SPECIAL NOTICE.
Our regular Spring trade commences about March 15th, and previous to that date we propose to close out several lines of garments carried over from last Fall, and in order to insure the sale of every article before that time, we shall mark the same 25 per cent. less than can be manufactured for today.

We mention some Styles and Prices.
IN OUR MEN'S DEPARTMENT We have consolidated some fifteen or twenty styles of All-Wool Coats and Vests to match, and which originally belonged to suits which were sold by us last Fall at $15.00, $18.00, $20.00, and $22.00.
We have placed the same upon our tables and marked them a uniform price of Five Dollars for Coat and Vest.

COAT $4.00. VEST $1.00 As the last Fall's price of these garments was more than double the present price, one may see at a glance that this is a wonderful bargain.

We shall also offer a line of Heavy Durable Pantaloon AT $1.40 PER PAIR.
A lower price than has been named on similar goods since the war.

300 DOZEN
White & Fancy Shirts.
The white ones being all linen bosoms, and the fancy ones being made of French muslin, the same as all fancy shirts. The retail price of these shirts on the street today is from $2.00 to $3.00.
We offer ours, to close at, 75 CENTS EACH.

The sizes are 13, 13-1/2, 14, 14-1/2 only.
In our Boys' and Youths' Department We shall offer two hundred suits for Boys; age, 1 to 10 years, and just the thing for school wear. Generally sold at $3.00 to $4.00.

We shall offer this line of goods at $2.00 and $2.50 PER SUIT.
We ask a critical examination of the above-mentioned garments.

SEWING MACHINES,
THE CHEAPEST AND BEST,
No Canvassers Employed,
But the large Cash-merchants usually put agents allowed to Canvassers who purchase for Cash at our

THE NEW COMER.
I will tell you a story of "Dogtrout, Pat," Who, early one fine summer morning, Dressed in warm velvet and seedy plug hat, Passed by where my boyhood had dwelt, He'd his wife, and young Pat, and we Mary and John.

and John.
They looked fresh as the dew they were walking upon—
Each cheek was as red as a cherry.

On the wooded hill-side was a spot facing south, Where some one had started a clearing, And 'twas there, near a spring, which my neck stung.

The stranger his homestead was rearing,
With a towering rock for the wall on the west,
The hill for the northern exposure, With some freshly hewn tree trunks, and slabs laid across,

On a mild morning cool, Pat: the basement he stepped.
"Himself and the rest, I read above her;
But the coat was as good for all that he knewed;
As any beneath the roof's cover."

All the children were gathered 'round in a lot, Reached but by a quarter of a mile.
There was many a one who at that time would have scuffed.

Whose home life, if richer, was sadder, On long summer days I found pleasure supreme In wandering off to the clearing: Like all children I relished wild berries and cream, Unlike some, I found the place cheering.

Who'd found a flourishing village—Was it magic that struck a strange fantasy wrong?
That fitted a rock hill forillage?

No! 'twas "Dogtrout, Pat," with his wife and his boys (And others of "distant relation," Who had changed the old wood into houses and shores.)

And given a new town to the nation, The boy's muscle and brain which they brought to our shore,
For schooling are giving repayment; Though too many there who the truth will ignore.

Not cleared for months.
Not since last fall, the unfortunate residents say, has there been a shovelful removed, and they have grown so accustomed to the sight of these miniature mountain ranges on either side of the street that they have come to regard them as a matter of course.

THE THREE WARNINGS.
It was in the days of our grandmothers, when there were brick ovens in the land, that Mr. Hubbard bought his house; and bought it very much against his wife's will. It was a lonely house, and reported to be haunted. It was next to a graveyard, which, though unpleasant, was not cheerful, and which had likewise the reputation of a ghost house. However Mr. Hubbard did not believe in ghosts, and was too cheerful to be depressed by warnings, and never intended to be lonely.

"Mrs. Hubbard," he said, when his wife shook her head over the purchase,
"I got it cheap, and it is a good one.
You will like it when you get there. If you don't, why then, sell it." So the house was bought, and into it the Hubbard family went. There was scarcely a chance for a ghost to show his face amid such a family of boys and girls. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard counted ten of them, all noisy ones.

Having once expostulated and spoken out her mind as to the house, Mrs. Hubbard put up the point. She scrubbed and scoured, tacked down carpets and put up curtains, and owned the place was pretty. As not a ghost appeared for a week, she made up her mind that there were no such inhabitants; she even began to mind the tombstones.
So the house got to rights at last, and baking day came about. In the press of business, they had a great deal of baker's bread, and were tired of it.

Mrs. Hubbard never enjoyed setting a batch of bread to rise as she did that which was to be eaten for the first time in the new house. "For I cannot get up an appetite for stuff that nobody knows who has had the making of," said Mrs. Hubbard, "and all puffy and almy beside."

So into the oven went the bread, and it came at the proper time, even and brown and beautiful as loaves could be.
Mrs. Hubbard turned them up, on their sides as she does them, and they stood in her skill and the excellence of the oven, when Tommy Hubbard (he was then six years old) was four; and when at that age we are prone to believe that anything will bear our weight, Tommy, therefore, anxious to inspect the newly made bread, swung himself off his feet by clutching the edge of the bread-tray, and over it came, loaves and Tommy and all.

Mrs. Hubbard flew to the rescue and picked up the loaves. All were dusted and put in the tray again but one.
That lay bottom upward on the table.

"A boiling child, to give so much trouble!" she said, as she "Ah—dear, dear, dear—O—O my—"
And there on the floor sat Mrs. Hubbard, screaming, wringing her hands and shaking her head. The children screamed in concert. Mr. Hubbard rushed in from the garden where he was at work.

"What's the matter, mother?" he gasped. Mrs. Hubbard pointed to the bottom of the loaf lying in her lap.
"Look there, and tell me what it is!"
"It is a warning, William! I am going to be taken from them all!"
And he looked, and he saw a death'shead and crossbones, as plainly exposed as they possibly could be.

"It is an accident," said Mr. Hubbard.
"Such queer cranks do come, you know."
But Mrs. Hubbard was in a troubled state of mind, as was but natural. "The stories about the haunted house were true," she said; "and the spirits have marked the loaf. I am afraid it is a warning." And the loaf was put aside, for even Mr. Hubbard did not dare to eat any of it.

Mrs. Hubbard got over her fright at last, but the news of the awfully marked loaf spread through R—and the people came to Mr. Hubbard's all the week to look at it. It was a death's head and crossbones; certainly; every one saw that at a glance, but as to its meaning, people differed. Some believed that it was a warning of approaching death; some thought that the spirits wanted to frighten the Hubbards away, and get possession of the house.
This latter again, all to themselves. This latter supposition inspired Mrs. Hubbard with courage; finally being a brave woman, she adopted the belief, and when another loaf was baked, put her loaves into the oven once more, prepared for cross-bones, and that when another loaf came out brown and crusty as before. They came out each in her hands.
There were no cross-bones visible, but on the last were sundry characters or letters. What, no one could tell, until they dropped in for a chat at a certain printer of the neighborhood accustomed to reading things backward.

"By George," said he, "that is curious—resurgant; that is what is on the loaf—resurgant!"

"Well, yes," said Mr. Hubbard, being obliged to admit it. "But it is not so bad as cross-bones and skull." Mrs. Hubbard shook her head. "It's even solumer," said the little woman, who was not so good a linguist as bread-maker. "I feel confident, William, and what will these dear children do then?"

And now that the second loaf was before her eyes, marked even more awfully than the first, Mrs. Hubbard grew really pale and thin, and lost her cheerfulness. "I have a presentiment," she whispered to her husband, "that the warning will decide who the warning belongs to. I believe it is meant for me, and time will show. Don't you see how thin I am growing?" And though Mr. Hubbard laughed, he also began to be troubled. The third baking day was one of gloom. Solemnly as at a funeral, the family assembled to assist in the drawing. Five loaves came out markless; but one remained.

Mrs. Hubbard's hand trembled; but she drew it forth; she laid it on the tray; she turned it softly about; on it she exposed the lower surface. On it were letters printed backward, plain enough to read this time, and arranged thus:

"Died April 2d, lamented by her large family."
"It is me," cried Mrs. Hubbard. "I to go to-morrow. This is the last. I to feel faint. Yes, I do. It is awful, and so sudden." And Mrs. Hubbard fainted away in the arms of the most fearful of men and husbands.

The children screamed, the cat mewed, the dog barked. The oldest boy ran for the doctor. People doctored to the Hubbards. The loaf was examined.
Yes, there was Mrs. Hubbard's warning—her call to quit this world.

She lay in her bed, bidding good-by to her family and friends, her strength going fast. She read her Bible, and tried not to grieve too much. The doctor shook his head. The clergyman prayed with her. Nobly doubted that her end was at hand, for people were very superstitious in those days.

They had been up all night with good Mrs. Hubbard, and dawn was breaking, and with it she was sure that she must go; when, clattering over the road and up to the door came a horse, and on the horse came a man, who alighted. He rattled the knocker and rushed in.
There was no stopping him. Up the stairs he went to Mrs. Hubbard's room and bolted into it. Every one stared at him as he took off his hat.

"Parling," said he, breathlessly, "I heard Mrs. Hubbard was a-dying—and she'd warned me of her leaving. I came over to explain. You see I was of the church here a few years ago, and I know all about it. You needn't die of fear just yet, Mrs. Hubbard, for it nether spirits nor devils about; nor yet warnings. What marks the loaves is old Mrs. Finkle's tombstone. I took it for an oven-bread, seeing there were no survivors, and bricks were dear.
The last folks before you didn't have them printed off on their loaves, because they used time; and we got used to the marks ourselves. Cross-bones and skulls we put up with, and never thought of caring for the resurgant. So you see how it is, and I'm sorry you've been scared."

Nobody said a word. The minister shut his book. The doctor walked to the window. There was a deadly silence. Mrs. Hubbard sat up in bed.
"William!" said she to her husband,
"the first thing you do, get a new table to that oven." And the tone assured the assemblage of anxious friends that Mrs. Hubbard was not going to die just yet.

Indeed she came down the very next day. And when the oven had been reconstructed, the first thing she did was to give invitations for a large table-drinking, on which occasion the loaves came out right.

