LINE FENCE TROUBLE IS SUBJECT OF TALK

People of Pembroke Avenue Are Watching Course of Dispute With Interest.

"Who built that fence?" reads a sign that stands out in black and white in front of the residence of L. Burmeister, 921 Pembroke avenue, the answer being supplied by a large hand pointing toward the residence of John Watson, accountant of the Hamilton Powder Company, his next door neighbor. The fence in question is a wonder even in Victoria where tall fences appear to be popular, for it stands 12 feet high of ordinary, rough lumber, innocent alike of paint or ornamentation of any kind.

The fence is the talk of the neighborhood and the story of its building forms one of the staple subjects of conversation. From what can be learned, it appears that Mr. Burmeister, who is employed at the Albion stove works, commenced some time ago to build on the west side of his lot within a few feet of the line dividing his property from that of Mr. Watson. As soon as the frame was up it became apparent that there would be several windows on the side of the building nearest Mr. Watson's property. As soon as Mr. Watson saw this he bought lumber and hired men and a week ago yesterday increased the height of the line-fence to 12 feet from the rear of Mr. Burmeister's house to the street-line, thus shutting off the light of these windows. In order to protect himself from the charge of having put up the fence, Mr. Burmeister thereupon put up the sign already referred to and likewise some others. One of these is a large disc in the shape of a clock, the face of which, however, is divided into seven instead of twelve spaces as is usual in timepieces. On this disc appear the words "Man, get next. Time is short." In order to obscure this Mr. Watson built a short piece of fence some sixteen feet high. Another sign consists of an empty beer barrel on which appear the words "Empty victory," while at the rear of the lot where Mr. Watson has not yet increased the height of the fence appears a sign reading, "Please do not build a high fence here."

This is not the only high fence Mr. Watson has erected around his premises for he has also added several feet to the height of the one in the rear dividing his property from that of F. Drake, who lives on Green street, and has also built a high fence to divide his lawn from that of John Cameron, whose property adjoins his on the west. Except at the front, therefore, Mr. Watson has his property practically surrounded by the highest fences in the neighborhood.

THE IDLER MAGAZINE
 EDITED BY ROBERT BARR
 AUGUST NUMBER

THE KEYNOTE of the August IDLER is Excellence. Its stories, articles and illustrations are convincing on this point. The cover design, by Clara Olmstead, is pleasing in tone and typical of the holiday season.

"EASY MONEY," by BERTHAM ATKINS, illustrated by G. L. Stampa is a punchy story, in capital holiday reading. "A SLACKER'S GAME OF GO," new, not to be a thrilling story, with all lovers of the game, will enjoy reading it. "AN OPERATION ON CHANGE," is a complete story by ROBERT BARR. There is a study of G. K. Chesterton, by Holbrook Jackson. The "Self-Defense" article should be read and studied by all fathers who toy walk alone in country lanes. Other stories and articles complete in this number are: HOW SYLVIA MET THE ENEMY, THE BEST WAY OUT, DUNGEON DOOMED, FISHING ARTICLES, THE LEGEND OF PRINCE AHMED (by Washington Irving). The new illustrations of Washington Irving by V. Leconte deserve special mention and study.

"The Thief"
 Charles Frohman's production of "The Thief," with Margaret Illington, which will come to the Victoria theatre on Monday next, has apparently more than justified the praise and the laudatory notices that preceded its coming to the west, and the performances of the Bernstein play everywhere have been nothing short of a series of triumphs for the author, Margaret Illington, and the members of her support. The great theme of "The Thief"—one that appeals to every member of every strata of society—the world-over—has been deftly, brilliantly handled by Bernstein, and his whole workmanship demonstrates abilities that are little short of genius. There is scarcely any emotion that Bernstein does not arouse—not so much by a direct appeal as by a kind of indirection, which is only possible to the highest and most finished artistry. The spectator is better for having seen "The Thief"—a play that stimulates the mind through the medium of the emotions which are reached by methods at once legitimate, logical and artistic. Western audiences and critics have rarely taken an artist into their affections in so spontaneous a manner as they have Margaret Illington. Practically a new comer here—her only appearance in this section having been in the role of slight significance—she has impressed all her audiences as an emotional actress of the most generous powers, subtly and expertly used. No notice of "The Thief" would be complete without mention of the superb cast which Charles Frohman has provided for the interpretation of its several subordinate, yet clear-cut, masterly defined characters. Messrs. Bruce McRae, Edward R. Mawson, Sidney Herbert, Leonard Ide, Cecil Owen and Miss Isabel Richards, constitute without exception one of the most intelligent and effective combinations of players local theatregoers will have the satisfaction of seeing in many a day.

Grace Cameron.

Laughter, smiles, tears, show girls, comedians, tuneful musical dramatic situations, elaborate costuming and scenic display are all promised Victoria theatregoers when Broadway's favorite comic opera star, Grace Cameron, makes her appearance in C. H. Kerr's latest, biggest and best success, "Little Dollie Dimples," on Thursday and Friday at the Victoria theatre. This piece cannot be termed a musical comedy, nor is it hardly after the style of the old-fashioned comic opera, but is classed more in the line of a musical drama. Miss Cameron, whose voice is that of the lyric or coloratura, as well as a dramatic soprano, will be heard to great advantage in the various solos and finales which are far better musically speaking, than the average musical comedy or comic opera affords, yet she appears in her little baby impersonations which have made her famous in the vaudeville halls of all Europe and America. Her part was fitted to Miss Cameron. Taken from the most notable success she has achieved as "Dollie Dimples," in "Pig, Pat, Pout," at the Casino theatre, New York, and to see that this part is the best that Miss Cameron has ever had an opportunity to appear in, is but putting it mildly. There are show girls galore, pouty ballets, chappy chorus, and all that sort of thing, which goes to make up the average musical comedy performance. But over and above these things, there is one of the most notable cast that has ever appeared in an entertainment of this kind. Prominent among the comedians of the company is Will Philbrick, the celebrated mimic, "the man of a hundred faces." His delightful impersonation of the simple and ignorant country boy, who comes to the city and accepts a position in a stylish family, attempting to pose as an English butler, leads up to many excruciatingly funny complications, and his attempt to master the English accent, affords no end of amusement. Mr. Roger Grey assumes the role of a petty foisting lawyer, who is necessary in the extreme, and he is willing to do most anything for money, but when he has to make love to old Aunt Matilda Dunn, the penurious but wealthy old New England spinster, his desire for money almost forsakes him at times. Still his attempts to win old woman's money without her co-senses, are funny in the extreme. Speaking of the character of Matilda Dunn, Miss Florence Tempest, who made such a distinct hit in the production of "Sam Houston" at the Garden theatre, New York city, also in the character role with "The Boy in the Wood," is originating the unique comedy character, and one that stands out prominently in the production. Mr. Louis Lavalle, the well-known young baritone, who has gained enviable notoriety on the other side, has the role of Robert Lorraine, and is said to be a genuine heart-breaker. Miss Daisy King assumes the role of Mayme Green, an adventuresome, and her soprano is heard to good advantage in the musical numbers given to this role. Besides a large chorus, both male and female, a bevy of pretty show girls, and a charming pouty ballet, numerous extra added features, are carried by this attraction, including the great musical act of the Musical Four, which made such a terrific hit in the New York Roof Garden the past summer. Miss Carpanone presents an elaborate electrical dancing novelty, with full chorus. Miss Orla Faber appears in her celebrated violin specialty, and the Elm City Male Quartette render many pleasing vocal selections. This attraction is one of the gala bookings of the season and one of the most important events.

The New Grand.

One and all of the thousands whose attendance at the New Grand this week has made the business the biggest since last winter are unanimous in their confirmation of Manager Jamieson's opinion, expressed in advance, that the entertainment would prove one of the best ever seen in the house. Where all are so good it is hard

BUYING B. C. LUMBER.
 Sound Lumbermen Seeking Vainly For Further Supplies.

Vancouver, Aug. 7.—Lumbermen from Tacoma, Seattle and Bellingham are engaged in frantic competition to buy cedar logs in British Columbia. Prices have gone up with a jump. The supply in the Puget Sound country is about exhausted.

Every boom in these waters has been purchased, and Vancouver has been stripped of cedar logs. The Americans have already sent representatives up-country with a view to secure a supply from handloggers. As the demand is phenomenal, it is likely that there will be a great revival of logging opera-lions at once, insuring employment for hundreds of idle men.

In parts of South Africa much damage is done by baboons, who go about in large marauding parties.

IMPORTANT

The attention of consumers is called to the printed "inside" wrappers of SWEET CAPORAL CIGARETTES, which will be redeemed, at 5¢ a dozen, at the Company's office at corner Princess street and McDermott avenue, Winnipeg, or 141 Water street, Vancouver.

to pick a headliner, so that is left to the individual tastes of the patrons. It is enough to say that all are away above the ordinary and that none should miss the opportunity afforded by the two closing performances to-night. The bill includes Fred and Eva Mozart in "Helme, the German Cook-bier"; "The Pantzer Trio, contortionalists"; "The Fall of '84," a splendid military play; Jules Garrison and Company in a travesty on Shakespeare, entitled "A Modern Roman"; Alice Robinson, prima donna soprano, and two good moving pictures, Manager Jamieson has been able to secure as the headliner act for next week one of the best features on the road to-day. It is presented by Dorsch and Rossett, and is called "The Musical Roadfinders." A splendid mountain scene shows a tower station in a canyon of the Rocky mountains. A tramp appears, riding on a handcar, who is immediately seized by the operator, and then the fun and music begins. Freight cars, signal flags, lanterns and all the other accessories to a station outfit are made to do duty as instruments and the act is said to be unexcelled for scenic effect, real comedy and fine music. For the month of midsummer bargain sales patrons will find much to amuse them and a moral at the end in a brightly played little sketch called "Bargain Mad," which will be presented by Charles Gardner and Frank Albert. Dorothy Dayne, gifted with an exquisite soprano voice, will captivate the audiences with her songs and imitations. Miss Dayne will wear a "Directoire Gown," one of those famous slashed creations which naughty Paris gave to the world over a century ago, a fashion which an attempt has lately been made to revive. Miss Dayne's appearance in this costume in other cities of the circuit has created something of a sensation among the fairer half of the population. The two DeComas, acrobats, globe rollers and ground tumblers, are reported to have a great success. Monday evening's entertainment will play a return date, and an unusually long and interesting set of moving pictures bear the title, "The White Squaw." The overture for next week, a waltz entitled "Cupid's Pleading," is by a local composer, Mr. Sam Goodacre, and is said by Mr. Nagel, who has arranged it for the orchestra, to possess real merit.

At Pantages.

Commencing at Monday's matinee, a complete change of programme will take place at the Pantages theatre. The headliner will be Polk & Polk, sensational spring-board acrobats. This act is an European act, and was booked direct from the London Hippodrome to Sleekie, Wash., for the Pantages circuit. Trainer and Dale, novelty comedy sketch artists, have an act full of comedy and have made a decided hit all over the circuit. Norman Hardy, a clever concertina player, will deliver several selections on the concertina and other instruments.

Baby Patsey, a versatile juvenile entertainer, will take a prominent part on the bill.

The Pantages-comedy Comedy Four, singers and comedians, will also appear, with an act greatly out of the ordinary, as they sing and have comedy in their part of the entertainment.

Harry DeVera will sing "You'll be sorry that 'Eas' Late." The Pantages score will spin off a motion picture that creates no end of laughter.

To-night will be the last opportunity to witness the Great Electric play with electricity.

Sid Juggles' cannons. The Kaufman Bros. talk ragtime, and Maybelle Milton tells stories. The moving pictures also leave the city. All those who are interested in the New York to Paris automobile race should be on hand to-night, as this will positively be the last chance.

Burroughs' Company.

The Burroughs' Stock Company, with a good reputation, will open in the A. O. U. W. theatre on Monday evening.

The company announces a ten weeks' stay in the city with good offerings. The opening presentation will be "Capt. Swift," and this will be followed by other equally good plays. The performance will open at 8:15 each evening. During the week there will be matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2:45.

ITCHING SCALP

If you notice your scalp is covered with dandruff or your hair is getting dry and brittle, you should know there is something wrong.

The first thing to do is to apply "James' Hair Restorer," and this should be done immediately, because the moment it is applied your cure has commenced. If any irritation exists, as is frequently the case in scalp troubles, "James' Hair Restorer" will instantly stop this, and the other effects of the ailments will also gradually disappear. If taken at a sufficiently early stage, the scalp trouble will be removed before it is noticeable by anyone else, but even if the adoption of the treatment has been delayed, the value of "James' Hair Restorer" will very soon become clear to you.

Cooking hours are hours of hard work at their best, so why not shorten them?

By the use of electricity for cooking and heating purposes, ideal housekeeping is made possible.

We have now on display at our offices every modern device for cooking and heating, any of which you may enjoy in your home if it is wired for electric light, by simply attaching cord and plug to socket. We will be pleased to have every housewife in Victoria come and see this display, whether they wish to purchase or not.

ITCHING SCALP

If you notice your scalp is covered with dandruff or your hair is getting dry and brittle, you should know there is something wrong.

The first thing to do is to apply "James' Hair Restorer," and this should be done immediately, because the moment it is applied your cure has commenced. If any irritation exists, as is frequently the case in scalp troubles, "James' Hair Restorer" will instantly stop this, and the other effects of the ailments will also gradually disappear. If taken at a sufficiently early stage, the scalp trouble will be removed before it is noticeable by anyone else, but even if the adoption of the treatment has been delayed, the value of "James' Hair Restorer" will very soon become clear to you.

VICTORIA'S EXHIBITION.

The new exhibition buildings of the Agricultural Association are rapidly assuming form. They will be a vast improvement upon the structures destroyed by fire and a credit alike to their designers and to the city. The grounds are also being placed in order for the forthcoming show. Secretary Smart has practically completed arrangements which will result in one of the best and most interesting fairs ever held in British Columbia. The structure features will of course be most prominent from an agricultural and horticultural point of view, but there will be plenty of amusement also, without which in these days a fair would be considered incomplete. It is hardly necessary to remind the farmers of the surrounding country or the business houses and manufacturing institutions of the city that their hearty cooperation is necessary to make the success of the show complete. They have done their part in the past, and we are quite sure the secretary can depend upon them this year to enter with enthusiasm into the enterprise. Little more than a month now remains to put the finishing touches upon the arrangements which we are confident will result in one of the most successful exhibitions ever held in Victoria. In particular do we look for splendid exhibits of fruit and cattle, as representing industries which have made remarkable progress during the past year.

