A Letter of Appreciation

The American Security and Trust Co. of Washington, D. In connection therewith, the following extract from an unsolicited letter received from the Executor may prove of interest :

“It seems proper that I should express to you our entire satisfaction with your management and conduct of the sale. The cataloguing, on which so much depended, was admirably done, and the amount realized was fully up to the highest estimate of the value of the collection.

I have heretofore congratulated you personally on the success of the sale, and now beg you to accept this expression of our appreciation of the excellent service rendered in this connection by your Company to ours.

Yours very truly,

THE LATE SIR JOHN BOURINOT added to his political duties the earnest study of the history of his native land. To this end he commenced gathering the material at an early age, and continued consistently through life, collecting early and rare books and pamphlets, contemporary accounts, where possible, and transcribing from the Archives of Canada and Paris those documents required that he was unable to obtain by any other means. More especially was his interest centred in the Wars with the French which resulted in the English conquest of Canada, and in the War of the American Revolution, and its sequence, the War of 1812, the second great crisis in Canadian history. Other subjects were not, however, neglected, books relating to the progress of Geographical Discovery, the voyages of the Cabots, of Cartier, Columbus, the earlier history of the Hudson's Bay Company, the early history of the Selkirk settlement on the Red River and its conflicts with the North-West Company, the manners and customs of the Indians, the works of Hennepin, Charlevoix, Denys, LeClercq, Creuxius, Sir William Vaughan's Golden Fleece, Whitbourne's Discovery of Newfoundland, Thevet's Franco Antarctique, and others equally noteworthy dealing with special periods will be found in their various divisions in the catalogue. Under the heading of maps and atlases will be found what is believed to be the finest copy known of the Atlantic Neptune—a book rarely met with in any other state than badly imperfect—together with some particularly choice selections of maps, and facsimiles of the earliest-known charts both in manuscript and print. With but few exceptions the library will be found in exceptionally good condition, many bearing the autograph of its late owner.

145. [BOUCHER (PIERRE).] Histoire Véritable et Naturelle des Mœurs et Productions du Pays de la Nouvelle France vulgairement dite le Canada. 16mo, original leather. Paris: F. Lambert, 1664

Extremely rare, and a good copy. The back is very slightly damaged, as may be expected from the 250 years it has existed; but it is exceptional to meet with it in anything like so good a condition. The author was one of the earliest settlers in Canada, possibly going out with Champlain, and was Governor of Trois-Rivières. The object of this book was to interest the Court of France in the new colony, and show their needs; to this end he contrasts the state of the country with the neighboring English colonies, which he states are very successful and prosperous, while the French are neglected and not prospering, although they have the same advantages. He describes the country in much detail, and gives lengthy accounts of the Indian tribes.

THE CABOTS (JOHN AND SEBASTIAN).

Thick 12mo, original stamped pigskin, with Grolieresque pattern, and dated 1595. Herborn (Nassau), 1594

Scarce. Sebastian Cabot in 1544 executed a map of the then known world, which was copied by Clement Adams in 1549. The original map had letterpress, describing in detail the map and the progress of discovery. Only one copy of the original is known. Chytræus reprints it in extenso, with only one or two slight variations—for instance, the date of the discovery of Baccalos (probably Newfoundland) he states was 24 June, 1594, at the fifth hour, the year being an evident transcriber's slip for 1494 (his preliminary preface is dated Oct., 1593). Hakluyt reprinted this version of Adams, but altered some of the chapters considerably, and the date of the discovery is changed to 1497. The value of this reprint by Chytræus of these early descriptions by Cabot is, of course, apparent. Chytræus' real name was Nathan Kochhoef.

A fine copy of the rare original edition, with the written initials of Louis Crespel guaranteeing the copy on page 11. Only a very small number of this first edition was printed, mainly for the friends of the family, and in order that the genuine copies should be distinguished from any attempts to issue fraudulent copies, the brother signed these with his initials. Père E. Crespel was wrecked on the Island of Anticosti in 1737, and remained there for several months, when he was rescued by Indians, most of his companions dying. A graphic description is given of Indian customs, he being present at the torture of two prisoners.

