PREFACE.

WORKS similar to the present are becoming so numerous in the different states that no extended explanation of its plan is believed to be necessary. The idea of the compiler has been to furnish the judicial history of every case found in the Wisconsin Reports, from Burnett to the recently issued 38th volume. To this end an alphabetical list of these cases has been prepared, each one being succeeded by a reference to the page in subsequent volumes where that case has been commented upon or followed by the court, mentioned by the reporter or appealed to by the pleader. It is hoped that these references to cases found in the briefs of counsel will be of value as exhibiting the use made of a case by the bar, but more especially as furnishing a guide to decisions in other states where points similar to those found in the brief are discussed or decided. These latter references are distinguished from those found in the opinions by being included within parentheses.

It has been thought best also to index cases not as yet referred to. They may be cited or commented upon in future volumes, while it is frequently of advantage to the pleader to know affirmatively that a case has not, since its decision, received the attention of the Supreme Court judges.

Overruled, criticised and doubted cases are noted.

All the references in the reports of Wallace, Black and Howard to Wisconsin cases have been inserted, and where a case has been appealed from the Supreme Bench at Madison to that at Washington, the fact has been mentioned, and the decision, whether of affirmance or reversal, given.

To render the work useful to the owners of the old as well as of the new edition of Wisconsin Reports, the indented paging has been employed, unless otherwise stated.

The value of such a table as the following depends greatly upon its completeness and accuracy. The compiler has paid such attention to both these requirements, as justifies him in saying that whatever errors or omissions are discovered herein must be attributed to errors found in the Reports themselves. These are not few, and, in view of them, the compiler would venture to suggest to the pleader, in the preparation of his brief for print, that he give the names of the litigant parties in his citations, as well as the volume and page to which he refers. Figures are readily misprinted, but the possession of the plaintiff's name will afford the key to a discovery of the book referred to and save valuable time.

Volume 38 has not been thoroughly inserted owing to the brief time which elapsed between its issue and the printing of this Table. Attorneys can themselves insert these references, as well as those found in succeeding volumes. For this purpose, wide margins and spaces have been left in the Table.

The compiler is indebted for favors to O. M. CONOVER, Esq., Reporter for the Supreme Court, Madison.
