the legislature last week with little or no notice. One of them, sponsored by Assemblyman Malcolm Wilson, of Westchester, would give the State Board of Regents the authority to ban a motion picture on the basis of improper advertising in any medium. The other, by Assemblyman Francis X. McGowan, of Manhattan, would make authors criminally liable along with publishers and sellers in the distribution of obscene literature.

"Indirect Censorship"

"We think the Wilson bill provides a form of indirect censorship, and is an unnecessary superstructure on the existing system of licenses."

"As for the McGowan bill . . . existing laws would appear adequate," the editorial continued. "On the theory of less censorship the better, we urge Governor Dewey that he veto both of these bills," it said.

Tuesday the New York World-Telegram came out against the bill. In its editorial, it said: "These two bills put a preposterous curb on authorship, also on freedom of the press. They encourage all kinds of censorious groups to rush forward with their own narrow ideas of what constitutes indecency or obscenity. They fetter literary effort. They push on to foolish extremes where present law against indecency is amply plain and sufficient. They call for a veto."

Also on Tuesday, the Film Division of the Progressive Citizens of America sent a telegraphic appeal to Governor Dewey to veto the bill.

Connecticut Studying Law To Promote Visual Aids

A bill authorizing the State Board of Education to promote visual education in the public schools has been introduced into the General Assembly of Connecticut at Hartford and is currently under study by the Committee on Education. The bill provides for the sum of $80,000 to be spent from July 1, 1947, to June 30, 1949, for the purchase of visual education equipment, including films and projectors, for use by the state's schools.

MARY PICKFORD, CHAPLIN OWN UA

Take Selznick Holdings; All Law Suits Dropped; Selznick Sales Set

The long-standing controversy between Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin, co-founders of United Artists, on the one hand, and producer David O. Selznick on the other, came to a sudden end late last week. The announcement, issued jointly, said an agreement, settling all differences, had been reached. The settlement provided for the return to UA of the one-third stock interest held in the company by Mr. Selznick's Vanguard Films and the dismissal of all law suits and claims now pending between the parties involved.

Meanwhile physical distribution arrangements to be made by the Selznick Releasing Organization were settled early this week when it was announced that Milton S. Kussell, Selznick, general sales manager, had signed a deal with National Film Distributors, Inc., to handle the new Selznick product.

To Retain Sole Control

With Miss Pickford and Mr. Chaplin now in complete control of UA their spokesman said this week that they intended to retain joint ownership of the company indefinitely. The two will share all of the outstanding stock of UA on an equal basis and no plans are afoot to issue additional shares to a new partner. It is understood that the former Selznick shares and additional UA treasury stock will be retired.

Under the terms of the agreement Mr. Selznick is withdrawing from UA by selling for $2,000,000 his stock interest in the company held through his producing unit, Vanguard Films. However, it was learned that the producer owed the company $1,700,000 for advances on productions, advance advertising and exploitation for "Duel in the Sun" and for accounts abroad paid to Selznick representatives by United Artists in countries where UA had credits and Selznick did not. At last reports the producer had offered to either buy out the Chaplin-Pickford interests for $10,000,000 or to sell his own interest in UA for $5,000,000.

New Directors Elected

The settlement was reached at a meeting of representatives of the principals in the New York law offices of Schwartz & Frohlich, counsel for Mr. Chaplin. Later the same day there was a hurriedly called meeting of the UA board of directors. The Selznick representatives on the board, Milton Kramer, Phillip Siff and Henry Marx, submitted their resignations, which were accepted by the board.

Two new Chaplin and Pickford repre-

EXPECT UA TO HANDLE NEW CHAPLIN PICTURE

There are strong indications that United Artists will distribute Charlie Chaplin's new production, "Monsieur Verdoux", as a result of last week's developments which resulted in the investment of sole ownership of UA in Mr. Chaplin and Mary Pickford. The former is under no legal compulsion to distribute his film through UA, and several other companies are known to have approached him on the matter. However, with the two co-owners of the company apparently in broad agreement on future UA operations, it seems practically certain that UA will handle the new Chaplin picture.

representatives were elected by the board. They are Charles Schwartz, senior member of Schwartz & Frohlich, for Mr. Chaplin, and Arnold Grant, for Miss Pickford. Mr. Grant also is Miss Pickford's counsel. Other members of the UA board include Edward C. Raftery, UA president; Edwin Claude Mills and Herbert P. Jacoby for Mr. Chaplin, and Franklin Cole and Herman Weisman for Miss Pickford.

The board meeting continued until late into the night on Friday. Many differences between the company and Mr. Selznick were settled and the final announcement said "a full and amicable agreement" had been reached. Under the new arrangements UA will continue as distributor for four Selznick productions released by the company in the past. They are "Since You Went Away," "I'll Be Seeing You," "Rebecca" and "Spellbound." All of them have played in most foreign territories. Mr. Selznick retains the right to withdraw them from UA distribution in any area where no contracts have been made for them so far.

Will Operate in 21 Cities

In announcing the physical distribution deal with National Film Distributors, Inc., Neil Agnew, president of the Selznick Releasing Organization, said the company would handle Selznick product in 21 key city exchanges. National Film Distributors has been in the planning stage for 30 days and has been ready for operation for the past three weeks. It will be headed by James Clark of Philadelphia and Washington, president, who now heads the Clark Film Distributors, Inc., and Clint Weyer, secretary of the company. Headquarters will be in New York. According to Mr. Kussell there is no connection between SRO and the physical distributor except a long term contract. Every exchange will have its own Selznick sales office.

Film depots to handle product are situated in the following key centers: Atlanta, Dallas, Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Des Moines, St. Louis, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Denver, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Boston and Buffalo. Additional depots will be established in line with distribution demands.

Court Actions Dropped

The agreement to drop all pending court actions involved two $13,500,000 damage suits by Mr. Selznick against Mr. Chaplin and Miss Pickford and against UA and a Chaplin suit against Mr. Selznick. Both Selznick's suits were filed last December. The one, for $6,000,000, against the UA co-owners, charged "malicious conspiracy for selfish purposes" to deprive Mr. Selznick's company of a distribution agreement executed in October, 1942. The other, for $7,500,000, was filed against UA and charged "deliberate and wilful mishandling of Selznick productions, including the sale of weaker product of other producers on the strength of Selznick pictures."

The Chaplin suit was filed in New York in 1943 and asked an accounting and damages for Mr. Selznick's disposal of the production properties of "Keys of the Kingdom," "Claudia" and "Jane Eyre." At the same time UA agreed not to press its complaint against the producer on the ground that his package deals with RKO constituted a breach of contract. The films involved there were "Spiral Staircase," "Notorious" and "Till the End of Time." Both Selznick and Vanguard have consistently claimed that they had not violated the UA contract by turning over to 20th-Fox and RKO stories and scripts which the producer had a right to abandon under his distribution contract.

To Reissue "Intermezzo"

In announcing last week's agreement the Selznick statement said no new Selznick pictures would be released through UA. The company has opened branch offices in 10 cities in the U. S. and in five foreign capitals. At least 25 additional domestic offices will be in operation within the next 30 days. The first picture to be handled will be "Duel in the Sun." "Intermezzo," the Selznick production which introduced Ingrid Bergman, will be reissued soon.

"Duel in the Sun" will open in New York about the middle of April, but no house has been chosen, according to Mr. Kussell. It will play on a grind policy. Plans for the opening of the film in 20 Los Angeles were postponed last week.

Also on the coast, a two-hour meeting among UA producers, attorneys and Gradwell Sears, UA sales head, this week resulted in a verbal understanding, pledging producers' representatives to cooperate with the distributing company in matters concerning contract clauses not in line with practices enforced under the anti-trust suit decree. Edward Raftery, UA president and counsel, also attended the conference.

CHICAGO

Both the weather and theatre grosses are proving variable. After a tremendous exploitation campaign, "The Yearling" opened at the State-Lake February 20 to record-breaking crowds. The film, from present indications, may run about three months at the 2,700-seat theatre. . . . Ben Lourie, Columbia branch manager, announces his company has four first run films now playing Loop houses. They are "The Jolson Story" at the Apollo; "Dead Reckoning" at the Chicago, and "Secret of the Whistler" and "The Lone Wolf in Mexico," at the Rialto. . . . Herbert Lyon, former publicity man with Balaban & Katz, has returned to Chicago from Hollywood. Mr. Lyon is now handling publicity for the newly formed Marshall Productions, headed by Chicago businessman William D. Saltiel, which plans to make several films with Chicago backgrounds. Their first picture will be called "The Loop." . . . CINCINNATI

Keith's, recently taken over by Universal Pictures as the local unit in their group of "showcase" theatres, is currently playing a world premiere of "The Song of Scheherazade," the discussion and music of which was aired via transcription by Dr. Walter Damrosch and Dr. Sigmund Spaeth the day before the picture opened. Local stations WSAI, WKRC and WCPO carried the 15-minute program at various times during the day and evening. . . . The RKO Capitol will roadshow "The Best Years of Our Lives," opening March 11 for an indefinite run. . . . The 1,000-seat RKO Family, normally playing double bills on a split-week basis, has switched to a single bill, playing "Blue Skies" for the fifth downtown week, and will subsequently revert to its original policy. . . . Aaron Schindler, formerly associated with M & P Circuit, Boston, has been named assistant manager of Keith's here, succeeding Joseph Donaghue, who has resigned to go with the Theatre Candy Company. . . . Charles Sandhas has been appointed treasurer of Keith's, this being his initial association with the industry. . . . The Plymouth, the only theatre at Plymouth, Ohio, will hereafter be dark on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week, according to an announcement from Ed Ramsey, manager of the theatre.

CLEVELAND

Business holds up strong here for the big pictures which are playing extended runs. "Blue Skies" did better in its third week than in the second, weather conditions being responsible for this. It is holding a fifth week on the Main Stem. "It's a Wonderful Life" is enjoying its third week with the end not yet in sight. Neighborhoods are not up to boom war years, but they are doing more business than in pre-war days. . . . Ernest Schwartz, as president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, presented a check for $20,862 to the local polio fund as result of the March of Dimes collection in 88 of the city's independent houses. . . . Peter Bathory, RKO resident exploiteer for the past three years, has resigned to join the transportation advertising firm of Mitchell, McCandless & Klaus of Cleveland. Nat Wolf, who this month rounded out 15 years of leadership in the Ohio zone for Warner Brothers' Ohio theatres, has been honored by having the six-week Lenten period designated as the Nat Wolf 15th Anniversary Attendance drive—designed to bolster weekly attendance in all theatres in the zone. The six-week drive extends from February 23 to April 5.

FRANK BICKERSTAFF has been appointed Georgia Theatre Company candy concessions supervisor in Atlanta. Since his discharge from the Navy a year ago, he has been manager of the Paramount, Atlanta. In 1941 he was winner of the Quigley Bronze Grand Award.

COLUMBUS

World premiere of Eugene O'Neill's new play, "A Moon for the Misbegotten," and the advent of Lent were simultaneous events, taking attention away from new films here. Business is just average at all theatres, with the Palace having "Nora Prentiss," the Ohio "Lady in the Lake," the Grand a second week of "Sinbad the Sailor" and the Broad bringing in "The Wicked Lady." The Ohio attracted nearly a full house with a surprise preview of "Lady in the Lake" Monday night before the regular opening. . . . The Palace will resume its stage show policy next week with the King Cole Trio as headline attraction. . . . Barracks type building costing $2,500 will be erected in Clintonville to serve as a youth center in a move to combat juvenile delinquency in that area. . . . Walter A. Pfeifer has been elected president of the Pfeifer Show Print Company, succeeding his late father. . . . HARTFORD

Columbia's "Jolson Story" went into an eighth week at the E. M. Loew's in Hartford to continue to lead the holdover parade in Connecticut's capital city. The film, in its seventh week, broke all attendance records for the theatre's 17-year history. The toast of film business here is "The Jolson Story," which clicked to the tune of $13,000 in its third week at Loew's and stayed on for a fourth. It is the first picture since the road show of "Gone With the Wind" to get that much time there. "The Time, the Place and the Girl" also did well, grossing $15,000 at the Indiana. . . . The Talbott was to be closed to the public Tuesday night for a trade showing of "The Yearling."

KANSAS CITY

A feature of motion picture exhibition in Kansas City is the prominence now being caught by subsequent run houses that are showing pictures in the "special" field. The reissue of "Rebecca" has been shown for a week at the Southtown, then for a week at the Baltis. Fox Midwest circuit is showing "Blithe Spirit" at the Apollo, a midtown theatre, and at the same time the picture is the bill at the circuit's neighborhood theatre, the Circus. "Open City" is in its fifth week at the Kimo, a Dickinson theatre, which then will show "Brief Encounter." Newspaper space comparable with that used by first runs is employed for advertising. . . . Tom Edwards, formerly president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association, will move his home shortly from Eldon to Farmington, Mo., where the headquarters of the Edwards & Harris circuit are. MEMPHIS

Better than average attendance reported by first runs. Warner boasts a new attendance record was set for the picture, "The Man I Love," just closed after two weeks, and just as good a start with "Bedelia." Palace announced a "sneak preview" but not the name of the picture and had a packed house. Two days later the picture, "Lady in the Lake," had a grand opening and continued steady. State reported good business with "13 Rue Madeleine." Ritz reported "Meet John Doe" was packing them in, and Malco said "Her Sister's Secret" was doing just fair. . . . PITTSBURGH

Heavy snow slowed up practically the entire town during the past week, but had little adverse effect on "The Jolson Story," at the J. P. Harris. Although admissions are lower and fewer performances are being shown, the musical is running close to the house record set by "Leave Her to Heaven." Truog, 67, for the past 19 years United Artists' branch manager in Kansas City where, Monday, his friends and associates tendered him a party. Mr. Truog, up to Monday—and we still haven't heard the latest reports—hadn't had a drink. But he always liked to attend cocktail parties, and Kansas City's Film Row decided it was about time for Bill to be the guest of honor.

momentum throughout the country is yet to establish itself firmly in California. . . . Local theatremen will endeavor to squash admission tax measures for San Francisco and it is expected the state measure will go down in defeat. When the legislature reconvenes in March, theatremen will face a Daylight Saving bill, together with a host of other menacing taxation and labor problems. . . . Big surprise was the enormous box office click of "Till the Clouds Roll By," which rolled up a fancy gross for the Warfield. . . . Other spots holding their own, especially Tivoli and Esquire, which put forth a strong exploitation job for "Wicked Lady." . . . $20,000 has already been promoted toward the Variety Club, to be located on the second floor of the Tivoli theatre building. . . . Vista theatre, Bella Vista, reopened by E. T. Pool. . . . Danville theatre, Danville, made its debut with Lloyd Lamothe and Jack Domingue as owner-managers.

torial and Eglinton. . . "Notorious" played its third week at the Imperial, "Margie" two weeks at Shea's and "The Strange Woman" at Loew's Yonge Street theatre. . . In another three weeks Famous Players Canadian Corporation will have virtually a new string of first run arrangements in Toronto with the Tivoli pairing with the Eglinton, the Victoria teaming with the Capitol and the Imperial and Shea's playing individual bills as always. This will add two first runners and the move is intended to catch up on a stock of big pictures. For instance, the Tivoli-Eglinton team is expected to play a long engagement with "The Jolson Story" and prices will be upped, too. . . Produced by Quebec Productions Corporation in Canada, "The Stronghold" has hit the screen in Montreal under the new title of "Whispering City." . . The use of automobile parking meters at night in Brantford, Ont., has been protested by the Board of Trade because it interferes with theatre business. . . A visitor in Toronto has been George Archibald, managing director of Arthur Rank's Independent Producers in England. He said film producing in Canada was not scheduled for the immediate future. . . The Niagara Peninsula Theatre Managers Association of which Jack Allen of the Tivoli, Thorold, is president, has launched a protest against the re-introduction of the 10 per cent amusement tax by the Ontario Government. . . Count Jean de Hauteclocque, French Ambassador to Canada, has issued an "ultimatum" to the Provincial Government of Quebec charging "lack of courtesy" because the French film, "Les Enfants du Paradis," had been condemned by the French-Canadian censors of that Province on immoral grounds. . . International Film Distributors, Limited, an independent company, has been formed at Toronto to handle Eagle-Lion's Hollywood product in Canada, distinct from Rank's Canadian film exchange.

VANCOUVER

British pictures are getting a big play here. Five downtowners are playing them this week. "Bedelia" is playing day and date at the Vogue and Hastings. "Waterloo Bridge" is at the Plaza. "Brief Encounter" is at the Paradise, and "Wanted for Murder" is at the Strand. . . The British Columbia government's travel bureau will make a motion picture of marine life on the Pacific. . . The Log Cabin theatre at Lillooet, B. C., is being operated by the Canadian Legion, playing weekend shows only at present. . . Harry Page, former UA booker, has been appointed B. C. manager for Monogram Films, succeeding Joe Archer, who will be in charge of the Hanson 16mm exchange. . . Eagle-Lion has also made a change in managers here. Frank Soltice, formerly Odeon head office booker, has succeeded Steve Rolston as Vancouver manager.

WASHINGTON

"It's a Wonderful Life" walked off with the honors this week and is being held over for a third week at the theatre. The only other holdover in town was "Lady in the Lake" at Loew's Capitol. New entries, greeted by a driving snowstorm, were "The Jolson Story" at Warners' Earle; "The Beginning or the End" at Loew's Palace, and "Beast with Five Fingers" at Warners' Metropolitan. . . All 60 motion picture theatres in the District of Columbia participated in the American Brotherhood Week campaign. . . A distinguished audience turned out for the global premiere of "The Beginning or the End" at Loew's Palace theatre February 19. Among them were David E. Lilienthal; Wallace White, Senate Majority Leader; Major General and Mrs. Leslie R. Groves; Charles G. Ross, President Truman's press secretary, and Mrs. Ross; Miss Grace Tully, late President Roosevelt's secretary; Admiral William S. Parsons; Walter S. Carpenter, Jr., president of Dupont, and others.

New York State Weighs Local Taxing Power

Special taxing powers, which would permit New York City and other cities and towns throughout New York State to place levies on theatre admissions among other things, were being studied by Governor Thomas E. Dewey last weekend in Albany. Under the plan the revenue would be used to finance permanent pay increases for school teachers.

As the contemplated plan was announced semi-official quarters in New York City said theatre owners and exhibitors had little to fear in the way of additional taxes since "the mayor and comptroller have said they do not favor a city theatre admission tax."

On the 20 per cent Federal admission tax question, meanwhile, Representative Harold Knutson of Minnesota announced in Washington last Friday that the House Ways and Means Committee would examine the entire tax structure, including the Federal admission tax, with a view to reducing future levies where there are inequities. However, he said, the study would not affect pending legislation to continue the excise tax indefinitely, as agreed by both houses.

Taxes will also be the topic of discussion when the California legislature meets in Sacramento March 3. During the session theatremen will not only face a daylight saving time bill, but also a state admission tax measure. The two bills were presented at the last session and were defeated.

In San Francisco the Board of Supervisors of the city is considering the levying of an admission tax.

Oklahoma theatremen are fearful of a bill which is expected to be introduced in the legislature to extend city tax powers in the state. Tulsa had a 10 per cent amusement tax up for consideration last year, but it was killed when attorneys advised against it.

Beginning April 1, the borough of Red Lion, Pa., will impose a two per cent on each admission for any amusement, except those sponsored by local educational and charitable organizations.

Encourage Top British Films: Silverstone

With 75 per cent of the foreign grosses of American film producers coming from the British Empire, U. S. industry should encourage production of top-quality British pictures that stand to make big money on the international market, Murray Silverstone, president of 20th-Fox International, told trade press interviewers this week.

Mr. Silverstone last week returned from a month's trip through Britain and France. "The problem facing the British people is a very real one," he said, "and the agitation now going on as a result of their efforts to conserve vitally needed foreign exchange should not be misrepresented as an anti-American campaign. The British have no intention to curtail importation of U. S. films, we are faced with the threat of further restrictions on playing time."

Mr. Silverstone then suggested two possible solutions to the problem. "If the American industry wants to protect itself in this important market, it should encourage the production of great British pictures with worldwide appeal," he said. "British producers should cut down on the number of films and concentrate on quality. These pictures would get all the playing time due them on the British market, while American pictures would make up the rest. At the same time they would get much-needed foreign currency into British pockets."

A second alternative would be for American exhibitors to get together and show British product in their theatres, Mr. Silverstone stated. He endorsed the suggestion that leaders of the British and American industries meet to work things out among themselves and said Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, would stand a good chance to persuade the British not to pass more stringent quota laws if he were backed up by a cooperation pledge from U. S. exhibitors.

Attendance in the British Isles has dropped 15 per cent recently, he said.

Legion of Decency Reviews Fifteen New Productions

The National Legion of Decency this week reviewed 15 new productions, approving all but one. In Class A-I, unobjectionable for general patronage, were: "A Cage of Nightingales" (French), "Code of the West," "Heldorado," "The Farmer's Daughter," "It Happened in Brooklyn," "Last Frontier Uprising," "Law of the Lash," "Michigan Kid" and "Over the Santa Fe Trail". In Class A-II, unobjectionable for adults, were: "Backlash," "Queen of the Amazons," "Renegade Girl," "Suddenly It's Spring," and "That Brennan Girl". "Man's Hope" (Spanish) was placed in Class B, objectionable in part, because "suicide is presented as justifiable."

Six Pictures Go Before Studio Cameras, Among Them "Voice of Turtle"

Hollywood Bureau

The index of production activity rose one notch last week, from 31 to 32, as work began on six pictures and five went to the cutting rooms.

At Warners, the film version of John van Druten's hit play, "Voice of the Turtle," went before the cameras with Irving Rapper directing. Reginald Reagan, Eleanor Parker and Eve Arden have been cast as the principals in the romantic comedy, whose setting is present-day New York.

Another Warner venture is "Two Guys from Texas," in which Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson portray the "two guys," as they have in other pictures in the series. Dorothy Malone has the leading feminine role; David Butler is directing for producer Alex Gottlieb.

"Pirate", Color Musical, Started at MGM

"The Pirate," a Technicolor musical with Judy Garland and Gene Kelly in starring roles, went into work at MGM. The film, an adaptation of S. N. Behrman's play of the same title which Alfred Lunt and Lynne Fontanne presented on Broadway, features music by Cole Porter. Walter Slezak, Gladys Cooper, Lester Allen and Jerry Bergen head the supporting cast. Vincente Minnelli is directing for producer Arthur Freed.

Loretta Young, Cary Grant and David Niven are co-starred in Samuel Goldwyn's current production for RKO Radio release. Titled "The Bishop's Wife," it is a film version of Robert Nathan's novel, adapted to the screen by Robert E. Sherwood. William A. Seiter is the director.

Mark Hellinger's latest production for Universal-International is "Brute Force," with Burt Lancaster, Hume Cronyn, Charles Bickford, Ann Blyth, Yvonne de Carlo, Ella Raines and Anita Colby in leading roles. Jules Dassin is directing, and Sir Lancelot, famed Calypso singer, has been signed to compose and sing 12 numbers.

PRC's new venture is "Silent Voice," a mystery drama with a Hollywood background. Sheila Ryan, Edward Norris, Chill Wills, Chili Williams, Kenneth Farrell and Charles Mitchell compose the cast. Basil Wrangell is directing for associate producer Marvin Stahl.

Incidental News of Pictures and People

Irving Reis, whose latest picture is RKO's "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer," has been signed to a long term director contract by Universal-International. . . . Joan Leslie, currently starring in Eagle-Lion's "Repeat Performance," has organized her own producing company, Culver Pictures, Inc. The firm's initial film will be based on Fannie Hurst's unpublished novel, "The Hands of Veronica." James Allen, Oklahoma oil magnate, is president of the new company, and Oscar Cummins, Miss Leslie's manager, is secretary-treasurer.

The second of six features to be produced by Sam Katzman for Columbia release in 1947 will be "Sweet Genevieve," a musical with a high school background, based on an original by James Brewer and Arthur Dreifuss. . . . Carl Hittleman, formerly production manager for Screen Art Pictures, has been promoted to producer, and will make "Hat Box Mystery," and "The Case of the Baby Sitter," two action pictures which are part of Screen Art's schedule for Screen Guild release.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello's next picture at Universal-International will be "The Wistful Widow of Wagon Gap," based on a magazine story by William Bowers and D. D. Beauchamp. . . . Monogram has purchased "Five Steps to Heaven," an original by Howard Marsh, as a starring vehicle for Gale Storm. Jeffrey Bernerd will produce. . . . Cyril Endfield has been signed to a seven-year contract by Triangle Productions, headed by Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn. The new contract calls for Endfield to write as well as direct high budget pictures.

Moray Survey to Check Theatres' Shorts Needs.

Norman Moray, short subjects sales manager for Warners, is currently touring the country making a survey of exhibitor needs for the coming year. As a result he has recommended to Gordon Hollingshead that the number of short subjects dealing with sports be increased from 10 to 13, and that six "community sing" subjects be added to the company's program. Moray attributes the growing interest in sports to the return of soldiers to civil life, and to the forthcoming Olympic games. Hollingshead, who made a number of "community sing" shorts for the Army, believes that the current demand comes from the veterans who developed an appreciation for this form of entertainment during the war.

Sol Siegel's first production assignment at 20th Century-Fox will be "Lydia Bailey," a screen adaptation of Kenneth Roberts' current best seller. Much of the story is laid in Haiti, whither cast and crew will journey for extended shooting. . . . Betty Hutton has been assigned the title role in "Dream Girl," Paramount's forthcoming version of Elmer Rice's Broadway hit. P. J. Wolfson is slated to produce. . . . Jonathan Hale has been engaged by S. Sylvan Simon and Raphael Hakim for an important role in their comedy for Columbia release under the title of "The Lady Knew How."

Radio producer John Slott has purchased the rights to "Castle Harbor," and will produce it independently. . . . Leon Shamroy, three times winner of the Academy Award

His most recent screenplay credit is that studio's "The Farmer's Daughter," which co-stars Loretta Young, Joseph Cotten and Ethel Barrymore.

COLONIAL AMUSEMENT CORPORATION

February 5, 1947

Mr. Arthur Levy
Columbia Pictures Corp.
1623 Blvd. of the Allies
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Dear Art:

We have just completed the run of THE JOLSON STORY with such amazing results that it seems a fictitious happening. It is like waking up after a magnificent Technicolor dream, wishing it were true; only in this case, it is.

First of all, I thought we were overly optimistic when we signed a guaranteed run of seventeen days, three days longer than any picture had ever played at the Colonial. Although we had great faith in it as a box office attraction, we had not the slightest thought that it would be playing for a total of thirty-one days in Erie, Pa. Even then, it was not completely "milked", as the final week grossed the average for an "A" attraction. This would indicate we could have played it longer.

Here are some of the statistics of the JOLSON engagement: 1st week 205%, 2nd week 156%, 3rd week 148%, 4th week 114%, last 3 days 109%.

In addition to the above facts, the total attendance amounted to 64,653 which is fully 50% of the combined current population of Erie and vicinity. The rated population is 116,000 but I am taking the Chamber of Commerce estimate of 130,000, as you may not believe it if I made the statement that we played to over 50% of the population.

To say that it broke all existing records would be putting it mildly, the film rental percentage alone far exceeded our previous record gross. It went well over double all previous grosses and attendance records. I won't quote percentages as we haven't anything to compare with it.

The repeat business was remarkable with many seeing it as many as six or seven times, while those seeing it two or three times could be counted by the hundreds. There is no end to the stories that I could tell about pleased and satisfied patrons.

To say that we were pleased to have had the honor and privilege of playing this super, colossal, magnificent production would be an understatement of the mildest sort.

Yours very truly,
COLONIAL THEATRES

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE'S LUCKY DAY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—Very good "Blondie." Columbia has had some mighty good program pictures in the last few months. They have better ones than most companies.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

CRIME DOCTOR'S MANHUNT, THE: Warner Baxter, Ellen Drew—Very good for my double bill program. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 24, 25.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

GENTLEMAN MISBEHAVES, THE: Osa Mason, Robert Stanton—Played during a severe cold wave. The younger patrons thought it cute. The older ones made no comment. Attendance poor. Played Wednesday-Friday, Feb. 5-7.—Kenneth L. Feldhaus, Beverly Theatre, University City, Mo.

GILDA: Rita Hayworth, Glenn Ford—This sophisticated picture would probably draw in the big cities, but here it was a big flop. It was not very well liked by the few who saw it. I am glad we have a "Blondie" coming up from Columbia to make up for our losses on "Gilda." Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 12, 13.—David Bull, Lake Theatre, Howard Lake, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

NIGHT EDITOR: William Gargan, Janis Carter—One of the best little pictures I have ever played. Many fine comments. William Gargan is always good.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

SO DARK THE NIGHT: Micheline Cheirel, Steven Geray—The foreign accent made this torture for my patrons. Dull. Played on a double bill. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 31, Feb. 1.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Film Classics

HELL'S ANGELS: Jean Harlow—Brought this old one back and gave it special plugging. Dropped heralds by plane and put on a special front. Results: packed the house for three nights in spite of a snow storm. Reissues are usually no good here but once in a while something special is worth plugging. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Jan. 28-30.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

WILDFIRE: Bob Steele—Bob Steele socks here in any pictures he has ever made. So this in natural color is tops. It was enjoyed by all. The box office was good. Played Friday, Jan. 31.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COCKEYED MIRACLE, THE: Frank Morgan, Keenan Wynn—A cockeyed picture with a fine cast that did O. K. as a Sunday attraction. Played Feb. 2.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

FAITHFUL IN MY FASHION: Tom Drake, Donna Reed—Good little picture, but did under average business. Edward Everett Horton is very popular here.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

HOLIDAY IN MEXICO: Walter Pidgeon, Ilona Massey—A swell picture, but not for a small town like this. The wrong kind of music and settings for farmers to go for. The result was not up to average. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Jan. 7-9.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

SHE WENT TO THE RACES: James Craig, Frances Gifford—The weather was better and this was well patronized and enjoyed by all. Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 23-25.—W. J. McGregor, Audio Theatre, Gladstone, Man., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE WISE FOOLS: Margaret O'Brien, Lionel Barrymore—My vote goes to this attraction as one of the year's poorest. It was a waste of film on such a good cast. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Jan. 29, 30.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

THREE WISE FOOLS: Margaret O'Brien, Lionel Barrymore—This one did nice business. The Sunday audience liked it, but some of the high school kids walked out. It made the ladies cry in a couple of places. It is a good picture. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 26, 27.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box office performance of product — providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York 20.

Paramount

JUNGLE PRINCESS: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—This reissue did reasonably well against zero weather and a terrible trailer. When companies re-issue pictures and make new prints why don't they insist that new trailers be made? The preview on this will kill it. Leave it off your screen. I am playing "Jesse James" next week and the trailer was found to be in such shape that you couldn't understand it. We used it on one program and it served as a comedy for the patrons. It was cut up badly. This condition will seriously effect my future playing of reissues. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

OUR HEARTS WERE GROWING UP: Gail Russell, Diana Lynn—This is a farce comedy of the program type which failed to draw average business. It is a waste of film. Played Tuesday, Jan. 28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

SEARCHING WIND, THE: Robert Young, Ann Richards—This is too deep and there isn't enough action for the average small town. I would rate it tops as a picture, but at the box office it was very poor. Played Monday, Tuesday, Jan. 27, 28.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

SEARCHING WIND, THE: Robert Young, Ann Richards—A fine effort to educate the American public on a topic they should know all about. It is one that is all-important right now. They do not want to be enlightened. They want to be entertained. It will not get you a quarter. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Jan. 28-30.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

PRC

AMBUSH TRAIL: Bob Steele, Syd Saylor—Good Western. Hope some company has Steele in a new series. He is very popular here.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

THUNDER TOWN: Bob Steele, Syd Saylor—A good fast-action Western that pleased my weekend trade. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 31, Feb. 1.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

RKO Radio

FROM THIS DAY FORWARD: Joan Fontaine, Mark Stevens—A truly good present-day picture with a swell cast. Down-to-earth story. The comments were good here. It should please anywhere. Played Sunday, Jan. 26.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

HEARTBEAT: Ginger Rogers, Jean Pierre Aumont—This got by, because Miss Rogers' past pictures made her well liked here. Why doesn't RKO reissue those truly good entertainment-packed Roger and Astaire musicals like "Flying Down to Rio," etc.? Played Thursday, Jan. 30.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

PINNOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—An old Disney brought back at popular demand. Every child for miles around came out for it. Very good entertainment for everyone. All of Disney's work draw in this house. Played Saturday, Sunday, Feb. 1, 2.—Kenneth L. Feldhaus, Beverly Theatre, University City, Mo.

SISTER KENNY: Rosalind Russell, Alexander Knox—Although it may be too heavy in a small town, an exhibitor should be proud to display this masterpiece. Rosalind Russell should be considered as a contender for an Oscar for her portrayal of Sister Kenny. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Jan. 22, 23.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

SONG OF THE SOUTH: Disney Feature Cartoon—This is tops in entertainment. Being a Georgia picture and being true to Southern tradition, the crowds turned out en mass. Acting by all members of the cast was superb. Everyone will profit by playing this. Monday, Tuesday, Jan. 20, 21.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD WOMAN: Johnny Weissmuller, Brenda Joyce—They like these very much. I played it on a weekend to extra business and they all seemed pleased.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD WOMAN: Johnny Weissmuller, Brenda Joyce—The first night our competition was a basketball game and the second night it was the district finals of the Golden Gloves, but still this was the best picture of the month at the box office. The patrons liked it. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 17, 18.—David Bull, Lake Theatre, Howard Lake, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TILL THE END OF TIME: Dorothy McGuire, Guy Madison—This is a swell drama of the returned soldiers which did average business, but with a stronger cast it could have been a knockout. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Jan. 29, 30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

Republic

COLORADO PIONEERS: "Wild" Bill Elliott, Bobby Blake—Good Western. Elliott is very popular here. I have played also "In Old Sacramento" and that is fine.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

DON'T FENCE ME IN: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—Played this with "Strange Triangle" and we packed the house both nights. These help you through the winter. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Nov. 12, 13.—W. J. McGregor, Audio Theatre, Gladstone, Man., Can.

EARL CARROLL SKETCHBOOK: Constance Moore, William Marshall—A swell little musical comedy that pleased rural patronage. Got lots of compliments on it. Single billed it with good shorts and got by nicely. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 24, 25.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

WAGON WHEELS WESTWARD: "Wild" Bill Elliott—This man Elliott is really head and shoulders above some of the other Western players. Having seen the late William Hart in his heyday we have always seen quite a strong resemblance between the two. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 31, Feb. 1.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

Screen Guild

DEATH VALLEY: Robert Lowery, Helen Gilbert—We did something unusual by playing this picture single bill on a weekend. Believe it or not we did O. K.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BOWERY, THE: George Raft, Wallace Beery—Another reissue that didn't pay off here. It is very hard to put over an old picture around these parts. I don't know why, because this show was very interesting and O. K. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 10, 11.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

CENTENNIAL SUMMER: Jeanne Craine, Cornel Wilde—A good picture, but it fell short of the business it should have done. The public want to hear more music that is familiar. The numbers used in this picture were very unfamiliar to the average movie-goer. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young—This one is a natural for the family and the masses. Business good. Played Thursday, Friday, Jan. 23, 24.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS MILLIONS: Kent Taylor, Dona Drake—An average action picture. O. K. for Saturday on a double bill. The picture is well made and has thrills for action fans.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn.

HOME SWEET HOMICIDE: Randolph Scott, Lynn Bari—A nice little show. Good plot and lots of kid stuff. The people who saw it got a kick out of it. The trouble was that there wasn't enough of a cast to get them out. People are watching their money a little closer now and won't come out unless they think they are getting a little star value or something special. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 3, 4.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—This is a fair musical show which did average business and pleased those who came. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 26, 27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DOG: Carole Landis, Allyn Joslyn—Used on a weekend double bill. Nice fast-moving comedy drama that has plenty of laughs. Surprisingly good. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 31, Feb. 1.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—You can't miss on this one. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 26, 27.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

SMOKY: Fred MacMurray, Anne Baxter—We played this to capacity business the first night and business was very good the second night. No small town exhibitor could ask for anything better. The story was pleasing and the photography was superb. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 26, 27.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE: June Haver, Vivian Blaine—Worthy of extra playing time.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

United Artists

ANGEL ON MY SHOULDER: Paul Muni, Anne Baxter—Most of my Sunday patrons thought this was amusing, while some of the others walked out. Played Jan. 26.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

BREAKFAST IN HOLLYWOOD: Tom Breneman, Bonita Granville—Played this in cold weather and blocked roads, but it took well. However, the box office was below average. Played Thursday, Friday, Jan. 16, 17.—W. J. McGregor, Audio Theatre, Gladstone, Man., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

CAESAR AND CLEOPATRA: Claude Rains, Vivian Leigh—We live right on the Canadian border. The Canadian people are fed up with British product and they won't take it over here, so no Canadian business. As for the local people, I had a fairly good crowd at 7 P.M. At 8 P.M. the house was only partly full. Never saw such walkouts. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 12, 13.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

DEVIL'S PLAYGROUND, THE: William Boyd, Andy Clyde—First of the new series and it is fine. Hope the second one is as good. Andy Clyde is a real help for attendance.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

DIARY OF A CHAMBERMAID: Paulette Goddard, Hurd Hatfield—We took a licking. Personally, I never watched anything so silly. It might take in France, but it certainly didn't take in Gladstone. Played Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 26-28.—W. J. McGregor, Audio Theatre, Gladstone, Man., Can.

GETTING GERTIE'S GARTER: Dennis O'Keefe, Marie McDonald—We played this late, but it is a dandy. The title brought them in and they were pleased. Good at the box office. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Dec. 10, 11.—W. J. McGregor, Audio Theatre, Gladstone, Man., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. ACE: George Raft, Silvia Sydney—One of George Raft's worst pictures. The patrons thought it would be a shoot-'em-up thriller, which it was not. They were disappointed with it. They said there was too much love. Weather very bad. Attendance poor. Played Wednesday-Friday, Feb. 5-7.—Kenneth L. Feldhaus, Beverly Theatre, University City, Mo.

NIGHT IN CASABLANCA, A: Marx Brothers, Lois Collier—This has all you could expect or want in a Marx Brothers picture. There is plenty of fun and action. The patrons enjoyed it. Business was below

SOUTHERNER, THE: Zachary Scott, Betty Field—This was quite old when we used it, but the story was good and the picture as a whole was very interesting. Business only average. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Jan. 29, 30.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

Universal

CANYON PASSAGE: Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward—One of the best. It is a grand outdoor picture and it really did business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

CAT CREEPS, THE: Lois Collier, Fred Brady—Fair double-bill material.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

DANGER WOMAN: Philip Terry, Ann Savage—Pretty good program picture. Milburn Stone has been in several Universal pictures lately and my people like him.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

KILLERS, THE: Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner—Adult fare. Just fair gross. Played Monday, Tuesday, Jan. 13, 14.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

WHITE TIE AND TAILS: Dan Duryea, Ella Raines—This one was a little ritzy for the local people, but the story was interesting enough to keep them in. The third day was better than the first and that's good. Double-billed with a Buster Crabbe Western. This cowboy is O. K. here. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Jan. 14-16.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

WILD BEAUTY: Don Porter, Lois Collier—Doubled with "Earl Carroll Sketchbook." It did excellent Sunday matinee and night business. Played Sunday, Jan. 19.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Warner Bros.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—Adult fare. It did not draw enough to warrant extra playing time. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Jan. 28-30.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—Did good business, but this team has never done anything extra. Pleased most who saw it. I noticed they all sat through it without much noise and squirming. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 5, 6.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

CLOAK AND DAGGER: Gary Cooper, Lili Palmer—They won't go for these stories yet. Had a fairly good turnout, but they didn't see it through. The second night was very poor. However, it was a good picture of its type. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 19, 20.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

NIGHT AND DAY: Cary Grant, Alexis Smith—Did only average business because of playing it late, but had more favorable comments on this picture than all the others combined. It is good to see your regular patrons come out beaming. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 19, 20.—David Bull, Lake Theatre, Howard Lake, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TIME, THE PLACE, THE GIRL: Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson—This is a much better musical than many that we have played, but it has the same old, musty, hackneyed theme of financial difficulties in staging a musical production. How many times has it been done? I ask you. In my opinion the time is ripe for the better old ones such as "Rosemarie," "Rio Rita," "Vagabond King" and "Red Mill." These had stories as well as outstanding musical scores. I'll bet my last dollar that the exhibitors that were so eager to get rid of block booking wish they had it back now. This mess that is now apparent comes out of the Consent Decree. They should have learned their lesson. Events later showed that when the Government stepped into any business worse came out of it and that is what happened to this business of ours. Now we have a bear by the tail and can't let go.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

"The past year witnessed several important developments in the motion picture industry which adversely affected your company as well as all major motion picture producing and distributing companies," Mr. Yates said. He pointed out the jurisdictional studio strike is "causing increases in production costs."

INDUSTRY ASSOCIATES TO HONOR ED FAY

Edward M. Fay (above), who has been in show business more than 40 years, and in the motion picture industry since 1916, when he began operating the Fay theatre, Providence, R. I., will be honored by his friends and associates of the industry on May 5th at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel, Providence. The dinner will be officially tendered by the Independent Exhibitors of Rhode Island.

MPEA Bulgarian Deal Expected

Early expansion of the operations of the Motion Picture Export Association into Bulgaria through a deal with the Bulgarian film monopoly was forecast this week by Irving Maas, vice-president and general manager of MPEA. He also reported that all prints belonging to MPEA member companies, requisitioned by the Bulgarian Government several months ago, had been withdrawn from circulation and now are under seal with the American mission in Sofia.

Details of the distribution agreement are being worked out by Jean Birkhahn, MPEA representative in Bulgaria, and Bulgarian Government officials. Louis Kanturek, MPEA supervisor for Eastern Europe, is expected to join him in Sofia at an early date to assist in the negotiations.

Also this week Mr. Maas announced the appointment of Charles H. Core, veteran of distribution in the Far East, as MPEA manager for the Netherlands East Indies. Mr. Core was Philippine manager for United Artists from 1934 to the outbreak of the Pacific war. MPEA takes over in the Indies under a deal last August and will begin operation May 1.

Frank J. Alford, assistant to George Borthwick, treasurer of the Motion Picture Association, has been named chief accountant and assistant treasurer of MPEA. He succeeds William Laffan, resigned.

ITALIAN QUOTA IS SEEN UNLIKELY

by AR GEO SANTUCCI
in Rome

Regulations affecting the importation of pictures will not be greatly changed this year, according to well-informed industry figures.

No quota restriction seems to be scheduled, but it is possible that earnings of foreign pictures will still have to be held in blocked accounts. In any case, it is understood, investments of these earnings will remain under the control of the Government. Just recently the banks were reminded that they must ask permission of the Government for the expenditure of any earnings from the exploitation of foreign pictures entered to blocked accounts. However, this rule may soon be eased and American companies could invest in Italian stocks.

American companies in Italy are concerned over the law prohibiting the conversion of lire into dollars, claiming that this makes unprofitable the distribution of pictures, considering that the average cost for the dubbing, copies and advertising is estimated at about 3,000,000 lire—$13,500—for each picture.

The general bilateral trade agreement between Italy and Holland provides for the exportation to Holland of Italian-made projectors.

Universal-International will distribute 25 pictures in Italy during the 1947-48 season, it has been indicated here.

INDIA

Bombay Bureau

The National Government is desirous of reviving its production activities—the production of educational and informational short subjects. It is understood the Cabinet has decided in favor of the revival and a token grant of money will be incorporated in the budget to be introduced February 28. If the budget is approved, production could be resumed in April.

For about four years, ending only last April, the Government produced two series of films, Information Films of India and Indian News Parade. The latter was taken over by private interests when the Government dropped it in April, but these interests were unable to finance the series beyond December last.

It is now disclosed that during the war the American authorities agreed to allow the export of raw film to India for civilian use with the proviso that at least six per cent of the stock would be used for propaganda films. This stock was used for two Governmental series of films.

Latest figures available for the 1945-46 period show that approximately 80,750,000 feet of raw stock was consumed by the Indian film industry. There has been about a 50 per cent increase in the importation of projection machinery and a tripling in imports of sound recording machinery. In 1945-46 the projection machinery imported was valued at approximately $750,000 and the sound machinery at $500,000.

Since 1944 the Soviets have been trying to introduce their films into India but have not been successful. This year the distribution of Russian films has been handed over to Sunrich Pictures, Ltd., which controls production and distribution of Indian films. This combination may pave the way for the exhibition of Soviet films in this country.

Producers here are worried anew by fresh evidence that the quarrel between the two film labor unions, the National Cinematographic Industry Workers Union and the Picture Production Workers Union, is still going strong despite Government efforts to end the conflict. That evidence was the statement made by Mario Moreno (Cantinflas), secretary general of the Production Union, that the Cinematographic Industry Workers Union had broken its promise to the Government by proceeding with the production of features after promising to confine itself to newsreels, documentaries and other shorts, and to leave features to the Production Union.

Monterrey, the northeastern industrial center near the Texas border, is to be another Mexican production center. The Government has authorized Ancia Films of Monterrey to import equipment for such production, which is to start soon. Ancia has been producing newsreels.

Oscar Brooks, former Warner manager here, who is distributing for Filmex, is the new president of the Mexican Motion Picture Distributors Association.

BRAZIL

Police officials are conducting a campaign to enforce the laws relating to classification of pictures for juvenile spectators. Some pictures are forbidden for children under 10, others for children under 14 and 18 years of age. While the larger theatres are observing the law, neighborhood theatres evade the law very often. Recently, the Orion theatre in Sao Paulo was fined and closed for three weeks because officials found minors in the theatre below the stipulated age level for the picture. Police say the campaign will continue, indicating the possibility of heavier fines and eventually the closing of theatres violating the law.

Numerous non-Hollywood pictures are having success here. "The Seventh Veil" and "Madonna of the Seven Moons," both British imports, had long runs. The Mexican "Three Musketeers" recently went into its third week in one of the biggest theatres in Sao Paulo. The Brazilian "O Ebrio" not only shattered the record for national pictures, but in many theatres broke attendance records set by American pictures. The Portuguese "Ignaz de Castro" is also a hit.

PALESTINE

by IBRAHIM ZEIN
in Jaffa

Egyptian industry leaders and trade papers are protesting against the import of foreign films with superimposed Arabic narration. The Egyptian Government has been requested to impose higher taxes on such importations as well as on all kinds of foreign films. This, they feel, would serve to encourage local production. A recently published statistic showed that attendance at subtitled foreign pictures had gone up 35 per cent while, at the same time, attendance at locally-made films had gone down.

RKO's "Sinbad the Sailor" will be dubbed into Arabic for exploitation in Near East territories, according to Sam Stiller, RKO manager for Palestine. Sound recordings will be made in Egypt.

Antone Khoury of Nahas Film, one of the important distributors of Egyptian films, has left for a trip to North and South America, where he expects to open new markets for Arabic pictures. He also plans to purchase American studio equipment needed by local companies.

Cairo exhibitors have received letters from the "Students' Secret Committee," threatening violence unless records of the Egyptian national anthem and the Royal march are played before every show.

Walsh Sees Two Striking Unions Working Soon

IN NEWSREELS

At least two of the four striking studio union groups, affiliates of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Building Service Employees International, will return to work in the near future, Richard F. Walsh, international president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, said this week in New York following his return from the coast. At the same time, in Washington, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, said the whole dispute could have been prevented if an unbiased referee had been appointed to settle the jurisdictional squabble.

The Johnston statement was made at a press conference at which the Committee for Economic Development issued a report on means to bring about more constructive collective bargaining between labor and management. The organization suggested a strong Federal mediation service and a ban on secondary boycotts as well as an "equalization" of the rights of management under the Wagner Act.

The jurisdictional dispute in Hollywood this week also was used as an example by Senator Robert Taft who said it was a good lesson of the industrial chaos and tieup which can result. He said that jurisdictional strikes would "definitely" be outlawed when Congress takes final action on labor legislation.

Mr. Walsh was optimistic. He said the jurisdictional studio strike would end soon. The electrical workers, whose local has been taken over by international headquarters, and the building service employees, will return to their jobs as soon as a few details are ironed out, he stated. Mr. Walsh estimated that about 2,000 to 3,000 workers were still out on strike and indicated that many of the IATSE replacements for the strikers would have to be kept on the job in the final settlement. He doubted the value of legislation to "outlaw" jurisdictional disputes in the future and said compulsory arbitration would be necessary to get effective results.

In Hollywood, meanwhile, Emmet Lavery, president of the Screen Writers Guild, urged producers to start negotiations with the striking unions so as to facilitate their early return to work. The executive board of the group has been meeting with a producers' committee in an effort to find means of settling the dispute.

Paramount Short Subject Gets Full-Scale Exploitation Help

As part of its national program to promote special, high-budget short subjects, Paramount has inaugurated a large scale publicity and exploitation campaign for "Radio, Take It Away", a satire on radio audience participation shows.

This weekend the March 3 issue of Life magazine devoted three pages to the subject—one of the few times a short subject has received such wide editorial attention—and simultaneously Paramount's short subject publicity department in New York began shipping to its exchanges a press book announcing the appearance of the subject in Life and was preparing one-sheets for lobby displays. Wires and letters had previously been sent to branch and district managers notifying them of the Life display and suggesting further exploitation for the subject.

Upon completion of the picture several weeks ago a series of guest appearances were arranged for the writer and director of the short, Justin Herman, and radio columnists of New York newspapers reviewed the film and devoted space to the 11-minute subject.

A tieup was then effected between WCBS' "County Fair" program on a national hookup covering 150-odd stations to publicize the opening of the subject at the New York Paramount.

During the special broadcast Win Elliot, master of ceremonies of "County Fair," announced that "Radio, Take It Away!", playing at the Paramount, was unfair to radio quiz shows and dispatched a contestant to picket the theatre with a large sign. At the end of the broadcast Mr. Elliot and the entire cast of the radio program joined the picket line, displaying signs and distributing leaflets calling upon the public to boycott the subject.

The results: hundreds filed into the Paramount to see the provocative short subject, while thousands of others tied up traffic in the Times Square area to watch the pickets.

The subject, one of the Pacemaker series, was released nationally January 31.

Universal Will Reissue Eight

Universal Pictures will reissue during the next few months eight of its top productions of previous years in the form of four double feature programs, William A. Scully, Universal vice-president and general sales manager announced this week.

The four double features will be: "Destry Rides Again," James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, and "When the Daltons Ride," Randolph Scott, Brian Donlevy; "Magnificent Obsession," Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor, and "100 Men and a Girl," Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou; "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, and "I Stole a Million," George Raft, Claire Trevor.

Finally, a double feature bill will present "Frankenstein," with Boris Karloff, and "Dracula," with Bela Lugosi.

Court Allows 20 Days for Memphis Suit Answer

M. A. Lightman, his associates and eight major film distributing companies have been given 20 days by Federal Judge Marion S. Boyd in Memphis to file a formal answer to a $2,910,600 suit for damages brought against them by six independent theatres of Memphis.

Judge Boyd set the date for an answer when he denied a motion by the defendants that the suit be divided into several separate damage suits. Judge Boyd held that the suit, charging violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, be tried as a single case.

Defendants in the suit are: Mr. Lightman, L. & L. Theatres, Inc., M. S. McCord, Ed Sapinsley, Herbert Kohn, Warner Bros., Universal, United Artists, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Loew's, Inc., Columbia and Paramount.

Suit was brought by the men and women who operate the Idlewild, Airways, Luciann, Rosemary, Hollywood and Bristol theatres, charging a conspiracy against them with respect to product.

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers held its Atlantic Coast section meeting in New York at the Hotel Pennsylvania, February 19. James Y. Local Campaigns Key of 20th-Fox Plans: Schlaifer

Intensive local advertising climaxed by planned openings of pictures in key situations will be the basis of all 20th Century-Fox publicity and exploitation campaigns in 1947, Charles Schlaifer, the company's advertising and publicity head, told the 20th-Fox national sales conference in New York last week. He said that the experience gained from the "Razor's Edge" campaign and premiere would be applied to every one of the 20 pictures to be released this year.

Pointing out that 20th-Fox had laid the groundwork for this "point of sale" advertising policy with films like "State Fair" and "The Dolly Sisters," Mr. Schlaifer said the "Razor's Edge" campaign had seen the fulfillment of all that was learned from these openings with something added. For instance, a special unit was formed to coordinate the efforts of the advertising, publicity, exploitation and radio departments. This department now has become a permanent feature.

Plans for every picture on this year's schedule have been completed, he disclosed. Finished advertising layouts are ready now on releases from March through October. "While our plans are complete now they are flexible enough so that we can add to them new ideas and new thoughts as we approach the release of each picture," he said.

To acquaint the advertising and exploitation forces with all situations in order to make proper exploitation possible, 20th-Fox men in these departments will continue to make trips into the field for conferences with exhibitors and advertising men, Mr. Schlaifer declared. The first such trip will be made early in March and will cover the southern territory.

Emerling Lectures

Ernest Emerling, advertising manager of Loew's Theatres, was guest lecturer last Friday in the series of lectures on motion picture advertising and selling conducted by Henry A. Linet, Universal-International eastern advertising manager, at the New School for Social Research, New York. Mr. Emerling declared that "it is essential that theatre managers return to the fundamentals of showmanship and train their assistant in the art of picture selling."

School-Circuit Experiment with Pictures Begins

An experiment in visual education was inaugurated this week when seventh and eighth-grade pupils of four Brooklyn schools attended a screening of "Tom Sawyer" at the Century Circuit's Rialto theatre in Brooklyn. The showing was the first of a series of such performances arranged by the circuit and the Board of Education.

The project is part of the board's attempt to determine whether motion pictures, if carefully selected for that particular purpose, can be made into effective teaching aids. The initial program calls for four shows, all featuring screen adaptations of literary classics that are required reading in the two grades. After completion of the series reports evaluating the experiment will be made by the educators. The future scope of the project will depend on the results.

No Admission Charged

No admission is charged and the Century Circuit foots all bills. Included in the first four showings, besides "Tom Sawyer," will be "The Prince and the Pauper," "David Copperfield" and "Treasure Island." A "This Is America" short, "TVA," was also shown at the first screening. Shorts of this kind, which are related to the main feature, will be included in the future.

According to Arthur Bowie and Paul Kennedy, assistant superintendents of schools in Brooklyn, the first showing last Monday was a success from the administrative, programming and routing point of view. More than 1,000 enthusiastic students, accompanied by 30 teachers and five principals, were marched to the theatre to witness the show. Their behavior was said to be exemplary. Besides the teachers, the Rialto's regular staff was on hand. The screening was originally planned for last Friday, but school authorities anticipated the heavy snowfall and asked a postponement.

Fielding Cooperated

The four morning shows, one each month from February to May, were made possible through the offer of Fred J. Schwartz, vice-president of Century Theatres, who made his theatre available to the board, and through the cooperation of License Commissioner Benjamin Fielding. The whole program was worked out by representatives of Dr. John E. Wade, Superintendent of Schools; Mr. Schwartz; J. R. Springer, general theatre manager, and Edward Schreiber, advertising and publicity head.

All of the principals involved expressed themselves in enthusiastic terms about the project. After promising "every possible cooperation," Mr. Fielding said: "In the possible broad development of this program, which has so much potential usefulness, neighborhood playhouses may become valuable annexes to our school buildings."

ATA Loans Shugrue to "Freedom Train"

Ned Shugrue, public relations director of the American Theatres Association, has been loaned to the American Heritage Foundation to organize and promote the U. S. Government's "Freedom Train." An intensive educational campaign designed to promote a greater appreciation of the American heritage is planned through the use of all media by means of a national tour of a train housing American documents. The program is sponsored by the Government through the Department of Justice. The industry is expected to play a leading part in the promotion.

Pal Will Make Features Only

George Pal, originator and producer of the Pal Puppetoon series of shorts which Paramount is distributing, announced in Hollywood this week that he is dropping his Puppetoon program to enter feature production. Three productions, budgeted at $1,500,000 each, will be made by Mr. Pal.

The cartoon series was dropped because of prohibitive production costs, according to Mr. Pal. "Notwithstanding Paramount's generous offer to increase the budgets for the continuation of the Puppetoon subjects," Mr. Pal said, "the increasing high cost of filming this type of entertainment more than offsets the box office returns."

Both live actors and puppets will be used in three Pal features. All Puppetoon subjects now in production will be completed as well as the special sequence Mr. Pal is making for Paramount's "Variety Girl."

St Louis Bill Makes Refund Mandatory

The St. Louis Board of Aldermen has adopted a bill making it a misdemeanor for theatres and amusement places to refuse to refund the price of tickets if refunds are requested 24 hours in advance of a performance.

Committees Meet To Plan Variety Club Convention

Charles P. Skouras, chairman of the 11th annual convention of Variety Clubs International, to be held May 13-17 in Los Angeles, last week called the first full organizational meeting of all the committees to discuss plans.

Some 1,200 showmen representing local Variety Club tents throughout the U. S., Mexico and Canada are expected to attend, according to Robert J. O'Donnell, national chief barker, and Mr. Skouras, who is head of California's Ten 25, which will serve as host to the visiting delegates.

The annual highlight of the convention is the presentation of the Humanitarian Award to the man or woman who had in the previous year rendered the most outstanding service to mankind. Selection of the Award winner is made by polling 100 leading newspaper editors and publishers.

Mr. Judell said that a meeting will be held within the next few weeks, probably in New York, to complete details of organization.

Emerson Yorke Studio Completes Three Films

Emerson Yorke, head of the Emerson Yorke Studio in New York and producer of informative films, has completed three subjects. All are available in 16mm and 35mm for exhibition in theatres and for screening before organized groups.

The first, "Bill Bailey and the Four Pillars," is a factual film based on a Reader's Digest story by J. P. McEvoy. Filmed in Clarksville, Tenn., it shows how C. W. Bailey, then a local banker and now president of the American Bankers Association, interested impoverished tobacco farmers in raising crops. It runs 18 minutes and is being distributed by the American Bankers Association.

"A Message from Maynor" is a 10½-minute subject which the National Tuberculosis Association is distributing. The third, "National Air Races," is concerned with the first post-war air meet in Cleveland, Ohio. Running 21 minutes, it is distributed by the United States Rubber Company.

Plan Pictures on Roosevelt Life

Several motion pictures on the life and career of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt will be produced by Jay Richard Kennedy with the assistance of James Roosevelt under terms of an agreement announced in Hollywood last week.

While Mr. Roosevelt will aid Mr. Kennedy in collating material, he will not be part of the producing firm which will make the film. The number of pictures to be made, distribution channel, and subject matter of first film are undetermined as yet.

Mr. Kennedy said it was too soon to attempt to tell the whole life of the late President in one film, and for that reason, the arrangement provides for several films.

Mr. Kennedy entered the industry last year and is now completing his first picture, "Assigned to Treasury," a film dealing with illicit drug traffic.

In a separate statement, Mr. Roosevelt, commenting on reports his mother asked elimination of the late President's portrayal from MGM's "The Beginning or the End," said, "to my knowledge there exists no negotiations between members of my family or myself with MGM."

Amended Anti-ASCAP Bill Holds Producers Liable

A surprise amendment to make producers and distributors liable for a sum equal to any damages suffered by exhibitors through copyright infringements has changed the nature of Indiana's anti-ASCAP bill in the house of representatives. As a result of the amendment, the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana has announced its support of the bill, which has passed the Senate by a vote of 38 to 0. Another amendment would exempt radio stations from its provisions.

Three Clearance Awards Made

With the announcement this week of three clearance awards, two of which were consolidated, the American Arbitration Association's Cleveland tribunal has cleared all cases before it, thus enabling it to liquidate on April 1 under the Consent Decree.

Dismissing a complaint against Warners, the arbitrator in the consolidated award set seven days as the maximum clearance which may be granted in licenses entered into by Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO Radio in the Madison theatre or Ohio theatre, first runs in Madison, Ohio, over the Ashland and Palace in Ashland, and the Castamba in Shelby. The Schine Ashland Corporation operates the Ashland and Palace, and the Castamba is operated by the Schine Shelby Corporation, both of which were complainants in the cases.

While providing similar clearance in licenses entered into by MGM, the arbitrator further held that all clearance "shall be deemed to be waived 21 days after the availability" of the Mansfield theatres, whereas the clearance granted by Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and RKO would be waived 21 days after Cleveland exchange territorial release dates.

In the second award, involving the Crawford Theatre Company, which operates the Bucyrus and Southern theatres in Bucyrus, Ohio, as complainant, and naming Paramount, MGM and RKO Radio as defendant, the arbitrator ruled that the Palace and Marion theatres, first run in Marion, Ohio, operated by Northio Theatre Corporation, intervenor, shall play ahead of the complainant's houses, which may play Paramount and RKO Radio product immediately following Marion, Ohio, or 21 days after Cleveland territorial release dates, whichever is earlier. In the case of MGM product, the award stipulated that the complainant's houses play within 21 days after availability.

Group in Greece Cables Thanks

A joint Greek-American committee with headquarters in Athens and headed by Crown Princess Frederica, has been formed to supplement the Motion Picture Industry Appeal for Greek War Orphans, March 8-April 8. Jack Cohn, Ned E. Depinet and S. H. Fabian, co-chairmen of the industry's appeal, learned of the committee's formation through a cablegram last week from the Greek Princess.

Princess Frederica, in assuring the American industry leaders of her nation's gratitude and support, hailed the industry for outstanding aid given to the people of her country during the German occupation. She expressed confidence that the current drive would be marked by the same success achieved in the past.

The wire read, in part: "... We take this opportunity to send our best wishes and our heartiest thanks to you and the motion picture industry of America for continued constructive work in restoring health to our suffering children. We confidently hope that your endeavors will be crowned with the success that has characterized the splendid cooperation of American Motion Picture Industry with the great work of the Greek War Relief Association both in the dark days of slavery when the American people through the Greek War Relief saved our people from destruction by famine," the wire concluded.

Levee, to the ninth report meeting in Hollywood last Thursday. The total was contributed by 20,487 persons. Subscriptions to our campaign so far are 83 per cent of last year's."

Warner Picture Halted in Mexico

Production in Mexico of Warners' "The Treasures of the Sierra Madre" has been suspended because of objections to the filming of scenes said to be derogatory to Mexico. The Government's Cinematographic Supervision Department has ordered that these scenes be developed in Mexico and has warned that if anything is found that is disparaging the film will be seized and cannot be exported. The Cinematographic Supervision Department is now investigating the production.

The trouble began with near riots in Tampico when a mob objected to the filming there of scenes of beggars and drunks. The mob insisted the filming be stopped. Order was restored by a departmental supervisor.

The Cinematographic Department has announced that the scenario of the picture, directed by John Huston, has its approval, but it still insists the film is liable to be seized if it should be found to injure the national character.

Experiment to Determine Run Policy on "Carnegie Hall"

Exhibition policy for the Boris Morros-Albert Lewin picture, "Carnegie Hall," will be set on the basis of an experimental roadshow run at the Bushnell Memorial Theatre in Hartford, Connecticut, according to Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., advertising and publicity head of United Artists, distributing the film. The test will determine whether the film has sufficient appeal for a roadshow policy, or whether it will be shown under a normal-price, grind policy.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

CHESTER FRIEDMAN, Editor

Back in the Forefront

Last week's guest speaker at the series of lectures on motion picture advertising and selling which is being given by H. A. Linet, eastern advertising manager for Universal-International, at the New School for Social Research in New York was Ernest Emerling, advertising manager for Loew's theatres.

Mr. Emerling pointed out that the film companies provide the tools with which to sell the attractions, and the manager must make use of these tools if he is to remain in the running with his competitors. Mr. Emerling was speaking of press books. Nowadays, the manager who does not resort to these manuals regularly is not only placing the theatre in jeopardy of running behind his competitor but he is also placing himself in danger of becoming stagnant, with the obvious consequences.

Mr. Emerling also placed stress on the necessity of training assistant managers in the art of picture selling. We are happy to see that at least one circuit is aware of the importance of the assistant manager and the important role he plays in the success and operation of the theatre. Unfortunately, during the war the caliber of manpower in this department deteriorated along with other standards.

The assistant manager is our secondary line of power for the continued development and expansion of the industry. He is our first line in the policy that promotion must come from within the ranks.

Foresight

Theatremen in Camden, N. J., have reported a drop in grosses which they attribute to the suspension of the Courier-Post in that city. The drop has continued in spite of extensive use of radio, sound trucks and advertisements in weekly newspapers.

More than a year ago, when labor problems were first forcing newspapers to temporarily discontinue publication, this column suggested that showmen should be exercising their skill in meeting emergencies by preparing an overall schedule for just such an emergency.

Extensive use of radio, which the Camden exhibitors are using in place of daily newspaper advertising, can only be effective if and when choice or selected time is available. Even the smaller radio stations are pretty well saturated with commercials these days and doubtless the theatremen did not find it easy to pick up what might be considered the best spots for their announcements.

On the other hand, it might not be difficult under these conditions to persuade one or more of the regular advertisers holding preferred time that injecting theatre programs and schedules in their regular broadcasts would be an excellent public service. Many of these promotions could be lined up, perhaps, in return for a lobby card announcing that the theatre attractions were being broadcast daily through the courtesy of the cooperating merchant or merchants.

For such an emergency it could do no harm and would certainly indicate that the manager was on his toes if he did have on hand for immediate reference a complete schedule of all possible media to reach his patrons. This should include whatever means he has of reaching the public within a reasonable budget, including transportation agencies, outdoor posting, distributing agencies, schools, libraries and other public assembly points.

Mel Jolley, manager of the Marks theatre, Oshawa, Ontario, has started a Boys and Girls Club which offers a new twist, in that the theatre has a guaranteed 18-week patronage at no cost.

Mr. Jolley tied up with the Quaker Oats Company of Canada which supplies membership certificates, official badges and autographed photos of the Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey Team to the theatre.

The certificates and badges were distributed to every child who attended the initial matinee in exchange for a box top from Quaker Oats. On subsequent Saturdays, different photos of the hockey players are given away for a box top.

As Mr. Jolley points out, the promotion cost the theatre nothing; it helps to sell seats and creates goodwill amongst the kids. This type of cooperation with the "adults of tomorrow" also builds a steady patronage.

PROMOTION IDEAS FROM THE FIELD

Three-way tieup between the Warner theatre, Station WISN and musicians association netted extra publicity for "Humoresque" for manager Harry MacDonald of the Warner. A "Fiddle for Fame" contest was open to all high school students. Harry is presenting winner with season pass as Ellis Saxton WISN looks on.

"Lady Luck" smiled on fortunate patrons at the Paramount theatre, Portland, Ore. Those who entered as alarm clock sounded off were given guest ticket to see "Lady Luck" by manager Frank L. Pratt.

RKO showmen in Metropolitan New York sold "Song of the South" with smart tactics like these. Left, Flushing, Long Island, patrons were asked to rub Brer Rabbit's foot, covered with real fur on the display, for good luck; right, manager Lee Koken used this clever "Open the Door, Richard" sign to announce that box office would open at 8:30 a.m.

"Till the Clouds Roll By" ballyhoo by E. Richardson, Granada, Cleveland, O., with umbrellas carrying theatre message.

To ballyhoo "Three Girls in Blue," at the Capitol theatre, Chatham, Ontario, H. F. Wilson, manager of the theatre, had three attractive misses wearing capes with theatre copy walking about downtown streets.

LOBBY CONTEST

To exploit "The Verdict" at the Paramount theatre, Atlanta, Ga., manager S. J. George erected this crazy-quilt design from stills of the picture. He then invited patrons to guess the number of faces which appear on the display and offered guest tickets to the first 50 submitting the nearest correct answers. A neat bit of showmanship, adaptable to any picture.

During March of Dimes Drive, showmen turned to with a will to aid fight against infantile paralysis. Displays such as this "Wishing Well" at manager Charles Zinn's State theatre, Minneapolis, were in evidence.

IN ARGENTINA the opening of "A Thousand and One Nights" at the Ocean theatre, Buenos Aires, called for special exploitation activity by manager Salvador Salias. One phase of his campaign included this spectacular front with huge star paintings. Photographs and lettering on all entrance doors gave an impressive effect.

"CAESAR ET PATIO EST," says copy on this pony cart. Translated it means that "Caesar and Cleopatra" is on the Century Patio theatre screen in Brooklyn, N. Y. It also means that manager Allen Grant of the Patio was right on the ball exploiting the film.

MONTY SALMON, manager of the Rivoli theatre in New York, set up this attractive display on the theatre mezzanine to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Edison.

ADVANCE lobby buildup for "Caravan". At the Vogue, Vancouver, manager Al Jenkins employed a fortune teller and had usherettes dressed in colorful gypsy garb.

The Selling Approach

ON NEW PRODUCT

SUDDENLY IT'S SPRING (Paramount): A gay, romantic comedy, this picture stars Paulette Goddard and Fred MacMurray. The title of the picture coincides with the season of release and thereby suggests a Spring style show in cooperation with a department store. The show could be held on the stage of your theatre. The store's promotion facilities can help you put the event over. Newspaper ads, radio time, in-the-store displays and direct mail could be used.

For street ballyhoo, use an attractive girl, heavily bedecked with flowers and carrying a facsimile calendar of the current month. Your playdates are circled in red. Copy above the calendar reads: "Suddenly It's Spring", Gem theatre". Another ballyhoo is the time-tried park bench gag. All you need is a bench, which can be planted practically anywhere, and a tack card, with copy: "Reserved for sweethearts—because 'Suddenly It's Spring'—Gem theatre".

A special Varga drawing of Miss Goddard is available for many exploitation purposes. It could be used with a calendar throwaway, postcard mailer, lobby display, teaser tack cards and window displays. This question is suggested for use by your newspaper inquiring reporter or radio station man-in-the-street broadcast: "What is the most obnoxious thing your husband does: (1) Drop ashes on the rug? (2) Blow smoke in your face? (3) Wear loud ties? (4) Monopolize the conversation with old jokes?"

The title song, "Suddenly It's Spring", opens the way for music promotions. You might build a radio or newspaper quiz, with contestants required to submit lists of pictures inspired by song titles. Suggest to the local disc jockeys that they line up a program of "Spring songs", including the title song.

WAKE UP AND DREAM (20th Century-Fox): Here is a fanciful tale, based on Robert Nathan's novel, "The Enchanted Voyage". Exploit the book angle. Check book outlets for "Read the book—see the picture" window and counter displays and other tieup possibilities.

June Haver's role in the picture suggests a contest to find the most popular waitress in town. Tie in with local restaurants for balloting and extra promotional aids. Ex-G.I. John Payne appears as a member of the United States Coast Guard in the picture. Offer a contest to name which branches of service Payne has appeared in on the screen. Examples: "To the Shores of Tripoli" (Marines), "The Dolly Sisters" (Army) and "Wings of the Navy" (Navy).

Sponsor a ship model contest for the kids, awarding guest tickets for the best models. Interest grownups who follow ship modeling as a hobby to exhibit their work. Feature exhibits in the lobby or in leading department stores.

Headline your campaign with a pigtail contest inspired by Connie Marshall's role in the picture. Her title as "Queen of the Pigtails", won during her modeling career, is your cue to start the pigtail contest rolling. Try for juvenile club, playground and school tieins. Award guest tickets.

placed in beauty shops for distribution to patrons as part of the advance campaign carried out for "Nora Prentiss" by manager Frank Savage, Warner theatre, Youngstown, Pa. The reverse side of the card carried picture credits and playdate.

Distributes Napkins, Bags

Through a tieup with local merchants, manager Fred Perry obtained 5,000 imprinted napkins and 5,000 imprinted paper bags to exploit his engagement of "The Beast With Five Fingers" at the Liberty theatre, Cumberland, Md.

Exploits Local "Jolson" Angle

Manager Harold Maloney played up the fact that Larry Parks, star of "The Jolson Story," acted with a stock company at nearby Whalom Park to exploit his playdate of the picture at the Poli, Worcester, Mass.

Shoppers' Show Starts Campaign Off for "Life"

A special shoppers' premiere showing of "It's a Wonderful Life," and advertised 10 days in advance, gave impetus to the campaign arranged for the playdate of the picture at Reade's Kingston theatre, Kingston, N. Y. The campaign was conducted by manager Robert Case.

An inquiring photographer gag was used at the shoppers' premiere. People were asked what they thought about the picture. Their comments and photos were used in the local newspaper and on a 40x60 board for display in the lobby. Comment cards were passed out at the special showing. These also were used for a display in the lobby.

A three-quarter page cooperative ad was promoted in the Kingston Daily Leader. Seven merchants participated in the ad. A newspaper teaser ad campaign also helped to promote the playdate. An institutional trailer, recommending the picture, was used for 10 days before opening.

Similar campaigns are being carried out for "It's a Wonderful Life" throughout the Walter Reade circuit. In some cases, instead of a shoppers' premiere, either a midnight show or a special preview have been substituted.

Extensive Press Coverage Aids Stage Attraction

A wealth of newspaper publicity was garnered for a stage attraction headed by screen stars Kathryn Grayson and Johnnie Johnston at the Albee theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. The campaign was arranged by manager Joe Alexander and RKO publicist Nathan Wise. Additional press publicity resulted from a promotional stunt in which the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternal group selected Miss Grayson as "Dream Girl" on the campus of the University of Cincinnati. A tieup with WKRC's four-page tabloid, with 60,000 distribution, netted a half-page of publicity. The two stars appeared on three radio programs.

Seeks Support of Church Groups

The support of church organizations was sought for the engagement of "Angel on My Shoulder" at the Century theatre, Baltimore, Md. Manager Bill Saxton and Loew's publicist Gertrude Bunchez pointed out to the religious groups that the film contains a message on juvenile delinquency.

Dancers Aid "London Town"

Manager R. Leddra arranged for professional dancers to give exhibitions of the dance known as "The Ampstead Way" on the stage to exploit the playdate of "London Town" at the Gaumont Palace, Salisbury, England. The dance is featured in the film.

Merchant Sponsors Search For "Perfect Marriage"

A search for a "Perfect Marriage" was arranged by manager Walter B. Lloyd through a tieup with a local jeweler to promote the engagement of the picture at the Allyn theatre, Hartford, Conn. Announcements were made over the local radio station that persons living in the Greater Hartford area could write in their choices for the "Perfect Marriage," stating their reasons. The winning couple, selected by a jury of three persons, received a two-day trip to New York for a second honeymoon.

Clues Scattered In Hartford for "Heart" Hunt

A treasure hunt was arranged by manager Fred R. Greenway to promote his date on "My Secret Heart" at the Palace theatre, Hartford, Conn. Heart-shaped designs, used as clues, were scattered throughout the downtown areas. Persons finding the designs received guest tickets and cash prizes. Local newspapers cooperated by announcing the contest.

For another promotion, Greenway arranged a tieup with local super-markets whereby alarm clocks were placed near the cashier in each store. Every time the alarm rang, the person at the cash register would get two passes to see the picture. A large clock was set up in a local jewelry store window, with copy announcing that persons guessing closest to the time the clock would stop would receive guest tickets.

A newspaper contest also was promoted with guest tickets being awarded for the best letters on the subject, "'Secret Heart' desires." A sundae named after the picture was featured in a number of local ice cream parlors. Koppelman news delivery trucks were bannered with playdate copy. Teaser post cards were mailed out to a list of feminine names.

Police and Radio Join in Safety Test for "Chase"

The cooperation of the Atlantic City Police Department and radio station WEPG was obtained for a five-day "perfect pedestrian" contest held in conjunction with the playdate of "The Chase" at the Hollywood theatre, Atlantic City, N. J. A sergeant and three policemen were assigned the task of selecting the safest street crossers and the one "perfect pedestrian." The award, a $25 savings bond, was made over the air in a

Fearless Woman Attends Private Horror Preview

A publicity stunt which involved a search for a woman to view "The Beast With Five Fingers" alone at midnight was utilized to the fullest for the playdate of the picture at the Palace theatre, South Norwalk, Conn. Arranged by manager Murray Howard, the promotion attracted city-wide interest.

Howard started the ball rolling by advertising in the Norwalk Hour several days for a woman courageous enough to sit alone in the dark and watch the horror picture unfold. More than a dozen women volunteered for the experiment and a young lady who said her heart was strong enough to meet the test was chosen.

The day of the special screening, Howard ran a special ad to further exploit the event. Alongside a clutching hand, copy read: "To-nite at 12 midnight this hand will crawl on the screen exclusively for (name and address of person) and when the lights go up—if she is still there a crisp $10 bill is her reward. I'll tell you in tomorrow's ad what she says as she hurries on her way out."

The following day's ad carried quotes by the lone spectator, describing her experience. In addition a story of the event was carried in the news section of the paper. The Hour also had a story of the publicity stunt prior to the midnight screening. The campaign resulted in the setting of a new Sunday attendance record.

Uses Radio Month Ahead for Javor Personal Appearance

Manager E. F. Kistner started his campaign four weeks in advance with spot radio announcements to exploit the personal appearance of Paul Javor, Hungarian actor, at the Forsythe theatre, East Chicago, Ind. The announcements were made every day up to and including opening day. Two weeks in advance a display was set up in the lobby consisting of tear-sheets from the New York Times and stills supplied by Javor's manager. 2,000 small size window cards were planted in East Chicago and adjacent towns. 3,000 heralds were distributed. The December and January issues of

Musical Ballyhoo, Teen-Agers Exploit "Three Girls in Blue"

The combined cooperation of the local teen-age club, merchants, radio stations, newspapers and civic authorities resulted in a highly effective campaign for the opening of "Three Little Girls in Blue" at the Miller theatre, Augusta, Ga. The campaign was arranged by manager P. E. McCoy.

The teen-age club conducted a contest among members, starting two weeks before opening, to select a trio that could sing and represent the trio of stars appearing in the picture. The three girls selected, dressed in blue, toured the city singing popular tunes from the picture.

They appeared on 15 radio shows, visited all night spots, restaurants, hotels, stores, schools and other places of interest as guest entertainers. The radio shows included the "Talk of the Town" program over WRDW, "Colonial Showboat Hour" over WRDW, four one-quarter hour programs arranged by Royal Crown Cola over WGAC, and two teen-age programs over WBBQ.

The trio appeared on special programs at the Sheraton Bon-Air Hotel through the courtesy of the management. Each program was broadcast over WRDW. The girls visited the hotel during the dinner hour each day, giving away candy kisses in the dining rooms. The girls also gave away candy kisses on their visits to stores, schools, etc.

A special stage was erected on the street in front of the theatre, where the trio sang tunes from the picture. The ballyhoo was broadcast over WRDW and WGAC each afternoon. A master of ceremonies was on hand to publicize the playdate. A bannered truck supplied by Royal Crown Cola carried the girls on a "hayride" through the city's streets. Royal Crown also arranged for a broadcast from the truck over WGAC.

J. B. White's department store ran beauty salon cooperative newspaper ads and a co-op tie-in ad on their music department. Both the Chronicle and the Herald broke with eight-column streamer stories three days in advance. Pastel colored setpieces and streamers were set up well in advance.

Magyar Mozi, Hungarian language film magazine, carried stories on the personal appearance of Javor at the Forsythe. The actor and party were guests at an official reception in the East Chicago City Hall two days before opening.

Novel Twin Baby Contest Promotes "Irish Rose"

A twin-baby promotion drew considerable attention to the engagement of "Abie's Irish Rose" at the United Artist theatre, San Francisco, Cal. Manager Kenneth Means offered a $50 savings bond to each of the first twins born after the opening of the picture. Telephone calls were made to all hospitals in order that the birth of the prize-winning twins could be recorded accurately. Harry Smith, columnist of the San Francisco Chronicle, publicized the novel promotion a week in advance.

Promotes Two Bicycles for Valentine Day Giveaway

Co-Op Ads Set Pace for Date On "Clouds"

Three cooperative newspaper ads were promoted by manager Arthur Groom to exploit "Till the Clouds Roll By" at the Victory theatre, Evansville, Ind. The ads were set with Ideal Pure Milk Company, Schuttler's Music Store and Tri-State Photo Supply Company. Each of the ads appeared in both the Courier and Press.

A girl paraded the streets, carrying an umbrella for three days. Copy painted on the umbrella read: "Till the Clouds Roll By' now at Loew's." A tieup was arranged with Tri-State Photo Supply, whereby hit tunes from the picture were played over a loud speaker from the doorway of their store. After each number, announcements were made, giving playdate credit. The store is located on Main Street, a block from the theatre.

Another tieup was made with Silver's Record Shop to sponsor two 15-minute radio programs in addition to their regular weekly program. For these programs, persons identifying Jerome Kern songs received Kern record albums. The R. & G. Furniture Company plugged the picture on their quiz program broadcast from the lobby of the theatre each Sunday.

Twenty downtown juke boxes carried cards reading: "Play the hit tunes from 'Till the Clouds Roll By'." Window streamers were used in record shops. Window tieups were arranged with Tri-State Photo Supply, Silver's, Schuttler and Sater's Clothing Store. Other displays were set with hotels McCurdy, Vendome and Sonntag, Schear's department store and others.

A few days before opening and during the run of the picture sandwich men covered the city. Three large size cutout figures of Judy Garland were displayed in the lobby a week in advance. The cutouts were displayed in three department stores during the run of the picture.

Tickets sold starting a week in advance were stamped on the back with copy, reading: "Don't forget to make a date with those gorgeous 'Harvey Girls'." An arrangement was made with Newcomers Service whereby that organization hands out theatre passes to each new Seattleite when they welcome the new arrival to the city. A second tieup was made with the twice-weekly "Application for Happiness" radio program. Guest tickets are awarded to couples interviewed on the program. The third tie-in was made with a local music box company that has a nightly broadcast. A tune is played and the first person calling in the correct title receives a pair of passes to the theatre whose program is plugged. The passes are the only cost involved in each tieup.

PICTURE GROSSES

A statistical compilation and comparison of Box Office Performance in first run theatres

NEW BASE LINE

Beginning in this issue, the average, or 100 per cent, line of these tabulations is the average weekly business of the theatres concerned for the six months ending January 31, 1947. The previous period ended October 31, 1946. This brings into the new base a recognition of current economic conditions as they affect box-office performance.

Figures opposite theatre names represent percentage of tabulated grosses to average weekly business based on the six months' period ending January 31, 1947.

Many New Films Sent to Germany

A number of new films, including many that were hits when first released in the United States, recently have been approved for showing in Germany, according to Irving Maas, vice-president and general manager of the Motion Picture Export Association.

Included among the pictures are "The Green Years," "Anna and the King of Siam," "Bells of St. Mary's," "Song of Bernadette," "This Land Is Mine," "One Foot in Heaven," "Our Town," "Rebecca," "Spellbound," "Holiday Inn," "How Green Was My Valley" and "Gaslight." Both the U. S. State Department and the American Military Government in Germany have to give their approval before American pictures can be released by the MPEA in Germany.

No definite date has been set for the Army to relinquish its supervision of MPEA activities, Mr. Maas said, and even when this happens Army authorities will continue to exercise censorship as long as American soldiers remain in Germany. However, once MPEA is given freedom of operation by the Army, which may happen within the next six months, the present system will be changed. MPEA will then select the films it considers suitable and send them to Germany, where AMG will pass on them. At present the Army asks for specific pictures.

Mr. Maas said the present German market required enough product to permit a program change once every week. The Export Association now asks its member companies for the master negative of a film which is then sent to Germany.

Essaness May Invade Chicago South Side Area

Chicago Bureau

The Essaness theatre circuit or independent theatre interests may contemplate an "invasion of the Chicago south side, which heretofore has been dominated by the Balaban & Katz and Warner circuits. Plans have gone ahead for future erection of a 2,000-seat house in Chicago's south shore district.

Randolph Bohrer, an attorney, is a partner of the Bohrer & Barkhausen firm which, as the "Double B" Corporation, are the present lessees of the 32 W. Randolph Building, housing the Oriental theatre. The Oriental is now operated by Essaness.

Mr. Bohrer is seeking to obtain a zoning variation so that a theatre can be erected at 71st and South Shore Drive. However, numerous residents of the district appeared at a hearing of the Zoning Board of Appeals February 17 to oppose any zoning changes.

Mr. Bohrer's petition stated he was desirous of erecting "a theatre of not more than 2,000 seats although erection is not contemplated at the present." Mr. Bohrer acquired the property from the Marshall Field Estate.

Ambrose Finn, an attorney representing important property owners in the area of the contemplated theatre, said that the block involved is the only one zoned for business, although half of the area is actually residential.

The matter was continued to March 24 to enable the objectors to prepare their arguments against the re-zoning.

Si Meyers

Si Meyers, 55, vice-president of North Jersey Allied Theatre Owners and legislative representative at Trenton, died suddenly at Miami Beach last Monday. He was buried Friday from the Grovler Funeral Parlors, Moorestown, N. J. He operated the Garden theatre, Trenton.

The Devil Thumbs a Ride

RKO Radio—Melodrama

The devil referred to in the title of Herman Schlom's latest production is none other than Lawrence Tierney, and satanic he certainly is in the role of murderer, forger and holdup man. Ted North, representing in this case the forces of good, gives a sensitive performance which lends sharp contrast to Tierney's portrayal of the sardonic killer.

Felix Feist, who directed from his own screenplay based on a novel by Robert C. Du-Soe, has employed much ingenuity to keep the audience at seat's edge. The picture is thrill-packed, hard-hitting melodrama from start to finish, with never a dull moment and never a pause for breath.

In the opening sequences, Tierney holds up and kills a theatre manager. Then he thumbs a ride north with a gentle, home-loving silk salesman, who knows little peace thereafter. When the pair stop for gas, they pick up two more hitch-hikers: personable young ladies played by Nan Leslie and Betty Lawford. At the gas station, Tierney makes a fatal mistake: he insults the young attendant. The latter subsequently hears a police broadcast describing Tierney and, on a hunch, notifies the authorities. From there on it's a breath-taking chase, with many a perilous moment for Tierney's companions when they learn his identity.

In the supporting cast, Harry Shannon as the police captain and Glenn Vernon as the station attendant are particularly outstanding.

Carnegie Hall

UA-Federal—Concert

Producers Boris Morros and William Le Baron moved their Federal Films Productions cameras onto the stage of New York City's most hallowed musical showcase, Carnegie Hall, to film this most bountiful of classical music programs. Practically every top name in the music field—symphony conductors, singers, violinists—appears in this film as a soloist.

It's a vast, brilliantly-recorded picture sure to receive immediate applause from any music lover. But more than this, it will please even the non-musical who don't know a clarinet from a crescendo, providing the exhibitor cares to do a little missionary work among his customers. It will please these people because, while the music is strictly long-haired, with a couple of exceptions, the more familiar, more showy selections are used. The exceptions are Vaughn

Monroe and his orchestra, and Harry James and his horn.

The concert stars appearing comprise a who's who of the musical world: the conductors, Walter Damrosch, Bruno Walter, Artur Rodzinski, Fritz Reiner and Leopold Stokowski; the singers, Lily Pons, Rise Stevens, Jan Peerce and Ezio Pinza; the cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky; the pianist, Artur Rubinstein; the violinist, Jascha Heifetz. All these, plus the New York Philharmonic and the Philharmonic Quintette.

Binding these stars and their offerings together is an all too typical framework of a story of a mother who wants her son to grow up to be a pianist good enough to play at Carnegie Hall. The boy is a pianist, all right, but he prefers to play with Vaughn Monroe's orchestra. This situation makes for passion and pathos, but the film is resolved happily by having the pianist-son appear at Carnegie as the composer-conductor-pianist of a modern horn concerto with Harry James as soloist.

The Hollywood cast enacting this sandwiched story comprises Marsha Hunt, the mother; William Prince, the son; Frank McHugh, the Carnegie Hall porter and doorman; and Martha O'Driscoll, a popular singer who provides the love interest.

For the theatre patron who spends his Sunday afternoons listening to symphony broadcasts, this film will prove a delight. The music includes the "Leonora Overture," a selection from Beethoven's "Fifth," the "Bell Song" from Lakme, the "Seguidilla" from "Carmen," a Chopin Polonaise, a Tchaikowsky violin concerto, selections from "Die Meistersinger," and an aria from "Don Giovanni."

Edgar G. Ulmer directed. Karl Kamb wrote the screenplay from an original story by Seena Owen.

Beat the Band

RKO Radio—Comedy with Music

Swing addicts will give ready reception to the music of Gene Krupa and his band, as well as to the singing of Frances Langford, whose rendering of such songs as "I'm in Love" and "I've Got My Fingers Crossed" is definitely in the groove. Based on a Broadway musical, adapted to the screen by Lawrence Kimple and Arthur Ross, the story doesn't make too much sense, a fact which does detract from the picture's essential entertainment value.

It concerns a band leader, home from the wars, who finds his partner has invested his savings in a racehorse, rather than using the funds to keep the band together, so the veteran has to start all over from scratch. With the help of Miss Langford, Krupa, and a number of fortuitous circumstances, he makes good and ends up with a contract to play in a smart New York hotel.

Phillip Terry handles the male lead with authority, and the cast, Ralph Edwards, in particular, gives him staunch support. Michel Wraike produced under the executive supervision of Sid Rogell. Resultant production values are more than satisfactory. John Auer's direction is spirited and deft.

The Private Affairs of Bel Ami

UA-Loew-Lewin—Story of Scoundrel

Guy de Maupassant's novel, "Bel Ami", furnished Albert Lewin the basis for what he calls "The Private Affairs of Bel Ami". The affairs are very much present and not always so private in this intellectual-level, Oscar Wildish undertaking adapted and directed by Lewin under the producing wing of David M. Loew.

For thoroughly sophisticated audiences, this film will prove a treat. For those not so saturated, its appeal is in serious doubt.

The talented and intelligent craftsman which Lewin is unquestionably is imprinted on "Bel Ami" from beginning to end. Here he is dealing with Paris of the '80s and the rise of the cynic, played by George Sanders, in the world of journalism and politics. Sanders has native talent to help him on his way, but what helps him most is a ruthless disregard for the women in his life whether married, unmarried or widowed. Sanders takes them on in full swing, gearing that stride to this expressed theory: "Marriage and love are two entirely different subjects". And, also, to this summed-up opinion of womanhood at large: "Women strike me as being incredibly stupid. They can be caught by a smile, a look, a compliment—anything that touches their vanity. It is impossible not to despise them."

Despising six as he may, or coining an epigram (smart crack) as could have been the case, certainly he employs them as steps up the ladder of his ambitions. There is Marie Wilson, who hangs around the cafes and the Folies Bergere. He carries on with Angela Lansbury, ditches her to marry Ann Dvorak. While married to her, he persuades Katherine Emery, wife of his publisher, to fall in love with him. He compromises Miss Dvorak to frame a divorce after which he sets out to win Susan Douglas, the publisher's daughter, having first nurtured the romance while continuing as Miss Dvorak's husband. He's a cad, a cheat, a liar. He is dishonest, unfaithful and unscrupulous. His story is what the main title declares it to be: the story of a scoundrel. And it ends with his death in a duel precipitated by an effort to usurp, if legally, the title of one of France's noblest houses.

All of this is not pretty, but it is interesting and frequently fascinating in its way. The dialogue is grown-up and smooth if often brittle and shallow. Led by Sanders and Miss Lansbury, acting standards are very high by a cast of principals, all of whom respond sympathetically to Lewin's knowing directorial guidance which, at one point, parallels a device used by him in "The Picture of Dorian Gray". This is the unexpected inset in color of an anguished painting called "The Temptation of St. Anthony" by Max Ernst.

Production values, in all approaches, match the same top-grade quality of the performances. Russell Metty's stunning photography and magnificent scene compositions often approach, they do not enter, the realm of black-and-white art. The musical score, composed and conducted by Darius Milhaud, clearly is an asset. Ray Heinz was associate producer.

Law of the Lash

PRC—Cheyenne Kid

PRC gives Western fans another action-packed film of outdoor adventure. Al La Rue, nicknamed "Lash" because of his skill with a whip, plays the Cheyenne Kid. His sidekick is again Al "Fuzzy" St. John, who is entertaining with his typical humor.

The story follows the usual pattern of a gang holding up a stagecoach. The hero endeavors to locate the gang. He is finally successful in capturing them and thus restores law and order to the town. The part of the heroine, played by Mary Scott, is small in accordance with practice in most Westerns. Others in the cast include Lee Roberts, Jack O'Shea and Charles King.

The Fabulous Dorseys

UA-Rogers—Biography in Swingtime

Charles R. Rogers' version of the life and times of the brothers Dorsey will bring to the box office those sophisticates to whom the names of Paul Whiteman, Henry Busse, Mike Pingatore, Ziggy Elman, Bob Eberly, Helen O'Connell, Art Tatum, Stuart Foster and Ray Bauduc are magical and meaningful. Those whose interest lies along other lines, and who can't tell a trombone from a trumpet, will find the picture mildly diverting. That diversion depends less upon the story than on the music, and the recollections of the Roaring Twenties which the music evokes.

Such nostalgic numbers as "Marie," "Green Eyes," "Never Say Never" and "The Object of My Affections" are strung like pearls along a slender story thread. The screenplay, an original by Richard English, Art Arthur and Curtis Kenyon, opens in a small coal-mining town in 1916, and shows the Dorsey Brothers—Tommy and Jimmy—already launched upon a musical career, at the urging of their father, who doesn't want his sons to end up in the mines.

Chief conflict lies in the temperament and disposition of the brothers themselves. Although both love music, their interpretation of it is radically different, and constant quarreling over interpretation leads to a rift between them. Each forms his own band, and goes his separate way, to the distress and disappointment of their parents. Through the good offices of Whitman, and the efforts of Janet Blair and William Lundigan, cast in romantic roles, the pair are eventually reconciled.

John W. Rogers was associate producer, and Alfred E. Green directed. Louis Forbes is credited as musical director.

Her newspaper is sponsoring a campaign against the new chief of police, but the girl reporter believes that the chief is qualified for his job. Jungle Flight

Paramount—Adventure and Romance

This Pine and Thomas production is primarily an adventure-romance story of a cargo flying service over a mountain range in South America. Many of the scenes are of aerial action of planes piloted by former AAF fliers, who are working to make money to buy a commercial line in Texas.

The two pilots, played by Robert Lowery and Robert Kent, fly equipment across a mountain range to a mine. Kent is killed when his overloaded plane crashes and explodes. Lowery meets Ann Savage, who gets him to take her to the mine as a cook. The girl is running away from her divorced husband, who has been recently released from prison. The convict finds his way to the camp, but the local police arrest him. The ex-husband is killed in a gun fight, and Lowery rescues the girl and they are looking forward to a peaceful life in Texas.

Supporting players include Barton McLane, as the aggressive mine owner, and Douglas Fowley as the villain. William Pine and William Thomas produced, with Peter Stewart directing. David Lang wrote the original story, and Whitman Chambers the screenplay.

Code of the West

RKO Radio—Western

James Warren has a tumultuous time of it as he tries to bring law and order to a western frontier town, and in heroic fashion, he achieves that end and also wins the hand of Debra Alden, attractive, and a good actress. The film has greater plot development and sharper characterizations than the routine Western, making it, in its classification, a noteworthy picture.

Based on a novel by Zane Grey, Norman Houston's screenplay has to do with a suave badman who, through corruption and thuggery, controls the life of the town. When Warren and his roguish aide, John Laurenz, come to town to develop their land, the forces of evil get worried and start kicking up a good deal of whoop-de-do, which includes land-burning and murder.

As something of a departure in a standard Western, two romances develop in the story, both ending in conjugal bliss. Before the outlawry is ended, the film detonates with bursts of gunfire and fisticuffs, and is scattered liberally with hard riding.

Rita Lynn shows up impressively as the amorous senorita of the secondary romance. William Berke directed, and Herman Schlom produced.

The Farmer's Daughter

RKO Radio—Top Drawer Show

If this occasionally uncertain business of trying to diagnose product on the basis of a projection room screening may be tossed aside this one time anyway, the road to a quick verdict opens wide with this: "The Farmer's Daughter" is in the bag with all kinds of elbow room to spare.

This delightful and oft-times meaningful story about the American political scene was suggested by a play by Juhni Tervataa and whipped into its present form by Allan Rivkin and Laura Kerr. Its heroine is Loretta Young, whose screen parents are Swedish and whose native accent passes along to the daughter. Leaving the farmstead in search of training as a nurse, she immediately meets adventure on the high road under circumstances suggesting an illicit affair with Rhys Williams.

Only it never happens, and audiences know it. Her money gone, Miss Young takes a temporary job as second maid in the home of Joseph Cotten, Representatives from the 13th District and constantly enmeshed in politics. Cotten's mother is Ethel Barrymore, 20 years on the political scene and fully aware of all its turnings. With the death of Thurston Hall, the machine of which Miss Barrymore is silent power and Cotten its active representative, is faced with need to pick a new candidate. There isn't much choice, which goes to Art Baker.

Meanwhile, Miss Young is gradually falling in love with Cotten, as he is with her. She establishes a special place for herself in the family, voices her views on democracy, sizes up Baker for all his rotten record in public service, challenges him at a rally and is picked by the opposition as a rival candidate. In between this is the job of educating herself at night sessions of the university.

Williams shows up, lies about the early incident for a consideration and, subsequently, is exposed along with Baker, who turns out to be local head of an organization clearly indicated as the Klu Klux Klan, but without ever naming it. This exonerates Miss Young and leads to a joining of the political fortunes of both parties with her as the single candidate. She wins, marries Cotten and off to Washington they go.

But beyond a clever story, well rounded out, there is the matter of performance and incident. "The Farmer's Daughter" is rich in both under the Rivkin-Kerr script, H. C. Potter's very capable direction and the adroit producing controls of Dore Schary.

Miss Young was never better. Cotten is very good. Miss Barrymore, of course, is a tower of acting strength in her own knowing manner. Charles Bickford, as the family retainer, has a fat part from which he extracts full values without overplaying.

Fitting logically into the story fabric are several passages developed in the traditional school of democratic fundamentals. There is also a bit of never-too-gentle satire thrown at the heads of political numbskulls. But it should be understood this is not a political tract. It is a piece of entertainment, and a very swell one at that.

The Sin of Harold Diddlebock

UA-California—Harold Lloyd

Harold Lloyd comes back to the screen in a fantastically constructed piece of slapstick, a wonderful hodgepodge of nonsense, a Mack Sennett-styled comedy of silliness that will have audiences hysterically gasping for breath at some of the sequences.

Produced, directed and written by Preston Sturges and presented by the California Pictures Corporation (Howard Hughes), "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock" begins with the ending of one of Harold Lloyd's greatest successes—"The Freshman," produced back in 1923. In that picture, if you'll remember, Lloyd played a college man sent into a football game at the last moment. Through an hilarious sequence of events, he made the touchdown that won the game. That's the prologue. The main body of this followup is the story of what happened to Lloyd about 23 years later.

For over 20 years he had labored as a book-keeper for an advertising firm. A perfect Casper Milquetoast, he is fired to make way for someone a little more imaginative.

Down in the dumps, not at all comforted by the going away present of a gold watch, Lloyd allows himself to be picked up by a wandering bookie who propels him into a bar for a drink. In the bar Lloyd meets an imaginative bartender who is enchanted with the idea of mixing Lloyd's first drink. That drink sends Lloyd from the bar howling drunk. When he sobers up he finds that he has won $15,000 on a horse race and purchased a circus.

What follows then is Lloyd's attempts to sell his circus. He does this by means of walking a leashed lion through Wall Street and attempting to frighten bankers into whipping out their check books.

The most sustained bit of funny business in the film is a piece of comedy second only to throwing custard pies in drawing laughs. Lloyd, the bookie and the lion find themselves out on a window ledge, 30 or 40 stories above the street. For about 20 minutes all the changes that can be rung on this theme are rung out and wrung dry: the slips over the ledge, the charging lion, the terrified screams and the panicky long shots down to the street below.

It's unabashedly corn and unashamedly burlesque. But it's basic comedy, the kind that can't fail to draw laughs.

The film falters at times. The comedy is by no means sustained. There are long periods of explanation—unfortunately needed to build up to a gag. There are times when the picture gets cute instead of sticking to the broad side of comedy. But these are minor complaints.

Sturges has picked a supporting cast that comprises some of Hollywood's best comics. Some of them are slighted in the story, but all are in there plugging: Jimmy Conlin, Raymond Walburn, Rudy Vallee, Edgar Kennedy, Arline Judge, Franklin Pangborn and Lionel Stander. Frances Ramsden makes her screen debut in the picture.

UA-Enterprise—Super-Western

Enterprise is off to a distinguished start with this Harry Sherman production of Luke Short's widely read Saturday Evening Post novel of the same title. On cast names alone—Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake, Donald Crisp, Preston Foster, Don DeFore, Charles Ruggles—it rates as super-western fiction, and as directed by Andre DeToth it accounts engrossingly for every running minute.

Packed with action and unremittingly suspenseful, it's sure to prosper in exhibition, shunning familiar plot patterns, dialogue cliches and other pitfalls commonly encountered by undertakings in kind.

Producer Sherman's picture abounds nevertheless is physical melodrama. There are fights—fistic and with guns, beatings, chases, escapes and pursuits, culminating dramatically and with justice triumphant in circumstances which leave the outcome in doubt until the final seconds. And there is sharp characterization backgrounded by inter-woven cross-plots skillfully unwound in tight script by Jack Moffitt, Graham Baker and Cecile Kramer. It's Sherman's west at its best.

McCrea portrays a drink-addicted cowhand who gives up his wastrel ways to work as foreman for Miss Lake when her weakling fiance, opposed by her father and Foster, boss of the valley, runs away, leaving her his ranch. Foster promptly burns her ranch buildings, and McCrea, aided by DeFore, his fervent but none too honest pal, takes possession of the Foster property in retaliation. McCrea tries to keep within the law, represented by Sheriff Crisp, but resorts to personal justice after Foster murders Crisp. The complications are many and the surprises frequent in a succession of violent incidents which follow.

Splendid scenery ably photographed and a powerful music score by Adolph Deutsch are supplementary values adding to a commanding whole.

THE OUTLOOK

SOMEWHERE in all developments there is an end and a limit. That would seem to be about where the continuously rising cost of production for motion pictures has nearly arrived. There is only one effective limitation in the whole scene of enterprise. That is what the traffic will bear.

Today in Hollywood it is to be observed that across the field the typical cost of a major company "B" picture is in the region of one million dollars. An "A" picture seems to start at about a million and a half and to proceed upwards to somewhere in the region of four millions. This was foreseen rather awhile ago as, for instance, the remark on this page that the amazing figures on costs and grosses alike for "Gone With the Wind" would bring on a mad set of sequels. Now there is a revise-and-retrench program, softly and silently under way.

How this all works, what comes out, remains to be seen. For a very long time, as it is measured in this industry, Hollywood and production have been calling the shots. That was with the incoming tide. The money, of course, has always been remitted from New York, the indulgent sugar daddy concerned with keeping "Lady Hollywood", that demanding charmer sitting by her lapis-lined pool, tapping insistently with petulant and daintily pinked toes, in sometimes pouting petulance.

Now there has been a message to the Lady: "That's all there is; there isn't any more."

Out across the land among the theatres there is confusion—and a continuing disposition to go to court if there is promise of a pressure to improve the terms of the film buy. That is because there is more than a hangover of the New Deal program addressed at a planned economy to control all industry, with the motion picture planned as the No. 1 demonstration.

* * * *

THERE is accurate, if disconcerting, demonstration of the resultant confusion among the factors at interest in the news pages of this week and every week. In this issue of The Herald there is a checkerboard graph presentation of the assortment of stands and attitudes embodied in the appeals from the Federal case decree.

It begins to be clear that the process of exploring "what the traffic will bear" has worked its way clear through from production to distribution to the box office and the public. Presumably, the reaction has to work its way back through the reverse steps to the studios, and that is in progress.

There is a certain thrifty attention to the use of revivals and conservation of the considerable backlog which would encourage assurance that there will be enough pictures, even in the face of reduced production schedules for the year ahead.

Meanwhile, in spite of all the admitted and unadmitted facts, the cost of production appeared this week to still be slightly rising. The end of the labour issues is still "around the corner", perhaps quite a distance.

If it has to go that far, the public will make a positive decision.

The remarks of Mr. Eric Johnston, as president of the Motion Picture Association, before the House Labor and Education Committee in Washington this week were immediately relevant when he implied that Communist influences might be behind the jurisdictional dispute which has hampered Hollywood production for so long. Of the Communists he observed: "Their tactics seem to aim at slowing down production."

In Hollywood a producer commenting on the increase in labour costs remarked that "even at the high scales today, I'd be willing to double them if we could get the work done, competently and at a normal rate of performance."

SHOWMANSHIP HONOURED

BESET as the industry is with its problems internal and external, rising costs, rising taxes, complex trade practices, there remains one uninvaded, unchanged and eternally valuable function—showmanship at the box office. Our event of the week, the annual function of the judging of the competitions for the Quigley Awards, conducted by the Round Table of Motion Picture Herald, gives point and recognition.

Come what may, there can be no change in the responsibility of, and the necessity for, that final step by which entertainment is delivered to the consumer.

The theatre must always invite. It must ever present a happy front and ever deliver satisfaction, comfort, entertainment and a sense of wellbeing for the house inside. It is that part of the show which Hollywood, with all its skills and endless artistries, cannot put in the film can. It is that part of the show which cannot be sold by colour pages in the big magazines, nor by staccato bursts on the radio. It pertains to both the immediate, point-of-sale selling and point-of-delivery performance that must be delivered by the showmen of exhibition. That is what the Round Table is about.

This thirteenth year of the Awards as usual finds the honours spread afar, and shared by showmen in most diverse operations and environments—Mr. Ivan Ackery in Vancouver, the Silver Award; Mr. Nathan Wise in Cincinnati, the Bronze, and way over there in Sheffield, England, the Overseas Award to Mr. Frank Bradley. Recognition is not controlled by place or scale of operation. By the fair and searching examination of the showmen judges, it goes for the quality of the work done as measured by resources and opportunity.

As long as there is a show, there will be showmanship.

GOOD OLD DAYS NOTE:—Considering the state of the world and the looks of Page 1 of the dailies these travail torn days of 1947, it is restful to regard the situation as reported just a hundred years ago this week in the New York Tribune, which said: "The brig T. Street arrived last evening bringing papers from the 17th to 23rd of January. We find nothing at all worthy of attention in them. Copious accounts are given of the festivities in honor of the young Queen."

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Greetings

WHEN David Rose, would-be co-worker with James Mason, the English star, got off the boat Wednesday morning from England, New York attorneys greeted him with a message from Mr. Mason in the form of a legal document. That document was a declaration judgment which Mr. Mason hopes will prove once and for all his repeated public statements that he is not under contract to Mr. Rose. Mr. Rose has claimed that he has a contract for Mr. Mason's exclusive services for a period of five years. Backing up his belief, he has sued Mr. Mason for $1,760,000 for breach of contract. Mr. Mason, in Wednesday's papers, charges that the document Mr. Rose holds is no contract but merely a preliminary memorandum which could have led to a contract. Meanwhile, Mr. Mason is preparing for his New York stage debut in "Bathsheba."

Horse Trading

EXCITEMENT ran high at Arcadia, California, last week when 60 horses belonging to Louis B. Mayer, MGM vice-president in charge of production, were auctioned off before a large crowd at Santa Anita. When it was all over Mr. Mayer could survey the results with satisfaction—his string had brought him the incredibly high total of $1,553,500 with the "Big Four" of the stable—Busher, Honeymoon, Be Faithful and Stepfather—selling for $570,000. The atmosphere at the auction, already charged with the excited anticipation of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap which was run the next day, was tense. Celebrities crowded the stands and cameras ground away as the horses came up for auction. It was almost entirely a Hollywood and California show. Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros. Pictures, took a good look and then put down $454,000 for five of Mr. Mayer's horses. Neil McCarthy, attorney for Mr. Mayer, bought six of the racers.

THE EASTMAN KODAK board of directors voted Tuesday to recommend to the stockholders a five for one split of the common shares now outstanding; a change of the common stock from no par to $10 par value; and an increase in the number of authorized shares of common stock. These proposals, which must get a two-thirds favorable vote of the stockholders at the annual meeting in Flemington, N. J., April 29, provide that the present 2,500,000 shares of authorized common stock without par value would be increased to 20,000,000 shares of $10 par value; that the 2,488,242 issued shares of common without par value would be split—five shares for each one share now held—into 12,441,210 shares of $10 par; that the present relative voting rights between the common and preferred shares would be preserved. Total sales for 1946, according to the company's annual report, amounted to $274,703,448, compared with $301,501,854 for 1945. The consolidated net profit for 1946 was $35,691,318, including $3,836,800 resulting from unusual tax reductions. The 1946 sales amounted to record peace-time sales and the profits were at a new all-time peak.

Dog's Life

PREVIEW AUDIENCES, says PRC, were so enthusiastic over Rin Tin Tin III's performance in "The Return of Rin Tin Tin" that the animal's option has been picked up and he will be starred in future pictures. The current R. T. T. is playing in Vitacolor production, which is a new invention that Rin Tin Tin I never thought of when he was crouching protectively on the chest of a curly-headed orphan lost in the woods.

Sound Business

There was good news for Loew's stockholders this week when Loew's Incorporated, producers of M-G-M pictures and MGM records, announced that it will pay its 100th dividend on March 31, 1947. The company has paid consecutive dividends since 1923.

Individuality

Brussels Bureau

"THE ROMANTIC conception of the individual artist exploiting all by himself his petty sensibility, tends to disappear. Instead we tend towards a political and social 'grouping' of artists." That's the philosophy behind Belgium's Seminaire des Arts, an educational institution now training young Belgians under 30 years of age for careers in motion pictures, music, literature and the theatre. The Seminaire has refused state subsidies and exists on voluntary donations from 4,000 members. The cinema section is directed by Count d'Ursel. The philosophy of the school was enunciated by the writer Eric Haesaerts, director.

Fussy

WHEN Enterprise Productions' "The Other Love" is shown in England, David Niven, who co-stars in the picture with Barbara Stanwyck, will be heard pronouncing such words as "schedule" and "brass" in the British manner. When the film plays the U. S. the same Mr. Niven will come up with a more Americanized version of the words. It's because Arthur Loew, president of Loew's International, when he previewed the film, was told that British audiences might object to Mr. Niven's Hollywood-acquired pronunciation. So he asked producer David Lewis to re-record some eight scenes, containing possibly offensive words, for showing of the picture to British audiences.

Record Stunt

A PUBLICITY stunt for Paramount's "Blaze of Noon" resulted in a new West-East Transcontinental speed record this week when Paul Mantz, noted speed and stunt pilot, flew the 2,480-mile distance in six hours, 39 minutes and 30 seconds—32 minutes less than the old record. The plane he used was a P-51 Mustang named "Blaze of Noon." It was the same ship in which he set a new record on the Los Angeles-Cleveland run last year. Mr. Mantz attended the premiere of the picture at the Rivoli in New York Tuesday. The stunt flying in the film was done with him at the controls.

Incentive

MORNING attendance at the Paramount Theatre in New York has been doubled as a result of the recently instituted admission scale reduction which lowered morning prices up to 1 P.M. to 55 cents. Paramount officials say that since the new scale went into effect average week-day morning attendance at the theatre has risen from 3,400 to 7,800 persons. A poll, conducted by the Paramount Theatre, established that 91 per cent of those attending the early-bird matinees did so because of the lowered price. The picture now playing the house is "Suddenly It's Spring," a Paulette Goddard-Fred MacMurray comedy.

Millionaire Mammy

A HARVARD STUDENT by the name of Edward Lamont who is the grandson of Thomas W. Lamont of the banking House of Morgan family, won second prize in a Mammy-singing contest featured recently by Boston's Loew's State theatre as part of the exploitation for "The Jolson Story." He entered the contest under the name of Ted LaRue, but fellow members of his in the famous Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard spied him out and attended to applaud him into first place. But the applause misfired and Ted made only second place with his rendition of "You Made Me Love You."

Service

FOREIGN SCREEN CORPORATION, servicing Latin-American clients, last week gave the Encanto theatre, Havana, some rapid, superlative action. The theatre had booked the motion picture, "This Man Is Dangerous," which has James Mason in the starring role. FSC's Cuban affiliates neglected to tell the New York office. And the negative was in London.

When FSC learned of the deal, it cabled London. Pathe there flew to New York a dupe negative. Flying and customs took 14 hours. Pathe Laboratories in New York went into action with spotters, translators, card makers, and optical men. There emerged in record time a Spanish superimposed version. Massce-Barnet packed the prints and rushed them to LaGuardia Airport.

FSC president Horatio-Alban-Mestansa and his partner wife flew to Miami; their Cuban agent met them, flew the prints to Havana. A Cuban customs agent, by special arrangement, was waiting; so were the censors. On schedule the run began.

Justice Preferred

ONE of those two endings for Eagle Lion's "Bedelia" has already been rejected by an American audience. The audience rejected the ending designed for British audiences and, as the producers expected, chose the ending which jibes with American conceptions. The first ending has the very evil Margaret Lockwood kill herself; the second has her facing justice. The audience polled was that of the Victoria Theatre in New York.

Expert Opinion

RKO RADIO made the picture "San Quentin." This story of prison life the other day reached the Salem, Ore., state prison. It was the main feature on a double bill but it need not have been. In fact, it need not have been shown, the prisoners said, so unanimously that national wire services recorded their opinion. Said one prisoner: "They previewed it up here because we couldn't get up and walk out."

Divorce Blast

THREE religious leaders, representing the Catholics, Protestants and Jews, are currently warning against the ruin of American home life which will be "a thousand times worse than Nagasaki and Hiroshima" and predicting stern public reaction to Hollywood's "flaunting of promiscuous sensuality and positive glorification of adultery." The warning is contained in an article in the March issue of Motion Picture Magazine signed by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and Dr. Sidney E. Goldstein.

ACKERY, WISE AND BRADLEY QUIGLEY AWARD WINNERS

The necessity for a return to the "old fashioned" showmanship of pre-war days was stressed Monday at the ceremonies in New York's Hotel Astor attendant upon the selection of the winners in the thirteenth annual competition conducted by the Managers' Round Table of MOTION PICTURE HERALD for the Quigley Awards—awards given yearly to the theatremen who have best demonstrated a consistently high order of showmanship.

This year the 42-man board of judges, executives in distribution, advertising and publicity, and theatre management, chose:

IVAN ACKERY, the Silver Grand Award, for his campaigns in Vancouver, B. C., where he is manager of the Orpheum theatre, one of the houses in the Famous Players' Canadian circuit. This is the first time in the history of the Awards that the Silver Award has gone outside the United States.

NATE WISE, the Bronze Grand Award, for his campaigns in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he is publicity manager for the RKO theatres.

FRANK BRADLEY, the special Overseas Plaque, for his campaigns in Sheffield, England, where he is manager of the Gaumont Regent theatre for the Gaumont British circuit.

These men were chosen from the 22 finalists who had weathered the quarterly awards competitions. Their exhibits were spread out on U-shaped tables in the Astor's white, gold and cupid North Ballroom.

Looking over the exhibits, which ranged from a 41-pound scrapbook from Portland, Ore., to a series of slim booklets from Christchurch, New Zealand, Sol A. Schwartz, vice-president and general manager of RKO Theatres, the principal speaker at the awards luncheon, found particular merit in the campaigns conducted by the managers of the smaller theatres without the aid of a publicity department or an exploitation director.

Elaborating on this find during his luncheon address, Mr. Schwartz said: "I have always had the highest regard for the man in the field—a manager who did things—a manager whose theatre operation hummed with activity. This does not necessarily mean the theatre with the highest advertising budget, but rather the second, third, or fourth run theatre where the personal efforts of the manager, his ingenuity and enterprise are so important, where the entire campaign, if there is to be a campaign, has to be planned and executed by the same person.

"These are the men we must encourage," he declared. "These are the men who must be given credit for good old fashioned showmanship."

Believing that "old fashioned showmanship is something which has not been practiced too extensively during the past few lush years," Mr. Schwartz cautioned the 80-odd members of his audience that "we must always remember that ingenuity and showmanship are as much an integral part of our business as the pictures themselves."

"When I say the past 'lush years,'" Mr. Schwartz added, "I do not wish to sound a pessimistic note. On the contrary, I personally feel that business will hold to a very comfortable level."

"The competition for Quigley Awards serves our industry as the best medium through which managers have an opportunity to be heard and to receive deserved recognition for outstanding talent in the field of advertising and exploitation," Mr. Schwartz observed to his audience.

"The high plane on which this competition has been conducted is a tribute to the entire Quigley organization—as is the important place in our industry now held by former Award winners."

In introducing Mr. Schwartz, Martin Quigley characterized the awards competitions as having "a direct and vital stimulus to that kind of thinking and that kind of action which leads to the effective and profitable presentation of motion picture shows."

Selling Methods as Important As Quality of Entertainment

The two principal factors which determine the public relation status of the motion picture, Mr. Quigley indicated are "the character of the screen entertainment itself" and "the way in which this screen entertainment is recommended to public attention."

"It is important," he declared, "that screen entertainment shall be of the right character; it is hardly less important that the selling methods employed shall be of the same right character. It is upon these two principal factors that the reputation of the motion picture and the theatre mainly depend."

"While remembering this," he continued, "let us also remember that while they tell us that the public will beat a path through the woods to the builder of better mousetraps, it has never been suggested that the path might not be made a six-lane highway if the better mousetraps were effectively advertised."

"And then, also, there is the unfortunate fact that the theatreman occasionally finds on his hands what may indeed be a better mousetrap but certainly is not a better theatre attraction. . . . There arises that test which distinguishes a real showman from just a pretender."

Because he does not think it likely that war-time prosperity for the industry will continue indefinitely, Mr. Quigley is of the opinion that it is "likely that the exploitation forces of the theatres may soon be confronted with a very real challenge. The manner in which this challenge is met will, I am sure, be another demonstration of the imagination, ingenuity and energy of the men and women who conduct the business of exploitation for the motion picture theatres in this country and around the world."

the evaluation of the foreign entries for the Overseas Plaque, this being the first year that such an award has been made. The British Mr. Bradley, chosen above contestants from Colombia, New Zealand, Belgium and Cuba, entered the competition in response to a suggestion of James Forsyth, director of public relations for Gaumont British theatres, early in 1946. During the past year, there has been a marked increase in both entries from England and quarterly awards to England.

Guests at the luncheon, in addition to the judges, included two former winners of the Quigley Awards, Arnold Stoltz and Lige Brien, introduced by Mr. Quigley, who also introduced two Canadian guests, J. MAJORS PREPARE FOR DECREE OPERATION DESPITE APPEALS

Widen Bidding Experiments, Study Clearances and Plan End of Pools

With all of the appeals from the decree in the U. S. versus Paramount, et al, anti-trust suit filed and out of the way, the eight defendants in the action this week turned to implementing those portions of the decree not being appealed and solidifying their arguments on the provisions which are being protested in anticipation of appearances before the U. S. Supreme Court.

This week the defendants were deep into competitive bidding experiments, beginning to dissolve their pooling agreements, reviewing the clearance situations and arguing the pros and cons of continued arbitration.

Two to Ask High Court For Bidding Stay

Competitive Bidding: By midweek, only two defendants, Columbia and Universal, had announced they will ask the Supreme Court for a stay of the competitive bidding order, which is to go into effect July 1. United Artists had reported itself definitely of the opinion that no postponement of any part of the decree would be asked. The five theatre-owning defendants are not likely to ask for a stay of the bidding order since only Paramount appealed the order. The Department of Justice has indicated it will not appeal the order.

While all the five majors have, in the past, been conducting experiments with competitive bidding, there was even more intensive study of the order this week and last. Twentieth Century-Fox this week acknowledged that bidding experiments were being conducted in the Minneapolis area. Auction selling was the chief topic of last Friday's closing session of the two-day Warner Brothers district managers meeting held at the home office. Howard Levinson, a member of the company's legal staff, outlined the procedure to be followed in complying with the decree.

Paramount Offering Six On One Contract Form

Paramount is currently offering six Pine-Thomas productions on one contract form, but the license for each film will be negotiated separately for individual theatres. Charles M. Reagan, vice-president in charge of distribution, declared that Paramount would adhere to the bidding provisions of the decree.

In Pittsburgh, last Thursday, Edward C. Raftery, United Artists president, opened a four-day regional meeting by warning that "no side agreements can be written into contracts with exhibitors" since such agreements "will be termed unlawful" and "leave the burden of responsibility upon the distributor."

Clearances: The problems posed by the decree order placing the burden of proving "reasonable" clearance upon the distributor has prompted the theatre-owning defendants to send their lawyers out into the field to survey the whole problem of clearances. Paramount has assigned four attorneys to the field. MGM has reported that it has attempted to check up its clearance problems through a series of regional meetings, but indications are that the company's lawyers will go into the field.

Warner Brothers discussed clearance problems at its district managers meeting and are understood to have assigned at least one lawyer, possibly two, to the field. RKO Radio and Twentieth Century-Fox discussed the clearance provisions at their recent New York sales meetings and are understood to have decided for a survey of the field.

Fox West Coast Splits California Holdings

Pooling Agreements: In one of the first actions complying with the court order prohibiting the continuance of pooling agreements, Fox West Coast has completed a splitup in which 17 houses in Southern and Northern California, which the company has been operating in pooling agreements, will pass to individual control. The circuit will take over 100 per cent operation of 24 others when the paper work now in process is completed about July 1.

Paramount's pooling agreement with Fox West Coast will be dissolved the end of March. Fox will relinquish the operation of the St. Francis, the Paramount, and the State and Paramount will resume control.

Another change in the management of Paramount theatres was also announced this week by Leonard H. Goldenson, vice-president in charge of theatre operations. When the Middletown, N. Y., pooling agreement with Fabian Theatres, involving three houses, is dissolved March 29, the Paramount will return to Paramount, and the State and Stratton will revert to Fabian.

Arbitration Moot Point With Divided Sentiment

Arbitration: During the past week there has been evidence both of renewed interest in arbitration and a slackening of interest. Last Friday new arbitration complaints were filed in the New York and Cleveland tribunals, Tuesday a complaint was filed in Cincinnati, and additional complaints are expected to be filed in Albany and New Haven, thus prolonging the life of those tribunals. New cases may be accepted until April 1. The five majors have appealed the court's order ending the consent decree system of arbitration.

That was the evidence for arbitration. The evidence of sentiments against arbitration was last Wednesday's cancellation of the meeting scheduled for March 10-11 in New York when Fred Wehrenberg's proposal for a motion picture forum for handling distributor-exhibitor disputes by voluntary arbitration was to be discussed. The meeting was cancelled because of exhibitor sentiment that forum plans should be delayed until the Supreme Court acts on the decree appeals.

CSA Appeals On Intervention

The Confederacy of Southern Associations last Friday filed its appeal from the New York District Court's denial of its plea for intervention in the anti-trust suit, claiming that the Department of Justice's opposition to competitive bidding does not represent CSA interests since the Department objects to the bidding order only on the ground that it is an inadequate substitute for divorce.

In CSA's petition asking the Supreme Court to eliminate the bidding provisions, the organization contends that without competitive bidding, the other directions of the New York court "are fully adequate to terminate the restraints of commerce found to be unlawful." Competitive bidding would cause "irreparable damage," the appeal said.

The damage, according to CSA, would come from several causes: larger theatres would outbid the independents; the theatre-owning defendants may never have to enter the competitive market; the definition of a competitive area is so vague that it may result in the elimination of all clearances; there is no practical measure by which a defendant may determine to which exhibitor to award a feature; the decreed method of licensing will increase admissions; the method overlooks such business considerations as goodwill and reputation; the method forbids necessary post-exhibition adjustments.

Myers Sees "Clean-Cut" Decision in U. S. Suit

A "clean-cut decision, one way or the other," involving every issue in the New York anti-trust suit will be decided early in 1948, along with a decision on the anti-trust suits involving the Schine and Griffith circuits, it was predicted last weekend in Washington by Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel for Allied States. Basing his conjecture on the Government's appeal and the appeals of Columbia, United Artists and Universal, he said the decision would bring a brighter era.

DECREE APPEAL BOXSCORE

The Herald herewith presents an at-a-glance table detailing in essence the provisions of the December 31 final decree issued by the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in the U. S. versus Paramount, et al, anti-trust suit and the objections to that decree being appealed by the Department of Justice and the eight defendants. The dates following the court orders are the dates on which the separate provisions become effective. Exhibitors were also displeased by the decree, particularly the competitive bidding provisions. Three exhibitor organizations, American Theatres Association, Southern California Theatre Owners and the Confederacy of Southern Associations, have appealed for permission to intervene in the suit to protest the bidding order, but it is considered more than likely that the Justice Department will oppose them.

Columbia Net Is Up to $1,560,000

Columbia Pictures this week reported profit for the 26-week period ended December 28, 1946, of $1,560,000, compared with $1,295,000 for the same period the previous year.

An operating profit of $2,480,000 for the period was reported by the company as against $2,250,000 in 1945. Estimated provision for Federal taxes for the 26-week period amounted to $920,000. In 1945, Federal taxes were $955,000.

The comparative earnings per share of common stock after preferred stock dividends, calculated on the increased amount of common stock which was outstanding on December 28, 1946, were $2.25 per the 1946 period; $1.92 for the 1945 period. A common dividend of 2½ per cent is payable May 9 to stock of record April 24.

RCA Nets $10,985,053; Sets 56-Cent Dividend

Net earnings for Radio Corporation of America in 1946 amounted to $10,985,053, equivalent to 56.4 cents a share of common stock, according to the final report released last Thursday by Brigadier General David Sarnoff, president. This compares with $11,317,068 in 1945, when earnings, after payment of preferred dividends, were equivalent to 58.8 cents per share.

Paramount Sets Dividend

At a special meeting last Thursday the board of directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., announced a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share on the outstanding common stock payable March 31, 1947, to stockholders of record March 11.

GPE Votes Dividend

Directors of General Precision Equipment Corporation February 25 declared a dividend of 25 cents per share on the company's capital stock, payable March 25, 1947.

"Odd Man Out"

[Two Cities-Universal] — Dramatic Atom Bomb

THE scene is an unidentified city in Northern Ireland, no doubt Belfast. The time is during the war; the story, an incident in the activities of the Irish Republican Army. The action starts at four o'clock and ends at midnight. The result, brilliantly produced and directed by Carol Reed, is the unrelenting and uncompromising drama of a manhunt in what is one of the few outstanding examples of its type and a motion picture which has substantial possibilities of finding ultimate place among the screen's greats.

First, the dramatic outline: James Mason, out of prison and ill, is chief in his city of the illegal organization. Funds are required. A mill is robbed. In the getaway, the group escapes but Mason kills a mill manager who, in turn, badly injures Mason whose companions recoup him temporarily and thereafter lose him when he falls out of the escape car. The remainder of the film deals with the man hunt and Mason's adventures on his road to death. Two of his men are cut down outside the house of an informer. Another, seeking Mason and finding him, draws off the police and is captured, but not before Mason gets a temporary breather.

Hundreds of police are on the trail. The pursued man hides in alleys, shrinks into protective, dark corners, endeavors to harbor his waning strength in a horse-driven cab, falls in the rain and mud and snow, makes his way to the haven of a saloon. He is picked up by an underworld character who is prepared to turn him over to police or friends, depending upon the greater reward, gets sorely needed aid from a medical student, stumbles out to meet Kathleen Ryan, who loves him and has been appealing to W. G. Fay, the parish priest, for information and assistance. In the final few minutes, the girl and Mason meet. Escape cut off, she fires two shots at the police advancing across a snow-covered square. In the returning fusilade, and as she had planned, both are killed.

Here are the essentials of taut and vigorous drama, compounded with exacting expertness in the screen play by R. C. Sheriff and R. L. Green, from a novel by another Green—F. J. But the bigger job was vested in Reed. To bring to life the realistic relentlessness of the hunt, to probe and to find the soul-searching required for utter conviction, to develop the stark mood, to unfold and then to catch the uncertainties and the cross-purposes of the good and the less-than-good characters parading the screen—these are among the contributions of Reed's undeniable talents as a director. His work is magnificent.

Mason is completely convincing and touching as the illegal resistance fighter whose inner conflict finds him unable to determine if the processes of parliamentary law ought not give way to violence. Miss Ryan, whose first film this is, immediately establishes her competency as an actress of depth and professional worth. Other players, drawn principally from the ranks of Dublin's famed Abbey Playhouse, are perfectly etched in their realism. Shading them for comparative values, the two who stand above the others are F. J. McCormick, as Shell, and Fay as Father Tom. Robert Newton, as a half-mad artist, and Fay Compton, in a minor role, are invaluable assets of a noted cast.

Commercially, "Odd Man Out" has Mason whose vogue in this country is on the upbeat. This film will enhance his popularity, but the measure of the attraction's ticket-selling potential perhaps is best drawn by a throwback to "The Informer", with which this bears many resemblances.

First reviewed from London in MOTION PICTURE DAILY of Jan. 30, Peter Burnup wrote: "This may well be rated in years to come among the screen's choicest masterpieces". His appraisal could prove correct.

Tinkering with an end product of such distinguished values, moreover, may be foolhardy yet the opinion of this impressed reviewer is that the film would be better served in less length. As it stands, on the other hand, "Odd Man Out" is a drama-on-film which will not be quickly forgotten.

Running time, 113 minutes. Adult audience classification. Release date, not set.

EXHIBITORS WAGING WAR ON TAXES ACROSS COUNTRY

Several State and City Legislatures Move to Assess Admissions

Local and state taxes on admissions and grosses continue to plague exhibitors throughout the country. According to reports from the field this week several states and cities have proposed or are considering such legislation.

CALIFORNIA

In Sacramento, Cal., however, a bill has been presented to the state legislature making local theatres taxes unconstitutional. This was brought about following the successful legal battle in San Bernardino in which Fox West Coast Theatres and Warner Brothers joined forces several weeks ago to fight the imposition of an amusement tax.

Introduced by Assemblyman Lester A. McMillan of Los Angeles, the bill states that any taxes collected through theatre admissions shall be impounded by the courts and refunded to the theatres. It further allows that any person entitled to the refund must file a claim within six months after the decision becomes final, otherwise the money shall automatically go to the State treasury.

OREGON

At the same time the Oregon assembly meeting in Salem has killed an amusement tax bill which would have levied a 20 per cent fee on theatre admissions. With this move, however, the committee on taxation immediately turned around and began considering a new measure which would authorize cities and counties to license and tax business occupations and organizations, including theatres. The tax also would apply to gross receipts, gross incomes and flat licenses.

OKLAHOMA

A similar bill has been introduced in Oklahoma. State Senators Robert Burns of Oklahoma City and Arthur Price of Tulsa, have introduced a bill which would permit cities in the state to levy additional taxes including levies on amusements. Exhibitors are expected to organize and fight the bill.

SOUTH DAKOTA

A 10 per cent tax on admissions to theatres and ballrooms is proposed in House bill No. 257 introduced in the South Dakota legislature. The proceeds from this taxation measure, if passed, would be earmarked for municipalities or township general funds.

1946 TICKET REVENUE AT ALL-TIME HIGH

The Bureau of Internal Revenue reported this week that tax collections from all amusements reached the all-time high of $454,928,352 during 1946. Collections for 1945 were $375,306,023.

January collections showed a slight drop from the previous month, but remained above the same month last year. The January, 1947, collections amounted to $37,054,760, compared with $33,741,349 in January, 1946. Receipts for a particular month usually reflect business at the box office for the previous month.

Monday it was reported wartime admission tax rates of 20 per cent would not be lowered probably until July 1, 1949, according to the House and Senate conference committee, which has approved indefinite continuation of present excise rates.

MAINE

A bill providing for a five per cent tax on theatre admissions to finance a state soldiers' bonus in Maine has been introduced in the state legislature. The tax would also apply to dance halls and juke boxes.

WISCONSIN

In Milwaukee, Wis., a bill allowing cities and villages of the state to levy admission taxes on film theatres and other entertainment places has been introduced in the Wisconsin Senate.

MINNEAPOLIS

Monday, Minneapolis members of North Central Allied met at a luncheon at the Dyckman Hotel to discuss their position and map moves to oppose a rise in theatre license fees, proposed by the City Council. Stanley Kane, executive director, presided in the absence of Ben Berger, president. Mr. Kane was scheduled to appear before the City Council Friday at which the Council was to make its opening move to increase annual fees for theatres. Fees now range from $50 to $500 annually, depending on a theatre's location.

NEW YORK

The announcement last week that New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey was studying special taxing powers which would permit cities in New York State to tax theatre admissions among other things as a means of financing teachers' pay increases, met with considerable opposition.

At a meeting presided over by Rodney Smith, executive director, the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, of New York City, has voted to request permission to appear at any New York State hearings on the taxation plan.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Buffalo and vicinity have sent a telegram to Governor Dewey which said: "Our organization vigorously urges the defeat of the proposed measure allowing municipalities to levy discriminatory taxes against local business."

Wednesday, the Governor requested the legislature to grant New York City power to tax amusements, automobiles, liquor and restaurant meals. He asked the amusement tax be limited to five per cent.

TENNESSEE

The Tennessee two per cent sales tax does not apply to theatre or other amusement tickets, William Barry, Assistant State Attorney General, announced Monday, explaining that entertainment is not a "tangible personal property."

However, a measure may be introduced taxing admission tickets. Such a bill was introduced by the Knox delegation as applying only to amusements in Knoxville and Knox County. The Knox bill levies a one-cent tax on each 20 cents of admission.

Milwaukee Studying Chicago Film Censorship Ordinance

Milwaukee's mayor, chief of police and city councilmen are studying Chicago's motion picture censorship ordinance with a view to adopting a similar plan, following the recent controversy in which the city's Motion Picture Commission recommended a ban on Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw." The Common Council threatened to revoke the Towne theatre's license if it did not halt the picture's exhibition. The Chicago ordinance gives complete power to the mayor over film exhibition. Permits are issued by the police chief before a picture can be shown and violators may be fined.

Krim and Benjamin to London for Rank Talks

Arthur B. Krim, president of Eagle-Lion, was to leave for London Friday for talks with J. Arthur Rank and his executives. With him went Robert S. Benjamin, president of the J. Arthur Rank Organization, Inc. Mr. Krim took a print of "Lost Honeymoon," starring Franchot Tone and Ann Richards, the first Eagle-Lion production to be handled abroad by the Rank organization.

ON THE MARCH Loew's Develops

by RED KANN Cash Reserves

To Buy Theatres

AS this column began to roll, Broadway first runs held their price line. But Main Drag operators also held their optics glued to the Paramount where the commotion set in motion by a sharp unwinding of morning scales bubbled more sizzingly than any of the competition cared to admit.

This development became interesting at its very outset. It could become quite significant in creating a trend on Broadway for the usual reasons. Should the cheaper-price move inaugurated by Bob Weitman, managing director of the Paramount, develop into an unqualifiedly howling success, others will not be able to resist. Since a change along Broadway has little chance of remaining an isolated incident, the reverberations would filter into neighborhood first runs, circuit and independent, and thereafter through the subsequents until the current structure throughout metropolitan New York adjusts itself accordingly.

In the event this comes to pass, the repercussions, not remotely, may be felt elsewhere around the nation. A quick history, consequently, ought to prove interesting.

What was determined at the Paramount was not reached by a fast yes or no. The new policy represents six months of search, checkup, analysis, indecision and some hunch, but not much. The curve of employment was studied. Income brackets were surveyed. Rises in the cost of living and their relationship to wages were investigated, of course. The experiences of legitimate theatres, night clubs with their dinner shows and dance halls were probed. Some of the results were awfully sad.

These were the outside factors. Internally, Weitman had to indulge in little guessing. His own breakdowns helped there. For example, his records revealed that 23 per cent of the Paramount's attendance in 1943 was made up of service men who averaged about 35 cents afternoons and 50 cents evenings per admission under the special rate extended them. In these days, the theatre gave the USO approximately 3,000 free tickets each week. By '46, armed forces attendance was down to nine per cent. By the middle of that year, the waiting line had evaporated.

Meanwhile, grosses generally held up even if attendance was off sharply. Grosses were all right because [1] Wednesday and Friday nights at $1.30 a throw, and [2] a range of $1.10 from noon to $1.50 after 6 P.M. on Saturdays and [3] $1.30 from opening to 1 P.M. and $1.50 thereafter on Sundays cleared the nut and put every other admission on the side of velvet.

Nevertheless, enough patrons were not coming to the house. Those oftentimes incredibly heavy morning audiences which so long were a Paramount boast and fixture were not around. The objective was to get them back, if possible, and to revive the droves which once stormed the doors and kept alive the motion picture habit. Piecing this and that into what emerged in final pattern, the decision led to lower tariffs with chief concentration on morning prices.

They were slashed from 70 cents from opening to 11 A.M., 85 cents from then to noon and 95 cents from midday to 5 P.M. to 55 cents from opening to 1 P.M., Monday through Friday with tax included in all cases. Initial response was in the direction of the overwhelming. Echoes disappeared from the large Paramount lobby and there was no longer target practice in the balconies. Identifiables as night shifters going off their job at 8 A.M., salesmen, women shoppers and the unemployed appeared to be on deck again.

AT 1 P.M. Monday of this week—sixth day of the changeover—6,026 admissions had been chalked up in a theatre seating 3,664 which suggests the rafters must have been dripping with customers. Other Broadway first runs, their morning prices higher, could not approach it. The closest presentation house had sold about 3,800 tickets, another about 1,500, a third about 1,000 while there was one all-sound stand with as few as 150 paid guests.

On that day, the Paramount—"Suddenly It's Spring," its film; Johnny Long and his band, Joan Edwards and Buddy Lester, its show—at its 6,026 attendance was working in reverse and comparing itself with its own immediate predecessors. This was it:

"Easy Come, Easy Go," the film; Cootie Williams and his band, Ella Fitzgerald and the Ink Spots, the show—3,483 tickets. "The Perfect Marriage," the film; Elliott Lawrence and band, Olga San Juan and the Mills Brothers, the show—1,631. "Cross My Heart," the film; Tony Pastor and band, the Andrews Sisters and the Les Paul Trio, the show—2,293.

After 500 cards handed out on opening day of the new policy—February 26—brought a 98 per cent return citing price, not show, as the reason for attending that morning, Weitman called off the sampling. "The answer was in. More cards simply would have brought more of the same answers," he stated.

Press agency has Robert Riskin "unperturbed and sitting pretty" with not even a slight case of Academy Award fever. Why? Because James Stewart and Jane Wyman, both Award contenders, are the leads in his new film.

Suppose neither wins?

Loew's directors were reelected last week at the annual stockholders' meeting in New York. J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel, presided at the meeting. Charles C. Moskowitz, vice-president and treasurer, explained why the company had not declared an extra dividend.

Mr. Moskowitz said Loew's theatre business was running eight per cent ahead of the same period last year. Despite good business, however, the company had not issued an extra dividend in order to accumulate cash reserves in case it had to buy up minority interests in houses owned jointly with independent exhibitors, he said.

Reports Rentals Fall

Mr. Rubin said domestic film rentals for the first fiscal quarter had fallen below the total for the same period a year ago, but that if the current trend continued in the second quarter the increase in earnings over a year ago would largely absorb the drop in the first quarter. Income from foreign rentals is the same thing as it was during the like period in 1946. Stockholders were told that earnings for the 12 weeks ended November 21, 1946, were equal to 72 cents a share, as against 86 cents in the first quarter of the previous fiscal year.

Mr. Moskowitz was optimistic over future business prospects, saying he could see no early decline ahead. He was supported in this opinion by Joseph R. Vogel, vice-president and head of the Loew circuit, who said the decrease in business noted at some Broadway theatres was not indicative of a nationwide trend, but could rather be ascribed to a reduction in the number of visitors and an apparent lessening in the popularity of stage bands. Mr. Vogel also reported that Loew's will have terminated its few remaining pooling agreements by the July 1 deadline. A pool with the Fabian circuit was liquidated last September, he said.

Ten Directors Reelected

Directors reelected by the stockholders included Leopold Friedman, Eugene W. Leake, Mr. Moskowitz, William A. Parker, William F. Rodgers, Mr. Rubin, Nicholas M. Schenck, Joseph R. Vogel, David Warfield and Henry Rogers Winthrop.

The directors, in turn, continued in office the following officers: Mr. Schenck, president; Mr. Rubin, Alexander Lichtman, Edgar J. Mannix, Mr. Rodgers, Howard Dietz, Mr. Moskowitz, also treasurer; Mr. Vogel, Benjamin Thau, Mr. Friedman, also secretary; and Marvin H. Schenck, all vice-presidents; Jesse T. Mills, controller; Nicholas Nayfack, Irving H. Greenfield and Harold J. Cleary, assistant secretaries; Charles K. Stern, Louis K. Sidney and R. Lazarus, assistant treasurers.

Thomas Drive Is Planned at PRC Sales Meeting

Plans for the forthcoming "Harry Thomas Drive for 1947" and sales plans of Producers Releasing Corporation, including the reissue of nine features, were covered at the two-day meeting of district managers Saturday and Sunday at the Hotel Warwick, New York.

Ralph H. Clark, new general sales manager, pointed out that the high calibre of films coming demanded campaigns of increased scope. Every medium of promotion will be employed, he said, with special emphasis on direct-to-exhibitor campaigns.

Mr. Clark said the sales drive, which starts on Mr. Thomas' birthday, April 23, and runs through August 30, will feature the PRC Spring Specials such as "Born to Speed," "Devil on Wheels," "Untamed Fury" and the current Philo Vance releases.

At the meeting Mr. Thomas outlined a new sales policy for the company predicated on the new distribution problems facing the industry.

Plans were also made for the distribution of nine reissues in the series of Edward Small Masterpieces.

Friedman Addresses Club in White Plains

Mr. Friedman pointed out the mutual advantages derived from cooperative advertising between theatre and merchant, after outlining a brief history of the motion picture industry, its problems and achievements.

"The theatre," said Mr. Friedman, "is a bulwark in keeping local consumers of tangible merchandise in their own communities. The theatre also helps to attract extra business for the merchants from rural and surrounding areas through the entertainment value and great drawing power of motion pictures."

He pointed up the important part the theatre played during the war.

Mr. Smakwitz, assistant zone manager for Warner Theatres upstate New York, was presented traveling bags by the club through the new chief barker, Neil Hellman.

NEED MEDIATOR ON COAST: JOHNSTON

Tells House Group Such Official, with Authority, Could Have Halted Strike

The appointment of a mediator with the necessary authority to enforce his decision could have prevented the jurisdictional dispute in Hollywood, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, said Tuesday while testifying before the House Labor and Education Committee. Part of his three-hour testimony was given over to a discussion of the influence of Communists in U. S. film making.

In advocating compulsory arbitration between labor and management, the MPA head condemned the practice of enforcing a certain lapse of time before a strike can be called. "A cooling off period is actually a heating up period," he said. At the same time he urged that the Government be taken out of collective bargaining as much as possible.

Says No Red Influence in Films

Questioned about Communist influences on production in general and the seven-month-old jurisdictional strike in particular, Mr. Johnston said that he did not know whether the strike was started by Communists or not. "None of their influence or ideals get into pictures and only a few of them are in minor positions and not connected with actual preparation of film scripts," he said. He implied that Communist influences might be behind the jurisdictional dispute when he said that while Communists constantly criticize the U. S. film industry, "their tactics seem to aim at slowing down production."

He called Communists "enemy agents" and recommended to the committee approval of legislation preventing known Reds from serving as officers of labor unions. He also said employers should be given the right to discharge Communists without being charged with unfair labor practices.

Sorrell Found Injured

In Hollywood, meanwhile, the strike again erupted into violence this week when Herbert K. Sorrell, president of the Conference of Studio Unions, was found badly beaten and bound on a highway. Mr. Sorrell told police that he had been kidnaped in Glendale after he has taken his wife to church. The abductors are said to have been three men, one of them complete with policeman's uniform and badge, who pulled him into a sedan, slugged him with a pistol butt and later abandoned him on the highway.

The strike leader was taken to Ridgecrest Hospital, where attendants said he was suffering from head injuries and lacerations. This marked the second time that an attempt had been made on Mr. Sorrell's life. The first time was in October, 1945, when four shots were fired at him as he was sitting in his car.

Richard F. Walsh, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, said in New York this week that Hollywood producers had been informed that the union expects its members to receive bonuses equal to the increase in living costs between July and December of last year. The notice was in line with the provisions of last July's interim agreement, which said bonuses would be granted if the cost of living advanced more than five per cent during the last six months of the year 1945.

Denies Hutcheson Talks

Mr. Walsh denied that he had been engaged in talks with William Hutcheson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, whose affiliate is involved in a jurisdictional dispute with IATSE carpenters, in an effort to settle the current studio strike. He continued firm in his contention that the Hutcheson group had failed to comply with an arbitration decision.

Coast estimates meanwhile said that if all unions were to receive increases proportionate to the 11.17 per cent boost granted the Screen Extra's Guild last week, studio labor costs in 1947 would rise approximately $13,500,000. This estimate is based on December employment figures when the average pay received weekly by about 24,000 workers was $98.98.

Congressional interest in the Hollywood labor situation was further manifested this week when Congressman Richard Nixon of California, a member of the Labor Committee, announced that he would investigate the labor unrest on the coast. At the same time he said he would study alleged Communist activities there. No date for his departure has been set so far.

Supreme Court to Rule on Validity of Lea Act

The United States Supreme Court agreed Monday in Washington to rule on the validity of the Lea Act, sometimes called the "anti-Petrillo law," on request of the Government. The Government appealed to the high tribunal from a decision by United States District Judge Walter J. La Buy in Chicago that the act is unconstitutional. The act, passed by the last Congress, prohibits compelling or attempting to compel broadcasters to hire more employees than are needed "to perform actual services." James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, has contested the law.

CHICAGO CAPITAL INTO PRODUCTION

Marshall Grant Pictures Will Produce on Coast; Sonja Henie Signed

Chicago Bureau

Incorporated at Sacramento, California, in January at a little over a million dollars, Marshall Grant Pictures will start production about May 15th in Hollywood on "Moonrise," the first of three top-budgeted films to be made annually by the new company which is backed by leading Chicago business men and capitalists. Included in the group are Louis B. Kuppenheimer, clothing manufacturer; Henry Hart, president of Hart, Schaffner & Marx, and Richard Rosenwald, nephew of the late Julius Rosenwald.

Chairman of the board of the new company is William D. Saltiel, general counsel, governor and secretary of the Chicago Opera Company. Mr. Saltiel is also general counsel and governor of the Merchants and Manufacturers Club, a post he has held since the formation of this group some 10 years ago. He was also at one time the City Attorney for the city of Chicago.

President Is Former Producer

President of the company is Marshall Grant, formerly a director and producer for Universal Pictures. Vice-president is Charles F. Haas, a step-son of Mr. Saltiel's, also a former producer and director at Universal, whose last picture was "Her Adventurous Night," co-starring Dennis O'Keefe and Helen Walker.

In an interview in his offices at 1 N. La Salle Street in Chicago Tuesday, Mr. Saltiel outlined details of the new company.

The company plans on making three pictures annually, he said, each of which will be budgeted at approximately two million dollars apiece. The first of these will be "Moonrise," based on a best-selling novel of a Chicago author, Theodore Strauss, who is now in Hollywood as a writer for Paramount. His latest screen play was "California."

Vladimir Pozner, Hollywood scenarist, has already completed the screen play of "Moonrise." Mr. Pozner is an Academy Award nominee for his screen play on "The Dark Mirror."

Wellman to Direct

William, A. Wellman has been signed to direct "Moonrise," Mr. Saltiel said.

Negotiations are now underway for rental of studio space.

No other talent has yet been signed, although the new company has options on Sonja Henie, Gene Antry and Dan Duryea.

Handling talent negotiations for the new film company is Abe Lastfogel, president of the William Morris Agency.

The second film scheduled by the new company is called "The Loop." According to Mr. Saltiel, this will be a story about modern-day Chicago, with emphasis on the business and cultural aspects of the mid-western metropolis. The executive emphasized that "The Loop" will attempt to counteract the over-emphasized gangster and other sensational phases of Chicago heretofore played up on the screen. Mr. Saltiel said that most of the "shooting" on "The Loop" will take place in Chicago. It is planned to start production within the next few months.

Negotiating for Release

The third feature to be produced by Marshall Grant Pictures is "Gainesville, U.S.A." Rights to produce this film has been obtained from the Gainesville group which annually produces a circus in that Texas town composed solely of local talent. Mr. Saltiel said that the major portion of this film would be shot in Gainesville.

No releasing arrangement has been made to date with any distributor, but Mr. Saltiel said that negotiations are now under way for a major company release.

Directors under option include E. H. Griffith, Arthur Lubin, and John Rawlins. Production manager is Ben Hirsch.

Scheduled to write the screen play on "Gainesville, U.S.A." is Lynn Riggs, author of "Green Grow the Lilacs," from which the musical stage success "Oklahoma" was adapted.

Although incorporated in California the new company is headed by Chicagoans. In addition to Mr. Saltiel, Mr. Haas is a Chicagoan and Mr. Grant was born in Racine, Wisconsin, and educated in Chicago schools. Mr. Grant and Mr. Haas are headquartering in Hollywood while Mr. Saltiel's headquarters are in Chicago.

In Hollywood Since 1936

In 1936 Mr. Grant became production assistant to Edward Small at RKO. In 1937 he became eastern story and talent head for Universal and later that year went to the west coast as story editor. In February, 1940, he became an associate producer at Universal. His credits include "South to Karanga," "Diamond Frontier," "San Francisco Docks," "Treat 'Em Rough," "Unseen Enemy," "Escape from Hong Kong," "Destination Unknown," and "Madame Spy." In 1943 he entered the armed services and was discharged last year.

Herbert K. Lyon, formerly in charge of publicity for the Balaban & Katz television station in Chicago, WBKB, recently returned from Hollywood to accept the post of publicity director for Marshall Grant Pictures.

Other Chicagoans who have invested financially in the new company are Maurice A. Horner, Jr., retired head of Durand-McNeil, wholesale grocers; David M. Saltiel, representative of both Chicago and New York banking interests; Lee Heiman, head of Heiman & Co., textiles; David Copland, director of the General Transportation Corporation; Commander David N. Goldenson, head of Briggs and Turvis, stock brokers; Maxwell Abbell, head of one of the nation's largest syndicates owning office buildings and hotels with some of their holdings including Arrowhead Springs and Paramount Hotel in New York; David Saul Klafter, county architect and property and business owner; Peter Torosian, manufacturer of auto rubber parts; and Harry Hoffman, head of J. S. Hoffman, Chicago, manufacturers of Rival Dog Food.

A. Ronald Button, Los Angeles attorney, is secretary of Marshall Grant Pictures.

Dallas Benefit Showing For "Wonderful Life"

With Frank Capra's "Its a Wonderful Life" set for a tri-city Texas premiere it opened Wednesday in Dallas at the Majestic theatre with a benefit performance for the Variety Club. Staged under the auspices of Robert J. O'Donnell and Interstate Theatres, civic celebrations preceded the premiere. The other openings were for Fort Worth and San Antonio. Guests at a Variety Club banquet in Dallas were Frank Capra, Liberty Films president and producer director, and James Stewart, star of the RKO Radio release. In addition to the press and photographic coverage of the event, Mr. O'Donnell arranged day and evening broadcasts.

Order Clearance Cut In New Hampshire

The Boston tribunal of the American Arbitration Association last week ordered a nine-day reduction of clearance held by the Strand and Albert Theatres of Berlin, N. H., operated by Allied Theatres of Berlin, over the Ritz theatre of Gorham, N. H., in licenses from MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO. The clearance previously held was 30 days. That was reduced to 21 days. The arbitrator held further that the clearance would apply only to product shown by either the Strand or Albert within 60 days of availability.

To Demonstrate New Film Sound Method

Marvin Camras of the Armour Research Foundation, Chicago, will demonstrate his new invention involving magnetic sound for motion pictures when the Society of Midwest Motion Picture Engineers hold their monthly meeting in the Engineering Building March 13.

According to Mr. Camras, his sound track may be used for 35, 16 and 8mm films and allows direct playback, multiple tracks, immediate monitoring and new flexibility in arranging, editing and scoring.

MPA MUST CLEAN HOUSE, SAYS ZORN

Tells Illinois Exhibitors Johnston Office Fails in Public Relations

Chicago Bureau

The Motion Picture Association has failed in its most important function—better public relations—Edward G. Zorn, president of the United Theatre Owners of Illinois, and an official of the American Theatres Association, said Monday. Mr. Zorn made a long and detailed attack on the MPA at a meeting of the central group of the United Theatre Owners at the Pere Marquette Hotel in Peoria, Illinois.

"No small part of the ills that beset the exhibitor today can be laid directly at the door of the Johnston Office—the Motion Picture Producers Association," the exhibitor leader said. His attack was based on the content and subject of pictures today, the way they are advertised, and the deterioration of distributor-exhibitor relations, most of it out of his experience as an active exhibitor. He operates theatres in Pontiac, Ill.

Claims Booking Is a Problem

"Pictures are loaded with crime, horror and sensuality as subject matter and even as the central theme of the story until it is becoming a problem to avoid booking and playing two, three or even four of these murder pictures in a row," he said. "The Johnston Office pays no more heed to the complaints of the exhibitor about this condition than do the producers."

"In the wake of all this questionable publicity and the matter of the pictures produced in the past there is a rising tide of censure by religious groups, parent-teacher associations and youth organizations against the motion picture business. Boycotts of theatres for long periods of time, not just a certain picture, the threatened and censorship and higher taxes are sure to come unless something is done, and quickly.

Says Exhibitors Pay Costs

"With everything exaggerated out of all proportion . . . with producers' earnings reaching astronomical sums . . . with stars' and executives' salaries way up in the six figures and bragged about, and with 'Hollywood's' generally accepted contempt for convention, it is no wonder the exhibitors must pay the cost of Hollywood's folly, braggadocio and immorality in higher taxes, boycotts, censorship and even higher film rental."

"Tremendous sums of money have been spent, and are now being spent, to reduce the friction and misunderstanding between the various elements within the industry and the general public, but to no avail. Through all the years misunderstanding and distrust have run rampant within the industry."

Turning to the New York decree, Mr. Zorn said.

"The exhibitor is just beginning to bear the brunt of a nine year old anti-trust suit in which he, the independent exhibitor, is in no way involved. One can understand the distributor not heeding the justifiable squawks of the exhibitors, which resulted in the anti-trust case, but where was the Johnston office to furnish the leadership in the distribution ranks that would have removed the friction in distributor-exhibitor relations? And now we find the producer-distributors ignoring the anti-trust case and banding together in a mutually owned checking company with the questionable name. . . . Confidential Reports, Inc.

Sees Exhibitors Defied

"With callous contempt for the exhibitor and his, just complaint against the use of local checkers, the distributors make no attempt whatsoever to discontinue this obnoxious practice. Rather they defy the exhibitor not to accept a local checker with the threat of having all his film service discontinued by all film companies, except Metro. What is this but coercion in the hands of a monopoly and an illustration of the arrogant manner with which those having the monopoly deal with their customers?"

"What does the Johnston Office do to bring about better relations and understanding? Well, in my case, they sent a Dr. Irvin E. Deer from their community service department into Pontiac to talk to the local Rotary Club and several of the Women's Clubs and church gatherings. In this talk this learned gentleman slanted everything in favor of the producers, which was to be expected, but the point most remembered by those who heard him was this—said Dr. Deer, 'There is a continuous quarrel going on between the exhibitor and the producers. The producers feel they never get enough in rental, and the exhibitor feels he never buys his pictures cheaply enough. But the exhibitors are not doing too badly, as they all manage to go to Florida every winter'.

Hits MPA Public Relations

"He stated further, 'Only 35 per cent of the money taken in at the boxoffice leaves the community . . . 65 per cent remains in the community'. Obviously, the impression left with his audience was that 65 cents out of every dollar the exhibitor takes in is profit and he still kicks. That's the Johnston Office in public relations.

"On the other hand, nothing whatsoever has been done, by this agency that proposes to speak for the motion picture industry, to curb the studio publicity handouts to radio commentators, columnists and magazine writers. . . . These overzealous publicity characters go their merry way establishing 'Hollywood' as the picture business, and that it consists of nothing but glamour, fabulous riches and loose morals. The intimate affairs of publicity conscious 'Hollywood' people are broadcast to the four winds with over-emphasis on divorce, courtship, etc., until it is fast becoming a disgrace and may even threaten the entire business as it did once before in the past."

"When are the exhibitors going to awaken to the fact that the Johnston Office has not and cannot speak for the exhibitors? Only a strong National Exhibitors organization can speak for the exhibitor, and the need for such leadership is great."

URGE TRADE PACTS AID U. S. SCREEN

Statement of Johnston to Committee Preliminary to Geneva Conference

Washington Bureau

Provisions specifically protecting American motion pictures should be included in any trade agreements concluded by the United States, it was emphasized in a statement from the Motion Picture Association submitted last week in Washington to the Government Committee on Reciprocity Information.

This supplementary statement, signed by Eric Johnston, MPA president, was the industry's latest move in the fight against discriminatory regulation inimical to the free flow of American product in the world market. Specifically it was aimed at the 18 countries to be represented at next month's international trade conference to be held in Geneva. Previous trade agreements have not adequately protected the American screen, it was pointed out.

Follow Selective Approach

An introduction pointed out that while in many countries a multiplicity of restrictions are in effect which might be considered as violating abstract concepts of commercial policy, it had been decided to follow a selective approach and direct attention "only to those restrictions which can be expected to have an unduly burdensome effect upon the business potentialities of this industry in the particular country concerned."

It went on to explain that in many cases neither tariff schedules nor the imposition of import quotas are adaptable to the film industry. As a result motion pictures have been subjected to a number of regulations or restrictions frequently improvised to fit what particular governments consider to be the needs of their situation at a given time. Also cited were rules set up by associations which, while not sanctioned by national legislation, have exercised a degree of control tantamount to government control.

Welcome Foreign Product

The statement emphasized that the U. S. industry is proportionately more dependent upon foreign markets than almost any other. It also underlined the fact that this country has been by far the most important source of product for the world's theatres; that the U. S. is completely free of any governmental restrictions, and that American films have been beneficial to the economies of the countries in which they have been distributed.

Special mention also was made of foreign claims that intra-industry arrangements in the U. S. operate to exclude foreign films. "This," the statement said, "is not true. American exhibitors are ready and anxious to handle any foreign film in whatever way may be appropriate to the needs and tastes of the American market."

Mr. Johnston's statement cited the need for special trade agreement clauses covering the import of films by pointing out that motion pictures do not fall within the category of an "ordinary commodity" which is simply imported and sold within the country. Most-favored-nation treatment for U. S. commodities with respect to customs duties, exchange control and internal taxes, for instance, is of little practical importance to U. S. films in the light of the fact that in many countries they may be the only foreign films imported.

Suggests Pact Clauses

To help eliminate these conditions the statement proposed a number of drafts of clauses which, the association feels, should be included in the Geneva reciprocal trade agreements. Among the suggestions made is one reading that U. S. films should be exempt from ordinary customs duties, charges, taxes, fees, etc., except in specific cases. Others ask for most-favored-nation treatment; exemption from internal taxes and charges other or higher than those imposed on other foreign films or domestic films; no import or customs quota; permission for advertising material for U. S. films to enter the country freely; the right of U. S. companies to open branches, and the elimination of duties on films shipped in for censorship and distributor screenings.

Cover Right to Dub

The proposed treaty clauses further cover the right to dub U. S. films at home and ask that importers should not be forced to purchase, produce or distribute any films of any other origin as a condition to the importation of American product. The clause dealing with remittances asks most-favored-nation treatment at all times and the most favorable rate of exchange for the payment of all importations from abroad.

At the same time, recognizing the scarcity of foreign exchange, the clause would permit governments temporarily to restrict the amount of exchange available for remittances in payment of U. S. films, provided that in making such allocations the film in general and U. S. films in particular "be treated in a fair and equitable manner in the light of remittances during a previous representative period." It is asked that producers and distributors of American films be free to spend within the country or to accumulate in local currency the excess over the amount allotted to them until the exchange of remittances of the U. S. is available.

The greater part of the 43-page statement was given over to a detailed review of trade barriers in the 18 countries. Countries covered were: Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United Kingdom.

Johnston Asks U.S. Aid World

American aid in reviving industry and trade in war-stricken countries and throughout the world is needed an addition to food shipments and relief if an economic and political debacle abroad is to be staved off, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, told the Women's National Republican Club in Washington last week.

"The new crisis now developing is making us realize that the world fought itself closer to prostration and exhaustion than we had at first believed," Mr. Johnston said. "The urgent problem that confronts us now is double-barreled—it is immediate and long range. Heroic measures are needed and American taxpayers are going to have to make up their minds on whether they want America to take on the greater obligations that go with leadership or whether they think the cost is too high to bear."

The MPA head called for a speed-up in the operation of international agencies such as the World Bank and the Stabilization Fund. He also urged an immediate international agreement to remove trade restrictions and urged the United States to provide the leadership for an expanding world trade at the forthcoming Geneva trade talks.

Lober and Silverstein Named Associate Regional Heads

Louis Lober and Maurice Silverstein have been promoted to associate regional directors of Loew's International Corporation, according to Morton A. Spring, first vice-president in charge of sales and theatre operations abroad. Mr. Lober formerly was assistant to David Lewis, regional director for Continental Europe, North Africa, Egypt and the Middle East. He now becomes associate regional director for the same region. Mr. Silverstein, formerly assistant to Edward F. O'Connor, regional director for the Far East, likewise became associate regional director for his area. He will leave for an inspection trip April 1. Mr. Lober, who has been with Loew's International since 1929 and was territorial manager for Egypt and the Middle East, will leave New York for an extensive tour of his region March 17.

