The footprints of extinct races of men always become objects of interest in proportion to the fewness of their number and the obscurity of their character. Those of the Indian tribes, who once dwelt along the rivers that drain the loveliest portions of the eastern slope of the Appalachians, are growing less and fainter with the lapse of succeeding years. With no records to perpetuate the story of their origin, the course of migratory waves, the wars of contending nations, the rise and decadence of clans and the prowess of national heroes and heroines, save an oral tradition distorted by the adornments of a rude poesy,—the archæology of this occidental people is likely to remain a sealed book. Even the tokens they have left us in enduring stone,—memorial pillars, implements of war, of the chase and of the household,—whether inscribed in hieroglyphics of hidden meaning, or cunningly wrought from material as hard as adamant in an age which was ignorant of the use of the metals,—instead of aiding in the solution of the problem, present it in a more perplexing form. Equally obscure and unintelligible, but for the interpreter through whom they now speak, would have forever remained another class of relics come down to us—we mean the straggling footprints of its language, impressed upon the beautiful objects of nature among which this mysterious people lived and passed away.

It is with such fragmentary remains of a now dead tongue that this paper is concerned; principally with words belonging to the euphonious dialect of the Unamis or Delawares of the lowlands, the first of the copper-colored aborigines, who witnessed the advent of the white man from countries beyond the “great water,” and the rising of the sun.

When Mr. Heckewelder undertook to restore the mutilated forms of Indian appellations of mountains, rivers and localities current among the whites of his time, and then to point out their significance, he did a work for which he is entitled to grateful remembrance. These names are now no longer empty sounds. They have become as it were living things, endowed with the faculty of speech. Transformed by him into tutelary spirits, they cling like dryads and hamadryads to the inanimate objects to which they were long ago attached, and keep watch over the artless records inscribed upon them by another race of men. Some fix the localities of events that belong to the history of nations or of incidents that occurred in the experience of individuals,—some the favorite haunts of the animals of the chase or the habitat of those spontaneous products of nature which ministered to the Indian's daily wants; others afford us glimpses of his sylvan life when on the hunt or on the war-path, or are descriptive of peculiarities in the landscape, of its flora or of its fauna; while together they people portions of our country with historical recollections of their former occupants which would otherwise have been inevitably lost.

In preparing this paper, the editor took some liberties with Mr. Heckewelder's MS., deeming it desirable to avoid repetitions, to abbreviate modes of expression where it could be done without involving a sacrifice of the compiler's meaning, and to adapt topographical descriptions to the geography of the present day. An alphabetical arrangement of the names suggested itself at once as the most convenient for reference. The historical annotations were drawn from a variety of trustworthy sources, and whilst in their selection preference was given to such matter as belongs to Moravian history, the attempt was made in all cases to adduce the earliest use or mention on record of the names under consideration. The following maps were freely consulted in this effort: 1st. "A Map of the Middle British Colonies in America and of Aquanishuonigy, the Country of the Confederate Indians, comprehending Aquanishuonigy proper, their place of residence, (that part of the State of New York lying south of the Mohawk)—Ohio (embracing the region of country south of the Maumee as far down as the Kentucky) and Tiiuxsoaruntie (the country north of the Maumee and west of the Huron, as high as Lake Huron) their deer-hunting countries,—and Coursavage (upper New York, south of the St.

Lawrence) and Skaniadarade (the country lying north of Lake Erie) their beaver-hunting country;” “published by Act of Parliament by Lewis Evans, June 22, 1755, and sold by R. Dodsley in Pall Mall, London, and by the author in Philadelphia. Engraved by James Turner, of Philadelphia.” Being dedicated to the Honble Thomas Pownall, Esq., the map is illuminated with the coat of arms of the Pownall family, blazoned as follows: Arms. Arg., a lion rampant, sa. charged on the breast with a cross paté of the first. Crest. A lion’s jambe erased, erect ppr, grasping a key or, from which a chain is reflexed of the last. 2. “A Map of the improved part of the Province of Pennsylvania, humbly dedicated to the Hon. Thomas Penn and Richard Penn, Esqrs., true and absolute Proprietaries and Governors of the Province of Pennsylvania, and Counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex on Delaware, by Nicholas Seull, and published according to Act of Parliament, January 1, 1759.” The formula of dedication appearing on this invaluable historical chart is inscribed within elaborate scroll-work, surrounded by the arms and crest of the Penn family blazoned thus: Arms. Arg. on a fess sa. three plates. Crest, A demi-lion rampant, ppr. gorged with a collar sa. charged with three plates. Motto. Mercy and Justice. 3. “A Map of the State of Pennsylvania, by Reading Howell. Respectfully inscribed to Thomas Mifflin, Governor, and to the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by the author. Published August 1, 1792, for him, and sold by James Phillips, George’s Yard, Lombard Street, London.” This map is beautifully executed, and shows, to use the words of the draftsman, “the triangle lately purchased by Congress, and the boundary lines of the State as run by the respective Commissioners, with parts of Lake Erie and Presqu’ Isle; also by actual survey the rivers Susquehanna (its north-east and west branches), Tyoga, Sinnemahoning, Juniata, Lehigh, Lexawacsein, Schuylkill, and the western rivers, Ohio, Alleghany, Conewango,—part of the Chautaughque Lake and French Creek, agreeable to the late discoveries,—the Monaungahela, Yaxhiogeni and Kiskemanetas; also the larger creeks, most of the lesser streams, mountains, the principal old roads, with the many new ones in the northern and western parts of the State, and portages and communications according to the late surveys by order of Government; furthermore the division lines of the respective counties und townships, a delineation of the districts of depreciation and donation lands, with all the other districts in the new purchase—besides the seats of justice in the respective counties, iron-works, mills, manufactories, locations of minerals, bridle-roads, Indian-paths, &c., &c.”

It was from a third edition of this map, that Mr. Heckewelder, as he tells us, copied the majority of names in his catalogue; Proud's History of Pennsylvania (Phila. 1798) furnished him with a few, and his friend Samuel D. Franks, of Harrisburg, with those occurring in Indian deeds preserved in the Land Office of the Commonwealth.

David Zeisberger's "Essay of a Delaware Indian and English Spelling-book for the use of the Christian Indians on the Muskingum" (Phila. 1776) supplied the vocables which are incorporated in the notes for the purpose of confirming or illustrating Heckewelder's interpretation.

In conclusion, it may be stated that the Moravian missionaries of the last century were unanimous in pronouncing the Unami dialect of the Delaware, despite its many gutturals and aspirates, eminently musical, and well adapted by its structure to the purposes of public harangue or oratory. A German tongue, they add, finds no difficulty in mastering even its characteristic sounds, and enjoys the advantage of meeting with vowels that differ as to their power, in no respect from those with which it is already familiar. The absence of the consonants r, f, and v, the accumulation of the k sounds (all enunciated from the depths of the throat), the paucity of monosyllabic and the abundance of compound and polysyllabic words, are marked peculiarities of this dialect. The last feature renders its acquisition extremely difficult. Finally, it should be kept in mind that in words of three syllables, the stress of the voice generally falls upon the penult; in polysyllables, however, always; and that a violation of rules of accent, in most cases, involves an entire change of signification.

John G. E. Heckewelder, missionary to the Delawares, was born March 12, 1743, in Bedford O. E. whither his father (who was a native of Moravia), had been sent from Herrnhut, a few years previous, to labor in the service of the Brethren's Church. His childhood was spent at the Brethren's schools at Buttermere, in Wilts, and at Smith-house and Fulneck in Yorkshire. In 1754 he accompanied his parents to Bethlehem, whence, on leaving school, he was placed at Christian's Spring, where he engaged in the labors of the farm, then worked by the young men of the settlement for the benefit of their Economy. He was next indentured to William Nixon a cedar-cooper at Bethlehem. It was while thus employed that the desire he had for some time felt of becoming an evangelist to the Indians was gratified, as in the spring of 1762 he was called to accompany Frederick Post, who had planned a mission among the tribes of the far west, to the Tuscarawas branch of the Muskingum. But the Pontiac war broke out, and the adventurous attempt was abandoned before the expiration of the year.

In the interval between 1763 and 1771, Mr. Heckewelder was occasionally dispatched from his cooper's shop in the capacity of a messenger or runner in the service of the mission, to Friedenshütten on the Wyalusing, and to Indian towns on the Susquehanna. The most active period of his life, however, dates from 1771, and covers an interval of fifteen years, during which he participated in the various fortunes of the Moravian Indians, accompanying them on their tedious migrations westward,—from the Susquehanna to the Allegheny, thence to the Big Beaver, and thence to the Muskingum, sharing their joys and their sorrows, in times of peace and war, “in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of his countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the wilderness, in weariness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness;” and, yet spared as to his life to a good old age, in the quiet days of which, when resting from his labors, he drew up his well known “Narrative” of eventful years in his own experience and in the history of his Church.