Fine copy of this scarce book. Father Ducreux founded it entirely on the various narratives sent to France by the Jesuit missionaries, so that it might almost be considered as a history of the Jesuits in Canada, accompanied by a description of the manners and customs of the Indians. The illustrations are mainly figures of the Indians; but included—a plate that is lacking in many copies—is the engraving of the martyrdom of Fathers Jogues, Lalande, Brebeuf and Lallemand, which, although taking place some three years apart, are represented on the one plate. A stamp on the title shows that originally this copy was in the possession of the College of Lyons.

Rare. Pierre Du Calvet was a Canadian Huguenot, who, after the English occupation of the country, was appointed a magistrate in Montreal. The disbaring from office of those of his compatriots on account of their religion roused from him vigorous protests. This led to violent quarrels with the Governor and his party, and especially against Sir Frederick Haldimand personally. To further his ideas he made several voyages to England, and prosecuted Sir Frederick Haldimand for breaches of the constitutional law, and this latter had Du Calvet thrown into prison on an accusation of treason, an imprisonment which lasted over two years. On his last voyage to England the ship was lost at sea.

The great earthquake of 1663 he declares was a pious fraud of the Jesuit priests to excite sympathy and contributions to their cause.

The title of the manuscript is "Memoires du S—— de C—— contenant l'Histoire du Canada durant la Guerre et sous le Gouvernement Anglois," apparently written by a French resident or officer in Canada. It must have been used by Smith in his History of Canada, as quotations occur in that book that are word for word to be found in this manuscript.

By An Impartial Frenchman. 8vo, vellum (top portion of title torn off). Lond. 1760

A French account of the war. The author was secretary to the Count de Raymond, French Governor of Cape Breton, for a short time. For some treatment from the French Government, which he thought unjust, he went to England, where he resided for the rest of his life. Some interesting personal reminiscences are included.

464. RELAÇAM DO COMBATE, Que entre si tiverão tres Naus de guerra Inglezas, com outras tres de França Nos Mares da America junto de Cabo Berton. Curious woodcut on the title. Small 4to, four leaves, sewed. Lisbon, 1755

Very rare. A contemporary Portuguese account of the engagement between the British fleet and the French expedition despatched to recover Acadia, the first action of the war. A Fleet secretly despatched by the French Government before any declaration of war, was suspected by the English, who sent Boscawen to intercept it. The French Acadians had been quietly advised of the proceeding, and were consequently troublesome to the English, who a little later disarmed them and banished them from Nova Scotia—the proceeding that Longfellow has commemorated in Evangeline.

Mr. Gourlay conducted an agitation against abuses of the Government, and published a pamphlet. The Government party consequently prosecuted him for sedition three times—twice he was acquitted: the third time, being too ill to defend himself, he was convicted and banished the country. This was afterwards declared to be unconstitutional, and the Canadian Government granted him a pension for his sufferings. Scarce.

Strahan and T. Cadell, 1795

First edition on Large Paper and rarely found in fine condition, with all the plates. Its publication was due to the celebrated navigator La Perouse, who found the MS. when he captured Ft. Albany. Hearne made several journeys for the Hudson's Bay Company, and after four years reached the Copper-Mine River. He was also the first European to reach the Arctic Ocean overland from America.

Utrecht, 1697-98

Fine copies of the first editions of the two books. The view of Niagara is, as is well known, the first engraving made of these falls. In this work Hennepin first claims the credit of having descended the Mississippi before La Salle; in the Nouveau Voyage he again claims the honor, and describes La Salle's journey. It has now been fairly well proved that he made up the narrative from Membré's and Le Clerc's "Etablissement de la Foi." However, he was undoubtedly on the Mississippi in 1680, when he was captured by the Sioux and kept prisoner eight months. The accounts of the Indians are of the greatest value, his captivity giving him unequalled opportunities for observing their customs.

Lewis, and include three views of Quebec, two of Niagara, views of Montreal, the Falls of Montmorenci, the Chaudière, La Puce, etc., and two interesting representations of native Canadian dances, as also two of Indian costumes and encampments.

