BACKS AUTO INTO EXCAVATION

What might have been a very serious accident occurred to a Glendale lady in Los Angeles Wednesday morning when Mrs. F. H. Mellus of 1447 West First street, Glendale, backed her machine into an excavation in the ground near Fourth and Park. Mrs. Mellus was driving her auto with some apparent skill when, either bewildered by the traffic or unaccustomed to the mechanism of the auto, she made a slight mistake which might have cost her her life. Meaning to throw the gear into low, she put in the reverse with considerable suddenness. The consequence was that the auto backed into a hole at the old Hotel Decatur excavation. After considerable trouble, both the lady and the auto were extricated from their dangerous position.

ON THE ORIGIN OF NEWSPAPERS

"We are indebted to the Italians for their idea of newspapers," says Isaac D'Israeli in his "Curiosities of Literature." The title of their gazettes was probably derived from gazzera, a magpie or chatterer; or more probably from a farthing coin, peculiar to the city of Venice, called gazetta, which was the common price of the newspapers. Another etymologist is for deriving it from the Latin gaza, which would colloquially lengthen into the Latin gazetta, and signify a letter treasury of news. The Spanish derive it from the Latin gaza, and likewise their gazetero, and our gazetteer for a writer of the gazette, and what is peculiar to themselves, gazastra for a lover of the gazette.

"The first paper was a Venetian one, and only monthly; but it was merely the newspaper of the government. Other governments afterward adopted the government plan of a newspaper with a Venetian name; from a solitary government gazette, an inundation of newspapers has burst upon us."

"Mr. Chalmers discovers in England the first newspaper. It may gratify national pride, says he, to be told that mankind are indebted to the wisdom of Elizabeth and the prudence of Burleigh for the first newspaper. The epoch of the Spanish Armada is also the epoch of a genuine newspaper. In the British museum are several newspapers which were printed while the Spanish fleet was in the English channel during the year 1588. It was a wise plan to prevent, during a moment of general anxiety, false reports, by publishing real information. The earliest newspaper is entitled the English Mercurie, which by authority was imprinted at London by her highnesses' printer, 1588." These were, however, but extraordinary gazettes, not regularly published. In this obscure origin they were skillfully directed by the policy of that great statesman, Burleigh.

"Periodical newspapers seemed to have been more generally used by the English during the civil wars of Cromwell to disseminate amongst the people the sentiments of loyalty and rebellion, according as their authors were disposed. Peter Heylin, in the preface to his Cosmography, mentions that 'the affairs of each town of war were better presented to the reader in the Weekly Newsbooks.' Hence we find some papers entitled News from Hull, Truths from York, Warranted Tidings from Ireland, etc. We also find the Scots Dove opposed to the Parliament Kite or the Secret Owl."

Under all these names newspapers had appeared, but a Mercury was the prevailing title of the Newsbooks. We find a number of these Mercuries, which, were the stories not too long to tell, might excite some laughter; they present us with a very curious picture of these singular times."

MRS. BECKER GOES TOO FAR

All who are impressed with wifely loyalty have admired the devotion of Mrs. Becker to her husband, during the trying ordeal of his prosecution, conviction, fight for life and legal execution, says the Pasadena star. She maintained the traditions of her sex for loyalty to those loved. But in the bitterness of her sorrow over having lost her husband so ignominiously, Mrs. Becker went to an extreme that was inexcusably unjust, even though it might not be prosecuted as criminally libelous. To put upon the casket, of Becker, a plate bearing the inscription, "murdered by Gov. Whitman," was carrying wifely loyalty to an extreme that justified police interference.

Charles S. Whitman, in his whole public career, has impressed the public as being a man of conscience, fearless in his course and scrupulous in maintaining the forms of law and jus-
