Maria AVDEY:

KHADZHIVIRONIUS, an MVD agent of A. A. PETROW, was being used by GOLITSYN of the Emigre Group in an attempt to arrest Maria AVDAY, a Soviet emigre living in Vienna whom the MVD knew to have worked for the Germans in Operation ZEPPLIN during WW II. GOLITSYN had himself introduced to KHAD. and showed him a photograph of Maria AVDEY, which KHAD. recognized. KHAD. was assigned the task of getting on good terms with AVDEY, taking her driving outside the city, wining and dining her, and, depending on how the case works out, eventually delivering her to the Soviets, who planned to arrest her. The MVD had confidence in KHAD., who had a pleasing personality and an ability to get along well with people.

While KHAD. had not progressed far by the time DERYABIN defected, he knew AVDEY's address and had seen her in a two-hour meeting in a cafe with an apparent American or Englishman.