A BLUE GLASS EPISODE.
One of the families of Broad street has a daughter nineteen years old, and of an attractive form and face. Her eyes are very black and very thin lips indicate that she is a person of considerable spirit. For the last six months she has had company. The company is a well-to-do mechanic, very much devoted to her as she is devoted to him—During the extraordinary spell of dumppness which opened the past week she was seriously troubled by a return of a rheumatic attack, in whose withering embrace she had struggled for the past year. Her father being a progressive man, easily fell into the blue glass theory, and fitted up a window in the sitting-room with this article for her convenience. Last Thursday afternoon the father and mother being away she availed herself of the opportunity to invite her young mechanic up to tea.
To be sure of his getting there in time for the meal (five o'clock) she told him to come an hour earlier. He cheerfully promised to do so. Thursday was the first day of sunshine in the week.
The sun was very bright. It was an opportunity to apply the blue glass which could not very well be lost. So the young lady worked briskly all the morning at the baking, and at two o'clock she passed under the glass for an hour. The rheumatism was in her back, and she uncovered the affected spot for the admission of the light—While she sat there absorbing health, and beautiful thoughts of the tea hour with her lover, an evil spirit was afloat in the air with a package of woe under its arm for her. Her brother, aged seventeen, lounging on the main street, was detected by the spirit in the air and closely followed. As he lounged he met and passed numerous people on various missions lent, but he saw not the spirit hovering in the air above his head, but the spirit saw him, and watched him intently. Coming along by the post-office just as a sprucely attired young man was coming out, his brother looked up and recognized his sister's lover. They shook hands most cordially. Then the spirit descended and disappeared in the boy and immediately thereafter the boy invited his sister's lover to go up to the house at once, which he said would be just as well as to wait 'till four o'clock, and time will show.

A view that made such a favorable impression upon the lover that he fell in with it at once, and they both went up to the house. And there she sat men-ing and doctored, her face reflecting the quiet hopeful happiness dwelling within her heart. And as she sat there musing the lover and the brother, and the evil spirit, moved steadily forward. Nearer and nearer they drew toward her, yet she had no thought of it; not the faintest thought until a quick step sounded on the stoop and she heard the dreadful danger came upon her—She uttered a cry and sprang from the chair, with a wild look about the room for a place of escape. The open door to the china closet caught her eye, and without an instant's reflection she dashed in there and closed the door upon her. It was not a very large apartment, and offered no facilities whatever for the toilet, but the key happened, fortunately, to be on the inside of the door, so the place afforded security if not comfort. She was no sooner settled than steps entered the sitting-room, and the voice of her brother sounded, followed immediately by that of her lover. The poor girl came very near to fainting dead away.
With fastidious intensity she listened to every sound. Why had he come so early. How long would he stay. As she thought that he might have possibly come to spend the afternoon, it seemed as if her senses would leave her.
Her brother who had left to search for her now returned with the information that he could not find her, but believed that she had gone out to the neighbors, and would be back presently.

"She'll be awfully surprised to see you when she comes in," he added.
She thought she would.
And so the two sat there and talked about one thing and another, until after the clock struck four. Still she did not come. Then the prolonged absence of his lady made him nervous and uneasy. He found his thoughts going after her every moment. Glad-some expectation had now given away to oppressive speculation. He found that he was beginning to doubt her love. Was this a cruel trick upon him?
Was she really heartless? Had she changed her mind toward him? Was this done to purposely avoid him? These questions first hovered along in the horizon of his mind, and then dashed across the space to disappear as quickly as they came, only to return again, and
as they came, only to return again. Finally she disappeared no more but kept up on his mind, whirling about so rapidly as to cover the entire space. He was as wretched. When the clock struck five, the hour at which he had pictured himself at her side cooking his tea with his heart aflame, not a vestige of her appearance was observable. Then he gave up the last hope, and in a paroxysm of agony he went so far as to even meditate on suicide. A sensation of tightness filled his head and a sinking attacked the pit of his stomach.— And she in the closet crouching close to the door, also heard the tea hour strike, and softly sobbed in the wretchedness of her feelings. Half-past five approached, and then the lover gave up all hope, and declared he must go. He tried to conceal the bitterness in his soul, but it was a forced effort

CHARLES SUMNER.

[On seeing his Statue in the Studio of ANNA WHITNEY, in Boston.]

BY MARIA WESTON CHAPMAN.

He sat—a thoughtful sorrow on his face, For he had said the words that summon fate To execute the purposes of hate; Strong words of evocation, that a race Crushed in the bonds that limb and soul deface, Slightly blessing from the scurge and chain, Tortured while yet forbidden to complain,— Might joy in freedom as their dwelling-place. Now sits he waiting—strong in easy grace, Unknowing in what shape his fate shall fall, Lone and self-centered. Here, in the stately pace Of the assassin echoes in the hall! Honor, all honor to the sculptor's power, Whose head and hand and heart commemorate that hour.

REMINISCENCES.

A Weymouth Book. The fall title of a work in our possession is as follows: "Six sermons on divers subjects, preached at Weymouth, Mass., by James Blake, A. B., late of Dorchester."

Job 14, 2: "He cometh forth as a flower, and is cut down; he flourisheth also as a shadow and continueth not."

PROVERBS 14, 13: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." Boston, N. E., printed by A. Kneeland, next to the Treasurer's office in Milk Street, for J. Edwards, in Corn Hill, MDCCCLXXII.

The preface says these sermons "were condensed and preached at Weymouth, by James Blake, A. M., of Dorchester—a young gentleman—and therefore it may be acceptable to the readers to present a short biography of their author. He was admitted into Harvard College in the 15th year of his age; was greatly esteemed, &c., &c.; Bachelor of Arts, 1799; from thence went to Weymouth and discharged the office of school-master to general satisfaction; afterwards studied Divinity under Rev. Mr. Smith. The latter being sick, Mr. Blake supplied his place until he recovered. Mr. Blake continued to preach every Sabbath until he died. He persevered in the ways of well doing till he was 21 years old, wanting one month, (which was the 17th of Nov., 1771,) when, after a short illness, he died."

Samuel Badlam died in Weymouth, Oct. 7, 1874, aged 73. His ancestors were of good family, the best in Weymouth.

William Badlam married Mary, daughter of Stephen French, Jr., about 1690.—They had children, William, 1693; Mary, 1696; married Ben. Shaw, 1729; Samuel, 1699; and Stephen, 1696.

Samuel Badlam born 1699, married Mary, daughter of Nicholas Phillips, about 1715; had Mary, 1717, married William Billings, Jr., of Stoughton, 1741; Samuel, 1720; Hannah, 1723; William, 1725; Sarah, 1727; Deborah, 1730, married Capt. James Ford, 1750; Stephen, 1734; he died 1761, aged 71. Stephen, son of William, born 1699, married Elizabeth Billings, of Dorchester, 1710. He removed to Dedham. Clapp's Genealogy says of Stephen, of Dedham: "His grandfathers were Stephen, Bedlow, Capt. of a ship; married a French, of Weymouth; was lost at sea. A son was born and the Town Clerk got the name Badlam, and so they let it go Badlam instead of Bedlow?"

Samuel Badlam, Jr., son of Samuel (2) born 1729; died 1787, aged 67; married Unity Morse, of Stoughton, 1741, who died 1818, aged 88. The last Samuel, who died Oct. 7, was I believe great grandson of Samuel (3).

Commonwealth of Massachusetts, BY HIS EXCELLENCY ALEXANDER H. RICE, GOVERNOR: A PROCLAMATION FOR A DAY OF Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer.

In Trustful and devout recognition of the Divine Providence, I hereby appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Council, THIS Tenth DAY, THE TWELFTH DAY OF APRIL NEXT, to be observed as a DAY OF FASTING, HUMILIATION, AND PRAYER to ALMIGHTY GOD, for the forgiveness of our sins, and for His blessing in all the vicissitudes of life.

In the spirit of supplication, let the people of the Commonwealth, after the manner of their fathers, assemble on that day in their accustomed places of public worship, and ask for those heavenly gifts without which human effort is made in vain.

Let us pray for peace on earth and good will among men; that the strife which has separated our countrymen may be hushed, and that the nation may be strengthened in unity and patriotism; that the state may be blessed in its institutions, its industries and its homes; let us seek for wisdom and honesty in government, and for uprightness, temperance and godliness among our people; for the bounties of the earth in their season; for help for the needy, comfort for the sick, and consolation for the sorrowful; for faith undoubting, for love unfeigned, and for the peace which passeth understanding.

Given at the Council Chamber, in Boston, this ninth day of March, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Eight hundred and Seventy-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the One Hundred and First.

ALEXANDER H. RICE, By His Excellency the Governor, with the Advice of the Council.

HENRY B. PIERCE, Secretary.

God Save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Oh what becomes!" said Chloe fair, "Of all the pins that for my hair I drop unheeded on the floor, And never miss or see them more?"

"My dear," said Darwin, "they all go into our mother earth below; There their development begins, And ending they are terra-pina."

-- At a London Police court, a costermonger has been fined £5, with an alternative of two months' imprisonment, for selling rotten coconuts, containing (instead of milk) chalk and water. The "eyes" had been taken out, and the chalk and water put in, the eyes being then filled up with clay.

THE OLD CHURCH.

As for the church—one glance at it, without or within, would have been the death of Ruskin. Gothic had evidently been Greek to its architect. The building itself was large and square, the windows and doors small and the main passage ran the wrong way, and a mahogany-colored gallery was supported on birch pillars. The pulpit, with its sounding board, reached nearly to the ceiling. Under it was the preacher's box. And still lower, yet much elevated above the church, was a raised inclosure for the "table-seats." Opposite the pulpit, the "table-seats," used for sacramental occasions, ran the whole length, or rather breadth, of the church. Raised pews, with hangings of divers colors, distributed here and there. At first, there had been but one of these—that appropriated to the minister's family. But, in the process of time, an aristocratic druggist, the great man of the congregation, had had his pew elevated and his dignity brought into bold relief by a fiery background. Then a well-to-do grocer, who had risen from small beginnings and was appropriately ardent, had imitated the druggist; and the carpenter, having his hand in, had imitated the grocer. Lastly, "wee Johnnie," the dwarf, who was garden-general to Glenarran, had had his pew in the back part of the gallery raised and lunged; and there he sat, Sunday after Sunday, his great head the only part visible, looking like a huge gargoyles. The congregation had laughed in their sleeves at the grocer, and openly expressed their indignation at the carpenter; but about the dwarf, they felt there was nothing to be said; only, after that, no more pews were hung.

Foreign and Domestic Goods, and keeps constantly on hand a fine assortment of what will come out of it? Is our religious condition as a community such as can warrant the holding of such a relation to this great and blessed movement? Is our condition as a Christian community such that we "need no physician?" Let us see. There are ninety per cent of our evangelical churches in the community struggling to maintain a bare existence; and what is the proportion between the numbers which regularly attend the services of our churches, and the numbers who do not? The disproportion is calculated to alarm any one that feels an interest in the future of the church. The character of those who do not attend the regular services of our churches does not, by any means, mark them as the dregs or the "off-scouring" of society. They are men and women of social position and of great intelligence, and would be an ornament to any society; and yet we do not find them inside our churches. What is the reason of this? Simply, that our churches do not influence them; they have ceased to be attractive to them. Who is to blame? Who and what are they, who sometimes assume to talk and lead at our "prayer and conference meetings"? Are they men of intelligence, and moderately informed? Far from it. If the "blind lead the blind," is it to be wondered at if both "fall into the ditch"? Assuredly, if the church is to continue as a centre of power, and potent for good among others, she must, in the methods and general character of her teachings, have that which will attract into her communion the best members of our communities—their proper and natural position. Their association with the past, their connection with the present, and their interest in the future, all suggest to their minds the rationale of such a position, and naturally impel them towards it. If, then, they are not found within her pale, the church is clearly responsible for their unbelief and a pure heart."