In the autumn of 1786, on withdrawing from active service in the mission, Mr. Heckewelder settled with his wife (Sarah, m. n. Ohneberg, whom he had married in 1780) and two daughters at Bethlehem. This change, however, brought him no rest, as much of his time for the next fifteen years was devoted to the interests of the Church and her missions, in behalf of which he undertook frequent long and trying journeys. In 1792 and 1793, Government associated him with United States Commissioners to treat for peace with the Indians of the Maumee and the Wabash. This was a high testimonial of confidence in his knowledge of Indian life and Indian affairs. The remuneration he received for these services was judiciously economized for his old age, his immediate wants being supplied by his handicraft, and the income accruing from a nursery he had planted on his return from the western country. There are orchards still standing in the vicinity of Bethlehem set out by John Heckewelder and his daughters.

In 1801 he removed with his family to Gnadenhütten on the Tuscarawas, and was a resident of the State of Ohio for nine years. Mr. Heckewelder now became a man of official business, having been entrusted by the "Society of the United Brethren for Propagating the Gospel among the Heathen,"* with the care of the reservation of 12,000 acres of land on the Muskingum, held in trust by said Society for the benefit of the Moravian Indians. He was also in the civil service, being a Postmaster and a Justice of the Peace.

In 1810 he returned to Bethlehem, built a house (still standing on Cedar Alley), planted the premises with trees and shrubs from their native forest, surrounded himself with birds and wild flowers, and through these beautiful things of nature with which they were associated in their woodland homes, sought to prolong fellowship with his beloved Indians. In 1815 he was called to mourn the departure of his wife to the eternal world.

At a time when there was a growing spirit of inquiry among men of science in the department of Indian archæology, it need not surprise us, that Mr. Heckewelder was sought out in his retirement, and called on to contribute from the store of his experience. In this way originated his intimacy with Duponceau and Wistar of the American Philosophical Society, and that career of literary labor to which he dedicated the lonely and latter years of his life. In addition to occasional essays which are incorporated in the Transactions of that Society, Mr. Heckewelder in 1818 published his well known "Account of the History, Manners and Customs of the Indian nations who once inhabited Pennsylvania and the neighboring States," a work which was received with almost unqualified approbation. Fenimore Cooper, when venturing upon a new field of romance, drew much of his inspiration from the pages of his fascinating volume. The "Narrative of the Mission of the United Brethren among the Delaware and Mohican Indians," appeared in 1820, and in 1822, Mr. Heckewelder, at the request of members of the American Philosophical Society, made the collection of Indian appellations here offered to the reader. This was one of his last efforts; another year of suffering, and on the 30th of January, 1823, the friend of the Delawares, having lived to become a hoary old man of seventy-nine winters, passed away.

He left three daughters; Johanna Maria, born April 16, 1781, at Salem, Tuscarawas County, Ohio, (she died at Bethlehem, Sept. 19, 1868); Anna Salome, born August 13, 1784, at New Gnadenhütten on the river Huron, Michigan; (she married Joseph Rice of Bethlehem, and died January 15, 1857), and Susanna, born at Bethlehem Dec. 31, 1786; (she married J. Christian Luckenbach of Bethlehem, and died Feb. 8, 1867).

Mr. Heckewelder was a fair representative of the Moravian missionary of the last century,—one of a class of men whose time was necessarily divided between the discharge of spiritual and secular duties; who preached the Gospel and administered the sacraments in houses built by their own hands; who wielded the axe as well as the sword of the Spirit, and who by lives of self-denial and patient endurance, sustained a mission among the aborigines of this country in the face of disappointments and obstacles, which would have discouraged any but men of their implicit faith in the Divine power of the Christian religion.

The subject of this notice was no scholar; nor did he make any literary pretensions. Despite this, however, and although his mode of giving expression to thought is German, his writings are characterized by a pleasing simplicity of diction, and an honesty of purpose, which enlist the sympathy of the reader. It would be presumptuous to claim for him infallibility, as we know that even the best of men are led astray, or err in their search after truth. It would be as presumptuous however to deny his statements all claim to respect. Hence we do not hesitate to say, that John Heckewelder's contributions to the store of knowledge we possess respecting Indian traditions, language, manners and customs, and life and character, are worthy of the degree of regard that is usually accorded to men of intelligence, and disinterestedness of purpose, whose position permitted them to ascertain or to observe what they relate.

For the curious reader, we append the following enumeration of his many journeys and their distances, found among Mr. Heckewelder's private papers, in possession of Mr. Henry B. Luckenbach, of Bethlehem, a grandson.

1. DELAWARE NAMES OF RIVERS, STREAMS AND LOCALITIES IN PENNSYLVANIA.

ALLEGHENY, corrupted from Alligéwi—the name of a race of Indians* said to have dwelt along the river of that name,† and in

* Of the wars of the Lenape and Mengwe with the Alligewi, and of the discomfiture and expulsion of the latter from Alligewinink, Heckewelder records the following tradition in his History of Indian Nations. The Lenape (the Delawares), resided many hundred years ago in a far distant country in the western part of the American Continent. For some reason they determined to migrate eastward, and accordingly set out in a body. After a very long journey and many nights' encampments by the way, they at length arrived at the Namaesi Sipu (i. e. the River of Fish, the Mississippi) where they fell in with the Mengwe (the Iroquois), who were likewise emigrating from a distant country in search of new homes, and who had struck that river somewhat higher up. Spies sent out in advance by the Lenape to reconnoitre had ascertained, before the arrival of the main body of their people on the Mississippi, that the country east of it was inhabited by a very powerful nation, who had numerous large towns built on the rivers flowing through it. This was the nation of the Alligewi. Many wonderful things are told of them. They are said to have been remarkably tall and stout, and even of gigantic stature, far exceeding in size the tallest of the Lenape. They were likewise skilled in the arts of defensive warfare, of throwing up entrenchments and of erecting fortifications, remains of some of which are to be seen at the present day in the western country.

The Lenape, on arriving at the Mississippi, thought it prudent, before crossing the stream, to send a messenger to the Alligewi to request permission of them to settle in their neighborhood. This was refused. Instead, however, the Alligewi expressed a willingness to allow them a passage through their country. The Lenape accordingly began to cross the river. It was now that the Alligewi, on seeing that the strangers were a numerous people, (not to be counted by thousands), moved by fear, fell treacherously upon those who had already crossed, slew many of them, and threatened the others with annihilation, should they persist in the passage. On recovering from the surprise, the Lenape held a council, in which they considered what was best to be done, whether to retreat, or whether to measure their strength with those who had cruelly betrayed their confidence. They felt disposed to do the latter, for they were a brave people, and incensed at the loss of their kinsmen. But prudence forbade them engaging in an unequal contest, and they were about setting their faces westward, when the Mengwe, who from their encampment had been spectators of the unprovoked attack, proposed to render them assistance, to join them in a war of conquest and extermination with the Alligewi, and after its successful close, to share with them the conquered territory. "Thus," they said, "their wanderings would end, and there they would find the homes in search of which they had left the setting sun."

Having thus united their forces, the Lenape and Mengwe declared war against Alligewinink, i. e., all the country west of the Alleghenies, drained by the tributaries of the Ohio and their numerous sources. The Shawanose called this river Palawu-thepiki.

APPOLACON, (emptying into the Susquehanna from the South, in Susquehanna County), corrupted from Apelogácan, (in Minsi Delaware Apellochgacan), signifying, whence the messenger returned.‡

the Alligewi, and great battles were fought, in which many warriors fell on both sides. It was a long and bloody contest, in which quarter was neither asked nor given. The enemy stockaded their large towns and erected fortifications, which the allies besieged, and sometimes took by storm. In a certain engagement the slain were thrown together in large heaps and covered with earth,—their places of sepulture forming tumuli or mounds, that for many generations marked the site of the great battle-field. Thus hard pressed the Alligewi, seeing their destruction inevitable, withdrew from the contest, abandoned their country to the invaders, and fled down the Mississippi, never to return. Hereupon the conquerors made a division of the country, whereby the Mengwe came into possession of the lands about the great lakes and their tributary streams, the Lenape of those situate to the south, whence these gradually moved eastward, even to the Atlantic coast, until when the white man came, the Delaware or Lenapewihittuck (i. e., the river of the Lenape) was in the very heart of their settlements.

† The Allegheny was called by the French, on their first hostile occupation of Pennsylvania territory in 1753, "La Belle Rivière," a name subsequently applied to the Ohio, the former being regarded not as a tributary, but as the main stream of the great river of Alligewinink. Hence, too, Indian traders also called the river below the Forks the Allegheny, or else used this name and Ohio without discrimination when speaking of the great river of Western Pennsylvania. The Delawares called the Allegheny or Ohio, Kit-hanne, i. e., the main stream in its region of country, it being the same descriptive appellation by which they designated their great river of the East, i. e., the Delaware. Jonah Davenport and James Le Tort, Indian traders, in Oct., 1731, reported that on Kittanning River there dwelt mostly Delawares, 50 families, 100 men, with Kykenhammo, their chief. (See Delaware, Kittanning and Ohio, in this register.)

‡ Al-lo-ga-can, a servant, a messenger. Zr.

