Swarthmore College

---

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE is located on high ground about twelve miles southwest of Philadelphia. The college buildings command a fine outlook across the fields of Delaware County to the Delaware River and the New Jersey slopes. The campus consists of 200 acres of rolling and partly wooded land, bordering on Crum Creek. All who visit Swarthmore College acknowledge its estate to be one of exceptional beauty and value, with the special advantage of lying within one of the best regulated boroughs of Pennsylvania.

Swarthmore College was founded and is maintained by the Society of Friends. It offers its inmates the choice home atmosphere and close association of professor and student which are such effective influences in character-building. The chief aim at Swarthmore is to develop the individual student while maintaining the good of all. For the accomplishment of its aims, Swarthmore has been and continues to be the Ideal Small College.

The course of study is based on uniform requirements for admission. The work of the student is divided into three nearly equal parts: Prescribed, Elective, and Major. The prescribed work is limited to certain essential subjects of recognized value as a basis for general education; the elective work gives free play to individual tastes; the adoption of a major subject permits the student's own inclination to be given special training and development by persistent study in one direction. Upon the completion of this undergraduate course the degree of B. A. is conferred; for the young men who desire to fit themselves to become engineers, a prescribed course leads to the degree of B. S. in Engineering.

In the fall of 1904, Swarthmore College expects to have ready a New Dormitory for the men and a New Chemical Building.

With hearts attuned to gratitude,
Dear Friend, to thee we bring
This simple tribute of our love,
With all respect, all honoring.
"To make the rugged places smooth,"
To help the struggling on their way,
To scorn deceit, pretense, and fraud,
Thy joy has been from day to day.
With Swartmore's fame thy name is linked,
Thy happiest memories linger there.
To guide her youth, direct her course,
Has made thy life a prayer.

Its Origin and Some Notes Upon its Early History

By Edward Hicks Magill, LL. D.

CHAPTER XI.

THE TWENTY-SECOND YEAR, 1890-91.—These notes having now covered a period of twenty-one years, we have reached, at length, the near approach of the time so long aimed at, when the College would be entirely free from the added care and burden of a large Preparatory School. In this twenty-second year the whole number of students was 206, with 41 of these still unprepared for Freshman work, but they constituted no longer classes of a Preparatory School, but were called a Sub-Collegiate class, with the hope and expectation (long since realized at this writing), that the College would not, very much longer, be crippled in its work by the incubus of a large Preparatory School, which the educational conditions among us made a necessity in our earlier years.

The President of the College having now returned from his year of absence spent in foreign travel and in the study of the best educational methods abroad, entered upon his work as Professor of the French Language and Literature, and Professor William Hyde Appleton, who had taken his place as Acting President in his absence, was now offered the position of President, but preferred the duties of his professorship. He, however, accepted the position, with the understanding that he should retain it only until a permanent successor could be appointed.

During this twenty-second year of the College the Friends' Historical Library (founded by Anson Lapham, soon after the opening of the College) was materially increased by a gift of Dillwyn Parrish, Jr., of London; and through the efforts of Albert A. Merritt, of New York, and the liberality of interested friends there and elsewhere, money was raised to purchase the library of a deceased English Friend, a collection rich in many volumes that we did not before possess. This library has each year become a more important aid to the students of Friends' principles, and the history of the Society, and is now the largest collection of Friends' books in this country.

The following quotation from the annual report of the Board of Managers to the stockholders, in the Twelfth month, 1890, is of interest, as being not only applicable at that time, but never out of place in the history of an educational institution. They say: "As a rule, all institutions ceasing to have needs cease to grow; we therefore call attention to the pressing demand for increased library facilities, first of which is a fund for the purchase of more books for each department, and hardly to be classed as second, a Library Hall, the present accommodations being altogether inadequate."

Nearly fifteen years have passed since this earnest appeal was sent out, and the need referred to, and growing each year more imperative, is still unsupplied.

There were no changes in the membership of the Faculty during the twenty-second year, indicating a stability in the organization of the College very creditable and encouraging after its brief existence of but little more than two decades.

TWENTY-THIRD YEAR, 1891-92.—In the opening of our twenty-third year the College met with a great and seemingly irreparable loss in the death of three of our active managers, Martha G. McIlvain, Edward Hoopes, and Isaac Stephens, the first two dying within a few weeks of each other, and the last about three months later. Martha G. McIlvain had been, from the very beginning of the College, one of the most efficient members of the Board, and was an excellent helper, organizer, and counsellor in the College household. Edward Hoopes had withdrawn from the management a few months before, in consequence of ill health, but he had served the College most faithfully from the first, and been an active and deeply interested member of several of the most important committees. Isaac Stephens, too, was one whose active mind and sympathizing heart fitted him in an especial manner for the duties of a manager. Through failing health he had laid aside the burden a short time before his death.