AN APRIL FOOL.
BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.
Oh! silly Violet!
To think that Spring was tapping at your latch!
Her fingers smell of flowers. Did you not know?
Her pretty voice is like the rain on thatch—The tinkling rain, with never a wind to blow it Incantations Violet!
You sprang from out your bed in such a hurry, Tied on your cap and laced your kerchief blue, Opened the door, all bright with joyful light,
And there stood naughty March, awaiting you!

Msquid Violet!
Mischievous March, who loves to fool and tease, To tickle flowers with hands all chilly-fingered, Nip them and pinch, and make them shiver and sneeze,
And wish that they in the warm earth had lingered!

Msquid Violet!
The moment that you were standing there, He sneezed and pulled and tumbled you out,
Out of the door, into the frosty air,
And "April Fool!" he cried with laugh and shout.

Dear little Violet!
The tears are standing in her deep blue eyes.
Next time my pretty one must be more wary, Keep fast her door, he still, refuse to rise, And wait the summons of the April fairy.

THE STRATEGY.
Lamoile Claremont kept his heart wrapped in a napkin.
A very large and a very thick napkin.
And he kept it, besides, hidden in a remarkably secret spot, nobody knew where. A great many people had looked for it in a great many places; but only one person had had so much as a glimpse of it.

This person had one skittered stone, and sailed chips freighted with pebbles on the pond with him. A little later in life they had fished for pickered together, and spelled each other down in the long lines of boys and girls at the red school-house under the hill.
But for several years they had hardly met, and in this time John Handford had turned into a well-preserved householder, with a regular orchard of olive-plants about him, while Lamoile Claremont had not so much as a tame mouse by way of family life.

What is the reason your friend La-moile Claremont didn't marry?" said Mrs. Handford, time and again. "I have given him both my advice and my example, but he is blind to the one and deaf to the other."
"I do not understand it," returned Mrs. Handford, who was a bit metaphysical, and felt obliged to go to the root of every matter. "He seems like a man of very domestic tastes. Has he ever had any love affair?"

"He hasn't, that I know of. I have seen plenty of girls who have had concerning him, at one time and another, but he has never seemed especially interested in the matter," answered Mr.
Handford upon one of those times when he was a good deal engrossed in mending a toy-pump for his youngest boy, who stood watching him with an eager face.

"Here Willy, here it is, all right," he added, tossing down the pump, and tossing up the boy. At the same time tossing his old friend entirely out of his thoughts; for on the heart of a friend who is parent of a child.
But, as it happened, Mrs. Handford, not having a case of measles or immediate attention, musing upon the unsatisfactory problem of his life all day at intervals.

"Such a waste!" she meditated.
"There are so many girls who need a home, a husband, and love. I don't know really but he is guilty of neglect of duty as well as neglect of opportunity. Now, there is Kate Landon. She ought to be married; she would make the nicest kind of a wife, and she hasn't a very pleasant home. If I could only bring them together!"

"But dear me! Little Mrs. Handford might as well have thought of bringing the Southern Cross to shine beside the Polar Star.
"Where is Lamoile Claremont now?" she asked her husband that evening.
"We haven't seen him in a long time."
"He is at Boston for aught I know.
He was book-keeper in that same papermill where he has been for so long—the last I heard from him. He seems to have got over his wanderings and settled down, and I suppose he is making money. He owns a good deal of stock in the mill, and paper has been very profitable, though it seems to be a little down now."

"Do you ever write?" queried Mrs.
Handford.
"Well, no, not often. Why?"
"Nothing," replied the lady, not minded to take the cover of her brooch it had begun to boil. "Only you used to think so much of each other it seems a pity not to keep up at least a correspondence."
"That is so," returned Mr. Hand-ford, who was very ready to see when his wife held a candle. "I will write him a letter to-night." Which accordingly he did, and La-moile replying at once cordially, Mrs.
Handford felt that kind had begun to go.

"Why don't you ask Claremont to come and make us a visit?" suggested Mrs. Handford at last.
"Oh, he is coming next week.
Didn't I tell you? Yes, I had a letter from him last night. Going to be the wedding," returned Mr. Hand-ford.

"Well, I am glad of it," replied his wife, secretly proceeding to examine and set her traps, which was not an easy bit of work, her hair being as shy as her game.
"Kate has the least hint of what I am thinking I can't get her within a hundred miles; and if I invite her up to spend the day when Claremont is here, it will look suspicious, I suppose. Let me think—oh! a picnic! an impromptu picnic to the beach! That will do. I will get it up all of a sudden the day Claremont comes. Oh yes!" she said to herself, jumping off the sofa and running to the brine-barrel to see how many cold boiled tongues she could furnish forth.

THE WYOMING WOMEN INTERESTED AT THE NEWS & LIFE.

BY THE SEA.

I sat upon the volcanic rock. The breeze the dark, enveloping rain, and heard the tanning echo's ring.

I saw the restless tide run out, and leave the yellow sands in view. Where the wild sea-fowl hoarsely shout, and the returning waves, pursue.

The sunbeams, dancing o'er the wave, seemed like the vivid lightning's blaze; the sky, its own deep azure gave, and the broad sea flung back the rays.

No sound but the soft-breathing air, and these few murmuring notes that sea. Beside in upon my musings there, my thoughts, as that soft air, were free.

That ocean, was time's boundary, — Those rocks, the stern decrees of fate, — That ebbing tide, life's prophetic state. — Those yellow sands, its changeful fate.

Those sunbeams were the pleasant dreams which came in troops from day to day; in that blue sky were future gleams, while here spoke in each sparkling ray.

CLARET NASH.

A YANKEE RAILWAY IN SWITZERLAND.

YANKEE inventions in the railway line appear to be appreciated in Switzerland. The road up the high, granite five years ago, was modified after the one on Mount Washington, and it has been so successful that a second line has been built, ascending the mountain on the other side.

Swiss tourists will soon enjoy the advantage of being able to travel from Interlaken to Heinwischli by a railway hitherto unknown in Europe. The federal government has sanctioned the construction of this line, which is called by its American name the "central rail," and as the engineering and all other works necessary to start it are of a specially simple and inexpensive order, it will not be long before there are trains running up its steep inclines.

The aspect of the new railway will be decidedly novel, and if possible, even less picturesque than the ordinary lines. The permanent way, if it may be so called, consists of a single line of steel, mounted at the apex of a sort of triangular staging, the sides of which slope gradually downwards, and are supported by slanting beams or sleepers resting either on the ground or on vertical supports. The driving wheel of the engine runs upon the line which forms the ridge of this species of prolonged roofing, while its other wheels and those of the carriages travel along the sloped sides on either hand.

The discovery that a person under the influence of the rays of light that pass through blue glass will never acquire the disease known as scurvy, has led to the discovery of quinine and castor oil. Indeed, the discovery seems to reach into the province of surgery, poetry and politics.

Several landladies in boarding houses have laid in a great number of blue glass cups, with a view of making their coffee taste as well as genuine Mocha. There is no end to the uses to which blue glass may be put. Mr. Bowles, the domestic economist of the Springfield Republican, has invented a blue glass hen, which hatches out the chickens while the author of the eggs goes on with her daily toil; and a gardener in New Jersey has had all his hotbeds paved with blue, so that when he plants beets they come up asparagus.

The new discovery is not merely a humble one. To be sure, watches with blue crystals keep better time than others, and a man with a blue glass eye can see many miles further than any other man; but we see no reason why whole suits of clothes should not be made of this healthy material. At a fancy dress ball a young lady in a blue glass robe would never feel the fatigues of dissipation. Even our streets might be paved with blue glass so that horses would never grow weary or snow accumulate or omnibuses rattle.

Interference is a curse which abounds in every land, and in every nation. Look at the drunkard and his pitiful state; look at the young wife that is made desolate, all her bright dreams of future happiness crushed by the downy fall of her husband; see the children ruined and disgraced and cast into the lowest of degradation forever, by the vice of that father, with no luxuries, no education, nothing but misery, toil and trouble, and all caused by the demon of intemperance, and say, then, that intemperance is not a curse. Then look at the man that never drinks; see his mainly bearing, indicative of a noble intellect; look at his children, educated to a certain degree, and his family happy, with all the enjoyments that life can afford. Cannot some of those who persist in saying that to take a glass of liquor is no harm, see a difference in this brief illustration?

AMERICAN BARBERS ON A STUDY TOUR TO EUROPE.

In accordance with Dr. Ebell's plan for "study tours" to Europe for young ladies, five ladies from all parts of the county, left New York on board the Prisia, of the Hamburg steamship line, last week.

The pupils proceed directly to Berlin, where they study until June 3d, when the summer vacation begins. On Saturday, June 30, they leave for Dresden, seeing its sights in carriages for three days, and on Tuesday, July 3, they travel through Saxony, Switzerland and Prague. After visiting the cathedrals and palaces of Prague they journey along the banks of the Danube to Vienna. After spending three days amid the gayeties of the German Paris they go through the romantic Sommering Pass to Adelsberg, where they inspect the great cave, illuminated for the occasion with 18,000 burners, besides several magnificent lights, producing an effect indescribably grand.

Then along the shores of the Adriatic to Venice, whose antiquities are visited in open gondolas for four days, one day in Venetia, two in Milan and thence to Lake Como. The ladies take boat for Lugano, on the lake of that name; then go from Lugano to Varese by carriages to the shores of Lake Maggiore, and thence by steambot the length of the lake to Baveno; from Baveno by carriages through the Simplon Pass, spending the night on the summit of the pass, the Hospice Simplon; from Simplon along the winding mountain road, over bridges, through galleries and tunnels and under waterfalls, down into the Rhone Valley, by the Rhone to Martigny, in small motor cars up the zigzag mountain path overlooking the Rhone Valley to the valley of Chamounix, by Mont Blanc and the valley are spent in excursions in the valley, where Miss Winslow will make an appropriate opportunity of visiting the "Val de Chamounix." Illustrated lectures on the geology of Switzerland and the structure and action of glaciers will be given to the class during these travels. Then through the mountain gorges, with teams of over fifty horses, to Lake Geneva; two days in Geneva, the length of lake Geneva by steambot to Montreaux and to the Castle of Chillon, to Bern, Luzerne, and by the cog-wheel railroad, overlooking the most wonderfully grand landscapes of mountain chains, valleys, lakes and villages, to the summit of the Regli Kugi; a season of rest in Luzerne, and so on to Baden-Baden, Heidelberg, Frankfurt, along the Rhine to Cologne, then to Brussels, Paris (to which eight days will be devoted), London, Melrose, Edinburgh and Glasgow, whence some of the pupils, who only make the partial tour, embark for New York on the 1st of September, while the others return to Berlin to their regular studies in the academy.