AN INTERESTING ADMISION.

The Colonist, in a moment of forgetfulness, we presume, truthfully points out that from the year 1866 to the year 1896 British exports to Canada underwent a tremendous decline. Since that date there has been a steady and healthy increase in trade between the Mother Country and Canada. In 1896, as our readers will remember, Conservative rule in Canada and the National Policy came to an end. One of the features of the fiscal policy of the new government was the adoption of the British preference. Immediately that provision of the tariff went into force there was a change in the trade tendency. British exports to Canada commenced to advance, and the advance has been maintained from year to year until in the year 1907 all the ground lost under the National Policy was more than made up. Moreover, the example set by Canada had its effect upon Australia and New Zealand. These colonies adopted a preferential trade policy also, with a result corresponding in some degree to that which has characterized the trade between Great Britain and Canada. Thus the Dominion under Liberal rule was the pioneer of the preferential trade movement, and while the Mother Country has apparently viewed this vital feature of Imperial trade with an indifference which passes understanding, there are not wanting indications that presently we shall have some evidence of appreciation.

What has been the attitude of the Conservative party towards this policy of preferential trade which is, apparently, unwittingly, eulogized by a newspaper supporting that party? Preferential trade was denounced by Tory leaders when it was first introduced in the House of Commons by Hon. W. S. Fielding. It is opposed to this day, possibly not so openly as formerly, because the fact is recognized that it has met with great favor alike in Canada and in Great Britain as extremely beneficial to the people of both countries. Only during the late session of Parliament Mr. Bergeron, one of the lights of the party, denounced it with emphasis. He said it was injurious to this country and ought to be abolished. Mr. Foster practically took the same ground when he contended that the woolen industry of Canada was being ruined by imports of British woolen goods under the preferential trade policy. He held in effect that the consumers of the country should be subjected to increased taxation for the benefit of a few manufacturers of the East who now enjoy a preference in the home markets estimated at at least 25 per cent, and against the British manufacturer and about 50 per cent, as against the German manufacturer. Consequently the Conservative party stands for the abolition of the British preference and reversion to the conditions which obtained in 1896 and before, when Canadian trade with Great Britain was undergoing a steady decline and business in Canada generally was in a state of stagnation.

The bombardment at Smith's Hill which shakes the foundations of Victoria at regular intervals expresses a promise of an abundance of water next year.

CROPS AND BUSINESS.

The harvest of the world establishes the world's credit for the year. If the credit account be a heavy one, a brisk business is assured. If the harvest be a poor one and the credit account be overdrawn, the balance must be adjusted in the succeeding year. By reason of the working of these economic laws it is claimed that while the harvest of the Northwest during the coming autumn will be fully up to if not considerably above the average, with a largely increased acreage to reap, the immediate result cannot be a restoration of the exceptionally active conditions which had prevailed for several years previously. There is a balance to be made up which will be a first charge upon the anticipated crop. Possibly so, but surely the liquidation of old liabilities will have the effect of putting a large amount of money in circulation and restoring faith in the business situation. Besides there is no immigration agent quite so effective as a report, published far and wide, that a magnificent harvest has been reaped. That induces immigration, and every immigrant coming into Canada and taking up land brings a certain amount of capital with him. So that, despite the theories of masters of economic subjects, we cannot but think that a good harvest means good times, or at least a considerable improvement upon the times we are passing through. At the same time it is well we should be reminded occasionally of how absolutely dependent we are, in Canada especially, as pre-eminently an agricultural country, upon the farmer. Upon his ample shoulders rests the bulk of the business of the country. This is perhaps less true of British Columbia than of any other province of Canada, because we have several other important industries, one of which produces millions of dollars worth of food, the greater part of which is exported for the benefit of the people of other countries. All the circumstances properly understood, readers of the Times need not wonder why all the world is anxiously waiting for authentic accounts of the prospective value of the harvest now fast ripening for the sickle.

"Shall we have a president or a proxy?" anxiously inquires the New York World. A proxy, plainly, if Candidate Millhaus of the Socialist Labor party is elected. He has just been nominated as a proxy for Prestor, who can't run himself because he is under the age limit and won't run because he is in prison for murder and doesn't want to. What about Candidate Taft? Is he not running as a proxy for President Roosevelt? What about the candidate of the Independence party also? Is he not in the field by favor of W. R. Hearst and his string of Mugwump newspapers? It appears that Mr. Bryan and the representative of the Prohibition party, whoever he may be, are the only candidates who represent themselves alone and a very large element of the American people.

Our good friend and extremely active citizen Mr. Sorby, writing on the water question, lixens the city of Victoria to the Israelitish king who coveted the vineyard of his neighbor Naboth. The comparison is unfortunate from the point of view of an advocate of the cause of the Esquimalt Water Works Company. The Goldstream "vineyard" was conveyed to the city by its owners, the people of British Columbia through their representatives in the legislature. Ahab, in the guise of the Esquimalt Water Works Company, coveted this desirable possession and got it. But the municipal Naboth is not out of business yet.

After all what is the use of trying to keep up with the great American people. Wherever they go, in whatever contest they compete, they make records. If they cannot make record time they can make a record row when caught at practices unbecoming amateurs—unbecoming even amateur Irish policemen from the New York police force. A Michigan University professor has made a new "record" on Mont Blanc, going up and down in sixteen hours, beating the previous time of an English climber by fifteen minutes.

The prairie section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is all but completed. Trains will be running from Winnipeg to Edmonton about the time snow begins to fall, and over the greater portion of the road long before then. The company will soon be in a position to concentrate its constructive energies entirely upon the mountain section. It looks as if the whole line would be completed well within the contract time.

The courts of the United States could not punish Mr. Harry K. Thaw in accordance with the enormity of his offence against the law, but the lawyers and the specialists fixed him. Thaw is bankrupt. He has also, to all practical purposes, lost his Evelyn. There are still forces in operation making the way of the transgressor hard.

Again the worm has turned. An automobilist in California was chased by his own machine. The car took the bit in its teeth, we suppose. Its owner was only saved from death by the prompt action of a chauffeur who happened to be detached at the moment. The individual who was the chief figure in this peculiar adventure will now be able to enter into the spirit of the mere pedestrians who from morning till night shower blessings on the head of his kind.

The Associated Press tells us that practically the whole population of the Australasian islands has crowded to the seacoast to behold the great American Armada. It is to be hoped the tremendous weight will not capsize the islands.

Customs officials on the other side have issued a warning to cheap rate travellers against the alleged growing practice of purchasing goods in Victoria and taking them back to Seattle free of duty. We suppose there is no law against smuggling in ice cream "under cover."

UBER ALLES. The sun was bright, the sky was blue. When o'er an Alpine valley flew A ship that bore above the dew. A German flag with the device Zeppelin IV. "Beware!" the Germans cried, "John Bull, Your top of crime is over-run; In vain your Dreadnoughts crowd the seas, For this will sink them at our ease." Zeppelin IV.

"One longer trial flight, and then—Beware our vengeance, Englishmen!" The airship, as she moved ahead, Was bunneted by her would-be shed Zeppelin IV. —London World.

"Our Empire now includes the air," John heard Tontonic throats declare. The gas-bag burst with thunderous sound, And sadly they swept from the ground, Zeppelin IV.

There in the cool light of day The aerobatic wonder lay. While from his island far away The chucking John was heard to say, Zeppelin IV. —Times Office Boy.

GUN-DRILL OVER FIRING BEGINS

REGIMENT HAS COMPLETED PRELIMINARY WORK

Several Recruit Squads Passed Yesterday—Ammunition Served Monday.

The drill on the guns was practically finished this week at both Macaulay Point and the navy yard, and on Monday the three companies of the Fifth Regiment in camp will commence target practice with aiming ammunition. The recruit drill has also finished. Capt. Ridgeway Wilson paid a visit of inspection to Esquimalt yesterday, and the "awkward squads" went through their manoeuvres so satisfactorily that the captain passed them all into the "drilled" class.

This being Saturday the men are having an off-day. There will be no drill to-night. The members of the regiment are being given a complete relaxation from duty as they have worked hard all week and have a big day ahead of them to-morrow. The men of the Grand theatre, and the other companies are making similar preparations to enjoy themselves this evening.

To-morrow at a quarter to twelve the regiment will fall in at Macaulay Plains for church parade. The service, it is understood, will be held in the open under a shady grove of trees. After service a muster roll will be called and it behoves every member of the regiment to be in attendance. In the afternoon the men will be at home in camp to all their friends. The "awful" and "will render" programme at 7 o'clock.

REFUSES REQUEST FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS
Streets Committee Turns Down Petition From Residents of the Fairfield Estate.
One of the biggest works of street improvement petitioned for this year was turned down at a meeting of the streets, bridges and sewers committee last evening. This work included the grading, macadamizing, draining, boulevarding and otherwise improving portions of streets in the Fairfield estate including Cook, Oxford, Cambridge, May and Chapman streets, the cost to be divided between the property owners and the city in the usual proportion under the Local Improvement by-law. The petition was signed by a large number of owners of property in the Fairfield estate attention being drawn to the fact that quite a number of people had built homes in this section and others purposed doing so now that the B. C. Electric railway was building through to Ross Bay cemetery. In view of these facts the council was urged to undertake the work. The committee after going into the whole question decided against the work, which it was felt would benefit comparatively few as there were scarcely any houses there yet, and if it went ahead other works in the older sections of the city where there was a large population would have to wait. The agreement regarding a supply of water for Oak Bay submitted by Reeve Oliver of that municipality to the city council and referred by the latter body to the committee, was sent back to the council without any action being taken on it, as it was felt that it was a matter for the council to deal with.

Further complaints were received by the committee about the bad condition of Store street as a result of the ties which the B. C. Electric railway left in the roadway when the rails were removed having rotted. The company has been asked to remove these ties and level up the street, so far has taken no steps in that direction. The matter was discussed at some length, it being pointed out that Store street would not be paved this year if the street would be rendered almost impassable if these ties were allowed to remain.
It was decided to recommend to the council the construction of sewers in Beiton street, Victoria West, and in block H, Fairfield estate. A cement sidewalk will be laid on the south side of Collinson street, between Vancouver and Rupert streets.
The question of the opening up of the east end of May street along which the B. C. Electric Company's new line to Ross Bay cemetery will run and of widening Lovers' lane, along which the tracks will also run, was discussed at some length. It was decided that if the B. C. Electric Company would undertake to grade the rocky portion of May street so that it would be fit for traffic the city would move back the fence along the west side of the cemetery so as to widen Lovers' lane and would also remove the sharp turn at the corner of Fairfield road and Lovers lane which now constitutes a menace to traffic. A conference will be held between representatives of the city and company to settle this matter.

Wm. Allen & Son, real estate agents, Yates street, sold to Mr. Ellis, manager of the Taylor Mill Co., a number of lots extending from Government street through Queen's avenue to Douglas street, the price being in the neighborhood of $15,000. Dr. A. A. Humber and the above firm have also purchased a number of lots on the corner of Bay and Government streets, the purchase price being in the neighborhood of $5,000.

BAND CONCERT AT CAMP.
On account of the Fifth regiment being in camp there will be no concert at Beacon Hill park to-morrow. The band will give a free concert at the camp, Macaulay Plain, to-morrow from 3 to 5 p. m.

IMPROMPTU PROGRAMME.
The Victoria City band will give another concert at the Gorge park to-morrow afternoon. The programme has not been announced. Bandmaster S. Rogers states that the concert will be an impromptu one, the programme being decided upon after arrival at the Gorge park. The City band have given several concerts at the Gorge park, and those who have heard them will doubtless take the opportunity given to-morrow.

FETE AT GORGE.
On Tuesday next the Daughters of Pity Provincial Royal Jubilee hospital, will hold an afternoon and evening fete at the Gorge park from 3 to 10:30 p. m. During the course of the day there will be several interesting events, among which may be noted an aquatic display, and exciting game of water polo by the Y. M. C. A. from 5:30 to 8 p. m. At 8:30 p. m. the Arion Club will give an open air concert, the proceeds from which will be collected by the Daughters of Pity, and made as a special donation from the Arion Club to the fund for a maternity ward at the hospital. Both "afternoon" and "high" tea will be served and there will be several delights for the little ones. Capt. Roy Truap has consented to run the S.S. stern-wheeler Craigflower on special trips every hour to the Gorge, commencing at 2 p. m. The Craigflower will be decorated for the occasion. The J. E. A. A. will bring a procession of illuminated boats to accompany the Arion Club at 8 p. m. All friends are asked to visit the park on Tuesday as this will be the only fete or party given in all of the hospital this summer. The Daughters of Pity ask all friends contributing candy, flowers, groceries or articles for the fishpond to send them on Monday, or not later than 11 a. m. on Tuesday, care of Mrs. Henry Clay, Fort street. All contributions will be most gratefully received, and those interested are asked to accept this request through the press as it has been impossible to notify all personally.

The funeral of the late Wm. Patterson will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Dallas hotel. Rev. Dr. Campbell will conduct the services.

AT THE GORGE.
A Splendid Programme is Provided for Those Who Visit Resort.
The Victoria City band will render one of their regular Sunday afternoon concerts at the Gorge park to-morrow afternoon commencing at 3 o'clock. A choice programme will be given and a special car service will be provided to carry the people to and from Victoria's most popular resort. For the coming week's entertainment the management has secured several films which promise to give a very interesting programme of animated pictures. Included in the list will be the Waters of Life, Good Wine, the Military Airship, the Ups and Downs of an Old Hat, and the Old Maid's Inheritance. This should give a good hour's enjoyment and with a continuance of the present fine weather there is every reason to expect good crowds every evening. Included in the programme for the week will be Mr. Bell, the illustrated song singer, who will be heard in a new song entitled "Gypsy Ann." The attendance at the Gorge during the past week has been far above the average and the attractions in the park have received a liberal patronage. The management of the park have now under consideration a proposition which, if decided on, will increase the attendance at the park considerably and at the same time give the patrons of the park a chance of winning a fifty-dollar bill. It is impossible as yet to make any definite announcement, but it is expected that the extra attraction will be started this week.