§ Ach-qua-ni-can a bush-net; ach-quo-ne-mun, to fish with a bush-net; ach-qua-na-u, caught with the bush-net.—Zr. "As soon as the shad (scha-wa-nam-neck, the south-fish, compounded of scha-wa-ne-u south, and na-nees fish) come from the south to deposit their spawn, running up the rivers from the sea, the Indians assemble for the annual fishery. And first they build a stone dam across the stream, the two wings or walls of which converge into a pound or wooden box, perforated with holes. This is the trap. A wild grape-vine of sufficient length to reach from shore to shore is then cut, and loaded down with brush, secured at intervals of from ten to fifteen feet. This barrier is stretched across the river, perhaps a

The frightened fish are driven before it back into the dam, and thence by the Indians, posted on its walls, into the pound, where they are caught by hand. The narrow valley or gorge of the Aquanshicola (written sometimes Aquanshahales in old deeds), was visited by Zinzendorf in July of 1742, and by missionaries from Bethlehem, until the commencement of Indian hostilities in the fall of 1755. It most have been a favorite planting-spot of the Delawares. It may have been inhabited by even an earlier race, by a race of strong men that wrought in stone as we do in wood, handling and fashioning huge blocks taken out of the mountain side, with the same ease and accuracy of design as with which are fashioned the lesser implements of war and the chase, found so plentifully along the Aquanshicola. If ever there was a relic of a "stone-age," it is the so-called "Indian mill (tach-quoa-hoa-car) of the Aquanshicola," now in the museum of Mr. Richard Crist of Nazareth, Pa. Of its history we know only the following: Mr. Chas. E. Buskirk of Chestnut Hill Township, now sixty-five years of age, states that in his grandfather's time the mill was discovered, partially embedded in the ground, near the foot of the mountain on the left bank of the creek, not far from the Ross Common Tavern, and at once became an object of curiosity to the neighborhood, as well as to passing travelers. In 1860, Mr. Reuben Hartzell, on whose land it lay, had it disinterred, removed and set up in front of the Tavern. Mr. Crist purchased and had it conveyed to Nazareth in Sept. of 1869. This unique piece of antiquity is wrought from a solid block of gray sandstone, and in form is a perfect frustum of a cone, with an altitude of three feet, the diameter of the lower base being the same, and that of the upper base being one foot six inches. A funnel-shaped cavity tapering down from a ten-inch to a five-inch diameter, is chiseled into the block to the depth of two feet, at which point the polished circumference shows where the stone that ground or cut the corn, revolved in its socket. From here the grist fell through a hole, nine inches square, morticed into the lower base. The weight of the block is 2185 pounds. It would almost appear as if the mill were worked by an application of the power at the extremities of levers, fitted into the upright that carried the cutter or crusher at its base, after the fashion of a capstan—that the mill was placed over a pit, and that the grist was caught in bags or other receptacles placed in the latter. The crushing or cutting stone, although lost, is well remembered by inhabitants of Ross Common.

Frederic Post, in the summer of 1758 undertook a perilous mission in behalf of the Proprietary Government to the Delawares of Ohio,—in the course of which he penetrated the wilds of Pennsylvania to their extreme western limits. His journal appears in full in the third volume of the Archives of Pennsylvania. Accompanied by several friendly Indians, he set out from Bethlehem on the 19th of July for Fort Augusta, (Sunbury). There he took the path along the right bank of the West Branch, leading over the Chillisquaque, over Muncy, Loyalsock and Pine Creeks,—crossed the Susquhanna at the Great Island, and then struck one of the main Indian thoroughfares to the West. On the 3d of July he forded Beech Creek, on whose left bank he came to the forks of the road. One branch led south-west along the Bald Eagle, past the Nest to Frankstown, and thence to the Ohio country;—the other due West to Chinklacamoose. Post took the latter. It led over the Moshannon, which he crossed on the 1st of August. Next day he arrived at the village of Chinklacamoose in the "Clear Fields." Hence the travelers struck a trail to the north-west, crossed Toby's Creek (Clarion River), and on the 7th of August reached Fort Venango, built by the French in 1753, in "the forks of the Allegheny." "I prayed the Lord," writes Post, "to blind the French, as he did the enemies of Lot and Elisha, that I might pass unknown." Leaving Venango, Post and his companions turned their horses' heads to the south-west,—struck the Conequenessing on the 12th of August,—crossed the Big Beaver, and next day arrived at Kaskaskie, the terminus of their journey and the head-quarters of "The Beaver" and "Shingas," war-chiefs of the Western Delawares. Post was, therefore, the first Moravian west of the Alleghenies. He closes his interesting journal with these words: "Thirty-two days that I lay in the woods, the heavens were my covering, and the dew fell so hard sometimes, that it pricked close to the skin.

During this time nothing lay so heavily on my heart as the man who went along with me (Shamokin Daniel), for he thwarted me in everything I said or did; not that he did it against me, but against the country on whose business I was sent. When he was with the French he would speak against the English, and when he was with the English he would speak against the French. The Indians observed that he was unreliable, and desired me not to bring him any more to transact business between them and the Province. And it was owing to him, too, that I failed in obtaining an interview with the prisoners. But praise and glory be to the Lamb that was slain, who brought me through a country of dreadful jealousy and mistrust, where the Prince of this world holds rule and government over the children of disobedience. It was my Lord who preserved me amid all difficulties and dangers, and His Holy Spirit directed me. I had no one to commune with but Him; and it was He who brought me from under a thick, heavy and dark cloud into the open air, for which I adore, and praise and worship Him. I know and confess that He, the Lord my God, the same who forgave my sins and washed my heart in his most precious blood, grasped me in his almighty hand and held me safe—and hence I live no longer for myself, but for Him, whose holy will to do is my chiefest pleasure.”

The town, or towns of Kaskaskie (the Kaskaskies), are first mentioned in official records, in Weisser's Journal of his Proceedings at Logstown, fifteen miles below Pittsburg, on the right bank of the Ohio. “To-day (Aug. 29th, 1748), he writes, “my companions went to Kaskaskie, a large Indian town about thirty miles off.” “Early this morning,” (Aug. 17th, 1758) writes Post in his Journal, “the Indians called all the people together to clear the place where they intended to hold the Council, it being in the midst of the town. Kaskaskie is divided into four towns, each at a distance from the other, and the whole settlement consists of about ninety houses and two hundred able warriors.”

Howell's Map notes Kaskaskie on the Little Beaver or Mahoning Creek, now in Lawrence County. Heckewelder crossed the Big Beaver in April of 1762, then on his way with Post to the Tuscarawas, (in Stark County, Ohio), the first scene of his missionary labors. Between 1770 and 1773 Moravian Indians under Zeisberger were settled at Friedensstadt (Town of Peace), on the West bank of the Big Beaver, in the southern part of Lawrence County, about 15 miles south-east from Kaskaskie. The Conestogas remained on their old seats long after the other Indians on the Susquehanna had been crowded by the advance of civilization beyond Shamokin, and it was upward of sixty years after William Penn had been at their town, and full twenty-five after Tagodalessa has ceased grieving for his child, that they were barbarously exterminated to a man, by the Scotch-Irish partisans of Paxton.

† This creek perpetuates the name of the Conoy, Ganawese or Piscatawa Indians, who in 1700 entered the Province from the South, and settled "near the head of Potomok." For upwards of 40 years, we find their deputies participating in conferences held with Wm. Penn, or with the Proprietaries' Governors at Philadelphia, or on the Susquehanna. In 1705, (at which time they were reduced by sickness to a small number) they requested permission of Gov. Evans, through Manangy, "the Indian Chief on Schuylkill," to settle among the Schuylkill Indians near Tulphocken. Instead, however, they planted some miles above Conestoga, at Connejuhera. Their village here was called Dekanouya, and the Governor states it to have been nine miles distant from Pequea. In 1719, the Conoy Town, we learn, was a halting-point for warriors of the Five Nations, as they returned north from marauds against the Catawbans of Virginia and the Carolinas. In June of 1733 the Conoys or Ganawese "living between Paxton and Conestoga," sent a messenger to Shikellimy of Shamokin, (for being tributaries of the Six Nations they looked to Shikellimy for counsel) to inform him of intelligence come to them, to the effect that the Governor of Virginia was about to send a party of armed men to cut them off for a murder committed within his jurisdiction, and charged to them.

In May of 1743, Gov. Thomas laid before the Board the following letter written by Thomas Cookson, of Lancaster, at the instance of the Conoy Indians. "The Indians of the Conoytown on the east side of Susquehanna, in April last, sent me a message, signifying their having something to communicate to your Honor, and desired me to be at home on the 11th of the same month, on which day they came down to the number of fourteen. Having invited them into the house, Old Sack, their chief, spoke to the following purpose: We desire you to acquaint our brother the Governor, that our forefathers came from Piscatua to an island in Potomock, and from there down to Philadelphia in old Proprietor Penn's time (May 1701) in order to show their friendship to the Proprietor;—that after their return they brought down all their brothers from Potomock to Conejohala, on the east side of Susquehanna, and built a town there,—that the Six Nations had told them there was land enough, they might choose their place of settlement any where about Susquehanna,—that accordingly they thought fit to remove higher up that river to the Conoytown where they now live; and on their first settling there, the Indians of the Six Nations came down and made their fire, and all the great men declared the fire of their kindling to be in token of their approbation of the settlement; but that now the land all around them being settled by white people, their hunting is spoiled, and they have been long advised by the Six Nations to leave their place and go higher up the river, either at the mouth of Conedogwinet or of Ju-

These surveys were made prior to the walk of a day and a half in Sept. of 1737. Lappawinzor (whose portrait was presented to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, by the late Granville Penn), at that time king of Hockendauqua, witnessed the walk in part, and expressed his dissatisfaction at the walkers in the memorable words—"No sit down to smoke—no shoot a squirrel; but lun, lun, lun all day long!" His village lay between Howell's grist-mill and the mouth of the Creek. Near it the tired walkers passed the night of the 19th and 20th of September, on the completion of a twelve hours' walk, bivouacking before a blazing fire, while the Indians in the village below prolonged a cantico till into the hours of the early morning.

