YACKETY YACK

FOREWORD

Telling in a simple way the story of the University for the term 1923-24, this book is offered to the student body for approval or disapproval. For the first time the YACKETY YACK comes out under the auspices of the Publications Union. To it and to the able business managers, the Editors wish to express appreciation.

If the printed and pictured story of the year pleases you, then we are happy. If it pleases not, there is no one who cares so extremely much.

The YACKETY YACK takes pleasure in dedicating its 1924 volume

to

Alfred Moore Scales

The finest traditions and history of North Carolina are gathered up in people bearing the names, Alfred — Moore — Scales.

And so, Alfred Moore Scales ('92, of Greensboro) is a man who catches up the best of the best in North Carolina; and the life and acts of this distinguished son of the University are expressions in broad service of the fine ideals for which the institution stands. His abilities have brought him distinction as a lawyer and a Statesman and in the business world.

His material earnings he has regarded as a trust, and has dispensed them, along with his unusual ability and untiring energy, for the enrichment and betterment of the commonwealth. Modest always, he has sedulously shunned personal political preferment, but has been more powerful out of position than most men in position in shaping progressive policies for his State.

He is peculiarly the University's own as one of those listed on her rolls; more peculiarly still her own because he has completely exemplified in his life the ideals she cherishes, and has guided and supported her for greater service to the State of which it is a creature.

Alma Mater is gladdened at the opportunity to accord this deserved recognition, and to count Alfred Moore Scales among her immortals.

Lucius Polk McGehee

Among the dead that people our campus and temper our extravagancies, moves one Spirit who links our fathers' South with ours.

Their dignity and their elegance in mind, manners, and tastes were his; lofty ideals of personal integrity sustained them and him; they gave with both hands open and both eyes shut—blood, bone, and possessions—and so did he. They were incorrigibly romantic, impractically chivalrous, triumphantly sentimental; they feared God and loved womanhood and fended for the weak in ways we never knew. And he was of them.

But as a scholar, a scientist, and a teacher he was of our time; and as an inspiration he belongs to us. Learned in many lores and master of his own, he saw the law as one among other human institutions. Sure that the chief function of the past is to give life to the present, he revealed not only a body of doctrine but a state of mind; he bred us to think law as well as to learn it. He knew it, both the living and the dead; but he taught it as a thing alive.

While we are here, he still is with us; when we go forth, he still will be in us. God grant we may then show what once he was.

JAKE," quiet, conservative and well balanced, is an exponent of the doctrine of "laissez-faire," an advocate of the take-things-as-they-come theory. But "Jake" takes things as they come, he doesn't let them slide by him unnoticed. In fact, he's been taking things as they come for the last four years at the rate of four a quarter. For instance, botany, chemistry, physics, psychology and zoology are just a few of the "pud" courses he's become acclimated to since he began his A.B. Besides all this he has passed a course under Johnny Booker, which is a record that even some Phi Beta Kappa men haven't got.

"Jake" came here with Wilmington as his home—he leaves us for his home in Kansas City, Mo. Hard luck, "Jake," you're leaving a good State.

SLIM" appeared at Dean Noble's desk one day and said he wanted to take Pharmacy. It rather surprised him with what ease the desire was granted. He has always had the desire to sell castor oil for someone else to take. Now, he is nearing his goal. "Slim" is an exception to the belief that all preachers' sons are lazy, for he is a real worker. Aside from his daily lectures on class, he has done much work on the outside. He has always maintained a broad mind and is ever ready to support a movement that is worthy.

He is popular with the boys on The Hill, and as a student here has left his impression on the minds of many. His ambition is to own his own drugstore, and may it be realized.

RUNT" is the living example and proof of the timeworn adage that the most valuable things do not come in large packages. He can kick equally well as a beautiful nymph in "Ye Gods" or in Prof. Peacock's "Accounting" or Hamilton's "Government." This handsome young gentleman is as much at home among his books as he is on the ballroom floor, which says a great deal.

We are looking for things from "Runt" in the field of business, his chosen profession. Here's wishing a real Carolina man the best of luck.

JAMES RAMSAY ALEXANDER, JR.

THIS gentleman is about the smoothest piece of machinery seen on this campus in many years. He has many virtues and one weakness—women. Collectively, he loves all of them. Individually, he loves none of them. Yet for some unknown reason they all like him. His conquests are strewn all over the South.

But in spite of this weakness, which every man has, he is liked by all with whom he comes in contact. Debonair, courteous, nonchalant and agreeable, typifying in every detail that almost extinct breed of men—the old Southern Gentleman—he goes among his friends unconscious of the high regard they all have for him.

In his chosen profession—Engineering—and in his moments of play, we predict for him never a dull moment.

JACK," in his Freshman and Sophomore years, was but little known on the campus, but his strong, forceful character was soon fathomed, and it was not long before he secured a position of leadership in the student body. "Jack" is a man of potentialities which blossom as the season progresses. Under his leadership the Student Council has been a powerful force for good on the campus.

He is a good student along legal lines and has been admitted into that "Ancient and Royal Order of Pappers"—The Barristers. We look for "Jack" to reach the top rung on the ladder of legal success some day.

THIS big, husky mountaineer has been a puzzle ever since he entered the dear old University, and that has made him popular and contributed much to the general interest in him. He gave up two years of his life here for the sake of humanity and served his time on the Student Council, but that has only caused him to put more faith in mankind. When John came here four years ago he loved the hills from whence he hailed, but that love has died a little, and the ladies have replaced the mountain solitudes. Very social, energetic, and athletic, John was to be seen any and everywhere from the dance floor to the gymnasium, or maybe pacing through the woods with a haversack on his back at almost any given time. In a word, he was one of the best men in the class with which he entered.

ELVA DARE ANDREWS

BEING graduated from Chapel Hill High, Elva decided to try her collegiate fortunes at Meredith, but a short three months were enough to show her the error of her ways, and she returned to join our class in the winter quarter. Elva is a mixture of fun and seriousness. She takes life as it comes and manages to leave an impression of dependability and capability. We hardly know whether to prophesy that she will be a professor in some university or a famous movie star.

As a student she has earned commendation. Consistent in study, loyal in interest, and able in preparedness, she is a reliable worker and a friend worth having.

OSLER, "Josler," or as he is sometimes called, "Joe," came to us three years ago fresh from the Raleigh High School. He still lets one know where he is from, but since coming here he has broadened his knowledge of geography and capitol cities as the result of a trans-Atlantic voyage last summer as sixteenth assistant to a Chinese cook. Hard working, possessing an uncanny ability to turn out great gobs of literary material on short notice, congenial and conscientious, he has made a great many friends on the campus. He is one of Cupid Koch's favorites both as author and playwright, and he is, we suspect, leaving it up to "Prof" to get him a wife. He will be missed next year when it comes to reviewing the Magazine and writing his favorite "Wilderness" for the Tar Heel.

DUG'S" first desire to become a pharmacist was while a mere boy. He decided he would some day be a manager and not jerk soda any more. He has braved the storms of quizzes and exams and is now standing on the shore awaiting the day when he will receive his much-coveted sheepskin.

It was thought we would lose him last year, but someone told him that it was all a mistake; that two could not live as cheaply as one; so "Dug" is single and still with us.

A hard worker, he has made an excellent record, and the University is making one of its best contributions to the State in turning him out with a right to practice his profession.

THE write-up for this young man failed to get in by the date set. He must be written up. We do not know him, but here goes:

This young man, like all the other Seniors, needs only to be known to be liked. His calm, easygoing ways make for him a winning personality. Although he takes part in campus activities, he has in no way let them interfere with his studies, just missing Phi Beta Kappa.

He will undoubtedly make a success of whatever he chooses for his life work; that is, if he goes into it with the same determination and hard work that have characterized him all through his College career. Fate is fickle, yet we dare predict for him a very brilliant future.

THIS guy's name is Walker and, although that is not his fault, he could not have been more appropriately christened. He hasn't run, but he hasn't loafed; he hasn't set the woods on fire, but neither has any grass grown under his feet. He has sauntered through his College years at a steady gait and has walked into the hearts of all who knew him. His cheerful disposition, his dependability, his charming unobtrusiveness have made for him a host of friends among his fellows and among the so-called adjacent sex.

He has been a hearty supporter of all Carolina interests. As a student he has been a consistent worker and highly satisfactory to whatever portion of the Faculty he was attached. During his Senior year he concentrated on history as a working medium under the guiding finger of Dr. Robert Diggs Wimberly Connor, as it were. He polished off his degree at the end of the winter quarter and entered the Graduate School, but he still hangs his hat with the Class of '24. It isn't our job to pose as a prognosticator, but if he doesn't develop flat feet or a flat tire, Walker will get there.

JIMMIE" is a Sand-Lapper by fate but a Tar Heel by choice. His departure from his native beath and arrival on this campus may well be termed South Carolina's loss and North Carolina's gain. Being of a quiet, steady character, and ever intent on accomplishing the best in the tasks assigned him, he has never failed to deliver the goods. His grades have been such as to arouse the envy of many fellow classmates. By some irony of fate, he missed Phi Beta Kappa by only a very small margin, at the same time completing his prescribed work an entire quarter in advance of the allotted time.

We are glad to learn that he is to be with us next year, as he intends to enter the Medical School where he is expected by his associates to make a shining mark and become a great asset to his profession. Our eyes are on you, "Jimmie," and we prophesy shining success and a brilliant career for you. Best of luck to you always, old man!

BURKE is the foremost of our number from Asheboro and leader of the Carolina group of Randolphites. Men more noble in valor, more powerful and stern in manner and thought, Carolina does not produce.

"Burke" is one of our all-around men, always the same to everybody, and everywhere he is seen. Advice is always sought from him, for all know him to be accurate and quick of decision, versed in business law and through the School of Economics to a B. S. During his College career he has been studious, gymnastic and friendly to everybody. To one like "Burke," success is just a matter of fact.

"It matters not how strait the gate,

How charged with punishment the scroll,

I am the master of my fate,

I am the captain of my soul."

VERNE has made of his life at the University a period of work and pleasure combined, getting a very satisfactory combination. He is one of those persons who put their whole hearts and souls in everything that they undertake and who get the fullest enjoyment out of their play and make a success of their undertakings.

During his brief sojourn on the campus he has made many friends, and all who know him like him. His application to duty and his determination to successfully finish everything that he starts to do is bound to win success. We are proud of Verne and are sure he will be a credit to the University and to the State when he takes up his life work in his field or profession.

SPEAKING of "big men on the campus," Seth is not easily to be overlooked. It is reported that Bernarr McFadden is negotiating with him for photographs to be run as testimonials to the value of physical culture. Seth is one of the most faithful patrons of Dr. Lawson's gymnasium and never misses an opportunity for a "work-out." He has been a hard worker on both the football and the wrestling squad during his sojourn on The Hill.

Seth's habitual "hard-boy" expression is merely camouflage. He is really an unusually good-natured person at heart; if you don't believe it, ask any of the two score ladies whose affections he has won in the past three or four years. In selecting Medicine as his life work, Seth is missing a good chance to make a fortune in the business world, but we hope he will make an even better success as a physician than he would have made as a financier.

ONE must be very careful in writing these sketches—there are so many things that are better left unsaid. When we neglect either to mention brutal truths or vent old grudges we have a delightful feeling of egotistical magnanimity. However, we experience quite a different kind of pleasure when it is our task to write of "Gus" Bradley. He is one of whom the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth can give evidence only of worth. "Gus" is pleasingly immune to any evil effects from praise; so we frankly say that he is one of the best all-round men we have ever known. Above all, he is a gentleman in the finest sense of that much-abused word.

In the comparatively unimportant matter of passing courses, "Gus" has been disgustingly proficient, but in view of other things—his popularity, ability, good-fellowship and generosity—we are disposed to let the matter pass without comment. "Gus" has been Business Manager of the Tar Heel this year, and if he chooses "Managing" for his life work we know he will be a success, if not in that then in whatever he shall choose.

SUE BRETT

IF YOU are looking for a conscientious worker, here she is. Although she has been with us only one year she has made for herself a very creditable scholastic record.

She possesses a very quiet, gentle and dignified reserve on first acquaintance, yet she is altogether alert, and it requires no "syllogistic device" to prove that she is capable of thought and reasoning. In the rush and whirl of a busy age, such a calm spirit is a rarity; and in a commercial age, such a love of culture and literature is a gift.

She is a true and loyal friend, one who believes that in order to have friends one must be a friend. What greater compliment could be paid her?

F. M. BROOKS

PETER will be missed more than any other man when the Pharmacy Class of 1924 disbands. He will return to Asheville to follow his chosen profession, but his influence will be carried to the four corners of the State by those who have had the privilege of knowing him intimately. He has all the traits of a Southern gentleman plus the hospitality peculiar to those of the highlands. Peter has established a record which promises to hold for some time. It was with much reluctance that Professor Cotton read his final examination and, realizing that a record had been established, marked up a one on his course.

Although quiet and unassuming he is full of life and always in for a good time. In the mad rush of flapperism he retains a cool head and stands aloof, truly a man's man, and whoever the fair maiden is who succeeds in attracting his affections will have secured a prize. He is very studious, yet if there is a game, he is the first to get a seat whether it be on Emerson Field or in the tin can.

DALMA ADOLPH BROWN

Φ Β Κ.

DALMA has to his credit a long series of efforts at domesticating the idea of culture. He tried to write romantic tragedies in the play-writing class. Then he took up the study of Dante and Milton—both in the original—where he was far more successful, as is proved by the little gold key which he sometimes wears and by the occurrence of lofty themes in the poetry which he writes. Just now he is considering a trip to California in a Ford and wishing for a chance to learn to play the violin. Incidentally, he has been out for track, taken dancing lessons, and worked in the library during Summer School. A liking for philosophic discussion is one of his characteristics. One night he and his roommate discussed ideal beauty 'til half past two in the morning. They turned on the light to see what time it was just before they went to sleep. Literature holds most of his attention, but chief among his pet notions is a desire for well-rounded development.

LELAND PRESTON BROWN

LELAND Preston, or "Yank" as we know him on the campus, is one of those New Englanders who can trace his ancestry back through the days when King John signed the Magna Charta on the Plain of Runnymede to William the Conqueror.

But "Yank" has forgotten about his Family Tree, and believes in every one making a reputation for himself. Although "Yank" first saw light in Connecticut, he is a Southerner by preference and truly a Tar Heel by choice.

"Yank" says that everybody picks on him because he is just abbreviated (he is rather small), but we believe it is because they like him so well that they enjoy teasing him so much. He is by nature rather serious-minded and especially sincere and firm in his convictions. While he does not wear that much-coveted Phi Beta Kappa key, he is one of the best students in the E. E. Class. "Yank" worries more over the girls than over his work. He says they do not love him as they should. His friends tell him that perseverance wins. Judging from the contingent offer his Old Man made him, it is believed that "Yank's" next course will be the pursuit of matrimony.

T. D. is a man of quixotic temperament, especially as applied to curriculums. First he is found pursuing his studies in the Engineering Department; then he takes a Pre-Med course, and last, but not least, he came to his senses and, desiring to ennoble himself, tackled the Law.

"Poli" recognizes that the Law is indeed a jealous mistress and is willing to abide by her decrees, so we hope some time to see him enshrined a "J.P.," or something worse. His avowed and determined wish is to some day serve on a jury which "Shorty" Holmes is trying to reduce to tears.

DAN," this tall, immaculate, good-looking individual with the olive complexion, has left the ranks of the class and cast his lot with the Law School in which he shapes the destinies of the first year class as president.

A politician, without whose abilities and scheming no "ring" was complete, he has had much success in several lines of endeavor; but the tide has changed somewhat this year, he having divided his interests, it seems, between Law and a particular young student who lives at Russell Inn. So far he has been successful in both, according to Dame Rumor. Give him a package of Mr. Reynold's favorite brand of cigarettes, place him in what is known in these parts by the dignified term "bull session," and he is in the seventh heaven. "Dan" is popular, and one of the best workers in the class.

WILLIAM HAROLD BUTT

A. I. E. E.; Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society; Engineer's Minstrel; Carolina Hobo Club; Orange County Club; Mathematics Club.

IT HAS often been said that Lord Mansfield was a true judge of the law, and Beau Brummel a judge of a well dressed man. But we submit that "Harold," having spent several summers in Chapel Hill, is a "judge" of the Summer School girls.

Also, "Butt" is reported as being quite a business man, having swapped a perfectly good fourth-hand motorcycle for a three-cylinder Ford.

If you are interested, and want to know more about this specimen, ask the town barbers or the cafe waiters.

ERNEST FRANKLIN BOWMAN

Freshman Baseball Squad, 1920-1921; A. I. E. E., 1920-1924; Mathematical Club; Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society, 1924; Push Ball Team, 1923, 1924; Tag Football Team, 1923, 1924; Class Baseball Team; Catawba County Club, 1920-1924.

WHEN Bowman first saw us he told us he was from Newton, the largest town in the State for its size. We thought immediately that he had a "good line," but after watching him through a Summer School and many "hops" we knew that we had missed our guess. In other words, besides being the possessor of an attractive personality, he knows the art of making each year leap year.