One repentant drunk constituted the docket at the police court this morning.
A permit was issued to Dr. C. G. Hartman this morning for the erection of a house on Cook street to cost $4,750. Yesterday W. J. Pendray took out a permit for an addition to the boiler-works at the British American Paint Works, Belleville street to cost $1,500.

A waltz competition has just been completed by Sam Godacre, of this city, and arranged by M. Nagel, musical director at the Grand theatre. The number is entitled "Cupid's Pleading," and bids fair to be one of the season's most popular hits. The waltz will be played at the Grand during the coming week. H. Teizer, of the Pacific Music Company, has been successful in having the publication affected in Philadelphia.

UNIVERSITIES TIE IN SEASON'S GAMES

Ten Wins Credited to Both Oxford and Cambridge Athletes.

The great fight between Oxford and Cambridge for all-round athletic supremacy for the year has ended in a tie in events all. Several contemporaries erred in halting Oxford the winners by 17 events to 16 after the Humpyrup cup shooting at Biele. The Dark Blues won this with the record score of 85, but the Cantabs retaliated by carrying off both the snaphooting and the Chancellor's plate thus gaining a two events one victory. In the Chancellor's plate shooting they equalled their 1922 record by putting on an aggregate score of 73.6. Years ago supremacy was decided by the results of five events only, which are still called the "major" events by many, and looked upon as the real test of all-round merit. Were this so, Oxford would claim the championship by three events to two. They excelled in rugby football (17 points to nil), at Association football (4-1), and at cricket (two wickets). Cambridge, of course, won the sports (6 events to 4) and the boat race (2 1/2 lengths). For future reference the other all-round results are appended: Oxford: Boxing and fencing (5 events), lacrosse (10 goals), chess (4 games), single racquets (4 sets), lawn tennis (1 set), double racquets (3 sets), tennis (3 sets love), and double tennis (3 sets 1). Cambridge: Cross-country running (27 points), hockey (3 goals), billiards (2 games), gymnastics (65 3/4 points), steeplechase (4 points), golf (4 matches), polo (6 goals), and shooting (4 events). The lawn tennis, swimming and water polo matches were all drawn. Since 1890-91 both Universities have won the championship eight times, ties resulting in 1898-99 and 1900-01. For five years (from 1896-97 to 1900-01) the Dark Blues were undefeated.

NEW CRICKET TEAM FROM CLOVERDALE

Outside District to Move in Matter—Other Clubs to Organize.

Outside districts are taking up the cricket proposal put by the Times sporting columns, and next year there will be at least another eleven in the field, which will compete with the three local teams now engaged in the king of games. Word comes from Cloverdale that a team will be put in the field next year without fail, and others are also moving in the same direction. The Cloverdale people have for a long time been cherishing the idea and it was thought that they would have a team for the regular matches this season. Difficulties, however, stood in the way of this being accomplished, but matters are fast being straightened out by the enthusiasts of that district, and the next season will see a strong eleven playing under the Cloverdale banner in local cricket. This makes four teams certain, and with two or three more secured there will be quite sufficient to play a series of popular matches through the season, the competition of which would be strong and all the teams representative. The local men who are busy in fostering the grand old game are hoping that the future of Victoria cricket will require something that has so far been done. The rivalry which is present exists among the clubs and particularly between the Albions and a visiting team is the scene of animation. The hospital grounds where the Victoria Cricket Club make their headquarters, drew a large crowd on Saturday last, and the interest in the game is becoming keener every Saturday. What is wanted is a number of young clubs to get out and play cricket. The other clubs are none too strong at present, and although there are some good players here, there are still places for several smart young men to obtain if they show they have any ability in running or in bowling.

When overheated take a glass of feed "Sleds" Tea. It will prove most refreshing. As delightful as a dip in the sea.

YORKSHIRE IS STILL AN UNBEATEN TEAM

C. B. Fry Makes Fine Score in Match Against Surrey Eleven.

Yorkshire still leads English cricket with an unbeaten record of nineteen matches played, twelve wins and seven draws. Surrey's recent loss to Fry batting for Surrey recently, was five hours and ten minutes at the wickets, and scored 214 against Worcester. He hit 103 runs. The English class stand as follows:

Team	W	L	D	P.C.
Yorkshire	19	0	0	100.00
Surrey	18	1	0	83.33
Kent	15	1	0	81.82
Middlesex	8	2	1	50.00
Sussex	10	2	3	42.86
Lancashire	10	3	3	42.86
Worcester	4	4	0	0.00
Nottingham	3	4	0	0.00
Hampshire	12	7	3	31.11
Leicestershire	13	4	4	11.11
Warwick	15	4	3	77.27
Essex	13	2	5	62.50
Gloucestershire	12	2	4	50.00
Northampton	10	3	4	66.66
Derby	11	2	3	66.66
Somerset	12	1	2	73.33

The Derbyshire cricket club recently held a meeting at which it was decided to support the action of North and Lancashire in trying to bring about a visit from an Australian eleven in 1928. This resolution was taken for the purpose of urging delegates attending the meeting to be held at Leeds for the consideration of the question of inviting the Australians to England next year. The move is being made as the Australians have passed up the triangular cricket proposition between England, South Africa and Australia.

AS SEEN FROM OAK BAY GRAND STAND

Sportsman Replies to Letter From "Observer" on Fans' Behaviour.

The letter signed by Observer appearing in the Times Wednesday on "The Spirit of Baseball" has drawn forth the following reply: "The communication referred to, however, was not from Mr. Wille, as suggested in Mr. Knight's letter below, but from Mr. M. C. A. Sir, I notice two or three days since a kick, I presume by Mr. Wille, among our sporting items. There are few in Victoria that take more interest in sport generally than myself, such as football, lacrosse, baseball and cricket. Therefore I hope I have a good past. In the first place one of the people he employs often makes more noise than anyone else in the grand stand. I would also call his attention to the unpunctual commencing of the games, any time from five to twenty minutes behind time being usual, which with ten to fifteen minutes waiting for a car, prevents many a business man from going to Oak Bay. I might also suggest to Catcher Robertson to be a little quicker in giving his signals to the pitcher.

A MINISTER WHO KNOWS

Rev. Mr. Blanchard, of Clairmont, knows what he says in stating the only sure cure for Hay Fever is "Catarhazone." "For two months of the year, for ten years I suffered. Catarhazone cured me so perfectly that the disease has not returned. Others in my parish I know have been permanently cured by Catarhazone, which I strongly recommend for Hay Fever, Asthma and Bronchitis." $1.00 at druggists.

GAS METERS AS SAVINGS BANKS

Consumers of gas by means of the penny-in-the-slot meter not uncommonly use the meter as a savings bank, confident that the extra money found in the meter by the collector will be returned to them. This habit appears to have been abnormally developed in Wigan. In the year 1926 the meter men found the extra money paid by the collectors, apart from the legitimate penny, was as follows: Five sovereigns, ten half-sovereigns, four half-crowns, 365 florins, 502 shillings, 124 pence, 258 threepenny-pieces and 222 halfpennies.

The word "lieutenant" means literally "holding the place" thus a lieutenant colonel holds the place of a colonel.

CHINESE NAVY LEAGUE

Thousands of pounds have been subscribed by Chinese men in Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide towards the newly-formed Chinese Navy League, which has been founded to promote voluntary contributions from Chinese throughout the world, with the object of securing an enormous increase in China's fleet.

A Chinese women are conducting a vigorous campaign in support of the movement. A first-class battleship Costa Great Britain $1,357,000 a year; a torpedo boat destroyer $250,000; and a first-class torpedo boat, $30,000.

LAWN TENNIS. ENGLAND VS AUSTRALIA.

It is announced that the British Lawn Tennis Association have challenged for the Davis cup. Messrs M. J. Ritchie (Olympic champion), J. Parke (Irish champion), and K. Powell have been chosen to go to Australia to endeavor to regain the trophy. Last year it was won at Wimbledon for Australia by Brookes and Wilding. It is probable that, in view of the fact that England is sending out a team, America will also compete.

THE RING. PACKY McFARLAND WINS.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 3.—Packy McFarland won from Phil Brook tonight before the Pacific Athletic Club in the seventh round.

Burns vs. Squires.

Sydney, N. S. W., Aug. 3.—The heavy-weight championship fight between Tommy Burns, the Canadian, and Bill Squires, the Australian, has been fixed for August 24th.

LACROSSE. NO COMBINATION MADE.

The Maple Leafs have refused to amalgamate with the Vancouver club, decided at the meeting held in the V. A. C. last night to remain as they have been in the past, a separate team, and will finish the season as such. There was a great deal of argument used, but to no avail, and although the meeting lasted for several hours nothing could be arranged.

Four or five of the best of the Maple Leafs have signed to play with the Vancouver club for the rest of the season, but their names are withheld.

THE GUN. VICTORIA VS CAPITAL MATCH.

The team shoot between the Capital and the Victoria Gun Clubs will be held on the 9th instant at Langford Plains, and the two teams will be constituted as follows: Victoria: Weller, Adams, Beechell, Patton, Eves and McLean; Captain: Lintsey, Lt. Col. Lubliner; Stevenson, Peers and Lewis. The match will be shot at twenty-five birds per man, and on the same day shooting will take place for the Dupont picture, which is open to all members of both clubs, and will be shot at twenty-five birds per man also.

The first match between the two clubs was held some weeks ago at the Williwag trap, and resulted in a win for the team representing the Victoria Club. The win, however, was gained by a small margin of seven points, the scores being 125 and 118. The coming shoot will be of great interest having been manifested in it by the two clubs.

GENERAL NOTES.

A dispatch from Ottawa announces that there will be seventy targets for the D. R. A. this year. Fourteen have been added because of frequent complaints that there were not enough for extra matches.

Neither Victoria nor Vancouver are sending "doublets" to Astoria this year. Vancouver's Charlie Laine will go along for the singles, while from Victoria there will be no representative whatever.

Last Thursday night the Vancouver Rugby team that will play against the British team at the end of September had their first practice at Brockton Point, and the team will have regular training days on Thursday and Tuesday.

The Vancouver football club has arranged for the team to play in the inter-city league, and will draw its men for those matches from the full strength of four clubs—the Nationals, Celtics, Thistles and Shamrocks.

Vancouver will therefore send out one of the strongest coast combinations possible.

The Y. M. C. A. swimmers who are competing this afternoon at Coal Harbor in the British Columbia swimming championships left on the Vancouver boat last night. The men who have gone over are: Fomret, Crompton, Gairney and Kiddie for the squadron race, with Harling, Carne and Daldell to make up the polo team, and Long, E. Crompton, Findlay and Brace, who are taking part in the other events. The three championships being decided are 40 yards, 220 yards and the mile event.

To-day's sports in which Victoria is engaged at home and abroad are baseball at Oak Bay, where the local nine are playing the Websters again; cricket at Beacon Hill, where the Albion and Victoria elevens are competing; Victoria against New Westminster intermediate lacrosse match at the Royal Athletic ground; the opening of the yacht club at 4.30 p.m., at which Mrs. Richard McBride will officiate; swimming championships at Vancouver, in which a team from the Victoria Y. M. C. A. are engaged, and the third annual regatta at Shawigan Lake, in which the J. E. A. A. rowing men are taking an active part.

The conference between the delegates of the Albion and Garrison cricket clubs, which met last night for the purpose of discussing the combination of those two elevens for the coming coast city competition, failed to come to any decision as the representative of the Work Point men was unable to give a definite answer for his team. The matter was, however, fully discussed, and the Garrison men will announce tonight if they are willing to enter into combination with the Albions for the matches.

A HUGE PETITION.

Wheeled into the British House of Commons on the Trolley.

Occasionally petitions are got up for presentation to parliament which extend to such enormous proportions that it is impossible for the hon. member to whose charge they have been committed to bring them to the table of the House unaided—still less to pack them into the receptacle behind the speaker's chair provided for those of normal size. One of these monster petitions reached the British House of Commons, and members witnessed the spectacle of a trolley on which the petition was placed being wheeled by attendants along the floor deposited at the table of the House. The huge roll of paper was wound round a wooden drum, and elevated on the trolley, would be about four feet high. Its appearance was greeted with loud laughter and cheers, which were renewed when, at the conclusion of private business a few minutes later, A. Henderson rose and begged leave to present a petition bearing 610,000 signatures of members and adherents of the Wesleyan Methodist church in favor of the Licensing Bill, which they earnestly prayed the House to pass into law with all possible speed. The speaker, having invited the hon. member to bring the petition, or some portion of it—(laughter)—to the table, Mr. Henderson left his place, pushed the trolley a yard or so nearer the table, and detached a few sheets of paper from the roll. These he carried behind the speaker's chair. Meanwhile the two attendants who had brought in the petition walked up to the table and again took charge of the trolley, which they wheeled into the lobby and thence to the public petitions office.

Many of the Scottish lochs are astonishingly deep, the depth of one Loch Maree—being known to exceed 1,000 feet.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope "Tender for Construction," will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Thursday, the 31st day of August, 1927, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioner, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz.:

(1) District "C."—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners near Weymontachene, in the province of Quebec, 166.33 miles west of the north abutment of the Quebec bridge (such point being on the boundary between Districts "C" and "D"), westerly for a distance of about 107 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1930.

(2) District "C."—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about 107 miles west of Weymontachene, in the Province of Quebec, westerly to the end of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company's contract, a distance of about 144.7 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1930.

(3) Districts "D" and "E."—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the distance of about 22.25 miles from the end of the contract of Fauquier Bros., Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 124.24 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1929.

(4) District "E."—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the westerly boundary of District "E," in the Province of Ontario, easterly to the end of the contract of Fauquier Bros., north of Lake Nipigon, a distance of about 107 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1929.

(5) Districts "E" and "F."—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, at the western end of the Fauquier Bros. contract, north of Lake Nipigon, in the Province of Ontario, westerly to a point at the distance of about 125 miles. Date of completion, 1st September, 1930.