Raftery Outlines UA Sales Policy At Convention

United Artists' forthcoming sales policy and selling under the terms of the decree were outlined by Edward C. Raftery, president, and Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president in charge of distribution, at two of the company's regional sales meetings last week.

"In the contract that our salesmen make, everything must be written into the contract and lived up to," Mr. Raftery told the delegates at the four-day regional meeting at the William Penn Hotel in Pittsburgh which opened last Thursday. Mr. Raftery said side agreements will be termed unlawful and will leave the burden of the responsibility upon the distributor. He recommended that United Artists use institutional ads to explain the company's attitude on this policy.

At the same time, Mr. Sears, addressing more than 100 district and branch managers, salesmen and exhibitor representatives at a four-day meeting in El Paso, Tex., gave a comprehensive review of the company's current production status. He emphasized the importance of United Artists' backlog of 29 pictures completed and awaiting release. The negative cost to date, he said, amounted to $41,000,000.

Discussion by representatives of both distribution and exhibition under decree selling marked the final day. Delegates were briefed on the new provisions of the decree by George Raftery, of company counsel.

Also speaking to the members of the Pennsylvania-Washington and Central districts gathered in Pittsburgh for the session were J. J. Unger, general sales manager; Edward M. Schnitzer, eastern and Canadian sales manager, and Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., advertising and publicity director.

Represented at the El Paso meeting, which was conducted by Maury Orr, western sales manager, were nine branches comprising the southern and western districts under the supervision of Fred M. Jack and W. E. Callaway, southern and western district manager, respectively.

Mr. Raftery, Mr. Sears and Mr. Orr were to arrive in Chicago Thursday for the final four-day meeting. They were to be joined there by Mr. Unger and Mr. Lazarus.

SCREEN MUST BE MORE MATURE IN TREATMENT, SAYS KOSTER

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

It's time for the screen to go mature, both in subject matter and treatment, in the seasoned opinion of Henry Koster, director of all those musicals starting with "Three Smart Girls," and he's going all out on that opinion by directing William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life" for the Cagney boys, Jimmy and William.

It will be his first undertaking without songs "coming out of a pretty face" since he came over from Europe, where he made other and sterner types of product for German, French and Dutch studios. He says it's a move in the direction indicated by what's gone on in the world during the past few years and is still going on.

"We're in a reconversion period," says the bland, blocky, confident director credited with establishing Deanna Durbin as the first child prodigy to cross successfully over into adult roles without interruption of career, "and the motion picture must reconvert in pace with other industries, arts, sciences, and the people. 'Cinderella' is dead. The public is no longer interested in seeing the underprivileged maiden marry the millionaire, because everybody knows now it doesn't happen. War experiences made adults out of adolescents. Your 18-year-old today has the knowledge and viewpoint of yesterday's 25- or 30-year-old. He's been matured by what he's been through, and is through with childish things."

Presentation Must Be Mature

Director Koster uses the word "mature" in its dictionary sense, emphatically not as a synonym for hot, forbidden, censorable, sensational or provocative, and he says there has never been objection to the presentation of mature themes if the manner of their presentation was professionally mature. In illustration he names "The Best Years of Our Lives," pointing out that such matters as a father's concern for the pre-marital education of his children, an instance of moral laxity, and other story materials which in professionally immature handlings have made up objectionable pictures, are dealt with by Director William Wyler in such level-eyed manner as to make them engage the intellectual interest of the audience without taking on unnatural proportion or appearing in a false light.

He also names other pictures in which subjects of mature interest have been treated in a manner to bring censure, and observe that censure incurred thus by immature or irresponsible handling of themes warranting treatment in key with their importance quickly becomes censure of the art industry in its entirety.

Not Permanent Move

Director Koster's forsaking of the musical field, in which he established his American career, is not necessarily in the nature of a permanent move. He may make more musicals later on. Just now, he says, a man who wants to make a musical finds himself confronted with two choices, if he's to stay within the trends observed by studios in general. He may make a biography of a famous song writer, and the supply of these is running low, or he may stack up an array of specialty numbers in a picture which amounts to "no more than a vaudeville show." Later on, he thinks, there may be room for films telling the stories of the great composers, or the immortal compositions.

"And where," he is asked, "are the mature stories to be found—the substantial works you say the industry needs to satisfy this reconversion generation?"

"There are plenty of them, everywhere," he says. "More of them than any other kind, on library shelves, in all literatures, in all languages. They've always been there, but Hollywood has never bothered to look for them."

"Mr. Bell" Completed by Pathe for Bell System

Celebrating the centenary of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, the Bell System is distributing through its company exchanges a three-reel motion picture entitled "Mr. Bell."

Produced in 16 and 35mm by RKO Pathe at its new studio in New York, the picture tells an interesting story of Mr. Bell as a scientist, teacher and humanitarian. In its 32 minutes it shows the obstacles the inventor had to overcome; the eventual acceptance of the telephone, and, finally, the growth of the telephone in every part of the world.

Alexander Graham Bell is played by Raymond Edward Johnson, who portrayed Thomas Jefferson in the Broadway stage play, "The Patriots." Charles Underhill produced for RKO Pathe.

Canada Picture Pioneers Hold Annual Party

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

Film veterans of the Dominion cast off their years as they celebrated the sixth birthday of the Canadian Picture Pioneers with an assembly for business and pleasure at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, February 27, with 100 present.

During the business program, the members reelected all the old directors, then found they must shuffle the ballots again because the constitution said four new faces are required each year on the board. The repeaters were: Ray Lewis, only woman in the Pioneers' pack; L. M. Devaney, Ben Cronk, Jack Arthur, Earl Lawson, Oscar R. Hanson and Clare Appel. The new directors are J. L. Hunter, Joe Garbarino, William Reeves and Charles Mavety, all of the Toronto area.

After two years, Mr. Devaney stepped down as president, succeeded by Mr. Hanson, one of the original prime-movers. Vice-president is Jack Arthur, and Ray Lewis is secretary-treasurer. Other officers are: public relations, J. J. Fitzgibbons; solicitor, D. J. Ongley; assistant treasurer, George H. Beeston.

The Pioneers found themselves with approximately $16,000 in the Benevolent Fund, earmarked for the care of needy film people anywhere in Canada. Chief addition to the fund during the past year was the $6,000 which came from the Pioneers' Ball and Carnival at Toronto's Royal York Hotel last autumn. In control of fund disbursements are the following trustees: Mr. Hanson, Miss Lewis, Mr. Beeston and Mr. Mavety.

The Old Boys were so busy with reunion fun and parley on the convention day, February 27, that appointments to the numerous standing committees were left over. It was decided delegates from each of the Provincial branches would meet in executive session on a national basis at Montreal on a date to be selected.

As his final presidential act, Mr. Devaney inducted 22 new members, with George Oulahan of Toronto assisting in the ceremony. Prizes left over from the Movie Ball were brought out for an auction conducted by Miss Lewis, and the result was an additional $125 for the Benevolent Fund. Special presentations were made to Dave Ongley and Johnny Poole of Toronto for performance of duties during the past 12 months.

CEA Rejects KRS Saving Plan, Offers Another

The executive committee of the British Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, meeting in London to discuss possible means of saving 1,500,000 feet of film weekly, this week rejected the suggestion of the Kinematograph Renters' Society that the number of release prints be cut. Because of the serious film shortage, brought about by the coal and power shortage, the whole industry has been concerned with ways and means of conserving the available supply of film. The CEA's scheme, offered for Government consideration, proposes that the newsreels save 350,000 feet of film a week, the studios save 250,000 feet a week and that the balance of 900,000 feet be saved weekly by the Government from its weekly usage of 2,500,000 feet. In the event the newsreels prove difficult, CEA is prepared to cancel their showing completely.

Portugal House Rejects Quota

by JOAO DE MORAES PALMEIRO
in Lisbon

After three days of discussion the Portuguese National Assembly rejected the Film Quota Law published December 27 and February 25 referred the bill to the Portuguese Corporative Chamber for revision and amendment. The Chamber then will refer the bill back to the Assembly.

Judging from the discussions, the revisions will not greatly affect the relationship between Portugal and the U. S. as outlined in the original bill.

The original contained these major provisions: each theatre shall play one week of Portuguese product for each five weeks of foreign product; special licenses must be obtained from the Board of Public Entertainments for all pictures imported; a special fund is established to protect the national industry; no Portuguese theatre may be owned or exploited by any foreign interests; all Portuguese-dubbed features, with the exception of Brazil, must be dubbed in Portugal.

A highlight of the Assembly discussions was the plea from Deputy Mendes Correia that the Quota Law should defend and aid only the best of the national product—not all features. He pointed out that the expansion of Portuguese industry depended upon obtaining raw materials and chemicals from abroad and thus it was expedient to maintain good relationships with foreign countries.

The fund to protect the industry also came in for criticism, the prevailing opinion being that the taxes to be levied to provide the fund were too high and that the fund should not only be controlled by the National Office of Information, but also by the Home, the Economic, the Cultural and the War Offices. Deputy Jorge Moniz severely criticized the law on the ground that it had not been submitted to the various branches of the industry for consideration.

TAXES DISRUPTING FRENCH INDUSTRY

by MAURICE BESSY
in Paris

There is a growing revolt within the French industry, directed at the National Center of French Cinema, the legal and official organization ruling the industry here. The revolt threatens to halt production and close theatres.

Mainspring of the revolt is the question of taxes. It is generally believed the French industry cannot carry on if a reduction of entertainment and "de luxe" taxes is not made. Recently the French National Assembly passed a bill which would change the rates of entertainment taxes and reduce from 17 to 13 per cent the "taxe de luxe" on exhibitors' receipts. Unfortunately, it has been proved that, under the new system, the reduction of taxes would be very small—from three to five per cent for the provincial theatres and, at the most, from six to eight per cent for the larger theatres.

This bill drew vehement protests from all branches of the industry. In a special meeting, the French Film Producers Syndicate ruled that, starting February 17, there would be no new applications made to the National Center for authorization of productions. The only new films to go before the cameras from now on will be those for which directors, actors and technicians already have been engaged.

The Exhibitors Syndicate of the Paris region decided at a February 19 meeting that all motion picture theatres should close down soon to protest excessive taxes. It was also decided that the Exhibitors Syndicate should not participate in the National Center of French Cinema—regarded as State interference with private activities.

At the same time the Regional Exhibitors' Associations held meetings in various parts of France and decided to close their theatres if the Government did not reduce the taxes.

On February 20, the National Confederation of French Cinema, representing production, distribution, exhibition and technicians, made a full and detailed report of the situation and suggested four solutions to the problem, including a propaganda campaign to warn the public of the serious situation of the industry and the stoppage of all activities within the industry. This last remedy would be only "at the last limit of resistance."

ITALY

by AR GEO SANTUCCI
in Rome

The Catholic Cinema Center, collaborating with O. M. I. Nistri, manufacturer of 16mm projectors, plans to establish 22,000 16mm theatres in Italy within the next five years. This program has already been presented for the approval of the Holy Father. Approximately 200 of the theatres will be opened immediately by Cine-Films, the company established by the merged interests of the Catholic organization and Nistri. It must be pointed out, however, that there is currently a shortage of 16mm features in the country.

The Italian Government collected approximately 3,000,000,000 lire ($7,500,000) in taxes on theatre admissions during 1946.

The Quattro Fontane theatre in Rome has been derequisitioned by the E. N. S. A., a British military entertainment organization. The theatre is a first class house with about 1,700 seats.

MEXICO

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS

Circuito del Norte, important theatre circuit of Monterrey, has petitioned the Federal Board of Conciliation and Arbitration for authorization to close its business, on the ground that operations are not profitable. It is reported that it is not lack of business but excessively high operating costs, largely labor, that is forcing the circuit to close.

Local exhibitors have reported to the Federal and Municipal Governments that they cannot accede to demands of certain interests, including labor, that first run admissions be reduced from 85 cents unless their employees agree to a wage cut. The admission is a new high.

Pedro Tellez Vargas, secretary-general of the National Cinematographic Industry Workers Union, has asked President Miguel Aleman to arrange for the union a working agreement with its rival, the Picture Production Workers Union. Both unions have been quarreling for two years. Efforts are also being made to merge the two unions, but that is considered difficult, if not impossible. Producers are eager for any kind of a peace that promises to be lasting, since frequent flareups between the two unions have hampered production.

BELGIUM

in Brussels

Film circles here are protesting Government intervention in the production and screening of newsreels.

During an extraordinary meeting of the Belgian Syndical Chamber of Cinema, the Newsreels Section passed a motion of protest against measures taken by the state Control Commission for Films, claiming unconstitutional intervention by the Commission in newsreel production. According to present regulations, newsreels may be shown without previous viewing by the Control Commission, but the Commission has been censoring views deemed unfit for the public.

Following an official refusal by M. Liebaert, the Economic Affairs Minister, to allow cinema theatre owners and directors to fix admission prices as they please, the Association des Directeurs de Theatres Cinematographiques Belges organized a referendum among its 1,200 members, asking: "Do you agree to go on strike and close your theatre if the minister does not change his mind?"

The response has been overwhelmingly in favor of a strike. Out of the first 200 answers 198 are in favor of a strike.

Because of heavy taxation, some cinema theatres are losing up to 200,000 francs a month—about $4,600.

20th-Fox Buys Loew-Robbins Music Interest

Transfer of a substantial stock interest in the Loew-owned Robbins Music Corporation to 20th Century-Fox was announced this week by Charles C. Moskowitz, president of the Robbins company and vice-president and treasurer of Loew's, Inc. It is understood a 26 per cent interest and approximately $700,000 were involved.

The Robbins group includes Robbins Music Corporation; Leo Feist, Inc.; Miller Music Corporation; Walter Jacobs, Inc.; Big 3 Music Corporation; Gene Krupa Music Corporation; Robbins International Corporation; Variety Music, Inc., and the newly formed Harry Warren Music Corporation, set up as a subsidiary after Metro had taken over last year. The stock interest figuring in the purchase presumably is that which Loew's acquired from Jack Robbins when he severed his connection with the company's music subsidiaries.

At a stockholders' meeting of Robbins Music Corporation this week the following directors were elected: Mr. Moskowitz, Leopold Friedman, J. Robert Rubins, Joseph R. Vogel, Jesse T. Mills, Joseph H. Moskowitz and W. C. Michel. The last two also are vice-presidents of 20th-Fox. Newly-elected officers include Mr. Moskowitz, president; Mr. Friedman and Mr. J. H. Moskowitz, vice-presidents; Charles K. Stern, treasurer; Abe Olman, secretary; Harold J. Cleary, Bernard Prager and Stephen Levitz, assistant secretaries, and Mr. Mills, assistant treasurer.

Republic Pays 25 Cents

Republic Pictures' board of directors last Thursday declared a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share on preferred stock, payable April 1, 1947, to stockholders of record March 10.

Film Division of Reports Office to Be Liaison Only

Washington Bureau

Departing gradually from its broadly planned program of film production and periodic film messages, the film division of the Office of Government Reports is now satisfied merely to act as the liaison agent between Government bureaus and the film industry's 12-man committee on film matters involving the Government.

Commenting on the Government film office, Dr. John R. Steelman, former OWMR chief and presidential advisor, said the unit would not engage in commercial film production. "All we desire is to cooperate with the picture industry and in certain cases get important messages to the public attention by the use of trailers for exhibition in commercial houses," he said. He added that the Government had no desire to cram down the throats of exhibitors shorts which would be criticized by the patron.

Approve Resolution

The industry study committee met in New York Tuesday to hear Mr. Fabian report nine organizations had approved the committee resolution for the formation of a coordinating committee for cooperation with the Government through one agency representing all branches. Nominations to that committee, the meeting was advised, included Mr. Fabian, ATA; R. B. Wilby, Confederacy of Southern Associations; Harry Brandt, Independent Theatre Owners; Francis Harmon, Motion Picture Association; Herman Levy, MPTOA; Tom Connors, National Distribution Committee; Michael Clofine, newsreels; Donald Nelson, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, and Ben Shlyen, trade press. Mr. Fabian was requested to continue to serve as interim chairman and operating committees in each exchange area are to be named.

Allied, the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Exhibitors and the Conference of Independent Exhibitor Association have not accepted an invitation to join the study committee.

Agrees with Johnston

Dr. Steelmen said he agreed with Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, who said the Government should stay away from production of any pictures for exhibition in commercial theatres. Provided the film unit does not engage in picture production, its budget for operation is only $50,000 a year. Dallas Halverstadt now is acting head of the section. The film functions were started last year by President Truman at the request of the American Theatres Association. The unit acts as clearing house for all Government film matters, thus saving the industry considerable confusion. ATA and MPA may be represented when the House Appropriations Committee holds closed hearings on appropriations for the Government office.

Two other Government bureaus important to the film industry—the commercial policy division of the State Department and the Commerce Department's trade information unit—will not be affected by the current wave of economy sweeping Congress, Republican leaders indicated in Washington this week. Neither unit operates on a high budget nor do they engage in propaganda or private business. Nathan D. Golden, who heads the Commerce Department section, runs his bureau on an appropriation of less than $25,000 a year.

At the State Department George Canty is in charge. His total requirements for a year run around $30,000.

Compromise Reopens Chicago B. & K. House

Balaban & Katz' Admiral theatre, northwest side house in Chicago which has been closed for six weeks because of a controversy with the local projectionists' union, reopened February 26 under a compromise agreement which will be in effect pending final settlement.

Crux of the controversy came when B&K discontinued matinee showings at the Admiral and the union asked that any projectionist laid off because of such a move be absorbed in other of the circuit's houses. The theatre closed completely when neither side "gave in." Under the terms of the temporary truce, the Admiral will be open for both matinee and evening business.

At the same time, the circuit's Drake theatre also resumed matinee showings February 26. The Drake did not close but projectionists working evenings refused their checks until the temporary settlement was effected.

At a meeting of the board of directors of W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., and Butterfield Michigan Theatres Company Monday in Detroit, L. E. Gordon was elected president and treasurer, William A. Ruble vice-president; Olive M. Cox vice-president in charge of theatre operations; E. K. Ellsworth, secretary, and George S. Berger, assistant treasurer.

Mr. Gordon has been an officer of the companies in various capacities since 1929, and is also co-trustee with the Central Trust Company of Lansing in the operation of the Butterfield estate.

Mr. Ruble of Lansing, Mich., represents the Central Trust Company as co-trustee of the estate of the late W. S. Butterfield.

Miss Cox has been with Butterfield interests since 1919, while Mr. Ellsworth, associate of the late Edmund C. Shields, former vice-president and secretary of the companies, has been associated with the Butterfield companies since his return from the armed services in 1945. Mr. Berger has been with Butterfield since 1924 as auditor.

Warren Conner, 50, in poor health for a year, died in Holmes Hospital, Cincinnati, February 28. He was district manager for Altec Service Corporation there. Surviving are his widow, a brother, and sister.

Two Promoted by Midwest Circuit

Two new executive positions were created in the Minnesota Amusement Company last week when Harry B. French, president, announced the appointments of George C. Sheperd, formerly general auditor in charge of accounting, as director of sales and merchandising, and of Robert P. LaPiner, former head of the company's candy department, as director of special events. Forrest D. Sathre, who has been assistant to Mr. Sheperd since October, 1945, will succeed him as auditor.

Mr. French explained that Mr. Sheperd's new duties would put him in charge of all purchasing and selling of candies, popcorn and any other sales within theatres. The appointment is in line with a program recently launched to expand and improve merchandising in the 82 houses operated by the company in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Wisconsin. In the theatre business 21 years, he has been associated with Minnesota Amusement since 1929.

Mr. LaPiner has been with the company 27 years. In his new assignment he will be in charge of planning and execution of special events, including conventions, business meetings and traffic managements.

Sue Exhibitor Over Returns

Four suits were filed in the United States District Court in Phoenix, Ariz., last week by Paramount, Warner Brothers, Loew's, Inc., and 20th Century-Fox against Louis F. Long, operating 23 theatres in Arizona. The suits claimed alleged incorrect box office reports and returns from the exhibition of the plaintiffs' pictures. At the same time, two other suits were filed by Columbia and RKO claiming infringement of copyright by Mr. Long through the allegedly unauthorized exhibition of pictures. Named in the court actions were 27 features, a short subject and a newsreel.

Exhibitor's Theatre Records Seized in Percentage Suit

All books and records of Bart Dattola of the New Dattola theatre in New Kensington, Pa., have been ordered seized and impounded by U. S. District Judge McVicar in Federal Court, Pittsburgh. The seizure order arose in the course of the further inspection of theatre records of 19 exhibitor plaintiffs now being made for the eight distributor defendants under a supplementary order granted last month by Judge McVicar in Roth et al vs. Paramount et al. This is the action brought some time ago by Mr. Dattola and 23 other exhibitor plaintiffs. Distributors have been inspecting the theatre records for the purpose of counterclaims filed by them in an action alleging damages from inaccurate percentage returns.

Astor

THEY MEET AGAIN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—Some of these reissues have better stories than the new ones. It is only a program picture, but my patrons enjoyed it. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Jan. 14, 15.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Ark.

Columbia

COWBOY BLUES: Ken Curtis, Jeff Donnell—These Curtis pictures could be better if they would put more action in them. This series does not exactly please the majority of my Western fans, as they crave action. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

GALLANT JOURNEY: Glenn Ford, Janet Blair—Convincing performance by Glenn Ford. My patrons thought it was very entertaining. Business bad due to cold wave and local basketball game. Played Friday, Feb. 7.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

GALLOPING THUNDER: Charles Starrett, Smiley Burnette—Typical good Starrett Western. Smiley Burnette added some new as well as some old comedy twists and tricks, but he got plenty of laughs. Enjoyed by all. Business good. Played Saturday, Feb. 8.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

WALLS CAME TUMBLING DOWN, THE: Lee Bowman, Marguerite Chapman—Worth only lowest allocation. Fair story, but no box office names to get the people in. Poor business and no comments. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

Film Classics

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—A very good reissue starring Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall. On an opening day, Tuesday, it grossed more than "She Wrote the Book" on Sunday. If you haven't already played this reissue, I suggest that you book it. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 18, 19.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COURAGE OF LASSIE, THE: Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan—Excellent picture. Let's have more "Lassie" pictures soon. Metro.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan—MGM sells these right and they do big business. My weekly gross was only average because folks seem to have only so much to spend during these times of high prices and the other pictures had to suffer to make up for "Lassie." However, this picture is a real drawing card with beautiful color. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 9-11.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

HOLIDAY IN MEXICO: Walter Pidgeon, Ilona Massey—It is difficult to report on this one. Production value was certainly there. The cast was above average. The color good. However, it didn't do business. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—Don Whittington, Lincoln theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

LAST CHANCE, THE: E. G. Morrison, John Hoy—A below-average crowd saw this and the majority approved. A large percentage of German-speaking people enjoyed the German dialogue. It is a tense, dramatic story that kept the crowd who came enthralled. Played Monday, Feb. 10.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

LETTER FOR EVIE, A: Marsha Hunt, John Carroll—I played this on a double bill with "Neath Canadian Skies," but "Evie" kept them away and business dropped to the depths. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1976. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box office performance of product — providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York 20.

Monogram

BEAUTY AND THE BANDIT: Gilbert Roland, Ramsay Ames—This series seems to be a little better, but much improvement is needed for such to be called a Western. Only fair. Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 16-18.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Ark.

BLACK MARKET BABIES: Ralph Morgan, Jayne Hazard—We tried to sell this as a sensational expose but they wouldn't go for it. The second night was very poor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

DRIFTING ALONG: Johnny Mack Brown, Raymond Hutton—Excellent Western. Don't fail to use it.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

IN FAST COMPANY: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall—A good action small town show in a popular series. The Bowery Boys are well liked here. Played on a weekend. Played Saturday, Feb. 8.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

TRAP, THE: Sidney Toler, Manton Moreland—Double bill this with a Western and it is one of the best of the series. Manton Moreland is always good for laughs. Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 9-11.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Ark.

Paramount

BLUE SKIES: Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire—This picture will do business for you, and it is in beautiful color. For the plot and the acting, I can't say much. However, it did very well at the box office. Play it if you can as it will fill your house at every performance. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 11-13.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

OUR HEARTS WERE GROWING UP: Diana Lynn, Gail Russell—Grosses on this barely exceeded the rental. Attendance was hurt because of a "Lassie" picture played previously. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

SWAMP FIRE: Johnny Weissmuller, Virginia Grey—Picture only average, but business was much better than the production rated. Many thought it would be a "Tarzan" show. No walkouts. So I would say it satisfied my weekend action fans. Played Thursday, Friday, Jan. 30, 31.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

BLUEBEARD: John Carradine, Jean Parker—A fair show which did average business. Played Tuesday, Feb. 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

ENCHANTED FOREST, THE: Edmund Lowe, Brenda Joyce—This is a great picture in color for the children. It was old when I played it, so business was just average. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

I RING DOOR BELLS: Robert Shayne, Ann Gwynne—Consider this a waste of effort by all concerned. I am not going to buy this type of stuff again. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 11-13.—Don Whittington, Lincoln Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

MINSTREL MAN: Benny Fields, Gladys George—MOTION PICTURE HERALD said: Excellent. The few patrons who came said, "Nix." It was old, but we hadn't played it before. It is a fair picture. Doubled with "The Desert Horseman." Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

SONG OF OLD WYOMING: Eddie Dean, Jennifer Holt—Good Western action thriller in color, but it failed to do business. Maybe Dean is not well enough known. We had nice weather. Played Thursday, Friday, Feb. 13, 14.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

DING DONG WILLIAMS: Glenn Vernon, Marcia McGuire—Very, very poor. In fact, the Sons of the Pioneers were the only bright spot in the 65 minutes of wasted film. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal.

KID FROM BROOKLYN, THE: Danny Kaye, Virginia Mayo—If you can't get them in to see this, something is wrong with your audience. Even patrons who don't care for Danny Kaye enjoyed the color, the girls, the music. I would say it is very good entertainment. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 5, 6.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Ark.

LADY LUCK: Robert Young, Barbara Hale—Would be good for a double bill. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 5, 6.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

LADY LUCK: Robert Young, Barbara Hale—This is an entertaining comedy, but it failed to attract any business. Just another picture in my books. Should not have been sold on percentage. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 5, 6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

MAKE MINE MUSIC: Disney Musical Feature—Just a series of short subjects put together. Each one is well done, but it is rather tiresome as a whole. One man walked out after about 30 minutes and asked, "Is this the picture?" then added, "I can't stand that stuff." However, many liked it. Child business was good, but total business was only average. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

RADIO STARS ON PARADE: Frances Langford, Wally Brown—Good musical. Plenty of comedy and action. Enjoyed by all. Business good. Played Sunday, Feb. 21.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

TILL THE END OF TIME: Dorothy McGuire, Guy Madison—Truly one of the good ones of present day happenings to ex-servicemen. It has an all-star cast. Comments were good. Bob Mitchum steals the show. This got over solid in freezing weather. Business good. Played Sunday, Feb. 9.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

Republic

ALIAS BILLY THE KID: Sunset Carson, Peggy Stewart—Good Western with Sunset Carson and lots of action. Played one day only to satisfactory business. Played Wednesday, Feb. 12.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

CRIME OF THE CENTURY: Stephanie Bachelor, Michael Browne—Good action thriller that did O.K. on our one-day booking. O.K. for a midweek play-date. Played Tuesday, Feb. 11.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

DON'T FENCE ME IN: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—Not a Western in the true sense of the word. However, it is the first we have played of the Rogers' features and more are going to be played. The crowd went for this. Played Monday, Feb. 3.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MURDER IN THE MUSIC HALL: Vera Hruha Ralston, William Marshall—Should have called this one "Murder at the Box Office." Very poor business. The second night was a record low for five years. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Jan. 21, 22.—Arthur E. Phinfield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

Screen Guild

HOPALONG RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd—Good Western. New print.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

NEATH CANADIAN SKIES: Russell Hayden, Inez Cooper—Very good little picture. Hope they make a lot of these with the same running time.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

Twentieth Century-Fox

NOB HILL: George Raft, Joan Bennett—This registered well with my customers and jingled a merry tune at the box office. It is entertaining and pleased 100 per cent. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 11-13.—Don Whittington, Lincoln Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY: John Payne, Maureen O'Hara—Played rather late, but it did very well at the box office. Truly a fine show which pleased 100 per cent. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—Arthur E. Phinfield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

SMOKY: Fred MacMurray, Anne Baxter—Did outstanding matinee business Sunday, but the evening and Monday were only average. It was a grand show which pleased the young and old. Doubled with "Rockin' in the Rockies" from Columbia, which attracted the children because it had the Three Stooges in it. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Don Whittington, Lincoln Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

United Artists

ANGEL ON MY SHOULDER: Paul Muni, Anne Baxter—Be sure that your exits are clear because you will need them for the rush to get out of the theatre. The exodus was terrific on both days. In fact, it was worse than we can remember.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

BACHELOR'S DAUGHTERS, THE: Gail Russell, Claire Trevor—This had the stars, but it needs more punch and comedy to make it a hit. Played Sunday, Feb. 9.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen—We realized no business. Bad weather didn't help. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

MR. ACE: George Raft, Sylvia Sydney—This one is different at least. Raft is good as usual. Sylvia Sydney gave one of the finest performances of her career. Comments from the patrons were good. Business usual for Monday and Tuesday. Played Feb. 3, 4.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

NIGHT IN CASABLANCA, A: Marx Brothers, Lois Collier—This is a good comedy, which did average business. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

NIGHT IN CASABLANCA, A: Marx Brothers, Lois Collier—We played this late, but it was very acceptable to everyone. The Marx Brothers have brought much happiness to many people over a long period of time. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

SCANDAL IN PARIS, A: George Sanders, Signe Hasso—This picture is a sleeper. It was well done and it was pleasing to both eye and ear. Play this one, but give it due publicity in advance. Advertise it as a light romantic drama of old France and it will go over very well. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

Universal

CANYON PASSAGE: Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward—This was very good at the box office. The scenery made up for the story, which was somewhat on the juvenile side. We will settle any time for a picture that brings them in as this one did. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

CANYON PASSAGE: Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward—Excellent.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

KILLERS, THE: Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner—The title plus the extreme cold weather made this one flop for us, although it was well acted. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 3, 4.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

KILLERS, THE: Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner—Well-produced thriller with plenty of suspense, but they did not come out in this small situation. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 10, 11.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

LOVER COME BACK: George Brent, Lucille Ball—Business very poor as this type of entertainment is never popular here. There were some amusing sequences in the picture. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 5, 6.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

PILLOW OF DEATH: Lon Chaney, Brenda Joyce—Played on a double bill. My patrons thought it was nothing to brag about. I agree. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

RUSTLER'S ROUNDUP: Kirby Grant, Fuzzy Knight—Average Western which pleased those who came. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Don Whittington, Lincoln Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

SHE WROTE THE BOOK: Joan Davis, Jack Oakie—Did O.K. Friday, but adverse word-of-mouth comments hurt Saturday's business. All in all, this was pretty dull here. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Don Whittington, Lincoln Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

SHE WROTE THE BOOK: Joan Davis, Jack Oakie—As a rule, Joan Davis is a good attraction in our theatre, but she failed miserably in this one. It is evidently not the kind of a picture her fans expect to see her in. They stayed away in large numbers, giving us one of the worst Sunday and Monday grosses in years. Played Feb. 16, 17.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Polly Rowles—Good old Gene Autry. My patrons welcome him, and he puts new life in our theatre. Single bill this one. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

WHITE TIE AND TAILS: Dan Duryea, Ella Raines—Pretty good. No business.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

Warner Bros.

DANGER SIGNAL: Zachary Scott, Faye Emerson—Strictly double bill material. Pretty poor in spots with a definitely weak story. Stars are adequate. Played Monday, Feb. 3.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MILDRED PIERCE: Joan Crawford, Jack Carson—Played this old one against my better judgment and it lived up to my expectations. Joan Crawford's Academy Award performance didn't bring the patrons out. Small town trade won't go for this sort of stuff, although it was excellent from many points of view. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 4-6.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: James Stewart, Rosalind Russell—Pretty good reissue.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

Short Features

Film Classics

HELPMATES: Laurel and Hardy—This is a very good Laurel and Hardy reissue. It runs 21 minutes and there are plenty of laughs. You won't make any mistake by playing this one.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

THEIR FIRST MISTAKE: Laurel and Hardy—This is a very funny two-reel comedy with Laurel and Hardy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

LAND OF THE MAYAS: Fitzpatrick Traveltalks—Definitely below average. In fact, it is the poorest one we have played of the series. Avoid it, if possible.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

LONESOME LENNY: Tom and Jerry Cartoons—Very good cartoon.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

THE HICK CHICK: MGM Technicolor Cartoons—Amusing color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

GYPSY LIFE: Terrytoons—Very good cartoon with fine musical background.—Arthur E. Phinfield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

SEA SIRENS: Sports Reviews—Good reel in color with bathing beauties and some good underwater shots.—Arthur E. Phinfield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

WHO'S WHO IN THE JUNGLE: Terrytoons—Another super cartoon. Our patrons go for cartoons and this received much favorable comment.—All of it is good.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

United Artists

CHOO CHOO AMIGO: Daffy Ditties—Entertaining cartoon in beautiful color. Musical accompaniment is good.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

TOCCATA AND FUGUE: Loew Musicolor—This musicolor short will serve as a filler and that is all. Just some mountain scenery with music by a symphony orchestra.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

David Lewis Cites Value Of Cooperative System

The cooperative system, under which Enterprise Productions gives its stars a percentage of gross, is fair and eventually will spread to other studios, David Lewis, producer of "Arch of Triumph" and "The Other Love," said in New York Tuesday.

Mr. Lewis was to leave on the Queen Elizabeth Friday for England where he will arrange for the opening of "The Other Love" at the Empire theatre, London, about March 25. "Arch of Triumph" will open in New York and will not be shown in Europe until Autumn, he said. Mr. Lewis announced plans for production in England and said he hoped to use MGM's British studios. The film has a British background and half of its script is finished. Mr. Lewis' contract calls for two pictures a year—one for Enterprise and one for his own organization.

The producer foresaw no difficulty in roadshowing his pictures in this country and pointed to the Goldwyn method of leasing theatres. "Enough theatres across the country have indicated their eagerness to book our pictures," he said. "We'll just do what Goldwyn did and what I understand Mr. Selznick is doing." Mr. Lewis also expressed apprehension over the "dangerous" rise of production costs.

These comprise Mexico, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Canal Zone, Colombia, Trinidad, Venezuela and the Caribbean area. At the same time, Mr. Gould announced the appointment of J. B. Urbina as Mr. Bromberg's successor in Mexico. Mr. Urbina rejoins UA after five years. He resigned in 1942 as manager in Mexico to become sales manager of Clasa-Films Mundiales.

Industry meetings were planned for New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

The Winners

Announcing last July that Ivan Ackery had been awarded the Second Quarter Plaque, we reported that no Canadian had ever qualified for top honors in the Quigley Grand Awards.

The picture has now been changed, fittingly enough, by Mr. Ackery himself. Apparently, the Vancouver theatre manager applied that full measure of experience and skill which, combined with his national pride, spurred him on through the final months of 1946 to top attainment and the title of Champion Showman of the World. Mr. Ackery was competing with the best showmen in the United States, Canada and those from 27 nations across six continents.

Our special interest has always been on the side of the little fellow and the subsequent-run exhibitor, doing everything for and by himself, but a few weeks ago we mentioned that the publicity manager—the lad in the big city with four or five houses to worry about—has his problems also.

In selecting Nate Wise to receive the Bronze Plaque, we believe that the judges again proved that exceptional ability cannot be lost or ignored, from whatever source or location it emanates. You just cannot hide a real light under a bushel basket always.

The excellence of Mr. Wise's promotions, his faithfulness to his work throughout the year, is an outstanding example of resourcefulness and a knack for getting things done. These are the prerequisites for recognition as a champion among champion showmen.

Frank Bradley's achievement in being selected to receive a Special Plaque for overseas showmanship supremacy will be especially welcome to the directors and executives of Gaumont British theatres with whom he is associated.

Gaumont British theatremen have provided some of the keenest competition throughout the year—a policy encouraged by the organization's leaders and especially James Forsyth, its public relations director.

We suspect, however, that the other English theatremen, with their characteristic persistence and "try again" attitude, will not let Mr. Bradley go unchallenged in 1947.

To the many hundreds of showmen who competed in last year's Awards competition and who did not quite make the top grade, there are new prospects ahead. Congratulations all around, and let's hear from you.

Back in the Fold

About two weeks ago we noted that we were up-to-date on the whereabouts of every Quigley Award winner since 1934 except Ted Kirkmeyer, last heard of in Uncle Sam's Navy.

Either Ted read our article or, by coincidence—he doesn't say which—we have a letter from him saying that he joined Fox Inter-Mountain theatres as city manager in Ogden, Utah, a few weeks ago.

He writes: "One of the first letters I received at mail call after entering service nearly four years ago was a 'best wishes' letter from you.

"It was a joy to meet you personally at Gert Merriam's testimonial party, and regret that we were unable to see you during our remaining days in New York.

"It is a wonderful feeling to return home again and be among old friends. . . . From time to time will be forwarding items that may be of interest to other members of the Round Table."

Enclosed with his letter is a newspaper clipping which reports an attempted holdup at one of the theatres under Mr. Kirkmeyer's supervision. The cashiers have instructions to refer non-routine matters to the manager. When a youthful stickup artist demanded that the cashier "hand over the money", the young lady replied, "I'm sorry, you'll have to see the manager." The unanticipated comeback so unnerved the would-be bandit that he abandoned his plan and made a run for it. As soon as the bandit fled, the cashier promptly fainted.

Bitter Sweets

In commenting on signs observed in several theatres advertising "All 5¢ candy now 6¢", a bulletin sent out by a circuit recently has this note on sour showmanship: "Is that the kind of customer appeal and psychology the showman of 1947 applies?"

The candy, it is presumed, will have more appeal to the customer if they proffer five cents and then told it's a penny more. Nevertheless, we venture that the experience would not sweeten the confection nor future sales prospects.

—CHESTER FRIEDMAN

SOME TIMELY PROMOTIONS

Joining with hundreds of other showmen throughout the nation, Dan Dandrea, manager of the Stanley, Bridgeton, N. J., featured this attractive lobby board with quotations from national leaders and movie stars.

Fuel shortage in England prompted Jack Campbell, manager of the Scala in Runcorn, Cheshire, England, to get out special posters stressing the fact that people could help the national situation by attending the brightest and warmest spot in town, obviously the Scala.

At right, Willis Shaffer, manager of the Fox Orpheum, Atchison, Kans., publicizes "Sunset Pass" with novel lobby board and costumed staff.

Left, manager Mollie Stickle, Palace, Meriden, Conn., offers patrons guest tickets if they draw card marked with "The Secret Heart."

At right, Ward B. Kreag, manager of the State, Altoona, Pa., placed this oversize postcard in the lobby and invited patrons to send greetings to star of "The Fabulous Dorsey's."

At left, an attractive display created by Jack Hamilton, manager of the Sheephead theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., to promote double feature attraction.

The Selling Approach

ON NEW PRODUCT

SMASH-UP (Universal-International): Susan Hayward and Lee Bowman star in this picture, which deals with the alcoholic degeneration of a woman who is shut out of her husband's life.

This is a picture that could advantageously be previewed for local women's clubs. Discuss with club leaders the possibilities of forming a sponsoring committee to promote a special opening night for the picture. Working through such a committee, it is possible to get individual club presidents or secretaries to send letters to their own mailing lists, urging all members to turn out for opening night.

Get club members to form "telephone teams." Start with a dozen women, each of whom agree to phone five other women about the picture and ask each of these five women to phone in turn, five others. Get the women to visit manufacturing plants, department stores and other spots where many girls are employed. Their purpose will be to get an announcement of the opening night inserted in pay envelopes of employees and to post notices on bulletin boards.

Arrange a dignified tieup with a reputable local psychiatrist who would be willing to write an article for a newspaper and using the story of the picture as an example of the emotional smash-ups that women undergo. In the light of the foregoing suggestion, consider the possibilities of putting your "guest psychiatrist" on the radio to discuss the picture and perhaps, the problems of the women who are writing in to him.

In addition to the dramatic aspect of the story, the picture features three new songs, "Life Can Be Beautiful," "I Miss That Feeling" and "Hushabye Island." See to it that all radio stations have records and copies of the sheet music. Work with music stores in circulating orchestrations to night spots and dance orchestras.

PURSUED (Warner Bros.): Here is an outdoor melodrama of the southwest at the turn of the century. It stars Teresa Wright and Robert Mitchum.

Arrange a tieup with the local newspaper and merchants for a treasure hunt. The merchants could use special window displays, featuring items such as the "Pursued" dress, etc. The newspaper gives the first clue as follows: "Go to (name of store) window and pick up the trail." The store window displays the duplicate of the actual item to be "Pursued" and also informs the contestants to buy the (date) issue of the newspaper for the third final clue.

For the final clue, the newspaper informs competitors that at a given time at a certain place a pretty girl (or a man, depending on the merchandise chosen) will wear the treasure itself. In order to win the treasure, the contestant must spot the person modeling the treasure, must be carrying a copy of the newspaper and be able to answer the question: "In what store window did the treasure appear?"

Tie-in with a local school or college for the purpose of having the feminine contingent elect the most "Pursued" man on the campus, publicizing the stunt with skills of Mitchum. Announce the winner from your stage opening night and award him promoted merchandise. Arrange for news and photo coverage.

A horseman could be sent through the streets to ballyhoo the playdate. He drops imprinted circulars along the way with copy, reading: "Help! I'm being 'Pursued.' You can find out why at, etc."

Stories Planted in County Press for Double Bill

Stories and art were planted in five Westchester County newspapers for "The Time of Their Lives" and "Black Angel" at the State theatre, White Plains, N. Y. The stories played up the fact that Dan Duryea, star of "Black Angel," is a former resident of White Plains. Window tieups were arranged with five centrally located stores. A reader board and lobby display was placed in the Roger Smith Hotel. Grant's used a counter display. The campaign was arranged by manager Michael Stranger and assistant manager Mike Piccirillo.

Air Contest Promotes "Nora"

Haney Promotes Co-Op Ads

Cooperative newspaper ads were arranged with two music stores by manager John J. Haney to promote "Blue Skies" at the Patio theatre, Freeport, Ill. The stores, Heiser's Record Shop and Collier's Music Store, also used window displays.

Press, Merchant Contest Tieup Aid "Dorseys"

A song title contest heralded the world premiere of "The Fabulous Dorseys" at the Stanton theatre in Philadelphia. Manager Lou Coluntuano and Warner theatres' publicity director Everett Callow arranged the contest through a tieup with the Daily News and Raymond Rosen, RCA-Victor distributor.

For the competition, the newspaper ran a list of song titles that had been recorded by Tommy Dorsey for RCA-Victor. Prizes were awarded for the best sentence, paragraph or jingle using any four of the listed titles.

The winner received an RCA-Victor combination radio and phonograph, four Tommy Dorsey record album and an all-expense paid weekend trip to Atlantic City. Fifteen additional prizes, including record albums and guest tickets, were awarded to the runners-up.

The record distributor placed full page cooperative ads with record dealers in the Daily News, giving picture playdate and plugging the contest.

Screens Short for Officials

A special screening of "Traffic With the Devil" was held for the local police judge, chief of police and traffic officers to obtain their support for the playdate of the short at the Granada theatre, Kansas City, Kan. Traffic violators were ordered by the police judge to see the picture. The campaign was arranged by Charles W. Barnes, Jr.

20 YEARS IN SHOW BUSINESS — 1927-1947

RUBENS STRESSES SMALL SPACE ADS

"Very often small, individual ads become scattered, buried or are so poorly constructed that they have little or no selling value." So states a recent bulletin by Maurice M. Rubens, vice-president of Publix Great States Theatres.

Mr. Rubens says the greatest problem in keeping newspaper advertising costs within reason appears to be the manager's attempt to lay out small ads, "crowding the reading matter into the border rule, with the result that they become lost in a mass of foreign advertising or readers."

For this reason, it is pointed out that in many instances a one-column ad 10 inches long cannot be found on the newspaper page, whereas a two-column two-inch ad representing only four inches of space, of proper construction, can be readily discerned.

Limited space makes it more difficult to write a small ad than a large one, Mr. Rubens continues, adding that "many people cannot read type smaller than seven-point." While the signature cut should be an outstanding unit in every ad, the inclination is to fill up space by using an oversized one, he said.

With steadily increasing advertising rates and lineage commitments, it is more important than ever that exploitation costs be a matter of daily analysis, it is further pointed out. Small ads that sell big, taking advantage of assistant advertising, compiling campaigns well in advance, all tend to keep these costs under control, according to Mr. Rubens, who adds that "wise spending is the basis of intelligent saving."

Concluding the letter, Mr. Rubens writes: "We all know that any theatre can 'coast along' using little or no newspaper advertising or exploitation. Such a course, however, eventually results in a dropoff of income to a point that the operation shows little or no profit. What interests me most is the claim that best available statistics show 63,000,000 in the U. S. do not go to the movies. Just think of that! What an opportunity for new 'selling' ideas! What an opportunity for men in the field to become outstanding."

Legs Competition Attracts Attention to "Brazil"

A "Miss Lovely Legs" contest held in connection with the playdate of "Thrill of Brazil" drew considerable attention to the picture at the Palace theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. 3,000 entry blanks were distributed from the lobby of the theatre prior to the contest. A finalist was chosen each night for four nights. On the fifth night the winner was selected. Prizes included a scholarship to the Patricia Steven's Finishing and Model School plus one year's supply of Holeproof nylons. The contest was arranged by manager Charles R. Hacker.

Ties Up with Radio Station For Dedicatory Broadcast

Manager Dick Peffley arranged a neat tieup with the new FM station WFRO by persuading them to hold their dedicatory broadcast from the stage of the Paramount theatre, Fremont, Ohio. The station paid for the cost of the entertainers, including a 14-piece orchestra, cowboy band and several vocalists. WFRO also ran a 50-inch cooperative ad in the local newspaper the day before the show.

Mixson Uses Double Post Cards

Double-type post cards were distributed by manager Buzzy Mixson to exploit his engagement of "The Valley of Decision" at the Arcade theatre, Williston, Fla. Copy on the inside of the card publicized the picture and playdate.

Star Appears at "Angel and The Badman" Date

The personal appearance of John Wayne, star of the picture, and his wife, Esperanza, highlighted the campaign for the world premiere of "Angel and the Badman" at the Fox theatre, San Francisco, Cal. The campaign was arranged by manager Jack McDonald.

Wayne was made an honorary citizen by Mayor Roger Lapham, who designated the period of visit as "John Wayne Day." The star's appearance resulted in substantial press coverage and a radio interview by Ted and Dorothy Friend over station KPO. Mrs. Wayne was interviewed by women's page editors at a luncheon tendered the couple.

A "John Wayne Picture Coloring Contest" heralded the opening of the picture at the Mayfair theatre, Baltimore, Md. Manager Mickey Hendricks and publicity director J. E. Hurwitz arranged the contest with the cooperation of the Juvenile Bureau of the Baltimore Police Department. 5,000 heralds, featuring a press book line-cut of Wayne, were distributed, together with a letter from Inspector John R. Schueler, director of the Juvenile Bureau.

Cash prizes and 100 guest tickets were awarded. Four members of the Baltimore Sun staff served as judges. The winners, selected from 3,800 entries, received their prizes on the Saturday morning "Children's Theatre of the Air" program over WCBM. The broadcast was ballyhooed for a week as a special "Western Round-Up Party," with cash prizes for the three youngsters with the best western costumes.

As a tiein with Gail Russell's pursuit of Wayne in the picture, a "Should a Girl Propose" letter-writing contest was set with the News Post. The competition ran for a week, garnering daily readers and three single-column art breaks. Western-style hats were sent to editors and critics to wear when visiting the theatre. Don Kirkley, Sun theatre editor, devoted a complete column to the promotion.

An effective "Western Sundae" promotion was set with the Delvale Ice Cream Company. 1,000 hand-drawn strips printed in offset, announcing the sundae, were distributed. Gilded bricks, carrying picture and playdate copy, were planted with 15 of the busiest newsstands in the downtown district. Two "cowboys" were used for street ballyhoo.

Telegraph Poles Placarded

Posters that combined a community service with exploitation of a picture were spotted on telegraph poles by manager Dick Tretler to promote "Nobody Lives Forever" at Century's Sunnyside theatre, Long Island City, N. Y. Copy on the posters read: "Watch traffic lights! 'Nobody Lives Forever' But don't waste a life by reckless driving. See it at, etc."

Ties-in Scouts, Merchants, Press On "Tomorrow"

Through a tieup with the local newspaper and merchants, manager Bob Deitch secured a full page cooperative ad to exploit the short subject "Men of Tomorrow" at the DeWitt theatre, Bayonne, N. J. A two-inch high streamer across the bottom of the ad, which tied-in with Boy Scout Week, publicized the short and playdate.

Two scouts from each of the 28 troops in the city were selected to attend the theatre opening night as guests of the management. Stories, dealing with the selection of the scouts, were carried daily in the Bayonne Times for a week in advance.

A contest was held among the various troops to select the best exhibit of Boy Scout implements for a lobby display. In addition, the 28 troop standards were displayed in the lobby 10 days in advance. One-sheets were placed in each troop headquarters two weeks before opening.

Deitch, a former scout, persuaded the executive director of the Bayonne Council, to use the slogan "Every Scout bring a non-Scout to see 'Men of Tomorrow'." The playdate was publicized at a meeting of the civic organizations, religious groups, etc., two weeks before playdate.

Contest Exploits "Madeleine"

Manager William S. Canning conducted an identification contest to exploit "13 Rue Madeleine" at the Empire theatre, Fall River, Mass. Theatre patrons were invited to identify Boston and Montreal scenes appearing in the picture. Guest tickets were awarded for correct identification.

Heralds Aid Double Feature

Manager William G. Klug arranged with local school authorities for the distribution of heralds to exploit "The Plainsman" and "Jungle Princess" at the Plaza theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Other heralds were passed out to patrons as they left the theatre several days in advance.

Street Ballyhoo and Teasers Boost Bombay Playdate

Sandwich men paraded through the streets to exploit manager Homi Hyderabadwala's engagement of "The Harvey Girls" at the Metro theatre in Bombay, India. On one side of the sign the copy was in English and on the other side the wording was in the vernacular. Teaser ads were used in the local newspapers. A rubber stamp was employed on the backs of all tickets sold for a week before opening with copy reading: "Don't forget to make a date with those gorgeous 'Harvey Girls.'" A street banner was put up in one of the busiest sections of town before playdate and sniped for the run of the picture.

Uses Midnight Screening Gag

Manager E. J. Harvey offered $10 to any healthy woman over 21 years of age who would sit in the theatre alone at a midnight screening of "The Beast With Five Fingers" at the Palace theatre, Danbury, Conn. The offer was announced in a series of newspaper ads as well as through mimeographed notices distributed to factories and other places employing female help.

Sets Tieup With Radio Broadcast For "Prentiss"

A tieup was arranged with radio station WLOL for a "Nora Prentiss' Marriage-Formula Contest" to exploit the playdate of the picture at the Radio City theatre in Minneapolis. Publicist Don Alexander set the tieup with the station's daily "Love, Honor and Obey" program.

The contest was based on the fact that the story of "Nora Prentiss" deals with the breakup of a marriage. Listeners were asked to submit their formula for a happy marriage in 100 words or less. The entries were judged by a board consisting of a family relations counselor, a divorce court judge and the marriage license clerk.

Writers of the 25 best letters were invited to a special screening of the picture two nights before opening. A special broadcast was held from the screening room, with the guests telling their reactions to the picture.

Letter Writing Contest Sells "Blue Skies"

A letter writing contest was arranged by manager Gerry Wollaston to exploit "Blue Skies" at the State theatre, Harrisburg, Pa. During the nightly broadcasts of "The Old Music Master" over WHGB, listeners were invited to finish the statement: "I like Bing Crosby singing Irving Berlin tunes because . . ." in 25 words or less. Winners received merchandise promoted from record dealers.

Cooperative newspaper advertising was arranged with Philco radio dealers. Wollaston had a barker, stationed in the central shopping district, invite passers-by to see "Blue Skies" through powerful binoculars. The binoculars were focused on a large ad in a window on the top floor of a building two blocks away.

Records and music were featured in four store windows. A spot announcement was made following the weekly Bing Crosby radio show, giving theatre and playdate credits, 1,500 imprinted menus were distributed to popular lunch counters.

Co-Op Display Ad Draws Attention to "Jolson"

A four-column by 15-inch cooperative newspaper display ad was promoted in the Dallas Times Herald by manager Forrest Thompson to publicize his playdate of "The Jolson Story" at the Majestic theatre, Dallas, Tex. The ad was paid for by the E. M. Kahn department store. Window tieups also were arranged with the store and Decca record distributors.

W. D. Hendley, publicist for the Bradley, Columbus, Ga., bit on this novel device which helped to exploit "The Unknown" and rid lost and found department of uncalled for articles. Free tickets were offered to owners who could properly identify the uncalled for hats, gloves, wallets and what have you.

Sets Radio Essay Contest For "Smart People"

An essay contest was arranged by manager William Brown with radio station WNHC to exploit his playdate of "Two Smart People" at the Poli-Bijou theatre, New Haven, Conn. Window tieups were arranged with Whelan's, Everybody's Radio and Music Shoppe, David Dean Smith Record Shop, McQuiggan Florist, John Irving Shoe Store and Rosebud Florist Shop. The playdate was publicized by public address announcements at the Crown Bingo Parlor and the Eli Skating Rink.

Big Radio Tieup Aids "Prentiss" In Philadelphia

An interesting and effective tieup with radio station WCAU drew a wealth of attention to the opening of "Nora Prentiss" at the Boyd theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. The special promotion was arranged by Everett C. Callow, director of advertising and publicity for Warner theatres in Philadelphia.

All commentators, personalities and personnel with air time on the station used the tag line: "If You were 'Nora Prentiss' would you keep your mouth shut?" and referred listeners to the program "At Home With the Gainey's" for further information. The Gainey's, in turn, disclosed part of the story of the picture each day without divulging the entire story.

The Gainey's invited the first 100 women who wrote in, and their husbands, to a special preview of the picture. From this group a panel was selected to discuss the picture with the Gainey's on a subsequent program. The radio promotion covered a period of 11 days.

Co-Op Tieup with Realtor Sparks "House" Campaign

An unusual cooperative ad tieup was promoted by manager Larry Levy to exploit "The Red House" at the Colonial theatre, Reading, Pa. Levy contacted M. J. Eckel, a real estate agent, who ran a two-column by eight-inch ad in the Reading Eagle. The heading on the ad read: "Locate 'The Red House' and win guest tickets to Loew's Colonial theatre." Underneath a picture of a house, a caption stated: "The 'Red House' pictured here is some place near City Park, in the City of Reading. The first 10 persons who locate this 'Red House' and send the address to Loew's theatre will receive a pair of guest tickets to see, etc."

Tobacco Tieups Set in Virginia For "House"

Tobacco tieups based on Edward G. Robinson's fondness for cigars were stressed by manager Milton Kaufman in his campaign to exploit "The Red House" at the State theatre, Norfolk, Va. The combination of Robinson, star of the picture, and Virginia, a tobacco state, made the tieups highly effective.

A five-store arrangement with the Robinson blend of tobacco on display at Whelan and United Cigar stores gave the picture an excellent buildup prior to playdate. All the tobacco counters had humidors containing samples of the blend without charge. An 8x12 litho sign of Robinson smoking a pipe, carried credits for "The Red House." All windows carried displays on the tieup.

Kaufman planted photos of a "tobacco girl" around town. The girl was quoted as preferring men who smoke the Robinson blend. Girls from Maury High School acted as attendants at the tobacco counters for publicity purposes.

Spot radio announcements were read over WRVA, WLOW, and WGH three days prior to opening and free radio plugs were garnered on "The Man on the Street" program, "Dowdy's Beauty Chats," Joe Brown show (broadcast direct from the stage of the State) and the "Wake Up Alarm Clock" program.

Teasers, Special Tickets Boost Star Appearance

Manager Pearce Parkhurst started his campaign three weeks in advance with mention in theatre ads to exploit the personal appearance of Sunset Carson at the Capitol theatre, Pawtucket, R. I. Teaser ads were used in the classified section of the local newspaper two weeks in advance. 5,000 special tickets, entitling the holder to a price reduction, were given out to children attending the theatre, by hand distribution at schools and to children members of the local boys club and YMCA.

Sets Contest for Students To Exploit "Margie"

A word contest conducted with the cooperation of the supervisor of the local Teen Town (where high and junior high school students gather for social events) gave impetus to the campaign for "Margie" at the Bison theatre, Shawnee, Okla. Students entering the contest were required to form as many words as they could from the letters in "Margie". A time limit of 10 minutes was set. A Ford touring car plastered with playdate copy was driven through the streets for three days to ballyhoo the engagement. Letters were sent to teachers in rural schools with guest tickets enclosed. In addition a false front, lobby display and radio announcements helped to publicize the picture. The campaign was arranged by assistant manager Betty June Powell.

Dairy Tieup Aids "Brooklyn"

A tieup with a dairy outfit was arranged by manager H. H. Youngblood to exploit "The Kid From Brooklyn" at the Sevier and Tennessee theatres, Johnson City, Tenn. The cooperating merchant, Pet Dairy Products Company, used collars on milk bottles a week in advance, bannered trucks and donated prizes for a milking contest.

Sets Boy Scout Week Tieup

An attractive display, consisting of scout equipment, was set up in the lobby by manager Mike Hudish to tie-in with National Boy Scout Week at Century's Mayfair theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. Throughout the week, the theatre was staffed by members of a local Boy Scout troop who, in addition to recruiting new members, participated in a stage pageant.

Daransoll Promotes Radio Time for "Beast"

An extensive radio campaign was arranged by manager George Daransoll for the playdate of "The Beast With Five Fingers" at the Granby theatre, Norfolk, Va. One-minute spot announcements were used on stations WGH and WSAP. Guest tickets were awarded to the first four persons identifying a "mystery tune" played on the "Frolic" program over WGH. A like number of passes were awarded for winners on a program over WSAP. A false front, featuring a clutching hand, also helped to advertise the playdate.

Sets Window Tieup for Short

A large blowup of a still from the picture was planted in the main window of a popular music store to exploit the playdate of the short subject, "Follow that Music," at the Keith theatre, Washington, D. C. Manager Sol Sorkin arranged the tieup with the Homer L. Kitt Company.

The display consisted of a wooden box with a false top and an electrical contact fitted between the two surfaces. This was connected to the stop-start switch of an electric phonograph. A recording of a violin solo by Yehudi Menuhin was placed in the playing position. When contact was made the record began to play through an amplifier. The contact box was upholstered and a yellow circle painted on the top surface.

To the rear of the contact box, a violin bow and a silver satin cushion rested on a small table. A card tacked to the table had copy, reading: "Place your left foot in the enchanted circle—raise the 'Magic Bow' and listen." Patrons were highly intrigued when the violin music was heard.

Dear Bob:

We have recently had occasion to analyze more closely our maintenance cost on our projection booths throughout our circuit and in doing so it re-affirms the confidence that I have always had in Simplex projectors and the satisfaction that we have had from their use throughout this circuit over the past twenty-five years.

You will recall that in our last purchase of fifty Simplex mechanisms that we removed from a number of our booths heads that had been in constant service for over twenty years. We started to standardize on Simplex projectors twenty-five years ago, and this equipment is standard throughout our circuit to this day.

The engineers who designed the Simplex projector are to be congratulated because they have perfected a piece of equipment that will stand many years of hard usage; and like a good automobile, with a few repairs occasionally, can give a long and useful life.

Sincerely yours,

A STORY FOR ARCHITECTS AND DECORATORS from McGuffey's ancient "First Reader"

It seems the bus boy persuaded the chef to let him sculpt a lion out of butter for a centerpiece. When the prince saw the masterpiece he said "Junior, you are too good to waste your skill on ephemeral butter, and you shall carve lions in stone to flank my drawbridge and I shall pay you well."

Most modern decorative materials are more substantial than butter, but your skill is largely wasted on some of them. Why?

Often the colorful surfaces you create receive hard usage. They receive poor upkeep, infrequent renewal, and scant cleaning. Sometimes they fade. A few years after you finish a building it has lost the colors you gave it, and it doesn't give a prospective client the right impression of your artistry.

Such things can't happen to a Formica surface. Formica is as hard and smooth as a china dish. It cleans as easily. It will not chip, crack, check, or blister. Food and alcohol and cigarettes won't damage it. It sheds dirt. The lovely colors never fade. Simple cleaning brings out their pristine richness after decades of use.

Theatre Housekeeping Now Includes Safeguarding of Your Patrons' Health

IN THE PREVIOUS issue of BETTER THEATRES, in a brief summary of the place of ozone generation in air-conditioning, we had occasion to say:

"In view of the increasing public consciousness of places of public assembly as sources of illnesses caused by air-borne bacteria, the fact that ozone, in merely safe quantities, can destroy most, perhaps all, airborne germs, is of interest in measuring its practical value in theatre operation. Such measures, including use of really effective disinfectants that do not themselves create obnoxious odors, and immaculate housekeeping in general, may prove to be increasingly indicated by the attitudes of authorities as well as of the public."

The peculiar significance of good housekeeping—that is, cleanliness, neatness—in theatre operation is well illustrated in the article in the present issue by Mr. Van Getson of the Balaban & Katz organization in Chicago. In the theatre business, cleanliness is merchandise.

But today theatre housekeeping goes considerably beyond keeping a theatre immaculate in appearance. Its responsibilities have been extended to include protection of public health. In any epidemic, places of public assembly, whether the facts warrant it or not, are looked upon with suspicion. Even if the public health authorities do not act, the public does. In periods when illness seems widespread, more and more people stay away from places where many persons are in close contact with each other, where they come in contact with facilities used by hundreds of others. The public has become pretty well satisfied that theatres, in general, are no longer fire traps—instances of audiences calmly rising and filing out of a theatre when a fire has occurred have become the rule, rather than the exception. The public must think of the motion picture theatre as being comparably safe from infections and contagions.

Actually, our theatres today do not figure in the safeguarding of public health any more than other places where people assemble indoors for two or three hours at a time, and less than some. In a recent letter to this publication, H. G. du Buy, bio-physicist of the U. S. Health Service, states, "Proof that a particular location is a source of infection is difficult to give because it is an indirect proof." He cited the spread of ringworm of the scalp in some communities. "The fungus causing this disease was recovered in some cases from theatre seats by using Wood's light [a Switzer Brothers black light lamp was used] and subsequent culture. The main source of the spread, however, was attributed to barber shops."

It is enough for people to learn that theatres are possible sources of infection for some persons to fear them, and the authorities to take precautions which appear to give basis for such fear. The best defense is a good offense—doing the utmost to minimize infection and contagion within the theatre, and making such vigilance as obvious as possible in the appearance of all public areas, and in the clean, stimulating quality of the air throughout the entire interior.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT?

There are various means at hand today—produced partly in consequence of the increasing emphasis on protection rather than cure in safeguarding the public health—which can be used as effective weapons in this defense. Disinfectants are one, and they have been commonly in use in theatres for a long time. Too often, however, their use has been confined to toilet equipment, and there primarily for the purpose of counteracting—rather, overwhelming—foul odors.

Some disinfectants, in fact, have scarcely more of an effect than that—to change a bad odor to one less obnoxious, at least to one that is not so unpleasantly suggestive as the natural one. The result has been the creation of a new odor that is just as suggestive, by implication, as the original. The objective should be no odor at all! Perhaps in years gone by—years in which theatres developed the para-crystal standard of cleanliness—it couldn't. But it can be today.

A disinfectant is no deodorant, in the terms of theatre operation today, unless it destroys the odor, ends the putrefaction that causes it. And if it doesn't do that, it of course is not an effective disinfectant. It should sterilize, kill germs of practically all kinds, quickly. If it does that, there is no odor—unless it has one of its own. Its odor may not be definitely unpleasant to all people. But an odor of any kind, foul or merely suggestive, is unnecessary.

Disagreeable odors are not confined to toilet rooms. Enough perfumes have been sprayed in auditoriums to float the new U.S.S. Wisconsin. Some toilet rooms leak odors. People create unpleasant odors just by breathing, by their bodies, their clothing. And an unpleasant odor, aside from being unpleasant, suggests dirt, and dirt, to people of our civilization, is associated with the idea of germs. It is, of course, a sound association. Render the auditorium reasonably free of the microscopic forms of life that cause disease and there is no appreciable odor, for the bacteria which are harmless to the human body but which do cause odor, have been destroyed also. Today there are economical filters for cleaning incoming air substantially, and means of destroying bacteria in fabric, on surfaces, and in the air, chemically, electrically and radiantly. They are as important as fire protection to the business of exhibiting motion pictures in our time.

He Likes Germicidal Lamps

Ultraviolet radiation from germicidal lamps for the destruction of bacteria, is still regarded by the U. S. Public Health Service as in an experimental stage, but so far as C. M. Schwabb, owner of the Fort theatre in Fort Gibson, Okla., they are perfectly swell for theatres. Late last summer Mr. Schwabb installed germicidal lamps along the walls of his auditorium, rest rooms and foyer; (in suitable protective fixtures, of course), and in the air ducts. Now he has had some six or seven months of experience with them. Here is his verdict, in a reply to an inquiry about how the installation has worked out:

"Yes, as I think back upon some of the remarks I made immediately following the completion of this installation I find I was rather enthusiastic. Sometimes I wonder just how many of my words of praise found believing hearers. I seemed to be approaching the mentality of the fellow who had just bought a new Studebaker automobile. He proclaimed, 'It's de best Studebaker what the Studebaker people efer have built. Dey told me so demselves!'

"I don't know how well satisfied that fellow was with his car after six months, but I am very well satisfied with these lamps. Miracle lamps is the best name for them. That is also the opinion patrons hold, and that is really the important thing after all. . . . Just imagine how a theatre manager feels when an 'occasional' patron approaches him with, 'I'll be a regular comer now since you have so generously given our community an innovation which permits an asthma sufferer like myself to attend the movies and be able to breathe better in a crowded theatre than he can in his home alone.'

"Another one tormented by hay fever said, 'Now I can enjoy the movies that I so love to see.' Many mothers, too, feel they can permit their children to attend the show oftener and in safety in the days of polio, measles, whooping cough and colds. Neighbor exhibitors lost as much as 75% of their child trade during the recent polio epidemic. My loss was short of 10%!"

"But," continues Mr. Schwabb, "one of the most material items of evidence of what these lamps really accomplish (and at the time of purchase they had no publicity to that effect) is the terrific saving in perfumes and deodorants. Since the first week following installation of these lamps, only one of those items has been used, and that item is an odorless disinfectant in the mop water. And now, although our town is not modern and living conveniences are none too good, we have a sweet, fresh-smelling theatre the year round."

Mr. Schwabb adds that he was once plagued by a musty odor in the lower portion of the auditorium that no amount of deodorants and perfumes could eliminate. "This obnoxious odor," he reports, "has been completely banished by the germicidal lamps." Could be that effectively aseptitized mop water, too! Anyway, here are some experience data on radiation as a means of making theatres both safer and pleasanter places to be in.

Effect of Ozone on Fuel

The application of ozone generating equipment to air sterilization, deodorizing and "livening," was the subject of our February piece concerning the place of such apparatus in a modern air-conditioning system. This has had affirmation in another letter, one from I. M. Rappaport, owner and operator of the large Hippo-

MOST EVERYTHING SWEET! AND ASPIRIN, TOO?

■ A "drug store" type of merchandise bar is what Frank Pratt, manager of the Paramount theatre in Portland, Ore., calls the refreshment stand in that spacious house. The bar is 35 feet long and is made from myrtlewood. The candy display compartments are refrigerated. The popcorn tray and storage cabinet for boxed popped corn have automatic heat. In this cabinet both bulk corn and ready-to-serve cartons are kept at the correct temperature. The corn is popped backstage, then brought to the bar. Popular bottled beverages are sold, being pre-chilled in a cold storage room on the mezzanine. Mr. Pratt reports that two items recently added, ice cream slices and a Kay nut roaster, have proved successful. All drinks are served in a paper cup. Prior to each show break, attendants start pouring out cold drinks in quantities indicated by experience. Sometimes as many as 500 cups ready to serve have been necessary. Three attendants are steadily employed—a young man, who is in charge, and two girls. During intermissions of heavy patronage, the usherettes assist behind the bar. One attendant on an opening shift reports an hour prior to opening to have the bar completely set up for operation when the doors open. Each Monday morning the entire front and back bar are given thorough cleaning and polishing. The theatre engineer checks and oils all motors and other mechanical equipment. The bar is kept open until the last patron leaves. In the picture above Mr. Pratt is shown, proudly, at center.

Standards of theatre housekeeping have been pushed upward by the very pressure of rising standards elsewhere in motion picture exhibition. But it is not enough today that a theatre look clean. It must be clean—to give assurances of protection of public health that satisfy patrons and authorities. For there has risen yet another factor.

The Growing Challenge of Health Education

What this means in theatre housekeeping is stated here

By RAYMOND E. VAN GETSON

who for more than fifteen years has been in charge of maintenance and construction for Balaban & Katz in Chicago.

TODAY A VITALLY interested and enlightened public is focusing the attention of your community on Public Health Standards. There is a constant, determined drive by all health agencies to crystallize into action the age old axiom, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." There can be no argument with the principles of such a program; it is sound and should command the active support of all citizens.

Such programs of public education are of first importance to the theatre owner and can react in either of two ways, depending upon the classification into which his theatre falls. Certainly, if an operator or owner insists upon a high standard of sanitary maintenance, health programs which seek to destroy bigoted and biased misinformation concerning the contacting and spreading of infection and disease, can prove of great value in establishing his theatre as an example in modern, alert, preventive hygiene. By the same token, carelessness in this all important function of successful theatre operation may result not only in the loss of patronage, but also of the good will of the community. Theatre sanitation is not only a moral obligation—it is a sound business necessity.

Whenever a contagion develops an epidemic status, in many instances suspicion is directed toward public meeting places.

The exhibitor's defense is foresight and constant vigilance.

When contagion strikes, the time for action has passed! Education of the public and theatregoer through everyday example, provides the perfect answer to careless criticism. Only when the exhibitor can point to his theatre as a clean—really clean—institution, may he hope to swing the weight of public opinion in his favor.

Theatre rest rooms provide a perfect example of public "point of contact." Rest-rooms carry much traffic. They must be neat and clean in appearance. Naturally, the greater the attendance, the greater will be the need for giving them special attention. An ill-smelling, untidy room, stale with odors, will create an impression of careless treatment. If these rooms look bad, they establish a resentment in the mind of the patron. This, then, is the sales resistant to be destroyed by ceaseless supervision. Neglect in this feature of good housekeeping is inexcusable, for it may be on this "appearance" that a patron will form an opinion that may never be altered, regardless of subsequent "good impressions."

REST ROOM CLEANING

To be clean, a rest room must be sanitary. To be sanitary it must promote good health by actually being germ-free. Here again the battle can be won only by constant vigilance and the application of sound cleaning methods. Obnoxious odors cannot be destroyed by neutralizing them with still another odor; the cause must be eradicated.

There can be no substitute for soap and hot water, combined with an effective germicide applied with a thoroughness that attaches importance to every phase of the cleaning operation.

Urinals, toilet bowls, flush boxes, wash basins, waste receptacles, floors, toilet partitions—in fact, every item of rest room equipment—must be subjected to the same careful cleaning treatment.

Only when the manager or operator assumes the personal responsibility of supervising this work, instructing and following through with his staff, will he be assured of clean, germ-free, sanitary rest rooms.

The underlying reasons for this are not difficult to understand. There are far easier and more agreeable tasks than cleaning rest rooms! A "once over lightly" job daily, with intermittent, thorough cleaning, will lighten the all-over task as well as provide freedom for other, less offensive tasks, but will not contribute to the important task of maintaining clean rest rooms. In scheduling your cleaning staff's time, guard against minimizing the time allowed for rest room cleaning; to underestimate the working period will be a contribution to a future unhealthy situation.

A questionable operation in which management may indulge without thinking seriously of the consequences is the dubious practice of introducing insufficient fresh air to toilet rooms. Do not place too low a value on the effectiveness of fresh air as a sanitary aid—not to mention the feeling of freshness which the patron associates with an odor-free, non-irritating atmosphere.

Use extreme care in the selection of germicides employed in cleaning. You do not want your theatre smelling like a hospital, but you do want it clean. There are avail-

GLASS FOR STYLING

It is so used, prominently, in Covington's new Madison

■ The Madison theatre recently opened in Covington, Ky., replaces a house of the same name that was destroyed in 1944 by fire. Seating 1,350, with 1,000 seats on the main floor, it is located in the heart of the central business section immediately across the river from Cincinnati. It is of brick and steel construction; in architectural style and interior treatment it is modern with, however, a moderating sense of the traditional. It was designed and constructed by the F & Y Building Service, Columbus, Ohio. The front is a simple elevation in terra cotta into which a central convex panel of glass brick has been introduced. This panel and peach colored terra cotta vertical steppings create a central feature that is supported by a shallow marquee carrying Wagner attraction panels and a name sign of channel letters of neon illumination. Central feature is flanked by powder blue terra cotta, while the terra cotta at the entrance level is peach. The glass brick panel is illuminated from behind and capped by the theatre name in neon script. Doors are Tuflex glass.

■ Foyer area, off which the lounges are located, is effected behind the main floor seating beneath the balcony, serving also as standee space, with tilted glass windows from rail to ceiling. This is carpeted in a Leedom weave of modern pattern. Illumination here is by circular ceiling luminaires.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

■ Fabric provides the predominant decorative device of the Madison auditorium. It is of non-combustible Fiberglas weave throughout. Along the side walls it is laid in a Thortel pattern of dusty rose and pastel blue over Kimsul acoustical blanket; and it frames the screen opening, as well as forming the traveler, in a Thortel striped pattern alternating pearl gray and lemon yellow. Eliminating a proscenium arch, it is pleated from ceiling to platform height.

At left are two new designs, both in Wiltons from C. H. Masland & Sons. The farther one is a moderately modernized version of traditional ornament, a scroll pattern with foreground in the acanthus leaf, having top colors of beige and black on red. The other is also modern-traditional, with a more open pattern of leaf supported by scroll work. The colors are gold and ruby on red.

The two designs above are from Alexander Smith's Crestwood Velvet line. The upper one offers a stylized leaf effect in gold, beige and black on rust. The other is a modern star and rope design in gold, blue and black on red.

designs of the Times

Few are the new patterns in carpeting suited to theatres, and little, as yet, the yardage. But here at least is indication that the theatre's needs are not being left out of the post-war carpet industry's current deeds and plans.

Carpeting, which covers even the auditorium floor, plays a conspicuous part in the interior treatment of the luxurious new Park Avenue theatre in New York. A. & M. Karagheusian's Gulistan, in the Super-Rosebrook quality, is used throughout. This view in the lounge shows how its beige flowered pattern on a deep brown ground tone stands out against the relatively neutral walls.

NEW ALUMINUM MATERIALS FOR FRONTS AND INTERIORS

THE USE OF aluminum as a finish material is presenting itself in many new forms. Methods have been developed for fusing painted finishes on to this material. Much progress has been made in this art, overcoming previous difficulties found in the baking processes for enamel glazing. A very interesting corrugated type of aluminum facing material with a baked-on finish, with mat surface in various colors, will soon be available. The light weight of this material will make it a most desirable medium for a new exterior face in remodeling work. The corrugations in the material create a stiffness and uniformity of surface which is much to be desired.

Still another development in the aluminum field is that of aluminum tiles made of a thin sheet aluminum with rounded edges. These tiles are available in various colors and should prove satisfactory for economical remodeling of toilet and other rooms now finished in plaster. The tiles are installed over plaster with an adhesive very much like that used for wall covering. These tiles are also available in large sizes and can therefore be used for the decorative finishing of public areas generally, especially outside of the auditorium.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: The corrugated type first referred to is an enameled facing material that represents a distinctive advance in the manufacture of porcelain enamel in architectural forms. This material is designed for decorative fronts and should find effective application as an economical finish for theatre facades. . . . The other material, consisting in aluminum tiles with plastic finish, is for interiors. Of extremely light weight, the tiles, as well as the larger sheets, are designed to permit installation directly to existing walls without expensive preparation, hence are of special interest for remodeling. Those wishing further information about either of these materials may write to BETTER THEATRES.]

WIDER AISLE CARPET

CARPETING IN auditorium aisles should extend beyond the width of the aisle, rather than be less than the width, as has been the practice. This is desirable, first, because it gives a much richer appearance; and second, because staggered seating, the value of which is being more and more recognized, would call for such extra width in order to have carpeting extend to all seat standards, some of which are slightly indented from the normal aisle line in a staggered seating arrangement.

The extra carpeting width in most instances would not prove costly because one could use the double or 54-inch width, which is more efficient for aisle carpeting than the single-width.

Where provision is being considered for future installation of a 16mm projector in the projection room, full electrical conduit for it should be run. Instead of having the studs of electrical conduits projecting above the finished floor for this purpose, it would be advisable to have steel boxes, the tops of which would have removable covers flush with the finished floor. The ends of the future connections for this projector are then concealed in these hollow metal boxes.

BALCONY ROW SPACING

BACK-TO-BACK row spacing for upper level seating has to be increased in accordance with the height between the seating platforms. For every inch of height between platforms greater than 4 inches, there should be an approximate increase of 1/2-inch in the back-to-back spacing.

For example, if 33 inches were the desired back-to-back spacing, and the difference in the height of platforms were 8 inches, the back-to-back distance should be 35 inches instead of 33 inches. This is necessary because the angular overhang of the seat ahead projects a greater amount into the leg space when the relative heights of the seating platforms are increased.

A very attractive door, giving maximum visibility and having maximum glass surface, can be made with ordinary 1/4-inch clear plate glass. The frame of the door is of substantial hollow metal slightly less than 2 inches wide at the top and sides, and approximately 3 1/2 inches high at the bottom. Such a door provides strong support for push and pull bars and locking devices, while giving full visibility to the space beyond the door.

The Needle's Eye

A DEPARTMENT ON PROJECTION & SOUND REPRODUCTION EQUIPMENT
& METHODS FOR THEATRE OWNERS, MANAGERS AND THEIR STAFFS

"No other art or industry in the world narrows down its success to quite such a needle's eye as that through which the motion picture has to pass—an optical aperture—in the continuous miracle of the screen by a man and his machine, the projectionist and his projector."
—TERRY RAMSAYB

The Manager's Relation to Projection in Small Towns

A FEW LETTERS, as well as some recent conversations, have brought up the matter of projection routine and duties in small town theatres having one-man booths. It is a two-headed topic, concerning the projectionist on the one hand, and the manager on the other. I therefore had a talk with Mr. Frank L. Fowler, the general manager of the small town circuit for which I am supervising projectionist. The result of all this is an article which, I believe, may well occupy about all of the space allotted to this department this month. I hope it is found interesting enough to have warranted it.

Whereas in city operations there are generally two-man booths, besides a general maintenance man and a full house staff, including manager, assistants, chiefs of service, etc., the average small town theatre must be pretty self-sufficient, with a small staff, usually including a manager, projectionists, cashier and possibly, a hired doorman. This, in some cases, also means a one-man booth, and the manager must of necessity be a jack-of-all-trades. It is absolutely necessary that he co-operate with his projectionists at all times to insure the proper presentation of his show.

THE PROJECTIONIST'S "OUTPOST"

First of all, he must have an adequate signal system from the floor to the booth. A buzzer system is generally used, as small community theatres cannot afford to install intercommunicating telephones.

Secondly, he must be on the floor during the operating hours, and with the use of his buzzer, keep his projectionist fully advised as to conditions, not only on the floor, but on the screen.

Thirdly, he must know what to look for in screen and sound results, and how to recognize it, instantly—this last is perhaps the most important of all.

The successful presentation of a picture on small town screens entails far more alertness on the part of the projectionist than is usually recognized. The rural theatre will invariably have from three to seven changes per week. This means that film from all sources must be utilized to keep a steady flow of product, and it means further that the condition of the prints is not always the best. Inspection of prints becomes doubly important and is a "must" in the routine of the projectionist.

SHOW TIMING AND PRINTS

Mounting and timing of shows is relatively difficult under these conditions because features sometimes will run 5 or 6 minutes short of their listed running time. Four, five and sometimes six trailers are included in the show, for small town audiences seem to feel that unless a full week's trailers are shown, they are not getting their money's worth. Rural audiences also are particularly partial to their 7 o'clock or 9 o'clock show, and the manager must be on the job with the projectionist after the arrival of each show so that proper time schedules can be set up.

The manager must be able to recognize a good or bad print so that he can capably keep his home office advised. Many a theatre has been improperly blamed for print damage due to the failure of the manager to report properly the correct condition upon arrival.

The manager should also know his screen and his sound system so that he can, during the running of his show, keep his projectionist alerted to any picture or sound distortion. His signaling through his buzzer system must be adequate so that the projectionist will know immediately whether he is out-of-frame, his light poor, or his sound too low or too loud. Without the manager's co-operation, the busy projectionist in a one-man booth cannot possibly guarantee a smooth running show.

In spite of all necessary precautions, however, trouble can and will sometimes happen. Again the buzzer system is important between manager and projectionist for invariably, if the trouble is not remedied immediately, the manager will hot-foot it to the booth. This is about the worst method of procedure. If the projectionist needs help, he can signal for it; otherwise, the manager should remain on the floor. Unless the manager is a trained projectionist, he will probably be of no help, anyway, and it is far more important that he be on the floor.

One of the commonest practices is for the projectionist to throw on the house lights the minute the screen goes dark. I should like to emphasize this point, as it is just an invitation to create confusion. House lights should be turned on only at a signal from the manager. If the audience is not unruly and is taking the "break" good-naturedly, there is no reason to turn on house lights. By turning them on, he is inviting his audience to leave their seats for a drink of water or a trip to the lounge for a smoke, etc. Then when the lights are cut, patrons who have left their seats are in a state of confusion, not remembering just where they were seated and probably having left some article of wearing apparel behind.

Children are the greatest source of disturbance in a case of this kind and occasionally serious accidents have resulted. If the trouble cannot be rectified within a few minutes, and the projectionist, having located the source, can determine that it will take a fairly definite amount of time—say, five or ten minutes—to correct it, then, and only then, should the house lights be turned on, with the manager informing his audience of the brief intermission and its expected duration.

CHECKING HOUSE FACTORS

The rural or small town theatre manager should also be capable of dealing with certain house matters related to good projection. He should be able to arrange his auditorium lighting so that no annoying reflections will bother his patrons. Sidewall lighting is usually the particular source of annoyance and extreme care should be exercised in the wattage and color used in side-wall fixtures. Screen masking is another important detail to be assured of a clear picture. An overlap of 2 inches will generally give a clear picture, but masking should be checked regularly for fraying.

The theatre should be thoroughly checked for any "dead spots" in the sound. Very frequently, so called "dead spots" can be corrected with a slight change in the directional pitch of the sound horns.

Keeping the screen itself clean is a problem that perplexes many a manager, and yet a good clean screen is one of the first requisites for a good clear picture. Screen "dust" can be greatly curtailed if the manager will exercise care in the cleaning of his theatre. Rural audiences are great "nibblers." Regardless of what the management sells in the lobby, they will bring in countless edible articles. Sweeping before vacuuming is therefore essential.

In most theatres the traveler, or screen curtain, will be closed during this process but the wise manager will close his front curtain as well. By so doing, a minimum of dust will reach the screen and get into

DARDELL D. BILLS, projectionist in Fresno, Calif., asks for a bit of help in the following letter:

I am an interested reader of your department and have gained considerable info from the problems of others. At the present I have a little problem and seek some information.

Recently I purchased a complete set of Brenkert's BX 40's with RCA sound. Lamps are Brenkert's low-intensity with two-tube, 60-cycle rectifiers. Lens are Bausch and Lomb Series I, 5-inch.

Problem: Can you give me a complete wiring diagram for the above? Also how can I get maximum light from low-intensity lamps, and is there a method of converting lows into high-intensity? We are installing these in a new theatre that will have a 90-foot throw. What size picture will that give us?

The wiring for your sound system can easily be solved by writing to the Theatre Equipment Department of the RCA Victor Division, Camden, N. J., and getting a complete diagram for the particular sound system you have purchased. They are classed as P.G. 91-105-117-139-140, etc. They recently changed their code, but I am sure they will see that you get the right diagram.

As to your booth wiring you have me on a spot, because I have no idea how big your booth is, or how you would like it laid out. By this I mean size, construction, placing of equipment, a.c. supply (location), and type (110-220 volt, or two or three wire), solid, three- or five-point bases, etc. Let me know these conditions and I will surely help you out.

Your picture will be about 14 feet, 8 inches. If you can afford it, by all means buy at least a one-kilowatt light source. Low-intensity is definitely out of date.

the perforations, which seem to act like a magnet for dust particles.

As for cleaning the screen itself, many a manager has sweated away hours of labor only to find "love's labor lost." A very soft brush on the end of a long vacuum cleaning tube will generally suffice to remove light dust particles, but the cleaning process must be done lightly and gently to prevent smearing. My advice to most managers is to let their screen alone if they can't be absolutely sure that their cleaning efforts will not result in a poorer picture rather than a better one.

MEETING RURAL NEEDS

These observations concerning the small town theatre manager's relation to projection are based upon quite a few years of experience in theatre operation of just that sort. The circuit with which I am associated in a supervisory capacity is truly rural. Of the eleven towns in which we operate, the largest has a population of approximately 3,500, and the smallest 1,100. Our largest theatre has 840 seats, and the smallest 350, with the average about 500. Each theatre draws from a rural population within a radius of about 10 miles, and all of our towns are inter-locking so that our patron has a choice of shows, depending entirely upon how far he and his family care to drive.

We are limited to small town weekly newspapers, whose circulation range from 900 to 5,000, and as a result we have had to devise our own means of advertising to reach out into the rural farm areas.

The success of the entire motion picture industry has been mainly due to the development of "going to the movies" as a habit. This we attempt to do on our own, for the rural populations we serve are without benefit of corner newsstands for the latest movie magazine with all the glamorous pictures of the stars. We therefore publish our own "magazine" in the form of a Theatre Guide. This is done through one of the local printing plants and we furnish, in addition to our theatre page, plenty of reader matter and photos so that people "out on the farm" can sit by the fire-side and read of happenings in Hollywood and which star will appear in what picture.

We have three different editions of the Guide, one for each county in which we operate. They are published weekly and carry a double truck theatre page with all of our programs. The printer solicits other merchant advertising to cover cost of printing, as otherwise the entire cost would revert to the theatre, making this practice prohibitive, for the Guides are free to our patrons. Take a trip through our rural areas and you often will find the theatre page carefully tacked over the kitchen sink or other handy place for ready reference. Our circulation has reached the amazing

What to Do
in Case of Film Fire

Burning nitrate film is dangerous. It can kill—it has killed. The slower it burns, the more dangerous it is. Burning nitrate film produces nitrous gases which, when breathed into the lungs, combine with the water of the body to form nitric acid, which burns the lining of the lungs, causing injury likely to endure for years if it does not soon result in death. When film is ignited in a theatre projection room, only one proper course of action remains for the projectionist. GET OUT — INSTANTLY!

total of more than 25,000, with new "subscribers" being added constantly. We keep an up-to-date card index system for change of address, and an examination of our records will reveal requests for Guides from distances in excess of 50 miles.

Our only other means of advertising outside the theatre, with the exception of a program announcement in each of the weekly newspapers, is through window cards, and here again our coverage must include a wide area. We circulate more than 900 cards weekly, and nearly half of them are distributed through the mails, as hand distribution becomes impractical, due to distance and time. We have three different cards printed, each carrying several theatre programs to give our patron a choice of shows. Normally a circuit of 15 theatres would have a card for each theatre, but by combining several programs on each card, we are able to reach our patrons effectively at reduced printing costs. We are constantly on the lookout for new card locations, and replace those that may have become ineffective over a period of time.

OTHER RESPONSIBILITIES

Our managers can usually be found at their theatres about 10:30 a.m. each morning, for all film must be checked in before noon. Any variance between the incoming show and the booking sheet must be reported to the home office for correction prior to that hour. Any errors in film shipment can be straightened out before the first evening show at 7:00 p.m.

After doing his daily banking, the manager will return to the theatre and go to work on his daily maintenance. This includes checking torn seats, tightening chair standards, checking plumbing for faucet leaks, etc. Repainting of marquee letters is also included in his regular duties, and though this cannot be classed as a daily task, the alert manager will not let it become "seasonal" and thereby have the entire stock require attention at the same time. An occasional switching of carpet is also included so as to prevent undue wear in any one area.

Our managers still have ample time to be around town, talking to the merchants, arranging window tie-ups, listening to their complaints, and generally becoming an integral part of their community life. In small towns, local organizations such as Lions, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, become doubly important and we encourage our men to become members. Knowing our customers, their likes and dislikes, is of vital importance.

Approximately every two weeks our managers meet with the general manager and relay to him all important information. Bookings past and future are discussed, always with an eye to getting the most out of each day's operation. Problems of maintenance, lighting, handling the disgruntled patron, etc., are ironed out, and each manager has an opportunity to air his views in an open forum so that other managers may benefit by his experience.

We also have an "award" or "bonus" system, and at each meeting the men are advised of their "standing," and also of future plans, for the awards are for different events each month. For instance, our January award was for all activity over and above that included in the general "line of duty." The February award was for the best and most effective advertising stunt or tie-up on any one picture. The March award will be for the greatest percentage of increased gross business over the first thirteen weeks of 1947, as compared with the gross business for the first thirteen weeks of 1946. The awards are in the form of cash and points, the points going toward a grand prize to be awarded at the end of the calendar year to the manager having the greatest number of points. Our managers are thus competing with themselves as well as their fellow managers, and the rivalry is keen. This creates additional interest in the manager's job.

As supervising projectionist, I am invariably approached by the manager when I am checking the equipment in his booth, and I get quite a kick out of listening to the plans and to the queries as to what other managers are doing. To me, it is a great stimulant for rural operation, and though I am not in the competition, I am just as interested as though I were.

Safe and Sane Cue Marker

IF FILM must be cued in the projection room, the only reasonable way of doing it is one which avoids mutilation. There finally has come along a cue marker which not only provides such a way, but also one that is fast and easy. It is described on page 34. This device, designed by a projectionist, should be investigated by all who inscribe their own cues.

INSPECTION REMINDER—GUIDE

Seating and Floor Coverings

1—AUDITORIUM SEATING

This class of equipment is of course subject to daily inspection, at least of a superficial nature, to discover condition of fabrics, any badly loosened standards, and defects which would cause injury or torn clothing. Such routine inspections, however, may not disclose all faulty conditions, especially those which are themselves the real causes of defects noticed in daily inspection. All of the seating, including the auditorium floor, is therefore subject to thorough examination from time to time, and all conditions that cannot be remedied immediately should be recorded for guidance in a general overhauling at an opportune time.

Loose or cracked standards—Possible causes; nut on fastening bolt in floor is loose; floor bolt sheared off; concrete around bolt broken or weak; standards forced to fit radius or improperly located bolt holes; hinges too tight or bent, or broken.

Defective hinges—Bent or broken possibly because standards are improperly attached to floor, or stud on friction flange too tight; or if seat self-raising, coiled spring is faulty. If hinge works hard or squeaks, dirt or wear may be cause, or hinge needs oil. If hinge works too freely, standards may be loose or too far apart, adjusting stud may be loose or its thread sheared.

Anchor bolts—When examining for looseness, make sure that the concrete is in good condition, and especially that cement is not of a patching variety.

2—AISLE LIGHTS

Examine wiring for threatening breaks, defective installation and poor connection. Make sure that there is no chance of strain being placed upon wiring of connections in case of chair movement due to normal usage.

3—HEARING AIDS

Examine plug-in box and brackets for looseness (screws used should be of "Allen-head" type so that there is no chance of burring screw heads or loosening of jack-box by mischievous patrons).

4—HEARING AID AMPLIFIER

Examine wiring connections or splices in terminals; check power transformer; check control switching for arcing and firm, clean contact.

5—CARPETING

Undue wear of carpeting indicates faulty installation of some kind. Commonly the fault is not accessible to immediate remedy; one value of thorough inspection at suitable intervals lies in the cumulative record that may thus be developed. Seams will wear rapidly if at right angles to principal line of traffic, or not if sewn properly, or if weakened by forcing the related area into position. Seams at aisle heads are greatly subject to wear. Shifting carpet deteriorates rapidly and is also a hazard to patrons; shifting may be due to improper cementing of lining, or to too shallow or too small wood plugs. Check edges at door saddles for condition of binding and whether higher than saddle. Examine aisle in badly worn areas to see if cause of deterioration is not cracked, rough or damp floor. Check condition of any stair nosing, and examine stair carpeting, particularly for any indication of developing looseness.

6—CARPET LINING

Examine for "lumpiness" and lack of resilience when walking on any areas of the carpet. Such conditions indicate faulty lining, either defective material itself or poor cementing. (Lining on stairs should be of double thickness.)

7—VACUUM CLEANERS

Most defects will disclose themselves in the course of daily operation. General inspection of the equipment, however, may reveal conditions or practices which, if eliminated, may reduce repairs and replacements. Unnecessary bending of hose, particularly in storage, and cleaning it with gasoline or other destructive fluid, will greatly accelerate its deterioration. If bearings run hot, inadequate lubrication is indicated; check washer in bearing to see that grease is not running out. The motor is subject to same inspection given all motors. Additionally, observe dust bag, casters, plug, gasket and other parts for deterioration, especially for signs that the routine care of the cleaner is not of proper kind.

8—RUBBER MATS

Check for undue deterioration and, if link type, for excessive stiffness. Examine for indication of faulty floor or improperly sized floor depression. Rough areas and snubbed edges indicate such floor conditions. Examine links for rust, which will eat away the rubber. Check edges, especially corners, for curling tendency.

drome theatre and other houses in Baltimore. He writes:

"We had a rather awkward condition at our Little theatre, which seats 297 people. We had a peculiar odor in the standing room area, which is directly under the booth. The ceiling is low and we just couldn't find out what was wrong. This only happened several times a week.

"We tried every way to find out what was causing it, whether it was coming from one of the restaurants in the immediate vicinity or elsewhere, for we felt that it couldn't be anything in the theatre proper, otherwise the smell would be there all the time. We installed Ozonator equipment in the theatre and that smell went and has not returned."

Mr. Rappaport had previously installed such equipment in the Hippodrome, and believes that this winter's operation will show substantially reduced heating costs because of it. His letter continues:

"I have just gone over the heating figures for the Hippodrome and for the corresponding period last year the cost of heating is $12\frac{1}{2}\%$ less. I did not check the temperatures, nor do I remember very clearly whether it has been milder this year than last, but the saving is there. I believe that this equipment will save on heating because there isn't the need to draw in as much fresh air.

"We had some electrical trouble here for several days recently and the Ozonator of course was not working. If any theatre manager wants to know just how much the equipment means to the operation of a theatre, I wish he could hear my manager here screaming his head off at the company that does our electrical work to get the repairs done as promptly as possible so that he can turn the machine on again."

Here is where the 1947 dual convention of the Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association and the Theatre Equipment Dealers Protective Association will be held, September 24 to 29—the spacious Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C., with its wooded park, exhibit space for over 100 displays, and attractions of the nation's capital.

able today effective, odor-killing, germ destroyers, which leave no unpleasant hold-over odors. They can be used with safety for all anti-infective work, and they have proved harmless to fabric, painted surfaces, and skin irritation, combining with these properties the ability really to destroy germs.

With these products available, why then should any theatre tolerate conditions which result in criticism from health authorities and in the disfavor of patrons?

Clean rest rooms alone will not establish a good housekeeping record for the theatre operator. Every point of contact, whether it be visible to the public, or outside the limits of patron traffic, assumes major importance as a cleaning problem, demanding the same thorough cleaning practice.

CLEANLINESS EVERYWHERE

Theatre seats, lobby furnishings, carpets, drinking fountains have all been pointed to as places where disease-causing bacteria may lurk. To what extent these deductions hold to fact will not be argued here, but the very possibility is sufficient justification for the alert operator to protect himself from criticism.

The importance of cleaning remains the same here as in the rest rooms program; the application is altered to fit the physical properties of the surfaces to be cleaned. Carpeting, furniture and seats should be subjected to periodic spraying of germicides. Mopping of auditorium floors with solutions containing a germicide should be a regular feature of the cleaning program. Check the properties of the antiseptic you use to determine the period of time that it retains its effectiveness.

Plenum chambers, air shafts and ducts, as well as basement and storage rooms, should receive the same careful attention as areas of immediate patron contact. The fact that they are removed from public view does not mean they should be permitted to deteriorate into catch-alls for the incubation of germs and odor-causing bacteria.

There can be no compromise with cleanliness! It is a constant, never-ending struggle. But vigilance, supervision of staff, intelligent selection of materials, coupled with proper, modern application, will pay dividends at the box-office. It will establish your theatre in an enviable position in the community. Building for it a reputation to which you may point with pride, knowing that by accepting and applying up-to-the-minute cleaning methods, you have more than fulfilled a moral obligation to each and every patron.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE MARKET AND ITS SOURCES OF SUPPLY

Company Formed to Make Four-Frame Cue Marker

FORMATION of the Fontaine Manufacturing Corporation has been formed to make and market the cue marker recently developed by Roland Fontaine, Long Island projectionist. Acquisition of a plant in the Jamaica section of New York City, and commencement of production in March has been announced by the company, which is headed by Mr. Fontaine.

The cue marker has been designed to introduce motor and changeover cues in four frames at a time of dimensions and positions corresponding to Academy Standard Release Print specifications, and to accomplish this invariably and quickly, without any measurement. While four frames, as in the case of the Standard Release Print, are given cues in one operation, more frames may be scribed if the projectionist desires, merely by advancing the film in the marking device.

The marker, which is made of cast aluminum and has an attractive crackle finish with chromium trim, consists, operationally, in a plate with projections, or location pins, to fit the sprocket holes, also a framing aperture illuminated from beneath by a 7-watt lamp; and in a hinged cover containing steel scribers fixed in place. When the film is put in position on the plate, the cover is lowered, which places the scribers in contact with the film at the proper areas of the film. Turning of the scribers, with only slight pressure, makes a ring easily visible on the screen.

The framing aperture, which is automatically illuminated when the marker is plugged into a lighting outlet, allows prompt placement of the film in position regardless of frame density. Six feet of rubber-covered cord with an unbreakable plastic plug are supplied with the marker, which also comes complete with lamp. The scribers are permanently set at the factory to scribe a circle in the emulsion only.

Thomas J. Bois is secretary-treasurer of the company, and Ed Dawson is sales manager. K. Streuber has been appointed export agent.

Emergency Power Plants Of Theatre Capacities

ELECTRIC POWER generating equipment with gasoline engine, generator and all controls integrated to form a lightweight unit has been announced by Fairbanks, Morse & Company, Chicago, as emergency plant adapted to the complete power requirements of theatres, available in several capacities to serve houses of various sizes. Many of these plants were used to supply current for mobile Army motion picture outfits during the war.

These units, the manufacturer reports, are easily installed, operated and serviced and can meet peak loads well in excess of their rated capacities. The generators are designed to operate at full load with only moderate temperature rise.

The engines are 4-cycle and of Fairbanks-Morse manufacture. The engine power of every model is in excess of the amount needed to insure the rated electrical output under severe operating conditions. The engines have large crankcase oil capacities and over-sized bearing surfaces for long service. The average gasoline consumption is one quart per kilowatt-hour at the rated load.

These power plants may be installed either for automatic transfer or manual switching from utility line to emergency operation. In automatic transfer, when regular power service fails, the control panel automatically starts the engine-generator and switches the power on to the branch circuits. When utility power is restored, the emergency plant automatically stops. Interlocked contactors and the design of the equipment make it impossible to have both utility and emergency power simultaneously.

Electric power generating unit with 4-cylinder gasoline engine as available for 15-, 25- and 35-kw.

Each model has a charging rectifier circuit built in for trickle-charging storage batteries. Prices include muffler, exhaust pipe, rubber vibration dampeners and all accessories necessary for installation and operation.

Formica Production Going Up 50% This Year

RECONVERSION of production facilities of the Formica Insulation Company, Cincinnati, manufacturers of laminated plastics, that were retarded by delays in obtaining new equipment, is now practically completed to permit accelerated output during 1947, the company reports. Installation of a large sheet press and completion of special machinery will provide for an increase of 50% over 1946 production, which was 80% above the estimated quota set by management.

Increased capacities in the output of decorative Formica will be made possible by three huge new presses for straight-line designed to accelerate daily production and thus eventually to reduce production costs.

Special laminated Formica sheets in greater quantity than ever before produced will be possible, it is stated, for such decorative applications as furniture and the interior finishing of theatres, restaurants, hotels, taverns, etc. The expanded production facilities are expected to be in full operation by the second quarter of 1947.

Amplifier Device for Aligning Sound Lens

A DEVICE to facilitate setting a soundhead optical lens has been developed by the S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation, New York. Designed by Lou Marks, chief engineer, it is called an "Opti-Focuser." It is described by the manufacturer as a completely self-contained amplifier specifically designed for aligning optical systems quickly on any 16mm or 35mm soundhead, which is applied in this manner:

Alligator clip leads connect to any convenient point in the photocell circuit without disturbing existing wires. A test loop is supplied to be run during the adjustment period. The regular amplifier is cut out during alignment, all power and photocell voltage coming from the Opti-Focuser. The only accessory equipment is a set of headphones for gauging the alignment.

Photocell for Controls Size of .22 Cartridge

A PHOTOCCELL for the electronic actuation of devices for automatic control and comparable purposes, has been developed by the RCA Tube Department that is scarcely longer than a .22-calibre rifle cartridge and has a maximum diameter of only a quarter of an inch. The overall length is just under thirteen 32nds of an inch. It is activated by light entering through a tiny aperture at the larger end.

"Comparing favorably with larger phototubes in sensitivity," the announcement states, "the tiny new tube is expected to find many applications in business and industry, particularly in devices and machines where the size of former phototubes has been a problem. In multiple-circuit control devices, the new tube makes possible either smaller devices or more circuits in the same space. In animated signs, for example, where each phototube is individually wired to a light in the corresponding position on the signboard, many more of the new smaller 1P42 tubes may be used in a given area. When light, projected through slides or film, falls on and activates the more closely spaced tubes, sharper and clearer pictures can be reproduced on the lighted signboard."

Intercom System With Small-Sized Stations

AN INTERCOMMUNICATION system with speaker stations as small as an average desk clock has been announced by the Sound Equipment Section of RCA Victor. It is a "two-way" system designed with amplifier and speaker station in separate units, which allows location of the amplifier at any convenient point out of the way, thus reducing speaker size to a minimum consistent with clear reception. The speaker stations have been restyled with housing consisting in streamlined black plastic cabinets having satin-chrome grilles.

A two-position switch throws the station into speaking operation; release of the switch returns it to listening position. The speaker is of a newly refined type, 3 inches in size. Each outfit is supplied with 100 feet of interconnecting wire and plugs into any 110-volt a. c. or d. c. outlet.

"For years," the announcement continues, "the only satisfactory method of producing high-grade test film required the costly process of toe recording, which meant that every foot of film had to pass through the recorder. Printing methods would not produce a test film of uniformly high quality. Recently, after years of research and development on the part of Altec's New York Engineering department and Hollywood laboratory, and the Research Council, methods were developed for producing calibrated test film of steady quality brought the controlled use of the printing process."

New Distributor Named For Curved Type Screen

FORMATION of a new company to act as sole distributor of the curved Fiberglas screen marketed under the name of Retiscope, has been effected by Herman Gluckman in association with the Sparks-Withington Company, Jackson, Mich., manufacturers of the screen. The new company, the Nu-Screen Corporation, has offices in the Paramount Building at 1501 Broadway, New York.

HERMAN GLUCKMAN

Mr. Gluckman, who is president, was for many years a distributor of motion pictures. During the formation of Republic Pictures in 1935, he acquired the New York and Eastern Pennsylvania franchises of that motion picture producer. He relinquished those in 1940, but was active in the industry during the war as chief of distribution of the WAC.

Simplex Production in Its New Suburban Plant

The making of modern projection equipment as illustrated in the International Projector Corporation's recently completed establishment at Bloomfield, N. J.

IN THE INTERESTS of greater efficiency and working conditions for employes, the International Projector Corporation has relinquished the time-honored address of 90 Gold Street, in New York City, for a spacious manufacturing plant in the suburban industrial town of Bloomfield, N. J. A tour of the new factory by members of the motion picture trade press in February, as guests of the company, provided an occasion for the first release of information on the kind of installation that was now, after 30 years, dedicated to the fabrication of the famous Simplex.

Only a few miles distant from where Thomas A. Edison, who did not originally envision projected motion pictures, conceived the idea of the film and basic mechanics from which this industry most immediately grew, a vast establishment of machine production is devoted to the reproduction of the film play, not only in picture, but in sound.

The new plant is one of the more recent links in the modernization and expansion program instituted by I. P. C.'s parent company, General Precision Equipment Corporation.

Operation of the plant and supervision of production processes is in charge of a committee headed by John F. Campbell, general manager. Other members are Edward Warfolk, comptroller; A. E. Meyer, sales manager; and Frank Goldback, director of engineering. Henry Heidegger is in charge of repair service operations. Willy Borberg is assistant to Mr. Goldback.

Situated in a 10-acre tract of land in Bloomfield, the new Simplex plant comprises 180,000 square feet of factory and office space, by far the greater portion of which is devoted to manufacturing operations and their associated engineering, design and methods groups. The average weekly payroll lists 450 employes.

The most impressive general aspect of the new plant is the vast sweep of main section where all manufacturing, assembling and testing are done on the one floor. Machine and bench layout, conforming to modern production setup, affords ample clearance between each unit, with an exceptionally high level of illumination (40 foot-candles at each work station), ample ventilation and effective safety devices contributing to good working conditions and maximum efficiency.

The plant is an entity in itself in that practically the only outside purchases relating to manufacturing operations are for raw materials, predominantly metal. Every step in the forming of a given part—from the initial roughing operations down through the most minute refining process as to heat-treating, plating and paint spraying—is wholly an in-plant operation.

Two diverse phases of production activity serve to illustrate this policy of self-contained manufacturing, reputed to be unique among plants making motion picture equipment.

Metal castings, for example, are run through a 4-spindle chucking machine which grinds off the "skin" before the casting is sent to the heat-treating ovens for "normalizing"—that is, the metal is subjected to baking by means of electronically-controlled temperature in order to relieve vagrant strains and pressures which commonly affect castings and which, if left untreated, might occasion trouble subsequently.

PRODUCTION TOOLS MADE IN PLANT

The other example is provided by the fact that no mechanical part can be better than the jig, die or similar tool from which it is formed, thus every last tool used for Simplex parts is made within the plant. And even the exacting standards governing such tool production are checked by means of special instruments such as a Bausch & Lomb Comparator which, by means of a novel process, projects on a screen the image of a given part magnified 100 times, enabling the detection of possible error of the order of 1/10,000 inch.

Even the screws used in both visual and sound equipments are cut on special machines since screws of such standards are not generally available commercially.

There is a unit 5 feet high and 4 feet long used to machine a 1-inch segment of the projector film trap altogether, 40 different operations are required by Simplex standard practice to produce the intermittent sprocket, 11 production steps necessary to turn out a washer that is held to a tolerance of plus or minus 2/10,000 inch, and 19 operations to produce a guide roller.

On cylindrical grinders each unit in the row is equipped with dual spot-checking means—a snap gauge and an indicating comparator which hold tolerances to as little as one-half of 1/10,000 inch. All needed gears are cut within the plant.

Especially interesting is the surface grinder used for machining intermittent sprocket teeth, which first have been hardened. The arbor on this grinder must run concentric to less than one-half of 1/10,000 inch. The unit's large index wheel has 16 locating bushings the spacing between which is less than three-tenths of 1/1000 inch. This tolerance, when reduced to the small-ratio dimensions of sprocket teeth, results in infinitesimal, if any, error. Also on this grinder is a unique control means utilizing three needle-pointed diamonds which "dress up" the wheel and assure extreme accuracy of form and size.

Following this operation the sprocket is checked on special indicating fixtures, including an optical comparator and an air gauge, for contour, tooth spacing, and diameter of internal slot.

PART REQUIREMENTS DETAILED

Every aspect of production for Simplex projectors and sound systems is governed by precise written and drawn specifications, often comprising as many as ten pages for a single part, the slightest deviation from which is unacceptable. Actual checking of each part against the applicable specifications begins with the first piece off any given manufacturing setup and continues with similar checks of units selected at random during the balance of the run. This inspection during actual production run approximates finger-tip control of each operating stage, as contrasted with the conventional post-production checking of an entire lot.

The intermittent movement, as a case in point, is subjected to rigid inclusive inspection by means of delicately contrived electronic test equipment which affords both an aural and visual check for accuracy of the positioning relationship between star-wheel and cam. This test unit includes a contact microphone, an amplifier, an a. c. voltmeter for checking line voltage, a wattmeter for checking power consumption (load on the movement), and an indicator graduated in steps of 1/10,000 inch.

No Simplex projector leaves the factory until it has been run-in thoroughly, first without the intermittent movement, and then with it after all final minor adjustments have been made. Here again wattmeters are used to indicate even the slightest excess load on the mechanism.

SOUND EQUIPMENT PRODUCTION

Production of the Simplex 4-Star sound system follows the same pattern that governs projector manufacture, although the processes are necessarily different. Since sound system production is largely a wiring job, the light but sure touch of women workers is utilized for the more critical assembly operations.

One bank of sound system test instruments includes an oscilloscope, signal generator, input and output meters, A. C. and D. C. meters, selector switches for gain and voltage measurements, and an a.c.-d.c. power supply measuring panel.

On an upper tier extending around both sides of the manufacturing area are the executive offices, the accounting department, the engineering and design group, the planning and methods section, and a completely equipped experimental and testing laboratory. The three latter departments are concerned ceaselessly with rigorous sustained investigation of better methods for maintaining quality production and in exploring new design possibilities.

In addition to safety devices throughout the plant, there is a completely equipped dispensary in charge of a registered nurse. This miniature hospital, with a physician on immediate call, may be used for specific, urgent needs as well as general checkups.

A spacious cafeteria daily serves several hundred balanced luncheons and also operates a mobile feeding unit which provides in-between-meals snacks to employees throughout the plant.

Rapidly nearing completion is an added building wing which will house a model theatre to be used for testing all types of equipment under actual field conditions.

A LINE O' LAW OR TWO

Actual suits involving points of law bearing on theatre operation, concisely described and analyzed in laymen's terms for the purpose of helping theatre management to avoid conditions which might lead it to be sued, and of providing cases on which its own suits or legal defense might be based. All decisions given are of higher courts and of recent date.

By LEO T. PARKER, Member Ohio Bar

Don't Let Patron or His Lawyer Outsmart You!

RECENTLY a higher court rendered a most impressive, as well as exemplary, decision proving beyond a doubt that all theatre employes should have some legal knowledge to protect their employers from heavy liability, particularly for injuries to patrons.

LEO T. PARKER

In this case (Arenson v. Skouras Theatres Corporation, 36 Atl. [2d] 761), a patron sued a theatre owner to recover damages for injuries sustained by sitting on a seat that was wet with liquid containing a chemical that burned his body.

Under ordinary circumstances a theatre owner is not liable in damages for injuries to patrons caused by "peculiar" defects or dangerous conditions that may have been caused by other patrons. In other words, this patron could not have recovered damages if he failed to convince a jury that the "wetness" of the seat was caused by negligence of the theatre management or employes. The patron introduced testimony before the court as follows:

When the patron noticed that his trousers were wet, he sought the manager of the theatre and told him the condition was caused by the wetness of the seat. The manager, thereupon, interrogated the usherette as to how the seat became wet and was informed that "they had been using this fluid to get some gum off the seat."

In view of this testimony the jury decided that the "wetness" of the seat was caused by negligence of theatre employes who removed the chewing gum from the seats, and held the theatre owner liable in heavy damages. The higher court approved the verdict, and said:

"The manager was clearly charged with the duty of operation and to see that acts of employes were not negligent. . . . Upon the entire record, we conclude that the testimony raised a question of fact for the determination of the jury. . . . The testimony was not incompetent and there was no error in admitting it."

Now, this theatre manager could have won the suit for the theatre owner if he had proved that he had directed a theatre employe to inspect the seats after the operations of removing the chewing gum. Proof that the seats were thus inspected would have convinced the jury that the theatre owner had used "ordinary" care to safeguard patrons from injuries.

Furthermore, if the theatre manager had had the seats inspected, he would not have had reason to build an iron-clad case in favor of the patron by interrogating the usherette and gaining from her, to the disadvantage of the theatre owner, an admission that recently the theatre employes had cleaned the seats with a fluid which caused the injury to the patron.

STAFF TESTIMONY SAVES EMPLOYER

Also, see Ashmore v. Pennsylvania, 38 N. J. L. 13. The court said:

"All statements made in the conduct of such business are evidence against the principal. When the word or the act is done in pursuance of the agent's duty, it can be proved against the principal."

For comparison, see the leading case of Zappala v. Stanley Company of America (124 N. J. L. 569, 12 A. [2d] 691). In this case the higher court held that a defect in a theatre seat that caused its collapse was sufficient to place the burden on the theatre owner to prove that his employes had exercised ordinary care to discover and repair the defect. Here testimony that theatre employes regularly, every few days, had inspected the seats, was sufficient to result in a favorable verdict for the theatre owner.

When the theatre owner proved that his employes inspected the seats, this testimony was sufficient to convince the jury that he had exercised "ordinary" care to protect his patrons against injury. The fact that the theatre employes did not discover and repair the defect did not prevent the theatre owner's being held not liable.

or the landlord? Here is a recent answer, in Kingsul Theatres, Inc. v. Quillen (196 S. W. [2d] 316), a patron sued the Kingsul Theatres, Inc., to recover damages for personal injuries sustained when she fell at the entrance of the Rialto Theatre. The jury rendered a verdict for $3,000 to the patron.

The theatre fronts approximately 30 feet on the sidewalk, which is on a gradual slope from the right side to the left. As a result, the step from the sidewalk to the theatre entrance is approximately 3 inches in height, while the step on the left of the building is approximately 6 inches in height, a difference of 3 inches. The patron fell as a result of this irregular step.

The patron proved that the peculiar construction of the entrance way, and particularly the color of the tile floor, created the illusion that the entrance terminated on the level of the sidewalk, and numerous patrons over a period of years had stumbled or actually fallen at this point.

The theatre corporation appealed to the higher court and proved that it merely leased the building, and contended that it was not liable for defective or dangerous construction of the theatre premises. Notwithstanding this argument, the higher court approved the jury's verdict and stated:

"Where a lessee (theatre owner) continues to use the premises with knowledge of their defective condition, he will be liable for injuries sustained by an invitee by reason of such condition, although the landlord is also jointly liable with the tenant by reason of the existence of such defects at the time of the letting."

Effective Defense In Liability Cases

THE KIND of proof that will relieve a theatre corporation from liability for damages where a patron is injured on the premises is always of interest. Here is a new example of law on this important subject.

In Cooper v. Pritchard Company (36 S. E. [2d] 405), it was shown that a woman fell and sustained severe injuries on an inclined floor. She sued for damages. During the trial the testimony proved that there was no foreign or dangerous substance on the ramp to cause her to fall, and that no other person had ever fallen on it during a period about 14 years.

In view of this testimony the higher court held the woman not entitled to recover damages. Thus, this proprietor avoided liability by proving, first, that he was not negligent in maintaining on the premises an unsafe floor; and second, he supported this proof by secondary evidence that no other person had sustained injuries while walking on it.

Tenant Must Make Repairs for Protection

ACCORDING TO a recent higher court decision, if the landlord neglects to make the repairs specified in a lease contract, the tenant cannot stand by and run the risk of damage to his equipment in the building. In other words, the law requires the tenant himself to have the premises repaired if the landlord fails to comply with his contract and agreement. The theatre tenant may deduct the repair bill from the rent.

For example, in Schurman v. American (145 Fed. Rep. [2d] 721), it was shown that a lease contract contained a clause: "Lessor (building owner) agrees to . . . keep roofs in repair . . ."

In subsequent litigation testimony was given that the landlord failed to fulfill his agreement to keep the roof in good repair, and the equipment in the building was damaged.

It is interesting to observe that the higher court held that this fact did not result in the landlord being liable for damage which resulted from failure of the tenant himself to make the necessary repairs. This court said:

"The agreement of the lessor to make the repairs did not excuse the lessee's neglect."

Going to Reseat Your Theatre?
Here's the Way to Do It Right

LAST MONTH I set forth the things to which I would give first consideration in buying chairs for a new theatre and arranging for their installation. Seating a new theatre presents no great problem, for you are starting from scratch; a good installation is a matter of intelligent planning of the auditorium, and well advised direction of the installation.

Here I am going to deal with the reseating of an existing theatre, which is, in a number of respects, quite another story. I hope that in the unusually large amount of reseating to be undertaken during the next few years, it will help to avoid a lot of the difficulties and poor results that I have witnessed in the past.

Before ordering new chairs a thorough, systematic survey should be made of the existing chair installation by either an experienced chair man or a theatre engineer. This survey should include a very careful checkup of the floor conditions, to see if cracks are present, if there is any bulging up of floor areas, and if expansion joints have opened too far.

Then each row should be gone over carefully and notes made as to just where seats are bending, standards are loose, and backs are either warped or show undue wear, or whether any other defects are present. There must be definite reasons for certain chairs to show exceptional conditions, which of course should not reappear in the new installation.

Further, the existing plan should be reconsidered to see if it can be improved. In many theatres the original chair layout was made to get in the largest amount of seats with no regard for comfortable viewing of the picture, and this pattern has been followed through successive reseating jobs. The increasing adoption of more liberal row spacing, and staggered seating, with 18-inch chairs eliminated and few if any 19-inch widths, has made the public aware of better standards in viewing conditions, so that it is generally competitively wise today to modernize old-style seating plans if to do so is at all feasible. To determine this requires careful checking into the cost of relocating the aisles, aisle light wiring, and standee rail, relaying carpeting and drilling new holes for the chairs. Also of great importance is the provision proper passages or crossovers to all exits. The theatre owner will have to decide if the rearrangement of his old chair layout will prove of sufficient benefit to him over a period of years to warrant the cost.

GET ACCURATE FIGURES

To be on the safe side at all times, the management should see that accurate measurements are taken of the entire floor area of the auditorium, including the exact layout of the old chairs and the pitches of the floor. For this work, a 50-foot tape (preferably one of 100 feet), a 6 foot rule, and a carpenter's spirit level should be adequate for taking all measurements. Then an accurate, drawn-to-scale plan should be made of the entire existing chair installation, which will serve for reference in case revisions are made.

Then when it is decided to rearrange the old layout, a completely new drawing should be made of the new scheme, based on the old plan, thus having the old and new layouts for actual comparison. Remember that it is much cheaper and easier to make changes on paper than it is to make them during or after the chairs are installed! Never accept verbal information or assurances that "everything will work out okay;" it isn't so easy to twist things around when troubles later occur. The tendency is to make a rough sketch showing some measurements, and to leave the rest to the imagination. In all chair installations no matter how small, a plan drawn to scale should be made showing why and how the work will be done, and under what conditions.

It is a very good idea to diagram where have you heard?

that a brush or broom should not be used on papered walled room, as the grime will be rubbed into the paper, thus making it impossible for removal with paper cleaner? Do not wash wallpaper unless it is supposed to be washable, and use only cold water, as even lukewarm water tends to dissolve the coating on the paper.

that to remove chewing gum from cloth or wool, the gum should be rubbed with a piece of ice until a hard ball forms and then be gently pulled from the surface? If small bits remain, apply any good dry cleaning fluid.

that an oiled polishing cloth or mop should never be used on wood lounge furniture or any highly waxed surface, as the oil will soften the finish and make a gummy film or which dust will readily accumulate?

that you should use very little wax on mahogany and apply it across the grain? Polish, however, by rubbing with the grain.

that the way to prevent a picture from leaving dust streaks when it is removed from a lounge or foyer wall is to place a thumb tack at each lower corner so that dust will not collect at the bottom of the frame?

that all steel or other metal window frames should be painted periodically even though the frame has been rustproofed at the factory?

that ice cream spots should first be washed with cold water, then washed with hot, soapy suds. If a spot remains, use a bleaching fluid.

that a simple way to check the quality of a ready-mixed paint is to place a few drops on one of two pieces of glass, then press the two together? When the pieces of glass are slid apart, it is easy to determine the capacity of the paint, its color value, and whether it contains any grit.

the new chairs are to be installed. Such a diagram, made on graph paper, is not made to scale; it merely indicates the general seating area. Its main purpose is to show the exact quantity of chairs and their sizes. It is very useful in making the actual scale drawing of the chair installation, and for ready reference later on, to see at a glance the number of chairs, their sizes and where they are located. It also would be handy for any future reseating jobs. A copy should be kept in the theatre at all times.

be blocked in with pencil or pen on the standard 8½x11 inch graph paper, which has ruled squares of about 5/16 inch. After the general outline of the seating area is drawn in heavily over the ruled lines, a number of graph paper squares are selected to represent the number of chairs in a row, and finally the total number of rows. Each square is allowed to represent one chair regardless of width.

In arriving at the exact sizes of the chairs, each chair is measured across the arm rests, with the end of the rule against the inside edge of one arm rest and the measurement taken at the outside of the next arm rest. The start should be made at the first chair in the last row in the bank of chairs nearest the wall, on either the left or the right side of the auditorium. Once started in this way, each chair width should be measured in each row, going across the auditorium, then down to the next row and across, until every chair in the theatre is measured.

It is very important that this measuring be done carefully and systematically, as it is very easy to miss a chair—or even a whole row of chairs! A mistake can mean a lot when the new chairs are delivered and it is found that a row of chairs will not fit the space between the aisles.

As each chair width is measured, the size should be written in the square allotted to it on the diagram. A single number (0 for 20, 1 of 21, etc.) can well be used to denote the width of the chair, for convenience and ease in writing in the measurements. Then a tabulation should be made of the different widths, and adding these will give the total number of chairs required in each width to double check, count each chair in the theatre and compare this total with the grand total arrived at on the diagram.

In ordering the chairs, a copy of the new chair layout, together with a copy of the old layout, plus the plot diagram, should be sent to the chair manufacturer. Thus, if an error has occurred it probably will be caught by the manufacturer and correction or suggestions can be made accordingly.

INSTALLATION PREPARATIONS

After the order and plans are sent to the manufacturer, thought should be given as to how the chair installation will be arranged. Do not leave everything until it is time to install the chairs. If the theatre will be closed during the installation, then the only trouble will be to find space for storing the chairs and providing facilities for handling and carting. However, if the theatre is to operate during the installation, then the person responsible for the installation should be called in and plans made as to just how the work should be done without interference with performances.

In any case, provide sufficient clear dry room for the storing of the new chairs. Try to select a room close to the auditorium for ease and convenience in handling. This will help to save time in the installation. In nearly every such job the chairs are installed a section at a time, before and after show hours. This setup should be well understood by the chairman. When the procedure of the work is not agreed upon beforehand, arguments arise.

Usually the front side banks are started first and then the center bank of chairs. However, it should be made certain that only as many of the old chairs will be picked up as can be replaced by new chairs before the start of each day's show. Experienced chair men can judge this pretty closely, but in some cases they must be constantly told and watched, for they are not disinclined to go along picking up old chairs without counting them, leaving the theatre with a lot of space without chairs for the next show.

Before any of the new chairs are to be used by the patrons, make sure that they are fastened solidly to the floor, that the seats are tight and that the backs are firmly in place. Sometimes the chair men, in their hurry to finish, just leave some chair standards, with backs and seats fastened loosely, and walk off the job. It shouldn't take a liability suit or two to show the importance of checking this. Always rope off any loose chairs securely, be they old or new ones, before each day's show—and better still, during show hours have an usher stationed there to direct the patrons.

When the chairs arrive at the theatre, make sure that they are handled with care and check to see if any crates have been broken during transportation. Ushers or theatre handy men should not be allowed to uncrate the chairs to save time, as each crate is marked as to the size of chair, seat or back, and when they are piled any old way it is hard for the chair men to pick out the right size. Only a person familiar with chair installation should do the uncrating and segregating.

In picking up the old chairs from the floors, make sure that they are not forced from their fastenings if they are to be sold or used elsewhere. Many times when a chair will not come off the floor easily, due to a nut crossed on the threads in the original installation, the chair men will rock it to and fro until it breaks loose. This is very bad, for if the nut does not break, the standard may even if the chairs as to be discarded, the bolt may be pulled out of the floor with a chunk of concrete.

INSTALLATION PRECAUTIONS

When certain chair standards will not fit the floor pitch properly, trace the trouble to its exact source before allowing the chair men to put shims underneath. In their hurry to finish the job, the chairmen may put a chair in place without making sure that it belongs at that particular spot. If the layout on the plan is correct, each chair should fit the spot allotted to it, and it is rare for a mistake to be made at the factory if the original layout was correct. In nearly every case covering a misfit is just a matter of finding the intended place for the chair. The placing of shims under chair standards is not a very reliable device; they work loose in time, so only when nothing else can be done should they be used.

In fastening the chairs to the floor, the men should be warned not to force the nut down on the threads of the bolt; if they do so, the threads will be stripped and will be of no use in any future reseating job. The nut should be screwed down only to the point where it holds the chair solidly, and no more!

In making the electrical connection to the aisle lights, be sure that they are tight, but that there is no strain on either the conduit or the wiring. Where the old wiring and conduit must be stretched in order to fit the new light, it is better to install new wiring and Greenfield flexible conduit rather than to take a chance of having trouble later on. This applies as well where the fastening holes or bolts are defective. Fill up the old holes and insert new bolts.

About two weeks after the chairs have been installed, have the chair men make a thorough check and tighten any loose standards, backs or seats. Allowing patrons to sit in loose chairs even for a short time is not only taking a chance on their well being, but it is to invite rapid wear as well. This part of the installation should be agreed upon before chair men take the job.

chair installation. In this way it can be seen at a glance just what sizes of chairs are available and where they can be best re-installed. It is understood that in transfer chair jobs, a first-class installation cannot be expected, but with careful planning and will have to be placed under the standards. On how well the chairs are selected depends the number of shims needed in each case.

Be sure the re-installed chairs will not reduce the aisle width substantially! To do off level with the floor so as not to have patrons tripping over them.

When end standard would project an inch or two into the aisle if the old radius were used, a shorter radius may be a solution; however, chairs cannot be squeezed in too much, otherwise the seats will bind and the backs may tend to warp or buckle.

If only certain sections of the chair layout is to have different type of chairs from another theatre, the transferred chairs should be installed in the least conspicuous areas and where they will be least used, as at the front or at the extreme sides forward. The best chairs in these areas can then be picked up and re-installed in other areas needing good chairs and where they will match the rest of the original installation.

Transfer chair jobs are at best hit or miss, and they can be quite expensive in the long run.

precaution a job can be done that may be adequate for some situations.

First of all, check to see how well the chairs can be interchanged without too much trouble and expense. There is just so much space between the aisles, or between an aisle and a wall, and the transferred chairs must be carefully figured to fit within those spaces. The floor slope is a troublesome factor in such installations, for it is practically certain to be radically different from that of the auditorium from which the chairs were taken. In most cases, shims so would be to violate the fire laws. Moreover, it might mean that the carpeting would have to be cut or shifted to clear the end standards. In no case should the chairs be fastened over the carpeting, as the standards will loosen from the floor in a short time.

Another thing that must be taken into consideration in chair transfer jobs is that the old fastening bolts in most cases cannot be used and that new holes will have to be drilled and new bolts inserted. Also, the unused bolts will have to be chipped

It Happened in Brooklyn

MGM—Comedy-Musical

Every once in a while Hollywood manages to produce a picture that lives up to the seemingly impossible task of providing good entertainment for young and old, rich and poor, intelligent and naive. MGM's "It Happened in Brooklyn," produced by Jack Cummings and directed by Richard Whorf, with screenplay by Isobel Lennart, can claim this distinction.

Regardless of whether anyone goes to see this film because of some sentimental attachment to Brooklyn, which here is pictured as a little man's paradise, or whether it's the Sinatra-Durante-Grayson-Lawford marquee appeal that brings them in, this picture should prove pure gold at the box office.

Pictures made of such wholesome fabric that the entire family can go and see it and come out equally satisfied are comparatively rare. "It Happens in Brooklyn" does not pretend to be a great film with a great message. It just aims to entertain.

While all actors give excellent performances, Sinatra and Durante steal scene after scene. Sinatra, as the shy Brooklyn boy with a velvet voice, repeats the success of "Anchors Aweigh," and also scores with a number of melodious songs; Durante is at his very best as a crusty school janitor with a golden heart; Miss Grayson's voice equals her good looks, and Peter Lawford does a remarkable job as the young Englishman, suddenly transplanted.

Songs in the film range from the classic "Bell" song from Lakme, done by Miss Grayson, to "Time After Time," "It's the Same Old Dream," "The Brooklyn Bridge" and others, done by Sinatra. There also is a duet by Sinatra and Miss Grayson, singing an aria from "Don Giovanni." Some of the Sinatra-Durante dance numbers and Durante antics are sure to bring down the house.

The story is very simple, serving only as a vehicle for some good, clean fun and romance. Shy Sinatra, stationed in England, promises to demonstrate Brooklyn's lively pace to a young, quiet Englishman, played by Lawford. When Frank comes to the States he meets an attractive school teacher, Miss Grayson, rediscovers Brooklyn, gets a job in a music shop and moves in with Durante because of the housing shortage. Lawford comes over from England and falls in love with Sinatra's girlfriend. Together they help a boy win a music scholarship. In the end Sinatra discovers that he isn't in love with Miss Grayson after all, but with a pretty nurse he met in England.

Blaze of Noon

Paramount—The Mail Must Go Through

To judge from Paramount's dramatization of the pioneer days in airmail flying, the lives its pilots led were harrowing, hectic and hazardous. As for any girl so unfortunate as to marry a flyer, her existence was one long nervous strain. There's plenty of suspense in this picture, and more than enough tragedy, too.

The four MacDonald brothers—played by William Holden, Sonny Tufts, Sterling Hayden and Johnny Sands—love flying more than life itself. In fact, they pay for that love with their lives. Both Holden and Sands are killed, and Hayden is permanently crippled. Tufts' own sufferings are milder and more mental. They are caused by the remorse he feels when his younger brother, whom he has taught to fly, crashes to his death shortly before his 21st birthday.

Anne Baxter, the heroine of the piece, fares no better. She refuses to dissuade her husband from flying, and thus condemns herself to a life of continual anxiety. After her child is born, she knows some months of happiness, but these are ruthlessly cut short by her husband's death.

The suspense engendered by John Farrow's expert direction, and by the spectacular flying scenes, performed by ace stuntman Paul Mantz, builds throughout until the last shattering climax. Robert Fellows' production, in fact, will leave the spectator limp as his own handkerchief—and he will need that handkerchief long before the picture is over.

William Bendix, cast as a carefree flyer who thinks it fun to endanger the lives of groundlings, contributes what little comic relief there is.

The title, a quotation from Milton's "Samson Agonistes," seems somewhat irrelevant to the subject at hand.

The Guilt of Janet Ames

Columbia—Psychiatry Made Pleasant

Psychiatry, handled as heavy and somewhat mysterious stuff by producers up to now, comes in here for its first convincing and altogether pleasant treatment as a fact of human experience in the ken of plain people. It makes a most diverting, engrossing and satisfying piece of entertainment, and with the names of Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas high on the marquee it's a cinch to do top business, probably growing as it plays.

No time is wasted in getting down to the nub of the story, in which Miss Russell portrays a war widow jealous of five buddies of her husband whom he died to save, and Douglas plays one of the five. The story opens in New York, with Miss Russell hesitantly approaching a cafe where the first of five men whose names she has listed on a slip of paper is employed. She steps in front of a truck, is taken to a hospital unconscious, and there is identified by the fifth man on her list, a reporter addicted to drink. When she recovers consciousness she is unable to walk, although the doctors say there is no physical injury, and the reporter deciding that her trouble is mental, sets out to overcome by psycho-analysis and suggestion what he perceives to be her conviction that the five men whose lives her husband saved at cost of his own were not worthy of the sacrifice.

One by one, he describes to her the other four men, making each seem a respectable and successful citizen, although they are not, and ends by picturing himself, before she knows he is the fifth, as a distinguished journalist. His deception succeeds, and she finds herself able to walk, and then he flees to a barroom, to escape her detection of his fraud, but she follows and effects, by a quite different use of reasoning, his psychological rehabilitation.

It's by no means as complicated as the foregoing makes it sound, and it ripples along on the wings of imagination freely and fruitfully employed, with humour incidentally and refreshingly added. Further than that, it calls time out a little past midway to turn loose a night club comedian, played by Sid Caesar, who kids Hollywood hilariously for its over-indulgence in psychological melodramas.

The script, an extremely adroit document, is by Louella MacFarland, Allen Rivkin and Devery Freeman, out of a story by Lenore Coffee, and Henry Levin's direction of it is one of the finest achievements of this year.

The Adventuress

Rank-Eagle-Lion—Headstrong Girl

A sprightly and deft comedy-drama that seemingly does the impossible in mixing believably a light-hearted love story with a serious, straightforward account of German spies in wartime England has been produced by J. Arthur Rank's Individual Pictures for Eagle-Lion release. "The Adventuress" is a delight, a vividly-characterized picture that offers laughs and chuckles, sighs and kisses, violence and bloodshed.

The adventuress is Deborah Kerr, recently given a $1,000,000 contract by MGM. Playing the role of a headstrong Irish lass who so despises the British that she unthinkingly joins forces with a German spy, Miss Kerr gives a splendid performance.

Daughter of a former ardent member of the Irish Republic Army, Miss Kerr, on her twenty-first birthday, travels to Dublin to join that army and is disappointed to find that Ireland and England are unreasonably and unaccountably at peace. Cromwell may have been dead for 300 years, but he's alive in Ireland, she reminds herself.

Determined to continue her personal grudge against the English—the only thing she knows about them is that she doesn't like them—she joins forces with the German agent to aid him in freeing an English-held German prisoner. Just about this time she meets an interesting young man—but he's British. So Miss Kerr follows through as a spy until she discovers that she is actually on the verge of giving away England's invasion plans. Then she quits and turns to her Englishman.

Although she is at first sincere in her hatred of the British, you can hardly interpret her actions as vicious for there is always an undercurrent of humor in the picture—the humor derived from a pig-headed young woman who knows that she's in the wrong, but who keeps attempting to talk herself into feeling that she's in the right.

Trevor Howard, as Miss Kerr's romantic interest, and Raymond Huntley, as the German agent, both give fine performances. The picture was produced by Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat. Mr. Launder did an exceptionally good job of directing and the script was admirably put together by Mr. Launder, Mr. Gilliat and Wolfgang Wilhelm.

Reviewing the picture in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last August 3, from England, where it went under the title of "I See a Dark Stranger," Peter Burnup wrote in part: "Here's one from Britain that merits and will receive in its own right immense American applause. It has technical skill of the first order, enchanting camera work, sensitive, understanding performances from top to bottom of a long list of actors. . . ."

Fall Guy

Monogram—First Dope Picture

If this first picture produced in consequence of the revision of the Production Code to permit screen presentation of the illicit use of drugs proves anything, which it doesn't, it would seem to be the pointlessness of introducing the subject. What's been done with it here is no more than has been done often and better with shell shock, a head injury, even with a superficial alcoholic blackout, and quite frequently with amnesia. To be sure, the fact that the young man in this case can't remember things because they happened while he was drugged, instead of being rendered unconscious by other means, does give an exhibitor given to sensational exploitation a slight basis for ballyhooing the picture as a dope subject, but it doesn't justify that type of exploitation by providing the things a customer attracted by it would expect. On the contrary, it's a pretty good little melodrama, on straight counts, impaired rather than improved by the use of an unfamiliar element neither needfully employed nor dealt with in a manner to make it interesting.

The principal figure in the story is a young man, habitually given to drink, who attends an apartment drinking party and blacks out, finding himself subsequently in a police ward, where he's being questioned about a murder on account of having been found with blood on his hands and with a bloody knife in his possession. He escapes, enlists the aid of a police officer with whom he lives, and laboriously dredges up out of hazy memory enough unrelated details to enable them to trace his forgotten movements. It turns out that his sweetheart's guardian, a drug addict, who's been secretly in love with the girl, has committed a murder and sought to frame the boy for it as a means of getting rid of him.

The drug element is dealt with entirely by dialogue reference, in which the words "drugs" and "narcotics" are employed, and no actual use of drugs is shown.

Walter M. Mirisch produced the picture, and Reginald Le Borg directed it, from a screenplay by Jerry Warner, based on a story by Cornell Woolrich entitled "Cocaine."

Framed

Columbia—Melodrama

Glenn Ford is the personality to draw to with this forthright melodrama, and his job in it has enough in common with the role he had in "Gilda" to gratify the folks who've got on his bandwagon since that picture made the rounds. So, for that matter, has the picture enough resemblance to that one, as well as to "The Postman Always Rings Twice" (although he only rings once here), and since it's a well contrived plot smoothly worked out and highlighted with violence there's every reason to believe it will do all right at the box office.

As the title foretells, the story by Jack Patrick, written tightly by Ben Maddow, has to do with an attempt to frame a guy, and the guy, played by Ford, is chosen because his measurements are about the same as those of the bank vice-president who has sequestered $250,000 in his blond girl friend's safety deposit box so she can get it after he's supposedly been killed and join him elsewhere.

Janis Carter, as the girl friend with a heart of ice, turns in a telling performance in about the murderiest assignment any member of the traditionally gentler sex has had in recent years. Barry Sullivan, as the venal banker, might have done better with more substantial material than is given him to handle, but satisfies the requirements of a story that depends in the main on convolutions of plot, surprise switches, and the colorfulness of the two top characters.

It's a fast and forceful picture, direct and strong in its appeal to the admirers of melodrama in the raw, and a tribute to the professional skill of producer Jules Schermer and director Richard Wallace.

It's not for the little folks.

Undercover Maisie

MGM—Adventure-Comedy

Produced by George Haight for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, this is another of the gay and sprightly "Maisie" pictures starring Ann Sothern. Like many of its predecessors it is designed to entertain and this it does with ease and grace without embellishment.

As the tenth picture in the series which started in 1939, Maisie's experiences as an investigator for the police department in a large city form the basis of the plot. Because of her attractiveness and disarming qualities, her courage and her talent for keen observation she is assigned to uncover the activities of a mystic who is later found to be heading a ring of swindlers preying on veterans seeking homes.

Maisie runs the gamut of adventure from being kidnaped to being threatened with murder by the gang. Sprinkled among these adventures are touches of romance in the persons of

'Barry Nelson, portraying the hard-hearted but charming lieutenant of detectives, and Mark Daniels, also vying for the heroine's affections while attempting to again win his position on the city's "bunco" squad.

In supporting roles are Leon Ames as the mystic and head of the gang, Charles D. Brown as chief of the detective bureau, and Clinton Sundberg as the handsome front-man for the gang.

The story and screen play was written by Thelma Robinson from the character created by Wilson Collison. Harry Beaumont directed.

Previewed at the MGM exchange in New York. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—GEORGE H. SPIRES.

Blondie's Holiday

Columbia—Domestic Comedy

The beloved characters of comic strip renown, Blondie and Dagwood, are presented in another comedy with Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake in the top roles.

One comic situation after another arises when Blondie promises that Dagwood will pay for the class reunion dinner. First Dagwood's boss, played by Jerome Cowan, fires him. Dagwood, in a desperate effort to raise money, bets on a horse. Then he is caught in a police raid. Meanwhile, Blondie goes to the dinner and is placed in the awkward position of not being able to pay the bill. However, at the crucial moment Dagwood arrives. He has gotten his job back and was given a bonus, which amply pays for the class reunion.

Burt Kelly produced and Abby Berlin directed. Constance Lee wrote the original screenplay, which is based on the characters from the comic strip "Blondie" created by Chic Young.

Valley of Fear

Monogram—Western

The action is fast and the excitement high in Monogram's "Valley of Fear," a picture generously sprinkled with the ingredients that standard Western fans want in their favorite fare.

Johnny Mack Brown teams with Raymond Hatton to dig into a conspiracy to swindle money from certain persons and then foreclose mortgages on their property. To smoke out the real culprits, a stragem is employed in which an innocent man pretends he is guilty. The little stragem almost backfires, however, before the real brains behind the murders and the land-grabs are brought to justice.

Others in the cast are Christine McIntyre, Ed Cassidy and Tristram Coffin. Lambert Hillyer directed from an original screenplay by J. Benton Cheney and production was supervised by Charles J. Bigelow.

ARBITRATION

CURRENTLY, the number one issue before the exhibitor in the continuing flux of trade practice problems is the question of arbitration of disputes over product and prices. Exhibition appears substantially unanimously in favour of an arbitration system, but there is no decision in sight on how such a system might be set up.

Meanwhile, the position of the Department of Justice continues opposed. There the contention appears to be that divorcement would cure anything and everything. This is despite the fact that the history in the field shows that controversies requiring such adjustment as arbitration might supply are not peculiar to issues with affiliated theatres.

A decided cogency pertains to the contention of this week's bulletin from the Independent Theatre Owners of Northern California, issued over the signature of Mr. Rotus Harvey, urging strictly local and voluntary arbitration arrangements—entirely divorced from court actions or orders. This bulletin points to the costly, involved and unworkable aspects of nationally organized arbitration under court decree. Their plan would leave all parties with the right to go to the courts—as a last resort.

THE BUYING AGE

EXAMINATION of the public prints these days finds continuing evidence that the critics continue to grow farther and farther away from the audience. That is manifest in the reiterated contentions for sophistications of all sorts in the product.

Turning to the March issue of The Screen Writer, monthly organ of the Screen Writers Guild, one finds quotation of some highly relevant observations from Dr. George Gallup: "The average American movie audience is predominantly a young audience.

"The 19-year-olds contribute more to the box office than any other age group.

"Regular movie attendance seems to begin around the age of 12. It goes up steadily through the age of 19. After that, it falls off sharply. Relatively few persons attend with any regularity after the age of 35."

A few days ago Mr. Cecil B. DeMille, informally discussing the product in a luncheon conversation in New York, remarked upon the basic simplicity of the motion picture audience taste. He says, "They like heroes"—and Mr. DeMille does, too. "They want the story and the issues clean cut, drawn in black and white. They want the characters identified as they emerge into the story—the good ones and the bad ones—and they expect them to stay that way to the finish." That, indicated Mr. DeMille, was his answer to the trend toward psychological complexities in the drama of the screen.

All this has to do with our often-asserted contention that in essence the entertainment picture is enjoyed by its audience as vicarious experience, preferably adventure. They want to learn about life and living.

If one is to accept Dr. Gallup's findings, the picture had better be about what is likely to be most important to the young man or woman of age 19. That would tend to rule out a considerable array of topics that you can remember.

Also, if the most important customer is the 19-year-old, there can be some reflections on the subject of admission prices versus purchasing power.

GRAPES DILEMMA

BY news cable from Oslo in Norway the daily press has word that the municipal authorities have forbidden a showing there of "Grapes of Wrath" because the "American distributors insisted that the audiences be told the conditions depicted are not normal", at the opening. And again it was requested, so the report runs, that the show close with a statement that conditions recorded "had been improved after having been called to the attention of authorities".

There are exemplified the confusions and problems which can arise when the entertainment screen goes into the realm of social causes and class issues.

Agreeing that the reasons of the Oslo authorities may be "obscure", The New York Herald Tribune indicates that perhaps it "is enough to let the variegated blood of Hollywood flow freely, permitting the Europeans to draw their own conclusions as to the variety of society in the United States".

THE recent death of Harry K. Thaw brings to mind that he had a decided hand in the beginnings of censorship in this industry. In May, 1907, a picture entitled "The Great Thaw Trial", on exhibition to audiences of juveniles, drew the fire of the Children's Society in New York. It presented Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw in her first screen role. It included a drugging scene and a version of the abrupt demise of Stanford White on the Roof at Madison Square Garden. Mr. Thaw, whimsically, joined the attack on the picture on the ground that it was not a good picture of his wife, and that neither the marriage nor the shooting was accurately pictured. Mr. Thaw was in favour of documentary realism, according to his lawyer, Mr. Dan Reilly.

BUSINESS generally is now viewing the scene with some anxious concerns. Out in Chicago this week the national marketing conference of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States considered forecasts of "the return of a buyers' market" and a mounting public resistance to further price increases. Here in New York, Mr. Edward J. Churchill, president of Donahue & Coe, Inc., advertising agency, speaking in connection with the acquisition of the service of Mr. Kenneth Collins, observed: "Keen students seem to agree that America is on the threshold of a buyers' market, with new battle lines of competition. Problems of distribution and merchandising are demanding a more precise analysis and advertising plans a more critical evaluation."

Wriggle Test

WHEN confronted with the necessity of choosing the right films for distribution under the Motion Picture Association's Children's Film Library plan, the MPA suggests the children themselves would be the best judges of what is good for them. So, after a list of films had been selected in San Francisco, all pictures were previewed by an unselected audience of school children eight to 12. Whenever a film contained too much love or was over their heads, the children wriggled. In the end the "wriggle curve" was the determining factor in the selection of suitable pictures.

In New York, Glendon Alvine, public relations representative for MPA in the East, said after his return from a trip to the southeast territory that the Children's Film Library had caught on strongly in some areas and was just getting going in others. New Orleans was best, he said, with all prints booked as far ahead as June. Promotional drives to support the program will be launched soon, he said.

MPAA Anniversary

A DINNER will be held in New York some time in May to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Motion Picture Association of America. Representatives of the United Nations, Government officials, and executives of foreign companies will be invited to join the American film representatives in the celebration. The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, predecessor of the MPAA, was established in March, 1922, under the presidency of Will H. Hays. This Association was successor to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., which had been headed by William A. Brady. With the election of Eric Johnston to the presidency, succeeding Mr. Hays, in September, 1945, the Association's name was changed to Motion Picture Association. Under Mr. Johnston's direction, committees will be appointed to handle the dinner which will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Crisis

WITH PUBLIC resentment against "ugly plugs" and "excessive commercialism" on the air rising steadily, the broadcasting industry has embarked on a plan for self-regulation. It involves appointment of an executive to administer improved standards in programming and advertising and the formation of a council, consisting of representatives of the broadcasters, the advertisers and the major industrial concerns sponsoring network shows, to cope with what is called "a crisis in the radio industry." Edgar Kobak, president of the Mutual Broadcasting System, has been named chairman of the committee on organization and finance for the group.

Easy Money

SOUNDS LIKE an easy thing, getting money from J. Arthur Rank to produce a picture. The way Frank Launder, British picture writer, director and producer tells it, the method is something like this: an independent producer belonging to Rank's Independent Producers company decides on the subject matter for his feature and addresses a memorandum to Mr. Rank which states only: Have idea that Such and Such a novel will make a good film. Would like to star So and So and Whoever.

On that much information, Mr. Rank bases his yes or no. If the answer is yes, the producer goes ahead, with no regulations governing him, no supervision hindering him. Mr. Launder, who, with Sidney Gilliat, heads Individual Pictures, a member company of Independent Producers, met the trade press in New York last Friday.

Here in the U. S. ahead of the premiere of Individual's "The Adventuress," Mr. Launder will make two features during the next 15 months. They are a production of the novel, "London Belongs to Me," a best seller in America under the title of "Dulcimer Street," and "Blue Lagoon." He would like to see a Production Code interpreter stationed in London permanently.

Wrong Button

NEW YORK'S Radio City Music Hall had a few uneasy moments last Sunday night. One of the engineers turned the wrong valve at the wrong moment and clouds of steam vapor arose from the stage just as the feature picture was going on. This sort of thing is accepted by Radio City audiences when the corps de ballet is in action, but not when the picture is on. As a result, the audience thought for a moment of fires and other catastrophes. Manager Irving Evans came out before the curtain, explained what had happened, and the audience relaxed.

HOLLYWOOD production was up 6.4 per cent in 1946 compared to 1945 with 62 per cent of the features based on originals, according to the annual report of the Production Code Administration of the Motion Picture Association to Eric Johnston, president. Altogether 397 features were produced. Shorts totaled 549 in 1946, up 5.4 per cent. Rejected in 1946 were 91 books, plays, treatments and scripts, said Joseph I. Breen, PCA director. Of these, 62 were basically objectionable. A total of 88 West-erns compared with 73 in 1945. The report of the MPA title registration bureau showed that 29 non-members and 26 MPA members use the service. A total of 25 non-members joined the bureau during 1946. The words most often registered by producers were "you" and "love."

Whose "Bel Ami"?

GUY DE MAUPASSANT never thought he'd be that popular on the screen. Currently there are three American claimants to his "Bel Ami" story. The first one is Joseph Scheinman, operator of the Casino Film Exchange, who is showing the German version of "Bel Ami" at his Casino theatre in New York. Willi Forst wrote and directed it and also stars. Mr. Scheinman says he got the film from Mr. Forst during a European trip last year, but the Levinson-Finney Enterprises of Los Angeles say they hold the American rights to the German film, which they have copyrighted in Washington.

Sitting quietly on the sidelines are David Loew and Albert Lewin whose production of the same title and adapted from the same story has just been released by United Artists. They say they aren't worried, but it is understood that the UA producers did try to buy out the German version of "Bel Ami."

German language pre-war pictures soon will flow into the U. S. as a result of contracts signed by Mr. Scheinman with German and Austrian producers.

Television Tax

INGENIOUS, these collectors of Internal Revenue. Now it looks like you might have to pay a 20 per cent amusement tax if you want to take a look at a television show provided in a bar or cabaret. John E. Manning, Collector for New Jersey, reported in the public press Tuesday that the Internal Revenue Bureau had instructed him that, as a general rule, any entertainment in the form of a television set makes the cabaret customer subject to a 20 per cent tax, since the show could be interpreted as a public performance for profit.

New Contracts

JACK COHN, executive vice-president of Columbia, and A. Montague, vice-president and sales manager, had their new contracts ratified by the company stockholders at a meeting Tuesday in New York. Mr. Cohn's contract, which will continue for seven years from January 1, provides for a salary of $2,500 a week and an expense allowance of $300 a week. Mr. Montague, whose seven-year contract continues from June 10, 1946, will also receive a salary of $2,500 a week. All directors and officers of the company were reelected at the meeting. Officers, in addition to those mentioned, include A. Schneider, vice-president and treasurer; N.

B. Spingold, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity; Louis J. Barbano, B. B. Kahane, Joseph A. McConville and Lester W. Roth, vice-presidents; Mortimer Wormser and Leo Jaffe, assistant treasurers; Charles Schwartz, secretary; David Fogelson and Duncan Cassell, assistant secretaries; C. B. Wikoff, comptroller.

All directors of Universal were reelected Wednesday at the annual meeting of the company's stockholders in Wilmington. They are: Robert S. Benjamin, N. J. Blumberg, Paul G. Brown, J. Cheever Cowdin, Preston Davie, Matthew Fox, William J. German, John J. O'Connor, Ottavio Prochet, Charles D. Prutzman, J. Arthur Rank, Budd Rogers, Daniel M. Sheaffer, G. I. Woodham-Smith.

Army Exit

ARMY supervision of the activities of the Motion Picture Export Association in Germany and Austria definitely will end this year, it has been learned. Since January 1 the army has relaxed its grip on the MPEA in Austria, where the association has set up its own office and will also include the Russian zone in its scope. A similar development is expected to take place in Germany within the next six months. It will get under way when MPEA agents start to operate in the British zone and British film is offered in the American zone.

Police! Police!

IN FREDERICK, Md., if you want to know what's playing at the City Opera House you call the police department. Manager Ted Crowther has been getting unusual cooperation, to say the least, from the police department. He furnishes the department with a complete schedule of shows each week to aid the police in handling traffic. Patrons started calling the police to ask: "What's playing?"

IN RECOGNITION of the cooperation given by exchange, circuit, and theatre managers, the American Brotherhood will issue to them a certificate of appreciation. This certificate will carry the signatures of the honorary chairman, President Truman, the general chairman, John G. Winant, and, for the industry, Spyros P. Skouras and J. Robert Rubin. All managers who have obtained 10 or more members and all who now plan to enroll members are urged by the Brotherhood to send in their returns to their area chairman or to Mr. Skouras.

YES OR NO OF ARBITRATION NEEDS INDUSTRY ANSWER

Exhibitors Agree on Value of System, but When and How Are Something Else

by RAY LANNING

One of the most vigorous and involved arguments to develop from the decision in the New York anti-trust suit currently centers about the question of arbitration.

When the U. S. District Court for the Southern District of New York ruled on December 31 for the liquidation of the consent decree arbitration system, the prediction was made by exhibitors and distributors alike, whether pleased or displeased with the court's order, that trouble was on the way.

The main trouble, just now boiling to the surface, is the trouble involved in deciding upon a system to settle the troubles which all interested parties gloomily insist are bound to arise.

Eight Suits Filed Since Court Issued Decree

In the midst of this confusion, there has been a renewed interest and a sudden flurry of activity in the AAA offices. No less than 11 tribunals have been activated by recent filing of suits. Eight suits have been filed since the December 31 decree.

There is general agreement among exhibitors that arbitration is necessary, but there is no general agreement on what kind of arbitration and when it should be discussed. Some favor voluntary arbitration, others believe that arbitration is impractical without court and government backing. Some want to do something about the problem now, others insist that nothing should be done until after the Supreme Court acts on the appeals from the decree.

This area of disagreement has endangered voluntary arbitration. While exhibitor leaders rage that lack of arbitration would be "one of the greatest tragedies in industry history," leading to "litigation," to "chaos," to "government control," there has not yet evolved a stable enough center of disagreement—let alone agreement—for all exhibitors to cling to.

Forum Could Have Evolved Formula

Evidence of this is seen in the recent cancellation of the exhibitor meeting which was to be held in New York this week for a discussion of a motion picture forum which might have resulted in a voluntary arbitration system. Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were for the meeting, National Allied was against it on the grounds that there was nothing to discuss until the Supreme Court acted.

ARBITRATION SCORE

Following is a complete list of the number of exhibitor-distributor disputes handled by the 31 tribunals of the American Arbitration Association since the "Rules of Arbitration and Appeals" were established in November, 1940, under the Consent Decree, to the present:

TRIBUNAL	TOTAL CASES	CLEARANCE CASES
Albany	12	11
Atlanta	3	2
Boston	73	64
Buffalo	31	24
Charlotte	4	1
Chicago	38	29
Cincinnati	16	12
Cleveland	14	11
Dallas	15	7
Denver	3	1
Des Moines	5	1
Detroit	18	13
Indianapolis	6	5
Kansas City	5	4
Los Angeles	18	17
Memphis	4	0
Milwaukee	8	5
Minneapolis	10	4
New Haven	12	10
New Orleans	20	9
New York	72	65
Oklahoma City	11	0
Omaha	4	3
Philadelphia	26	24
Pittsburgh	3	0
Portland	3	1
San Francisco	6	6
Salt Lake City	2	2
Seattle	2	1
St. Louis	21	12
	485	361

Complicating the whole situation is the insistence, in their appeals, of the five theatre-owning defendants that the New York Court erred in failing to decree that disputes should be handled by the Rules of Arbitration provided for under the 1940 Consent Decree. They are, of course, concerned over the decree's provision placing the burden of proving clearance upon the distributor and will likely take a great deal of persuading to agree to voluntary arbitration. Indeed, attorneys for the companies say voluntary arbitration would be impractical.

The Department of Justice is flatly opposed to voluntary arbitration and, differing from almost everyone else, prefers arbitration by some such government agency as the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee rather than by the 31 tribunals of the American Arbitration Association.

Under the decree, the AAA can accept new cases through March 31. Those tribunals still considering cases on that date, the date on which the dissolution order of the arbitration system takes effect, can continue until all cases have been processed and appealed.

These are the tribunals which are considering cases and liable to continue beyond the March 31 deadline: Cleveland, New Haven, Chicago, New Orleans, New York, St. Louis, Boston (the most active, with two cases before the Appeals Board), Albany, Omaha, Cincinnati and Milwaukee, which has a case before the Appeals Board.

Eight cases have been reported by the AAA since the December 31 decree.

The new cases included:

Albany: Adirondack Theatre Corporation, operating the Placid, Lake Place, a clearance complaint against the five majors.

Cincinnati: Herman Hunt and Maurice Chase, operators of the Vogue, Cincinnati, a clearance complaint against MGM. Maurice Chase, representing the Ritz, Cincinnati, a clearance complaint against MGM.

Cleveland: Idol theatre, Lodi, Ohio, a clearance complaint against Loew's. Orrville Theatres Company, operators of the Orr and Orand, a clearance complaint against the five majors.

New York: Newton Theatre Corporation, operators of the Newton, Queens, a clearance complaint against the five majors.

New Haven: Princess theatre, a clearance complaint against the five majors.

Omaha: Joyo theatre, Havelock, Nebr., a clearance complaint against the five majors.

While numerous exhibitor organizations are on record as willing to go along with other organizations in planning arbitration, tentatively and limitedly united in believing that intra-industry conferences can accomplish more than the courts, one of the first concrete suggestions for settling disputes has come from the Independent Theatre Owners of Northern California, which has stated:

"Yes, we want arbitration, but it must be voluntary and local."

The association intends to form a committee to act for its members in all disputes. The plan is this: Each dispute brought to the attention of the association will be investigated by the committee and if the member is found to be in the right, the committee will recommend arbitration and will see to it that the member's case is properly presented. The committee will appoint one arbitrator, the distributor will appoint another, and the two of them will appoint a third arbitrator.

"The arbitrators," says the association, "to be men who know our business and the territory in which the case arises. No lawyers allowed—and the arbitrators' verdict to be final."

PLAN PUBLIC FIGHT ON NEW YORK TAX

Exhibitors Set Promotion Campaign, Backed by ATA, on Dewey Scheme

Following Governor Thomas E. Dewey's recommendation to the New York State legislature that power be given cities and counties to raise an additional $111,000,000 a year through special taxes, including admissions, New York City exhibitors at mid-week were preparing a campaign to array public opinion against the legislation. The campaign would be undertaken if a meeting between exhibitor representatives and the Governor didn't materialize.

As the first step, a committee headed by J. Henry Walters of RKO Theatres, and Samuel Rosen of the Fabian circuit was seeking a conference with the Governor. If the committee fails to meet with Governor Dewey, the Metropolitan Motion Picture Association, supported by the American Theatres Association, will undertake the all-out public information program.

Would Use All Media

The campaign, if undertaken, will make use of newspapers, radio, billboards and other available media, including a special motion picture trailer, to explain to the public the inequities of the proposed tax.

Under the Governor's recommendation, the additional taxing powers to be given cities and counties consists of the right to impose a five per cent tax on admissions and sporting events, excluding race tracks, boxing and wrestling events. In addition, municipalities could tax restaurants, night clubs, liquor and automobiles.

In Washington, D. C., Tuesday the MPTO of Washington, other exhibitors and their representatives, will be permitted to present their views before the House District Committee, which is considering a proposed special admissions tax for the district. The Washington MPTO will fight passage of the tax measure while the local American Legion has announced that it will contest any type of special tax proposals until the district has adequate representation in Congress and a right to vote.

Hear Oklahoma Arguments

In Oklahoma City Tuesday a Senate legislature committee heard arguments for and against a bill to extend taxing powers of the state's municipalities. It made no recommendation. C. B. Akers, legislative charman for Oklahoma exhibitors, attended the hearing, but did not testify against it. Many other groups have already argued against it.

Exhibitors have agreed to support another measure designed to increase the state's property tax system.

In St. Louis this week exhibitors were

TREASURY TO REVIEW ADMISSIONS LEVY

The first clear-cut indication that the Treasury is prepared to review the 20 per cent Federal admission tax, along with other excise taxes, came from Washington last Friday during hearings on the appropriations for the next fiscal year before the House Appropriations Committee. Stanley S. Surrey, the Treasury's tax legislative counsel, told the committee that the Treasury is reviewing these taxes with a view to correcting any inequities found. Meanwhile, the Senate approved and sent to the White House legislation indefinitely extending the wartime excise taxes. President Truman signed the bill Tuesday, at which time the Treasury estimated that the new law would bring $500,000,000 during 1947.

preparing for another tax battle. A five per cent amusement tax designed to yield $750,000 annually was one of the four tax measures recommended last weekend by the Citizens Tax Commission to the mayor to help increase municipal revenue.

A five per cent amusement tax was first proposed last spring, but exhibitor opposition helped to kill it at that time. Citing this instance the tax commission pointed out to the mayor that after the bill had been defeated "motion picture admission charges were increased by an amount exceeding the proposed tax, thus refuting motion picture statements that the public could not absorb a five per cent increase."

"It Happened in Brooklyn" In Local World Premiere

Lauritz Melchior, Kathryn Grayson, Johnnie Johnston, Tom Drake, Harvey Stone and others, were on hand Tuesday when MGM's "It Happened in Brooklyn" had its world premiere at Loew's Metropolitan theatre in Brooklyn. Miss Grayson stars in the film with Frank Sinatra and Jimmy Durante. The opening, Brooklyn's first world premiere, was sponsored by the MGM-inspired, newly-formed First Families of Brooklyn organization whose aim it is to proclaim to the world that Brooklyn "is the garden spot of the world."