"Bam" has a consuming passion for electricity. He can play baseball, go to the "Pick," and still pass a quiz on electro-dynamics the next day. Electricity is his hobby and he is mastering it just as he is other problems of life. So with his addition to this profession, we predict that he will climb to the heights. Bowman carries with him from Carolina the highest esteem and best wishes of his classmates.

THE old adage, "you can get a boy out of the country, but you can't get the country out of the boy," holds good in the case of Henry. He insists on getting up when the rooster crows every morning. Although he learns French, Latin and Psychology with the greatest of ease, he has failed utterly—to the great sorrow of those who room near him—to learn that the proper time for a College man to arise is at 8:25 sharp.

Henry at one time aspired to be a physician, but after attending one Summer School he has just about decided to be a teacher. No doubt, he was impressed at the Summer School by the quality and quantity of the opposite sex in the teaching profession.

A quiet, studious, good-natured youth, Henry has made many friends at Carolina—and they were not all made during the summer months, either!

MAURICE comes to us from Tennessee, and through his fixed purpose and high ideals has made a name for himself and won a place in all our hearts. Especially has integrity been made manifest in the Accounting Department of the School of Commerce. There he has the distinction of being one of the noble few who have attained the honor and high degree of perfection commonly known as an "A." In enumerating these admirable qualities embodied in this model specimen of young American manhood, let us not overlook one, which if not the most important is certainly far from the least, namely, his excellent ability with those whom we choose to term "the weaker sex." It is a fair prediction that she whom he chooses for his "better half" will find him worthy of that name.

RED" has a lingering disease known as Lawyeritis, contracted in the Law School. This malady is characterized by an intense desire to know the whys and wherefores of those subjects known as Torts, Crimes, Contracts, Procedure and Property, and up to date he has succeeded pretty well in his desire along this line of endeavor.

Shelley is also quite a social hound, and Raleigh is supposed to be the scene of his bayings.

Anyway, when the shingle, bearing the ominous words, "Fronberger & Caveness," is flown to the breeze, there's a safe guess that the old town will start stirring.

HARLOWE LEON CHAPING

THE write-up for this young man failed to get in by the date set. He must be written up. We do not know him, but here goes:

This young man, like all the other Seniors, needs only to be known to be liked. His calm, easygoing ways make for him a winning personality. Although he takes part in campus activities, he has in no way let them interfere with his studies, just missing Phi Beta Kappa.

He will undoubtedly make a success of whatever he chooses for his life work; that is, if he goes into it with the same determination and hard work that have characterized him all through his College career. Fate is fickle, yet we dare predict for him a very brilliant future.

DOC." as he is known to us, hails from way above the Mason-Dixon Line, but his sojourn in the South has driven out the cold nature, and under our care he is now a perfect Southern gentleman. Friendly, entertaining, a lover of dogs and the outdoors, proficient in the work he has chosen for life, and an engineer; that's "Doc." It has been said that this remarkable young man can recite more poetry and sing more songs of love than there are divisions on a transit circle, and a leisure hour with the C. E. Seniors would convince the doubtful.

Being a Sanitary Engineer by trade, he meanders forth to drive from our streams and waters those organisms that are deleterious to human existence, heedless of the fact that the "yaller" coat which has become grafted to his anatomy is an excellent field upon which to apply his learnings. And thus "Doc" leaves us to enter upon his future that has to the best of our knowledge been worked out partly in detail.

FOR this outstanding man we have a few things to say that are sincere. John pitches for Carolina on the baseball diamond, and Carolina cheers him. John, tall scion of our Capital City and sturdy son of Carolina, is an athlete, an Engineer, and a man. As he pitched his way to glory on the diamond, we predict that he will hew his way to fame in his profession. As in a vision we can see the massive buildings he will stack against the clouds, and white roads he will wind across craggy mountain places. He has made friends at Carolina, and his friends are glad they know him.

WE HAVE here the erstwhile leader of the Dutch Company. "C. B." hails from the well known hub of the universe, but we can't hold that against him; it is only when we become conscious of the peculiarly attractive character of his speech that we remember it.

Colton has heard the "clarion call" and is qualified to respond; he will some day grace the editorial office of a metropolitan daily. It is very seldom that a man of brains is recognized as a good student, but here is the exception. "C. B." is one Phi Beta Kappa man who really has some sense—it's a family custom. The rather startling key he wears comes down through the dim centuries from some remote paternal ancestor. If you are to return to the frozen North, "C. B.," keep for us a warm place in your heart; the same we assure you.

BEING a representative of North Carolina's center of aristocracy, one would naturally expect Robert to be a reserved sort of individual with but a nod for us of the common herd, but quite the contrary is the case. "Bobbie," as he is known to us, has that enviable trait of adaptability which enables him to be at home in every phase of life. At Swain Hall he was champion of the "zip" eaters, but in a parlor no one can equal the delicacy with which he sips his tea.

"Bobbie" is neither a literatus nor a Phi Beta Kappa man, but at letter-writing he is among the best, and his grades are better than the average. We send him from our midst into the business world not as merely a man with a degree, but as Robert D. Darden, A. B.—"Bobbie" Darden, an all-round good fellow.

Bessie possesses a delightful synthesis of feminine charm and almost masculine frankness and directness which has made her equally popular on the ballroom floor and among the intelligentsia. She has identified herself unforgettably with the terpsichoreans and with the literati and cognoscenti of the campus. There are many of us who will miss her a great deal next year, and few of us who will not be glad that she has been with us for the past two years.

HENRY'S career at Carolina has been multi-colored. He realized in the embryonic stage that studies would not absorb his natural capacities and began to look around for new fields to conquer. First he tied up with the Y. M. C. A., and Harry Comer voted him a dependable man. Then he decided he could write, and devoted considerable time in his Sophomore and Junior years to the world of the literati. Phi Beta Kappa just came to him naturally. Came next a Summer School, and Henry, anxious to be well rounded, took a campus course. That marked a turning point in his career, and since then he has been attending Grail dances and smoking cigarettes. He knows how to get the most out of everything whether in the classroom or ballroom.

For two years he has wrestled consistently on Carolina's Varsity squad. A finer specimen of physical development is very seldom to be found. This lad is beautiful to behold, with dreamy blue eyes and hair of the Rudolph Valentino type.

Rupert is very popular on the campus. He is always the same—full of pep and good humor. This one thing we know. He has smiled his way into the heart of one of the daughters of Meredith College and is a frequent visitor in the capitol city. After spending a year in looking over part of the world, Eaves intends to enter a medical school. Before many years he hopes to put into practice some of the knowledge obtained from "Froggy" Wilson. Clean-cut, neat in appearance, ever ready to help some bonehead Frosh with a math problem, and the quintessence of gentility, he has put Hyde County on the map. He is, to the best of our knowledge and belief, a shark with ladies, but he has ever been careful to let no one know just how many he had on the string at any given time. BRACEY came to Carolina four years ago with no great display of brass band and gandy colors, but rather with a quiet dignity that quickly won him a place of esteem in the hearts of all who came to know him. Always carefully dressed, always neat, with a smile for his friends and a nod for his acquaintances, he has passed four years among us in such a warm-hearted way that we feel a sense of loss, a pang of regret, now that he leaves us.

We really should not have these feelings about the departure of this friend of ours, because rumor has it that he is to return to study Law, but, nevertheless, we Seniors must lose his companionship and his loss is one we cannot think of without emotion. His head contains plenty of common sense as indicated by the speeches it has thought up for the Phi Society; and we predict a rapid rise to success for our classmate and much happiness throughout his life.

She has been one of the most popular co-eds in their history here, and she is one of those who contributed much to the change in the campus attitude toward co-eds, to say nothing of the frequent callers at the Inn.

Interested deeply in things other than amusement, she has gone out for several activities, and during her first year, especially, she was one of the mainstays in the Playmakers. This year, however, her interests seem to be somewhat more specific, meaning, of course, that she spends her time studying. She has given up some of her plans and will doubtless return for another year in search of another degree.

DUKE" hails from the town of Lexington—the home of "E. C. Hunt." We have never discovered the reason for his nickname, although we flatter ourselves that he has been a good friend of ours for quite a while.

"Duke" does not go out for athletics very much, although most any afternoon you can find him at the Gym, taking exercise. It is whispered around the quadrangle that he once ran a two-mile marathon around Emerson Field with "E. C. Hunt" as an opponent. We've forgotten the exact time in which they ran but it wasn't so bad. "Duke's" chief interest is in the Commerce Department, and he can be found around the Commerce Library morning and night. However, he is not a "grind," but finds quite a little time for a sociable game of bridge with the fellows. Sometimes he speaks of entering a well known group of chain stores, at other times it is Commerce in some form in South America. Whatever it may be, he is a willing worker and we believe that he will be a success in the commercial world.

MR. JOSEPH Reid Gaskins, in other words, "Jake" as he is commonly known on the campus, is all right, but he just won't do. Why? "Jake's" favorite hobby is "Girls," pretty girls, and the girls and College work very seldom mix. But "Jake" happens to be one of those fellows who can be a great lover and still be a good student; a coveted gift that many students do not possess, as can be seen by present experiences.

Our friend here hails from the Commerce School and, judging from his work in this department during the past years here, we predict for him great success in the business world. Years, we think, will prove to us what we already believe, that "Jake" is a man. A man with a personality we like to see; an easy mixer; a fellow as good as his word; one who makes friends and keeps them. We expect great things of him, and know that we will not be disappointed.

PLUTO" is long, lean, and a darned good fellow. High hurdles are to him what catfish are to a Georgia darkey.

Letters from Lowell, Massachusetts, are his big reasons for looking pleasant most of the time. Always ready to help a fellow out, always busy doing something useful, he doesn't say much, but when he speaks it is well worth hearing. "Pluto" has been one of the few to take studying seriously into his College curriculum, and have plenty of time to sit in on the sessions of the campus' popular idol, Bull. TO JOHN goes the distinction of being the most dignified member of the entire class of Seniors in the School of Civil Engineering. It was this dignity that won for him the presidency of The William Cain Student Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers. Among others of John's good traits are those of painstaking thoroughness and attention to detail which mark him as a born Engineer and a man with great depth of character. Along with this quality of preciseness goes a great fondness for argument. When John says "now take it this way," you had better not do so, for it you do, he will certainly prove his point.

ONE day in the fall a youth came rushing in with a "Hi, fellows, I'll tell you what's a fact." We soon learned the stranger's name, and since that day "Pat" has been one of our chief assets. He is a natural-born optimist, and it was through his optimism and his personality that he won his way into Dean Howell's favor and secured for himself the opportunity of doing research work on North Carolina drugs. He has other attractions which are visible only to the feminine eyes. As proof we refer to the time two days after a visit from Meredith when he received twelve letters in the same mail. "Pat's" accomplishments are many. He can recite poetry, play a harp, sing, and successfully hold the interest of a very lovely young lady in this village. Last but not least, he studies, and his record will attest his ability to spot the various professors.

ENERGETIC yet lazy, hot-tempered yet calm, good-hearted yet exacting, a combination of human nature, that's "Fritz."

A zoology specialist, a Phi-Beta-Kappa prospect, a College graduate, and in love, all at the tender age of nineteen! Remarkable, you say, if true, and this is no falsehood! You're a good boy, "Fritz," and we like you. The least we can do is to wish you and her a long life of happiness, and in parting we dedicate to you our best verse:

It's a Doctor I'll be,
Me and "Flea."
Here on earth
I'll live and serve
And build my hearth.
I will, on nerve.
For it's a Doctor I'll be.
Me and "Flea."

FROM Henderson High School to right-hand assistant to Doctor Lawson in the gymnasium, such is the rise of this likable young fellow of the Law School. With a cheerful smile for everybody and a ready word or a joke for his friends, "T. P." has gone through four years at Carolina, making friends so fast that he couldn't count them if he tried. Even if he hasn't met you but once, he'll know you always, as you will know him always by his wavy, well-brushed hair of auburn hue, his jaunty, confident walk, and his quick and smiling word of greeting. No doubt, he'll make a brilliant lawyer, for without working himself to a skeleton on his books, he can answer questions as though he had been raised with a law book as a twin brother.

We wish the best of luck to him (a useless wish; he has more than his share of luck already) and many murders to supply cases for him as a lawyer.

HERE is the scholar and campus activity man combined. In less than four years, John T. has attained his degree and taken an active part in every phase of student activity.

Imbued with a certain degree of versatility he has made an enviable record at the University, standing among the highest in scholarship. If success is for those who work, he has already succeeded. He departs from the University, leaving a record to be copied. A versatile worker and a friend worth having.

The ladies say that he has finesse and knows the social graces as thoroughly as the books that led him to blind his Profs. And there are rumors afloat that business was not the sole reason for his graduating early and going home.

He has always been a little hard to know, but once acquainted with him you will be for him for life. Quiet, easy-going, he has sailed through four years under Dudley De Witt without the latter having found out he seldom puts out according to the custom of this ditinary. He lends grace to any social function, is a good business man, full of fun, a Finchley model and, along with one "Rabbit" Bonner, is Bill Fetzer's pride and joy.

"Tom's" desire to enter the medical profession halted, faltered, and gave way before the clarion call of Dr. Carroll's Commerce School with its promise of a foundation for achievement and leadership in the field of Accountancy toward which he seems to be instinctively inclined. He has made a great success there, reaching that pinnacle—laboratory assistant. May he always have such success

"Gene" is one of these easygoing, congenial, smiling fellows who takes College life as he finds it and makes the most of it in his spare moments. We have been able to learn very little about him other than what was to be seen on the surface, and in only one thing has he betrayed himself. He has the most remarkable faculty of unconsciously sitting in the enemy cheering stands at any given football game played away from Chapel Hill of anybody we know. Perhaps he is better known to the co-eds of a certain neighboring school than any other man at Carolina, all of which is due to the above condition. THE circle of men who have come to know "Harey" intimately, have found him worthy of their friendship. Seldom have we found a man more reserved in his manner, neater in his appearance, or more careful in his demeanor.

He is another one of the many who, since the burning of the dear old "Pickwick," has wandered around nights as a sheep lost from the fold of the shepherd. Having succeeded in completing his A.B. without any serious detriment to his amply-proportioned anatomy, we are in agreement with him that he is ready for a career as master of some—well, say, moonlight school.

Though naturally reserved, when once the flood gates are opened, he is a good addition to anyone's hull session. For the most part, however, he is very close-lipped, advancing his opinions on matters of importance only after careful consideration. And despite the fact that he has not sought friends while here, he has made many who will stand by him through the struggle for cornbread which now begins.

MOSES, like "Jiggs," anxious to have his nights out, came to us seeking freedom. "Friend Wife" gave him three years to complete his College education, and for fear that he would not finish in time and, therefore, be A. W. O. L., he started out to complete the job in two years. But owing to the difficulties encountered in Dudley DeWitt's department, two and one half years was the best he could do. Considering that he majored in Mr. Peacock's accounting and made Phi Beta Kappa, we think this does very well for a man of his limited ability. Added to his many accomplishments he incidentally made his entire expenses while in school.

Notwithstanding the fact that Hearne refused to remain as a student in the School of Commerce for more than two and a half years, he has consented to be retained as an instructor in Mr. Peacock's beloved department of Accounting. We predict that he will be a valuable asset to the department, and that fewer students will consider Accounting a Jonah.

FOREST Melville, his Majesty "Doc" Houser, commonly known as "Doc," hails from the hills of Gaston or, to be exact, from Cherryville.

If there is a member of the class who not only merits but has the good will of every other member, that one is "Doc." He always sees the good in his acquaintances, and never says a disrespectful word about anyone, not even his French Instructor when the letter denoting the grade is farther down the alphabet than he expects.

"Doc" is an arduous worker, a good student, and above all a man who thinks for himself. He has been active in many phases of College life; has a good taste for literature; and is always on hand at the Di Society Smokers with a new joke. THIS man Howe has got a nickname, but we would like to set a precedent in this write-up by not using it as the opening word. This we have done; hence, the nickname is "Ike." This is what his friends (many) call him and this is the name he answers to when called upon for a "short, snappy speech" at one of Dean Paulsen's periodic banquets. Ike has been a member of the Dean's brood for three years now and the old man is proud of him.

He is an awfully quiet person, this man Howe, and only his friends (many) realize what a really good sort he is. He possesses, however, a certain intangible quality, commonly called personality, and once you do know him you are the gainer for it. We have yet to hear of him shattering any idols around the school, but he has been a wicked factor in deciding numerous class basketball games.

Good luck to you, "Ike," a man with a monicker like that is bound to get where he starts out to go.

STERN, though gentle; bold, yet not too bold; studious, although to books not a slave; such is the true impression we all have of our quite unassuming friend "Billy" Hunt. In fact, ever since the days we watched him learn to keep his shoes polished and his cap on straight in Major Boye's R. O. T. C., we have seen him gradually develop into a typical all-around Carolina man.

Among "Billy's" admirable qualities is his natural ability to lead the Carolina quartet. When he reaches his best, even the co-eds become jealous of his tenor voice. This accomplishment, together with his good-fellowship, often makes him a victim to Cupid's dart. He hopes, however, that for a while, at least, he may continue to register in the safety zone.

