

MAISEL HAS MADE GOOD AT SECOND

By JACK VEIOCK. New York, June 21.—Fritz Maisei, the diminutive Yankee infielder, has made good at last.

After a four-year battle against many obstacles in his path as a member of the Yanks, Maisei has established himself as a regular, and Cantonville, Md., his home town, appears to be firmly plastered on the baseball map.

It has been within the past month that Maisei has come into his own. When the season opened there were many number of critics who said he would never do as a second baseman. Bill Donovan has Paddy Baumeister and Joe Gordon on the bench, both eager for the chance to grab the second-basing job, and for a time it looked certain that Maisei would have to be content to decorate the long timbers in the doubt. His fielding was his big fault, and to say the least he was a wobbly actor around second base.

Naturally a third baseman or short-stop, Maisei found the territory around the keystone sack entirely foreign to him. He got into the habit of fighting the ball and he found it difficult to get his throws away without pulling Wallie Pipp about seven miles off the bag.

But with Frank Baker holding the third base job and Roger Peckinpaugh firmly established at short-stop, Maisei had to make a second baseman out of himself for he showed out of the spotlight. So Maisei buckled down to the job, and though he had a tough time of it, he has won out. Bill Donovan is satisfied now that Maisei has the hang of the infield, and since Fritz has made good the Yankee infield stands out as one of the very best in the big leagues.

Faced Herzog's Dilemma. Maisei had to face the same proposition that Buck Herzog was up against when he joined the Yanks, for although Herzog played minor-league games at second for the Grays back in 1908, he spent the succeeding years up to 1916 around third base and the short-field, and he said at the time that playing so long had made it imperative for him to learn the A B C's of keystone sacking all over again.

Maisei never played regularly as a second baseman until this season. At Baltimore he played both third and short, and he came to the Yanks as a third-sacker for a price said to have been $12,000. In 1916 an injured shoulder was in his way as a big handicap, and he was not of much use to the club. He played in only fifty-three games, part at second base and the rest in the outer gardens. But a ball player who stands his team 12,000 gold simonolies is not parted with easily, and Don was wanted to give Maisei every possible chance to make good.

Today the fans who said Maisei would never do as a second baseman are showering him with praise, for he is beginning to field with the grace and steadiness of Eddie Collins, and he has an active bean out there around the keystone that makes his presence on the club doubly valuable.

Oh, Listen to Coffey! That handsome Roscommon giant, Joems Coffey, is out with another howl—a long, loud, lurid howl about the way the scribes have been treating him since he was out-roughed by Carl Morris in a New York ring a few weeks ago.

Joems says that he can't understand why the scribes forget to mention the name of Coffey when they write about the heavyweight situation and the eligible challengers for Jess Willard's headgear.

Listen to Joems just a minute: "I've beaten Morris twice," says Coffey, "and my name is never mentioned in connection with Willard's. Of course, the knockers will say that Frank Moran beat me twice and that that settles me, but they don't know what they are talking about. Moran's two wins over me were downright flukes. In our first fight, after he picked up that hammer from the floor and hit me with it, I got up and was leaning on the ropes, thinking how sweet my thrushes were warbling in Roscommon when the referee stopped the fight. That wasn't fair, for the referee should have given me time to think. The same thing happened in the second fight after I had been pasting Moran all around the ring. It wasn't right, I claim.

"In my fights with Morris I think I won both times, yet they say I'm a good no-man and talk about matching him with Willard. Can you beat that?"

This is what Coffey told Pat Anderson, the veteran New York writer, and Pat seems to agree that Jim ought to have his chance along with Morris and the rest.

SMOKY JOE MAY BE OUT FOR GOOD

Philadelphia, June 21.—As a result of his come-back stunt against the New York Yankees, Smoky Joe Wood will probably never pitch again.

Dr. Drury is the physician who treated Wood before he went South with the Cleveland team. "Wood," said Dr. Drury, "should never have pitched more than one or two innings, and those just for the sake of practice. He has strained his arm badly, and probably permanently as the result of his trying to earn his salary too early in the season."

Lee Fohl, as usual, has something to say, too. He declares Wood has been of great aid to him in developing younger pitchers, and he'll go to the front for him, no matter what. That is Fohl's way of saying he'll keep Wood, even if Joe can't pitch at all.

HERMAN AGREES TO MEET PAL MOORE

Wilson (Pal Moore, who heralded his "comeback" the other night by defeating Charles Wolfe in Memphis, will be Pete Herman's opponent in a 10-round, no-decision bout here July 3, according to announcement made by Hal Harvey, director of the Tulane club. It will be Herman's first bout here since relieving Kid Williams of the bantamweight championship.

According to Harvey, Herman had agreed to meet Moore in the local ring and incidentally Tommy Walsh is said to have put his O. K. on the match for his protégé, Hubie O'Brien is named as referee.

Moore, by his showing against Wolfe, appears to have recovered from his broken hand which he suffered some time back when going at top form.

Pal Moran and Arlos Fanning meet next Monday night at the Tulane club in a 15-round bout. The two are training daily for the scrap and hope to be in good shape to enter the ring.

MARCONI MISSED BANQUET

Had No Clean Shirt Because Trunk Failed to Come. Chicago, June 21.—Members of the Italian commission Monday had another round of sightseeing here and an official reception before the end of their visit to the middle West, where they have been received with enthusiasm.

Monday night the distinguished visitors, headed by Enrico Arlotto, cabinet minister, and Senator Guglielmo Marconi, who as inventor of the wireless telegraph has been the center of interest, will leave for the East.

Marconi allowed the small matter of a shirt to deprive him of one of the elaborate social functions contrived for the commission's entertainment Sunday on their arrival from Burlington, Ia. The senator's trunk failed to arrive, and when he called for fresh linen there was none forthcoming.

"I'm not going; bring me a bowl of chicken gumbo," replied the inventor. And while the other delegates feasted as became their rank Mr. Marconi partook only of soup.

USED WEAPON FIRST FASHIONED IN STONE AGE. London, June 21.—An Australian soldier, digging a trench in France, found a strangely shaped knob of flint and fastened to it a strong handle, thus converting it into a knobkerry, which he always carried in his belt. He used it to crack German heads in trench raids.

Eddie would Give Red Cross Half. Eddie Gordon, local bantamweight, has taken to letter writing and informs the local fan club through the press that he is willing to meet Pete Herman in a ten-round bout here if the promoters are willing to give him the chance.