716. EXPULSION OF THE JESUITS IN FRANCE. A Volume containing 25 of the original "Arrests du Parlement," of Paris, Metz, and Rouen, "Declarations du Roi," "Extraits du Registre," etc., published in the respective cities relating to the agitation against the Jesuit Order, and which lead to their Suppression in France. Among them are "Declaration du Roi," Aug. 2, 1761; "Arrest de la Cour de Parlement (Paris), Aug. 6, 1761; "Arrest de la Cour de Parlement" (Paris), Aug. 6, 1762; etc. Bound in one vol., half morocco.

This volume contains some of the original important documents dealing with the suppression of the Order, and are very difficult to obtain. The agitation began with the discovery that the Jesuits were engaged in commercial speculations and their refusal to become responsible for some cargoes captured by the British at sea after their consignment to a French house. Action was taken by the latter to obtain their rights, which led to the Parliaments of the chief French towns taking up the matter. On the 6th the Parliament of Paris condemned the Jesuit publications to be publicly burnt, and prohibited their teaching, publicly or privately; in Nov., 1761, the French Prelates temporised, recommending a reform of the Order; in March, 1762, the French Government annulled the proceedings of the Parliament; on April 1, 1762, the Parliaments of Paris, Rouen, and most of the principal French cities declared the suppression of the Order within their jurisdiction, which practically meant the whole of France, and this order was followed by another in August of the same year reiterating the decree of expulsion against the wishes of the Court; finally the King gave in and signed the order for their expulsion from the whole of France in Nov., 1764. This volume contains several of the earlier original documents, and is of great interest in the history of the Order of the Jesuits.

Paris, 1724

The author theorises that America was probably peopled by the descendants of the inhabitants of Europe and Asia, and supposed that America and Asia were joined at Behring's Straits. To prove his theories he gives very minute accounts of all the ceremonies and superstitions of the Indians, paralleling them with similar ceremonies and beliefs of Ancient Greece, the East, etc. His residence of several years among the Iroquois made him thoroughly acquainted with the habits of the Indians, and Charlevoix considered this book was one of the most reliable on the subject.

765. LAHONTAN (BARON DE). Nouveaux Voyages de Mr. Le Baron de Lahontan dans l'Amérique Septentrionale. La Haye: Frères Lhonoré, 1715

Illustrated with 31 plates and maps. Most of the earlier books describing Canada or New France are written by Jesuit missionaries, or reflect the opinions of the missionaries. In Lahontan's narrative we get a view from an entirely different standpoint, that of a Freethinker and a soldier. The result is curious reading, and part of his relation has not been confirmed by latter travellers—that is to say, his description of the great river flowing from the Rocky Mountains into the Mississippi, and the Indian tribes bordering it. No one has met with tribes bearing the names he gives them, and it is difficult to find a river exactly where he places the "Rivière Longue." But the greater part is of much importance, the descriptions of the tribes inhabiting the known parts of Canada are very exact, and contain many very curious details not mentioned by other travellers. The illustrations are exceedingly quaint and crude in execution, but still valuable, representing marriage, war, and peace customs, devices of various tribes, habits of the beaver, etc. The very early view of Quebec represents Sir William Phips' attack on it in 1691.

Very rare. This volume is practically complete in itself, being the history of the Jesuit Missions in Canada from their commencement, with his comments on their—according to him—non-success. The Jesuits were so exasperated at this book that they endeavored to have it suppressed by the French Government, but not succeeding in this, did what they could themselves to destroy the copies. For this reason the book has become one of the rarest relating to New France.

Short notices are also given of the Indians of Acadia and other neighboring places. The Micmacs he calls "Porte-Croix," from the habit they had of decorating themselves with the mark of the cross. His accounts are given from his own personal observations, he living in their midst, sometimes in their wigwams, for a considerable time. Father Le Clercq was also the inventor of the symbols in which the religious books for the use of the Micmacs are printed. Very scarce.

Poſſibly founded on the deeds of ſome of the early buccaneers, but ſurrounded with ſo much fiction that it is difficult to ſift the wheat from the chaff. According to the narrative, Beauchêne was captured by the Iroquois at the age of ſeven and adopted into the tribe; an account is given of the defeat of the Engliſh at Port Royal, and ſoon after that event he adopts the profeſſion of filibuster. A lengthy interlude is the ſtory of the Comte de Monneville, which ſerves the purpoſe of giving ſome intereſting and curious pictures of Quebec and Canada, with a deſcription of the manners of the Hurons. Later De Monneville was captured by the New Englanders and ſold as a ſlave at Boſton.