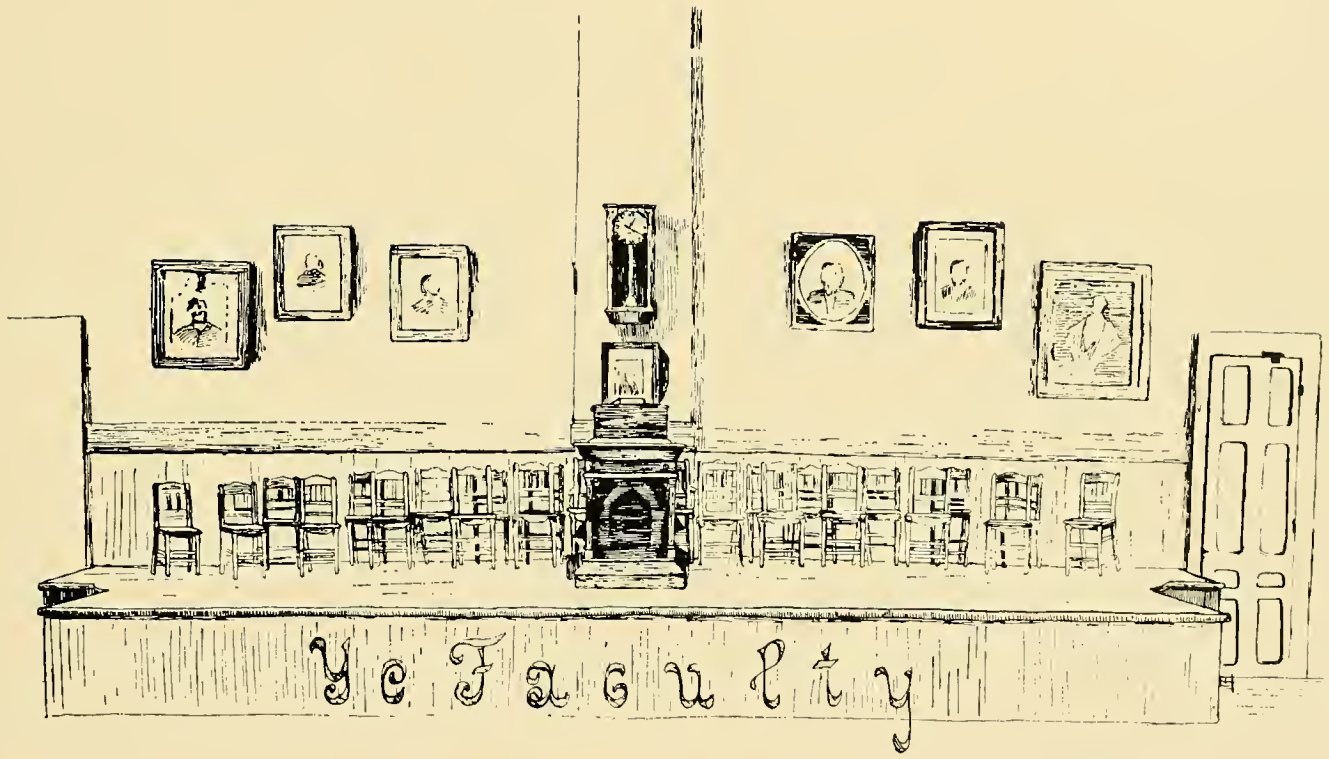

This twenty-third year opened under a new President, Charles De Garmo, Ph. D., who came to the work after serving as Professor of Pedagogics in the Illinois State University, and fresh from three years of later study abroad in the Universities of Jena and Halle in Germany, having taken his degree of Ph. D. in Halle a short time before his return; and he entered with zeal at once upon the work which Swarthmore presented. He was not a Friend, but of a Friends' family, and came to our work fully aware of the designs of the founders of the College, and resolved to carry out those designs to the letter; a resolve of which his successful labor with us was an abundant proof. His first report to the Board shows clearly his high ideal of what such an institution as Swarthmore can and should accomplish. His theory of the proper government of college students he set forth clearly in these words: "The college student is much nearer manhood than boyhood, although his frequent lack of appreciation of what is manly seems to point the other way. At all events, one of the best ways rapidly to develop his manly qualities is to treat him like a man, and not like a boy. Irritating restraints tend to arrest the development of a manly frame of mind. On the other hand, if the student is to have the unrestraint of a man so long as he is manly, he must be held strictly to account of his deeds as soon as he relapses into the boy again." His success in college discipline was fine, as might have been expected from the theories of education which he entertained. During this first year of President De Garmo's administration, although several changes were required in the corps of assistants, the only change in the Faculty was the resignation of Gerrit E. H. Weaver, A. M., Professor of German, who left, at the opening of the year, to pursue more advanced studies in the University of Pennsylvania, and his classes were taken by Marie A. Kemp, a graduate of Swarthmore of the Class of '79, who had recently returned from some years' study abroad.

In this twenty-third year, while the whole number of students was 204, there were but 26 below the grade of Freshmen in the Sub-Collegiate Class, against 41 in this Class when first organized a year before, and thus the College proper this year numbered 178 against 165 of the previous year, thus showing a steady gain in the right direction.

An important change was made at this time in the Departments of French and German. Instead of alternating as heretofore, each study was now to be pursued continuously for two years, and in the last semester of each year the Scientific and Engineering students were to substitute scientific for literary French or German, to enable the young men to read more readily foreign books bearing on their branches of study.

A very important change in the general management and control of the College made at this time should here be explained. Anxiety having been frequently expressed as to the future of Swarthmore, because of the ownership of stock upon which it was originally based, it was at this time proposed that a corporation be formed, consisting wholly of members of our religious society, and that this corporation hold all the stock of the College that could be collected, and exercise the control hitherto exercised by the stockholders. This was agreed to by a stock vote of a very large majority of the 20,000 shares of stock issued, no votes being cast in the negative; and seventy incorporators were named, with power to fill their vacancies caused by death, resignation, or loss of membership in our religious society, and the number of living members was never to be permitted to fall below thirty-two. This important change should forever preserve the institution under the care of the Religious Society of Friends. It was believed that this would relieve the minds of some who would gladly aid in increasing largely the endowments of the College, as its future, as a Friends' College, was thus permanently secured.

History of 1904

It is with some hesitation that we assume the responsibility of writing your Class history, 1904. We would fain record your deeds of honor, since this must be the last time that your names will ever appear in print. But we are much perplexed. An exhaustive search through the intellectual, athletic, and social records of the College for the past four years has failed to reveal the name of 1904, except among the "also rans."

We can understand now why you did not attempt to chronicle your doings in your own HALCYON, and we are sure that you will appreciate the difficulty that we are laboring under.

But sound the trumpets and bring the laurel wreath, for the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Four has to its credit one class championship. In the spring of our Freshman year, by some strange idiosyncrasy of fate, this collection of nature's mistakes actually fell heir to the inter-class base-ball pennant, the single sheaf of wheat in their harvest of tares and thistles. Ah, 1904, does this soften the remembrance of your defeat in foot-ball in 1903, and your inability to get up a team to play 1905? Is it balm to the thought of your annual humiliation in hockey, lacrosse, basket-ball, and track? Perhaps you do not desire to be known by heroic endeavors? Perhaps it has been your aim to suffer that others might become famous? This certainly might explain the passive part you played in our Freshman year. Why, only once did the naughty little passions break loose from your prudent control, and that was when we stole your toastmaster. But long disuse had weakened your powers and your rage resulted only in impotent threats and bitter tears.

1904, we bear you no ill-will and seek not to reproach you for your faults. For three years you have formed a part of our college life, sometimes a ridiculous part, it is true, but there are many pleasant memories arising from our connection.

Soon you are to go out from among us, and your going reminds us that we, too, have but a little while to linger here.

Good luck and good-bye.

---

STORY of our College life! A catalogue of our honors! Should we be truthful, you, gentle reader, would swear that we exaggerate; yet should we be silent, our enemies would say that, like 1904, we have nothing to tell. Listen, therefore, to our tale, read of our deeds, and judge us by them.

Our Freshman year! Ah! it seems but yesterday that the sun rose out of the clear blue sky and smiled at the numerals we had placed on the grand stand. And the whole year seems but a day, a glorious summer day, with never a cloud in the sky, while the evening stole down upon us unawares and found us gathered at banquet and song with Monk stowed away in Prex's barn.

