HALF A MILLION ATTEND PARADE

MONSTER SUFFRAGETTE GATHERING IN LONDON

Climax of Year's Movement for Women's Right to Vote.

London, June 22.—Favored by beautiful weather and again displaying unexpected genius for organization, the suffragettes' demonstration in Hyde park yesterday was an unparalelled success. Encouraged by previous successes, suffragettes planned the demonstration as a climar of the year's fight stration as a climax of the year's fight for women's suffrage. It is hardly too much to say that never before was such a demonstration seen in London.

Fully half a million people assembled in and around Hyde park as active or passive participants. In the tive or passive participants in the great meeting, while for two hours in the middle of the day the whole cen-tre of the city was in a ferment. Various processions appeared, each about s mile long, and the streets through which they passed were densely crowd-d with spectators. After arriving at Hyde park the lead-rs and speakers of the various secspeakers of the various sec-ad literally to fight to their is. Probably there were about platforms. Probably there were about twenty speakers in all, and these harrangued the masses on the rights of women to vote and the necessity of forcing parliament to adopt a resolution on the question. The women's demonstrations are far more attractive from a spectacular point of view than those held by men. Almost all of the suffragettes wore white dresses with sashes of their colors, green, white and rurple, inscribed: "vote for women," and the scene as viewed from the platform was quite a feast of color. There was much good-humored chaffing, and the speeches were practically inaudible.

The attitude of the onlookers was one of amused tolerance. Ambulances were kept busy dealing with cases of fainting and minor injuries, owing to the great pressure of the crowd, but no serious accidents occurred.

Considerable scuffling and rowdyism occurred around the platform occupied by Mrs. Pankhurst, the leader of the suffragettes, and it finally, became so serious as to need reinforcements of police. Similar scenes were enacted around Mrs. Martel's platform, and owing to the general noisy interrupowing to the general noisy interrup-tions few of the speakers were able to

New York, June 22.—James Cantillon Marinette, who was totally blind, regained his sight at Bellevue hospital yesterday during a fit of hysterics which followed the surgeon's announcement to him that his case was considered hopeless, and that he would probably be blind for the remainder of his life.

Cantillon, who is a professional base-ball player, a member of the Desmoines, Ia., team, and a brother of Joseph Cantillon, manager of the American league team, had to have his left eye removed as the result of an accident in Chicago several months ago. The sight of the other eye falled from sympahetic affection. He came to the Cornell university medical college here for treatment, and was residing in Believue for an operation.

Yesterday the physicians decided that an operation would be useless, and so informed Cantillon, who thereupon became hysterical. Suddenly he cried out that he could see, and tests showed that the sight of the right eye had been almost completely restored. The hospital surgeons say that Cantillon's loss of sight was undoubtedly due to an affection of the nervous system, and that the hysterical attack he underwent is reaponable for the restoration.

BOUND AND WEIGHTED

New York Chambermaid Victim of Foul Play-Another River Mystery.

New York, June 22.—What may prove to be a murder mystery was disclosed on Saturday when the body of a woman, tightly bound with ropes, was found floating in the East river near Second street. The woman was apparently about 40 years old, and five feet four inches in height. The body was fairly well clothed. In one of the stockings the police found a time slip marked "Mary Flynn, Hotel Gotham." Beyond that there was nothing on the body which would aid in identifying the dead woman. Mary Flynn was employed at the Hotel Gotham as a chambermaid for about two weeks some time ago. She left there suddenly, and nothing was seen of her afterwards.

A large stone was attached to one end of the rope when the woman's body was found. The coroner said that while the woman might have committed suicide, he was not prepared to accept that theory, and would make a full investigation.

CONFINE TRADE TO CANADIAN BOATS

COASTING REGULATIONS ARE PUT IN FORCE

Long Desired Reform is Effected by Order in Coun-

Ottawa, June 22.—The order in council has been passed putting in force on the Pacific Coast the same regulations which prevail on the Atlantic. By this American boats will only be able to call at one Canadian port on each voyage.

Up to the present time American boats have been allowed to do the regular coasting trade in Canada owing to the scarcity of Canadian tonnage. The government received a resolution through R. McPherson, M. P., of the Shipmasters' Union, signed by Secretary Peter Kidd, against the rescinding of the order allowing the Americans to pursue coasting trade. Mr. Macpherson did not agree with that resolution and other B. C. members convinced the minister of marine that Canadian boats could handle the Canadian coasting business and that boats would be built to carry the growing trade. An order was therefore pased shutting out Americans and confining the business to Canadian boats.

Hearing of Chinese Case by Judge Lampman To-day.

The case of Charlie vs. Humber was completed in the county court Saturday after a long session lasting up to something after one o'clock. The trial commenced Friday afternoon and a number of witnesses were examined. Judge Lampman finally decided to reserve judgment but he intimated that he found for plaintiff on the claim and for defendant on the counter claim. The amount to be given later.

The case, like all those in which Orientals are mixed up, was difficult to fathom in all, its aspects. The plaintiff, Charlie, was working for the defendant, Humber, at his brickyard.

something that would have rendered him unemployable anywhere else would hardly occur even in Canada. Anyone who has lived in England is aware of the powerful lever influence is in the matter of promotion; and it is absurd to hold up as an example of freedom from patronage a system and a country in which patronage is an almost essential element to success in attaining any coveted position, where the use of influence is worth invoking.

The interference of patronage is limited, it is true; but still it is there, and often forces on the public a cranky and inefficient official, who is a nuisance to everyone who is around him. Yet he must not be removed or spoken against definite form, and its civil service has reached a stage that permits of more or less cast iron classification. The colleges and universities have adapted parts of their curricula to the requirements of aspirants for civil service employment, and a young man, when he enters the service, enters it generally for life, intending when he reaches old age, to take his pension and spend the autumn of his existence in corpulent ease. It is a quiet, steady-going life, very regular and correct, and, while things, are by no means standing still, the changes that are going on are of that ruminant order which are so gradual and undisturbing as to be scarcely noticeable. The advancement of a humble employee in the general body of the service is checked by time limits and examinations, and he has to have an abnormal amount of energy or influence to rise to a prominent position. must not be removed or spoken against because he has "so and so" at his back; and, even though he gets his work done by somebody else, being incompetent to do it himself, he will-probably be the next man to be promoted when a vacancy occurs.

During the Saturday afternoon of the delebrations some of the old pupils will propose a brief formal assembly of St. Ann's girls when registration will take place. This will be followed by the reading of the constitution, which will be more developed later by a duly elected governing body, and a duly elected governing body, and June 5th, founders day, will probably be chosen hereafter as the annual meeting day of the local members of the association, and such members from the Sound cities, as may be delegated by the St. Ann's Alumnae clubs to be formed in those places, under the charter of the principal alumnae association to be inaugurated during this week's celebrations.

TRANSIT AND HYADES NOT YET REPORTED

Vessel Which Sailed From Here for Nome Probably Frozen in.

No word has been received of the Norwegian steamship Transit, Captain Danielson, which sailed from this port for Nome on June 1st with 550 passengers, under charter to Schubach & Hamilton, Seattle, and there is a possibility that she, together with the other vessels of the Nome fleet not yet reported, is frozen in an ice-pack.

In 1902 two vessels of the early Nome fleet were held in the ice until July 4th, and there is a probability that the sametate has fallen to the Transit and the Hyades. The Yucatan, from San Francisco, made the Alaskan port on Friday.

VANCOUVER KEEPS UP ITS LEAGUE POSITION

Spokane Was Defeated by the Canadian Team Yesterday.

Engle had everything that a pitcher heeded yesterday, and, before an enormous crowd, Vancouver took the final game of the series, 4 to 0. Killilay was hit hard in two innings. Ground rules were necessary and they figured in the visitors' run-getting, a hit into the crowd going for two bases.

Spokane had several chances to winbut Engle had plenty in reserve and was at his best with men on bases. Nordyke played a great game both at bat and in the field.

Actual paid admissions are estimated at more than 7,000. Many could not be seated and hundreds' were turned away at the gates. Score:

PRINCESS ROYAL LOST AN UNWILLING GUEST

ng the immigration officials and the C. P. R. considerable hard thinking for the past few days while she rode from port to port on the Princess Royal without being permitted to land, is once more in her native land, the United States.