Des Barres, under the Direction of the Right Hon'ble the Lords of the Admiralty. 2 vols. elephant folio, bound in full old English red morocco, elaborately gilt borders on sides, richly gilt back, gilt edges. This copy was purchased from Bernard Quaritch some years ago and was thus described by him:

"The finest copy in existence of the Atlantic Neptune. It is bound in in two volumes, in old English red morocco extra, with broad borders of emblematic gold tooling on the sides, and is in perfect condition. It came from the library of the ex-Royal Family of Naples, the Bourbons, and there is no doubt it was presented either by the English Government, or, perhaps, Sir William Hamilton to King Ferdinand. It would be quite impossible to find another copy to be compared with it."

The rare collection is unquestionably the finest collection of engraved maps and views ever published by a Government, and the expense of its preparation must have been enormous. The total number of colored or tinted maps is 110, and several of these contain smaller inset plans. The views number 104 additional, making a total of 214. The maps include Nova Scotia, the River St. Lawrence, the island of Cape Breton, the coasts and harbors of New England, New York, Long Island and neighborhood; the Hudson River, more particularly in the vicinity of West Point; the coast to Carolina; the Gulf of Mexico; the mouth of the Mississippi; plans of the proceedings of the British Fleet in New York Harbor; the siege of Yorktown; the Battle of Camden, etc. Among the views are New York City, a rare and unusual view; five views on a smaller scale of the entrance to New York; various views of places in Nova Scotia, of Annapolis Royal, Halifax, Quebec, Louisbourg, Boston, a large and several smaller views from different points, Newport, Havana; a naval combat with the Phoenix and the Rose engaged, etc., etc. Most of these views are aquatints and very beautifully colored by hand.

902. — An imperfect copy of the same, but containing 101 maps, plans and views. Bound in 3 vols. half calf (binding somewhat worn). (As 3 vols.) Lond. 1781

Among the maps and views that are included in this copy are charts of the St. Lawrence River, coast of New England, Boston harbor, including plan of Boston; Massachusetts Bay, Plymouth Bay, harbor of Rhode Island, the large plan of the town of Newport, New York and New Jersey coast, Long Island, New York harbor, with inset view; Pennsylvania, Hudson River, etc. All these are contained in the preceding complete copy.

Baron Maseres was Attorney-General of Quebec from 1766 to 1769, and a noted lawyer and politician. His integrity was such that he was requested by the Protestant settlers of Quebec to represent their claims in London. He showed active sympathy with those political reformers who were prosecuted by the Government, once making a visit to Cobbett when he was in gaol, in his sheriff's wig and gown, to express his sympathy. Charles Lamb gives an interesting account of him in his essay on the Inner Temple Benchers, describing him as always wearing the costume of the time of George II., with three-cornered hat, tye wig, and ruffles.

959. MASSIE (JOSEPH). An Historical Account of the Naval Power of France, from its First Foundation. . . with a State of the English Fisheries at Newfoundland for 150 years past. . . to which is added a Narrative of the Proceedings of the French at Newfoundland from the reign of King Charles. . . first printed in 1712. 4to, half roan, pp. 19 + 5. Lond. 1762

Very Scarce. Massie was a noted collector of pamphlets, most of which he left to the British Museum. In his treatises on the conflicts with other powers he advanced the theory, which has been so ably expounded by Capt. Mahan and others, that the way to obtain power is to gain command of the sea. It is interesting to find this advocated 150 years ago. The "Narrative" is a reprint of the very scarce "Letter from a West-India Merchant to a friend at Tunbridge," published in 1712.

Small 4to, bound by Pratt for Henry Stevens, 1875, in full polished calf gilt, gilt edges (a very trifling repair to the margin of title, otherwise a good copy). Lond. 1626

RARE with the map, which is very seldom met with.