Liberty Buys Horse Story

Liberty Films has paid $100,000 for "War Knight," a story by Ethel Hill about her seven-year-old horse which won the Santa Anita Handicap in 1946. Miss Hill also will write the screenplay.

Production Cost Is Up 116% Since '39, Says Price

Since 1939, the per picture cost of production has increased 116 per cent, financial writers and editors were told in Hollywood last Tuesday by Byron Price, vice-president and board chairman of Motion Picture Association, who is leaving the industry next week for a United Nations post.

Unofficially, Mr. Price estimated that the 397 features approved last year by the Production Code Administration cost $350,000,000. He observed that the total expenditure was 38 per cent above 1939, while the number of pictures was 24 per cent less than that year. He said studio operating costs must be cut to overcome a potential drop in revenue.

It was a bright fiscal picture for 1946 that Mr. Price painted, however. He pointed out that it was the first two billion dollar box office year in the industry's history and that weekly paid admissions averaged 85,000,000. The earnings of seven major companies totaled $115,000,000 as against $63,000,000 in 1945 and $19,000,000 for 1940. A 10 per cent increase in foreign sales was cited as one reason for the rise in profits.

The 1947 prospect is somewhat different, in the opinion of Mr. Price. It is expected that the foreign market will be measurably curtailed, and revenue at home showed a decline in January. Paid admissions have dropped in the past three months, he said.

Universal And Columbia Ask Decree Stay

As experiments with the bidding provisions of the decree in the New York anti-trust suit spread to new areas and new complications this week, two companies, Universal and Columbia, sought stays of execution on those provisions.

Universal, on March 4, requested stays on the competitive bidding order, the order enjoining a distributor from "arbitrarily refusing" to license a feature to an exhibitor, and a stay on all provisions of Section II, paragraphs one to seven, insofar as they enjoin the performance of existing contracts or require the granting of rejection rights.

Appeal on Single Sales

Columbia, which was to request the Supreme Court this week for a stay on competitive bidding, was to ask, in addition, for a stay on the injunction against single sales, the order given the licensee the right to reject 20 per cent of the features not trade show prior to licensing, and the order enjoining the arbitrary refusal to license.

Universal's application asked a stay on all those provisions affecting existing contracts: fixing minimum admission, clearance agreements, performing existing franchise agreements, making or further performing formula deals or master agreements, conditioning the sale of one feature upon another.

Meanwhile bidding experiments were going on in more than 25 areas, concentrating, reported one company, in the west.

Seek Clarification

One major difficulty encountered in the experiments is that a "great many" requests for bidding are vague and generalized. Another problem is linked with the jointly-owned theatres: Must the jointly-owned theatres participate in the bidding for the partner-company's product? It is believed a Supreme Court decision on the anti-trust suit is needed before this question can be answered.

The dissolution of pooling agreements continues. The Fox West Coast Rialto, a San Francisco neighborhood, is reported going to Golden State Theatres. FWC now has four San Francisco houses, the Fox, United Nations, Warfield and El Capitan. Additionally, FWC has taken over a Reno, Nev., house from T & D Jr. Enterprises, operated by Golden State, and one Visalia and one Hanford theatre from Golden State.

Setting Up Four Selznick West Coast Offices

Milton S. Kusell, general sales manager for the Selznick Releasing Organization, arrived in Hollywood this week from New York to establish new sales offices in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver and Salt Lake City and to arrange west coast openings for Selznick's "Duel in the Sun."

PRESIDENT ATTENDS BENEFIT SCREENING OF "BEST YEARS"

Beni Newsphoto

THE PRESIDENT AT THE MOVIES: Harry S. Truman and Mrs. Truman Tuesday evening attended the motion pictures for the third time since he became President—honoring in this instance a Washington special screening of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives", at the RKO Keith's. Above, in the theatre lobby are Mrs. Harold H. Burton, wife of the Supreme Court Associate Justice; the President and Mrs. Truman, and, in the background, center, S. L. Sorkin, manager of the theatre, and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. The premiere was "an official Washington turnout" for the benefit of the Washington Committee for National Civilian Rehabilitation, of which Mrs. Truman is honorary chairman, and Mrs. Burton chairman. Among those who attended were Supreme Court Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and Mrs. Vinson; Mrs. Robert S. Patterson, wife of the Secretary of War; Senator Tom Connally; Supreme Court Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter; Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, and Mrs. Anderson; and motion picture stars Harold Russell, Ilona Massey and Richard Ney.

Buy Selectively, Wolcott Urges

The shortage of films of the past four years has given way to "plenty of pictures in a matter of days" because distributors are liquidating their backlogs, Leo F. Wolcott, chairman of the board of Allied of Iowa and Nebraska, says in a current membership bulletin.

Exhibitors are urged by Mr. Wolcott to take advantage of the situation by buying "only the best pictures" and not the "poor and unsuitable ones." This, he says, will do more than anything else to improve product quality. High flat-rental demands are rapidly replacing percentages, he notes.

He urges exhibitors to "get in on the ground floor" of the Motion Picture Foundation, which, he says, "will give for the first time a definite future to industry people."

The organization's annual convention will be held at the Fontanelle Hotel, Omaha, May 5-6. Regional meetings were to be held this week in Decorah and Osceola, Ia. At a meeting at Storm Lake, Iowa, film rentals, competitive bidding and theatre overhead were discussed.

Mr. Wolcott's bulletin urges exhibitor opposition to three bills pending in the Iowa legislature. One calls for licensing distributors at $1,000 per year, plus $1 per reel for all films brought into the state; another would create a state censor and licensing department; the third would provide inspection by the state fire marshal of places of public assembly where film is used.

Answers Are Due April 2 In Chicago Trust Suit

Defendants in the $2,650,000 treble damage anti-trust suit filed in Chicago by Middle States Corporation and the Riverside Operating Company, on behalf of the Minnesota theatre in Minneapolis and the Riverside in Milwaukee, have been given until April 2 to file answers.

Defendants are nine distributors. In addition, in the Minneapolis case, the Minnesota Amusement Co. is also named as a defendant.

New York Legislature Vetoes Sports Arena

The action of the New York State Legislature March 5 in killing a proposal to build a $20,000,000 sports arena and parking garage at New York City's Columbus Circle, was attacked by Robert Moses, chairman of the Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority. It was under this authority that the arena was to be built.

CHICAGO HOT SPOT ON BIDS; FOUR MAJORS OFFER FILM

Observers See Competitive Selling Aid in Ending Exhibitor Disputes

by HAL TATE
in Chicago

Chicago has assumed one of the top positions in the country with regards to auction bidding with four distributors, MGM, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount, already offering pictures on this basis to some 20 houses in this area, even though the actual starting date of auction bidding need not become effective till July 1st.

A survey made by the MOTION PICTURE HERALD indicates that wherever any theatre requests pictures or a run that the owner has not enjoyed heretofore, machinery is immediately put into action offering product to the parties involved. Distributors are bending backwards already in an effort to adhere to the letter in the New York decree in the anti-trust suit.

Distributors Not Working Together on Bidding

One thing is certain. The distributors are not working together on auction bidding, each company offering the feature according to the way their lawyers interpret the decree.

According to J. Harold Stevens, Chicago branch manager for Paramount, pictures are offered competing exhibitors desiring to bid on films with a minimum price tag attached to each picture.

On the other hand, Sam Gorelick, Chicago branch manager for RKO-Radio Pictures, said that no minimum price tag is put on films when offered to the competing exhibitors.

One film row distributor executive said that, according to his interpretation, once a minimum price has been placed on a picture, and any bid over that minimum figure is received, the distributor must accept the bid. He added that where no price tag is placed on the film, the distributor can reject both bids if he feels that they are not satisfactory.

To date, two circuits have been most affected by the new auction method of buying film. One is the Great States Circuit, a down-state Paramount affiliate, the other is the Manta-Rose Circuit, operating some 29 houses in Illinois and Indiana.

Independents Are Bidding Against Great States

Independent houses in at least three down-state cities are bidding against Great States on product. The Wancee theatre in Kewanee, Ill., operated by Norton & Bramlett, is bidding against the Great States' Peerless theatre. Gus Constan, operator of the Avon in Decatur is bidding against the Great States' Lincoln and Empress theatre in that city while the Kerasotes Brothers, operators of the Senate theatre, in Springfield, are bidding against the Great States' Orpheum.

In most instances, no awards have been made to date. However, in Decatur, RKO offered four pictures to the competing parties with Great States getting two and the Avon theatre getting two.

The Manta-Rose Circuit has been hit by auction bidding in two situations. In Michigan City, Ind., Lewis Philon, who reopened the remodeled Liberty theatre on February 4, has obtained films by the auction method while in Maywood, Ill., the Van Nomikos Circuit is asking to bid for its Yale theatre against the Manta & Rose Circuit's Lido theatre.

Cause of Settlement of An Anti-Trust Action

In Michigan City, the introduction of auction bidding has definitely been the cause of a settlement of an anti-trust suit filed by Mr. Philon against Manta & Rose and various distributors. Prior to opening his house, Mr. Philon had filed suit claiming that he was unable to obtain product. Through auction bidding, Mr. Philon has obtained product on a second run basis in Michigan City and is now being given the opportunity of bidding on first run by Paramount, M-G-M and Fox. As a result, an agreement settling the case out of court is now being negotiated by all parties concerned.

In another instance, in suburban Cicero, auction bidding has been the cause of settlement of a "feud" between two rival theatre operators and at the present time they are splitting the product available. The Cicero squabble involved Jim Booth's Palace theatre and the Bartelstein Circuit's Annetta theatre. Following auction bidding by MGM and RKO, the two parties have come to more or less amicable terms with Jim Booth's Annetta joining the Allied Booking and Buying Circuit. RKO, however, is still selling these two houses on the auction method.

Expect Sharp Increase In Bidding Requests

All distributors are unanimous in their conviction that the near future will see a great upsurge of bidding requests. However, one distributor said, he felt it would eventually "level off," especially after some over-zealous exhibitors found they were bidding more than what they could actually afford.

On the other hand, this same spokesman said that auction bidding in certain instances could well prove a boon to an exhibitor who might obtain some 15 or 16 pictures a year in this manner at profit both to the distributor and exhibitor.

To date the small independent exhibitors have been the loudest boosters of the auction method of bidding. Right now, they feel they at least can bid for the films—which is more than they could do before the new practice started.

To date, RKO has been most active in the Chicago area in bidding. Here is their auction bidding schedule to date:

Ten films offered the Bartelstein Circuit's Annetta and Jim Booth's Palace in Cicero. The Palace got nine, the Annetta, one. Six films have been offered both these theatres in a second group—bidding on which is going on at the present time.

Great States Gets Two And Independent Two

In Decatur, RKO offered four pictures. Great States' Lincoln and Empress got two—Gus Constan's Avon theatre obtained two pictures.

In Springfield, bidding will start with the next group of RKO pictures. Competing are Great States' Orpheum and the Kerasotes Brothers' Senata.

Lewis Philon has obtained six RKO pictures for second run for his Liberty theatre in Michigan City, while the Manta & Rose Circuit's Tivoli, Lido and Uptown in the same town have obtained none. RKO at the present has nothing available for bidding for first run in Michigan City.

In Toluca, Illinois, John Tozzie, operator of the Roxy, has obtained four RKO pictures, while Russell Hurt, operator of the Isis has obtained one.

Bidding is currently going on for RKO product between the Anderson Circuit's Wilton theatre and the Butcher Brothers' Mar theatre. Both houses are in Wilmington, Illinois.

Pictures will shortly be offered to the Revue theatre and the Meltzer Brothers' Rivoli. Both are in Chicago.

Offering Groups of Films In Competitive Situations

Seven films have been offered for auction bidding to the Morris Alshuler's Vision theatre, booked by Si Greiver, and Ben Banowitz' Harmony theatre, booked by Allied.

In Gary, Indiana, RKO is offering a group of films to the Fifth Avenue theatre, operated by Harry Abbott, and Tivoli theatre, operated by V. U. Young, head of Theatrical Enterprises.

Twentieth Century-Fox is offering groups of pictures in several competing situations. In Kewanee, Illinois, five pictures have been offered to both the Wancee theatre and the Great States' Peerless: "Razor's Edge," "13 Rue de Madeleine," "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim," "Wanted for Murder," and "Dangerous Millions."

Cancel "Cynthia" Date

MGM has cancelled the national tradeshow of "Cynthia's Secret," scheduled March 11. A new title and tradeshow date will be announced shortly.

COLUMBIA HISTORY MADE BY "JOLSON"

Picture's Record Climax of Extensive Promotion and Sales Campaign

"'The Jolson Story' is a show that can't miss. It's a special kind of picture with the widest kind of appeal." That's what MOTION PICTURE HERALD said in reviewing the Columbia film in mid-September of last year. Today this prediction has come true and the Sidney Skolsky production has surpassed all expectations at the box office and has set many records of its own.

The history of "The Jolson Story" is unusual in more than one way. From the exhibitors' point of view the Technicolor musical was top box office wherever it played, with runs extending from one and two weeks to as much as 126 days beyond the original schedule.

Proved a Point

For Columbia the success of "The Jolson Story" meant the re-affirmation of an old truth—"Give 'em good product and you can't fail." Also it was the climax of one of the most extensive advertising efforts. At the same time the film literally "made" a new star, Larry Parks, and proved once more the value of "word of mouth" advertising.

"When 'The Jolson Story' was finished we were a little worried about finding the right advertising and publicity approach," a Columbia home office spokesman said this week. "After all, most of the younger generation had not had a chance to hear or see Jolson; his songs were 'out-of-date' and Larry Parks up to then had been confined to bit parts."

Next there was the question of the famed Jolson "blackface" characterizations which, the company felt, might not be acceptable in some parts of the country. Advertising consequently took account of this fact. The first ads showed a silhouette in a typical Jolson gesture rather than a definite star. Later, when Park's popularity had become nationwide, his face was inserted.

Issued Two Pressbooks

To help the exhibitor get the most out of the promotional possibilities of "The Jolson Story," Columbia took the unusual step of issuing two pressbooks. Volume I told the facts about the film. Volume II contained material assembled after the picture had opened. The books were sent out together. All advertising was pre-tested during the summer of 1946. The initial phases of the distribution plan were announced in full-page trade press ads.

The national ad campaign got under way November 15 and ran through January 1. It took in such widely-read magazines as the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies Home Journal, Life, Look and Colliers. In some cities papers carried three-color ads during the week—another "first" established by "The Jolson Story." Radio spots and the sale of records played an important part in making the public Jolson conscious. Decca Records, which brought out an album of Jolson records, reports the biggest sale in its history and its officials say that, up to now, the supply has not kept up with the demand. As the picture opened, "Jolson weeks" were promoted all over the nation.

Publicity concentration too, was intensive both before the release of the film and through the early playdates. National magazines, newspaper supplements and the local press were all enlisted in creating a desire to see the film.

Eight Weeks at Music Hall

The picture opened October 10 at the Radio City Music Hall in New York and stayed eight weeks. Soon after that it opened day and date at the United Artists, Esquire and Tivoli theatres in San Francisco, at the Roxy in Oakland, the Palace, Cincinnati; the Lafayette, Buffalo, and the Hillstreet and Pantages, Los Angeles.

The result was extended runs which set house records. According to home office figures, as of March 3, the picture was still going strong at Oakland and in San Francisco, 126 days after the originally scheduled seven-day runs. In Detroit it had played 63 extra days; in San Diego, 49; Long Beach, 56; Toledo, 28; Providence, 35; Springfield, 48; Brooklyn, 35; Los Angeles, 82; Oklahoma City, 23, and Chicago, 70. Loew's circuit in New York, for the first time in their history, booked the picture for nine days into their de luxe theatres and later reported that it had broken many records.

Exhibitor reaction to "The Jolson Story" was exemplified by V. C. Weschler of the Colonial theatre in Erie, Pennsylvan, who, in a letter to Columbia, said: "We have just completed the run of 'The Jolson Story' with such amazing results that it seems a fictitious happening. It is like waking up after a magnificent Technicolor dream, wishing it were true; only in this case it is."

"Jolson Story" Sets Seattle Record

Ending its eleventh week March 7 at the Liberty theatre, Seattle, Columbia's "The Jolson Story," has set an all-time box office record for Seattle. According to Clinton Wineholt, Liberty manager, the picture has played to approximately 240,000 patrons, or nearly half the entire population of Seattle. Leroy V. Johnson, general manager of Jensen and Von Herberg Theatres, reports that no feature has displayed the staying quality of "The Jolson Story." The musical has grossed a weekly average of $13,000.

British Theatres Open Full Time As Crisis Ends

by PETER BURNUP
in London

All theatres resumed full-time operations here Monday. The openings were brought about as a result of continuous and excellent work by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, which led the all-industry deputation to the Board of Trade and brought to the attention of officials the real facts of the industry's relation to the coal crisis.

In permitting the theatres to reopen, the Government stipulated that the houses must save one-third of the electric power which they consumed prior to the coal crisis. Exhibitors have agreed to cut all auxiliary lighting and concentrate power on projection.

By common consent, Fred A. Prior and W. R. Fuller, CEA president and secretary, respectively, have shown consummate strength throughout the crisis. Without them and their colleagues on the CEA executive board, it is generally agreed, Britain's film industry might well have floundered into a worse morass than that in which it found itself.

The outlook here is still pretty bleak. Studios and laboratories, in common with other factories in the London area, have been permitted to switch on their electric power, but that dispensation is not of much avail to the Eastman Kodak plant, makers of up to 80 per cent of the raw stock consumed this side.

Outstanding circumstance in the fuel emergency palaver has been the fashion in which the independent exhibitor, through the agency of his CEA, has asserted himself as the ultimate arbiter of motion picture business. As head of that organization, Mr. Prior has had ecomiums lavished on him by all sections of the industry.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Six Pictures Started as Three Are Finished; Shooting Index at 41

Hollywood Bureau

Production in Hollywood continued to climb last week, as six new films went into work, and three others were completed. By the week's end, the shooting index had reached 41, compared with the previous 38.

Robert Young, Robert Mitchum and Robert Ryan have been selected by producer Adrian Scott to co-star in "Crossfire," described as a drama of racial intolerance. Gloria Grahame and Jacqueline White have leading feminine roles. Edward Dmytryk is directing from John Paxton's adaptation of the Richard Brooks novel, "The Brick Foxhole."

At MGM, work began on "Good News," a film version of the musical hit of the '20s. It will feature, among other nostalgic numbers, "Lucky in Love," "The Best Things in Life Are Free" and "Varsity Drag." Gene Kelly and Judy Garland share stellar honors; Arthur Freed produces; Vincente Minnelli directs.

Eagle-Lion Picture Back in Studio for Final Scenes

"The Red Stallion," which has been shooting on location in the High Sierras, returned to Eagle-Lion Studios for final scenes which Crane Wilbur will direct, since Lesley Selander is now busy at Republic. Bryan Foy is the producer, and the cast includes Noreen Nash, Ted Donaldson, Jane Darwell, Robert Paige and Guy Kibbee.

Selander, meanwhile, has undertaken direction of "Saddle Pals," Gene Autry's latest for Republic. Sidney Picker is the producer; Sterling Holloway and Lynne Roberts are in top supporting roles.

Columbia launched an action musical titled "Swing the Western Way," with Jack Leonard and Mary Dugan heading the cast. Colbert Clark produces; Derwin Abrahams directs.

Monogram's new venture is "The Law Comes to Gunsight," a Western starring Johnny Mack Brown with Raymond Hatton and Reno Blair. Barney Sarecky is producing, Lambert Hillyer directing.

Incidental News of Pictures and People

RKO Radio has acquired from Hal Wallis Productions the screen rights to "The White Swamp," as well as the services of Elizabeth Scott and Burt Lancaster as co-stars, of director Byron Haskin and cameraman Leo Tovar. Bert Granet will produce the picture, a melodrama dealing with the recovery of gold lost in the Bahama Islands. . . . Charles F. Reisner, for many years under contract to MGM, has joined Eagle-Lion as a producer. His first assignment there will be "Corkscrew Alley," planned as a vehicle for Broadway actor Richard Basehart.

Michael Curtiz Acquires Two Story Properties

Two recent story acquisitions by Michael Curtiz Productions are "Sugarfoot," by Clarence Budington Kelland, and "Shadow of Fear," an original by Frances Marion. The latter, a period melodrama laid in the California wine country, will be directed by Curtiz for release through Warners. "Sugarfoot" is a Western, and will be filmed in Technicolor. . . . George Archainbaud has been engaged by William Boyd and Lewis J. Rachmil to direct a series of seven "Hop-along Cassidy" Westerns scheduled for production this year.

Walter Wanger has arranged to borrow Robert Cummings from United California Productions to co-star with Susan Hayward in "The Lost Love," Wanger's next production for Universal-International. Joan Loring is set for a featured role. . . . William Dieterle will direct David O. Selznick's production of "Rupert of Hentzau," for which Valli, Louis Jourdan and Joseph Cotten have been signed.

Argosy Plans Five Films Starring Amendariz

Phil Karlson will direct "Kilroy Was Here," Monogram film to star Jackie Coogan and Jackie Cooper. . . . Mexican star Pedro Armendariz, who was born in San Antonio and speaks perfect English, will be starred in five films by Argosy Pictures, new producing company headed by John Ford and Merian C. Cooper. . . . Jack Schwarz plans to produce "Western Barn Dance" for Screen Guild release, and has signed B. B. Ray to direct it.

Universal-International has signed Robert Montgomery to a three-way contract as producer, director and actor. He will head his own production unit. . . . Irene Dunne and Barbara Bel Geddes will co-star, and Oscar Homolka will have a featured role in "I Remember Mama," RKO's film version of the Broadway play which, in turn, is based on Kathryn Forbes' novel, "Mama's Bank Account." Harriet Parsons is to produce.

Walter Lantz has signed a five-year contract with United Artists, under the terms of which he will release 11 cartoons annually through that company, and possibly more when Technicolor facilities become available. Lantz will continue to use the same characters made famous in his Universal cartoons during the past 20 years. . . . Diana Lynn will share with Betty Hutton the title roles in Paramount's "The Sainted Sisters," which Mitchell Leisen will direct for producer Val Lewton.

Warners Buy Rights to "John Loves Mary"

Warners has purchased the film rights to Norman Krasna's current Broadway hit, "John Loves Mary," and assigned it to Jerry Wald for production. . . . Victor McLaglen has returned to 20th Century-Fox for a top role in "The Foxes of Harrow," his first assignment at that studio in five years. . . . Franchot Tone, Janet Blair, Janis Carter and Adele Jergens are set for leading parts in "Double Take," S. Sylvan Simon's next producer-director assignment at Columbia.

Actors' Guild Resignations Precede New Pact Talks

Seven executives of the Screen Actors Guild with financial interests in pictures have resigned to pave the way for contract renewal negotiations with the producers. The group's 10-year contract with the producers, negotiated in 1937 by Robert Montgomery, then serving his third term as president, expires May 15. Those resigned included Mr. Montgomery, president; Franchot Tone, first vice-president; Dick Powell, second vice-president, and board members James Cagney, John Garfield, Harpo Marx and Dennis O'Keefe. The Guild board accepted their resignations and named Ronald Reagan president. Gene Kelly became first vice-president, William Holden second vice-president and George Murphy third vice-president.

Producers Honor Price At Farewell Dinner

The Independent Motion Picture Producers Association gave a farewell dinner last Wednesday evening to Byron Price, board chairman of the organization, who was to leave Hollywood for New York this weekend to assume his new duties as assistant secretary general of the United Nations. Speakers at the dinner were I. E. Chadwick, president of the IMPPA; Donald Nelson, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, and Jean Hersholt, Joseph I. Breen, Samuel Broidy and others. Mr. Price spoke on "Freedom of the Movies."

Pioneers Group Marquee Asset

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

If you're not billing the Sons of the Pioneers when they're in a picture, you're neglecting one of the few opportunities a showman gets to bring the elder generation of customers to the box office. And if you are billing them every time they come along in a Roy Rogers picture you're not risking the ire of that Number One Western star, because he was a Son of the Pioneers himself in the beginning and still is in spirit and professional association. If you're billing both, of course, you're getting the whole family into the theatre.

The special appeal of the Sons of the Pioneers for folks of middle age and upwards—about 50 per cent of their fan mail comes from people over 45—traces to their policy of digging up old songs, of both the prairie and the folk variety, for use on the radio, where the boys work out once weekly on a national commercially sponsored original broadcast and five times weekly via transcriptions, and in their pictures.

Some 85 radio stations carry their transcriptions, with local sponsors, and the dimensions of this phase of the Sons of the Pioneers activities are such that the young men operate their own company, Pioneer Radio Productions, to keep this outlet supplied. They also formed, six months ago, the Tim Spencer Music Company, to publish their own songs, of which they have written no less than 450 since founding their organization in 1932. "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" and "Cool Waters" are among the top hits, already recognized as American folk classics, in their list of successes.

Popularity Grew Steadily

In that year, which you needn't be an olderster to remember as the one in which this nation's and the world's economy hit an all time low, Roy Rogers, Bob Nolan and Tim Spencer were three members of a group singing over Hollywood's radio station KFWB for general manager Jerry King,

PREVIEW OF TRADE SHOW

A FOUR-WAY conversation may seem at little involved but Robert Hutton, Martha Vickers, Janis Paige and Jack Carson seem to be getting along all right in Warner Brothers' "Love and Learn" which will be tradeshown March 24. William Jacobs produced; Frederick de Cordova directed.

who encouraged them to make transcriptions of their strictly localized broadcasts and send them around the country. They caught on so well that a sponsor bobbed up prepared to buy the three away from the group and start a commercial program. From that point forward their air popularity grew steadily.

The next step was to crash pictures, specifically Western pictures, which were in the doldrums at the time, and they started with Columbia, working for that studio three years, during which time the then revolutionary idea of throwing songs into shoot-'em-ups became standard practice. Some while later, Roy Rogers got off on his meteoric starring career, and the Sons of the Pioneers went along with him.

Between the start of their Columbia contract and now they have appeared in 71 pictures, 28 for that studio, 36 for Republic, four for Warner Brothers—in one of which they started Cole Porter's "Don't Fence Me In" on its way to the Hit Parade—and three for other studios. And between those points in time the production of Westerns has undergone change. Says Mr. Spencer, answering the several questions reflected in the foregoing. "We used to do a Western in 12 days. Our last one took 58. But the essential appeal of the Western is still the same. They like to see riding and action, in the period of the West and without phony elements introduced. The kids and youngsters come to see Roy—as long as there are kids there'll be Western fans—and the oldsters come not only to see him and follow the story but also to hear the kind of music we give them, music that reminds them of the time when they were young."

Which brings this account back to that observation in the first paragraph.

★ THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ★

TO ALL WHO SHALL SEE THESE PRESENTS, GREETING:

THIS IS TO CERTIFY THAT THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE ORDER ISSUED BY GENERAL
GEORGE WASHINGTON AT HEADQUARTERS, NEWBURGH,
NEW YORK, ON AUGUST 7, 1782, AND PURSUANT TO ACT OF CONGRESS, HAS AWARDED THE MEDAL

FOR MERIT

FOR EXTRAORDINARY FIDELITY AND EXCEPTIONALLY MERITORIOUS CONDUCT

GIVEN UNDER MY HAND IN THE CITY OF WASHINGTON
THIS EIGHTEENTH DAY OF DECEMBER 1946

SECRETARY OF STATE

COMMANDER IN CHIEF

JACK L. WARNER, vice-president and executive producer of Warner Brothers, was scheduled to receive the Medal for Merit from General of the Army H. H. Arnold at a special ceremony at March Field, Riverside, Cal., Friday, March 14.

The official presentation ceremony, to begin at two o'clock in the afternoon, was to include the formation of troops who would witness the event with high ranking army and air force officers, Government officials and representatives of the motion picture industry, and an address by General Arnold commending Mr. Warner for his outstanding services during the war years. Following General Arnold's talk the citation was to be read and the presentation of the Medal for Merit made to Mr. Warner by General Arnold.

Accompanying the medal was a citation, the text of which follows.

THE CITATION:

JACK L. WARNER, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services to the United States from September, 1939, to April, 1942, and from November, 1942, to September, 1945. Mr. Warner, through his thirty years of experience and background in the motion picture industry, impelled by the finest patriotic motives, and on his own initiative, pointed out to the armed services of the United States the use which could be made of motion pictures in the effective prosecution of the war. He provided producers, directors, technicians and executives from the industry, indoctrinated them in the needs of the armed services, and established the first Motion Picture Unit of the Air Forces, himself. In addition to providing the full use of motion pictures for combat purposes, he produced more than one hundred films for the recruitment of personnel, the training of officers and men, and the education of the public in various phases of the war effort. He enabled the armed services to accelerate procurement of personnel and training of men already in the service at a time when mobilization was at a critical stage, and the tremendous conversion of a civilian population into an armed force was being attempted. This contribution was an immeasurable one, and was possible only because of his profound insight into the needs of the services and his vast knowledge of the potentialities of the motion picture as a medium. He put at the disposal of the United States forces in the overseas theatres thousands of prints of feature motion pictures for entertainment purposes, which contributed substantially to the morale of the men. Throughout his entire relationship with the armed services, his sole thought was the role the motion picture could play in making possible the defeat of the enemy. He contributed vast sums of money and enabled the armed services to conserve great amounts of money in this part of their program. But, distinct from any financial consideration, the energy and knowledge he provided, unselfishly and unsparingly, were on a level with that of only a few civilians in the business and industrial worlds during the course of the war. Mr. Warner's conduct and achievements, his devotion to the cause of his country, and his complete disregard of personal gain reflect the highest credit upon himself, the Government and the people of the United States.

industry, was taken when a common pleas judge, several local attorneys and other parties interested in the injunction suit filed by 63 residents of nearby Glendale against Theatre Enterprises, Inc., to prevent the opening of a drive-in theatre in the vicinity, went to Dayton, Ohio, at the suggestion of Lucien Strauss, one of the attorneys. Purpose of the visit was to get first-hand information on the type of patronage a drive-in theatre attracts, as well as other pertinent data to help decide the case. . . . The Cincinnati Variety Club, Tent No. 3, will hold "A Night in Miami" entertainment in the club's quarters on March 15. . . . Virgil Moore, manager of the Karolyn theatre, at New London, Ohio, has resigned. Charles Meyer has been named Mr. Moore's successor and will now manage the theatre.

CLEVELAND

First run theatre business is getting spotty. Instead of the high level of attendance during the past few years, the big pictures get the big play and the rest taper off. . . . Return of stage shows at the RKO Palace is quite definitely what the public does want. The King Cole Trio heading, a vaudeville bill, with "San Quentin" on the screen attracted a long box office line hours before opening time. The line held all day. . . . "The Best Years of Our Lives" will play away from the usual first run situation. Goldwyn Productions has leased the Lower Mall, a downtown house which recently played "Henry V" for seven weeks, and the uptown University theatre, both owned by Community Circuit, and will present the picture on a continuous policy. Opening date for the simultaneous bookings is April 4. . . . It's nip and tuck whether Cleveland will hold to central standard time this summer or advance the clocks one hour to get into the eastern standard time zone. City Council committee voted in favor of slow time. Exception was taken, however, by several organization favoring fast time. So the whole question is thrown wide open for concil hearings next Wednesday. . . . PRC and Eagle-Lion held a district meeting here over the week-end with James Hendel, PRC district manager and William S. Shartin, E-L district manager, in charge of product and policy discussions. . . . Drive-in opening time is approaching. Ready for April 5 openings are the Lorian Drive-In, the Maumee Drive-In, and the Gloria Drive-In at Lima. Cleveland's two Drive-Ins, the East Side and the West Side, have an April 12 opening date while the Lima Drive-In will open April 19. . . . Fire starting on the roof of the State theatre, Uhrichsville, caused serious damage. Although remodeling and redecorating of the house has been completed only about a month, the whole theatre will have to be redecorated.

COLUMBUS

Four first run features in as many downtown houses opened simultaneously, something of a rare occurrence. Fair to good business greeted the four, "The Beginning or The End" came into the Ohio to nearly a capacity house. "13 Rue Madeleine" has the box office potency of James Cagney with "Swell Guy" doing fair at the Grand and ditto for the Broad's showing of "The Chase". . . . Leo Haenlein, boss of Zoo Park and longtime member of the Variety Club, Tent No. 2, was named "Swell Guy" by his brother barkers in connection with the Grand's showing of "Swell Guy". . . . Frank M. Ross, 66, stage manager of the Palace since its opening in 1926, died after a short illness. . . . Henry Bieberson, one of the original directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, dropped in to visit P. J. Wood during a local visit from his Delaware home. . . . Definite convention dates for the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio are July 13-16 at the Breakers, Cedar Point, P. J. Wood announced.

"SWELL GUY". That's what Leo Haenlein, right, owner of Zoo Park, Columbus, Ohio, and a long-time member of the city's Variety Club, was nominated the other day. The nomination was by his fellow barkers of Tent Two, and in connection (of course) with the opening of Universal's "Swell Guy" at the RKO Grand. Mr. Haenlein is shown above at the Variety ceremonies with Jack Needham, left, Twentieth Century-Fox salesman, and William Corley, station WBNS announcer.

DES MOINES

A premiere of "The Beginning or the End" was held at the Paramount March 6 with Iowa's governor and other state officials present. . . . For the first time, motion pictures are being shown on Sunday in Shelby, Iowa. A town ordinance forbidding them has been replaced. . . . A 40,000 house, to be known as the Swan, is under construction at Mediapolis. Owners are Mrs. Lillie Johnson and I. R. Clesne. . . . Marcus Theatres of Wisconsin, operators of 18 houses in that state, have leased the Casino and Odeon theatres at Marshalltown and plan extensive alterations. . . . A bill to provide for state censorship of all motion pictures and of all posters, banners and other advertising in connection with the showing of films in Iowa was introduced into the House by Harvey Long (Rep., Clinton). Long is the author of another bill to impose a $1,000 license fee on all picture distributors.

HARTFORD

Holdovers included Paramount's "California," second week at the M & P Allyn; Columbia's "Dead Reckoning," a second week at the E. M. Loew's; and Warners' "Nora Prentiss," fortnight at the Warner Strand. . . . "Henry V" has been booked for March 27-28-29 at Bushnell Memorial. . . . Certificates of organization have been filed here for the following corporations: Associated Film Libraries, Inc., Hartford; Montrose Theatre Corporation, Waterbury. . . . Visiting Hartford: Norman Rolfe, formerly manager of the Webb Playhouse, Wethersfield, Conn., now a district manager in Maine for Lockwood & Gordon Theatres; Art Holmes, Plainfield theatre, Plainfield, Conn.; Don Avalon, president, Olympic Motion Picture Corp. . . . Local 84, IATSE, here in Hartford, has re-elected officers as follows: Charlie Obert, president; John Sullivan, vice-president; Harry Sweet, secretary; Rube Lewis, business manager; Lew Mello, treasurer; and Jack Terry, George Richardson, Dan Debonee, trustees. Harry Matarese has been elected sergeant-at-arms.

INDIANAPOLIS

Film business here just now is lacking in sensations, but shows some pretty respectable grosses. "Song of the South" took a hefty $16,000 at the Indiana and went to the Lyric for a second week. "Lady in the Lake" clicked for $15,000 at Loew's. . . . While it allowed a bill calling for a five-man censorship board in every county to die in committee, the Indiana House of Representatives passed a resolution calling for voluntary censorship by theatres, radio stations and newspapers. . . . Bill Sobel, field representative for Midwest Drive-In, announced the local drive-in will be opened April 11. . . . Lisle Kriekbaum, Rochester; Abe Kaufman and J. B. Stines, Terre Haute; Bill Studebaker, Logansport; Sam and Harry Switow, Louisville; Claude Flater, Spencer; Walter Easley, Greensburg and Alex Kalafat, Garrett, attended the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana board meeting here Tuesday.

KANSAS CITY

Heavy snow slowed theatre attendance for several days in the area, but at that some theatres report that crowds waited in the snow at box offices to get tickets. . . . Vending of candy has been stepped up by a good many independents and circuits. . . . Children's patronage has not returned to normal after the polio scare of last summer and fall so exhibitors are making a special effort to attract them to their theatres, principally by special children's matinees. . . . Paul Oetting, owner of the Lyric, Concordia, Mo., is expecting soon to start building a new house. . . . Ernest Clark has sold the Fox, Barnes, Kans., to George Lederer who owns the Joanne at Linn, Kans. . . . Virgil Green is planning the remodeling of his Green theatre at La Plata, Mo. . . . The "Brotherhood" campaign in the Kansas City area had generally complete cooperation from exhibitors and in many cases rather unexpectedly large results. . . . Film Classics has moved its office from West Eighteenth Street to the Rube Melcher building.

LOUISVILLE

Zoning changes to permit construction of a drive-in theatre in Louisville by Louis A. Arrus have been approved by the City-County Planning and Zoning Commission. . . . Charles Bowles has announced his new theatre in Beattyville, Ky., the Ritz, will be completed and opened around April 1. . . . The Oak theatre is being redecorated, according to William Reese, manager, as is the Scoop, managed by William Clowes. Clowes has booked "Henry V" into this theatre to be followed by "Brief Encounter" . . . Prior to the Louisville showing of "The Beginning or the End" Lowe's staged an informal discussion on the atom bomb from the stage of the theatre. The discussion was broadcast.

MEMPHIS

Memphians kept first run box offices busy with lively theatre attendance. Ritz reported all attendance records being smashed with the Italian picture, "Open City." Loew's Palace had better than average attendance with "The Beginning or the End." Loew's State, with "Lady Luck," had no complaint. Malco was so pleased with results that "The Jolson Story" was held over a second week. Warner was pleased with "Nora Prentiss." . . . Mid-south exhibitors shopping on Film Row in Memphis included: Grady Green, Union, Grenada, Miss.; Don Landers, Radio, Harrisburg, Ark.; A. N. Rossie, Roxy, Clarksdale, Miss.; Grady Cook, Joy, Pontotoc, Miss.; B. F. Jackson, Delta, Ruleville, Miss.; C. G. Collier, Globe, Shaw, Miss.; W. T. Ellis, Ellis, Cleveland, Miss.; and J. H. Moore, Ritz, Crenshaw, Miss.

"Prisoner of Zenda" is playing at the Royal and Variety theatres and drawing crowds. . . . "The Best Years of Our Lives" enters its eighth week at the Colony and will open at the Royal as soon as the Colony showing is over. . . . J. Victor Wilson suffered a heart attack and is no longer at the Variety theatre. Cecil Tuggle will replace him. . . . Hardy Alexander is the new executive secretary to Al Weiss, manager of the Olympia. . . . The Claughton circuit plans to enlarge. A twin theatre will be built next door to the Royal and will show first run pictures. The Canal theatre will be built in Hialeah, the Star theatre in Miami and the circuit has placed 12 offers for theatres throughout the state. Before the end of the year, the circuit hopes to have 25 houses.

MINNEAPOLIS

"Henry V", playing at the Lyceum, semi-legitimate house, grabbed the gross honors for the week with $20,000 for the first half of a two-week stand. "The Jolson Story" (third week) and "California" (second week) topped other loop theatres which failed to show a first run picture. . . . Minneapolis independent exhibitors showed a remarkable lack of interest in fighting the City Council plan to boost theatre license fees. Only five of 24 exhibitors attended a meeting called to map opposition to the increase. . . . Bloomington township, Minneapolis suburb, has approved a drive-in theatre to accommodate about 1,000 cars. Industrial Products, Inc., of St. Paul, was the applicant. . . . George Granstrom, member of a group which purchased the World and Alvin theatres from the W. A. Steffes estate, also has purchased the Steffes lodge in northern Minnesota. . . . Lee Ross is remodeling the Rapids, Sauk Rapids, Minn.

U. S. FIRMS ACCEPT ITALIAN PROGRAM

by ARGEO SANTUCCI
in Rome

American producer and distributor representatives last Friday in Rome accepted a six-point conditional program governing imports for the rest of 1947. The program, advanced by the Government, had been in discussion for almost a month. A revised program will be drawn up for 1948.

Provisions of the 1947 agreement include:
Importing countries are to grant Italy reciprocal treatment.

Proceeds from all imported features must be placed in a non-transferable lira account at a bank authorized to deal in foreign exchange selected by the importer.

Foreign companies producing in Italy must use Italian studio facilities and participate in Italian production up to 50 per cent. Proceeds from such pictures will be shared proportionately. Funds must also be applied to the construction and rental of theatres.

Foreign companies may dispose of accumulated foreign exchange by exporting films produced in Italy in partnership.

Permission for importing must be obtained from the Minister of Foreign Trade.

The program is conditional for 1947 and will be revised for 1948.

Four new theatres will open in Rome within the next few months. The capacity of the houses will range from 1,200 to 3,000 seats.

Rumors are much in evidence here that MGM will open a big modern theatre in Via Nazionale, which is possibly the most crowded street in Rome. The theatre, it is reported, will be established in the Palace of the Art Exhibition. It could have a capacity of 4,000 seats.

A new theatre, the theatre of Masques, opened February 21 in Rome in the former clubroom belonging to employees of the Treasury Department.

BELGIUM

by LOUIS QUIEVREUX
in Brussels

Because Belgium exhibitors are now obtaining their films on a percentage rather than a flat rental system, the cry has been raised that many cinemas are now losing money. In a roundabout way the Germans are responsible for this.

Before 1940 exhibitors obtained their films on a flat fee basis. If the feature turned out to be a hit, it meant a boom for the theatre-owner. When the Germans occupied Belgium, they imposed a new system, that of percentage, varying according to the film. The return of liberty did not mean a return to flat rentals. On the contrary, today the percentages go as high as 55 and 70 per cent.

On behalf of eight American companies, the Motion Picture Association has accepted an invitation to participate in the Brussels World Film Festival to be held June 1-30. The acceptance was made on behalf of United Artists, Columbia, MGM, Paramount, RKO, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers. A committee of three has been formed in the States to publicize the festival.

SOUTH AFRICA

by R. N. BARRETT
in Johannesburg

Private film societies to further interest in motion pictures and to study the sociological aspects of the film are gaining ground here. Starting in Cape Town, the movement has spread to Johannesburg, where monthly showings of old features or features with educational interest are held.

All motion picture negatives of the Royal Tour of South Africa by the King and Queen of England are being handled by African Film Productions, Ltd., for newsreels all over the world. About 100,000 feet of film will pass through the company's processing machines during the 10 weeks of the tour, and a total footage of 250,000 feet will be processed.

MEXICO

Producers see more union trouble here because of the start of feature production by the National Cinematographic Industry Workers Union at their studios at Cuernavaca. That union's rival, the Picture Production Workers Union, charges that Cinematographic, by entering into such work, is disobeying the edict of ex-President Camacho, who ordered Cinematographic to confine itself to newsreels and shorts and to leave features to the Picture Production Workers. The union is said to be financing the feature by collecting a day's wages from each union member.

The theatre circuit in Monterrey once owned by the Rodriguez brothers has been purchased from them by a syndicate headed by Manuel Espinosa Iglesias.

A cooperative production society has been organized by Jorge Negrete, Mexico's leading romantic actor; Alex Phillips, the Canadian cameraman working in Mexico; Manuel Espinosa, Jean Angelo, Felipe Montoya and Enrique Gouce. The cooperative claims a number of first rate players and technicians.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

by JOSEPH B. KANTUREK
in Prague

Louis Kanturek, European supervisor for the Motion Picture Export Association, left Prague February 26 for an inspection tour of the Balkans. His itinerary includes Vienna, Budapest, Bucharest and Sofia. He will also go to Belgrade to work on a deal with the Yugoslav film monopoly.

Newsreel theatres have been established in the larger cities of the country. Some of the regulation theatres are now devoting half their playing time to newsreels, the other half to features.

The export branch of the Czech monopoly reports good results in exporting new product. Lately the monopoly sold several features to an importer in the U. S., and other product has been sold to Russia, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece, Poland and Palestine.

Recent MPEA releases in the country include: "Remember the Day," "Holy Matrimony," "You Were Never Lovelier," "Hold Back the Dawn," "Guadalcanal," "I Married a Witch" and "Reap the Wild Wind."

PALESTINE

by IBRAHIM ZEIN
in Jaffa

The independent motion picture importers, distributors and dealers in Palestine are planning to organize an association for mutual aid.

Aptekman Pictures, the first and only Egyptian company to set up an agency in Tel-Aviv, has purchased the rights to five French pictures which it will dub in Arabic.

The Russians are turning now to the Oriental market and are beginning to dub some of their product in Arabic. They have recently released here their "The First of May," a six-reel documentary in color.

Remittances from France On Films Are Approved

Remittances for more than 100 American features brought into France before July 1, 1946, by the Psychological Warfare Department of the Army and the old Office of War Information, and not released before that date, may now be made due to the "legalization" of those imports the latter part of February. These features may now receive dubbing permits. These features had posed a serious problem for the distributors since all proceeds from their release would have been blocked unless they were recognized as legal imports.

Connection with Browne or Bioff Denied by Walsh

Any connection between William Bioff or George Browne and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees was denied emphatically Tuesday in New York, when Richard F. Walsh, president of the union, said that if either of the two men showed up at an IA office, "he would be put out." Mr. Walsh further said if anyone could prove a connection between him and Mr. Bioff and Mr. Browne, he would immediately resign.

In reference to proposed legislation to outlaw jurisdictional disputes of the kind that has plagued Hollywood for the past two years, Mr. Walsh said flatly that he was in favor of such measures, "providing they are workable." He said that striking Building Service employees, number about 1,500, had been ordered back to their jobs and predicted that the Electrical Workers also would return soon.

This was in line with a statement from Dan Tracy, International president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who said in Washington this week that settlement of the dispute between his union and the Conference of Studio Unions on the coast could be expected within two or three weeks.

Mr. Walsh disclosed a telegram he had sent to the House Labor Committee, urging the group to complete its investigation of the coast dispute and make known the facts. The telegram was sent in reference to testimony given before the committee by Oscar Schatte, the head of carpenters at an independent studio. Mr. Schatte had said that he was testifying at the risk of his life and position.

Mr. Walsh also said that Mr. Schatte had filed a suit for declaratory judgment in the Southern California District Court, seeking to set aside the agreement between the carpenters and IATSE. The court refused to act on the ground that it had no jurisdiction in the matter.

The jurisdictional Hollywood dispute, which has been going on since October, 1944, has cost everyone involved about $50,000,000, Mr. Walsh said. About 3,000 workers, belonging to the carpenters and painters unions, still are out on strike, but chances for their return to work are slim.

Manitoba Exhibitor Unit Will Meet March 31

The first annual meeting and banquet of the Manitoba Motion Picture Exhibitors Association will be held at the Royal Alexandra Hotel, Winnipeg, March 31. During the past year the Association was reorganized and for the first time country and city exhibitors of the Province worked together in one compact body. Many out-of-town exhibitors are expected to attend.

House Committee To Study Coast Strike

Congressional interest in the Hollywood labor situation continued this week with indications pointing to a revision of the Wagner Act to include a ban on jurisdictional strikes. Fred A. Hartley, Jr., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, is considering a special investigation of the Hollywood jurisdictional dispute and has appointed Congressman Richard Nixon of California to study the situation on the spot.

In Chicago, David Benzor, Milwaukee attorney and negotiator for the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesman, said the companies had been asked to bargain with his film salesmen's organization. The Colosseum, unaffiliated, is said to include 13 film salesmen's groups numbering about 500. Arthur M. Van Dyke, sales manager of 20th-Fox in Chicago, elected national president of the Colosseum December 1, said an executive group composed of 14 men from all sections would handle strategy.

A strike by the Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, local 702, IATSE, in New York, against 18 eastern film laboratories was averted Tuesday through the appointment of James J. Brennan, IA vice-president, to continue bargaining attempts.

Trans-Lux Has Mexican House

As part of its expansion program, the Trans-Lux Theatre Corporation will open its new Prado theatre in Mexico City March 27, with the foreign premiere of RKO-Liberty Picture's "It's a Wonderful Life," it was announced in New York Tuesday by Norman W. Elson, vice-president.

The Prado, seating 950, was built by the Mexican Government as part of the Prado Hotel, under construction for 10 years. The theatre has RCA equipment and uses the Trans-Lux rear projection system. Trans-Lux has a 10-year lease.

The policy of the theatre, Mr. Elson said, will be to play exclusively first run American films with Spanish subtitles unless the Mexican Government eventually decrees that part of the playing time must be devoted to local product.

Mr. Elson also announced that Trans-Lux plans to take over two other theatres in Mexico City and has purchased a site for a third.

In this country, Trans-Lux is awaiting approval of a 1,700-seat house in Washington, D. C., plus a 12-story office building. Another theatre will be erected on Madison Avenue in New York, devoted to feature pictures.

W. E. Votes Dividend

The board of directors of Western Electric Company Tuesday declared a dividend of 75 cents per share on its common stock. The dividend is payable March 31, 1947, to stockholders of record March 25, 1947.

Greek Patrons Want Good Films: S. D. Skouras

Hollywood Bureau

Audiences in Greece, like audiences anywhere else in the world, want good pictures, according to Spyros D. Skouras, president and general manager of the D. P. Skouras circuit, which operates 45 leading theatres in Greece.

"Immediately after the end of the war," Mr. Skouras told newsmen at a press conference in Hollywood last week, "war pictures were popular, because the public, deprived for many years of accurate information, wanted to know what had been going on in other occupied countries. Now that the desire for information has been satisfied, there remains a craving for entertainment. The Greek people, who have suffered untold hardships, want to blot out—for a few hours at least—the memories of the past, and the uncertainties of the future. They demand distraction, and they'll pay for it, even if it means doing without some of the necessities of life."

Theatre Ticket a Good Buy

The current admission price in Athens, where the chief Skouras theatres are located, is 25000 drachmas, the exhibitor said, or roughly 20 cents. Because of inflation, as well as the fact that nearly all commodities are available only on the black market, a theatre ticket represents as good a buy today as can be found in war-ravaged Greece.

Queried as to possible competition from other film-producing countries, Mr. Skouras said, "as long as American producers maintain their present high standards of quality, they need fear no competition."

Cites Cooperation

"Another reason why American films command preferred playing time is the close cooperation and good will that has always existed between exhibitors and distributors in Greece, and producers in America," said Mr. Skouras, who, as head of Skouras Film Company, is the distributor in Greece for 20th Century-Fox, Paramount and RKO-Radio.

"As for local competition, there isn't any," he said. "There are only four or five pictures produced annually in Greece. We haven't the technical equipment to produce more, nor the capital to acquire such equipment. And, in view of the unsettled political and economic situation, it will be many years before there is any substantial film production in Greece."

Mr. Skouras said it was his intention to maintain the American system of operation in both exhibition and distribution. He is accompanied on his trip by Mrs. Skouras, and by Mr. and Mr. Nick Argyryos. Mr. Argyryos is the distributor in Greece for Universal-International, United Artists and Republic.

SINGING ON THE TRAIL: Ken Curtis, Jeff Donnell—Here is a good picture for the small town. It will be liked 100 per cent. It has good music, just the type that the farmers and hillbillies go for. You can't go wrong on this picture. Columbia is a good company for a small town theatre. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

SINGIN' IN THE CORN: Judy Canova, Allen Jenkins—When Judy was not too big to allow other names in the picture they were O.K. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo.

SINGIN' IN THE CORN: Judy Canova, Allen Jenkins—An excellent draw and it pleased, even if it was corn. Hurry back, Judy. Played Sunday, Feb. 16.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

THRILL OF BRAZIL: Evelyn Keyes, Keenan Wynn—A well produced picture with a capable cast. However, the South American locale doesn't appeal to our patronage. The gross reached only 86 per cent of our Sunday and Monday average. Played Feb. 2, 3.—J. B. Stine, Garfield Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABBOTT AND COSTELLO IN HOLLYWOOD: Abbott & Costello—Abbott and Costello certainly draw the crowds here. Business was above average for Friday and Saturday. A good comedy. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—Keith Buell, Community Theatre, Murray Harbor, P. E. I., Can.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan—Good draw. The customers were very happy and so was I. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan—This was a honey. All the kids in the town turned out for it as well as a good percentage of the adults. Everyone was pleased. This is a must feature for any small town. The color and the scenery were superb. Played Friday, Feb. 21.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

EASY TO WED: Esther Williams, Van Johnson—Business was below average on this fine picture. It was probably due to the cold weather. Played Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 13-15.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kans.

FAITHFUL IN MY FASHION: Tom Drake, Donna Reed—Nice little picture that hit three days of extremely cold weather. So it was played to about half of our average gross. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 4-6.—J. B. Stine, Garfield Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

GALLANT BESS: Marshall Thompson, George Tobias—Should have lifted the mortgage with this; however, it is just another Cinecolor that didn't equal an ordinary Western. We in the sticks still need names, and these so-called hicks know Cinecolor from Technicolor. Played Friday, Saturday, Jan. 31, Feb. 1.—Bernie Stevens, Hampton Theatre, Hampton, N. H.

GREEN YEARS, THE: Charles Coburn, Tom Drake—Business not up to average on this fine production. Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 30-Feb. 1.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kan.

HOLIDAY IN MEXICO: Walter Pidgeon, Ilona Massey—An excellent musical. Color gorgeous. Music tops and acting tops. The patrons enjoyed it extremely well. They had nothing but nice things to say about it in the lobby. What a singer is that little girl who stars! Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 18, 19.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt.

HOLIDAY IN MEXICO: Walter Pidgeon, Ilona Massey—This was a grand picture as far as the manager was concerned. But the high class singing kept the colored and the rural patronage away. It has a grand story and good acting, but it does not have box office in a small town. Played Wednesday,

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box office performance of a product — providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York 20.

Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOW-OFF, THE: Red Skelton, Marilyn Maxwell—Just one or two good laughs. Skelton must have something on the radio that the pictures miss.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

THREE WISE FOOLS: Margaret O'Brien, Lionel Barrymore—Business was average on this picture. It was well received. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kan.

THREE WISE FOOLS: Margaret O'Brien, Lionel Barrymore—We have shown pretty awful pictures in the year, but none compared to the latest Margaret O'Brien feature. Our patrons, with the exception of the children, were fed up. If you haven't played this feature, skip it by all means. If you play it don't be around when it is over. Played Friday, Feb. 14.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

TWO SISTERS FROM BOSTON: Jimmy Durante, June Allyson—Business was about average on this offering. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kan.

TWO SMART PEOPLE: John Hodiak, Lucille Ball—An excellent picture that didn't do very well. Could be the lack of names, and perhaps Lent and Ash Wednesday had something to do with it. It didn't get them in. Those who came loved it. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 19, 20.—Bernie Stevens, Hampton Theatre, Hampton, N. H.

Monogram

HAUNTED MINE, THE: Johnny Mack Brown, Linda Johnson—A little better than the average Johnny Mack Brown Western. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

HIGH SCHOOL HERO: Freddie Stewart, June Preisser—Used on a double bill and it was a big hit. I would recommend this to any exhibitor as excellent double feature program. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Paramount

SEARCHING WIND, THE: Robert Young, Sylvia Sydney—Talk, talk, talk. It is pretty boring entertainment. It is slow and jumpy. There is a mixture of love and international diplomacy with a poor show of both. Business was off. Just took in film rental. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 19, 20.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

SEARCHING WIND, THE: Robert Young, Sylvia Sydney—A peculiar picture. Those who are concerned about the complacency of our diplomats will appreciate it. Well acted and well produced, but not box office. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 18-20.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill.

STRANGE LOVE OF MARTHA IVERS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Van Heflin—They continue to drag American womanhood through the gutters and mire. Why do they make stories of such out of the ordinary type people. Most Americans are pretty decent people, but Hollywood leads one to think our nation is a hodge-podge of murderers, psychopaths, drunks or crooks. A story about a kind-hearted, lovable, loving, faithful woman might take the taste of these out of our mouths. The story is tense. Kids don't come. No pleased comments. Business below average and not due to the snow. Did better in worse weather on "Blondie." Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

DON RICARDO RETURNS: Fred Colby, Isabelita—

I did not see this picture. Stayed as far away from the theatre as possible. Now I wish I had left town. Don't play this, if they give it to you. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Marcella Smith, Vinton Theatre, McArthur Ohio.

GHOST OF HIDDEN VALLEY: Buster Crabbe, Al "Fuzzy" St. John—A good Western drama which pleased the weekend trade. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

WILD WEST: Eddie Dean, Al La Rue—This is Eddie Dean's best picture to date. I advertised it as a special and had no complaints. Had a cold wave for competition. Believe that this picture will do better than average business in good weather. I am going to play it again later. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—L. Brazil, Jr., New Theatre, Bearden, Ark.

RKO Radio

BADMAN'S TERRITORY: Randolph Scott, Ann Richards—Grand picture for small towns where the patrons like action. Some patrons say, "Glorified Westerns." Good box office and many good comments. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 10, 11.—Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town and rural patronage.

BADMAN'S TERRITORY: Randolph Scott, Ann Richards—This picture brought us the best midweek business we have enjoyed for some time. Any criticism of the film would be similar to looking a gift horse in the mouth. The cultured English accent of Miss Richards seems a trifle, to say the least, in congruous. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—A. E. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

KID FROM BROOKLYN, THE: Danny Kaye, Virginia Mayo—Kaye is versatile and he is the perfect clown. It is well and lavishly produced, with nice work by Miss Mayo and Miss Ellen. Kaye's routines are much the same as in all his shows. He could wear out with too many pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

MAKE MINE MUSIC: Disney Musical Feature—Very, very good. Did nice business. It is too good, or something, for small towns. They insist that it is a kid show. Disney is going to have to wait until the people catch up. Second night was off badly so I guess they didn't exactly eat it up. Good opening day in cold weather and bad roads. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

SISTER KENNY: Rosalind Russell, Alexander Knox—Better than average business. It brought in new people. It was too heavy for the children, but it pleased the adults. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 16-18.—Orr, Rodman & Bailey, Rex Theatre, Henning, Minn.

STRANGER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Orson Welles, Loretta Young—Too heavy a picture for a small town. So few people came out that I felt like a stranger in my own town. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 9-11.—Orr, Rodman & Bailey, Rex Theatre, Henning, Minn.

WITHOUT RESERVATIONS: Claudette Colbert, John Wayne—The first night was killed by freezing weather. The second night was good, but no colored patrons. Good comments. Good comedy and good acting. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 5, 6.—Cleo Manry Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

FLAME OF THE BARBARY COAST: John Wayne, Ann Dvorak—We played this very late. Republic pictures have not played here before, so I am picking up a few of the old ones. This satisfied our action fans and drew an above average Monday night crowd. Our print was good. More of the same will be appreciated. Played Feb. 17.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

HOME ON THE RANGE: Monte Hale, Adrian Booth—The color was not too good, but the picture, otherwise, proved acceptable to our Western fans. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

MY PAL TRIGGER: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—This did O.K. They still click. Although this almost took enough time for a single feature, we got cold feet and hung a quickie under it. It is the best Rogers to date. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—Bernie Stevens, Hampton Theatre, Hampton, N. H.

PLAINSMAN AND THE LADY, THE: William Elliott, Vera Ralston—A fine super Western with very good music and good acting. It is the type of picture that held up well on Sunday. Monday business was off, but Monday never is good, as every showman will tell in small towns. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

PLAINSMAN AND THE LADY, THE: William Elliott, Vera Ralston—One of the best yet from Republic. Plenty of action. Good story and good directing. The patrons were well pleased, even the college students had praise for it. The rural populace ate it up. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 16-18.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt.

THAT BRENNAN GIRL: James Dunn, Mona Freeman—Very good entertainment and it was thoroughly enjoyed by the majority. James Dunn does a fine job and so does Mona Freeman. It is a good down-to-earth show that all the members of the family will enjoy. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 9-11.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANNA AND THE KING OF SIAM: Irene Dunne, Rex Harrison—Blizzard and blocked roads. The town people stayed home, too. It is really something different. Maybe it is good, but can't see it doing any business in small towns. Just why it was made is a question. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 5, 6.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—A nice easy-going picture that makes everyone happy. The title is a natural. We regret that we didn't make more out of it. Picture follows the book and it can be pounded that way to advantage. Don't lose it. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Bernie Stevens, Hampton Theatre, Hampton, N. H.

CENTENNIAL SUMMER: Jeanne Craine, Cornel Wilde—A fine picture. Many favorable comments. Isn't it rather silly for people to be solemnly going about their work and suddenly burst into song in a chorus? The colored boy who danced really has rhythm. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—Marcella Smith, Vinton Theatre, McArthur, Ohio.

CENTENNIAL SUMMER: Jeanne Crane, Cornel Wilde—Picture was well liked and business was about average. Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 23-25.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kan.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young—A bust, and for no reason. A natural for a small town and nothing happened. Think the title scared them into expecting another "Caesar and Cleopatra." Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 5, 6.—Bernie Stevens, Hampton Theatre, Hampton, N. H.

HOME SWEET HOMICIDE: Lynn Bari, Randolph Scott—Good little picture. Box office weak. Comments "right good." Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 3, 4.—Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town and rural patronage.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—Business was below average. Played Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 6-8.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kan.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—We believe this is the worst picture of the past year. It played to that type of business. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza, Lamar, Mo.

SPIDER, THE: Richard Conte, Faye Marlowe—This type of picture goes over well here. You could hear a pin drop. If you wish to have good order, play this one. Played Jan. 31, Feb. 1.—Keith Buell, Community Theatre, Murray Harbor, P. E. I., Can.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE: June Haver, Vivian Blaine—A color picture without a plot. Bad songs and no business. However, it is in Technicolor. Played Wednesday-Friday, Feb. 19-21.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo.

United Artists

LITTLE IODINE: Jo Ann Marlowe, Marc Cramer—Good comedy which did good business and pleased. Played Tuesday, Feb. 11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

MR. ACE: George Raft, Sylvia Sidney—No tempo. It is too slow. It has too much footage to tell the story. With the new awareness of the value of the dollar that is now apparent it is going to take better than this to bold the paying customers. They are getting fed up with the poor or mediocre pictures. Make no mistake, the joy-ride is over, at least in the mid-west.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

WHISTLE STOP: George Raft, Ava Gardner—A slow moving, heavy drama that failed to click at our box office. Raft has to get better stories than this or soon he will be washed up for our trade. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 11-13.—J. B. Stine, Garfield Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

Universal

CANYON PASSAGE: Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward—Many remarked about the wonderful scenic shots and the beautiful Technicolor. It is rough and tough, but the story holds interest and it would have been impossible to have assembled a better cast. Business on this reached 140 per cent of our Sunday and Monday average. Don't pass this one up. Played Feb. 16, 17.—J. B. Stine, Garfield Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

KILLERS, THE: Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner—This picture was a flop, but it was not what I advertised. We had several walkouts and many kicks. Stay clear of this for small towns. It is too artistic for farmers and the rural patrons. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

TIME OF THEIR LIVES: Abbott & Costello—This was different, but it has good clean fun which went over well. Business good. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

Warner Bros.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—Good drama with Bogart cast as a detective. Business was a little above average. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—Good picture and many good comments from the patrons. My patrons don't like to see Humphrey Bogart play opposite anyone but Lauren Bacall. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Jan. 29, 30.—Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—They murdered six people. In spite of the fact that the children stayed home, this did a little business. Business was off due to bad roads and cold, but it was not as bad as might be expected. The story is very involved and complicated. Will get by midweek. Drips with blood. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

CLOAK AND DAGGER: Gary Cooper, Lilli Palmer—Cooper was completely miscast. Not a bad picture, but nothing for the entire family trade. It is slow moving, but a certain amount of tenseness is maintained. Lilli Pamer is very good. Below average Sunday business in fair weather. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

CORN IS GREEN, THE: Bette Davis, John Dahl—I failed to do any business with this picture, although those who were there liked it. It is a good picture. Played Monday, Tuesday, Jan. 27, 28.—Keith Buell, Community Theatre, Murray Harbor, P. E. I., Can.

MILDRED PIERCE: Joan Crawford, Jack Carson—I can't understand why these big pictures fail to draw a crowd here. I find the cheaper pictures do twice the business. Joan Crawford was excellent. A good show. Try and see what you can do. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 10, 11.—Keith Buell, Community Theatre, Murray Harbor, P. E. I., Can.

NEVER SAY GOODBYE: Errol Flynn, Eleanor Parker—Drew well. Everyone liked it. Had just the right amount of pathos and humor to satisfy everybody. A good buy. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Marcella Smith, Vinton, McArthur, Ohio.

NIGHT AND DAY: Cary Grant, Alexis Smith—Cole Porter, being a native Hoosier, this should have broken records for us, but the cold weather held down the business to less than average. Beautiful color with an interesting story and fine acting. It pleased 100 per cent. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—J. B. Stine, Garfield Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

OF HUMAN BONDAGE: Paul Henreid, Eleanor Parker—Not for a small town. It failed to please and there were lots of complaints. Played late, but not late enough. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—Orr, Rodman & Bailey, Rex Theatre, Henning, Minn.

SARATOGA TRUNK: Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman—Business was not up to par on this fine offering. Played Sunday, Monday, Jan. 26, 27.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kan.

SHADOW OF A WOMAN: Andrea King, Helmut Dantine—This is a dull rehash of the old theme of the villainous madman who poses as a doctor. How many pictures have been made this year with the identical theme? The old cycle again.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

STOLEN LIFE, A: Bette Davis, Glenn Ford—A heavy drama which failed to draw. Bette Davis will not do business in a small town. Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

THREE STRANGERS: Sidney Greenstreet, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Worst box office on Saturday in several years. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 21, 22.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill.

TIME, THE PLACE, THE GIRL: Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson—This is a Warner picture that my fans raved over and asked for more like it. At least they let Dennis Morgan sing. Beautiful Technicolor with a light plot which appeals to all classes. Very good. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

TIME, THE PLACE, THE GIRL: Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson—This is based on the same wornout theme as most musicals. "Girl in Calico" and "Rajny Night in Rio" are catchy tunes. The bands were good, and it got by.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

TWO GUYS FROM MILWAUKEE: Jack Carson, Dennis Morgan—Business was average on this picture. It was well liked and well received. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—E. C. Arnold, Chapman Theatre, Chapman, Kan.

Short Features

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

NORTHWEST HOUNDED POLICE: MGM Technicolor Cartoons—A below-standard cartoon for this company. It has a few laughs, but they seemed rather forced.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

SOLID SERENADE: Tom and Jerry Cartoons—This is an extra good comedy and all your patrons will have a grand laugh.—Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga.

SPRINGTIME FOR THOMAS: Tom and Jerry Cartoons—Superior. This series is always good. Too bad there aren't more of them made. The producers deserve a good cheer for this one.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

TRAFFIC WITH THE DEVIL: Two-Reel Specials—This should be sponsored by Safety Council. One of the best on reckless driving. It certainly makes you think.—Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga.

Paramount

CINDERELLA'S FELLER: Musical Parade—One of Paramount's best two-reel shorts. Excellent entertainment. More compliments on this than on the feature.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

RKO Radio

NORTHERN RAMPARTS: This Is America—Excellent reel on Alaska. More on the economic and social side than on the military. Very well liked. It is a definite screen contribution to public information. It is educational and entertaining.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

Twentieth Century-Fox

NOBODY'S CHILDREN: March of Time—This March of Time is a little more interesting than usual.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

THE TORTOISE WINS AGAIN: Terrytoons—Good cartoon of the old race. Funny and good for both adults and children.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

Warner-Vitaphone

FAIR & WORMER: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Lots of laughs and good comments. In fact, they loved it.—Bernie Stevens, Hampton, Hampton, N. H.

MOUSEMERIZED CAT: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Rather good. Drew many appreciative laughs. It is well worth playing.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

KITTY KORNERED: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—One of the worst I have ever seen. Positively crazy. Played Saturday, Sunday, Feb. 1, 2.—Kenneth L. Feldhaus, Beverly Theatre, University City, Mo.

Of course, we are extremely excited and happy about "THE EGG AND I" being booked into the Radio City Music Hall by Mr. Gus Eysell, President and Managing Director.

This is a fitting tribute to this fine American comedy based upon the perennial best-seller by Betty MacDonald.

We extend our appreciation to Gus Eysell and to all exhibitors throughout the country who will ultimately appraise to the same degree the box office and entertainment quality of "THE EGG AND I." At this writing it is estimated that "THE EGG AND I" has been read by twenty-five million persons. This indicates that "THE EGG AND I" will be one of the best patronized pictures of all time.

Naturally, U-I is backing it up with the biggest advertising campaign in its history.

Cost Impedes Production of Teaching Films

Only two of the seven experimental educational films originally planned by the Motion Picture Association have been produced and probably no more than five will be made altogether, Roger Albright, head of Teaching Film Custodians, the educational film section of the MPA, said this week. The $100,000 project was first announced by Eric Johnston, president of MPA, in April, 1946.

Production details were taken over on a voluntary basis by Arthur Mayer, New York exhibitor. The pictures, if successful, will serve as a standard for the producers of classroom films. Dr. Mark A. May of Yale University and a member of the MPA's Commission on Motion Pictures in Education, as well as a group of textbook publishers, cooperated in preparation of the scripts.

Live Action and Animation

One of the educational one and one-half reel subjects was to have been ready this week. Entitled "Osmosis," it deals with the diffusion of life through the cell and is aimed at the high school level. The other film, "The Seasons," will be ready some time next month. Both have live action as well as animation. The other three pictures, which so far have only reached script form, will deal with arithmetic, religious liberty and Congress.

Production of the last two may be held up, Mr. Albright said, because of excessive cost. Other producers, to whom these films should serve as an example, would never be able to spend $65,000-$70,000 on such pictures. Ways and means to produce them on a more economical but still equally effective basis now are being studied. All pictures will be released through Teaching Film Custodians after exhaustive classroom tests have established their worth.

School bookings of the Custodian films went up 50 per cent in 1946 as compared with 1945, Mr. Albright stated. Bookings for the first nine months of 1947 were ahead of the number recorded for the same period in 1946. This, he thought, was due mainly to an increased awareness on the part of the schools that films are a valuable aid in education. Also, the whole educational film field has been vigorously promoted since the war and the number of projectors in U. S. schools has gone up sharply.

Projector Total Up

Before the war it was estimated that there were some 16,000 projectors in American classrooms. Now there are from 25,000 to 30,000 and manufacturers still have unfilled orders for thousands of machines from schools, clubs, churches, etc. Production rate currently ranges from 5,000 to 6,000 projectors a month. The average price is about $450 or from $50 to $100 higher than before the war.

Du Pont Reporting High 1946 Income and Sales

With production in 1946 more than double the 1939 output and sales at a record peak, net income of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Company last year amounted to $112,619,706 or an equivalent of $9.44 a share of common stock following preferred dividend payments, according to the company's annual report. The income includes $22,500,000 in dividends from the company's investment in common stock of the General Motors Corporation. Sales, amounting to $648,703,181, were the highest in the company's 145-year history and represented a six per cent gain over the $611,256,225 in 1945.

Alexander Elects Directors

Alexander Film Company elected the following directors at its stockholders meeting March 3 in Colorado Springs: J. Don Alexander, Don M. Alexander, Don Alexander, Jr., Vernon A. Cheever and Thomas M. Burgess. The board elected the following officers: J. Don Alexander, president; Don M. Alexander, vice-president; M. J. McInaney, vice-president; Don Alexander, Jr., vice-president, and E. B. Foster, secretary-treasurer.

Anti-Trust Suit Postponed

Attorneys for both sides in the anti-trust suit of the Schoenstadt Circuit, in behalf of its Chicago south side Piccadilly theatre, against eight distributors, have agreed to another postponement with the case now scheduled to come up "in about three weeks or a month." Proceedings had been scheduled to get under way before Special Master in Chancery Charles A. McDonald March 6.

"Stairway" on Broadway

"Stairway to Heaven," the J. Arthur Rank Universal-International Technicolor production, opened at the Winter Garden in New York March 14 for an extended run at popular prices.

Empire Canada Suit Names Rank

Toronto Bureau

Paul Nathanson's Empire-Universal has filed a writ here against the J. Arthur Rank interests, claiming exclusive Canadian rights to British-made films produced by General Cinema Finance Corporation and its subsidiaries. The writ is for specific performance of the alleged contract and also seeks an injunction to restrain the defendant from distributing certain films in Canada and Newfoundland.

Defendants named are J. Arthur Rank, the J. Arthur Rank Organization, Inc., General Cinema Finance Corporation, Ltd., Universal Pictures Company, United World Pictures Company, Eagle-Lion Films, Inc., Eagle Lion Films of Canada, Ltd., and Monogram Pictures of Canada.

The suit has a curious aspect in that Mr. Nathanson, through Empire-Universal, is suing Universal Pictures, with which he is associated in Canada. Mr. Rank also is a stockholder in Universal, while United World is a subsidiary of Universal.

Industry observers in Canada see the suit as the first step in a developing battle, with Empire-Universal and United World of Canada lined up against the Rank interests.

Paramount Winners Arrive

Six members, two of them women, of the Paramount British organization arrived in New York last Wednesday. The visit is an award for their winning a quota drive recently held in the British Isles. The six are Dave Gilpin, London Paramount Film Service, Ltd., district supervisor; Thomas Ledger, branch manager of Newcastle; Clifford J. Cox of Newcastle, salesman; Ashley C. Bate, London, salesman; and Alice Holt, of Cardiff and Nellie Nisbet of Liverpool.

Use Survey to Fix Sales Policy For "Triumph"

To determine sales policy, Enterprise is currently conducting a nationwide survey on "Arch of Triumph," George J. Schaefer, vice-president in charge of distribution, said in New York Tuesday.

The survey seeks to determine reader interest in the book; the relative number of people desiring to see the picture; income and age brackets to which the picture will have the greatest appeal. Mr. Schaefer pointed out that price-fixing regulations in the decree make such surveys applicable and necessary.

Enterprise has completed shooting on four of the six pictures scheduled for 1947: "Ramrod," "Arch of Triumph," "Other Love" and "Body and Soul." United Artists will distribute Enterprise product in the United States, and Loew's International abroad.

Mr. Schaefer also disclosed that his film investment company, George J. Schaefer Associates, will continue in operation.

Concerning his negotiations with Universal for the acquisition of some 350 pictures, he said the deal is about completed and contracts should be signed this week.

Under the terms of the contract, Mr. Schaefer has a 10-year franchise for the distribution of the 350 pictures, plus Universal short subjects and serials, in the United States and Canada. He said these pictures represent all but about 60 features of Universal's product from the 1933-34 season to the 1945-46 season. Universal will get a percentage of the distribution profits above a certain (but unnamed) figure. The product will be distributed through a new company which will be headed by George J. Schaefer, Jr.

Patron Sues Exhibitor

Nathan A. Fadim, owner of the Avenue theatre in Chicago, was named defendant in a $15,000 damage suit filed in Chicago Circuit Court last week, claiming that a letter from the marquee sign fell and struck her on the head as she and her husband were leaving the theatre on the night of November 2, 1946.

See Uncertain Future for New York Building Code

An uncertain future is faced by the proposed new standard building code for New York State, which contains numerous revised theatre regulations, it was reported last week by John Coggesall, industrial code referee for the State Labor Department. Mr. Coggesall said the Board of Standards and Appeals had failed to agree as yet to call public hearings on the document. The hearings, if held at all, will not take place until after the legislature adjourns, he added. Theatres are affected by the code principally as regards projection booths, stairways, exits, etc. Meanwhile, it was announced in Albany that the Joint Legislative Committee studying existing requirements relative to building construction was to file a report March 15.

To Aim Australia Product at U. S.

Keeping in mind the 30 per cent drop in post-war Australian attendance, forthcoming Australian productions will be angled toward the British and American markets, according to Kan Hall, Australian film producer.

He explained that up to now Australian pictures, which included the successful "Smithy," made for Columbia, and "The Overlanders," had been made under the assumption that Australian returns alone would cover their production costs, as in fact they did. Australian production will be stepped up within the next two years when four or five features will be produced annually.

Mr. Hall is managing director of Cine-sound, a production company in which J. Arthur Rank has a half interest. All of its films are distributed throughout the world by the Rank organization. The Australian producer saw Mr. Rank before coming to the U. S. He expects to buy equipment and installations worth $300,000 to be installed at the Pagewood and Cinesound studios owned by his company and Mr. Rank.

Besides native productions, the two studios also will be able to take care of independents, both from England and the U. S., Mr. Hall said. He indicated that Columbia would make another picture there and so will the British producer Harry Watt, whose next film will be "Eureka Stockade."

Legion of Decency Reviews Eight New Productions

The National Legion of Decency reviewed eight new productions this week, approving all. "Blaze of Noon" was placed in Class A-I, unobjectionable for general patronage. In Class A-II, unobjectionable for adults, were "The Adventuress," "Cynthia's Secret," "Her First Affair" (French), "I Cover Big Town," "The Macomber Affair," "Millie's Daughter" and "Pursued".

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

Unethical

Included in the week's submissions from managers is a campaign which again recalls how prone we are at times to spoil an otherwise excellent campaign through overenthusiasm and lack of judgment.

In this instance, the theatre apparently draws a clientele which appreciates the type of picture that promises a little in the way of attractive and scantily clad performers. Perhaps the manager had this thought in mind, and also what a fine ballyhoo he could put on, when he booked such a picture, independently produced.

Without discounting the fine tieups and promotions he arranged, he committed the grave offense of using lithograph cutouts from one of a major company's top productions of the year to sell his grade D picture.

Aside from the misrepresentation, he lays his theatre open to litigation from the company whose advertising material he misappropriated.

Doubtless, a large number of people who saw this advertising were confused; the illustrations were the focus of an intensive national campaign by the big distributor only a few months ago.

There are many occasions, and the practice has been more or less common, for theatremen in an emergency to use advertising material from another picture, but these occasions are usually confined to the use of star illustrations when a particular star appears in both productions.

It is certainly overstepping the limit of intelligent advertising when illustrations from one vehicle, which have been promoted to institutional proportions, are used to exploit another picture from another company.

It is not showmanship. It is not good advertising. Nor is it good common sense.

Kitchen Chores

While theatre managers were being hit with storms of blizzard proportions across most of our northern states, recently, exhibitors in Australia were being annoyed by alternating heatwaves and torrential rainstorms.

At the Paramount theatre, Oakleigh, near Melbourne, a few weeks ago theatre patrons had to remove their shoes and stockings and wade to their seats in the rain-flooded stalls. A news photo we received shows Jack Kitchen, manager of the Paramount, ankle deep, busy sweeping the water from the theatre foyer.

Northern Propaganda

P. E. McCoy, manager of the Augusta Amusement theatres in Augusta, Ga., is liable to serious consequence as a result of a recent tieup in which he gave away 3,000 pieces of bubble gum to children attending the opening of the serial, Hop Harrigan.

The trade name of the gum is YANK. Augusta is in the South, Mac!

Unaccustomed As I Am

The most flattering invitation we've had since we were asked to sit in at the Round Table came last week from Mike Stranger, manager of Loew's, White Plains, N. Y.

So last Thursday we were guest speaker at the Lions Club in White Plains. It's been many years since we've been cast in the role of orator at one of the service club's luncheons, but Mr. Stranger and that grand bunch of good-fellows helped mightily to relieve our pre-introduction nervousness.

Even the miseries of the return trip on a mid-afternoon milk train were forgotten in the reminiscences of the people we met: Ike Flood, president of the local group; John Bailey, head of the chamber of commerce; Fire Chief George Mercer; Judge Bill Johnson; Postmaster John Paul; Tom Bumferd, editor of Westchester Woman; Ben Carroll, editor of the Reporter-Dispatch; Bill Ottly, Bernhard Durand and—well, just too many to remember but not to be forgotten.

On Monday we received the awaited report from Mr. Stranger. The talk was a success and we are down for a return visit later this year. Make way, Mr. Hershfield; we are now accepting bookings for luncheons, weddings and Bar-Mitzvahs.

SELLING SEATS WITH BALLYHOO

J. A. Balner, manager of Reade's Mayfair theatre, Asbury Park N. J., regularly uses a truck mounted with 6-sheets to exploit coming hits.

This Luscomb Silvaire, with a wing-spread less than 30 feet, brought the print of "Till the Clouds Roll By" from Atlanta to the Carolina theatre in Charlotte. Plane landed at the end of city's main thoroughfare, taxied to the theatre where manager J. E. Austin arranged this novel exhibit of the plane in front of the door.

Robert A. Hynes, manager of the Criterion theatre in Oklahoma City, believes in plenty of outdoor exploitation to sell his attractions. Above is covered wagon ballyhoo used recently on "California" and the Criterion boxoffice which was converted into a covered wagon during film's current engagement. At right, smartly dressed couple served to publicize "Ladies' Man."

In front of Century's Patio theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., this Marine Recruiting Station was set up to help manager A. A. Grant exploit "No Leave, No Love." Marines furnished all equipment including a truck with public address system over which song hits from the film were played, also theatre announcements.

Dorseys Appear In Harrisburg For Premiere

The personal appearance of the two Dorsey brothers, Tommy and Jimmy, drew a wealth of attention to the world premiere of "The Fabulous Dorseys" at the Regent theatre, Harrisburg, Pa. The brothers were born in the coal-mining region of Pennsylvania. Manager Sam Gilman conducted an outstanding campaign for the premiere.

Coverage was complete, starting with the arrival of the band-leader brothers at the Harrisburg station where they were met by State Senator Paul L. Wagner and a crowd. Large placards had copy reading: "Welcome Dorsey Brothers." Earlier in the day, a resolution was read in the Pennsylvania State Senate, honoring the brothers for their contribution to music and to the state. The Dorseys appeared on the stage opening night.

A reception was held in the Hotel Hershey, which was attended by Governor James H. Duff and other officials. The brothers posed with Governor Duff for an informal photograph showing the governor with Tommy's trombone. The picture broke in all Harrisburg papers and was sent out nationally via the wire-photo services.

As part of the advance campaign, a 10-day "Musical Family Contest" was arranged. Prizes were awarded to the family having two outstanding musicians. Broadcasts, featuring the contest winners, were aired over stations WHP and WHGB. The reading of the governor's resolution by Senator Wagner also was broadcast.

Twelve Victor record dealers cooperated in full-page ads in all Harrisburg newspapers. Approximately 25 window displays were arranged for the opening with streamers, valances and other theatre accessories decorating the Regent front.

For the opening of the picture at the Warner theatre in Pittsburgh, a "Dorsey Disc Dig" was held night before opening at a ballroom. This was an all-recorded, all-Dorsey dance sponsored by a Pittsburgh chain of record stores, the local RCA-Victor distributor and radio station WWSW. The campaign was arranged by Jim Totman, advertising chief for Warner Bros. Pittsburgh theatres.

IT'S A JOKER, SON!

An ordinary deck of playing cards was used by manager A. G. Painter in a most novel manner to exploit "Mr. Ace" at the Center theatre, Oak Ridge, Tenn. The cards were interlaced for a lobby display with the following copy: "It's no (joker), son; it's in the cards. The (king) took the (queen) with all their (jack) on the (10) of the month and traveled (9) miles into (8) counties in their (7) year car with (6) cylinders and (5) tires, of which (4) were mounted. The (3) kids in the car were (2) boys and Mr. (Ace) who will be at the Center theatre on . . .", etc. The display attracted a good deal of attention.

Hires Cub Plane To Sell "Edge"

A cub plane with an amplifier and storage battery installed was used by manager Lat Heard to ballyhoo the playdate of "The Razor's Edge" at the Elbert theatre, Elberton, Ga. The plane glided into town at about 500 feet with an announcer calling on the townspeople to see the picture. Heralds were dropped from the plane. The promotion caused quite a stir in Elberton.

Heard arranged a late show each night so as not to conflict with an old-fashioned revival service being held during his playdate. This was announced from the pulpit. Permission was obtained from the chief of police to post 24-sheets in the middle of streets in the public square. One-sheets were posted on all corner sidewalks downtown.

Six spot radio announcements were used daily for 10 days to promote the playdate.

TALL TALES CONTEST HITS JACKPOT

A tieup with a local newspaper columnist for a "Tall Tales" contest developed into an outstanding promotion for the playdate of "Cross My Heart" at the State theatre, Minneapolis, Minn. Through the tie-up with columnist Frank McInerney of the Daily Times, manager Charles A. Zinn expected a couple of days' publicity with the usual follow-up. The reaction to the contest was immediate, with the result that the newspaper's promotion department got hold of it and pushed it into a nine days' undertaking. For the competition, readers were required to send in a tall story of 100 words or less to McInerney. Cash prizes and guest tickets were awarded to winners.

Opens All Stops For Washington Global Premiere

Special screenings, a parade, the personal appearance of a star of the picture, ballyhoo and tieups heralded the global premiere of "The Beginning or the End" at the Palace theatre, Washington, D. C. The highly extensive and effective campaign was carried out by Brock Whitlock, publicity director for Loew's Washington theatres.

The special screenings for government officials, White House correspondents, representatives from all Washington newspapers, radio executives, etc., resulted in an unprecedented barrage of radio comment and editorial news space, beginning 10 days prior to the premiere.

A mild sensation was created throughout the streets of the city at noon the day prior to opening when 8,000 economy novelty toy paper bombs were dropped from the sky simultaneously on eight strategic locations. 2,000 of the toy bombs were distributed at four leading high schools. The paper bombs carried the copy: "If this were an atom bomb it wouldn't be the Beginning—it would be the End!"

An elaborate schedule was arranged for the personal appearance of Tom Drake, a star of the picture. In the four days he was in Washington, Drake attended luncheons, dinners, met the press and appeared on radio programs. He also was in the parade and spoke over a public address system in front of the theatre.

The parade started at the Hotel Mayflower and wound up at the theatre. Eight motorcycle policemen led the parade, which included government officials. The entire theatre front carried a Hollywood opening atmosphere. Sky flood lights were obtained from the Coast Artillery at Fort Story, Va.

Through a tieup with the Student Assembly Page of the Times-Herald, students were invited to photograph Tom Drake at the Washington Monument Grounds at a given time. Cash prizes were awarded for the best photos of the star.

Peffley Ties-In Plymouth Rock

Envelopes containing pieces of rock were distributed to publicize manager Dick Peffley's engagement of "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" at the Paramount theatre, Fremont, Ohio. A card attached read: "Plymouth Rock is all broken up over 'The Shocking Miss Pilgrim'. Oh, the things she does!" The promotion was paid for by a local merchant, who used the back side of the card for an ad.

Gets Press Break for Show

A four-column photograph and story was planted in the Runcorn Guardian by manager Jack Campbell to exploit a "Cinderella" pantomime show at the Scala Cinema, Runcorn, Cheshire, England. The pantomime was performed by an all-child cast.

The Selling Approach

SONG OF SCHEHERAZADE (Universal-International): This picture is based on the music of Rimsky-Korsakoff. The story dramatizes an episode in the carefree early life of the great Russian composer.

The musical angles of the picture offer unusual opportunities to tieup with radio, music and record shops. The Charles Kullman record album issued by Columbia is being sparked by dealer promotion ads, tying-in directly with the picture. The same is true for Al Goodman's recording for Victor. Try for full windows featuring the albums and music folios.

Contact your local radio station and offer to provide them with records of Rimsky-Korsakoff's music. In addition to the special record album issued in conjunction with the picture, there are other records available featuring the composer's music. Utilize these also to complete your music shop window displays. If your city boasts of a symphony orchestra be sure to take advantage of the subscribers mailing list.

From one of the music shops you tie-in with, obtain the use of a photograph with automatic record changer. Use this well in advance in the lobby, plugging the 10 musical hits from the picture. You can give the music shop a credit card telling your patrons that the music is available for purchase at the store. Build a special lobby board for use next to the phonograph listing the songs from the picture.

Obtain the support of educational heads and music supervisors. Get a list of the music teachers in all local schools and write them special letters on the picture's theme, so that they may advise their students on your showing. Get permission to post cards on all school bulletin boards announcing the playdate and tying-in the life and music of Rimsky-Korsakoff. If feasible, try to arrange a special showing for school children through the music supervisors.

An unusual sequence in the picture is the bull whip fight staged by Jean Pierre Aumont and Philip Reed. See if you can round up a number of real bull whips for a lobby display. You might run an ad in the classified section for bull whips. Or, try to hire a bull whip expert for demonstrations in the lobby or on the stage.

BOOMERANG! (20th Century-Fox): Here is a picturization of an actual, unsolved murder case which occurred some 22 years ago in the town of Bridgeport, Conn. All scenes, both interior and exterior, have been photographed near the original locale. The story received nation-wide attention when it was published in The Reader's Digest in December of 1945.

Keyed to the story of "Boomerang," you can focus your campaign on big local crime stories. Angle your approach towards "What Was Justice in This Case?" Local newspaper files can be used for the necessary data for a series on controversial trials, which will tie-in with the picture's theme. Get local authorities to discuss cases they have participated in, and invite them to a special screening. Use their comments for "Boomerang" follow-ups.

Arrange a tieup with an inquiring reporter to ask the question "What Was Justice in This Case?" (referring to local trials) or "Is Truth Stranger Than Fiction?" In either case the questions could be tied-in with the theme of the picture. Try for a montage of sensational local news headlines for posters and lobby displays.

Capitalize on the appeal of Dana Andrews, star of the picture, whose drawing power has steadily been increasing. Promote a newspaper contest, in which clues are given to the roles Andrews has played in various pictures. The contest could be used for a one-shot, or could be planted for five consecutive days. Distribute imprinted cardboard boomerangs to children.

Stickles Sets Newspaper Contest for "Razor"

A letter-writing contest was arranged by manager Mollie Stickles to exploit her engagement of "The Razor's Edge" at the Poli-Palace theatre, Meriden, Conn. The competition was sponsored by the Meriden Record. 2,000 post cards, illustrated with the Norman Rockwell drawing of Tyrone Power, were sent to a select mailing list. A cooperative newspaper ad was promoted from the Charm Beauty Salon. The Public Library and two branches displayed stills from the picture on bulletin boards. Window tieups also were arranged.

Haag Promotes Page Co-Op Ad

A full page cooperative newspaper ad, in which eight local merchants participated, was promoted by manager George Haag to exploit "The Jolson Story" at Century's Franklin Square theatre, Franklin Square, N. Y. The ad ran in the Bulletin.

Display Ad Sells "Pilgrim"

Manager Fred Perry promoted a full page cooperative display ad in the Cumberland Evening Times for "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" at the Strand theatre, Cumberland, Md. The ad was paid for by 10 local merchants.

Sets Night Club Deal to Exploit "Jolson Story"

An effective tieup with a local night club was promoted by manager Morris Rosenthal to exploit the playdate of "The Jolson Story" at the Poli theatre, New Haven, Conn. The Club Flamingo ran a Jolson imitation contest, plugging the competition two weeks in advance with a co-op newspaper ad, window displays, etc.

The mayor proclaimed the period "Jolson Week." The proclamation was carried in newspapers and publicized by news flashes over all local radio stations. Two cooperative ads were arranged with Zemel Bros. Radio Centre. Rosenthal planted a picture and story of Jolson and a local prominent man, attending a Yale game years ago, in the Evening Register.

Jolson contests, albums of his recordings and spot announcements were used for 10 days on all stations, resulting in one of the biggest radio campaigns ever conducted for a picture in New Haven.

All orchestras playing local night spots and hotels were contacted and given orchestrations and piano copies for use of their featured singers. All downtown hotels carried cards in their lobbies, also restaurants and bus terminals. Cafeterias and soda fountains featured Jolson specials, drinks and sandwiches. Full windows were arranged with 10 downtown stores.

Ties In with India Dance

A rumba contest tieup with the biggest charity dance of the year was arranged by manager Homi Hyderabadwala to exploit "Holiday in Mexico" at the Metro theatre, Bombay, India. Through the tieup, three cooperative newspaper ads were garnered. In addition, Hyderabadwala used sandwich men for street ballyhoo, promoted window displays and had a phonograph in the lobby to play Xavier Cugat tunes from the picture.

Gets Press, Radio Publicity

Newspaper and radio attention was accorded a special screening of "Moonlight Sonata" for Polish refugees, orphanage children and the Catholic clergy at the Fox Riviera theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. In addition to the screening, manager L. Szulczewski arranged window tieups to promote the picture.

NEW ZEALAND SHOWMEN SET FAST EXPLOITATION PACE

The first prize winners from the four zones in the Twentieth Century-Fox Showmanship contest in New Zealand this week submitted their campaigns for the Quigley Awards. The New Zealand competition was held in conjunction with the company's "World Leadership Drive of 1946."

With the submission of these campaigns the four New Zealand showmen demonstrate anew that they have kept pace with developments in all facets of promotion.

Manager Colin McNaught, first prize winner in the 1st zone, won his award with a campaign on "State Fair" at the Octagon theatre, Dunedin.

McNaught promoted news stories in the Daily Times and Evening Star. An interview with Dana Andrews, star of the picture, also was planted in the Evening Star. A teaser ad campaign was used for a week in advance.

Setpieces were used in the main foyer, entrance to the theatre and smoking lounge. Window displays were promoted with Charles Begg and Company, Glendore Frocks, Dreavers, Ltd., and the Fashion Corner. 24-sheets were located opposite the railway workshops, opposite the St. George School, and road to the Botanical Gardens in a largely populated area. In addition, several six-sheets were used.

Radio Promotion Used

A 15-minute recording of "State Fair" was broadcast from radio station 4 ZB a week prior to opening. The broadcast was plugged at quarter-hour intervals during the day. The event also was publicized in both local newspapers and by a trailer at the theatre.

The campaign on "Do You Love Me?" won first prize for manager Gordon B. Niven in the second zone. Niven manages the State theatre, Dunedin.

An intensive newspaper ad campaign was conducted a week in advance in both morning and evening newspapers. Spot radio announcements exploited the picture for three days prior to opening. Niven arranged attractive front of the theatre and foyer displays, consisting of posters and stills from the picture. Window tieups were set with Beggs Music Store, A. MacDonald's Frock Shop and Waldorf Milk Bar.

The first prize in the third zone was awarded to manager S. A. Dye for his promotional venture on "Centennial Summer" at the Civic theatre, Hamilton.

For street ballyhoo, Dye had a "sandwich" man parade the streets of Hamilton's main business areas during the playdate of the picture. Copy on the sign read: "20th Century-Fox presents 'Centennial Summer' in glorious Technicolor. Now showing, etc."

Posters, stills and cutouts decorated the front of the theatre in advance and during playdate. Two weeks before opening an eye-arresting lobby display was set up. Dye also promoted a story on the picture in the local newspaper and used a board display on the main Hamilton to Cambridge highway opposite a bus stop.

Co-op Scored by Peach

A cooperative newspaper ad helped manager E. J. Frere Peach win the first prize in the fourth zone for his playdate on "A Bell for Adano" at the State theatre, Te Kuiti. The ad, which was three-columns by six inches, was paid for by R. G. Strong, radio and electrical dealer. Strong also used a window display, tying in Gulbransen radios with the picture.

Members of the theatre staff wore special hats and badges well in advance. Nine-inch cutout letters, spelling "A Bell for Adano," were placed along the front of the stage with a large 20th Century-Fox trademark sticker mounted on either side. This attracted patrons' attention before the start of the show, at intermissions and at the conclusion of the performance.

On the day before opening and on opening day, three bicycles were decorated with playdate copy and ridden through the streets. The boys also rode the trade district on shopping night, ringing their bells. This caused a great deal of attention as the shoppers couldn't help but hear the bells and naturally turned around to see what the noise was all about.

A large decorated bell with the title on a card underneath was hung from the foyer ceiling. 25 posters were placed on boards throughout the town and country in positions that caught the public eye. A large three-sheet board also was displayed in the center of a busy street which could be viewed by passengers and pedestrians. Small photo display boards were used in shop windows, hotel lounges and lodging houses.

Newspaper Tieup Aids "Killers"

A classified ad contest drew considerable attention to the playdate of "The Killers" at Reade's Paramount theatre, Long Branch, N. J. The campaign was arranged by manager Roy Blumenheim.

The contest was announced a week in advance on the front page of the Daily Record and carried daily until the opening of the picture on the classified page. Guest tickets were awarded each day to the first readers who submitted classified ads containing letters which spelled out "The Killers."

Scene cuts and readers also were run in the Daily Record during the period of the contest giving added weight to the campaign. The competition caused a good deal of interest in Long Branch and proved itself at the box office.

Stresses Initial Showing Angle for "Waltz Time"

The line "1st Milwaukee showing" was used by manager Helene Boesel in all publicity, advertising and exploitation to sell "Waltz Time" at the Fox Downer theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Display ads were used in the Milwaukee Journal, Deutsche Zeitung, German language newspaper; Shorewood Herald and Whitefish Bay Herald. A special 40x60 was used in the lobby 14 days in advance. 3,000 programs were individually distributed to all music houses, record shops, dancing schools, music conservatories, State Teachers and Downer colleges, Shorewood and Whitefish Bay high schools.

Pioneer Contest Heralds Opening Of "Grass"

A search for Nebraska's "Pioneer of the Prairies" highlighted the extensive campaign arranged for the world premiere of "Sea of Grass" at the Stuart theatre, Lincoln, Nebr. Manager Ted Butterfield conducted the campaign with assistance from managers John Schafutzel of the Lincoln, Bob Buchman of the Capitol, assistant manager Charles Kroll of the Stuart and MGM exploiteer Gene Rich.

The search was sponsored by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce and by two newspapers, the Lincoln and Star. The contest ran five days and resulted in 177 entries. The search was for the person living the longest number of years in the state. Governor Val Peterson of Nebraska presented a Spencer Tracy, star of the picture, trophy and $100 to the winner on premiere night.

Another search was conducted among University of Nebraska students for the boy and girl most closely resembling Tracy and Katharine Hepburn to substitute for the stars on opening night. A five-day contest was promoted over radio station KFOR. Contestants were required to visit 16 Lincoln stores and determine from stills on display, the pictures in which the four stars of "Sea of Grass" had previously appeared.

Letters were placed in all packages leaving Gold's Department store. 5,000 bookmarks were used in prominent spots in department-store book sections, public libraries and other stores. 100 directional arrows were used on street light poles in the downtown area. 100 window cards also were planted.

Window Tieup Helps "Pilgrim"

Through a tieup with the local Remington Rand main office and store, two windows were obtained three weeks in advance to advertise "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" playdate at the Poli theatre, Hartford, Conn. The tieup helped manager Lou Cohen and assistant manager Sam Horwitz to sell a block of tickets to the organization.

FRIDAY NIGHT IS "DATE NIGHT"

A weekly "Date Night" promotion recently started by manager Louis Nye has drawn considerable extra business to the Hoosier theatre, Whiting, Ind. Each Friday night, a numbered coupon is handed out to each couple attending the show, and subsequently a drawing is held on the stage. The lucky girl and her escort are invited to the stage where the girl is presented with an orchid corsage and has her picture taken. The photo is then kept on display in the lobby for a week with the heading: "This girl is Honor Queen for one week." The girl receives the photo after it is taken off display.

Promotes Golden Gloves Tieup

A tieup with the Golden Gloves championships in Cincinnati drew considerable attention to the playdate of "Dead Reckoning" at the Grand theatre there. The campaign was arranged by manager Walter Ahrens and RKO publicist Nathan Wise.

The night of the Gloves finals, Mayor Stewart presented the "Humphrey Bogart Boxing Trophy" to Earl Butler, chairman of the Cincinnati AAU boxing committee. Bogart is the star of the picture. Spectators in the jammed arena heard the mayor's presentation speech, which included many plugs for the picture.

Records of "Either It's Love or It Isn't," hit tune from the picture, were distributed to all radio disc jockeys through agreements with Columbia Records and Decca. The records were used daily by the disc jockeys, with playdate mention in all instances.

Bill Dawes of WCKY and Paul Dixon of WCPO ran contests with listeners required to write a letter of 25 words or less containing their definition of love. Records of the hit tune from the picture were awarded as prizes.

Arranges Maggie and Jiggs Tieup for "Father"

A nice tieup was arranged by manager Tom Wolf to promote "Bringing Up Father" at the State theatre, Bellevue, Ohio. The tieup was with the Isaly store, a combination ice cream parlor and restaurant. A display was used in the store window in the center of which was a sign reading: "Isaly's and the State theatre present two grand treats. 1. Maggie and Jiggs Sundaes, two dips of ice cream topped with raspberry and marshmallow, etc., etc. 2. 'Bringing Up Father', Maggie and Jiggs own movie, at the, etc." The tieup also was publicized inside the store.

Original Gowns Put on Display For "Sinbad"

Two of the original gowns worn by Maureen O'Hara in "Sinbad the Sailor" were used to exploit the picture at the Albee theatre in Providence, R. I. RKO publicist Bill Morton conducted the campaign for the theatre.

When the gowns arrived in Providence they were rushed to the Rhode Island School of Design, where they were shown to students in classes of costume design. The promotion resulted in a four-column cut in the Providence Evening Bulletin. Madeleine Corey, fashion editor, who visited the studios while the picture was being filmed, described the designer's work in her newspaper column.

Following the demonstration at the School of Design, the gowns were displayed in the main windows of the Outlet Store, largest department store. The gowns were on display for about 10 days and then were worn at a fashion show in the ballroom of the Narragansett Hotel.

Arrangements were made with five downtown restaurants to carry theatre copy on the bottom of menus. More than 500 street cars and busses carried car cards. Window tieups were arranged with Liggett's, Tilden and Thurber's Jewelry Store and a leading downtown market.

Novelty Heralds Aid Playdates

Novelty heralds were used by manager Roy Peffley for his playdate of "Strange Love of Martha Ivers" and "Nobody Lives Forever" at the Voge theatre, East Chicago, Ind.

Star Appearance Sparks Premiere Of "Bel Ami"

The personal appearance of Angela Lansbury, star of the picture, gave impetus to the campaign arranged for the world premiere of "The Private Affairs of Bel Ami" at the State theatre, Cleveland, Ohio. The campaign was carried out by manager Maurice Druker.

Miss Lansbury posed with Admiral Hitt and William Veech, president of the Cleveland baseball club, in the interests of Navy Recruiting and the resultant publicity greatly helped to exploit the premiere. Preceding the opening, a luncheon was tendered the British Consulate, newsmen, trade paper and radio representatives.

Theatre newspaper advertising was started eight days in advance. Radio spot announcements were used over WKH, WJW and WGAR six days before opening. Miss Lansbury appeared on several radio programs.

A cooperative newspaper ad was arranged with the World Publishing Company and the May Department Store in connection with the popular-priced edition of the De Maupassant book. Miss Lansbury made a personal appearance at the store to autograph books. In addition, a city-wide tieup on the "Bel Ami" novel was effected with Cleveland libraries.

Music promotion was carried out through song pluggers, who contacted all bands and music stores to exploit the title song in the picture, "My Bel Ami." Other display tieups were set with the Colonial Furniture Store, Record Mart, and book dealers.

Wilson Uses Word Contest To Promote "Dagger"

A jumbled word contest directed at children gave impetus to the playdate of "Cloak and Dagger" at the Capitol theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. The contest was publicized by heralds. Over 450 replies were received. The first 15 boys or girls who submitted correct solutions received free passes. The campaign also included special radio spot announcements. 100 window cards were placed in prominent stores along the main thoroughfares. The campaign was arranged by manager H. F. Wilson.

Ingenious Lobby Promotion Helps Nye "Dagger" Date

A dart display in the lobby proved to be an effective exploitation for manager Louis Nye's engagement of "Cloak and Dagger" at the Hoosier theatre, Whiting, Ind. The display consisted of a 40x60 board with the figures of a man, picture and playdate copy. Darts were placed on a table a few feet away. Guest tickets were awarded to patrons who hit the "heart" of the man. Each patron was allowed one chance. A 24-sheet flash front also helped to promote the playdate.

Daly Sets Full Page Co-Ops

Three full page cooperative newspaper ads were promoted by manager Joe Daly to publicize his engagement of "Temptation" at the Manor theatre, San Mateo, Cal. In addition, Daly effected a tieup with S&W's new apple juice drink called "Temptation." Apple juice was served free in the lobby.

Lobby Promotion Aids "Skies"

Bing Crosby "Blue Skies" records were played in the lobby two weeks in advance to exploit the picture at the State theatre, White Plains, N. Y. Five Westchester County newspapers used art on the playdate. A tieup with a quiz program over station WFAS also helped to publicize the playdate. Guest tickets were awarded to winners. The campaign was arranged by manager Michael Stranger.

U. S. Pictures to Belgian Festival

In supporting the World Film and Art Festival in Brussels, June 1-30, the Belgian Government hopes not only to attract tourist trade, but also to make the Belgian capital the permanent site for the event, according to Richard Zondervan, general manager of the U. S. office of the Festival, and Alex Salkin, the official representative. With more than 100 feature films produced during 1946, the United States has the right to show 10 such films at Brussels. All of the Motion Picture Association member companies have indicated they will participate.

Three types of films will compete at Brussels. Features, subdivided into long and short groups; animated films and cartoons, and scientific pictures. The U. S. will have the right to enter 10 productions in each category. All films must have been produced between January 1, 1946, and April 30, 1947. None can be entered that has been shown at a previous festival and no propaganda films will be admitted.

In addition to 10 feature films, the rules of the Festival permit that five more films be submitted by countries with a large output. The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers will be approached toward that end, Mr. Zondervan said.

Buck Privates Come Home

Universal - International — Abbott & Costello

For the many Abbott and Costello fans who have followed the escapades of the two comedians through their weekly radio program and numerous motion pictures, "Buck Privates Come Home" is all they desire in the way of slapstick comedy, rapid-fire gags and all around comedy.

For the other theatre-goers who are only slightly acquainted with the comedy pair, this will be a delightful surprise, as it is an above average Abbott-Costello film.

Produced by Robert Arthur and directed by Charles T. Barton, the supporting players do much to enliven the comedy sequences. These include Tom Brown as a racing car designer; Joan Fulton, his fiancée; Nat Pendleton, a former Army sergeant and a New York policeman, and six-year-old Beverly Simmons as "Evey," a French war orphan.

As the title indicates, the story is concerned with the two comedians as servicemen on their way home from overseas. Aboard ship inspecting officers find they have smuggled an orphan aboard. As they are discharged from the Army, the orphan escapes from immigration officers and meets her foster uncles. From there their experiences take them into a search for a home; escaping the wrath of a local policeman who was their sergeant in the Army; their entry into the automobile racing business, and finally Costello's mad ride in a midjet racer.

But the plot is secondary. Of first importance is that "Buck Privates Come Home" is a vehicle in which the stars are given free rein in putting over their comedy routines. And, although the routines are familiar, they have been sharpened.

Also worthy of mention is the trick photography under the direction of Charles Van Enger, who has captured all the elements of the hair-raising comedy sequences in which Costello takes the midjet racer on a wild ride over the country-side and through the city's congested traffic.

High Conquest

Monogram—Man Against the Matterhorn

Spectacular scenery and spine-chilling suspense are the principal ingredients of a picture which indicates that there is a great deal to be said for producer-director Irving Allen's technique of combining Hollywood's resources with those of nature herself. The exteriors, photographed in Switzerland by Richard Angst and Tony Braun, are so deftly combined with interiors and closeups filmed at Monogram's Hollywood studio as to lend the whole picture an air of verisimilitude which otherwise might never have been achieved. The breath-taking Alpine scenery, the suspenseful struggle of small figures pitted against the might of the mountain are the picture's greatest asset. It has an out-of-the-ordinary freshness which should be reflected in better-than-ordinary grosses.

Anna Lee, Gilbert Roland and Warren Douglas are the three components of the eternal triangle depicted in Max Trell's screenplay, based on a book by James Ramsay Ullman. All are experienced mountain-climbers; both of the men are in love with Miss Lee, and an ascent of the Matterhorn provides a testing-ground for the emotions of all three. Roland, cast as an Alpine guide, sees an opportunity to rid himself of his rival forever, and leaves the unconscious Douglas to get down as best he may. Miss Lee, who by this time has made up her mind which of the men she really loves, persuades the guide to go back up the mountain to rescue his enemy. He dies in the attempt.

Lud Gluskin is credited as musical director, and his work contributes notably to the over-all production values of the picture.

High Barbaree

MGM—Drama

Based on a novel by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, who wrote the memorable "Mutiny on the Bounty," produced by Everett Riskin and directed by Jack Conway, "High Barbaree" provides a most effective argument for those who say that variations based on proven and tested story formulas are practically inexhaustible. Once again it's a tale about a boy and girl who grow up together; who then are separated and don't see one another for years, with the girl holding firm in her love for the boy and the hero re-discovering his childhood sweetheart. There are the usual complications and the customary happy ending.

Out of this unpretentious story, Mr. Conway has made a film that will tug at the heartstrings of the adults while at the same time it is sure to be a hit with the younger crowd. Biggest draw in the ambitious cast is undoubtedly Van Johnson, who plays a straight dramatic role in this one. His performance should further endear him to his fans.

Able supporting him are the fresh and charming June Allyson and the always reliable Thomas Mitchell, both of whom have considerable marquee appeal. Also in the competent cast is Claude Jarman, Jr., the scrubbed-face youngster who recently made his screen debut in "The Yearling," and pretty Marilyn Maxwell. Under Mr. Conway's deft direction the story continues to build steadily and at a good pace with no trick missed to make the most of the stars' romantic appeal.

The film opens with Johnson, as pilot of a PBY, attacking a Japanese submarine while on patrol in the Pacific. They are shot down and all but he and his co-pilot are killed. From then on the flashback technique is employed as Van tells his friend the story of his life. The early part of the picture shows Van as a youngster of three or four and then as a boy of 14. There are many amusing and touching scenes as the boy, played by Jarman, and his little girl friend go through adventures of a kind that would do justice to any Mark Twain setting. More often than not they are inspired by Mitchell, who plays Van's seafaring uncle.

Years later, when Van and June meet again, now grown up, he has forgotten about his early ambitions to become a doctor and has, instead, become an aviation executive. Also, he is engaged to marry the boss's daughter. June, however, has become a Navy nurse as she had always planned. On seeing one another again they fall in love. The girl wants him to go back to medical school, but he refuses. A tornado teaches him that he would be of more value as a doctor, but June, disillusioned, has already left.

He catches up with her in time. In the end Johnston has a feverish dream in which he visits "High Barbaree," a mystic island in the Pacific, often described to him by his uncle. His co-pilot dies of thirst, but he is saved by a hospital ship commanded by Mitchell and carrying among the nurses—June Allyson.

The Years Between

UI-Prestige—Drama

Although it is decidedly a good picture, "The Years Between" hardly seems to have been made with the American market in view. Consequently, it may present something of a problem in selling for the average house. The film's theme has strong appeal, but all of its background, dialogue and point of view are typically British.

The picture was produced by Sydney Box and directed by Compton Bennett. It is capably acted, with a restraint that will be welcomed by some and criticized by others. Essentially the story tells of the changed mental attitude of individuals directly affected by the war. It shows how, with the men gone, the women step in and take over responsibilities they have never been known to take on before and, finally, how difficult the adjustment is when normal times return.

All this is dramatically demonstrated in terms of a happily married couple. The husband, played by Michael Redgrave, goes off to war and is reported dead. Actually, it turns out later, he's been on a secret mission. When he turns up four years later he finds, what the audience has meanwhile witnessed, that his wife, played by Valerie Hobson, has taken over his seat in Parliament. Also, she has almost married his friend, James McKechnie. Unable to fit himself into the changed scheme of things, he becomes cynical and the marriage, already rocked by his long absence, seems destined to end in divorce. Things are finally straightened out by a faithful housekeeper of the couple, movingly portrayed by Flora Robson.

American audiences will identify themselves with many of the emotional experiences in the film. Redgrave's and Miss Hobson's names on the marquee should help.

Lost Honeymoon

Eagle-Lion—Strictly for Laughs

With Franchot Tone, Tom Conway and Ann Richards as names for the marquee, and a lot of laughs in store for customers attracted by them, this production by Lee Marcus, directed by Leigh Jason from an original screenplay by Joseph Fields, is a most useful item of entertainment. It asks of its beholders nothing but laughter, and provides plenty of reason for it, according to the response made by a Hollywood theatre audience to which it was submitted without advance notification.

Mr. Tone portrays a Rochester, N. Y., architect who learns, on the eve of his marriage, that a young English woman with infant twins has arrived in the country and is on her way to join him as his wife. Having spent six months in England in a state of amnesia following a bump on the head, he cannot be sure that the lady is not indeed his wife, and the twins their children, but is inclined to doubt it and, if it be true, to seek a way out of the situation. Complications compounded strictly for laughs accrue steadily until, when it comes out that the twins are really his, although the woman is not his wife, but a friend of his wife who has died, matters work out to everybody's satisfaction.

Handled in brisk, highly professional fashion, the picture generates a high degree of amusement as it plays.

The Lone Hand Texan

Columbia—Western Adventure

The Durango Kid, the masked rider on the white horse, in this picture again gives Western fans exciting outdoor action. Charles Starrett, in the dual role of the Durango Kid and Steve Driscoll, helps the oppressed. The film follows the general pattern in this series, but as an innovation the villain is a middle aged widow. Smiley Burnette is on hand for his humorous antics and he sings a few Western ballads with the help of Mustard and Gravy, two guitar players.

Driscoll is called upon to help a friend get an oil well started. His friend's efforts have been thwarted by a gang of racketeers. A widow, played by Mary Newton, employs the gunmen in order to get possession of the oil lands. The Durango Kid discovers the woman's scheme and brings her and her gang to justice.

Colbert Clark produced and Ray Nazzarro directed. Ed Earl Repp wrote the original screenplay.

Danger Street

Paramount—Melodrama

William Pine and William Thomas, the producers, present a film which concerns a photographer-reporter and an editor of a picture magazine, with Jane Withers and Robert Lowery heading the cast. There is a great variety of incidents in the melodramatic story.

Jane Withers, as a photographer-reporter, gets some scoop pictures of a gambling place and barely escapes with her films as she is pursued by the racketeer-manager. The publisher decides to sell the magazine. But the staff, headed by Lowery, as the editor, get money together and buy the publication. Miss Withers and Lowery decide to get some pictures of the never-photographed society queen. They stumble on a murder, identify the murderer, expose the girl's scheming fiance and get the pictures. Their financial difficulties are solved and everyone is happy.

Lew Landers directed from a screenplay by Maxwell Shane, Winston Miller and Kae Salkow from an original story by Winston Miller and Kae Salkow. The supporting players include Lyle Talbot, Charles Quigley and Bill Edwards.

The Imperfect Lady

Paramount—Scandal

The value of this one lies more in the marquee names, Ray Milland, Teresa Wright, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, than in the story: an English period piece which details in broad A's and dropped H's the story of a girl who admits to having spent the night in a gentleman's chambers, thus saving him from being convicted of murder charges, and ruining her husband's political career.

Despite this surface sensationalism, there is nothing in the picture to get the censors excited. The picture is placid, polite, leisurely and bland.

The story, written by producer Karl Tunberg, has Miss Wright as pretty Millicent Hopkins touring in a dancing troupe in the English Midlands in 1892. She has been cast out of the parental home for daring to go on the stage. When Millicent meets Clive Loring (Milland), who is campaigning for Parliament, she gives up the stage and returns home to be nearer to Clive. But then Clive's brother (Sir Cedric) comes along muttering about an English Lord marrying a shopkeeper's daughter, which is just what Millicent is, and Millicent returns to the stage. One day Millicent and a girl friend are walking home from the theatre late at night, unescorted and with their stage make-up still on, and they bump into a young man.

A policeman doesn't believe the bump was an accident and attempts to arrest the two girls for accosting men. The girls flee; Millicent, unfortunately, running right back into the arms of the young man and accepting his invitation to hide from the police in his apartment. Turns out the guy is a pianist and he and Millicent play Chopin, drink sherry and discuss matters of law. Later Millicent and Clive marry. Just as Clive is about to introduce a woman's suffrage vote in Parliament, Millicent learns that her pianist-host has been accused of committing a murder on the night he was so helpful. May-fair is at her feet by this time, but she can't let a man die for a murder he didn't commit. Lewis Allen directed.

Before Him All Rome Trembled

Superfilm—"Tosca" and Resistance

Produced in Italy by Excelsa Film and currently released in this country by Superfilm as one of their 20-odd pictures this year, "Before Him All Rome Trembled" is a combination of two stories of the occupation of the Eternal City in two different eras.

With Anna Magnani, star of "Open City," in the leading role, the picture is primarily concerned with the underground movement against the Germans in Rome before it was liberated by the Allies. At the same time about half the picture is devoted to the presentation of Sardou's opera "Tosca," which is also concerned with the city's occupation, but during the Napoleonic era.

Taking the two identical themes director Carmine Gallone has woven a 1944 plot around a group of opera singers who are part of the Italian resistance movement while continuing their duties of delivering performances of "Tosca." Unlike "Tosca" and "Mario" of the opera, they live through their underground experience to present the stage musical before the Allied troops.

Although the current theme is interesting, the highlight of the picture for opera lovers will be the presentation of "Tosca," for which the whole opera company was employed. It is filmed in its original setting with the incomparable music of Puccini directed by Maestro Luigi Ricci.

In supporting roles are Gino Sinimberghi, the singer sought by the Germans for aiding the underground movement; Guido Notari, a Polish refugee doctor, and Steffan Bode-Wab as the German officer in command.

Range Beyond the Blue

PRC—Western

Opening with a burst of gunfire aimed at a galloping stagecoach, this sagebrush drama maintains its energetic pace throughout. As a notable little departure, it is a girl, attractive Helen Mowery, who does the stagecoach driving in the original screenplay of Patricia Harper. Eddie Dean is the hero of the piece, and when not pressing hard against villainy, he is usually lifting his voice in song.

The heavy of this one is out to take over the stagecoach line, so, to make it difficult for Miss Mowery to operate, he has it held up every time it carries a gold shipment. It takes some sleuthing, plus a good measure of shooting and fist-fighting, before Dean digs at the bottom of the plot and exposes the culprits.

Dean's usual partner, Roscoe Ates, supplies the comedy, and Miss Mowery, occupying more footage than usual for a girl in a Western, performs with pleasant competence. Ray Taylor directed the Jerry Thomas production.

Francis the First

Vog Films—Historical Comedy

With the name of Fernandel, France's foremost screen comedian, on the marquee, this French picture should make an excellent attraction for any art theatre. It's Fernandel from beginning to end and the comedian's antics, together with a good, imaginative story that provides the opportunity for some typically French film making and a number of riotously funny scenes, should make a hit wherever French pictures are popular.

The Calamy production, directed by Chriant-Jaque and with a scenario by Paul Fekete, tells of Honorin, played by Fernandel, a simple and naive stage manager of a traveling theatre, whose one ambition is to once play the role of the cavalier in the opera "Francis I, or the Loves of the Beautiful Ferroniere." A hypnotist puts Fernandel to sleep and in his dreams he is transplanted to the days of the Renaissance.

The rest of the story is a take-off on Mark Twain's story, "A Yankee at King Arthur's Court," flavored with gallic humor and seasoned with some excellent acting on the part of Fernandel. In the course of his adventures he is made a Duke by Henri VIII, fights an old-fashioned duel, meets a ghost, and survives a series of medieval tortures. Also he bestows some of the blessings of 20th century civilization on the unsuspecting members of the court of Francis I.

AFE Corp.—French Resistance—1870

Two of Guy de Maupassant's sardonic short stories of the Franco-Prussian War, "Ball of Fat" ("Boule de Suif") and "Mademoiselle Fifi," have been skillfully woven together and have emerged as a screen story entitled "Angel and Sinner." Like many films from the French studios it is a swift-paced, sometimes racy melodrama which utilizes every available bit of talent and ingenuity on the part of the director, the cast and the production staff.

As originally written by de Maupassant each story concerned itself with the resistance of a French girl to the Prussian occupation of 1870.

"Boule de Suif" tells of a girl whose heart is good but whose morals are questionable. Fleeing from the occupying forces in a stagecoach with aristocrats, she is shunned. At a way-station all are held as hostages until the aristocrats persuade the girl to submit to a German officer, who then allows the coach to proceed. For this she is held in even more disdain by her traveling companions.

In the second story "Mademoiselle Fifi" is the name attached to a Prussian officer with an eye for the ladies who is killed by a girl resisting his advances.

For the screen, writers Henri Jeanson, Louis d'Hee and Christian Jacque have placed Micheline Presle in both situations and thus tell their story without interruption. The epilogue explains that the girl eventually marries the one traveling companion who has sympathized with her and appreciates her sacrifice for the others.

Her First Affair

Distinguished Films—Humorous Romance

Starring Danielle Darrieux and introducing handsome Louis Jourdan, "Her First Affair" is another in the long list of foreign films currently being imported into this country. It is a simple story, simply told and containing sufficient romance, subtle comedy and touches of pathos to satisfy most patrons of foreign films.

However, it is a story that depends for the most part upon dialogue for its telling and as such is weighted down with an over-abundance of English subtitles which keeps the audiences' eyes more on reading what is going on than actually seeing the picture itself.

Written and directed by Henri Decoin, who has written many screenplays for Miss Darrieux, the story concerns an orphan girl who becomes a "pen pal" to an aging professor. Fleeing the orphanage she meets the teacher, who poses as a representative of a young friend who wrote the letters and then goes with him to the men's college to live and await the return of her correspondent.

Her attempts to remain hidden from the prying eyes of the schoolboys; the return of the handsome student with whom she falls in love; her return to the orphanage and finally her release, constitute the various situations in the picture.

Like many pictures depending almost solely upon dialogue it is at times slow-paced, but there are undertones of friendliness and humor which will bring a few smiles and chuckles.

REISSUE REVIEWS

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN (Universal)

One of the late W. C. Field's best film comedies, it is being reissued in April, 1947. In addition to Mr. Fields, there are Edgar Bergen and his two assistants, Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, plus Constance Moore, Mary Forbes and Thurston Hall. Reviewing the picture in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, issue of February 18, 1939, William R. Weaver said: "The W. C. Fields of this roaring comedy is the Fields of the unforgettable Follies, rakish, rowdy and unpredictably funny. Edgar Bergen is the debonair Bergen of the (radio program). Charlie McCarthy is funnier, and Mortimer Snerd has some of the best (lines) in the picture. Constructed for laugh purposes and aimed, alternately, at mind and midriff, the film is howling funny and clean." It was produced by Lester Cowan and directed by George Marshall.

I STOLE A MILLION (Universal)

Starring George Raft and Claire Trevor, Dick Foran and Henry Armetta, "I Stole a Million" is based on a crime-does-not-pay theme and concerns a gangster continually harassed by the law until the final scenes when death ends his career. A review of the picture appearing in the July 22, 1939, issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD said: "Documentary in its melodramatic phases, its love story is natural and human. Paradoxically, the show, while being grim and bitter, is warmly appealing. . . . It is a meaty story and as such is told in honest straight-from-the-shoulder fashion. No punches are pulled." Frank Tuttle directed and Burt Kelly was associate producer.

SAN FRANCISCO — PACIFIC GATEWAY (RKO)

This Is America (73,105)

The short marks the 100th anniversary of San Francisco's founding by telling the dramatic story of this, one of America's great financial, industrial and shipping centers. The camera visits historical sites, gives some beautiful views of the whole city and then watches the city's millions at work and play. A good part of the film is given over to a visit to the port now teeming with commercial activity. We see large liners leaving for the Far East, and fishing boats darting in and out of the harbor. San Francisco's old-fashioned trolley cars, as well as its famed Chinatown are informally caught by the camera.

He holds the reins on sound . . .

• As a skilled horseman controls a horse by his touch on the reins . . . now light, now firm, giving, taking—so does the production sound mixer control sound . . . amplifying, modulating . . . correlating sound with action in proper perspective.

In this day when the reality of sound must be absolute, the mixer's work has high importance.

His knowledge of his art must be complete, his skill in using it great . . . for on him depends much of a picture's power to move and hold an audience.

And the mixer's skill is enhanced by working with films which assure faithful reproduction of sound . . . a quality which is so well provided by the family of Eastman sound films.

LET CUSTOMERS DECIDE

THE air is becoming burdened with expert opinions and advice on the selection of pictures which the American industry may with discretion export to foreign markets. It would seem that the proper and ultimately only effective control must be by the exercise of reasonable business judgment and by showmen's experience. Something, one might consider, should be left to the judgment of the patrons, abroad as well as at home.

It should be clear that a picture deemed worthy of general distribution in these United States, with their great array of ethnic components and diversities of taste and opinion, is fit enough for any other audiences which will pay to see it.

There is an undemocratic peril in any process of prejudgment which decides pictures for Americans are not for others. Within the limits of common decency no one essays to decide what we may see on the screen. The customers decide what they want to see, what they like most. They rule production. That is liberty for the common man and his theatre here, and around the world.

ON STAGE COSTS

THE current economic period has brought into the vernacular of business, many businesses, the phrase: "Priced out of the market". It has been discovered in some lines that there is a point at which the customers' sense of propriety in costs and profits brings them to a sit-down with their purses in their hip pockets.

Of relevant interest are some remarks by Mr. Brooks Atkinson, eminent dramatic observer for The New York Times, in an outgiving proclaiming the innocence of critics concerning the commercial career of the stage. Says he: "The fundamental trouble with the theatre is economic. Tickets cost two or three times too much because the costs of producing have become insanely high . . . due to the fact that real estate and the craft unions take too great a share of the income in proportion to the service they contribute. . . . The theatre is no longer a popular institution and the great bulk of the public can never decide whether or not it likes a play because it cannot afford to go to the theatre.

"What the theatre needs is . . . a sharp deflation in the cost of tickets and a drastic improvement in the quality of plays."

ABOUT AN ACTOR

WITHOUT intent to detract in any degree from the glories of the stars of Hollywood and their recognition in the annual awards by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, one may lift an eyebrow at the decision which rates Mr. Harold Russell as giving "the best performance by an actor in a supporting role". Regardless of the official billing and the sequences of the production credit sheet, an argument may be sustained for an opinion that Mr. Russell has proved the de facto star of "The Best Years of Our Lives".

Minus the performance and extraordinary skill of Mr. Russell in this most special of roles, it would have been a very different picture, perhaps a very good one, but without the gripping poignancy of his plight and his competent but restrained portrayal of the psychological consequences of it. It is keynote and essence.

Clearly enough, the direction of Mr. Russell, completely the novice, was indeed a signal performance by Mr. William Wyler, awarded honors for "the best achievement in directing".

MR. O'BRIEN SAYS

THE American industry, as well as the British, may well be interested in the speech of Mr. Thomas James O'Brien, M.P., General Secretary of the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, before the House of Commons, reported in this week's news pages.

He urged especially that it would be "a cardinal error" to reduce the flow of American pictures to British theatres, observing that British films supply about a quarter of their needs and the rest comes from the United States. He made the interesting statement that 33,000,000 people in Britain pay for admission to the cinemas every week and that more than 3,000,000 persons have been standing in queues in the towns and cities every night through the bitter ordeals of British weather.

"The cinema," said Mr. O'Brien, "is the only kindly light amid the encircling gloom."

Also, the speaker made emphatic observations opposing the radical wing of cinema trade unionism which has addressed itself at winning a 40-hour week.

"No industry in Great Britain has yet achieved a 40-hour week," he noted. "The British film industry must be regarded as a vital national industry, not as an easy-going, irresponsible, experimenting ground for policies and ideas which cannot be adopted outside of it."

THE JUNGLE LIFE

THE film enjoys the friendly attention of many diligent clubwomen, among them Mrs. Arthur Goldsmith, chairman of the Motion Picture Preview Study Group of Philadelphia. Her wide and comprehensive correspondence brought in a letter the other day from an army officer stationed way up at Pachmarki, Central Province in India, Captain J. W. Hughes. He reports from afar, thus:

"Went to the local cinema last night to see Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer in 'Together Again'. But I was the only person in the theatre, so I asked them to cancel the show. Jan. 15th: I had to interrupt my letter of yesterday because three Bengal tigers were on the loose and headed our way. Life is unbelievably quiet here, but there are compensations — bananas, oranges and grapefruit are to be had for the picking."

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Rank and the War

J. ARTHUR RANK can keep a secret but Leonard Lyons, syndicated columnist for the New York Post, can't. This is the story that Mr. Lyons has to tell about Mr. Rank and the war: On June 5, 1944, an aide to General Eisenhower approached Mr. Rank and told him, "We plan to invade Europe tonight or tomorrow night." But, continued the aide, if the weather is bad the troops now aboard assault craft will have to come ashore and be housed and the best place for them to be housed is in theatres where they can be entertained and rebriefed. According to the Lyons story, if General Eisenhower had to ask the Government to commandeer the theatres the red tape involved might tip off the invasion. Therefore the approach direct was used to Mr. Rank who controls hundreds of English theatres. "Take them," Mr. Rank offered, "I'll be personally responsible." However, there was no need for a sudden and mysterious closing of Rank theatres. June 6 was D-Day.

Killed

NEW YORK exhibitors and film companies doing business in the state need no longer fear that if any advertising is deemed "indecent" by state authorities, pictures will be barred and theatres closed. The Condon-Wilson bill, ready for Governor Thomas E. Dewey's signature, was vitiated on Tuesday by an amendment, and its printing delayed so it could not reach the Governor before adjournment of the legislature. The bill had been criticized by the industry and by the press.

NAB to PCA

THE NATIONAL Association of Broadcasters, currently in the process of revising its "standards of practice" for the radio industry, has conferred on the West Coast with Motion Picture Association officials to see whether any of the provisions of the Production Code Administration are applicable to radio. NAB counsel will report on the conference at NAB's Special Standards of Practice Committee meeting in New York March 31.

Yardstick

THE RESEARCH division of the Motion Picture Association has as one of its major missions this year the establishment of a dependable statistical yardstick which can be used to measure the economic ups and downs in the motion picture industry, according to Robert W. Chambers, MPA director. "Ours is the only major industry in the United States which has no such index," he stated in his annual report issued by MPA President Eric Johnston Tuesday. Concurrent with Mr. Chambers' statement, there was aggressive business support for legislation pending in Congress which would authorize a new census of business, including the picture industry. If the government should conduct such a census, the MPA activity and the Census Bureau mission could be coordinated since the research section of MPA is in process of moving to the Washington headquarters of the Association. To be included in the MPA census will be data on exhibitors, theatre seats, the role played by theatre managers in community life and other matters.

Disgusted Hunter

HENRY KOSTER, who will direct William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life" for Cagney Productions, is fed up with the talent hunt. Because many producers and directors believe the talent hunt to be a sort of Sacred Cow of the industry, Mr. Koster has been silent for a long time. But since he has talked to more than 250 girls, tested between 30 and 40 of them, without turning up a single newcomer able to play the role of Kitty in "Time of Your Life," he's reached the point and spoken his piece. Mr. Koster believes the talent hunt is discouraging, disheartening, expensive and unproductive.

Tarzan in Rome

TARZAN caused a small riot in Rome recently. The theatre in which "Tarzan's New York Adventure" was recently exhibited was so overcrowded that a fight resulted among those standing in the theatre and those fortunate enough to have found seats. "Childish and enraged fanaticism," commented some sections of the Italian press, which criticized the taste of the Italian audience. On the contrary, the Osservatore Romano commented favorably on the fight, inferring that if the Italian people prefer such candid and simple pictures then there is hope for the Italian soul.

Fadeout

TURNING down a petition by the Columbia Broadcasting System for approval of proposed standards to start commercial color television broadcasts, the Federal Communication Commission this week said that with room for only one color television system in the radio spectrum, further experimentation was necessary. "The commission cannot escape the conclusion that many of the fundamentals of a color television system have not been adequately field-tested," the 14-page FCC ruling stated. CBS color television has yet to achieve adequate brightness for home use, the Commission found. It also voiced the opinion that there may be another system of transmitting color which would permit cheaper receivers and narrower band widths.

Republic in Color

CONSOLIDATED Laboratories, owned by Republic, has perfected a three-color process for films and within two years all Republic pictures will be in color, Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic, told the press at a luncheon in Hollywood Wednesday. This new process will supplant Republic's two-color process.

The Republic president also announced that he has signed a contract with Loew's International for the foreign distribution of the company's product in 16mm.

Concerning the recent discussion of the Gene Austry contract, Mr. Yates said that the matter has been settled and the singing cowboy star will make two pictures for Republic instead of four. On the general business outlook, he said grosses are off between 12 and 15 per cent in this country and between 20 and 25 per cent in England. Outstanding pictures, however, are still grossing as much as they did during the boom days of the war.

Trade Week

NORMAN E. Dunnavant has been named general chairman of the 1947 Los Angeles county World Trade Week committee, according to an announcement from Donald M. Nelson in his capacity as director of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and chairman of its World Trade committee. Los Angeles will observe its 21st annual celebration during the week of May 18 to 24. The occasion will remind citizens of Southern California about the magnitude and volume of foreign trade passing through its harbors, Mr. Nelson said.

New Deal?

COULD be there's a different wind blowing over Washington these days. Anyway, the Republican National Committee says newsreels "now" are giving the Grand Old Party proper attention. A "noticeable improvement" was the term used the other day by William Murphy, the Committee's public relations director.

Big Money

VERA CASPARY, author of such mystery novels as "Bedelia" and "Laura," both of which have been brought to the screen, has signed a contract with Eagle-Lion studios which, it is estimated, will net her at least $2,500,000 in 10 years. Under the terms of the agreement she is to deliver one story annually to Eagle-Lion. For each story she will receive a flat sum and five per cent of the net profit. Eagle-Lion is currently working on Miss Caspary's "Out of the Blue" and is studying "Madeleine."

Miss Truman

MARGARET TRUMAN, the President's daughter, received numerous offers from motion picture companies and concert managers following her debut as a singer last Sunday night with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. An estimated 15,000,000 heard her sing "Cielito Lindo," "The Last Rose of Summer," and "Charmant Oiseau." Critics' notices ranged from good to fair. Miss Truman has made no announced decision on the picture offers.

Similarity

HERE is one told by Sam Seidelman, Eagle-Lion and PRC foreign head, on his return from the Far East. Just about the time when David O. Selznick announced his new releasing organization, conveniently called SRO, the Shaw Brothers, Far East distributors, acquired the distribution rights for Sir Alexander Korda's pictures in Singapore and Malaya. Their new initials—SRO, Shaw Releasing Organization.

Bored

WASHINGTON, which has our judges and our lawmakers, our lobbyists and our administrators; Washington, where centers we're told, they throbbing pulse of America—this Washington bores its citizens. A Washington Post crew went around the other day and found, it reported, that 51 per cent of Washington's inhabitants "believe there are not enough things for entertainment." They asked more theatres.

Public Relations

HOLLYWOOD may soon show the public its good side with the most important weapon it has: films. Representatives of the producers, Screen Writers Guild, Screen Actors Guild and Screen Directors Guild Tuesday night discussed producing a picture or a series of short subjects which would show graphically Hollywood's "constructive" phases. The discussion was at dinner in Perino's Cafe, Hollywood, with Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, presiding.

INDUSTRY WAITS ON APPEAL BUT TRUST SUITS CONTINUE

Myers Counsel for Theatre in Washington Action; Majors Widen Bidding

Uneasily marking time between one court decision and another, the industry finds itself in an experimental, confused and uncertain state. Until the Supreme Court decides whether the New York District Court was right or wrong in its decree in the U. S. vs. Paramount, et al., anti-trust suit nothing is settled.

That fact was borne in upon the industry last week when three new anti-trust suits were filed against the five major distributors and others and when an Ohio amusement company sued Universal-International because it would not sell its product under the outlawed franchise agreement.

Face Problems on Pools, Bidding, Arbitration

And if further evidence were needed of the difficulties being encountered during the industry's limbo period, snags, snares and delusions continue to be reported in the dissolution of pools, the when and how of bidding, the need for new exchange centers, and the arbitration system.

In Washington District Court, at the weekend, Shore Amusement, Inc., Milford, Del., filed an anti-trust suit seeking treble damages totaling $105,000 against Schine Circuit, Inc., its affiliated Chesapeake Theatres Corporation, the five major distributors, Universal, United Artists and Republic. Abram F. Myers, counsel for National Allied, is, with two other attorneys, representing Shore.

The brief charged that the defendants conspired to keep the Shore theatre from getting first run product and kept the market open to the Schine-affiliated theatre, the Plaza, in Milford. The brief also asked that the distributor defendants be enjoined and restrained from refusing to lease features to the plaintiff on a "competitive basis" for exhibition.

Two Anti-Trust Actions Filed in Vermont

The two other anti-trust actions both centered about Vermont theatres.

A $1,400,000 anti-trust suit against 10 distributors and four exhibitors has been filed in the U. S. District Court in Burlington, Vt., by Joseph P. Wilson, operator of the Brandon Community theatre, charging that in 1935 the defendants had formed a combine in a conspiracy allegedly to break the law. Distributors named are: Paramount, Loew's-MGM, Warners, RKO, United Artists, Universal, Columbia, Republic, Monogram and PRC. The exhibitors named are: Samuel Kurson, Bangor, Me.; Newell

CASE RECORD MAY COST $90,000 FOR PRINTING

It may cost an estimated $90,000 to print the record of the New York anti-trust suit for submission to the Supreme Court, to which all interested parties in the case have appealed. Last week attorneys for the eight distributor-defendants in the suit indicated they would confer with Robert L. Wright, who prosecuted the case for the Government, on how much of the record should be printed. If all the hundreds of exhibits offered in the case are printed, the cost might rise to that $90,000 figure. Nobody knows yet who will pay the printing costs.

and Kenneth Kurson, Newton, Mass., and the Millinocket Opera House. The suit charges the combine was directed against independent operators who were discriminated against in that they could not obtain first run pictures.

In the second Vermont action, State Amusements, Inc., operator of the State theatre, Bellows Falls, Vt., filed an anti-trust suit in the U. S. District Court at Boston against Interstate Theatre Corporation, Rockingham Operating Company, Paramount, Loew's, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, RKO, United Artists, Universal, Columbia and Republic. The complaint alleges that as a result of conspiracy, Interstate and Rockingham have overbought the product of the defendant distributors, who have refused to sell any product to the plaintiff on first run and that an illegal clearance of 60 to 90 days has been imposed against the plaintiff. Interstate operates 32 houses in New England. Rockingham operates the Opera House in Bellows Falls.

If the District Court's decree is sustained in toto by the Supreme Court, there will be an end to anti-trust suits, many industry observers believe. They base this idea on the belief that the decree covers all points of argument which have prompted anti-trust suits in the past.

Ohio Court Dismisses Theatre Franchise Suit

In the first case of its kind reported since the decree, Judge Cecil Randall in Franklin County Circuit Court, Columbus, Ohio, dismissed the injunction suit of the Drexel Amusement Company against Universal-International in which Drexel sought to prevent U-I from selling films to other theatres in the Drexel competitive area and complained that the company refused to sell product under the terms of the three-year franchise which Drexel held with the distributor. Attorneys for Universal argued that the franchise was inoperative under the New York decree which ruled that franchises were illegal.

The oral decision in this case was handed down March 12.

See Bidding Provision Actually Effective April 1

Meanwhile the complexities of the bidding provisions of the decree, on which stays have been requested of the Supreme Court by Columbia, Universal and United Artists, continue to be another unsettling influence within the industry.

On the one hand is the possibility that paragraph nine, Section II, of the decree, which becomes effective April 1, will make bidding compulsory for all on that date instead of on July 1, the date on which the decree expressly states competitive bidding shall go into effect. Paragraph nine enjoins the distributor from arbitrarily refusing the demand of an exhibitor to license a feature to him for exhibition on a run selected by the exhibitor. Currently RKO, MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Columbia and Universal are conducting bidding experiments.

The bidding provision, the experiments have shown already, make for added work at the exchange center. This work has mounted to the level where serious consideration is being given to dividing the 31 existing exchange areas into smaller units, perhaps establishing exchanges where shipping centers are now established.

Paramount is reported seeking to establish an exchange center at Jacksonville, Fla., where it now has a shipping station, to divide the Atlanta labor load. The company also may establish an exchange at San Antonio to help out the Dallas exchange's work.

May Ask Stay of Order Ending Arbitration

The motion picture arbitration system, doomed to be dissolved April 1 under the terms of the decree, may get some additional and life-giving backing. The five theatre-owning defendants, it is reported, are considering asking the U. S. Supreme Court for a stay of the District Court's dissolution order. The five previously appealed the order after arguing during the hearings on the case for the retention of arbitration. The court, however, felt itself without power to order compulsory arbitration and contented itself with urging voluntary arbitration.

The five majors are understood to have decided that voluntary arbitration would be impracticable. However, only Paramount, Loew's and Twentieth Century-Fox are believed to favor requesting a stay.

THE DECREE

Distributors Widening Bidding Experiments

Reports of pictures sold under the bidding system continue to be received.

In New Orleans, Columbia sold "The Jolson Story" away from Paramount-Richards Theatres. The feature played the opposition Joy theatre there and it has been purchased by independents in Paramount-Richards cities elsewhere in the New Orleans territory.

In Greenville, S. C., the Ritz has bid Universal-International's "The Egg and I" away from the Wilby-Kincey circuit. Similarly, the Wilby-Kincey circuit lost "The Egg and I" and 20th-Fox's "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" to the Manor, Charlotte.

In Chicago, the competing Harmon and Vision theatres have been offered: "My Darling Clementine," "Margie," "Dangerous Millions," and "Wanted for Murder."

In Michigan City, Indiana, all these, plus "Strange Journey" and "Wake Up and Dream," have been offered for first-run between Lewis B. Philon's Liberty and the Manta and Rose Circuit's Tivoli.

For first-run in Decatur, Illinois, in bidding between Gus Constan's Avon theatre and the Great States' Lincoln theatre, 20th Century-Fox has offered six films.

In bidding in Cicero, Illinois, between Jim Booth's Palace and the Bartelstein's Annetafi three of these and two reissues have been offered.

Paramount is offering all pictures that become available eight days after their Loop opening to Philon's Liberty theatre in Michigan City, Indiana, which is competing for them with the Tivoli, first run house of the Manta & Rose Circuit.

"Two Years Before the Mast" was won by Dudley Gazzolo's Imperial over Harry Lubliner, owner of the Four Star, while Ben Banowitz won the film for his Harmony theatre in bidding against Morris Altcheller's Vision theatre.

Paramount Gives Competitors Ten Days to Answer Bids

The same group of theatres also are bidding on Paramount's "Blue Skies." Paramount gives competitors ten days in which to answer bids. Other companies vary, with RKO giving 24 days in some instances and asking for prompter replies where the situation warrants it.

Paramount is also going to offer pictures for bidding in two down-state situations that have requested it. In Wilmington, Illinois, the Anderson Circuit's Wilton theatre and the Butcher Bros. Mar theatre will bid for Paramount product.

M-G-M has been among the first to adopt the auction method of buying pictures, and has offered several groups of films in the Cicero squabble between Jim Booth and the Bartelsteins. The latest to be offered are: "The Beginning or the End," "My Brother Who Talks to Horses," and "Gallant Bess," and two reissues, "Rage in Heaven" and "Boom Town."

MGM has also offered films in disputes between the Harmony and Vision in Chicago; the Revue and Rivoli and Chicago; the Wancee theatre and the Great States' Peerless in Kewanee; and Gus Constan's Avon and Great States' Lincoln in Decatur.

Selznick Sales Meeting Held

District sales managers of the Selznick Releasing Organization, headed by Neil Agnew, president, and Milton Kusell, general sales manager, held a two-day meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York Wednesday and Thursday. Under discussion was the national release of "Duel in the Sun" and other films due this year.

The whole national releasing schedule of "Duel" is being rearranged, according to Mr. Kusell. The change also is affecting the New York area where, as a result, the Technicolor Western will not open for several weeks. It is understood that the Selznick interests still would like "Duel" to go into the Astor theatre, but talks are also going on with several other theatres. A decision on a house and an opening date is expected next week.

Selznick sales managers who attended the meeting included Sam Horowitz, Chicago; Edward Fontaine, Washington, D. C.; A. J. Delcambræ, Dallas; Tom Duane, Boston; Henry Krumm, Atlanta, and John Howard, Los Angeles. Mr. Krumm recently was named southern division manager.

Besides "Duel," the meeting's agenda also included a discussion of Alfred Hitchcock's "The Paradine Case," starring Gregory Peck, Ann Todd, Ethel Barrymore, Charles Laughton, Charles Coburn and two new players—Louis Jourdan and Valli. The film is due for national release September 1. Also to be released this year is "Portrait of Jennie," starring Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten, which is currently being shot in New York.

Pickwick Anti-Trust Suit Settled Out of Court

The six-year-old anti-trust suit filed in New Haven in 1941 by Pickwick theatre, Greenwich, Conn., has been settled and withdrawn from court action, it was revealed in New York last Thursday with the filing of a stipulation in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. The action originally asked $5,000,000 damages of the major distributors, claiming the theatre, which had been operated by E. J. Peskay, had been forced to close in 1939 because it was unable to obtain product on an equitable run in relation to Stamford, Conn., and Port Chester, N. Y.

UA Asks Stay on Bidding Order

United Artists Monday applied to the U. S. Supreme Court for a stay on the competitive bidding order and practically every other provision of the final decree in the New York anti-trust suit, affecting minimum admissions, single sales, clearances, formula deals, master agreements, and the arbitrary refusal of an exhibitor requesting a run. Stay was sought on every provision of Section II of the decree except that prohibiting franchises.

The three non-theatre-owning defendants in the suit, Columbia, United Artists and Universal, all of whom have appealed major portions of the decree, are all now on record as desiring bidding order stays.

Universal's stay request, made March 4, was placed on the desk of Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed March 12. That company's application asked a stay on competitive bidding and all provisions of Section II affecting existing contracts. Columbia's request, filed March 14, asked for a stay on competitive bidding, the injunction against single sales, and other provisions.

Hearings on stay applications probably will be held by Justice Reed late next week. Stays can be granted until April 1.

In its application, UA brought up the new point of contempt proceedings. "Until there has been a decision on the appeal," UA stated, "the appellant, in trying to establish an untried system (of selling) as prescribed by the court, will at all times be in jeopardy of a contempt citation."

UA protested that the New York District Court in enjoining the defendants from granting any license in which minimum prices for admission are fixed has "deprived the appellant of well established property rights as well as rights conferred by the Copyright Law."

The UA application also attacked the court order placing the burden of proving the legality of clearance upon the distributor and the necessity, under the competitive bidding order, of ignoring the rights of old-established customers.

In concluding, UA insisted that "a tremendous hardship" would be imposed if Section II of the decree were put into effect and then finally reversed or stricken out.

Propose Bidding Solution To Jackson Park Suit

In a brief filed March 13 in Chicago District Court the five major distributors and Balaban and Katz and Warner Brothers theatre circuits proposed that the Jackson Park theatre be given the opportunity to bid for features and that this opportunity be substituted for Judge Michael L. Igoe's decree in the Jackson Park anti-trust suit, which calls for the elimination of the Chicago system of release. Arguments will be heard during the April session of the court. The decree limits Loop runs to two weeks, abolishing all Loop clearance.

BRITISH LABOR CHIEF RAPS MOVE TO SLASH U. S. FILMS

O'Brien Tells Commons It Would Be Error to Cut Imports Now or Later

by PETER BURNUP
in London

"The cinema is the only kindly light amid the encircling gloom."

With these words, last week, Thomas James O'Brien, M.P., general secretary of the largest of the industry's trades unions, the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, joined the rising chorus of protests against the suggested cut in the import into Britain of American films.

Speaking in the House of Commons debate on the country's grave economic situation and replying to arguments that it was necessary to restrict film imports in order to save dollar expenditure, Mr. O'Brien stated:

"It will be a cardinal error to cut supplies of American films to Britain now or in the near future. There are not enough British films made in Britain, or likely to be made in the next few years, to supply the cinemas of the country and to meet the legitimate demands of the people's entertainment. British films supply about a quarter of the needs of British cinemas. The rest come from the United States."

Mr. O'Brien agreed with his brother M.P.'s that a cut in film imports might save millions of pounds in dollar remittance, but, he pointed out, that could be done only by two alternatives: closing more than half the cinemas in Britain or showing the same picture for a month to six weeks in the average provincial town.

"That," commented the forthright secretary, "would be more than people would stand. Certainly it is more than the British people, who have stood so much, should be called upon to stand."

During the recent bitter weather, he told the House, over 3,000,000 people stood in queues every night of the week waiting for "the pictures." Approximately 33,000,000 people paid for admission to cinemas every week. Behind those facts, he said, was the great social and psychological issue that the mass of the people found their main relief and relaxation in motion pictures.

Says Screen Not in Same Category as Sports

The cinema, he added, should not be put into the same category as sports events. Motion pictures should be treated, he claimed, as a constructive part of the country's social life. It would be a disgraceful thing, he concluded, if Britons, at this time of crisis in their lives, were to be deprived of their diversion and the inspiration they derived from motion pictures.

Mr. O'Brien's restrained and statesmanlike attitude throughout the power and coal crisis here has created a considerable impression in industry circles here. His latest move is to crack down on those of his members who are demanding the immediate institution of a 40-hour week in the studios. Local branches of the union have been adopting resolutions in regard to the negotiations now proceeding with the Producers' Association which contain veiled threats of imposing a time limit on the negotiations.

Mr. O'Brien, in reply, has addressed a circular to all studio shop-stewards in which he reminds them that their union is not the only one concerned and that negotiations have to be carried on in association with the Association of Cine-Technicians and the Electrical Trades Union.

Points Out Present Pact Has 18 Months to Run

Moreover, says Mr. O'Brien, the existing agreement has some 18 months to run and that the producers need not at this juncture have agreed to any further talks.

"The Trades Union Congress' aim of a 40-hour week," runs the circular, "is to be achieved not at once, but in accordance with the differing economic structures of industries. No industry in Great Britain has yet achieved a 40-hour week."

Then follows a significant slap-down for the radicals:

"The British film industry must be regarded as a vital national industry and not as an easy-going irresponsible experimenting ground for policies and ideas which cannot be adopted outside it."

By some energetic scraping of the barrel's bottom the crisis which threatened, by reason of the close-down of raw stock manufacturing plants and printing laboratories, has been staved off, but only—in the view of the realists—for the time being.

Government Cuts Stock Needs by 850,000 Feet

The Government agreed to reduce its raw stock demands by 850,000 feet per week. Newsreels took a voluntary cut. Nevertheless, many believe a day of reckoning will come, and that soon. The all-industry committee dealing with the crisis has gone into official recess until April 10, but CEA officials anticipate that it will be recalled well before that date.

Meanwhile, CEA's executive committee is pressing for an early recession of the Government's ordinance that theatres shall operate on two-thirds of their pre-crisis electricity consumption.

Most significant circumstance throughout the crisis has been the determined and at times nigh-venomous criticism addressed by exhibitors against newsreels. Distributors generally and newsreel executives in particular allege that the CEA took an unfair advantage of the situation in threatening to cut the reels entirely out of their programs.

Negotiations have been in process for considerable time by which the newsreel people hope to obtain greater rentals for their product. They claim that production costs have lately gone up by leaps and bounds. This eagerness of exhibitors to abandon the reels, they assert, is a move to evade that issue.

Dickinson Joins United World

Edward T. Dickinson, Jr., until recently the American representative on the Emergency Economic Committee for Europe, at-attached to the American Embassy in London, has been named vice-president in charge of the development and distribution of educational films for United World, the 16mm subsidiary of Universal Pictures, Inc.

Prior to the war Mr. Dickinson was research assistant to Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board of U. S. Steel. During the war he was granted leave at the request of Donald M. Nelson to become executive director of the Planning Committee of the War Production Board.

After serving the Board for a year, Mr. Dickinson volunteered for the Marine Corps and served abroad.

Davis Succeeds Prior As CEA President

London Bureau

Vice-president B. T. Davis has succeeded Fred A. Prior as president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association and Dennis Walls has taken over as vice-president with the right of succession to the chair a year hence. Mr. Davis, a Birmingham man and an accountant, has been chairman of CEA's Birmingham branch for a number of years.

Jones Joins Levey

Charles Reed Jones has been appointed by Jules Levey as special representative for the forthcoming Levy-United Artists release, "New Orleans." Mr. Jones most recently was national publicity director of the Motion Picture Division for the March of Dimes campaign.

ON THE MARCH Eagle-Lion Into Latin America

by RED KANN

EDDIE GRAINGER, once eastern district sales manager of 20th Century-Fox and a circuit operator since 1936, finds the M. A. [Mort] Shea circuit of which he is president looking a problem squarely in the face. He can't be alone in giving vent to his concern over declines in children's patronage.

It takes no fancy kind of wisdom to know illegitimate offspring, narcotics, gunplay, liquor, mistresses, murder and rape hardly are subject matter for impressionable minors who are getting lots of it on celluloid these days.

His typewriter in hand, Grainger writes On the March:

"Starting with about 1942 we, along with other theatre operators, started a gradual increase in admission prices believing this increase, which the public would accept because of generally rising prices, would offset the reduced attendance brought about by so many of our patrons—boys and girls—leaving our cities to join the armed forces or to migrate to industrial centers for high wages.

"When the war ended and the mustering out process started and there was a tapering off of industrial activities in the big cities, I cautioned all of our men to watch attendance records closely; that a drop-off might indicate the public was getting price-conscious and that we might find some of our prices too high.

"Our total attendance record, which we keep quarterly, continues to be satisfactory, but the following is something I have given a lot of thought. Frankly, I haven't found the answer to it and it occurs to me that maybe the producers should give more thought to it.

"Children's attendance is constantly falling off." As you know, we operate in 23 cities [Ohio: Akron, Ashtabula, Cambridge, Conneaut, Dover, Geneva, Lancaster, Marietta, Newark, New Philadelphia, Youngstown, Zanesville. Massachusetts: Amherst, Greenfield, Westfield. Pennsylvania: Bradford, Erie, McKees Rocks, Pittsburgh. New York: Jamestown. New Hampshire: Manchester, Nashua.] There is only one city—Cambridge, O.—where children's attendance has not fallen off. In Newark, O., during 1946, children's attendance was more than 12,000 less than 1945.

"In Zanesville, O., such attendance was more than 25,000 less than 1945. The same facts prevail in every other city in which we operate except in big cities such as Akron, Youngstown and Pittsburgh where our children's attendance is not too important because of downtown locations. Cambridge is the only city where we did not increase our prices for children. We merely added the Federal tax. In every other situation, we have gone up to 16 or 20 cents, including tax.

"Some of our managers do not feel it is price, but that it is the quality of pictures being produced which is the cause of this decrease in children's attendance. [We don't go along on their price slant. But on that, more later.] They point out that, apparently, none of the producers is making drives for kids' business. There is no Andy Hardy series. There are no Shirley Temples, Jane Withers, Freddie Bartholomews."

Now, no one should jump to the conclusion this is a plea for a rainbow at the end of every film. Grainger is not arguing against meaty themes; his experience protects him against that. His disturbance is over a diminishing curve in patronage of the youngsters in most of his houses, a means of stemming the tide and a method of re-attracting those already gone. This becomes a logical problem in practical theatre management.

Moreover, he is cautious enough not to presume he has the complete cure-all although the series like those suggested by some of his managers, no doubt, would help toward a solution. Whether or not soaring production costs would make them feasible for Hollywood to undertake is something else, however.

A Shirley Temple doesn't happen merely by wishing it. The Jane Withers' were B's, as were practically all others in that production category. Times, and costs, have changed so sharply that Hollywood executives today maintain B product has been priced right out of the market. By this they mean costs have risen so precipitously, and rentals have not, that the entire business of turning out any B film is a steadily losing enterprise.

If their analysis were to be accepted without challenge, Grainger and/or others similarly placed won't be getting the specially tailored merchandise they feel required to keep the young ones coming. Not unless there develops the vision which is sufficiently far-seeing to take it on the chin, if need be, in order to preserve the juvenile audiences of today because they are the audiences of tomorrow. This puts vision squarely athwart the balance sheet.

Usually, it's a losing contest.

Outburst of a Midwest exhibitor, tying directly to the above:

"Pictures are loaded with crime, horror and sensuality. It is becoming a problem to avoid booking and playing two, three or even four murder pictures in a row."—Edward G. Zorn, president of the United Theatre Owners of Illinois, bombarding at Peoria.

After experiencing a boom right after the liberation, business in the Philippines has fallen off about 40 per cent, but big pictures still draw well, according to Sam Seidelman, foreign sales head of Eagle-Lion and Producers Releasing Corporation. Mr. Seidelman has just returned from a four-month survey of the Philippines, Hong Kong, Singapore, China, Siam and Indo-China.

Mr. Seidelman announced expansion plans for Eagle-Lion in Latin America where, by the end of this year, the company will have 14 offices. By June of 1947, branches will have been established in Mexico City, Panama City, Lima, Sanitago, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Trinidad, Puerto Rico and Cuba. He will leave for Mexico City in May to organize the first Latin American office. "We will have offices wherever other American companies have offices," he said. PRC, which has its own arrangements with local distributors, is not included in the Latin American expansion.

PRC soon will open an office in Manila, Mr. Seidelman said. This will be the first and only PRC office abroad. The branch will handle J. Arthur Rank product, domestically handled by Eagle-Lion and distributed through PRC facilities.

Goetz-Brulatour May Have Six on Republic's Board

Six of the 14 members on Republic's board will represent the interests of the Harry M. Goetz-Jules Brulatour, Inc., Corporation if stockholders approve the slate of nominees at their annual meeting April 1 at the New York home office, it was disclosed last Wednesday in the company's proxy statement. Up for election for the first time as Goetz-Brulatour nominees are Mr. Goetz, described in the statement as consultant and assistant in connection with Republic production; Samuel Becker, member of the law firm of Becker & Berman, and Harry C. Mills, an executive of J. C. Penney, Inc. During the course of the year three other directors representing Goetz-Brulatour interests were elected to Republic's board to fill vacancies. They are: William M. Collins, Jr., president of the Inland Rubber Corp.; Charles T. Fisher, president of the National Bank of Detroit, and Thomas F. Brown, vice-president of National Distillers Products Corp.

Selznick and Goldwyn End Astor Sharing Deal

New York's Astor theatre will become available for product other than from Samuel Goldwyn and David O. Selznick when the agreement between the two expires early next month, according to Maurice Maurer, who manages the house for City Investing Company. The two producers contracted to share the house on an alternating basis, but their deal will not be renewed.

Grosses React To Oscar Sweep For "Best Years"

This year, for the first time since "Gone With the Wind" won the 1939 Academy Award, it was possible to gauge the effect of the Oscar-presentations on the box office success of a picture, when grosses on Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives" began to soar a few days after the film had been honored with nine of the Academy's top awards.

Most important, it was named the best motion picture of the year; Fredric March was cited as the year's best actor for his performance in "Best Years of Our Lives"; Harold Russell was honored as the best supporting actor, and William Wyler and Robert E. Sherwood took awards as best director and best writer, respectively.

Theatres Leased

To safeguard himself against violations of the recent court ruling which ended fixing of admission prices and consequently put an end to the conventional type of roadshow, Arthur Sachson, Goldwyn sales head, has leased theatres across the country. Top admission charge is $1.80. In some spots, depending on the situation, it is $1.50.

Two kinds of deals are made. Under one the producer takes over the house, pays all expenses and has the right to stay there as long as the picture makes money. Another, usually made with independent exhibitors, involves a 70-30 percentage deal, with the producer retaining the right to stay longer at an agreed price.

Where "Best Years" has been shown it has considerably outgrossed "The Kid from Brooklyn," Mr. Goldwyn's last release, the Goldwyn office says. This despite the fact that "Kid" has an average of nine showings a day. In Minneapolis, where it grossed $17,000 for the first week, "Best Years" grossed $22,407 for the first five days.

Possible $1,000,000 at Astor

At the Astor, where "Best Years" now is in its 17th week, Saturday, March 15, was the biggest in six weeks, with a $8,745 gross. The previous Thursday was $3,300, and Friday, the day after the awards were announced, brought in $4,677. Mr. Sachson predicted that, if the picture stays at the Astor until Labor Day at an average weekly take of $30,000, "Best Years" would net $1,000,000 in that house alone. At the 1,200-seat Chicago Woods, where "Best Years" in its 13th week is doing as well as "Kid" did in its second week, grosses also run high and an expected 26-week run should net about $700,000, he said.

At the 1,794-seat Capitol theatre in Cincinnati, where the average gross is about $12,000 a week, "Best Years" now grosses about $30,000. The same holds true for the Colony in Miami, ordinarily a holdover house never earning over $3,500 weekly.

Five Academy Cartoon Awards In 7 Years Is Quimby Record

Tom and Jerry in a scene from "The Cat Concerto".

Five Academy Awards in seven years is the enviable record of Fred C. Quimby, MGM Cartoon producer, whose latest offering, "The Cat Concerto", a Tom & Jerry Cartoon in Technicolor, won the Oscar as the best cartoon of 1946, at the Academy's presentation in Hollywood last Thursday night.

Fred C. Quimby

Doodle Mouse" in 1943; "Mouse Trouble"

In previous years Mr. Quimby produced the award-winning cartoons, "The Milky Way" in 1940; "Yankee in 1944, and "Quiet Please" in 1945. All of these one-reel subjects featured MGM's cartoon characters Tom & Jerry.

In addition to producing the Tom & Jerry Cartoons, Mr. Quimby is executive producer in charge of short subjects at the MGM studios in Culver City, and heads the studio's cartoon department, established in 1936.

Mr. Quimby's cartoon department has a staff of 150 persons who devote their time to the creation of the miniature mixtures of mirth, music and mayhem.