Carefree as was our life in those early days, we were not idle. None cared to dispute our title to the football championship; hockey came easily from the Seniors, while in the college sports our points doubled those of the other classes.

Swarthmore was never more fair than when we returned for our Sophomore year, but never had she been endowed with a more unpromising lot of Freshmen than those who awaited the touch of our guiding hand. We taught them their place in the class wrestling match, laid down rules of conduct in posters of their own color, and applied the paddles with truly paternal solicitude. In short, we did our best for them, but the leopard cannot change his spots, nor the best of training make the donkey other than what he is.

Another September found us again returning, this time to watch with amusement the innocent antics of the Sophs. and Fresh. Diminished in numbers but strong in spirit, we again assumed our place as leaders of the College, and now as the year draws to a close we look back to see what we have accomplished.

Since entering College we have furnished five men to the Basket-ball Team, including a captain; nine men to the Track Team, including two captains; ten men to the Lacrosse Team, including a captain, and seven men and two captains to the 'Varsity. Class championships are inseparably connected with our name, while intellectually and morally we are equally well known.

Filled with an undying love for Swarthmore and for the honor of 1905, we turn our faces reluctantly toward the last step, our Senior year. What we may do then remains for other hands to tell.

PROVERB says: "Happy is that country whose history is a blank."

If so, thrice blessed Nineteen Six! for, although we of 1905, have a well stocked library of your literature close at hand, we are able to find scarcely an item worthy to go into print. The only touch of wisdom which you showed was in the choosing of your class motto. "Deesse quam conspic" was evidently pounded into your heads after a few experiences with 1905. We will not lay it up against you that your first constitution had no by-laws, yet having a clause under which to suspend them, for you had a very poor model to work on.

Your first class meeting might be called a success. But not through your own efforts was this due. Ah, no. Mrs. Bond kindly consented to stand guard and keep all intruders from disturbing the children. We retired, not defeated, but out of respect for our Dean. We went to prepare a place for you, and fourth hall will testify to the fact that we did. The shower bath which you received coming up the stairs must have washed enough green from you to have painted the grand stand.

Later on in your Freshman year, you ate vaseline sandwiches and sang songs, or tested the lifting power of the strong man, much to the edification of your superiors. Many of your Class hats, things of beauty and joys forever, strayed afar in search of your lost constitutions. In your Sophomore year you started off nobly by swallowing a proclamation tack. No one knows what this effort cost you; but as for its effect upon the Freshmen, your suffering was in vain. In your futile endeavors to suppress the pranks of 1907 you spent so much time that you had none left for any of your own.

In short, your only success has been in the cultivating of long ears. Keep them open, and you may possibly learn something before you graduate.

Freshman History

THE record of some four-score infantile experiments is before us. We cast our eyes casually over the list of their achievements and draw sarcastic conclusions as to how green Freshmen can be. This record is filled with all the usual "fresh" experiences. The first night, when, perforce, they are taken visiting in slight attire to the "cut," the "Crum," or the woods, and the second night when they gather more strength and resist manfully upon the campus.

With majestic prep. school strut these children of innocence ascended the asphaltum and we mark the bewildered consternation with which they picked themselves up after having questioned some arrogant Sophomore as to the whereabouts of the "Billiard Room." We can recall how on that eventful first night the faint-hearted barricaded their doors, and we applaud the plucky little Freshman who met 1906 with boldness.

Then there came a little garnet influence to the rescue of the green. The Juniors wise, cautioned and coached against that herd of pedanticism, the Sophomores, who were otherwise. And the halo of green melted away. The Sophomore posters and rules disappeared before they were seen, and it was necessary for a vast extra stock to be procured. [We might pass some sarcastic but true remarks upon the poetic excellence of expression in the posters.] Then the College awakened one morning to see the town painted green with "'07s" much to the chagrin of '06. Later in the year a great game of foot-ball was played in six inches of snow. The "Sophs" scored on a fumble. This was the only score. Then the Freshman picture was taken during collection, again much to the surprise of "'06."

So you have their record, a very promising class. When the time comes that they shall make exit from old Swarthmore it will be a finished class of experts, fully colored in garnet; now they are a class of gentlemen in green.

The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society

THE Scientific Society was organized in March, 1895, and later received the name of The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society, of Swarthmore College. Its object is to keep abreast with the discoveries in the scientific world. There are five sciences included in the work of the Association: Astronomy, Biology and Physiography, Chemistry, Engineering, and Physics. The programs of the meetings consist of a report from the instructors in each of the above departments concerning the recent discoveries in their respective sciences. Papers are then read by different members on topics of scientific interest, followed by an open discussion by the Society. The interesting character of these programs is shown by the full attendance at the meetings, from both the College and the Borough. The Executive Committee consists of a committee of three from each department—one instructor and two students.

The residents of the borough of Swarthmore are eligible to membership, as well as the students and officers of the College. The meetings are held in Science Hall, on the first Third-day evening of each month during the college year.

The Young Friends' Association

HIS Association is intended primarily for students, instructors, and other members of our College community; but a considerable number of the neighbors are members, and are identified with its work.

The objects of the organization are two-fold: First, the study of the history, literature, and principles of the Society of Friends, and secondly, the consideration of the vital questions of religion and spirituality which we meet in our everyday life.

The regular meetings are held in the College parlor, on the evening of the third First-day of every month during the College year.

Prologue

In this little book of quavers,
Semitones and whole tones, too,
Should you find no restful measures
Which shall stir the heart anew,
Bear in mind our modest mission
Is to chronicle forsooth
The Literary Miscellany
Written by our growing youth,
Which, like wine, with age doth sweeten;
So, in years to come you'll find,
Turning to these merry pages,
Surely something to your mind.

In Other Years

---

SUN and shower, frost and dew,
June and December weather,
Change to night, change to noon,
And wear away together.

Leaves grow green, leaves grow large,
Who'll watch the dogwood blossom,
And emerald hues steal up the lawn,
Bid spring at Swarthmore welcome?

Dawns unfold, sunsets pale,
Ah, where will be the laughter,
That with the winds is blown across
The distant Crum's clear water?

Leaves grow red, leaves grow sere,
Whose feet will tread the thickets
To seek for brown nuts that lie hid
Guarded by squirrel pickets?

All is changed, all is strange,
Those shouts o'er Whittier Field,
Are not the jocund cries we gave
To see some rival yield.

Stars are out, winds are cold,
Who'll next thy story tell?
I speed thee, HALCYON, on thy way.
Swarthmore, farewell, farewell!

