SPEEDING FIRE FIGHTERS.

It is perhaps unnecessary to explain that no one has suggested that "the fire chief shall delay in getting to a fire." The position of the Times is that the safety of the public on the streets is the supreme consideration. The chief's motor car should not be driven at a rate likely to unnecessarily endanger either his own bones or the bones of any hapless individual who might be taken unawares on the public thoroughfares. This rhodomontade about heroes taking their lives in their hands every time a fire alarm sounds may be productive of a tragedy. It is akin to the declaration from the same source that the girl killed upon the streets of Seattle when on the way to meet her father had no business there. Suppose a little child should happen to wander across a thoroughfare and be overtaken by the rushing fury, or that an aged, feeble person struggling across the street were caught and mangled, would the difference of a minute in getting to a fire be justified? Is the protection of property of more importance than the safety of the public upon the highways? That is the question. The Times would be the last institution to attempt to create a sentimentality to hamper the chief of the fire department in his work. It realizes the importance, particularly at this season of the year, of getting to a fire as quickly as possible. It admits that a very slight delay may mean the difference between an incipient blaze and a sweeping conflagration. It does not suggest for a moment that a "speed limit" should be applied to any section of the fire department. All we ask is that the zeal of Chief Davis in his dangerous business shall be tempered with discretion for his own sake and for the sake of persons who may not happen to be within earshot of the warning bells and horns. An assurance that the chief's car is in competent hands and is always under control should have a soothing effect on the minds of many correspondents who have been given palpitations at the sight of the flying fire motor.

DEVELOPMENT LEAGUE'S GOOD WORK.

The Vancouver Island Development League, now holding its annual session for a review of the work of the past and to map out a programme for the future in the promising little town of Alberni, may be appropriately described as an improved Tourist Association. Its field is much broader than that of the parent body, and its accomplishments correspondingly greater. In entering upon its career the Development League placed "the first things first." It made the whole of Vancouver Island its theatre of activity, and in doing so it created a new spirit in the people of the island. In place of the indifference to each other's interests which had been the characteristic demeanor of the inhabitants of Vancouver Island for years we now have hearty co-operation in all measures tending to the common benefit. The spirit in which the leaders in the League movement have entered upon their work (for the work is yet merely in its initial stages although splendid results have already been accomplished) and carried it out is worthy of the highest commendation and emulation. It is deserving of appreciation in more substantial forms also. The Times has not been commissioned by the officials of the Development League to advocate its cause or to solicit financial support for that cause. But the things accomplished speak for themselves. Mr. McGaffey is an energetic secretary, possessing qualifications of the first class for the work in which he is engaged. The officers of the League made no mistake when they engaged him. He is a master of the art of advertising—and publicity in these days of competition is the life of every business and all movements. Vancouver Island never before at any time in its history was so general a theme in the minds and mouths of investors and intending immigrants as it is at the present day. Scarcely a daily newspaper in Great Britain can be taken up without seeing some reference to it in print or inquiry about what it is and what it has to offer in the line of opportunity or climate. Most of the merchants of Victoria and other parts of the island have identified themselves actively with the Development League or have given it substantial support. We have no doubt that as a result of the valuable work which has been done and the greater success which is promised for the future, the support of public bodies and private concerns and individuals will be still more generous in the future.

PROGRESS IN SHIPBUILDING.

Anyone considering the question of a visit to Europe should not be in too great a hurry to make the trip. There are first class steamers plying the stormy waters of the Atlantic at the present time, but they are mere toys, with a few exceptions, compared with the mammoth floating palaces projected. The White Star line has two vessels nearing completion which in point of size will "whip creation." They will not be "ocean greyhounds," but will jog from port to port inside of a week. The dimensions of these giants of the deep are so grand that it is expected no ordinary storm will create discomfort in the interior economy of the most delicately constituted passenger. They will be equipped with elevators, swimming baths and almost every facility for sport and recreation, with the exception of wing shooting, to be found upon dry land. The monotony and ennui of a transatlantic voyage will have no place in the grand saloons, luxurious staterooms and on capacious decks of these mechanical monsters of the deep. But the White Star people are not going to be permitted long to enjoy the unique distinction of operating the largest steamships in the world. The Cunard Company has in contemplation the construction of two ships very much larger than those of its principal competitor. And the North German Lloyd will presently place on the stocks at Stettin a ship close upon nine hundred feet long. None of these leviathans is going to be a record-breaker in point of speed. The German ship will be equipped with turbine engines, which decision may be taken as an indication that the new system of propulsion is finally and firmly established in the esteem of marine engineers and constructors. The general trend of events seems to proclaim the fact that while the last word has not been pronounced as to the size of ships, the limit of economic speed has been reached for the time being.

ANOTHER FRENCH REVOLUTION.