In addition to the Tom & Jerry Cartoons, Mr. Quimby's staff also turn out series featuring Barney Bear; Happy, the bloodhound; Butch, the pugnacious bulldog; Toots, the coy cat, and the lady known as "Red", who first appeared in "Red Hot Riding Hood".

THREE N. Y. CITIES EYE BOX OFFICE

May Take Advantage of Taxing Power Allowed by New State Law

With three of New York State's seven largest municipalities preparing to take advantage of the taxing powers recently approved by the state legislature, including the levying of a five per cent admission tax, the Metropolitan Motion Picture Association and the American Theatres Association were to meet in New York this week to prepare their campaigns to inform the public of the inequities of the measure.

Buffalo and Yonkers are understood to be in favor of immediately invoking the newly authorized taxing powers, while Mayor William O'Dwyer has said he is glad New York City now has such powers. Other cities, meanwhile, are studying the possibilities of the measure.

Arguments Fail

Last week Robert W. Coyne, executive director of the ATA; Oscar Doob, Loew's Theatres; Fred J. Schwartz, president of the MMPA; Morton Sunshine, representing the Independent Theatre Owners of America; Henry J. Walters of RKO Theatres, and Sol Ullman of Fabian Theatres, met in Albany with Governor Thomas E. Dewey to argue against the proposed tax measure. Their arguments were unsuccessful.

The state law, which at midweek was almost assured of the Governor's signature since he previously recommended passage of the bill, would enable all counties and those cities with more than 100,000 population to impose a five per cent tax on admissions and would tax automobiles, liquor and restaurant meals.

Meanwhile, lawyers and representatives of the major film companies met in New York last Friday to discuss means of combating the tax.

The MMPA-ATA campaign, if undertaken, will make use of newspapers, radio, billboards and other available media, including a special trailer, to explain to the public the inequities of the tax. The campaigns would be used in those municipalities where the admission tax is imposed.

Fight Ohio Proposal

In Columbus, Ohio, Monday, P. J. Wood, secretary of the ITO of Ohio, told exhibitors in a special bulletin to contact their state representatives immediately and voice their opposition to Governor Thomas J. Herbert's proposal that the state vacate the admission tax field and permit municipalities to impose local admission taxes.

"If this bill were passed by the legislature," said Mr. Wood, "it would bring down upon the amusement industry in Ohio a hodge-podge of local amusement taxes of varying rates as high as 10 per cent."

Further repercussions of the Fox West Coast-Warner Brothers San Bernardino tax case, in which the theatre interests won a victory, are being sounded in Stockton, Cal., where Fox West Coast says a comparable situation prevails. FWC officials claim that their four theatres had been paying city admission taxes under protest since the San Bernardino tax was ruled unconstitutional and discriminatory last November.

Citing the unfair allocation which the amusement tax set on theatres, the FWC spokesmen said that they were paying approximately 39 per cent of the city's total revenue. That the burden was too heavy was evidenced, they said, by the January gross for their California, Ritz, State and Rialto theatres, which amounted to $7,428, as against an amusement tax of $2,897. Fox West Coast officials are conferring on possibilities of bringing suit against the city of Stockton.

Seek Minneapolis Fee Rise

The Minneapolis License Commission plans to increase annual fees for theatres which would lift the total income from the source about three times, the greater rise hitting the smaller theatres, according to Stanley Kane, executive director of North Central Allied. Opposing the plans for the increases, Mr. Kane suggested the commission abolish the present zone system and establish a flat rate seating capacity.

In Bristol, Va., motion picture interests have defeated a proposed five per cent admission tax. The City Council had planned to invoke the tax, but in an emergency meeting exhibitors pointed out that such a tax was unjust and the measure was dropped.

The Tennessee General Assembly adjourned last Saturday without enacting any admission tax. A proposed bill to put a five per cent state tax on theatre tickets failed to reach the floor of either house. The Attorney General's office has held that the two per cent sales tax, which will take effect June 1, does not apply to admissions.

In Oklahoma Tuesday the Senate Committee on Revenue and Taxation killed a bill which would have extended municipal taxing powers. The message had been opposed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Oklahoma.

Bill Would Halt Changes In Admission Prices

Admission price changes to amusement places during evening hours, Sundays or holidays would be prohibited under a bill introduced last week in the Pennsylvania Legislature by Rep. Joseph A. Scanlon. Changing of prices during peak or dull periods would be stopped by the measure.

Treasury Ready To Fight Protest On Capital Tax

Washington Bureau

The Treasury Department legal staff is gearing itself to fight anticipated tax suits in Los Angeles and New York resulting from the year-old ruling on capital gains in the picture business.

Since last summer, the Los Angeles and New York offices of the Bureau have been sending bills to those involved in so-called personal corporations, initiated for the production of a single picture. After distribution profits are collected, the corporations dissolve and receive the benefit of the cut-rate liquidation tax rather than paying full tax on earnings.

Involving millions of dollars, the tax is retroactive to 1945 and considerable sums have been asked of the companies involved. Treasury attorneys say the Government had a right, under the Revenue Act, to rule against such corporations. How far back the collections can go appears to be the major question involved.

The Washington office turned the matter over to the Los Angeles and New York branches of the Bureau. Instructions were issued nine months ago by the Department that the branches enforce the ruling and send out bills for collection of the underpaid taxes.

Those individuals receiving large back tax bills are expected to contest the case in district tax court.

2 Industry Bills Before Dewey

Two bills affecting the industry are awaiting the signature of New York State's Governor Thomas E. Dewey. Last Thursday the Assembly passed the Condon-Wadlin bill amending the general business law to place projection booths under the inspection of the State Labor Department. The bill is intended as a safety measure to insure the meeting of present day fire-proofing standards in all booths.

The same day the Finch bill was passed. This bill allows the appearance of children under 16 in motion pictures, circuses, stage shows and radio and television broadcasts under a permit system.

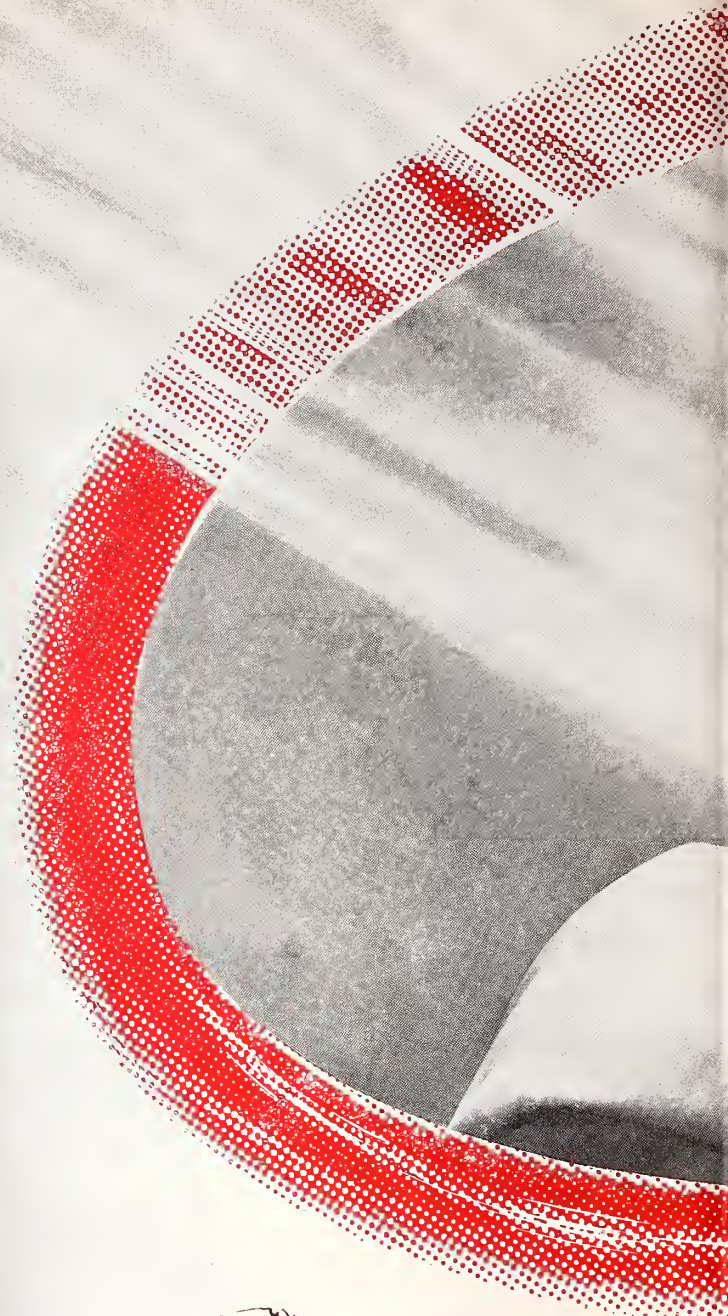

Vetoes Copyright Bill

Governor Ralph F. Gates of Indiana March 15 vetoed a copyright bill directed against the operation of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in that state. The bill would have forbidden the owners of copyright musical works to operate in conjunction with other copyright owners to enforce the public performance of their works.

Ignoring pro and con testimony of civic and fraternal leaders and prominent clergymen, mostly from Cincinnati, the Senate Judiciary Committee, in Columbus, March 11, killed the anti-bingo bill which would repeal the amendment to the Ohio gambling law legalizing bingo when conducted for religious, charitable or educational purposes. . . . The game, which, under the latest legislative action, will continue as heretofore, is a source of serious theatre competition here, particularly for the neighborhood houses. The "take" here on bingo averaged $10,000,000 during a five-year period. . . . This city had the privilege of comparing Shakespeare on the stage and screen when "Henry V" was shown at the Taft theatre, during which engagement Maurice Evans appeared in person in "Hamlet" at the Cox theatre. . . . COLUMBUS

Business continues somewhat spotty, with "California" doing better than average at the Ohio. "Never Say Goodbye" did fair business at the Palace with "The Return of Monte Cristo" registering fairly well at the Broad. "13 Rue Madeleine," shifted to the Grand for four additional days after a week at the Palace, showed considerable box office pull. . . . Manager Larry Caplane at the Grand has installed the first popcorn stand in downtown first runs. . . . Joe Borenstein, Warner Strand, New Britain, Conn., manager, representing New Britain theatre men, has written a letter to that city's Common Council Salaries and Ordinance Committee, requesting withdrawal of a request from the theatre men for a change in theatre opening hours on Sundays from 2 to 1 P.M. There has been much opposition from New Britain clergymen on the change. In New Haven, recently, approval was given for a change in Sunday theatre opening hours from 2 to 1 P.M. In Hartford there has been no official action on the proposal introduced several months ago into the Common Council that theatres there be allowed to change Sunday opening from 2 to 1 P.M. . . . Hartford visitors: Harry Shaw, Morris Mendelsohn, Loew's-Poli New England Theatres; Harry Green, Alexander Film Co.; Martin Lewis and Max Zipperman, Continental Circuit, Inc., New York.

INDIANAPOLIS

A mild flu epidemic has combined with Lent to depress grosses at local first runs. A sub-standard $13,000 for "Humoresque" at the Indiana was the best mark in town last week. "The Jolson Story" has proved to be one of the season's best holdovers, grabbing $12,500 in its fourth week at the RKO Orpheum. Certain Twin City independents are reported to have approached Minnesota Amusement Company heads in opposition to the circuit establishing double bill policies in competition to nearby independents. . . . The Lyceum, legitimate loop house, is planning to enter bids on films that would lend themselves to roadshow prices and policies. The theatre is currently showing "Henry V." . . . Brisk Production Pace Maintained with Nine Pictures Started

Hollywood Bureau

Production continued brisk at the studios last week. Nine new films were started, and seven were completed. At the weekend, the shooting index stood at 43, compared with the previous level of 41.

Walter Wanger launched his latest production for Universal-International release, "The Lost Love." The story, laid in Vienna in the '90s, is an adaptation by Leonardo Bercovici of Henry James' "The Aspern Papers." Robert Cummings and Susan Hayward are co-starred in romantic roles, with Agnes Moorehead, Joan Loring and Frank Puglia prominent in the supporting cast. Martin Gabel is directing.

Three independent producers started work on four pictures for Screen Guild release. Jack Schwarz is making "Western Barn Dance," and has signed B. B. Ray to direct it. The cast includes Ernest Tubbs, Helen Boyce, Frank McGlynn and Earl Hodges.

Two Screen Art Pictures Produced by Hittleman

Two Screen Art Pictures, "The Hat Box Mystery" and "The Case of the Baby Sitter," are being produced by Carl Hittleman under the executive supervision of Morris Nunes. The leading roles in both films are being enacted by Tom Neal, Pamela Blake, Virginia Sales and Allen Jenkins. Lambert Hillyer is directing.

Max King is producing "Killer Dill," with Anne Gwynne, Frank Albertson, Stuart Erwin, Milburn Stone and Mike Mazurki heading the cast. Lewis D. Collins is the director.

Twentieth Century-Fox producer Fred Kohlmar started shooting "Kiss of Death" on location in New York. Henry Hathaway is directing a cast composed of Victor Mature, Patricia Morison, Brian Donlevy and Colleen Gray.

Producer Sol Wurtzel launched another of his 1947 program for 20th Century-Fox release. It is a melodrama titled "Second Chance," whose cast includes Kent Taylor, Louise Currie, Dennis Hoey, Harry Blake, Ann Doran, John Eldridge and Paul Guilfoyle.

At Columbia, work began on Gene Stratton Porter's novel, "Keeper of the Bees." Heading the cast are Gloria Henry, Michael Duane, Jane Darwell, Harry Davenport and Jo Ann Marlowe. John Haggot is the producer; John Sturges the director.

Monogram's new venture is "Scareheads," latest in the studio's "Bowery Boys" series. In the cast are Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Bill Kennedy and Bobby Jordan. Jan Grippo is producing; William Beaudine is directing.

Incidental News of Pictures to Come

The first of two pictures to be filmed by Rampart Productions for Universal-International release is "Possession," co-starring Joan Fontaine and Dana Andrews. Sheridan Gibney, who wrote the original screenplay, will produce. The second Rampart production will be Stefan Zweig's love story, "Letter from an Unknown Woman." John Houseman is scheduled to produce.

Because of the success of Paramount's "Monsieur Beaucaire," the studio has selected a similar story to serve as Bob Hope's next starring vehicle. Titled "Clown of Fortune," its author is the Russian writer, Mikhail Rykoff. Hope will portray a court jester in the screenplay, which is laid in the 16th century and deals with the attempt by Spain to overthrow Henry III of France.

Ranald MacDougall has been appointed to the post of writer-producer for Warners. . . . Richard J. Powers has been appointed head of the music department at MGM, succeeding the late David J. Chatkin. . . . Irving Allen, who produced "High Conquest" for Monogram, has completed plans to film a story by James Ramsey Ullman, dealing with the efforts of three prospectors to climb Mt. McKinley. Max Trell has been signed to write the screenplay, titled "Alaskan Episode," and it will be filmed at the actual locale.

Recent Story Purchases By the Studios Listed

RKO Radio has acquired the screen rights to "Sweet Genevieve," the story of a minister's daughter, as a starring vehicle for Barbara Bel Geddes. . . . Eagle-Lion has purchased "Catch Me Before I Kill," an article dealing with juvenile delinquency, which appeared recently in "Woman's Home Companion." It will be filmed in semi-documentary fashion, under the supervision of Aubrey Schenck. . . . Benedict Bogeaus last week bought "The Wall Between," a novel by Elsie Oakes Barber.

Two recent Warner acquisitions are "Flamingo Road," Robert Wilder's novel of political intrigue, and "The Slippery Hitch," a post-war melodrama laid in England. Both properties have been assigned to Jerry Wald to produce.

RKO Picture to Be Made At New York Studio

RKO has purchased "The Boy Cried Murder," by Cornell Woolrich. It will be produced at the new Pathe studio in New York by Frederic Ullman, Jr., president of RKO Pathe. . . . A comedy called "It Comes Naturally" has been acquired by Sol Lesser as a vehicle for Lon McCallister. . . . Milton Sperling has obtained the screen rights to "Ever the Beginning," a new play by Lucille Prumbs and Sarah Smith. It will be filmed by United States Pictures for Warner release, and Lilli Palmer is set for the starring role.

Ida Lupino and Benedict Bogeaus have formed an independent production company to be called Arcadia Pictures. The new firm will make, during the next three years, three films starring Miss Lupino. . . . Director Bernard Vorhouse has been signed to a term contract by PRC, and is currently preparing his initial assignment, a murder mystery titled "Bury Me Dead." . . . Alan Ladd will portray a professional prizefighter in "Comeback," to be produced for Paramount by Endre Bohem.

William Cagney has signed Richard Wallace to direct "The Stray Lamb," Thorne Smith comedy in which James Cagney will star. . . . Young Roddy McDowall has been signed by Monogram producer Lindsley Parsons to a contract calling for two pictures annually over a three-year period. . . . Henry Fonda will star in "Call Northside 777," which Otto Lang will film in Chicago for 20th Century-Fox.

Maxwell Anderson Writing "Joan of Lorraine" Script

"Joan of Lorraine," for which no distribution has been set, will be produced by the E. N. Corporation, which is owned by Ingrid Bergman, Victor Fleming, Peter Lindstrom, and Walter Wanger. Maxwell Anderson is currently preparing the screen treatment. . . . The writer-producer team of Michael Fessier and Ernest Pagano has been assigned to develop and produce "Bloomer Girl," screen version of the Broadway musical, which will be filmed in Technicolor at Universal-International.

Cowboy comic Smiley Burnette has been signed to a new five-year contract at Columbia. . . . Richard Denning has been engaged by Pine-Thomas to star in two pictures, the first of which will be "Tiger Woman," a murder story with a circus background. . . .

PREVIEWS OF TRADE SHOWS

Monte Hale has had his Republic contract extended, and has been assigned the starring role in a forthcoming musical western in Trucolor, "Along the Oregon Trail."

Edward Sedgwick, formerly with MGM, has joined American Eagle Films to co-produce and direct "Follow the Girls." . . . Margaret L. Witt has been appointed story editor for Independent Artists, which releases through RKO Radio. . . . Dame May Whitty has been chosen for a key role in "The Bishop's Wife," Samuel Goldwyn's current production. . . . Tom Tully has been engaged to portray June Haver's father in "Scudda Hoo, Scudda Hay," now shooting at 20th Century-Fox.

BY THE WINDOW, Barbara Stanwyck and Humphrey Bogart, in a scene from Warners' "The Two Mrs. Carrrolls," which theatre owners will see March 31, and which Mark Hellinger produced and Peter Godfrey directed.

Lasky-MacEwen Energetic Team

Hollywood Bureau

Two of the most important attributes of a producing team are experience and energy. In the case of Jesse L. Lasky and Walter MacEwen, who recently joined forces to make several pictures for RKO Radio release, these attributes would appear to be almost ideally realized.

Jesse L. Lasky is 67. He is one of the pioneers of the industry, and his production experience dates back to 1913, when he made "The Squaw Man," first feature to be filmed in Hollywood.

Walter MacEwen is 40. His energy and tenacity have brought him from Ayr, Scotland, to Hollywood, with a stopover in London, where he worked as production assistant for British National, British International, and Gaumont.

The only other things such a team might seem to need are good story properties, and a dash of luck. And Mr. MacEwen, at least, is convinced that his company has acquired, for its first two-year program, outstanding stories which can be developed into equally outstanding pictures.

Over the luncheon table at Lucey's, a Hollywood rendezvous more renowned for its food than its decor, Mr. MacEwen said the new producing company plans to spend

INTO THE TRAP. Victor McLaglen, Andy Devine, and Byron Folger walked into this one. Their captors are Milburn Stone, Leonard East and William Ching, led by the Michigan Kid, Jon Hall, right. The scene is from Universal-International's "The Michigan Kid," in which Mr. Hall and Rita Johnson, also shown above, are the stars. Howard Welsch produced it; Ray Taylor directed. The picture is available for trade showings.

$8,000,000 on its first four pictures. Of this sum, nearly $3,000,000 will be spent on "Miracle of the Bells."

"We believe," the producer said, "that it will turn out to be one of the finest films of 1948, and one of the year's biggest box office successes."

On the basis of a poll of the book's readers,

Mr. MacEwen explained, Fred MacMurray was chosen for the leading male role. The feminine lead has yet to be filled.

Other story properties owned by Mr. Lasky and Mr. MacEwen are "Caruso Sings Tonight," a biography of the late tenor, by his wife, Dorothy Parks Caruso, and "The Apple Tree," a John Galsworthy story.

STUDIO PAY BOOST COST $11,000,000

Producers Offer 17% Cost of Living Increase to 15,000 Craft Workers

Approximately 15,000 production employees at the studios of the major companies, members of all unions and guilds holding contracts with the Association of Motion Picture Producers, were offered an 11-point 17 per cent cost-of-living increase last week by the producers. The increase corresponds exactly to the rise of the cost-of-living in the Los Angeles area as charted by the U. S. Department of Labor between July 1, 1946, and January 1, 1947.

The pay boost is retroactive to January 1 and effective until December 31. It was offered in compliance with the interim agreement entered into by the producers last July as a means to end the two-day studio strike which ended when all unions received a 25 per cent retroactive increase. The same kind of an increase was received by the Screen Extras' Guild last month under the terms of a special contract held by that organization.

To Cost $11,000,000 Annually

According to estimates from the Motion Picture Association, the increase will cost the producers some $11,000,000 in 1947. Independent producers are expected to copy the wage-scale offered by the majors. The only unions not covered by the new offer are those who are out on strike, the Musicians' Union, which got a special contract last year, and the IATSE cameramen and sound men, as well as others whose contracts still are in the negotiation stage.

On the Hollywood jurisdictional strike scene, another union, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 40, which up to now had respected picket lines established by the Conference of Studio Unions, late last week ordered its members back to work. A statement from the union leadership said Dan Tracy, International president, and Richard Walsh, IATSE head, had reached an agreement providing for the recognition of the December, 1945, AF of L jurisdictional directive and for the settlement of all remaining disputes on a local level.

Strive for Strike Settlement

Herbert Sorrell, Conference president, last week discussed the jurisdictional dispute with Frank Wenig, the Federal conciliator. Later Mr. Wenig met with Pat Casey, the major producers' labor contact man, in an exploratory session. It was understood that he was planning to get all parties to sit down around a conference table in an attempt to arrive at a strike settlement.

Meanwhile the District Court of Appeals for the State of California, by a unanimous decision, affirmed a prior ruling of the Superior Court in Los Angeles, upholding Mr. Walsh's authority to take over control of the Affiliated Property Craftsman's Union, Local 44, under the emergency powers granted him by the International constitution. The emergency developed in March 1945, when Local 44, in alleged violation of its obligations to the International and contrary to Mr. Walsh's directives, joined forces with the Conference of Studio Unions, which then went out on an eight-month strike. The walkout was terminated by a decision of an Executive Council Committee of the American Federation of Labor.

Delegation Seeks Aid

The CSU point of view was explained at a meeting of various AF of L unions at New York's Piccadilly Hotel late last week by a three-man CSU delegation which included J. L. Nisbett, Walter R. Scheibel and Edward J. Smith. The Conference representatives established temporary Eastern headquarters here in a move to solicit financial support from AF of L locals in the New York area. The meeting disclosed that almost $3,000 a week had been contributed to the Conference fund by the International Association of Machinists. The Brotherhood of Painters pledged a $10,000 contribution.

Elsewhere on the labor scene, the Screen Actors' Guild has informed 400 producers that it has set April 15 as the starting date for negotiations for a new contract to replace the present agreement which expires May 15. The group named a 17-member committee and suggested that the producers set up a numerically similar committee to represent them. In New York, negotiations between 18 Eastern laboratories and representatives of the Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, Local 702, were resumed last week. The contract between the union and the labs expired March 9.

Screen Writers Revising Authors Authority Plan

Following a battle of charges and counter-charges last autumn, the Screen Writers Guild in Hollywood has made radical changes in its proposed "American Authors' Authority" to centralize the leasing, rather than the outright sale of literary works for commercial use. These changes were brought about following attacks by opposition groups which claimed the SWG was seeking to establish a dictatorship over American writing. Under the new plan an agency would be established in which membership would be voluntary. The agency would not be in a position to force any writer to use the agency's channels.

Universal, Rank, Schlesinger in South Africa Deal

Universal and J. Arthur Rank, themselves united in partnership, have joined with the Schlesinger interests of South Africa in a three-continent deal announced Monday in London, New York and Johannesburg.

Under this latest of the Rank maneuverings, all of the product of the Rank group and the newly organized Universal-International company will be exhibited by the 400 theatres controlled and serviced by the Schlesinger interests in that part of Africa south of the Equator. Schlesinger operates a large number of those 400 theatres itself and serves the balance, which are independently operated, with their film requirements.

In a further union of interests, the Rank group and the Universal group have acquired an interest in African Consolidated Theatres, Ltd., and African Consolidated Films, Ltd., with the control of those two companies remaining with the Schlesinger group. The Schlesinger group plans to acquire film interest in both Great Britain and America.

According to the joint announcement, African Consolidated Theatres has a five-year building program, a "considerable portion" of which has been delayed by the war and subsequent building restrictions. Sites for the new theatres already have been acquired.

The American-British-African agreement also includes a hint of joint production activities. Says the announcement: "The Schlesinger group, through African Film Productions, Ltd., has plans for the future development of film production in South Africa in connection with which large modern production studios are to be erected at Parkmore, Johannesburg, and it is anticipated that the Rank group and Universal group may also become interested in African Film Productions, thereby making available the vast film production resources of those two groups for the future development of film production in South Africa through that company."

Marker, U. S. Attorney on Television Suit, Resigns

Joseph B. Marker, special attorney for the Department of Justice's New York anti-trust division, last week announced that he had resigned from the Department to return to private law practice. Mr. Marker has been in charge of the Government's television anti-trust suit against Paramount, General Precision Equipment, Television Productions, Inc., Scophony Corporation of America, Scophony, Ltd., and others since its inception. Despite his resignation Mr. Marker has agreed to continue to assist the anti-trust division in further negotiations.

'Find What the Customers Want By Asking'—Foy

Eagle-Lion's exhibitor relations program, conducted personally by its vice-president in charge of production, Bryan Foy, will continue because it is the best and only way to "find out what makes people walk to and away from a picture," Mr. Foy said in New York Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Foy is in the city for conferences with Eagle-Lion home office chiefs and with the board of directors of Pathe Industries.

Bryan Foy

Mr. Foy recently visited exhibitors in southwestern cities during 14 days of accompanying the premieres of "It's a Joke, Son," and will the next time in a program of four or more such trips yearly visit northwestern cities.

"I don't need a Gallup poll to tell me what people think, about titles or pictures. People in audiences don't really know the answers to some of the questions asked, and titles depend upon a lot of circumstances, certainly upon casts. We've been in the picture business too long," Mr. Foy said, "I don't think the Gallup people can tell me anything."

"I find that preferences vary from locality to locality, and I find that combinations of names and pictures matter very much."

Despite the need for rebuilding the old Educational studio which it now runs, Eagle-Lion is producing ten pictures for this season, at an average cost of $1,100,000, Mr. Foy noted, stressing that the rebuilding alone cost $1,500,000.

"Nothing but the show business for me," he said. "Nothing with messages—that's for Western Union."

Out of Title Bureau

Eagle-Lion withdrew last week from the Title Registration Bureau, he disclosed, and added it was because he found every other company ahead on any one title. "We'll go ahead from now on completely on our own. We don't belong to any organization now. We'll depend on copyright of our work. If you're out first with it, that's what counts."

Eagle-Lion has two pictures fully completed, two editing, two in production, and nine with scripts finished.

Korda to Star Mason

Alexander Korda has announced he will star James Mason in "The Life of King David," to be produced within a year and to be based on the biblical material.

FROM FIFTH AVENUE to California. Monogram's buses, advertising, of course, Allied Artists' "It Happened on Fifth Avenue", arrived in Hollywood Tuesday morning. Bought from the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, of New York, the coaches will end long and harried lives as props for future films.

Eric Johnston to Testify at Un-American Committee

Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association president, will be asked to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee on legislation to outlaw communism. J. P. Thomas, chairman of that committee, has set hearings March 24.

Purpose of the meeting was to discuss selling plans under the Decree, as well as forthcoming top product including "Framed" and "The Guilt of Janet Ames."

Attending from the home office were: Rube Jackter, Louis Astor, Irving Wormser, Maurice Grad, Leo Jaffe, George Josephs, H. C. Kaufman, Joseph Freiberg, Irving Sherman, Seth Raisler, Vincent Borrelli, Irving Moross, Sydney Singerman and William Brennan.

Representatives from the field were: Nat Cohn, Sam Galanty, Carl Shalit, B. C. Marcus, I. H. Rogovin, R. J. Ingram, J. B. Underwood, H. E. Weiner, J. C. Bullwinkle, B. J. Lourie and Phil Fox.

Legion of Decency Reviews Ten New Productions

The National Legion of Decency this week reviewed 10 new productions, approving all. In Class A-I, unobjectionable for general patronage, were: "Apache Rose," "Blondie's Holiday," "Buck Privates Come Home," "High Barbaree" and "The Lone Hand Texan." In Class A-II, unobjectionable for adults, were: "The Devil Thumbs a Ride," "Hard Boiled Mahoney," "Imperfect Lady," "Ramrod" and "Forbidden Music" (Italian).

"Duel" Classified As B by Legion

David O. Selznick's production, "Duel in the Sun," has been re-edited in accordance with the suggestion of various religious and civic groups, including the National Legion of Decency, it was announced by the producer through his New York office Thursday, March 13.

Last Saturday the National Legion of Decency announced that the picture, after revision, had been classified as "B"—"Objectionable in Part," and gave the following reasons: "Immodestly suggestive sequences; glorification of illicit love."

In his announcement, Mr. Selznick said: "While the re-editing for the groups involved resulted in several individual cuts, they were of the same type that is normally made in the process of editing a film following previous trial engagements. With the substitutions and additions the over-all length of the film has not been materially changed and its dramatic values and integrity have not suffered in the least." The new running time has been designated as two hours and 18 minutes.

In announcing its classification the Legion said: "In effecting the revision the producer has responded with cooperation and understanding to critical reaction subsequent to the trial engagement of the film in Los Angeles and has thus displayed an awareness of the responsibility for the moral and social integrity of motion pictures."

The Selznick statement also pointed out: "Pictures which have this 'B' classification for various moral reasons have been 'The Best Years of Our Lives', 'Seventh Veil', 'Humoresque', 'Open City', '13 Rue Madeleine', 'The Sign of the Cross' and 'The Searching Wind.'"

MEXICO PRODUCER INTO EXHIBITION

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Mexican producers are becoming exhibitors as well. This policy, somewhat modeled after the policy of some U. S. companies, is said to have been prompted by too many theatres in too few hands, adding up to the producers and distributors being at a disadvantage in the way of playing time and percentages.

Filmex, one of Mexico's four leading producers and distributors, has obtained Government approval of its plans to build and operate a circuit, primarily as an outlet for its own films. The Government has agreed to help finance the plans, which call for an investment of about $4,000,000 for about 10 theatres, three or four to be built here, and the others in the principal provincial theatres. The first Filmex theatre is expected to open in late summer.

Filmex owns and operates the Aztec studios here, the second largest in Mexico. The company president is Gregorio Walerstein. Oscar J. Brooks, for some time Warners' manager here, is the distribution chief, and Manuel Suarez, a wealthy Spaniard with many industrial interests in Mexico, is a board member.

Producciones Grovas, also one of the big four Mexican producers, is completing plans for a theatre circuit—about six houses at the outset. Jesus Grovas, formerly a Paramount assistant manager here, heads the company.

The controlling interest—51 per cent—which Twentieth Century-Fox's National Theatres held in 38 theatres in the Coahuila, Tamaulipas and Nuevo Leon states (the Del Norte circuit) has been acquired by a syndicate, members of which include: Theodore Gildred, who, with his brother, Albert, owns and operates the studio at Tepeyac and several theatres here and in the provinces; Jesus Grovas, president of Producciones Grovas, producer-distributors; Luis Montes de Oca, president of the Banco Internacional; Aaron Saenz, sugar magnate, and Francisco Javier Gaxiola, ex-Minister of National Economy. The syndicate was financed by the Credito Cinematografico Mexicano, an organization recently organized to finance the motion picture industry.

SOUTH AFRICA

by R. N. BARRETT
in Johannesburg

There is a growing interest in South Africa in the study of cinema as an art form. Four months ago, the Johannesburg Film Society was established. Similar societies have also been formed in Cape Town and Durban. Aid has been given these organizations by the British Film Institute and negotiations for further aid are in progress with Paris and New York. The societies screen such film classics as "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," "Nanook of the North" and "The Italian Straw Hat."

J. G. Mackenzie, one of the best known personalities in film and theatre circles in South Africa, has left African Theatres to go into business on his own. Coming to South Africa in 1929 he eventually rose to publicity manager for African Consolidated Theatres for South Africa and Rhodesia. He is now a director of Peace Distributors, Ltd., wholesale photographic suppliers.

ITALY

by ARGEO SANTUCCI
in Rome

Monogram Pictures currently has 10 features in release here through G. D. B., a company which owns dubbing studios and which formerly distributed Russian pictures. The company also has five features for release here through another company and plans to release 15 to 20 additional features this year.

Republic and PRC have not as yet any representatives in Italy.

Reports from Austria indicate that production has resumed at the Rosenhugle studios, reestablished by the Russians, and the Sievering studios, near Vienna, reestablished by the Americans.

There are 649 theatres in Austria at present, of which 137 are in Vienna.

Production notes: Lux Film will produce "Les Miserables" from the Victor Hugo novel. Universal, now producing a documentary about Allied cemeteries in Italy, will produce documentaries on the lives of St. Paul and St. Francis. Two producers have announced their intention of producing "The Captain's Daughter" from the Pushkin novel.

It is reported that Antonio Mosco, a partner in the Minerva Film Company, has purchased the Barberini theatre here. Minerva is the Italian distributing company for Sir Alexander Korda's films.

"Three Ships a Day" is the documentary film of UNRRA activity in Italy, which is now in the cutting and editing stage. The picture, produced by the International Film Foundation of New York with the help of the Instituto Luce of Italy, will be released in Italy in April.

During a recent interview in Rome, Gabriel Pascal asserted that he intended to build up an Italo-British-American production which "will result in a completely new form of international entertainment."

YUGOSLAVIA

by J. B. KANTUREK
in Prague

Three producing and distributing companies have been formed and are now in operation in Yugoslavia: Triglav, in Lublana, for Slovenia; Jadran, in Zagreb, for Croatia, and Zvezda, in Belgrade, for Serbia. The respective Ministries of Education are in charge of all motion picture affairs.

On April 1, Yugoslavia will open an academy for schooling actors and directors. Pupils, to be schooled for two years, have been selected from all Yugoslav republics.

The Yugoslav monopoly plans to produce six films during 1947, exclusive of shorts, documentaries and newsreels. Plans are in preparation to build studios near Belgrade during the country's five-year plan.

Crowther and Bergman Debate Film Influence

"Is the Influence of the Movies Good or Bad?" was the subject of a discussion over CBS last Friday in the network's School of the Air "Opinion Please" series. Maurice A. Bergman, Universal-International eastern advertising and publicity director, took the affirmative and Bosley Crowther, film critic of the New York Times, the negative.

"If we compare the contributions made by the motion picture to the culture of our country with similar contributions made by the book publishing business and the radio, we could easily justify the importance of motion pictures in helping to elevate the entertainment standards of the public," Mr. Bergman said. He cited the fact that motion pictures are a comparatively new art and added that "as the public itself becomes more aware of the screen's possibilities and indicates its pleasure in seeing motion pictures of a more revolutionary nature, that Hollywood will be the first to recognize this."

Mr. Bergman concluded by declaring "in a democracy where we can choose what we like for our amusement, provided it is decent and not harmful to the community, let us at least agree that the movies are doing their part in bringing a little margin of happiness to millions who by the very nature of things want extra fun at a reasonable cost."

Mr. Crowther, declaring today's films exert a bad influence, said of "some 350 entertainment films made in Hollywood each year, I would say that approximately 20 are substantial as serious drama or as truly creative diversion. The rest are routine paraphrasing of old and conventional plots, some a little better than others but all in the standard artificial mood."

Set "Carnegie" Openings

The Boris Morros-William LeBaron United Artists feature, "Carnegie Hall," will open at the Paramount theatre in San Juan April 8 under an agreement reached by Ramos Cobian, leading circuit operator in Puerto Rico, and Walter Gould, UA foreign manager. A showing for Governor Jesus T. Pinero and members of the Puerto Rican legislature will take place during the week of March 25. "Carnegie Hall" super-imposed versions will open simultaneously in Mexico City, Lima, Santiago and Buenos Aires during April.

Board Delays Theatre License

The application for permission to operate an outdoor theatre has been taken under advisement by the Board of Selectmen of Seekonk, near Fall River, Mass., following the appearance of Nathan Yamins, president of the Seekonk Realty Corporation, before the board March 13.

RKO Advertising Level Will Be Maintained

The advertising outlay of RKO Radio will not be cut, S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director, said in New York last Wednesday on his return from Hollywood where new campaigns were planned. Mr. McCormick said each picture would be dealt with, promotionally, as it comes up rather than being placed within the limitations of an established annual budget for advertising. Top product still will have extensive, nationwide campaigns. In this category are: "The Locket," "The Farmer's Daughter," "Honeymoon," "Bachelor and the Bobbysoxer," "The Long Night," Walt Disney's "Fun and Fancy Free," "Women on the Beach," "They Won't Believe Me," Samuel Goldwyn's "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," "If You Knew Susie," and "Tycoon," among others.

Promote Five in Ranks of 20th-Fox International

Appointments in 20th-Fox's foreign staff were announced this week by Murray Silverstone, president of 20th-Fox International Corporation. Arthur G. Doyle, formerly managing director of India, was named district manager for India, China, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Singapore, Siam and Indo China. He will be succeeded by Herbert White, until recently managing director of Cuba. Three former students of the World War II veterans training school inaugurated by Mr. Silverstone in January, 1946, are Andrew Jaeger, named manager of Puerto Rico, replacing Carlo Zeno, retired; John Finder, promoted to assistant manager in Belgium after several months in Switzerland, and Oscar Lax, who goes from Belgium to the Middle East as assistant under John Lefebre, home office representative for the area, with headquarters in Cairo.

Eastman Kodak Distributes $8,100,000 Wage Dividend

Eastman Kodak Company on Friday, March 14, distributed a wage dividend of approximately $8,100,000 to about 48,800 employees. This compares with the $7,362,000 paid in wage dividends to 42,000 employees a year ago. This year's dividend is the thirty-fifth such wage-dividend payment made since George Eastman established the plan in 1912. The sum paid since then exceeds $75,000,000. Kodak bases its wage dividend on the common stock dividends declared in the preceding year.

RKO Appoints Managers For Spain, Finland

RKO Radio has appointed Rene Beja as manager for the company's office in Spain and Kurt Nylund as RKO manager in Finland. Mr. Beja, who will make his headquarters in Barcelona, was formerly an RKO manager in Portugal and Brazil. Mr. Nylund, who will headquarter in Helsinki, formerly distributed RKO product in Finland through his own company.

Exchange Fire Record Spotless in 1946

There was no fire loss or personal injury at any film exchange in the United States during 1946 under Motion Picture Association inspection, Eric Johnston, president, reported in Washington this week.

Thirty thousand miles of picture film were handled every day in film exchanges, A. S. Dickinson, head of the Conservation Department, reported.

It was the 10th year since 1926 that the department was able to report no losses. The only reported film handling fire last year was in Chicago in an independently operated film exchange outside of the scope of MPA inspections. The fire cost $500 and the death of one person resulted.

Date for hearing the $100,000 suit filed by Charles Fine, Chicago projectionist, against Paramount Pictures and J. Harold Stevens, Paramount branch manager in Chicago, has been postponed to May 12. The subject, "The Motion Picture in This Changing World" was covered this week when 500 representatives from Motion Picture Councils and other community groups met Thursday for the 38th Anniversary Conference of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures at the Hotel McAlpin in New York. Quincy Howe, the board's president, and Richard Griffith, executive director, presided at the session.

Among the speakers was Jean Benoit-Levy, French director, now director of Films and Visual Information for the United Nations, who described plans for filming the work of the UN as well as arrangements for worldwide distribution of these pictures. Louis de Rochemont, 20th-Fox producer, described the documentary-feature technique he used in "The House on 92nd Street" and "13 Rue Madeleine."

Orton H. Hicks of Loew's International Corporation described his company's worldwide 16mm activities, and Mrs. Marjorie Dawson, assistant director of community service for the Motion Picture Association, spoke on "Children and Motion Pictures." WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

BLONDIE KNOWS BEST: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—An excellent Sunday attraction. Played Feb. 23.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

COWBOY BLUES: Ken Curtis, Jeff Donnell—This is a good musical Western and there is enough comedy to suit the Saturday crowd. Business was average. This is my first report to this department and I will try to send in more as I get a lot of good from the opinions of other exhibitors. Played Saturday, Feb. 22.—Mrs. D. H. Gray, Gray Theatre, Brodhead, Ky.

CRIME DOCTOR'S MANHUNT, THE: Warner Baxter, Ellen Drew—In a town where they like this series of detective yarns, this one stacked up O.K. Business was off due to terrible wind and cold. Played Sunday, Feb. 23.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

IT'S GREAT TO BE YOUNG: Leslie Brooks, Jimmy Lloyd—One of the good little Columbia musicals. It moves fast and there is plenty of comedy. Clicked with regulars here and drew the teen-agers, too. Business O.K. Played Thursday, Feb. 27.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

LONE STAR MOONLIGHT: Ken Curtis, Joan Barton—Doubled with "Hot Cargo" to bad business. These musical Westerns are all made after the same pattern. Folks are tiring of seeing the same thing. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

MR. DISTRICT ATTORNEY: Dennis O'Keefe, Marguerite Chapman—Quite a good murder story. O'Keefe is good in a straight role. The beautiful villainess seems on her way to high places, if looks have anything to do with it. Probably because we played it too soon, an uncommon complaint, believe me, business was below normal. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF MONTE CRISTO, THE: Louis Hayward, Barbara Britton—This was also played long before national and word-of-mouth advertising had a chance to help with it. The attendance was not noteworthy. It is a good period melodrama with a surprise ending. It was generally well received in spite of a general antipathy to this type of picture in this vicinity. Played Wednesday-Friday, Dec. 25-27.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

TALK ABOUT A LADY: Jinx Falkenburg, Joe Besser—A good Friday and Saturday picture on a double bill. Good for a small town. It does a good job of filling in and it was well liked. Played Feb. 21, 22.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

TARS AND SPARS: Alfred Drake, Janet Blair—Very good musical comedy that drew very well. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 19, 20.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

TWO FISTED STRANGER: Charles Starrett, Smiley Burnette—As good as any of the Durango Kid Westerns. Burnette is helping this series a lot. Business good. Played Saturday, March 1.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

Film Classics

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon—Very good reissue. I received a good print.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

HOLIDAY IN MEXICO: Walter Pidgeon, Ilona Massey—The ones who came twice to see and hear this beautiful film kept business up to average. It did not do the business to which it was entitled. It is always the same out here when Latin music is concerned. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Elaine George, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Marie Wilson—Good box office, but very poor from Metro. They should put Van in better pictures. Music was good, but it had the same old theme and plot. Holly-

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box office performance of product — providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. wood must get some new ideas as people are getting tired of this kind of picture so often. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

SHOW-OFF, THE: Red Skelton, Marilyn Maxwell—The best picture that Red has ever made. It was made for small towns. Play this one and it will go over well. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

UNDERCURRENT: Katharine Hepburn, Robert Taylor—It was good to see Robert Taylor again and he was very good in the leading role. This exciting drama kept the audience in suspense. Katharine Hepburn gave a good performance. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 19, 20.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Monogram

DECOY: Jean Gillie, Edward Norris—A basketball game kept them away the first night. Did O.K. It is something unusual. Played Saturday, Sunday, Feb. 23, 24.—Herman Fiedler, Grand Theatre, Java, S. D.

SONG OF THE SIERRAS: Jimmy Wakely, Lee "Lasses" White—Jimmy Wakely and the good Western music pleased. The last time we played him most of the patrons left before the feature was half over. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 21, 22.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Paramount

HOT CARGO: William Powell, Esther Williams—Weather perfect, no competition, but gross 40 per cent off. Doubled with "Lone Star Moonlight." Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

TWO YEARS BEFORE THE MAST: Alan Ladd, Brian Donlevy—Well produced film, but not the type to create outstanding business in our community. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—Elaine George, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore.

TWO YEARS BEFORE THE MAST: Alan Ladd, Brian Donlevy—A fine picture that did fairly good business. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 25-27.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

RKO Radio

BACK TO BATAAN: John Wayne, Philip Ahn—An old one that had good appeal here. Plenty of action. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 21, 22.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

DING DONG WILLIAMS: Glenn Vernon, Marcia McGuire—A fair picture which will fill in on a Friday and Saturday. It will please most of the people. The comedy will hold the attention. The picture would not stand alone. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

HEARTBEAT: Ginger Rogers, Jean Pierre Aumont—Played this to average business. Foreign locale is not popular with our trade. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 26, 27.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

NOTORIOUS: Ingrid Bergman, Cary Grant—A good suspenseful picture, but the recording was so bad that we had complaints from the patrons. They said they could get only about 80 per cent of the dialogue. It was so poor, we called the sound engineer to check the sound and he confirmed that it was in the recording. I wonder if any other exhibitors had this trouble. I know it was not the sound because all other subjects came in perfect.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

RIVERBOAT RHYTHM: Leon Errol, Glenn Vernon—Very fine little program picture. I can use an Errol feature any time for the top half of a double feature. My folks like him.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

STEP BY STEP: Lawrence Tierney, Anne Jeffreys—A pleasant surprise. It is a suspenseful little film that was well received. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Elaine George, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore.

SUNSET PASS: Joseph Warren, Nan Leslie—Good typical Zane Grey Western. They loved it here. My patrons wait eagerly for them. Business good. Played Wednesday, Feb. 26.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

SUNSET PASS: James Warren, Nan Leslie—Well attended because Zane Grey is popular here, but the film is not the kind that will keep him that way. This is not up to previous Westerns by that author. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—Elaine George, Star Theatre, Heppner, Ore.

WITHOUT RESERVATIONS: Claudette Colbert, John Wayne—Business about average for Sunday and Monday. Neither Wayne nor Miss Colbert were suited for their roles. Both are past the age for such youthful portrayals. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

Republic

DON'T FENCE ME IN: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—Even Roy Rogers couldn't overcome a cold spell. Usual good Rogers and those who saw it liked it, but there weren't enough cash customers. Our business has been off since the first of 1947 and most of the salesmen say it is generally true in this state. We are trying to overcome it by more advertising. Played Thursday, Friday, Feb. 27, 28.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

I'VE ALWAYS LOVED YOU: Maria Aupenskaya, Philip Dorn—Some patrons hopefully expected another "Song to Remember." They were disappointed. The plot material is poor. Catherine McLeod is beautiful in Technicolor, but her male support is terrible. Rachmaninoff's Second Concerto is run into the ground before the picture ends. The production values, however, are first class and business for us was slightly above average. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Monte Hale, Adrian Booth—Used on weekend double bill. The Westerns in color are proving very popular with our patrons. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

MAN FROM OKLAHOMA: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—Rogers as usual. He draws well here. This was one of the better ones. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 14, 15.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

ROLL ON, TEXAS MOON: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—This is a regular Roy Rogers' picture which was liked by all. It was good entertainment for the entire family. He always does a good business and it was well liked by the entire family. Good action in this one. Be sure to play it. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

RUSTLER'S ROUNDUP: Kirby Grant, Fuzzy Knight—Used on weekend double bill. Very good for Westerns fans. Business below normal due to weakness of twin feature. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 21, 22.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

UNDER NEVADA SKIES: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—Good old Roy. He is our No. 1 box office attraction. It was single billed on a weekend and it did O.K. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

Screen Guild

MY DOG SHEP: Tom Neal, Helen Chapman—This is a fine picture for children. Be sure to play it on a Friday and Saturday. It will do business for you. The entire family will enjoy this picture. Screen Guild really makes the picture for the small towns. It pleased 100 per cent and did all right at the box office. Played Feb. 21, 22.—Albert Hefferan, Coopersville, Mich. Small town patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best—Double billed with a short Laurel and Hardy film to fair business. Opinion was divided on this feature. It is pretty old, but most will like it. It is worth playing. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 21, 22.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

ANNA AND THE KING OF SIAM: Irene Dunne, Rex Harrison—This is a picture that any exhibitor would be proud to play in his house. Business was only fair, as it did not appeal to all of our patrons, but all who attended were very enthusiastic about the splendid acting. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

ANNA AND THE KING OF SIAM: Irene Dunne, Rex Harrison—I tried to hide from the walkouts, but they found me and told me how bad they thought the picture was. Then many told me what a wonderful picture it was. I am confused. The fact remains that it did not do business. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—This was right down my patrons' alley as they truly love their horses. Business O.K. Played Friday, Feb. 28.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

CENTENNIAL SUMMER: Cornel Wilde, Jeanne Craine—Business much better than expected considering this is a period film. The story was light and not too sophisticated for a small town. Songs and music very appealing. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Robert Young, Dorothy McGuire—This excellent and heart-warming picture seems to prove that antics of schizophrenics and psychiatrists are not as interesting to the average theatregoer as the homey, unmelodramatic doings of ordinary people like himself. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Jan. 28, 29.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

CLUNY BROWN: Charles Boyer, Jennifer Jones—We played "Smoky" just before this. We barely got the film cost out of it. Even if this had not played closely after a "draw" picture, it would not have done business in a small town. Boyer is poison to rural folks. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 26, 27.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

DEADLINE FOR MURDER: Paul Kelly, Kent Taylor—Used on top half of double bill with negative results. No draw. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 21, 22.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

DRAGONWYCK: Gene Tierney, Vincent Price—Acting, direction and story excellent. Lacked drawing power in our situation. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 9-11.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

HOME SWEET HOMICIDE: Lynn Bari, Randolph Scott—A good little mystery picture. The children in it put it over, especially the little boy. Our business was down. We had too much snow and sleet for our farmers and the people from the nearby towns. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Mrs. D. H. Gray, Gray Theatre, Brodhead, Ky.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—A good picture for the Como fans. We didn't seem to have enough. We were lucky to break even on this one. Played Sunday, Feb. 9.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

JOHNNY COMES FLYING HOME: Martha Stewart, Richard Crane—Airplane shows draw well here. This one was good due to the jet test. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 12, 13.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—Below average crowd on this picture, but that was due to the bad weather, as this picture should go over well in a small town. The title was misleading as some thought it would be a musical. Glad to see Henry Fonda and Victor Mature back. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—Mrs. D. H. Gray, Gray Theatre, Brodhead, Ky.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—This magnificent production, standing head and shoulders above anything we have exhibited in too long a time, is definite evidence that artistry in Hollywood is not yet completely defunct. This is Americana at its best, photographed and performed according to the highest traditions of the cinema. The loving care and masterly touch of director John Ford are in evidence everywhere and what he has done with Victor Mature and Linda Darnell is a pleasure to behold. Henry Fonda is, needless to say, excellent, as is the rest of a uniformly skilled cast. Although this picture had small appeal for our regular Western fans, it was generally well liked and business was considerably above average both nights. Played Thursday, Friday, Jan. 16, 17.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

SMOKY: Fred MacMurray, Anne Baxter—Yes, we did the usual good business that this sort of thing does. There is no getting around it, patrons do not have the extra money to go to more than a certain number of shows per week and when you pay anything extra for a single feature, you get beat in the long run. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 23-25.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

United Artists

ABILENE TOWN: Randolph Scott, Ann Dvorak—Used on midweek. Business only fair. It would have been more suited for a weekend double bill. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 19, 20.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal.

BACHELOR'S DAUGHTERS, THE: Gail Russell, Claire Trevor—Fair picture. Best for adult audiences. There was reaction for and against it. Business was below average. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 24, 25.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY N THE CLOUDS: Michael Redgrave, John Mills—As our local audiences are markedly allergic to British pictures, we kicked this one around considerably before venturing to date it. The results were surprising. The happily conceived device of combining Americans and British in an approximately 50 per cent mixture, coupled with a warmth of understanding and maturity of viewpoint, which is practically never approached in Hollywood productions, has produced a picture of universal appeal. Although our small town audience was very small the first night, the word got around and the response the second night was well above what we should have expected from any "top" American picture. For my money this and "Clementine," discussed elsewhere, were the high spots of the season. Played Thursday, Friday, Jan. 30, 31.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

NIGHT IN CASABLANCA, A: Marx Brothers, Lois Collier—Despite putting out several thousand heralds on this feature, it did no business. It is a very good comedy and worthy of being played in any theatre and on any day. Your only problem is, will they come to see it? Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

NIGHT IN CASABLANCA, A: Marx Brothers, Lois Collier—More piano playing by Chico and more selections on the harp by Harpo would have helped. Silly, but not very funny. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 10, 11.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

NIGHT IN CASABLANCA, A: Marx Brothers, Lois Collier—Very good comedy. My folks like them. Why don't they make more pictures?—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

PRISONER OF ZENDA: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll—Reissue. Adverse weather. Business didn't come up to par. Although I understand there are situations where this reissue did business. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 26, 27.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine—A wonderful picture that will never get old. Business was off, but that was due to other attractions. Those who saw this picture commented favorably. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 17, 18.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

SCANDAL IN PARIS, A: George Sanders, Signe Hasso—Took care of film rental and nothing more. No one seemed happy after seeing it. Played Tuesday, Feb. 11.—Elaine George, Star, Heppner, Ore.

YOUNG WIDOW: Jane Russell, Louis Hayward—To my surprise, this did better than we expected. Jane Russell did a nice job of acting. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 24, 25.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

Universal

BLACK ANGEL, THE: Dan Duryea, June Vincent—Used on top half of double bill to fair business. It is not strong enough to head double bill. It is more suited for the second spot. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell—This is a good reissue and both Bing and Joan Blondell look swell. It is worth playing again; however, no business even for a one-day playdate. Played Tuesday, Feb. 26.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

KILLERS, THE: Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner—Excellent.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson, Flomaton, Ala.

LADY ON A TRAIN: Deanna Durbin, Ralph Bellamy—Miss Durbin is a drug on the market since she grew up. Story is a little dead. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 16-18.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

MAGNIFICENT DOLL: Ginger Rogers, Burgess Meredith—This picture of the early history of our country is well produced, but unfortunately it was not good at the box office.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

TIME OF THEIR LIVES: Abbott and Costello—Good Abbott and Costello. However, they don't do the business they used to do. But what does?—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

WHITE TIE AND TAILS: Dan Duryea, Ella Raines—For once Universal released a picture that is good. It was well done. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—Albert Hefferan, Century Theatre, Coopersville, Mich.

Warner Bros.

DECEPTION: Bette Davis, Paul Henreid—One patron wrote and asked that I look in the dictionary and find the meaning of deception as we advertised this attraction. Even the Bette Davis fans kicked on this one as no one really figured out the ending. As good an actress as Bette Davis is, I wonder why she is cast in such tripe. Why don't they give her a good supporting cast. If you are in a small town and have to play this, you had better hide as soon as the feature starts. Walkouts start from the beginning. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 10, 11.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

NEVER SAY GOODBYE: Errol Flynn, Eleanor Parker—After approximately a half hour of unadulterated tedium, an uninteresting child is pushed into the background where she belongs, the adults take over, and the proceedings become quite funny. The motion pictures can stand more old-fashioned slapstick of this kind. Business about average. Played Thursday, Friday, Feb. 13, 14.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

NEVER SAY GOODBYE: Errol Flynn, Eleanor Parker—A very pleasing comedy. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 17, 18.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

NIGHT AND DAY: Cary Grant, Alexis Smith—One of the most outstanding pictures we have played. All my patrons were well pleased. Don't miss this one. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 3, 4.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

VERDICT, THE: Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre—One of the best murder mysteries of the season, although the fact that it is a period picture lessened the appeal. Business poor. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 25, 26.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

PUCK CHASERS: Sport Reels—Good sport reel.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

UNCIVIL WAR BRIDES: All Star Comedies—My patrons resented this slap at southern accents. It even made the Yankee soldiers look stupid.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Paramount

COPY CAT: Animated Antics—A reissue cartoon in black and white. Fair.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

SPREE FOR ALL: Noveltoons—This Cinecolor cartoon, featuring Snuffy Smith, was tops. Let's have more of these, Paramount.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

Universal

MR CHIMP TO THE RESCUE: Variety Views—These shorts with the chimpanzee are well liked here. This one was fine.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

RECKLESS DRIVER: Lantz Color Cartunes—Excellent cartoon.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

RKO Pathe Sets Film Deal With State Department

Twelve one-reel "news magazine" issues will be produced by RKO Pathe for overseas distribution by the U. S. State Department, under terms of a deal just completed by Hamilton MacFadden, associate chief of the Department's international motion picture division.

Short subjects recently completed for the Government agency include "Journey Into Medicine," by Willard Van Dyke's Associated Films, and "Hurricane Circuit," made by Scofield Productions. The latter was made with the cooperation of the Army, Navy and U. S. Weather Bureau.

By the end of the fiscal year, July 1, the Department's production program for overseas distribution is expected to pass 100 reels, Mr. MacFadden said, adding that there are now 70 reels in release, playing to a monthly audience of 7,500,000.

Park-In Wins Over Drive-In In Providence Patent Suit

Park-In Theatres, Inc., Camden, N. J., won a suit against E. M. Loew's Drive-In Theatre, Inc., over patent rights when the U. S. District Court in Providence ruled March 11 that Drive-In is liable for royalties to Park-In on income derived from the Loew's theatre between June 1, 1938, and 1944.

The decision is regarded as of wide importance to drive-in theatres since, under the ruling, all those using the Park-In patent will be subject to royalty payments. At midweek no appeal from the decision had been made. Park-In filed the suit against Loew's April 30, 1941, to recover triple damages for infringement of Patent No. 1,909,537, claiming that it held the patent rights through assignment from Richard M. Hollingsworth, Jr., characterized as the inventor of the drive-in.

Park-In claimed that it entered into an agreement with Loew's under which the Drive-In was to make weekly royalty payments and that these payments continued only from July 21, 1937, to November 13, 1937.

A full-length documentary on the life and times of Franklin D. Roosevelt, assembled by Tola Productions from more than two million feet of Army, Navy and newsreel film, will have its world premiere at the Globe theatre in New York April 12, second anniversary of the late President's death. The documentary runs 82 minutes and, according to Martin Levine and Oliver Unger, Tola executives, has been approved by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. Proceeds from the opening will go to the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Fund. Elliott Roosevelt was editorial consultant in the selection of the reels, Following theatrical distribution it will be made available to interested groups in 16mm. Jam Handy produced.

India May Use Coast Facilities

Indian film production, stimulated by the impending withdrawal of the British from India, may utilize Hollywood studio facilities under a plan announced in New York last week by Vajay Bhatt, president of Prakash Pictures, one of India's leading producers. Mr. Bhatt is going to the coast to seek support for his project.

The picture he would like to make deals with the life of Buddha and would be in Technicolor. The script, in blank verse, and set designs are all ready. The main characters would be brought over from India. The film would either be made in a two-language version or would be dubbed, depending on advice received by Mr. Bhatt on the coast. Background would be shot in India.

Mr. Bhatt brought with him three Indian pictures and now is negotiating for their American distribution. The most important is "Ram Rajya," based on a mythological theme, which ran 87 weeks in Bombay. It is the first Indian picture ever seen by Mahatma Ghandi. The other two films are titled "Bharat Milap," also a mythological theme, and "Vikramaditya," based on an historical event. All will be cut for U. S. showing as they run from 11,000 to 13,000 feet.

India has about 100 film producers who put on an average yearly total of about 300 pictures.

Fifty-City Premiere Set For RKO's "Trail Street"

As the spearhead for a 50-city opening for RKO's "Trail Street," the picture will be given its world premiere at the Tucker and Plaza theatres in Liberal, Kan., March 25. The picture, which stars Randolph Scott, has Liberal as its locale.

"Egg and I" Set for Music Hall Opening

Universal-International's "The Egg and I" starring Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray, has been scheduled for Radio City Music Hall to follow "The Late George Apley," the next attraction, according to G. S. Eyssell, Music Hall head.

Hughes Amends Complaint

Howard Hughes, who filed a $5,000,000 triple-damage anti-trust suit against the Motion Picture Association when it withdrew the Production Code Administration seal from "The Outlaw" last Tuesday filed an amended complaint alleging that damages had increased to $7,500,000 since the withdrawal of the seal.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

Q In England, the Gaumont-British Challenge Shield, awarded annually by that circuit to the outstanding Gaumont-British showman, has been acquired by Roy Raistrick, manager of the Empire, Glossop, Derbyshire. The winner also receives £100 for his accomplishments during 1946.

The competitions had special significance last year because they had been discontinued since the outbreak of war in 1939.

A second award of £75 went to S. Hodnett of the Gaumont Middlesbrough, Yorksire. Third prize money, £50, was split between two familiar Quigley Awards contenders—A. J. Brown, Empire, Cardiff in South Wales, and A. M. Carpenter, Gaumont Palace, Barnstaple, Devonshire.

To the victors, the spoils—and congratulations.

Q That's a most unusual contest sponsored by Fox Wisconsin theaters. The sales girls in charge of the confection stands compete each month for the title of Vending Queen. The circuit issues weekly bulletins on current standings. Names of the last ten in the weekly rating list are printed in red, undoubtedly to match their complexions.

Q Long range showmanship was the target of Robert Case, city manager for Walter Reade theatres in Kingston, N. Y., recently when he set out to promote a full page cooperative ad for the Broadway theatre to run in the local Sunday News.

Mr. Case signed his nine cooperating merchants to a 52-week contract, which means the Broadway will be represented in a dominating position on the page for the entire year without cost.

The enterprising showman sold his clients on the attention-getting value of his attractions, which make the page more in-

BLAZING ENTHUSIASM

TWO weeks ago we received newspaper tearsheets from a manager which reported that his theatre ushers were being trained in fire-fighting techniques by the local fire department under the personal supervision of the chief. We considered this a fine piece of promotion, since his patrons obviously received assurance from the writeups that the theatre staff was pretty well equipped to safeguard them.

Later we received other issues of the same papers with reports that a fire of undetermined origin had started in this theatre during the last performance. An usher discovered the blaze and, while the audience was quietly removed from the premises, other members of the staff put out the fire.

Offhand, we would agree that the incident, as the newspaper editorials stated, was a forceful testimony to the conscientious application of both the manager and the fire chief to their duties.

We recall, however, an occurrence similar to this which took place in a capital city a few years ago. Instead of one fire, as in the above incident, after the chief had begun his training course, a series of minor fires broke out in the theatre.

Eventually it developed that one of the staff, impressed and curious about fire-fighting methods under practical conditions, had been starting the fires himself.

teresting to readers and potential customers, therefore more valuable as preferred position for the advertiser.

Q Ted R. Conklin, manager of the Ashland theatre, Ashland, Ohio, reminds us that when the circulation department of the local newspaper has difficulty with delivery boys, and complaints from subscribers, the theatre manager has a ready-made opportunity to improve relations with the press.

In this instance, Mr. Conklin has not only tied up to award a theatre ticket to each newsboy against whom no complaint is registered each week, but also arranged for the newspaper to reimburse the theatre in full for each free ticket presented for admission.

Q Capitalizing on the fact that Larry Parks, star of "The Jolson Story," is a graduate of the University of Illinois, theatremen of the Great Lakes circuit have been doing an outstanding promotion job on that picture, with cooperation from local newspapers.

In connection with the film's opening at the Rialto theatre, the Joliet Herald-News published a special 28-page section containing art, publicity stories and cooperative advertising exclusively on "The Jolson Story." Credit for this remarkable feat goes to city manager George Mahoney and manager Marvin Stockwell of the Rialto theatre.

Similar sections are being promoted in every Illinois city where the city is represented.

Q Coincidental booking of successive attractions gave Harold Lancaster, manager of the Strand theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., the idea for a special advertisement adjoining the daily weather reports in local newspapers recently. Copy read: Strand Forecast—Today, "The Clouds Roll By"—Tomorrow, "Blue Skies."

THE BEGINNING

—of a forceful exploitation campaign on "The Beginning or the End" at the Fox Wisconsin theatre in Milwaukee is depicted in the street ballyhoo at right, and above, lobby display, showing uranium ore, used by manager R. Koutnik.

Left, Russ McKibbin, Victoria theatre manager in Toronto, gained valuable publicity by holding out waiting crowds during the climax of "The Verdict" in spite of low temperature and heavy snowfall.

At right, street ballyhoo by H. F. Wilson, manager of the Capitol, Chatham, Ontario, exploits "Blue Skies".

For the reissue of "Kit Carson" at the Granby, Norfolk, Va., manager George Daransoll used this outdoor ballyhoo, cashed in on Dana Andrew's current popularity.

Advance lobby piece used by Maurice Druker, manager, State, Cleveland, had mirror to convey film's novelty presentation on "Lady in the Lake".

N. W. Lofthus, of the California in Santa Barbara, figured if one sandwich man was good promotion, five would be five times as good for "Mr. Ace"; right.

The Selling Approach

ON NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects pressbooks now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiters on selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

EASY COME, EASY GO (Paramount): Here is a comedy-romance with Barry Fitzgerald, Diana Lynn and Sonny Tufts sharing top billing. The title offers many opportunities for exploitation. For example, most towns are receptive to any gag which will help to put across the message of traffic safety. Your police department might help you to post signs which would carry this copy: "Speed limit—25 MPH—'Easy Come, Easy Go'."

Use a teaser twist on the title for a series of personal ads in the classified ad section of the local newspaper. Suggested copy: "Mabel, stop worrying about that million dollars you lost. See 'Easy Come, Easy Go'," or "No house? No appetite? Nobody loves you? Oh, well 'Easy Come, Easy Go'—Gem theatre."

Sell the title on the streets with a walking ballyhoo. Have a scantily dressed man with a barrel strapped over his shoulders parade through the town. Copy on the barrel could read: "Oh, well, 'Easy Come, Easy Go'—Gem theatre." The title also is a natural for tieups with taxicab companies, automobile dealers, tire firms, and all types of companies connected with any mode of transportation. Capitalize on Barry Fitzgerald's past picture successes.

THE GUILT OF JANET AMES (Columbia): Billed as a provocative love drama, this picture stars Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas. For street ballyhoo, send two or three attractive girls, armed with borrowed cameras, into the main streets of town. They should pretend to take the pictures of pedestrians and then hand out small, printed cards containing the following copy: "I did not take your picture, but if you want to see a real good picture, don't miss, etc."

A newspaper contest can be worked around the name "Janet Ames", with readers asked to make up lists of words from the letters. The rules are simple: the words must be familiar ones, they cannot be names, they cannot be plural, they must be four or more letters. Guest tickets could be awarded for the 20 longest lists.

The theme of the picture offers radio station program directors a number of angles for broadcasts: 1. A husbands-and-wives forum, in which two couples discuss the meaning of true and unselfish love, and of marital happiness generally; 2. A bobby-soxer or teen-age forum in which the younger generation describes what it thinks happy marriages should be and how they can be obtained.

no cost movie news sheets were sent out on the regular mailing list, to rural boxholders and distributed at the theatre. 500 personalized post cards were sent to businessmen and professional people.

Visiting Cards in Hotels, Restaurants Aid "Gilda"

Starting four weeks in advance the wording, "Rita Hayworth as the glamorous and tantalizing 'Gilda'" was used in slides and on cards in the foyer to exploit the playdate of the picture at the Dominion theatre, Bishopham, Blackpool, England. 4,000 "Gilda" visiting cards were distributed by 14 of the leading hotels and restaurants in the town. Waitresses left a card beside each plate as they set the tables, while maids left a card in each room they cleaned. The campaign was arranged by manager A. A. Allen.

Handbills Posted for "Crime"

Manager H. Clayton-Nutt used handbills in the form of a police "Wanted" notice to publicize "Appointment With Crime" at the Broadway Cinema, Eccles, Lancs., England. The handbills were placed in a large number of shop windows, with the result that passersby were confronted with the playdate notice at almost every other shop.

Store and Radio Tieups Spark "California"

Many window tieups contrasting travel facilities in the days of the covered wagon with today's streamlined trains sparked the campaigns for the opening of "California" in Omaha and Des Moines.

A tieup with the Union Pacific netted manager Don Shane a number of window displays on travel for the playdate of the picture at the Paramount theatre in Omaha. California goods and fashions were the inspiration for many department store window tieups.

A former Hollywood stunt man, now an announcer for radio station KOIL, was engaged for a street ballyhoo which required him to ride a horse and execute whip and rope tricks. A covered wagon was used in the lobby.

Highlight of exploitation in Des Moines, which was set contrasting travel then and now was a tieup with the Rock Island Railroad. Harold Lyon, manager of the Des Moines theatre, was instrumental in lining up the Des Moines campaign.

Plants Stories on Sneak Preview in Local Press

Manager Morris Rosenthal garnered publicity in all local newspapers for a sneak preview he arranged to exploit the playdate of "Lady in the Lake" at the Poli theatre, New Haven, Conn. Cashiers distributed $1 bill change with imprinted bands around them a week in advance. Copy read: "Save this $1 to see 'Lady in the Lake'." Small cards with strings attached were distributed a few days before opening. Copy on the cards read: "If you get nervous, play with this string." A strip of stills showing the new camera technique used in the picture was planted on the amusement color page in the Sunday New Haven Register.

Window Tieups Aid "Suspense"

Manager Leslie Fletcher arranged 10 window tieups to exploit his engagement of "Suspense" at the Carlton Cinema, Chapel Bar, Nottingham, England. In addition, a tieup was set with the Nottingham Ice Stadium for a fancy dress "Suspense" ball. Prizes were awarded for the best costumes.

WANT A LOOK - SEE?

A reader has suggested that the campaign books of the winners of the 1946 Quigley Awards Competitions be made available for inspection at key centers throughout the country. Exchanges or circuits which desire to exhibit these samples of showmanship are requested to write to this department.—C. F.

Jitterbug Contest Helps To Exploit "Co-Ed" Date

Manager Elmer Adams, Jr., arranged a jitterbug contest on the stage to exploit his playdate of "Betty Co-Ed" at the Bison theatre, Shawnee, Okla. An advance ticket sale took the pressure off the box office the night of the show. Adams promoted several free announcements at basketball games during the week. Radio spot announcements and window displays also were obtained. Several drug stores tied in with the special show by advertising "Jitterbug Sodas." A diamond ring and an Elgin wrist watch were promoted from a local jeweler for the couple winning the contest.

Teaser Ads, Lobby Display Promote "Jolson Story"

Teaser ads were used for several days in advance by manager Dick Peffley to promote "The Jolson Story" at the Paramount theatre, Fremont, Ohio. The ads featured Jolson's white gloved hands. A Stromberg-Carlson radio-phonograph combination was promoted from a local store for use in the lobby a week in advance. A sign was placed on the phonograph, reading: "Listen to the hit tunes from 'The Jolson Story'." 2,000

SCHINE'S ACCENT ON SPRING

"Springtime Is Schine Show Time—sell it with showmanship" keynotes the new Spring show season campaign which is conducted annually by managers of the circuit. A manual, embodying successful promotions of past Spring campaigns and containing some new suggestions has been dispatched around the circuit. It was prepared by Seymour Morris, director of publicity, at Gloversville, N. Y.

An old favorite is the Easter Party. The manual suggests that merchants be contacted for Easter baskets, bunnies, jelly beans, chocolate eggs, etc., to give away to kids attending the show. Five and ten cent stores usually cooperate on this kind of a tieup, because they ordinarily operate on a low advertising budget.

The treasure hunt is another time-tested promotion. It is usually conducted in playgrounds or parks. The night before the hunt different colored eggs are hidden. The kids go out Saturday morning or sometime before the show opens and hunt for the eggs. The eggs are then brought to the theatre and the child receives a free admission plus a prize promoted from the merchants.

Fashion shows, when staged properly, create a great deal of interest. The local newspaper usually cooperates in a promotion of this sort for most of the stores who will be in on it will undoubtedly be consistent advertisers. Models for this show can be recruited from high schools, sororities, women's clubs, etc.

For the past several years the "Quest for Fashions" idea has been used in many situations. Here is how it works: On Easter Sunday a committee of impartial judges selects at least 50 best-dressed women, presenting them with a flower and a card advising them that they have been selected as one of the city's best-dressed women. They are invited to appear on the stage of the theatre the following Monday. The best-dressed woman is selected on the stage by audience applause and awarded promoted prizes.

Also covered in the manual are merchant full page newspaper co-ops, florist tieups, radio promotions, morning shows for kiddies during the Easter school holidays, ice cream giveaways, pet parade, bike giveaways, and a Tom Thumb wedding. In conclusion, it is pointed out that Springtime is always a good time to brighten up the theatre.

New Jersey towns of the Reade Circuit are holding special Easter Kiddie Shows, consisting of cartoons and children's feature presentations. Managers will promote prizes and Easter comic books to be given to children attending the shows.

Tieups Promote "Scheherazade"

Cosmetic tieups highlighted the campaign arranged for the world premiere of "Song of Scheherazade" at the Uptown theatre, Toronto, Ont., Can. The campaign was conducted by manager Stanley Gosell.

Demonstration booths were set up in Eaton's and Simpson's, department stores, with demonstrators on hand to exploit "Scheherazade" cosmetics. Eaton's also used a window display featuring cosmetics and stills from the picture. Tamblin's, the leading drug store chain, dressed 22 of their windows with blowup cutouts of Yvonne De Carlo, star of the picture, and stills.

Prominent citizens were invited to the premiere with each lady guest receiving a bottle of "Scheherazade" Cologne as a souvenir. A novel feature of the premiere was the Trans-Lux illuminated travelling jumbo telegram erected in the lobby by the Canadian National Telegraph Company, which operated continuously spelling out the congratulatory telegrams received from stars and executives.

Ties In with Local Campaign

Special window cards which tied in with a local campaign against reckless motorists were placed in selected locations by manager Hugh S. Borland to exploit "The Killers" at the Louis theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Doob Uses Novelty Cards To Sell "The Chase"

Several thousand novelty cards were distributed by manager Edgar J. Doob to exploit his playdate of "The Chase" at Loew's theatre, Wilmington, Del. Copy on the cards, which had red spots on them, read: "If the spot changes color, you're too weak to see 'The Chase.'" Through a tieup with a local newspaper, a "raffles" appeared at specified times and places. All envelopes sent through the mail were rubber-stamped: "You'll be gasping for breath at the end of 'The Chase.'"

Sets "Prentiss" Radio Tieup

A good deal of attention was directed to the playdate of "Nora Prentiss" at the Stanley theatre, Baltimore, through a tieup with the "Ladies' Party" radio program over WCBM. The picture was plugged several times on each broadcast of the hour-long program, a week in advance. Manager Rodney Collier arranged the tieup.

Keefe Arranges Ski Show

A "Ski Jamboree" show was arranged by manager Jim Keefe at the Orpheum theatre, Spokane, Wash. Keefe tied-up with various ski clubs in Spokane. The show consisted of a full length picture featuring skiing and several short subjects filmed in various skiing centers. A ski fashion show was presented on stage by Simchuk's.

Car, Sound Truck Herald Opening Of "The End"

A new 1947 Studebaker was bannered with playdate copy and driven all over town to promote manager J. G. Samartano's engagement of "The Beginning or the End" at the State theatre, Providence, R. I. An Army recruiting sound truck also was used for ballyhoo opening day.

Dignitaries, including the governor, judges, newspaper men, scientists and personnel who were connected with the atom bomb project, living in Providence, were invited to the opening. Junior League girls in evening gowns acted as hostesses opening night. Military Police were stationed in front of the theatre to handle crowds.

Samartano planted stories in the local newspapers and tied up with various radio programs to exploit the picture. Railway Express trucks were bannered with playdate copy. 100 cards announcing the premiere were distributed to downtown shops.

Exhibits Paintings, Books For Negro History Week

Manager Steve McCall tied-in with Negro History Week by using an exhibit of Negro oil paintings in the lobby of the Michigan theatre, Chicago, Ill. The paintings depicted the Negro in the U. S. Navy. In addition, the display contained 10 portraits of Negro authors set in a frame above several glass cases, displaying their books. The books were donated by local book stores and the paintings were loaned by the art center of the Negro district.

Promotes Full Page Co-Op Ad

A full page cooperative ad in the Cumberland News was promoted by manager Fred Perry to publicize a "Miss Valentine" contest at the Liberty theatre, Cumberland, Md. Nine merchants paid for the ad.

Dave Jones, advertising manager for the Kerasotes theatres, Springfield, Ill., created this original display ad to advertise "The Jolson Story". Jones used an actual photograph of the theatre, which was mortised for screen and balloon copy.

National Search For Beauty Aids "Calendar Girl"

A "Calendar Girl" search focused widespread attention on the opening of the picture at the Mayfair theatre in Baltimore, Md. The cooperation of local merchants and a radio station was enlisted to aid the promotion, which was worked as part of the national "Calendar Girl" contest sponsored by Republic Pictures and Brown & Bigelow, advertising firm.

Republic is offering $1,000 cash to finalists in the contest, with $250 going to the winner. She also will receive a vacation in Hollywood, New York or Chicago, with all expenses paid, and a chance to have her portrait painted in full color for a Brown & Bigelow calendar.

An eye-arresting 6x8 foot display was used in the lobby of the Mayfair to publicize the contest. A special contest trailer built up interest for 10 days in advance. Free radio spot announcements were obtained on record programs. Royal Crown Cola devoted 15 minutes of its half hour daily program over WITH for six days to news of the contest. The campaign was arranged by publicist J. E. Hurwitz and Republic exploiter A. Arthur Price.

Radio Tieup Promoted by Hynes for "Ladies Man"

A tieup with a local radio program netted manager Robert A. Hynes a great deal of publicity for his playdate of "Ladies Man" at the Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. The tieup was arranged with the "Man About Town" program. Four days before opening, ladies appearing on the program were asked: "Would you like to meet an Oklahoma oil millionaire who is single and had $50,000 to spend in a week? If so, what would you do?" Men were asked: "If your water pump came in as a gusher how would you spend your first $50,000 advance?" After the answers, the announcer told listeners to "see 'Ladies Man' and find out how Virginia Welles and Eddie Bracken reacted."

Student Preview Exploits Playdate of "Jolson"

Special attention was directed towards high school students by manager Fred McMillan in his campaign to exploit the playdate of "The Jolson Story" at the Warner theatre, Washington, D. C. A special screening of the picture was held for editors of high school publications. McMillan also arranged for George Jolson, Al's younger brother, to be host to 600 students of the Jefferson High School at the opening performance. Through a tieup with Decca, copies of the Jolson record album were furnished to all disc jockeys. The records were played over all the local stations and by orchestras in night clubs, etc.

Ladies Attend Matinee for "Nora Prentiss" Contest

A special ladies matinee climaxed a contest based on the question "If you were 'Nora Prentiss', would you keep your mouth shut?" at the Stamford theatre, Stamford, Conn. Acting manager Herb Fenton arranged the matinee so that the feminine element could submit replies to the question. The competition was plugged for nearly two weeks in advance, both in newspapers and over the radio. Thirty prizes were awarded for the best 25-word replies with the top winner being announced and interviewed over the radio.

Heralds Exploit Jitterbug Contest in Morristown

Attractive heralds were distributed by manager Birney Feld to advertise a "Jitterbug Jamboree" stage show and contest at the Park theatre, Morristown, N. J. Two radios were promoted for prizes. The co-operating merchants also used window displays to exploit the contest and show.

Sorkin Arranges Gala Premiere For "Years"

An elaborate premiere highlighted by the appearance of President and Mrs. Truman, government officials, Hollywood stars and other notables drew a wealth of newspaper publicity and public attention to the playdate of "The Best Years of Our Lives" at the RKO Keith theatre in Washington, D. C. Manager S. L. Sorkin conducted the campaign.

The premiere was sponsored by the Washington Committee for National Civilian Rehabilitation, of which Mrs. Harry S. Truman is honorary chairman. The committee prepared a 30-page program for the premiere, which was paid for by merchant ads. The committee also distributed pamphlets, in which the chairman, Mrs. Harold H. Burton, asked the public to support the benefit performance.

The gala premiere was publicized extensively in all the local newspapers day before opening and opening day. Numerous window tieups were promoted.

Atom Bomb Letter Contest Aids "Beginning or End"

A letter-writing contest on the subject of the atom bomb highlighted manager Joseph S. Boyle's campaign for "The Beginning or the End" at the Poli-Broadway theatre, Norwich, Conn. An announcement of the contest was carried in the Norwich Bulletin. Considerable publicity was garnered by Boyle in both the Bulletin and Record. Teaser cards and radio tieups also helped to exploit the picture.

Young obtained the support of city officials for the promotion and had reporters and photographers from the local newspapers to cover the proceedings. A round table discussion on the national crime wave was promoted over radio station WCSH in which the district attorney, his assistant and two local attorneys participated.

Circuit to Show Foreign Films

"The exhibition of foreign pictures has outgrown the 300-seat art theatres" and as a result the Transinternational Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles has converted its west coast circuit of 10 theatres to the exhibition of foreign films, Sidney J. Pink, president, has announced.

At a trade press conference in his suit at the Hotel Warwick in New York last Friday, Mr. Pink said that on his trip to New York he acquired 50 foreign features which will be distributed through his company. Most of these are to be supplied by Superfilm and Sirtzky International.

Currently, Mr. Pink said, he is negotiating for the acquisition of theatres in Denver, Salt Lake City and Dallas, and eventually plans to have a total of 50 theatres throughout the country for foreign film exhibition.

Marc A. Gilbert, president of an affiliated company, Transinternational of New York, said he would negotiate for a string of foreign film theatres in the east to exhibit foreign pictures he imports.

Nine Prestige Films Sold To Purdue University

J. Arthur Rank's Prestige Pictures, in a precedent-setting move, has sold prior-run rights to nine features to Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., for showing in the university's 6,146-seat auditorium. The deal was concluded after consultations with the city's five commercial theatres. First picture to be shown will probably be "Brief Encounter."

New Fall River House

The Embassy theatre was opened last week in Fall River, Mass., with "Her Sister's Secret." City officials, including the mayor and the president of the City Council, attended the ceremonies.

Siritzky Seeks Reciprocal Deal

Back from six weeks in Europe, Sam Siritzky, vice-president of Siritzky International Pictures, said in New York Monday that the big problem facing the industry in France today is the high cost of production.

There is now in process of formation a buying combination between Siritzky International, Pathe and Gaumont, French circuits, which would seek some arrangement whereby French product would be guaranteed playing time here in some proportion to the playing time U. S. films receive in France.

"Houses in France are doing capacity business," he observed, and that includes American films as well as French and others. As a power-conservation measure, theatres have to keep closed two days a week, he said. The industry there is producing about 70 films a year as compared with 100 before the war, he said.

Mr. Siritzky said he was assured by the Ministry of Justice that his claim to recover the remaining 45 theatres of his 63-house circuit would be settled by June. Eighteen of the former enemy-held houses have already been restored.

Mr. Siritzky said he would bring Marcel Carne, French producer, here in 1948 to make a film in Hollywood.

Lord Tyrrell, Head of British Censors; Dies

Lord Tyrrell of Avon, 80, president of the British Board of Film Censors and a former diplomat, died at his home in London March 14 from bronchial pneumonia. Before retiring from diplomatic service in 1934 he was Ambassador to France. Lord Tyrrell viewed the industry as a powerful educational medium as well as a popular form of entertainment. Soon after his appointment to the censor board in 1935 he warned against the introduction into films of political or religious issues.

Bernard Hirsh, 48, Head Of Philadelphia Circuit

Bernard Hirsh, 48, acting president of the Hirsh Amusement Company, died March 14 in the Jewish Hospital in that city. He was active in the industry for 35 years, directing a circuit of 23 houses in Arizona before coming to Philadelphia where he and his three brothers operate an independent circuit including the Century and Fairmont theatres. In addition to his three brothers, Harry, Charles and David, he is survived by his wife, Helen; a son and daughter, and four sisters. Funeral services were held in Philadelphia March 17.

Stallion Road

Warners—Range Romance

Somewhere in his novel of the same title, Stephen Longstreet remarks that he doesn't see why everyone doesn't live on the Sierra Madre range and lose money breeding horses. Alex Gottlieb's production, which follows the book with meticulous exactitude, makes the life portrayed so attractive that doubtless many members of the audience will make the same comment.

It seems a pity that the picture was not filmed in color. Even in black and white, the feel of the California sunshine, the wide stretches of the rolling meadowlands make themselves felt with gentle, persuasive impact. At the heart of this landscape and this way of life, Ronald Reagan, Alexis Smith and Zachary Scott, who constitute the triangle concerned, perform in masterly fashion. Miss Smith has never before given so warmly human a portrayal: for once she is allowed to be a human being, instead of a beautiful clothes-horse.

In the role of a cynical young novelist, Scott is at once the narrator of the story and one of its principal characters. On a visit to the ranch of a college friend—Reagan—he falls in love, despite his better judgment, with Miss Smith, who breeds horses on a neighboring ranch. She, however, is in love with Reagan, who portrays a veterinarian of scientific acumen and great personal integrity. It is that integrity which comes between the lovers, and it is the acumen that saves his life when he falls victim to the dread anthrax which is decimating herds pastured on the range.

In the supporting cast, Peggy Knudsen contributes a scintillating bit as a lady of loose morals and bitter tongue, and the two children, Patti Brady and Fernando Alvarado, are appealingly natural.

James V. Kern's direction displays a sensitive feeling for mood. Longstreet himself adapted his novel to the screen, which accounts in part for the success of the undertaking.

The Guilty

Monogram—Melodrama

As his initial production for Monogram release, Jack Wrather chose a Cornell Woolrich story, a sombre tale that stresses the sordid side of murder. Its characters are unprepossessing people—save, perhaps, for Bonita Granville, who plays a dual role—and their actions are similarly unadmirable. The very lack of a sympathetic central character creates a realism almost hypnotic in its effect. These people might live anywhere; the things that happen to them might happen to anyone. The audience, therefore, follows their misadventures with intense interest.

Early in Robert Presnell's screenplay one of the twins portrayed by Miss Granville is found murdered under revolting circumstances, and the tale thereafter revolves around the solution of the crime. It might have been committed by the other twin, by a psychoneurotic war veteran with whom both girls were in love, by a boarder in their mother's home—by almost anyone, in fact. The true criminal is exposed in the final sequences in an ingenious and quite plausible manner.

Don Castle, as the narrator of the story, is noteworthy among the players. John Reinhardt's direction is of such caliber as to inspire satisfaction that he is back from the wars and working in his proper medium once again.

Time Out of Mind

Universal—Psychological Drama

Robert Siodmak foregoes murder and the psychological for straight drama on this occasion and comes up with a well-acted piece so leisurely in pace and content that it seems longer than its 88 minutes.

Perhaps Rachel Field, on whose novel, "Time Out of Mind" is based, did her concentrating more on character development than on story progression. It is the film, not the book, which is up for appraisal here, however, and the analysis is that it takes a good deal of footage before Phyllis Calvert wins Robert Hutton.

Hutton plays the son of Leo G. Carroll, Maine shipowner, who decrees the son must follow the father. The conflict between them develops because Ella Raines, his sister, is on his side. So, too, is Miss Calvert, servant in the household and practically member of the family. She conspires to get Hutton and Miss Raines off to Paris to pursue his muse.

He returns after three or more years to find his estranged father dead and Miss Calvert still in love. Hutton, meanwhile, has married the wealthy Helena Carter. It is an unsuccessful match, predicated on money. Hutton deliberately throws away a concert arranged for him, takes further to drink, is nursed back by Miss Calvert, recovers his stance as a composer and emerges triumphant at a New York concert. Miss Calvert and her love become triumphant, also.

This is all there is to the dramatic action. Performances, on the other hand, are better than the norm. In her first American made film, Miss Calvert is very good. Hutton is far better than this reviewer has ever seen him. The experienced Carroll, always to be relied upon for an intelligent acting job, does not disappoint. Good support comes from Eddie Albert as a minor-scale heavy and from John Abbott, whose characterization of music critic is one of the best things in the film. "Time Out of Mind" is top-grade all the way on the production side. On the entertainment side, it is satisfying at best. Abem Finkel and Arnold Phillips wrote the screenplay. Miklos Rozsa and Mario Castelnuova-Tedesco prepared an effective music score.

King of the Wild Horses

Columbia—Horse Story

This picture tells a heart-warming story about a boy and a horse, emphasizing the boy's devotion to a horse and his belief that wild horses should be free to roam the plains.

Preston Foster and Gail Russell have the adult roles and Bill Sheffield is cast as their nephew. On the day of the boy's arrival at the ranch, the wild horse, King, was seen for the first time in years. The boy's father was the only man who could ride King. Later during a drought the wild horses came down to the ranch in search of water. The mustangs, led by King, were taking all the available water and the cattle were dying of thirst. A happy ending is reached when the drought ends and a colt of King's remains voluntarily on the ranch.

The cast is adequate for a film of this type. The outdoor scenes and the shots of the band of wild horses are exceptionally well done. Ted Richmond produced and George Archainbaud directed. Brenda Weisberg based the screenplay on the story by Ted Thomas.

Tarzan and the Huntress

RKO—Outdoor Adventure

Tarzan's hunting call is as strong as ever and so should be the appeal of this picture to the animal lovers and the outdoor adventure film addicts. The film offers basically the same thrills and actions as its predecessors in the Tarzan series, but is especially rich in animal shots. The kids should love the antics of Cheta, Tarzan's tame chimpanzee.

Sol Lesser produced with Kurt Neumann associate producer and director. Story and screenplay were written by Jerry Gruskin and Rowland Leigh from characters created by Edgar Rice Burroughs. The series' trio again, as Tarzan, Jane and Boy, is played by Johnny Weissmuller, Brenda Joyce and Johnny Sheffield. A party of hunters invades Tarzan's territory to trap animals for American and European zoos. To do this they conspire with treacherous Prince Ozira, played by Ted Hecht, to kill the king, played by Charles Trowbridge, and his son, Maurice Tauzin. Then Tarzan tells the hunters, headed by Barton MacLane, John Warburton and the beautiful Patricia Morison, to stay on their side of the river, they ignore him and start trapping. Tarzan and Boy wage war on them and only Miss Morison and another member of the expedition escape by plane.

West of Dodge City

Columbia—Outdoor Action

There are many scenes of gunplay and cattle rustling in this action film which comes up to the standard of this outdoor series. The Durango Kid overcomes numerous obstacles and helps the oppressed and then rides on to a new adventure. Charles Starrett as the Durango Kid and Steve Ramsey is again the hero and Fred Sears, as the head badman, is good as the villain.

The group of scheming racketeers trick land owners into selling their land. When one old cattleman refuses to sell, the crooks frame his son and have the boy imprisoned. The Durango Kid helps the rancher and in a terrific gunfight captures the gang.

This picture is enlivened by the wit of Smiley Burnette. Burnette, as a newspaper editor, befriends the Durango Kid. Mustard and Gravy, singing guitar players, support Smiley Burnette in Western melodies. Colbert Clark produced and Ray Nazarro directed. Bert Horswell wrote the original screenplay.

Rainbow Over the Rockies

Monogram—Cattlemen's Feud

This Western is designed for action fans and youthful audiences. Jimmy Wakely, a favorite singing cowboy, is supported by Lee "Lasses" White.

Wakely, a trail boss, driving cattle to market, comes to a fenced area. The owner of the land and the cattlemen come into conflict and they are both stubborn about their rights. A group of rustlers play one side against the other and a range war nearly breaks out. However, Jimmy Wakely rounds up the rustlers and convinces both parties of their folly.

There are several musical numbers sung by Wakely including "Rainbow Over the Rockies." Oliver Drake produced and directed and Glenn Cook was the associate producer. Oliver Drake wrote the original story and Elmer Clifton the screenplay.

THE TEACHERS' CRISIS (20th-Fox)

March of Time (V 13-8)

With the attention of the nation suddenly focussed on the critical situation in the country's schools, this short has timely significance and dramatic impact. As usual, March of Time presents a well-balanced mixture of statistics and dramatized incidents, driving home forcefully the point it tries to make. The camera visits one-room schools, it shows schools understaffed and teachers underpaid in comparison to other crafts. It demonstrates effectively why almost half of all U. S. teachers have left their jobs in the past seven years and makes no bones about the inadequacy of many of their insufficiently trained substitutes. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, is shown in an appeal for better schools.

FILM and BUSINESS

THE tidings of new alignments and new integrations in the J. Arthur Rank organization in London in this week's news give sharp definition to his function as an agent of empire along with his building of a both horizontal and vertical motion picture organization of global dimensions.

A cooperative pattern for other British industries in lines of manufacture for export is disclosed, and there is more than casual indication of the approval and support of Whitehall—meaning the government in power. The whole of British business is being made aware that "trade follows the films".

That fact of motion picture influence of course became first manifest, long ago, in the part that the motion picture of Hollywood ever has had in setting fashions and creating demand for American products around the world. That service of the motion picture however has enjoyed no special recognition from American business, although there has been a considerable but not very articulate attention from the Department of State in Washington, and from commercial attaches abroad. Broadly it may be said that American business generally has no adequate realization of the contribution of the American picture.

As advertisements reproduced in the news pages of this week will show, Mr. Rank is going right simply and forthrightly at the telling in Britain.

SOME significant figures on the place of the American motion picture in the British economy were cited the other day by Mr. Samuel Eckman, Jr., managing director for MGM in London, in an article in The New York Times. "Eighty-three per cent of the total earnings of American films in Great Britain . . . remains permanently in Britain. The British Treasury alone obtains annually from entertainment tax on American films more than twice the amount that the American industry receives for the films from which this revenue is derived."

Discussing suggestions about "intelligent selection" of films for export, offered previously by Mr. Bosley Crowther of the Times, Mr. Eckman observed that this might be left: "(a) to the respective publics of America and Britain, who must be the final arbiters, and (b) to the respective film trades."

The idea is that the proper authorities are the customers and those who serve them.

SOCIAL ISSUE

NOW Mr. Eric Johnston, in addition to his concerns about international problems of the film market and an array of internal problems of great moment pertaining to the general status of this and all other industry at home, has squarely before him the question of the policy of the screen concerning persons who do, or should, wear eyeglasses.

Mrs. Leila Ricard Ettinger, founder of the Optical Membership Plan, has appealed to Mr. Johnston with a complaint that a whole array of recent pictures "contain unflattering references to feminine eyeglass wearers" and that they tend "to dissuade impressionable teen-agers as well as others from wearing the glasses they need for eye comfort and personal safety".

Mrs. Ettinger urges "sympathetic attention and action". Perhaps Mr. Johnston might do something about those many spokesmen of industry who read their notes through spectacles and put their specs in their pocket when they rise in the presence of the camera and microphone.

But, for art's sake, it is to be remembered that that able sociologist and philosopher, Miss Dorothy Parker, is credited with declaring for the record: "Men do not make passes at girls that wear glasses."

YES AND NO

SPEAKING on the radio the other day, Mr. Maurice Bergman in typical whimsy remarked: "I wonder if it would be a good idea some day to pose this question: Does the public have a bad influence on motion pictures?" Some day, if he does ask, the answer will be that old one: "He who pays the fiddler calls the tune." As Mr. Bergman has observed, pictures have to be about what the customers are interested in. Down in Washington, Mr. William Benton, Assistant Secretary of State, observed of American films, in international relations, that they are plus and minus, but that "the plus side overwhelmingly outweighs the minus side". He is not for doing anything about it.

COSTS AND COLOUR

ASPECIFIC indication of trends and developments in production comes with the announcement of the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation of a price increase on negative and processing. The direct occasion is the most recent rise in labour rates of 11.17 per cent, retroactive to January 1. The obviously reluctant announcement is accompanied by the observation that it is, however, held vital to the interests of the whole industry "to produce a superior product at suitable prices". It has long been the policy of Technicolor to seek reduction of costs in behalf of a widening use of colour on the screen.

Q Up at Port Chester, New York, the Washington Irving Trust Company has opened a drive-in banking service. What with the growth of the drive-in theatre, restaurant curb service, and the Nash car with a bed in the back seat, the housing problem is on the way to solution without houses.

In our Hollywood Scene report one finds Mr. Henry Koster quoted as saying: "Cinderella is dead. The public is no longer interested in seeing the underprivileged maiden marry the millionaire because everybody knows now it doesn't happen." Wonder if Mr. Koster ever heard about Mr. Tommy Manville?

Type Casting?

BING CROSBY proved conclusively that a crooner can masquerade effectively as a priest. See "The Bells of St. Mary's." And now, with a bow to Hollywood's traditional type casting, another crooner has been cast as a priest. This time it's Frank Sinatra who will appear as a priest in the Lasky-MacEwen production of "Miracle of the Bells," which will be released by RKO. But there is this important topper: Frank won't sing. Meanwhile, Crosby, getting far away from the candle, book and bell, has been announced for the lead in "Harvey," the story of a charming drunk who has as his companion an imaginary rabbit exactly six feet one and a half inches high. Can Sinatra top that?

UN Film Council

A FILM PANEL of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization passed a resolution during a meeting Tuesday in Philadelphia urging the creation of a commission to investigate the needs of rehabilitating the motion picture industry in war-devastated countries. The commission would check on the amount of equipment, raw film and technical personnel needed in these countries. The film panel was headed by Thomas Albright, representing the Motion Picture Association. Also urged was the establishment of a United Nations motion picture council which would act as a clearing house on the interchange of motion picture ideas and techniques. More than 1,000 delegates, representing more than 500 groups, including the motion picture industry, press and radio, are attending the first national conference on UNESCO.

Waugh

EVELYN WAUGH, the English novelist, has left Hollywood to return to England saying, according to an MGM release, that his departure was because of the "the unsuccessful effort by MGM to adapt his best-selling 'Brideshead Revisited' to meet the requirements of the Production Code without impairing the novel's dramatic value."

ASCAP Studies

EXHIBITORS may be faced with additional costs if a plan which the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is preparing to study becomes effective. According to John G. Paine, general manager, in New York last week, the present theatre license fees have not been increased since 1933 and the present scale of payment is only 10 cents per seat annually for theatres with less than 800 seats; 15 cents for 800 to 1,500-seat theatres, and 20 cents for houses having more than 1,500 seats. "The basis of payment is unfair," Mr. Paine contended, in that some of the smaller theatres make a greater profit than some of the larger theatres. However, he said, before any new scales are put into effect, exhibitors would be consulted in the hope of achieving an "equitable formula."

Plaque

NEITHER the wall of an office, nor the library of an executive, nor the lobby of a theatre may be proper repositories for an item so big, and important, as the symbol of the Government's gratitude to an industry which aided the country's effort so mightily. That symbol is a large plaque, in bronze, 200 pounds of it. George Schaefer, who headed the industry's War Activities Committee, has been looking for a dignified repository. This week, he received a suggestion, from Robert Selig, Fox Intermountain Circuit executive, that the plaque be given to the University of Denver Library of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, endowed by the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, in whose behalf Mr. Selig wired Mr. Schaefer. Said Mr. Selig: "The plaque would be permanently exhibited in the Mary Reed Library of the University."

Drive-In

W. C. SMITH, of Camden, New Jersey, holder of patents on the "Drive-in" theatre, last week won a damage and royalty decision in Federal Court, Providence, against the Loew's Drive-In Theatres, Inc., operators of a group of such houses. The decision, with damages not yet awarded, will be appealed. It concerned the circuit's theatre in that city.

Mr. Smith's Park-In Theatres, Inc., of Camden, holds the "Hollingshead Patent" of 1933 governing various technical aspects of drive-in theatres. "It is our policy to license as many drive-in theatres as we can, including such as have recently been built and operated in infringement of our patent, provided of course, that they pay for their past infringement," Mr. Smith said Tuesday.

Planes for Films

THE BRITISH Cabinet currently is mulling the problem of whether to buy or hire from the United States a fleet of 30 Constellation airliners. If the Cabinet decides to purchase, it was reported from London Tuesday, motion pictures, food and tobacco imports will have to be reduced because the aviation interests will want dollar payment and Britain's cash reserve is dwindling. Howard Hughes, sometime motion picture producer, has considerable financial interest in the Constellations.

Gum Popping

JUST AS a volcano erupted on the screen, burying two dinosaurs, reports the Associated Press, Alex Harris, manager of Pop's Palace in Bergenfield, N. J., stopped the show, brought up the houselights and came out on stage to speak his mind to an audience of 700 children: "You can pop your bubble gum or you can see the movie, but you can't do both." The kids chose the show. Ushers collected approximately 700 sticky wads of gum, the lights dimmed and the show went on. That gum popping, explained Mr. Harris, sounded like an old-time Fourth of July celebration.

Fund Request

THE grant of funds for a sweeping visual aids program planned by the U. S. Office of Education was urged on the appropriations sub-committee on federal security appropriations by Dr. John Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, last week when the group held hearings on the department's film request. J. Hunt, a coordinator for the office asked for $7,500 for production, purchase and distribution of educational films. In reply, Congressman Frank Keefe, chairman of the committee, said he wanted to make certain that the government was not entering commercial film production. The department had produced one educational film last year, Mr. Hunt said.

Gagwriters' Gag

PETE SMITH'S latest MGM speciality, "I Love My Wife, But . . ." opened National Laugh Week (April 1-8) when a special preview of the short was held at the first annual National Gagwriters Convention held Wednesday in New York. The short, which will be released nationally April 5, deals with wives' faults from their husbands' point of view. Smith has been nominated for the proposed Humor Hall of Fame which is to be set up by the gagwriters.

Dissolution

THE GREAT German chemical combine, I. G. Farbenindustrie, smashed by Allied victory, but still corporately puzzlingly cohesive, now undergoes official dissolution. In Berlin this week, the Allied Control Council appointed the first four of several German trustees who will assume independent control of four of eight I. G. subsidiaries in Wuerttemberg-Baden. Trustees will take over nine plants in Greater Hesse and seven in Bavaria. One of the Wuerttemberg-Baden subsidiaries is the Agfa company, making and selling photographic material and equipment. Its American subsidiary, Agfa Anasco, operated by General Aniline and Film Corporation, was seized during the war and given to American trustees and then owners.

Saturday, on the Queen Elizabeth, E. Allen Williford, vice-president of General Aniline and in charge of its Anasco film and camera division, sailed for Europe on the Queen Elizabeth, accompanied by David B. Dyche, treasurer. The two men will observe business conditions in England and on the Continent and will return in late May, Mr. Williford's New York office announced this week.

Experiment

PATRONS at the RKO Coliseum in New York got a treat last Tuesday when, following the regular double-feature screen program, the house presented a 55-minute stage presentation of "Whistling in the Dark," a mystery comedy done on Broadway in 1932. The stage show was presented on an experimental basis. Its condensed version was staged by Alan Moore. Regular admission prices prevailed for the evening.

"Tradeview"

"I NOT only think you should buy this picture; I'll even show you scenes from it" — with these remarks salesmen selling Eagle-Lion pictures henceforth will take the exhibitor to a projection room and run off five minutes of choice packaged footage. The "Tradeview," as the company's exploiters are calling it, will be used first on "The Adventurers," national release of which was March 14, and on other films.

M. B.

THOSE stories you've read or seen about spies and their tiny cameras really were true. Eastman Kodak Company last week told all. It made such cameras for the Office of Strategic Services. The cameras were shaped and disguised as matchboxes; Eastman delivered 1,000 of them. OSS agents in enemy territory were also supplied with "vestpocket darkrooms," the most notable feature of which was that processing was done in a jigger of solution. One Eastman department at Rochester built the cameras, known as project "M.B." (matchbox), and very few persons knew of them.

METRO LISTS 42 FEATURES 48 SHORTS NEXT SEASON

Mayer Cites Concentration on Best-Sellers, Classics and Stage Properties

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor will undertake 42 features during the forthcoming product year, Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production, announced Monday from the company's studios in Culver City, Cal.

In planning the year's productions, Mr. Mayer said, the studio will concentrate its activities on best selling novels and literary classics with outstanding stage properties and leading composers and song writers combined for the filming of top musicals.

Plans Progressing for Shooting in England

The company's production plans for England are also progressing rapidly, it was said, and an expanded program has been completed with Ben Goetz, in charge of the MGM British studios. Five stages now are ready for operation in England and indications are that "Young Bess" will be the first to go before the cameras, followed by "The Secret Garden," starring Margaret O'Brien.

For the coming season's product the studio has enlisted the services of 28 stars, 67 featured players, 18 producers and 18 directors, and 84 writers.

In addition to the features MGM will also produce 48 short subjects during 1947-48. The short subject list includes 16 one-reel cartoons in color, 10 Pete Smith specialties, six John Nesbitt Passing Parade subjects, 12 FitzPatrick Traveltalks and four two-reel dramas.

The continued emphasis which MGM is placing on important literary works for its future feature releases, Mr. Mayer said, is seen in its recent purchases of stories on the best-seller lists, and in the pictures now in production and preparation.

Three Best-Sellers Cited On Year's Program

Three current best-sellers are included in the coming year's program: "The Hucksters," by Frederick Wakeman, which stars Clark Gable and Deborah Kerr; Sholem Asch's "East River," with Gene Kelly and June Allyson, and J. P. Marquand's "B. F.'s Daughter," which will have Katharine Hepburn in the title role. Sinclair Lewis' "Cass Timberlane" is scheduled to star Spencer Tracy and Lana Turner.

According to plans for the year, announced by Mr. Mayer, both the second and third year winners of the MGM annual novel contest will be filmed in 1947. These are "Before the Sun Goes Down," by Elizabeth Metzger Howard and the third year winner "Return to Night," by the English novelist, Mary Renault.

The first winner of the company's prize novel contest, "Green Dolphin Street," by Elizabeth Goudge, and starring Lana Turner, Van Heflin, Donna Reed and Richard Hart, is now being edited for release this season.

Another of John P. Marquand's novels, "So Little Time," also on the best-selling list, is on the new schedule, and is to be filmed with an all-star cast.

MAJORS FIGHTING TO RETAIN SYSTEM OF ARBITRATION

ATA and CSA Ask Court for Stay on the Bidding Provisions of Decree

The five theatre-owning defendants in the New York anti-trust suit moved last Friday to keep the 31 motion picture arbitration tribunals a going concern. Banding together they forwarded to the Supreme Court their request for a stay of that portion of the New York District Court's decree which dissolves the Consent Decree arbitration system as of April 1. Previously the five companies had appealed the arbitration provisions of the decree.

Close on the majors' heels, the American Theatres Association, the Confederacy of Southern Associations and Southern California Theatre Owners announced they would jointly petition the Supreme Court Wednesday for a stay of the competitive bidding provisions of the December 31 decree.

Cite Hardships Under Bidding Provisions

The arguments, drawn up by Thurman Arnold, ATA counsel, and Robert T. Barton, representing CSA, will center about the hardships that would be incurred by the independents if the bidding provisions went into effect.

The fight of the ATA, SCTOA and the CSA to intervene in the suit is being opposed by the five major distributors. The organizations late in February appealed to the Supreme Court from the New York District Court's denial of their plea to intervene. RKO, MGM, Warner Brothers, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox on March 14, it was reported this week, opposed this appeal in a statement and motion to the Supreme Court, stating that the denial is not appealable in that the three exhibitor organizations do not have an "immediate and legal interest" in the suit and that they are "not adequately represented" within the meaning of the law. The organizations will present a counter brief on April 2.

Stay Requests Limited Only To Dispute Over Clearance

The arbitration stay request, drawn up by RKO, MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers and Paramount, was limited only to that part of the arbitration system which relates to disputes over clearance. Such disputes, however, make up the greatest number of cases tried by the Arbitration Association. From November 20, 1940, the date of the Consent Decree, to last March 15, 361 of the 485 cases tried were clearance cases.

Bidding Criticisms Mount; Myers Charges Abuses

HOW TO DO IT

SOLUTION to the problem of competitive bidding. Phil Cowan, United Artists sales promotion head, demonstrates the method suggested in desperation by Paul Lazarus, Jr. In front of him are the other components of the "Sales Decree and Escape Kits" sent to salesmen: false mustache for escaping customers, steel files for escaping from jail, playing cards, whiskey glass, vouchers, poison, etc.

The bidding experiments being conducted under the final decree in the New York anti-trust suit moved into the argumentative stage this week as the U. S. Supreme Court prepared to hear application for a stay on the competitive bidding order from Universal, United Artists and Columbia.

The argument was led off by a statement from Abram F. Myers, counsel and board chairman of Allied States Association, who charged that distributors are discrediting the bidding system by ignoring the provisions of the decree and that they are using the system to secure still higher film rentals.

His charge was answered by an MGM distribution executive, who claimed that "it is highly doubtful that the bidding system will mean increased returns for the distributors, although, at the same time, the costs of distribution—at least of the five majors—are unlikely to go up."

Disagreeing, Mr. Myers, while admitting the "evidence to date is comparatively meager," sees these four factors arising out of the bidding experiments:

"The system is being used primarily to stir up antagonism among independent exhibitors to secure higher rentals.

"The distributors are ignoring all provisions written into the decree for the protection of the exhibitors.

"Where the competition is between an independent and a large circuit, the independent either will not be afforded the opportunity to bid or will be granted the privilege under the most discouraging conditions.

"Even after an offer has been made to an independent, the pictures are subject to be withdrawn at any time and licensed to the circuit."

Mr. Myers said he had yet to see an offer which stated any minimum price, whether in terms of a flat rental or otherwise, as required by the decree. Neither, he claims, has he seen an offer which follows the decree requirement that the distributor's offer shall include the availability and clearance, if any, which will be granted.

In other words, Mr. Myers doesn't like what he hasn't seen.

On the distributors side of the question, an MGM spokesman believes that "once things have simmered down we shall find that there will not be anywhere near as much cut-throat competitive bidding as everyone has foreseen."

He believes that once bidding has taken full effect—and he is sure the Supreme Court will retain the bidding provisions—there will not be more than 250 situations in the whole country where features will be sold on a competitive basis.

In Cincinnati, there is growing concern over bidding. There, this week, Irving Sochin, general manager of Theatre Owners Corporation, which buys and books for 45 independent houses, spoke up to say: "We consider the system unfair. It gives an advantage to the larger exhibitor, who, for instance, may have a debt-free house in a strategic location and a reasonably low overhead. This places him in position to sacrifice a portion of his normal profits, if necessary, to submit a high bid. On the other hand, the 'little fellow' must constantly be price-minded and he is unable to compete against the high bidder in the more favorable position."

Meanwhile, the bidding experiments continue.

ON THE MARCH ARBITRATION

FOR years a dime was enough to get any kid by the doorman at most theatres.

In many, a nickel did it. In the general upsurge of rising prices, climaxed during the war and maintained at large since, this traditional practice changed like lots of others. In the change may be the answer to why kid patronage has fallen off.

It is not easy to back this up with the overwhelming proof. On as sprawling a scene as exhibition in this vast industry experience is apt to vary with the case at hand. The case of Eddie Grainger and the Shea circuit, given air in On the March last week, is not necessarily the condition confronting all other showmen, although it is safe enough to assume he has considerable company.

It may be remembered he was wondering, and worrying, about the decline in children's patronage in most of the theatres his circuit operates in 23 cities scattered throughout Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New York and New Hampshire.

His inclination was to place the shrinkage at the door of the producer on the ground Hollywood was doing little or nothing to keep sharpened the interest of juveniles with series such as the Shirley Temples, the Jane Withers and the Freddie Bartholomews or whoever their 1947 counterpart may be.

He may have a point there, but it was not the only one.

The point that glared was the acknowledgement of his situation in Cambridge, Ohio. This is the only city of the 23 where prices were not advanced but where Federal tax merely was added. This is the only city where kid patronage had not fallen off. This narrows the surmises and the speculations to the conclusion inescapable that the answer, in this instance at least, resides in the price structure. It looks like a cinch deduction.

But Grainger is getting hep. He is beginning to think hard now that the solitary holdout cannot be explained conveniently as an accident; that he will come closer to the answer if he recognizes price is the determining factor.

Therefore, he is giving much thought to a return to the traditional—10 cents for kids at all times, plus two cents for Uncle S. on the ground the public is completely tax-conscious and no objections will be encountered on this score. He is emphatic in his conviction kids are vital to his future. He recognizes the value of getting more of them to attend his houses on a more regular basis and now is talking in equations of the slight sacrifice to his profit line in order to do this. The fact is his reoriented approach is a nice thing to behold. We wish there were more of it elsewhere.

With other sectors yet to report, this whole problem is being submitted to keen attention over the Warner circuit, too. The reasons for the sluff remain to be finalized, but the conclusion is in no doubt—juvenile attendance in that nationwide operation is off as well. That matter has been aired with some regularity whenever the zone managers meet. They swap experiences with the Children's Library programs set up by the various producers via the Johnston office and report success with them. Cartoon shows have brought encouraging response at the box office.

But there is concern over a drying up of source material and a feeling that the wholesale swing of the distributors toward reissues is cutting down the sustained flow of suitable product for juvenile interest and attention.

At this juncture, there is no conviction about price. It has been considered, of course. Where it was once generally a dime, the average Warner admission for children is now in the neighborhood of 17 cents. This differential is more major than minor with children who are confronted with the requirement of another dime for popcorn or its equivalent. It is certainly more major than minor with the parents who have to cough up a quarter, or better, when it used to average 15 cents.

The present final on this, insofar as the Warner circuit figures it, is indeterminate. But there, too, the interesting point takes shape in the realization something wrong calls for adjustment. A good sign, and progressive.

The impressionables, the malleables of today are the cornerstone of tomorrow. It is essential, as well as an obvious fundamental in clear business judgment, to build on ground which is fertile and susceptible.

Tomorrow is always around the next corner.

FINANCIAL NOTE: Twentieth Century-Fox estimates a 1946 net of $22,600,000, the forecast allowing for taxes and including operations of National Theatres as well as the Roxy, New York. This is on an estimated total gross income [film rentals and theatre receipts included] of $190,300,000. The anticipated profit would be $9,853,533 better than 1945's, when it was $12,746,467, or an increase of 77.30 per cent last year over the year before. This is on a jump in gross revenue of $12,088,111 in '46 over '45 when it ran to $178,211,889. Another way of approaching it: Anticipated net gain of 77.30 per cent develops out of a 6.78 per cent gain in gross. Elimination of the excess profit tax, reducing the company's assessment by a cool $7,000,000, of course is a factor. But so, too, was the corporation's dealings with, and in, theatres.

Things are bad, are they?

ment that it would oppose all stay requests the Department of Justice on Wednesday filed notice with the Supreme Court that it considers the major distributors' stay appeal, which seeks to prevent dissolution of the arbitration system, as "re-writing the judgment"—in other words, reversing the District Court's decision. The Department, according to the document, opposes the requests for a stay of competitive bidding asked by United Artists, Columbia and Universal because competitive bidding is a preliminary and "essential" step towards adequate relief.

Justice Stanley Reed was to hold closed chamber hearings on all the stay petitions Friday.

Reiterating in their request for a stay what they said when they appealed the arbitration provisions of the decree, the five majors stated: "The reason for the lower court not continuing arbitration was its holding that 'because of the unwillingness of some of the parties to consent to its continuance' it lacked the power to do so. These appellants believe that the lower court was in error in this regard and that it had power to continue its decree of November 20, 1940."

"The continuation of this system pending an appeal," they concluded, "can harm no one. It can result in great savings of time and money."

Under the decree, the tribunals can accept new cases until April 1 and continue in operation long enough to settle them.

MPA Anniversary Dinner In New York May 8

The twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Motion Picture Association of America, and its predecessor organization the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York May 8, Eric Johnston, president, has announced. The dinner is sponsored by a committee consisting of Spyros Skouras, Ned E. Depinet, Jack Cohn, Joseph R. Vogel, Claude Lee, John J. O'Connor, Harry Goldberg and Herman Robbins. Francis S. Harmon, MPA vice-president, is chairman of the staff committee on arrangements. J. Arthur Rank will be guest of honor.

Voluntary Censorship Bill Adopted by Indiana House

A bill asking voluntary censorship of films, radio and newspapers was adopted by the Indiana House last Tuesday, as a substitute for a bill that would have set up a censor board in every county. The resolution stated that the legislature "is not desirous of passing restrictive legislation if agencies can be made to see the gravity of the problem and voluntarily cooperate in meeting it." In the Senate last Tuesday, the so-called Anti-ASCAP bill hit a snag when the chamber refused an attempt to recall a conference report.

TRADE FOLLOWS THE FILM: RANK'S NEW WORLD THESIS

Overhaul of Organization Tied to Program Linking Pictures to British Goods

London Bureau

J. Arthur Rank, Britain's leading showman, may well become Britain's leading salesman. An overhaul and concentration of the whole of the Rank Organization's propaganda and advertising departments has resulted in a program underlining the fashion in which trade follows the film.

Already linked with the textile trade and fabric manufacturers, the Rank Organization has gotten further recognition and comfort from Government circles here. Seeing the film as the ideal propaganda medium, manufacturers of all the country's staple exports are being encouraged by Whitehall to link up with Mr. Rank and his overseas selling organization. Significantly, Mr. Rank's newly-announced top advertising man is Sidney Wynne, son-in-law to Ernest Bevin, Britain's Foreign Secretary.

Twofold Aim in Series Of Newspaper Ads

First evidence of the new Rank advertising program is a series of advertisements which last week made their appearance in the country's most important newspapers. Two of the ads are reproduced on this page. The series has a two-fold aim: prestige building for the Rank Group and the underscoring of the close relationship between films and trade. One of the first announcements, for example, points out how Mr. Chang of China comes to want his British bicycle—he saw it in one of Britain's films. The campaign is planned to last at least a year.

The new campaign is certainly the most expensive, not to say expansive, prestige-builder ever promoted by a British film company. Its sponsors have worked in its preparation not only with the Government's Board of Trade, but with bodies like the Council of Industrial Design and the Federation of British Industries.

Official authorities and industrialists alike have hopes that an alliance between films and industry may become a formidable help in Britain's struggle to reestablish her economic and commercial stability. It may well develop into a worldwide beat-up of trade in alliance with the nation's screen output. At least, that's the plan.

Tieups Already Made with Textile Industry

Rank's people already have made many link-ups with the textile trades, taking as their lodestone the admitted excellence of British fabrics. Clothes are designed in Rank productions so that that excellence

WHAT'S HENRY V DOING IN NEW YORK?

He's making history! As recently as five years ago only a handful of people seriously thought that British films could recover and develop, so soon, into a national export of many times its pre-war value. Yet when the Two Cities film Henry V came to Broadway, New Yorkers stood in queues to see this great British picture. By the end of 1946 Henry V had already remitted to Britain more than $400,000.

Shown here are two evidences of the Rank Organization's new advertising campaign to boost British films as salesmen for British goods.

may be recognized. They have now established a Fashion Publicity Bureau through which agency they hope that the work of the London fashion stylists may achieve recognition.

Getting the Rank Organization into the position to assume this new leadership has taken considerable inquest into the methods of merchandising the whole of the products of the Rank Group. The Rank interests have been acquired rapidly and in enormous quantities. Now there has been a general sorting out of interests and a new assignment of duties—making for a more integrated and organized company.

On March 24, Mr. Rank announced that henceforth every bit of his organizations publicity—in every category—will be controlled directly and exclusively from his executive headquarters.

Dennett Will Scan Ads Of All Rank Product

He has John Myers as director of all studio publicity, with a particular eye on the servicing of the Jock Lawrence Organization in America. John Dennett, hitherto Odeon advertising manager, was named advertising director, to oversee the output of every single item of advertising on every single item of Rank product—from features to lenses.

Sidney Wynne, formerly Rank's personal public relations officer, will coordinate the work of both Mr. Dennett's and Mr. Myers' divisions.

The inquest, which resulted in these appointments, the first step toward the tightening of the merchandising of all Rank prod-

TANDEMS FOR TIENTSIN

British goods are 'in the window' when British films are shown to the world. That's how Mr. Chang of China comes to want his British bicycle. When important British films go into production nowadays, manufacturers and the Board of Trade and the Council of Industrial Design all cooperate. In this way (with no loss at all in entertainment value) films can at the same time be worthily representative of many British industries.

ucts, was conducted in conditions of considerable quiet and undertaken at the instance of John Henry Davis, managing director of the Rank Organization and commonly regarded as Mr. Rank's own nominee to the Rank Regency. It also betokens the close integration of the financial structure of the Rank Group—nominally capitalized at £60,000,000, but evaluated on the London Stock Exchange at considerably more than twice that sum.

Allied of Iowa and Nebraska Holds Two Meetings

Allied ITO of Iowa and Nebraska held two regional meetings last week, one at Bloomfield, Iowa, the second at Osceola, Iowa. Both meetings were conducted by Charles Niles, director of the Caravan, and T. J. Evans, executive secretary of the association. At the Osceola meeting a resolution was carried unanimously by which the exhibitors refuse to play any 50 per cent pictures. Both meetings discussed checking problems in particular and other matters concerning exhibitors in general.

First New Rank House Is Built in Canada

The first house of a circuit which J. Arthur Rank's interests are planning to build in Canada has been completed at North Sydney, Nova Scotia. It is the Odeon, seating 570, which opened last week. It is operated in partnership by A. I. Garson and Odeon Theatres of Canada, Ltd.

JOHNSTON STUDIO TRIP "NO LECTURE"

MPA Head Ends Ten-Day Hollywood Tour; Sees Support for Code

[Last week Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, held numerous conferences with producers in Hollywood during a speaking tour of the major studios. His statements were widely reported by the syndicated columnists, by the lay press and by the trade papers. Few of the reports were in agreement, however, and even direct quotes from Mr. Johnston differed widely. Below is a recapitulation by Mr. Johnston, reported by the HERALD's Hollywood bureau chief, of all the subject matter covered in those conferences.]

by William R. Weaver
in Hollywood

Mr. Johnston's speaking tour of the major studios was motivated more by an impulse to get acquainted than to lecture on the moral content of product and widely reported remarks on "drinking and sex" in pictures were but a part of a broad discussion on "general looseness in subject matter," the MPA president explained to the press. In a half hour question and answer interview granted on the eve of talks with 25 member-producers of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, Mr. Johnston discussed the same subjects covered with principal personnel of the members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers.

"I've been in this job nearly a year and a half," Mr. Johnston said, "and industry interests elsewhere have prevented me, until now, from getting around to studios and becoming acquainted first hand. The subjects covered—picture content and foreign market conditions—furnished a suitable springboard for the discussions, which were in nature open forums and not a lecture by me."

General Looseness Discussed

"Drinking and sex," he said in confirming reports that these were discussed, "were merely among the subjects covered in dealing with general looseness in story material coming up recently. This general looseness is not unnatural nor an unexpected development in a postwar atmosphere, when everybody is seeking to escape from wartime restraints. I expect it to continue for about twelve months more, and then subside."

Saying drinking scenes had become disproportionately numerous because "directors thoughtlessly have employed drinking as a convenient means for giving actors something to do with their hands while talking," Mr. Johnston said this emphasis is undesirable because "rural America is dry."

When asked by the Herald what studio personnel had to say about the Production Code, Mr. Johnston said, "Satisfaction with the Code is general. Oh, there were some, of course, who complained that their art is being stifled, but I found a surprising degree of acceptance for the Code."

Later that afternoon, in answer to a question put by SIMPP President, Donald M. Nelson, as to whether the Code in its present form is strong enough to meet present pressures, Mr. Johnston was to give stoutly an affirmative answer.

Illustrates Code's Operation

Asked to detail his talks on the Code to production people, Mr. Johnston said, "I used this illustration. I pointed out that a man driving his automobile in an open prairie can drive just about any way he pleases, but when he elects to drive down Wilshire Boulevard he must obey traffic regulations or expect to get into trouble." He added, "We are operating a mass means of communication, the most effective of all mass means of communication, and we must shoulder our responsibilities. I found most of the people making pictures agree with that principle."

Less specific in sketching that portion of his talks relating to the foreign market, Mr. Johnston said, "Just as we must make pictures acceptable to all sections of our country, and not just to selected communities, so must we make them acceptable throughout other countries to which we send them. I mean, we must avoid making a picture which, although quite acceptable to England, say, would give offense to people of other nations, such as, for instance, Denmark. This is mostly a matter of exercising good taste. We are setting up a board within the Production Code Administration here, and similarly in New York, to give producers advice on this aspect of their pictures, and to give it while the picture is in script form and susceptible to modification. It will be a strictly advisory service, however, with nobody bound to comply with it."

Says There Are No Barriers

Asked by a lay pressman why we permit Russia to exhibit pictures here although banning American pictures there, Mr. Johnston said, "We have no barriers against any foreign nation. And we stand ready to send pictures into Russia whenever they will admit them." When asked, "What would we expect to get back out of Russia" if we did send pictures into the country, Mr. Johnston replied, "Gold. They've got lots of it there that we'd rather have here at Fort Knox."

Queried as to what kinds of pictures the foreign and domestic market requires for the future, Mr. Johnston replied, "Good pictures, of whatever kind." Pressed to name subjects, he said, "We have run the whole scale of subjects, and doubtless will run it over many times more, always trying to do better, whatever the subject."

Plans for the creation of a motion picture institute are in abeyance pending final outcome of the Government case, he said.

The successor to Byron Price, who recently resigned as vice-president of the MPA, was to be named this week on his return to Washington, Mr. Johnston said.

Judge Jackson Named to PCA

Judge Stephen S. Jackson of New York has been named assistant to Joseph I. Breen, head of the Production Code Administration, and will assume his new duties in Hollywood April 1, the Motion Picture Association announced in a release from its headquarters in Washington Wednesday.

The appointment of Judge Jackson, the release said, is part of a plan to increase and strengthen the operations of the Production Code Administration discussed by Mr. Breen and Eric Johnston, president of the MPA, in Hollywood last week. The post is one of two to be created and an appointment to the second will be made soon.

The addition of new personnel to the Code Administration is necessitated, the release said, because of increased pressure on its facilities and not only because of the increased number of domestic and foreign productions which must be examined but also by the recent organization of the International Information Center. Functioning under the Production Code Administration this new unit will advise producers on the acceptability of particular pictures or sequences for the foreign market. It will be an entirely advisory service.

Addison Durland, Latin American advisor with the Code Administration since 1941, will be a member of the new international board, as will Harold L. Smith, until recently MPA European representative.

Name LeSieur Lazarus Aide

Howard LeSieur, advertising manager of United Artists, has been promoted to the newly created post of assistant advertising and publicity director, it was announced Wednesday in New York by Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., the company's advertising and publicity director.

Francis Winikus, who has been copy chief, will move up to Mr. LeSieur's position as advertising manager. The move was prompted by the company's expanding business and the addition of several important producers into the United Artists fold, Mr. Lazarus said. Both appointments are effective immediately.

LUCE COMMISSION PROFESSORS' REPORT ON PRESS AND SCREEN

by TERRY RAMSAYE

THE INDUSTRY of the motion picture for the second time has come into mildly alarming distinction of attention by Mr. Henry R. Luce's Commission on Freedom of the Press in a "general report" released Thursday, subsequent to a press conference function at Sherry's classic caravanserai in Park Avenue in Manhattan the afternoon before.

On the plus side the report says for the screen: "We recommend that the constitutional guarantees of the freedom of the press be recognized as including the radio and motion pictures." That is about all the commission has to give, directly. The atmosphere is as cool as a lecture hall during Easter vacation. It records some down-the-nose considerations of some aspects of the films in politely detached language unlikely to arrest the attention of the motion picture audience.

The report is as dignified as the impressive list of the personnel of the Commission, all appointed by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, Chancellor of the University of Chicago, and Commission chairman. The membership includes:

ZECARIAH CHAFEE, JR., Professor of Law, Harvard University.

JOHN M. CLARK, Professor of Economics, Columbia University.

JOHN DICKENSON, Professor of Law, University of Pennsylvania, and General Counsel, Penn. R.R.

WILLIAM E. HOCKING, Professor of Philosophy, Emeritus, Harvard University.

HAROLD D. LASSWELL, Professor of Law, Yale University.

ARCHIBALD MACLEISH, Formerly Assistant Secretary of State.

CHARLES E. MERRIAM, Professor of Political Science, Emeritus, The University of Chicago.

REINHOLD NIEBUHR, Professor of Ethics and Philosophy of Religion, Union Theological Seminary.

ROBERT REDFIELD, Professor of Anthropology, The University of Chicago.

BEARDSLEY RUMI, Chairman, Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

ARTHUR M. SCHLESINGER, Professor of History, Harvard University.

GEORGE N. SHUSTER, President, Hunter College.

That scores five universities, one theological seminary, one college, one bank, one department store, one railroad—no journalist, no radio or motion picture authority. It is interesting to note as a detail of publicity practice that Dr. Hutchins' list credits Mr. Dickinson primarily to the University of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Ruml to the Federal Reserve Bank, while the Commission's New York office invitations to the Sherry audience gave Mr. Dickinson to the Pennsylvania Railroad and Mr. Ruml to R. H. Macy & Co. That is a slight matter, but these are days of deep significances.

Dr. Hutchins' foreword recorded: "The Commission did not conduct elaborate 'research.'" That is quite as apparent in the report as it was in that volume entitled "Freedom of the Movies" by Ruth A. Inglis, published by the Commission about a month ago. (MOTION PICTURE HERALD editorial page February 22.)

The event of this week and the imposing staging thereof is only to be understood in the long perspective of originals and related considerations. The release of the report and the press audience function have been in the hands of the editors of Fortune, Mr. Luce's ornate and typographically impressive journal of business and industry. The manifestation is part of a program which pertains either to the career of Mr. Luce or the publications under his administration, or both, as they may variously coincide. It is of a piece with his astutely planned Cleveland Council on World Affairs, sponsored by Time, Inc., and held at the Public Auditorium in Cleveland, out in Ohio where the big midwest begins, January 9, 10 and 11. You will be remembering that the Council's attendance included figures of international distinction from Wellington Koo to Senator Arthur Vandenberg.

The total activity is to be regarded with a studious interest by the motion picture industry, somewhat incidentally because of what may be said about it, but more importantly as a demonstration in devices for creating foci of attention, including rubbing the bowl with the kudos of names of distinction in statecraft and academic connections. It is just now to be remembered that for popular publicity purposes the genus professor is valuable, recently vastly improved in public consciousness by the bang-up professorial successes in uranium enterprises.

In general the Commission considers that the press is considerably important and ought to be better, mostly in a sense of social responsibility and performance. It seems to feel that way about pictures, too. "Private enterprise in the field of communications has great achievements to its credit."

But, also, however, the report reads on to quote William Allen White: "Too often the publisher . . . is a rich man seeking power. . . . He has the country club complex. . . . And they all get the unconscious arrogance of conscious wealth." A quotation comes, too, from Mr. Virginius Dabney of Richmond: "Today newspapers are Big Business and they are run in that tradition. . . ."

At this point, speaking of big business, it is to be noted from Dr. Hutchins' foreword that Mr. Luce "suggested an inquiry" in December, 1942, and that "The Inquiry was financed by grants of $200,000 from Time, Inc., and $15,000 from Encyclopedia Britannica. The money was disbursed through the University of Chicago." The ratio of 200 to 15 somehow reminds of that story about the rabbit sausage made on a fifty-fifty basis, one horse to one rabbit.

While Mr. White and Mr. Dabney are quoted, there is a general aroma in the general report which suggests that the author or authors, while not, as they say, conducting "elaborate 'research'" possibly have been reading not only Miss Inglis, the sociologist, but also Mr. Morris L. Ernst, possibly Mr. Robert Sherwood and maybe Mr. Archibald MacLeish.

There is a special subdivision entitled "Motion picture concentration," naming the eight majors and with a careful footnote on "satellite" companies. You know where that term came from.

But, and however, again, also on the other hand, as it were, one reads much farther along: "We accept the fact that some concentration must exist in the communications industry if the country is to have the service it needs. . . . People . . . need a quality and quantity of information and discussion which can often be supplied only by large units."

Some of the Commission's observations anent the motion picture follow:

"The motion picture industry offers the most elaborate example of accommodation to the pressure of the audience. . . . But pressure groups, because they have or are thought to have influence on attendance, have shaped the motion picture to their desires. Hollywood's efforts to develop the documentary film may be thwarted by its habit of yielding to this kind of intimidation. . . ."

"It would be a mistake to assume that pressure is always bad just because it is pressure. . . ."

"The most elaborate scheme of self-regulation among the agencies of mass communication is found in the motion picture industry. The Motion Picture Association of America has a code which is obeyed and enforced.

"The Association was formed and the code adopted to meet the threat of censorship. The points covered by the code and by the administration of it show that the aim is to control the content of films so that they will pass the state boards of censorship and foreign censors and will not antagonize pressure groups. . . ."

"This self-regulating agency has limited purposes. It calculates the minimal prohibitions necessary to permit films to circulate without censorship and without boycott. The results indicate that the calculation is fairly exact. . . ."

"By 1934 the Association, under the pressure of active criticism, became a regulatory body which could regulate. It put a stop to the salacious and crudely sensational pictures which had been the target of consumers' boycotts and gave the industry for the first time some public standing. . . ."

Fortune, dated March 27th, carries the report, and an editorial on it, which says:

"Final answers to the problems of freedom, responsibility, and effectiveness will come perhaps when every philosopher is a journalist and every journalist a philosopher."

See MPA Affiliating With Foundation

The 28th annual dinner-dance of the Motion Picture Associates will be held May 16 at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, it has been announced by Fred J. Schwartz, president. This year, MPA visualizes joining the Motion Picture Foundation and therefore is dedicating the dinner as a tribute.

The customary requests for donations have been eliminated by directors of MPA and this year organizations and individuals will be asked to subscribe for tickets only. As in past years, a feature of the dinner will be the presentation of an award for distinguished service within the industry.

Explaining the elimination of donations, Mr. Schwartz said: "Motion Picture Associates looks forward to the possibility of a new alliance with the Motion Picture Foundation which will become the parent charitable association of the industry. It will be proposed to the national trustees of the Foundation that Motion Picture Associates can serve as the administrative agency in this area, and we will find ourselves in the position of having sufficient funds to operate for a while longer."

The consolidated net was for the 52 weeks ended December 28, 1946, and was estimated after all charges of 20th-Fox Film Corporation and its voting-controlled subsidiaries, including National Theatres Corporation and Roxy Theatre, Inc.

The 1946 net is equivalent, after deducting dividends on the prior preferred and convertible preferred stock paid during the year, to approximately $7.90 a share on the 2,756,462 shares of common stock outstanding at December 28.

Common stock outstanding at December 29, 1945, was 2,119,709 shares and the 1945 earnings after deducting preferred dividends, were equal to $5.29 a share.

Gross income from sales and rentals of film and theatre receipts for 1946 was an estimated $190,300,000; for 1945, $178,211,889.

NYE WINS CIRCUIT CONTEST FOR MOST QUIGLEY AWARDS

Louis Nye, manager of the Hoosier theatre in Whiting, Ind., has won the contest conducted by the Manta & Rose circuit to determine which member of the circuit could win the most Quigley Showmanship Awards for the final quarter of 1946. Mr. Nye had eight mentions and one scroll of honor.

Mr. Nye was followed by John Misavice, Ritz theatre, Berwyn, with eight mentions and one citation. Seventeen other M. & R. district and theatre managers participated. The circuit operates 29 theatres in Indiana and Illinois.

Commenting on the winners, the circuit management said: "We have held this competition for Quigley Awards because they are the public recognition for good work accomplished. A good workman takes pride in his work and we, as the employers, derive a great deal of pleasure and pride in such recognition. Not only does this signify good work done but, in order to get it, a manager must go to extra work to prepare the campaign book to send it to Quigley. The list of winners really speaks

British Films Now Accepted: Wolff

American audiences will increasingly accept British-made pictures even though they have no American names, Robert Wolff, managing director for RKO in the United Kingdom, said in New York this week. He said this was due to the American public's ability to "smell out" a good personality as well as to the fact that British producers were turning out films with good U. S. market potentialities.

RKO's British production plans so far embraced only two films, Mr. Wolff said. One, an adaptation of John Hilton's "So Well Remembered," with an Anglo-American cast, is finished. The other remains to be made. It will be either "The White Tower" or an alternate. It will fulfill RKO's commitment to make two with J. Arthur Rank. Later RKO's British producing subsidiary may continue to make films in Britain, Mr. Wolff said. In France, RKO, in conjunction with Pathe Cinema, has just finished work on the Maurice Chevalier film, "The Man About Town." The film will receive special handling in the U. S. to make it acceptable to American audiences.

RKO is about ready to enter the 16mm field in Great Britain and considers it capable of wide expansion, Mr. Wolff stated. So far there are about 800 16mm installations in the country, he said, many of them serviced by mobile units. RKO has already decided on its first three programs.

Dewey Signs Bill To Permit Cities To Tax Tickets

New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey Monday signed a bill empowering counties and large cities in the state to collect taxes on admissions, automobiles, restaurant meals and liquor. The law becomes effective July 1.

Under the new taxing powers counties and cities may impose a five per cent tax on admissions to theatres and other places of amusement; a three per cent sales tax on restaurant meals over $1; a tax equivalent to 25 per cent of the state's fee for retail liquor licenses, and a $5 tax on automobiles and a $10 tax on commercial vehicles.

Buffalo and Yonkers are said to be in favor of invoking the new tax powers as soon as possible, while Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York City has given no indication whether or not the city will use the power. However, the assumption is that the city will do so since Mayor O'Dwyer previously requested Democratic members of the state legislature to vote for the bill.

In Columbus, Ohio, a city admission tax of from seven to 10 per cent is expected to be proposed if the state's three per cent tax is repealed. Two bills to repeal the state tax have been introduced in the Senate.

As a result of proceedings instituted by Warner Theatres in behalf of the circuit's State and Strand theatres in Hanover, Pa., Judge Walter I. Anderson has ordered the city to show cause why a recently enacted ordinance imposing an amusement tax on theatres should not be declared illegal and void. The order is returnable April 14.

A similar action is pending in Pottstown, Pa., where Warner also has instituted suit to test the legality of a new ordinance imposing a theatre tax.

At Red Lion, Pa., the Borough Council has proposed a similar ordinance, but postponed its enactment pending court decisions in the Hanover and Pottsdam cases.

Meanwhile a Bureau of Internal Revenue spokesman in Washington said that a 20 per cent amusement tax will be levied on night clubs, restaurants and other establishments which offer television entertainment. The Television Broadcasters Association has asked an interpretation of the ruling, while the Radio Manufacturers Association has attacked the measure as being discriminatory in that radios, juke boxes and wired musical services are exempt from the proposed tax.

Massachusetts Billboards Banned in Resident Areas

Massachusetts has barred the erection of advertising billboards in open country and residential areas, restricting all electric lighted or non-lighted 24-sheets and boards to business sections of cities and towns.

NEW YORK CENSOR COST WILL RISE BY 25%

The New York State budget for the fiscal year beginning April 1 appropriates $60,670 for personal service in the motion picture division of the Educational Department and $14,911 for maintenance and operation. With the general salary adjustments approved by the legislature, the final figure for employee costs probably will be 25 per cent higher than last year. This would raise the amount for personal services to $75,000 and the over-all sum to $90,000.

The State collects approximately $300,000 annually from the tax on the original and prints of pictures submitted for review and license.

Monogram Plans 48 Films, Broidy Tells Directors

Chicago Bureau

Monogram will make the same number of features—32—for 1947-48 as for the 1946-47 season, and in addition will make a total of 16 Westerns, compared to this year's 14 scheduled, it was announced by Samuel Broidy, president, following a one-day board of directors meeting held at the Blackstone Hotel, March 22.

Mr. Broidy also announced that Monogram will release a minimum of six Allied Artists pictures in 1948. This is two more than this year's schedule from Allied Artists. The four Allied Artists pictures released this year are: "It Happened on Fifth Avenue," "Black Gold," "The Gangster," and "Tschaikowsky."

Mr. Broidy announced the total advertising budget for 1948 will be increased to nearly $3,000,000. This figure includes advertising for the Allied Artists product.

Commenting on his company's Western schedule, he said: "The popularity of good Western films is increasing steadily. The need for good solid Westerns on theatre programs is confirmed by the top-budget Western pictures now being released by the major companies. It all proves that we have been on the right track right along."

Mr. Broidy said Monogram is increasing the budget 50 per cent on the Johnny Mack Brown and Jimmy Wakely series for 1948, while $100,000 has been budgeted for 1948 for a planned advertising campaign.

Present at the Blackstone, in addition to Mr. Broidy, were: George D. Burrows, Sam Wolf, Ed Mowrey and Norton Ritchey, together with Irving Mandel, Chicago; Arthur Bromberg, Atlanta; Herman Rifkin, Boston; Charles Trampe, Milwaukee; Bill Hurlbut, Detroit; Howard Stubbins, Los Angeles, and Lon Fidler, Denver.

MPA Reports on Ad Code Relief Fund, Casting

Four more sections of the Motion Picture Association's annual report to Eric Johnston, president, were released this week as the association continued its unprecedented practice of publishing the yearly survey of its activities piecemeal. The latest departments covered were the Central Casting Corporation, the Motion Picture Relief Fund and the Hollywood office of the Advertising Code Administration as well as the Permanent Charities Committee.

In years past the MPA released its annual report in form of a booklet. This year, in addition to the departments mentioned, the association already has made public the reports from the Title Registration Bureau, the International Department, the Production Code Administration, the Research Department, the Hollywood Coordinating Committee and the Conservation Department.

Highlights from the latest reports were these:

The Hollywood office of the Advertising Code Administration said the producing companies last year made available 88,230 "still" pictures, approximately 13,000 more than during 1945. About 200 stills are made for each film, according to Simon Levy, head of the Code's coast office. Only 549 "stills" were rejected in 1946 because they were found to be in "bad taste."

The Motion Picture Relief Fund said it had extended aid to 7,576 persons in all branches of the industry during 1946. Relief included everything from hospital care to shelter, food, clothing and the financing of vocational training. The fund is financed by subscribed payroll deductions of one-half to one per cent. During 1946 these contributions totaled $543,952. Other contributions brought it to $642,768. Relief expenditures totaled $569,464. Final survey showed a deficit of $16,689.

The Central Casting Corporation reported that extras grossed $4,614,154 during 1946 with the average daily wage up 33 per cent to $17.34. Some 4,400 persons are registered with the agency, but less than 10 per cent made enough money to exist without income from other sources. Daily 40 new applicants seek to register with Central Casting.

The Permanent Charities Committee reported it had raised $1,546,375 during the year with campaign, collection and administration costs amounting to only two per cent. Contributions were spread over 50 weeks under a payroll deduction plan of which 11,474 donors took advantage. Some $980,215 went to the Community Chest and $516,159 were given to the Red Cross.

Showmanship Is Vital: Skouras

The success of exhibition under conditions created by an increasing selectivity in ticket buying and by the impending application of the anti-trust decree will depend more than ever upon efficient theatre operation and aggressive showmanship, Charles Skouras, president of National Theatres and Fox West Coast Theatres, told 250 FWC managers and circuit executives March 19 at Hollywood.

It was the first of a series of meetings launching the 14-week annual Skouras Showmanship Drive which starts at Easter.

Mr. Skouras told the meeting his employees had received equal to 25 per cent of the organization's final net profits during the past five years. He added: "You theatre managers are the backbone of National Theatres and Fox West Coast and in your hands lies the future of the company. National Theatres, with its many millions of dollars, is still utterly dependent on its managers for its future. You are the greatest resource of this company."

Mr. Skouras is to conduct similar meetings in Milwaukee, March 31; Denver, April 1, and Seattle, April 3.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

6 Pictures Are Started; MGM Resumes Shooting On "The Pirates"

Hollywood Bureau

Production slumped slightly last week as seven pictures reached cutting stages, and six went before the cameras. Shooting was resumed on MGM's "The Pirates," which had been halted several weeks for dance rehearsals. Production was temporarily suspended on Samuel Goldwyn's "Bishop's Wife," due to a disagreement between the producer and director William Seiter. The picture, a screen version of the Robert Nathan novel, stars Teresa Wright, Cary Grant and David Niven.

Warners trained cameras on two: "Treasure of the Sierra Madre" and "Whiplash." The first is produced by Henry Blanke and directed by John Huston, with Humphrey Bogart, Walter Huston, Tim Holt and Bartone MacLane in leading roles.

"Whiplash," a prize-fight story, stars Alexis Smith and Dane Clark. William Jacobs is producing; Lou Seiler directing.

Republic Stars Work on "Outcast", with Carroll

Republic launched "The Outcast," starring John Carroll and Vera Ralston, with Broderick Crawford, Robert Paige, Henry Travers, Blanche Yurka, Constance Dowling and Hattie McDaniels. John Auer is the associate producer-director.

RKO Radio's new venture is "Fighting Father Dunne," which Phil L. Ryan is producing under the executive supervision of Jack J. Gross. Ted Tetzlaff directs a cast composed of Pat O'Brien, Myrna Dell, Darryl Hickman, Arthur Shields, Una O'Connor and Charles Kemper.

Jack Wrather started work on his second production for Monogram release, "High Tide." Lee Tracy and Don Castle are starred, with Anabel Shaw, Regis Toomey, Francis Ford and Douglas Walton in top supporting roles. John Reinhardt is directing.

Another new Monogram picture is "Kilroy Was Here," which Phil Karlson is directing for producers Dick Irving Hyland and Sid Luft. Jackie Cooper, Jackie Coogan and Wanda McKay head the cast.

fen, has been purchased by Republic to serve as the basis for one of the company's top-budget productions. It is a costume melodrama laid in 18th-century France, and carries on the story of Dumas' famed "Three Musketeers." . . . Pal Puppets Will Share Stardom

WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

It will be about a year before the box office intake subsides to a level requiring producers of $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 pictures to try making something just as good for $1,000,000, George Pal calculates, and when that time comes he will have something not merely just as good but also quite different for an exhibitor to buy for his customers at a figure he and they will be prepared to meet. That is to say, he will have a $1,000,000 picture possessed not only of marquee personalities for billing but also of that rare type of novelty appeal always exerted by the first offering in any category. It will be a Technicolor production in which top level players and the Hal Puppetoon figures will enact a story, probably musical, which can be told that way better than any other.

Costs Important Factor

The producer of some 50 Puppetoon shorts for Paramount is forsaking them because production costs have risen and exhibitors have shown no disposition to pay any more for shorts than in past years when costs were uninflated.

The combining of live action with Puppetoon performance is more congenial blending of art forms than the combining of live action with cartoon drawings, according to Mr. Pal, who speaks from experience acquired with precisely such combining in a series of industrial shorts produced for the Shell Oil Company. Whereas the cartoon drawing is one-dimensional, and of necessity must be superimposed upon the image of the three-dimensional human figures, the Puppetoon figure is as three-dimensional as the human figure, wherefore the two may be used together and without resort to overlapping.

"The difference is," he explains, "that when a cartoon is superimposed on a live action scene the effect is patently an illusion, but when a Puppetoon figure is introduced among human figures it is simply there—in plain view and as what it is—with no call upon the audience to exercise imagination."

Plans "Babes in Toyland"

That gets a little clearer, perhaps, when he mentions one of three subjects he has under consideration for his first feature production. It is Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland." You needn't be a producer or an artist or a technician to get the hang of the Pal idea if you remember "Babes."

By present plan, Mr. Pal will get his first feature length production under way in August. It will take about eight months to produce. He has no intention of relying upon novelty alone to make it a commercial success, but will engage stars of first magnitude for the major roles. The element of novelty in the fact that it will be the first of its kind will be a potent box office factor in the success of the attraction, he figures.

Mr. Pal's calculations concerning the decline of box office intake and its impact upon production budgets are, of course, his own, and if anything a shade more optimistic than most opinions expressed around here by producers who, unlike him, have no concrete plans for meeting the drop when it comes. Which is not quite to say that he is taking a "bearish" attitude toward the market and proceeding from there, because he reasons his project would prosper even more handsomely in a period of automatic grosses. Nevertheless, he's refraining for the present from finalizing a release deal for his features, preferring to watch for a while the fundamental developments taking place in distribution and exhibition before committing himself to an outlet.

Films Foreign Backgrounds

Hollywood Bureau

French producer-director Francois Villiers has formed a company, Panorama Productions, to specialize in filming backgrounds in foreign countries for use in Hollywood productions. The company will have its headquarters here, and will work in association with producers of short subjects in Europe. In time, the firm will establish bases in European and Far Eastern countries.

At a luncheon to the Hollywood press, M. Villiers said: "Each year, more and more American pictures are being made which employ a foreign background. With travel conditions as they are at present, it is extremely expensive and difficult for Hollywood producers to send crews overseas.

"Our plan is to effect a saving in time, money and risk, and to heighten the value of such Hollywood productions. We believe that shooting the actual location gives the film an added sense of reality. This authenticity of detail will be welcomed by foreign as well as American audiences."

The new company, M. Villiers said, will assume full responsibility for all expenses incurred in shooting background scenes, as well as customs duties and shipping costs. It will also obtain all necessary permits from the governments involved. Current contracts guarantee delivery of the negative within five to eight weeks from receipt of the order.

The French Ministry, M. Villiers said, is in favor of the plan, which would give employment to French technicians, and bring American dollars into France.

The first American company to use the service was California Pictures, headed by Howard Hughes. Backgrounds for "Vendetta," which Stuart Heisler produced and directed, were filmed in Corsica by Panorama Productions.

Urges Industry Support of West Coast Stock Unit

The development of a west coast summer stock circuit, comparable to those of the east, has been urged by John Stahl, who is now preparing to direct "The Foxes of Harrow," as a William Bacher production for Twentieth Century-Fox. Mr. Stahl's contention is that the industry could afford to subsidize such a circuit in Southern California, in that such a venture would prove a good investment.

PLAN THEATRE UNIT IN LATIN AMERICA

by REUBEN D. SANCHEZ
in San Juan

Affiliation with an American exhibitors' association will be considered at the annual convention of motion picture exhibitors of Puerto Rico, May 30, at San Juan. Also to be considered is the formation of a Latin American federation of exhibitors.

Carlos Zeno, manager of Twentieth Century-Fox's local branch, has resigned after more than 19 years. He will be replaced by Andrew P. Jaeger. Frank McHughes, manager for Warners here, also has resigned. Harold Cudoff, assistant manager for Universal-International, has arrived in San Juan. Jack Cohn, manager for MGM here, has been transferred.

Paramount's Puerto Rico branch has signed a contract with C. G. Copello of Ciudad Trujillo for exhibition in that country. The company has also signed a new contract in Haiti for exhibition of French-dubbed product.

A number of new theatres have opened in Puerto Rico recently: the Luquillo, near the Luquillo National Forest; the San Carlos and Hatillo, both in Hatillo; the Arcibo, in Arcibo; the Puerto Rico, at Fajardo; the Hormigueros, in Quinoes. Bobian's Theatres is now building the Metropolitan, which will be this country's largest house, seating 1,500; the Coloso, Victoria and Boliva, and will reconstruct the Venus in San Juan.

GERMANY

by HUBERTUS ZU LOEWENSTEIN
in Berlin

While drastic cuts in coal and electricity have practically paralyzed the industry here, preparations are well advanced to resume full production in the spring. A new producing company has been formed in the British zone of occupation which will start its program with the production of short documentaries. In Hamburg, Helmut Kaetner is completing his first post-war picture, "In Those Days."

All German pictures produced between 1933 and 1945, and all Austrian pictures produced after 1938 have been banned by the Austrian Government.

PALESTINE

During the first two months of 1947, first run houses in Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa and Tel-Aviv played 106 pictures, 77 of them American features. Major U. S. companies contributed 72 films, and independents five. Other nationalities divided up as follows: Arabic-Egyptian, 10; British, eight; French, five; Russian, three (one of them in Arabic); Italian, two, and Hebrew, one.

SWEDISH MOVE RAISES FEARS FOR U. S. FILMS

The Swedish Government's recent ordinance restricting imports in the interest of national economy has raised fears in industry circles here that U. S. features no longer would be granted import licenses. Monday, however, it was reported from Washington that Sweden had denied it had imposed a complete embargo upon American product. However, the State Department, while discounting the possibility of an embargo, believes that Sweden will establish stiff quota regulations.

The general rise in the cost of living has also affected admission prices. This is especially true in Beyrouth, where highest admissions before the war were 65 Lebanese piastres (20 cents). Today tickets sell as high as 200 piastres (65 cents). In line with a general feeling that these admissions are too high, a committee has been formed in Beyrouth to seek a reduction of at least 35 per cent. It is understood that the request is being seriously considered by the Minister of Economy.

Sam Stiller, manager for RKO Radio in Palestine, has closed a deal with J. Davidson, owner of the Gan Rena and Beth Haam theatres in Tel-Aviv, and co-owner of the Edison in Jerusalem, for 1946-47 product. In addition, RKO releases will play Mr. Davidson's new theatre in Haifa, which is to open about the end of March.

Egyptian companies producing Arab-language pictures are installing agencies or contracting distributors to release their product in Palestine, Syria and Lebanon as a result of a decrease in sales. Percentage given distributors is from 10 to 15.

ARGENTINA

by NATALIO BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

Local production has made a good start this year. First, "Romance Musical," a San Miguel production with Libertad Lamarque, was released at the Normandie and stayed for two weeks. Later "Corazon" went into its second week at the Opera. "Albeniz" is breaking box office records at the Ambassador and will apparently stay there for many weeks.

A new company, Filcomar, has been formed here which will produce in Argentina and abroad. Representatives of the company are due to buy much of their equipment in the U. S. Cesar N. Combi is in charge of production.

The Premiere theatre here has returned to the showing of motion pictures, opening with "The Spectre of the Rose," sponsored by the Asociacion de Cronistas Cinematograficos.

ITALY

by ARGEO SANTUCCI
in Rome

American companies have an estimated 1,500,000,000 lira ($6,600,000) in blocked bank accounts here. Each of the American companies is grossing between 30,000,000 and 50,000,000 lira a month here.

According to Wladimir Lissim, RKO general manager for Europe, this blocked money can be used to buy stocks of Italian manufacturing companies, purchase ground, or build theatres.

Italy produced 778 pictures from 1930 through 1946. About 130 producing companies are represented in this total, with the Scalera and Cines companies accounting for 119 of the pictures.

The Titanus Company, owner of large studios in Rome, has built a modern studio for dubbing.

BELGIUM

by LOUIS QUIEVREUX
in Brussels

Plans for a huge "Belgian Hollywood" are in process here. Robert Demets, administrator of Studios Cinematographiques Reunis, has announced the purchase by his concern of 300 acres of land at Howardries, including three castles and a lake, and he proposes to build a complete city devoted to the cinema, complete with seven stages and the latest in equipment. Mr. Demets believes that in 1948 between 30 and 40 features will be produced at Howardries.

German Color Film Experts May Be Brought to U. S.

The U. S. Department of Commerce may bring a large number of German scientists who are experts in color film and television to the United States, it was reported from Washington last week. The Department has been planning an expansion of its research into the German AGFA color process for some months. Nathan D. Golden, of the Department, and industry representatives procured the process in Germany shortly after the end of the war. It is reported that the Department plans to bring to the U. S. some 2,500 scientists, who will be released to private industry after having worked with and for the War Department.

National Board To Reorganize, Seeking Funds

The National Board of Review is reorganizing in order to bring in "the public" and the public's money. Its directors will approve shortly a new form of government by member groups throughout the country. Last week, at the annual board meetings in New York, representatives of those groups voted for a "general assembly" which they will elect, and which will appoint directors.

Quincy Howe

Income from reviewing pictures has declined because major companies, which pay the board $6.25 per reel, are producing so few pictures, Quincy Howe, president, pointed out Monday. It costs some $25,000 to operate the board yearly, and the money has come from those reel charges and from memberships and subscriptions to the monthly magazine.

The reorganization, Mr. Howe feels, will include a refurbishing of the magazine, increasing its appeal so that it may perhaps become the major source of income. "We still have the active support of the major companies," he added; "they see in us an anti-censorship group which battles local enemies. However, I think financial support by the industry is a holdover of a past period."

The National Board has passed through two phases and is upon a third, Mr. Howe said. At first it was a censorship group, the industry's only such; then it was an approval group; it will now become an "endorsement group," and its seal will become highly valued, he predicted.

Groups Join Board

The Board's reorganization now will include The American Association for Adult Education, the American Jewish Committee, the American Library Association, the American Association of University Women, the American Bar Association, the American Federation of Arts, the Association of American Colleges, the Association of Better Business Bureaus, the Boy Scouts of America, the Boys' Clubs of America, the Camp Fire Girls, the Coöperative League of the United States of America, the East and West Association, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the National Council of Women of the United States, the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, the Protestant Film Commission, the Society for Americans, the Young Men's and Young

Mr. Gillham comes to SRO from the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency, and previously was advertising and publicity director for Paramount. He will work with Paul MacNamara, advertising and publicity supervisor.

Women's Hebrew Associations, and the Young Women's Christian Association.

"We feel that by transforming this Board into an anti-censorship rather than a pro-censorship organization, we will continue to be supported by a film industry increasingly anxious about local attacks and glad to have the friendship of a board comprising numerous groups outside the industry," Mr. Howe said.

Among speakers at the annual conference at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, last week were Mildred L. Batchelder, American Library Association information department supervisor; Marjorie Dawson, Motion Picture Association community service department director; Jean Benoit-Levy, UNESCO films chief; Louis de Rochemont, producer; Orton Hicks, MGM 16mm department; Mr. Howe, and Richard Griffith, executive director.

Loew's Red Cross Gifts Total $24,145 in Drive

Loew's Theatres has contributed $24,145 to the annual American Red Cross roll call, the company announced this week. Of this amount $9,700 has been allocated among the Red Cross chapters in New York City. The remainder has been divided among the Red Cross chapters in the various cities where Loew theatres are located.

"Devil's Hand" Retitled

"The Devil's Hand," a new French-language film with English titles, has been retitled "Carnival of Sinners" and will be released in April by Distinguished Films.

Superfilm To Open "Carmen" In 32 Key City Situations

Superfilm Distributing Corporation will open "Carmen" in 32 key city situations between now and the end of June, Bernard Jacon, manager of sales and distribution, said in New York Tuesday. The picture has already opened in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Miami, Washington and New York and during the latter engagement played four months at the Ambassador theatre.

Two Chicago Drive-Ins To Open in April

Chicago's two outdoor theatres will both open next month. The six-year-old Drive-In, owned by Nate Barger and Associates, will open April 20. The new Outdoor theatre, which was first opened the latter part of the summer of 1946, will open April 10. It is owned by Irving Gandall and Frank Fink. A third is planned by Phil Smith of Boston.

Authors Ruling Reversed

The Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court last Friday reversed a Supreme Court order giving opposition forces in the Authors Guild the right to inspect membership lists. These forces have sought to unseat executive officers in the interest of economic reforms. The court directed that "remedy within the association should be exhausted before remedy in the courts is sought."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ALIAS MR. TWILIGHT: Michael Duane, Trudy Marshall—Used as a Sunday attraction and it pleased 100 per cent. Played March 9.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

BLONDIE'S HOLIDAY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—The worst and the most unusual weather of the season hurt this Sunday attraction. "Blondie" features are great favorites with my customers. Played March 2.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

BLONDIE'S LUCKY DAY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—How exhibitors can get away with showing this series is a mystery to me. Played Monday, Tuesday, Dec. 23, 24.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PERSONALITY KID: Anita Louise, Michael Duane—Very good for a double feature program. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

SECRET OF THE WHISTLER: Richard Dix, Leslie Brooks—Played on my double bill program and it certainly held the audience attention. Well received and would recommend it for a double feature program. Played Friday, Saturday, March 7, 8.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

SHADOWED: Anita Louise, Robert Scott—These "I Love a Mystery" series go well here. This was as good as the others before it. Pleased my folks. Business O.K. Weather clear and cold. Played Sunday, March 9.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

THOUSAND AND ONE NIGHTS, A: Cornel Wilde, Evelyn Keyes—One of the best shows of its kind. Beautiful color and thoroughly enjoyed by a good crowd. Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 2-4.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Favorite Films

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen—Swell show. Again, the cold weather kept them away. It is a rugged show in the Western style. Filled with action and comedy. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 25, 26.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen—This was packed with the type of action my neighborhood likes and the box office proved it. Wish there were more of this kind; I could use them. Played Sunday, Monday.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOYS' RANCH: Jackie "Butch" Jenkins, James Craig—Very good picture with average box office. "Butch" did a good job of acting and had a good supporting cast. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 23-25.—Orr, Rodman & Bailey, Rex Theatre, Henning, Minn.

