POETRY.

The Blind Men and the Elephant.

A Hindoo Fable.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

It was six men of Indostan,
To learning much-inclined,
Who went to see the Elephant,
(Though all of them were blind,
That each by observation
Might satisfy his mind.)

The first approach' the Elephant,
And happening to fall
Against his broad and sturdy side,
At once began to bawl:
"God bless me! but the Elephant
Is very like a wall!"

The second feeling of the tusk,
Cried, "Ho! what have we here
So very round and smooth and sharp!
To me 'tis mighty clear
This wonder of an Elephant
Is very like a spear!"

The third approached the animal
And happening to take
The squirming trunk within his hands
Thus boldly up and spake:
"I see," quoth he, "the Elephant
Is very like a snake!"

The fourth reached out his eager hand,
And felt about the knee;
"What most this mighty beast is like
Is mighty plain," quoth he;
"Tis clear enough the Elephant
Is very like a tree!"

The fifth, who chanced to touch the ear,
Said, "E'en the blindest man
Can tell what this resembles most—
Deny the fact who can,
This marvel of an Elephant
Is very like a fan!"

The sixth no sooner had begun
About the tail to grope,
Than, seizing on the swinging tail
That fell within his scope,
"I see," quoth he, "the Elephant
Is very like a rope!"

And so these men of Indostan
Disputed loud and long,
Each in his own opinion
Exceeding stiff and strong,
Though each was partly in the right,
And all were in the wrong!

MORAL.

So, oft in theologic wars
The disputants, I ween,
Rail on in utter ignorance
Of what each other mean,
And rate about the Elephant
Not one of them has seen!

LOST.

A parting glance round the office, to assure himself all desks, closets and iron safes are properly secured for the night, and the solicitor's confidential clerk locks up, and prepares for home. With coat buttoned up to the throat and hat drawn over his eyes, Mark Edwards turns his steps towards Islington, and cheerfully faces the rough wind and drizzling rain, which unmercifully pelt and buffet him, as he vainly hails omnibus after omnibus to receive the same answer—"Full."

But Mark makes no trouble of these out-door inconveniences, for his mind's-eye is fixed on the well covered tea-table, bright fire, and, best of all, the pretty young wife awaiting his return. The picture is so pleasant, that he cheerily breaks out into a line of "Home, sweet home," as he turns the corner of the street in which stands his own trim little domicile.

Mrs. Edwards is peering into the darkness, through the folds of the muslin curtains, and has the door open before Mark's hand touches the knocker.

"What a night for you, love!" says the little matron, brushing the rain drops from his bushy whiskers, and kissing him compassionately; "and how late you are." Edward looks up to the clock as he struggles out of his dripping coat.

"I am late indeed," he answers; "but Mr. Pleadwell has started on his trip to the Lakes, this afternoon, and there were a great many things to attend to, before he went. And look here, Fanny—this packet contains some valuable deeds and securities, which will be called for by the owner in a few days; in the meanwhile, I have to copy one of them, but don't feel inclined to begin to-night. Where can I place them with safety?"

Fanny suggests his desk, but that is the first article a burglar would be likely to meddle with. The wife's check pales at the idea of such a visitor, and she considers.

"That old escritoire in the spare bedroom, won't that do?"

Mark still hesitates.

"I had so many injunctions to be careful, and not let them go out of my own possession, that I am afraid of even that."

Fanny reminds him that there is a secret drawer in it. "Don't you remember," she asks, "what trouble we had to find it?"

"Ha! the very place!"

So his wife carries the candle for him, and the valuable packet is deposited in this hidden receptacle. Its only contents are a few highly scented letters, tied together with a piece of ribbon, to which, Fanny laughing and blushing, confesses are Mr. Mark Edwards' love effusions before marriage, carefully preserved to bear witness against him when he becomes cold and cross.

Perhaps it was a restless night and unpleasant dreams which made the clerk so uneasy—even in the hurry of the next day's work—knowing that he had not visited the escritoire before leaving home in the morning, to ascertain with his own eyes the safety of the papers in his charge. He pooh-poohs the idea as it presents itself, remembering that one key is in his own possession, and the other on his wife's housekeeping bunch; but it returns so often, that it is with a feeling of relief that he hears the signal for closing, and feels he is at liberty to return home.

How is it that his welcome is not such a smiling one as it usually is? Fanny's spirits seem depressed, and her eyes look as if they had been clouded with tears. "Have you had any visitors to-day, Fanny?" inquires her husband carelessly, as he sips his tea.

The hesitating "No" is so faintly pronounced, that the young man hitherto pre-occupied with business, locks up. "That 'No' sounds like 'Yes.' Who has been here?"

"Only my brother George," Fanny answers in a low voice, and Mark, frowning turns away, and takes up a book.