The next division of the spring class of this roving seminary will embark on April 12 on the Hamburg line steamship Geliert.

ROCKLAND.

A party of High School scholars paid a visit to Nantasket on the afternoon of Saturday the 31st ult. They were taken there in a large carriage and remained until Monday afternoon.

CHURCH MEETING.

The annual meeting of the First Congregational Church will be held in the vestry of this church on the evening of the 2nd and 3rd inst.

REMOVAL.

Mr. R. B. Turner has purchased the building on Centre Avenue, formerly occupied by Austin Vaughn as a boot and shoe store, where she will soon move her stock of millinery goods.

A fair was held at the Universalist vestry Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 28th and 29th ult. The first night the attendance was small, but on the second the house was crowded. The Operetta, "The Midshipman," in five acts, was finely rendered. Excellent music was furnished by Miss Nellie Peirce, piano, Mr. J. Q. Beal, violin, and Mr. William Bowles, cornet. A glee cake, fish pond, and several articles to be drawn by ticket, were among the attractions of the evening. About $150 were realized by the society.

Prize Meeting. An Easter prize service was given at the Cong'l vestry Thursday evening, 1st inst. The audience, which was a large one, sang with spirit and evident enjoyment. Miss Alma Faunce presided at the piano, accompanied by other instruments. The exercises opened with the hymn, "What a friend we have in Jesus." Prayer was offered by Mr. Z. N. Whitmarsh and the fifteenth chapter of 1st Corinthians read by Rev. Mr. Freeman, followed by the "Easter Anthem." The singing of "Hallelujah, his donee," "The half was never told," "Knocking, knocking, who is there?" "Hallelujah, He is risen!" and other "Gospel Hymns," interspersed with prayer and appropriate remarks, occupied the time.

THE WATERMILL.
Listen to the watermill through the living day, How the clinking of its wheels wears the hours away, Languidly the autumn wind stirs the green-wood leaves;
From the fields the reapers sing, binding up the sheaves;
And a proverb haunts my mind as a spell that is cast—
The mill cannot grind with the water that is past.
Autumn winds receive no more leaves that once are shed,
And the rickled straw flows on once gathered;
And the sickle stream flows on, tranquil, deep and still,
Never gliding back again to the watermill.
Truly speaks the proverb, and with a meaning vast,
The mill cannot grind with the water that is past.
Take the lesson to thyself, loving heart, and true; Golden years are fleeting by, youth is passing too; Learn to make the most of life, lose no happy day; Time will never bring thee back chances swept away.
Leave no tender word unsaid, love while love shall last—
Work while yet the daylight shines, man of strength and soul,
Never does the streamlet glide useless by the mill; Wait not till tomorrow's sun beams upon thy way,
All that thou canst call thine own lies in thy today.
Power, health, intellect, may not always last,
The mill cannot grind with the water that is past.
Oh! the wasted hours of life that are drifted by;
Oh! the good that might have been, lost without a sigh.
Love that we might once have saved by a single word, Thoughts unconceived, but never penned, perishing unheard.
Take the proverb to thy heart, take and hold it fast.

DORA'S TRIAL.
"I do wish," said Mrs. Prudence Hall, holding her darning-needle in mid-air for a moment over the coarse blue sock she was mending—"I do wish you could see your way clear to marrying Miss Hallett. He wants you the worse kind, and he'd be such a good provider."
"But I don't like him well enough, and I want something besides meat and drink and two calves dresses a year." Mrs. Prudence Hall had sprained her ankle, and was forced, sorely against her will, to sit, day after day, in an upper chamber, with a terrible consciousness that every thing about the farm was relapsing into "chaos and night" for want of her oversight.
Her pretty sister Dora had come to stay with her, but she was "only a child, you know."
"There are two kinds of love in this world," said Mrs. Hall, after a pause, in which she had been taking counsel with herself whether Dora were old enough to be talked to on such matters at all, and it flashed upon her that "the child" was nearly twenty years old.
"Perhaps you like Seth well enough to marry him, only you don't know it."
"Tell me about the two kinds," said Dora, innocently.
"I have never known but one kind, I think. When I married David he was the most well-to-do young man in these parts, and we never had a quarrel while he lived. He was a good practical sort of a man, and never asked me to do any thing unreasonable."
"What if he had?" asked Dora.
"Well, I guess I should have argued him out of it. But there is a kind of love that will draw women through fire and water. It makes them throw themselves away on poor, shiftless men that will never provide for them nor their children, and they know it as well as anybody else does. It is the greatest wonder to me why such a feeling should ever have been created." And Mrs. Prudence gave herself up to a rare moment of abstraction.
Dora had bent low over her work to hide her roguish smiles at her sister's discourse, but she fixed her deep gray eyes on Prudence at this point, not smiling, but simply earnest.
"Such love brings happiness sometimes, I suppose," said Dora.
"Next to never," said Prudence, recovering her wonted decision with a jerk. "We ain't made to be happy, and any thing that's too good always leaves a bad taste in the mouth."
"Come, Dora, it is in the hand, and you don't gain anything by letting it fly on the chance of happiness."
"Did you ever know any one about here, Prudence, that threw herself away for love? It seems to me they won't look at a man unless he has a house and farm ready for them."
"That's where they're right," said Prudence. "You are given to high notions, and it's time you found out that I did not grow ready buttered." Yes, I had known one girl about my age, who was pretty, and smart, and had no end of chances to get married (I think David counted her), but he never would own it), and she would have shiftered critter, Joe Raymond, who never could make one hand wash the other. Even when she was a-dying she pretended that she had been happy, and wouldn't have done no other way if she had it to do over again."
"Was she our Joe's mother?" said Dora, quickly.
"Yes, to be sure, and when she died we took him to bring up, and work on the farm. He's more than paid his way, but he's a rolling stone like his father, and won't never come to anything. I forgot to tell you—he's going tomorrow."
"Going to-morrow!" said Dora, with a great start; "I thought his time wasn't out for another month?"
"Well, it ain't out rightly till the day he's twenty-one, but he was in such a hurry to be off that I gave him the last month."

Two women had the same father and mother, though a score of years lay between them. Prudence had been born in the early married life of her parents, when they were struggling with a hard-earned New England farm, and there was work for even baby hands.
The lines of duty and patience are deeply graven in her rugged face, which yet beamed with a kindly comeliness. But Dora had come to her mother late in life, as an old tree sometimes blossoms into loveliness after every one has forgotten it. Her little feet had walked in easy paths, and Prudence yearned over her like a mother. She sat now by the open fire, bending her graceful head over some delicate work that Prudence would never have found time for; her red dress and the flickering fire-light made her a picture too lovely for that dull room.
"Prudence," she said, suddenly, "as this is Joe's last night, I think I'll go down and say good-night to him."
"You might call him up here."
"No; I think I haven't ever told you, Dora, how much you pleased me by giving up that childish way of going on with him that you used to have. It did very well for you to be fond of each other when you were children, but of course it is out of the question now."
It might have been the red dress and the fire-light that brought a vivid flush to Dora's cheek as she listened and turned away.
She ran lightly down stairs and opened the door of the great farm-kitchen. A young man sat by the dull fire, looking into it as one looks into the eyes of an enemy before the fight; an overgrown farm-boy in home-made clothes, with nothing about him to fall in love with, least of all for the brilliant little figure that waited for him to look up; but he was too intent with his own thoughts. She went swiftly across the room, and taking his hand between her soft hands, turned his face up to hers.
"Joe, had boy, were you going away without letting me know?"
"The hard lines of his face softened and brightened under her gaze till one would not have known him for the same man."
"I thought I should not see you tonight," he said.
"You know better; you know I would have crept through the keyhole for one last little minute with you."
He sat her quietly on his knee, as if it were her usual place.
"How long will you wait for me, Dora?"
"Till you come back."
"If it were seven years, think how long it would be."
"If you love me as you make believe," said Dora, "you would not go away at all, but work here till you could build a little house, and then we would rough it together."
"No, little Dora, that isn't my kind of love; my mother tried that, and she lived a slave's life. I will go away somewhere—I don't care where—and when I can give you as good a home as you have always had."
"Dora! Dora!" called Prudence from up the stairs, "what on earth are you doing down there?"
"I must go now, I must, truly," said Dora, as she felt herself locked in an embrace that would not let her go—"If I live without you for seven years I shall be a homely old maid, and you will not thank me for waiting for you."
He put her away then and looked at her curiously, as if he had never thought of her looks before.
"Do you know what your name means?" he said earnestly. "I saw it in the paper that Theodora means 'Gift of God,' and you have been that to me. If I had never seen you I should never have had a notion about a day's work and a night's sleep. It isn't your looks I love, but you do look very pretty—Perhaps it is the red dress."
"Thank you," said Dora, with a smile trembling through tears.
"I will write when I have any luck," said Joe, "and come home on New-Year's Eve when I do come; and if you wear this red dress I shall know you have waited for me."
"I think I shall live to wear it whenever you do come home, if it be seven time seven years, Joe, for women are hard to kill."
With another long embrace they parted, and Dora went to her sister's room. What have you been doing all this time?" said Prudence severely.
"I was only giving Joe some good advice."
"Well, I hope he'll profit by it."
"So do I," said Dora, heartily.
"So easy to say seven years as one; and we read of Jacob's seven years' service for Rachel, which seemed but as one day for the love that he bore her."
Rachel's feelings are not thought worthy to be mentioned in Holy Writ; but if her love was like Dora's, every day seemed seven years. And here, in a nut-shell, lies the difference between man's love and woman's.
Jacob had the sheep to mind, and he did mind them uncommonly well; Joe went to seek his fortune in new scenes, and only thought of Dora when he had nothing else to do. The poet thought he had set a hard task to men when he said:
"Learn to labor and to wait," but it is immeasurably harder to be idle and to wait.
Till her lover went away, Dora never