BOYS' RANCH: Jackie "Butch" Jenkins, James Craig—Made for the small towns. Pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

EASY TO WED: Van Johnson, Esther Williams—Very good show. Excellent color. Although Van Johnson is taken for granted as a good draw, we find Esther Williams is a very good draw on her own and is responsible for extra business. Played Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 19-21.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

HARVEY GIRLS, THE: Judy Garland, John Hodiak—If this is Metro's idea of a good musical show, they can keep them. Very disappointing and many walkouts. Played Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 27-March 1.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

HOODLUM SAINT: William Powell, Esther Williams—Very poor picture. Business pretty fair the first night, but it surely flopped badly the second night. Played Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 26-28.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box office performance of product — providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York 20.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Marie Wilson—Very good entertainment. If it had been cut 20 minutes, it would have been received better. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 26-27.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

SHE WENT TO THE RACES: James Craig, Frances Gifford—A very good little show. It just goes to show you that it doesn't take a million dollars and a couple of high priced stars to make a good show. Played Monday-Wednesday, Jan. 27-29.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

WEEKEND AT THE WALDORF: Ginger Rogers, Walter Pidgeon—Played this one late. Very good picture, but too drawn out. Business fair. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 26, 27.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

Monogram

GENTLEMAN FROM TEXAS, THE: Johnny Mack Brown, Claudia Drake—Johnny does O.K. for us. They seemed to enjoy it and they left happy. Played Friday, Saturday, March 7, 8.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

SWEETHEART OF SIGMA CHI: Elyse Knox, Phil Regan—This is a keen little musical and it did not cost a million dollars and yet it satisfied a moderate sized audience. You note, I said moderate. Well, that is what they are at this time. Grosses all over this section are reported considerably down even on the top pictures. The soft money era is over.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

Paramount

BLUE SKIES: Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire—One of the tops for all time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

CROSS MY HEART: Betty Hutton, Sonny Tufts—Very poor show. Not even double fare. Played Monday-Wednesday, Feb. 20-22.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

O.S.S.: Alan Ladd, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Interesting from start to finish. Ladd has quite a few fans here. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

OUR HEARTS WERE GROWING UP: Gail Russell, Diana Lynn—This will be swell for localities where the people aren't too fussy. I was lucky to break even. My personal opinion is that it is a swell picture. Played Tuesday-Thursday.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

OUR HEARTS WERE GROWING UP: Gail Russell, Diana Lynn—This one barely made rental. No walkouts, because it was cold outside. Played Monday, Tuesday, Feb. 24, 25.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

ROAD TO UTOPIA: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope—After playing the other "Road" pictures, we should have known better. Our patrons will not sit through these so-called pictures. Terrible, and we mean terrible. Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 23-25.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU CAME ALONG: Robert Cummings, Elizabeth Scott—Very good picture. Pleased 100 per cent. Good business. Elizabeth Scott is a very welcome addition to the screen. Played Monday-Wednesday, Dec. 30-Jan. 1.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PRC

COLORADO SERENADE: Eddie Dean, Roscoe Ates—Good Western in color. Did average business, but it would have done more if it hadn't snowed. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

DETOUR: Ann Savage, Tom Neal—A very good mystery picture that holds their attention and satisfies.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

HER SISTER'S SECRET: Nancy Coleman, Philip Reed—Excellent picture. Pleased all. Good business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

I RING DOORBELLS: Robert Shayne, Ann Gwynne—This was one of the biggest and juiciest lemons I've had the misfortune to subject my customers to. Walkouts were many and I was tempted to hide in my office during every break. Played Friday, Saturday.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

OUTLAWS OF THE RIO GRANDE: Tim McCoy—Pleased everyone. Good Western for a small town. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

RKO Radio

CRACK-UP: Pat O'Brien, Claire Trevor—No, this is not an airplane picture. Instead, it is one of those psychological dramas. It did not draw and it did not please, although Pat O'Brien is popular here. It was a waste of film and I wasted my screen time when I played it. Skip it. Played Tuesday, Feb. 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre Dewey, Okla.

CRACK-UP: Pat O'Brien, Claire Trevor—No good. Business below par. Thought it should have brought them in, but it didn't. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

FIRST YANK INTO TOKYO: Tom Neal, Barbara Hale—Extremely good action with nice box office appeal. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 26, 27.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

FROM THIS DAY FORWARD: Joan Fontaine, Mark Stevens—Very good show that failed at the box office. Played Sunday-Tuesday, Feb. 23-25.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Joan Davis, Jack Haley—Without a doubt, the poorest musical on record. Played Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 13-15.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MAKE MINE MUSIC: Disney Musical Feature—No draw here. People want to see something with a plot. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16-17.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

SISTER KENNY: Rosalind Russell, Alexander Knox—This is a wonderful picture and every exhibitor should play it to hold up the prestige of his theatre. However, I never do any business on a biography, and this was no exception. Business was fair, but those who came were pleased. Played Wednesday Thursday, Feb. 26, 27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

SISTER KENNY: Rosalind Russell, Alexander Knox—This was a bit deep for my particular neighborhood; however, the turnout was gratifying. I am situated very close to a railroad station and the new faces were many. All in all, it did better than expected. Played Tuesday-Thursday, March 4-6.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

SPIRAL STAIRCASE, THE: Dorothy McGuire, George Brent—An excellent picture and it did good business. It is the first picture our patrons would accept Dorothy McGuire in. They still hadn't forgotten "Claudia." Played Thursday-Saturday, Jan. 9-11.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

STRANGER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Loretta Young, Orson Welles—These shows are swell, but not for small towns. There is too much talk. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

TILL THE END OF TIME: Dorothy McGuire, Guy Madison—Comments were bad and only average attendance. Madison needs a little more practice before getting star rating. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

Republic

OUT CALIFORNIA WAY: Monte Hale, Adrian Booth—Beautiful color and a good Western that pleased my weekend fans. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

RAINBOW OVER TEXAS: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—Good Roy Rogers Western with "Gabby" Hayes and Dale Evans. They are as big favorites here as Rogers and draw as much. It doesn't matter as long as somebody draws them in. Business good. Weather cold. Played Saturday, March 8.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

UTAH: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—Double billed with Gene Autry in "Man from Music Mountain." This combination, advertised as a battle of Western stars, did a week's business in three days. This is a neighborhood theatre. We played to 2,100 persons Saturday. Not had for only 478 seats. Played Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 27-March 1.—Ralph D. Bartlett, Kent Theatre, Windsor, Ont., Can.

Screen Guild

ROLLING HOME: Jean Parker, Russell Hayden—A natural for any small town. My patrons ate this up. Business was better the first day than the second. Again the kids were tops in this one. Audience reaction and comments were good. Played Thursday, Friday, March 6, 7.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—Did very good business with this one. Horse pictures of all descriptions go over well here. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

HOME SWEET HOMICIDE: Lynn Bari, Randolph Scott—A very entertaining comedy murder mystery. Enjoyed by all who saw it. The kid stars and James Gleason stole the show. Business fair. Weather cold. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 3, 4.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—A good musical with a political story. It would have been better in Technicolor. I played it during a snowstorm, so feel I was lucky to get film rental. Played Sunday, March 21.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

LODGER, THE: Laird Cregar, Merle Oberon—Good show and very low attendance due to severe cold weather.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

LODGER, THE: Laird Cregar, Merle Oberon—I thought this would go over, but even with a good vaudeville show it failed to click. Excellent cast. Cregar at his best. Can't really figure this one out. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

MARGIE: Jeanne Craine, Alan Young—I would vote for this as the most pleasing attraction ever to play this theatre. Rain cut our business in half, although the attendance was above average. If you want to please and have a big crowd, play this by all means. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—This is a big Western which pleased and did above average business. Play it. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

THUNDER BIRDS: Gene Tierney, John Sutton—Picked up this old one to take up time during these winter months. Good show and good attendance. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 11, 12.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

TREE GROWS IN BROOKLYN, A: Dorothy McGuire, James Dunn—Fair picture, but too dreary for the public. Not suitable for our situation. Played Monday-Wednesday, Dec. 2-4.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?: Fred MacMurray, Joan Leslie—I know where we will go from here if we play any more like this. Terrible, and we were told so. Played Monday-Wednesday, Jan. 6-8.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

ANGEL ON MY SHOULDER: Paul Muni, Anne Baxter—Adult entertainment. This failed to bring them in. The second night was worse than ever. Pass it up. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 3, 4.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

BREAKFAST IN HOLLYWOOD: Tom Breneman, Bonita Granville—One of the poorest pictures we have ever played. Too amateurish for words. Very poor business. Played Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 12-14.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

CAPTAIN CAUTION: Victor Mature, Alan Ladd—This was played with "Captain Fury," giving me a money making combination. You just can't go wrong with a combination like this. Played Sunday, Monday.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

LITTLE IODINE: Jo Ann Marlowe, Marc Cramer—This picture was played as a double feature and did a good business. Both young and old enjoyed the many laughs. Play it. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 26, 27.—Orr, Rodman & Bailey, Rex Theatre, Henning, Minn.

MR. ACE: George Raft, Sylvia Sidney—Raft is a natural for my neighborhood and we had no trouble at all. It was really swell having Sylvia Sidney back. She did a swell job. Comments were excellent and it was enjoyed by all. Played Tuesday-Thursday.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

SCANDAL IN PARIS, A: George Sanders, Signe Hasso—A pretty good picture that did fair business. A one-day picture only. Not very good for small town patronage. Played Sunday, March 2.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

SPELLBOUND: Ingrid Bergman, Gregory Peck—Excellent show. The topic, however, was not interesting to the theatre-going public. It was handled well. Ingrid Bergman needed to redeem herself after "Saratoga Trunk." Played Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 6-8.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

YOUNG WIDOW: Jane Russell, Louis Hayward—A good, entertaining picture. Nothing special, but it pleased our patrons. Played Monday-Wednesday, Feb. 24-26.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can.

Universal

BLACK ANGEL, THE: Dan Duryea, June Vincent—Had no appeal in this town, although it satisfied all who saw it. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 4, 5.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

CANYON PASSAGE: Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward—Broke house records here. Good for any small town. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

DARK MIRROR, THE: Olivia de Havilland, Lew Ayres—Very good. Suspenseful and dramatic. It held the audience all the way.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

DESTROY RIDES AGAIN: Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer—Top-notch Western that failed to draw. The weather was cold. This Western is raw, rough and comical. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

RUSTLER'S ROUND-UP: Kirby Grant, Fuzzy Knight—Over a year ago I predicted that Kirby Grant would be a top Western star. If he would only make a few more pictures my action fans would really go for him. I am always pleased to have one of his pictures. Good luck, Kirby. Played Friday, Saturday, March 7, 8.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

SWING OUT, SISTER: Rod Cameron, Arthur Treacher—Good little musical. They all enjoyed it on a weekend. Played Friday, Saturday, March 7, 8.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

Warner Bros.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—Playing late hurt this one. If it is action you want, this is it. Bogart is at his peak. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 3, 4.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—Everyone liked this. Everytime anyone sneezed, it sounded like an explosion. Had the edge of my seats pretty well worn. Bogart and Miss Bacall . . .

need to say more.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—A wonderful picture with a lot of action. Held the audience in suspense. Good for all situations. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 3, 4.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

CLOAK AND DAGGER: Gary Cooper, Lilli Palmer—This was very good. Gary Cooper at his best. Audience reaction was excellent. With Gary Cooper at the helm it had to be good. Played Tuesday-Thursday.—Walter E. Foley, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

CLOAK AND DAGGER: Gary Cooper, Lilli Palmer—This type of picture is not accepted by the general public anymore. War pictures were O.K., but there were too many of them. Did poor business. Wouldn't advise anyone to play it. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—Orr, Rodman & Bailey, Rex Theatre, Henning, Minn.

DEVOTION: Olivia de Havilland, Ida Lupino—No good for a small town. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 4, 5.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

JANIE GETS MARRIED: Joan Leslie, Robert Hutton—A nice little picture. Nothing big, but it satisfied.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

NIGHT AND DAY: Cary Grant, Alexis Smith—One of the best to come from Warner Bros. Playing so late hurt it. Alexis Smith should be in more Technicolor. She was great. Played Monday, Feb. 24.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

RHAPSODY IN BLUE: Joan Leslie, Robert Alda—An excellent picture and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Very good business. Played Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 19-21.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SARATOGA TRUNK: Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman—One of the most boresome pictures ever made. Poor business after the first night. We had more walkouts on this than on any film in years. Played Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 6-8.—Coombes & Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Kansas - Missouri Group Seeking New Fire Code

Resolutions in favor of a proposed new code of fire laws for Missouri were adopted recently by the board of directors of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association, meeting in Kansas City. The code would cover all places of assembly, including theatres, but excluding churches and schools. The code now in effect has been in effect for about 50 years and contains many anachronisms. The board also put finishing touches on the programs for the regional meetings to be held in Kansas and Missouri.

Gamble Buys Interest In Monarch Theatres

Ted Gamble, circuit executive and American Theatres Association board chairman, has completed a deal with Harry Katz, president of Monarch Theatres, Inc., for purchase of that circuit's operations, including an interest in the Circle, Indiana and Lyric theatre at Indianapolis. The Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, Louisville, Ky., holds a 50 per cent interest in those Indianapolis theatres. Mr. Katz is expected to remain as manager for Mr. Gamble.

Cohen Subtitling Italian Film for Showing Here

Leo Cohen, distributor, who has film rights for the Western Hemisphere as well as many European countries for "Dente Pe Dente" ("Measure for Measure"), is now subtitling the film in English and Spanish. Based on the Shakespearean play, the Italian made film took more than four years to complete production.

Calls Nationalism Obstacle Abroad To U. S. Product

Resurgent nationalism and the scarcity of dollar exchange were cited as the chief obstacles to the free flow of American pictures abroad in the annual report to Eric Johnston by Gerald M. Mayer, managing director of the international division of the Motion Picture Association. In describing the operation of his division during 1946, Mr. Mayer said that while some progress had been made in alleviating possible obstacles, a great deal still remained to be done.

"Every country is thinking of its position in relation to the rest of the world, and regulations and restrictions of all kinds have been sought to reinforce its stand," Mr. Mayer said. "The scarcity of dollar exchange has become more apparent during the past year than ever before. Coupled with this is the desire of many countries to create or enlarge their own infant motion picture industry." Among the most pressing restrictive measures he named excessive import duties, internal tax measures, quota laws, discriminatory theatre taxes, remittance taxes, government monopolies and theatre combinations.

The division now is sending qualified personnel to key centers of the world to make the MPA international department "the antennae of the industry." It is hoped that with the information thus available it will be possible to anticipate and prevent the erection of barriers. The division also is establishing an International Information Center in Hollywood to advise producers on the possible impact of their scripts on foreign audiences.

HEADS JEWISH APPEAL

BARNEY BALABAN, left, president of Paramount Pictures, last week was appointed national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal motion picture division by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., right, the Appeal's drive general chairman. A national committee of the industry will be organized shortly. Mr. Balaban opened the campaign Wednesday night at a dinner at the Warwick Hotel, Philadelphia. The United Jewish Appeal has set this year a goal of $170,000,000. The quota last year was $100,000,000.

Legion Reviews Nine Films; Revises "Carmen" Rating

The National Legion of Decency reviewed nine new productions this week, approving all but two. In Class A-I, unobjectionable for general patronage, were: "Carnegie Hall," "Great Expectations," "The Late George Apley" and "Six Gun Serenade." In Class A-II, unobjectionable for adults, were "Framed," "Guilt of Janet Ames" and "A Yank in Rome" (Italian). In Class B, objectionable in part, were "Magnificent Rogue," because of "light treatment of marriage," and "Odd Man Out," because of "suicide in plot situation." Additionally, the Legion took "Carmen," the French language feature, out of the "condemned" classification and gave it a Class B rating because of "revisions made in all prints."

Greek Orphan Relief Luncheon Honors Skouras

Executives and representatives of the motion picture industry, stars of stage, screen and radio, and officials of the Greek Government and the Greek War Relief Association were guests of the industry Monday at the "Greek War Orphans Appeal" luncheon, in honor of Spyros Skouras, at the Hotel Astor in New York. Mr. Skouras, on a business trip to Latin America, was not present.

With 600 attending the luncheon in the hotel's Grand Ballroom, the keynote of the occasion was a plea by the principal speakers to aid the starving 378,000 Greek war orphans with $80 donations to provide one orphan with food and clothing for a year.

The luncheon was part of the month-long national drive to raise $1,200,000, of which the New York goal is $200,000. The drive began March 8 and will conclude April 8.

S. H. Fabian, national co-chairman of the campaign, observed that aiding the children of war-torn countries is the only hope for universal peace in the future. Other speakers included: Maurice Chevalier; George Skouras, vice-president of the Greek War Relief Association; William Helis, president of Greek Relief; the Honorable Paul Economou-Gouras of the Greek Embassy, and Harold Russell, handless veteran who won two Academy Awards for his role in "The Best Years of Our Lives." Peter Donald, comedian of the radio show, "Can You Top This," and "Ajax Cassidy" of the Fred Allen show, was master of ceremonies.

Among those on the dais were: Barney Balaban, Leonard Goldenson, Samuel Rinzler, Robert Coyne, Jack Alicoate, Malcolm Kingsberg, Jack Cohn, Gene Tierney, Fred J. Schwartz, Ted Gamble, George Schaefer, J. R. Vogel, Harry Brandt, John J. O'Connor, Sol Schwartz, Ted O'Shea and C. J. Scollard.

Fabian, Gamble Not to Run Again

Determination to retire from their positions with the American Theatres Association and not to accept any further nomination for office was announced by S. H. Fabian, president, and Ted R. Gamble, board chairman, this week. Their decision is in line with a previously expressed conviction that the Association's head offices should be on a rotating basis, with no one individual holding them for more than one year.

A slate of nominees was to have been drawn up in conferences this week. Mr. Fabian indicated that he was ready to suggest a successor to himself. However, it was understood that, once a slate of nominees had been drawn up, it will be referred to a large nominating committee which remains to be appointed. This week also was to have seen a decision on the time and date of the forthcoming ATA convention. The meeting probably will be held between April 19 and May 1 in either Chicago or Washington.

Other ATA officers, in addition to Mr. Fabian and Mr. Gamble, include Robert W. Coyne, executive director; Charles Skouras, Los Angeles, first vice-president; William Skirball, Cleveland, second vice-president; Sam Pinanski, Boston, treasurer, and William F. Crockett, Virginia Beach, Va., secretary.

Siritzky Company to Produce in Hollywood

Siritzky International Pictures will produce two pictures in Hollywood later this year, and will begin distributing French films in 16mm in July, Sam Siritzky, vice-president, and Leon Siritzky, president and his father, announced in New York last week during a press reception they tendered in behalf of Tino Rossi, French singing star.

The French films to be distributed in 16mm on a percentage basis beginning July 1 are "The Baker's Wife," "Harvest," "Poil de Carotte," and "The Well Digger's Daughter."

Mr. Rossi, their guest at the reception, will make a personal appearance September 26 and four weeks thereafter at the Ambassador theatre, New York, owned by the Siritzkys, in conjunction with the showing there on a reserved seat basis of Marcel Pagnol's "Le Schpountz." Mr. Rossi before that date will tour Latin America and then work in France in Mr. Pagnol's "La Belle Meuniere."

French Theatres Cooperate In Cost Reduction Plan

The French motion picture industry is cooperating with the French Government's decree ordering a 10 per cent reduction in the market price of all commodities, including theatre admissions, according to Jacques Chabrieier, the American representative of Pathe Cinema. Mr. Chabrieier recently returned from a three-week visit to Paris, where he discussed release details on the RKO-Pathe Cinema production "Man About Town," starring Maurice Chevalier. The French cost reduction was ordered in an attempt to prevent inflation.

Set $8,000,000 Budget For Three Cagney Films

The cost of three pictures to be made for United Artists distribution by William Cagney Productions during 1947 will amount to almost $8,000,000, a UA announcement said this week. First to be produced at the General Service Studios is the $2,300,000 adaptation of Sayoran's "The Time of Your Life," which goes before the cameras April 14, with Henry Koster directing. Next is Thorne Smith's "The Stray Lamb," to cost about $2,100,000. Shooting will start in July with Richard Wallace directing. The third will be Adria Locke Langley's book, "A Lion Is in the Streets," which has a budget of $3,500,000. James Cagney will star in all three pictures.

Reissue "Ragtime Band"

Twentieth Century-Fox will reissue its 1938 musical, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," in April. First run dates in Los Angeles, Denver and San Diego head the list of 23 key city bookings so far. It will play the Roxy in New York.

Eastman Opens Foreign Units

Pre-war operations of the Eastman Kodak Company in Manila, Shanghai, Hong Kong and Singapore have been resumed, and plans have been made for the reopening of the company's branch in Batavia, Java, this year, the forty-fourth annual Eastman Kodak report, released Thursday, indicates.

Plants in Harrow, England, in Toronto, Canada, and Vincennes, France, continued to operate at high levels during the past year, while the plant in Stuttgart, Germany, continued to operate under the jurisdiction of the American Military Government.

At the same time the company announced a new laboratory in Panama City to study photographic equipment and materials under tropical conditions.

Progress in color was the top photographic development of the year, the report said, and a "sizable" appropriation has been made to continue a broad program of research, development and process improvement, which will embrace methods of rapid film processing studied in relation to commercial needs, especially in television.

The booklet report also covers the company's 1946 activities and supplements financial details, announced March 5, which showed peacetime sales of $274,703,448, and a net profit of $35,691,318. The latter figure includes tax reductions totaling $2,936,800.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

CHESTER FRIEDMAN, Editor

That's a smart piece of showmanship which helped to launch "Suddenly It's Spring" in Dallas. Paramount exploiters and Dick Fay, manager of the Palace theatre there, tied up with Sanger Bros., the city's largest department store, to boost Easter in much the same fashion as Christmas is promoted.

A life-size rabbit serves as the counterpart of Christmas' traditional Santa Claus. The store has gone all out with window space, display advertisements and inter-department cooperation, with some unusual publicity for the picture and the theatre.

From Chicago, Irving Mack writes to tip us off to a novel device introduced by Dan Driscoll, manager of the Marlow in Helena, Mont. Filmack Trailer Corporation recently received copy for a trailer from Mr. Driscoll with a message from his staff asking patrons to "please have a heart and rent our boss a two bedroom apartment or house.

"He doesn't own a dog, a cat or canary," continues the copy, "but he does have two little girls. Confidentially, he's willing to give a pass to the new landlord."

Tsk, tsk . . . and here we thought we had licked the pass evil years ago!

Famous Players Canadian theatres recently announced the winners in the annual Christmas Gift Book drive for 1946. For the third time, the second in succession, super salesman for the circuit is Dennis Murphy, manager of the Capitol theatre in Halifax. The F. P. C. showmen again showed an increase over the previously established record for cumulative circuit sales, lifting the total $80,000 above 1944 and a considerable amount over 1945.

At the circuit's Third Anniversary Din-

THE RIGHT SPIRIT

It is not often that we receive a letter which expresses the humility and sincerity that distinguishes real character. In the following instance, we detect in a letter from Art Meyer, manager of the North Main theatre, Houston, Texas, not only these two admirable personal qualities, but a manifestation of loyalty and inquisitiveness which are basic qualifications for a good showman.

The letter follows:

"I sort of hesitate to ask for membership in the Managers' Round Table. I see that so many really great folks in show business are members. Being a young fellow, in years and in show business, I humbly ask your consideration."

"As manager of this Interstate theatre, I find myself and every manager here in Houston . . . worked up from ushers. I am in love with my company because they were just plain wonderful to all of us who entered the armed forces. This was a continuation of their policy before the war and since."

"I am asking for membership in the Managers' Round Table because I honestly believe that it is full of real showmanship. I can use it sort of as a textbook. I wish that maybe I can send along an idea that may in a small way help someone along the line."

ner of the 25 Year Club in Toronto recently, ten new members were felicitated by John J. Fitzgibbons, company head and president of the unique organization.

Membership in the club is limited to employees with a quarter of a century's service with Famous Players Canadian.

Here's a demonstration of the power of cooperative advertising in the tie-up between the May Company book shop in Los Angeles and the appearance of Claude Jarman, Jr., youthful star of "The Yearling," to autograph copies of the book at the store.

The book department manager of the store disposed of the entire stock of more than 300 copies of "The Yearling" in about 40 minutes. Display advertisements in the morning Times and Examiner by the May Company on the morning of the star's appearance attracted enormous crowds.

The fish-bowl stunt mentioned here a few weeks back was revived recently by Ben Mindlin, manager of the Valley Stream theatre, Long Island, N. Y., who was amazed at the hundreds of people who were attracted to the invisible piscatorial specie.

He should see the crowds that collect when that eccentric New Yorker gets out his string and chewing gum to fish up coins dropped down the subway gratings here in the big city. And what a ballyhoo that would make for some of the current film offerings like "If I'm Lucky."

A western theatre circuit recently sponsored a showmanship contest, offering cash prizes to its theatre managers for the best ideas promoted in behalf of creating goodwill for their houses.

Many of the company's managers did not bother to enter the competition. Perhaps they could not think up an original idea but we venture that, when they are asked to explain their delinquency, they had better come up with some original alibi. The one about modesty has grown kind of thin, and many executives are beginning to wonder if this so-called modesty isn't just another name for laziness.

Harold Seidenberg, manager of the Fox, Philadelphia, borrowed this exhibit of crime detection instruments from the Pennsylvania Institute of Criminology to focus attention on "Boomerang".

This impressive lobby display, right, helped to promote the "crime does not pay" angle for manager Will Singer's date on "San Quentin" at the Brandeis theatre, Omaha, Neb.

Flashily dressed ballyhoo attracted extra attention to manager Harry Ashton's engagement of "The Showoff" at the Uptown, Salt Lake City.

At the Warner theatre, Oklahoma City, colorful enlargements place emphasis on coming attraction, "Pursued", for manager Jim Barnes.

At right, convict ballyhoo exploits "San Quentin" for Ted Davidson, manager of the Sigma theatre, Lima, O.

Crime Detection Display Set for "Boomerang"

Through a tieup with the Pennsylvania Institute of Criminology, displays of crime detection paraphernalia were set up in front of the theatre to exploit the engagement of "Boomerang" at the Fox, Philadelphia, Pa. The campaign was arranged by manager Harold Seidenberg.

Five thousand fingerprint cards, imprinted with theatre and playdate copy were distributed, and the public was invited to have their prints taken by a representative of the Pennsylvania Institute stationed in the lobby. The displays attracted hundreds of passers-by.

The 110 piece Northern Liberty Fife and Drum Corps played in front of the theatre opening night. A mailing piece, printed in the form of a subpoena, was sent to all members of the Philadelphia Bar Association as well as members of the Bench to tie-in with the court room background of the picture.

A special screening of the picture was held for professors of the law schools at Temple University and the University of Pennsylvania.

Uses Teaser Lobby Display To Sell "Sister Kenny"

A novel display was set up in the lobby by manager George Bernard to promote his playdate of "Sister Kenny" at the Odeon theatre, Bury, Lancs., England. The display consisted of a large photograph of Rosalind Russell, star of the picture, and the following copy: "Do you know this woman? Meet her here next week! Her story is exciting truth!" Fifty nurses from the Bury Royal Infirmary and the Bury County Hospital were guests of this management opening day. After viewing the picture, the nurses were taken on a tour of the theatre.

Wabbe Garners Radio and Press Breaks for Show

Considerable newspaper and radio publicity was garnered by RKO publicist Helen Wabbe to exploit the playdate of "The Mighty McGurk" plus the personal appearance of Wally Brown and Eileen Barton at the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, Cal. Through a tieup with Hale Brothers, Miss Barton appeared at the store to model clothes. Guest star appearances were arranged for both Miss Barton and Brown on several radio programs.

Photos of Shoppers Used For Display in Glasgow

A good deal of comment resulted from a unique lobby display manager Preston Swan set up for his playdate on "Ali Baba Goes to Town" at the Elephant Cinema, Shawlands, Glasgow, Scotland. To get the material for the display he had a photograther take snapshots of women as they paused by a shop or emerged from a store. The photographs were set up on a board with the heading: "Mrs. ? Goes to Town" and a sub-heading "Photographs of ladies snapped whilst shopping in Shawlands District." Guest tickets were awarded to women who identified themselves in the snapshots on the display board.

KEN WAGNER, owner and manager of the Wilton theatre in Wilton Junction, Iowa, uses an effective monthly calendar, above, which he makes up from press book ads, reproduces by photo-offset and distributes in mail boxes throughout his territory. He proudly gave this copy to L. H. Wasson, Herald field representative, last week.

Arranges Radio Contest to Sell "Wake Up and Dream"

Manager Charles R. Hacker promoted a "Dream Boy and Girl" contest with radio station WFOX to exploit "Wake Up and Dream" at the Fox Palace theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Entrants were required to submit 50 words or less describing their dream boy or girl. The contest was plugged over the air five to 10 times daily for five days before opening. Each time the theatre and playdate were mentioned. Cash prizes were awarded to the three top winners.

Barnes Blankets City with Stickers for "Prentiss"

Stickers carrying the catchline "Should 'Nora Prentiss' keep her mouth shut?" were planted in hotels, drug stores, barber shops and in fact every place possible to exploit the playdate of the picture at the New Warner theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. The same question was used for a radio contest. Cash prizes and guest tickets were awarded to winners. The picture was booked day and date with a teachers' convention. Manager Jim Barnes arranged the campaign.

Katz Sets Cooperative Ad

A cooperative newspaper ad was promoted by manager Melvan Katz to exploit "I've Always Loved You" at the Hippodrome theatre, Pottstown, Pa. The ad, which ran in the Pottstown Mercury, was paid for by McCarragher's record shop. The store also used a window display.

Limericks, Music Aid "Loved You" In Akron, Ohio

A limerick contest, for which over 500 replies were received, highlighted the extensive campaign arranged by manager Sid Holland for his engagement of "I've Always Loved You" at the Palace theatre, Akron, Ohio. The contest was sponsored by the Beacon Journal.

Because of the picture's musical background, special attention was directed towards music groups. Heralds were inserted in programs at concerts, recitals, etc. Post cards were sent to music teachers and students. Letters were placed on all grade and high school bulletin boards, Akron University, Kent University and all branches of the public library.

A cooperative herald deal was arranged with Rudick's Jewelry Store, which shared the cost of imprinting and distributing the heralds. 200 busses carried cards. Twenty Watkins dealer stores used one-sheets in windows. Newspaper publicity, radio spot announcements and displays also figured prominently in the campaign.

Promotes Windows for "Song"

Window tieups were arranged with four of the leading local stores for the engagement of "Song of the South" at the Ritz theatre, Shawnee, Okla. The tieups were set with J. C. Penney, Kress, Warren's Department Store and Houstin Payne, photographer. Two 15-minute and two five-minute transcription programs plus numerous spot announcements were used over station KGFF. The campaign was arranged by owner-manager Johnny H. Jones.

Simultaneous opening of "Song of Scherazade" at five Fox West Coast theatres in Los Angeles recently called for close cooperation between the theatre managers. Numerous window tieups such as the one above, crediting all five theatres, resulted.

Special Jeeps Help to Exploit "Show-Off"

A fire engine jeep was obtained from the jeep distributor for the area and used in front of the theatre to ballyhoo the playdate of "The Show-Off" at the Granada theatre, Kansas City, Kan. Another jeep, painted red, was secured from the local jeep dealer. Signs tied-in the show-off jeeps with the title of the picture. The jeeps also were driven around town with a motorcycle police escort. For a lobby display, Barnes added a real collar and flashy necktie to a head and shoulder pose of Red Skelton, star of the picture. The campaign was arranged by manager Charles W. Barnes, Jr.

Shoe Promotion Draws Attention To "Woman"

A good street promotion that attracted considerable attention was arranged by manager Mollie Stickles for "The Strange Woman" at the Poli-Palace theatre, Meriden, Conn.

Through a tieup with the Miles Shoe Company, a pair of size 6A shoes and a salesman's low stool was obtained for the street ballyhoo. A theatre attendant set up shop at a busy corner with a sign, reading: "Can you fill the shoes of 'The Strange Woman'?" Guest tickets were awarded to the first 6 women each day, for three days, who could properly fit the shoes.

Another effective promotion for the playdate also excited a good deal of comment. Special one-inch ads were used at the bottom of page one of both local newspapers to announce that "The Strange Woman" would call Meridenites during the week. A young woman picked names at random from the telephone book and asked such questions as "If you read today's paper you should know who is the author of 'Strange Woman'." Guest tickets were mailed to persons giving the correct answer.

A full window display was arranged for the Jepson Book Store. The display consisted of two 28x44 blowups of the book, two 20-inch heads of Hedy Lamarr, a set of cut-out title letters and two 11x14 announcement cards. A huge board also was used in the lobby two weeks in advance.

Designs Lobby Setpiece For "Blue Skies"

A special lobby setpiece was designed by manager Elmer Adams, Jr., to exploit his playdate of "Blue Skies" at the Bison theatre, Shawnee, Okla. The display consisted of pictures of the stars, catchlines and sheet music from the picture, with the music notes in metallics. Adams arranged for the picture to be reviewed at a meeting of the local music club. Free playdate announcements were made at basketball games at the Municipal Auditorium. 25 window cards were used in stores and in school lunch rooms.

Co-Op Display Ads Set by Taylor in Buffalo

Two cooperative newspaper display ads were promoted for the playdate of "Lady in the Lake" at the Buffalo theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. Charles B. Taylor, advertising director for Shea's Buffalo theatres, arranged the tieups with Sealtest Dairy Products and Edwards Beauty Shop.

Taylor also promoted a four-column by 16½ inch cooperative display ad in the Evening News and Courier-Express to exploit "California" at Shea's Great Lakes theatre. The highlight of the ad was a photo of Ray Milland, star of the picture.

Garners Stories In Local Press For "Bel Ami"

Considerable newspaper publicity was garnered by manager William Kemp to exploit the opening of "The Private Affairs of Bel Ami" at the State theatre, Memphis, Tenn. The publicity was highlighted by a front page break in the Memphis Daily News.

A two-column art break with a banner heading was promoted in the magazine This Week in Memphis, which has a circulation of 30,000 and is distributed to all hotel rooms in the city.

Sixty-two spot announcements were used on radio stations WMPS, WHBQ and WHHM. Guest tickets were awarded to winners on a 15-minute quiz program over WHBQ. The picture was plugged on this program daily for seven days. The playdate also was mentioned on two other radio programs.

Window displays were set with Goldsmith's Department Store, Blossom Flower Shop, Woolworth's and the Three Musketiers Book Store. 20,000 imprinted napkins were distributed by Walgreen's Drug Store and Toddle House restaurants. A large overhead banner with cutout letters announcing the opening was placed above the grand staircase 10 days in advance.

Books Old Film to Exploit Visit of Local Star

Taking advantage of an opportunity presented by the visit of a local star, manager E. C. Lamoureux booked an old picture in which the star had played the juvenile lead and exploited the local angle, drawing considerable extra business to the Empire theatre, Windsor, Ont. The star was Dick Nelson and the picture, "Great Guns." Lamoureux, on the strength of the local angle, planted a feature story with pictures in the Windsor Daily Star in advance and another picture opening day. Merchants cooperated willingly in the campaign.

Walls Designs Foyer Display

An eye-catching foyer display attracted attention to manager Eric V. Walls' playdate of "The Way to the Stars" at the Clifton Cinema, Great Barr, Birmingham, England. The display consisted of a cutout of the Clifton with playdate copy across the canopy, a star with a long tail (made of linen) carrying the title, and cutout heads of the stars of the picture superimposed on blue linen. Velvet curtains were used for background.

Sets Windows for "Reckoning"

Window tieups were arranged by manager Paul Slayer to promote his playdate of "Dead Reckoning" at the Durfee theatre, Fall River, Mass. The displays featured "Lizabeth Scott" dresses.

Novel Laundry Tieup Promotes

"Secret Heart"

A novel laundry tieup drew considerable attention to the engagement of "The Secret Heart," at the United Artists theatre, Portland, Ore. The campaign was arranged by Jack Matlack, manager and advertising director for J. J. Parker Theatres.

Imprinted paper bands were put on 20,000 shirts sent to customers by the Portland Laundry. Copy on the bands read: "I'd give my shirt to see Claudette Colbert, etc., in 'The Secret Heart,' now playing, etc. Give your shirt that fresher look by sending it always to, etc."

Matlack tied-in with local high schools by distributing thousands of date cards, made up in the form of a heart, to boys and girls. Copy on the girls' cards invited them to locate a boy having a date card with a corresponding number. Free admissions were awarded boys and girls having identical numbered cards.

Tieups also were effected with Tommy Luke's fine retail flower shops for window displays. In addition, window displays were arranged with several downtown stores and an elaborate display was set up in the lobby.

Uses Gloved Hand Ballyhoo

Manager Frank Morin had a man carry a fake gloved hand throughout the downtown section to promote "The Beast With Five Fingers" at the Regal theatre, Hartford, Conn. Announcements in the local newspapers informed readers that guest tickets would be awarded to persons walking up to the man and identifying him as the "Beast."

Uses Punch Line in All Ad Copy to Promote "Babies"

Manager G. Ray used the words "An expose of an infamous racket" in all advertising copy to exploit "Black Market Babies" at the Regent Cinema, Bradford, Yorkshire, England. For a lobby display, a life-size doll was placed in a cradle. Suspended above the cradle was a card with the words: "Is she destined to be a Black Market Baby?" On either side of the display were cards standing on easels with the following copy in rough lettering: "Parents unknown! a likely candidate for the 'Black Market Babies'. Unwanted babies for sale. Sold to the highest bidder by unscrupulous racketeers. A new angle on the traffic in human lives, etc."

Holds Preview in Calcutta To Aid "Green Years"

A preview for the press, clergy, school teachers and prominent citizens was arranged by manager I. A. Hafesjee to publicize his playdate of "The Green Years" at the Metro theatre in Calcutta, India. Co-operative ads were promoted in Flash and The Star of India, tying-in with Plastic Fabrics. A large-size walking book was used for street ballyhoo. A silk banner with "The Green Years" written in green letters decorated the marquee. Bookmarks were distributed to patrons a week before.

Uses Kites for Melbourne Date

Kites with appropriate copy were flown over the race course and at football matches two weeks in advance to exploit the playdate of "The Green Years" at the Metro theatre, Melbourne, Australia. The campaign was arranged by manager J. Gavegan.

Considerable free newspaper and radio publicity was garnered. Patrons attending the theatre before the playdate of "The Green Years" received their tickets in an overprinted envelope. 10,000 stickers worded "The Green Years' is a wonderful motion picture" were posted in suburban areas and placed on backs of envelopes leaving the theatre.

Teaser cards were used in the lobby well in advance. Ten 24-sheets were posted in prominent locations. 500 special posters were placed in suburban areas and approaches to the city a week before opening.

UA to Roadshow "Carnegie Hall"

Taking its cue from recent tests with the picture "Carnegie Hall" at the Bushnell Memorial Auditorium at Hartford, United Artists has decided to roadshow the film and its fieldmen are now out negotiating contracts, Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., head of UA advertising and publicity, said this week.

Following Samuel S. Goldwyn's lead, UA will attempt to lease some 200 houses across the country within the next two months. In other situations the picture will be licensed in the usual manner. Houses will be leased either on a "four-wall" basis, which means that UA pays all operating costs and advertising expenses, or under a percentage deal which has the exhibitor share part of the advertising cost and possibly some of the operating expenditures.

No date has been set for a New York opening, Mr. Lazarus said, but the picture probably will play at a leased house. This injects new significance into last week's announcement that UA had concluded negotiations for leasing the 1,600-seat Shubert theatre on Broadway. New York top will be $2.40, with top admissions for the rest of the country ranging from $1.80 to $2.40. "Carnegie Hall," which runs two hours and 15 minutes, will play everywhere on a two or three-a-day policy.

With the conventional type of roadshowing out under the recent court decree, Mr. Lazarus said that roadshowing in houses where the picture is licensed "may have to be stopped sooner or later." Borris Morros, producer of the film, declared that he was concerned only with showing his picture in theatres that could be leased and that a decision to show it in any other manner would have to wait. According to Mr. Lazarus, "Carnegie Hall" will probably have no national release date for the rest of the year.

"New Orleans" Premiere Set

The world premiere of "New Orleans," Jules Levey's production for United Artists release, has been set for the Saenger theatre, New Orleans, April 26.

Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation announces an increase in its price of one-half cent a linear foot of all 35mm exposure negative. Also, Technicolor is increasing the price of negative developing by one-half cent a linear foot.

"Since January 1, 1946, several increases in Technicolor's price have been made which in the aggregate have not covered by any means all the increased cost to Technicolor of labor and material," says the corporation. "The occasion for the present increase is the increase of 11.17 per cent in labor rates which has been adopted retroactive to January 1, 1947."

In connection with these increases Technicolor has expressed its determination to continue to try to halt and ultimately to reverse the rising trend of costs.

In notifying its customers of this increase Technicolor has offered, upon notice within 14 days, to reduce commitments for photographs the shooting of which has not yet commenced for such customers as may desire to arrange for such cancellations.

The Egg and I

Universal-International—Sunnyside Up

Betty MacDonald's best selling book—its sales are up around the 1,500,000 mark—was a series of comical incidents about herself, her husband and their enthusiasm over a chicken farm. All of that is in the film, plus a third angle named Louise Allbritton, who tries to make Fred MacMurray, who ends up by buying her model farm.

MacMurray is the enthusiastic, returned war veteran who turns from bonds to chickens. Claudette Colbert is the wife who never had a voice in the choice. She's just a first-class sport who blunders her way through to final success. Only it never proves that easy. Neither one of them knows anything about life in the country and even less about life among the chickens. They learn the hard way, which turns out to be hard and funny for them and any audience.

The roof of the dilapidated old house they buy leaks. The stove falls apart. Her recipes never seem to turn out according to the book. The hog turns obstinate. A tree falls the wrong way and wrecks the chicken house. There is a forest fire which wipes them out and warm, friendly neighbors who swarm in with food and equipment to set them up again.

Miss Allbritton is whatever feminine menace the film may boast. She's in the open in her play for MacMurray, who seems dumb until it finally develops he has wangled her model farm on easy terms. Miss Colbert, on the other hand, misunderstands the situation, goes home to mother, has her baby and a final change of heart. This returns her to MacMurray, where the complications unravel for a happy finish.

"The Egg and I" is never strong on story. But it doesn't have to be. Here it's a case of funny incident piled atop funny incident, with an occasional heart tug stuck in by Chester Erskine and Fred F. Finklehoffe in an adroit and fast-moving script. They veer sharply toward slapstick on a number of occasions although there isn't a thing in the world wrong with their decision to do so. The amusing episodes come along often, but probably reach their apex in the barn dance sequence at which the city-bred Miss Colbert meets the prancing countryside full tilt.

Performances are tops. Miss Colbert may depend upon it that this is one of her best. MacMurray isn't far behind. Stalwart support comes from Percy Kilbride, Marjorie Main and Billy House, among others.

Erskine shared the script with Finklehoffe and also directed. Both served as co-producers in a very neat job of hilarious entertainment.

Carnival in Costa Rica

20th Century-Fox—Gaudy Hubbub

There's a wild and raucous time for the customers in this latest Twentieth Century-Fox release. In a holiday mood for a holiday picture, the studio rounded up every loose extra on the lot, covered them with confetti and gaily colored balloons, set them down in some breathtaking scenery and shot the works with music and dance. The result is a bright bubble of a Technicolored musical that stars Dick Haymes, Vera-Ellen, Cesar Romero and Celeste Holm, all carrying on to the tune of Ernesto Lecuona's music.

This loud and fast musical tells the regulation boy-meets-girl story, but this time it's given an anthropological twist because in Costa Rica it's the custom for families to arrange marriages for their offspring without ever a word to son or daughter. Under this setup, Vera-Ellen is supposed to marry Romero. But instead Vera marries Dick, Romero marries Celeste in the midst of a terrific barrage of Spanish sputterings.

Vera-Ellen is in the main responsible for carrying the show along. Her numerous dances are tops and she has a decidedly fresh and engaging personality. Celeste Holm isn't given the chance to prove on film that she is one of the New York stage's top singing comedienne.

The tunes and dances follow one another in rapid succession. Now and then there is time out for some breathless dialogue. But by and large it's music through and through, an exciting kind of music that reaches a new peak in frenzy when the Lecuona Cuban Boys, as mad a bunch of exhibitionists as ever hammered out a rumba, take the stage.

Three writers, John Larkin, Samuel Hoffenstein and Elizabeth Reinhardt get credit for the original screenplay, which dwells on the possibilities of a full moon in fiesta time. Gregory Ratoff directed. William A. Bacher produced.

Great Expectations

Universal-International—Dickens

This Cineguild production is an artful compressing into two hours' time of Dickens' rambling novel of witches and convicts, malice and young love, lawyers and judges of nineteenth Century London. It's a strange and emotional telling of a strange and troubled story, peopled with a vast number of eccentrics, some of them charming, some of them spiteful, some of them brutal.

With careful attention paid to detail, this story charms by its illusion of authenticity, its ability to evoke a rare mood of suspense and other-worldliness, its deep peering into three dimensional characters.

There is enough violence here for a blood-and-thunder drama, enough young and unrequited love for a soap opera, enough madness and cobwebs for a horror picture. But all are presented with restraint.

Because of this restraint and because of the relatively unknown leads, John Mills and Valerie Hobson, this picture will take some special handling. But the fact that the picture will play New York City's Music Hall and the fact that this same hall is known far and wide should lighten the labor of publicity.

The story tells of Pip, a blacksmith's apprentice, who, as a child, falls in love with Estella. She has been adopted by a rich, eccentric woman who for 40 years has lived in a cobwebbed mansion mourning for a lost lover. Pip is befriended by this woman and by an escaped convict. Later Pip is adopted by someone he does not know and is promised a fortune when he comes of age. He believes the old woman has adopted him, and uses the money to live as a gentleman.

Meanwhile, his rather tortured love affair is abruptly terminated by Estella's decision to marry another. If that weren't complication enough, Pip learns that it is the convict who has adopted him. And then to top that, he learns that Estella is the daughter of the convict and a woman who is a murderess. When Estella learns of her ancestry, she returns to the cobwebbed mansion. Pip follows her and, in a dramatic scene, rips aside the dusty curtains to let the sunshine in. Estella sees the light.

This vast, encyclopedic story is beautifully acted and provides unusual entertainment. David Lean directed. Ronald Neame produced.

Apache Rose

Republic—Western with Color

Roy Rogers, favorite singing cowboy, is starred in this Trucolor Western, which has music and action characteristic of musical Westerns. Rogers is supported by Dale Evans for songs, and Olin Howlin for comedy.

Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers, as ranch hands, add to the entertainment value of the picture with pleasant renditions of several songs. Miss Evans sings "There's Nothin' Like Coffee in the Mornin'," which is a catchy number written by Tim and Glenn Spencer. "Apache Rose," the title song, and "Wishing Well" are most effectively presented by the entire company.

Gerald Geraghty wrote the original screenplay in which Rogers is an oil well engineer. The gang of racketeers are gamblers who resort to murder to gain their evil purposes. Rogers, with the help of Miss Evans and Olin Howlin, succeeds in bringing the culprits to justice.

Untamed Fury

PRC—Swamp Melodrama

Using the Okefenokee swamplands of Florida as the locale, producer-director Ewing Scott has taken his own story, originally entitled "Gator Bait," has had it adapted to the screen by Taylor Caven and Paul Gerard Smith, and has emerged with a spine-tingling melodrama of swamp folk and their bitter campaign against modern progress.

Neither the story, the cast, nor the acting are individually pretentious. It has been modestly produced, but there is an element that the audience will devour with relish—suspense.

From the opening to the closing scenes they will be on the edges of their seats as they watch a swamp hunter bait alligators with his son tied to the end of a rope; the numerous races when swimmers attempt to escape from the snapping jaws of the swamp beasts, and the nerve-jarring moments as quicksand draws its victim into the earth.

Around this element of suspense the story has been built. Gaylord Pendleton is the former swamp boy who returns years later to Okefenokee to bring modern roads and elevate community life. Mikel Conrad is the handsome swamp guide, who leads the natives' opposition to the advancements. On the distaff side there is Mary Conwell, who falls in love with the engineer, and Althea Murphy as the city siren who disrupts the lives of both men.

Another highlight of the picture is the photography by Ernest Miller, who has skillfully captured the damp eeriness of the Florida swamplands. It is a Danches Brothers Production.

Love and Learn

Warner Bros.—Romance and Comedy

Under the title "Love and Learn" Warner Brothers is releasing another Jack Carson comedy in which the star is again given the opportunity to display his talents for gags. Whether he makes the most of the material at hand will depend for the most part on his popularity with particular audiences.

For the exhibitors who have found Jack Carson's name a drawing card, their audiences will enjoy the comedian's antics and egotistical comedy manner. For others it will just be light film fare which strives for, but never quite captures, the element of comedy. Much of the dialogue and many of the situations have been worn thin through long and frequent use.

Carson and Robert Hutton are an unsuccessful song writing team of Tin Pin Alley. A romance develops between Hutton and Martha Vickers, a wealthy debutante posing as a working girl who, unknown to the songsters, finances the publication of their material. A misunderstanding disrupts the romance, but eventually all ends well—financially and romantically.

Supporting these players are Janis Paige as the pretty young thing in love with Carson; Otto Kruger, the millionaire father of Miss Vickers, and Tom D'Andrea as the horseplaying music publisher.

Frederick de Cordova directed from a screenplay by Eugene Conrad, Francis Swann and I. A. L. Diamond. William Jacobs produced.

Backlash

20th Century-Fox-Wurtzel—Melodrama

People who like puzzles may be interested in solving this complicated murder-mystery, although it lacks motivation and conviction. There's much more talk than action, and since the characters are sketchily drawn, the average audience will find it difficult to become emotional over their problems.

The puzzle posed in Irving Elman's original screenplay stems from the finding by Los Angeles police of a car containing a dead body. Their first conclusion is that the dead man is an escaped convict, but further investigation discloses that he is not. The body, therefore, is assumed to be that of a criminal lawyer, owner of the car.

In their search for the killer, the police uncover certain pertinent facts. The lawyer's wife had previously attempted to poison him, and her friendship with the district attorney lays the latter open to suspicion as well. Just as the motive and the murderer seems definitely established, the lawyer himself turns up, alive and well. He kills his law partner, with whom he has had a financial disagreement, and is about to kill his wife as well, when the police break in and kill him.

In entertainment value, the picture is on a par with previous productions by Sol Wurtzel for 20th Century-Fox release. Eugene Forde directed a cast headed by Jean Rogers, Richard Travis and Larry Blake.

Queen of the Amazons

Screen Guild—Travelogue with Trimmings

Producer-director Edward Finney offers here an attraction fitted to the requirements of showmen who lithograph their lobbies and exploit their wares with catchline ad copy. It is an item in the adventure category, with Africa the principal scene, animals enough to gratify the youngsters in the Saturday audiences, and with imagination taking precedence over logic and plausibility at every turn. The principal names are Robert Lowery and Patricia Morison.

Roger Merton's screenplay combines a travelogue, a trip to the zoo, and a pulp-magazine plot. Deep in the heart of Africa, Miss Morison organizes a safari to search for her fiancé, missing many months. She finally locates him in the arms of the Queen of the Amazons, and the two girls settle their dispute in amicable fashion. Immediately thereafter, J. Edward Bromberg, whose talents are wasted in the role of a cook engaged for the safari, reveals that he has a corner on the local black market in ivory. Fearing betrayal, he sets out to kill the rest of the cast. Before he can accomplish his nefarious purpose, he gets it in the neck from one of the Amazons, a peroxide blonde skilled in the use of poisoned darts.

In a double ceremony the Amazon queen weds the man of her choice, and Miss Morison, as a consolation prize, gets Lowery, whom she had previously engaged as a guide.

REISSUE REVIEWS

THE SEA WOLF

(Warner Brothers)

Jack London's famous story of the sea which was brought to the screen by Warner Brothers in 1941 will be reissued April 26, 1947. When it was reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 29, 1941, William R. Weaver said: "As produced by Henry Blanke and directed by Michael Curtiz for executive producer Hal B. Wallis, the late Mr. London's tale of brutality on the high seas is tempered to today's understandings of what makes a bad man bad. As the man in question, 'Wolf Larsen,' Edward G. Robinson dominates the picture." Others in the cast include John Garfield, Ida Lupino, Gene Lockhart and Barry Fitzgerald.

Hal B. Wallis was executive producer, Henry Blanke, associate producer, and Michael Curtiz, director.

20th CENTURY-FOX LEADING WAY OF ALL COAST STUDIOS

by Alton Cook

"That studio has been maintaining a remarkably high quality of pictures, climaxed by the superb version of "The Late George Apley," now at the Music Hall with the Easter stage show. This is one of the greatest improvements Hollywood ever has worked in a popular novel. The picture is so good it conceivably could have a strong mellowing influence on the future writing of its novelist, J. P. Marquand.

"The other pictures in the TCF string are the three that have played the Roxy since the year began—"13 Rue Madeleine," "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" and "Boomerang!" *

* And the newest big one from 20th Century-Fox, now playing at the Roxy—"Carnival in Costa Rica."

FREEDOM of PRESS

THAT Luce Commission on the Freedom of the Press and its general report, including screen and radio, recorded in our news pages last week, has excitingly "put the cat among the pigeons"—at least so far as the newspapers are concerned. Radio and the motion picture are yet to be heard from.

The newspapers resent being lumped with screen and radio as part of "the press" by the peccatic license of the Commission. They also are more than annoyed by the over-all finding that the freedom of the press is alleged to be menaced only, or chiefly, from the inside by the alleged shortcomings of the press. Tedious examination by any number of journalists confirms your editor's finding last week that the strongest objection seemed to be that all the media were so effectively diligent in the service of the majorities. The Commission's position is that the papers, the screen and the radio ought to eschew the popular and devote time and space to the important. They have not explained who would pay for that, or just who would decide what might be the most important.

The newspaper attentions as they appeared early this week were marked by curious manifestations. Among the New York dailies the eccentric PM gave first news attention on the release date, but the editorial pages of the orthodox papers moved into the matter with strange variances. The Herald-Tribune held the report could not be shrugged off "as mere professorial whimsy".

Meanwhile, Mr. Wilbur S. Forrest, assistant editor of the Herald-Tribune, and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, writing "as an independent editor", however, in Editor & Publisher, sees the report as a left wing attack. "Certain left wing individuals and groups have long sought to weaken the American press, possibly with a view to eventual government regulation and control."

INCIDENTALLY, the publicity handling of the Commission's outgivings have also their special aspects. The story comes out piecemeal. Now it is reported that the first draft of the report signed by the Commission, headed by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, chancellor of Chicago University, was written by Mr. Archibald MacLeish. Also, it is from an advertisement for the report as published in book form that one discovers that the top name on a list of "Foreign Advisors" is Mr. John Grierson, that same who was having visa difficulties with the U. S. for a while.

Considerable attention is paid to the amateur standing of these pundits of the Commission, preponderantly professors and none of the thirteen of them practitioners in the media concerned.

Also in Editor & Publisher, Mr. Frank Tripp of the Gannett Newspapers has at the Commission, including a casual taunt about their admission that they did not engage in "elaborate research". Surely enough they did not. Their report limits Gannett papers to upstate New York, while in fact the chain extends into Illinois, New Jersey and Connecticut. A minor slip but not permissible to such exacting scholarship.

"The professors should have researched, just a little. . . . If the professors would rub elbows where the real 'press' wears out its sleeves, they would learn that the people know what they want; that run-of-mine folks who sustain the press don't want what the professors prescribe for them. But the report says that they should be given it regardless, 'the press' to pay the shot. . . ."

"Why not a commission to report on a Free University—or how do they get that way? . . . I'd also recommend a bit of research—$215,000 worth." That is Mr. Tripp's reference to the "grant" of $200,000 from Mr. Henry R. Luce's Time, Inc., and $15,000 from the University of Chicago's subsidiary or affiliate, the Encyclopedia Britannica, which financed the Commission.

Touching on the same note sounded by Mr. Forrest, Mr. Tripp remarks: "They (the public) will wonder why the professors ignore the fact that it is not the 'really dangerous' who most threaten America—that it is their dupes and coddlers of them in classroom and pink parlour assembled, shouting freedom for seditionists in the name of a broad new concept of 'one world'. One world—but whose?"

OVERSEAS REPORT

LARGE significances in the world of the motion picture and the fortunes of the American industry are involved in the financial perplexities of the international situation. A poignant discussion of some aspects of the situation was presented the other day by Mr. Kenneth Collins, who has newly come to a vice-presidency of Donahue & Coe, Inc., in New York, in a Rotary Club speech.

"The rest of the world has few or no dollars to buy our goods. Unless other countries can buy from us . . . they cannot become economically stable enough to warrant the investment of American capital abroad. But—and here is the nexus of the whole matter—unless we can export huge quantities of goods and capital, we will shortly be faced with a domestic crisis that will make 1929 and 1930 look like a period of unparalleled prosperity."

Of Britain Mr. Collins said: "The British Empire is in grave danger. . . . If the British Commonwealth should be liquidated, we would lose our best customer. . . ."

About Russia: "Russia, while incapable of waging another war in the foreseeable future, is bluffing us into thinking she can and is threatening our economic interests, everywhere."

Mr. Collins has just returned from nearly five years of living in Europe.

Spot of Bother

WITH A FORTITUDE characteristic of the English, Clifford G. Dickinson, Monogram representative for the United Kingdom, informed his home office: "We had our little spot of bother in Maidenhead." The airily dismissed bother amounted to the complete loss of his home in the Thames Valley flood at Maidenhead and the loss of the house of friends in which he stayed.

No Discrimination

THE STATE DEPARTMENT announced Tuesday that it was in receipt of a "conciliatory" note from the Swedish Government which promises that there "will be no discrimination against U. S. products" in the operation of its trade program. A Department spokesman said the note is still under study and that a further statement will be made. The U. S., on March 24, sent a vigorous protest to Sweden after that Government put into effect import restrictions "to maintain foreign excess reserves." At that time it was believed that severe quotas would be placed upon the importation of U. S. films.

BARBARA STANWYCK and her husband, Robert Taylor, made a personal appearance at the Empire theatre in London last Thursday for the premiere of Miss Stanwyck's and David Niven's "The Other Love" and drew crowds rivalling those that gathered for the recent Command Performance. Fans mobbed the Stanwyck automobile 300 feet away from the theatre and over-ran the police. Mr. Taylor had to be carried into the theatre by police. A shattering time was had by all. A mink-and-orchid audience, including the Speaker of the House of Commons, several Cabinet Ministers, 50 Members of Parliament, numerous Peers, 23 Ambassadors or diplomatic ministers, half London's stage and screen celebrities attended the premiere. "The Other Love" was produced by Enterprise and is being distributed abroad by MGM and in the U. S. and Canada by United Artists. Proceeds from the premiere were donated to the Lord Mayor's National Flood Disaster Fund.

Gift

IT MAY be that Britain, stricken these months by blizzards and floods, and reeling financially, spends too much money for things like American tobacco and American films, as some of her politicians contend. However, some of the money came back to Britain last week when the Motion Picture Association, in behalf of all American film companies, donated $20,000 to London's Lord Mayor Fund for victims of floods.

Music Bill

UNDER THE TERMS of a recently signed 18-month contract with the American Federation of Musicians, the newsreels in New York have each agreed to hire a 30-piece orchestra for six three-hour recording sessions during the 18-month period which will cost each newsreel company an estimated $7,110. The reels customarily use canned music from their libraries for scoring purposes which has made James C. Petrillo, AFM head, unhappy.

Place in the Sun

HOWARD DIETZ, president of the Sea of Grass Land Company, Inc., has gifted trade press representatives with an acre of land in Valencia County, New Mexico, 86 miles from Gallup. "The Santa Fe railroad," wrote Mr. Dietz in the cover letter to the warranty deed, "goes by your property—swiftly by and far away—and one of your problems will be water. The taxes for 1947 are all paid up and there are no strings attached, except, of course, should you strike oil or gold or other mineral, then, brother, will you see strings!"

This proviso, along with another which gives the Santa Fe the right to build tracks, water lines, roadways, ditches, flumes or aqueducts across the property, makes the acre worth several hundred dollars less than the space in which this article is printed—including the mention that Mr. Dietz is publicizing MGM's "The Sea of Grass."

The editors of the HERALD have started plans to erect on their acreage a home for retired press agents who used to take the press on junkets to distant places but who now buy the real estate and send it back to the press.

It was a big week. The day before the real estate deal, there arrived chocolate Easter eggs from Maurice Bergman of Universal-International. They have a picture called "The Egg and I."

Rank Schedule

J. ARTHUR RANK, owner of most of Britain's film industry, has arranged his schedule for his second visit to the United States, this May. According to Jock Lawrence, his publicity chief in New York, he, his wife, the Honorable Mrs. Rank, and John Davis, general manager of his interests, will arrive in New York May 7. The next day Mr. Rank will be guest speaker at the Motion Picture Association 25th anniversary dinner in the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. Friday noon, May 9, he will address the World Sunday School Association, at the Hotel Commodore. On May 19, he will talk to the Empire Club, Toronto, and on May 24, to the Canadian Club, Vancouver. He will then spend a vacation with his daughter, Mrs. Fred Packard, at Los Angeles, and with his grandchild, her newly arrived daughter. He will return to New York then, and to Great Britain on July 17. In the course of Mr. Rank's visit, there will be conferences with Nate Blumberg, Universal-International president; other executives of that company, and of Eagle-Lion; Robert Young, railroad empire builder and backer of Pathe Industries and PRC Pictures; and more whose names will cause the usual speculations.

Vulgar Films

UN-AMERICAN, vulgar and dishonorable. These adjectives were used in describing present-day features by Mrs. Eugene Meyers, wife of the owner of the Washington Post. Speaking before the California Association of Secondary School Administrators' convention, she declared: "The radio and film industries are anti-democratic because these superb techniques are being used for a progressive vulgarization of the public mind and for the debasing of the public morals at a moment when the salvation of democracy depends upon the strengthening of individual moral integrity. They are un-American in the contempt for the public and their lack of faith in the American people."

While she believes that "film had a creative, truly American flavor, in the early days," that is now "a thing of the past."

Henry's Million

"HENRY V" celebrated its first year in America April 3. United Artists, distributors for the J. Arthur Rank feature, announced that the picture had grossed more than $1,000,000 and had done so without being generally released and without being booked into first run houses. Bookings have been restricted to about 60 special engagements, often playing legitimate theatres on a two-a-day roadshow policy.

Accuses Russia

ERIC JOHNSTON, president of the Motion Picture Association, Tuesday night accused Soviet Russia of being the "chief culprit in undermining the United Nations."

In a talk before the United Nations Council of Philadelphia, Mr. Johnston said that Russia's post-war tactics raised the question of whether she really wants world order or world revolution. Two years of undermining and delaying tactics by Russia, he said, so weakened the U. N. that it was powerless to aid Greece and Turkey, leaving us no other course than the one we are taking. "Let's be frank about it," Mr. Johnston continued. "Our aim is two-fold: to stop Russian aggression and to help those nations help themselves."

THE CLOWN INTO BLUEBEARD; CHARLIE TILTS AGAIN

ON APRIL 11, at the Broadway theatre, New York, United Artists will introduce a new Charlie Chaplin picture, creating news of several kinds. The picture is a mutation of a 34-year-old tradition of the industry and the world. It is "Monsieur Verdoux", notably less than a year in the making and the first from the Chaplin works at Brea Avenue, Hollywood, since 1941. It will, as it does now in the plot appraisals, excite a new discussion about the art and/or philosophy of the world's senior comedian, the 58-year-old, much-publicized man who began in Keystone comedies back in 1913. For Charlie is no longer the sweet misfit who scrambled audience emotions in countless one- and two-reel comedies and then in "The Gold Rush", "The Kid", "City Lights" and "The Great Dictator".

Charlie, in fact, is no longer Charlie: his advertisements to the public announce him as "Charles Chaplin"; and there is a decorum in the campaign approved which serves as the obituary of the bumbling philanthropic wayfarer who tugged at the heart and bespoke the destiny of the masses by whom he was beloved.

In "Verdoux" he is a suave dandy of a killer, a Bluebeard, murdering women so he may support his family. "Murder can be comic," Charlie has said. "It also is tragic," he explains in a 15-minute epilogue—in which the comedian, as in "The Great Dictator", once more jousts with the world's evil. It was Fascism before; now it's the atom bomb.

DECREE OR NOT DECREE? THAT IS THE QUESTION

Legal Arguments on What Should Be Stayed Delay Signing of Court Order

by RAY LANNING

The industry was operating in a limbo this week with no decree to guide it.

A stay order which will postpone for the eight defendant companies all provisions of the New York District Court's decree affecting distribution, including competitive bidding, but excluding the prohibition of franchises, and which will stay the District Court's order to dissolve the Decree arbitration system, was agreed to Wednesday by company counsel and sent to Robert L. Wright, Government counsel. The joint stay order was to be presented for signature to Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed Friday morning at 10:30. Last Friday, March 28, during a Washington hearing, the Justice had informed counsel that he would sign such an order.

Agreement Reached Over Protest of 20th-Fox

Agreement was reached over the silent protest of 20th Century-Fox, which did not send its legal representative to Wednesday's New York meeting. However, since Justice Reed had said he wanted a single order representing all companies, the order reads as applying to all defendants.

But in a covering letter with the stay order the seven companies in agreement made clear to the Justice that they were not representing 20th-Fox.

That company, whose counsel, John Caskey, argued against the stays during the Washington hearings, is apparently free to protest its inclusion in the stay order. When counsel for that company failed to appear at Wednesday's meeting in the New York office of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland and Kiendl, counsel for Loew's, a call was put through to the home office and information given that the meeting was in process, but still no brief case delegate put in an appearance. The show went on.

Displeased with the New York Decree, the eight defendants had gone to Washington March 28 and after three hours of fast talking had been told by Justice Reed he would sign a stay order on all those provisions of the decree requested.

Counsel Told To Draw Single Stay Order

The lawyers were instructed to get together and decide on the wording of a single stay order embracing the requests of all eight companies. According to one of the lawyers, that order, but for trains some counsel had to catch, could have been written Friday in Washington. The Justice's signature could have been appended, the stay made law, and the April 1 deadline met.

Yet on April 2, one day after the distribution portions of the decree, with the exception of competitive bidding, were to go into effect, the company lawyers were still meeting in New York, still arguing over what was to be put into the stay order and what was to be kept out.

Decree Would Have Been Effective on April 1

Technically, the Decree should have been enforced April 1. The stay order was not law. Even though the Justice had decided for a stay, he had signed no order.

The entire industry, as if it were the victim of some ingenious April Fool's joke, was suspended in mid-air waiting for the lawyers, who had talked them into that uncomfortable position, to talk them down to earth again.

Columbia, Universal and United Artists were in agreement among themselves on the form the stay should take; the five major distributors were not — notably Twentieth Century-Fox.

The stay, in effect, puts the distribution end of the industry right back where it was in 1938 before the Department of Justice filed its anti-trust suit in July of that year. No stay was requested of the Decree's provisions affecting pools, leases, or theatre acquisition.

Perhaps most confused by the last minute arguments of the lawyers were the company sales chiefs, who did not know what they were going to do about the stay on competitive bidding, which was to have gone into effect on July 1. During the Washington meeting only Paramount, alone among the five majors, asked at first for a stay of competitive bidding.

Later, when it became apparent that Justice Reed would grant the competitive bidding stay requested by UA, Universal and Columbia, Loew's and Warners asked that competitive bidding stays also be granted their companies. RKO counsel was non-committal on the issue; 20th-Fox opposed it.

Bidding Stay Can Apply To All Defendants

However, the bidding stay can apply to all defendants. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO and 20th-Fox have conducted numerous bidding experiments recently; others, tentative experiments. Under the promised stay order, these experiments may be continued or discontinued.

The distribution injunctions, in addition to bidding, to be stayed by the Supreme Court are those which would have prohibited the distributors after April 1:

1. From granting any license in which minimum admissions to a theatre are fixed.

(Thus road shows will be permitted until the Supreme Court hears the appeal.)

2. From agreeing with each other or with any exhibitors or distributors to maintain a system of clearances.

3. From granting any clearance between theatres not in substantial competition.

4. From granting or enforcing any clearance against theatres in substantial competition with the theatre receiving the license for exhibition in excess of what is reasonably necessary to protect the licensee.

5. From making or furthering any formula deal or master agreement to which it is a party.

6. From performing or entering into any license in which the right to exhibit one feature is conditioned upon the licensee's taking one or more other features.

7. From arbitrarily refusing the demand of an exhibitor to license a feature to him for exhibition on a run selected by the exhibitor, instead of licensing it to another exhibitor for exhibition in his competing theatre on such run. (Lawyers for the five majors were arguing at mid-week whether they should place this provision of the Decree in their stay order.)

Additionally, the provision placing the burden of proving the legality of clearance upon the distributor is stayed.

All of these provisions were to become effective April 1. After the stay order is signed they can be ignored until the Supreme Court hears the appeals from the Decree—and the hearings may not begin until a year from now.

Appeal Date Depends on Printing of Documents

The exact date on which the appeal will be heard by the high court depends on how many of the records will have to be printed for the Supreme Court. Any record that any defendant wishes to submit has to be printed.

The consent decree arbitration system, which was to have been dissolved April 1 except for those tribunals considering cases, was given a new lease on life when Justice Reed informed counsel for the defendants that a stay would be granted on the New York Court order stating:

"The provisions of the existing Consent Decree are hereby declared to be of no further force or effect, except insofar as may be necessary to conclude arbitration proceedings now pending and to liquidate in an orderly manner the financial obligations of the defendants and the American Arbitration Association, incurred in the establishment of the consent decree arbitration system."

Just recently, as detailed elsewhere in this issue, there has been an unprecedented number of complaints filed with the AAA tribunals. The New York court had ruled that those offices which had cases in work could remain in operation after April 1.

Justice Department To Comment on Order

When Justice Reed asked the defense attorneys to get together on the proposed order to submit to him, he also specified that the Justice Department be allowed to comment on the order. The Justice Department opposed all stay requests. However, one attorney pointed out, even if the Department should submit further documents in the case, they would not change Justice Reed's order, the American Theatres Association, in conjunction with the Confederacy of Southern Associations and the Southern California Theatre Owners Association.

Louis D. Frohlich represented Columbia; Thomas Cooke, Universal; Edward C. and George Raftery, UA; Thurman Arnold, ATA and SCTOA, and Robert Barton was CSA counsel.

John Caskey, 20th-Fox counsel, opposed petitions for stays. John W. Davis, counsel for Loew's, argued for a stay of the order dissolving arbitration and later, with Joseph Proskauer, Warner counsel, asked that all stays granted be made applicable to their companies. Whitney North Seymour, Paramount, pleaded for stays of competitive bidding and other phases of the decree.

Bidding Experiments in Future Uncertain

The most immediate problem, and the touchiest, under the stay order, is the competitive bidding problem. The order, which Justice Reed told counsel he would sign, will stay bidding for all the defendants. Those companies which continue their bidding experiments will do so as a matter of choice.

Said one sales executive: If we abandon bidding now and have to resume it on order of the Supreme Court, the system will be just as strange to us then as it is now. If we continue with our experiments, we can familiarize ourselves with the procedure and be ready for a Supreme Court order.

It is believed that those companies which have conducted the most experiments in the past—20th-Fox, MGM, RKO—will continue in selected areas and that the other companies will probably not enter into competitive bidding until they have to. Paramount was the only major distributor to appeal the competitive bidding provisions of the decree. Warner Brothers has not, to date, made any experiments.

UNHEALTHY

Washington Bureau

It looks unhealthy to oppose the industry. Robert L. Wright, who argued the case for the Department of Justice in the trust suit hearing Friday before Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, went home with the flu immediately after. Philip Marcus, who took over for Mr. Wright Monday, went home at the end of the day with the flu.

Majors Obeying Pooling Order

The New York District Court's order forbidding pooling agreements and joint ownership of theatres between defendants in the anti-trust suit or between defendants and independents is being carried out, reports this week indicated. Requests for a stay on these orders were not made by the defendants.

A Paramount spokesman has announced that talks have begun on the termination of the three-way partnership at Buffalo between Paramount, Loew's and Vincent R. McFaul. Fourteen theatres in the Buffalo area are involved with Mr. McFaul holding a 14 per cent interest in the properties and the remaining 86 per cent split equally between Paramount and Loew's.

Paramount has dissolved its last pooling agreement.

Loew's has purchased from E. V. Richards his one-third interest in Loew's State theatre, New Orleans, and the company now owns that theatre 100 per cent, according to an announcement by J. R. Vogel.

Mr. Vogel has also announced that the Warner-Loew theatres pool in Pittsburgh, in existence for a number of years, was terminated March 31. Loew's will now operate the Penn and Ritz theatres there while Warner will have the Stanley and Warner theatres.

Under the terms of the December 31 decree, defendants in the New York anti-trust suit may not jointly own any theatres and in joint holdings with independents must own at least 95 per cent or five per cent or less of the properties. The defendants were given two years, or until January 1, 1949, to comply with the partial divestiture provisions. By July 1 of this year the companies must make a report concerning the extent of compliance and thereafter must make quarterly reports to the court.

17 Arbitration Complaints Filed In Eight Days

Seventeen complaints were filed in six tribunals of the American Arbitration Association during the eight-day period from March 24 to April 1, the day on which the Consent Decree arbitration system was to be dissolved.

This rain of complaints, exceeding all expectations, was caused by the last-minute decision of exhibitors to get in under the wire. Now, however, it is evident there was no need to hurry. The attorneys for the eight defendants in the New York anti-trust suit have been advised by Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed that he will sign a stay order on that portion of the New York District Court's decree abolishing the arbitration system. AAA officials Tuesday indicated they felt they were now at liberty to accept new cases until the Supreme Court rules on an appeal from the anti-trust suit. The AAA has not given up any of its office space or discharged any personnel.

The new cases included:

One in Los Angeles, the first in that tribunal since 1945, it was reported. Two in New York. Six in Cincinnati: one suit named 28 theatres in addition to distributors; another named 26 theatres.

There was one case filed in New Haven, four in Boston and three in Cleveland which, at the first of the week, had not yet reached AAA's New York office.

ON THE MARCH Rank's Contract

by RED KANN

With U-I Is Set For 21 Years

“EVERYTHING in a complete state of chassis” would be a representative cross-sectional description of the current state of mind among distributors in the light of U. S. Supreme Court Justice Reed’s willingness to stay major prohibitions of the New York consent decree until appeals are laid to permanent rest.

The situation seems clear.

Competitive bidding, scheduled to become mandatory July 1, no longer would be anything of the sort.

The restriction against minimum admission prices which persuaded producers and distributors into concluding roadshows were not possible would be a restriction no longer.

Conditioning the sale of one feature on the licensing of another, which distributors had been denied, is another indicated approach not applicable until the count is in.

The necessity for the distributor to prove the validity of clearance in the event an exhibitor rose in challenge would be held in abeyance along with other major phases of the decree.

But, if the situation as to the indicated facts seems clear enough, the procedure of the eight distributor-defendants is not. There are fine lines of demarcation involved. There are delicate judgments in the balance. The emerging policy or policies are so split-hair that no one can know all the answers. Indeed, no one advances such a claim.

Having launched competitive bidding, as some distributors have, an immediate question begging for clarification is what slant to pursue. Discontinue the practice which thus far has scratched the surface, or maintain it? If discontinued, those independents who are flexing their muscles because they have outbid a major circuit house won’t be happy. And they could even get belligerent. If continued, those major circuit theatres which normally play the product on first run will register beefs, pointing out they were satisfactory customers long before U. S. vs. Paramount, et al and why not again?

No producer or distributor will go to a roadshow policy if faced with legal restrictions on his price scale. In order to get around the condition thrown at him by the decree the producer, like Sam Goldwyn with “The Best Years of Our Lives,” has been closing four-wall deals making him the operator and, as such, free to set up his price structure at will. Boris Morros and Sam Dembow, Jr., faced the identical situation on “Carnegie Hall,” Neil F. Agnew on “Duel in the Sun” and Charlie Einfeld and Dave Loew on “Arch of Triumph.” Under the new status, the old order would be reinstated and, temporarily at least, relieve the producer from any legal repercussions which had confronted him earlier.

Presumably, the distributor who had to abandon blocks for individual sales would have restored to him the pro tem right to revert to the old method of four or five in a group which represented usual practice in the instances of the so-called “Big Five.” In the instance of the so-called “Little Three,” one interpretation already takes into account the possibility of a resumption of full season selling for the duration of Reed’s legal dispensation.

NOW, there is tempting indecision in all this. The indecision over immediate policy cannot be separated from speculation over what will be determined when the Supreme Court gets around to the appeals in about a year. While it is alluring to contemplate swinging back to selling methods developed through wide experience, no one can predict what the effect will be and to what extent the distributor-defendants may or may not be jeopardizing their positions.

At press time, the viewpoint was a decidedly divided affair. To illustrate: Two distributors unofficially maintained they would continue without change, stay or no stay. Their attitude was keyed to the long view which must incorporate the possibility that the Supreme Court will sustain the New York court. In a practical operational sense, these distributors’ current preference—subject to change even as this is read—is all for continuing competitive bidding for the experience which is in it so that, never having abandoned it, they will not be confronted with the need to start afresh sometime in 1948.

Of course, they are thinking of the advantages accruing through continued experimentation with the new and unprecedented selling system and the benefits over competitors who may determine to tread softly in the new direction.

It is worth reporting, as well, that a couple of major circuits, or their accredited representatives, have lost no time in sounding out one or more of the distributors who have been selling away to independents on competitive bids. The approach is what might have been expected. Roughly, this:

“We can do business again, for the time being anyway. Let’s get back to the old basis and forget this competitive bidding.”

There is no report on the distributors’ answer. Maybe that’s because they don’t know what to say.

A Savannah exhibitor is reported to have offered Metro a $5,000 guarantee for a week’s date on a feature and another $5,250 for 10 days in a tryout of competitive bidding. The offers were against 40 and 41 per cent of grosses which the distributor calculated were beyond the possibilities of both theatres.

This is the beginning, but it’s not the end.

J. Arthur Rank and Universal-International will live together for 21 years, at least. The contract, arrived at after long negotiations, says so. The completion of the document was announced Wednesday in New York by Robert Benjamin, president of the J. Arthur Rank Organization, taking care of Mr. Rank’s interests in this country.

Mr. Benjamin, an attorney, had been three weeks in London, conferring with Britain’s film magnate, along with Arthur Krim, president of Eagle-Lion Films, Mr. Rank’s American company; Joseph Seideman, U-I foreign sales executive; James Franey, president of United World, the U-I 16 mm distributing company; and Jock Lawrence, who handles Rank publicity.

Under the contract, Mr. Rank’s pictures will be distributed by U-I, and Mr. Rank’s General Film Distributors will continue releasing U-I product. In combination, both Mr. Rank and U-I will acquire theatres in the British Empire, on the Continent, and in this country and Latin America.

An “allocation committee,” comprised of representatives of Mr. Rank, Eagle-Lion, and Universal-International decides the pictures to go to each Company. U-I receives a minimum of 12 pictures; Eagle-Lion a minimum of five. There is no maximum.

The committees select pictures on a basis of quality for the American market. The ratio, numerically and in quality, represents a change, Mr. Benjamin noted, in that Eagle-Lion in no sense now receives Grade B pictures. The selection, he emphasized, is 17 pictures from 35 to 40 from the British industry, allowing rejection of films unsuitable. Mr. Rank, he added, under the contract, does not “force” release of particular pictures in the United States.

The exception to the allocation is provided by a prior agreement made with RKO Radio Pictures, Mr. Benjamin pointed out. RKO will distribute “So Well Remembered” in this country, and one other.

Another partnership, between Mr. Rank’s 16 mm interests and United World Pictures, the U-I 16 mm subsidiary, is being negotiated now in London, Mr. Benjamin said, by Ian Javal, representing Mr. Rank, and James Franey, UW president.

Universal Exploiters To Meet and Plan Campaigns

Maurice A. Bergman, Universal-International eastern advertising and publicity director, will hold a series of meetings with the company’s field exploitation representatives in New York April 10 to 12. During the three-day session the representatives will meet with home office executives to discuss forthcoming campaigns on Universal-International and J. Arthur Rank productions being released by Universal.

"Business Will Hold If Trade Works": Rodgers

"There is no reason in the world, if all branches of the industry do the job they are supposed to do, why business should not remain on the upgrade," William F. Rodgers, vice-president and general sales manager for MGM, declared at a luncheon Friday in New York.

Speaking to company executives and trade press representatives, Mr. Rodgers announced that MGM would decide on the job it was supposed to do at a New York meeting, beginning April 28, when division, district and branch managers and bookers will meet at the Hotel Astor to set the company's future sales policy. The meeting will continue for as long as it takes to discuss all problems.

Sees No Recession

"I do not share the opinion," Mr. Rodgers asserted, "that we are due for a serious recession. In fact, too much talk about business falling off is dangerous and can result in an artificial recession."

The sales chief expressed himself as certain that business can be maintained at its present high level by "an aggressive, all-industry effort to do a good job of making the public realize that motion pictures are their greatest amusement value."

Mr. Rodgers placed particular stress upon the need of reaching those segments of the public not regular theatre-goers and reported that MGM expects to expand and place new emphasis on its exhibitor and public relations department.

To implement this expansion and to re-employ returning veterans, MGM is reshuffling and realigning its sales organization.

Speaking on competitive bidding, before the stay was evident, Mr. Rodgers reported that MGM has been experimenting with bidding in aggravated situations and in situations where the company has been petitioned by theatre owners to start bidding. He estimated the number of those situations at about 50.

Too Early to Predict Results

"As far as we know," he stated, "those involved have been satisfied and, as a general rule, I believe engagements have been satisfactory. I doubt if the amount of money involved differs much from what we generally received out of the situations in dollars and cents. It is too early to predict just what the net results will be. However, when competitive bidding is formally put into effect, we will comply with each and every provision of the decree and carry them through to the letter."

Whether MGM will continue its bidding experiments, now that a stay is indicated, had not, by mid-week been decided, according to Mr. Rodgers.

The debentures were purchased by a group of insurance companies which hold Loew's outstanding debentures now.

REDS FAILED IN EFFORT TO TAKE STUDIOS: JOHNSTON

Tells House Unit Films Are Attacked by Communists; Is Against Purge

Washington Bureau

Sharply attacking American Communists as "foreign conspirators who owe their allegiance to Russia," Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, in testimony before the House Committee on un-American Activities last week, said that if they had set as their goal to capture Hollywood, they had "suffered an overwhelming defeat."

At the same time he rejected a suggestion from Representative John E. Rankin to the effect that subversive elements in the industry should be "purged" by saying: "I do not think that we are ready yet for concentration camps in America. A man has a right to make a living."

Cites Attacks by Reds On American Films

To support his statement that Communists were not in control of the film industry, Mr. Johnston cited the fact that American pictures are the object of bitter attacks by Communists all over the world. "The Communists hate and fear American motion pictures. It is their No. 1 hate," he said. Also he reminded the committee that there is an almost complete ban on U. S. films in most Communist-dominated countries. "This is so," he declared, "because American films give the lie by visual evidence to totalitarian propaganda. The old tale about the breakdown of capitalism in America becomes pretty flimsy stuff after people have had a chance to see our pictures and draw their own conclusions."

As an example, he cited the Franco-American film accord signed about a year ago. "Ever since that time French Communists have made bitter attacks against the agreement and they have waged a constant campaign of vituperation against American pictures," he said. "In countries behind the 'Iron Curtain' the Communists resist the showing of American films and use every possible bait to lure the people to houses showing Soviet films. They even offer free tickets and free transportation, but the bait is no good. The people want U. S. films."

Makes Specific Suggestion For Fighting Communism

Mr. Johnston had special praise for the work of the newsreels in presenting factual international programs to other nations and, in answer to questions, said the industry thought it wise to combat Communism by showing films which show the virtues of democracy and freedom.

He then made three specific suggestions

for combating Communism in the United States. First, he said, conspiratorial activities of Communists should be handled through the treason and sedition laws which should be strengthened if inadequate. Second, Communists should not be allowed to hold office in a corporation, a cooperative or a union where they are in a position to pursue their disruptive tactics and, third, Communists should be labeled as such.

Several times during his testimony, Mr. Johnston clashed with Rep. Rankin. Early this week, Mr. Rankin, who is the ranking minority member of the House Committee on un-American Activities, took the floor in the House to make a further comment on the MPA president's testimony. "Unless the people in control of the industry are willing to clean house of Communists," he said, "Congress will have to do it for them." He also charged that "many moving pictures that come out of Hollywood carry the Communist line."

In Hollywood, meanwhile, Fred Pelton, for the past eight years Hollywood labor relations executive of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, will leave his position in six months to engage in private enterprise. During that period he will instruct Charles F. Boren, his successor.

MPA Directors, Reelected, Study Foreign and Domestic Problems

Problems facing American motion pictures at home and abroad were discussed Monday when the board of directors of the Motion Picture Association met to hear the annual report of its president, Eric Johnston. All officers and directors of the organization were reelected at the meeting.

the dinner in New York May 8 when the MPA will celebrate its 25th anniversary and also will welcome J. Arthur Rank. The group further approved proposals to send stars to participate in the Brussels Film Festival June 15, as well as the Second Command Performance in London next November.

Principal Pictures notified the board of its resignation from the Association and a special membership meeting was decided on to pass on a proposal to increase to two the number of directors from each company. In his report Mr. Johnston made special mention of the constructive and cooperative attitude of Hollywood, especially in matters pertaining to the Production Code.

MPA officers elected by the board included Eric Johnston, president and chairman of the board; Joseph I. Breen, vice-president; Francis S. Harmon, vice-president; George Borthwick, secretary and treasurer; Sidney Schreiber, assistant secretary; Fred W. DuVall, assistant treasurer; James S. Howie, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Directors reelected were: Mr. Johnston, Barney Balaban, Nate J. Blumberg, Mr. Borthwick, Jack Cohn, Cecil B. DeMille, Ned E. Depinet, E. W. Hammons, E. B. Hatrick, Joseph H. Hazen, Hal E. Roach, Herman Robbins, Nicholas M. Schenck, Spyros P. Skouras and Albert Warner. The board voted a resolution of appreciation for the services of Carl E. Milliken, who is retiring as an officer of the Association.

Governor Milliken, who will be 70 next June, has been secretary for 21 years under its present name and when it was known as the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America. After serving three terms in the Maine Senate he was elected Governor and served two terms. He was appointed secretary of the MPPDA January 1, 1926. In 1935 he represented that organization at the London conferences on Production Code Administration service to European producers. During the difficult war years, he headed the MPA's International Division and did State Department liaison.

UNION BANS 16mm FILMS IN MEXICO

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

All 16mm films in Mexico have been shelved because of a ban by the National Cinematographic Industry Workers Union which is seeking, it is learned, to form a special section to handle such films. Warner Brothers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and RKO are affected.

The ban is stringent. The union forbids any of its members, even stenographers, to have anything to do with 16mm films. Owners of such films cannot even have their union stenographers write letters about these films.

The unpleasantness that John Huston, the director, and his staff of American players and technicians experienced at Tampico, where they were filming scenes for "The Treasures of the Sierra Madre," has had a happy ending. Almost mobbed during the filming because the Mexican players felt they were being portrayed in an unfavorable light, Mr. Huston has had his disputed scenes, and his entire picture, approved by the country's censors.

"Deception" had its Mexican premiere at the opening of the Trans-Lux Prado on April 2 here. The theatre, a feature of the new de luxe Hotel Prado, seats 950.

The Ministry of Public Education has guaranteed the continuance of the Academy of Cinematographic Art and Technique, Mexico's counterpart of the Hollywood Academy.

Because many stars are accepting lower wages than those offered in the past, production costs have dropped somewhat here and producers have expressed themselves as pleased with the 1947 production outlook.

Because of raw stock shortages, Italy has decided to allow the free importation of raw stock. However, the importation must be handled without any transfer of currency. Credits will be given to the importing companies. Permission for such raw stock imports must be obtained from the Ministry of Foreign Trade.

June 1-8 a meeting of all those interested in the educational film will be held in Milan. Housing, agriculture, the arts, hygiene, history and geography will be discussed in relation to films. From May 24 to June 21 an exhibit of pre-fabricated theatres and of motion picture equipment will be held in Milan. American companies have been invited to exhibit theatres and 16mm equipment. The Motion Picture Service of the Cabinet Council has promised to give all aid to those wishing to import pre-fabricated theatres and equipment.

The three box office champions of 1946 were all American pictures. They were: "Mrs. Miniver," a run of 194 days; "Two Faced Woman," 192 days, and "Suez," 161 days.

The following board of directors has been appointed for Cinecitta, the most important studio in Italy: Libero Solaroli, Alfredo Messineo, Enrico Franceschi, Gino Raffo and Renato Gualino, a producer of the Lux Film Company. Government capital is back of the company.

It is reported that the Government will grant 300,000,000 lire, about $1,300,000, to ENIC, the largest Italian circuit, and 200,000,000 lire, $888,000, to the Istituto Luce Nuova. The Government owns shares in both companies. Eitel Monaco has been appointed to the board of directors of ENIC.

SPAIN

Permission for the dubbing of foreign pictures to be shown in Spain will be granted only to those persons or companies producing native feature films approved by the High Committee for the Motion Picture Industry and meeting certain technical and artistic standards, according to a bill recently published by the official journal of the government.

HUNGARY

by ALEXANDER FODOR
in Budapest

About a year ago exhibitors in Hungary were looking to Hollywood with the devotion of a Mohammedan toward Mecca. They could hardly control their impatience waiting for barriers to be lifted and new American films to pour in, opening a new era of brisk business. When the new films arrived, however, this big business did not come up to expectancy. While in former times four- to five-week runs were normal, nowadays a two- to three-week run must be considered good.

One of the most important reasons for this slackening of interest in films is the economic situation. Living conditions are deplorably below former standards. People have to economize and the amusement industries suffer as a result, although the motion picture houses are doing better than the legitimate houses.

It is agreed the Budapest office of the Motion Picture Export Association is doing a good job. In the first three months of its existence, 20 films were released, several proving hits: "How Green Was My Valley," "Cover Girl," "Mrs. Miniver." MPEA's position has been greatly fortified since, at the beginning of March, MGM began operating within the framework of the MPEA.

Recently important initiative steps were taken towards film production here. The Government decided to use a significant portion of the 12 per cent "public institutions endowment fee" collected from exhibitors to subsidize local production. It is expected that five or six films can be thus financed.

CHILE

by MARIA ROMERO
in Santiago

Chile Films, the country's most important film enterprise, has gone bankrupt. The studio, in existence three years, managed to survive, in spite of gradually increasing losses, because it was backed by the Corporacion de Fomento de la Produccion, CORFO, a Governmental department.

In addition to being the largest shareholder in the company, the CORFO is also the largest creditor. In January an attempt was made to reorganize the company, but at that time the balance sheet showed a loss of 13,000,000 Chilean pesos. Chile Films produced only nine pictures. CORFO will assume ownership of the studios and reopen them under a new name and will look for new private capital.

Independent Chilean producers are trying to keep the industry going. A new enterprise, Artistas Chilenos Asociados, has announced it will begin making pictures in April. Its first film will be "El ultimo concierto." Araucania, another new independent producing firm, has finished making "Si mis campos hablaran."

The Direccion de Informaciones y Cultura is studying dubbed pictures and may abolish all dubbing, which is considered to be badly translated. MGM is the only distributor releasing only dubbed productions.

Yates Optimistic To Stockholders

Republic is headed for the biggest year in its history, Herbert J. Yates, president, told stockholders at the company's annual meeting Tuesday at the home office in New York.

To support his optimism Mr. Yates pointed to such forthcoming productions as the big-budget Technicolor picture "I've Always Loved You," produced and directed by Frank Borzage; "That's My Man," Mr. Borzage's second for Republic; "End of the Rainbow," starring Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey, and the Roy Rogers outdoor musicals in Trucolor.

Mr. Yates presided at the meeting, at which five members of the board were elected. Walter L. Titus, Jr., and Arthur J. Miller were reelected, while Samuel Becker, Harry M. Goetz and Harry C. Mills were confirmed as directors.

At the board meeting the current officers were reelected: Mr. Yates, president; James R. Grainger, executive vice-president; Mr. Titus, Edward L. Walton, John J. O'Connell, Mr. Miller, vice-presidents; John Petruska, Jr., treasurer; Richard S. Rodgers, Robert V. Newman, Nathan K. Loder, assistant treasurers; Joseph E. McMahon, secretary, and Albert E. Schiller, Ira M. Johnson and Mr. Newman, assistant secretaries.

U-I, GFD Conduct Sales Conference in London

Universal-International and General Film Distributors, which distributes U-I product in Great Britain and Ireland, met last week for sales conferences at the Dorchester Hotel, in London. E. T. Carr, co-managing director of GFD, presided, while Joseph H. Seidelman, president of Universal-International, was the principal speaker. Present at the conference were GFD's co-managing director John Woolf and Al Daff, vice-president of U-I, the executives and managers of GFD branches from all over the United Kingdom; Harold Sugarman, foreign manager of Universal's 16mm division, and Fortunat Baronat, U-I director for publicity.

Warners' 13-Week Sales Drive Begins April 27

Warner Brothers will hold a 13-week sales drive April 27 to July 26 to celebrate the end of the 20th year of talking pictures, it has been announced by Ben Kalmenson, vice-president and general sales manager. A series of regional meetings will be conducted by division sales managers. The Canadian exchanges will participate.

MGM Gets Capra Picture

Frank Capra will both produce and direct Liberty Films Production's screen adaptation of the play, "State of the Union." Under the terms of an agreement completed last weekend the film will be made for MGM at its studio, and will star Spencer Tracy.

A LOT OF SHOWMANSHIP

president of the two companies, a man who began in the early 20's, and who has merely 27 years of experience, and Joe Fieldman, who goes back to 1908, who has been with Universal, MGM and other majors, and who now is Florida and south Georgia zone manager.

Considering the hours put in by a motion picture man, perhaps the experience record should read 216 years, Mr. Mangham believes. The working day in our business isn't eight hours; it's usually 12 to 20 hours a day and sometimes more, he says.

Jackson Park in Fight on Majors

Chicago Bureau

Filing a reply brief with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago Monday, the Jackson Park theatre accused the distributors, Balaban & Katz and the Warner circuit of trying to postpone an adverse decision by submitting an innocuous decree of their own.

Thomas C. McConnell, Jackson Park attorney, in his brief said: "The defendants, having lost their case on the merits, have sought to weaken and make innocuous the relief to be afforded by various proposals of their own which, if entered, will serve as escape clauses from any effective enforcement of the injunction and will compel the plaintiffs to re-litigate the cause in order to enforce the decree."

Mr. McConnell further contended that Judge Michael L. Igoe's District Court had properly rejected the proposal of the defendants and "we submit that this United States Circuit Court of Appeal cannot do otherwise without in effect nullifying the plaintiff's proven and established rights."

The defendants have until April 11 in which to file final rebuttal briefs. It is expected that the Circuit Court of Appeals will hear the Jackson Park case this month.

Duals to Remain, Says Wurtzel

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Sol Wurtzel

If you'd made 1,000 feature pictures over a period of 30 years, and were setting out to double both of those statistics, would you feel qualified to do some forecasting about the future of the business? Well, Sol Wurtzel makes no such claims to clairvoyance, but he does answer questions, and the answers run about as follows.

"The companies that have been saying they'll only make 18 or 20 pictures this year are going to find themselves making a good many more than that before the year is out. It was a wonderful thing to turn out a small number of multi-million dollar pictures, each of which would run six or eight weeks, standing alone on a bill, but they're not running that long now—save for a few exceptions—and they're not standing alone as well as they did a while back. The Hollywood Paramount, for instance, recently went to a double bill policy, and similar things are happening all over the country. This is creating a renewed demand for the kind of pictures I make—the better class 'B' picture—and you can put it down that the double bill is here to stay."

Turning to the Hollywood aspect of the matter, he says, "The high cost of production is a factor that cannot be ignored when, as now, box office grosses begin to level off. It's a grand thing to put $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 into a picture and watch the public snap it up, but that happens only in lush times. In the period ahead there will have to be a curtailing of that kind of cost, accompanied by the addition of a good 'B' picture to a program featuring a good 'A' picture. That is what I expect to see happen."

Sees No Censorship Rise

Among the things he does not expect to see happen, significantly just now in view of reports to the contrary recently given extensive reportorial coverage, is a rise of censorship activity throughout the land. "We have never had censorship trouble with our pictures," he said, "although we handle most of the types of material that begets censorship when it's handled improperly. We find that most of the people, both in this country and abroad, want action stories, presented with production class, much more than they want social problems, mental studies and clinical expositions. When we need to deal with things like that, we find it can be done satisfactorily, from all points of view, by exercising intelligence, observing the tenets of good taste, and by hard work."

The Wurtzel opinions are based on three decades of production experience, and in that period he produced 1,000 features, not counting the six or eight Spanish-language features he used to turn out annually for the old Fox Film Corporation.

Not a talkative man, Sol Wurtzel has precisely and totally this to say about his career: "I hope I do as well for the next 30 years."

De Havilland to Go Insane Again for "Snake Pit"

Olivia De Havilland, who won the Academy Award for her performance in Paramount's "To Each His Own," has been assigned the leading role in Twentieth Century-Fox's production of "The Snake Pit," the company announced Monday. Miss De Havilland, who recently played twin sisters in "Dark Mirror," one of whom was an insane murderess, will be asked to go insane again since "The Snake Pit" deals with a woman's experiences in a mental hospital.

Talent Played 1,784 Patriotic Shows in 1946

A total of 659 different Hollywood artists contributed their services for 1,784 appearances in 717 patriotic and charitable events during 1946 through the Hollywood Coordinating Committee, Motion Picture Association headquarters in Washington has reported. The Coordinating Committee replaced the Hollywood Victory Committee, formed three days after Pearl Harbor.

The Committee coordinated activities of studios, Screen Guild, radio networks and other industry groups to make possible the free appearance of the stars at Army facilities and veteran hospitals.

During 1945 the Victory Committee arranged a total of 56,037 free appearances of stars in 7,700 events for entertainment and information of armed forces personnel and charitable institutions. President of the Committee is George Murphy. It works as a related component of the MPA.

Film Publishers Releasing Atomic Control Subject

With Russia demanding release of all atomic information and the United States withholding this data until world peace can be established, Film Publishers, Inc., of New York, in cooperation with the National Committee on Atomic Information, has produced a nine-minute subject entitled "One World or None." Narrated by Raymond Swing, the film urges international control of atomic energy and has news shots of the damage done to Hiroshima; scenes of the atomic bomb test at Bikini, and animated drawings of what such an explosion would do to cities in the United States. It will be released to theatres this month.

Midwest Group Urged to Fight Tax Legislation

Legislation, taxation and general exhibitor problems were discussed at the eight regional meetings of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association held March 10 through 27. Five of the meetings were held in Kansas and three in western Missouri. Homer Strowig, association president, presided.

Prime subject discussed was that of legislation involving taxation. It was also urged at all of the meetings that exhibitors take a greater interest in civic and community affairs in combating unfair and discriminatory legislation.

In the general discussions of legislative problems it was brought out that no laws are pending before the Kansas legislature which will affect theatres. However, there are several before the Missouri legislature. One Missouri measure under consideration is the soldier bonus bill which would get part of its revenue from a five per cent tax on admissions. Another would require a uniformed fireman to be on duty in every Missouri theatre of less than 1,000 seats.

At the regional meetings in Missouri exhibitors were made familiar with these measures and were provided with arguments to refute proposals now being considered and ways of combating discriminatory taxes generally.

The meetings also attacked the use of local checkers; the prevalence of murder and mystery pictures which are causing parents to keep children away from theatres, and trade practices.

Warner Theatres Cancel All Universal Releases

All Universal product, including current and scheduled releases, has been cancelled out of all Warner theatres, it has been disclosed in New York by John J. O'Connor, vice-president of Universal-International. Mr. O'Connor attributed the action by Warners to a dispute revolving around Universal's signing of former Warner writer-director Robert Buckner upon the expiration of his contract with Warner Brothers.

St. Louis Abandons Permit System for Stagehands

The system of issuing permit cards in order to put men to work as union stagehands has been discontinued in St. Louis on orders of the international union. The system was once exploited by John P. Nick, former head of the Theatrical Brotherhood, Local No. 6, who issued cards to his associates whose presence at union headquarters had the effect of intimidating his opponents. Frank Stickling, international representative, ordered the system stopped last week and admitted 33 men holding permit cards as full-fledged members of the union.

Form New Allied Unit At Denver Meeting

Following a two-day meeting of more than 60 exhibitors from seven Rocky Mountain area states at Denver, the Allied Rocky Mountain Independent Theatres was organized last week. The meeting, which was in the form of an open forum, first heard several Allied leaders, including Sidney Samuelson, general manager of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania; Col. A. H. Cole, president, Allied of Texas and regional vice-president, and Trueman T. Rembusch, president, Allied of Indiana. Temporary officers elected at the meeting are: John Wolfberg, Denver, president, and Joe Ashby, treasurer. Board members are: Fred Lind, Colorado; Carl Garretson and Ralph Means, New Mexico; Tom Knight and Lloyd Kerby, Wyoming, and Robert Sjahn, Nebraska. The meeting discussed distributor practices.

Gold Named Head of Group Aiming to Fight Taxes

George Gold of Newark has been elected head of the Federation of New Jersey Theatres, a new organization of theatre associations, circuits and other exhibitor groups, formed to fight sales tax legislation. Among the group's immediate objectives is a bill which would authorize municipalities to levy admission taxes. Plans are afoot to launch a campaign to acquaint theatre patrons and the general public with the need for combating sales tax legislation. The Federation was first urged by Allied of New Jersey and is backed by Atlantic Theatres, Fabian, Loew's, Hunt Theatres, the Independent Theatre Owners Association, Paramount, RKO, Read Theatres, Warners, and others.

Mrs. Parker, Hostess

The 35th anniversary of the Camp Fire Girls Organization was the occasion for a special celebration last Saturday when Mrs. J. J. Parker, president of Parker Theatres, played host to the Portland Council of Camp Fire Girls at a party at the circuit's Broadway theatre in Portland, Ore.

Ascap Fee Rise Plan Opposed

Following the announcement that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was studying plans for an upward adjustment in theatre fees, exhibitors and representatives of exhibitor groups have suggested that ASCAP draw its motion picture performing rights revenue from film producers. This was revealed by John G. Paine, ASCAP general manager, at the organization's annual meeting at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York last Thursday.

Lester Santley, chairman of the executive committee, reiterated Mr. Paine's previously published remarks that the present rate structure was inaugurated in the midst of the depression era, 1933, and has yet to be altered.

ASCAP's gross income for the past year came to $9,000,000, up about $600,000 from 1945, Deems Taylor, president, reported, and said the organization now has a membership of 2,151 writers and publishers.

In Seattle exhibitors mapped plans to fight efforts by ASCAP to collect license fees on film music. Following a declaratory judgment by Judge Wright in the state court in Olympia last month, in a proceeding initiated by ASCAP, the organization has begun to set up machinery for a check of unlicensed theatres and other amusement places which play music controlled by ASCAP members.

Bergman Announces Changes

Several changes have been announced on the publicity staff of Maurice A. Bergman, Universal-International eastern advertising and publicity director. Jeff Livingston, formerly with the J. Arthur Rank Organization, has joined the general publicity staff with special assignments in syndicates and news wire services, replacing Ralph Ober, who is a field exploiter. David Susskind of the general publicity staff has resigned to join Century Artists, Ltd.

ALBANY

Exhibitors in Albany, Troy and elsewhere will be glad when Lent is ended. They think it may have been a contributing cause to the recent dip in business. Some sources estimate that half of the gain in theatre patronage during the war has been lost in the last 18 months in this district. Big pictures go well, but average films and stiffs draw poorly. Most of the present patronage is on opening days and over the weekend. . . . Among the exhibitors who recently have booked in Albany exchanges are: Julius Perlmutter, of the Rivoli in Schenectady; John Gardner, of the Colony in Schenectady; Dave Rosenbaum, theatres in Elizabethtown, Keeseville and Ausable Forks; George Thornton, the Orpheum in Saugerties; Walter Wertime, Sr., the Chester in Chestertown; Dave Willig, the Auto-Vision in East Greenbush; Clarence Dop, the Strand in Johnstown and the Hollywood in Frankfort. . . . Tri-State Company appointed Hubert Schenek manager in the Albany district. He will take the place of Joseph Grand, who is to give full time to the management of the Eagle theatre in this city.

David Tidmore, owner of the local theatre in Moundville, Ala., is having improvements made in the theatre and will soon enlarge and increase seating capacity to 250 seats.

BALTIMORE

Considering that the week beginning March 22 is one of the worst in the year for business, the attendance in Baltimore, generally speaking, is holding up very well. Three theatres decided to hold for second week, including Little, with "It Happened at the Inn"; Mayfair, with "Abie's Irish Rose," and the Town, with "The Best Years of Our Lives." Stanley had big opening with "Beast With Five Fingers," New got off big with "Carnival in Costa Rica." Times and Roslyn only fair with "The Pilgrim Lady" and "Her Highness and the Bellboy." New openings in town were "Johnny O'Clock" at Warners' Earle; "Framed" at Warners' Metropolitan; "Swell Guy" at Loew's Capitol; and a carry-over "Boomerang" at Loew's Columbia. . . . Kogod-Burka's Apex theatre went on the air over station WMAL with the Carpel Crazy Kwiz Show being broadcast from the stage. . . . Pope Cites St. Benedict as Guide for World; Encyclical Urges Rebuilding Cassino Abbey

By CAMILLE M. CIANFARRA

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, March 20—Pope Pius XII issued today an encyclical which will be known as "Fulgens Radiatur" ("Brilliantly Shines")—in which he urged the peoples of the Christian world to pattern their lives upon the principles of religion. Without its norms of conduct, he said, human society will collapse.

Likening the present times to those of the sixth century when the civilization of Rome was being engulfed by the darkness of the Middle Ages, the Pope wrote a 10,000-word document to commemorate the fourteenth centenary of the life and work of St. Benedict.

St. Benedict's outstanding contribution, Pius went on, was the keeping alive of the flame of religion and culture as "a star in the darkness of night."

St. Benedict of Nursia was founder of the Benedictine Order and established the Abbey of Monte Cassino. He is recorded as having died March 21, 547.

All classes of society, the Pope stated, would find inspiration and comfort in studying the saint's life, because "our age, troubled and anxious over the vast material and moral ruins, perils and losses that have been heaped up, can borrow from him needed remedies."

"Before all," he continued, "let them remember that the sacred principles of religion and its norms of conduct are the safest and soundest foundations of human society; if they are disregarded and compromised, everything that promotes order, peace and prosperity among men and nations is a necessary consequence lapses."

Religion, the Pope said, is the order and harmony of nations. Without it, there will be chaos, internecine strife and lack of progress.

Today's encyclical, Pius said, is for the rebuilding of the world which was shattered during the war.

The religious life, he said, was "historically the most powerful factor in the birth of nations."

The church emerged through the hostile time and circumstances of their ruins and destruction.

He asserted, "she has given us a new, healthy life, a new, healthy Christian doctrine, a new, healthy build and a new, healthy citizenship, people."

Millions of people in the U.S., Canada and Latin America read this syndicated story, honoring the Fourteenth Centenary of the life and work of St. Benedict.

Precision Net in Year $1,742,694

General Precision Equipment Corporation reported this week consolidated net profit of $1,742,694 for the year ended December 31, 1946. The net was equivalent to $2.90 a share on the 601,087 shares outstanding at the end of the year as compared with $1,390,954 or $2.31 per share on the same number of shares in 1945. Consolidated net sales for the year amounted to $23,261,996, compared with $25,484,122 in 1945.

The report says the net was arrived at after estimated Federal income taxes but before credit for special items in the net amount of $340,256. Special items consist of the book profit of $890,301 realized on the sale of 39,600 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation common stock sold during the year at an average price of $49.50 per share, less the write-off of $550,045 representing the excess cost of investment in subsidiaries acquired in 1944 over their applicable book value at acquisition.

In a letter to stockholders, Earle G. Hines, president, said that the manufacturing activities of various subsidiaries were adversely affected by labor disturbances and a consequent shortage of certain materials.

The committee includes Arthur M. Van Dyke, of Chicago, national president of the Film Salesmen's Union; N. Provencher, Milwaukee, national executive secretary, and M. F. Astor Pictures Resigns From MPA Title Bureau

Astor Pictures has resigned from the Title Registration Bureau of the Motion Picture Association. As did Eagle-Lion, Astor complained that the titles registered by the large companies were so numerous that those filed by the independents inevitably conflicted. Astor Pictures is not an MPA member company and the title service was rendered it gratis, as it is to all companies outside the Association. According to Margaret Young, head of the title bureau, both Eagle-Lion and Astor Pictures had only been members of the title section for a few months. During that time Astor registered nine titles, with two resultant protests. Eagle-Lion registered two, and had one protest.

Metropolitan Playhouses Suit Against Hanover Dismissed

The suit for accounting of funds by Metropolitan Playhouses against the Hanover Bank and Trust Company was dismissed last week in New York Supreme Court. Judge Lloyd Church said the complaint as drawn challenged the validity of rights conferred upon the bank by a 1935 Federal Court decree of reorganization under the Bankruptcy Act.

De Rochemont - UW Project In Discussion Stage

Negotiations between United World, the 16mm non-theatrical subsidiary of Universal Pictures, and producer Louis de Rochemont, for the production of a series of short color subjects on world geography are going on, but, contrary to published reports, the deal has not been signed and is still in the discussion stage. It is understood that it would involve 86 shorts over a two-year period.

The company is said to be ready to support the project with a $3,200,000 budget. The first batch of films would vary in length from two to three reels, and would be divided into series of 12, designed for use by students in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades of elementary schools. They would be ready for use during the school term beginning September, 1948.

Scripts for the shorts are now being outlined by Dr. Wallace W. Atwood, president emeritus of Clark University, and his staff. In these educational color subjects, Mr. de Rochemont would attempt to combine the presentation of factual material with cinematic values.

PCCITO Asks Executives To Attend Convention

Executives of the industry have been invited to the national convention of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners to be held at the Ambassador Hotel in Hollywood May 6-8. Besides the sales heads of all distributing companies, those invited include Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association; Donald Nelson, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers; Jack Kirsch, president of Allied States; Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied; Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Herman Levy, general counsel of MPTOA.

McCullough at Fire Conference

John B. McCullough, acting director of the Conservation Department of the Motion Picture Association, has been designated as a member of the Committee on Organized Public Support in the President's Conference on Fire Prevention by Eric Johnston, MPA president. The Conference has been formed to arouse the nation to the high fire losses, which amounted to $64,000,000 in February of 1947 alone. The meeting, under the chairmanship of Major General Philip B. Fleming, got under way in Washington April 1.

Bell & Howell Net Sales $10,387,699

The Bell & Howell Company, Chicago, announced net sales for the year 1946 of $10,387,699, in its annual report released this week to stockholders. Although this figure represents an 85 per cent increase over the last pre-war year of 1941, according to J. H. McNabb, president, desired production schedules were not attained during the first nine months of the year because of material and labor shortages and restrictive price ceilings. Strikes in some of the company's major suppliers' plants also restricted output.

After application of Federal tax carryovers, Bell & Howell's net profit for the year amounted to $422,945, representing earnings of 69 cents per share on common stock outstanding. Regular dividends on the common stock were paid for the 32nd consecutive year.

The annual meeting of stockholders will be held at the company's executive offices in Chicago April 16.

Legion of Decency Reviews Nine New Productions

The National Legion of Decency reviewed nine new productions this week, approving all but three. In Class A-I, unobjectionable for general patronage, were: "Citizen Saint," "King of Wild Horses," "Range Beyond the Blue" and "Seven Were Saved." In Class A-II, unobjectionable for adults, were: "The Guilty" and "Lady Chaser." In Class B, objectionable in part, were: "Fall Guy," the first picture to be made under that amendment to the Production Code which permits traffic in drugs to be pictured, because "presentation of illicit drug traffic tends to cause morally harmful social effects"; "Carnival in Costa Rica," because it "presents an incorrect concept of Catholic teaching concerning the effects of the civil ceremony of marriage"; and "Time Out of Mind," because it "reflects the acceptability of divorce."

First of Pagnol Trilogy Films Arrives in U. S.

The other two films in the trilogy are "Fanny" and "Cesar." All have been cut from three hours running time to two and a half. "Marius" was directed by Sir Alexander Korda. The trilogy will be released in three different houses in October.

Maas to Berlin to Discuss MPEA Activity in Germany

Irving Maas, vice-president and general manager of the Motion Picture Export Association, flew to Berlin unexpectedly Monday to discuss the transfer of film distribution in Germany from Army to MPEA hands. Other matters, including some stemming from the recent merger of the U. S. and British occupation zones, also will be discussed.

Representing MPEA and the American motion picture industry at the conferences, besides Mr. Maas, will be Joseph H. Seidelman, president of Universal International; Wladimir Lissim, European general manager for RKO; Fay W. Allport, European manager for the Motion Picture Association, and Robert E. Vining, MPEA representative in Germany. Other international executives of MPEA member companies also may attend. Representing the Army will be Brigadier General Robert A. McClure, director of Information Control, and, later, British army officers.

Discussions are expected to center on the transfer of control over distribution, which may be executed much earlier than expected. A change of this nature already has taken place in Austria, where the Army now retains only the right to exercise censorship. While in Europe, Mr. Maas will visit MPEA offices in Amsterdam, Prague and Vienna, and may tour the Balkans.

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount and chairman of the temporary steering committee of the Motion Picture Foundation, Wednesday announced that preliminary meetings and conferences had been held in more than two-thirds of the exchange areas for the purpose of setting up organized meetings in each exchange area.

At the same time he said he had received communications from a number of other exchange areas pledging full cooperation and promising to hold organizing meetings as soon as details could be arranged. He urged that such meetings be held in every area so that national trustees might be elected in time to hold the first meeting of the board of trustees in May.

In accordance with the plan of organization of the Foundation, representatives of every phase of the industry are to meet in each exchange area to elect an exchange area committee and a national trustee.

The following organizing meetings have already been called: April 14, Charlotte, H. F. Set French Premiere of "Madame Curie"

The French premiere of MGM's "Madame Curie," starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, has been set for the Paris Opera for the near future, according to a spokesman for Loew's International in New York. The print to be used will be dubbed into French. This will mark the first time that the synchronized version of a film will have played the Opera. The decision to break with tradition was taken by the directors of the Opera themselves after attending a screening of both the English-speaking and the dubbed prints. It is understood that negotiations now are going on with a view to having the opening of Enterprise Productions' "Arch of Triumph" also at the Paris Opera. European distribution and publicity plans for the film are being worked out.

FROM READER

SUGGESTS NEW PLAN ON PERCENTAGE PICTURES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Now that the Decree has been handed down to the great benefit of the Producers and Distributors, and who are still not satisfied, witness their appeals, I, a small Exhibitor, have this to say:

Percentage pictures seem to be on the increase, which is bad for us. And 50 per cent pictures are no longer a rarity. They should be outlawed. I for one never buy them and never run them later when the price is down. Not that I object to the pictures, but no man can remain in business paying 50 per cent for pictures. He is only fooling himself on the grosses.

So why not use this plan if percentage pictures must be made and sold.

Pay the usual percentage the first day on the gross, then on subsequent days let the exhibitor deduct his operating expense, which includes his overhead and split the difference with the distributor. The exhibitor would pay for the shorts and other detail that makes up the show.

While in some competitive situations auction will react favorably to the exhibitor who has been outside the distributors' favors, still auction bidding is bound to increase the revenue to the producer and I am afraid will also cause the distributor to act unfavorably towards the small town exhibitor, as he will not need him quite so badly.

This has seemed more evident to me in the attitude that has been taken against us on local checkers. As one manager expressed himself to me: "Once you sign that contract, we can do anything we damn please about you." That does not look so good as we have a justifiable claim that local checkers talk too much to people who know too much.

In other words, if a Sunday-Monday run and the exhibitor has a $300 gross on Sunday, pay the percentage on that figure. Then on Monday, if he has an expense of $75 per day, deduct that from the gross and if the revenue for that day is $100 give the distributor $12.50 which, after all, is all that he is entitled to.

As an exhibitor, I would be glad to have any company go over my books and set my overhead and then work on the above plan. That way we little fellows would not be worrying over a letdown in business during the balance of the week.

This has many ramifications, but I believe it is practicable and workable.—W. H. LUTHIE, Charkarohen Theatre, N. Woodstock, N. H.

Antwerp House for Metro

MGM's new 2,500-seat Antwerp house, the Metro, will have a gala reopening April 11, according to Morton A. Spring, first vice-president of Loew's International Corporation. The theatre was damaged by bombing during the war and was then closed for repairs and complete refurbishing. The Metro is the company's second showcase in Belgium. The other is the Forum Theatre in Liege, which reopened March 22.

Construction Is Under Way on Several Houses

Plans for the construction or remodeling of six theatres in various parts of the country were approved this week by the Civilian Production Administration's Facilities Review Committee in Washington.

The owner, location, and projected cost of each theatre to be constructed or remodeled follows: Sidney Talley, Pleasanton, Tex., $38,220; Paul Foil, Mr. Pleasant, N. C., $11,000; Lester R. Reed, Kinston, N. C., $5,000; Sabar Amusement Corp., Camden, N. J., $13,500; Irvin Bobson, Goulds, Fla., $18,700, and Glenda Woolman, Drain, Ore., $16,000.

In California construction plans for four theatres have been announced. The Golden State Theatre Corp. plans one each in Lomita Park, San Bruno and Millbrae. H. Bradley Fish, owner of the Clovis theatre in Clovis, Cal., will build another theatre in that vicinity to be called the Sierra. Mr. Fish said he and his associates had exercised their option of the lots they had acquired, and in addition had purchased all remaining lots on the block.

In Woodbine, Ky., A. O. Perkins of R. H. Perkins & Son, has been granted a permit to build a theatre in that town, while in Taylorville, Ky., Morris Smith and B. Bennet are constructing the New Ace theatre which will replace the house destroyed by fire several months ago.

In Colorado, W. W. Williams of Eads has plans under way for a 430-seat theatre expected to be completed by June 1.

Meanwhile, the CPA has ordered all work stopped on a drive-in theatre near Mansfield, Ohio. The project was started last November by Harold Nussbaum of Toledo who, the CPA said, went ahead without approval of the agency.

AMPA Invites Miguel Aleman To Anniversary Dinner

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers has invited Mexico's President, Miguel Aleman, to its Thirtieth Annual Anniversary Dinner in New York's Hotel Astor April 23. The invitation was motivated by the renewed interest in Mexican production and the use of Mexican studios by American producers, it was said. AMPA was to hold its annual election at a closed meeting in the Town Hall Club, New York, Thursday. The new slate consists of Arnold Stolz, president; Phil Williams, vice-president; Max Stein, treasurer and Marguerite Wayburn, secretary.

Metro to Release "Piccadilly"

Herbert Wilcox, British producer, has announced that he has sold "Piccadilly Incident" to MGM for release in the United States and Canada.

RCA Will Show New Methods on Color Television

Improvements in electronic color television transmission will be demonstrated at the end of this month when Dr. V. K. Zworykin, director of electronics research for the RCA Laboratories and a television pioneer, addresses a technical group at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia. The demonstration will be unique as it will be designed to prove the feasibility of large-screen, color television reception.

It is understood that Dr. Zworykin will use a 6x8-foot screen for the experiment. His demonstration is expected to be of considerable interest to film executives who have long watched large screen television progress with a view to its ultimate use in theatres. A screen of the the size to be used by Dr. Zworykin for the color test has been used by RCA for telecasts of boxing bouts and other sporting events.

The recent ruling of the Federal Communications Commission, which turned thumbs down on the Columbia Broadcasting System's mechanical color transmission system, meanwhile continued to reverberate in the industry. RCA announced it soon would introduce its first post-war console television set and that extensive production changes had been made to substantially increase the output of all types of television receivers. The company hopes to turn out 100,000 by the end of 1947. Allen B. Dumont Laboratories are planning to put out a $500 table-model set this year.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue last week reversed a previous ruling and decided that, with telecasts not considered "live" entertainment, public places showing television would not be subject to the 20 per cent cabaret tax.

'Better Theatres' Details Quonset Type Plans

Complete construction and equipment installation plans based on the use of the Great Lakes Steel Corporation's Quonset prefabrication have been developed by the Ben B. Poblocki & Sons Company of Milwaukee, manufacturers for many years of marquees, display equipment and front materials for theatres. According to an announcement in the Better Theatres Section of this issue (page 3), various schemes are available for capacities of 325, 435, 550 and 650 seats. The announcement illustrates one of the exterior styles.

Cinecolor Rates Unchanged

Customers of the Cinecolor Corporation, in a letter signed by treasurer Karl Herzog, have been informed that the company does not intend to raise its prices at this time. However, the letter warned that, should there be further increases in the cost of labor and materials, the situation would have to be reconsidered.

Balaban Urges Appeal Support

Time has made the situation confronting the Jews "infinitely worse," Barney Balaban, president of Paramount and national chairman of the film division of the United Jewish Appeal, said at a dinner meeting of the Philadelphia UJA film division at the Warwick Hotel last Wednesday night in an appeal for support of the drive to raise $170,000,000 in 1947.

"Today conditions are no better than they were two years ago," Mr. Balaban said, citing the Palestine situation. "Anti-semitism has grown to alarming proportions all over Europe."

The following day the Philadelphia chapter of the UJA set its local quota for the 1947 campaign at $200,000. Ted Schlanger, A. M. Ellis and Sam Gross conducted the meetings.

Mr. Balaban left New York for Hollywood last Friday to discuss the film capital's participation in the campaign with industry leaders.

Votion Sees French Films Limited in Home Gross

The highest possible gross French pictures can expect to get out of the French-speaking market today is from 35,000,000 to 40,000,000 francs, and French producers, if they want to realize a profit, must keep their budget below that figure, Jack Votion, RKO studio representative in Europe, said this week in New York.

Mr. Votion, whose activities cover production liaison as well as the talent and story departments on the continent, said RKO had established story departments in London and Paris with these two centers handling material from all over Europe.

When "Man About Town," the RKO-Pathe Cinema joint French production venture starring Maurice Chevalier, is released in this country, it will have an English-language narration by Chevalier which, it is hoped, will make it completely acceptable to U. S. audiences. The vast majority of pictures now playing in Paris is American. Mr. Votion said, with the ratio established at about 10 to 1.

Columbia

BANDIT OF SHERWOOD FOREST: Cornel Wilde, Anita Louise—Good action with a nice story. It received favorable comments. Pleased the customers. Played Sunday-Tuesday, March 9-11.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

BLONDIE KNOWS BEST: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—Usually the "Blondie" pictures are the best bets we get from Columbia. Played Sunday and Monday, but business was off although the weather was O.K. However, this is up to the "Blondie" good standard. Played March 10, 11.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

PERILOUS HOLIDAY: Pat O'Brien, Ruth Warrick—Nice light mystery. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

PERILOUS HOLIDAY: Pat O'Brien, Ruth Warrick—One of Columbia's so-called specials that fell down badly. Filled with talk, but very little action or story. Quite a number of walkouts, and very poor business. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 11, 12.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOYS' RANCH: Jackie "Butch" Jenkins, James Craig—First day this outdraw "Lassie." It is a knock-out for small towns and one they will tell you about the next day. You can't possibly go wrong on this. As if you didn't already know. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan—Perfect family picture. Second best grosser ever played. Gave a pup from the stage and stood them up for two out of three nights. One of these every month would be wonderful. Played Sunday-Tuesday, March 2-4.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan—Here is a picture that is a pleasure to play. Your patrons will thank you for playing this picture. Beautiful color and a nice story. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—Dow B. Summers, Royal Theatre, Unionville, Mo.

SON OF LASSIE: Peter Lawford, Donald Crisp—Played this late, but business was above average. It seems that a good picture in Technicolor will always do business regardless of age. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

Monogram

IN FAST COMPANY: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall—Very good action picture. It is O.K. for a midweek playdate. The weather was good, but business was off due to the general slump in business. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 11, 12.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

JUNIOR PROM: Freddie Stewart, June Preisser—The first of a new series from Monogram. It seemed to please O. K., especially the younger set. Hope this series builds up like the "Bowery Boys" did. Played Thursday, Friday, March 6, 7.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

JUNIOR PROM: Freddie Stewart, June Preisser—Teen-age delight. Grownups liked it too. A good little picture that did business. Played Sunday, March 9.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

SPOOK BUSTERS: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall—The Bowery Boys have a good following here. Most people go to the theatre to laugh and forget their troubles. This picture will get the laughs. Played Friday, March 7.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

SUSPENSE: Belita, Barry Sullivan—A picture well named. It did barely average business, as this heavy type of picture never goes over in my town. This picture is very good and if mystery stories go over in your situation, play this by all means. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

could have been the cold wave. Played Monday, Tuesday.—L. Brazil, Jr., New Theatre, Bearden, Ark.

Paramount

MASQUERADE IN MEXICO: Dorothy Lamour, Arturo de Cordova—The title alone was bad enough, but the acting and the story were worse. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

STRANGE LOVE OF MARTHA IVERS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Van Heflin—This is a show for adults only. The children like to go, too, but this is no show for the kiddies. It is not for a small town. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—Dow B. Summers, Royal Theatre, Unionville, Mo.

PRC

BORN TO SPEED: Johnny Sands, Terry Austin—Here is a good picture for the small town. It has plenty of excitement and appeals to all ages. It did better than average business for me. Played Friday, Saturday, March 1, 2.—L. Brazil, Jr., New Theatre, Bearden, Ark.

CARAVAN TRAIL, THE: Eddie Dean, Al LaRue—This Western is much better than the "Song of Old Wyoming," and the color is good. Emmett Lynn does a good job and looks like the kind of "Bogart menace" that might go places in pictures. Recommend that PRC keep him with Dean.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

DEVIL ON WHEELS: Damian O'Flynn, Lenita Lane—By all means, play this. All the kids of the town turned out as well as a good percentage of the adults. Everyone was pleased. Better than average draw. Played Saturday, Sunday, March 15, 16.—L. Brazil, Jr., New Theatre, Bearden, Ark.

GAS HOUSE KIDS: Robert Lowery, Teala Loring—This is a good little action picture which did above average business and pleased the Friday and Saturday fans. Played March 7, 8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

NORTH OF THE BORDER: Richard Hayden, Inez Cooper—This cowhand isn't as big as some, but there seems to be plenty of shooting to satisfy. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

PRAIRIE BADMEN: Buster Crabbe, Al "Fuzzy" St. John—Good little Western which pleased on Friday and Saturday. Played March 14, 15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

RKO Radio

BAMBOO BLONDE: Frances Langford, Russell Wade—Used on top half of a double bill. Very weak. In fact, it would have been poor in the second spot. Business poor. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

CHILD OF DIVORCE: Sharyn Moffett, Regis Toomey—This is an entertaining little picture but business was below average. Played Tuesday, March 11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

FALCON'S ALIBI, THE: Tom Conway, Rita Corday—Used on double bill for weekend. Every poor. No business. Much adverse criticism. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

LADY LUCK: Robert Young, Barbara Hale—Swell program picture which did average business. It was very entertaining with a carload of laughter. Clean and good for the family trade. No gunplay, no murders, no strange people. It was a good picture. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

LADY LUCK: Robert Young, Barbara Hale—We had no luck with the picture. Business below par. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 10, 11.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best—Very good. The children enjoyed it. Doubled with a Western to satisfactory business. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

TILL THE END OF TIME: Dorothy McGuire, Guy Madison—This was much better than expected, but in our estimation it could hardly be rated as an "A" picture. The acting was good and the action saved the day for our trade. Business fair. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

Republic

BELLS OF ROSARITA: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—One of the first Rogers in several months. This one is real good with a fine supporting cast. Did a fine business on this and it pleased all. Played Thursday, Friday, March 13, 14.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

MY PAL TRIGGER: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—One of the best. Big drawing power. Pleased the crowd 100 per cent. Has strong appeal. Played March 7, 8.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H.

NIGHT TRAIN TO MEMPHIS: Roy Acuff, Adele Mara—Get behind this one and get out of the way. It is a small town natural. It is a fine picture, too. The second night crowd will be as good as the first. How many pictures will do that? Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 4, 5.—Dow B. Summers, Royal Theatre, Unionville, Mo.

Screen Guild

NORTHWEST TRAIL: Bob Steele—A fine picture for the Saturday night trade. Nice color and a good story. Play it and you will be satisfied. Played March 1.—Dow B. Summers, Royal Theatre, Unionville, Mo.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—Fairly good horse picture without any stars to help draw, but it did big business for me on mid-week, which helped a lot. A small town natural. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 25, 26.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—What a surprise I got on this one. Young and old flocked to see it. It is a story that they had read sometime in their lives. It pleased generally, but it is just a mediocre picture. 20th-Fox would have had something if they had put "Smoky" production behind it. Play it, by all means. Played Saturday-Monday, March 1-3.—L. E. Mahoney, Columbus Theatre, Columbus, N. D.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—The title sold the picture. Used on top half of a double bill to good business. It is very good for a double bill. Played Friday, Saturday, March 7, 8.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

BOWERY, THE: George Raft, Wallace Beery—A good reissue which played to good Thursday and Friday.

day business. Wallace Beery is a good draw for me. Played Feb. 27, 28.—Arthur E. Phifield, Park Theatre, South Berwick, Maine.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Robert Young, Dorothy McGuire—This was a pleasing little picture. The woman folks said it was a cute show and business was good all three days. It is down-to-earth entertainment and it is O.K. for any date. Played Saturday-Monday, March 8-10.—L. E. Mahoney, Columbus Theatre, Columbus, N. D.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Robert Young, Dorothy McGuire—A long draggy story. It is not for small town patronage. The small town is really taking it on the chin. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 25, 26.—Dow B. Summers, Royal Theatre, Unionville, Mo.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Robert Young, Dorothy McGuire—This was a distinct disappointment both at the box office and otherwise. Perhaps it is a bit old fashioned, but we feel that discredit is reflected on the producers when partial undressing scenes and risqué dialogue create an audible reaction from teenagers. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

DARK CORNER, THE: Lucille Ball, William Bendix—A good mystery that held the audience throughout. Bendix is good here. Played Friday, Saturday, March 7, 8.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

DO YOU LOVE ME?: Maureen O'Hara, Dick Haymes—Just another musical which failed here. Played Sunday-Tuesday, March 2-4.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

HOUSE ON 92ND STREET: William Eythe, Lloyd Nolan—The first real thriller we have played for some time and it pleased an average crowd. Hope more of this type will be available soon. It is well worth playing. Played Monday, March 3.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—Even Phil Silvers couldn't pull this one out of the category of a weak sister. Business way off. The patronage knew more about it than I did. They went elsewhere. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DOG: Carole Landis, Allyn Joslyn—It shouldn't happen even to a dog. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 28, March 1.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE: June Haver, Vivian Blaine—Not up to the usual standard of 20th-Fox musicals. It lacked the pep and solid entertainment we have learned to expect, but it is a good, clean, wholesome picture. The box office results were slightly below average. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE: June Haver, Vivian Blaine—We were not too greatly impressed with this feature. It was not put together too well. The novelty dance sequence was too long and the lady who sang the French songs could have been left out. Business was poor. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

United Artists

BACHELOR'S DAUGHTERS, THE: Gail Russell, Claire Trevor—Here is a good comedy, but it is weak on star power and business was just fair. It pleased those who came. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

BACHELOR'S DAUGHTERS, THE: Gail Russell, Claire Trevor—A very low gross. We would have been better off if we had closed the theatre. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

BLITHE SPIRIT: Rex Harrison, Constance Cummings—This English-made picture in Technicolor surprised me. It did average business and pleased. It is the second time I have played an English picture which pleased. Played Tuesday, March 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

BREAKFAST IN HOLLYWOOD: Tom Breneman, Bonita Granville—This picture has comedy, music, radio show and a love story. Comments were good. Slightly better than average draw. Played Saturday, Sunday.—L. Brazil, Jr., New Theatre, Bearden, Ark.

CAESAR AND CLEOPATRA: Claude Rains, Vivian Leigh—Beautiful scenery, but not beautiful enough to look at for a couple of hours. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 10, 11.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

FOOL'S GOLD: William Boyd, Andy Clyde—Very good weekend attraction that helps out on a double bill. Played Friday, Saturday, March 21, 22.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine—Understand it took an Academy Award in its day. The picture runs closely to the book. The recording was poor in the first two reels. Then it seemed to clear up. It would seem that it is slightly a class picture. I personally thought it was fine. Above average attendance. Played Friday-Sunday, Feb. 28-March 1.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H.

SCANDAL IN PARIS, A: George Sanders, Signe Hasso—This is a fair picture but it will not draw at the box office. It barely took in film rental. George Sanders never does any business here. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

Universal

BEAUTIFUL CHEAT, THE: Noah Beery, Jr., Bonita Granville—Nice program picture that we played to satisfaction with a Western. Played Friday, Saturday, March 21, 22.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

BLACK ANGEL, THE: Dan Duryea, June Vincent—This picture had no box office appeal. It is adult entertainment. Business was off due to Lent. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 19, 20.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

CUBAN PETE: Desi Arnaz, Ethel Smith—Another Latin musical that failed to please. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

KILLERS, THE: Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner—This is a good action picture, but it lacks star power. Business only average. Should not have been sold on percentage. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

LAWLESS BREED: Kirby Grant, Fuzzy Knight—This was just a trifle off the beaten path. Our Western fans were all well pleased. Used on second half of double bill. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

RUNAROUND: Ella Raines, Rod Cameron—This was a very nice little picture and would have been well placed on the second spot of a double bill. We used it alone on a single midweek bill and it didn't gross film rental. Miss Raines was the only bright spot. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

SHE WROTE THE BOOK: Joan Davis, Jack Oakie—We did not make peanuts on this. Double it. It won't stand alone. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 17, 18.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

WILD BEAUTY: Don Porter, Lois Collier—Doubled with "Cuban Pete." "Wild Beauty" drew them in this time, and "Cuban Pete" walked them out. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—D. W. Trisko, Star Theatre, Stanley, N. D.

WILD BEAUTY: Don Porter, Lois Collier—Good wild horse action story which we played on Sunday and Monday. However, it did no business due to cold weather and a general slump in business which has been in effect since January. Played March 2, 3.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

Warner Bros.

JANIE GETS MARRIED: Joan Leslie, Robert Hutton—This feature doubled our take on "Janie," so we were pleased. Our fans went for this. The stars are popular here and this certainly helped. Play it by all means. It is better than many so-called big films. Played Monday, Jan. 24.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

JANIE GETS MARRIED: Joan Leslie, Robert Hutton—This picture is outdated. No draw for us in a small town. You cannot fool the customers. They know the good from the bad. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 23, 24.—Dow B. Summers, Royal Theatre, Unionville, Mo.

NEVER SAY GOODBYE: Errol Flynn, Eleanor Parker—As good a family picture as you could want. Very funny and lots of human interest, and it moves like a zephyr, but here is the catch. No draw. It did below average business. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

NEVER SAY GOODBYE: Errol Flynn, Eleanor Parker—"Cuddles" does it again. S. Z. Sakall gets my oscar for the best supporting performance of the year. Business weak on this one. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

NIGHT AND DAY: Cary Grant, Alexis Smith—A fine picture enjoyed by everyone. Beautiful color and a nice story. A little long. Big pictures should not run over 90 minutes. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 16, 17.—Dow B. Summers, Royal Theatre, Unionville, Mo.

NOBODY LIVES FOREVER: John Garfield, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Very good picture. Business below average. Trailer killed this. The trailer indicated a gun battle throughout. It was actually only one minute at the end of the picture. It was well received by those who saw it. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—Charles L. Jones, Elma Theatre, Elma, Iowa.

NOBODY LIVES FOREVER: John Garfield, Geraldine Fitzgerald—A slightly below average crowd turned out for this effort. There seemed to be no complaints, although the film took a long time to start moving. A splendid cast put over the proceedings nicely. Played Friday, March 7.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NOBODY LIVES FOREVER: John Garfield, Geraldine Fitzgerald—A good exciting story with action. These kind of pictures always appeal to my audience. Excellent attendance. Played Friday-Sunday, Feb. 14-16.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H.

MINSTREL DAYS: Featurettes—The Featurettes from this company can be relied upon generally to give satisfaction and this was up to the usual standard. This is very entertaining.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

CHESTER FRIEDMAN, Editor

Q Manager Charlie Call of Century's Bliss theatre, Sunnyside, N. Y., wasn't taking any chances of passing out a pocketful of free tickets when he dreamed up the turtle promotion for "Blue Skies." Charlie acquired nine turtles and painted a letter from the title on the back of each reptile. Above the aquarium he arranged for them, a sign read: "Look! win a free pass . . . rules are simple . . . when the turtles assemble themselves to read 'Blue Skies' just notify the doorman."

Q Lamar Swift, the enterprising district manager for the Georgia Theatre company in Macon, walked off with top honors in the recent theatre participation in the annual March of Dimes Drive.

Lamar staged an intensive campaign for the drive, and as a result $8,600 worth of dimes were collected in the theatres under his supervision. The money was turned over to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Q Many theatres throughout Canada and the United States have formed boys and girls clubs, and at considerable expense to the individual theatre. Just recently, manager Mel Jolley gave this idea a new twist and at practically no expense. Jolley formed the Maple Leaf Bantam Hockey Club at the Marks theatre, Oshawa, Canada, in cooperation with the Quaker Oats Company of Canada.

The company supplied membership certificates, official badges and autographed photos of the Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey Team to kids who wished to join the club. For their part the kids brought in Quaker Oats box tops. One box top is required for membership and an additional box top each Saturday. Over a period of 18 weeks, the kids could collect autographed copies of the entire Maple Leaf team.

Some New Patrons

DON C. WOLF, manager of the Elkader theatre at Elkader, Ia., looking for a promotion that would arouse interest in the coming of "The Jolson Story" to his theatre, brought back to life the old angle of discovering whether or not there was anyone in his community who had never seen a motion picture. One ad in the local weekly brought him 27 letters from people admitting that they had never seen a motion picture, and some of the letters came from towns 30 miles around. From this group, Don selected a couple as his guests to a preview of the picture. The promotion was covered by the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald and a daily newspaper 60 miles away. Elkader is a town of 1,800 people, proving that a town is never too small for live publicity or a live wire manager.

Q The Fox Wisconsin circuit has set up quiz headquarters in Milwaukee to sort through suggestions for a contest which can be used in their theatres. All circuit personnel are eligible to enter the competition and try for the $100 prize offered for the winning suggestion. What the circuit is looking for is a contest and possibly a quiz with a giveaway each week or something that will have cumulative value.

Q Theatre courtesy is not only the March slogan for Hamrick's Tacoma, Wash., theatres, but, according to Will J. Conner, it is to be particularly stressed in all houses of the circuit for the balance of the year.

In a check of 113 employees at the end of the first month of the courtesy competition, it was found that all had been eagerly striving to win an award. The four top winners for the first 30 days were Dolores Mott, Music Box; Hazel Hall, Temple; Jeannette Karbo, Blue Mouse, and Beverly Triplett, Roxy.

Investigations will continue over a six-month period and awards will be made each month for courtesy, the awards including cash and an attractive courtesy lapel pin. The winner of the top award at the end of the six-month period will receive an extra week's vacation.

Q Since the end of the war, the services have been eager to cooperate with any bona fide promotion that would help them to publicize their various recruiting drives. Many alert showmen have capitalized on this by tying-in with the drives.

It was just such a tieup that drew considerable attention to the recent opening of "The Beginning or the End" in three west coast cities. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploiter Dick Schuette promoted an Army bomber to shower down more than 15,000 paper "bombs" on Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., and Salem, Ore. One side of the bomb advertised the picture while the other side publicized the Army recruiting drive.

The plane also had been scheduled to drop the paper "bombs" over Portland, Ore., but officials of that city refused permission to the flight at the last minute.

SELLING THE SHOW HERE AND ABROAD

Arnold Gates, manager of the Stillman theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, attracted the attention of passersby by utilizing a park bench for two days in advance to exploit "Ladies' Man".

This ingenious display was designed by manager Lily Watt to publicize her engagement of "A Night in Casablanca" at the Florida Cinema, Kings Park, Glasgow, Scotland. The display proved very interesting to patrons, especially the "Ha, Ha, Ha" angle.

Manager Boyd Sparrow had 12 downtown Indianapolis newsboys wear the aprons, at left, for his playdate of "The Beginning or the End" at Loew's theatre there.

Nick Falzone, publicity director for the Stamford theatre, Stamford, Conn., at right, points to a lobby display of gifts he promoted for a "Nora Prentiss" contest.

Manager M. Sucre used sandwich men for "Casanova Brown" at the Ermitage Cinema, Paris, when a strike cut off his newspaper advertising.

The above display, designed by manager W. J. Joy, tied-in "Night and Day" at the Ritz Cinema, Sunderland, England, with a local safety week campaign.

A tieup arranged with Brentano by manager S. L. Sorkin, resulted in this window display for the Lantz cartoon at Keith's theatre, Washington, D. C.

THAT WAY WITH WOMEN (Warner Bros.): Dane Clark, Martha Vickers and Sydney Greenstreet are the stars of this comedy-romance. Set your campaign in motion with a Martha Vickers beauty poll. For this contest arrange with the local newspaper to publish the mat showing Martha Vickers as a blonde, dark brunette and as herself (light brown). Votes are tallied and published daily and are also announced in the lobby and in beauty and cosmetic establishments. Award promoted prizes of beauty work and/or cosmetics and guest seats to three voters each day, chosen on the basis of the best 25-word-or-less reason for wanting to see the picture.

Take advantage of the title by arranging a contest to find the local Romeo and Juliet whose rules on "How to Win a Gal" are brighter, better and/or funnier than Dane Clark's. Enlist the cooperation of local merchants and promote, wherever possible, special wardrobes for the winners, a restaurant dinner, dancing at a local club, flowers, candy, etc. The Evening-On-The-Town is climaxed by attendance at the theatre, opening night.

Plant one-column teaser ads a week before opening, tying-in with the title of the picture. They can also be used as blow-ups for counter, window or lobby or can be printed on penny postcards.

TIME OUT OF MIND (Universal-International): This is a love story based on the novel by Rachel Field and starring Phyllis Calvert, Robert Hutton and Ella Raines. Miss Calvert is a British actress appearing in her first American film. If your city has a British Consul or a British colony, arrange for congratulatory telegrams and flowers welcoming Miss Calvert in her initial American movie.

The best-selling novels of Rachel Field offer an excellent springboard for book store and public library promotions. Previous hits based on her books include "And Now Tomorrow" and "All This and Heaven, Too". Offer prizes for the largest collection of clocks for display in the lobby. Use stills from the picture, plus the tag line: "Any time is the right time to see 'Time Out of Mind'."

For street ballyhoo, have a pretty girl roam downtown streets asking pedestrians if they can guess what time it is. If they guess within one minute, she hands them a guest ticket for the picture. If they fail, they are handed a printed card stating: "It's time to see 'Time Out of Mind'."

Tie-in with the theme of the picture, which concerns an old seafaring family in Maine. Arrange a window or lobby display of turn-of-the-century ship models with stills and playdate copy. The title also fits in nicely for spot radio promotion.

Novel Lobby Display Helps Exploit "Expectations"

A teaser lobby display set up by manager Ralph Phillips for "Great Expectations" caused a good deal of comment for the playdate of the picture at the New Cross Cinema, New Cross, London, England. For the display, Phillips used a drawing of the theatre with people lined up at the box office. Copy read: "Why are these people queuing? See next week's special announcement." The following week the second line of the copy was changed to: "They did not make a note of the times of showing of the finest film yet made in this country, etc."

Ballyhoo, Lobby Display Promote "Beast"

A ballyhoo man with fantastic makeup, cape, top hat, etc., paraded through the streets to exploit the engagement of "The Beast With Five Fingers" at the Lyric theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. A nurse was used in the lobby to heighten interest in the horror angle. Weeks in advance, the lobby was covered with all sorts of hands of various sizes. 5,000 small envelopes containing "smelling salts" were distributed from the theatre, around schools, downtown, etc. The picture was previewed for the chief of police and his aides. The campaign was arranged by manager Florence Kipps and RKO publicist Nate Wise.

Guest Appearances Boost Flushing Birthday Club

Manager Mildred FitzGibbons has created a great deal of interest for her Saturday Birthday Fun Club shows by inviting well known personages to appear on the stage each Saturday at the Skouras Roosevelt theatre, Flushing, N. Y. Those who have already appeared include Harry Welch, impersonator of the cartoon character, "Popeye"; Ham Fisher, creator of the comic strip, "Joe Palooka," and Red Barber, sports announcer. The club has a membership of 3,500 children.

For the playdate of "The Jolson Story," an amateur song contest was held on the stage, with promoted prizes being awarded to winners. Major motion picture company talent scouts judged the contest.

Star Appearance, Teaser Ads Help "The Yearling"

One of the largest newspaper teaser ad campaigns ever arranged in Chicago and the personal appearance of Claude Jarman, Jr., star of the picture, heralded the opening of "The Yearling" at the State Lake theatre there. The campaign was conducted by William K. Hollander, publicity director for B & K theatres in Chicago and his assistant, James Savage, in cooperation with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer field representatives.

The first teaser ads began to appear six weeks before opening and ran daily, building up to smash ads five full days before and including opening day. Jarman spent nine days in Chicago, accompanied by Flag, the deer. In that time he appeared at the theatre, at schools, on radio programs and cooperated with the Junior Chamber of Commerce Safety Drive by presenting orchids to careful and courteous drivers.

A tieup was arranged with the Boys Clubs of Chicago for an art and handicraft contest among members. The winner received the honor of presenting a doe to the Brookfield Zoo with a suitable plaque for permanent display. In connection with the presentation, the Chicago Times sponsored a contest among school children to name the doe. A $50 prize was awarded to the winner.

All large department stores in the Loop district and book stores used window displays, tying-in the book with the picture. Other promotional ventures included buttons, stickers, bumper strips, truck posters, advance screenings, etc.

P.S. If you can't understand the above ...Ask the Doorman

To create advance interest in "13 Rue Madeleine", this 40 x 60, with copy in French, attracted unusual attention for Ansel Winston, manager of the RKO Coliseum theatre, New York City. Patrons requesting information from the doorman were handed cards which interpreted the message. Two intentionally misspelled words provoked special inquiry from many patrons.

Press and Radio Publicity Set For "Years"

An extensive newspaper and radio campaign heralded the opening of "The Best Years of Our Lives" at the Capitol theatre in Cincinnati. The campaign was arranged by RKO publicist Nathan Wise.

A five-day contest with art was planted in the Times Star, starting eight days in advance. Two follow-up stories in addition to the five contest stories also were used by the newspaper. Approximately 20 country newspapers, exclusive of Cincinnati, and within a radius of 25 miles, were covered with a 125-line ad, scene mat and story. A full page co-op ad was promoted with Jenny's.

Wise arranged an outstanding radio tie-up with WLW, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary. On station break identifications it was announced that: "This is station WLW, celebrating its 25th anniversary and looking forward to 'The Best Years of Our Lives.'" Contests were promoted over radio stations WCPO, WSAI and WKRC. WCKY ran a half-hour forum for a discussion of the picture.

Cross trailers were used in all RKO theatres in Cincinnati. Cards were placed inside taxicabs and on the outside of street cars. Three special screenings were set up for newspaper and radio people.

Arranges Merchant Tieups For "Razor's Edge"

Julius Daniels, city manager for Walter Reade theatres, Perth Amboy, N. J., arranged local merchant tieups and displays in conjunction with the playdate of "The Razor's Edge" at the Majestic theatre. Window cards and brochures were distributed around Perth Amboy and 3,000 book marks were given out by book stores. Newspapers cooperated with publicity and in addition to the usual display ads, merchants placed cooperative ads in the Evening News.

Creates Goodwill for Theatre

A wealth of goodwill publicity resulted from a free show and a bicycle giveaway at the Gem theatre, Etowah, Tenn. Manager D. T. Stalcup arranged the promotion for the 35th anniversary celebration of R. E. Martin in show business. Mr. Martin is head of Martin Theatres. The show was arranged for children.

Designs Special Window Cards

A window card which had the appearance of a police reward sign was designed by manager Sabie Conti to exploit the playdate of "San Quentin" at Reade's Paramount theatre, Plainfield, N. J. Copy read: $5,000 reward for the capture of inmate 7863. For information contact Lawrence Tierney, star of 'San Quentin' at, etc."

THESE SQUEAMISH MEN

Extra newspaper publicity was garnered by manager James Tobin for a scare poll he conducted in conjunction with the playdate of "The Beast with Five Fingers" at the Warner theatre, Bridgeport, Conn.

A total of 878 question cards were handed out during the initial showing of the picture, and approximately 64 per cent, or 565, were filled out and returned to ushers as the patrons left the theatre.

A breakdown of the poll results showed that 189 men admitted to being scared, while 71 said the action on the screen did not affect them. Of the women returning cards, 201 confessed to feelings of fear while they watched the picture, while 104 reported they felt no fear. This would seem to prove that the males scare the easiest.

Youth Club Members Debate For "Mildred Pierce"

A tieup with the local Youth Club was arranged by manager Arthur Wolfson to promote "Mildred Pierce" at the Rex Cinema, Salford, Lancs., England. Members of the club held a debate on "Mother Love," theme of the picture. The tieup resulted in considerable word of mouth comment. Wolfson also arranged a tieup with a cafe opposite the theatre whereby imprinted slips of paper were placed on cutlery handles and tea cups. Two seats were marked off in each section, with guest tickets awarded to each mother and daughter combination sitting in them.

Mechanical laughing man at the Joy theatre in New Orleans provoked bursts of hilarity from passersby, according to James MacKenna, manager of the theatre, and helped to sell tickets for "It's a Joke, Son". The moving head and arms and electrical transcription of the laughing record through a loud speaker system made for realistic ballyhoo.

Parade Climaxes Contest to Find Local "Margie"

A contest to find the local "Margie" highlighted the campaign arranged by manager Nick F. Condello for the engagement of the picture at the Chakeres State theatre, London, Ohio. The contest was climaxed with a parade led by the local high school band and a 1926 Ford Convertible.

A little girl dressed in a white pleated skirt, red jacket with a little red and white cap carried a megaphone with "Margie" inscribed on it through the streets to ballyhoo the picture. The megaphone was filled with candy kisses and cards attached reading: "A Kiss from 'Margie.'" The kisses were distributed to passersby.

Condello promoted a "'Margie' Sundae" at two local ice cream parlors. Four thousand leaflets, publicizing the sundae and the playdate of the picture, were distributed by the ice cream parlors.

A phonograph, playing tunes from the picture, was set up in the lobby. An eight-foot flashing "Margie" upright sign with flashy pennants decorated the front of the theatre. Under the marquee, one-foot bright red letters spelled out the title of the picture.

Sandwich Man Parades Streets for "Secret"

A man in Mardi Gras costume carried a sandwich sign through the streets to ballyhoo manager Paul Klingler's playdate of "Her Sister's Secret" at the Strand theatre, Waterbury, Conn. Two 9-ft. silk valances and one silk burgee were used in the lobby in advance of the showing and on the marquee during the engagement. 5,000 napkins were imprinted and distributed to Woolworth's, Kresge's, Sneider's Restaurant, the Chocolate Shoppe, Mulligan's Restaurant, and Stone's Soda Bar. A window tieup also was arranged with Woolworth's.

Builds Novel Lobby Exhibit

Manager J. A. Achner designed a novel lobby exhibit to promote his playdate of "Appointment With Crime" at the Star Cinema, Wandsworth, London, England. Besides a "safe," which was made from a large wooden box, Achner used a dummy. The dummy was dressed as a rough character complete with a mask and burglar implements. He was placed in a crouching position as if he was about to open the safe.

Tieups Aid Double Feature

Window and counter tieups with several stores aided manager Bill Brown to put over his playdate of "Wake Up and Dream" and "Wanted for Murder" at the Bijou theatre, New Haven, Conn. Bookmarks were distributed at the public library and the lending library of Shartenberg's Department Store.

Boyle Arranges Press Contest For "Lake"

A hidden name contest in the classified ad section of the Norwich Bulletin was promoted by manager Joseph S. Boyle to publicize his engagement of "Lady in the Lake" at the Poli-Broadway theatre, Norwich, Conn.

A teaser campaign was started a week in advance of a sneak preview with newspaper ads, stories, etc. A man-on-the-street broadcast, usually held on the sidewalk in the center of the city, was moved to the theatre lobby. The announcer asked questions about "Lady in the Lake."

A teaser lobby display was set up a week in advance. It consisted of a barrel with a looking-glass bottom and copy reading: "You and Robert Montgomery in 'Lady in the Lake.'" Five hundred window cards were distributed through the cooperation of a local news agency, 1,000 bookmarks were planted in the public library, book stores and lending libraries.

Tepper's Department Store used a window on the attraction in addition to distributing 1,000 imprinted shopping bags. Five hundred A cards were displayed on the tables in the dining room of the Wauregan Hotel and at local restaurants.

Sound Truck Helps Exploit Lincoln's Birthday Show

A sound truck was used in populated kid centers to advertise a Lincoln Birthday show for children at the Poli-Palace theatre, Meriden, Conn. Announcements were posted on bulletin boards of every school in the city 10 days in advance. 5,000 heralds were distributed to children during school recess periods. 30x40's were planted in windows of Perlin's Children's Store, Kiddie Centre, Youth Centre and Little Folks Shop. The campaign was arranged by manager Mollie Stickles and assistant manager Lou Jaffe.

Essay Contest Aids "Jolson"

An essay contest over a local radio station was promoted by manager James F. Moyer to publicize his engagement of "The Jolson Story" at the Ritz theatre, Reading, Pa. Seven albums of Jolson records supplied by the Decca Record Company were awarded to winners. Eight 8x10 standees were placed in leading music stores and a 40x60 display was used in an empty store on the main street.

Ushers Wear "Abner" Costumes

Manager A. G. Painter had his ushers dress in old clothes two weeks before the playdate of "Li'l Abner" to exploit the picture at the Center theatre, Oak Ridge, Tenn. The ushers were dressed to represent citizens of "Dogpatch, U.S.A.," locale of the picture.

WIDE-AWAKE PATRONS SOLD ON "SLEEP"

A program, consisting of "The Big Sleep" and a short subject, "The Big Snooze", was sold to wide-awake patrons by manager John H. Arnold, Yale theatre, Houston, Tex. Copy for a trailer read: "Yes, sir. 'The Big Sleep' heading a program guaranteed not to give you sleeping sickness. Including that hare-brained epic of bedlam, Bugs Bunny in 'The Big Snooze'. Bogart! Bacall! Buggy! All-one big show. Nerve-racking sagas of daydreams, nightmares. 'The Big Sleep' and 'The Big Snooze' for wide-awake patrons." The same idea was carried out on the marquee, in newspaper and radio promotion.

Poster, Teaser Ads Aid "Edge"

Six 24-sheets and two 6-sheets were posted three weeks in advance to herald the arrival of "The Razor's Edge" at the Bijou theatre, Savannah, Ga. The campaign was arranged by manager A. M. Sullivan, Jr.

At the same time small teaser ads were started in the local newspapers. The teaser ads were continued for two weeks and then replaced by regular theatre ads. Five 40x60 blowups, one of each leading star of the picture, were placed in the lobby two weeks before opening.

One hundred special window cards designed around an 8x10 still from the picture were distributed to stores. Ten thousand napkins, 5,000 bookmarks and 3,000 blotters also were distributed. Cards were planted on 100 Savannah buses.

Screens "Green Years" for Medellin Officials

A special screening was arranged for heads of parochial schools, newspaper editors and city officials to promote the engagement of "The Green Years" at the Metro Avenida, Medellin, Colombia, S.A. A picture of the guests at the screening was planted in El Colombiano. The same newspaper used a picture of the theatre front with a line of people waiting to purchase tickets. 3,000 bookmarks were distributed through book stores. Window tieups, radio spot announcements, heralds and house programs also helped to exploit the playdate. The campaign was arranged by manager Humberto Manrique and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicist Luis Ucko.

Anniversary Cake Displayed

A huge cake was put on display in the lobby by manager Louis Nye to exploit Anniversary Week at the Hoosier theatre, Whiting, Ind. The first 200 persons attending the theatre on Anniversary Day received a piece of cake.

Endorsement by Manager Sells "End" Date

The highlight of manager Robert A. Hynes' campaign for "The Beginning or the End" was his personal endorsement of the picture in newspaper ads, over the radio, on a lobby board and by letter. Hynes manages the Criterion theatre in Oklahoma City.

Hynes' opening theatre ad carried a personal endorsement of the picture in the form of a letter written to the general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plus the views of a preview audience. The endorsement was used for five days before opening and five days after opening over the "Man About Town" program emanating from station KOCY.

Ten thousand copies of Matt Cochran's letter to his wife (used in the picture) and captioned "A Letter You Will Remember as Long as You Live" were sent to homes in the city and nearby suburban towns. The letter also carried the manager's personal endorsement.

Six 30x40 standees were placed in leading hotel lobbies. A 9x15 two-sided flag was used on the marquee flag pole. Six Royal Crown Cola trucks were bannered with theatre copy during the playdate.

Rose Sets Co-Op Display Ads for "Doll"

A cooperative display ad which ran for two days in both the morning and evening newspapers drew considerable attention to manager Harry A. Rose's playdate of "Magnificent Doll" at the Majestic theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. The ads were paid for by Madison Motor Sales. The automobile company also donated ice cream to children. A photo of the ice cream party, which was tied-in with the picture, was planted in the Sunday Post. A tieup was arranged with an exhibition of presidential dolls at Read's Department Store. Royal Crown Cola trucks were bannered, a live window display was promoted and the playdate was publicized by May Bradshaw Hays on her WICC radio program. Assistant manager Frances Connors helped to put the campaign over.

Cohen Promotes Press Contests In Hartford

Several contests were promoted by manager Lou Cohen to exploit the opening of "Boomerang" at the Poli theatre, Hartford, Conn. Manager Fred R. Greenway of the Poli Palace theatre assisted Cohen in arranging the campaign.

Through a tieup with a local newspaper, clues were published for a picture quiz contest, with winners receiving guest tickets. Another newspaper competition had readers naming a popular motion picture made in 1937, starring Jane Wyatt. The picture was "Lost Horizon." The first 15 persons correctly naming the picture received guest tickets.

An inquiring reporter asked pedestrians for opinions on whether justice was found in the case reported in the picture. On a radio record program, guest tickets were awarded to listeners naming the most films that Dana Andrews has appeared in.

Letter Writing Contest Tieup Helps "Sinbad"

A three-way tieup among the theatre, a department store and a radio station was arranged to exploit the engagement of "Sinbad the Sailor" at the Stanley theatre, Pittsburgh. The winner received "The Sinbad Treasure Chest of Gifts" offered by the department store, Boggs and Buhl. The store also ran a cooperative newspaper ad and used window displays to plug the contest and picture. The promotion was arranged by Jim Totman, advertising director for Warner Bros.' Pittsburgh theatres.

Universal Gives “Egg and I” Top Promotion Drive

With Universal-International's "The Egg and I" having key city openings in the mid-west and west April 4 and 5, the company has mapped out and conducted an elaborate pre-selling campaign to support the picture. In its drive it is greatly aided by the fact that Betty MacDonald's best-selling novel has already been read by an estimated 25,000,000 in the United States.

The publicity and advertising department is putting to good use the break given the picture through the selection of "The Egg and I" as a "Book-of-the-Month-Club" choice, and the resultant sale of approximately a million and a half copies, as well as the serialization of the novel in three leading magazines—Reader's Digest, Liberty and The Atlantic Monthly. In addition, the book has been on the nation's best-seller lists ever since its publication late in 1945.

"The Egg and I" was to open at the Fox theatre, Detroit, April 4, and in Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville, Kansas City, Los Angeles and other West Coast theatres April 5. It goes into the New York City Music Hall following the run of the current "The Late George Apley." Universal has set a promotion budget of $850,000 for the film and spent $150,000 alone in February for an advance teaser newspaper campaign. The 100- and 150-line ads started eight weeks in advance of key city openings. A special three-minute animated cartoon teaser trailer for the picture has been made by Walter Lantz' cartoon studio.

The "egg" idea provided countless tie-ups, including a "Slick Chick Contest" to find America's most beautiful hen and involving some 5,000,000 poultry producers; a tieup with the Pacific Coast Association of Poultry and Egg Dealers' convention, and an auction of the eggs laid by the chickens on the set of "The Egg and I." Life Magazine ran a spread on Miss MacDonald early in 1946 and the press services gave widespread coverage to a stunt involving an attempt by a Hollywood press agent to hatch an ostrich egg by sitting on it for 19 days.

"The Egg and I" also was given widespread attention on the air.

Warners' Albany Drive Honors C. J. Latta

In honor of C. J. Latta's sixth anniversary as zone manager of Warners in Albany, a 13-week drive, which began March 30 and continues to June 28, is being conducted among the various Warner theatres in Albany, Troy, Utica, Batavia, Dunkirk, Elmira, Hornell, Jamestown, Medina, Olean and Wellsville. Mr. Latta originally was head of theatres in Cleveland for Warners, later moving to New Haven and then to Pittsburgh. He took over the position of zone manager in Albany in November, 1941.

Now YOU CAN BUILD

in less time and at lower cost

Here is some plain language about pre-fabricated theatres for those of you who would like to build a new theatre or remodel an old one.

We have complete plans, specifications, and details which will enable you to build a pre-fabricated theatre at a tremendous saving in time and money. These plans are so detailed that any good contractor can erect the theatre in one half the time required to build the conventional type. And you will have a theatre that will be years ahead of the conventional design in beauty and practical utility. The saving in construction and maintenance and the efficiency and beauty of the theatre will often make it more profitable to build by these plans than to remodel your old theatre.

These plans are complete in every detail for 1) all structural and mechanical details, 2) seating and sight lines, 3) heating, 4) air conditioning and cooling, 5) electrical wiring diagrams, 6) projection room layout, and 7) acoustics. The whole theatre is designed in accordance with the Uniform Building Code, 1946 edition. The most stringent requirements were met with respect to type of construction, exits, seating, fire safety, and related problems.