They were told that Harris had only built the house for carrying on his trade,—that his plantation at Paxton is his place of dwelling, and it is not to be supposed he will remove from thence. Scull's Map calls it "the Ohio Path." In August of 1756, Col. The word Lechauwékink, was shortened into Lecha, the name still in use among the descendants of German settlers,—of which abbreviation Lehigh is a corruption.

Lechau-hánne, literally a forked stream, is the word also applied by the Delawares to the angle or wedge of land lying between the confluence of two streams. The forks, most frequently alluded to in early records of Provincial Pennsylvania, are those of the Delaware and its West Branch or Lehigh—called the Forks of the Delaware.

The Moravians labored in the Gospel among the Germans of Macungy as early as 1742, in July of which year Gottlieb Pezold, of Bethlehem, occupied that field. It was one of the few outside of their own settlements in which they effected a permanent footing. In 1747 they organized a congregation among the settlers near the South Mountain, five miles South-west from Allentown, and also established a school, which was in operation until 1754. * The name occurs in the deed executed by the Indians to Wm. Markham, (Penn's deputy,) on the 15th July, 1782, (the oldest Indian deed on record), in which indenture the tract of land conveyed to the Proprietor is described as “lying in the Province of Pennsylvania, beginning at a certain white oak on the land now in the tenure of John Wood, and by him called the Gray Stones over against the falls of Delaware River, and so from thence up by the River's side to a corner marked spruce-tree with the letter P, at the foot of a mountain, and from the said corner marked spruce-tree along by the ledge or foot of the mountains, west north-west to a corner white-oak marked with the letter P, standing by the Indian path that leads to an Indian town called Playwickey, and near the head of a creek called Towsissinock, and from thence westward to the Creek called Neshamony's Creek, and along by the said Neshamony's Creek unto the river Delaware, alias, Makerisk-hickon, and so bounded by the said main river, to the said first-mentioned white-oak in John Wood's land.” This purchase situate within the great bend of the Delaware, and between the falls opposite Trenton and the Neshaminy, was made by Markham for Penn's private use, and became the seat of the Manor of Pennsbury.

The curious instrument from which the above recital of boundaries was taken is in the possession of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

‡ Manatawny is mentioned in official records as early as July of 1707. In May of 1728 it was the scene of a collision between the settlers and some Shawanese who had come down from Peechoquealin armed, and with a Spanish Indian, as it was thought, for their Captain. Many of the back inhabitants in consequence quitted their houses, being under apprehension of numbers of foreign Indians, Twightwees or Flatheads, coming to attack them, and several Palatine families gathered together in a mill near New Hanover, there to defend themselves.

¶ Early records assign this division of the Lenape, to the North-eastern wilds of the Province, within the country which is called on old maps "the land abounding in the sugar tree." The upper valley of the Delaware, however, was pre-eminently the home of the Minsies, (the historic Minsinks,) where they built their towns, planted their corn and kindled their council fires, and whence they set out on the hunt or on the war-path. The Minsies, Monseys, or Muncys, were the most warlike of their people, and proverbially impatient of the white man's presence in the Indian country. The murder of one Wright at John Burt's house in Snaketown, in Sept. of 1727, was the act of Minsies, and subjects we are told of Kindassowa, who resided "at the Forks of the Susquehanna above Mechayomy." The following notice of the physical peculiarities and traits of these mountaineers, is copied from a paper, in the hand-writing of Mr. Heckewelder. "According to my observation and judgment of Indian tribes, the Minsies have a peculiarity which signalises them from other nations or tribes; and I have seldom failed in pointing them out among a crowd, where they, Delawares and Mohicans were to-

They are averse to manners, prone to mischief and friends of war. Their natural complexion is dark, more so than any Indians I have yet seen, but being within these twenty last years much mixed by intermarriages with other tribes, their color has become lighter or fairer.”

“From the Falls of Delaware River the Indians go in canoes up the said river to an Indian town called Minisinks, which is accounted from the Falls about 80 miles; but this they perform by great labor in setting up against the stream. The settlement of “the Minisinks” by whites from Esopus prior to the purchase of the Indian claim, (ostensibly consummated by the “one and a half day’s walk,” in the autumn of 1737) was one of the grievances that alienated the Delawares from the English, and provoked the war of 1755.

The Shawanese here gave us a friendly reception, supplying us also with bear's meat, in return for which Bro. Grubé made the children a present of dried apples. After dinner we came to the mouth of Muncy Creek, 40 miles above Shamokin. As the Susquehanna was high and the current rapid, we left our canoe in care of an Indian acquaintance, shouldered our packs, and keeping along the bank of the river, arrived at Otstonwakin in the evening.—Journal of Mack and Grubé from Bethlehem to Quenischaschacki.

OHIO. (Note. Having always failed to satisfy myself that this name was an Indian word, (excepting perhaps as an abbreviation), I will proceed to state my views on its probable origin, based upon observation and hearsay, during my residence among the Indians of the Ohio country. There were persons who would have had me believe that Ohio signified “the beautiful river,” and others, “the river red with blood,” or “the bloody river.” This diversity of interpretation exciting my curiosity, I took special care to arrive at a true solution of the problem, by all the means at hand,—by questioning intelligent Indians, and by giving close attention to their conversation, whenever its subject was this river, or any event that had occurred along its course. That an Indian word of but four letters should be so comprehensive as to express the complex idea beautiful river, or bloody river, I could never concede. Could it even have embraced so much, I was totally at a loss to which of the Indian languages to assign it. The latter designation, furthermore, I knew to be a figurative one, and suggestive of the bloody wars that had been conducted from time immemorial within the country washed by the Ohio and its tributaries.

Only when conversing with traders, or white travelers, to whom the word was familiar, would the Indians, in naming the river in question, call it the Ohio; invariably, however, emphasizing the antepenult, viz: O-hi-o, and not the penult, as we do. This circumstance satisfied me that the word was not in the vocabulary of the Lennape or Delawares. Among themselves, the Indians always called the river Kit-hánne (in Minsi Delaware, Gicht-hánne) which

Thus much for the name of the river in question current among the Delawares,—which name I hold to be the national or historical one. Next, as to the origin of the name Ohio current with us. In tracing this it will be necessary for me to adduce a series of words from the Delaware, all of which have a bearing on the question under consideration. I borrow both from the Unami and Minsi dialects.

Unami.	Minsi.
Ohui , very ; when prefixed, written Ohí .	Achwi , very.
Opeu , opsit , white.	Wapeu , wapsit , white.
Opíechen , it looks white.	Wapíechen , it looks white.
Ohiopiechen , it is of a whitish color.	Waheicapiechen , it is of a whitish color.
Opeléchen , white, bright.	Woapeléchen , white, bright.
Opeek , white with froth.	Wapeek , white with froth.
Ohíopeek , very white with froth, or white-caps.	Achwiwápeek , very white with froth, or white-caps.
Ohiophánne , a very white stream.	Achwiwoaphánne , a very white stream.
Ohiopeekhánne , a very deep and white stream, whitened all over with white-caps.	Achwiwapeekhánne , a very deep and white stream, whitened all over with white-caps.

These words, in connection with what I shall proceed to relate, will, I think, be sufficient to convince the reader of the plausibility if not of the correctness of my theory, that the name Ohio is only the fragment of an Indian word or words, which in their entirety were used by the Delawares, to describe a certain condition of the main river (kit-hanne) of their western country,—but not as its name. The Ohio being often wide, deep and with no perceptible current in its course for miles, the slightest wind that blows up stream, invariably covers its surface with what are provincially called white-caps. I have seen the river, when under the influence of a westerly or south-westerly wind, (the prevailing winds of the country) in this condition for several days in succession, so that my Indian companions and myself would be obliged to haul our canoes on shore, well knowing that navigation on the river, when covered with white-caps, was perilous. On such occasions the Indians never failed to apply one or another of the above quoted words to the condition of the river—ejaculating “juh Ohiopiéchen!” “Lo! it is of a whitish color!” or, “Ohiopeek!” “it is very white!” or “Ohiophanne!” “the stream is very white!” and at points where they supposed the river to be very deep, they would exclaim “Kitschi Ohiopeekhanne!” i. e., “verily this is a deep and white stream!”

Thus much for the derivation of Ohio. Its fragmentary form is easily accounted for. We owe it to the traders and settlers along the frontiers. The former penetrated the Indian country solely for gain; the latter were generally an illiterate class, and both were satisfied in communicating with the natives, by words (however incorrectly or carelessly spoken) which sufficed to render themselves intelligible. Whenever possible, they would abbreviate Indian words, or adapt them to their powers of enunciation. To such a degree was this corruption of language practised, that the Indians would even indulge in incessant laughter at the quaintness and impropriety of speech made use of by their white visitors.