(6) District "F."—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners at or near Dog Lake, in the Province of Ontario, to a point at a distance of 2.4 miles west of what is known as Peninsula Crossing by alternative routes as shown in the plans of the Commissioners, the selection of the route to be at the option of the Commissioners. Date of completion, 1st September, 1930.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the offices of the following District Engineers, viz.: John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont.; S. Armstrong, Nipigon, Ont.; and S. R. Poulin, St. Boniface, Man.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless submitted in duplicate, and on the printed form supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate order must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to rely upon the classification, or any other information given by or on behalf of the Commissioners, and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept and agree to be bound by the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:

For Sec. No. 1, District "C."	$150,000
"D."	250,000
"E."	150,000
"F."	200,000
Total	$750,000

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved securities as may be required by the Commissioners. Signatures on tenders, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners, and in any case of refusal or failure to execute any part of the party whose tender is accepted, the additional approved securities within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure, and all contract rights now or hereafter acquired by the tenderer shall be null and void. The cheque deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques accepted by parties whose tenders are rejected shall be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—
"All mechanics, laborers and other persons who perform labor for the purpose of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for complete performance of the work, and in the event of any dispute as to what is a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final."
"This agreement is subject to the regulations in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labor, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works." (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)
"The contractor shall, in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price."
"The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed."
The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order, P. E. RYAN,
Secretary,
The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway,
Ottawa, 15th July, 1927.

Newsprinters inserting this advertisement without authority from the Commissioners will not be paid for it.

If there is a storm at sea you must battle with the elements. The time is sure to come when people will be able to steer a direct course from point to point in air ships."

STEAMER MANHATTAN HAD A ROUGH TRIP

Two of Fishing Vessel's Crew Had Narrow Escape From Drowning.

The New England Fish Company's steamer Manhattan returned to Vancouver yesterday with a little over 30,000 pounds of halibut after a trip of seven days.

A big sea getting up while the men were out in the dories, they were recalled, and one of the dories was sunk, her crew of two being flung out. The boat was brought under the vessel's stern, but got under the counter just as it was falling on a wave.

The dory was smashed to atoms, and the men thrown into the water, but they grasped a rope thrown to them, and were hoisted aboard.

The Manhattan shark was again in evidence. This is a tiger of the sea, which never bothers any steamer but the Manhattan. One member of the crew was it every trip and its movements are always the same, for it swallows the hook and tows the dory various distances from five to fifteen miles.

The fisherman never fails to bring in this shark story when he returns from trips to the banks, but the marine reporters have now informed him that they refuse to handle anything less than a fight with a devil fish.

C. P. R. OFFICIALS ARE HOLDING CONFERENCE

Situation of Rate War With Inland Company Under Discussion.

Upon his return from a trip of inspection over the E. & N. railway yesterday William Whyte, second vice-president of the C. P. R., accompanied by C. E. E. Usher, and Capt. J. W. Troup, left on the Princess' Victoria this morning for Seattle, where they will confer with E. J. Coyle, general passenger agent from Vancouver, and A. B. Calder, Seattle representative of the company, upon the rate war situation.

While it is impossible to state what the outcome of the conference will be, it is likely that a new move on the part of the C. P. R. in its contest with the Puget Sound Company will shortly take place.

Mr. Whyte stated upon his return last evening from Albert that the line had been graded and was ready for track-laying as far as French creek, and that falls would be laid at once, the line being opened to traffic by January next, when the date of further extension to Albert would be decided.

Mr. Whyte expressed himself as being well pleased with his trip, and remarked upon the large area of good timber lying in the vicinity of French creek at Cameron lake.

COTTAGE CITY MADE FAST RUN FROM NORTH

Pacific Coast Steamship Brought Big Nugget and Much Bullion.

Bringing about 120 passengers and $212,000 in gold in addition to a nugget as large as a platter, the steamship Cottage City, of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's fleet, arrived in Seattle yesterday from Skagway, after Capt. A. C. Jensen had made a record run of fifty hours from Ketchikan to Seattle, including the stop at Prince Rupert.

Among the passengers on the Cottage City was Clarence Berry and Mrs. Berry, with a nephew and niece, returning from Interior Alaska, where he has extensive properties. He brought with him a nugget which takes the prize for size, being estimated to be worth about $1,000 in the rough. The treasure on the ship was from Interior Alaska. Word was received of a small strike of ten men at the Meyer Ketchikan in Sitkoh Bay. The run from Ketchikan, including the stop at Prince Rupert, is 975 miles.

LONSDALE REPAIRING AT VANCOUVER WHARF

Canadian - Australian Liner Expected to Sail on August 25th.

Yesterday the Canadian-Mexican Pacific liner Lonsdale, which has been lying in the stream at Vancouver since her arrival from Salina Cruz and was ported last month, berthed alongside the Johnson wharf to undergo repairs in her engine room and boilers.

The Lonsdale is expected to get away from Vancouver for Mexico on the 25th inst., according to present arrangements. She may be taken out by Chief Officer Lindgren, unless Capt. Worsnop, manager of the line, secures a substitute for Capt. McCalmont, who succeeded Capt. Forbes on the steamship Georgia.

PRIVATE WIRELESS SYSTEM.

Information gained from those in positions to know the plans of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company has it that that company is to have an elaborately equipped business office in New York fitted with a wireless telegraph system, with which it is expected the officers will be able to communicate with the docks in Bremen.

According to the information, a part of the ground floor and a portion of the tower of the projected nine hundred foot building of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, which is to stand on the site of the present structure, will be occupied by the North German-Lloyd Company. The wireless telegraph station is to be installed in the top of the tower, thus giving it the highest altitude of any such station on earth.

Through this and the European station the officers hope to keep in constant communication with their vessels at sea.

At present wireless communication with ships in mid-ocean is practically impossible, but with the installation of a system at such a height as that of the projected tower of the new Equitable it is thought that messages may be constantly transmitted.

MARINE NOTES

Reports having been published in Vancouver newspapers stating that the freight traffic to Prince Rupert and other northern British Columbia ports was getting beyond the capacity of the steamship companies, a Times reporter to-day interviewed a number of representatives of the coasting companies.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," said one. "Our steamships are taking a normal amount of freight from Vancouver and Victoria, but could easily handle three times as much."

The steamship Tees, Capt. Townsend, sailed last night for Quatsino and way ports on the west coast, carrying a full load of passengers and considerable freight.

Upon completing repairs at the outer wharf the steamship Greenwich, Capt. HCRS, will steam to Gray's harbor to load lumber for Port Pirie. The steamship was chartered prior to arrival from Nome, by J. J. Moore & Co. at 318, 3d.

The tug Abigon was towed alongside the Holt liner Onfa at the outer wharf to-day and a new boiler lowered into her. The old boiler will shortly be converted into a twin-screw steamer.

Bound for this port the R. M. S. Manuka, of the Canadian Australian line, sailed from Sydney on the 3rd and cleared from Brisbane on Wednesday with 48 saloon, 37 second-class and 25 steerage passengers.

The Alley liner Indraivelli is due from Sydney, New Zealand and Honolulu this evening. She will enter the Esquimalt drydock immediately upon arrival.

Picturesquely situated at the foot of the magnificent Harrison Lake, surrounded by mountains from 5,000 to 10,000 feet in height, within three hours' run from the Pacific Coast, this celebrated resort, known as Harrison Hot Springs, has been famous for its curative powers since the pioneer days of British Columbia, offers unequalled attractions to both pleasure and health seekers. A beautiful drive from Alder Creek station, seventy miles from Vancouver on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, brings the tourist to the St. Alice Hotel. The views from the hotel veranda are unrivalled. Many delightful walks through the woods, mountain trails to climb, tennis courts, croquet lawns, baseball grounds, good fishing and hunting in season, and boating unexcelled anywhere, afford unlimited outdoor entertainment, while for indoor amusement there are ping-pong and billiard tables and a large dining parlour. One of the attractions of the locality is the Government Experimental Farm at Alder Creek, many guests enjoying pleasant afternoons visiting this interesting institution. The efficacy of the Harrison waters in rheumatism, kidney and liver diseases, etc., etc., has long since made them famous. The hotel is supplied with the mineral water. Those requiring medical advice may consult the resident physician, and baths may be taken under his supervision. The St. Alice Hotel is open all the year round. Terms $2.00 per day and upward. MASONIC TROWEL CHANGES HANDS

Victoria Lodge Takes Over Custody of Brotherhood Symbol

Vancouver and Quadra lodge No. 2 of this city has become the guardian of the trowel symbol of Masonic brotherhood and love.

The presentation was made at the A. O. U. W. hall last evening by Lebanon lodge, No. 104, of Tacoma, whose lease of guardianship has just terminated.

The ceremony of transferring the precious trowel was attended with great pomp and in addition to the brethren from Tacoma lodge, there was a large attendance of visiting Masons.

Clinton A. Snowdon and E. J. Felt, acting senior and junior wardens of Lebanon lodge, delivered the trowel into the hands of R. B. McMicking, secretary and first master of Vancouver and Quadra lodge, who referred to the significance of the presentation which had been conceived by C. Fred Crosby, of Justice lodge, No. 733, New York City, as an addition to the Masonic order to spread the feeling of brotherly love throughout the world.

The inscription upon the trowel reads: "Who best can work and best agree." The trowel has been in circulation for two years, this being the second time that it has crossed the Canadian border.

It was presented to the Master of Justice lodge, of Hamilton, Ont. If not recalled by the Master of Justice lodge, in accordance with the original understanding that this would be permissible, it has been estimated that the trowel will not again be in possession of the Masonic lodge for forty years. It will be that time have been in the possession of no less than 87 lodges. Already 24 lodges have had temporary possession of the trowel. When the 30 days are up, it must be transferred to whatever lodge has first preferred in writing a request for being its next guardian.

A number of Victoria Masons arranged themselves in the form of a living trowel and the trowel was passed from hand to hand.

Addresses were given relevant to the ceremony by Mr. McKenzie, of Wilkeson lodge, Portland, Ore., and a number of others.

The Tacoma brethren were welcomed by Rev. A. J. Bruce, acting grand chaplain of the local lodges. They were: Dr. Francis Atwell, Clinton A. Snowdon, E. J. Felt, Ralph E. Ward, George Esauier, grand orator; Charles D. Atkins, past grand master of the state of Washington; Ralph Welch, senior deacon; Royal H. Gove, grand master of the state of Washington.

W. K. Houston, the most worshipful grand master, presided at the presentation.

A novel departure has been made by George M. Cohan, of "Little Johnny Jones," "Talk of New York" and "Freckle Prince" fame. This departure is the presentation at the New York Theatre of the Cohan & Harris Minstrel, with Honey Boy Evans as a headliner. Of course, George M. Cohan has spread himself on songs and the best of the best has been gotten for the New York Sunday-street South.

Bygone Days of British Columbia Reminiscences of Old Victoria

BY R. E. GOSNELL

(Copyrighted)

HAVE BEEN DEERED with some notes furnished by Mrs. E. G. Alston, nee Miss A. M. Tuzo, sister of a well-known pioneer physician of Victoria. Doctor H. A. Tuzo, who lived at the foot of the hill upon which Christ Church cathedral rests. Mr. E. G. Alston, who will be remembered by the old-timers, came here in 1859, May 26th. He afterwards became registrar-general of Vancouver Island and also of British Columbia. In 1861 he was a member of the old Legislative Council for Vancouver Island, and again for British Columbia in 1863-1870. In short periods of 1871 he was acting sheriff-general. In the same year he became Queen's advocate of Sierra Leone, and died there the following year.

On September 2nd, 1861, Mr. Alston was married in Christ Church cathedral to Elizabeth Caroline, daughter of Edward Abbott of Westing Park, Norfolk. Dr. Cridge officiating and Mr. Crease acting as father to the bride. Of this marriage two children were born: Alfred Edward, now rector of Earl's Trimmingham, near Norfolk; and Con-on Mr. Garrett made a great effort at decoration by having arbutus leaves sewn together on cardboard cut out in the shape of crowns, anchors, and other somewhat meaningless forms, which were put up in different parts of the church. Until Bishop Mills came I never remember the church being open between one Sunday and the next, but he endeavored to establish daily service and regularly read morning prayer at about 8 o'clock. I do not remember that any parishioners took advantage of this privilege, but Mrs. Mills was always there. She wore a red cloak, and day by day I used to see the red cloak enter the church, for we could see distinctly from our (Dr. Tuzo's) house at the foot of the hill.

The Old Church, as shown in the photographs, had no architectural pretensions; but was at any rate built in a style suitable to the material; it had, therefore, a certain beauty of its own, the tower and low spire being the reverse of despicable. I remember the Presbyterian church hired by the congregation for their worship after the burning of the cathedral, and being specially amazed at the rostrum at the end thereof, which was the most con-one morning to go and inquire of my brother. I was hastening over the bridge when I described my mother at the other end, and I knew her at once in spite of the distance. We quickly met and warmly embraced. Turning, I saw a gentleman standing by: it was Chief Justice Begbie on his way to let me know, and much amused at our meeting in this way.

On the south side the bridge led to the old Government buildings, designed by Mr. Tidmann. They were very picturesque, and indeed unique, and I can't help women in Victoria, and ladies seldom went abroad without the escort of gentlemen, of whom there were often many who could spare the time, being almost unable to find employment and having to feed in restaurants and sleep in shanties. Three or four professional men were often glad to share such an abode, a little hut of two or three rooms made out of boards, with a little lean-to for the cooking, without garden, fence, or privacy. I knew a gentleman and his wife who lived some months in a shanty; they were very poor, and kept quite to themselves, though known to be of good standing. One day a friend carried them a letter, for they, like many others, could not afford to have a box at the post office, and there was no delivery of letters. The lady was busy cooking, and she never noticed that he had succeeded to title and estates—was, in fact, 'Sir Somebody.' They left by the next steamer, and the shanty was desolate.

"Though times were rough enough for some years they were nevertheless the habitable houses of the Old Country people to go to, and the naval officers at Esquimalt were great at entertaining. There were picnics by land and water, dances, and a wedding about every month. There were no women servants, but the Indians were very good and faithful in their way, and later on the Chinese proved much the same.