The University borrowed "Billy" from the peaceful village of Pleasant Garden. After four years of knocking off rough corners, she sends him back, feeling that she has aided him to live as he wished; just a true, noble life.

RAILROAD" entered Carolina in the Fall of 1921. An all-around man is usually to be found in fiction, but in "Railroad," Carolina considers that she has an outstanding example of that type. He is said to be shy of the women. However, we believe that he is fast overcoming this difficulty. When he leans back in his chair and starts to discuss commercial problems, or phases of campus activities, his listeners know that it is well worth while to be within hearing distance. His chosen profession seems to be in the commercial world, and judging from his record in the School of Commerce we feel sure that he has made a wise selection.

He has been a hard and steadfast worker while in College, and once, upon missing a set of exams, was passed unconditionally "on his record."

However, he is always extremely good humored and never lacks time for a brief "session" that generally runs for hours. COMING to The Hill with advanced standing, Myriel has taken only three years to receive his degree. But scholastic work has not entirely taken up his time. Society work and debating have been the field in which he has attained much success.

Sallying forth from these portals he will take to the State educational system, for he has chosen that as his life work. We are sure that he will make a success in this field.

Myriel has made many friends during his three years with us, and we hate to see him leave.

A MAN'S ability is certainly shown when he can carry away a sheepskin in three years. "W. S." has done this, and his feat deserves much commendation. To accomplish it he has denied himself a place in activities which should have been his.

But he is known in the History Department as a "bull," and in that field we know that he will make a success. Steadiness, brilliance, conscientiousness in work have been his characteristics.

Quiet and unassuming, he has taken a high place in the love and esteem of his fellow students, and we who entered with him are glad that he will be back with us next year to pursue post-graduate work.

BILL," a slender, clean-cut chap, has successfully combatted the intricacies of a Pharmaceutical course and is now ready to begin the trade of "rolling pills" for the ailments of mankind.

He is a well liked man among his classmates in the Pharmacy School and by all who know him, and will certainly succeed some day among his fellows.

"Bill" worked his way partly through College, but his scholarship did not suffer thereby. We predict a bright future for him.

JOHNNIE" is a distinctive man, if but for one thing. He majored in Math. That alone should be enough to win respect, if not approval. While here he has also made many practical applications of his minor course, Electricity. It is said, and not without grounds, that he is the campus expert on wiring the beds of Freshmen—and sometimes Seniors.

"Johnnie" is a real man, and as such we have no fears for him after he leaves Carolina.

FROGGIE" is one of those modest, reserved and unassuming individuals who doesn't have much to say, but is very prompt in performance of his duties. In addition he is a great admirer of the fair ones, and it is said that women have a fatal attraction for him. As a man of high ideals, strength of character, energy, and determination, "Froggie" will surely attain success and distinction in this great world of endeavor.

WE HAVE known John now for some time and as yet, "have found no fault in this man." He is a jolly good fellow and has that cheerfulness that will cause him to win a place in the hearts of all. He is sincere, frank, and outspoken. He is not afraid to have convictions and is usually able to defend them. An independent thinker you might call him, and he is one who will disagree with you just for the sake of an argument. John never loses an opportunity to improve himself both mentally and physically. His ambition is to read everything the Professors assign to be read. He has no time for loafing, because his interests are many: English poetry, gymnastics, and the Pittsboro Road.

Notwithstanding, we have always felt that the law profession lost a valuable member when "Dean" decided to study Pharmacy, for his argumentative powers are considered to be of the highest degree. We feel sure that N. C. druggists will hear more of Kirby in the future.

HERE is one of our number who got sidetracked. From the looks of things last year when he was Editor-in-Chief of the Magazine, Reed was slated to be a literary man. But the law tightened its grip on him all the while and the world of journalism became a great loser. The Carolina Magazine, under his tutelage, took on a real literary hue and upon it was bestowed much generous comment. So much was his craftsmanship in writing and his executive ability valued that when the Publications Union came into existence last spring he was selected as the logical man to head this important activity in the University's life. We don't say he will be a howling success, for we don't know that he wants to be, but we do say that it will depend solely on his ambitions.

EMSLEY is a good example of what we like to call a real "Carolina Man." Accomplished, yet not boastful; popular, yet unassuming; marks of a regular fellow. Yea, verily, here is a man who enjoys life immensely; in fact, he gets all there is to be gotten from it. His activities are not hampered by one road; he is the well-rounded man, influential and successful in all he undertakes, whether it be an affair of the heart or the brain. Indeed, Emsley is the type we are all proud to call "friend."

TO SEE this serious-visaged young man on the campus, one wonders from whence cometh the name "Venus." A warm day in the early fall, the enticing waters of Morgan Creek, the ever-vigilant eye of the camera, and the poetic natures of his fellow-engineers, all combine to tell the tale. To see him is to wonder; to know him is to admire; to hear him—in mixed harmony with Rivet Ray, Moody Plyler and Doc Chase—burst forth in song, is next to Heaven itself. One of the honor men of his class in Engineering; cynical, yet hoping, with regard to the "weaker sex"; critical, not only of his fellow men but of himself; product of his environment; protegee of T. Saville; modest, but forceful when cornered, "Venus" is loved by all who know him. Therefore, Leroy Irving Lassiter, Engineer, philosopher, cynic, evangelist, we, who love you and who are about to leave you, salute you—a MAN.

MOST College students spend four years trying to find the proper balance between campus activities and studies. And most of them never approach the balance. This red-headed athletic chap from Belmont solved the riddle with the same ease he has shown in shooting baskets or spearing forward passes. And on the dance floor, wrapped up in a tux, with a cooling bit of femininity in his arms he's a bearcat. A good athlete, a worthy student with a cool business head placed squarely on a broad pair of shoulders, he makes a type that is hard to down.

KNOX thought at first that he wanted to be an Engineer, but he took some of the courses and became quite sure that he wanted to be something else. Now he enjoys the poetry of Mathematics and uses his knowledge of surveying to run lines of exquisite straightness through his hair. He likes to practice the gentle art of conversation, and you can always find him ready to stop and exchange shrewd observations. If you have a grouch and want droll and optimistic company, find Knox and start him talking about anything. Just at present, Knox is thinking about entering Law, where he says, there ought to be plenty of room at the top, because the room at the bottom is certainly all taken.

ERNEST, known to all his friends by the handle of "Chief" or "Ena," has far surpassed any Freshman's ambitions. In addition to being one of the most popular and most respected men on the campus he has made a close race for Phi Beta Kappa. His triumphs do not end there, for he has barely missed the further distinction of adding globe-trotter to his other titles, signifying thereby that he has made numerous trips north and south. From a man of "Chief's" capability, as evidenced by his record in Dud's Commerce and his fine analysis in the Economics Club, predictions would fall far short of his future goal, and for that reason we refrain from marking out a future course on life's wild, tempestuous waves.

C.; Head of Science Department and Teacher of Chemistry Winston-Salem High School (1920-1924); University Summer School (1920-1922-1923).

THIS man had his beginning, at least so far as physical existence is concerned, among the mountains of Western North Carolina. He spent his boyhood days in this "Land of the Sky" where the mountains rear their lofty peaks seemingly to pierce the very sky itself. From this high beginning he has continued to climb the ladder that leads to success until he is now Head of the Science Department in the Winston-Salem High School. He has one distinction of which few of us can ever hope to boast, and that is the fact that he has been a man ever since he was born. After graduation from high school he entered the University. However, in the midst of his College career, the United States became involved in the World War and he, like many other noble sons of Carolina, answered his country's call to arms. He went overseas and did his bit in helping drive back the Huns. Weaver re-entered the University in the Fall of 1919 and was graduated with the Class of 1920. He was a good student and a jolly good fellow among the boys. His many friends bid him Godspeed.

THERE came to us in the Fall of Nineteen Hundred and Twenty a tall, God-fearing, liberty-loving, law-abiding mountaineer. Mast entered before the days of the sovereign Freshman and, therefore, had many exciting times in Old Carr as he rolled the pencil, or remade his bed in the dead of night.

He has always possessed a wonderful mind and could easily have won a Phi Beta Kappa key. He is, however, a man immune to any emotion save that of attraction to the opposite sex. But we know James best as a conservative business man, and feel that when he takes over his father's business, as seems to be his ambition, he will make an unequalled success, and we wish for him the best always.

E." is a Senior this year, so, ye gods, must excuse this dignified air. Still, he is a good scout and has the ability to finish anything he may start. History is his specialty, and in this particular field of study he even essays to write themes and dissertations. Matthews also essays the athletic role, occasionally, and may be seen going to the gymnasium every afternoon to reduce his 180 pounds.

In spite of the fact that he is only 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighs 180 pounds, he is remarkably active. Teaching is apparently Matthews' choice as a profession, in which he should make a success.

WALT is one of those rough-edged Western North Carolina fellows from the wont made famous by the late Governor Bickett's phrase, "From Manteo to Murphy." Mauney comes from the town mentioned in the tail end of the phrase.

He tried a mechanical school before entering Pharmacy, but after completing the course he decided on pill-rolling for a profession rather than nut-tightening. He holds the bridge championship of the campus, playing the game with a master mind. No amount of bridge or sport has drawn him away from his regular work on his books and, as a result, his course here has been successful and he leaves here one of the University's best trained men.

ABOVE is the physiognomy of quite a character. But as his dignified bearing shows, he's not at all a bad one. His life of adventure outside of school has made him a cosmopolite, while Summer School, a good line, and a militant bearing explain his being a "man of women." But with all this he's at the head of the class of good fellows, and when he starts tagging M. D. to his name, it's our opinion that "Dr. Mac" will stir things up a few.

"BILL" is an energetic person who dropped into "Dean's" Pharmacy School from Waxhaw with the purpose of learning to roll pills in a masterful manner, and he has come very near to success. He has the ability to lead, and his leadership has manifested itself in more ways than one. When anything is to be put across, "Bill" is always called on. As president of the class he has had to approach the various Profs numerous times and, needless to say, he has gotten by with his wits. This much we can say for him, he can see both sides of a question and has the ability to uphold his convictions and put across his thoughts to his fellow man. "Bill" was a staunch supporter of the "Bok Peace Plan," and it is rumored that he and some of his supporters lost several nights' sleep while working in its behalf. His chief delight, though, is receiving a letter from his mother. There is no doubt that we will hear big things of him in the future.

He returned to Summer School one June to bring his yearly quota of midnight oil up to standard and, shortly after he arrived he—well, ever since that time his stay in Chapel Hill has been quite pleasantly interspersed with frequent trips to a little town in South Carolina.

"MACK," as he is known to every one on the campus, has spent most of his four years of College life at Saunders Hall, where he has been studying to be a business man. There is, however, one place besides Saunders that "Mack" frequents. This is none other than the postoffice. He spends a great deal of time waiting for that "special letter" to be put up.

"Mack" has the ability to make a good business man. He is now a good ladies' man. If it were not for the fact that he talks in his sleep, he might have kept his future plans a secret, but, alas, he told it all when he didn't aim to; so if Cupid should make amends, don't be surprised.

MELVIN hails from Roseboro and he has done much to put the town on the map. Having completed one year of his course here in 1921 he came back with us this year to get his degree. He is one of these rare combinations of a real fellow with the boys, yet a perfect sheik among the ladies, and we do not wonder at the sweet things falling so hard, for he is very pleasant to look upon, even to the masculine eye. He has true Southern characteristics, for he believes that a black cat is a forerunner of bad luck. Melvin's chief ambition is to be the best Pharmacist in the class, and we have no doubt as to the fulfillment of his desire, for if studying and hard work are worth anything, he will soon be the best one in the State. His chief hobbies are studying and the Pickwick, and it was indeed sad to see the expression on his face when he learned of the great fire which swept the latter away.

When monotony became unbearable he always came forward with a plan which would either work or which was so far-fetched that the idea itself cleared the atmosphere. He is the organizer of the Gilded Fuzz, which, by the way, is soon to equal Golden Fleece in popularity. Unfortunately, though, he made a mistake by omitting to make himself a charter member.

"Buck's" strongest point, outside of his general good fellowship, is his ability to write. He is no athlete, but a huge crowd once witnessed a slow but wonderful ramble around Emerson Field. "Buck" leaves with regrets and heartiest of good wishes of all who have come in contact with him.

Which is another way of saying that if Andy is as long-winded in the sermons he is going to preach some of these days as he is on the cinder path, he is likely to close his eyes on empty pews when the time comes to say Amen. Andy has been one of Carolina's best track men and has shown up well as a substitute on the football squad. Much of his spare time he has devoted to church work in the village and country Sunday Schools. His sincerity and reliability have won for him a large host of friends who swear by him. His strength lies in his acquaintances, and all who know him are his friends and will remember him as a peach of a fellow.

He is somewhat of a politician, too, and he will go down in history as one of those immortals who helped knock the spokes out of the wheels of the "Super Six." It is hinted that he will return for another year.

HOLT, always called "Specs" by his friends is of small stature but of great capacity. A bundle of energy and a handful of changing moods, he holds within himself interests which are numerous and varied. He takes a taste of track in the afternoon, never misses a "Pick," is on hand for Glee Club practice, and is never late for a performance of Julia Claussen, Louise Homer, or any other great artistes. Study is not in his schedule, but he nevertheless manages to make a fair record in his class work, and keeps shekels in the bank as a result of his labors all the time. We know him by his dash, by his voice and, best of all, we know him by his binding friendship.

THE write-up for this gentleman failed to get in by the time set. He must be written up. We do not know him, but here goes:

This young man, like all the other Seniors, needs only to be known to be liked. His calm, easygoing ways make for him a winning personality. Although he takes part in campus activities, he has in no way let them interfere with his studies, just missing Phi Beta Kappa.

He will undoubtedly make a success of whatever he chooses for his life work; that is, if he goes into it with the same energy and determination that have characterized him all through his College career. Fate is fickle, yet we dare predict for him a very brilliant future.

HAM" has two interests in life: one is pharmacy, the other—well, I mustn't divulge her name. It is a rare combination in a man to be so well gifted in both his chosen profession and a ladies' man, too. Most of us do extremely well to be gifted in any one phase of life. Perhaps Hoy's good looks and genius help him all the way. What man is there that they wouldn't aid? We are not afraid to prophesy that "Ham" will be successful in business and in "the greatest game of all." Our best wishes accompany him all the way.

WHEN George came to The Hill four years ago and gave the campus the once over, he found that the Chemistry Building was nearest to the Episcopal Church; George decided to become a Chemist. Once in the building of vile odors, explosions, and sweet spirits, George became so enchanted that other than being the main pillar of the church he found little time to be sociable.

George is a man of rare accomplishments. Representing the University and singing before the N. C. C. W. girls on two different occasions is quite an honor, but besides this George dances, plays bridge, Mah Jongg, the piano, the violin, and the victrola.

A man of pleasing personality, kind hearted and friendly—traits of character which are most desirable—one is fortunate to know George and number him among one's friends.

HAILING from Hertford, George is familiarly known as the "Duke," and it requires little observation to see that the title is applied appropriately.

Being a very quiet and modest fellow he leaves it to us to find out that he is President of Phi Beta Kappa and has the envied faculty of being able to do most anything and do it well.

He has not let his studies interfere with the "College education"; always ready for a confab or political talk and is seen at all German Club festivities.

Something, and most people would say wonderful, happened to him during the Christmas holidays. He turns his eyes longingly toward Greensboro and catches westbound trains quite frequently on the week-ends.

George will make a success in whatever he undertakes.

CHARLES E. NORFLEET

CHARLIE" Norfleet was described by a certain young lady as "that happy fat man with the Playmakers." That's because she didn't know "Charlie" earlier, "i. e.," when he was manager of the football team and forgot to take it along when he went to Yale. The 1924 football season kept "Charlie" in such a strut that he lost the art of smiling, and it required large dosages of Playmaker serum to restore this faculty. His job with Koch's crew no one has ever been able to define, but suffice it to say that he seemed to be able to do anything that happened to be desired, whether shifting scenes or taking the part of some delinquent actor. "Charlie" comes from the town where Camel cigarettes are made, but we are not holding him responsible for that.

HE CAME to Carolina from Stantonburg, and quickly became a friend to and of all who know him. During his four years here he has continued to make lasting friendships, and we see him leave with a pang of real regret. His black hair is always neat, his clothes ever in order, his lessons prepared as even the most dogmatic Professor could wish, and his smile as ready as the sunshine in May. What more could you wish in a Carolina Senior, except dignity? And that quality he possesses in abundance, and with it a quietness of manner denoting him a thorough gentleman. Yet he is neither so dignified nor so quiet that he doesn't make a most excellent companion for any affair, be it dance or country walk or preparation for examinations.

We wish him all the luck and happiness in the world, knowing as we do that the wish is superfluous, for success is coming to him whatever he decides to do in life.

ARCHIE" is tall, handsome, and carries with him a great amount of dignity. He is one of our most distinguished students. He came over from the city of Gulf to begin the study of medicine, but after two years he heard the call of Pharmacy so strong from old Pearson Hall that he came over and joined into the medley of smells that are so necessary for a pharmacist to know before he can fill prescriptions.

