K. Steiner-2635/479
Date: 28 April 1950

1. No legal objections.

2. This member bill, which is an amendment to the proposed revision of the Commercial Code, alters only minor points. It limits the rights of the minority to demand holding of a general meeting to institute action against a director or to stop illegal actions of a director, etc. to those share holders who have held shares continuously for the last 6 months. The new Article 2 of the supplementary provision eliminates the necessity of a special majority for the alteration of the Articles of Incorporation, etc. in the case of corporations with a membership of more than 1,000 share holders for the time from the promulgation of the revision to the date of its enforcement.

Land Coordination

From: LS To: GS

R R Neptune - 2635-479
Date: 30 March 1950

2 1. This is a companion bill to the Mining Law Bill and the Bill for Stone Quarrying. It establishes the Land Coordination Commission as an external organ of the Prime Minister's Office. The Commission will, upon application, make adjudications to coordinate the uses of land by various interests such as mining, agriculture, forestry and other industry. The law provides for the designation of areas prohibited from mining, and for adjudication of the use of land upon application by interested persons dissatisfied with actions, orders, or decisions under The Mining Law or the Stone Quarrying Law. Adequate hearings and court review are provided for. Penalties are prescribed.

2. The following objections are made:

✓ a. Article 58 provides for the establishment of a collegiate court within the Tokyo High Court to handle "only the suits against the adjudication of the Commission". Legislation describing how a particular Court is to perform its functions invades the power of the Courts as granted in the Constitution. LS therefore recommends the deletion of Article 58.

✓ b. Article 61 makes punishable juridical or natural persons as employers of a person who commit a violation of this law. It is recommended that this article be changed with respect to the natural person, so that violation by a natural person's employee will be only a prima facie case of violation against the employer.

3. While there are no serious legal objections to this bill, its (cont'd) serious objections are made by LS in Checknotes of this date. These bills should be restudied and redrafted along with a new Land Expropriation Law. It is therefore recommended that this bill be withheld from clearance by GS for the time being.

2. There is no objection to the proposed legislation, provided a saving clause is added to Article 18 to insure against infringement of the Trade Association Law. Article 18 enables the Land Coordination Commission to entrust "an entrepreneur's association" with authority to make necessary investigations. It is recommended that a proviso along the following lines be added to Article 18: "Provided that such investigations are not conducted in a manner contrary to the provisions of the Trade Association Law: Law No. 191 of 1948 or the Anti-Monopoly Law: Law No. 54 of 1947." The provisions of the Trade Association Law are of special relevance in view of the prohibition against trade associations compulsorily inquiring into or demanding reports from entrepreneurs in regard to specific business conditions.

1. NR comments on the proposed draft legislation "Land Coordination Commission Establishment Bill" are listed below:

a. The establishment of a Land Coordination Commission as proposed in the attached bill has merit as an attempt to solve the difficulties attendant on the choice between competing uses for land. The proposal, however, has serious weaknesses in the following respects.

b. The proposal is designed to supplement the proposed new Mining Bill. Until the latter is revised to establish a clear relation between the operation of the two bills, passage of the Land Coordination Commission Bill would be premature.

c. The proposal is based on the idea of the commission as an appeal court. NR would favor extension of the commission's authority to cases of first instance, in place of the system for land designation proposed in the new Mining Bill.

d. Establishment of such a committee, designed to have authority overriding, among others, the Agricultural Land Adjustment Law (see Art 45) should not be favorably considered until the effects of the proposed plan on operation of each of the other basic laws has been carefully considered.

e. Since more than two-thirds of Japan's surface is forest land, it is suggested that "forestry" be specifically included in Article 20 - 3, providing for personnel of the commission.

f. NR believes the proposal is one which merits careful study in the immediate future, but that until a cooperative plan covering all phases of land use is worked out, passage of this proposed bill would be premature.

 - ✓ 5. It is believed that presentation of this bill at this time would be premature in that this draft legislation is closely related to the Mining Law Bill and the Bill for Stone Quarrying. Establishment of such a Committee, designed to have authority to override, among others, the Agricultural Land Adjustment Law (Art 45) should not be considered until the effects of the proposed plan on operation of each of the other basic laws has been carefully considered.

- ✓ 1. This draft law apparently seeks to amend the Family Registration Law in such a way as to make it compatible with the provisions of the proposed new Nationality Act, and the amendments would be clearly necessary if the proposed new Nationality Act should become law. The present Articles 102 through 106 of the Family Registration Law are concerned with the registration of persons who acquire Japanese nationality by marriage, adoption, recognition, or the recovery process. These methods of acquiring Japanese nationality would be abolished under the new Nationality Act, which provides, in general, that Japanese nationality may be acquired only by birth to a Japanese father or through a naturalization process. The suggested amendments are therefore believed to be sound in principle and DS perceives no objection to them.

2. With respect to the individual amendments, the following comments are made:

Article 104 - The provisions of the second paragraph would appear to be susceptible to abuse or misinterpretation by administrating agencies, unless the implementing regulations were to establish a central agency for approving late notifications or provide a clear explanation of what should be considered an "unavoidable cause."