The Post-Intelligencer tells the story as follows: "After having been a continuous pas-senger on the steamship Princess Royal for four days, Miss Sylvinia Edwards, pretty and about 20, last evening com-pleted her involuntary voyage. She got on the boat last Wednesday in Vic-toria, B. C., and since that afternoon had been enjoying the great scenic tri-angular run to the discomfiture of the C. P. R. officials. The United States immigration officials refused to let her equally insistent on demanding that she keep out of Canada, so the C. P. R. had to extend its hospitalities to the young woman temporarily without a country.

"Young Miss Edwards went to Victoria from this side of the line on the understanding that she was a native of Canada. She gave her birthplace as Winnipeg, Man. In the British Columbia capital, however, the police looked on her with suspicion. She told them she came from Portiand, and on this information Dr. Milne, Canadian immigration agent, ordered her deportation. "The United States immigration official at Victoria, Jack Burford, protested against the woman being sent to Seattle, but the Cahadian immigration staffs proceeded to play ping-pong with Sylvinia, officers being on watch at Seattle, and Canadian officials at Victoria and Vancouver, to see that she did not leave the Princess at either of the ports of call.

"It took just four days to secure the necessary information at Portland to establish the fact that the young woman was of American birth, and during all that time she enjoyed the best that the steamship afforded. Last night the creder to permit her to land at Seattle was received and Sylvinia tripped lightly down the gang plank, wearing a happy smile.

"It almost hate to leave the ship, though,' said she. 'It was beginning to feel like home. Capt. Hickey was a dear, too. He couldn't have been nicer if he'd been my own father.'

"She proceeded to her home in Portland last evening."

Quade skied third and Rithet was put out there.

When Victoria brought the score up even in the sixth Plummer hit hard and short stop failed to take it, allowing him to get his first base. Wattelet failed to find the ball, but when the catcher threw to second base he ran and arrived safely at first. A big disputation then took place while Wat set on his bag. Captain Plummer hunted up authorities and Wattelet still sat there. Then Manager Will took a hand in the wrangle but without effect and still Wattelet sat there. Then Bob Foster tried to show the juctice of Victoria's claim, but Doo Haynes examined the book that Plummer had produced and decided against the home team. The fans got tired of waiting and shouted to play ball, at the same time making interesting remarks about "the Seattle spirt," and the game once more proceeded without Wattelet. Burnes then touched one high behind, and the catcher held, it. Rithet, however, saved the stuation by bitting hard to second baseman, who missed and the ball went away out into the field, allowing Rithet to take third base and Plummer to come home. Robertson was struck out and home. Robertson was struck out and heard to find the same of the structure of Burnes sacrificed and was put out but Rithet, who went to the bat, amid the cheers of the spectators, slogged to left field going right around to third, putting Wattelet home. Robertson fooled with a foul or two and was struck out, closing the work of the home team. The Nationals failed to change the score in their last innings. The complete scores are as follows:

Although if there had been time they could hardly have hoped to dismiss the other six for less than 34 runs, there was little doubt but that the second inpings, had it been played to a finish would have ended by Victoria winning by most of their wickets.

J. H. Gillespie was on the home team and was at his best, putting 78 runs to his credit before leaving the pitch.

The Importance of the Plain Price Mark

The man who sells tickets at a circus pays a bonus for the privilege. He makes his money out of the proverbial carelessness of the public. He cheats them in giving change. Merchants who do not mark their goods in plain figures do not want the customer to know the price until the elever salesman has "sized up" his enstomer.

When the "Semi-ready" mark is on a suit you know that price means the selling price and the actual worth of the garment. You know that you cannot buy it for less, and may know, too, that you would pay more for it if that price mark was not there.

Can you tell the difference in quality between an $18 suit and a suit at $22.50? The value-difference is there, even though you may not be able to see it.

The physique type and the actual size of the suit is plainly marked on every Semi-ready Suit, and you can easily check up your own measurements with those on the suit ticket sewn under the collar.

Open, clear and straight-these are the methods by which we have built up in ten years the largest high-class tailoring business in Canada.

Suits at $15 to $30-better tailored than any Custom

And we return your money for any cause which the buyer decides to be a "cause." That is fair and ilberal.

Appeal Being Heard Concerning Southeast Kootenay-Chambers Applications.

The appeal in the case of Watt vs. the Cranbrook, Greenwood and Leckie groups of oil claims was opened in the appellant court this morning before the Chief Justice and Justices Morrison and Clement. Representing the appellant Watt, is R. T. Elliott, K. C., while Sir Charles Tupper, K. C., appeared for the Leckie-Tupper group; S. S. Taylor, K. C., for the Greenwood group, and J. A. The case was opened by Mr. Elliott, who outlined it in a few words.

J. Watt claims that in 1900 he staked fifteen claims and is a mere question of fact.

The oil claims affected are situated in East Kootenay. The blocks were reserved but later licenses were offered on payment of $100. Watt staked first and therefore had prior claim. He took out fifteen licenses. He was opposed by four others. The trial judge decided either had, not been done or had been improperly done,

OPENING FOR LUMBER TRADE

BRITISH COLUMBIA PRODUCT HANDICAPPED

Rates Cheaper From Oregon Than From Canadian Ports.

I can fairly claim, writes W. T. R. reston, Canadian trade commissioner, hat my correspondence and personal nterviews with the chief engineers of the railways under construction from Canton to the interior of China and also to the seaports, have not been without satisfactory results. Orders aggregating more than 2,000,000 feet, as a preliminary to greater possibilities, have already been cabled to British Columbia. The assurance has been given that if the consignments revew satisfactors. The assurance has been given that if the consignments prove satisfactory, as I have no doubt they will, this will simply be the beginning of a business that will necessarily expand to hundreds of millions of feet of all kinds of lumber within the next ten years, as well as the creation of a permanent and constantly increasing market for many decades.

In fact, there is only one reason why, with this avenue open for Canadian umber, the British Columbia mills should not be taxed to their fullest capacity for many years to come. reason, as may be supposed, is the ab-solute necessity for favorable freight rates from the coast of British Colum-bia to Asiatic ports. It was possible to secure the particular order from the railway heads in Canton, to which ref-erence appears in the preceding para-graph, on account of possible freight graph, on account of possible freight transportation outside of the ordinary transportation outside of the ordinary channels. To have tried to sell British Columbia lumber upon the basis of the regular freight fates would have been quite out of the question. But an option being available elsewhere, the alternative was then given to tife Canadian Pacific steamship service to accept the consignments and deliver the lumber at Canton at the competitive rate that was then in sight, or to retain their prohibitive rates and see the business go into other channels. Wise counsels prevailed and the Canadian line signed a contract to deliver the tumber at Canton for the same figure that was offered elsewhere.

This is about two-thirds of the rate

This is about two-thirds of the rate upon which the company had previously insisted. If a reduction to even half the extent that was won in this case, had been effected two or three weeks earlier, so as to meet the then lower freight rates from Oregon, additional orders for two or three million feet of British Columbia lumber could be secured.

In view of my correspondence with the head of the company, representing the Imperial government of China arsenal works in the vicinity of Shanghai, I embraced the opportunity on my return to Japan, to interview the distinguished official in question. The visit was decidedly opportune, viewed from the standpoint of securing information, but the information cannot be regarded as presenting a particularly pleasant aspect.

Some time previously the head of the construction department had consented to an order being given to British Columbia for a trial consignment of specially selected lumber. It was to be delivered at the imperial arsenal dock, c.i.f. charges, insurance and freight prepaid. The shipment was addressed to the works in question. The carrier Waters took place this afternoon from the B. C. Funeral Furnishing Company parlors at 2.30 o'clock, where an impressive service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Campbell. Interment was made at Ross Bay cemetery.