The plans are now perfected — they are the result of long research and development by a firm of architects with a nation-wide reputation for excellence in theatre design. This firm has specialized in this field for 25 years. Expert consultant engineers and advisory counsel from every branch of theatre construction, operation and maintenance were employed in the development of the plans and specifications.

The building is a permanent structure where nothing has been sacrificed in good construction, luxury, convenience, or functional utility. The enclosing walls, floors, and roof are constructed of concrete, steel, and masonry. No wood is used so the building is as fire-resistant as possible and maintenance problems are at a bare minimum. The inside shape of the building is perfect for sound, heating, air conditioning, and ventilation. It is clean, modern, and beautiful. It lends itself well to ideas in attractive decoration. The theatre is adaptable to any part of the country and to any locality. You can get plans for theatres with 325, 435, 550, or 650 seats.

HERE'S A WAY TO CUT SEAT CLEANING COSTS...

1.

Unlimited choice of beautiful patterns

The pattern, weave and color-combination possibilities of Lumite are endless! Lumite reflects LUXURY...to the eye and to the touch...yet low cost, plus amazing long-wearing qualities, make it a highly practical investment.

3.

Easy to clean...at less cost

No scrubbing...no vacuuming...no complicated cleaning methods! Easy to clean! That means less time and less labor required to maintain seats...which reduces your annual cost of upkeep considerably.

2.

Cannot fade...won't stain

Lumite's fresh, bright colors can never fade or run. Because it is woven of Dow's Saran, the color is IN the plastic filament itself. Nothing can stain it...neither dirt, dust, mud, ink, grease, chewing gum, food, lipstick nor any liquids.

4.

Pliable...fits snugly...ventilated

Lumite fabric "upholsters well"! It cannot ravel, sag or tear. There is no "cupping." It holds a snug fit on the seat...permanently! Because Lumite "breathes", it never becomes sticky in hot weather nor clammy in cold weather.

LISTEN TO THE VOICE OF FIRESTONE MONDAY EVENINGS OVER NBC

A Circuit Checks Itself Up On Fire Prevention and Control

BE PREPARED to reduce the chance of fire, be prepared to put out a fire quickly should one occur. These are the objectives of an intensive circuit-wide program instituted by Neighborhood Theatres of Richmond, Va.

There is nothing really new about efforts in the motion picture theatre business to keep fire from being a menace. On the whole, it has been vigilant, with a healthy fear not only of fire, but of panic, to keep it so. And it has earned an economical rating, for its inherent hazards, among all businesses.

It isn't always easy, however, for the awareness of fire at the top of a theatre enterprise to be constantly felt throughout the staff. And the people who are in immediate contact with the physical property are the ones upon which any system of prevention and control must depend. Executives of Neighborhood Theatres recently had reason to believe that their methods of dealing with fire hazards needed re-examination, an overhauling, and intensification. What any experienced theatre operators do about fire hazards, at any time, is of important interest. Here is what the Richmond circuit did, as told in its house organ, Naborvues.

The need was seen to institute "a more definite program of fire prevention and emergency procedure in every theatre." Officials of the Richmond fire department were asked to help develop such a program. First a set of rules and duties for members of all theatre staffs was formulated, and with this as a guide, a program of training in fire prevention was conducted at the Byrd theatre in Richmond. Staff members were instructed by fire department officials, Manager Robert Coulter of the Byrd theatre in Richmond, Va., inspecting air ducts for trash. Fire spreads easily through air ducts.

If audience must leave, house lights go on, high voltage off. Mr. Coulter and a fire official conduct this demonstration for staff members.

An official of the Richmond Fire Prevention Bureau instructs ushers in the proper use of various types of fire extinguishers.

Claude Wilson, Byrd theatre maintenance chief, demonstrates proper checking of electrical connections for sound insulation.

Many fires originate in basements and furnace rooms. Here Mr. Coulter inspects the Byrd furnace room with a fire official.

Assistant manager George Stitzer of the Byrd (left) reviews with Chief Projectionist A. L. Ford proper use of booth fire equipment.

and the program calls for following up the lectures with fire drills for all personnel.

In describing the program, Naborvues gave as the highlights of the instructions to managers and their staffs:

1. Be alert—for smoking violations, blocked aisles, people lighting matches to find dropped articles, burnt out exit lights, live cigarette butts in trash cans, etc., adding that "alertness on the part of a single person can often prevent a tragedy."

2. Be calm in case of fire—calmness on the part of the staff induces a similar attitude in the patrons.

3. Learn the location and use of all emergency fire fighting equipment.

4. Do not delay in calling the fire department, unless it is absolutely certain that the fire can be put out promptly with the theatre's equipment.

5. The manager and staff should remember that he is responsible for the safety of the people in his theatre.

Stock Plans Based on Quonset Construction

PREFABRICATED units, applied to more or less standardized space and architectural specifications, probably mean most, in terms of benefit to the motion picture business, as a means of making movies easily available to a larger number of small communities, and doing so without resorting to clumsy, makeshift methods. The Quonset hut of the Great Lakes Steel Corporation quite promptly appeared as one possibility in this direction, and now the Ben B. Poblocki & Sons Company of Milwaukee has developed schemes for their general application to theatres of small capacity. Detailed plans are now available from this company for theatres of 325, 435, 550 and 650 seats, including specifications for the front and all of its advertising and ticket sales appurtenances, wiring diagrams, air supply and conditioning layouts, auditorium floor pitches, etc., "so that," according to a communication prepared by the company's designers, "an owner will be able to build these theatres with very little effort and without professional service."

Alternate schemes have been drawn up to meet varying climatic and other local conditions. "For instance," the designers explain, "these plans are prepared with heating equipment under the stage or at the rear. Supplementary details are available so that this equipment room can be entirely eliminated and just a screen and loud-speaker platform installed. The heating room, of course, can also be used for air-conditioning and other types of equipment in localities where a central heating plant is not required. In case the owner preferred to use package air-conditioning units, again the room could be omitted and the cost of it saved."

Among other alternative arrangements for specific conditions are several affecting the floor plan. The designers point out:

"In connection with the lobby and foyer end, an alternate layout is provided so that the outer lobby can be eliminated in localities where it is not required. The plan is drafted in such manner that the lobby partition can be installed, if an outer lobby is desired, without changing any other construction.

"Another alternate detail will be available so that masonry walls can be installed at both side areas as well as at the rear of the building. The side walls will be from 8 to 10 feet high and will entirely enclose the Quonset structure.

"These side enclosing walls can be constructed of corrugated asbestos siding, wood louvre frames or any other suitable material chosen by the owner for sake of better appearance in localities where this is desirable."

The report from the Poblocki designers estimates savings "from $5,000 to $20,000, around 25% over the conventional type" of construction. This, of course, would be accounted for partly in materials, and partly in the cost of local labor for erection. Cubage also is low because the buildings would follow the semi-circular form of the Quonset construction, which is advantageous as well with respect to acoustics and air supply and conditioning.

In addition to building specifications, details are included for such installations as seating, carpeting, mats and all necessary equipment. The plans were developed in accordance with regulations acceptable to leading building code authorities and have been approved for either small town or city use by the Wisconsin State Industrial Commission.

More Service for Patrons More Money for Overhead

Extra income for exhibitor, or extra pleasure for theatregoer? Both make up today's picture of theatre vending, and its dimensions now are increasing rapidly.

MODERN VENDING in motion picture theatres—as distinguished from the intermittent efforts of the candy butcher in the industry's long-ago—began as an effort to catch a few stray nickels automatically. Today it is an important service to patrons, who like it and therefore make it a substantial source of extra income with which to carry the regular operating overhead and to maintain and advance the standards of motion picture exhibition.

The theatre business was well on its way toward this classification of refreshment vending before the war. Post-war vending is rapidly fulfilling those promises. Then beverages were available in relatively few theatres, while the soda fountain had barely made its appearance, and that a very tentative one. The candy counter, with an attendant, was the more usual indication that the coin dispenser no longer represented the only interest of theatre operation in confectionery sales.

Few, if any, sizable theatres today are being designed without built-in facilities for a refreshment service, where the popcorn machine has an honored place in keeping with its handsome appearance and profits. There, too, increasingly, is the Coca Cola dispenser. And the signs today are that this refreshment booth will be enlarged tomorrow to accommodate America's favorite rendezvous—the soda fountain.

An impressive forerunner of things to come generally in the motion picture theatre's refreshment service department is the recent installation by the Wometco circuit in Florida at its Rosetta theatre in Miami.

This theatre well exemplifies the changed scene in theatre vending. Its lobby used to contain an 8-foot candy counter. Today it has a Soda-Snack Bar occupying some 18,000 cubic feet, with two soda fountains.

Further, this service is available to pedestrians as well as theatre patrons. One entire side of the lobby was removed to join this area with large commercial space that had been occupied by a restaurant. Remodeled decoratively to provide a restful environment, this space is now equipped with two large candy counters in addition to two stainless steel soda fountains and a 60-foot S-shaped service counter with 26 fixed stools.

The Rosetta Soda-Snack Bar is completely open on the lobby side. Along the street side adjoining the theatre vestibule are sidewalk counters and an entrance for pedestrian trade. Besides the conventional confections of soda fountains, the Snack-Bar offers popcorn—there are two of the latest type Manley popping machines—soft drinks, fruit juices, sandwiches and coffee.

The color scheme of the Snack-Bar is red, white and black. The wall opposite the street side is finished in red and white

Here are scenes typical of what is happening today in theatre vending. The refreshment bar of substantial proportions, open to pedestrian as well as theatre trade, is not confined to the larger theatre, as the El Cajon theatre in El Cajon, Calif. (above) testifies. At left is how popcorn has come to patrons of Kansas City's palatial, dignified Newman. Immediately below is the elaborate refreshment bar installation of the Fox in San Francisco. Here several girl attendants serve candy and ice cream as well as Coca Cola and other beverages. The counter was especially built, with an 18-inch Formica top rimmed with brass. Padded Tolex simulated leather faces the counter and covers the canopy frame. . . . Distinct from the developing refreshment services are accommodations for checking coats, parcels and umbrellas, as illustrated in the lower view of the installation of American Locker Company coin-operated equipment in Boston's Keith Memorial Theatre.

wallpaper with mirror 3 feet square placed at eye level. The wall opposite the lobby is completely mirrored. Potted plants help to contribute to an atmosphere of leisure. This service is in charge of Mrs. Gwen May, former supervisor of confection for the Wometco circuit. She has a staff of eight fountain and counter girls. The Rosetta is managed by Ed May.

SERVICE IS THE OBJECTIVE

The profits of confectionery vending and more elaborate refreshment services were always potentially there, but for years theatre operators fought off the temptation, fearing that it would lead them too far afield, aggravate their present headaches, dirty up the place beyond reasonable levels of maintenance, and—in the case of the deluxe operation—lower the dignity of the house. The change in the theatre vending is also convincingly illustrated in Kansas City's austere Newman theatre. Architecturally, the Newman is one of the first of the nation's monuments to the arrival of the motion picture as a respectable art form. It has maintained that dignity throughout the quarter of a century since its erection. But it is selling popcorn to its patrons today.

M. B. Cohn, manager of the Newman (once managed by G. S. Eyssell, now managing director of New York's opulent Radio City Music Hall), admits that the management, which had previously allowed a modest candy counter, has added popcorn on demand of patrons. It

HERE MOTORS must be almost human!

The designing of a carbon feed control mechanism that will insure stable arc operation requires exhaustive testing by means of intricate and sensitive laboratory equipment in the hands of highly trained technicians of long experience.

One of many checks made in The Strong Electric

The data compiled as the result of these tests are employed to calculate the exact motor speed variations necessary to maintain a uniform arc gap length, hold the arc crater at the ABSENCE of extraneous decoration marks the design of Paramount Enterprises' new Shores theatre in Miami, Fla. Seating approximately 1000 on a single floor, it is constructed of concrete blocks, stuccoed and waterproofed, with bowstring steel trusses and built-up roof on metal deck. The architects were Steward & Skinner of Miami, with Kemp, Bunch & Jackson, Jacksonville, as associates.

■ The upper face of the facade is stucco, that below the marquee stucco above a marble base. Entrance doors are Formica with rubbed architectural glass transoms. The marquee, which has a stucco soffit, is tan and turquoise porcelain with neon trim in white and green. A vestibule leads into a spacious lobby (upper left) which has plaster walls painted deep turquoise. Plaster ceiling and pilasters are bone white, the terrazzo floor coral pink and green. Poster frames are mahogany. A corner candy bar and popcorn booth is done in coral and white. The foyer treatment consists in walls of natural walnut veneer, plaster ceiling bone white, red-tan-rust carpeting in a floral design, and a fountain piece with mirrors framed by Flexglass columns and tile.

■ The women's cosmetic room has plaster walls painted in shades of light coral and turquoise, ceilings, doors and trim of light turquoise and bone white. A Formica cosmetic shelf extends below a mirror with etched sectional divisions and daylight fluorescent lamps.

■ The Shores auditorium has walls of acoustic plaster above walnut veneer wainscoting, and the vaulted ceiling is also acoustic plaster. Both walls and ceiling are tinted beige, and a reeded proscenium arch border is bone white, framing a drape of copper-color with white ropes, a cyclorama in gold, and screen curtain of jewel cloth. The chairs, which are American "Bodiform," have beige standards and maple arms and are upholstered in blue-green simulated leather. The Shores is equipped for summer-winter air-conditioning, with cooling by Carrier mechanical refrigeration and air diffusion by flush-set Anemostats. Illumination in the lobby, foyer and rear of the auditorium is by neon in ceiling cornice coves; the auditorium is additionally lighted by glass-covered recess sources in the ceiling, for house lighting, and by wall luminaires with varicolored fluorescent lamps. The lobby neon is power rose. The foyer and auditorium coves have two lines of neon—blue and power white.

NO MATTER how logical it is for the theatre designer to stress the show on the screen, the showman—and he may very well be the designer as well as the fellow who employs him—knows the value of theatrical atmosphere as part of the merchandise sold at the box-office. By theatrical atmosphere the showman means those elements of the building and its interior which do something like that which the screen performance itself does—lift people up and away from the prosaic, the ordinary, familiar environment of their real world. There are people who do not crave this, but not enough of them to be a box-office factor.

It is this which directs attention to devices like luminous decoration which today's luminescent paints and "black light" sources make readily available. Black light murals as a spot effect of theatrical purpose have their place in many areas of the theatre interior, and can be adapted to those of relatively high general light level. In the auditorium, however, luminous decoration maintains such an effect where any other means of creating it recedes almost to the vanishing point.

LETTING LUMINOUS MURAL DOMINATE

Recognizing this, some designers, in adopting the luminous mural for the auditorium, largely depend upon it, and they have a good argument for doing so when performances are continuous over most of the day, with almost no interval of house lighting between shows. This is what Paul Matzinger, Cleveland architect, has done in the auditorium of the new Vine theatre in Willoughby, Ohio, a rapidly growing city about 25 miles east of Cleveland.

The interior scheme of the Vine is in general simple, and in the auditorium the side walls, which are finished in acoustic plaster, are plain except for an overall black light floral design. In a pattern of fairly large scale, most of the area of each wall is covered with tropical vines of vivid green foliage and red, blue and yellow flowers during the projection periods. The vines, obviously, are an expression of the name of the theatre.

Each of these two murals, which differs somewhat from the other in details of design, comes to life under the rays of six Switzer "Glo-Craft" 250-watt (Model 86) black light sources concealed in the ceiling. Specially fitted adapters direct the radiations upon the paintings, which are done in paints from a new line of Switzer fluorescent water colors. These differ from luminescent lacquer-enamels, which are frequently used on fabric, which then is attached to the wall. The "Glo-Craft" water colors bond to almost any surface that can be made wet with water. In the Vine they are applied directly on the acoustic plaster over a heavy white undercoating of non-fluorescent casein paint. The murals, plus the reflected light of the screen, supply all of the running illumination.

The Vine, which is owned and operated by Howard Reif and P. E. Essick, seats 1600, with the auditorium floor pitched on the "reverse slope" principle. It is of brick and steel construction with a front faced in porcelain enamel of a green-gray ground color. The building also contains two stores, and a parking lot adjoins it.

The Vine has an entrance lobby measuring 26x35 feet. This spaciousness is further emphasized by large mirrors mounted on the side walls, while this effect of magnitude is yet otherwise heightened by a dome in the ceiling, where light sources are concealed. At one side a refreshment booth is built into the wall.

The foyer-proper serves mainly as a traffic lane to the auditorium and to lounge and toilet rooms, but in it, out of the line of traffic, general lounge facilities are provided. The Vine is equipped for year-around air-conditioning, with cooling by mechanical refrigeration.

A LINE O' LAW OR TWO

Actual suits involving points of law bearing on theatre operation, concisely described and analyzed in laymen's terms for the purpose of helping theatre management to avoid conditions which might lead it to be sued, and of providing cases on which its own suits or legal defense might be based. All decisions given one of higher courts and of recent date.

By LEO T. PARKER, Member Ohio Bar

When an Employee Is Not an Employee

WHEN DECIDING whether a theatre employe is a "legal employe" or "independent contractor," many employment angles must be considered. An employer is not liable for payment of social security, unemployment insurance or state workmen's compensation on independent contractors; also, an employer is not liable for injuries to persons or property caused by independent contractors, and need not pay insurance premiums for this protection. Moreover, an employer may sue and recover damages from an independent contractor who fails to perform work or services in accordance with prior agreement.

LEO T. PARKER

Ordinarily an independent contractor, legally, is a secondary employer who performs specified work or services for the primary employer, and the latter is relieved from many and numerous obligations, responsibilities and liabilities.

For illustration, in Vaughan v. Warner (157 Fed. [2d] 26) it was shown that the only control a theatre operator had over vaudeville performers was the time of their appearance on the program and the power to delete objectionable matter. The higher court held that these vaudeville performers were "independent contractors" and not "employees" and the theatre owner was not obligated to pay the state unemployment compensation contributions on remuneration or wages paid such performers.

The higher courts have established law that an independent contractor is one (1) who performs work requiring skill; (2) who produces certain results according to his own means and methods; (3) who furnishes part or all of the equipment for doing the work; (4) who is engaged in a recognized employment and is paid either a gross sum of money or by piece work; and (5) who is free as to his hours of labor and under no obligation to work exclusively for his employer.

This was brought out in Boehick Com- pany v. Industrial Commission (16 N. W. [2d] 298). Here it was shown that an owner of a truck rented it, with its driver, to a theatre operator. The owner of the truck carried the driver on his payroll, paid the driver's unemployment insurance, social security tax and compensation insurance. The theatre operator to whom the vehicle was rented paid the owner a flat rate of $6 per hour and had no control over the driver.

The driver of the vehicle was injured and the question presented the court was: Who is liable for payment of compensation to the injured driver?

The higher court held that the owner of the vehicle was an independent contractor and was fully responsible, thereby relieving the theatre operator from liability.

Testimony Determines Obscure Lease Terms

A COURT generally will construe the obligations of parties under a lease contract by reference to the testimony where the lease does not clearly define the rights and obligations of the parties.

For example, in Waukegan Times Theatre Corporation v. Conrad (70 N. E. [2d] 74) a dispute arose between a theatre corporation which leased a theatre building from its owner. The dispute involving payment by the theatre corporation for oil used to heat the building.

The higher court held that the theatre corporation must pay the oil bill because the lease contract did not clearly state that the landlord would pay to heat the building, and the theatre corporation did not demand that the landlord purchase the fuel.

The Right to Operate In a Restricted Area

THE FACT THAT all property owners in a restricted residential subdivision sign an agreement to permit operation of one theatre in the locality, does not give others the privilege of establishing and operating new businesses therein. This is illustrated in Kundinger v. Bagna (298 N. W. 386).

Here a subdivision was platted in 1898 and the lots were sold with limitations on their use for residential purposes. A man named Bagna purchased an old home in this subdivision and started alterations. He believed that he could legally operate his business in this subdivision because, previously, all of the property owners had signed an agreement permitting one of the homes to be used for business purposes. In a subsequent suit the higher court granted an injunction against Bagna's business.

An Easy Way to Fix Lease Renewal Rental

WHEN A LANDLORD and a tenant fail to agree on reasonable rental on renewal of lease, the court will fix the rental. In Graseck v. Bankers Trust Company (24 N. W. [2d] 426) it was shown that the Esquire Theatre Corporation entered into a lease under which a man named Graseck became its tenant. The lease was for a period of five years and covered a store and the lobby concessions of the theatre. Graseck carried on the business of vending confections, cigars, novelties, operating a delicatessen, soda fountain, etc. The lease provided for rental of $100 per month. It also provided that upon its expiration the lessee, Graseck, should have the right to renew for a like term "at such rental as these parties shall agree upon."

At the end of five years the parties were unable to agree on the rental in the renewal lease. The theatre corporation's representative demanded that Graseck pay $350 per month. Graseck asserted such demand was unreasonable and excessive and claimed $125 per month would be a reasonable rental. The higher court decided that the fair and reasonable rental for the next five years was $275 per month.

Libel—A Case with A Warning for Managers

IN DEALING with patrons, particularly those that may for some reason be objectionable, it is by no means outside the bounds of possibility for a manager to commit libel, by saying something about the patron which may be construed to be substantially disparaging. This point is suggested by a case involving a rather hasty judgment of a person's race, and reference to it in a damaging way.

This case is Cook v. Patterson, Inc. (39 S. E. [2d] 304). The testimony showed that a white man named Cook had an altercation with a man who thought Cook to be a Negro, and said so. Cook sued the man for damages. Although the lower court refused to allow damages, the higher court reversed the verdict and said:

"In a suit for insulting words, whether the words used are insulting is a jury question, depending on whether they may be construed as insults and tend to violence."

INSPECTION REMINDER—GUIDE

Air Conditioning and Ventilation

1—BLOWER

If in operation for several months, bearing pillow blocks should be disassembled and cleaned with kerosene; check parts for uneven wear, bad marks, which may indicate improper grease or oil. Check for proper alignment of shaft (a spirit level should be used for this). Examine lag bolts or screws holding frame to foundation to be sure blower does not creep. Inspect connection from mouth of blower to duct for looseness.

2—MOTORS

Inspection follows same procedure for motors in general (variously dealt with in preceding inspection charts). To summarize: Check bearings for wear and signs of poor lubrication, also bad alignment. Examine commutator and rotor windings for cleanliness and, if rotor clearance gauges are available, test clearances between stator windings, especially if uneven operation has been noted. Check stator coil pole pieces for looseness. Tighten loose connections and be sure splices are in good condition.

3—PULLEYS

Check for looseness and travel out of line (keys should be firm in keyways and set-screws around hub turned down hard). Clean grooves. (Never strike pulley directly with hammer.)

4—DRIVE BELTS

Make sure tension is not too much or too little. Check for undue flop, which may be due to misalignment of motor shaft and pulley with blower pulley. Examine for wear that may indicate replacement. (It is well to change belts around occasionally so each works in a different groove for a time.)

5—HYDRAULIC DRIVE

Some drives are of this type to provide variable speeds. It principally needs checking for breaks and bends of oil feed lever; also be sure priming pump is in good condition.

6—AIR WASHERS, DEHUMIDIFIERS, ETC.

Inspect spray nozzles for sediment, scale, rust. Check for broken feed pipes and condition of eliminator plates (if dirty, they should be washed down and given coat of rust-resistant paint). Examine makeup water tank or drip pan for cleanliness. Make sure louvers or doors over air intake operate easily and close tight.

7—WATER PUMPS

For thorough checking, housing around pump should be removed and interior drained. It should be free of sediment. Check impeller blades, packing glands, washers and coupling for defects. Give pump motor usual motor inspection.

8—COOLING COILS

Check fin surfaces for dirt and scale (never use a sharp instrument for cleaning). Make sure no fin is bent and all are clean (a steel wire brush is best for cleaning).

9—COMPRESSORS

Check piping for leaks, joints and valves for tightness, diaphragm for corrosion, refrigerant line for cleanliness, controls for proper pressure in system. Be sure expansion valves seat properly and have full charge. See that fans are interlocked with compressor.

10—CONDENSERS

General checkup is similar to that indicated for cooling coils. If putting the equipment in operation after layoff, be sure discharge and suction pressures are correct.

11—THERMOSTATIC CONTROLS

Check for cleanliness, tight wiring connections, pitted or fused terminals (use tiny file or sandpaper to smooth off pitted terminals). Be sure there is no penetration of moisture.

12—DUCT SYSTEM

Check for loose joints and dampers, defective sections, and general cleanliness.

CONCERNING THE THEATRE BUILDING

... how some things can be done and how some things might be done better.

by
BEN SCHLANGER
Theatre Architect & Consultant

HOW OPERATING POLICY AFFECTS BALCONY LEVEL

THE FLOOR LEVEL of the first row of chairs behind a crossover in a theatre balcony should be determined by the policy of operation. If a theatre is to be operated, or is likely in the future to be operated, on a continuous performance policy, thereby creating considerable traffic in such a crossover, it is advisable to place the level of this row of seats high enough so that vision of the entire height of the picture will clear over the heads of people walking through the crossover. The person walking in the forward edge of the crossover (nearest the screen) creates more of an obstruction than the person walking close to the first row of the balcony.

If it is possible, crossovers should be placed behind the last row of seats of the balcony, if the building code allows it. (For example, a balcony of more than seven rows depth in the city of New York requires such an intermediate crossover.)

SPACE FOR LOCKERS

GOING FURTHER into the provision of coin-operated lockers for coats, umbrellas and parcels—about which we wrote awhile back—we have come to the conclusion that, for the average situation, there should be one locker for every 25 seats.

These lockers could be placed back-to-back, with space in front of each row about 3 feet 4 inches wide. A two-locker unit measures 18 inches in width and depth. The floor space required amounts to something, it is true, but it is space put to a very good purpose from the point of view of service to patrons, and the return generously pays the rent on the space, particularly when you consider that most theatres have space that can be well adapted to this service without taking anything from other functions.

We have always been an advocate of a lift or dumbwaiter for carrying film to and from the projection room. Now it strikes us that the use of this device can be easily extended. It could be employed, for example, to transport cleaning materials and other supplies to upper levels and back again. The shaft size would have to be increased, of course, to accommodate packages and implements larger than a program of film, with the mechanism geared for the increase in load. Hand-operated dumbwaiters are manufactured to take loads up to 500 pounds. Doors leading into the shaft should be fireproof and self-closing.

AIR RECIRCULATION DUCTS ALONG AUDITORIUM SIDES

AIR RECIRCULATION in theatre air-conditioning systems is usually carried through metal mushroom openings placed under the auditorium chairs, these mushrooms leading to masonry trenches to return the air to the main fan system. These mushrooms create construction difficulties due to the accuracy of location necessary for their spacing under the chairs. Furthermore, they project above the floor level, which somewhat hampers cleaning and leads to scuffing of patrons' shoes.

There is at least one substitution for these mushrooms. That is to place the masonry air trenches that serve the main floor against the side walls of the auditorium. The side walls in the auditorium immediately above the trench would then be constructed with an air space between the structural wall and the interior.

Small grilles could be used in the interior wall for openings to the trench below, kept as close to the floor as possible for efficient air circulation, although at least 6 inches should be allowed between the finished floor and the bottom of the grille to make a base for mopping.

It is advisable to have a damper arrangement behind these grilles to enable maximum adjustment of air flow. Being vertical and away from the floor, such grilles would reduce the chances of dirt and papers finding their way into the air system. Floor mushrooms can suck in considerable dirt and paper scraps.

A continuous check has been made on the serviceability of asphalt tile as a wall finish. The reports have been excellent over a six-month period in a recent installation.

Occasional washing of these surfaces is recommended by the manufacturers, using a cleaning compound prepared for this work.

BE SURE PLASTER IS DRY WHEN PAPERING OR PAINTING

WITH WALLPAPER getting greater attention as an effective as well as convenient means of finishing interior walls of theatres (one of the very best where economy is important and local painters are not skilled in interior decoration), we point out that when it is applied on new plaster, one should be absolutely sure that the plaster is thoroughly dry. This, of course, is true of painting, also.

There are two pretty reliable methods of testing plaster for dryness. One is to use an electrical meter having two needles which are pressed into the plaster; the meter registers any dampness.

The other is to apply a liquid size which shows up a reddish stain if the plaster is damp, or if the chemical consistency of the plaster is such that the paper or plaster will be injured. (If the surface is to be painted, the size also acts as a primer coat.)

Incidentally, we have just received some samples of the heavy-duty wallpaper called Varlon. They include a number of attractive patterns suited to various parts of the theatre. We shall have occasion to discuss use of the new wallpapers later on.

KILROY CAN'T REGISTER IN THIS PHONE BOOTH!

Most any place where people of mischievous are or the doodling habit may tarry awhile, plaster walls are an invitation to apply a pencil. A telephone booth is especially subject to such vandalism. So Fox West Coast Theatres decided to try a way to end the nuisance. In the phone booth of the Loyola theatre, Los Angeles, the walls were finished in glazed ceramic tile. On it a pencil has little effect, and that little can be removed with even a dry cloth.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE MARKET AND ITS SOURCES OF SUPPLY

New Century Sound Equipment

NEWLY DESIGNED sound reproducing equipment emphasizing simplicity in mechanical arrangements with a high degree of selectivity for specific capacity, acoustical and application requirements, has been announced by the Century Projector Corporation, New York. The new equipment, the manufacturer points out, has been based fundamentally on the design of the previous Century systems developed in co-operation with the Western Electric Company.

In the announcement the manufacturer states, "Century will welcome requests for assistance in making a proper choice of this equipment to fulfill special requirements. Not only can the initial installation be tailor-made, but should later developments require additional power, reproducer modifications, or other unforeseen specifications, they may be easily added to or subtracted from as changing engineering standards may dictate."

THE SOUNDHEADS

The "Master" reproducer combines, for filtering, an adaptation of an electromagnetically damped flywheel and an oil-damped stabilizer, his dual device is engineered with mechanical simplicity, however, to make it easily serviceable in the theatre.

The "Master" has twin exciter lamps, shock-mounted and switch-controlled, providing for quick replacement in case of lamp burnout and an off position for cutting out undesirable portions of leaders, noise, bad splices, etc. Micrometer adjustments are provided for guiding the film, focusing and azimuth control of the optical system. The optical system includes an image-destroying collector lens. This transfers the light, after it passes the film, to the photoelectric cell surface, which varies in intensity over its whole area. This arrangement for freedom from distortion emphasizes variable area sound tracks.

Both "Master" and "Standard" reproducers may be equipped with a photoelectric cell panel for use only with those sound systems which require low-capacity cable connections to amplifiers mounted on front walls, or with the Century preamplifiers and volume control for use with the Century amplification systems. They also may be equipped with push-pull optical systems for theatre or studio use.

The motor is mounted vertically, and the direct drive arrangement can be adapted to 25-, 50- or 60-cycle induction motor operation, or for synchronous motor or interlock motor systems for studios or other high-precision sound reproduction.

The "Standard" reproducer, designed especially for small theatres, eliminates the sound sprocket entirely. The film passes from the lower projector sprocket past the scanner drum and rollers to the hold-back sprocket and lower magazine. There is thus only one driven shaft.

The new Century amplification system has been especially designed for selection of units to meet either special or conventional requirements. The preamplifier, which fits either the "Master" or the "Standard" reproducer, has one stage of amplification giving, according to the manufacturer, approximately 10 db. gain, and reduces the output impedance from the reproducer to 600 ohms through a precision variable network. This allows individual volume control from each reproducer and is designed to prevent electrical interference or pick up.

MAIN AMPLIFIER

Available in ranges of 30-40 watts, 75 watts and 250 watts, the new Century power amplifier is a single, push-pull stage of amplification entirely self-contained and employing only two amplifying tubes, thus departing from design which parallels high-gain amplifiers in the power unit.

The main amplifier is equipped with a fixed variable attenuator for setting average theatre volume. It may be used as a flat frequency amplifier to within 1 db. from 40 to 20,000 cycles, or may be modified to obtain any frequency characteristic which may be desired. It is factory-adjusted to meet the standard frequency characteristic specified by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The distortion rating the manufacturer states, is guaranteed to be less than 2% total harmonics, and less than 8% intermodulation from 40 cycles to 10,000 cycles at full 15 watts output. The manufacturer adds that this output can be increased to 18 watts for average practical purposes.

The amplifier also includes a separate 5-watt amplifier circuit with separate volume control for high quality monitoring, "cryroom" reproduction, a manager's office, or hearing aid equipment. It is electrically isolated from the main amplifier to obviate interference from the regular speakers. Power supply of the main amplifier is separately filtered and voltage-controlled.

The new Century Systems may have either a.c. or d.c. exciter lamp power supply. Emergency operation may be selected with either a.c. or d.c. power.

Facilities for providing emergency switching of amplifiers, and other special arrangements, is accomplished with specially designed switching panels.

All units are designed for standard relay rack type of mounting. However, on small reproducing systems a wall-mounted cabinet with a convenient hinged rack provides ease of service and installation. For larger systems with power amplifiers, either open or closed relay racks are available.

The manufacturer recommends the use of Altec-Lansing's "Voice of the Theatre" speaker systems with the new Century equipment.

Sprocket to Prevent Fire by Dowsing Light

A PROJECTOR safety device, with a mechanism for actuating the change-over dowsing contained within a special sprocket, has been announced by the Control Engineering Corporation, San Francisco. The device is the invention of Lloyd Mannon, a member of IA Local 162 and head of the company.

Proceeding on the basis that, as his announcement states, "the only effective means of preventing a film fire is automatic, instantaneous control of the projection light and the accompanying heat," Mr. Mannon has developed a mechanism sensitive to speed which is contained entirely within a sprocket variously adapted to insertion in different makes of 35-mm. projectors. The adaptation and the function are thus explained by Mr. Mannon:

"The automatic safety sprocket is a very accurate speed sensitive mechanism which needs neither adjustment nor maintenance. It is very simple to install as it comes on an adaptor bracket made for each model of projector. To install on a Super Simplex, simply remove the three screws holding the lower back plate, remove the plate and replace with the adaptor bracket.

Mounted thus in the projector, the speed sensitive mechanism operates a switch that is connected to the closing coil of the changeover dowsers. In threading the projector, a normal lower loop is made which rides on the sprocket. During normal operation of the projector, the safety sprocket is rotated at 360 r.p.m. by the film.

"Anything that might cause a fire will instantly affect the sprocket. A blown fuse or frozen bearing will slow the sprocket; loss of the loop, torn sprocket holes or a break in the film will stop the sprocket. Should any of these things occur, the mechanism within the sprocket will instantly cause the changeover dowsers to close

William H. Marsh has been appointed Western sales manager of Marsh Wall Products, Inc., Dover, Ohio, manufacturers of Marlite plastic-finished paneling for decorative interior treatments, and also of aluminum mouldings. Steel Lounge Furniture With Changeable Cushions

FOR JUST SUCH requirements in service and maintenance, in addition to attractiveness, that are found in theatre lounges, a line of steel furniture with reversible cushions has been brought out by the Admiral Chrome Furniture Company, New York. The line includes a club chair, a two-cushion love seat, and a three-cushion settee.

Each style is constructed of 16-gauge (diameter 1 inch) tubular steel, which is triple-plated in copper, nickel and chrome. The cushions in all models are reversible, yet are made with inner coiled springs, built as a unit. Further, the cushions are interchangeable as back or seat cushions. They are covered in two-tone leather type coated fabric, which is available in any of nine different colors.

HOW ELECTRONIC LAMP CONTROL OPERATES

The automatic carbon feed control of the new projection lamp developed by the Forest Manufacturing Corporation, and placed on the market last fall, is sketched with the elements labeled. The solenoid coil for actuation of the feed control mechanism is itself controlled by an electronic timer which is set for a certain number of impulses. This timer consists in a small thyratron tube in circuit with condensers and resistors for the regulation of current flow. The number of impulses is set, as desired, by turning a knob of the variable resistor. For such regulation a dial is provided to show arc amperage according to the type of carbon, and the timer can thus be set at the specific arc current of the lamp. The rate of carbon feed, when set, is maintained without further manipulation of the control so long as the arc current or carbon size is not changed.

before a fire can start. By using the changeover dowsers, which is standard equipment for all projection installations, the extra cost of an additional safety dowsers is saved."

Drive-In Equipment Demand Seen Growing

THE DRIVE-IN theatre is "growing up" as a division of motion picture division and has come to warrant the establishment of special provisions for supplying it according to its particular requirements. This is the view voiced in a press statement by J. E. Currie, manager of National Theatre Supply's Drive-In Theatre Department. He said that inquiries and orders for drive-in equipment had been steadily increasing since the end of 1946.

He emphasized the significance of the in-a-car type of speaker as an equipment development representing the growing popularity of the automobile theatre.

"Our in-a-car speaker, for example, was designed to bring the drive-in theatre patron high sound quality right in the privacy of the family car," he pointed out. "This compact, ultra-modern, waterproof permanent magnet speaker has a 6½-inch

Identifiable in the picture as of lighter tone than the aluminum letters, the new plastic letters have the same reinforcing bevel design. The mounting lugs are moulded integrally with the letter itself. The original production included only the 10-inch size, but other dimensions will be added later, the manufacturer states. The translucent plastic letters are available in red, green, blue and amber.

Sponge Rubber Lining For Carpet Installations

BLOWN SPONGE rubber underlay or lining for carpeting in theatres and buildings where floor coverings receive comparable wear, has been announced by the United States Rubber Company, New York, in various widths in a standard thickness of 1/4-inch. (The use of sponge rubber lining is discussed by John J. Sefting in his "Ways and Means" department, page 42.)

Sponge rubber lining of the 1/4-inch thickness is pointed out as being capable of increasing carpet wear by almost a third according to actual tests; moreover, it will not pack with age, and is vermin-proof.

The widths available for attached carpet installations are 36 and 53 inches. For special conditions it can also be supplied a thickness of half an inch. The lining can be joined both in width and length with adhesive binding tape.

Elmer D. Eades has been named manager of the Southern Regional Office in Atlanta of the RCA Victor Division of RCA, which he joined in 1932.

John F. Chester is the new director of public relations of the Carrier Corporation, Syracuse. A newspaperman for many years, he was general business editor of the Associated Press from 1945 until his recent appointment to the Carrier post.

The Needle's Eye

A DEPARTMENT ON PROJECTION & SOUND REPRODUCTION EQUIPMENT
& METHODS FOR THEATRE OWNERS, MANAGERS AND THEIR STAFFS

"No other art or industry in the world narrows down its success to quite such a needle's eye as that through which the motion picture has to pass—an optical aperture—in the continuous miracle of the screen by a man and his machine, the projectionist and his projector."

Dividing the Work in A Two-Man Booth (Socko!)

THIS ARTICLE sets forth what are my own—my very own—ideas as to how a two-man projection room should be run—that is, the work divided up. You readers who disagree are free—in fact, you are invited—to state your views in writing, and I'll print 'em, too! I have been asked so many times for my views on the subject and matters related to it that I am going to give them. Maybe my neck is too long for my own good. However, here goes.

First, regardless of contract, I think that on the opening day of a new show, both men should report to work at least one hour ahead of their usual reporting time, and every reel of film should be examined by hand. A report should be made out and handed to the manager before show time, stating the condition of the prints. This would include print number, seal number and exchange, and running time of each subject. This method protects the projectionist and theatre against paying for someone else's damage. If after the first show the manager finds there is trouble in the recording, he can fill in the report accordingly.

The show being made up, the sound should be tested, and the machines and lamps be given a light cleaning (assuming that they were left in good condition the night before). One more thing on early arrival: There should be one day set aside for a real house-cleaning each week. By a real cleaning I mean every part of the booth should be gone over—in fact, everything that could stop a show should be checked, oiled and cleaned. If each man would show that much interest in his booth and job, I dare say we would not have many stops and I think we projection-ists as a group would be appreciated a lot more by the owners of the theatres.

Assuming all these precautions have been taken, let's start on what I think is a good way to operate the running of a show. I do not like each man having his own machine! This would be all right if each man's likes and dislikes were the same, as far as light, focus and the attention he gives his machine. In my experience this doesn't always work out. So I say do it this way:

One day let one man take care of all picture changeovers and stay by the running machine at all times. The other man laces, rewinds, trims the lamps, wipes out gates, cleans reflectors and makes sound changeovers, etc. The next day the men change responsibilities. I feel that in this way your job doesn't become tiresome and in some cases the second man isn't always stuck with the dirty end of the job. Moreover, there should be no hard feelings between the men because each does the same jobs. I presume other methods will work

What to Do in Case of Film Fire

Burning nitrate film is dangerous. It can kill—it has killed. The slower it burns, the more dangerous it is. Burning nitrate film produces nitrous gases which, when breathed into the lungs, combine with the water of the body to form nitric acid, which burns the lining of the lungs, causing injury likely to endure for years if it does not soon result in death. When film is ignited in a theatre projection room, only one proper course of action remains for the projectionist.

HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION!

Managers of small theatres find that Simplified High Intensity Projection actually attracts more customers to their shows. The reason?

Because this inexpensive form of high intensity projection gives the movie-goer more for his money. It provides a brighter screen, a sharper image. It makes available to the small theatre the same perfection of modeling and detail...the same fidelity of color reproduction...found in the larger theatres. This means more audience relaxation and enjoyment...which means bigger box office.

In spite of the obvious improvement that Simplified High Intensity Projection can make on your screen, it is actually low in cost. In fact, just a few extra admissions per show will more than pay for it.

Take the first step today toward attracting more and more customers...Consult your supply house on the availability of High Intensity Lamps.

just as well, but I also can recall a lot of cases where friction is high due to the poor allocation of work. I know the system suggested here works. What are your views on this subject?

Port Glass Transmission And Light-Up Time

A LETTER from Harry Lee of Calgary, Alta., Canada, raises a question that should get a "raise" out of some of you fellows. Here it is:

"I would like your opinion on two questions. All over the city the lens port glasses are perpendicular with the lens. I notice on the back wall of our projection room a perfect picture is reflected from the port glass, proving to me that quite a lot of light is not getting to the screen. If this glass were put on an angle, the rays would strike the glass at different lengths, thereby breaking up the light beam when striking the smooth surface. It wouldn't distort the picture any as all rays would travel the same distance and finish with a flat field on the screen.

"Our light-up signals are half a minute. The boys tell me it is too short. By the time you have trimmed the arc and got in position your eyes are more alert and not tired watching for the cue, result perfect changeover. One minute you are standing looking for the cue seems like an hour—you get restless, your eyes get tired and you are liable to blink just as it is going by, missing the cue."

Brother Lee has submitted, first, a question that could be answered in just a few words if he would like to accept my say so, but there have been many words said pro and con on this matter. I will try to give some of the reasons both for and against.

PORT GLASS EFFICIENCY

First, port glass, if of the best optical glass, will cut light about 5%. If glass is used in the ports, it should be cleaned before every show. Dust that collects on the front surface will decrease light still more. A poor grade of ordinary window glass will cause picture distortion.

If you are using the glass to cut your booth noise, why don't you use baffles in your port openings? You can use any type acoustical board. Cut an opening in the first one just large enough for the rays from the lens to pass, and increase the opening in each succeeding one enough more to accommodate the expanding beam. You can use as many as you see fit. (I do not allow any optical glass to be used in my situations.)

I have always felt similarly about the degree of angle for port glass, but from all reports it works the same either way as far as light transmission is concerned.

This, of course, is based on a good grade of optical glass.

Now for question two: Well, Mr. Lee, you will always have arguments about light-up time. If I asked twenty projectionists, I would get twenty different views. Each one would have his argument as to why. So I will answer this one the way I like it and the way the majority of my boys work.

I think the one-minute period is the best. It gives your arc a chance to settle down. As to looking for the cue, that is up to the individual. (Hope this doesn't cause you any trouble with your fellow workers!)

Once Again: Throw Is No Screen Light Factor

IT HAS often been mentioned in this column that the length of throw does not affect screen illumination. The size of the screen determines the illumination at a given arc wattage. I think there still must be some confusion on this subject (as there has been since projection started). Let's go over this ground yet again.

The length of throw, or distance from the projection lens to the screen, has no bearing on the intensity of the light incident upon the screen (if, of course, the air through which this beam passes is sufficiently free of dust, smoke, fog or other foreign particles as not to diffuse or refract the light, and if the lenses used have equal power of transmission). For example, let us suppose we have a picture 27 feet 9½ inches wide. A 3¼-inch E.F. lens 110 feet from the screen will project this size of picture with a standard sound aperture, and so will a 5½-inch E.F. lens 185 feet from the screen.

If both the 3¼-inch E.F., and 5½-inch E.F. lens have the same relative aperture and the same number of optical elements, made up of the same kind of glass, there will be no difference in the light on the screen 110 feet or 185 feet away from the lens.

The misconception surrounding the idea that the length of throw has a direct bearing on the amount of light on the screen comes from the fact that if we place an object—say, 4 inches from an open light source, such as a candle—we will have one-fourth as much light falling upon it as we have at 2 inches from the candle (unfocused light falling upon an object decreases by the square of the distance from the light source to that object).

Another factor which has led many to believe that a longer throw causes less light to fall upon the same size of screen is the fact that long focal length lenses usually have a lower relative aperture than short focal length lenses, and do, for that reason only, transmit less light.

Should Sound Service Men Include Projection?

I HAVE ALSO been asked to give my opinion on how much field a sound engineer should cover. In other words, should our sound service man be responsible for all the booth equipment, or should he stick to the field he was originally chosen for.

Well, here's the way I have got it from most sound engineers whom I have spoken to about this: A good portion of the sound men are college graduates in the field of electrical engineering and they feel quite capable of taking care of the circuits in a sound system, but many of them tell you outright that they never paid much attention to projectors. I do not mean that some of the engineers are not capable of doing this work, because like any person mechanically inclined, they would delve into a projector for their own satisfaction or to help out a projectionist who is in trouble or maybe doesn't understand it as well as he might. If these conversations with sound service men have produced worthy evidence, perhaps a sound service organization should conduct sound service and let

RAY S. HANSEN of the Fox theatre, Fertile, Minn., writes to inquire about a double rear shutter that I described in one of my columns. He asked if they could be purchased at this time. I had to inform him that Alvin Sloan of Washington, N. J., who developed them some years ago, still has the models shelved.

Also received a thank-you note from Bill Howe, Pittsburgh, Pa.

From John C. Mowrer, Royal theatre, Danville, Ind., comes the following:

After reading your column I became curious about the "pinhole" test. Our light is good but could stand improvement. Any information you could give would be appreciated. We are using Simplex regulars, throwing slightly more than 100 feet. Our lamps are Strong high-intensity. Recently we have bought a pair of Kollmorgen Series II coated lenses with 4.75-inch focal length. They are doing a great job but I would like to improve it. From what Bill Howe writes, your test should do this.

I have informed Mr. Mowrer to look up the May 4, 1946 issue of BETTER THEATRES and he will find the complete data on the pinhole and split aperture test. He can also write to Heyer-Shultz, Inc., Montclair, N. J., for their booklet containing the same information (probably a bit more on the technical side, and a lot of other useful data). He can also purchase his pinhole and split aperture plates from this concern.

the projectionist be responsible for the other booth equipment.

I don't mean that all projectionists should be first-class repair men. That is why we have repair shops with skilled mechanics in charge. But each projectionist should be able to make the repairs necessary to keep a show going.

Any circuit of any size should employ a chief projectionist to look after these repairs and try to keep the booths up to standard at all times. He, being paid for that service, could spend time in each booth other than at show time and make minor adjustments, thus making breakdowns and showstops less likely.

Owners with only one theatre should allow his projectionist enough money over and above his salary for coming in mornings and checking and learning more about his machines.

I think this would tend to make more work and salary for each group and, furthermore, would save countless arguments and hard feelings between projectionists and sound engineers.

Columbus, Ohio, inquires about a method of "daylight" projection. He writes:

"I would greatly appreciate any information you may have on rear projection or 'daylight' projection. Specifically, I am interested in 16mm. equipment only. Needless to say I realize your field is 35mm, but I felt that possibly the equipment, accessories or 'ideas' might be adaptable for my use.

"As you may know we augment our regular hospital theatre showing with 16mm ward movies. At times it is not practical, nor advisable, to darken the wards to any great extent. Obviously, therefore, standard equipment leaves a great deal to be desired. For this reason I am 'kicking around' thoughts on shadow boxes, 'daylight' and rear projection."

A method that should meet this situation is the Trans Lux system. Two things are needed to make this scheme work—a lens of very short focal length with an optical component for reversing the projected image; and a translucent screen. Both are available from the Trans-Lux Corporation in New York.

I understand they have a method of fabrication for such screens so as to control the transmission and diffusion—by this I mean, for a long narrow hall the screen transmits more light and diffuses less. This screen is directional in character. But for wide seating areas the screen is fabricated to transmit less light and diffuse the transmitted light more evenly.

These translucent screens provide a pretty clear image at a fairly high level of room illumination—especially at relatively close viewing range. To give even greater contrast, however, some of the room light could be shielded from the screen surface by "shrouding" it a bit—that is, setting it in a shadow box. A simple knock-down way of doing this would be to attach a short bracket to each corner and fasten to them a strip of black cloth.

WEATHERPROOF SPEAKER

Individual volume control knob on each speaker permits adjustment by the patron.

which the confection is carried up to the foyer case, seasoning shelves and bins.

The factor of public appreciation of these refreshment services—its growing demand for them, in fact, now that the business has become receptive to them—may be somewhat obscured by their profitability. The profit motive is not to be minimized, of course; but the service to patrons is present also, and that is important.

That fact directs attention to other ways of expressing this policy of extra service. One obvious one is apparel and parcel checking facilities. Few motion picture theatres could economically provide an attended checkroom; on the other hand, there isn't, in regular circumstances, any need for anything so elaborate. Coin lockers especially designed for coats, umbrellas and parcels, installed in a number of theatres, have proved adequate for a "checking" service and they are self-supporting.

Here again the sordid hand of profits shows up to degrade the idea of service. In one theatre having only 56 lockers the income from them last year was $2,214; in another, with 99 lockers, it was $3,620. Thus, at a profit, many a patron was provided a place to put a bulky overcoat, several parcels, and a wet umbrella besides in his lap and in other patrons' faces.

Various automatic dispensers expand in smaller ways this postwar picture of extra service to patrons—at a profit. And in the field of over-the-counter refreshments, the soda fountain, according to the trend today, is itself but an intimation of more diversified service yet to come.

A Handy Guide for Better Theatre Carpeting

IN BOTH THE purchasing and installation of carpeting, money can be saved, and greater satisfaction achieved generally, if the job is planned step by step. The carpeting just cannot be simply ordered, then left up to the installation men and carpet dealer to do the rest—not if you want to be sure of a good trouble-free job. There are so many things that must be carefully considered in order to realize a first-class installation that even with the most reliable and experienced carpet people doing the job, troubles will arise if there is no definite planning of what should be done and how it should be done. Here, then, is a "check-list" which may come in handy as a reminder in handling the carpeting job from start to finish.

Ideas should be exchanged with the architect or interior designer, if he has a say in the selection of the carpeting. They know how the theatre was designed as to size, shape and style and the carpeting should be adapted to fit in scale and pattern, and there may also be width and type factors. The owner's practical experience and knowledge of his class of patronage should also have a hearing on the selection of the carpeting. In any case carpets should not be selected just because the color and design "looks nice."

A check should be made of the grade and quality to be sure it will be readily available later on for patching or spot replacement. Lounges, a mezzanine level and even stairs in some cases, and the manager's office can, of course, use carpeting of a different design from that in the foyer, standee area, and aisles. In lounges and the manager's office, in fact, plain broadloom carpeting may be the answer to a scale problem.

In the foyer, auditorium and other traffic areas, Velvet and Wilton weaves are mostly used, since they are durable types that are available at a relatively reasonable price.

An important item to consider in the carpeting of a theatre is the lining. A good quality of lining will not only add softness underfoot, but years to the useful life of the carpet. In theatres either the combination hair-jute, or all-hair linings are usually installed. Of the two, the all-hair lining is the most durable, as moisture will not readily affect it, it will not burn (it merely sings) and it tends to keep its original shape longer.

If possible, 1/2-inch lining should be laid so as to avoid that flat beat-out appearance after some time in use. For stairs and balcony aisles, double linings should be laid if only 1/4-inch thick lining is available.

INSTALLATION PLANNING

After the type of carpeting is decided upon, a consultation should be had with the carpet distributor and the carpet installation men so that there will be no question as to the areas in which the carpeting will be laid, or how it will be laid. The installation man should be told definitely the type and size of match carpeting to be used so he can check the yardages ordered and see if allowances are made for matching the pattern in sewing the breadths together and having enough for proper turn-under when laying. A written specification covering the entire carpet installation should be made up either by the owner, the architect or the carpet man so that there will be no misunderstanding later on.

In addition, the installation man or carpet distributor should furnish an accurate drawing showing how the breadths of carpets will run and in what areas. Too many times the carpet men have been given so many yards of carpeting to sew, press and lay in the theatre, then after the installation, when difficulties arose, nobody knew who was at fault. It must be remembered that no matter how honest and reliable the carpet men are, if they are given a blanket order, with nothing definite to go by, oversights and poor judgment can result. The time to straighten everything out is before the installation not after. These precautions will help to do that:

1. Don't select a large pattern or repeat, if feasible, as it wastes yardage in matching.

2. Don't lay the seams of the carpet against the line of most traffic.

3. Don't run long, continuous breadths of carpets from foyer to standee rail.

4. Don't have cross-seams between the carpet in the standee and lobby—that is, in line with the entrance doors.

5. Don't have cross-seams at the head of aisles, that is at the standee rail line and where the aisles begin.

6. Don't have the breadths in the aisles finish exactly at the front line of chairs.

7. Don't have more than 3 inches of floor showing between the carpet and aisle standards at each side of the aisle.

8. Don't have the breadths of the carpet running in the standee area from side wall to side wall.

9. Don't have the breadths of carpet in the crossovers running from aisle to aisle, or from aisle to wall.

10. Don't have half-breadths of carpet in the aisles with the raw end unbound.

11. Don't have the ends of carpet at the door saddles unbound.

12. Don't figure the carpeting in depressed aisles flush with the surface of the floor, as it will settle in time and become below the level of the floor.

13. Don't figure the lengths of the carpet breadths according to the actual length or width of the areas to be carpeted as then the breadths will have to be kicked strenuously to get the proper turn-under at each end. Any forceful kicking or stretching of the carpet will tend to weaken it.

14. Don't allow the carpet layers to pour water on the carpet to rectify their mistake in laying or matching of the pattern. They should either restretch the breadth or breadths, or re-sew for a better match.

15. Don't approve of the door saddles being below the level of the top of the carpeting. This will give the patron's feet a chance to dig under the ends of the carpet. And don't allow the bottoms of doors to scrape over carpeting.

16. Don't permit the carpet layers to drill the fastening holes more than 6 inches apart, especially at the door saddles and at the sides of the aisles. Be sure they insert sound wood plugs in the fastening holes. Examine a few of them to be certain they are all right.

17. Don't allow the carpet to extend beyond the chair line, or be cut irregularly around the chair standards.

18. Don't have the carpet anywhere with raw edges at the ends of the breadths.

19. Don't allow the carpeting to be laid over a dirty floor or where portion of it is cracked or is bulging. Repair the defects first; if not trouble will surely appear later on.

20. Don't allow stair carpeting to be fastened to nailing strips that are not rigid and strong. Don't approve loose, shifting carpeting on stairs even if it means drilling additional holes, or installing new or extra wood strips—don't allow the carpeting to be laid over sharp edges of the stair treads unless the edges are rounded or an extra layer of lining is installed for added protection.

21. Don't allow the carpet breadths in the balcony aisles to be shorter than required for the entire length of the aisles, as any cross seams here will open up in a short time.

22. Don't permit the carpet layers to leave the job until all puckers, wrinkles or loose portions of the carpeting are completely remedied. It is so easy for them to say "we'll be back tomorrow," but tomorrow something turns up and they cannot do the job. In the meantime the carpeting takes a beating, of course. One need not be alarmed or think the carpet of inferior grade if there is a slight shedding of fine fuzz after a few days in use. This is a natural condition with new carpet and this shedding will stop soon.

In the care of carpeting, it is of course generally appreciated that cleaning must be daily and thorough. It might be added here that one shouldn't allow the carpeting at the entrance doors to be left unprotected on rainy or snowy days. The use of corrugated rubber mats, or a good grade of fibre runners, offer good protection in wet weather. Above all don't let small defects or minor repairs pile up with the thought that they'll be remedied tomorrow. These little things will develop into big and costly things.

THE WHY OF THESE DONT'S

Select a pattern, whenever that is feasible, in either an 18-inch or a 24-inch repeat. In this way only 18 or 24 inches will have to be allowed in each breadth for matching the design when figuring the yardage or in laying. Especially in laying the carpet in the aisles, allow in front the first row an amount of carpet that includes an entire repeat. If the pattern has an 18-inch repeat, allow 18-inches; if a 24 inch repeat, 24 inches. Thus when the carpet in the aisles need repairs later on, the breadths can be shifted and a perfect that to remedy paint that is flaking off cement floors, first remove the paint by scrubbing with a hot solution of trisodium phosphate, or of washing soda, using 3 pounds to the gallon of hot water? After the paint softens with several such scrubbing, it should be scraped off, then rinsed cleanly off the floor. When the floor is thoroughly dry, it can be given a coat of rubber base cement floor paint, then repainted with a suitable surfacing paint.

that alcohol stains, if not too bad, can be removed from varnished wood by using pumice with lemon oil? Make a cream of the mixture, and rub it over the spot in the direction of the grain with a soft cloth. After this, wipe immediately with a cloth dampened with lemon oil, then polish with a soft flannel cloth.

that asphalt tile should be dusted with a clean mop only? An oil mop, strong soaps, soap powders and strong scouring powders help to deteriorate the asphalt? Use a mop wrung out in clean cool water, or mild soap suds.

that paste or liquid wax should never be used on asphalt tile as they are made up of solvents that tend to soften the asphalt and attack the colors? Heavy furniture placed over asphalt tile or even over carpeting should have rubber protectors or pads placed under the feet to prevent digging into the material.

that vaseline can remove ink stains from upholstery, carpets, draperies, etc.? Work it well into the stain, then wash with plenty of soap and water. Also, the stain can be soaked with a little turpentine, then sponged off with carbon tetrachloride. If it still persists, use kerosene or glycerine, washing it afterwards with plenty of soap and water. Ink stains are tough. Don't let one failure discourage you. Try again—and again.

match of the design or pattern will still be had without the carpet breadth ending far under the front row. This allowance should also be made wherever possible for carpet on stairs.

Always run the seams of the carpeting from the rear wall to the standee rail so that they will be more or less in line with the most traffic. Also in this way, there will be shorter breadths to repair in case of trouble, and above all, in new laying, there will be no cross seams at the head of the aisles where there is always the heaviest traffic and strongest pull on the seams.

At entrance doors where there are no saddles or dividing strips of metal, install a marble or concrete slab to break up the area between the lobby and the standee area.

RUNNING THE BREADTHS

It is bad practice to run long, continuous breadths of carpet from one end of the lobby to the standee rail, for when repairs are needed, long and costly breadths will be required, or cross seams will have to be put in where patches of the new carpet are laid.

Remember, having cross seams in foyer or standee carpet is not undesirable from a decorative point of view, but the seams will open up in a relatively short time, as here is where traffic concentrates.

One other advantage of having door saddles between the foyer and standee is that a different type of carpet can be laid in the foyer from that in the standee area. Saddles neatly divide the two areas and the laying of two different patterns will not make a bad appearance.

Have the carpet breadths in the aisles as close as possible to the chair standards to avoid tripping hazards and fast wear of the edges. While the fastening holes may be drilled 6 inches apart, 3 inches apart is better so that the carpet is flat at the point where patrons enter the rows.

Lay the lining in the aisles so that the edges will be in 1½ inches back at both sides of the carpet, allowing the carpet to slope to the floor. Having the lining the same width as the carpet will tend to raise the carpeting off the floor, especially with the raw edge of the carpet breadth turned under.

Be sure the raw edges of a half-breadth carpet in aisles or on stairs are bound tightly to avoid any turn under, ravelling of the edge, and high humps when it is fastened to the floor. At both edges of aisle carpeting light-gauge metal, slightly beveled nosing strips should be installed the full length of the aisle to protect the carpet against edge wear.

Have the ends of the carpet at door saddles bound tightly so that the carpet will lay flat and be below the level of the saddles. Carpet bulging up here, as is the case with a turn-under of the raw edges, will develop wear very fast.

Allow 4 inches, in addition to the actual length or width of the area to be carpeted, on each breadth so that there will be a 2-inch turn-under available at each end of the breadth to hide the raw edges and to prevent extreme kicking by the carpet men when stretching the carpet.

Add about 5% of the total actual yardage required if the pattern or repeat is 18-inch, and about 8% if the pattern is 24 inches and over, in arriving at the exact amount of yards to be ordered. These percentages will be the allowances that must be used up in matching the pattern when sewing the breadths together.

FIGURING YARDAGE

Theatre carpet is usually available in either $\frac{3}{4}$ (27-inch) or $\frac{4}{4}$ (36-inch) widths. The 27-inch is used most because it is easier to lay and match, and cheaper to patch. The $\frac{4}{4}$ or 36 inch wide carpet is used very seldom except in special cases. Broadloom comes in standard widths of 3, 6, 9, 12, 15 and 18 feet, by almost any length. In figuring yardage for broadloom carpet; multiply the length by the width in feet and divide by 9, which will give the answer in square yards.

Keep in mind the standard widths of broadloom, as the actual floor area of the room to be carpeted will not always give the exact yardage of carpet required. For example, if a room is 10 feet by 13 feet, the floor area would be 14.7 square yards, but the actual broadloom yardage required would be 17.4 square yards (if no seams are desired). In this example a 12x13-foot broadloom carpet would have to ordered, with 2 feet on one side wasted in laying.

The amount of lining required, when the total net yardage of carpet is known, is figured by multiplying the carpet yardage by 3, then dividing the result by 4, which gives the square yards of lining.

For wood nailing strips on top of a stair riser, $\frac{3}{8}$ x $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch plywood serves well. When buried in concrete, the strip should have the sides beveled so that it will stay put in the concrete. For a better installation, two such strips should be fastened to the riser, one at the front and the other at the back.

CARPETING BALCONIES

Be very careful in carpeting the balcony that everything possible is done to eliminate tripping hazards. Actually, a light color is indicated here, if safety were the only consideration.

Where stair carpeting is fastened to carpet in the balcony, the seam should be some distance from the nosing of the tread, for the wear is hardest there.

It is foolhardy to try to save on the drilling of holes or driving of nails in balcony carpet laying. Insist on having all wrinkles or puckers, and any looseness, remedied as soon as they are discovered after the laying.

Sponge-rubber and hair lining have been installed under carpet in some balcony aisles and stairs. Quarter-inch hair lining is laid directly over the risers and treads, and over this 1/2-inch sponge rubber is placed, with the carpet resting on the latter. The rubber lining is laid the full width and length of the stair or aisle treads and risers, in one continuous strip.

Another way is first to attach strips of the rubber to the steps with rubber cement, and then lay the hairlining and carpet over them. The rubber strip is of such a width that it overhangs and covers the noising of the tread. The carpet is fastened to the stairs with screws and washers instead of carpet nails. However, in this type of installation a wood slat or strip is first fastened to the face of the riser instead of at the intersection of tread and riser. As a rule, the first type of installation is the better one of the two in that it gives the carpet a constant, soft cushion all around, with the least possible shifting underneath.

The Other Love

United Artists-Enterprise — Woman's Picture

It's all been done before, beginning with Camille and, no doubt, even earlier. In "The Other Love," the background is the Swiss Alps and fancy Continental resorts. But the pattern is familiar, easily recognizable by the regulars who find motion pictures their best entertainment.

In this case, the best bet—and it could be substantial—is the feminine end of the audience contingent. Women will find in this film, based on a story by Erich Maria Remarque, who once wrote about the quiet on the Western Front and later got around to the Arch of Triumph, a series of good performances having a time with stereotyped material and doing their best under the circumstances. An added difficulty is the dialogue invented by Harry Brown and Ladislav Fodor, ascribing to the leads verbiage that is found in pot-boilers and only remotely in real life.

Barbara Stanwyck is the noted pianist whose lungs give out. Her breakdown falls into the medical arms of David Niven, who promptly falls in love. But Miss Stanwyck, rebellious underneath, rebels openly after a chance meeting with Richard Conte, smoothie with apparently unlimited means and a charming manner with women. They leave the Alps for the European hot spots. Her health grows worse and her cough louder. Niven goes in pursuit, spurred by more than a medical interest in Miss Stanwyck.

When Niven catches up, she is functioning on a policy of smashing the face of the clock—as the dialogue has her declare—and enjoying life on a mountain top with only air between her and the sun—as the dialogue also has her say in about these words. Niven, appealing to her fruitlessly, has better luck when he explains matters to Conte. Miss Stanwyck returns to the haven of the sanitarium where, finally, she marries Niven. Shortly thereafter she dies, and the film comes to a close.

Story content and dramatic motivation are not particularly strong. They make it required to embark upon footage which is often superfluous in relation to the development of the main story line, such as it is. But all of it is played against backgrounds and foregrounds of top-level production values. "The Other Love" ranks well up at the top of the heap in terms of technical excellence. It is constantly good to look at if not constantly good to hear.

San Demetrio, London

20th Century-Fox—British War Picture

This is a British-made pictorial recounting of the remarkable voyage of the ship named in the title, and historically interesting as such, but the lack of player names known in this country and the fact that it is a war picture in the full sense of that term drastically limit its usefulness to the American exhibitor.

The period of the picture is early in the war, prior to America's entry, when Britain was obtaining oil and other materials from this country, and the film recounts a voyage of the San Demetrio from an American port, with a cargo of gasoline, to England. Attacked by a German raider, the ship is abandoned in flames by its crew. One lifeboat full of survivors floats for days in the open sea, and finally is blown back to the ship, which is still burning but still afloat. Boarding her, the men extinguish the flames, rig up makeshift means of maintaining headway, and manage, despite hardships, privations and complications of many kinds, to bring her into a British port. It is a tale of heroism, realistically told, and interesting in the way that a documentary is interesting.

Michael Balcon produced the picture for Ealing Studios, with Charles Frend directing from a screen play by himself and Robert Hamer, who also was associate producer.

The Two Mrs. Carrolls

Warners—Different for Bogart

With Humphrey Bogart, Barbara Stanwyck and Alexis Smith as top names to draw with, this Mark Hellinger production of the stage play of the same name by Martin Vale figures to sell itself sight unseen. Whether it will satisfy as readily as it sells depends somewhat upon the public's reaction to the change of style imposed upon Mr. Bogart, who is seen first in the extraordinary act of sketching a lady fair against a woodland background (rather a stretch for Bogey) and ultimately as a demented intellectual addicted to poisoning his wives. It's quite a change for an actor who's always done his killing straight out and by manly means, but the picture's got considerable suspense to offset the possible objections.

Thomas Job's screenplay opens with artist Bogart making love to Miss Stanwyck, who is surprised to learn that he has a wife, and withdraws herself at that point. So he poisons his wife, who is never shown on the screen, and persuades Miss Stanwyck to marry him thereafter, the script skipping lightly over this interval. After a session of reasonably happy marriage, Miss Stanwyck is overtaken by a not very clearly diagnosed illness which the audience is allowed to know is caused by her husband's policy, practiced previously on his first wife, of giving her warm milk tinctured with poison. The chemist who supplies him with the stuff gets obstreperous, and he bumps him off in a manner more befitting the Bogart the screen knows, but this is merely incidental to the business of killing the second wife in order to marry a third, played by Miss Smith. The second wife learns what's going on, however, in time to save her life and witness the arrest of her husband, who, it turns out, thinks he has to kill his wives in order to renew periodically his artistic inspiration. Woops!

There's a good deal of killing and plotting to kill in the picture, and only a dash now and then of sprightly dialogue, so it's hardly appropriate material for the young and impressionable.

The Ghost Goes Wild

Republic—Ghost Story

With James Ellison, Anne Gwynne and Edward Everett Horton in the leading roles, "The Ghost Goes Wild" is an attempt at comedy which never quite makes the grade. It is top-heavy with an implausible plot, trite dialogue and situations which over-reach for sprightliness.

The story concerns a commercial artist who ridicules a dowager with a caricature of her on a magazine cover. She brings suit. His troubles are further multiplied when a pretty wife forces her attentions on the artist and her gun-toting husband finds out about the situation. The artist pretends he's dead and returns as a ghost to frighten off the trouble-makers. He also enlists the aid of a "real" ghost, who is finally instrumental in solving all problems.

Armand Schaefer was the associate producer. George Blair directed. Randall Faye wrote the screenplay from an original story by Faye and Taylor Caven.

Vacation Days

Monogram—For Juveniles Only

The 'Teen Agers series, designed primarily to engage the interest of the quite young, lets down a bit here in a film that gives exhibitors little more than the names of the Jerry Wald and Spade Cooley orchestras to promise their customers. When these orchestras are doing their stuff, which takes up a relatively minor portion of the footage, the picture is as good as the orchestras are. At other times it's a laboriously compounded assortment of hokum comedy and Western shoot-'em-up. It is, as stated, for the quite young.

The tale has to do with some high school students who go to spend their vacation on a ranch inherited by one of their teachers. The ranch is located hard-by a cow town of the kind used for minor Westerns, and a bank-robber melodrama of the same variety is run off in connection with the determinedly comic incidents which engage the students at the ranch. Mistaken identity of a kind only a scriptwriter could credit ties the two dissimilar quantities together loosely, but the strain on the tie is terrific.

Sam Katzman produced the picture, with Maurice Duke as associate, and Arthur Dreifuss directed it from a script by Hal Collins.

Trailing Danger

Monogram—Action Drama

Johnny Mack Brown, as a stalwart man of the West, accomplishes superhuman tasks in subduing and capturing a band of outlaws in this film. It has a better than average amount of exciting outdoor action scenes and hand-to-hand combat and stagecoach chases.

As the film opens an outlaw, played by Steve Darrell, escapes from prison, and the remainder of the footage is devoted to his recapture. Brown is supported by Raymond Hatton as Waco. They engage the gang of bandits in gunfights and through clever tricks finally succeed in capturing the murderer and his henchmen.

Bells of San Fernando

Screen Guild—Period Melodrama

At a time when every picture that comes out of Hollywood is suspected of ideological content, it is perhaps not surprising that even a modest offering like James S. Burkett's production presents a political theme. It stresses the seamy side of dictatorship as it existed in California under Spanish rule.

The dictator in question is an overseer appointed by the Governor to rule the prosperous San Fernando Valley. As Anthony Warde interprets the character, he is a minor Mussolini with a bull-whip in his hand, and a primitive "iron curtain" to prevent word of his tyranny from reaching the outside world.

Love, reputed to conquer all, not unnaturally conquers the cruel Don as well. He falls in love with a local lass who has already given her heart to a tile-setter—a role in which Donald Woods betrays the fact that an Irish brogue is not his natural accent. The young lovers defy the Don, escape to Monterey, and return to the valley accompanied by the Governor's Guard, just in time to prevent the Don from burning out the eyes of the mission priest, who had the temerity to refuse to reveal the source of a lode of gold.

The screenplay is by Jack DeWitt and Renault Duncan. The latter, under the more familiar name of Duncan Renaldo, is credited as associate producer. Terry Morse's direction is somewhat leisurely.

Buffalo Bill Rides Again

Screen Guild—Western

In concocting his latest offering to the nation's Western fans, producer Jack Schwarz has followed a time-honored—and time-worn—formula.

The formula runs somewhat as follows: Select an actor of experience and reputation (in this case, Richard Arlen) and cast him in the title role. Add a dash of femininity in the person of pretty Jennifer Holt. Combine with a liberal quantity of Indians in colorful regalia. Surround the whole with a story by Barney Sarecky and Fran Gilbert—in lieu of anything more original, the one about the sharpers seeking to deprive the settlers of their hard-won homes will do—and sprinkle with gunfire, fist-fights and war-whoops.

Simmer slowly for 70 minutes, under direction of Bernard B. Ray. Serve on Saturday afternoons to an audience of children and youthfully-minded adults.

Results are guaranteed, if the above instructions are followed to the letter.

Temptation Harbour

ABPC-Pathe—Conscience—and a Hussy

Based on a best-selling novel by Georges Simenon (leading French practitioner in the Ellery Queen motif) this might have developed as just another blood-curdler. The thrills, chills, frills, are all there, plus a satisfying allotment of bloody murder and other varieties of violence. But producer Victor Skutezky, director Lance Comfort, essayed the more hazardous path of portraying the tortured anguish of a good man's soul when he falls victim to the lure of big money and the seductive sidelong glances of a cross-channel siren.

Master Good Man is a simple railway signalman—one of the authentic innocents—who operates the night trains in and out of an English Channel port. From his cabin on the dark harbor he sees murder done, rushes to the rescue, but retrieves, instead of the victim's body, a suitcase packed with a fortune in the form of Bank of England bills. It's a fortune that he'd never earn by working. So what to do: particularly as he has a motherless child and—more particularly—in view of the languorous, disturbing curves of that French hussy from across the water? He slips into the uneasy trail of trifling with temptation. It's a trail which leads Master Good Man himself to murder.

Robert Newton invests the simple innocent with an ocean of sympathy. Simone Simon is as naughty, sly, disturbing, comely a chit as we have lately encountered on or off the screen. There is also a new young lady—Margaret Barton—who plays the motherless child. Being endowed with obvious ability and charm it is fortunate for Miss Barton that she makes her screen debut in a picture of such merit.

Forbidden Music

Continental—Musical Romance

Under the English title of "Forbidden Music" Continental Pictures is releasing the Italian film "Musica Proibita" produced by Elica Film. Like many Italian pictures this has undertones of tragedy in its story of unrequited love.

Heading the cast is Tito Gobbi, leading baritone of La Scala Opera in Milan, and Maria Mercader, one of Italy's popular actresses who has appeared in other foreign films playing in this country.

The story opens in modern Italy with Tito Gobbi as a successful but lonely and aging opera singer. Flashing back to the days when he was a struggling student it tells of his romance with the beautiful "Claretta" and their eventual separation through a misunderstanding resulting in a life of loneliness for each. However, the picture ends on a happy note with the old couple reunited. With this as the theme and the city of Florence as the background Gobbi has opportunity to sing in Italian numerous songs and arias from many operas.

For the most part the picture will appeal to nearly all adult audiences and especially to those who know Gobbi by reputation. However, there is one unnecessary scene in which a chorus line presents the dance, the Can-Can, with typically European flavor.

Carlo Campogalliani directed. English subtitles are included.

ADMISSIONS FIRM

THE wave of price cutting which begins to sweep the merchandise counters of the land finds motion picture admission prices holding unmoved, and apparently unmenaced, across the nation.

The markdown movement, which got spectacular impetus from a bold advertising announcement on price policy by R. H. Macy, New York's biggest department store, finds cuts in leading shops in most of the bigger centers—women's wear, off 50% to 75%; shoes and watches, off 50%; even engagement rings, off 25% to 50%; men's shirts, with tails restored to full pre-war length, at all kinds of cut prices. In New York some of the night clubs are cutting prices, cutting entertainers' figures in two, and all of them are crying out loud.

Apparently the downstairs spiral has hit where the wartime inflation, up to whatever the traffic would bear, was the highest, the most piratical.

It is to be said of the motion picture that, if one discounts the increases imposed by war taxes, the entertainment of the screen has been held to a more conservative level than the luxury lines. The war days prosperity of the motion picture can be attributed vastly more to increased attendance, volume increase rather than the tariff per unit sale.

An examination of figures from thirty-four principal cities collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington shows that the increase of motion picture admissions prices has been notably and modestly low on any comparative basis, thus:

	January, 1941	December, 1946	Increase
Admissions	109.1*	163.7	50.0%
Retail Prices	101.9	172.7	69.4%
Salaries and Wages	130.0	258.4	98.8%

*First quarter 1941.

The box office reports continue healthy, with only occasional and sporadic recessions in areas where postwar industry adjustments and strike unemployments have affected popular buying power.

The motion picture came up to dominance by delivering the most entertainment for the money, competing the while with increasing competitions in many forms of popular entertainment.

The principal concern today of the authorities who make the box office decisions is the prospect of more and bigger taxes.

FORD and FILM

WITH the passing of Mr. Henry Ford there comes reflection upon his extraordinary impress on the life and living habits of the people of the United States, affecting many industries, too, and their pattern of business.

The motion picture theatre was born as a contemporary of the motor car but, arriving with a 5-cent admission so handily within the buying power of the masses, the screen became an industry first. It grew up in the nickelodeon, located in walking-distance centers. When Mr. Ford with his Model "T" put the motor car within the buying power of the many, walking-distance became less and less of a factor in all retailing and notably in the instance of the films. A new order of bigger and better theatres arrived, and better pictures to serve them. Also, and incidentally, with the repeater-attendance of the neighborhood theatre invaded, the motion picture serial went into a rapid decline. The customers were too busy shopping around in riding distances to look up the next chapter.

Thousands of nickelodeons succumbed to the motor car revolution.

Incidentally, Mr. Ford early became a patron of the industrial-educational motion picture: He produced "The Ford Weekly", a scenic and travelogue reel, which managed to include some pictures of his cars on the road. It was distributed by one of the larger exchange systems, which collected what it could from the exhibitor and got a dollar a booking from the Ford company, too.

NORMALCY NOTES — Miss Barbara Stanwyck and Mr. Robert Taylor are back from Britain somewhat mauled as survivors of a terrific onslaught of fan enthusiasm at the Empire in London the night of the premiere of "The Other Love". The British bobbysockers arrived with a sock. ¶ The United States Rubber Company announces the immediate return of white side wall tires. ¶ The pet stores now have Red Rasboras, a Far East aquarium gem, unobtainable during the naval exercises in the Pacific. ¶ Statistics of the week announce that 35,000,000 homes in the United States now have radio receivers, making the state of saturation about 93%. Also, the newest figures from the Federal Communications Commission say that we have 31,600,000 telephones, or one for every 4.5 persons. Russia, according to 1939 figures, had not quite one 'phone for each hundred. Apparently, we can out-talk them. ¶ The Easter police patrol on New York's Fifth Avenue estimates that there were 250,000 more paraders in proud finery than the year before. Also, fashion editors noted that milady tends to return to shoes complete with both heels and toes.

SOMETIMES, Springtime slips in at night, as it came to the valley of the Silvermine this year, with the lulling lazy patter of warm rain on the shingles. In the slow misty dawn the light reveals new birds, just arrived, stalking the awakening worm in the damp meadow. A great grey heron makes a reconnaissance flight in measured slow motion over his fishing grounds. Even the raucous crows and rowdy jays give voice in softer notes with hints of romance and nesting time ahead. A fringe of fresh bright greenery margins the brook. A rain-wet bee hungrily pries her way into a reluctant crocus. A sharp alkaline perfume of the hardwood in the morning fire drifts and clings close to the warming earth in the heavy moist air. By many little things this first day of the growing year declares itself. It is the great annual event of Time and Soil and Sun. The world is alive. It is the hour to pack a peaceful pipe and think it over before the morning paper comes with its confusion of less important matters.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Pity the Critic

"NOBODY pays any attention to motion picture critics." That was the blunt assertion heard in Boston at a recent convention of the Massachusetts' Women's Clubs. The speaker was Rudolph Elie, Jr., formerly one of the best known motion picture critics in New England and now a feature writer on the Boston Herald-Traveler. Mr. Elie made it plain that it was his opinion that motion picture critics had little power to shape the course of the Hollywood industry. Time and time again, he pointed out, pictures that have been universally panned by the critics have grossed millions.

Finger-Shaking

HUNDREDS of film fan club members throughout the country were shaking their collective finger at Hollywood this week. It all began when the clubs, represented by the International Fan Club League and affiliated organizations, notified the studios and stars that they were expecting to be royally entertained by the industry when they met in convention in Hollywood June 23 to 29. At the same time, through the Hollywood chapter, the 300-odd clubs said 500 or more delegates were expected to converge on the film capital; that they plan an informal tea at the swank Ambassador Hotel, and a dinner-dance for chapter presidents at Ciro's. "Stop!" shrieked the studios and stars when they received the news. "There are insufficient facilities to accommodate or entertain so many." The fan clubs' ultimatum: no Hollywood cooperation with the convention—no fan club cooperation in the future with the studios or the stars.

Art by the Inch

IT'S ALWAYS been a sort of trade secret that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences measures the success or unsuccess of its operations by no such intangibles as the artistic standards which govern its bestowal of honors but by the quite tangible and meticulously checked linear dimensions of the publicity given its activities in the world's press. This week, however, the veil is dropped to reveal, in a formal press release, that during the three months ending March 31, a period embracing the Annual Awards ceremonies opened this year for the first time to the public, a total of 31,847 column inches of newsmention was recorded, and that this statistic exceeds by 8,720 the total displacement chalked up during the 11 months preceding the period, which included last year's Awards event.

Taking these encouraging figures as a starting point, the Academy's board of governors last week met in formal session on the matter of public relations and came up with the idea of appointing a committee of three to take charge of them, naming Walter Wanger, William Dozier and Mary McCall, Jr., to the task of passing on all publicity releases, promotional undertakings and related matters in advance of their execution. A detail of the operation will be the dispatch of all news releases to each of these three by special messenger for approval prior to their issuance to the press. It is calculated that by this means the Academy's publicity score may be raised even higher. Dissenting from that calculation, Academy publicity director Donald Black resigned.

Same Bar

IF ANYONE on seeing David O. Selznick's "Portrait of Jenny" should detect a faint resemblance between Joseph Cotten's favorite bar and Ray Milland's hangout in "The Lost Weekend" it isn't just a coincidence. It's authenticity the boys are looking for, and Clark's on 55th Street and 3rd Avenue must have it, because the bar in both pictures is modeled after that establishment. The "Lost Weekend" crew shot on location. For "Portrait of Jenny," parts of the bar were taken to the RKO Pathe studios in New York, while the rest of the equipment was collected from a number of antique shops.

Ruin and Riot

Mexico City Bureau

THE CINE PRINCIPAL in Mexico City, said to be the oldest theatre in North America, was literally ripped apart when lawyers and their helpers moved into the theatre, tore up all the seats that could be moved, smashed those that couldn't, destroyed the box office, the manager's office, the lobby advertisements, the screen and even the ceiling. Damage was estimated at $50,000. The Principal was built in 1776 and was for years Mexico's most brilliant playhouse. It has been a subsequent run since 1930. The trouble started when the owner of the theatre, an insurance company, got court orders to oust films from the theatre, wanting to tear it down and erect an office and stores. The exhibitor got an injunction against this order and the lawyers on both sides started arguing. The climax came when the lawyers moved their argument into the theatre. A riot call was issued, the police moved in and arrested 19.

Gratitude

UNITED STATES PICTURES' "Pursued" used New Mexico as background. The state's House of Representatives is grateful. It now asks the company to make another feature-length film to be called, "New Mexico."

Good Timing

SOME TELEPHONE worker has an excellent sense of timing and a sly sense of humor. When the telephone workers went out on strike Monday, it was decided in the New York branch of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company that a motion picture should be shown daily in the company offices for the relaxation of those supervisory employees of the long-lines department who remained on the job. Monday's picture was "And Then There Were None."

Telefilmed

TELEVISION will bring news to the public shortly after it occurs even when the television camera isn't there to shoot it. The events will be covered by the motion picture camera; the film will be processed with machinery developed by Eastman Kodak under the stress and secrecy of war; and the public will see the news on television receivers within an hour or so of happening. Engineers of the company, and of the American Broadcasting Company, and the Philco Corporation demonstrated the rapid coverage in Philadelphia Tuesday.

Scoop

THE FIRST uncensored film—16,000 feet in all—to come from behind Russia's "iron curtain" has been acquired by March of Time and is currently being screened, edited and prepared for release as a regular issue in the next few weeks. The 16,000 feet of film were taken by an official of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration while on duty in Russia after the war. The film and descriptive notes on each scene photographed was brought from behind the "iron curtain" before UNRRA aid to Russia was stopped.

Rank's World

ACCORDING to the April production chart released this week by the J. Arthur Rank Organization, Rank's production companies are filming around the world—from the Fiji Islands to Denmark to Australia. "Rescue" is in work in Switzerland. Belgium is playing host to the cast of "Against the Wind." "End of the River" has resumed in London after backgrounds were shot in Brazil. When "Red Shoes" goes before the cameras, locales will include Monte Carlo, Paris, Florence and Copenhagen. Laurence Olivier is seeking Denmark scenery for his production of "Hamlet." All of "Eureka Stockade" will be shot in Australia. Plans are progressing for Fiji Island backgrounds for "The Blue Lagoon." A camera crew has been sent to the Antarctic for the projected "Scott of the Antarctic."

Rumors are current in London that the Rank Organization has purchased a considerable interest in the leading motion picture circuit in Jamaica.

In London last week Mr. Rank fixed world distribution for the first major bilingual English-French Canadian feature, "Whispering City." The feature was produced in Canada by Quebec Productions.

Bombed and Buried

RITA HAYWORTH, whose face and figure was painted on the Bikini atom bomb, may be buried in effigy in Alaska. The League of Present Day Artists, New York, whose mission it is "to encourage new directions in art," has prepared a life-sized "permanitized" plastic figure of Miss Hayworth which it will ship to Task Force Frigid in Fairbanks, Alaska, with the request that the figure be buried in the snows—down to the earth—so that posterity 100 years from today can dig it up and see "what one of the most beautiful girls of 1947 looked like."

Byrd's Footage

THE NAVY is inviting motion picture producers to come, see and use some 75,000 feet of film on the Byrd Antarctic expedition. This footage is the first shipment received from the expedition, according to Commander Richard Winn, and charge of the Navy's motion picture section, "and inquiries are invited concerning the use of this footage for short or feature subjects." It includes 60,000 feet of black and white 35mm films and 15,000 feet of 16mm color.

Brazilian Oscars

THE BRAZILIAN Association of Motion Picture Critics picked "The Story of G. I. Joe" as the best picture of 1946. Ingrid Bergman was named the best actress of the year, Ray Milland the best actor, and William Wellman the best director. Other pictures among the top ten included: "The Lost Weekend," "The Seventh Veil," "Spellbound," "The Southerner," "The Last Chance," "The Spiral Staircase," "Mildred Pierce," and "A Walk in the Sun."

HIGH COURT STAYS BIDDING; CONTINUES ARBITRATION

Reed Signs Order Halting Execution; 20th-Fox To Continue Auction Trials

The industry need not comply with the distribution provisions of the New York District Court's Decree in the anti-trust suit pending appeal of the case, Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed ruled late Monday evening. He signed a sweeping order staying competitive bidding, which was to have gone into effect July 1, and saving the Consent Decree arbitration system, which was to have been dissolved April 1.

The order was modified to exempt Twentieth Century-Fox, which had argued with its co-defendants over the content of the order, from all stays except those which it specifically requested. In a separate stay order, the company asked only for postponement of the competitive bidding and arbitration provisions of the Decree.

20th-Fox Will Continue Bidding Experiments

Although it wanted to see bidding stayed, "Twentieth Century-Fox will continue competitive negotiations because they have proven to be the most satisfactory way to settle disputes between exhibitors."

That statement, the first from a major distributor since a stay on bidding was first indicated more than a week ago, was made Monday in Chicago by William C. Gehring, 20th-Fox's central division sales manager. His company attorneys, Mr. Gehring said, had advised him that competitive bidding could be continued even though the Decree provisions were stayed.

20th-Fox, according to Mr. Gehring, is conducting competitive bidding experiments in between 35 and 50 situations in the central division and is continuing to accept request for competitive bidding.

The distribution injunctions, in addition to bidding, stayed by Justice Reed's order are those which would have prohibited the distributors after April 1:

1. From granting any license in which minimum admissions to a theatre are fixed.
2. From agreeing with each other or with any exhibitors or distributors to maintain a system of clearances.
3. From granting any clearance between theatres not in substantial competition.
4. From granting or enforcing any clearance against theatres in substantial competition with the theatre receiving the license for exhibition in excess of what is reasonably necessary to protect the licensee.
5. From making or further performing any formula deal or master agreement.

PARAMOUNT HEADS TALK DECREE IN MAY

A meeting of Paramount executives and theatre partners, to discuss all phases of the New York District Court's decree in the industry anti-trust suit, has been set for May 6 to 9, Leonard H. Goldenson, the company's vice-president in charge of theatre operations, announced this week. Paramount home office executives who are to attend are Barney Balaban, president; Austin C. Keough, vice-president in charge of legal affairs; Edward L. Hyman, Leon D. Netter and Robert Weitman, vice-presidents in charge of Paramount Theatres Service Corporation; Montague Gowthorpe, treasurer; Walter Gross of the legal staff; Max Fellerman, J. J. Deitch and Hal Pereira.

6. From performing or entering into any license in which the right to exhibit one feature is conditioned upon the licensee's taking one or more other features.

7. From arbitrarily refusing the demand of an exhibitor to license a feature to him for exhibition on a run selected by the exhibitor, instead of licensing it to another exhibitor for exhibition in his competing theatre on such run.

Additionally, the provision placing the burden of proving the legality of clearance upon the distributor and the provision giving the licensee the right to reject 20 per cent of the features not trade shown prior to the granting of a license are stayed.

Franchise Prohibition In Effect Immediately

These include all provisions of Section II of the Decree except the prohibition of franchises.

Section V of the Decree, dissolving the arbitration system, was also stayed by the Justice's order.

All stays apply to RKO, MGM, Warner Brothers, Paramount, Columbia, United Artists and Universal.

Only the stay on competitive bidding and arbitration, the only ones asked for, apply to 20th-Fox.

What effect these stays will have upon company policy and operation was not immediately made known. The defendants can, for example, engage in competitive bidding even though a stay of that order was granted. The stay-order affects only the New York court decree. The legality of the court's decision of June 11, upon which the December 31 decree was based, will not be decided until the Supreme Court hears the appeals from the decision. Present estimates are that the case may not reach the High Court until next winter or spring.

No stays were requested on the provisions of the Decree affecting ownership of theatres, pools, leases and partnerships.

At the time of signing the stay order, Justice Reed gave the defendants and the Department of Justice until May 20 to docket their appeals from the New York Court decision with the Supreme Court. If a company has not filed its appeal by that date its stay will be terminated.

Friday, March 28, in Washington, Justice Reed indicated to counsel for the eight defendants he would sign the order he finally signed Monday night. He requested counsel to draw up a single stay order embracing the views of all companies.

April 2 all defendants, except 20th-Fox, agreed to the stay order which was signed. The next day the independently-minded 20th-Fox submitted to the Supreme Court a separate and dissenting draft.

Justice Department Opposes Arbitration

On Monday, the Department of Justice told the Supreme Court what it wanted—but principally what it did not want.

The U. S. came out as flatly opposed to any stay which would continue Consent Decree arbitration.

In submitting its proposed stay order, the Justice Department sent a separate letter to Justice Reed voicing strong objections to a delay in the abolition of arbitration.

The Department's order, however, did include a request for a stay of competitive bidding and two other paragraphs of Section II of the decree: those forbidding the distributor from entering into any license in which the right to exhibit one feature is conditioned upon the licensee's taking one or more features and forbidding the distributors from arbitrarily refusing the demand of an exhibitor for a run which he requests.

AAA Offices Can Now Accept New Cases

On the abolition of the arbitration system, Justice Department attorneys said: "There is no basis at all for a stay of this section."

Justice Reed did not agree.

New cases can now be accepted by the 31 tribunals of the American Arbitration Association.

During the week the AAA was in doubt about its future in films; it was reported from Chicago that the organization had plans underway to consolidate all the mid-western offices of AAA into one large office in Chicago and to have offices in New York, San Francisco, and New Orleans and perhaps in one or two other cities.

EIGHT BILLS BEATEN IN 6 LEGISLATURES

Majority on Censorship or Theatre Taxes; Several Are Still Pending

Six of the 12 state legislatures which have now adjourned have defeated eight bills which would have adversely affected the motion picture industry, John Bryson, special legislative assistant to Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, said in New York this week. The bills defeated were concerned with new theatre taxation or the establishment of state censor boards.

Censorship measures were voted down in Indiana, West Virginia, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Tax bills were rejected in Arkansas, Montana, Indiana and West Virginia.

Pending in 4 States

Censorship bills are still pending in Iowa, Delaware, Connecticut and Missouri.

The 17 state legislatures already adjourned are: Arkansas, Arizona, Idaho, Georgia, Indiana, Montana, New Mexico, Nevada, Wyoming, Utah, Washington, North and South Dakota, West Virginia, New York, Tennessee and Maryland.

Of these, in only one state, New York, was passed a measure detrimental to the industry. This bill gave large cities and counties within the state authorization to impose an additional five per cent levy on theatre admissions, and other taxing powers.

The New York State Tax Commission, currently drafting model legislation for the taxing powers, has invited the views of theatres and other interests likely to be affected. No opinion has been given by the commission whether it could establish $1 as the minimum admission to be taxed, but it is understood the commission could prepare such a local ordinance if requested by taxing groups. The $1 minimum admission was suggested by the American Theatres Association and New York City exhibitors, who fought the measure.

Bills Up in California

Several bills in the California legislature, which would have particular significance to San Francisco theatre men, are up for discussion. The first is a proposal for a Fair Employment Practice Commission which would have full power of subpoena and authority to issue cease and desist orders. A second would create a commission to investigate possibilities of affording equal opportunity of employment to all persons, and to compile facts of racial discrimination.

These measures point directly at the problem facing San Francisco theatre men whom the Negroes charge with discrimination. George Nasser, of Nasser Theatres, contends he hires employees sent him by the union. The Negroes have threatened a city-wide picketing campaign against discrimination.

The Connecticut legislature is studying two bills. The first would prohibit the admission of children to theatres or other places of amusement unless accompanied by a guardian, while the second would provide for a state censor board to approve pictures for exhibition to children under 14.

Censor Bill in Missouri

A bill in the Missouri House at Jefferson City would create a three-member state board of censors for motion pictures. Introduced by Rep. Harry Schendel of St. Louis, he said he was reluctant to offer the bill but that it was necessary to take action against certain types of films which he charged were contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Denying charges by theatre men that the proposed repeal of Ohio's three per cent admission tax would be of sole benefit to large cities, State Tax Commissioner Emory Glander has urged passage of the Marshall bill in its initial hearing at the State House in Columbus. The theatre men said that passage of the bill would permit local taxes up to 10 per cent and would cause discrimination.

Sunday Show Bill Killed

A bill which would have legalized Sunday shows was killed in the Georgia House.

Monday night the New Jersey legislature passed a bill to permit summer resorts in seacoast counties to impose a three per cent sales tax on amusement admissions, hotel rooms, liquor, tobacco and other accommodations. Originally the bill had been designed to affect all counties throughout the state but a campaign undertaken by exhibitors resulted in the bill being amended to apply only to counties bordering on the Atlantic Ocean.

In Minnesota a third proposal for a 20 per cent levy on admissions has been placed in the hopper. North Central Allied is lining up opposition to the new measure as it did on the two previous proposals.

Lenoir, N. C., citizens are petitioning for Sunday shows and a repeal of the blue laws enacted in 1940 which forbid the showing of any motion picture, vaudeville or other amusements between 12 midnight Saturday and 12 midnight Sunday. The Lenoir City Council will discuss the matter at its next meeting.

Selznick, Loew's Set "Duel" Deal

Selznick Releasing Organization and Loew's theatres last week signed a deal providing for the opening of "Duel in the Sun" at the New York Capitol, and at 37 Loew's neighborhood houses May 7. In addition, Loew theatres in 35 cities across the nation as well as in Toronto, Ontario, booked the film.

All the Loew houses will play the picture on a grind policy at advanced admission. In New York the neighborhood engagements are for one week, while the Capitol booking is indefinite. New York area scales are expected to run from 90 to cents to $1.25 or $1.50, but no definite decision has yet been made.

The deal climaxed long speculation as to where "Duel" would open in New York. The picture was originally scheduled for the Astor theatre, under an arrangement between David O. Selznick and Samuel Goldwyn. When its turn came, however, Mr. Selznick did not have a print of "Duel" available and his attempt to use United Artists' "Strange Woman" as a filler caused his subsequent disagreement with Mr. Goldwyn, who then opened "Best Years of Our Lives."

In the negotiations that led to the agreement, Joseph R. Vogel, vice-president of Loew's and general manager of Loew's theatres, represented Loew's, and Milton Kusell, general sales manager, spoke for the Selznick Organization.

School Picture Clubs Hold Annual Session

The Tenth Annual Junior Conferences, sponsored by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures for school groups studying motion pictures, was to be held Friday at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. During the meeting the groups were to discuss their year's activities in film appreciation and instruction by film. They were also to report on special film projects and were to see some recent non-theatrical and entertainment films which they were to discuss.

Paramount Puts 1946 Net Profit At $44,040,000

Earnings of Paramount Pictures during 1946 amounted to $44,040,000 after all charges including estimated provision for income taxes, setting a record high for the company's entire history. The figure, which is based on an estimate, also tops by more than $26,000,000 the earnings for 1945, which amounted to $17,952,432.

The 1946 figure includes $4,840,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the year of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. The period covered in the report extends through the 53 weeks ending January 4, 1947.

Earnings for the quarter ending January 4, 1947, also were high, topping the figure for the corresponding period in 1945 by some $6,000,000. The $10,163,000 income was estimated after elimination of the dividends received during those 14 weeks from partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries to the extent that such dividends represent distribution of earnings reported as undistributed in previous quarters.

The $44,040,000 yearly earning of estimated combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings represent $5.92 per share on the 7,443,772 outstanding shares in the hands of the public at the end of the last quarter. This compares with $2.39 per share for the year ended December 29, 1945. Estimated earnings of $10,163,000 for the last 1946 quarter represented $1.37 per share.

A third theatre has also been announced by the circuit for the Pasco-Kennel area in Washington.

Commonwealth Gets 16mm Rights to 80 Features

Through United World, Commonwealth has acquired the 16mm domestic rights to 40 Universal features and four serials, and through Magnus Films the company has acquired the 16mm domestic and foreign rights to 40 United Artists features. Both contracts are for seven years.

MR. TRUMAN SAYS MAYBE

Washington Bureau

PRESIDENT TRUMAN didn't say "no" and he didn't say "yes" to the industry delegation which invited him Sunday to the Motion Picture Association's twenty-fifth anniversary dinner to be held in New York May 8. Mr. Truman told the industry leaders that his schedule at that time made the New York dinner impossible, but he suggested that Eric Johnston, MPA president, check with him later. The industry delegation, which had a 15-minute interview at the White House with the President, was composed of Mr. Johnston, Nicholas M. Schenck, N. Peter Rathvon and Barney Balaban. One of the reasons why the President may not be able to attend is that May 8 is his sixty-third birthday.

Praises Screen As World Force

Honoring the thirtieth anniversary of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, New York, president Truman has written to Rutgers Neilson, outgoing AMPA president, praising motion pictures as a "great force in enlarging the horizons of peoples everywhere."

The letter follows:

"On the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers it is appropriate to note the important contribution made by your organization to the development of the motion picture industry.

"Motion pictures have been and will continue to be a great force in enlarging the horizons of peoples everywhere and your part in bringing to public attention the best efforts of the industry is to be commended.

"I trust that increased opportunity for useful service to the public will be yours through the years."

Howard Dietz, vice-president of Loew's and director of advertising and publicity for MGM, will be master of ceremonies at AMPA's thirtieth anniversary dinner dance in the Hotel Astor, New York, April 23, honoring the presidents of the industry.

Thereafter the feature will run on a continuous basis with a block of 250 seats reserved for two showings daily. The matinee reserved seats are priced at $1.80; the evening seats at $2.40.

ON THE MARCH MGM to Reissue

by RED KANN

'Gone with Wind' In Full Length

THE speculation closed out late Tuesday when word was flashed from Washington that Justice Reed had signed the stay, suspending in balance the essentials of the New York consent decree pending determination of appeals by the Supreme Court.

Actually and technically, the stay remains in force until only May 20 when appeals must be filed by defense attorneys. This is merely another manoeuvre engineered by the Justice Department to hasten the lodging of appeals. The stop date has no bearing on the effect of the stay because, once appeals are entered, Justice Reed's order remains until the issues are decided by the high court. There is no reason to alter the original forecast that this will mean a year. Perhaps more. Furthermore, there was never serious doubt about the stay itself, despite the opposition of the Justice Department which, by policy, had to contest it.

All of the "woulds" and "would be's" that decorated this space with uncertainties last week, consequently, take on definite form. Competitive bidding is now formally suspended. The prohibition against price-fixing is in abeyance. The distributor may sell in blocks of four or five as of yore and several may decide to market full line again. The distributor will not have to assume the burden of establishing the validity of the clearance he establishes, or may insist upon, in the event of exhibitor challenge.

But what was indefinite before the stay continues indefinite now. The problem facing the distributor in deciding if he wants to operate under the decree as a method of self-protection or intends taking advantage of the stay pending the final outcome is ticklish, delicate and difficult. In several quarters, there is a new disquiet over the possible attitude of some independents who outstripped major circuits under competitive bidding and to what recourses under the law they may resort if they lose out on future sales.

The answer is not yet in sight. What is in sight is a continued state of confusion and uncertainty in distributor ranks, at least.

It looks like a hot summer in more ways than one.

Journey into the higher altitudes. And pleasant, too. This is Universal reporting with glee the initial drawing power of "The Egg and I" [. . . "a very neat job of hilarious entertainment," concluded your observer in the HERALD, March 29]:

Louisville—National theatre. Saturday through Monday—$7,154. Compares with "The Dark Mirror" Thursday through Saturday, including Thanksgiving Day—$2,- 949; and "Canyon Passage," same days at the Rialto—$6,553.

Indianapolis—Keith's. Saturday through Monday—$8,809. "Mirror," same theatre, same days—$5,500. At the Indiana where there are about 800 more seats, "Passage" did $8,000, and "Scarlet Street" grossed $5,800.

Detroit—The Fox. Saturday through Monday—$25,459. "Mirror," Friday through Sunday—$20,100; "Scarlet Street"—$21,000.

Kansas City—Uptown, Esquire, Fairway. Saturday through Monday—$14,017. Under identical circumstances, "Mirror" grossed $8,000 and "The Killers" $7,000.

Toronto—Uptown. Wednesday through Monday [no Sunday shows]—$18,412. "Canyon Passage"—$12,800.

Los Angeles—Carthay Circle, United Artists, Ritz, Bruin, Iris and Studio. Business is reported running about 60 per cent ahead of Universal's other pace makers, variously mentioned above. Day-and-date with metropolitan Los Angeles runs are engagements in surrounding towns like Long Beach, Santa Anna and El Centro. Extremely well contented with results there. Universal draws its conclusion: "The Egg and I" is demonstrating strength in big and smaller situations thereby making it practically unanimous as far as matters have gone. Easter Week, naturally, proved a boon.

There is an interesting companion piece to this. Maurice Bergman, whose job it is to dope out such matters, attributes a major portion of the interest created among theatremen to the extent of his trade paper advertising campaign.

"We spent a lot of money, but we never spent any more wisely. It pays off."

FINANCIAL NOTE: Paramount, where the actual figures usually match the estimated, looks for all-time high earnings of $44,040,000 for 1946. This compares with $17,952,432 for '45, or an increase of 145 per cent. Profits for the 14 weeks ending January 4, 1947, are anticipated at $10,163,000 as against the corresponding quarter—only it's 13 weeks—of 1945 when the net was $4,111,000.

The gain is a whopping 122 per cent.

A few days ago the Wall Street Journal, authoritative newspaper of the financial world, reported 12 amusement and film companies bulked combined earnings of $112,607,548 in 1946 as compared with $81,022,364 in 1945.

The percentage of increase turns out to be a handsome 39.

Things are bad, are they?

"Gone With the Wind," David O. Selznick's Technicolor classic, will be reissued by MGM in the near future, William Zoellner, head of the company's reprint and foreign importation department, said this week. The picture will be MGM's fifth reprint for the year, the others being "Rage in Heaven," "Boom Town," "The Great Waltz," and probably "The Philadelphia Story."

To Open in Test Spots

MGM executives attended a screening of "Gone With the Wind" recently and decided then that the film still belonged in the top-quality class. It was made in 1939. So far no definite decision regarding the picture's handling has been made, Mr. Zoellner said, but if the still tight Technicolor situation permits it, "Gone With the Wind" will open at one or two test spots. If reaction is favorable, "Wind" will be reissued without cuts and will run three hours and 44 minutes.

The next reprint to be offered by MGM will be "The Great Waltz," due for June release. Although only a limited number of prints were available, "Rage in Heaven," the first reissue, has so far been sold to 9,000 accounts and, according to Mr. Zoellner, in four months has had more bookings than during the whole year following its original release. Revenue from the film this time has been greater by far than in 1941.

Testing Dubbed Versions

Loew's is well satisfied with the results of midnight shows of Italian-dubbed Hollywood product in New York houses, Mr. Zoellner said. Spanish-dubbed versions will be tested at the Burland theatre in New York starting April 21. "Angels of the Street," a French picture recently acquired by Loew's International, has just been dubbed into English, Mr. Zoellner said. The manner of its release will await decision by Arthur Loew, president of Loew's International, who is due back from Europe soon.

Century Managers Strive For Candy Promotion

The Century Circuit, New York, sales drive centers upon candy and soft drink merchandising. This marks the first such sales drive. The company owns its candy concessions, under Andrews, Inc. Century hopes to have new sales methods in approach to the customer, evolved from the 10-week campaign.

Jury Finds Pickets Guilty

A jury in Los Angeles Municipal Court last week found all 25 defendants on trial on four counts in connection with mass picketing at Columbia Studios last November 16 guilty on at least one count. Of them, 33 were convicted also on a second count. It took the predominantly feminine jury three and a half days to make its decision.

NEGRO THEATRE AN EXPANDING FIELD

Operators See a Potential Audience of 4,000,000, with 16mm to Fore

There are 684 theatres in the United States today catering exclusively to Negro audiences, according to producers and distributors of Negro pictures, who believe that this field is one of the most rapidly spreading branches of exhibition.

The number of theatres has increased by 287 since 1940, but experts in the field say there is still a potential audience of 4,000,000 persons, many of them in large communities, who do not have access to motion picture entertainment.

See 16mm Expansion

A great deal of the expected expansion will be in 16mm, according to Ted Toddy, president of Ted Toddy Pictures of New York, who has been watching with interest the opening of a dozen 16mm Negro theatres in Texas.

Mr. Toddy operates film exchanges for his 30 features and two dozen short subjects in Atlanta, Dallas, Chicago and Los Angeles.

He predicts that within the next few years there will be a boom in Negro exhibition but expects this expansion to come from the development of 16mm Negro theatres and roadshow units throughout the South. To substantiate this opinion he pointed to the dozen 16mm Negro theatres which have recently sprung up in Texas and which "are doing very well."

To help develop this field, Toddy Pictures will release all of its product in 16mm beginning August 1.

Says Profit Not Difficult

Depending upon the availability of 16mm equipment and a place in which a theatre can be established an exhibitor with an investment of $2,000 or less can develop a paying and profitable business, Mr. Toddy said. Properly conducted such a business should return a net profit of $100 or more a week. Additionally, he may increase his weekly profits by the installation of a pop-corn machine or a candy counter, he said.

To develop new Negro audiences and promote the exhibition of Negro features and short subjects, Jack Goldberg, producer of Negro films and president of the newly-formed Herald Pictures, is currently undertaking a campaign to enlist the aid of all local Chambers of Commerce throughout the country to promote the showing of Negro films to Negro audiences. "At least this will be a start in bringing motion picture entertainment to a potential audience of 4,000,000 Negroes who do not have theatres of their own," he said.

Herald Pictures has completed two all-Negro features, has two more in production, and plans a total of 12 features for 1947. Mr. Toddy and Mr. Goldberg, along with Sack Amusement of Dallas, and All-American of Chicago, are the leading producers of Negro product.

175 to 200 Films Now

At present there are about 175 to 200 pictures being distributed with all-Negro casts. Since this is not sufficient to fill the playing time of the 684 Negro theatres, about 80 per cent of the product exhibited is from Hollywood. However, this is usually product that has completed its runs in neighborhood theatres since exhibitors in this field cannot afford to pay the higher rentals of new product in that admission prices at Negro theatres only average from 22 to 30 cents during the week, with a five-cent increase over the weekend.

Negro audiences do not care for the heavy emotional dramas, Mr. Toddy said. Their choice in film entertainment is the pictures which feature light comedy, outdoor adventure, musical comedies with an abundance of singing and dancing, and comedy-romances.

Florida and Texas Have Most

The majority of the Negro theatres now in operation are in the southern states, where the Negro population is highest. Florida and Texas have the greatest number, with 63 and 61, respectively. New York State is third in the listing with 56 theatres, many of which are in New York City's Negro district, Harlem, while there are six other states with 30 or more Negro theatres. They are: Virginia, with 40; Georgia, 39; North Carolina, 38; Louisiana, 37, and Mississippi and Alabama, with 33 each.

Warner Circuit Resumes Universal Newsreel

The Warner Circuit this week resumed playing Universal newsreels. The move was taken in New York circles to mean that the cancellation of U-I product by the circuit will be temporary. The dispute arose when U-I signed former Warner writer-director Robert Buckner as his Warner contract neared completion.

Ohio Board Bans RKO Film

RKO's "Born to Kill," starring Claire Trevor and Lawrence Tierney, has been rejected by the Ohio Board of Censors. This marks the first time that a feature from one of the major producers has been entirely banned by the board. Censor group officials pointed out in Columbus, however, that the decision was not final and that the company had a right to appeal. It is not known whether RKO will appeal the rejection.

MPTOA, Allied Fight Ascap Bid For Rate Boost

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Allied States both have attacked the proposal of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers for an increase in its music tax rates for theatres.

In New York last week, Herman Levy, general counsel for MPTOA, said there was no "Justification for higher music taxes apparent to any exhibitor." Protesting that theatre operating costs are up, Mr. Levy asked: "What increased costs does ASCAP have and what loss of revenue is it faced with to justify an increase in theatre rates?"

"If MPTOA is approached on an increase in music taxes," he asserted, "I will recommend to our board of directors that an increase be fought with every means available to us."

In Washington, Monday, Abram F. Myers, Allied's general counsel, warned that if ASCAP persists in its attempt to raise the tax, the result will be that many states will enact legislation ousting ASCAP.

"ASCAP," he stated, "is making a mistake in demanding an increase in royalties. In the short pull there is very little we can do, but in the long pull it would be a disastrous move for ASCAP." Mr. Myers pointed out that both houses of the Indiana State Legislature had recently passed a bill to bar ASCAP, although it was vetoed by the Governor.

North Central Allied To Hear Wright

Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the Attorney General and currently handling the anti-trust suit for the Government, will be one of the principal speakers at North Central Allied's annual convention to be held in Minneapolis April 21-22. Mr. Wright is scheduled to address the NCA delegates at a noon luncheon and participate in an open forum April 21.

Variety Will Operate Three Trains to L. A. Convention

Three special trains will take delegates to the national Variety Clubs of America convention May 14 through 17 in Los Angeles. One will be the "Bob O'Donnell Special"; the others will be "The John H. Harris," and "The Variety Clubs International." The first will carry Atlanta and Dallas members; the others will come from the northeast, through Chicago.

THE CHANGING STATUS OF THE EXHIBITOR

MR. Robert B. Wilby of Atlanta, forthright exhibitor leader in the Southeast, and your editor are fellows in gardening and in various speculative considerations of the state of the nation and of course our industry. In an Easter weekend letter Mr. Wilby has discussed some aspects of the evolution of the art and business of the screen, with special attention to the changing position of the exhibitor. Mr. Wilby's letter is shared with the readers, here.

Dear Terry:

Some evening as you look in the dying embers of that fire, which probably is still needed in the valley of the Silvermine, you might speculate a bit upon the ever-lessening position of the exhibitor.

Robert B. Wilby

But without going that far back, you might give thought to just the economics of it all. At one time the exhibitor bought a year's product and pretty well marketed it in his local community. In general that which the community knew about the picture was that which the exhibitor told, so that he could put emphasis where he chose and his efforts could have a definite and not immaterial effect upon the gross of one picture as compared with another.

During those days, one after another made an effort to sell trade-marks to the public, but since there is no uniformity in the product, there was obviously no particular value in the trade-mark, and the exhibitor remained in a somewhat strong local position with the security which comes from strength.

Could Play Averages

And there was mathematics to it, too, for in buying the thirty or forty pictures he was, like the dealer at roulette, playing averages, which he could load a bit in his own favor.

The somewhat individual sale of pictures which accompanied the blocks of five put the films on a more individual basis and took away from him that ability to play those averages. Then it was found, and perhaps just as a result of the careless spending which went with excess profits taxes, that films could be nationally sold as individual pictures rather than under brand names.

The exhibitors then began to approach the position of the corner drugstore with its cigarettes, which performs only the function of delivery and thanking the customer —and gets damn little for it. But the very nature of this national advertising in turn caused a concentration of production values into a single picture—a combination of the best script writer working on the best story, with the best producer and the best director, and the best actors.

Obviously, a concentration in one place would take assets from another, so that the spread, both in cost and in effectiveness, between the tops and the next became wider. And as it became wider the theatre obviously could contribute less and less to the gross of that top picture.

Difficult Advertising Problem

Nor did the exhibitor have a remedy by attempting locally to market the secondary ones, not only because they did not have high marketable values but because the very prevalence of national advertising on other pictures left the public in a local community reacting to his advertising efforts somewhat by the expression: "What are you trying to do? That must not be much of a picture; I've never heard of it." He was perhaps in about the position of a fellow who might try to sell a Jackson automobile, or, perhaps more practically, in the position of some of the radio dealers who are finding it impossible to sell off-brand, though maybe rather good, receivers.

And so the exhibitor moved further into the position of the retail dealer who makes the goods available and loses the control of his local market. The films went up in percentage terms and his reaction was to spend less himself and he thereby waded just a bit deeper in the mire.

And it's all making a specialty business of this one, as it moves further and further along the road traveled by the legitimate—long runs in small theatres, at ever-increasing admission prices. Mr. Goldwyn is proving how well it can be done, not just at the Woods in Chicago, but in a good many "B" and "C" theatres around the country, where admissions are being jumped from around a quarter for what they were playing to six or seven times that for his film.

So the exhibitor, with a very vast majority of the investments in this business, becomes less and less a factor and more and more subject to the dictates of what is, at least in a capitalist system, much the smaller branch of the industry.

Whether it was inevitable evolution, just an accident, or the result of considerable default in his own function by the exhibitor, I leave as a subject upon which you may speculate.—R. B. Wilby.

The manifestations observed and commented upon by Mr. Wilby are not, as he is so entirely aware, peculiar to the distribution and retailing of the motion picture. He has pointed to cigarettes and motor cars. That same direct-to-consumer merchandising obtains in many lines. It has long been applied to soap and pickles, to books and magazines, to shoes and hats, even to bread and ice cream. The development has been accelerated by the rise of the great mass media of press and radio. The manifestation pertains quite as immediately to the consumer mind and habit as it does to traits of capital and business.

It would be of interest to THE HERALD to receive expressions on the development, as it pertains to the motion picture, from other exhibitors.

Chicago Exhibitors to Meet On Industry Foundation

John Balaban, head of Balaban & Katz Theatres, Chicago, has invited 150 industry leaders in the Chicago exchange area to attend a Motion Picture Foundation organizational luncheon meeting at the Blackstone Hotel April 16. A Chicago area committee of from seven to 17 members will be elected at this meeting and they, in turn, will elect a national trustee, who will attend the meeting of the Foundation's National Board of Trustees some time in May. Mr. Balaban and Edward G. Zorn, head of United Theatre Owners of Illinois, were appointed temporary co-chairmen for the Chicago area by the Foundation's Steering Committee.

Universal Gets Permission To Build Six Exchanges

The Civilian Production Administration has granted permission to Joseph M. Berne of Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., to build six film exchange buildings. The six buildings, to be constructed at an estimated cost of $1,130,000, will be located in Dallas, Omaha, Kansas City, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Atlanta. The applications were granted on the grounds that increases in the volume of business were creating fire hazards in existing exchanges. Applications for 22 other exchanges are still pending.

Liebeskind to Enter Production Soon

Nat Liebeskind, former general manager for RKO in South America, expects to enter production shortly with Hollywood as a base. He is now liquidating his interest in eight theatres near Buenos Aires, where he long maintained his headquarters as representative for RKO, for which company he originally established offices in Argentina and Brazil. Mr. Liebeskind, now on an extended New York visit, is one of the pioneering American distribution representatives in the foreign field and has been active in South America for 20 years.

Keith Theatre Sold

Keith Operating Company, Inc., of Indianapolis, operating the Keith theatre in that city, has sold the lease to Arthur J. Steel and Harold Mirish. The theatre has been remodeled and the new owners will take over April 30.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS FIGHT QUOTA PLAN

British Theatres Attack Newsreel

London Bureau

Protest Producer Plea to End Distributor Quota; Joined by Labor Unit

by PETER BURNUP
in London

The suggestion here that the Board of Trade favors the producers' proposal that Renters' Quota should be abolished when new quota legislation is drawn up has greatly concerned exhibitors. Unexpectedly, also, the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees has allied itself with the exhibitors and gone on record with the suggestion that a joint meeting of British and American film interests be held to examine the practicability of a trade agreement.

The suggestion came at an interview between the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and officials of the Board who, it is understood, put forward the idea in view of the pronounced shortage of studio space; they, apparently, taking the view that if Americans are compelled to make pictures here there will not be enough studio room for British producers.

To Fight Suggestion

It is a notice which will be combatted with all possible force by the exhibitors, who take the view that the abolition of Renters' Quota should place the independent exhibitor entirely at the mercy of "integrated" combines like the Rank Group.

The NATKE has addressed a forthright letter to Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, on the subject.

"We are apprehensive that a total abolition of Renters' Quota would be a false step. . . . A principal problem facing this country is the saving of dollar remittances. We recollect Mr. Jack Warner's promise to make six pictures in this country, each of which shall not cost less than £300,000. That means that at least £1,800,000 will remain in this country which would otherwise be remitted to America. In addition the films, when made, will be exhibited in this country thereby displacing American films and still further saving dollars. Finally, these films will receive a worldwide distribution.

Cite Willingness of Others

"At least two other major American companies have expressed their willingness to produce on a similar scale in this country. Why stop them when they are willing to accept reels of celluloid in America, instead of our very much needed dollars?"

The letter to the Board of Trade reminds Sir Stafford of the increasing inter-relationship between the leaders of the industry on both sides of the Atlantic and that the potentialities of the new legislation go far beyond the confines of the motion picture industry.

It goes on:

"We propose that you consider, in consultation with the American Government, calling a conference of representatives of the motion picture industry of America and of the British film industry at a reasonably early date to examine the practicability of a trade or commercial agreement being entered into between the film industries of the two countries.

"A commercial agreement of the character suggested could supplement rather than replace legislation. Such an agreement, however, would diminish the need for the introduction of provocative or retaliatory legislation by one or both countries, and would render to the governments and people of the two countries a service far wider than the immediate issues."

Rank To Visit Toronto On Contract Suit

Toronto Bureau

J. Arthur Rank, British film leader, will visit Toronto the middle of May to discuss the breach of contract charges filed against him and his interests by Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., and United World Pictures of Canada. Both companies are protesting Mr. Rank's transfer of distribution rights to Eagle-Lion Films of Canada, Ltd.

Monogram Donates Stock To Philippine College

Monogram International Corporation has contributed 30,000 feet of Eastman 35mm sound negative film to Ateneo College in the Philippine Islands, it was announced Tuesday by Norton V. Ritchey, president. The film was transported without charge to Manila last week by Pan American Airways and will be used in the making of a benefit picture, "The End of the Road," proceeds of which will go to rebuilding the school, which was destroyed during the war.

Lopert Gets "Shoe Shine"

Lopert Films has acquired the Italian picture, "Shoe Shine," for distribution in the Western Hemisphere, the British Empire, France, Belgium, Holland and Scandinavia. The picture, which deals with the displaced children of Rome, will be released in the U. S. in the autumn.

Rosener Acquires Two

Herbert Rosener Company, west coast foreign film circuit, has acquired two San Francisco theatres, Stage Door and Nob Hill. This brings the circuit's total to eight, four in San Francisco and four in Los Angeles.

Exhibitor criticism of the "canned antiquity" of newsreels mounts daily. Latest exhibitor grumble at the reels comes from Leslie Hill, chairman of the Devon and Cornwall branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, and widely tipped as next year's vice-president of the Association.

Said Exhibitor Hill at the monthly meeting of his branch: "We are paying more for our newsreel in running time than any film we put on the screen."

"Someone," he added darkly, "is vitally concerned in seeing that the newsreels are maintained where they are today. All through the war the newsreels have been subsidized by us. The whole thing is a racket and somebody is working it for their own ends."

Whoever that somebody might be, Mr. Hill did not explain.

It is likely that a strongly-worded resolution expressing the widespread feeling of the ineffectiveness of the reels will be adopted at the next meeting of the CEA's general council.

It is significant that no effort has been made by MGM so far to launch their own reel in this country, although it is common knowledge that the company has a considerable news organization in being on this side.

British Producers Offer 44-Hour Week Formula

London Bureau

Following prolonged negotiations, the British Film Producers' Association has put to the three trades unions concerned—the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, the Association of Cine Technicians and the Electrical Trades Union—a formula for the adoption of a 44-hour working week in the studios. The unions have accepted the notion in principle, but want to have a formula devised which will cover their members' highly lucrative overtime payments.

RKO Radio Promotes Four In Latin-America

Four of RKO's managers in the Latin American division have been promoted, it was announced this week by Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution. Max Gomez, general manager in Mexico, has been assigned to a special sales position in Latin America under Jack Osserman, Latin American supervisor. Harry Davis, formerly manager of the Colombia office, will manage the Mexico office. Ricardo Canals, manager for Peru, replaces Mr. Davis as Colombia manager. Ned Seckler, Panama manager, is being transferred to Brazil to manage company business there.

Eagle-Lion Gets 7 Rank Films

Eagle-Lion Films, J. Arthur Rank's American production company, will distribute seven English-made Rank features during the 1947 calendar year, Arthur B. Krim, president, announced Thursday at a New York conference following his return from England. The company's 10-year agreement with Mr. Rank calls for Eagle-Lion to distribute a minimum of five Rank pictures a year.

Making the trip to London "to show the English that Eagle-Lion is more than a paper organization," Mr. Krim and the Rank interests set English release dates for five Hollywood Eagle-Lion pictures: "Repeat Performance," May 15; "Out of the Blue," June 15; "Red Stallion," June 30; "Love From a Stranger," July 31; "Captain Casanova," September 1.

These pictures will be given worldwide distribution through Mr. Rank's interests in Europe, New Zealand, Australia, Egypt, South Africa, and elsewhere.

Four New Theatres Are Planned in California

The construction of three new theatres has been announced by Golden State Theatres Corporation, one to be built at Lomita Park, another at San Bruno and a third at Milbrae, Cal. Ben Levin, of General Theatrical Theatres, has plans for a new house in Gilroy, Cal. Golden State has already begun excavation on the Milbrae site, although Government approval is still pending. This house will seat 1,100 and will cost approximately $200,000. Theatrical's new house will seat 1,100 and will cost about $250,000.

San Francisco Development Includes 1,000-Seat House

A $25,000,000 development, to be known as the Lakeshore Park Plaza, will be built in the San Francisco suburbs this summer. The project includes a 1,000-seat theatre. Approximately 1,500 homes, ranging in cost from $7,500 to $50,000 will be built and the project includes a square block of retail shops with a construction cost of about $1,500,000. The shopping center will be built in the form of a "Y" and will allow for 1,500 feet of parking space.

Announce Construction of Two Colorado Houses

As soon as materials are available, David Cockrill, managing director of the Denham, Denver first run, will build a 2,000-seat theatre there at an estimated cost of $1,000,000. Ground for the project has been bought for $225,000. Preliminary plans have been drawn by Hal Periera, New York designer. Also announced is the construction by Gibraltar Enterprises, of which Charles R. Gilmour is president, of a $85,000 house in Loveland, Colo., to seat 600.

URGES EXHIBITOR ACTION AGAINST LOCAL TAXES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Practically every issue of every trade paper in the country carries a story of the theatre business being plastered with one kind of tax or another.

It is high time that the exhibition branch of the industry put aside its organizational differences and combined forces once and for all for the betterment of their lot.

The current rage of every hamlet, town, city and state in the nation in setting their sights for greater revenue is to single out in almost every instance—the motion picture theatre.

Exhibition's lethargy toward politics and taxes is well known. We always manage to get up in arms after the horse has been stolen from the barn. With the many exhibitor organizations already in the field it is futile to say that we need another organization to do a job of lobbying. Rather, the solution should be in the amalgamation of these organizations, strictly in the exhibitor's interest.

Can you imagine any bill affecting the liquor or radio industries being passed with nary a say on their part? Never! These industries have organizations that act in the interest of all members of their industries. Shamefacedly, we must admit that such is not the case in our particular field.

The time is now, when our emotions are aroused, to strike while the iron is hot. Call a meeting of the directors of the various exhibitor organizations and circuit heads—and lay the cards on the table. Do we wish further Government interference, local or otherwise, or shall we protect the business from which we get butter for our bread?

We cannot depend upon the public to support our cause when we ourselves do nothing to combat detrimental legislation. This appeal to the public has frequently been pushed to the hilt—but the results have invariably been the same—passage—against the wishes of the exhibitors—of the bill.

I say form an over-all organization—a sort of Johnston Office. Select a czar for our branch of the industry, and put an end to this laxity that is careless, stupid—and costly.—MELVIN KATZ, Hippodrome Theatre, Pottstown, Pa. (William Goldman Theatre)

New York Building Code Hearings Are Scheduled

New York State's new standard building code, which includes sweeping changes in theatre specifications, appears likely to go into effect early next autumn, following a decision by the State Labor Department's Board of Standards and Appeals to hold hearings on the document in May or June. Theatre owners will have an opportunity at the hearing to voice any objections they may have to the new specifications. Exhibitor representatives who helped draw up the code were Henry Anderson, Paramount; Louis Lazar, Schine Circuit; Theodore Jung, Loew's, and Martin Tracey, Century circuit.

Jewish Drive Has $2,100,000 Quota

The motion picture industry in the New York metropolitan area has set a goal for itself of $2,100,000 in the 1947 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal. This quota is a little more than twice the aggregate sum collected in 1946 by the industry and by the Joint Defense Appeal of the Anti-Defamation League in New York.

The quota was set at a New York meeting last week of motion picture and allied industry leaders, which was presided over by Barney Balaban, Paramount president, who is national chairman of the Motion Picture Division of the United Jewish Appeal.

Named as co-chairmen of the New York industry drive were: Matthew Fox, vice-president of Universal-International; Billy Rose, producer and columnist; Richard Rodgers, producer and composer, and Emil Freidlander, president of Dazian's, Inc.

Samuel Goldwyn will head this year's campaign of the Jewish Welfare Fund in Los Angeles, which conducts the United Jewish Appeal there. Jack Warner, vice-president in charge of production for Warner Brothers; Walter Wanger, producer; Abe Lastfogel, vice-president of the William Morris Agency, and Dore Schary, vice-president in charge of production for RKO, will serve as co-chairmen of the motion picture division on the west coast.

Leaders of Cleveland's amusement industry and other business fields were hosts to Barney Balaban, Paramount president and national chairman of the Motion Picture Division of the United Jewish Appeal, at a dinner Tuesday at the Oakwood Country Club on behalf of the local Appeal campaign. More than 100 attended.

U. S. Delegation Leaves For Geneva Conference

The major part of the U. S. delegation to the Geneva trade conference left Washington last weekend, the State Department announced. The conference was to open April 10. Frank McCarthy, Motion Picture Association representative in Paris, plans to be on hand for the entire conference, while the MPA president, Eric Johnston, probably will leave the U. S. for Geneva late in May.

More Time in Jackson Park Suit

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, Chicago, has granted a request of the defendants in the Jackson Park theatre case for an extension of time for filing final briefs. Distributor defendants, Balaban and Katz and Warner Theatres, now have until May. 1.

Paramount and 20th-Fox Join In 16mm Abroad

Paramount International and 20th-Fox International have officially joined forces for the distribution of 16mm product abroad and have formed a new corporation for the purpose, a 20th-Fox announcement said this week. It will be owned by the two companies on a 50-50 basis. Emanuel D. Silverstone, home office representative of 20th-Fox International, will head the new organization as president.

The corporation has been in preparation many months. Signing of the contract was reportedly held up because of legal difficulties arising from the pooling of facilities. Daniel Frankel, vice-president of Four Continents Films, a company distributing British pictures in the United States, will be general sales manager. He is resigning from his post at Four Continents.

The announcement said the new corporation would distribute sub-standard width films to those parts of foreign countries which, because of lack of equipment and facilities, are not now reached by standard product. According to Mr. Silverstone, no decision regarding distribution methods has yet been reached. Operations probably will cover the whole world excepting the U. S. and Canada. The complete libraries of 20th-Fox and Paramount will be available for 16mm reduction.

The 16mm versions of pictures of either of the two companies so far have not been generally distributed in foreign countries. Operations will be based partly on an extensive survey of 16mm possibilities conducted by 20th-Fox late last year. Besides original versions, the new corporations will handle dubbed and superimposed versions of both companies. Also slated for distribution are a series of educational shorts called "The World Today." A corporate name for the corporation remains to be announced.

Metro Short Subject Wins Safety Council Award

For the third consecutive year, an MGM short has won the National Safety Council's Award offered annually to the film contributing most to public safety during the year. The award this year went to the company's "Traffic With the Devil," produced by Herbert Morgan and filmed in cooperation with the Associated Press. The award, made by the National Committee on Films for Safety, was the fifth MGM has received.

Opening Spring Valley House

Martin Schwartz, president of the Ronny Park Theatres Corporation, will open the Parkway theatre in Spring Valley, N. Y., April 25. It is a small modern theatre which he has recently purchased and remodeled. Mr. Schwartz is the former president of KAS Theatre Corporation.

BRITISH MOBILE UNITS TAKE THE SHOW HOME

"A NIGHT AT THE OPERA". It's a night at the MGM picture of that name, the Marx Brothers' zany product, at Mickleton, England, where the audience seems to be enjoying itself thoroughly, in a 16mm mobile show.

AIMED at a vast potential audience of British filmgoers, 16mm pioneers in Britain are opening a wide field with the introduction of one-night stands in small villages and towns throughout the country. Today these films are playing in many isolated spots where the motion picture up to now has been little-known, according to advices to the Loew's International home office from its London headquarters.

Outstanding among the circuits which now regularly serve the little communities throughout Britain is Century Mobile Cinemas, subsidiary of Sidney L. Bernstein's 35mm Granada Circuit. Century, which uses completely self-contained vans to cover one situation every day of the week, was formed four months ago after a year of preparation. Currently its units are operating in Kent, Bedfordshire, Surrey, Sussex, Hampshire, Berkshire, and Buckinghamshire, and expansion is taking place constantly. Other important circuits are established in hundreds of villages and towns.

Two Shows a Day

Each situation gets two shows a day, once a week. The common admission price amounts to about one shilling and sixpence (30 cents) for the evening performances and about eight to tenpence for the popular children's matinees. The halls booked by the circuit have an average seating capacity of 200-250. Admissions generally are no lower than prices charged by the nearest 35mm house.

Century's operations are headed by Richard Willder. The company is understood to have extensive booking arrangements with Gaumont British and MGM. Narrow-gauge exhibition is subject to an agreement between the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society. Under these rules 16mm exhibition is approved only in areas not serviced by 35mm; established 35mm exhibitors get first preference in the 16mm field, and 16mm exhibitors and distributors are encouraged to join the two organizations. There also is a reasonable time clearance in the release.

Farningham, a small community in Kent, is typical. Every Friday, the red and white Century van, with its slogan, "Century Mobile Cinemas bring the stars to you," comes to a stop before the little town's brick and timber hall, and George Thurling, the ex-serviceman operator-manager, unloads his equipment. Besides driving the unit, he is also publicity man, bill-poster, cashier, technician, projectionist, usher and odd-job man. It takes him about an hour to get the place ready for the show.

Equipment Is Simple

After getting the equipment into place, he sets up the simple portable projection booth to mask it. Two-inch diameter hollow rods slot into place and are covered by a heavy rubberized material with "eye-holes" for the projectors and "mouthpiece" for himself to look out. The booth shuts off much extraneous sound—and that's important to the small-hall show. Completing the booth is a normal rewind machine clamped to the table.

New York Supreme Court Rules Against Hughes

Howard Hughes' efforts to force a showing of his picture "The Outlaw" in New York City were halted again last week when New York State Supreme Court Justice Bernard Shientag ruled that the City License and Police Commissioners had the right to threaten revocation of a theatre's license and prosecution of an exhibitor to prevent showing of an indecent picture.

Republic Holds Sales Meetings On New Product

Plans for the release and promotion of forthcoming productions and exhibitor reaction to Trucolor were subjects of discussion at Republic's first and second regional sales meetings in New York and Chicago. The New York meeting was held at the New York Athletic Club Wednesday and Thursday, April 2 and 3, and the Chicago meeting was conducted at the Hotel Blackstone Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Sees Big Role for Color

At the New York meeting Herbert J. Yates, Republic president, reported enthusiastic exhibitor reaction to the company's Trucolor process and said that this confirmed his prediction that the industry would go all-out for color as soon as laboratories are in a position to meet the demand. He promised to fulfill this demand by special installation of equipment at both the Fort Lee, N. J., and the Hollywood laboratories, and said he expects to deliver the majority of Republic pictures in Trucolor by the end of the year.

James R. Grainger, executive vice-president in charge of sales and distribution, told the delegates of the Easter Week opening of Frank Borzage's production "That's My Man," at the Globe theatre in New York, and outlined plans for the Nelson Eddy-Illona Massey picture, "End of the Rainbow," and the next Roy Rogers Trucolor pictures, "The Bells of San Angelo."

At the New York meeting Babe Ruth confirmed that Republic was negotiating for the motion picture rights to the story of his life.

District Managers Attend

Attending the New York meeting were William Martin Saal, executive assistant to Mr. Yates, Steve Edwards, Albert Schiller, John Petrauskas, Jr., John Alexander, John Curtin, Richard Yates, Edward Riestler and Fred Franke. Mickey Isman, assistant general manager of Empire Universal Films, Ltd., distributors of Republic product in Canada, joined president and general manager A. W. Perry at the meeting.

LATE REVIEW

Fun on a Weekend

United Artists-Stone—Light Comedy

Here is one that is good for hearty laughs in any situation. Produced, directed and written by Andrew Stone, "Fun on a Weekend" fulfills many a little man's dream of getting rich quick through sheer nerve and ingenuity. If, at the same time, he manages to take a few pot-shots at society and the all-too-gullible mogols of industry, and if his name just happens to be Eddie Bracken, it's all for the better.

Bracken and Priscilla Lane, ably assisted by such seasoned comedians as Arthur Treacher and Allen Jenkins as well as the romantic Tom Conway, make a good team. It's strictly situation comedy, of course, but some of the incidents will really get them and the dialogue is funny and well-paced throughout. Some of the scenes, such as the one showing the hungry Eddie in hot competition with a dog for some bits of meat on a bone, are Bracken at his best.

The story deals with a boy and a girl, both hungry and broke, who meet on a Florida beach and decide to go "for the big money" with nothing more to start with than some beach attire. Liberally using society's respect for money and distinguished-sounding names, they manage to crash into several homes, pretending they are in the market for an estate. Eventually, although still penniless, they get to live at the best hotel in town, throw lavish parties and mingle with high society. When Bracken thinks Priscilla loves playboy Conway, he is ready to give up, but the girl convinces him it's he whom she wants to marry.

Narrow Gauge to Engage SMPE At Chicago Meet

A record number of technical papers—69 of them—had been submitted by the first of the week for delivery at the sixty-first semi-annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to be held April 21-25 at the Drake Hotel in Chicago.

Many new developments in photography, sound recording, laboratory processing, sound reproduction, projection, television, and other subjects will be described at the technical sessions, according to Gordon A. Chambers, chairman of the papers committee. About half of the papers relate to production and use of 8mm and 16mm films.

Among new sound recording equipment to be introduced by convention papers will be a variable-area recorder optical system permitting the recording of either negative or direct-positive sound track, to be described by J. L. Pettus and L. T. Sachtleben of the RCA Film Recording Section; a portable 16mm sound recording system, by John G. Frayne, of Western Electric Company, and a line of compact lightweight recorders for both 35mm and 16mm films, by M. E. Collins, of RCA's Hollywood engineering staff.

Other papers on the tentative schedule include "My First Fifty Years in Motion Pictures," by Oscar B. Depue, of Chicago; "Television Studio Lighting," by Capt. W. C. Eddy, director of television of Station WBKB, Chicago, and "Television Remote Operation," by A. H. Brolly, chief engineer of WBKB.

Universal Promotion Staff Holds Two-Day Meeting

Executives of Universal-International, members of the company's home office advertising, publicity and promotion departments and field promotion personnel of U-I's eastern division held a two-day meeting at the Hotel Astor in New York this week. Presided over by Maurice A. Bergman, eastern advertising and publicity head, the discussions centered around campaign plans for the company's present and forthcoming productions.

In the future a series of three similar conventions a year has been planned, with the second set for September, 1947. The meetings follow up the idea of augmenting the company's field staff with flying squadrons of exploitation representatives from the home office. Special plans for this project were discussed at this week's session.

Among those who addressed the gathering were William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager; Matthew Fox, vice-president of U-I and board chairman of United World Films; Henry A. Linet, eastern advertising manager; Al Horwitz, eastern publicity manager, and William Heine-man, sales manager for the Rank division of U-I.

Hollywood Bureau

Production activity took a turn for the better last week, as work began on seven new films, and only two went to the cutting rooms. At the weekend, the shooting index stood at 39, compared to the previous level of 34.

At RKO, Harriet Parsons launched "Memory of Love," the romantic story of a girl who falls in love with a blind pianist. A notable array of names compose the cast, among them Dana Andrews, Merle Oberon, Ethel Barrymore, Hoagy Carmichael, Arthur Rubinstein and Walter Reed. John Cromwell is the director.

Another new RKO Radio venture is "Dick Tracy vs. the Gruesome Gang," whose cast includes Ralph Byrd, Boris Karloff and Anne Gwynne. Jack Rawlins is directing, and Herman Schlom is producing under the executive supervision of Sid Rogell.

There were also two pictures started at Columbia. "Sweet Genevieve" is a musical which Sam Katzman is producing and Arthur Dreifuss directing. Heading the cast are Jean Porter, Jimmy Lydon, Gloria Marlen, Ralph Hodges, Tom Batten, Kirk Allen and Virginia Belmont.

"Blondie" Picture Is 21st In Columbia Series

"Blondie in the Dough" is the 21st in this series, and the cast, as usual, includes Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and Marjorie Kent. Abby Berlin is the director.

Monogram's entry-of-the-week is "The Hunted," a melodrama starring Belita and Preston Foster, with Cathy Carter, J. Farrell MacDonald and Russell Hicks in featured roles. Scott R. Dunlap is the producer; Jack Bernhard the director.

PRC trained cameras on two: "Pioneer Justice" and "Gas House Kids Go West." The first is a Western with Lash Larue, Fuzzy St. John and Jennifer Holt heading the cast. Jerry Thomas produces; Ray Taylor directs.

"Gas House Kids" is being produced by Sam Baerwitz, and William Beaudine is directing a cast composed of John Shelton, Chili Williams, Carl (Alfalfa) Switzer, Benny Bartlett, Tommy Bond and Ray Dolciame.

Small's second venture for Columbia will be a film version of Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Black Arrow," which is laid in England during the reign of Henry VI. . . . British producer Marcel Hellman will make two pictures in London for 20th Century-Fox. Sees Westerns Perennial Fare

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Not only will there always be Westerns, a prediction nobody ventures to dispute, but there will always be big Westerns—"A" Westerns, to use the Hollywood term of differentiation—and as time goes on more and more of them will be turned out by independent producers.

The writer quoted above is Niven Busch, who isn't so old, but who started paying close attention to the art-industry at close range at the age of 10. Showmen will identify him, if they read their billing as attentively as they should, as the man who wrote "Duel in the Sun," the novel, and both wrote and co-produced "Pursued," the picture.

Close to Business as Boy

He got close to the roots of show business as a boy who spent his play time at the Fort Lee, New Jersey, studio of the late Lewis J. Selznick, whose then expansive holdings included the World Film Corporation, with Master Niven's father, Briton Busch, in charge of distribution. That was 1913. Master Niven's ambition, at 10, was to work up to the post of office boy at the Fort Lee plant, a job held down by an only slightly bigger fellow named David O. Seiznick, who doubtless at that point coveted similarly the clerical responsibilities shouldered by his big brother, Myron.

All the boys went on up in the business from there, Myron to fabulous heights in the talent agency field, David to producership of such showmanly items as "Gone with the Wind," and Niven to the front rank of American writing men. Fort Lee, as Editor Terry Ramsaye of this publication has recorded in detail in his "A Million and One Nights," was quite a place.

They did make Westerns at Fort Lee, but it was by no direct line from that circumstance that Briton Busch's boy Niven came to the writing of such impressively screen-worthy Western stories as "Duel in the Sun" and "Pursued." Nor were the Busch and Selznick careers steadily connected, although Niven and David did work for a time, not exactly together but alongside, on a little magazine called Time, which a friend of theirs named Henry Luce was putting together with more pains than prospects in a loft on New York's 34th Street.

To Coast in 1933

And it was indeed Myron who, in 1933, brought Niven to Hollywood and started him off as a writer of scripts, so many scripts that he can't remember the names of all of them. But he didn't set out to have David produce "Duel in the Sun," planning to do that himself, in a deal with RKO Radio, and letting the property go to David, when the latter, reading the thing as a preliminary to lending that studio the services of Jennifer Jones, decided to bid it in for his own uses, and did so. Author Busch says he'd have used it differently.

The Busch dedication of his talent to the Western type of subject grew out of his disappointment with the exhibition result of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Westerner," for which he had written the script without having found out at first hand what the West was really like. It didn't play the way he felt it should have played, so he went down to the Panhandle for six months, living with its people and roaming its vastness, to find out why. What he found out prompted him to take a year off to write "Duel," which is followed now by "Pursued," and to be followed by another work in kind which he considers a bigger, broader and better treatment of the West that was and, he is convinced, in literature always will be.

Westerns, he says, can be substantial stories about maturely motivated characters whose problems may be dealt with peculiarly well against the richly dramatic background of the West. And the reason why more and more of the big Westerns will be coming from independent producers, he observes, is because an independent producer, venturing his own money in quest of profit, prefers to venture it in a property he's dead sure will attract at minimum a definitely predeterminable number of customers. The Western, he says, is the only type of picture that commands, be it good, bad or indifferent, a virtually irreducible rain-or-shine attendance.

Local theatres, after several weeks of mediocre box office figures, rebounded to something like old time high grosses with Easter week attractions. The Palace had "The Angel and the Badman," the Ohio featured its single feature showing of the Hope-Lamour starrer, "My Favorite Brunette," the Broad ran a repeat engagement of "Daniel Boone" and the Grand split the week between a moveover run of "Pursued" and a first run of "Trail Street." Manager Carl Rogers at the Broad capitalized on Easter Monday vacation with a two-hour cartoon matinee. . . . Total of 20,700 seats would be added to the downtown area if preliminary plans for two huge new Civic Center structures are realized. . . . Architects revealed in a "preview" of the $4,500,000 Veterans Memorial group that there would be at least three auditoriums—one with 8,100 permanent seats plus 3,000 temporary seats, a music hall with 3,000 capacity and a recital hall seating 800. A proposed Temple of Goodwill, sponsored by Protestant organizations, would include one large auditorium seating 3,000, with two chapels seating nearly 1,000 and large dining halls convertible to entertainment areas.

With government price regulations swept away the theatres put up the full range of holiday prices for Good Friday and some did so for Easter Monday. . . . Famous Players, Canadian Odeon and other circuits quickly followed the Toronto Loew houses in raising regular prices commencing with the opening of Easter bills and many of the independent exhibitors were not far behind in making long-delayed upward adjustment of price scales which had been frozen since 1941 as a government war measure. . . . New entries were: "Pursued," at Warner's Earle; "The Guilt of Janet Ames" at Warner's Metropolitan; "It Happened In Brooklyn" at Loew's Palace; "I'll Be Yours" at Loew's Capitol; and a carry-over of "13 Rue Madeleine" at Loew's Columbia. . . . Sees 50 Hours Of Television on NBC in 2 Years

Within the next two years the National Broadcasting Company will be televising 50 hours or more a week, of which 10 to 20 hours will be devoted to the presentation of newsreels, information films and documentary subjects. This was the prediction of Edwin S. Mills, assistant director of NBC Television's film section, in New York this week. Mr. Mills is also a producer of motion pictures and "live" shows for the company.

Elaborating, Mr. Mills said: "Television will be the ideal outlet for the documentary and information film producers who are now having difficulty in getting theatrical distribution." To enhance the value of these subjects television will employ news commentators who will present an analysis of news events as relevant motion pictures on the subjects are shown."

Currently NBC is producing and televising two newsreel issues a week—one 15-minute program on Monday evenings which is sponsored by Esso and presents news events concerning metropolitan New York, and an NBC sponsored 15-minute reel on Thursday nights which is concerned with national and world events. Nearly all of the material for these reels is photographed by NBC camera crews.

Despite rumors to the contrary, Mr. Mills said, NBC has made no plans to distribute its television newsreels to theatres, and has set no policy on selling its film material. However, in a few cases, he said, the television company has sold film footage to producers after NBC has used them on the air.

Set Plans for Television Institute April 14-15

The "Television Institute," a two-day session devoted to recent progress in that industry sponsored by The Televiser magazine, gets under way at the Hotel Commodore in New York April 14. Invitations to attend the different panel discussions as well as the exhibit section have been sent out to more than 1,000 franchised television dealers in the New York and New Jersey areas. The program calls for 51 speakers to attend seven panel sessions and four seminars. Two luncheon meetings have been planned. Of particular interest to the motion picture industry will be scheduled talks on "Film's Role in Television," "News, Documentary and Special Events Films," "What About Commercial Films," and "Booking Films for Video."

RANK ORGANIZING POSITION IN EIRE

by T. J. M. SHEEHY
in Dublin

The first major phase in J. Arthur Rank's plans for acquiring a controlling position as an Eire exhibitor was completed March 31.

Metropole and Allied Cinemas and the wholly-owned subsidiary companies, Dublin Kinematograph Theatres, Ltd., the Phibsboro Picture House, Ltd., and the Associated Picture Houses (which have gone or are going into voluntary liquidation), from this month forward will be centrally controlled and operated under the one company, Odeon (Ireland) Ltd. This company, with an authorized share capital of £200,000, issued in 80,000 five shilling shares, offered the Irish public £400,000, four per cent first debenture shares at par. The issue was oversubscribed within a quarter of an hour.

Odeon (Ireland) Ltd., apart from its own properties, also owns 470,747 of the issued ordinary share of Irish Cinemas, Ltd., which has an issued share capital of £400,000, divided into 200,000 cumulative £1 preference shares and 800,000 five shilling shares.

Rank's British companies now control five of Dublin's eight first run houses and a large section of the best Dublin suburban houses.

Since Dublin represents about 80 per cent of the total Eire box office returns, this gives Mr. Rank a commanding position, which is further strengthened by his two first run houses in Eire's only other large cities, Cork and Limerick.

The board of Odeon (Ireland) now consists of Mr. Rank, chairman; Maurice Elliman, vice-chairman; Louis Elliman, managing director; John Henry Davis and George Acheson. Both the Mr. Ellimans will continue in their respective capacities until 1952.

PUERTO RICO

by E. SANCHEZ ORTIZ
in San Juan

Legislation to eliminate the two cents per lineal foot tax on all films imported into Puerto Rico, when such films constitute second prints of films for exhibition, has been introduced in the Senate of Puerto Rico. Another bill would amend the Internal Revenue Act to reduce from 20 per cent to 15 per cent the tax on all cameras, projectors and parts and accessories, all cinematographic machines and parts, and photographic articles. Two bills have been introduced in the House of Representatives which would eliminate the admission tax on all public shows when they are held for charity or educational purposes.

U. S. imports into Puerto Rico during the 11th-months period from January through November, 1946, amounted to 4,669,738 line-

ITALY IMPOSES TAX ON FOREIGN ACCOUNTS

Rome Bureau

American companies in Italy, fretting under exchange regulations which forbid taking their profits out, now must pay a tax on those blocked accounts and on all their investments in Italy. A bill was approved March 29 by Italy's Cabinet Council enforcing the country's "tax on wealth"—the Imposta Straordinaria Sul Patrimonio. It applies to all foreign companies as well as native.

The tax runs from 6 per cent on 3,000,000 lire ($13,000) to 41 per cent on a billion of more lire ($4,444,000 or more). Foreign companies will only pay one-third of those percentages. This would mean the American film companies would pay about 6 per cent on $800,000 and about 9 per cent on $2,000,000. Most of the American film companies' money is in bank accounts. Only Twentieth Century-Fox and MGM have purchased buildings in Rome.

al feet. The total average import each year is 6,000,000 feet.

Cobain's Theatre Circuit, the largest circuit on the island, inaugurated the new Rialto, a first run, in the heart of San Juan, during the latter part of March after its complete remodeling.

AUSTRALIA

by CLIFF HOLT
in Sydney

The U. S. supplied 319 of the 384 features imported by Australia during 1946, according to a report from the Commonwealth Film Censor recently tabled in the House of Representatives. Standard films of all classes imported in 1946 numbered 2,064, of which the U. S. supplied 1,015 (3,801 reels), Great Britain, 506 (1,030 reels), and other countries supplied 543 (966 reels). The total import of sub-standard films at 2,544 was a record. Nine of the U. S. films were rejected by the censors, but two of them passed on appeal.

American film imports of all classes increased by 232, but decreased by 1.3 per cent to 49.2 per cent of the total imports. British imports increased by 44, but dropped by 5.3 per cent to 24.5 per cent of the total.

Figures released by the Commissioner of Taxation for 1945, although almost two years behind, give an informative statistical picture of the industry's turnover in Australia. During 1945 attendance at cinemas reached the record peak of 151,144,831. This shows that almost half of Australia's population attends a cinema once a week.

MEXICO

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

President Miguel Aleman has accepted the honorary presidency of the recently organized Mexican chapter of the Variety Clubs. President Aleman has approved the chapter's plan for conducting in Mexico a campaign similar to that of the March of Dimes in the U. S. and to bestow upon distinguished visitors to this country the Mexican Variety Club medal. President Truman will be the first to receive the medal.

Exhibition is to be added to the activities of Gen. Abelardo L. Rodriguez, former president of Mexico, now Governor of Sonora State, and one of this country's biggest businessmen. He is a prominent shareholder in the Credito Cinematografico Mexicano, S.A., the $6,000,000 company organized here to finance the picture industry. He is also completing plans for the building and operation of four theatres in the Mexican northwest and also owns an interest in EMA, the Mexican newsreel organization.

The Municipal Government's amusements supervision department is insisting that its law forbidding exhibitors to sell tickets when all seats in their theatres are occupied be strictly obeyed. The department is fining violators.

PALESTINE

by IBRAHIM ZEIN
in Jaffa

The recent curfews in Palestine and the consequent separation of Tel-Aviv, where the offices of all companies are located, have caused considerable difficulties for exhibitors trying to get prints out of the city. No one can go in or out without certain passes, which are very difficult to obtain. Some such permits have been given to a few agents who are personally carrying their pictures to exhibitors through Jaffa.

Mrs. Nathalie Kalmus of Technicolor recently visited Egypt for business purposes. Studio Misr, where she was invited, hopes to conclude an agreement which would permit it to produce and release pictures in Technicolor. Initial tests will be highly expensive. If the pictures should be made, the first one will be "Fatima," starring the famous Oriental singer, Oum Koulthoum.

A decree from the Lebanese Government's Ministry of Economics has provided for an approximate decrease of 30 per cent in the price of theatre admissions. Lebanese exhibitors have applied for exemption from the "army tax" levelled on admissions. Theatre owners have protested the Government's action in decreasing admissions.

Skouras Reduces Holdings In 20th-Fox Through Gift

Spyros P. Skouras, president of 20th-Fox, gave gifts amounting to 42,000 shares of common stock during January, according to a report from the Securities and Exchange Commission in Philadelphia. In doing so he reduced his holdings to 5,250 shares. According to Mr. Skouras he had acquired the 42,000 shares last August by exercising an option. Other film stock changed hands during the month of February 11 to March 10 when Ned E. Depinet and N. Peter Rathvon acquired 20,000 shares each of Radio-Keith-Orpheum common, making their holdings 26,000 and 25,000 shares respectively. Harry M. Warner acquired 4,000 Warner Brothers shares.

Actors' Guild Asks $100 Per Day for Bit Players

The Screen Actors' Guild, in negotiations with the producers for a new contract, intends to ask pay raises for bit players amounting to $65 a day and $235 for those employed on a weekly basis. Current rates are $35 a day and $115 a week. The union bases its argument on the theory that film bit players work infrequently and can not exist on prevailing rates. The Guild also asks that the new contract contain a clause specifically prohibiting the exhibition of any picture with Guild actors in television. Negotiations with the producers will get under way April 15.

Salesman Union Not to Affiliate, Chief Insists

The Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen of America will operate independently and will not affiliate with any union, Arthur M. Van Dyke, president, said this week in Chicago: "We cannot unionize at any time except by a 51 per cent vote of our membership," Mr. Van Dyke, who also is sales manager for the 20th-Fox exchange in Chicago, said. "We want no union affiliation unless we can not get a fair deal as film men dealing with film men."

Mr. Van Dyke heads the Colosseum's three-men negotiating committee, which also includes N. Provencher, with United Artists in Milwaukee, and Mel Keller, with Warner in Portland, Ore. They will be assisted by David Benzor of Milwaukee, their counsel. Mr. Van Dyke said three distributors already had replied to letters sent by the group, asking that discussions relating to an improvement of the salesmen's status be held. All distributors acknowledged receipt of the communication.

The Colosseum head denied that his group would make any large-scale demands on the distributors, but pointed to the cost-of-living increases received by all other unions affiliated with the motion picture industry. Film exchange employes had received two separate raises of 10 and 15 per cent within the past two years while production workers had been given increases that amounted to $11,000,000.

The film salesmen, on the other hand, had received only a five dollar a week salary raise and that after a series of long discussions, he said. This was not enough to make up for the extra cost of living, he stated, pointing out that gasoline and other fuel costs, for instance, have gone up, but mileage expenses have not.

The first national convention of the Colosseum was held last December in St. Louis. It is understood the group has a membership of 500 in 13 cities.

Film Shipment Rates Up in Oklahoma

Rates for shipping film in Oklahoma will be raised April 13. The State Corporation Commission has approved them. Four express firms lead in film shipment in that state. The major one is Mistletoe Express Service, operating more than 25,000 miles per day. The company rate will be increased an average 20 cents per 100 pounds; and returns will no longer be given a 50 per cent discount.

180 Book Warner Bill

Approximately 180 first-run theatres have been set to play Warner Brothers' combination reissue bill comprising "The Sea Hawk" and "The Sea Wolf." The bill goes into general release April 26.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

GALLANT JOURNEY: Glenn Ford, Janet Blair—Very few comments and a flop at the box-office. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 10, 11.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Georgia.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

GENTLE ANNIE: James Craig, Donna Reed—This is an old one which I knew was good because I had seen it overseas. As it had never played this town I played it up big and got good results, especially on the second day after the word got around. Played Thursday-Friday.—J. R. Revell, New Ren Theatre, Yazoo City, Mississippi.

LADY IN THE LAKE: Robert Montgomery, Audrey Totter—This is Montgomery's innovation, in that the off-screen voice supposedly lets the audience do the detecting. We advertised it as a new technique, and as such we had a fair audience. But while the picture, as it developed gripped them, the reaction of the audience was such that I don't think as a steady diet of this type they will go for them. Then want to see the actor, and not just his hands.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

LADY IN THE LAKE: Robert Montgomery, Audrey Totter—This is Montgomery's new innovation whereby he appears only in a few short scenes and supposedly takes the audience along as the detective. That was the supposedly general idea. It does build for suspense, but our patrons were not much impressed and I am of the opinion that more like this will flop. They want to see the actor, not an off-screen voice.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Indiana.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Keenan Wynn—Drew well but people complained about it being too drawn out. Toward the end it became monotonous instead of amusing. Keenan Wynn is a fine comedian. Pat Kirkwood isn't hard to take. Played Sunday-Monday, March 9-10.—Marcella Smith, Vinton Theatre, McArthur, Ohio.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Maric Wilson—Very good. Keenan Wynn O.K., but I still like Groucho Marx the best.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

SHOW-OFF, THE: "Red" Skelton, Marilyn Maxwell—Rain hurt attendance on this excellent comedy. If your patrons go all out for comedies by all means play this. Skelton at his peak! Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 26, 27.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Georgia.

UNDERCURRENT: Katharine Hepburn, Robert Taylor—Hepburn is not boxoffice in this community; however, we had a better house than we expected. No complaints, no walkouts. The children became restless, of course, as it is strictly adult fare. We are glad to see Robert Taylor back, and have a feeling he is going to help our b.o. receipts. Played Sunday-Monday, March 30-31.—Marcella Smith, Vinton Theatre, McArthur, Ohio.

Monogram

MR. HEX: Bowery Boys, Leo Gorcey—My crowd ate it up, and one of the best in the series. Played Thursday-Friday-Saturday, March 20-21-22.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Arkansas.

MOON OVER MONTANA: Jimmy Wakely—Another Western; not the draw some Westerns are, but seemed to have enough shooting. Played March 28-29.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

TRAIL TO MEXICO: Jimmy Wakely, Lee "Lasses" White—Good, but for some unknown reason these Wakely's (which are all good Westerns) do not do average business. Mexican locale hurt this one here.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

Paramount

BLUE SKIES: Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire—A very elaborate production that cost plenty of moola, but only ordinary business, and that proves when Bing and Astaire can't pack our house the peak is past.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box office performance of product — providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York 20.

BLUE SKIES: Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire—When an elaborate production such as this one, that cost plenty of moola, headed by Crosby, does not do average business, you definitely know the peak has passed; that we have known for some time. It drags considerably, and is not the best of the Crosby's.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Indiana.

TWO YEARS BEFORE THE MAST: Alan Ladd, Brian Donlevy—Good acting; more of a picture for men than ladies. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Georgia.

PRC

THE GREAT MIKE: Stuart Erwin—A good race-horse picture, and I think the customers I had enjoyed it—but there was not many of them. It just didn't have the power to draw them by itself. Played Thursday-Friday, March 13-14.—J. R. Revell, New Ren Theatre, Yazoo City, Mississippi.

SON OF OLD WYOMING: Eddie Dean—This Western in color pleased the Friday-Saturday trade. Played March 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANNA AND THE KING OF SIAM: Rex Harrison, Irene Dunne—This picture was enjoyed by the few who saw it. The acting was superb. Most of my patrons thought this was another "Caesar and Cleopatra" and sought other entertainment. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 17, 18.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

CENTENNIAL SUMMER: Jeanne Crain, Cornel Wilde—This being the slow season for us, business was only fair. Was enjoyed by all who saw it. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 19, 20.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Robert Young, Dorothy McGuire—An excellent picture. Comments favorable. Club meetings and other attractions didn't help business. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 24, 25.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

DANGEROUS MILLIONS: Kent Taylor—These little program pictures will not stand alone and I do not run double features. Business was poor. Played Tuesday, March 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

MARGIE: Jeanne Crain-Alan Young—Another picture that pleased 100 per cent, as did Smoky, Son of Flicka, State Fair, all from Fox. The students, the townspeople, the farmers, all came out with a big look of satisfaction on their faces; loved it thoroughly; business excellent.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vermont.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—This is a box-office natural for small town operators, although I did have a few disappointed patrons who expected it to be a musical instead of a high class Western. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Georgia.

RAZOR'S EDGE: Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney—Another great story, superb cast, marvelous acting and a big hit, although many of our patrons hardly understood what it was all about. It is big and remarkable and should fill your theatre with the popularity of the book. Business excellent.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vermont.

Republic

ANGEL AND THE BADMAN: John Wayne, Gail Russell—One of the best to come from Republic—it was a pleasure to see Gail Russell in there starring for Republic. My patrons getting little tired of Vera Ralston, who is being played too often in Republic top pictures. Wayne is always a good draw here and gives a grand performance. Picture tops all the way. Played March 30-31, April 1.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vermont.

CALENDAR GIRL: Jane Frazee, William Marshall—One of the biggest disappointments I ever had—paid real money for the picture—was told it was tops but when the few I had here came out they had most uncomplimentary things to say about it. Even the college girls heard to say it's not so good and so forth. Business very, very poor indeed. Played March 9-11.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vermont.

HELDORADO: Roy Rogers—Good musical Western which pleased and did over average business on Friday-Saturday. Played March 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

MAN FROM OKLAHOMA: Roy Rogers, "Gabby" Hayes—We've been closed for a lengthy period, and not too many people knew we were open again, but it drew better than we expected. Played Saturday, March 29.—A. J. Sindt, Rankin Theatre, Rankin, Illinois.

