*) As the Russian language has several vowels and consonants not contained in the English language, the phonetic spelling has to use special devices to produce the exact sound. Thus z stands for soft s, ee for long i, as in feel, kh for the foreign ch, zh for the French j, as in "je, jamais," oo for the foreign long u, ui for a short French "oui!"