Halcyon Diary

September 16. All comers write their family histories on packs of multi-colored cards.

Rise and fall of the Sophomore proclamations before daylight. Tommy Sherwood swallows proclamation tack.

- “ 17. Under-class wrestling match. Coxé wins heavy-weight for the Freshmen. Sophomores take the rest.
- “ 18. Freshmen have a smashing good time.

Alice Maris thinks she'll make the Basket-ball 'Varsity.

- “ 19. Rough-house in the Northeast.

To the Chaplain

---

THERE is a young man named Leinau
Has a case on a girl whom I know;
To her he kept sending
'Most all of his mending.
Do you think she objected? Oh, my, no!

IL y a un jeune homme,
Sometimes known as Floyd,
And par the sins of οἱ πολλοί
Er war sehr much annoyed.
He thought he'd like Y. M. C. A.
And started it im College
Et pauvre homme!
It flourished and quite surpassed his knowledge.

---

MOWERY (in Philosophy)—Well! aren't we descended from apes, Doctor?
Dr. Holmes—Wouldn't thee rather say ascended,
Harold?

Marims

---

My son, if a maiden deny thee,
Because of exec. at Swarthmore;
Yet meets thee at last in the alcove—
Get out! she has been there of yore.
They fuss at the pump and the parlor
Who never were fussers before.

Condemn not the hash at the table,
Nor search in the butter for flies;
Who knows but, perchance, on dissecting
The ghosts of old pets may arise?

Should thou go to the meeting on First-day,
Pray try to give verses quite new;
For many there'll be who'll have old ones,
And thou shouldst be one of the few.
Old saws may be had for the asking,
Or bought for a penny or two.

If the Dean ring the bell while you're eating
And cause you to choke on a crust,
With some little message to give you,—
Upset not your tumbler nor cuss,
For this is a usage at Swarthmore,
Handed down from old Moses the just.

Your new golf cap or your old slouch hat,
Your shoes or your red necktie:
Oh, many there'll be who'll borrow these
Before the year's gone by!

You may smoke your cigar in the city,
Or quaff your root beer till you howl;
But for goodness' sake try to remember
Your reputation's at stake on the owl.

And, son, my final instruction
Is, steer clear of political gangs;
Just remember the Senior elections
And what tale of disgrace thereby hangs.

My Landscape

---

My landscape is a lonely strand
Of coarse green grass and sea-washed sand,
Where black against the cloudless sky,
A single oak-tree flings on high
His gaunt arms, leafless, wan, forlorn,
As if, from his companions torn,
A vengeful wind had dropped him there
Bereft of all his beauty fair,
Alone, beneath the scorching heat
Of summer sun, the driving sleet
Of winter storm; alone when spring
Soft-twittering bird and breeze shall bring—
A solitary guard to keep
Over the sands, the birds, the deep,—
Alone he stands, and flings on high
His knarled black arms across the sky.

To the Cherry Tree

---

O CHERRY-TREE covered with blossoms,
White as the drifts of the snow,
We admire thee, praise thee, yes, love thee,
From thy tips to the green grass below.

We love every bird in thy branches,
And the wind as it sighs through thy boughs,
And the seat carved all o'er with initials
And the roots that stick up through the ground.

Yes, we love thy long-legged gray spiders
That crawl down our necks while we read,
And the little black anty mires shiny
That run up our sleeves with such speed.

But most of all of thy tenants
Which live in their homes in thy bark,
We love the soft little green worms
Which cause such a throb of the heart.

O Tree, thou art surely a monarch,
And staunchly for thee we will stand;
For to sit is quite out of the question
In such densely inhabited land.

An Explanation

ELSIE is a Junior,

Elsie likes to talk,

And when she once gets started

She really cannot stop.

Another speedy talker

We boast of in our class,

Who reels off words like meteors

Is Edith Doug-e-lass.

One day they had a contest,

A strange thing then was found;

Their voices shrill and shriller grew

Till no one heard a sound.

We knew they must be talking,

Their tongues like coursers flew.

Had every one turned stony deaf?

Oh, no, that was not true.

A simple law of physics

Will make it very clear,—

Sound waves that travel with such speed

Reach not the human ear.

The Brownies at Swarthmore

ONE night the famous Brownie band,
While wand'ring from their native land,
Arrived at Swarthmore, staunch and gray,
And to the College made their way.

Quoth one, "'Tis easy to be seen
This is the place where Freshmen green
And Seniors wise, do pore o'er books,
Or see the girls in sheltered nooks,—
For fussing, I have rightly guessed,
Is stopped now by the Dean's request,
Except through Social Hour quaint,
So called, I ween, because it ain't."

Another said, "Your guess is right,
For, as I first approached to-night
To see that all the ways were clear
So we might ramble without fear,
A man, I'm sure he is called Lipp,
I saw from out a window slip
That opens from the Latin Room,
Where all was quiet as a tomb,"

* * * * *

"'Tis well enough," another cried,
"Co-education's here denied,
For, as it is, enough is done;
And then again, what is the fun
Of doing things that don't break rules,
Or secretly the 'exec.' fools?"

While speaking thus the Brownies roam
From front hall pet to Trotter's dome.
Down the main hall some made their way
Until they came to old room J.
"Dis heare," quoth Hans, "Ben Badden spiels
Off Cherman life, und Cherman meals,
Und ven his glasses hungry pe,
He feeds dem on philosophic,
(A subject Benny vants to teach,

I'm sure dot he vould make a peach)."
Others on mathematics bent
Within the doors of room H went.
'Tis here you live by gumption's
grace,
Is plain 's the nose upon thee face.
If any one among you grins
His mark's not worth a row of pins.

Some classic Brownies next door found,
 And all the place they wandered round,
 Where students Ferris Price must mind,
 Who sometimes leaves his tie behind;
 And then to ridicule avoid
 He's forced to borrow one from Floyd.
 Still others of a classic bent
 To Apsie's Grecian sanctum went,
 Where conscientious students sit
 Throughout the hour of World Lit,

And shiver while Serena throws
 The window up to winter's snows,
 Through which the cold air madly puffs
 To counteract the hot-air bluffs.
 Some more who loved the gentler ways
 Betook themselves where Russell Hayes
 Doth hourly tell his rhymes and jokes
 As ancient, sure, as Milton's oaks.

Now next they climbed the winding stair
 And reached the well-used library, where
 Miss Nowell attempts to sort the males,
 But in her efforts sometimes fails.

