"I don't care what you or anybody else says to the contrary, Polly, men are selfish, or at least the majority of them are. It is the exception and not the rule when you find it otherwise. Now, for instance, I have a friend who is acknowledged to be one of the prettiest little women in the place where she has resided since her marriage. She is one of the dearest little mothers in the land, and has denied herself everything for her children and they worship her. Her husband, however, is one of the most selfish men in existence. He thinks of himself first, last and all the time. He bemoans his fate to his friends that he has so large a family and thinks it is a positive misfortune. He is the meanest and most vindictive man around home you ever saw—positively ugly, crabbed and cross, unless some one comes in, and then he puts on his company manners and is as affable and pleasant as any one could imagine. He takes in all the baseball games and horse races when he can, all of the fistic encounters and usually puts up a little money for the excitement of the thing, as he terms it and to make it more interesting. Goes to the theater occasionally to keep up his spirits, and the remainder of his evenings are usually spent with convivial friends of his own stamp. He drinks like a fish, but is never what you would call actually drunk. This same man is as mad as an angry hornet if he does not find his wife at home when he arrives, which is very seldom, I assure you. He neglects her in every way, and yet is insanely jealous if anyone bestows an admiring glance upon her, and yet if she was one-third as bad and indifferent as he is she would have admirers galore. You know there is an old saying that 'some day the worm will turn.' You may tread upon it and abuse it, but things finally reach a crisis, and then look out. That day is coming into that woman's life, and when it does she is going to hate him as much as she ever loved him. He has pulled the wool over her eyes, to use a homely phrase, although an o'er true one, but when once her eyes are opened then heaven have mercy on his knees, but it will be too late. It will serve him right, too, Polly.

"I wanted her to go out for a little outing the other day; she needed it badly, for her beautiful gray eyes looked faded and she had a racking cough for weeks. What she needed was a little change of air. If it was only for a few hours it would have been a change of scene and have taken her out into the sunshine. She would have seen new faces on the trip, and would have enjoyed the flowers in all their glory in the pretty country town I wanted to take her to. Do you think she would go? No, she must be at home when Fred came; he never liked to have her away from meal time, and then another thing, she really couldn't afford it. 'Can't afford it!' I exclaimed. 'Do you know your husband spends double and treble that amount every week for his own pleasure and never thinks of you, toiling and slaving at home?' Oh, but he works so hard he says he must have some pleasure,' she replied. 'I simply wanted to shake that little woman for the simper that she was, but instead I tried to control my temper and said, 'Has to have these pleasures because he has to work so hard. He has never seen the day that he has worked half as hard as you have. He is just a great big bump of pure and unadulterated selfishness. He does not know the name of self-sacrifice. Did you ever see the day that he planned anything for your pleasure that he was not counted in, the head and foremost one of all he had in view? You can stay at home and cook and wash, and scrub and mend, economizing, and for what? to give him more money to spend on himself and his outside pleasures. I tell you, Polly, a man is not half a man in an honorable sense of the word who treats his wife as this man does. He would shoot her if she was guilty of half the things he thinks he is justified in doing.

"I often think what would be the result if wives who would work hard day in day out, and you might just as well include half the night, for that is about the extent that many women have to work to keep the machinery of the home moving smoothly, if they should feel that they were entitled to run to the baseball games, to the matinee, to lectures, etc., and insist upon taking those little personal pleasures regardless of expense and wholly indifferent as to whether their husbands liked the idea or not. How would they like it if their wives had to run to some friends two or three nights in the week leaving them home to look after the children and to make it as pleasant for the wee-folks as possible? They would not feel very much elated, do you think, to know that their company was not sufficiently pleasant to make things so attractive that they would be willing to spend their evenings in their

BRIEF REVIEW.

Views of Another World.

Though the fishing and catching is full of excitement, there is a quieter charm and delight in sailing over Neptune's domain in a glass-bottom boat, writes Nellie Blessing Eyster, in Four-Track News. You have never tried it? Then you have missed a novel and a wonderful experience. The day we went out the water was so clear that one could see through a depth of 60 or more feet. Such an aquarium! Amid tangled forests of seaweed of all prismatic hues floated the inhabitants. Such a conglomeration of shape and color! What endless variety! There were strange constellations of starfish; opal tinted jelly-fish, ribbed and fringed with tentacles like beaded dewdrops; sea-cucumbers more delicately constructed than strands of woven glass; sea-urchins, spiked like porcupines, with whom even a merry mermaid would not care to flirt; abalone and octopi clinging to the emerald surface of rocks that no human hand has ever touched and gold perch and angel-fish that flashed for an instant like an electric spark, and then were lost in ocean caves. The light was semi-phosphorescent and the feelings awakened those of wonder, awe and admiration impossible to convey to another.