In 1584 Sir Humphrey Gilbert, on his last voyage, made an attempt at colonization in Newfoundland, which from its nature failed at the very outset, as might have been conjectured from a settlement which was expected to succeed from a mongrel collection of lawless seamen, criminals released from prison for the purpose, and prisoners from the wars in Ireland. The next attempt was that of Sir William Vaughan's, who in 1616 sent out the first batch of Welshmen, and in the following year a larger number under the charge of Captain Richard Whitbourne, not proceeding there himself until 1622, when he remained three years in the country. Being by birth a Welshman, Vaughan named most of the places in the new colony after the counties of Wales, the principal settlement being called Golden Grove.

The purpose of this very curious book is explained in the first chapter, where he relates a long conversation with Sir William Alexander respecting Newfoundland, the result of which was that he was to write a book to call attention to the remarkable advantages to be found in that colony. But that the work should not be dry and tedious, he tells us that he has mingled with it "merrie and light conceites among matters of consequence." The result is a most curious and entertaining mixture. The author supposes a court where Apollo reigns in judgment. The evils of the age are brought before him by famous characters in history and literature, the final result being that the god recommends them to get the Golden Fleece, which is to be found in Newfoundland, as the remedy for all the ills. Quotations from, allusions to, and speeches by Sir Philip Sidney, Withers, Florio, Sandys, Chaucer, Tarleton, the famous actor, Sir Thomas Overbury, Burton, and many others, including a lengthy discussion between Sir Francis Drake, Martin Frobisher, Sir Hugh Willoughby, and Sir Thomas Burton on their discoveries, and the possibility of finding a north-west passage, are scattered throughout. One of the chapters gives a description by Capt. John Mason [who designed the map, and who lived there for seven years] of Newfoundland, and another is on tobacco, an early treatise on this subject. An amusing part is the story of how John Wiclif, the Reformer, surprised a monk and a maid-of-honor in the act of kissing, how he brought St. Francis to behold the shocking sight, with the result that the saint thanked God that he had lived to see so much Love and Charity in the world.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

1067. WHITBOURNE (CAPTAIN RICHARD). A Discourse and Discovery of New-found-land, with many reasons to prove how worthy and beneficiall a Plantation may there be made, after a far better manner than now it is. Together with the laying open of certaine Enormities and abuses committed by some that trade to that Countrey . . . also an Invitation: and likewise certaine Letters sent from that Countrey. Square 12mo, full calf, gilt, red edges (neat repairs to two leaves, and the last leaf (14 lines) in excellent pen-and-ink facsimile). Lond.: F. Kingston, 1622

The second and best edition, containing material not in the one published two years previously. In it appears the first printed account of the founding of the Colony of Avalon on the coast of Newfoundland by Sir George Calvert, first Lord Baltimore, which colony, after a struggling existence of eight years, was removed bodily to Maryland, to form the foundation of Lord Baltimore's colony there. The additional matter at the end contains letters from some of the colonists narrating their progress and condition, one of them written by N. H., who no doubt was the Nicholas Hoskins whose name is given in a list of settlers in August, 1622, mentioned in another letter.

This is the first English book that relates wholly to Newfoundland and the attempts at English colonization.

Sir Richard Whitbourne was a remarkable representative of those seamen of the Elizabethan Age that made England famous. His autobiographical preface enumerates many of his voyages, from his fighting against the Spanish Armada to his numerous voyages to Newfoundland, commencing with his first in 1580, and including his meeting with Sir Humphrey Gilbert on his last and disastrous voyage, and his misadventures with pirates. His voyages do not seem to have profited him much, for he concludes his personal sketch with the reflection that "after more than forty yeeres spent in the aforesaid courses, there remains little other fruit unto mee, saving the peace of a good conscience." Few books of the early English authors are so charmingly written, or will be found so interesting for the perusal of the general reader, as well as the student of historical and geographical knowledge. His adventure with the mermaid, of which a lengthy description is given, and who he really believed tried to seize him, and who looked so cheerfully at him, is one of the most amusing of his experiences. The mosquitoes there also must have been somewhat different from the New Jersey variety, for, according to Sir Richard, they only attack the indolent and worthless, and drive them back to their various occupations. In spite of the very trifling defects, this is a desirable copy, and was part of the Brayton Ives library.