He is a much-sought-after man by Stetson, D., and Finchley salesmen, and he certainly looks the styles when displaying their line. Entering Pharmacy one quarter late, he has through diligent studying and an uncanny ability to spot the Professors, passed all work and now he is one of the best informed men in the class. We are sure he will be a success in the pharmaceutical world and in the big world of matrimony.

FRANK J. PIERCE

FRANK comes from the county famous for its hooch and Selma, but he has never been known to touch the former, and his only connections with the latter are passing ones. He has worked so terribly hard, he thinks, that he has not been seen so very often save by his intimate circle of friends, but just ask them about him. He has graced the historic halls of the Phi Assembly throughout four years, and we don't remember of ever hearing him make a speech that lasted over fourteen minutes at the most. Good natured, rather quiet, unpretentious, sincere as the average rainy weather in Chapel Hill, he has made a lasting impression on those who knew him, and he will be missed.

CLIFFORD, or "Clip" as we all know him, is really a prince among men. He is a typical brunette with glossy black hair and a pair of sparkling brown eyes that would make Valentino blush with envy. In fact, he is known as the "Sheik of the Salisbury Desert" and he well deserves the title. His quietness suggests mysticism and, of course, a woman's curiosity cannot resist that. His record at Carolina is above 90, and that speaks well for his scholastic ability. He is a great exponent of the forensic art. He takes an active part in campus activities. Above all the material things he has accomplished, he is one of the best liked men on the campus; his charming personality captivates one, and a fellow could never have a better friend than "Clip." It is rumored that his bachelor days are numbered (but such is the fate of man); so the best wish we can make, "Clip," is that we wish you success and happiness as you go out on the highway of life.

He is a mighty hunter of jack rabbits, or at least he says he is. He has heard the call of the sunburnt West, and soon "Pete," whimsical, moon-gazing "Pete," mighty hunter of jack rabbits and clouds, will be traveling toward the land of the setting sun. Good luck to you, "Pete," we wish you well.

With a power of perception and a justness not usual in such proceedings, the Senior Class has by vote conceded to this one the honor of being the wittiest and most original among their number. But campus honors "Bob" has not sought, rather has he chosen to make his own. The Playmakers will miss him and the campus literati have been depleted by one.

He has come to College intermittently, varying his versatile career with newspaper work and the Hohenzollern trouble. He leaves us for the last time to go into the newspaper game and to surrender to the wiles of the Blind Bow-Bay.

While he was not the pride of the Engineering School Professors, Dwight never had a physical breakdown from over-worry when the quarterly grades were distributed. In other words, he achieved the happy combination of passing work and sailing smoothly on the heavy flood of campus activities. Dwight thinks he will be a Civil Engineer. BEHOLD a versatile man! "Press" came to the University in 1920, whereupon he entered the School of Commerce and plunged immediately into his major work—Rich Tenor and Spanish Guitars.

In spite of these major activities, however, he has found time to accumulate a B.S. degree and an ambition to be a banker. Next to banking he loves the printing game best, and he has concocted certain ideas by which he hopes some day to establish a gigantic engraving company.

"Press" is a friendly chap with a wide smile on his face and a still wider circle of friends. He has his own ideas about most things, but he will generally agree with you that women are a necessity and that Spain is a wonderful country.

WE ARE dusting out a niche for George in the Hall of Fame. His place at Carolina has been in the top rank among those notables who shape a College campus. Single-handed he grasped the wheel of two mighty Men-o-War, the Carolina Magazine and the Gail; through fair weather and tempest he ruled the helm, and has brought them at last safely in sight of harbor. His other activities range the scale from successful class political "boss" to successful father of daughters in a Carolina Folk Play. His field is writing, and on the printed page we find him sometimes as clever as Washington Square, sometimes as important as Thomas Carlyle, but more often as delightful as Mark Twain.

"G. Y." owns forever a glowing spot in the hearts of all who know him, for he is as congenial as an old and well-beloved pipe.

WHEN Dale Ranson came to Chapel Hill from Huntersville he did not have to inform Coach "Bob" that he could run. Nobody ever heard of a Ranson who couldn't, and Dale wasn't going to let the family fame go the bye. He has proved Carolina's best mile man, and he has a younger brother who has mastered to perfection the gentle art of pole-vaulting—but this writup is about Dale. Many have attempted to define the "Carolina Spirit." Dale hasn't, but he has done far more, he has expressed it in his everyday life on the campus. He has never turned a deaf ear to demands upon his time where a worth while activity was concerned. And if you want to know how he can argue any question, see "Who's Who" in the Di Society.

HERE'S another one of the Ransons! And like those who have preceeded him he has distinguished himself in many ways, chief of which has been athletics. He proudly wears an "N. He's a thoroughly likable fellow and has made for himself a host of friends. With high ideals and a most enthusiastic loyalty for his Alma Mater he has not hesitated to speak out for anything that promised to promote the interests of the University.

As he has distinguished himself in athletics, so we feel sure that he will distinguish himself in his life after College. He intends to teach and coach, and when his athletic teams come to Carolina to win championships we will all be proud to say that we knew the man who is such an able leader of boys. FRED came to College under a severe handicap; he was entirely too good-looking. For two years he devoted himself conscientiously to his studies, enjoying the proper share of Freshman and Sophomore activities, and was quite oblivious to feminine foibles and strategies. Then came two months in the Summer School, and "Fred" cultivated a line, became more careful in selecting his clothes, and used his irresistible smile to killing advantage. In his Junior year, his problem was to keep abreast of his engineering courses and pay flying visits to a Summer School Miss. He solved the problem, somehow, and entered the Senior year more serious and far wiser in worldly knowledge. His mission in life is Civil Engineering, and although it is banal to predict success for "Fred," truth cannot be evaded. His appealing personality, energy, and quick mind will insure him a rosy future.

EBENEZER is our most classical student. He can tell you ancient and medieval history like it was a novel. He is our authority on dates, which probably has something to do with his excellent marks recorded in "Dean's" office. He is a true Englishman and gets much delight from a cup of tea "a la Gooch." Ebenezer says studying is just a business proposition with him, and we truly believe him, for on numerous occasions before an exam he has been seen coming out of the "Y" lobby about 6 A. M., carrying three empty Coca-Cola bottles, and the results of such escapades could always be observed, for his grades are among the best. He does not devote all of his time to books, however, for if you happen to pass by Dormitory D you can often hear that soft strains of a violin radiating from his room, and when the Pharmacy Quartet renders their daily program, his clear tenor voice can be distinguished among the others. We extend to him our sincere wishes for success and feel sure that Lincolnton will have regained a citizen of whom she may justly be proud.

IF YOU want to get close to Brooks, then talk athletics to him and be sure to agree with him, for athletics is his hobby. For four years he has followed the course of University athletics avidly, and he is perhaps better acquainted with the records than any other Senior.

Brooks, voluntarily casting himself from the bow of the good ship A.B. into the sea of B.S., was snapped up by a whale—mathematics. For three years he worked in the interior of this sea-monster in an effort to be cast upon the platform of Memorial Hall. After much internal distortion the whale finally spat Jonah upon the shore after due prodding by one E. L. HE REALLY does look like a serious student, ladies and gentlemen, but after having French V with him we come to the conclusion that some people's looks are highly deceiving. His roommate had this to say about him: "In his Freshman year he made the Honor Roll; in his Sophomore year he acquired the name of "Sleepy." Knowing them both, I am inclined to blame the roommate.

"C. C." is one of those fellows the more of whom you see the better you like him, and is in no sense a pill, even if his name does sound rather pharmaceutical. We have often admired his versatility and wondered at the ease with which he entered campus activities, at the same time graduating in three years with better than average grades.

THIS young gentleman, informally known as "Gene," comes from the County of Vance in general, Henderson in particular. His brother, one "Runt," followed him here one year later, and together they have sought knowledge under "Hunk" in his chemical laboratories. As a result we have not seen so much of him as we would have liked; but what is to be is; and the hours we have spent with him have proved him to be an individual of the best sort even if somewhat peculiar. Regardless of the fact that he spent every weekday in his lab, he has found sufficient time, it seems, to spend every Sunday for several years off the Hill, why we cannot imagine. He has been very silent about that. It is rumored that he has already discovered means for making several new dyes, and if he hasn't it will come as a surprise if he doesn't.

JUDGING from his name, Ross was intended for a Statesman, or at least a politician. But something went wrong and the Pharmacy profession was lucky when it claimed him. That does not mean, however, that he lacks qualities of leadership. If enterprise has anything to do with success, he will attain the heights of great men. We sometimes wonder how so much energy and enthusiasm can be contained in so minute a specimen.

His activities are varied, ranging from the "Pick" and week-end trips to studies and letters to the best girl. He is immensely likable and mingles easily with his associates. He has the ability to "make a heap of all his winnings and risk it on one turn of the pitch and toss," and win again, making the loser feel glad that he has lost. Sincerely we wish him success in his future life.

Prior to coming here it is rumored that he spent a short vacation with the 30th Division in France. We have often wondered if he got his Marcel wave while knocking about with the French mam'selles.

From the number of Wall Street brokers with whom he corresponds, it seems that the light of his ambition is to hold a seat on 'Change. If he should succeed in gathering enough shekels to purchase the above, his laugh alone should net him a million.

HARRIS hails from the "sapphire lands" of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and he came a long distance from home, but then he didn't mind, since Carolina in his estimation has the only Law School, anyway.

Harris succeeded in capturing his license last February in Raleigh and is as proud as a new mother over the whole business.

The old town of Hendersonville can't rest until he gives it of his knowledge, and the town authorities send him hurrygrams telling him to "rush it up," and when he gets there he's going to do that very thing.

EVERYBODY on the campus in 1920 knew "Bennie"—4 feet 8½ inches high, and wearing short pants, but as he grew in intellect under the careful tutorship of Heronian and his "cabbage," Frank Graham, with whom he delved into the mysteries of ancient, medieval, modern and transitional history, Collier Cobb and his geology, so did he grow in size, and today is man enough to represent the University on the wrestling team in the 119-pound class.

"Bennie" takes life easily and philosophical, never studies, yet withal he is making Phi Beta Kappa grades, and his ever-ready smile and pleasing personality has won for him many lasting friendships. Under his serious look and solemn countenance is a nature filled with mischief and fun.

There is some attraction for him in Durham or Raleigh, we can't tell which, for "Bennie" is using too much vaseline and Eddie Pinaud, and his Buick is leaving The Hill regularly, sometimes loaded and sometimes otherwise.

TANKY—when they tell you that he is a letter-man on the track team and also made his Phi Beta Kappa key in the Engineering School you may think you know all about him. "Tank" thinks "dammit" is one of those French words about as useful as hydrophobia. He also thinks Scotch labels on bottles mean just about the same thing as Irish does to a sack of potatoes. Until last year he looked on all girls as just descendants of Eve, and to be avoided if possible. Now "Tanky" has it bad. It is rumored that he is giving a correspondence course for girls. With crisp curly hair, a winning smile and a motorcycle, "Tanky," boy, we wish you Godspeed and a world of success in New Bern.

AND here we present to you a real man; "Aubrey" is the most admired man on the campus. Coming here with his pockets empty he has accomplished more than the ordinary man would think possible. And he has "managed" it easily. In fact, he has been manager of so much around the campus that we fear for "Charlie" Woollen.

And to this we add the fact that Aubrey is an all-around man; he hasn't neglected his studies or the social side of life. We are content to predict that Aubrey will accomplish whatever he sets out to do.

C. J. SISK

SISK entered into Doctor Manning's fold of aspiring young doctors in the Fall of 1922, but for some reason the following term found him answering Doctor Howell's roll call in the Pharmacy School. That this change, probably due to his inherited love of the pill-rolling profession, has deprived the Med School of talented material is proven by tales of his fellow workers of his adept application of the principles of medical science in caring for wounds received from the ride on the rods on three successive trips to Richmond.

We know Sisk as a true sport, an excellent fellow, and we predict for him something bigger and better than the ordinary pill-roller.

WE ALWAYS feel hesitant in commenting upon a man who is a member of Phi Beta Kappa; but when we recall, in the abstract, that "Tam" plays a wonderful game of bridge and holds a potent hand in a "deuces wild," "no roof" game of poker and, in the specific, quite a few other things which we choose to pass, quite Jurgenesquely, without comment, our hesitancy disappears like punch at a Faculty banquet.

"Tam" is a bull in "furrin langwidges" and we suspect that ere tempus fugit very far, he will take unto himself an M.A.; a Ph.D.; then, if his numerous letters from Washington be not diplomatic correspondence, a spouse. MANY epithets could be tacked onto "Pete's" name, but to those who know him well he is "Pete," the versatile. He is a scholar and a gentleman and a hound after activities, missing Phi Beta Kappa last spring only by a slight margin, and he will probably carry it away with him this spring on his watch-chain. He delights in raising Olympic dust, and one may see him daily tracking it to the Country Club or Russell Inn.

Social in every sense of the word, he is a supreme ladies' man, and no co-ed tea or dance of any sort would be counted a success without his presence. His motto is something to the effect that the best shall be last, and he operates on the law of "love 'em and leave 'em," and this he has done so far. John Paul looks upon him as a saving grace and depends upon him to stand at the helm of the Glee Club, and the child is his whether or not he claims it. Withal, he reflects well upon Camelton.

HERE is another son that Salisbury can be proud of. "Bill" has made an enviable record here, together with friendships too numerous to mention. An excellent student, ask Dean or W. J.; a real pal, take it straight from the boys; and a ladies' man. Well, just let the fairer sex confirm your suspicions. Then, too, it's the fairer sex that makes "Bill" such a good thermometer of the weather. On a sunny day, unworried by the financial condition of the Carolina Magazine, "Bill" is hopelessly in love. But under more adverse conditions, such as a delayed letter, the horizon takes on doubtful hues as far as his final choice is concerned. A friend is the greatest possession in the world, and you have missed a treat if you have never walked and talked with "Bill." Our best and simplest compliment is that you are a good fellow, "Bill," and we like you. LEE, strange to say, has not acquired a nickname while here. Perhaps the reason is that he has no striking peculiarity to serve as origin of such a name, unless it is "laziness," and that is too hard to say. Of course, this means physical laziness, for Lee is a good worker when it comes to his studies.

Stroupe came to Carolina with the Class of '23, but owing to an injury received while playing baseball, was forced to leave for medical treatment. After recovery he taught the following year, then entered this class. Twenty-four is glad to claim him.

Congeniality among his associates has won for Lee many friends. He believes in backing up any movement for the good of the University. Especially is this true in regard to athletics. He is a great supporter of the teams. In the four years he has not missed a single Varsity game or track meet held on The Hill.

There is one thing that we cannot understand, and that is his attitude toward the ladies. We do not know whether he is a woman-hater or just bashful. If it is the latter, there is hope for him, for leap year comes about every four years.

DOC," as he is known among his intimate friends, hails from Troy which is geographically located neither in Greece nor in New York, but in the heart of the old North State. Most "Docs" are doctors, and true to form our good friend is also one. The strange part of it is that he, determined to pursue the field of first aid, should eliminate the fields of human and animal anatomy, and concentrate his agile mind, under the supervision of King Lear, in the magnetic field, nursing delinquent motors and run-down armatures.

As is always the case in both fairy tale and actual life, friends must part at the forks of the road. It is with a sad heart and wishing him the best of luck that we see our good friend well down the right-hand fork, hastening with eager footsteps to the city of dense clouds of smoke, where he will take up his life's work with the "Westinghouse Electric."

FIRST, last, and always a "wire-twister," a "door-bell engineer," "Shorty" has survived the devastation of two Engineering Summer Schools, and has come into his own at last. Building switchboards for King Lear or riding the "Hoot Owl" holds no terrors for him, when the horizon looms as fair as it seems. Although old in experience (?), a childish indisposition nearly cost him the Christmas holidays in his Senior year. Good humor, practical as well as theoretical knowledge of the work at hand, "horse sense," all combine to make "Shorty" a valuable asset to the electrical world. WE HATE for "Cy" to leave us, because association with him keeps us in a cheerful mood and in an optimistic frame of mind. Someone has said that it pays to be a pessimist, because a pessimist will never be disappointed. Far be it from "Cy," however, to acquiesce in such a sentiment. His attitude is decidedly one of optimism, and he certainly manifests it by his never-ceasing cheerfulness and good will toward his friends. And who can disagree with his maxim that cheerfulness lightens even our hardest tasks.

"Cy's" record here in his work has been noteworthy and is even remarkable, for through it all he has never been too busy to render a service to his friends. Carrying with him these excellent qualities that have characterized him here, we are quite confident that "Cy" will become an outstanding figure in his chosen profession.

JULIUS POINDEXTER TIMBERLAKE, JR.

Louisburg, N. C.

Age, 22; Height, 5 feet 7 inches; Weight, 136

Collar size, 15; Shoe size, 6½; Hat size, 6¾

Degree, B.S., Commerce

Freshman Baseball Squad (1921); Varsity Track Squad (1922); Phi Society; Le Cercle Francais; Secretary Franklin County Club ('22, '23).