On up another party roams
 Until they reach the room where Holmes
 Keeps Sunday-school for Freshmen small
 (The dryest work for one and all),
 And having mixed their minds about
 Leaves them alone to work things out.
 Room N upon the other side,
 We now have Doctor Hull preside,
 Who dryly vague details repeats
 While in his happy (?) class he treats
 The grinders even with a nap—
 To be with him is such a snap!

Now last the Brownies climbed up high
 To where the birds and fossils
 lie,
 And each small man did lost his hat

In efforts bold to catch a cat.
 But dawn's first streaks began to show
 The time to leave all Brownies know,
 And ere the sunlight struck the dome
 The band were safely 'in their home.

My Armchair

---

THESE lines to my best friend I write,
To one who estimates my burden right,
My armchair.

Dear friend, I would confess a love
For thee all other thing above,
How oft I cuddle in thy deep
Soft comfort there to sleep.

I nestle there to study hard,
And then the subject disregard.
I slumber there with perfect dreams
And wander by the flowered streams.

Or fancy takes me to the scenes
Of youth's eternal silver greens,
And there I live my life anew
In haze of golden memory true.

Awakened as from some sweet song
I meet the world serene and strong—
My armchair.

A June Day

A TRULY rare June day, with sunshine filled,
The last exam. completed, troubles o'er,
With pencils, books, and papers, careless spilled,
With Trig. sent whither it could plague no more,
I rush, exulting, through the open door,
And down the campus softly-sloping green,
Inhaling liberty as ne'er before.
Intoxicated by the beauty of the scene.

IF you think you hear a tempest,
Or the north wind's stormy call,
You may know that Edward Bassett
Is just passing down the hall.

If when skating in the winter
The icy Crum you scan,
Searching for a graceful maiden,
Look at Alice Sullivan.

Cinderella and the Wool Slipper

THERE had been a great concert that evening, the Saxophone. Cinderella had been there and had a most enjoyable time, for wasn't her attendant knight there? And hadn't she added to the success of the evening by lending to the concert committee her screen, to use as "wings" for the corpulent lady? But now when the splendor of it was all past, Cinderella sat alone in her room by a little pile of ashes (caused by the breaking down of her Welsbach burner). She was lonely and uncomfortable, for one woolen slipper had disappeared and her godmother would be very angry if she came in and found her with only one. So she sat pondering: Where was her slipper? Would she ever get it back? What would she do if her godmother should come? Then there was a sharp rap at the door. Cinderella started and guiltily drew her unslipped foot under her robe. In walked not an angry godmother, but Cinderella's own good fairy, bringing to her a mystic little package, and along with it a message.

"MY DEAR CINDERELLA:—Thy knight, Ralph, sends thee this woolen slipper which he found when helping in the hall. Although thee surely couldn't have worn it to the concert, I assured him that it was thine. Perhaps it was enfolded in thy screen."

A Pun

ONE Day a Brown Wolff, a regular old time Romer, came across the Watters from the North. A Comely Ryder was just coming over the Hill with Slack rein. She hastened to dismount and tied her steed to a Post standing at the intersection of the Rhoads, for she had resolved to Diebold or Thatcher roof with the animal's Hyde. She called to the Nobles as well as to the other Peoples near-by, then Strode toward the brute, which was at this minute Straddling the door sill. She tried to Pierce it with a piece of Wood, but in this way she could not Kille-t, for 'twas no Lamb. However, she managed to get into the Hall, where she found some Hoops, and before the Wolff was able to Turner-ound she slipped these over his forefeet and head. Then she seized a Scarlett Bricker two with which she finished him. We were not there at the time, but she quickly 'phoned us. We were so frightened we couldn't Walker run, so we took a Car Holme.

Gee but she was Lucky not to pay the Price of her life, for it was a Close call. She did certainly Merritt that all the Hawkes should scream, the Coxe Crow and the Bells ring as at Mt. Vernon in celebration of the Poole of blood which she left as a Paul for the Wolff. But now she is Riding away to the West to Hunt a Green Bower with never a Bramble, where she can Carter tired body.

To Bridget

---

WHEN the tinkle of the breakfast bell
Disturbs your peaceful dream,
You turn again, you shut your eyes,
Forget oatmeal and cream.
But then a step comes down the hall,
A rattle at your door,
A cheery voice with richest brogue,
A pail set on the floor.
"Ye lazy gurrul! What would ye do
Ef ye'd ter wurruk loik me?"
Bridget—if I had to work,
And never lazy be,
To work with mop, and pail, and broom
Throughout the dreary day—
I think I'd like to have your voice,
Your smile, your cheery way,
Your Irish wit, your faithfulness
In all you have to do—
Only this, I'd like to be
A woman just like you.

Betty

---

OH, wondrous indeed are the ways
They use to hold "cases" in check,
In these co-educational days
With Betty upon the "exec."

Betty, to frown upon fussing,
The plans of the Freshmen to wreck,
Betty, to rule in the alcove,
Our Betty upon the "exec.!!!"

---

A MAIDEN fair, one Summer's day
Was wandering o'er the green.
A wild ferocious looking boar
Came bursting on the scene.

I thought to hear the maiden shriek,
But she stood calmly still.
"I'm quite well used to bores," she said,
"I belong to Somerville."

WANTED—More freedom in publishing the HALCYON.—The Staff.

To Cupid

---

OH, naughty rascal, wicked elf,
Why dost thou rob me of myself,
Then steal away in summer night?
Why wreath her head with lilies white?
Why fill the air with rose perfume,
And leave me there to beg a bloom?

THERE was a young man, Richard Downing,
Whose conceit was something astounding;
And with Shakespeare we'd say
When such comes our way,
"May ye gods of Olympus confound him!"

---

O MANY a word has a hidden meaning,
That deep in its soul there lies;
And that is the way with the little saying:
"Oh, girl, with the Swarthmore eyes."

But who would suppose by this tender tribute
'Twas meant that the Swarthmore maid
Had only a touch of the pink eye trouble
With the garnet beginning to fade?

Evolution

---

Oh, when I was a fishworm,
And burrowed in the earth,
I crawled on the asphaltum
To hear the students curse

And when I was a monkey
Suspended from a tree,
I dropped cocoanuts on "nigger-
heads"
To hear them shout in glee.

And when I was a puppy dog
And frisked about the town,
I used to chew up kitty-cats
To see the ma-cats frown.

But now I am a student ;
I live at Swarthmore College,
And since I was a fishworm
I've got a heap of knowledge.

The "Alligator"

---

Oh, that rock of peace and rest,
Oh, that spot we love the best,
Oh, that bank of sun and shade,
Oh, that place that God has made,
Beside the Crum.