Pumps the Fashionable Shoe.

The adaptation of men's dancing pumps for women's wear last winter proved them to be such smart looking shoes that they have grown to be immensely popular. One of the chief reasons for this is that the shoes have to be worn in the smallest possible sizes to enable them to be kept on the feet in comfort, and any excuse for wearing small shoes is eagerly seized upon by women. The pumps are made in tan, white, green, brown and the new shade that matches linen gowns.

BLOUSE WAIST AND BOLERO.

taffeta matching the waist, the trimming being folds of velvet. The waist is simply full, with wide sleeves that are finished with graceful folds of lace, but is eminently becoming and suits lace, net and all thin materials to a nicety. The bolero is cut with fronts, backs and wide sleeves and is laid in plaits over the shoulders that give the drooping effect. The quantity of material required for the medium size is for waist 4 1/2 yards 21, 4 yards 27 or 2 1/2 yards 44 inches wide; for bolero, 2 1/2 yards 21, 2 yards 27 or 1 1/2 yards 44 inches wide.

Trimmings For Gowns.

Points and scallops appear on many gowns; even in some cases the horizontal trimmings have scalloped or pointed edges. Ruffles are arranged in scallops, and new laces and embroidery insertions have waved edges.

Which Will It Be

The dredger is steadily at work these days plowing through the marsh from the drawbridge towards Napa, throwing up a road bed for the Napa and San Francisco R'y. They will soon cross the navigable stream called Steamboat Slough or commonly known as Schell's slough. Many people are wondering if a drawbridge or a fixed bridge will be built across this stream. It is not at all improbable that said slough will soon again be used by freight schooners and should not be obstructed in any way.

ONE STEP AT A TIME.

The lantern throws its dim light only just far enough for one step. But as only one step at a time can be taken that little circle of light is large enough to walk in. It may seem to be slow progress, but it is sure progress, nevertheless.

People who are sick with lung disease cannot be blamed for the desire to get well quick. But even on the road to health we can only take one step at a time.

Sufferers from lung "trouble" who have been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery testify that with each day's use of the medicine the progress to health is marked. The cough lessens, the hemorrhage stops, the body gains in flesh and the strength grows measurably. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures obstinate coughs, bronchitis, bleeding lungs, emaciation and other diseases which if neglected or unskillfully treated terminate fatally in consumption.

"In 1900 my husband had a severe cough and also neuralgia," writes Mrs. Bettie E. Payne, of Kiel, Okla. "For nearly three years his cough was so bad he could not lie down at night. He got no relief from the doctors we employed, so he purchased two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and took a tablespoonful every two hours. After the first four doses we could see that his cough was better, and he rested fairly well that night. The doctor said it was consumption—if it was, the two bottles of Golden Medical Discovery cured him, nothing else did. We thank Dr. Pierce for what his medicines have done for us, and we can recommend them and feel that we are recommending something that will cure, if used according to directions. I have recommended them to three of my friends, and with good results."

MONEY SLANG.

Terms Applied to Coins and Bank Notes in England.

"We may think there is a great deal of slang in English as we commonly use it in this country," Mr. J. E. Soraghan observes, "but the least one respects the colloquial tongue of England surpasses the wealth of terms we possess in this regard, and that is the slang relating to money. The American uses astonishingly few slang words in speaking of pieces of money, perhaps because he has a greater respect for it. A five cent piece is usually referred to as a nickel, but this is practically the only slang term applied to any of our money in general use. A dime is officially a dime, and so is a quarter.

"But turn to the English appellations for their money and hardly a bit of it is referred to under its authorized and official designation. A shilling is seldom called such in London. They call it a 'bob,' and a 'quid,' which means a piece of tobacco in this country, is what they term a pound. Sixpence they call a 'tanner,' fourpence a 'fiver' and a penny more often than not is unknown to the street gamblers save as a 'mag.' A cabman will not tell you a ride will cost 5 shillings, but that it will require a 'bull' to pay for it, and a half crown is 'half a bull.' These are prevailing expressions for the pieces of money widely handled, but proper terms for higher amounts are kind and colloquial terms substituted for them.

"At a race track if a bettor says he has ventured a 'pony' on the probable outcome of a race he does not mean that as it would appear to us, but simply that he has wagered £25 on the result. Where money is handled in large amounts it is not an infrequent thing to hear one say of another that he has a 'monkey' of money, meaning that the individual referred to is the proud possessor of £500. So you see in comparison with this plethora of riches our lone nickel is a poor crop of monetary slang indeed."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

AFGHAN FEUDS.