FOUR years ago, Julius came quietly into our midst from Louisburg. His natural business ability has been greatly augmented by his work toward a Bachelor of Science Degree in Commerce. But he has found time to keep in good physical trim, having made the baseball squad when he was a Freshman, and the Varsity track squad every spring since that time. Modesty and quietness have ever been his chief characteristics, but he always has a witty remark to make. In a "bull session" he can hold his own with the best of them. In preparation for an examination he is a veritable fountain of knowledge.

And he has not been idle where the ladies are concerned, as letters from and trips to Greensboro College can well attest. He is going back home to engage in business and, with a girl and his real business ability to aid him, we predict a remarkable success in whatever he undertakes.

Pineville, N. C.

Age, 28; Height, 5 feet 7 inches; Weight, 150

Collar size, 15; Shoe size, 8; Hat size, 7

Degree, A.B.

Originally belonged to Class of 1919, Di Society; N. C. Club; Mecklenburg County Club; Acacia Fraternity.

WHILL you write me up?" After hesitating a bit I agreed to do the best I could with my subject. That shy, subtle smile was, and is, always on "Tut's" face—how could I refuse to write? The truth is, "Tut" has not been here since '20. We are glad to have him in our class, he is one of that "best-last" type of fellows.

Tuttle tells us that he wishes he had finished with his own Class of '19. We are wondering if he does not like us '24-ers or if the School of Education, in which he is doing his major study, has evolved from its primitive "pud" stage into a real University Department.

However this may be, we are glad that "Tut" has been with us this year; we feel that his memory of the Class of '24 will be pleasant when time stamps the worth-while things that he has been able to receive from us, and the fine things which he has been able to give us by his always bright outlook on life.

CORNELIUS MONROE VANSTORY, JR.

Greensboro, N. C.

Age, 22.

NEIL" says that the study of law and equity has a peculiar allurements for him, even more so than the charms of a beautiful and winsome lass and, judging by his ardent application thereto, he is in earnest.

"Van" also participated in that rough sport known far and wide as football, and always he has played a steady, consistent brand of ball, and rated high as a Varsity sub.

Also, the social whirl has found him at the vortex, and he knows his stuff when it comes to the fair ones.

Greensboro, ought to take notice when "Neil" slams his shingle on one of its municipal piles.

FRANCES PRESTON VENABLE

Vice-President Woman's Association (1922-1923); Woman Student Council (1922-1923); President Woman Student Government Association (1923-1924); Campus Cabinet (1923-1924); Student Activities Committee (1923-1924).

Π Β Φ.

IN SPITE of her high spirits, her immense popularity and her extremely irrelevant nickname, Frances' dignity so impressed the campus that last spring she was taken for a Senior. This year, however, she was encouraged to bob her hair, and shorn of a large part of her crowning glory, she had a hard time keeping out of the group picture of the Sophomore Class. Frances came to Carolina from St. Mary's and has been a moving spirit on the campus, ready and able to do anything from being Chairman of the Woman's Association of the Class of 1924, and making the Honor Roll, down to going to the drug store every Chapel Period in the week with "Hickey" and "Leah." She was voted the best all-around at Saint Mary's, and Carolina can say that she has lived up to, and even gone beyond, her reputation.

HERE, also, is another of those Knights of the Horn. It can be truly said of him that he has tooted his way through College, believing that "He who toots not his own horn, the same shall not be tooted." No first-class student orchestra would be complete lacking the terpsichorean insinuation of his muted trumpet; nor would "Buster" be complete without the presence of one Frank McLaughon and, vice versa. What would happen were they to become separated, has long been an interesting speculation.

In the five days a week that he has seen fit to spend on The Hill for the past four years, "Bus" has become exceedingly popular and has gained many friends here. The Saturdays and Sundays which he has chosen to spend elsewhere, too, have evidently netted him many friends as well as other valuable gains.

"Bus" is a good fellow and a good sport. We, among others, hate to see you leave, old thing, but fare-thee-well, and power to you, lungwise and otherwise.

PREACHER" likes the women; there are no two ways about that fact. He even consents to chaperone and act as trusty companion to the forlorn co-ed, and especially those pharmaceutically inclined.

His liquid-toned voice qualified him to become a member of that celebrated "Pharmacy Male Quartet." His dulcetly-soft serenadings often float upon the atmosphere surrounding New West.

He announces that aforesaid Quartet always opens classes with choice renderings, much to the delight of Professor Howell and the class.

LIVVY," if he needs any introduction, is just another one of those lions which New Bern has sent to the Universitat Carol Septent who lends prestige to anything under the sun that smacks of a social function. If we make no mistake, he hasn't missed a dance within a radius of fifty miles since matriculation, and that was some little time ago. Russell Inn, if it could talk, might tell of an affair which it harbored during his Junior year, but that is just one among the many. A wizard when it comes to "rushing" the Frosh, he has made many friends in every incoming Freshman class since he has been here, and he still has them.

ARTEMUS entered Carolina in 1919, but discontinued his studies until again in 1922, he re-entered, determined to exit a full-fledged druggist. And he hasn't missed doing it.

It is rumored that he has plans to entangle himself in the nets of matrimony in the near future, and as a result will locate near Asheville. "Such is the fate of man."

He is a good student and qualified in his last year as a pharmaceutical instructor.

Also a good mixer, "W. A." served as president of his class in Pharmacy in his stay in the Pharmacy School and was instrumental in bringing the pharmaceutical fraternity to Carolina.

As a mandolin picker he excels, and the performance would not be complete without his voice.

Di Society; Freshman Debating Society; Varsity Wrestling Team (3), Captain (4); Wearer of "N. C."; Monogram Club; Class Football; Secretary Fredell County Club (4); Murphey Club; Appalachian Training School Club; R.O.T.C.

SHIRLEY, as Captain of the 1924 Carolina Wrestling Team, has led his team to a series of successive victories. He has the unique honor of piloting a sport for which letters have only recently been awarded.

Shirley is a good fellow; the better you know him the better you like him. He is widely known and well liked among his fellow students. Although he is very much interested in one of the fairer sex, he is faithful to his work and believes in doing his tasks well. You may always count on his getting the important things in this life across in good style.

With these splendid characteristics of a good student and a real gentleman we feel justified in looking forward to the day when he will be an illuminating figure in his life work.

YES-SIR-EE. little Richard from South Carolina, hails immediately from the mountains of Western North Carolina, although a Sandlapper by birth. Judging from the line of hot air that incessantly pours forth, one would decide that he has had many varied and harassing experiences. However, his long line of jokes never becomes monotonous but is an entertainment and source of enjoyment. Although he often finds time for entertainment, he never neglects his work.

One thing puzzles us about "Dick" We do not understand what is responsible for those bow legs. He likes to shake a wicked hoof to the tune of modern jazz, but we think that his walks to Durham about "three o'clock in the morning" are largely responsible for such a calamity.

"Dick" is a fine fellow in every respect. He is always making friends, both male and female. But in spite of his love for the ladies, we do not believe it will interfere with his ability to make pills. He expects to spend most of his future in a drug store, but we hope he will not take advantage of his friends who will be forced to abide by the Bone-Dry Law.

Nevertheless, the utilitarian fails by a great deal to wholly surmount the transcendental in Weil. He has an appreciation of life and the better side of the human lot. Neil has well mixed the activities of the athlete.

The Pharmacy School has known him as an industrious worker and the cinder path has often scorched beneath his passage, for Neil has been a consistent worker on Coach "Bob's" team.

We first saw him and had the mucous membranes of our nostrils tantalized when he was boiling a stirring rod in nitric acid to clean it. Since then, he has boiled nitric acid and boiled more nitric acid and passed Chemistry courses. His liking for Chemistry could not, however, overcome the charms of Zoology. He has even become able to crack his heels together as the teacher of the last-named subject does.

BILLIE" hails from the metropolis of Chapel Hill, but we submit that that is not to be considered against him, for it's not his fault.

Regardless of his home town, "Billie" stands high in the esteem of his fellow men. He is at home wherever you find him. Some say that he should have been president of the student body this year, but "Billie" has never had any aspirations along this line; he prefers the normal course of life without any false honors. His is a preference for humble service.

QUIET and easygoing, always, and ever ready to join in any fun or to become one of any party, be it for bridge, a dance or a bull session, or to study for examinations, not because he fears that he will not pass them, but rather in order to make Phi Beta Kappa, Roger has passed three years at Carolina in the best way of all. He is not at all a bookworm, but by a proper arrangement of study and play he has graduated in three years and has enjoyed himself to the limit.

He is a thorough gentleman, a most delightful companion, and likes nothing better than to join in a talk-fest with several others with interests like his own. Although he has never expressed himself concerning what his life work will be, we feel sure that he will, in his always easy and quiet way, reach success in whatever he undertakes, and he leaves us empty-hearted and sad at losing his most charming personality and pleasing companionship.

WHEN we think of "Whit" we think of "Sewance," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," the 440-yard dash, and "King Lear" of E. E. fame. Sewance was his first Southern College, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" is his favorite song, the 440 his most desecrated pastime, and "King Lear" the object of his most affectionate abuse.

"Whit" must have been possessed of an insatiable desire to know the South well, for he left his Philadelphia home when he was just a kid to enter Virginia Episcopal School; next he tried Tennessee at Sewance; and in 1920 his matriculation at Carolina ended his wanderings.

We thought we had him for keeps when he fell for a Florida miss, but alas! he tricked us all, and now the old home town holds everything of interest to him.

He has a smile that's winning, an air that's pleasing, and more friends than a fine fellow can very well keep track of. As we greeted him in joy, we say farewell in sorrow, and give him a cheer for good luck and success.

Dabney's is the brilliant mind consciously avoiding a rut. He is equally at home in Horace's philosophy, Koch's play-writing, the wrestling mat, or the dance floor, and so on, ad infinitum. He has distinguished himself both as student and athlete as his high marks and "NC" monogram reveal. His pet hobby is drawing pictures and he has no mean artistic ability. Having an altruistic desire to serve, Dabney plans to teach a year or so. After that, he expects to turn his talents to business, perhaps to advertising, where a clear conception of ideas together with his artistic ability promise rich reward. Somewhere in his heart he cherishes the ideal girl, but we send him forth, grateful to think that he has not as yet been ensnared by flappers' wiles. KATHERINE WILSON

THERE came a time in the autumnal days of this eventful year when a strange damsel was seen silently, even timidly, wending her way through the flotsam and jetsam of raucous youth to the portals of the inner shrine—the east door of Memorial Hall. The purpose of this wanderer was to become affiliated without further ado with the grand high mogul of the powers that be. Innumerable yards of multi-colored tape must be unhooked and the candidate measured for the open sesame. Breasting the outwash of that formidable occasion seems but the scamperings of elfish hoodlums in comparison to the new trials that awaited her. But take heart, kind friends, perseverance won the day, as it always does, and we are proud of Katherine's success. We offer her with her quiet and dignified bearing as another argument for co-education.

WHIT, a third-year man in the Pharmacy School, comes from the "Land of the Sky" (Brevard, North Carolina). He is a gentleman by instinct and a genius in delving into the mysteries of chemistry.

His chief hobby is trying to prepare a new formula for facial cream which he says will make him famous in all the girls' schools of the country. He hailed originally from the "Land of the Sky," but he heard the call of arid New Mexico some two years ago and left us to cast his lot with the greasers and cowboys. After some time at Leland Stanford he left his books and sought excitement and Honolulu girls in the South Sea Islands as a real sailor with a white cap and blue trousers. Subject to an attack of ennui, he returned to spend his Senior year with his first classmates, and he is welcome back. Give him a cup of tea—two please, with lemon, and he'll tell you anything he knows and a lot that he doesn't about anything under or on top of the sun. STUD." immediately upon his entrance to the University, permanently fixed himself in the hearts of his many admirers. Lest one might wonder from whence came his "pet name," we are glad to state that he in no way resembles the horse family, and that the true derivation is explained by his affinity for costly jewels.

Speed linked with Thoroughness are the predominating of his many good traits, the former branding him as a favorite in track athletics and the latter winning for him scholastic laurels. "Shoat," as he is known among the C. E. Seniors, lays no claim to phenomenal engineering ability, but there is at least one phase of the subject in which he excels—the manipulation of the "Cosine Law." This ability has been of inestimable value to him in determining the shortest distance to Greensboro, the city of his inspirations. Sadly we bid you farewell, but happily we predict a bright and prosperous future.

C. B." entered Carolina after four years of "Prep-ing" at Mars Hill Seminary.

Last summer he sailed the seven seas in search of adventure, and some say he found it. In the course of his itinerary, marvelous were his adventures. For a short while he basked in the sunshine of royal favor and was the accepted suitor of a Peloponesian Princess. Then again he aided in deposing the Emperor of Costa Rica and acted as treasurer of the new republic but was forced to resign when he refused to give more than his word for bond. On returning to Carolina he edited the Mogazine with a lurid account of his singular adventures. However, the great authority on literature, "Peek" Dnls, held that it was lacking the O'Henry touch.

Law is C. B.'s major sport, wrestling and tennis are his minors. And we wager our word that some day he will wring tears from the eyes of the jury though they be tears of grief or tears of joy.

IF YOU see a pair of trousers with a speck of dust on them, they are not Norman's. And as a general thing a quiz paper with less than ninety on it, is not Norman's.

He has well overcome his Freshman meekness and Sophomore braggadocio and tempered himself into a well ordered bit of Collegiate machinery with a brain behind it. Still the orderliness of him has in no way made him a prude—quite the opposite.

While the records he has made in the classroom and which are on file with the registrar are above the average, the records made in the minds of his many friends and recorded in their souls far surpass these.

HERE is another one of these boys from Henderson who came here with the intent to study Law after loafing through a few years in the A. B. School, and to join the Dekes. He did the latter some three years ago without any difficulty. Courses in the school of his first choice were pie to him; and now he and Albert Coates have their fling at each other daily, each vying with the other in their tests as to who knows the most law. John is without doubt one of the very finest men in the class and does credit to it. He has a host of friends here who are wishing him success in his present pleading, the house of court being situated back where he came from, and they are only waiting to hear of his success as a barrister extraordinary.

IF YOU have ever met this boy there is very little that I can tell you about him. With one look you can read his innermost character; not because he is shallow but because he is unafraid and unashamed—there being nothing that he needs to hide.

His work is that of a man who loves his task. "Each unknown and unseen part is wrought with greatest care." No detail is too insignificant to be investigated or too unimportant to be done well. The patients who go to Dr. Battle will get all that honest and conscientious effort can give them.

Newsom is quiet and unassuming, yet everyone listens to what he has to say. He is a darned good sport, always pleasant, and thoughtful of others. There is only one Newsom Battle, and it is with deep regret that we see him go.

AFANFARE of trumpets sounds, and a tall and handsome youth appears. Who is it? Why, it's "Bull," "Boll-Weevil," "Mistletoe," "Peanut" Brown.

If "Peanut" keeps up his present gait he'll be famous or infamous in ten years. To him belongs the honor of the discoveries that mistletoe is a tree and that peanuts made Boston famous. "Yes, they did! Yes, they did!"

"Bull" is a charter member of the Carbon Dioxide and Grapevine clubs; he hopes soon to qualify for Deaton's exclusive "Mortality Club." We think that he will make it yet. Let us close with that dear old hymn, "I tho't I was peanuts, but t'waz baked beans t'at he meant."

SCIENCE has in no way decreased the friendliness and good nature of the above represented "go-getter." A broad grin, a healthy constitution, a bright mind and quite a bit of Pre-med work have brought him to his "checking out" point. It is a weak policy to praise and not at least to subtly sow a few seeds of criticism in the field of flattery, but knowing absolutely nothing against the man in question, this, in this case, is impossible. He can be distinguished not only by his finger prints but by his record-breaking, rapid-fire speech which he developed in arguments with his roommate and brother in the profession. While he probably doesn't give a rap, we honestly wish him success and a large family.

PHIL'S" chief prides are not his grades but his rosy cheeks and dainty dimples, he having remarked that when he was in Summer School the women raved about them during all their waking moments.

However, he also has reason to be proud of his work, for he has combined study with youth, and the two can seldom be mixed. Yet with the exception of the cheeks he is modest, these same cheeks becoming extraordinarily rosy when his better qualities or acts are mentioned, and all of him is of the best. He began work at Carolina by studying Pharmacy, but all good men fall sometime, so he changed his course to Medicine. The change has not brought about dissatisfaction in him, and will hardly be unsatisfactory to anyone.

THIS budding young doctor thought that the life of a medical student was not sufficiently hard for him; so he decided at an early age to take the cares and responsibilities of matrimony on his shoulders. He was married in the summer following his Freshman year, and although three years have passed, he does not yet show any signs of being henpecked. We might even envy him a little.

In addition to a genuine capability he possesses a fairly well-oiled line of bull which may get him through more than one hard place. Good luck to you, Robert.

HE PLODDED to Phillips Hall, he plodded up the steps of Old West (when it was old), he plodded to chemistry and now he has about finished plodding his way to the Medical building and up the steps of one of the alphabet dormitories. Yet he is not distinctly a plodder. He is simply steady; as sure to rise as the sun by reason of this.