Here it is we love to go
When the sun is sinking low,
Here it is we love to stay,
Here to watch the dying day,
Beside the Crum.

On this rock the shadows play
Where we while our time away;
Above this rock the wild birds sing,
And joyful lessons to us bring,
Beside the Crum.

On this rock we dreaming lie,—
Perhaps we see a boat drift by,
But oftener still there is no sound
To break the silence so profound,
Beside the Crum.

In the spring and in the fall
We seem to hear this old rock call,
We wander oft and to it stray,
To study nature day by day,
Beside the Crum.

Yes, ere long we'll scattered be,
Far from Swarthmore, far from thee,
But we'll recall the beauty taught
By thee, O rock, whom oft we sought,
Beside the Crum.

A Hitherto Unpublished Case

THEY sit, coy couple,
Postprandial and fuss.
His name is George,
His better half's, C-plus.

They smile and chatter
With supreme delight,
While servants clatter
Dishes, left and right.

But still all heedless
Of the Dean they sit,
To look up—needless
Hearts are interknit.

A Tale Told Out of School

A CERTAIN stately Senior, who feared lest it would do her twenty-five-cent alarm clock harm to run down during the holidays, took it to the home of one of the Professors to be cared for during her absence. It is further reported the Professor's son, H——, made it his delightful task to wind the fair one's clock each night, in loving memory.

A Day

OH, glad sweet day in April—
Last of a month's full count—
You've brought us budding woodlands,
Water for every fount.

You'll fade away at evening—
Pledge of the coming May—
And leave us half regretful,
Grieved at thy death, oh, day!

Now Lippincott has foot-ball fame,
And Dean is good at sprinting;
But Swarthmore's very brightest sons
Are Will and Roger Linton.

IT is rumored that Mary Janney has deserted Coxey's army and joined the Dutch Company.

---

IN Economics, Mr. Leinau, you're a star
You talk like a seer on the things that are;
On consumption you're great, as all will say,
Who sit at the table with you day by day.

Perverted Proverbs

---

A good pony makes short lessons.
All College is not what it is cracked up to be (in the Catalog).
A word from the Exec. is resented.
Many are examined, but few pass.
What we can't eat goes into the hash.
All's fair in love, war, and basket-ball.
Do unto the Faculty as you would that they should grade you.
Happy is the man that getteth an athletic scholarship, for the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.
Don't count the chickens in the omelet; it isn't polite.
Worry will kill a cat, but it won't remove the fragrance from the people who take Biology.
Silence is golden, but extemp. speeches are cash.
Co-education is the thief of time.

To the Chief of the Cuisine

AIR—

WHEN torn with hunger, racked with pain,
A starving, homesick lot,
Who is it drives away distress,
And serves us sandwiches with cress?
'Tis Mrs. Clark.

REFRAIN—

Oh, the pies, the puffs, and the oyster stew,
The éclairs sweet and the cream toast, too.
We know they're fine, we've tried them all,
Come! Come! give Mrs. Clark a call.

When breakfast bell or dinner gong
From us brings no response,
Where are we then, we famished ones,
Old Swarthmore's daughters and her sons?
Just down at Mrs. Clarks.—REFRAIN.

To start the week exactly right,
A Sunday morning stroll
Will find us doing what you would,
If you were wise instead of good,—
In Mrs. Clark's café.—REFRAIN.

So warning take, ye Freshies green,
Who're nibbling misty hash,

And wander oft adown the path
That leads you to the aftermath
Prepared by Mrs. Clark.—REFRAIN.

The Freshman Friend

His hair was brownish golden,
His cheeks were golden brown,
His garments they were olden,
He never lived in town.

His lessons were not dull,
His eyes were wondrous bright,
And wondrous, wondrous full
Of a heart both gay and light.

He had entered as a Freshman,
From the far-off country farm,
A glorious green Freshman
With a smile all full of charm.

You met him at the club-house,
This Freshman from the farm,
And you've had a good old rough-house
Without a bit of harm.

Oh, your hearts will interknit
With a friendship warm and good,
And you two will often, often sit
Bathed in sunset's crimson flood.

'Twill make your spirit thrill
To be with this Freshman lad,
And your eyes will kind of fill
When he talks about his dad.

Then the years will quickly glide
In a race of sweet delight,
You will study side by side,
Study in the black of night.

Yes, the years will quick pass by,
On the last Commencement day
You will graduate, and sigh
With the Junior lad to stay.

My Rival

---

I MET him there—haughty, bold,
My rival—handsome, rich in gold,
To court sweet Adelaide, he came,
An eyeglass, stutter, and a cane.

I met him there, as Knights of old,
I knocked him down and o'er he rolled,
I kicked and punched—all strength spent,
I bruise his nose, and then relent.

Then from a distance view the spot
Where my faint rival sprawls, a blot,
I wait to see the fairest face
Look down upon his vile disgrace.

Alas, down on her dainty knees
She falls—believe it if you please!
And binds his cuts, I gently curse,
And wished for Chauncey dear a hearse.

A CERTAIN young man of the class of '03,
Came out one Sunday his lady to see;
Quickly he hastened the fair one to greet,
Measured the campus with hurrying feet,
But the damsel turned out to be Marguerite,
And the poor boy wanted Millo.

What the Eyes Saw

A DREARY rain was falling that made the asphaltum look like a long strip of wet slate. Thousands of long, shiny, pink worms had come out for the shower, and they lay in careless attitudes all over the walk. Moreover, it was Sunday.

Two girls watched with indifferent eyes a forlorn professor's wife, who, struggling with her umbrella and skirt, was executing a peculiar dance up the asphaltum in a vain endeavor to avoid annihilating the young friends in careless attitudes.

"Where's Anna?" inquired Isabel.

"Home," replied Katharine, removing her nose from the window pane.

"Did Eleanor go home?"

"Co-educating," was the laconic response.

"My, but I hate Sunday!" exclaimed Isabel.

"Put on a sweater and come out for a walk," suggested her room-mate.

"You're a woman of one idea, Kat; that and hot milk are your two remedies for all ills. I don't want to go out. I have a grouch, and I won't go out."

* * * * *

The unfortunate woman had long since skipped over the last worm. Two twinkling lights suddenly pierced the gloom that shrouded the asphaltum, making long glistening streaks along the walk.

A Freshman came in looking worried. The two Seniors straightened up, Isabel smoothing her lengthened face by main force, and bade her pile up on the couch and amuse them.

"I can't amuse anybody. I want some advice."