"My brother George" is his aversion, and the torment and trouble of his wife's family; always in difficulties, no sooner rescued from one scrape than rushing headlong into another, sometimes invisible for months, and suddenly re-appearing to levy contributions on any relatives able or willing to assist him. Mark has seriously contemplated forbidding his visits; but then Fanny is so tender-hearted, and cherishes such a kindly belief in the prodigal's ultimate reformation, that her husband has not yet mustered sufficient firmness to enforce his wishes, although he knows where his wife's brooch went, and why she wears that old velvet bonnet.

Fanny seems to guess what is passing in his mind, by coming so softly to his side, stroking his hair and pressing her lips to his forehead, but neither of them saying anything, and Mark leisurely prepares for his task of copying.

While he has gone up stairs to fetch his papers, she lights an extra candle, and esconces herself in a corner with her work-table, regretting as she does so that her "poor boy" must be bored with this odious writing, when he ought to be resting.

However, Mark soon comes down the stairs, three at a time, to ask, rather angrily, why she has moved his packet without mentioning it.

With astonishment in her looks, his wife denies having done so, and hurries with him to the spare-bedroom, asserting her belief that he has overlooked the parcel.

Not a thing is out of its place. The old escritoire stands exactly as they left it, the lock had not been tampered with, nor was the secret drawer open; and there, undisturbed, lie the love letters; but the small brown-paper parcel, tied with pink tape, and sealed with the office seal, is gone!

The husband, suspecting he knows not what, looks almost sternly at his wife, whose answering glance is confused and full of terror.

"Tell me the truth, Fanny, my dear Fanny! Are you playing a trick to tease me? Remember, if I cannot produce these papers, I am a ruined man! It would be worse than the loss of money, that I could replace, these I cannot.—Tell me at once where they are."

"Indeed, Mark, I know no more about them than you do yourself. They must be here; perhaps they have slipped behind the drawer."

Although next to impossible, the chance is not overlooked; a hammer and chisel are soon fetched, and the back of the escritoire is knocked out leaving no nook or cranny in which the smallest paper could remain unperceived.

Almost beside himself, Mark leads his wife down stairs, and commences questioning her. Where is her key? On the ring; it has not been out of her possession. Has she been out? No. Is she quite sure of that? Quite; besides, as she ventures to remind him, the locks have not been forced, nor is aught else missing, as would have been the case, if thieves had entered the house. In uncontrollable agitation, the bewildered young man paces the room, while Fanny, unable to proffer advice, or assist him in any reasonable conjecture, watches him in trembling silence.

Suspensions are crowding upon his mind; hints given before his marriage about Fanny Roberts' brother, and regrets uttered, even in his hearing, that a respectable young man like Mr. Edwards should lower himself by such a connection, are suddenly remembered and dwelt upon.—He pauses before his wife, and sternly demands what errand had brought that brother of hers to his house. That brother of hers! What a speech! All Fanny's sisterly feelings are in arms, and yet her voice falters, for she was forced to own that it was the want of money.

"And you told him I had those papers in the house," Mark cries, accusingly.

With a crimson face she angrily denies it. She did not mention Mark's affairs during the short interview. It is likely she would do so? Or if she did, would George steal up stairs and rob his sisters home? Ridiculous! Impossible!

"Impossible," retorts Mark, "without he possessed the key."

"It has not been out of my pocket," sobs Fanny.

"Then where," asks Mark, "are the missing papers?" Their little servant-maid away for a holiday—no one in the house, according to Fanny's own confession, but this young man. Where are the papers?

Receiving for reply a torrent of tears and protestations, he flings himself on the sofa, and tries to steady his nerves to the consequences of this extraordinary loss.

Meanwhile, Fanny goes and institutes an unavailing search in every box, and cupboard, and drawer where it could be possible to find such a parcel, although it would have puzzled her to have told how it could have withdrawn itself from the secret drawer to take refuge elsewhere.

At last she returns to the parlor in despair. The packet must have been stolen. But how? When? By whom? Getting frightened at Mark's gloomy looks, she is delighted when a tap at the door announces a visitor, and that visitor her father.

To him the mysterious affair is circumstantially detailed, and Mark points out the inevitable loss of his situation and good name if he should be unable to produce the papers, or give any clue which might lead to their recovery. To Fanny's dismay, he particularly dwells upon her brother's visit, and her half-made endeavor to conceal it; concluding by an entreaty that she will, if retaining any affection for her husband, tell all she knows.

But now the father interposes. To tamely hear both his children accused of such a crime, is more than his rather irascible temper will endure, and he enters a counter accusation that Mark has, for some unworthy end, removed the parcel himself. Words now become so hot and bitter that Fanny's distress is increased, not lessened by this championship, and she weeps so bitterly, and pleads so earnestly with both, that Mark, more touched than we would like to confess, abruptly leaves them to shut himself in his chamber.