Paris: Florentin Lambert, 1671

Very rare. One or two copies are known with an engraved title-page as well as a printed one; this copy has the latter only, and it is a question whether it was generally issued with the engraved title. A remarkably fine copy, with the rare leaf "Lettre de François," dated Québec, Novembre 1670. Ragueneau's "Relation de ce qui s'est passé" is one of the scarcest of the series of Jesuit Relations, and this is almost as rare. Incidental notices are given of the history of Canada and of the ravages of the Indians in the memoir. Like most of the religious memoirs of this period, it forms very curious reading from the standpoint of to-day. Catherine was continually tormented with demons and seeing holy visions. An account is given of the great earthquake in Canada, Feb., 1663, which the holy Catherine was warned of, according to an extract from her diary. The year before she had a remarkable vision of demons coming from Trois Rivières, Montreal and other places, and rendering an account to the principal devil in his Court of the different successes and conquests they had made. Another vision was seeing the Queen of Poland borne to Paradise by St. Francis de Sales.

The whole narrative, which is founded on her diary, is a most interesting account of her life, and shows the remarkable faith and sufferings she underwent in her chosen vocation, and in establishing the Hospital in Quebec.

The authorship of this extremely rare pamphlet is stated to be unknown by every bibliographer who mentions it. Very few, apparently, have seen it, to describe it properly.

An attempt can be made to throw a little light on its authorship from a few clues in the narrative itself. On page 12 mention is made of our barge being captured (July 7). Somewhere about this date a boat belonging to the frigate "Lowestoffe" was captured by the French. On the next page mention is made of the "Captain" drawing in to the shore as close as possible and firing several broadsides at the French camp (July 10). This was also done by the "Lowestoffe" on that date. Also it is evident from his description of the landing of the British troops, the night before the Battle of the Plains of Abraham, that the author was present at it. The whole narrative bears unmistakable evidence of having been written by a naval man.

SIEGE OF QUEBEC.

The captain of this frigate was Captain Deane, but the ship itself was sometimes used by Vice-Admiral Holmes in approaching close to the shore for reconnoitring purposes, or taking soundings; and in the "Lowestoffe" he superintended the landing of the troops on the night before the final battle. It may therefore reasonably be surmised that either Captain Deane or Vice-Admiral Holmes may have written it, the statement on the title "By a Gentleman in an Eminent Station" lending some belief to the authorship by the latter. The words "Our barge" would naturally mean the boat on which at the time he happened to be on, and not necessarily that it was Captain Deane who was writing. The lighter draught of water of the "Lowestoffe" would no doubt cause the Vice-Admiral to use that ship in many cases where his own battleship would be useless.

Whoever wrote it rendered a service to history in giving so graphic—it is to be regretted that it is so short—an account of the siege, from the departure from Louisbourg to the capitulation of the French at Quebec, where it ends. The account of the landing of the troops was evidently written on the spot, for he seems to fear that the result would be unfavorable. "There can be little hopes of taking the place by assault . . . the country is extremely strong, and the enemy have added much to its natural strength . . . every thing is in motion, and a few hours will probably determine the fate of Canada . . . if the General should attempt to ascend the rock it is a work of much labour and difficulty, if at all practicable; and should our troops perform this difficult undertaking, I shall for the future think little of Hanibal's leading an army over the Alps; the rock is almost steep, and the summit seems to me inaccessible to an army; this at least appears to be the Opinion of the French, who place no centinel there, and seem perfectly secure that it never will be attempted." However, his fears were soon allayed; the entry next day gives an account of the battle and victory.

First edition of the famous ranger's account of North America. A good deal of space is taken up with the description of the various Indian tribes, including an account of the White Indians of the Mississippi. In his historical and geographical portion he seems to have had a special antipathy to the Jews, for he finds them in New York, Rhode Island, and other places, and speaks of them in contemptuous terms. Of Rhode Island especially he says that "the Province is infested with a rascally set of Jews . . . who are a pest not only to this, but the neighbouring provinces." Rogers at the publication of this was alone in London, and neglected, and may have had some unpleasant experiences to account for his prejudices.

First edition. Very rare. With the slip of "population of Canada in 1784," which is very seldom met with, and the separately printed leaf of errata in vol. 1.