Medical students have little time for love and other such foolishness, but like other unlucky men, we suppose he thinks there is someone waiting for him. Thank the Lord, though, that he has ample common sense and so does not let the non-essential interfere with the essential. As the class breaks up, each member will regret to leave him, his dry wit, his friendliness, and his good nature.

AND they call him "Solomon," not because of his many wives but because of his knowledge. "Bill" is pretty damn' good, it being said that he obtained a microscope and five hundred iron men for rating an "A" on Anatomy.

His ample list of statistics, including his weight, prove that he is a well rounded man. They prove, also, that he is a good mixer; a factor which will add to his success in the medical world as much as his learning gained in the "stiff room" or the laboratory. He has benefited by his College training, but so too, has the College, for "Bill" has demonstrated that a man may be both a good fellow and a good student.

PETROUS" was named on "Doc Charlie's" class on bones, and "Pete's" almost as hard to learn as that particular portion of the cranium. Sometimes we think that he should have been a judge, for he has that dignity which one associates with the bench. (We don't know whether he got it from Newsom or not.)

"Pete" is the sort that you don't know until you do know; but once your friend, always your friend. With his dignified air and ability to grasp ideas quickly, "Petrous" should make a good "Doc" some day—if he doesn't burn out his fuses.

BESS" has been blest with a winning smile and a disposition that radiates cheerfulness and geniality. These qualities backed by absolute sincerity have produced a character which has won him many friends; and one is fortunate in his friendship. "Bess" works hard, but not too hard, because it is sometimes necessary that he make twenty-minute runs to the co-ed house. There has been such a thing mentioned as "Bess, Inc."

One cannot deny his interest in his work, his ability, and general worth as a man and a student. "Bess" is a fine fellow.

BUBBER" became scientific in name as well as in fact when he first began Botany I, for he then received the name of "Zygote," but in addition to being scientific, he is athletic, having worked himself up to a picture in the Tar Heel. He has also aided the Class of '23 several times in both football and baseball. The picture of "Bubber" came as a result of his becoming a wrestler. However, athletics have not interfered with his medical studies, he having given up a trip or two because of his lack of time. Keeping in training for wrestling has also helped him with his work, as is proved by his grades. Like other jolly good fellows, we wish him success, and an M. D. seems not so far away.

ALL the gods must have been present at "Joe's" birth, for in one hand he was presented with a baseball bat and in the other a microscope. Since then the terrors of arteriosclerosis have been as nothing to him. In spite of his stern Scottish ancestry there are times when his emotional nature expresses itself. Judging by the earnestness with which he does his work, and the quiet friendliness and good fellowship of his dealings with his co-workers, one judges rightly that "Joe" is a fine fellow.

We predict for him a brilliant future and we all add a hearty amen to—"Joe" McLean, God bless him!

MAC" came to us from Ohio in the Sophomore year of his Pre-Med work. Although his present home is in Toledo, he was born in Kentucky and is Southern at heart.

He is a good student and very thorough in all his undertakings. His quiet, friendly manner and his perpetual smile have won for him many friends at Carolina. He possesses a rare business ability, and made good at selling books in the West summer before last. TWO things are the most important elements in a man's make-up—his physique and his mentality. When we called John William, "Runt," we were thinking of his height in his stocking feet; he has passed his work through two years of The Hill's hardest course, and that's that.

If dissolved and carried through the process of electrolysis, all of him would probably go to the negative electrode, he being very positive in action, thought and word.

He is full of life and cheerfulness, and that girl at G. C., whom he talks of so much in his sleep, would certainly be a foolish female to turn down such a good man.

YES, he is a Rand, and by virtue of that fact possesses a cognomen that needs no introduction to the students and Faculty of the University. Not unlike those who have preceded him here he has done well.

Like all men who enjoy an immense popularity among their friends he has not escaped the acquisition of a nickname, and he is generally known as "Small-Skip." 'Tis true he is small of stature, but all who know him admire his sterling qualities, enjoy his genuine comradeship, and unhesitatingly cite him as a living example of the old saying that quality is wrapped in small packages.

HARRY is a deep thinker, a hard worker, and a loyal friend. As proof of this statement, we cite his brilliant record in his work, and his consideration, congeniality, and love for his friends. Harry has successfully blended hard and consistent work with a sterling adeptness for making friends. His irresistible good humor, always exemplified by a smile, has in no small way contributed to his success with this combination. Harry has a spirit of determination which never allows him to leave a task before it is completed, and done well, at that. In choosing medicine for his life work he has but justified that spirit in him which takes joy in helping his fellow man.

HAVING known only that "Tom" is a hard worker and a good sport, we have tried to gather additional data concerning him and his existence at Carolina, and have found that our knowledge of him is practically complete.

It is rumored (in fact, he himself started the rumor) that he is amply qualified to do research work in bacteriology, and that he intends to make a trip to Chicago in order to search for other things for students to learn.

While not a debater, "Tom" will argue with anything from a test-tube to a roommate, but frequent association with a microscope which allows little of such has cooled his ardor for dispute; yet he remains as before, a witty, clear-minded, deserving candidate for an M. D.

A SLENDER mass of protoplasm, surmounted by a skull containing a really enormous brain and carrying a pair of spectacles on its anterior surface, is this man Staton. He is straight posteriorly, anteriorly, laterally, medially, internally, externally, physically, morally and mentally. His noteworthy characteristics are his studious nature, his ready speech and—his brother. They would be twins were it not for the difference of a few years.

The prophecy of success has been promised exile if it attempted to make great inroads upon these pages, but for several reasons the word success continues to bob up before our eyes as we think of this collection of legs and brains.

A MERRY heart knoweth no winter." "Hercules," or (better) "Herk" has demonstrated this. He is a sprightly little elf whose good humor is contagious.

"Herk" is in love with his work, too. It is a joy to see him petting a test-tube or fondling a microscope. We bid him good by regretfully. He is to carry his charms to other climes, but we wish for him only the best, and that means to continue as he now is.

Class History of 1924

Being mathematically inclined, and having sought a solution of the problem from the classes before us, we have found by the long and laborious task of subtracting four from twenty four that we entered the University in the year one thousand, nineteen hundred and twenty.

As Freshmen we gathered around the dear old well on any and all occasions to cheer lustily everything from Swain Hall to Emerson Field. At that early period the class athletic field had just begun to be converted into an alphabetical quadrangle. The class took to politics like a duck to water. Messrs. Turner and Moore, stump speakers of first rank, stood on the steps of dormitories and made speeches so hot that they required cooling by water before being digested. The water, incidentally, was poured gently from windows directly above the improvised platforms. That was the beginning of what came to be known as "open politics" on The Hill. Much to our surprise, neither of the gentlemen became president of our class. That office was easily filched from them by B. M. Gillon.

There were the usual snow-fights between Freshmen and Sophs, and when there was no more snow in the offing, the Sophs claimed victory, which claim we vehemently did deny.

Near the latter part of our first year came rumors thick and fast that the famous Carolina Spirit was passing on to its own reward. Such reports truly alarmed us, lest we be charged with the death of that tradition, and we heartily bestirred ourselves to show the Sophs and others that we had spirit a-plenty on any and all occasions; and thus was the Carolina Spirit revived, to live on and on beyond our day.

Most of us passed seven or eight or some such number of courses during the first year, and by virtue of that fact, coupled with experience gained in snow fights, campus politics and the like, we were declared Sophomores and permitted to put on the sale of Freshmen bibles, dormitory radiators and gymnasium lockers, all for the benefit of the Class of '25.

Our Sophomore year witnessed the passing of the old class athletic field. Likewise, the trees west of Emerson Field began to vanish and bricks and mortar to take their places. The tennis courts behind Bynum Gymnasium fell, victimized by the ruthless shovels of building-fiends intent on erecting a School of Law. Perhaps the most noteworthy event of the year was the winning of the Southern Championship in Basketball. The prominent part played by members of our class in the celebration that followed is recorded elsewhere—not here.

The Baseball team also made a great record, winning nineteen of twenty-one games. With the end of the baseball season, came another period of examinations during which the class evolved and passed beyond the anthropoid stage; at least, mentally.

At the beginning of our Junior year, vast flocks of seemingly useless feminine creatures swooped down upon us and proceeded to destroy our tranquillity. Following the order of things, however, we or they (this writer can't say which) became acclimated, and the class soon regained its state of harmony. Co-education had its place here before, but it was not until that year that it was permanently located; so it was the Class of '24 which bore the brunt of the feminine attack.

The harmless Chapel Hill earth continued to be disturbed, and utterly foreign bricks which proceeded to take the form of dormitories, or something similar, were continually hurled into our peaceful midst.

Carolina maintained her high rank in athletics and won a championship of some sort in every line of sport, but the Carolina Spirit was again reported at death's door.

The Publications Union Act was passed, entitling a half dozen or so prefects to paternally guide our literary efforts and entitling us to one YACKETY YACK, scores of Tar Heels, and several Carolina Magazines, in theory if not in fact.

It was in the beginning of our Senior year that the Publications Union Act was put into effect and the Boll Weevil put out. There was no connection, of course, but Bob Felton and Pete Murphy tried to establish one somewhere else, until they decided they would rather stay in school.

The Basketball team got off to a flying start, won twenty-two consecutive victories, and went to Atlanta where they captured the Southern Championship for the second time in three years. Again the members of '24 played a conspicuous part in the great rejoicing that followed, and again was the report of the dying Carolina Spirit exploded. Great was the shouting, wonderful was the bonfire, and foolish was the pilgrimage to Durham.

This is no place for the repetition of statistics, but just as the history of Rome would be incomplete without the name of Julius Caesar, or the early history of the United States without at least one mention of George, so would this be incomplete were we to leave unnoticed the brighter stars in our firmament. The roster of class politicians and presidents from the Turner-Moore episode to the present, includes: Gillon, Ambler, Holhouser, and Gwynn, with Allsbrook as president of the student body this year.

The class has been essentially a literary one—C. B. Colton has put the wings of Mercury on the Tar Heels; Pickens is a very promising (as a few interested parties will testify), Editor of the YACKETY YACK; and Ragsdale has improved the Magazine. Earl Hartsell has been of great assistance to all these publications and has been instrumental in organizing the editorial end of his new publication, The Buccaneer. Earl has also distinguished himself forensically.

Phi Beta Kappa has taken its toll, and thirteen of '24 have gracefully(?) succumbed. Five of us were admitted within the sacred portals of the Golden Fleece. Speaking athletically, we might mention Rabbit Bonner, Jonny Purser, the Ranson Brothers, Winton Green, Pierce Mathews—Oh! a great many, but it would become laborious.

But, after all, one might ask what does it all amount to? What will we know of it fifty years hence? To be truly serious, we are proud of this University of North Carolina; this intellectual mother; but to be more serious, we hope that she can be justly proud of us.

We will soon receive our passports to life; then scatter to the four corners; to work, to marry, to suffer, to enjoy, to die. A quoi bon? We entered, we remained, we leave. This is our history.

The Publications Union

The Student Publications Union is an organization of all students at the University of North Carolina brought into existence by popular student vote that it might, through its representatives, The Publications Board, exercise complete supervision over all student publications and provide for their administration and finances. Through this Board, the Publications Union controls four campus journals: the Tar Heel, the Carolina Magazine, the YACKETY YACK, and the new Buccaneer.

The Publications Board consists of five members: three elected from the student body and two appointed by the President of the University from the Faculty. During the past year the membership of this Board has been as follows: Reed Kitchin, president; Knox Massey and R. C. Maultsby; from the Faculty, Walter J. Matherly, treasurer, and C. A. Hibbard, secretary.

FOLK-PLAYS of The CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS

FREDERICK H. KOCH, Director

GEORGE V. DENNY, Assistant Director

FOR the past five years the Carolina Playmakers have been endeavoring to put into dramatic form the varied and intensely interesting life of North Carolina. During that time thirty-eight new, original Carolina Folk-Plays have been written and successfully produced in Chapel Hill. Many of them have been taken out into the State to the sources from whence they came. The plays are all written by students about their own State and community life; the life with which they are the most familiar. The people of North Carolina recognize and welcome these plays as their own. A real State theatre is being born.

AS Gerald Johnson, in The Greensboro Daily News, says: "The Playmakers have shown the dramatic interest that exists, for him who can find it, in the life of North Carolina as surely as in the life of Troy, or Camelot, or in any fabled city of the Golden Age. The man whose eyes are opened to the strange and dramatic things that are going on about him; to the comedy and tragedy; to the heroism and the absurdity; to the sweetness and the sadness of life in his own village; can hardly again sink into the animal sluggishness that only acts of brutality can stir to excitement and interest."

THE PLAYMAKERS' AIM

FIRST: To promote and encourage dramatic art, especially by the production and publishing of plays.

SECOND: To serve as an experimental theatre for the development of plays truly representative of the traditions and present-day life of the people.

THIRD: To extend its influences in the establishment of a native theatre in other communities.

The first volume of Carolina Folk-Plays, edited by Frederick H. Koch, has reached its third edition. Three thousand copies of these plays, written by students in the University of North Carolina, have been sold all over the country. The publishers, Henry Holt & Co., have accepted a second volume of these plays to be released next fall. The same publisher has also accepted a volume of Carolina Folk-Plays, written by Paul Greene, one of the foremost playwrights Professor Koch's course in Dramatic Literature has produced. This book will follow shortly after the second volume, edited by Professor Koch.

BEFORE

The Tin Can

AFTER

Mass Athletics

College athletics in the past years have meant the production of a few highly-trained teams that were especially coached to meet highly-trained teams from other institutions. Upon these teams, and the few men that composed them, there has been lavished all the training and coaching that money could buy. This system was universally recognized as being entirely unjust to the mass of students by whom the teams were financed and for whom college athletics were intended.

To meet this situation, Carolina, in the Fall of 1923, put into actual practice the theory of mass athletics. This term perhaps cannot be better explained than by the motto: "Every man out a little each day." To put across this plan, a vast indoor building was needed that would amply house the many activities that were planned.

When the committee in charge of the program finishes its task, there will be ample opportunity for every student to participate in some branch of athletics. Forty new tennis courts were built during the year and put into service during the spring. The courts cover several acres and would make a good-sized farm. Two new fields were prepared for football, soccer, pushball and baseball.

The Indoor Athletic Activity Building, known to the students as the "Tin Can," has been used for intercollegiate basketball games, wrestling matches, and for intramural athletics of all kinds. Regular schedules were prepared in all indoor and outdoor sports, and elimination series between dormitory and fraternity teams were conducted with much interest and benefit to the student body.

New athletic fields were built, and intramural football, pushball, soccer and baseball contests were staged throughout the fall and winter quarters. Between the halves of the Carolina-Virginia Football game the championship pushball game was held, and the public was given some idea as to the meaning of mass athletics.

During the Fall of 1923, the University staged its first cake race. One hundred cakes were donated by the ladies of Chapel Hill, and in a big free-for-all cross-country race they were awarded to the first one hundred winners. As an incentive towards greater rivalry and competition among the campus teams, handsome trophies were offered by various organizations on the Hill.

Since the inauguration of this general athletic policy at the University, other institutions in the State have adopted plans for similar or even enlarged programs of mass athletics.

There is every indication that North Carolina has entered a new era in athletics, and the University is proud of its part in this progressive movement that stamps our State as a pioneer in the South in thus recognizing the educative value of athletics.

Football Season

THE football season of 1923 will undoubtedly be written large in the history of Carolina's many successful gridiron battles. The team did not measure up to the high standard set by the South Atlantic Champions of 1922, but it played a consistently good game throughout, with an excellent record on both offense and defense, and won a clear-cut title to the State Championship by decisive victories over all North Carolina opponents; and the campus and the Alumni were well pleased with the results.

The season was all if not more than could have been expected of a team that lost such brilliant backs as McGee, Tenney, Fred Morris, and "Red" Johnston, together with such dependable linemen as Blount, Cochran, and Pritchard. Added to these losses the Tar Heels received a stunning blow at the very outset when Merritt was ruled ineligible and Sparrow broke his leg. Sparrow's punting was sorely needed, as witnessed in the Virginia game, while Merritt's line-plunges would have supplied the power the lack of which was the team's greatest weakness.

Undaunted by such heavy losses, however, the Fetzers bent every energy towards turning out a team that would do credit to the worthy record of the University. As a nucleus, there was the veteran quarterback, "Monk" McDonald, and Captain "Casey" Morris, Poindexter, McIver, and Matthews in the line; added to which there were two excellent backfield substitutes of the previous season—Bonner and Randolph; and two members of the 1922 Freshman eleven—Enniett Underwood and Billy Devin.

The eyes of the State were focused on Chapel Hill, when Carolina (with strength unknown) opened the season against Wake Forest on September 29th. The Baptists played a much better game than the year before when they went down, 62 to 3, but they lost again, this time by the score of 22 to 0.

The Fetzers marshaled together the best defensive team possible and sent it North to meet Yale in Eli's opening encounter. In 1922, the Tar Heels had crossed Yale's goal line and had outplayed the Eli team in many points of the game, but this time the tables were turned. Such stars as Johnston, Morris, Blount and Pritchard were not there to open holes in the line or to tear around the ends. Carolina put up a game fight, but lost—53 to 0.