What's the matter? said Prudence; "you are as white as a sheet." Dora's only answer was to dart out of the house, and run as for her life down the orchard path, by which she could gain upon and overtake this terrible old man. She might have said, with "holy Herbert,"
"My thoughts are all a case of knives, Wounding my heart." With several smart, only misery must have time to crystallize into a memory before it takes the form of poetry. She stood before the old man bareheaded and breathless.
"How did the Joe Raymond look that you lived with?"
"I never said Joe Raymond," said the old man, peevishly; "I said Jim Raymond. They had a boy named Joe, who—" But Dora was off again before he could finish his sentence. She ran through the orchard again, giving thanks with all her heart that she had not suffered herself to be persuaded of Joe's faithlessness on one hearing. Her feeling of grateful awe, as if she had escaped from sudden death, kept her from mourning much over the passing of this seventh anniversary of Joe's departure, with no sign of his return.
His letters had wholly ceased, and there was nothing left for Dora but to possess her soul with patience. When another new year dawned upon her she put on the old red dress, more from habit than from any gleam of hope in her heart, and did not care to look in her glass.
In the twilight she walked slowly down the orchard path, and leaned on the gate that opened into the road; Suddenly a man sprang up from behind the wall.
"Theodora, my Gift of God!" he said; and Dora, though she recognized the mark of the lover who had left her eight years before, felt that no other knew that past-ward, and suffered herself to rest silently in his arms, in the ineffable rest that only comes after long waiting.
When Joe and Dora went into the house, and she looked at him by candle-light, her heart almost misgave her; his luxuriant beard, and the many assurances of his manner, were not at all like her Joe of beloved memory; and a terrible barrier seemed to rise up between them while Prudence remained in the room with her company manners, which she had more awkwardly upon her than her Sunday gown.
When Dora walked softly by her sister's room at a very late hour that night Prudence was lying awake for her.
"Don't tell me," she said, "that you've been waiting for Joe Raymond all this time."
"Not if you don't want to hear it," said Dora.
"Did he tell you whether he came home any better off than he went away?"
"I really haven't thought to ask him."
Prudence groaned, and turned her face to the wall.
Joe waited only till the next day to tell Mrs. Hall the story of his success, which looked very moderate in his traveled eyes, but seemed a noble fortune in her lonely ideas.
"I never thought before," said Dora, father at the wedding, "that a woman could keep a secret, and I guess it ain't much more common than snow in dog-days."
"How long would you have waited for me?" whispered Joe.
"Forever," said Dora, solemnly. And Mrs. Prudence, as she overheard the word, thanked her stars that Dora's impractical notions had not wrecked her at last on a poverty-stricken marriage.

HOW TO EXPLODE A LAMP.
The Scientific American gives some of the circumstances which lead to the explosion of kerosene lamps, the philosophy of all of them being that the flame may pass down the wick and ignite the vapor which accumulates in the upper portion of the lamp. This vapor is not explosive, as the term is ordinarily understood; but when it is confined so that the gasses resulting from its combustion cannot escape freely into the open air the vessel containing it will be shattered. This ignition of the vapor may be brought about as follows:
1. A lamp may be standing on a table or mantel, and a slight puff of air from the open window or door may cause an explosion.
2. A lamp may be taken up quickly from a table or mantel and instantly explode.
3. A lamp is taken out into the entry, where there is a draft, or out of doors, and an explosion ensues.
4. A lighted lamp is taken up a flight of stairs, or is raised quickly to place it on the mantel, resulting in an explosion. In these cases the mischief is done by the air movement—either by suddenly checking the draft or forcing air down the chimney against the flame.
5. Blowing down the chimney to extinguish the light is a frequent cause of explosion.
6. Lamp explosions have been caused by using a chimney broken off at the top, or one that has a piece broken out whereby the draft is variable and the flame unstable.
7. Sometimes a thoughtless person puts a small wick into a larger burner, thus leaving considerable space above the edges of the wick, and an explosion is the consequence.
Spriggins says that he once prevented a severe case of hydrophobia by simply getting on a high fence and waiting there till the dog had gone by.

—All men are not honest, but some men are honest less than others.

he cared to ask herself whether she were a child or a woman. Sunshine had been plenty with her, and she had castly sugared and gilded the plain things that farm-life offered to her.
Before the first year came to an end she felt that she should soon arrive at a patriarchal age, if she did not do something to kill the time, which died so hard on her hands.
"Teach school, I guess not," said her father, when she first broached her plan to him. "You ain't starvin' yet, and if you want some new furbelows you just say so, and not come at it slanting-ways like that."
"I don't want any thing, father, but there is so little for me to do at home."
"In my time girls was always full of business. Can't you make some sheets and pillow-cases, and get ready to be married?" "Who knows but somebody'll ask you one of these days?"
"I'd rather teach school, father."
"Wah, wah, folks can't always have their 'I's' rather in this world—I ain't willin' and that's the end o' it."
But that was not "the end o' it," and Dora easily obtained a school. She developed a governing talent which charmed the committee, and the congenial labor in the company of little children took her out of herself, and infused new life into her hope deferred.
Every week she walked to the post-office, three miles away, for a letter, going in with a bright flush in either cheek and coming out pale and dull-eyed after the stab of disappointment.
I wonder that people in the country are so anxious to be postmasters; if they only knew it, they are actors in more tragedies than any member of a theatrical stock-company. Much sealed happiness passes through their hands, but they have to refuse many a "Mariana in the Moated Grange"—weary women, who reach a hand out of their dull lives for a letter and draw it back empty.
It was far into the second year before Joe's first letter came. It was surely a fanciful and foolish thing for a school-mistress to do, that Dora carried it to her own little room and put on the dress that Joe liked so well before she read Joe's letter. She had not read it in the woods lest a bird should look over her shoulder and carry the news.
Joe was working in the mines in Colorado. His luck had not yet come, in nuggets at least, but hard work and sober living were slowly giving him an advantage over the other miners. He was never so well, and he loved her better than all the world.
Dora lived upon this letter for many weeks, and she set "Colorado" for a copy so often for her scholars that they would write that word better than any other to their dying day.
Letters came oftener as years drew on; sometimes Joe was up in the world, sometimes down; once his carefully hoarded gold was stolen from him, and he had to begin all over again; but this was nothing to a long illness, in which a friend wrote to Dora as soon as Joe was out of danger. Then Dora envied the doves their wings.
New-Year's Day was the hardest of all the year. She could not help a strong pressure of excitement when she put on the red dress, which grew more and more old-fashioned, and watched the sun go down on the road which Joe must travel when he should come home. The next morning she fitted her shoulders sadly to the burden of another year.
One young farmer after another found his way to the old farm-house on Sunday evenings, and Dora pushed them down an inclined plane of discouragement so gently that they scarcely knew whether they had really courted her or not, and slid easily into the coils of more willing maidens, with no hard feelings toward Dora. It was not the least of her trials to meet the entreaties of her mother and the rough arguments of her father when one or two more persistent suitors would take nothing less than no for their answer.
To be an old maid in the country is justly regarded as a fate worthy of pity; in the city, with plenty of company and amusement, it has come to be almost an even question whether a woman hath not chosen the better part of life in remaining single blessed.
Dora could give no reason for repeated refusals to marry, only she loved no one well enough—a reason which would be all-sufficient if parents were immortal young, but it loses weight after sixty.
As the seventh year drew to an end Dora's heart beat light within her. Joe had mentioned it seven years as if he meant to come home then, at any rate. She wore out the first day of the "glad new year" with busy cares, till late in the afternoon, when an old man, spent with much walking, stopped to rest himself in the farmhouse kitchen. Prudence hurried herself to give him a hearty luncheon, and when he was warmed and fed he began to talk of his travels. He had been to seek his fortune all over the West, and never finding it, had come back to die at home. He mentioned Colorado and Denver, and when Dora found herself alone with him for a moment she said:
"Did you ever see Joseph Raymond in Denver?"
"Joe Raymond? Oh yes! knew him well—lived with him high on a month. His wife was a real good cook—couldn't be beat nowhere."
"You say he was married?"
"To be sure; a right smart feller, and mighty fond of his wife. Women are scarce out there." Prudence came in, and the old man went on his way, all unconscious of the great stone he had cast into the still waters of Dora's heart.

Fire Department.
At the meeting of the committee on a Fire Department for the town of Weymouth, held last Monday evening, Mr. C. E. Bicknell, of the sub-committee appointed to ascertain the cost of engines and apparatus, reported that Edw. B. Lovrich, of New York, had offered to furnish three second-hand engines, in perfect order, decorated in any style desired, three hook and ladder carriages with ladders and buckets, and 1000 feet of hose, for $2500.

Weymouth.
We will furnish three hand engines of the "Hummel" pattern, having suction, nozzle, strainer, folding ladders, drag ropes, buckets, pipes and nozzles, brass hub lamp caps on the wheels, good sized wheels, tongue and drag rope, eye-bolts and rollers, and all other necessary body, air and vacuum chamber, tool box, two wheel hose carriage, and all complete, including all rollers, and all other necessary material in most perfect working order, delivered in Weymouth, price $2500 each, including hose carriage.

Weymouth.
I will furnish two hook and ladder trucks similar to that shown in the enclosed photograph, excepting that the two side ladders will be mounted separately and rest flat on rollers instead of resting on a rack of arms. Each ladder will be removed without disturbing any other ladder or equipment. The body will be kept in shape by a "U" truss, and will rest upon half springs and full elliptical springs forward. Are of best Swedish steel, and five inch heavy iron plates, brass hub lamps and caps. There will be eight ladders, two topside and make a fifty foot extension, and one each 25, 20, 18, 12, and 10 feet high, having iron plates, brass hub lamps and caps. Weymouth.
I will furnish 1000 feet of the best cotton hose, rubber lined, and full anti-septic, present holders or rot, having heavy brass couplings, at $7.50 each per foot. $275. This hose has one ply, so drives easily, at the same time is so covered as to last the length of the hose, and it is made in one piece—you can get 1000 feet of hose that will carry only 650 feet of rubber or leather hose. This hose will stand from 75 to 85 lbs. pressure.

Weymouth.
We are requested to state that any contributions of flowers for the annual reunion of the friends of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital, to be held in Music Hall, Boston, the 23rd inst., will be received by Dr. W. F. Hathaway, of Weymouth, on the afternoon of April 24, and forwarded promptly.