After some hours, the sound of his footsteps ceasing, the anxious wife creeps softly up the stairs, and is relieved to find him lying on the bed in an uneasy slumber. Her father tries to persuade her to rest too, but poor Fanny shakes her head and still sits by his side, leaning her head on his shoulder, and feeling more forlorn and miserable than it had ever been her lot to feel before. What will poor Mark do? And what will become of her, if he persists in believing her guilty?

Equally bewildered, and almost as unhappy as his daughter, Mr. Roberts tries to sooth her with promises, not only to seek George, and bring him to exculpate himself, but to forgive Mark's hasty speeches, and assist him in investigating this mysterious affair.

So at last Fanny begins to feel more comforted, and to wish her father to leave her; but, tired as he confesses himself, he cannot quit her in such trouble, and they continue to occupy the same position by the fire, till night has long given place to morning, and Mr. Roberts' eyes close involuntarily.

A footstep overhead startles them. "It is only Mark," says Fanny, after a moment's listening. "Poor fellow, I wish he had slept longer."

In the modern six-roomed house, every noise however slight, is distinctly audible, and they hear him enter the chamber where stands the now shattered escritoire. After a short pause, he is heard slowly descending the stairs, and the wife raises herself from her reclining position and smooths her disordered hair.

As he enters the room, Mr. Roberts lays his hand on his daughter's arm.—"Look, child, look!" he whispers; and Fanny sees with astonishment that her husband is fast asleep, and holds in his hand the bundle of old love letters.

Setting down his candle, Mark unlocks the front of his large and well filled book-case, and begins deliberately taking down, one by one, the handsomely bound volumes of the History of England, which grace the top shelf; then he draws out a number of loose magazines, hidden there because of their untidy appearance; lays the love-letters quite at the back of all, replaces the odd numbers, returns the volumes to the shelf, carefully putting them even, locks the glass-doors, and is stalking away, when Fanny, with a cry which awakens him, snatches the key from him.

Rubbing his eyes, and wondering, he sees her eager hands dragging Hume and Smollet from their proud position to assume an inglorious one on the carpet; the once treasured Belle Assemblees are scattered in all directions; the highly prized love-letters receive similar usage; and then from behind all the rest, Fanny triumphantly takes out the small brown-paper parcel, tied with pink tape, and sealed with the office seal, crying and laughing in one breath, the happy little wife is the next moment in her husband's arms, kissing and being kissed ad libitum.

Little explanation was needed. The young man's brain, excited by extreme anxiety regarding his trust, had led to his cautiously rising in the night, and unconsciously transferring the packet to what he afterwards remembered as the first hiding-place which had presented itself to his mind on bringing it home the preceding evening.

How many times he has asked forgiveness is not recorded, but Fanny is a true woman, quick to resent, but easily appeased; and Mark has taken George and George's affairs in hand so heartily, that the young scapegrace is actually improving, and there is even some hope of Fanny's belief in his total reformation being realized.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.—Children, look in those eyes, listen to that dear voice, notice the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that gentle hand! Make much of it, while yet you have the most precious of all good gifts—a loving mother. Read the unfathomable love of those eyes; the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after life you may have friends, fond, dear, kind friends, but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows. Often do I sigh, in my struggles with the hard, uncaring world, for the sweet deep security I felt when of an evening, nestling to her bosom, I listened to some quiet tale suitable to my age, read in her tender and untiring voice.—Never can I forget her sweet glances cast upon me when I appeared to sleep; never her kiss of peace at night! Years have passed away since we laid her beside my father in the old church-yard, yet still her voice whispers from the grave, and her eye watches over me as I visit spots long since hallowed to the memory of my MOTHER.—[Macaulay.]

A SPANISH priest, once exhorting the soldiers to fight like lions, added, in the ardor of enthusiasm:

"Reflect, my brethren, that whosoever falls to-day in battle sups to-night in Paradise."

Thunders of applause followed the sentiment. The fight began, the ranks wavered, the priest took to his heels; when a soldier, stopping him, reproachfully referred to the promised supper in Paradise.

"True, my son—true," said the priest; "but I never eat suppers."

An exchange says that the best cure for palpitation of the heart is to leave off hugging and kissing the girls. We say, if that is the only remedy, "let her palpitate."

An indiscreet man is more hurtful than an ill-natured one; the latter attacks only his enemies—the other injures friends and foes alike.

POVERTY runs strongly to fun. A man is never so full of jokes as when he is reduced to one shirt and two potatoes. Wealth is taciturn and fretful.

In the career of female fame, there are few prizes to be obtained which can vie with the obscure state of a beloved wife or happy mother.—[Jane Porter.]

WORLDLY happiness—a glittering false diamond, placed upon the top of a smooth greased pole, which all try to climb and secure.