On their return to the settlements, the traders would report where they had been, and thus ingraft their names of streams and places upon the vocabulary of the whites. In this way, I presume to account for the origin of the name Ohio.

OHIOPILE, (the falls or rapids of the Youghiogheny in Fayette County), corrupted from Ohiopéhelle, signifying, water whitened by froth by its rapid descent over rocks and stones.

OLEY, (a township in Berks County), corrupted from Olink, or Olo (also Wahlink, or Wahlo,* signifying a hole, a cavern, a cell, or “cache;” also a cove, that is, a tract of land encompassed by hills.

OSWAYA, (a tributary of the Allegheny in Potter County), corrupted from Utschéja,† signifying, the place of flies.

PAINT CREEK, (a branch of the Conemaugh or Kiskiminetas, in Cambria County), called by the Delawares Wallamink, signifying where there is paint.

* Woa-lac, a hole. Wal-he-u, he is digging a hole.—Zr.

Oley was one of the first fields of Moravian religious activity in the Province of Pennsylvania.

PAXTON, (emptying into the Susquehanna from the East, at Harrisburg), corrupted from Peekstank,* signifying, where the waters stand—the place of dead water, whether in a stream, or pool, or lake.

PENNYPACK,† (emptying into the Delaware in Philadelphia County), corrupted from Pemápeek, signifying, a body of water with no current, whether a stream, a pool, or lake.

PEQUEA,‡ (emptying into the Susquehanna in Lancaster County), corrupted from Picueu, a Shawano word.

* Tup-peek, a spring, a well, standing water. Hanne, a stream. Onk, ank, ink, nk, and k, local suffixes.—Zr. The name is written also Peshtang and Pestank in early official papers. "July 25, 1709, the chiefs of several nations living on the Susquehanna at Peshtang, above Conestoga, met Gov. Gookin in council at Philadelphia." In 1726 John Harris, a Yorkshireman, settled at the mouth of Paxton Creek, traded largely with the Indians by whom he was surrounded, cleared a farm, and kept a ferry. "Harris' Ferry over the Susquehanna," became an important outpost in the Province. John Harris, Jr., born on the Paxton in 1726, inherited from his father 700 acres of land, on a part of which Harrisburg was laid out in 1785. Paxton Township was erected in what was then Lancaster County, in 1729. Its first settlers were Scotch immigrants from the north of Ireland (Scotch-Irish), who, in order to protect their frontier-places against the Indians, on the opening of hostilities, organized a company of rangers. To these belonged the "Paxton Boys" who exterminated the last of the Conestogas on their hereditary seats in Manor Township, Lancaster County, in December of 1763.

† In a letter to James Logan, written at Pennsbury House, the 22d day of 6th month, 1700, Penn directs him in these words, "Urge the Justices about the bridge at Pemepecka and Poquessin forthwith for a carriage, or I cannot come to town."—Memoirs of the Historical Society of Penn'a., Vol. IX.

The name of this stream occurs for the first time in deeds, in one executed by four Indian Shakamakers on the 14th day of the 5th month, 1683, to Wm. Penn, for "lands lying between Manaiunk, alias Schuylkill, and Pemapeka Creek."

‡ Written in early records Pequehan, and Peckquea, was already before 1707 a settlement of Shawanese (Southerners or South-men; Scha-wa-ne-u, south, Sha-wa-ne-munk, southward, Sha-wa-noch-que a Shawano woman.—Zr.) at the mouth of the Creek of that name, and the residence of Martin Chartiere, a well-known trader and interpreter, but "late French glover of Philadelphia." When Gov. Evans, in June of 1707, visited the Indians on the Susquehanna, he was conducted to Pequea by Opessah, the Shawano Chief, and on his entrance into the town saluted by a volley of small arms. Swiss immigrants settled a tract of 10,000 acres on the North side of Pequea Creek in 1710. In order to secure the good will of the neighboring Indians for these strangers, Gov. Gookin met them in conference at Conestoga in June of 1711, and addressed them through Indian Harry, as follows:

PERKIOMEN, a branch of the Schuylkill in Montgomery County), corrupted from Pakihmomink,* Pakiomink, signifying, where there are cranberries, the place of cranberries. Pakihm, in Delaware, a cranberry.

PINE CREEK, (a branch of the Susquehanna between Lyeoming and Clinton Counties.) In Delaware Cuwenhánne, i. e., pine stream—a stream flowing through pine lands.

PITTSBURG. The Delawares called the site of this city, after its occupation by the French, Menachk-sink, which signifies, where there is a fence, or an enclosure. Menaehk,† is an enclosed spot of ground, a place secure against entrance, hence equivalent to a fortification.

PLAYWICKY,‡ corrupted from Plæuwikiehtit, signifying, the home or habitation of Indians of the Turkey tribe.

PLUM CREEK, (the North branch of Crooked Creek in Armstrong County.) In Delaware, Sipuas-hánne, i. e., plum stream. Sipuássink, signifies, where there are plums.§

POCONO, (emptying into McMichael's Creek in Monroe County), corrupted from Poco-hánne signifying, a stream between mountains.|| Broad Mountain received the name Pocono, from this creek.

POHOPOCO, or Big Creek, (emptying into the Lehigh from the North-east, in Carbon County), corrupted from Poehkapochka, sig-

“Gov. Penn on all occasions being willing to show how great a regard he bears to you has sent this small present (50 lbs. of powder, 1 piece of Stroudwaters, 1 piece of duffels and 100 lbs. of shot) to you, and hath required me to acquaint you that he is about to settle some people upon the branches of Potowmack, and doubts not but that the same mutual friendship which has all along as brothers passed between the inhabitants of this government and you, will also continue betwixt you and those he is about to settle. Furthermore he intends to present five belts of wampum to the Five Nations, and one to you of Conestoga, and requires your friendship to the Palatines settled near Pequea.”

* Occurs the first time in a deed executed by Manghoughan, at Philadelphia, the 3d day of 4th month, 1684, in which he makes over all his land on Pahikihoma to William Penn, “in consideration of two matchcoats, four pair of stockings, and four bottles of cydar.”

† Mee-nachk, a fence, a fort. Me-nach-gink, in the fence. Me-nach-gak, a fence-rail.—Zr.

‡ Occurs in the deed of July, 1684, cited under Makerish-kitton. Pla-e-u, a turkey. Wik, a house.

§ Si-pu-o-man-di-can, wild plums.—Zr.

|| Poek-a-wach-ne, a creek between two hills.—Zr.

nifying, two mountains bearing down upon each other with a stream intervening,—as is the case at the Water-gap.*

POKETO, (emptying into the Allegheny from the South, in Allegheny County,) corrupted from pach gita,† signifying, throw it away, abandon it.

POPONOMING, (a pond, or small lake in Hamilton township, Monroe County), corrupted from Papennámink, signifying, where we are gazing.

POQUESSING, (emptying into the Delaware between Philadelphia and Bucks Counties), corrupted from Poquesink, signifying, where there are mice,—the place of mice.‡

PYMATUNING, (a branch of the Chenango in Mercer County), corrupted from Pihmtomink,§ signifying where the man with the crooked mouth resides,—the home of the man with the crooked mouth. (Note. I was acquainted with the person to whose deformity there is allusion in the name of the creek.)

QUAKAKE, (emptying into the Lehigh from the West, in Carbon County), corrupted from Cuwenkeek,|| signifying pine lands. Cuwen-hánne signifies, pine-land stream, i. e., a stream flowing through pine-lands.

QUEMAHONING, (a branch of the Conemaugh or Kiskiminetas, heading in Somerset County), corrupted from Cuwéi-mahóni, signifying pine-tree lick, i. e., a lick in among pines.

QUENISCHASCHACKI.¶ This name was given by the Delawares

* It is inferable from remarks recurring in diaries kept by the Brethren, that the name Pohopoco or Buch-ka-buch-ka (rock aside of rock, from gan-scha-puchk, a rock, in composition abbreviated into puchk) was applied to the region of the Lehigh Water Gap, running back east of the river, and north of the mountain. Hence it was applied to the main stream of that region, now called Big Creek.

† Pa-ki-ton, to abandon.—Zr.

‡ Ach-po-quees, a mouse.—Zr. This name occurs in the Record of Upland Court, in a minute of Oct. 8, 1678, recording the survey of a tract of 417 acres of land, situate at the mouth of Pont Quesink Creek, to James Sandelands and Lassie Cock. Also in a release executed by King Tamanend, i. e., “the affable,” and three other kings, June 15, 1692, at Philadelphia, in which they release to Wm. Penn and his heirs, any further claims on their part to a tract of land situate between Neshaminal and Poquessing upon the River Delaware, claimed by them from the beginning of the world until the aforesaid day.

§ Pim-e-u, slanting. Pi-moch-que-u, twisted. W'doon, the mouth.—Zr.

|| Cu-we-u-chae, pine wood.—Zr.

¶ Quin, long. Que-nek, length. Schaschuck-ki, straight.—Zr. The Delawares to the long reach in the West Branch of the Susquehanna in Locoming County. Hence, they called the West Branch Quenisch-áchachgek-hánne, which word has been corrupted into Susquehanna.

