INTRODUCTION

“NOTABLE MEN OF WASHINGTON” is issued as a book of utility in the newspaper office.

¶ Publishers at the present time attach an increasing importance to illustrations. In fact, in many of the modern newspapers, illustrations are considered as equal in importance to news.

¶ Newspapers exhaust every resource to secure photographs of persons for reproduction with current news and they are often compelled to make illustrations from old style cuts and obsolete drawings.

¶ Owing to the wonderful advancement of the State of Washington in all lines of business and to the rapid strides toward national fame of its foremost citizens, it seems almost a necessity to publish a book which shall contain portraits and brief biographical sketches of the most prominent men in this State.

¶ Determined effort has been made to secure the most recent photographs and reproduction has been made carefully in order that a second halftone may be taken from the portrait published herein. Extreme care has been exercised to publish only essential biographical data and this has been secured from the subjects themselves. This book has been designed to be an immediate aid to the newspaper artist and biographer.