"WHY do you not admire my daughter?" said a proud mother to a gentleman. "Because," he replied, "I am no judge of paintings."

WHY are lawyers like a lazy man in bed in the morning? Because they lie first on one side, and then turn over and lie on the other.

A secret is my slave as long as I keep it under; a secret is my master the moment it escapes from me.

A promising young man may do very well, perhaps—a paying one much better.

In this world, full often, our joys are only tender shadows which our sorrows cast.

BATTLES ON THE SABBATH.—History has a lesson on this subject which ought to be remembered. It is a fact, which is sustained by abundant testimony, that generally the party who makes the attack on the Sabbath, are defeated. Look at a few cases of this kind.

Montgomery made the attack upon Quebec on the Sabbath, was slain, and his army defeated and turned back.

The Americans commenced the battle of Monmouth on the Sabbath, and were worsted.

The British began the engagement on Lake Champlain on the day of God, and were completely overwhelmed.

They did the same at New Orleans, and were entirely routed.

Bonaparte commenced the battle of Waterloo on the Sabbath, and he was defeated, and his army almost annihilated.

And we now have another painful case to add. Our forces began the conflict at Bull Run on the Sabbath, and were defeated.

The instances of battles on the Sabbath might easily be increased. But these show, we think, that the frown of God rests on such conduct. If our army is attacked on that day, they must, of course, defend themselves. This is one thing, however, and making the attack is quite another. The law of the Sabbath rest on the army as well as on a community.—N. Y. Observer.

GREAT SLAUGHTER OF SHEEP.—On Sunday afternoon, at about three o'clock two men in the employ of Myron Smith, who resides on the lower Stockton road, six miles from Sacramento, started from the ranch to the city with two hundred and thirty-eight head of sheep. On arriving at Musick's Tavern, Whisky Hill, they found it necessary to stop and inquire. They concluded to imbibe several times before starting off, and left the place at so late an hour or in such a condition that they could not find their sheep. They reached home in the night, with eleven only of the entire number. Yesterday morning it was found that the sheep had been attacked in the road near Musick's by dogs, and about one half of the entire number had been killed.—Many of them had been dreadfully torn and mutilated, while others had been smothered and trampled to death in the ditches by the remainder of the drove. Several of the rams appeared to have fought fiercely against their destroyers. Union.

LEXINGTON has fallen into the hands of the secessionists in Missouri. This is a very important acquisition to the insurgents in that State; by its capture they have secured 4,000 stand of arms, a quantity of cannon with ball and ammunition complete, all the camp equipage, and last but not least, a quarter of a million in specie, this latter prize will help Gen. Price materially in organizing and effecting an army to resist the Government troops under General Fremont, which are now advancing to attack him. The reports by telegraph lead us to suppose that the insurgents are retreating into Kansas, but we are of the opinion the Unionists are in error in this supposition. Price and McCulloch have now a larger army in Missouri than General Fremont can muster, they are tolerably well supplied with arms and amunitions, having captured a quantity at Springfield and also at Lexington. We think the object of the insurgent leaders is to unite all their forces at some chosen point and fortify themselves and await the approach of the Government army, and probably give them battle. We are led to this conclusion, from the fact, that victorious armies seldom run from an inferior foe, without there are other disadvantages on their side which they cannot overcome, and which we cannot observe in the rebel army. The fate of Missouri is evidently trembling in the balance, two or three more of such reverses as the Government has sustained there within the past month, and that State is hopelessly gone over to the secessionists; on the other hand, should Gen. Fremont succeed in capturing and routing Price and McCulloch's army and effectually crushing the armed rebellion—Missouri may yet be saved for the Union.

From the North.

GOLD FROM FRASER RIVER.—Upwards of $120,000 in dust was brought down by the Caledonia and Otter on their last trips. From the commencement of the present mining season until the present time the returns from the Upper Country have averaged over $70,000 a week.—Victoria Press, 8th inst.

GOLD FROM WASHINGTON MINES.—The Portland papers say that $173,000 were to come down on this trip of the Pacific.

CLEARWATER MINES.—The Vancouver Chronicle publishes the following letter from the South Fork of Clearwater:

The mines here are good and much more extensive than at Oro Fino. All those who have opened claims are doing well, although no "big strikes" are being made. The average pay amounts to about $8 per day. Business is active and still improving. Although no work was done here before the 15th of July, and but few men here with claims opened, yet within the last two weeks there has been paid at Elk City 724 ounces of gold dust in exchange for goods, which amount comprises by no means all the dust taken out. The books of the butcher show that 315 companies are at work; but there are many miners who live too remote to be supplied, and great many others are prospecting. I am warranted in saying that there are now 2,000 men here and there is room for 18,000 men more, all of which would work to advantage.