The H. B. C. Fort.

"This, when I first saw it, was enclosed by a high wall of logs or stakes, and at two of the four corners were bastions pierced for cannon. The gates were on the side facing the water; they were open all day and barred at night. Whenever the governor or a chief factor arrived within the fort or left it, a salute of twenty guns was fired. The fort was curious. It was a square, with shelves all round up to the top, on which were placed the goods, so that they could be seen by the Indian customers. There was an open

'Esperanto' was a very concise and effective diction.

"The Indian ranches, on the shore opposite the wharf, where the harbor was crossed by a light bridge leading to the road to Esquimalt, were picturesque, but not pleasant; the smell of clams and the audacity of the fleas made them unapproachable to ladies. There were no pretty wigwags with blanketed and beaded squaws and papooses sitting outside, as in the pictures. The 'Sons of' were a low-caste, fish-eating tribe, and sadly degraded by contact with white men. The Hudson's Bay Company servants were not drawn from these Indians, but more northerly tribes.

Unfortunately for the interest they contain these notes of Mrs. Alston are at an end, but I am able to supplement them with some taken from a journal of her husband, the late Mr. E. G. Alston, who, by the way, was educated at St. Paul's school and a Trinity college, Cambridge, and called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1857. Having made up his mind to go out to British Columbia, then only just begun to be talked about, he started from Liverpool on the Europa on April 2nd, 1859. Among the passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cary (afterwards referred to, Mr. H. M. Ball (afterwards a well-known government official), and Mrs. A. C. Elliott. Some of the comments made by Mr. Alston on the details of the journey out are interesting and amusing. Boats at that time apparently did not seriously cater for the comfort and convenience of their passengers, and the experience of the travellers going from New York to the Isthmus and from San Francisco to Victoria was anything but pleasant. On the 16th of May they reached San Francisco. On the following day he left in the Northern, on which the 'best grub yet' was provided, but it was a slow boat, and the weather, hitherto perfect, became bad. He was much depressed on hearing bad reports of the colony; many miners were leaving and returning to California. On the 24th they arrived at Esquimalt, whence he walked to Victoria in the company of Mr. Trutch, and put up at the Orleans House. The next day he made the acquaintance of Messrs. Crease, Gordon, and Begbie, and on the following he called on the governor (Douglas), with breached by Penobscot on supposed breach of peace; refused to give bail; continued in his next month; business began to look up; building operations are started in the town, and good reports came from the mines. We have splendid news from the up-country diggings. "Miners all going to return in the spring. Wages often 60 and 70 dollars per diem."

Sundry Paragraphs From the Diary of 1859.

"Three miners, next door, who blasphemed frantically through the thin partition, are succeeded by a German who practices on the flute. On the third concert (usually lasting an hour each) I walked out and called on him to inform him that a little music was pleasant if consisting of tunes, but one hour's practice was more agreeable to himself than to me. We came to an agreement by which I was to knock when I had enough of that which is said to soothe the savage breast."

A Typical Day's Work.

"Rose a little before seven, lit the stove, cleaned boots (would not polish), boiled water for tea, then some rice, which I turned—had some molasses, thereof. Finished breakfast by half-past eight, had a pipe, and then into the woods. Into court at eleven, case adjourned, lunched at the Colonial. Walked back at five with a pound of meat in my hand. Obtained some water next door, lit fire and half-cooked steak and had tea. After which a pipe and 'Eady's of Elm.' German next door practised the flute, the inharmonious blackguard! Surveyed my habitation, consisting of a sitting-room, uncarpeted, 10 ft. square, with a table and two chairs, and a chest, on which latter are placed washing utensils, brushes, etc. My sleeping room opens into this and is 10 by 6 ft.; in it a cot, a portmanteau, chair, tin wash-dish, Guncase forms a bolster. This apartment opens into a little closet about 5 ft. square, in which are a stove, shelf for bread, etc., and some wood piled up. From the sitting-room you walk at one step into the field. On the table all day lie my teapot, plate, knife, fork, teacup and saucer, because no other place for same. I sweep out my room before breakfast, first sprinkling the floor with yesterday's tea-leaves."

"Stic ego vixi E. G. A. (Meal expenses for one week circ 5.00)

Colonial Dress.

"Old colonists can be at once distinguished from new, for while the former either dress regardless of all style or else come out resplendent in almost new clothes ordered before departure, or seedy garments, relics of better days, all have left their home for some strong reason, very few for the mere gratification of adventure. Some, because idleness made domestic life disagreeable, others in the hope of retrieving a lost reputation, and a few in the honest purpose of gaining a er else trouble would follow. Baby said he would go, but went not, and succeeded in raising the window. A small of whiskey rushed in with the cold air; a huge bear was thrust in and tumbled on my bed. Crease told him to go home again; with a protestations of friendship he obeyed by running away fast. In a quarter of an hour he returned again, opened the window as before, and down tumbled an assortment of cakes (like quails), etc., and sweet things. Finally he retired, thinking he had shown his respect and gratitude sufficiently.

Cowichan Indians.

"On reaching the encampment we were at first doubtful of the character of our hosts, but finding it very good we resolved to trust to them; so off they carried our baggage, cleared out a square around a huge fire, brought out salmon and potatoes, which a good-looking blackguard cooked excellently though without very much scruple as to cleanliness. Made a capital supper in the presence of some of the vigors of all sorts, from the chief downwards. Handed baccy round and lit our pipes. Dispersed tea also, which they did not seem to care about. Elliott and Kerr sang some songs to them: 'A Life on the Ocean Wave,' 'Annie Laurie,' 'God save the Queen,' etc. They sang in return some Indian songs, and their mass, male and female voices taking up the chorus parts. Their voices accorded very well. In a cleared part of the camp, against the wall, we were shown an altar with rude wood crucifix, etc., and pictures of the Virgin and other saints. The Tyne's wife crossed herself (sic), one taking off our hats. Very much struck with the scene, occurring as it did in the evening, the Tyne's lighting the way with a torch of pitch sticks. It appears that a R. C. priest went to work among them in February last and has succeeded in persuading them to leave off drinking spirits, and to learn the elements of his religion. They regularly every morning and evening to the sound of a bell, come forth from their different camps, having first washed their faces (an innovation), to attend mass and prayers. Isolated Indians come from great distances to hear mass on Sundays; two at Saanich named five miles for that purpose. Cowichan Indians never steal now, as others universally do."

Stray References.

The following extracts from letters may be of interest historically.

"May 5, 1860. I was very glad to reach Victoria last Friday morning. Everything beautiful, but gradually dull as to business is much worse than I ever remember since 1860.

"August 6th. Everything is deplorably dull here. Very little business and people smashing up and leaving constantly. The miserable squabbles in this small political world and the hostility between Governor Seymour and the legislature, and his general unpopularity, all add to the general depression. If I had any notion of the state of things when in England I should have turned hard for a change. The mines recently discovered a country turned out well, but the old mines at Cariboo are paying fairly. Some exertions are being made to develop the coalfields on this Island, and it is to this mineral rather than to gold that we must look for our ultimate prosperity. Gold will never make a country; it can only attract people and draw capital to more enduring sources of wealth.

"November (same year). Some time back I made up my mind to resign the registrarship, and should have done well for as soon as it was known I had offered of business far more lucrative than the appointment. However, the (new) governor (Munro) advised me to hold on.

The same views (as to the mistaken merging of all interests in that of the gold industry) are set forth at length in the Handbook of British Columbia by Mr. Alston, published in 1870. This contains a long extract from the Columbia Mission report, from the same pen. He attributed the depression which lasted, more or less, during the seven years preceding confederation, not to the want of confederation with Canada or to the isolation of the colony, but primarily to the insecure and false basis of trade which had been brought about by the gold craze and the neglect of the more solid and enduring industries, and secondarily to the constant agitation kept up by a certain class of politicians. Though personally opposed to confederation, he seems to have acquiesced in the view that things have got to such a pass that there was no other way of salvation. Had he remained in the colony, there is no doubt but that he would have retired from his official position and taken up private practice, for in his letters from Sierra Leone in 1872 he frequently refers to the state of things in British Columbia, and says that he never could have endured to be mixed up with the petty political squabbles and agitations that were rife at that time. "It is possible," remarks his son, "that he was mistaken, for an equally good man lived through it and survived to be of use to this province." But it is evident that he was more at home in a colony with responsible but not representative government."

stance Jane (Mrs. Robert Gordon). Very shortly after the birth of the second child Mrs. Alston died very suddenly. The burial took place on the 4th of February, 1865. Among the chief mourners were Messrs. Pearce, Watson, A. Pemberton, R. Woods, Wootton, Jackson and Turner. Rev. Mr. Cridge officiated. Among the others present were Archdeacon Gilson, Messrs. Reese, Edwards, Bridgman, Burnaby, Drake, McCraith and many others. On the 6th February, 1867, Mr. Alston married Miss A. M. Tuzo, to whom reference has already been made. Mrs. Alston's notes are very interesting, and are in the nature of remarks upon a set of old photographs of Victoria taken in 1861-'67, which are indicated by the special headings following:

Christ Church.

The wooden church, erected, I think, in Governor Blachford's time, had a plain interior, white walls and painted pews. The governor's pew was a large square apartment with a table and cushioned seats, carpets and hassocks. In my time (1869) Governor Douglas and his daughters were regularly in the pew on Sunday mornings, with their visitors, if any. I sat there with them several times. There was always service in the morning, afternoon and evening, and Holy Communion on the first Sunday in the month after morning prayer and litany. There were free seats behind the governor's pew, and organ. The choir consisted of a few ladies and gentlemen who sat on either side, outside and near the rails. The singing consisted of hymns only. The first attempt at singing responses and psalms was made in the iron church (afterwards St. John's), when Mr. Gribbell was ordained and became assistant to Mr. Jones, at which time there was much practising among special few ladies, whereof I was one for a while. At Christmas a few green houghs were stuck about, and a year or two later spectuous object in the building, even when not occupied by Dean Cridge.

The Old Streets.

"Fort street, leading eastwards from the company's fort, could hardly be called a 'street' in '59, but in a few months it sprang into the semblance of one, especially at the tower end. It was at the upper end of this 'street' that E. G. Alston bought a house, in a piece of five acres, afterwards occupied by Sir Henry Crease. In the town end of the street the roadway was not yet made in '59, and there were great mud-holes everywhere. When the shops were put up a few wooden planks were raised on piles driven in the mud, later on pavements were made of boards. In the warm, dry weather the heat curled the planks and sprang the nails, and as one walked they rattled under foot and one was in constant danger of tripping up or of upsetting one's neighbor—no mean danger, for the roadway was far below. Of the shopkeepers of those early times I remember Jay & Co., who had a monopoly of the florist and seedmen's business in the colony, into which they imported diverse foreign plants, notably holly, which took them two years to grow from seed. Then there were Seaby & Moore, chemists; Hibben & Carswell, booksellers, and several others, who all did well and some of them became important people. Last, but not least, there was Mr. Harris, the owner of 'Liverpool Market,' who became the first mayor of Victoria.

The Bridge.

"The bridge crossing James Bay, but now done away with; together with the bay itself, enters a good deal into my remembrance of my first year in Victoria, when I was staying at the Mowat's and had to cross it frequently to get to the fort, where by brother (Dr. Tuzo) was living. Just before Christmas, in that year ('59) I was expecting the arrival of my mother from Canada, and not knowing exactly when the steamer would come in I started early thinking it a shame they were destroyed. There was surely room for the new buildings elsewhere, and these later, though undoubtedly handsome, are but an example of a very numerous type, whereas the old ones were alone of their kind, and ought to have been left to become historic monuments of the colony.

"On the southeast side of James Bay stood Governor Douglas's house and garden, separated from the water by a high fence and a path. Through the chinks in this fence Alice Douglas used to talk to her lover, a Mr. Good, her father's private secretary, and afterwards a government clerk.

"In 1859 Mr. George Cary, the attorney-general, arrived with his wife in the steamer preceding that which brought my brother and me. They were both young and she was very pretty, quiet and unassuming. They lived in a four-roomed cottage hastily run up not far from the town. There were no women to help, and Mrs. Cary was afraid of the Indians, and so they had to employ the services of a white man for the rough work. It was very lonely for her, with her husband away all day, and I kept her company for some weeks, a sort of thing I often did in those days, having as yet no home duties of my own. It was not unusual to find a lady waiting patiently alone for some friend to come in and put the finishing touches to her toilette when a dinner party was in prospect. Once when I was staying with the Cary's he had an altercation with a man and lost his temper. He was promptly locked up for the night before any friend knew of it. We were greatly alarmed at his absence and sat up all night waiting for him, but in the morning he was released and came home. After a year or so Mr. Cary built a house in the castellated style. It was only just finished when he was attacked with softening of the brain, and they were obliged to leave the colony.

"In these early days there were few rattling or fence with a narrow counter within it. At one side was a wide counter with narrow entrance to it, just wide enough to admit one Indian at a time; he showed his skins and furs, and examined the goods he wished to take in exchange, after having pointed out what he wanted. The Indian was a man of few words, and 'Chinook,' a jargon used by all tribes in their dealings with the company (made up somewhat on the principle of whom he does not seem to have been impressed at first sight."

On June 1st he left with a Mr. Elliott for Queenborough (afterwards New Westminster), a "blue-guard place," where he was laid up for some days in a canvas-covered shanty with a sprained knee; this, added to the poor outlook of things in general, made him very melancholy, and he had some thoughts of returning home by the next steamer. He had landed with about $150 in his pocket, and there seemed no possibility of a livelihood or any prospect of provision for a wife and home. However, the knee got better, and leaving Queenborough in the Beaver on June 10th, he returned to Victoria, where, in spite of all, he decided to remain, considering his accident in favor of Victoria as against the mainland. A little legal work came in, and he, therefore, "picked up a little pluck." He began to take interest in public affairs, and on July 2nd attended a land reform meeting, at which he was appointed secretary, and spoke.