Select Readings.
On Thursday evening of last week, Mrs.
F. W. Holbrook, of Braitree, gave a select reading in the Town Hall. The selections were various, and comprised the poetical, descriptive, narrative and dramatic.
It is certainly our purpose to include in any vein of hypercriticism in our notice of Mrs. Holbrook as a reader. We believe that it is much better to be reasonable, than critical, and besides Mrs. H. is a member of no mean fraternity. She belongs to the "fourth estate," and on this account we owe her one. No one with a knowledge of two writings can enter there where there are small hats are a novelty. We were happy that Mrs. Holbrook, notwithstanding certain infidelities in "the nature of things," maintained the dignity of the profession.
Her reading was excellent, beneficial and aiding, although perhaps she might be somewhat more careful in the character of her selections. We do not think that "Mark Twain and the Infidel" viewer" was suitable selection, but "How he Saved St. Michael's," was very satisfactory, and was excellently given, as were many other selections of the evening.—Mrs.
Holbrook was well supported in her successful efforts to make the entertainment enjoyable, by Mr. N. T. Thayer and Mr. B. Elmer Morrison, both of Braitree.
Mr. Thayer, who was in excellent voice, sang
"Non-ever," "Across the far blue hills, Mary," "Waft her Angels," and "Sweet Love, Good Night." Mr. Thayer's ability, as evinced in the manner in which he sang on this occasion, was a very pleasant sur- prise to us. He has grown into the proportion of a first class singer since we last had the pleasure of hearing him. Mr. Morrison was "at home" when presiding at the piano and much enhanced the pleasure and satisfaction of the evening.
MAC.
Fast Day.
At the request of the evangelists, Messrs.
Moody and Sankey, Fast Day was observed here by special services in all the churches.
Rev. Mr. Emerson appointed extra meetings during the week, and the Infidel viewer.
Fast evening, a preaching service and a

The "Good Samaritan Club" had a meeting appointed in Grand Army Hall last Monday evening. There was a very thin attendance, so few being present no business was done.
A serious accident befel Mr. Elisha Morse, on Fast Day. He went up a ladder in his slaughter house, to fix some hooks used by the butchers to hang up the carcasses of sheep, and the ladder slipped as he was descending, and one of the hooks pierced his spine. He is confined to his bed and suffers a good deal from the injury.
It is feared serious results may follow.
Mr. Fallon's child fell into a pail of scalding water on Monday and was badly burned.
A young man belonging to this town went to Milton, on many days ago, with young lady, also resident of Braitree, and took out a certificate of marriage, armed with which they proceeded to Boston and were joined in matrimonial bonds. Per- haps he didn't know it wasn't just the thing to do. Any way, he is married, and that is the main point after all.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union met in Grand Army Hall last Fri- day afternoon. It was not a full meeting, but a pleasant and profitable one. Rev.
Thomas Emerson was present and opened the meeting with reading the Scripture and prayer, also making a few remarks for general encouragement. Mrs. Geo. Trask of Fitchburg was also present and made a very good speech. She spoke from a heart full of love for the work and congratulated members of our little Union to hold on, be active, and prosecute the work with energy.
A card was read from Mrs. Livesey, the former president. It was the annual meeting and new officers were elected, a list of which I will send you another week.
The next meeting will be held in Lyceum

NORTH WEYMOUTH.
North Club Lecture.
One of the most interesting and instructive lectures of the season was a temperance lecture delivered Wednesday evening by Mr. Elijah A. Morse, in the Universalist Church, for the benefit of the North Wey- mouth Reform Club. The lecture com- menced with singing by the choir, in their usual pleasing manner. This was followed by prayer by Mr. Wilmot Cleverly, Mr.
Christopher Wise, President of the Associa- tion, then made a brief address, after which he introduced one of our noble and enterprising men, Mr. Elijah A. Morse, who spoke of the enormous number of murders and suicides caused by the use of alcoholic drink, alluding especially to the story of the death of the little girl, Mabel Young. He also alluded to the suffering, misery and woe which a poor drunkard's wife must endure by the habits of the poor, miserable drunkard who is dragging him- self down to destruction. After the close of Mr. Morse's discourse, a brief speech was made by Mr. Augustus W. Beals.
The old-fashioned temperance pledge was renewed for the reception of new signa- turers. Mr. Morse then thanked the audience for the close attention which they had paid, and with a select song by a quart- ette composed of male voices, the lecture was closed. As has been stated in the Reform Club of this place is still in run- ning order, and may yet continue to do much good in the future as they have done in the past. The lectures will continue for the next two weeks, and it is thought that the discourse of Mr. Morse was so pleasing that he will again appear. We advise all to hear him. Mr. Mayberry, a reformed liquor dealer of Boston, will lecture next Wednesday evening.
Chess Club.
The North Weymouth Chess Club met
Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr.
George Burrell. The attendance was very full, and some few members not belonging to the Club, interested in chess, were present. After all necessary business had been transacted, the Club played some skillfully contested games, and a very agreeable time was passed until a late hour.
Progress.
The large and beautiful vessel, being built by Mr. Keene, is progressing in a rapid manner. The keel is now laid, and appearances indicate that she will be com- pleted early in the fall.
Entertainment.
On Monday evening, the Ladies Sewing Circle, with a few friends assembled at the Old North Church, to celebrate their anni- versary of vocal and instrumental music. The programme of the evening was opened with a piano duet by Misses Fannie Wildes and Lucy Miles, which was warmly encored. This was followed by a song, by Mrs. Osgood, an excellent voca- list; a duet by Miss Fannie Wildes and Mr. Walter E. Arnold, was delivered in a praiseworthy manner, a reading by Miss Lena Hodgdon, piano duet by Misses He- becca Nash and Jennie White; a declama- tion by Master James E. Humphrey, a song by Miss J. Fannie Wildes, select reading by Mrs. Nellie E. Bicknell; a declamation by Master Chas. C. Nash, a trio by Mrs. Osgood, soprano, Mrs. Edward Blanchard, alto, Mr. W. E. Arnold, basso, were all creditable to the performers.— The entertainment closed with a decla- mation, by Master Chas. B. Tilton, which was very well spoken, and was worthy of great praise. After the close of the en- tertainment a most delicious supper was served, after which games and a good time generally were enjoyed until a late hour, when the company dispersed, highly de- lighted with the enjoyments of the evening.

known to him will be investigated immedi- ately.
Pigeon Shoot.
On Thursday of last week, it being Fast Day, Mr. James Thomas thought he could make a little money and take in the time a little sport for those who wish to show their expertness in bird shooting. He selected from his extensive grounds a tract of birds forty five innocent pigeons, placed them in a coop, and made the grounds which had been selected for the sports. The grounds were staked off, and the expert entered their names. Each man took his position around the field, and when the word was given, a line at each to the trap was pulled, the cover was lifted, and out flew a harmless dove, and was shot at. Sometimes six or eight pigeons would be fired as the bird was trying to escape; forty-three being killed and two flying away.

This paper has an extensive circulation in the Weymouth and surrounding country and is published weekly.

The parting hymn written for the presentation exercises at the reception given to Rev. S. L. Gracy and wife, at West Weymouth, last week, was as follows:

GOOD BYE.
Tune—"Auld Lang Syne"
We will not part in sadness, friends;
For Hope, with promise sweet, Tells of reunions here on earth When we again shall meet.

[For the Gazette.]
HARBY SETTLEMENT OF NEBRASKA.
NO. IV.
Cities and Rivers of Nebraska.
OMAHA.

This city is situated on the western bank of the Missouri River, on a sloping upland, fifty feet above high water mark, its altitude being 966 feet. It is a thriving and growing city of from 20,000 to 25,000 inhabitants. The State capital was first located here, but was moved to Lincoln in 1858.

Omaha, although the first settlement made in Nebraska, is a young city. In 1854 a few squatters located here, among whom was A. D. Jones, now one of the "solid" men of the place. In the fall of that year he received the appointment of Postmaster of that place, which as yet had no post office.

When the postmaster met one of his neighbors, if there was a letter for him, off came the hat from the postmaster's head, while he fished out the missive and placed it in the hands of the owner. It is said, when at times the postmaster was out on the prairies, some anxious, expectant individual would chase him for miles until he overtook the traveling post office and received his letter.

"Large oaks from little acorns grow," says the old rhyme, and 'tis illustrated in this case. The battered hat post office has given place to a first class post office, commensurate with the future growth of the city. It is now the distributing office, and employs six clerks, besides the assistant postmaster.

In 1854 the Council Bluffs and Nebraska Ferry Co. purchased the land now occupied by the city, and erected the first "claim house," afterwards known as the St. Nicholas. About this time the name of Omaha was given to the place. The town improved steadily until 1859, when it commenced to gain very rapidly. The inaugurating of the U. P. R. R. gave it another onward impetus, and since then the growth of the city has been almost unparalleled.

There are many evidences of continued prosperity and future greatness. Like Council Bluffs, it has a large area of fertile territory tributary to it, and railroad connections with the east, west and north, (and by steamboats,) with the south.
ELKHORN.
This station, on the east bank of the Elkhorn river, is but of little importance except as a freight station, it being the outlet of the Elkhorn river valley. Its elevation is 1,150 feet. Immediately after leaving the station, we cross Elkhorn river, a stream of about 300 miles in length. It rises in the hills of the divide, near where the head waters of the Niobrara river rise and flow toward their final destination, the Missouri. The course of the Elkhorn is east of south. It is one of the few streams in these parts suitable for mill purposes, and possesses many excellent mill sites along its course. The valley of this stream averages about 8 miles in width, and is of the best quality of farming land. It is thickly settled by Germans for over 100 miles in length. At this station, both freight and passenger trains stop; the passenger trains only for a few minutes. Some varieties of fish are found in the stream, the pickerel being among the number. The river swarms with ducks and geese at certain seasons of the year, coming here to nest and feed. The natural thrift of the German is well manifested, in his well conducted farms, comfortable houses surrounded by growing orchards and well tended gardens. There is no pleasanter valley in Nebraska than this, or one where the traveler will find a better field for observing the rapid growth and great natural resources of the Northwest, and should he choose to pass a week or more in hunting and fishing, he will find ample sport and a hospitable home with almost any of the German settlers.

hundred miles, besides a vast area included in the thousands of valleys, great and small, which are found in all the mountain range. From the base of the mountains, nearly across this grazing belt, cattle find abundant water, for the mountain valleys are each supplied with creeks and rivers. Springs abound in various sections, so that no very large section of land is devoid of natural watering places.

The grass grows from nine to twelve inches high, and is peculiarly nutritious. It is always green near the roots, summer and winter. During the summer the dry atmosphere cures the grass as effectively as though cut and prepared for hay. The nutritive qualities of the grass remain unimpaired, and stock thrive equally well on the dry feed. In the winter what snow falls is very dry, unlike that which falls in more humid climates. It may cover the grass to the depth of a few inches, but the cattle readily remove it, reaching good grass without trouble. Again the snow does not stick to the sides of the cattle and melt there, chilling them through, but its dryness causes it to roll off their backs, leaving their hair dry. The cost of keeping stock in this country is just what it will cost to employ herders (no more.) The contrast between raising stock here and the East must be evident; so much so, that even a blind man could see it. Again, by stocking this country with sheep, an untold wealth would be added. The mountain streams afford ample water power for manufacturing, and wool enough could be grown here with which to clothe all the people in the Union, when manufactured into cloth. With the railroad to transport the cattle and sheep to the Eastern market, what is there to prevent immense fortunes from being realized here by stock raising? Already Colorado has vast herds of sheep and cattle. One man owns over 40,000 head of the former kind of stock, and yet Colorado possesses no advantages for this business which is unshared by this portion. The time will come when the eastern bound trains will be loaded with cattle and sheep for the Chicago, New York, and Boston markets; for to this section must the East eventually turn, and even Great Britain, for their supply of meat. A great many owners of large herds in Colorado, started with limited means; one of them with 13 head of cattle, now owning 16,000 head, all raised in that State without feeding them one pound of hay or grain.