Flour per pound, 18 cents; bacon, 40 cents; coffee, 40 to 50 cents; sugar, 33 to 55 cents; beef, 12 to 15 cents; syrup $4 to $4 50 per gallon; heavy boots, $10 to $12; gum boots, $15.

A friend writing us from Oro Fino, in a recent letter states, that there will be at least one thousand men who will remain during this winter within that mining district. Some forty or fifty California miners had just arrived, who reported more coming during the fall.

Report says that very rich diggings have been discovered on a tributary of Salmon river.

Another correspondent writing us, dating from Elk City, says that he is encamped in a canon on American river.—Flour is 16 to 18 cents per pound, fresh beef from 12 to 15 cents, bacon 40 cents, sugar 40 cents, coffee 45 cents, tea $1 25, beans 25 cents, picks with handles $4 50, shovels $4, gold pans $2, sluice forks $5.

Claims are paying from $8 to $16 a day to the hand. The gold is coarse, while that of Oro Fino and Rhode's Creek is very fine. The opinion is confidently entertained that richer mines will be discovered next season.

Elk City is situated in a beautiful little valley about five miles long and half a mile wide. The valley has been the great hunting ground of the Indians and abounded in game when the miners first entered it.

THE CONFEDERATE CABINET.—The Confederate Cabinet has recently undergone some changes, and is now constituted as follows: Secretary of State—R. M. T. Hunter, of Virginia; Secretary of the Treasury—C. L. Memminger, of South Carolina; Secretary of War—Benton Bragg, of Louisiana; Secretary of the Navy—Stephen R. Mallory, of Florida; Postmaster General—John H. Reagan, of Texas; Attorney General—Judah P. Benjamin, of Louisiana.

PONY NEWS.

We clip the following from the Union of the 17th instant.

WASHINGTON, October 9th.—All information at headquarters shows that the enemy is prodigiously strong, numbering nearly 200,000 men, and that an offensive movement is at present intended.—Johnson and Smith favor an active policy but Beauregard insists on standing on the defensive.

Brigadier General W. K. Strong was this day assigned to duty on the Staff of Major General Fremont, and ordered to report to him in person. He will be chief of the Staff.

The President has restored Colonel DeLoane to the command of the regiment from which he was dismissed by a Court Martial in St. Louis, and has restored him to his pay as well as his rank. None of General Fremont's commissions are recognized by the President, and they are therefore rendered worthless.

The cargo on the Bermuda—the British ship that run the blockade—consists of 18 rifle cannon and 2,168 pounds of canister, with all the necessary shot and shell, ready for use; also 650 Enfield rifles, and between 200,000 and 300,000 cartridges for the same, 6,000 pairs army shoes, 20,000 blankets, 180 barrels gunpowder, a large quantity of morphine, quinine and other medicines, stores, and many articles worth more than money value to the rebel army. The cargo cost $1,000,000, cash. She is now fitting out for active service and is to be employed in cruising for returning California steamers. Commodore Tatnall is to command the Bermuda. It is stated that more iron clad steam frigates are expected from England for the Southern coast by the 15th of October. The Bermuda is owned in England. Her cargo was owned in South Carolina. At the time she cleared, she was supposed in Liverpool to be a supply ship for the Royal navy, although Downing street knew much better. She cleared for a West India port.

The Herald's dispatch says the Commissioner of Indian Affairs returned to this city this forenoon, after a brief visit to the Indian country. He found them all loyal and giving evidences of strong allegiance to the Federal Government.—He visited several tribes north of the Osage. Only three tribes are inaccessible or beyond the reach of the Government and are disloyal. He is of the opinion that troops ought to be dispatched immediately to the Indian country to reclaim them.

A gentleman who arrived from Fortress Monroe says the Merrimac, having been put in order after having been raised by the rebels, steamed up off Norfolk harbor late yesterday afternoon, and came within sight of Fortress Monroe. She seems thoroughly sea plated. She will prove a hard customer to our fleet.

The Richmond Examiner of Friday, publishes telegraphic news from Lynchburg, October 4th, that J. C. Breckinridge and other Kentuckians, were at Abington yesterday. It is understood that Breckinridge will resign his seat in the United States Senate, issue an address to the people of Kentucky and actively engage in the war. It is believed he will be in Richmond in a few days.

MOUNTAINS ON FIRE.—An extensive fire is raging in the mountains north of us, extending, with a few interruptions, from below Sequel nearly as far as Pescadero, a distance of 30 or 40 miles. The smoke arising from the conflagration hangs like a dark pall over the whole chain of mountains as far as the eye can reach, and impregnates the atmosphere as far down as the coast, while the increased heat is perceptibly felt in Santa Cruz itself. Last evening, the red, glaring light of the fire, seen flashing high up in the air, and the reflection on the sky above, giving it a livid, glowing appearance, presented a view fearfully grand and picturesque. It is difficult to imagine the immense amount of damage done to the redwood timber, which is the source of much wealth of this section of the State. These fires are periodical with us, and to go through the forests and see the large trees charred and blackened, one cannot but lament the cause that has robbed us of so much of our wealth. The fires generally originate through the carelessness of hunters, who camp out during the dry season, and neglect to extinguish the fires of their camp when they leave. There are a number of saw mills located in the vicinity of the present fire which we hope will escape the conflagration.—Santa Cruz Sentinel.

