Foreword

THE Credit Men's Business Directory appears in a new and enlarged form, following an amalgamation with the long established Rosenstock's Business Directory of China.

The new volume is presented to the public under joint copyright, embracing new features, making it a work of reference more complete than has ever been possible in this country. In its new and improved form the publishers have combined the knowledge gained through close collaboration of their own staff and the former staff of Rosenstock's Business Directory with experience obtained during 33 years of progress.

GENERAL INFORMATION

上海誌略 SHANGHAI

Shanghai is situated on the left bank of the Whangpoo River, a tidal tributary of the Yangtze River, and is about 13 miles from the confluence of the two streams. Protected by its position against serious danger from typhoons, Shanghai is eminently suited for the commerce of the rich and densely-populated basin of the great Yangtze, which, spreading westward for about 3,500 miles across the whole width of China, is the longest river in Asia and one of the most important commercial waterways in the whole world. More than 80 years ago Shanghai, then a village of small commercial importance, was first opened to foreign trade and residence, as a result of the so-called Opium War of 1842. It was at first opened as one of the five Treaty Ports under the Treaty of Nanking, and it was under the provisions of that Treaty that Great Britain established what was for many years known as the British Concession, but which now forms the most important part of the International Settlement. The founders of the original Concession could never have visualized the great port which is now the greatest commercial entrepot in Asia and one of the six leading ports of the world. If what may be termed Greater Shanghai be included, the total population is in the neighbourhood of 2,000,000, with a foreign trade of approximately Tls. 820,000,000. The commercial port of Shanghai actually extends from Woosung to some five miles above the Bund, a distance approximately 20 miles. No less than 10 miles of river frontage on both side of the Whangpoo is taken up by wharves, godowns (warehouses), dockyards, landings and industrial plants, and ships of practically all nations regularly visit the port.

The foreign-administered portions of Shanghai are the International Settlement and the French Concession, each of these being under a separate and distinct administration. In the International Settlement, the Central District (the British Concession), is the hub of the commerce of the whole of Central China, comparing in activity, in wealth and in importance with any other area of similar size in any part of the world. Approximately one mile of river front is lined with substantial foreign and Chinese business buildings which together form a sight not easily to be forgotten when seen from the river, and which have not inaptly been termed "the billion dollar sky-line." The International Settlement is nothing if not modern, nothing if not progressive, and hardly a mark of progress which is to be found in any European or American city is absent from the International Settlement of Shanghai. Along the river and on the tidal creeks which are connected with it are a vast number of industrial establishments of all kinds, comparing in general equipment and working conditions with similar establishments anywhere. There are cotton mills, flour mills, shipbuilding and shiprepairing yards, paper mills, timber-yards and all the varied and miscellaneous collection of light and heavy industrial establishments which, in the aggregate, and with the shipping visiting the port, go to make Shanghai what it is—the greatest hub of commerce and industry in Asia and one of the greatest on the globe. The Shanghai Power Company maintains an electricity plant, which in size and output ranks high with the world's biggest, and the other public utility services are no less efficient and no less important. The French Concession, created in 1849 and extended in 1893, is a narrow strip of land lying between the International Settlement and the native (or "Chinese") city. The eastern part of the Concession is the business quarter, with some very important wharves dealing mostly with river and coasting shipping, but the main function of the Concession is as a residential quarter. With the exception of the telephone service, all of the public utility activities are in the hands of a French company. Right opposite to Shanghai, on the Whangpoo, is Pootung, a sinuous strip of land which, formerly nothing but low-lying marshes, has been developed into a thriving industrial area, included in which are tobacco factories, spinning mills, shipbuilding and shiprepairing yards, godowns, and in general a replica of what may be found on the other bank of the river.

附注：國民政府于十七年七月十八日公布以來突制為中華民國權度之標準制。同時並定一
種市用制，一面求其與標準制有簡單之比率，一面僅求其與民間習慣相合。

NOTE:—According to a mandate issued by the National Government on July 18, 1928, metric system has been adopted as standard system for China. In the same time a market system was also set down to meet the public custom in half way, while a neat proportion to the standard system is maintained too.

SHANGHAI-PASSPORTS AND CONSULAR INFORMATION

PASSPORTS

Passport Examination Office, Bureau of Public Safety, 123 Ave. Edward VII, 5th Floor, Tel. 17823, 18278.

Passports are required for all nationals entering China, with the exception of U.S. subjects. The Governments of these two countries have treaties with the Chinese Nationalist Government, and are understood to be exempt.

Fees for entering China are pro rata, according to fees charged to Chinese by the different countries.

Week-end visitors to Wooming, Mingchow, Kiaschow Creek, Footing, and other resorts in close proximity to Shanghai, are not required to have their passports vised, or in their possession, when visiting these places.

Passport Examination Office, Bureau of Public Safety, 123 Ave. Edward VII, 5th Floor, states that no consules, or passport examiners, are posted on the roads leading into the Settlement. The cost of a visa at the Passport Examination Office is $5.00 per annum, or $3.00 for a period of three months.

Visas may be obtained from Passport Examination Office, Bureau of Public Safety, 123 Ave. Edward VII, 5th Floor.

In the case of visitors to overseas vessels lying at Wooming, the Dolt's Wharf, or similar, no special passes must be secured from the Customs House, and from the Passport Examination Office to avoid difficulties being encountered.

Any further particulars or information on the subject can be obtained on application to the Passport Examination Office.

人名錄 HOMES WHO'S WHO

This Homes Who's Who contains all the changes that have been returned to us by Shanghai residents. Where information has not been received the last available return is used. In a large city like Shanghai it is practically impossible to publish an up-to-the-minute list as we estimate that 25% of the entire population changes in a year, which means some dozens of removals each day. This list constitutes as accurate a record as is possible and we have pleasure in presenting it to our subscribers.