THE BOSTON REVIVAL.
A part of Mr. Moody's power is his graphic statement of truth. "God shouted the promise down to Jacob from the top of the ladder." "Christ met the Devil with Scripture." He drew the sword on him. Give infidels the Word. Don't argue. The more infidelity the more Scripture. "I asked Dr. Gordon to wake up a man who was losing that grand sermon of Dr. Taylor's. He didn't quite want to. But it's better for a man to wake mad than to sleep and be lost. I used to sleep in the gallery at Dr. Kirk's church. I never heard a sermon. But one day a boy sitting beside me gave me a dig with his elbow. I waked mad. But I began soon to listen to the sermon. I thought Dr. Kirk was preaching right to me. My time had come. That rough waking up saved me." A young man, one of the converts, told him that he was greatly troubled with temptations. "You can't help birds flying over your head," was the homely reply. Your business is to keep them from building their nests in your hair." I have said that this graphic style is a part of his power. In former letters I have spoken of his earnestness and tenderness. But it is coming to be generally perceived that he has upon him a divine power. This is his secret.

One merchant called upon another who he knew as an irreligious and profane man. He found him reading a report of one of Mr. Moody's sermons. He was surprised. He was much more surprised when the man laid down the paper and remarked emphatically: "The Holy Spirit is upon that man, or he couldn't preach so." A little conversation brought out the fact that this man had been reading for three weeks the reports of the sermons in The Advertiser. Though he had determined not to go to the Tabernacle, he became so interested that he went. He was converted. He had called his partners at his change, and told them of his conversion. "Business has been first with me, as you know very well." Thus he addressed them. "Hereafter religion is to be first and business second." Through conversion he had learned that the power which had moved him in the printed sermons was the Spirit of God. Great interest is beginning to center in the business men's meetings. It was inspiring to see 2,000 men, mostly of the solid business class, gathered in Tremont Temple on Thursday noon. The meeting was thrilling. Alpheus Hardy led it. Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey were present. A Chicago merchant told, in a most touching manner, the story of the conversion of himself, his wife, and their two children. He had had no religious training; absolutely none. He went one day to hear Mr. Moody, simply from curiosity. He was not deeply moved. In leaving the building, he lost his way, and stumbled upon a business man's prayer-meeting. Requests for prayer were being presented. It struck him as a curious thing. He listened, as men asked for their partners, their wives, their children. "This is strange," he thought. "I ought to be more interested to ask for myself than any of these men for their friends. What if I should?" And presently he was asking prayers for himself. He was converted that noon. In the conclusion of his comments upon the conversion of Zacheus, Dr. Brown makes a comment to this effect: "Therefore, we see that we may look for unexpected conversions." The business man of Jericho wanted to see Jesus, what sort of a man he was. The Chicago merchant, moved by the same motive, went to hear Mr. Moody. The conversion of Zacheus is being daily repeated among the business men of Boston. Mr. striking incidents to show how the lost have become converted, after serious doubts, that the revival was taking deep hold of the business men.

SEWING MACHINES, all kinds. Engineering News.

Illustrated Weekly Journal. The Fourth Volume of this, the only weekly Engineering Journal in America, commenced January 1st, 1878. It is a large paper, and is devoted to the interests of Engineers, Architects, Contractors and Surveyors. It also gives, occasionally, a record of American engineering, and for the time being, the most complete and most complete record of the progress of the profession in this country. It is the only journal in this country that publishes the valuable papers of these societies, besides those of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and the Institute of Civil Engineers, England, and there are some well known and valuable papers, such as the Engineering News, which is published weekly, and is a valuable source of intelligence generally. It publishes each week a long list of contracts, to be let, and from all parts of the country, and in this single feature is invaluable to engineers and architects.

LITERATURE.

APRIL DAYS.
It is the spring! prepare the seeds,
And tender plants now bloom to show; Turn the rich earth; pull up the weeds, And clear each cumbered garden row!
Already nestlers of buds Adorn the sapling's tender stem;
And first, bedewed with diamond studs, Rear up a greener diadem.
God's woodland innocents prepare For gladder days and fresher life; Close sits the timorous, brooding hare, With wooing birds the boughe are rife.
All nature wakes from wintry sleep, Throws off her veil of frosty rime,
And calls from mead and mountain steep "Now is the hour of golden prime!"
Shall we not yearn, with ceaseless watch, To win God's blessing on our fall?
Hoping those beams of grace to catch,
Which warm a far more priceless soil?
A soil, whose garden is the heart, Where flowers of Paradise may bloom, And leave the worthless weeds no room.
Nor, in the barren after years, Live to lament the barren hours, Which might have kept our eyes from tears And crowned our path of life with flowers.
While, haunted by the past, we mark An echo like a funeral chime, Toll through the ever deepening dark, "Then was the hour of golden prime!"

WRECK OF THE STRATHMORE

A survivor of the wreck of the unfortunate ship Strathmore, which was lost on one of the rocks of the Twelve Apostles, a part of the Crozet group of islands in the Southern Ocean, gives an exciting and graphic account of the wreck and the stay of the survivors for six months on the barren rocks. The narrative says:—
On her voyage from London to Otago, N. Z., the "Strathmore" of Dun-de, Captain McDonnell, struck on one of the rocks of the Twelve Apostles which are comprised in the Crozet group —a very dangerous set of islands, and not much known about them—July 1st, 1875. There had been no sun taken for several days back, the weather being overcast. The captain expected to see the land, but, I believe, from the southward, instead of which he went to the northward. A little bad steering on the part of the man at the wheel would have cleared us. The weather was fine, except for the fog, and the ship was "shortened down" to her main top-gallant sail, in order not to pass out of sight of the land before daylight. The accident happened at 3.45 A. M.; being quite dark and thick. The man on the look-out reported breakers ahead, and seeing the rocks looming through the mist on the starboard side, shouted to the man at the wheel to put his helm hard-a-starboard; but the mate, seeing land on the port bow, ordered the man to port his helm, but all to no purpose.
We were right into a light of a lot of rocks, with breakers all round us; and the unfortunate Strathmore first grated, and then gave three bumps, staying in her bottom. The water rushing into the lower hold, burst open the "twen-decks; her bows jammed themselves in between two rocks; whilst the after-end of the ship was lower, and was soon swept by seas, tearing up the poop, and completely gutting that end of the ship.
The captain thought at first that she might clear herself, and told the man at the wheel not to leave his post—which he did not, bravely standing there waiting for the word to save himself, though the seas were now washing over the poop; and one taking him, with the wheel broken to pieces in his hand, swept him overboard.

I shall now go back a little, and give an account of our own actions—those of my mother and myself. My mother had been very seasick the whole voyage, as well as being ill with a sort of low fever which had hung about her since we had been in the tropics; but the night before the catastrophe, feeling better, we had all of us—i. e., the saloon passengers—been playing cards in the saloon. The captain, either that night or a day or two before, had playfully told my mother that if she did not get better soon, he would land her on the Twelve Apostles. I had her though how soon his words were to come true. We were in bed, of course, when the ship struck. The first bump awoke me; the second told me something was wrong, and I jumped out of bed, for I had guessed the truth. Telling Mr. Keith to light the lamp, I ran to my mother's cabin, and told her and Miss Henderson to dress quickly. I then returned to my own cabin and dressed myself, putting on my warmest clothes and a new pair of Wellington boots. I unlocked my box, and took out of it a little safe, in which was $155 in Bank of England notes, enclosed in a sort of leather pocket-book, and which I put in the breast-pocket of my coat; also a revolver and a sheath-knife, which afterwards turned out to be invaluable. The latter I put in my belt.
The only thing I forgot was a cap; otherwise I was fully equipped for anything that might turn up.
My mother and I then went up on deck, followed by Miss Henderson and her brother. Some of the men were trying to get the port quarter-boat out, and I went to help; but my mother said she would not get into the first boat, as she thought this boat would and leave as the boats were, even if we had gone to the lee side of the island, and kept pulling in shore against a terrible gale for two or three days, exhausted for want of food, wet, and most likely frozen? It could not have kept up for two hours. We saw the boats afterwards on the other side of the island still attached to each other by their painters, but smashed and bottom up, they having been driven by the gale through a tunnel that ran under neath the island, and caught for a time in some seaweed a mile or so off the land; and we had the mortification to see them drift out to sea without the possibility of saving them.

ADVICE TO NEGROES.

The following letter, written by James Redpath to a colored man who was once Sheriff of Jefferson county, Mississippi, is understood to have the endorsement of some of the leading Republican opponents of Hayes's Southern policy.
REDPATH'S LETTER.
WASHINGTON, APRIL 14, 1877.
DEAR SIR:—You ask me what I think of President Hayes and his policy, and what the colored voters of your State and the other Gulf States should do if the National Administration abandons them? I shall answer you fully and frankly, and as these questions are constantly asked, I shall print my reply and grant you the liberty to use it in any way you please:
PRESIDENT HAYES.
"President Hayes is the wisest and ablest statesman of the age"—that is, his partisans and the office-seekers say so. They have unanimously voted that he is a great statesman, an American Richelieu or a second Bismarck; providently sent to rectify the Union, with the milk of kindness. History shows that God has a veto power over all such verdicts, and that his ancient servant, Time, always records his opinion and not that of the voice of the parasites. And Time, I think, will write it down that Hayes was a man of good intentions—as it has already recorded that "Hell is paved with good intentions"; that he was a man of moderate intellectual capacity, with just firmness enough, and brains enough to commit political parricide—to destroy the party that invented him; that his vanity was so great and his grasp of contemporary tendencies so feeble that he founded his policy not on social facts and organized forces, but on air-woven sentiments and pedagogical theories—unlike the epoch-making men of history, who first diligently sought the truth without regard to their own wis-doms, and then directed the complex elements existing around them. Hayes is honest enough, and he means well.— But as Buckle has shown, the greatest ills that have come to man, through governments, have been inflicted by conscientious rulers—men of excellent intentions.
As Lincoln will be known as the Liberator of the Slaves, and Grant as the Preserver of the Union, so Hayes will be remembered as the Betrayer of the Southern Republicans. Lincoln freed, Grant conquered, Hayes surrendered. Do you forget that it was to "save Ohio"—that is, to elect Hayes as Governor—that Grant was induced, against his own judgment, to refuse the call of Ames for troops to protect the Republicans of Mississippi? That was the inauguration of Hayes's Southern policy. He is acting to-day in entire consistency with his history in preferring the bandit chieftain, Hampton, and the Ku-Klux cyclops, Nicholls, to the lawfully-elected representatives of the Republican voters of South Carolina and Louisiana.