The San Juan dispute was now beginning a controversy which was afterwards won, and as usual, decided entirely in favor of the United States. On July 27th the American force cooly landed, and on the 30th the British warships were sent thither. Although people talked "very big about war," a pacific modus vivendi was arrived at, and until the final settlement the island remained in the joint occupation of both parties. The Rev. A. E. Alston, his son, remembers on several occasions going there in the Enterprise to entertainments given by the garrison. Dr. Tuzo was appointed acting medical officer to the British-marines there.

After having lodged in various places, the hotel at Mr. Crosby's, Mr. Cary's, and in a shanty by himself (Waterbutt Hall), Mr. Alston now moves over to Mr. Crease's house, where he is "much more comfortable." But prospects are still cloudy, and he thinks seriously of going on to Singapore, having come to the conclusion that it will take years for this place to become sufficiently prosperous to support much law. Mr. Ring, another barrister, had a friend in Singapore, and was writing for information and letter of introduction. In spite of his poverty Mr. Alston was ever assisting his friends. Frequently such entries such as this come across: "Lent C. $1 dollar." On October 20th is noted the incident mentioned above (page 3): "Cary returned from B. C.

—Just how correct principles say it should be constructed?

—Just why no other plan of construction will do?

—Just wherein lies its ability to be easy on fuel, quick in action, simple in operation?

The story is briefly told in a little booklet called "Furnace Facts." It's not an advertisement. No furnace name is mentioned, and you can read the whole story in 5 minutes.

To the party contemplating purchasing a furnace it points out the traps and pitfalls, and shows exactly what to demand of an architect, contractor or dealer, in furnace construction and installation.

Canada at the Franco-British Exposition

By H. F. Pullen, of The Times Staff

HERE is no part of the White City, the Franco-British exhibition at Shepherd's Bush, London, which appeals to the average visitor like the Canadian pavilion. This is evidenced by the crowds which are to be seen there all the time and who press around some of they want to know. Combined with all this is a rare artistic adaptation which sets this pavilion apart from the others and draws the attention. As Colonel Hutchison, who has charge of it, explains to his critics when any appear: "It is an exhibit of farming set up by farmers, and meant to appeal to farmers—who are the people most needed in the country; the others don't matter."

made it possible to use the better in pictorial art to portray two events of great moment to our country. The first of these is the landing of Jacques Cartier at Quebec, when he was met by Chief Donnacona, the first important event in the history of the nation, her birth as it were, to the white people. The other is the latest important event, the meeting of King Edward and President Fallierier to celebrate the Anglo-French entente, the end of the hundreds of years of struggle between the French and British nations in which Canada has borne no mean part. The depicting of these scenes in the product of the farm might seem to indicate that in future the struggles between each country would vie with the other in the development of the resources of the great Dominion, forming a composite nation which will inherit the best traits of either of their forefathers.

Standing right in the centre of the pavilion is an immense hopper built of grain and indicating the greatest of Canada's industries. Each province is pouring its sack into this great hopper. The decorations throughout the building are in keeping with this same idea. Wheat is kind, and it is used everywhere in the mural and other decorations of the building.

Passing on down the centre, the passage is blocked by the crowds that gather around the large panoramic illustration at the opposite end. In the foreground are shown the animals and birds, suitably grouped and forming a very attractive advertisement of the game resources of the whole country. Then the boundless prairie stretches out behind with its herds of cattle, its fields of grain and prosperous homesteads. There is probably nothing in the whole exhibit which is so attractive and where people linger and look again.

Near the last-mentioned feature and occupying a large amount of space is the mineral display showing the resources of every part of the country from Vancouver Island to the island of Cape Breton. It is attractively arranged and to those that way inclined, is of great interest, but to the average person it does not appeal like the agricultural department.

the more attractive features to such an extent that it is with extreme difficulty often the visitor can push his way to a point where he can see things.

The exhibit is different, unique, and appealing. It has to do with real life. It tells of the land of promise to which so many Englishmen are looking, and lays before them the bare facts which

As one passes in at the main entrance the first feature that catches the attention is the large exhibit of dairy products, cheese, butter and bacon. The most striking of these is most certainly the butter. The whole of the dairy exhibit is placed in a huge glass refrigerator, kept cool by the efforts of a Canadian engine. These conditions have

When I explained their use to a Londoner he was much surprised, and could not realize that roofing tiles were not used anywhere in our country. The Canadian fruit, appealed very strongly to the Britisher, the chief ex-

The illustration at the back showed the apples being packed in barrels according to the Ontario plan, but it was very effective. This fruit exhibit was much admired, the last year's apples shown there being almost the only

STORY OF DORANDO'S GALLANT STRUGGLE

Uncrowned Winner of the Marathon

Most Pathetic Spectacle in the London Stadium

THE following descriptive of the great Marathon race at the Olympic games, is taken from the London Chronicle. At 2 o'clock an immense crowd was surging into the Stadium. At 3 o'clock the Stadium was full. That was an astonishing sight, especially to those who in the first week of the Olympic games had seen a desert of empty benches. Now every one of the 100,000 seats was taken, and many thousands of people were sitting on the stone slabs between the seats and on the gangways.

That was a wonderful spectacle, this vast amphitheatre crammed with people, half of whom, at least, were women in summer frocks. The sun streamed down upon them, and above the flags of all nations were fluttering on the sky-line. One gazed at the great assembly with something like awe, for there is always a sense of latent human passions and a certain infectiousness of emotion in a vast crowd.

But what was most astonishing here was the fact that these 100,000 people, or more, were waiting patiently for hours with a strained expectancy that was almost painful, which was, indeed, quite painful and exhausting as the great moment drew near, with nothing, or very little, to distract their attention. With that complete lack of organization which has been the unhappy characteristic of these games from the outset, there was hardly any event to interest and excite the spectators until the coming of the first runner in the great race which could not happen until after 5 o'clock.

These thousands of people had paid their money for seats, and what did they see? Some swimming races, which are never more than mildly exciting even to those near the tank, some pole-jumping of a second-class character, the best men having come out in the morning, some high diving, and at 4.20 a relay race which certainly for a few moments relieved the tension of waiting, when some of the fast American runners like Sheppard and Taylor, the every heart was thumping with a rather sickening thud, thud, everyone was moistening the lips which became dry and cracked, every pair of eyes was strained toward the northeast entrance where the megaphone man stood in his scarlet coat, and where a cluster of judges, attendants and policemen stood waiting and watching.

A good deal has been said about the wonderful system of signalling that was to be used in the Stadium to announce the progress of the race. Candor compels the confession that it was very feeble. When the reports were received two men scolded the laborer, one out in the arena and then marched round the track with the numbers of the leading runners on a white board. The next report was received at 3 o'clock, to the effect that Clarke, of Great Britain, and Burn, of Canada, were leading at the first mile. After another long wait the white board showed the numbers of Jack, Price and Duncan leading at four miles. Again we waited, and then the two men with the board marched round with the numbers of Lord, Price and Hefferon, after eight miles of the race. So on, as the quarters and half hours passed the white board moved round the track.

Appeal to Imagination. It was then that one realized the extraordinary and unique significance of the scene. Here were over 100,000 people watching nothing but a small wooden board with black figures paraded round a vast arena! One rubbed one's eyes at the wonder of it. Sometimes one felt inclined to laugh, but then something gripped one by the throat, and one had a kind of tight, choking sensation. For, after all, those figures meant much to the imagination of the great crowd. They meant steadily through the sunshine for twenty-six miles men were running, running towards this arena, with every muscle strained, with beating hearts and burning brains.

The figures meant that the English were leading and then dropping behind. They meant that a South African named Hefferon was coming up between and Aitken, of Australia, were following the leaders.

We waited how with eyes that became almost dazed by watching the entrance, and with a high tension that was almost unendurable. At 5.7 every one gave a start and shouted hoarsely at the sound of the dull boom of a gun. At 5.14 another gun was fired, and the sound was quite close. The first runner had reached the exhibition! Every spectator in the vast amphitheatre was now on his feet, straining forward with wild excitement. The megaphone man shouted out that Longshot had arrived—in a car! Once again we laughed, but only for a moment. A few moments later there was a sensation round the entrance way. Had the first man arrived? Even one

We could tell by his white shirt and red breeches. He was not running. It seemed that he had fallen at the entrance, and had picked himself up, or was picked up. He staggered on, helplessly, in a drunken way. His head was tied up with a handkerchief, and dopped from side to side. His arms were groping forward in a blind way. His legs seemed to give way under him. But he staggered forward, the judges and attendants running on either side of him. Irresistibly, with an enthusiasm that was exhausting, everyone in the great amphitheatre shouted and cheered and waved and stamped in a kind of mid-summer madness. Dorando had won! He was the hero of the Marathon race! He had run twenty-six and a half miles through the hot sun to a glorious victory!

A Cry of Horror.

Then, while one still cheered, something seemed to break in one's heart, as one gazed at that pitiable, broken, blind man, stumbling forward, raising his hands to his drooping head and to his ghastly face, and letting them fall again limply. The man seemed to be dying. It seemed as if he would drop dead at every step.

Then suddenly he fell, a huddled figure like a corpse. The great roar of cheering suddenly changed its tone, a cry of horror, pity, fear, came from every throat. Like Phedippides the fastest runner in all Greece, the winner of many races in the first Olympic games, who carried the news of victory to the Athenians, Dorando, the Italian, had fallen dead. So it seemed for a few moments while the judges and attendants gathered round and bent over him.

But no. The man had picked himself up, or was helped up. He stumbled on for a few paces, and again a mighty cheer rolled round the amphitheatre. But in a few paces he fell again. It was horrible. It was too cruel. One sickened at it. Once more, after a few moments he was again on his legs, but he was being helped along, almost carried by the judges. The poor wretch did not seem to hear the tumult around him. It was like a man at his last gasp, being shoved along to his own grave. He was down again for the third time.

People were now shouting rather hysterically, women were weeping and half-fainting. The strain on the nerves and heart was becoming terrible. The Italian, had fallen dead. So it seemed for a few moments while the judges and attendants gathered round and bent over him.

American Stagers In. It was three minutes since Dorando's entrance in the Stadium, and now another roar of excitement went up, for another man had arrived. It was Hayes the American and he too was staggering in a drunken way. But slowly he was coming forward with his head dangling, and the Americans were cheering him madly. It seemed as if he would pass the body of his fallen rival. But the Italian attendants were not win the Marathon, race, or any race. But Dorando's fight had been so gallant, so desperate, so defiant even—his death that when the Italian flag went up to the masthead there was no note of doubt in the tornado of cheering that paid homage to a man who, lying on the turf with doctors feeling for a beating heart, did not hear the thunder of that applause.

In the meanwhile Hayes, the American, had been closely followed into the Stadium by Hefferon, of South Africa, and these two men were staggering up to the winning post with a grim but tragic courage. Hefferon tried to mend his pace, and did so for a few yards, but Hayes was second man, and the South African came third, both falling into the arms of their friends.

Before this another man had come in. It was Forshaw, of the United States, and he was running gamely, and smiled as he passed the American block, where they roared at him in frantic enthusiasm. He was less exhausted than Hayes, his countryman, and finished well.

The fifth man reached the Stadium at 5.30. It was Welton, another American, and though he came round slowly he actually sprinted at the end and passed the winning posts at something like a pace. It was very gallant, very splendid.

Red Indian Arrives.

For over half an hour the great crowd waited, standing on the benches with their eyes still strained towards the narrow entrance, and it was half an hour more thrilling than many men have in a whole lifetime. One by one, with only a few minutes between each man, they kept coming home, fagged out, some of them looking half dead, some of them, however, with a spirit that seemed revived by the great ovations, so that they freshened up and ran with high heads.

At 5.32 a man came in with the blood-red maple leaf on his breast. It was Wood, of Canada. At 5.35 Fred Simpson, a Canadian Red Indian, slouched in with his head hanging and his teeth news he came that the second favorite, as was, had fainted on the course. Beale, of this country, and Goldsboro, of Canada, were the next, and there was actually a race between these two dead-tired men for position, the Canadian winning the place. So until past 6 o'clock the stragglers came in, and each man received the biggest ovation of his life.

But all the time one's thoughts were busy with Dorando, the gallant Italian and who had run even though he nearly died. An official report was issued to say that he had been seriously ill after his race, but that he was now out of danger.

That was good and cheery news. But could he be given the victory? An official protest had been lodged against him. Then the news was brought that the protest had been sustained, and that Dorando had been disqualified because of the assistance rendered him by the Olympic officials. Hayes, the American, is therefore the winner of the Marathon race.

No one will begrudge the victory to that brave American, but it is nevertheless a great and pitiable tragedy that the Italian will not enjoy the fruits of a struggle which will be of deathless renown and honor. In the popular mind Dorando is still the winner, for he entered the Stadium three minutes before the next man, and he broke the tape first with an almost lifeless body.

MOVING SKULL.

Sexton's Weird Experience in a Churchyard.

James Green, sexton and parish clerk at Horsted Keynes (Sussex), has had a strange experience.

While digging in the churchyard he noticed a skull protruding from the soil, and he took care to avoid disturbing it. As he went on digging, however, he thought he saw the skull repeatedly move. The incident so go on to his black man, showed their top speed for a few hundred yards. Between these events there were long intervals, and afterwards there was nothing whatever to do or see.

A Feverish Wait. But that was the marvel of it. It was a unique thing for such an enormous crowd to sit still for what seemed like hours waiting, waiting for what was going to happen. There was very little noise except the dull murmur of a conversation by 100,000 people. They just sat still in the sunshine, and if one could judge from one's own experience, the twelfth and eighteen mile. They meant that at nineteen miles he was still holding his ground, and that an Italian named Dorando was close at his heels. At the twentieth mile the leaders were Hefferon, of South Africa, Dorando, of Italy, and Hayes, of the United States, and those black figures on a white board showed that the English were being left behind. For the first time the Americans, who had been sitting very quiet, rose to their feet and cheered wildly. Then, at 5 o'clock, we learnt that Appleby, of Great Britain, had come, but he was carried in, and laid out on the turf. The cry went up that a man had dropped dead. Afterwards we learnt that it was one of the stragglers who had been picked up exhausted half-way through the race and brought home on a car. But then at 5.20 we could hear a dull roar of cheering outside. Then a great silence. A second later the judges rushed on to the track. A great yell came from thousands of throats. The first runner had come! But oh, how pitiable! In what a dreadful state! It was Dorando, the Italian.