PROFITABLE.—The Grass Valley National says the Forest Spring Quartz mill of that place has divided the past year $120,000 clear of all expenses.

Natal as a British Cotton-producing Colony.

The British colony of Natal, (Southern Africa) remarks a writer in the N. Y. Express, has an area of 10,000 square miles, and is capable of producing sugar, coffee, indigo and arrowroot. The coconut and oil palms cover an area of 3,000 square miles. The variety of soil and climate in this valuable and beautiful possession of Great Britain is caused by the country rising rapidly from the Indian ocean in a series of four terraces, each having an average width of twenty miles, with its peculiar soil and climate. The coast line extending from high water mark to five or ten miles inland, is said to be peculiarly adapted to the growth of sea island cotton; and it is estimated that one thousand square miles of this district are capable of producing the most valuable of the cottons of America without the accompanying drawback of a climate unsuited to the English constitution. The second terrace of the colony is well adapted for grazing purposes, the third contains forest timber of superior quality, and the fourth is well adapted for growing wheat and most other European productions. The country, moreover, is well watered.

A recent visitor, Mr. McLeod, gives the following highly encouraging statement of its cotton-producing capabilities: "The yield of one acre, he says, having 6,000 plants on it, averaged two and a half pounds of seed-cotton per plant, which, when reduced by the cotton-cleaning gin, gave one pound and one quarter of clean cotton per plant. At 6d. per pound, this would give the enormous return of £187 10s. per acre. There are at the lowest computation 640,000 acres on the lower or coast-line terrace of the colony which will produce cotton of this quality, so that our Liverpool merchants may look forward to a supply of no less than 4,800,000 lbs. of cotton from one of the smallest and latest acquired of our colonies."

The above will no doubt be pronounced by our Southern "Confederates" a very "great cotton story" inasmuch as it indicates the extraordinary yield of 20 bales of cotton to the acre, of 450 pounds each, and worth at $50 a bale $1,000! A small plantation of 100 acres, would thus yield a gross income of $100,000! or about the yield of a first rate 2,000 acre plantation in the richest section of Louisiana.

The population of this colony in 1850 consisted of 6,550 white and 102,105 colored persons. Its exports of colonial produce were, in 1848, to the value of £10,000. In 1859, £100,000. The present difficulty of the colony is a want of labor, the temptation of good wages not having yet been sufficient to overcome the repugnance of the Kaffirs to steady and systematic toil. A colored race wearing scarcely any clothes, and whose wants are few, can hardly be induced to devote themselves to the continuous labor indispensable to the production and security of such a perishable crop as that of cotton. The remedy will doubtless be found in a Coolie emigration.

Condition of New Orleans.

A person who recently left New Orleans gives the following description of affairs there:

Mr. Reynolds says that the din of arms draws all other sounds in New Orleans. The streets are filled with soldiers, and recruiting placards and tents everywhere meet the eye. The people are as enthusiastic (if not more so) in their cause than we are and are certain that the conflict will ultimately result in a triumph for Southern arms. After the battle of Bull Run, large accessions poured into the regular army. At the time Mr. Reynolds left New Orleans there were about 15,000 men in the city. They were well clothed but very poorly armed. Every person in the city belonged to some military organization, and recruits were received from the ages of fourteen to sixty five.

Strong intrenchments are being erected all around the city, and on the road from New Orleans to Memphis 16 cannon of heavy calibre are placed at various points. On Ship Island, between Mobile and New Orleans, there are 5,000 men, and the place itself is strongly fortified.—Every point of the city is mounted with cannon, and the rebels pride themselves on the impregnable nature of their position. Business of all kinds is entirely suspended. After the battle of Bull Run, the Union men lost all hope of the success of the Federal arms, and are now dejected. The proclamation of Jeff. Davis, compelling all that were not friends of the Union cause to leave Southern territory before the expiration of forty days, or be immediately arrested, hurries the Union men out of the country. Those who have the means to go are leaving, while those who have not can but remain and are forced by press of circumstances to enter the rebel army. No drafting has as yet taken place, but when Mr. Reynolds left the city rumors were current that this mode of providing food for powder would be shortly adopted. There are five or six foundries in New Orleans which are kept constantly employed, and are able to turn out about six heavy cannon per week. Small arms are very scarce, and it is almost impossible to provide muskets for drilling the soldiers.—The new Custom House is being used for the manufacture of arms.