—Ald. Henderson has given notice that he will move at to-night's council meeting that the work of straightening, grading, macadamizing and draining Belmont street, between Pembroke and Expressives as well as laving persons. official representing the government declined to pay the drafts, plus the freight charges, which the carriers insisted should be paid before the consignment was delivered. Correspondence was produced to show that the government was entitled to the lumber, less the freight charges, and proving that the shippers in British Columbia were responsible for the payment of the freight. The representative of the Canadian lumber company was at Hongkong, unconscious of the problems that had arisen about the question at Shanghai. A business-like cable, costing $10, would have secured a satisfactory solution in a few hours. Instead of that, the matter was nung up for several hours with red tape. In the meantime the charges for lighterage, the retention of the scows upon which the lumber had been unloaded from the steamship, began to assume alarming proportions. The lumber was finally handed over to the representatives of the Chinese government after a considerable proportion of the value of the lumber had been eaten up with unnecessary expenses, as well as the creation of a spirit of resentment against Canadian trade methods.

In view of the fact that the Canadian Pacific steamship service made a special reduction in freight charges from

In view of the fact that the Canadian Pacific steamship service made a special reduction in freight charges from the regular rates for this consignment, so as to secure an opening for Canadian lumber at the arsenal, the denouement is difficult to understand. I am hopeful that the totally uncalled for unpleasantness may be smoothed over. The chief official at the arsenal assured me that they had not entered into a business transaction respecting which they had more confidently anticipated antisfactory results, and from which they had been given so much unnecessary trouble and annoyance.

A somewhat cursory examination of the lumber yards along the river banks at Shanghal, and a more careful examination of the late arrivals in port, revealed the fact that this is a favorable bjective point for the shipment of large quantities of lumber from the United States. On the date of my recent visit to Shanghai, four vessels had just ar-to Shanghai, four vessels had just arrived with full cargoes of lumber from Oregon, valued at $160,000. Three of these were steamships, and the other was a four-masted salling ship. This lumber was being delivered at Shanghai at a freight rate of from 31s, 6d, to 32s, 6d, per thousand, equivalent to about $7.75 currency, and the vessels were being unloaded within a stone's throw from the Shanghai docks.

The lumber from Canada, so far, has been unloaded on lighters or scows at Wosung—the mouth of the estuary upon which Shanghai is situated and about fourteen miles from the city. The unloading on lighters at the point, and the towing charges at Shanghai, adds nearly $1 per thousand to the freight charges on Canadian lumber to that port. At present the lowest rate that is quoted by the Canadian Pacific service on lumber from Vancouver to Shanghai is $12.80 per thousand. Tumber is being delivered at Shanghai from the United States at a maximum freight rate of $2s, 6d., which is equivalent to about $7.75 in currency. This works on as discriminating against the timber products of British Columbia to the extent of $5 per thousand. It will be readily seen how effectively this closes the door against the expansion of Canadian trade in that direction.

While I will now outline the general adian trade in that direction.

While I will now outline the general policy that I propose to recommend shall be adopted, with a view of securing a reasonable share of the Asiatic trade for Canada, I may say that the time has gone by in the East when business can be satisfactorily conducted through general agencies, or by correspondence. As I have intimated in previous reports, it is necessary that more shall be done than can possibly fall within the sphere of the influence of government officials.

With the expansion of industrial life in Japan, there will be a large market for all kinds of Canadian labor-saving machinery. This, however, cannot be for all kinds of Canadian labor-saving machinery. This, however, cannot be successfully introduced except by practical representatives, and by personal contact between the buyers and manufacturers. To attempt to do business through the ordinary channel of general commission agencies is to place confidence in a broken reed. Expecta-

BYGONE DAYS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

HE TIMES will publish on SATURDAY, JUNE 27th, the fourth of a series of articles by a well-known writer dealing with pioneer days in B. C., and giving the reminiscences of the old-timers who have made of 1858 and following years an epoch in the history, of the Canadian West.

This epoch has never received justice at the hands of the historians. It is crammed with human interest—with thrilling incidents of the goldsearch of the argonauts-with the pathos and often tragedy of their frantic quest for wealth-with the sadness of their failures, as well as with the romantic glamor of their successes. The mad rush to Victoria from all parts of the continent and from over-seas, the hurrying fleet of craft, from steamers to dug-outs, which scrambled like the salmon which have since made the same river famous, up the Fraser to the head of navigation, and then the crowding onward over unbroken trails, and through mountain canyons to their El Dorado-this is the story in part which will be told.

These sketches are not dry chronicles abstracted from musty volumes-the rehashed stories of earlier historians-but flesh and blood tales, full of local color and incident and set down at first hand from the lips of men, many of whom have never before related their story.

The memories of the pioneers, the lore and tradition of the Indians. treasured and hitherto unread manuscript have all been laid under tribute.

The writer will tell for the first time legends of the tribes relating to streams and localities in this province which have never been excelled in beauty in the folk lore of any other people.

These sketches will be fully illustrated-in some instances with photographs taken specially for use in this connection, and will be full of thrilling interest to all to whom the "days of old" in this province appeal.

The Times in arranging for these sketches has done so largely for the purpose of preserving for posterity information and data which is disappearing with the actors in this early stage of provincial affairs, and who are rapidly crossing the Great Divide.

It is hoped that all survivors will not only read these sketches but will offer such additional information, correction, or amendation, as their own knowledge and experience suggests. The Times will be glad to publish all such communications.

The next article will appear in the issue of June 27th, and it is hoped to produce one on each succeeding Saturday until the series is com-

When a boat went alongside the little smack a startling discovery was made. Rowe was dead, and his son appeared quite unconscious of his surroundings, like a man in a trance.

the whole month being only a little over 300 miles.

Once clear of the Bight the Wilhelmine made splendid progress and her log shows that on two very favorable days she made something over 500 miles, or more than ten miles an hour. Capt. Erdmann says that the wind and sea were "just as he wanted them" for fast travelling, and his log bears out the truth of his statement. Thirty-seven days were occupied from the time that the Wilhelmine started travelling north and the passage to Cape Flattery was without incident.

Capt. Erdmann has visited Victoria on two previous occasions, once when the Wilhelmine was loading at Wancouver and again when he brought her to the Roads. The last occasion was in December, 1906, and since that time the Wilhelmine has been home, made a trip to South Africa, thence to Australia, where she was delayed through the Jongshoremen's strike and other circumstances, thence to South America and up to this port.

Coming up from Panama on the trip which she has just concluded, the German ship occupied sixty-nine days to the time of her arrival in the roads, or sixty-seven to the entrance of Juan de Fuca strait. Her performance was a creditable one for the reason that sae was faced at the outset with the task of clearing the Bight of Panama, a place of tantalizing and continuous caims, whose adverse influence is accentuated by the presence of a current with a southward set. Thirty long days were spent in taking advantage of "morning and evening" airs to clear the doldrums, the distance covered during the whole month being only a little over 300 miles.

Among the best performances to her credit are the following: Delagoa Bay to Taital in 56 days, an average of slightly over 9 knots an hour for the entire voyage, which was made in July and August, 1903; 30 days from New catle, N. Visitor From England Enjoys the Climate and the

brass and copper jam and confectionery machinery, accompanied by Mrs. Brierley and Mr. Perret, also of Rochdale, Lanca-shire, England, are spending a two months' holiday at the Dallas hotel, in two years ago, at which time he formed such a good impression of the city that he decided to return here this year, and having turned a good business deal with

Sir Thomas Lipton over some jam making machinery, started out to spend the summer here at the latter end of May. Speaking this morning on general conditions as they are related between the home country and Vancouver sland and British Columbia, Mr. Brierley said that owing to the financial depression in the United States and the falling in the cotton output there was now not a large amount of money to be had for investment either for home or outside investment either for home or outside investment.

At the time of his leaving Mr. Brierley said there were crowds making preparations to set out for Quebec for the celebrations, and the Empress of Britain, which left on May 29th, was full, and had a complement of over 800 immigrants on board. Regarding the immigration question, he says there are varying reports, some of them are that the numbers have fallen off considerably, and others that they are increasing, but he remarked that there are many cases of disappointed immigrants returning home again. Others, however, are sending home good reports and are advising their friends to come out West. On the whole, however, Mr. Brierley estimates from his observations

The following programme opens at the New Grand to-day and if reports received as to the merits of the big features that make it up are to be relied on it will be a great show. The Elton-Polo-Aldo troupe of sensational casting artists, the Frederick and Raymond trio of operatic vocalists; William Selbini and Jenetta Grovini, acrobatic bicyclists; Leo Filier, the Russian boy violinist; Black and Miller, military acrobatic comiques; Effe Pearson, singing comedienne; Thos. J. Price, singing the illustrated song "The Tale the Church Bells Tolled"; new moving pictures entitled "Modern Sculptors," and "Uncle Bill's Bull," and the overture, "Enchantment," by Herrmann.