Of this extremely rare history of Canada only 300 copies were printed, and for some reason it was not issued until 1826. Chief Justice Smith expresses some opinions in it, which he may probably have thought would give offence, and therefore delayed its issue to the public until he was on the point of leaving Canada for England. In fact, it is stated that it was Mrs. Smith who left orders for its publication, and not he. The first volume, it appears from a letter the author wrote, was ready in the beginning of 1813, and it is evident from the "Finis" at the end of that volume that no more was contemplated. It is also curious that the second volume ends "end of the second volume," as though another was written or about to be written; but if it was ever published, no copy is known. The present copy is a fine, clean, perfect copy, with large margins.

Pratt in full crushed levant morocco gilt, gilt edges (a slight repair to title and a trifling hole in two leaves of the Alexandræan tragedy neatly repaired, but on the whole a good copy).

London: V. Simmes for Ed. Blount, 1607

Very rare. Containing the blank leaf in Darius, and the blank leaf preceding the title of The Alexandræan Tragedy. Very few copies are met with having these two leaves.

This issue contains the First edition of Julius Cæsar and the First London edition of Darius, this latter being the original issue of that edition, printed with separate signatures and title, and previously included in the edition of 1604. The Cræsus and the Alexandræan are both second editions.

Apart from the interest of its being the work of the first proprietor of Nova Scotia, a greater interest is in its place in early English poetry. Some have even supposed that Shakespeare had one or two passages in mind, and borrowed and used the same idea in some of his later plays. The principal of these passages is that which bears a faint resemblance to Shakespeare's "cloud-capp'd towers" in The Tempest (IV., i.), and found in one of the choruses in Julius Cæsar. The resemblances are, however, of so slight a nature as to be most probably mere coincidences, but his position in the first ranks of English versifiers is undisputed. It is very probable that

STIRLING (SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF.)

Shakespeare read these tragedies. Alexander was a friend of Edward Alleyn, the famous actor of Shakespeare's time. Others of his contemporaries read his plays and praised them, though it is doubtful if they were ever performed, being more of the academic school than written for the public taste, and later writers are unanimous in the praise of his lyrical passages.

His lands brought him no fortune, his colonial schemes were failures, his rank and the positions conferred on him by James involved him merely in trouble and loss, and he died, as many others of an independence of character like his own have done, in loneliness and the extremest poverty.

THEVET (ANDRÉ).

author of the end of the 17th Century, and Member of the French Academy.

Although from the title one might expect that it relates principally to the most northern parts of America, the larger part of the book describes the whole of the then known parts of that continent, only the final chapters relating to North America. The author accompanied Villegagnon in 1555, and in the following year extended his voyage with that leader's nephew, Bois-le-Comte. Commencing with their departure from Havre-de-Grace, he describes all the wonderful things they saw (and one may imagine many they did not really see) on their journey along the coast of Africa as far as Madagascar; from there they crossed to America, touching the coast at the river of Ganabara (Rio de Janeiro); then the description is continued along the coast of America to the north, winding up with a description of the latest discoveries. This latter part is a summary of the first two voyages of Cartier, which, Thevet writes, was narrated to him by Cartier himself. Earlier in the work he calls the country Canada, an extremely early mention of the country by this name, and which there is little doubt he heard Cartier call so. Thevet is also the sole authority for the statement that Sebastian Cabot attempted a settlement on the shores of Canada with men from Iceland, but that 300 of them died from cold in the month of July. There has been much dispute on the question whether Cabot made an Icelandic voyage, which seems to be supported affirmatively by this statement. The word Iceland is printed "Ireland," but there is no doubt that Iceland is meant, not Ireland.

The illustrations are extremely quaint, some of them being the first representations of American animals. The bison and the opossum are exceedingly curious. Some of them served De Bry as a basis for his illustrations in the Grand Voyages.

A curious fact is that Columbus is not mentioned. Vespuccius is given as the discoverer of America, and Thevet says that the continent is rightly named after him.

Extract from the Will of Edmond de Goncourt:

(Trans.)

“My wish is that my Drawings, my Prints, my Curiosities, my Books—in a word these things of art which have been the joy of my life—shall not be consigned to the cold tomb of a museum, and subjected to the stupid glance of the careless passer-by; but I require that they shall all be dispersed under the hammer of the Auctioneer, so that the pleasure which the acquiring of each one of them has given me shall be given again, in each case, to some inheritor of my own tastes.”