QUILUTAMEND, signifying, we came unawares upon them, is the name given by the Delawares to a spot, a short distance above the mouth of the Lackawannoek in Luzerne County, situate between a steep mountain and the Susquehanna, where, they told me, their people had surprised and captured a body of Five Nation Indians (Mengwe) in their early wars with that confederacy.

QUITOPAHILLA, (a branch of the Great Swatara in Lebanon County), corrupted from Cuitpehelle, or Cuwitpehelle, signifying, a spring that flows from the ground among pines.

RACCOON CREEK, (emptying into the Ohio from the South in Beaver County). In Delaware, Nachenum-hanne,* i. e., raccoon stream.

REDSTONE CREEK, (a branch of the Monongahela in Fayette County). In Delaware, Machkachsen-hánne, i. e., redstone stream.† Machkachsinnink, signifies, where there are red stones.

SALT LICK, (a branch of the Youghiogheny in Fayette County.) In Delaware Sikhéwi-mahóni.‡ Sikei-hánne signifies a stream flowing from a salt lick.

SANDY LICK, (emptying into the Allegheny from the West, in Venango County.) In Delaware, Legauwi-mahóni.

SANKINACK,§ corrupted from Sank-hánne, signifying, flint stream, i. e., a stream in or along which flint abounds.

SAUCON, (emptying into the Lehigh from the South-west, in had a town of this name on the long reach of the river, said to have stood on the site of Linden, 6 miles east from Jersey Shore. It was repeatedly visited by missionaries from Bethlehem, prior to 1754. Scull's Map notes it.

* Na chenum, a raccoon. Na-che-num-mook, raccoons.—Zr.

† Machk-e-u, red. Mach-zum-men to dye red—machk-te-u, morning-red—mach-gen-ach-gook, the copper snake. Ach-sin, a stone.—Zr.

‡ Si-key, Salt.—Zr.

§ Probably the Delaware name of Tar Run, a small stream that empties into the Lehigh from the West below Weissport, in Carbon County, as may be inferred from the following extract of a letter written from Bethlehem to Count Zinzendorf in June of 1747. "As to the improvements at Gnadenhütten—besides completing the mill-dam and race on the Mahoning, the brethren have thrown a foot-bridge 120 feet long across the Sankinac, two miles below Gnadenhütten. By this means we can communicate with the Mission even in times of freshets, when the Creek runs wild down the gorge and its passage by raft or canoe is extremely perilous."

Northampton County), corrupted from Sakunk,* signifying, where a smaller stream empties into a larger, hence, its place of outlet. (Note. The outlet of the Big Beaver into the Ohio, a point well known to all Indians,—to warriors of different and of the most distant tribes, as well as of those of the vicinity,—their rendezvous in the French wars,—their thoroughfare and place of transit—a point of observation, and the scene of frequent contest and bloodshed, was the best known of the many Sakunks† in the Indian country.)

SCHUYLKILL. The Delawares called the river Ganshowe-lánne,‡ i. e., the roaring stream,—the stream that is noisy in its course over rocks and stones.

SERECHEN, corrupted from Seléhend, or Sinuéhund, signifying, where milking is done,—the place of milking.

* Sa-ku-wit, the mouth of a creek or river.—Zr.

† Conrad Weisser in his Journal to the Ohio mentions Sakunk under the name of Beaver Creek. "August 23, 1748," he writes, "I went to an Indian town about eight miles below Logstown, (chiefly Delawares, the rest Mohawks) to have some belts of wampum made." Barbara Lingaree and Mary Roy, who were taken prisoners on John Penn's Creek in Snyder County, in October of 1755, by French Indians, state, in a deposition made on their release from captivity, that they had first been carried to Kittanning, thence were removed to Fort Duquesne, thence to Sakunk, twenty miles below at the mouth of the Big Beaver,—and in the spring of 1757, to Kaskaskie, up Beaver Creek twenty-five miles." Post, in his Journal to the Ohio records his experience at Sakunk, in these words: "Aug. 20, 1758, we set out from Kaskaskie for Sakunk. My company consisted of twenty-five horsemen and fifteen footmen, and arrived there in the afternoon. The people of this town were very dissatisfied at my coming, and received me in a rough manner. They surrounded me with drawn knives in their hands, so that I could hardly get along, running up against me with their bare breasts, as if they wanted some pretence to kill me. I could read a desire of my life in their countenances,—their faces were quite distorted with rage, and they went so far as to say that I should not live long."

Evans' Map locates Shingas' Town at the outlet of the Big Beaver.

‡ Gan-sche-we-u, it roars. Gans-chi-hit-ta-quot, it makes a terrible noise. Gan-schi-hi-ta-xen, a roaring noise.—Zr. In old deeds the Schuylkill was called Manaiunk. Gerrit van Sweeringen, in his "Account of the settling of the Dutch and Swedes at the Delaware," assigns a reason for the name Schuylkill, by stating "that the Swedes' ship sailed up as high as Tinicum, hiding themselves in a creeke, which is called to this day the Schuyl-kill, from schuylen to hide, that is, in English the Hiding Creek."—Record of Upland Court.

Again it is said, that when the Dutch under Capt. Hendricks, sailed up the Delaware in 1616, not knowing whence the river came whose outlet they were passing, they named it Schuylkill, i. e., the hidden kill or stream.

SHACKMAXON, corrupted from Schachamesink,* signifying, where there are eels, the place of eels. Schachameek, an eel.

SHAMOKIN† (Sunbury) written Schahamóki, or Schahamókin by the Delawares. In early times the place was called Schachaméki, the place of eels, and the creek Schachamékhan, i. e., eel-stream. It was next called Schachhenamendi, signifying, the place where gun barrels are straightened,‡ because it had become the residence of an ingenious Delaware, Nutamees§ by name, who undertook to repair the bent fire-arms of his countrymen.

SHOHOLA, (emptying into the Delaware from the South-west in Pike County) corrupted from Schauwihilla,|| signifying, weak, faint, depressed.

SHOHOKIN, (emptying into the Delaware from the South-west in Wayne County,) corrupted from Schohácan,¶ signifying glue. Schohacaink, where there is glue, where glue is made.

SHUMMONK,** signifies, where there is a horn, the place of the horn.

* Scha cha-meek, an eel, compounded of Scha-chach-ge-u, straight, and na-mees a fish,—the straight fish.—Zr. Others derive the word from Sà-ki-ma, a chief, a king, with the local suffix ink, giving it the meaning of the place of chiefs or kings, i. e., where sachems meet in council.

† See Memorials of the Moravian Church, Vol. 1, p. 66, for a further notice of Shamokin, and of the Moravian Mission at that town. Pyrlaeus, the Iroquois scholar, in a collection of vocables taken from the mouth of the Oneida sachem Shikellimy, while on a visit to Bethlehem in April of 1745, gives Ot-ze-nach-se, as the name of the place, in the Maqua, or language of the Six Nations.—MS. of Iroquois vocables in possession of the editor.

‡ Schach-ach-ge-ne-men, to straighten. Schach-ach-ga-gee-chen, a straight road. Scach ach-ga-me-u, a straight row.

§ Probably, old Nutimaes, one of the signers of "the release for lands on Delaware," executed August 25, 1737, which lands were measured off by the one and a half day's walk in September following. This same Nutimaes, at the time king of Nescopeck, was courteously entertained at Bethlehem in March, 1754, then on his way with his two oldest sons, and negro servants, to the Jerseys. Pontius Nutimaes the older son, was born near the site of Philadelphia. Together with his brother Isaac, he removed to the Ohio, after the war, and deceased on the Muskingum in 1780. Nutimaes, according to Heckewelder, signifies a spearer of fish. Quaere. Were not perhaps the smithy built at Shamokin by Joseph Powell and John Hagen of Bethlehem in July of 1747, and the blacksmiths Schmid, Wesa and Kieffer, who wrought in iron at that place until in October of 1755,—suggestive of the name Schach-he-na-men-di?

|| Schau-we-wi and Schau-wi-hil-le-u, weak. Shau-wus-su, he is weak. Shau-wi-na-xu-woa-gan, weakness.—Zr.

¶ Sco-ha-can and Me-suk-hoa-can, glue.—Zr.

** W'schum-mo, a horn. We-uch-schum-mu-is, cattle.—Zr.

SINNEMAHONING, (emptying into the Susquehanna from the North, in Clinton County), corrupted from Achsinni-mahoni,* signifying, stony lick.

SKIPPACK, (a branch of the Perkiomen in Montgomery County), corrupted from Schki-peek,† signifying, a pool of stagnant, offensive water.

SLIPPERY ROCK, (emptying into the Big Beaver from the Northeast, in Lawrence County.) In Delaware, Weschachachápochka,‡ i. e., a slippery rock.

STANDING STONE, (emptying into the Juniata from the North, in Huntingdon County) called by the Delawares Achsinnink, where there is a large stone,§—the place of the large stone. Achsinessink signifies, where there is a small stone,—the place of the small stone. (Note. I know of four places within 500 miles called Achsinnink, where large stones or rocks stand isolated either on the margin or in the bed of streams.)||

STONY CREEK, (a branch of the Quemahoning in Somerset County). In Delaware Sinne-hánne, or Achsin-hánne, i. e., stony stream.