FINE FEATURES IN FIREWORKS

TO-NIGHT'S SET PIECES SUPERLATIVE

Especially Strong Programme Arranged for Opening of Pain's Spectacle.

Pain's Spectacle.

Pain's much advertised "Vesuvius," 'Carnival of Naples" and fireworks festival is to show for a first time on Vancouver Island to-night at the Royal Athletic park, which is the formal name of the new lacrosss grounds at the corner of Cook and Pembroke streets—a location within easy walking distance of almost any part of the city, or conveniently reached by either the Spring Ridge or Douglas street cars. The working forces have been busy during several days past, and the magnitude of the attraction can be gauged by the immensity and complexity of the paraphernalia which with tents, etc., extends almost the full length of the big field. Additional grand stands and bleachers to give a total seating accommodation of 6,000 are in process of colock to-night.

The production, according to the management, will be even stronger that the same to the control of the case was in motion hurrying to fill up the control of the case was in motion hurrying to fill up the case was completion, and will be ready by 6 o'clock to-night.

The production, according to the management, will be even stronger here than in Portland, where it evoked the appliase of more than 10,000 on the closing night of the Rose Carnival engagement. Two new specialty teams arrived from Chicago to join the attraction yesterday and make their debut this evening. Altogether more than 220 people will be utilized here, the spectacular first part requiring a stage 350 feet in length. The musicianly force of the visiting attraction will be augmented by the victoria city bank and one thousand miles in circumference, was wheeling madly round and routake the centre.

The dead calm, were thankful for the breeze that sprang up. Very soon the air over the whole vast State of Texas was in motion, hurrying to fill up the vacancy left by the column, now of immense size and rushing upward to required.

Then, owing to some irregularity in the inward movement, the column began to revolve. First, the centre whilred of round and round, and as time went until a great mass, three thousand feet skell times says:

Concerning the girl's disappearance the Seattle Times says:

"Wait a moment, mother, until I ko in this store," remarked Helen Jaskulski, a pretty Ballard girl, to her particular to the current of the column beat the centre while, and the centre while says.

"Wait a moment, mother, until I ko in this store," remarked Helen Jaskulski, a pretty Ballard girl, to her particular t ment either for home or outside Investments in comparison with the money that was circulated two years ago. At that time, he says, the cotton boom was in full swing, and in Lancashire there were more improvements made than in the rest of England. Cotton mills, he said, were run up all over the county, and at the price of twenty-five shillings per spindle there were many millions of dollars spent on the erection of the mills, all of which were, during that time, making a profit of twenty-five per cent. But to-day things are, in comparison, rather flat. The mills at that time, he says, went up like mushrooms, and there was work for all, but to-day there is not enough to go round, and therefore the spare money that is ready for investment is all needed in the home land, and in spite of the fact that Canadian securities are regarded well and with confidence there is little money that can be spared for other than home purposes.

and the entire show is on a scale of magnitude of which Victoria has hitherto had no experience.

The first part previously referred to represents a carnival in Naples with an effective story in pantomime, a series of circus acrobatic specialties, and processions being naturally introduced. Then Vesuvius, which looms darkly in the background to a height of 50 odd feet, after many threatenings is seen in active eruption and in a storm of realistic fire, the mimic city crumbles and disappears.

The first part previously referred to the entire storm. You think I have no life nor sense; that I am mere lanimate oxygen and nitrogen rushing almelsy round the world. Not so, I follow my chosen course. I rest or sove, as the wish takes me.

Soon I set out on my travels. Steering a northwest course, I rushed along and round, without an instant's pause. Levelling houses, tearing up giant trees, blowing down chimneys, flattening fields of corn, I careered over the continuation of the centre. and the entire show is on a scale of magnitude of which Victoria has hitherto had no experience.

The fireworks programme which foilows as soon as the smoke of the eruption has cleared away will give Victorians some conception of the difference between Pain pyrotechnics and the fireworks of other producers; the setpleces, for example, utilize to a leave extent the socialize deporter for

Of the setpleces arranged for this evening the chief will probably be the reproduction of Niagara Falls, this being one of the largest sets ever fired in the West, and the special fea-ture which was the crowning trium. entaged brightness become good report with a charactery. On the presiding judge summing up, one of the prisoners rose and excitedly announced that the moment was ripe for revelations. He then gave a new version of the affair, which he declared had been given to him in New York by one of the assassins, who was afterwards murdered there during a brawl. His narrative provoked a fiendish outbreak of passion among the men in the break of passion among the men in the wards murcered there during a braw. His narrative provoked a fiendish outbreak of passion among the men in the dock, which in Italy generally assumes the form of an iron cage stoutly railed to a height of ten feet to twelve feet on three sides, and in the Southern provinces at the top also.

The prisoners fell upon each other and fought like hyenas, snapping some of the railings of the cage during their Herculean struggles.

The judges, lawyers and officials rushed from their seats and crowded round the cage, from which the carabinieri, being unable to effect an entrance, dragged the fiercest combatants through the broken aperture.

The presiding judge suspended the sitting and had the public excluded, Later a picket of troops brought in the prisoners, six of whom were found guilty by the jury.

The closing sensation came when the

THE STORY OF A STORM

As Told by Itself.

The ocean I love best. On land I bruise myself against rocks, and I am turned aside by mountains. But on the ocean no obstacle hinders me, and I follow a bee-line to your shores across the Atlantic, raising great waves, sinking ships, and striking terror into the hearts of voyagers. I am now in the zenith of my vigor. What am I like? Imagine a circle of air, five hundred miles from edge to edge. In the centre I am perfectly still, and laden with water, which I drop as continuous rain. This calm area is one hundred miles across, and gentrally it moves across Scotland or the North of England. When you have continuous rain for hours, or a whole day, you may know

You can always know when I am coming and when I am going. Before me is a great wedge of muggy air and gloomy sky. It depresses you. As I pass you feel my full force. And as I begin to leave you, you get squalls and

Sheriff Richards Proved a Good Judge

Thanks to the discerning eye of Sheriff Richards the marriage of a sixteen-year-old Seattle girl, Helen Jaskulski, to a young man of Georgetown, with whom she had eloped the previous afternoon. Was prevented, for the time being at least. The girl left her mother on the street in Seattle Monday afternoon to go into a store for a moment, and has not since been seen by her parents. The faither of the girl came over to Victoria Friday and sought the aid of the local police, who were able to inform him that the girl and a male companion had on Tuesday applied to Sheriff Richards for a marriage license. The sheriff, however, proved himself a good judge of female age and refused the application on the Sound boat, declaring their intention of going to Port Townsend to be married.

Concerning the girl's disappearance the Seattle Times says:

then no trace of her has been found.

"The girl is 16 years old and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Jasi kulski, of Ballard. The father is a car repairer for the Columbian & Puget-Sound railroad. SMITH CURTIS AND ROSS ARE WINNING COUPLE Former Required Persuasion to Accept Nomination in Kootenay.

Vancouver, June 20 .- "Smith Curtis s putting up a winning fight in Kootnay and Yale-Cariboo will send Ross ack to Ottawa. Nothing is farther enay and Yale-Cariboo will send Ross back to Ottawa. Nothing is farther from the truth than the report that the nomination of Ross was a machine result not favored by the rank and file of the party. Ross is in more favor today than he was ever-before, a practically unanimous convention invited him to stand again."

Thus did J. A. Macdonald, provincial Liberal leader, sum up the political situation in the interior this morning. Thus did J. A. Macconaid, provincial Liberal leader, sum up the political situation in the interior this morning.
"It was with great difficulty Mr. Smith Curtis was persuaded to run," he continued. "It was not that he regarded himself as out of politics, for as a matter of fact he has always taken a matter of fact he has always taken a keen interest in politics and is constitutionally incapable of doing anything else. DREDGES LAID UP.

Gold Hunters Stop Operations—High Water in Granite Creek.