Towers of Refuge From Which the Warfare is Conducted.

In Afghanistan the people are good haters. The blood feud exists in all Afghan tribes. When a murder occurs the avenger does not limit his reprisal to the murderer, but kills any relative that comes handy. This, in turn, calls for a counter attack, and in time matters become so complicated that whole families are wiped out. When the tribe is called upon to meet a common enemy the heads of the families who have had a quarrel bury two stones side by side in the presence of the mullah as symbolic of the feud being put out of sight during the public danger. When affairs revert to their normal state the stones are solemnly disinterred and the two parties are free to go on shooting at each other again.

Every Afghan villager of moderate means owns a tower of refuge standing at the corner of his courtyard. These towers, made of stone and mud, are perfectly solid for the lower twenty feet or so, the top being surrounded by a loophole wall and covered over to make it habitable. The base is protected by a gallery, and the only means of ascent is by a rope and a hole just large enough for one man to crawl through. Whenever a man has made things too hot for himself he takes refuge in his tower, and by the unwritten law of the country he can never be starved out so long as food and water are brought to him by a woman.

A traveler in Afghanistan tells of seeing one tower of refuge whose occupant had not stirred outside for ten years. His only amusement was taking shots at the occupant of another tower, which were duly returned. In the meantime their wives visited each other and gossiped and were on terms of perfect amity.

Looming Mirages.

In what are called "looming mirages" distant objects show an apparent extravagant increase in height without alteration in breadth. Distant pinnacles of ice are thus magnified into immense towers or tall, jagged mountains, and a ship thus reflected from far out at sea may appear to be twelve or fifteen times as tall as it is long. Rocks and trees are also shown in abnormal shapes and positions, while houses, animal and human beings appear in like exaggerated shapes. Before the sandy plains of our southwestern states and territories were converted into verdant fields by the industry and tireless energy of man mirages were very common in those regions, the Indians regarding the phenomenon as being the work of evil spirits.

Reflecting Lighthouses' Origin.

Accident, not necessity, was the parent of the invention of reflecting lighthouses. During a meeting of a mathematical society at Liverpool some years ago one of the members laid a wager that he could read a newspaper paragraph at ten yards distance by the light of a farthing candle. This he succeeded in doing by covering the inside of an earthen dish with putty and sticking bits of looking glass on it and then placing his reflector behind the candle. Captain Hutchinson, a dock master, was present, and from this experiment gained the idea from which he evolved the reflecting lighthouse as built in Liverpool.

Chipping.

In parts of Switzerland the baker's wife carries round the bread in a sort of hamper, and she has not a fixed, immutable charge, but chatters for a price with the customers. The old English word for this process was "chipping," which in many places in England has been corrupted into chipping. Chipping Norton, for instance, is really "chipping Norton," or the place where chipping happened—that is, sold by never a le.

"Poor pa's just working me to death," why, I thought he had a political job.

"He has, but it seems as if he no sooner gets reappointed than it is necessary for him to get out and work again so that somebody else won't get it next time."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Wisdom of Babes.

A lady and her little daughter were walking through Grosvenor square when they came to a portion of the road strewn with straw. "What's that for, ma?" said the child, to which the mother replied, "The lady who lives in that house, my dear, has had a little baby girl sent to her." The child walked along for a few yards and then, turning and nodding at the straw, said, "Awfully well packed, ma!"—St. James' Gazette.

The First Gingerbread.

The homely luxury, gingerbread, has been popular ever since the fourteenth century. It was then made and sold in Paris. In those days it was prepared with rye meal made into a dough, and ginger and other spices, with sugar or honey, were kneaded into it. It was introduced into England by the court of Henry IV, for their festivals and was soon brought into general use, treacle being after a time employed in the manufacture instead of honey.

NEW SHORT STORIES

This Happened in Cork.

They were comparing notes and telling the incidents of recent trips abroad, when a charming daughter of the Emerald Isle, who was sitting dreamily in the corner, apparently taking no interest in the conversation, suddenly chirped in with the following: "All of which reminds me of an incident which happened while I lived in Cork. There poulterers' stores are scarce because of the proximity of the country, but coal heaver of my acquaintance, owing to the illness of his wife, was anxious to secure a fowl in a hurry. So he strolled along Patrick street in a forlorn hope of some sort of success, and when he came to a taxidermist's, whose window displayed an owl under a glass case, why, poor Paddy thought that here was the end of his quest, so he entered and inquired: "How much for the fat faced hin in the windy?" "That's no hen," the surprised shopman answered. "That's an owl." "Yerrah," whispered Pat, "shure, I don't care how old she is. 'Tis for soup I wants her!"—New York Times.

