WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 30th, 1835. If my letters have reached you at long intervals only; it is not that I have been a heedless observer of events-or that I am remiss instransmitting any information worthy of record. But the delineations of either branch of congress, with one exception in the senate, have, for the last three weeks, been so stripped of every species of interest; that it would require all the exertions of a vigorous fancy to relieve their insipidity. With few, very few questions of a national the restance of the enteriors our representatives look rather like spectators, than actors in the legislative area. Ifter listening few hours to a daily and interminable revies of resolutions, almost entirely connected with the interests of individuals;—after enduring the infliction of remarks drawn out to wearisome lengths; should you sit down to reproduce what has been done—you feel constrained to thrink from the task, so vague and uninteresting are the proceedings of the present congress. The laying out of a channel—the improvement of some state—the despening of a channel—the improvement of some state—the despening of a channel—the improvement of some river or other—the location of a huoy—the erection of a light-house: such questions advantage they must ultimately redound. But what immediate bearing can they have on the interests of the mass, buleas it be, indeed, in the appropriations of the appropriations of the public modules it be, indeed, in the appropriations of the public modules in the henefits of the institution be more generally diffused.

The senant, however, have not been thus apathetic: the disclosures of the frauds and defactations in the post-office department, concentrated in the voluminous report of a majority of the committee, have roused the body; the discussion, on the mere printing of the report, was characterized, as might have been expected, by a most bitter and acrimonous spirit, which poured ired is unmeasured wrath on the president's head. An attempt to give you an idea of the report were more than useless. It is so immenses a document, that the city papers have not been able to transfer it to their columns. You shall be furnished with a copy as soon sait will have issued from the press. That there has been nanterarions in the department there can be no doubt; and that they have been monstrously magnified is still less equivalent. It is not been for an almost special interpositiony of Providence, and yet may be worked in a soft state as sailly not which had it as atome, and yet may be worked in a soft state as sailly not when the research who had a stated, perhaps, the vindactive feelings of some individuals.

During the imminence of the denger he is stantly taken before a magistrate for examination. He sullenly refuses to answer any questions put to him by the district attorney. As you may readily suppose meany and many are the surmises on this subject. This Learence, who is an Englishman, and said to be income, was condemned sometime ago to the penitentiary for theft. On the representation of his mental alienation, the president interested himself in his behalf and had him liberated. This is one fayers of the source of t version of the story.