Princeton, June 20.—The Weeks Adams gold dredger at Granite creek has closed down after a few days' run. The machinery has been housed on the bank of the creek ready to be removed or disposed of as the proprietors see fit. Various causes have contributed to the necessity for stopping the dredger, chief of which was the lack of values in the placer. High water in the creek was also an important factor, for if the water had been low a better quality of ground would have been reached. It is not probable that bedrock was touched or better results would have been obtained.

water in the creek was also an important factor, for if the water had been low a better quality of ground would have been reached. It is not probable that bedrock was touched or better results would have been obtained.

The ground in the bed of the creek is virgin and according to all the unwritten laws of placer mining ought to be obtained there. Other parts of the creek were worked in the early days with large profits, but this portion remained untouched because of the hand-mining process failing under water.

Messrs. Weeks and Adams with crew of men have gone to Spokane. It is not unlikely they will return when low water prevails on the river and creek.

SIX MONTHS FOR THEFT OF $900.

Vancouver, June 20.—Earl Spalding charged with the theft of $900 from another young man in the city, came up before Judge Cane and pleaded guilty. He said that he was quite willing to make restitution for all he had stolen. In view of this his honor imposed the comparatively light sentence of six months' imprisonment. The robbery occurred in a downtown house, where Spalding abstracted the money in a roll of bills from the other man's hip pocket. He hired a cab and drove over to New Westminster that night. Afterwards he got as far as Port Townsend, where he was located and brought back by the city police.

GIANT CUNARDERS

Although much, has been written about the magnificent achievements of the giant Cunarders, the Lusitania and the Mauretania, at the times of the many records breaking passages which they have made, and are still making, across the Atlantic, but little has been said of the reasons which led to their construction and of what their feats mean to the mation which gave them birth. In these modern days when competition has been brought to such a pitch it is no small thing to possess he commercial sovereignty of the seas. Britain, realizing that naval greatness and commercial sovereignty of the seas of the Cunard fleet established their unchallenged claim to the sovereignty of the seas of the Cunard fleet established their unchallenged claim to the sovereignty of the seas, shat achievements of the Cunarders:

So quletly have the two giant racers of the Cunard fleet established their unchallenged claim to the sovereignty of the seas, that achievements of nothing less than epoch-making note have caused no sensation. We are at last, however, in presence of a triumph so decisive that it must extort the admiration of all peoples who go down to the sea in ships, and we ourselves may dwell upon it in no vaunting spirit, but with just pride. Vesterday the Lusitania reached New York in the small hours of the month of the present case of the Cunsting fleet established their unchallenged claim to the sovereignty of the seas, that achievements of nothing less than epoch-making note have sea in ships, and we ourselves may dwell upon it in no vaunting spirit, but with just pride. We have recovered our prestige in that business of marine architecture which is still, as Ruskin said many years ago, that an average speed of nearly twenty-five knots was maintained throughout the voyage, surpassing the highest figure that had ever before been touched by four-tenths of a knot. But when a feat of this kind is registered, there are always one or two lintermediate records connected with the finest run for a day, and the fastest rate for an hour. Whatever may be said to explain or amplify, this at least is the fact, that we hold the Blue Ribbon of the ocean once more, and that it has been won back over and over again during the last six or seven months. The contest lies between two British liners, both of them the champlons of their country, and neither of them with a rival upon the seas. Germany has done so much in so many fleids of modern enterprise that she may will be content to relign the Hamburg and the Bremen silps. It would be ungenerous in the extreme not to acknowledge, as it deserves, the force and spirit of the efforts by which the Toutonic challenge secured temporary but on the seas. There had been in these latter days no more unsuspected and surprising development of German energy than this. Many thinkers, it is true, had prophesied that the Teutonic genius, reviving the memorable tradit in or the Hansa Leasuw would be formed to the hard. The late government because the formed the sease should be won back for this country in the sphere of space, was a startling departure from laisses-faire. The first great development of Continental competition was in the coarser textiles, but, above all, in the metal trades. For years, however, after the new challenge had made itself felt with some severity of pressure, the possibility of effective rivairy in the carrying trades was still regarded as an idle and absurd dream. The awakening came little more than a dozen years ago. We awoke one morning—if we may parody Bryon's words in this connection—to find another country famous. BRATTON FACES THE MAGISTRATE

INSURANCE AGENT UP ON INCENDIARY CHARGE

Case is Remanded Until Friday, Bail Being Refused in the Meantime.

Charles Berry Bratton, local superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, appeared in the police court this morning to answer a charge of having set fire to the Board of Trade building on Saturday afternoon last, but at the request of Chief Langley, who intimated that the police would have other charges of a similar nature to prefer against Bratton, the hearing was remanded until Friday next, bail being refused. Bratton did not appear particularly worried when he appeared in court. After taking his seat in the dock he bowed and smiled to some dequaintances among the large crowd that the case had drawn to the court room. After his remand Bratton spent from After his remand Bratton spent from After his remand Bratton spent in the employ of the Metropolitan Life Insome time in the court room talking to J. A. rushed to the place on seeing smoke pouring out of the basement windows. Bratton, who appeared very much excited and perturbed at the appearance on the scene of the detectives, was promptly placed under arrest. So disconcerted was he that he could hardly speak for some time. Since his arrest he has passed his waking hours restlessly pacing up and down the police station corridor or up and down the ittle courtyard between the cells and the court room.

Bratton's arrest has caused much speculation as to why, if he is really the man wanted by the police, a man in his position should commit such a crime as the one with which he is charged. One of the most reasonable explanations is that the man's mind had been affected by drink, as it is known that he was addicted to liquor the station out of the post office. From there he proceeding to his office in the Board of Trade building by way of Langley and Bastion streets. He spent about twenty minutes in his office and among other things that he did while there he dictated two letters. Coming out of his office he crossed Bastion street past the court house and through Court alley to Tates street. After standing there for some minutes he suddenly wheeled and coming back through the alley to Bastion street, down which he proceeded to Wharf street, where after standing a few minutes as if in doubt, he crossed over to the rear of Walter S. Fraser & Co,'s premises, where there were a number of boxes piled. After looking over the fence at these he returned to his office.

explanations is that the man's mind had been affected by drink, as it is known that he was addicted to liquor and had been going quite a pace lately. He is known to have had strong opinions as to the efficiency of the Victoria brigade and has also expressed strong views on the water question. It is possible that his mind may have become a little affected on these ques-

Mr. Alkman made a determined effort to secure bail and asked as aiternative that the hearing be proceeded with at once, but his requests were opposed by the case and in the interests of public safety he was forced to refuse bail, and he also thought the prosecution were entitled to a reasonable delay.

The case was the last on the list in the city police court and when the information charging Charles Berry Bratton with setting fire to the Board of torn with setting fire to the Board of Trade building on Saturday last had been read, Mr. Alkman said he was not ready to go on for a day or so. He would like if in the meantime his worship would allow his client out on a reasonable bail.

"How long do you ask for, Mr. Alkman?" inquired the magistrate.
Chief Langley—I was going to ask for a remand until Friday.
Mr. Alkman—In that event I hope your worship will fix bail at a reasonable amount as there is only a charge against my client without any evidence offered in support of it. While my client can secure bail if it is fixed at a reasonable amount he cannot get it if placed at an excessive amount.
Chief Langley strongly objected to the granting of ball at all. The police would have other charges to lay against Bratton before Friday.
Mr. Aikman said that it was a most sunfair statement to make. His worship could take no cognizance of any charges but the one before him.

It was through the fire that broke tout in the alley which runs off Broad street between Copas & Young's and Weller Bros. Turniture factory that the police suspicions really fastened themselves upon Bratton.

This the woman refused to do pleading that she did not have the money.

In connection with the registration of an extra-provincial company, which has undertaken the development of the mining properties above referred to, also that of an associated trading and transportation company, he first spent some time with the registrar of joint stock companies, and after this business had been attended to Mr. Wootton introduced the visitor to E. GUN CLUB SHOOT.

There was a fairly good crowd out to the Victoria Gun Club shoot which took place at Langford Plains yesterday. In the shoot for the Dupon trophy picture, 'Maxie." Lobbrunner and Lenfesty tied in this event, making 20 each out of 25. It was necessary to shoot off as the trophy is won on percentage.