MAN FROM RAINBOW VALLEY: Monte Hale, Adrian Booth—This super Magnacolor from Republic about a wild horse was well received by the weekend customers. I'm sure you'll be satisfied if you play this. Played Friday, Saturday, March 28, 29.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Georgia.

NIGHT TRAIN TO MEMPHIS: Roy Acuff, Adele Mara—Played second time, but very little business. It's good, but guess everybody saw it on first play-date. Wish Republic would reissue "Grand Ole Opry."—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

RKO Radio

BADMAN'S TERRITORY: Randolph Scott, "Gabby" Hayes—A small-town natural which fell badly for us. Blizzard first night, and extreme cold second day. Doubled with "Falcon's Alibi" (RKO), which made a pleasing combination. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 25, 26.—A. J. Sindt, Rankin Theatre, Rankin, Illinois.

CORNERED: Dick Powell, Micheline Cheirel—Only a fair box-office, very few comments. Played Sunday, March 9.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Georgia.

CRACK-UP: Pat O'Brien, Claire Trevor—My patrons were very much disappointed in this picture. They thought it was going to be an airplane picture. It was a waste of film and playing time. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 3, 4.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Georgia.

CRIMINAL COURT: Tom Conway—Entertaining program picture which did below average business. Played Tuesday, March 18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

GENIUS AT WORK: Anne Jeffreys, Wally Brown—Good program mystery thriller with some laughs that should please that type of patron who likes funny mysteries. Played Thursday-Friday-Saturday, March 13-14-15.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Arkansas.

KID FROM BROOKLYN: Danny Kaye—This picture looked O.K.; our first night was big. Then came the blizzard, but feel it should go over anywhere. Played March 24-25.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

MAKE MINE MUSIC: Walt Disney Feature Musical—Wonderful production which didn't make expenses. It goes over the heads of small town audiences. Those that came seemed to enjoy it. No walkouts, however. Played Sunday, Monday, March 30, 31.—A. J. Sindt, Rankin Theatre, Rankin, Illinois.

MAKE MINE MUSIC: Disney Musical Feature—We had several walkouts but it pleased the majority. Rain hurt our attendance. Played Sunday, March 30.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Georgia.

THE STRANGER: Edward G. Robinson, Orson Welles, Loretta Young—No good for small towns or, rather, wasn't in my situation. Played Sunday-Monday, March 16-17.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Arkansas.

Screen Guild

WILDFIRE: Bob Steele, Sterling Holloway—An average "horse opera" in color. The trailer was full of action and really drew them in. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 26, 27.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

United Artists

ANGEL ON MY SHOULDER: Paul Muni, Anne Baxter—Think there will be considerable controversy over this picture. Several people demanded their money back, others praised it considerably. They either liked it or they didn't like it, the majority in the latter group. Personally, I loved it. Played Tuesday, March 4.—Marcella Smith, Vinton Theatre, McArthur, Ohio.

ANGEL ON MY SHOULDER: Claude Rains, Paul Muni, Anne Baxter—This is the kind of picture I like to buy percentage because if you are checked it helps you convince film companies that all shows don't pack 'em in all the time, especially small towns. Good acting, but what a screwball, and no business. Played Sunday-Monday, March 9-10.—Terry Axley, New Theatre, England, Arkansas.

ANGEL ON MY SHOULDER: Paul Muni—A fantastic picture which people did not understand. Business was fine the first night, but dropped off 50 per cent the second night. Played Wednesday-Thursday, March 19-20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

THE CHASE: Robert Cummings, Michele Morgan—Rather surprised this got by the censors in some spots. Drew better than I expected and had no walkouts. Well worth what you'll pay for it. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—Marcella Smith, Vinton Theatre, McArthur, Ohio.

DIARY OF A CHAMBERMAID: Paulette Goddard, Francis Lederer—Don't play it. Don't buy it. I made both of these mistakes.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Georgia.

MR. ACE: George Raft, Sylvia Sydney—This is a political picture and not an action picture. Raft fans who expected action were disappointed and some walked out. Business was fair. Played March 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

STRANGE WOMAN: Hedy Lamarr, George Sanders—Most of the patrons enjoyed this sequel to "Leave Her to Heaven." Most patrons forget about Miss Lamarr's poor acting after seeing how beautiful she is. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 24, 25.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Georgia.

Universal

LITTLE MISS BIG: Beverly Simmons, Fay Holden—This played with my Western on the weekend and it's tops. Would have been very good for a Sunday attraction. Played Friday, Saturday, March 28, 29.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Georgia.

LOVER COME BACK: George Brent, Lucille Ball—Very cute. The audience seemed to love it even though it is silly in spots. Ball and Brent make a good comedy team. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 5, 6.—Marcella Smith, Vinton Theatre, McArthur, Ohio.

THE RUNAROUND: Rod Cameron, Ella Raines—A very good picture. Pleasing for the whole family. Played Sunday, March 16.—Melvin Lipnick, Inverness Theatre, Inverness, Miss.

Warner Bros.

DEVOTION: Bette Davis, Paul Henreid—Not for small towns. We didn't do very well, although after our big snowfall we didn't expect much. Played March 26-27.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

NEVER SAY GOODBYE: Errol Flynn, Eleanor Parker—This picture drew average business and pleased those who came. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

NIGHT AND DAY: Cary Grant, Alexis Smith—Excellent, but from now on I'll let someone else use these. I did not do the business expected on this.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

NOBODY LIVES FOREVER: John Garfield—Good action picture which pleased average business. Played March 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oklahoma.

TWO GUYS FROM MILWAUKEE: Dennis Morgan, Joan Leslie—Very good, but I paid too much for it. I'll have to let WB keep these good, high priced pictures.—S. T. Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Alabama.

Du Mont Television Sets Moving to Market

Dr. Allen B. Du Mont, president of the Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc., announced last week that in the four-week period between January 27 and February 23 his organization shipped in excess of $875,000 worth of television receivers. He also said that the remaining backlog of unfilled orders for sets still totals more than $3,100,000. Shipments to date have been almost entirely in the New York metropolitan area, but distribution schedules call for early deliveries to Philadelphia, Washington, D. C., Schenectady, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

Increase Television Rates in Chicago

Chicago's Paramount-Balaban & Katz television station WBKB has increased its commercial time cost to $200 per hour with the rate to stay in effect until there are 5,000 television receivers operating in the area. This is double the amount charged up to now under the commercial rate structure announced by the station several months ago. It provided for a charge of $100 per hour with the rate based on less than 1,000 sets in the area.

"Mr. Bell" Offered Theatres

"Mr. Bell," the Bell Telephone Company-sponsored short on the life and accomplishments of Alexander Graham Bell, has been cut by two reels and is being released to all theatres. It now runs one and a half reels and is available free through the various telephone exchanges. A full length version of the picture, produced at the new RKO-Pathé studios in New York, has been shown to advertising and industry representatives at a Waldorf-Astoria luncheon.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

Q Have you ever tried cracking a walnut in the hollow of your elbow? There's a character in the new Bob Hope picture, "My Favorite Brunette," who does just that. This prompted Rube Wolf, managing director of the Paramount theatre in downtown Los Angeles, to set up a walnut display in the lobby, with an invitation to patrons to try their strength. Anyone cracking a walnut in the hollow of the elbow received a free admission. The promotion kept a crowd constantly gathering in the outer lobby of the theatre.

Incidentally, the cost was practically nil. The Walnut Association of Southern California provided the nuts without charge, besides handling the distribution of several hundred display cards in grocery stores of metropolitan Los Angeles.

Q A firm believer in cooperative advertising, Norman W. Lofthus, manager of Warner Bros.' California theatre, Santa Barbara, Cal., recently marked the start of a third year of a highly profitable merchant tieup.

Two years ago, Lofthus originated and sold a quarter hour radio program which he called "Hollywood Hilites." The program appeared once a month over KDB and after a few months the time was increased to a half hour. Highlight of the program is a participation contest in which the audience is invited to identify a musical number from an unidentified picture. The winner each week receives a month of free shows at the California, plus a dinner and dance evening at the Restaurante Del Paseo.

A local jeweler sponsored the show for the first year and was followed by the current sponsor, Firestone's Ready to Wear Shop.

In his years as a theatre manager, Lofthus has participated in a great many newspaper and radio promotions but the one outstanding example of cooperation which he looks upon with pride is the tieup described above.

Q Easter fashion shows have come and gone for another year with varying degrees of success. One of the most interesting was the style show staged at the Lindsey theatre, Lubbock, Tex. Assistant manager Pete Kempf reports that the tieup was arranged with Hemphill-Wells Company, a leading department store, and the Braniff Airways. The models were six Braniff airline hostesses, flown from Dallas for the occasion. The illusion the production gave was that of a plane landing at the local airport, with the hostesses disembarking and modeling the evening gowns, dresses, sport togs, etc. The quick wit of a hidden commentator, a local fashion expert, provided extra entertainment throughout the show. The store and the airline were pleased with the success of the show and the theatre reaped a large portion of the goodwill feeling evident in the audience.

Q The seventh annual Easter egg hunt of Rochester, N. Y., was held Saturday at Genesee Valley Park. The reason this is of interest to Round Tablers stems from the fact that the chairman of the egg coloring committee was Lester Pollock, manager of Loew's theatre in the city made famous by Eastman Kodak. The hunt is sponsored by the Uncle Dan's Birthday Club of the Democrat and Chronicle, which meant a wealth of goodwill publicity for Pollock and the theatre. It is of interest to note, too, that Pollock managed to have the prizes distributed from the theatre. Smart showmanship!

Q Clothes rationing is still enforced in England and it is not a very liberal ration. The HERALD's London office reports that when the opportunity came along of obtaining some uniforms off the ration the Gaumont British Picture Corporation wasted no time in ordering for their theatres.

The uniforms were government surplus stock and originally belonged to the Auxiliary Territorial Service (Woman's branch of the Army). They needed a few adjustments—dyeing of dark blue with the addition of gold braid.

Ralph Phillips, manager of the New Cross Cinema, New Cross, London, hearing of this deal, jumped in and ordered uniforms for his usherettes with the result he now has a smartly-outfitted staff until such time as he can return to pre-war materials.

Q Louis Nye, manager of the Hoosier theatre, Whiting, Ind., just recently acclaimed by the Manta and Rose circuit for accumulating the most Quigley Awards mentions among their showmen, has had considerable success with a Friday Date Night promotion.

The weekly event was started two months ago as an experiment. Each couple attending the theatre Friday night, whether young or old, receives a numbered coupon. The stub is left in a box in the lobby for a drawing on stage. The winning couple is escorted to the stage where the girl is presented with an orchid corsage and has a photo-portrait taken. The photo is kept on display all week in the lobby.

The promotion is no longer in the experimental stage. For showmen Nye reported this week: "Still doing excellent business Friday Nights."

DISTINCTIVE FRONTS

BROADWAY strollers were attracted to this striking display at the Rialto, New York. George Hoffman, theatre advertising director, designed it.

LIGHTS from the sides and above shine on these "Notorious" panels at the entrance of the Lorensbergs theatre in Gothenburg, Sweden. The house is managed by Evert Lofgren.

ARCHED ARABIAN portal effect at the Capitolio theatre, Panama City, Panama, focused attention on manager M. Llagunes' opening of "A Thousand and One Nights".

ACROSS THE SEAS, in England, manager A. W. Arkell erected this front-of-the-house display for "Night and Day" at the Regal Cinema, Kingston, Surrey. The clock in the center of the lower display is set to the time of day the theatre opens.

WIDE ATTENTION was accorded manager Ross McCausland's display, right, for "Specter of the Rose" at the Telenews theatre, Dallas, Tex.

MANAGER Elmer Adams, Jr., specializes in flashy frontal layouts like the one for "California", left, at the Bison theatre, Shawnee, Okla.

SORKIN AND BROWN WIN FIRST QUARTER AWARDS

Sol Sorkin, manager of RKO's Keith theatre, Washington, D. C., was the unanimous choice of the Judges' Committee for top showmanship honors and the Silver Desk Plaque in the First Quarter Quigley Awards Competition.

The panel of Judges had high praise for the excellence of the campaigns submitted by all the competing showmen as well as for their consistency of effort displayed in the first three months of 1947.

In 1932, he left his post at the Mayfair, New York, as first assistant and treasurer, to become assistant manager and treasurer of Keith's in Washington. He was appointed manager some three years ago.

Mr. Brown is a showman who believes in the personal touch, being a familiar figure to most patrons of the Cardiff Empire. He formerly managed theatres in Birkenhead and Dudley. Mr. Brown was awarded a prize of £75 in connection with his exploitation of "Henry V" and won the third prize of £50 in the Gaumont British Showmanship Challenge Shield for 1946.

Included in the list of Scroll of Honor recipients are Nate Wise, Bronze Grand Awards Plaque winner in last year's Competition; P. E. McCoy, winner of the Silver Grand Awards Plaque for 1945, and Robert A. Hynes, winner of the Silver Desk Plaque for the third quarter of 1946.

The Selling Approach

ON NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects pressbooks now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiters on selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER (RKO Radio): Loretta Young, Joseph Cotten and Ethel Barrymore star in this romantic comedy-drama, set against the background of an exciting Congressional election.

What type of clothes should a woman in politics wear? Start a discussion among women as to the proper attire. Offer a prize to the woman who can, in writing, suggest the dresses for Miss Young to wear as she follows her political career. You might elaborate on this by having the contestants submit dress designs for stump speaking, for awaiting the returns and for attending a session of Congress. This contest could be tied-in with a leading department store and sponsored by the local newspaper.

A novel way to herald the opening of the picture would be to stage an old-fashioned square dance, in the lobby, on the stage, on the street in front of the theatre or at a dance hall. The female dancers should appear in farmerette costume and the men in overalls. Prizes could be awarded for costumes and for dancing.

Stage a milking contest in association with the local dairymen's group. In a prominent location, erect a platform on which are mounted stanchions for six cows. Arrange for six farmers' daughters to enter the competition to find out which one is the best milker. Have radio coverage with a master of ceremonies broadcasting the stunt.

For a novelty street promotion, have a girl in overalls drive a light farm tractor about town. It may be possible to tie-in with a local implement dealer to provide the tractor.

Bride and Groom Display Aids "Perfect Marriage"

A novel lobby display designed by manager Andrew Shay attracted considerable attention to the playdate of "The Perfect Marriage" at Raybond's Strand theatre, Astoria, N. Y. The display consisted of a bride and groom painted on a seven-foot board with openings in the faces. Copy read: "For 'The Perfect Marriage' bring your camera and take your sweetheart's picture."

Sets Page Co-Op Display Ad

A full page cooperative newspaper display ad was promoted by manager George C. Rice to exploit his engagement of "Margie" at the Majestic theatre, La Salle, Ill. The cooperative ad was paid for by 11 local merchants.

FRAMED (Columbia): This Glenn Ford picture tells the story of a double-fisted guy and a double-crossing girl. Every teen-ager knows that Ford was elected the "Bobby-Soxers' Man of the Year" in 1946. Have bobby-soxers sign a large scroll, demanding Ford's reelection in 1947. Or, run an actual election to answer the question: "Is Glenn Ford the Bobby-Soxers' Man of the Year?" Ask youngsters to fill in ballots bearing the names of teen-age favorites, headed by Ford.

Janis Carter plays a waitress in the picture. Arrange a contest to find the most popular waitress in town. Sell a department store the idea of sponsoring the promotion, and to furnish the winner a complete new outfit. Arrange with the local newspaper to print election stories, pictures of the contestants and to print ballots for the election.

"Framed" provides a natural tie-in title for camera supply shops, art stores, glass and leather goods shops which specialize in picture frames and framing of photographs and prints. Use a liberal assortment of stills from the picture in all windows, accompanied by a credit card.

The Hosiery Designers of America recently chose Janis Carter as the "finest stocking-filler" for 1947. Have an organization of high school or college students stage a beautiful legs contest with a Janis Carter Trophy as a prize. The winning contestant should have leg measurements similar to those of Miss Carter.

Book stores, rental and public libraries should be interested in the promotional value of the film's title with window and counter displays of mystery novels.

Arranges Music Academy Tieup

The cooperation of the Brooklyn Academy of Music was promoted for the engagement of "Humoresque" at the Strand theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. The Academy mailed several thousand cards to its subscribers stressing the musical background of the picture. The campaign was arranged by manager William McLoughlin and Ted Trust, publicity director for the theatre.

Promotes Radio Song Contest

A song contest was promoted by manager Birk Binnard for the playdate of "Humoresque" at the Warner theatre, Reading, Pa. The contest was conducted over a local radio broadcast. In addition, 10 radio spot announcements a day for three days were promoted. Window tieups were arranged with Zeswitz Music House and with book stores.

Wabbe Promotes Extensive Press For Kaye Visit

Extensive newspaper coverage highlighted the campaign arranged by RKO publicist Helen Wabbe for the personal appearance of Danny Kaye at the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, Cal.

The star arrived the day before opening and was met at the station by reporters and photographers. A luncheon was arranged, attended by the four drama editors and Kevin Wallace, columnist. As a result an interview story was garnered in each of the four local newspapers in addition to a mention in Wallace's Examiner column.

Journalist students from the Bay area high schools, numbering about 60, attended a mass interview with Kaye, thus insuring complete coverage of the students of high school age.

Through a tieup with the Calling All Girls Club of Hale Brothers Department Store, the theatre secured autographs of 100 record albums which the store advertised in their record department and by a cooperative newspaper ad. Sherman & Clay Company also ran a co-op ad on Danny Kaye albums.

Sweepstake Tickets Used For "Talks to Horses"

A young lady dressed in a jockey outfit distributed 5,000 numbered sweepstake-type tickets to promote "My Brother Talks to Horses" at the New Warner theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. An "A" board in front of the theatre carried a list of lucky numbers which entitled persons holding lucky number tickets to two pairs of guest tickets. Manager Jim Barnes arranged the campaign.

Dart Game Boosts "Mr. Ace"

The old dart game was used by manager Reg Streeter to exploit "Mr. Ace" at Warners Mission theatre, Santa Barbara, Cal. An ace of spades blown up with a target center was placed in the lobby. A card read: "Are you 'Mr. Ace'? Hit the red dot on the card and be our guest to see, etc."

Dairy and Radio Tieup Exploits Saturday Shows

A three-way tieup arranged by manager P. E. McCoy among the theatre, a local dairy and radio station has insured a thorough coverage for the "Children's Library Films" shown at the Miller theatre, Augusta, Ga.

Each Saturday morning Sancken's Dairy and radio station WGAC sponsor a local talent revue on the stage of the Miller in conjunction with the film feature. The dairy sends out coming announcements each week by way of their deliverymen and also runs a two-column by six-inch cooperative ad in the morning and evening newspapers each Friday.

A representative from the dairy calls on the heads of the rural and city schools each month relative to prospective talent and on each occasion gives the school heads a complete lineup of children's feature attractions for the month. WGAC contributes daily spot announcements on the Saturday shows.

Promotes Giveaways for Saturday Morning Shows

Manager Ted Davidson promoted cartoon books, popcorn, ice cream, bubble gum, etc., for his Saturday children's shows during the Nat Wolf 15th Anniversary Drive at the Sigma theatre, Lima, Ohio. Each Saturday 20 passes were hidden in the giveaway for that week. For his playdate of "The Beast With Five Fingers," Davidson had a high school girl carry a large cutout of a hand through the streets. A similar cutout was displayed in a store window.

Quiz Test Used In Macon, Ga.

A quiz contest was started two weeks in advance to exploit the playdate of "Three Little Girls in Blue" at the Rialto theatre, Macon, Ga. Contest rules were printed on stock heralds and distributed at the box offices of five Georgia Theatre Company houses in Macon and at a cooperating music store. Record albums of songs from the picture, as well as theatre tickets, were given as prizes. Six spot announcements were used daily on the store's radio program. Fluorescent colored satin sashes were added to ushers' uniforms two weeks in advance and fluorescent pennants were hung in front of the theatre candy counter. The campaign was arranged by manager Harold Norris and Holt Gewinner, Jr., publicity director in Macon for the Georgia Theatre Company.

Covers City, Rural Areas For Stage Appearance

Manager Lurty C. Taylor sent out 2,500 post cards to boxholders in rural areas, planted a story in the local newspaper and used radio spot announcements to publicize the personal appearance of Eddie Dean, western star, at the Elkton theatre, Elkton, Va. Special matinees were arranged for primary and grammar school students. A full page cooperative newspaper ad was promoted for the show. In addition window tieups and heralds helped to exploit the personal appearance.

Designs Attractive Lobby Display for "The Girl"

Cashing in on the popularity of the song hit "Gal in Calico" from the picture "The Time, the Place and the Girl," assistant manager Herb Sumbly fashioned an eye-catching lobby display for the playdate of the picture at Century's Grove theatre, Freeport, N. Y. The display consisted of a store dummy in a calico dress, a phonograph which played all the hit songs from the picture and a sign, reading: "I'm that 'Gal in Calico' you'll hear so much about in, etc."

Designs Attractive Front

An attractive false front was designed by manager Theresa Mehalovitz to exploit her playdate of "Song of the South" at the Chief theatre, Pueblo, Colo.

Tieup in Dallas Draws Attention To "California"

Through a tieup with a leading department store, an elaborate program of California-inspired fashion events, style and merchandise displays were arranged for the opening of "California" at the Majestic theatre, Dallas, Tex. The tieup was arranged by manager F. Thompson and Paramount exploiteer Jeraldine Cooper.

The A. Harris and Company store started off the three-day exposition by devoting all of their 18 windows to a display entitled "California-Texas Round-Up." Style revues put on by the store dramatized the fashion alliance between the two states due to the similarity of climate and mode of life.

Added prestige was given the promotion by the presence of 16 well-known designers and manufacturers of men's and women's wearing apparel in the California tradition. They were guests of the store and were entertained at a round of social functions. The playdate of the picture was publicized at all functions.

National Savings Tieup Aids "Expectations"

Through a tieup with the assistant commissioner for National Savings, Manager E. F. Johnson obtained 3,000 throwaways to publicize his engagement of "Great Expectations" at the St. George's Hall, York, England. The Savings Committee distributed the leaflets in three local factories, Rowntrees Chocolates, Terrys Chocolates and British Gansolite, Ltd. Copy on the throwaways read: "May your 'Great Expectations' for 1947 all be fulfilled. Save for your holidays by consulting your local savings group. See, etc." Several window tieups also were arranged.

Merchant Tieup Exploits Playdate of "Music"

A profitable tieup with a local music store was promoted by publicist W. D. Hendley to exploit "Make Mine Music" at the Bradley theatre, Columbus, Ga. The store set up a large banner inside five days in advance, used a window display and loaned a record-player for use in the lobby of the theatre. The record-player was operated by an usher dressed in a baseball uniform made up to impersonate "Casey at the Bat." The stunt attracted considerable attention.

Perry Promotes Store Tieup

Through a tieup with the Julian Goldman Store, manager Fred Perry was furnished 5,000 heralds plus envelopes and stamps to exploit "The Razor's Edge" at the Strand theatre, Cumberland, Md. The store also used a full window display and spot announcements over WTBO to publicize the playdate.

Kleper Promotes Education Tieup For "Attorney"

A tieup with the Audio Visual Department of the New Haven Board of Education for the formation of a Junior District Attorney Club was arranged by manager Sid Kleper to publicize "Mr. District Attorney" at the Poli-College theatre, New Haven, Conn. Branches of the club were formed in the four junior high schools in the city.

The approximately 6,000 members were personally enrolled by Leonie Brandon, director of Visual Education in New Haven. Identification membership cards were distributed. The purpose of the club is to stress better citizenship and help combat juvenile delinquency.

One hundred wanted posters were distributed throughout the metropolitan area. Novelty "For Women Only" heralds were distributed through hosiery, shoe, book and notions counters. Five thousand hosiery and shoe bags were imprinted. Window displays were arranged with Kresge, Eddie Rahm, Woolworth, Crown Barber Shop and Conn. Oil Company.

Giveaways and Matinees Arranged for Drive

Manager James Salmans has arranged a bicycle giveaway promotion and weekly good housekeeping matinees as a part of his campaign for the Nat Wolf Anniversary Drive at the Sixth St. theatre, Coshocton, Ohio. Four bicycles were promoted from Mote's Dairy. Five milk bottle caps entitle kids to a chance on a bike, one of which is given away each Saturday. At the housekeeping matinees, women have the opportunity to present ideas that will help ease their neighbors' household work and are eligible for a gift. They are being held on four Thursdays.

Sanders Uses Sound Truck

A sound truck was used by manager James Sanders to publicize the personal appearance of Jimmy Wakely, singing cowboy, at the Fain theatre, Leesburg, Fla. Mailing list envelopes were imprinted two weeks in advance. 500 autographed photos of Wakely were distributed. Sanders arranged for the star to visit a crippled children's home in a nearby town.

Employees Contest Sells "Old Days" for Waggoner

A ticket selling contest among the theatre employees drew a wealth of attention to manager Ted E. Waggoner's playdate of "The Good Old Days" at the Rose theatre, Tahoka, Texas. Nearly every person living in Tahoka was contacted. Cash prizes were awarded to the two employees selling the largest number of tickets. The campaign was started two months in advance with the result that a new house record was set. In addition to the contest, Waggoner sent letters to rural box holders and other patrons, used 2,000 eye-catching heralds, erected a special "carnival" front and promoted considerable space in the local newspaper.

Sets Tieup With City Body To Promote "Lassie"

Through a tieup with the Junior Chamber of Commerce, manager Herb Thacher promoted a "Courage of Lassie" award to exploit the playdate of the picture at the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, Pa. The tieup resulted in unprecedented newspaper coverage in Lancaster for a picture. The mayor made the presentation of the award from the stage with members of the Chamber of Commerce participating. The ceremonies were broadcast over a local radio station. The award was given for a "humanitarian deed well done."

Sets "Jolson" Window Tieup

An eye-arresting window display was promoted by manager Lee R. Cole, Jr., to publicize his playdate of "The Jolson Story" at the New theatre, Rockaway Beach, N. Y. The display, planted two weeks in advance in a local music shop, consisted of a background of red velvet on beaver board, black lettering on yellow cards, music notes and stills from the picture. It was illuminated at night.

Writing Contest Aids "Pilgrim" In New Jersey

A letter writing contest with merchant sponsorship was promoted by manager A. Heck to exploit his playdate of "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" at Reade's Lyric theatre, Asbury Park, N. J. The tieup was arranged with Fredericks Typewriter Store.

Five thousand circulars were distributed in the theatre, schools, offices and in the cooperating merchant's store. A 40x60 was used in the theatre lobby. Participants were asked to write a letter of approximately 100 words on "How a typewriter helps me in school or business." The winner received a new Remington Rand portable typewriter.

Window tieups were arranged with the following music stores: Tusting's, Fried-Niesen, Tommy Tuckers, Avon Gift Shop and Alex Estelle. Twenty-five taxis were sniped with bumper strips. Approximately 50 juke boxes were sniped with playdate copy.

That's My Man

Republic—Racing and Romance

In this, his second for Republic, producer-director Frank Borzage has taken a familiar story of horse racing, added a few new twists and emerged with a picture that will not only entertain but will carry the audience from laughter to tears, from excitement and suspense to sympathy with the frailties of human nature.

In addition it has the exploitation names of Don Ameche and Catherine McLeod, who was starred in Mr. Borzage's first Republic production, "I've Always Loved You," while supporting roles are capably handled by such veterans as Roscoe Karns, Joe Frisco, John Ridgley, Frankie Darro and others.

"That's My Man" is the story of a man who rises from an inconspicuous beginning to attain the pinnacle of turf success. En route he acquires a wife for whom he provided all that money can buy. However, his love for gambling breaks up their marriage until their horse comes out of retirement to win his final race, reuniting the couple.

With this as the story plot the picture for the most part maintains a rapid-fire pace. However, there is an occasional slowing in the plot's development which will make the audience aware of its 104-minute running time.

The story was written by Steve Fisher and Bradley King. Lew Borzage was the associate producer of the picture, which was skillfully photographed by Tony Gaudio.

PRC—Detective Shayne

Hugh Beaumont and Cheryl Walker appear in their usual roles of Michael Shayne, detective, and his secretary, Phillis, in another of PRC's new series of detective dramas. This particular one rates higher in interest and entertainment value than its predecessors, and is a credit to producer Sigmund Neufeld and to director Sam Newfield.

A client calls at Shayne's office, and falls dead of a gunshot wound before he can explain his errand. Shayne, searching the body, finds one-third of a baggage check, and decides to keep it himself rather than turn it over to the police. His investigation involves him in kidnapping, murder, and the wiles of a beautiful blonde.

An exciting climactic sequence takes place in Los Angeles' Union Station, where Shayne, the cops and the crooks shoot it out in a thrilling free-for-all. Subsequently, Shayne explains to the satisfaction of the police and his associates the motive for the murder, and the identity of the murderer.

The screenplay is by Fred Myton, based on original characters and a story by Brett Halliday.

Jewels of Brandenburg

20th Century-Fox—Thieves at Work

With the city of Lisbon as the locale, "Jewels of Brandenburg" is a story of international thievery and the attempts of the United States Government to recover a chest of historic gems.

Produced by Sol. M. Wurtzel and directed by Eugene Ford, the narrative moves without any great pace, but since it is a story of international intrigue it should appeal to some audiences.

Richard Travis portrays the Government investigator sent to Lisbon to expose the thieves and recover the jewels. There he works his way into the confidence of the jewel ring and baits them into exposing the hiding place of the treasure, but only after he encounters the usual adventures. In supporting roles are Micheline Cheirel, Leonard Strong and Carol Thurston.

The picture is based on an original story by Irving Cummings, Jr., and Robert C. North and was adapted to the screen by Irving Elman, Mr. Cummings and Mr. North. Paul Wurtzel was associate producer.

Dark Delusion

MGM—Dr. Gillespie Drama

James Craig, as an ambitious young doctor, has a mighty time of it overcoming attempts to have a girl committed to an institution, but his tasks are not altogether unpleasant since the girl, Lucille Bremer, is beautiful and interesting. The latest in the Dr. Gillespie series ventures into the domains of psycho-therapy and again presents Lionel Barrymore in his accustomed role as the genial old rascal of the medical profession.

Willis Goldbeck's direction from an original screenplay by Jack Andrews and Harry Ruskin has comic sequences balancing the film's narrative development, making it generally reliable entertainment.

When Craig goes to a small town to replace the vacationing local doctor, he is urged to sign commitment papers for an allegedly insane girl, but convinced the girl's psychic trauma warrants no such drastic action, he proceeds on a curative program of his own. Involved are threats and opposition, resulting in hide-and-seek adventures. By administering a "truth serum", the doctor learns the girl was injured in a fall, and because of fear, concealed the fact.

An operation results in the removal of the brain clot and the disappearance of the symptoms of mental illness, with all ending happily as the doctor becomes the town's permanent physician. Carey Wilson produced.

Violence

Monogram—Melodrama

The latest offering from the producer team of Jack Bernhard and Bernard Brandt fails to live up to its title, and to the idea presented in the opening sequences. Bernhard's direction is sluggish, the principals—Nancy Coleman in particular—give inept performances, and the screen play by Stanley Rubin and Louis Lantz tends to be wordy.

Emory Parnell, in the role of a small-time Hitler, establishes an organization known as United Defenders, whose concealed objective is to mulct the veterans it promises to serve. A couple of strong-arm men, portrayed by Sheldon Leonard and Peter Whitney, do the dirty work—including murder—for Parnell.

The latter's secretary, meanwhile, is doing some sleuthing on her own. She is actually a reporter from a national magazine, assigned to expose United Defenders. The plan miscarries when she loses her memory, but the U. S. Government, fortunately, has also assigned an agent to the task, and through his efforts justice triumphs in the nick of time.

Shoot to Kill

Screen Guild—When Thieves Fall Out

Eight members of a cast of 16 are killed in the course of this run-of-the-mill melodrama. One of those left alive to tell the tale of Edwin Westrate's screenplay is the heroine, as unprincipled and unfeeling a girl as ever connived with crooks and committed bigamy. Married to a convict, she weds—bigamously—a crooked district attorney in order to obtain evidence favoring her first husband and blackening her second. Her mission is accomplished successfully, but at that point her first husband comes back to punch her in the jaw, and she changes her mind about him.

Fortunately for the fickle lass, both husbands are killed in an automobile accident, leaving her free to wed a newspaperman, the only likeable character in the lot, and worthy of a better fate.

Those left alive at the end of the picture include Russell Wade and Susan Walters. Among the dead are numbered Edmund MacDonald, Douglas Blackley, Vince Barnett and Nester Paiva.

The motivation remains obscure throughout, and producer William Berke's direction does little to untangle the twisted skeins of the story.

Yankee Fakir

Republic—Border Brigandry

W. Lee Wilder presents here an attraction difficult to classify. It has a typical Western locale—a small border town—and a typical Western plot—the one about the smuggling ring backed by the town banker—and yet it isn't a Western. For billing purposes, it offers the names of Douglas Fowley and Joan Woodbury, but Clem Bevans steals the picture. It's an action drama, and yet singularly slow-paced for such entertainment.

Fowley, in the role of an itinerant peddler of cheap merchandise, arrives in Mystic, Arizona, and there meets Miss Woodbury, who runs the local boarding-house. When her father, a border patrolman, is found dead, Fowley suspects foul play. To get him out of the way, the town banker has him jailed on a charge of selling liquor without a license. Fowley then produces a phony uncle, a purported millionaire. It is in this latter role that Bevans walks away with the picture.

The uncle offers a reward of $50,000 for the exposure of the worst citizen in Mystic, hoping thereby that some informant will turn the killer in. The plan misfires, but at the crucial moment the dead man's son stumbles upon a damning shred of evidence, and the banker is forced to confess.

Wilder's direction is too leisurely to take full advantage of the possibilities of Richard Conway's screenplay, based on a story by Min-dret Lord.

Bel Ami

Casino Film Exchange Comedy-Drama

Adapted from Guy de Maupassant's novel of the same title, this pre-war, German-made film proves that, whenever no propaganda was in-involved, the Germans were able to turn out really good pictures. "Bel Ami" is well-acted, amusingly treated and has some good tunes.

The cast contains many names of pre-war German fame. Willi Forst is featured both as star and director. Others, who will probably be remembered by German-speaking audiences in this country, are Olga Tschechnowa, Ilse Werner, Hilde Hildebrandt and Lizzi Waldmueller. The film was made in 1937. Charges have been made that it is anti-French. In the opinion of this reviewer, this is not the case. The story faithfully follows Maupassant's novel and no effort is made to emphasize the negative approach. English subtitles are adequate.

The story tells of a French journalist, played by Forst, who, following his return to Paris from Morocco at the turn of the century, is nicknamed "Bel Ami" by a cafe singer who has become famous through her rendition of a song by the same title. Forst, who is something of a Don Juan, participates in many intrigues, finally becomes editor-in-chief of a large Paris newspaper. In the end he exposes the Colonial Minister, marries his daughter, and becomes head of the colonial department himself.

Ivan the Terrible

Artkino—Historical Drama

This is the first of a series of two films depicting the life and activities of Ivan IV, better known as Ivan the Terrible, who lived from 1530 to 1584 and who mercilessly crushed his enemies in his attempt to unify and expand Russia. The costume picture, written and directed by Sergei Eisenstein with music by Sergei Prokofieff, is grandiose in its presentation of the pomp and ceremony of the period, but American audiences will find it slow, talkative and, in parts, badly overacted.

As an historical document, while undoubtedly correct in telling the over-all story, it should be taken with a grain of salt. The life of Ivan the Terrible happens to lend itself beautifully to an emphasis on some of the ideological aspects currently stressed by the Russian leaders and every care is taken that the Czar's dream of a unified Russia, his reliance on the "common" people and his expansionist plans are properly highlighted. Eisenstein's direction shows up in many clever touches and Prokofieff's music makes for prestige despite a poor sound-recording job.

When this film was finished there were some objections in Russia against its treatment and as a result production of the second part was postponed. Latest word is, however, that it now has gone before the cameras. Part one boasts some beautiful photography, but seems overlong. English subtitles are better than average.

Artist . . . with light and shadow

● To hold the drama which darkness gave this scene, yet not sacrifice identity and clarity of action . . . this was the problem on which the picture's director and the director of photography worked hard—and successfully.

To this same end the timer also worked—successfully. By his skilled selection of printing light, his judgment of light and shadow, he faithfully interpreted the director's aim . . . made certain that the visual result would be vivid, dramatic, convincing.

To get the most from his ability, the timer must work with film of assured uniformity . . . one of the many qualities which make the family of Eastman motion picture films so useful to the industry.

TAXES, TAXES, TAXES

THE tax outlook for the motion picture theatre gets no better, fast. Unless a vigorous movement in defense of the screen develops and proceeds to victory—accompanied, perhaps, by a touch of miracle—there are to be more and bigger taxes all over the map.

As all the governments, from the little town taxing districts up through and to Washington, engage in both extending and expanding social and political enterprises, the demand for money from the public grows and grows. The motion picture audience is conspicuously an opportunity.

And always somebody is pushing the movement. An especially gratuitous manifestation was had last week in New York when The Times headlined an amusement page piece by Mr. Sam Zolotow "Rialto Tips Mayor to Revenue Boost". It said: "... A prominent showman, who prefers to remain anonymous, volunteers the suggestion: Increase the annual license fee for picture houses from $200 to $500, the sum paid by the so-called legitimate theatres. . . ."

The Rialto, you will note, is anonymous. However, we'll bet that "prominent showman" did not say "so-called legitimate", even if it is. Anyway, he is no help. Further, the functioning and social import of New York City's seven hundred motion picture theatres are not comparable with the stage houses of the Rialto.

And the while consider again that, effective July 1, the State of New York has a law which empowers counties and cities to levy and collect taxes on admissions. That blanket authorization is not only invitation within this state; it is precedent and precept to the whole country.

Again, we observe that the marquee lights and the flow of admissions make the motion picture box office a shining mark for the hungry tax assessors. There is also that apparently inevitable and incurable impression so widely held that everywhere the films touch is a region flecked with gold and oozing money. Every big business has big figures, and the broader and deeper the service the bigger the figures are likely to be.

Sharp reference to the motion picture tax situation is made in last week's bulletin from the Allied States Association in the observation: "Whoever heard of Congress or any state legislature putting a special excise tax on newspapers, magazines or books? If that were attempted, the cry would immediately arise that the communication of intelligence was being burdened; that the freedom of the press was in danger. Yet it has become the fashion to bracket admission taxes with excises on whiskey, cigarettes and other whipping boys of the tax collector."

It is appropriate to recall here that pointed communication from Mr. Hugh G. Martin, circuit operator, in The Herald of December 21, 1946, urging that the exhibitor engage in making his patrons conscious of box office taxes, by a whole array of devices. He said: "As long as you make the tax easy to pay, the public will accept such taxation as fair, and forget about it."

Taxes have a way of hiding.

MR. CHAPLIN'S ADVENTURE

EXAMINATION of the assorted and not so variant judgments of the reviewers of "Monsieur Verdoux" indicates that Mr. Charles Chaplin has arrived on the screen with a second ambitious endeavour at a picture with a message. His first was "The Great Dictator" if one excepts "Modern Times" which partook mostly of reminiscence of his slapstick days.

In his press interviews preliminary to this New York premiere Mr. Chaplin has been quoted as considering that "things", meaning the world, "are in a mess"; also that Hollywood is falling "behind the times".

We have heard all that before, with embellishments, from internal and external critics who would tell the picture makers what to do.

With Mr. Chaplin one may have a bit more patience. He says pictures should be different and makes one—his script, his casting, his direction, his musical score—and at his own expense.

He is quoted as saying that there is great need for "experimenting". His picture is a two million dollar experiment.

BUYING COMFORT

A NEAT ACCENT on the importance of physical aspects of the theatre appears in this year's report on the annual questionnaire which Mr. Sidney L. Bernstein of the Grenada group in Britain presents to his patrons. The inquiry covers about fifty theatres in London and immediately adjacent regions.

Thirty-one percent of the customers responding said that their choice of theatres was conditioned or controlled by the quest of the maximum comfort.

One specialized plea, sixth in a list of recommended improvements, was a demand for "more leg space" in seats.

Twenty-one percent of the respondents said that, having decided to attend the cinema, they then shopped for what promised to be the best picture in the area.

COLOUR COMING UP

WHILE controversy still smolders among television interests over colour telecasting, and while colour on the screen continues to increase, there is a quietly pursued evolution of colour in the newspapers which only waits on presses and newsprint capacities.

The Newspaper Advertising Association has reported on an analysis of five million responses to 3,500 advertisements showing that the colour presentations brought 53 per cent higher responses than black and white.

The newspapers are intent on improving their competitive position against the radio and the ornate multi-coloured magazines. That will mean the flowering of new techniques in amusement advertising, too. For newspaper work it will mean copy prepared well in advance, and no last-minute cancellations or changes.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Your Best Years

WHEN SAMUEL GOLDWYN produced the Academy Award winner, "The Best Years of Our Lives," he turned into a good copy writer. The title of his film is fast becoming a national advertising slogan. Within three days Gimbel's in Milwaukee used eight full pages of newspaper advertising proclaiming that "Gimbel's accessories underscore the best years of our lives," "Gimbels say dress the part for the best years of 'your' lives," "Gimbels' famous liquors for the best years of 'your' lives" and et cetera. A children's dress house recently brought out a new line and, "but natch, these definitely are the best years of our lives." Sanger Brothers in Texas took newspaper space to proclaim that "the best years of our lives are those we spend outdoors in Texas" dressed in Sanger sun suits. In Cincinnati, Jenny's dress shop was advertising "the best sheers of our lives." In England, the Goldwyn title inspired the publication of a song of the same name and a few nights ago a radio gagster came out with "the best beers of our lives."

Challenge

IT'S GETTING to be fashionable to go under water these days. With this thought in mind, and with the challenge of the pen that writes under water undoubtedly ringing in its ears, the National Broadcasting Company last week arranged for a television broadcast from a submerged submarine in New York's Brooklyn Navy Yard. The vessel involved was the Navy's new submarine Trumpetfish. Television cameras inside the submerged craft fed the signal to a mobile unit on shore. From there, in turn, it was sent for relay to viewers in New York, Washington, Philadelphia and Schenectady. Point made: Television works under water too.

The Cure

"THERE is nothing wrong with television that a million sets in American homes couldn't cure tomorrow morning." This statement, made by Joseph B. Elliott, vice-president of RCA Victor, was the keynote of the Television Institute's two-day session at the Hotel Commodore this week. More than 250 radio, advertising, television and retail executives attended the meeting.

A total of 51 speakers addressed the seven panels, four seminars and two luncheons. They included Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, consulting engineer; J. R. Poppele, president of the Television Broadcasters Association; Paul Mowrey, national director of ABC television; Judy Dupuy, editor of "Televi-er," the magazine which sponsored the Institute; C. E. Hooper, president of C. E. Hooper, Inc.; Ralph Austrian, president, RKO television; David P. Lewis, director of television, Caples Company; Harvey Marlowe, executive producer, ABC television; Captain William C. Eddy of WBKB, Chicago, and others.

Among the statistics quoted at the meeting were figures showing that today there are 11 television stations operating in the principal cities of the U. S., with 49 construction permits in 22 states already granted. The average viewing audience of today is approximately 3,000,000 and it is hoped that 500,000 homes will be wired for television by the time of the Presidential election in 1948. Sets manufactured by RCA, Du Mont, Telicon and United States Television Corporation were on display.

How'd It End?

WHAT HAPPENED to the girl at the end? That's what's worrying a group of newsmen who were aboard a United Air Lines Mainliner when the plane recently set a new coast-to-coast record of six hours, 47 minutes, 13 seconds. One of the features of the flight was a special preview of United Artists' "The Other Love," starring Barbara Stanwyck and David Niven. But the plane flew so fast over the last leg of its journey that there was time to show only one reel of the feature.

Research Boom

TO HANDLE what it describes as a greatly increased number of requests for motion picture research surveys, Market Research Service has formed a subsidiary, Film Research Surveys, to take care of that part of its activities. Both companies are headed by George Fine. The new company will undertake any kind of survey from title and story testing to measuring the extent of publicity penetration. Field representatives in all areas abroad, except those under Russian domination, will provide international coverage.

Stage Struck

FIVE SCREEN STARS under contract to David O. Selznick have established a summer theatre company to give themselves a chance to do some in-the-flesh acting, some managing and producing. The players include Joseph Cotten, Mel Ferrer, Jennifer Jones, Dorothy McGuire and Gregory Peck. The company has engaged a playhouse at La Jolla, Calif., for a minimum of six weeks during July and August.

Rage from Heaven

THE TORNADO which blew through Woodward, Okla., recently ripped the marquee from the Terry theatre. The marquee was advertising "Rage in Heaven."

International Films

THE ROLE of motion pictures in national bi-partisan foreign policy was praised Tuesday in Washington by Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association. Speaking to a large audience at the Washington Advertising Club in the Hotel Statler's Congressional Room, Mr. Johnston stated that "the motion picture is a vital element in the exchange of information so that peoples everywhere can understand each other better." Hollywood's pictures, he believes, should be free from propaganda since "the best propaganda is no propaganda at all. The best way to show American life is to show it as it actually is." Then, taking the bit between his teeth, he announced: "The only way to peace is better understanding among nations through the exchange of information among them." That can be done by motion pictures—a "mass medium of communication." The motion picture industry, he asserted, must feel its responsibility internationally as well as nationally. Representatives from most Washington picture company offices and key theatremen were on the dais with Mr. Johnston.

Anxious

WANT TO KNOW how popular American features are in Rumania? Well, early last week Paramount's "Reap the Wild Wind" was to open at the Eforia theatre, Bucharest, at 9 o'clock in the morning. By 7 a. m. the customers began to assemble. At 8 o'clock the crowd had spread out into the street, blocking traffic. Police were summoned. The impatient fans broke through the cordon of police, smashed windows and unhinged the exterior lobby doors of the theatre and forcefully demonstrated their interest. According to Nicholas Cazazis, Motion Picture Export Association manager for the country, since American features have been brought back to Rumania there has been so much physical damage done to theatres by overflow crowds that Bucharest civic authorities have enacted an ordinance forbidding exhibitors to sell more tickets than house seating capacity.

Picture Library

ATLANTA'S new $1,700,000 library, for which the city voted funds last summer, may include a Department of Motion Pictures if Aubrey Milam, president of the Carnegie Library board of trustees has his way. Mr. Milam would like to have a film library including historical data on the development of the industry, scenes from early films, models of productions, lots, cameras and projection equipment and similar displays. Said Mr. Milam Monday in Atlanta: "I think the application of motion photography in teaching has only begun and a Department of Motion Pictures would be something unique in libraries in the south and maybe in the country."

Eisenstein Interview

PHONE STRIKE or no, Boston newspapermen interviewed Serge Eisenstein, director of "Ivan the Terrible," in Moscow last Monday via the long distance lines. George Kraska, who opened "Ivan" in his Kenmore theatre, Boston, Wednesday, arranged the interview. The second installment of "Ivan" is underway, reported Eisenstein, and will be completed in September. It will have many sequences in color. The Russian director felt that his picture should be popular in America because it has as its theme the problem of unification of a country, a problem which America once had. He wanted to be assured that he would be welcomed in America because he hoped to visit here again. At the American Embassy he had seen, he reported, "It's a Wonderful Life," which he liked for its fine human touches, and "The Kid from Brooklyn," which he considered very amusing.

Emergency

HOW to reach the public was the urgent problem for theatremen advertising their wares in St. Louis this week. They couldn't use the newspapers, which were struck; the telephones, also struck; and even the leading radio station, KXOK, the ABC network cable of which had been severed. The Loew and Fanchon and Marco circuits immediately concentrated on smaller radio stations, using increased "spot plugs."

No Tippling

NO LIQUOR for Shakespeare. Last week the Shakespeare Memorial theatre in Stratford-on-Avon applied for a liquor license and was turned down. E. G. Beresford, attorney representing liquor-licensed hotels in the area, said, according to the Associated Press, "what is sought here is to finance production of the drama through pub keeping." Canon Noel Prentice, Vicar of Stratford, thought that if the license were granted, "people who have venerated the theatre as a temple of art fear that it might become a temple of Bacchus."

[Motion Picture Herald Graph]

The above graph is based on computations by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics for the period beginning January 1, 1941, through December, 1946.

U. S. FIGURES SHOW SCREEN IS NATION'S BEST VALUE

Despite the continually increasing scale of wages, climbing retail prices and the generally higher cost of living throughout the country, theatre admission prices relatively have maintained the level of early 1941. This is revealed in a survey of 34 key cities conducted by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The admission price index increases are due largely to the greater Federal taxes placed on amusements.

Price and Wage Rise Not Matched by Admissions

A comparison of indexes of salaries and wages and retail prices with those of motion picture admission prices from January, 1941, to December, 1946, shows that the admission price index, including adult and child admissions, has increased only modestly on a comparative basis. Salaries and wages during this period were increased from an index of 130.0 to 258.4, an increase of 98.8 per cent; retail prices jumped from 101.9 to 172.7, or 69.4 per cent, while admission prices rose only 50 per cent from 109.1 to 163.7, or from 19.4 per cent to 48.8 per cent less than the comparative indexes.

In computing the above increases the Bureau uses "100" as the base index figure for the 1935 through 1939 period.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington computes the "consumer price index" from the composite measure of prices charged for clothing, food, house furnishings, rent, fuel, electricity and ice. In addition, selected miscellaneous commodities and service are indexed by the Bureau including admission prices charged by theatres. This index includes Federal, state and local admission taxes and general sales taxes.

The admission price index is collected and tabulated monthly from first, second and third run theatres located in downtown and neighborhood sections of the 34 representative cities throughout the country ranging in population from 62,107 to 7,454,995.

The cities, with the populations based on the 1940 Government census, used by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in compiling the admission price indexes are:

Atlanta with a population of 302,288; Baltimore, 859,100; Birmingham, 267,583; Boston, 770,816; Buffalo, 575,901; Chicago, 3,396,808; Cincinnati, 455,610; Cleveland, 878,336; Denver, 322,412; Detroit, 1,623,452; Houston, 384,514; Indianapolis, 386,972; Jackson, 62,107; Kansas City Mo., 399,178; Los Angeles, 1,504,277; Manchester, N. H., 77,685; Milwaukee, 587,472; Minneapolis, 492,370; Mobile, 78,720; New Orleans, 494,537; New York, 7,454,995; Norfolk, 144,332; Philadelphia, 1,931,334; Pittsburgh, 671,659; Portland, Me., 73,643; Portland, Ore., 305,394; Richmond, 193,042; St. Louis 816,048; San Francisco, 634,536; Savannah, 95,996; Scranton, 140,404; Seattle, 368,302, and Washington, D. C., 663,091.

During 1946 alone the motion picture theatre admission price index was considerably less than comparative indexes. In this year's period salaries and wages increased 9.4 per cent; retail prices showed the greatest gain by climbing 20.7 per cent, while admission prices increased only 6.6 per cent. These 1946 increases are included in the tabulation of the 1941-46 indexes and in the graph above.

Adult Admission Prices Increased 49.2 Per Cent

A further examination of the admission price index reveals that prices for adults increased 49.2 per cent—from an index of 109.9 to 164.0—from January, 1941, through December, 1946, while children's admission prices for the same period increased 52.9 per cent from 105.4 to 161.2.

In the year 1946 adult admissions increased 6.8 per cent, with the index rising from 153.5 to 164.0, while the children's admission price for that year rose from 154.3 to 161.2 or 4.5 per cent.

The adult index is determined from admission prices charged at evening performances, Monday through Saturday, with the admission scales for Sunday and holiday showings omitted. Since July, 1944, the children's index has been computed from the Saturday matinee prices. Prior to that time computations corresponded with the procedure used in determining the adult index.

While the admission price index for the 1941-46 period indicates that motion picture audiences were required to pay continually increasing admission prices, an appraisal of the Bureau's figures reveals that admission price jumps came with, or soon after, heavier Federal admission taxes were imposed.

Increased Amusement Taxes Brought Rise in Admissions

As shown in the graph admission prices remained steady from January, 1941, until October of that year when the Federal tax was increased from one cent on each 10 cents or fraction thereof where admissions were 21 cents or more, to a straight one cent tax on each 10 cent admission. Then, motion picture admission prices climbed only slightly until April 1, 1944, when the index jumped from 126.0 to 151.7 when the Federal Government imposed the current 20 per cent amusement tax on admissions, or a tax of one cent for each five cents, or major fraction thereof. In the case of children under 12 years of age where the admission price is under 10 cents, no tax is applicable.

A further examination of the Bureau's figures shows that salaries and wages made the greatest climb as the war progressed but slacked off in mid-1945 as industry was reconvertng to peace-time production. By the beginning of 1946 the wage and salary index again started to climb.

The index of retail prices showed only a gradual increase during the six-year period until the summer of 1946 when the Office of Price Administration lifted most of its price restrictions and the index immediately started to climb to pass through and well beyond the motion picture admission price index.

"Duel in the Sun" To Open In 300 Cities in May

David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun" will open the week of May 7 in 300 or more cities, Milton Kusell, Selznick Releasing Organization sales manager, said in New York this week. In the New York area, 37 Loew theatres, headed by the Capitol on Broadway, will play the picture simultaneously. The picture will be in the neighborhood houses, one week remain at the Capitol. In the Los Angeles and San Francisco area, the picture will open in 150 theatres.

Strike Has Little Industry Effect

The phone strike, which has tied up long-distance traffic across the nation since April 7, so far has had no appreciable effect on the New York home offices and exchanges, nor has it seriously interfered with circuit and studio operations.

Difficulties were overcome mainly through the use of wires, airmail letters, teletypes and messengers. Tie-lines in some cases permitted direct calls out of the New York area. Things were made easier also when out-of-town branches, such as Philadelphia, Cleveland, New Orleans and Washington, began to come through.

Wire expenses rose from three to four times, according to some estimates, but this was compensated by dwindling phone bills. Over-the-counter booking increased considerably.

The strike proved some inconvenience to Hollywood where, in some cases, it had a slowing effect on production. Here again the teletypes, installed by some companies as a means of keeping in touch with New York, came in handy.

Brandt Circuit Takes Mayfair from Loew's

The Brandt circuit, of New York, this week leased the Mayfair theatre, on Broadway at 47th Street, New York, from the Loew circuit. The theatre thus becomes "the 12th link in the Times Square theatre chain" of the Brandt circuit, Harry Brandt, its head, said.

Monsieur Chaplin Comes To Town with a Film— And Meets the Press

CHAPLIN the producer, Chaplin the actor, and Chaplin the social philosopher this week came to New York town to market his first picture since 1940. The picture, "Monsieur Verdoux," rather a melange of murder and "message," with Mr. Chaplin in the title role, got rather a panning, but an animated, interested audience reception. Chaplin the philosopher got a terrific and extensive press. It seemed possible that the philosophy included considerable showmanship. All of the United States, and foreign capitals, have been advised that there is a new and different Chaplin picture. That may have been the intent.

Charles Chaplin's decision to open at the Broadway theatre, April 11, was a sudden one, surprising even the publicity men of his releasing company, United Artists. But there was time enough for New York's columnists to tell the public that "Monsieur Verdoux," himself a murderer, claimed the inventors of the atom bomb were bigger criminals than he (an exaggeration) and that the Production Code Administration had refused the picture a seal (the number is 12225).

A Visit Well-Heralded On Communication Media

The day before the opening, Mr. Chaplin gave an interview to foreign newspapermen, duly carried by the domestic wire services. Last Friday, in company with Mary Pickford and his wife, Oona, he attended the premiere. Saturday morning he read the mixed and generally unfavorable reviews of his picture, for which no distribution plans have been set.

Monday, smiling and sure of himself, he was introduced to 100 New York newsmen at his second press conference, in the ornate ballroom annex of the Hotel Gotham. The conference, he explained, had been the idea of his company's publicity office.

All those newsmen present had had their credentials examined at the door before being permitted to enter. Paul Lazarus, Jr., UA director of advertising and publicity, explained to the newsmen that the interview was to be recorded by WNEW and broad-

THEY SAY . . .

Following is a sampling of the reviews given Charles Chaplin's "Monsieur Verdoux" in the New York press of April 12:

Times: "No light and gentle slapstick comedy . . . screamingly funny in spots and basically serious and bitter at the ironies of life. Those who go expecting to laugh may find themselves remaining to weep. . . . It is slow—tediously slow—in many stretches."

Herald Tribune: ". . . a woeful lack of humor, melodrama or dramatic taste. The hand of the screen master is apparent in very few sequences. . . . Chaplin is enmeshed in a world of his own personal confusion."

Daily Mirror: "Runs the gamut of satire, slapstick, drama and problem drama. . . . It is an uneven, but continuously interesting film."

Daily News: "Chaplin has attempted, with inconspicuous success, to mix sentiment, slapstick comedy and horror. . . . He has tried to make the business of wholesale killing a joke . . . but the joke, I'm afraid, is on him. . . ."

PM: "A moderate success leaning upon nostalgia and affection for the Chaplin legend. . . . Only he—a supreme and unfettered egotist—would proudly present it as a masterpiece. . . . His mind may be piffling, but his personality is magnificent."

cast later. It went on the air at 9 o'clock that evening.

From the first it was evident that the readers of Tuesday's newspapers were going to learn more of Chaplin's ideas on politics than his film activities. Why didn't you do thus and so during the war? asked the questioners. Why didn't you give some of the proceeds from your films shown in Europe to the underground movement? Why aren't you a U. S. citizen? Do you sympathize with Russia?

I am a citizen of the world, Mr. Chaplin explained. I do not believe in divisions of people. That leads to fascism. I am a member of no political party. The world today is filled with so many technicalities that you need a guide book to get along. If you step off the curb with your left foot they accuse you of being Communist.

At one point in the interview the questions turned into accusations, violently expressed. This moved one questioner to ask: What do you think of a country where, in the name of the Four Freedoms, an artist is asked to account for his beliefs, his citizenship, and is subjected to a pressure campaign on these matters that amounts to a form of public blackmail?

Kept His Temper Well During Interview

Mr. Chaplin, who had kept his temper during the hour-long interview, smiled and said: "Thank you very much."

Some were concerned over what had happened to Chaplin's familiar character of the tramp and he was asked why, since he was now offering messages, he was not as funny as he used to be.

"Funny?" smiled Mr. Chaplin. "That's a matter of opinion. I am an old man. I have just so many years more and things I want to say—well, call it the indulgence of an old man. There will be more stories of the tramp if I can think of an idea for him. I make what I want and I'm honest about it. People recognize this and like it."

No Picture Planned on Life of Napoleon

Then he was asked if he would develop his idea of producing a picture on the life of Napoleon.

"No," said Mr. Chaplin, "I won't. Napoleon was a dictator. I don't like dictators."

What do you think of Stalin? someone threw at him. "What's your definition of a dictator?" Mr. Chaplin countered.

The interview again veered into politics.

Tuesday, the New York Times headlined: "Not a Communist, Chaplin Declares." The Daily Mirror headlined: "Eisler's Brother Is My Friend, Chaplin Says." Right beside it was this headline: "Gerhart Eisler (accused of Communist activities) Again Indicted."

By midweek Chaplin and his picture were New York City's prime conversation pieces.

One of the things talked about: On Tuesday UA cut admission prices to the Broadway and withdrew the block of 250 reserved seats which it wanted to sell at from $1.80 to $2.40. Top admission was set at $1.50.

"Begin your butchery"

"What is a dictator?"

"I've never voted"

"I'm a world citizen"

"Next question, please"

ON THE MARCH Scully Calls for A Return to Old Ballyhoo Tempo

by RED KANN

WHILE visiting the Paramount studio, Adolph Zukor called for abandonment of "light, meaningless pictures" in favor of those which have "something to say," according to an interview in Motion Picture Daily. Other quotes:

"There is no room today for escapism in films. . . ."

"We are beyond the lush period of the war when anything stood up. . . ."

"Since motion pictures are the only source of escape for a hard-riden world from its daily drudge [a reference to greater emphasis contemplated for the foreign market] they bear a tremendous responsibility. Credibility is important."

This is worth analyzing.

Even those who constantly urge motion pictures should reflect more accurately and more intimately the times of which they are a part—count us in, please—hardly will agree with the respected chairman of Paramount's board. There is as much need for escapism today as there ever has been. The question is whether or not these unpredictable and uncertain days do not call for more.

Reasonable proponents of a more realistic and a harder-hitting screen have been misinterpreted seriously by those who do not share their viewpoint. No one—or, surely, no one who is a rational member of the industry—believes such standard story equipment as boy-meets-girl ought to be thrown overboard. It would be as ridiculous to strike for the elimination of musicals as it would be to strike for a mass-entertainment commodity in which political exhortation substitutes for Esther Williams doing one off the high-diving board.

Esther's O.K. That goes for Lana Turner, Rita Hayworth and a long list of other attractive damsels. So, too, for Jimmy Durante and, among others, for Bing and Bob, although Zukor feels Crosby and Hope hereafter must hew to consistency and characterization in order to maintain themselves as symbols of laughter.

If this industry is ever misguided enough to move out on its escapism formula for a straight line of attractions without benefit of its established, and even necessary, contribution to unadulterated make-believe, it will not long remain a major industry. But it likewise appears self-evident, in as huge an enterprise as this with living space for "South of the Chisholm Trail" and "Mourning Becomes Electra," that there is latitude enough for a portion of the product which looks boldly into the contemporary mirror and endeavors to report what it finds. Even that is not enough, however.

WHAT is found there must be embellished with the full embroidery of entertainment. For it is this which the producer asks the exhibitor to purchase. The ticket-buyer, paying for entertainment, wants what he buys, or won't be back. Nevertheless, a story about a current this-or-that can get over its point when it is treated properly, which is another way of declaring it has to be supported logically by the recognized trappings of commercial production. There is more.

Selectivity of material must be careful. Sound judgment must be exercised in determining what is in the public interest. Reflection of newspaper headlines, for example, is not necessarily the whole answer. We do not want a film, or a series of films, based on night club dancers suspected of shooting down men on yachts in Havana harbor. The responsibility to which Zukor refers, of course, is tremendous. The credibility of which he speaks is desirable, but to recognize them is also to recognize why they must be judiciously applied.

On the point that the lush period of the war when anything stood up is gone, the answer became final months ago. Anything does not stand up. The observers of checks and balances have been aware for some time that audience selectivity which had retired toward the inconsequential during the boom years is emerging steadily, week by week. Audiences are choosing again, and for the long haul it is an extremely fortunate piece of business that this is so.

It means merit will bring the big reward, not a pocketful of money with few places to go.

It means a gauntlet thrown at Hollywood's feet.

It means the creators are faced with the necessity of stemming the current declining tide in quality.

It means the product must be improved.

Big attractions continue to beget big money, never doubt. Ask the exhibitor lucky enough to play one.

Tucked away on inside news pages of Motion Picture Daily are a couple of items which ought not be discounted.

1.—The Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, meeting in St. Louis, devoted five sessions to a discussion of the tone of current product, concluding that the prevalence of murder mysteries telegraphed a signal for parents to find other avenues of entertainment for their children.

2.—The Hilltop Community Council of Columbus, O., continues to eye with considerable doubt the theatre practice there of combining murder mysteries with attractions of known appeal to children, like the Disney features. The 27 organizations which make up the council evidently are hell-bent for correction. Their direction seems to be sound.

A call for distributors and exhibitors to return "to the tried and true methods of traditional ballyhoo to sell their pictures," was sounded by William A. Scully, Universal-International vice-president and general sales manager, last week at the two-day exploitation and publicity meeting at the Hotel Astor in New York. Maurice A. Bergman, U-I's eastern advertising and publicity director, presided at the sessions, attended by the home office and field promotion staffs.

Besides Mr. Scully, speakers at the meeting included A. J. O'Keefe, assistant general sales manager; C. J. Feldman, western division sales manager; Fred Meyers, eastern division sales manager; James J. Jordan, manager of the contract, playdate and sales department, and Al Horwitz, eastern publicity manager.

Mr. Bergman said the company's field exploitation representatives would be given greater authority to develop key city promotion plans. This, he said, would lead to closer cooperation with exhibitors. He also said that a specialized unit would be developed in the home office and in the field to work on the development of J. Arthur Rank productions. He was followed by William J. Heineman, general sales manager for the Rank division of U-I, and Jock Lawrence, vice-president and public relations director of the Rank organization in the U. S. Mr. Heineman said $1,000,000 would be spent on promoting five Rank pictures in this country.

Last week also saw another U-I convention, this one a sales meeting in Europe, presided over in Paris by J. H. Seideman, U-I president. U-I executives from 13 countries attended and were shown a lineup of new U-I product. The convention also included an outline by Harold Sugarman of the company's extensive 16mm plans.

Sales policies for "The Egg and I," as well as for other U-I productions, will be discussed at a two-day sales meeting at the U-I home office April 19-20. The company's district sales managers will attend.

Monogram Southern Managers Meeting Saturday, Sunday

A regional sales meeting of all southern exchanges of Monogram was to be held Saturday and Sunday at the Atlanta Biltmore Hotel in Atlanta. Branch managers from Charlotte, Memphis, Atlanta and New Orleans will attend and the meetings will be presided over by Arthur Greenblatt, Monogram's eastern sales manager.

Convicted on Lottery Charge

The New York Court of Appeals in Albany upheld last week the conviction of Albert Schleicher, manager of the Blenheim theatre, the Bronx, N. Y., on a lottery charge, resulting from cash awards made from the stage of his theatre.

MPTO "Pleased" Allied "Baffled" On Arbitration

The stay order granted April 7 on the New York decree's order dissolving the Consent Decree system of arbitration has "pleased" the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and "baffled" Allied States.

In bulletins made public Monday, the two organizations commented at length on the stay order.

"We are pleased as to the stay of elimination of arbitration," the MPTOA bulletin stated, "because it has been our position since the decision (on the anti-trust case) in June that, with all of the new arbitrable matters created, many cumbersome profitless 'trips to the courthouse' could be saved by a satisfactory system of arbitration, one which was optional and one which would not in any way restrain the exhibitor from resorting to the courts if he wished to and one which would not preclude the Government from instituting appropriate proceedings for violations of the decree by the defendants.

"There are some valid objections to the present system of arbitration," the bulletin continued, "but none that could not be corrected. Without the continuation of the system, however, those changes and improvements would be too difficult of accomplishment."

In its bulletin, Allied asserted that "the feature of (Supreme Court) Justice (Stanley) Reed's action which is wholly baffling from a legal standpoint is the granting of a stay of the provision which terminated arbitration. Lawyers will never cease to wonder how he could restore the Consent Decree without the consent of the Government, except by a legal tour de force. However, since so many exhibitors seem to have formed an attachment for arbitration just as it was about to expire, no one should complain."

With the stay now an actuality, the 31 tribunals of the motion picture arbitration system will continue as before, fully staffed to accept new cases, until a final decision on the New York District Court's findings in the anti-trust suit is made by Supreme Court. Originally, all those tribunals having no cases on April 1 were to be closed and all those having cases pending were to be closed once final disposition was made. No new cases were to be accepted after April 1. Now they can be. However, none have been filed since April 1.

31 Paramount Meetings Set To Talk Short Subjects

Paramount's short subjects department, headed by Oscar A. Morgan, sales manager, will hold 31 meetings and conferences with district, branch and sales managers through the country to discuss 1947-48 product. The first of these meetings will take place in Dallas April 21.

Schine, Griffith Appeals Not Until This Autumn

The appeals of the Schine and Griffith anti-trust cases will probably not be argued before the Supreme Court before this autumn, Department of Justice officials reported in Washington last week. These cases will delay a hearing of the appeals in the New York anti-trust suit since they are scheduled to be heard first. The Schine appeal has been docketed, but it was reported, there is little chance that it will be heard until October, when the court reconvenes. The Griffith appeal, the Justice Department expects, will be docketed "in the near future—certainly before the end of the month."

Paramount Will Hold Partners Pending Verdict

Paramount will keep its theatre partnerships pending a ruling from the Supreme Court on the New York District Court's order enjoining the defendants in the anti-trust suit from joint ownership of theatres by defendants and by defendants and independents, according to a statement Monday from Leonard Goldenson, president, Paramount Theatres Service Corporation.

The New York Court's decision in the suit gave the defendants two years from December 31, 1946, to dissolve all partnerships in which the defendants hold an interest greater than five per cent and less than 95 per cent. Paramount appealed that order, as did the other theatre-owning defendants, last February. The Supreme Court is not expected to hear the appeals before January.

According to an RKO exhibit printed in the New York Court's decision of June 11, Paramount owns 993 theatres in partnership with independents and 195 in partnership with other independents. However, 177 of those theatres in partnership with independents would not be affected, according to the exhibit, since Paramount's interest in those theatres is less than five per cent.

Paramount is the company most seriously affected by the court's partial dissolution order.

Under the provisions of the decree, the defendants are to submit to the New York Court by June 31 a statement outlining the extent of compliance with the dissolution order and are to be made quarterly thereafter.

Eastman Kodak Ordered To Produce Records

The Eastman Kodak Company must obey a Federal grand jury subpoena and produce its records to help determine whether there has been an anti-trust law violation, according to an April 4 ruling of Federal Judge John Knight in Buffalo.

Majors Struggle With Policies in Suit Confusion

Caught on middle ground between a stay order on the distribution provisions of the decree in the New York anti-trust suit and the possibility of civil suits for violations of the New York District Court's decision, which is a law until the Supreme Court rules on it, distributors were still seeking this week to formulate definite sales plans.

MGM indicated this week it would continue its competitive bidding experiments only in the 50-some areas in which experiments have been started. Last week a spokesman for Twentieth Century-Fox indicated that the company would continue its experiments because it was found that they aided in "settling disputes."

Final decision on 20th-Fox sales policies, however, are expected to be set at the end of the month when top officials will meet to discuss the stays of the decree as it affects them. The company asked for and received only stays on the decree's provisions concerning competitive bidding and arbitration. The meeting has been postponed until Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox president, returns to New York from his current Latin American tour.

Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States, who last month was accusing the distributors of "discrediting" the bidding system, this week warned that if competitive bidding experiments are continued they will be "without color of authority under the decree."

"Staying those injunctions on distribution," Mr. Myers warned in Allied's latest bulletin, released Monday, "does not legalize the practices which the lower court condemned. It merely means that if the defendants commit any of those practices during the period of the stay they will not violate the decree. They are protected against being punished for contempt of the decree, but not from the other consequences flowing from the commission of unlawful acts"—as stated in the decision.

Pittsburgh Exhibitor Files $450,000 Anti-Trust Suit

David N. Green, operator of the Beacon theatre, Pittsburgh, has filed a $450,000 anti-trust suit against 15 distributing and theatre operating companies charging conspiracy to prevent him from obtaining first-run features. He asked damages of $125,000, which would be trebled under anti-trust laws, and $25,000 for accrued interest and lawyers' fees.

Dear Harry:

You asked me the other day what kind of success we were having with your attraction ABIES IRISH ROSE.

Now, while I am not on United Artists payroll, I still am happy to tell you our experience. This picture has had very successful engagements for us and while we have run it in towns with heavy Catholic population and other towns with heavy Protestant population, we have not had one serious complaint. As a matter of fact, everyone seems to enjoy the picture and I think this is proved by all Boxoffice receipts which were very good.

Very truly yours,

CARPENTERS HALT THEATRE BUILDING

New Hutcheson Order Would Stop Construction Until Strike Is Settled

Hollywood Bureau

A nationwide stoppage of theatre construction seemed probable this week as an outgrowth of Hollywood's labor troubles.

Because of the long jurisdictional strike of Hollywood's carpenters, William Hutcheson, international president of the American Federation of Labor Carpenters Union, will not permit any AFL carpenters anywhere to work on studio or theatre construction until the Hollywood strike is settled.

Ordered Sunday Night

That information was relayed Sunday night to a mass meeting of the Conference of Studio Unions by Joseph V. Cambiano, international vice-president, who said he got the order from Mr. Hutcheson last Thursday at a Carpenters executive board meeting in Indianapolis.

Early in the strike, all carpenter and painter locals in the country were requested, but not explicitly ordered, to refrain from working on theatre construction and from patronizing theatres. That request now appears to be an order.

The stoppage was to have been discussed further Thursday in Washington at a meeting of AFL's building trades department.

Meanwhile, plans were announced this week for 11 new theatres and for considerable remodeling and modernization of existing theatres.

Circuit Has Five Planned

The Edwards' Theatres Circuit, Los Angeles, announced plans for five new California houses. In Arcadia, the circuit will build a 1,400-seat house, the El Rancho; plans have been completed for a 1,000-seat house at Sunland, to be known as the Foothill; a site has been purchased for a theatre in La Canada; a $250,000, 1,400-seat house will be built at Monterey Park; in Montrose, a bowling-alley building will be remodeled into a 900-seat theatre. Additionally, the circuit will remodel the Granada, in Alhambra, and change its name to Coronet, and will extend the 840-seat Temple theatre in Temple City to 1,200 seats. Others of the circuit's theatres, including the Garvey at Garvey, the Rosemead at Rosemead, and the Tujunga at Tujunga, all in California, are being modernized.

Morris Legendre, Aiken, S. C., has announced that the Legendre-Trincher circuit will build a theatre in Charlotte, N. C.

Bert Henson Enterprises, Modesto, Calif., will build a $75,000 house at Oakdale, Calif., and will remodel a community hall in Watford, Calif., into a theatre.

Theatre Leasing Called Evasion

Terming the practice an "evasion of the court decree," in the industry anti-trust suit, making an "open and shut case for complete divorcement," the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana attacked the recently adopted plan of some producers to lease theatres for certain of their pictures, in the latest issue of its bulletin, "Theatre Facts."

Contending that theatre leasing pushes up rentals as well as admissions, the Indiana Allied group said that "a couple of months back we urged staunch resistance to the innovation of 'four-wall leasing', realizing that the experiment of the day would become the firmly established practice of the future. . . . Besides forcing up admission prices, this subterfuge also extracts terms that ordinarily would even embarrass a film salesman to ask for."

ATOI also contends that the distributors are "perverting that section of the decree dealing with competitive bidding in order to use it for their own selfish ends. . . . As long as producers and distributors do not have the spirit and the intent to deal fairly with their customers, the efforts of courts to establish fair trade practices are like trying to carry water in a sieve. There are just too many holes to patch up."

SOPEG Studies Wage Rise; California Minimum Up

Anticipating the reopening of wage clauses in its agreements with the home offices, the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild, Local No. 109—UOPWACIO, contract research and negotiations committee has begun a study of the situation. Under the contracts signed last October the union has the right to present new wage demands by the end of July.

In California, the state's Department of Industrial Relations, division of industrial welfare, this week issued an amendment to the Amusement and Recreation Industries order, regulating wages, hours and working conditions for women and minors.

Warners Ask Rehearing Of Joan Leslie Case

Counsel for Warner Brothers has requested a rehearing of its appeal from a California District Court's decision freeing Joan Leslie from a contract entered into with Warners while a minor. The District Court of Appeals recently confirmed the court's finding that a player attaining majority can void a contract made as a minor.

Study Film Bills Calling for Tax In Four States

Local and state legislation affecting theatres was being carefully watched by exhibitors in New Jersey, Florida and New York City this week.

In Trenton Monday, the New Jersey legislature passed a measure which would permit the sea-shore resort communities to impose luxury taxes, including levies on amusement admissions. However, after the voting, Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll said the measure must again be voted upon since five Assemblymen reported that their votes were erroneously recorded. The State Senate has approved the bill.

In Florida, a Paramount subsidiary, Florida State Theatres, has succeeded in preventing the enforcement of a recently passed local ordinance in Gainesville which levied a graduated tax on amusements. Protesting the measure on the ground that it was discriminatory and unfair, the circuit officials brought an action to temporarily enjoin the enforcement of the measure.

Meanwhile a bill calling for a 10 per cent state tax on admissions of more than 25 cents has been introduced in the Florida House of Representatives. The bill covers nearly all amusements except those already

In New York City, Mayor William O'Dwyer is reported to be studying a proposal, suggested by a prominent but anonymous showman, which would increase the annual license fee for motion picture theatres from $200 to $500, the sum paid by the Broadway stage theatre.

An increase in Cincinnati theatre license fees from the present 10 cents a seat to $50 for the first 200 seats, 20 cents a seat for the next 500, and 10 cents a seat for all over 700 seats, was included in a recommendation of City Manager W. R. Kellogg to the City Council.

Petrillo Is Subpoenaed By House Labor Committee

James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, has been subpoenaed to appear before the House Labor Committee in Washington and testify on the internal conduct of his union, Representative Fred A. Hartley, Jr., committee chairman, announced Monday. Representative Hartley said Petrillo's appearance will be deferred until the Supreme Court rules on the constitutionality of the Lea Act.

Congressional Committee To Investigate Strike

A Congressional sub-committee, probably consisting of three members, will go to Hollywood the latter part of May to investigate the Hollywood jurisdictional strikes and reported Communist activities, according to a member of the House Labor Committee and the House Un-American Activities group.

Yates Attacks Reissue Sweep As Bad Policy

Attacking what he called "the indiscriminate release of reissues by all companies," Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic pictures, last week told a regional sales meeting at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago that the industry had gone "reissue beserk." At the same time he announced that his company would continue making "B" pictures, although the exact number has not yet been set.

Lashing out against the reissue policy, Mr. Yates said that, if it is continued, the industry will soon find itself losing the public esteem it now enjoys. "The constant playing of reissues is an admission on the part of the industry to the public that it cannot produce quality pictures today as it did in former years," he declared. And he warned that an excessive amount of reissues would serve to bring down rentals on high-cost product now being made.

The third and final Republic regional sales meeting opened at the coast last Monday with James R. Grainger, executive vice-president and sales manager, presiding and Mr. Yates emphasizing the company's policy to increase the number of high-budget productions. Previously he had said that Republic would make more features in 1947-48 than this year and that a definite product announcement would be made in May.

Also attending the studio meeting were Allen Wilson, vice-president; Earl R. Collins, western district manager; and branch managers Ralph Carmichael, Los Angeles; S. C. Martenstein, San Francisco; Gene Gerbase, Denver; Thomas McMahon, Salt Lake City; Paul McElhinney, Seattle, and George Mitchell, Portland.

Legion of Decency Reviews Seven New Productions

The National Legion of Decency reviewed seven new productions this week, approving all but one. In Class A-I, unobjectionable for general patronage, were: "A Boy, a Girl and a Dog," "For the Love of Rusty" and "St. Francis of Assisi." In Class A-II, unobjectionable for adults, were: "Copacabana," "The Two Mrs. Carrrolls" and "A Likely Story." In Class B, objectionable in part, was "Monsieur Verdoux," because it "reflects erroneous moral philosophy and moral skepticism."

Stern Sees Business Off 18-20 Per Cent

Business in theatres has declined 18 to 20 per cent since the beginning of the year, Emil Stern, general manager of the Essaness circuit, Chicago, said there last week, after a business trip to Los Angeles. The decline is in grosses, he said; and the grosses have sagged despite increased admission prices.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Holds Pace; 39 Pictures Shooting As Six Are Begun

Hollywood Bureau

A post-Easter period of inactivity set in at Hollywood studios last week, and the shooting index continued to show a total of 39 pictures in work. During the week, six films were completed, and six started.

At Columbia, cameras turned on "Destiny," a psychological mystery, which Rudolph Flothow is producing and D. Ross Lederman directing. Heading the cast are John Beal, Trudy Marshall, Barbara Read, Helen Mowery and Jimmy Lloyd.

The fourth of the studio's "Rusty" series, titled "Son of Rusty," also got under way, with Ted Donaldson, Tom Powers, Ann Doran and Stephen Dunne in top roles. Flame, the great-grandson of the famous dog star, Strongheart, has the chief animal role in the picture. Wallace MacDonald produces; Lew Landers directs.

Republic Musical Western To Star Gene Autry

Republic launched "Robin Hood of Texas," a musical Western starring Gene Autry. Sidney Picker is the producer; Leslie Selander the director. Lynne Roberts, Sterling Holloway and Adele Mara have important supporting roles.

PRC trained cameras on two: "Bury Me Dead," and "Ghost Town Renegades." The cast of the latter includes Lash Larue, Fuzzy St. John and Jennifer Holt. Jerry Thomas is producing, and Ray Taylor is directing.

Bernhard Vorhaus is directing "Bury Me Dead" for producer Charles Reisner, and the cast includes Cathy O'Donnell, Greg McClure, June Lockhart and Mark Daniels.

The first Fortune Production for Screen Guild release, "Dark Bullet," went into work with Maurice Conn producing and Leslie Goodwins directing. Mary Bryan, Douglas Blackley, Henry Wilcoxon and Virginia Dale head the cast.

Recent Story Purchases By Studios Listed

Twentieth Century-Fox has purchased Henry Helseth's novel, "The Chair for Martin Rome," and assigned it to Sol Siegel for production. Ben Hecht will write the screenplay. . . . Two I. A. R. Wylie stories have been acquired by MGM. The first, "Quarter from an Angel," is a short story dealing with the romance and problems of an ambitious war veteran attending college. The second is a novel, as yet unwritten, tentatively titled "Children's Village." It tells the story of the unique hamlet in Switzerland where war orphans of several nationalities are being afforded the comforts of family life. Miss Wylie will live in the village while writing her story.

Paramount has purchased "Web of Days," a first novel by Edna Lee, to serve as a starring vehicle for Paulette Goddard. . . . Hal Wallas has obtained screen rights to the radio classic, "Sorry, Wrong Number," which was first presented on the CBS radio program, "Suspense." Anatole Litvak will be director and co-producer. . . . Producers William Pine and William Thomas have bought "Waterfront at Midnight," an original story by Bernard Gerard.

"Sunburst," an original by Dietrich V. Hanneken and Aleck Black, has been purchased by Warners, and will co-star Ronald Reagan and Alexis Smith. . . . "The Miracle of Charlie Dakin," a recent Republic purchase, has been assigned to Alfred Santell for production. . . . RKO Radio has acquired "Mr. Whiskers," by Erwin Galsey. Leopold Atalst is preparing the script for early production by Theron Warth of the Sid Rogell unit.

Frank Capra has engaged Claudette Colbert for the role of the wife opposite Spencer Tracy in "State of the Union," to be produced by Liberty Films and released by MGM. . . . Alex Gottlieb will produce "Romance in High C" for Michael Curtiz Productions at Warners. Curtiz will direct the film, a musical comedy with a South American background. . . . Producer Seymour Nebenzal has signed Jean Pierre Aumont to a three-year contract calling for one picture annually.

McCrea To Star in Film on Life of Grandfather

Arrangements have been completed for Joel McCrea to star in a Harry Sherman production for Enterprise based on the life of McCrea's grandfather, the late Albert Whipple. As yet untitled, the story will be laid in San Francisco, where Whipple operated the city's leading hotel and restaurant during the gold rush days. McCrea is preparing a synopsis from family records, prior to the assignment of a writer to do the screenplay.

"Born Bad," a dramatization of today's juvenile delinquency problem, will be produced at MGM by Robert Lord from an original story by Sid Boehm. . . . Vladimir Horowitz, the world-famed pianist, will make his screen debut in Herman Millakowsky's next production, based on the Stefan Zweig novel, "Fear." . . . Keep Westerns Clean: Sherman

Hollywood Editor

If producers don't stop wrapping up sordid sex plots in the Western picture format, they're going to kill off not only the Western picture but also a great deal of the vital family-audience support on which all motion pictures and the industry itself depends, according to Harry Sherman. His film, "Ramrod," is currently in exhibition and his next is to be "This Way They Passed," under another title, for which the Enterprise researchers are now polling the populace, and whose 56 Hopyalong Cassidy pictures established the standards which the trade today regards as par for the Western form.

It was not the kindly Harry's intention to lambaste the film makers who have dramatized the exotic against a Western background—for Harry is not given to lambasting anybody—but a direct question slipped in between the soup and the salad got him going, roughly as follows:

No Place in Western

"Certainly they'll kill off the Western. When people want to see sex on the screen they hunt up a slick drama or something, never a Western, because they've been taught all their lives that Western pictures are clean pictures. And when people want to see a Western they don't expect the women in it to behave like trollops and to see the men chasing skirts. But killing the Western means a lot more than just dirtying up a nice kind of picture. It's what it means to the family trade that really counts.

"People making pictures in Hollywood, and taking time off now and then to fly back to New York for a round of theatres and night clubs, forget that Hollywood and New York are not America. They forget that the country is full of plain towns, big and little, which are full of plain people—family people—who haven't got money or inclination to go in for night life and the phony standards that go with it.

Family Sets Standards

"It's those plain people that make or break the movies. It's the family that sets the pitch for American living, and the great majority of American families are units living on modest incomes, incomes that warrant about one trip a week to the picture show and not very much more. The father and mother know one thing about Westerns that they don't know about any other kind of picture. They know they can send the children to see any Western, any time, without worrying about them picking up ideas beyond their years or coming home asking questions nobody knows the answers to.

"So what happens? What has been happening all these years? The kids acquire the STAGECOACH TRAVEL had its hazards in the good old days: the holdup, shown above in Warners' "Cheyenne", was a normal one. The picture, which exhibitors will see in trade screenings April 21, stars Dennis Morgan and Jane Wyman, and was produced by Robert Buckner and directed by Raoul Walsh.

SPRING SCENE, from Paramount's "Welcome, Stranger", starring Bing Crosby and Barry Fitzgerald, above, and Joan Caulfield. The picture is from the hand of Sol C. Siegel, producer, and Elliott Nugent, director, and will be shown to exhibitors April 25.

movie habit, on the right basis, and grow up and start their own families, and their kids do the same in turn. That won't happen very long after pictures reach a state of sophistication—if they do—where the fathers and mothers make up their minds they have to see every Western picture or check up on it before they give the kids permission to go to the movie. These sexy Westerns, with the widespread unfavorable publicity they attract, will force fathers and mothers around to that opinion in short order if the trend continues."

Questioned on Market Ceiling

At this point he was asked whether the decision to dramatize sex instead of six-guns might not have been prompted by a feeling that the Western, in standard form, had reached its market ceiling, and he declared:

"There's no ceiling on the Western—no limit to the audience it can attract, or the money it can gross, if it's good enough. You can go back over the record and prove that. Go back to 'The Covered Wagon' or 'The Iron Horse', to mention two, or go all the way back, for that matter, to 'The Great Train Robbery', the Daddy of all entertainment pictures. On my own list, latterly, there's 'Buffalo Bill', that made a whale of a lot of money the first time around, so much so that Twentieth Century-Fox is getting ready to reissue it."

Twentieth-Fox To Produce Russian Espionage Film

A feature to be titled "The Iron Curtain," dealing with Russian espionage in the United States and Canada, will be produced by Twentieth Century-Fox, Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, announced last week in Hollywood. While the idea was his own, Mr. Zanuck explained, it was inspired by J. Edgar Hoover's report on March 26 to the House Committee on Un-American Activities. The feature will be filmed as a semi-documentary, it was announced, and will use material from the June 27, 1946, report of the Royal Canadian Commission on Russian espionage in that country. Sol C. Siegel is expected to produce.

BALTIMORE

Attendance spotty and good spring weather hurt business, but overall picture fairly good for week beginning April 10. Town went nicely into a fourth week with "Best Years of Our Lives." New theatre held "Carnival in Costa Rica" for third week. Three that held pictures for second week included Keith's with "Suddenly It's Spring," Stanley with "Pursued," and Mayfair with "The Red House." Century had good opening with "The Macomber Affair." Hippodrome started nicely with "Trail Street," Little all right with "I Live as I Please," and Roslyn pleased with "Lady Chaser" and "Son of Lassie." . . . Only open air theatre in these parts, E. M. Loew's, three miles south of Baltimore, opened April 10. . . . R. Kellogg to City Council, together with increased fees for various other lines of commercial and religious activities, as a means of boosting the city's finances. "Average, normal children are over-stimulated by movies," Dr. Clarence B. Allen, professor of Education at Western Reserve University, told the members of the Motion Picture Council of Greater Cleveland. Heavy competition from the Sportsmen's Show, along with adverse weather, chopped into theatre grosses, but they still held near average. "My Favorite Brunette" at Radio City was tops with $20,000, to earn a second week. "The Best Years" ran close to $19,000 in its fourth week, and "The Razor's Edge" had a good third week. M. P. A. Cancels Birthday Dinner

The 25th Anniversary Dinner of the Motion Picture Association, set for the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York May 8, was cancelled last week when it was found that the occasion conflicted with a number of other industry events, the MPA said. J. Arthur Rank, who was to have been guest-of-honor at the banquet, will be entertained by the MPA board of directors on the evening of May 8.

The decision to call off the dinner, which was to have been attended by approximately 1,500 persons from the industry and other fields, was taken mainly because the top Paramount executives and the Paramount partners at that time will be discussing decree matters in Palm Springs. Also, the annual Variety Club Convention is scheduled to open a week later at Los Angeles and mid-westerners and westerners indicated that they would have difficulty in arranging their schedules.

It is understood that President Truman's inability to come to New York May 8 also was one of the determining factors in the cancellation. It's the President's birthday that day and, besides, he had a long-standing engagement to address the Southern Cotton Growers Association that evening which he had to cancel because of matters of state. In addition, Mr. Rank's schedule in the United States is tight and it would be difficult to juggle dates.

Minneapolis Agreement On Double Features

Under terms of an agreement reached at a meeting of all Minneapolis independent theatre owners last week, features playing the Orpheum, Radio City and State first runs will not be used by subsequent runs on double feature bills.

Labor and Civic Groups Study Film Center Plan

Leaders of national civic and labor organizations met in New York April 8 to discuss plans for organizing the field of non-theatrical films to expand the use of motion pictures by labor and educational groups. A survey committee was named to formulate a plan to establish a film center, on a cooperative non-profit basis, which would operate its own film library and engage in the distribution and promotion of films dealing with public affairs. The center expects to open key distribution offices in New York City, Chicago and Los Angeles.

National Screen Service Convenes in Chicago

National Screen Service executives, branch managers and salesmen met Wednesday at the Drake Hotel in Chicago at the opening session of its three-day convention. Herman Robbins, president, headed the list of executives attending the meetings and led the discussions of company sales policy with regard to sales and service. Other home office executives who attended the meetings included George Dembow, vice-president in charge of distribution; William B. Brenner, vice-president in charge of operations, and Joseph A. Wolfe, treasurer.

"Carnegie Hall" Opening Set Around the World

United Artists' Boris Morros-William LeBaron musical, "Carnegie Hall," opened Tuesday in Manila, Wednesday in Lima, Peru, and Johannesburg and Durban, South Africa, and Thursday in Panama. Openings are scheduled for the end of April in Buenos Aires, Santiago, Port-of-Spain and Havana. The picture is currently playing in Stockholm and in San Juan. Plans have been made for early release in England, Continental Europe, Australia, New Zealand and India.

Eagle-Lion Has Trainee Plan

A training program for ex-GIs to develop personnel in distribution will be launched shortly by Eagle-Lion Films, subsidiary of Pathe Industries, Robert R. Young, head of the latter enterprise, announced this week. Arthur B. Krim, Eagle-Lion president, and A. W. Schwalberg, vice-president in charge of distribution, will guide the program.

Mr. Young said he and Eagle-Lion executives felt such a program would uncover a reservoir of potential talent. "This new plan, which opens the industry to so many newcomers, must inevitably result in bringing to the field an enormous compliment of new brains, new ideas, new talent and new enthusiasms," he declared.

Although the program will not be connected officially with existing veterans' rehabilitation and training programs, it will work closely with all established agencies. All men selected will be routed through every department in the sales division. According to Mr. Schwalberg, this industry is the only major industry in this country lacking an organized training program designed to provide a continuing flow of new manpower. "The hit-or-miss basis on which the film industry has operated in the past can no longer be permitted to exist," he said.

Showmanship Drive Set For Schine Circuit

Plans for a 13-week Schine Circuit Showmanship Drive were outlined this week by home office executives at a series of regional managers' meetings in Rochester and Gloversville, N. SEE TOUGH BATTLE FOR GENEVA GAINS

Films Jealously Guarded by Nations, Thus Held to Sharp Restrictions

Washington Bureau

Any gains the industry makes at the Geneva international trade conference will be won in a tough battle.

The American delegation has gone to Geneva fully primed on the importance of knocking down major barriers to U. S. films abroad. Industry representatives will be on hand to help. State Department pronouncements on the conference have been couched in the most optimistic terms. But the fact remains that concrete achievements—the kind that can be translated into dollars and cents—probably will be few and far between.

Face Conflict of Policies

The unofficial Washington view on the conference as a whole is a good deal less optimistic than the official one. The absence of Russia from the conference is one discouraging factor. Another is the inevitable clash between the idea of freer world trade and the obvious need of countries like Britain and France to continue to restrict imports while they rebuild their war-exhausted industries.

One high-ranking official remarked privately that he thought that if the U. S. hadn't taken a lead in planning the I.T.O., it would not even bother sending a delegation to Geneva.

If the over-all outlook at Geneva is bad, the outlook for major film gains is even worse. Reasons are four-fold:

1. The motion picture is an important means of molding public opinion. As such, it is especially an object of protection on the part of foreign governments.

2. The United States places almost no restrictions on film imports. Any concessions obtained abroad will have to be in return for concessions here on other products. Finding these other products may prove an added stumbling block.

3. The largest U. S. foreign markets are in Britain and the English-speaking dominions. But Britain, with its large film industry, can be expected to fight bitterly any reduction in protection at home or in the empire preference scheme, whereby it gets favored treatment in the dominions.

Most of our trade agreements aim for two major ends — most-favored nation treatment and treatment of U. S. products on the same basis as products of the country in question. But as Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association president, has pointed out, "because of its special characteristics, the film industry has been subjected to very special restrictions, and most of these restrictions have not been prohibited by the clauses generally included in trade agreements." Writing in special clauses for special commodities means special trouble, negotiators have found in the past, and often these special clauses are dropped by the wayside.

JOHNSTON AIMS LANCE AT EUROPEAN "CURTAINS"

There are two kinds of "iron curtains" in Europe today, and when he goes to the continent in June to attend the International Reciprocal Trade Conference at Geneva he will try to break through them, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, said in Washington this week. American films in Europe face two obstacles, both put up by extremists, he declared. One is created by the "extreme left" faction, principally the Russians. The other is backed by the "extreme right", whose leaders argue that foreign exchange, instead of being spent for entertainment, should be conserved for food, machinery and other essentials. The MPA head also said that several nations in the Russian orbit either exclude Hollywood product or seek to exhibit only such pictures as shown the "seamy side" of American life.

All this does not mean that there will be no motion picture gains. Trade agreements may be negotiated with Australia, Norway, India and Chile, with whom we have none at present. Perhaps Britain can be induced to speed the relaxation of exchange controls promised in the loan agreement. One or two of the 16 other participants may be persuaded to increase the quota for U. S. films, reduce the number of licenses needed, or do away with some particularly burdensome local ordinance.

Some Negative Gains

Some of the gains might be negative—perhaps discouraging Britain from imposing additional quota restrictions or keeping France from taxing film imports on the basis of total gross receipts, a step that has been rumored for many months.

To aid the U. S. delegation wherever possible, MPA representative Frank McCarthy, former Assistant Secretary of State, is at Geneva now, and Mr. Johnston is scheduled to leave for Europe late in May. Another MPA representative, Allen Dulles of the law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell, may also go over if there seems to be need.

As for the reciprocal trade negotiations, the fight will be along the lines outlined by Mr. Johnston before the Committee on Reciprocity Information late in February.

He urged, in addition to the usual most-favored nation and treatment-as-nationals clauses, provisions such as the following:

A promise not to worsen the present position of U. S. films as regards quotas, taxes or other restrictions without consulting the U. S.

To Urge End of Quotas

Abolition of quotas; free entry of advertising material; permission for pictures to be dubbed in the U. S.; permission for U. S. firms to open branches in the foreign country.

Also, an end of schemes whereby importers of U. S. films must purchase, produce or distribute films of other origin or must join high-cost associations; most-favored nation treatment for U. S. companies on remittances from abroad, at the most favorable rate of exchange; permission for importers to submit films for screening and censorship without super-imposed titles in the importing country's language; reimportation free of customs duties, and exemption of newsreels from customs and censorship.

Industry to Aid New York Fund

The industry, through its theatres and through special short subjects, is expected to aid substantially the Greater New York Fund 1947 campaign, which gets under way April 29 with Joseph R. Vogel, Loew circuit vice-president, supervising motion picture promotion.

Top executives of all the city's important industries comprise the campaign directing force, and in turn have appointed leading executives of the film industry, radio, public relations and advertising to bring the campaign before the public.

The opening event of the drive will be a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, the evening of April 29. May will be known as "Greater New York Fund Month." The campaign will close June 6.

Sees No Government Film Library Now

Construction of a new Government film library and servicing building will not be undertaken during this session of Congress, Representative J. Harry McGregor, Ohio Republican, told the press last week. Mr. McGregor is chairman of a House public works sub-committee on public buildings within the District of Columbia. Construction costs are too high, Mr. McGregor explained. The Senate passed a bill providing for a film library, but the legislation did not come up for House consideration before adjournment.

Newsreel Units Hit Price Rise

With newsreel-theatre attendance down from 25 to 30 per cent since the end of the war, operators are resisting demands by the producers for higher rentals, according to newsreel circuit executives in New York. Paramount and MGM have sought increases and two circuits with New York houses have dropped the Paramount reel altogether and a third, Translux Theatres, is using it only in its Philadelphia house.

It also was understood in New York this week that plans were under way for Embassy Newsreel Theatres, Translux and Telenews Theatres to sponsor a 10-minute newsreel of their own. Contracts are now being negotiated with independent cameramen all over the world and the reel probably will make its first appearance at the end of the month.

According to Stewart R. Martin, treasurer of Embassy Newsreel Theatres, Paramount and MGM asked an increase of approximately 100 per cent. Newsreel houses pay an average of $70 a week for their shows. The producers' demand was not fair, he said, because during the war the circuit's five New York houses played the reels of all companies despite frequent overlapping. "We are getting along fine with three reels now," he declared, adding that he expected RKO-Pathé, 20th-Fox and Universal to ask moderate rental increases when their contracts expire late this year.

Telenews Theatres, which runs nine newsreel and four feature houses throughout the country, has not booked a Paramount reel for several months and has the MGM reel in some of its houses. Because of slackening post-war interest in newsreels the circuit plans to convert some of its newsreel units into feature houses.

UA Acquires Five Houses; New Releasing Deals Set

Releasing deals with three producers were approved last week when the United Artists board of directors met in what was described as a "routine" session. Mary Pickford, UA co-owner, attended the meeting and later disclosed that the company had acquired five theatres. However, she refused to indicate where the houses were situated or whether their purchase marked the start of a theatre acquisition program.

Distribution agreements approved by the board included one with producer Sam Coslow for five musicals, each to be budgeted in excess of $1,500,000; one with Edward Small for two films starring Robert Young and both to be delivered within 18 months, and one with a company in which Edward Gross is associate producer, for one picture with a reported budget of $2,000,000.

"Jolson" Return Engagement At New York's Victoria

Although having just finished a complete tour of the territory, Columbia's "The Jolson Story" will return to Broadway for an indefinite run in the Victoria theatre immediately following the current run of "The Adventuress," A. Montague, general sales manager for Columbia, announced last week. No other New York house will be able to book the film during the engagement.

Since its opening October 10 and the subsequent eight-week run at the Radio City Music Hall, "The Jolson Story" has blanketed the metropolitan area, playing Loew top-houses for an unusual nine consecutive days, and booked into a great number of independent theatres. While playing at the Victoria the picture will show at $1.40 top.

During its nationwide run, "The Jolson Story" made gross and attendance history in many situations.

BRITISH VOTE FOR HOME PRODUCT

Bernstein Circuit Patrons Rate One U. S. Picture in First Six of Year

by PETER BURNUP
in London

British films, as well as the stars and directors who cooperated in making them, are gaining in the esteem of British audiences in the post-war years, a poll sponsored by Sidney L. Bernstein, head of the Granada group of theatres, indicated last week. In the years leading up to the war, American films and their stars held an undisputed lead over their British counterparts.

The poll, last held in 1937, was answered circuit officials said, by 600,000 persons. It rated not only the comparative popularity of British players and productions, but also recorded facts of general interest to the industry. Patrons were asked to give their views regarding the length and starting time of programs—68 per cent plumped for a three-hour show—and facts pertaining to their attendance habits.

96% See Improvement

The poll asked specifically whether British or American films had improved or deteriorated since 1939. No fewer than 96 per cent of the voters declared that British films had improved as against only 26 per cent who considered that American films had progressed.

Granada customers also were asked to express an opinion on 36 selected films generally released between VE day and December 1, 1946. The result showed British films in the top three places and taking also the fifth and sixth. "The Way to the Stars," released as "Johnny in the Clouds" in the United States, was placed first with 73 per cent of the public voting it "outstanding." "Seventh Veil" and "The Captive Heart" came next with 69 and 56 per cent, respectively. "The Wicked Lady" and "The Rake's Progress," the latter released as "Notorious Gentleman" in America, took fifth and sixth place. Hollywood's "The Lost Weekend" was the only U. S. picture among the top six.

Pro-British predilections extend even to directors, with Alfred Hitchcock taking top honors.

Mason Most Popular Star

The poll showed James Mason as the most popular male star and established Margaret Lockwood as Britain's favorite actress. This marks the first time since the questionnaire was instituted in 1927 that stars of British films have triumphed over their Hollywood rivals. British male stars showed up in five of the first 15 places. James Mason led the field, receiving more than a quarter of all the votes cast.

Similarly, British women stars who have made their names in British films took six of the first 15 places in the women's list, with two more British stars who won fame in American films also figuring.

Seven Stars Survive

Only seven of the first 30 male stars in this year's poll figured in the first 30 in 1937, and only seven of the women stars survived to win places among the first 30 this year.

The electorate voted drama the most popular type of film, followed by adventure, crime and films featuring classical music. Horror and cowboy films rated low. Swing-music pictures attracted only 31 per cent support compared with 45 per cent allotted to films about (and with) classical music.

Around four-fifths of the electorate voted for a double-feature program and of these nearly 50 per cent expressed their preference for a short rather than an organ solo. The quiz also revealed that 93 per cent of the people who filled out forms went to the theatre once a week or more often, while a quarter of the replies indicated three or more visits a week. Almost 50 per cent of those polled said they went to a show regularly, choosing the house with the best picture. Some 66 per cent said they went to one particular house consistently because it had the best films. Exhibitors—and, maybe, a few distributors—will undoubtedly mark those figures.

Ask More Leg Room

Among the improvements suggested by British patrons were proposals to provide cover for queues; a ban on young children; organization of talent contests; more stage shows and more leg space in the seats. Bernstein's people exhibited shrewd timing in the issue of their report just 24 hours before the Daily Mail announced its National Film Award. They thus took away a lot of the Mail's thunder.

The Daily Mail aspires to make itself—or its readers—the arbiter of a British Oscar, but it is generally felt in London that the newspaper in so doing got off with the wrong foot, considering the fact that the Producers' Association is thinking of sponsoring an organization here comparable with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The Mail poll establishes "Piccadilly Incident" as the best film, followed by "The Wicked Lady," "The Seventh Veil" and "The Captive Heart." Leading stars are James Mason, Michael Wilding, Stewart Granger and Rex Harrison on the male side, and Margaret Lockwood, Anna Neagle, Ann Todd and Phyllis Calvert on the female side.

Del Giudice Quits Two Cities Post

London Bureau

Filippo Del Giudice resigned Monday as managing director of Two Cities Films, Ltd., a member of the Rank Group some three years. He will remain with the company until the filming of Laurence Olivier's "Hamlet" has been completed. Josef Somlo succeeds him.

Despite the careful wording of the official statement, it is notorious that the resignation of mercurial, 55-year-old Mr. Del Giudice comes as the culmination of a prolonged dispute between him and John Davis, a board member.

Policy disputes between the two have been frequent, with Mr. Davis insisting that financial control of the company implied control also of the kind and number of pictures Two Cities should make. Mr. Del Giudice, on the other hand, has invariably demanded that he should have a free artistic hand.

Eighteen months ago he came near resigning, but was pacified on that occasion by the tactful intervention of Mr. Rank himself.

Mr. Del Giudice's pictures may not all have made inordinate profits, but there is no doubt that certain of them—"Henry V," "In Which We Serve," "The Way Ahead," "Blithe Spirit"—have added immeasurable prestige to Britain's picture making.

It is understood that Mr. Del Giudice proposes forming another independent producing company with affiliations in Italy.

Executives to Attend Fay Providence Dinner

A number of top industry executives have indicated that they will attend the testimonial dinner for Edward M. Fay, veteran exhibitor and showman, at the Biltmore Hotel in Providence, Rhode Island, April 21. A train, to be known as "The Ed Fay Special," will leave New York for Providence at 1 P.M., April 21.

More than 400 are expected. Among them are Major Albert Warner; former Postmaster General Frank Walker; Ned Depinet of RKO; George Dembow of National Screen; William A. Scully of Universal; Charles Schlaifer of 20th-Fox; Ben Kalmenson of Warner Bros.; William Rodgers of MGM; Joseph Vogel of MGM; Major L. E. Thompson of RKO, and Malcolm Kingsberg of RKO.

Morey Goldstein of Monogram; Michael J. Kallet, affiliated with the Comerford Circuit; Herman Levy of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association; Sol Schwartz of RKO, and Red Kann of Quigley Publications.

To Show "Snow White" in Berlin

Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was to have been shown in Berlin April 18 as part of the Allied Control Authority's monthly official film program.

RKO Pathe News IN NEWSREELS

Now Boasts Full World Coverage

After more than a year setting up a new staff for international coverage, the map in the office of John D. Le Vien, RKO-Pathe

News news editor today shows no political blindspots and regular weekly average of 25,000 feet of film received at New York office from 24 countries.

According to Mr. Le Vien, the post-war resumption of world coverage was by no means easy, the difficulty consisting mainly in locating foreign cameramen who had worked for Pathe before the war. Only 50 former employes answered the more than 500 tracer letters sent out after the war. It took many months before suitable cameramen could be found to build an efficient staff, but today Pathe News has its own men in Greece, Palestine, Hungary, Latin America, India, North Africa, South Africa, Portugal, New Zealand and Finland. A special man, who also serves Paramount, is operating in Germany.

Alfred Butterfield

In a number of countries Pathe News has exclusive exchange arrangements under which it gets all good news shots taken there and in turn sends abroad material dealing with the American scene. In London it is affiliated with Pathe News, in Paris with Pathe Journal, in Rome with Incon and in Australia with Cinesound. Similar arrangements assure coverage in Poland, Turkey, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Holland and other places. Pools for all five newsreel companies still exist in Japan and China and Chile. Pathe News has no coverage in Honolulu because no union cameramen can be found there and it neither sends nor receives film from Spain, although the Spaniards would be willing to make an exchange deal.

Little Censorship Difficulty

Newsreels encounter a minimum of censorship trouble, Mr. Le Vien said. For a long time none or only poor quality film was received from Moscow, but the condition changed following a letter written by the Pathe news editor to Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov. No foreign country has any quota on newsreels and in some countries, such as France, they are so popular that native newsreels are at times 100 per cent American and in English. In other places, like Italy and Canada, at least 51 per cent of the reel must be of native origin.

Both domestic and foreign operations of the Pathe newsreel are under the direction of Alfred Butterfield, editor of RKO Pathe News. All major assignments are given out directly from the home office. The domestic staff consists of 14 full-time and 300-part-time cameramen and slightly exceeds the prewar total. Lately the ratio of foreign to domestic subjects has been slightly in favor of the international coverage, but over the whole year, it comes out to about 50-50.

Mr. Butterfield's greatest problem is the arbitrary cutting of the newsreels by exhibitors to eliminate undesirable subjects or to adjust program times. Many letters from patrons, complaining about one or two-shot newsreels, come in each week. Research has established that exhibitors cut the newsreels on a selective basis in most cases. Patrons generally like lengthy coverage of a subject, but this practice is not popular with exhibitors.

A serious concern of RKO Pathe executives, and one that is echoed at all the other newsreel companies, is the situation under which they are unable to utilize combat-trained veteran cameramen because of union refusal to accept the men.

MPEA FILMS GET BIG HOLLAND PLAY

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

The policy of the U. S. Motion Picture Export Association, as demonstrated since it first began to release here January 3 last, is to release as many pictures in as many theatres as possible, even in small houses. MPEA pictures are running now in every Dutch town of importance. Even second run theatres are playing MPEA product first run.

The purchase of the important Asta theatre at The Hague by the MPEA was accomplished some time ago and the theatre was to be exploited under the MPEA banner this month.

During the 52-week period from September 1, 1946, to September, 1947, exhibitors are allowed to release 28 American pictures and 24 from other countries. As there is no domestic production of any importance, independent distributors are buying from many markets: British, French, Swedish, Danish, Russian, Italian and Mexican.

An important number of American pictures have been brought into Holland by independents who have purchased on the free American markets—from those companies not MPEA members. It should be emphasized the MPEA product is not only finding competition from European products—particularly English—but also from other American product.

During 1946 Holland imported 497 features, divided this way: U. S., 197; England, 137; France, 95; Denmark, 17; Sweden, 17; Russia, 13; Switzerland, nine; Belgium, four; Italy, three; Czechoslovakia, two, and Norway, one.

The number of American pictures to be imported during 1947 will be considerably larger.

Although decreasing during 1947 and still showing a decline in 1947, theatre attendance shows an improvement in comparison with pre-war years.

INDIA

Bombay Correspondent

An unprecedented subject matter is dealt with in two new Indian productions: politics. Previously it has been an impossibility for a producer even to show a picture of an Indian national leader hanging on the wall in a film setting. With this the case, one can imagine that nothing was allowed in film dialogue which would inspire the feelings of an Indian for the freedom of his country. Yet two new films indicate clearly the advent of a new era in the political setup of India since September, 1946. One of these features deals with the subject of the war of Indian Independence of 1857. The second deals with India's struggle for freedom during the last war. This second film was exhibited recently in Delhi to members of the Interim Government.

Although the industry has been hit hard by the political riots started in August, 1946, there is no decrease in production in the important centers of Bombay, Madras, Calcutta and Lahore. In Bombay there are 102 old production companies and 162 new ones registered. In Madras, 20; Calcutta, 28, and in Lahore, 42 producing concerns.

ARGENTINA

by NATALIO BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

The Asociacion de Empresarios Cinematograficos has agreed to present their labor, government and tax troubles to the President of the Republic for his consideration.

The exhibitors here held two meetings recently to discuss the increase in their taxes, the closing of cinemas for non-compliance with the rules compelling exhibitors to show national films, the increases in rentals and percentages, and the wage increases sought by employees and workmen. During the first meeting it was almost decided to have a general closing down of the theatres. The discussions, however, were continued at a second session at which it was decided to present the problems to the President.

Three theatres were closed recently for two days when they refused to show national product. It has now been agreed that before any such other closings are ordered the theatre's case will be reviewed by the Comite Arbitral Cinematografico.

SOUTH AFRICA

by R. N. BARRETT
in Johannesburg

London Film Productions will produce in South Africa at a cost of £250,000 a Technicolor feature dealing with South African history and with the great diamond and gold industries as a background to the story. Sir Alexander Korda will direct the film for which a script is being prepared by R. C. Sheriff, author of "Journey's End." Part of the feature will be filmed in Britain.

MEXICO

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

With the abnormal war time boom in theatre business apparently tapering off, leaders in theatre construction have assigned experts to study the situation to ascertain whether or not it would be wise to go ahead with the theatres they plan. The big private banks, in addition to suspending credits to producers, have also suspended credit for theatre construction and the banks' future policy depends upon the survey now being conducted.

The cooperative film society which some players, directors and technicians formed here recently is on the verge of being abandoned because of difficulty in obtaining financial backing.

Mario Moreno, Mexico's popular "Cantinflas" of the films, has resigned as secretary general of the Picture Production Workers Union which he was instrumental in organizing. He sponsored Adolfo Fernandez Bustamente, the director, as the new union head, and Mr. Bustamente was unanimously elected. Mr. Moreno will confine his activities to acting.

SPAIN

by PEDRO GONZALEZ
in Madrid

By official order of January 25, 1947, foreign films may be shown in their original languages and need not be dubbed in Spanish. However, all foreign features must still be granted official authorizations for screenings. These permits of authorization are given by the General Direction of Cinematography and Theatre only to producers of Spanish films who, in turn, can give them to importers and distributors of foreign films. Three to four permits are given to producers of "Film of National Interest," chosen by the General Direction of Cinematography, two permits are given to second-place producers, and none at all to other producers.

A new color process, Cinefotocolor, has been invented by the Laboratorios Cinefoto de Barcelona. The first Spanish film in color will be "Zaragoza," to be directed by Antonio Roman.

"Las Inquietudes de Shanti Andia" and "Reina Santa" have been chosen as "Films of National Interest."

During 1946, 23 Spanish films were exhibited in Madrid.

"Cheyenne" Premiere Plans Completed by Warners

Ray Davis, northern district manager of Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres, returned to Denver Tuesday after conducting a meeting in Cheyenne in connection with the world premiere and the Rocky Mountain Empire Preview of Warners Brothers' picture, "Cheyenne," late next month. The meeting was attended by Jack McGee, city manager; Peter Faust, manager of the Lincoln theatre, where the world premiere will take place; Charles Wallace, manager of the Paramount theatre; Don Campbell, manager of the Princess theatre, and Abe Kronenberg and Richard Stephens of the Warner exploitation staff, who will work on the 100 or more previews to be held in that territory following the Cheyenne opening May 22.

Construction Is Expanding in Latin America

Washington Bureau

An expanding Latin American program for theatre construction is opening a wider market for U. S. films south of the Rio Grande, according to the Department of Commerce.

Despite shortage of materials, 1,545 new theatres were built in South and Central America and 150 in the Caribbean area between January 1, 1940 and January 1, 1947. Now that construction materials are reaching the market in greater quantities, the number of Latin American film houses is expected to increase even more sharply.

Mexico stands at the top of the list for recent theatre construction with 540 theatres erected during the seven years. Argentina follows with 339 recent theatre additions, Brazil with 190 and Venezuela with 164. There were 156 new theatres built in Colombia, 49 in Chile, 34 in Ecuador and 31 in Costa Rica.

The growth in Latin America in the seven years:

Cuba accounted for 110 of the 150 new theatres in the Caribbean area.

The growth of the Caribbean area in the seven years:

In the 21 Latin American countries January 1, 1947, there were 6,331 theatres with a total seating capacity for 4,398,321 persons. There were 659 theatres in the Caribbean area on that date, with a total seating capacity for 379,143 persons.

No figures are available for seating capacity on January 1, 1940, when there were 4,786 theatres in operation in Central and South America and 509 in the Caribbean area.

U. S. FILMS NOT CITED IN BRITISH BUDGET

London Bureau

Despite a savage increase in the customs duty on American tobacco, in view of Britain's diminishing dollar exchange, Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, made no reference to American motion pictures and offered no alteration of the entertainment tax when he presented a balanced British budget for 1947-48 to the House of Commons Tuesday. The tobacco duties were raised about 50 per cent, boosting the cost of a package of 20 cigarets from about 48 to 68 cents.

Jack Frye Named Chairman Of General Aniline Corp.

Jack Frye, former president of Trans World Airlines, has been elected chairman of the board of General Aniline and Film Corporation, parent organization of Ansco, Attorney General Tom Clark announced in Washington Monday. The company was seized as alien property at the beginning of the war and is 97 per cent owned by the United States.

Army Impatient on Future Of "Seeds of Destiny"

The future of the Army-produced Academy Award winner, "Seeds of Destiny," remained uncertain this week as War Department officials indicated they were getting impatient over the delay in getting general release for the picture. The Army was understood to be ready to release 35 and 16mm versions of the short to newsreels and narrow-gauge channels.

Last week also, three exhibitor groups, Allied States, the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners and the Conference of Independent Exhibitors Associations, "pocket-vetoed" a bid for their participation in the proposed coordinating committee.

Sol Lesser President Of Standard Theatres

Sol Lesser, the producer, adds exhibition to production with the formation of Standard Theatres, of which he is president. The new company will build and operate theatres on the West Coast where Mr. Lesser has already acquired sites in Burbank, Bellflower and Indio, Calif. Other sites are being negotiated. Mr. Lesser founded West Coast Theatres, later absorbed by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Maurice Bessy Coming

Maurice Bessy, editor of a French film trade paper, will visit this country and Latin America. He will arrive in New York April 26, going to Hollywood, Mexico City, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

Speed of British Loan Draft Seen Hitting Pictures

Washington Bureau

United States film exports to Great Britain may be in for stormy weather in the near future.

The fact is that Great Britain is drawing on her $3,750,000,000 loan at a much faster rate than anyone planned last summer when the loan was approved by Congress. Indications here are pretty plain, too, that she won't be able to get another loan. So it won't be very long before Labour Party leaders will have to decide whether Britain can go on using up the loan at the presently accelerated rate or whether it should tighten up on dollar imports. Presumably a decision in favor of the latter course would hit first tobacco and films—the two big so-called luxury imports.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD February 15, reported Great Britain spent $499,720,000 of her credit loan between July 1 and December 31, 1946. Greatest single item on the bill by far was $157,876,000 for tobacco. Motion pictures were fifth in the list of eight classifications for which the British paid American dollars. The financial record, as of that time, was:

Tobacco	$157,976,000
Food	119,691,000
Oil	62,062,000
Raw Material	56,420,000
Motion Pictures	35,464,000
Manufactured Goods	31,837,000
Machinery	22,165,000
Ships	14,105,000
Total	$499,720,000

Since the first of the year the British have withdrawn slightly more than $800,000,000, bringing the total withdrawal to date to some $1,300,000,000. Thus, with the loan little more than nine months old, one-third has been used. The original plan called for stretching the loan over three years.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder has declared that so far as he knows the British have "no application in mind" for another loan. This is undoubtedly letter-true, for all indications feelers were put out by Britain and that the American reply was that another loan would not possibly pass the Republican budget-minded Congress.

MGM Has Two New Ones, A Reprint for May

The new features are "High Barbaree," starring Van Johnson and June Allyson, and "Undercover Maisie," starring Ann Sothern with Barry Nelson. The reprint is "The Great Waltz," starring Luis Rainer.

BOYS' RANCH: Jackie Jenkins, James Craig—"Butch" is more popular here than Margaret O'Brien—they really came to see this picture. Good story and Butch is a great little star—everyone came out chuckling. Played Sunday-Monday, March 2-3.—David Bull, Lake Theatre, Howard Lake, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

BOYS' RANCH: Jackie Jenkins, James Craig—A natural for the small town. Outgrossed "Green Years." "Butch" was great and at last Metro gave Craig a chance, which he put over very well. Played Saturday-Sunday, March 1-2.—C. R. Jordan, Operahouse Theatre, Cogswell, N. D.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: "Lassie," Elizabeth Taylor—These animal pictures are more down-to-earth and appealing than the sophisticated comedies. The wild life is excellent, and Frank Morgan is good. COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, "Lassie"—Don't fail to play this one. One of the best pictures we have played to date, way outgrossing "Green Years" and "Boys' Ranch." After all, Metro has some nice product and sold at a price the small exhibitor can make some dough. Played Saturday-Sunday, March 29-30.—C. R. Jordan, Operahouse Theatre, Cogswell, N. D.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, "Lassie"—Another very fine picture which satisfies all the patrons. Give us more animal stories in Technicolor and our dispositions will improve. Played Thursday, Friday, Feb. 20, 21.—Mrs. Lula H. Ash, Hally Theatre, Dahlonga, Ga.

This is a popular series and first class entertainment for the whole family. Played Friday, March 28.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada.

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York 20.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Tom Drake, "Lassie"—A super picture for any town, and priced right. Lassie can sure pull them in. Keep them coming, MGM. Played March 9-10.—Henry Jakes, Hope Theatre, Hope, N. D.

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Tom Drake, "Lassie"—Very good. Patrons enjoyed it. Wonderful; some came to see it a second time. Dog or horse pictures go good here. Very good business. Played Sunday-Monday, January 26-27.—William F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

EASY TO WED: Van Johnson, Esther Williams—Fair business on this one. Put a little extra advertising on the duck hunting scene and it really paid out and brought down the house. Van, good as usual, and Esther, not too hard to look at. Played Saturday-Sunday, February 1-2.—C. R. Jordan, Operahouse Theatre, Cogswell, N. D.

GALLANT BESS: Marshall Thompson, "Bess"—A well made picture that deserves top billing. More of this type would boost box office sales. Business above average both nights. Played Sunday-Monday, March 30-31.—Jean Roberts, Huron Theatre, Pontiac, Mich.

THE GREEN YEARS: Charles Coburn-Tom Drake—Really did business with this one. Didn't think our little town would go for this but they ate it up and were satisfied. Played Saturday-Sunday, January 18-19.—C. R. Jordan, Operahouse Theatre, Cogswell, N. D.

HOLIDAY IN MEXICO: Walter Pidgeon, Ilona Massey—So what! The same old stuff. Folks out in the rural areas just won't go for this operatic stuff. It is pure poison. Business barely got us back our film rental and express. Played Sunday-Monday, March 23-24.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

THE HOODLUM SAINT: William Powell, Esther Williams—I think that this picture will draw in any small town. Both William Powell and Esther Williams are liked in this town. Something different from the Thin Man series of pictures, but good enough for midweek. Played Thursday-Friday, March 27-28.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Marie Wilson—Feature fair, but business below par for Johnson. Played Monday, Tuesday.—E. Dodge, Dodge Theatre, New Richmond, Ohio.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Marie Wilson—This was slightly disappointing. Johnson gave his weakest performance to date. Keenan Wynn looked too much like he was trying to steal Groucho Marx's stuff with the cigar. There were plenty of comical situations, but business was off. Played Sunday, Monday, March 23, 24.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif.

THE POSTMAN ALWAYS RINGS TWICE: Lana Turner, John Garfield—Was a little afraid to play this in December but with a nice Saturday Evening Post story and two swell stars did a good business and pleased everyone. Played Saturday-Sunday, December 7, 8.—C. R. Jordan, Operahouse Theatre, Cogswell, N. D.

THREE WISE FOOLS: Margaret O'Brien, Lionel Barrymore—Very good. Margaret stole the show in this one. Patrons liked it very well. Played Sunday, Monday, March 23, 24.—Wm. F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

TILL THE CLOUDS ROLL BY: Robert Walker, Judy Garland—It's tops in entertainment. I call it a great picture, but grosses were not up above average. We had bad weather, which hurt some. Played Sunday, March 23.—Logan Hedrick, Homer Theatre, Homer, Ill.

Monogram

COME OUT FIGHTING: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall—Doubled with "Wild Beauty"; result very satisfactory. Played Friday, Saturday, April 4, 5.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario.

Paramount

BLUE SKIES: Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire—This is a beautiful, satisfying picture. Enables us to look the patron square in the face as he comes out. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 10, 11.—Mrs. Lula H. Ash, Hally Theatre, Dahlonga, Ga. College and rural patronage.

BLUE SKIES: Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire—This show needed a little bit more "Billy DeWolfe." We had good crowds both nights. A very good show, and should run good anywhere. All of my fans enjoyed it and want some more just like it. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 19, 20.—Mrs. Dan H. Hubbard, Rio Theatre, Pearsall, Texas.

JUNGLE PRINCESS: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Doubled with a Western to excellent business. A few more like this and we will be able to pay an income tax once more. Print was rather bad. Played Friday, Saturday, March 6, 7.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

MISS SUSIE SLAGLE'S: Sonny Tufts, Veronica Lake—This is adult entertainment. Plot very slow. Played this very late; would not recommend it for a small town; no music and no action. Played Tuesday, April 1.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE: Bob Hope—Business was just as bad as we expected it would be and that was pretty bad. This one really hurt Bob Hope. Can't the producers see the light on these costume pictures? Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE: Bob Hope, Joan Caulfield—Don't play this if you don't have it booked so that it can't be taken out. Would not even be good for double feature material. It hardly made rental costs on picture. It's a pity that Bob Hope has to play a part like this. Played Sunday, Monday, March 23, 24.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

O.S.S.: Alan Ladd, Geraldine Fitzgerald—When I counted the receipts I said, "O.S.S." is very bad—no business at all. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 19, 20.—Logan Hedrick, Homer Theatre, Homer, Ill.

THE PLAINSMAN: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Good business for midweek on this old Western. If you have an action town, play this by all means. It will beat most of the new "A" product. Played Tuesday-Thursday, March 18-20.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

TWO YEARS BEFORE THE MAST: Alan Ladd, Brian Donlevy—Business above average. Ladd is popular here. Played Tuesday-Thursday, April 2-4.—Jean Roberts, Huron Theatre, Pontiac, Mich.

SEARCHING WIND: Robert Young—Business pathetic. This one has no small-town draw at all. Played Tuesday-Thursday, March 4-6.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

PRC Pictures

COLORADO SERENADE: Eddie Dean, Roscoe Ates—David Sharpe stole the show. Would like to see more of him. Swell Western show in color. Flu stumped it at the box office. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

THE DEVIL ON WHEELS: Damian O'Flynn, Lenita Lane—Sell this one from the fact that it was recently voted the picture of the month by Parent's Magazine and you will do all right. It did almost outstanding business and was fully liked and appreciated by a whale of a lot of customers. My rural customers went for it in a big way and there was more comment on it than any picture I had played for a long time. Played Saturday, March 22.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

DOWN MISSOURI WAY: John Carradine—I bought this one because of the title and I am sorry to have to admit it, but it is a genuine dud. No story, plot, cast or anything else. Plenty of walkouts on this one. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 4, 5.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

MEET THE NAVY: Oscar Naske—A nice picture for Canadian audiences. I believe, generally speaking, this picture has been doing O.K. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 31, April 1.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario.

QUEEN OF BURLESQUE: Evelyn Ankers, Carleton Young—The name brought them in, but they left the theatre disappointed. Miss La Rose had a swell act in the picture. Played Friday, Saturday, March 28, 29.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

Republic

DAYS OF BUFFALO BILL: Sunset Carson—One of the worst pictures I have seen Sunset Carson in and was not so well liked in this small town. Will have to do better than this if Carson is ever a good draw in this town. Played Saturday, March 15.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

HITCHHIKE TO HAPPINESS: Al Pierce—Terrible. If you can get away from playing it, don't. One redeeming feature, we didn't have to run two shows, as they all walked out by the time the second show was half over. Print was as terrible as the show. And they have the nerve to sell it at top bracket prices. Still have a headache. Played Saturday, Sunday, Jan. 4, 5.—C. R. Jordan, Operahouse Theatre, Cogswell, N. D.

RKO Radio

BADMAN'S TERRITORY: Randolph Scott, Ann Richards—One of the best pictures at the box office I have had since the war. Played Sunday and Monday. Just the picture for my town or small town patronage. Played March 2, 3.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

CORNERED: Dick Powell—Patrons did not go for this picture although well acted and good plot. No good for small town. Business below average. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Jan. 29, 30.—Wm. F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

CRACK-UP: Pat O'Brien, Claire Trevor—O'Brien is dropping fast. I believe he should go back to Warners and make a feature worthy of his acting ability. This feature had no draw—nor was it liked. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 25, 26.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

FROM THIS DAY FORWARD: Joan Fontaine, Mark Stevens—This being a small town with rural patronage, I almost pulled this one out to keep from starving to death after the first afternoon. It is very slow, the plot is weak and is almost entirely dependent on star value and acting to keep it from being a total flop. Patrons come out of this wondering what it was all about and if you are stuck and have to play it in a small town such as this be sure and advertise to see it from the beginning. Entirely too many cutbacks. Played Sunday, Monday, March 23, 24.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

HEARTBEAT: Ginger Rogers, Jeanne Pierre Aumont—This may cause some theatres to have a heart-beat but in mine this one is a deadbeat. It turned in the poorest Thursday-Friday business that I have had in some time. It is definitely not a picture for a small town which depends upon rural patronage to keep the doors open. Ginger Rogers is far from being up to par in this so-called good picture. Played Thursday, Friday, March 28, 29.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE: James Stewart, Donna Reed—After seeing this one men and women alike will come out thinking that it is a wonderful life. Stewart in his first picture since the war does a really marvelous job. The whole supporting cast from beginning to end is very good also. If we could all depend on having more pictures of this caliber and get a halfway decent deal with good playdates we could quit some of the squawking and play fewer and better pictures. Played Sunday-Tuesday, March 23-25.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

NOCTURNE: George Raft, Lynn Bari—Raft is a "used-to-be" around here. Not worth the price I paid for it, nor the "A" time I gave it. Played Sunday, Monday, March 23, 24.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

SONG OF THE SOUTH: Bobby Driscoll, Luana Patten—Played to house capacity for 14 shows, two

Department Is Pot-Bellied Stove In Village Store—Worldwide

Harland Rankin, president of the Rankin Enterprises, Catham, Ont., has contributed so frequently to the What the Picture Did for Me department that his name is known as far afield as Holland. Several months ago a Dutch exhibitor, C. J. D. Meerstadt of De Steeg, read Mr. Rankin's comments and was moved to write him. That correspondence has now reached the stage where they are exchanging packages of food and tulip bulbs, and a genuine friendship has developed. "So you see," wrote Mr. Rankin to the HERALD this week, "your column is popular and I feel fellow exhibitors should give a little of their time to it." Mr. Meerstadt's latest letter to Mr. Rankin, in part, follows:

"Close to the stove I am writing you this letter, because a Russian wind is blowing through the Low Countries. It is about 10 degrees below zero with a kind of blizzard knocking at the windows. Although I still have my cinema, I have gone back to work as a chemical analyst in the concrete factory. On one side I am an employee; on the other side I am independent.

In your last letter you wrote that it was your intention to send me a box. I'll give you a list of the things we get on our coupons: Bread, 2,000 grams; meat, 250 grams; cheese, 100 grams, etc. It is meant for one week. You see it is not too much, but it is enough and I do not think it necessary that you send me canned goods. There are people in the world who need it more. You can do me a great favor, though: Mrs. Meerstadt is in great need of some nutmegs.

I just contracted for nine pictures from the Motion Picture Export Association: a Tarzan picture, 'How Green Was My Valley', 'Reap the Wild Wind', etc."

of which were for High and Grammar School students. A picture which is entertainment for parents and children. Don't fail to play it. Played Monday-Wednesday, Feb. 17-19.—Mrs. Lula H. Ash, Hally Theatre, Dahlonega, Ga.

THE STRANGER: Orson Welles, Loretta Young—Emotional drama that failed to draw. Our customers need something to take their minds off their troubles. Business below average—both nights. Played Sunday, Monday, March 22, 23.—Jean Roberts, Huron Theatre, Pontiac, Mich.

SUNSET PASS: James Warren, Nan Leslie—Zane Grey's pictures are always welcome here. This wasn't up to the previous ones but it satisfied. Doubled with "Gallant Bess" and a bang-up show. Business above average both nights. Played Sunday, Monday, March 30, 31.—Jean Roberts, Huron Theatre, Pontiac, Mich.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD WOMAN: Johnny Weissmuller, Brenda Joyce—Had competition both nights on this picture, basketball game first night and school play second, but you can't go wrong on this one for small town and rural population. Everyone liked it. Played Thursday, Friday, March 13, 14.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

WITHOUT RESERVATIONS: Claudette Colbert, John Wayne—Lots of laughs with plenty of comedy scenes take the taste out of the people's mouths since they can forget that as far as story value, there just isn't any. It's just a mad chase from one coast to the other that could happen to anyone at sometime or another in his life. Just fair business here. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 9, 10.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

Screen Guild

BOHEMIAN GIRL: Laurel and Hardy—Doubled with Western to excellent business. Pretty old but it has the stuff to get young and old in. Our formula for Friday-Saturday business: Nonsense without romance, and solid action with a little Western music added. A few good names always help. Played March 21, 22.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—A picture that was liked by young and old alike. Did good business both days. Just wish there were more made like it. The only way that it could have been better is to have been made in Technicolor. Can't miss on this one. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—Very good. Very good business. Patrons liked it and came again to see it. Played "Shadow's Over Chinatown" with it. Played Friday, Saturday, March 20, 21.—Wm. F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—Am naming Highland Dale as the star as am sure that's what brought them in both nights to see this one. Business way above average. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—David Bull, Lake Theatre, Howard Lake, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—Play this one on a night that the children are able to attend; a natural for suburban and small town situations. Played Thursday, Friday.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—A fair picture. Did not draw as well as other animal pictures in color. Wonder why they must always put horror into such pictures, which makes little children unhappy. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 31, April 1.—Mrs. Lula H. Ash, Hally Theatre, Dahlonega, Ga. College and rural patronage.

CENTENNIAL SUMMER: Jeanne Crain, Cornel Wilde—There was a time when these Technicolor musicals would do some business, but that time has passed. The story in most of them is bad! Poor business. Played Sunday-Tuesday, March 9-11.—Carl M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

CENTENNIAL SUMMER: Jeanne Crain, Cornel Wilde—Another picture which builds the morale of the small town exhibitor and pays off at the box office, too. Played Thursday, Friday, March 27, 28.—Mrs. Lula H. Ash, Hally Theatre, Dahlonega, Ga. College and rural patronage.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young—We didn't think business could drop to such a low! Here is one to stay away from. We paid just twice as much as we could afford for this. Played Tuesday-Thursday, March 25-27.—C. M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

CLAUDIA AND DAVID: Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young—Good comedy, but storm held back attendance. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—Wm. F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

CLUNY BROWN: Charles Boyer, Jennifer Jones—Boyer not up to par in this one. He does not take in this town. Well acted, but something seemed to be lacking to put it across. No good for small towns. Played Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 5, 6.—Wm. F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—This was just another disappointment; no draw and very poor reaction. Good only for second spot on double bill. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 26, 27.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Perry Como, Harry James—Had several walkouts on this one and would have done the same myself had I been free to do so. For either small or large town, would shy away from this one if possible. Played March 9, 10.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

MARGIE: Jeanne Crain, Alan Young—Should do well in any type of theatre.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—Did a fair business. Good story, well acted, but did not take too good here. Played Sunday, Monday, Feb. 2, 3.—Wm. F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—This is without a doubt the biggest overrated Western that has been released this or any other year. Henry Fonda as Wyatt Earp is about as idiotic as Mickey Mouse in that part. Any cheap Western has this picture cheated from every standpoint. The few that saw this couldn't make up their minds whether they liked it or not. Played Sunday, Monday, March 30, 31.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

SOMEWHERE IN THE NIGHT: John Hodiak, Nancy Guild—Better than we hoped for. Expected this to be at the bottom but did average business. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 12, 13.—Carl M. Hulbert, Gem Theatre, Cornell, Wis.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE: June Haver, Vivian Blaine—Very entertaining and did very well at the box office; beautiful color. Played Sunday, Monday, March 30, April 1.—Logan Hedrick, Homer Theatre, Homer, Ill.

WAKE UP AND DREAM: June Haver, John Payne—The expectations of a great show were numerous before our fans saw it. Everyone was disappointed. There definitely was not enough John Payne in it. Don't get me wrong, June Haver is swell, but my fans did want to see John Payne. It was no success, in my opinion. Played Sunday, Monday, March 30, 31.—Mrs. Dan H. Hubbard, Dio Theatre, Pearsall, Texas.

United Artists

CAESAR AND CLEOPATRA: Claude Rains, Vivien Leigh—The world is moving too fast for this type of picture. Needless to say that it was not supported, although it is another picture that much money was spent on. United Artists will never get their investment back if it does not do any more business than it grossed here.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

SUNDOWN: Gene Tierney, Bruce Cabot—Outstanding cast makes this natural for repeat.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Universal

THE DARK HORSE: Phillip Terry, Ann Savage—What they waste perfectly good film on pictures like this for is still beyond me. We had people walk out on this one even when they went in on two-for-one admissions. Played Wednesday, March 26.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

HER ADVENTUROUS NIGHT: Dennis O'Keefe, Helen Walker—It is getting very bad when you can't even give these pictures away at two-for-one admissions, and on a double bill, too. I am absolutely ashamed to take the people's half rate tickets when I have to offer or try to get them into seeing this kind of film. Played Thursday, Friday, March 20, 21.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

INSIDE JOB: Preston Foster, Ann Rutherford—Used on weekend double bill. The little boy was the only bright spot. Played Friday, Saturday, March 28, 29.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif.

MURDER IN THE MUSIC HALL: Vera Hrubá Ralston, William Marshal—Not so good. You will feel like murdering someone too when you see your nightly receipts. Played Wednesday, Thursday, April 2, 3.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario.

SO GOES MY LOVE: Myrna Loy, Don Ameche—They tried hard to be funny, but it just proved to be an average feature with very little drawing power. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

TEMPTATION: Merle Oberon, George Brent—Business very poor on this one.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

WHITE TIE AND TAILS: Dan Duryea, Ella Raines—One of Universal's best. Wish I had advertised it more. It was made to order for my customers. Business, however, below average. Played Sunday, Monday, March 22, 23.—Jean Robert, Huron Theatre, Pontiac, Mich.

WILD BEAUTY: Don Porter, Lois Collier—O.K.; well satisfied—business good. Played Friday, Saturday, April 4, 5.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario.

WILD BEAUTY: Don Porter, Lois Collier—Used on weekend double bill to fair business. Picture inclined to be slightly below par even for Universal. Played Friday, Saturday, March 28, 29.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif.

Warner Bros.

HUMORESQUE: Joan Crawford, John Garfield—

Strictly for the carriage trade. Played Monday, Tuesday.—E. Dodge, Dodge Theatre, New Richmond, Ohio.

JANIE: Bob Hutton, Joyce Reynolds—Swell show that didn't bring them in the second time. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 18, 19.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

MY REPUTATION: Barbara Stanwyck, George Brent—Feature well made, but very poor business. Played Tuesday, Wednesday.—Elstun Dodge, Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio.

NOBODY LIVES FOREVER: John Garfield, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Swell show that failed to draw in enough to meet expenses. The flu epidemic has affected business terribly. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

ONE MORE TOMORROW: Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan—I like this one very much but it flopped because I couldn't sell the idea to too many customers. Undoubtedly a class picture to some extent. It can go good in some situations, but in a theatre which caters to rural patronage almost entirely, it isn't worth much. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—Harold J. Johnson, Elberta Theatre, Palisade, Colo.

SAN ANTONIO: Errol Flynn, Alexis Smith—Did fairly well on repeat date.—E. Dodge, Dodge Theatre, New Richmond, Ohio.

SAN ANTONIO: Errol Flynn, Alexis Smith—A nice picture in Technicolor but flopped due to the weather. Had a blizzard the first night with 10 below and the second night fair, but 30 below zero. Played Saturday, Sunday, Dec. 28, 29.—C. R. Jordan, Operahouse Theatre, Cogswell, N. D.

SARATOGA TRUNK: Ingrid Bergman, Gary Cooper—Not enough action for a small town. Played Sunday, Monday, March 30, 31.—C. C. Green, Gem Theatre, Lodge Grass, Mont.

VERDICT, THE: Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre—No draw at all. Must it always be Scotland Yard? Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 11, 12.—Ralph Raspa, State Theatre, Rivesville, W. Va.

Short Subjects

Columbia

BOOBY DUPER: Three Stooges—Stooges always go over big here.—Wm. F. Deuty, Capitol Theatre, Parish, N. Y.

SPOOK TO ME: Andy Clyde—A good two-reel subject and will be enjoyed by both young and old alike. I believe will go with any program.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BODYGUARD, THE: Cartoon—This one had whiskers on it. Poor print, old as the hills, every theatre in the country has played it, so no comment.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask.

THE HICK CHICK: Technicolor Cartoons—One of the best color cartoons that I have ever played.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

Paramount

CHICK AND DOUBLE CHICK: Little Lulu Cartoon—Very good colored cartoon. Play it.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask.

COLLEGE QUEEN: Musical Parade Featurette—Colored musical, enjoyed by the youngsters.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask.

RKO Radio

BWARE OF RED HEADS: Leon Errol—Typical Errol, wife trouble, will do for filling out program; not even up to standard in my estimation.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

FLICKER FLASHBACK:—In my estimation the poorest short material that you can get. Stay away from this if you have other material.—Thurman A. Shillings, Pastime Theatre, Danville, Ark.

Columbia Sets Dividend

Industry to Aid Edison Drive

Industry-wide participation in the $2,590,000 Thomas Alva Edison Foundation campaign to further his ideals in research and education as tribute to the inventor was announced last Wednesday at a luncheon at the Plaza Hotel in New York by Major General Edward P. Curtis, vice-president of Eastman Kodak and chairman of the campaign's motion picture section.

The motion picture industry's quota in the drive has been set at $400,000, of which one quarter of this sum will be provided by talent.

In outlining the Foundation's program, General Curtis said: "If ever an individual can be called the founder of the motion picture industry, Edison is that man. All of the great amount of commercial work that has been accomplished in the motion picture field has been realized through the use of Edison's basic apparatus and methods licensed under his patents."

Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., president of Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, is national chairman of the campaign.

FCC Grants Television and FM Licenses to Four

The Federal Communication Commission this week issued television construction permits to four New York applicants and assigned the necessary channels. Two applications, WEVD and the Debs Memorial Fund, were denied. Those who received the green light are: American Broadcasting Company, channel 7; The New York Daily News, channel 11; the Bamberger Broadcasting System, WOR, channel 9; and a Newark company, channel 13. In addition, several companies which had applied for FM licenses, were granted these permits also. First reaction came from Mark Woods, president of ABC, who expressed gratification at the commission's action. ABC already holds television licenses in Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

James Nasser Buys General Service

"Iron Curtain" Filed in 1946

For the record, Jack Warner announced that Warner Brothers had registered the title of "The Iron Curtain" with the Motion Picture Association's Title Bureau on January 7, 1946. Following Mr. Warner's announcement last week that he would use that title for a picture on Russian espionage, there have been other announcements of similar titles.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

Q Ted Baldwin, promotion manager for Selznick Releasing Corporation, was one of 16 publicists from all fields of endeavor to receive an Award for meritorious public relations performances at the second annual luncheon of the American Public Relations Association in New York last week. Mr. Baldwin was cited for his promotional activities on "Duel in the Sun."

Last Spring, while we were entertaining the 1945 Quigley Awards winners in New York, Mr. Baldwin invited us to be his guests at a major league baseball game. Before game time, the enterprising exploiter had us pasting "Duel in the Sun" stickers all over the grandstand. Of such stuff are top-notch publicists made.

Q Through the good offices of F. Reynolds, manager for 20th Century-Fox in Geneva, Switzerland, we have received the first campaign to reach the Quigley awards from that country since before the war.

Entered in behalf of J. Ragazzi, manager of the Scala theatre, Biel, the campaign denotes a high degree of skill and ingenuity comparable with our showmen here at home. Mr. Ragazzi's promotion will be reported in a later issue.

Q Gene Hudgens, manager of the Home theatre in Oklahoma City, Okla., this week became the custodian of a hen, age one year, in connection with his engagement of "The Egg and I." The hen is called Betty MacDonald for press agent reasons, the name being the same as the authoress of the best-selling book. Betty, the property of Ruby Bell, an employee of the Universal-International Oklahoma City exchange, was given the run of the theatre for the playdate of the picture, with an usher assigned to

THE SAFE ROAD

G. RALPH BRANTON, general manager of the Tri-States theatres, from company headquarters in Des Moines, Ia., recently announced an outstanding post-war public relations undertaking which should net his organization benefits in publicity and good-will.

The circuit is offering $1,000 cash to the town where its theatres are located which does the best safety job. Aimed directly at helping to reduce accident fatalities, the safety campaign is proving productive in gaining support from the press and public officials, with the Iowa State Junior Chamber of Commerce taking a leading part in fostering the campaign.

In addition to publicizing the drive in and around the theatres, in many towns courteous drivers are being presented with theatre guest tickets. Violators receive courtesy letters calling attention to their misdemeanors.

Public reaction as well as statements from the state safety council and local authorities have been extremely favorable. The device has the added purpose of letting the public know that the theatres are an important and contributing influence in the community welfare.

Tri-States is to be congratulated for taking the initiative in helping to vitalize theatre relations with the public.

—CHESTER FRIEDMAN

her as personal maid, and with a bed in Hudgens' office. The hen will travel all over the country in the interests of "The Egg and I."

Q P. E. McCoy, The Georgia crack showman in Augusta, has a penchant for doing the unusual. Just let yo-yos come into fad, a cartoon character gain unprecedented publicity, and he is generally the first to organize a competition among his juvenile patrons.

While theatre managers were sweating it out during Holy Week and hoping for a break to keep grosses at average level, Mr. McCoy was entertaining capacity audiences at the Modjeska theatre. The attraction was merely a bubble-gum blowing contest sponsored by radio station WRDW with cooperation from the city recreation department, the mayor and the Augusta Chronicle.

On the screen, the audience welcomed back an old favorite, Gene Autry. At evening performances, the grownups vied for the title of "Local Gene Autry Guitar Player Champion"—in costume.

Q For the second time since Christmas, Warner theatre managers in Erie, Pa., were able to promote a 1947 Chevrolet as a giveaway during the lax Lenten season. Ken Grimes, manager of the Warner theatre; Milford Parke, manager of the Strand, and Henry Rastetter of the Columbia were the energetic showmen who each came up with two sponsors to carry the cost of the promotion.

Q Over in England, manager A. H. Stobie of the Gaumont Cinema, Chadwell Heath, includes a Safety First song each week in his community singing. This is another method added to those which other Gaumont British Junior Club leaders have instituted to impress Safety First into the minds of children. In this connection, manager Stobie pointed out that many popular tunes have parodies on road safety.

A BULLY BALLYHOO

IN KOBE, JAPAN, the opening of "The Bull Fighters" was exploited appropriately enough by hiring this bull from a local zoo. Covered with brightly colored bunting and signboards, the bovine was led through the city streets by a friendly toreador. Charlie Mayer, managing director for Motion Picture Export Association, thought up the device.

Smelling salts passed out by an usherette garbed as a nurse helped to push business above average for Jack Randall, manager of the Strand, Vancouver, for "Beast With Five Fingers".

Ted Davidson, manager of the Sigma theatre in Lima, Ohio, had this gaudily dressed ballyhoo boy covering the downtown section on "Ladies' Man".

To exploit "The Showoff", Sid Kleper, manager of the Poli-College in New Haven, Conn., used this novel ballyhoo.

This unique lobby setpiece helped publicize "Blue Skies" for manager Preston Swan at the Elephant Cinema, Shawlands, in Glasgow, Scotland. Life-size cut-out figure of a painter gave realistic touch.

A Conestoga covered wagon of the period 1798, borrowed from the county, proved a strong attention getter for manager Charles Eagle at the Stanley in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Part of J. G. Samartano's campaign on "The Beginning or the End" was a tie-up with a Studebaker dealer providing for a 1947 model car to be driven about with prominent picture credit.

The Selling Approach

ON NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects pressbooks now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiters on selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

IT HAPPENED IN BROOKLYN (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer): Anything can happen in Brooklyn! And it generally does! The Brooklyn Dodgers and sport fans have made Brooklyn synonymous throughout the country, with everything that is wacky, unconventional and hilarious. So, though neither the team nor the fans appear in the picture, the title, nevertheless, presents the opportunity for goofy exploitation.

For display purposes, use enlargements of singing heads of the stars of the picture, Frank Sinatra, Kathryn Grayson and Jimmy Durante. Enclose them in music notes for musical emphasis. Amplify song hits over the public address system or play records on a hidden lobby victrola. Durante and the title make a perfect medium for newspaper, radio or theatre contest seeking funny title limericks or flip wisecracks.

Have a man parade the streets with a barrel strapped to him. Copy reads: "Don't ask me! 'It Happened in Brooklyn', a barrel of fun, music and romance." Construct a lobby disc for free spinning. Letter on it various cities in the United States. When the arrow stops on Brooklyn, present the winner with a guest ticket. Place tie-in signs on all juke boxes and contact disc jockeys to play old or new Sinatra, Grayson and Durante records.

THE IMPERFECT LADY (Paramount): The story here concerns a woman whose reputation is caught in a net of circumstantial evidence against her. The picture stars Ray Milland, winner of an Academy Award for his performance in "The Lost Weekend", and Teresa Wright, who appears in last year's Academy Award winning picture, "The Best Years of Our Lives". Play up the Academy Award angle.

The title lends itself to a series of teaser ads in the personal columns of the local newspaper. A typical teaser ad could read: "WANTED — 'The Imperfect Lady' to present her testimony and save the life of an innocent man. Gem theatre." Plant the following question with your newspaper's inquiring reporter or radio station man-in-the street broadcaster: "Should a wife tell her husband about her past, as Teresa Wright wanted to do in 'The Imperfect Lady'?"

Suggest to department store or ladies' shop that they dress up a dummy in an outfit they are interested in pushing. The dummy's costume should be perfect, except for one or two small discrepancies, which the ladies would not consider stylish, such as a brown handbag with a blue dress. Copy could read: "Prizes! If you can tell why this is 'The Imperfect Lady'."

Heavy Newspaper Publicity Marks Havana Opening

Highlighting the campaign for the opening of "Sister Kenny" at the America theatre in Havana, Cuba, were two promotional ventures that garnered a wealth of newspaper space and plenty of radio comment. The campaign was arranged by manager Jose Valcarce.

A contest arranged for the rotogravure section of Diario de la Marina, Havana's leading daily newspaper, drew several thousand letters. The picture's illustrated story was published in three parts with contestants required to cut out each of the three chapters and mail them to the theatre. Free tickets were awarded for the first 100 entries received.

The second promotion was a special screening for all licensed nurses. The nurses were required to wear their regular uniforms. Dr. Pedro Noguiera, director of Health and Sanitation, represented the Minister of Health at the screening. Stories and pictures of this event appeared in all the local newspapers.

Teaser Ads and Cards Aid Date on "Miss Pilgrim"

A teaser campaign was used by manager Tom Wolf for "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" at the State theatre, Bellevue, Ohio. 1,000 "Job Wanted" cards were distributed at the theatre and mailed to leading business men. The cards also carried a photo of Betty Grable, star of the picture. In theatre ads, the appearance of Dick Haymes in the picture was tied-in with the catch-phrase "Open the Door, Richard." Copy read: "Look, folks! Richard's going to open the door so you can see what 'The Shocking Miss Pilgrim' did."

Boy Parades Streets with Sign for "Bedelia"

A boy paraded the streets with a 12-foot sign to exploit the engagement of "Bedelia" at the Paramount theatre, Fremont, Ohio. 1,000 wall paper novelty throwaways were passed out to people in the downtown area. 1,000 no cost movie news sheets were distributed and 200 mailed to surrounding towns. 1,000 large grocery bags were imprinted for a leading super-market. Ten 11x14 hand painted teaser cards were placed in downtown windows and in barber shops. The campaign was arranged by manager Dick Peffley.

Balloons Exploit "Clouds"

Manager George Light had 250 balloons with tags attached released from an airplane over the city to exploit "Till the Clouds Roll By" at the Maryland theatre, Cumberland, Md. Fifty of the balloons contained guest tickets to the opening of the picture.

Institutionalizing the Vogue theatre in Brooklyn as a showplace for foreign films, Ed Schreiber, publicity director for the Century circuit, devised a series of special newspaper ads for the New York dailies which feature the tag line, "In Brooklyn it's the Vogue."

Teaser Campaign Draws Public to "Two Worlds"

An impressive campaign was arranged by manager R. Raistrick to exploit his engagement of "Men of Two Worlds" at the Empire Cinema, Glossop, Derbyshire, England. Glossop is a small backwoods town which still retains a unique country town atmosphere and where the people are usually unresponsive to theatre exploitation.

Raistrick created an interest in the picture, which set a new house record, by starting off with a teaser campaign based on the query "What Is a Magöle?" (witch doctor in the picture). Cards with the query on one side and the playdate of the picture on the other side were distributed through two local laundries, four grocery stores, two bus companies and five hotels.

The distribution of 3,500 large-size heralds and 2,000 book marks also helped to stir up considerable interest in the playdate as it marked the first time either heralds or bookmarks had been used in Glossop to exploit a picture.

Phonograph Used in Lobby For "Clouds Roll By"

A recording machine was promoted from Davega's and used in the lobby for five days in advance by manager Michael Stranger to exploit "Till the Clouds Roll By" at the State theatre, White Plains, N. Y. A large blowup of Judy Garland, star of the picture, was mounted alongside the recorder, with appropriate playdate copy. Five Westchester County newspapers used scene mats from the picture.

SETS UNUSUAL BANK TIEUP IN NEW YORK

In a unique tieup with the Knickerbocker Federal Savings Bank, in the heart of busy Manhattan, $100 was promoted for contest prizes in connection with the opening of "It's a Wonderful Life" at the RKO 58th Street theatre, New York. The promotion consisted of a letter writing contest on why the contestant thought it a wonderful life. The bank used a window to exploit the competition and endorse the picture. The window, which also featured cut-outs of Jimmy Stewart and Donna Reed, earned a good deal of attention and favorable comment. The tieup was arranged by manager Al Arnstein and RKO publicists Pat Grosso and Ray Malone.

Tune Contest Aids "Pursued"

A mystery tune contest over a local radio station resulted in a full week of radio plugs for the engagement of "Pursued" at the Grand theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. Manager Walter Ahrens made the tieup with a record program on which the line, "Pursue the tunes and see 'Pursued,'" was repeatedly used. Guest tickets were awarded to contestants turning in correct answers on the tunes played.

Gets Press Break for "Glory"

Manager Claude Hunter obtained a publicity break in the Kingston Whig Standard for his engagement of "Theirs Is the Glory" at the Odeon theatre, Kingston, Ont. The reporter had attended a special screening of the picture.

Vogel Promotes Co-Op, Stories For "Lake"

Considerable press breaks, including a cooperative ad which appeared in two local newspapers, were promoted by manager Cecil E. Vogel for the playdate of "Lady in the Lake" at the Palace theatre, Memphis, Tenn.

The co-op ad was set with Memphis Steam Laundry and appeared in the Commercial Appeal and Press Scimitar. Advance stories also were planted in the two mentioned newspapers and in the Daily News. Teaser ads were used three weeks in advance.

Twenty-five 24-sheets were posted around town. Ten thousand paper napkins were distributed to drive-in restaurants. Five thousand heralds were placed in parked cars. Three thousand book marks were passed out to the public library. Lobby displays were arranged in seven leading hotels.

Numbered Postcards Used To Exploit "Bedelia"

Serially numbered pictorial postcards were mailed to 150 selected names by manager Paul O. Klingler to exploit his date of "Bedelia" at the Strand theatre, Waterbury, Conn. A note was included, stating that if the number of the card corresponded with a list of (25) numbers posted in the lobby the holder and a guest would be admitted free to see the picture. Six thousand imprinted paper napkins were distributed to soda fountains and cafeteria counters throughout the city. A huge sign was placed in the center of Woolworth's book department.

PROMOTING TARZAN ON THREE CONTINENTS

From widely separated points of the globe, showmen direct their ballyhoo ideas to exploiting the popular "Tarzan" series of films. At left, Miss Lily Watt, manager of the Florida Cinema, King's Park, in Glasgow, Scotland, tied up with the local zoo for this lavish promotion. Center, in Singapore, J. Soon, manager of the Albambra, used this atmospheric front for his date on "Tarzan's Desert Mystery." At right, an atmospheric front, including converted boxoffice simulating a jungle hut, devised by manager Howard Higley for the RKO Allen theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, created the effect for "Tarzan and the Huntress".

Brown Promotes Story Contest In Cardiff

A favorite story contest highlighted the campaign arranged by manager A. J. Brown to promote "The Jolson Story" at the Empire theatre, Cardiff, Wales. Over 300 entries were received from Cardiff and many surrounding towns.

The contest aroused a great deal of interest and caused a lot of amusement among audiences both during play week and a week in advance when samples of stories received were read during a special "Jolson Story" piano and organ interlude. Contestants who submitted the three best stories received cash awards.

The contest was publicized in all newspapers in Cardiff and surrounding areas, by heralds and the monthly programs. Tieups were arranged with four of the leading dance halls in Cardiff and district. The halls ran "Jolson Story" news in their advertising at no cost to the theatre. Sheet music from the picture was supplied to the orchestra at Carlton Restaurant. Window displays were promoted with nine local merchants.

Furniture Store Tieup Aids "Rendezvous 24"

A tieup with a furniture store highlighted manager Jack Campbell's play date of "Rendezvous 24" at the Scala theatre, Runcorn, Cheshire, England. A display of furniture was arranged in the lobby and in the merchant's showroom. Cards alongside the display read: "Make your 'Rendezvous 24' with Woodhouses of 24 Church Street, Runcorn, 24 months to pay, to obtain all the latest and up-to-date high class furniture. Make your 'Rendezvous 24' at the Scala theatre, etc." Teaser cards also were distributed.

Twin Contest Arranged by Foley for "Irish Rose"

A twin contest heralded the opening of "Abie's Irish Rose" at the Strand Theatre, Manchester, N. H. Stories on the contest, open to kids from two to 14 years of age, broke in both the Union and Leader. The promotion was tied in with the twins appearing in the picture. The awards were a set of commercial photographs for first prize, monthly passes to all Shea theatres for second prize and a monthly pass to the Strand theatre for third prize. Manager Ed Foley arranged the campaign.

Promotes Newspaper Breaks

Several newspaper breaks were obtained by manager Millard Ochs for a Bugs Bunny drawing contest held in connection with a birthday celebration for the cartoon character at the Strand theatre, Akron, Ohio. Ochs also promoted a bicycle from Gassy's Auto Store for the first prize in the competition.

E. C. Callow Sets Campaign Aimed At Club Women

A campaign aimed at 50,000 club women in Philadelphia and an additional 20,000 in the suburban areas was arranged for the opening of "Stairway to Heaven" at the Boyd theatre there. The campaign was directed by Everett C. Callow, advertising director for Warner theatres in Philadelphia.

A series of special screenings was held for board of governors and club presidents of the women's organizations. They in turn mailed out 10,000 cards, which read in part: "I have just had the motion picture experience of my life! It was my privilege to attend a private screening of 'Stairway to Heaven,' which is not only an extraordinarily good motion picture, but is also advanced in every phase of production."

The cards concluded: "I am sure you will want to see 'Stairway to Heaven.'"

Ties-up With Night Club For Singing Contest

Through a tieup with a local night club-restaurant a girl singing contest was promoted by manager Ansel Winston at the RKO Coliseum theatre, New York, N. Y. The contest is held each Tuesday night with the winning girl being given a week's engagement at Joyce's Manor for which she is paid $50. The night club also runs a weekly cooperative ad in the Bronx Home News, displays signs and uses spot announcements several times each evening over the public address system to publicize the contest tieup.

Promotes Radio Tieup for "Dorseys" in Reading

A tieup was promoted with a popular local radio talent show to exploit "The Fabulous Dorseys" at the Colonial theatre, Reading, Pa. Manager Larry Levy set the tieup with "Dr. Saul's Teen Age Variety Show" heard over WRAW. The most talented musical brothers were selected by audience write-in vote. The program is sponsored by an optical company, which ran a cooperative newspaper ad in advance and used a window display to promote the contest. In addition, Levy promoted two-co-op ads with the Zeswitz Music House.

MIMIC IN BLACKFACE DRAWS BIG CROWDS

Hundreds of passersby were attracted to a repertoire of "The Jolson Story" music apparently sung by a blackface song and dance man in front of the Highland theatre, Los Angeles, Calif. The minstrel was a mimic and performed in pantomime while the Jolson tunes were played from a secluded phonograph. The stunt drew such crowds of people that police were required on more than one occasion to handle them. The promotion was thought up and executed by manager Jimmy Mastro.

City-wide Tieup Heralds Opening Of "Calendar"

Through a tieup with the Retail Trade Bureau of Portland, Ore., city-wide attention was focused on the opening of "Calendar Girl" at the Broadway theatre there. Jack Matlack, advertising and publicity director for the J. J. Parker theatres, arranged the campaign.

The contest was run as part of the national "Calendar Girl" contest conducted under the sponsorship of Republic Pictures and Brown and Bigelow, calendar advertising firm. The retail bureau sent out three separate bulletins to its members, urging them to tie-in with the contest and publicize it among their employees. Many members placed announcements regarding the competition in the pay envelopes of feminine employees.

One of Portland's largest department stores featured its contestant in person in one of its busiest store windows, creating widespread attention among sidewalk crowds. A loudspeaker blared information about the girl representing the store, and the contest.

Speakers were sent out to civic and social groups, advising them of the contest and asking members to enter. Cashiers at the three Parker theatres in Portland finished all phone conversations with the query: "Have you entered our 'Calendar Girl' Contest?"

In addition, tieups were arranged with florists, photographers, etc. A recording machine in the lobby played music from the picture.

Lobby Guessing Contest Used for "Verdict"

A lobby contest helped to promote manager H. F. Wilson's playdate of "The Verdict" at the Capitol theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. For the contest, Wilson used a glass jar full of coins with a sign reading: "What is your 'Verdict?' Can you estimate the number of coins in this jar? Fill in the card with your answer and win free passes to see, etc." 50 large-size arrows were posted in store windows and on telegraph poles along the main streets. 2,000 circulars, paid for by merchant ads, were distributed. 2,000 summons-type heralds were passed out in cars along the main street and in parking lots.

Runs Special Show for "Song"

Manager Buzzy Mixson ran a special show for the students of Williston high school and grammar school to exploit "Song of the South" at the Arcade theatre, Williston, Fla. Mixson emphasized the fact that this time he wanted the children to preview the picture and let their parents know what they thought about it. All faculty members and bus drivers received passes.