The game with Trinity in Durham was next on the card. Carolina won, 14 to 6, but the score failed to show the superiority of the Tar Heels. Early in the game, the Trinity fullback, under the shadow of Carolina's goal-post, snatched a short pass from the air and made a touchdown. Bedlam reigned among the Trinity students, but from then on Carolina kept the Methodists almost entirely on the defensive. The difference in strength of the two teams is well indicated by Carolina's 16 first downs to Trinity's 1. "Goat" Randolph was the star of the game.

The annual game with N. C. State, which has become the biggest football classic in North Carolina, was played in Raleigh during Fair Week before an enthusiastic assemblage of 13,000 persons in which the Alumni and supporters of both institutions were well represented. The game was one in which Carolina's speed and versatility were pitted against a more powerful but slower combination. N. C. State showed a stubborn defense, but lost—14 to 0. Bonner contributed several spectacular gains, and Captain "Casey" Morris and "Monk" McDonald each scored a touchdown.

THE SQUAD

Two defeats by Southern teams snatched from the Tar Heels their hopes of winning the South Atlantic or Southern titles. The first was received at College Park, Md., where the Maryland team secured a 14-to-0 victory. Carolina had defeated Maryland in 1921 and 1922, so the revenge was duly appreciated by Coach Byrd's men.

The Tar Heels next journeyed to Columbia, S. C., to meet the Gamecocks. South Carolina put up a strong defense, and the long punts of Jeffords (booted from behind his own goal-line) were an outstanding feature; but the Tar Heels won, 13 to 0, making 21 first downs compared to none for their opponents. In the third quarter, "Rabbit" Bonner got away for a memorable 67-yard run for a touchdown.

Carolina entered the game with V. M. I. in Richmond with the Cadets picked to win by 4 touchdowns. McDonald, who had suffered an injured shoulder in the Maryland game, was unable to do any passing, and but for a remarkable defense, Carolina would have lost by a much larger score than 9 to 0. McDonald and Bonner got loose for runs of 10 and 25 yards, respectively, in the first quarter, but after the Cadets were in possession of the ball most of the time. V. M. I., after being apparently stopped by the Tar Heels, scored from the 15-yard line on a forward pass, when a Carolina back in an attempt to knock the ball down, deflected White's throw into Ryder's waiting arms.

Davidson came to Chapel Hill and put up a fight that gave the Tar Heels a surprise. The Wild Cats gained ground freely in the middle of the field, but lacked the necessary punch to advance the ball when within striking distance of Carolina's goal. The Tar Heels got two chances to score, and converted both into touchdowns. Carolina's work in this game was consistent but not particularly spectacular. The result was a 14 to 3 score.

The Carolina-Virginia game in Chapel Hill, Thanksgiving, set at least two precedents. A record crowd of some 14,000 persons saw the contest, and the two rivals battled to a scoreless tie for the first time. It was the twenty-eighth game that teams representing the two institutions have played in thirty-one years of gridiron relations.

From the point of view of weather, the day was not ideal. A drizzling rain fell for two hours in the morning. It let up about noon, but set in again at the beginning of the fourth quarter and continued at intervals for the remainder of the afternoon.

It was homecoming day for the Alumni, and they returned in record numbers. The weather probably prevented them getting about as much as they would have liked, but it didn't quell their enthusiasm. The crowd was well handled, orderly and good natured. The Carolina Motor Club had officers on the grounds to systematize traffic, and policemen drawn from a half dozen towns directed it.

As for the game, neither team scored because neither team had the necessary punch. Both Carolina and Virginia threatened once and that was all. The remainder of the contest was a dual of punts in which Virginia had the advantage.

The Virginians had an opportunity to score a field goal in the fourth quarter when Benny Arnold dropped back from the 21-yard line to try a drop kick. A drizzling rain had set in. Thesmar, Virginia's center, shot the slippery ball over Arnold's head, and the Orange and Blue had lost a chance to win and, incidentally, 15 yards of hard-earned ground.

Carolina's threat came just after the opening of the second quarter. McDonald caught a punt on the 30-yard line and returned it 5 yards. Bonner circled end for 15 yards, and McDonald took it 18 yards to Virginia's 32-yard line. A line-plunge and pass failed. Another pass carried the oval to Virginia's 26-yard line and then it went over on downs.

Several of the Carolina men played an outstanding game. McDonald tore off several good gains through the line and around ends and displayed good generalship. Bonner got away with some spectacular end-runs. McIver made the prettiest tackle of the game in the third quarter. He downed Maphis after the latter had run 20 yards around left end, he being the only Carolina player between the Virginia back and open field. Captain Morris, Poindexter and Matthews did brilliant work in the line, and Blanton's work was good. Benny Arnold (Virginia's "triple threat,") didn't get much of an opportunity to show his wares. Sam Maphis and Carter Diffev, however, played spectacular ball throughout, and kept Carolina continually on edge. Diffev showed great speed in circling the ends, while Maphis made several beautiful returns of punts.

In first downs, penalties and forward passes, both teams averaged about the same. Carolina was penalized 10 yards to Virginia's 5. Little was gained on forward passes. Carolina lost in the exchange of punts.

It was the last football game for Captain Morris, McDonald, Poindexter, and Shepard.

Nothing can be said here that would add to or detract from the great praises already sung of Coaches Bob and Bill Fetzer, Trainer Bob Lawson, and Graduate-Manager Charlie Woollen. Their work has been conspicuous enough all along.

This resume should not be ended without mention of the hard work of Manager Charlie Norfleet of Winston-Salem whose efforts in behalf of the squad were tireless. His work and loyalty were of the intense sort.

Underwood, who replaced Merritt, did as well as could have been expected when his light weight and lack of Varsity experience are considered. "Shine" Blanton, who took over Underwood's berth in the Virginia game, played well and will be one of the most promising backs next year if he returns.

"Rabbit" Bonner, speedy left halfback, did the spectacular work and did it well. He will be back next year. McDonald comes next to Bonner as a ground-gainer, but his chief asset to the team was his superb generalship. With few exceptions his judgment was excellent. Seldom has a man of his weight—148 pounds—been such a versatile player.

"Goat" Randolph of Asheville was Carolina's most dependable man on defense and gained considerable ground in several games, particularly in the Trinity contest.

In the line, Captain "Casey" Morris played the same consistent game that led critics to pick him for All-South Atlantic end. With him in the forward position he had good men. There was the veteran Poindexter who has never been knocked out of a game; the hard-tackling Matthews who often breaks through; the versatile McIver, equally at home at tackle or center; the tenacious Shepard whose bulldog determination has supplemented his 143 pounds of brawn, and the steady, consistent Hawfield and Fordham who held their jobs in the face of competition a-plenty. As substitute ends, Lineberger on offense and Epstein on defense were outstanding players.

Baseball Season

ELEVEN victories against eight defeats was the record of the baseball team of the University of North Carolina for the season of 1922. Lewellyn and Wilson (the two great pitchers of the famous 1922 team) had ended their careers at Carolina and had left behind them only Herman Bryson, the hero of many a Virginia game.

The State Championship was lost to Trinity through a combination of circumstances and hard luck. Had Carolina won her tilt with Guilford, or her first game with either the Methodist or Baptist Institutions, the laurels would have rested upon the deserving brows of Casey Morris' team. But Carolina experimented with her pitching staff against Guilford, and the game ended in a tie. The Trinity game came at a time that Bryson was suffering from an injured finger. Wake Forest was taken on by a team wearied and worn out by the disastrous Southern tour. Still, Carolina lost only to Trinity and Wake Forest; and stacking the Methodist's defeat by Carolina and Davidson against these, Trinity's claims clearly rested on the shady title coming from the University's early-season tie with the Quakers.

The season opened against the Navy at Wilson, N. C. Bryson pitched splendid ball for the Tar Heels and allowed the Midshipmen but 4 hits. The cold Easter weather, however, seemed to have numbed the fingers of the University infield, and with four costly errors it threw away a game that should have been Bryson's own.

In Rocky Mount, Coach Byrd's Marylanders were slaughtered—12 to 6. The game was played in a cold March wind, and spectators and players shivered alike. Seven runs were chalked up by Casey's men in the 8th inning, and the game was safely stored away. Coffey, Coltrane and Ferebee were all used on the mound, with Ferebee getting credit for the 'Tar Heels' first victory. Bonner was the star at the bat and laced out the season's first home-run.

Following a rest over the week end, Davidson was swamped, 12 to 5, at Gastonia. This victory ended the three-game Easter series, and the two victories brought hope to the students and Alumni.

On April 16th. after a half-month's practice that was severely interfered with by rain and cold, the Lynchburg College team came down from Virginia and took home with them a 6 to 4 victory. Herman Bryson started the game, but was forced to retire in the second inning when his finger was injured. Ferebee was sent in, Coffey followed, and soon Coxe and Coltrane were hastened to the mound. The slugging Virginians were determined to have the game, and after Bryson's injury they pounded away and secured it.

Bryson's finger was still in bad shape when he took the mound against Trinity on April 18th. But Ferebee was still unproved, the Lynchburg crew having hit him heavily three days before, and Coach "Bill," facing one of the season's biggest games, was forced to start Bryson. The Asheville boy was unable to put the curves and spins on the ball and Trinity's long cherished dream came true. Ferebee took the mound after a fusilo of runs by the Methodists, and proved himself a capable pitcher. Dempster fed the Tar Heels only five hits, and the Trinity infield (led by English at second) gave him air-tight support.

The first game against N. C. State was one of the most colorful of the year. State had been running wild and the Wolfpack was confident that she was untamable. In Casey Morris's four-ply bat she found her doom. In the fourth inning the Carolina captain smacked one of Curtis's offering and sent it against the side of the State College Y. M. C. A. In the sixth, McDonald laced out a double and was brought in on sacrifices by McLean and Bonner. The State boys hit Bryson freely, garnering 10 hits to the University's 4. But Carolina's were of the extra base kind, including one home run and three doubles. Bonner was the star in the field, climbing high up on Riddick Mountain and pulling down lofty flies that were labeled home runs. Jones played a beautiful game at third base.

On April 24th, came the lamentable practice against Guilford. The game lasted for 15 innings and was called on account of darkness with the score, 8 to 8.

The first of the three-game series with the University of Virginia was won by the Tar Heels on a rain-soaked diamond at Cone Park, Greensboro. The spectators, as they left the field, were met at the gate with extra editions of the afternoon paper, announcing the University's 2 to 1 victory. Bill Ferebee made his real debut as a College pitcher.

The team left immediately after the game with Virginia and participated in a disastrous Southern trip. On Monday, Ferebee, with only one day's rest, pitched against Auburn at Montgomery, Ala. The game ended in the tenth with the score 3 to 3. The University of Alabama was played the next day and Carolina was defeated, 8 to 8. This defeat seems to have led to another, the University of Georgia (with Chambers in the box) holding the Carolinians completely at her mercy, 9 to 1.

Mercer was apparently surprised when the Tar Heels defeated them with ease, 6 to 2. Two games were scheduled with Georgia Tech. but old J. Pluvius interfered and rained out the first encounter. The second game was dropped to Tech, 9 to 3.

Worn out and weary from their long trip, the Blue and White was found an easy victim by Wake Forest, and the seventh defeat of the season was suffered, 9 to 3.

The tale was different when N. C. State College came up to Chapel Hill determined to avenge the 2 to 1 defeat administered her on Riddick Field. Instead of a hard-fought and close game, the University nine pounded three State pitchers from one corner of the lot to another and swamped them, 11 to 4.

The season ended with a brilliant series of victories that was tinged with sadness. On Carolina's schedule there remained six games and all of them commencement affairs. Against Wake Forest went Carolina in the first of the final series and brought sorrow to the hearts of the Wake Forest Alumni when she avenged her earlier defeat, 13 to 6. Bryson held the Baptists' bats powerless and, after having won the game, the veteran pitcher made way for Ferebee who was hit more freely. "Mule" Shirley christened Gore Field with its first homer.

N. C. State called for a third game and set it on her commencement day. Bryson defeated Curtis for the second time, 10 to 8, and disappointed more Alumni.

On June 5th, Trinity was played in Durham and there her championship claims were reduced when Ferebee outpitched Sanderson and Dempster and won, 5 to 3. As this left Trinity's claim to the State title dependent on Carolina's early season tie with Guilford, Manager Barnes of the University team issued a challenge to the Methodists for a rubber game that would give a clear title to the championship. Trinity preferred not to risk her laurels, and refused.

The season ended in whirlwind fashion. Leaving Durham the team traveled to Atlanta and hung up its fourth commencement victory. The mighty Tech was vanquished, 4 to 1, and one "Bill" Joyner, unknown Carolina scrub, became famous as a moundsman.

From Atlanta the team hastened to Charlottesville and, in a spasm of thunder-showers, swamped the Virginians, 12 to 3. Bryson, Carolina's standby, was invincible on the mound and strong at the bat. Sweetman, playing his last year for Carolina, starred in the field.

Then came the heartbreaking game on Chapel Hill that blemished Carolina's brilliant finish. The Tar Heels had saddened the commencements of five great institutions, and fate, it seems, decreed that the Carolinians themselves should taste the bitterness of a final defeat. Ferebee took the mound, but the long trip showed its effect upon him and, in the fourth, Bryson who had pitched in Charlottesville the day before hastened to the rescue. With Bryson pitching excellent ball, Carolina came to her half of the ninth with the score standing 4 to 3 in favor of the Virginians. A pass, a sacrifice and two singles put McDonald, Bonner and Shirley on base with only 1 down. To the bat came Capt. Morris. The stands went wild, and loud were the calls on "Casey" to deliver the goods. A ball was pitched, a sharp crack—and a fiery grounder started across the muddy field. McDonald and Bonner set out for home and the happy Alumni rushed for the gate. But the impossible happened. Over the wet ground sped Hubbard, snatched up the ball, threw to Deitrick at second and, like lightning, Deitrick sent it to first. A double play had been executed. Shirley and Morris were out and Carolina defeated.

Basketball Season

FOR the second time in two years, Carolina finished her season's schedule without defeat and for the second time in three years the Tar Heels ran a brilliant course through the tournament at Atlanta and emerged as undisputed Champions of the South.

In the tournament of 1922 the University team had won the Southern crown and had written its name deep into the basketball history of the Southland. In 1923 the Tar Heels traveled to Atlanta without a single defeat and were widely heralded as sure winners; but illness and staleness crept in and the team was eliminated in the second round by its only defeat of the year. Nineteen twenty-four saw the team sweep through the South-Atlantic without defeat for the second consecutive time, and at Atlanta in a blaze of glory the Old North State quint defeated four of the strongest institutions in the South and won the championship.

Only two letter-men composed the team that ended the season in triumph against Alabama. Carmichael and McDonald, two of the greatest players ever developed in the South, played their last season for Carolina and were the framework of the team. Capt. Green was injured while on the trip through Virginia and was unable to share in the glory at Atlanta. Carl Mahler, letter-man from the 1922 team, failed to return to school, and Sam McDonald, another regular, found his work too heavy to permit of his playing.

Coach Shepherd found plenty of material with which to work. Besides Green, McDonald and Carmichael, there were eligible Dodderer, Cobb, Devin, Johnson, Koonce, Poole and Lineberger.

The team gave great promise early in the season by easily defeating several independent club teams in practice games and the smaller Colleges in the State. But when Carolina invaded Virginia and returned undefeated, it was generally predicted that Southern honors would again be won by Carolina.

Leaving Chapel Hill, after defeating Washington and Lee for the second time, the Tar Heels went southward to the Georgia capital and drew the University of Kentucky as their first opponent. With apparent ease the score was doubled on the Kentuckians and Vanderbilt was pitted against Carolina. The Tennessee team was completely outclassed, and defeated, 37 to 20. With the field narrowed down to four contestants, Carolina drew the Mississippi Aggies (1923 Champions) as their opponents for the semi-finals and defeated them by 10 points.

In the final championship game with the University of Alabama, the brilliance of the Tar Heels was considerably dulled by the tenacious guarding of the Alabama team. However, in a final spurt that took her away from their closely-trailing opponents, the Carolinians increased their lead and won the cup.

SOUTHERN CHAMPIONS

Tennis

CAROLINA won undisputed title to the Southern Tennis Championship in doubles. In the S. I. C. tournament at Atlanta both of the University double teams emerged as victors and the final championship game was played in Chapel Hill, the team, composed of Coxe and Jernigan, defeating Bruton and Smith. Jernigan was runner-up in single tourney at Atlanta.

The State Championship in doubles were won by Bruton and Jernigan in the meet at Greensboro. Jernigan won second place for Carolina in the single matches.

Seven meets were participated in by the team and all matches were won, giving the team a season's record of only six games lost out of a total of forty-one played.

- U. N. C. vs. Virginia, 4 to 1
- U. N. C. vs. Wake Forest, 5 to 0
- U. N. C. vs. University of Richmond, 6 to 1
- U. N. C. vs. Davidson, 5 to 1
- U. N. C. vs. Wake Forest, 6 to 0
- U. N. C. vs. George Washington, 5 to 2
- U. N. C. vs. Catholic University, 4 to 2

Wrestling

UNDER the direction of Coach Shapiro, wrestling became a recognized sport at Carolina during the past year, and members of the team were awarded monograms for the first time in the history of the institution.