In the afternoon the wind which had been high in the morning increased to a gale, so that high scores were almost impossible.

The Weiler cup was shot for, there being a number of entries, and the scoring, although not high, was very close. Adams, Lenfesty and Patton tied on the first forty birds, each making 29. Then in the next twenty Lenfesty and Adams tied, and in the last twenty Lenfesty won out, Adams dropping away down. In this event Adams was handicapped by having to shoot from the eighteen-yard mark, instead of sixteen, Lenfesty will have to step back two yards next time, this being the handicap for each time the cup is won.

UT of Paris the other day came a story that interested the circlined world. It concerned a young and pretty "Something of a commotion," the news dispatches stated, "was caused in the fashionable singing school conducted by Jean de Reszke because of the expulsion of one of his most promising pupils without explanation.

"It was learned that the expelled pupil was discovered to be the author of a series of anonymous letters addressed to M. de Reszke and attacking the character of Countess Marguerite Cassini, niece and adopted daugh-ter of the former Russian ambassador at Washington.

"Ever since Count Cassini left America the countess has lived in Paris, studying under Jean de Reszke with a view to appearing in opera. She has made excellent progress and is almost ready to make her debut.

"It is said that jealousy of her success was the only motive of the anonymous com-munications in which she was attacked. The countess was greatly distressed over the in-cident, as the writer of the letters was a sup-

ACK of the simple statement made above is an interesting story that has had its various chapters written in widely separate parts of the earth—and always with a dashing young girl as its central

It hasn't been so many years since the Counters Cassini, niece and sdopted daughter of the Russian ambassador, was regarded as the algebraic x of diplomatic circles. No one knew what she would do next.

When the ambassador was transferred to Madrid, the daring, unconventional young counters passed out of the annals of Washington life. It was generally supposed that she had gone to the Spanish court with her uncle and foster father.

Many who thought so had their first enlightenment through the news dispatches telling of the flurry in Jean de Reszke's Paris school. It was not generally known that the countess was preparing for a career upon the

that the countess was preparing for a career upon the operatic stage.

Why? was the question that sprang to hundreds of lips in social and diplomatic circles. Why should a young woman of such distinguished position and wealth wish to pass through the grinding stages of preparation for opera, unless with another object than that of the honors attained by the successful prima donna?

No one imagines—not even herself, perhaps—that the Countess Cassini will become a new Melba, Tetranzini or Mary Garden.

But, it is whispered in Paris, one may possess suffi-

But, it is whispered in Paris, one may possess sufficient talent, lifted into high operatic possibilities by artistic training, to attain a commanding position on the stage; society may fall at her feet—and this, it is whispered again, is the secret motive that animates the young woman's operatic studies.

She wishes to conquer the society that has been rather coldly disposed to her throughout her career in diplomatic circles; her newest attack upon its strongholds is to be made from the operatic stage.

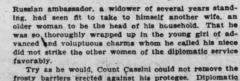

Few women have been so generally discussed—certainly few have been so mercilessly pilloried by her own sex on the tongue of gossip—as the Countess Cassini.

Gossip got busy with her when, at the age of 15 years, she was the head of her uncle's household in Pekin—he was then representing his country at the court of the Flowery Kingdom. Her beauty and accomplishments, in addition to the romance of being so young a hostess, should have made her a leader, even at that age—and she was nrececious—in social diplomatic circles.

It happened, however, that the wiyes of other diplomats at Pekin had ideas of their own. They may or may not at their gossiping teas have set in motion certain remarks and opinions regarding the household of the Russian ambassador, at any rate, the Cassini malden found an exceedingly frosty reception wherever she appeared.

All this might have been obviated, of course, if the Try as he would, Count Cassini could not remove the frosty barriers erected against his protegee. Diplomatic society in the Chinese capital was in an unfavorable frame of mind. So Count Cassini asked to be transferred, and was given the post at Paris.

To the French capital the ambassador and the young girl went gladly. They believed that Parislan society would deal more graciously with the dashing young woman; they opened wide the doors of the embassy, and with lavish hospitality entertained at some of the most-brilliant functions of the year.

with lavish hospitality entertained at some of the most-brilliant functions of the year.

But the rumors that had gained credence in Pekin had preceded the fair Russian to the French capital, and she was treated coldly, not being accepted as "a lady of the diplomatic corps." Her position as "niece" in the ambassador's household did not seem to make the im-pression she and Count Cassini desired.

It was largely because of this second disappointment that Count Cassini again sought a transfer, and this time was sent to represent his government at Wash-ington.

Ington.

Both the count and the young woman hoped that in the breezy capital of the new world's greatest nation they would enter upon a new and commanding social, career, with no searchlights turned on the disappointments and heartburnings of the past.

"At this time," said a writer in describing the latest addition to Washington's diplomatic circles, "Marguerite Cassini is a little above medium height and exquisitely formed. Her eyes are large and soulful, by far the most expressive and characteristic feature of her face. An abundance of glistening curls crown her Greek-molded head and fail in short ringlets about her brow and throat.

AN ACCOMPLISHED ATHLETE

"Her skin is wonderfully white and smooth for one with such dark eyes and hair, the only bit of brilliant coloring about her face being her full lips, which are deep crimson.

deep crimson.

"She is an accomplished athlete, being an active member of several sporting clubs; she is an enthusiastic horsewoman and driver, handling the ribbons with as much ease as she takes a fence on the back of a hunter. She ease as she takes a fence on the back of a hunter. She has won several championship cups on the golf links, is fond of wheel riding and likes sports of all kinds."

When the young woman arrived in Washington, however, she found that her social aspirations were not foreordained to a flowery bed of ease. There were more than rose leaves crumpling the couch; there were more than rose leaves crumpling the couch; there were thorns of an unmistakable character.

The wives of several European diplomats, headed by the Baroness von Hengelmuller, wife of the ambassador representing Austria-Hungary, refused to acknowledge Marguerite Cassini as the ambassadress of the Russian embassy, and for quite a time there was a pretty tempet her position. The Czar had conferred upon her the hereditary title of countess, and endowed her with special honors which, as the head of the ambassador's household, would give her at all public functions the rank and precedence of an ambassador's wife.

This was unusual and contrary to the—usages of the courts of Europe, it was said; at any rate, the diplomatic corps in Washington declined to abide by it. A meeting of the ambassadors was called for the purpose of settling the matter.

It was gone about in this way: Lord Pauncefote, dean of the corps, issued invitations for a dinner party, with Count Cassini and the countess among the guests. The countess was assigned to a table place among the other young women present—a place to which no official significance could be made to attach.

Another dinner was given the following week by M. Cambon at the French embassy, at which the Pauncefote precedent was followed; then came a similar affair at the home of the German ambassador. That, it seemed, settled the matter so far as the diplomatic corps was concerned.

BALKED IN AMBITIOUS PLAN

The young countess, not a little netted, announced her intention of seeking recognition by President Mc-Kinley. She declared that at the state dinners to be given at the White House she purposed to rank next to Lady Pauncefote, and it was asserted that she forced the Russian ambassador to go to the frent and make a personal plea at the White House for her.

When the time drew near for issuing the invitations a curious condition of affairs presented itself. Lady Pauncefote, wife of the dean, was in court mourning and could not attend the White House dinner; the German ambassador was also out of the city.

So Countess Cassini gave it out that she Intended to walk into the dining room on the arm of the President and ahead of every other woman on the diplomatic corps then in Washington. This stirred up things greatly, and the grave diplomats from warious countries hurried to the White House to discuss the situation with the President.

Mr. McKinley settled the controversy by declaring that during his administration no unmarried woman would, on occasions of state, take precedence of the matrons. The Countess Cassini attended the dinner and ate her humble ple with a pretty grace that won her considerable admiration.

But, while not finding favor among the women of the diplomatic corps, the countess managed to cut a considerable figure in Washington society.

Her fads, perhaps, were partly responsible for this. One of these fads was the number and beauty of her dogs. Another was her preference for red-brown hair. Her fondness for adventure and her daring in all kinds of sport also made her many friends.

It was Countess Cassini who introduced the costume dinner to the young set in Washington. All her entertainments were gay; in fact, it was stated that a great deal of gossip was aroused by a too pronounced type of galety in her social functions.