Franco-British Exhibition—The Palace of Women's Work.

ghastly figure, but heroic even in spite of the horror of it all. He collapsed for the fifth time. He would never reach the tape. It seemed better that he should be allowed to lie, though it were to die.

But at last, at 5.30—that is ten minutes since his entry—he pitched forward over the tape, and a hundred thousand throats proclaimed him to be the victor of the Marathon race. Only a few were cool enough at that moment to shake their heads and say that a man who was carried to the tape could set, a strange and wonderful figure as he went grimly round the track. Lawson, of Canada, followed, and then Svanberg, the great Swedish runner, who finished with a really noble burst.

He was followed by the Red Indian Twemania, of the United States, and by Nieminen, of Sweden. Next came Cuffery, the Canadian, who sprang the last twenty yards, and then, when he had almost given up hope of seeing an English runner, W. T. Clarke, of Great Britain and Ireland. F. Lord was the next Englishman who came back, and we were astonished to see him, for the nerves that at last he put down his spade and watched. In a few moments the skull came completely through the earth and moved toward the sexton. Just as Mr. Green's astonishment reached its highest point the mystery was solved by a mole creeping out of the soil, in which it was subsequently discovered it had made its nest.

A Hungarian has invented a washing machine, which, with electrified water, will cleanse 30 garments in less than fifteen minutes without the aid of soap.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

WHEN GIANTS FALL.

The International Sunday School Lesson for August 9, "David and Goliath," 1 Sam. 17:1-51.

By William T. Ellis.

This is a bad year for giants. In fact, it looks as if the mortality among these sons of Anak would break records during the first generation of the twentieth century. Huge, vaulting, and seemingly invulnerable evils of heroic size and ancient lineage have gone tumbling before the onslaught of despised adversaries. Even the giant of monopolistic wealth seems tottering to his knees. The vested rights of mighty wrongs have been swept away with amazing rapidity. The simple-minded David of moral reform has borne the brunt of more than one Goliath of corruption to the inspection of sovereign right.

This old and deathless tale of the duel between the giant Philistine and the shepherd boy from Bethlehem has become one of the world's common figures of speech, to typify the conflict between wrongs that seem all-powerful, and justice that seems feeble. While the story is a true one, and its character is a noble one, and so to be studied, yet the contest serves its best present-day purpose in illustrating the principles which to an especial degree need emphasis at this special time.

The background of the incident is simple and dramatic. The Philistines had grown increasingly bold in their raids upon Israel. The madness that was settling over the latter's monarch had made the nation's nerve weak. The two armies had encamped on the steep hillsides of a valley, in plain sight of each other. The attacked party would have such an advantage, because of the climb up the slope, that the issue was not joined through several weeks. The short-range weapons of the time required fighting at close quarters.

In this state of affairs the Philistines proposed a battle by champions, a procedure common in ancient warfare, and not unknown down to comparatively modern times. Their representative was a giant, about nine feet tall, and fully clad in the habiliments of an expert warrior. For forty days in succession this Goliath came down into the valley, taunting the Israelites to send forth a warrior to do battle with him. The sun flashing from his brilliant armor, and from the head of his mighty spear, added weight to his boasts, and helped increase the terror of the Israelites, who had no man fit to face the champion. Saul could only have dashed the trial, but his royal spirit had been broken. Even courageous Jonathan seems not to have proffered himself.

All unnoticed, there came into the Israelite camp, with the springing gait of the mountaineer, a country youth bearing on his back a load of provisions. Had any one chanced to observe the young man he would have remarked his unusual comeliness, his animated eyes, and his fresh interest in the military life about him. But to the soldiers he was only one more messenger from back-country, bringing supplies to the beleaguered camp.

The youngest son of old Jesse, David, had been called from the care of the sheep to bear his father's solicitous inquiries, and his gifts of love, to the three eldest sons, who were enlisted in Saul's army. Nobody paid any particular attention to David, except his big brothers who welcomed him only for the gifts he brought; they seem to have been in Christian toward their young brother, but the way of many older sons since. Neither they nor anybody else, realized that the greatest event of that encampment was the entrance into it of that boy; if cities could but know when the real heroes enter their gates in the persons of "ignored" and "often ill-treated youths!"

the God of the Hebrews. There were plenty of news, who related to David the story of Israel's humiliation, at the lips of Goliath, and of her vain hope for a champion. While the giant's heavy tones echoed across the valley, the bragging of the Hebrew army was taunted and dazed by the taunts; others plainly showed their terror.

David was shocked. The scene penetrated to the depths of his spirit. To him it was fundamentally a matter of religion. These jibes and jeers of the enemy were an unendurable insult to the faith that had become very sacred to him, in his lonely meditations on the Bethlehem hillsides. So he could not restrain his wonder and hot indignation that an "uncircumcised Philistine," should thus "defy the armies of the living God." What he felt so deeply the youth, in youthful indiscretion, could not help speaking out openly.

Big brother Eliab did not like this. Possibly his own pusillanimity made him sensitive. At home he had been the hero and the brave man; therefore he did not relish the idea of having his small brother behold him skulking to the rear when champions were called for. So he rebuked the presumptuous stripling roundly, reminding him that his place was with the sheep. Bullied by Goliath, big Eliab "took it out" in bullying David.

Standing before the King. The young shepherd had no intention of being sent home in disgrace. From his first knowledge of Goliath he had doubtless been animated with the desire to have a try at him. Stout hearts never stop to measure inches. David had that intensely practical mind which no sooner sees a wrong than it attempts to right it. Although he had a hero's body, he possessed a hero's heart.

"His strength was as the strength of ten. Because his heart was pure." The genius for transforming his purposes into actualities belonged to David; he knew the art of linking up his good intentions to good deeds. He fully realized that his outspoken scorn of the Philistine, and apparent readiness to accept the gage of battle, would be carried to the king's ears. Would that all champions of right had a measure of David's common sense.

Ever long the ruddy youth stood unshaken in the king's presence. Questioned, he related how he had heard both lion and bear, when they threatened his flocks. His simple creed held no place for fear. "Jehovah delivered me," Saul saw that this youth was a hero mould. When a man sincerely talks as a partner of God, he is one to flee from or to join, according as one's own purposes are false or true. The great victories of life, through all the yesterdays of history, and in this present to-day, are won by high-hearted faith in the sure triumph of right.

Napoleon might sneer about God's-blessing on the side of the bravest battalions, but Napoleon died defeated and in prison and disgrace. The sense of being a worker together with God is the first essential qualification for success. Saul, eager to grasp any prospect of hope, was enamored of the dauntless David. He at once equipped him with his own royal armor, but the shepherd must fight his own foes in his own way. It has ever been the mistake of zealots to look upon their own particular reform and their own particular method as the one way to defeat the giant of evil. From David we learn better. Every one must come to success along his own line. One man may fight in armor, and another with stone and sling; let not the conventionalist despise the originator. David set out to the spectacular duel, equipped only with his shepherd's staff and scrip, holding five smooth stones, and his trusty sling.

The Scornful Giant. Little wonder that Goliath laughed, in scorn and in indignation. He gashed his teeth at the prospect of sending out this stripling to meet him. That was the giant's great blunder; he despised his enemy. While he boasted and blustered and cursed, his doom advanced quietly to meet him. The dignity of David's studied reply would have warned him, had his wit been equal to his inches. The calm certitude and particularly, if it were ominous, like the voice of a prophet. Beware of the man who fights calling on his God, and convinced that he represents the Lord. "Jehovah saveth not with the sword and spear," David reminded his big opponent.

Then the great young champion uttered the sentence which is the core of the story, and the secret of every victory for moral reform—the motto which should be inscribed on the banners of those who do battle for total abstinence, for a pure state, for clean cities, for childless factories, for godly schools, for a holy Sabbath, for the redress of the wrongs of the workman, for social purity, for world evangelization, and every other righteous cause. These are the words that interpret the defeat of all Goliaths: "For the battle is Jehovah's." The size and skill of the contending forces is relatively unimportant. The supreme question is, "Am I fighting on the Lord's side?"

A Victory and a Prize. As the giant heaved back his head in a gust of laughter—so runs the ancient comment—over the presumptuousness of this beardless youth, whose flesh he meant presently to give to the birds of the air, the sling of David whirled once, twice, thrice in the air, and then straight to his mark in the head uncovered by Goliath's gesture of disdain, went the pebble from the brook. The practice in marksmanship with which the lad had diverted himself on the hills had not been in vain; no equipment ever is that despised possible from a humble weapon, brought crashing to the dust the proud champion of Philistia.

At once both hills began to re-echo with the shout, "Goliath has fallen!" The two armies, startled by this unexpected issue of the duel, hurried only to see the unarmed boy go forward and cut off Goliath's head with the latter's own sword, before the rout began. Jehovah was vindicated. His glory had been revealed; for he had overcome the mighty by the weak. The shepherd's sling had been used to bring down the mailed warrior whom the world had counted invincible. One more of God's surprises.

As for David, he earned unexpected reward—the highest. For he won a friend. Jonathan, the king's son, looked upon him and loved him, and their souls became knit as one. The honors showered on the victor by Saul counted for little alongside of this boon of a friend. Then, as ever, the friendship formed when engaged in noble service, proved a life-long blessing.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES KEEPING THE TOOL FIT.

These Comments on the Uniform Prayer-meeting Topic of the Young People's Societies—Christian Endeavor, Baptist Young People's Union, Epworth League, etc.—for August 9, "Why and How to Be Healthy," 1 Cor. 6:13, 20.

By William T. Ellis. The best way to conserve one's health is to make sure that one's daily programme contains plenty of work, plenty of out-of-doors air, a goodly measure of play, and a simple trust in a loving Father. Then, as for the whole matter of health—forget it. Some folks make themselves ill by their overcare over their health.

The body is not the master of life, but the tool of life. It has its place, and that place is essentially as an instrument to obey the dictates of the will. A sound mind will insist on a sound body. Lack of reasonable care of one's health indicates a lack of perfect mental sanity.

The monastic interpretation of Paul's exhortation to "keep the body under," was to treat the body as if it were wholly an enemy and had no rights. Thus "the flesh" has come to be synonymous with all wickedness. The body assuredly should be kept under; its proper place is secondary and subordinate. Nevertheless, we now know that the welfare of the spirit is inextricably bound up with the welfare of the body. The two are, in a large sense, really one. So the person who is spiritually concerned about his spirit gets that spirit a pair of stout legs to walk upon, a pair of sound lungs to breathe with, a decently-kept stomach and a well-furnished brain. Religion and dyspepsia are mutually antipathetic. Normal religion should express itself in part by good health. To over-eat in the name of religion or to conserve one's physical well-being is actually to minister directly to a wholesome spirituality.

A few weeks ago I was permitted to look into the faces of five hundred college girls who attended upon the Student Young Woman's Christian Association conference at Silver Bay, New York. There was nothing about the gathering to suggest a nunnery, or the stereotyped, unthinking conception of Christianity. The young women typical American life lay in their eyes—wholesome, unpretentious, unartificial, sunny young womanhood. They entered into prayer-meetings with the same zest and naturalness with which they entered into athletic tournaments, or college frolics. The whole affair to me was novel; and I regarded it with a journalist's critical eye, yet I could not discover a trace of hysteria, sentimentality or anything else that might be classed by the most fastidious as "unwomanly." And it all advertised the religion of out-of-doors, the religion of good health; even, one might say, the religion of a dietician. In their splendid healthfulness those young women exhibited a type of saintliness that is very much more to modern taste than the ascetic spiritual female figures of the sacred art of a few centuries past.

It is more important to keep one's health than to make one's accustomed living. Anybody with courage and enterprise enough can give somewhere for very little money, and grow healthier while doing it; but whoever ruins his health in order to maintain a certain position and standard of living is inflicting a wicked burden upon himself, upon his family, and upon society.

The first contribution to the cause of patriotism is to give to the state a healthy body, equipped to fulfill the duties of a normal life.

As these words were written I set out of my window a small boy turning somersaults, forward and backward, down a terraced lawn, in the sheep-ubérance of good health and animal spirits. He is enjoying his muscles. Simple existence is to him such a delightful thing that he retreats at night by diving and jumping on to his bed, and wakes up in the morning to "skin the cat," or perform other feats on the person of the nearest relative who will share his frolics. Is it any wonder that he is sunny, merry, and magnetic, so that the whole world upon which he smiles, smiles back at him. The buoyancy of life should stay with persons until the end; instead, many of us are semi-invalids before we are well out of our teens. All because we do not regard sensibly the sacredness of the body which the Creator has given us as the tool with which to serve Him.

One who has travelled among the unclothed, or very slightly clad, natives of the tropics must pronounce the human form the most beautiful of all temples. In all the Orient I saw no temple to compare, in grace and seemliness, with the glancing naked bodies of a gang of street laborers in Singapore. The more we know of physiology, the more we admire the skill of the Architect who has built this most wondrous temple for His own indwelling.

When God wanted to show Himself at the best that it was possible for mortal understanding, He took the form of a healthy workman.

No doubt there is danger of making a fad of athletics. We may easily run to the excess of cultivating the purely muscular qualities of the body, at the expense of the intellectual and the spiritual. There are some communities where the people have run mad over sports; they have failed to maintain the balance of life and of relative values. To preserve a healthy body, and to enjoy one's self, it is not necessary to become an athlete. The means may never wisely be permitted to become the end.

Everything that one is or does depends upon the health of the body; to ignore this is to disregard the character of the foundation of one's house.

The preservation of one's health is a more sacred duty than the holding of one's job.

The man who takes time to keep well can always find time to do the other things that he ought to do.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR STOMACH

Take care of your stomach and your health will take care of itself. This is the golden rule of correct living. Your stomach is the factory of your body. It is there that the raw material we call food is prepared and made ready to be absorbed into your system and turned into blood, brain, bone and sinew. See to it then, and help it when it fails with Mother Seigel's Syrup, the great stomach healer, and you must be well. Mrs. David Martin, Beaver Brook, Albert Co., N.B., writing on January 10, 1908, says: "I have used Mother Seigel's Syrup for stomach troubles, and would not be without it on any account. I had much pain after eating, and often could not retain my food. It was thought my complaint was chronic, but the Syrup completely cured me."