The team experienced an unusual successful season (considering the fact that the sport was introduced at Carolina only two years ago), and won six matches, lost three and tied one. Mathewson was the individual star of the team, being credited with eight falls and two wins in the ten meets during the past season. Capt. Shirley Waters went through the season without being thrown a single time.

THE GYM TEAM

Track Season

CAROLINA reigned supreme in North Carolina track circles in what was probably the greatest year in track history, not only for the University but also for the other State institutions. In sectional meets, the team failed to show its true form, and its showing at Richmond, Va., and Montgomery, Ala., was disappointing.

The indoor meet at Durham turned out to be a dual meet between Trinity and Carolina, with Carolina swamping the Methodists. The other colleges were unable to get a team rounded out in time, and the Tar Heels and Methodists were the only Colleges that made their appearance on the appointed night.

Clemson College and the University of Georgia were met at Clemson in a tri-State triangle, Carolina finishing second.

In the scheduled dual meet with Trinity, Coach "Bob's" team again snowed the Methodists under; this time by a score of 91-33.

Contrary to sporting dope and to the expectations of State College the dual meet with N. C. State ended 78 to 48, Carolina taking eight first places and tying in the Javelin Throw for the ninth first place. In 1922 this meet was won by State College by a score of 64½ to 61½.

The State Championship Meet was held at Chapel Hill and was attended by about 2,000 interested spectators. Carolina took eight first places and scored in all events except the High Hurdles.

The results were as follows:

Carolina 69½.
State College 49.
Davidson 23½.
Trinity 11

In the South-Atlantic meet at Richmond the University fell down completely and failed to register a single point. In the Southern meet at Montgomery the team was a shade better and scored a total of 5 points.

Two State records were broken by the University athletes. Abernathy set a new State mark for the javelin when he tossed it 174 feet and 10 inches. Ransom raised the pole vault to 11 feet 5½ inches. "Teach" Coxe, track and tennis star, came near smashing several records, but failed by the skin of the teeth.

The season was characterized by widespread interest taken in track. More men participated and the attendance figures at both the State-Carolina and the Championship Meet were greatly increased. Too much credit cannot be given to Coach Bob, who by his tireless efforts has succeeded in increasing the popularity of this great sport at Carolina.

THE TRACK SQUAD

GENERALLY SPEAKING
AS IT WERE

PIFFLE!

By

WEDNESDAY, A.M.

WELL folks, they was once a walrus which you all know what it is—one of these fish that loops the loop. Anyways this particular walrus is quoted to have said, "The time has come to talk of many things, etc." This is a wery famous statement and is always most popular with budding literatums and unpaid landlords and irate fathers and so on, and in particular the etc. Now it looks to I like the time is here to indict a few wds. in re a few things the which will fill up 2 or 3 pp. of this Feecture section like the Ed. has been hawking me to do for the past 30 days. Nothing would be more habitual I reckon than to confine these remarks to a sort of a revue of the late etc. college yr. and I am nothing if not habitual. Now for the hash.

To I, the most outstanding memory and the chiefest characteristic of 1923-24 is mud, great gobs and oodles of it—hard mud, soft mud, gooeey mud, plashy mud, liquid mud, red mud, black mud, purple mud—here, there, everywhere, and never anything else but. The only thing that may be said in its favor is that it is a democratic sort of mud. It plays no favorites; it goes into the dwellings of the most high and into the homes of the humblest. It is as ever present as the poverty-stricken.

The next most sailient feature in my esteeming is the fact that although radio sets is that which they is almost nothing more frequent on the campus than, save knickers and mustaches, the days is gone forever when this Univ. is a static territory. I mean to say that in these times when it ain't going around it goes backward and when it ain't doing either of these or turning assorted corners it is running around in circles. It don't stand still no longer.

Take for instants the new buildings which they keep right on building them almost as fast as they burn down. New dormitories, a new chem. bldg., new pickle factories, everything except new sidewalks—it's terrible. Why if a person didn't know better he might think the place was waxing more and more religious, judging from the new churches and all. And the charming arkitektural precedent set yrs. ago by beautiful old Alumni Bldg. and Pharmacy and Memorial Halls is being carefully followed out. Witness the new Baptist church.

The last vestiges of the old, old Inn has vanished and they is actually being dug there a hole which may or may not be a grave. But they do say at this writing that it will be occupied by Mr. Graham's memorial bldg. whose plans was drawn by our grandfathers. They has renewed Old West and even Old East, held together by sentiment and a few braces, has been rejuvenated whereas it should of been repudiated. This new tin can which they built over in Hillsboro is also a nice place and wery famous for its cosiness.

New tennis courts is being constructed and no doubt the children of the present college generation will have a great time playing on them. In fact the poor, forlorn old cemetery is being completely surrounded by athaletic fields and if they is ever finished I wouldn't be shocked if more ghosts didn't walk around these parts similar to the diseest wife of C. C. Roth, the parcher of peanuts. And what will the poor Co-eds do then?

The student body itself is growing bigger and larger every yr. and consequently dumber and dumber. The class mortality rate is increasing, and shining is taking the place of brilliance. Golden Fleece has to sweat to round up ten eligible men whereas they used to stage elimination contests. What is the big idea anyways? Why progress my dear children. We are going somewhere and we haven't caught up with ourselves yet.

This is the day of fads. A man ain't in style now unless he parts his hair at an angle of 15 degrees from the horizontal, wears a third eyebrow, a transparent T-shirt of robin's-egg blue or lavender, a trick belt, knickers, soulful colored sport socks, variegated shoes, and carries a cane or a monacle. On wk. days it is sometimes permissible to wear trousers if the foot can be pushed through them while held at right angles to the limb. Garters are never in good taste. One must also play Mah Jongg and the willage is so d-mn windy your eyes would bulge out at it. The good old games of faro and bridge and crown and anchor is just a wee bit antiquated while the bones is no longer rolled but pulled and I mean they is pulled plentiful and frequent. Oncet on a time this student body strutted itself in dun-garees. I think the time is about ripe for a wave of bolshevism in which nobody will shave and everybody will call everybody else Citizen Frondeberger and Citizen Midyette and so on.

Even the Playmakers is degenerating along with everything else. They is producing rotten plays more consistently than any season I know of except last yr. and I figure they have busted even that record by putting on "Nat Macon" and "Gaius" in one quarter, not to speak of one performance. The phenomenon of taking that colossal old bellyache on 3 state tours and presenting it twice here at home strikes me as the biggest and most dramatic joke of the yr. Howsoever, the usual no. of weddings resulted from this group and the Co-eds still sign up for it strong.

The biggest sensation of the yr., next to the disappearance of the Di Society presidential cane, was the appearance of Gen. Algernon Bowley which makes a complete ass of himself and don't do anything but bluster, thus pleasing the students immensely. This follows shortly after the visit of one Sherwood Eddy who is no relative of Sherwood Anderson nor neither Mrs. Eddy and who uses more wds. to say less than most anybody I ever hear except the evangelical Ham what Am, than which there is none more which. In fact more warm atmosphere has been generated and less has been said and more time has been wasted in thus doing during this past yr. on this campus than any which I recollects.

Any no. of so-called innovations has been introduced. Among these is telephones in the dormitories and dormitory mail service whereby a occupant of same may or may not get a letter at his door provided it was mailed at least 2 wks. previous. Personally I hopes these is but forerunners of the process of serving breakfast to us in bed and the abolition of eight-thirties. It is a well-known fact that the powers which are make a strenuous effort each quarter to schedule as many really desirable courses as possible at this ungodly and inhuman hr.

Another innovation is these here Intramural athletics which is a yearning after the perfect, wherein folks run after cakes and do this and that and grow into the semblance of the Greek gods, the which is presupposed of every Carolina man by the Honor System.

Even the Co-eds considered the advisability of progress and organized a self-help assn. Well somebody had to help them. Most likely this action was caused by the famous Carrboro case where 3 women was boosted out of the Baptist church acct. they went in swimming in the same county where a man was taking a bath in Hillsboro.

Well outside the mention of the snowfight, the new fraternity pledging system, the new election system which I hope don't bust or anything, the fact that one has got to register on time or pass the bucks unless you know how to run a delicate sandy, that the laundry is still doing nicely, and that it is still raining, they is really little else to say about the yr. which has just went.

Still and all they is numerous things which we can be thankful for. In the first place the banana shortage is over. Then they is the sou. b. h. championship and the publications union and Emilie Rose Knox. The Boll weevil has been almost exterminated and Dr. Branson has returned from Europe. The old Inn is in Hades, the Phi Assembly has discussed birth control and 2 men actually knew something about it, and last and least Jack Dempsey was kept away from the campus and our morals are safe. They is indeed a lot to be thankful for.

I will now wind up this tale by requesting to be allowed to hope for next yr. that something be done about the hole between Jack Sparrow's and the Strowd bldg., that The Bunknecer is no phoenix, that the Grail keep on humping itself, that a few more organizations die a palsied death, that the Desert and the Wilderness dry up and blow away, and that some good, kind person explain to me what-in-h-l form of the written wd., outside of Snappy Stories and The Argosy-All Story Weekly, will please this —student body.

TO THE HONOR CODE:

Being a Paean of Tribute

THE most famous, the most illustrious feature of this most inimitable of Universities is the momentous, solemn, impressive Honor Code, than which none has been better conceived or more strictly enforced. Its Honor Code has raised the University from the depths of trivialities to the heights of earnestness, from the abyss of sin to the peak of righteousness. Nearly every one of the two thousand two hundred and twenty-one undergraduates when he entered the University was a boor and an ass, a scoundrel and a knave; but when at the end of four years he leaves the University, he will be a righteous and upright gentleman and scholar. Walk up to any one of the two thousand two hundred and twenty-one undergraduates on the campus and inquire the reason for this seemingly marvelous metamorphosis, and invariably you will receive as answer "The Honor Code." If this be true, it is meet we investigate this wonderful Honor Code.

Thou shalt not gamble! saith the Honor Code. Gamble?—O horror of horrors! May the gods deliver us! It is rumored in dark corners that once, very long ago, the students did gamble; now, in the still watches of the night, students will gather and speak in awed tones of those iniquitous days of yore when vice was rife in this most pure of Universities. They will whisper how once students were wont to play poker, and for money, and how they would gamble for drinks and cigarettes, and how they would wager immense sums on the outcome of athletic contests, and how, nightly, they would frequent some low dive known as "The Pick," instead of going to prayermeeting or the Bible study group, as every good student should.

Thou shalt not drink! saith the Honor Code. O most excellent Code, how thou hast transformed a common tavern into a pious center of Christian culture to which many holy men yearly make pilgrimages, as in ancient days they did to other holy places. How thankful are we that no more is the University cursed by that evil of evils—drink! In former times it was no uncommon thing to see an intoxicated student upon the campus. It is even said that both professors and students were accustomed to stagger through their classes in no mean state of inebriation. All day long the hilarious reveling would proceed, and far into the night. Oh, what a sink of vice the University must have been in the days of our fathers! Let us render devout thanks unto the Honor Code that those old pagan times are no more! Now, we have exchanged Haig and Haig for water; and even the most dissipated of our number hardly dare to partake of tea and coffee more than once a week. These black sheep we hope soon to bring within the fold, and all praises will be due to the Honor Code.

Thou shalt report a misdemeanor of thy brother student to the Student Council! saith the Honor Code. How wise is the Honor Code in all its workings! Should my dearest friend see me upon the campus, he would run up to me and stick his nose against my mouth and, if he should detect even the faintest odor of liquor or tobacco, away would he dash to the nearest Student Councilman and report the matter in breathless horror. I should be expelled; but he would be feted and praised, and admiring crowds would throng about him whenever he might appear upon the campus, in order that they might shake his hand or touch his garments and so be able to tell their grandchildren at night about a winter's fire how they had shaken the hand or touched the garment of a pure and upright man.

We are good and noble; pure and sweet; not as our fathers. What monsters of iniquity they must have been without the beneficent restraints of an Honor Code! So let us humbly render devotions to the Honor Code of the University of North Carolina!

Scene from New Playmaker Mtn. Drama

God, But I Am Miserable

SCENE: A soiled mtn. hotel. The storepipe runs through a joist (whatever that is). At the door stands a handsome stranger, with poor make-up. The old woman is cowering in the right corner. In the wrong corner is a radio set. Bottles of vin rouge, grenadier, and Gordon dry gin are strewn artistically about, carefully placed so as not to form straight lines. The comely dawter, just come from the College, in her expensive rags stands defiantly with her nasigerum in the air, facing the dawn of a new day. The dawn of a new day breaks off stage with a pleasing, tinkling sound. The hardy old mountaineer, who is a small shrimp of short stature with an ill-fitting beard and a widow's peak, is pointing out the door toward the setting sun. He is also speaking:

OLD MAN: "You have killed my children. You laughed when my mother-in-law died. You stood by while the bank failed and wiped out my fortune. You have cut off my wife's ear to make you a silk purse. You have ruined my home and drunk my likker. You have give me the leprosy and stole our bathtub—but you've come clean with me; you've played squar; an' gosh darn ye, I love ye like them yonder mountings."

(The eyes of the audience are filled with tears as the clothes of the play draws near). There is a tense silence, and then suddenly—the silence is broken by

GAFFER: (Who has come in through the keyhole, unnoticed.) (He has a far-away look in his eyes and he looks toward the far-away mtns. He sighs and smiles and takes the extended hand of the old man.)

"God, but I am mitherable."

We believe we are setting a precedent in college annuals by presenting a section of readily understandable jokes. The most dumb of dumbles can get the drift without effort. Carefully-wrought explanations are appended for the benefit of the great unwashed majority who lack a sense of humor:

He: "I hear you didn't catch that blind pig."

Him: "No, I sent Herman after it."

(Herman is bowlegged.)

* * * *

Jones: "We had an addition to our family yesterday."

Jones: "Indeed? Boy or girl?"

Jones: "Neither."

(His mother-in-law was visiting him.)

* * * *

"They say that plumbers don't like cats."

"Yes, I've often noticed that they always carry their tools."

(The idea is that the tools are in a kit.)

* * * *

"I remember your face perfectly, Miss, but your name escapes me."

"No doubt, sir. It has escaped me."

(You see, she had just been married.)

* * * *

"Smoot ought to make a good poker-player."

"Why?"

"Because he is such a good dentist."

(The point to be remembered here is that a large part of a dentist's business consists of drawing and filling and, naturally, a good dentist does this well. Ergo: a good dentist should be a good poker-player.)

* * * *

"What's the trouble between you and the girl you were making love to in the hammock?"

"The rope broke."

(Careful consideration here discloses the fact that they fell out.)

* * * *

A. "Do you believe that a miss is better than a mile?"

B. "Yes."

(This is to be taken literally.)

* * * *

"What is the most saintly place in a city?"

"The telephone exchange, of course."

(We hesitate to mention that there is a continual "hello" about it. Quit now. Ouch!)

* * * *

Prof.: "Do you believe in the Einstein Theory?"

Stude: "No, sir, I am an orphan."

(Damned if we get it, either. Perhaps the reason is that only twelve men in the world understand that theory. The gag is one up and eleven to play.)

Now That This Business of Going to School is Settled ~

YOU "cap-and-gowners" of '24 become business and professional men in '25 and, while you are out setting the woods on fire, your paths, sooner or later, are going to lead you to Greensboro — some permanently; others once in awhile.

To the once-in-awhilers, this message is addressed. An invitation, is this message, with "welcome" printed all over it, from the O. Henry Hotel, in Greensboro — an invitation assuring you warm hospitality whenever you are its guest. For week end, convention, fraternity get-together or social event, the O. Henry ministers to your comfort, convenience, and appetite. O. Henry service works day and night; its varied features make you register satisfaction — like the handsome hero of the cigarette ads.

Printing that will always be a Cherished Possession

THE production of books, programs and calendars for the students of America's Universities requires an ability to originate printed forms that will be cherished possessions in the mellow years that follow a University career. ¶ In the libraries of many of the "old grads" will be found books, programs and announcements preserved for their intimate memories and associations. ¶ It is the production of this kind of printing that has brought to this organization its frequent opportunities to serve University men and women.

BEAUTIFUL forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense. ¶ A composition for cheapness and not for excellence of workmanship, is the most frequent and certain cause of the rapid decay and entire destruction of arts and manufactures.—RUSKIN

LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Established 1865

GREENSBORO, N. C.

STOP AND THINK!

What sort of a town would your town be if six out of every seven families bought their groceries, dry goods, shoes, hardware, drugs, etc., by mail order from the outside? Out of every seven dollars paid for life insurance by the people of the South, only one dollar goes to Southern insurance companies.

Leaving out sentiment, is this good business judgment?

The slogan of English business today is "England for England". It finds its echo in "America for America". What is the matter with "The South for the South"?

"Buy insurance from Southern companies" is not isolation and it is not selfishness. The farmer who buys from his neighbor what he can not raise himself is not selfish; he has just got horse sense.

THE PILOT COMPANY can fill your every need of Insurance Protection. A Southern Company for Southern People.