Withel, she was successful without the favor of the woman of the diplomatic corps. This was withheld in washington, as if had been in Pekin and Pari

Instead she went to Paris and began studying for the operatic stage. Should she prove a great success she may yet have the world of society at her feet and score a sweet triumph over those who have turned the cold-shoulder upon her in the past.

THE marcel wave, doubtless, had its origin in the Garden of Eden.

For the eternal woman is eternally interested in the eternal subject of the coiffure. The curl-paper in the shape of twigs and other archaic devices, no doubt, was used by the debutante ape of the simian jungles. And on the stenes unearthed in the ruins of ancient Babylon, Phoenicia and on the immortal tombs of Egypt archeologists have noted the inevitable vanity of woman-in dressing her hair.

Customs might change, the standards of beauty rise and fall, but woman has always sought to embellish her tresses. Today she spends an hour or two at the fashionable hairdresser's; after their baths the women of Athens and Pompeii spent hours arranging the wonderful dress with which they surmounted their heads. And so it has always been.

Pompeian villa would be a series of layers of hair, growing smaller and smaller, and converging to a point—one of the most bizarre effects ever achieved. Quite different was the colffure of the ladies of the time of Nero. The Lady Poppaea had quite a number of styles from which to select.

A popular headdress among the ladies of the Roman court was a pompadour effect above the forehead, and-an innumerable number of platis in the back. Possibly the pompadour effect was achieved by curling the hair in front of the head, and plaiting thin strands in the back and tying them in a knot.

Another popular headdress was to part the hair in the middle and curl it at the sides, gathering the curls in the back and letting them fall loose over the shoulders.

In the thirteenth century women were the hair in one plait in the back. This was wrapped about the head and over the forehead. In Amsterdam, had you lived about that time, you could have seen one of the most amazing headdresses of the ages.

In France the results of curl papers assumed many was the headdress of the days of Madame de Grignon. head simply rippled with curis-curls, a perfect cascade of curls. simply rippled with curls-small curls, dainty era when hairdressing had become the most difficult of arts. Alas for the lady with short hair or thin hair! For in those days a lady's tresses were arranged to rise from the head with an immense swelling effect.

. AMAZING POMPADOURS

The tresses were curied in the back, little curis nestled about the neck, and at the apex of the head was a turt of feathers. Pompadours about this time became-magnified; they swelled to amazing propertions. Hats were tilted piquantly on the side of the lady's head—it was impossible to wear them on top.

Ladies of high position devised many original schemes of pompadours; the dome of golden or powdered tresses was often woven with flowers. The styles were bizarre but pretty.

But fashions change, and within a few hundred years the ladies had taken down the great pompadours and wore the hair with almost Grecian simplicity.

In the early part of the minateenth century most fashionable women wore the hair parted in the middle. The curl paper was used for the tresses, and the hair was so curied that it fluffed from the side of the head beneath the pressure of a coronet.

Of course, it is a question as to what age deserves the credit for the most artistic headdress. One cannot but admire the softness and unaffected grace of the Grecian coffrare. But when one compares the fashions—from Greece to Louis XVIII—one cannot doubt the women of today take the palm. This is the age of the curl paper, modernized, evolved to a science.

SIMPLICITY and grace marked the headdress of the women of ancient Greece. You have seen pictures of Helen of Troy and the "sweetmouthed queen of Lesbia"—or you have observed the severely beautiful Juno and the classic Yenus of Milo. Then, as now, woman's pride was her often women wore a filet about the forehead, or perhaps a sort of turban covered the head—a mere wrapping of beautiful cloth drawn tightly over the tresses. It maintained the shape admirably.

Among the most bizarre effects was that devised by the women of Pompell. It was pyramidal, colossal, amazing. Hours were spent in dressing the hair, and when it was fixed, with waxes and oils, it was not taken down for days. This arrangement made the women look considerably taller than they really were, and imparted a rather severe dignity of mien.

In ancient Ionia a woman would draw her hair back and simply tie the mass together, letting the strands dangle down her back. But in the dars when Sapphe sang her songs, perfection of the hair-curling process had been evolved.

Sir Gilbert Parker on Canada's

What is implied in the forther what is implied in the forthcoming celebration at Quebec, to which the Prince of Wales is going? The found-ing of the city by Champiain three hun-dred years ago, and so the founding of Canada! Of course; but behind that what do they mean, what are their soul and message for Canada and for us?

Of whom should we ask this but Sir Gilbert Parker, the member for Canada, for the colonies—as well as for Gravesend; a writer who has lifted Canada into a place in English literature—which—she never held before—one who is as proud of his native Dominion as it is of him? Sir Gilbert spoke out of his full knowledge of Canada and her two peoples, and what he had to say is worth hearing.
"It is not." he said. "the celebration worth hearing.

"It is not," he said, "the celebration of the conquest of France by England in America that holds any place in the minds of the Canadian people. The tercentenary is to be focussed at the battlefield of Quebec, on the Plains of Abraham, but that means no more to the present generation of Canadians, French and English, than a splendid plece of history, in which, after the lapse of a hundred and fifty years, they each have an equal share of glory.

A Great Heritage.

A Great Heritage.
"The French-Canadian has long ceas "The French-Canadian has long ceased—his grandfathers had ceased—to think of French Canada in any relation to France. He is secure—as his grandfather and great, great, great, greatherandfathers were—in his language, his civil law and his religion. Vastly outnumbering the Britisher in his province, controlling it from a French-Canadian point of view, and having an administration markedly different from the rest af the Dominion of Canada, he is conscious of no loss except that another flag than the fleur-de-lys, or the tri-color, flies above, the citadel of Quebec. He never had sympathy with the government at Versailles, which tyrannized, robbed and misgoverned him. government at versaliles, which tyran-nized, robbed and misgoverned him, and if the English had not captured Quebec he would probably have rebel-led, as the British-American colonist rebelled against the sovereign power. Fatriot as he is in the sense of loving the soil of Canada as deeply as the de-scendants of the Norman Conquest cendants of the Norman Conquest could love the soil of England, there is only a question in the mind of the French-Canadian of the place that he holds in the national life of the Dominion—there is no question of any envy, hatred, malice or any uncharitableness.

"Indeed, in repard to this tercenter ary it is all his. It was he who first came; it is he who still presides politically and socially over a territory where he squatted in the time of Louis XIV. and Louis XV., all the glory of the wonderful days of Champlain, Cartier, La Salle and Marquette is his; the pride of history and antiquity—for the pride of history and antiquity—for to a new land three hundred years is antiquity—is with him. He is in a sense Elizabethan, because he began with the beginning of an expanding England, as English history dated anew from the Elizabethan period.

A French-Canadian Pilot, A French-Canadian Pilot.

"The French-Canadian can enter upon the celebration with the perfect consciousness that the splendor of the situation is chiefly his; and it will be a bappy reflection for him that a Frenchman is prime minister leading the destinies of Canada, conducting it to greater days, while representing less than a third of the whole population racially. The French-Canadian realizes that every English-speaking Canadian pays The French-Canadian realizes that every English-speaking Canadian pays as much homage to Montcalm as to Wolfe, to De Levis as to Murray, and that every English-Canadian schoolboy flushes with pride at the thought of the victory of De Salaberry at Chateauvictory of De Salaberry at Chateau-guay, which saved Canada from the American marauder. Nay, in the mind of the English-Canadian, the romance and the tragedy of Montcalm the Be-loved are as dear and as fascinating as the glory and the tragedy of Wolfe. "To the French-Canadian belongs the long distinction, the pride and heroism, of the wonderful first century and a leng distinction, the pride and heroism, of the wonderful first century and a half of Canadian history, extending, in fact, down to the nineteenth century. To the English-Canadian belongs the nineteenth century, its constructive idealisms and prescience, and the great industrial, commercial and agricultural development which is a tribute to the marvellops mental and business prowsess of the Anglo-Saxon race. To both ess of the Anglo-Saxon race. To both races the Quebec celebration will mean a new vision of nationality, not French, not English, but Canadian; and that nationality, I firmly believe, linked up by the unbreakable metal of an English by the unbreakable metal of an English inheritance, and the debt due to the thousand years of British history and British traditions, which have given Canada the best she has in her national life. When ore speaks of the national life of Canada, one does not mean a sectional or a separatist life, but a life as much a part of the Empire as Wales is part of the United Kingdom—individual, distinctive, in its outlook upon life and conduct, yet bound fast to the common interest, the common glory of a great union.