HAYES'S POLICY.

One word constantly in Hayes's mouth reveals his character. That word is—Policy. That word is the shibboleth of his motley hordes of scamp-followers. Once, the inspiration of the Republicans was—Principle. The party was a warrior of the Lord then, with a light from God's Throne on its forehead. As far as Hayes represents it, the party is a leprous Lazarus, whining for the votes that fall from the Southern Democratic table.
Open your eyes, my friends, and dare to see the truth, even if it makes you sick at heart. For the truth will set you free from partisan bondage—a great blessing even if the price be so great. I have given too much of my life to this grand old party, asking nothing from it but the delight to serve it, not now to have grieved over its unhonored and dishonored name. How luminous its pathway has been since a little band of us, Northern men and boys, called it into being by confronting the armed cassidaries of South Carolina and Mississippi on the unsullied soil of Kansas!
First, resisting slavery as aggressor; then, smiting slavery as traitor; then, making of chattel black men, and of black men American citizens—its record is a shining trail of glory. Its battle-cry was equal rights, and it was a noble defender of the faith. And now?
Hayes surrenders the brave leaders who saved us South Carolina and Louisiana in order to conciliate the assassins whose triumph in November would have been his defeat. He is President to-day by the votes of South Carolina and Louisiana negroes. By their un-reasoning self-sacrifice, by their sublime devotion to the party that freed them, they "saved the pearl of liberty to the family of freedom." Lo! Hayes has pawed it to their persecutors! All the perfumes of Arabia will never sweeten this perfidly most foul. All the pleading tongues of men and of office-holders will never keep down this spectral Banquo-truth; That Packard and Chamberlain and Hayes are each and all equally the rightful or the fraudulent rulers of the people who elect them by the same vote on the same day and by the same party.

DECEIVED AND BETRAYED.
Don't be deceived by what Hayes says. Rulers are men of deeds. His acts speak for him. He appointed a colored man to an office—and then made haste to abandon a colored State.
Frederick Douglass gets a post worth $5000 a year, and the fact is trumpeted as if it were a decisive proof of Hayes's friendship for the negro—as if it were a "new departure." Why?
Grant appointed Bassett—a colored man—to a $10,000 mission—to Hayti; another to the lucrative post of Liberian; and still another to consulate in Spain—besides giving black men throughout the South honorable positions by the score. Hayes says, or is reported to have said, that "if the rebels do not act in good faith, he will soon change his policy." This is his talk, or worse. How can he change his policy after he yields his power? As soon as South Carolina and Louisiana are abandoned, Hayes is as powerless to help the Republicans as any private citizen. "Who will care for Logan?" then? The Republican platform declares that the United States is a nation, not a league; but the Democrats adopted that article when they insisted that Congress should go behind the Florida returns—thereby abandoning their theory of State rights; and Hayes adopts the cast-off doctrine when he declares, both by his words and acts, that he has no right to interpose the arm of the nation between the negro and his persecutors. As far as the Gulf States go, the President of the United States is not Rutherford B. Hayes in the White House, but a decrepit old man, wasted and worn in body, but still vigilant and acute in mind, who lies on his sick bed in a Committee room at the Capitol—Alexander H. Stevens, Stephens dictates, Hayes executes.

SURRENDER QUIETLY AND QUICKLY.

You ask, Won't the 'old Republicans' rally and protect the blacks? How can they do it? My friend, don't be blind to the truth. Look at the facts and see how hopeless is your hope. . . . It is idle to-day to denounce Hayes or presented his policy of abdication of Presidential prerogatives to the Democratic banditti. We made him our leader and he has surrendered, and we are bound by his act. I was one of the Radical Republicans who advised Gov. Chamberlain to make no useless contest, and I sincerely trust that Gov. Packard will not delay the inevitable hour, in which power shall triumph in Louisiana. It is better, for the sake of the blacks, that the surrender should be made quietly and quickly. The office-holders say that "we should give Hayes's policy a fair trial."
What part of this policy? No one opposes conciliation. Every decent man desires it. That is Part the First of Hayes's Policy. But Part the Second is surrender. It means the acquiescence of the National Government in the rule of the majority by the minority; because that minority of citizens has a majority of property, intelligence and military power. Now that policy has been tried in this planet of ours for ages upon ages; for six thousand years by the briefest and least scientific computation; and it has always, in every clime and among every race, resulted in the oppression of the ignorant and the poor. It has had "trial" enough in this world. Republicanism means not the rule of respectability, but the rule of the majority; and Hayes's Gulf State policy is the suicide of Republicanism.

NEGROES ADVISED TO VOTE THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Now, then, for your question, What should the blacks do? First of all, they should be taught that they can now freely and honorably choose their political associations without reference to the past history of their race. They should be taught that the men who fought for their freedom are now in helpless minority in the Republican party; that the blacks owe it no allegiance whatever now; and that its recognized leaders, who wield the power of the Government, are to-day the recreants who advocate and defend and decree their abandonment.
It is true that the Democratic party resisted their enfranchisement, but it is equally true that the Republican party refuses to protect them in the exercise of the franchise that they gave.
There is absolutely no difference whatever now between the Democratic party and the Republican party (as represented by Hayes) on the question of the rights and condition of the negro, except in one important particular.— That exception is a vital one. It points out the path of safety to the black voter. It points out also the path of duty.
We owe allegiance where we receive protection. The Democrats protect the Democratic negro. The Republicans abandon the Republican negro.

For myself, being a white man, and a Northern man, I propose to remain in the Republican party, to do my part to purge it from the thieves on the one and the pedagogues on the other hand who now infest it; but if I were a negro and in the South, I should join the Democratic party at once and vote for its candidates whenever they were reputable men. Whenever they were bandits I should refuse to vote at all.— I was a member of the first Republican National Committee, and I have always been a radical Republican in my political action. But I was more than that—a "Kansas-Republican," a "John Brown Abolitionist;" and through good report and evil report I have never wavered in advocating the rights of the negro. There is no man so black that I am ashamed to look in his face.

I feel that I have done my whole duty to the black race. And with this record unbroken by a single word or act conservative, I should urge the black men of the South, if my voice could reach them, to join the Democratic party.

A FLING AT THE DEMOCRATS.

If they were to do so in a body what would be the result? Absolute protection, to begin with, in their rights of life and property. They would not be driven from their homes by the thousands as they were driven into the highways of South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana, because of their loyalty to the Republican party. The Democratic negro in the safest male creature that I know of in the Gulf States.— All other males must fight for themselves. For him only every white shotgun is ready to do battle to the death!
The exodus of the blacks to the Democratic party would make that powerful organization the champion of negro rights. There is a movement growing rapidly in the Republican party that seeks to limit the franchise to the educated class and to the holders of property. The sentiment has sprung out of the corruptions of shillelah rule in New York and other Northern cities that are controlled by the Irish vote. The Democrats will resist this measure on behalf both of the Irish and of the blacks, because the negro vote gives the South thirty-nine members of Congress, which the Democrats have now gained forever in consequence of Hayes's Southern Policy.

The allies of the Administration will urge your people to repudiate my advice, and appeal to them to be "loyal" to the Republican organization. Let them turn a deaf ear to these deluding de-mogogues, or ask them, at least, before listening to them, whether they hold an office or are seeking an office. It would be a great triumph to the Administration party if the blacks should continue to be true to the President who has betrayed them. But let the colored people seriously ask themselves whether it will be a good thing for their race, and let them act as they shall honestly answer this question. I care nothing for political parties, but I do most profoundly sympathize with defenceless classes; and, familiar as I am with the history of the last campaign in South Carolina and Louisiana, I should refuse to believe that God governs this world if he dastardly treachery of this Administration to the blacks is not visited with the destruction of the party that shall sustain it.
The Republican party, if it submits to the leadership of Hayes, will not be fit to live, because it will thereby abandon both its principle and its saviors; the principle of the government of the people for the people by the people, which Lincoln announced; and the resolves of South Carolina and Louisiana who, when the roads were picketed with armed men, crawled, at the peril of their lives, through the swamps and morasses and thick woods, in order to reach the country seats, where the presence of the boys in blue made it safe or even possible for them to vote. It was this silent heroism, this sublime devotion of the blacks to the party of their liberators that elected Hayes President of the United States—that gave him the chance to betray these men.

I am not alone among the old friends of the freedmen in believing that they now owe no allegiance to the Republican party. I asked Wendell Phillips the other week—after saying that I should advise my colored friends to join the Democratic party in the South, if he should blame them for refusing to remain in the Republican party and joining the Democratic party? "Certainly not," was his prompt reply. I asked Senator Bruce why he did not urge the blacks to desert the Republicans who had deserted them? Told him that I would like to sign with him a letter urging them to do so. He said that he had advised all his friends to meanly colored political leaders—to make the best terms they could with the Democracy; "to look out for themselves."
But if I could lead the blacks, I should say to them still further—pay less attention to politics and seek protection through business. Become the Jews of America. There are two great policies, both for men and races—Force and Conciliation. The Anglo Saxon race fights. The Jewish race conciliates.
Both have become great powers by policies entirely opposite. The black race cannot fight. It would be exterminated if it tried that policy. It must win power by arts of peace. Let the blacks adopt Iago's advice: "Put money in thy purse." Work! Buy land! Own your homestead and patch of garden! Go to school! Get rich!
If one country persecutes you, go to another; if a State refuses you protection, leave it and seek a home elsewhere. Above all ask for schools for your children, and leave the State if they are not built and kept up for you.

Cease to ally yourselves against the whites in politics, but at the same time quietly and every where and always insist on the right of securing an education for your children. Securing that right your children will secure all others by and by. Fraternally yours, JAMES REDPATH.

To Mr. M. Howard, ex-Sheriff of Jefferson county.

A Western editor recently rode sixty miles on a cow-catcher, and failed to catch the cow, after all.

Unfelicitous. It is proposed to tax cats. For the benefit of the public purse, of course.

A piece of coral five inches high, six inches in diameter at the top and two at the base, was recently taken from the submarine cable at Port Darwin, Australia. The cable was four years old.

CHARACTER.

There is a Celtic proverb which runs thus: "If you lose the smoke, where will you find it? Over the fire. If you miss the water, where can you discover it? In the depths of the valley. If you lose character, where can you discover the lost treasure? Nowhere; never." We have often thought that the natural and essential difference between what is right and what is wrong is but imperfectly understood, and particularly the importance of having this distinct perception in order to the production of this right character.

It has been said that the best work-horse is a mule, and we are satisfied that experience demonstrates the truth of the assertion. Mules have their peculiarities, and upon being introduced to strangers do not always make a favorable impression.