SEVEN SENTENCE SERMONS

Honor and gentleness are not a dye or a laquer, but warp and wool.—Chas. W. Elliot.

Live as if He were, and you will soon come to find that He is.—Frances Willard.

Do all the good you can. By all the means you can. In all the ways you can. At all the places you can. And at all the times you can. To all the people you can. As long as ever you can.

Trust in Providence and your own efforts; never separate the two.—Dickens.

Christianity alone, of all human religions, possesses the power of keeping abreast with the advancing civilization of the world.—James Freeman Clarke.

To-morrow is with God alone. And mean hath but to-day.—Whittier.

It is a glorious thing to be called into the Kingdom at such a time as this—to have part in the work of spreading in the world the Kingdom of good-will, of bringing down to earth the city, in which there shall be no more curse and none to hurt or destroy; in which "all men's good" shall be "each man's rule."—Dr. Gladden.

AMERICAN DEMOCRACY.

Brooklyn Minister's Address to an English Audience.

Dr. N. Dwight Hillis, the present occupant of the late Dr. Ward Beecher's pulpit in Brooklyn, addressed the men's meeting at Whitefield's, London, recently. Speaking on democracy in America, he said many Englishmen seemed to have a low opinion of the moral condition of the people of the United States. But it was unfair to judge of the whole from a few rascally examples. On every apple tree there were one or two rotten apples. The American democracy was the outcome of seeds sown by the Puritan pilgrims, and their four watchwords were Liberty, opportunity, intelligence and integrity. These watchwords had been sown to four great institutions—the family, the public school, the ballot box, and ecclesiastical freedom. Americans believed that every child, whether he was the son of a banker or a washerwoman, should have the same facilities and opportunities of rising to the highest positions in the state. The Puritan fathers saw an opportunity. He objected in the strongest terms possible to the statement of a delegate to the Pan-Atlantic congress that American schools were Godless.

Not only were they not Godless, but they produced citizens of the finest character and the highest intelligence. There was a strong feeling in the States in favor of the best education possible, and to educate the people was admitted to be taxed for both elementary and secondary and higher education. It was not possible to run a democratic Republic with an illiterate and uneducated constituency. In the realm of religion they claimed freedom of thought, expression and modes of worship. The Sunday was kept free for the development of the intellectual, social and religious life. He predicted a future of great power for the States.

EUCARIST SAVED WHEN CHURCH BURNS

Oblate Fathers Are Heavy Losers in Recent Fire at Fernie.

New Westminster, Aug. 7.—The home of the Oblate Fathers of the Catholic church and two dwelling houses are all the habitable church buildings left standing in Fernie after the great fire, according to a letter which has been received by Bishop Duntzeville here from Father Tavernier who is in charge of the church work of the stricken city.

Father Tavernier relates some harrowing incidents of the holocaust through which the Fathers passed, the principal of which was the successful fight to save the Holy Eucharist from the church and the saving of their home, and during which Father Meisner was badly burned. The church and everything in it with the exception of the Eucharist was destroyed, the loss being about $6,000. The Fathers' home was saved only because it was a cement block building, and every structure around it was destroyed. The house was immediately given up by the Fathers to be used as a hospital and the eleven rooms in it are now filled with burned and injured residents.

Father W. J. Vancouver has gone to the assistance of the Fernie parish and has taken a large church tent for temporary use. A new church will be erected with as little delay as possible, and it will likely be of cement blocks.

BULKLEY VALLEY IS PICTURESQUE COUNTRY

G. T. P. Carrying Out Location Work—Big Game Plentiful.

Vancouver, Aug. 7.—A. Skelhorn, who is at present in the city, states that Bulkley Valley is booming. "A great many people are going in there," he said, "and I doubt whether any government land of good quality can be had by this time next year. Location work for the G. T. P. line is now being done in this valley, although actual construction may not be in progress for a couple of years yet. The line is being graded up the Skeena and as far as Kitcheikan, and in the rough region between Hazelton and Alghermere copper and galena mines are being opened up. The proposed railway between Kitcheikan and Kitimat at the head of Douglas Channel, and a distance of 45 miles, is under way, as far as the construction of the road-bed is concerned. A very good wagon road exists as far as Aldermere, and beyond that a snow trail exists. After leaving the summit of the Bulkley Valley hills, the St. Francis Lake region begins. Here is found the long and beautiful lake of St. Francis, and the agricultural possibilities of this district can hardly be overestimated. And after passing through Bulkley Valley you enter the Nechaco Valley, which is almost equally promising. The climate is ideal, the usual winter snowfall is 15 inches, and last season it came first on December 24th, and had disappeared by the 10th of March. The G. T. P. will run from Hazelton for 80 miles to the southeast, through a splendid agricultural country covered with light poplar and easily cleared, intercrossed with open fields, and established to the plot and that the land was suitable for cultivation. The offer was only briefly discussed when it was referred to the committee previously looking up the question of all sites."

G. T. P. OPENS THE PRINCE RUPERT INN

Company Opened Its New Hotel With a Ball and Reception.

Prince Rupert, Aug. 7.—The Prince Rupert Inn and Annex at the G. T. P. terminal city, was opened last night with a ball and reception. The event was a success by great festivities and a most pleasant time was spent with G. A. Sweet, the manager, recently appointed as host.

The Inn and Annex is owned by the G. T. P. and will be operated directly under their supervision. It is now open for business—either under the American or the European plan. The accommodation of the new house is all that can be asked for being furnished in first class shape and heated by steam throughout. The hotel is planned and furnished, with the object in view of giving the guest a homelike air. The rates are suited to the accommodation desired, provision being made for the very best of trade.

The Times Nature Club

It is surprising how numerous birds are in London. That house sparrows abound goes without saying, but that thrushes and blackbirds should choose that part of the country for a home is rather a surprising fact. During the past week which I spent, writes the nature editor, at Putney in the southwest of London, the birds were very much in evidence. Bread and milk or other food would be left on the lawn for the cats, usually more than they could eat. Immediately they had gone the birds would gather round. The sparrows were the most daring, coming again and again and carrying off large pieces of bread. Thrushes, blackbirds, and starlings also came, sometimes in large numbers and shared the feast. On several occasions over twenty birds were counted around the dish at one time.

Most of these birds breed right in the city. At the house I was staying half a dozen blackbirds and thrushes' nests were found in the garden, a city lot about seventy feet by one hundred. One of the thrushes built her nest in a hawthorn tree over the front fence more than ten feet from the ground. She was not discovered by the people of the house until she had hatched her brood, and she was allowed to continue her work until the young were old enough to take care of themselves.

The chief danger to birds in a large city is when they leave the nest before they are able to fly. When passing up Richmond road in the city of London a few days ago with my brother, a young song thrush fluttered across the street. It could not fly much, its wings and tail not being fully grown. We caught it and put it over the fence into a shrubby garden where doubtless it was safe enough, unless a cat happened to find it.

Wild Nature.

I suppose everyone has noticed that a cat which is perfectly meek and ordinarily would not touch a bird, becomes quite savage when it is taken into the house. At that season the old wild nature asserts itself and the mother feels in duty bound to instruct the babies in the mysteries of hunting, so that, should occasion require they may get their own living. An instance of this has just come to hand where one of the cats whose food the birds are in the habit of taking has allowed them to do this for some time. While I was there, however, her kittens were just growing up and being weaned. On two occasions this old cat brought in birds, which she had killed for them. One of these was a young song thrush and the other a house sparrow. At any other time the birds could have come with impunity and she would have taken no notice of them.

Sky-larks.

In looking for Canadian birds I was much disappointed. There were very few to be seen. Among the finches there was no example of the black-headed grosbeak, the purple finch, or the pine grosbeak, and all the other families were similarly unrepresented. The same thing applied to mammals. There were a good many specimens from the Yukon and from other parts of Canada, but few having British Columbia named as their habitat.

At the Zoo.

A visit to the zoo was a hurried one and uneventful. The animals there are very tame and always on the look-out for food. Even the baby elephant, although he could not reach the people with his trunk to beg for food, would raise his proboscis in the air and open his mouth for the visitors to throw the winter, and every year since they have travelled up the Thames as far as the metropolis and partaken of the hospitality of the residents.

Natural History Museum.

The Natural History Museum at Kensington is noted the world over so that anything I might say would be superfluous. It is important, however, to pass without comment the fine display of British birds and their nests which are set in separate cases illustrating the natural positions of the nest. The foliage and setting was so wonderfully natural that I immediately set out to investigate. I located the bird room, the private library and offices of the ornithological department, but was told by a policeman that I should probably not be allowed in. I found, however, that there was no barrier against a Victorian and I had a very interesting quarter of an hour's chat with Dr. Sharpe who was in charge. From him I learned that there were but two people in the world who could set up nests like those in the museum. These two were ladies and New York had bought one of them. I also learned that the nests were not imaginary or even typical ones, but were genuine and had been taken with all their surroundings in imperishable materials.

Overcrowded.

Another interesting fact was brought to notice, and that was that in spite of the immense size of the building it was becoming so crowded that it was extremely difficult to find room for new specimens. In fact, Dr. Sharpe said, there were some ten thousand which had been recently contributed which were not opened yet.

Canadian Birds.

In looking for Canadian birds I was much disappointed. There were very few to be seen. Among the finches there was no example of the black-headed grosbeak, the purple finch, or the pine grosbeak, and all the other families were similarly unrepresented. The same thing applied to mammals. There were a good many specimens from the Yukon and from other parts of Canada, but few having British Columbia named as their habitat.

food in. This must have been a matter of education learned from watching his mother.

The squirrels at the zoo are very tame. I mean those that live in the gardens. They have their liberty but they come within a foot or two of the visitors begging for nuts.

Plant or Animal

A correspondent asks what is the difference between an animal and a plant. This is a much more difficult question to answer than appears at first. The sponges are animals yet they look like plants, where they cling to the rocks. Some plants have the power of locomotion and seem much more like animals than the sponges. Perhaps the best distinction is in the matter of breathing. The animal uses the oxygen from the air it inhales and exhales carbonic acid gas. The plant on the other hand inhales the carbonic acid gas and gives off the oxygen, thus counteracting the action of the animal.

Another distinction is the plant gets most of its sustenance from the air, while the animal gets its food from the plant.

There is a popular fallacy that the plant certainly takes something from the ground; perhaps one per cent of its whole bulk, the other ninety-nine per cent coming from the air which it eats. That one per cent, which comes from the ground is necessary, however, in order to enable the plant to eat the air.

Birth Notice.

On May 20th, 1908, the first Rocky Mountain goat ever bred in captivity was born in the New York Zoological park. Its parents were brought from British Columbia by Director Hornaday in November, 1905, with three other specimens. All five were born in May, 1908, and were captured in the mountains north of Fort Steele.

The kid now in the public eye was born at 2 a.m. At 3.10 it arose to its feet; by 3.30 it was jumping about the stall and climbing upon its mother's back as she lay upon the straw. It nursed for the first time at 3.20. Two days after birth it was 12 1/2 inches high at the shoulders and weighed 7 1/2 lbs. Of course its pelage is pure white, and, like nearly all young hooved animals, its eyes now are practically black. It is very strong and capable and seems to take a hopeful view of life. It is a male and has been christened "Philly" for reasons that every goat-hunter will understand.

EE A MOTHER'S EE

HAPPY THOUGHT.

A lady writing from Ireland says—"I used to see my sister's baby, who was very ill indeed. She had been up for nights with him without sleeping. He was crying all the time as with some internal pain. The doctor told her he could do nothing except put him in a warm bath, which gave him a little ease for the time being."

"I thought of STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS which I used for my own children, and next day I sent some to my sister, when she gave the child half a powder according to directions. For the first time for some fortnight the baby and, in fact, all the household, had a good night's sleep, and the little fellow has continued to improve ever since."

These powders do not contain poison, but are purely medicinal, and they act gently on the bowels, thus relieving feverish heat and preventing fits, convulsions, etc.

Please notice that the name STEEDMAN is always spelt with EE.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Homestead Regulations.

Any even numbered section of Dominion land in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces, excepting 3 and 24, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person (male or female) of full age, or by a family of 16 years of age to the extent of one-quarter section of the area, more or less.

Application for homestead entry must be made in person by the applicant at the office of the local Agent of Sub-Agent. Entry by proxy may, however, be made on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

An application for inspection of a vacant section of land may be made personally at any Sub-Agent's office or by letter to the local agent by the applicant, and if the land applied for is vacant on receipt of the telegram, the applicant must have priority and the land will be held until the necessary papers to complete the transaction are received by the local agent. The entry will be summarily cancelled and the applicant will forfeit all priority of claim.

An application for inspection must be made in person. The applicant must be eligible for homestead entry, and only one application for inspection will be received from an individual until that application has been disposed of.

A homesteader whose entry is in good standing and not liable to cancellation may be subject to approval of Department, relinquish it in favor of father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister, if eligible, but to no one else, on filing declaration of abandonment.

Where an entry is summarily cancelled, or voluntarily abandoned, subsequent to institution of cancellation proceedings, the applicant for inspection will be entitled to prior right of entry.

Applicants for inspection must state in what particular the homesteader is in default, and a notice is required to perfect the conditions under one of the following plans:

- (1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for the term of three years.
- (2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) has a parcel of land entered for by such homesteader the requirements of this section may be satisfied by the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirement may be satisfied by residence upon such land.
- (3) Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST MINING REGULATIONS.

COAL—Coal mining rights may be leased for a period of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 per acre. Not more than 100 acres may be leased to one individual or company. A royalty at the rate of five cents per ton shall be collected on the marketable coal mined.

QUARTZ—A person eighteen years of age or over, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 100 x 100 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $1. At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid to the recorder upon having a survey made, and upon complying with other requirements, purchase of the land at $1 per acre is allowable.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2 1/2 per cent on the sales of placer mining claims, generally are 100 feet square; only fee $5. Renewable yearly.

An applicant may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each, for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior. The lease shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2 1/2 per cent, collected on the output of gold.