"Who Fears to Speak?"

"We need not be afarid to use the word 'fiation' in regard to this young Dominion. It does not imply a separate or a dissoluble relation. It is the only word that expresses maturity, growth, the power on the part of this Imperial Jeune premiere to live and act and earn her national way; and nothing but good can come from the dignity and the pride of historic progress which the heir apparent to the crown of Great Britain and of the Empire will be the central figure. He will be welcomed as much by the French-Canadian, and I fancy that the celebration will, in a sense, do more for the English-Canadian than for the French-Canadian. It will teach him more, the Will help him more. The French-Canadian has had to think in two languages for two generations; he has had to think, through the atmosphere of his own history language, and descent, in terms of British administration and ideals. The English-Canadian, more concrete, practical, and less imaginative, has lived a more sellish, centred life until late years. an object lesson of the good that has gone before, of the light upon a far horizon luring him to greater things. "As for England and her part in the tercentenary of the founding of Canada? Interest, sympathy, encouragement, brotherhood, comaraderie, if you like: but it is not her game, it is not her day; it is Canada's day. It should not be a celebration in any sense of her day; it is Canada's day. It should not be a celebration, in any sense, of England's might and power, of a French Empire overthrown on the continent of America; it should be the visit of the father to the grown-up son, with dominions of his own, which he has developed—a raw estate grown into a refined and highly productive organization. England is always sedate and in-self-conscious in her hours of triumph. She might well be plangent over the Quebec tercentenary, but she will not, whatever the ancient part she played, whatever the present gift she makes, as she does make, through her navy, for the protection of the Canadian land. At this celebration the vital thing will be the plighted troth adian land. At this celebration the vital thing will be the plighted troth of two peoples once at war, now working together, not without friction, not without difficulty, but still working together for a national purpose, with a great history behind them; two peoples leaving to make a great newer. great history beamed them; two peoples laboring to make a great power which shall have all that is best in British life, with something that belongs to the soll, to the climate, to the history and the conditions of the young abounding land itself."—J. NO PLACE FOR DOGS.

It is impossible in Japan to keep a good dog? I have twice had my dogs disappear in a ,seemingly miraculous way. As I am well aware that there is a great demand for dog skins, especially those of young dogs, we have been careful in having our dog watched; nevertheless, he disappeared. Almost every foreigner has lost a dog or dogs, and even a sea captain who was three days on shore had his dog poisoned the first day he put his feet on land.—Japan Chronicle.

IMES SPICIAL STORY

the pane and the spring landscap ched in the downpour of the night which now had given way to a soft drizzle, was drear and desolate. Marian had to be miserable in nearly iwo weeks, for her cousin, Adra, was visiting. In the bustle of entertaining and being entertained there had been no opportunity to weep over the bulky package of love letters that were securely locked in the tin box that con-tained Marian's most treasured pos-sessions. Adra had laid down for a nap, her mother, in mackintosh and daughter and Marian was left to the chocolates.

Curied up in the big, sleepy-hollow chair in her room she became so absorbed in her letters that she never noticed Adra's silent entrance until a loud booh! caused her to leap from her chair and hurriedly conceal her letters. When she saw that it was her cousin and not her mother she was less careful of the letters and Adra's quick eye detected them.

ess careful of the letters and Adra's quick eye detected them.
"Sweetheart?" she demanded and as Marian's confusion made silent answer she shook half of the chocolates into the cover of the box and made her-

"Tell me all about him," she de-manded. "It's such a horrid day I can't even sleep. He's handsome, of course?"

"As a Greek god," was the enthusiastic response. "Tall and dark with such eyes. He's an actor. It's all over now. He had to marry someone his father insisted that he marry. You see his father is a very wealthy man and Gordon is his only son. He was just acting because he loved the work but he promised his father to leave the stage and manage the vast estates if he could have one year of his life on the stage. He was going to come back he could have one year of his life on the stage. He was going to come back when he left the stage and met my parents. Until then he did not want to meet them, for fear that the fact that he had been an actor might prejudice them against him,

"Then when he did leave the stage his horrid father made him marry some girl that has money and Gordon had to because his father had heart disease and it would kill him to be opposed. He married her a year ago. He has not written since. It is so noble of him because he doesn't love the girl he married. But he said that it would not be loyal to write the girl that he really did love and he knew that he couldn't write without telling me how unhappy he was and making it all the harder for both of us to bear."

unhappy he was and making it all the harder for both of us to bear."

"And that is why poor Ben Bronson sighs in vain?" demanded Adra. "Ben's a splendid fellow."

"He's a dear," assented Marian. "If it had not been for Gordon perhapebut what's the use? she broke off despairingly. "Ben is too good to be tied to a girl whose heart is dead. I should always be grieving for Gordon, and it would make Ben positively miserable to see me always crying."

"Is Gordon worth it?" asked Adra practically, "I thought that I was in love with an actor once, but I found out that he was just a flirt. He liked to get letters from girls and show them out that he was just a flirt. He liked to get letters from girls and show them to the rest of the company to prove what an irresistible chap he was. If his name was not different I should believe him to be the same fellow."

"Gordon is different," said Marian proudly, "Only a great love could express Itself as his did. Listen:

Marian took up the letter she had thrust into the pack when she had heard Adra come in and began to read. It was a high-flown, farewell copied from some play apparently.

read. It was a high-flown, farewell copied from some play apparently. The sentiment was lofty, but the expression was clumsy, though it seemed beautiful enough to an 18-year-old girl already infatuated with the stage and its people. When she had finished she looked up to Adra for her approval and her eyes snapped as she saw that the girl was rocking on the bed in an ecstacy of merriment.

"He must have manifolded those letters," cried Adra, when her laughter ecstacy of merriment.

"He must have manifolded those letters," cried Adra, when her laughter had subsided. "That was just the way he bade farewell to me. Did you get one where he told how, after his interview with his father, he went into the art gallery and how every one of the old family portraits seemed to bear your face?"

Marian nodded a startled assent and Adra went on.

"My dear get," she said earnestly. "We were both taken in by the same man and by the same letters. He must have a regular set of forms that he copies off, since he seems to lack inventiveness. You know that Billy Selover, Bob's old chum, is running an opera house somewhere or other and your 'Gordon' or my 'Alfred' was showing him one of my letters. Mr. Selover took my letters away from him and sent them to my brother. Bob was an angel about it and brought them to me instead of taking them to mother, but it cured me. Mr. Selover told all about our hero. His real name is Brannigan and he used to be property boy in a theatre. His father is a plasterer and his mother takes in washing. The rest of the company all hate him for his foolishness and they were only too glad to tell Mr. Selover all they knew about him when they found out that he knew one of Brannigan's correspondents."

Marian tumbled the letters into the open fireplace and touched a match to them.

"I wish I could get my letters back,"

AIRSHIP MANOEUVRES

IN ACCURATE FASHION

Reached.

Friedrichschafen, June 20. — Count Ferdinand Zeppelin made his first flight in his new airship on Saturday evening, A half hour's manoeuvering in the air fully established the stability and dirigibility of the balloon, which executed circles and short turns at full speed in a most satisfactory man-attained an estimated speed of $1 miles an hour.

Shortly after the start the direction was changed and sharp turns and circles with a circumference of several thousand yards were made, the airship answering the helm with absolute accuracy. Later the airship was sent over another straight stretch, and then was returned to the shed, having remained in the air in all about an hour and a haif, no difficulty being encountered in the return to quarters. Aboard the two platforms of the airship during the flight were twelve persons. On the front platform were Count Zeppelin and Capt. Hacken, the latter steering; Capt. Lau. of the general staff, and Chief Engineer Duerr. The rear platform accommodated Count Zeppelin's son, Major Von Hesse, Chief Engineer Kober and Chiand.

Count Zeppelin said he was satisfied with everything with the exception of the side steering arrangement, which had not fulfilled his expectations. This, he said, must be altered before a long journey was undertaken, which was unlikely before a fortinght at the least. Another trial ascent will be made to-morrow.