Figured on a Wife.

Uncle Joe is an old negro on a farm near Chesapeake City, Md., a farm owned by the family whose slave he was years ago. He is a widower and lately has sprung up to a degree. Not long since one of the young men of the place started for the city, when he was halted by Uncle Joe. "Mistah George," he said sheepishly, "you done goin' to town? You might do a favor foh me." "Certainly, uncle," was the response. "What is it?" "Well, you might—'you might git a marriage license foh me." The white man was amused, but, seeing that the old negro was offended, he said, "I'll get the license, sure, uncle, I'll get it," and rode off. After attending to his own affairs in town he suddenly remembered the marriage license, but was nonplused, for he had not asked the name of Uncle Joe's fiancée. He happened to recollect that he had noticed Uncle Joe around the kitchen a good deal of late and that Amanda, dusky, fat and forty and the best cook in the county, always had a delectable morsel reserved for the old man, so of course it must be Amanda. Armed with the happy credentials Mr. George galloped home and handed the paper to the old man, who took it and looked at it. The license was read to him.

"Mandy Jones!" he cried when the bride's name was pronounced. "Why, it ain't her—it's Liza Allen, down by der creek."

Here was a dilemma. "Well," said the white man, "there's only one thing to do. You must get another license.

"It's just $3 thrown away."

Uncle Joe took the paper, folded it and put it in his pocket.

"I'll done ask Mandy to have me," he said, "foh I don't think dar's $3 difference 'tween dem ladies."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Art and the Yellow Peril.

When William M. Chase, according to a current anecdote, had his summer school at Shinnecock, N. Y., he used to hold semipublic sessions in the main studio building, when the sketches made by students during the week were exhibited and criticised. On one of these occasions, during a summer when the Chinese question was occupying public attention, one landscape showed a broad stretch of lawn painted in brilliant splashes of lemon color. Mr. Chase examined it gravely. "It seems to me," he observed, indicating the lemon colored grass on the canvas, "that politics and not art is the proper field for an agitation of the yellow peril question."—Harper's Weekly.

Had Performed His Part.

Sir William Russell, who was a British war correspondent in this country at the time of the American civil war, says he met a northern volunteer about two miles from the field while a battle was still going on, but the man was going away from the fight, and he stopped to ask what news there was. Russell asked, "Why are you not up at the front?" The man answered, "I have fired away seventy-two rounds of ball ammunition, and if my general cannot win the battle on that I am not going to stay till he can."

Cutting Him Off.

"You?" snorted Miss Sharpe. "Marry you? Why, you're only an apology for a man."

"But," protested Mr. Small, "you will not."

"No; I will not accept the apology."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Macedonian Pennants.

In a magazine article on Macedonian pennants the author describes them as a pansy of the lowest type—dull witted and of poor physique, corrupt, degraded and semisavage.

"The gratitude of Macedonian woman can occasionally be more alarming than their indignation," says the author. "They embrace me in a hug of sixty rags, and they kiss me on both cheeks. One poor old lady told me, after this ceremony, that she had been mourning the death of her son for eight years to such an extent that during all of that period she had never washed her head! 'No soap,' she cried, 'will ever touch me again. I mourn always.'"

An Odd Swimming Contest.

Sir John Pakington, a courtier of Queen Elizabeth, was a reckless layer of wagers. He once bet £3,000 that he would swim the Thames from the bridge at Westminster to the bridge at Greenwich faster than three relays of young noblemen. Sir John won this bet. The relays of noblemen, though they swam hard, were badly beaten. The queen was present at the race, and to the losers she gave, by way of a consolation prize, a butt of sack.

THOUGHTLESS WIT.

Wit that stings is akin to crime. To hold up another to ridicule is not witty, but vulgar.

To laugh at another or to cause another to be laughed at is common, but somewhat rare, is an achievement. There is no post like him, this man whose thoughtless wit starts the laugh. The man that makes others laugh at some one else's expense is always causing suffering.

To start a laugh is the ambition of some men. The how or the where, the why or the effect is never considered. Wit is a joy forever so long as it does not base its success upon the misfortunes, the peculiarities, the weaknesses of men.

When a wit has to depend upon other people's peculiarities for his subject matter it is time for him to close the "wit shop" and hang out the sign "To Let."—Indianapolis Sun.