Monsieur Verdoux

UA-Chaplin—Comedy of Murder, With Message

Whatever picture Charles Chaplin might have chosen to make after a seven-year absence from the screen would have been a box office commodity of stature. This one happens to be not only that but so many more things besides that a measure of the property may best be had by breaking it down into components parts, remembering always that about all a showman has to do to pack his theatre is to let the customers know he's got a new Chaplin picture for them to look at.

Star-producer-director-writer Chaplin, who also composed the music score, calls his picture "a comedy of murder," and the phrase fits. Perhaps only Chaplin could make the murdering of a number of bigamously acquired wives an amusing spectacle, and at times the task taxes even his justly renowned artistic virtuosity, but it is undisputable that his characteristic alacrity, displayed here in dispatching ladies of means, generates audience laughter in volume.

When he is trying for laughs, which is most of the time but by no means always, he is fully as successful as in his yesteryears, and it may be noted that he gets some of his laughs with dialogue but more with gesture and grimace.

Comedy is not, however, the whole of the Chaplin objective, but rather, in fact, a form employed as a tool of utterance, for the man seen here for the first time without the baggy pants, oversized shoes and undersized derby of his beginnings is the bearer of at least two messages. The major message, delivered directly to the camera and with unrelieved gravity, is to the effect that whereas mass murder committed by millions, as in war, is heroic, mass murder committed by an individual is criminal.

The secondary message, delivered with less emphasis but quite firmly, is to the effect that a man discharged by a corporation without cause after long service (30 years in this instance) may not be without extenuation in resorting to crime as a means of maintaining his family. To say these things he has devised a story, based loosely on the Bluebeard legend, which is very, very funny when it is funny, and very static when the oratory interrupts.

What the paying customers will have to say about the blending of message and humor is a thing to be discovered. Doubtless the pundits will make it a matter of controversy, and doubtless the plain public will be made that much more anxious to see the picture, probably settling for the laughs they get and leaving the rest to the intelligentsia. It is extraordinary.

The Chaplin story picks up M. Verdoux in Paris in about 1929 and carries him to the guillotine in 1937. He is a dandified little man, skilled in charming women of wealth, who makes a career of marrying them and disposing of them, profitably, as a means of supporting his invalid wife and their small son in the manner to which he has aspired through 30 abruptly terminated years of service as a bank clerk. His devices for fascinating and dispatching his victims are varied and expert, and his manner of doing it is strictly businesslike as well as, in an incredible sort of way, immensely amusing.

The market collapse of 1929 breaks him financially, and the death of his wife and son breaks his spirit, as well as removing the reason for his pursuit of profitable homicide.

Finally, although offered succor by a girl he once allowed to escape his murderous attentions upon learning that her dead husband, like his wife, had been an invalid, he allows himself to be apprehended, convicted and sentenced to death. It is in his last words before sentence is pronounced, and again in death cell statements to reporters, that he utters his observations about mass murder and the responsibility of employer to employee.

Although the character undertaken by the star is in emotional essence the same frustrated little man he portrayed in the days when all the kiddies in the world were his fans, he portrays him here exclusively for grownups, a point for showmen to take into consideration before stumbling into the error of children's matinees.

The Chaplin craftsmanship is in evidence—which is to say hardly evident at all—throughout the picture. His own performance is authoritative, and the other players, most of whom are character actors or unknowns, fulfill requirements. Martha Raye, given feature billing, tears through a rough-hewn role with all stops open, and Marilyn Nash, as the girl he befriends, establishes herself as a player to be heard from further.

Robert Florey and Wheeler Dryden are down as associate directors, and Rudolph Schrager arranged and directed the Chaplin music score, which is an especially effective one.

Viewed at the Academy Awards theatre, Hollywood, to a press audience including the full list of accredited Hollywood correspondents. Laughter was frequent and loud during the major part of the picture, and respectful silence greeted the message section, general applause marking the end. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Born to Kill

RKO Radio—Murder Melodrama

Dispensing utterly with customary endeavors to surround its murders with mystery, "Born to Kill" is an out-and-out presentation of Lawrence Tierney as a deliberate killer, a man without principle who pursues ruthlessly the theory that he can achieve fulfillment of any wish by slaying persons who stand in his way. It is strong meat, slammed across without extenuation, and in no sense a film for children. Whether it is too unrelieved for adults is a question for exhibition to determine.

Alongside Tierney, and but slightly less cold-blooded, goes Claire Trevor, portraying a wealthy divorcee, preparing to marry another man for his money, who falls under Tierney's spell and tries to shield him, getting killed finally for her pains. A like fate is met by Elisha Cook, Jr., his pal, these killings following a double murder with which the picture opens starkly. The scene is Reno and San Francisco, the time now, and police bullets move down the killer at the end.

Production by Herman Schlom, for executive producer Sid Rogell, is painstaking and polished, and Robert Wise's direction maintains a steady pace. The screenplay by Eve Greene and Richard Macaulay gets wordy occasionally but hews to the line in the main.

Produced for melodrama fans, it contains killing enough for anybody, but furnishes less than adequate reason for it.

Honeymoon

RKO Radio—Light and Amusing

Mostly fluff. Mostly amusing. Always far-fetched and occasionally boring. "Honeymoon," in the main, is a spring-and-summer show, never to be regarded seriously. It won't linger, but will entertain.

Shirley Temple, pert and pretty and never displaying any particular dramatic qualities, lands in Mexico City from Minnesota. Guy Madison, corporal, is flying up from the Canal Zone. Their object is matrimony. His plane is delayed. Miss Temple is at wit's end, but not for long. She turns to the American consulate for aid, practically monopolizing the time and energies of Franchot Tone, vice-consul, whose theories about the diplomatic corps and the behavior of American citizens in a foreign land probably represent an approach the State Department would wish for all its representatives abroad. He's that cooperative and meticulous. The complications are many, each one putting Tone in grave predicament with Lina Romay, his Mexican fiancee, whose misunderstanding of the situation is easy to comprehend. Finally, with the aid of practically the entire diplomatic corps, the Mexican judiciary and other Government officials apparently little short of the President, Shirley and Guy Madison are married. This clears the way for Tone and Miss Romay, who always was willing anyhow.

Performances are satisfactory and better, the better meaning Tone who does the best job of the cast. Miss Temple is made out to be persistent and determined as the typical American girl, one notch above the bobby-soxer, who is after her man. The Mexican characters in the film are pretty much dismayed and astonished by what goes on. No wonder.

William Keighley directed for Robert Sparks, executive producer, and Warren Duff, producer. Michael Kanin prepared the script based on a story by Vicki Baum. Production quality is high, as well as lavish.

This Happy Breed

U-I - Prestige—Family Drama

For audiences tuned to the higher values of picture-making—acting, script, camera-work and direction—this picture will be entertainment of a high order. For mass audiences it will have a limited appeal.

Noel Coward, who in previous films has demonstrated his ability to realistically mirror British life and characters on the screen, produced. Anthony Havelock-Allan and David Lean, the latter already quite well known in this country for his direction of "Brief Encounter," sat in the directors' chairs, and Ronald Neame is responsible for the flawless camerawork. The Technicolor is superbly handled.

As in "Brief Encounter," it again is the teamwork and the artistry of Mr. Lean and Celia Johnson, one of the 1947 Academy Award winners, which gives the picture its fine and real flavor and its exquisite touches of (British) humor. Robert Newton's performance as Miss Johnson's middle-aged, typically British husband, cannot be surpassed. "This Happy Breed" was made in 1944 and sets out to chart the course of history from 1919 to 1939 in terms of an average British family.

It succeeds admirably, but at the same time it is, inevitably, aimed principally at the people it purports to portray. It hardly has any story; there is much talk and the directors have taken great pains in centering their attention on characterizations. In addition, some of the humor is bound to be lost on American audiences due to the quite heavy British accents.

Essentially, "This Happy Breed" deals with the usual things in life—the family, Miss Johnson and Mr. Newton accompanied by Grandma, Amy Veness, and Aunt Sylvia, played by Alison Leggatt, move into a new house in 1919. The couple has three children, two girls and a boy. While history takes its turbulent course outside, it has its reflections on the quiet surface of the family waters. One daughter gets married, then the son, who is killed in an accident later, takes a bride and tragedy strikes again when the second daughter, Kay Walsh, goes off with a married man.

Outcast by the family, but not forgotten, she in the end finds her way into the arms of her childhood lover, ably played by John Mills. Stanley Holloway, as Bob, Newton's friend, gives an excellent performance.

When reviewed in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD in May, 1944, Peter Burnop called the picture "a beautifully photographed, skilfully directed and exquisitely acted piece. It is as though, sitting in the theatre, one overheard unseen the tender intimacies, the hopes, fears, joys, griefs, of a million ordinary commonplace folk. . . . A tribute to the new excellence of endeavor which inspires Britain's picture makers."

A Likely Story

RKO Radio—Likeable, Too

As the title suggests, the story told here in unique and stimulating manner isn't very likely to have happened anywhere at any time, but it's a most likeable little yarn in the lighter category and gives onlookers many a laugh. A little shallow as to marquee strength—with Barbara Hale, Bill Williams and Sam Levene its best named—it's a picture with which to entertain rather than to stampe the public.

At the root of the script fashioned by Bess Taffel from a story by Alexander Kenedi is a hospital incident in which a healthy young veteran is led to believe he has but a fortnight to live. Having met on a train a young girl coming to New York to make a career in art, and a raffish crook just released from the penitentiary, he looks them up, in turn, finding the girl in need of financial aid and finding the crook favorably disposed toward helping him get it for her via an insurance policy on his (the veteran's) life. Nothing comes off as planned, naturally, and nothing happens quite like it usually happens in this type of comedy, but the proceedings are unremittingly amusing.

Richard H. Berger produced the picture for executive producer Jack J. Gross, and H. C. Potter directed with a nice sense of pace.

Twilight on the Rio Grande

Republic—Gene Autry Western

Mexico is the locale of this third in the Gene Autry series since the cowboy-star's release from the army. Varying little from the established formula which has made his pictures the favorite screen-fare of many, "Twilight" offers a pleasing mixture of action and music.

The picture was directed by Frank McDonald, with Armand Schaefer the associate producer and Dorrell and Stuart E. McGowan responsible for the screenplay. Sterling Holloway, whose name has definite marquee appeal, turns in a good performance that will get a lot of laughs. Autry and his new horse, Champion, Jr., chase the villains in the accustomed style and there is no lack of the usual brawls with some knife-throwing tricks added.

When Autry's friend and partner "Dusty," played by Bob Steele, is used by smugglers to take jewels across the Mexican border into the U. S., and later is found knifed to death. Gene determines to find the killers. Eliminating one suspect after another, including the pert-looking Adele Mara and Martin Garralaga, who gives an excellent portrayal of an old Mexican, he finally traps the smugglers.

Banjo

RKO Radio—Dog Story

Written and produced by Lillie Hayward, "Banjo" is a story which will appeal chiefly to children and dog-lovers. It concerns an orphan girl and her bird-dog who are sent away from the freedom of a Georgia plantation to the orderliness of a New England estate and the domineering surveillance of a guardian.

Once there, the child's carefree nature conflicts with decorum of the household and it is around this theme the story is built. Intermingled is a touch of frustrated romance between the guardian and a handsome young doctor.

Heading the cast is Sharyn Moffett as the orphan, Jacqueline White as the young aunt appointed to watch over the child, Walter Reed as the young doctor, and Banjo, a thoroughbred bird-dog, who outshines the rest of the cast even without a speaking part. Richard O. Fleischer directed.

Fun on a Weekend

United Artists-Stone—Light Comedy

Here is one that is good for hearty laughs in any situation. Produced, directed and written by Andrew Stone, "Fun on a Weekend" fulfills many a little man's dream of getting rich quick through sheer nerve and ingenuity. If, at the same time, he manages to take a few pot-shots at society and the all-too-gullible mogols of industry, and if his name just happens to be Eddie Bracken, it's all for the better.

Bracken and Priscilla Lane, ably assisted by such seasoned comedians as Arthur Treacher and Allen Jenkins as well as the romantic Tom Conway, make a good team. It's strictly situation comedy, of course, but some of the incidents will really get them and the dialogue is funny and well-paced throughout. Some of the scenes, such as the one showing the hungry Eddie in hot competition with a dog for some bits of meat on a bone, are Bracken at his best.

The story deals with a boy and a girl, both hungry and broke, who meet on a Florida beach and decide to go "for the big money" with nothing more to start with than some beach attire. Liberally using society's respect for money and distinguished-sounding names, they manage to crash into several homes, pretending they are in the market for an estate. Eventually, although still penniless, they get to live at the best hotel in town, throw lavish parties and mingle with high society. When Bracken thinks Priscilla loves playboy Conway, he is ready to give up, but the girl convinces him it's he whom she wants to marry.

SHORT SUBJECTS

STORM OVER BRITAIN (20th Century-Fox)
 March of Time (V 13-9)

Great Britain's labor and industrial crisis is the subject for the latest March of Time issue. It shows how Britain has already raised some key production in its "export or die" program to above the pre-war level. It also tells how Great Britain has forged ahead of other countries in the development of radar, television and jet propulsion. But it also shows the troubles in the home country; the lack of manpower for her industry; scenes of the chaotic winter when storms and blizzards took their toll in production, communication and the lives of the people, and finally the government's efforts in rebuilding its manpower resources. In its conclusion the subject poses the interesting question: "How long can Britain continue her present policy?"

DRINKING SCENES

JUST now again there is slight boiling up in the long simmering concern about liquor and the screen. The whole subject of alcohol and its problems is getting a shade more attention than usual. Perhaps the flow of psychopathic literature and such pictorial attentions as "The Lost Weekend" have to do with the manifestation. Anyway, the ardent dries are writing letters to the papers and complaining about the movies. The manifestations on all sides indicate a typical confusion.

Once again the problem, if it must be a problem, is the application to motion picture practice of a decent and proper intent. With all of the feeling that exists about liquor, it would seem reasonable to restrict its presentation on the screen to the requirements of narration when it is a real part of the story, and that resort to strong drink should not be made a part of the incidental conduct of heroes or heroines, or other characters who may inspire imitative behavior.

The wine glasses of the incidental decor of a banquet scene, or even a family party, have no such suggestion and intimation as the pretty lady sitting slightly and gayly potted on a stool at a cocktail bar, waiting for the story to develop.

Example of the difference is to be had in two current hit pictures. In one a young woman is shown in a welter of drink and in a series of sequences which deliver her to ruin and death. That is not likely to inspire emulation, or criticism from the dries. In the other picture a militant and liberal minded young banking executive is shown dipping deep into the bottle at table and then standing unsteadily on his feet making a speech which is the ideological hit of the piece. There is invitation to trouble.

THE problem of what to do about liquor on the screen is different from the problem of what to do about sex on the screen only in detail. Both pertain to the conduct of the race and have ever since there has been a race. The same order of self-regulation, which means organized judgment, conscious morality and purposeful good taste which has met one problem can meet the other. America's standards of propriety and decency are not patented, not copyrighted.

Mostly the persons who produce, write, direct and enact motion pictures are metropolitan sophisticates. They are not representative of the whole audience which they serve. It is their obligation to exercise all of their skill and the whole of their understanding, all of the time. They know about liquor and what to do about it on the screen—when they have to. It begins to look as though that would be soon.

FOR DIVERSITY

THERE is a hint of encouragement for a return to more diversity in the theatre program in the announcement this week from Mr. Oscar A. Morgan, in charge of short subjects for Paramount Pictures Corporation, that their output of cartoons is to be increased by a third and that the schedule for the year runs to sixty-four shorts in addition to the newsreel.

A distribution expert talking in this office the other day commented: "What we need," he observed, "is a vice-president in charge of taking twenty-five minutes out of the pictures. There seems to be an erroneous impression in high places that a picture cannot be big without being long."

It can be remarked that no other popular entertainment tries to keep the customers in their seats with their attention focused on one idea for so long as the super-features demand.

HONOURING ED FAY

FIFTY YEARS is a long time in showmanship and a very long time, indeed, for a career still continued in interest and vigour. There are few such occasions as that golden anniversary dinner to Mr. Edward M. Fay up in Providence this week, with hundreds of his friends and contemporaries of the amusement world gathered to make speeches and lift toasts in his honour. His beginning was back there just before the turn of the century when the footlights still burned gas and the spots were limelights. The motion picture had been on the screen but one year when Ed Fay started in the show world, and it was only a turn in variety then. His career began with distinguished performance as a musician, and in time he became an impresario, presenting many famous stars. He came to picture operations in 1925 and, beginning in 1926 with the dawn of sound, set notable precedents in the exploitation of the reborn art. He is still going strong.

WE are indebted to Mr. Earle M. Holden of Hickory, and North Carolina Theatres, for report on a situation in his town in which a traveling carnival, strongly condemned by press and pulpit, got into town by the device of arranging sponsorship by a patriotic organization.

Says the Hickory Daily Record: "It is time for the membership of all fraternal, civic and patriotic organizations to become thoroughly aware of the fact that for years they have permitted themselves to be used as dupes by carnival companies that could not otherwise get permits to show in most progressive and self-respecting cities.

"Nobody in the local community ever profits from the sponsorship of carnivals. . . . On the moral side of the ledger, the entries are all in red ink."

TOPMOST in the Monday mail this week is a discussion from Mr. J. R. Cooney of Waldoboro, up in Maine, who finds: "The marquee values of stars are becoming of less importance all the time. With the increasing access which the public has to all sorts of qualified criticism of the new pictures, they can rarely be sold any more just because Gable or Garson are in them.

"In our small town and theatre we find that the picture stands or falls more and more on its own merit as entertainment. If it is a good picture, they come; if not, they know about it and stay away."

In view of the extensive efforts involved, it is pleasant to have from this showman a word, too, about the Product Digest section of The Herald. "Aside from its more obvious uses, the advance reviews give us practically our only unbiased opinions regarding the new pictures." —Terry Ramsaye

QP Service

AT NOON on the ninth day of the telephone strike the switchboard operator in the Hollywood office of Quigley Publications plugged in a buzz and heard a voice say, "This is the McKeesport, Pa., operator. Can you tell me Gene Autry's address?" The address was given, the McKeesport operator said "Thank you," and the telephone strike went on.

High Taxes

London Bureau

THE CHANCELLOR of the Exchequer, Hugh Dalton, has reported that the entertainment tax collected for the year ending March 31 reached the all-time high of £53,392,000, against an estimate of £50,000,000 ($200,000,000). Since 90 per cent of the total entertainment tax yield is commonly reckoned to come from motion picture theatres, it may be said that cinema audiences contributed to the revenue in direct theatre-seat taxation about £48,000,000 in one year. Led by Sir Alexander Boyne King, exhibitors had made fervent representations to the Government for a reduction in the incidence of the tax. Not unexpectedly, the Chancellor wouldn't agree. Common feeling in the trade, indeed, is that theatremen are fortunate in not having the tax increased.

Dry Bombay

FROM MONOGRAM comes the word that Bombay is going dry. Their representative has informed the company that the Government in Bombay has notified the Bombay Board of Film Censors that all drinking scenes are to be eliminated from pictures submitted for censorship after April 1, 1947, and that after April 1, 1948, all such scenes will have to be eliminated from pictures previously passed by the censors. In the meantime, only such drinking scenes as are necessary for the continuity of the story will be retained. The Government, it is explained, has decided on a policy of prohibition. The program began April 1 and the strings will be gradually tightened for four years after which there is to be total prohibition.

"Duel" in England

London Bureau

THE LARGEST advertising campaign known here for years is currently under way for "Duel in the Sun." The cost of the campaign has been estimated at such a figure that there is considerable eyebrow raising among experts here. The comment has been made publicly that David O. Selznick's agents should drop their ballyhoo and get on with the showing of the picture. But there's the rub. Shorn of its U. A. affiliation, Selznick had no physical distributing machinery. It is the fact that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has offered to buy the film, lock, stock and barrel. Meanwhile, there is an offer from Paramount of a West End opening at the select Carlton and it is likely that Selznick will accept this with May 16 as the opening date. The question of the physical selling to independent theatres is still in the air. A Selznick publicity expert had the idea of flying some of the stars of the picture here, but when he found that was impossible he began toying with the idea of flying the horse, which has an important part in the feature, to London and letting it cavort about the stage on opening night.

NOT a New Yorker will be ignorant of David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun" when it opens May 7 in 37 Loew theatres in their city. As his Vanguard Films publicity department put it, Wednesday, the campaign, which "got under way in real earnest" and is a "land-air-and-SEE penetration," comprises the following items:

- A mobile trailer unit.
- A specially lighted blimp.
- A street parade, with a special float.
- Displays on all Railway Express and American News trucks. And more.

It may be that on the night of May 7, some of the overflow crowds may have to see other pictures at other theatres.

"Libel on India"

THE BOARD of censors for the India province of Punjab has banned "Anna and the King of Siam" after a protest filed by Capt. Anant Singh, editor of the magazine Filmo. According to the Associated Press, Mr. Singh was hopping mad, stating: "The picture is a vile and monstrous misrepresentation of Eastern peoples, Siam and the Siamese being made the butt of horrible ridicule. A libel on Siam and the Siamese people is a libel on India."

Slow Speed

THESE slow motion cameras they've been putting out recently get even slower—or faster, have it your way. Now comes one invented by K. M. Baird, which will photograph at the rate of 200,000 frames per second. It will photograph more than rifle bullets in air; it may even stop the motion of a bartender's elbow.

"Sit in the Sun"

RUSSELL BIRDWELL will "sit in the sun for a while and then take the best offer." This announcement from Hollywood Wednesday meant that the press agent for a number of controversial causes, including Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw," has shut up shop. One of his last clients was the city of Yonkers.

Debt Recovered

FOR THE FIRST time in the 31 years he has been identified with the industry, George Naudasher, operating the Cambria theatre, Philadelphia, encountered a patron with a troubled conscience. Recently he received a letter which read: "This letter is to return some money I feel I may owe you. I think when I used to attend the movies I would go in for a child's price when I was supposed to pay an adult's admission. I hope this covers the amount I cheated the movies out of. Sincerely yours." Mr. Naudasher returned the money, commended the sender, and suggested that the money be turned over to a charity.

Church to Theatre

THE EUCLID AVENUE Baptist Church in Cleveland, built by the Rockefellers who worshipped there, may be leased for use as a theatre. The Cleveland Baptist Association is considering several offers from the industry, including one from the J. Arthur Rank interests. If the Association approves the leasing, the 2,380-seat auditorium will be used for motion pictures every day while the congregation will hold its services in the chapel on Sunday morning.

"Business Theatre"

THE VOGUE THEATRE, San Francisco, is to be turned into a "business theatre," operating week days from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. for the showing of 16mm or 35mm industrial, advertising, promotional, educational and religious films. According to Irving M. Levin, district manager of San Francisco Theatres, operating the Vogue, the "business theatre" will continue its policy of single features week day evenings and all day Saturday and Sunday.

Clothes Horse

Mexico City Bureau

DOLORES DEL RIO has let it be known that it is clothes that are keeping her from accepting new contracts from Mexican producers. She explains that when she played in American pictures she enjoyed the fame of being Hollywood's best dressed woman. In Mexico, she protests, she has had to wear the clothes the producers provide for her and has even consented to going stockingly to advance Mexican films. She asks now that she be allowed to choose her own wardrobe, because her films would "be ever so much better" if she wears what she likes.

UJA

Q A ragged, hungry, homeless orphan child, alone in a cold, hostile country.

Q A mother with fear in her heart, terrible memories of horrors behind and dread uncertainty ahead, frantic with anxiety for those who are left of a shattered family.

Q A husband and father, broken and in tatters, deep in the desperation of the need and suffering of those whom he would save, protect and nurture—and hardly a glimmering of hope before him in the terrible aftermath of war.

Any of these vignettes make an understandable figure to any of us. The individual, child, mother or father, or all of them, we can visualize. Meeting any of them in living contact, we would instantly reach to extend a helping hand. The demand of charity, the call of human sympathy, would be immediate, compelling.

But the picture becomes a blur of statistics when it comes multiplied, like dots on a map, in the figures of the multitude represented by the 300,000 Jews in the Displaced Persons camps of Europe and the hundreds of thousands of others who are dependent upon American mercy for survival.

To see and understand we must think of that unhappy child, the frantic mother, the desperate father, as individuals—people, even as you and I; people with a right to live, to some small share of care and comfort. We must sweep away the columns of figures, the impersonal statistics, to realize that the call upon our human obligations is the aching need of that child, that mother, that father.

The story of the United Jewish Appeal tells us that the need is multiplied several hundred thousand times. That is why so many of us must give generously of our resources so that the many who are to be rescued from a hell of hate and want and desperation shall not await in vain their rescue.

A. PAM BLUMENTHAL last week was elected Cinecolor Corporation board chairman. He also resigned from the board of Enterprise Productions, which he helped organize.

MAURICE N. WOLF on May 1 will help direct MGM's exhibitor and public relations at the New York home office. He was Boston district manager before the new appointment was made.

MAGNETIC TAPE to supplant the usual sound track is being investigated by Warner sound technicians, Colonel Nathan Levinson, right, chief engineer, and Lt. Colonel Frank Cahill, left, Warner Theatres sound director, told trade writers in New York last week. The company is also seeking to achieve pre-war standardization and excellence of equipment, and its field engineers will confer in New York April 28, they said. The British studio, at Teddington, "blitzed" by bombs, is being re-equipped as machinery becomes available, they added.

SEVEN MAJORS RELEASING 29 REISSUES THIS SEASON

Reduced Product Flow and Shorter Runs Leave Room for Revivals

The reissue boom is on and the present indications are that it will continue for some time.

Seven of the 11 producer-distributor companies have reached into their vaults, dusted off a total of 29 hit pictures of previous seasons and are reissuing them on a national basis complete with full sales, advertising and promotional campaigns.

The reasons for this unprecedented splurge are varied depending upon whether those expressing the views are on the exhibition or distribution side of the fence. But both sides agree that a good reissue makes money.

Cite Varied Reasons for Current Reissue Wave

Exhibitors claim the reissue splurge has been brought about because current releases can no longer demand the extended playing time accorded product during the war years; that there is insufficient good product; that audiences prefer to see an old but good picture rather than a new poor one, and, finally, the producer-distributor organizations are not releasing the quantity of product they had in the pre-war years.

Representatives of sales and distribution and exploitation chiefs express somewhat different views on the subject. They lay claim more to the public's demand for the product; the new audiences that have come up since the pictures were originally released, and the quality of the pictures which will always draw customers to the box office.

These same executives also point out that there is still a lot of income left in the old big pictures since the pictures did not receive the full benefit of their playing time when originally released and thus many people who were sold on seeing the picture did not get the opportunity to do so.

Executives Claim Profit For All in Old Films

Further, they say, that if an exhibitor is in need of product they can play the reissues with a profit to themselves and to the companies.

One executive indicated that the trend towards reissues has been brought about by the excessively high production costs which have practically doubled since 1941 and said that the margin of profit from a reissue is sometimes even greater than that received from a new picture.

He estimated the number of prints made for one reissue runs from 100 to 250 depending upon the number of bookings expected.

The Season's Reissues

Following is a list of the 29 pictures that are being reissued this season on a national basis. The date of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's original review and the date of reissue follows the names of the principal players.

A fairly accurate print cost, however, he estimated at $25,000. The sum spent for new accessories runs about $5,000, while the distribution costs run about 20 per cent. Thus, for every $1,000,000 of gross rental for a reissue, there is about $750,000 net profit, since the production cost was originally written off when the picture was first released. The estimated number of playdates possible with a good reissue is around 10,000 or more with the net rental possibilities running as high as $1,000,000.

Warner Brothers for the past several seasons has followed a policy of reissuing a limited number of former hits—usually four each season. All have met with excellent success, and some, such as the current combination bill, "The Sea Wolf" and "The Sea Hawk," have done an even bigger business in certain spots on a reissue than when first released, the company has said.

A spokesman for Warners sales department credits the popularity of reissues to three basic factors:

1. Pictures selected for reissue were outstanding box office attractions when originally released.

2. The stars and other players in the cast have added to their popularity in recent years and are even bigger drawing attractions now.

3. A new generation of at least 20,000,000 filmgoers comes along every five years or so, and these together with those who missed the picture when it was first shown and the many who like to see the picture again, add up to a potential audience of more than 50,000,000 for a good picture.

From a merchandising standpoint, Mort Blumenstock, vice-president in charge of Warner advertising and publicity, points out that good reissues have a valuable nucleus for word-of-mouth advertising by persons who saw and enjoyed the pictures when first released. Many exhibitors have capitalized on this point to good effect, he said.

According to Henderson M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for MGM, the success of a reissue is the careful merchandising of quality pictures and a limited number of such releases.

"We dignify our reissues by giving them the same attention and advertising treatment as current product," he said. In all cases exhibitors are given entirely new campaigns to exploit the reissue which includes press-books, mats, stills and other aids since the company has made it a policy not to utilize any of the old materials left from a picture's initial release.

Mr. Richey also believes that the success of a reissue is dependent upon two factors—new audiences who have not seen the picture, and the people who go to see it again. Both audiences, he said, bring about an excellent word-of-mouth campaign if the picture is good.

Special Representatives Help Sell MGM Reissues

To give exhibitors every possible help in selling reissues MGM has five special representatives working throughout the country under the direction of William Zoellner, head of the reprint department.

Discussing MGM's current and forthcoming reissues recently, Mr. Zoellner said "Rage in Heaven," the company's first reissue this season, has so far been sold to more than 9,000 accounts and in four months has had more bookings than during the whole year following its original release. Revenue from the film has been greater by far than what it grossed back in 1941. Other sources attributed the reissue success of the picture to the current popularity of Ingrid Bergman who, at the time the picture was

STILL STARS

The lasting popularity of many film stars over the years is indicated by the stars of the pictures reissued by the major companies. Following is a list of today's stars and featured players who had major roles when the reissues were originally released:

Don Ameche	Ida Lupino
Dana Andrews	Fredric March
Lionel Barrymore	Ray Milland
Wallace Beery	Tyrone Power
Ingrid Bergman	George Raft
Gary Cooper	Claude Rains
Olivia De Havilland	Edward G. Robinson
Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.	Mickey Rooney
Errol Flynn	Ann Sheridan
Clark Gable	James Stewart
John Garfield	Robert Taylor
Hedy Lamarr	Spencer Tracy

originally released, was practically unknown to the American public.

"Gone With the Wind" and "The Great Waltz" are two MGM reissues to be distributed shortly. Mr. Zoellner previously said he expected "Wind" would gross between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 in the United States and estimated that 40 to 45 per cent of those people who have seen the picture will go to see it again. If test runs prove successful and the Technicolor print situation, which is now tight, again become available in quantity, the picture will be reissued without cuts and will run for three hours and 44 minutes.

William A. Scully, Universal's vice-president and general sales manager, attributed much of the success of reissues to the lack of product in subsequent run theatres. These exhibitors know, Mr. Scully said, that there is money to be made from reissues if they are properly advertised and publicized.

Universal Reissuing Films On Double Feature Policy

Universal, with eight pictures on its current reissue schedule, decided on a double feature policy for the subjects after the success of "Imitation of Life" and "This Side of Heaven," which were reissued in the summer and autumn of 1945.

Twentieth Century-Fox's reissue policy is governed by "popular demand," Martin Moskowitz, executive assistant general sales manager indicated, and that is the principal reason for again releasing "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

"We've been playing around with the thought of re-releasing "Ragtime Band" for a long time," he said. "It's got everything anyone could want—Irving Berlin's music; a good story, and a cast which would cost millions if it were assembled in one film now. We reissued it because people from all over, circuit executives and independents alike, told us that there is a demand for it."

However, the spurt in reissues hasn't been received favorably in all quarters. Last week, Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic, addressing a regional sales meeting in Chicago, lashed out against the policy and said that if it continued the industry will soon find itself losing the public esteem it now enjoys. "The constant playing of re-issues is an admission on the part of the industry to the public that it cannot produce quality pictures today as it did in former years."

In addition to the 29 features which the producing-distributing companies have on their reissue schedules, Astor Pictures and Film Classics, Inc., have an additional 38 pictures which they have acquired from the major companies. The pictures listed have been released within the past year, but both companies have many more available to exhibitors.

CONGRESS MOVING TO CURB LABOR

House Passes Drastic Bill as Senate Debates One; Closed Shop Banned

Washington Bureau

A sweeping union-control measure, outlawing the closed shop, industry-wide bargaining, jurisdictional strikes and other practices, was passed by the House last week. A similar bill, milder than the House-approved measure, was introduced in the Senate this week and indications are that it stands a better than even chance of winning.

First reaction from the entertainment field came early this week when 700 members of AF of L unions in the motion picture and allied fields met at the 46th Street theatre in New York and condemned what it called "the destructive and punitive nature of the legislation pending in Congress."

Turn Down Taft Bill

The meeting was ordered by the legislative committee of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, a parent union of 13 constituent organizations in the amusement industries. A similar meeting took place at the Selwyn theatre in Chicago where 300 AAAA members met to protest legislative efforts "to crush labor."

In the Senate, a coalition of four Democrats and three Republicans turned down the measure introduced by Senate Labor Committee Chairman Taft, but all indications are that the GOP leadership will fight to stiffen the bill on the Senate floor. In any event, Congress will pass a bill considerably tougher than the Case Bill which Mr. Truman vetoed last year. Passage of such a measure will place the President on the horns of this dilemma: If he approves the measure, he estranges his vital union support; if he vetoes it and labor troubles follow, he will probably lose the support of everyone else.

Suits Are Permitted

Both the approved and the proposed bills have the following provision in common: They ban the closed shop, permit union shops only if approved by 50 per cent of the unit's workers voting by secret ballot; give the Attorney General power to obtain injunctions to halt strikes or lockouts affecting the public welfare; reorganize the Federal conciliation service and the National Labor Relations Board, and provide for suits against unions for breach of contract and for union registration and reporting under the Secretary of Labor.

The House bill, sponsored by Representative Hartley, also includes bans on industry-wide bargaining (bargaining between one union and competing employees for a common contract) and employer contributions to health and welfare funds. These two sections were deleted by the Senate committee from the original Taft version. Both bills would make jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts unfair labor practices, but the Hartley version allows either private employers or the Government to sue unions engaging in such practices, while the Senate bill allows such suits only by the Government.

Among other provisions of the Hartley bill are: anti-trust penalties for unions engaging in combinations to fix prices, to allocate customers, or otherwise to restrict production; a ban on mass picketing, and a ban on Communists or ex-Communists holding union office. NLRB sanction would be withheld from unions with such officers.

Special provisions in the Senate committee's bill would bar the NLRB from certifying a union which includes professional employees unless a majority of such workers vote in favor of certification. They also would permit employers to petition for NLRB elections and create a joint House-Senate committee to study labor-management problems.

Ask Truman Veto

The New York protest meeting called on President Truman to veto legislation aimed at outlawing industry-wide and nationwide bargaining or the closed shop. At the same time the group passed a resolution welcoming "any attempts to remedy inequities and abuses which may have developed under present legislation," but stating that it would vigorously oppose any attempt to enact new legislation which will make impossible the legitimate functioning of labor unions.

Among the speakers at the rally were Lawrence Tibbett, chairman of the meeting and president of the American Guild of Musical Artists; Paul Dullzell, president of the Four A's and representing Actor's Equity; Senator Glen H. Taylor of Idaho, and Henry Jaffe, eastern legal representative of the Screen Actors Guild and counsel for the American Federation of Radio Artists.

MPA Members Now Will Receive Two Votes

Two votes each for member companies of the Motion Picture Association will be given them at the next board meeting May 8 in New York. Company presidents now hold one vote. Vice-presidents will be given the other votes, it is understood. Such vice-presidents are John J. O'Connor, Universal; Austin Keough, Paramount; Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio; J. Robert Rubin, Loew's; Robert Perkins, Warners; W. C. Michel, 20th Fox; Jack Cohn, Columbia.

Green Will Call Meeting to End Hollywood Strike

The outlook for an early settlement of the long-standing jurisdictional strike in Hollywood brightened this week when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced he would call a conference of all unions involved in the dispute "in the very near future."

Mr. Green said the executive council had instructed him to call the meeting at which the unions would be asked to work out means to end the dispute, and set up machinery to prevent future similar strikes.

The AF of L head disclosed that, on order of the executive council, he had polled all 12 unions involved in the dispute last February and had found all of them in favor of attending such a conference.

Further bright spots appeared in the Hollywood picture last week. Most important was an invitation from Charles Boren, the producers' labor contact, to Joseph V. Cambiano, international representative of the Painters' Union, asking him to meet with the producers' labor committee April 21. Later the meeting was postponed one day.

Also on the coast last week, joint committees of the Associated Motion Picture Producers, the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association met with the Screen Actors Guild. Purpose of the talks was to map procedure for the month-long series of conferences on a new Guild contract to replace the 10-year pact which will expire May 15.

Terrytoons, producers of animated cartoons, locked cartoonists out of its New Rochelle, N. Y., plant this week, according to the Screen Cartoonists Local No. 1461, AF of L. The union said negotiations had been going on for two years. There was no comment from the company.

In Hollywood, Superior Judge Byron Walters last week sentenced four ringleaders of the mass picketing of the Columbia studio last year to a year in jail. Other penalties ranged from six months in jail to fines from $300 up. The strikers were found guilty of violating a city ordinance and disturbing the peace.

Publishes Book on Labor

Edward T. Cheyfitz, assistant to Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, has written "Constructive Collective Bargaining," a book on labor and management, which has been published by the McGraw-Hill Book Company.

Kellogg SOPEG Vice-President

Paul Kellogg, an accountant with RKO Service Corporation, was elected vice-president of the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, at a New York election April 14.

TAKE it or leave it, consider it or forget it. But here is an interesting boil-down of highlights which ran on the drama page of Sunday's New York Times under Lewis Funke's byline:

"There are going to be lower-priced tickets on Broadway next season. . . There are producers and managers along the Main Stem who feel that the time has come for the 'break.' They say that, in the light of consumer resistance manifested this season, it is no longer feasible to charge what the traffic will bear. They promise they will make every effort to reduce the ticket sale in the hope of increasing attendance. . .

"However, most of the producers, although conceding the urgent need for ticket reductions, assert the move is unthinkable under existing conditions. They contend that high salaries received by various workers in the theatres, high rentals, high stop clauses, etc. make for risky business at best. One producer of a hit asserts that even the reduction of a quarter a ticket would be impossible. Hopeful ones believe that, in time, necessity will force everyone to get together to bring prices down to insure continued production and employment.

"For their part, several of the [union] craft groups express willingness to canvass the situation, but add that with prevailing economic conditions they are unable to see their way clear to wage reductions. An official of a major union thinks that a careful, impartial study to determine where the difficulties actually are and how they can be overcome would be helpful. Another major union spokesman laconically says his union has no control over prices. Still another blames inefficient business methods of producers for high budgets and the resulting high-ticket sale. The one point on which some producers and some unions agree is that ticket prices do not make any difference as long as you have a hit."

Take this or leave it, draw a conclusion or not:

"One cloud is shadowing our economic future. That cloud is caused by the sharp and rapid rise in prices.

"Some say this cloud is certain to burst. They are sure of a recession or a depression. I do not share their belief that either of these is inevitable," declared President Truman at an Associated Press luncheon in New York on Monday.

"I believe that we, as a nation, can prevent this economic cloudburst. But it requires prompt, preventive steps.

"Price increases have been felt by every American family. No one needs to tell them how much the cost of living has increased! . . . With higher and higher retail prices, families can buy less and less. . . Prices must be brought down. . .

"Present business conditions permit—in fact, they require—lower prices in many important fields. Profits in the aggregate are breaking all records, although profit margins vary greatly in individual cases. In 1946, corporate profits, after taxes, were 33 per cent higher than in 1945. In the first quarter of 1947, they ran even higher. These figures are total figures and do not, of course, apply to every industry or every business."

ECHOES FROM PROVIDENCE: The dinner observing Ed Fay's golden anniversary in show business turned out to be unusual. For his exhibitor associates and friends in the immediate area to make an appearance was nothing more than was to be expected. For a large delegation to attend from New York was something else again. It was a goodly, and important, crowd which made the journey.

One of the amusing incidents came from Frank C. Walker, former Postmaster General and long since returned to his old theatre stand with the Comerford-Publix circuit.

"The late Senator Pat Harrison was an old friend of mine who always drank wet and voted dry. I also remember the occasion when Al Smith went to a library on some research regarding the Irish. Both of these incidents, it seemed to me at the time, proved the age of miracles had not passed.

"When I noted the Governor of Rhode Island had taken official recognition of Fay's anniversary, that the Mayor and City Council of Providence had passed a resolution signaling 'Ed Fay Day' and that the General Assembly of the state had given formal recognition to the event, I was persuaded to recognize again that the age of miracles surely had not gone."

The veteran showman's long and varied activities in the fields of social and civic advancement were stressed throughout the evening. When Basil O'Connor's turn at an address arrived, he set aside his positions with the Red Cross and the Infantile Paralysis Foundation for the role of a youngster who was born in Taunton just over the Rhode Island line in neighboring Massachusetts.

"I used to slip into Fay's dance hall without paying. He'll never know how many nickel admissions were lost to him. In fact and although he is not aware of it, this is probably what gave birth to that humanitarian trait so often mentioned at this dinner."

It was Dick Walsh, president of the IATSE, who pulled the funniest line, however. There were more than a dozen speakers before Fay got on his feet along about 11:30 in the evening. After it was over, Walsh pulled out his watch and remarked,

"I think I'll go back and collect overtime."

Members of North Central Allied, meeting Monday in convention at Minneapolis, heard Robert L. Wright, special prosecutor in the Government's anti-trust suit against the industry, outline the Government's program for the industry. That plan includes complete divorcement.

After the open forum on the suit, at which Mr. Wright spoke, the prosecutor was charged with being "cagey" and "extremely cautious." Other small town exhibitors were of the opinion that the Government "fails utterly" to grasp the problem of the small exhibitor. They were dismayed when Mr. Wright told them that "the Government program cannot guarantee protection" against "wild-cat" competition caused by competitive bidding and large-scale production.

Ben Berger, North Central Allied president, opened the two-day convention by predicting that the U. S. Supreme Court eventually would order divorcement. He believes, he told the members, that "ever-increasing" film rentals will continue for some time to come and he charged distributors with "selling the same horse twice and getting a pound of flesh both times."

President Berger, all other officers, and the entire board were re-elected unanimously for another year at the close of the convention Tuesday.

An independent exhibitors' committee to work in the industry's drive to raise $2,100,000 for the United Jewish Appeal in New York was appointed last Friday following the first general meeting for the organization of film company chairmen held at the Hotel Astor. Idzal, Frank J. Downey, C. W. Buermele and E. J. Hudson. This committee will meet shortly to elect national trustee and area chairmen.

The Kansas City meeting was held April 18. Nine members of the area committee were elected: Arthur Cole, Sam Abend, J. A. Becker, Felix Snow, M. B. Cohn, A. Jules Benedic, C. A. Schultz, R. R. Biechele and R. F. Withers. The national trustee chairman and other members of the area committee are to be elected shortly.

The St. Louis meeting April 14 elected Fred Wehrenberg as national trustee, Joseph C. Ansell as chairman, Russell Bovim, James Frisina, George Keresotes, Carson Rodgers, Bess Schulter, Fred Souttar, Clarence Turley, Oscar Turner, Isador Weinsienk, Harry C. Arthur, Jr., Charles Goldman, Thomas James, Sam Komm and Sam Levin as members of area committee, and Albert Stetson as secretary.

Bacon Leaving Twentieth-Fox

Director Lloyd Bacon announced this week he will leave Twentieth Century-Fox after completing the direction of "Off to Buffalo," to alternate between independent production and studio assignments. His first under the new plan will be the direction of "Barnstorming" for Golden Productions. Later, in association with Sam Jaffe, he will produce "The Glittering Hill."

Scully Calls for Better Exhibition

The industry is obliged to undertake a better type of exhibition if American production intends to make pictures in the traditional manner, William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager of Universal-International, told delegates to a two-day sales conference in New York last week-end.

The meeting, held at the home office Saturday and Sunday, was devoted to the formulation of release and sales plans for the next four months, and was attended by district manager and home office executives.

Mr. Scully said that rising production costs, being out of all proportion to what they were six years ago, have become the mutual problem of exhibitors and distributors.

"We cannot turn back to low budget pictures because the public expects quality no matter what is involved in the high cost of production," he said. "We are not only coping with a 35 per cent rise in basic labor costs, but we must be able to meet the cost of personalities and properties which continue to go up each year."

Further, Mr. Scully pointed out, good pictures are entitled to all the playing time that it earns. He then cited the playing time given "The Egg and I," and said that in this case exhibitors are only asked to give the picture the time it deserves as proved in its opening engagements.

Mr. Scully also cited the expanded market for the J. Arthur Rank product which the company will handle in the same manner of the product produced at the U-I studio.

Two Clearance Complaints Are First Since April 1

The first two clearance complaints to be filed with the American Arbitration Association since April 1, the day which the New York District Court set for the dissolution of the Consent Decree system of arbitration, were reported this week. One complaint was filed in the Boston tribunal April 15, the other in Cleveland, April 17. The Boston complaint was filed against the five majors by the Elmwood Amusement Corporation, operating the Jamestown, formerly the Palace, in Jamestown, R. I. The complainant asks release on the national release date since Jamestown is an island, hard to get to, and the theatre offers no competition. The Cleveland complaint was filed by R. A. Momm, operating the Ohio theatre in Loudonville, against MGM, asserting that clearance of seven days favoring Ashland and Mansfield, Ohio, over Loudonville is unreasonable. Because of a Supreme Court stay order, arbitration continues.

Cinecolor Expands Plant

Cinecolor, Inc., announced April 16 that it had started the construction of additions to its Burbank plant, to cost $80,000.

NEW BRITISH CENSOR HATES CENSORSHIP

Rank to Release 23 Pictures in U. S. This Year

by PETER BURNUP
in London

SIR SIDNEY WEST HARRIS, Commander of the Order of the Bath, Commander of the Victoria Order, has been appointed president of the British Board of Film Censors in succession to the late Lord Tyrell of Avon. But he has an unholy abhorrence of censorship as such.

Approximately 33,000,000 people weekly will see his signature on the credit title of films. He will have the say-so on all questions of political or religious tendency. But scarcely a person in all those millions will have the faintest conception of what he looks like.

Vigorous at 71

Sir Sidney is 71 years of age. Certain members of the Kinematograph Renters' Society were against his appointment (he was appointed by the trade) on account of his advanced age. They were not alone in that objection. But the new president is a remarkably youthful 71. He has the vigorous fervor of a man of 30.

Sir Sidney belongs to Britain's governing hierarchy and was educated at St. Paul's and at Queen's College in the University of Oxford. He passed the inordinately stiff examination of entry into the First Division of the Civil Service, thereby qualifying to become the permanent mentor of the various politicians who occupied the post from time to time of His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Home Affairs.

He did that job amiably and efficiently. From 1909 to 1919 he was private secretary to successive Home Secretaries, which meant that he had a behind-the-scenes concern with such diverse matters as the hanging of condemned murderers and attendance on the reigning monarch whenever a Royal child was about to be born.

In 1922 he was appointed British representative on the League of Nations' Advisory Committee for Social Questions. Just lately he has been Britain's advisor on social questions to the United Nations' Economic and Social Council. He traveled to Washington then and made such a profound impression that he was given the William Freeman Snow Award for Distinguished Service to Humanity.

Concerned with Child Welfare

Child welfare always has been his preoccupation. He has also been concerned for a great deal of his career with the administration of the Cinematograph Act of 1909 which regulates the licensing of motion picture theatres.

Now he has become the chief censor of Britain's films, but he abhors censorship as such. He says that censorship is more a matter of manners than morals. He will not have it that an official censor should abrogate to himself the authority of a parent. ("If the child's father thinks such-and-such a picture is proper for him to see, who are we to say him nay?") Says Sir Sidney: "The ultimate censor is the public. We are merely here as guardians of public taste."

It's a revolutionary notion of censorship, but the smooth performers mustn't think they'll get anything by with Sir Sidney.

He likes motion pictures. He doesn't recall the names of the films he saw, but every night on the voyage home from America on the Queen Elizabeth he went to the ship's cinema. He saw "Brief Encounter" in America and thought it "tremendous." He has high regard for Goldwyn's "Best Years." He has a like high regard for America. In other words, Sir Sidney is a person of taste, but also of authority which he is never afraid to assert.

Would Like to Meet Breen

Joseph I. Breen, American Production Code Administrator, would like to meet him. The suggestion has been made, indeed, that Sir Sidney should make another trip to America before settling in his new job. He looks forward to meeting Mr. Breen.

Sir Sidney's off-stage preoccupation nowadays is gardening. There's a coppice of trees at the bottom of his garden in Parkside Gardens, Wimbledon, which are his principal pride. He specializes in Prunus Domestica, but likes to experiment with Prunus Occidentalis.

Peter Lewis Joins Eagle-Lion

Peter A. Lewis, long connected with the New York Film Board, has joined Eagle-Lion's home office staff as office manager and purchasing agent.

The J. Arthur Rank Organization will release at least 23 Rank-produced pictures in this country during 1947. The figure compares to a total of 12 Rank films distributed in the U. S. during 1946. Total Rank production for 1947 is set at 35-40 pictures.

To market his product in America, Mr. Rank channels it to three U. S. distribution companies. The top pictures, including such "culture opuses" as "Henry V," go to Universal-International. Mr. Rank would like to release 12 pictures a year through U-I, but William J. Heineman, Rank's sales head in the U. S., said this week that he was not sure whether the market could absorb that number yet. Another batch of pictures, seven this year and apparently slightly lower-budget productions with definite appeal for the U. S. market, goes to Eagle-Lion.

Eagle-Lion Has 10-Year Deal

That company has a 10-year agreement with Mr. Rank and will distribute a minimum of five pictures from the Rank studios yearly. Pictures released through the organization so far are "Bedelia" and "The Adventuress." According to Alfred W. Schwalberg, E-L sales head, both are doing very satisfactorily. Last is Prestige Picture, which will distribute six Rank productions this year in addition to the three released in 1946, and may raise that number later. These are for the carriage trade.

With the number of art-houses rising steadily and Prestige's first release, the prize-winning "Brief Encounter," as a pacesetter, Lawrence J. McGinley, vice-president and general sales manager, foresees a great future for his organization. His is the only Rank product which cites British origin.

"The advances of the British-made film in U. S. theatres have been such that I believe that, with in a few years, every city with a population of 250,000 or more will have an outlet for British product," Mr. Heineman said. "I expect to get around 10,000 bookings for 'Wicked Lady' despite the fact that many areas, accessible to the ordinary American film, are not accessible to us yet."

Art-Theatres Increased

There has been a noticeable increase in the number of small, intimate arthouses in this country since the war. According to Mr. McGinley there were about 100 in existence last September. Today Prestige services about 350, with some circuits converting small situations to a "foreign" policy. "Brief Encounter" so far has had about 170 bookings.

Compared with an American film, it is said, a British picture still needs greater publicity and exploitation effort to put it over. U-I, for instance, spent $300,000 in national advertising for "Stairway to Heaven."

HONOR FAY'S 50 YEARS AS CITIZEN-SHOWMAN

A distinguished gathering of state officials and motion picture industry personalities was on hand last Monday to honor Edward M. Fay, Providence theatre owner and "Dean of Rhode Island Showmen," at a testimonial dinner at the Biltmore Hotel in Providence, R. I. They came to pay tribute to a man who, during the past 50 years, has been one of the outstanding showmen in the entertainment industry.

More than 600 persons crowded the spacious ballroom for the golden testimonial sponsored by the Independent Theatre Owners of Rhode Island. A special train from New York brought the top leaders in the film industry. Others arrived from 13 states for the occasion. Honors piled high on the 72-year old showman, musician, poet and vaudeville impresario. Governor John O. Pastore presented him with an executive resolution "for conspicuously useful service as a private citizen, typical of the best traditions of our American way of life." Mayor Dennis J. Roberts announced that the City Council had designated the day as "Edward M. Fay Day."

Tributes Pour In

Tributes also poured in from public officials unable to attend and were read by Toastmaster Judge Ira Lloyd Lett. Among them were messages from Will Hays, Adolf Zukor and Eric Johnston. Former Postmaster General Frank C. Walker and Basil O'Connor, head of the Red Cross, were at the speaker's table.

Mr. Fay began his career as a boy violinist playing solos at church concerts. At 20 he was directing the B. F. Keith theatre orchestra in Providence and also was leading his own band. In 1916 he took over the old Union theatre and renamed it Fay's. Another house followed and, in 1919, he opened a theatre in Philadelphia. A $1,000,000 deal in 1926 brought him control of five more Providence theatres. It was Mr. Fay again who was responsible for the advent of sound films in Providence.

The veteran entertainer also was presented with a gold statuette of himself by the exhibitors of ITO and with another gift from the Palestine Shrine.

Many on Dais

Sitting on the dais with the speakers were Colvin W. Brown, director of General Aniline and Film Corporation; Jack Cohn, Columbia; James Dooley, Narragansett Racing Association; Eddie Dowling, actor-producer; Gus Eyssell, Radio City Music Hall; S. H. Fabian, American Theatres Association; Judge John P. Hartigan, Federal District Court; Benjamin Kalmenson, Warner Brothers; Malcom Kingsberg, RKO Theatres; Judge John C. Mahoney, U. S. District Court; Abe Montague, Columbia; Edward Morey, Monogram; Dr. Joseph C. O'Connell; Herman Robbins, NSS.

Also William F. Rodgers, Loew's; George J. Schaefer, Enterprise Pictures; Sol A. Schwartz, RKO Theatres; William A. Scully, Universal-International; Meyer Stanzler, Independent Theatre Owners of Rhode Island; Joseph R. Vogel, Loew's; Richard F. Walsh, IATSE; Albert Warner, Warner Brothers; Earl C. Whelden, past potentate of Palestine Shrine, and Judge Philip C. Joslin. An added guest was George M. Cohan, Jr., son of Mr. Fay's old friend, George M. Cohan. Mr. Cohan, Jr., last week made his vaudeville debut at Fay's Theatre.

The committee responsible for the arrange of the testimonial included Mr. Stanzler, general chairman; Fred Greene, Chester Currie, Henry Annotti, Joseph L. Carolo, Albert Clarke, Pat Crawley, William Dietch, Ray Feeley, Jack Findlay, Albert Gould, Walton Harmon, Harry Horgan, Ed Reed, Len Richter, Ted Rosenblatt, Maurice Safner, Mel Safner, Henry Sperling, Russ Stapleton, Joseph Stanzler, Charles Tobey, Henry Tobin, Jack Toohey, Martin Toohey, Lon Vail, Jack Carroll, Joseph DiPesa, Charles Kurtzman and Art Moger.

Seek Pact for Documentaries

The Association of Documentary and Educational Motion Picture Cameramen met producers in the field at the Seymour Hotel in New York Monday evening in an effort to reach an agreement on a contract covering wages and hours.

Although the contract was discussed by both sides no agreement was reached but a spokesman for the union said that the contract proposals were well received and that another meeting was planned within the next two weeks at which definite action will be taken.

If and when the contract is approved by the producers it is expected the cameramen will seek a charter under local 1212 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, American Federation of Labor. Some observers also believe that the activation of the new cameramen's union may be the opening wedge in a jurisdictional dispute with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

The union's officers include: Francis Thompson, president; Benjamin Doniger, vice-president; Harry Alpert, secretary, and Albert Mozell, treasurer. The executive board includes Roger Barlow, John Ferno, Peter Glushanok, Ben Gradus, Alexander Hammid, Boris Kaufman, Richard Leacock.

Attending Monday evening's meeting were representatives of Affiliated Film Producers, Inc., and International Film Foundation, Grant, Florey and Williams, Spot Films and others.

Free Show for Opening Of Bailey Theatre

The Bailey theatre, Crab Orchard, Ky., owned jointly by George Bailey and Hamp L. Howard, opened Friday, April 19, with a free matinee for children only and a free performance at night for adults. Manager of the new $80,000, 350-seat house is Mr. Bailey. The owners of the Bailey are new to the industry.

Universal Votes Dividend

The board of directors of Universal Pictures has declared a quarterly dividend of $1.06¼ per share on the 4¼ per cent cumulative preferred stock of the company. The dividend is payable June 2, 1947, to stockholders of record May 15, 1947.

20th-Fox Profit For 1946 Rises To $22,619,535

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and its subsidiaries, including Roxy Theatre, Inc., and National Theatres Corporation, in 1946 had consolidated net profit of $22,619,535, Spyros P. Skouras, president, disclosed in his annual report to stockholders this week. The 1945 net was $12,746,467.

The report covered the 52-week period ending December 28, 1946. Per share profit on the 2,756,462 shares of common stock outstanding amounted to $7.90 following deduction of dividends paid on prior preferred and convertible preferred stocks. It compared with $5.29 per share on 2,119,709 shares in 1945.

The report showed consolidated net profit for the fourth quarter of 1946 of $6,399,720, higher by $182,540 than for the period in 1945 and by $1,629,354 over profit in the third quarter of 1946, which amounted to $4,770,366.

Consolidated profit and loss statement for 1946 follows:

Income:
Gross income from sales and rentals of film and theatre receipts	$190,323,173.94
Dividends (including $53,218.25 received from voting-controlled subsidiaries (not consolidated)	801,017.07
Rents from tenants and other income	9,405,291.49

Interest and bond discount and expenses ..	855,430.11
	$160,595,173.99

Portion of net profit applicable to minority interests	2,664,773.17
Net profit, to earned surplus	$22,619,535.34

Consolidated gross income for 1946 amounted to $200,529,482, representing a record level for the company. Mr. Skouras pointed out that with box office receipts high in 1946, the trend seemed to be continuing in 1947 with film rentals showing an increase over the corresponding period in 1946. However, he stressed that costs were somewhat higher.

The report said 20th-Fox had 43 stories waiting to be produced—the greatest backlog of story properties in the company's history. In the foreign markets 20th-Fox product is playing Norway and Denmark.

Lightman, Eight Distributors Deny Anti-Trust Violations

M. A. Lightman, president of Malco Theatres, Memphis, and eight distributors, last week filed denials of anti-trust violations with the Federal Court in Memphis. A group of Memphis neighborhood theatre owners brought the action several months ago and are seeking $2,910,600 damages, claiming violations of the Clayton and Sherman acts.

A preliminary petition on behalf of Mr. Lightman and the distributors for separate trials for each company was lost when Judge Marion S. Boyd ruled the entire matter should be heard as a single suit. The answers just filed argue that a single suit would be prejudicial to the defendants.

The distributors involved are Paramount, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox, Loew's, Inc., Warner Brothers, United Artists, RKO Radio and Columbia. The plaintiffs include: Chalmers Cullins, Nate Evans and Edward Cullins, operating the Idlewild; Kemmons Wilson, Mrs. Ruby L. Wilson and L. A. Weaver, operators of Airways theatre; Augustine Cianciola and Agnes M. Cianciola, operator of the Luciani; James West, operator of the Hollywood; E. R. Gillett, Bristol theatre; Mrs. Lebrora Cianciola, Rosemary theatre.

ABPC Absorbs Anglo-American

London Burcan

The Associated British Pictures Corporation announced Monday that on May 3 it will absorb all activities and product of the Anglo-American Film Company.

Albion Film Productions will acquire the physical end of Anglo-American's business and guarantees Anglo-American's staff continuous employment.

Albion was formed by the Hyams brothers Philip and Sydney, whose considerable exhibition interests were purchased by J. Arthur Rank. Albion enters the distribution field by the purchase of reissue rights to 90 Universal features.

This deal, it is believed here, has sidetracked the David O. Selznick interests since Mr. Selznick has been banking on Anglo-American handling the distribution of "Duel in the Sun."

Two Benefit Performances For UA's "Carnegie Hall"

"Carnegie Hall," the Boris Morros production for United Artists release, will play two benefit performances May 1 in New York: at the Winter Garden for the New York Foundling Hospital and at the Park Avenue for the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund. All seats will sell at $10. The picture will begin its general New York run at both theatres May 2. The picture has 16 concert artists prominently cast.

Paramount Not To Use Bidding Except on Order

Paramount will not sell its productions on a competitive bidding basis except "where it may be required to do so by some other court of competent jurisdiction," it was announced Monday by Charles M. Reagan, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Instead, the company will license its pictures to exhibitors "picture by picture and theatre by theatre, upon the merits," according to Mr. Reagan.

Paramount, alone among the five theatre-owning defendants in the anti-trust suit, has appealed the competitive bidding provisions of the New York District Court's decree—provisions that were recently stayed for all defendants in the suit by the U. S. Supreme Court.

United Artists, it is understood, is considering a policy of non-exclusive runs in competitive areas where exhibitors insist on priority of run. Under this plan, UA would license runs simultaneously in situations where no other agreement can be reached among licensees.

It appeared at midweek that the majority of the defendants were not going to do anything about the District Court's order to dissolve theatre partnerships until after the Supreme Court rules on the order. Paramount, the company most deeply involved in the order, has come out with the flat statement that it will not dissolve its partnership until the Supreme Court hands down a ruling on the order.

Only RKO, out of the five theatre-owning defendants, has done much concerted work on partnerships. That company and Twentieth Century-Fox recently completed a dissolution deal, subject to Federal Court approval, concerning the only theatre the two companies jointly own: the Main Street in Kansas City, Mo. However, it is not expected that 20th-Fox will dissolve many of its theatre partnerships held by National Theatres until after the high court's decision. RKO, on the other hand, expects to keep working on dissolution plans. It is not expected, however, that the some 150 theatres in partnership owned by Paramount and RKO will be touched until the decision.

New Jersey Allied Meeting June 24 in Atlantic City

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey will hold their twenty-eighth annual convention June 24-26 at the Ambassador Hotel, Atlantic City. A theatre equipment show and a testimonial banquet in honor of Jack Kirsch, national Allied president, will be held in conjunction with the convention. Edward Lachman, president of New Jersey Allied, has appointed the following members to the convention committee: Irving Dollinger, Linden; George Gold, Newark; Lee Newbury, Manasquan; Harry H. Loewenstein, Newark, and Sam Frank, Hammonton.

HITS FORCING; SINGLES TRIED; ASKS SECURITY

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

In the April 12 issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, page 21, there was a letter written by Mr. Robert B. Wilby.

Mr. Wilby expresses very eloquently the views of almost every independent theatre owner. Mr. Wilby did not go as far along on the subject as I would have liked.

He did not touch on the many pictures that are not acceptable to audiences in sections of the country outside of New York. Yet these same pictures are forced on the exhibitors through the local distributors ignoring that portion of the Decree: "Each license shall be taken theatre by theatre and picture by picture." The forcing of these highly publicized and overrated pictures forces the exhibitor to sacrifice playing time that could be devoted to other pictures that would be much more acceptable to his audience.

This office has been building up a file for some time covering this almost universal abuse of forcing pictures and intends to take action against those local distributors who continue to ignore the dictates of their New York offices, and the New York court. The local distributors have built up a false sense of security in that they state, "It's my word against the exhibitor." These distributors will find at the proper time that it will be the word of forty or fifty exhibitors—instead of one exhibitor.

It is the duty of every exhibitor association to see to it that this practice of making the licensing of one picture dependent upon the licensing of another be stopped. Here in Indiana we are going to stop it.

When forced selling is stopped the exhibitor can return to his role of showman and book his theatre to cater to the demands of his patrons.—TRUEMAN T. REMBUSCH, President, Assoc. Theatre Owners of Indiana, Inc., Indianapolis, Indiana.

PRODUCT SECURITY LACK IS CITED

TO THE EDITOR OF HERALDS

Noted with much interest the letter to you from "our" "Bob" Wilby, anent exhibitors' changed status. He is so right, but he didn't go as far as he could have.

"Time was" when films were sold to the exhibitor for the highest price the trade would bear; then came the era of protection when a little man could get in and stay in, by virtue of an assured supply of product.

Now we have gone back to the auction era when high money gets the films and the exhibitor who wants to pay only what the pictures are actually worth to him goes broke trying to pay that, plus enough extra to actually get them away from his competitor. This is just going over territory that has been gone over a hundred times since last June, but we sure have come into an era of film buying when there is no such thing as product security. It looks like a dog fight from here on.—W. W. MOWBRAY, Royal Theatre, Blue Ridge, Ga.

RITCHEY AGREES THAT CUSTOMERS SHOULD DECIDE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I am full-heartedly in approval of your editorial entitled "Let Customers Decide."

At the close of the war the postal censors saw fit to discontinue the export censorship of motion pictures leaving the matter in the hands of those in control of export for the various motion picture companies. Such men should know which films should be exported and which should not. And, they likewise know from actual experience and continual contact with the many foreign markets what the "customers" are apt to like.

I fully agree with you that an attempt at over-all industry control is a great mistake and enjoyed very much reading your editorial.—NORTON V. RITCHEY, President, Monogram International Corp, New York City.

FOUND SINGLE BILL PLAN WAS WELL RECEIVED

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

In these days of trying times, trying to buy a feature at a price you can show a profit on them, trying to arrange well balanced double programs, and in short trying to make income meet expense, I for one decided to embark upon a new policy of single programs the first five days of the week, with a double feature policy Friday and Saturday.

I wanted to see how many people still liked double programs against a good single feature accompanied by a selection of good shorts.

After fifteen weeks of this policy I have summed up the figures and broken them down for my own use and am willing to pass them along to the other exhibitors in this business who still insist they must have a double feature or close the doors.

I know I am sticking my neck out by writing this to you for publication, as I am sure some of the distributors will read it and decide I am buying their product too cheap. Nevertheless, I am willing to take the gamble as I feel nothing will ever be gained in this business unless exhibitors are willing to trade information for their mutual advantage.

I have registered a gain in adults on my single program days. While not large, nevertheless it is gratifying. I have lost a few more children on those same days than I have gained in adults. Now for my two double program days I have lost a few adults and gained a few more children. Therefore, if you can believe statistics, they would prove that the adult trade is tired of double programs and would rather have quality and not quantity, while the children will take quantity and sacrifice the quality.

Also, I have saved a few hundred dollars, in film rental, coupled with an increase in receipts, which to me is very gratifying indeed. All this was accomplished in spite of the fact there is only one other theatre in Columbus running single programs and it is situated a long distance from me in an exclusive neighborhood. The other suburban theatres here are all dual houses.

I would like to hear from some of the others who may have tried singles.

As for myself, as long as I can show to enough adults to offset the loss in children, I will continue to do so, as it certainly gives you an advantage in buying when you do not have to grab everything that comes along in order to have enough features to fill out double bills.—THOMAS E. BENNETT, Mgr., Linden Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

May Premiere Is Set For "Thunderbolt"

William Wyler's Technicolor war feature, "Thunderbolt," released by Monogram, will have its premiere in Los Angeles in May. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commanding general of the U. S. Army Air Forces, will head a guest delegation from Washington attending the premiere.

United Artists To Release Five Features in May

Five pictures will be released nationally by United Artists in May. They are: "Ramrod," Enterprise-Harry Sherman production, May 2; "Adventures of Don Coyote," Comet production, May 9; "Dishonored Lady," Hunt Stromberg production, May 16; "Dangerous Venture," a Hopalong Cassidy, May 23, and "Copacabana," Sam Caslow production, May 30.

New Hal Roach Deal Approved by U.A.

The board of directors of United Artists approved last Thursday a new deal for the distribution of six "streamlined" comedy features produced by Hal Roach. Four have been completed: "Curley," "Fabulous Joe," "Here Comes Trouble," and "Who Killed Doc Robbin?"

Rogers and Circus In Eastern Tour

Roy Rogers and his horse, Trigger, will follow the circus circuit. The pair will open, along with Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers, in a Cowboy's Thrill Circus at the Polo Grounds, New York, June 15, for an eight-day run. The circus, which includes standards acts, will then play Columbus, Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

Television Chief Topic as SMPE Holds Meeting

Television took the spotlight with film matters this week as the 61st semi-annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers held its five-day meeting in Chicago. Paul J. Larsen, head of the Society's Television practices committee, disclosed that a film committee, now studying the aspects of theatre television, would present its findings and recommendations to the Motion Picture Association May 8.

Mr. Larsen warned that the film industry would have to act quickly if it did not want to be relegated to a minor role in television and said that the SMPE's decision to participate in the survey of television possibilities was in line with the Society's program to put television into motion picture theatres within two years. "I feel that the industry has to become so involved in theatre presentations of televised programs because, for the first time, television presents competition."

Are Seeking Channels

Speaking at the Drake Hotel, where all convention sessions were held, Mr. Larsen said that the group had asked the Federal Communications Commission to allocate television channels for theatres on three different occasions and that Eric Johnston, MPA president; Donald Nelson, head of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, and RKO Radio now also have applied for the frequencies recommended by SMPE. He also pointed out that television equipment could be installed in theatres at an average cost of $7,000.

Other speakers were Loren L. Ryder, who delivered the "Report of the President"; Orville H. Hicks of Loew's International, who, speaking on "American Films Abroad," said that if any part of foreign revenue is lost, domestic admission prices would have to be increased or the quality of product reduced. Eddy, managing director of WBKB, the Balaban & Katz television station in Chicago, who was the guest speaker at a get-together luncheon.

Widely Diverse Papers

T. Bowditch of National Carbon Company;

"Light and Optics in Motion Picture Projection," by E. R. Gelb and C. G. Ollinger of National Carbon Company, and "Psychology of the Sound Film," by L. Mercer Francisco of Francisco Films, Chicago.

An exhibit by the RCA Film Recording Department demonstrated how the use of magnesium alloy has made it possible to reduce the weight of RCA recorders to as little as one-fifth the weight of pre-war models. Barton Kreuzer, manager of RCA film recording activities, pointed out the 16mm recorder and one of the 35mm recorders on display weighed only about 40 pounds each.

Republic Plans $4,000,000 for New Promotion

During the coming year Republic will spend $4,000,000 on advertising, promotion and exploitation to pursue a merchandising policy to match the company's product. Herbert J. Yates, Republic president, told the third and final sales meeting at the studio last Wednesday.

The promise of increased expenditures in national advertising and exploitation was made before the combined western sales district and branch managers attending the meetings over which James R. Grainger, executive vice-president in charge of sales and distribution, presided.

In addition to the $4,000,000 advertising budget, special individual budgets will be made for special productions from Charles K. Feldman, such as "The Red Pony," "The Shadow" and "Macbeth," Mr. Yates announced.

In line with industry policy of expanded advertising budgets on top pictures, Mr. Yates said that $250,000 would be spent on each of the 10 de luxe pictures that Republic has slated. Also, $900,000 will be spent on special Roy Rogers promotion, and $600,000 spent to promote Republic's Trucolor process.

This year's appropriation for advertising and exploitation is an increase over last year's budget, which was announced at $3,500,000. With the addition of special budgets for selected pictures the company said the total advertising-exploitation expenditure for the year might run as high as $5,500,000.

3% Ticket Tax on Resort Houses New Jersey Law

In New Jersey resort motion picture theatres will be subject to a three per cent tax on admissions within the next six weeks. The "luxury tax" act has been adopted by the legislature and became a law without the governor's signature last weekend. The measure provides for a tax on all amusements, hotel bills, liquor and a two-cent per pack tax on cigarettes.

Local communities of the resort type can apply the tax only after a local referendum. Thus Atlantic City is expected to be the only community in the state affected.

New York Tax Fought

New York exhibition delegates appearing before the State Tax Commission last Thursday cited the extent to which additional theatre taxation has impaired business in cities in other states as evidence of the detrimental effect which New York levies will bring. The commission is conducting hearings preliminary to fashioning "model legislation" for the benefit of large cities and countries in the state which are now authorized to impose a new five per cent tax on admissions.

The delegation to the hearings included Robert W. Coyne, executive director of the American Theatres Association; Fred Schwartz, head of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, and Charles Smakwitz, Warner Theatres zone manager in Albany.

A compromise on the controversial proposal to repeal Ohio's three per cent admission tax is seen in Columbus after reports of growing sentiment among the 23-member House taxation committee for recommendation that the state continue to collect the tax and then distribute it to subdivisions of its origin.

Florida Circuit Files Suit

In Gainesville, Fla., Florida Inland Theatres, Inc., operators of three local theatres, filed suit in Alachua County Circuit Court seeking an injunction to restrain the city from collecting a graduated amusement tax which became effective April 6.

The ordinance, passed by the City Commission March 5, imposes a three-cent levy on admissions in excess of 25 cents but less than 50 cents; five cents on admissions from 50 cents to $1, and eight cents on all admissions above $1.

The plaintiffs contend that the tax is discriminatory, arbitrary and unreasonable.

The Colorado state legislature adjourned last Friday without passing any bills affecting the industry, according to Jack Bryson, legislative director of the Motion Picture Association. Colorado is the fifth to adjourn in the last two weeks and the twenty-second so far this year.

To Hear Reade Appeal In RKO Suit in May

The suit involves the operation of the 13-unit Trenton-New Brunswick Theatres Company, New Jersey, of which Mr. Reade owns 25 per cent, RKO owns 50 per cent, and the estate of the late Frank V. Storrs, owns 25 per cent. In June, 1945, Mr. Reade filed a complaint and motion for an injunction against RKO, asking that the management contract signed in 1942 by the three owners be declared illegal as a matter of law.

Eddie Albert Productions of Hollywood has embarked on full scale production of educational and information films for specialized groups, and plans ultimately to reach mass student audiences with the production of educational subjects for one complete curriculum, Eddie Albert, actor, announced in New York last Thursday.

The company has started production of one series of six pictures, "Understanding Ourselves," for use by police departments throughout the country. The pictures are designed to give a better understanding of racial questions. Paramount Will Have 64 Shorts During 1947-48

Paramount will release 64 short subjects, embracing nine different series, during the 1947-48 season, it was announced in Dallas Monday when Oscar A. Morgan, sales manager of short subjects and Paramount News, opened the first of a series of 31 meetings with district, branch and sales managers.

In the face of repeated reports on the high cost of producing cartoons, Mr. Morgan reported that Paramount will release 24 cartoons next season as against the 18 cartoons released during the current season because there is a "greater and more widespread demand for cartoon reels."

The Little Lulu cartoon series and the Pal Puppetoon series will be dropped from the 1947-48 releases and a new series to be known as Screen Songs, featuring the "bouncing ball," will replace them.

The complete list of shorts follows:

Six two-reel Musical Parade Featurettes in Technicolor.

Eight Noveltoons, eight Popeye and eight Screen Songs in Technicolor, to be produced by Famous Studios.

Six Popular Science and six Unusual Occupations, both in Magnacolor, and six Speaking of Animals, to be produced by Jerry Fairbanks.

The organization of a new independent motion picture and television production company, Screenplays, Inc., has been announced by Stanley Kramer, formerly executive producer of Story Productions and associate of David L. Loew. The new company's production policy envisions profit participation by writers and other creative talent, the utilization of comparatively young but established talent, and emphasis on American classics as the basis for films.

Mr. Kramer, in announcing the formation of the new firm, stated that the company is "in a modest way, an answer to film critics who decry the paucity of ideas which is keeping the industry in a stagnating groove."

Maestro Tiomkin Learned Early

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Back in those years when the French comedian, Max Linder, in his silk hat and striped trousers was running neck and neck with Charles Chaplin in his battered derby and baggy pants for first place among the one-reel champions of comedy on a still silent and somewhat flickery screen, young Dmitri Tiomkin was the "kid who rattled the music box" in a St. Petersburg, Russia, cinema, where the customers liked Linder the best. For a short cut to Maestro Tiomkin's identity we take you now to a short list of pictures selected from a long list of those for which he has composed the music scores that have had so much to do so inconspicuously with their dramatic effectiveness: "Lost Horizon," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "It's a Wonderful Life," "Duel in the Sun." (And give especial attention to the music score of the forthcoming "The Long Night" and "Red River," his latest works.)

HONKY-TONK in New Orleans, from the picture "New Orleans," a United Artists release produced by Jules Levey and directed by Arthur Lubin, and starring Arturo de Cordova and Dorothy Patrick. It was to be seen by showmen Thursday, April 24.

Learned Lessons Early

Like others who found their industry beginnings in that professional occupation, including one Sam Katz, now of MGM, Maestro Tiomkin learned about audience reaction to pictures at the time of its birth, and like most of them he has persisted unremittingly in its study. But like practically none of the others, he went on from that humble beginning to become a concert pianist, to come ultimately to America and perform in Carnegie Hall, arriving finally in Hollywood 19 years ago to engage in the then abhorning art of supplying on the sound track of the now vocal films the musical setting which, theretofore, had been supplied from the orchestra pit.

Over a loquacious table at Lucey's (that's a restaurant, sir) Maestro Tiomkin relates eloquently and with gestures acquired in directing symphony orchestras the long and frequently desperate struggle of the men on the music side of production to bring about a general realization of the seemingly obvious fact that if it takes 90 shooting days and $2,000,000 to get a picture onto film it takes more than a couple of minutes to compose, arrange and record a music score that will not embarrass the investment.

Until the supplying of music came to be a Hollywood operation, instead of the concern of several thousand theatre orchestra conductors operating everywhere, it was standard production technique to wind up the film editing job and turn the picture loose on the screen without further delay. The sheer habitual impatience of producers to see their finished product was, oddly, one of the problems hardest to overcome.

It still crops up, he says, but by now the cost of the music score, what with musicians working at the 1947 rate, is a big enough item in the over-all budget to command respectful waiting. In the beginning, too, there was little disposition to spend real money for a music score, in part because this represented a new category of expense, but that state of affairs, says Maestro Tiomkin, with a great sigh of content, is happily a thing of the past.

The composer-director whose services are booked as far in advance as most top stars' declines to venture an estimate as to the relative importance of a good score and the other prime contents of a good and successful picture.

And, as in "A Song to Remember," another Tiomkin job, it can take front and center now and then to entertain in its own right, but these opportunities are few. Not in all his years of surrounding major productions with music of consonant importance, though, has Maestro tried to calculate the entertainment—and therefore box office—value of a music score. Nor to suggest that exhibitors bill the scorer alongside the other major off-screen contributors to a production. Which seems, nonetheless, an idea worth weighing.

Bids for lease of Euclid Avenue Baptist Church for motion pictures have been presented to the Cleveland Baptist Association. It is understood that Cleveland theatre interests are seeking the location for an independently operated downtown house. If deal goes through, it will be the only non-affiliated downtown theatre in town. Others are operated by RKO, Loew's and Warners.

COLUMBUS

Generally mild business was the rule for downtown first runs during the past week. "The Macomber Affair" at the Ohio, "Trail Street" at the Palace and Grand and a dual repeat run of "Kit Carson" and "The Last of the Mohicans" at the Broad were the entries. The latter bill attracted more patronage than some recent local new films. "Henry V" concluded a two-week roadshow engagement at the Hartman to satisfactory returns but most other cities of comparable size eclipsed the local run. . . . First run English and foreign language films will be shown at the rechristened World theatre, formerly the Olentangy, when it reopens May 14 under management of Al Sugarman and Lee Hofheimer. . . . First attraction will be "Brief Encounter." . . . Charles Radeaugh, ex-Air Corps bombardier, will be manager of the World. . . . The Palace and the Oio will have two strong films starting May 1. . . . "The Best Years of Our Lives" at advanced prices at the Palace and "The Yearling" at regular prices at the Ohio. . . . The Riverside drive-in theatre, operated by TAKING a busman's holiday is J. E. Elliott's favorite off-duty recreation. Chief operator at the Lincoln theatre, Hodgenville, Ky., he spends most of his spare time visiting other theatres and helping out in the booth. He scouts out new installations of equipment and is usually on hand to help bolt the projection machinery to the floor. He assists and advises beginners in his field and on several occasions has helped the theatres he visits with their popcorn and candy concessions and has repaired their ticket machines and coin changers. Mr. Elliott's specialized form of theatre-going has attracted the attention of newspaper columnists and he was recently the object of attention by the Louisville Times.

The city's drive-in theatre has opened an advance in adult admissions—from 50 to 60 cents—but with children under 12 admitted free. Exhibitors both in the city and out in the territory say patronage is off, indicating a 10 to 25 per cent reduction. No admission reductions have been reported or predicted. . . . "The Best Years of Our Lives" is in its third week here. . . . The Tampico, which has been showing Spanish language features, has switched its policy to English language films. . . . 400 young peo-

Legal notices filed in local court reveal the organization of the John P. Morgan Co., Inc., organized for the operation of motion pictures; and that the Stenton theatre has been taken over by the A. M. Ellis independent circuit.

PITTSBURGH

"The Jolson Story," which proved sensational over a five-week run in the J. P. Harris, is doing just as well in the neighborhood theatres. In three of the suburban houses it was held over for extra days, something that is practically unknown in those particular houses. . . None of the first run houses appear to have shaken off the slump that enveloped the downtown grosses around the Lenton holidays. The only picture to hold its own, despite excellent weather conditions, being "The Best Years of Our Lives," now in its seventh week in the Fulton.

SAN FRANCISCO

Weekly grosses took on a rosier hue this week with a group of strong attractions. "Ramrod" and "Calcutta" expect to slice a neat record for themselves with first three days of run building well. "Sea of Grass," "The Macomber Affair" and "Best Years" are competing heavily, all doing well above average. . . "Trail Street" at the Golden Gate did the biggest business for that house since "Bells of St. Mary's." . . George Siciliano has taken over the management of the Strand, Modesto, and his former post at the Lyric goes to James Cleveland. . . Rex Stevenson, city manager for Golden State Theatres, announced the following changes among managers: Harry Fontana, manager of the Strand, moves over to the Granada; Reek Seliziani replaces Fontana at the Strand; Jimmy Edwards, a veteran of 23 years with G. S., takes over the helm at the Amazon, and Dave Davidson has been transferred to the Verdi, replacing E. Clayton. . . Construction of a $100,000 theatre in San Joaquin Valley is the plan of Bert Henson of Henson Enterprises. . . Golden States' newest venture, and one of the first post-war theatres to be constructed in the Bay area, is the Lorenzo, which opened at Lorenzo Village.

SEATTLE

"The Best Years of Our Lives" entered its fourth week at road show prices at the Music Hall and continued to top the Seattle box office parade. "Open City" at the Blue Mouse and "Life and Loves of Beethoven" at the Metropolitan pointed up the ever-increasing flow of European films into Seattle. . . Executives of Film Row threw a party for Tom Aspell prior to his leaving the MGM branch here to assume charge of the MGM branch in Los Angeles. Sam Davis was named to replace Mr. Aspell. . . Glen Haviland was appointed salesman for Eagle-Lion by Wally Rucker, branch manager. . . Visitors on Film Row: Rex Thompson, Port Orchard; Lionel Brown, Edmonds; Elden Pollock, Mount Vernon; Billy Connors and John Owsley, Tacoma; Mike Barovic, Puyallup; and Walt Graham, Shelton.

TORONTO

For five weeks the Tivoli and Victoria theatres, Toronto, have had the one feature, "The Jolson Story," with line-ups regularly in evidence, while the Uptown theatre has continued with "The Egg and I" for a third week and "The Macomber Affair" remained for a second week at Loew's. . . Shea's opened strongly with "13 Rue Madeleine" and "Deception" took over at the big Imperial, with the British picture, "The Captive Heart," starting at two Famous Players' houses, the Capitol and Victoria. . . The International Cinema is bidding for another long-term run with "The Way to the Stars" which has completed seven weeks. . . At its 25th annual meeting the Musical Protective Society of Canada elected as its president Angus MacCunn, a company director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., and returned Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, as secretary-treasurer. . . The Ontario Board of Censors gave "adult" rating to four features in March, these being "Swell Guy," "Smash Up," "Brute Man" and "Private Affairs of Bel Ami."

VANCOUVER

Theatre equipment business is booming in British Columbia and Alberta. Many spots are installing new projectors, lamps, and sound systems, other theatres are waiting for theatre chairs to arrive from Eastern Canada. . . The newsprint shortage has hit amusement business. Shortage so acute the Vancouver Sun has eliminated theatre advertising one day each week. A limit of 700 lines per day has been placed for any one theatre. Other B. C. papers also cut theatre space. . . Daytime grosses have slumped, pulling down the overall average. "The Best Years of Our Lives" on a road-show policy at Odeon-Hastings opened to only normal business, but is expected to build. . . Both Famous Players and Odeon Circuit recently purchased property in Kamloops for expansion purposes. . . Del Fox will build a new theatre at Pincher Creek. . . Hymie Singer, former owner of the State, Vancouver, has purchased the Rio theatre, Victoria, from the Preswick estate. House seats 459. . . Union organizers are working in Vancouver to form doormen, ushers, cashiers, and janitors and others in amusement business into union. . . John Ruston, veteran B. C. exhibitor who ran the Royal New Westminster in the early days, died in New Westminster at 73.

WASHINGTON

Washington theatre business was given added impetus when 75,000 visitors from all over the country arrived for the two-day Cherry Blossom Festival. Holdovers were "Best Years of Our Lives," at RKO Keith's for a sixth week, and "The Yearling," at Loew's Palace for a second week. New openings were "Dead Reckoning" at the Earle; "Trail Street" at Warner's Metropolitan; "Carnival in Costa Rica" at Loew's Capitol. . . After the engagement of "Dead Reckoning," Warner's Earle will upset a 22-year tradition, to put in a twin bill, reissues of "The Sea Hawk" and "The Sea Wolf." . . Bill Fischer, Columbia Pictures, has been promoted to office manager-head booker. . . The Variety Club Tent No. 11 honored the ladies who worked on their last Welfare Drive by giving them a luncheon on April 19, at the Carlton.

Film Library Aim To Double Total Using Product

With pictures from the Motion Picture Association's "Children's Film Library" booked by more than 1,000 theatres, the MPA is about to launch a drive aimed at doubling the number of houses using these selected children's shows. This was announced last week at a trade press conference at the Harvard Club in New York by Arthur De Bra, director of MPA's community relations department. The campaign, which will use promotion through all possible media, will last for three months.

During that time the Library hopes to raise the number of available titles to 52, all of them having been reviewed and approved by both children's and parent's groups, Mr. De Bra said. At present the Library contains some 30 titles.

Favorable Reactions Cited

The MPA felt justified in its belief that the program was capable of considerable expansion, Mr. De Bra explained, on the basis of past performance, which included favorable reactions not only from women's clubs and Parent-Teacher Associations, but also from city officials, clergymen, school superintendents and child-welfare organizations. Total number of bookings in the six months since the announcement of the Library amounted to about 6,000 as of April 1, he said, and theatre participation during that period has been heavier than during the whole lifetime of the original Saturday Morning Movie program initiated in 1925.

To start its drive, the MPA, on behalf of the Children's Library, has issued a 33-page booklet giving details of the program and outlining the product available. Copies will be shipped to women's associations, schools and other interested individuals and groups. Each new exhibitor subscribing to the program will have the MPA's guarantee of pre-release publicity and promotion, Mr. De Bra explained.

Visiting Exchanges

He also said that MPA representatives had visited 24 out of 31 exchanges, talking to exchange and branch managers in an effort to rally support for the enterprise. "For every reason it seems desirable to develop special children's programs in as many community theatres as possible," he declared. "We aim to have an exchange manager in each territory act as chairman of the Children's Film Library and one or more women in each exchange territory act as 'correspondent' to help individual women and organized groups in the territory work out problems that are unique to particular community situations." Rentals run from $10 to $35 on the Library product, with admission from 10 to 25 cents.

Mr. De Bra pointed out that the Library was "a reservoir of films on which exhibitors may draw when their regularly booked Saturday feature, or an acceptable all-shorts program are not available or desired by them." He also expressed the hope that all publicity, exploitation and public relations personnel connected with theatres and circuit operations would promote the Children's Special Programs through all media available for them.

Studios to Greet Variety Clubs

Studio chiefs will join in greeting 1,200 Variety Clubs International delegates at the eleventh annual convention in Hollywood May 13 through 17. The executives stressed the importance of a gathering in the film capital bringing together the leading producers, distributors and exhibitors in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Monday it was announced the Humanitarian Awards Dinner will be held May 17 at the Warner Studio, with Jack L. Warner as host. Entertainment by Warner stars will follow the dinner.

Louis B. Mayer, production head of MGM said: "I know of no fellowship so devoted to the finest ideals of humanity and it is with great pride that I am privileged to share the sincere welcome extended (to the Variety clubs) by the entire motion picture industry."

Henry Ginsberg, of Paramount studios said: "It will afford those who produce the nation's films an opportunity to renew contacts with the exhibitors and distributors."

Other expressions were from Darryl F. Zanuck, Harry Cohn, Samuel Brody, Nate Blumberg, Herbert J. Yates, N. Peter Rathvon, Jack L. Warner and others.

"Duel" Ahead of "Wind," Selznick Office Claims

David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun," now playing at Loew's Theatre in Rochester, N. Y., took in $28,088 during the past four-day weekend, an announcement from the Selznick Organization in New York, said this week. This amount tops by more than $7,000 the gross of the same producer's "Gone With the Wind" for the corresponding period, the company said.

With "Duel" 35 per cent ahead of "Gone With the Wind" in Rochester, it also pulled ahead at Loew's in Syracuse where it took in $19,655 in the four weekend days. "Wind" tallied $17,866 during that same period. Both Loew theatres will hold the picture for

The producer opened two new offices in San Francisco and Seattle this week. Harry Hunsaker, formerly city salesman for United Artists, has been named branch manager for the Selznick Organization in San Francisco while the Seattle office will be headed by James Walsh, formerly of the Republic sales department. William P. Rosenow, former Paramount representative, is Buffalo branch manager.

MPEA Taking Over in Germany From U. S. Army

An agreement providing for the early transfer of American distribution in Germany from the American Military Government to the Motion Picture Export Association was concluded this week. At the same time, British and American officials reached a complete accord on a distribution exchange between the American and British zones. News of these developments was contained in a cable sent by Irving Maas, MPEA vice-president and general manager, from Berlin.

According to Mr. Maas, the de-militarization of distribution in Germany will materialize within the next eight weeks. Details of the transfer were worked out in a series of conferences between Brigadier General Robert A. McClure, director of AMG's Information Control Division, Mr. Maas and members of the general's staff. AMG will retain the right to censor all subjects released by the MPEA, but otherwise MPEA will operate with full and unrestricted commercial license as it now does in Austria, limited only by what the market can absorb. An MPEA spokesman in New York said several of the more experienced personnel, who had been operating so far under AMG, may switch over to MPEA.

Mr. Maas' cable said the Anglo-American meetings resulted in "complete agreement on all points concerning a free competitive market for the more than 2,000 theatres now operating in the two zones." The free interchange of films will start July 1.

Last week also, Mr. Maas was the guest-of-honor at a number of gatherings in Berlin. First he was feted by Michael L. G. Balfour, director of the British Information Services Control Commission, at a luncheon in the British sector. Later the MPEA head was host to key civilian members of AMG's headquarters and branch organizations. Earlier, while in Paris, he met American executives and representatives, including Arthur M. Loew, Loew's International head, and Joseph H. Seideman, president of Universal-International. Mr. Maas now is in Prague and is expected in the U. S. early next month.

From Warsaw last week came word that the new Polish Government had ratified the Film Polski agreement with the Motion Picture Export Association, effective May 15, for the distribution of 65 American films in Poland, where Russian pictures so far have dominated the market.

Fine on Copyright Violation

It's here—a new convenience on the C&O

NO TIPPING

of any C & O employee*

WHY should you—the paying customer of the railroads—have to shell out for so many of the ordinary services you need when you travel?

Why shouldn't your rail ticket entitle you to courteous personal service—without extra charge?

The Chesapeake & Ohio does not believe the travelers on its railroad should have to tip—and is taking the first step toward abolishing this nuisance. From now on, you are urgently requested not to tip C&O employees for any of the services they perform.

This means you won't have to leave a tip on the change tray when you eat on a C&O diner. It means you won't have to dig down for change for the porters who serve the coaches on C&O crack trains.

We cannot extend the no-tipping rule to union terminals shared by the C&O with other railroads, since the redcaps in these stations are not on our pay roll. Nor can the no-tipping rule apply on Pullmans, since the porters are employed by the Pullman Company—not by us.

But wherever C&O employees are on hand to serve you, you'll find no outstretched palms—for we'll compensate these employees directly for attending to your needs.

This move to end the tipping nuisance is the latest, but not the last, of many improvements in rail travel offered by the C&O.

Naturally, this does not apply to Pullman porters, or to redcaps in union terminals, since they are not C&O employees.

TO MAKE FRENCH FILMS IN HOLLAND

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

While there is no domestic production here at the present, preparations are being made for the production of some French pictures in Amsterdam at the newly equipped Cinetone Studios. Probably production will start this spring or summer. Jean Cocteau, the well known producer, and the French actor, Jean Marais, will definitely produce at Cinetone and there are deals pending for some British production here.

There are only 420 theatres in operation in the country at present. Before the war, Holland had a total of 470, but 26 of them were destroyed during the war and 24 are not in operation.

Block booking is forbidden here by a Government decree. A contract must be made for each picture.

Pictures with war themes are unpopular here no matter how well made they may be. Pictures with too definite an American theme are also being poorly received. "Going My Way," despite Bing Crosby's popularity here, was not accepted by the public and press.

Jack Wesel, pre-war manager of Warner Brothers' Dutch office in Amsterdam, has died. He was 62 years old and was one of the most popular personalities in the Dutch industry.

For the first time in her life Queen Wilhelmina has visited a public theatre. She chose the Amsterdam Kriterion where Eisenstein's "Ivan the Terrible" was playing.

HUNGARY

by ALEXANDER FODOR
in Budapest

Indications are that Hungary will resume film production in August, although at present preparations are handicapped by much excited argument over the Government's film decree recently issued. That part of the decree most violently objected to makes it mandatory that all screen plays be censored in advance of production. When production is resumed from eight to 10 pictures will be produced annually. This is only about 25 per cent of the number produced before the war.

American films take up about 80 per cent of the playdates in Budapest theatres. During the Easter holiday week 18 houses played Hollywood features; English pictures were shown in two and a Russian film in one.

Lately certain newspapers have severely criticized American films, basing their criticisms on reports published abroad. Most of the articles quoted Samuel Goldwyn's recent sharp statement on Hollywood's manner of production.

Despite this, however, there was enormous business during Easter week for American pictures. "Arabian Nights," "Tarzan's New York Adventure," and "Holiday Inn" were particularly popular, as was "Two Faced Woman."

The motion picture industry apparently defies financial depression. Stage theatres, however, continue to face a very serious situation.

PUERTO RICO

by E. SANCHEZ ORTIZ
in San Juan

A five per cent increase in admission taxes—from 20 to 25 per cent—on all public shows, including motion pictures, is provided in a bill approved by the legislature in a surprise move the last day of the session. No public hearings were held on the bill and the approval of the bill comes in the face of a demand from the Consumers Congress of Puerto Rico for an investigation of the high admissions charged by motion picture theatres.

In other action the legislature passed a bill providing tax exemption for new industries, including the production of motion picture for commercial distribution. The bill would give exemption to new production companies for a period of 17 years—or until June 30, 1964.

The legislature also passed a bill amending the income tax law by declaring all foreign artists visiting the Island residents of Puerto Rico, thus enabling them to pay a lower income tax rate. All public shows held for charitable institutions are tax exempt in yet another bill passed by the legislature.

EGYPT

in Jaffa

The protection of the local industry from dubbing is currently being studied by the Government. A resolution is to be published by the Minister of Social Welfare explaining the point of view of the Government.

The Union of Syndicates, including actors and musicians, has made up its mind about dubbing and has published the following warnings:

No professional actor, player or musician may participate in dubbing a picture in Arabic with the exception of Turkish pictures.

No studios, by order of the Syndicates and Producers' Union, may participate in dubbing in Arabic under penalty of boycott.

No theatre may show any foreign picture dubbed in Arabic. If it does, the theatre will be boycotted and Egyptian product withheld from it.

By law, all foreign pictures shown in Egypt must be subtitled in Arabic.

A studio is being built in Baghdad, Iraq, for making Arabic pictures. British technicians are assisting.

MEXICO

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

The trade is again concerned by the moves the local municipal government is making toward placing a ceiling on admissions for public amusements, particularly for motion picture theatres and vaudeville revues. There have been renewed and increased complaints about the $1.50 charged for the vaudeville-revue shows and the 85 cents charged for many first runs. Reports are that the Government will seek to place a 45- to 65-cent ceiling on first runs of ordinary pictures and 85 cents for a "super" film. Local first runs have made 85 cents standard during the last few years. Some have charged as high as $1.

Salvador Toscano, the "Father of Mexican Motion Pictures," has died here at the age of 76. He was the first to import motion picture cameras and other equipment, produced two-reel films in 1904, and opened Mexico's first two cinemas in 1905.

Greek Orphans Drive Showing Results

In telegrams last Thursday to district and branch managers, and circuit heads, Ned Depinet, S. H. Fabian and Jack Cohn, national co-chairman, and Tom Connors, national distributor chairman, of the industry's Appeal for the War Orphans of Greece, called for an all-out effort to bring the $1,200,000 drive in honor of Spyros P. Skouras to a successful conclusion. Among those circuits which have already subscribed in accordance with the formula of the drive—one orphan for every theatre—are Warner Brothers Theatres, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh; RKO Theatres, Comerford Circuit, Century Circuit, Skouras Theatre Circuit, National Theatres Corporation, Balaban & Katz, and Netco.

Louis de Rochemont Wins American Design Award

Louis de Rochemont, producer for Twentieth Century-Fox, was one of four leaders in the cultural arts awarded checks of $1,000 April 17 in New York by the American Design Awards, originated and sponsored by Lord and Taylor, a New York department store. Mr. de Rochemont was honored for incorporating documentary technic in motion pictures to achieve authenticity and realism. His latest feature using this technic is "Boomerang."

New Newsreel Is Ready to Start

A new newsreel, the Telenews Digest, which will be issued once weekly, with the first scheduled for May 1, has been announced by Telenews Productions of New York, an affiliate of the Telenews theatre circuit.

According to the announcement from the company the Telenews Digest is not being produced to compete with the existing five major newsreels, but will be used to supplement the reels currently in existence. The newsreel will be made in addition to Telenews Productions' short subject program, now under way.

The move to enter the newsreel production field by Telenews was caused by the great amount of duplications of stories now found in the major newsreel releases, the announcement said.

Response to the proposed reel by newsreel theatre operators throughout the country has been good, the company says. For New York, the reel has been contracted for by the Embassy and Trans-Lux groups, as well as the Grand Central Newsreel house. The reel will be made available for regular theatres.

Three MGM Trade Shows Announced for May

MGM will tradeshow three features in May. They will be "Cynthia," with Elizabeth Taylor, George Murphy and Mary Astor, in Los Angeles and New York, May 12 and elsewhere May 15; "Fiesta," in Technicolor, starring Esther Williams, in Los Angeles and New York, May 19 and elsewhere May 20, and "Romance of Rosy Ridge," starring Van Johnson with Thomas Mitchell, May 26 in Los Angeles and New York and other exchanges May 27. The reissue, "Gone With the Wind," will be shown Monday at the New York exchange only. No release dates have been set for any of the pictures.

RKO Television Moves

The executive offices of RKO Television Corporation have been moved to the Pathe Building, 625 Madison Avenue, New York. Ralph B. Austrian, head of the corporation, said the move was the result of the color ruling of the Federal Communications Commission which gave the green light to producers of black-and-white receivers. Mr. Austrian said his company was now ready to produce everything from minute movies to multi-reel subjects for television sponsors.

Affiliated Screening Held

Affiliated Film Producers, Inc., of New York, held a screening of four of its subjects at the Museum of Modern Art, Tuesday evening. The subjects shown were "Journey Into Medicine," "East by North," "Osmosis" and "Puerto Rico." The latter is distributed by RKO Pathe as "Forgotten Island" in the "This Is America" series.

Newsreels Had Texas Films On Screen in 48 Hours

Newsreel pictures of the Texas City disaster hit the screens of the nation's theatres only a little more than 48 hours following the first blast Wednesday morning of last week. The companies released their reels simultaneously Friday afternoon in New York, but pre-released the material in the rest of the country.

The initial films of the havoc wrought by the explosions were shot by freelance cameramen. All of the five major companies had from five to seven representatives in Texas City. A special army plane, carrying staff-men and sound equipment, left Washington Wednesday. RKO-Pathe had 700 feet of film on hand Thursday, but decided to hold it back pending further shipments. The company claimed an exclusive with first pictures in London theatres Saturday.

With an average of 4,000 feet of negative, most newsreels included material on the catastrophe in their issues again this week. The reels released last Friday each contained about 700 feet on the subject.

Kentucky ATO Fighting Percentage Pictures

Violent opposition to percentage pictures has been expressed among Kentucky exhibitors. Some members of the Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners have come forward with the suggestion that the Association organize so tightly that no owner in the state would buy on a percentage basis. Other members have suggested sponsoring state legislation which would kill or curb percentage pictures.

Metro Will Open Meeting Monday

Approximately 115 MGM home office officials and field personnel will attend the company's sales conference beginning Monday at the Hotel Astor in New York. William F. Rodgers, vice-president and general sales manager, will open the first of a series of meetings which are expected to last for at least a week.

The home office group to attend the session include: Edward M. Saunders and Edwin W. Aaron, assistant general sales managers; H. M. Richey, assistant to Mr. Rodgers and head of exhibitor relations, Howard Dietz, vice-president and director of advertising, publicity and exploitation; Silas F. Seadler, advertising manager; William R. Ferguson, exploitation head; Herbert Crooker, publicity manager; M. L. Simons and Maurice Wolf, assistants to Mr. Richey; Alan F. Cummings, in charge of exchange operations; Jay Eisenberg, liaison between sales and distribution; Pincus Sober, assistant to Mr. Eisenberg.

Also, Joel Bezahler, Charles F. Deesen, Irving Helfont, Leonard Hirsch and Paul J. Richrath, assistants to field sales managers; Jay Gove, manager, sales research; Harold Postman, assistant to Mr. Cummings; William B. Zoellner, head of reprints and importations; Max Wolff, purchasing head, and Max Weinberg, short subjects publicity.

Sales, district and branch managers, as well as head bookers, will attend from the field.

Liberty Sale to Paramount Blocked by Stevens

Hollywood Bureau

The sale of Liberty Films, Inc., to Paramount has been blocked by the refusal of George Stevens, one of the directors, to agree to the sale. His objection to the sale of the company, once almost sold to MGM, is believed to be based on his desire to remain an independent producer. He may, it is reported, join Leo McCarey in Rainbow Productions. Frank Capra, William Wyler and Samuel J. Briskin are the other heads of Liberty, which has assets of approximately $5,000,000.

MGM Previews Prize Cartoon

A special preview of the MGM cartoon, "The Cat Concerto," which won the Academy Award for the best cartoon of the year, was screened at the Biennial Convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs in Detroit Tuesday.

John Beck, formerly general manager of Universal-International's studio, has been promoted to an executive position under Leo Spitz. Edward Muhl, with Universal for a number of years, has been promoted to Mr. Beck's former position.

U. S. Approves 16 Bids for Theatre Building, Repair

Sixteen applications to build or repair theatres in various parts of the country have been approved by the Office of the Housing Expediter in Washington.

Six applications were approved on the basis of severe hardship: Richards-Lightman Theatres Corp., Hope, Ark., to replace a fire loss; Louis P. and J. R. Gold, Belle Blade, Fla., to replace a building condemned; H. N. Beamer, Hailey, Idaho, to relieve hardship through prior commitments; Tuscarawas Amusement Co., Ulrichsville, O., to repair a fire-damaged theatre; H. W. Leriger, Lyons, Neb., and Ross B. Mehl, Walnut Creek, Cal., because of eviction from present premises.

Neil Hellman, of Albany, received approval of an $8,000 open-air theatre on the grounds it would not interfere with housing.

Nine were approved on the basis of veteran ownership: Thomas C. Riddles, Palm City, Cal.; W. Lee Austin, Arvin, Cal.; Robert H. Perkins, Woodbine, Ky.; Keith A. Falcon, Zachary, La.; Leslie M. Kessler, Oakland, Cal.; Howard A. Anderson and John H. Holliday, Pamplico, S. C.; Weldon G. Girard, San Diego, Cal.; Walter H. Kahler, Butler, Mo., and Robert M. Rockoff, Delton, Wis.

A letter of authority to construct a drive-in theatre in Fall River, Mass., has been granted by the Board of Selectmen to Salvatore L. Romano. Mr. Romano's permit was approved by the Selectmen on the grounds that he was a wounded war veteran and that the Government already had approved the construction permit.

J. Leland Young, manager of the Broadway and Casino theatres in Clinton, S. C., has announced plans for a new $100,000 theatre, seating 846, in Spartanburg, S. C.

May Relax Restrictions On Drive-In Building

A spokesman for the Office of the Housing Expediter in Washington late last week said that a relaxation in restrictions on construction of drive-in theatres is being considered. A decision is expected by next week. The relaxation, it was reported, might take the form of a blanket exemption for all projects meeting certain qualifications or it might be in the standards the projects must meet to be approved by the Government.

Settle Dispute

Differences between owners of the Alerton, Beach, Kraft, Melba, and Park theatres, in New York, and the Motion Picture Theatres Operating Managers and Assistant Managers Guild were dissolved last week. The union and the owners agreed to a contract providing increased pay and other conditions.

Promotion Plans Are Set For Eagle-Lion Product

Eagle-Lion's "Repeat Performance" has been allotted a budget of at least $250,000 in national advertising and exploitation, it was announced this week with the return to New York from Hollywood conferences of Max E. Youngstein, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, and Jerry Pickman, publicity manager. The picture will have its premiere May 22 in Zanesville, Ohio. Highlighting the campaign will be a managers' exploitation contest for which $2,500 or more will be awarded in prizes. Also discussed on the coast were campaigns for "Red Stallion," "Love from a Stranger," "Out of the Blue," "Lost Honeymoon," "Green for Danger" and "Caravan," the last two British pictures. Alfred W. Schwalberg, vice-president and sales manager, and Mr. Youngstein will tour the company's 31 exchanges next month.

Rocky Mountain Allied Increasing Membership

"Growing fast" was the verdict of officers of Allied Rocky Mountain Theatres, as they announced arrival of many letters and membership checks at the Denver office last week. Members may use the unit's Denver office so "they will not have to humbly ask to borrow a distributor's telephone," a unit bulletin stated. More office space and a permanent location are sought.

RCA Promotes O'Brien

Jack O'Brien, formerly manager of RCA Theatres Equipment sales, has been appointed manager of the division. He succeeds J. R. Little, now sales manager of RCA Distributed Products.

Joint Collection In N. Y. Talked

Joint collection in the New York area's 700-odd theatres for national "Health Week" was approved at a board meeting of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association this week. Under the program, collection baskets for all charitable and disease-fighting organizations in the area would be passed.

This would be the first such joint collection by exhibitors. The idea itself is not new. It was brought up last year for application on a national scale and received prompt approval by the three national theatre groups, including Allied States, the American Theatres Association and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. However, the plan had to be abandoned when both the March of Dimes and the American Red Cross expressed their unwillingness to participate.

Although none of these two groups is expected to change their stand on the matter, the New York exhibitor association will consider the launching of a joint collection campaign for other causes like the American Heart Foundation and other groups.

"WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME"

Columbia

ALIAS MR. TWILIGHT: Michael Duane, Trudy Marshall—Very good for a Sunday attraction. Played Sunday, March 9.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

BLAZING THE WESTERN TRAIL: Charles Starrett, Tex Harding—Good old Charles. Lots of support at the box office. Played Friday, Saturday, April 11, 12.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

DEAD RECKONING: Humphrey Bogart, Elizabeth Scott—A good Bogart melodrama which seemed to me to fall apart near the end. Also, considering that we played it first run for this vicinity, its drawing power was not exceptional. Business only fair. In this locality murder is slowly beginning to lose its appeal. Played Sunday-Tuesday, April 6-8.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me.

DESERT HORSEMAN: Charles Starrett, Smiley Burnette—Good Durango Kid Western. They always please here. Business O.K. Played Saturday, March 22.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

JOLSON STORY, THE: Larry Parks, William Demarest—All of our house attendance records fell before this one. Furthermore, its popularity is no result of trick advertising, but it is based on the solid fact that it is probably the best popular musical of its type anybody ever made. It is radical, for Hollywood's formula of telling, with only slight deviations from the truth, the simple story of Jolson's life plus one magnificently rendered song after another give it a fundamental appeal which other pictures have seldom approached. Whether or not you care for Al Jolson himself, or whether or not you have heard of him, the "Jolson Story" will go straight to your heart. You will hum its songs for weeks afterwards. You can see it over and over again and like it better each time. As an exhibitor you can play it in your theatre until Domoosday and pack the house every night. Played Sunday-Wednesday, March 23-26.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me.

RENDEZVOUS WITH ANNIE: Eddie Albert, Faye Marlowe—If you haven't played this one, be sure to do so. The title won't draw them in, but if you play it on a Sunday double bill it will do well. Played Sunday, Monday.—W. P. Elkins, Lewis Theatre, Garrison, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

TWO FISTED STRANGER: Charles Starrett, Smiley Burnette—Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette are always welcome here. Good Western. Played Friday, Saturday, March 21, 22.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

VOICE OF THE WHISTLER: Richard Dix, Lynn Merrick—Used on weak half of double bill. Not worth using at all for our trade. Played Friday, Saturday, March 21, 22.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COURAGE OF LASSIE: Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan—It is a shame that Metro can't put out more features like this one. More power to "Lassie." We did extra business on this one for midweek. Played Wednesday, Thursday.—W. P. Eakins, Lewis Theatre, Garrison, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

FAITHFUL IN MY FASHION: Tom Drake, Donna Reed—Weak in stars and rather weak in story as well. However, a good supporting cast put over the picture's lighter moments. Backed up with a Western, it makes fair entertainment. It gets sentimental in spots. Played Monday, March 17.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

GREEN YEARS, THE: Charles Coburn, Tom Drake—I didn't see much of this picture because I was too busy trying to find empty seats for my customers. The customers said it was good. Business better the second night. It played in competition with a well attended Bingo game the first night. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Jan. 7, 8.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Marie Wilson—A better draw than "Easy to Wed," and just as funny. We had a sellout crowd for this effort. A good comedy is appreciated once in a while. The cast was good. We are looking forward to more of the same. Played Friday, March 14.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

... the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box office performance of product — providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York 20.

NO LEAVE, NO LOVE: Van Johnson, Marie Wilson—Played this early. That is, early for this community, and did less business than on "Night and Day"; however, it is a fair show and well liked. Played Sunday, Monday, March 23, 24.—W. F. Caudell, South Miami Theatre, South Miami, Fla. Suburban and rural patronage.

THREE WISE FOOLS: Margaret O'Brien, Lionel Barrymore—Didn't receive the good comments that the former Margaret O'Brien pictures have received. Business was a little below average. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

UNDERCURRENT: Robert Taylor, Katharine Hepburn—It was a different picture. The locals didn't care much for it, but those who came out to see it seemed to like it. Small towns usually go for more action. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—G. R. Borden, Jr., Am-Bc Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

UNDERCURRENT: Katharine Hepburn, Robert Taylor—Fair show, but my audience didn't care for it, so business was only medium. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 26, 27.—Logan Hedrick, Homer Theatre, Homer, Ill.

Monogram

DANGEROUS MONEY: Sydney Toler, Gloria Warren—This is the first Charlie Chan we have played, and it clicked. Played Friday, Saturday, March 21, 22.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

DON'T GAMBLE WITH STRANGERS: Kane Richmond, Bernadene Hayes—Despite the fact that we put out 3,000 heralds on this, it did poorly. Of course, business has been off since the first of January, but with the kind of advertising campaign we gave it, it should have grossed much more. However, it is a good program picture. Played Thursday, Friday, April 10, 11.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

BOWERY BOMBSHELL: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall—This is a good picture of the type the East Side Kids, now known as Bowery Boys, usually make. Played Thursday, Friday, April 3, 4.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

BRINGING UP FATHER: Joe Yule, Renie Riano—This one was O. K. for laughs. I double billed it with "Spook Busters" and had a dandy midweek. Played Tuesday-Thursday, March 11-13.—G. R. Borden, Jr., Am-Bc Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

SUSPENSE: Belita, Barry Sullivan—This one has suspense. We got a good print from Monogram for a change. This is a good picture if you can buy it right and it will stand alone in small towns and rural sections. Played Sunday, Monday.—W. P. Eakins, Lewis Theatre, Garrison, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

SWEETHEART OF SIGMA CHI: Elyse Knox, Phil Regan—I predict that Miss Knox will go places. It would pay some big company to buy her contract and build her up as a star, as she has all it takes to go to the top. How would she be in Technicolor? Played Sunday, March 23.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

UNDER ARIZONA SKIES: Johnny Mack Brown, Raymond Hatton—Johnny Mack Brown seems to be picking up more customers now. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Paramount

HERE COME THE WAVES: Bing Crosby, Betty Hutton—Didn't meet expenses on this show. Another program picture which Paramount sold me on percentage. Played Tuesday, Wednesday.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

LADIES MAN: Eddie Bracken, Virginia Welles—This was a picture that did the trick. Everybody liked the picture. No walkouts. Played Sunday through Tuesday. The weather was good. It is a good musical and there is comedy. It has a great cast with Eddie Bracken, Cass Daley, Virginia Welles and Spike Jones and the City Slickers. Played Monday-Tuesday, April 6-7.—Larry Spaulding, Roxy Theatre, Flora, Ill.

STORK CLUB: Betty Hutton, Barry Fitzgerald—Just another percentage picture. I shouldn't have brought it in, even if it had been on flat rental. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, March 18, 19.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

STRANGE LOVE OF MARTHA IVERS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Van Heflin—This picture certainly did not deserve percentage terms. The print they sent I wouldn't wish on my competition. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Feb. 11, 12.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

PRC

CARAVAN TRAIL, THE: Eddie Dean, Al LaRue—After seeing this picture, many of the patrons asked to see more of these color Westerns. Plenty of action and music and wonderful color. Played Saturday, March 22.—Bob Fulkerson, Village Theatre, Sunflower, Kan.

DOWN MISSOURI WAY: Martha O'Driscoll, William Wright—Don't play this. I doubled it with Warners' "Crime School." Got tired of counting the walkouts. Another casting like this and John Carradine will ruin his excellent acting career. Poor story material. Played Thursday, Friday, March 20, 21.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

MINSTREL MAN: Benny Fields, Gladys George—Did a bit better than average Sunday and Monday business due to the fact that this was played during spring vacation, when all the children are out of school. Good program picture. Used with a Three Stooges comedy and a cartoon. Played March 30, April 1.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

SONG OF OLD WYOMING: Eddie Dean, Jennifer Holt—You can't go wrong on this Eddie Dean series and of course the color ones are the best. Doubled this one with "Town Went Wild," also from PRC, and the combination couldn't be beaten for small town patronage. Played Friday, Saturday, Feb. 7, 8.—W. P. Eakins, Lewis Theatre, Garrison, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

IN OLD SACRAMENTO: William Elliott, Constance Moore—Doubled with "Faithful in My Fashion." Could have stood alone. Excellent Western story. Excellent acting by William Elliott. It has all that you could want in a high class Western. Played Thursday, Friday, March 6, 7.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

MAN FROM RAINBOW VALLEY: Monty Hale, Bobby Blake—This is a different type of color Western and our rural weekend crowd just loved it. I am looking forward to the next one in this color series. Played Friday, Saturday.—W. P. Eakins, Lewis Theatre, Garrison, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

MY PAL TRIGGER: Roy Rogers, Dale Evans—An excellent horse picture which did good business. Played Thursday, Friday.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

RKO Radio

GENIUS AT WORK: Alan Carney, Anue Jeffreys—Used on my double bill program and I thought my house would shake down from all the laughter. It was one of the most pleasing pictures I have ever played on a double bill program. Played Friday, Saturday, March 14, 15.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

LADY LUCK: Robert Young, Barbara Hale—A good cast and a good picture for my town. Pleased all. Business good. Played Friday, March 21.—Joe R.

Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

NEVADA: Robert Mitchum, Anne Jeffreys—The first Zane Grey Western we have played. Although it was quite old it drew the action fans. Bad roads and Spring floods didn't keep our fans away. Doubled with a drama and they made a swell combination for entertainment. We only play about a dozen double features a year and the rest will have to be good to out-judge this one. Played Monday, March 17.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NOTORIOUS: Ingrid Bergman, Cary Grant—Superb acting and good suspense. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 10, 11.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

NOTORIOUS: Cary Grant, Ingrid Bergman—This is a well-made drama, but business was just above average. Played Sunday, Monday, March 30, 31.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

SONG OF THE SOUTH: Disney Feature Cartoon—We feel that this is the best film we have ever run through the projection machine. Business good. We are proud, and hope to show something like this again.—W. F. Caudell, South Miami Theatre, South Miami, Fla. Suburban and rural patronage.

TOMORROW IS FOREVER: Claudette Colbert, George Brent, Orson Welles—This one brought them out and it was well received. Played Wednesday, Thursday, April 9, 10.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

Screen Guild

MY DOG SHEP: Tom Neal, Helen Chapman—Played this with "Open the Door, Richard," from Astor. My folks liked the combination. I couldn't ask for more. Played Wednesday, Thursday, March 19, 20.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

WILDFIRE: Bob Steele, Sterling Holloway—Terrible acting, sound recording and story material. We had a number of walkouts. The trailer was actually better made than the picture. My patrons expected to see a really good horse picture. There wasn't enough of the horse. Played Thursday, Friday, March 27, 28.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANNA AND THE KING OF SIAM: Irene Dunne, Rex Harrison—This picture proved no good. Pass it up. Played Monday, Tuesday, April 7, 8.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

BLACK BEAUTY: Mona Freeman, Richard Denning—Played this alone with a cartoon and a comedy. It is especially for the family trade and it packed the house. It is a well produced, if not always too well acted, presentation of the time-honored story, with a cleanliness and wholesomeness about it which cannot but have a strong appeal to audiences surfeited by murder and psychosis. Played Wednesday, April 2.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me.

IF I'M LUCKY: Vivian Blaine, Harry James—This went over in a big way with my Sunday patrons. Played March 16.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

LEAVE HER TO HEAVEN: Gene Tierney, Vincent Price—Did not do business for me. Customers who really wanted to see this had two opportunities to see it before it got to me. Played Tuesday, Wednesday, Jan. 21, 22.—Newman R. Robinson, Joy Theatre, West Rutland, Vt.

MARGIE: Jeanne Craine, Alan Young—A box office natural from every viewpoint. The middle-agers came to reminisce and the bobby-soxers to see how Mommie and Daddie conducted themselves in the flapper days. Why can't the producers stay wise and realize that this is the sort of good clean entertainment that the American public wants. Box office results spell the answer. Played Sunday, Monday, April 6, 7.—Ted Keelen, Royal Theatre, Sheffield, Ill.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—The title does not fit the picture. There is only a short singing sequence of Clementine.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

MY DARLING CLEMENTINE: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell—This should please any small town operator. It drew good business and pleased the customers. Perhaps the people in the wide open spaces aren't as appreciative of "art" as their city brethren but they surely go for stories of the good old U. S. A. with American actors. Played Sunday, Monday, March 16, 17.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE: June Haver, Vivian Blaine—A lavishly produced musical in Technicolor, but it fell short at the box office. I guess the nearby larger towns milked it dry before it got to me. Played Monday, Tuesday, March 17, 18.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

WHAT SPRING?

It's not what the picture did for me that's been the concern of A. L. Dove and his Bengough theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan. It's been the weather.

In a disgusted kind of letter written to the Herald recently, Mr. Dove wants to know: "Can any exhibitor realize what a small town exhibitor has to put up with?" And, if you can't realize, here's his answer:

"Here we are living in a civilized country in the twentieth century and the climatic conditions are so bad that for weeks at a time there has been no mode of transportation into this locality except by air. Roads were all blocked by huge drifts of snow. Railroads were tied up. Where most of the people in this country are considering spring work, we are blocked in by snow. Farmers and their families here are certainly looking forward to getting back to enjoying motion picture entertainment."

WAKE UP AND DREAM: John Payne, June Haver—Most people wondered why they made this one. Had some walkouts. There is no story and no need for color. Clem Bevans saved the show. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—G. R. Borden, Jr., Am-Bc Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

United Artists

BREAKFAST IN HOLLYWOOD: Tom Breneman, Bonita Granville—Despite playing this on Easter Sunday with nice weather it did very poor business. Played Sunday, Monday, April 6, 7.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

CAESAR AND CLEOPATRA: Vivian Leigh, Claude Rains—Georgous Technicolor, good acting, wonderful sets, but the story was lacking. More action and less talk would have made a super film. Our patrons were disappointed. An above average crowd turned out so the box office didn't suffer. Played Friday, Saturday, March 21, 22.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

FOOL'S GOLD: William Boyd, Andy Clyde—An entertaining Western which did good business on Friday and Saturday. However, the picture did not seem to be up to Hopalong's standard. Played April 4, 5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

LITTLE IODINE: Jo Ann Marlowe, Marc Cramer—A good little family picture. It was thoroughly enjoyed by my patrons. Business good. Played Sunday, March 16.—Joe R. Hayworth, Playhouse Theatre, Pink Hill, N. C. Small town patronage.

LITTLE IODINE: Jo Ann Marlowe, Marc Cramer—You can do nicely without this. The public squawked and I can't blame them. The thing was "hammed" up with not much story and the clever stuff just didn't go over. I doubled it with the new Cassidy and that saved the day. Played Tuesday-Thursday, Feb. 25-27.—G. R. Borden, Jr., Am-Bc Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

STRANGE WOMAN, THE: Hedy Lamarr, George Sanders—Hedy Lamarr is beautiful as usual and the picture is no worse than the book, if not a little better in its modification of the original story. The picture has considerable box office appeal, although dramatically it is only second rate. Business very good. Played Sunday-Tuesday, March 30-April 1.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine.

Universal

BADMEN OF THE BORDER: Kirby Grant, Fuzzy Knight—There was a time when a cheap Western would be the next month's payment, but we are beginning to believe that people are getting better educated. This time we lost money.—W. F. Caudell, South Miami Theatre, South Miami, Fla. Suburban and rural patronage.

DEAD OF THE NIGHT: Mervyn Johns, Roland Carver—A below average crowd witnessed this. For the most part they were expecting something different and were disappointed. It is a strange and novel film which lacks star appeal. Played Monday, March 24.—

Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell—We have had very good success with these reissues. They are well received and well liked and business is above normal.—W. F. Caudell, South Miami Theatre, South Miami, Fla. Suburban and rural patronage.

SHE WROTE THE BOOK: Joan Davis, Jack Oakie—This was no draw here. No adverse comments, but just no business. Played Friday, Saturday, March 21, 22.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

Warner Bros.

BIG SLEEP, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall—A thriller that was really enjoyed by my patrons. Played Sunday, Monday, March 2, 3.—Bob Fulkerson, Village Theatre, Sunflower, Kan.

NIGHT AND DAY: Cary Grant, Alexis Smith—Played this late, but it was very good.—Business above average, which proves to us that a good show never gets old. Played Sunday, Monday, March 9, 10.—W. F. Caudell, South Miami Theatre, South Miami, Fla. Suburban and rural patronage.

NOBODY LIVES FOREVER: John Garfield, Geraldine Fitzgerald—They liked this one. It has a good story, some comedy and lots of action. It held their interest and we had many fine remarks about it. Played Friday, Saturday, March 7, 8.—G. R. Borden, Jr., Am-Bc Theatre, Blaine, Wash.

NORA PRENTISS: Ann Sheridan, Kent Smith—This didn't please my first night crowd, but the second night patrons raved about it. Oh, well, that's show business. If Nora Prentiss kept her mouth shut, why can't I? Played Monday, Tuesday, March 17, 18.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Short Features

Columbia

HOT WATER: All Star Comedies—Very good slapstick comedy which we played again. Customers laughed at it as much as they did on the original showing.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAT FISHIN': Tom and Jerry Cartoons—This is the best cartoon I have ever seen on the screen and I expect it to keep this private rating until Metro sends us a better one, which will probably not be long, as each T&J always seems to be better than the last one. They are only three or four laps ahead of the nearest competitor from any other producer.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine.

HENPECKED HOBOES: MGM Technicolor Cartoon, like everything from the Quimby factory.—John R. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine.

Paramount

JASPER IN A JAM: George Pal Puppets—A wonderful Puppetoon with plenty of hot music and terrific Technicolor.—Bob Fulkerson, Village Theatre, Sunflower, Kan.

RKO Radio

EARLY TO BED: Walt Disney Cartoons—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

NOISY NEIGHBORS: Edgar Kennedy—Usual good Edgar Kennedy comedy. There is a lot of slapstick humor that our patrons like.—Abe H. Kaufman, Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

WHAT, NO CIGARETTES?: Edgar Kennedy—Very amusing comedy.—James C. Balkcom, Jr., Gray Theatre, Gray, Ga.

Twentieth Century-Fox

THE UNINVITED PESTS: Terrytoons—Pleasing color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

Warner-Vitaphone

ALICE IN MOVIELAND: Featurettes—Another good feature from this studio. We play all their shorts and only occasionally find cause to complain. This was up to their usual standard.—Fred J. Hutchings, Community Theatre, Leader, Sask., Can.

HAVE YOU GOT ANY CASTLES?: Blue Ribbon Cartoons—A reissue cartoon which pleased.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

WALTER BROOKS, Director

Q The juvenile problem in Yreka, Cal., until quite recently was the talk of the town. The change set in about two months ago when Walter W. Doerre assumed the management of the Broadway theatre there. Warned by the outgoing manager that he could expect trouble from the local high school student body, Doerre decided to do something about it.

Reasoning that although the adults blamed the kids for everything, the adults themselves were at fault for not providing the youngsters with recreation facilities, Doerre reduced his prices to bring them within range of students' pocketbooks. For this purpose, student passes were printed and distributed. The youngsters carry the passes with them at all times and when presented at the box office these entitle them to a large reduction.

The reaction of students was immediate. They are grateful and cooperative and there is no more rowdiness or noise in the theatre.

Q An inexpensive way of getting the theatre message across to the public for exhibitors in small towns who do not use a monthly calendar has successfully been attempted by Harry J. Lankhorst of the Sioux theatre, Hawarden, Ia. He sends a year's subscription to the weekly newspaper to any patron who does not subscribe to the paper.

Since starting this promotion, Lankhorst has been able to sell members of the local Chamber of Commerce the idea that they assume responsibility of seeing that every person in the trade territory receives the weekly. The newspaper has responded by providing Chamber of Commerce members with a special rate.

The promotion serves the dual purpose of creating goodwill and assuring Lankhorst of complete coverage for his theatre advertising.

Announcing WALTER BROOKS, DIRECTOR

Walter Brooks, showman of wide and long experience, is the new director of The Round Table department of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. He returns from a tour of middle western centers to take over his desk in this office Monday next.

Along with so many of his contemporaries, Mr. Brooks began his motion picture career with small town small theatre exhibition in his early youth. He brings to his new post an equipment of understanding and observation built through the years since in a consistent sequence of activities in distribution, production and both promotional publicity and public relations functions. For the last three years he has been engaged in the activities of the exhibitor relations organization of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as assistant to Henderson M. Richey, director. He has travelled widely in exhibition contacts and in attendance at exhibitor gatherings all over the land, meeting the issues and problems of showmen out where they are.

After his considerable theatre and roadshow experience, Mr. Brooks came into New York to become the advertising and publicity director for Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., and succeeded to the post of production manager and assistant to the president, an engagement destined to continue some ten years. Thence he became associated with Eddie Dowling in a long sequence of activities in motion pictures, the stage and radio. In the early war period he joined the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs as an authority on specialized production and distribution for the purposes of the Latin American program. He went in 1944 to the M-G-M exhibitor relations assignment.

Mr. Brooks is a resident of New York, where he is a member of Motion Picture Associates, Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Society of Motion Picture Engineers and of the Variety Club, the Columbus, Ohio, tent.

TERRY RAMSAYE,

Editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD

CIRCUS FLASH

—was the result of an energetic bit of promotion by George Pappas, manager of the Roxy theatre in Peru, Ind. Pappas' message on "The Jolson Story" was stretched across the windows of two prominent buildings in the main shopping section, left. He also promoted a double truck cooperative ad and a masthead slug across the front page of the Peru Daily Tribune.

WORLD WIDE SHOWMANSHIP

Ray Connors, manager of the RKO Palace, New York, converted theatre boxoffice to resemble a prairie schooner exploiting "Trail Street".

Arthur Groom, manager, Loew's, Evansville, Ind., injects this humorous angle to publicize "Beginning or the End".

Manager Alfonso Laserno created this impressive set-piece on "Claudia and David" in the lobby entrance of the Faenza theatre, Bogota, Colombia, S. A.

At right, this giant moving poster was used to exploit "San Antonio" at the Regent, Brisbane, Australia. Moving billboard mounted on a trolley covered all sections of the city.

This immense display, at left, almost fills the lobby of the Paramount Omaha, Nebr., as advance promotion for manager Don Shane.

At right, front view of the Tivoli theatre, London, England, shows special treatment directed by manager J. Hunt to ballyhoo "It's a Wonderful Life".

The Selling Approach

ON NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects pressbooks now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiters on selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

BLAZE OF NOON (Paramount): This is an epic drama of the air mail service, starring Anne Baxter, William Holden, Sonny Tufts, William Bendix and Sterling Hayden.

For street ballyhoo, have a man carry a large card through the streets made up in the form of an air mail letter with the title of the picture and the name of the theatre in place of an address. A "deliver the print" promotion with the cooperation of a local airline and post office might be worth a try. The airline could send a special plane to pick up the film, or you could arrange with the exchange to send it on the regular run, notifying you as to arrival time for local fanfare and coverage.

Ask stamp collectors to submit their air mail stamp collections for display in the lobby. You could inject some competition into it by running a contest, to be judged by the head of the local stamp club and the postmaster. Entrants who submit the best collections in the opinion of the judges could be awarded guest tickets.

Toy parachutes could be used effectively for a marquee decoration, with star heads suspended from them. Instead of the heads, names of the stars could be substituted for a simpler display. Plant tack cards in the airport with the following copy: "Thrill to the story of the flyers who pioneered the airmail. See . . .", etc.

Sets Promotional Tieup In Calgary, Canada

Through a tieup with a local radio station, restaurant and taxi company, a "Nite Out" promotion has been inaugurated by assistant manager Carl Egan at the Palace theatre, Calgary, Alberta, Canada. For this promotion, a couple is selected on the radio program "Serenade to Midnight" to spend a night as guests of the restaurant, cab company and theatre. Considerable free newspaper and radio publicity has resulted from the promotional tieup.

THE ARNELO AFFAIR (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer): John Hodiak, George Murphy and Frances Gifford star in this melodrama. Use the headline: "Don't judge any woman in love . . . until you've seen 'The Arnelo Affair'." over a special advance and current 40x60 display. Fill it with star photos selling Hodiak, Gifford and Murphy, plus a real compact, key, blood-red impression of a woman's lips and a simulated cover of a diary. They are all a part of the picture's plot. Sensationalize each item with an exclamatory caption.

Use large lip impression and the headline, "These are the lips of the kiss-killer!", on teaser tack cards, sidewalk stencil, throwaways, blotters, postcards, in tieups with current best-selling crime stories, or as the top part of a special lobby thrill board. Fill a diary with scenes from the picture and caption them for a display on a lobby table.

Assign a young and attractive girl to walk the streets, enter stores and buses, etc. Offer cash prizes for identification of her as "the girl in 'The Arnelo Affair'." Show torn reproduction of a halftone scene of Hodiak and Gifford in a small throwaway. Copy should announce that persons finding the other half of the scene (printed on another throwaway) will receive guest tickets to your attraction.

Display Exploits "Passage"

An attractive vestibule display helped to exploit the engagement of "Canyon Passage" at the Plaza Cinema, Southfields, London, England. The display consisted of a scenic background, carved to give the effect of depth; a cutout scene of a covered wagon, a "Canyon Passage" sign post, rocks, etc. The display was illuminated. The campaign was arranged by manager Alec Reid.

Contest Draws Heavy Response

A gratifying response was accorded a poem contest arranged by manager Sid Holland to exploit his playdate of "I've Always Loved You" at the Palace theatre, Akron, Ohio. The competition was conducted with the cooperation of the Akron Beacon Journal. Contestants were required to write a poem and include the words "I've Always Loved You."

Wrecked Plane Aids "Angels"

A wrecked German Junkers plane was used in front of the theatre by manager George Borden, Jr., to exploit the revival of "Hell's Angels" at the AM-BC theatre, Blaine, Wash.

Shapiro Ties-up Food Stores for "California"

A total of 6,000 imprinted paper bags were distributed by four food stores through a tieup manager Norton Shapiro promoted to exploit the playdate of "California" at the Rivoli theatre, Roxbury, Mass.

In another tieup with the four local branches of the Boston Public Library System, a list of books concerning California were printed on book marks and distributed in the branches. 2,500 heralds were passed out house-to-house in Roxbury and adjoining neighborhoods. 500 heralds were inserted in newspapers at one of the local newspaper stands.

A large cutout of "Popeye" was spotlighted in the lobby with a card calling attention to the playdate of "California" and the cartoon carnival that was used to supplement the Saturday matinee show. An 8x10 (long way top) card sign was used in the coming attraction board, with two 8x10 upright stills on each side two weeks in advance.

Attractive Lobby Display Helps "Cross My Heart"

An attractive three-sheet cut-out and still board combination was used in the lobby a week in advance to exploit the playdate of "Cross My Heart" at the Bradley theatre, Columbus, Ga. The display was moved to the front of the theatre for the run of the picture. 2,000 heralds were distributed in the residential sections of the town. Radio spot announcements also were used. The campaign was arranged by W. D. Hendley, publicist for the Georgia Theatre Company.

Street Ballyhoo Draws Attention To "Diddlebock"

A young man attired in a fishing outfit helped to exploit manager George Ackerman's engagement of "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock" at the Broadway theatre, Portland, Ore. The young man parked himself on a busy sidewalk with his fishing pole hanging over the curb. A wide, orange sombrero worn by the mock fisherman helped to attract crowds. He carried a sign reading: "I'm crazy because I'm not at the Broadway theatre, seeing, etc."

All parking meters in downtown Portland were placarded with copy reading: "You'll need two hours to laugh at Harold Lloyd in, etc." A "Diddlebock" drink was promoted at soda fountains and cocktail bars. A "Kilroy's gone but Diddlebock's at the Broadway" sticker was used well in advance to publicize the playdate.

Three different styles of heralds were distributed in the Multnomah and Benson hotels to each person attending the meetings of the Advertising Club, Real Estate Club, Kiwanis, Lions, Executives Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The heralds were in the form of gag cartoons, with copy crediting the theatre and playdate.

Girl Distributes Nuggets To Promote "California"

A pretty girl dressed in western fashion distributed pebbles treated to simulate gold nuggets in front of department stores and on busy street corners during the noon rush hour daily to exploit "California" at the Paramount and Oriental theatres, Portland, Ore. The gilt pebbles were attached to cards with scotch tape. Copy on the cards read: "This gold nugget is to remind that you will miss a gold mine of entertainment if you don't see, etc." The cards were numbered. The recipient was asked to check the number against a list in the lobby of both theatres for guest tickets. The promotion was arranged by manager Frank Pratt of the Paramount.

Tieup with Radio Program Promotes "It's Spring"

A tieup with "KCBC Goes to a Party," the station's outstanding new program, drew considerable attention to manager Harold Lyon's engagement of "Suddenly It's Spring" at the Des Moines theatre, Des Moines, Ia. Mary Jane Schinn and Gene Milner, KCBC party-goers, attended a special screening of the picture for members of the United Commercial Travelers of America and recorded an interview with the guests. The record was played back over the air the day before the picture opened. United Commercial Travelers sent out over 800 mailing pieces asking their members to be sure to listen to the broadcast.

PROMINENT CITIZEN IS "MACOMBER" BOOSTER

A neat piece of newspaper publicity, which involved tying in one of Buffalo's most prominent citizens, was engineered for the opening of "The Macomber Affair" at the Buffalo theatre there. The prominent citizen is Daniel W. Streeter, president of the Chamber of Commerce, chairman of the civil service commission, a director of some 15 large organizations, and a famous author and big game hunter. Taking advantage of this latter fact, Charles B. Taylor, advertising and publicity director for Shea's Buffalo theatres, arranged to have Gregory Peck, star of "The Macomber Affair", present a citation to Mr. Streeter for his spirit of adventure. The citation was prepared in Buffalo and presented in behalf of Peck by Ellsworth Jaeger, executive secretary and curator of education of the Buffalo Society of Natural Sciences. Reports and photographers covered the events for local newspapers.

Morton Arranges Radio Contest

A campaign which started four weeks in advance and which was highlighted by considerable newspaper publicity and a radio contest heralded the opening of "The Best Years of Our Lives" at the RKO Albee theatre, Providence, R. I. The campaign was arranged by Bill Morton, publicity director for the theatre.

To achieve full press coverage, Morton held an advance screening for motion picture editors and critics. The Rhode Island Congress of Parent-Teachers magazine, issued to every member of the organization in the state, paid high tribute to the picture in their publication three weeks prior to playdate. A co-op ad was set with Wilson's Chief Market.

A letter writing contest was promoted over radio station WEAN, with $100 being awarded for the 13 best letters on what the contestants considered the best years of their lives. The station plugged the contest and playdate on two 15-minute programs daily well in advance.

Both men's and women's clubs were advised about the engagement. Bookmarks were supplied to the entire Providence Public Library system. Window tieups, bus and street car cards and imprinted menus also helped to advertise the picture.

Perry Sets Two Page Co-Ops

Full-page cooperative newspaper ads were promoted by manager Fred Perry for two recent playdates at the Liberty theatre, Cumberland, Md. The ads were promoted for "Magnificent Doll" and "Ladies Man."

Contests, Tieups Aid "Sinbad" in Four Situations

NEW ORLEANS BALLYHOO

Extensive promotional campaigns have been carried out for the opening of "Sinbad the Sailor" at RKO theatres throughout the country. Highlights from four of these outstanding campaigns are presented in the following paragraphs.

Three principal factors marked a highly successful campaign for manager W. T. Hastings at the Orpheum in Denver, Col. They were the personal appearance of Maureen O'Hara, star of the picture; a treasure chest promotion, and a coloring contest.

The treasure chest promotion was arranged through a tieup with Vogue Furniture, Frumess Jewelers and Dupler's Furriers. The three merchants distributed keys with a card attached, reading: "This key may open 'Sinbad's' Treasure Chest," and with a listing of the prizes to be won. The chest was located in the lobby of the theatre.

A man dressed as "Sinbad" and carrying a banner to identify him paraded the streets of New Orleans to ballyhoo the playdate of the picture at the Orpheum and Liberty theatres there. The campaign was arranged by manager Victor Meyer of the Orpheum.

Holds Midnight Show

A midnight show held 10 days before playdate was exploited on three radio stations as well as through newspaper ads. The New Orleans Public Library and four branches featured book displays with stills from the picture for two weeks in advance.

A coloring contest was promoted by manager Matt Plunkett to publicize the opening of the picture at the Grand theatre, Chicago, Ill. The competition was sponsored by the Lerner newspapers and the Downtown Shopping News.

Manager G. A. Martin conducted a teaser ad campaign for "Sinbad the Sailor" starting three weeks in advance of the playdate of the picture at the Virginia theatre, Champaign, Ill. A coloring contest was arranged with the News-Gazette. 350 answers were received. Heralds, money wrappers, throw-aways, window cards, coasters, etc., also helped to advertise the engagement.

Spring Is Harbinger of Showmanship Drives

Spring showmanship drives are underway or about to begin in various sections of the country. Regardless of location circuits are stressing the return to the old-time brand of showmanship which fell by the wayside during the lush war years.

The Florida State Theatres, with headquarters in Jacksonville, inaugurated an eight week drive April 6th. Known as the "Frank Rogers Spring Festival Celebration," the drive is in recognition of the achievements of the president of the circuit during the past five years and his 40th anniversary in show business. Prize money, divided into three groups, will be awarded to circuit showmen for theatre operation and maintenance, candy and popcorn, sales, promotion and exploitation.

Manual Points Way to Showmen

The circuit's advertising and publicity department has distributed a comprehensive manual covering all phases of the drive, including several pages devoted to suggestions for exploiting playdates. Suggestions include Saturday midnight shows, dancing school contest, cartoon shows, queen for a day or lady for a day contest, flower show in the lobby, classified newspaper contest, cinderella contest, bathing beauty competition and many others.

The manual also suggests mayors' proclamations, cooperative newspaper ads, radio and merchant tieups, heralds, bus and street car cards, post cards, imprinted paper napkins, etc.

The Minnesota Amusement Company, with headquarters in Minneapolis, is conducting a 1947 May-June Drive with C. W. Winchell, vice-president, as drive chairman. Cash prizes of $2,075 will be awarded in the drive period.

In the manual, prepared by the advertising and publicity department, for distribution to managers, emphasis is placed on the annual crop of school graduation parties. "Enterprising managers," according to the manual, "have developed this patronage to a point where each Spring it means many thousands of dollars in extra business."

Hints for Graduation Parties

Most success is reported where managers start early in contacting school officials, class presidents or entertainment committees, selling the idea of enjoying the final school celebration or social function with entertainment at the theatre.

The following observations concerning graduation parties, gleaned from experience of previous years, are pointed out in the manual: "Contact nearby schools in person, outlying schools by letter. Outline advantages, economy and entertainment value of the plan.

"Some managers have joined forces with restaurants in selling a dinner and a theatre party. Others have sold local merchant associations to sponsor theatre parties for graduation classes from schools in adjacent territory. In these days of youth delinquency, school authorities are apt to look askance at a class dance in favor of the students having a theatre party in a well-supervised theatre."

A 13 week "Schine Showmanship Drive" recently got under way with regional managers' meetings in various cities. The circuit has headquarters in Gloversville, N. Y.

In the Schine drive, pictures which need extra selling will be designated "Bonus Pictures." Managers are encouraged to redouble their exploitation efforts on these pictures and submit their completed campaigns to a home office committee which will appraise them solely on their exploitation value, and credit the managers accordingly with a number of points. At the end of the drive, managers with the greatest number of points will be awarded cash prizes.

Letter Writing Contest Aids "Miss Pilgrim"

A letter writing contest was arranged through a tieup with a local merchant by manager Frank Lanterman to exploit "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" at Reade's Jersey theatre, Morristown, N. J. The Morristown Typewriter Exchange offered a portable typewriter to the person submitting the best letter on "What the typewriter has meant to me in school or business." Heralds publicizing the contest and the picture were distributed.

Display Draws Attention To Special Attraction

An eye-arresting lobby display was set up by Manager Tony Cirasio to advertise a special attraction which he himself arranged at the Alhambra theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Cirasio gathered together prints of official prize fight pictures of the past 20 years, edited and spliced them together into one subject which he used as an added attraction. To publicize the show, the lobby display was set up. It consisted of pictures of famous fighters in characteristic sparring poses and a still from the Louis-Galento fight.

Uses Dice Game for "Luck"

Manager Ted E. Waggoner built a miniature dice table and used it in the lobby a week in advance to promote "Lady Luck" at the Wallace theatre, Tahoka, Tex. Each lady attending the theatre was given the chance to roll five dice and add the top numbers to give her a score. The 15 winners, out of a total of approximately 1,000 women, received free tickets to see the picture.

Press Coverage, Tieups Promoted For "Duel" Date

A series of striking newspaper ads backed by special feature stories with art on the various stars in the local press heralded the southern premiere of "Duel in the Sun" at the Colony theatre, Miami Beach, Fla. The campaign was arranged by manager Arthur Bookbinder and Paramount publicist Tom Jefferson.

An airplane banner was employed to get the playdate message across to the beach and racetrack crowds, estimated at upwards of 175,000 persons. A tieup was arranged with local high school students to wear the "Duel in the Sun" T-shirts. Bumper strips were used on all jitneys covering Venetian Way.

Wide distribution was accorded a special tabloid throwaway. Through a tieup with Ronrico rum, cocktail coasters were supplied to night clubs, hotels and bars throughout the city. A special "Duel in the Sun" race was promoted at the Gulfstream Racetrack.

Radio played an important part in the campaign, with special announcements breaking many times daily over the four local outlets.

Holden Sets Coloring Contest

A coloring contest was arranged by manager Earle M. Holden to publicize "Song of the South" at the Center theatre, Hickory, N. C. 1,500 contest heralds were handed out, mostly at a Saturday kiddie show. Post cards, exploiting the playdate, were mailed. Book marks were distributed at the library.

Cooperative newspaper ads and tieups highlighted the campaigns arranged for the day-and-date engagements of "The Macomber Affair" at Loew theatres in five cities.

In Indianapolis, manager Boyd Sparrow of Loew's promoted a co-op with Block's Department Store, a full window in the Sportsman's Store and a display in Rogers Jewelry Store. Passersby were questioned concerning the cast of the picture over a "Man on the Street" broadcast.

Manager Ted Teschner worked tieups with the public library to feature jungle books with stills from the picture for the playdate at the Valentine theatre, Toledo, Ohio. Ernest Hemingway's books were featured in all Toledo book stores and displays were arranged with Lamson's, LaSalle and Koch, Hirsch's and Teidtke's.

Fifty Dayton, Ohio, stores used displays of Joan Bennett in connection with the national Kellogg Pep Package promotion. Manager Bill Reisinger engineered the tie-up for his date on the picture at Loew's.

Cooperative newspaper ads featured manager Milton Kaufman's campaign at the State, Norfolk, Va. Meeking-Roughton, Cooper Jewelers, Sunlight Laundry and Swartz's Department Store ran co-ops on opening day. A singing contest from the stage of the theatre and broadcast over station WRVA also drew attention to the engagement.

Radio played an important role in manager George Peters' campaign at Loew's in Richmond, Va. The picture was exploited over "Battle of the Crooners" WLEE program, two WRVA broadcasts and by extra free spot announcements over WMBG. Window tieups were arranged with Flippen, Hartis and Company, Greunwald's, Miller and Rhoads, Woolworth's.

Dance Review on Stage Advertises "Specter"

A dance review held on the stage by a local teacher of dancing three weeks in advance helped to exploit manager David Dallas' playdate of "Specter of the Rose" at the Warehouse theatre, Manhattan, Kan. Ten days prior to opening, Dallas persuaded the City Librarian to arrange a display in the main hall of the library building. Cards were sent to dancing schools and groups interested in the ballet. Usherettes wore white dresses and a single red rose in their hair.

Throwaways Used for "Heart"

Novelty throwaways were used to sell the engagement of "The Secret Heart" at the Park theatre, Cleveland, Ohio. The first page of the throwaway had copy, reading: "If you are the blushing type don't look at these startling revelations." A heart on the page opened up to a scene from the picture. They were placed in separate racks in stores with a sign reading "Free, Take One." The campaign was arranged by manager Abe Ludacer.

Promotes Caricature Contest

A newspaper contest which invited readers to identify caricatures of the stars in "Till the Clouds Roll By" was promoted by manager Maynard Nelson to exploit the picture at the Empress theatre, Fremont, Nebr. Guest tickets were awarded to winners.

Novelty Heralds, Programs Sell "The Big Sleep"

Novelty "Open the Door, Richard" heralds were passed out from house to house and placed on store counters downtown a week in advance to promote manager Roy Peffley's engagement of "The Big Sleep" at the Voge theatre, East Chicago, Ind. 3,000 were distributed. 5,000 weekly programs also were distributed from house to house and at the theatre. 100 cards and 15 one-sheets were placed in windows around town.

Display Aids Serial Opening

A special lobby display, attractive front and heralds attracted attention to the opening of the serial "Son of the Guardsman" at the Fox theatre, LaPorte, Ind. Manager Bob Gustafson arranged the campaign.

CANADIAN VISITORS to New York and the Round Table recently were left to right, exhibitors Raymond Mager and René Mager, and projectionist Roland Gobeil of the Bellrive theatre in Valley Field, Quebec.

Anti-American influences currently at work have inspired Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production for Warner Brothers, to call for a "militant intensification of the motion picture industry's fight against un-American ideologies."

Coupled with the announcement of production plans for a new feature exposing the effects of Communism and Fascism influences upon American democracy, Mr. Warner issued this statement:

"We believe that our films must reflect positive Americanism founded on the fundamental principles of the Declaration of Independence, our Constitution and our Bill of Rights. . . . America needs awakening. The backsliders, the in-betweeners and the straddlers are too content to drift with the dangerous tides the subversive elements are stirring. And too many sound-to-the-core Americans are thoughtlessly ignoring those tides. We've got to jar ourselves into alert awareness of what is going on."

The instrument Mr. Warner is going to use is "Up Until Now," which will not be "a middle of the road" picture. With a background in Boston, the feature will detail America's "war against threats to American Democracy," according to Mr. Warner. Location sites for the picture have already been picked.

The picture, said the producer, "is not the opening gun by 40 years. It will not be a single barrage. We are working on other topical stories to combat insidious influences that threaten our country. We will shoot them as rapidly as they are ready for production."

ASCAP To Talk Increase With Exhibitor Leaders

Officials of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers are seeking to arrange meetings with exhibitor leaders for a discussion of ASCAP's proposed increase in music tax rates. Last week, ASCAP met with Herman Levy, general counsel of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who has stated his opposition to the proposed increase. It has been indicated that ASCAP will seek meetings with representatives of Allied States and other organizations.

MGM's Metro Theatre Opens in Belgium

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Metro theatre in Antwerp, Belgium, opened April 11 with Arthur M. Loew, president of Loew's International, in attendance. The opening picture was "Thrill of a Romance." The Metro, which had been known as the Scala, was damaged by buzz-bombs during the war. Acquired by Loew's, it has been completely rebuilt and re-equipped.

Legion of Decency Reviews Twelve New Productions

The National Legion of Decency reviewed 12 new productions this week, approving all but one. In Class A-I, unobjectionable for general patronage, were: "San Demetrio, London," "That's My Man," "This Happy Breed," "Three on a Ticket," "West of Dodge City" and "Yankee Fakir." In Class A-II, unobjectionable for adults, were: "The Arnello Affair," "Carnival of Sinners," "The Egg and I," "The Ghost Goes Wild" and "Tarzan and the Huntress." "Fear in the Night" was placed in Class B, objectionable in part, because it "reflects the acceptability of suicide as a solution to human problems."

Memphis Cuts "Macomber", Bans "Destry", "Daltons"

The Memphis Board of Censors Monday announced that "The Macomber Affair" would have to be cut severely before it could be shown in the city. The cuts were so numerous that Loew's Palace theatre announced that it had cancelled its booking of the feature rather than play the cut version. At the same time, it was learned that Memphis censors had completely banned the showing of "Destry Rides Again" and "When the Daltons Rode," which the Palace had planned to show as a double feature. Both pictures played Memphis several years ago, it was reported. Lloyd T. Binford, chairman of the Memphis Board of Censors, said of "The Macomber Affair": "It is with a feeling of regret that (the board) unanimously decided that 'The Macomber Affair' violates a city ordinance."

The Homestretch

20th-Fox—Racing, Romance

Just in time to cash in on the general interest stirred by the opening of the racing season, here is a picture that ought to make a hit with racing fans. Photographed in beautiful Technicolor, it shows 11 tracks in three countries and brings to the screen a series of racing events. The story serves merely as a framework for the exciting racing shots.

There are perhaps few other subjects which the Technicolor camera can record better than the turbulent commotion of the racing crowd in the stands, the smart costumes, the excited prancing of well-groomed horses and, of course, the thrilling course of the race itself. All of this, as well as additional atmosphere color shots in both England and South America, should keep the fans happy.

"The Homestretch" was produced by Robert Bassler and directed by Bruce Humberstone from an original screenplay by Wanda Tuchock. In the romance department, Cornel Wilde and Maureen O'Hara look their handsome best. However, Wilde, as the not-so-rich playboy, and Miss O'Hara, as the aristocratic beauty, get in some ardent love-making.

Famous tracks shown in the picture include Ascot in England, Palermo in South America, and Churchill Downs, Jamaica, Aqueduct, Hollywood Park, Santa Anita, Belmont, Hialeah, Arlington and Saratoga in the United States. With the film's action laid in 1938, several Technicolor takes of the Coronation in London are included. The South American sequence features some pleasing Latin background music and calls on Mr. Wilde to converse in Spanish.

Easy-going horse-lover Wilde swindles an old lady, Ethel Griffies, on the purchase of a horse and is found out by beautiful Maureen. He finds out that she's engaged to Glenn Langan, a young diplomat and follows her to London, entering the horse in the famed Ascot Gold Cup. The two fall in love.

Already on the boat for South America, Wilde is visited by Maureen. They are married by the captain and are next seen arriving in Buenos Aires. There Miss O'Hara is jealous of Helen Walker, an old friend of Wilde's. Maureen wants Cornel to settle down on his old Maryland farm, but he has racing in his blood. They separate. Wilde gives the horse to his wife who wins race after race with it. Meanwhile Cornel, converted, takes a job and returns to his farm. The two get together after his horse loses by only a head to his former racer. James Gleason, as the trainer, gives a good performance.

The Captive Heart

U-I - Prestige—War Drama

The task of bringing to the screen the long days, months and years that filled the lives of men in the prisoner-of-war camps is at best a tempting and at worst an exacting one. In "The Captive Heart," director Basil Dearden happily has not confined himself to the changes wrought in men through their long confinement behind barbed wire enclosures, although there is enough in the picture to indicate that such changes do take place. In giving the story a thread of continuity that brings it to a logical, although not necessarily credible, conclusion, he has created the element of suspense coupled with a fine sense of the grim cycle of hope and despair that permeated the thinking of the prisoners.

The plot of this British-made production, produced by Michael Balcon from a screenplay by Angus MacPhail and Guy Morgan, deals with a group of men, British soldiers, captured by the Germans in 1940. It is moving and tender in parts, exciting and realistic in others. At times its action drags and its dialogue lacks sparkle. British accents are heavy and even cause important lines to be lost. The art-theatre patron should love it.

To explain the background of its characters, the picture uses the flashback technique in the beginning. All performances are flawless and, in some instances, deeply moving. There is the Scotch lad, Gordon Jackson, blinded in both eyes, taking it on the chin; Michael Redgrave, as the Czech captain, an escapee from a German concentration camp, with fake British identification papers. He finds love by writing to the wife of a man whose name and rank he assumed and whom he eventually joins, barely escaping the clutches of the Gestapo; and there is Jack Warner as the earthy British corporal. Eventually, all of these return to England and a new life.

Warners—Super-Western

"Don't spare the horses" appears to have been the motto of producer Robert Buckner and director Raoul Walsh in making a Western which is longer, more elaborate and livelier than run-of-the-mine rawhide opera. Certainly few Westerns come to mind which include so many and so frequent chase sequences, each climaxed by a stagecoach robbery.

Dennis Morgan, Jane Wyman, Janis Paige and Bruce Bennett are the principals. With the exception of Miss Paige, who brings great gusto to her portrayal of the dancehall girl, they move through their parts at a far slower clip than do the equine performers. Walsh's direction, in fact, leans heavily upon the chase sequences, and a tempestuous musical score by Max Steiner.

Each robbery nets an unknown thief some $20,000, and to put a stop to this state of affairs Morgan is assigned to catch the culprit. His investigations involve him with both the young ladies mentioned above, but his affections soon center on Miss Wyman. She is somewhat handicapped by the fact that she is married—and to the stagecoach robber, at that—a circumstance which she overcomes by betraying her husband to Morgan. Fatally wounded, the thief is led off to die, leaving Miss Wyman and Morgan to find love in each other's arms. A substantial reward for the capture of Miss Wyman's first husband assures financial backing for a honeymoon with her second.

One of the song numbers offered by Miss Paige might be offensive to family audiences with respect to the lyrics of the song she sings, the costume that she wears, and the suggestive manner in which she is photographed.

Alan LeMay and Thames Williamson wrote the screenplay.

Dishonored Lady

United Artists—Hunt Stromberg—
Psychiatry and Crime

Combining three familiar themes, this Hunt Stromberg production is designed for those people whose cinema tastes lean towards the psychiatric, the criminal and/or the romantic type of film fare. Produced by Jack Chertok, director Robert Stevenson has taken these individual elements, has skillfully woven them and has emerged with a picture which should satisfy most audiences.

Starring Hedy Lamarr, Dennis O'Keefe and John Loder, the story is an examination of the mental quirks of a nymphomaniac who fruitlessly seeks happiness in a series of swift-paced romances. Consulting a psychiatrist before committing suicide, he persuades her to discontinue her old ways and begin life anew. This she does.

She then meets and falls in love with a struggling young doctor from whom her past is kept a secret. In a moment of weakness she joins a former lover in his apartment, but resists his advances. Later she is charged with his murder. Her sympathetic psychiatrist convinces the young doctor that he should forget his injured pride and prove her innocence. The picture ends on a happy note when she is acquitted.

Since it is a story of the frailties of human nature, audiences undoubtedly will be emotionally stirred. Edmund H. North's screenplay, based on a play by Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, seems to have been directed in more footage than would seem to be required for the telling of the story.

Calcutta

Paramount—Adventure Story

Take a couple of romantic professions, jewel thieving and flying the "Hump" between Chunking and Calcutta, take a couple of romantic characters like Alan Ladd and William Bendix, and put all this down into a romantic country like India, stir in a couple of gamblers and a sultry woman or two and you've got Paramount's latest, "Calcutta."

Here's the story of American fliers unwittingly aiding Indian jewel thieves in smuggling stolen goods across the border and being wrongly suspected of murder by a couple of not very far-seeing English police officials.

It all begins when Ladd, Bendix and John Whitney, three inseparable flier-pals, suddenly have their numbers reduced by one: Whitney is found strangled to death. Ladd, being the tight-lipped smart character, makes the most headway in discovering who did the dirty work. Bendix, being the bumbling but loveable character, tags along and is somewhat ignored in this picture.

Ladd finds Whitney's girl friend, Gail Russell, and questions her about the murder. She says she doesn't know anything. Ladd believes her and falls in love with her. But the more evidence Ladd collects the more suspect Miss Russell becomes.

One day Ladd grabs Miss Russell, gives her a slapping about the head, and Miss Russell confesses. Yes, she says, she was mixed up in the murder. Love is not blind. Ladd turns her over to the police.

Though filled with the basic essentials of romance, mystery and adventure, "Calcutta" does not fully capitalize on them, does not get all the suspense out of them. Miscasting is at fault here and the direction is slack. However, the film boasts powerful marquee names which can be capitalized.

The feature was produced and written by Seton I. Miller and directed by John Farrow.

Philo Vance Returns

PRC—Murders Galore

Produced by Howard Welsch and directed by William Beaudine, "Philo Vance Returns" is another episode in this particular series of crime melodramas which closely follows the format long used to engage the audience's attention by inviting them to participate in tracking down the culprit.

With William Wright in the title role the story concerns a wealthy playboy who is murdered. Suspected is any one of his half-dozen ex-wives who may be seeking his estate. It isn't until five other murders are also committed that Philo Vance, the master-detective, has sufficient clues to expose the least suspected member of the cast.

In supporting roles are Terry Austin as an ex-wife; Leon Belasco, who handles the comedy as the detective's assistant, and Clara Blandick, as the murdered man's wealthy grandmother. Robert E. Kent wrote the original screenplay.

"Forgotten Island" is a film analysis of one of America's chief problems—Puerto Rico. As further proof of the country's plight the film shows the limited production facilities of the island and the large slum areas in which many thousands live. However, the camera takes the audience on a graphic tour to show what is being done to aid the Puerto Rican people, including the building and operation of experimental stations to exploit the island's scanty resources; importing pure bred cattle and the development of vocational schools.

in the service of MANAGEMENT

WITH THE MAY 3rd ISSUE OF

Better Theatres

CHARLES H. RYAN,

who for more than twenty years has been an executive in charge of important groups of motion picture theatres, will begin writing on Theatre Management in this Section of Motion Picture Herald. As Contributing Editor of the "Method in Management" department in Better Theatres, Mr. Ryan in every issue will bring to the practical service of managers and their staffs everywhere the experience of one who began his notable career in theatre operation as a house manager, rose to the supervision of several theatres, then was responsible for a large group of prominent houses in three states.

With such variety and breadth of background in matters of policy, in day-to-day details, in size and location of theatre property, in type of community and clientele, Mr. Ryan will have all of the functions and responsibilities of the house manager (except the exploitation of specific pictures) as his field of discussion and practical suggestion. While sharing many of the interests of other departments, he will of course deal with them from the point of view of theatre management itself.

The "Method in Management" department will continue to offer material of various kinds and sources with the same point of view—reports of interesting operating procedures, maintenance and inspection guides, and so on.

Throughout Better Theatres the immediate day-by-day interests of the house manager hold prominent place. There are pictures and descriptions of what managements are doing about staff training, safety, vending, maintenance, etc., etc. . . . Leo T. Parker reports and explains court cases to show how the manager may avoid legal trouble and defend himself when it can't be avoided. . . . John J. Sefing's articles and "tips" on equipment and the theatre building are importantly directed toward making inspection easier and more effective, the prevention of needless repairs, reduction of hazards, instruction of staffs . . . and Ben Schlanger (an architect specializing in theatre design, he also has been associated with a group of theatres as a maintenance consultant) offers many an idea in his columns on theatre planning that a house manager might adopt or suggest, for more efficient arrangement or better appearance.