We have already commented upon the proposed action of the French government in a matter of vital importance, a matter which affects the future of the nation—the decline of the birthrate below the margin of national safety. Consternation, we are now told, reigns among the bachelor functionaries in the employ of the French government. They expect soon to be discharged from the service of the state on account of the condition a member of the Senate, Professor Lannelongue, seeks to impose, that marriage shall be a condition precedent to government employment. The Paris physician and Senator has been inspired to draw up the bill by the decline in the birthrate of France, which, according to the returns for last year, was less than heretofore, having exceeded the deaths by only 13,000. And Prof. Lannelongue's remedy is to make it a rule in the different departments of the government to employ only married men, and promoting those with large families above those with smaller ones. The bachelor, the learned doctor proposes, is to be called upon to do extra military service in the reserves after he is 29 years of age, from which all married men will be relieved. To escape this the civil servant must be married by the time he is 25; besides, he would not permit a bachelor of 25 to apply for any government position. There are at present about 800,000 functionaries in France, so the professor is confident that compulsory marriage for them will increase the population, for he insists that all, in spite of cynical remarks to the contrary, will not remain childless. As an inducement for them to have large families he would allow extra pay at the rate of $40 a year per child under 16 over and above the first three. Finally the professor proposes to repeal the old restrictions upon the disposal of property in the Napoleonic code, which forbids a parent to leave more than a small fraction of his estate away from his children. He considers that family limitation in France is due to thrift and to the wish not to divide the family estate into too small fractions. In his argument supporting his measure he advances some rather revolutionary axioms. He considers that "thrift, which most French people look upon as admirable, is, in reality, fraught with danger, because it leads to the relative unproductiveness of capital. While Americans, Englishmen and Germans put their capital into many new and enterprising concerns, Frenchmen seek only safe and unambitious investments. Thrift thus employed is a public calamity." But Prof. Lannelongue has omitted the women employed in the French posts, telegraphs and telephone departments. Although the unmarried are greatly in the majority over the married women, he does not mention any regulation concerning the former, in spite of the rigorously enforced law that female government clerks are forbidden to marry without government permission.

More than twenty so-called aviators have been killed within the last two years. It is a good thing that very few of the dangerous playthings—they are nothing more as yet—can lift more than one person at a time.

The plans upon which the British cruisers of the Bristol class are constructed are being loaned to the Canadian government for the purpose of building the Canadian cruisers. Canadian firms able to build the ships will be invited to tender. In this connection it would be gratifying to know that the two cruisers to be stationed on the Pacific will be built on the Pacific. They can be constructed here as well as on the Atlantic coast and possibly not at a higher price than on the Atlantic, plus the cost of sending the ships to the Pacific. Our builders, who have shown great enterprise in the past, will have an opportunity of which we feel sure they will avail themselves.

What Other People Think

OBSTRUCTIONS ON STREETS.

To the Editor:—In getting on the street car at the corner of Government and Yates streets last evening I stepped on a short plank with a large spike projecting two or three inches on both sides of same. A very dangerous thing at such a place. For a considerable time passengers have had to step over all sorts of building material at this corner, getting on and off the cars.

I have lived in country towns where conditions like these would not be tolerated. A. DRAKE.

TOURISTS AND "SKIM MILK."

To the Editor:—Will you kindly assist me by printing this letter? Since the tourist season commenced, the milk I have been paying a high price for resembles nothing but water. There is no cream on it. Is the law powerless to prevent purveyors skimming my milk and getting twice paid for the cream? Are my young children (including an infant) to suffer in order that tourists may have a superabundance of ice cream, and give double profit to the milkmen? If women looked after this branch of the sanitary law there is no doubt it would be done better than it is at present. There are, I am positive, quite a few who would willingly undertake this duty for the sake of so many young children whose health and strength is dependent upon milk instead of what they now use—the poorest "skim milk." A MOTHER.

IN A CYNICAL VEIN.

To the Editor:—And so it has been decided, so far as a majority of our city council have the power to do so, that we are to have the bioscope representation of the Jeffrey-Johnson fight here, with the official sanction and approval of our city government. It might be added, also, with the official sanction and approval of the provincial government, for the latter body has taken the same stand on the question as the council.

Our council has likewise set its seal of approval upon the race track meetings, with all its bookmaking accompaniments, for the further life time of that lease to the Country Club, in other words, for three years longer.

Then, again, we have that "restricted district" still with us, which flourishes like a "green bay horse" right under the eyes and nose of our police commissioners, and apparently under their guardianship and protection.

Can you give us any reason, Mr. Editor, why we should stop where we are? We might just as well go the whole hog, as the saying is. I suggest, therefore, that we make this city the Monte Carlo of the American continent and lease it here, with the sole right to set up in this city an establishment where the fickle goddess of chance may be worshipped through the instrumentality of the roulette, and the "cage." There is money in it, heathen of it. The Prince of Monaco was poor as Lazarus before this gambling concession was granted in 1858. To-day the club holding the concession pays him $50,000 annually, and in addition pays all the cost of the temporal and spiritual government of the principality, amounting to over $4,000,000 annually. The gaming tables attract over 400,000 visitors every year, to the enrichment of the hotel, transportation and other interests.