It is a notorious fact that every man who kicks the bucket turns pale.

PAY OF VOLUNTEERS, ETC.—The Bulletin is furnished with the following from Acts of Congress in relation to the pay and bounties of soldiers:

- 1. By acts of the late Congress, all bounties for enlistment were abolished, as well as the two dollar fee for bringing recruits to the rendezvous for enlistment.
2. For the first re-enlistment, in the regular army, the soldier is to receive $2 per month in addition to his former pay, and $1 for every subsequent enlistment.
3. Soldiers who now enter the service, either as regulars or volunteers, "for the war," and serve out their enlistments, shall, with their discharge, receive $100 bounty, or that amount will be paid to the legal representatives of such as die or are killed in the service.
4. After the 6th of August, 1861, privates who receive $11 will receive $13, and those who formerly received $12 will also receive $13; privates and corporals receive the same pay, but no other change is made in the pay of non-commissioned officers, musicians or artificers.
5. By the increase in the privates' pay, the allowance of every officer who has a servant is increased thereby either $12 or $24 per year for each servant he is entitled to.

The following account of the battle of Lexington, is taken from an Extra, issued by the Argus, of Weston, Mo., and sent enclosed in a private letter to this State by last Pony.

The following is a copy of a letter received by L. Fleschman, of Platte City, from his nephew a member of Captain Kuykendall's company.

Camp Near Lexington, Sept. 20th.

DEAR UNCLE:

I take my pen in hand to drop you a few lines this morning to give you a few particulars of the battle of Lexington. We took up the line of march for Lexington on Wednesday, the 16th, at ten minutes before ten. We came up with the enemy in the streets of Lexington where we immediately engaged them. They retreated to their entrenchments at the College. We pursued them and got a position within a 100 yards of their lines when the fight commenced in earnest. The fight was kept up until Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, when the enemy sent in a white flag for permission to bury their dead and remove their wounded, which was granted. Friday morning at day break, the fight began again, hotter than ever. It continued until 30 minutes past 3 P. M. From the best report I can get, I think that the loss on our side is about 100 killed and wounded. Young Turner had his leg shot off by a cannon ball. Jo. Will and Mark Todd were all slightly wounded, but not much hurt. We have taken about 8000 prisoners with a large amount of provisions, ammunition, arms, etc. Yours in haste.

J. B. FLESHMAN.

Col. Scott with about 500 men the remnant of the 3d Iowa who were at the Blue Mill Landing battle, passed yesterday (22d) from Plattsburg to Kansas City or Parkville and there took boat for Leavenworth City. Sturgis took the same course.

I think the above reliable.

WM. M. PAXTON.

Mr. Walter sends us the following: PLATTE CITY, MO., Sept. 23d, One of our citizens who was in the battle of Lexington has just returned, from whom we get the following information:

"I reached Lexington on Wednesday evening—fight commenced Wednesday morning about 10 o'clock. Gen. Price marched his whole force—about 15,000, from the fair grounds and proceeded to surround the College. The Federals aimed to get out to the river but were driven back to the hospital, between the river and College—Gen. Harris routed them from the Hospital—the Federals recovered it—after night the State troops again took it. During all this time the State troops were firing upon the Hospital and College—After night Gen. Harris took possession of the outside intrenchment and held it. On Thursday only a skirmishing was kept up but little done. On Thursday night the Federals sent out a white flag to remove their dead from the Hospital. The dead then numbered 116.

During Thursday evening the State troops hauled Bales of Hemp to build fortifications—towards day the State troops fired 10 rounds of cannon which were not answered. After day-light the firing commenced both with cannon and musketry and was kept up until 3 o'clock P. M., when the Federals unconditionally surrendered. The Federals delivered up about 5000 stand of arms, all the cannon (about 9 pieces,) all their horses (reported about 500 head,) about 50 negroes—15 negroes had been taken before—all their ammunition—about 18 wagons and but little provisions. The State troops having taken the steamer Clara Bell on Wednesday with a full cargo of provisions. The prisoners amounted to about 3000, the reports of the Federal loss is from 100 to 900, state loss 50 killed and wounded other reports say 100. No one killed from the vicinity of Platte City.

Col. Peabody was wounded severely, Van Horn shot in the leg not dangerous. Gen. Mulligan was in command of the Federals, Gen. Harris' command suffered more than any other—none of the officers of the State troops of any prominence killed or wounded. The Federals had robbed the Lexington Banks of their coin, all of which except $15,000 was recovered. They had buried it under the College floor. They had also robbed the stores of Lexington. The College is seriously damaged, several dwelling houses in town were burned by the Federals—all the Platte county boys were in the fight. Gen. Stein says that as soon as regulations are made he expects to come into this (5th) Military District.—Boyd, Patten and Sanders came in Wednesday. Prices army amounted to 25 or 30,000. The Federals surrendered unconditionally. The Home Guards and all the officers were kept as prisoners.—The troops from other States were sworn to leave the State and not to take up arms against the Confederate States of America, and were marched down the river under a green flag and out across the river with their wares and baggage and marched north toward the railroad.