* Ach-sün, a stone, Ach sün nall, stones.—Zr.

† Me-nüp-peek, a pool or pond. Tup-peek, a spring or well.

‡ W'scha-che-u, slippery.—Zr.

§ Chot-ach sün, a large rock.—Zr.

|| The Standing Stone, a landmark for trader and Indian traveling through the wilds of Western Pennsylvania in the middle of the last century, is first mentioned in records by Weisser in his Journal to Logstown. "Aug. 18, 1748," he writes, "had a great rain in the afternoon, and came within two miles of the Standing Stone." John Harris, in a "report of distances on the road to Logstown," drawn up in 1754, allows "24 miles from Anghwick to the Standing Stone," and observes that "the stone is 14 feet high and 6 inches square." Scull's map locates the pillar on the right bank of the Achsinnink, near its outlet, where also stood the Indian village of Standing Stone. When the town of Huntingdon was laid out a few years prior to the Revolution, this historic column was still, though mutilated, at its place. Tradition says that it was a memorial stone, and that on its preservation depended the existence of the tribe who had set it up. Hence when a hostile people once came down the Tuscarora valley, and in the absence of the warriors of Standing Stone carried off their pillar, fierce battles ensued, and there was no peace until the sacred palladium had been restored, and again placed on the flats of the Achsinnink. Three Indian trails diverged from the Standing Stone, one leading to Anghwick, one to Frankstown, and the third to the great Chinklacamoose Path.

There is a Standing Stone in the Susquehanna, opposite the village of that name, in Bradford County.

TAMAQUA. (See Little Schuylkill.)

TIOGA, (one of the tributaries of the Susquehanna, draining Tioga County), corrupted from Tiaóga, an Iroquois word, signifying a gate, a place of entrance. (Note.) This name was given by the Six Nations to the wedge of land lying within the forks of the Tioga and North Branch of Susquehanna,—in passing which streams, the traveler entered their territory as through a gate. The country south of the forks, was Delaware country. David Zeisberger, who traveled that way to Onondaga in 1750, told me that at Tiaoga, or the Gate, Six Nation Indians were stationed for the purpose of ascertaining the character of all persons who crossed over into their country, and that whoever entered their territory by another way than through the Gate, or by way of the Mohawk, was suspected by them of evil purpose, and treated as a spy or enemy.)* TOBYHANNA, (emptying into the Lehigh from the North-east in Monroe County, corrupted from Topi-hánne, signifying alder-stream, i. e. a stream whose banks are fringed with alders.

TOHICKON, (emptying into the Delaware from the West, in Bucks County), corrupted from Tohickhan, or Tohickhánne, signifying the drift-wood stream, i. e., the stream we cross on drift-wood.†

TOWANDA, (emptying into the Susquehanna from the South-west in Bradford County), corrupted from Tawundeunk, signifying * Bishop Spangenberg, accompanied by David Zeisberger and John Shebosh, passed through the Gates of Tioga, on the 12th of June, 1745, on the way to Onondaga. They were the first Moravians to enter the country of the Six Nations at this point of ingress. Spangenberg states, that they were there distant from Shamokin, about 180 miles by water, and were come to a Mohican town.

† This stream, heading not far below the outliers of the South Mountain or "Lechay Hills," (up to which point the Indian claims had been extinguished) was repeatedly declared by Teedyuscung, the Delaware King, to be the southern limit of the white man's country, and he furthermore asserted that all lands lying between the Tohickon and Wyoming had been fraudulently taken from him and his people, and were in the occupancy of intruders.

"I desire to see T. Fairman, for that I hear an Indian township called Tohickon, rich land, and much cleared by the Indians, he has not surveyed to mine and children's tracts, as I expected. It joins upon the back of my manor of Highlands, and I am sorry my Surveyor-general did not inform me thereof. If it be not in thy warrants, put it in, except lands already or formerly taken up, or an Indian township. The Indians have been with me about it." Wm. Penn to James Logan, Pennsbury, 6th day, 7th month, 1700. Penn and Logan correspondence.

where we bury the dead. (Note.) Here the Nanticokes buried the bones of their dead.

TOWSISSIMOCK,* corrupted from Dawá-simook, signifying, the feeding place of cattle, i. e., pasture grounds.

TOMBICON,† corrupted from Tombic-hanne, signifying, crab-apple stream.

TUCQUAN, corrupted from P'duc-hanne,‡ signifying, a winding stream; corrupted from p'duequan, round, and hanne a stream. P'dueachtin signifies a round hill or knoll.

TULPEHOCKEN, (a branch of the Schuylkill in Berks County), corrupted from Tulpewi-hacki,§ signifying, the land of turtles.

TUNKHANNA, (a branch of the Tobyhanna in Monroe County),

* The name occurs in the deed of July, 1682, cited under Makerisk-kitton.

† Tom-bi-ca-nall, crabs, or wild apples.—Zr. Tombican Creek occurs under the head of Berks and Schuylkill in Heckewelder's arrangement. Quaere.—Tumbling Run, a branch of the Schuylkill at Pottsville?

‡ P'tuck-hi-can, a ball. P'tuck-han-ne, a bend in a stream. P'tuck-quin-schu, a round bowl.—Zr.

§ Tul-pe, a water or sea-turtle. Tach-quooh, a land-turtle. Hac-ki, the earth, the land.—Zr. During Mr. Heckewelder's stay among the Delawares of the Muskingum in the summer of 1762, he received the name of Pi-se-la-tul-pe. Quaere, compounded of Pi-se lüs-so, wrinkled, and tul-pe, a turtle?

In March of 1705 the Conoys requested permission of Geo. Evans to remove from their towns on the Susquehanna to Tulpehocken. In July of 1707 the Governor visited the Indian town of Tulpehocken, which tradition locates near the site of Womelsdorf, in Berks County.

The lands watered by Tulpehocken Creek and its tributaries, were settled by Germans from Scolarie (without the knowledge of the Proprietaries' agents, and before the Indian claim had been bought) in 1723. Among these Palatines were the Weisser's and George Loesch, the ancestor of the Moravian family of Loesch or Lash. This unwarrantable occupation much dissatisfied the Indians, and was made a matter of complaint by the Delaware chiefs Sassoonan and Opekasset, at a conference with Gov. Gordon, held at Philadelphia in June of 1728. The Indian claim was bought by Thomas Penn soon after his arrival in the country, in 1733. Tulpehocken was one of the rural districts of the Province in which the Brethren labored in the Gospel, with marked success. Zinzendorf preached there frequently, and in the spring of 1742, Gottlieb Büttner of Bethlehem, was on his recommendation accepted by the settlers as their minister. They hereupon built him a church. Philip Meurer succeeded Büttner in the autumn of the year, and the Brethren were inclined to believe that they had now effected a permanent footing; but as a Lutheran church was organized in the neighborhood (this was in 1743) they lost influence, were regarded with distrust, and then with displeasure, and finally (in January of 1747) deprived of the building in which they worshipped. Meurer was accordingly recalled to Bethlehem.

corrupted from Tank-hanne,* i. e., the small stream. (Note. The smallest of two or more confluent sources of a river is always called tank-hanne by the Delawares.) Tunkhannock is a corruption of the same.

TUPPEEKHÁNNA, (one of the sources of the Little Lehigh at Trexlertown, in Upper Macungy, Lehigh County). The word signifies the stream that flows from a large spring.

TURTLE CREEK, (emptying into the Monongahela from the East, in Allegheny County). The Delawares called it tulpewisipu, i. e., turtle river.

TWO LICKS, (a branch of the Conemaugh in Indiana County). In Delaware Nischa-hóni, i. e., two licks.

VENANGO. The Delawares called French Creek Attike. (Note. The name was sometimes written Onenge.)

WAPPASUNING, (a branch of the Susquehanna in Bradford County), corrupted from Wapachsinnink,† signifying, where there are white stones, alluding to a deposit of silver ore—the Delaware for silver being Woap-áhsin, i. e., the white stone.

WAPWALLOPEN, or Whopelahwy,‡ (emptying into the Susquehanna from the East in Luzerne County), corrupted from Woap-halláeh-pink, signifying, where the white hemp grows, i. e., the kind, which when dressed, is whitest.

WAULLENPAUPACK, or Paupack, (a branch of the Lackawaxen, dividing Wayne and Pike Counties,) corrupted from Walinkpa-peek,§ signifying, deep and dead water.