"What's the trouble, old woman?" Isabel had forgotten her grouch and was smoothing the Freshman's tumbled hair as they lay curled up together in the waning light. The rain dripped dismally from the ivy round the window, and a desolate little bird chirped weakly.

"Well, Robert asked me to go to church with him to-night." Isabel glanced quickly at Katharine, who was looking out of the window. "It's raining, and probably no one else will go—and I'd really like to—and we always go at home—it might make me feel less—" then it came with a rush. "Well, I am homesick, and Bob has been awfully good to me."

Katharine was looking out at the yellow eyes on the asphaltum. For three years those eyes had been her friends through sun and shower, sometimes winking cheerily, sometimes pale when she missed their twinkle, and sometimes blurred and dim as if they, too, had their troubles; but never had their flicker been so feeble or their gleam so uncertain as it was to-night. Slowly she turned around.

"Don't do it, Dick," she said, and her voice was very gentle. "It's against Student Gov., and besides, that sort of thing won't do you any good. Do your work and have a good time, but don't do anything you don't want known, for it gets around soon enough, and the boys criticise, too." And Katharine went into the back room, already half hating herself for her vehemence.

When Isabel came in she was dressing for supper.

"I guess it takes more than the length of a college course to get to know you, Kitty," she remarked. "I thought you had more pride. That Freshman will go straight to Bob and say you told her not to go. Of course you know what he'll think."

"Well, I thought you had some sense of justice!" Katharine blazed out at her. "I've never bothered much about Student Gov. myself, because it never was much of a temptation to me to go trotting around doing things through back doors; but it's better than Faculty rule, and that's what we'll come to if the Freshmen begin this way. And I don't want that kid to do things she'll regret. I'm awfully fond of her. I don't care what Bob thinks." And Katharine emphasized her remarks by gesticulations with a blacking bottle, which effectually silenced her opponent.

That night she sat a long time watching the eyes now shining steady and bright. She thought of the three and a half years back of her, and how Bob had helped her with his good sense and jolly good comradeship. He had been very prominent in athletics, and she recalled him as she had first seen him in scrub practice making the grand-stand play that put him on the 'Varsity when the half-back's knee gave out. Then at the Sophomore reception some one had introduced him, and they had talked a bare twenty seconds when another committee lady carried him off. But he soon found the device of asking each one on the committee separately to introduce him to the girl in green over there in the corner.

Bob would know she wasn't jealous. And yet, somehow, she almost wished she had let the Freshman go!

* * * * *

The rain had stopped, and the stars came out, and a light wind wafted the odor of wet earth up the campus. A dozen men were sauntering slowly toward the college, softly singing "Kindling Wood" in close harmony, Bob's sweet tenor high above the rest. It was good to be there—good to know that one had a few more short months of sports on Whittier Field and shop practice in disreputable clothes, and rough-houses, and good times with "the fellows." And yet it was good to know that one was almost ready—all but a roll of sheepskin—for the life work and sweet independence that lay just beyond Commencement day.

Slowly they ambled up, walked round the East Wing to the slow measure of their song, and brought up at the pump for a drink and one more breath of fresh air.

* * * * *

Bob was quite comfortable. He had stretched himself out full length in the Morris chair, his feet bestowed upon the bureau, and inclined to curse the training that kept him from smoking as he pored over his mechanics.

A gust of wind blew a photograph to the floor. He glanced at it, but was too lazy to get up.

"Kitty doesn't look narrow-minded," he mused, his eyes on the straight brows, firm mouth, and square jaw of the picture. "Wonder what it is that makes the girls that way after they come here? I've asked her lots of times to do things, and she always got mad—and I suppose she'd have been furious if I hadn't! Now what's the harm in going to church? She'd never go herself, but I didn't think she'd keep another girl from going just because—"

Now Bob wasn't a cad, but he was popular; so Kitty's photograph lay neglected on the floor while he mused on a round little face with big, innocent eyes.

And the Freshman went next time.

A Nightmare

ON my couch I lay a-dreaming
As the night was closing round,
And the halls were almost vacant
Seldom echoing a sound.

Of a sudden, up I started—
There was such a dreadful din,
I thought a host of burglars
Was surely breaking in.

But my fears at once departed
As the well known voice arose—
It was John Bosee returning
And a-singing through his nose!

I have heard of basses, tenors,
Of voices full and strong,
But I think there's no class, so far,
In which he would belong!

With the birds one could not place him,
As he sings both night and morn—
But the sound it most resembles
Is a great big brass fog horn!

Coasting

---

A joyous start—
A sudden spill—
A skinned elbow
And a walk uphill.

---

I.

A modern gallant named Launcelot
And a maiden called Elaine,
In the usual nook by a rushing brook
Were enacting scenes from a Gibson book,
The course of true love was plain.

II.

'Neath the friendly screen of that sylvan scene
They vowed eternal love;
And the story old they told and told,
The maiden fair and the lover bold,
And the little birds smiled above.

III.

But the youth light heartedly rode away
Some treasures on earth to gain,
And as lovers will, he forgot—forgot,
And broken with grieving for Launcelot
Is the heart of fair Elaine.

The Mission of the Bell

---

FAR out on the air from its lofty height,
From September till leafy June,
Rings clear the bell we love so well,
Each time a different story to tell
With ever-varying tune.

In the stillness of morn, when fast asleep,
Unwelcome comes the sound
That calls us back from the land of nod,
To the fertile pastures yet untrod
In the realms of knowledge found.

But a cheerier tone hath the luncheon bell,
At fifteen minutes of one,
Though it moans, Hash! Hash!
From exams. like a flash
We speed to the dining-room.

To reverence tuned, the bell oft rings,
Subdued and peaceful strain,
A harbinger of perfect peace,
An hour of quiet and release,
A rest for the tired brain.

Responsive to the wild hurrahs
That greet our athletes grand,

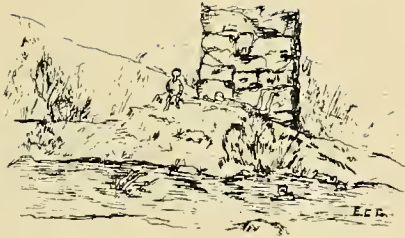

The bell proclaims the victory ours,
And quick the light from bonfire towers
Afar o'er all the land.

And then on Whittier Field appears
A weird unearthly sight,
In wagon drawn by sturdy lads
Are Profs. and team of foot-ball grads.,
Bathed in the bonfire's light.

A stormy clang from the belfry tower
In the stillness deep of night,
A story tells of the ruin wrought
By the fiery fiend as it shoots aloft,
A monarch in its might.