Just think, Mr. Editor, what a thing like that would do for Victoria. Why we might have our streets paved with pure ivory and its gates inflated with paper. And there would be graft in it for everybody, even for the poor editor. What say you? It would only be going a few steps further than we have already gone, you know. HENRY GEORGE.

ONTARIO'S CROPS.

(Special to the Times).

Toronto, July 15.—While it is early to make definite predictions regarding Ontario's crop for 1910, it is safe to say that the prospects are on the whole excellent. It is officially announced that the conditions of all field crops in Ontario are good; the highest being $4.25 for fall wheat and the lowest $4.75 for spring wheat.

DISPUTED GOAL GAVE NORTH WARD VICTORY

Five Hundred Spectators Saw a Fast and Even Intermediate Match Played Last Night

In the presence of five hundred people at the North Ward park last night, the North Ward Intermediate lacrosse twelve got a decision by one goal over the Victoria West intermediate twelve, which the latter claim is not a fair deal, because Stevens scored a final goal a moment before the whistle blew which was not allowed by the referee.

The match, as is indicated by the closeness of the score, was interesting at every stage and the play was particularly fast for an intermediate game. The spectators were mostly North Ward supporters, although the westerners had a fair delegation over from their side of the city to see them through the game.

The match closed in a squabble about the North Ward goal when the Victoria West nine was pressing hard, and L. Thomas, the inside home of the Victoria West team, claims, with several of his club mates, that the disputed goal was sent into the net before the referee blew his whistle to call the play and end the fight between the players.

Thomas claims that the goal umpire says the goal was scored before the whistle blew, and he thinks his side should have had the benefit of the goal, which would have pulled the game out of the fire by making it a draw.

Corkle had the ball and passed it to Stevens, who sent it past Phipps tending goal, and scored. As the ball rested in the net the referee called the play.

The scoring was opened by Johnston for the North Ward Club and was the only score made during the first quarter. Baker for North Ward scored the second goal in the second quarter. The Wests were able to score one before the half time interval, R. Turdy reaching the net.

Half time found North Ward one to the good, and before the Victoria West team could add to its total McCarter scored the third for the North Ward team. The final quarter saw the Wests wake things up, Provins and Hudson both scoring and bringing the tally to one behind the North Ward score. In the last few minutes the play became aggressive and only owing to a fight in the North Ward goal did the team win the game. Otherwise, the players assert, the score would have been equalled. E. Dempster was referee, and the Fifth Regiment band dispensed a musical programme. The teams lined up as follows:

MOUSE WHISKERS AND BROWN BEAR EYEBROWS

Expensive Articles for Making Flies—Brows $1.50 a Set, and Two Cents Per Whisker

There are trout and salmon fishers who pay several thousand dollars a year for the "flies" alone. Few persons can learn to tie artificial flies, knotting hairs that can hardly be seen, so the skilled fly maker commands high wages, says the Chicago Tribune. The materials, too, are costly, for the earth is ransacked for feathers and hairs, and one hair wrong makes "all the difference."

The business done in mouse whiskers is considerable, for they are used in the making of a wonderful fly, the "gray gnat," and they are expensive, costing nearly 2 cents a whisker. Trout rise much better at mouse whisker flies than at the same "gnat" dressed in junglecock hackles, which look much like them.

Bears' eyebrows being stiff and exactly the right shade, are used in a fly that has killed quantities of salmon. These eyebrows come from the Himalayan brown bear and cost about $1.50 a set.

There are agents all over the world searching tropical forests for the right birds to supply fly hackles. One of the most sought-after skins is that of the rare "green screamer," an African bird about the size of a hen, which has a tiny bunch of feathers on each shoulder that are worth $15 a bunch to the fly maker. One of these birds supplies only feathers enough to make rings for half a dozen flies.

There is no limit to the enthusiasm of an artistic fly tyer, who will use hair from his own eyelashes to finish off an "extra special" fly. Babies' hair is much sought after, if it is of the right shade—golden yellow—for all the lighter salmon flies, and one curl will make a dozen first class flies.

It takes an expert only fifteen minutes to turn out a fly which consists of a tiny hook with wings of Egyptian dove feather, legs of fox hair and a body of mouse fur wound around with a thread of yellow silk. A carelessly made fly will have neither legs nor "feelers," but the true expert adds the legs and puts on a pair of long "feelers" of cat hair, white at the tips. All these tiny details will be exactly in their places and so firmly tied to the hook that the fly will take half a dozen strong fish and be none the worse.