W. Ross, slightly wounded, J. Moore shot in the arm, flesh wound, Jack Link shot in the back. 1500 State troops crossed the Missouri river and captured 126 tents and other camp equipage of Gen. Sturgis' command.

A letter from Judge Spratt confirms the above but estimates the State loss at 25 killed and 60 wounded.

POETRY.

A Beautiful Thought.

Take the bright shell
From its home in the sea,
And where ever it goes
It will sing of the sea.

FIRE IN A PHILADELPHIA THEATER—FOURTEEN BALLET GIRLS BURNED.—An unfortunate accident occurred at the Continental Theater, in Walnut street, Philadelphia, on Saturday night, 14th, by which the building was for a time imperiled, and a number of dancing girls so badly burned that six have since died.

The theater has been leased by William Wheatley, and old Philadelphia actor, who had for a week produced the "Tempest" in presence of crowded houses, having on this occasion some 1500 present. The first act had gone forward uninterruptedly, and the dancers were busily preparing in the dressing room to appear in the ballet at the opening of act second. It appears that Miss Cecilia Gale, one of four talented and handsome sisters, was about robing herself in ballet costume. She stood upon a settee to reach her dress, and somehow flung it into a jet of gas, when it was instantly ignited. Before the young lady could recover from her fright, her clothing was all a blaze, and her sisters and several of the ballet girls from an adjoining dressing room, rushing up to assist her, were in turn set on fire.

About a dozen of these helpless girls were thus burning at once, and the fire ran over their gauze and among their under clothes, making fast to the close leggings or "tights," and literally burning to the bone. Their screams were thrilling, and no scene of horror that the stage ever witnessed may be compared to the terrible picture behind the scenes, where the fire from the burning dresses blazed up to the ceiling, and singed the lashes and hair of the affrighted women.

Miss Cecilia Gale, writhing and still in the flames, darted down the stairs as stated, and was caught by Mr. Bayard, a stage carpenter, who at once tore up the sea cloth, a sheet on canvass used to make waves, and wrapped it around her. He was young burned while doing this. This young lady was removed to the hospital soon afterward.

Several girls leaped into the street, through the second story windows, and Miss Hannah Gale, already badly burned fell upon the pavement, bruising her back and head so that her case is considered hopeless. Miss Phebe Norden, of Bristol, Pennsylvania, inhaled the flames and was shockingly burned. She was at the point of death last evening.

Miss Annie Phillips died on Sunday morning.

Miss Anna McBride was burned in the breast, arms and legs, and taken to the Pennsylvania Hospital. She suffered the most excruciating pain during Saturday night; but toward morning her delirium abated, and she died in the arms of Mrs. Wheatley.

Miss Annie Nichols was somewhat burned, but in the panic which ensued after the accident she jumped from the head of the flies to the stage—twenty-five feet—and breaking through a lot of mirrors and plate glass used to represent a lake, her hands and cheeks were lacerated.

Ruth and Adeline Gale were badly burned on the hands and breast.

Mrs. Mary E. Herman suffered excruciatingly.

Abby Carr, Margaret Conaway, Bayard, Kate Harrison and a young man name unknown, were more or less badly burned. The last named inhaled the fire and his lungs have since been bleeding.

Three of these people, it is believed, will die, and all will linger in acute pain for days—perhaps weeks and months.

The audience meantime was addressed by Mr. Wheatley, and told to vacate the house without unnecessary commotion. A number of ladies fainted on retiring, and there was a great deal of trepidation and alarm in the halls and exit ways.

The theater was imperilled by the sea cloth, partially ignited, being thrown into the stable, where it was discovered on the point of combustion, and a conflagration averted.

The scene in the rear of the theater, on Sanson street, was most piteous and agonizing in its character. Half dressed ballet girls ran up and down, and poor women whose daughters took part in the processions and show scenes, were screaming their names amid confused sobbing, execration and fear. Carriages and cabs were driven up and down, and as each sufferer was placed upon the cushions and taken away, the crowd pressed up and touched her sores. A number of petty taverns on Sanson street were thrown open to the sufferers, and a few were so badly burned that they have not since been removed. There was a good deal of delay before help could be obtained; but after a time physicians and lotions were summoned. Some of the burned were taken to their homes in remote parts of the town.

The tradesman who does not advertise has been compared to a man with a lantern, who is too stingy to buy a candle.

The gem cannot be polished without friction, nor man perfected without adversity.
