Malcolm W. Strong Killed

The many friends of Malcolm W. Strong throughout California and especially in Carmel, where he resided for a considerable time, were shocked by announcement of the tragedy.

While returning to Los Angeles, after the supervision of a moving picture production, Strong was thrown from an automobile, and striking on his head, was killed almost instantly.

Mr. Strong was a writer of considerable repute, and is regarded by those in the profession. In collaboration with Michael Williams he wrote the allegorical play, "Peace."

Our Children Do Us Honor

An ancient Greek myth has it that one of the tasks of Hercules was to meet and overcome Antaeus. Hercules learned that the secret of Antaeus' strength was that every time he touched the earth his strength was renewed.

This is to be a brief review of last Friday evening's performance under the title of "An Evening of the Children of Carmel," given by the children of Carmel under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts Club.

A practical application of the Greek myth is that every time the children of our little town take part in a dramatic affair, they are given renewed ability and confidence for the stage performance that is to follow.

It is not probable that in any community in the United States of the size of Carmel was there presented during this period of Shakespearean memorials such a well-selected affair, entirely by children, as we witnessed at Arts and Crafts Hall.

In no place, save in Carmel, where the children have almost constant dramatic training, would any producer endeavor to put on a 15-year-old Sir Andrew, a 12-year-old Sir Toby and a lassie of it as Feste.

The foregoing characterizations stood out as the features in a performance without a hitch, without a missed cue, and without an omitted line.

So well done and pleasing was the entire offering that one might write on and on, telling of the fine ability of every child who took part, but space will not permit.

However, to sum up the work of the little performers, it suffices to say that the parents and residents of Carmel have particularly good reason to be proud of their children and their work.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon those who so long and patiently trained the children both in singing and acting. The costumes were excellent.

The Carmel Fire Department will hold an important meeting this evening.

Help the School Get a Victrola

By SARAH E. WHITE

Educators are realizing more and more the value of music, and are endeavoring to train pupils to appreciate good music.

We wish the pupils of Carmel to cultivate a taste for the best. A victrola would make it possible to give the children compositions of the masters.

When our parent-teacher club is organized, how pleasant it will be for the tired parents to come to the schoolhouse and listen to some fine music.

Two years ago Luther Burbank presented each of the three schools of Santa Rosa a first class victrola, and they have been of great value to the school.

Is there a Luther Burbank in Carmel? If not, may we not each have the Burbank spirit and contribute something toward purchasing a fine victrola for Carmel's only public school?

Contributions may be given to the teachers or left at the office of the "Pine Cone." The contributions will be published.

Registration Resumed

There are quite a number of citizens in Carmel, down the Coast, and in the Carmel valley who failed to register for the recent primary election.

In August there is to be another election at which candidates for supervisor of this district and for other officers will be nominated by the citizens. Those who have not done so, should register now, not only for the August election but as well for the national election in November.

Call at the Pine Cone office and get your name on the list.

California History

Owing to the fact that writers of United States history reside in the Eastern states and therefore give little or no attention to historical events that occur or have occurred in California, the state department of education has decided to issue a California supplement to the United States elementary history to be out in July.

The author of the California section is Percy Valentine of San Francisco, and the section will comprise sixty pages.

Life is said to be dull and monotonous, and yet its variety is so endless that it is never the same for any two human beings.

Bernard Shaw Says:

"Why do the Germans stand it? Certainly not out of love for Prussia and the Hohenzollerns; Prussia and its royal family are no more sentimentally popular in the other Kingdom than Dublin Castle is in the County Cork. Yet German unity is unassailable.

"The English publicists who think that the cohesion of the German kingdoms is as feeble as it was when Thackeray ridiculed the Court of Pumpernickle are mistaken.

"The Germans, once butts of Europe, have become the most feared and respected people in the world. Wherever the German goes he finds employment more easily than the native because it is assumed that he is a more competent man. Above all, he believes in the Prussian military efficiency as the center and model of all the rest; so that not even the German Social-Democrats have ever opposed compulsory military service."

Individual Independence

We agree with Prof. Richard Ely of Wisconsin university in his conclusion that man is most independent "when he wants least, cares least, has least, knows least and is least," but he might have applied the same reasoning to a clam, or a South Sea islander.

It is man's duty to want much, care much, have much, know much and be much—all legitimate, righteous aspirations—and if they are acquired by means of humane, square dealing, there is only good in them.

The only independence that is worth while is that which comes as a result of making the best possible use of the talent or talents with which the good Lord has endowed us.