WECHQUETANK, for Wekquitank, the Delaware name of a species of willow, growing in the neighborhood of the Indian town of that name, once on Head's Creek, (Hoeth's Creek) in Monroe County.||

YELLOW BREECHES, (a branch of the Susquehanna dividing sugar tree" (ach-sñn-na-mínschi), were Bishop Cammerhoff and David Zeisberger, on the way to Onondaga in the summer of 1750. In July of 1759, a Monsey of Wyalusing, one Papoonhank, while visiting acquaintances at Nain, near Bethlehem, was deeply impressed by the preaching of the Gospel, so that on his return to his people, (with whom he stood in high repute as a teacher of morality), his representations of what he had lately heard, prepared their minds for the reception of Christianity. Thus it came to pass that David Zeisberger missionated at Wyalusing in 1763, and that Papoonhank was admitted into the Christian Church, by baptism, on the 26th of June of that year. The Monsey village of Wyalusing, or Papoonhank's town, is thus described by John Hays in his Journal to Tioga: "May 19, 1760. Arrived at a town called Quihiloosing. The captain's name is Wampomham, a very religious civilized man, in his own way, who showed us a great deal of kindness. The town is on the Susquehanna, east side, about twenty houses full of people, very good land and good Indian buildings, all new." Post, who accompanied Hays, writes in his report, "which is endorsed," Frederic Post's relation of what passed between him and the Quaker or religious Indians at Monmuchlooson on the Susquehanna," as follows: "Dear Sir,—It gives me great pleasure to inform your honor of our arrival at Machhachlosung, an Indian town newly laid out, where there dwells a company of Monseys, a religious people in their way. It is about eight years since they were gathered together by Papoonhang, who is their leader and teacher."

In Dec. of 1763, Papoonhank (who in baptism had received the name of John) came to Bethlehem with twenty-one of his Monsey adherents, desirous of sharing the protection which Government was in that perilous time extending to all friendly Indians. In this way the chieftain and his company came to be incorporated with the Moravian Indians, whom they cheerfully followed into exile to Philadelphia. On the return of peace, it was John Papoonhank, who offered to intercede in person with the Six Nations, in behalf of his Christian brethren for permission to plant on the site of the Monsey town on the Wihilusing. This was granted, and so it came to pass that in the spring of 1765, Friedenshütten (huts of peace) was built by the Moravian Indians under Schmiek and Zeisberger. Wyalusing was deserted by the Moravian Indians in June of 1772.

OF RIVERS, STREAMS AND LOCALITIES IN NEW JERSEY.

ACHQUAKENUNA, corrupted from Tachquahacanána, signifying, where pounding-blocks or mortars, are made,—where the gum tree (Tachquacheaniminschi) grows, of whose wood hominy-blocks are made.

AMBOY, corrupted from Embóli, signifying, round, hollow. Emboolhatton, signifies, "hollow it out." When speaking of this place, the Indians would say Embolink, i. e., where there is a hollow, or at the hollow place. (Note. An old Indian, born on the site of Amboy, about 1680, with whom I was acquainted for upwards of twenty years, informed me, that as the spot resembled a bowl, it was called Emboli.)

CHYGOES, (the island in the Delaware opposite Burlington), called by the Indians T'schichopacki, signifying, the oldest planted ground. (Note. The Delawares state that their first settlement so far east, was on this island.)

HACKENSACK, corrupted from Hackinksaquik, signifying, a stream that unites with another on low ground, or imperceptibly.

HOBOKEN, corrupted from Hopócan,* a tobacco-pipe.

MACKIAPIER, corrupted from Machkkiábi, signifying, reddish water.†

¶ Pihm, to sweat. Pomo-a-can, a sweat-house. Pimook, go to sweat. Pim-hot-tin, they are sweating.

“The Indians are remarkably addicted to the use of sweating-baths, made of earth and lined with clay. A small door serves as an entrance. The patient creeps in, seats himself and places heated stones around the sides. Whenever he has sweated a certain time, he immerses himself suddenly in cold water; from which he derives great security against all sorts of sickness."—Beschryving von America on t' Zuidland, door Arnoldus Montanus, Amsterdam 1671.

"Their physic is scarcely anything beyond a hot-house or a powaw. Their hot-house is a little cave, where, after they have terribly heated it, a crew of them go and sit and sweat and smoke for an hour together, and then immediately run into some cold adjacent brook, without the least mischief to them."—Increase Mather.

"The sweating-houses of the Indians of Carolina and Florida, are usually placed on the banks of rivers, and are some of stone and some of clay. In form and size they are like a large oven, into which they roll stones heated very hot. The patient creeps into the chamber thus prepared, and is closely shut up. After about an hour's confinement in this warm situation, he comes forth all reeking in torrents of sweat and plunges into the river. Among the benefits which they receive by this sweating, they say it cures fevers, dissipates pains in the limbs contracted by colds, also rheumatic diseases, and creates fresh spirits and agility, enabling them the better to hunt."—Catesby's Natural History of Carolina, Florida and the Bahama Islands.

"In those complaints which proceed from rheumatic affections, bleeding and sweating are always the first remedies applied. The sweat-oven is the first thing an Indian has recourse to, when he feels the least indisposed; it is the place to which the weary traveler, hunter or warrior looks for relief from the fatigues he has endured, the cold he has caught, or for the restoration of his lost appetite.

"The oven is made of different sizes so as to accommodate from two to six persons at a time, or according to the number of men in the village, so that they may be all successively served. It is generally built on a bank or slope, one half of it within and the other above ground. It is well covered on the top with split planks and earth, and has a door in front, where the ground is level, to go or rather creep in. Here, on the outside, stones, generally of about the size of a large turnip, are heated by one or more men appointed each day for that purpose. While the oven is heating, decoctions from roots or plants are prepared either by the person himself who intends to sweat, or by one of the men of the village, who boils a large kettleful for general use, so that when the public crier going his rounds, calls out "Pimook!" "go to sweat!" every one brings his small kettle which is filled for him with the potion, which at the same time serves him as a medicine, promotes a profuse perspiration, and quenches his thirst. As soon as a sufficient number have come to the oven, hot stones are rolled into the middle of it, and the sweaters go in, seating themselves or rather squatting around the stones, and there they remain until the sweat ceases to flow; then they come out, throwing a blanket or two about them that they may not catch cold. In the meantime, freshly heated stones are thrown in for those who follow them. While they are in the oven, water is now and then poured on the hot stones to produce steam, which they say increases the heat, and gives suppleness to their limbs and joints. In rheumatic complaints, the steam is produced by a decoction of boiled roots and the patient during the operation is well wrapped up in blankets to keep the cold from him, and promote perspiration at the same time.

Sweat-ovens are generally at some distance from the village, and where wood ‡ Tshi-ma-lus, and Tshi-hoa-pe-ke-lis, the blue bird.—Zr.

§ Shin-ge-u, level. Shin-gas-gunk, a bog-meadow.—Zr. Shingas was the name of a brother of King Beaver, one of the ablest war-chiefs of the western Delawares, between 1755 and 1763.

GINGOTEQUE, corrupted from Shinghattéke, signifying, he rejects it, he despises it.*

HUSCANAWPEN, corrupted from Hus-ca-na-pe-i, or rather, hus-ca n'lenapewi, signifying, Indeed I am a Lennape!† an Indian of the original stock!—an exclamation or refrain I often heard the Delawares use at their Canticoes or festive dances.‡

KIEQUOTANK, corrupted from Kiwiquótank, signifying, a visitor.§

KIQUOLAN, corrupted from Kiquatank, signifying both, one who heals, and the place where the sick are healed.||

MACOCK, corrupted from Mitzhack, the name given by the Delawares to the edible kinds of hard-shelled fruits or pepones, such as the pumpkin, the cashaw, &c., compounded of mitz, (from mitzin, to eat) and hack, rind or shell. Hackhack is their word for gourd. Each variety of pepo has its specific name. Geskondháckan is the generic name. (Note. The boxes made from the inner bark of the elm or birch, in which the Indians pack maple-sugar for transportation, are also called macocks.)¶

* Schin-gat-tam, to dislike. Shin-ga-lend, one who is disliked.—Zr.

† Le-na-pe, an Indian. Lenapewak, Indians. Lin-ni le-na-pe, Indians of the same nation.—Zr.

‡ “Their Canticoes, as they call them, are performed by round dances, sometimes words, then songs, then shouts,—two being in ye middle that begin and direct ye chorus. This they perform with great fervency and appearances of joy.” Wm. Penn to Henry Savell, Phil'a., 30th day, 5th month, 1683.

“It is a pleasing spectacle to see the Indian dances, when intended merely for social diversion and innocent amusement. I acknowledge I would prefer being present at them for a full hour, than a few minutes only at such dances as I have witnessed in our country taverns among the white people. Their songs are by no means unharmonious. They sing in chorus, first the men and then the women. At times the women join in the general song, or repeat the strain which the men have just finished. It seems like two companies singing in questions and answers, and is upon the whole very agreeable and enlivening. After thus singing for about a quarter of an hour, they conclude with a loud yell, which I confess is not in concord with the rest of the music. One person always begins the singing; others fall in successively, and then comes the chorus, the drum beating all the while to mark the time. The voices of the women are clear and full, and their intonations generally correct.”—Heckewelder's Indian Nations.

§ Ki-wi-ke, to visit. Ki-wi-ke-u, he visits. Ki-wi-ka-mell, I visit you. Ki-wi-ka-mi, visit me.—Zr.

Pocohontas, daughter of Powhatan, well-known for her friendship to the early colonists of Virginia, was born about 1595. Soon after her baptism in which she received the name of Rebecca, she married John Rolfe, of Jamestown, in April of 1613. In 1616 she went to England, where she was an object of great interest to all classes, and was presented at Court by Lady De la Ware. When on the point of embarking on her return to America, she died at Gravesend, in March of 1617. She left one son. John Randolph of Roanoke, was descended from Pocahontas on his father's side,—other descendants are still found in Virginia.