As twilight gathers on the Crum,
Old Bell, why not keep quiet?
We want to skate, you know we do,
Please then retire from public view,
And let our hearts run riot.

While sinks the sun 'neath Swarthmore hills
While flows the Crum's pure water,
We'll ne'er forget the lessons taught,
We'll oft recall the message brought
By the Bell of Alma Mater.

How do we go a-swimming?
That's not very hard to say;
We jump into our running suits
In the early part of May.

We run down to the water,
A beautiful color of green,—
The most inviting bathing place
That ever you have seen.

We dive, we splash, we absorb it,
This liquid of emerald hue,
We get out and look just like Freshmen,
So green are we through and through.

My Woes

---

A FOGGY November morning,
A room as cold as a tomb,
Room-mate cross as the mischief—
Hash enhances the gloom.

A long Greek lesson unstudied,
A million letters to write,
Somebody whistling Haverford songs
Learned from her beau last night.

No mail—and the shadows deepen
When a maid, irritatingly bright,
Reminds me of HALCYON meeting,
"Have you got yours done for to-night?"

Then with pencil and sorrow and paper,
And a heart full of utter despair,
I set out for the Alligator,
Where I rage and tear my hair.

Then, in anguish and dull lead pencil,
My grievances sore I write,
"Quorum causa, Mister Editor,
Mayn't I be excused to-night?"

or

Mid-Year Examination in English History

BY DR. WILLIAM I. HULL

To all students of history this magazine is replete with minute information. One can readily see that to be a good historian it is essential to know whether William the Conqueror's hair was red or green—to be positive as to whether a wall of defense was made out of stone or mud—to ascertain the exact day on which each king died, and whether his death was due to consumption or appendicitis. Invaluable to students desiring a broad scope of knowledge.

THERE is a Freshman, De Cou,
With eyes of a light china blue;
They say he can talk,
And has now learned to walk,
He's très young such great things to do.

Another fair Freshman is White,
In saying he's tall you are right;
He can brush a cobweb
With the top of his head
From a ceiling ten cubits in height.

HALCYON labors over,
 We close with this little rhyme—
 For when the calendar's finished,
 You've reached the end of time.

PROFESSOR PRICE has kindly consented to allow us to publish a few of his admirable stories. These are selected extracts from his "Class Room Series."

Number 32—

"I was coming out on the train with Dr. de Garmo one day and the conversation turned to Greek philosophy. I said that their reasoning seemed to me puerile, and Dr. de Garmo asked: 'Are you sure you understand it?'"

Number 57—

"And did I ever tell you about the Frenchman? They say there was once a Frenchman who committed suicide because he got tired of dressing and undressing."

Number 63—

You know inanimate bodies cannot move unless they are set in motion by some living being, or at least by something that had been started by an animate body. Of course I could go down here to the station and set a locomotive going, and if there were a cow on the track she would probably move when the engine struck her. Yes, yes, inanimate things must always be put in motion by a living force.

Friendship

OH, how two good hearts melt in one
And mingle beauty, as two flowers
That blossom by some sparkling run,
And there combine in scented bowers,
And lift their white and golden heads
To breathe perfume o'er all the land,
Or beautify some rocky bed,
Like precious pearls strewn on the sand.

---

If you see a radiant couple
In the second alcove meet,
Supposedly on Phoenix business,
It is Bob and Marguerite.

Or if walking in the city
You meet college people there,
Not the rarest of such fussers
Are Mabel S. and D'Olier.

Boy—Why is Bib. Lit.?"
Girl—I'm sure I don't know.
Boy—Because it's so dry it burns well.

A Song

I WANDER lonely through the wood,
And down the rocky hills;
I stoop to stroke a glossy leaf,
I race and run with rills.

I gather lonely violets,
And sorrow at their death,
And feel myself their murderer,
To catch their dying breath.

I laugh with sparkling streamlets,
I rest on beds of moss;
And dream where sunny evergreens
Their crests of feathers toss.

I wade through golden meadow land
Of buttercups and sun,
And singing, wander, lonely,
Where brooks beside me run.

I sing for joy of life, and sun,
My songs as thanks I bring,
And still I wander on alone,
And wandering I sing.

The Iliad

---

LATE at night I was studying Greek
And then I went to bed.
The bookcase hanging o'er me
Fell down upon my head.
"What part of the Iliad," I was asked,
"Do you truly like the best?"
"Why, really," I said, "by the Fall of Troy
I was very much impressed."

WHEN Goodall came to College,
Pray tell me, which is true,
Was he seeking after knowledge,
Or something else to do?

TO ANNA CURTIS :

There was a young lady of wisdom socratic
Sat down every night to do French in her attic.
But Miss Bronk shook her head
And solemnly said,
"Non, non je crois que vous êtes trop emphatique."

Of Percy Bigland

FROM Albion's shores a stranger came,
And lingered in our midst awhile;
A stranger, tho', he will not be
When he returns to England's Isle.
A heritage he leaves behind,
"The marvels which his pencil wrought,"
The portrait of our worthy Dean
Instinct with life, with beauty fraught.
His kindly smile, his cheering word,
His sympathy so freely given,
His reverential tone and voice,—
All seem to point the way to heaven.
In Swarthmore's memory he'll remain,
In Swarthmore hearts he'll linger ever,
The artist friend who taught us all
The truest goal is high endeavor.

---

THE Gentleman from England—"Twenty years ago, when I first began to speak in meeting, I determined that if it should ever be my fortune to come to America I would speak not to one branch alone of the Friends, but to both."

Edward Palmer, thirty-five minutes later—"Darned if I don't wish that he'd speak to the other branch for a while."

Memories

THE hush of a summer's evening,
The drip from the shaven oar,
Dark shadows of pine and hemlock,
The lap of the wave on shore;
The mist and the stars above us,
The tinkle of far-off bells,
Sweet odors of wind-blown flowers
That grow in the mountain dells,—
Are memories of golden youth-time,
Fair night in the month of June!
When silently with the current
We rowed 'neath the low-hung moon.
No voice broke the mighty stillness,
E'en nature was breathing low;
While deep in our souls the music
Of earth fell with cadence slow.

---

HE went to the class, Economics—
He hadn't studied that day—
And slept all through recitation,
For that is the usual way.

The End

---

THE goal is reached, at anchor now
Our good ship lies in state :
The sails are down, the masts and prow
A future crew await.
Over the bay, the hills beyond,
The sun is sinking low,

And sends across the peaceful waves
Its red and golden glow.
And as we linger on the shore
A parting word to tell,
The light grows dim—and now 'tis gone—
Farewell, old friends, farewell!