A Bird Census

The third annual bird count of the United States bureau of biological survey will be made in the breeding season of May and June. The count will be made, largely, by persons interested in bird life who will agree to act as volunteer enumerators and count the different kinds of birds found in a 40 or 80 acre farm or woodland tract near their homes. There is no pay for the service, but the work is delightfully interesting and the information furnished of much value to the department.

This year it is particularly desired to secure a large number of volunteers in the west to report on bird life in the Plains, the semi-arid regions, the deserts and the mountains of the United States.

Especial attention is to be given to securing data as to the birds in the fruit districts or the Pacific Coast and in the South Atlantic and Gulf states.

If you are ornithologically inclined, and quick enough of eye to follow the flight of our feathered friends, send your name at once, as a volunteer, to the bureau of biological survey, United States department of agriculture, Washington. Guide books will be furnished the enumerator, and he—or she—will find a new zest in life. It is not required that one be an expert.

How Carmel Voted

The result of last week's primary election in Carmel was as follows:

United Republicans, 47.
Regular Republicans, 22.
Democrats, 34.
Progressives, 7.
Henry Ford, 3.

Assuming that the cost of the election here was $40—pay of election officers, voting place, sample ballot, etc.—the people pay a high price for the privilege of expressing their choice for delegates. In this case the cost was about 38 cents a vote.

Carmel So Fair

By E. A. Arac

Fair Carmel, thou queer of the seashore,
Where the tides gently ebb and flow,
The sands ever washed by the waters blue
Are white like the drifted snow.
Thou art sheltered secure in a forest green,
Where the pines and the cypress grow,
And thou lookest at eve on the sunset
And art kissed with its golden glow.
Many strangers have entered thy borders,
Many moons have lighted thy shore,
Thy Red men are silent and sleeping
And will toy with their arrows no more.
Many changes have fallen upon thee,
And thou knowest not what is in store,
Yet at eve thou watchest the sunset
And art kissed to rest as of yore.

An Interesting Fact

In connection with the various articles now being published in newspapers and magazines concerning the life and works of Shakespeare, it has been brought out that the first translation from English into French of the complete works of the poet was made by A. Bruguieres de Sorsum, great uncle of Mrs. M. E. Slevin, about 1827. The original books of this monumental work are in the hands of Mrs. Slevin's family.

A Letter With an Appeal Which Should Promptly Answered

Following is an extract from a letter recently received by a resident here from an American friend who has been engaged in relief work in Paris since war was declared, having thrown open her house—~~fast to the mothers and little~~ children of soldiers—and now, as the following shows, to grandmothers.

"This has been such a long, dreary, hardworking winter. I have had the vision of how the very poor meet the bitterness of life. Our work has not paused a moment. Day after day we have reached out and burrowed deeper into the very heart of sorrow and want. I am learning (and it is so good for an American) what it means in character, not to consider comfort a necessity, not to regard the need of the individual above the honor and safety of one's country.

"I have seen mothers so poor in opportunity and privilege, their children their sole treasure, give their sons to the 'silence eternal,' nor make moan, nor turn to the right nor the left, with 'eyes front' and hearts both stern and loyal, in their poor little needy corner of poorest Paris, work on with soul alight for France.

"I have seen old women, feeble with hunger, depressed with a thousand aches and pains, when I have told them that their energy and endurance 'back of the lines' is saving France as much as the splendid bearing of her soldiers at the front, I have seen the weary and physical weakness pass from the aged features, the warm eyes glow, and the great soul of France (than which there is no more noble thing on earth) rise, even then in proud salute.

"I have been adopting, as it were, all sorts and ages of needy ones since war began, commencing with war babies, then the children of all ages, always the mothers, and now the grandmothers. For these last I want help, very special help.

"Do you know anyone or group who would send me knitting wool? I want it awfully—some thousand pounds of it—for my grandmothers to use in knitting soldiers' socks. The French military use woolen socks summer and winter, so there is always a demand.

"My grandmothers, whose hands are too unskilled, or too stiff for fine sewing, can knit in the dark, in the cold, knit their way straight to Heaven I believe.

"My grandmothers, you know, are the desolate ones—those no one else will bother about. They don't appeal to everyone like sweet new lives (our babies of war), but to me they appeal so tenderly, for have they not given France her sons?"

The price of wool in Paris is prohibitive. It is proposed to send a quantity of knitting wool direct to the Paris correspondent as soon as possible.

Contributions for this purpose may be sent to the recipient of the foregoing letter—Mrs. J. Clifford Woodhull—or to the "Pine Cone," Carmel, Cal.
