REVIEW OF TEXTILE EXPORT SALES FOR 1948

The downward trend in COTTON TEXTILE SALES which began during the fourth quarter of 1947 continued through the early part of 1948. (See attached Monthly Summary of Textile Exports Sales for 1948.) This was due to the requirement that Japanese cotton textiles be sold only for payment in U.S. dollars at a time when world markets were facing a growing shortage of dollars. Sales began to expand after April, however, when the inter-agency cotton agreement was modified to permit payment in other acceptable currencies. Sales to buyers in the Sterling Area were greatly stimulated during the last half of 1948 by the release in June of 100,000,000 yards of cotton fabrics held in port stocks for payment in Sterling, and by the announcement in August of the free sale of all cotton textiles for Sterling. The highest month's sales reported during the year was in May when the $35,000,000 cotton textile sale was consummated with NEI. Large sales, which were being negotiated in December in accordance with trade agreements with Siam, Pakistan, Burma and NEI, were not completed in time to be included in the 1948 total.

RAW SILK sales for 1948 were substantially larger than in 1947 and the outlook for 1949 is good. The French market was opened up during the year and the largest single sale of raw silk since the war was made to the French Government, consisting of 7,000 bales, largely of fine denier (13/15) the size normally used by the silk hosiery industry. England continued to take sizeable quantities of raw silk but the United States remained the largest and steadiest market with sales volume averaging about 6,900 bales per month including sales made by the New York Office of SCAP.

Fluctuations in SILK FABRIC sales were due to release of production for forward selling which was timed with adjustments in prices. The United States remained the largest market for silk fabrics throughout 1948 taking approximately 90 percent of total sales, or about 48,000,000 yards.

RAYON YARN sales improved greatly during the last three months of the year, stimulated by the opening of the Indian market for both filament and spun rayon yarns. There were two large contracts approved in November for shipment of RAYON FABRICS to the Belgian Congo. In general, however, rayon fabric sales have been distributed over a wide market area.

After averaging less than $500,000 monthly for the first nine months of 1948, WOOL TEXTILE SALES picked up sharply in October and attained a banner level in November of $2,890,615. This expansion was chiefly the result of heavy sales to India and Hongkong.

Linen, ramie and jute sales have not as yet gained any momentum and their future in export markets is questionable.

Shortage of dollars in South America restricted the volume of sales to that area. Practically no sales of cotton goods were made to the U.S. because of relatively high prices for Japanese cotton textiles.

The attached charts show the volume of export shipments by months during 1948 compared with sales. The relationship of annual shipments to annual sales is almost entirely dependent upon whether sales are made against existing stocks or from future production. There were heavy forward sales of all textiles in the fall of 1948 except cotton fabrics where the forward sales did not get under way until late November and December. This fact, together with a large carry-over of orders from 1947, accounts for the high percentage of shipments compared with sales in cotton.
